Ruling allows U.S. to kidnap foreign fugitives

Critics condemn justices' decision

Associated Press

Some foreign experts on Monday condemned the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling allowing the United States to kidnap people from a foreign country over that nation's objections.

"This is a revolutionary decision for U.S. needs. It shows that when they (the Americans) need it, everything is kosher, but if others need it, it's illegal," Isser Harel, a former head of Mossad, Israel's secret service, said in Jerusalem.

"What's the use of an extradition treaty if you're going to kidnap suspects?" asked Arno Klarsfeld, an attorney familiar with extradition law and son of Nazi hunter Serge Klarsfeld, in Paris.

The Supreme Court 6-3 ruling raised questions about whether

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government may kidnap people from a foreign country and prosecute them over that nation's objection, the Supreme Court said Monday in a ruling called "monstrous" by three dissenting justices.

The 6-3 decision said an extradition treaty between the United States and Mexico does not specifically bar such abductions.

U.S. officials thus are free to prosecute a Mexican doctor in the highly publicized torture killings of a U.S. drug agent and the agent's pilot, the court said.

The court refused to order Dr. Humberto Alvarez-Machain returned to Mexico, despite that nation's repeated protests over his kidnapping.

Alvarez-Machain was charged with using his medical skills to keep Enrique Camarena alive while the Drug Enforcement Administration agent was tortured and interrogated in Mexico in 1985. Also killed was DEA pilot Alfredo Zavala Avelar.

The White House said Monday night that "U.S. policy is to cooperate with foreign states in achieving law-enforcement objectives."

"Neither the arrest of Alvarez-Machain nor the ... Supreme Court decision reflects any change in this policy," said Judy Smith, deputy

Troop bill passes

TOKYO — Ending nearly two years of bitter debate, the Japanese Parliament approved a bill on Monday permitting the dispatch of military personnel abroad, for the first time since World War II, to play a limited role in international peacekeeping operations. Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, who had battled for the bill against widespread criticism in Japan and considerable anxiety in neighboring countries, said he hoped that the first troops to be sent abroad would join the U.N. peacekeeping mission in Cambodia before the end of the year./3A

Hostages free

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Two German relief workers, the last of scores of Western hostages held in Lebanon, were freed and turned over to officials Monday night, the Iranian news agency and a Lebanese police source said. The Beirut bureau of The Islamic Republic News Agency reported that Heinrich Struebig and Thomas Kemptner were turned over to Lebanese security authorities after three years in captivity. A senior Lebanese officer, however, said the pro-Iranian kidnappers delivered the Germans to Syrian officers in Lebanon./7A

Collider threatened

WASHINGTON — In a stroke of unfortunate timing for supporters of the Superconducting Super Collider, the $8.25 billion federal atom smasher comes up for a pivotal House vote Wednesday at a time when Congress is in no mood for big spending. Members of the Texas congressional delegation and collider lobbyists Monday were trying to stem a precipitous drop in support for the project in advance of the vote./3B

Violence increases

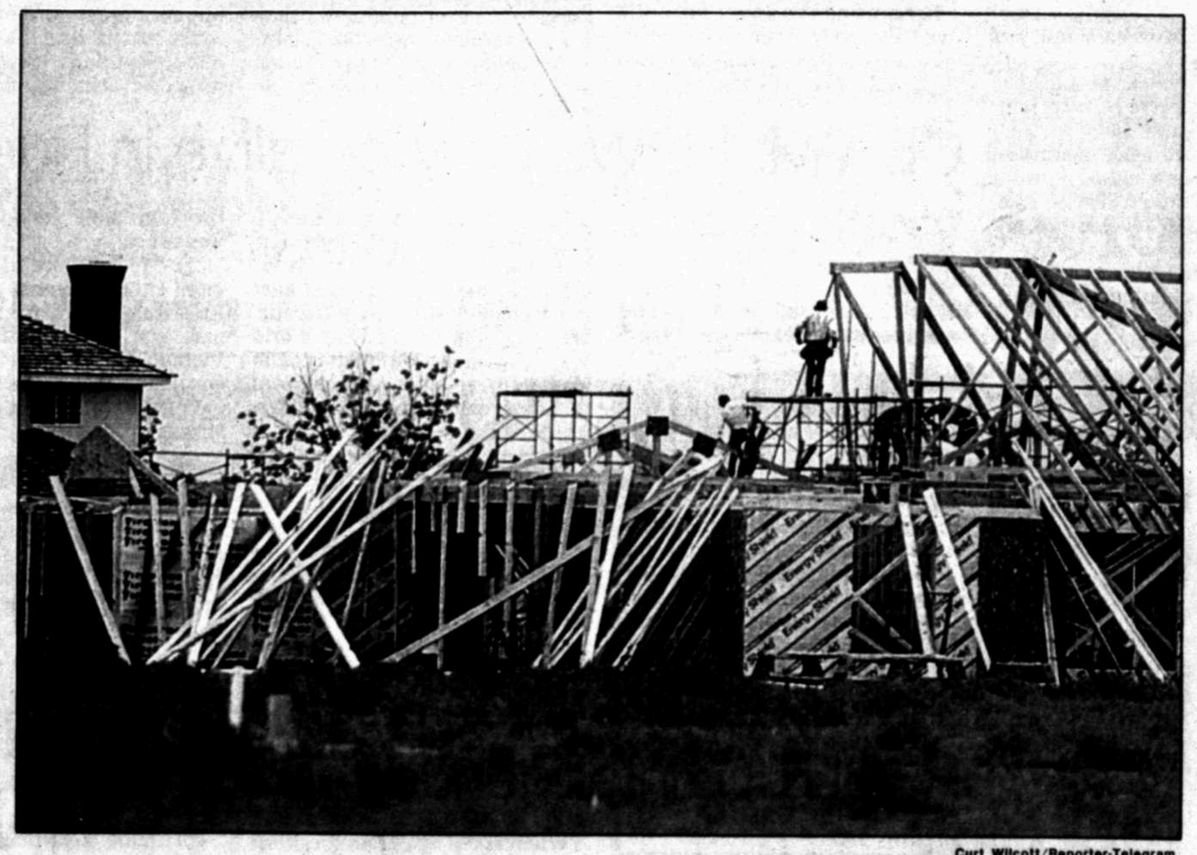

CHICAGO — Unlike some other big cities, Chicago remained calm after the Rodney King verdict, but when the Chicago Bulls won their second consecutive NBA championship, celebration turned to looting, arson and gunfire. Some psychologists say violent celebrations are becoming more common. "Once you have the model set, it's almost like it's competitive — like our city destroyed more than your city," said Dr. Thomas Tutko, professor of psychology at San Jose State./8A

While figures suggest a lull in residential construction, continued building activity such as this new home going up at Saddle Club Lakes appears to contradict that.

Uncertainty clouds stability of market

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff writer

May 19 — The U.S. Commerce Department reports a 17 percent plunge in new housing construction for the month of April — the steepest one-month drop in eight years, with each region of the country facing declines.

Taking the biggest single dive was new residential construction — off 10.6 percent for the month.

Despite the news, department officials report new-home construction for the first four months of 1992 was still running 30.4 percent ahead of the same period last year.

May 26 — The National Association of Realtors report a 0.3 percent slip in sales of previously owned homes during April — the first such decline in three months. Realtors attribute the slip to abnormal weather and relatively higher mortgage rates.

Midland — The Association of Realtors reports sales of 26 new and 377 pre-existing homes for the first four months of 1992, down from sales of 42 new and 409 pre-existing homes in the same period last year.

When it comes to realty statistics, especially in Midland, one plus one rarely equals two.

Each day seems to bring a new turn for the city's new- and existing-home market, leaving builders, Realtors and others with more questions than answers.

Commercial contracts hold solid foundation

By Chris Van Wagenen

If Midland's residential construction market appears to be in a lull, then builders might find some solace in the $61 million that has been committed to new commercial projects during the next two years.

"I think this year, some (building) figures are going to jump because we have all this big work hitting us all at once," said David Wayland, a building official with the city of Midland's code enforcement department.

From new construction to expansion, the list of commercial contracts is a lengthy one and can only add to the city's infrastructure as well as its overall value.

Vietnam POWs might be alive in former union, Yeltsin claims

■ If assertions prove true, information could profoundly change history of prisoners-of-war issue.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Boris N. Yeltsin of Russia said on Monday that during the Vietnam War, Moscow appears to have taken American prisoners to labor camps in the Soviet Union. He said "some of them may still be alive."

Yeltsin made his statement in an interview with NBC News on his plane from Moscow to Washington for a summit meeting with President Bush.

If the assertions made by Yeltsin are true — he said that this was the first impression drawn from the release of Soviet archives — the information could profoundly change the history of the contentious issue of Vietnam prisoners of war and ultimately create a major political problem for Bush.

The White House said it could not comment on the substance of Yeltsin's statement. "We have been discussing the POW issue with the Russians for quite a while," Doug Davidson, a White House spokesman, said on Monday night, "and it will be on the agenda with President Yeltsin today."

Some administration officials say they believe that earlier statements by Yeltsin

Reports indicate Saddam rebuilds

■ Iraqi dictator is stronger now than one year ago, intelligence findings show.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Despite stringent economic sanctions and diplomatic isolation, President Saddam Hussein of Iraq is stronger now than he was a year ago, according to a classified intelligence report that will be presented to President Bush and his chief aides.

The interagency report, known as a National Intelligence Estimate, concludes that Saddam has begun to rebuild some of his country's infrastructure by importing goods from Jordan in violation of the U.N.-mandated sanctions and by tapping into hidden Iraqi reserves, said administration officials familiar with the report. It also states that he is trying to reconstitute his military and is strengthening his political base by imposing more repressive measures on his population.

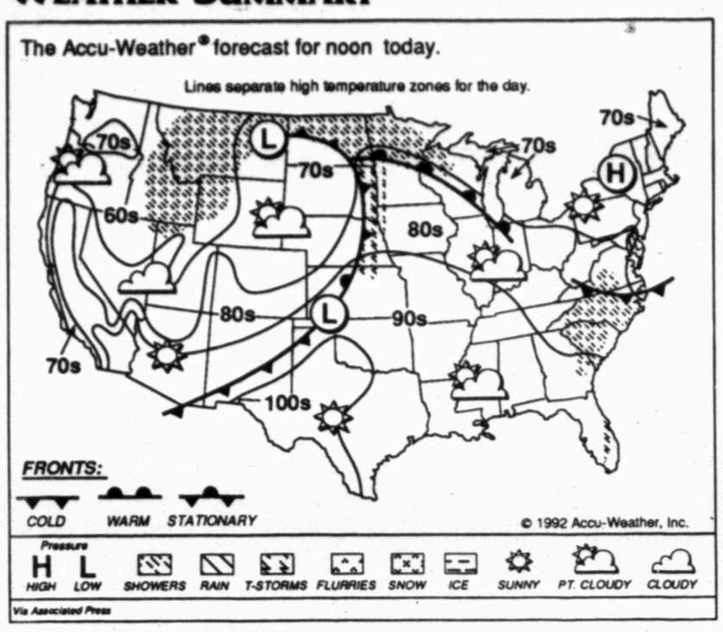

On the other hand, the report says that as long as the sanctions are in place, living conditions for most people in Iraq will continue to worsen and pressures on Saddam will increase.

The conclusions of the report reflect a change in nuance rather than a radical departure from previous intelligence analyses about Saddam's position. Soon after the Iraqi leader suppressed rebellions by Kurds in the north and Shiite Mus-

WEATHER SUMMARY

Mecury makes climb to 100s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the lower 100s and southwest wind at 15 to 25 mph and gusty. Tonight should be fair with a low in the upper 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly sunny with a high in the upper 90s.

After an overnight low of 68, Monday's high reached 95 compared with the record high for that date of 106 set in 1960. The record low for that date is 48 set in 1981.

STATE

Skies should remain partly to mostly sunny across the state today as temperatures continue to climb toward the 100s.

The National Weather Service forecast morning clouds that will give way to partly sunny skies. In South Texas, highs will range from the 80s on the coast to near 100 in the southwest. Lows will be in the 70s and 80s.

Early morning low clouds will surround West Texas today from the Low Rolling Plains to the Edwards Plateau. Afternoons will be mostly sunny with highs reaching 104. Lows will be in the 60s to lower 70s.

North Texas will remain partly cloudy with lows in the mid-70s and highs in the mid-90s through Wednesday.

Temperatures were in the upper 80s and low 90s statewide Monday afternoon.

South winds from 15 to 25 mph gusted throughout the state Monday with gusts reaching 30 mph in parts of North and South Texas. A lake wind advisory was in effect for the western two-thirds of North Texas and the lower coast of South Texas for most of Monday afternoon.

NATION

Up to a foot of snow fell on the mountains of the West on Monday as stormy weather was scattered from coast to coast.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended across the northern Rockies and from the central Pacific Coast into the Sierra Nevada, with rain changing to snow at higher elevations.

As much as 12 inches of snow covered the ground at higher elevations of Yellowstone National Park, and 10 inches of snow closed Powder River Pass west of Buffalo, Wyo., the National Weather Service said. Togwotee Pass had 2 inches of snow and 3 inches fell at Meadow Lark Lodge.

The second day of storms gave Wyoming some relief from a sixth year of drought but also caused minor flooding in Buffalo and Cody.

Twenty-four-hour rainfall amounts ranged from just under 1 inch at Leiter to 2½ to 3 inches at Buffalo, the weather service said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

RULE: Court allows U.S. to kidnap foreigners

(From 1A)

White House press secretary.

She said the United States has told Mexico that it has taken unspecified steps to ensure "U.S. law-enforcement activities overseas fully take into account foreign relations and international law."

Robert Bonner, head of the DEA, praised the ruling and said it will ensure that "justice is done."

Attorney General William P. Barr said the decision was "an important victory in our ongoing efforts against terrorists and narcotraffickers" and added that "our general policy remains cooperation where possible with foreign governments."

But an attorney for Alvarez-Machain said his client was "extremely saddened and disappointed" by the decision.

American Civil Liberties Union attorney Robin Toma said Alvarez-Machain referred to President Bush's comments after the Rodney King verdict about the president's commitment to civil rights and asked, 'Where's his commitment to my civil rights?' "

In the case, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court that the abduction may have been "shocking ... and in violation of general international law principles."

But he said the U.S.-Mexico treaty only spells out ways in which the two nations may extradite people wanted by the other government. The treaty does not make extradition "the only way in which one country may gain custody of a national of the other country," he said.

It is up to the Bush administration and not federal judges to decide whether Alvarez-Machain should be returned to Mexico, Rehnquist said.

He was joined by Justices Byron R. White, Antonin Scalia, Anthony M. Kennedy, David H. Souter and Clarence Thomas.

Justices John Paul Stevens, Harry A. Blackmun and Sandra Day O'Connor dissented.

Writing for the three, Stevens said, "I suspect most courts throughout the civilized world will be deeply disturbed by the monstrous decision the court announces today."

Frank Rubino, a lawyer for deposed Panamanian ruler Manuel Noriega, said the decision is shocking. "We're disregarding foreign governments now. This is like the renewal of the Crusades, or the Roman Empire conquering the world," he said.

Noriega is the most prominent U.S. prisoner captured overseas. But, unlike Mexico's response to the kidnapping of Alvarez-Machain, Panama did not protest the 1989 U.S. invasion that led to Noriega's capture.

Alvarez-Machain was abducted from his office in Guadalajara, Mexico, in 1990 and forced aboard a plane bound for El Paso, Texas, where he was arrested by U.S. officials and taken to California.

Nineteen persons, including Alvarez-Machain, were charged with taking part in the killings. The physician has remained behind bars throughout appeals in the case. He says he is innocent.

The United States and Mexico entered into an extradition treaty in 1980, but the U.S. government never asked Mexico's government to extradite Alvarez-Machain.

Under the treaty, Mexico would have been obliged to prosecute the physician if it denied an extradition request.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last year ruled the United States violated the treaty, sparking the Bush administration's appeal to the high court.

A Supreme Court doctrine first announced in 1886 permits the prosecution of kidnapped suspects. Until Monday, however, the court never had said how the doctrine applies to government-sponsored abductions from foreign nations.

CRITICS: Foreign experts condemn decision

the U.S. might target the two Libyans indicted in the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Scotland in which 270 people died. Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi has refused to surrender the Libyans to the United States or Britain.

Another possible target might be Abul Abbas, who was sentenced in absentia by an Italian court to life in prison for his role in plotting the 1985 hijacking of the Achille Lauro cruise ship, during which an American passenger was shot to death.

Under Harel, Mossad agents kidnapped Adolf Eichmann, a mastermind of the Nazi Holocaust, from Argentina in the early 1960s. Eichmann was tried and hanged in Israel in 1962.

Harel noted that Israel was criticized sharply by some Americans because of the Eichmann case. "U.S. legal experts came to us to try and influence us so we wouldn't try Eichmann," he said.

He said that under Israeli law, someone can be tried in Israel even if he was brought to the country under questionable circumstances.

"This is a matter that has been studied at length by international law experts and all experts condemn and reject that," said Enrique Schepeler, a lawyer who represented former Nazi Walter Rauff, in Santiago, Chile.

The Chilean Supreme Court rejected attempts by Germany and Israel to extradite Rauff, who was the officer under Eichmann considered responsible for the gas vans used to kill Jews. Rauff died in 1986 in Chile.

"It is a clear violation of the sovereignty of the country where the refugee is, never mind how criminal the refugee might be. If powerful nations were allowed to act as they wish, there would be no need for extradition treaties," Schepeler said.

At the London School of Economics, international law professor Rosalyn Higgins said the decision, while controversial, "is not wholly surprising."

A case with universal jurisdiction is generally regarded as a heinous offense worldwide, such as crimes against humanity or genocide, she said.

"Either the (U.S.) Supreme Court is saying torture and drug running are in that category ... or that offenses which harm U.S. nationals are to be treated ... as cases of universal jurisdiction," she said.

Anat Kurz, a terrorism expert at Tel Aviv University's Jaffe Center for Strategic Studies, suggested the ruling might not have a great impact. More important than court rulings are the norms and public opinions concerning the suspected criminal, she said.

She cited Israel's 1989 kidnapping of Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a leader in southern Lebanon of the pro-Iranian group Hezbollah. He apparently was abducted in hopes of winning the release of Israeli servicemen held in Lebanon.

"After quite a short period of hesitation, the U.S. administration didn't have much to say against the kidnapping of Sheik Obeid, after seeing the picture of (Col. William) Higgins hanging," she said.

Klarsfeld said that if such kidnappings are now sanctioned by the U.S. Supreme Court, then "the United States should try to kidnap Alois Brunner from Syria."

Brunner is wanted in France and Germany for the deportation of thousands of Jews during World War II. He is known to be in Syria, although Damascus had denied his presence.

CLAIM: POWs may be alive in Russia, Yeltsin says

on these issues may have been intended to shore up his position in Russia and to discredit the former communist government and hardliners who continue to oppose him.

Davidson said reports that Vietnam-era servicemen were being held in the Soviet Union were not new and that the American Embassy in Moscow had been pursuing the assertions through diplomatic channels for some time. But he was unable to say whether Yeltsin's statement on Monday was the first solid indication the administration has received that those reports might be true. "I don't know the specifics of what we know" about the reports, he said.

On Friday, Yeltsin acknowledged in a letter for the first time to a Senate committee that is examining the prisoner issue that the former Soviet Union had imprisoned Americans during World War II, when Washington and Moscow were allies, and had sent to labor camps and psychiatric wards an unknown number of Americans shot down during the Korean War and on aerial reconnaissance missions during the Cold War.

That acknowledgment was described as "unprecedented" by Sen. John F. Kerry, the Massachusetts Democrat who heads the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs and by Pentagon spokesmen.

In his interview on Monday with the television network, Yeltsin was asked:

"For years, there have been rumors in the United States that American POWs from the Vietnam War were transferred from Vietnam to the Soviet Union. Do you know that to be true?"

Yeltsin, according to NBC, answered:

"Our archives have shown that it is true, some of them were transferred to the territory of the former U.S.S.R. and were kept in labor camps. We don't have complete data and can only surmise that some of them may still be alive."

Kerry said Yeltsin's letter "helps to answer a lot of questions that have been outstanding for a long period of time."

"This is an acknowledgment of a reality that has created too many doubts and too many conspiracies for too long," the senator said at a news conference on Friday. He added: "An awful lot of people have been discounted over the years for having raised this kind of question. People who have said, 'Gee, I heard that somebody may be alive in the Soviet Union' were quickly pushed aside."

Kerry said on Friday, before Monday's comments by Yeltsin were reported by NBC, that the admission that Soviet officials consistently lied to the United States since World War II about Americans held in the Soviet Union may be "the beginning of a transition on this whole issue."

REBUILD: Intelligence reports show stronger Saddam

lims in the south, the Central Intelligence Agency concluded that he could remain in power for years. At the time, some senior White House, Pentagon and State Department officials were portraying Saddam as getting weaker by the day.

"This is not a flip-flop in our thinking, but more a question of degree," an administration official said in describing the report. "The main point is that Saddam is still there, and we expect him to stay. It used to be that people were saying that the sanctions were making him weaker. They're not saying that anymore. He is clearly stronger than he was a year ago."

When asked at a press breakfast last week about Saddam's ability to survive, James R. Lilley, the assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs, said: "As long as he's able to get his hands on enough stuff to buy off his cronies, the Republican Guard, his chances of staying in power are pretty good." He added: "From what I've seen recently, it doesn't look like he's going to fall anytime soon."

The report, which reflects the thinking of the Central Intelligence Agency and the other intelligence agencies, was formally approved on Thursday and is scheduled to be distributed to Bush and senior officials this week.

Its timing is particularly embarrassing for Bush, who has had to defend his administration's conciliatory policies toward Iraq before its invasion of Kuwait against both Democratic critics in Congress and Ross Perot, who have accused him of appeasing Saddam and leading the United States into a war that might have been avoided.

One factor that has enhanced Saddam's position is the widespread smuggling of construction materials, industrial, electrical, and communications equipment, spare parts, and luxury goods to Iraq from Jordan in violation of economic sanctions imposed soon after the August 1990 invasion of Kuwait. Intelligence officials also suspect illegal shipments of military-related equipment.

Under rules set up by the Security Council, Jordan sends large amounts of food and medicine to Iraq through its port at Aqaba and overland across its 100-mile border with Iraq.

Iraq has been allowed to set up a number of exporting offices in Amman, and satellite photos show virtually no large build-up of truck traffic at the border, indicating that Jordan is doing little or nothing to stanch the flow of goods across the border, American intelligence officials said. A senior administration official estimated that about 30 percent of all trade from Jordan to Iraq was illegal.

Iraq is believed to have drawn on reserves from secret foreign bank accounts and sales of gold reserves to pay for the embargoed goods, senior U.N. officials say.

Bush is said to be particularly distressed at the scale of the smuggling, particularly because he received a pledge from King Hussein during his visit to the White House to abide by the sanctions.

"Continuing, still working," Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev said after 4½ hours of talks Monday night with Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

As he left the State Department shortly before midnight, the usually optimistic Kozyrev declined to say they had made headway, instead answering to a reporter's query with tired and slight wave of his hand.

"We shall never again be adversaries," Yeltsin had earlier declared. "And we are moving toward a major reduction in strategic arms and we shall be friends."

Bush, in a CNN television interview, praised Yeltsin "as a friend, not as an adversary." The president prodded Congress to endorse a $24-billion package of Western aid for Russia.

Bush described Yeltsin as "a courageous man who's facing enormously difficult problems at home." He acknowledged that Yeltsin faces pressure from "old militarists" not to bend too far in arms-reduction talks.

Yeltsin, whose plane flew U.S. and Russian flags out the cockpit windows as it taxied into Andrews Air Force Base, was warmly greeted by Baker.

"The gap between us has been closed, Russia and America are becoming friends," Yeltsin said. "Our shared goals are peace and prosperity for our two nations and for the entire world."

Standing alongside Yeltsin, Baker said the summit "holds immense promise for world peace and stability."

"President Bush and I firmly believe that the American people understand the profound implications of Russia's democratic and economic transformation and that they will not fail to respond," he said.

The centerpiece of the summit that begins today is an agreement to radically reduce U.S. and Russian nuclear arsenals.

Yeltsin's spokesman, Vyacheslav Kostikov, said the Russian president was optimistic on the arms talks, and had "brought some little things in his pocket, secret things for President Bush." He refused to elaborate.

Bush and Yeltsin also hope the visit will break a congressional impasse on the $24 billion that the United States and other Western countries have pledged to Russia the other former Soviet republics.

Lawmakers have been uneasy about voting for foreign aid in an election year when voters are preoccupied with problems at home.

Baker told reporters that U.S. action on aid for the Soviets was "in no way linked" to the outcome of arms talks.

At a White House briefing before Yeltsin's arrival, Baker said some "extraordinarily difficult" problems remained in the arms talks. He and Russian Foreign Minister Kozyrev met Monday night at the State Department to try to work out the differences.

"I feel pretty much optimistic," Kozyrev said at the start of the session.

"We are not discussing arms control in an old sense of counterbalancing each other," he told reporters. "We are looking for better ways of dealing with the legacy of arms, of weaponry, which we have from the previous times."

Baker was cautious on prospects for agreement, saying, "We may not get there." He said four or five issues remained in dispute.

Bush said this is "a good time to take another step."

Bush refused to say whether the United States would continue to resist deep cuts in its arsenal of submarine-launched missiles, as urged by Moscow. The United States has been demanding that Russia eliminate all of its powerful land-based, multiple warhead intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Bush, striking a conciliatory tone, said, "I do think it's important that I bear in mind that President Yeltsin has some difficulties from his right, from the old militarists and others who may not be as committed to democracy as he is. I've got to weigh that as we negotiate on arms control."

The president went out of his way to give a diplomatic boost to the embattled Yeltsin, whose country is riddled with economic problems and political divisions.

In their talks beginning this morning, the two presidents are to focus on arms control, aid, Russia's commitment to democracy and economic reform, its relations with other states of the former Soviet Union, and European security, particularly the civil war in Yugoslavia.

In a rare honor for a foreign leader, Yeltsin was invited to address a joint session of Congress on Wednesday. He will be the first Russian or Soviet president to do so.

Japan approves bill to allow troops overseas

N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — Ending nearly two years of bitter debate, the Japanese Parliament approved a bill on Monday permitting the dispatch of military personnel abroad, for the first time since World War II, to play a limited role in international peacekeeping operations.

Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, who had battled for the bill against widespread criticism in Japan and considerable anxiety in neighboring countries, said he hoped that the first troops to be sent abroad would join the U.N. peacekeeping mission in Cambodia before the end of the year.

The bill creates a 2,000-man unit that can be deployed for strictly limited tasks in peacekeeping operations, like providing food and rebuilding hospitals.

Passage came after a wild day of last-minute maneuvering by the opposition, including an announcement by all 137 Socialist lawmakers that they were resigning en masse from the 512-member lower house. The effort apparently failed, however, and the measure passed on Monday night, 329 to 17.

The approval of the bill marks a change of course laden with emotion for Japan, which prefers not to look back to its role in World War II even as China, South Korea, and other countries in the region feel that Tokyo has not sufficiently atoned for its wartime aggression.

The debate hinged essentially on whether Japan's postwar constitutional ban on the use of force — even for peacekeeping — barred the Parliament from approving operations under U.N. auspices. The controversy stirred painful reflections on the rise of militarism here in the 1930s and the wave of death and destruction that followed as Japanese troops advanced through Asia.

Miyazawa's government, still smarting over Western criticism of Japan's limited contribution to the Persian Gulf war, insisted that the bill was long overdue in a post-Cold-War era of cooperation. Leftist opposition parties argued that it was nothing short of a rejection of the most critical element of Japan's postwar national identity and could lead to disaster.

The vote was widely seen as a major victory for Miyazawa, who is expected to cite the bill as evidence that Japan has moved well past the era of "checkbook diplomacy" when he attends a summit meeting next month in Munich of the world's seven biggest industrial democracies.

"After the war, internationally, Japan could neither contribute with human resources nor join the United Nations to promote peace," Miyazawa said on Monday night, minutes after the final vote. "But now, we can do that, and it is good," he said with a wide smile.

The Bush administration publicly stayed out of the debate here, fearing that support for the bill from Washington would trigger a backlash. But the White House and U.S. diplomats in Japan made little secret of their support for the bill.

Restaurateurs savor their dream-home recipe

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff writer

Carmine and Karen Scarcelli have a favorite hobby — looking at new-home construction in Midland.

While the couple still enjoys doing that, they now have a newly built home of their own.

"We picked a time when financing was good," Mrs. Scarcelli said. "We looked at a lot of homes, but we couldn't find what we needed or anything else we could agree on, so we decided to build."

The Scarcellis, owners of Venezia Restaurant, are among a growing number of Midland couples not directly associated with a major oil company who opt to build. Such business now accounts for 20 percent to 25 percent of the new building market.

It is a trend both Realtors and builders welcome.

Like others interviewed, the Scarcellis did a lot of homework when it came to selecting a builder, location and floor plan to best suit their needs.

The couple eventually chose Polo Park North, based on its proximity to their business, other family members and the nearby shopping district.

Mrs. Scarcelli obtained a market survey of homes sold over a six-month period in the Polo Park area and began figuring just what it would cost to build.

"I sat down and priced them as far as square footage goes," she said. "I figured it would cost us between $49 and $52 a square foot. . . . So, I knew we were getting a good deal at $50."

That's the price quoted the couple by local builder Jim Leonard, one of Polo Park's more active builders.

"I was happy with the price and he was very easy to work with," said Scarcelli, who along with his wife looked at other builders in the subdivision before choosing Leonard.

The couple selected the builder for a number of reasons, including the homeowners' warranty he included in the contract, as well as landscaping and a sprinkler system.

Scarcellis are among a growing number of Midland couples not directly associated with an oil company who opt to build. It is a trend both Realtors and builders welcome.

"That's just the kind of builder he is," said Mrs. Scarcelli, who also talked with friends who had homes built before the couple's final decision was made.

In addition to the builder, the Scarcellis worked closely with subcontractors — the electrician, plumber, tile man and wallpaper people.

"You really have to talk with these people. I know the lady down the street (having a home built) gave them donuts every day," she said with a laugh.

"But you want them on your side, especially if you see something wrong. The ones Jim hires are generally nice . . . they're concerned."

Mrs. Scarcelli said it is important for those considering building to know exactly what they want and what they're willing to spend before any concrete is poured. "Because once that concrete is down, there goes your square footage."

Two things Mrs. Scarcelli was certain she wanted were a square kitchen with a preparation island and a private office.

"I do the books and he does the restaurant, so I knew I wanted the office. I designed that and the kitchen"

She also wanted a supply closet in the office.

"Carmine saved the day with the closet. It had been part of the storage unit in the garage, but he said he didn't need that."

To enhance resale value, the Scarcellis had Leonard leave plumbing connections in the closet, which a new owner could convert into a half-bath.

Overall, the 2,700-square-foot home has four bedrooms and three baths, in addition to some unusual ceiling designs that add to its charm.

Another feature that appears to be a trend among newer styles being built in Midland is a walk-around master bathroom closet, which the couple decided to block off by two bureaus located at the center.

"It's the newest thing, but it wasn't exactly what we wanted," Ms. Scarcelli said. "It was too narrow in back, but we fixed it and, in fact, it's better this way."

HOUSING: Market turns, doesn't spin, local Realtor says hasn't been too bad. But then it hasn't been too good, either. You can ask anyone," said Jan Melton, owner of Re/Max of Midland at Mission Square.

According to Ms. Melton, one of the problems these days, at least among potential buyers, is the uncertainty surrounding their futures.

While transferees still make up the bulk of all new-home construction, they are hardly a factor in the pre-owned market, which continues to be dominated by first-time buyers.

Transferees coming from larger markets have more money to spend, so construction is more appealing, if for no other reason than to avoid paying capital gains on profits resulting from a previous sale.

"When they come to Midland, it looks like heaven. They're not going to pay the government 30 percent of what they have (sold their house for). That's why they're forced into the higher range, which means they build big houses in places like Greentree North or Saddle Club," said Realtor Ruth Young.

Although new construction continues, Ms. Young said it appears that local builders are beginning to run out of work. "They're (the major oil companies) still bringing them in and out, and that makes activity for the Realtors and builders. But there's going to come a saturation point."

Ms. Young, like others interviewed, believes the oil companies are headed overseas. "I have two listings right now going to China, two going to Indonesia and one going to Russia."

Alan Hale, vice president of commercial lending for First City Bank, said the big question year-in and year-out focuses on the oil companies and their plans regarding personnel changes.

"They don't know the answers even if you ask them, and that's why there's a risk to any builder or developer out there," Hale said. "They need to make a pretty good return on those homes or lots to justify that risk factor."

Hale said First City doesn't see a need for new lots. "From a residential growth standpoint, we think there's an ample supply of lots with existing projects under way."

On an average, Midland has built more than 200 new homes a year for the past five years. Most of those are larger, four- and five-bedroom homes selling for $130,000 and up.

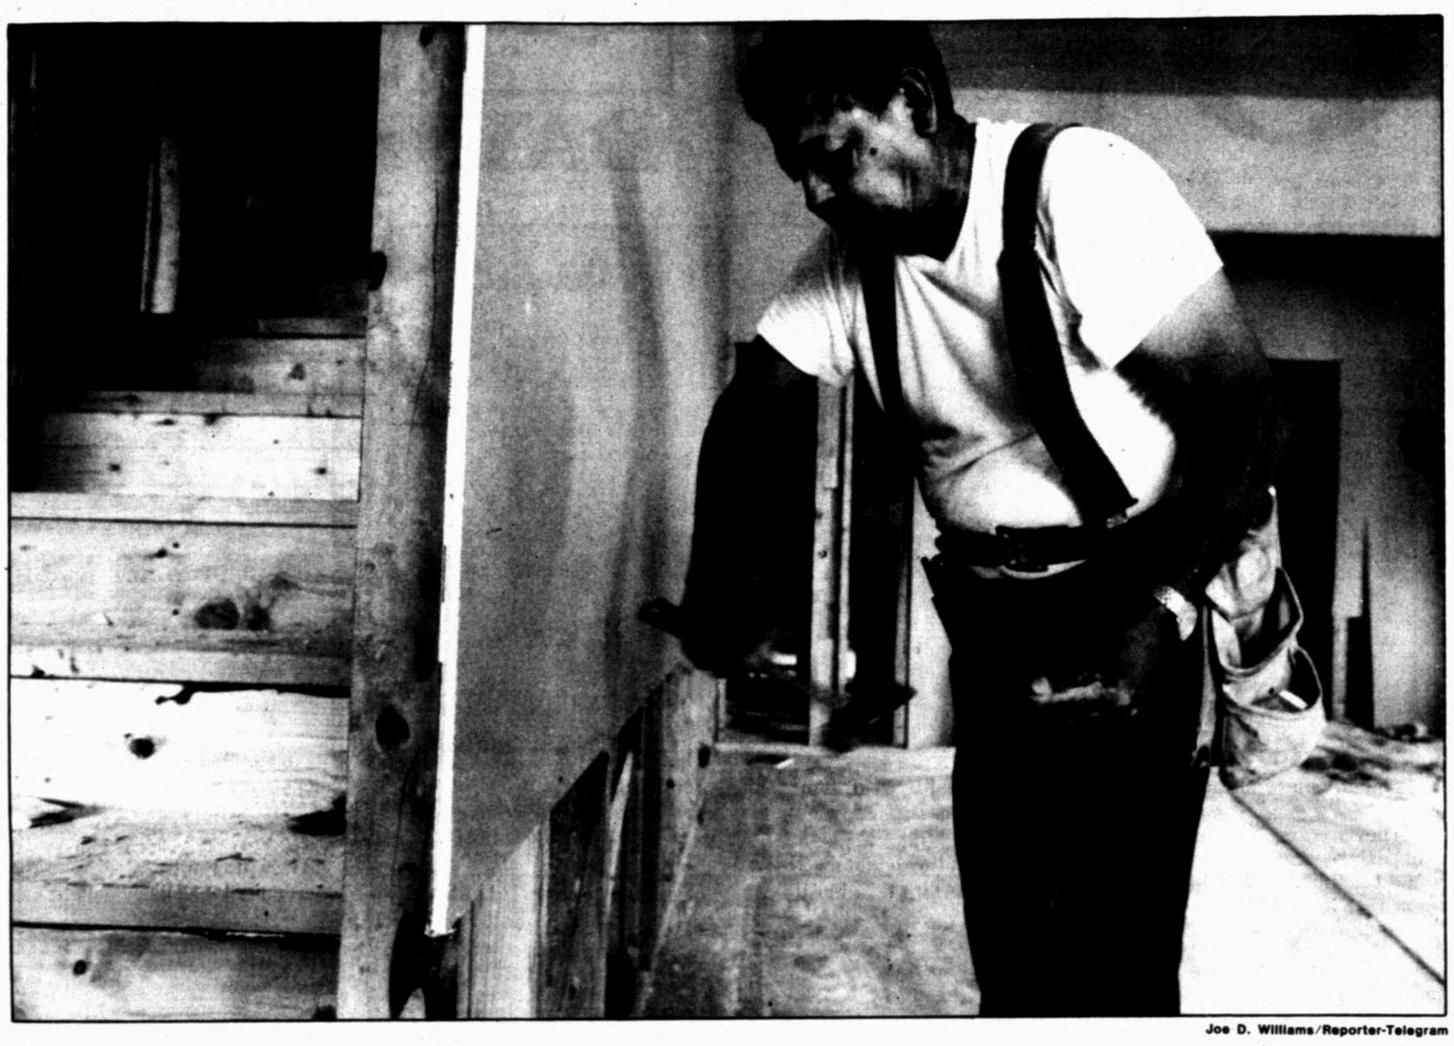

Midland appraiser Tom Passmore, of Wes-Tex Appraisal Service, said he questions how long construction can continue, considering current inventory levels.

"It's hard to figure, with this Chevron deal and some of the others talking about (more) layoffs. . . . People ask me why all this (new construction) is happening, but I just don't have any answers."

Realtor Norma Pine said she hears about those concerns every day, even as more homes go up around town.

"At least the market is turning, and that's good . . . that's at least progress. We're all in danger when it stops turning. It's not spinning out there, but it is stable."

Ms. Pine said her office had a brisk first quarter as far as sales of both new and existing homes. "And it really hasn't stopped. But enough now to feed off itself," she said.

Ms. Langston continues to marvel at the number of new homes that go up each year. "I'm at as big a loss as anyone else, but the fact that our inventory is down means it has to be replaced somewhere."

And that's because existing selections are slim, at least where transferees are concerned, who prefer the larger four- and five-bedroom homes.

Gary Stapp, general manager of Don Harvey Realtors, said there are many ways to look at layoffs and changes among the oil companies and how they affect the local realty market.

"Our tendency is to look at the numbers without really breaking them down," Stapp said.

Of employees laid off by a company like Chevron, Stapp said some of those will accept early retirement packages and remain in Midland; some are second-income earners for their families; some are renters whose departure will not result in another home on the market; and some will secure other employment in town.

"That's at least four groups we're talking about," Stapp said. "You take those out of the larger number and you don't have nearly the number leaving. That should allow us to absorb these houses without any major impact (to the market)."

Unlike others, Stapp does not believe the major oil companies will completely abandon Midland. "The reality of these group moves is, they tend to be much smaller than their original announcements, once all the dust has cleared."

However, he also believes builders need to exercise caution until they know exactly what's going to unfold as far as restructuring and relocation activities.

"It's easy to look at some of the weaker periods we've had. But even in the worst of times, we've had buyers for these new homes. I still think we're going to see people moving in here, even with all the reorganizing going on," he said.

Existing homes, too, continue to sell.

In April, the most recent month for which sales figures are available, there were 110 homes sold at an average list price of $71,600. During the same period a year earlier, 111 homes were sold at an average price of $72,700.

Realtor Sandy Scott, of Re/Max Realty of Midland, said the available inventory of homes makes it evident that Midland continues to maintain more people than it loses.

"I'm receiving a lot of calls right now from people who are leasing, but are interested in buying. . . . Several are ready to buy their first home."

Scott said the buyer profile for existing homes in Midland is a couple in their mid-30s, looking in the $70,000 to $80,000 range.

"We're also seeing a very strong investor market out there. Investors are picking up everything they can."

The same apparently holds true for other types of real estate, according to Marsha Alldredge, escrow officer at Lone Star Abstract & Title Co.

"We had some California investors who have taken apartment complexes here and changed them into condominiums and are selling the units to out-of-state investors. That's been an ongoing trend elsewhere, but we hadn't seen a lot of it in Midland," Ms. Alldredge said.

Another factor driving the pre-existing market has been interest rates, according to Suzanne Smith, manager of HNB Mortgage Co.

"A lot of buyers just feel it's a great time to live with an 8½ percent interest rate for the next 10 to 15 years. Nearly everyone we do a loan for who is leasing a home can buy one for the same money or less."

Ms. Smith said that, typically, January through March is slow for home purchases. "But this is the best quarter I've had here since I've been in this business. We've closed a lot of loans, more than we've ever had for this time of the year."

Unlike the transferee market, which remains the primary mover of new construction, those moving into the pre-owned market are Midlanders who plan to stay.

"We see a lot of people come through our doors who have very stable jobs, high incomes and long-term employment . . . like Parker & Parsley. I've had several buyers from them. They're a strong company and people (employed there) are comfortable."

Pat Paxton, president of the Midland Board of Realtors, said a number of first-time buyers also are starting to come out of rental properties. "Generally, they're not building . . . they're a good target market for a pre-owned home," she said.

Ms. Paxton said lower interest rates, coupled with lower real estate values, appear to contribute to a very stable real estate market, although she acknowledges there is probably a slight oversupply of homes in the $200,000-plus range.

Mike Nance, a local appraiser, said it's not just local people buying existing properties.

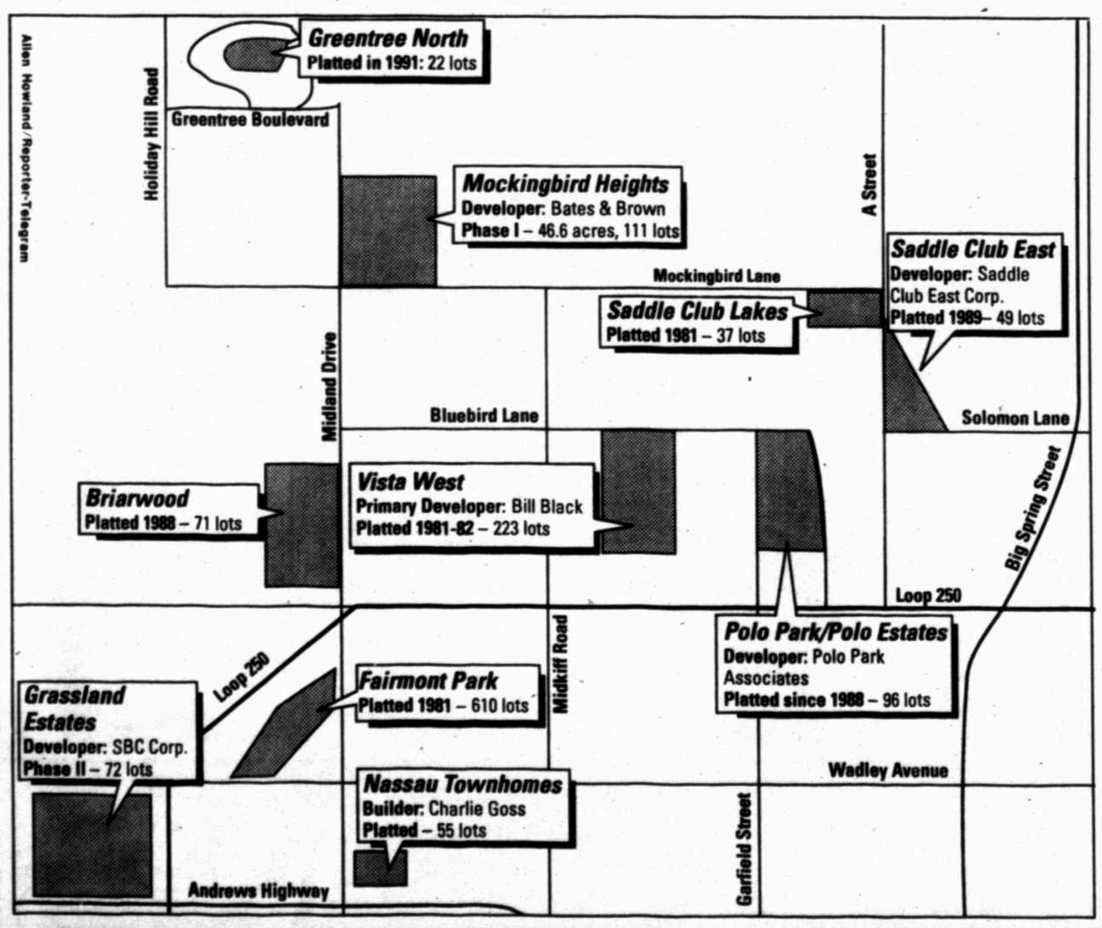

"You also get corporate people buying these homes who want the mature landscape and the established neighborhood. There are just a lot of stratas to this market that are too hard to judge."

Of total sales between Jan. 1 and April 21, 56 percent were homes priced from $51,000 to $75,000; and 25 percent from $25,000 to $50,000.

"There are people out there who are ready to buy a house . . . they're just kind of circling right now to see what's going to happen (with the economy)," Nance said.

And that includes sellers.

"A lot of them have also been in a holding pattern," Nance said. "They're choosing to get on with their lives, even if it means losing on what they can sell at."

Development builds on housing affordability

For Steve Koliba and his wife, Patty, the choices were few.

"When we were looking, there just weren't a lot of homes on the market in our range. It was just far cheaper to build than buy an existing home," said the Chevron employee.

Even then, the choices were few.

For the Kolibas, it was Fairmont Park, Skyline Terrace or Vista West.

They chose Vista West, a subdivision located between Midkiff Road and Garfield Street north of Loop 250, being developed by Realtor Bill Black.

"We liked it because it was quiet and there are a lot of good neighbors there," said Koliba, who learned about the area from other Chevron employees.

And that's just the kind of homebuyer Black envisioned when he re-started Vista West — a project originally began in the early 1980s.

"A couple of owners have told me this is the best-kept secret in town," Black said. "Despite what we're hearing, Midland is growing and will continue to grow. There always seems to be a demand for new homes."

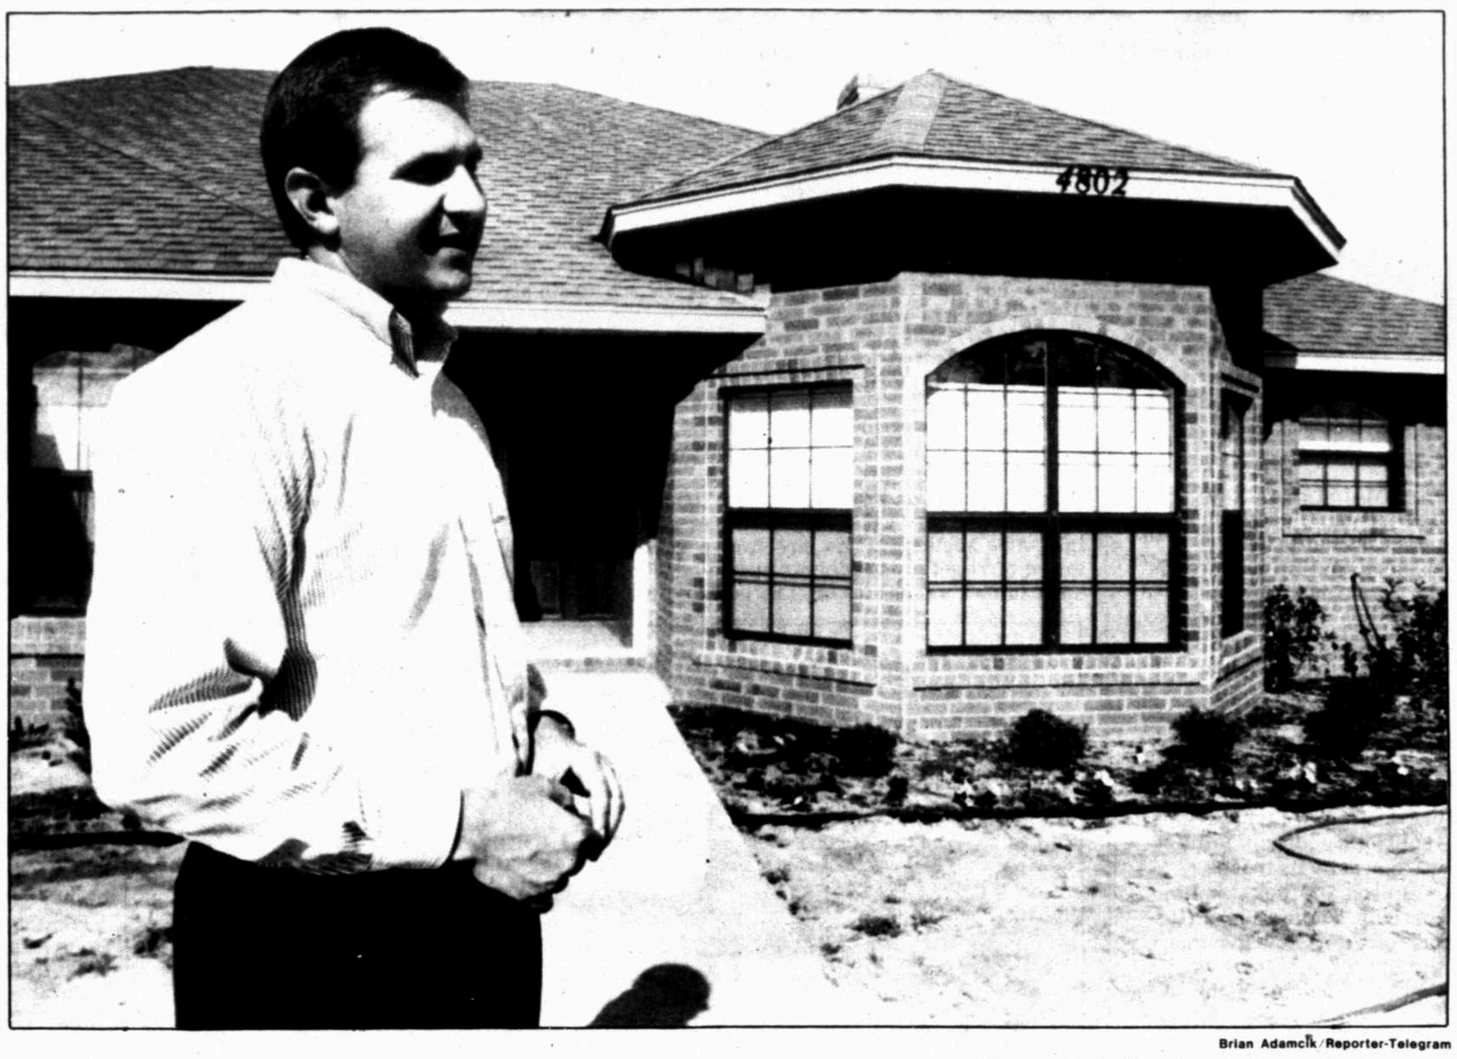

Although other builders are involved in the subdivision, Koliba said he chose to go with Black's lead builder, Gary Kahler.

"You can pretty much tell a Kahler house from some of the other ones," Koliba said. "I told him to give me some of his plans and I took them home and modified what I liked."

"You hear a lot of nightmares about builders from people who have moved in from other areas, but Gary was by far the best contractor I ever worked with . . . and I work with a lot of contractors in my business."

The Kolibas eventually settled on a 1,850-square-foot house with three bedrooms and two baths. "We don't have kids yet, so we mainly built this house for resale."

They are hardly alone. Many of their neighbors chose Vista West as the place to build their first home.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Chevron employee Steve Koliba stands outside his home at Vista West. "We liked it because it was quiet and there are a lot of good neighbors there," said Koliba, who learned about the area from other Chevron employees.

"We wanted a development for the mid-ranges. My philosophy is, Midland needs a good-quality neighborhood for first-level, entry buyers," Black said.

During the past year, Kahler has built 15 new homes in the subdivision, with others ready to go.

"This isn't a big market, otherwise more builders would be doing this," Kahler said. "I'm probably one of the few builders in town building the smaller homes, but the demand is there."

Kahler, who works mostly with speculation homes instead of pre-sold, said that of the total lots in Vista West, only 44 remain undeveloped.

"I like the spec (speculation) market. They're in the lower price range and you can afford to do them," he said — in part, because of lot prices.

During the boom, lot prices for a home in Vista West sold for $28,000. Today, those same lots cost $10,000.

"It makes a difference," Kahler said. "Prices are down; interest rates are down. It's a good time to buy. That's why a lot of people are. Today, I don't think you can get a better price."

Realtor Kay Sutton, with Don Harvey Realtors, agreed.

"We have some very nice homes going up in the $80,000 price range, including those in Vista West," she said. "I've sold several in that price range."

Kahler said a "job profile" of those moving into the subdivision includes a wide range of professions . . . from teachers to police officers to nurses. In addition, there are oil and gas transferees, such as the Kolibas.

"You talk to a lot of people, and most of them don't even know where Vista West is at," Koliba said. "And, the neighbors are great. They're the best neighbors we've ever had."

Black said Vista West is fulfilling a need that always has been there. "And I think what this shows is that Midland does have a future. That's why I have an investment in this."

Another appeal to buyers of those homes is that the development is outside Loop 250 and in the Santa Rita Elementary district, which many young families favor.

"We're looking at people here who are first- and second-time owners. . . . The one thing I wish we could do is bring more retirement people in here (into Midland)," Black said.

Last year, Kahler said Vista West was producing two new homes a month. "So, you figure this must be a pretty good area," he said.

But it's hardly the only area. Although new-home construction has slowed somewhat in Fairmont Park, located just east of Loop 250 west, it, too, shows potential.

In addition to new homes starting in the $80,000 range, at least one developer has begun work on a townhome subdivision along Geraldine Drive just east of Midland Drive off Gulf Avenue.

Builder Charlie Goss secured 55 lots through the Resolution Trust Corp. and plans to build townhomes of between 1,250 and 1,300 square feet.

Work on those lots, which began in May, continues.

"They'll have two full bedrooms and two full baths, a living area, den, kitchen, washer and dryer connections, ceiling fans, a fireplace and a two-car garage," Goss said.

The Nassau townhomes, said Realtor Norma Pine with Chaparral Realty, will be marketed toward single professionals, widows and divorcees who want a nice home, but not the headache of a yard.

Goss "has a list of people who are interested. I think he'll do real well," said Ms. Pine, adding that several people have come to Midland looking for such a development, but have been unable to find one.

"We've talked with a number of people," Goss said. "Especially single parents with one child and others who are by themselves. That's the reason we started these. We have 32 people who have shown interest, but time will tell.

"I think there will be a demand once we get started . . . when people have a chance to see what they look like. But it's like anything else, you don't want to buy something unless you can see it," he said.

CONTRACTS: City foresees big role for commercial construction

(From 1A)

McGraw Hill Inc., total commercial construction was up by more than 100 percent in April, compared to the same month a year earlier.

Year-to-date through April, construction contracts totaled more than $30 million, compared to just $11 million for the same period last year.

At Memorial Hospital & Medical Center, a $20 million, two-phase expansion is now under way.

When completed, 99,000 square feet will be added to the existing structure, with expansion to include emergency-room facilities, radiology, clinical lab space and outpatient services.

At Midland Independent School District, a $10,840,000 construction project is under way at George Abell Junior High, located west of Loop 250 north of Grassland Estates.

MISD also plans to spend $13,375,000 to construct the Barney Greathouse Elementary School and Dr. Viola Coleman Alternative School, plus make additions to 11 elementary schools, and add new lab facilities at both high schools and at Lee Freshman High.

At Midland County Public Library, work is scheduled to begin on an estimated $2 million expansion, which will double the building's size to 54,000 square feet.

Funds for the project were raised through joint public-private sponsorship, with $1.15 million coming from private donations, an Abell-Hanger Foundation matching grant and two anonymous gifts totaling $500,000.

However, construction temporarily has been delayed because of higher-than-expected bids.

In April, groundbreaking ceremonies were held at the Mabee Memorial Swim Center for a $2 million pool expansion project that eventually will benefit the City of Midland Swim Team.

The new 25-yard-by-25-yard pool will add about 23,000 square feet to the sports complex. Individuals, foundations and some out-of-town groups, who had an interest in swimming, all contributed to the project.

On Midland's west side — near the intersection of Loop 250 and Highway 191 — construction began earlier this year on the Rehabilitation Hospital of Midland/Odessa, a facility that will provide services for patients with head, spinal cord and work-related injuries as well as strokes and orthopedic conditions.

The 56,000 square-foot facility will cost an estimated $13 million to build and is expected to create about 150 new jobs. It will be operated by Washington D.C.-based Rehab Hospital Services Corp.

In addition to those projects, Midland Planning and Zoning commissioners recently approved a Dallas firm's request to rezone a 48-acre site for eventual development as a shopping center north of Loop 250 between Midkiff Road and Garfield Street.

The plan still must be approved by Midland City Council, which could overturn the recommendation to change the zoning from residential to retail.

Amresco Management has proposed building one large retail store of more than 100,000 square feet, with other space for smaller businesses, including an unspecified chain restaurant.

Meanwhile, at Sam's Discount Warehouse, located on Loop 250 West, SBC Corp. President Doug Henson said that chain also is in the planning stages of a significant addition.

"I have every reason to believe they will expand that store by 28,000 square feet," he said.

All this is good news for builders and suppliers.

"We have enough commercial construction to last us two years, start to finish. There's a lot of commercial activity out there," said John Childress, manager of Triangle Lumber and Block.

Agreeing was Bill Campbell, sales manager for Featherlite Building Products, a supplier of brick, concrete block and other masonry-related items, such as cement.

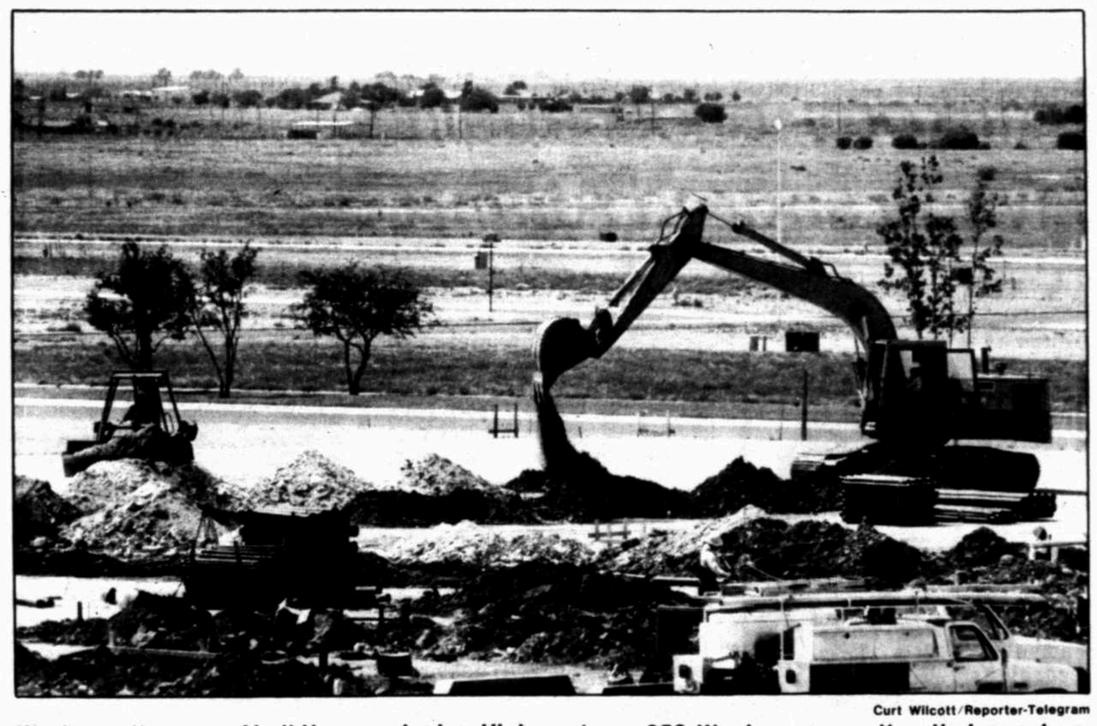

Campbell said that in addition to the junior high, his company could benefit from new contracts for the hospital addition as well as construction of the new elementary school and rehabilitation hospital.

Still other indicators suggest Midland's existing retail space is slowly being consumed.

"We issued a new permit for a Mexican restaurant (Abuelos) out there at the Colonnade Shopping Center," at Loop 250 and Garfield Street, Wayland said. "All of a sudden, we're seeing some activity. That's about an 11,000- to 12,000-square-foot restaurant going in."

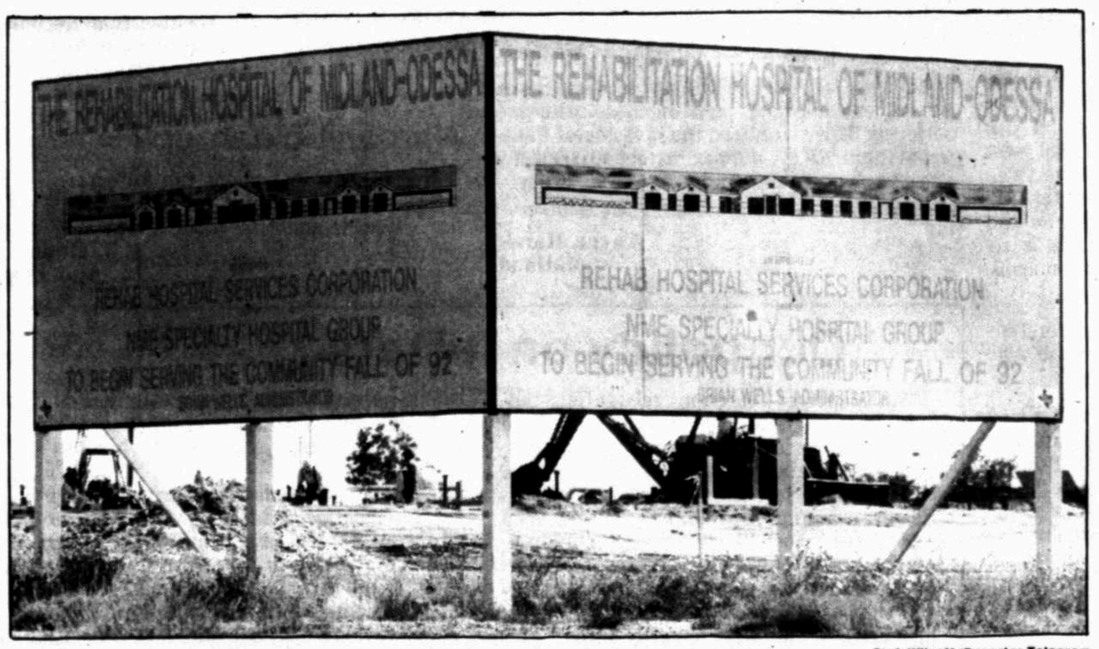

The building official also said new leasing activity has occurred in other areas of town where shopping centers stood dormant for years, including at the Lone Star Plaza owned by Gili's Restaurante y Cantina, located at Illinois Street and Midland Drive.

"Gili's used to be the only one in there, now we're seeing some tenants moving in," Wayland said. "If our population is dwindling and things are so bad, why are we seeing all this activity? It has me baffled, but you don't hear anyone (contractors) coming into this office and griping."

Bush should urge troop withdrawal

By peaceful and principled resistance, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania wrested back their independence last August, after the collapse of the coup in Moscow. But that independence remains precarious so long as more than 100,000 Russian troops remain on their soil. The three Baltic states rightfully want Russia to withdraw those forces. And Lithuanians on Sunday overwhelmingly voted for a referendum asking the Russians to withdraw their troops.

But Moscow refuses even to discuss repatriating its troops. It's a lingering Cold War burden worth attention when President Bush meets with Russian President Boris Yeltsin in Washington this week.

Bush could usefully ask Yeltsin to commit himself to withdrawal, and he could find a way for the West to help provide housing for the repatriated troops, as Bonn is doing for those who are leaving East Germany.

The continuing presence of this army of occupation ignores Russia's obligations under the Helsinki Accords to respect borders. It's not necessarily evidence, as Baltic leaders suspect, that Russia intends to restore its imperium.

But the troops' presence is a sign of disrespect for the Balts' newly restored sovereignty and a provocation to people who have suffered under five decades of Soviet misrule. By failing to withdraw, Moscow incurs responsibility for any untoward acts by its troops.

There's another side to this coin. Thousands of Russian civilians now live in the Baltic states, many of them since birth. Withdrawal of the troops will remove any reason for the Baltic states to deny them full rights. That includes military veterans who have chosen to retire to the Baltic countries unless they've been convicted of crimes committed during the years of Soviet occupation.

By reminding Russia and the three Baltic nations of their respective responsibilities under the Helsinki Accords, Bush could strike a modest, constructive blow against fear and for freedom.

'Rap' lyrics reveal decline of Americans

Rap" is poetry for the mentally arrested, of whatever race. It demonstrates the sterility of a modern public school education, if you call it education.

Murchison

No doubt starchy adults said the same about rock 'n' roll, back in the Presley years, but rap plumbs moral depths to which rock never has descended. The rap lyrics I have listened to are ugly, violent, full of hatred for women and authority figures.

Which brings us to Ice-T — rappers give themselves names like that — and his quaint little ditty "Cop Killer."

One line of "Cop Killer" goes: "I'm 'bout to kill me somethin'/A pig stopped me for nuthin'." And another: "I got my twelve gauge sawed off/I got my headlights turned off/I'm 'bout to bust some shots off/I'm 'bout to dust some cops off."

Some cops in Texas, unhappy at the prospect of being dusted off by a spaced-out Ice-T fan, have organized a boycott of Time Warner Inc., whose record subsidiary produces and markets this piece of pornography.

The company is grieved that policemen should see the song in a context other than "the free expression of ideas." Maybe, a spokesman suggests, Ice-T is just playing a role. Why, yes — like maybe John Wilkes Booth played a role. I wonder how this form of idea-expression would be received if Ice-T had the president of the United States, rather than the cops, in his artistic crosshairs.

An older, grittier America would have jerked this junk out of the stores fast enough to melt Ice-T's cubes — and maybe prosecuted him for incitement to murder. But this isn't a sermonette on the deformation of the First Amendment or the irresponsibility of big business. What we ought most to be concerned about is a culture where brutality and violence are so commonplace a big company finds nothing odd about a song saying, let's shotgun the cops.

Remedies aren't easily found. We could jerk "Cop Killer" albums off the store shelves. Time Warner's customers can and should punish the company for reckless disregard of the canons of moral responsibility. This settles nothing. Boom boxes, a.k.a., ghetto blasters, will still blare "Cop Killer's" message: Hate; shoot; kill. The message will continue to fall on receptive ears.

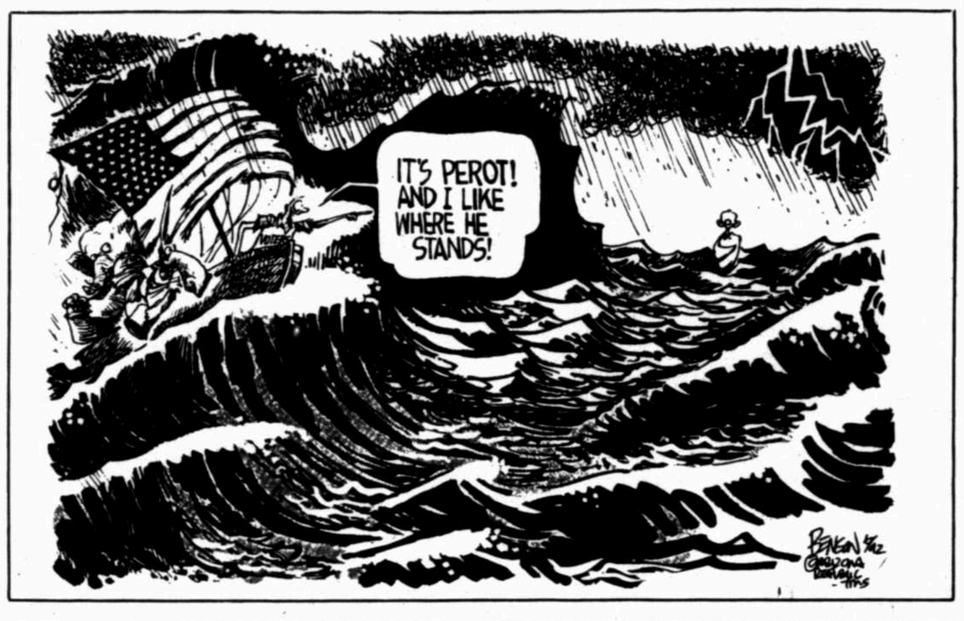

Bing Crosby didn't sing songs like "Cop Killer." The Rolling Stones didn't urge listeners to saw off their 12-gauges. Something new and bad is going on here. What could it be if not all the dire things Dan Quayle has been talking about, to gales of laughter and indignation — the dissolution of the family, the collapse of values? Through abuse and neglect, we have laid low the moral norms by which society formerly lived. Actions have, well, consequences. Among the consequences of sneering at right and truth and good is "Cop Killer," which creates a wholly new version of right and truth. The Ice-T version: Dust off your adversaries; show no mercy; settle it with a 12 gauge.

The Ice-T version is also racial: Black ghetto dwellers against white cops, the poor against the middle class (usually denominated "the rich"). We're setting up dual standards of behavior and expectation here. They must clash in due course. Indeed, in Los Angeles, they already have.

Ice-T, intentionally or otherwise, sets the scene for civil horrors we can only start to imagine. Of course he's not nearly important or charismatic enough to achieve such a feat by himself.

For this result he needs help. And gets it from Time Warner executives out for a fast buck; from Dan Quayle's "cultural elite," who sneer at the idea of moral standards binding on both sexes and all races; from black and white ministers — nominal custodians of moral truth — either too intimidated or politically radicalized to steer the moral debate away from the racial viper pit.

CHARLEY REESE

'Economic growth' won't resolve world's woes

A lot of people who oppose the Earth Summit in Brazil like to genuflect before the magic words "economic growth."

They claim that economic growth, which they claim is dependent on adopting a free market economy, will solve all the problems of the environment.

Reese

What they really mean is, don't use any criteria other than economic gain as the basis to make any decisions. Don't hamper global corporations in pursuit of profit. Don't divert any resources to poorer countries. In short, don't do anything but allow corporations to go on doing what they please as they please when they please where they please.

If we assume these people are sincere in believing in the magical properties of economic growth and the free market, we must admit they are ignorant.

In the first place, the United States was not a very old republic when we began to move away from a property-based free market system. That was replaced by a finance-capitalism scheme of monopolies, trusts, price-fixing, and wholesale bribery to extract favors from government.

In the second place, America achieved great wealth because of the great abundance of natural resources, which we ruthlessly exploited. But for many people of the world, the economic system is not the problem. The problem is lack of resources.

For example, if you could sprinkle fairy dust over Honduras so that every citizen awoke the next morning Adam Smith re-incarnated — if they then adopted the most ideal free market system ever imagined, most Hondurans would remain poor. Why? Because maximum utilization of nothing yields nothing. There just aren't a lot of natural resources in Honduras — not a lot of land, not a lot of fertile soil, not a lot of mineral wealth, not a lot of rainfall in the right amounts at the right times in the right places.

Plain old geography has a lot more to do with wealth than ideologues, polemicists, and politicians like to admit. England, for example, didn't have the right geography so they built a powerful navy and looted the resources and labor of other people and their lands. We seized the middle and best part of the North American continent, leaving to Canada the coldest part with the shortest growing season and to Mexico, the most arid part with the least water.

We today should be grateful to our ancestors for being shrewd and tough enough and ruthless enough to carve out a country whose natural bounty produced a material blessing we still enjoy.

But we should not be ignorant, racist asses (the kind with long ears and a tail) by supposing that we are rich because we are so smart and virtuous and others are poor because they are so dumb and unvirtuous. No one has the guts to state it so plainly but that meaning is quite evident in the statements of those telling the rest of the world to imitate our free market system and everything will be peachy.

Whether you plant corn in the Sahara as a free market farmer or a member of a socialistic commune, it won't grow. Neither a socialist nor a capitalist can find oil where it doesn't exist. The climate does not change according to which political and economic philosophy we espouse. Fish do not survive capitalist pollution any more than they do socialist pollution.

It is of life and death importance that we disregard this code-word claptrap from corporations and their mouthpieces in the think tanks and recognize the vital importance of natural resources — land, water, and air. We must recognize that those blessed by location must help those cursed by location because in the larger view, we all share the same location — one lonely, fragile little planet.

The difference between a living planet and a dead planet is the width of a razor's edge.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Yankees once again invade sacred Atlanta

ATLANTA — All of us native Southerners living in Atlanta knew it was coming. And, now, it is here.

The Sunday paper carried a large article about Northern migration to the capital city of the South.

Grizzard

In the Atlanta metro area the article said native Georgians still have the edge, but it's not an overpowering one and the margin is dwindling.

Said the article, " . . . The migration patterns that brought Northeasterners to Atlanta's elite northern suburbs also sent people from other regions to spots around the metro area.

"These settling patterns . . . have brought a new sense of place to dozens of Atlanta neighborhoods, influencing everything from local politics to the inventory at the corner grocery store."

The article also quoted a Yankee population expert, William Frey of the University of Michigan, as saying, " . . . The nice Southern flavor of Atlanta may be diluted a bit with all the Northerners moving in."

"The nice Southern flavor of Atlanta may be diluted a bit . . . "!?

Although I certainly understand somebody from the land of freeze and squeeze wanting to seek asylum here, I also fear I'm losing my city and may, in my own lifetime, see the dreaded egg cream.

A transplanted New Yorker once said to me, "I like everything about Atlanta except for the fact you can't get an egg cream here."

"What is an egg cream?" I asked him.

He explained it was some sort of concoction that sounded a little like a liquid buttermilk pie.

I said, "So you can't get one of those whatever-they-ares, but at least you don't have to worry about alligators in the sewer system like you did before you moved out of New York City."

So what else can I expect as my beloved city becomes more populated with migrating honkers. (Honker: Northerner with a grating accent who always talks at the top of his or her voice.)

Will Southerners start dropping the last part of everybody's first name like the honkers do?

Will I forever be Lew? Will Mary become Mare? Will Nancy become Nance? Will Bubba become Bub?

Will the automobile horn drown out the lilt of "Georgia on My Mind"?

Will they dig a tunnel through Stone Mountain so native New Yorkers can remember the dark, choking atmosphere of the Lincoln and the Holland tunnels?

Will Harold's Barbecue, 45 years in the business, lose its clientele to delicatessens where you have to scream at the top of your voice to get somebody to take your order for pastrami on pumpernickel?

Will the downtown statue of the Phoenix, symbolic of Atlanta rising from the ashes, be replaced by a statue of Sherman holding a can of lighter fluid?

Will grits become extinct? Will corn bread give way to the bagel?

Will everybody, including native Southerners, start calling Atlanta's pro football team the "Fallcuns," like Yankee sportscasters say it, instead of the way it's supposed to be pronounced, "Fowlcuns"?

Will freeway replace expressway?

Will Southern men start wearing black socks and sandals with Bermuda shorts, too?

Will "Y'all come back," become "Git outta here"?

God forbid. God forbid.

Reagan, Bush ignore poor

George Bush and Ronald Reagan have never supported civil rights, rights (equal) or promoted policies to help the poor. They haven't spoken out for equal rights at all, much less like Lyndon Johnson did to get the Civil Rights bill enacted into law. Bush and Reagan opposed it! Bush is opposed to affirmative action for blacks. Without it, there is the status quo which is a country divided by race and economic status!

Bush hasn't made accusations against the looting of the savings and loans that the taxpayers (who are in no way responsible for it) are paying for. The reason: the wealthy crooks are Bush's people. His contributors. I'm still angry about Richard Nixon, a criminal who can't vote, a liar and an abuser of power who saw his people go to jail rather than stepping in and taking the consequences. Both he and Spiro Agnew were crooks. Yet Nixon is received by current republicans with open arms. Maybe they feel he's one of them.

An article in the Midland Reporter-Telegram reported that Bush favored those who contributed to his campaign.

Bush said when he started to L.A., "It isn't over yet, I'm sending a Justice delegation to investigate to determine whether Rodney King's civil rights were violated." I've heard no more of that. A lot of people don't get it. Injustices, insults, demeaning actions by government and the police. Violence as an answer to a long period of not getting a chance will inevitabely lead to violence. Boston Tea Party: Bill Murchison and George Bush just don't get it.

Bush packing the Supreme Court is also an insult. His last appointment, Clarence Thomas, had one of his decisions concealed because it might adversely affect his nomination. Thomas has already been chastized by seven members of the court for making an obviously incorrect vote (Time, March 9, Pg 41).

Thomas is guilty! if he were innocent, he would have told Anita Hill, "I'm going to sue you for slander and defamation of character!" He couldn't say that.

Bush and GOP lawmakers never publicly speak of the poor or the jobless. They say "jobs" but they only are thinking of business.

Values? Goerge Bush will not let fetal tissue be used to alleviate pain of those who are seriously ill. He launched the invasion of Panama at night, killing approximately 40,000. Only Congress can declare war. Law and order?

Reconstruction lives

The main editorial on Sunday, May 31, asked, "Whatever became of the concept of states' rights and the inviolable right of a state to regulate its own resources?"

States' rights were brutally murdered in the aftermath of the War between the States. One later denial of states' rights was the Voting Rights Act, which applies to only 14 states. Now, the Markey Amendment to the energy bill is merely the most recent blow against states' rights, and proof positive that Reconstruction continues.

Brazil counts benefits reaped from Earth Summit

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — It's too soon to tell what good the Earth Summit did for the planet. But Brazil already is counting its benefits.

President Fernando Collor de Mello announced late Monday the government would receive $4.6 billion in loans for the environment.

The summit "was fundamental for the world, and also fundamental for Brazil," Collor de Mello said in a nationally televised address.

Rio residents are enjoying the new roads, extra telephones, clean streets and heightened security that were part of a facelift this city of 6 million received for the summit, which ended Sunday.

However, a survey published Monday showed most residents of this crime-ridden city don't think the good times will last, especially when the security force of 35,000 police and army troops is reduced.

But Brazil hopes its widely praised organization of the 12-day conference will earn it new respect and stature among developed countries, and help boost its sagging tourism industry.

Collor de Mello, playing host to more than 100 world leaders, got a breather from a political scandal involving his brother Pedro and his former campaign treasurer.

"The summit was the medicine for what ails us," Rio Mayor Marcello Alencar said Monday. "We had wonderful promotion of Rio, and for free."

"Rio has recovered its self-esteem," agreed Rubens Ricupero, Brazil's ambassador in Washington.

The immediate benefit will be in cash, Economy Minister Marcilio Marques Moreira said: about $1.1 billion from Japan, including $780 million to clean up the polluted Tiete River in Sao Paulo and Guanabara Bay in Rio.

Japan's export-import bank plans $300 million in environmental loans.

Kidnappers release 2 German hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two German relief workers, the last of scores of Western hostages held in Lebanon, were freed and turned over to officials Monday night, the Iranian news agency and a Lebanese police source said.

The Beirut bureau of The Islamic Republic News Agency reported that Heinrich Struebig and Thomas Kemptner were turned over to Lebanese security authorities after three years in captivity.

A senior Lebanese officer, however, said the pro-Iranian kidnappers delivered the Germans to Syrian officers in Lebanon.

Struebig and Kemptner were to be delivered to German government and U.N. officials at noon (4 a.m. CDT) Tuesday at the residence of Lebanese President Elias Hrawi, the police officer said. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

At least for now, the releases would close the long, painful saga of Westerners kidnapped in Lebanon. Intent on putting their grievances before the world, Shiite Muslim militants abducted at least 92 foreigners between 1984 and 1991. Eight were slain or died, and three others are believed to have died in captivity.

The kidnappers viewed the hostages as capital that could buy the world's attention to their demands, and the world did pay attention — France released Iranian assets to win freedom for its hostages, and the arms-for-hostages deal cut by senior U.S. officials rocked the Reagan administration for months and continues to haunt President Bush.

But Struebig and Kemptner, who were held for three years, were abducted for a much more personal reason: Their captors wanted to swap them for two Lebanese Shiite brothers jailed in Germany on terrorism charges.

Germany refused to pardon the brothers, Mohammed Ali Hamadi and Abbas Hamadi, whose older brother is believed to be the leader of the group that kidnapped Struebig, 51, and Kemptner, 30. The kidnappers dropped their demand for the brothers' release nine days ago.

The Holy Warriors for Freedom, the Shiite Muslim group that claimed responsibility for kidnapping the Germans in 1989, had said earlier Monday they would be released within 48 hours at President Elias Hrawi's residence in Beirut.

The statement from the Holy Warriors said the decision to release them came in response to the international efforts and mediation by Lebanon, Syria and Iran.

"As we release the last spies and positively close this chapter, we warn against a repetition of past experiences. We have started the countdown for the completion of the happiness for all, otherwise no one will enjoy happiness if our brothers are not released," the handwritten statement said.

"We renew our vow that we shall not rest until freedom is returned to our brothers and this will be the last chance," it added.

Diplomats, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed a report in the Beirut newspaper as-Safir that the Germans were being freed in return for assurances that conditions would be improved for the Hamadi brothers. The paper said that included putting the brothers in the same prison and allowing regular visits by their families.

The Germans' kidnappers are believed to be led by Abdul-Hadi Hamadi, elder brother of Mohammed Ali and Abbas. He is security chief for Hezbollah, a pro-Iranian group that has served as an umbrella for Lebanese kidnappers.

Bernd Schmidbauer, personal envoy of German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, met Monday with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa.

Fighting ends Bosnian truce

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Scattered fighting disrupted a new truce in Sarajevo on Monday, and heavy combat was reported in western Bosnia-Herzegovina where Muslims and Croats have been scoring gains against Serbs.

Meanwhile, the parliament of the new, smaller Yugoslavia elected an ardent Serb nationalist as the troubled country's first president. But in a sign that U.N. sanctions might be hitting home, new President Dobrica Cosic surprised many by urging cooperation with critics.

Western nations accuse Serbia, the dominant state in Yugoslavia, of encouraging the ethnic fighting that has killed at least 15,000 people since the federation began disintegrating a year ago. The U.N. sanctions aggravated Serbia's economic problems, fueling a growing opposition movement.

About 10,000 university students — a hitherto quiet group — rallied in Belgrade Monday to demand the resignation of Slobodan Milosevic, the president of Serbia. It was the third consecutive day of anti-government protests in Serbia's capital.

But the parliament's unanimous choice of Cosic, a 71-year-old author, was likely to strengthen Milosevic's hand. The popular Cosic is considered by many to be the author of Milosevic's Serbian nationalist philosophy.

In his inaugural speech, Cosic called for a government of national unity, new elections and a "policy of democratic compromise" with opposition parties.

He pledged "the fatherland's care for Serbs in Croatia and Bosnia, whose existence is threatened," but said his main aim was to bring peace and international cooperation and to remove the U.N. sanctions.

There was no break in the fighting in Bosnia, however, and the republic's foreign minister, Haris Silajdzic, issued a letter to the U.N. Security Council urging foreign military intervention to stop "this man-made hell imposed on our people by the Belgrade regime."

Bush looks abroad; Clinton focuses on home

WASHINGTON (NYT) — After weeks of watching his election challengers field questions on television, President Bush opened a new front in the air war Monday with a live broadcast interview.

The president stressed his foreign policy expertise in a half-hour appearance on Cable News Network, and hinted that he would soon follow his opponents' lead with a plunge into live talk-show television.

But Bush, with his traditional one-on-one interview, was far less adventurous than Democratic candidate Bill Clinton, who fielded audience questions for two hours on "CBS This Morning."

Clinton focused almost entirely on domestic affairs and promised that as president he would trim back foreign aid. And the Arkansas governor staunchly defended his earlier criticism of rap singer Sister Souljah.

"I wouldn't call it an attack," Clinton said, while insisting he disagreed with the singer. Sister Souljah was quoted after the Los Angeles riots as saying that blacks should consider killing whites rather than each other.

"I thought that was a good example how profoundly alienated and divided some of us are," said Clinton. "A lot of people have overreacted to that."

The apparent Democratic nominee conceded that both parties have earned the public disgust leading to the rise of independent Ross Perot. But he put most of the blame on Republicans, who have controlled the White House for all but four years since 1969.

"They have to take primary responsibility for the country," Clinton said.

Bush, in his interview, heaped blame on the Democratic-controlled Congress for bottling up his programs ranging from education reform to tougher criminal penalties. "I was elected to do certain things, and it's blocked," the president complained as he and CNN anchor Frank Sesno sat in the stately Map Room of the White House.

However, the president dwelt chiefly on the subject that has long been his favorite — international affairs.

He brushed off an announcement that Clinton would meet with President Boris Yeltsin during the Russian leader's visit here. Bush called that meeting part of a "four-year dance" of presidential politics.

"It doesn't cause me any grief," said the president.

The president played a game of foreign policy one-upmanship, reminding viewers that as he already has made a firsthand study of his summit partner.

On other international issues, Bush defended his efforts to weaken environmental treaties at this month's Earth Summit in Brazil even though he found himself largely isolated in world opinion. And he said he would continue to allow the Europeans to lead the way in giving humanitarian aid to besieged Bosnia.

Chicago celebration turns to looting, arson, gunfire

CHICAGO (AP) — Unlike some other big cities, Chicago remained calm after the Rodney King verdict, but when the Chicago Bulls won their second consecutive NBA championship, celebration turned to looting, arson and gunfire.

Some psychologists say violent celebrations are becoming more common.

"Once you have the model set, it's almost like it's competitive — like our city destroyed more than your city," said Dr. Thomas Tutko, professor of psychology at San Jose State.

"The economy is going down the tubes, people are upset politically, and once the cap is off the bottle, it all comes out. It triggers other emotions completely unrelated to what you began celebrating, and the reservoir has to be drained," he said.

Revelry turned riotous Sunday night and early Monday after the Bulls beat the Portland Trail Blazers 97-93 here to clinch their second straight National Basketball Association title.

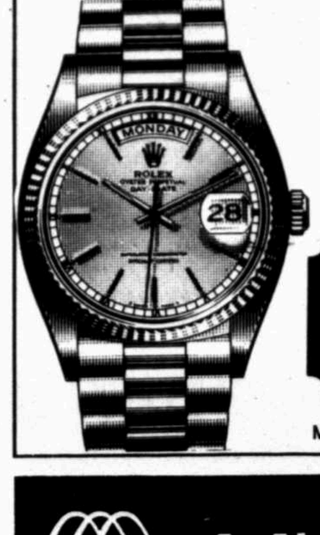

Thousands of people — whites and blacks — poured into the streets from nightclubs and some flattened and flipped two unoccupied taxis.

More than 1,000 people were arrested.

Two people were seriously burned after looters set fire to a South Side store where the two were trying to hide, authorities said. Two police officers were shot, but not seriously wounded, and more than 90 other officers suffered minor injuries, police said.

Shops were looted and windows were shattered along a stretch of ritzy downtown stores known as the Magnificent Mile; on the lower-income West and South sides, stores were burglarized, vandalized and set afire.

Bus tour magazine touts Midland as top stop

■ Article in Destinations emphasizes city as center of regional attractions.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

A travel writer gave Midland and other West Texas spots a thumbs-up in the June issue of an international tour magazine.

The kind words will hopefully attract tourists to Midland by the bus load, Midland chamber officials said.

Local attractions, including the Confederate Air Force headquarters and the Petroleum Museum, made the pages of this month's Destinations, an international publication for bus tour companies.

Writer Eileen Lockwood's "Deep in the Heart of West Texas" chronicles a four-day tour. She explored Midland before heading out for Pecos, the Prude Guest Ranch and Big Bend.

"One of our goals at the chamber this year was to get in a publication like this as part of a tour," said Janna King, chamber president and CEO. "You can't buy advertising like this.

"When you don't have a lot of advertising dollars, you have to get your publicity done through travel writers."

After her time in the area, Ms. Lockwood decried what she called "Yankee propaganda about endless flat terrain and ruler-straight highways."

She said, "the stars are starrier, the oil is oilier, mountains higher, bluebonnets bigger, views longer, streams clearer."

Ms. Lockwood describes Midland as the headquarters city of the West Texas oil industry.

" 'Black gold' brought rough-and-tumble money," she says, "but the white-collar side of the industry turned Midland into a clean, prosperous city with wide streets, attractive buildings and plenty of cultural amenities."

Midland Conventions and Visitors Bureau manager Suzy McElmurry guided Ms. Lockwood's Tall City stop.

"She was delightful, and, I think, pleasantly surprised to find all the things to go and see and do," Mrs. McElmurry said. "It's not like Midland has a bad reputation or a good reputation, just no real name in this (tourism) business."

Destinations is the official magazine of the American Bus Association, Mrs. McElmurry said, and its mailing list includes many people in tourism throughout the country.

Joining the West Texas adventure on June's pages, for example, is a story about sights in Canada.

Because Ms. Lockwood's article incorporates Midland into Big Bend and other area attractions — even Carlsbad Caverns — it fits the chamber's new tourism marketing technique. Staffers have produced pamphlets and videos that tout Midland as part of the area — a sort of base for further travel.

Catering to bus tour operators, the article also publicizes two Midland automotive repair stops for emergencies.

For arranging tours, it lists the address and phone number of Mrs. McElmurry. She said the article could result in some "step-on" tours, in which a chamber staffer literally steps on the bus and gives information as it passes through town and stops at various attractions.

"Midland is definitely a place a person can spend two days and a night," Mrs. McElmurry said. "In the area we've got several quality museums, and this summer, with Angels games and Summer Mummers, there are plenty of things to do."

Many people associate bus tours with retirees, but Mrs. McElmurry said trends are changing. A new group often seen on tours now is grandparents and grandchildren together.

"Touring on a bus like that really takes the hassle out of the trip," Mrs. McElmurry said.

Rainfall

City resident records rain for 33 years

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Curiously, D.L. Coleman's 33-year affection for rain stems from his longtime job as an oil pipeline worker for Gulf Oil Co.

"I was working out here at a tank farm. At that time we were keeping weather stats and reported every 30 days to the National (Weather) Service at the airport," Coleman said. "I guess I got interested through that more or less."

Coleman, 77, kept the weather charts at Gulf beginning in 1945 and continued doing so until his retirement in 1978.

"I guess they (the National Weather Service) did it to get a better picture of what the weather in the Permian Basin was like as a whole," he said. "I don't know if they still have oil companies do that today."

And Coleman, who began keeping statistics at his home in 1959, agrees that rainfall totals at the airport are often drastically different than rainfall totals in town.

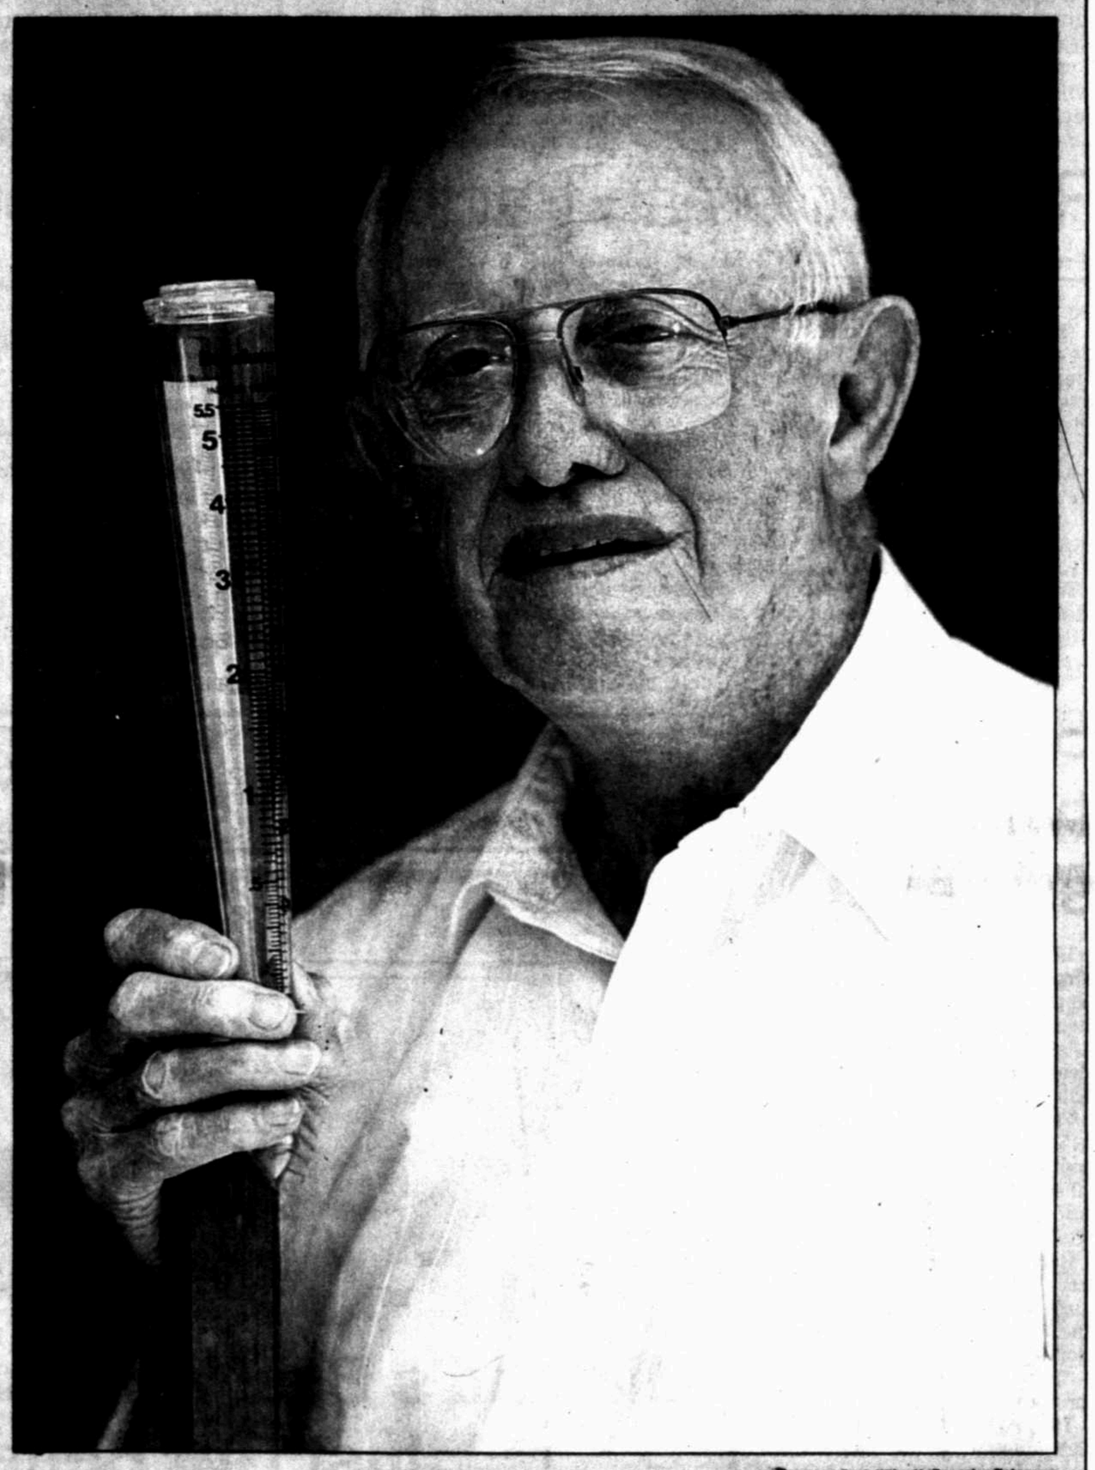

"It rains a lot more in town, generally," he said. "It always has since I started doing this."

Coleman's records, which chart rainfall in his back yard at 715 Sinclair Ave. for the past 33 years, are kept in the same steno pad notebook he bought in 1959 for 15 cents.

"I guess the price of this notebook alone is a pretty interesting fact," he said, while pointing to the price printed across the front cover.

Coleman seemed rather humble about his hobby, but admitted his friends at church often ask him about the previous

New law allows pay garnishment on student loans

Staff report

The loan corporation is granting a 60-day amnesty program for student loan borrowers.

Students who have defaulted on loans have 60 days to pay up before a new federal law goes into effect which will allow their wages to be garnisheed.

Defaulters are defined as "borrowers who made no payments for at least six months and the lender has already been reimbursed by the claim. Borrower contact has been attempted at least once a month and collection activity has been ongoing, in some cases, for a number of years."

The new federal law allows the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corporation to contact borrower's employers and deduct wages to satisfy defaulted loans.

The law — which was included as part of the November 1991 Emergency Unemployment Benefit Compensation Act — overrides any Texas law to the contrary.

The loan corporation is granting a 60-day amnesty program for student loan borrowers. Defaulted borrowers who enter into voluntary repayment with TGSLC will not be subjected to wage withholding.

"If you don't want your employer to know you defaulted on a federal student loan and you don't want part of your wages deducted from your paycheck, you need to call us at 1-800-222-6297," said Cathy Flautt, director of public affairs for the corporation. "Adherence to a voluntary repayment agreement will prevent wage withholding action."

The law requires that the withholding be done administratively — which means that no court action is needed. It allows up to 10 percent of a borrower's disposable income to be withheld and applied to the defaulted loan balance.

Borrowers will be notified 30 days in advance of the withholding start date and will have an opportunity for a hearing under certain conditions. The first wage withholding 30-day notices will be sent in July.

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Commission will hold a public meeting in Midland June 24 to receive comments on proposed changes in municipal solid waste landfill regulations in Texas.

The meeting will be from 1-4 p.m. at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission office at Midland International Airport.

The proposed changes involve an increase in standards for Texas law to meet new federal regulations that take effect Oct. 1, 1993.

Year-round school conference set in Odessa

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

ODESSA — West Texas parents who would like more information on year-round schools, may attend a statewide conference on the subject Thursday through Saturday at the Holiday Inn Centre in Odessa.

A host of experts on year-round education are scheduled to speak at the second annual Texas Conference for Year-Round Education.

Conferees will also have the opportunity to visit Ector County School District's Gale Pond/Alamo Year-Round School and Project SAVE Secondary School. Project SAVE features a year-round calendar for ninth graders who are potential drop-out risks.

"Gale Pond is just finishing its first year as a single track year-round school," said Gene Buinger, ECISD superintendent and board member of the Texas Chapter of the National Association for year-Round Education (NAYRE).

"It's been very successful. We have a waiting list of students and teachers. It has had one of the lowest rates of absenteeism in the district for both teachers and students."

Buinger said students at the single track year-long school attend school 30 days, then are off for 10 days.

"There is a potential — several times a season — of having two weeks off at a time," he said. "We also offer intersession programs during the breaks, so a student could actually attend up to 220 days per school year (compared to the average Texas school year of 180 days)."

Some Midland parents have lobbied for a a year-round school pilot project.

Proponents of the year-long school calendar have suggested that a pilot project would be possible with the addition of Barney Greathouse Elementary School, which is slated to open in 1993. With Greathouse, Midland Independent School District will have 23 elementary schools, unbalancing the district's system of grouping schools into clusters for busing.

Ector County Independent School District implemented the Gale Pond/Alamo Year-Round School project last year.

Buinger said enrollment of Texas students in year-round schools is burgeoning.

"The programs started in Texas 1990-'91 with 1,600 students enrolled. During the 1991-'92

ARCO Foundation gives $20,000 to Project Blueprint

Staff report

Through the efforts of ARCO Western District Senior Vice President Ken Thompson, United Way of Midland's Project Blueprint has received a $20,000 grant for 1992 from the ARCO Foundation, local United Way officials announced Monday.

Project Blueprint was initiated in 1988 by the United Way aa a program to recruit, train and place minority volunteer leaders within the United Way system. The first three years were funded by a grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

"Of all the ARCO Foundation grants made in a calender year, only about 10 percent are considered 'bulls-eye' grants," Thompson said. "Project Blueprint is one of those. It hits the ARCO bulls-eye of leadership development, minority involvement and wide-ranging community service."

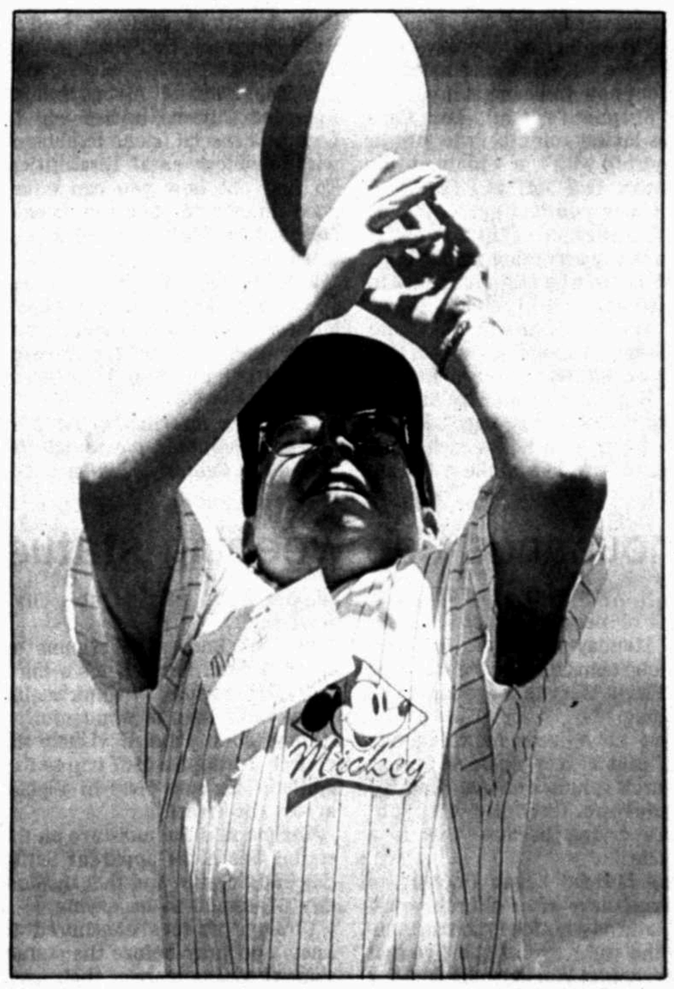

Thompson said he strongly supports continuing funding for the Project Blueprint program for three reasons.

"A key goal of this outstanding program is to develop leadership skills of minorities in the Midland area," he said. "Many of these graduates then serve on decision-making boards, committees and other key volunteer positions. As a result, more United Way funds can be allocated to minority-controlled agencies."

A second reason is that while the ARCO Foundation matches employee gifts to United Way, the separate grant for Project Blueprint would ensure all employee gifts go directly to the agencies in need.

The third reason, he noted, is that ARCO benefits from the program. "Some of our minority employees serving on the Steering Committee and other have graduated from this excellent program. I can attest to their being leaders on the job from the development and training of Project Blueprint."

More than 250 people have graduated from Project Blueprint's 12-hour Board Institute and many are placed within United Way agencies and other committees. Proceeds from the Alumni Association's second annual Summer Extravaganza, scheduled for June 27, will go to the United Way campaign.

Thousands see weeping statue

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Thousands of people endured blazing heat Monday waiting in line at a Catholic church to view a statue of the Virgin Mary that appears to be weeping.

"I've never seen anything like this," said 50-year-old Jesse Cortez, a church volunteer at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church. "She's crying because this is a miracle."

The faithful began flocking to the sanctuary after church workers Saturday noticed moisture under the right eye of the five-foot stone statue. Workers checked for a leaky roof as a possible explanation, but found no leak, they said.

The Rev. Tony Ozzimo, assistant pastor at Our Lady of Guadalupe, declined to classify the event a miracle, but said it is special for the church and its community, an impoverished part of the city's west side.

"I don't know what's going on there. I don't know if it's a miracle," Ozzimo said. "I think seeing these folks here is wonderful."

Pope John Paul II visited the church during his 1987 trip to San Antonio. He said Mass in a plaza across the street.

Ozzimo said the moisture on the statue was more apparent Saturday and Sunday, and that by Monday it seemed to be drying.

Church visitors continued to kneel and pray before the statue, some shedding tears of their own.

Elodia Villarreal, 59, said her eyesight is not good and she could not see the statue's tears.

"I felt sadness because she was crying. But I couldn't see. I felt it," Ms. Villarreal said.

LOAN: New law allows garnisheeing wages

(From 1B)

"Our interest is in getting borrowers into repayment," Ms. Flautt said. "We encourage borrowers to call us. We will work with them on establishing repayment. We understand that many of our borrowers are in difficult financial situations and we want to work with them to avoid more credit problems."

Another incentive for borrowers is to enter into voluntary repayment with the Loan Rehabilitation Program. It allows certain defaulted borrowers who have made 12 consecutive monthly payments to restore their credit and renew their eligibility for student financial aid.

Ms. Flautt noted that corporate officials are aggressively pursuing repayment of loans and that even lottery winners will find their winnings going to the TGSLC if they have defaulted on a loan.

The TGSLC is subsidized by the federal government. TGSLC is a nonprofit public corporation which administers the federal program for the state of Texas. It lends low-interest loans to students attending private and public colleges, and trade and technical schools.

Other collection procedures the TGSLC uses include:

■ Court judgments.

■ Intercepting Internal Revenue Service refunds.

■ Automated telephone collection systems.

■ Attorney contacts with borrowers.

■ Reporting of credit information to major credit bureaus.

■ Notifying licensing agencies of defaulters for possible non-renewal of professional licenses.

■ Lottery winnings.

SCHOOL: Conference explores year-round classes

school year more than 25,000 students participated in a year-round program in the state of Texas," he said. "Next year we are expecting to exceed an enrollment of 40,000, especially with El Paso and several of the larger school districts in the Rio Grande Valley area getting involved."

He said one of the benefits of a year-round schedule is that students are only gone two weeks at a time. In a typical school schedule, students "spend the first six weeks of school reviewing, especially now with the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test."

"In my estimation, that is not good education. Learning TAAS skills should be a result of the natural education process," Buinger said.

He said ECISD is considering a multi-track year-round schedule.

"With the failure of our bond election (which would have funded construction of new buildings to relieve overcrowding) we have little choice," Buinger said.

Despite layoffs and company downsizing in both Midland and Ector counties, the superintendent said enrollment is continuing to increase.

"Other than one year in the 1980s when enrollment slightly dipped, it has been going up at a slight increase. With multi-tracks, when one group of students leave, another comes in. It uses facilities to the optimum," he said.

Buinger said national experts and Texas practitioners of Year-Round Education (YRE) will speak beginning 8:30 a.m. Friday at the Holiday Inn Centre.

The Thursday conference schedule features on-site visits to ECSID schools with year-round programs, a general session and dinner at Dos Amigos Restaurant catered by the Chuck Wagon Gang.

Friday speakers will include Charles Ballinger of San Diego, executive director of the NAYRE; R.S. "Skip" Archibald III, national president of NAYRE form Ocala, Fla.; Thomas Balakas, principal of Cherry Creek School District in Aurora, Colo.; David Haney, a school administrator from Fillmore, Calif.; and Norman Brekke, superintendent of Oxnard School District in Oxnard, Calif.

Friday conference sessions will begin at 8:30 a.m. and convene at 5 p.m.

Conference sessions — which have been approved by the Texas Education Agency — will include "The Grief Process and Moving to YRE," "Texas Surveys and Evaluations," "Does it Cost More," "Concerns and Benefits," "From Berry Picking to Musicals,' "The Conroe Example," "Intersession Program Ideas," "Review on Student Achievement," "Saint or Sinner: The Principal Who Promotes YRE," and "YRE Concerns for Superintendents and Board Members."

The Saturday conference schedule will feature a panel discussion, a final general session and a practitcioners' showcase. It will convene at noon Saturday.

Cost of the three-day seminar — which is open to the public — is $90. Persons may register at the Holiday Inn Centre 8 a.m. Friday.

AAT credits may be earned for attending.

RAIN: Coleman tracks weather for 33 years

day's rainfall.

"I guess some might think it's a bit of an unusual hobby. But this keeps me energized, especially now that I'm retired," he said. "Besides, it can be pretty interesting at times too."

At the Coleman house, 1991 was the wettest year since 1959. A total of 37.20 inches fell — nearly 14 inches more than the National Weather Service statistics.

This year, Coleman has recorded 18 inches, again exceeding the official count of 15.64 inches at the airport.

"We could set a new record if this keeps up the way it has been going. But there's still a lot of time," he said.

The driest year, according to Coleman, occurred in 1964 when a paltry 9.75 inches dropped on Sinclair Avenue.

"There are all sorts of interesting tidbits. For example, in 1974 and 1975, I recorded the exact same amount of rain — 27.50 inches. I don't tally up the year's totals until the last day, so I couldn't have cheated on that," he said.

Coleman said his wife, Marie, "always asks me about the rain. She's interested in what I do, but she leaves it up to me."

Coleman continued his other favorite diversion, bowling, until about a year ago.

"I loved to bowl but I hurt my arm," he said. "I had it checked out and the doctor told me I tore a rotator cuff. He said he had never heard of a bowler tearing a rotator cuff. Usually that's an injury pitchers get a lot."

Coleman and his wife of 54 years still take trips to the mountains of Colorado, Wyoming and Utah, but he lists an all-expenses paid trip they took to Europe in the early '80s as his favorite vacation.

"We have no children of our own. But we consider this Hungarian couple to be like our children," he said. "They paid for the trip and we all went over together."

The Colemans sponsored the couple and brought them to the United States after their escape from Hungary during one of many uprisings taking place in the country during the late 1950s.

"We put out some expense at the time but we have been paid back several times. They are living in Oklahoma now and he is a tool-and-die maker worth a couple million," he said.

Coleman was raised on a farm in Corsicana. He and his wife settled in Midland after he returned from a 20-month stint in the Aleutian Islands during World War II.

Separated twin has surgery

HOUSTON (AP) — A twin girl surgically separated from her sister last week underwent surgery Monday for an obstructed bowel — a complication the other child already has suffered, hospital officials said.

The girl's surgery began about 3:15 p.m. and took nearly two hours, said Texas Children's Hospital spokeswoman Tina Foster. The twin, Tiesha, was in fair condition after the operation.

Her sister, Iesha, suffered an obstructed bowel and underwent surgery Saturday, Ms. Foster said. She remained in fair condition Monday.

"The surgery went pretty well for both of them," Ms. Foster said.

The two 13-month-old Texas girls, joined at the chest since birth, were separated last Tuesday in an eight-hour series of surgeries involving at least a dozen physicians.

Tiesha and Iesha, whose last name and hometown have not been released at their parents' request, were joined from the chest to the naval, with connective tissue between their hearts, a fused liver and a shared bellybutton.

Susannah Griffin, another hospital spokeswoman, said bowel obstructions are not uncommon in children who have undergone abdominal surgery.

"The separation did involve their abdomens," she said. "Bowel obstruction is a complication that is common in children who have had abdominal surgery."

The girls are the first joined twins, often called Siamese twins, who have been successfully separated at Texas Children's since 1970. They are one of 11 sets of such twins seen at the hospital since 1964.

Since the separation surgery, the two have remained on ventilators to help them breathe, Ms. Griffin said.

"They have had periods of wakefulness, and they are responding to the voices of family members," she said.

A polypropylene mesh material was inserted in the chest cavity of each girl to help substitute for missing breast bones. The material will solidify over the next few weeks, becoming more rigid like cartilage, and allow the girls' own tissue to grow around it, doctors have said.

The rigid mass will allow the girls sufficient room to inflate their lungs. For now, their chests remain somewhat tight, requiring the help of the ventilators.

Critics threaten end to collider spending

WASHINGTON — In a stroke of unfortunate timing for supporters of the Superconducting Super Collider, the $8.25 billion federal atom smasher comes up for a pivotal House vote Wednesday at a time when Congress is no mood for big spending.

Members of the Texas congressional delegation and collider lobbyists Monday were trying to stem a precipitous drop in support for the project in advance of the vote.

Longtime critics of the project, under construction near Waxahachie, plan to offer an amendment to kill funding for the collider when the House votes Wednesday on the energy and water appropriations bill for fiscal 1993.

Collider advocates have turned back similar attempts in the past by comfortable margins, including one last year when the House rejected a measure to delete the collider from the appropriations bill, 165-251.

But this year the measure comes up amid intense pressure on legislators to find solutions to the budget deficit and it comes close on the heels of last week's vote on a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

Though the constitutional amendment for a balanced budget failed to win the required two-thirds majority, it won wide support among legislators, many of whom now feel pressure to fulfill their promise of making "hard choices" to reduce federal spending.

The energy and water appropriations bill, known on Capitol Hill as the most notorious source of pork-barrel spending, has become a major target for legislators hoping to show they can get tough on spending.

"The tentative (vote) totals show we've lost support from last year and that it's going to be close," said Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, a member of the House Appropriations Committee.

State must lead gas reductions, 2 groups claim

AUSTIN — Because of a lack of leadership from the Bush administration, Texas should take the lead in reducing carbon dioxide emissions in this country, two organizations said Monday.

Texas leads the nation in such emissions because of its many oil refineries, said Tim Curtis, executive director of Texas Citizen Action, a public citizens watchdog group.

Curtis said if Texas were an independent nation, it would rank seventh in the world in carbon dioxide pollution, behind the United States, the former Soviet Union, China, Japan, Germany and India.

In 1989, the latest year world statistics are available, Texas produced 586 million metric tons of carbon dioxide. The United States produced more than 4.8 billion. A metric ton is 2,100 pounds.

Carbon dioxide is the gas often linked with a suspected global warming trend.

Texas is a leader in producing the gas because it "refines the nation's fuel" from domestic and imported oil, said Michael Osborne, president of the Texas Renewable Energy Industries Association.

Osborne suggested Texas residents should receive some form of compensation in a national energy plan because they absorb the health and human costs of refinery pollution.

Curtis and Osborne, speaking at a news conference, said if Texas were to take a leading role in such areas as solar- and wind-powered energy production, it could continue to be a major player in the energy industry into the 21st century, as it has been in the past with its oil and coal.

The Texas Citizen Action report also supported light rail lines and high-speed trains linking major populatin centers, and suggested vehicle registration fees with discounts for fuel-efficient cars and penalities for inefficient vehicles.

Their remarks came after other nations accused President Bush of sabotaging the Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro by insisting that an international global warming treaty contain no specific amounts or deadlines for reducing carbon dioxide emissions.

Osborne and Curtis called on Gov. Ann Richards, the Texas Railroad Commission and the Public Utility Commission to create a state energy plan with an emphasis on energy conservation and the use of renewable energy sources and natural gas.

Beer-drinking goat returns to Lajitas

LAJITAS (AP) — A beer-guzzling goat that died of old age will return to the town where he served as its only mayor.

Clay Henry, whose chug-a-lugging carried him onto the pages of various national magazines and newspapers, will be stuffed and returned to the Lajitas Trading Post.

For years Clay Henry delighted tourists and locals alike by holding a beer bottle in his mouth, throwing back his head and guzzling a cold one or two or three. Those who stopped in the Mexican-style trading post were obligated to buy themselves a beer or a soda and one for Clay Henry.

Clay Henry died of old age on April 16. He was 22 years old and serving as mayor of this far West Texas town on the Rio Grande when he died.

His kid, Clay Henry Jr., has taken on his namesake's affinity for beer, trading post owner and goat shepherd Bill Ivey told the Big Bend Sentinel.

The Museum Shop moves headquarters within Antiques Etc.

The Museum Shop, now known as Bryan & Co., just recently moved its quarters to Antiques Etc. Among the lovely multi-ethnic items they're presenting is furniture made from 19th century African railroad ties. These ties are of unusual woods — like panga panga and yellow jaira — and now not at all recognizable as having been connected with trains. They've evolved into beautifully crafted, gleaming pieces of exquisite wood furniture.

Besides furniture, there are all kinds of superbly crafted items — toys, collectibles, candlesticks, sculpture and more — all fascinating, unique treasures from the far reaches of the earth.

And, coming soon to Antiques Etc., is a new shop — Long Time Comin'. It will feature Southwest flavor primitive furniture and decorating accessories.

Of course, hundreds of Midlanders have long known that Antiques Etc. is more than just another place to shop. It's an experience in beauty, craftsmanship, glitter and gleam. It's also an experience in a vast selection of exquisite gift and household items and beautiful furnishings — where 35 separate purveyors of unique merchandise make their business home.

For unusual gifts, collectibles, gracious antique and fascinating vintage furniture, lovely jewelry and so much more — there's only one shopping address in Midland — 15 Plaza Center (at the corner of Garfield and Wadley).

Just strolling through Antiques Etc. is a marvelous experience. The huge building is divided into a large variety of nooks, crannies, small rooms, large rooms, corners and showcases.

You'll discover that it's even more fun than grandma's attic as you make your way through the great displays. You'll immediately know that you'll find exactly what you're looking for — even if you're not yet sure what that special something is.

"Because we have 35 separate merchants, we also have 35 diverse views on what should be presented for sale. Unlike many other stores, we're not limited to the taste and fancy of one buyer or one set of buyers," said Antiques Etc. manager Dan Haller. "Also, because we're all under one roof, we can keep our costs down and thereby offer our customers reasonable prices."

Among the variety of wonderful objects that can be found at Antiques Etc. are:

- Victorian furniture.
- Collectible jewelry.
- Fine china and crystal.
- The San Martin line of furniture (built right here in Midland) that features finely crafted wood chairs, tables, loveseats and so on.
- Yankee Candles in a wide variety of colors and scents.
- Designer perfumes.
- American country furniture.
- Depression glass.
- Collectibles from the '50s and '60s.
- Vintage toys and dolls (including especially sought-after Barbies.)

New restaurant Dos Compadres dishes out excellent cuisine

Experience, creativity and a "magic touch" spells excellent cuisine. So say Octavio and Zoila Granado, proud owners of Midland's fine new Mexican restaurant — Dos Compadres.

"Our cook, Rudy Rodriguez, has over 15 years of experience. Not only that, he also has a special touch with food. Not a day goes by that he doesn't get compliments from customers," Octavio said.

"I use the same ingredients as everyone else," Rodriguez said. "I just have my own way of putting them together." It is, indeed a special touch.

"We've been told by a number of customers that we serve the best fajitas in town," Octavio said.

Rudy's secret? He smiled and said, "I marinate them in lemon juice, fresh bell peppers, onions and . . . other things."

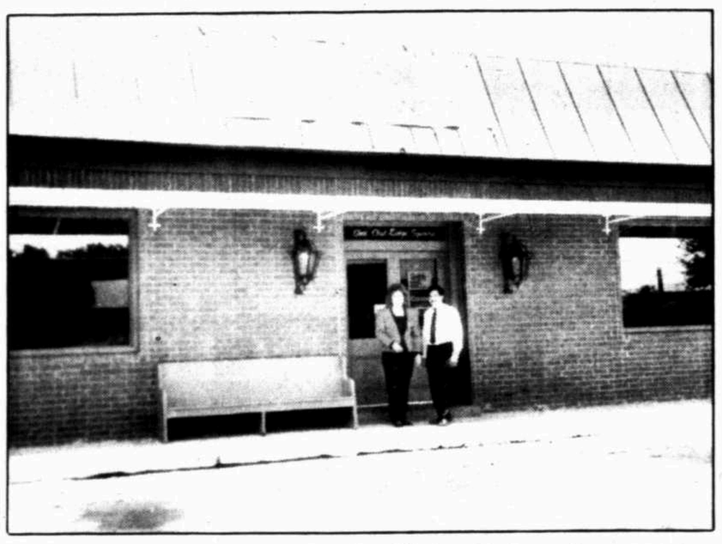

Another reason Dos Compares' fare receives so much praise is the absolute freshness of the food.

"Some restaurants cook do a whole week's worth of cooking in one day," Rudy said. "I just cook enough for one day."

He also buys fresh tomatoes, peppers, jalapenos and just about everything else imaginable every single day.

The philosophy applies to the succulent steaks Dos Compadres serves, too. (There's the 14-ounce KC strip and 10-ounce T-bone, not to speak of the Steak ranchero, to choose from). Beef is purchased daily and cooked to exact order.

"We're also especially proud of our Asado," Zoila said. "We think it's the best in the Permian Basin — a lot of our customers think so, too."

Zoila and Octavio Granado stand in front of newly opened Dos Compadres, an excellent Mexican restaurant located on Wadley near Garfield.

Other menu offerings include tacos, enchiladas, tamales, alambres (Mexican shish kabob), chicken fried steak, burritos, carne guisada, beef and chicken flautas and an exquisite catfish fillet. Also Chile rellenos, gorditas, nachos and a number of combination plates.

Children's plates and combination plates are also available.

The Granados have over 16 years combined experience in the restaurant business. Combined with Rudy's that adds up to 30 years of know-how. No wonder their customers are so impressed.

After just over a month of being open, Dos Compadres is doing a good business with regular clientele. The next thing the Granados plan to add is entertainment."

"Nothing loud or distracting," Octavio said. "We're looking into having a guitarist."

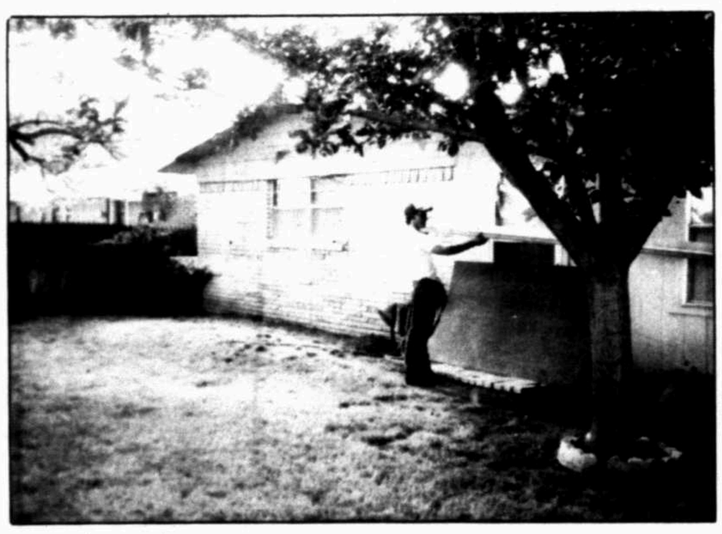

Dos Compadres serves wine and beer. For a great treat, order their very special wine Margarita.

Also, for those needing banquet facilities, Dos Compadres can accommodate up to 60 people in their banquet area. Diners can choose from the menu or a special buffet can be arranged. For banquet information call 684-7239.

The restaurant is located at 1 Oak Ridge Square, 3300 N. Garfield in Midland. Hours are 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 5 to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday. On Saturday they're open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. On Sundays drop in from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Reservations are accepted. Call 684-7239.

Lewellen builds, installs rain-defying seamless guttering on site

Lewellen Construction installer Franz Loewen prepares to install seamless guttering on a Wilshire Blvd. home. The guttering was custom-built on site.

With the recent heavy rains wreaking havoc on houses' exterior walls, windows and surrounding flower beds, many Midland home owners have called upon Lewellen Construction to build and install seamless guttering.

"We build it right on the job site to custom lengths," said Lewellen Construction owner Bill Lewellen. "The guttering is completely seamless from corner to corner — which, of course, eliminates leaking joints."

The guttering can be ordered in a large variety of colors to match or complement the home's exterior.

The benefits of guttering are obvious. It protects flower beds from too much rain and subsequent damage to plants. It protects the home itself from discoloration and deterioration.

Of course, Lewellen Construction does much more than install seamless guttering. Bill Lewellen has 16 years experience in in the siding, storm window installation and window replacement business. For the past 10 years, he has worked exclusively in the Midland-Odessa area.

Literally hundreds of area residents have turned to Lewellen Construction for these services.

One of the reasons area home owners depend on Lewellen Construction is the installation warranty that the company offers. The siding installed by Lewellen not only carries a lifetime warranty, but an installation warranty that lasts as long as the purchaser owns the home.

"Steel siding comes with a lifetime warranty," Lewellen said. "If it's properly installed, there's no reason why it shouldn't last that long.

Here's what some area resident have had to say about Lewellen Construction's work:

"The workmen did a beautiful job and and we are very pleased (beyond words)." — Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Smith.

"Keep up the good work." — Mrs. A.D. Barry

"Thanks for a good job. I am very proud of the work done." — Pinky Jones.

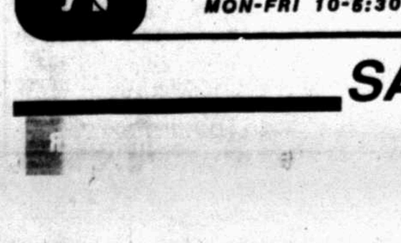

"He did an excellent job at a very reasonable price. I'm very happy with it — the craftsmanship, Bill himself — I'm happy all the way." — P.D. Peterson.

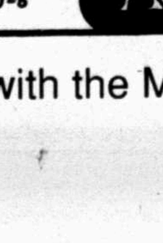

A resident of the Ridge Heights subdivision recently said she knew she was going to use Lewellen Construction from the start because they have done a lot of work in her neighborhood and she was impressed by the quality.

An Old Midland customer said that everything on his home was done exactly as planned and completed on time. He also said that he tried to get other estimates but that Lewellen Construction completed the job before anyone else even responded.

"Lewellen Construction has the same products available as the nation's largest retailers, only at lower prices and with better service because we are local," Lewellen said. "The large discounts you may see advertised don't even come close to our seasonal discounts. Furthermore, it's not necessary to call us on an '800' number. We're your neighbor."

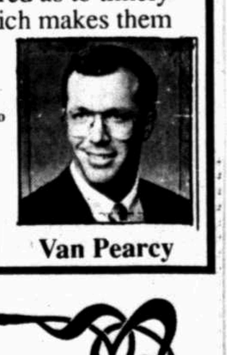

For a free estimate on siding, replacement and storm windows, guttering and/or carport installation call Lewellen at 686-8007 or 563-4250. Lewellen Construction is located at 410 east County Road 130 — just four miles south of downtown.

It Figures announces great new location, boutique expansion

It Figures owner Laura K. Morgan poses in the expanded boutique area of It Figures. Lots of great new clothing is arriving daily.

Summer may be here already, but you can still get into shape before your vacation — tone and tan at It Figures. Let them help you get into your favorite outfit — the one that may be a "little" too snug.

Exercise in comfort, with no sweat or muss — it works!

If Figures, now in business for four years, has helped many Midlanders lose unwanted inches and get into shape and/or maintain it.

A friendly, relaxed atmosphere makes exercising a pleasure instead of a chore. If you want to maintain or lose weight, exercise a minimum of three times a week. Most people see results by the third week. The average inch loss is ½ to 1 inch per session over a four-week period.

Now at their new location in Tierra del Sol (next to Mr. Gatti's) — It Figures is having their "New Kid on the Block" sale.

Toning specials are 12 sessions for $32.72, or, one month of unlimited toning for $43.10.

There are no contracts or membership fees. Toning demonstrations are free.

Unlimited one-month tanning is $40, three months for $100.

When you visit It Figures, be sure to leave yourself plenty of time to browse through the expanded boutique. Quarterly trips to the Dallas Apparel Market furnish customers with the latest styles in fun and recreational clothing.

It Figures has "the" outfit for that vacation, party and picnic. Also look at styles suitable for work. The boutique has something for everybody in junior, missy and plus sizes.

There's also a selection of accessories to give your new outfit that finished look.

At It Figures you can one-stop shape-up and shop.

It Figures opens at 7 a.m. weekdays for those early birds and stays open to 7:30 p.m. You can shop on your way to work. Laura, Billee and Maedell will be there to assist you in toning, tanning and clothes buying.

Get in shape the easy way, no stress, no sweat, no gravity pull on the joints.

You don't suffer through high-impact aerobics that might wreak havoc on your joints, you don't sign intimidating contracts or pay an extra membership fee. All you do is lose inches the easy way with passive resistance exercise on seven different fitness machines. Workouts last just under an hour and you should not feel fatigued or sore after a session.

On the program, your center of gravity is spread out as you lie down. The machine does the work for you. There is a table for slenderizing and toning legs, a sit-up table for toning the abdomen and hips, a stomach and hip-toning table, a circulating overall body massage table and several others to tone, firm and refresh.

It Figures works hard to make things convenient for its clients. Senior citizens receive a 15 percent discount (not applicable to specials). Husbands and wives also receive a discount when they sign up together (not applicable to specials), and toning customers receive a discount on tanning sessions.

Stop by and let It Figures show you how to exercise the easy way — it works!

It Figures is located at 3205 W. Cuthbert in Midland. Call 697-5996 for more information.

Digitally programmable hearing aids now at Audio Acoustics

Digitally programmable hearing aids are the newest development in hearing aids. After three to five years of research, they are now available to the public.

Audio Acoustics is very excited about the new digitally programmable hearing aid because it allows audiologists help patients adjust hearing aids much more accurately than ever before.

There are two different ways of looking at the benefits of this new model. One is that the hearing aid is vastly more adjustable than any of the other models on the market.

Because adjustments are made with the computer, there are many more settings. In the past, hearing aids had only four or five settings.

The second benefit of the digitally programmable hearing aid is that it can be reprogrammed many times if there is additional hearing loss.

In most cases people will not have to replace everything, whereas in the past patients had to buy new hearing aids when their hearing changed even minimally.

The digitally programmable hearing aid is built to fit people of all ages. It can be used in moderate to severe cases, but not by someone with a profound hearing loss.

Siemens Hearing Instruments, Inc. is the oldest hearing aid manufacturer in the world. They have been in the market for over 80 years. Their new product, the Infiniti Programmable System is more flexible than other computer programmable hearing instruments. This system allows Audio Acoustics to utilize either an in-the-ear or in-the-canal hearing aid which was previously unavailable.

The Infiniti System's advanced technology is exclusive to Siemens and are the only canal instruments available with four programmable options. One is a patented control circuit that will significantly reduce feedback when properly adjusted. The internal components of Infiniti instruments are centered around a special "fixed-position hybrid" circuit. As a result, you receive extremely reliable instruments in which quality is inherent in the design.

The Infiniti System places the controls for adjusting your hearing instruments at the fingertips of your personal audiologist.

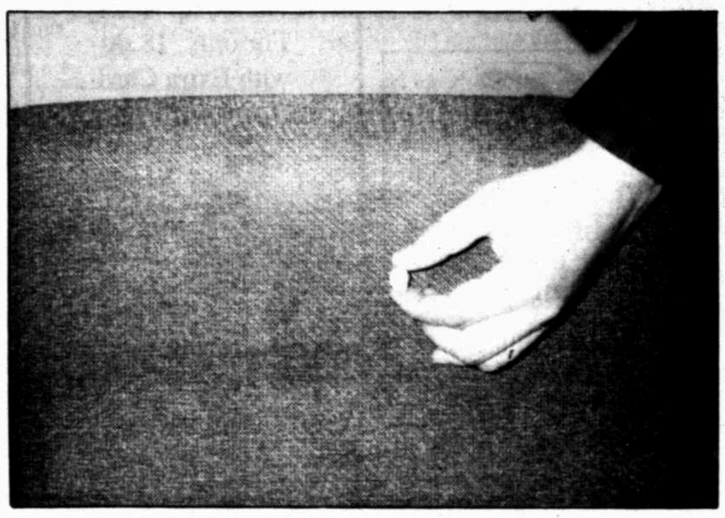

This state-of-the-art technology allows you to:

- Participate in the fitting process by immediately experiencing changes made to your instrument (similar to the visual comparisons made on an eye examination).
- Select the best possible settings.
- Take advantage of this convenience when you are first fitted with your instrument and when you go back for check-ups.

By taking advantage of this technology you and your audiologist can begin to experience the precision and convenience that today's most advanced hearing instruments have to offer. You will enjoy:

- Clear precise sound quality for more hearing comfort
- Small, discreet instruments designed with today's latest technology
- Personalized, versatile, convenient service.

For more information call 689-HEAR. Audio Acoustics is located at 2101 N. Midland Dr., #4. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The Infiniti's System's sophisticated components are placed inside small, attractively contoured in-the-canal and in-the-ear instruments that are custom- made to fit only your ears.

New foods will look better, taste worse

By Erma Bombeck

It's going to be weird seeing 3-year-old tomatoes with fewer wrinkles, more firmness and fewer brown spots than I, but I'd better get used to it.

Bombeck

Genetic agriculture is here. By 1993, look for "termitomato" — the fruit that has the juiciness of a Kitty Kelley bio ... the flavor of a Walton picnic ... and the longevity of Dick Clark. Thanks to the efforts of scientists, women will no longer buy fruits and vegetables that deteriorate before they can get them home. They will also be buying food that is more nutritious and resistant to insects and drought.

If all of this sounds too good to be true, it is. My family has always accused me of having an Agatha Christie kitchen, one that is full of unsolved mysteries and intrigue. (And that's just the leftovers.) But when biotechnology gets through with us, we won't know what we're eating unless it wears a name tag.

Potatoes will have chicken genes added to increase disease resistance. Tofu will contain a cattle gene so it will taste like beef. Tomatoes will have flounder genes added to reduce freeze damage.

Fooling around with genetics always presents more problems than it solves. With food that won't spoil or discolor, how are housewives supposed to know when to throw leftovers away?

How does this scenario grab you? Your husband stands staring into a refrigerator that is bulging with little dabs of food.

"How old is this tossed salad?"

"Twenty years, give or take a few months."

"Isn't it time we pitched it?"

"Someone might eat it. Let's give it another five years."

"How will we know when it dies?"

"I'm not sure."

The test I'm really intrigued with is the low-cholesterol pig that will have more muscle, less fat and will grow faster. When asked how this is brought about, Richard D. Godown, president of the Washington-based Industrial Biotechnology Association, joked, "They don't feed it sweets and they don't let it go to the movies."

I covered a story once about a group of pigs who lost body fat by jogging. Scientists lined them up on a track and they ran their little fat legs off, racing around it. The only way they could get them to run, however, was to feed them Fig Newtons at the finish line, which sort of defeated the purpose.

No one is talking — but what do you want to bet, a low-cholesterol pig will taste like oat bran.

SWC stands 3-2

DALLAS (AP) — All-star teams comprised of Southwest Conference men's and women's basketball players are coming out about even against Australia's best in a tour of the land Down Under.

The men's team, which has a 2-1 record halfway through the tour, suffered a 93-88 loss Monday to the Australian Olympic team.

The women's team (1-1), which had its tour-opening game with Illawara cancelled, defeated the Sydney Comets 91-89 Sunday on a buzzer-beating layup by Texas Tech's Krista Kirkland.

The women all-stars were defeated 100-86 Monday by the Australian Olympic Development team.

Seedy seeds

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The All-England Club kept to the world rankings Monday, installing Jim Courier and Monica Seles as the top seeds for the Wimbledon tennis championships beginning next week.

But tournament officials deviated from the rankings to avoid having the last three Wimbledon men's champions in the same half of the draw.

Although Courier is not considered a grass-court expert, Wimbledon officials could not overlook his dominance on the men's tour. He won the French Open a week ago, taking him halfway to a Grand Slam following his victory in the Australian Open in January.

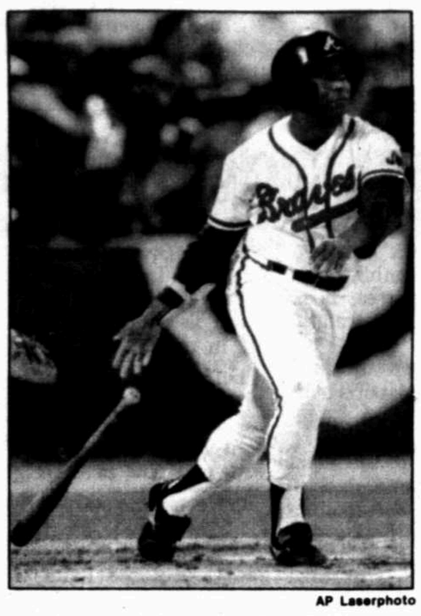

Stefan Edberg, a two-time Wimbledon champion who is ranked No. 2 in the world, was seeded second.

But Pete Sampras, ranked No. 3, was bumped to No. 5 in the seedings while defending champion Michael Stich and three-time champion Boris Becker each moved up one spot to Nos. 3 and 4.

Atlanta's Terry Pendelton ...the look of a homerun

■ Long home runs have become the vogue as of late where measuring tapes, not fences, tell the story.

By Jim Donaghy
AP Baseball Writer

There must be something in the air. All of a sudden a lot of really long home runs are being hit from coast to coast.

Last week, Candy Maldonado became only the fifth player to hit a homer into the center-field bleachers at the renovated Yankee Stadium.

Deer hit two more homers on Saturday, both well over 400 feet.

Only a few players really know how it feels to hit a baseball into uncharted territories like a distant scoreboard or a stadium roof.

Mickey Mantle, Richie Allen, Frank Robinson, Hank Aaron, Willie McCovey, Willie Stargell, Jose Canseco, Darryl Strawberry — they all know.

Deer's shot on the roof is unofficially the longest homer of the 1992 season. Last year, Seattle's Jay Buhner hit a 479-foot homer at Yankee Stadium.

Buhner's homer cleared the visitors' left-field bullpen and landed near an an ambulance in an alley way leading out of the stadium. Some thought it might have been closer to 490 feet.

Canseso knows about monumental shots at Yankee Stadium, too.

On Aug. 30, 1989, he hit a 442-foot homer into Monument Park. Right there with Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Mantle.

When Buhner's ball finally landed, it bounced around the empty space where the beer trucks and ambulances park. It would have been a homer even in the old Yankee Stadium, where the fence in "Death Valley" was 457 feet away from home plate — 58 feet longer than the present configuration.

In 1990 at Shea Stadium, Strawberry hit a home run right out of the movies.

Leading off the fifth inning against Houston's Xavier Hernandez, Strawberry hit a high, majestic, drive that hit 30 feet up on the scoreboard in right- center field, almost breaking a light bulb. Roy Hobbs couldn't have done it better.

Richie Allen hit long homers everywhere.

In May 1965, he hit a 529-foot home run over the roof at Connie Mack Stadium in Philadelphia off Chicago's Larry Jackson. He also hit a light tower in New York — the same left-field tower a jet almost clipped last year.

"Strawberry has all kinds of power and everytime up he has the ability to hit one of those shots," said Houston manager Art Howe, who saw Strawberry hit one into the upper deck of the Astrodome last season.

Missions halt 12-loss skid

■ San Antonio scores three runs in 10th inning to spark an 11-10 victory over the Midland Angels.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

It was a long time coming, but San Antonio finally returned to the win column with an 11-10 victory Monday night at Angels Stadium.

The Missions ended their losing steak at an even dozen games and did it at the expense of a Midland Angels team that settled for the loss only grudgingly.

The Angels played comeback baseball in each of the last two innings, tying the game at 8-8 on J.R. Phillips two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth, and scoring twice more in the bottom of the 10th before falling a single run shy of knotting the score again.

But the Angels could not keep pace with the Missions, who grabbed an 11-8 advantage with three runs in the top half of the 10th inning.

"It's a good win," said San Antonio third baseman Mike Busch, who was the last of nine Missions to hit safely in the game, but used the ninth inning single to push across what was then the go-ahead run.

"It was tough tonight. They battled and we battled back. It's a confidence thing. The guys were down on some confidence, but the main thing is we one this one," Busch said.

Only barely.

San Antonio scored three unearned runs off Marvin Cobb in the top of the 10th when Tony Barron's ground ball went through shortstop Rod Correia, allowing two runs to score. John Deutsch was next, and he doubled Barron home with the 11th run for the Missions.

However, Dan Rumsey led off the bottom of the ninth with a pinch-hit single and Correia atoned somewhat for his error with a solid single to right field. When Jim Edmonds followed with his fifth hit and fifth RBI of the game — a single to left — San Antonio skipper Jerry Royster lifted his fourth hurler and brought on closer Ray Calhoun.

Calhoun got Bobby Jones to pop back to the mound on an attempted sacrifice bunt for the first out of the inning. Correia scored on Tony Brown's ground ball to second to make it 11-10, but Phillips ended the

Giants up for grabs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The city of San Francisco, home of the Giants since 1958, was told Monday it was just another contender — no more, no less — in what amounts to a nationwide sweepstakes for the baseball team.

Team executives met with Mayor Frank Jordan and other officials and told them the Giants would begin actively listening to relocation offers.

San Francisco can make a pitch but it will be considered on equal footing with any others.

"There is a sense of urgency. We're going to be in the mix but we certainly will not have any No. 1 priority or preference compared to any other city in the United States," Jordan said.

Giants owner Bob Lurie wants a new stadium for the Giants but has seen San Francisco Bay area voters reject four proposals for publicly financed parks during the past five years.

Most recently, voters in San Jose, 50 miles south of San Francisco, turned down a plan to build a $265 million ballpark on June 2. A local tax increase likely would have been needed to help pay for it.

Lurie has said the team won't play at cold, windy Candlestick Park beyond the 1994 expiration of the team's stadium lease. An escape clause could allow the team to leave as early as next season.

The Giants owner is on vacation and did not attend the meeting but Lurie received permission last week from commissioner Fay Vincent to explore all his options, including the possible relocation or sale of the team.

"We're not prejudging any of the choices right now," said Corey Busch, a Giants vice president and director. "Our task is to try to make an analysis of what the alternatives are ... Right now, (Lurie) has no preconceived notions as to what he might do ... Nobody knows what's going to happen."

Bulls still a title away from greatness

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

CHICAGO — Repeating as champions is no longer enough to set an NBA team apart. The Chicago Bulls have the Los Angeles Lakers and Detroit Pistons to thank for that.

Nearly 20 years without a repeat championship made the accomplishment special for the Lakers in 1988 and the Pistons in 1990. Now that the 1992 Bulls have made it three repeaters in a row, they'll have to win it again to be remembered as a great team.

The 1992 playoffs were such a struggle for the Bulls, seven postseason losses compared to two the year before, that they aren't about to start worrying about another season.

"I'm not ready to think about that until October," coach Phil Jackson said after Sunday's Finals-clinching 97-93 victory over Portland. "I anticipate we will get it done at some level next year because we have the same guys coming back."

The average age of the Bulls is 27, and the best players obviously aren't past their prime, so their chances of a repeat certainly have to be considered good.

But the competition in the Eastern Conference clearly was not far behind in the playoffs, and Michael Jordan's and Scottie Pippen's Olympic duties could have long-term effects.

Improvements made by Cleveland and New York could make the difference if the Bulls stand pat in the next few months.

Jackson called last year's 15-2 romp through the playoffs "the honeymoon. This year was an odyssey. It's been a long, strange trip."

One of the strangest occurrences came in Sunday's fourth quarter, when four Chicago reserves were playing so well that Jackson considered letting Jordan stay on the bench awhile longer.

It wasn't until Portland coach Rick Adelman replaced Danny Ainge with Jerome Kersey that Jackson put Jordan back in the game because the coach knew reserve guard Bobby Hansen couldn't guard Kersey.

Michael Jordan was a defensive replacement?

It's hard to believe that the Bulls' much-maligned backups could turn around Game 6 of the NBA Finals so thoroughly that Jackson would hold the amazing Jordan in reserve.

But four bench players and Pippen cut all but 3 points off a 15-point Portland lead in less than four minutes of the fourth quarter.

Stacey King, who played in just 14 of the Bulls' 22 playoff games, led the way with 5 of Chicago's points during the 14-2 spurt that opened the fourth quarter.

"Playing for Phil Jackson is a little like Russian Roulette," King said. "He will come down the bench with that one bullet, point it at you and tell you to go in there. It was a great moment for me."

Jordan, the first player to win both the regular-season and Finals MVP awards in consecutive seasons, scored 12 of his 33 points in the last 6:01, lifting the Bulls to a 4-2 series victory.

"As a coach, you just go play by play," Jackson said of his fourth-quarter strategy. "Everything else I tried hadn't worked. It took a definite drive for us in the fourth quarter."

The Bulls played so poorly in the first half, trailing by 15 before Jordan scored 10 points in a span of 2:29 to help them close within 6 at halftime, that Jackson said "we went around and introduced ourselves at halftime. Then we went out in the second half and started the same way.

"But the fourth quarter was magic."

Cobb dropped to 1-1.

The Angels took a 3-0 lead in the third on back-to-back RBI doubles by Correia and Edmonds. The Missions touched Midland starter Mark Zappelli for three runs in the fifth on fourth straight singles. But Zappelli pitched out of a jam in the sixth, getting a double play for the first two outs, then fanning Bryan Baar on three pitches to end a two-on, none-out threat.

San Antonio took a 6-5 lead with three runs in the seventh, but Kipila launched his 12th home run of the year to lead off the bottom of the seventh and tie the game.

Whalers change coaches again

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Hartford Whalers changed coaches for the third time in three seasons on Monday, putting Paul Holmgren in charge of turning the team into a Stanley Cup contender.

Holmgren, fired six months ago by the Philadelphia Flyers, agreed to a three-year contract and said he can't wait to get started.

"The passion of coaching to me is something I've missed," Holmgren said at a news conference. "I can't wait for training camp."

He'll have a lot of work. The Whalers, who managed to take the Montreal Canadiens to seventh game before losing in the first round of the playoffs, had the third worst regular-season record at 26-41-13.

But general manager Brian Burke said he hopes Holmgren will bring the same "rock-hard style of play" he showed as a player.

Reardon sets major-league save record

Associated Press

AL Roundup

BOSTON — Jeff Reardon set a major-league record with his 342nd career save, combining with John Dopson for a six-hit shutout and a 1-0 win over the New York Yankees on Monday night.

Reardon pitched one inning and passed Hall of Famer Rollie Fingers on the all-time saves list in his 14th year in the majors. St. Louis' Lee Smith, who is two years younger than Reardon, is third with 329 saves.

Reardon picked up his 15th save in 16 chances this season and is perfect in 11 opportunities at Fenway Park. He got Mel Hall to ground out and Roberto Kelly to fly out before Don Mattingly singled. Kevin Maas struck out to end the game.

Royals 7, Twins 0

MINNEAPOLIS — George Brett, starting at third base for the first time in more than five years, had three hits and drove in a run to back the shutout pitching of Mike Magnante and two relievers as Kansas City defeated Minnesota.

Brett, a late replacement for the injured Gregg Jefferies, hadn't started at third since May 15, 1987, and had played there only once since. He wasn't tested in the field, but he continued his hot hitting.

Rangers 5, Angels 2

ANAHEIM — Todd Burns pitched a four-hitter for eight innings and Juan Gonzalez hit a three-run homer off run-starved Jim Abbott as Texas beat California.

Orioles 6, Indians 5

CLEVELAND — Randy Milligan's tie-breaking home run in the ninth inning came too late to make teammate Rick Sutcliffe the major leagues' first 10-game winner.

Baltimore moved within a half game of first-place Toronto, which was idle.

Mariners 4, White Sox 1

SEATTLE — Jay Buhner broke a tie with a two-run single in a four-run Seattle sixth inning and Mariners beat Chicago.

Rich DeLucia (2-3) gave the Mariners a strong pitching performance despite entering the game with a 10.38 ERA in seven previous appearances this season.

Avery outduels Hershiser as Dodgers stumble again

NL Roundup

ATLANTA — Steve Avery outdueled Orel Hershiser for a 2-0 victory as the red-hot Atlanta Braves beat the Los Angeles Dodgers' ace Monday night for the first time in five seasons.

Avery (5-5) scattered five hits, walked one and struck out three as the Braves won their fifth in a row and 14th in 16 games. Avery is 7-1 lifetime against the Dodgers, 2-1 this season.

It was Avery's second shutout of the season and second complete game. He won his third straight decision.

Los Angeles has lost five in a row and 10 of 13.

Hershiser (6-4) had won 12 straight decisions in 14 starts against Atlanta dating back to Aug. 8, 1987, when he lost 9-7. He is 19-7 lifetime against the Braves.

Phillies 4, Pirates 1

PITTSBURGH — Terry Mulholland, one of baseball's best starters the last six weeks, stopped Pittsburgh on five hits and Philadelphia halted the Pirates' five-game winning streak.

The Pirates, who took a season-high five-game lead in the NL East into the game, had won six of seven and 10 of 13 and were coming off a 5-1 road trip to Philadelphia and New York.

Pittsburgh played without Barry Bonds, who strained a muscle in his right rib cage on Sunday. Bonds, the NL home run leader, will be reevaluated Wednesday following two days of therapy and a decision whether to place him on the 15-day disabled list will not be made until at least then.

Cubs 7, Cardinals 1

CHICAGO — Greg Maddux pitched a four-hitter and drove in two runs and Hector Villanueva emerged from a slump with a three-run homer and a double as Chicago beat St. Louis.

Chicago won its fifth straight game, its longest winning streak since May 22-26, 1991. St. Louis has dropped 13 of 18 overall and seven of 10 to the Cubs this year.

Maddux (7-6) improved to 3-0 against the Cardinals this season. He walked one and struck out five in pitching his third complete game. Maddux has a 1.89 ERA in his last eight starts, but is just 3-4 in those games.

Expos 4, Mets 1

NEW YORK — Mark Gardner and John Wetteland combined on a three-hitter and Montreal beat New York, the Mets' fifth straight loss.

The Mets lost for the ninth time in 11 games. They are just one-half game ahead of the last-place Expos.

Montreal, which swept the Mets in a three-game series at Shea Stadium earlier in April, is 7-3 against New York this season. Last year, the Expos won only four of 18 from the Mets.

Reds 7, Giants 5

CINCINNATI — Chris Sabo hit a two-run double that highlighted a four-run fifth inning and later was in the middle of a bench-clearing incident as Cincinnati rallied past San Francisco.

The Reds won their fourth straight and their 16th in 20 games by overcoming a 4-1 deficit in the fifth. Sabo's double off Bud Black tied it, and Dave Martinez produced the go-ahead run with a pinch sacrifice fly off Mike Jackson (2-2).

Padres 7, Astros 1

HOUSTON — Former Midland Cub Craig Lefferts, bidding for his first-ever complete game, pitched seven shutout innings before tiring in the eighth.

Lefferts (8-4) gave up seven hits, struck out three and walked two. He left after Eric Anthony doubled and Scott Servais singled with two outs in the eighth.

Lefferts, who started five games for the Chicago Cubs in 1983, was moved out of the bullpen after the Padres acquired Randy Myers in the winter. Lefferts had made 12 previous starts this year.

The Padres battered Butch Henry (1-6) with four runs in the first inning, highlighted by Dan Walters' two-run single.

Henry walked Tony Fernandez to start the game and singles by Tony Gwynn and Gary Sheffield made it 1-0. Fred McGriff walked, Tim Teufel hit an RBI single and Walters singled to right.

Henry walked Gwynn to begin the second inning, Sheffield singled and noth runners scored on McGriff's single.

Jerald Clark doubled, went to second on Lefferts' infield hit and scored on Fernandez's sacrifice fly in the third inning.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: With a little effort, you will pass a series of career tests with flying colors. A financial goal moves within reach by fall. Romance is a source of deep satisfaction and pride in November. Personal decisions prove easier to make in December, after a joyous holiday. Travel is part of the picture early in 1993. Seek wider publicity for a special cause. Promotional opportunities abound.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: boxer Roberto Duran, opera diva Helen Traubel, actress Joan Van Ark, author Joyce Carol Oates.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Patience and understanding are essential when handling a difficult problem. An older relative could be under great stress. Spend the evening trying to find a mutually comfortable solution.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Success comes when you stop trying to force issues. Good timing and hard work will help your cause. Those who are self-employed have a wonderfully productive day. A friendship turns romantic.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Personnel changes at work could be to your advantage. Act quickly to let those in authority know your desire to move up. Regular exercise and good eating habits contribute to your well-being.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not be afraid to track a rumor to its source. Progress is assured if you concentrate on projects already under way. You can count on an older person if an emergency arises.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid making unnecessary mistakes by checking and rechecking your work. Resist taking shortcuts. An expert's advice is worth every penny. Attending a social function is a must tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are on the brink of success! Do not abandon your main objective. You can learn a lot by listening quietly and observing others. Romance begins to pick up speed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be candid with close friends. You need to think twice before making a financial commitment. Consult your mate or partner if you are thinking about tackling home improvements.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Seek an older person's cooperation if working on a budget. Home life will be happier once a compromise is reached. A social gathering lives up to your expectations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An influential person approves of your ideas but wants some of the anticipated proceeds. Get all agreements in writing. Demand a fair price for your work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You hit the jackpot today; step into the limelight. Share your goodies only with the deserving. Communicating directly with influential people will help your career.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): As your financial luck and spirits soar, you attract both good will and favorable publicity. Do not waste one minute of this golden day! Romance accelerates when you speak from the heart.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Heed your intuitive feelings; they will guide you in a beneficial direction today. Private talks with your relatives and friends are a unifying force.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have plenty of drive and refuse to buckle when under pressure. Do not let these eager-beaver youngsters take on too much responsibility too soon. They need to complete one project successfully before tackling the next one. Travel and change revitalize these easily bored Geminis. They prize their freedom more than material possessions and will probably choose to go into business for themselves.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Eight of ♡

Here's another of an interesting collection of hands sent us by Gerald Fox of Napa, Calif. All hinged around hold-up plays. Suppose you are declaring three no trump from the South seat and West leads the eight of hearts. Do you hold up your ace for one round? Two rounds? Not at all?

Three no trump is a simple enough contract to reach. Note North's willingness to push on to game once South showed a a balanced hand with invitational values. Although minimum in terms of high cards, the possesssion of so many intermediates (10s and 9s) gave the North hand "body," increasing its trick-taking potential.

The danger to the contract comes if the hands are distributed as in the diagram. With the spade finesse failing, if you win the first heart, the defenders will reel off four heart tricks and the king of spades before you can come to nine tricks.

Now let's suppose you hold up the ace of hearts for two rounds. Astute defenders will shift to a diamond, and your opponents will come to two hearts, at least two diamonds and the king of spades—still no good.

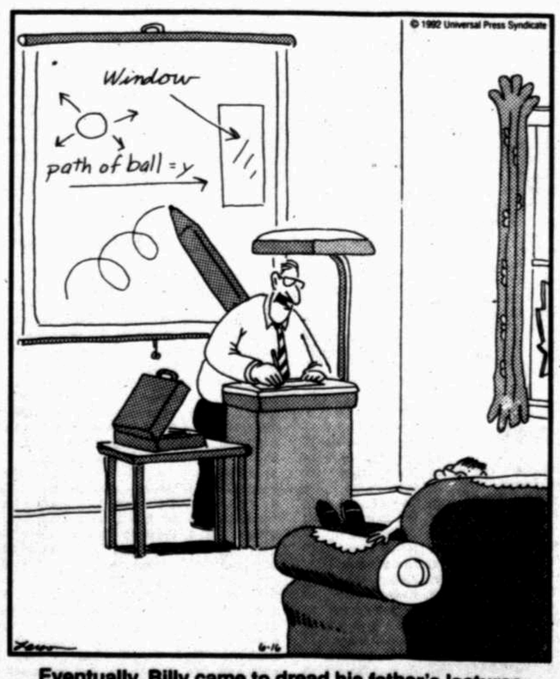

The Rule of Seven (seven less the combined number of cards in the suit led) tells you to hold up just one round. Now when the spade finesse loses, either East will be out of hearts or the suit will split 4-3 and the defenders can get no more than three hearts and a spade.

This is not a sure-trick line. An inspired East might shift to a low diamond at trick two, then cash three tricks in the suit when you take the losing spade finesse. Not likely with A 10 9 of diamonds in dummy, but if the defense is that good, congratulate the opponents and move on to the next hand.

Cuomo says he feels better than ever on 60th birthday

ALBANY, N.Y. — Gov. Mario Cuomo was serenaded on his birthday Monday by a church group, and said turning 60 doesn't make him feel old.

"I think I'm stronger now than I was 15 years ago, to be honest with you," he said. "I work out more now and I feel good, thank God."

Cuomo

Cuomo said staying away from cigarettes and alcohol help him keep healthy, as well as an occasional game of basketball.

Hundreds of members of the Reformed Church of America sang "Happy Birthday" after Cuomo gave a speech to the group. They also gave him a cake.

"I marvel at your compassion," Cuomo said, "not because you delivered me a cake, but because you left out my age."

NEW ORLEANS — Paul Burke, who had leads in the movie "Valley of the Dolls" and the television series "Naked City," said he retired from acting because parts dried up after his 1990 acquittal on racketeering charges.

"Before the trial I was just getting into roles playing older men, and suddenly I get back to California and there's no work," said Burke, 65.

"I can't definitely correlate it to the trial, but I couldn't get a job, so I said the hell with it."

The trial brought Burke back to his native New Orleans on charges that he aided an illegal gambling operation by calling District Attorney Harry Connick, a lifelong friend and father of singer Harry Connick Jr., on behalf of bookie Walton Aucoin.

Aucoin had been arrested, and wanted to have seized gambling records returned to him. Burke, who lives in Palm Springs, Calif., also was acquitted of lying to a grand jury investigating the case.

Burke, the son of New Orleans nightclub owner Marty Burke, appeared on television and in movies from the late 1950s to the early 1970s. His other TV shows included "Twelve O'Clock High" and "Harbor Master."

ST. PAUL, Minn. — State Auditor Mark Dayton is an heir with heart.

He quietly cut his own salary to $1 a year ago to balance the budget in his 120-employee office.

Dayton, heir to a department store fortune, said a $60,000 budget cut would have translated into two layoffs. News of his gesture came in an anonymous letter last week to the Star Tribune of Minneapolis.

"I recognize that I'm uniquely fortunate in being able to do this," Dayton said Monday.

Dayton, 45, spent $6.9 million of his personal fortune on his unsuccessful 1982 race for the U.S. Senate. He was elected auditor in 1990.

LOS ANGELES — A disabled 10-year-old cast aside his canes and walked five steps into the arms of former first lady Nancy Reagan.

"I thought I was going to fall, but it was a short distance," said David Fisher, who has spinal cord problems.

Reagan

The encounter was Sunday at an annual barbecue fund-raiser for Ahead With Horses, a non-profit group that teaches disabled youngsters to ride. Former President Reagan and his wife donated horses to the group.

Riding horses is "one of the greatest producers of health to people who have handicaps. There is something about a horse that does it," Reagan said.

NEW YORK — He did his homework, he passed the test, so today Hugh Downs will step out of his telvision persona to receive a special certificate in geriatric education from the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in Manhattan.

Long fascinated by the processes of aging, Downs, 71, co-host of the ABC News program "20/20," returned to Hunter College here six years ago — "and with tutorials, massive reading and night courses, got a post-master's certificate," he said the other day.

Dr. Robert N. Butler, Brookdale professor of geriatrics and chairman of the department of geriatrics at Mount Sinai, knew of Downs' interest in geriatric medicine.

"So when this continuing medical education course for doctors came up, he suggested that I monitor it and sit in," Downs said.

BROOKLYN PARK, Minn. — Jammin' with Flea was worth a trip to California for Brent Paschke.

Paschke heard the Red Hot Chili Peppers were looking for a replacement for guitarist John Frusciante, who quit last month.

Rather than send an audition tape, Paschke went West on May 28 and contacted the band's management. But he got nowhere fast. So he found an address for bass player Michael Balzary, better known as Flea.

"We sat outside of this house from 8 a.m. until 3 a.m.," Paschke said.

Prices steady

NEW YORK — Petroleum prices were narrowly mixed in slow trading Monday, reflecting a lack of influential outside news.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the price of West Texas Intermediate for July delivery rose 6 cents a barrel to settle at $22.36, after falling 5 cents a barrel on Friday. Prices for delivery in later months rose slightly.

Natural gas for July delivery settled at $1.563 per 1,000 cubic feet, up from $1.535 at the previous close.

Among other grades of crude, lower-quality sour crude for July delivery rose 6 cents a barrel to settle at $20.66 a barrel.

Petroleum traders attributed the slow activity to a lack of news, with little reason for them to buy or sell.

A report of slightly increased May output by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had no impact on oil trading. The account in the Middle East Economic Survey said the 420,000-barrel-a-day rise, to 23.69 million barrels a day, was largely due to increases by Iran, Libya and Nigeria.

SBDC conference

The Small Business Development Center of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin will hold a conference on "Starting Yor Business" from 12:30 to 5 p.m. today at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification.

The program will identify steps and procedures needed to plan, organize, finance and operate a business. It is geared toward those wanting to start their own business, have recently started a business and are lookig for more information or are considering buying an existing business.

T-bills fall

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction to the lowest level in four weeks.

The Treasury Department sold $11.7 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 3.66 percent, down from 3.71 percent last week. Another $11.7 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 3.75 percent, down from 3.83 percent last week.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar finished mixed against major currencies Monday and reached a five-month low against the Swiss franc as dealers grew cautious about the future of European unity.

The dollar was quoted at 1.4150 Swiss francs late in New York, down from late Friday's 1.4265.

Analysts question sluggish recovery

■ Housing data does not bode well for sputtering economy, some say.

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Struggling to make sense out of economic statistics that are mixed at best, credit market participants are questioning whether the sluggish recovery that seems to be developing could falter.

One reason for such doubts is the way the housing industry, an important source of growth in the first quarter, seems to be sputtering.

After surging during an exceptionally balmy winter, housing activity tailed off in March and April, in part because of unseasonably cool weather and in part because of rising mortgage interest rates.

Housing numbers for May, scheduled to be released today, may provide a better picture of just how healthy housing is.

In advance of the report, most analysts are forecasting that housing starts are running at an annual rate of just over 1.1 million units, relatively unchanged from April. A sampling of builders across the country found most to be mildly upbeat. But some questioned if in the current climate low mortgage rates would be enough to fuel demand.

"Housing is a question mark," said Donald J. Fine, chief market analyst at the Chase Manhattan Bank. "If housing starts to flatten out at current levels of around 1.1 million units at an annual rate, the economy can continue to grow, but at an even more sluggish pace than I think. It will be a concern to the Fed."

Despite recent sluggishness, there are some reasons to be optimistic about the housing market.

At around 8.5 percent, rates on 30-year fixed-rate mortgages are higher than they were in January, but nearly half a point below where they were in March. And employment has been rising, albeit glacially, in recent months. Moreover, the abnormally frantic pace of building that went on during January and February tends to exaggerate the recent weakness.

"The last couple of months wouldn't have looked so bad if the first couple of months hadn't looked so good," said Michael Carliner, an economist at the National Association of Home Builders in Washington. "Some of the activity that went on this winter was borrowed from the spring."

Carliner expects housing activity, after stabilizing in the second quarter at an annual rate of around 1.2 million units, to accelerate modestly through the second half of the year, assuming mortgage rates stay at close to current levels and employment and income levels show further improvement.

$1 billion lawsuit hits failed thrift

PHOENIX (AP) — The federal government has filed a $1.2 billion fraud and racketeering lawsuit against a failed thrift, the brothers who ran it and nearly 50 other officers and associates of the business.

The Resolution Trust Corp. filed the action in federal court on Saturday, one day before the three-year statute of limitations for suing Western Savings and Loan Association ran out.

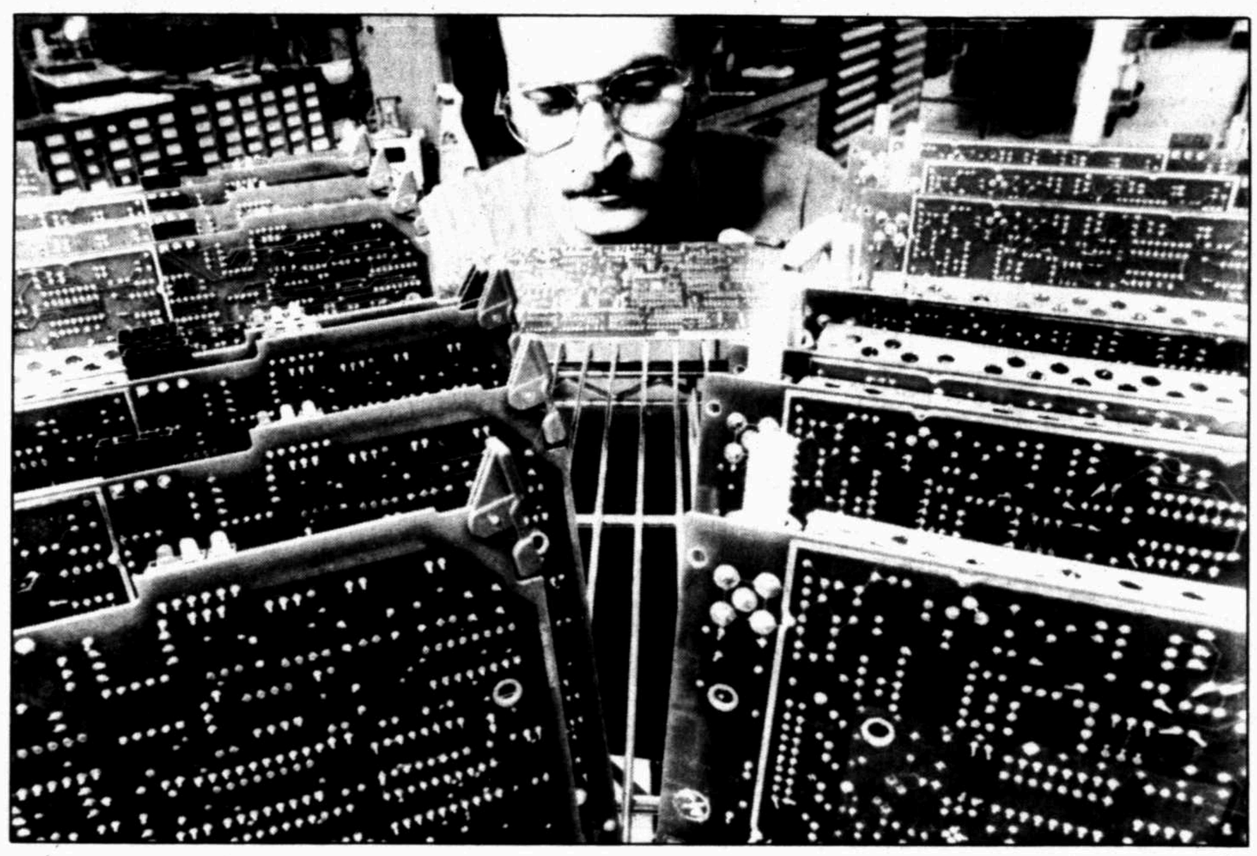

The government seized Western Savings on June 14, 1989, at an estimated $1.7 billion cost to taxpayers.

The lawsuit alleges Western officials arranged sham sales of real estate held by the thrift to create the appearance of profits, hide losses and get around regulations that limit how much real estate an S&L could hold directly.

The lawsuit seeks $200 million in damages and asks that amount be tripled, as allowed under federal racketeering law. It also seeks $200 million for negligence.

The federal agency, responsible for disposing of the assets of failed S&Ls, also seeks $245 million in damages from some past and present partners of a law firm that represented Western.

Defendants include the thrift's president, Gary Driggs, and his brother, John Driggs, the thrift's chairman.

UAW president warns of strike

SAN DIEGO (AP) — United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber threatened the U.S. Big Three automakers Sunday with a strike next year to fight what he says are attempts to break down the union.

"Do not forget it takes two to make peace, but only one to make war," Bieber said in his speech opening the union's 30th Constitutional Convention, which ends Friday. "Be very careful. Do not miscalculate."

Bieber referred to the massive downsizing by General Motors Corp. and its apparent efforts to play one plant off against another to squeeze work rule concessions, a practice known as "whipsawing." The No. 1 automaker is cutting 54,000 hourly jobs and closing 21 plants by 1995.

While GM denies that it played plants against each other, it has said that the willingness of individual plants to consider work-rule changes figured in decisions to determine which operations it should close.

Bieber also made apparent references to Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., whose post-recession sales are recovering faster than GM's.

U.S. risks commercial war, France says

PARIS (NYT) — The French government denounced the United States on Monday in an unusually strong statement, saying Washington had brought trans-Atlantic trade relations close to commercial war.

The statement, released by the Industry and Foreign Trade ministries, said recent American threats to impose prohibitive tariffs on a range of European foods posed "the risk of a dangerous escalation toward a commercial war from which all parties would suffer."

Carla A. Hills, the U.S. trade representative, released a list last week of $2 billion worth of annual food imports from Europe, saying the government intended to impose prohibitive duties on half of them if a prolonged dispute over European Community subsidies for oilseeds was not resolved.

Washington argues that the European oilseed subsidies cut unfairly into American exports of soybeans — a view already supported by two panels of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Among the foods Mrs. Hills mentioned were a range of French specialities including Roquefort cheese, snails and brandy, which could be priced out of the American market by the duties.

Noting that more than half of France's food exports to the United States could be affected by the threatened tariffs, Industry Minister Dominique Strauss-Kahn said in the statement that she deplored the United States' recourse to what she called unilateral threats.

She added that the threats gave "a very negative signal as to the real willingness of the United States to reach a global and balanced accord in GATT negotiations."

French officials have recently been pointedly pessimistic in their assessment of progress in the long-stalled Uruguay Round of GATT talks on global trade arrangements, even though a recently agreed reform of the European Community's agricultural policy appeared to have opened the way for possible compromise.

Such negative views were echoed Monday by Foreign Minister Roland Dumas, who said at a meeting of European Community foreign ministers in Luxembourg that he doubted that the negotiations could be completed by the end of this month.

But at the same time as the tough talk, there were hints that the community was seeking compromises on the linked issues of the dispute over oilseeds and the GATT talks.

Foreign ministers mandated the European Commission, which negotiates on behalf of the community in trade disputes, to seek a negotiated solution.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Treasury Direct' eases bond exchange

By Bill Doyle

Q. The 4.25 percent U.S. Treasury bonds I bought almost 30 years ago will mature on August 15 and I will have to cash these bonds. I would like to reinvest the money in higher-yielding Treasury bonds.

To accomplish that, do I send the expiring bonds to the Federal Reserve Bank serving my part of the country, thereby exchanging my old bonds for new bonds? If so, what is the address of that Fed bank? Or must I go through a broker?

Doyle

A. You can make it a do-it-yourself project by opening a "Treasury Direct" account at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 33 Liberty Street, New York, NY 10045.

The U.S. Treasury Department auctions off new issues of 30-year bonds, in its quarterly financings on the 15th of every February, May, August and November, at which time three-year and 10-year notes are also sold. When the 15th falls on a weekend, the sale is moved to Friday or Monday.

Payment for those bonds and notes may be made by cash, check or Treasury securities maturing on or before the issue date of the new securities.

Boiled down, this means you can use the old Treasury bonds you now own to buy new Treasury bonds or notes. While it's impossible to predict what interest rates the new securities will carry, it is expected all three will pay more than 4.25 percent.

Things have changed over 30 years. Fancy certificates no longer are issued for Treasury securities. Ownership is in "book-entry" form, with ownership recorded on computers. Interest payments go by wire to the bank account you designate.

You will find this more convenient than the old method of taking possession of certificates for Treasury securities in registered form or bearer form or of leaving those securities with a brokerage firm or bank.

Q. After reading in your column about the new "Smart Exchange" program through which investors holding U.S. Treasury bonds and/or notes in certificate form can turn in those certificates so that their securities will be held in a Treasury Direct book-entry, I phoned the Smart Exchange number -- 1-800-366-3244.

I am as adamant about not giving out my Social Security number as I am about giving my credit card number to strangers -- over the phone or across the counter. When I would not give my SS number, the Smart Exchange clerk said she could not send me a kit to make the exchange.

Why? The kit would have reached my address without my SS number.

A: You are so right. When people call in for kits, some Smart Exchange clerks have been asking for SS numbers to begin filling out paperwork forms and expedite the exchange.

However, a spokesman for the Treasury Department's Bureau of the Public Debt says investors are not required to give their SS numbers when they phone in for those kits. He adds the phone clerks will be instructed to stop asking for SS numbers. A kit is on its way to you.

Assuming you do convert Treasury bonds and/or notes to book-entry in a Treasury Direct account, you will then be required to give your SS number, as a "taxpayer identification number," just as you do when you buy any security paying interest or dividends.

The Bureau of the Public Debt spokesman stresses that SS number of investors participating in the Treasury Direct program are kept in strict confidence and never sold to mailing lists, etc. Of course, they are used on the Forms 1099-INT through which the Treasury Department confirms to investors the amount of interest received.

Copies of all 1099s go to the Internal Revenue Service, which is an arm of the Treasury Department.

DEAR ABBY

Doctor's busy schedule leaves room for error

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What a pleasure it was to read your column in which you urge your readers to pay their physicians and dentists. I have been a practicing urologist in Los Angeles for 13 years, and during that time, my office expenses have increased dramatically, but my income has decreased due to severe cuts in reimbursements by Medicare and other third-party payers.

Van Buren

I start my hospital rounds at 6:30 a.m. Then I go to surgery, followed by a busy office schedule and post-operative evening rounds at the hospital. I usually do not get home to my family until 8 p.m. — unless I have a late meeting; then it's even later. This doesn't leave much time for my family.

The other day, a patient whom I was evaluating for prostate cancer was telling me about his son, "the doctor." When I asked him what kind of doctor his son was, he replied, "Oh, he's retired." I asked him how old his son was, and he said, "He's 43."

It seemed odd that a 43-year-old doctor could retire, until I learned that he was a veterinarian. Apparently, people have no problem paying the vets for their pets, yet they can't seem to understand that physicians have to earn a living, too. And never mind paying them on the installment plan. (Just try to offer your auto mechanic or plumber 30 percent of his bill, or an employee 30 percent of his paycheck.)

If I sound bitter, I'm not. I am just frustrated because I'm not able to spend as much time with each patient as I would like to, so they can ask me questions.

My fear is that because of these time constraints, there may be more missed diagnoses and more errors in judgment. This is a real problem for the patient and the physician, as this may lead to an increase in malpractice litigation.

Additionally, why should bright American students go through four years of college, four years of medical school and possibly six or seven years of surgical training, finishing at age 32 with $150,000 in loans to pay off?

Now, all they have to worry about is how to earn enough money to pay off the loans.

Abby, if we are destined to have socialized medicine in this country, or an increase in government control and rationing of medical services, I doubt very much if the American people will be very happy.

I realize that this is already much too long for you to print, but I hope you will find it sufficiently important to run at least a part of it in your column. Thank you. — ONE VERY FRUSTRATED M.D.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Your sobering message is one I think my readers need to hear in full.

Now, what am I going to tell all those 50-year-old veterinarians who are still in the saddle when they ask me how a veterinarian managed to retire at age 43?

DEAR ABBY: I am writing regarding the letter from the "retired Navy nurse" who found true love at age 62.

She says she is a retired lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Navy, but as far as I know, the U.S. Navy has never had a rank of lieutenant colonel. It does have a lieutenant commander, but lieutenant colonel is strictly Army, Air Force or Marines.

Maybe you misread her rank in her letter, or maybe she couldn't get her story straight. Sign me . . . A "FOR REAL" LT. COL. USAF (RET.), GREENVILLE, S.C.

DEAR "FOR REAL" LT. COL.: My error — not hers. (A correction was sent before the letter was published, but apparently not all my newpapers received it.) Her letter read, "I am a female Lieut. Comdr. in the U.S. Navy." It was handwritten, and apparently written in haste.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Jet telephone use growing quickly

DALLAS (AP) — More than half the U.S. airline fleet now has jet telephones allowing air travelers to conduct business or phone home while flying.

The Dallas Morning News reported that GTE Airfone Inc., the industry pioneer, says more than 16 million on-board calls have been placed since the first call on Oct. 15, 1984.

Also, new technology that will allow conference calls, facsimile transmissions, computer file transmissions, and clearer calls are in the works.

The Airfone has been installed on planes flown by American, United, USAir, Delta, Northwest, Continental, Trans World and America West.

"There's always been heavy use," said Avery Coryell, senior specialist in cabin design at American Airlines. "We've seen continuous growth in the demand. As passengers get used to the phones, they expect to be able to use them. We think those factors are driving the demand.

In-Flight Phone Corp. beat Airfone to the punch and will begin testing digital telephones this month.
