Ferraro's 'nervous' about Bush debate

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Vice President George Bush and Geraldine Ferraro are plunging into preparations for their debate this week with pressure heightened by poll results suggesting that Walter F. Mondale won his confrontation with President Reagan.

"Sure, I'm nervous," Ms. Ferraro, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, said of Thursday's scheduled debate with Bush. "I'd be a sick person if I weren't a little nervous about debating with 50 million people watching."

Mondale and Reagan both were out campaigning on Monday, appearing at traditional Columbus Day events, Mondale flush with the good reviews his debate performance Sunday night was drawing and greeted by his largest crowds in months.

Reagan and Mondale both said they'd let voters decide who won, but Mondale was clearly enthused. "This is a brand new race," Mondale said. "From now on, everything is wide open."

Reagan campaigned in Baltimore, and in Charlotte, N.C., helping GOP Sen. Jesse Helms in his tough re-election fight. "I'm smiling," Reagan told reporters who asked how he thought he'd done. "I do not fear the judgment of my fellow citizens on Nov. 6," he said later.

Both Bush and his Democratic counterpart were closeted with aides today and tomorrow in preparation for their debate in Philadelphia. Ms. Ferraro was at her home in New York, reviewing briefing material and watching videotapes of her opponent, while Bush was in Washington, holding mock debates with a stand-in for his opponent.

Bush, meantime, was said by his press secretary to be "understanding" of a flap over a remark made by his wife Barbara Bush to reporters aboard Air Force Two on Monday en route to New York for a Columbus Day appearance.

Complaining that her husband was being criticized unfairly for paying only 12.6 percent of their income in federal income taxes in 1983, Mrs. Bush said she and the vice president enjoy their lifestyle and don't pretend to be poor "like that $4 million — I can't say it, but it rhymes with rich."

After the remark was reported, Bush press secretary Peter Teeley said the vice president's wife "feels awful about her remark.... I don't think I can express to you the depth of feeling Mrs. Bush has on this," Teeley said.

with Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres. Bush was joining in the session.

The president planned another campaign trip Wednesday to Michigan, and on Friday he is scheduled to make a nostalgic whistlestop train trip through Ohio.

Mondale has a full week of campaigning, with stops today in Cincinnati, Detroit and Pittsburgh.

Both the Mondale and Reagan camps claimed their polls showed their man had won the confrontation Sunday in Louisville, Ky. But neutral polls pointed to Mondale, though by varying margins.

An overnight survey conducted for Newsweek by the Gallup organization said 54 percent thought Mondale won, 35 percent thought Reagan.

A CBS-New York Times poll of 476 people showed 43 percent said Mondale won the debate and 34 percent said Reagan won. Only half the Reagan supporters surveyed thought he won, while almost all the Mondale supporters surveyed thought he won.

ABC News said its survey of 668 viewers found a split between Mondale and Reagan: 39 percent said Mondale won, while 38 percent said Reagan. USA Today's survey had it for Mondale, 39-34.

None suggested the results had caused a major shift in Reagan's large lead over Mondale in the polls.

But the Mondale camp was looking to Thursday's vice presidential debate in hopes of continuing their momentum, while Bush had the job of keeping the score from going 2-0 for the Democrats.

"The debates have to work together to give the Democrats the push they need," said V. Lance Tarrance, a pollster who works for Republicans. "She has to do very well on Thursday for that to happen."

FNB art draws $850,000

Sunday sales of the former First National Bank of Midland's corporate art collection were $800,000, bringing the two-day total to $850,000 and marking the end of a collection assembled by what for many years was a financial cornerstone of this city.

Established in 1890, First National Bank of Midland was declared insolvent by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the assets purchased by RepublicBank Corp. in October of 1983. During its lifetime, First National Bank of Midland acquired a reputation for having developed one of the most extensive corporate art collections ever assembled.

The art work auctioned this past weekend at Midland Center was not all of the bank's collection. It represented about two-thirds of the value of the collection, said auctioneer Jerry Hart.

"The rest was retained by RepublicBank First National which purchased it from the FDIC," Hart said.

Hart and his wife Wynonna Hart are the owners of Hart Galleries of Houston. The gallery was commissioned by the FDIC to conduct the liquidation auction.

All 650 pieces were sold to the highest bidder. By the close of Saturday's auction, 350 lots, ranging in value from $50 for a Kathy McCall silkscreen to $18,000 for an Eric Sloane oil, were moved, bringing the sale total for the day to $250,000.

Most of the paintings with a potential of selling in the five and six figure bracket were sold on Sunday, bringing that day's total to $600,000.

As expected, bringing top prices were Thomas Moran's oil painting "Fairmont Park," Philadelphia, 1871, $85,000; Thomas Moran's oil painting "Grand Canal," Venice, $80,000; an A.D. Greer oil painting, $40,000; Harry Jackson's bronze "John Wayne American," $35,000; and Tony Eubanks' oil painting "Crossin' Whiskey Creek," $25,000.

Hart said prior to the sale that the items being auctioned had a potential of bringing in $1 million.

Although the auction realized $150,000 less than that amount, Mrs. Hart said, when she was contacted in Houston Monday, they were pleased with the sales total.

"In some respects they brought more than we expected," she said. "I believe this is because of the sentimentality that Midlanders attached to this auction. This bank was part of their heritage since 1890."

Cooler crew aims shuttle's cameras at Middle East

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Challenger's astronauts aimed their radar camera at the Mideast and other targets on Earth today as a welcomed blast of air conditioning cooled their spaceship, which the commander said had been as hot as a Texas summer.

"Cooler air is circulating in the mid-deck," Mission Control spokesman John Lawrence reported after Commander Robert Crippen repaired the air-conditioning system, which had not worked well since an ice ball clogged plumbing on Sunday.

With cooler air, the five men and two women astronauts would feel more comfortable during an international news conference planned for later today, halfway through their eight-day mission.

They were to discuss their successes and problems with reporters in Sydney, Australia, Jakarta, Indonesia, Bangkok, Thailand, and with Canadian and American journalists at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston.

The cabin temperature, which soared to 90 on Monday, should be down to a normal 75 by this afternoon, Lawrence said, adding, "The crew is probably feeling a lot cooler than it has in some time."

The heat had solicited this comment from Crippen: "It feels like it's about late August in Houston."

Mission Control worked out air-conditioning repair procedures overnight and radioed them to the spaceship. They worked perfectly.

The crew continued this morning gathering data with a radar camera powerful enough to see below dry, windblown soil. "We just had a good pass over Egypt and the Gulf of Hormuz," astronaut Kathy Sullivan reported after one run.

In that part of the world, the camera is seeking information on buried river beds, sand migration and geologic structures.

Officials also were watching tropical storm Josephine as it churned about 550 miles southeast of Cape Canaveral, hoping it would not interfere with the shuttle's planned landing at the Cape on Saturday. Weather forecasters said it should be long gone by then, but noted that such storms are unpredictable.

The news conference was possible because specialists on the ground restored the computer memory of the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite orbiting 22,000 miles overhead.

The satellite, which relays voice and digital communications from the shuttle to the ground, was knocked out of service for 14 hours Monday when "a heavy cosmic burst of radiation" generated by sunspots wiped out its memory.

TDRS had suffered similar outages in the past during periods of heavy solar flare activity, but it took longer than usual this time for engineers at the satellite's ground station at White Sands, N.M., to put it back in service.

The satellite permits Challenger to be in contact with the ground during an uninterrupted 45 minutes of each 91-minute circuit of the globe. Ground stations are located in areas not covered by the satellite.

NASA asked for help from the Air Force, which turned over four of its ground stations to help fill some global gaps. Still, there were long periods of silence when the shuttle passed over uncovered areas.

The astronauts' major task Monday and today was obtaining high-resolution imagery of various parts of Earth with a radar camera, data that could help locate things like underground rivers, polluted waters, forests damaged by acid rain and ancient lost cities.

During the TDRS outage, radar information was stored on tape recorders and relayed to the ground when the satellite was restored. That problem, together with another with a transmitting antenna, has sharply reduced the number of pictures expected from the experiment.

Nevertheless, scientists were pleased with the first images processed from the camera — "exquisite" pictures of Montreal.

Policemens' calendar selling like 'copcakes'

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Ever since the new "Copcakes" calendar came out last week, former police officer Ed Haton says he hasn't been getting much sleep, what with trying to open all the mail and fill all the orders.

So Haton and fellow officer Jorge Garcia submitted their resignations last weekend, claiming the new publication was taking too much of their time and causing supervisors to "hassle" them because of the sexually suggestive calendar featuring Texas police officers.

Police spokesman Doug Clarke said the officers' decision to resign was their own and that the department did not force them to quit.

The calendar, promoted as "the calendar they said shouldn't be done," features photos of 14 officers — five of them from Fort Worth — in muscular poses. Some of them are in tandem with pictures of scantily clad women.

Haton said he and Garcia sold out the first 3,000 copies — at $7.25 each within three days of publication last week.

Meanwhile, Police Chief H.F. Hopkins has ordered an internal affairs investigation to determine whether the publication violated the department's code of conduct. None of the poses are obscene, but Hopkins said he ordered the investigation because the calendar "raised certain ethical and legal questions."

Haton said he and Garcia submitted their resignations Saturday and turned in their police equipment Monday morning. Haton's wife, officer Kathleen Haton, also resigned. Haton said before their resignations, Garcia and Ms. Haton were transferred to new assignments in what he believes was punishment for involvement with the calendar. Haton said he didn't wait to see what might happen to him.

However, police Capt. K.R. McDonald and patrol Deputy Police Chief B.J. Kirkpatrick said the transfers had nothing to do with the calendar.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Showers are forecast through Wednesday for the western Gulf, Mississippi Valley and Washington coast, according to the National Weather Service.

Overnight lows could drop into middle 50s

From Staff and Wire Reports

Partly cloudy skies and the 20 percent chance of thunderstorms predicted by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport may cause Midlanders to reach for their umbrellas. Conditions are expected to remain through Wednesday.

Forecasters are calling for lows tonight in the middle 50s with southeasterly winds at five to 10 mph.

Wednesday's high is expected to be much like Monday's recorded 81. Winds will increase to less than 15 mph.

The record high for Monday was 100 degrees set in 1979. The record low set in 1970 was 19 degrees below this morning's recorded 55.

STATE

Heavy rains pelted much of South Texas early today, easing a lengthy drought but causing flooding across roads in some areas.

Nearly three inches of rain had fallen by 8 a.m. in Pleasanton, just east of Jourdanton in Atascosa County.

"It's been raining a lot," said Leonard Lozano, dispatcher with the Atascosa County sheriff's office. "But it hasn't endangered any people yet."

Lozano said the county was under a flash flood warning early today. The rains had forced the closing of "couple miles" of Farm Road 2146 between Poteet and Charlotte, he said.

Rainfall totals of 2.40 inches were reported in Cotulla by 8 a.m. Also recording heavy rains were Carrizo Springs with 1.87 and Hines with 2.10.

San Antonio got only .13 inch and the rest of Bexar County drew less than an inch, the National Weather Service reported.

The showers and thunderstorms that hit South Texas early today were in an east-west line between Zavala County through Frio, McMullen and Live Oak counties.

Bill Hare, meteorologist with the NWS in San Antonio, said another line of thunderstorms was forming between Rocksprings and Junction and was heading southeast to San Antonio and San Marcos.

In addition to Atascosa County, a flash flood warning was also issued for LaSalle and Dimmitt counties.

NATION

Scattered showers and thunderstorms swept wide areas of the Plains and Midwest early today and extended into the upper Ohio River Valley.

A few thunderstorms continued over southeast Missouri and western Illinois, while a line of thunderstorms developed over northern Arkansas.

Scattered thundershowers rumbled over southeast Colorado, western portions of the southern Plains and southern Texas.

Mrs. Bush apologizes for remark

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Barbara Bush apologized to Geraldine Ferraro and was described as feeling "awful" and "lousy" for saying that she and her husband, Vice President George Bush, enjoy their lifestyle and don't pretend to be poor "like that $4 million — I can't say it, but it rhymes with rich."

Mrs. Bush made the remark Monday while joking with two reporters aboard Air Force Two before a flight to New York. After the conversation was revealed by news services, Mrs. Bush called Ms. Ferraro to apologize.

Bush's press secretary, Peter Teeley, said the vice president's wife "feels awful about her remark and conveyed that to Ms. Ferraro ... I don't think I can express to you the depth of feeling Mrs. Bush has on this," Teeley said.

"She felt lousy about it," he added. Teeley said Ms. Ferraro "could not have been nicer."

The vice president was told of the incident and was "understanding," Teeley said.

Ms. Ferraro, in New York, said, "Mrs. Bush called and apologized and was very, very gracious and very nice."

She added, "She said she did not intend to call me any names and did not call me any names."

Mrs. Bush's remark provided campaign fuel for Walter Mondale, the Democratic presidential candidate. "The Republicans have always had trouble responding to Ms. Ferraro's candidacy," said Mondale's press secretary, Maxine Isaacs. "I assume this was Mrs. Bush's attempt to make a joke, but I don't think it was funny. It was in poor taste."

Geraldine Ferraro

Mrs. Bush made the remark as she accompanied her husband to New York to march 25 blocks Monday in the Columbus Day parade. While the vice president's plane was still on the ground in Washington, Mrs. Bush complained to news service reporters that her husband was being criticized unfairly for paying only 12.8 percent in federal income taxes last year.

She said that when state and other taxes are figured in, the Bushes paid 32 percent of their gross income in taxes. With a smile on her face, Mrs.

Bush said she and her husband enjoy their comfortable style of living and don't pretend to be poor "like that $4 million — I can't say it, but it rhymes with rich."

At that point, the plane began taxiing and Mrs. Bush left to take her seat in the vice president's cabin.

Later, the two reporters asked to speak with Mrs. Bush again about her remark, but she was not available. Later interviewed by television reporters, Mrs. Bush said, "I called Mrs. Ferraro and told her I would never call her a witch for anything."

Teeley said he talked with Mrs. Bush and "she said she was guilty of making the remark as a result of a humorous encounter with the press which she thought was off the record."

"I must say, however, she was quite surprised she was quoted on it, under the circumstances ... standing in the aisle, with two reporters trading humorous exchanges," Teeley said. He said Mrs. Bush did not mean to be derogatory.

Ms. Ferraro and Mondale have been among those saying that Bush's disclosure that he paid 12.8 percent of his income in federal taxes last year illustrates unfairness in Reagan administration tax cuts.

Financial disclosure reports have placed the Bush family net worth at $2.1 million and Ms. Ferraro and her husband, John Zaccaro's, at $3.8 million.

According to tax returns released last week by Bush, he and his wife paid 48.6 percent of their adjusted gross income as federal taxes in 1981, 24.2 percent in 1982 and 12.8 percent last year.

Ferraro and her husband reported paying 26.1 percent in 1981, 26.5 percent in 1982 and 33.6 percent last year.

At the parade, Bush had the good luck of marching just steps behind actress Sophia Loren, who looked stunning in a white suit, red scarf and red heels as she smiled and waved to spectators.

Her presence so close to Bush helped tame a huge outpouring of Mondale supporters who lined the parade route with Mondale-Ferraro signs. Boos aimed at Bush frequently turned into cheers, whistles and applause when the crowds caught sight of Miss Loren, the grand marshal of the parade.

Texas sets voter registration records

Associated Press

With voter registration for the Nov. 6 general election over, county officials across Texas are reporting record numbers of sign-ups from would-be voters. In some counties, officials were adding personnel Monday to process the applications.

In Williamson County, north of Austin, officials reported that 90 percent of all eligible voters had registered. Among counties where a record number of new voters have registered are McLennan, Fort Bend, Lubbock and Hidalgo counties.

Officials of both major political parties interpreted the higher registrations as indications of increased strength for their candidates.

Secretary of State Myra McDaniel predicted a general election turnout of 7.5 million voters, about 700,000 more than were eligible to vote as of last spring.

However, Harris County voter Registrar Carl Smith cautioned that enthusiasm in October doesn't necessarily mean a record vote in November.

"You can register all day, but it won't do any good if they don't vote," Smith said.

U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm and State Sen. Lloyd Doggett on Monday continued their appeals for support in their bids for the U.S. Senate from Texas Monday.

Gramm said he plans to keep his campaign for the U.S. Senate on a positive note even though his rival has begun a "period of the big lie" that distorts his position on Social Security and other key issues.

Doggett, a Democratic state senator, used an Austin news conference Monday to unveil a new television advertisement that criticizes Gramm's stand on Social Security. Gramm's record on the issue shows that he "just does not care," the ad charges.

Gramm and Doggett are vying for the Senate seat held since 1961 by Republican Sen. John Tower.

Gramm, who was first elected to Congress as a Democrat but later switched parties, said in an El Paso appearance that the advertisement puts past quotes out of context.

Doggett said Gramm has refused to stand in defense of the Social Security system even though "his own president" promised during his debate with Walter Mondale Sunday night "never" to cut Social Security

Study says Gramm leading in oil industry contributions

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Republican Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas is leading the nation in raising congressional campaign funds from oil and gas industry political action committees, according to a new study.

Gramm, seeking the Senate seat of retiring Republican John Tower, had received a total of $187,489 from oil and gas PACs as of Sept. 1. At the same time, his opponent, Democratic state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, had gotten only one $20 gift.

The study, based solely on filings by 212 oil and gas industry PACs with the Federal Election Commission from Jan. 1, 1983 through this past August, showed Republicans on average faring twice as well as Democrats in raising money from energy interests.

GOP candidates for the 33 Senate seats at stake in 1984 so far have received an average $41,850 from oil and gas PACs compared with an average $17,684 for Democrats. In races for the 435 House seats, energy interests have contributed an average $8,502 to each Republican candidate and $4,304 to each Democratic contender.

"About the only places oil and gas PACs are supporting Democrats are in the producing states of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana unless they are key members of the House leadership or Senate committees," said Mike Podhorzer, an author of the study.

Through August, according to the FEC reports, the oil and gas PACs made contributions totaling $5.47 million to congressional candidates.

The study, released Monday, was put together by the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, an organization of unions and consumer groups critical of the oil and gas industry.

Noting that PAC contributions traditionally are heaviest in September and October, the coalition said it "expects the totals to go much higher by Election Day" and exceed the $8 million that the same PACs gave to congressional candidates in the 1982 election.

Behind Gramm, the largest recipient of oil and gas money is incumbent Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., at $123,750. Percy's opponent, Democratic Rep. Paul Simon, cosponsor of an unsuccessful bill in the House to roll back federal price ceilings on natural gas, has received only $1,000 from oil and gas PACs.

Sen. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, the ranking minority member on the Senate Energy Committee who handily won re-election last month, is the largest Democratic recipient at $122,126.

In races for House seats, the biggest oil and gas PAC recipient is Rep. Jack Fields, R-Texas, at $59,897.

Among the 212 PACs, the largest single contributor was Teneo Inc. with a total of $288,050. Standard Oil Co. of Indiana — AMOCO — was second at $230,024, followed by FMC Corp. at $189,940 and Union Pacific Corp. at $165,875.

benefits to current recipients.

He then asked rhetorically why Gramm, who has campaigned on his close ties to Reagan, refuses to make the same pledge.

"I'll tell you why... Phil Gramm just does not care. What other solution can there be?" Doggett said.

Gramm said the TV advertisements take statements Gramm made "totally out of context."

Gramm said Doggett's campaign is "getting into the period of the big lie," but said he has no plans to counter with negative advertising of his own. "I try to keep campaigns on an issue plane," the congressman said.

Leftists accept Duarte's peace talk proposal

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — El Salvador's leftist guerrilla groups today announced they have accepted a proposal by President Jose Napoleon Duarte for peace talks next Monday.

The Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, also proposed that Colombian President Belisario Betancur serve as a mediator in the talks, but otherwise accepted all of Duarte's proposal.

The only condition Duarte made was that all parties come to the conference unarmed.

"Taking into account the deepening of the war and the worsening of the regional situation, the FMLN and FDR express their intention to attend to discuss the Salvadoran crisis in its globality and present proposals for the same," the National Liberation Front said in a broadcast by its clandestine Radio Venceremos.

The front is a coalition of five guerrilla groups that have been fighting for power for the past five years. The FDR, or Democratic Revolutionary Front, includes more than a dozen outlawed leftist political parties and movements, and has been in coalition with the National Liberation Front.

Duarte made his proposal in a speech before the U.N. General Assembly on Monday.

He proposed that the talks begin

Oct. 15 at La Palma, a small town in guerrilla-controlled territory 51 miles north of San Salvador and six miles from the Honduran border.

Duarte reiterated his offer at a news conference later in the day, and the government in San Salvador released 10 prominent leftist political prisoners as a gesture of goodwill.

The Radio Venceremos broadcast said Duarte's announcement was in response to a "private letter" the National Liberation Front had sent the president last May 18. It said Roman Catholic Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas, who acted as an intermediary, carried the letter.

The front said it reiterated the offer in a message which the Rev.

Jesse Jackson carried when he visited El Salvador during a Central American tour in June, while he was a U.S. Democratic presidential candidate.

The broadcast, monitored in San Salvador, said La Palma was an acceptable site for the conference and urged government forces not to initiate any action in the area until further notice.

The broadcast said two leaders of the National Liberation Front and two from the Democratic Revolutionary Front will attend the talks, but did not give their names. It urged that Duarte be accompanied by members of the armed forces high command, and accepted Duarte's proposal for a number of journalists to witness the meeting.

Haton said he and Garcia also wanted to relieve possible pressure on the other Fort Worth officers who posed.

"If we left, maybe it would make it easier on the guys in the calendar," he said.

Then again, Haton conceded that filling orders for the calendar was taking more time than they had anticipated.

"It was too much to handle, working on four hours sleep and trying to handle all the mail orders," Haton said.

"We'd do our regular shift and get home about 11 p.m. and open envelopes until 2 a.m. It got to the point where we were tired and not effective as I'd like to be."

"You can only do one job well," he said.

Since the first 3,000 calendars sold so quickly, a second 5,000 printing was ordered Friday, he said.

Even the Fort Worth Public Library requested two copies for its local history collection, Haton said.

Haton and Garcia borrowed $18,000 to start the calendar project last summer and "the calendar has paid for itself already in three days," Haton said.

The officers have signed an exclusive sales agreement in the Dallas-Fort Worth area with one bookstore but will continue to offer the calendar by mail also.

"The people really like it, especially the ladies," Haton said.

He said he and Garcia, who have received nationwide publicity about the calendar, plan to offer the idea to police associations as a fund-raising project.

"We're making money and helping other officers, too," he said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Prison officials halt several fights

MADISONVILLE, Texas (AP) — Prison officers using tear gas quickly halted several fights that broke out in a recreation room at a Texas Department of Corrections unit, a prison spokesman said.

No inmates were seriously injured in the incidents at the Ferguson Unit, said prison spokesman Charles Brown.

Several groups of inmates started fighting in the unit's recreation room at about 11 a.m., but officers stopped the fights within five to 10 minutes using tear gas, Brown said.

No weapons were used in the fights, which involved about 25 to 30 inmates, Brown said.

Brown said he did not know how many inmates were injured, but said 17 prisoners were treated at the Ferguson Unit's infirmary and were released.

A few inmates suffered asthma attacks from the tear gas and were taken to TDC's Galveston clinic, where a few others were treated for cuts and bruises, Brown said.

Brown said an undisclosed number of inmates were locked in their cells and officials were investigating the incident.

The cause of the fights was unknown, he said.

Falls claims life of 12-year-old

SNYDER, Texas (AP) — A 40-foot fall off the roof of the Scurry County Coliseum claimed the life of a 12-year-old boy who was searching for bats while his parents were inside rehearsing for a musical kit, authorities said.

Jeff Polk was pronounced dead at 4:10 a.m. in the intensive care unit at Lubbock General Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Jacque Hastings. He was a student at Snyder Junior High School.

The boy suffered multiple head and internal injuries, Ms. Hastings said.

Polk fell from the coliseum's roof about 2:40 p.m. Sunday after he climbed a ladder to the roof, began searching for bats and stepped out on a suspended ceiling, said Snyder police officer Sy Tavor.

His parents, Glenn and Twila Polk, were in the coliseum at the time of the accident, rehearsing a musical kit for the "White Buffalo Days" festival, scheduled for this weekend.

The boy was rushed to Cogdell Memorial Hospital and then transferred to Lubbock.

Glenn Polk is an announcer for KSNV radio in Snyder.

City of Lufkin could face more fines

AUSTIN (AP) — The City of Lufkin could face another $32,000 in fines if it fails to clean up a polluting sewage treatment plant, the state's attorney general says.

Attorney General Jim Mattox announced Monday that Lufkin had been fined at least $32,000 for pollution emanating from the city's sewage treatment plant.

Mattox said an agreed judgment calls for the city to pay $32,000 by Oct. 15 and upgrade its sewage treatment plant to state requirements or face another $32,000 fine on Feb. 1, 1985.

The suit against Lufkin was filed by Mattox at the request of the Texas Department of Water Resources.

Mattox said the department's Environmental Protection Division also is negotiating with the city of Austin in a similar case involving the Williamson Creek Treatment Plant. The state is seeking a $100,000 fine in the Austin case, Mattox said.

Candidate to accept office early

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas (AP) — James Cain, who defeated Stephens County Sheriff Louie Hall in the Democratic Primary, was appointed by county commissioners Monday to succeed Hall as Stephens County sheriff.

Cain's appointment as sheriff is effective Nov. 1, said County Judge Miller Tuttle. Hall announced last month that he was leaving office early.

His resignation, he said, was effective at the end of September. But he was staying on until the end of October to provide a smooth transition. Cain, 46, is a former Abilene policeman and former Department of Public Safety trooper in Houston and Breckenridge.

He will be sworn in Nov. 1, just six days before the general election, in which he does not have a Republican opponent. Hall was elected sheriff in 1976 and re-elected in 1980.

Doggett, Gramm argue Social Security

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Lloyd Doggett has accused Republican U.S. Senate candidate Phil Gramm of opposing Social Security benefits for some poor Americans, a charge Gramm sides deny.

On Monday, while unveiling some new television ads, Doggett said Gramm "just does not care" about the elderly who get minimum Social Security benefits.

The Democrat cited President Reagan's pledge during his debate with Walter Mondale "never" to cut Social Security benefits to those currently receiving them.

He then asked rhetorically why Gramm, who has campaigned on his close ties to Reagan, refuses to make the same pledge.

"I'll tell you why. I think the reason that Phil Gramm has refused to stand in defense of the Social Security system despite even his own president's commitment to do so is very simple: Phil Gramm just does not care. What other solution can there be?"

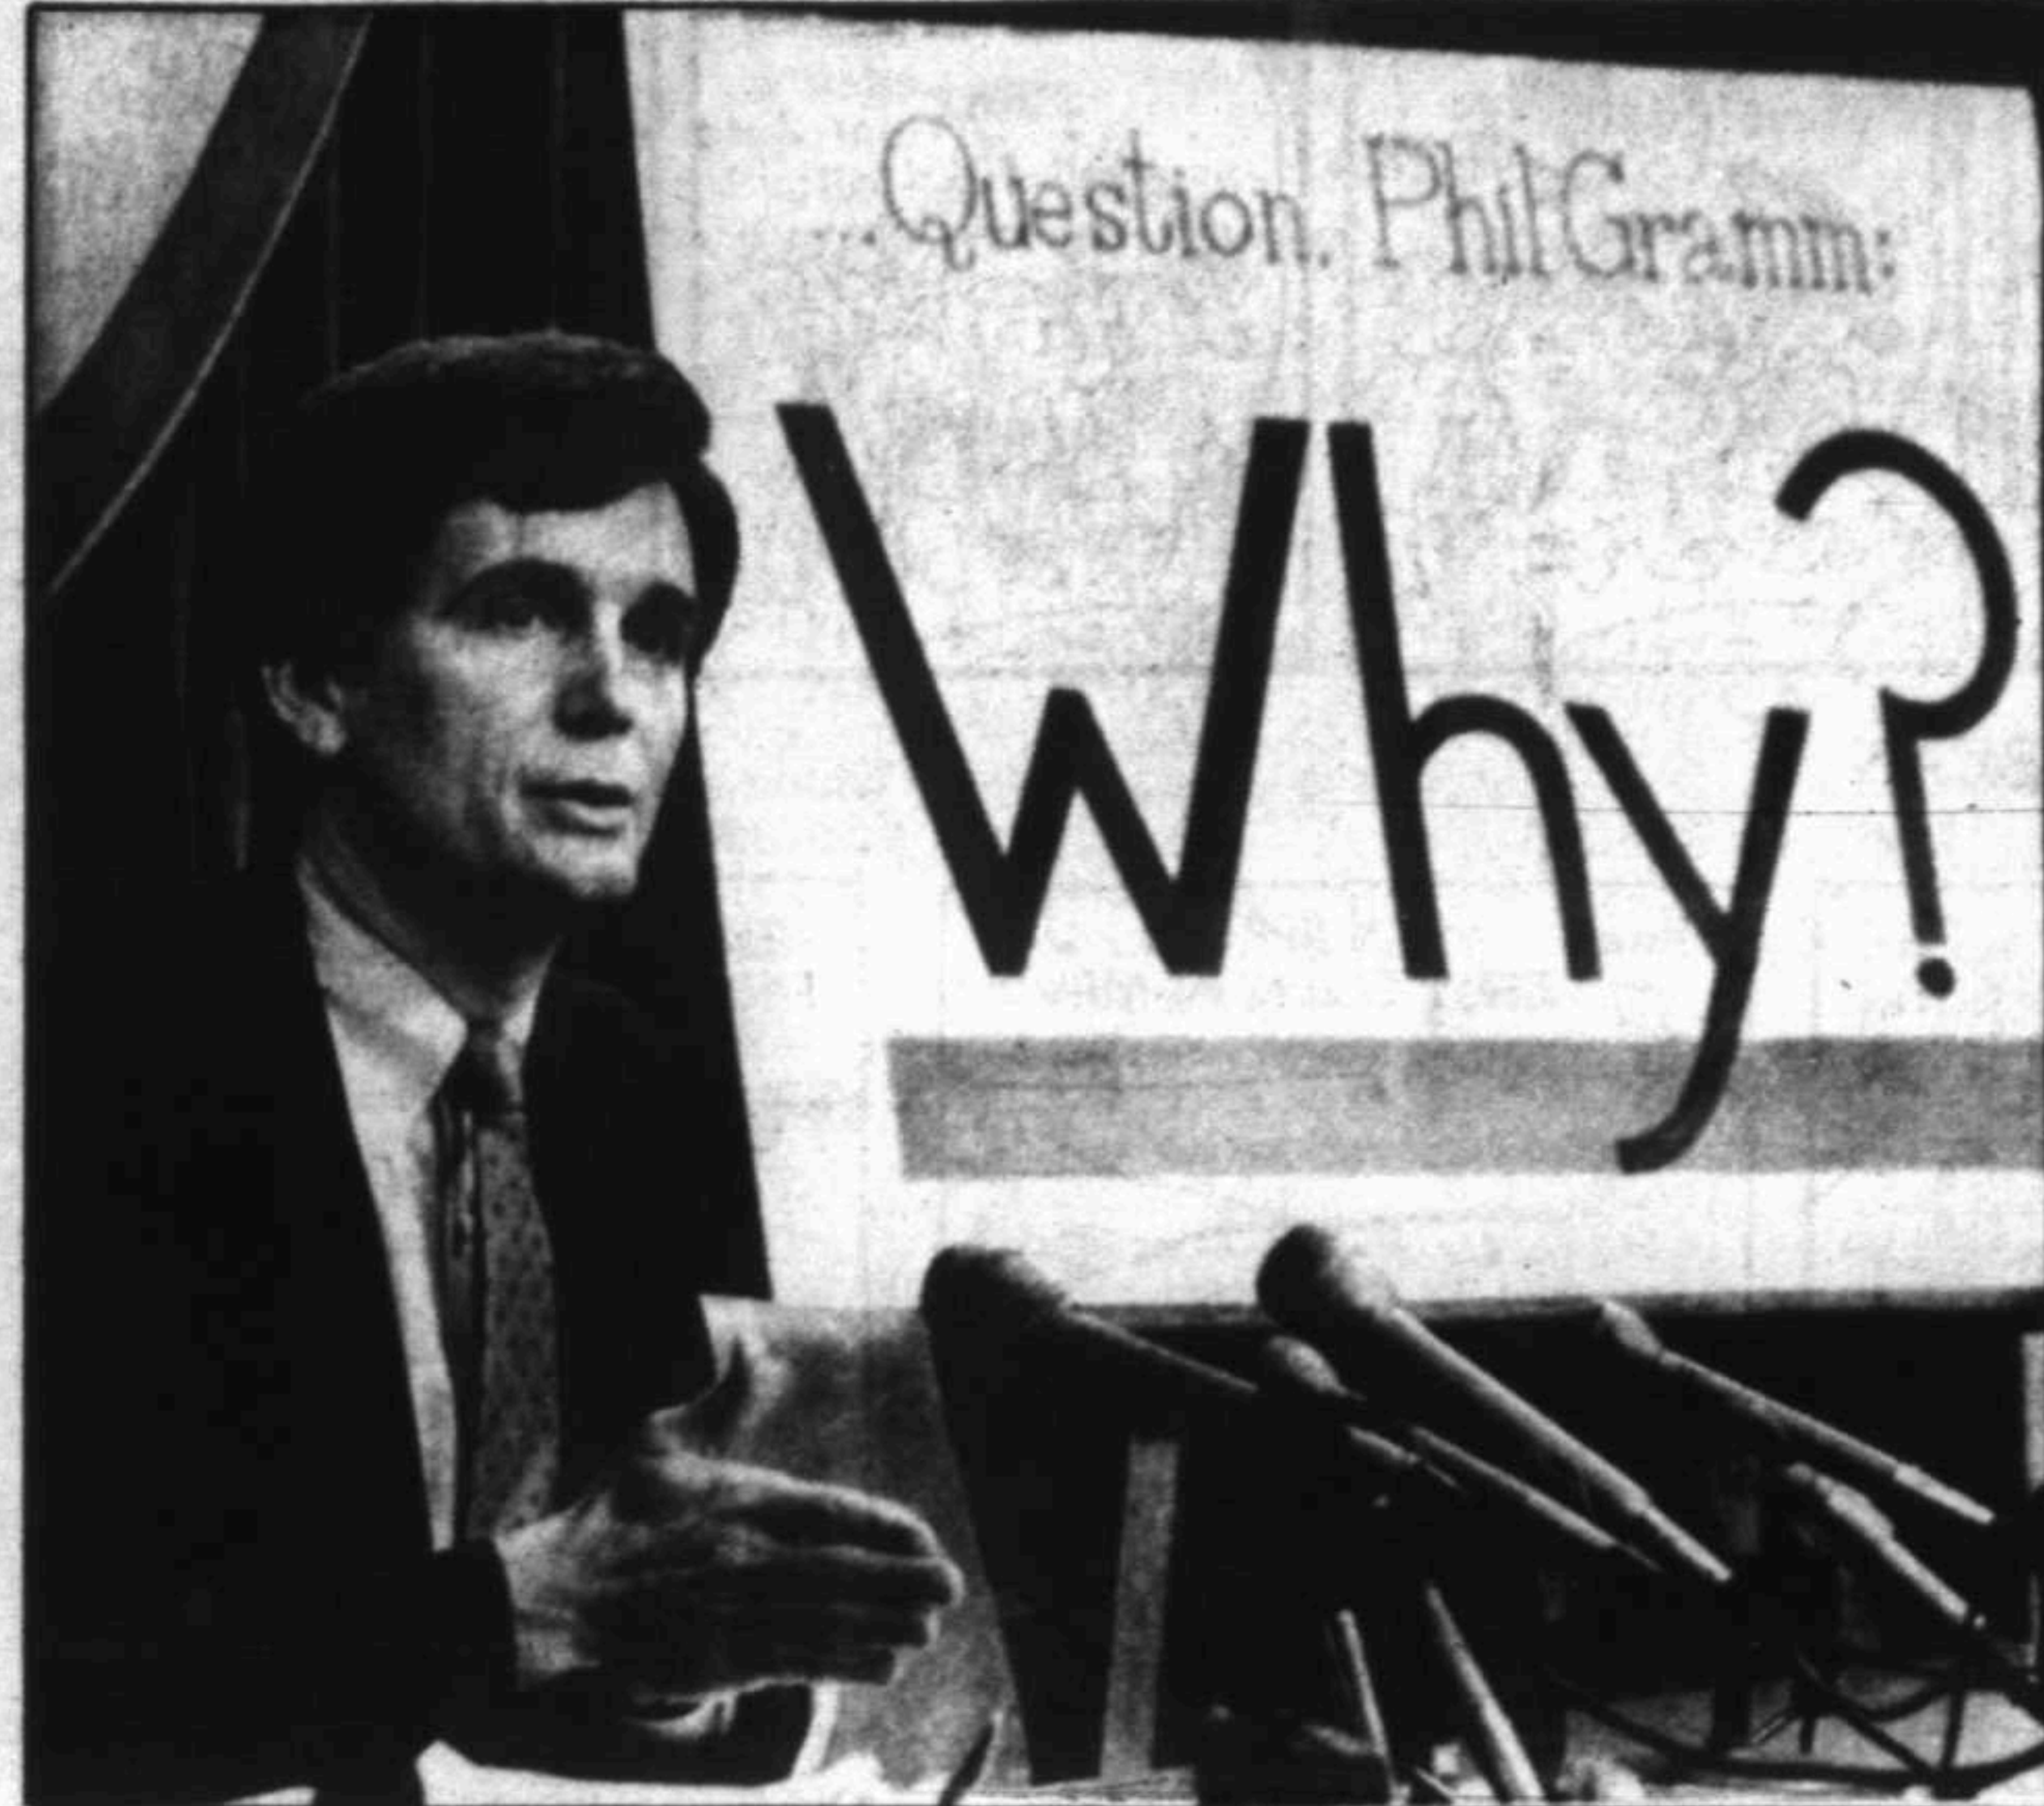

Doggett chided Gramm's refusal to join 405 of the 435 House members in voting for a resolution stating that Congress didn't want Social Security benefits trimmed to those currently receiving them.

That vote wasn't a Republican or Democratic issue and not a liberal or conservative issue, Doggett said. "Every member of our congressional delegation took that pledge to protect Social Security except one — Phil Gramm," Doggett said.

In a written statement, Gramm press secretary Larry Neal said Doggett had launched into a "campaign of fear."

Neal said Gramm "has a proven record of fighting for Social Security. He knows Congressman Gramm was, in fact, a leader in the 1983 battle to restore financial stability to the Social Security system."

Social Security was near bankruptcy that year, Neal said, because of continued mismanagement under previous Democratic administrations.

Democrat Lloyd Doggett, at a news conference in Austin Monday charges that his Republican opponent in the U.S. Senate race, Phil Gramm, "just doesn't care" about the elderly who rely on Social Security benefits.

AP Laserphoto

"Phil Gramm's position on the issue is already well known. He fought to put Social Security back in the black ... and he intends to keep Social Security in the black no matter what Doggett and his pals try to do to upend the compromise legislation that saved the system," the Gramm spokesman said.

Gramm "will never allow" earned benefits to be denied to recipients of Social Security, veteran's benefits, railroad retirement or other programs, Neal said.

In the new television commercials, Doggett uses quotes from newspaper articles to criticize Gramm about Social Security and education aid to handicapped students.

In one, Gramm is quoted as saying: "They are 80-year-olds. Most people don't have the luxury of living to be 80 years old, so it's hard for me to feel sorry for them."

The second commercial cites a Wall Street Journal report that quoted a congressional aide quoting Gramm on the education budget. "Look at that! Look at that! They're encouraging people to be handicapped."

Doggett said he read both quotes during his debate with Gramm 10 days ago and that Gramm has denied neither one.

"Phil has chosen to remain silent and to offer no explanation for his comments," Doggett said. The Democrat said he was prepared for Gramm to accuse Doggett of being mean-spirited in running the ads.

"Because I anticipated that kind of response, that's why I put it in Phil's own words. If there's anything mean about this ad, it's not what I said but what Phil said that makes it mean."

"He's never once denied that he made that comment. I think it is a reflection not only of his viewpoint, but of his consistent votes not only against Social Security but against education programs for the handicapped. He obviously just does not believe in the federal government having a role in that area."

Steinbeck recalls life with father

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — John Steinbeck IV got his famous father's name — which he says is something of a curse — and his father's urge to write, which has been something of a blessing.

"Many people have asked me why I don't change my name," Steinbeck, 38, said in a recent interview at his home in Boulder. "It never occurred to me... It was my name, it was my life."

Steinbeck is a Buddhist, a husband and father and the winner of an Emmy award for his work on the CBS-TV documentary, "The World of Charlie Company." He is now compiling a retrospective of his father's articles and an explanation of his father's views on the Vietnam War.

After serving a year in Vietnam, Steinbeck published his first article, "The Importance of Being Stoned in Vietnam."

His father, whose novels included "Grapes of Wrath" and "East of Eden," liked the writing but "hated" the content, Steinbeck said.

His father, who wrote articles from Vietnam that reflected a "hawk" attitude, read galley proofs of his son's book about the war, "The Touch," shortly before his death in 1968, Steinbeck said.

"He really liked it. It was important to me that he liked the book."

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Hotel magnate J. Willard Marriott's condition was upgraded from critical to serious after he was admitted to LDS Hospital with symptoms of a heart attack, a hospital spokeswoman said today.

Marriott, 84, was undergoing evaluation to determine the cause of his chest pains, the spokeswoman said.

The founder of the $1.3 billion Marriott Corp. and worldwide Marriott hotel chain was in Utah to receive a special award at Brigham Young University today. BYU spokesman Paul Richards said details of the award would be made public when it was presented.

Nursing supervisor Judy Daybell said Marriott came into the hospital Monday morning because he was "feeling kind of crummy."

Marriott, born in the Weber County town of Marriott, started his business empire with $200 and a root beer stand in Washington, D.C.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) —

Singer Kenny Rogers apparently believes in sticking with a good thing. After teaming up with Dolly Parton for the 1983 hit song, "Islands in the Stream," Rogers announced the duo will get together for a television special, a concert tour and an album.

"I think she is singularly the most talented individual I ever met," Rogers said Monday.

Their one-hour television special, "Kenny and Dolly: A Christmas to Remember," is scheduled for broadcast Dec. 2 on CBS.

The two are to begin a concert tour Dec. 31 in Los Angeles. And they will have an album out soon, "Once Upon a Christmas."

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — "Sad Sack" may not have had a whole lot of faith in the cartoon Army in which he served, and now cartoonist Fred Rhoads is not so sure about the real-life jury system.

The state court of Appeals last week overturned a $2.58 million award for Rhoads in his legal battle against Harvey Publications Inc. of New York, which printed his work for 23 years.

"Oh my gosh. My lawyer hasn't told me," Rhoads told The Associated Press on Monday.

There goes the good old American jury system. Appellate Judge Ben C. Birdsall ruled there was no evidence of fraud on the company's part requiring the submission of that issue to the jury, and said Rhoads' complaint was barred by Arizona's three-year statute of limitations.

"Sad Sack," which is no longer published, was created by George Baker.

Rhoads later took over and drew 9,500 pages, creating many of the company of misfits in Army uniform, including Gen. Rockjaw, Capt. Softseat, Gabby Gob and Slob Slobinski.

Broadcasters attacked while filming story

BOSTON (AP) — A television broadcaster and a cameraman working on an upbeat program about improvements at a housing development were attacked and robbed as they filmed outside, police said.

Neither Robin Young, 33, nor cameraman John Baynard, 30, reported any injury to police after the incident Monday morning, police said.

Later, residents of the Bunker Hill housing development in Boston's Charlestown neighborhood searched for Ms. Young's bag, which had been taken in the attack. They returned the bag and her passport and credit cards.

"The big story here is the number of people who got angry at the guy, the number of people that searched and found my bag, the number of people that care about this place," Ms. Young said.

She said she had been working for several days in the development on a story for WNEV-TV "about how the people in the development are working to better their image. That's why this is so devastating. That guy doesn't represent the people I've met in Charlestown. He was just a bad apple."

"Everybody in the whole place is up in arms about (the attack)," said Edward Sweeney, who lives in the development and chairs its tenant task force.

Police said Ms. Young and Baynard were filming outside a building at the development when two men came out of another building and told Baynard to stop.

Officers said Baynard was shoved to the ground, and one of the men smashed a window in the crew's van and tried to start it. When the van wouldn't start, one of the men grabbed Ms. Young's shoulder bag from the front seat and fled, police said.

Officials at WNEV said they did not think the assault was related to the program, which they said would be "very positive."

Police spokesman Peter Woloschuk said officers did not know what provoked the attack. But Jeffrey Schiffman, the station's vice president for programming, said he believed one of the men was a fugitive and feared his picture was being taken.

Reagan out-pressures Mondale in flush poll

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — President Reagan and Walter F. Mondale each claimed victory in the presidential debate, but the real flush of victory — two flushes, in fact — came the morning after.

Louisville radio station WKJF-FM asked listeners to pull the lever for their favorite candidate — the commode lever, that is. Results of the "toilet poll" would be reflected in Louisville Water Co.'s pressure charts.

George Lindsey, who was at the microphone Monday, told listeners to flush for Mondale at 7:07 a.m. and for Reagan at 7:33.

"Basically, they wanted us to look at our pressure charts, to see if there was any significant change in it," said Jerry Ford, the water company's manager of administrative services.

The overnight pressure reading was 84 pounds per square inch, but dropped to 82 pounds on the Mondale flush and 81 on the Reagan flush.

The pressure fluctuation was negligible, he said. "It would be awfully difficult to attribute that to their voting."

Lindsey was undeterred and declared Reagan the winner.

He commissioned a suitable trophy — a roll of toilet paper with a wrapper declaring the "WKJF Flush Poll Winner, Ronald Reagan" — but said he hesitated to send it to the White House.

"I'm not sure they would let it in," he said.

Inmates treated to game

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — Inmates at the Hampshire County Jail surely can't complain their menus lack variety. They've dined on venison, and this month, they'll get a taste of moose meat.

State police gave the jail the meat from a 1,000-pound moose killed over the weekend by a truck on the Massachusetts Turnpike, according to the Daily Hampshire Gazette of Northampton.

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

In a recent issue of the "Goren Bridge Letter," we bemoaned the fact that many inexperienced players are in a rush to adopt any new bidding convention that becomes popular, regardless of its merit or whether it fits in with the rest of their methods. Unfortunately, all too often this is at the cost of many bridge fundamentals.

For example, the success or failure of South's three no trump contract hinges on a basic defensive play. Yet many players have muddled through a bridge career without ever bothering to understand this simple technique.

North-South arrive at a fairly normal three no trump contract. West makes the standard opening lead of the fourth-best of his longest and strongest suit — spades. East wins the king of spades and returns the eight, which declarer covers with the 10. How should West defend?

Basic defensive carding is for a defender to return his highest remaining card if he started with three cards in partner's suit, and his lowest from an original holding of four. Obviously, East cannot have two cards higher than the eight. Therefore, he must have started with three spades and declarer with four.

If West captures the 10 with the jack, declarer will get home regardless of whether West continues spades or not — declarer will always have a stopper in the suit and West has no side entry. But see what happens if West allows the 10 to win!

Declarer cannot come to nine tricks without diamond tricks. When the diamond finesse loses, East still has a spade to return and now West can cash three more spades to defeat the contract one trick.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, October 10, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY:

Actresses Helen Hayes and Joanna Shimkus, Ben Vereen, former Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, English playwright Harold Pinter, Theloniou Monk, Tanya Tucker and baseball's Gene Tenace share your birthday. Also born on this date: Jean-An-toine Watteau, music's Giuseppe Verdi. God has a special plan for you, but you must do your part by working hard. A friend will open new doors for you in January. Clear up a backlog of work and any debts before this year ends and you will enjoy clear sailing. Fair-minded and idealistic, you are interested in both the law and politics. Romance proves inspiring.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your living arrangements and domestic security deserve more attention. Check insurance coverage. Romance enjoys favorable influences. Follow up a hunch and receive a wonderful surprise!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spend more time on study and research and fewer moments chatting with your co-workers. A tactless comment could cause unhappiness at home. Patch things up at once. Loved one is magnanimous.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make the most of this morning. Business negotiations enjoy favorable influences. Higher profits are assured. Be careful not to neglect routine work in your excitement over a special project.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The extra effort you put into your work will pay off handsomely. Concentrate on those projects that will bring a quick return. Study the stock market. The social scene is busy tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A day of surprises lies ahead. Expect the unexpected. Follow up a strong financial hunch and you make record gains. A loved one's problems could throw a damper on certain plans. Be flexible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A banner day for business meetings and conferences. Be careful to keep your professional and personal lives strictly separate. Someone could misinterpret your intentions; watch what you say.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make certain your deeds and words are above reproach. Complete projects that have been frequently postponed. Someone who cares about your image offers constructive criticism. Take it in stride.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Higher-ups are more demanding than usual. Keep your nose to the grindstone. Your sense of humor helps you see the funny side of almost any situation. Concentrate on pleasing mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A partnership or alliance needs an overhaul. You are about to make a decision with long-range implications. Dig deep before signing an agreement. Someone could be trying to mislead you. Stay alert.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Adopt a positive approach when discussing a sensitive subject with someone who could become offended. Your timing is very important. Avoid choosing a moment when your associate has other things on his mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A legal or governmental matter claims your attention. Seek professional advice. Be careful not to scatter your energies too widely this afternoon. Routine work must be completed. A wish comes true.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get some unexpected help in paying your bills. Creative and artistic endeavors are favored. The mail brings good news. A stranger has an unsettling effect on you. Go slow in romance.

Worthy debate

Polls conducted immediately after the Sunday night debate between President Ronald Reagan and Democratic nominee Walter Mondale didn't shed much light on the political ramifications of the event.

The Mondale campaign people said their poll had respondents picking the former vice president as the "winner" 52 percent to the President's 32 percent. On the other hand, the Reagan camp's poll tagged the President as the victor by a spread of 41 percent to 36 percent.

Meanwhile, what might be considered by many to be a more independent polling apparatus — The Gallup Organization — found registered voters who saw the debate picking Mondale as the winner 54 percent to 35 percent for President Reagan.

What one can gather from all those poll results is simply this: Anyone with the time and money probably can obtain a poll that will tell them essentially what they want to hear. Therein lies the danger of putting too much stock in what one reads in the polls. Polls may be extremely accurate forecasters, but they're not foolproof.

With the polls aside for the moment and political reality being what it is, here's what we gathered from the debate:

Mr. Mondale was something of a surprise, breaking away from past stereotyping to appear prepared, smooth, comfortable in his role, with a firm grasp of his platform and the commitment to argue for it. He challenged President Reagan's economic policies, but in gentlemanly fashion. All in all, Mr. Mondale was impressive in comparison to past performances and could have gained some additional support from borderline viewers. By performing as admirably as he did, Mr. Mondale's campaign gained a measure of credibility.

President Reagan, on the other hand, did not fare as well as he has in past appearances. He obviously was well prepared for the debate, but did not come through as strongly as he has in many past televised addresses, and particularly in his debate with then President Jimmy Carter four years ago.

But the President did not waiver on his commitment to his current economic course and let himself be drawn in by continual attempts by Mr. Mondale to unveil a "secret" plan to raise taxes after the election.

After the debate, it's obvious that Mr. Mondale is a credible political adversary for President Reagan. The differences between the programs of the two men are apparent; they don't see eye-to-eye on such issues as abortion, school prayer, the economy, social spending or defense and they make no bones about it.

The debate truly was something of a debate and that's good because it helped better define the positions of the two candidates. After the second presidential debate later this month the American people should have all the data they need in order to make a truly informed choice at the polls in November.

Another View:

Let quotas expire

We agree with United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber that the new contract with General Motors is fair, realistic and innovative. Despite concerns last spring that record auto-industry profits and fat executive bonuses would send the union to the bargaining table seeking a more-than-fair share, company and union agreed on a contract that will help keep the industry healthy. The contract — now up for rank-and-file ratification — sets a good standard for UAW negotiations with other automakers.

But we disagree with Bieber's conclusion that President Reagan should reward the industry and union by renewing import restraints on Japanese automobiles. U.S. auto companies and workers have shown themselves ready to compete with foreign automakers. It's the consumer's turn for a break.

The industry sought and received import quotas on Japanese cars in 1981 to give companies a chance to modernize and to save jobs. The Japanese accepted the "voluntary restraints" — and used the resulting scarcity as an opportunity to sell high-priced luxury models. American buyers ended up paying more for both U.S. and foreign cars.

With major plant investments and booming car sales, U.S. companies have increased their productivity and earnings. GM workers have a new contract that provides moderate pay and benefit increases. More important, the contract offers new job security for workers who remain and help for those who don't. Those who lose jobs because of new technology or the transfer of work to non-union sources will get cash, retraining and new employment opportunities.

In effect, the job-security provisions recognize that more jobs will be lost as U.S. car companies increase productivity and competitiveness. Auto-import quotas cannot stop the transformation, but they can make the U.S. consumer carry the burden of that progress. The quotas are due to expire in March; Bieber suggests that Reagan act, before the election, to extend them for a fifth year. But for the sake of the U.S. economy, trade relations and consumers, quotas should expire, like every union contract and presidential term, at their appointed time.

FEMA planning for martial law

WASHINGTON — The nation's civil defense chief, Louis Guiffreda, seems determined to carve out a powerful empire for his Federal Emergency Management Agency, even if he has to call in the Army.

The scary thing is that there are like-minded elements in the Pentagon willing to scrap the Constitution and turn the United States into a military dictatorship. I've already reported how Guiffreda ran afoul of Attorney General William French Smith with a draft executive order that would insert FEMA between the White House and the Cabinet in the event of a national emergency.

I also reported that Guiffreda had prepared sweeping legislation, to be presented to Congress when disaster strikes, that would give the president (and FEMA) authority to abolish private-property rights and civil liberties without the hindrance of the courts or legislatures.

Now my associates Donald Goldberg and Indy Badhwar have obtained a Pentagon document that discloses how the military would work in cooperation with FEMA civilians during a national emergency. Its proposed assault on the courts, the executive branch and the Constitution is truly breathtaking. The internal document shows how the Pentagon, in league with FEMA, plans to drape a cloak of questionable legality over their activities whenever they decide the country is in the throes of a national emergency. The report, issued by the Joint Chiefs of Staff last December, is titled, "Military Support of Civil Defense: System Description."

The Posse Comitatus Act prohibits the armed forces from engaging in domestic law enforcement except under strictly delineated restrictions designed to safeguard constitutional rights. The Joint Chiefs' guideline sets forth its own exemptions to the law "based upon the inherent legal right of the United States government to ensure the preservation of public order ... by force if necessary."

It's wise to be suspicious when someone starts talking about the government's "inherent" right to do this or that. It's a signal that the Constitution is about to be blindsided. In fact, when President Truman ordered the Korean-war-time seizure of the steel mills in 1952, the Supreme Court ruled that he had no such inherent right, even for "national defense."

Here are some of the ways the Joint Chiefs plan to bring in the troops — in close coordination with FEMA:

— "Normally a state of martial law will be proclaimed by the president," the document states. But it adds, "in the absence of such action by the president, a senior military commander may impose martial law in an area of his command where there has been a complete breakdown in the exercise of government functions by local civilian authorities."

— "Military assumption of judicial, law enforcement and administrative functions of local government will be based on necessity that is actual and present" — presumably as decided by the general on the scene.

— "In the absence of martial law, the performance of law enforcement functions by the military will be limited to those actions that are necessary to prevent loss of life and wanton destruction of property."

Just who will define these limitations is not precisely spelled out.

STRICTLY PERSONAL: Are interest rates rigged by a secret conspiracy of big bankers?

This question has been recurring lately in my mail. Interest rates are influenced mostly by the Federal Open Market Committee, which meets in deep, dark secrecy 10 times a year to set monetary policy for the Federal Reserve Board. The committee has close ties to the nation's big banks.

Both the White House and Congress have brought pressure on the Fed to open the door on this committee's deliberations and decisions. Fed Chairman Paul Volcker promised last spring to provide more timely announcements of the committee's decisions. Now he complains that the Fed is already exposed to too much sunshine.

Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, has written a two-page letter to Volcker, complaining that "uncertainty about monetary policy has a detrimental effect on interest rates, investment and economic planning in general."

How can Volcker get away with defying the White House and Congress? He has the big banks behind him.

Earlier this year, he had a showdown with Vice President Bush over deregulation of the nation's financial industry. Bush was backed by a task force of administration officials. Volcker won.

Will the Soviet Union participate in the 1988 Olympics?

The Soviets don't recognize South Korea, where the 1988 Games will be played. But intelligence sources tell me Soviet leaders realize they missed a big propaganda opportunity by withdrawing from the 1984 Olympics. The Soviets are expected to participate in the 1988 Games, but they'll probably demand a concession. My sources expect the Soviets to insist that South Korea allow some of the Games to be played in North Korea.

LETTERS Doggett a 'fighter'

As the election heats up a little more with each passing day, I feel that it's important that Midland Reporter-Telegram have letters to the editor expressing a range of views across the community. The subject in this letter is Republican (not long ago Democrat) Senate nominee Phil Gramm. Now I'm what I call a moderate in political philosophy and a strong believer in being able to pay your bills. I can usually find some redeeming quality in most politicians of either party but Phil Gramm is so reactionary I would urge the voters of Texas to support Texan Lloyd Doggett.

Phil Gramm (Georgian not Texan) voted against West Texas when he voted against the drought relief aid bill (HR 3020). He was one of only two people in the entire Texas delegation to oppose it. Phil Gramm voted against our mothers and fathers when he voted to cut and weaken Social Security benefits for the elderly. Traditional family values, Gramm? If Phil Gramm is as anti-crime as his TV ads proclaim then why did he vote to cut funding in anti-crime programs?

Lloyd Doggett is a fighter for the common people of Texas. He authored the Texas Sunset Act, one of the best pieces of legislation to ever come out of the Texas Legislature. As a young man of 38, Texan Lloyd Doggett has served 11 distinguished years in the Senate of Texas. Historically we know that Doggett will work hard (99 percent attendance record) to protect the rights of Texans, young, old, and in between.

Gramm voting tally backfires

Phil Gramm's voting record since he jumped the fence to become a Republican on Social Security, agriculture and veterans' programs is backfiring on him.

Texas field experts are saying Mr. Gramm's voting eight times to cut Social Security alone could cost him a million votes in November. But with Texas senior citizens and their loved ones, farmers, ranchers and Texas veterans all bailing together to march on the polls election day, it looks like Phil Gramm might as well throw in the beach towel.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, the Texan, will join Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as the Lloyds of Texas fight for our rights in Washington. It's like I said: Texas how lucky can you be?

House struggle good lesson

I have followed with an objective interest the struggle over the Lancaster House. Actually I do not even like the architectural style of this building but the latest ultimatum from the board of trustees of the Museum of the Southwest prompted me to publicly make some observations about this situation.

It seems to me that the board of trustees has lost sight of the fact that Mrs. Lancaster did not give her home to them but to the people of Midland. If the City Council decides to use land dedicated for a park for another purpose they must first let the people vote on the proposition, as was the case with Crier Park. If there is not such a law concerning other public property there should be.

Is our permanent collection so vast and so fragile that it cannot survive another few months so this problem can be solved in an orderly fashion instead of with unreasonable deadlines that no one could possibly meet?

This should serve as a valuable lesson to any other boards of trustees of public property: Don't accept any large gifts that are not properly endowed.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 9, the 233rd day of 1984. There are 83 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Oct. 9, 1975, Soviet scientist Andrei Sakharov won the Nobel Peace Prize. He was cited for his "personal and fearless effort" in the cause of peace and his "fight against violence and brutality."

On this date: In 1701, the Collegiate School of Connecticut, later Yale University, was chartered in New Haven.

In 1776, a group of Spanish missionaries settled in present-day San Francisco.

In 1855, Joshua C. Stoddard of Worcester, Mass., received a patent for the first callotype.

One year ago: Interior Secretary James G. Watt resigned.

Today's birthdays: Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., is 44. Singer Jackson Browne is 35.

Thought for today: "Wealth lost — something lost; honor lost — much lost; courage lost — all lost." — Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, German author-philosopher (1749-1832).

Stockman holds 'secret' tax plan

WASHINGTON — While President Reagan thrashes Walter Mondale for proposing higher taxes, his budget director — David Stockman — is plotting a post-election "grand compromise" that would feature healthy tax hikes.

What seems to be percolating in Stockman's head comes mighty close to the secret plan to raise taxes that Mondale has accused Reagan of concealing. When we asked for comment, Stockman called this "a fairy tale." But in fact, the outlines of his scenario have emerged in private talks and closed-door administration meetings.

He would start with a budget next year seeking to close the deficit with spending cuts rather than tax increases. When that inevitably fails, Stockman would move for bipartisan negotiations that would produce a new deficit-reduction package sure to boost taxes.

This is so far from what Ronald Reagan is saying in both private and public that Stockman's scenario would be written off as Dave's daydream were it not for his track record. That he has lasted four years as director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) despite multiple policy deviations attests to his connection with James A. Baker III, the president's chief of staff.

Ever since Mondale exploded his tax bomb in San Francisco, Stockman has battled backstage at the White House with mixed success. Painting his familiar word picture of unending budget deficits, he convinced Baker that the president should hold out for raising taxes as a "last resort." But he failed to get Reagan into a bidding war with Mondale over deficit reduction.

Beyond campaign postures are long-range plans. "You should have been a fly on the wall," one Stockman friend told us recently after lunching with the OMB director. "He is really feisty about next year. He has big, big plans." Those plans would use the "window" following Reagan's presumed re-election to assault the deficit.

Just such reports moved three conservative Republican backbenchers in the House — Reps. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, Vin Weber of Minnesota and Connie Mack of Florida — to meet privately with Stockman. They were not reassured by what they heard. On the contrary, the normally bubbly, positive-thinking Gingrich left in unaccustomed depression.

Stockman did begin by claiming he and his visitors agree on 80 percent of economic issues. If so, the remaining 20 percent embrace the most critical points of confrontation for the nation's political and economic future.

Stockman implied to his visitors certain failure of further budget-cutting early next year, followed by a "grand compromise" that once and for all would slay the deficit dragon. He did not say so specifically, but that package of necessity would increase taxes.

More disturbing than this confirmation of Mondale's secret plan, however, are its ideological predicates. Stockman privately rejects the notion publicly expounded by Reagan that sustained economic growth will cut deficits. He does so because of an inflexible model, described in his meeting with the congressmen, that demands unattainable standards of low unemployment and high productivity to achieve even modest growth paths.

As he has done frequently with his colleagues, Stockman warned the trio of a future trail of red ink that has financial markets scared stiff. When he was a 34-year-old Michigan congressman just announced as OMB director, Stockman in December 1980 was taken to Wall Street to sell the titans on supply-side growth economics. Instead, they sold him on austerity. Stockman's previous role models — Reinhold Niebuhr, Pat Moynihan and John Anderson — have been replaced by the prototypical skittish bond trader.

Lacking his own constituency, Stockman depends on his ability to convince the cautious Jim Baker that impending doom requires a "grand compromise." But there is desire in the West Wing for pursuing 1985 tax reform with neither revenue gain nor revenue loss, relying on lowered tax rates to further economic growth. Presidential assistant Richard Darman, Stockman's friend and frequent ally, is inclining toward that view.

To Stockman, the "grand compromise" would lift the dead weight of the deficit from the Republican Party's back. But to the congressmen who visited him, a growing number of White House aides and perhaps Ronald Reagan himself, it sounds like surrendering in advance the fruits of electoral victory. The Stockman scenario suggests that the OMB director's impersonation of Fritz Mondale in presidential debate rehearsals was all too appropriate.

Indian movement leader sentenced to three years in prison for riot

CUSTER, S.D. (AP) — American Indian Movement leader Dennis Banks will be required to spend 14 months in prison on his three-year sentence for taking part in a court-house riot, but might be allowed to serve the time outside of South Dakota, state officials said.

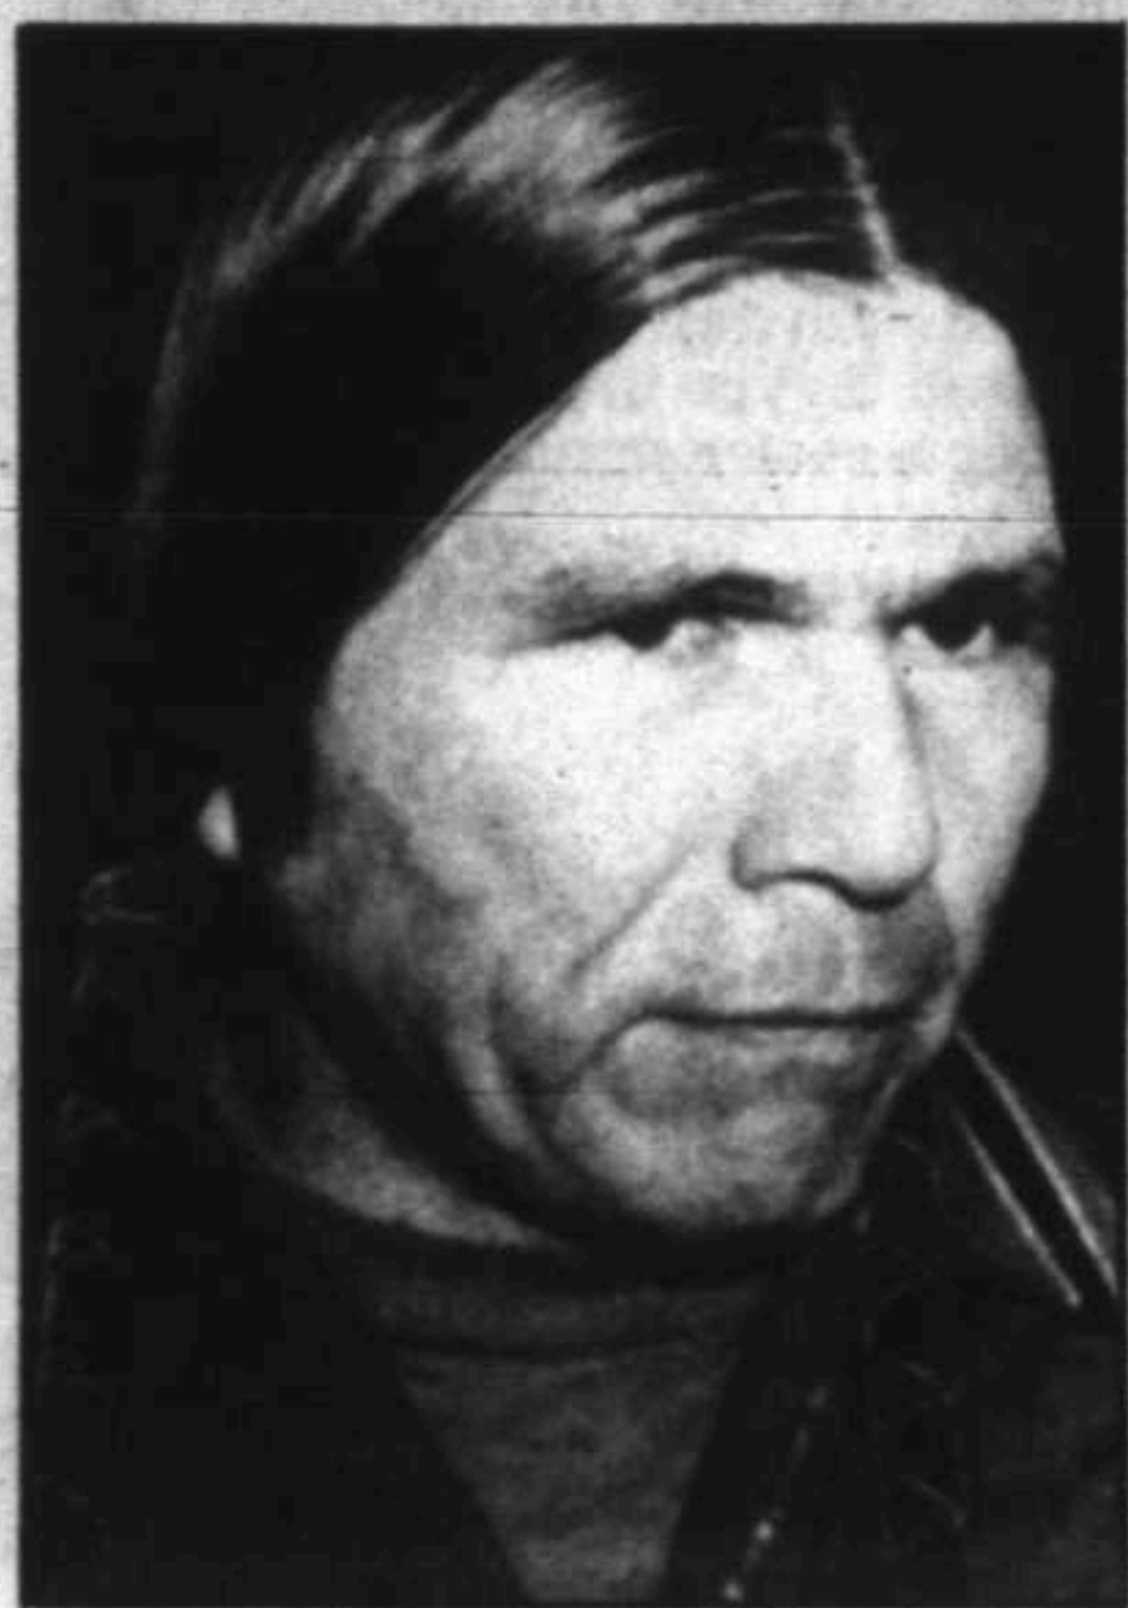

After the sentence was announced Monday, Banks' lawyer, William Kunstler, said he would appeal it to the state Supreme Court within 30 days.

The sentencing came nearly a decade after Banks, 47, fled the state in 1975 following his conviction, saying he feared for his life in South Dakota prisons.

"I'm going to treat you like I would any other individual," Circuit Judge Marshall Young told Banks at the six-hour sentencing hearing. Kunstler had argued that Banks should not go to jail, and 26 character witnesses urged a light sentence.

Banks was sentenced to three years in prison for rioting with a dangerous weapon and three years for assault with a weapon without intent to kill. Young ordered the Indian activist to serve the sentences concurrently.

Under state law, he could have been sentenced to 15 years in prison. State Attorney General Mark Meierhenry said it will be up to prison Warden Herman Solem whether Banks serves his time in a prison outside South Dakota. He said he would not object.

"But I don't think Dennis Banks has ever been in any danger in South Dakota," the attorney general said. "I think there is a little bit of ego involved on the part of Mr. Banks."

Solem said Monday night that if

Banks asks to serve his sentence outside South Dakota, "we will do our best to accommodate him."

The soonest Banks would be eligible for parole would be 14 months, Solem said, because it is Banks' second felony conviction.

In a statement that lasted more than 30 minutes, Banks told Young that he pleaded innocent in 1975 and still believes he is innocent. He said he wants to be free soon to help Indians work against racism and discrimination.

Banks said he fled South Dakota because he had heard statements by prison guards who said he wouldn't last 20 minutes at the Sioux Falls prison.

Banks' convictions stemmed from a Feb. 6, 1973, riot at the old Custer County courthouse across the street from the building where he was sentenced.

AIM leaders went to the courthouse to urge authorities to charge a white man, Daryl Schmitz, with murder for the stabbing death of an Indian, Wesley Bad Heart Bull. Schmitz was charged with manslaughter and was later acquitted.

When most of the 150 to 200 people who showed up at the meeting could not get into the courthouse, the confusion grew into a riot.

Appeal planned after Greylord conviction

CHICAGO (AP) — The crucial evidence against a former judge convicted of extorting money for favorable rulings in the nation's largest court system was the testimony of an undercover FBI agent who said he bribed the judge with cash, a juror said.

Former Cook County Circuit Judge John J. Devine, who prosecutors labeled the "captain of the ship of corruption," was convicted Monday in U.S. District Court.

A jury deliberated about 20 hours over four days before finding Devine guilty of 25 counts of extortion, 21 counts of mail fraud and one count of racketeering. He was acquitted of two counts of extortion.

Devine, 54, was the third judge prosecuted and the second convicted in trials stemming from a 3½-year federal investigation dubbed Operation Greylord, in which FBI agents posed as crooked lawyers and defendants to infiltrate the Cook County court system. About 100 phony cases were fabricated.

"We believe the case is not over," said defense lawyer Jeffrey Steinback, adding that Devine will appeal his conviction. A judge set sentencing for Nov. 20.

Prosecutors were "definitely pleased with the verdict," said Charles Sklarsky, assistant U.S. attorney. "We find it another demonstration of the jury's willingness to accept evidence developed in a properly and carefully monitored undercover investigation."

Juror David Holleman said the key to the government's case during the four-week trial was the testimony of FBI agent Terry Hake, who said he paid a bribe directly to Devine.

"After listening to the Hake tapes, no one was under the impression that he was not guilty of anything. The only question was how much," Holleman said.

Fiery jet crash kills all aboard

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Authorities investigating the crash of a private jet said the plane's tail apparently hit the runway on take-off, sparking an explosion that killed at least two and possibly as many as five people and hurled blazing debris for a half-mile.

Several hours after the accident Monday night, authorities were not sure how many people were aboard the Gates Learjet that was en route to Van Nuys when it crashed on runway 28 left at San Francisco International Airport.

Preliminary reports indicated the plane had a two-man crew and picked up at least three passengers at Butler Aviation, which handles private planes, said Ron Wilson, community affairs director for the airport.

However, a spokesman for the plane's owner, Clay Lacy Aviation Inc. of Van Nuys, told the Los Angeles Times the plane carried only the pilot, co-pilot and possibly one passenger.

There were no survivors, and none of the victims was immediately identified, Wilson said.

"The only thing we have found so far are body parts and a wallet ... I didn't see any part of the plane that was bigger than 2 feet square," Wilson said.

"What's out there is very unusual," said Robert Palmer, a safety inspector with the Federal Aviation Administration. "We have material thrown over a large area of the runway and yet there's a crater in the ground. It's going to take a long time to investigate the accident."

There was "very little debris of any size," Airport Director Louis Turpen said. "The explosion ... literally, completely destroyed the craft."

Mondale draws biggest crowds yet

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Buoyed by good reviews of his debate performance, Walter F. Mondale is hoping the biggest, most frenetic crowds he has seen in months signal an upturn in his political fortunes.

"This is a brand new race," the Democratic challenger told audiences on Monday, the day after the first of two nationally televised debates with President Reagan. "From now on, everything is wide open."

Everywhere he went on an intensive, 16-hour campaign day through New York, Philadelphia and Ohio, Mondale ignited an electric, spontaneous response less than 24 hours after the 90-minute debate in Louisville with Reagan.

Mondale was looking for more crowds today as he was campaigning in Cincinnati, Detroit and Pittsburgh.

About 200,000 people lined Fifth Avenue in New York on Monday, and many shouted friendly greetings to Mondale as he walked by with his vice presidential running mate Geraldine A. Ferraro at his side.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said it was not only the largest crowd in the history of the parade, but the most enthusiastic.

"You can get a crowd out like this, but you can't make it behave like this," the governor said.

While many came out on a brilliant, warm fall day just for the parade, most appeared to be Mondale supporters.

The crowd was six deep on the sidewalk and there were printed and hand-lettered Mondale signs everywhere.

Mondale described as "the most fantastic parade I have ever been in in my life."

Several hundred yards ahead of Mondale in the line of march was Vice President Bush, who disappeared from the parade by the time Mondale arrived at the reviewing stand, although Bush was an honorary grand marshal.

There was irony in Mondale's success Monday. Just over a month ago on Sept. 3, he marched in a Labor Day parade down Fifth Avenue in an appearance that became a major political embarrassment.

THIS IS THE RECORD

When I was sworn in as Sheriff January, 1977, the MCSO (Midland County Sheriff's Office) was authorized 32 officers and one secretary.

Today, MCSO is authorized 54 officers, eight secretaries and four civilian personnel in the Communications Division.

In January, 1977, the MCSO had six automobiles. Other than red lights mounted on the front bumpers, NOT ONE OF THEM WAS EQUIPPED WITH EMERGENCY EQUIPMENT, such as sirens, first aid kits, decals, top red lights or other identification as a police vehicle.

Today, we have 26 vehicles — all with necessary emergency equipment depending on assignment.

In January, 1977, there were two unmarked patrol units driven by three officers in civilian clothes.

Today, there are seven marked patrol units and 14 uniformed officers assigned to the Patrol Division. On emergency calls, our average response time is 7.2 minutes. For all types of calls our average response time is 17.4 minutes.

In January, 1977, the MCSO had no Narcotics Unit, no Crime Prevention Unit and no Juvenile Section. The record system was totally inadequate, and teletype equipment was antiquated. No officer training programs existed. Very few of the officers had a college education.

Today, we have a Narcotics/Intelligence Division, a Crime Prevention Unit, a Crime Stoppers Program and a Juvenile Section. Teletype and radio equipment are modern and up-to-date. Nineteen of our officers have bachelor or master degrees. Twelve have associate degrees. Five of our supervisors have completed the three month FBI Law Enforcement Academy course in Quantico, Virginia. Our officers have attended the DPS schools in Austin for inservice training in homicide investigation, crime scene photography, fingerprint classification, etc.

In 1976 the officer turnover rate was 69 percent.

In 1983 it was 27 percent.

During the recent boom, Midland County grew at a tremendous rate. Criminal activity increased also, peaking in mid-1983. In 1976 the MCSO made 34 felony arrests and cleared 40 cases. In 1983 the MCSO made 154 felony arrests, and cleared 287 felony cases.

Salaries have been increased to attract and keep better qualified officers. We have continuing education and training in crime detection and crime prevention, criminal investigation, and arrest. We have a physical fitness program.

This is the record and on the record I ask for your write-in vote in November.

Egyptian president makes historic visit to Jordan

By JOHN RICE

Associated Press Writer

AMMAN, Jordan — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak arrived here today to an embrace from King Hussein, who two weeks ago defied Arab hardliners by restoring diplomatic ties with Egypt.

The trip to Jordan is the first by an Egyptian president since Egypt signed its 1979 peace treaty with Israel, an act that prompted 17 Arab countries and the Palestine Liberation Organization to break diplomatic relations with Cairo.

It also is Mubarak's first official state visit to any Arab country since he became president in 1981. He visited Saudi Arabia in 1982 to offer condolences to the royal family on the death of King Khaled, but this was not regarded as a state visit.

Jordan, which borders Israel and lost a large chunk of its territory in wars with the Jewish state, announced Sept. 25 that it would be the first of the 17 Arab states to restore full ties with Egypt. Hussein, whose action was assailed by Syria and Libya, praised Egypt's recent support for Arab causes and cited a need for unity in dealing with Israel.

Hussein and his American-born wife, Queen Noor, greeted Mubarak at Amman's airport today. The two leaders embraced, then reviewed Jordanian troops while military bagpipers played and French-built Mirage F-1 jets roared low over the runway in salute.

WORLD

The two leaders left the airport in a motorcade along route lined with Egyptian and Jordanian flags. There was heavy security throughout Amman, with troops carrying sub-machine guns patrolling the streets.

Mubarak was accompanied by his wife and a delegation including Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid and other Cabinet ministers.

Mubarak was to confer with Hussein this afternoon and be guest of honor at a state banquet tonight. He is scheduled to return to Egypt on Thursday.

Mubarak's chief political adviser, Osama El-Baz, arrived in the Jordanian capital Monday night and addressed a meeting of the city's World Affairs Council.

In Cairo, the official Middle East News Agency quoted El-Baz as saying that Egypt's obligations under the Camp David accords with Israel cannot be at the expense of its commitment to defend Arab security — described as the basis of Egyptian policy.

The agency also quoted him as saying that Egypt does not insist on the Camp David accords as the sole framework for future steps toward a comprehensive Arab-Israeli settlement, and that the so-called Camp David policy does not mean that Egypt has no other alternatives.

Israel has insisted that all peace moves be in the framework of Camp David. Jordanian officials have praised Egypt under Mubarak for taking a cooler stance toward Israel.

Since becoming president after Anwar Sadat's assassination on Oct. 6, 1981, Mubarak has refused to visit the Jewish state because of Israeli demands that his itinerary include Jerusalem, which Egypt does not recognize as Israel's capital.

In September 1982, Egypt withdrew its ambassador from Israel in protest of Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

Hussein, in an Oct. 1 speech, said keeping Egypt isolated "will only contribute to further paralysis and collapse" of Arab spirit and influence.

Hew said such a course "would play into the hands of the enemy in its attempt to weaken the Arab nation through continued disunity and disarray."

WORLD in brief

British Conservatives

begin party conference

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party starts its annual conference today under fire for Britain's record unemployment and its handling of the violent seven-month coalminers' strike.

On Monday, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Robert Runcie, accused Mrs. Thatcher of pursuing "confrontation" politics, and said Britain needed leadership "which will unite and not divide the nation."

And in a poll published on the eve of the Conservatives' four-day conference, a solid majority of those questioned said Mrs. Thatcher is mishandling her two most pressing domestic problems — 12.9 percent unemployment and the coal strike, which began in March to protest the government's plan to close 20 unprofitable mines. Pickets and police have clashed violently.

Japanese candy tainted

TOKYO (AP) — A major candy manufacturer today vowed to keep selling its products despite the discovery of about a dozen packages of sweets poisoned with cyanide and a threat by extortionists to put more tainted boxes on supermarket shelves.

Police said they planned to question some 200 customers of a store in western Japan where poisoned candy was found, the Japan Broadcasting Corp. reported, saying a videotape camera in the store had filmed the shoppers.

The network reported that its Osaka office had received in the mail today an envelope containing a candy labeled, "containing poison" from the extortionists, who go by the name "the 21-faced Monster."

By this morning, 11 candy packages bearing the seal, "containing poison" have been found in four prefectures, or areas, of Japan, the Japanese news agency Kyodo reported.

Police in Tokyo and Osaka refused comment on the news reports.

U.S. seamen honored

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The United Nations has honored three American seamen for heroism in the daring rescue of 85 Vietnamese "boat people" in turbulent waters in the South China Sea.

Capt. Lewis M. Hiller, 59, of Lakehurst, N.J., and shipmates Gregg Turay, 27, and Jeffrey Kass, 31, both of Seattle, accepted the Nansen medal at a ceremony Monday at the U.N. office in Geneva.

The award certificate cited the entire crew of the 94,000-ton oil tanker Rose City for the "humanitarian concern and outstanding performance" in rescuing the refugees drifting in a tiny boat Sept. 21, 1983.

Among the 85 refugees were 19 women and 30 children.

Australian climbers die

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Two Australians on an expedition led by the son of Mount Everest's first conqueror died in separate falls today while trying to scale the world's highest mountain via its steep west ridge, Nepal's Tourism Ministry said.

The two were members of a six-man expedition led by Peter Hillary, 29, of Auckland, New Zealand. His father, Sir Edmund Hillary, made the first conquest of Everest in 1953.

The ministry said Craig Nottle, 23, a medical student from Melbourne, fell to his death at 7:30 a.m. while climbing toward the 29,028-foot summit from a bivouac camp at 26,000 feet.

Fellow climber Fred From, a physicist from Brisbane, went to look for Nottle and also fell to his death, the ministry said.

Defection explained

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Ma Tai-ling, daughter of Chinese opera star Hung Sin-liu, announced today she had defected to Taiwan because Communist-ruled mainland China "ignores human dignity."

Her defection from mainland China to the island nation of Taiwan was the second within a week.

Miss Ma, 40, was an opera singer like her mother. She was seen in Hong Kong in March when she went to the British colony from the southern Chinese city of Canton with a tour group.

After that, newspapers in Taipei and Hong Kong speculated that she had gone to Singapore or the United States.

WORLD SERIES 1984

WORLD SERIES FACTS The bad hop...

In the seventh game of the 1960 World Series, the Yankees had a comfortable lead — 7-4 in the bottom of the eighth — with Bobby Shantz pitching. With a man on first and nobody out, Bill Virdon hit what seemed to be a double-play ball to shortstop Tony Kubek. But the ball took a bad hop on the treacherous Pittsburgh infield and hit Kubek in the throat, forcing him out of the game, and leading to a Pittsburgh rally that eventually resulted in a 10-9 victory and a series win for the Pirates.

Pressure hasn't gotten to Tigers yet

Four losses and people might forget 104 wins

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Detroit Tigers, who have been sweeping away everything in sight all year, face a team in the World Series that refused to accept consignment to the dust heap in the National League playoffs.

"The pressure has been on us all season and it's not going to get any better playing the Padres, not after the way they came back and crushed the Chicago Cubs," said Detroit first baseman Darrell Evans.

"We were the best team in baseball during the regular season and, yes, there's a chance folks might forget that if we don't win the World Series."

Detroit right-hander Jack Morris, who was 19-11 during the regular season, drew the opening game assignment for tonight.

"We've had pressure all year long," Morris said Monday during a workout at Jack Murphy Stadium. "After we went 35-5 from the start people said we weren't really that good of a team and maybe we weren't, but we didn't fold after that and we didn't fold under the pressure all season long.

"We just have to go out there and play our game. Personally, last night when I got off the plane I was a little tired and crabby, so maybe I do feel a little pressure at being the starting pitcher. But, I can't wait to get out there and get started."

DETROIT CATCHER Lance Parrish said most of the Tigers figured their World Series opponent would be Chicago, especially after the Cubs were 2-up in the National League Championship Series.

"The Padres certainly battled back at us," Parrish said. "That only made us respect them more. Without knowing their personnel, the one thing you have to say about them is that they have character."

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson knows the perils of a seven-game series.

"I still think 162 games determines the best team in baseball," Anderson said. "Nobody can take away those 104 wins from my players, whether it be San Diego or Chicago. The regular season, the playoffs and World Series are two totally different seasons."

THE TIGERS won their first nine games in 1984, on their way to their record start. Their final 104-58 mark is a club record, one game better than the 1968 team which also was the last Detroit club to play in the World Series.

"This team will always be the most special to me," Anderson said. "When I got to Cincinnati, there were four future Hall of Famers already waiting for me. But here, all we had was some kids and a lot of hope."

The Tigers are a team of many parts and Anderson used them all. Sixteen players on the Detroit roster had over 100 at-bats, including rookie Doug Baker who didn't come up until mid-season after several infielders came up with injuries.

"That's the beautiful thing about this ballclub," Evans said. "Sparky has made everybody feel like they are a part, like they really belong — because they do. As a result, we're a very close-knit bunch of guys."

"When you know you don't have to do it all by yourself, it also takes a lot of pressure off everybody. We have a strong bench and a deep bullpen. That really helps in tough situations."

The Tigers also consider themselves a team of good character. Even when they were 35-5, the rest of the tough AL East refused to go away and hide. Detroit twice fought off challenges from Toronto and Baltimore — the last time in September — in order to win the division by 15 games.

Padres after first World Series title

Williams: 'Bookies wrong already once this month'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dick Williams will be happy to tell you all he claims to know about the American League champion Detroit Tigers, whom his San Diego Padres meet tonight in the World Series opener.

"I don't know anything about them, other than that they beat the hell out of everyone in their league," Williams said, only half smiling. "We're looking forward to a very good Series."

Williams was not at all disturbed that the Tigers have been made the favorites.

"That's great with me. That's wonderful with me," Williams said Monday. "The bookies have been wrong already once this month."

The Padres also were underdogs in the National League Championship Series, but they won three straight at home, becoming the first team in NL history to win the playoff after losing the first two games.

"That was work. That was pressure," said Rich Gossage, who pitched the final two innings of Sunday's 6-3 victory in the finale. "Now we can have fun."

"Don't get me wrong — we're going to go out there and play hard, and let whatever happens, happen. But the pressure was just to get here. Everything else is gravy."

GOSSAGE IS one of a handful of San Diego players with World Series experience, having pitched 11 scoreless Series innings when he was with the New York Yankees. His view is shared by Steve Garvey, a veteran of four Series with Los Angeles.

"We're very confident and comfortable," said Garvey, who collected eight hits and drove in seven runs during the Championship Series and was named its most valuable player. "I think all the guys are just savoring the fact that we've come this far."

If they are to go farther, the Padres must overcome the problems that almost cost them the pennant. Chief among those was the worrisome pitching of Eric Show, who was 15-9 during the regular season but was knocked out twice in two starts during the Championship Series.

"Nothing's wrong, I've just been throwing stupid pitches," said Show, who yielded a two-run homer to Leon Durham and a solo shot to Davis before being pulled in the second inning Sunday. "I'm not nervous — in fact, maybe it would help if I was nervous."

Show, who gave up five home runs in 5½ innings in two playoff starts, is not scheduled to pitch until the fourth Series game, set for Friday at Detroit. Williams will send left-hander Mark Thurmond to the mound in Game One.

THURMOND ALSO had problems against Chicago, yielding seven hits and four runs in 3½ innings in Game 2, a 4-2 loss to the Cubs at Wrigley Field. He was 14-8 with a 2.97 earned run average this season.

Paramount among Williams' concerns, though, is the loss of center fielder Kevin McReynolds, who fractured his left wrist sliding into second base in the fourth game of the NLCS.

The loss of McReynolds, who hit 278 with 20 homers and 75 RBI this season, could be especially significant because the Padres will be using a designated hitter in the World Series.

Williams activated Ron Roenicke to fill McReynolds' place on the roster. He will start Bobby Brown, a .251 hitter, in center field, and will choose Tim Flannery, Champ Summers or Kurt Bevacqua to be the DH. The three combined for only four homers and 31 RBI this year.

49ers bury Giants, 31-10

Early hole too deep to escape

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Joe Montana and Dana McLeMore put New York in trouble early and the San Francisco defense made sure the Giants stayed there as the 49ers rolled to a 31-10 National Football League victory Monday night.

Montana threw two touchdown passes and McLeMore returned a punt 79 yards for another score as San Francisco struck three times in the opening 7½ minutes to rout the Giants and remain undefeated.

"We got a couple of big plays early, and when we get you that far behind it's tough to come back, especially against our defense," said Montana.

The Giants never did, and one of the reasons why was that many of the San Francisco defenders remembered a 27-0 lead that almost evaporated against the Washington Redskins earlier this year. The 49ers won that game 37-31.

"We looked back a few weeks ago to Washington where we went into the half with what would be a comfortable lead," said linebacker Keena Turner. "And then at the end, we're fighting for our lives."

San Francisco had no such trouble with the Giants.

"They beat us every way possible," said Giants Coach Bill Parcells. "I can't be satisfied with the way we are playing but give San Francisco credit. They played pretty well."

Montana teamed with speedster Renaldo Nehemiah on a 59-yard scoring play and flipped a 1-yard TD pass to tight end John Frank as the 49ers scored on their first two possessions.

McLeMore's punt return turned the nationally televised game into a laughter minutes later. He fielded a Dave Jennings' punt at his 21 after being bumped by Terry Kinard of the Giants, broke toward the center of the field and outran the rest of the New York defenders down the right sideline.

Just seven minutes and 33 seconds had elapsed, but the Giants, 3-3, never were close again.

Montana, who for the second week wore a flak jacket to protect a rib injury, added a third touchdown pass on an 8-yard swing pass to fullback Roger Craig in the second quarter as San Francisco took a 28-3 halftime lead. The 6-0 start is the best in club history and keeps the 49ers alongside Miami as the only undefeated teams in the league.

Montana left the game early in the fourth quarter after completing 15 of 24 passes for 207 yards.

The Giants, embarrassed for the second consecutive week, were coming off a humiliating 33-12 loss to the Los Angeles Rams.

Alli Haji-Shiekh, mired in a season-long slump, booted a 20-yard field goal for New York late in the first quarter, but missed a 30-yarder late in the second quarter.

It apparently was all the crowd of 70,000-plus at Giants Stadium could stand. Many left rather than stay for the second half.

Ray Wersching added a 37-yard field goal in the third quarter for the 49ers.

San Francisco's defense stretched to 12 quarters its streak of not allowing a touchdown before Butch Woolfolk scored on a 2-yard run with 1:17 remaining in the game.

San Francisco took the opening kickoff and moved 73 yards in six plays in just 2:32. The touchdown came on a third and seven play with the Giants in a blitz.

Montana hit Nehemiah in the right flat at about the Giants 45, and the 110-meter high hurdles world record holder had no trouble outracing cornerback Mark Haynes into the end zone once he got a step on him. It was his first touchdown of the season and third of his three-year career.

San Francisco defender Milt McColl (53) just misses blocking a pass by New York's Phil Simms.

TED BATTLES

Still no change after 39 years

When the shouting was over, the bottles had been drained and the din had subsided, nothing had changed in 39 years.

The Chicago Cubs were still thirsting for their first taste of success. The National League East? It turned out to be merely the vehicle by which the continuing Chicago Cub tragedy attained Shakespearean proportions.

After all, after a year or two how many playoff losers does anyone remember?

But the Chicago Cubs achieved a niche in the annals of National League futility that will be recalled for years to come, right now the only, but for all time: the first NL team to take a 2-0 lead and then blow it all. Never in the history of the game...

Sages all over the land were nodding in knowing agreement Monday, "When it comes to losing, no one does it with the clan of the Cubs."

Forget that in a short series anything can and frequently does happen. In the Cubs' case, anyone who has suffered through the interminable drought, will concede that in Chicago's case, it is predictably so.

IN THE San Diego series, the gagging sound could be heard all the way back to 1969. The Cubs may not have a patent on choking, but they have perfected the art.

Only Chicago would walk Birdie Tebbetts intentionally to get at Ted Williams. Only the Cubs would play the percentages by walking Lefty Gomez so that they would have a play at every base with Lou Gehrig coming up. Only Jim Frey would intentionally walk a Tony Gwynn to bring up a Steve Garvey, who already had twice come through with RBI hits in the clutch. And was to be presented the opportunity twice more.

TRUE, GWYNN was the National League batting champion, and although he attained his goal of 30 home runs this season (26 of them in batting practice) he'll only sting you. Garvey will leave you with purple welts and a loss.

Although the Cubs would never have "won" the NL East without the trades, some might add that neither would they have been in position to play Hamlet as it has never been played before, but it was in the playoffs that some of Dallas Green's trades came back to haunt him, not that he noticed.

It was left-handed pitcher Craig Lefferts who won the last two games. At Chicago a year earlier, Craig had been used as a spot pitcher, the kind of reliever brought in to get one out and then be removed for someone more reliable.

At San Diego, he became an integral part of the Padres' runaway in the NL West. He drew raves and some hinted that his acquisition as a "table-setter" for the Super Saver was every bit as important to the Padres as the acquisition of Rich Gossage himself.

Also dealt off were first basemen Carmelo Martinez and Billy Buckner for journeyman pitchers.

FOR SOME, the playoff was a vindication for those who believe the 1969 Cubs were a vastly superior team to this year's team, despite the infamous El Foldo.

Chicago won the NL East over an undistinguished field in 1984. The Mets that beat the Billy Williams, Ernie Banks, Ron Santo, Glen Beckert, Fergie Jenkins, Don Kessinger, Randy Hundley Cubs of 1969 might not have been that impressive in its everyday lineup, but had a pitching staff that included Tom Seaver, Jerry Koosman and Nolan Ryan, for starters.

The fervor and excitement of an NL East victory is over, but, alas, nothing has changed. Just another year since 1945.

1910 — Nap Lajoie, in a batting race with Ty Cobb, collected eight hits for Cleveland in a season-ending doubleheader with the Browns. The hits were somewhat tainted, however, as St. Louis third baseman Red Corriden played back as Lajoie bunted safely six times. Cobb was awarded the batting title by a fraction of a point.

Padres vs. Tigers: Contrasts and common threads

Detroit manager Sparky Anderson (left) and San Diego manager Dick Williams chat after a recent press conference at Jack Murphy Stadium. The Padres host the Tigers tonight in the first game of the best-of-seven World Series.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It is a matchup both of contrasts — tradition vs. expansion — and common threads binding the San Diego Padres and Detroit Tigers.

And it wasn't even supposed to start here. Chicago was all charged up for its first World Series in 25 years, perhaps the Cubs' first world championship in 76.

But in a most improbable of comebacks, the Padres, only 15 years old, won the final three games in the National League's best-of-five play-offs and now find themselves hosting tonight's opening game of their first World Series.

In Chicago, where waiting for next year has become a family tradition, handed down from generation to generation, a psychiatrist and Cubs fan, Helene Starr, was quoted as saying of the Padres: "I don't want you to think I'm bitter, but let me say this . . . I hope the Tigers squash them, eat them up and spit them out. I hate the Padres! I hate the name Padres! Their colors stink, too!"

Their colors are those of autumn, brown and gold, but in Southern California, autumn is only a word, not a season. It is forever sunny, warm and green. Not a bit like Detroit, the very essence of fall — cool, crisp and rich in World Series tradition.

EIGHT TIMES previously, the Tigers have participated in this fall classic, winning three of them, most recently in 1968. The names, too, ring of tradition — Ty Cobb, Charlie Gehringer, Mickey Cochrane, Hank Greenberg, Al Kaline . . .

And in San Diego, major league baseball tradition is, well, nonexistent. In fact, for a while a decade ago, major league baseball here almost was nonexistent. C. Arnholt Smith, then the owner of the Padres, was on the verge of selling the franchise, which was to be moved to Washington, D.C.

Instead, he sold it to the late Ray Kroc, the hamburger king, founder of McDonald's, a pioneer in fast-food franchising.

This, incidentally, is being called the fast-food series matching McDonald's against Domino's Pizza, a nationwide chain owned by Tom Monaghan, who bought the Tigers after the 1983 season.

Kroc, who in his early years as the team's owner was perhaps best known for grabbing a stadium microphone, apologizing to the fans for the club's performance and berating his players, went about the business the past few years of finding the right parts to the puzzle.

THE PIVOTAL one was Dick Williams, a manager with winning credentials in Boston, Oakland and Montreal.

And Jack McKeon, vice president for baseball operations, went about spending Kroc's money for the rest of the pieces.

First baseman Steve Garvey, for years the All-American boy up the coast with the Los Angeles Dodgers who led the team with 88 runs batted in. He was the Padres' Most Valuable Player in the NL Championship Series against the Cubs, who nearly outbid San Diego for his services in the free-agent market before the 1983 season.

Third baseman Graig Nettles, the still-slick fielder with the occasional lightning in his bat (seven home runs in six consecutive games in August) was acquired in trade from the New York Yankees.

Relief pitcher Rich "Goose" Gosage, the stopper out of the bullpen (25 saves) the Padres had so sorely missed, was signed out of free agency when he tired of Yankee owner George Steinbrenner's meddling.

THE PADRES also developed some native talent — major league batting champion Tony Gwynn (.351), their right fielder; center-fielder Kevin McReynolds (who matched Nettles' club-high 20 home runs but will miss the Series with a broken hand), second baseman (and converted outfielder) Alan Wiggins and pitcher Eric Show, who led the Padres with 15 wins.

And the team which had only one winning season, which had never finished higher than fourth in the NL West, was never lower than fourth this year (and that low for only five days in May), took the division lead for good June 9 and won it Sept. 20. The final margin was 12 games.

Less traveled than Williams but equally successful is Detroit's manager, Sparky Anderson. He directed the Cincinnati Reds, the Big Red Machine, to world championships in 1975 and 1976, then was stunned by his dismissal after the 1978 season. He was hired by the Tigers midway in 1979.

Like Williams, Anderson also shopped around to pick up the few missing cogs for his new machine.

Relief pitcher Willie Hernandez was obtained from Philadelphia, last year's NL champs. He was successful in all but one of his 33 save opportunities.

First baseman Dave Bergman was acquired in the same trade with the Phillies, but was slowed by a hamstring pull suffered during the American League playoffs against Kansas City.

Third baseman Darrell Evans, the San Francisco Giants' MVP in 1983, who hit 16 home runs and drove in 63 runs in 1984, was signed from the re-entry draft.

Centerfielder Chet Lemon, who had 20 homers and 76 RBI despite a slow second half of the season, was acquired from the Chicago White Sox before the 1982 season.

The Tigers also nurtured their own talent — right fielder Kirk Gibson, the first Detroit player to hit more than 20 homers (27) and steal 20 bases (29) in the same season; shortstop Alan Trammell, who hit .314, drove in 60 runs, and missed the All-Star Game because he was sidelined in midseason with a shoulder injury that still hampers his throwing; pitcher Jack Morris (19-11) and Dan Petry (18-8).

THE TIGERS became the first team since the 1927 Yankees, the men of Murderer's Row, to occupy first place from Opening Day to the end of the season. They clinched the AL East on Sept. 18 and finished 15 games ahead of Toronto.

Morris, who pitched a no-hitter in Chicago on national television April 7 to highlight the Tigers' extraordinary 55-5 start, will open the World Series for them against Mark Thurmond, who was 14-8 during the season for the Padres.

"After we went 35-5 from the start, people said we weren't really that good of a team, and maybe we weren't," Morris said. "But we didn't fold after that and we didn't fold under the pressure all season long . . ."

"Maybe I do feel a little pressure at being the starting pitcher, but I can't wait to get out there and get started."

Thurmond called the World Series "icing on the cake for us. After the last few days, I can tell you that the pressure is certainly to get to the Series. This will be fun for us. I'm just going to go out there and try to have a good time."

Hill eligible to return to full-scale workouts

IRVING (AP) — Just when the Dallas Cowboys need him the most, wide receiver Tony Hill is eligible to begin full-scale workouts.

Doug Donley is questionable against the Washington Redskins on Sunday with a pulled hamstring and a shoulder injury.

Hill represents a deep threat for the Cowboys, who are having trouble getting their offense untracked.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry was moved to change quarterbacks in Sunday's 31-20 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals but Danny White says he has no reason to believe he will be the starting quarterback against Washington.

White threw a 10-yard touchdown pass in the fourth quarter after he replaced ineffective starter Gary Hogeboom in the third period.

"What happened is nothing unusual and nothing that hasn't happened before," said White. "I have not received any indication that I will be the starter."

Landry said, "Right now Hogeboom is our quarterback for next week but that doesn't mean I won't change something."

"Hogeboom has been starting and he probably will again. He didn't have much help in any area and a quarterback can only do so much."

White said he was stunned when Landry called him off the bench.

"I was a little surprised," White said. "I really wasn't expecting to play. The game was still in doubt. We still had a chance to win."

White was cheered and Hogeboom booed, just the reverse of what happened last year when White was the No. 1 quarterback.

"It was nice to have that reception," White said. "The fans have been great throughout this whole thing. They really have been very supporting and encouraging."

The loss dropped Dallas to a 4-2 record and into a tie with the Redskins in the National Conference Eastern Division.

Hogeboom said he wasn't overjoyed about being yanked out of the game.

"I wasn't pleased, but then again, hey, you've got to try something," Hogeboom said. "We were down and needed something to get us going offensively. We weren't doing that good."

White said he almost felt sorry for Hogeboom.

"Gary was pretty much helpless out there," White said. "The Cardinals played good defense. There wasn't a whole lot he could do."

Dallas split in two games with Washington last year. White led them to a 31-30 victory in the first game, bringing the Cowboys from three touchdowns behind.

TIGERS

In addition to Morris, Dan Petry was 18-8 and Milt Wilcox notched a personal best 17-8. Willie Hernandez, who came through in 32 of 33 save situations led a bullpen that included Aurelio Lopez, who was 10-1 with 14 saves.

Shortstop Alan Trammell was the only regular to hit over .300, but the Tigers belted 187 home runs.

PADRES

Still, "it's great to be here," said Williams, who took the Boston Red Sox to the Series in 1967 and the Oakland A's each year from 1971-73. "Like Flannery said, it's a lot better to be here than in some pizza joint watching it on TV."

Missouri QB snares second Big 8 honor

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — For the second time in three weeks, Missouri quarterback Marion Adler has been named Big Eight offensive player of the week.

Adler, who has battled teammate Warren Seitz for the starting job, made his first start last week against Colorado and had a banner day. He rushed 16 times for 151 yards and two touchdowns and hit six passes for 51 yards as the Tigers humbled the winless Buffs 52-7. He also punted twice for 65 and 50 yards.

DETROIT (AP) — Some spirits from Detroit are on the line in the World Series between the Tigers and the San Diego Padres.

Mayor Coleman A. Young is waging a case of Detroit-brewed Stroh's Signature beer against a case of San Pasqual wine bet by San Diego Mayor Roger Hedgecock.

Garvey isn't going to fall

Rats! Can you believe that Steve Garvey? I mean, dad rat the man! Has he no sense of decency?

You know how many people have been waiting for how many years for him to fall on his Gay '90s hair-cut? Do you have any idea how infuriating he can be to them?

Do you know what an affront he is to every red-blooded, beer-drinking, woman-chasing American ballplayer? Why, he may not have had a real, where's-the-toilet-bowl-hand-me-that-cold-rag hangover in his entire life.

Damn Garvey! Always going around smiling, gracious, knocking in the winning run, calling every body "sir," not a hair out of place, shoes shined. Always saying the right thing, always polite.

I mean, what kind of behavior is that for a superstar? Gotta be a phony, right? Gotta have something dark and mysterious in the closet. Nobody's that good, right? I mean, what are we, suckers?

Why doesn't he kick the water cooler, backbite the manager, criticize his teammates like any other self-respecting American ballplayer? Why doesn't he snarl once in a while?

But most of all, why doesn't he strike out once in a while with the game, the pennant, the World Series on the line?

Look at him. He's too short to play this game. Too nice. I mean, this is a game for 6-foot-2 bad-tempered brutes, not Cub Scouts. When Garvey first showed up at a Dodger camp, they took one look and said "Disneyland's that way, kid."

What's with the shy smile, the crooked grin, the "Yes, ma'am's"? You think that doesn't drive his teammates, the press, the front office, the visiting team crazy? You think there haven't been lots of people waiting impatiently for the day when the truth would come out "Garvey Beats Up Stray Dogs," "Garvey Wears Dresses At Home," "Garvey Punches Photographer!" It had to happen. Nobody but nobody is that good.

Why does he stand there patiently giving autographs, interviews? Hah! I got it! He wants to run for office! He wants to be president! He's got to have an angle, right? Everybody's got an angle.

IT'S REALLY hard to forgive a guy who plays in 1,207 straight games. Any honest ballplayer manages to come up with a crick in his neck now and then, usually on the days when Tom Seaver is pitching or Lefty Carlton.

The press, with whom he was as cordial and cooperative as any ballplayer who ever lived, persisted in misunderstanding him. Sometimes the curses were audible in press row when Garvey bunted aboard or hit a line drive to right to keep a rally alive. He was "protecting his average," the sneer ran.

Garvey was just simply suspect. If he rescued your dog from drowning, the reaction would be, "Oh, sure, it had to be Garvey! What was he doing there, anyway?"

THE FANS had to write him into the first All-Star game he ever played in — and he walked off with the MVP honors. A funny thing kept happening to the Dodgers. They kept getting in the World Series with Garvey, four of them in seven years. He batted .417 in 1981 but three other guys got the MVP.

Still, the blowup was predicted and confidently awaited.

Aha! It would happen in San Diego! When Garvey broke his thumb in the middle of his first season, the sages nodded wisely. Garvey would finally live up to his maledictions.

Now look what the creep has done. Zounds! Is there no end to the perfidy of the man! Has he no shame at all! What kind of a cad would hit a ninth-inning home run, a game-winner, and seven other hits and eight runs batted in and bat .400?

A Steve Garvey is who. He's not going to change. Give up, fellows. He's real. That's him, and always has been.

Campbell would rather talk of things he's not going to do

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Hugh Campbell has grown accustomed to being asked what he plans to do about the Oilers' 0-6 start.

He'd rather talk about what he's NOT going to do.

First, he's not going to panic. He's not going to make changes for the sake of change and he's not going to cast blame for the team's offensive fizzle on offensive coordinator Kay Dalton.

"The thing we have to do is avoid panic," said Campbell, whose team plays unbeaten Miami and San Francisco the next two weeks. "Building a football team is not always clear cut. There were a lot of things on the positive side."

Campbell said several Oiler players had their best games of the season against the Bengals. Unfortunately, others continued to make errors.

"The heart-breaking thing is that some played well but made three errors out of say 70 plays," Campbell said.

Dalton, a hold-over from the staff of former head coach Ed Biles, has been the focal point of offensive criticism as the Oilers lost their National Football League record, 21st consecutive road game.

"For some reason, people are gunning at Kay right now and that's surprising to me," Campbell said.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in accordance with an order from the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice it has filed a tariff to reduce the monthly rates for the Switched Access portion of the company's intraLATA Foreign Exchange (FX) Service offering that was implemented starting June 1, 1984. Simultaneously, the LATA-wide toll-free calling scope, also started June 1, would be discontinued and the calling scope would return to that in effect prior to June 1. The Commission has assigned this matter Docket Number 5891.

The net effect of the tariff will be a monthly decrease in total billing of approximately $700,000 until November 1, 1984. After that time the net effect on the company's revenue is estimated to be negligible.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Aviso Público

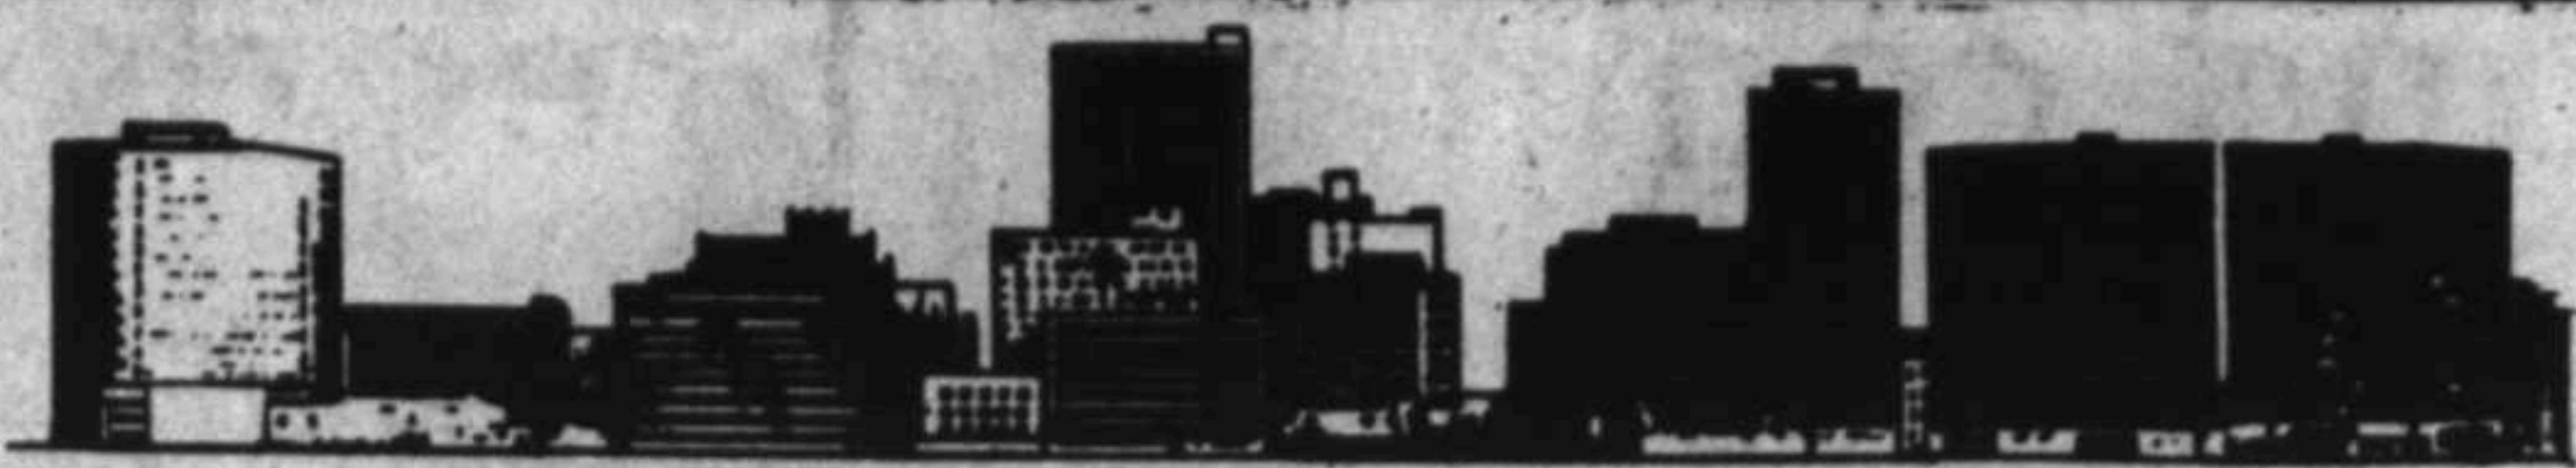

En conformidad con una orden de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, se anuncia mediante el presente aviso público que Southwestern Bell Telephone ha presentado una tarifa con el objeto de reducir las cuotas mensuales que se han cobrado desde el 1 de junio de 1984, por la porción de la tarifa para acceso a la red central necesaria con el uso del Servicio de Zona Exterior (Foreign Exchange (FX) Service).

Simultáneamente, el servicio de llamadas de larga distancia sin cobro dentro del área de servicio que también se efectuó el 1 de junio de 1984, se descontinuará; y el campo de llamadas será al igual que antes del 1 de junio de 1984. Se ha registrado la nueva tarifa bajo el Docket 5891.

El efecto real de la nueva tarifa se verá en la reducción del costo total de facturas de aproximadamente $700,000 hasta el 1 de noviembre de 1984. Se calcula que después de esta fecha el efecto real para nuestra empresa será despreciable.

Los usuarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company que estén interesados en participar en esta reunión, o que requieran mayor información, deben dirigirse por escrito a: Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. También se puede obtener información adicional llamando a Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division al 512/458-0223, al 512/458-0227, o al 512/458-0221 si requiere teletipo (aparato para personas con impedimentos de audición).

Sewing Machine Supply is an authorized Singer dealer

There is a new authorized Singer dealer in town! The surprise announcement which you've been waiting on is that Sewing Machine Supply is now able to offer the long-time popular Singer line along with their other quality machines by Viking and New Home. Russell and Catherine Claggett, owners of Sewing Machine Supply in the Village Shopping Center are so excited about being able to offer this well known line that they are starting off with unbelievable introductory offers.

Just in time for Christmas lay-away - two new free arm Singer models are being introduced at a $140 savings. The model 6212 Six Stitch Singer, which regularly sells for $399.99, is now available at Sewing Machine Supply for just $199.99. That means for under $200 you can have a new sewing machine with the outstanding Singer name on the front!

If you want a few more options, try the Nine Stitch Singer Model 7105. Regularly priced at $399.99, this exceptional machine is being offered at only $259.

The top of the line Singer 2010 is also available at an amazing introductory bargain. The machine itself is normally priced at $1399.99, but at Sewing Machine Supply you can get the top of the line 2010 AND a beautiful maple cabinet for just $1150.99.

The bargains don't end with the new Singer line at Sewing Machine Supply. As long as the supply lasts you will get a FREE $400 oak cabinet with the purchase of a New Home Memory Craft 6000 which features two groups of letters and three programmable buttonholes. With a complete demonstration of this machine you will receive a free Penguin cushion cover.

The Viking 980 is also available with a free $400 Pecan cabinet. This machine thinks and writes for you. All you have to do is tell it what fabric you are using and what you want it to do. It takes over from there and selects the perfect stitch. It's simple to program a buttonhole with the right length. It even offers a built in sewing guide and letters. With the 100% jam proof Viking 980 oiling will never be needed. Moreover, hemming jeans will be a snap.

Sewing Machine Supply also has the Singer Easy Mender. This machine is a great Christmas gift for college students and travelers. You will be amazed at how compact and efficient the Easy Mender really is.

Sewing Machine Supply makes gift selection easy in a lot of ways. They have the Grabbit, a magnetic pin cushion which can pick up spilled and stray pins off the floor. Another good gift item is a sewing lamp, which can also be used for reading. The ones in stock have flexible necks.

Accessories for your old machine are also available at Sewing Machine Supply. Rufflers, buttonholers, walking feet and even zig-zaggers for the straight stitch machine are in stock. Most of these attachments can be interchanged-all you need to know is the distance between the screw which holds the foot in place and the foot itself and whether the needle is in the center or not.

To ease the back pain you often get from sewing, Mr. and Mrs. Claggett offer a sewing machine chair with a specially designed back. Drop in and they will show you how the chair works and all the storage space found in the seat of these incredible chairs.

Sewing Machine Supply is offering so many outstanding values that they just can't be beat. When you realize that in addition to selling top quality sewing machines, Sewing Machine Supply offers in-shop repair service on all makes and models including Singer, you will know that they have the best record around. Since they have some parts in stock and can get others, they usually get your machine out in one week.

Sewing Machine Supply and convenient parking places are so easy to find in the Village Shopping Center. To make selecting a new machine an easier assignment, Catherine Claggett says, "Come by the shop and have fun playing on our machines!"

Right now you will find one of their machines in the new fabric department of Walgreens. So, when you purchase a machine from Sewing Machine Supply you get $10 worth of fabric FREE from Walgreens.

Russell and Catherine Claggett of Sewing Machine Supply are proud to be able to offer Singer Sewing Machines along with their other high quality lines, New Home and Viking. Go by their shop which is located in the Village Shopping Center and find out about their many outstanding introductory offers.

Yvonne Tabb, volunteer coordinator of the Midland Multiple Sclerosis Society, explains to Permian Basin High School Student Council officers Teresa Hamilton and Paul Knott what the MS

Society is all about. The student council is helping Yvonne establish a pool of student volunteers from their school which is located at 3100 N. "A".

Permian Basin High School's Student Council is making good things happen

The Student Council of Permian Basin High School is the hub of student involvement in the school and in the community. This Student Council, a member of the National Association of Student Councils, is committed not only to providing activities such as parties, proms, and dances, but is also devoted to getting the student body involved in community volunteer work. Because of the council members' commitment to their peers, their school, and their community, they are determined to make good things happen.

Each spring the student body elects four student council officers and six representatives to serve the following school year. These ten students, along with the faculty sponsor Cindy Cochran, face a number of challenges.

When President Teresa Hamilton calls the meeting to order, the first item on the agenda is fund raising activities. Glen Walton, administrator of Permian Basin High School, says, "I've told the Student Council that they can plan any kind of activity which they want as long as the activity is reasonable and they can raise enough money to pay for it." The school's long list of council-sponsored activities is evidence that the students have more than adequately met the challenge. Knowing that things don't just happen on their own, Treasurer Paul Knott is careful to keep record of their fund raising accomplishments and goals.

Agenda item number two is making plans for good social activities. A round of applause goes to the students for planning activities which include the students, their parents, and teachers. Cindy Cochran points out that this promotes a spirit of cooperation.

Whether the plans are for a beginning of the year annual signing get together, a Halloween Hayride, or a field trip for the student body, a large percentage of the students turn out. The limited size of the student body (this year thirty-five), the strength of the student leadership, and careful planning of activities may share responsibility for the success of these events.

Community involvement is an important item on the Student Council Agenda. Most recently the council has been working with Yvonne Tabb, volunteer coordinator of the Midland Multiple Sclerosis Society, in order to organize a pool of student volunteers. Though all students are welcome at each meeting, the council members are making a special effort to invite other students to attend their next meeting so that the entire student body can become involved in this project. Activities such as this allow students to gain a better understanding of their place in the community while helping other people.

Plans have been formulated to make good things happen and the gavel falls as the Student Council meeting is brought to a close. Though the council members are dismissed their obligations as leaders are not tabled until the next meeting. As Teresa Hamilton notes, "Because the size of the school allows me to get to know every student, I am expected to help new students become familiar with our policies." Paul Knott, who is on the council and serves as editor of the school newspaper, has been known to write articles on the importance of following school rules. Moreover, throughout the school week a Student Council member is always available to answer questions about the school and upcoming activities.

This concerned involvement is typical of the strong student leadership at Permian Basin High School. As Teresa Hamilton points out the students have many different kinds of social activities and volunteer opportunities to go along with their academic schedules. The students of Permian Basin High School are certainly active in making good things happen.

Education Week... A time for new ideas, solutions

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Not since the Russian launch of the Sputnik satellite in 1957 have the nation's schools received such widespread attention. Reports detailing what's wrong with public and private schools appear weekly suggesting educational excellence will maintain a strong defense.

In observance of this theme, educators across the nation are promoting public understanding and appreciation of the schools to encourage parents to visit the schools, to secure civic and community support to improve the schools and to help students to gain an appreciation of what schools are doing for them, said Dorothy Johnston, local coordinator of American Education Week.

American Education Week, scheduled for Nov. 7-11, was initiated after World War I draft boards discovered that about 25 percent of the draftees were illiterate and about 29 percent were physically unfit.

In addition to three original sponsors — the American Legion, the National Education Association and the U.S. Department of Education — co-sponsors include the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and the National Association of School Boards.

This year, educators and community groups will use American Education Week as a vehicle to exchange ideas and move toward solutions on issues that range from education budget cuts and technologies to school curriculum and the classroom environment. Plus, there will be an all-out campaign to recruit parent and community involvement.

According to the results of the 16th Annual Gallup Poll of the Public's Attitude Toward Public Schools, America's perception of its schools is more positive now than at any time in the past decade.

The survey reported 42 percent of the 1,515 Americans questioned, graded their schools higher than at any time since 1976 — with an 11 point increase over last year.

Americans also have developed increasingly favorable attitudes toward public school teachers and administrators. For example, 50 percent of those surveyed expressed favorable attitudes toward the performance of educators compared to 39 percent in 1981.

Moreover, principals and administrators received 11 percent higher mark during the same three-year period.

The poll also found Americans in support of increasing the amount of school work and homework in both elementary and high schools, basing grade promotions on examinations, employing nationally standardized tests for high school diplomas, career ladders for teachers and state board teacher examinations in every subject.

According to Mrs. Johnston, "Educational Excellence: Our Nation's Strongest Defense" can be attributed to several areas of society including illiteracy, war, crime, health or world hunger.

"Public education contributes more to national strength than industrial might or military power," she said. "Developing the best educational system will be very important in determining America's future strength."

President Reagan clear winner on issues, says congressman

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Democratic presidential hopeful Walter Mondale appeared polite, self-confident and relaxed in Sunday night's debate, said Congressman Steve Bartlett. But he picked Ronald Reagan as the winner on issues, Bartlett said Monday during an appearance at Reagan/Bush headquarters here.

Bartlett, who represents a district in North Dallas, is chairman of Texas Voices for Reagan-Bush. He was in Midland and Odessa Monday to keep pushing Republicans to get out the vote for Reagan/Bush.

Turning to the debate, Bartlett said that on style it was a draw between the two men. But on pocketbook issues, "Reagan was the clear winner. Mondale promised half a dozen times to raise taxes. His promises are for the additional spending programs. His programs would cost the taxpayer another $157 in taxes."

On the other hand, Reagan has promised an economy that would work, Bartlett contended.

"The people in this election will vote their pocketbook," said the first-term congressman.

But even in South Texas where residents are still suffering from high unemployment rates, Reagan should do well in the election, he said. When the president visited the Brownsville and Corpus Christi area last week, "he was received enthusiastically. The people in South Texas realize the way out of the recession is a strong national economy and better trade."

He held no faith in two polls taken after the debate which showed Mondale won. One poll put the figures at 52 to 32 percent in favor of Mondale. The other, compiled for Newsweek magazine, put the numbers at 54 to 35 percent.

These polls, said Bartlett, show only how well the theatrics were, such as the raising of an eyebrow at the right time. "As Americans, we're great observers. All the instant polls said was Mondale had improved his standing somewhat on theatrical aspects."

The vice presidential debate Thursday night between George H.W. Bush and Geraldine Ferraro should end with Bush doing "extremely well," Bartlett predicted.

The Republicans aren't falling back on a Rose Garden strategy for the campaign, he said. "The president and vice president are campaigning the length and breadth of the country."

Along with the gender gap and youth gap that have been publicized as two elements characterizing this election year, Bartlett said there is a Democrat gap. "In many parts of West Texas, Reagan will get more votes of registered Democrats than Mondale will."

This strong Republican sweep in some areas may carry over into other elections, he said.

"I'm not shy. I'm here to ask West Texans to vote in record numbers for Reagan/Bush for four more years of peace and prosperity."

Battling blaze

Midland firemen battled a blaze at 2:30 a.m. today at a vacant house at 901 N. Baird. Owned and in the process of being remodeled by Andy Macha, the house sustained heavy damage to a bedroom and hall. Midland fireman Sammy Field battles the smoke and heat, which caused damage throughout the house.

Midlanders, companies have unclaimed money in treasury

From Staff Reports

More than 100 Midlanders or local companies have money sitting unclaimed in the State Treasury, according to a release from State Sen. Bill Sims office.

State Treasurer Ann Richards' annual report on the Texas Treasury revealed the names of inactive account holders.

State law dictates that abandoned bank accounts, royalty checks, insurance policies and safety deposit boxes are to be turned over to the State Treasury after being dormant for seven years if no one claims them.

Money not collected by the original owners or their heirs is returned to the state's general revenue fund. Last year, the treasurer's office returned more than $2.5 million to the rightful owners and gave the state $10.1 million in the unclaimed remainder.

The treasurer's office has set up a toll-free number to inquire about claims. The number is 1-800-321-CASH.

Artrain's open to all 'passengers'

From Staff Reports

The "museum on wheels" known as Artrain is open to the public Wednesday through Sunday at Midland Air Terminal. Midland-Odessa is one stop on the 18-city tour of "Texas on Our Minds."

The Midland-Odessa stop is sponsored by the Midland Arts Assembly and the Odessa Cultural Council.

The two exhibitions on the train are composed mainly of original art work and are housed in four of the five cars. The public's tour begins with an audio visual presentation before entering the first exhibit, "Creative Impulsive."

"Creative Impulse" is a hundred year overview of American art which covers the major periods and styles in American art. One of the leading sculptors represented is Frederic Remington. Works by Thomas Hart Benton, Jacques Lipchitz and Andy Warhol are also included.

"Texas on Our Mind: Contemporary Visions of the Lone Star State," deals with contemporary artists in Texas who not only work in Texas but take their imagery from Texas ideas and are somewhat represented on the national basis as well.

Artrain is funded through foundation grants such as Texas

Commission on the Arts and from within the communities it tours.

The organization relies on public as well as major corporate support, such as the free ride it receives from the railroads. The Texas tour is made possible through the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway, the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Missouri Pacific Railroad, a division of the Union Pacific system.

The suggested donation of $2 for adults and $1 for children is not a mandatory admission price.

Viewing hours are 5 to 8 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and noon to 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Casa de Amigos library approved

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The Midland County Commissioners gave approval Monday to a proposal to establish a library at Casa de Amigos.

"They have a small library which is basically in one room," said Midland County Librarian John Deats. "We want to expand that."

Deats explained that the county library would transfer about 400-500 books to Casa de Amigos on a rotating basis.

In other action, the commissioners — Voted $16,609 as Midland's share of a tri-county alcohol breath-testing program. That's a 16 percent increase from last year. "But the number of tests is up 24 percent," said Harold Lovelace of Midland College, who maintains the equipment for Midland, Ector and Howard counties.

— Rejected both bids for a new word processor for the County Attorney's Office. "We have a whole system — we just wanted another terminal, and neither of the two bids that came in were compatible," said Assistant County Attorney Mark Dettman. "I guess we'll just try again."

— Awarded a bid to supply the county with gas and diesel fuel to Eddins-Walcher.

— Received the annual audit report from the accounting firm of Cook and Porter. "Their opinion is unqualified, which means they have no serious problems with anything," said County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin. "It's just plain vanilla."

— Made a gentleman's agreement with Dave Dorchester of the Texas Electric Service Co. to find some money in next year's budget to help pay for some work TESCO is doing on the uncompleted East Loop 250 near Highway 80.

"We have two high-voltage transmission wires there, and we have to raise them about five feet" where they will cross Loop 250, said Dorchester.

Williams: A winter gale moves elsewhere

He was like a whirlwind, breezing in the office to say his good-byes and then blowing right out the door.

But it was typical of Michael Williams. During the last few years, he was reluctant to do anything like a soft summer breeze. Michael was more like a winter gale.

His leaving for a new job in Washington, D.C. left a feeling of melancholy in the air. It wasn't his leaving that is sad, but the fact that he represents an era in Midland that is over.

It was in 1978 when Michael returned to Midland, and that was another one of those record-setting years for the city. Records were broken in new housing, new office buildings, new companies, new people. "The Sky is the Limit," became the slogan and reflected the optimistic philosophy of many citizens. It was uttered so often it became almost a standard greeting:

"How are you doing today?" "The sky's the limit," would come the reply.

Every week there seemed to be an announcement of something new coming to Midland. And every week there cropped up a new problem that needed to be solved. For reporters, the stories flowed.

When Michael returned to his native Midland, it wasn't long before he stepped into the City Council chambers. He made quite an appearance with the gold earring dangling from one ear, and his brash, aggressive attitude, vocalizing sentiments about the need for Community Development funds in logical, law-school arguments. He became the media's delight and the council's thorn in their side.

Michael lost the battle that year, but it was won in 1980.

Meanwhile, the Objectives for Midland group began their planning and Michael found his way into its midst, taking hold of the reins and dropping his earring before it was over.

These were the days of housing problems and housing committees; the days of battles over new developments; the days of recognizing that south and east Midland needed help in many ways; the days of putting together a public transportation system with the intent of making it work in a city the size of Midland. It was the days of controversy, when people said what they thought and didn't care how others took it.

"Oh, the sky's the limit on what we can achieve here," people said.

At first a free spirit, Michael worked his way into the system and took on a coat of a more conservative color. He shocked the community last winter when he ran in the primary on the Republican Party ticket.

Those days of the controversies, the news conferences, the verbal sentiments are gone. Even people who made the news several years ago are no longer here or can find little to talk about.

The air is calm, almost stifling. Like other newsmakers who have left before him, Michael said he couldn't turn down this job offer with the U.S. Justice Department.

Reminded that he had sworn to remain in Midland forever when he first appeared in 1978, Williams' face broke into a broad grin.

"Oh, I'll be back," he said with a chuckle. "I'll be back." And he was out the door.

He probably will be back...when the winds change in Midland.

Lana Cunningham is assistant city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

DEATHS

Fire fighters, police to come together under 'big top'

From Staff Reports

The first annual Midland Fire Fighters Recreational Association and Odessa Fraternal Order of Police Circus will be Oct. 26-28, at the Twin Cities Speedway.

The circus will be produced by John and Betty Reid of Reid Brothers Circus.

Mrs. Reid, a former aerialist, followed the footsteps of her mother, Ruth Reppine, a female lion tamer in the early 1930s and a circus producer for 30 years.

Reid, formerly a promoter and producer from the Los Angeles area, has produced extravaganzas for many years. He conducts large productions in indoor coliseums, outdoor grandstands and under big tops.

After marrying in 1963, the two formed Reid Brothers Circus, which is sponsored by various police, Shrine and sheriffs' associations throughout the North American continent.

Talent coordinator for the circus for the past several years has been Ray Valentine of Conroe. Reared and educated in Houston, Valentine is a former fourth generation trapeze artist, who owned and was star artist in the Flying Valentines. The group featured the first triple somersault blindfolded.

The Reids and Valentine combine to represent 250 years of personal and traditional circus experience.

before retiring June 30. He was a World War II veteran and a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include his wife; four daughters, Henrietta Peoples of Crane, Dorothy McLaughlin of Midland, Jacki Foster of Crane and Betty Taylor of Roswell, N.M.; a sister, Marie Haines of Mason; a brother, Henry Turner of Camp San Saba; and five grandchildren.

Jerald Scriven

Jerald E. Scriven, 46, of Midland died Friday evening in a local hospital.

Services are pending.

Scriven was born July 25, 1938 in Scottsbluff, Neb., and was reared in Gering, Neb. He attended Colorado State University in Ft. Collins, Colo. where he received a degree in agricultural engineering. He married Sharon Ann Cook on June 17, 1961. They moved to Midland April 1963 from Columbia, Missouri, where they had lived for eight years.

He was employed by Black and Veatch Engineers, Architects of Dallas. He was a member of the Community United Methodist Church, Masonic Lodge and Cosmopolitan Breakfast Club in Columbia. He also was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and was a registered professional engineer.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Mark Scriven of Florissant, Mo., and Tom Scriven of Midland; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Scriven of Gering, Neb.; and a brother, Robert Scriven of Kearney, Neb.

The family suggests memorials be made to the Heart Fund.

Jerry L. Gay

Jerry L. Gay, 45, of Midland died Sunday of injuries sustained in a one car roll-over accident between Stanton and Big Spring.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday in the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Gale Reeves, pastor of Calvary Assembly of God Church, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Gay was born Dec. 7, 1938 in Hagerman, N.M., where he was reared. He later moved to Texas and then to Midland in 1953. After attending Midland schools he married Louise Tumlinson Dec. 6, 1959 in Abilene. He worked for Pool Well Service, later working for M.F. Machen in Midland. He owned WHB Transports and at the time of his death he and his family owned and operated Ed's Trading Post.

He was a member of the Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Jerry Leonard Gay, of Midland; four daughters, Mrs. Terry Schneider, Mrs. Sherry Cockrell, Leslie Gay, all of Midland and Gina Gay of Abilene; four sisters, Mrs. Lois Lovelady of Palestine, Mrs. Linda Carmack of Austin, Mrs. Claudette Nelson and Mrs. Georgia Kilgore, both of Midland; and two grandchildren.

Cleo Taylor

CRANE — Cleo Taylor, 75, died at 9 p.m. Saturday in her home.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday in Richard W. Box Funeral Home Chapel with burial in Crane County Cemetery.

Ms. Taylor had been a resident of Crane since 1946 and was a homemaker.

Nursery provided on drop-in basis a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. No reservations are necessary.

If the children are going to be at the nursery during the lunch hour, from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., parents are asked to bring a sack lunch for them. The YMCA will provide drinks.

Fire fighters, police to come together under 'big top'

From Staff Reports

Some of the acts featured in the 1984 edition of the Midland Fire Fighters Recreational Association and Odessa Fraternal Order of Police Circus include Don E. Johnson's Royal Bengal Tigers, Robert "Bucky" Steele's Five Elephants and the Flying Trapeze artistry of the Famous Flying Valentines.

The circus also will feature Scott's unrideable mule, Leopards on a Leash, death defying aerial acts, hilarious chimpanzees, bears, clowns and other acts.

Shows will be at 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Friday and at 1:30 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

After marrying in 1963, the two formed Reid Brothers Circus, which is sponsored by various police, Shrine and sheriffs' associations throughout the North American continent.

Talent coordinator for the circus for the past several years has been Ray Valentine of Conroe. Reared and educated in Houston, Valentine is a former fourth generation trapeze artist, who owned and was star artist in the Flying Valentines. The group featured the first triple somersault blindfolded.

The Reids and Valentine combine to represent 250 years of personal and traditional circus experience.

Burglary of storage building reported

From Staff Reports

The burglary of a storage building at 2900 W. Kentucky was reported Monday by Ramon Kirkpatrick of 2501 W. Hicks. A padlock had been cut off the building sometime during the past week and $1,900 worth of items, including a microwave oven and a stereo, were reported missing.

Earl Keller of 4747 Boulder, reported a small warehouse at 1807 Carol Drive had been burglarized between 12:30 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 a.m. Monday. Taken were lawn mowers and equipment valued at $820.

Jewelry, clothing and luggage valued at $820 was reported taken from the garage of Ruth Sutton, 2826 Moss. The garage apparently was entered through an open door between Sunday night and Monday morning.

A $550 stereo was stolen Monday afternoon from the home of Gary Pringle, 4616 N. Big Spring. According to reports, his wife had returned home to find the lock on a sliding glass door broken.

A lawnmower, equipment and tools were reported taken from a pickup owned by Ismael Salgado around 2 a.m. Monday while the pickup was stalled at the intersection of Kentucky and Baird. According to reports, Salgado returned at 3 a.m. and found the items, valued at $605, missing.

Stereos and speakers valued at $480 were reported taken or damaged at Midway Motors, 2600 W. Wall. Two vehicles parked on the northwest parking lot were entered between Saturday and Monday morning.

Gene Maines reported a warehouse at 2010 W. Front was entered by kicking a hole in the door and a $420 compressor was taken. The burglary occurred between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Sunday.

Russell Curry told police he had parked his car Sunday afternoon at the Texaco service station at 2301 W. Wadley and given his keys to the attendant. When he returned at 4 p.m. Monday, a $250 stereo was missing.

Crime Stoppers looks into several burglaries

Crime Stoppers this week is seeking information on several residential burglaries that have occurred recently on Odessa's southside.

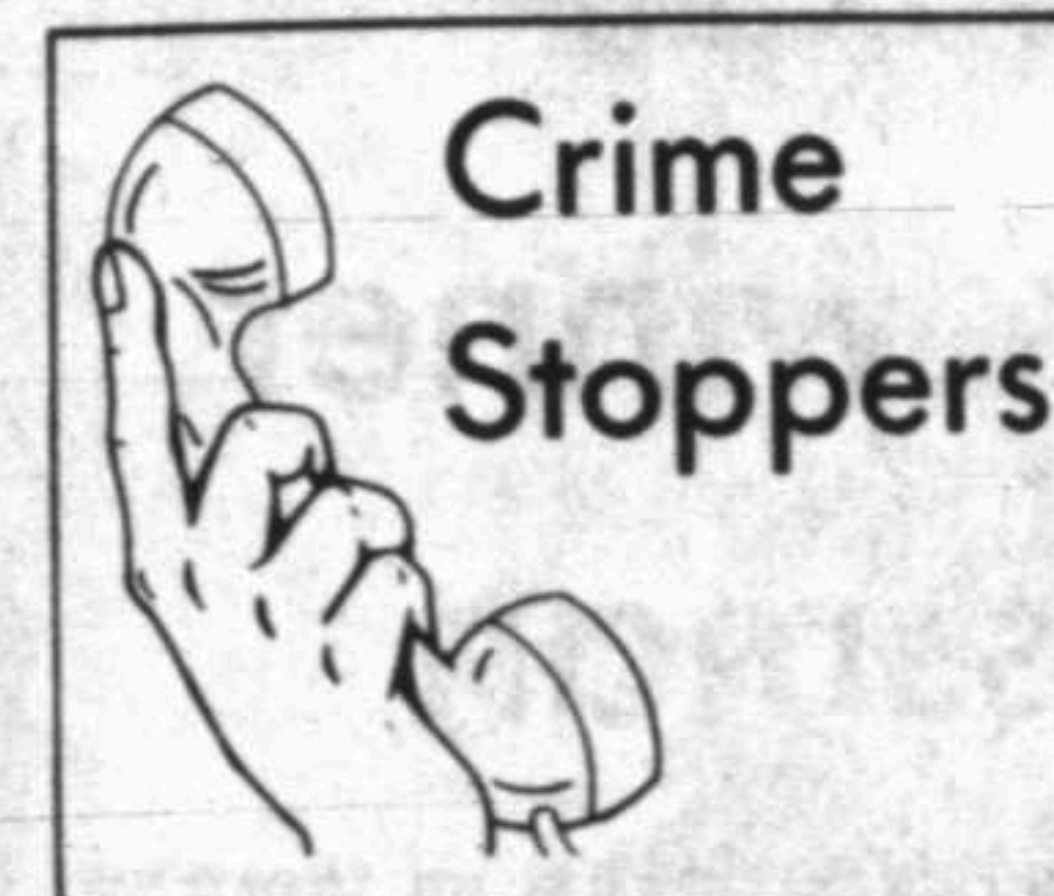

All of the victims of the burglaries have been elderly and in most cases have lived by themselves.

The suspect, described as a black male in his 20s about 6-feet-tall, 180-190 pounds with a short, curly afro, has kicked open doors early in the morning to gain entry. The suspect threatens and terrorizes the victims with a knife and demands money. In some of the cases, he has caused bodily injury to his victims.

Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 this week for any information concerning these burglaries that leads to the arrest and indictment of the person responsible.

Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for other felony crimes and may be called in Odessa at 333-TIPS and in Midland at 684-TIPS.

All callers may remain anonymous.

Accident victim released from MMH

From Staff Reports

A 10-year-old Midland boy was discharged from Midland Memorial Hospital this morning following a motorcycle accident Monday evening.

Jason Lee Williams of Route 4 Box 17-X was treated for a fractured lower right leg, a hospital spokeswoman said.

According to the Department of Public Safety, the boy was driving a 1984 Suzuki motorcycle south in a private dirt field two miles south of Midland just west of Texas Highway 349.

He apparently crossed in front of a westbound pickup on County Road 130 and accelerated to avoid the pickup. He then lost control in a dirt parking lot and slid into a parked vehicle.

Investigating trooper was Sue Rudie.

Two doctors awarded for contributions to disabled

From Staff Reports

The Texas Rehabilitation Commission awarded Dr. Atilano Diaz and Dr. Luis Montalvo, Midland obstetricians/gynecologists, certificates of appreciation for their outstanding contributions to the disabled people of Midland.

The presentation was made in observance of National Employ the Handicapped Week this week.

The hard work and dedication of the two doctors has helped in the rehabilitation of many women in Midland, according to Julia Crume, TRC counselor. Without their help, these women would not have been able to return to gainful employment and become a useful part of society.

The TRC, with field offices across Texas, helps disabled people find and keep good jobs. The services provided to disabled Texans through the Vocational Rehabilitation Division include counseling and guidance; medical, psychological and vocational evaluation; job training and placement; medical treatment; and assistive devices such as artificial limbs, hearing aids or wheelchairs.

The Extended Rehabilitation Services program offers work and residential living to people considered too severely disabled for regular vocational rehabilitation services.

Also, Texas' five independent living centers receive major financial support from TRC, which allows the center to help disabled people overcome obstacles preventing them from living as independently as possible.

For more information, contact the TRC in Midland at 684-5791.

Fashion designer de Ribes 'epitome of elegance'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Yves Saint Laurent once called the Vicomtesse de Ribes "the pearl in the King of Poland's ear, the Queen of Sheba's tallow-drop emerald." She is a castle in Bavaria, a tall black swan, a royal blue orchid, an ivory unicorn. ... She is the quivering albatross atop a maharajah's turban in a whimsical and baroque spiral.

To almost everyone else, Jacqueline de Ribes is simply the epitome of elegance, her eminence of chic. Her fashion sense is unfaltering — since she was 20 years old she has topped every best-dressed list.

She came to Washington recently to meet with customers at Saks Fifth Avenue and to make sure that every detail of fit and design was in order at a fashion show to benefit the National Theatre.

She could, of course, be back in Paris, where she lives in an antique-filled town house on the Rue de la Biensaisance with her international banker husband, and where she is admired as a mother, grandmother, international hostess, television producer (with Liza Minnelli's first French TV special to her credit) and energetic charity organizer.

BUT MORE than a year ago she removed all but the wall-sized tapestries from three rooms of her house and presented her first collection. Saint Laurent, Valentino and Emanuel Ungaro, designers she patronized, were in the front row applauding. Now her clothing designs — which can cost up to $5,000 — and her jewelry are a huge success in this country and will soon be sold in England, Germany, Italy and Switzerland.

Many were skeptical when she started. "Not my family and people who know me and are close to me," she says. "Nobody in the world of fashion. Not my fitters in the maison de couture. For so many years I have said, 'Wait and see, one day I will go off on my own.' Then one day I said, 'My God, they can't be waiting that long, and I can't be waiting that long either.'"

She had designed jewelry, designed her own clothes, designed clothes for her family, her sister and

The Vicomtesse Jacqueline de Ribes started designing a line of clothing a year ago.

mother, but had never created her own line — "for lack of courage," she says. "Finally, I just said, 'What is lacking here that makes me so unhappy is courage, self-confidence.' Her friends and family supported her. 'It piled up in my head, and finally I picked up my courage to do it.'"

There have been no regrets, "not even surprises," she says. "I'm just learning. I knew it was going to be total dedication, but I didn't realize that it was going to shut me off from sharing the holidays with my husband and not seeing my children, and this it does. There is no resentment in the family, only they hope it will change, that the pace will be different after three and four years. Maybe I won't have to do the tours."

THEN SHE adds quietly, "A choice is a choice. In France we have a saying ... choosing is in some way dying. It is true. If you choose something, you are certainly dying off other possibilities in your life. You choose something, and you know what choosing means. If you start regretting, and saying, 'Maybe I should have done this and this,' then you get neurotic and you have to go to the doctor." She stops and smiles. "I haven't had to go to the doctor ... and I am not going to."

Although designing is a new profession, it has always been a part of Jacqueline de Ribes' life. She would dress up in towels or whatever else was handy as a child. She was not encouraged to take an interest in clothes by her mother, the Comtesse de Beaumont, a writer who translated all of Tennessee Williams into French. But when the couturiers would come to fit her grandmother, she would sneak into the room and watch them work.

"I have always been fascinated by the techniques of the thing. From the first day I saw a fitting had to know everything about how it worked," she says.

SHE HAD very strong ideas about fashion, even at age 6. "I wrote a letter to Father Christmas giving him my measures and the description of the skating dress nobody wanted to give me." She remembers it well. "It had to be royal blue velvet trimmed with white fur at the cuffs and hem, and I wanted a little fur hat to match. I took my measures in front of a mirror with a tape. And I was very disappointed that I never got my dress."

In boarding school she always designed the sets and costumes for the school plays. And at age 16 she cut out her first dress on the living room floor — a dress to impress her fiancé, the Vicomte de Ribes, whom she married the next year. Her husband Edouard, now a comte, was 24, and she was "such a baby" at her marriage, she recalls now, "my wedding gown was like a communion dress." Their first child, Elisabeth, was born a year later. Their son Jean was born five years after Elisabeth.

"When I got married I had never worn makeup nor high-heeled shoes," she says. "I had never been to a restaurant. And I had never been to a hairdresser." For a wedding present, her mother's maid gave her a box with drawers filled with Elizabeth Arden cosmetics. "And you see," she says with a wonderful, generous grin, "I caught up."

SHE VISITED New York as a young bride, and Diana Vreeland, then an editor at Vogue, spotted Jacqueline and Edouard having lunch at a French restaurant. Vreeland called her the next day and asked her to be photographed for the magazine.

She was astonished. "I thought that I couldn't be photographed in Vogue looking like a schoolgirl, with my hair in a braid and no makeup. So I went and spent I don't know how many hours to have my makeup and hair done."

When she arrived at the studio, she recalls, Vreeland was aghast. "What have you done to yourself? If you only know how beautiful you were yesterday," she said.

"Aren't I beautiful today?" de Ribes repeats in a voice that sounds like Audrey Hepburn.

"Much less," Vreeland answered.

De Ribes recalls that Vreeland then started to brush her curls flat, to recreate the look of the day before. The photograph has become one of Richard Avedon's most famous portraits.

"Vreeland was the first one to tell me I was beautiful," says de Ribes. "I didn't believe it. I thought she liked strange-looking people, something different," she giggles.

At age 20 her name appeared on the International Best Dressed List. She says it was a total surprise, but admits that such accolades are sometimes a burden. "I remember once I walked into (hairdresser) Alexandre with my hair down, no makeup, and he was so shocked. Alexandre said, 'Vicomtesse, you can't do that to me. You can't appear looking like this. You disappoint all of us.' I thought that was terrible. If I have to go to a hairdresser all dolled up, then when will I ever relax?" As a result, she rarely visits a salon, preferring to fix her severe chignon herself — though "I hardly fix it," she says.

THE REST of her beauty regimen is equally minimal. She watches her weight, trying not to become too slim. "I can't be very thin and not look tired." Exercise is simply part of her daily existence — covering the four floors in her Paris house that has no elevator.

She is just beyond 50 now. "I have no interest in talking about my age," she says brusquely. "I don't imagine myself as old." She says she doesn't worry about getting older. "The only thing that has changed in my life is needing reading glasses."

DEAR ABBY

Parents carry grudge against daughter to their grave

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am sitting here brokenhearted over a problem that could have been resolved years ago. My father died last week; my mother died a year ago. Although we were very close when I was younger, they stopped speaking to me six years ago when I decided to live with my boyfriend, whom I have since married.

When I first told my parents I was moving in with my boyfriend, they called me "stupid, tramp" and a few other names you can't print.

I was over 21 and wasn't hurting myself or anybody else, but after this move, they wanted nothing more to do with me. When I invited them to my wedding, they didn't even respond.

Now that they are gone, I feel angry and bitter that they could let this one difference come between us forever. They missed the opportunity of sharing their lives with me, my husband and our son.

Why am I writing? Because I hope you will print this as a plea to other parents who feel the way mine did about living together. Please, parents, don't lock your children out of your lives because their ideas differ from yours. — NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Here's your letter. I'm sure many parents will identify with it. My mail tells me that although most parents disapprove of "living together," they accept it rather than lose their children.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you printed a letter from a 14-year-old adoptee, asking how to contact one's birth parents. You advised him to register with International Soundex Reunion Registry in Carson City, Nev.

Until I read it in your column, I never knew such a service existed. I have often had a desire to contact the daughter I placed for adoption 21 years ago.

I filed my application, and within DAYS, a match was made! (My daughter had filed with Soundex Registry, too.) I have spoken with her on the phone, and we made plans to meet in the near future. I am still recovering from the incredible experience. Thank you for making it possible! — KATHERINE C. IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR KATHERINE: I share your joy. I want to repeat, however, that minors may register with Soundex, but until they are 18, they may not be matched with their birth parents. And only if their parents have also registered with Soundex can a match be made. I am in full agreement that birth parents and adoptees should be able to meet, but only when it is mutually agreeable.

DEAR ABBY: Poems fascinate me, so I clip and keep them. I just came across this one from your column. It's at least six or seven years old. If you agree that it's still appropriate, I hope you'll run it. Thanks, Abby. — ADA M. WHITMARSH, BINGHAMPTON, N.Y.

DEAR ADA: Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: My name is Steve Zondlak and I am 12. I wrote a poem. If you like it, you may keep it.

GOD'S SHELTER
Let's make a bomb of love and prayer,
For takeoff fuel, let's use God's air.

Let's send it out for all to share
Our plea against nuclear despair.
Let's ask the leaders from all lands
For peace. And then
Let's all shake hands!

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

UAW expected to ratify contract

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber and General Motors Corp. Chairman Roger Smith predicted the 350,000 UAW workers at GM will ratify a tentative contract even though the first locals to vote approved it by only a slim margin.

By early today, the nationwide totals were about 27,395 in favor to 25,265 against — or 52 percent to 48 percent — with returns in from 34 of 147 UAW locals. Eight other locals reported which way their members voted but provided no totals.

Overall, 29 locals voted in favor of the contract and 13 voted to reject it. The outcome of the one-worker, one-vote tally may not be known until the weekend because the balloting deadline is Oct. 14.

Meanwhile the UAW was to continue bargaining today at Ford Motor Co., where it represents 115,000 workers. The union has set a target date of Friday for reaching a contract at Ford, but has not set an official strike deadline.

Most voting on the GM pact was scheduled today and Wednesday in Michigan and Indiana, two critical states. And a close vote was predicted at Local 1999 in Oklahoma City, representing 6,000 members at a GM assembly plant.

"We have not hidden the fact that we are displeased with some parts of the agreement," said Local 1999 President Eddie McCracken, but he said he and most local officials were backing the pact.

Bieber told reporters in South Bend, Ind., that he was confident the contract would be approved, despite the closeness of the early voting.

He said many workers do not clearly understand the benefits of the agreement, which includes pay increases of about 2.25 percent annually and a pledge to create a fund of up to $1 billion to aid workers laid off because of automation, productivity gains or the contracting of labor to outside shops.

The union leader recalled past contract battles, pointing out that when the UAW bargained for — and received — supplemental unemployment benefits, many members failed to comprehend the importance. But they appreciated the union's action when the recession threw them out of work, Bieber said.

Last week, Bieber warned his membership that rejection of the contract would mean a nationwide strike against the world's No. 1 automaker.

Although he echoed Bieber in predicting approval of the tentative agreement, Smith forecast harsh consequences for the entire industry if the rank-and-file rejects the pact.

"It's going to be approved, it just has to be," Smith said. "Otherwise, we're going to have some desperate problems again."

Donald Ephlin, the UAW's chief bargainer at GM, said the results of weekend voting have boosted the contract's chances of approval.

The tentative contract, reached Sept. 21 after six days of local strikes at 17 plants, would provide an average up-front pay rise of 15 cents an hour, to $12.82.

It does not include guaranteed annual raises, like those the union had for 34 years until the 1982 concessions contract.

However, the pact does provide for lump-sum payments, cost of living adjustments and profit sharing. If current economic continue for the contract's three years, those extras plus the pay raise could boost the average worker pay by $12,000, according to the union.

In voting Monday, Local 167 at the Rochester Products Division at Grand Rapids approved the pact 1,199 to 397, the union reported. Local 662 at the Delco Remy plant in Anderson, Ind., voted 3,433 to 2,244 in favor, a union spokesman said.

Mack Wallace

Mack Wallace to address Midland Desk & Derrick

Mack Wallace, Chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, will be in Midland to speak to the Desk and Derrick club on Thursday, Oct. 11.

Mr. Wallace will speak on the "Economics of Energy in America: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at the Petroleum Club.

Mr. Wallace was appointed Railroad Commissioner in 1973 by then Governor Dolph Briscoe. He served as Chairman of the Commission from Jan. 1, 1977 to Dec. 31, 1978, and was re-elected Chairman on Jan. 3, 1983, for a two-year period.

He is a graduate of Baylor University's School of Law. He had a private practice for four years, then was elected Henderson County Attorney in 1957, from 1962 to 1973, he was District Attorney for the Third Judicial District of Texas. In January, 1973, he was named Legal Counsel to the Governor. In April, 1973, he was named Executive Director of the Governor's Criminal Justice Council, where he served until he was named to the Railroad Commission.

He has chaired the Interstate Mining Compact Commission, and is presently chairman of the Compact's Legal Committee. He is also co-chairman of the Legal Committee of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission and chairman of the Texas Mining Council. He is also a member of the Advisory Council of the Texas Energy Day Project and of the Board of Directors of the Austin Council on Foreign Affairs.

Defunct nuke plant claims now total over half billion

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — More than half a billion dollars in claims and a request for a $7 billion electricity rate increase may hinge on a court clash between Consumers Power Co. and Dow Chemical Co. over the defunct Midland nuclear power project.

Today's opening arguments before Midland County Circuit Judge David DeWitt mark the start of a legal battle that court officials predict could take six months.

Dow, the nation's second-largest chemical company, last year filed a $60 million lawsuit claiming that Consumers, the nation's 10th-largest utility, deceived it about construction problems at the Midland nuclear power project, which was shut down in July when 85 percent complete.

Consumers, denying it deceived anyone about the project, filed a countersuit claiming a $460 million contract termination fee from Dow and unspecified damages.

The Midland plant, begun in 1967, was designed not only to produce electricity, but also steam that would be sold to Dow Chemical.

"Any proofs that Dow presents in court about fraud and mismanagement could be very important in determining how much of the Midland loss could be recovered from ratepayers," said Hugh Anderson, assistant state attorney general.

But Eric Schneidewind, chairman of the Michigan Public Service Commission, said it is unclear whether court findings would be admissible before the regulatory body as it considers Consumers' request for $7 billion in rate increases to reimburse the utility for spending on the nuclear plant.

Consumers attorneys have said the utility would have to consider seeking protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code if it doesn't receive reimbursement for the Midland project.

A Dow spokesman said late Monday that the company attorneys would ask DeWitt to disqualify himself from hearing the case because of family ties to Consumers Power.

DeWitt said that his father, Harold DeWitt, worked for Consumers from 1948 to 1960 and now receives a pension of $147 a month from the utility's retirement system.

The elder DeWitt's job with the utility was right-of-way buyer.

Utility asks for rate hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Utilities Electric Co. says it needs more than a $300 million rate hike. But the state's public counsel says the rates should be cut.

The Public Utility Commission, working with recommendations that vary by almost $400 million, was to meet today to set rates for TUEC, which sells power to about one-third of the state's population.

The company says it needs a $304 million hike. But Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle, representing residential and small business customers, says TUEC rates should be cut by $81.5 million.

The utility commission staff agrees a decrease is due. The staff proposal calls for a $65.2 million cut.

Hearing examiners who listened to weeks of testimony in the case say TUEC is entitled to a $7 million hike that company officials say would mean "effectively a zero increase" on most residential bills.

"I don't think it's in the long-term best interests of the people of Texas," TUEC Vice President Tom Baker said of the examiners' proposal.

TUEC, created by the merger of Texas Power & Light, Dallas Power & Light and Texas Electric Service Co., serves about 4.5 million customers in 91 Texas counties.

The increase sought by the company would add about 8 percent to TUEC rates.

The examiners' report said TUEC customers should not pay any additional costs at the company's Comanche Peak nuclear plant near Glen Rose.

Under the examiners' proposal, TUEC would be allowed to earn a 15.7 percent profit for stockholders. The company says a 16.75 percent return is needed to draw capital.

Restaurant president to speak

Bruce Allred, president of the 6,000 member Texas Restaurant Association, will be the guest speaker at the Tuesday, Oct. 16 meeting of the Permian Basin Restaurant Association.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at the Odessa Country Club. For reservations, phone Bobby Cox at 563-4290.

Allred is also president of Golden Triangle Dairy Queens, a 14 franchise operation named after the area that stretches from Beaumont to Port Arthur to Orange.

He will talk about key issues affecting the restaurant business today ranging from labor relations to management consulting to government legislation.

Ada Belle field still pumping at 81 years

BATSON, Texas (AP) — The Ada Belle Oil Co. hasn't changed much in its 81-year history, but stockholders in the old field aren't complaining.

"Any lucky sucker who inherited a share ain't about it give it up," says Judy Allen, 44, secretary of the company.

The company began in 1903 and in its early years netted just enough money to meet expenses. But Ms. Allen told the Houston Chronicle things have changed quite a bit since then.

"My mother used to make snide comments about how puny the stock dividends were," she said.

Oil prices jumped with the Mideast oil embargo, dividend to Ada Belle's lucky 1,425 shareholders rose to about $80 a year, or about the same price the original investors paid.

Ms. Allen's family got the stock through her grandfather, John Cashen, a drilling contractor who traded equipment to Ada Belle for stock.

The Ada Belle is the oldest oil field of its kind in the country, Ms. Allen said.

"It's the only producing oil field in the country that still has a central roundhouse to run the pumps," she told the Chronicle.

One electric motor moves a big wheel in the roundhouse, pushing and pulling rods that make the Ada Belle's pumps move.

Although some oil fields are older, they've been modernized over the years.

But at Ada Belle, some of the tanks are still made of cypress, and are so oil-soaked that they may never rot.

More than 300 wells have been drilled on the property or adjacent leases, although only about two dozen are kept running at one time. A couple of new wells are drilled each year as older wells are plugged.

"I've been pretty lucky," says Albert Payne, who is in charge of the field. "I haven't drilled into another well yet."

Parts for the old wells are impossible to find so Payne and three full-time workers make the parts themselves.

Payne took over the job in 1960 when his father died. He'll turn 65 later this month.

"I thought when I came here it was going to play out before I got ready to retire," he says. But the field shows no sign of drying out and "I'm gonna stick around for a while yet."

Continental may lease from Braniff

DALLAS (AP) — Cash-strapped Braniff Inc. and Houston-based Continental Airlines Corp. are negotiating for Braniff to lease eight of its 30 airplanes and some of its personnel to Continental, a newspaper reported today.

The planes would be repainted with Continental's colors and would fly Continental routes with Braniff pilots and flight attendants, sources at both airlines told The Dallas Morning News.

Braniff, which has struggling since emerging from bankruptcy court March 1, has been actively seeking a merger or buyout. The Dallas-based airline also has been negotiating to sell assets and leases on gates in order to raise cash.

Peter Connolly, Braniff's senior vice president for law and administration, would not confirm the talks, but said, "No definitive agreement has been reached with Continental."

Industry analysts have speculated in the past that Continental might be interested in a Braniff merger since the Houston-based discount airline has been trying to expand and might desire a stronger presence in the Dallas-Fort Worth market.

Continental is operating at greater capacity than it was before it filed for bankruptcy protection more than a year ago. Planning for rapid growth, its parent company, Texas Air Corp., reportedly has contracted with the Boeing Co. to purchase 24 737-300 aircraft.

Continental spokesman Mike Cineill would not comment today on the leasing possibility. A Braniff official said today that officers and spokesmen were in a meeting and not immediately available to comment on the report.

The News said an announcement of the agreement could come at the end of this week or early next week, and Continental would like to have the airplanes in operation on its routes by Nov. 15.

Texas Air will purchase $600 million in aircraft

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp. of Houston has completed negotiations with Boeing Co. on a contract for $600 million in new aircraft, including some that will be leased to bankrupt Continental Airlines Corp., an aviation trade publication reported.

According to "Aviation Week and Space Technology," the contract includes the purchase of 24 B-737-300 aircraft and options for 21 more.

The aircraft, scheduled for delivery in 1985, likely will be leased by Texas Air to its two airline subsidiaries, New York Air and bankrupt Continental Airlines, the magazine reports.

A Continental spokesman in Houston confirmed the report, but said "some of the numbers are not entirely accurate," the Dallas Morning News reported Monday.

A Continental officer, who asked not to be identified, said the numbers are "very very close," according to The News.

An announcement is expected later this week.

Continental, which filed for bankruptcy in September 1983, now operates DC-10, DC-9 and 727 aircraft. It recently asked federal bankruptcy court in Houston for permission to lease three McDonnell Douglas MD-80 aircraft from New York Air. New York Air flies DC-9s.

Analysts say the acquisition of new, fuel-efficient aircraft will be necessary for Continental's future growth plans as well as for the morale of its employees.

Dollar up; Gold down

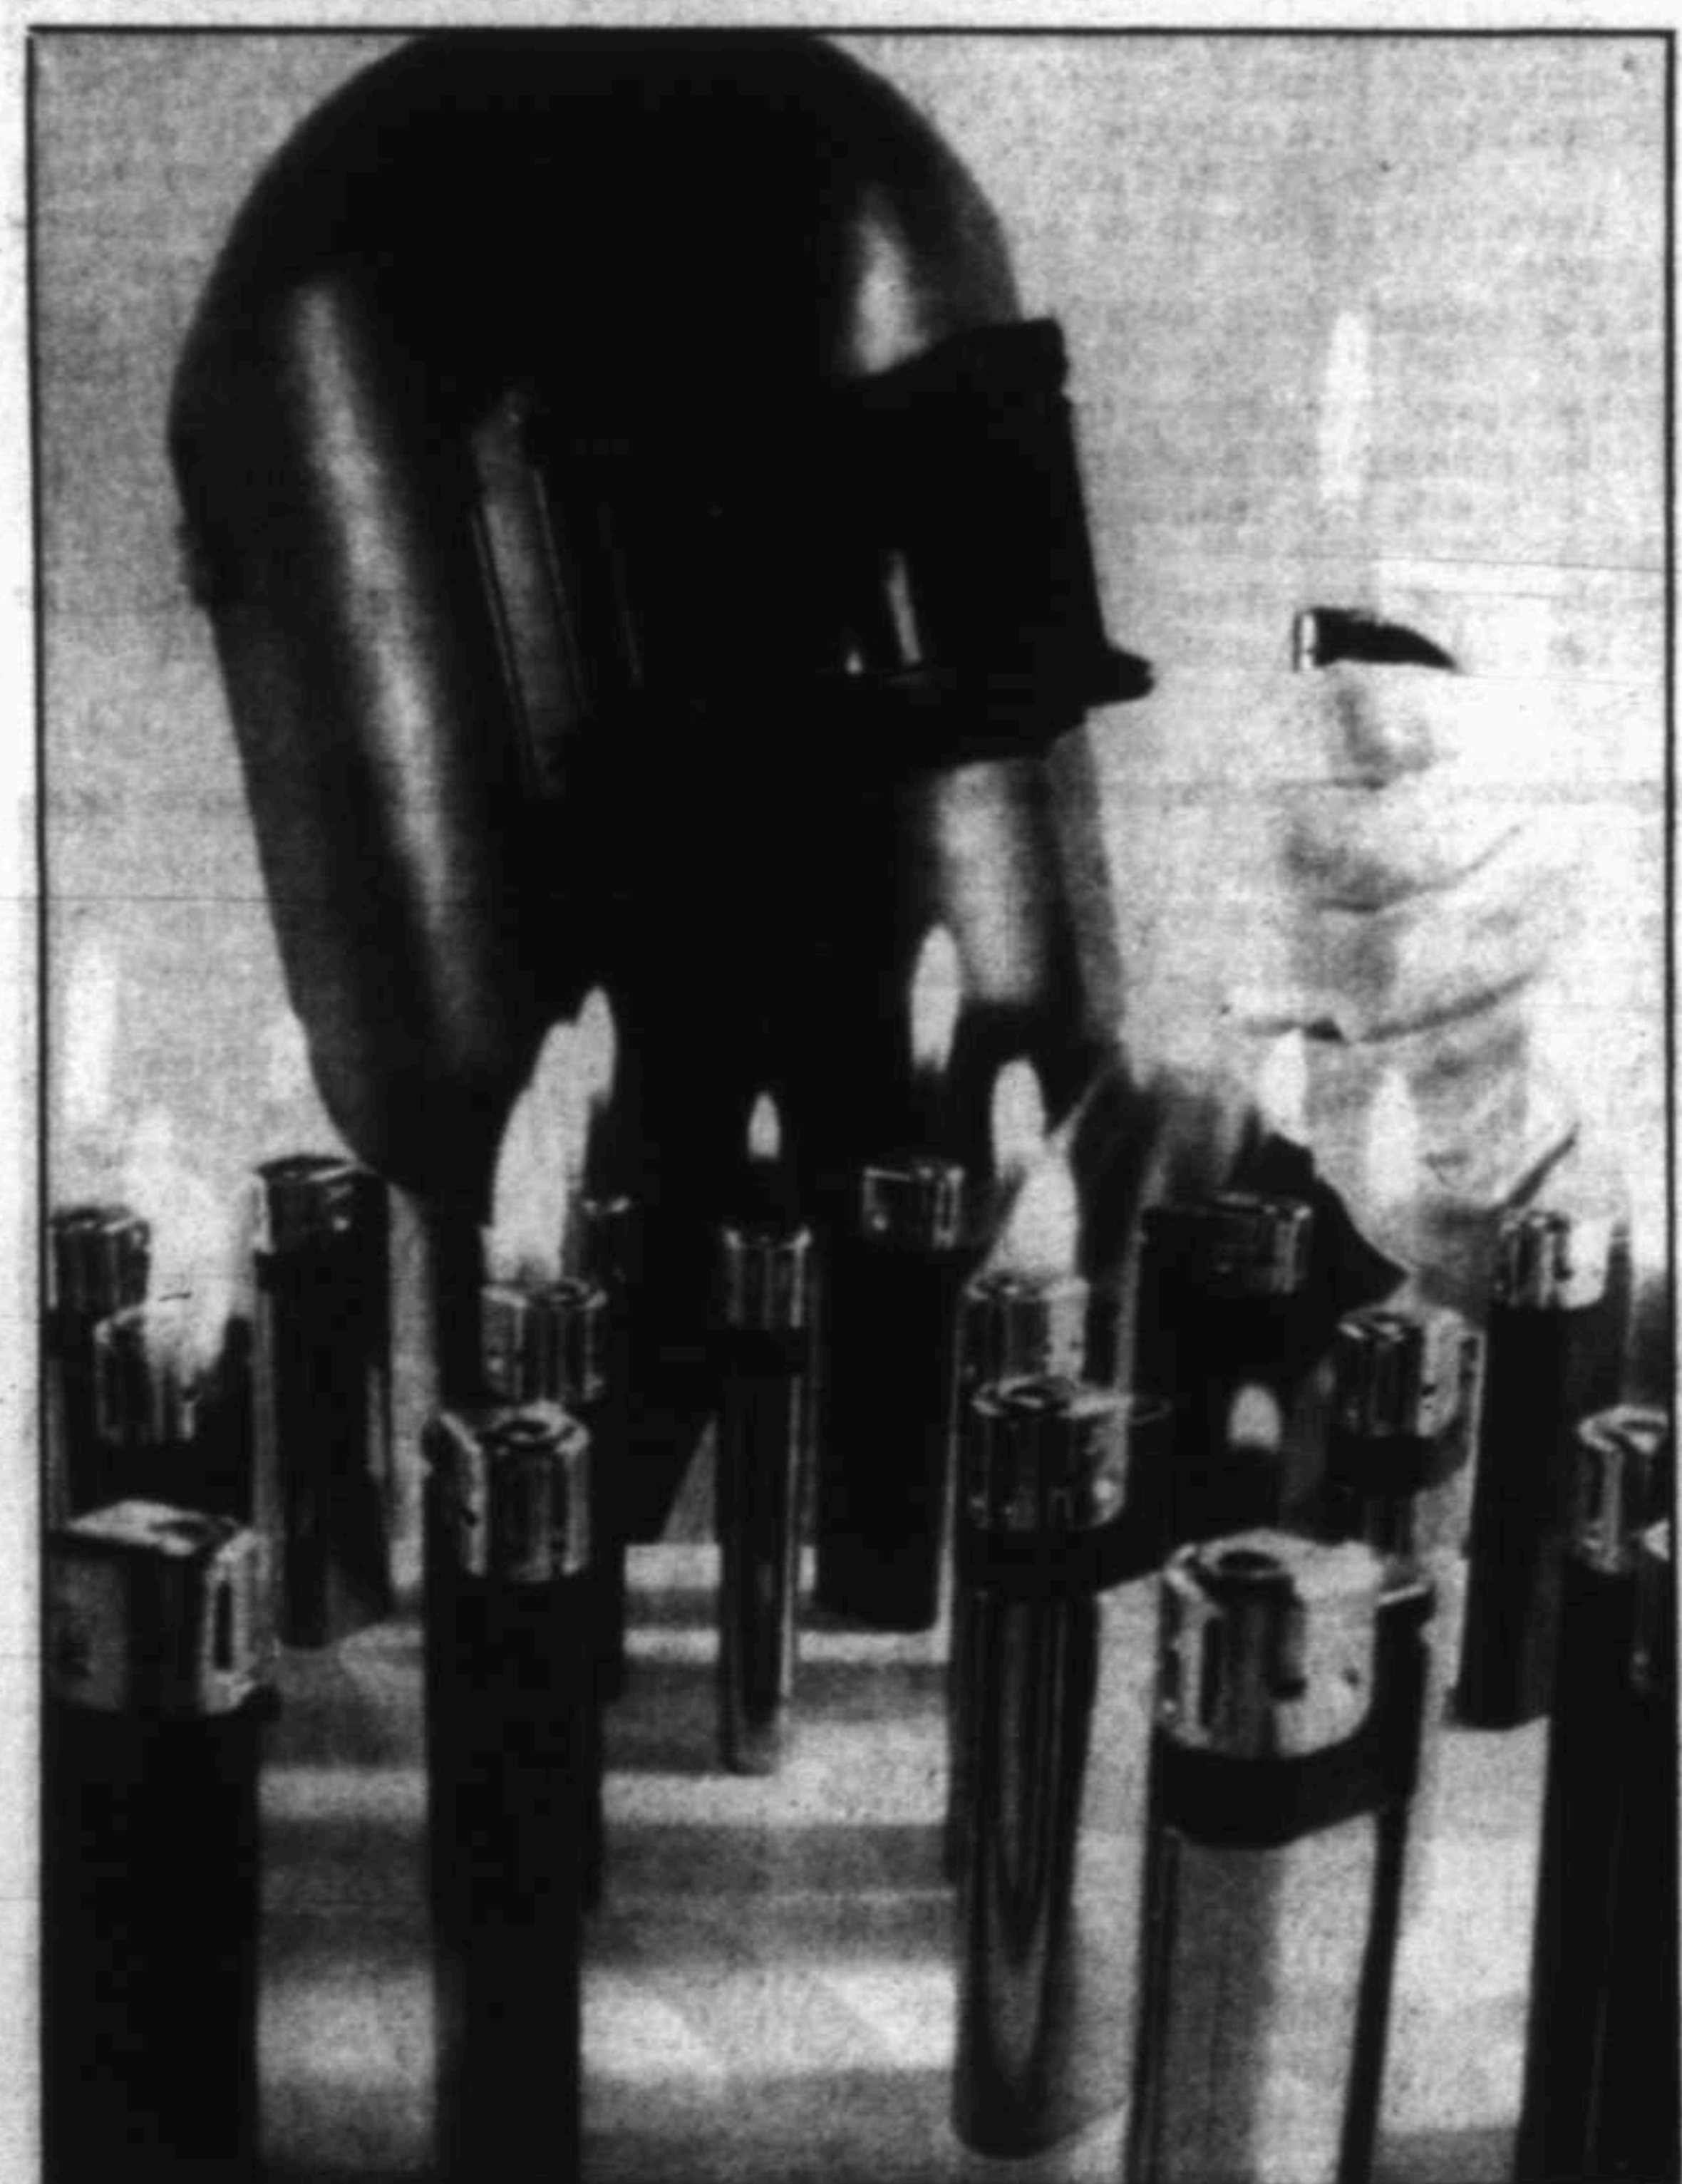

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose anew on European currency markets today, registering strong gains against the Italian lira, West German mark and French franc. Gold fell.

Dealers said they saw no specific market developments behind the dollar's climb during the past few days. They attributed it to continuing high U.S. interest rates and the absence of signs of intervention by central banks.

Frankfurt dealers said U.S. Treasury plans to sell nearly $10 billion worth of bonds Wednesday and Thursday probably would keep the dollar high throughout the week.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 246.95 yen from Monday's 246.35. Later, in London, it was quoted at 247.28.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday: —3.0675 West German marks, up from 3.0625.

Leaks shuts down nuclear plant

RAINIER, Ore. (AP) — The problem-plagued Trojan nuclear power plant, restarted Friday after four weeks of delays, probably will be shut down again in about a week because of leaking hydrogen, said the plant operator, Portland General Electric Co.

Hydrogen that cools the plant's electric generators has been leaking through faulty seals and mixing with oil, said PGE spokesman William Babcock.

"We cannot continue losing that hydrogen, it's tremendously expensive," said Babcock. "The system is consuming about 10,000 cubic feet of hydrogen per day, about four times the usual consumption."

PGE hopes to correct the hydrogen problem by realigning the seals, which would take a day, or by replacing them, which would take longer, Babcock said.

Another problem the operators have discovered is leaks in the feed-water system, which pre-heats the water that is eventually superheated to make steam, which turns the turbines.

The water is preheated to prevent it from cracking or stressing the pipes. It is preheated with waste heat from the water in the turbines.

Wells tested in Loving County

Staff Reports

Two development wells have been completed in the Cognac (Cherry Canyon) field of Loving County.

MEG ENERGY, INC. tested the No. 9 SAB for a calculated absolute open flow of 2,726 Mcfpd with a flowing tubing pressure of 900 psi. Perforations are from 5,073 to 5,187 ft., and were acidized with 22 tons CO₂ and fractured with 18,000 gallons gel and 22,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Total depth is 5,850 ft., plugged back to 5,440 ft. Casing is 5 1/2 inches set at 5,850 ft.

With a ground elevation of 2,704 ft., formation tops are Rustler, 1,400; Ramsey, 3,780; and Cherry Canyon, 4,830 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from northeast and 860 ft. from southeast lines of Section 96, Block 33, H&TC survey, 8 miles northwest of Mentone.

The other MEG Energy, Inc. well, the No. 5 Adams, tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 2,332 Mcfpd, with a flowing tubing pressure of 400 psi. Perforations are from 5,115 to 5,159 ft., and were acidized with 21 tons CO₂ and fractured with 15,000 gallons and 22,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Total depth is 5,950 ft., plugged back to 5,750 ft. Casing is 5 1/2 inches set at 5,950 ft.

With a ground elevation of 2,710 ft., formation tops are Rustler, 1,400; Ramsey, 3,780; and Cherry Canyon, 4,830 ft.

Williams completes development wells

Five development wells have been completed by THE WILLIAMS COMPANY.

Three wells are infill producers in the Rhoda Walker (5900 Canyon) field of Ward County.

The No. 9-A Thompson was tested to pump 64 bopd, 160 Mcfpd and 289 bwpd. Perforations are from 6,261 to 6,442 ft. in the Cherry Canyon formation.

The No. 10-A Thompson was tested to flow 42 bopd, 650 Mcfpd and 203 bwpd on a 1/4 inch choke, with a flowing tubing pressure of 720 psi. Perforations are from 6,584 to 6,642 ft. in the Cherry Canyon formation.

The No. 17 G.Q. Avery was tested to pump 74 bopd, 200 Mcfpd and 510 bwpd. Perforations are from 6,586 to 6,666 ft. in the Cherry Canyon formation. All three wells are 7 miles west of Pyote.

The company also completed a Wilson County well in the Cindy Ann (Austin Chalk) field.

The No. 1-A Ashorn-Bentke was tested to pump 168 bopd and 75 Mcfpd, no water. Perforations are from 6,050 to 6,085 ft. The well is located 6 miles northeast of Poth.

The company tested the No. 1-A Ashorn-Bentke in the Georgetown formation of the Clay Northeast field of Washington County for a calculated absolute open flow of 4,606 Mcfpd, with a flowing tubing pressure of 2,400 psi. Perforations are from 12,358 to 12,438 ft.

Alabama records third CMA win

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Alabama's bouncy fiddle music and soft love songs won the group a record third entertainer of the year award, and guitarist Chet Atkins won top instrumentalist for the seventh time at the 18th Country Music Association ceremonies.

The award pushed Alabama past Barbara Mandrell for most awards as top entertainer. Miss Mandrell, who missed Monday night's ceremonies because of injuries sustained in a car accident but was shown at home via remote camera, won entertainer of the year in 1980 and 1981.

"We don't take entertainer of the year lightly," said Alabama lead singer Randy Owen. "We are going to make plans tomorrow to make you proud you voted for us."

Miss Mandrell, Lee Greenwood, Ronnie Milsap and the Oak Ridge Boys were finalists for the top honor. The award presented at the Grand Ole Opry house is based on excellence in all phases of country music.

Alabama was bolstered by the album "Roll On," which contains the hit singles "Roll On," "When We Make Love" and "If You're Gonna Play in Texas (You Gotta Have a Fiddle in the Band)."

Alabama guitarist Teddy Gentry was thankful that country music had provided him with a good job. "I don't want to have to go back to laying carpet for a living," Gentry said at a news conference.

Monday night's winners were chosen by the 8,000 singers, musicians, songwriters and other country music professionals who belong to the CMA — the industry's trade association.

Members of the group Alabama accept CMA's entertainer of the year honors for a record third time.

Greenwood, a former casino dealer who scored this year with the hit "God Bless the U.S.A.," was voted top male vocalist for the second straight year and told the crowd of 4,400 it was the birthday of his mother Bliss.

"I know the true meaning of bliss," he said.

A tearful Reba McEntyre received a standing ovation when she was chosen top female vocalist.

"This is for me and mama," she said, adding that her career was the dream of her mother, who was in the audience.

The only double winner was Anne Murray, who won single of the year and album of the year for "A Little Good News." They were her first CMA awards after 14 years of trying. "I'd have been more than happy and satisfied with just one; this is just wonderful," she said.

Instrumentalist-songwriter Floyd Tillman, 69, best known for his 1949 song "Slippin' Around," and the late country music publisher Ralph S. Peer were voted into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

"I love you so much it hurts," said Tillman.

Peer, who founded the Southern Music Publishing Co. and Peer International Corp., died in 1980 at age 67.

Atkins was voted top instrumentalist for the fourth year in a row and the seventh time overall. "I've got to be the luckiest guy in the world, I guess," he said.

Willie Nelson and Julio Iglesias were voted vocal duo of the year. The Statlers won vocal group of the year for the ninth time, ending Alabama's three-year hold on the award, and the Ricky Skaggs Band was voted instrumental group of the year for the second consecutive year.

The Judds, a mother-daughter team, won the Horizon Award for career development by an individual or act that has never previously won a CMA award.

Jeff Silbar and Larry Henley won the songwriting award for "Wind Beneath My Wings," recorded by Gary Morris.

The live show on CBS, hosted by Kenny Rogers, also paid tribute to pioneer entertainer Ernest Tubb, who died of emphysema last month. Loretta Lynn, one of the many singers Tubb helped launch to stardom, sang his most famous song, "I'm Walkin' the Floor Over You."

Royal visit 'great fun' for Kentuckians

By ANNE S. CROWLEY

Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Security headhaches and telephone calls aside, it can be "great fun" — and certainly memorable — to have a member of the royal family as a house guest, according to Kentuckians who have hosted Queen Elizabeth II's relatives.

While former hosts say the queen and her family tend to be perfect guests and easy to please, their stays do provide some colorful anecdotes.

There was Capt. Mark Phillips, the queen's son-in-law, who tossed another guest's hat inside a tent during a fancy party last spring and then shinnied up a tent post to retrieve it.

And Princess Margaret, whose trip to the Kentucky Derby prompted vague threats and an army of more than 100 extra security people.

And Prince Philip, who once shunned an equine competition for a televised Muhammad Ali boxing match and a cold beer.

The latest royal visit has turned things topsy-turvy for William S. Farish III and his wife Sarah, who put up with Secret Service searches for weeks before the queen arrived Sunday for a horsewoman's holiday in the bluegrass country.

For Queen Elizabeth II, it's a horsewoman's holiday

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Queen Elizabeth II got right down to business on her horsewoman's holiday in the Kentucky bluegrass, appraising a parade of stallions at one of the dozens of thoroughbred breeding farms that dot the region.

And though her visits to gently rolling, neatly fenced stud farms this week are private, the queen scheduled a 10-minute photo session today during an inspection of mares at Lane's End Farm, the 1,400-acre spread of her hosts, William S. Farish III and his wife, Sarah.

The queen was to watch the mares in a walking ring, said

Charles V. Anson, a British Embassy spokesman. "The mares will be led from the yearling barn around the ring and back again," he said Monday.

The queen has three horse farms in Britain, owns 23 broodmares and has 25 horses in training and racing under the royal silks. She planned to spend most of her first visit to Kentucky, 5 1/2 days that began Sunday afternoon, examining stallions for possible breeding to her broodmares, according to Lord Henry Porchester, her racing manager.

"She is very much enjoying her time here," her press secretary, Michael Shea, said Monday. "I don't think she can help but be impressed by the scenery she saw."

Race Course, Blue Grass Airport and nearly a dozen other thoroughbred farms on the queen's itinerary. An expert owner who has loved horses since she was a toddler, Elizabeth is sizing up 50 to 60 stallions as possible mates for her 23 broodmares.

"We aren't supposed to talk about it," a receptionist at Walmac Farm, which the queen toured Monday, said of the elaborate security preparations. She also refused to give her name.

When the Farishes began receiving dozens of phone calls from an inquisitive press, they hired a public relations firm. Instead of answering the calls, they issued a press release.

Since most aspects of a royal visit are casual and somewhat routine, the lighter moments stand out long after the regal entourage has departed.

Marylou Whitney, wife of eminent horseman Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, found that Phillips, husband of Princess Anne, wasn't all pomp and ceremony last May.

During a party held in conjunction with the Rolex International Three-Day Event, Phillips tossed a guest's hat around. When it became lodged in the eaves of the party tent, he shinnied up a pole and knocked it loose with a woman's parasol.

"You go to some good ones and some bad ones," Phillips said of the evening.

Mrs. Whitney said her guest "required little in service" and especially enjoyed the picnic lunches prepared by the Whitneys' kitchen staff. "When Mark comes, it's like having our children back," she said. "He's the most marvelous house guest in the world."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Pregnant diabetics need care

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was pleased to read in your column that there has been a lot of progress made in the ability of women with diabetes to give birth to healthy children. I would like to know what there is about diabetes that increases the possibility that a baby may have a birth defect, and how soon after a woman with diabetes becomes pregnant that she should see a doctor. — Mrs. D.A., Lincoln, Neb.

Dear Mrs. A.: In response to your first question it is unclear why maternal diabetes or a high blood sugar poses a risk of birth defects.

As for your second question, a diabetic woman who is planning a pregnancy should see her physician before she conceives. In one study of 128 women with diabetes in whom glucose control was established before they became pregnant, only one had a malformed fetus. This is one too many, but the rate of 0.8 percent is even lower than that often seen among women in the general population.

For these women, seeing a physician prior to becoming pregnant is one of the most rewarding forms of preventive medicine.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you explain why I would have to have a chest X-ray when I go into a hospital for a hernia operation? I fall to see any connection between the two. — Karl, Dobbs Ferry, N.Y.

Dear Karl: It has been standard practice for many years to obtain a chest X-ray prior to surgery, but some physicians are questioning the practice. Researchers from the University of California, Irvine, have reported the results of a study that show that many of these X-rays are of no value. Eliminating them would not have increased the risk to the patient. Moreover, even when some patients had abnormal X-rays, the findings did not influence the treatment.

This does not mean that such X-rays are never important. A history of cardiac disease or cancer, for example, or even advanced age, warrants obtaining a chest X-ray before a patient undergoes surgery.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son has an allergy and lately he seems to have trouble sleeping at night. But during the day he seems to be sleepy and irritable. Can all these things be related? — Mrs. C.Y., Memphis, Tenn.

Dear Mrs. Y.: A child who has a nasal allergy may indeed have a sleep disorder, and this in turn might very well lead to behavior problems. Conversely, treatment of the allergy may alleviate the sleep disorder and thereby resolve the child's behavior difficulties.

I suggest you start by having your son seen by your pediatrician or family physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother has some knee condition that I am not sure what it is. He says that the doctor he went to told him that he would recommend knee replacement if my brother was older. I would think that it would be better to perform an operation on a person when he is younger, not older. Did my brother misunderstand what the doctor told him? — Max, Wilkes-Barre, Penna.

Dear Max: Total knee replacement has an estimated life of from 10 to 15 years. If the procedure has to be repeated, the result generally is not as successful as it was the time before. Therefore, it is considered preferable for the operation not to be performed in patients under 55 years of age.

Patients who do have the operation can anticipate relief from pain in normal motion.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My aunt phoned me the other day to tell me that a doctor examined my uncle (her husband) and said that he thinks my uncle has Alzheimer's Disease. What is this business of "thinks"? Doesn't a person either have a disease or not have a disease? — Ms. N.R., N.Y.

Dear Ms. R.: The difficulty in diagnosing Alzheimer's Disease is that there is no specific test for it; instead, the diagnosis is established by excluding other possible causes of the patient's symptoms. For example, the symptoms may reflect a serious depression or be the result of a drug reaction. If they are alleviated when the depression or the drug reaction is resolved, the diagnosis is not Alzheimer's Disease.

Apparently the physician is not completely satisfied that he has excluded all the other possible causes of the symptoms shown by your uncle.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can understand when two people take medicine for the same condition that one may need more than another. For example, the person who weighs more may need a bigger dose. But when two people who have acne are given medicine that is not to be swallowed but put on the skin, why would the dose have to be different in cases like this? — Deanna, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Dear Deanna: Some people are more sensitive than others to topically applied drugs. For example, light-complexioned, red-headed individuals often have skin that is very sensitive to the kind of drugs used in the treatment of acne, and a reduced dose may therefore be indicated.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What does frequency have to do with hearing loss? — Ms. C.O. Kalamazoo, Mich.

Dear Ms. C.O.: Frequency is measured in cycles per second, or Hertz (Hz). Young children, who generally have the best hearing, can often distinguish sounds from about 20 Hz, such as the lowest note on a large pipe organ, to 20,000 Hz, such as a high, shrill dog whistle that many people would be unable to hear at all. Human speech, which ranges from 300 to 4,000 Hz, sounds louder to most people than noises at very high or very low frequencies. When hearing impairment begins, the high frequencies are often lost first, which is why people with hearing loss often have difficulty hearing high-pitched voices of women and children. Loss of high frequency hearing also can cause distortion of sound in the speech range. Someone whose hearing is impaired may confuse certain consonants, so that many words sound garbled. This is especially true of words that start with S, F, SH, CH, H or a soft C, because the sound of these consonants is in a much higher frequency range than vowels and other consonants.

Dear Dr. Solomon: At my last physical examination my doctor told me that I have a high level of uric acid in my blood and this may be a sign of gout, but that there is nothing that I have to do about it. I'm not a hypochondriac but I don't like to do nothing when I should be doing something. I would welcome your advice. — Dexter, Peoria, Ill.

Dear Dexter: Some patients with hyperuricemia, the condition you describe, do require treatment, but this is not true for everyone. Dr. Mitchell D. Forman, of the State University of New York Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn, explains that most of these patients do not have any symptoms and will not develop any serious medical problems. In addition, most of the problems that might develop are easily treatable, so there is no urgency to start the patient on a course of treatment.

Another factor to be considered is the possibility of a harmful drug reaction if treatment is begun. As I have noted a number of times, all medications have the potential for adverse side effects; therefore, if a patient can get along without medication, so much the better.

For Valerie, Suitland, Md.: Most patients who have infectious mononucleosis recover within two to three weeks. Even patients who develop complications during the course of the illness generally achieve full recovery.

For Mrs. G.O., Toledo, Ohio: Many of the symptoms that are common with a normal pregnancy are similar to those that are associated with hyperthyroidism. It may therefore be difficult to make a diagnosis of hyperthyroidism during pregnancy.
