COTTON GOES UP $3.00 BALE WHEN FORECAST MADE

Estimated Cotton Production Set At 11,121,000 Bales

Cotton soared $3.00 a bale Tuesday with Government's estimate of 11,121,000 bales as the 1936 cotton.

Staging a major upset in cotton crop expectations, the government figure of 11,121,000 bales brought heavy buying into the new Orleans market.

The estimated production of 11,121,000 bales, was based on Sept. 1 conditions compared with 12,481,000 bales indicated a month ago, and 10,367,130 bales produced last year.

The census bureau simultaneously announced that ginnings from this year's crop prior to September 1 totaled 1,373,868 running bales, compared with 1,135,090 for 1935 and 1,402,835 for 1934.

The condition of the crop on September 1 was 59.1 per cent of normal, compared with 72.3 per cent a month ago, 64.5 on Sept. 1 last year, and 57.7 the 1923-32 Sept. 1 average.

The indicated yield of lint is 179.2 pounds per acre, compared with 186.3 for last year, and 169.9, the 1923-32 average.

The indicated abandonment of acreage after July 1 is 2.9 per cent of the 30,621,000 acres in cultivation on that date, leaving 29,720,000 acres for harvest.

Eight thousand cans of farm produce have been canned during the three weeks the County cannery has been operating here, according to Mrs. Viola Honea in charge.

During the first three days of last week, which was unusually good, 1231 cans were filled. Not much was canned the last three days due to the unsettled weather, and muddy roads after the rain.

The Cannery equipment includes; 3 Master Retorts Cookers No. 2, which hold 4 dozen No. 2 cans each; 3 small cookers holding 16 cans each; 2-35 gallon kettles for cooking corn; 3 automatic sealers; 8 big aluminum kettles; gas stove; and at the present time there are 11,400 empty cans on hand.

LOCAL SCHOOLS GAIN 48 PUPILS OVER LAST YEAR

Vocational Departments Very Popular; 135 Girls Registered

As announced by Supt. A. B. Sanders the total enrollment this term at the Littlefield school reached 1261, as compared with 1213 for last year, indicating a gain of 48 pupils in the entire school system, which does not take into consideration the colored school, with an enrollment of about 40, the same as last year.

The enrollment in the Grammar School was 515, as compared with 474 last year. Three Hundred and eighty-one pupils entered high school, as compared with 354 last year. In the Primary Department 365 pupils entered this term, as against 385 last year.

Mr. Sanders stated that the Vocational Department was very popular this year, in that there are 135 girls already registered, and the school Board are allowing all who wish to take this course to do so this year, where as formerly only a limited number have been permitted to take the Home Economics Course. This large class is necessitating the adding of an assistant home economics teacher, who will be elected as soon as an applicant is secured capable of filling the position. Mrs. Audie Collins, a member of the School Faculty, is assisting Mrs. Nina Young with this work until a suitable teacher is secured.

Sixty pupils have enrolled in the Vocational Agricultural Department, which is an increase over the past three years.

One hundred pupils enrolled in the Commercial Department, according to Mr. Sanders, who said that there were four periods of typing, and that all were filled. Cecil Ramsey is Commercial teacher.

The Woodworking classes are all practically filled. Oran Dennis is instructor in this branch.

Instruction in Band music is being given this year, with 25 pupils reporting. Morgan Layfield is the instructor.

FRIST INSTALMENT

"Guess Dulcie's got another of her spells!" exclaimed Rod O'Rourke, turning with smiling eyes to the girl at his side as the car came to a sudden stop. "Well, I'll soon fix her," he added. Then he pulled his long legs from beneath the wheel and swung himself over the battered door.

"It's a wonder you wouldn't get a new car," Maris Trevor replied, an unexpected edge in her tones. "This old thing's always falling to pieces."

That red-haired giant, Rod, opened the hood of the car, and then let it fall as he took a step toward the girl. "You know why I'm not buying any new car, Maris?" There was a hurt look in his esau-bule eyes. "You used to like to help me fix Dulcie."

"Oh, well, a girl gets tired doing that all the time," Maris replied, ignoring the pleading look in his eyes, she took out her compact. Calmly, she powdered her small, straight nose, and with her lipstick, accentuated the lovely outline of her soft lips.

"What's come over you, sweet-heart?" asked Rod. "Don't you love me any more?" And he imprisoned her soft hands in his.

"Oh, don't Rod, your hands are dirty!" She quickly pulled hers away.

Rod laughed. "There's only a littlefield grease on them. You didn't use to mind a thing like that, nor if you got your own hands black. I can't understand you, Maris darling."

The girl laughed. "You should," she answered, and, as her glance met his, the tenderness in his face relaxed. But when she added, "Hurry up and fix the old bus," a troubled look came into Rod's eyes once more.

He bent over the engine and tinkered with spark plugs and feed line. At this point, a look of annoyance spread over Maris' fair face while she took a tiny eyebrow pencil and touched up her straight brows so that their darkness accentuated the golden sheen of her wavy hair. Then, with moistened finger tips, she curled the long, dark lashes that fringed her big, brown eyes.

Adjusting the tie of her smart print suit, she slipped her compact into her handbag and closed it with a sharp snap. Then her eyes rested on Rod. Beads of perspiration dotted his cheeks, while a black streak furrowed his forehead where his greasy fingers had pushed back the lock of curly red hair that persisted in falling across it.

A frown of annoyance darkened the girl's face. Why did Rod insist on hanging onto the old car? He could afford a new one if only he weren't so crazy about his radio invention, which cost him so much.

At first it had been fun going with him and fixing Dulcie when she became balky. It gave them a chance to stop, and then Rod would take Maris in his arms, kiss her tenderly, and tell her of his love.

The girl's eyes softened as she watched Rod. She loved him. She'd loved him from the very first day she had met him. In spite of his red hair, or perhaps because of it, he was a handsome young man. He was tall and lean, with flashing sea-blue eyes and tanned cheeks. He held himself like a Viking of old, she thought.

In the rapturous days that followed their first meeting, Maris told him a thousand times she didn't care if he hadn't much money. He had

How long did he expect her to wait? Would he never realize that a new car now was worth more to her than the possibility of financial independence in the future?

Rod looked at her. Then as they neared Van Cortlandt Park and

"Don't you feel good, honey?" he asked, slipping his arm around her ideas, and as a radio engineer he would surely cash in on them presently. But lately that wonderful future had seemed so far away, and now as her eyes rested on Rod she saw him no longer with the adoration she had lavished on him at first, but rather with a critical eye.

"There," Rod exclaimed, wiping his hands on a bit waste, "guess Dulcie will make it all right." Sliding his long legs over the side of the car, he seated himself once more beside Maris.

"I hope so," she remarked ungraciously.

"Of course she will," insisted Rod, with a forced note of gaiety in his voice. Just then, after a few coughings and sputterings, the little car started to speed along the road as though she were seeing out to win the Derby.

But to all Rod's efforts to get Maris to talk, the girl was strangely silent, or gave him quite curt answers. This was no unlike her usual gray banter, that at last he slowed up.

"Don't you feel good, honey?" he asked, slipping his arm about her. But Maris shook herself free.

"You'll crush my dress, Rod. Of course I'm all right, but I wish to goodness you'd a different car." She tried to laugh lightly as she finished, but there a note of annoyance in her voice.

"Is that what's bothering you?"

"Well, isn't that plenty? Cars are surely cheap enough," she declared though deep in her heart she knew she wasn't being fair. Rod was saving every penny so he could perfect the device on which he was working—a gadget which he was sure would bring him independence.

There was a hint of reproach in his voice, when he finally spoke. "I thought you understood, Maris. Just as soon as I manage to get the gadget finished—"

"You've been saying that for a long, time Rod," she interrupted petulantly deny it, he said. "All right. Now I understand," and without another word, hurried to the curb.

"Aren't you coming in?" asked Maris.

Rod laughed. "Not where I'm not wanted," he said, his blue eyes flashing.

"Oh, well, if that's how you feel," answered Maris, suddenly angry.

She entered the house then and stepped into the elevator. Her cheeks were flaming. Evidently Rod didn't love her very much if he could let her go like that. Well, she would show him. She had her pride. Maybe it was a good thing after all. He'd been so sure of her.

Swiftly in her mind rose the picture of another man—dark-eyed, debonnaire, with swell clothes, a Pierce-Arrow roadster, oodles of money, everything a girl would like. His reputation—well, it wasn't just like Rod's. . . . But then, this man moved in a different strata of society.

Her thoughts were swiftly ended. The door of their apartment had opened and Patsy stood there.

"Isn't Rod coming up? I've made the loviest dinner for him," Patsy announced. A spot of chocolate icing ornamented her flushed cheeks, while the heat from the kitchen had twisted her blue black into tiny cork-screw curls about her heart-shaped face.

"No," answered Maris shortly, brushing past her.

"You've had a scrap?" she asked. "Oh, honey, didn't I warn you not to rouse his Irish? He's one of us and you must handle him with kid gloves. I'm going down to get him," and, suiting her action to her words, she darted down the hall.

"He'll be gone by now."

"Not if Dulcie's cutting up her usual capers."

"She's been cutting up all right," answered Maris, "but she's going like the Royal Scot now. I guess Never mind Rod." The girl pulled off her soft hat and crossed the threshold.

"He can't be far away. I'll bring him back with me," called Patsy as she hastily pressed the elevator bell again.

Five minutes later she re-entered the apartment. "Well, I guess Rod's Irish is up all right. Not a sign of him anywhere. What did you do to him?" she asked her friend as she stood for a moment in the doorway.

"Didn't do a thing to him. But what's the use of talking?" Maris walked toward her dressing table while Patsy returned to the kitchen.

As she stood for a moment before the mirror, a tiny frown creased her forehead. Smoothing it away, he smiled at her reflection in the mirror, then steeled her heart against thoughts of Rod. Picking up her comb, she quickly pulled it through her fair wavy hair and set the soft curls with expert fingers.

Pat would be likely to lecture her, but she'd stick to her point. Rod had no right to expect a pretty girl like her to be satisfied with an old car like his. There were lots of other young men who'd be only too glad to have the chance to date her.

Entering the tiny living room, she passed through the dining room. Then, opening the swinging door

SALES OF FORDS TOTAL 100,000 UNITS IN JULY

Dearborn, Mich., Aug.—25. For the fourth consecutive month, domestic sales of Ford V-8 cars and trucks totalled more than 100,000 units, it was reported today at the home offices of the Ford Motor Company. This continuation of high-volume sales into mid-season represents a surprising reversal of the trend in former years.

The demand for Ford V-8 units has been so well maintained into the late summer, it was explained, as to make necessary the abandonment of plans for a general vacation shutdown of the Rouge Plant during the current week.

The unusual volume of July business can be partly attributed to the announcement of new Ford V-8 passenger car interiors and the addition of de luxe equipment for Ford V-8 trucks, it was said.

Ford production in July in the United States and Canada totalled 115,137 units.

CHURCHES

METHODIST CHURCH
John Witt Hendrix, Pastor

Sunday, Sept. 13, next sabbath day, is our Fall Opening. School is in session, our people are back from vacation, which some have taken at home, back from farms and ranches. Back to town and home has been the public move of late. This period is set apart as a sort of home coming! In fact, the church has not pushed its claim on public attention very much for the last few weeks inasmuch as August is vacation month. Crops are laid by, not very much trade in town, every one is waiting for harvest time. Remember Fall Opening Sunday! Church school at 9:45 a. m. Fall and winter reorganization is now in process. Get your name on the list. All new pupils are registered for the winter term Sunday. The choir is in process of organization for service in the periods of public worship. If you sing, if you render your service to the Kingdom of God in that way, the register is open for you.

Morning Worship—11 a. m. The choir has been faithful indeed and will appear with it usual select music. The pastor will speak on the subject, "Social Stabilizers". What has held and what will hold society is time of Storm? Let's discuss this question together.

Evening Worship—8 p. m. The Choral club, made up of young people, will furnish the music, and the pastor will speak, using as subject, "The Land Of Poco Tempo". (The Land Of Pretty Soon). You might find this service profitable. Many people do.

The Young People—7:30 p. m. The Leagues of the church being reorganized, and new ones organized. The League Council met in the parsonage on Monday and took in consideration the needs along this line.

BIG FALL OPENING SUNDAY!

MISSIONARY BAPTIST CHURCH

Until their own building is erected which is hoped to be ready for occupancy by December first, all preaching services of the Littlefield Missionary Baptist Church, of which Rev. Jno. Denning is pastor, will be held in the Presbyterian Church beginning next Sunday with both morning and evening services, and will continue each second and fourth Sunday of each month thereafter. All additional services beyond those above stated will be announced from week to week in this paper.

The sermon subjects for this coming Sunday are as follows: 11:00 A. M., "The Holy Spirit". This sermon will deal with the office and ministry of the Holy Spirit in the Church and believer in this present day. 8:00 p. m., "Samson and Delilah". A message of real instruction and interest to everyone. The entire is cordially invited to all services.

Pray and Praise services will be held each Wednesday night at eight o'clock.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH
Rev. Willis J. Ray, Pastor

The theme for the sermon at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday will be "For Jesus Sake". The song service has been inspiring and uplifting and Happy Jordan is leading the song in a fine way. You will feel better if you take time to worship God every Lord's day. Remember that our morning worship starts at 9:45 and lets out promptly at 12 o'clock. The Pastor is very anxious that every child remain for the preaching service and mothers are asked to come and remain with their children. Plans will soon be arranged so that children too small to remain in the church service will be cared for in the nursery during preaching service.

We had 241 present in time to be counted last Sunday and feel confident that the attendance will reach the 300 mark coming Sunday. It is a rebuke to Christianity when we check up and see the small percent of people in Littlefield that attend church services. Less than 1,000 of our 4,000 citizens attended any church service last Sunday. Have you considered seriously the way you are treating God when you do not keep His day holy and worship him. The Lord was gracious in adding seven to the church family last Sunday and the church was happy indeed to receive them.

Baptismal services will be observed at the close of the preaching hour this coming Sunday evening. Please remember that B. T. U. starts at 7:30 and preaching service at 8:30. A full choir rendered a splendid musical program last Sunday evening.

The Pastor will preach Sunday evening on the subject, "Crucified with Christ."

THE SALVATION ARMY
Sunday School 10:00 o'clock.
Morning service 11:00 o'clock.
Afternoon service 3:30 o'clock.
Night service 8:00 o'clock.
Conducted by Capt. E. B. Trumill.

TEXAS GIRL—RADIO STAR

ANN ELSTNER'S RISE TO FAME AS ACTRESS

NEW YORK CITY—From the Rio Grande Valley comes a Texas girl, Ann Elstner, now one of New York's glamorous ladies of the radio.

It's a far cry from the peaceful valley folk to the microphone and a nation-wide audience but Ann has made the leap from the rolling farmland of the biggest state in the Union to one of the biggest jobs in the world of entertainment.

Ann has probably played a greater variety of parts on the air than any other actress in the business and in September added to her repertoire the role of "Martha", leading lady in "Trouble House", written by Elaine Sterne Carington which will be a dramatic serial feature in the new "Heinz Magazine of the Air" program "published" by the makers of 57 Varieties over Columbia Broadcasting System.

The "Magazine" continued story of "Trouble House" will be heard three times a week, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 10 A. M. Miss Elstner will portray the "ups and downs", the joys and sorrows within the farm-house of Martha Booth, a lovable, sacrificing character which makes her the ideal star for troubled humanity. When Miss Elstner first came to New York she was cast in roles which utilized her native dialect, then Broadway discovered that she was capable in other parts and she became a popular stage "mother", "sister", "daughter and little girl."

Miss Elstner was selected for her new role because of her deep understanding and knowledge of such a character and her ability to interpret heart-throbs over the air. Texas farm life is in a large measure responsible for Miss Elstner's success in this type of characterization, as well as hill-billy roles for which she has gained a wide reputation both on the stage and radio.

"I love farm life," the pretty actress said, "and I'm glad my dad taught me how to milk cows and do all the funny chores around a barnyard."

Although Miss Elstner was born in Louisiana and has lived in southern Maryland she likes to claim Texas as her home because of early girlhood associations.

Miss Elstner is tall and slender; she is extremely versatile in adapting herself to types, such as appearing in all the glamour of a movie star, she can be as convincing in a sun-bonnet or with an old lady's shawl wrapped about her shoulders. She has even played male roles at a convent school including Hamlet and The Dauphin in Joan of Arc. She lives in the city because of her work but much prefers the country where she can ride, hike and swim. Miss Elstner is a crack shot with the rifle, poker is one of her favorite relaxations and if you take her out to dinner she'll probably order diamond back terrapin or canvasback duck. She loves "hot dogs" and when it comes to a new hat or dress—well, it "sets her up" better than a week's rest. She abhors parsnips and a poodle is the only kind of a dog she won't stop to pet.

As for superstitions Miss Elstner has the theatrical share; she would like to throw books at whistlers and people who play hats on beds and shoes on chairs.

"Heinz Magazine of the Air" is one of the major radio programs and an outstanding addition to the fall and winter broadcasting season. The program will also present Leith Stevens' orchestra, baritone Reed Kennedy and a galaxy of celebrated guests including Grand Duchess Marie, Dorothea Brande, author of "Wake Up and Live", Angelo Patri, famous child authority, Michael Strange, actress and playwright and a host of others.

Final Report Of Grand Jury Filed

The final report of the Grand Jury was filed Friday last as follows:

TO THE HON. C. D. RUSSELL, JUDGE OF SAID COURT.

Comes now your Grand Jury duly empaneled and sworn for said term of court and respectfully submits this its final report:

We have been in session a total of seven days; we have through investigation made and true presentment made of each case warranting presentment as the same have been brought to our attention.

We have returned a total of nine felony and five misdemeanors indictments.

We wish to thank the Court for his cooperation, the District and County Attorneys, the Sheriff and his department and the Bailiffs for their efficient services.

We believe that the increase in drunken driving is one of the serious, even alarming, conditions of our times. This menace is resulting in the death or serious injury of many innocent law abiding citizens. To the end that this plain violation of the law may be met firmly, we request that our citizens cooperate with our law enforcement officers and report cases of such character promptly.

Having finished our labors we respectfully submit that we be finally discharged.

Respectfully submitted
C. T. MASON
Foreman.

EUROPE, A LESSON

The greatest tragedy which could befall America would be the development in this country of such national class and racial hatreds as have converted Europe into an armed camp and set the people of Spain to killing each other in a merciless and bloody civil war.

America is not without its preachers of hate. Lately there have been public utterances by men whose position and responsibility should have restrained their tongues, calculated to inflame the minds of the thoughtless to hatred of groups of their fellow-citizens. To stir up hatred against those who differ in their religious creeds, their political beliefs or in their place is to start America on the road to civil strife which might well lead us as, it has led Europe, into warfare.

The real danger to American liberties is not from without but from within. The preachers of hatred are more dangerous enemies of the Republic than is any foreign nation. It has been this country's greatest source of pride that no citizen belongs to any fixed class. Every man can, as millions have done, raise himself from the lowliest state of life to the highest. Nobody will try to stop him. Rather, if he has the ability to make something better of himself he will find encouragement and helping hands all along his upward climb.

To teach that employers are the enemies of their employees is vicious and un-American. It is not true, as every intelligent person knows. To teach that the followers of any particular religion are enemies of those whose beliefs are different, is equally vicious and un-American. Our nation was founded on tolerance, on freedom of thought and of religious belief. To attempt to destroy that tolerance and substitute hatred for it is to blast at the foundations of the Republic.

There is no power, and there should be no power except public opinion, to prevent any American from saying whatever he believes to be true. But good citizens should weigh the possible consequences of their utterances, and refrain from arousing needless and blind antagonisms between group and group.

Laxative Combination

FOLKS KNOW IS TRUSTWORTHY

The confidence thousands of parents have in good, old reliable, powdered Theodor's Black-Draught has prompted them to get the new Syrup of Black-Draught for their children. The grown folks stick to the powdered Black-Draught; the youngsters probably will prefer it when they outgrow their childish love of sweets—Mrs. C. W. Adams, of Murray, Ky., writes: "I have used Theodor's Black-Draught (powder) about thirteen years, taking it for biliousness. Black-Draught acts well and I am always pleased with the results. I wanted a good, reliable laxative for my children. I have found Syrup of Black-Draught to be just that."

The fun began with the rolling of each one down a sand hill. All the new teachers were thoroughly initiated in this way.

We returned home at about 10:00 a sandy but happy group.

into the kitchen, she asked, "Anything I can do to help you?"
"Put the water in the glasses and get the butter; then we're all set."
"Smells awfully good!" Maris exclaimed. "What are we having?"
"Roast duck and all the fixings. It's a shame there's only the two of us after all my work."
"Well, what about the boy friend? Why isn't Jimmy here?"
"Oh, some trouble in the Bronx and of course he was roped into it. That's the worst of being connected with a telephone company's trouble department."
But surely he won't be there all night. Let's wait for him.
"No use doing that. He won't be through for hours. Besides, I want to get back to the hotel early because Mame wants to go to a dance tonight."

"Seems to me you and Jimmy are always doing something for somebody else. Why don't you ever think of yourself, Pat?" asked Maris as she got the butter and water from the ice box.
Pat smiled. "Well, isn't that what we're here for?" she answered gaily, and looking at her, Maris realized why she had made such a success of her job as telephone operator at the Vanguard Hotel. The management was crazy about her, and she could have had it lots easier, but she was a heavier for work.

Pat was a slight girl, with laughing hazel eyes and masses of bubble-black hair that curled naturally about her shell-like ears and smooth forehead. She was engaged to Jimmy Doyle, and Maris had a sneaking idea they were waiting to be married after they knew what she, Maris, was going to do.
"It's too bad Dad missed this," said Pat. "I really got the duck because he said he was hungry for one."

"Oh, he'll get over that, and lots of other things!" Maris spoke lightly.

But she could not deceive Patsy, who exclaimed, "Look here, Maris, I know it's none of my business, but since you've been working at Fayson's you've been different. Come on, spill the beans!"

"There aren't any to be spilled."
"Sure you're not interested in some of their smart salesmen?"
Maris smiled a Mona Lisa smile, and she crumpled a roll without answering. Then she glanced up brightly. "Oh, no!" was all she remarked.

"Seems to me you've been all excited since you told me young Fayson had started to work for his dad and was going to revolutionize the piece goods business."

"Well, Stanley Fayson's certainly some bright boy," conceded Maris. "That's all right, but take it from me, a fellow like that isn't going to waste his time on a stenographer—not that I'm looking down on your job—but, Maris, why do you waste your time thinking about him?" she asked.

SPADE BASKETBALL GIRLS ENJOY TEA

On Wednesday, August 26, the Spade Basketball Girls gathered in the gymnasium at eight-thirty o'clock to enjoy a tea. The affair, sponsored by Miss Margaret Roebuck the girls' coach, was quite a success, and it is being counted as an omen of good luck for the entire year.

Interesting game contests were directed by Miss Roebuck, assisted by Miss Lois Butler. All games were centered around a motif of basketball. It appeared that the new coach was trying to find out if the girls could use their heads as well as their hands.

There is a report that Martha Nell Bentley will be the center of the basketball attraction this year as she pinned her name nearer the center of a basketball than did any of the other girls. Lena Lee Powell proved to be a girl who knows her advertising best, and Loveta Huckabee knows her songs best. Mrs. Jack D. Wester and Miss Sallie Jane Clay outwitted the rest of the group when it came to making the greatest number of words out of the word basketball.

Tea and cakes were served to the following guests: Misses Rusk Clay, Martin, Jones, Roebuck, Butler, and Montgomery, and Mrs. Jack D. Wester, and the Basketball squad—Lucile Nabers, Loveta Huckabee, Lena Belle Adams, Mary Vesta Esta Lee Jackson, Mildred Greer, Kathryn Darby, Frankie Lou Teague, Helen Brown, Martha Nell Bentley, Lena Lee Powell, and Ozella Tucker.

There were forty-four girls present for membership in the Club. The dates set for meeting were Tuesdays and Fridays of each week at the student-activity period. The Balladettes are getting all set for a series of snappy programs. They have not as yet accepted any invitations for away-from-home programs and radio broadcasts, but they have plans.

SPADE P. T. A. GETS UNDERWAY

The Spade Parent-Teacher Association met Tuesday, August 25, in the school auditorium with 35 members present.

New business included the election of a vice-president, Mrs. M. C. Bierman's resignation having left a vacancy in that office. Mrs. Jack D. Wester was chosen to fill the vacancy.

The program consisted of a piano solo by Miss Dorothy Faye Rusk and a short talk by Supt. Jack D. Wester. The accomplishments of the Association were recalled and gratitude for the excellent co-operation was expressed, the plans for the incoming year were discussed. After the program games, directed by Mrs. Wester, were enjoyed.

The Parent-Teacher Association voted to act "Fairy Godmother" to the new Home Economics Department. The organization seems to have a delightfully busy year ahead.

SPADE TEACHERS HAVE FIRST SOCIAL

Tuesday evening, September 1, marked the beginning of the Spade faculty's social year, as a group, except for a watermelon feast given the teachers by the superintendent just after their first faculty meeting, August 15.

The affair began with one of those Treasure Hunts in which a person takes his life in his throat dashes from place to place completely possessed by the demon, speed, as he follows the phantom directions that lead eventually to the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow. Then all had arrived at the Sand hills where a fire was "going big" and waited more or less — while spring chickens were placed upon an improvised grill and slowly barbecued to a rich brown. Some one thought of the watermelons brought for the desert, and there was a break in the waiting.

After feasting on chicken and more chicken the group gave themselves over to the spell of a perfect night and a glorious moon as they strolled over sand ridge and wind-swept dell "just like they used to do". The "enamored moon" looked on while some of the less aged preformed various socials planned for the school year. ly made subject to suggestions from time to time from the spectators. Came the trip home under a "mellowing moon" and all was quiet.

This was the first in a series of social planned for the school year. There will be at least one such event for each school month, the committee consists of Dorothy Faye Rusk, "Jack" Jackson, and Sallie Clay.

Besides the faculty members, who were present one hundred per cent, guests were Mrs. Otis Elder, Miss Jewell Love, and Mrs. D. Wester and son. Out of community guests were Mr. and Mrs. Art Mueller, Littlefield, Miss Patti Hopping and Miss Sallie Rean of Lubbock.
