Army Arsenal In Virginia Explodes

LIGHTNING IS BLAMED, FIRE MENACES MANY

Billion Rounds of Small Arms Ammunition Put In Danger

BROUGHT TO CONTROL

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 18.—(AP)—A magazine said to contain a billion rounds of small arms ammunition exploded at the army ammunition depot at Pig Point, on the James river, 15 miles from Portsmouth, tonight at 7:10 o'clock. Nobody was killed or injured, a hasty check was said, to have shown, the chief damage being to the magazine, which was destroyed. Fire apparatus from Portsmouth aided the depot garrison in fighting the flames.

An hour after the explosion the firre was believed to be under control. Members of the families of civilian employes at the depot were rushed out of the danger zone and the garrison was prepared to desert the station if the flames threatened to spread to nearby magazines.

Blamed on Lightning.

The explosion, like that at Lake Denmark, N. J., a few weeks ago, was blamed on lightning, although the blast did not occur until several hours after an electric storm had passed over the depot. the Theory was that the lightning had set a slow fire. The fact that practically the entire personnel of the depot was attending the nightly exhibition of moving pictures and were thus drawn away from the danger zone, was responsible for the absence of any casualties.

The magazine was known as number I-11 in the center of district four and that no other magazines were involved was considered a piece of good fortune.

Apparently only the top layer of ammunition in the magazine exploded but that beneath it was set on fire.

Moody's Youth Is Main Advantage, Ferguson Admits

AUSTIN, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Remarkable encouragement has been given Governor Miriam A. Ferguson in her campaign in the second democratic primary during the past four days, former Governor James E. Ferguson told the Associated Press Wednesday. He said Ferguson supporters now realize that the opposition to Attorney General Dan Moody for governor was in the majority and that there is a chance for the governor.

Stating that he was feeling fine and had rested up from the first campaign, the former governor explained that he lost five pounds in weight in the first part of the campaign and though he regained it before the campaign ended he said, "I was surely tired."

In a reminiscent mood, the governor said, "Youth is a wonderful thing. That is Moody's advantage over us now. In time everybody gets his. We have to admit age. When I first ran for governor in 1914 against Tom Ball, I spoke four times a day and the four speeches did not tire me as much as one speech did during the recent campaign. There was as much difference between the ages of Tom Dull and me as there is between the ages of Moody and me now. Then Tom Ball was the old man and I was the youngster at 43. Now the situation is reversed."

The former governor said he was a giant in strength when he first entered politics and that he had a strong constitution then.

"Our friends have been giving the governor remarkable encouragement during the past four days," the former governor said. "At first they seemed to forget that in the second primary the slate is wiped clean and we begin all over again. They realize that the majority of the votes were cast against Attorney General Dan Moody and that the majority then does not want him, and they see a good chance for the governor in the second primary. Th vote shows that the opposition to Moody was greater than his support. That is a fact that the opposition doubtless has overlooked."

"Hon. Steve Pinckney,
"Moody headquarters,
"Austin, Texas.

"We of the unterrified democracy of El Paso county have noticed the hot air emanating from Austin, Beaumont, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, Waco, San Antonio, Galveston and Wichita Falls as to the character of political patriotism of their voting public.

"Votes are what count and we don't give an elephant Butte dam what claims these and other hamlets of the Lone Star state make at this time in view of the fact that we are prepared to make good at the polls, and do our part to make the run-off a walk-off for Moody.

"El Paso challenges all Texas cities, incorporated villages and towns, all organized and unorganized counties from Texline to Brownsville, from the Red river to the gulf, from the Sabine river west of the silvery Rio Grande to a contest to determine which is our state's most progressive community, proof thereof to be the percentage of votes cast for Dan Moody."

Declares Ferguson Makes Contradictory Reports On Education

RAPS APPORTIONMENT

AUSTIN, Aug. 18.—(AP)—James E. Ferguson "cannot in one breath boast of reductions in appropriations and in the ad valorem tax rate," and at the same time disclaim responsibility for setting the per capita scholastic apportionment at the low figure of $11.50, Attorney General Dan Moody said Wednesday.

He replied to Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson's statement denying that she "deliberately urged the reduction of the state school apportionment to $11.50 per capita." She said the state board of education had fixed the apportionment as high as revenues would permit.

"To make certain that the school children are protected from the threatened injury by reason of Mr. Ferguson's conduct of public affairs, an emergency appropriation should be made from the general revenue fund to supplement the available school fund," Moody said. Under the per capita apportionment of $11.50, he said, many schools during the 1926-27 season will be able to run for only three or four months.

Moody's Statement.

Armed Posses In Search For Boys In Colo. Canyon

Pueblo Campers Leave Cottages and Flee to Safety Until Young Fugitives Are Caught.

PUEBLO, Colo., Aug. 18.—(AP)—Sheriff Sam Thomas today appealed to the commanding officer of battery C, Colorado national guard, for equipment and men to fire tear bombs into a narrow canyon near Rye, Colo., where Forest Gonce, 18, and his brother, Leslie, 14, are believed to have taken refuge following a daring robbery of a Y. M. C. A. camp yesterday and subsequent pursuit of an armed posse.

Emulating the notorious James boys, the pair, fugitives from Colorado penal institutions recently shot their way to freedom after having been arrested for holding up a filling station at Garden City, Kan. Swinging into Colorado they appeared on the outskirts of Pueblo where they held up and robbed two deputy sheriffs, stealing their car and setting the officers afoot. A posse immediately was sent in pursuit, but the youths succeeded in eluding capture. Their next appearance was last night when they lined the campers up and relieved them of money and valuables at the point of guns.

Depredations of the "baby bandits" have terrorized the residents of Rye, a summer resort, to such an extent that many are closing their cottages and returning to Pueblo until the fugitives have been captured.

Sheriff Thomas has been on their trail with 50 men since Sunday. In appealing for tear gas bombs, he stated that he expected a pitched battle when they were surrounded and due to their age, wanted to take them alive.

The mother of the two arrived here yesterday from Garden City and is aiding in the search.

READ THIS FIRST:

Merry Locke, pretty and gay as her nickname, has been a flirt all her life. Even during her high school days, she was "boy crazy," to quote Moms, her mother.

Then after high school, she fails in her business course. Her father dies, and she gets the first job that comes along. The job of assistant in Lillie Dale's beauty shop. Moms takes a roomer into the house to help make both ends meet.

About this time Merry has the first real love affair of her life. She falls deeply and sincerely in love with Anthony Gaines, a sober-minded young lawyer who wants to marry her. But Merry is afraid her feeling for him won't last. Her love affairs never have lasted, so she says. And so she and Tony decide to wait six months before they marry.

Then one night, when Tony breaks an engagement with her, Merry, hurt and angry, lets Derrick Jones, ho lives next door, make love to her as he often had before she met Tony. Then she goes out with Bill Erskine, a friend of Morley Kaufman, for whom her sister Cassie works. When Tony hears about this he shuts up his office and goes to Montana to practice law with old Judge Bannerman, a friend of his dead father. A letter comes from him, but it is lost around the house before Merry has a chance to read it. She puts Tony out of her mind, gradually.

Her oldest sister, Helen, marries. Then Cassie marries the wealthy Morley Kaufman. Jinny, the youngest of the four sisters, takes Derrick Jones away from Merry, and Merry feels very much deserted and "on the shelf."

When Bill Erskine comes back into her life, she welcomes him eagerly. He sends her presents, comes to see her whenever he comes to town, tells her he loves her, but never asks her to marry him. Still, Merry feels sure that she can marry him whenever she puts her mind to it.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXV

It became a habit with Bill Erskine to send presents to Merry every week or two while he was on the road.

"I am mailing you something that will set off those green eyes of yours, Little Sweetheart," he would write. And perhaps the next night when Merry came home from Lillie's beauty shop she would find a green chiffon scarf done up in a box from some distant and expensive shop, waiting for her on the table.

Almost always the things that he sent her were perishable things. A kind of perfume that came in a black glass bottle and cost $15 an ounce; French powder that was just the pearly tint of her skin; five-pound boxes of candied fruits that Merry always gave to Moms.

"Real lace, upon my word!" Moms said, examining it closely with her reading glass. "He didn't pick that up for 10 cents!"

"Have it made into a hat," Bill wrote. "There's nothing that makes more of a bit with me than a blond girl in a black lace hat."

Moms grunted when she read that part of his letter.

"Humph!" said she, "I never put much stock in that sort of a man, let me tell you." She set her lips and gave her head a vigorous shake.

"What sort of a man?" Merry asked her.

"Why, the kind that knows all about a woman's clothes!" her mother explained in her tart way. "The kind of a man who's made a study of women and knows that what he likes is a blond in a black hat! A decent man never knows what a woman has on Your father liked me just as well in a calico apron as he did in my best Sunday go-to-meeting dress! He never knew the difference, I guess."

Now that Dad was dead and gone, nothing but praise of him fell from she forgot all her husband's shortcom- Moms' thin lips. Like all widows, ings and remebered only the lovable and fine things about him.

Merry thought it was a pity Dad had had to die before Moms could appreciate him.

"Another thing about this Erskine," Moms went on, frowning down at the black lace scarf, "he has no business sendings you things like this. No man should buy a woman's clothes for her until he's married to her—"

"But this is only a lace scarf," Merry broke in.

Moms gave her head another quick shake. "It's a hat" she said sharply, "and there's no getting around it! You send it back to him. Do you hear?"

Merry didn't answer her.

But the next morning she took the lace to the milliner on Gower street and had it made into a wide-brimmed hat lined with silver gauze.

That night she sat down in her own room and wrote to Bill to tell him about it.

"She's going to charge me $10 to make it for me," she wrote. "That's for you when you come, no matter what it costs me."

Bill's next letter had a $10 bill in it.

"I hate like the dickens to take it from you," she wrote back to him, but what can I do? You like me to look well when I'm with you, and I can't look so terribly stunning in the kind of clothes I can afford. And anyway, I know that you enjoy sending me things. I'm sure it gives you as much pleasure as it does me when I get them. Isn't that so?"

Bill wrote that that surely was so!

"I can't see you, myself, half as often as I'd like to," his letter read. "All I can do to pass the time away, while I'm on these trips, is to go out and buy something for my little sweetheart, and imagine how her eyes dance when she opens the packages. Are you being a good Little Sister while I'm gone, and staying at home nights and leaving all the boy friends alone?"

And so they drifted into an "understanding." Merry never went out at night, except with Moms while Bill was away. She didn't know whether she was engaged to him or not.

"I'm not in love with him. Not a little bit," she told herself, "that's certain."

It Was The First Real Orchid She Had Ever Had In Her Life . . .

But so far as that went she wasn't in love with anyone else, either. And so she was content to let things slide.

One cold, starry night shortly before Christmas, Cassie telephoned her just as she was going out of the door of the beauty shop.

"Morley's going to stay downtown for dinner with some men," she said in her high voice, "and Muriel is coming over here to have dinner with me. Why don't you come, too? We can have some three-hand bridge."

Merry went.

It was the first time Cassie had asked her to the new flat in Cortelyou street.

Even Moms had been invited to it only once. For Morley Kaufman showed no more desire to know Cassie's family now that he had married her than he had before.

He made it clear that he had married her and not her family. Merry decided that he was an unbearable snob and a "high hatter."

But there was nothing of the snob about Muriel, his young sister. She was far more natural and simple in her ways than Cassie.

Tonight as Merry ran up the stairs of the Cortelyou street apartment, Muriel opened the door of Cassie's suite and came out on the landing to meet her. She had seen her only once before, on the day of Cassie's wedding. But she greeted her like an old friend.

"Hello, there!" she called over the banister. "We thought you were never coming. It took you ages to get here!"

She slipped her arm around Merry's slender waist, and together they went into the hallway of the flat. Cassie, looking like Tennyson's "daughter of a hundred earls," in a new black satin dress with a cloth-of-gold collar, came out from the living room.

In the room behind her, Merry caught a glimpse of a crackling wood-fire of fresh pink roses reflected in a long mirror, and a wide davenport heaped up with brick-colored silk cushions.

"Hurry along and take off your things. Dinner's ready," Cassie said to her, giving her a peck on her glowing cheek.

Merry followed Muriel down the long narrow hallway that led to the bedrooms. There were four of them in Cassie's flat and two bathrooms.

Cassie's own bedroom was like a moving picture "set." It was hung with blue-green taffeta. The furniture was painted blue-green, and the rug on the floor was pearl gray.

All the brushes on the dressing table were ivory, and they had Cassie's initials in gold on them. There were a half dozen bottles of perfume ranged along the back of it. And the top drawer was filled with jars of cold cream and boxes of thin tissue paper for removing cold cream from the face.

"What a heavenly room!" said Merry, as she looked around it.

But she said it with a sigh, as she pictured her own little room at home. The little shabby room under the eaves, with its iron beds, battered dresser, worn-out alarm clock and imitation shell toilet set.

The rest of Cassie's flat was just as luxurious as the bedroom.

The dining room, where the three girls ate, was white paneled and the furniture was black wood. There were candles at either end of the long table, and a low glass bowl of Shasta daisies in the center.

The food was delicious. Cream of celery soup, cold veal birds, fresh green peas, a vegetable salad in chicken-jelly, and frozen chocolate pudding.

"It's just a scratched-up meal," Cassie said easily, when Muriel praised it. She leaned forward and lit a cigaret. Its fingers were slim and white, the nails were like polished coral, and on the third finger a wedding ring and an engagement ring sparkled like a cluster of stars.

It did not look as if it had pounded the steel keys of a typewriter day in and day out for a good many years.

And Cassie, herself, with her smoothl-waved hair, her clean, fresh look, her indifferent air, fitted into all this luxury beautifully. She seemed much more at home here here in this nine-room flat than ever had seemed shabby home on Chester street.

"Well, Merry," she drawled, when they were having tiny cups of coffee in the fire-lit living room, "how does everything go at the beauty shop?"

Merry gave a start.

She had no idea that Cassie would let Morley Kaufman's family know that her sister answered the telephone in a little neighborhood beauty shop!

She flushed and glanced at Muriel. But Muriel seemed not at all surprised.

"I think you were awfully smart to go into a beauty shop instead of into an office, Merry," she said, flicking the gray ash from her cigaret. "I should think there'd be a young fortune in selling make-up. Everybody uses it nowadays. It must sell like hot cakes."

She put up a dainty forefinger and touched her own lips that were painted a bright Chinese red.

"I knew a girl at school whose father died and left her without a red cent," she went on, blowing a jet of cigaret smoke from her nostrils. "And she earns her living by selling some kind of cold cream that she and her mother make at home. And think of the money that Mrs. Gouverneur Morris made when she opened that beauty shop of hers—"

"Come on, let's play bridge!" Cassie cut in, and that was the end of their talk.

But it left its mark on Merry. That night when she went home, feeling that she had done a clever thing by going into Lillie Dale's shop.

"I'm going to have a share in it, too, she made up her mind, as she let herself into the house. "I think I know where to get the money to buy it—" She was thinking of Bill Erskine.

He would be coming to town soon.

But Merry was impatient. She sat down that night and wrote to him.

"I want to talk to you about some business matters," she was writing, when Moms opened the dor of her bedroom and came in. She had been crying, and her face looked bleak and white and drawn.

"Well," she said, "I hope you enjoyed yourself at Cassie's house."

Merry said she had.

"It's all right for you to go if you want to," her mother added, with a break in her voice. "But if Cassie didn't invite me there when Morley was home, I'm sure I shouldn't go there on the sly!"

Merry flushed up. "His sister, Muriel, was there," she answered. "And we had an awfully nice time. Morley wouldn't high-hat me, Moms, when I'm engaged to his best friend, would he?"

Moms looked doubtful.

"Well—but are you engaged?" she asked. "If you are, why doesn't Erskine send you an engagement ring?"

"I'm waiting for Christmas," Merry said with a smile. "I'll bet you anything that he gives me a diamond then!"

Bill came into town on Christmas eve.

Merry put on her new black lace hat, a plain black dress, and went downtown to meet him. They ere to have dinner together at the Brevoort.

"Can't he think of anything else to do but eat?" Moms asked in her sour way when Merry was dressing that night. "All he wants to do is to sit in a restaurant and stuff himself, it seems to me!"

But Merry enjoyed dining out just as much as Bill did. She liked the lights and the music and the noise. She loved to look at the people around her. She loved to have them look at her, and they always did look—men and women alike.

Tonight she had an orchid pinned on her shoulder. It was the first orchid she had ever had, and it had cost $5.

"Think!" said Merry, looking across the table at Bill's fat pink face. "Five dollars for a single flower! You just throw money away, don't you? It's about money that I want to talk to you tonight! I want you to lend me some."

"Lend you some?" Bill repeated, and across his good-natured pinkness slid that cruel, hard look that Merry had seen on his face once before.

GERTRUDE IN PARIS

Channel Swimmer Finds Reporters Too Persistent

PARIS, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Gertrude Ederle, the American channel swimmer and her party arrived here today from Stuttgart, Germany, after spending the night sitting up on the train because the sleeper was filled.

Miss Ederle had barely registered at her hotel when she set out on a shopping tour. Having acquired a prominence almost comparable to that of moving picture stars, kings and presidents, the young swimmer has found it advisable to take an official spokesman to act as buffer between herself and ever persistent reporters.

ISSUES REQUISITION.

AUSTIN, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Requisition on the governor of Oklahoma for the extradition of Don Thompson, alias Eugene Thompson, charged by indictment in Cook county Texas with forgery, was issued Wednesday by Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson. Thompson is under arrest in Washington county, Oklahoma.

TWO WOMEN FOUND HELP

By Reading Experiences of Other Women

Mrs. Nina Matteson, Box 206, Oxford, N. Y., writes—"If it had not been for your medicine, I could not have done my work as it should have been done. Mother told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I had read in different papers what it had done for different women. She wanted me to try it, so my husband got me one bottle at first; then I took two others. * * * Now I am feeling quite strong again."

Mrs. Ernest Tanguay of Adams, Mass., says she was ill for four years and could not sleep nights or go out on the street. She read about the Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking eight bottles she was able to do all her work and go anywhere and is quite herself again.

This dependable Vegetable Compound is a household word in thousands of homes. The fourth generation is now learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If this medicine has helped other women, why shouldn't it help you? At your druggist's.

There are 100 calorie portions in two and one-half teaspoonsful of Colvert's Ice Cream.—Adv.

Lemon Juice Whitens Skin

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchid White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle and you have a whole quarter-pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It can not irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion; also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It can not be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

Canton Cop Will Seek To Exonorate Murder Suspect

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 18.—(AP)—Floyd E. Streitenberger, a detective of Canton, Ohio, here for the convention of the Fraternal Order of Police, intends to do all he can to exonerate Louis Mazer of Canton, Ohio, held at Cleveland for the slaying of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher.

Streitenberger today reiterated his declaration that he had an alibi for Mazer.

The detective said that he would establish beyond doubt that the accused was in Streitenberger's home at the time Mellett was murdered.

"There's about $28,000 reward offered for solution of this crime, and it looks as though somebody is going to collect it at Mazer's expense if possible," said Streitenberger. "Canton police have no real clue to the slayer and I don't think the private detectives in the case have either."

Characterization of Mazer as a "vice lord" brought from Streitenberger the assertion that Mazer "was nothing but a bootlegger of small account."

Streitenberger said that Mazer called at the detective's home the night of the murder for the purpose of inspecting a pet dog believed to be suffering from distemper. Mazer remained there until about 12:55 a. m., Streitenberger said. He did not see Mazer again after he left the house that morning.

TO FILE CHARGES

Murder Complaints to Be Lodged Against Man

MERCEDE, Cal., Aug. 18.—(AP) District Attorney Louis Milburn of Mariposa county, announced last night that a murder charge would be placed against Paul Baran, veteran miner who yesterday shot and killed three youths on his gold claim near Briceburg. Milburn declared that Baran's story that he killed in self defense was "improbable and contradictory to evidence unearthed by investigators."

The victims of Baran's rifle were Victor Shimonoleff and Theodore Shastin of Oakland and Harry Clark of Dabney, N. C.

Two Negroes Die In Ark. Tornado

WILSON, Ark., Aug. 18.—(AP)—Two negroes were killed and thirty-one injured, ten severely in a tornado which struck at the end of Joiner, Ark., last night and cut a swath about 100 yards wide for a distance of about seven miles through several plantations before lifting and passing to the northeast.

The course of the twister was largely through corn fields and timber tracts on the Modena, Carson Ridge and Shelby plantations. Only about eight buildings were reported demolished.

The property loss was roughly estimated today at $10,000. No damage occurred here.

It's Good Enough For You, Brother

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—(AP)—If the water of Rangoon is good enough for the 293,000 native Burmese, its good enough for the American vice-consul there in the severely economic opinion of Comptroller General McCarl.

Keyne V. Graum, the vice consul there, included an item of $11.20 for special drinking water in his expense account and, by way of explanation submitted a report by the city health officer on the municipal water supply. This report, however, merely set forth that the water contained too many micro-organisms without disclosing the presence of noxious germs and the comptroller general disapproved the expenditure on the ground that the purchase of special water had been based merely on apprehension of cholera and other diseases and not upon immediate necessity.

PASS PLEBISCITE BILL

Philippine Senate Overrides General's Veto

MANILA, Aug. 18.—(AP)—The Philippine senate today unanimously passed over Governor General Wood's veto the bill providing for a plebiscite on the question of Philippine independence. The bill now goes to the house where similar action is expected. When the house passes the bill it will be forwarded to President Coolidge.

Jack County, Potential Producer Rediscovered

AREA HOLDING NEW INTEREST

Musty Files Being Dug Up For Leads to Production

Jack county is a very attractive area to oil men today. In a sense it is being rediscovered.

The government geological reports that were issued more than 25 years ago are being resurrected out of musty piles and reread with interest by the independent oil producer who cannot afford a geological staff of his own. It is the independent producer who in most instances is satisfied with the knowledge that Jack county is in a regional high and that sands are commercially productive at from 80 to 4,400 feet and that oil found is from 39 to 44 beaume in gravity and that acreage is still very reasonable. All this is rediscovering of Jack county.

50 Wells At Avis

Most of the independents remember that about 50 more wells have been drilled around the town of Avis, just six miles north of Jacksboro, at around 50 years, and that these had produced oil in commercial quantities for more than 18 years and that the Roxana Petroleum corporation well, drilled to 4,457 feet, has been standing for four long years in solitary grandeur in the Mesquite dotted prairie, that could not be cleaned out. The tools are still in the hole and despite this the well makes 25 barrels a day of 44 gravity oil every day.

Another thought is that the subsurface logs and records proves that Strawn sand series known in Northen Oklahoma as the Bartlesville, is there found in unusual thickness and covers the whole of Jack county. A further fact is that five wells have already been drilled in the pool opened by Frank Buttram, formerly of Oklahoma City that shows the Strawn sand is productive at 2,050 feet.

Make 15 Barrels

All this knowledge coupled with the fact that in the Antelope field to the northwest of Jacksboro, wells make as high as 75 barrels a day at 750 feet. These were brought in during March of this year, Oldham and others brought in a well on the Hanna survey, west of Jacksboro at a depth of 361 feet, but lack of pipeline facilities makes further development slow.

Prominent among independent operators in Jack county are J. L. "Joe" Crump, formerly of Duncan, Okla., and associated with him is R. A. Conkling, former chief geologist of the Roxana and associated with them is R. K. Carlin, formerly with the land and lease department of the Empire companies.

They have started two wells on favorable structures and are working with other operators in a lease way.

At police headquarters Hackney related a tale of thwarted love, hard labor in the cotton gin, and the decision to elope.

Wall Street Wolf Back In Market

The presence here of David Lamar, called the wolf because of his spectacular financial raids was revealed when he was served with a subpoena to appear in court today and tell what he knows about alleged manipulations of the stock of Consolidated Distributors, Inc., which deals in motor accessories.

The stock has fluctuated during recent weeks so violently that an investigation was begun by the New York Stock Exchange. Lamar was not suspected, however, until large transactions were traced to his brokers, Ayres and Wright. The firm is not a member of the exchange, however, and the exchange investigators could not force it to tell who was back of the transactions.

The office of the state attorney general took up the case and when agents went to serve a subpoena on R. W. Wright, member of the firm, they found the "wolf" having lunch with him. They then produced a second subpoena for Lamar. Neither man is charged with an offense against the law.

Claims Paraffin Can Be Eliminated In Panhandle Oil

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 18.— The trouble that Texas Panhandle oil men, and especially the pipe lines, have had with the excess of paraffin in the crude produced there, can be easily overcome, according to A. H. Ackerman, chemist of Chicago. Ackerman was in Tulsa several days ago arranging to establish a branch office for his products, that are said to prevent the paraffining up of wells and pipe lines.

He stated that he was already working on many old wells in Oklahoma and bringing them back to near-normal production by the use of his products. In the Texas Panhandle, Ackerman says his chemical is being used successfully. He predicts that this winter when the temperature drops below 35 degrees that he can keep the Panhandle crude moving, if his chemical is used.

No more Wash Day hands
Savex

Poor abused hands!—red, roughened and coarsened! But it isn't the work that ruins them, it's hard water and ineffective soap.

Savex not only does its work well as a soap, a water softener and a bleach—all in one—but it protects your hands, keeping them firm and white. And, of course if Savex won't hurt your hands it won't hurt delicate fabrics.

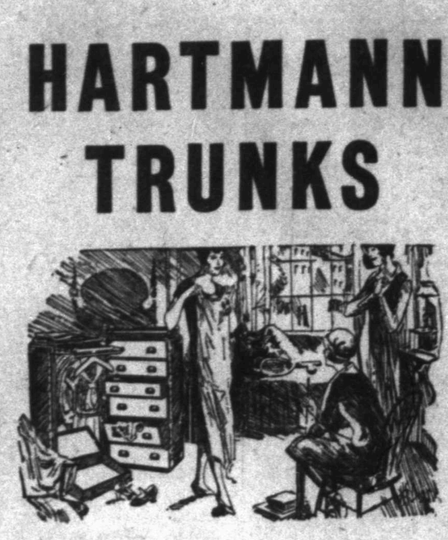

Use Savex in washing machine without soaking and rubbing. Use it in washtub or basin and soak and rub only badly soiled things. Moreover, boiling and bluing are unnecessary with Savex, for it is a mild, safe bleach. Follow directions and yellowed and stained things become "whitely white;" colored things wash like new, and silks and woolens retain their textile beauty.

Ability, Courage, Integrity Demanded of Atty. Gen. Allred Tells Audience

CONRAD, Aug. 18.—In presenting his candidacy for attorney general here this morning, James V. Allred of Wichita Falls, reviewed his official record as district attorney, and claimed that he expects to give the same service as a state official.

Mr. Allred said, "The attorney general's office is second in importance to that of the governor. The attorney general should be a man not only of ability, but one of courage, integrity, and scrupulous honesty. This officer is frequently called upon to render opinions where the interest of the people of Texas is assailed, and in order for him to give those opinions in fairness to all parties concerned he must be absolutely uninfluenced by any past environment or clientele. He must enforce the law as it is written on the statute books without fear or favor alike to all."

"I know the difference between right and wrong whenever and wherever I meet it. I am capable of judging between teh interests of all the people, and the interests of just a few, or a particular class. I am just as capable as any lawyer when it comes to applying the law to the matters that will come before the attorney general's department. There will be no new questions. Some character of opinion has been handed down by that department on every imaginable question, and those opinions are on file in that office. Reference to them and application of court's rulings will enable any man to render the proper opinion if he only understands the meaning of the rules of law, and I maintain that I do."

"As to my age I remind you of these men who served their country so well: Jefferson, Hamilton, Hogg, Culberson, Washington, and others, many of whom reached their zenith before they were 30 years old, others when barely past 30."

"Rainmaker" Vivid Drama At Olympic

A poignant, human drama, graphically developed, convincingly portrayed and intelligently directed is "The Rainmaker," the new paramount picture, which makes its local debut at the Olympic Thursday. Film fans with a penchant for red-blooded entertainment will be more than delighted with this Clarence Badger production of Gerald Beaumont's Red Book magazine serial, "Heavenbent."

Romance and regeneration are the two interlocking elements in this gripping story, which has for its background a picturesque race track and a little border town in the southwest. The action revolves around a broken down jockey and a cheap dance hall girl, whose love for each other eventually triumphs over overwhelming trials and tribulations.

"The Rainmaker" gets its title from the fact that rain inevitably comes when the jockey is riding a favorite. The race track gamblers and hangers-on regard him with superstitious awe, but the jockey only laughs and looks wise. But there comes a time when he is called upon to pray for rain to save a whole town stricken by pestilence, and, miraculously enough, his prayer is answered.

William Collier, Jr., makes the jockey an appealing figure. He arouses genuine sympathy because he plays the role with conviction, sincerity and force. Georgia Hale gives an admirable performance in the part of the dance hall girl. There is a certain spiritual quality about her acting that adds immeasurably to the reality of her characterization. Ernest Torrence is the third featured member of the cast and his delineation of the dance hall proprietor is a masterly piece of work.

Of the many thrills that feature the production, the exciting horse race, the terrifiic fight in the dance hall and the tremendous cloudburst are the most notable from the standpoint of realism.

Desperate Drama On Palace Screen Now

Theodor Von Eltz, featured with Wanda Hawley in "A Desperate Moment," the thrilling adventure drama now being shown at the Palace theatre, experienced many desperate moments that weren't in the picture, while the sea sequence was being made. And so did the rest of the company because Mr. Von Eltz gave them the scare of their lives.

The script called for him to battle with a whole gang of smugglers who had gotten control of the schooner. In order to get out of their clutches he was to climb high up on the rigging and swing from one rope ladder to another. For the sake of realism, this scene was actually taken at night. Mr. Von Eltz battled with the gang, threw them off and started up the mast. Everything went well until he swung out from one ladder to the other. Whether he misgauged his distance or did not get a firm foothold, he never quite knew. At any rate before he realized what had happened he found himself in the icy waters, fifteen feet below. Though he is a good swimmer, as "A Desperate Moment" shows, he had to work hard before he was once more aboard the schooner.

"Talk about 'A Desperate Moment,' he laughed when he was hauled up.

"You almost gave me heart failure," exclaimed Miss Hawley.

"So glad I've still got a leading man," said Director Dawn. "Think we'd better call it a night?"

"Not by a long shot!" So after Mr. Von Eltz had donned dry clothes, "camera" was called and once again he climbed up the mast but this time the desperate moments were confined to the picture for the benefit of thrill-thirsty movie fans.

A pretty feature of the evening program at the club women's three-day encampment at Call Field Wednesday, was the devotional service given by local Girl Reserves.

Miss Charlotte Joiner led the services opening the program by the presentation of three girls, Thelma Brewster, Evelyn McQuigan and Loraine Holstead, who carrying three candles of red, white and blue, represented health, knowledge and spirit.

This ceremony was followed by a prayer by Miss Joiner. Della Gale Morgan gave the Girl Reserve quest and Dorothy Hartman gave "We Would Be True." After marching out, while singing "Follow the Gleam," the girls gave a group of Girl Reserve songs.

RUM IN BLEEDING KANSAS

KANSAS voted dry years before the coming of the nation-wide prohibition. Kansas was known as Bleeding Kansas in Civil war days. In recent years it has been known as Sunflower Kansas. All its politicians are drys. That is, they pose as drys. They say their state is as dry as the cave of a bat and that law enforcement on the part of the federal sleuths is unnecessary.

Kansas City is the largest city in Kansas. It is the Missouri border line. Not long since the attorney general of Kansas visited Kansas City and investigated vice and rum conditions. He was horrified. He found the town wide open. He found saloons everywhere. He found speak easies where one who had the coin could quench his thirst.

He found gambling houses wide open. He found something else. That the city officials winked the other eye as the dry officials are all republicans this horrified the attorney general more than words can tell. He sent forth a solemn warning. He said that they must clean up and be good or he would stage one of the prettiest dry fights in the history of the bleeding commonwealth.

Next he visited Leavenworth an ancient city and yet a progressive one. Leavenworth has a federal fort and garrison. Leavenworth has one of the largest penitentiaries in the Union. Leavenworth returns a large republican majority. Leavenworth has republican officials. And what did this attorney general do who hates rum runners and abhors vice in any form discover in this city with a federal fort and a federal penitentiary?

He found 18 saloons without half trying. He found illicit booze in the very shadows of the penitentiary and not far from the federal court. It has been a series of shocks to this attorney general since he became a crusader. He had always been told that Kansas was dry and holy. Now he has discovered that there are spots in Kansas that are wet and impious.

He has warned the people of Leavenworth of the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah. He has told them to flee from the wrath to come. He has notified the officials that a housecleaning is due and Leavenworth is the house. He is weighed down with wrath and woe. He refuses to be comforted. He has lost his illusions. He has discovered that there is wet spots and wet people within the borders of the state that was once bleeding and now is known to the world as the sunflower.

John P. St. John, a famous crusader of 50 years ago, sleeps in a Kansas cemetery. Many of the famous crusaders who fought with St. John are in many palaces of eternal rest. An official who has eyes to see, ears to hear, a nose to smell and a tongue to talk, has discovered wonders in Kansas.

And, Missouri, think of Missouri, the state with a wet democrat in the senate and state that in November has its choice of sending another wet democrat or a wet republican to the senate. There must be something wrong in bleeding Kansas. There must be something wrong in old Missouri. The state that gave to the world Thomas B. Love and Thomas H. Penton, the latter the author of "Thirty Years in The American Senate."

WHY REPEAL IT?

THERE is a demand for the repeal of the Ferguson amnesty act. Why repeal it? It isn't worth the paper on which the bill was written. It is a delusion but not a snare. It would not run the gauntlet of a justice of the peace in the tall sticks country if the tall sticks country of the aforesaid justice was endowed with common sense. Many of those who voted for it knew that it was worthless. They knew that a legislative statute cannot set aside the judgment of a high court of impeachment or suspend the constitution of Texas. They not only knew it was worthless, but they said so to their friends and the newspaper reporters. It has never been given a test for the reason that those who asked its passage knew that it was a joke.

KEEPING THE CROP DOWN

A CROP of 16,000,000 bales is predicted for the United States and a world crop of 29,000,000 bales or about 7,000,000 bales more than the world needs. A dispatch reads: "Boll Weevils are increasing in portions of the gulf states and Oklahoma." There is ever a silver lining.

ARE THE MEN INGRATES?

ARE the men of America ingrates? That is, are they ingrates in the highbrow states. Of course, in the mountains where illiteracy is in flower, a woman received a congressional nomination but in Ohio and Indiana and Kansas and elsewhere and even away down here in proud old Texas, the women fared badly.

State Supreme Court Justice Florence B. Allen of Ohio sought the democratic nomination for United States senator. She was the first woman to win a place on the court of last resort in any one of the 48 states. Then she longed for more worlds to conquer and asked the sisters and brothers of the democratic persuasion to send her to the United States senate to rescue the land of Washington and Jefferson from perdition and to give to a daughter of Ohio the proud distinction of being the first woman outside of Georgia an opportunity to sport a senatorial toga.

She lost. A mere man walked off with the prize. In the same state an ambitious woman offered herself as a sacrifice on the alter of her country for its welfare and advancement and also for a republican nomination for governor. There was a negro contender in the bunch and the brothers in black ran last. This proud daughter of Ohio made a heroic campaign, but she didn't get votes enough to mark the boards. And think of what happened to the three ladies away down here in Texas who were contenders for gubernatorial honors.

Out of a total poll of something over 800,000, 530,000 men and women cast their ballots against the three lady contenders. A modest little woman who did not seek the governorship asked her people to send her to the state senate. She had newspaper training. She had training in the political sense. She is a business woman. She made the landing.

Alice Roosevelt Longworth of Ohio, the wife of the speaker of the house, who is bald headed and wears spats, is ambitious for her husband to be the next president of the United States. Will she make a landing for Nick? Go ask cautious Cal, the refrigerated son of destiny who knows when to talk and when to hold his tongue.

Woman has the ballot. She is not using the ballot to any great extent to place her sisters in a high or low office, meaning major or minor jobs. This distinguished daughter of Ohio is in luck. She has two years to serve as an associated justice of the supreme court of her state, but this early in the game the betting is good that a male brute will take the job away from her in 1928.

REMEMBER JULY PRIMARY?

THERE were three leading contenders for the ballots of the democratic voters of Texas on July 24. Dan Moody received 409,733 votes to 283,482 for his highest opponent and a majority of 3,801 over his two highest opponents, the Ferguson and Lynch Davidson, the combined votes of the Fergusons and Davidson being 405,931 to Moody's 409,733.

Lynch Davidson was the third man in the race. This was his declaration after the state committee had canvassed the vote cast in the July primary and certified the names of Moody and the Fergusons for the run-off primary.

"If the Fergusons are not convinced Texas is tired of their rule, let us turn out final evidence of this fact August 28 and obliberate them for all time from the political arena of Texas. I have made the statement several times. I would like to have those who supported me in the recent primary throw their support to Mr. Moody and I reiterate this most positively now. A sacred duty rests with the people of Texas today to impress on the Fergusons they are to be allowed no longer to muddy the political waters or further mess-up the governmental affairs of Texas."

Mr. Davidson, according to the reporter who interviewed him, indicated that he was anxious to refrain from taking any further interest in politics at this time, but stated most emphatically he would "spare no effort to bury Fergusonism under the avalanche of disapproval when the run-off primary is held."

There is another Davidson, T. W. of Marshall, who is president of the state bar association. After the results of the July primary had been known to the people Davidson of Harrison county wired his hearty congratulations to the winner and pledged him loyal support in his undertakings as a leader of the democracy of Texas and governor of a great commonwealth.

These are matters of interest. They should be placed in the records of the campaign.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE.

Louise was blowing her nose. "There is," she agreed gently. They moved hesitantly into the disorderly living room: Bee's wardrobe trunk standing open, clothing thrown across the center table, books and framed photographs in a heap on the couch. "We try to make ourselves believe, here in the Village, that love is cerebral," Lou murmured without turning. "But apparently it isn't." She heard her own voice but didn't listen. Odd that she hadn't observed that mess when she first went into the room. Or had she? It was confusing. But the whole day had been that. What about their plans? What about the word given to Des Plaines and the pretty firm opposition of Mr. Hargrove? She'd had a lot to tell Bee about that. For once in her life she'd felt the need of advice, or at least of talking out. She seemed lately to have been losing, day by day, her decision of character. Something disheartening about that. But crying was no good ..... had Bee forgotten their exultant opportunity? It almost seemed so. And it couldn't be discussed now, not with this deeply changed Bee. She'd brush it aside.

So Delia, perhaps, was dying, in their little bedroom. This was a thought that plumbed the soul..... Death. Or a living tragedy. And Arthur!

There was a heavy step. The doctor came out.

Bee, speaking out of the hush that enveloped the two girls, asked quickly: "Is there any hope?"

Lou dug her nails into her palms, and started at him. Why didn't he say something?

"Yes," it finally came. "Yes. A little."

Then he went off down the stairs. Bee was clearing off the couch. The books and pictures she stacked in a corner. "You'll have to sleep here," she said. "I brought out some of your things. They're in the wicker chair."

Lou, perched on a corner of the center table, watched her.

"What do you figure you're going to do?" Both voices were hushed.

"Oh, I shan't get to bed tonight. You see that doctor wanted two nurses, but I've been helping this one watching just what she did, and I could call red in a pinch."

"Don't be silly, Bee. We'll get another nurse."

"Well—I've had to consider the cost a little. No telling what it will run to. And I feel equal to anything. Honest.

Louise lit a cigarette as an aid to thought.

"We'll have another nurse. What's the doctor's number?"

"I wrote it down. It's under the phone. Just move it, if you really—"

Louise promptly disposed of that matter. Then she remarked, still puzzling her way though a confusion of impulses and swift thoughts: "We've got to talk. Sit down. You make me nervous." Bee obeyed. "How about her folks?"

"She begged me not to tell them."

"Yes, but—"

"I know. We've got to."

"Of course. Have you got the address?"

"No." Bee considered the problem. "I wonder—maybe it's in one of my college books. The Annual, or something. They're in my trunk—in there." She indicated the bedroom. "Thought come to think of it, her father's initials wouldn't be there, or the street address."

"I'd figure out some way to wire as soon as you can. Her people have rights, you know."

"I don't imagine they have any spare money."

"No, Delia had to work, you know, up there. She partly worked her way through college too. I'll tell you, Lou—of course, I've been thinking things over pretty fast today. You've got to help with this."

"Of course."

"You can send something back from California. Thank heaven you've got a real job. I'd have gone ahead, anyway. I had no choice. But I've banked on you."

"I don't know that I'll go to California. I've got a perfectly good job here."

"Of course you'll go!"

"The idea was to go together."

"Nonsense. Of course it would have been nice, but you can't throw down a chance like that. You've got to go on."

"The fun's gone out of it." Lou watched the smoke curling up from her cigarette. After a little she remarked, musingly—a casual sentence that was no more than a chip floating by on the flood of her thoughts: "This is Thursday night." She pulled herself together and glanced at the watch on her wrist. "Three-thirty. Hum! I thought it was about seven."

"I'm going up after Arthur about five, Lou. He ought to turn up at Joe's toward the end of the afternoon. I wonder if you'd mind sticking here."

"Well"—Bee got up—"it's what I get out of watching Delia and thinking about what she was able to say. There's just one thing that will put a little fight into her, or a little hope, at least; and that's marriage. It's all she can see."

"Oh!" mused Lou. Then: "He'll never do that."

"Perhaps he'll have to. One thing I've been thinking—I'd like some practical advice—oh, about the law, all that. But I can't think of anybody, unless it's—"

Lou interrupted quickly: "Fred Kendall?" she asked.

"Yes."

"Mr. Hargrove would be perfect, but after what I've gone through with him today, I don't know about asking this of him."

"I'll try Fred." Bee came over to the telephone, then turned to her friend with that intently sober look and remarked gently: "I've been a crazy sort of child, I'm afraid. A thing like this shakes me so. Of course I'll talk with him. He IS practical, and he probably can help." She called his apartment.

"Funny," she said, a hand clapped over the receiver, "he's moved. They don't appear to know where."

"Try the airplane company."

"Of course." They had the address. "Him! Over in West Fifty-sixth street. He HAS tumbled in the world." It took an hour to find his voice over the wires of the complicated city. During that time Lou busied herself rehanging the pictures and straightening out the room. The doctor appeared again, followed shortly by the second nurse. At five Bee hurried uptown to meet Fred.

Questions from the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

Advice to Two Girls of 17 Concerning Their Love Affairs——General Questions Answered on Women in the Business World—Should the Girl Whose Health Has Failed Break Engagement?

Dear Miss Dix—We are two girls 17 years of age and have been going with two boys who are near our age. Our parents and their friends kid us about "puppy love," but isn't it possible for puppy love to grow into real love?

Shall we go together for two more years till we finish high school and have one year at college, then marry these boys and live happily ever afterward?

Do you think it would be good policy for our parents to separate us from these boys, but let us correspond with each other and be together, when we come home?

TWO GIRLS.

ANSWER:

Your letter indicates that you are two sensible, thoughtful girls, and so I take it for granted that you will not do such an idotic thing as to get married at your tender age. This being the case, both you and your parents can sit back calmly and let nature take its course.

The majority of such youthful romances end in nothing. The love affair just peters imperceptibly out. One or the other outgrows the other one. Romeo gets tired of Juliet or Juliet gets tired of Romeo. Some new peach of a girl crosses the trail of a dazzling sheik with a good line draws on the scene and pouf! the fire is out and no harm done to anybody.

This is the way puppy love usually ends, and it is why parents are foolish to take it seriously and by their opposition make girls and boys get their backs up and just to show that they will not be bossed and that they are grown-up run off and get married.

For that is the tragedy of puppy love, my dear. It so often makes immature girls and boys who are not ready for marriage in body or mind or purse, rush prematurely into matrimony. Then it is fatal because they almost invariably find when they grow up that they are tired of the husband or wife they picked out; that they are tired of matrimony with the burdens and responsibilities. Worst of all, they are almost sure to encounter men and women who are their real mates and with whom they fall in love when it is too late.

Of course, there are exceptions to every rule and now and then a boy and girl love affair does endure and the men and women who made mud pies together get married and set up housekeeping and make real pies. Such marriages are happy and comfortable when they occur. And so there is no reason why you and your boy friend shouldn't pal along together and wait developments.

But my earnest advice to you is not to let these boys monopolize you too much. Before you tie up for keeps with any man take a look—see around and observe a number of men so as to be sure you are getting the best of the lot. Reflect also that boys have a way of changing, and that by the time these young chaps come back from college their tastes in girls may be entirely different from what it is now.

I think it would be an excellent thing for your parents to send you away and separate you from the boys, because that would give all four of you a chance to test your sentiments.

But don't marry when you are too young. That is suicide.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—Will you please answer these questions?

Why do business men employ married women and girls who do not need the work in preference to women who have to support themselves.

Why do women in business work against each other? Why can't there be a law made to force women to give up working outside of their homes when they marry? Why is it that some people are more fortunate in business than others

CORINE.

ANSWER:

The answer to most of your questions is—they don't.

Certainly, business men do not prefer society flappers and well-off married women as employes to poor girls who need to earn their own bread and butter.

On the contrary, other things being equal, the business man would rather give the job to the woman who needs it, because every man in the world honors and respects and desires to help the woman who is bravely trying to make an honest living.

But, after all, business is business and not philantrophy and a shop or an office is not an asylum for needy females. A business man wants the best service he can get and when he hires a married woman or the girl who doesn't need to work you may be very sure that she has proved that she has some special talent and ability.

Besides, because a woman is married is no indication in these days of the high cost of living that she doesn't need to earn money just as much as she did when she was single. Furthermore, there is no more reason why a married woman should be debarred from gainful occupations than why a married man should be. The working world is free to every one, and all of us, male or female, married or single, have a right to do our bit in it and collect pay for it.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

FORETHOUGHT

The wise consult the wiser skies
Before they try the uncertain seas;
A wealth of signals, to the wise,
Predict the gale, assure the breeze.
The fool has little thought of these,
And nothing proves, and nothing tries,
And in some hour of folly dies.
The wise take time, while folly sneers,
When death comes thundering down the rails.
To him who neither heeds nor hears
Death walks the roads and rides the gales.
The weary world owes half its tears
To him who nothing ever fears.
Brave men of better stuff are made
Than useless folly. 'Tis to wear
Wisdom as well as shining blade,
To dare when there is need to dare,
Take care when there is need to care.
The wise the braver part have played;
Only a fool is not afraid.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

BY MARY BLAKE.

Leo.

Today's planetary aspects are excellent, and continue so until after sunset. They then assume a rather forbidding nature and become overcast and adverse. During the day, you can, with every assurance of ultimate success, devote your time and energy to the execution of any task in which you are vitally interested, or the carrying out of any change, in your judgment, will conduct to a betterment of actual conditions. It will also prove to be an auspicious occasion for marriage, as happiness is forecast by the stars for all those who wed today. During the evening, recreative relaxation is recommended, in order to steer your mind into pleasant channels, and away from the gloom that threatens.

Children born today will, from a physical standpoint, pass through an erratic infancy. They will undergo rapid "ups and downs"—one moment causing relief, the next anxiety. Regular habits and proper nutrition will do much to rob these Kaleidiscopic episodes of any real alarm. They promise to overcome their early weaknesses and go through youth up to adulthood with ever increasing strength. In disposition, they will be gentle and tractable and easy to manage. Later on, they will give every evidence of dependability, and prove to be both ambitious and self reliant. The opportunities they may have lost in early childhood for study and improvement, will be more than counterbalanced by the assiduity with which they will cultivate knowledge later on.

If today is your birthday, your character is a very, determined one and, once you have set out to reach a certain goal, no one and no thing can restrain or hold you back. Your ambition, self-confidence, observation, and systemization of thought, encourages you in your appointed task, and you generally achieve, sooner of later, the object you had in view. The only elements that count against your success are self-created. You are impulsive, and at times, very quick-tempered. If you would only learn to deliberate more calmly, and not allow yourself to become unduly worked up over trifles, your work would become easier, and your surroundings more congenial.

You take a great interest in making others happy, and are always anxious for those around you to share in any prosperity that may be your portion. So far as your home life is concerned, you will give your mate undivided love and devotion.

Hidden Cavern Drawing Waters Of Northern Lake

KLAMMATH FALLS, Ore., Aug. 18.—(AP)—The mystery of the rapid and unprecedented fall of Lake of the Woods near here, which has left motor boats and piers stranded high and dry on a barren expanse of mud flats is believed solved in the discovery late yesterday of a large fissure in one end of the lake into which waters are pouring with a roaring sound.

The lake has been dropping at the rate of an inch a day all summer and as a result cottagers were forced to forego boating, swimming and fishing as it was impossible to keep boats and piers down to the water line.

Officials of the forest service will be asked to aid in an effort to plug the fissure.

There has been no earthquake action here and it is thought extreme dry weather has emptied a subterannean cavern into which the waters are pouring.

Lake of the Wood is about three miles long by one mile wide and is approximately 32 miles northwest of this city.

Let The Dead Past Bury Its Dead
The Editor Becomes a D. A. R. By Dictating a Refusal

Dear Mrs. Souther:
Many thanks
For your most friendly letter;
I doubt if I have ever read
A note that's any better.
Although you might have somewhat feared
Your words would be enraging,
I must confess, in very truth,
Your frankness was engaging!

If I were like some other men
And wished for social station,
I'd wed your girl without delay,
Demur or hesitation;
But such things don't appeal to me
Though, as this note's indited,
I know full well you ladies will
Agree that I'm short-sighted.

Forefathers are all right, I know;
We all have had some of 'em,
But that's no reason why we should
Perpetually love 'em.
The girl I wed must concentrate
On ME, alive and merry,
Not on some men who had their fling,
Now in the cemetery!

Former Vernon Pioneer Is Dead In Oregon Home

VERNON, Aug. 18.—R. D. Rector, former commissioner and early settler of Wilbarger county is dead at his home in Portland, Ore., according to a message received by J. E. Lutz of this city. Burial took place in Portland.

Mr. Recter and family moved to Wilbarger county from Indiana before the county was organized and he was in charge of the Worsham ranch. He served as postmaster at Worsham Springs, now Condon Springs and after the county was organized was elected county commissioner.

He was a successful farmer, living west of Vernon about three miles. Twenty years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Rector and their son, Ralph and family moved to Portland where he has made his home since that time.

Mr. Recter was approaching his 90th birthday at the time of his death.

I'M THE GINK

I am the ginkette who spends my time in my neighbor's apartment. I drop down early after my husband has gone and I talk. I hold up your work and take up a lot of time. When I leave you are not relieved, because you know I will come popping back in again unannounced. I haven't any children and little to do, so I just visit. The trouble is I usually have some favorite visiting place where they are too timid to tell me they are busy or hint that I am not welcome. I just spend most of my day there.

My Favorite Stories

AS A FAVOR TO THE RAILROAD

A New York theatrical magnate had a bad attack of grippe in the winter and went south to recuperate. He stopped a few days in a small town in South Carolina. When he got ready to leave the bound the official bus had mysteriously vanished; probably the driver had gone joy riding. There was no conveyance, public or private, to be had; and in order to catch his train the northerner was compelled to labor afoot over a mile and a half of dusty road, with a valise in each hand.

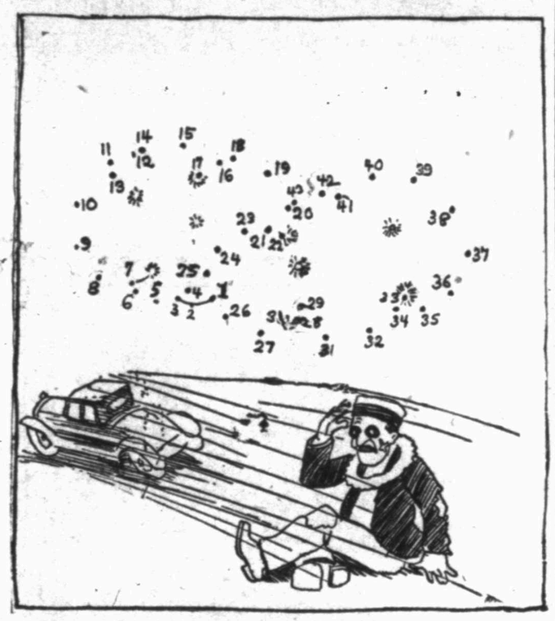

When he staggered up to the tiny station there was no one in sight except an old darky who was sitting on the platform.

"Uncle," inquired the New Yorker, "why in the name of goodness did they build this depot so far away from the town?"

The old man scratched his head.

"I don't know boss," he said—"unless it was because dey wanted to git closer to de railroad."

HOUSTON WINS SERIES SECOND

Miscues Lead to Downfall With Base Wallops Finishing

Houston copped the series second from Wichita Falls a loosely played game yesterday at Spudder park, 11 to 5.

Errors at critical stages put both Tom Estell, Wichita Falls' starting pitcher, and Lester White in a bad way, leading to the scoring of runs on admittedly solid smacks after there should have been three away.

The Buffs got off to a two-run start in the first inning on a brace of miscues and a single by Kane coupled with a base on balls a stolen base and a wild pitch.

Score Too Fast.

Skidding over for another run in the second and two in the third with a four-run shove-over in the fifth at Lester's expense, Houston took all the life out of the home guard and sewed the tilt away.

The Spudders scored a couple in the third, Lapan opening with a single, going to second when Estell was hit by a pitched ball and scoring on a single to center by LaFayette, with two force-outs sending Estell across the plate.

What our nine needs is more watches and cash prizes and another run-getter's tournament, then maybe they'll romp off on another victory streak.

Those Spud Runs.

Lambie's single and a pair of miscues gave the domestics a run in the fourth and a walk to LaFayette with singles by Jenkins and Benton sent the fourth Spud run over in the fifth. Turgeon's double and Benton's bingle in the seventh scored the final Wichita Falls run.

The natives got to see the usual home run hitting but didn't enjoy it so much because it was Hack Miller of the Buffs who knocked two fourbaggers over the fence.

The third game of the series is carded this afternoon.

How Heavyweight Kings Have Met Their Ends In Title Matches Of Past

By NORMAN E. BROWN

This is the first of a series of stories by Norman E. Brown, celebrated sports authority, on the outcome of heavyweight title bouts of the past that have seen the passing of a king. You will want to read this and the following stories, in view of the coming Dempsey-Tunney bout and its possibilities.—Editor.

THE ULTIMATE THRILL
THE MOST DRAMATIC MOMENT
THE MOST TRAGIC SPECTACLE

In the repertoire of sports is the passing of a world's heavyweight championship—the downfall of the king.

The rounds, then, in which the title has been lifted from the drooping, tired head of the old kings and placed on the brows of the new stand out as the most interesting chapters in sport history.

This holds true today as it did 50 or 100 years ago, although the boxing game has been completely revolutionized—bears no semblance now to the bloody, bone crushing, soul simmering game it once was.

The possible appearance of Jack Dempsey, present holder of the heavyweight championship, in the ring this fall, draws interest once more to the class of kings.

Theoretically, at least, the man who wears the ermine and gold of the heavyweight championship stands out as the most perfect physical speciman of fighting man in the world. The contention that there lurks in the clubs, round houses, steel mills or colleges men who would challenge the recognized champs if they devoted their energies to it does not detract from the glamor that is thrown about the champion. The world calls him king.

How have these kings met their ends?

I hope to tell in this series.

I'm starting with the memorable battle between John L. Sullivan and James J. Corbett, back in 1892, for the reason that that fight not only heralded the advent of the modern style of boxing, as exemplified by Corbett, but it marked the passing of the last of the bare knuckle champions—Sullivan.

The passing of John L. Sullivan as heavyweight champion of the world was rendered doubly tragic by the fact that with the defeat at the hands of Corbett went his faith in himself and the type of fighter he represented.

Sullivan was a product of the bare knuckle days when men lived as hard as they fought. They fought with but one end in view, to batter down the other fellow. Fights were staged where police allowed them. The fighters, outside fighting hours, lived with the sporting element. Most of them drank even while training.

When the talk of a match between the rugged, growling, gruff Sullivan and Corbett started Sullivan and his friends laughed at the prospects. Corbett was a mere youth. He was a bank clerk—a "dude," Sullivan and his friends termed him. Corbett trained at the Olympic club in San Francisco. He had never fought without gloves. His jet black hair, well combed, his neat clothes, and his jaunty air all helped to make him a dandy in the eyes of the older fight fans.

"I'll lay the dude out in a couple of rounds," Sullivan growled when the fight really was arranged.

Sullivan Meets Surprise

When the first bell rang Sullivan leaped from his corner intent upon carrying out his threat. But Corbett, light on his feet, quick thinking and trained to the minute, was not there when Sullivan swung. Round after round Sullivan rushed the bank clerk, swore at him when the youngster eluded him and demanded that Corbett "stand up and fight."

Corbett, however, had his plans laid. He knew that Sullivan was not trained for a long fight. The old king's stomach was fat. His rushes left him winded. Corbett held to his plan, and as Sullivan rushed jabbed him incessantly on the nose with his left hand.

Sullivan's nose became a bloody mass. It pained him intensely. The pain spread to his eyes. The blood got in them. Every jab made him more furious.

This continued for 20 rounds. At the end of the twentieth Corbett was smiling—light on his feet and confident. Sullivan, in his corner, was puffing, cursing the fates (perhaps inwardly cursing himself that he had not trained more rigidly.) And there was his nose—fairly blinding him with the pain.

Corbett felt his time had come. So did Billy Delaney, that old master who was managing him.

Then Corbett Waded In

When the twenty-first opened Corbett changed his tactics. He literally showered Sullivan with rights and lefts. When Sullivan rushed Corbett beat him to it—with another shower of blows.

The telling punches in that final round are listed with this story.

After the fight Corbett tried to be friendly with Sullivan but the dethroned hero was surly. As a matter of fact it was years before Sullivan felt friendly toward "the dude."

Sullivan had been a popular champion, too, because of his willingness to fight and his ability to "mix" with the sporting fraternity. In fact his popularity was so great that on his arrival in New York soon after, beaten and shorn of his title, he was given an ovation that most champions would like. His friends refused to believe wire reports that he had been beaten.

Corbett, however, soon won popularity.

Next: "The Passing of Corbett."

HOW OLD JOHN L. MET HIS DEFEAT

This is the way newspaper accounts gave the twenty-first and last round of the Sullivan-Corbett title fight at New Orleans, Sept. 7, 1892.

Round 21—Sullivan rushed, but Corbett stepped nimbly aside and smashed the big fellow's sore and bleeding nose with both fists, causing the blood to flow in a torrent.

Sullivan was bewildered and began to show signs of early collapse. Corbett, smiling like a schoolboy, hooked a right hander to the side of the head.

Corbett steadied himself. He sent a hard right to the ear and followed with a terrific left to the jaw and Sullivan sank helpless to the floor of the ring. He was not unconscious, but too exhausted to rise. The round lasted a little over a minute and a half.

So passed Sullivan, last of the old-time fighters.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

One outstanding angle of Miller Huggins methods of leadership in piloting the Yankees to a pennant four years out of six is his willingness to let his players "go it alone" much of the time. Therein does Huggins differ from Connie Mack and John McGraw, two old timers and exponents of the "run the team from the bench" theory.

While Huggins frequently takes his station on one of the coaching lines he rarely overburdens his team with signals and orders.

"A big league pitcher ought to know how to work a batter without being told," is Huggins' theory. "There are just a few times, perhaps, when those on the bench get an angle of the game that may be missed by the hurler. Then it is time enough to step in."

Of course Huggins directs the general style of attack and defense but once given their leads the players are expected to carry his ideas through to their natural conclusion without help.

It was Huggins' proneness to depend upon his players to play "big league baseball" that brought much criticism on his head between 1921 and 1923 when his enemies said Huggins was merely a figurehead and could not manage the team of temperamental stars he then had. Huggins has crammed this idea down the throats of his critics.

It may be that Huggins has collected men who can play "independent ball," so to speak. If this be true it is another sign of his greatness. The manager who cannot select the types of men he likes for his ball club is handicapped at the start.

John McGraw has won nine pennants with his master minding. He has never, however, whipped a team into pennant winning shape in one season under the conditions Huggins faced last winter. Connie Mack, greatest wigwag manager in the game, is still laboring to produce his first pennant-winning team since 1914.

Huggins should worry about the exclusive order of M. Ms. keeping him out in the cold. He has a pennant winning team. And that, in the final analysis is why baseball is played all summer.

* * * *

Johnny Butler, the young infielder obtained from the minors by the Brooklyn Dodgers last spring, will not be ranked as one of the young stars of the 1926 season. But he deserves some recognition as the tough luck player of the season.

You may recall that Butler was expected to help make the Dodger infield by filling the gap at shortstop. A short time after he reported at the Clearwater, Fla., training camp he was taken ill with stomach trouble and finally was forced to go to Johns Hopkins hospital for treatment.

"Goodbye, beauty," said most fans. Uncle Robbie himself was discouraged. He dusted around and plugged the gap.

Butler returned to the team and finally was given another trial. He wasn't in shape to play then but insisted on getting into the game. Robbie admired his gameness and placed him at second. He did fair work there but it wasn't until he was moved into Maranville's place at short that he proved his greatness. There he played brilliant ball despite his physical handicap.

Of recent weeks his fielding has been little short of brilliant and his hitting has been climbing steadily. Those who yelled for his scalp when he first returned to the game are backing him now.

This has been an unfortunate year for him. He's a good player. National league fans will find that out next year.

Meadow Club Play Halted By Rain

A heavy drizzle halted the singles and restricted play in the first round of doubles to four matches.

Cranston Holman and Lionel Ogden, of Leland Stanford, won with ease over Eben Whitman and Irwin Powell, 6-1, 6-0.

Fritz Mercur and Neil Sullivan, the Lehigh university pair, eliminated C. E. McDonald and C. T. Miller, 6-1, 6-2.

Wilmer Allison and John Barr of Texas vanquished Compton Reese and Pennington Whitehead, 6-2, 6-4. Kenneth Appel and Gregory Mangin, a youthful New Jersey combination defeated Reginald Finicke, Jr., and George S. Patterson, Jr., 6-1, 6-2.

6-2 Victory Over Robins While Buccos Divide Turns Trick

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Continuing their relentless struggle for first place position, the Cardinals today advanced to within a half game of the league leading Pittsburgh Pirates by defeating Brooklyn, 6 to 2. Pittsburgh split a double header with Boston. Bottomley's hitting was a feature of today's game. He got two doubles and a single in three trips to bat. O'Farrell poled a homer in the second with none on bases.

Errors Pave Way For Giant Victory

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Two errors by Hack Wilson, letting singles get away from him paved the way for New York to defeat Chicago 2 to 1 in a ten inning pitchers' duel between Virgil Barnes and Charley Root. In the first inning Wilson let Tyson's single get away from him and Frisch, who had walked, went to third and scored on Jackson's fly. In the tenth Wilson let Snyder's single get away and Mueller scored from first with the winning run. Singles by Wilson and Freigau with Grimm's sacrifice in between saved Chicago from a whitewash. Dempsey-Tunney Match Billed For Sesqui Arena Sept. 23, Says Promoter

Philadelphia's Mayor and Pennsylvania's Governor Okay Battle Date in Quaker City.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney will meet for the heavyweight championship in the Sesqui-Centennial Stadium in Philadelphia September 23, Tex Rickard announced tonight.

Rickard said that he had made his decision after receiving assurances from the Pennsylvania athletic commission and exposition officials that there would be no interference with the match.

"I did not desire to bring the New York state athletic commission into court in the matter," he said.

Governor Pinchot has given his approval, according to the promoter and Mayor Kendrick of Philadelphia has joined in the invitation. Negotiations were concluded tonight with Robert H. Young, secretary of the Pennsylvania boxing card.

Rickard deposited $50,000 with Young, guaranteeing that he will stage the fight in the Quaker city.

Present plans call for a seating capacity of 75,000 at the stadium, with prices ranging from $3 to $30.

Rickard said he would order Dempsey and Tunney out of their training camps in New York state immediately and that the champion undoubtedly will prepare himself at Atlantic City as he did for the bout with Louis Firpo.

The bout will be of 10 rounds to a judges' decision and the New York and Pennsylvania commission stand in accord on the matter.

Ten per cent of the gross receipts will go to the exposition while the state will receive five per cent.

Only 75,000 can be accomodated in the stadium at present, the plans for the fight calling for doubling of the capacity by the erection of wooden seats.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Aug. 18.—(AP)—Governor Pinchot tonight said that he would "stand by" the decision of the Pennsylvania state athletic commission on the question of the holding of the Dempsey-Tunney heavyweight championship match in the stadium at the Philadelphia sesqui-centennial exposition September 23.

FORT WORTH, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Paul Wachtel assaged the Iron Man against San Antonio Wednesday after winning the first game, 4 to 1, but cracked after 16 innings and the Bears took the second, 2 to 0.

Numerous errors by the Bruins helped Wachtel in the canto. He started the second by fanning the first two men up and looked good for a million frames, holding the visitors runless until the eighth when the Bears began fighting. The Cats got only one hit in the second game off Owens.

FALLS THREE FEET; DIES

Oil Man In Berger Killed in Small Drop

AMARILLO, Texas, Aug. 18.—(AP)—E. F. McCarthy, 32, of Olathe, Kan., fell three feet from a scaffold to his death in Berger, oil field town, last night. McCarthy had volunteered to hand a rope to workmen on a steel storage tank and slipped, falling on a paint bucket, a heavy pipe striking him as he fell. He died on the way to an Amarillo hospital.

KILLED IN ACCIDENT

Man Arrested at Temple Following Fatal Crash

TEMPLE, Aug. 18.—(AP)— Mrs. George Burchell, 45, was killed and Sam Bonds, about 60, badly injured last night when the automobile in which they were riding turned over on the Belver Springs road near Belton. T. J. Blankenship, driver of the car, was arrested following the accident and placed in jail. He was slightly injured.

OCHS PROGRESSES.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Fifty years ago Adolph S. Ochs was setting type at Knoxville, Tenn. Now he owns the New York Times, which has an annual gross income of $25,000,000. As a memento of his thirtieth anniversary as publisher, his composing room has just presented him an engraved silver printer's stick.

AMARILLO APE ROARS TONIGHT

Handsome but murderous looking sappo this guy is, isn't he. The writer has a sneaking feeling he ought to be run out of town. Must be something wrong with Chief Hodgins and his constabulary.

Yep, it's none other than Dutch Mantell, a thorn in the side of more than one respectable wrestling fan, who mixes it up with Billy Romonoff, another whose popularity is nil, tonight in the Wichita Falls Mat association feature.

Worst of it is, this bimbo Romonoff is working out of turn. Jack Gorman has a priority claim on the Dutchman. Has been yelping a month or more for a match with Mantell and then this Romonoff is run in with the savage Amarillo ape. It isn't fair, but that's neither here nor there. The match is on. The popular Gorman rates a bout with the winner, whoever he may be. It's a case of dog eat dog and Gorman doesn't care which.

Yaqui Joe, the wiry Redskin, has been working daily with Matty Matsuda in preparation for his return match tonight with Tommy Record. Jap says the Indian will turn the tables. Tommy hasn't been loafing on the job any and is fully prepared to cope with the primeval one.

Both matches are to be finish affairs. The first goes on at 8:15. Card's scheduled for the Eleventh and Ohio arena.

JONES HEADS U. S. GOLFERS

Atlantic Club Wielder Is Placed At Head Of First 10

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Closing of entries for the national amateur golf championship with a field of 152 starters was accompanied today by announcement of a ranking list of ten leading players, headed by Bobby Jones.

Second to the marvelous club wielder from Atlanta, the championship committee of the United States Golf association has ranked Jess W. Sweetzer, first American born player, to win the British amateur crown, who has been definitely eliminated from the fight through failure to file an entry blank. He is still recuperating in Canada from an attack of influenza.

Six other members of the Walker cup team find places in golf's "first ten" established for the first time this year. The two remaining players on the list are Chick Evans, former amateur and open champion and Frank Dolph, of Portland, Ore., who recently annexed the western amateur championship.

At number 3 position appears the name of Los Angeles, Cal., player, who ran up to Jones for the title two years ago—George Von Elm. Behind him, in order, come Francis Ouimet of Boston, number 4; Jesse P. Guilford of Boston, number 5; Evans, number 6; Watts Gunn, Atlanta, Ga., number 7; Roland B. MacKenzie, Washington, D. C., number 8; Robert A. Gardner, Chicago, number 9; Dolph, number 10.

In a second group of ten alphabetically are John G. Anderson of New York, Kefe Carter of Kansas City, D. Clarke Corkram of Philadelphia, William C. Fownes Jr., of Pittsburgh, Eddie Held of St. Louis, Harrison R. Johnston of St. Paul, Fred W. Lamprecht of Cleveland, Max R. Marston of Philadelphia, William M. Reekie of Montclair, and Clarence C. Wolff of St. Louis.

PIE TOO FAST.

PAUL SMITH'S, N. Y., Aug. 18. (AP)—A big cherry pie from Tavers City, Mich., has come for presidential consumption. It is 30 inches in diameter and four inches deep and contains 5,060 cherries. Hurrying motorists who brought it were stopped by Canadian police—not because of the pie's ingredients, but because they were speeding.

Jim and Ma Looking At The Mansion Through Courts?

Observers Say They Entered Run Off Just To Be in Position to Contest Election of Moody After It Is All Over.

AUSTIN, Aug. 18.—The Fergusons are making their second-primary race, after once withdrawing, just to be in position for a court contest of the nomination, in the belief of Moody supporters not officially connected with the Moody campaign.

"If Ferguson doesn't get but 10 votes on August 28, he will still have jockeyed into position to represent himself as a contestant. That is the reason, in my opinion, that the Fergusons changed their mind and stayed in the race," declared a Taylor friend of the Moody cause.

Had the Fergusons kept out of the run-off there could have been no contest after the August primary, it was pointed out. As it is, Moody supporters predict a contest will be entered in the courts by Ferguson immediately after August 22, and before the state convention meets in San Antonio, September 7.

Ferguson may even ask an injunction seeking to restrain the certification of Moodys' name as the nominee, it was hinted. If not that, then later action seeking to bar Moody's name off the general election ballot, by restraining the state officials, is foreseen.

Should Ferguson succeed in an attempt to have Moody declared ineligible for the primary ballot, then it is claimed that Mrs. Ferguson, opponent on the second-primary ballot, would be in position to claim the nomination.

The Moody people are confident of the outcome of any attempts at thwarting the will of the majority of the voters of Texas, but foresee another "battle of the courthouse" on the way to the November election, it has been admitted.

Moody leaders have let it be known they plan no litigation unless this move is started by the Fergusons, but that they claim a clear-cut opening has been made for a test to bar Mrs. Ferguson's name from the ticket. The Fergusons sought to exclude Moody because campaign contributions were listed in the names of other candidates. Promptly, affidavits were filed showing Lee Satterwhite and R. L. Bobbitt simply transmitted funds for others. Then it was found the Ferguson campaign organization had listed a contribution from a candidate for office.

Hunter Wins One And Loses One

Dallas Splits With Lowly Waco Outfit, 2 to 6 and 2 to 4

DALLAS, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Spike Hunter won the first game of a doubleheader with Waco for the Steers Wednesday, but dropped the second game. The scores were 2 to 1 and 4 to 2. The second game was called in the Waco half of the seventh on account of darkness.

Ace Elliott, pitching for Waco, lost the first game to Hunter after a bitter struggle, the two teams being deadlocked until the ninth. In this frame Hungling was given a double when West lost his fly in the sun, moved to third on Hunter's sacrifice and scored when Paddy Baumon singled. Dallas was opposed by Jake Freeze southpaw, in the second. Freeze was never in danger after the fourth, when his mates gave him a three run lead on two hits and two sacrifices. Sutherland relieved Hunter in the Waco half of the fifth and drew credit for the loss. The score:

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Early advances on continued unfavorable crop accounts met increased offerings around the 17 cent level in the cotton market again today and were followed by moderate reactions. December contracts sold up to 16.99 early, or 23 points net lower, but reacted to 16.79 closing at 16.85. The general market closed steady at net advance of six to 11 points.

The opening was firm at advances of six to 13 points on overnight reports of further rains or showers in the south, and a private crop report pointing to a yield of only 14,480,000 bales. Relatively steady Liverpool cables encouraged buying on the unfavorable weather news and after the weekly report of the weather bureau, active months showed net advances of 19 to 26 points, October selling up to 17.00 and January to 17.05.

Realizing checked the advance at these figures, and probably some selling for a reaction, prices sagging off during the early afternoon. October declined to 16.80 and January to 16.86 or about 20 points from the best, but the detailed weather reports show a good deal of precipitation particularly in section west of the Mississippi river, helped to steady the market later. Much of the day's business was attributed to evening up of accounts in preparation for next Monday's government crop report. Theq talk in some uarters here was that in spite of recent daily complaints of deterioration the official figures as of August, are likely to show a well maintained if not slightly increased crop prospect.

Private cables reported buying in Liverpool on a more optimistic view of the coal situation and said there was a fair cloth demand from South American, but that China advices were discouraging. Port receipts today 9,526. U. S. port stock 60) 586; exports today 9,363, making 160,424 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 18.—(AP)—The cotton market was again fairly active today and although there was a good initial advance of 16 to 23 points on favorable cables and continued bad weather which was increased to a gain of 29 to 30 points after the weekly weather report was issued giving a generally unfavorable account of the weather and the progress of the crop the price trend later became reactionary.

The early bulge encountered a renewal of the liquidation by longs which started yesterday. Recent buyers have become afraid that the next government report will fail to reflect the renectly reported damage by insects and bad weather and were desirous of evening up their commitments at every opportunity. As a result of the selling prices lost nearly all of the early gain in the later trading and the close showed a net gain for the day of only two to four points.

At the start Liverpool cables were much better than due and first sales here showed gains of 16 to 23 points. The market continued to improve after the start until October traded at 17.00, December at 16.92 and January at 16.91, or 24 to 25 points above the previous close. The market then turned easier on a renewal of long liquidation and October traded down to 16.70, December to 16.69 and January to 16.80, or to within a single point of the previous close. These were the low points of the day.

The market rallied again after the weekly weather report was issued and made new highs at 17.04 for October, 16.97 for December and 16.97 for January or 29 to 30 points above the previous close. These were the high points of the day.

The market was reactionary for most of the rest of the session and near the end had dropped back to within a few points of the lows, closing at a nominal net gain for the day.

Exports for the day totaled 9,363 bales.

Grain

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Evidence that export buying of wheat has been much more active than supposed helped to put fresh strength into wheat values today. Largely as a result, the wheat market closed firm, to 1⅝ cents hiher, with corn ⅜ to ¼ cents up, oats at ⅜ to ⅝ cents advance, and provisions showing a rise of 2 to 15 cents.

Threshing delays in spring wheat territory were again a bullish factor owing to reports of additional wet weather northwest. A reduction of 20,000,000 bushels in the official estimate of the wheat crop of Roumania was also a subject of comment in view of the fact that Liverpool quotations today were steadier than due. On the otherhand, the United States department of agriculture reported that domestic winter wheat farmers expect to increase their average 14.4 per cent this fall.

Corn and oats rallied with wheat. The Missouri state crop report was bullish on corn, saying rains came too late to help a great deal of the crop.

Provisions were responsive to upturns both in hog values and in grain.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Extensive readjustment of speculative accounts with a rather wide spread tendency to switch from the industrials to the rails, imparted considerable irregularity to today's stock market. Selling pressure was quitt pronounced during the morning, due to a renewal of bear attacks and heavy liquidation by small traders.

Early declines ran from 1 to 4 points in scores of popular issues, but these were reduced or converted into moderate gains during the rally in the afternoon.

Although call money renewed at 4½ per cent, and held at that figure all day, with a plentiful supply of funds available, Wall street continued to express concern over the credit situation.

The day's business news was mixed in character. The weekly steel trade reviews reported that mill operations were being continued at a high rate with no appreciable falling off in new business, although attention was called to the growing imports of foreign steel products. The weekly report of the American Petroleum Institute showed another large increase in the daily average of gross crude oil production last week. The Cuban-American sugar company cut its quarterly dividend from 50 to 25 cents.

Heavy liquidation was again apparent in United States Steel common, presumably in further reflection of unofficial intimations that no stock dividend would be declared this year. The stock broke more than 7 points below the high record established yesterday to 152⅞, but later rallied to 154⅝, off 1⅝ net. General Motors, which has shared the leadership of recent markets with steel sold as low as 201¼, but closed at 205⅝ for a net gain of 1¼ points.

Mack Truck was one of the outstanding industrials closing five points higher at 134. Pierce Arrow preferred jumped 7½ points to a new record price at 126 and the common closed 2¼ points higher at 13⅞.

The announcement of several large orders for railroad equipment brought fresh buying into that group with special strength being shown by Air Reduction, General Railway Signal and Westinghouse Air Brake.

Buying of the rails was stimulated by the publication of a report of the bureau of railway economic showing that earnings ad stock of class one roads broke all records in the first six months of the year. Chesapeake and Ohio, Rock Island and Pere Marquette attained their highest prices in a year, or longer.

Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Commodity prices were mixed. Active wheat futures rallied about a cent a bushel on reports of adverse weather. Cotton closed six to 11 points net higher. With a better demand noted from trade sources.

Raw sugar was unchanged but futures were slightly easier. Coffee prices closed 7 points lower to 8 points higher.

JIM BLOWING

and I assume that he is the author of this latest attempted explanation of the fact that the school apportionment for next year has been reduced to only $11.50 per capita. The statement is a weak attempt to shift responsibility and to carry the public mind away from the record of the highway matters.

"Ferguson's whole attitude towards the school system may be described by stating that in the name of friendship he has done it an injury.

"An appropriation by the last legislature for vocational training, was vetoed by the goveror. The appropriation for our public school system made by the last legislature was $3,042,000 as compared with $10,590,762.32 appropriated for public school purposes by the preceeding legislature. In boasting of the fact that the appropriations made by the last legislature were less than those made by the preceeding legislature, Mr. Ferguson neglected to tell the people that about $7,500,000 had been cut off from our public school system.

"In the latter part of July he sought to gain a political advantage by reducing the ad valorem tax rate. The reduction in the ad valorem tax rate was made possible in a large measure by the reduction in appropriations for educational purposes. The cut of 12 cents in the ad valorem rate would mean a very small sum to the average taxpayer of this state, whereas it would represent a considerable one to the large corporations upon whom Mr. Ferguson claims that he would like to saddle the major portion of our tax burdens.

Hot and Cold.

"Sufficient money not having been appropriated for the adequate support and maintenance of our school system, it necessarily followed that the per capital apportionment had to be placed at a miserably low figure. And Mr. Ferguson cannot blow hot and cold. He cannot in one breath boast of reductions in appropriations and in the ad valorem tax rate, and at the same time disclaim responsibility for the fact that our schools, under the present per capita apportionment for next year, will not be properly maintained and many of them can only remain open for a period of three or four months. If he undertakes to claim the cut in appropriations as a beneficial act to the people of Texas, he must at the same time admit that it was done at the expense of public education in this state, and that the children of Texas must pay the cost of this effort to promote himself politically.

"Having done the schools an injury, he would now ask you to place him in office as proxy governor, because he proposes to secure sufficient funds for school purposes by an increase in the gasoline tax. And he makes the fictitious claim that this tax would be paid by the seller of the gasoline. It is an axiom of political science, and one which Mr. Ferguson cunningly seeks to put out of view, that any tax fixed on a commodity is, in the final analysis, paid by the one who purchases and consumes that commodity. Under the existing law a tax of one cent is fixed on the sale of each gallon of gasoline, and the citizens of this state who purchase and use gasoline are made to pay one cent more per gallon by reason of that tax, and in the end it is the citizen who pays the tax, and not the seller of the gasoline, as Mr. Ferguson would have you believe.

"In other words, he has built up a straw man and will now proceed to demolish that straw man."

Childress County Tax Rate Is Cut

CHILDRESS, Aug 18.—The county commissioners of Childress county have reduced the tax rate of the county from $1 per $100 to 85 cents, which, with the state rate of 65 cents, will make the state and county combined rate $1.50.

The reduction came as welcome news to the tax payers of the county who stand to effect a considerable saving over the year. A rapid increase in valuatons the past 12 months will, it is believed, provide increased revenue to accrue to the county even with the lower tax rate.

afternoon program with an address of welcome. The mayor tendered the keys as well as the entire city to the visitors and wished them a happy and successful encampment. He told them he was reared on a farm and that for twenty years he had followed the plow and the lot of a farmer, and that he was familiar with their problems and their achievements. "When I was a boy, my mother did not have the opportunity you ladies have, and had no such organizations as this to help with her home problems," the mayor stated, and added that he hoped they would increase their home and form efficiency with more concentrated effort in farm club work.

Rug Demonstration.

After the address of welcome a rug making demonstration was given by Miss Mayme Lee Hayden.

The evening program consisted of a musical entertainment given by the Girl Reserves of Wichita Falls under the directorship of Miss Ivo Wilson.

Today's program will include vesper services, rug making demonstration, a number of lectures, a sightseeing tour of the city, a button hole contest, club reports and musical program.

Miss Louise Webb, who has sponsored the encampment stated late last night that the affair had begun with flattering promise and that by this evening she expects at least 150 women to be in attendance. A large number of ladies have already registered for today and tomorrow, and the attendance and general achievements of the encampment is much better than ever before.

STOCK-A-DAY

About 465 miles of track are operated by the Gulf, Mobile and Northern. The road runs from Mobile to Jackson, Tenn., where connection is made with the Illinois Central, the Mobile and Ohio and the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis. The road has attracted considerable attention because of its possibilities in a merger of lines requiring an outlet to the Gulf of Mexico. The company has interests in several other small roads one of which gives it entrance to Meridian, Miss.

The company has twice been reorganized. The last re-organization wiped out the larger part of the funded debt, which now consist of $4,000,000 issue of 5 -2 per cent bonds due in 1950. This was put out in March 1925 to pay off all indebtedness of the company including notes due to the government.

Capital stock consists of $11,513,400 outstanding in 6 per cent cumulative preferred shares of $100 par and $10,994,100 in common shares of $100 par. The payments on the preferred stock are now on the regular six per cent basis as of Jan. 1, 1926, arrears amounted to 20 per cent which must be paid off before any dividends can be distributed on the common.

Earnings have increased in the last five years from 30 per cent on the preferred in 1921 to 11.35 per cent in 1925. Freight density has grown and shipments have been handled with added efficiency. Gross revenues in 1925 were $6,321,030 and net operating income $1,389,969. For the first five months of this year net income was $557,143 and gross revenues $2,547,158.

HOTEL TOWED FOUR MILES

Point Breeze Structure At Lake Kemp Moved To Sheltered Cove

The "Point Breeze" floating hotel at Lake Kemp was moved successfully from its old station to a new mooring in the calm waters of Big Moonshine bay about four miles away Wednesday morning. A large number of motor-boats were hitched to the houseboat and the four miles were negotiated in approximately an hour and a half.

When the big boat started to move a large German police dog which makes its residence aboard, became very nervous, and when the boat had left the shore more than a hundred feet behind, the dog jumped into the lake and swam back to watch the moving of the boat from the safety of the shore-line.

The move was made necessary by the turbulance of the water at the old station, it was declared. The new location can be reached by entering the grounds at the Cara Blanca park and following the new 60-foot road to the mooring.

Lions Listen To Address By Harrison

It is only the little men who think themselves too smart to take advice from other people. We sometimes clothe ourselves with so much importance that we close ourselves to any help from human contact. We must be careful not to encourage in our own organization only 'yes' men who approve all our acts and echo our thoughts," Hubert Harrison, manager of the Wichita Falls chamber of commerce told members of the Lions club at their regular weekly luncheon Wednesday.

The most important resources we have in this community are human resources. As one writer has said, we have spent too much time in developing our natural resources and have neglected the development of our human resources, the speaker continued.

E. M. Baker, president of the Electra Lions club, invited the local club to meet with the members from Electra in a local watermelon feast. J. T. Camp was appointed to meet Mr. Baker and arrange the date and place for the feast.

A. C. Ripley and Dr. R. H. Graham were appointed a committee to study the feasibility of organizing a boys' auxiliary and band to the Lions club.

Art Displaying Handsome Painting By Famed Artist

An unusual exhibit is offered this week to lovers of art in the windows of Art Jewelry company leading jewelers of this city. An original painting by Emil Pollak-Ottondorf has been loaned for the special purpose of this exhibit by the Towle Manufacturing company, manufacturers of solid silver. It has appeared during the past year in leading magazines in connection with the national advertising of Towle solid silver.

The underlying thought in having this painting has been to show that solid silver has been precious through the ages, that for centuries it has been held in high regard not only by the world's rulers but by many great artists who have done their best work in it.

Mr. Emil Pollak-Ottendorf is best known and generally recognized as a portrait painter and also as a painter of historical pictures, for which his extensive studies in European art academies and his world-wide travels and research have particularly fitted him.

The Art Jewelry company is holding a special open house this week and has received unusual shipments of silver. They have extended a cordial invitation to the public to visit their silver department.
