Bodies Go Back To Missouri; Mild Mannered Carpenter Is Undoing Of Pair Charged In Slaying Of Six

(By The Associated Press)

HOUSTON, Jan. 5.—Two Missouri murderers, sought all over the southwest and finally cornered today in a little cottage where they sought to hide, shot each other, or themselves, to death while a posse waited outside for them to come forth and surrender.

Harry and Jennings Young, brothers, members of a band which slew six peace officers near Springfield, Mo., last Saturday, heard the hammering of officers on the door of the cottage, and, while the fumes from tear bombs were gathering about their heads, one of them shouted above the din:

"We are dead; come on and get us."

Shots Are Heard

The watchers heard shots within the cottage—three for each brother. They burst in, as soon as they got gas masks for protection from the fumes, and found Jennings dead. Harry lay wounded and died about an hour later.

The coroner wrote it off as a double murder; some of the police believed it was a double suicide.

The green little cottage was chipped with bullets the officer had fired, but it was believed none of them had struck the brothers, as they stood to fire their last shots, at

Texas Governor Is Heard As Witness In Defense Of His Action In Declaring Martial Law In Oil Area

(By The Associated Press)

HOUSTON, Jan. 5.—Governor R. S. Sterling took the witness stand in federal court this afternoon and defended his action in proclaiming martial law in East Texas.

When the governor had retired from the stand and both sides had formally closed their cases, Joe Bailey, jr., of Dallas, attorney for E. Constantin and J. D. Wrather, who are attacking in an injunction suit the martial law enforcement of proration, began the initial argument in the case.

Mr. Bailey asserted that the governor does not have the power under the constitution to exalt military law over civil law; does not have the power, in fact, to proclaim martial law. "He may call out the troops but he cannot use them to supersede civil law," the attorney declared. "Only the legislature has that power."

Widow's Death Delays Funeral

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. — The night before Christmas Tom Soaper was decorating a tree at his home. The window was open. He caught cold. Pneumonia set in. Last Saturday he died.

Eileen Soaper, bride and widow within nine weeks, sat in the kitchen of her home yesterday dressed in black. She had donned her hat and veil. In four hours she must go to her husband's funeral. At the last moment the funeral plans were hurriedly cancelled. A double funeral today was arranged instead.

"I can not go on without Tom," she wrote. They found her body, her mourning veil in a shroud, in the gas-filled kitchen.

Stern Warning Is Sounded By Party's Chief

Raskob States Disintegration Threatens Democrats Unless Wets And Drys Can Discover A United Approach

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—A stern warning that disintegration threatens the Democratic party unless its wets and drys can find some common, united approach to the prohibition problem was issued tonight by John J. Raskob.

Making his annual report as chairman of the party's national committee he urged resubmission of the liquor question to the people, opposed a campaign plank taking an outright stand on either side of the dispute, and recommended his "home rule" plan to the consideration of next June's convention.

Prohibition Favored

In addition, he said his poll of contributors to the 1928 campaign chest showed 93 per cent of those replying to his questionnaire favored returning prohibition to the decision of the people, 80 per cent endorsed a popular vote on the home rule plan and 79 per cent wanted a referendum on repeal.

An appended statement on the results of the poll said that 77,500 questionnaires were sent out and 25,578 replies received.

Earlier, Raskob said upon his arrival from New York that the prohibition question "was bound" to come before the meeting of the Democratic national committee on Saturday.

Wants No Flareup

"I hope," he added, "that it will not cause any such flareup as it did last March. I didn't think it was going to cause a fight then."

Raskob's report will be laid before the national committee. The committee also will select a city for the national convention. Chicago, Kansas City, San Francisco and Atlantic City are under consideration.

Alabama Democrat Urging Use Of Federal Funds In Relief Of Unemployed; Red Cross Is To Take Over Wheat

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Driving mainly to get beneficial economic legislation into force, congress at the same time today accumulated data for guidance on such disputes as aid to the jobless, naval building and Muscle Shoals.

The house found work to do on the first routine appropriation bill alloting $125,000,000 to meet governmental bills. The senate had no urgent legislation ready and met but briefly, so the members were free for committee concentration on the administration program to loosen industries and agricultural credits.

Reach Agreement

Before long, the group with the $500,000,000 reconstruction corporation in custody reached agreement. Senator Watson, Republican leader feels there is a chance for senate passage tomorrow.

Displaced for the time, the bill for increased capitalization of land banks — already passed by the house—probably will follow the reconstruction agency bill in the senate. The house, meanwhile, will get the latter from the committee which today heard it endorsed anew by Eugene Meyer, governor of the federal reserve board. There was no discernible doubt that these two bills will be on the White House

Wet Democrat Wins Election

William N. Rogers Is Elected To Congress To Fill Office Made Vacant Through Death Of Fletcher Hale

(By The Associated Press)

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 5. — William N. Rogers, wet Democrat, today was elected to the congressional seat made vacant by the death of Representative Fletcher Hale, Republican of the first New Hampshire district, defeating former Governor John F. Bartlett, Republican, 27,453 to 24,505.

Rogers, the first Democrat to represent New Hampshire in congress in 10 years, also was the last Democrat to serve in the house. In 1922 he provided a political upset by being elected to the house of representatives in the normally Republican district.

Weather conditions played an important part in today's special election. Heavy snow and severe cold in the rural Republican strongholds kept many from the polls while Rogers piled up a commanding lead in the cities.

Third Crest Of Flood Surges Through Valley; Sufferers Send Out Distress Call To Red Cross Workers

(By The Associated Press)

GLENDORA, Miss., Jan. 5. — The third crest of the three week's flood along the Tallahatchie river surged through the valley today, burst one major levee, threatened to sweep aside others and brought added hardships to 10,000 sufferers.

Flood fighters at Glendora regarded the situation as out of control at nightfall and many expressed fear that destruction of principal dykes in Tallahatchie county is inevitable.

Concern Is Felt

They read with grave concern a flood warning from the weather bureau in Washington, predicting rise of from one-half a foot to a foot in the Tallahatchie and Yazoo rivers from rains of last night and today.

With water already running over the top, Cassidy's Bapou levee at the plantation of Aubrey Falls caved in today and sent a great stream of water through a 20-foot crevasse over fertile farm land between Swan Lake and Webb.

Distress Calls Heard

Distress calls began pouring in after renewed rainfall and red Cross workers quickened their tasks of rescuing marooned people and distributing supplies on hand.

Approximately 2,000 persons remained in their homes on Cassidy's Bayou plantations. They are surrounded by water and are in danger of famine and disease.

Strange Journey Along Turbulent River Abandoned

(By The Associated Press)

CAIRO, Ill., Jan. 5.—Having traveled more than half of the 2,100 miles down the Mississippi river in her flat-bottomed rowboat, Randi Lerohl, 48-year-old Superior, Wis., scrub-woman, abandoned her voyage today. The rest of the trip would be much more hazardous, advisors here said in persuading her. She probably will go on to New Orleans by steamer.

A wind and rain storm forced the Viking scrubwoman to remain in port today after she landed late yesterday and was the guest of the Rotary club at a dinner and spent the night at a hotel. She had planned to resume her journey this morning.

Tired of Voyage

Miss Lerohl, after being convinced the rest of the trip down the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico would be much more difficult than the part she has successfully traveled, admitted she was tired of the unexpected hardships of the voyage.

In order not to blight her ambition to traverse the river for nearly its entire length, a civic organization was attempting today to arrange for a steamboat to take Miss Lerohl as a passenger to New Orleans, and transport her 20-foot rowboat.

Cox's Army Of Unemployed Is Growing Large

Approximately 10,000 Men Are "Marching" To Washington; Priest Leading Way To Seek Federal Relief

(By The Associated Press)

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Jan. 5. — "Cox's army" of unemployed, "marching" to Washington to ask relief, is resting tonight on the old fair grounds.

One of the strangest caravans that has rolled through the mountains since the day of the pioneer and his conestoga wagon, wound round the hills into Huntingdon at dusk.

10,000 Are Included

Huntingdon police estimate there were "about 900 motor vehicles, carrying something like 10,000 men."

The caravan moved out of Pittsburgh early today, stopped at Johnstown and several other points along the route.

And the "marchers" increased in number as the odd procession of machines moved slowly eastward.

Pastor Is Leading

The Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of old St. Patrick's Catholic church of Pittsburgh, who says he is leading the march "to prove that it is not communistic" said tonight the project so far has been "a glorious success."

Father Cox said a large number of men were left behind in Pittsburgh because there were not sufficient motor cars to carry all who wanted to make the trip.

Lenz And Liggett Take Six Rubbers Tuesday Night To Cut Culbertson's Lead; Now But 14,175 Points Ahead

BY TOM O'NEIL
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. (AP)—Big cards enabled Sidney S. Lenz and Commander Winfield Liggett, jr., to take 2,660 points off the lead of Ely Culbertson's side in the great contract bridge match tonight.

With only 13 rubbers left in the 150-rubber series the plus of Culbertson became 14,175. He has won 73 rubbers to 64 for Lenz.

Of eight rubbers played Culbertson and a new partner for one session, Michael Gottlieb, won only two.

Lenz made no prediction about the outcome of the match, which will end Friday night, but he felt pleased that the plus of the rubbers played by Liggett, who succeeded Oswald Jacoby, as his partner, had increased to 2,665.

Lenz and Liggett might have acquired a larger but for timidity about slam bidding and psychic bids and non-vulerable sets by Gottlieb.

Traffic Over Plains Area Is Hampered

Weather Record For January Is Being Threatened

OVER-CAST skies and a forecast of approaching northwest winds threatened The South Plains and Panhandle with additional winter weather last night. Temperatures remained below the freezing mark all day Tuesday and late yesterday the reading was 27.

With only the first five marked off, the month already is the third wettest January in Lubbock county. Don L. Jones of the experiment farm said.

Record Threatened

Four and one-half inches of snow falling here Monday night melted to .45 of an inch of water and brought January precipitation to .8 inch. Normal January rainfall is .35 and maximum was .9 in 1920.

As heavy snows continued to melt on the South Plains and Panhandle traffic was blocked on dirt roads and travel on pavement north of Lubbock was hindered by drifted snow, the bus terminal reported. Northwest Texas' heaviest snowfall since the blizzard of March, 1931, yesterday covered the Panhandle with a thick blanket averaging from eight to ten inches. A 15- inch fall was recorded in Amarillo.

Road Open South

The bus terminal reported that the road to Big Spring was open and the highway to Sweetwater probably would be in travel condition again Wednesday. Bus schedules were cancelled between Plainview and Amarillo and banked snow between here and Plainview stalled many automobiles, it was said. Highway east to Spur was termed "very bad," and to Roswell, N. M., the rosds were passable. Heavy roads were reported between this city and Clovis, N. M.

The South Plains Pipe Line company reported the mercury climbed

Democrats Violated Law But Are To Escape Prosecution

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. (AP) — The Democratic national committee, United States Attorney George Z. Medalie said today, violated the corrupt practices act in filing its annual report for 1928 but will escape prosecution because the disclosure came too late.

The report was filed Jan. 3, 1929, by James W. Gerard, Democratic national committee treasurer, and it was not until Jan. 2, this year that Jacob J. Rosenblum, assistant U. S. attorney, confirmed reports of improper returns. The three-year statute of limitations, therefore, will prevent action, Medalie said.

Registered Bonds Destroyed; Recovery Wipes Out All But $15,000 Loss; $60,000 Was Given As Insurance

BY RODERICK GRANT
(Copyright, 1932, by The Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. (AP)—A notorious bank robber and gangster restored today virtually all the $2,870,000 loot of the greatest bank robbery in history.

Agents for the Lincoln National Bank and Trust company of Lincoln, Neb., were handed negotiable securities worth $583,000. Gus Winkler, the bandit absolved of any implication in the robbery, already has supplied proof of the destruction of registered bonds with a value of $2,217,000, making possible the issuance of new certificates.

Loot Given Official

The finale occurred late today in the offices of the secret six, where Sergt. Roy Steffens turned the recovered loot over to W. E. Barkley, a director of the bank, in the presence of County Attorney Max Towle of Lincoln.

Where they had been cached, from whom Winkler obtained them remains a secret.

Thus Winkler kept his pledge.

Captured near Benton Harbor, Mich., after an accident that cost him the sight of one eye, he vowed his innocence of the Lincoln robbery but was taken to the Nebraska capital where already two of the bandits were in jail, now serving 25 years penitentiary terms.

Feared "Railroading"

Winkler said he could prove himself innocent, but he feared a Lincoln jury. He claimed he feared "railroading" to prison.

His friends dug up $100,000 bond. Winkler came to Chicago and,

Special Programs To Be Sponsored By City Parent-Teacher Council

The Woman's Angle

BY BLANCHE E. BEAN
Avalanche Woman's Editor

PERHAPS you are bothered with a little ego today. A score for popularity may blast that, unless your self-appreciation will inspire an affirmative answer for more questions than it did for me.

* * *

In a current magazine there is a list of questions to be "honestly" answered to see whether or not you ought to be popular. The questions blighted any hope that I might have had for popularity and the final score of 29, which was all that I could honestly get, was slightly below the required number.

* * *

These questions are going to be reproduced in order that you, too, may do some scoring. For the first ten questions one scores three for every question answered in the affirmative. Two points are granted for every "yes" on questions from 11 to 24 and one point is granted for each affirmative answer for the remaining questions. The list follows:

* * *

1—Can you always be depended upon to do what you say you will?
2—Do you go out of your way cheerfully to help others?
3—Do you avoid exaggeration in all your statements?
4—Do you avoid being scarcastic?
5—Do you refrain from showing off how much you know?
6—If you feel superior to most of your associates do you refrain from showing it?
7—Do you refrain from bossing people not employed by you?
8—Do you refrain from reprimanding people who do things that displeases you?
9—Do you avoid making fun of others behind their backs?
10—Do you keep from domineering others?
11—Do you keep your clothing neat and tidy?
12—Do you avoid being bold and nervy?
13—Do you avoid laughing at the mistakes of others?
14—Is your attitude toward the opposite sex free from vulgarity?
15—Do you avoid finding fault with everyday things?
16—Do you let the mistakes of others pass without correcting them?
17—Do you loan things to others readily?
18—Are you careful not to tell jokes that will embarrass those listening?
20—Do you always control your temper?
21—Do you keep out of arguments?
22—Do you smile pleasantly?
23—Do you avoid talking almost continuously?
24—Do you keep your nose entirely out of other people's business?
25—Do you have patience with modern ideas?
26—Do you avoid flattering others?
27—Do you avoid gossiping?
28—Do you refrain from asking people to repeat what they have just said?
29—Do you avoid asking questions in keeping up a conversation?
30—Do you avoid asking favors of others?
31—Do you avoid trying to reform others?
32—Do you keep your personal troubles to yourself?
33—Are you natural rather than dignified?
34—Are you usually cheerful?
35—Are you conservative in politics?
36—Are you enthusiastic rather than lethargic?
37—Do you pronounce words correctly?
38—Do you look upon others without suspicion?
39—Do you avoid being lazy?
40—Do you avoid borrowing things?
41—Do you refrain from telling people their moral duty?
42—Do you avoid trying to convert people to your beliefs?
43—Do you avoid talking rapidly?
44—Do you avoid laughing loudly?
45—Do you avoid making fun of people to their faces?

Of course, you may rate 64. That means that you should be popular. Again, you may rate in my class—a score of 30 means that you are probably pretty generally disliked. The lowest score is supposed to be 12.

Below that, I suppose, one goes out and finds river in which to drown himself—which probably means that he will live to a ripe old age trying to find a river in West Texas.

At any rate, you can look over this instead of the advertisements in any popular magazine and have something to create insomnia.

Woman Writes Of Russian Travels

BY LILIAN CAMPBELL

Climbing ladders, walking on narrow planks thrown across the steel skeleton framework of tall structures, lying flat on top of an oil tank while the wind tries its best to blow her off and it takes two men to hold her camera still enough for a picture to be snapped—these are some of the commoner experiences of a slender 26-yar-old girl who is one of the youngest and most successful commercial photographers in America. She is Margaret Bourke-White, formerly of Cleveland, now of New York. She has just returned from Russia.

Photography was a hobby of Margaret Bourke-White in her college days, at Cornell. She was graduated in 1927. So unusual were her pictures, however, that big business men encouraged her to make photography her vocation. In Cleveland a large steel company commissioned her to make pictures for a book. She went into blazing mills, where women never had been permitted previously, where the heat was so intense that men stood ready to catch her if she were overcome.

Became An Editor

Then she went to New York, as associate editor of the magazine Fortune, and in 1930 she went to Russia to photograph the five-year plan. When she returned with her pictures, publishers requested her to write a book of her experiences to accompany the photos.

"Eyes on Russia," just published, is the result. Maurice Hindus, well-known writer of Russia, has written a foreword for it—an honor, indeed, for the writer of a first book.

"I went to Russia out of curiosity," Miss Bourke-White writes in "Eyes on Russia." "My work as a photographer of industries constantly brought me into contact with American business men and industrialists, and I could not help being affected by the widespread interest in the five-year plan.

"Things are happening in Russia, and happening with staggering speed. I could not afford to miss any of it. I wanted to make pictures of this astonishing development, because whatever the outcome, whether success or failure; the effort of 150,000,000 people is so gigantic, so unprecedented in all history, that I felt that these photographic records might have some historical value. I saw the five-year plan as a great drama being unrolled before the eyes of the world."

Vividly Told

The story of Miss Bourke-White's experiences are simply, but vividly, told in her book. As a guest of the Russian government, she traveled 5,000 miles in the five weeks she passed in Russia.

Sitting cross-legged on a little raft in a factory cellar full of water while she reloaded her film holders when her camera was empty, climbing scaffolding and traveling cranes while below her flowed the white-churned Dnieper river, are minor details in her narrative.

"All about me and below me was the most astonishing activity," says Miss Bourke-White. "From bank to bank there was one solid mile of human effort, as 16,000 Russians labored to complete the world's largest dam.

"I climbed to the edge of my structural pier, lay flat, face downward, across a footing of beams, and with Bill (her Russian helper) kneeling across the legs of my horizontally placed tripod, I began to photograph a huge generator shell." This was at Dnieperstroi.

White Hot Metal

In the Red October Rolling Mills of Stalingrad, she tells of "shooting" the white hot pouring metal from the cab of a traveling crane.

"Just time to set up the camera in my cramped space before hell rushed forth beneath my feet," she describes.

As the smoke thinned, Miss Bourke-White began to shoot.

"Placing film holders, removing slides, pushing the trigger, counting the flow of the metal, placing more holders, counting more seconds. Until at last the difficulty that I dreaded set in. The crane cab began trembling as though with palsy. Every movement now must be a supreme economy. The length of my exposure must depend, not upon my judgment as a photographer, but upon the brief respite allowed me when the crane quieted for a moment and the camera became steady. Exposure after exposure, in an agony of fear that the camera was not still. A hundred plates in the hope that one would be perfect."

Fewer, Less Severe Colds With "Cold-Control" Plan

Discovery By Makers of Vicks VapoRub Makes Possible Better "Control-of-Colds" In the Home.

HIGH COSTS REDUCED

Relief from much of the burden imposed by colds is now available in every home. The Vick Plan for better "Control-of-Colds" lessens the number, the severity and the duration of colds. It reduces the family's "Colds-Tax" in money, loss of time and health.

A New Vick Discovery

This Plan has been perfected by the makers of Vicks VapoRub—made possible by Vicks Nose & Throat Drops. Based on a new idea for "preventing" colds, this new Vick formula is an ideal companion to VapoRub, the modern way of "treating" colds. Used together, they aid and supplement each other in the Vick Plan for better "Control-of-Colds," which follows:

1.—Before a Cold Starts

Watch yourself whenever you have been exposed to anything that you know is apt to give you a cold, such as—

Contact with others having fresh colds—crowds, stuffy ill-ventilated rooms, public places—a night on a Pullman or a dusty automobile ride—sudden changes in temperature—inhaling smoke, dust, gases—excesses in living, such as over-eating, smoking or drinking, which reduce body resistance—after a hard day when you are over-tired.

Then—if you feel that stuffy, sneezy irritation of the nasal passages, Nature's usual signal that a cold is coming on—use Vicks Nose Drops at once—just a few drops up each nostril. Repeat every hour or so if needed. This will prevent many colds by stopping them before they get beyond the nose and throat—where most colds start.

2.—After a Cold Starts

At night, massage the threat and chest well with Vicks VapoRub (now available in white "stainless" form, if you prefer). Spread on thick and cover with warm flannel. Leave the bed-clothing loose around the neck so that the medicated vapors arising can be inhaled all night long.

If the air-passages are badly clogged with mucus, melt some VapoRub in a bowl of hot water and inhale the steaming vapors for several minutes. (If there is a cough, you will like the new Vick Cough Drop—actually medicated with ingredients of Vicks VapoRub.)

During the day—any time, any place—use Vicks Nose Drops every few hours as needed. This gives you full 24-hour treatment and without the risks of too much internal "dosing" which so often upsets digestion—especially of children.

Trial Offer Guarantee

Every druggist in the United States is offering Vicks Nose & Throat Drops and Vicks VapoRub on the following trial guarantee:

Use together as directed in the Vick Plan for better "Control-of-Colds", Unless you are delighted with results, your druggist is authorized to refund your money.—Adv.

Lubbock County Library Circulates Total Of 9,300 Books In December; Slaton Branch Is Said To Be Busy

The Lubbock county library circulated a total of 9,300 books last December as compared to 7,529 in December, 1930, Miss Rutillia Eubank, county librarian, said. The increase is more significant because of the handicap imposed by moving the main library here from City hall to the courthouse in December, she opined.

As many books of non-fiction as desired, so long as "within reason' and "the book stock holds out," can be checked out together, the librarian said. In the past, only two non-fiction books could be borrowed at once. Issuance of fiction still is limited to two books because of the limited number of works.

Slaton residents are asking particularly for material on Russia, writing, industrial and applied art, and child care and study, Miss Eubank reported.

Miss Thelma Poteet, custodian of the Slaton branch library, is taking three correspondence courses in library science through the Texas Technological college extension department from a northern university.

New books and others not listed when first received at the library include:

Juvenile subjects—The Boy Who Found the King by Allen, The Romance of Antar by Tietjens, Little Bear by Smith, The Big Tent by Canfield; Babes In the Woods, Little Jack Spratt, Sing a Song of Six Pence, and Old Mother Hubbard, picture books by Adams; I Want a Book by Pittals, The Dove In the Eagle's Nest by Yonge, The Tailor of Glocester by Potter; The Tale of Tom Kitten, The Tale of Jemima Puddle-Duck, The Tale of Timmy Tiptoes, The Tale of Benjamin Bunny, and The Tale of Johnny-Mouse; Sea Girl by Aspinwall, Mistress Mad cap by Sherman, The Story of Roland by Baldwin, and The Story of Siegfried by Baldwin.

Adult works—Best Plays of 1930-31, completed by Mantle; How to Spend Your Money by McCullough, The Problem of Unemployment by Douglas and Director, Finch's Fortune by De la Roche, and Living Authors by Dilly.

Here's Woman Living Four Lives In One

NEW YORK, Jan. 5, (AP) Alice Riddle Kindler lives four lives in one. She is mother of three young children, her own housekeeper, wife of the conductor of a symphony orchestra and an artist.

The artist life she began early, put aside after her marriage 12 years ago and only recently resumed.

How she manages living four lives at once, Mrs. Kindler herself does not know. But she says she is a much better artist than she ever was before her marriage to Hans Kindler, cellist, who last year became leader of the National Symphony orchestra at Washington and before she became mother of three children.

"It was all so complicated, all such a struggle, taking on three more lives, but that struggle is what every artist needs," she said today as an exhibit of her paintings opened.

During the past 10 years while Kindler was touring Europe and America filling concert engagements, Mrs. Kindler was busy raising, Jan. 11, Helen, 9, and Don, 6, in the little town of Senlis, just north of Paris.

Mrs. Kindler took home a bouquet from market one day, fascinated by its riotous array of color. She painted it. She painted her children at the supper table. She painted the Moroccan soldiers who deserted their fine Arabian horses on Sunday to ride the painted horses on a visiting fair's merry-go-round.

Shaw Prophecies Are Brought Out In "Apple Cart"

"The Apple Cart", announced as the attraction at the Senior High school auditorium on the evening of January 18, is the latest of George Bernard Shaw's fanciful prophecies. In it he forecasts political possibilities some thirty years hence.

Strange as it may seem, many of Shaw's gifts of phrophecy have been proven. In "Back to Methusiah" he described television with an accuracy that could hardly be improved upon today when sight and sound transmitted by air is an accomplished scientific fact. Yet the audience of eight years ago laughed at the fantastic opinions of the playwright.

"Major Barbara," which was produced in 1905, discussed various social, political and economic problems that were non-existent until nearly a decade later, it is said.

In "The Apple Cart" Shaw is doing something of the same sort.

The scene of the piece is laid thirty years from now in the council chambers of the King and cabinet of England, and the Mephistofelian dramatist has his say concerning the problems and conditions of that day. As may be expected from the Irish wit, the dialogue is brilliantly epigramatic and full of that sardonic humor for which Shaw is famous.

"The Apple Cart" will be presented here by Arthur M. Oberfelder by special arrangement with the Theater Guild of New York which gave the comedy its American premiere the year before last when it proved the outstanding hit of the season. The piece has been given an elaborate production and will be enacted by a brilliant cast especially schooled in the Shavian idea. Boyd Irwin, eminent English actor, heads the cast. Others include Chappell Dossett, Norman Fusier, Henry Hall, Ann Berryman, Daisy Belmore, Florence Hart, Nellie Strong, Ruth Belmore and a score more.

The husband, he said, beat out the flames, but not before Mrs. Mauney was seriously burned. Mauney was uninjured.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. (AP)—There are three reasons why mortorists from Chicago to Kankakee on the governor's highway, for the time being at least, will have to take troublesome jogs over a one-mile stretch of dirt road in Matteson. They are:

A sturdy farmhouse which stands squarely in the right-of-way.

Mr. Sidney Smith, occupant of the house.

And a shot gun.

A quarter of a mile of improved road had been completed yesterday when a crew of scores of laborers and a puffing steam shovel advanced on the farm house.

Bang!

A cloud of smoke came from the doorway and Mr. Smith emerged, with a shot gun.

"That," he said, "is just a warning. The next time I fire I'll mean business.

Baseball Camp Season Opens In Six Weeks

Contracts Being Prepared For Big Leaguers; Dickering To Follow, Then Players Off For Assigned Train Camps

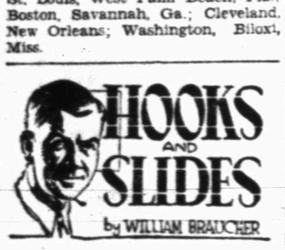

NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (AP) Baseball still seems a long way off to the average citizen, what with basketball just gathering steam and reverberations from the recent gridiron season still echoing through the glens, but there are signs of increased activity in the front offices.

Contracts are being prepared and soon will wing their way to 48 states and Cuba. Virtually all of the 16 major league clubs will have made their best offers by February 1. After that comes the customary period of dickering, and by February 14, the first carload of athletes will be on its way to camp. That's only six weeks away.

Following is the list of training sites for both leagues:

National: St. Louis, Bradenton, Fla.; Brooklyn, Clearwater, Fla; Philadelphia, Winter Haven, Fla.; Cincinnati, Tampa, Fla.; Boston, St. Petersburgh, Fla.; New York, Los Angeles, Calif.; Pittsburgh, Paso Robles, Calif.; Chicago, Catalina Island, Calif.

American: Philadelphia, Fort Myers; New York, St. Petersburg Fla.; Chicago, San Antonio, Tex.; Detroit, Richardson Springs, Calif.; St. Louis, West Palm Beach, Fla.; Boston, Savannah, Ga.; Cleveland, New Orleans; Washington, Biloxi, Miss.

Depression Ends

Perhaps this item should appear on Page One. Anyway, here it is: 1,200 seats for the Rose Bowl game were sent to New Orleans and after they had been sold the people cried for more. When you figure railroad fares from New Orleans to Los Angeles, etc., it begins to appear the depression is only a myth, after all.

Afterthought

Forty-one high school, college and sandlot football players died from injuries during the 1931 season. The thought just arises—how do the professional players manage to protect themselves so well?

Darn That Ball!

While the U. S. G. A. goes on experimenting in the search for a golf ball that will please people who refuse to be pleased, England continues serenely to drive and approach and putt with the ancient 1.62-1.62 ball. And when our golfers go to England they will do the same thing, though choice of the balls is optional in the British tournaments. But when British golfers come over here, they will play with the new larger-heavier ball, or else. It's all very complicated.

For Secret Games

John T. "Terry" McGovern, co-author of Carnegie Bulletin No. 23 which excoriated practices of subsidization and recruiting of college athletes, now comes up with the suggestion that football would be better off if ribald critics, sideline managers, etc., could be ejected from the stands. Mr. McGovern has hit upon a splendid way to hold football games in private.

Word From Nurmi

Paavo Nurmi sends along word from Finland that he expects to break the Olympic marathon record by half an hour. Arrangements should be made to have Art Shires and Dizzy Dean meet him at the dock.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Connie Mack says that of a hundred bases stolen nowadays, not more than 10 can be blamed on the catcher . . . and that he has seen Mickey Cochrane throw out runners when he, Mr. Mack, didn't think there was a chance to get them . . . pitchers let runners get a big lead, says Mack, and "we have some pitchers who are rather careless about that. It takes them a long time to get the ball away, but when a fellow like Waite Hoyt is pitching you don't see the other club run" . . . continuing, Mack said, "The Cards didn't run on Hoyt—not even Martin" . . . whoa! . . . perhaps Mr. Mack does not remember that Martin drove a sacrifice fly against Hoyt his first time at bat in the fifth game . . . beat out a bunt the second time . . . and smacked a homer into the left field stands the third time . . . which actually gave Pepper only one chance to steal on Hoyt . . . after he beat out the bunt . . . and that time he was squelched by a snappy double play.

Tolan Is The Name

There will be some spirited competition in the 100-meter event of the Los Angeles Olympics, experts are saying. What they probably mean is that there will be some hot foot-racing in that event to see who can finish second to a short, dark gentleman who wears specs when he runs.

The Old Chauvinists!

The Harvard Crimson blames as one of the forces undermining football the "chauvinism of alumni." All together, now boys! Are we mice or are we men? Let's dechauvinize the gridiron! Did anybody think to bring along his dechauvinizer?

Hafey's Ha Ha

Bespectacled Card Goes Hard Way

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 5. (AP)—Charles (Chick) Hafey, 1931 batting champion of the National league by .0003 points in the recently published official figures, won the crown in a most unorthodox manner.

First, he was a holdout, failing to report for spring training at the appointed time.

He missed part of the actual season, imposing a further handicap on himself in the race of batting honors.

Most remarkable of all, Hafey's eyesight is so poor that he is forced to wear spectacles continually—the only player in this classification to come out on top in a scramble for major league hitting laurels.

Horned Frogs Seek Another Southwest Conference Flag; Meet Baylor Saturday Night

FORT WORTH, Jan. 5. (Special.)—Following their barnstorming tour of the middle west during the Christmas holidays in which they lost but one game, the champion Texas Christian Horned Frog basketeers have returned to Fort Worth to make preparations for the initiation of the 1932 basketball season. They go to Waco Saturday night to meet the strong Baylor Bears. In spite of the fact that the champions have practically the same team back fram 1931, Coach Schmidt is of the opinion that the opening tilt will be one of the hardest of the year.

Although the Schmidtmen dropped a 31-to-27 decision to the Wichita (Kan.) Henry's, national A. A. U. champions of 1931, the Horned Frog mentor was well pleased with the result of the trip. The defensive department, especially that of the forwards, was materially improved; the offensive clicked better than previously, and the experience in stiff competition in this early part of the season was invaluable. The Frogs administered the Southwest Teachers of Ada, Okla., the first defeat they had suffered on their home court since 1927.

When a London police horse was blinded in one eye during a street disturbance recently the police received 300 offers to provide a home for the animal, but it was decided not to part with it.

Feldman Meets Battalino For Feather Title

"Let's Forget Schmeling And Walker And Talk About The Featherweight Title Bout," Urges Promoter Johnston

BY EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. (AP) — Max Schmeling and Mickey Walker have not signed for a heavyweight title match in Miami in February and no one concerned knows when and whether they will—but it is nothing for the faithful to worry about.

It seems there is to be a featherweight title match, 15 rounds, with Christopher "Bat" Battalino, of Hartford, placing his crown in jeopardy against Lew Feldman, in Madison Square Garden Friday night, and as far as the ballyhoo is concerned, the less said about anything else at the moment, the better.

So Jack Kearns, Manager of Walker, stayed away from the Garden today and there was much discussion there concerning Battalino's ability to take off 10 pounds within a few days and be strong enough to defeat Feldman, the challenger, who was soundly thrashed by Kid Chocolate recently.

"Enough to Write About"

"For goodness sakes," demanded Jimmy Johnston plaintively, "isn't a featherweight champion match enough to write about without worrying over Schmeling and Walker?"

Ostensibly there is a serious situation in the process of being solved and concerns the remuneration to be given Walker for his title chance. Schmeling already has agreed to take 40 per cent of the receipts of a Florida match on Feb. 25 while Walker, offered 12 1-2, demands 20 per cent.

There is a slight suspicion that the Garden already has the contracts safely tucked away in the safe.

Babe Ruth Worth All He Gets, Is Dazzy's Opinion

HOMOSASSA, Fla., Jan. 5 (AP) — Babe Ruth ought to get $80,000 for his services this year, Dazzy Vance believes.

Vance, at his inn here for the winter, received $23,000 for his work on the mound for the Brooklyn Nationals last year, and both he and the Bambino are to negotiate new contracts this spring.

The Dazzler predicted a cut in player's salaries, and big seasons for Hack Wilson, who goes from the Chicago Cubs to the St. Louis Cardinals and for Al Lopez, youthful Brooklyn catcher. He said he thought there would be several more important trades before the season opens.

"A ball player's professional life is about 15 years," Vance said. "It takes him five years to get in the majors. He has five years or less in the big circuits, another five years in the minors and he is through. His age is around 35. He must start at a new business in competition with men who have been following that line for 15 years or more.

"Lots of people think playing baseball is one big lark. They seem to think if a player gets over $10,000 a year he is overpaid. But baseball is a business just like banking, insurance or practicing law.

"If a fellow in other lines made $750,000 a year for his firm, he would want about half of it and probably get it.

"Babe Ruth should have $80,000 for his work this season, regardless of the depression, his legs or any other objection. After his first year with the Yankees his salary was raised to $25,000. People thought that was too much, but the Yankees drew about $750,000 more in gate receipts that year."

About the 1932 pennant race, Vance said he couldn't hazard a guess at this time.

The 120th anniversary of the battle of Arroyo-dos-Molinos in the Peninsula war of 1809-14 was observed in London recently by the trooping of French drums.

King George has personally presented the Air Force Cross to Flight Lieut. Stainforth, holder of the world's speed record, and Flight Lieut. Boothman, winner of this year's Schneider Trophy contest.

Stalling Is O. K. If You Know How

Pittsburgh Coach Finds Way To Make Stalling Interesting To The Spectators; It's Wild And Rough Looking.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 5.—Basketball's dullest feature, the "stall game," has at last been made pleasing to the spectator.

The secret is in the "figure eight", a formation that resembles a band of Sioux warriors attacking a wagon train in a western motion picture. The spectators actually cheer.

Dr. H. C. Carlson, University of Pittsburgh coach, says "it not only makes the native sons like you while you are defeating their team, but gives you a better chance of beating them". The "stall game" was long a cause for many boos and catcalls.

Dr. Carlson presented the "figure eight" as a "stall game" before 500 coaches and players at the annual basketball clinic of the University of Pittsburg.

The coaches were convinced after it had been demonstrated by Pitt against Temple university.

Pitt entered the last three minutes of play with a three-point lead. Then started a wild-looking bit of flood play. The spectators cheered this "stall game" and Pitt broke Temple's defense three times, twice for open under-basket shots.

Properly played, there are always three men ready to receive a pass and three men in position to break down the floor if the opposition defense pulls out.

The play looks dangerous and wild as the players move about the figure eight, but Carlson claims it is more safe and less complicated than the old "criss-cross."

Committee Reports At Convention Of Coaches Refute Attacks On Football

Records Show Only Two Bona Fide Players Died

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of articles prepared by Collier Parris, sports editor of the Avalanche-Journal, following a lengthy interview with P. W. Cawthon, head coach at Texas Tech, and dealing with American coaches replies to charges of over-emphasis, football fatalities and the "big business" of football. Tomorrow's story will contain a resume of a committee's report turned in at the national convention of coaches last week at New York by Lou Little of Columbia University).

Football, as a collegiate and intercollegiate extra-curricular activity, is ot over-emphasized. Football as sport, is not nor has it been "an insane practice," as alleged by prejudiced and unscrupulous writers and non-thinkers. Football has been falsely accused of being responsible for forty or more fatalities which occurred during the 1931 season. Football rates sixth in a list of extra-curricular college activities which require time for practice and lectures. There will be no radical departure from the fundamental and present methods by which football is taught and played, no sweeping revolutions in the rules making department.

These are only a few of the statements made, dependability of which was proven apparently beyond doubt, by the nation's foremost coaches in their annual sessions last week at New York City. These are only a few of the answers given to various challenges promulgated by prejudiced persons who seek to "find something wrong" with one of the world's greatest perhaps the country's most thrilling of sport activities.

In this series of articles, prepared as a result of interviews with P. W. Cawthon, head coach at Texas Tech, who represented Tech at the national convention, attempts will be made to show the coaches' and the schools' side of the questions that have been sweeping the country since the beginning of the 1931 football season. The questions did not originate with the 1931 season. Long before certain organizations and schools whose athletics were floundering under poor supervision or careless administration, sought to lay the blame on football, generally and specifically.

Coach Cawthon sat in on nearly every session, keeping notes, making observations and learning facts which were not available to reporters in New York nor to any news service. What the reporters learned and what they wrote came as a result of pointed questions between sessions colored by their own imaginative minds. And such a furore previously had been raised on the outside as a result of a large number of deaths attributed to football during 1931 that nearly all their questions were confined to what movements were being made to curtail the number of injuries and deaths. The ultimate result was that readers over the country were made familiar with only the darker side.

As a matter of fact, it did not take the coaches long to dispose of the fatality question. It did not require but a short time to prove that only two deaths came about as direct results of actual and correctly supervised playing. Falsely directed movements, physical incapability before the season, lack of information and informed minds, moral and physical and mental inaptitude, inadequate equipmet, careless coaching and playing and generally poor supervision over all were found to be the causes of the other deaths.

Unquestioned statistics showed that upward of one million boys played football during the fall months of 1931. It is no wonder, then, even considering the law of averages, that of this number some would pay the extreme penalty. Yet it was proven beyond the doubt of even the most skeptical that deaths resulting from well supervised football are perhaps the most unnatural deaths recorded.

The two "bona fide" football fatalities did not come about as a result of the "flying wedge" play following kickoff, as it has been argued. The Army and Fordham players were tackled in open field, far from the scene of blocking and smashing. It could have happened on any other play of the game, on a punt, on a play from scrimmage or on a forward pass—any play in which the ball was handled.

Eight college players, sixteen high school players and eighteen sand lot players died during the football season. In the case of the latter, the reporting committee at the national convention, according to Cawthon, found that not a single player was physically fit to be playing any strenuous game, least of all a game in which physical contact was expected. Some of them were fatally injured while chasing footballs into the street and under the wheels of heavy trucks, or while playing near concrete curbing or on fields unfit for playing.

All of the high school players who died were found to be totally unfit, physically, or were playing without supervision or without proper equipment. The same held true with six of the college players. And in every case it was found that physical examinations had not been made or approved.

Several suggestions and proposals were made at the convention whereby injuries and fatalities might be prevented. Parents of sand lot and high school youngsters were warned, through a resolution, to see that their sons were physically fit and were well supervised before playing any kind of athletic game. College authorities were warned to see to their equipment and that physicians' advice be followed.

At a round-table discussion several coaches offered proposals which might lessen the number of injuries. Some were too utterly absurd for reasoning and were not tabulated. One of these was a proposal to eliminate backfield interference but to let backs run behind the ball carrier and receive backward or forward passes, each one caught to count as a point in the total score. Another suggestion was to make every lineman eligible to receive forward passes.

Glenn S. "Pop" Warner of Stanford advocated a change in the rules whereby equipment would be made with an eye to cutside as well as inside protection, such as making shoulder pads and head gear soft on the outside, a cushion effect. This was considered one of the most likely changes from the old way. Another proposal was that thigh pads be eliminated and pliable reeds or soft padding substituted in place of the hard board-like braces which protect the thighs.

All of these boys have received letters on recognition of their football work the past season.

"I am planning some football training in the spring, because we will not have any basketball this winter," Emmons said. "There will be about four weeks of training and it will start in March.

"Post will have some track work. The county meet is to be held at Post this spring but the dates are not selected. We should have a good meet this year as there are a lot of good athletes in the county."

Players who are expected to return include: Surman Clark, tackle; D. J. Davies and Will Sims, ends; Owen Stanley, center; Travis and Gwinn Lloyd, half backs and John Speck, quarterback. Speck is captain elect, having been chosen for the post recently.

Rain Fails To Stop 6,000 In Large Welcome

As If They Had Won The Game Greenies Are Toasted With Rousing Cheers; Separate Cars Carry Players

(By The Associated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5. — Not since the Armistice has New Orleans put on such a celebration as that which greeted the return of Tulane's Green Wave today from the Rose Bowl football game.

Despite a downpour of rain and the defeat of the Wave by Southern California, 6,000, men, women and children gathered at the station and fought police lines to glimpse the players.

Police Escort

Led by a police escort and the Tulane band, the team paraded through the town with each player in a separate automobile with his name emblazoned on the windshield. At the city hall steps the parade stopped while Governor Huey P. Long, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley and other officials lauded the players.

Tulane lost to U. S. C., 21 to 12.

Despite the lack of sunshine in England this year, the daily ultra-violet ray readings at most resorts showed a very small drop from last year's, and as a result bathers acquired their usual sun tan.

Burrus Seeks Office Again

Present Commissioner Of Precinct One Announces For Re-Election; Declares His Year's Record Is Open

Claude Burrus, commissioner of precinct one for the past year, announced Tuesday that he would seek re-election to the post during the coming Democratic primary in July.

"While I've only been in office one year, I will be glad for anyone to investigate my record and the stand I have taken on matters pertaining to the county's business," Mr. Burrus said. "I appreciate the past favors of my friends and will attempt to meet personally as many of the voters of the county as possible before the primary."

Mr. Burrus has been a resident of Lubbock county for 26 years. He was formerly engaged in the real estate and insurance business.

Haven For Ducks Hurt By Hunters Proving Popular

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Jan. 5. (AP)—A refuge where crippled game birds need fear neither man, dog nor gun and where the birds are nursed back to health has been established here.

As part of the government's efforts to conserve migratory bird life H. M. Worcester, federal game protector, has taken charge of a refuge of 10,000 acres, assisted by several men and his perfectly trained retriever dog.

Many ducks, he explained, are wounded by hunters who shoot at them when too high in the air, but are still ably to fly to the refuge.

Worchester and his dog make daily tours of the bird refuge at Tule lake. Wounded birds are loaded into crates and hauled across the ice on sleds. They are then treated. Shattered wings are amputated and the ducks put in pens around warm springs near the Klamath river.

More than 300 birds are alive and well in these pens, and Worchester hopes to gather 2,000 more before stopping.

Birds that fully recover are banded and liberated. Those that have lost a wing or received other serious injury making them unfit for natural life are sent to parks throughout the country.

Worcester estimates 80 per cent of the birds recover to enjoy a life untroubled by hunters' shotguns.

The NUT CRACKER

BY COL. JOE O'GOOFTY

Well, the coaches who were meeting to diagnose football's ills did manage to discover one great fact, anyway. After a searching investigation they found that the game was "in good hands."

* * *

Now President Hoover ought to announce that as a fact-finding committee of one, he has unearthed the mighty truth that the government has an able chief.

* * *

One of the coaches' committees did learn though that the boys were giving more time to debating than to football. Steps must be taken to correct that condition.

* * *

It is also reported that an oarsman on a college crew has to devote more time to his boat than the football player gives to the grid sport. That may have something to do with football injuries, but it's too deep for the colonel.

* * *

Football coaches demonstrated by their meeting that they were well qualified for one job at least—that of congressmen.

* * *

The only suggestion that wasn't made at the meeting was that the mentors ought to recommend slashing of coaches' salaries.

Service Of Hospitals Will Be Discussed By Rotarians

The service of hospitals will be discussed at the Rotary club luncheon today at Hotel Lubbock, N. L. Peters, club president, said Tuesday. W. T. Gaston, business manager of Texas Technological college, will be in charge and discuss "Student Hospitalization."

Dr. F. B. Malone, principal speaker, will speak on "Hospital Service."

The Blondes Have It And 1932 Girl To Have More Curves, Ziegfeld Says

Yes, sir, the blonds have IT in 1932, according to no less an authority than Florenz Ziegfeld, who has quite an eye for beauty. Ziggie says that the model American girl this year must be blond, and here you see two of the kind that gentlemen prefer, Jean Harlow, left, movie heart-throbber, and Marilyn Miller, famous both in the Follies and in cinemaland. But being blond isn't quite enough, says the beauty expert. The ideal girl must be exactly 5 feet 6 inches tall, weigh 118 pounds and cut a much fuller curve than last year.

Judge Clark M. Mullican To Speak In A.B.C. Program Friday Night; To

Judge Clark M. Mullican of 99th district court will speak Friday night at the American Business club dinner in observance of the national America-at-work program, Walter Ruffner, president of the club, said.

MULLICAN

Two other speakers, on representing the Lubbock Loyalty council, also are on the program. They have not been selected. Following dinner at 7 o'clock in the Hilton hotel ballroom, the clubmen and their guests will listen to a 30-minute radio broadcast on America At Work and allied subjects.

The three speakers here probably will comment on the radio addresses and localize the material previously presented, Ruffner said.

Members of Lubbock's three other service clubs have been invited to the dinner program, at which about 150 are expected. Persons not clubmen and wishing to attend can arrange to be present by communicating with Ruffner by Friday noon, he said.

Two Brothers

themselves or at each other.

Was Mother's Wish

Their mother had said in an interview published locally that she hoped they would not surrender alive.

The bodies of the brothers—brothers in outlawry and brothers in death—will be taken overland by a Springfield undertaker back to the scene of the murder which drove the two into Texas.

A mild-mannered and frightened carpenter was their undoing. When they came last night, seeking a hiding place from officers who were looking for them with heavy arms at every turn, they did not give their right names, and the carpenter rented them the room.

Left With Family

Later, as he sat reading his evening paper, he saw a picture of Harry Young. It was the picture of one of his new tenants. He left the house at once with his family, withholding his information from the police until today.

The posse of officers that sped to the cottage swooped down upon A. P. Singleton, a painter, who had called there innocently enough to find himself caught up in the most dramatic scene, perhaps of his life.

He protested later he was "mighty scared" and claimed the officers had used him to protect themselves when they closed in on the house.

Police Gun Ears

Tonight, an idle group stood about the little house, where the furniture and the windows were being replaced.

Police Lieut. Claude Beverly, who crept into the rear of the house just before the brothers fell with their wounds, looked into the bathroom and saw one of the Young brothers peering at him. The officer's shotgun roared and the officer himself jumped back out of range. That was the last time either of the killers was seen standing.

A little while later the officers pushed in, and learned that the call "we are dead; come on and get us" was not an attempt at trickery.

Occupied Front Room

Beverly, telling of the entry into the house, said the brothers had been occupying the front bedroom.

"We started into the hall and met a man coming out and took him into the house with us. He turned out to be a visitor at the house," said Beverly.

We knocked on the front bedroom door.

"Then we went to the kitchen across the hall, from which we had a view of the rear bedroom and the bathroom door.

"Everything was quiet for a few minutes.

"Then the bathroom door opened a few inches and one of the Young brothers peeped out.

"I fired one time with a sawed off shotgun.

"There were four more shots in the bathroom.

"A voice called: 'we're dead — come on in.'

"We waited for the gas to clear up and then went in and found the two men, one dead and the other dying."

Lubbock Woman Dies At Home Following A Lengthy Illness

Mrs. R. L. Johnson, 44, died of heart disease at her home in northeast Lubbock at 7 p. m. Tuesday following a long illness which became critical only early yesterday. Death was unexpected.

Mr. Johnson is an employe of the city of Lubbock, parks department. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson came to Lubbock four years ago.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Johnson is survived by six children, four daughters and two sons. Funeral services probably will be held in Lubbock Thursday, with Rix funeral home in charge.

The present siege of winter weather has brought a considerable number of cases of colds and a few of pneumonia to Lubbock, several doctors said Tuesday.

Druggists are reporting an unusually heavy sale of preparations against colds. The continued damp weather with accompanying slushy streets is given as cause of the increase in colds.

PRESBYTERIANS PLAN PARTY

Invitations have been given members of the college group of the First Presbyterian Sunday school to attend a "College of Fun," which is to be held Friday evening at the Country club.

Plans are being worked out for all entertainment to carry out the collegiate theme. The group, of which Alvin Donnell is captain, is entertaining. The committee on refreshments includes Helen Eiland and Mary Louise Thomas; Ruby Rae Williamson and Clarence Woods are responsible for decorations. The games committee is composed of Mary McMurry, Helen Chase, and W. N. Weddel. Gerald Gordon is in charge of transportation and Gene Brock of posters.

The party is scheduled to begin at 7:30 and anyone who doesn't have a way is asked to meet at the church before that time.

Three people represented Tech at a recent meeting of the Southwest Society of Biblical Study and Research, which was held at S. M. U. in Dallas during the Christmas holidays. They were Miss Mary DeBardeleben and Dr. J. C. Granbery of the faculty and the Rev. Bradner Moore of St. Paul's Episcopal church.

Other schools represented at the conference were the Baptist Seminary at Fort Worth, Phillips university at Enid, Oklahoma, and T. C. U., Fort Worth. Dr. Lockhart of T. C. U. was the outgoing president, Dr. Dana of the seminary being elected to the presidency.

CHURCHES OFFER COURSES

Credit courses in Bible work giving an hour's credit toward degrees are being offered this term by four Lubbock churches, the First Baptist, First Methodist, First Presbyterian and the Nazarene.

These courses started during the fall term, but now students may enroll now. The college has authorized resident students to take them in addition to the regular program. Anyone wishing to take these courses may enroll at the respective churches at 10 o'clock Sunday or at the office of J. F. McDonald, room 306, this week.

ALUMNUS VISITS CAMPUS

VISITS IN NEW MEXICO

Lonnie Langston of the math department has returned from Clovis, New Mexico, where he visited during the holidays. He was a guest in the home of the parents of Hal Lary, former Tech student who is now in Geneva, Switzerland.

The WHY of TRUCK Transportation

As you motor down the highways and see the endless number of trucks grinding toward their various destinations, you say to yourself:

"A law should be passed to keep them off the highways, they are road hogs, congesting traffic and making it impossible to speed our cars at 90 miles per hour."

Even while Legislation is being enacted by professional politicians, making it more difficult for truck men to serve you, you may not stop to think just what their service means to you and what benefit such measures will have on the economic life of this territory, this state and this country.

DID YOU KNOW.....
THAT South Plains merchants phone to Lubbock every night often after 8:30 and give wholesale dealers orders for merchandise that is delivered to them by truck the next morning hundreds of miles from Lubbock.

DID YOU KNOW.....
THAT truck competition has reduced the cotton freight rate $1.00 per bale from this section to seaport towns? THIS MEANS A SAVING OF OVER $700,000 to the farmers in West Texas each year, whose cotton is shipped through this inland cotton point.

DID YOU KNOW.....
THAT before the service of freight trucks were available to Lubbock merchants that it took from 15 to 30 days to get a carload of merchandise by rail from Akron, Ohio to Lubbock, and that now the service by truck or rail is only 5 or 6 days.

DID YOU KNOW.....
THAT it would have been impossible to have served the Panhandle Oil Fields without the services of trucks and that Amarillo would not have been the key city for the large oil fields for a hundred miles around her city limits without their aid?

DID YOU KNOW.....
THAT the trucking service from Lubbock, Texas plays a major part in building Lubbock as a wholesale center?

DID YOU KNOW.....
THAT while the trucks are handling their volume of business, they can't get along without the railroads, and further that the railroads are still handling over 75% of all the tonnage?

DO YOU KNOW.....
THAT truck competition has reduced freight costs and that the busses have reduced the cost of passenger service?

DO YOU KNOW.....
THAT there is a law that forbids truck owners to transport at one hauling more than 7000 pounds of freight? That this limitation will increase the cost of hauling merchandise and farm products to and from Lubbock. Less pounds means more trucks on the highways.

DO YOU KNOW.....
THAT OTHER STATES ARE NOT MAKING SUCH DEMANDS on trucking industry that is serving them? DO YOU think that bridles should be placed on the trucking industry pulling it back and giving other methods of transportation the advantage?

DO YOU KNOW.....
THAT the more universal the transportation system is the more progressive and prosperous the nation will be. No other method of transportation now in use can serve the outlying and widely scattered farmer and merchant so easily, cheaply and quickly as the truck. Busses and trucks do not want, nor do they need to supplant the railroads. The very nature of railroads prevent them from reaching all parts of the communities through which they run. Trucks merely supplement the work started by railroads?

DO YOU KNOW.....
THAT in 1929 the total taxes of all kinds paid to the State of Texas by railroads totaled $7,786,540.71 and that the total paid by motor vehicles was $45,776,973.10. And that truck and bus lines paid 30% of this gigantic sum which is six times more than the amount paid by the railroads in taxes to the State of Texas?

DO YOU KNOW.....
THAT motor trucks carry only 2½% of all freight; railroads carry 75%, and that the Great Lakes, rivers, Pipe Lines, Electric Railways carry the remainder?

DO YOU KNOW.....
THAT TRUCK MEN, IN GREAT NUMBERS, WANT TO BUILD GOODWILL BETWEEN THE PEOPLE OF TEXAS AND THE RAILROADS, BUT ARE DETERMINED TO WIN A PERMANENT PLACE FOR THEIR OWN INDUSTRY BY BETTER SERVING THE STATE AND ITS PEOPLE?

Ohio's New Tax Project

OHIO has launched a tax experiment which it can not hope to perfect for a decade or longer but which promises in time to end inequalities in taxation and to lift part of the burden which weights down real estate beyond its power to support.

This experiment is in classified property assessments for tax purposes. That is, all property will be classified and each class assessed at different rates.

Investments will be taxed at 5 per cent of income; deposits at two mills, shares in and capital employed by financial institutions, two mills; shares in and capital employed by dealers in intangibles, five mills; capital and surplus of domestic insurance companies, five mills; moneys, credits and other taxable intangibles, three mills.

Real estate and tangible personal property, the former on a basis of a 70 per cent assessment, will be taxed at rates fixed by local authorities. Special taxes will be limited to an excise tax on cigarets and an automobile levy.

This experiment will be watched by the other 47 states to all of whom the unequal distribution of tax burden is a real public problem. If it is even partially successful, the example will find several immediate emulators. If unsuccessful, there will be disappointed taxpayers and deeper furrows in the brows of bothered politicians who must soon do something for the relief of taxpaying voters or be replaced.

PINCHOT AND JOHNSON

Gifford Pinchot, governor of Pennsylvania, and Hiram Johnson, Publisher Hearst's Senate "Man Friday" from California, are having a hard time "muscling in" as possible Republican Presidential timber. Each is taking his turn at lambasting the present GOP administration and Governor Pinchot is digging up all the old hob-goblins of politics in an effort to turn the people's attention to his own "cure all" plans.

If an Independent Democratic newspaper can make bold to comment upon a Republican family fuss, we would opine that Messrs. Johnson and Pinchot are staging little more than that which Bill Murray's enemies claim he is staging—namely, "one man" campaigns for prominence. We recognize Mr. Hoover's personal and political unpopularity, yet at the same time believe that even he would be more acceptable to the nation as a whole than either the Pennsylvanian or the Californian.

As we see the political lineup at present, the Republican party cannot re-elect Mr. Hoover—always providing the Democrats present a solid front. If the GOP cannot win with Hoover, it follows that it can't with Pinchot or Johnson because neither are held in the essential esteem of the voters. The Republicans have one possible candidate who might win—and he says he won't run—who, of course, is Calvin Coolidge. Yet even Mr. Coolidge, were he to accept the nomination, would have considerably less than an even chance for the reason that the country, generally, is ready for a change in policies as well as in administration.

Ambitions of Johnson and Pinchot not to the contrary, the Republicans are in a nine-hole. We doubt seriously if they could carry India were they to nominate Mahatma Gandhi.

About 86 per cent of our national problems would disappear if nobody would try to get a living without earning it.

The man who knows it all would be less objectionable if he could be persuaded to keep a modicum to himself.

Now Metropolitan Opera will be broadcast. Judging from the size of most opera singers, it's never been anything else.

Practical Health Problems

DIET IN TREATING TUBERCULOSIS

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Much attention has been given during the past two years to the so-called Gerson and Hermannsdorfer diets used in tuberculosis.

At one time raw meat and meat juices were strongly advised for this disease, but at present the evidence in favor of such a diet does not indicate that it has any special value. There is some evidence that a high protein diet increases the coagulability of the blood. Hermannsdorfer was convinced that a diet largely acid in character hastened the healing of wounds.

Recently Dr. Edgar Mayer of Saranac Lake has surveyed the evidence for these diets in which salt is restricted in cases of tuberculosis. He has also given special attention to the other factors involved in diets for the tuberculosis. He is inclined to believe that a high protein ration is of value. Apparently the fat in the body can be held in reserve and drawn on at will. Several authorities have recommended excess fats in the diets of the tuberculous.

It has not been established that the calcium in the blood in tuberculosis is lower than ordinarily; excess calcium in the food does not seem to aid the calcification of the tubercle.

Neither has it been certainly demonstrated that any large increase over the usual amount of vitamins is advisable, even for persons in good health. If it can be shown that a definite lack of vitamins exists, that lack should be supplied. But only rarely in the American population does any adult seem to suffer from a real vitamin deficiency. The experiments with vitamin feeding may be carried out over long periods of time, since it does not seem that harm can result from a relative excess of vitamins.

The two diets most talked about at the present time are the Gerson diet and the Hermannsdorfer-Sauerbruch diet. These diets do not vary greatly one from the other. Both of them eliminate sodium chloride or common salt, substituting a calcium-rich salt; both restrict meats greatly and water greatly; both are rich in fat and protein but low in carbohydrates; both provide for giving much raw food with cod liver oil, phosphorus and calcium.

* * *

In surveying all of the available evidence for these methods, Mayer concludes that some people react favorably to the withdrawal of table salt and that some improve on a larger than normal vitamin intake, but that it is not safe as a routine proposition to put all patients with tuberculosis on a special diet of such character with the idea that it will be beneficial to all of them. The person with tuberculosis is a human being and no two human beings are exactly alike. Every case must be studied as an individual and treated on an individual basis.

Political Ethics Up

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—President Hoover having committed the country to a moratorium six months ahead of the date for congress to meet, it is altogether unlikely that the legislators would have refused to ratify it when they finally did convene, even had he neglected to secure informal indorsements from a long list of them at the time he announced his debt-suspension program.

Senator A. W. Barkley

It is still more unlikely, however, that the moratorium would have had nearly so large a majority if the president had failed to get a goodly number of the lawmakers on record in its favor before they had had a chance to ascertain popular sentiment on the subject.

This is demonstrated by the comparative proportions of the votes on ratification in the senate and the house of representatives respectively. The senators balloted 69 to 12 for debt suspension; the representatives 317 to 100. That is, the senate was nearly 6 to 1 for the proposition; the house of representatives only a little more than 3 to 1.

THE CONCLUSION is obvious.

There are only 96 senators. President Hoover was able to communicate with most of them as soon as he had decided on his moratorium plna, and had the signatures of 62 of the 96 on the dotted line ere they had had time to consider the question in all its aspects.

Of representatives there are 435. It took Mr. Hoover longer to get into touch with a majority of the membership of so large a chamber. Just how many of them he ultimately succeeded in rounding up is not known, but probably it was not more than a bare half of the whole body.

WITHOUT ASSERTING that ratification could have been prevented anyway, anti-moratorium lawmakers do insist that, among those of their brethren who (flattered, maybe, by White House appeals for their support) acquiesced last summer in Mr. Hoover's policy, several heartily wished subsequently that they had not been so hasty.

Illustratively, words dropped by Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, during the debate relative to the debt-suspension issue, generally, have been interpreted (perhaps incorrectly) as implying decided regret on the Kentuckian's part that he permitted himself to be aligned among the Democrats who were pledged in advance to sustain the moratorium.

Whatever impression the Kentucky solon may actually have intended to convey, his explanation of his position at least raised an interesting point in ethics—a point which, however, still remains unsettled.

* * *

THE PROBLEM evolved itself as a by-product of a speech by Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, so vehemently opposing further concessions to Europe during the present period of economic stress in this country that the Kentuckian felt called on to interpose a few sentences in defense of his own already-announced intention to vote for debt suspension.

It was a defense of which Senator McKellar made devastatingly short work.

His Kentucky fellow Jeffersonian evidently realized it.

Nevertheless, his word was pledged.

"Well, anyhow," he ended the discussion, "I would rather my constituents said that I had made a glorious mistake than have anyone say I had broken my promise to the president."

* * *

THE OPPORTUNITY was an excellent one for Senator McKellar to diverge from his anti-moratorium address for a brief homily on the unwisdom of thoughtless advance promises by men in highly responsible public positions. He availed himself of it. He did not, indeed, make an immediate issue of the ethical question involved, but it has been debated since then in anti-moratorium circles.

The problem is this:

Suppose the case of a legislator who has pledged himself, in good faith, if inconsiderately, to a course which he later decides is to the disadvantage of the flok whose interests he is sworn to represent to the best of his ability. Should he keep his word at his constituents' expense?—or vote for his constituents at the cost of breaking his promise?

A WORTHY PROJECT TO AID

Those in charge of improvement projects at Sanders school and in that vicinity have placed a call for good books and magazines to be added to a circulating library established there. A librarian has been appointed and efforts will be made to fit the library with good reading materials.

There are hundreds of people in Lubbock with good books and magazines with which they have finished — volumes and periodicals which would be welcomed in the Sanders library. There is no call for "torn up junk," but there is a decided need for types of good literature.

The library is sponsored by the Sanders Union Sunday school, in our opinion one of the most worthwhile organizations in the city, and donations of books and magazines will be received by Mrs. J. T. Hart, librarian, at her home, 316 Avenue H. If donations cannot be delivered to Mrs. Hart, a telephone call to 1092 will result in delivery.

Help this worthy project today!

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE HEAT OF A LUMP OF COAL:

About 100,000,000 degrees of heat would be required to burn coals so completely that neither smoke, ashes, nor cinders remained. This temperature, the magnitude of which makes our senses reel, has hitherto been connected with astronomical hypotheses only, involving the theory of collisions between two of the brightest fixed stars. Our sun is 92,000,000 miles away and its surface temperature of about 10,000 degrees suffices to burn our skin severely even when exposed in our own moderate latitudes, in spite of the distance. Given an object 92,000,000 times closer and 10,000 as hot, its heating capacity is a mathematical deduction.

MAD MARRIAGE

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "HEART HUNGRY," etc.

©1931 BY NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GYPSY McBRIDE, 19-year-old typist, is delayed at work on the Saturday morning when she is to meet the boat bringing ALAN CROSBY home from a year and a half studying art in Paris.

Gypsy has known Crosby since the days when both of them lived at the same cheap rooming house. The couple are not engaged but there has been an "understanding" between them.

They meet on the pier and Crosby's greeting is less affectionate than Gypsy's. She sees a beautiful woman in black waving to the young man. Crosby explains casually that this is a MRS. LANGLEY whom he met on the boat. Gypsy and Crosby drive to MRS. O'HARE'S rooming house where a celebration honoring the young artist has been prepared. Just as the dinner is to be served Crosby makes a telephone call and returns to say that he must leave immediately.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III

The afternoon sunlight, pouring into the southwest windows of Catherine Langley's sitting room, sifted through curtains of pale gold gauze and fell in gleaming yellow pools on a carpet over which ancient Persians had toiled. Part of the sunlight caught in the dark green draperies which reached to the floor. Part of it fell on velvet upholstery and fine carved walnut. And some of the sunbeams—a particularly favored group—danced about the titian head of Catherine Langley who, at 34, still looked young enough and lovely enough to defy dancing sunbeams.

She was leaning back against a low, tapestry-covered divan. Her frock of sheer green crepe with dencate embroidered traceries of gold, had been cut and fitted by a designer whose name was world famous. The glowing auburn hair, swirling with careless perfection and drawn back from the ears, was like a coronet. Mrs. Langley's aristocratic face was utterly pale except for the lips which formed a narrow crimson bow. Her eyes were the green of her gown, shaded with gray.

Everything about her—from the flaming bowl of poppies on the mantlepiece to the jade ash trap on the low table besides her—had been chosen as stage properties to enhance the beauty of their owner.

Mrs. Langley's expression was thoughtful. She spoke in a low, contralto voice:

"But you must see," she was saying, "how important it is for you to know these people! They have influence and they'll help you."

Alan Crosby snuffed out his cigaret and moved uneasily.

"I know," he said, "only—I'd feel like a four-flusher. You know how lucky I think I am even to get a $50-a-week job. I'm not ashamed of it—"

"But, Alan, dear, they're my friends! And you know I do so want to help you!"

Crosby leaned toward her. "You are helping me," he said. "You have. I don't suppose you could ever realize how much you've done for me! Why, just looking at you and knowing anyone could be so beautiful is something I can't quite express."

Catherine Langley smiled serenely. Compliments pleased her.

"Then you'll do just this one little thing to please me?" she asked softly. "This one little thing—for me?"

The young man hesitated. His dark eyes grew serious.

"Catherine," he said earnestly, "you know there's nothing I wouldn't do for you! But don't you see the situation? I've got to work and make money. A lot of it. Right away. Every cent I had I spent in France."

* * *

There was silence for a moment. From beneath lowered lashes Mrs. Langley studied the tiny tip of a green kid slipper.

"You—you mean you think you oughtn't to see me any more?" Her voice was low, carefully restrained.

It brought Crosby to his feet and beside her.

"Of course not! Catherine, you can't think that! That isn't what I mean at all. It's—oh, damn it! Don't you see that's exactly what I don't mean?"

The gold lashes raised for a fleeting instant, lowered again.

"I'm afraid I don't understand, Alan," said Mrs. Langley. "Suppose you tell me."

He had taken both of her hands in his. "But I can't tell you!" Crosby explained. "I can't tell you now. It's because you're so wonderful yourself that money—all these luxuries you take as a matter of course—seem unimportant. But they are important. And they take money. That's why I've got to work. You'll let me come to see you just the same, won't you? Not at parties, Catherine, but evenings when we can be alone? Times when we can talk together the way we did in Paris! That's the way you can help me. You understand, don't you?"

The vanity which was the chief force in Catherine Langley's personality had been stirred. She raised Crosby's hand and touched it gently to her cheek.

"I understand," she said, "that you are a dear boy. Is that enough?"

The gray-green eyes were guileless. It was a part Mrs. Langley had played frequently and she played it well. Young men in the early

Cotton — Cotton Market Has Quiet Trade

Cotton

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5. (AP)—The cotton market experienced a day of quiet trading and price fluctuations were narrow except near the end when there was moderate advance. Prices fluctuated with the stock market practically all day easing off during the morning and rallying moderately in the afternoon owing to some recovery in steel. Ten to 12 points from the lows were gained but 3 to 5 points of this gain was lost at the end. The close was steady at net advances for the day of 4 to 8 points.

In the late trading the market became firmer in sympathy with a late rally in stocks and active months made new highs for the session at 6.32 for March and 6.48 for May up 10 to 12 points from the early lows but eased off at the end. March closed at 6.27 up 5 points net for the day and May at 6.45, up 7 points net.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. (AP)—After showing some irregularity during today's early trading, cotton turned steadier on some fair buying and covering. Demand was promoted by reports of smaller offerings from the south and the development of a steadier tone following early declines in the stock market. March contracts sold up from 6.31@6.32 and closed at 6.27 with the general market closing quiet, at net advances of 4@6 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 1@2 point on October, but generally unchanged to 2 points higher. May advanced from 6.37@6.48 and July from 6.55@6.68 on the late trading and the close was 3@4 points off from the best on most positions on realizing.

Livestock — Steers, Yearlings In Broad Demand

Livestock

MIDWESTERN LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 5. (AP)—Steers and yearlings of light weight again were in broad demand at mostly steady prices but offerings scaling above 1100 lbs. found a weak 25 lower outlet. Dividend Reductions And Suspension Fail To Disturb Stock Market Action

BY JOHN L. COOLET

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. (AP)—A couple of important dividend reductions and the suspension of a member firm failed to disturb the stock market seriously today.

Prices firmed in the last hour after a previous sag and by the close losses had generally been reduced to fractions or eliminated entirely. The net change in the averages was a loss of one-tenth of a point. Domestic corporation bonds were mixed. United States governments were conspicuously soft, but foreign obligations tended to higher levels.

Trading in stocks was dull, the smartest activity appearing on the upturn as nervous shorts covered. Washington dispatches reporting the progress of the reconstruction corporation bill through the early legislative states in the senate were no doubt helpful. Wall street would like to see this measure rushed through, believing that so liberal a dose of restorative would do much good.

Grain

FORT WORTH GRAIN

FORT WORTH, Jan. 5. (AP)—Cash demand, good.

Quotations ranged as follows, basis carloads delivered Texas Gulf ports, export rate, or group three points, freight paid:

Wheat, No. 1 ordinary hard milling 58@59; No. 2 hard 13 per cent protein 60@61; 14 per cent 64@65; 15 per cent 68@69; 16 per cent 72@73.

Sorghums, No. 2 milo per 100 lbs. 72@74; No. 2 kaffir 69@71.

Basis delivered group one points: Corn, No. 2 mixed 41@43; No. 2 white 43@45; No. 2 yellow 44@46.

Delivered group three: Oats, No. 2 red 24@25.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. (AP)—Evidence of stamina showed itself in grain values today and wheat closed with a substantial advance at the highest point reached.

Among the strengthening factors were a decrease of 2,296,000 bushels in world's available stocks of wheat and a railroad forecast indicating a Kansas wheat crop 100,000,000 bushels smaller than in 1931. A bullish construction was also placed on statements credited to Chairman Stone of the federal farm board that the board had no funds left for stabilization efforts in the open market, and would not ask congress for more.

Wheat finished firm, 1-2 to 1 1-8 up. Corn at 3-8 to 5-8 gain, oats 1-4 to 3-8 advanced, and provisions carrying from 2 cents decline to a rise of 5 cents.

OBJECT TO MERGER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5. (AP)—Organized railway labor today protested to the interstate commerce commission against one phase of the proposal to unite eastern railroads into four systems.

Four organizations filed a petition objecting to the plan to allocate the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville railway to the Baltimore & Ohio.

How Fatal Blast Tore House In Two

A terrific blast . . . . then, like a huge shell, the three-ton locomotive boiler shown upper left ripped through the Woodstown, N. J., house pictured below, literally cutting it in two. Though the explosion of the boiler, which had been used as a still, killed two unidentified men, it left unharmed the ten persons sleeping in the nearby house. Betty Danner, upper right, rescued several members of her family from the ruins of their home.

Humorous Club Program Given At Lion Meet

Humorous addresses, readings and musical numbers were included on the program of the Lions club ladies' night program at the Hotel Hilton ballroom Tuesday evening.

Ben Kucera, chairman of the program, presented by J. W. Jackson, related in humorous fashion information purportedly gained about Lions club members through detective work. Kucera mentioned every member of the club in his talk. The influence of ladies over men also was treated in light vein by Robert H. Bean. The musical program included: Piano solo, Nannie Jo Haymes; vocal duet, Harrison Monroe and Miss Beulah Dunn, accompanied by Miss Myrtle Dunn; violin solo, by Woodrow Montgomery. A reading was given by Miss Wildred B. Sherrod.

The program was directed by the unmarried members of the Lions club. Besides Kucera, others aiding in the affair were Charles Reynolds, Dr. Walter Howard, Vernice Ford and J. W. Jackson. Forty Lions and about 40 guests were present.

Fourteen British workmen who have been making a tour of Russia presented a tractor to the Soviet government as a gift towards the Five-Year Plan.

Texas Tech Girls May Attend Meet

W. D. Girand, sr., past commander of the Tasker H. Bliss camp of Spanish-American war veterans, has been appointed to confer with President Paul W. Horn and other Tech officials regarding plans to send a group of Texas Technological girls to Sweetwater to sing at the state convention of the veterans.

J. T. Stanfill has been installed as camp commander for 1932, and other new officers: W. E. Kercheval, senior vice commander; J. M. Davis, officers of the guard; J. V. Sworer, officer of the day; J. H. Watkins, adjutant and quartermaster, and Will Luce, chaplain. J. J. Niehoff and Percy B. Ralls, two other officers elected, will be installed later.

The Lubbock camp recently completed its first year, being organized in 1931 with 15 charter members. Every Spanish-American war veteran of Slaton is a member. Quartermaster Jack Watkins of Slaton has reported.

Thurman Hill Says Wilbur Is Evasive On Oil Tariff

TOPEKA, Kas., Jan. 5. (AP)—Thurman Hill, member of the Kansas public service commission, said today he had received an "evasive" reply from Ray Wilbur, secretary of the interior, to this query whether Wilbur and the administration favored a tariff on oil.

"Wilbur's reply," Hill said, "clearly demonstrates he is not in sympathy with the mid-continent producers. In answer to my question on a tariff he is as evasive as a greased pig."

Bonds Returned

Through his attorneys, promised to recover the stolen bonds if Nebraska dropped his prosecution. We wanted to be "washed up."

He had an alibi. While the band of machine gunners were surrounding the Lincoln bank Sept. 17, 1930, and shrieking their way out of town with the sirens of their automobiles clearing a path, Winkler said he was in Buffalo, N. Y. The officers checked his story and found it true. The robbery indictment was dismissed.

Today Mr. Barkley went to the office of R. C. Saunders, chief of the detective department of the State Illinois Bankers association, for the final scene of the drama. Another denouncement, loss of the bonds forever, might have had serious effects upon the Lincoln bank and its seven affiliates.

Saunders said the recovery reduced the tremendous loss to a mere $10,000 or $15,000 and even this may be trimmed by eventual restoration of stolen securities which have been traced and are being sought through attachment proceedings against the present holders.

Credit Proposal

doorstep before many days pass, but in what exact form remains a question.

Both Have Proposals

Both branches have proposals for human relief tagging not far behind those for business rehabilitation. John Barton Payne, Red Cross chairman, assured a house committee today his organization would undertake distribution of the 40,000,000 bushels of far board wheat which the senate yesterday voted should go to the unemployed.

Use of federal dollars to alleviate hardships was advocated to a senatorial committee by Representative Huddleston, Alabama Democrat. He said down his way "it is as hard to get into a poor house as it is to get elected to office."

Tariff Has Place

The Democratic tariff and tax issues had their place in the day's session. Vehement Republican objection to action by the ways and means committee today on the general tariff bill sponsored by the Democrats preceded a decision to hold it over, pending some testimony by experts. A peek at the party's tax plan in the making was given by Representative Rainey, majority leader, in the statement that sales levies will be included.

As to the navy, Secretary Adams testified to representatives drafting a building bill that his department favors a ten-year plan. After hearings on the $616,000,000 Vinson ship program, the house naval committee will go into reports of defective work on the airship Akron.

Leasing of the federal power plant at Muscle Shoals was favored before the house military committee by S. F. Hobbs, chairman of the Hoover commission which recommended against government operation. For the Alabama plant to be run by the government, he said, would be a "tragic economic blunder."

Report On Roads

This report is furnished daily by the South Plains Automobile club, local branch of the American Automobile association.

Plains Traffic

from the low of 25 degrees to 31 Tuesday afternoon. The 6 o'clock reading was 28 and one hour later the thermometer registered 27.

Storm Widespread

The winter storm is wide-spread over mid and southwest states, the Associated Press reported, and the weather bureau in Kansas City forecast northwest winds. Isolated towns, blocked roads, a fatal train wreck, dismissed schools and a threat of floods in rising rivers, have resulted from the snowstorm and preceding heavy rains which visited parts of Nebraska, Minnesota, Western Iowa, Western Missouri, Central and Southwest Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico.

The snow reached its maximum depth of 18 inches at Guymon in the Oklahoma Panhandle where great drifts stopped motor travel. The Washita river left its bank near Pauls Valley, Okla. At Sallisaw the wreck of a Kansas City Southern passenger train, which killed Engineer E. Benjamin, was attributed to rain- induced landslides. In Western Kansas prairie towns were reported snowbound in blinding storms Tuesday.

In Texas the Trinity river reached flood stage near Dallas by a rise of 11.7 feet in 24 hours. The snow was general throughout New Mexico, extending into southeastern Colorado where from 8 to 10 inches fell.

The temperature reading at 10 o'clock, the South Plains Pipe Line company reported, was 26 degrees in Lubbock, after the mercury had stood at 28 at 8 and 9 o'clock. The wind quieted between those hours and the temperature rose one degree. At 10 o'clock, 19 was registered at Canyon and 31 at Midland.

Most of the landowners in northeastern Brazil are still using oxen.

Trial Witness Is Fined For Contempt Of Court In Cit

Roy Hagood, subpoenaed as a witness in the case of W. D. Bostick alias W. T. Rogers, charged with illegally carrying a weapon, was held in contempt of county court Tuesday afternoon and fined by Judge E. L. Pitts.

Attachment for Hagood's arrest was issued when he did not appear in court yesterday, Judge Pitts said. Bostick, who faces a charge of possession of intoxicating liquor, was given a continuance of his trial in county court because of absence of Hagood as a witness.

Reid Dodson was acquitted of charge of swindling by a worthless check in an instructed verdict give by Judge Pitts after the defendant had introduced evidence to show he had money in the bank at the time of the alleged misdemeanor.

So that it may share in the Hospital Sweepstakes of Dublin, Irish Free State, the health board of Mayo proposes to place 100 beds in the disused county jail and open it as a hospital.

MAD MARRIAGE

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "HEART HUNGRY," etc.

Twenties (Crosby was 24) found that clear gaze devastating.

There was a wordless instant. Then he caught her in his arms. Crosby's lips were pressing kisses on Catherine's cheeks, upon the flaming, painted Cupid's bow that was her mouth. Over and over again he kissed her.

"Catherine!" he whispered at last brokenly. "Oh, Catherine!"

She drew away slightly. A faintly mocking quality came into the woman's smile. She knew so exactly how to time her moods. This young artist would not only be a handsome escort but he was proving manageable. It would all be as easy as she had hoped.

"There will be other times," she reminded him, rising. "And we will have evenings together—as in Paris. But my little party this evening—you'll come?"

Crosby nodded.

"Of course I will."

Mrs. Langley moved toward the mantel and drew one of the scarlet tulips from the amber bowl. Then she turned about, toying with the blossom. She could see her reflection in the mirror across the room. She was pleased with the reflection.

* * *

The young man waited, watching. Now he arose.

"I wish I could paint you as you are, standing there!" he exclaimed. "Lord, Catherine, you're beautiful! There's no one like you!"

She waved aside his words. Always there was purpose beneath the silken exterior of Mrs. Langley's manner but that purpose was deftly concealed.

"Let me see if you mean that," she said quickly. "Will you do me a favor?"

"You know that I will."

She paid him with a smile. "Very well. Then you can paint me. I will pose for you any time you say. The favor is that you are to move from that wretched downtown rooming house. Remember, you've promised."

"I'll have to find a place as cheap."

"You can do that. There are a dozen neighborhoods to choose from."

"They've—they've been awfully nice to me down there."

"Whom do you mean by 'they'?"

"Why—the woman who runs the place. The others who stay there."

Mrs. Langley smiled. "That proves you need me to see you're not imposed upon," she said. "It's only that I want you to be comfortable so you can do your best work, dear. Is that so dreadful?"

He agreed that it was not. He would move within the next few days. Anyway before the end of the week.

Crosby left the apartment with the promise to return at seven o'clock. They were to attend a dinner party with friends of Mrs. Langley.

Gypsy McBride spent that Saturday evening in her tiny fourth-floor bedroom. She had waited downstairs until late afternoon when Alan came in. There had been a few words between them and then Gypsy made excuses. Something in friends. No one noticed that after the girl had climbed the stairs to her room she did not go out to dinner.

For three years now that room with the sloping ceiling and two rear windows had been Gypsy's home. She had moved to Mrs. O'Hare's as soon as she had been able to give up the flat in Brooklyn after her father died. Jerry McBride's insurance paid his burial expenses, one month's rent, a few scattered debts, and left $300 in the bank. The city editor of the newspaper on which Jerry had been a copyholder for eight years gave Gypsy the letter of introduction which had brought about her employment as a typist by the MacNamara Electrical Supply company. The business training she had received in high school was meager preparation with which to earn a livelihood, but Jerry's daughter had inherited some of her father's pluck.

That Saturday evening—alone in her dreary quarters—was one of the occasions when Gypsy had need to call upon this inheritance.

She sank down upon her favorite seat—a little old trunk pulled before the windows and covered with gay floral cretonne. The windows were closed and Gypsy raised one of them to its full height. The fresh cool air was comforting. She took a deep breath and leaned her arms against the window sill.

In the west the sun was shining but its light was hidden by the housetops. There was a single tree in the small square of rear yard which Gypsy could see and a line hung with laundry. In the house across the way there were lights and a woman moving about the kitchen.

Downstairs the girl knew Alan Crosby was dressing for dinner. He had spoken vaguely of spending the evening with "people he met in Europe." Nothing at all about when he was to see Gypsy. Not even excuses. Nothing at all about when they were to exchange news and gossip as, in letters, Alan had said he was so eager to do.

Gypsy rested her head wearily against the casement. She had reached the inevitable conclusion and there was no doubt about it. Alan had changed.

That, unfortunately, was not the worst of it. The worst of the situation was that Alan had changed and she had not.

Gradually the sky darkened. More lights blinked in the opposite building and the odor of cooking food reaching Gypsy's nostrils. Even then she did not think of eating. There were crackers and cheese and a jar of marmalade in the square tin box on the table across the room but Gypsy did not think of them. Neither did she switch on the light. Darkness was a blessing.

Gypsy did not know what time it was when at last she arose, slipped out of her clothing and prepared for bed. Not until her head reached the pillows did the tears come. Then she wept bitter, choking sobs. She wept until exertion quieted her. Crosby's neglect gradually became less of a tragedy. He would explain it all when she saw him tomorrow. Alan would make it seem very silly of her to hae been so miserable. Comforted, at last she slept.

Sure enough, the following morning her hopes were justified. It was 11 o'clock. Gypsy was coming up the stairs after breakfast and a walk. As she passed the third floor landing Crosby's door opened. The young man appeared, smiling.

"Gypsy!" he called. "Wait a minute—I want to see you!"

Texan Considered As Island Leader

(Special To The Avalanche)

AUSTIN, Jan. 5.—The prospective resignation of Dwight Davis as governor general of the Philippine Islands has caused the Texas friends of Dr. George C. Butte, former dean of the law school of the University of Texas, to discuss the possibility of his being appointed to the vacancy. At present, Dr. Butte is vice-governor of these overseas possessions of the United States. Governor Davis is now in this country and Dr. Butte is temporarily filling the office. According to newspaper reports that have come from Manila from time to time, Butte has already won a popular place in the hearts of the people of the island, and his appointment as governor general would meet with general approval. His governmental policies are said to be in line with those of the Hoover administration.

Dr. Butte's advent into politics was when he became a candidate for governor of Texas against Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson in 1925. His campaign attracted national interest and brought to him the recognition of being appointed attorney general of Porto Rico. Following his service in that position he became connected with the Attorney General's department of the United States. He was appointed vice-governor of the Philippines several months ago. Dr. Butte is a graduate of the university, having taken his bachelor of arts degree in 1903 and his master of arts degree in 1904.

Rum Leader Is Facing Charge

Mavin J. Clark Is Being Held In Louisiana; Is Reputed To Be Head Of Rum Running Syndicate On Gulf

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5. (AP)—Accompanied by U. S. Deputy Marshals, Marvin J. Clark, reputed leader in a rum-running syndicate alleged to have handled shipments from the I'm Alone and other runners in the Gulf of Mexico, was taken to Opelousas, in the western district of Louisiana, today, to be arraigned in the federal court.

He must answer to two indictments, one of which named him with a dozen others in connection with the seizure of a box car load of liquor marked rice near Gueydan in 1930 and the other linking him with the group reputed to have received shipments from the Canadian boat I'm Alone, whose sinking in 1929 by the coast guard led to diplomatic exchanges between the United States and Canada.

Clark said here last night he would plead not guilty to the charges and his counsel would move for reduction of his $40,000 bond, which he has been unable to make since his arrest in late December at a remote fishing camp near Morgan city.

Federal officials indicated they would strenuously oppose reduction of bond and might seek to have a higher figure set.

Philip Mecom, U. S. district attorney for western Louisiana, in New Orleans late yesterday en route to Opelousas, said he would move to have Clark brought to trial at Lake Charles at the earliest possible date on the Gueydan conspiracy charges. He was not prepared to say when the I'm Alone smuggling conspiracy would be brought to trial.

All of those indicted in the Gueydan case, except Clark, were rounded up in 1930 and tried at Lake Charles, receiving fines and penitentiary terms which were affirmed in the U. S. supreme court two months ago. Dan Hogan, alleged leader of the group, and two of his associates forfeited a total of $50,000 bonds by failure to appear for commitment after the high court affirmation.

Kansas City Southern Train In Wreck; Engineer Killed

SALLISAW, Okla., Jan. 5. (AP) — The Kansas City Southern's northbound "Flying Crow" struck a rock fall on a curve six miles north of here today and the engineer was killed when the engine and baggage car plunged into the Sallisaw river.

E. Benjamin, Heavener, Okla., the engineer, was pinned beneath his locomotive in the river. Fireman Bill Hartman, also of Heavener, and one passenger, Mrs. Ed Brennan, Kansas City, were slightly hurt.

All of the passengers were accounted for and none other than Mrs. Brennan was injured.

A wrecker, called from Heavener, had cleared the track shortly after noon but the engineer's body had not been recovered.

Father Of Water Is Really Great And Not An Ogre

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 5. (AP)—Father Mississippi is often pictured as an ogre but he really is a generous rich uncle who shares his fortune with the valley folk. He gives willingly of his silt that makes the land and if there were no floods there would be no delta.

High water often is a blessing to the adventurous planters who carved a cotton domain from the side of the great river, knowing full well their homes are at the mercy of the river. To them the reward is worth the gamble.

The Mississippi delta is a strip of alluvial land that spreads from a few miles south of Memphis almost to Vicksburg and west to the reaches of the Yazoo and Sunflower rivers. It was born in an overflow and has grown by the constant piling of silt.

Rich plantations dot the gumbo land which produces the famed long staple cotton and the white owners and negro toilers are trained for flood emergencies.

Overflows are given three classifications—freshets, which mean inconvinence, high water, which spell danger, and flood, which are catastrophies.

The delta now is experiencing high water.

Levees protect the plantations and towns. The embankments generally break because they are undermined. Sand boils, outbursts of water which bubble behind the levees, give the warning and people evacuate their homes.

While men wearing gas masks repaired a gas leak in a busy street of Glasgow, Scotland, recently, police formed a cordon around the spot and ordered pedestrians to stop smoking.

The Difference Between COLD and COMFORT

A Single Match

floods the room with glowing heat

The striking of a match and the turning of a valve is the only difference we may immediately realize. But to produce comfort instead of cold requires several hundred miles of pipe lines and an army of men who work diligently at their task of furnishing you with good gas service.

Gas Service

Eternal vigilance on the part of all employees is necessary to insure you against discomfort in such weather as the recent cold waves. Daily in the face of beating storms, through ice and snow and over wind-swept roads, employees carry on—for on them is the responsibility of preventing an interruption of the unfailing gas service you have come to expect.

Two Local Children Are Recovering From Exposure; Trio Is Found Safe

The two children of Herman Seeds were recovering last night from exposure suffered when they, their mother and a hitch-hiker, a friend of the family, were forced by motor trouble to spend Monday night on the highway several miles south of Abernathy.

Mary Jo, 4, contracted colds, her father said last night, but the boy, William Allen, 2, apparently is all right. The group, befriended by an unknown motorist, arrived here at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning after having been on the highway enroute to Lubbock since 3:20 o'clock Monday afternoon from Happy.

The automobile stalled in mud and snow after the clutch had been burned out with heavy pulling behind a truck after sliding off the pavement.

Although robbery was feared here on learning that a hitch-hiker had been in the Seeds car, Seeds said this morning he was glad the young man had been with the three. The motor was kept turning, to aid in warming the car's interior, until the gasoline supply was exhausted. The occupants bundled themselves as best they could and waited arrival of another automobile. Early this morning, an Abernathy man drove on the road and the hitch-hiker flagged him. Daylight had arrived before the stranded travelers resumed the trip.

School By Radio Is Chicago Idea

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. (AP)—Chicago school children may not get out of their lessons after all, even if the city's schools are closed for lack of public funds.

They may have to go to school by radio.

This became a possibility when the Chicago Tribune offered not only facilities of newspaper space but broadcasting time on its radio station, WGN.

The suggestion for the radio school was made by John W. Hansel, jr., of suburban Winnetka, vice-president of N. W. Ayer and company, an advertising concern.

Under the plan, the lessons would be outlined in the newspaper each morning and hours would be assigned for children of various ages to listen. As an example, third grade lessons would be discussed at one specified time, followed by the higher grades.

Superintendent of Schools William J. Bogan approved of the idea.

Prison Record Of Albert B. Fall Is Sent To Washington

SANTA FE, N. M., Jan. 5. (AP) — The prison record of Albert B. Fall, whose case is before the federal parole board, is described by Warden Ed B. Swope of the New Mexico penitentiary as exemplary.

Warden Swope has sent the record to Washington at the request of the board. He declined to say whether specific recommendations with regard to a parole were appended.

During his five months at the penitentiary, the former secretary of the interior department, sentenced to a year's imprisonment and a fine of $100,000 on conviction of accepting a bribe, has been confined to the prison hospital under the care of a male nurse. Physicians said he had been incapacitated by the complications of various illnesses.

Former Husband Of Actress Asks $131,000 As Counter

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5. (AP)—The courts will decide who is debtor and who is creditor in the financial affairs of Pola Negri, Polish film actress, and her former husband Prince Serge M'Divani.

Answering Miss Negri's complaint that he owes her 2,000,000 francs, or approximately $80,000, the prince yesterday filed a counter claim against her for $131,000.

The answer asserted Miss Negri owed the prince $106,000 on a loan and promised to pay him 10 per cent of her earning, no part of which has been paid. He said he believed her earnings since March 26, 1930, when the agreement allegedly was made, entitled him to $25,000 at least.
