U.S. Senators plan visit here Saturday

United States Senators Phil Gramm and Kay Bailey Hutchison will be in Snyder on Saturday to outline a new measure in the welfare reform bill.

The briefing will take place at 7:45 p.m. in council chambers at City Hall.

Hutchison

Gramm

The provision which the Republican senators plan to profile imposes a lifetime ban on the payment of welfare for those convicted of drug-related felonies in either state or federal court.

"People who are selling drugs should not be collecting welfare," Gramm said in a press release. "It's a tough measure, but it's time to get tough."

The public is invited to the briefing.

"I would encourage everyone to come out," said Scurry County Republican Party Chairman Drew Bullard. "It will be a good time to meet our senators and find out about provisions of the welfare bill. It's my understanding the public will be able to ask questions of the senators."

Gramm and Hutchison are also scheduled to speak Saturday in Lubbock, Amarillo, Hereford, Plainview, Levelland and Seminole. On Sunday, the senators will make appearances in Big Spring, San Angelo and Abilene.

EXCELLENCE
Snyder resident Roy Baze, center, is shown prior to the Free Market Foundation's award luncheon in Midland Thursday. Baze was nominated in the religious category by State Sen. Tom Haywood, right. The keynote speaker was Railroad Commissioner Barry Williamson, shown at Baze's right. A pastor of a Midland church, Rev. Roy Smith, received the honor for his work in dealing with troubled youth in Midland, often organizing marches on "crack houses" at night and then working to salvage the lives of the drug users. Baze said after the award was announced and hearing of the work the pastor was doing, that Smith was "most deserving of the award." Also attending the luncheon from Snyder were Mayor David Holt, Chamber Manager Donna Fowler and City Manager John Gayle. (SDN Staff Photo)

The feller on Deep Creek says, "People often reminisce about the good ole days, but this doesn't mean they want to go back to mule teams and scrub boards."

Rain, Thanks!

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

Everybody has a bad day — or thinks they are having one.

James Roberts, in the Andrews County News, recounted a story told by a Baptist preacher in Florida.

"When you got up this morning was the bird singing outside your window a buzzard?

"Did you put your pants on backwards and they fit better?

"Did you wake up and discover that your water bed had sprung a leak only to realize that you don't have a waterbed?

"You may be tempted to have a pity party and only invite yourself so that you will get all the pity and refreshments.

"I want to tell you what happened to Mr. Jones. One day, Mrs. Jones decided to get rid of some bad hair spray. She decided that a good way to get rid of it would be to spray it into the commode.

"Shortly afterwards, her husband came home. As was his usual custom, he went to the "reading room" to relax. As soon as he was comfortably seated, he lit a cigarette and tossed the match between his legs into the toilet.

"You guessed it! The hairspray exploded and blew Mr. Jones heavenward (or sideward). Unfortunately, the shower bar stopped his ascent. So-o-o, after the ambulance arrived, the driver asked Mrs. Jones how Mr. Jones had got both a burnt backside and a concussion at the same time.

"She began to explain what had happened as the attendants were carrying Mr. Jones down the steps. The attendants got so tickled, they dropped Mr. Jones and broke both his arms.

"Poor Mr. Jones, it definitely was not his day. He suffered one one burnt backside, one concussion and two broken arms. Now don't you feel better already? There is alway something to be thankful for."

Rain, Thanks!

"Strangely, modern man continues this practice. It's now called golf."

Sixty-seven days to a new century president

CHICAGO (AP) — Let the campaign begin.

Basing his re-election drive on the promise of the new century, President Clinton today plunges into a 67-day frenzy of campaigning. Urging skepticism, Republican rival Bob Dole said "don't believe him" when Clinton promises tax cuts.

"Hope is alive in America," Clinton said in accepting renomination from a roused and raucous Democratic Party that dares hope for sweeping victory in November.

A final bit of convention business today — an appearance before the Democratic National Committee — and then Clinton and Vice President Al Gore launch their campaign with a bus trip through four up-for-grabs states.

Before returning to Washington, Clinton and Gore will campaign in Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee. Four years ago, they began their first presidential bid with a similar trip.

But Clinton opens this last phase of his last campaign without top political strategist Dick Morris, credited with the president's political comeback after a move rightward. Morris resigned Thursday after a tabloid reported he had a relationship with a prostitute and allowed her to eavesdrop on calls to the president.

Political advisers for both parties virtually ignored the controversy this morning. "I don't have any idea what, if any, affect it will have," Republican Party Chairman Haley Barbour said on NBC's "Today" show.

Democratic strategist James Carville said the Morris matter was "a distraction. ... It's obviously something we wish wouldn't happen, but by the time the weekend's over, the whole thing will be gone."

What matters, Carville said, is what Clinton "talked to the American people about last night and what he's going to do in this campaign and in the second term."

Barbour, also interviewed on ABC's "Good Morning America," said the Republican Party was still on track. Despite a big Clinton lead in the polls, he said, "I'm not worried. ... I think that we're exactly where we want to be."

Formed three weeks ago in San Diego, the GOP ticket of Dole and Jack Kemp was campaigning in Southern California. With 54 electoral votes at stake, Dole has vowed to fight long odds to win the state.

"I know that the other side, they told California it's theirs. I'm not certain anything is theirs anymore," Dole told a rally Thursday night. "It's all up for grabs and we're going to go after it."

Asked about Clinton's speech, Dole said he hadn't seen or heard it. But he noted that Clinton promised to "be a bridge to the future."

"You think about what he talked about and what he almost gave us, a federalized health care system. That's his bridge to the future," Dole said.

Clinton summoned Americans to "resolve to build that bridge to the 21st century, to meet our challenges, protect our basic values and prepare our people for the future."

Returning again and again to that theme, Clinton noted that in 67 days Americans would choose "the last president of the 20th century and the first president of the 21st century."

After the hour long speech, Democratic delegates cut loose, cheering, dancing and waving American flags.

Labor Day weekend...

DPS urges motorists to use caution

With a record number of Americans planning to travel over the upcoming weekend, the Department of Public Safety has estimated that as many as 40 people could die in traffic crashes in Texas during the three-day holiday.

The American Automobile Association believes nearly 33 million Americans are planning a trip of at least 100 miles during the three-day holiday that marks the end of the summer vacation. This is an increase of two percent above Labor Day travel last year, and ties a record set in 1994, AAA announced.

The DPS will begin monitoring holiday traffic conditions beginning at 6 p.m. today and will continue to patrol the state's highways in an effort to reduce the traffic death toll during the 78-hour period.

Last year, the Labor Day holiday in Texas was marred with 27 traffic deaths. Seven other persons later died of injuries suffered during the holiday period, making the final count 34 deaths.

Contributing to the expected increase in travel this Labor Day weekend is a continuing strong economy and gasoline prices which have dropped an average of 4.6 percent since pump prices peaked in May, AAA reported. Even though school has already started in Texas, Labor Day is a significant travel holiday.

"Given these factors, and the fact that Texas already is seeing an increase in traffic fatalities compared with this time last year, we are particularly concerned this Labor Day," said DPS Director Col. James R. Wilson. "Texans really need to drive carefully this weekend."

Wilson said troopers will be on the roadways to assist motorists and to keep a particular eye out for the three law violations which are the leading factors in traffic deaths: driving and drinking, excessive speed and not wearing a safety belts.

In 1995, according to DPS statistics, 14 of the 34 Labor Day holiday traffic deaths resulted from DWI-related crashes.

Computer shows TWA blast occurred in one area

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — A computer simulation of the explosion of TWA Flight 800 shows a section of the seats burned in a cone-shaped pattern, offering possible clues to what brought the plane down, sources have told The Associated Press.

Computer experts with the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board put together the model at a hangar where the wreckage is being reassembled, said a source, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The FAA has been feeding the computer photographs of all recovered, damaged pieces, as well as recreating human models showing the injuries each passenger suffered based on autopsy records.

The NTSB has taken the project a step further by creating a computer model of the injured passengers and what around them in the aircraft might have caused their injuries.

"This is a first," the source said. "No one's really pieced it all together like that before. We don't know if we will be able to but we're trying."

The 3-D computer is concentrating on a 20-row section of seats where burns fan out in a cone-shaped pattern, the source said.

Another aviation source said the most severe burns to seat covers were in the middle of the cone, where only blackened metal frames remained.

Investigators also want to know why passengers in rows outside of the cone pattern did not show the same type of burns.

Attorney General Janet Reno acknowledged Thursday that "all Americans share a frustration" over the six-week probe of the July 17 crash that killed all 230 people aboard the Boeing 747.

Investigators believe a bomb could have been brought aboard the plane in luggage and placed under a seat in the aircraft's midsection, directly above the center fuel tank, sources have told The AP. They also said such a device could have been brought aboard in a food cart.

The computer simulation was put together with last-second radar traces of the Paris-bound flight, details from the data and cockpit voice recorders and information from debris pulled from the ocean south of here, The New York Times reported today, citing anonymous sources.

The Times said the computer model and other evidence indicate that the likeliest area for the first blast was at the right end of row 23, above the center fuel tank.

The FBI is also at the hanger doing computer work, but has not shared information.

Lucio: Texas Lottery Commission arrogant

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. Eddie Lucio says arrogance at the Texas Lottery Commission is one reason he wants to move regulation of the charitable bingo industry to another agency.

Lucio on Thursday blasted the commission as arrogant and uncooperative. He said bingo operators do not trust the commission and find its staff difficult to work with.

"I become very agitated when I feel that a regulating agency is no longer working for the people," Lucio said.

"(Bingo) licensees did not feel comfortable with the staff or the attitude of those working to regulate bingo. They felt their concerns and problems were not being addressed quickly. They did not trust the agency."

Lucio heads a special Senate committee on bingo. The committee voted 3-0 Thursday to move regulation of bingo to the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation.

The proposal and other suggested changes to state bingo laws will go before state lawmakers in January.

The three members of the Lottery Commission late Wednesday said moving the regulation wouldn't help charities.

Commission Chairwoman Harriet Miers said the agency opposes the proposal and will not simply watch the move.

"There's been so much invested by the state in the education of the commission in performing these tasks. We need to state what we think is in the best interest of the industry," she said.

Lucio said the commission's opposition is an example of its arrogance.

"Ms. Harriet Miers' opposition to the recommendations of this committee have no bearing on this committee," he said. "In my experience, I've never seen or heard of a commission or agency interfering with a committee report."

Ms. Miers said the commission hasn't interfered, but is expressing its opinion.

"I think the commission is respectful of the role of our legislators," she said. "But the commissioners need to be free to state their views if they are given the responsibility to regulate. The idea that we shouldn't strikes me as really unhealthy."

She added that commission is doing what it thinks is best.

"Some of the things we have done are not meant to make us friends. They are designed to protect the people of Texas," Ms. Miers said. "No one likes to be regulated. It's not surprising for people subject to regulation to complain."

Carol Davis agreed. Ms. Davis is a member of the American Businesswomen's Association, which holds bingo games to raise money and operates the Creekside Charity Bingo hall in Williamson County. Other organizations rent the hall.

"People who are in bingo for a profit are the problem," she said.

Ms. Davis also said moving the regulation would mean another agency would have to learn about the industry. Since being legalized in 1980, the industry has been regulated by three separate agencies.

"The Lottery Commission has done better in that at least they are trying to learn," Ms. Davis said.

Suzanne Taylor, who runs Weber Bingo in Corpus Christi, said the Senate committee appears bent on making bingo competitive with the lottery.

Florida bigot convicted for intimidating black neighbors

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — David P. Broome didn't want a black couple living next door to him. So he planted a Confederate flag on the property line, called the couple "niggers" and threatened to make their life "a living hell."

A federal jury Thursday convicted Broome of racial intimidation. He faces three years in prison. A sentencing date was not set.

Broome, a 49-year-old white businessman, took the stand and admitted using racial slurs and vulgar language, telling Alonzo and Clarissa Watkins that he didn't want them living next to him.

He testified his intent was to chase them away solely because of their skin color. He acknowledged calling the family "niggers" and said he didn't like blacks.

"I thought we were going to need an alarm, a privacy fence and a shotgun," Mrs. Watkins testified. Eventually, she went to the contractor who was building her house in the quiet Lakeland neighborhood about 45 miles east of Tampa, and tearfully bowed out of the contract.

The contractor called authorities. Broome was charged under the federal hate crime law with three civil rights violations of racial intimidation.

The jury convicted Broome of using the threat of force to intimidate the Watkinses into backing out of a contract.

Watkins, elated at the verdict, said he was glad the two-year ordeal is over. "We want to get on with our life. It's been a nightmare."

Outside the courtroom, Broome denied he is a racist. He said he does not consider the word "nigger" derogatory. "It's nothing. It's just a word," he said.

Jurors rejected defense claims that while Broome's behavior may be morally reprehensible, it did not imply the threat of force or intimidation.

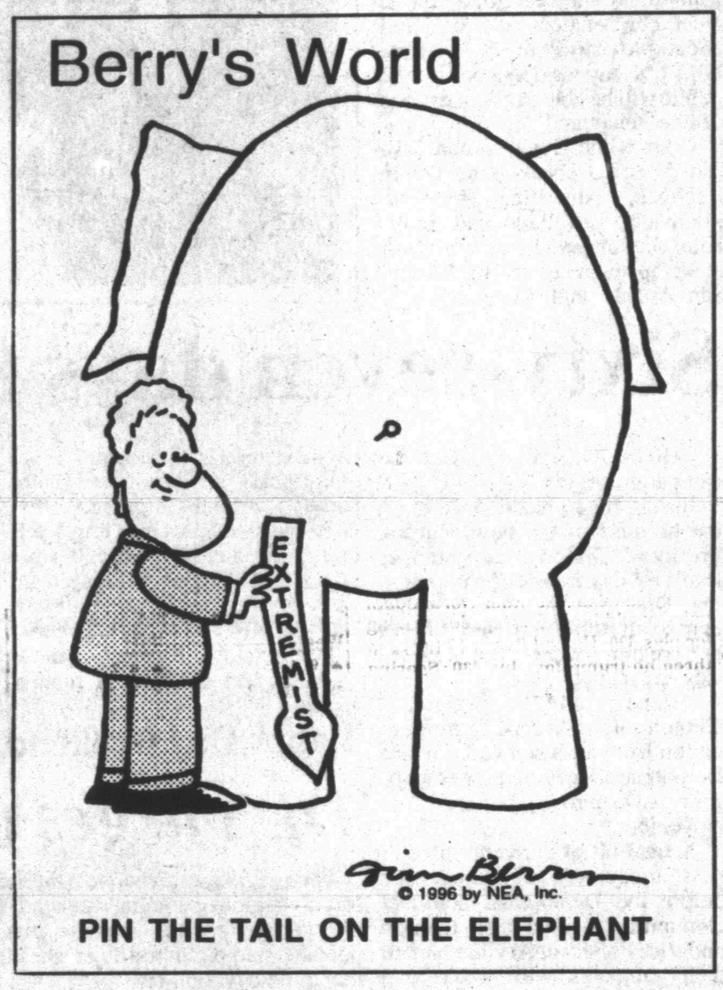

Broome felt he was within his rights when he used racial slurs and profanity, waved a weed-eater at the couple and a salesman, and planted the Confederate flag, said defense attorney James McPherson.

Prosecutors said he intimidated the Watkinses, a man trying to sell the couple a security system and two black FBI agents posing as potential home buyers.

Just before deliberations began Thursday afternoon, McPherson reminded jurors they had to decide whether Broome broke the law.

Laredo official accuses INS officers of abuse

LAREDO (AP) — An immigration official has denied allegations of abuse by INS officers at the international bridges here, including the alleged strip searches of two Mexican businessmen and their wives.

Kenneth Pasquarell, director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service district office in San Antonio, said Thursday the charges levied by Laredo City Councilman Louis Bruni were unfounded.

Bruni outlined his accusations in a letter to Sen. Phil Gramm, Gov. George W. Bush and other state officials after his 17-year-old son and a female companion were detained Friday night upon returning from Mexico.

"These immigration officers with their guns and badges humiliate and frighten the citizens of Laredo, the Mexican citizens as well as the United States tourists, and last but not least the young citizens of our community," Bruni wrote in his letter, portions of which were published in the Laredo Morning Times.

Bruni wrote that his son was "a recent victim of the abuse," stating the boy and his female companion were "detained, interrogated for hours, were not allowed to use the restrooms or call their parents."

Pasquarell said Bruni's son and his friend were detained because the girl had falsely claimed to be a U.S. citizen. The boy's car was impounded, and the two were questioned while INS officers contacted his parents, he said.

"He was treated the same as anyone else, but it takes a while to resolve these cases," Pasquarell said, adding that neither Bruni's son nor the girl would be prosecuted.

Bruni, whose letter is dated Monday, also accuses INS officers of detaining and strip-searching two Monterrey businessmen and their wives. The letter said the individuals had filed complaints and closed their banking relations in Laredo, according to the Morning Times.

Iowa governor fires warden after six inmates escape

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The warden of Iowa's maximum-security prison was fired after he sent six inmates — five of them convicted murderers — on a cross-country trip with two unarmed guards.

The inmates took the guards hostage at a rest stop in Amarillo, Texas, Wednesday and led authorities on a two-hour, 100-mile chase before they were recaptured near the Oklahoma border.

On Thursday, Gov. Terry Branstad dismissed Iowa State Penitentiary Warden Geraldo Acevedo after 13 months on the job.

"The deputy warden at Fort Madison had very grave misgivings about sending these prisoners with these particular people," Branstad said. "He and other members of the staff down there expressed their reservations and concerns to the warden. The warden made the decision to go ahead.

"This was very bad judgment," the governor said.

The inmates were being taken from the prison in Fort Madison to New Mexico as part of a prisoner exchange.

The escape could have been avoided if the guards followed the state's instructions to stop only at county jails and state prisons during the trip, said Sally Chandler Halford, Iowa's corrections director.

Prisoners are kept shackled and handcuffed inside cages in vans equipped with doors that only open from the outside. Halford said Iowa has terminated its contract with the company involved, Michigan-based R & S Prison Transport Service.

In the last two months, an inmate was shot in an attempted escape during a visit to an Iowa City hospital; a guard was stabbed by an inmate; 13 inmates trashed their cells; and a search of the prison by authorities turned up more than 100 homemade weapons.

Senators seek more child-support collections

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Dan Morales has until the start of the 1997 legislative session to improve child-support collection or face losing the job to another agency, a Senate panel says.

"Come January, the gloves are off," said Sen. Chris Harris, R-Arlington, who outlined the proposal to allow the attorney general to prove himself after huddling privately with Morales' staff.

Harris, chairman of the Senate Interim Committee on Juvenile Justice and Child Support, also had discussions with the state auditor's staff and with a consultant hired by Morales to put together a computer database to track child support cases.

The Senate panel met Thursday, two weeks after a House panel recommended stripping Morales' office of the responsibility of collecting past-due child support payments.

While the Senate committee took no action to move the child support program, members emphasized their serious concerns about:

— A three-year delay in implementing the state computer tracking system. The Senate panel wants it up and running by February.

— Turnover in leadership of the child support collection program, which in recent years has had five different directors.

— Difficulties encountered by parents who call the attorney general's office seeking help.

"I am absolutely appalled when a mother will call my office and say she's been sitting on the phone waiting for someone from the attorney general's office for three hours to answer her concerns," said Sen. Florence Shapiro, R-Plano.

"This is a woman who's working, trying to keep food on the table. She can't wait three hours to try to get somebody to help her get her child support," Ms. Shapiro said.

She and other lawmakers also said they didn't want to hear excuses regarding the delay in the computer system. Morales previously has blamed the delay on Andersen Consulting, which his office hired for the project. Andersen has blamed federal rules.

"No more finger pointing, no more delays, no more technical difficulties. There have to be significant changes made," Ms. Shapiro said.

The proposal to give Morales time to make changes came after Harris met privately with self-described "new kid on the block" Layton Black, a former state representative who is now Morales' legislative liaison.

"I think that all of us understand the seriousness of this project, and all of us are thinking the bottom line is, we want this sucker to run," Black said when asked by Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, whether the attorney general intended to meet the February deadline.

"This will be a priority," said Black, who promised monthly reports to the committee on the matter. "I've sat on your side ... and I think that we all want this thing to work."

Morales, for his part, has described his office's efforts to collect child support as among the best in the nation.

The agency handles about 780,000 cases, most of which require establishment of paternity or court-ordered support before collections can be enforced, he says.

Return of operating license step toward ValuJet restart

ATLANTA (AP) — ValuJet took a giant step closer to flying again as federal regulators returned its operating license, giving the carrier hope that it would soon be back in business.

The Federal Aviation Administration returned ValuJet's license Thursday, two months after the airline was grounded following the crash of one its planes in the Florida Everglades, which killed all 110 people aboard.

The FAA said the airline was in compliance with safety regulations.

ValuJet President Lewis Jordan said he expected to be operating again within a month, although the carrier could be back in the skies as early as the end of next week.

"We have a lot of hard work left to get done," Jordan said at a news conference. "We believe that it will be very soon that we will be flying again. I'm very optimistic."

The Transportation Department, the FAA's parent agency, said it had completed a review of the airline's financial and management fitness and concluded that ValuJet was ready to resume operations. But the ruling remains open for seven days during which interested parties can file objections.

The Association of Flight Attendants, which has sought to oust top ValuJet officials, said it would do so.

"We think there's a cover-up here. We think the FAA doesn't want a hearing because it will expose just how much the FAA and DOT knew about safety problems at ValuJet long before the May 11 crash," said David Borer, the union's general counsel.

If objections are filed, the airline would have four days to reply, said John V. Coleman, director of the department's office of aviation analysis. The DOT could then go ahead and allow ValuJet to fly or seek more information. If no objections are filed, the department could approve resumption of flights immediately, he said.

The airline was grounded in June because of concerns over its maintenance procedures. The May 11 Everglades crash focused attention on the airline, but it had already been under scrutiny by regulators since last year for a series of incidents including planes sliding off runways and a fire.

The Florida crash is thought to have been caused by a fire originating in a cargo of chemical oxygen generators. ValuJet was not authorized to carry the generators and blamed a subcontractor for mislabeling them as empty.

Asked if ValuJet is safe to fly, Bill White, the FAA's deputy director of flight standards services, responded: "They are in compliance with the safety regulations. It's up to ValuJet to maintain the safe operation of the aircraft."

The decisive trick

It's impossible to remove luck from bridge. This deal was played in the final round of the Open Pairs at the Marbella Bridge Festival, held in that picturesque town on the Spanish Riviera last January. As this round began, the leaders were Alvaro Fresneda, the president of the Spanish Bridge Federation, and Luca de Tena. They were playing against Peter Matthews, from the United States, and Tony Priday, many times a British international.

North's two clubs was Stayman. His subsequent three hearts showed five spades and four hearts. This is called Smolen, but Priday forgot their agreement.

When the dummy came down, Priday saw that the other North-South pairs would be in four spades making for plus 620. He had to win 10 tricks in three no-trump for plus 630. Scoring only 600 would be a bottom.

After winning the first trick with the diamond ace, East switched to the club king. South won with his ace and ran five spade tricks. West discarded a club and a diamond, while East threw one card from each suit. Next came a club from the dummy, East winning with the queen and exiting with his last club. Now when declarer played a heart to dummy's ace, East unblocked his king to avoid being endplayed. However, Priday continued with dummy's heart six, covered by the 10, jack and queen, endplaying West instead. At trick 12, he had to lead from the eight-three of hearts into dummy's nine-seven.

Serendipitously, Priday had won 10 tricks. His opponents received no matchpoints and lost the tournament.

Season opener next Friday...

Tigers roll over Slaton in final scrimmage

By Brent Taylor
Sports Editor

With one week left before the Texas high school football season kicks off, the Snyder Tigers got a final tune-up Thursday night against the Slaton Tigers at Travis field and the outcome was to the liking of the black and gold.

Snyder outscored Slaton, 2-0, in the controlled part of the scrimmage and then ran off 21 points in two quarters of game-like play.

Snyder senior quarterback Russell Riggan said after the scrimmage, "We did great tonight. The line blocked good and L.S. (McClain) ran good. The receivers caught good. We've got some more things to work on and shape up on, but we will be ready come Sept. 6."

Next Friday is when Snyder opens up the regular season, hosting Andrews at Tiger Stadium.

"Slaton has some good players, but they want be as talented as Andrews, but I think we will step up at game time," added Riggan.

Snyder head coach David Baugh also saw some good things as well as bad. "We did all right. I was disappointed in that we had too many holding penalties. I think we had four in one quarter. We've got to do better than that or it is going to be tough for us to move the ball against good people."

With a week before the opener, Baugh said the team is where he would like for them to be in some ways and not in some. "We did not get as much work in this week due to the rain. For not throwing the ball in two days, I guess we did all right tonight."

"Overall, I was pleased with the effort. I thought everybody got after it. All we have to do is improve and get disciplined against the wishbone."

The wishbone is the offense the Andrews Mustangs use which can create problems for defenses with the amount of options available on any given play.

Kickoff for the home opener will be at 7:30 p.m.

Junior high volleyball season starts

Snyder Junior High volleyball teams got their fall schedule underway Thursday night against Lamesa at the SJHS gym.

The Snyder eighth grade A team was the only local winner in a three-game match, 15-3, 11-15, 16-14.

Callie Bane was high point with 11, followed by Cary Brown's nine, Kameron Kallemeyn five, Dixie Yandrich four, Ashley Delce, Rina Geiger and Whitney Webb three each, T'Leah Eicke two, Lisa Hall and Missy French one each.

The eighth grade B team came up on the short end of a 7-15, 9-15 match with Lamesa. For Snyder, Brooke Williams was high point with six. Lindsey Bunch added three, Jennifer Newman and Kristin Murray two, Dana McCright, Casey Blackard and Lathisha Thames one.

The seventh grade teams were not as lucky. The A team lost 6-15, 1-15. Katie Voss was the leading server with five, Kallie Billingsley and Chasity Perales one each.

The B team was defeated 2-15, 2-15. Haley Holmes contributed three points and Anna Williams one.

The junior high teams will play again Thursday at 5 p.m. in Snyder against Colorado City.

Cubs beat Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Jaime Navarro and Jose Hernandez did their best Thursday to keep the Chicago Cubs in playoff contention.

Navarro held Houston to three runs on seven hits in 6 2-3 innings and Hernandez broke a tie with a two-run single in the seventh as the Cubs beat the Astros 4-3 to end Shane Reynolds' five-game winning streak.

"What a big win this was," Cubs manager Jim Riggleman said. "I don't know if you can say we're still in it, but we needed this one. We've still got a long way to go. We've got to win a lot of games."

Chicago moved within five games of first-place Houston in the NL Central.

"It'll be a tough challenge, but that's the way it's supposed to be. Our chances depend on whether we can get 10 games over .500. Anybody who gets 10 games over .500 has a chance to win it."

Navarro (13-9) picked up his sixth consecutive victory, while Reynolds (16-7) lost for the first time in nine starts dating to July 17. Turk Wendell finished for his 15th save.

"Jamie kept us close enough, Jose got the big hit and Turk was outstanding," Cubs first baseman Mark Grace said. "This was an all-around effort for us. It was a really good win."

Tied 2-2 in the seventh, Dave Magadan and Todd Haney reached on one-out singles. Reynolds retired Tyler Houston on a grounder to first, with Magadan and Haney advancing on the play to set up Hernandez's winning hit to center.

"I'm upset with myself," Reynolds said. "You never want to get beat on your third-best pitch and I did today.

"Take nothing away from Hernandez, he did his job, but I shouldn't be getting beat on my curveball, and especially on an 0-2 pitch."

Texas Tech vs. Kansas State...

First Big 12 football game is in Manhattan on Saturday

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — The significance of the occasion is not lost on the players.

They understand that no matter what happens, they'll always be the only people in history who played in the inaugural Big 12 football game.

"We're proud to be playing in the first Big 12 game," said Kansas State wide receiver Kevin Lockett. "We're looking at this as a reward for all the hard work we've put in and the progress we've made."

At 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Kansas State and Texas Tech will play the very first Big 12 football game, opening a whole new era for the dozen member schools and beating Texas and Missouri into the record books by about 5 hours.

"We're just honored to be here," said Kansas State coach Bill Snyder. "It is something very special for us. I wish it were a different opponent. But our youngsters are excited about it, and I think the fans are, too."

Kansas State, coming off a 10-2 campaign and second-place finish in the final Big Eight season, was rated a 7-point favorite over a Texas Tech program that's played in three straight bowl games and been revitalized under head coach Spike Dykes.

"Man, what a way to start," said Dykes. "We've got to go to Manhattan. That team doesn't make any mistakes. All they do, they do well. But it's fun to play somebody else after going against yourself all spring and fall."

Fittingly, the inaugural Big 12 game will showcase some of the new league's finest players. Lockett, barring injury, will almost certainly become Kansas State's all-time leading receiver this year. Cornerback Chris Canty last year became the first Kansas State sophomore ever named first-team Associated Press All-American.

The Red Raiders counter with quarterback Zebbie Lethridge, who set a final SWC record of 211 consecutive passes without an interception, and running back Byron Hanspard. As a sophomore, Hanspard rushed for 1,374 yards and 11 touchdowns while catching 35 passes for another 474 yards and seven TDs.

"They average 290 pounds tackle to tackle on offense," Dykes said. "They've got all you could ask for."

At quarterback for the Wildcats will be senior Brian Kavanaugh, who spent last season backing up Matt Miller.

"For that boy to be the second-team quarterback is unbelievable," Dykes said. "Any time you've got a guy like Kavanaugh facing you this early (in the season) it scares you to death."

Dykes, acknowledged as the sharpest wit in the SWC, should have little difficulty seizing the title in this bigger, showier conference. He noted that the Big 12 had first planned for the more highly rated Texas A&M to play in the first game.

"Kansas State wouldn't see to that, is the way I understand it," he said. "Then when they talked about Tech, they said, 'Well, yeah. We'll go for that.'"

O'Brien's amazing summer run continues at U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — After playing 23 matches in 34 days, Alex O'Brien deserves a day off.

In an amazing summer run, the Amarillo, Texas, right-hander has zoomed from 285th in the world rankings to the third round of the U.S. Open. There's always the possibility of more to come.

"A month and a half ago I don't think I would have told anybody I would have won New Haven and beaten several top players," O'Brien said after upsetting 11th-seeded MaliVai Washington in a five-set match Thursday night. "I still did believe in myself. Also my family believed in me."

At midnight, his family was standing in the Louis Armstrong Stadium stands at the National Tennis Center, cheering his latest improbable step up the ratings ladder.

Today, O'Brien can rest while top-seeded Pete Sampras, No. 4 Goran Ivanisevic and Felix Mantilla play their second-round matches.

Tonight, No. 2 Monica Seles will meet Dally Randriantefy of Madagascar with the winner gaining a fourth-round berth. Also playing tonight in separate second-round matches are No. 12 Todd Martin and Stefan Edberg.

"It was a great feeling," defeating Washington 6-3, 6-4, 5-7, 3-6, 6-3, O'Brien said. "I mean, how can you make a better picture?

"My whole family is over there, friends are over there, they're so happy for me, I'm happy for myself, the fans seem like they're happy for me. Maybe a few of them aren't."

Until this summer, O'Brien was just another player on the tour, with a ranking so low he had to play qualifying to get into most tournaments. But for the last month, he has shown the talent that once took him to No. 1 in the college ranks.

O'Brien's turnaround this summer began at the USTA Challenger in Aptos, Calif., where he reached the quarterfinals. The next week he qualified for the main draw of the ATP Tour event at Los Angeles and reached the quarterfinals, defeating Thomas Enqvist along the way.

Muslims learning to speak up like Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ibrahim Hooper travels around the country to teach Muslims how to make their voices heard, American-style.

For example, writing a letter to the editor to criticize a government policy won't land them in jail. Long-winded rhetoric will not help get their message across. Men who appear on TV talk shows will have to wear make-up, and no, it's not a feminine thing.

Hooper's work as national communications director at the Council on American-Islamic Relations is part of a nationwide drive by American Muslims to become more assertive socially and politically as an ethnic and religious group.

"Muslim political activism is still in its infancy ... We have a lot of work to do," Hooper said. "It's not something that's going to happen overnight."

Yet already, the efforts are paying off. The community, which American Muslim groups say numbers about 6 million, has gained visibility and recognition from top leaders that it didn't have just a few years ago.

Building on that progress will be a topic of discussion as the Islamic Society of North America holds its 33rd annual convention in Columbus, Ohio, beginning Friday under the banner of "Muslims for peace and justice."

The Muslim community is beginning to emerge now because of the influx of immigrants in the '60s that brought Muslims not only from the Middle East but also from Pakistan, India and south Asia, said James Zogby, who heads the Washington-based Arab-American Institute.

U.S. Rep. Tom Davis, R-Va., said, "They're getting a little bit more organized and we're starting to pay attention, and I think in America that's the pathway to power through the ballot box."

In his speech at the Republican convention, House Speaker Newt Gingrich, at the request of Muslims, added "mosque" when he mentioned "churches and synagogues."

Calling Islam the fastest-growing religion in America, Hillary Rodham Clinton held a celebration in February — the first of its kind at the White House — to mark Eid el-Fitr, the Muslim feast that ends the fasting month of Ramadan.

And Rep. Joseph Kennedy apologized to the American Muslim Council in February for his use of the word "jihad." The central Islamic concept means the personal struggle to make oneself a better Muslim, but Muslim extremists use it to mean "holy war." Kennedy used the word to describe some Republicans as overzealous and extremist.

"Please accept my sincere apology for any pain that I may have caused by that unfortunate word choice," Kennedy, D-Mass, wrote in a letter to the council.

Even Warner Bros. will edit its movie, "Executive Decision," before its release in some countries in the Middle East and the Far East after the company met with Muslim and Arab organizations that complained the movie contained imagery offensive to Islam.

Hooper said most political progress is made from the bottom up, however.

So he's teaching Muslims new to this country to shed their fear of standing up for their rights — which could lead to persecution in their native countries. Learning to speak in school, on the job and with city council members comes before national politics, he said.

"We have to start at that level and work our way up. It's counterproductive to work from the top down," he said.

He encourages Muslims to participate in local radio and TV talk shows to explain their religion to Americans and dispel some of the stereotypes and prejudices they face.

He also encourages the community to open up its mosques and Islamic centers to the larger community.

"When we get a call that a mosque has been firebombed, very often we find that the community was very isolated ... which breeds suspicion on the part of the larger community," Hooper said.

American Muslims are a diverse community — in addition to African-Americans, they include immigrants or descendants of immigrants from Asia and the Middle East. They don't vote as a homogeneous block.

But Khaled Saffuri of the American Muslim Council said Muslims tend to vote overwhelmingly Republican because they support conservative stands on abortion, homosexuality and the death penalty.

Yet he expects a "big shift" this year because the Clinton administration has shown "lots of respect" for the Muslim community, including a visit by Vice President Al Gore to a mosque in Washington, D.C.

Davis said if the Muslim population "is smart they're going to have to play both parties because you don't want to get taken for granted by one party."

He said politicians will pay more attention to Muslims in the future "the more they become givers and become involved."

Gout warning may be too harsh

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband recently had a severe attack of gout. His doctor put him on medication to help the pain, and he also has a maintenance therapy drug. His doctor has recommended he stay away from shellfish, dried beans and peas. Do these foods aggravate his condition, and is it important that we heed his doctor's warnings?

DEAR READER: It's always important to pay attention to doctors' warnings. However, in my experience, it is seldom necessary for gout patients, who suffer intermittent attacks of severe arthritis, to follow a strict diet provided they are on maintenance therapy (with drugs such as allopurinol).

If your husband is receiving adequate doses of a drug to prevent gout, he should be able safely to consume shellfish, dried beans and peas — although he will probably want to shun organ meats (kidneys, sweet breads and the like), because these foods do contain high levels of uric acid, the component that causes acute attacks of gouty arthritis.

Your husband may wish to discuss this issue with his physician, but I'd be surprised if the doctor wouldn't be willing to relax his dietary restrictions.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "About Gout." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from occasional hamstring muscle cramping, usually at night. The bouts are excruciating and I fear them. I walk a lot, keep fit and my legs feel fine otherwise. Would diet help my condition, or perhaps quinine water?

DEAR READER: Nocturnal leg cramps can be more than a nuisance; they can become a curse because the severe pain may make sleeping all but impossible. The cause of leg cramps is unknown, but many people have been helped by taking calcium and/or potassium supplements, which are available without prescription.

In the past, prescription quinine pills were, in my experience, helpful, too; however, this product is no longer available. It was removed from the market after the Food and Drug Administration deemed it ineffective.

Nonetheless, I have several patients who satisfactorily control their nighttime cramps by drinking a glass of tonic water at bedtime. The small amounts of quinine in the product appear to have a beneficial effect.

Try this remedy — and/or the calcium/potassium that I mentioned — and let me know if it works for you.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I read in your column about a natural laxative being used in nursing homes with great success. I think the mixture had bran, applesauce and prune juice. It was to be refrigerated and taken 1 tablespoon each day. I cannot find the recipe and would like you to reprint it if possible.

DEAR READER: The nursing home laxative "cocktail" can be made as follows:

Mix equal parts of prune juice, applesauce and bran flakes, given as one or two tablespoons daily. Don't make more than a two- or three-day supply because, even when refrigerated, the triple mix gets mushy.

Lloyd's rescue plan successful

LONDON (AP) — Lloyd's of London said today it has received enough support from money-losing investors to proceed with a restructuring that will keep the 308-year-old insurance market solvent.

Lloyd's has spent many months changing the way it does business and working on the survival plan, which is intended to reverse the troubles of 1988-92, when the market was hit by $12.4 billion in losses.

"We should never forget what has happened," Lloyd's chairman David Rowland said, after the market completed the crucial and controversial step towards ensuring its own future.

Lloyd's investors were devastated by losses brought on by asbestos and pollution claims as well as natural disasters. They were required to put their entire life savings on the line to back policies at Lloyd's.

Many refused to pay, saying they had been victimized by unscrupulous insiders at Lloyd's. Hundreds sued.

Lloyd's sought to end the mess by offering the investors, known as "names," a $4.8 billion package that would cut their losses in return for their agreement to end all litigation.

Lloyd's has received the acceptance of 91 percent of the 34,000 investors and said today it would extend the deadline for stragglers until noon Sept. 11.

The old Lloyd's liabilities are to be placed into a new group, Equitas, which is intended to separate Lloyd's troubled past from its more promising present. The market returned to profitability in 1993, the most recent year for which the books are settled, with earnings of $1.67 billion.

But Lloyd's faces two additional steps before the restructuring is complete:

—Approval of the plan by the board of Equitas, which must be satisfied that Lloyd's has arranged adequate financing to handle all old claims.

—Approval from Britain's Department of Trade and Industry, which requires Lloyd's to show every year it is solvent. Lloyd's has said that if the restructuring plan failed, it would be insolvent by the end of the month.

Child Neglected at Home Needs Attention at School

DEAR READERS: I'll be on vacation between Aug. 18 and Aug. 31. Don't panic — I've selected some of my favorite letters from past years to fill the gap. I hope you enjoy them.

DEAR ABBY: My 5-year-old daughter, Penny, is in a gifted children's class in public school. She has a classmate, Randy, who is a handsome, kind little fellow, but Penny says that no one likes him because he is dirty. She says he wears the same dirty jeans and T-shirt, his tennis shoes are holey, the laces untied, he never wears socks or underwear and he could really use a bath.

I told her that we like or dislike people because of the way they behave, not the way they dress, the color of their skin, the way they wear their hair, or what church they go or don't go to.

Penny likes Randy and has become his friend. (She's the only friend he has.)

I've considered writing Randy's mother a note telling her in a nice way that her son is being discriminated against because of his neglected appearance. I've also considered buying the boy some new clothes and underwear. Or should I just mind my own business? Maybe you have a suggestion on how to help Randy.

OPEN FOR SUGGESTIONS

DEAR OPEN: Because you know nothing about Randy's home life (he may not even have a mother), express your concern to Randy's teacher. A child who comes to school dirty, ill-clad and so obviously neglected needs help. School authorities are in close touch with agencies that provide assistance to abused and neglected youngsters. A child in need is everybody's business. Thank you for caring.

DEAR ABBY: Our 21-year-old grandson, who has always been the apple of our eye, has just announced that he is the "proud" father of a baby boy born to his 20-year-old girlfriend. They are living together, he has a good job, but no mention has been made of any forthcoming marriage. They just say they are "engaged."

My wife and I have decided that until they get married we are not giving them a wedding present. We gave our granddaughter a generous cash wedding gift after her wedding, and we are prepared to do the same for this grandson, but not until — regardless of how many illegitimate children he has!

Also, do you think a baby gift is in order for an illegitimate child?

UNCERTAIN IN MINNESOTA

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Wedding gifts are for couples who are wedded — not merely bedded. But do send a gift for the baby. And please don't label him "illegitimate." There are no illegitimate children — only illegitimate parents.

***

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I just returned from our first vacation without our kids. We've been married for 13 years, have four kids, and it was a real treat.

My wife's parents saw us off at the airport, and just as we were taking off, my mother-in-law asked, "Did you make a will in case something happens to both of you at the same time?" Then she laughed as though it was some kind of joke.

Of course we hadn't made a will. I realize there's always a one-in-a-million chance that our plane would crash and we'd both be killed, but her question stayed on my mind during our whole vacation, and I have to tell you, it sort of spoiled it for me.

Wasn't that a lousy thing for her to say?

STILL UPSET

DEAR UPSET: Her timing was lousy. But the idea was a good one.

ONE OF KING DAVID'S ENEMIES!

HADADEZER, KING OF ZOBAH IN SYRIA, (II SAM.8:3) WAS A SWORN ENEMY OF KING DAVID OF ISRAEL! WHEN GOING, WITH HIS ARMY, TO RECOVER HIS BORDER AT THE RIVER EUPHRATES, HE WAS MET AND DEFEATED BY KING DAVID. THIS DEFEAT WAS A MAJOR ONE, FOR KING DAVID CAPTURED A THOUSAND CHARIOTS, AND 700 HORSEMEN, AND 20,000 FOOTMEN! (II SAM.8:4) NOT ONLY THAT BUT, WHEN A FORCE OF SYRIANS FROM DAMASCUS ARRIVED TOO LATE TO HELP KING HADADEZER, KING DAVID'S ARMY SLEW 22,000 OF THEM! DAVID TOOK MANY GOLD SHIELDS AS TROPHIES OF WAR AND SENT THEM TO JERUSALEM, AND ALSO FROM THE CITIES OF HADADEZER, MUCH BRASS AND COPPER! AT A LATER DATE, KING HADADEZER CONSPIRED WITH THE AMMONITES TO RENEW HIS WAR WITH DAVID! HE GATHERED SOME LESSER KINGS TO HELP HIM--BUT DAVID STILL PREVAILED AND DEFEATED THE COMBINED FORCES TO THE TUNE OF SOME 40,000 SOLDIERS SLAIN, INCLUDING THE COMMANDING GENERAL, SHOBACH! AFTER THIS THE DEPENDENT KINGS, WHO HAD SERVED HADADEZER, ALL MADE PEACE WITH DAVID AND THIS WAS THE LAST HEARD ABOUT KING HADADEZER! (II SAM.10:6-19)

Clinton aide resigns after tabloid story

NEW YORK (AP) — Four years after the Star nearly knocked Bill Clinton out of the White House race with the Gennifer Flowers story, the supermarket tabloid rocked the Clinton campaign again with a call girl's tale of trysts with the president's political wizard.

Dick Morris, the architect of Clinton's centrist re-election strategy, resigned Thursday after the Star reported that he let $200-an-hour prostitute Sherry Rowlands listen in on calls to the White House and read speeches before they were delivered.

Rowlands, 42, came to the newspaper in mid-July offering to sell her story, said Dick Belsky, the tabloid's news editor.

"It was just a tip," he said from the Star's Tarrytown, N.Y., headquarters. "We checked it out, and the more we checked it out, the more interesting it became."

Asked if anyone might have put Rowlands up to it, Belsky said, "Not that I know of."

Rowlands had been working for escort services for years, said Phil Bunton, the Star's editor, and "she wanted to get out of the business."

The tabloid paid Rowlands "in the five figures," Bunton said. She earned somewhat more for the disclosures than the $12,000 she had been paid by Morris during a yearlong relationship, he said.

Flowers received between $130,000 and $175,000 for her 1992 interview, The Wall Street Journal reported. Although both stories started in the supermarket tabloid, they quickly jumped to the mainstream media.

Rowlands' tale appears in the tabloid's Sept. 10 issue, which hits newsstands Monday. The New York Post ran excerpts Thursday.

Bunton said the story's timing had been dictated by when the Star could get photos.

Photographers had camped out at the Jefferson Hotel in Washington for 10 days before they finally snapped Rowlands and Morris in bathrobes on his suite's balcony. Once those were in hand, the newspaper's lawyers gave the green light to publish.

Ken Chandler, editor of the New York Post, denied that his paper timed publishing the article so it would have the maximum political impact. Morris was featured with Clinton on the cover of Time magazine this week with the cover line, "The Man Who Has Clinton's Ear."

Witness challenges ME report

BOSTON (AP) — A woman who watched Judith Curren commit suicide with Dr. Jack Kevorkian's help challenged a medical examiner's ruling that the death was a homicide.

"No one killed her, no one," said Janet Good, a Kevorkian assistant who witnessed Mrs. Curren's death on Aug. 15 in a Michigan hotel room, The Boston Globe reported today.

"The needle was put in her arm, yes, but nothing happens until the patient activates the device," said Good, 72, who founded the Michigan chapter of the Hemlock Society, which supports doctor-assisted suicide.

Mrs. Curren, 42, of Pembroke, a registered nurse and mother of two young girls, suffered for about 20 years from a combination of fibromyalgia, a painful muscle disorder, and chronic fatigue and immune dysfunction syndrome. Her case is especially controversial because chronic fatigue syndrome is not generally a terminal illness.

Kevorkian, 68, invented a suicide device in 1989 for a patient who could not move his arms or legs. "You could flip the switch with a pencil held in your hand," Kevorkian has said.

The Globe said the device includes three bottles and a clock timer, and if the usual procedure was followed, Kevorkian would have inserted a needle into Mrs. Curren's arm and begun a flow of harmless saline solution.

"Dr. Kevorkian told her, 'Now, Judith, you don't have to do this,' and she got mad," Good said of Mrs. Curren, whose psychiatrist-husband, Franklin. was also at her side.

"'I've told you 100 times what I want,' she said. Then she pushed the lever, and then she said, 'Thank you, Dr. Kevorkian,' before she lost consciousness,'" Good said.

Judicial panel rejects Laney's request

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal court panel today rejected Texas House Speaker Pete Laney's request to permit elections in 13 congressional districts to proceed under old boundaries.

The 13 were redrawn by the judicial panel after the Supreme Court declared three of the districts unconstitutional because the lines were drawn to favor minority candidates. Ten adjacent districts had to be adjusted and redesigned with the initial three — the 18th, the 29th and the 30th.

In denying Laney's request that elections using the new lines be stopped, the court restated its belief that "holding an open primary election in November would not unduly disrupt state processes."

The panel of 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Edith Jones and U.S. District Judges Melinda Harmon and David Hittner also rejected a renewed effort by six incumbent congressmen to be granted status as intervenors in the matter.
