MISD to discuss hiring attorney

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Tuesday at the Midland Independent School District board meeting, trustees will hear a presentation about hiring legal counsel.

The issue initially was raised five months ago by trustee George Lara in the wake of a grand jury investigation of the school board.

"From a legal standpoint, there is most definitely enough room for improvement that we can use an attorney full time," Lara said.

Lara expressed that same opinion five months ago when he asked that the board look into hiring an in-house attorney. Currently, the school district is represented by Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson in some matters and by Ted Kerr in others.

Recent years have seen the district in several legal battles, including a fight for unitary status and a civil rights lawsuit being pursued by Casey Riggan. The plethora of legal problems combined with the expense of legal counsel were responsible for Lara's interest in hiring an in-house attorney. According to Art Martin, executive director of business services for MISD, the district spent $358,263.78 on legal services in 1997-98. Since 1997, the district has spent $350,818.76 with Cotton, Bledsoe.

Lara would like to see that money fund an in-house attorney responsible to the board and working exclusively for the district.

Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr., however, doesn't see the need for the concern.

"I do want the board to be comfortable, but my personal opinion is we don't need a full-time attorney on staff," Baressi said, adding that previous counsel has been appropriate. "We've been very satisfied with the services we've been provided here in Midland, basically with Cotton, Bledsoe and Ted Kerr."

The administration recently sent out requests for proposals (RFP) to 32 Texas attorneys specializing in school law. The RFPs did not advertise for a vacant position, but for one of three options: 1) an attorney assigned to the school district 100 percent of the time, 2) a lawyer assigned to the district 50 percent of the time, 3) an attorney on call.

According to Tom Holland, executive director of personnel services, the district's current legal services are considered on call.

Tuesday's briefing will be to discuss the responses to the RFPs. The district received eight responses. Two declined to submit a proposal and one, Douglas Fant, of Midland, sent his resume.

The five firms submitting proposals are: Walsh, Anderson, Brown, Schulze and Aldridge, of Austin; Cotton, Bledsoe, of Midland; Bickerstaff, Heath, Smiley, Pilard and McDaniel, of Austin; Mounce, Green, Myers, Safi and Galatzan, of El Paso; and McMahon, Tidwell, Hansen, Atkins and Peacock, of Odessa.

Holland said that if the board determines to go forward with the issue, a subcommittee would be formed to make a decision. He added that a fourth option exists in the hiring of an in-house counsel.

"If they don't like any of these proposals, they can reject all proposals and advertise for an attorney," Holland said.

Lara said he will ask for that option to be included when the board meets Tuesday.

LET IT RAIN

City sees first rain of new year

By Rick McLaughlin

The weather outside is frightful,
but inside it is delightful,
Let it rain, let it rain, let it rain.

With apologies for an altered old Christmas carol, the weather in Midland, and across Texas and southeastern New Mexico, took a turn for the worse Friday which, depending on one's point of view is actually a turn for the better early in the first days of the new year.

A slow drizzling rain and near freezing temperatures made for inconvenient walking for shivering pedestrians hopping puddles and rain-swollen gutters, as well as for cars getting windshields splashed with waves of dirty street water from the wheels of passing vehicles.

But for many, the moisture, some 0.60 of an inch for Midland, in whatever form, is a welcome way to start the new year.

That's because in 1999, the total local precipitation for the year was a lowly 7.6 inches compared to the normal average annual rainfall of 14.80 inches, according to statistics from meteorologist Jack Ciccone of the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Thursday's rainfall, nearly 10 percent of 1999's total rainfall, was measured at 0.60 inches as of 7 p.m.

The rainfall is courtesy of a subtropical front moving northeast across Mexico. "It looks like there was enough available moisture this time to combine with an upper level disturbance moving across southern New Mexico and West Texas," said Ciccone.

"An upper level disturbance is an upper level low-pressure area that creates lift (updrafts), which

It's not up for debate: Tournament benefits students, community

A valuable experience for the Lee High School debate team also gives the community a chance to see a tournament that teaches students important life skills.

"This is a great fund-raiser for us, but it's also a chance for the community to see our kids in action, organizing and managing the tournament," said Alicia Elliot, Lee High School debate coach.

U. Frank Williams Jr.

Approximately 200 students from outside the Permian Basin and about 50 students from local schools are participating in the debate tournament, which includes events from Lincoln-Douglas debate to duet acting.

Lee students are not participating; instead they are busy organizing and running the event, which will generate upward of $5,000 to defray expenses for the team. The Lee High debate team travels several times a month to compete in tournaments from Amarillo to Dallas.

"Hosting this teaches you how to stay calm, because you're in charge of a lot at one time," said Vinesh Patel, a senior and director of the tournament. "We do it because it is going to bring in several thousands of dollars for our team."

While entry fees paid to Lee are a substantial sum of money, the team members are not the only ones who stand to profit.

"Events of this caliber generally generate $75 per day for the overnight visitor and $35 for the day visitor," explained Nancy Swallow, director of servicing for the Convention and Visitor's Bureau.

Many of the students from the 26 schools spend Friday afternoon at the mall while awaiting the start of the tournament which will run Friday night and all day Saturday.

Texas Railroad Commissioner

Well-known Midlanders give nod to Michael Williams

■ Former Gov. William P. Clements and Clayton Williams endorse current Texas Railroad Commissioner.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Two well-known oil and gas leaders, former Gov. William P. Clements and Clayton Williams, have endorsed current Texas Railroad Commissioner Michael Williams in his bid for re-election.

Clements, who was the first Republican governor of Texas since Reconstruction, said he endorses Williams because of his record of achievement on the Commission.

"He is a leader for Texas. At the Railroad Commission, he has cut red tape and streamlined regulations, and is working hard to promote the energy industry," Clements said.

Harold Hamm, chairman of Save Domestic Oil (SDO), which led a movement to charge Saudi Arabia, Mexico, Iraq and Venezuela with "crude oil dumping" said Williams had been supportive of SDO and had offered to write a legal brief in support of the legal action group. The Oklahoma Corporation Commission already has written such a brief and other state regulatory agencies are considering.

Michael Williams, a former Midland resident, opposes Austin landman Andy Draughn in the Republican primary. Draughn says he is running because he is the candidate with extensive oil and gas experience.

Williams was appointed to the commission by Gov. George W. Bush in December 1998 to replace Carole Keeton Rylander, who was elected state comptroller. He has been a Midland County prosecutor, and under President George Bush served as assistant secretary of education for civil rights at the U.S. Department of Education. He was a special assistant to the attorney general in the Reagan administration.

Clayton Williams, a former candidate for governor of Texas, called Michael Williams a Midlander with a good conservative record, who has issued very professional, sane and reasonable rulings during his term on the Texas Railroad Commission.

"He is a reformer who is responsive to the needs of the industry. He understands the vital position of the energy industry in the Texas economy and the overriding need for public policies that enhance exploration and production of domestic oil and gas supplies. Michael Williams is in place, has done a good job and I support him," Williams said.

Michael Williams said he was honored to have the support of two great Texas leaders, who have been "trailblazers" in the energy industry and Texas politics.

Tired, blistered, teen-age Tibetan spiritual leader defects to India

By Deepak Sharma
Associated Press

DHARMSALA, India — An exhausted 14-year-old Tibetan Buddhist leader reached India with scraped hands and blistered feet after trekking across the snowy Himalayas, a defection that embarrassed Chinese leaders who used him as a symbol of their rule over Tibet.

The 17th Karmapa's flight with a few monks was the most significant exodus since the Dalai Lama — the spiritual leader of millions of Buddhists — and tens of thousands of Tibetans fled their homeland after a failed 1959 uprising against Chinese rule.

When he arrived Wednesday, the Karmapa met with the Dalai Lama, officials in his government-in-exile at Dharmsala in northern India said Friday.

Few others have spoken to him, and the Dalai Lama's administration has been reluctant to comment for fear of reprisals in Tibet and out of consideration for the political situation in India, which has recently enjoyed progress in trade relations with China.

AP Photo

In the most significant defection from Chinese-ruled Tibet in decades, the 17th Karmapa, leader of one of Tibetan Buddhism's most prominent sects, pictured here during a his September 1992 installation ceremony, has fled to India according to Chinese officials.

The escape could prod China's communist leadership to press an already stern 4-year-old campaign to purge monasteries of Dalai Lama supporters.

It was the second incident in two days showing China's persistent problems with organized religion. On Thursday, Catholics aligned with China's communist regime ordained five new bishops not recognized by Rome.

The Karmapa, head of the Karma Kagyu religious order, crossed Nepal on a route followed by most Tibetan refugees, said sources close to the Dharmsala administration. He entered without a visa and traveled across India.

He eluded his increasingly watchful guards at the 800-year-old Tsurphu monastery in central Tibet by declaring his intention to go on a retreat, the sources said. He and a few monks set out across the mountains on Dec. 28, trekking for days along rocky paths bordered by thorny bushes that scraped their hands, the sources said. A jeep and other modes of transportation were used later.

"It's amazing to me that he pulled this off," said John Ackerly, president of the International Campaign for Tibet in Washington, D.C., who visited the Karmapa's home monastery in 1998. "He was surrounded by so many Chinese minders."

Those close to the Dalai Lama administration said the Karmapa apparently left because he was frustrated at not being allowed to meet with his teachers to obtain the instruction necessary for his religious position. Chinese authorities repeatedly denied a visa to his principal teacher, Tai Situ Rinpoche, who has a monastery near Dharmsala.

The Karmapa's flight "reveals the shambles of China's policy of trying to manage religion," says Robert Thurman, a Columbia University professor and friend of the Dalai Lama. "They couldn't give him enough freedom so he could pursue his personal growth."

"Their suppression is not working, and their attempt to pretend to get along with Buddhism doesn't work, either."

The Karmapa's Kagyupa sect, known as the "Black Hats," was once Tibet's most politically powerful but was supplanted by the Gelugpa school of the Dalai Lamas 350 years ago.

Leaders of the Tibetan sects are revered as the reincarnations of their predecessors and are identified in their youth by divination.

China's State Council Information Office acknowledged that the Karmapa had left his monastery with a "small number of followers," the state-run Xinhua News Agency reported Friday.

The report said the Karmapa went abroad to get musical instruments and a black hat — the symbol of his power believed to be woven from the hairs of female deities. The report cited a letter saying he did not mean to "betray the state, the nation, the monastery or the leadership."

The Karmapa is the first leading "tulku," or reincarnation of a holy person, to be officially recognized by the modern Chinese state. He also is the only Tibetan lama upon whom the Dalai Lama and the Chinese have agreed, and is the most important Tibetan figure to defect since his predecessor fled with the Dalai Lama.

No end in sight to Christian-Muslim violence in Ambon

AMBON, Indonesia (AP) — Fourteen-year-old Samsul Belu is a living legend in Muslim-held parts of this strife-torn city for all the Christians he has killed in a year of religious violence.

"No bullets can hurt me, no daggers can stab me," the teen boasted.

During the past two weeks, as hundreds of people were slaughtered across islands in eastern Indonesia, Samsul led Muslim fighters armed with homemade weapons in fierce battles against Christians.

The unrest that has gripped the Maluku and North Maluku provinces, or Spice Islands as they were known during colonial times, has reached a fever-pitch in recent days.

The violence also has sparked fears that the world's fourth most populous country could splinter along deep-rooted religious and ethnic fault lines.

Separatist movements in other provinces in the archipelago — such as Aceh and Irian Jaya — threaten Indonesia's territorial integrity. But only the conflict in the Malukas has the potential to spread quickly to other areas of the nation where the majority Muslim population coexists with people of other religions.

Tensions in the region date to the 15th century, when Dutch, Portuguese and English traders competed for control of the valuable spice trade centered on the islands. Western traders, explorers and missionaries brought their faiths with them.

Today, Muslim and Christian communities are still split along religious lines.

The recent tension has been fueled in part by the migration in recent years of thousands of Muslims from other parts of Indonesia. Christians fear they may become a minority in one of the few places they have been a majority.

As a whole, Muslims make up almost 90 percent of Indonesia's 210 million people.

The bloodshed began a year ago while Muslims were celebrating Eid al-Fitr — a holiday marked by gift giving and family reunions. The fighting was sparked by a minor scuffle between a Christian bus driver and his Muslim conductor.

Since then at least 2,000 people have died in clashes that spread from the provincial capital, Ambon, to outlying islands. In the past two weeks alone, about 1,000 people are estimated to have been killed.

Efforts at peace have come to nothing. Last May, the two sides signed a peace accord, but fighting broke out two days later.

In December, President Abdurrahman Wahid visited Ambon and told residents they had to find peace themselves rather than look to the central government for answers. New fighting erupted the next day.

The Christians generally distrust the Muslim-dominated government in Jakarta and have called for the deployment of a U.N. peacekeeping force.

"The government is not perceived as being neutral," said Dede Oetomo, a political analyst and lecturer at Airlangga University. "International peacekeepers wouldn't take sides in the conflict."

Parliamentary speaker Amien Rais recently called on the armed forces to separate the warring groups. He said Indonesia's very existence could be threatened if the ethnic unrest spreads to the nation's main island, Java.

"If the violence spreads to Java and other islands, then this republic will disband very quickly," he said.

On Friday, about 80,000 Muslim demonstrators in Jakarta, the capital, threatened to declare a holy war in the defense of Islam.

In the past week, security forces conducted a massive sweep of Ambon, confiscating thousands of illegal weapons. But many local militia members say they will keep fighting.

Samsul, the young Muslim warrior, said he would not rest until "the Christians stop trying to wipe out the Muslims from this island."

Jani Albar, a Muslim fighter, said he buried a large dagger under his house before soldiers searched his neighborhood.

"The fighting won't stop," the 22-year-old said. "Everyone has buried weapons."

Heist of prize birds touches fowl-smitten

RIEMST, Belgium (AP) — Pigeon breeder Laurent Rondags cradled the shattered bird shells in his hands and choked back tears. "Ten years of my life. And they didn't even spare the eggs."

In a nation smitten with pigeon racing, the theft of 36 of the finest doves from last year's best performer — and the destruction of the next generation of potential champions — has touched a raw nerve.

For generations, pigeon watching has dominated the weekends of hundreds of thousands of Belgians, the world's unrivaled pigeon breeders. But Monday's theft illustrates how money has come to dominate a sport where prize birds now fetch more than $25,000.

The pigeons Rondags kept in a loft he built in his backyard were valued at more than $250,000 — yet, like generations before him, he kept the key to his treasure on a ledge above the door.

Now, the 71-year-old Rondags is left with only his trophies — dozens of them filling his eastern Belgian home.

"This is what pigeon racing has turned into," Rondags said bitterly.

"There is a streak of fanaticism among the big players, who even sell birds abroad," said Belgian Pigeon Federation chairman Marcel Van den Driessche.

In 1999, Rondags won nearly every regional pigeon-racing category, securing the coveted Golden Dove, the regional MVP title for pigeon fanciers.

Many believe the prize birds might have been stolen for breeding — reaping the rewards of years of Rondags' careful crossbreeding to create the best blood line around.

The thieves took only the champions, leaving behind the young, less valuable birds.

"I'm left with some of the apples but the apple tree has gone," Rondags said.

Pigeon racing has declined in popularity in Belgium even as the values of champion birds have skyrocketed. Just after World War II, the pigeon federation had a quarter million members in a nation of 10 million. Now it has about 60,000 — most of them elderly.

"The old fanciers stop and there is no one to take over," Van den Driessche said.

Russia shuffles top combat commanders in Chechnya

By Yuri Bagrov
Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — With its offensive to capture Grozny stalled, the Russian high command on Friday shuffled its top combat generals in Chechnya, insisting that it was a routine staff rotation.

The removal of the two generals who had commanded combat operations in Chechnya suggested government frustration over the failure to take the shattered Chechen capital. The Russian government wants to gain control of Grozny so it can announce a major victory and possibly begin winding down the conflict.

Russian commanders also indicated Friday that a scaling-back of the bombardment of Grozny had been ordered, but gave conflicting details.

The Defense Ministry said Lt. Gen. Gennady Troshev was replaced as commander of the Eastern front by his deputy, Maj. Gen. Sergei Makarov.

On the Western front, Maj. Gen. Vladimir Shamanov was sidelined in favor of Maj. Gen. Alexei Verbitzky. Little was known about the new commanders.

Russian ground forces began a major drive Dec. 25 to take Grozny, but have made little progress in the face of fierce rebel resistance. Russian commanders said last month that the city would be taken within days.

Rebel fighters in the city launched counterattacks this week and showed no sign of giving up. Rebel commanders say they are ready to fight for years.

The Defense Ministry insisted the rotations were normal practice, but the moves will be seen as dismissals. Acting President Vladimir Putin, who took over when Boris Yeltsin resigned Dec. 31, may want to wrap up the war before presidential elections March 26.

The personnel changes were "not the result of any professional error of the commanders who are just returning to their former positions," according to a military statement read on Russian state television networks.

NTV, a private television channel, said Shamanov's removal might be linked to reports that Russian soldiers massacred about 40 Chechen civilian last month in the village of Alkhan-Yurt.

Shamanov, who helped formulate the strategy to occupy Chechnya, returned to his previous post as chief of the 58th Army.

The general became famous at the start of the campaign in September for his hard-driving tactics. His soldiers adored Shamanov, who had a reputation of leading from the front, unlike most other senior commanders.

Troshev, who will continue in his previous post as commander of the Northern Caucasus military district, insisted at a press briefing Friday in the southern Russian city of Mozdok that no errors had been made.

He also said that Russian forces were scaling back their operations in Grozny, but indicated that fighting was not being called off altogether.

In a series of confusing remarks broadcast on Russian TV channels, Troshev said Russian forces would "suspend military activities in all directions" because of the threat posed to civilians in Grozny.

But he also said combat operations would continue in areas of the city where there were no civilians.

"To halt does not mean we won't continue, we are conducting the military activities around the clock in the areas where there are no civilians," he said in the TV broadcasts.

The news agency ITAR-Tass reported from Mozdok that Troshev's comments referred to air and artillery bombardment of the capital. A spokesman for the Defense Ministry in Moscow said he was not sure what Troshev meant.

There were no details about how long any pause might last.

Russian artillery and aircraft have been battering Grozny since September despite the presence of up to 40,000 civilians hiding in basements in the city. Russia has announced cease fires in the past to allow civilians to leave, but did not halt all combat operations during those lulls.

In spite of fog and snow, federal planes and helicopter gunships flew 43 combat missions over the past 24 hours, the military said Friday. It claimed to have killed more than 30 rebels.

Heart transplant for 79-year-old raises questions

TORONTO (AP) — A 79-year-old Canadian has a new heart, and his operation has kindled a debate on transplant surgery ethics.

Ray Nelson received the heart from a 55-year-old donor whose organ normally would have been rejected because of its advanced age. And Nelson himself was 14 years older than what had previously been considered the maximum age for a transplant.

The Dec. 27 transplant has provoked a debate in Canada, where fewer than 200 heart transplants are performed each year.

"One has to wonder whether or not the process was being manipulated to provide some advantage to someone who otherwise might not be eligible," said Dr. Douglas Kinsella, a lecturer on medical ethics at the University of Calgary.

Nelson, a director of the Alberta Treasury Branches, a government-owned financial institution, is well-known in provincial business and political circles. He is also a friend of Dr. Dennis Modry, an Edmonton heart transplant specialist.

Complications after a bypass operation last year forced Nelson, an active man who used to swim at least 50 laps a day, to be hospitalized in September. Ten days after his transplant at the University of Alberta Hospital in Edmonton, he was sitting up and talking.

Dr. Arvind Koshal, regional director of the hospital's cardiac science program, acknowledged the committee of cardiologists, social workers and others that approved the transplant took unusual steps.

While 65 had been considered the maximum age for a transplant, that was never "carved in stone," Koshal said.

He said the transplant committee asked the hospital's ethics board for guidance in Nelson's case. The ethics board said that while age alone should not be the determining factor, it also noted that patients needing hearts far exceed the number of donor organs available. As many as 6,000 Canadians are considered possible candidates for a heart transplant.

After "rigorous debate," Koshal said, the transplant committee voted in a secret ballot to permit a transplant, but only if Nelson received a heart that would otherwise go unused.

Hearts from donors older than 50 normally get used only for "status four" patients, meaning emergency cases in which "somebody is going to die otherwise," Koshal said.

When the heart of a 55-year-old brain dead patient became available, he said, no emergency cases were pending. Two independent cardiologists on the transplant committee decided the heart was not appropriate for others on the eligibility list, so Nelson got it, Koshal said.

Glenn Griener of the University of Alberta's John Dossetor Health Ethics Center questioned whether giving Nelson the heart "amounts to substandard medical care."

"I haven't seen a coherent rationale for using this organ," he said.

Kinsella said the transplant committee's lengthy review was unusual and seemed intended to counter any accusations that Nelson "jumped the queue" for a transplant.

To Koshal, the decision hinged on whether cardiac patients younger than Nelson could wait for "a better heart."

"It's not that we're giving him (Nelson) a bad heart," Koshal said. "It's that we're giving him one better than what he had and would give him a better quality of life."

Taiwan's largest chipmaker to buy third largest

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Taiwan's largest computer chipmaker, Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Co., said Friday it will buy the island's third largest producer in a stock swap that analysts valued at more than $3 billion.

With an earlier deal, the purchase will make TSMC the world's largest chip foundry.

TSMC's agreement to buy Worldwide Semiconductor Manufacturing Corp. follows recent speculation that Taiwan's No. 2 company, United Microelectronics Corp., had been courting Worldwide.

The deal will put pressure on United Microelectronics to find its own merger partner, said Nathan Emerson, director of ABN Amro Asia Investment Consultancy in Taipei.

FUNDS: Students organize debate

(From 1A)

"In a lot of ways we wouldn't have the money to travel as we do without this, but it's also really valuable for all of them to be eating at our local restaurants," Ms. Elliot said.

"We want to assist in any way that would help diversify our tourism income. Whether it's debate tournaments or soccer tournaments, it enhances our economy. Especially when you are talking about major events that rotate from city to city each year," Ms. Swallow said.

Last year, Lee High School hosted two district tournaments in addition to the fund-raiser, pumping literally thousands of dollars into restaurants and hotels.

"We have gotten community members involved and they get to see what we're doing," Patel said.

Jami Owen, director of Community & Senior Services, was one of those community members who served as a judge.

"It was real eye opening to see the passion the competitors had and all the work they put into their presentations. I saw some future lawyers," she said.

She judged a debate over treating violent juvenile offenders like adults in the legal system.

Linda Hancock, a librarian at San Jacinto, was impressed with the way the students put together the tournament.

"I received a telephone call giving me all the judging clinic times and they gave me ample notice," she said. "For it to be put on by a high school of this size and for students to be doing so much of the work, everything is very well run."

"I would help again," agreed Don Williams.

His wife, Linda Williams, enjoyed the passion she saw in the competitors that she judged.

"They are all winners. It was hard to pick a loser," Ms. Williams said.

"I think there is a real lack of connection between our community and academic activities and this goes a long way toward getting parents involved," Ms. Elliot said.

Her students contacted several hundred people to judge the tournament. Many former debate students returned to help out as well.

"Debate definitely helped me become more assertive. I came back just to help and see all my friends," said Kris Bicking, a sophomore at the University of Texas.

Midland High School students, who hosted their own tournament in November, were competing and hoping to do well.

"At my first tournament I was a nervous wreck and forgot my oratory," said sophomore Michelle Alvarado. "But debate has built my self-esteem and I can tell that I do better at school when I'm speaking in front of my classes."

Kelly Beall, a junior in her debating mode, said "Leniency provides an incentive to commit crime."

As to her feelings on debate, "It's a good experience in order to meet people that otherwise you'd never meet. It shows the community that the youth of today aren't as stupid and immature as many of them may think we are."

RAIN: Today's forecast calls for decreasing clouds

is necessary for precipitation."

The weather system is spread across most of Texas and some of southeastern New Mexico. In southern New Mexico, there was rain mixed with a small amount of snow, Ciccone added.

Two inches of snow was reported at Guadalupe Pass and snow mixed with rain was also reported in Hobbs and Eunice, N.M.

The wetter weather was expected to decrease Friday night with a 50 percent chance of rain and decreasing to cloudy skies with an overnight low of 30-35.

Rain is not in the forecast for today, with the forecast calling for a mostly cloudy morning, otherwise becoming mostly sunny and with a high of around 60-65.

Tonight is expected to be mostly clear with a low in the lower 30s. Sunday will be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-60s.

The 1990s proved to be one of the drier decades in the Midland area since record-keeping began in mid-1930, according to Alec Lyster, a meteorologist with the NWS at MIA.

Six of the past seven years have been considered drought years. In addition to the 7.6 inches of precipitation in 1999, the year 1998 saw only 5.14 inches of rain, one of the driest on record, said Lyster.

The driest decade since 1930, the first year of record-keeping, was the 1950s, with an average of 12.06 inches per year. However, the driest year ever recorded in the Midland area was 1951, with only 4.24 inches of rain, explained Lyster.

By contrast, the 1980s was one of the wettest decades, with an annual average of 16.55 inches of rainfall per year. That decade recorded the wettest year in local recording-keeping. In 1986, 32.13 inches of precipitation was recorded.

Running a close second was 1941, the year Midland International Airport started as Midland Army Air Field, when 30.33 inches of rainfall was recorded.

NATION IN BRIEF

■ Inmate wants sex change

BOSTON — An inmate who says he is a woman trapped in a man's body has filed a federal lawsuit to force the state to pay for a sex change.

Robert Kosilek, who is serving a life sentence for killing his wife in 1990, claims it is cruel and unusual punishment to prevent him from becoming a woman.

Since his conviction in 1993, the 50-year-old Kosilek has been denied the hormones and surgery that would allow him to "assume some level of psycho-sexual congruity," as he put it in court papers.

Correction officials have attempted, so far unsuccessfully, to have the case dismissed. But they agreed on Friday to hire an expert to evaluate Kosilek.

A sex change typically runs around $10,000 to $15,000, according to the International Foundation for Gender Education in Waltham. Additional operations for breast enhancement, Adam's apple reduction and voice-box alteration can cost several thousand dollars each.

■ 'Bingo bandit' found guilty

TAYLORVILLE, Ill. — Ronald L. Lyerla thought he had found a great way to win $500 on bingo night at the American Legion hall. Instead, his jackpot could end up being prison time.

Lyerla, 32, was convicted of theft this week for cheating his way to the $500 prize by gluing winning numbers to his bingo card. He could get two to five years in prison when he is sentenced next month. He has already served time for two burglaries.

Lyerla won the jackpot at the Morrisonville American Legion on Feb. 12 when he pasted I-28 over the I-20 space and G-59 over the G-57 space to win at "cover-up," which requires all spaces on the card to be covered.

Officials believe he cut the numbers out of losing cards he had taken home from earlier bingo nights.

Lyerla was caught after a relative, who happened to be a dispatcher for the Christian County sheriff's office, noticed him acting strangely — apparently gleeful over his trick — in the American Legion parking lot.

■ Cook wins $100 million jackpot

NEW YORK — Short-order cook Johnnie Ely came to work at 4 a.m. just as he always did, but this time it wasn't to make omelets. It was to tell his boss that he had just hit a $100 million lottery jackpot.

The 66-year-old man from the South Bronx won the New Year's Eve Millennium Millions, the biggest jackpot in New York history.

"I told him, 'What are you doing here? Go home,'" said Winston Willer, manager of The Java Shop in Manhattan.

Ely opted for a lump-sum payment of $44 million. After taxes, he will get about $27 million.

"It's cool, real cool to be able to do all the things you've always dreamed about doing," said Ely, who was introduced as the winner Friday. "But it's the kind of thing that now that you've got it, you freeze."

He said he planned to take care of his extended family, including helping several nieces and nephews through college, but beyond quitting his job, he had no plans.

Clinton poised to create new monument in desert

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1,500 square miles of soaring, ruddy-hued cliffs, desert dotted with squat juniper and pinon trees and plunging, rocky canyons of intermittent streams that feed the Colorado River: That's the proposed Grand Canyon-Parashant National Monument.

President Clinton is poised to give new federal protection Tuesday to this area and two others in Arizona and California, but Arizona officials are making a last-ditch plea to block Clinton's move.

"If the (Clinton) administration is interested in public participation, that process is under way. Please let that process work without usurping the public's opportunity to participate," said Lisa Atkins, chief of staff to Rep. Bob Stump, R-Ariz. Both proposed Arizona monuments are in Stump's district.

The land in question already belongs to the federal government. A monument designation would prohibit mining and could include other restrictions, such as limits on off-road vehicle use.

Clinton plans to make an "environmental announcement" at the Grand Canyon on Tuesday, said Elliot Diringer of the president's Council on Environmental Quality.

Although Diringer and White House spokesman Jim Kennedy would not say what the announcement would be, both supporters and opponents of the monument proposals said Friday they assumed Clinton would designate the monuments on his Arizona trip.

"By proclaiming these areas as monuments, Clinton is making sure these national treasures are protected not only now, but most importantly, for future generations," said Martos Hoffman of the Southwest Forest Alliance in Flagstaff, Ariz.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt recommended the three possible new monuments to Clinton last month. Other than Grand Canyon-Parashant, they are Agua Fria on 71,000 acres north of Phoenix dotted with American Indian ruins and California Coastal, consisting of hundreds of rocks and small islands up and down the state's Pacific coast.

This is a June 1999 file photo of the Grand Canyon-Parashant National Monument, a scenic strip of land between the Grand Canyon and the Utah stateline near Kingman, Ariz. Environmentalists and Republican officials say they expect President Clinton to create three new national monuments, including one on more than 1,500 square miles of Arizona cliffs and canyons, when he visits the Grand Canyon on Tuesday.

More monuments

President Clinton is expected to add three new national monuments and extend a fourth in the West Tuesday. But state officials are concerned the action would cause financial hardship.

2. Coastal National Monument, thousands of small, federally owned islands, reefs and rocks along the California Coast
3. Agua Fria National Monument
4. Grand Canyon-Parashant National Monument

Babbitt also suggested expanding the Pinnacles National Monument in California, south of San Jose.

Arizona Gov. Jane Hull, a Republican, and Arizona's seven GOP members of Congress wrote to Clinton on Friday urging him not to create the monuments.

Mrs. Hull "does not like dictates from Washington," said her press secretary, Francie Noyes. "She does not like unilateral decisions from the East Coast to Arizona. She also thinks that this particular designation, worthwhile though it may be, is being done for political purposes."

George Frampton, chairman of the president's Council on Environmental Quality, wrote back, saying there has been plenty of public input. Babbitt and Interior Department officials have held more than 60 meetings on the proposed Arizona monuments, including two public hearings, Frampton wrote.

The largest and most controversial of the proposed monuments, Grand Canyon-Parashant, covers 1 million acres north and west of Grand Canyon National Park and is nearly as large as the park itself.

"It's not a gentle landscape. It's a very angular landscape," said Geoff Barnard, president of the Grand Canyon Trust, a group supporting the monument. "It's a very hard landscape, but when the long light slants in the evening, it's spectacular."

Babbitt and environmentalists say the area is threatened by possible uranium mining or residential development. Opponents scoff, saying uranium mining isn't profitable these days and the area is too remote for development. The proposed monument is about 70 miles east of Las Vegas and 40 miles south of St. George, Utah.

Window care and service no longer a major "pane" for homeowners

The next time you have a moment, look out one of your windows. What do you see? Chances are that you're being deprived of the full view that you are looking for. Why? Corrosion and dust are now dominating your windows! Time has taken it's toll and the weather elements have taken control. Next, touch your window and you can probably feel the outside temperature through your fingertips. This combination of look and touch has been increasing your heating bills as well as your time spent cleaning your home!

American Home Improvement has vinyl replacement windows that will take the chill out of your energy costs and leave your home looking great...guaranteed! And this winter season, you can take advantage of their lowest window prices, ever! Their "Winter Window" special allows shoppers to take 15% off all window purchases made before January 31, 2000 as well as a 90 days, no interest payment plan.

American Home Improvement's brand of Modern windows are manufactured to fit the demands of new construction or sized to exactly fit existing openings. All parts have a life-time warranty.

"Plus, these windows are energy-efficient. They have double-pane glass that is air-tight and homeowners will never see moisture, dust, or corrosion build-up between the two window panes," said Rodney Martin, owner of American Home Improvement, located at 4500 West Illinois, Suite 203-H in Midland.

American Home Improvement has vinyl replacement windows that are easy to clean and seal your home from the winter cold. Call 520-1521 for details and a free in-home estimate.

"Vinyl windows are the home owner's first step towards building a truly low-maintenance home," he added. "The sash and frames of vinyl windows will never need painting for the life of the home."

The double-pane insulated glass is simple to clean due to a unique hinge release which allows the sash to slide towards the center of the window opening for easy access to the exterior surface from inside your home.

Vinyl is also the warmest, most energy-efficient window material on the market today.

"We've had customers tell us that they can now sit by their windows without feeling the cold of winter or the wind blow through." This is also due in part to the windows having the best glass technology available in the industry...Low-E glass. This titanium glass helps to keep your home clean and at an even temperature by insulating it from outside dust and air infiltration. Low-E glass is 10 times more energy efficient than regular single pane glass and removes 90% of all ultra-violet light! This also aids in sound control as it reduces outside noise pollution.

"Replacement windows will also improve the beauty and artistic appeal of your home as well as give [homeowners] one of the highest return rates of any other home improvement project," stated Martin.

Family-owned and operated, American Home Improvement offers free in-home estimates and designs as well as free service on replacement windows. Long-term financing is available and the purchase of replacement windows qualifies as a home improvement loan at any First American Bank.

Give American Home Improvement a call at 520-1521 and ask about their "Winter Window" special: 15% off all window purchases made before January 31, 2000 and a 90 days, no interest payment plan. Your senses will thank you!

1999 ends with best jobless record since Vietnam War

WASHINGTON (AP) — A burst of hiring at department stores and construction companies helped keep the nation's unemployment rate at a 30-year low of 4.1 percent in December, marking a strong finish for a year in which Americans enjoyed the best labor market since the Vietnam War. Wall Street reached record highs.

Employers added 315,000 jobs to their payrolls last month, the largest gain since July. Big increases came at department stores, enjoying their best holiday sales season in seven years, and construction companies, basking in a building boom brought on by warmer-than-usual weather.

"The century ended on a high note for workers," said First Union chief economist David Orr. He noted that the gain in payroll jobs was far above the 240,000 increase many economists had expected.

December's jobless rate of 4.1 percent matched the year's low reached in November. That level is better than any since unemployment stood at 3.9 percent in January 1970, the Labor Department said Friday.

For all of 1999, the unemployment rate averaged 4.2 percent, the best since a 3.5 percent jobless average in 1969. In 1998, the unemployment rate averaged 4.5 percent.

"The opportunities for employment and for upgrading jobs in 1999 were the best workers have seen in 30 years," said Ken Mayland, chief economist for KeyCorp.

Strong economic growth is keeping unemployment down to levels most workers haven't seen since they took their first jobs, economists said. And that's helping workers who historically have had a harder time finding jobs.

President Clinton hailed 1999's performance for producing "the lowest annual unemployment rates for African-Americans and Hispanics ever recorded." The annual average unemployment rate for blacks in 1999 was 8 percent and for Hispanics 6.4 percent, Labor Department officials said.

In December, employers boosted jobs and wages by bigger-than-expected amounts, which caused economists to worry that strong job and wage growth could trigger inflation down the road.

"We're creating jobs faster than workers, and the Fed is right that this can't go on forever," said Bill Cheney, chief economist for John Hancock.

Friday's jobless report adds to the likelihood that Federal Reserve policy-makers will raise interest rates, by at least a quarter of a point, at their next meeting in February, many economists said. The central bank bumped up interest rates three times last year to slow the economy and keep inflation at bay.

Merrill Lynch's chief economist Bruce Steinberg said the stronger-than-expected 315,000 jobs created in December "all but guarantees the Fed will tighten monetary policy on Feb. 2."

Stock investors brushed off inflation fears raised in the report. The Dow Jones industrial average posted a record, gaining 269.30 points to close at 11,522.56. That wiped out the last remnants of Tuesday's 359-point tumble. The Nasdaq index, which also fell earlier this week, reported its largest points gain in history, soaring 155.45 points to 3,882.58 in preliminary calculations.

But bond prices fell as the yields on the bellwether 30-year Treasury bonds climbed to 6.57 percent from 6.55 percent late Thursday.

December's 315,000 additional payroll jobs followed a gain of 222,000 in November. Department stores hired 34,000 people last month, their first increase since April. Construction companies added 16,000 jobs, while engineering and management firms hired a larger-than-normal 23,000 workers.

Payrolls grew briskly in other industries as well. Bars and restaurants hired 27,000 workers; health-care providers added 16,000, an above-average gain; and financial services, including insurance and real-estate, added 12,000 jobs.

Attorneys for Cuban boy's family file guardianship petition

MIAMI (AP) — Lawyers for relatives of 6-year-old Elian Gonzalez filed a petition Friday to appoint a guardian for the child, a first step toward trying to prevent the Cuban boy's return to his homeland.

Neither the attorneys nor the family would comment on the petition until Judge Rosa Rodriguez makes a ruling, said family spokesman Armando Gutierrez. Rodriguez will make a decision early next week, said Selena Rios, the administrator for the Office of Family Court in Miami.

In Cuba, meanwhile, tens of thousands of people in Elian's hometown rallied in a seaside plaza Friday night to demand his return. "Elian, Cardenas awaits you ... with kisses," a Cuban country music band sang.

Elian was found Thanksgiving Day clinging to an inner tube at sea after his mother, stepfather and eight other people drowned while trying to reach Florida by boat.

The boy was placed with his great-uncle and great-aunt in Miami, but the Immigration and Naturalization Service ruled Wednesday that he must be returned to his father in Cuba by Jan. 14. The decision touched off angry protests in the Cuban-American community.

Miami-Dade Mayor Alex Penelas and Miami Mayor Joe Carollo, accompanied by one of the family's lawyers, flew to Washington on Friday to appeal directly to Attorney General Janet Reno. Gov. Jeb Bush also asked President Clinton to reverse the order.

Reno has said she was consulted on the INS decision and approved of it. Clinton said Friday the INS did the right thing.

"I believe they followed the law," Clinton said. "This is a volatile and difficult case. ... We need to keep this out of the political process as much as possible."

In contrast to Thursday, when two Cuban exile leaders and 133 other people were arrested and police were forced to use tear gas to disperse a crowd, protesters in Miami were much calmer Friday.

However, the Cuban exile community called for more civil disobedience. The planned demonstrations included a vigil Friday night at the federal building in Orlando and a large protest in Little Havana on Saturday. Protesters are also planning to drive around Miami International Airport on Monday.

"If the child is sent back to Cuba without his day in court, all hell is going to break loose," said Jose Basulto, founder of Brothers to the Rescue, an anti-Castro group.

Bush spoke with some demonstration organizers and asked them to "do the demonstrations in a way that does not disrupt daily life in South Florida, because it would hurt the cause of Elian."

The rally in Cardenas, Cuba, was marked by songs, tears and personal recollections of Elian. It was the most personal and emotional of many held since early December, when Cuban President Fidel Castro promised mass mobilization until the boy was returned to his father.

The speakers included classmates from Elian's elementary school, his teacher, his school principal, and the female doctor who has been caring for him since he was a baby.

Elian's father, Juan Miguel Gonzalez, his four grandparents and his great-grandmother began weeping as they sat in a row of chairs facing the stage as the group sang of the boy's mother. Gonzalez looked particularly distraught, his eyes red from crying.

Judge upholds TAAS test, rejects minority challenge

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — A federal judge upheld Texas' high school graduation test Friday, rejecting legal claims by minorities that the exam discriminates against blacks and Hispanics.

U.S. District Judge Ed Prado, in a ruling potentially affecting high school exit tests across the country, agreed that "significant numbers" of minority students are adversely affected by the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills.

But, he ruled, the plaintiffs failed to prove the adverse impact is greater the positive impact, "or that other approaches would meet the state's articulated legitimate goals."

"The system is not perfect, but the court cannot say that it is unconstitutional," Prado wrote.

The plaintiffs, represented by the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, were two Hispanic rights groups and several minority students who claimed they were harmed by the TAAS exit test.

"Minority students are the ones left holding the bag after this opinion," said Al Kauffman, lead attorney for MALDEF. "We disagree with the facts of the decision. We disagree with the way the law was applied in the decision."

An appeal is under consideration, Kauffman said.

Texas Gov. George W. Bush, who has made education reform a cornerstone of his Republican presidential bid, praised the judge's decision.

"I'm really pleased. The federal court made the right decision in confirming our strong accountability system," Bush said after arriving in Columbia, S.C. "I've always advocated that a strong accountability (system) is good for all children. The court ruled that way."

Texas Education Commissioner Jim Nelson also was pleased.

"This ruling vindicates the Texas testing program, which is considered to be one of the model testing programs in the country," Nelson said. "An entire generation of Texans has graduated from high school under this requirement and I believe this has proven to be a reform that works."

The plaintiffs sought to ban the standardized test as a requirement for a diploma. They did not object to letting schools use the test to monitor students' progress.

The plaintiffs alleged the test discriminates because of the way it is put together and because schools attended mostly by minorities tend to be low-income, low-performing districts that don't offer an equal opportunity to learn.

Natalie Martinez, a former Judson High School student who lost a full college scholarship after repeatedly failing the math portion of the TAAS test, said the exam doesn't take into account students' overall abilities.

Continuation of the test will hurt other students, she said.

"I'm thinking about a lot of other kids like myself, because I know there are a lot of other kids out there who have dreams," she said.

Ms. Martinez, who got a high school diploma through a private program, is now trying to regain her scholarship.

Lawyers for the Texas Education Agency contended the exam is valid and that it contributes to student achievement. The state argued there were other societal reasons for differences in failure rates and said the failure gap between minorities and whites taking the test was closing.

The judge agreed that the test does not perpetuate prior educational discrimination in the state.

"Instead, the test seeks to identify inequities and to address them," Prado wrote.

Texas began the exam in 1990. Currently, 19 states including Texas require students to pass an exit test.

Kauffman of MALDEF said supporters of standardized exit exams will likely hail the judge's ruling as an affirmation of the tests, but he said each state's test is unique.

"I'm sure it (the ruling) will be used by some people who want to have more tests," he said. "But I don't think it will carry the day."

Texas high school students first take the exit test measuring math, reading and writing in 10th grade. If they do not pass, they have at least seven more chances to take it before graduation and may continue to attempt it after completing all classroom work.

Other versions of the TAAS are administered in lower grades.

Plaintiffs in the federal lawsuit alleged that ultimately 20 percent of Latinos and blacks fail the exit test counting all of their attempts, compared with a failure rate of 10 percent for white students.

This week, three national reports were released on the state's education system.

The Thomas B. Fordham Foundation, a politically conservative group, ranked Texas as one of five states that holds public schools responsible for meeting high academic standards.

Two studies by Harvard University's Civil Rights Project criticized the exit-level TAAS test, saying minorities perform below their peers.

TAAS ruling means it's business-as-usual for most school districts

HARLINGEN (AP) — A federal judge's rejection of claims that the test required for high school graduation discriminates against blacks and Hispanics means it's business as usual for most Texas school districts.

Jesus Chavez, Harlingen Consolidated Independent School District superintendent, thinks the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills has inspired students to take more challenging courses and established accountability with what is being taught in his district.

"My feeling with regard to the testing system is that it has helped improve our educational system throughout Texas and in our school district," Chavez said.

Likewise, officials for Dallas public schools were "nonplussed" by the ruling Friday, said Bob Mendro, chief evaluation officer for the school district.

Mendro considers the TAAS a fair evaluation of students' knowledge and said more Dallas students are passing than when it first was administered.

"We're obviously doing a better job at teaching the basic skills," he said.

In his ruling Friday, U.S. District Judge Ed Prado agreed that the TAAS negatively affected "significant numbers" of minority students.

Education powers that be react to ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal judge's ruling upholding the state's high school graduation test was celebrated by education officials and lawmakers Friday, while some scholars called it a "tremendously serious mistake."

U.S. District "Judge (Ed) Prado has given this state and its children a great victory ... This ruling vindicates the Texas testing program, which is considered to be one of the model testing programs in the country," said Education Commissioner Jim Nelson.

The judge rejected arguments by minority students who said the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test was discriminatory.

"Evidence presented during the trial showed again and again that the TAAS exam tests students in an objective, unbiased way," Nelson said.

"I feel like it's a proper ruling. The important thing to remember is that the Texas Education Agency goes to great lengths to attempt to ensure that the test itself is not a culturally biased test," Senate Education Committee Chairman Teel Bivins said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Bivins, R-Amarillo, said the test is part of an entire system that requires high academic standards and holds districts, teachers and students accountable for their performances.

"That way, the focus in Texas has been all along not to leave any one student behind," Bivins said.

Neither Bivins or Nelson denied the fact that more minority and poor students fail the test, but they said the test and the accountability system are helping more of those students pass.

"We still have an achievement gap between our minority and white students but thankfully, it is shrinking," Nelson said. "We will continue to work to eliminate that gap."

Bivins said lawmakers are concerned about the performance of minority and poor students and are working to overcome the gap by constantly examining the state's accountability system.

"Clearly I think the fact that there is a performance gap is a concern but it did not render the test itself invalid," said Bivins, who led a successful push in the Senate last session to expand the TAAS testing by requiring students to pass an exit exam before entering 11th grade.

House Public Education Committee Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, said he expected a victory. "In all of the hearings we've had in Austin, I have never been presented any evidence that demonstrates a bias in the exam," he said.

Texas teachers were cautiously celebrating the ruling, said Donna Haschke, vice president of the Texas State Teachers Association.

"I guess we're just really not too surprised about it. We as teachers have been proud of the progress our minority students have been making on the TAAS," Ms. Haschke said.

Ms. Haschke said there is still work to be done, a thought echoed by Texas Attorney General John Cornyn.

"Texas can continue to prepare its children for higher education and the world beyond," Cornyn said.

Forbes accuses Bush of breaking no-new-taxes pledge

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Steve Forbes on Friday accused Republican presidential front-runner George W. Bush of breaking a no-new-taxes pledge. Bush denied it and said his record of cutting Texas taxes by about $3 billion speaks for itself.

"I'm saying I cut the taxes. The implication is I tried to raise taxes. I cut taxes," Bush said.

At the heart of the controversy — and a new Forbes television commercial — is a 1994 written statement given to the Houston-based group Taxpayers for Accountability during Bush's first race for governor.

That statement, bearing what appears to be Bush's signature, said: "I, George W. Bush, candidate for the position of governor, pledge to oppose any legislation establishing a state personal income tax or increasing the sales tax."

Bush's presidential campaign couldn't immediately say whether Bush signed the pledge. "The document came from the (1994) campaign," said his spokesman, Scott McClellan.

Regardless, critics said, Bush proposed some tax increases to the Texas Legislature in 1997 to help fund a $3 billion property tax rollback.

Bush proposed half-cent hikes in the 6 1/4 percent state sales tax and motor vehicle sales tax; implementing a new business tax that would have extended business levies to sole proprietorships and partnerships for the first time; and spending $1 billion of a budget surplus.

His plan failed, never even receiving a vote.

Instead, legislators approved a $1 billion cut, using the surplus. In 1999, Bush won passage of another tax cut bill — including about $1.35 billion in property tax reductions, $277 million in consumer tax cuts and $229 million in business tax cuts.

"If you go back and look at the history of the tax package, it was a tax cut on day one and it was a tax cut on the day I signed it," Bush said Friday of his 1997 plan.

But in the Forbes ad, the head of Taxpayers for Accountability, Mary C. Williams of Houston, sees it differently. "His record as far as taxes are concerned is a record of broken promises," she says in the ad.

The no-tax pledge also sparked controversy during Bush's 1998 re-election campaign. At that time, Bush's chief spokeswoman, Karen Hughes, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram the governor didn't sign the document.

"It's a copy of his signature. It is either a tracing or an auto-pen of his signature," Ms. Hughes said then.

But she acknowledged that Bush's campaign returned the pledge to Ms. Williams. She said someone in the campaign office returned the questionnaire, which conflicts with Bush's policy of not signing pledges.

Ms. Hughes told the Star-Telegram Bush also didn't sign a separate letter accompanying the pledge — saying almost the same thing and bearing Bush's signature — although he authorized its content.

In a phone interview from Houston Friday, Ms. Williams said Bush — then making his first run for governor — was asked to sign a blanket no-tax pledge that her taxpayers' group issued. Instead, she says, Bush returned to her a modified written statement, which is posted on the group's Internet site.

"I accepted it but didn't like it. You can read it and judge it for yourself," she said. "He's trying to claim he didn't sign the pledge but he did."

Critics say many Texas taxpayers never saw extra cash because rising property values and higher local school tax rates ate up the property tax cuts.

Midland High vs. Abilene Cooper. This one had all the trappings of a District 4-5A basketball championship match. It was for two quarters. The rest was an illusion.

Midland High's 19-4 Bulldogs overcame an 11-point first half deficit to belt the Cougars 63-47 Friday night at Chaparral Center before a crowd of about 2,000.

Midland High	63
Cooper	47

Cooper's Chris Booth scored a three-point play with 1:45 left in the first half to give the Cougars a 27-16 lead over MHS. From there the light came on for the Bulldogs and the illusion of a championship caliber match dissipated.

In fact, MHS trailed Cooper only 27-23 at the half, scoring seven points in the last 1:45 of the half. By the end of the third quarter it was 44-37 in favor of the Bulldogs and there was no looking back.

The Bulldogs won their 42nd consecutive on court district game, showing that even when change seems present, things stay very much the same.

"Our guys just don't ever quit," said an elated MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "This win was symbolic of what we stand for. It's the kind of heart these kids have."

But was Stephenson worried about being down by 11 early?

"Hey, we were down by 14 to Odessa High," Stephenson said. "Being behind is no big deal to these guys. Sometimes I think we should give the other team 10 points before we start the game. It brings out the best in us."

Guard Chris Oldham, who had 11 points, hit a three-point shot with 6:39 left in the third period to bring the Bulldogs to within one point of Cooper at 27-26. Then Ronnie Brewster, who scored 12 and had seven rebounds, hit a trey at

Lady Dawgs run out of ammo

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

In having to face the top guns of District 4-5A girls basketball this past week, Midland High has painfully discovered the price to be paid for being short of ammunition.

An undermanned and inexperienced Lady Dawgs outfit, only three days after facing district favorite and frontrunner Odessa High, had its second rough outing of the week Friday evening at Chaparral Center against Abilene Cooper. The bigger and more experienced Lady Cougars soundly defeated Midland High 58-42 to apply some humbling perspective to the district race.

It was the second district loss of the week for the Lady Dawgs, who in losing to OHS and Cooper, have fallen to even in 4-5A at 2-2 (14-7 overall). With a roster down to eight players (including no seniors), they finished a respectable second at the Byron Johnston Clas-

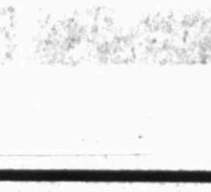
Cowboys know Vikings' RB needs to be stopped

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Over the last three seasons, Minnesota's Robert Smith had touchdown runs of 70, 74 and 78 yards. To the Dallas Cowboys, that makes him as much of a threat as Randy Moss and Cris Carter.



"Robert Smith can go the distance from anywhere," Cowboys coach Chan Gailey said. "He can take it 90 if you're on your own 10, he's that kind of back.

"He's a big, strong man who can break tackles as well, so that's the dimension he adds — the home run from anywhere on the field."

■ Cowboys Report

Smith was out with a hernia when the Vikings beat the Cowboys 27-17 on Nov. 8. Leroy Hoard had 87 yards on 21 carries, but it was three touchdown catches by Moss and Carter that bailed Minnesota out of a 17-0 deficit.

Smith returned the following week and the Vikings went 5-2 with him back in the lineup. He had three 100-yard games and a 97-yarder last weekend.

"He takes the pressure off Jeff George," Dallas defensive coordinator Dave Campo said. "We think Hoard is a good running back, but his big gain is 20 yards. This guy's big gain is 50 yards.

"So you've got to make sure you've got the creases taken care of in the running game, make sure you're disciplined there. That puts a whole different light on how you approach the game."

Big plays are the hallmark of the

Troubled Bills squad takes on eager Titans

By Barry Wilner
AP Football Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Bills, old hands at this playoff thing, should know better. They carry a quarterback controversy and a load of turmoil into Saturday's AFC wild-card game with the eager Tennessee Titans.

Buffalo, which still has the likes of Bruce Smith, Andre Reed and Thurman Thomas from the AFC dominator that went to — and lost — four straight Super Bowls in the early 1990s, went 11-5 this season. That was only good enough for a wild-card slot behind Indianapolis (13-3).

Whether that was a deciding factor in the benching of Doug Flutie for Rob Johnson is questionable. But Johnson, who had a strong outing in a meaningless final-game victory over the Colts last Sunday, will be at quarterback.

If that isn't enough upheaval, Reed criticized the Bills on his Internet site.

"It's obvious I'm not in their future plans, and I can't subject my family or myself to that anymore," he wrote. "It's time for me to move on. I'll be happier. I was not a happy player this year; it was

Sele signs with Orioles; Guzman changes clubs

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Aaron Sele, Juan Guzman and Andy Benes, three of the biggest free-agent pitchers in a weak market, found new teams Friday.

Free Agency

Sele, 38-20 for Texas in the past two seasons, agreed to a $29 million, four-year contract with the Baltimore Orioles.

Benes, whose career slumped during two seasons with Arizona, returned to the St. Louis Cardinals for an $18 million, three-year deal.

Guzman, who finished up strong for Cincinnati, got a two-year contract from Tampa Bay.

Sele, whose deal was subject to him passing a physical, was 18-9 with a 4.79 ERA last year. The 29-year-old right-hander had narrowed his choices to Tampa Bay and Baltimore.

His deal calls for salaries of $7 million in each of the first three years and $8 million in the fourth. The Orioles are deferring $2 million a year without interest.

Guzman, 33, was a combined 11-12 with a 3.74 ERA in 33 starts for Baltimore and Cincinnati.

Tampa Bay wanted a starting pitcher to replace Rolando Arrojo, traded last month in a four-team deal that brought hard-hitting third baseman Vinny Castilla. Guzman's contract includes a club option for a third year.

The Devil Rays, who also signed slugger Greg Vaughn last month, had pur-

Lady Rebels, MHS roll into semifinals

It was cold, windy and wet. As one passerby put it, "It's not exactly soccer weather."

LEE
Lady Rebel Soccer Classic

No, Mother Nature wasn't too kind on the first day of the Jumburrito Lady Rebel Classic, but the day did prove to be kind to the Midland teams, which advanced in the winner's bracket.

Both host Midland Lee and Midland High advanced to today's semifinal games at 11 a.m. at Hogan Park.

The Lady Rebels had the most convincing wins going into today's semifinals as they pounced on El Paso Bowie, 17-0, in the morning game and then took care of Killeen, 5-0, in the afternoon game. That's to be expected from the Lady Rebels as they return a majority of starters from a team which made an appearance in last year's regional semifinals.

"The field doesn't seem to me to be quite as strong as last year," said Lee coach Mike Simpson. "Maybe we've improved a bit, I don't know.

"We feel real good about this group of kids. They have senior experience even though they're not all seniors. They're really a talented bunch of kids and the kids that we brought in, we didn't lose a beat."

Junior forward Linsey Johnson led the Lady Rebels scoring with six goals, while Raffi Belizaire and Courtney Heineman each had three goals and Barbara Woodruff, Jamie Prementine and Allison

Truitt, Kitto earn TCAL accolades

Staff Report

The Trinity Chargers are continuing to reap the rewards of last year's state football championship after the turn of the century.

Trinity, which won the Texas Christian Athletic League's six-man championship in November, earned a pair of individual honors, as Dustin Truitt shared player of the year and Karl Kitto was named coach of the year.

Truitt

Truitt, a junior who started at center and linebacker, shared the award with San Antonio Town East quarterback Jared Moczygemda, whose team Trinity routed 64-18 in the state championship game. Truitt was the defensive MVP of that game, and finished the season with 146 tackles.

Truitt, who also caught 14 passes for 227 yards and a touchdown, was also a an all-state selection on both offense and defense.

Moczygemda threw for 2,019 yards and 51 touchdowns.

"Both those players are outstanding young men who did a great deal for their teams," said Kitto, who was honored for leading the Chargers to a 9-4 mark and a state title. "Nobody could come to a clear cut decision on who was the best."

Christian did not play in the Owls' first seven games of the season, but he has played in the last four games, averaging 7.5 points and 3.5 rebounds per game.

PITCH: Sele leaves Texas

sued free agent pitchers Aaron Sele and Steve Trachsel. Earlier Friday, Sele reached agreement with Baltimore.

Benes was 18-10 on the Cardinals' NL Central championship team in 1996. He left as a free agent after 1997 when general manager Walt Jocketty and Benes' agent, Scott Boras, agreed to a five-year deal about 1 1/2 hours after the Dec. 7 deadline for players to re-sign. The contract was rejected by the commissioner's office.

Benes, 32, was 13-12 with a 4.81 ERA in 198 1-3 innings last year, winning six of his last seven decisions.

His deal calls for a $2 million signing bonus that's payable from 2003-10, $2.5 million this year and $6 million in the next two seasons. The contract has a $6 million mutual option for 2002 with a $1.5 million buyout.

In addition, he can make $500,000 a year in performance bonuses if he has 34 starts and 230 innings.

Several other free agents found new homes Friday. Utilityman F.P. Santangelo got a $1.6 million, two-year deal from the Los Angeles Dodgers, and right-hander Brian Williams got a $600,000, one-year contract from the Chicago Cubs.

Anaheim signed three second basemen, agreeing to a one-year contract with Scott Spiezio and minor league contracts with Pat Kelly and Jason Bates.

Midland High's Edrea Rogers battles with Cooper's for rebounding position during their game Friday night at the Chap.

GIRLS: Short-handed MHS falls to 2-2 in 4-5A

(From 1B)

sic a week earlier and were 2-0 in district after New Year's Eve. But the second full week of district play has sunk the Lady Dawgs back to earth.

"We didn't play hard enough," said Midland High coach Terry Gray. "Cooper's intensity was outstanding. They came in with a plan and they executed it."

Cooper's advantage wasn't just in numbers, as the Lady Cougars suited up 13 players against MHS, although only 10 played. The biggest advantage was in size, as Cooper's Celeste Stevenson, who also had a game high 16 points, led a 33-21 rebounding advantage for the Lady Cougars.

There were plenty of opportunities for Cooper (14-7 overall, 3-1 in district) to rebound since the Lady Dawgs made only 16-of-55 shots from the floor. Midland High missed several shots near the basket in the first half, which makes the fact that they only trailed 29-21 at halftime that much more impressive.

Laura Koch, who led the lady Dawgs with 14 points, hit a short jumper to open the third quarter, cutting the deficit to six points, but Midland High got no closer.

"We weren't into it as mentally as we should have been and that's why we got behind early," said Gray. "Tonight's game was a result of that kind of play."

Edrea Rogers, the team's leading scorer who has been suffering from a hand injury for the last two weeks, scored 10 points, but missed her last six shots from the floor. Stevenson led four Cooper players in double figures, including April Coffield with 12 points and Kelly Garcia and Jennifer Louis with 10 apiece.

With one-third of their district schedule behind them, the Lady Dawgs almost seem as if they're starting from scratch to earn a playoff spot. There's plenty of time to right the ship, but Gray says that's up to the team.

"I think we've got to all get on the same page," said Gray. "We need to focus a little more during game time and play with the kind of fire it takes to win. We've got to try to find a way to win games instead of finding a way to lose."

It certainly hasn't helped Midland High that four players have been missing over the last seven games, during which time the Lady Dawgs are 4-3. Seniors Rebecca Nobles and Jill Knottek and juniors Jenny Jones and Becky Valdez aren't with the team pending the results of an investigation into alleged violation of school rules which took place during the middle of December.

Should those players be suspended from school, it's almost certain they wouldn't return to the team before the end of the season, and Gray is preparing for such a circumstance.

"Our plans are to continue the season with the current roster and I don't see any change in the near future," Gray said.

BOYS: Bulldogs win

(From 1B)

5:15 of the third for a 31-29 lead.

At the third period buzzer, Oldham canned another three for a 44-37 margin.

"We've been down that many (11) before," Oldham said. "This team just seems to know its going to win no matter what happens."

Brewster said, "(MHS) tradition might have won this game. I was a little concerned early, but we pulled it out."

Randy Gardner, who scored 11 points and had six rebounds, said, "We were just more focused in the second half and played harder. We felt like this was a championship game since we still have to play Cooper at their place. We felt like this was for everything."

So, after the early woes were corrected and MHS regained the lead, Midland High did what Midland High does — give the ball to leading scorer Blake Johnston. Johnston scored 21 points, and 11 of them came in the fourth quarter when the Bulldogs buried Cooper. The 6-1 Johnston also contributed with eight rebounds.

Gardner was saddled with foul trouble most of the game, but Brewster came up big on the boards as did Tyler Shumskie off the bench with five rebounds.

Cooper's Carl Thompson led the Cougars with 17 points while Kyle Lay and Jonne Reynolds each had 10. But MHS countered with four players in double figures.

Cooper coach Dan Harris was not pleased with the result. When asked what was the difference between the first half of play and the second, his only reply was, "We just didn't play."

BULLDOG NOTES: The 42-game district winning streak is the longest in District 4-5A history. The winning streak covers parts of five seasons, three in 1996, 12 in 1997, 12 in 1998, 12 in 1999 and three this season. The streak is somewhat tainted in that MHS had to forfeit a win over Odessa Permian in 1998 for playing an ineligible player, but the Bulldogs did win that game on the court. It was one of those take-back wins. However, it turned out to be a key forfeit that season because it allowed Permian to make the state playoffs.

Rebel boys claim 1st district victory

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Midland Lee boys basketball team got its first district win with a 77-53 shellacking of Abilene High Friday night.

LEE

Midland Lee	77
Abilene High	53

Lee improves to 1-2 in District 4-5A and 10-12 overall.

"We needed that, especially going on the road and getting it," said Lee coach Jon House, adding that the Rebels had played well in recent games but had trouble closing with a victory. "This time we stuck a foot on their necks and finished it. We hadn't been doing that."

Lee's offensive approach left an eye-popping linescore: the Rebels slowed the ball down and scored only four points in the first quarter, then pressed the Eagles to death in the second quarter and scored 33 points. Lee led 37-28 at halftime and was able to coast the rest of the way.

"In the first quarter, we played really good defense; we just couldn't get anything going on offense," House said.

"In the second quarter, we decided to press when we saw their speed," said House, meaning that the Eagles weren't as fast as House expected them to be. Lee's press was effective, as the Rebels made 28 steals, and the Eagles' press wasn't effective.

"We were able to get behind them and knock down some shots," House said.

Abilene High girls defeat Lee, 64-63

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Midland Lee girls basketball team suffered a narrow loss after holding an early lead Friday night at Abilene High, as the home Lady Eagles escaped with a 64-63 victory.

LEE

Midland Lee	63
Abilene High	64

"We got within one with five seconds left, but it was their (AHS') possession and they killed it," Lee coach Elise Kail said. "It was a four- to six-point game the last three minutes. We came back and tied it up but they got back the lead."

"This was probably one of the best games we've had this season — except for losing," Kail said.

The Lady Rebels fell to 2-3 in District 4-5A play and 12-9 overall. Abilene High improved to 3-1 and 10-7.

"Free throws killed us," Kail said, referring to the Lady Rebels' 14-of-27 night from the line. One bright spot, Kail said, was a 12-point performance of Andrea Long. Adrianne Ross led the team with 16 points, and Shamera Bryson added 14.

Jacks break shootout streak with 9-8 victory

Staff Report

LAKE CHARLES, La. — The Odessa Jackalopes broke their recent shootout curse Friday night in the Bayou State, needing only four skaters to finish off the Ice Pirates 9-8 in a high-scoring game.

The Jacks played catch-up throughout the game, finally catching up when Jason Heywood's goal with 3:44 left tied the score at 8-8.

The Jacks hadn't had much luck in shootouts recently, going 2-for-their-last-20 shootout shots, even losing two straight shootout games. But on Friday, two of the Jacks' first three skaters scored (Paul Vincent and Jacque Rodrigue), and since Jacks' goalie Billy Pye had stymied the Ice Pirates in the shootout, Odessa's fourth skater Derek Laxdal was able to clinch the win without even going to a fifth skater.

The Ice Pirates took a 6-2 lead early in the second period with two goals by ex-Jack Jamie Dunn. The Jacks scored three straight goals — two by John Bossio — but still trailed 7-6 entering the third period.

Vincent's goal in the shootout let him tie a franchise record for points in one game. It was his fourth goal of the game, and his two assists gave him six points, tying the number that Sami Laine had in his five-goal game in December of 1997.

The Jacks travel north along the Texas-Louisiana border to play tonight in Shreveport.

Frerotte returns to Washington

By Joseph White
AP Sports Writer

LANDOVER, Md. — The moment has come for Gus Frerotte to start a playoff game before Washington Redskins fans. He just didn't expect to be wearing a Detroit uniform.

In a game between two teams starved for playoff success, the Redskins (10-6) and Lions (8-8) meet Saturday in the first round of the NFC playoffs.

"It's going to be strange walking out of the tunnel on the other side of the field," Frerotte said. "People who cheered for you for five years all of a sudden are going to be cheering against you. It's kind of crazy. I was saying to myself, you could never write a better script."

Just three years ago, Frerotte was the Redskins' quarterback of the future. The 1994 seventh-round draft choice won the job over No. 3 overall pick Heath Shuler and signed a four-year, $18 million contract in the summer of 1997.

Maybe it was the money, or maybe it was because he was no longer the underdog, but Frerotte then hit a plateau. He became more emotional, more sensitive to criticism when things went wrong, more hyper when things went right.

Then, in his next to last home start for the Redskins, Frerotte ran for a touchdown and celebrated by banging his head into the padded, concrete wall that rings the field.

He had to leave the game at halftime with a sprained neck. On Saturday, he expects fans to hang banners with big "Xs" on the wall, inviting him to do it again.

"They'll never forget, and I hope they never do," Frerotte said. "It's funny. I lived it. I went through it. Maybe it did hurt my career at Washington, maybe it didn't. People ask me about it. I just laugh and move on."

Frerotte lost his job to Trent Green last season, was cut at the end of the season and signed by the Lions to back up Charlie Batch. With Batch out with a broken thumb, Frerotte gained some closure to his Redskins' trials by leading the Lions to a 33-17 victory over his old team five weeks ago.

As it turns out, that was just Closure, Part I.

Batch re-injured his thumb last week, and the playoff schedule has Frerotte and the Lions in Washington, where Detroit has gone 0-17 since the Redskins moved there in 1935.

The Lions have lost four straight. They don't play well on the road, and Washington has won its last four home games. The Lions haven't won a playoff game in eight years, the Redskins in seven.

Now, Frerotte might be the Lions' best hope for victory — assuming he keeps his head on straight.

"Gus, in games that we've had him in, has been very calm," Detroit coach Bobby Ross said. "I have nothing but the highest praise for him in that area. I think there's a little difference in being what is considered to be the starter and the person who is not."

Frerotte said he feels less pressure in Detroit, but he admits this game is special. Not only is it a chance to prove his critics wrong once again, but it is also his audition day for teams around the league should he test the free-agent market next month.

"I'll be excited," Frerotte said. "But I don't think I'll be out of control."

Frerotte also needs to be on target because the Lions have the third-worst running game in the league. They've rushed for just 48 yards the last two games combined, and Ross has said he'll use fullback Cory Schlesinger at tailback to try to get something going.

The running game is also a concern for the Redskins. Stephen Davis, the NFC's leading rusher, hasn't played since spraining his left ankle Dec. 19 at Indianapolis. Davis practiced this week, but he won't be 100 percent.

Tennessee-Buffalo heads weekend list

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

For a wild-card game, this one's not bad, the Buffalo Bills (11-5) at the Tennessee Titans (13-3), the most combined wins in any wild-card game ever.

Except that Buffalo coach Wade Phillips did a strange thing on the way to this (excuse the expression) clash of the Titans — off one strong performance in a meaningless game, he elevated Rob Johnson to the starting quarterback role over Doug Flutie.

OK, Flutie didn't have the year he had last season. But he still managed to find a way to win. In the last game he played, he started slowly, then completed his last 12 passes to rally his team to a 13-10 overtime win in New England.

"My feeling is, with either one of them we can win," coach Wade Phillips said. "It was a tough decision."

It may turn out to be a tougher decision.

Johnson has talent. The Bills surrendered a No. 1 pick for him, then signed him to a $25 million five-year deal.

But Flutie has magic and magic is what's needed in the playoffs, particularly against a Tennessee team playing as well as any team in either conference entering the playoffs.

The Titans are favored by 4 1/2; the half-point was added after Johnson was named the Bills' starter. The last time they played against the Bills in the postseason, they were the Houston Oilers and blew a 35-3 lead at Buffalo.

■ Playoff Picks

Johnson will see a lot of Jevon Kearse. And with Flutie on the bench, the Titans won't blow any leads.

TITANS, 24-14

Detroit (plus 5 1/2) at Washington

On Dec. 5, the Lions beat the Redskins 33-17 to end an 18-game losing streak to Washington. They haven't won since and they haven't beaten the Redskins on the road since 1935, when the Skins played in Boston.

QB Gus Frerotte, who got his revenge against the Redskins in Pontiac, is back for the injured Charlie Batch. Washington has too much firepower, so exit one bedraggled 8-8 team.

REDSKINS, 31-13

Dallas (plus 7) at Minnesota

The Cowboys and their backers point to the game at the Metrodome on Nov. 8, when the Cowboys took a 17-0 lead as Emmitt Smith ripped through the porous Minnesota defense. Then Smith and Troy Aikman were hurt and the Vikings ended up winning 27-17.

But Minnesota has moved John Randle inside now.

And the Cowboys are still a 1-7 team on the road.

They'll compete, but ...

Miami (plus 3 1/2) at Seattle

There's drama here, but not much of it involves the game. Both teams stumbled into the playoffs, each losing five of six, the Seahawks only getting in when Kansas City's kicking game let it down and it lost to Oakland in overtime.

The drama is if this might be Dan Marino's last game.

The drama is if this might be Jimmy Johnson's last game.

It might, but ..

Carter says Vikings are just as dangerous

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — The Minnesota Vikings enter the playoffs as a wild card instead of a Super Bowl favorite, but Cris Carter insists they are just as dangerous as last year.

"I think a lot of teams are going to be a little ... not necessarily afraid, but they're going to be looking out for us, given the experience that we had last year," Carter said.

Last year is a sore subject among the Vikings.

The 1998 Vikings (15-1) didn't even get to the big game, losing to the Atlanta Falcons in the NFC championship at the Metrodome.

"I think it's been well documented," Carter said of the most disappointing loss in team history. "I think we were very upset. But besides that, I'm not going to elaborate on that much."

The Vikings (10-6) were 2-4 this season before Jeff George replaced Randall Cunningham at quarterback. They won their final three games after defensive lineman John Randle was moved back inside and Robert Tate bolstered a second-rate secondary.

But their 8-2 finish wasn't enough to defend their NFC Central title, won by Tampa Bay. The Buccaneers also earned a first-round bye, leaving the Vikings to face Dallas (8-8) Sunday in the wild-card round.

The Vikings are a remarkably healthy team, so it's not like they needed the rest. Besides, they'd just as soon not let any time off steal their momentum like last season, when they earned home field but never regained the magical touch of their stirring regular season.

"Last year, we were a little anxious to play," Carter said. "I think that the first divisional game against Arizona we were a little rusty because of the time off.

"I don't think we deserved the time off (this season). We lost six games. We're the fourth seed. But we're still in a good position because we're a dangerous team."

Carter said the burden of being the odds-on favorite was too much for the Vikings last season.

"It's tough to be 15-1 and get a bye," he said. "I think we're far more relaxed this year than we were last year because we were in territory we were not familiar with."

Dallas and Minnesota are the only NFC playoff teams that also made the postseason last year.

Smith, Mathis still uncertain

IRVING — Dallas Cowboys cornerbacks Kevin Smith and Kevin Mathis practiced for a third straight day Friday, but their availability for Sunday's playoff game in Minnesota remained uncertain.

Both Kevins last played together in Dallas' 27-17 loss to Minnesota on Nov. 8. Smith has missed the last two games and five of the last six with a strained right hamstring. Mathis has been out three weeks with a sprained left knee.

Smith would be the first option to start at left cornerback, then Mathis. If neither is available, Charlie Williams would start for the third straight week and the seventh time this season.

Galley said he was pleased with how the Cowboys (8-8) have worked this week.

BOYS: Cowboys look to stop Vikings' run

(From 1C)

explosive Vikings offense. To counter that, defenses gamble with blitzes and other high-risk tricks to make big plays of their own.

A runner like Smith can make teams pay for being too aggressive. If he gets past one tackler, it could be awhile before any others get near him.

"It's hard to double-team Moss and Carter when you have a healthy Robert Smith out there," safety Darren Woodson said. "We can't give up a safety to help out on the pass with him in the backfield."

The Cowboys understand the importance of stopping the run because they know what a difference it makes to their offense when Emmitt Smith breaks free. His 140 yards on 13 carries in the first half of the last Vikings game was the main reason Dallas led 17-0.

Since that game, the Cowboys have lost defensive end Greg Ellis to a broken leg but regained defensive tackle Leon Lett, whose eight-game suspension ended after the Minnesota game.

This season, Dallas tied Jacksonville for the sixth-best run defense in the NFL. The Cowboys allowed only seven teams to rush for more than 100 yards and only four players accomplished the feat.

SOCCER: Midland High beats Wichita Falls

(From 1B)

Herr each had two goals. Also scoring for the Lady Rebels were Ashleigh Decker, Kylie Yonts, Amy Britton and Amy Rankin.

The Lady Rebels take on San Antonio Clark, which advanced with wins over El Paso Irvin (7-0) and the Lee JV (5-1).

"Hopefully the weather clears up," said Simpson about today's competition. "If the weather clears up it should be a better match (against Clark) than what we had in all this slop."

Lee might be headed into today's play as the favorite after El Paso Franklin, a regional powerhouse for the past few years, got beat 2-0 by Amarillo High in the second round of the tournament. Last year, Franklin defeated Lee, 2-1, in the Lady Rebel Classic championship game.

"Well, we would've liked for Franklin to be right on top and get a chance to play them again and vindicate last year's loss. But we'll play whoever," Simpson said. "I absolutely like my chances for tomorrow."

Don't count out a Midland High-Midland Lee matchup in today's 3 p.m. championship game. Midland High faces Amarillo, which lost to the Lady Bulldogs in last year's third place game of the Lady Rebel Classic.

Midland High advanced with 7-0 win over Amarillo Tascosa in the morning game and a 3-2 shootout win over Killeen in the afternoon contest. Scoring for the Lady Bulldogs were: Jess Salgado (3), Megan Dozier, Sarah Tinslar, Kathleen Coleman, Risa Holland and D'Lynn Knous.

"This morning was kind of expected," said MHS coach Scott Hodkinson. "I didn't think Amarillo Tascosa would be up to our level so I just challenged the girls to work on the basics. I was really pleased with the way we were moving and shooting.

"This afternoon, the conditions were pretty poor to play a good style of soccer. They (Killeen) scored two fluky goals on us in the first half. I told the girls that we were dominating the game and it was just a matter of us sticking with it. I thought we'd win it in regulation but I'll take it."

The win over Killeen did not only mean a trip to today semi-finals but it also was the first shootout win in quite sometime for the Lady Bulldogs.

"That's the first shootout I've won in... I don't know, a long time," said Hodkinson with a satisfied smile on his face. "We didn't even make a shootout shot last year in the two times we went to a shootout last year, so we feel pretty good."

Amarillo should be a big test for Midland High as Hodkinson remembers the speed the Lady Sandies possessed last year.

"It's going to be a good game. I'm looking forward to it," said Hodkinson about today's game against Amarillo. "I just hope the weather cooperates."

Oh yes, the weather. The rare rainfall the Tall City received turned what are usually grassy playing fields at Hogan Park into mud ponds. The rain also created some havoc on Friday's play.

"It slows down the game and when its cold, it's hard to get height and distance on the ball. (The ball) doesn't have as much spring in it," Hodkinson said.

"Obviously it affected the touch on the ball," Simpson said. "We were scooting around and sliding around and doing all that stuff like everybody else. It sure takes away from the strategy part of the game. But everybody had to play in it so it was an equalizer."

The Bills, old hands at this playoff thing, should know better. They carry a quarterback controversy and a load of turmoil into the AFC wild-card game with the Titans on Saturday.

AFC: QB situation has Bills frustrated miserable going to work every day.''

Reed, of course, has complained loudly and often before. He also has put together a superb 15-year career and stands second to San Francisco's Jerry Rice in career receptions with 945.

Despite his outburst, Reed believes he still can offer leadership to Bills players who never have experienced a long postseason ride. The team has lost its last three playoff games.

''Hopefully, we're on a winning note next week!'' he wrote of Saturday's game here, where the Titans were 8-0. ''It's a 12-team tournament now. I think a lot of the young guys will be looking to Thurman, Bruce and myself, and I'm glad I can be looked to in that regard.''

Smith, the anchor of the league's stingiest defense, refused to question coach Wade Phillips' decision to go with Johnson.

''I think the most important thing that we need to get straight is we're in this business to win,'' Smith said. ''Wade Phillips is in this business to win; we as players are committed to win. Whatever it takes to win, that's what we're going to do.

''It's a good situation here. We have two quarterbacks that are able at any given time to come in and play and win ballgames for us.''

The Titans (13-3), whose nomadic existence ended this year with the opening of a stadium, had the best wild-card record in league history. They have been accepted in college football land so well that their season finale against Pittsburgh drew higher television ratings in Nashville than Tennessee's Fiesta Bowl loss to Nebraska.

It will be loud and intense on Saturday.

''We can't take it for granted just because we haven't lost a game in that stadium doesn't mean we're guaranteed a victory,'' Pro Bowl running back Eddie George said. ''We have to play with the same intensity and hopefully everything will come out in our favor.''

The Titans were the hottest of all playoff teams, winning their final four games. They swept Jacksonville, the only two losses the AFC Central winners had.

But it's also the first postseason appearance for most of Tennessee's key players, from rookie defensive end Jevon Kearse to George to quarterback Steve McNair.

''This is a great opportunity,'' McNair said. ''It's an opportunity for us to make a stance. We've been down 4-5 years. I think the people who've been through a lot, from the transition from Houston to here, deserve this. What better way to do it than to go out and win the first (playoff) game in Nashville?''

Woods takes lead at Mercedes Championships

Associated Press

KAPALUA, Hawaii — The flag-snapping trade winds were the least of anyone's worries Friday in the Mercedes Championship. The second round of the new season brought the same old problem — how to stop Tiger Woods.

There appears to be no solution.

Woods drove the green on two par-4s and made the Plantation Course at Kapalua look like a pitch-and-putt on his way to a 7-under 66 and what was looking like a runaway to his fifth consecutive PGA Tour victory.

Not since Ben Hogan in 1953 has anyone fired off five straight victories, and it took Hogan-like control on another blustery day in Maui for Woods to take such a commanding lead through 36 holes.

"I kept the ball low," Woods said. "I just tried to get the ball on the green and make some putts."

With birdies on five of the last seven holes, Woods finished two rounds on the wind-ravaged Plantation course at 9-under 137 and a four-stroke lead over Ernie Els.

"Some guys say, 'If I can just keep it around par ...' But he knows that under any conditions, he can shoot 64," Tim Herron said.

Els had a 3-under 70 and was at 141. Jesper Parnevik made another double bogey on No. 12 and finished with a 74, five shots back of Woods. Jeff Sluman had a 72 and was another stroke behind.

"Tiger ... this guy is on fire," Els said. "He's got all the talent in the world. What can you do? You've just got to stick to your guns. But he's got bigger guns that I have."

Midlanders develop software company for Bible studies

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

For those who are serious about Bible study and want to take it a specialized topical step at a time, Kingdom Bible Presentations may be the place to start.

Designed and developed by Midlanders Larry Adams and Doug Scott, Kingdom Bible Presentations presently has two topics developed — "Believer Rewards" and "Three Judgments of the End Times."

Adams said he and Scott, both members of Bellview Baptist Church, developed the study guides as a ministry to counteract the trivialization of the study of the Bible.

"Doug and I have for many years had Bible studies. We've taught, and I've done a little lay preaching, and the Holy Spirit just laid on my heart that I needed to go in this direction," Adams said. "I was an engineer with Chevron, a job I enjoyed, but my heart kept saying this was a direction I needed to go.

"We started the company because people are enjoying a lot of the entertainment

Bible can be studied online, with software

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

It could very well be that this is the century when American Christians get to know their Bibles.

As Christian factions come to know and to appreciate each other, one thing they have found in common is the need for more Bible study. Church-sponsored Bible classes appear to have spread across age and gender and philosophical lines, while many non-church goers have undertaken individual studies on their own.

Bible study has also, predictably, gone electronic. The Web provides the Bible in almost every translation available and an extensive list of references: scholarly commentaries, histories and concordances.

There are also Bible study shareware sites; most are free for the downloading. Computer owners who are not online can still use their computers for Bible study. Most computer stores in town have Bible software and Family Christian Stores stocks software for all levels — for those who may not be able to name the first book in the Bible on up to Bible scholars.

Darrell Schiel, manager of Family Christian Stores in Midland, said shoppers should consider what they're looking for.

"Anyone wanting Bible software can get a complete Bible reference such as the Logos for $429, which will include Greek and Hebrew texts, the interlinears, the concordances, and a variety of other references — well worth the price if you need all that.

"For example the Old Testament could run you about $80 for one single book," he said.

"But if you're just going to get

National magazine uses Texan's painting of Jesus

■ Texarkana woman's rendition is one of 60 published by National Catholic Reporter in issue titled "Jesus 2000."

By Greg Bischof
Associated Press

TEXARKANA — When a couple of Michelle Karam's friends asked her to paint an image of Jesus Christ, she had no idea her work would be viewed in 96 countries around the world.

"I squealed with joy and must have bounced around for 10 minutes," Ms. Karam said as she described her reaction when she discovered a photo of her portrait published in the Dec. 24 issue of National Catholic Reporter.

Last August, the NCR, an international news magazine, published a worldwide invitation for artists to submit their image of what Jesus Christ may look like for the upcoming millennium.

Of the 1,678 paintings, photo illustrations and computer art representations submitted from more than 1,000 artists from 19 different countries, Ms. Karam's ranked in the top 60 renditions chosen for publication in the magazine's issue titled "Jesus 2000."

Ms. Karam initially read an article about the worldwide solicitation in a Sunday news publication earlier this summer.

"At first I thought briefly about entering it, but then I thought 'I'm too busy to try.'"

However, when two friends from church asked her to paint an image of Christ, her interest in the contest rekindled.

"They wanted me to paint this for an unrelated event, but when I mentioned the contest, they told me the National Catholic Reporter was sponsoring it."

Ms. Karam decided to look up the publication on the Internet and find out more about contest rules and deadlines.

"I found out I had only about two weeks left to paint," she said.

For Ms. Karam, the journey toward finishing her depiction of Christ became blessed with a variety of input.

"A dear friend gave me the idea of painting a homeless man, standing in a rundown part of town," she said. "For his eyes, I used my husband's because he so often sees the good in others."

As the portrait began to take shape, Ms. Karam decided to start with her husband, Chris' Syrian features, since Christ was born in the Middle East, but for the nose she used more of the features of her older daughter, Erica.

"The nose started as Chris' but ended more like Erica's, since we are called to be like children (before God)," she said.

Ms. Karam also thought about having Christ hold a sign, while another friend suggested it should say, "I Am For You."

"His mouth and beard are from a priest friend, who I believe truly is an oracle of God and the baseball cap bears the Isaiah 53 inscription because the chapter describes Christ," she said. "A friend who knows Scripture well gave me the verse and she often confirms other parts of the image with Scripture."

Atop the cap rests a band of thorns suggested to her by several different people.

"But I only put the thorns there after a teen-age boy I know told me

Area teens usher in millennium with peers nationwide

DENVER — While millions around the world welcomed the millennium by sending fireworks skyward, a number of Permian Basin teens celebrated sending praises heavenward.

Youth Link 2000, Dec. 29-Jan. 1, joined more than 47,000 Southern Baptist teens together for three days of concerts, keynote speakers, praise and worship, at seven different sites around the nation.

Midnight Dec. 31, more than a dozen fountains were set off on the stage at a convention center and the teens proceeded to sing praise songs to the source of their faith.

"At the stroke of midnight, it was awesome to give it up to God and know that there weren't any problems. I think obsessed Y2K'ers were really disappointed," said Chelsea Clark, a freshman at Bowie Junior High School in Odessa.

"It got all the kids together and got us all linked up worshipping God instead of partying and drinking," said Andrew Washburn, a senior at Lee High School.

The links he referred to connected seven U.S. cities and the Holy City, Jerusalem. Via satellite, each of the sites was able to view featured events from the others on megascreens.

"It feels like I experienced God. It was better (than the other options for the new year)," said Beth Craighead, a Bonham Junior High School seventh-grader.

Crestview and Bellview Baptist churches in Midland and Second Baptist Church of Odessa all sent groups to the event that had been planned for more than a decade. More than 2,500 students were at the Denver site.

The other cities were Anaheim, Calif.; Tampa Bay, Fla.; Philadelphia; Houston; Atlanta and St. Louis.

"I would hope first of all that this helped them determine where their focus was. They were oblivious to what was happening outside. It was a chance to focus on the Creator, beyond what they can see," said Randy Duckett, the youth pastor at Second Baptist Church. "Some of them left with fears and uncertainties. Hopefully it challenged their world view and changed the way they see things that happen around the world."

The schedule included mission emphases, concerts and speakers. Youth communicators like Josh McDowell captivated the audience's attention almost as much as Christian bands Audio Adrenaline, Smalltown Poets, and Geoff Moore. Rebecca St. James and Out of Eden also performed in the mix.

During the Audio Adrenaline concert, Chris Hurt, a Lee junior, got a little more than he had expected when he was pulled up on stage. He owed the privilege to Kelli Howard, a Lee senior who came with Bellview.

"They pulled me up and stage and I pointed at Chris because he knew all the words to the verses," Miss Howard said.

"I kept backing away thinking he was going to give the mike to the next person, but he kept pulling me back," Hurt said.

Hurt alternated phrases with the lead singer throughout the final song of the concert, fulfilling one of his lifelong dreams of singing at a premiere concert. Lee juniors John Mason and Matt Norris had been pulled up on stage earlier in the concert.

"I liked the conference because we got to meet with people from farther away. Most of the people we do things with are from around here. I had a friend from Wyoming who I saw up there," said Miss Howard.

"My favorite part was when we did roll call to all the sites," Katy Harrison, a sophomore at Lee, said. "We could look at what

Some teachers give lessons in life

The prevailing disrespect for teachers, teachers' aides and school counselors make most good works overlooked.

In addition to the academic knowledge with which teachers enrich children, they also teach important life lessons. Sometimes the life lesson are unstructured, and the influence they may have in children's lives may never be known. This is the case of a teacher who touched my soul and, to some extent, the way I treat my parents.

Kituku

Patrick Mutua, my fifth-grade history teacher, came to class one day in 1970, and instead of teaching history, he taught us life. This particular day Mutua did not sit on the teacher's chair or stand in front of the classroom. He sat on one of the desks, faced the class and in a sober voice narrated a story of a young man who was disrespectful to his mother.

While this man was in school, his poor parents sold their possessions to educate him. In Kenya, parents used to pay tuition for elementary school (seven years) and high school (six years). Thousands of pupils dropped out of school annually and became maids, house boys or got hired to cultivate other people's gardens. The pay for these kind of jobs was pathetic — a whole month's salary could not pay for a pair of jeans. Those who successfully completed a high school education could get trained for professional careers.

Parents did whatever they could do to educate their children. When parents sold their land or cattle, they expected the older children to held educate their siblings, cater for the parents' livelihood and help buy other land.

However, this young man, when he finished school, was employed in Nairobi, the capital of Kenya, and married. He got used to city life and with time stopped visiting his parents and writing letters to them. The parents sent other relatives from time to time to find out what was happening to their son. Their concern intensified when they heard their son's family had a baby, but they were not invited to bless the baby according to tradition. Another baby was born, and again they were not informed or invited.

The mother, who had never been to the city before, asked a relative to take her to see her son. She arrived in the morning when her son was at work, but his wife was home with her two children. The relative left to go to his job immediately after he showed her where her son lived. The daughter in-law opened the door and after brief greeting, gave her mother-in-law a chair to sit outside. She sat there for hours without food, water or someone to talk to.

When her son came from work, he visited with her briefly, and informed her that it was a family policy to keep people from bringing rural dust, with their shoeless feet, to their cemented floor. It was also a precautionary measure of preventing their children from transmittable diseases.

Mutua cried at this point and most of us cried. When he stopped crying, he said, "Pupils, no matter who you become, no matter what job you get and no matter where you live, never forget that if it were not for your parents, you would probably never have those things. I don't know what life that man will have with his family, but I know he will never have peace unless he apologizes to his parents and lives as expected."

Mutua spanked me more than any other teacher; he always expected more from me. He drowned in a river about 300 yards from my home in 1986. His words echo in my mind whenever I see a teacher.

My fifth-grade teacher's words prompted me to cultivate a relationship with my parents and teachers that is not based on how they treated me. Before marrying, I informed my wife-to-be that my relationship with my parents and her parents was important to me. She also valued these relationships. We have been blessed.

Author shows there's market for Christian fiction

By Debra Lester
N.Y. Times News Service

Frank Peretti is not sure what his duties are as the father of a literary genre, the Christian thriller.

"They call me the father of the genre. What does that mean?"

It may mean that Peretti, a former Pentecostal preacher, has novels that have sold more than 8 million copies. "The Oath," published in 1995, sold more than half a million hardcover copies within the first six months of release.

But most likely it's because Peretti showed publishers there is a market for Christian fiction. His most recent novel, "The Visitation," was published in August.

Peretti was a co-pastor with his father at an Assemblies of God church when he had the idea to write a Christian novel. He shelved the notion. He was having difficulties with his ministry and, in 1983, he left the pastorate, a victim of burnout.

He went to work in a ski factory, but didn't forget his idea. He wrote the spiritual warfare novel, "This Present Darkness." It was published in 1986 and, three years later, Peretti was able to quit his factory job and write full time. "Piercing the Darkness" was published in 1989, "Prophet" in 1992 and "The Oath" in 1995. He also found time to write eight books for upper grade school and junior high age students, "The Cooper Kids Adventure Series."

"The Visitation," Peretti admits, "is somewhat autobiographical, it's more a reflection of what's going on in my own heart. It made the book more difficult to write. I had to write from the heart, write what happened."

But he said the banjo-playing-former-Pentecostal-pastor character Travis Jordan isn't a self-portrait of banjo-playing-former-Pentecostal-pastor author Peretti. He insists Jordan is drawn from his experiences and composites of people he's known.

"The Visitation," published by Thomas Nelson, has a different format from Peretti's other books.

"It's still a building-suspense type of story, but it's written in the first person and more than any of the other books it depends on the characters. More than what's going on outside, it's what's inside the main character," Peretti said.

(From 1C)

part of Christianity nowadays, and we feel that's a deception — that Satan's getting us away from the true study of the Bible.

"We prayed about it a lot, and the Holy Spirit filled me and said, 'Larry, this is where I want you to move your life.'"

Adams said he and Scott tried to make the study guides as accessible as possible, with animation and narration to enhance the ease of learning.

Although the program was designed using Microsoft's Power Point, the partners obtained a license from Microsoft to enable them to market it to users who don't have Power Point.

"We've tried to make it simple to navigate," said Adams. "There are some very complicated Bible programs, and you have to have a certain level of computer knowledge to run them. We tried to make this easy for the person with minimal computer expertise."

The program may be easy, but he said that despite the description of the software, it is not a beginner's Bible study, especially for those unfamiliar with Baptist perspectives and language. It is a very specialized program, with little room for speculation or independent thought, Adams said.

The description of "Believer Rewards" is: "Do you know the five rewards waiting for the believers in Jesus Christ? This is an in-depth study that discusses not only the rewards but also the qualifications required to receive them. A must study for distinguishing between salvation by grace and God's rewards for the works of a Christian."

"Three Judgments of the End Times" is described as an "exciting Scripture-packed study (that) provides information about the Judgment Seat of Christ, the Judgment of the Nations at the second coming of Christ, and the Great White Throne Judgment. Discover who will attend each judgment, when and where they will occur, and the results of each judgment. This study is a must for understanding God's judgments in our future."

Adams and Scott, while making no bones about where they're coming from, nevertheless say that the study guides can be of help to a broad range of students of the Bible.

The partners give demonstrations whenever asked, and are at work designing training aids for clergy and Sunday school teachers, as well as other Bible study guides.

"We did a survey and found that there was nothing similar to these topical Bible studies on computer," said Adams. "You could buy all types of books, but more and more people are going to the computer.

"Monetarily we have to survive, but our company's goal is to get the Bible teaching out, and to follow the Great Commission. This is really our ministry, and we're doing what we've been told to do."

"Believer Rewards" and "Three Judgments of the End Times" are available at local Christian book stores and through Adams' and Scott's Web site, www.kingdombible.com. They are $19.95 each.

software for Bible-study purposes without delving into the languages, it wouldn't pay you to buy this. You could go for something like the $64 Bible Reference beginner edition and it would be sufficient. Because most of these are expandable, and you could go back and say there's two more items you wanted to purchase, you could do that without spending $429."

He said shoppers should research Bible software programs before making a purchase.

"If this is the year you're going to learn the Bible, talk to people who have software, and if they don't know anyone, come in here and talk to us.

"Also, start simple. I always hold the view to start as simple as possible and spend cautiously, and not get into something they can't use. The minimum you're going to pay for a good Bible study software is probably about $50 to $60," he said.

"Logos is one of the most user-friendly software companies out there. PC Study Bible, I would give it an average rating. And some of the other companies are somewhat difficult. ..."

Family Christian Stores allows customers to return software bought at the store that turns out to be a bad choice.

"I realize this is unusual, but we trust our customers to do the right thing," Schiel said. "We also will work with people who need help with software they've bought here. And if we can't help, we'll get the company support people on the phone for them and let them try to help. We're always flexible."

Schiel said he thinks that as people get more and more comfortable with computers, software will gradually claim a larger share of the Bible study market.

"Some of the traditional publishers of Bibles and references are now getting into software. Zondervan and Thomas Nelson have come out with software packages. Nelson uses the Logos driver for their software. This is a growing department, but there are still plenty of traditionalists who like the smell and feel of books."

they were really needed," Ms. Karam said.

She said Christ's nail-pierced hands, which appear in the portrait, were inspired by a spiritual doctor friend "who must touch to heal people."

As for including some of herself in the portrait, Ms. Karam said the Christ's hair and ears are hers.

"The hair and ears are mine showing that I struggle to hear God tell me what to do next," she said. "Also a friend told me I needed to give Jesus my hair because it's something female and he's part of all of us."

Ms. Karam managed to work in the rest of Christ's body after she asked her father to pose for her, while a friend suggested placing the words Carpe Diem on the image's shirt.

"My friend reminded me that even if we've passed him by a thousand times, we can still seize the day and stop now," Ms. Karam said. "His legs resemble those of a friend I know who runs every day with perseverance."

As for the painting's background scenery, Ms. Karam said she rode through Texarkana, prayerfully looking for the perfect place to photograph for inspiration. She finally chose a scene on Lelia Street, placing her rendition of Christ standing before a narrow road near a stop sign and a one way street sign-symbolizing one's need to stop and accept Christ as personal savior and the only one true way to God.

Ms. Karam finally finished the portrait, photographed it and sent it to Kansas City, Mo., just in time for the contest entry deadline.

She thereafter periodically checked the Internet to find that winners would be announced in the Dec. 24 issue of NCR.

NCR mailed her a copy, which she said she eagerly flipped through just on the outside chance that her entry was listed and published. It was.

"I don't think my kids have ever seen me more excited than I was that day," she said. "Just as Christ's hand is out for us, as if he were the homeless man, unless we give him ourselves completely, we can't fully follow him. I realized I was just a brush and I had the honor of being a paintbrush for God."

God can do and see that he wasn't going to destroy our world. With that many people, it symbolized that I didn't have to be out at a party on New Years' Eve. Instead, I could be celebrating the glory of God with other Christians around the world. I thought it was great."

While some would think that this event was only for the "super-spiritual," Miss Harrison disagreed.

"Some people didn't get fully intact with God on the trip, but they could still enjoy the concerts."

"We were just there to celebrate God and the turning of the century and to have fun," Miss Howard said.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 8, 2000:

Make the most of opportunities that could impact your finances this year. However, taking risks is an absolute no-no. A child could be contrary at times. Stay even-tempered. Avoid being overly demanding. Creativity could run dry. When this occurs, rely on your imagination. Though you can be hypersensitive, you also have an unusual well of ingenuity. If you are single, romance might be difficult in its beginning stages. Use discretion with someone who is emotionally unavailable. If attached, be open. Express your vulnerabilities. Take time to get reacquainted and recharge your relationship. AQUARIUS presents interesting money options.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Fatigue pressures decisions concerning money and friendship. Pull back some. Reevaluate your options. Reach out for others at a distance. You can cover a lot of ground on the phone. New beginnings are possible, if you approach choices from a different direction.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Accept the limelight. Someone you put on a pedestal inspires you. The only person who can stop you is you. Quell inner dialogue. Do what makes you happy. A partner urges you on, and really has your best interests at heart. Listen, and don't try to play devil's advocate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Your judgment could prevent you from totally enjoying yourself. Detach and take an overview. You might not appreciate another's feedback, but he has good intentions. Take off, go to the movies and let go of routine. If single, you'll relish being a social butterfly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Let others make the call. You might not be able to do everything you want to do, or so you think at first! Enlist a partner in a project. Build togetherness and clear out additional errands. Make a decision together about your day-to-day life. Be willing to try another way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Another could be tough on you. Consider the different ways you could respond. Move on. Share a favorite hobby with a loved one. Get together with friends for a common pastime or a group commitment. Good times happen. Your feelings intensify about a loved one.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★ Plans change, and you could choose to be upset. Take it easy instead. Use your spare time to recycle and handle some basics at home. You might have been putting off errands because of the holidays. Now is the time to get them done. You'll have a better time close to home than you expected.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ A partner or associate comes down on you. Let go of this problem. You know full well that you cannot change this person. Focus on what works in your life, not what doesn't. Discuss problems with an eye to unusual and dynamic resolutions. A loved one demonstrates his caring.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Examine what is important in your domestic life. Don't jump to conclusions. Understand what makes a partner difficult. Your overtures may not help. Try discussing something personally meaningful to another. He will naturally open up. Others express caring very differently than you do. Understand that.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Slow down if you want to. Remember, this is your day off. Your natural people skills draw others to you. Encourage others to be candid. Charisma draws others to you. You clearly have a lot of friends. Help others by being open to who they are. Visit and catch up with news.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ You are pressed way beyond your limits. Finances could be a hot topic of discussion. Refuse to take a risk. Before you spout off, evaluate your feelings carefully. You could change your opinions when you detach. You are very sensitive presently and could overreact.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Your personality helps ease a difficult situation that feels uncomfortable. Be sure of yourself when dealing with others. Give friends the benefit of the doubt. Another comes through for you in a big way. Pace yourself. Be realistic about your expectations. Join friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Take a deep breath and relax. You might need some time off to curl up with a good book and take care of yourself. A boss or parent makes a request you might like to fulfill. You are clearly overwhelmed by all of the socializing and the season. Say no if you need to.

Washington discovered talent after prophecy

NEW YORK — Denzel Washington says he owes his success to a prophecy.

When he was a 20-year-old college dropout, he was in his mother's beauty shop one day and a woman wrote on a piece of paper, "This boy is going to speak to millions of people."

The fateful meeting came in time to persuade Washington to give college another try — and to discover his acting talent.

"Why didn't I meet her a year ago before I got kicked out of school?" Washington asked in an interview airing Sunday on CBS's "60 Minutes."

He still has the prophetic piece of paper handed to him 25 years ago. "I keep it with me all the time," he said.

ATLANTA — Phil Collins, Christina Aguilera, Enrique Iglesias and Toni Braxton will top the halftime lineup in the Super Bowl, the National Football League announced Friday.

The show, titled "Tapestry of Nations," will feature an 80-member orchestra, puppets, a choir and special fireworks.

The NFL also announced that Madonna will join the pregame show and introduce her new single, a rendition of Don MacLean's classic "American Pie."

The Jan. 30 game at Atlanta's Georgia Dome will be aired on ABC.

NEW YORK — Donna Hanover, wife of Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and part-time actress, has landed another soap opera role.

Ms. Hanover recently signed with ABC's "One Life to Live" to play a cancer specialist in several episodes. Her first appearance is scheduled for Jan. 18.

"I've consulted several friends in the medical world who've advised me on how to give my character, Dr. Hanson, as much realism as possible," Ms. Hanover said through a spokeswoman Thursday.

Ms. Hanover will juggle the role with her duties as host of her own show on the Food Channel and as a correspondent on the local Fox affiliate.

Her previous soap opera credits include roles on "Another World," "All My Children," and "Guiding Light," on which the mayor had a small cameo.

DENVER — Denver Broncos coach Mike Shanahan doesn't want any credit for his help with "Any Given Sunday," Oliver Stone's take on professional football.

About all he liked was Al Pacino's portrayal of a coach. Pacino prepared for the role by studying under Shanahan.

"I think he's great, but the movie was horrible," Shanahan said Wednesday. "I just didn't like it. I liked him, though. He is such a great actor."

When the Broncos played Dallas in 1998, Pacino went to team meetings, watched Shanahan script plays and spent time on the sidelines as Denver whipped the Cowboys 42-23.

"We had him with the headsets on," Shanahan said. "And if you remember, we had five possessions in the first half and five touchdowns. And I keep pleading with him to come back to every game because this had never happened before."

BATESVILLE, Ga. — Ted Turner has bought a tract of land in northern Georgia as a trout-fishing retreat for his family.

Turner paid $3.5 million for 90 acres of land near Batesville, about an hour north of Atlanta.

"It's kind of neat to come back to our home state and have a place to trout fish on weekends within driving distance of Atlanta," Turner's son, Beau, who handles his father's land purchases, told The Northeast Georgian weekly newspaper.

The addition to Turner's holdings is modest compared to the $9 million, 35,350-acre ranch he bought last month in Kansas. Turner owns more than 1 million acres of ranch property, mostly in the West.

LOS ANGELES — Jay Leno, who pulled a switch to light up the Hollywood sign during L.A.'s millennial celebration, says Tinseltown's big moment was a flop.

The New Year's Eve finale that lit the sign with neon-colored strobe lights was "ridiculous," the NBC "Tonight Show" host said during Monday's show.

"What did we have?" Leno asked the audience. "Ten floodlights from Home Depot ... I've seen bug zappers do better shows."

Leno gave a parody re-creation by training two flashlights on a small model of the sign.

"New Year's Eve is ancient history at this point," Deputy Mayor Noelia Rodriguez responded Thursday. "Let's move on."

2000 Ford Ranger Pickup

Wide open space:

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Mass customization is the battle cry at Ford for the 2000 model year. Further cementing its stranglehold on the still growing truck market, the folks at the blue oval are giving its workhorse Ranger pickup a decidedly youthful appeal. Several optional equipment packages expand the usefulness, utility and desirability of this compact truck including: Sport Appearance ($395- $495), Off-Road ($395) and new this year, Trailhead ($1,595).

The optional Trailhead package is available with the two-wheel drive model and is designed to give the truck the same tough look of its 4x4 cousin. A Torsion bar suspension, front tow hooks, fog lamps, electric AM/FM/CD sound system, tachometer, "Trailhead" decal, P245/75R16SL OWL A/T tires and five-spoke cast aluminum wheels round out the equipment package.

Built at the automaker's plants in Edison, N.J., St. Paul, Minn., and Louisville, Ky., the Ranger is available in regular or SuperCab, short or long bed, two- or four-wheel drive configurations and XL or XLT trim levels. Transmission offerings are the standard five-speed manual; four-speed automatic with overdrive ($1,095); or five-speed automatic with overdrive ($1,145).

Engine choices range from the standard 2.5L four-cylinder, 3.0L six-cylinder or 4.0L six-cylinder. The 3.0L engine, which is the standard powerplant for the four-wheel drive models, is designed to burn 100 percent regular unleaded gasoline, ethanol 'E85) or any combination of the two.

Consumers looking to improve the versatility and utility of the SuperCab models have not been ignored by the automaker. A four-door option, which includes two additional rear-hinged doors, is available at $575 for the XL and $695 for the XLT. On the road, the Ranger, equipped with the 3.0L six-cylinder and bolted to the optional four-speed automatic with overdrive, drives well. The driver enjoys a commanding view of the road with good displays and controls. The compact pickup is very easy to handle. A comfortable 60/40 split bench seat is complimented by an armrest with interior storage. Well supported, floor mounted cupholders will hold just about any type of drink firmly.

By the numbers

Engine performance numbers for the Ranger are as follow: 2.5L four-cylinder - 119 hp at 5,000 rpm and 146 lb/ft of torque at 3,000 rpm; 3.0L FFV six-cylinder - 150 hp at 4,750 rpm and 190 lb/ft of torque at 3,650 rpm; 4.0L six-cylinder - 160 hp at 4,200 rpm and 225 lb/ft of torque at 2,750 rpm.

EPA fuel economy ranges from 22 city/27 highway for the two-wheel drive/four-cylinder/manual to 15 city/19 highway for the four-wheel drive/4.0L six-cylinder/automatic using regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are generally accessible and clearly marked. Properly equipped, the Ford Ranger has a maximum payload of 1,260 pounds and can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 6,060 lbs.

Standard safety equipment includes: dual front airbags, side-impact door beam protection and standard rear-wheel anti-lock brakes. Optional safety equipment available adds: limited slip differential (two-wheel drive) $295 and four-wheel anti-lock brakes (XL) $300.

The Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the 2000 Ford Ranger pickup starts at $11,485 for the base regular cab, two-wheel drive model up to $19,690 for the top-of-the-line XLT SuperCab four-wheel drive. Destination charge adds $535. Dealers report ample supplies of this pickup and Ford is offering $500 in customer cash set to expire on January 15th.
