Lebanese Death Toll Rises As Shells Fly

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops fought fierce artillery duels with right-wing Christian Lebanese militias, Monday, in the heaviest fighting since the end of the civil war here, 19 months ago. About 100 people have died since the fighting started, three days ago.

The warring factions agreed to a cease-fire late Monday, and fighting subsided

The mostly Syrian Arab-League forces entered Lebanon two years ago to end the civil war between the rightists and an alliance of Palestinians and leftist Moslems and stayed to maintain the peace.

Buildup Continued

However, the rightists continued to build their armed forces over the past 20 months and have balked at increasing restrictions from the Syrian peacekeepers since the November 1976 truce.

Syria accuses some Christian leaders, particularly former President Camille Chamoun, of trying to expand their power by fomenting instability and of maintaining an unwritten alliance with Israel in southern Lebanon.

"The Syrians now have the rightists in their grip and they are not going to let up until the militias agree to bow to their authority," said Farid Naja, a veteran Lebanese journalist.

Monday's fighting, limited to heavy shelling but no street-to-street battles, eased during the day after constant overnight barrages sent Syrian tank and artillery shells slamming into the Christian sector of east Beirut. The shelling picked up again late Monday afternoon.

45 Dead, So Far

Approximately 30 Lebanese were killed Monday, and 15 more died from wounds suffered the previous two days, according to Lebanese police and hospital sources. Some 300 have been wounded. Syrian casualties are not known.

Most of the 600,000 Christians in east Beirut remained huddled in basement shelters as Christian militiamen manned sniping perches and mortar positions. Syrian troops prevented east Beirut civilians from escaping from their enclave, witnesses said.

Police said ambulances were prevented by the heavy firing from rescuing some Lebanese who lay wounded in the streets.

Smoke billowed all day from buildings in the heavily congested area along a three-mile line from the city's port to the Damascus Highway, the old civil war "green line" separating Christian and Moslem sectors.

Stray Shells Hit West

The gunfire Monday was confined to the eastern sector, but stray shells landed in predominantly Moslem west Beirut. One mortar shell landed in a west Beirut schoolyard, injuring at least 15 youngsters.

President Elias Sarkis was holed up in his palace, overlooking the turmoil, discussing with Christian and Syrian leaders how to stop the fighting. The cease-fires ordered overnight by Syrian President Hafez Assad and Sarkis were broken.

Ultra-rightist leader Camille Chamoun, whose "tiger" militias were in the thick of fighting, appealed to world powers and the Vatican to save the Christian community from Syria's "genocide."

He charged that Syria, not the Lebanese Christians, aimed to dominate this country and he vowed to "resist the Syrian offensive to the bitter end."

Pierre Gemayel, leader of the largest Christian force, the Phalangists, blamed the conflict on unspecified "alien hands moving behind the scenes to sow the seeds of discord between Lebanon and Syria at a time when the two countries need friendship and understanding more than ever."

Vice President Walter F. Mondale said in Israel Monday that Washington had asked Lebanon, Syria and Lebanese factions to stop the bloodshed. A U.S. Embassy spokesman here declined to detail American mediation efforts.

In Geneva, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim also appealed for a cease-fire.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said he "strongly supports" Waldheim's appeal for a cease-fire.

"A cease-fire is essential to stop the bloodshed and to enable the Lebanese government to resume its efforts to reduce tensions, to restore security and to establish its authority throughout the country," the statement said.

Tensions first erupted into violence last February, when rightists in the Lebanese army fired on Syrian soldiers, touching off a five-day battle that killed more than 250.

Last April, a neighborhood squabble erupted into another major Syrian-Christian clash that tock 102 lives. That led to the resignation of Premier Salim el Hoss and his Cabinet, but his government stayed on when a replacement could not be found.

Hoss has said another resignation now would serve no purpose.

Memphis Firefighters Give Okay To Back-To-Work Court Order

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Leaders of the striking firefighters' union agreed in court Monday to a back-to-work order that could end a three-day, arson-plagued walkout that created a civil emergency and idled garbage workers in this city of 800,000.

The union scheduled a meeting for 8 p.m. CDT to brief the rank-and-file on the order, which was to take effect at 7 a.m. Tuesday. Union lawyer Allen Blair predicted in court that the firefighters would comply as long as they were allowed two informational pickets at each of the city's 51 fire stations.

In a 10-minute Chancery Court hearing before Chancellor Robert Hoffman, lawyers for Local 1784 of the International Association of Firefighters and the city settled on the order allowing informational picketing and the resumption of normal fire department operations.

Representatives of the city's 1,225 firemen, who struck Saturday for higher wages, had thrown up picket lines at sanitation yards, Monday, prompting the garbage workers to remain idle. Blair said garbage workers would be free to cross informational picket lines.

Mayor Wyeth Chandler said the firefighters' walkout was illegal and violated a no-strike clause in the old contract — even though that contract has expired and there is no Tennessee statute forbidding municipal strikes. Hoffman denied a similar request Friday because union representatives were not present.

Chandler also accused the firefighters of setting many of the more than 300 arson fires that erupted over the weekend. A leader of the firemen's union denied the local had anything to do with the blazes.

No deaths or serious injuries were reported in connection with the fires.

Refused To Cross

The city's 1,100 sanitation workers — who had approved the same wage increase the firemen rejected — refused to cross firefighter picket lines that were set up Monday morning at sanitation depots. The garbage workers are members of Local 1733 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

The Rev. James E. Smith, director of the garbage workers union, said, "I think we have to honor those picket lines as long as they stay." At least 12 garbage trucks, most manned by supervisory personnel, made rounds Monday, and Chandler was considering moving more vehicles out of the depots, beyond picket lines.

The 1,200-member Memphis Police Association is also without a contract but pledged no strike. It did not rule out such action as a slowdown, however, and held a news conference to accuse the city of bad faith in negotiations. A contract vote was set Monday night.

Fires Break Out

At least 220 fires, most in abandoned buildings, broke out Saturday night, the first night of the strike.

Emergency crews, including 860 activated National Guardsmen, tried to protect the town, but they were hard pressed. Many fires were contained and left to burn. City officials blamed arsonists and said that two of the four men arrested so far for arson are firefighters.

Sunday morning Chandler declared a civil emergency and clapped a 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew on the state's largest city. On Sunday night, 105 fires burned.

Fire Director Robert Walker said Monday that one Sunday fire, in an abandoned grain elevator south of town, was "the most spectacular fire we've had in the last 20 years, at least as far as flame production."

In response to Chandler's charge that the strikers were trying to "burn the city down," Sam Posey, union vice president, said the local had told its members that "we do not condone this (arson.) We act like professionals. We are definitely not doing this."

Asked whether he could say definitely that no strikers had set any fires, Posey replied:

"I can't say that. There are 1,400 firemen. I can't control 1,400 people. But as

Court Ousts Ohio Capital Punishment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court sent a message to every state Monday as it struck down Ohio's capital punishment laws, finding them too inflexible in deciding life or death for convicted murderers.

By a 7-1 vote, the justices invalidated the laws under which 99 persons had been sent to Ohio's death row. Those inmates — representing about one-fifth of all death row prisoners nationwide — now are free from previously imposed death sentences.

The first state to feel the effect of Monday's ruling may be Arizona. In a somewhat puzzling order, the justices set aside the death penalty of a condemned Arizona murderer who had challenged the state's capital punishment laws.

Restudy Ordered

They told the Arizona Supreme Court to restudy the case of Paul William Jordan in light of Monday's Ohio rulings, even though none of the issues raised in Jordan's appeal parallel the issues in the two Ohio cases decided.

Closing out its term with a flurry of activity, the court also:

— Let stand, without comment, a lower court's ruling that there is no constitutional right to televise prisoner executions. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had ruled in a Texas case that states are free to ban television coverage of executions.

— Gave the Federal Communications Commission, by a 5-4 vote, broad legal power to restrict the broadcast of indecent language.

Ruling in the much-publicized "seven dirty words" case sparked by the playing of a George Carlin recording on the air, the justices said the FCC lacked the power of prior censorship but could punish the broadcast of such language.

"Affirmative Action"

— Acted in a series of cases related to its momentous decision last Wednesday in the case of Allan Bakke, possibly giving the nation further clues of its attitude toward "affirmative action" aimed at offering special help to women and racial minorities.

— Left intact sweeping federal court orders to alleviate overcrowded and decaying conditions in Alabama's prisons. State officials called U.S. District Judge Frank Johnson's 1976 orders the most abusive intrusion ever by a federal court into state affairs.

— Refused to interfere in a still-pending lawsuit growing out of antiwar dem-

Lamesa Having Birthday

Lamesa will be celebrating more than the 4th of July as its residents will be observing the town's 75th birthday. The festivities start with motorcycle races at 4 p.m. in Forrest Park, which will be followed by a parade of children, clowns and bands through the park.

Muleshoe will be kicking off one of the earliest Fourth of July celebrations with its annual pony express ride from Needmore to Muleshoe set to get underway at 7:30 a.m.

Area Holiday Due To Be Warm, Dry

A-J News Services

TORNADO-spawning storm systems late Monday threatened to douse plans for outdoor Independence Day celebrations today, but weather forecasters expect stormy weather to stay clear of the area at least through Wednesday.

A confirmed tornado north of Tye about 5 p.m. caused minor damage to a few barns, carports and utility poles, while no damage was reported from the second twister, near Elmdale about 10 miles east of Abilene. No injuries were reported.

Winds gusting above 60 mph also were reported in Abilene and marble-size hail was reported in Slaton and Southland.

However, most of the remainder of the region north of an Andrews to Abilene line and south of a Muleshoe to Memphis border, reported only minute traces of rain.

The National Weather Service said the ridge of a Bermuda high pressure cell off the east coast of South Florida would continue to pump warm, humid air into Texas. That system's connections with an upper level disturbance and strong daytime heating triggered Monday's scattered storms.

Today, the same system will still prevail over all of the state, but forecasters

Increase In Oil Price Looms At Year End

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A rise in world oil prices seems inevitable at the beginning of 1979, ending a two-year period in which they have changed little.

Production already is dropping, and there are press reports that Saudi Arabia and Iran are meeting in secret to decide whether to press for increased prices even before next year.

Three factors emerged at a recent meeting here of the 13 nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, the group that accounts for more than half the world's oil production:

—The decline of the dollar on international money markets and persistent inflation in the costs of goods that OPEC members import have reduced the 13 countries' income in real terms, as opposed to strictly money terms.

Anger At Carter

—The possibility that President Carter might levy import taxes on OPEC oil has angered the members. As one oil minister said here, "Why should money (from higher oil prices) go into the American treasury and not into the Iraqi treasury, for example."

—Efforts in the industrialized world to cut back on oil consumption have not been as thorough as needed. There are many arguments about "how long the oil will last," but there is widespread agreement that higher prices could and should force more effective fuel savings.

The apparent inevitability of an oil price rise being decided at OPEC's next regular meeting in December was underlined by Ali M. Jaidah, the group's secretary general, who said after the meeting that there would be a price "revision" next year. "Revision" is a sort of OPEC code word for "increase."

The leading "dove" on prices within OPEC has been Saudi Arabia, which is OPEC's largest member and has the largest known oil reserves in the world.

The Saudi oil minister, Shiek Ahmed Zaki Yamani, supported by the United Arab Emirates, has pleaded for two years that the industrial world could not absorb price hikes.

Now, however, Yamani and his Emirates colleague, Mana Saeed Otaibah, are suggesting that a price rise is possible in 1979 if the market permits it.

The standard price for a 42-gallon barrel of crude oil has been $12.70 since mid-1977. One reason for the freeze since then has been an oversupply on the market.

Every dollar added to price of a barrel of crude oil can be expected to increase retail gasoline prices by about a cent a gallon.

But this year Saudi Arabia has instituted an oil-export program that will likely reduce its large production below the "allowable" rate of 8.5 million barrels a day. Yamani said here that this "allowable" rate probably would not be reached, and industry analysts say Saudi production could be as much as a million barrels below it.

OPEC's average daily producion for the first five months of this year was 28.5 million barrels, down 2.8 million from

Texas Traffic Fatalities Soar

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

DESPITE AN alarming trend of statewide fatalities, Department of Public Safety officials say Lubbock and the broad Region 5 area generally have been spared the tragedy that has marred the Fourth of July holiday for many Texans.

But, they warn, motorists in the region face one of the most dangerous periods of the 5-day holiday today, as drivers begin making their way home after sundown.

As of 8 p.m. Monday, 38 persons had died statewide in traffic accidents — a figure second only to California — and DPS officials in Austin were fearing that the state's final death toll might exceed the 53 projected deaths.

Of the 38 killed, only two had died in the Region 5 area that extends eastward to near Fort Worth, south to O'Donnell and west to the New Mexico line, in addition to comprising the entire Panhandle area.

Maj. C. W. Bell of the Lubbock DPS headquarters said 245 troopers will looking out for unsafe drivers in the area today, an increase of 42 patrol cars over normal workdays.

Sgt. O.C. Guthrie said he had been in contact recently with troopers in the field and noted that problems associated with the July 4th holiday had been minor.

"The traffic seems to be lighter (than usual)," Guthrie said. "Not any heavier than a normal weekday. The traffic has been moving along real well."

Just as other law enforcement officals have cautioned, however, Guthrie noted that the peak traffic on the region's highways should come sometime today.

Motorists should "allow plenty of time" to travel home, Guthrie continued. "Start out early and keep the speed down."

Guthrie said he had no official statistics on traffic accidents in the region, but he said the smooth-flowing traffic seemed to indicate a safer holiday period overall for the region.

Most troopers today will be stationed on the major local highways, Guthrie said, including U.S. 84 northwest to Littlefield, U.S. 62/82 east towards Idalou, U.S. 87 north to Amarillo and south to Tahoka, as well as the Brownfield and Levelland highways, Guthrie said.

He said troopers will make periodic spot checks along Farm Market roads, however.

Normal Hot Weather Predicted

The 30-day weather outlook for northwestern Texas, the Oklahoma Panhandle and the Eastern Plains of New Mexico is calling for near normal temperatures and above normal precipitation.

Maximum temperatures will range in the 90s across the area dropping to the upper 80s in the extreme northeastern plains of New Mexico. Temperatures soaring as high as 100 degrees are possible but are not expected to persist, forecasters said.

Minimum temperatures will be in the 60s with a few low 70s east of the Caprock, and the upper 50s will be the rule for the northeastern plains of New Mexico.

Precipitation is traditionally in the form of showers and thunderstorms, and during July normally tapers off a bit from the maximum monthly amounts of May and June.

However, forecasters are predicting above normal rain for July this year, expecting from two to three inches over the area but less than two inches east of the Caprock.

With the liklihood of more than usual rain, the chances for hail also increase, and hail damage may occur with some of the thunderstorms.

Irrigation requirements may be lessened a bit if the above normal rain materializes, but water will be needed at times, especially during the first part of the month, according to the National Weather Service.

According to the NWS, 24 of the 29 reporting stations observed an above average temperature for June. Most of these stations experienced an average reading from .5 to 1.5 degrees above the normal.

Maximum temperatures were quite cool during the first week of June because of considerable clouds and rain.

However, temperatures warmed rapidly during the remainder of the month, and the average maximum for the South Plains ended up at .2 degrees above normal. The range was from 2.1 degrees below normal at Hereford to 1.8 above the norm at Dimmitt.

Numerous 100 degree readings were posted from the 20th to the 26th with the hottest temperature a scorching 109 at Plainview on June 22.

Minimum temperatures averaged above normal at all but one station. The range was from normal at Levelland to 3 degrees above normal at Seminole. The South Plains average minimum was 1.5 degrees above normal, and the lowest monthly temperature was 51 degrees at Morton on June 3.

The NWS reported that precipitation was above average but variable because of the nature of the scattered thunderstorm activity so prevalent during June.

The South Plains average was .82 of an inch above normal with a range from .90 below normal at Lubbock to 4.10 inches above normal at Tulia. Tulia also had the greatest precipitation monthly total with 7.47 inches, the NWS said. The lowest monthly total was 1.87 at Big Spring.

Hobby Gives Views On Tax Bill Rules

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Monday he has "serious doubts" about Gov. Dolph Briscoe's proposal to require a two-thirds vote of the Legislature to enact a tax bill.

Hobby told an impromptu news conference that past House votes indicate if the two-thirds requirement had been in effect over the past 20 years, no tax bill would have been passed.

"I think it is an unnecessary tying of the hands of the Legislature," Hobby said.

EEOC Record Retribution Goes To Firm

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The head of Datapoint Corp. says the firm is expecting to receive the largest retribution ever made by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission after a federal court ruling against the EEOC.

U.S. District Judge John Wood signed the final judgement last week ordering the EEOC to pay Datapoint $66,540 plus interest for legal fees the company paid in defending itself against class action discrimination claims by the EEOC.

Wood said the claims against Datapoint were "frivolous, groundless, brought vexatiously or brought unreasonably."

EEOC filed a suit against the computer manufacturing firm in April 1974, charging Datapoint with across the board discriminatory practices against blacks, Mexican-Americans and women.

Wood ruled in favor of Datapoint in 1976 and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans affirmed the decision in May.

Agents Put Snuff On Fireworks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer Product Safety Commission agents prowled the nation's highways Monday in search of powerful Fourth of July fireworks — cherry bombs, ashcans and aerial "salutes" — outlawed more than a year ago.

Commission inspectors seized $5,700 worth of illegal devices at two roadside stands near Rockport, Mo., last week, an agency official said. He said at least one other seizure was expected in Wyoming.

The ban on sales to consumers of very powerful explosives largely was responsible for a 16 percent drop in fireworks injuries across the nation last year, federal officials said. But they also warned all fireworks — legal, illegal or homemade — can pose serious hazards.

"Scores of individuals, many of them youngsters, are killed or maimed each year by homemade fireworks and pipebombs," said a representative of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. He said even legal fireworks can cause injuries when used carelessly or by unsupervised children.

Paul Galvydis, a compliance officer for the CPSC, said inspectors from his agency's 13 regional offices were spot checking roadside fireworks stands to see if they could buy the illegally powerful "M-80" explosives under-the-counter.

The inspectors, who do not carry weapons, usually ask the local sheriff to actually take possession of the fireworks rather than wait a day for a federal warrant to e issued, Galvydis said.

Violation of the federal regulation — a misdemeanor — usually also is a violation of local or state law, he said, and police have never refused to cooperate with the agency. In the Missouri case, the federal inspectors were tipped by the sheriff's office, he said.

In December 1976 the commission banned the sale for consumer use of "M-80" devices, a category that includes cherry bombs and aerial bombs commonly known as "salutes." Officials said such explosives are capable of blowing off fingers or hands if used carelessly.

Galvydis said injuries fell from 9,000 in 1976 to 7,555 in 1977, the first full year in which the ban was in effect.

"The industry said it sold almost as many (fireworks) in 1977 as in 1976, so the trend appears to be injuries going down and a lot of it is due to the regulations," he said.

Fireworks permitted under the federal regulations include firecrackers with less than 50 milligrams of powder, cones, fountains, missiles, smoke devices, sparklers, roman candles, wheels, mines and shells.

Many of the devices that are legal under the federal regulations are banned by state law. Fifteen states prohibit all consumer fireworks, and another 14 ban everything but sparklers and "snakes," carbon-based devices that expand along the ground when lighted.

The federal ban does not apply to sanctioned displays run by governments or service groups.

Ignorance Aided Tax Cut Vote

DALLAS (AP) — A widespread ignorance of how public schools are financed contributed to the landslide success of California's property tax initiative, Proposition 13, the head of the National Education Association said Monday.

Statistics gathered in an NEA survey indicate that few voters were aware of the full impact that reduced property tax revenues would have on local school districts, said NEA president John Ryor.

Ryor discussed the survey results at the teachers' 116th annual convention. The 9,000-member group, the nation's largest professional organization, was to hear later in the afternoon from the Rev. Jesse Jackson, a black leader who heads Operation PUSH in Chicago.

Proposition 13, approved nearly 2-1 by California voters last month, limits property taxes as of July 1 to 1 percent of market value, reducing revenues statewide by an average 57 percent.

"It is a mistake to infer lack of support for education or teachers from lack of support for raising money through property taxes for schools," Ryor said. "The major problem does not lie with the schools but with our inequitable, inefficient system of financing them."

Ryor stressed that NEA had supported increased federal funding of education as an alternative to excessive reliance on property taxes long before taxpayer revolts erupted across the country.

"The federal government with its broad tax base must lift the burden from property owners by providing a significant share of funding of locally controlled public .schools without unnecessary strings, or those schools will not be able to stay open," he said.

Only 11 percent of the West Coast residents questioned for the survey, based on interviews with a cross-section of 1,504 persons across the country, correctly responded that the federal government contributes less than 10 cents of every dollar spent on education in the nation's public schools, said Ryor.

Ryor also lashed out at proposed legislation to give tuition tax credits to help subsidize the cost of private schools.

"If they would take that $500 per student ... and spend it on improving the public schools of this nation, then we could do the jobs we've been asked to do all along," he said.

Guerrillas Claim More Casualties

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Somali guerrillas Monday claimed to have killed nearly 500 Ethiopian troops and many Cuban soldiers in a new flareup of the Ogaden bush war.

The Ethiopian government in Addis Ababa acknowledged the growing insurgent threat in the Ogaden by establishing a special war study commission to try to combat the menace.

Radio Mogadishu broadcast a series of battle communiques from the Western Somali Liberation Front operating in the Ogaden that claimed major victories in three battles in the last few days.

The guerrillas said they killed 250 Ethiopian troops and "many Cuban soldiers" who supported them in a June 24 clash near a major government radar base at Jijiga.

In a separate battle on a main desert highway linking the towns of Imay and Godey, the insurgents said, they killed another 185 Ethiopians. In a third clash on June 23, they claimed 46 enemy dead and many others wounded near the important military town of Degahabur.

The guerrillas also said they destroyed an enemy tank, three armored cars and several trucks.

Independent military observers generally have dismissed guerrilla claims as highly exaggerated. But Ethiopia acknowledged the growing Somali threat in the Ogaden, where earlier this year Ethiopian troops aided by several thousand Cuban regulars routed the full Somali army.

Radio Addis Ababa said Ethiopia's ruling military junta established a "war preparations study commission" Monday to try to find ways of combating the guerrilla threat.

Ethiopia said it was forced to form the commission because "of the damage inflicted on human life and government and private properties by the Somali forces." It urged the mainly Somali population of the region to help the government by supplying information about the raiders.

Since outright war between the two countries ended earlier this year, Ethiopia has repeatedly warned Somalia.

Nixon, Townspeople Benefit From Visit

HYDEN, Ky. (UPI) — Richard M. Nixon's weekend visit was a success for both Hyden residents and the 65-year-old former president.

For the small southeastern Kentucky coal town's 500 residents, the two-day visit was a momentous occasion attracting worldwide publicity. It was also an opportunity for this Republican stronghold to greet the man many here claim was the best president in history.

For Nixon, who left the White House in 1974 in the wake of the Watergate scandal, the visit was a chance to emerge from his four-year exile and briefly relive the finer moments of his six-year presidency.

Throughout his stay, Nixon was treated with the deference usually reserved for sitting presidents. A red carvet at the airport, two 21-gun salutes and three motorcades highlighted his arrival and speeches.

The crowds were somewhat disappointing. Pre-arrival estimates projected about 5,000 people at the London-Corbin Airport and up to 15,000 people at the ceremonies dedicating the recreational complex named in Nixon's honor. About 700 appeared at the airport and close to 5,000 at the complex.

In terms of enthusiasm, however, the citizens of Hyden and surrounding communities compensated for their small numbers. Welcome signs were placed in almost every storefront window. Others proclaiming "Nixon's the Man — 1980" and "We stand together. We're grateful Mr. Nixon" were carried by supporters.

The occasion also gave Nixon the opportunity to deliver his first public speech since his August 1974 resignation. Cheered on by supporters, Nixon attacked the Carter administration's foreign and domestic policies.

The only group disappointed by the visit was the news media, some of whom complained of abusive treatment by Nixon's Secret Service contingent and unsatisfactory press arrangements.

Ray Barris, 63, of nearby Monticello, summed up the visit. "I think it's a good deal for everybody," he said. "It's paying an honor to a great ex-president. I think he's a great man. I feel honored to be in the crowd to hear him."

Negative News Bothers Third World Nations

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Western news media are moving to redress an imbalance in the flow of information between rich and poor nations but still carry "too many negative" stories about Third World countries, UNESCO Director-General Amdou-Mahtar M'Bow said Monday.

"I don't think that the developing countries are wrong in complaining," M'Bow said in an interview. "It's the fact that some news media in the industrialized countries either ignore them (Third World countries) or carry too much negative news about them. I think there should be another conception of what news is."

He also charged that ignorance and prejudice on the part of "some" Western correspondents have led to inaccurate news reporting from the Third World.

The U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization has been studying ways to improve the balance of the world's information flow — a move some Western nations have contended would reduce freedom of the press in the world.

M'Bow, a Senegalese, denied that UNESCO's efforts to help create national and regional news agencies are in any way aimed at regulating the international flow of news.

"This is another product of those journalists with preconceived notions," he said.

He noted that problems concerning news collection and dissemination are being studied by a 16-member international panel headed by Nobel Peace Prize winner Sean MacBride of Ireland. An overall report is expected to come before the UNESCO general conference in October.

OUR PLEDGE

We pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, under God, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all.

AN EDITORIAL:

July Fourth--Two Years Later

IT WAS ONLY two years ago that on July Fourth millions across this nation participated in America's 200th birthday celebration and shared an outpouring of Faith...

At that time, in the wake of one of the more traumatic events of the country's history, Watergate, a people seemed to arise from the ashes of despair, disappointment and near defeat to clasp hands, join shoulders and sing again the praises of Liberty.

TRULY, IT was a nation reborn...

Today, two brief years later, in some ways we seem beset by problems and challenges which refuse solution, invite dissension and pose threats for the future.

Controversy rather than cooperation appears to be the hallmark of men who should know better. Suspicion and greed walk hand in hand with crime and terror in the streets.

A steadily shrinking world thrusts ever new concerns on our shores, once the haven for the world's "tired, poor, huddled masses yearning to breathe free..."

TO LISTEN TO some, not only have we shut "the golden door" but we have extinguished "the lamp" at home and for those abroad...

Perhaps as we enjoy the freedom of this holiday, we should not only seek to recapture that Spirit which prevailed in the 200th Birthday of this nation, but reflect on how it came about in the first place and the idea prevailed.

As has been the case through the history of Mankind, it was men, acting as individuals and in concert, who "made things happen."

It was a group of courageous men from all walks of life who finally wrote and issued the Declaration of Independence.

And it was men from all walks of life who gave their lives, their fortunes to see that the thought survived.

TODAY, IT MAY sound simplistic to say so, but if we seem to fail, it is because we as individuals and as a body of Americans are failing to act.

In a nation noted for its leadership, its belief in itself and its leaders, we have failed in some respects to hold aloft the Torch of Liberty handed down from past generations. In so doing, we have risked losing sight of the goals for which all men yearn, the dreams that can be, faith in ourselves.

But, it is not yet too late. As the clank of the bloody armor of a Godless Communism echoes in ever widening circles, there is still time to rededicate ourselves to the promises and pledges of the past, the hopes of the future.

Take a few moments today to think what this nation means to each of us. Then join in a silent prayer to keep it that way!

AN EDITORIAL:

Three Outa Four Try It Again

ONE YEAR'S statistics do not a long-term trend make, of course. But population experts are finding last year's unusually low 2 percent increase in sundered American marriages ve-r-r-y interesting.

Since 8 to 12 percent was the annual rule during the preceding decade, the experts are reading such a slight change as virtual stabilization of the divorce rate.

And some go so far as to predict an imminent downturn, as already appears to be occurring in one bellwether state in national mores—California.

THE STATISTICS may be definite enough but, as The Wall Street Journal notes in a lengthy analysis of the development, what is to be read into them is not.

A slow but steady increase over recent years in the median age of both men and women entering first marriages could have something to do with it since, statistically, very young marrieds are the most likely to break up.

Attitudes toward divorce may be changing. As it has become more commonplace and socially acceptable, it may also have lost some of its aura as the great solver of marital problems.

Economics may be involved. Generally improved conditions, particularly for households with two wage earners, could be a factor in reducing marriage strains.

On the other hand, the cost of separation has gone up along with everything else, which could give some couples second thoughts about going their own ways.

AND THERE is the possibility that the continuing popularity of nonmarriage as a life-style is having its effect.

The Census Bureau puts the number of cohabitations without legal formalities at about 1 million. If the establishment of these households does not show up in the statistics, neither does their dissolution.

Whatever the explanation and eventual trend, divorce is still far from going completely out of style. Stabilized rate or not, the 1977 divorce total still topped one million.

But even among the divorced, marriage remains very much in—three out of four try it again.

ANDREW TULLY:

Back Then, Any 4th Was A Yankee Doodle Dandy!

(Editor's Note: This column first appeared in July 1970. It is reprinted by request.)

WASHINGTON—The Flag was up in the attic in the white house on South Street. Ma packed it away in lavender in Grandpa Tully's big leather-bound trunk after every holiday.

Every holiday was fun for a boy living in a small Massachusetts town in a simpler day, but the Fourth of July was special.

It was at once a day for celebrating Independence and for giving royalty the back of one's hand.

FOURTH OF JULY started for the boy when he was shaken out of sleep by his father shortly after dawn. "Come on," Pa said. "Time to put out the Flag."

Rubbing his eyes, the boy followed his father downstairs to the kichen. Pa was already shaved and dressed—white shirt, blue tie, gray suit, but the boy was barefoot and in pajamas.

The boy went into the back kitchen and took a quart of Bill Bouvier's milk out of the ancient chest with the lift-up lid, shaking the bottle as he came back into the kitchen to mix the four inches of cream at the top.

AS THEY ATE THE bacon and eggs, and toast crunchy dripping with butter, Pa reminded the boy that the resolution declaring America's Independence was passed on July 2, 1776, not July 4.

The document was adopted on July 4, he noted, was merely an explanation and defense of the action taken two day earlier.

"Tom Jefferson was a better writer than Richard Henry Lee," Pa would say. Jefferson, of course, wrote the July 4 explanation, while Lee wrote the resolution declaring independence from King George III. The boy knew that by heart because he had lived with his father quite a few years.

HUNGER SATISFIED, father and son climbed the narrow stairs to the attic. ("Got to get his junk off the stairs," Pa complained.) Then, while Pa fussed with the flagpole and cord, the boy opened the trunk and took out the neatly folded Flag.

He passed it to his father, making sure it didn't drag on the floor, then held one length of the cord while Pa threaded the Flag through the other.

"All right, put it out there," Pa said. And the boy gave the cord a stiff yank to draw the Flag out into place on the staff, then held it there while his father knotted the cord to the pole.

They stepped back and stood there for a few seconds. "Looks fine, doesn't it?" Pa said, and the boy said, yes, it looked wonderful. "Then I guess we can wake up the neighborhood," Pa said.

THIS WAS THE moment the boy had been waiting for. His father reached into his pocket and took out a red five-inch firecracker. The town's by-laws prohibited the sale of any cracker bigger than an insipid two inches, but Pa was a man of the world. He knew a dealer across the state line, in Quinebaug, Conn.

Pa struck a wooden match on the attic floor and lit the fuse. Then he tossed it out the window, high into the air, timing the action so the explosion would come just as the firecracker fell past the Flag.

The bang was always magnificently loud. Even firecrackers were made well in those simple days. Pa always boasted that the explosion "woke up every Protestant in the neighborhood." If the bang didn't, Pa did when he bellowed for a whole town to hear: "Consternation to the enemies of the Republic!"

Overheard: "Would you love me just as much, honey, if I didn't have money?"

"I certainly would—but I'd miss you!"

Letters to the Editor

Lubbock Man Puzzled Over Recent Decisions At Tech

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Your series of articles concerning Texas Tech has been extremely interesting and particularly revealing. It seems to me that someone out there is bound and determined to make Tech an "also ran", athletically, in the Southwest Conference.

This is especially true, in view of Frank Elliott's seeming philosophy of "second best". I'll never understand his appointment as Chairman (oops! excuse me Dr. Mackey) Chairperson of the Athletic Council. There are a lot of things I don't understand. I certainly don't understand the Board of Regents sitting idly by and allowing these things to happen. I will give them credit for their stand on the beer on campus issue; one in which Dr. Mackey should have remained neutral.

I am not a graduate of Tech, so perhaps it is presumptuous of me to be critical of the policies and procedures of the University. I do, however, have a son attending Tech who is involved in the athletic program, so perhaps that gives me license to voice my opinions.

It is interesting to note that Dockery was chosen over Wilson "to maintain continuity of the program". What continuity was maintained when Frank Elliott was named to chair the Athletic Council; a University of Texas lawyer with six months tenure? What continuity was maintained when Dick Tamburo was named AD when men like our own John Cobb and Marvin Tate from Texas A&M were rejected?

It will take years for Tamburo to command the following and attain the knowledge Cobb or Tate has...

I am not personally attacking Dockery and Tamburo. I am sure they are both fine gentlemen. The point I am trying to make is that Tech is not getting the best men available close to home for the job. Why? Is this a part of the maturing that Dr. Mackey was to effect? Could it be that control is more important than performance?

Obviously, I don't know how to run a University, but being an ardent sports fan, I do know what it takes to maintain fan support interest...A Winning Program! What better way than a good athletic program to bring Tech nationwide coverage that we otherwise would not have. If something isn't done, and soon, our big year in football will be beating TCU and Rice.

I think the next few years are going to be indicative of just how important knowing how to recruit really is...It takes time to build rapport, to know where to go, how to talk, when to talk. Why don't we hire people who have this knowledge rather than people from Tennessee and Illinois?

We have lost two excellent men in John Cobb and Jess Stiles. You don't replace men like that. When they don't fit into the present program, however, what other choice do they have but to get out? The enigma is that when Tamburo was asked about hiring new coaches, he said the first place he would look would be in the Southwest Conference. Too bad the persons who hired him didn't think along those lines.

I disagree with Mr. Deaton. If I were able to make a sizeable contribution to the Tech athletic program, I would certainly expect my voice to be heard in matters concerning that program. I don't blame the man (referred to in Mr. Deaton's letter) for giving his money to some other college or university. It seems that the decision makers don't want input from anyone. That attitude will ultimately result in their downfall.

Woman Would Put Signal Gates At Rail Crossings

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Why are there no signal gates at our dangerous railroad intersections? These intersections are so busy that the warning lights can easily be overlooked, and with one's car windows up, air conditioner running, and radio on, the train whistle might not be heard.

If a signal gate had blocked the tracks on June 26, two young lives might have been saved.

In addition, I frequently see cars sitting on the railroad tracks while waiting for the traffic lights to change on Slide Road and Quaker Ave. With the possibility of a signal gate coming down on these cars, perhaps they would stop safely behind the tracks when there is not room in front of them.

Surely the cost of these gates could be justified by the lives that might be saved and the injuries that might be prevented.

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I have just finished reading your editorial Friday, June 23, entitled "Teachers Pay Hike Ill-Advised".

You say it is unrealistic for the LCTA to be asking for additional pay raises out of local taxes. To me it is unrealistic for them not to ask for pay raises.

Parents, and I am one, expect the people who teach their children to be above reproach, to be available to discuss their childrens problems at their convenience, not the teachers, to shape the minds and morals of their children and to have the patience of Jobe with kids the parents themselves cannot handle at home.

I would say 99 percent of all teachers are loving and caring people and willing to go that extra mile to help our kids in anyway possible, but dedication does not put money in the bank. I think it is about time people realized just how much hard work and time teachers put into teaching little Johnny how to read and write.

I know—I happen to be married to one besides being President of P-TA at Stewart Elementary, where I might add we have the finest teachers and principal to be found. I have just one question: where would any of us be without teachers?

There are not many professions that I know of where an education is not required. I know taxes are unreal, and we are all upset about them, but why not cut back on some of the other things local taxes pay for and give the teachers at least half of what they deserve—there is no city or state in the country that can afford to pay them what they really deserve?

ACC Boxes Voted 'Dry,' Not 'Wet,' In Election

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

The Associated Press story datelined Saturday, June 17, 1978, from Abilene, Texas, stating that boxes near Abilene Christian University voted 85 percent for unrestricted liquor sales in Abilene was completely in error.

Our boxes were 85 percent against unrestricted sales and not 85 percent for, as AP reported.

Inasmuch as the position of Abilene Christian's friends and supporters has always been against liquor sales, I would appreciate your personal attention to running this as a new item or as a letter to the Editor.

'New Look' At Tech Has Local Supporter Upset

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Just a quick note to thank you for your recent articles covering the Texas Tech Athletic program. There are many who are concerned about the "new look" in the Texas Tech Athletic situation. Your articles were objective, informative, enlightening and frightening as we view Tech's future in athletics.

I took the liberty to zerox your four articles and mail them to interested friends of Tech in other states.

Better Upkeep At Airport Is Urged By Traveler

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

In recent visits to Lubbock's newly constructed multimillion dollar Airport, I have been appalled to notice the lack of janitorial attendance given the building and the facilities therein.

I am sorry that a building of such beauty and one that is so nicely furnished should be neglected in such a way. The restrooms are marred with graffiti, carpet throughout the waiting area is stained so badly that I doubt if it can be cleaned, and the security check point couldn't have been cleaned in weeks.

I understand that the airport has lately been handling an escalated amount of traffic, but there can be no excuse for the filth which I have observed time and time again.

The City is now talking about using more tax dollars to expand on the existing airport parking lot. I for one, do not want my tax money to be wasted if proper maintenance is not going to be observed.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Spy War Bats Till

CONGRESS IS talking poor-mouth about high prices and higher taxes, but three weeks ago the House okayed new funds for intelligence gathering without any idea of how much money it was approving.

There were a few protests about voting in the dark, but intelligence committee members, who are the only ones who know, insisted the total had to be kept hush-hush to avoid jeopardizing our worldwide snooping system.

But it runs into the big digits, you can be sure of that. Thanks to space-age miracles, the best Mata Hari around now is the supersensitive electronic bug. And that kind of espionage costs billions. Every year.

THE BLIND-BUDGET appropriation, however much it is, would keep our national spy system—the CIA, the FBI, the Defense and State department agents and the National Security Agency—in the James Bond business for another year.

And probably the heaviest chunk of the money will go to the super-secret National Security Agency, which most Americans probably don't even know exists. They pay for it, though: more than $1.3 billion a year.

It's the biggie in the spy field at the moment, now that CIA and FBI agents have been so curtailed by scandal and publicity they've almost had to turn in their trench coats. With their cover blown, NSA has emerged as the government's most important source of foreign secrets.

IT HAS ELECTRONIC eavesdroppers around the world that intercept messages from space, air, land and sea. It cracks the codes of other nations, and dreams up the codes that protect American secrets.

Codes so incredibly complicated that, according to the NSA, they've never been cracked by foreign intelligence.

And a good thing, too, with the way the old spy game has been heating up lately.

What's happening is that Soviet spies are beginning to operate more boldly and our government is striking back. With the result that Moscow has accused the U.S. of violating an unwritten rule of diplomatic protocol by (are you ready for this?) actually arresting two Soviet spies—and then giving the story to the newspapers.

IT'S ALL RIGHT, apparently, to kick a spy out of the country as long as you don't tell anybody. That's playing the spy game by the rules, as we did last December when a Soviet diplomat was expelled for dabbling in a little espionage on the side.

But last month we nabbed two more in the United Nations, slapped them behind bars and set bail at $2 million each. Gromyko didn't like that. Before you could say "what's the password?" Russia expelled an American diplomat.

In retaliation, the United States sent home a consular officer. Moscow police promptly arrested an American businessman.

AND SO IT GOES, somebody discovers an electronic bug in the American embassy in Moscow, the United States expels a few more Soviet "diplomats," a high-ranking Russian quits his post in the United Nations and promises to spill plenty about what Soviet spies in the United States are up to.

Some of it may even be news to the NSA. But with 20,000 experts in its nine-story headquarters at Fort Meade, Md., plus thousands more manning listening posts around the world, not much gets by its electronic ears.

Whenever any foreign official sends a message by telegram, telex or computer, NSA's computers intercept it. They scoop up microwave transmissions from the atmosphere and catch any communication returning to earth from multimillion-dollar satellites in space.

ABOUT THE ONLY spy gadgetry NSA doesn't have is a computer that can understand the spoken word and print out the message. And that's only because it hasn't been invented yet. NSA still has to use human ears to monitor phone calls and other conversations.

But, one way or another, it collects massive data on potential enemies in case of war. Like what new weapon the Russians are working on and what the Kremlin bunch talks about among themselves.

NSA's coding system is the most sophisticated in the world and can be built into an electronic device smaller than a matchbook. It takes a message, mixes it up, divides it in half, adds the "key" to one half, mixes the two halves back together, and runs the whole thing through a series of "gates" that prevent any code-breaker from working back through the system.

THEN IT REPEATS the process 16 times, which is probably why our codes have never been cracked. Or so we think. It's possible that somebody might, some day, come up with a computer that could do it.

But it would cost millions and, say the experts, it would have to test a million code keys every second for 2,284 years and nine months to check every possibility.

Scrambling our codes takes only a few microseconds. And, along with all our other spying tricks, costs an untold number of megabucks.

Which may be why our congressmen didn't ask how much. Information like that could ruin a man's whole day.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

MILTON HERSHEY of Lancaster, Pa., made millions of dollars in the caramel candy business. Still, he had little faith in caramel. In the late 1890s, he sold out, went into the chocolate candy business, and proceeded to make millions of dollars more.

It was a judgment call. He was completely wrong about caramel, yet completely right about chocolate. Other men so confronted with crucial decisions have gone broke. Not Milton.

Chess Not Only Thing On Line

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A representative of Soviet defector Victor Korchnoi said Monday that even if the chess master's family isn't allowed to emigrate — and even if he doesn't have a flag to play under — Korchnoi will battle his arch-rival Anatoly Karpov for the world championship in two weeks.

The 47-year-old player, who defected in July 1976 while on a chess tour in the Netherlands, has asked to use the Swiss flag in his match against Karpov, 27.

Korchnoi has been living in Switzerland since his defection. He has also asked that his family, now in the Soviet Union, be allowed to join him in the Rules of the World Chess Federation require that the player display the flag of the country he is representing.

Korchnoi has played without a flag in his last three matches because he couldn't agree with federation officials about a suitable banner.

He has suggested in the past using a white banner with the word "Stateless" written across it. His assistant, Petra Leeuwerick, suggested at a press conference Monday that Korchnoi use the Soviet flag with the words "I escaped" imprinted over it.

"A sportsman should play under his national flag," said Viktor Baturinsky, vice president of the Soviet Chess Federation and the head of Karpov's delegation. "If Mr. Korchnoi now is a citizen of some country...(and) has a passport from that country, then he can play under the flag of that country."

Korchnoi's aides refused to say whether he has a Swiss passport, but sources said he has only a residency certificate.

On the matter of his family, Korchnoi said in Zurich before he left for the Philippines that he had written an open letter to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev demanding that visas be granted to his wife, Bela, and his 20-year-old son, Igor.

The two had applied for the visas in 1977, but were turned down.

Miss Leeuwerick said Korchni will play even if his family isn't allowed to join him.

But he has decided not to take part in a rematch required by the federation if his family isn't allowed to emigrate, she said.

At stake is $550,000, the largest prize ever offered in a world title match, with $350,000 earmarked for the winner. The match begins July 18 in Baguio City, a mountain resort 130 miles north of Manila.

Korchnoi's flag, or lack of one, will be decided July 14 when Max Euwe, federation president, and the match's arbiters meet for discussions.

But Baturinsky said the question of Korchnoi's family may not enter the discussions.

"It's not in the competence of the Soviet Chess Federation to consider the question of the family of Mr. Korchnoi," Baturinsky said. "I don't know what the federation will think or do about it, but I don't think it's a question of chess."

Georgia Relaxes Law On Donating Bodies

ATLANTA (AP) — So many Georgians are donating their bodies to medical science that beginning later this year the state will make the practice easier.

By September, Georgians who take a driver's test will be asked if they wish to donate their bodies to medicine. Those that do will be issued a wallet-sized "pocket will" verifying their wishes. If someone changes his or her mind, the card must simply be destroyed.

Escaped Boa Constrictor No Threat, Owner Says

DELTA, British Columbia (AP) — Crusher is a very nice snake, says Brian Nelson, who wants very much to get back his 6½-foot pet boa constrictor.

Nelson, 17, said Crusher slipped away from his family's backyard Saturday. The result was a fruitless weekend search by neighbors and police in this Vancouver suburb.

"He might give you a pretty tight hug, but he's harmless," Nielsen said. "I normally keep him in a tank, but sometimes we put him out in a chestnut tree in the backyard. He likes it there, and we can keep an eye on him.

"But on Saturday I was working on my car and I forgot about him. I guess he slithered away when my back was turned."

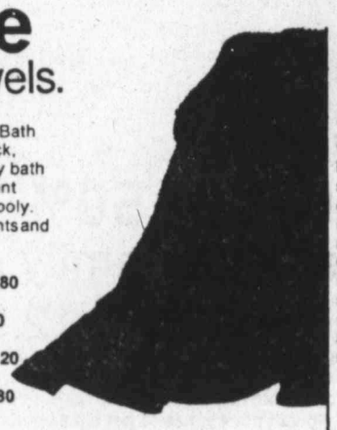

Experts say boa constrictors don't harm people, but one of Nelson's neighbors was having none of it. She shut herself in her house, closed all the windows and said she wouldn't come out until the snake was found.

Police Probe Beating Death

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — An investigation by city police is continuing into the death of Avote Allen Alsup, 58, of Fort Worth, who was found beaten to death here early Saturday near the Texas and Pacific Railway tracks.

Three suspects have been charged with murder after being arrested by the Midland Sheriff's Office when a train was halted and searched a mile east of that city's fairgrounds.

Police said a number of tests are being conducted, including one to see if blood found on the shirt of one suspect matches the blood type of the victim.

Services for Alsup are pending with River-Welch Funeral Home here.

He was a World War II veteran and had served in the Marines. He was at Pearl Harbor during the Japanese attack in 1941.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Thelma Keith of St. Joseph, Mo.

TICONA PUPFISH EXTINCT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1½-inch Tecopa pupfish is extinct, a victim of man's carelessness, a federal environmental official says.

The pupfish was done in by pollution, channelization and introduction of non-native predatory fish to its native habitat, Assistant Interior Secretary Robert Herbst said Sunday. "The most depressing thing about this loss of life is that it was totally avoidable," he said.

Jackson Raps Bakke Decision

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson described the Supreme Court's Bakke decision Monday as "most devastating" and disagreed with other minority rights advocates that it was a victory for both sides.

"If you have five and I got four, I know who won," the 36-year-old minister said, referring to the court's split decision to admit Allan Bakke to the University of California at Davis Medical School.

In an emotion-charged speech before the 9,000 delegates at the National Education Association convention, Jackson included Bakke and "Bakkeism" among the major threats to education today, also citing Proposition 13-type property tax referendums, lack of student effort and parental detachment from the schools.

Lashing out at those who contend the Bakke decision is restricted to admission policies at universities, Jackson asserted its influence will spread to employment affirmative action programs. He cited a police department program in Chicago that he said already has been challenged in court as a result of last week's Bakke ruling.

The court's decision that race may be considered as a factor in admitting students — while strict racial quotas cause unfair reverse discrimiantion — reduces blacks as a minority to the same catagory as European ethnic groups, Jackson said.

"Race was an absolute basis for slavery. It cannot be an accidental part of the solution," said Jackson, who has gained national acclaim as director of Operation PUSH, a group whose aim is to improve black educational achievement. Jackson said blacks must fight the Bakke decision if affirmative action programs do suffer and be "willing to engage in direct action just as 20 years ago we fought for our dignity when the object was a hamburger and a Coca-Cola."

Jackson coupled the Bakke ruling with the passage of Proposition 13 in California as examples of current challenges to a broadening of the base of educationl opportunity in the United States.

He stressed that racisim and classism were significant factors contributing to the measure's landslide victory and its success was indicative of a radical shift to the right in the mood of the country.

"There is a genuine need for tax relief," he said. "But if we do it in anger and a spirit of punishment, we will not resolve the problem but only extend the crisis."

He said many teachers and others voted for the measure out of anger and as a result, voted against their own interests. He used cancellation of summer school in many California districts as an example.

"It will cost more in vandalism at vacant schools than it will cost to educate those children this summer," he asserted.

In his speech to public school teachers, Jackson harked back to his often-repeated theme that parents and teachers must work together to motivate students and to educate them morally as well intellectually.

Store Snacker Faces Charge

SEAT PLEASANT, Md. (UPI) — Supermarket snackers beware: That tasty morsel sampled at the neighborhood grocery could mean a shoplifting charge.

Jacqueline Datcher, 33, of Washington, D.C., faces 18 months in prison or a $500 fine on her conviction for eating two strawberries while shopping at a suburban supermarket. She will be sentenced Aug. 7.

"I felt so bad when they said I was guilty," she said. "I mean, if I was really going to steal something, why would I pick a strawberry?"

Witnesses said they saw her open a cellophane package of strawberries, finger two of them and pop them into her mouth. Store manager James Cypress testified he heard a clerk offer her the opportunity to pay for the two berries. It was that testimony that apparently swayed the jury.

"We felt that she had been given the opportunity to redeem herself, but she chose not to," one juror said.

"I know the whole thing sounds so facetious, and that everybody does it, but the strawberries did belong to the store, after all, and she should just have paid for them since she was caught."

Nations Agree To Maintain Amazon Area

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Eight South American countries signed the Amazon Pact Monday, pledging cooperation to develop natural resources in the vast river-region and to preserve its natural environment.

Foreign Ministers of Brazil, Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Guyana and Surinam signed the document in the Brazilian capital.

All eight are directly affected by the 4,000-mile-long Amazon and its tributaries that weave through millions of square miles of virgin territory and have 12 times the annual flow of the Mississippi.

Brazil had pressed for the treaty, which guarantees "the broadest possible freedom in commercial navigation of the Amazon River and other international rivers of the area."

It calls for the building of highways to link the river basin to the eight countries and "rational use of the flora and fauna ... to maintain an ecological balance and preserve its various species."

Referring to the dozens of Amazon Indian tribes, including many untouched by Western civilization, the pact would preserve the area's "ethnological and archaeological wealth."

Some development projects, such as Brazil's hydroelectric dam on the Tocantins River tributary, threaten to force Indians from their traditional hunting grounds.

Brazil has encouraged development of the Amazon Basin, cutting back the jungle for farming settlements, highways, dams and mining operations, and there have been clashes between the Indians and settlers. But overall the inroads have been slight.

The largest city in the basin is Manaus, 700 miles west of the delta where the Amazon flows into the Atlantic Ocean in northern Brazil. Manaus has a population of one million, but still is not accessible by automobile.

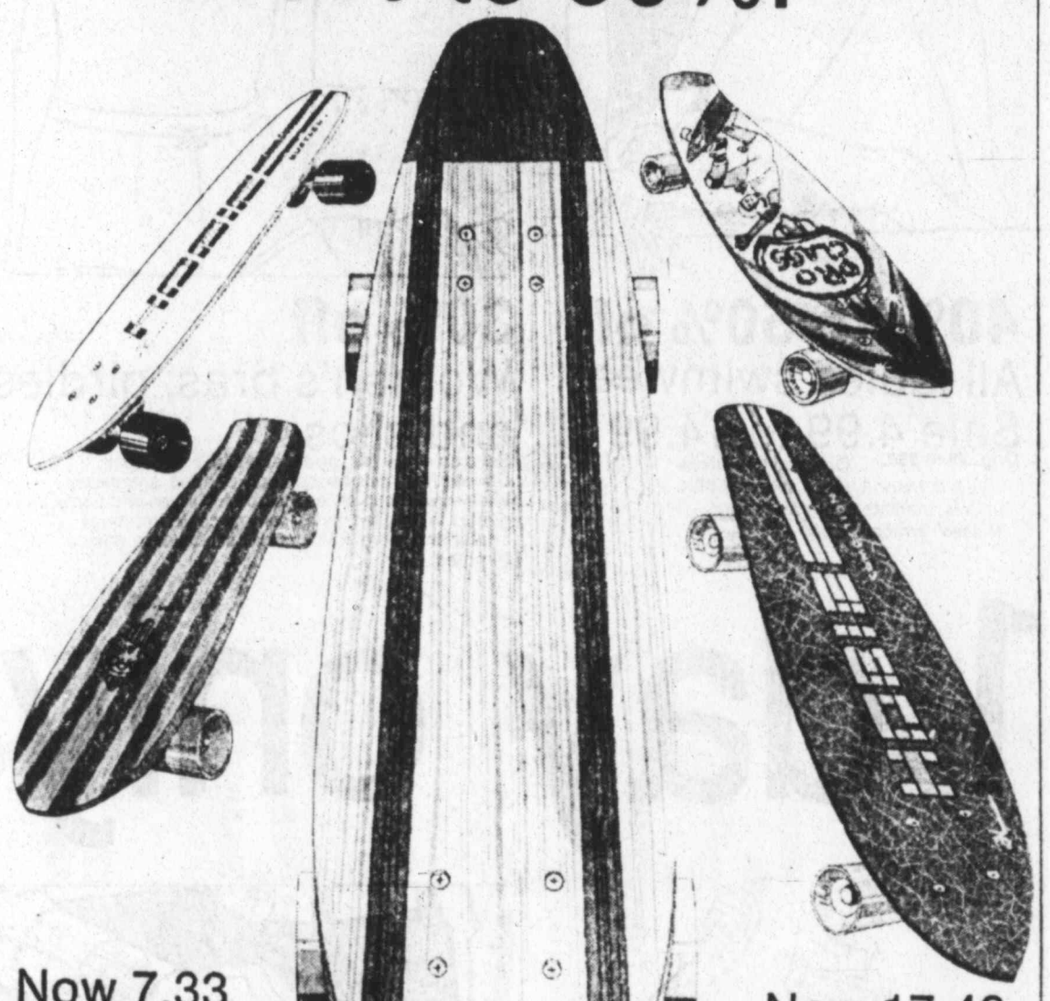

Under the pact, a "physical infrastructure" is planned, with transportation and communication networks joining the eight nations through the basin's tropical forests.

Member nations are to have national commissions for development of the area and an Amazon Cooperation Council of ranking diplomats is to meet annually and evaluate progress.

The council is to rotate its meetings among the capitals of the eight countries and is empowered to recommend conferences at the foreign minister level.

The treaty was distributed in four languages — Spanish, Dutch, Portuguese and English. Spanish is the national language in most of the countries, but it's Portuguese in Brazil, Dutch in Surinam and English in Guyana.

Reds Aim At High Farm Goal

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev said Monday the Soviet Union has achieved substantial agricultural success in recent years but needs greater effort to increase farm production and improve living standards.

Among the problem areas he touched on in a speech to the opening session of the Communist Party Central Committee meeting were meat production, mechanization and reducing the differences between the lives of rural and urban workers.

The official news agency Tass carried a 10,000-word summary of Brezhnev's speech to 280 top party officials meeting for two days before the start of Wednesday's session of the Supreme Soviet, or parliament.

Western diplomatic observers said the speech broke no new ground but they considered it significant that Brezhnev used the occasion to focus solely on agriculture, one of the trouble spots in the Soviet economy.

The thrust of this speech, as of several he made on the subject during a trip through Siberia in April, was that Soviet farmers must produce more and inefficiences and bottlenecks must be eliminated.

Brezhnev said he was devoting his entire speech to agriculture so party officials could see the problems, and decide how to use funds allocated to this sector more effectively and to mobilize people so the goals of the current five-year plan can be met.

Brezhnev said that over the first two years of the plan, which runs until 1981, grain production averaged 209.6 million tons but there were still shortages, particularly of fodder grain for livestock.

These shortages have forced the Soviet Union to make up the shortfall with purchases from the United States and other Western countries.

Brezhnev said fluctuations in grain output had a negative effect on animal husbandry and a top priority is increase meat production.

"The present level of animal husbandry does not meet the rapidly growing requirements," he v said. "To achieve a new upswing a sharp turn is necessary in the attention to this sector by the whole party, government, collective and state farm managements and workers on them."

Meat traditionally has been a target for production increases in Russia. The average Russian eats 128 pounds of meat a year, or about half as much as the average American.

Pursuing the need to raise meat production, Brezhnev made another pitch for private plots for farmers. He v supports the idea as a way of boosting production, but some segments of the party are uncomfortable with it for ideological reasons.

Brezhnev said mechanization of Soviet farms must increase to keep up with production volume. He said he did not have time to go into detail but asserted agriculture had to be put on an industrial basis where transport was concerned.

The Soviet leader said "an abrupt turn" must be made toward rural construction and improving conditions for workers in agriculture so they approximate the standard enjoyed by urban workers.

He said measures have been adopted to stabilize wages and increase pensions to farm workers.

Marijuana Demonstrators Arrested In Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police arrested 13 persons near the White House and at the reflecting pool near the Lincoln Memorial on Monday during a "smoke-in" demonstration for the legalization of marijuana.

Ten of those arrested were accused of blocking traffic near the White House and of disobeying police orders. They were charged with disorderly conduct.

Two others were charged with traffic and narcotics violations after police found what they described as a "more than normal amount" of marijuana in the car in which the protesters had been riding.

A police spokesman said another person was held on a weapons charge after the arrest was made near the reflecting pool.

The demonstrators across the street from the White House repeatedly offered police officers marijuana cigarettes, but their offers were ignored.

No arrests were made until a number of demonstrators crossed police lines at Layfayette Square and walked into Pennsylvania Avenue in the direction of the White House across the street.

One man was dragged by legs, arms and hair toward police wagons in a scuffle that required five policemen to end.

Several hundred persons had gathered at Layfayette Park across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House by mid-afternoon chanting "Smoke pot," and "Take us to jail."

Others carried signs calling for the legalization of marijuana and protesting against a U.S.-sponsored program in which the cancer-causing substance paraquat was used to defoliate Mexican marijuana fields.

GUNMAN HOLDS HOSTAGES

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Five armed persons invaded the Chilean consular office Monday night, took four hostages and demanded freedom for Puerto Rican nationalists imprisoned in the United States, the FBI reported. Police cordoned off the area.

Authorities Make Child Abuse Probe

Lubbock juvenile officers, a child welfare investigator and a police identification specialist met at the Health Sciences Center Hospital Monday to continue a probe into the possible child abuse of a 2-year-old girl.

The youngster, police say, suffered burns over 60 percent of her body June 15, when she reportedly fell into 8-inch-deep, scalding water in a bathtub.

A 21-year-old Reese Air Force Base sergeant subsequently told investigators he had drawn himself a scalding bath and had gone to another room to wait for the water to cool. The youngster reportedly entered the bathroom and fell into the water while the man was out of the room.

Records indicate the child's body has been burned severely on the front and back of both legs and arms and in an isolated area on her back.

Child welfare workers reportedly are readying a petition to ask for custody of the little girl and her three-year-old brother.

Records indicate the child's 19-year-old mother has been questioned by child welfare workers in the past in reference to alleged neglect of the girl and her preschool age brother.

Authorities reportedly are investigating the isolated nature of the burns on the child's body, a pattern inconsistent with falling into water.

Students Entered In Math Contest

ABILENE (Special) — Two Wolfforth High School seniors are competing with 25 other students here in the Summer Program in Mathematics at Hardin-Simmons University.

Regan Borg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. Borg, and Matt Ryan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis M. Ryan, are participating in the six-week program which lasts until July 21.

The Summer Program in Mathematics is the seventh project designed for high school students the National Science Foundation at Hardin-Simmons University has funded this year.

'Cheeky Charlie' Furor Said To Bore Britons

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles' remark that he believes it's folly for Christians to argue about doctrinal matters — a statement seen as veiled criticism of the pope — has touched off a furious Roman Catholic-Anglican squabble in Britain.

But anti-monarchist lawmaker Willie Hamilton says most Britons are indifferent to ecclesiastical arguments and aren't very religious anyway.

"Ninety-five percent of our population are not religious at all and they get a bit fed up with remarks of people like Prince Charles on one side, and the cardinals on the other, on doctrinal matters about which they are completely indifferent," said Hamilton, a frequent parliamentary critic of the royal family.

The furor grew from Charles' statement that: "It seems worse than folly that Christians are still arguing about doctrinal matters which can only cause needless distress to a number of people."

The Roman Catholic archbishop of Glasgow, the Most Rev. Thomas Winning, interpreted the statement as a veiled insult to Pope Paul VI for his refusal to allow Charles' cousin, Prince Michael of Kent, to marry divorced Catholic Baroness Marie-Christine von Reibnitz in a church ceremony. The couple wed last Friday in a civil ceremony in Vienna.

Winning, 53, said Charles' remarks would "cause annoyance and anger to millions of Queen Elizabeth II's loyal subjects who care deeply about truth, doctrine and principle..." He accused Charles of advocating a "woolly type of Christianity" and attacked the law that bars Roman Catholics from the British throne. "I feel that the law of succession in these days is rather an anachronism ...a terrible slight to Catholics."

The British monarchy broke with the Catholic church in the 16th century after Rome refused to let Henry VIII put aside one wife and try another in quest of an heir. His daughter, Mary I, reversed the trend in her brief reign, but was Britain's last Catholic monarch. Her successor, her half-sister Elizabeth I, was a Protestant.

The Act of Settlement of 1701 ensured that only Protestants would occupy the throne. Today there are about 4 million Roman Catholics in England, Wales and Scotland.

Anglican leader Dr. Donald Coggan, who as Archbishop of Canterbury ranks just below the royal family in precedence in Britain, defended Prince Charles and said he was "making a major statement on the need for greater church unity — and as such, I think he is saying the right thing."

Asbestos Firm To Ban Smoking

TILTON, N.H. (UPI) — The Quin-T Corp. says it will pay for hypnosis if necessary, but it wants all 63 of its workers — executives included — to stop smoking.

The company, which makes asbestos-based electrical insulation, has banned smoking at the plant, effective July 24, and says it won't hire new workers who smoke.

"There were all these numbers about people who smoke and work with asbestos, and they kind of shook us a little bit," said Nuthan Hughes, Quin-T personnel manager.

Statistics show asbestos workers who smoke have a 92 times greater chance of getting cancer than asbestos workers who don't smoke, he said.

Hughes said his firm got the idea for the no-smoking policy from the Johns Manville Co., which owned Quin-T until two years ago. He said the policy has been tested in the courts and upheld.

"We think it's a movement to help the health of employees and a desirable kind of situation," said Quin-T Executive Vice President Frank Wardley. "But of course not everybody looks at it that way.

"We've had a favorable response from the union. But we've had individuals who've been smoking for a long time who don't want to give it up."

"It's discrimination," said Merrill Jackson, former president of the plant's paperworkers union. "It's infringing on the rights of the individual."

The company decided in March to impose the ban, ran a no-smoking clinic in June and timed the new policy to begin when the company's 44 plant workers return from vacation July 24.

"A few have quit smoking since they announced the ban," said Earl Griffin, 58, of Tilton, a plant worker who doesn't smoke. "I think everybody will go along with it.

"My boy smokes. He's willing to quit. He don't like it. He thinks it infringes on his rights. A lot of them think that.

"There may be one or two who will see how far they can carry it, but I think they'll go along with it," Griffin said.

Wardley bristles at the suggestion Big Brother is telling its employees what to do.

"No one criticizes us for installing safety equipment on our machines or keeping the plant free from hazards," he said. "When you have something like this, there's always a certain amount of controversy.

"We're going to offer the services of local doctors to help where our employees request help," he said. "There are some hypnotists who have had pretty good luck where people don't want to smoke.

"We have thousands of regulations — every company does — passed down by the government," Wardley said. "But they haven't attacked the problem that is one of the most serious, and that is smoking."

TWIRLING CHAMP — Dena Dean, granddaughter of two Lubbock area couples, was named Little Miss Majorette of Texas last week during the National Baton Twirling Association competition in El Paso. Dena is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Dean of McKinney. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. H.B. Hutson of Lubbock and Mr. and Mrs. H.D. Dean of New Deal.

Contest In Honor Of Twain

HANNIBAL, Mo. (UPI) — A descendant of the first settler of Hannibal will represent Missouri Tuesday in the annual fence whitewashing contest that carries on the tradition of Tom Sawyer.

Jeff Bates, 13, will wield his brush against boys from 10 other states in the competition honoring Mark Twain, Hannibal's most famous resident and creator of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn. Bates is a descedant of Moses D. Bates, who settled in Hannibal 160 years ago.

The whitewashing contest, one of several events held during the holiday weekend, will be judged on the basis of speed and efficiency as well as the costumes worn by the contestants.

After the fences are whitewashed, a frog-jumping contest will be held — the final leg of the triple crown in the world of frogs.

Held earlier in the weekend were raft races and a special Tomboy Sawyer contest. The contest was initiated three years ago as a special competition for girls who protested, complete with picket signs, against their exclusion from the whitewashing contest.

'Voyage Of The Damned' Ends

NEW YORK (AP) — The 38-year-old S.S. America ended what one of scores of disgruntled passengers called a "voyage of the damned" Monday, and within hours cast off on another cruise.

Despite the ship's widely publicized sanitary and accommodations shortcomings, only about 40 out of 600 new passengers who had signed up for the five-day voyage to Nova Scotia reneged. Passage cost upward from $249 per person.

State Assistant Attorney General Stephen Mindell said the America had received clearance for the trip from the U.S. Public Health Service "passenger safety is not in jeopardy."

Mindell said his office assigned someone to remain aboard until sailing time "to make sure everybody is accommodated appropriately ... to make sure they get the amenities they paid for."

The Panamanian-registered ship's troubles began within hours of Friday night's departure on a "cruise to nowhere" when it was brought back to New York Harbor to let off some 250 passengers who complained it was so overbooked they had no rooms and that it was infested with cockroaches and had inadequate plumbing. They also said such promised amenities as movies, a gym and swimming pools were either not available or not working.

Mindell said the passengers who demanded to be put ashore would receive refunds on the $149 to $399 apiece they had paid for passage.

Ten crew members, meanwhile, complained that they had signed on as busboys aboard the America, only to be pressed into service as laborers, painters and the like. Mindell said he had assurances from operators of the 38-year-old ship that the 10 would be provided with air passage back to their home ports in Honduras, Jamaica and England.

The 662-foot long ship was built in this country in 1940 and christened America. During World War II she was converted into the troop ship West Point. After the war, she operated for a time as an American-flag trans-Atlantic liner, then was operated under Panamanian registry as the Australis. Recently she changed hands again, underwent a $2 million refurbishing and was rechristened America.

The ship left Friday evening for what was advertised as a three-day cruise to end Monday evening. The Venture Cruise Lines Inc., sponsors of the cruise, said a printing error misstated the termination time of the cruise — that it should have read 8 a.m. Monday.

As for the complaints of passengers, Venture Cruise president Leonard Lansburgh conceded unintentional overbooking. "Simply, we goofed," he said. "Our right hand did not know what our left hand was doing." He said agents of the firm believed the America had enough cabins for all the passengers booked on the cruise.

Blind Leader Avers Rules Inconsistent

BALTIMORE (AP) — The president of the National Federation of the Blind says that a policy requiring blind persons to surrender their canes during airline flights is inconsistently applied.

Ralph Sanders said Sunday that only six of 2,000 blind persons flying to the group's convention here this week were ordered to give up their canes, which the Federal Aviation Administration says can prove dangerous during turbulance or a crash.

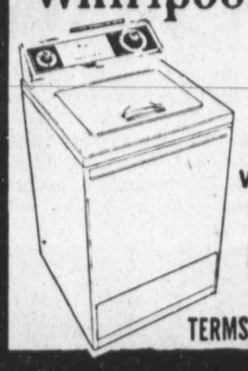

NFB and FAA officials met in Washington last week, and the federal agency agreed to conduct tests to determine just how dangerous the canes may be.

Frampton's Arm Reset, Plastic Surgery Done

NEW YORK (UPI) — Doctors reset singer Peter Frampton's broken arm and performed plastic surgery on a scalp laceration over the weekend, hospital officials said Monday.

Officials at Lenox Hill Hospital said Frampton is in satisfactory condition but will stay until injuries from a June 29 car accident in Nassau mend.

On Sunday, Dr. Edward Crane, an orthopedic surgeon, reset the compound fracture of Frampton's upper right arm and closed the skin over the break. Dr. Norman Schulman also performed plastic surgery on a cut on his scalp.

Doctors said Frampton's rib fractures are "healing well." Frampton was transferred to Lenox Hill at his request so he could be under the care of his personal physician, Dr. V.K. Tallury.

Reported Rape Investigated

For the second time in as many days Lubbock detectives were investigating a reported rape Monday.

The 20-year-old student said she awoke early Monday to the sound of someone banging on her door downstairs. The woman said she ignored the banging.

The woman said she was awakened again a short time later by still more loud banging. Again, the woman said she disregarded the disturbance.

Still later, about 4:40 a.m., the woman said she was awakened a third time. The third disturbance, she said, was caused by a man who was kneeling at her bedside.

The terrified woman said she began to scream but was told by her softspoken intruder to be quiet and trust him.

"I'm very gentle," the suspect reportedly said, before he advised the woman he had no plans of raping her.

Despite the man's reported calm manner, the woman said the suspect asked her to disrobe and fondled her.

He reportedly advised her of his mode of entry into her apartment, then asked the woman to go with him downstairs to check the front door.

After satisfying himself that the door was locked, the man reportedly told the woman to go into the living room. There, the woman said, the man raped her.

When she began crying, the man reportedly comforted the woman and apologized repeatedly.

Later, reports indicated, the man asked the woman to return to her bedroom and get back into her night clothes, then asked her to accompany him downstairs to the living area again.

There, the woman said the young man told her of his personal problems, including his need for "counselling."

Sometime later, about two hours after he arrived, the man described as tall and thin and 18 to 25 years old, left the West Lubbock apartment.

Meanwhile, a 23-year-old line operator said she was walking in the 200-block of E. Broadway early Monday when a man appeared long enough to snatch her purse off her shoulder. The woman said the bag and its contents were worth about $22.

Someone broke into Marc Keslin's 2406 Ave. C apartment Sunday or Monday and took stereo equipment valued at $1,800, reports indicate.

Agustin Barron of Rt. 8 Box 85 said someone took stereo equipment, tires, eight-track tapes and a fan from his home Sunday. Barron estimated his loss at $305.

Officer John Hart said he noticed Monday morning that someone had fired a small-caliber bullet or a pellet from a high-powered pellet gun into his car's windshield overnight. Hart estimated damage to his 1977 patrol car at $300.

China Removes Economic Aid From Vietnam

TOKYO (AP) — China, its once-strong ties with Hanoi fast disappearing in an increasingly bitter dispute, announced Monday it was withdrawing all economic aid and Chinese advisers from Vietnam.

The official Chinese news agency Hsinhua, in a dispatch received here, said Peking sent a note to the Vietnamese Communist government saying it was making the move because Hanoi "in disregard of the patient advice of the Chinese government, has obdurately stepped up its anti-China activities and ostracism of Chinese residents in Vietnam."

This has "created a foul atmosphere of vilifying and inciting antagonism against China," it said.

250,000 Seek To Leave

A Japanese report from Vietnam, meanwhile, said 250,000 Chinese residents of Ho Chi Minh City — the former Saigon — have applied to board Chinese ships standing by to repatriate them to their ancestral homeland.

The report by the Kyodo news service quoted Vietnamese officials as saying, however, that many now want to withdraw their applications because they disagree with China's characterization of them as a "persecuted" minority in Vietnam.

Peking says more than 130,000 Chinese residents of Vietnam have fled to China to escape harassment and mistreatment instigated by the Soviet Union, Vietnam's chief ally and China's foe.

Vietnam denies the allegations of persecution and says only a small number of Chinese merchants in Ho Chi Minh City and other cities are discontent because of the socialization of small-scale capitalism.

Procedures At Issue

China has sent two passenger ships to Vietnamese waters to evacuate Chinese refugees, but the two countries are quarreling over procedures and there have been no reports the seaborne exodus has begun.

Peking and Hanoi are also at odds over Chinese support for Communist Cambodia in that country's border war with Vietnam.

In Moscow, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda said today President Leonid I. Brezhnev sent a cable to the Hanoi leadership assuring it of "resolute support" from the Kremlin against "attacks and blackmail," a clear reference to Vietnam's troubles with China and Cambodia.

Although the Soviets provide substantial economic help to Vietnam, the withdrawal of Chinese aid could undercut that nation's reconstruction efforts after three decades of constant war.

First Suspension

In a first step last month, China suspended dozens of aid projects, and Hanoi radio said the move would seriously hamper Vietnam's five-year development program. The current level of Chinese aid and number of advisers are not known, but Peking officials said last month China provided an average of $700 million a year in aid to Vietnam over the past 20 years.

Over the weekend, three Vietnamese consulates in southern China were forced to shut down, and their staff members to return home, under orders from Peking.

The Hsinhua dispatch from Peking quoted an unidentified spokesman for the Overseas Chinese Affairs Office as saying Vietnamese authorities have cut or canceled food rations for Chinese residents who do not take Vietnamese citizenship and have deprived those who retained Chinese citizenship of their means of livelihood.

He said the Vietnamese did not exempt "even those who had shed their blood or performed outstanding military exploits" during Vietnam's wars against French and U.S. forces.

The spokesman was quoted as saying the overwhelming majority of Chinese residents in Vietnam are working-class people, but that Vietnamese authorities were using the "class struggle" slogan to persecute them.

The Kyodo report from Ho Chi Minh City quoted Vietnamese officials as saying they had difficulty persuading about 20,000 Chinese merchants there to allow a government takeover of their businesses but that 5,000 already had decided to work in various factories or farms.

Price Of Oil Hike Looms At Year End

With other cutbacks in Kuwait, Libya and Nigeria, 2 million barrels a day could be shaved off the world's total output; coincidentally this is the figure usually cited for the oil "glut."

The feeling among the OPEC ministers here and their aides was that the conservation argument was the best one to support a series off regular planned price increases.

This argument won favor for two reasons:

The United States, the world's largest consumer, evidently agrees with it, since it is a basic tenet of Carter's energy program.

Formula Escapes

Secondly, OPEC has not yet been able to draw up a formula that wousld compensate members for foreign exchange losses and inflation.

A program of regular increases was first spelled out publicly last October by Nordine Ait Laoussine, the executive vice president of Algeria's national oil company and a leading policy maker for his government. It was seconded last December by the Venezuelan oil minister, Valentin Hernandez Acosta.

A third statement of support, and possibly the crucial one, came in June from the Trilateral Commission, a group of businessmen and bankers from industrial countries who said, in effect, that conservation had not been sufficiently effective and oil users must be motivated by higher prices to save more fuel.

Finally, in late June, Yamani made three separate speeches favoring this approach.

Hernandez Acosta, in an interview with The Associated Press here, further insisted that industries in the West and Japan would benefit greatly by knowing in advance what oil prices would do over a longer term because they could plan investment accordingly.

Special Celebrations Planned

Snyder early today for a flag-raising ceremony or head toward Crosbyton to hear a patriotic address by Grady Tunnell of Plainview.

Plenty of games and contests are normally abundant in area 4th of July festivities, and this year is no exception.

Athletics will be emphasized in Paducah with today's "Super Stars Competition." The competition, which features events ranging from the high jump to tennis, will be held for persons of all ages at various athletic fields throughout the city. Action gets underway at 8 a.m.

Muleshoe, Littlefield and Crosbyton will be the places to take the children. Activities, ranging from sack races to an apple-bobbing contest, will be on tap this morning at the Bailey County Courthouse in Muleshoe, and Littlefield's Laguna Park will be the site of the "super kids competition." Crosbyton will hold a children's greased pig chase at 6 p.m. today at the football field.

Adults will be matching wits in a domino tournament, which gets underway at 9 a.m. today in the Slaton Clubhouse.

And, of course, the Fourth cannot pass without the annual world champion muleshoe pitching contest set for 10:30 a.m. at Muleshoe's Bailey County Courthouse.

Senior citizens will have the chance to show their stuff, too. Crosbyton is hosting horseshoe pitching , especially for the senior citizens, at 8:15 p.m. at the football field eld.

Turtle Race Planned

For a touch of whimsy, Abernathy will feature a turtle race in front of City Hall at 9 a.m. (Bring your own turtle.)

There also will be cow chip throwing contest at 10:20 a.m.

For the kids, the Abernathy Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a water balloon contest, a sack race, horshoe pitching, a jump rope contest, a skateboard contest and an egg toss, all starting at 10:20 a.m.

The Abernathy Girl Scouts will have a pie and cake auction at 11 a.m., a barbeque lunch will be available at 11:30 a.m. at the old fire station, followed by an old fiddlers contest at 1 p.m.

If you're looking for entertainment, South Plains College will be hosting its own "Texas — Cradle of Giants" at 9 p.m. The production is a musical salute to the contributions that Texans have made to the country-western music field.

Fireworks Displays Set

No municipal fireworks display is planned in Lubbock.

With so many persons celebrating, it's clear that quite a few won't be working. Federal, state, county and city offices and banking institutions will be closed. Only special delivery mail will be delivered.

However, a spot check of Lubbock merchants indicated that most retail stores and restaurants will be open today to serve the holiday trade.

High Court Rejects Ohio Death Penalty

onstrations that rocked the nation's capital in 1971. The justices turned down attempts by the former chiefs of the District of Columbia and Capitol police forces and the capital's municipal government to rid themselves of the "Mayday" suit that could cost them millions of dollars in damages.

Two Penalties Involved

In the death penalty cases, the court struck down the sentences given Sandra Lockett of Akron and Willie Lee Bell of Cincinnati.

Miss Lockett was sentenced to die in the electric chair for her part in the 1975 murder of Akron pawnbroker Sidney Cohen. Prosecutors said Miss Lockett was the "mastermind" of a four-person plot to rob Cohen's shop.

She never entered the shop during the robbery, however, and testimony established that Cohen's killing was not part of the robbery plan.

Bell was 16 years old when Julius Graber, 64, was killed in Cincinnati. Bell and an 18-year-old companion abducted Graber and drove him to a city cemetery where the companion fatally shot him.

"The Ohio death penalty statute does not permit the type of individualized consideration of mitigating factors" required by the Constitution's protection against cruel and unusual punishment, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger wrote in the court's main opinion.

Mitigation Prevented

"A statute that prevents the sentencer in all capital cases from giving independent mitigating weight to aspects of the defendant's character and record and to circumstances of the offense ... creates the risk that the death penalty will be imposed in spite of factors which may call for a less severe penalty," he said.

"When the choice is between life and death, that risk is unacceptable and incompatible with the commands of the 8th and 14th Amendments," Burger said.

Ohio's now-invalidated laws required consideration of only three specific mitigating circumstances: a victim inducing or facilitating the killing, the defendant being under duress or coercion, and the defendant's mental deficiency.

Justices Potter Stewart, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and John Paul Stevens joined Burger's decision.

Marshall Joined

Justice Byron R. White did not agree that states are under a constitutional obligation to consider all mitigating circumstances but he voted to strike down the Ohio laws because they imposed death penalties without findings of intentional killing.

Justice Harry A. Blackmun voted to strike down the laws because they did not take into consideration a defendant's degree of involvement in a crime and, he said, provided a greater chance of death for a murderer convicted after trial rather than one who pleaded guilty.

Justice William H. Rehnquist alone dissented. He chastised fellow justices for going "from pillar to post" in death penalty rulings.

Brennan Takes No Part

Justice William J. Brennan Jr., like Marshall an anti-death penalty absolutist, took no part in deciding the cases because he was ill when arguments in them were heard.

"This is certainly a thumbs-up day for us," said Benson Wolman of the American Civil Liberties Union chapter in Columbus, Ohio. "The rulings effectively void Ohio's death penalty laws and we believe those persons now under sentence of death in Ohio will eventually be given life prison terms."

Thirty-two states, in addition to Ohio, have death penalty statutes on their books. In 1976, the Supreme Court ruled that the death penalty may be a constitutional punishment for murderers. It upheld capital laws in Florida, Georgia and Texas.

Since then there has been but one execution. In that instance, condemned Utah murderer Gary Mark Gilmore chose not to appeal his death sentence and in January 1977 was shot by a firing squad.

The Arizona appeal challenged the state's death sentencing procedures because after a first-degree murder conviction, it is the judge and not a jury that imposes either the death penalty or a life prison term.

Jack Boger of the Legal Defense Fund in New York said he believed the Arizona law was similar to Ohio's in restricting the consideration of mitigating circumstances. "If that's so," he said, "we think the court's action clearly invalidates Arizona's law."

The fund has fought capital punishment laws.

Weather

said the chance for moisture would disappear.

Instead, mercury readings should soar into the upper 90s under bright, clear skies today and Wednesday, with the low tonight near 70.

On Saturday, the NWS said similar weather patterns would again pose a threat of showers in the extreme west and northern counties of the region.

Winds today should be from the south at 10-15 mph. Sunrise today was at 6:42 a.m., with sunset tonight at 9:01 p.m.

Lubbock's 97-degree high Monday fared well with a hot, sultry 101-degree high in Dallas and a 102-degree record-breaking temperature at the Dallas-Fort Worth airport. The old record was set in 1969 there.

With the exception of scattered showers on the South Plains, skies were clear and temperatures hot across the remainder of Texas Monday.

Sadat Agrees To Resume Israeli Talks

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat met Monday with Vice President Walter F. Mondale and agreed to resume face-to-face negotiations between Egypt and Israel, saying he hoped "it will give the peace process new momentum. I am sure it will."

After the 90-minute meeting, in his seaside villa here, Sadat said he had consented to the direct talks between the Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers "mainly" at President Carter's urging.

He told reporters that Mondale, who flew to this Mediterranean port city after a four-day visit to Israel, was returning to Washington with new Egyptian peace proposals.

Court Order Accepted By Firefighters far as this local is concerned, we are not condoning it."

Police arrested 17 adults and four juveniles for curfew violations.

With the help of volunteers, 175 nonstrikers, 120 Forestry Service workers and 134 sailors and marines, the city had 1,116 persons on fire duty. Walker was optimistic.

"We have shown the city of Memphis that regardless of whatever happens we can protect it," he said. "The sun is shining, the Lord is in his heaven and we are going to win it."

Shift Differential

Memphis' troubles began Saturday morning when the city and firefighters failed to come to terms on a new contract. The sticking point was a 50-cents-an-hour shift differential that would have boosted the annual $13,296 base pay by $986. The city offered a six percent hike now, a $30-across-the-board hike in April and 7½ percent more next year.

Garbage workers and 13 other municipal workers' unions have reached work agreements.

The garbage workers were involved in a bitter strike against the city in 1968, and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated while in Memphis trying to help settle the dispute.

Carters Back Cousin's Foe

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President Carter's mother Lillian and brother Billy have thrown their political support against cousin Hugh Carter in apparent retaliation for his book on the family.

Malcom "Chicken" Wishard, a peanut farmer running against Hugh for the state Senate seat he has held since 1966, confirmed that Miss Lillian and Billy have given him their backing. He said he also expects financial support from them.

He was strongly criticized by Miss Lillian and Billy for writing "Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot," an unflattering book about the Carter family. He said, "Aunt Lillian hasn't spoken to me since the book was published."

The book, among other things, quoted Miss Lillian as saying the President's wife was from the other side of the tracks and "not fit to marry a Carter."

"I'm very disappointed in this, with as much as I have done for Jimmy," Hugh said. "I know they're real disappointed in the book ... but I wanted to tell the truth."

Wishard said the Carters and other 14th District citizens had encouraged him to run. "I sat down and talked with Miss Lillian about it," he said.

Blind Want To Hold Canes

BALTIMORE (AP) — Saying that just six of 2,000 blind persons who took airline flights to a convention here were ordered to surrender their canes, the president of the National Federation of the Blind charges that the federal ruling that requires canes to be removed during takeoffs and landings is inconsistently enforced.

Ralph Sanders, whose group is challenging the Federal Aviation Administration ruling, added that the six only encountered enforcement of the ruling on the Cleveland-to-Baltimore leg of their United Airlines flight from Minneapolis.

"Some 2,000 persons traveled to Baltimore (Saturday) for our week-long convention and only six had trouble with United," said Sanders.

Cohan Stamp Issued To Honor Entertainer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Entertainer George M. Cohan, America's Yankee Doodle Dandy, was honored Monday on the 100th anniversary of this birth with the issuance of a 15-cent postage stamp.

The ceremonies, with a band playing the better known Cohan favorites, also laid to rest the song-and-dance man's claim that he was born on the 4th of July, as it says in this 1904 hit song "Yankee Doodle Boy."

Cohan was born July 3, 1878, in a $6-a-month attic in Providence's Fox Point neighborhood, not far from Brown University where Monday's "first day of issue" ceremonies were held.

"He tickled the funnybone at the same time he tugged at the heartstrings. America loved him," said U.S. Postmaster General William F. Bolger.

An audience of 400 stamp collectors, music and Broadway buffs and World War I veterans filled Brown's Sayles Hall for the event as postal workers busily cancelled Cohan-stamped envelopes with the "first day of issue" mark.

Cohan, who died in New York in 1942, was best remembered as a song-and-dance man whose patriotic songs inspired millions of Americans.

The crowd rose and joined in the singing as the musicians played Cohan's classic "You're a Grand Old Flag." Twice. Old Glory was carried by a color guard outfitted in authentic World War I military uniforms.

George M., as he was called, was the only composer awarded a Congressional Medal of Honor — cited for the patriotic song "Over There" that inspired Americans who fought in World War I.

The U.S. Postal Service put Cohan on the second stamp in its commemorative series on performing arts and artists.

Recognizing the advantages of an Independence Day birth in his vaudeville family, Cohan's father, Jerry, unsuccessfully tried to advance George's time of birth on local records.

Cohan spent 20 years in the family vaudevile act, "The Four Cohans," before turning his talents to Broadway where he produced 80 shows and made millions as a playwright, actor, composer, director and theater owner.

Tennessee House Blast Kills Three

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Two persons remained hospitalized Monday after an explosion fueled by gunpowder, industrial gases and chemicals destroyed a home and killed three people.

Mary Rankin, 31, was listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit of St. Mary's Medical Center after the Sunday explosion that killed her husband Don, 34, and their children Donna, 3, and Rebecca, 5.

Police detectives said Mrs. Rankin was talking on the telephone and was thrown out of the house by the blast's force.

Friends said she had just come home from church and was baking a cake for a party for Donna's third birthday.

Also hospitalized was Douglas Lynch, 27, of Cleveland, Tenn., who was struck by debris while mowing a lawn next door, police said. He was in satisfactory condition at University of Tennessee Hospital.

George Rightmyer, an agent for the Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms Bureau, said Monday that Rankin, a gun enthusiast and truck driver for the Exxon Corp., apparently was working with a primer press used for reloading firearm cartridges when a spark touched off some smokeless gunpowder.

Also in the basement were cannisters of black powder — another type of gunpowder — an estimated 15,000 rounds of ammunition, acetylene gas used for welding, butane gas for camping, a paint compressor and several cans of paint, several containers of lantern fuel and several cans of chemicals, Rightmyer said.

He said neighbors reported hearing one large explosion followed by four smaller ones shortly after noon Sunday.

"One blast set off the others in a chain reaction like falling dominoes," Rightmyer said. "Witnesses said each explosion after the first had the force of about one stick of dynamite."

"I was just coming out of my house when I heard the first explosion," Victor Davis, a next-door neighbor, said. "A lady was lying in the driveway screaming that her kids were still in there and she wanted someone to get them out."

The explosion also extensively damaged a home next door and scattered debris across nearby yards. Power lines were knocked down, interrupting electrical service to portions of the subdivision, neighbors said.

Assistant Fire Chief Delbert Frye said houses rattled and windows were broken in a mile radius of the blasts.

Judge Backs Actors Equity Agent Rule

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge refused Monday to enjoin Actors Equity Association from enforcing its 50-year-old regulations requiring members to hire theatrical agents holding Equity franchises.

The position was taken by U.S. District Judge Constance Baker Motley in response to a petition for a preliminary injunction by non-franchised agents who claim they are being blacklisted for challenging Equity's "monopoly control" of the theatrical industry labor market.

The non-franchised agents made their request in a suit seeking to have the actors' union declared in violation of anti-trust laws.

Equity's regulations specify that members who hire non-franchised agents are subject to union disciplinary action. The blacklisting claim stems from Equity's notifications to producers of its rules.

Motley doubted whether the non-franchised agents could establish their claims at a trial because labor union are exempt from most federal anti-trust laws.

WET MISCHIEF — Eight-year-old Timmy Tobias discovered just the way to beat Monday's heat — he drenched himself in the sprinklers at Wagner Park. But, Timmy got tired of playing with the same old sprinkler, turned it off and took the head to another outlet. Apparently Timmy thinks he's found just the perfect outlet to get wet by. Guaranteed Health Insurance Plan Eyed WASHINGTOM (UPI) — President Carter is studying a new plan that could pump billions of business and taxpayer dollars into a guaranteed basic health insurance system for all Americans, an administration official said Monday.

The plan might be phased in one section at a time over a period of several years, starting with aid to those who need it most, said Deputy Assistant HEW Secretary Karen Davis.

"I would not want to speculate on exactly what the president will recommend, or what timetable will be used," she said.

"But Secretary Califano has recommended to the president broad coverage for all Americans. That recommended coverage could be paid for by both private and public dollars by forcing employers to bring their health insurance up to basic standards and by helping the needy who have no insurance."

Although final details have not been worked out, she said, many costly health care services would be insured.

"The extent of the basic benefit package would include at least coverage for hospital and physician services and laboratory and x-rays. after that, might come preventive services, mental health services and perhaps prescription drugs," she said.

Skyrocketing health costs will total more than $130 billion this year, and Carter will send a set of specific health insurance guidelines back to HEW Secretary Joseph Califano this month.

Califano and his advisers will then draft the first part of the health plan for submission to Conggess this fall.

Carter himself said recently the plan could take years to be implemented. The first step is not expected to get through the House and Senate until at least next year.

The Washington Post Monday quoted an unnamed administration source as saying Carter might ask for the first phase of his plan to begin in 1982 with "say, $20 billion worth of coverage for mothers and children, or for part-time workers who now have poor coverage."

"The President has said all alomg tht he would want to phase in a national health insurance plan and that those most in need would be covered first," Dr. Davis told UPI.

She said no timetable has been set, but one major option for financing minimum health insurance would use current patterns.

"What we are considering here is getting employers to help pay for ringing their health insufance coverage up to minimum standards and for providing insurance for workers who are not currently covered. And we are talking about using federal dollars to help those on the public side who are not working and need help."

Prison Term Assessed In Local Robbery Case

Wilburn D. Pugh, 44, was assessed a two-year prison term Monday after pleading guilty in Judge Robert C. Wright's 137th District Court to burglary of a vehicle.

Pugh, who resided at 1645 19th St. at the time of the offense, pleaded guilty to burglarizing a vehicle in the 1400 block of Avenue G May 28.

Brief Village Occupation In S. Yemen Reported

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — North Yemeni forces shelled and occupied two villages in rival South Yemen but then were "routed and expelled," Arab sources reported Monday.

South Yemen's communications minister, Mahmoud Osheish, told a press conference that North Yemen had thrust armored units across the border in a Sunday night attack.

Neither the initial attack nor the counterattack in the Marxist-ruled country on the southern edge of the Red Sea could be confirmed independently.

Osheish couldn't be reached for comment, but a South Yemeni diplomat who asked not to be identified said the report was correct.

"Regular forces and popular militia of the Democratic Republic of Yemen today routed the reactionary forces of North Yemen and their mercenary supporters, regaining the entire region that these aggressors had captured yesterday (Sunday)," the PDF said in a statement.

The PDF claimed that the South Yemen counterattack "inflicted heavy losses on the North Yemeni, taking a number of their soldiers prisoner and capturing quantities of weapons."

Palestinian sources said PDF guerrillas have been fighting alongside South Yemeni militiamen in the pro-Soviet country.

"But the situation along the border area is by no means peaceful," the PDF statement said. "Forces from Oman, Iran, Saudi Arabia and North Yemen have been massing in scattered locations along the border."

The PDF also claimed that Saudi Arabia was landing forces at the North Yemeni Red Sea port of Hodeida. None of the reports of troop movements was confirmed.

Osheish had told reporters that Saudi Arabia and Iran, the two conservative oil giants in the Mideast, were "harboring aggressive intentions" against his government and that "North Yemen is being incited to commit aggression against our land."

Osheish also told reporters that Aden appealed for help from Algeria, Libya, Syria, Iraq and the Palestine Liberation Organization to "repulse" the North Yemeni forces.

The report of the initial attack came shortly after an Arab League meeting in Cairo, boycotted by South Yemen and the other hard-line Arab states, had voted to suspend political and diplomatic relations with South Yemen.

The league supported North Yemen's allegation that the Aden government masterminded the assassination of North Yemen's President Ahled al Ghashmi last month.

Osheish condemend the decision, calling it a violation of the league charter and repeated his government's denial of involvement in the Ghashmi assassination.

Ghashmi was killed when a representative of South Yemen opened a booby-trapped briefcase to deliver a letter from the South Yemen president. The case exploded, killing both men.

Network Scores Carlin Decision

CARLIN REACTS TO DECISION — Comedian George Carlin is shown at a news conference in Los Angeles Monday where he said the Supreme Court "just took another little part out of the First Amendment" when it ruled Monday that the Federal Communications Commission may restrict the broadcast of indecent language. One of Carlin's recordings was considered in the case. (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Supreme Court's ruling Monday allowing the Federal Communications Commission to ban the broadcasting of indecent language is "a classic chilling of First Amendment" rights to free speech, said the director of the radio network the court ruled against.

The court's decision came in the case of radio station WBAI in New York, which aired a cut from a George Carlin album in which the comedian considered the nature of "filthy words." The FCC said the seven words Carlin discussed were indecent, and the Supreme Court affirmed the FCC's authority to ban the broadcast of such words.

"The decision of the U.S. Supreme Court to allow the FCC to censor broadcasting is an intolerable attack on the First Amendment," said Joel Kugelmass, executive director of Pacifica Broadcasting, which owns WBAI. "It represents the continuing legacy of the Nixon Administration and its assault on a free press .... it is a classic chilling of First Amendment activity."

The case stemmed from a complaint filed by a man who heard a broadcast of the record while he was driving in New York with his young son.

"I would say that man has the freedom of choice and I don't want to impinge on his freedom of choice," Carlin said in an interview after the ruling. "He has two knobs on that radio — one is for program selection and the other is for volume and on-off. That's his freedom."

"To say that one may avoid further offense by turning off the radio when he hears indecent language is like saying that the remedy for an assault is to run away after the first blow."

Carlin said the court ignored the issue that was at the bottom of the case, an issue Carlin was addressing in his recorded monologue — the nature of indecency itself.

"The philosophical issue — which, of course, doesn't come into play at all (in the court's consideration) — is: Are these words worth hiding from? Do they have a power over us?" Carlin said. "The answer seems to be yes.

"I feel there are indecent things I'm forced to hear. I think some of the things politicians say qualify as indecent and I think some of the things big industries say to me on radio and television is indecent. If you look up indecent, it says: 'Not conforming to generally accepted standards of morality.'"

Carlin insisted that words are just words and "I don't think the words are immoral at all. People can be immoral, and they can use the words immorally, but I don't think the words themselves are."

Belgian Visitor Killed During Tour

NEW YORK (AP) — Preparations were being made Monday to return to Belgium the body of a professor slain by robbers at a YMCA boarding house just hours after she arrived for the start of a world tour.

The victim, Louise Laude, 62, of Liege, was robbed of several hundred dollars, police said.

She was the third person slain in the West 34th Street boarding facility in the past 12 months. The neighborhood has become known as a hangout for drug addicts and other undesirables, many of whom rent quarters in the Sloane House "Y" for as little as $5 a night.

Mrs. Laude, a widow who taught Latin at a Catholic girls' college in Brussels, was found Sunday in her second-floor room with a pillow over her face.

She had landed at Kennedy Airport a few hours earlier on the first leg of a 50-day world tour she was making with two other women and three priests.

The group planned to visit several American cities, the Pacific Islands and Asia. The New York stop was timed to coincide with Independence Day festivities.

Solon Predicts Rise In Federal Taxes

NEW YORK (AP) — Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., predicts that Congress will approve tax-cutting legislation but warns that if President Carter does not sign it into law, taxes will rise by up to $40 billion during the next two years.

Kemp, appearing Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation," also said that some version of a proposed capital gains tax reduction will be approved by Congress. Carter is opposed to this plan, saying it would add $2 billion to the federal deficit, while benefitting mainly those in upper-income tax brackets.

Malawi Holds First Vote In 17 Years

BLANTYRE, Malawi (AP) — Nearly two-thirds of Malawi's legislators lost their seats in the country's first election in 17 years last week, according to results released Monday.

But Western diplomats said the outcome of last Thursday's election makes little difference to the administration of this landlocked ribbon of land in southern Africa.

All candidates for parliament are required to be members of the Malawi Congress Party and must be approved by Malawi's president, H. Kamuzu Banda, 72.

Of the 87 seats in parliament, 47 were contested and 29 former members, including two ministers, lost their seats. Twenty-six other members of the previous parliament were not nominated by local party officials.

No figures were available on either the number of eligible voters — believed to be about 3 million out of the country's population of 5.6 million — or the percentage of the turnout.

The parliament has never played a major role in Malawi, with Dr. Banda, a former practicing physician, exercising unchallenged and complete power.

Banda's rule has been marked by intolerance for opposition and by close contacts with the white-minority states.

Administration's Stance On Unemployment Scored

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The board chairman of the NAACP today accused the Carter administration of abandoning unemployment as the No. 1 priority.

Margaret Bush Wilson said concern about jobs has been replaced with concern about inflation although "inflation is not caused by too many people working."

Mrs. Wilson said unemployment is still about 12 percent among black workers and is up to the "explosive level" of 50 percent among black youth.

She also said she would like to see the Carter administration make more vigorous progress in the area of urban policy, but she praised the president's proposed urban development bank.

Mrs. Wilson told a news conference at the start of the convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that blacks are better off under Carter than under the administrations of Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford.

"We're weren't even communicating with Nixon," she said. "He acted like 20 million black people didn't exist. Mr. Carter knows we're here. He just gets a little confused about what he should be doing."

She agreed with NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks that there has been a conservative reaction in the country recently affecting civil rights gains.

Hooks said Sunday the poor will be the ones to pay for the revolt against taxes in the United States.

Hooks, speaking to reporters Sunday on the eve of the NAACP's 69th convention here, expressed alarm at the Bakke decision announced by the U.S. Supreme Court last Wednesday.

The high court found that white medical school applicant Allan Bakke had been turned down for admission to a California state medical school while minority students with lesser qualifications were admitted to fill a quota. The court ordered Bakke admitted.

Hooks says telegrams are going out to concerned professionals calling them to a special convention either in St. Louis or Detroit.

The meeting will focus on an expected "rash of lawsuits by those who would like to use the Bakke case as a means of rolling back the clock on minority progress in the nation," Hooks said.

"It's apparent that people want to hit blacks, Chicanos, welfare and other programs because they think we are getting fat off these programs," Hooks said.

"There's a sickness in America today," Hooks said. "There's a sickness that comes about because people who are making good salaries have no sense of compassion or empathy for those who have been disenfranchised by life and who cannot make it."

"We see a neo-conservative blanket that quietly but steadily creeps over our nation," he said. "Many of those forces would rather see us back on the plantation."

He also said passage of California's Proposition 13, a measure that sharply cut property taxes, was largely "fueled by the fact that people want to get at welfare ... at the Chicano community, the black community."

Survey Indicates Strong Support For Arms Treaty

NEW YORK (AP) — With another round of arms talks due later this month, the American public overwhelmingly favors a pact with the Soviet Union that would put new limits on nuclear arms, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

The substantial support for a new SALT agreement comes despite public concern over whether such a treaty would strengthen U.S. security.

Also woven into this complex tapestry of American sentiment are a perception of significant Soviet military power and a concern about President Carter's lack of firmness in dealing with the Russians.

The latest round of negotiations between the United States and the USSR aimed at a Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty is due to begin in just over a week in Geneva, Switzerland.

The AP-NBC News poll found 67 percent of those interviewed said they favor a new pact limiting nuclear weapons. About one in five, 22 percent, opposes such an agreement. Eleven percent of the 1,600 adults questioned were uncertain.

This margin of support, although substantial, is below that found by the January AP-NBC News poll and is the lowest since the question was first asked in 1976.

In Janaury, 74 percent favored an arms pact and 19 percent were opposed, with the remainder undecided.

Despite the 3-to-1 margin of support for a new treaty, the public has serious misgivings about it.

While 45 percent said a new agreement would strengthen U.S. security, more than one in three — 36 percent — said it would weaken the nation's security. Nineteen percent were not sure.

Interestingly, those who say the pact will weaken national security are evenly split between support and opposition for a new agreement. But those who say it will strengthen national security favor the pact by an 86-9 margin.

But Americans' sentiment is clear on the issue of military strength: they want the United States to be number one, but they don't think this is the case.

A majority of those interviewed by telephone — 52 percent — said this country should be stronger than Russia.

Thirty-nine percent said the two countries should be equal in military might. Four percent said the United States should not be as strong, and five percent were not sure.

But, asked about the current military situation, 37 percent rated Russia as being more powerful than this country. Only 17 percent said the United States is the greater military power.

Thirty-five percent said the countries are about equal and 11 percent were not sure.

Desite President Carter's recent efforts to take a harder line toward the Soviet Union, Americans don't think he has set the right tone in superpower negotiations.

"We're not going to let the Soviet Union push us around," Carter said in a speech in Fort Worth on June 23. "We're not going to be second."

Forty-five percent of those questioned on June 27 and 28 said Carter has not been tough enough in dealings with the Soviet Union.

Thirty-five percent said he has set the right tone in the negotiations, while 5 percent said he has been too tough. Fifteen percent were not sure.

As with any sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News polls could differ from the results of interviews with all Americans with telephones because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with 1,600 interviews, the results should vary no more than three percentage points either way solely because of sample errors. That is, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results of interviews with all American adults would vary from these results by more than three percentage points.

Of course, the results could vary from other polls because of differences in the wording of questions, timing of interviews or the method of interviewing.

No Ruling Yet In Death Of Deaf-Mute

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The body of a deaf-mute, known to area children as a friendly man and an excellent swimmer, was recovered Monday from the local lake where the 43-year-old man apparently drowned Sunday night.

The victim was identified as Casimiro Juarez. Although witnesses said the man drowned Sunday night in Elmendorf Lake, a formal ruling was withheld in his death.

Three youths told authorities that Juarez jumped in the water, coming up and waving his arms three times. On the fourth time, he didn't reappear, the youths said.

"We thought he was playing with us because he was always a real good swimmer," said Danny Trevino, 13.

"He never bothered anyone. I've known him since I was a young man," said Tony Martinez, one of the man's neighbors. "He always made friends everywhere he went even though he couldn't talk."

Protest March On Plainview Planned

Mexican-Americans from across Texas will march on Plainview July 15 in protest of the death of a 25-year-old Hale Center man fatally shot in a scuffle with a deputy sheriff, state Brown Beret leaders said Monday.

Beret organizer Victor San Miguel of San Antonio said his organization will sponsor the march from Hale Center's St. Theresita Catholic Church to the Guadalupe Church in Plainview through the "Mexican-American barrio to the city square."

In announcing that protest, San Miguel said Beret "investigators" checking into the death of Timothy Rosales, Jr. found "serious conflicting reports as to what the actual witnesses (to the shooting) are saying, compared to what the police reports are saying."

Rosales died instantly, autopsy reports showed, when struck in the right forehead by a bullet fired at close range from Hale County reserve deputy Charles Cypert's .45-caliber automatic.

Rosales had been stopped by Cypert at the intersection of FM 179 and FM 1071 while the deputy was investigating a complaint of an intoxicated motorist. Rosales' auto was missing two wheels when stopped, Cypert reported to authorities investigating the incident.

San Miguel said the decision to protest Rosales' death — and the deaths of five other Mexican-Americans in the past 13 months while in police custody — came after a Sunday meeting with Beret leaders from eight cities.

Beret leaders were expected to meet Monday night with "concerned citizens" of Plainview and are scheduled to confer with that city's mayor, police chief and district attorney at 10 a.m. today in the Plainview Chamber of Commerce office.

Today's meeting also will include U.S. Justice Department mediator Robert F. Greenwald, according to Lubbock Brown Beret leader Gilbert Herrera.

The session also will include a demand by Berets that authorities reopen the investigation of the shooting death of 20-year-old Eliseo Camargo by a Plainview policeman.

In that case, the officer said his shotgun accidentally discharged as he pumped a shell into the chamber. Camargo, a suspect in a criminal case at the time, was shot once in the back at a "downward angle," authorities said then.

Beret leaders, in their Monday press conference, also claimed discrepancies between the results of their investigation of the Rosales incident and those of law enforcement authorities.

So far, investigating agencies include the FBI, the Texas Rangers, the Hale County Sheriff's Department and a Hale County grand jury to convene July 6.

Herrera said Berets turned up two witnesses to the death, even though Hale County Sheriff Charles Tue and Texas Ranger Jim Mull have indicated there were no witnesses to the actual shooting.

Herrera, however, refused to identify the two witnesses or confirm that they were or were not the same persons authorities have said witnessed portions of the struggle, but not the actual shooting.

San Miguel also claimed the Plainview lawmen have "intimidated witnesses" because "Anglo owners of businesses have been threatening their Mexican-American employees that if they participate in the march in any way, form or shape, they will be immediately terminated."

Herrera said the Berets and others involved in the protest might take more aggressive action if the grand jury refuses to indict Cypert. He did not elaborate.

Tue said FBI agent Bernie Brown of Lubbock was scheduled to be in Plainview Wednesday to investigate whether Rosales' civil rights had been violated by Cypert.

85 Candidates Fail To Submit Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission reports 91 percent of the 861 candidates seeking nomination to federal office filed financial statements prior to the primary elections.

Eighty-five candidates failed to file and their names were published by the commission. Commission Chairman Joan Aikens said the commission still is concerned about the rate of persons filing late or not filing at all.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me about plantar fascitis, and what can be done to cure it. X-rays show spurs on my heels and it feels like I'm standing on needles. One doctor told me I had plantar fascitis, but he didn't tell me much about it. He said there is not a cure for it. — Mrs. O.B.C.

I'll define a couple of terms first.

Fascitis refers to the "fascia" (FASH-ya), a special kind of tissue — tough and fibrous — that lies around muscles or helps connect muscles to bones. Plantar fascia is this tissue located on the sole of the foot. A similar tissue is found on the palms of the hands.

The fascia of the soles is probably the thickest and toughest of any tissue in the body because of the continuous and tremendous pressures exerted on it (your entire body weight).

When irritated it may become inflamed, and the pain may be great. The bands of fascial extend from the heel bone forward to attach to other foot bones and muscles. Thus pain may radiate across the entire bottom of the foot. Your heel spurs (small projections of bone material) do not cause the discomfort, but the pressure on the inflamed fascia does.

As with most foot problems rest is often the answer. And there are things you can do to prevent recurrence. If you are overweight, reduce. Hot foot soaks and soft shoe paddings at the heels can help.

There is no cure in the real sense, but these measures and sometimes injection of steroids (such as prednisone) may give relief. The feet, and specifically the fascia, usually come with a lifetime "guarantee" from the manufacturer. You have probably subjected yours to excessive amounts of wear and tear over the years. Still, with proper attention to things such as weight you should be able to overcome the present discomfort. The feeling of numbness might indicate a circulation problem, which would add to the situation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: After a series of blood tests it was established that I am deficient in a substance called alpha-1-antitrypsin. I am 49 years old. Can you explain this? Also, send me your booklet on emphysema. — J.S.

The substance you name is a chemical that controls how certain enzymes work in the body. A deficiency is rather rare, but it can be a factor in emphysema. Figures indicate it is a factor in only about 1 in 100 cases. Emphysema results from the action of certain enzymes on the walls of the alveoli. These are the tiny end pouches of the lung "tree" that allow passage of oxygen and carbon dioxide in breathing. You may be one of those rare individuals whose emphysema can be laid to this deficiency.

It is suspected in emphysema that develops later in life (about middle age), especially if the other traditional factors, such as heavy smoking, are not present. The deficiency tends to occur in families.

For a copy of my booklet, "How to Control Your Emphysema," send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can anything be done for a woman's fallen bladder except surgery? Can exercises of some kind help? And just out of curiosity, what makes a person know when he or she must urinate? — Mrs. G.F.

Surgery to tighten the supporting tissues is about the only way to correct urinary bladder prolapse (falling). I know no exercise. To your second question, the sequence of events is simplicity itself. The elastic bladder expands as urine accumulates. When approximately eight ounces has been "collected," certain structures, the urethra, etc., are altered and nerve impulses are set off that culminate in the brain's decision. By then the urethra and the muscles involved are prepared to respond to your first voluntary effort to urinate.

Yes. A study done in England shows that in 215 women on the Pill, a third developed headaches for the first time. It also may be a factor in migraine. It won't in all women, of course, but it should be a suspect.

• • •

There's an old saying — if your feet hurt, you hurt all over. Dr. Thosteson's new booklet, "Relief and Care of Your Feet," shows you how to avoid and take of foot problems. To get a copy, write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

"Why don't you save your fireworks until next year or maybe forever?'" exploded East.

West had made a very light preempt and it had bounced right back in his face.

North had refused to be shut out and had made a slightly unsound four-spade bid.

East had passed. South's eyes almost popped as he counted 22 high-card points. He had bid a Blackwood four notrump as a formality and when North showed an ace, South just bid the grand slam in notrump.

There was a little problem in the play. No one really likes to have to play against king and one at any time and certainly not when in a grand slam.

Without any information from the bidding the correct play when missing just king and one is to play for the drop. It is a 52 per cent chance.

After West's four-diamond preempt the odds changed a lot. Not only had West shown a lot of diamonds, but he also had advertised a hand with no defense. So at trick two, South led dummy's queen of spades, let it ride and scored the grand slam.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: A while back I read a letter in your column from an 11-year-old girl signed "No Liar." She was hassled by the cashier every time she went to a movie and tried to buy a child's ticket. The gal was tall for her age and everyone thought she was older.

My problem is just the opposite. I am 5-1 and look like a little kid. When I was 20 and a sophomore in college it was very embarrassing. A fellow would go to the box office and put down money for two adult tickets. Invariably the cashier would punch out one adult ticket and one child's ticket and give him change. My date would then have to explain that I was "of age." We had trouble, too, in adults-only movies. There were times when I had to show my ID card in order to be admitted.

I'm 35 now and look about 20 — so I guess the real payoff comes later in life. Like you, I don't smoke or drink and I try to take care of myself. You look pretty good for a gal who's been around so long. I happen to know today is your birthday. Do you keep your age a secret? — A Very Nosy Lady From Virginia

Dear Nosy: It's no secret. Anyone who wants to know my age can find it in "Who's Who."

Dear Ann: That letter from the widow who was enjoying her freedom made me realize how many different types of people there are in the world. I have a message for all wives whose husbands are still alive. I hope you will print it.

I was widowed 18 months ago and my feelings are a lot different than hers.

Many times I could have given my husband a compliment, a cheerful word, a warm hug or a kiss — and I didn't. Many times I made a big fuss over a trivial matter, when I could just as well have overlooked it. Now I don't have any more chances.

I'm sure he knew I loved him, but I wish I had taken the time from my job when he was ill in the hospital and gone to spend all my days with him, not just a few hours at night. I wasn't even with him when he passed away and now there's not a darn thing I can do about that, either.

Today I could tell every woman who still has her husband, "Hug him while you can. Life is too short and too uncertain to pass up a single opportunity to bring him joy."

If you print this letter, Ann, it's sure to help someone, somewhere. — Mrs. H. Of Erie

Dear Mrs. H.: Don't be so hard on yourself, dear. It's human nature not to fully appreciate what you have when you have it. It's normal not to miss the water till the well runs dry.

Husbands as well as wives would do well to read your letter a second time. This train runs both ways.

• • •

Dear Ann: I feel our children (ages six and eight) should be paid for the chores they do around the house. My husband says they should NOT be paid — that as members of the family they owe it to us to contribute their services. The kids get an allowance of $2 a week. What do you say, Ann? — Biloxi

Dear Bil: It's a wash. I favor assigned chores, which should be performed in exchange for the allowance, and recommend extra pay for extra work. Children should be offered an incentive to do more — and money is a good one.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When I needed a guide to keep my place on the proper row in my knitting instruction book, there was no gadget in the needlecraft catalogs or stores to solve my problem.

While browsing at a stationery counter, there was my answer! A metal clip and a six-inch plastic ruler.

Clip one end of the ruler to the side edge of your instruction book along the row being worked. It will stay firmly in place as you knit that row. It's easy to move to each row and costs only pennies.

No more having to take out wrongly knitted stitches. —E. Leonard

T-h-a-n-k Y-o-u! You've just solved a problem that's been bugging me for a long time — and I'll bet I'm not the only one who has been helped. You're a pal for dropping in. — Hugs, Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a tip for mothers who have a lot of sleeper sacks for their baby, but not enough T-shirts!

Just cut off the bottom half of the sack (the part with the tie) and there you have it — a T-shirt!

Now what to do with the part you have just cut off?

Sew this along the cut edge and you have a nice little tote bag for powder and what-have-you. It also makes a nice little toy bag which can be easily opened and closed with the drawstrings. — Candi Arguello

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

You know, my shoulder appears as normal as the shoulder of any other gal who's tripping down the avenue with her shoulder bag strag hugging her shoulder. But my shoulder apparently resists such...

Over and over, the strap slides off my shoulder. There's little convenience in a shoulder bag when one hand must repeatedly put the strap back.

I just betcha there are others out there who have battled that little ol' problem. And won! Would you please ask them?

What might I do, make, buy, try, that would let me join the shoulder-bag paraders who swing along so blithely? — Lucille

Your letter gave me a chuckle, even though I don't really have an answer to your problem — only sympathy. The one suggestion I might offer is to attach a strip of foam to the strap.

Does anyone have any other? We all (including Lucille) would love to hear your ideas. OK? — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I use one of the little round wooden toothpicks to clean around the fixtures and molding on my stove, the sinks, kitchen shelves, etc.

I wonder how I ever managed to clean all those hard to get at cracks and crevices before I thought of using one of these toothpicks.

They're inexpensive, convenient and, best of all, don't scratch any surface! — Irene Parmelee

DEAR HELOISE:

I perspire so profusely that I used to ruin blouse after blouse as they would become stained.

Then I took a can of spray starch and would lightly spray them where needed after the blouse had been washed and dried.

Wonderful results. The starch doesn't make the clothes stiff, but keeps odor and stain for getting "ground" into the cloth as it washes out more readily. — Bernice Craft

DEAR HELOISE:

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — "He's so appealingly angelic-looking," explained a "One Life to Live" writer, "that we can make him do the most ghastly actions, short of murder, and allow him to get away with it."

And short of murder is exactly what tennis-bum Brad Vernon has gotten away with on the ABC soap opera. He relentlessly courted virginal Jenny, a nun turned nurse whom his own father Will had hankered after. Brad won but was so anxious to hop in the sack that when Jenny demurred until their wedding night, Brad took his premarital desires out on a hapless waitress, Lana, who became pregnant and quite mad about the boy. Brad was responsible for Lana's accidental death, but forced his sister Samantha to lie for him. He arranged for robberies to cover his tracks. Then, worst of all, he began beating poor Jenny when she expressed a desire to start a family. Through all that his chorus of fans raised their voices in protesting pleas to reform Brad. But, nevertheless, they send in marriage proposals, line up outside the studio for autographs and cause mob scenes when the golden one appears.

"That's just the duality I hoped to give the character from the beginning," claims blond, blue-eyed actor Jameson Parker. "The writers wanted a nasty, mean, arrogant and malicious character but I was challenged to add vulnerability to this corn-fed All-American looking villain." The corn-fed looks come naturally with Jameson's territory. He was born in Baltimore, Md., but grew up in Washington, D.C., Virginia and Germany since his father was a foreign service diplomat.

"My family was old-fashioned yet liberal," remembers Jameson. "Time had stopped somewhere in the Edwardian age, however, since we lived amid the luxury of servants and chauffeurs. Our livestyle precluded planting any roots. But I still feel a certain kinship with the South where I would like to find a house and be a gentleman farmer some day."

After being expelled from a Vermont boarding school for locking a cow in the girl's dorm, among other exploits, Jameson attended Beloit College in Wisconsin where he stumbled into acting after rounds as a boxer, swimmer and all-around jock. He still keeps in tip-top shape through karate, tennis and fencing.

Jameson's first serial role was as young drifter Dale Robinson on the defunct "Somerset." Dale panted after older woman Ellen. Theirs was a warm, tender, fun relationship. One sweltering afternoon Dale impetuously nibbled Ellen's toes after removing her riding boots. Needless to say, that kind of action was frowned upon by portions of the protesting Midwest audience and Dale's story was quickly axed.

The young actor admits that the "curse" of his Teutonic pretty-boy looks has hampered him from playing certain roles. Only as Brad is Jameson allowed to play out his sadistic wife-beating fantasies, although his real-life wife, actress Bonnie Parker, swears he's a lamb off-screen.

Jameson is leaving the soap within the next few weeks to pursue bigger film game. He's already in rehearsals for the film version of Sylvia Plath's acclaimed autobiographical novel, "The Bell Jar," in which Jameson will play Buddy Willard, another "staid, All-American doofus," who is the heroine's smothering college beau.

Nobody "touches" his women on-screen like Jameson, who was recently accosted at the studio by two bruising bartenders, "who came to rearrange my face after the scenes involving Jenny's beatings," remembers Jameson. With a shrug he explains that he sweet-talked them into realizing it was just play acting. Tune In Tomorrow to see how Jameson Parker does his final sweet-talking or sweet-slapping to Jenny on "One Life to Live."

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a 38-year-old widow with three children. The oldest is a 14-year-old girl. There is a man I know who I thought was a really nice guy. He's divorced and has grown children. He seemed to like me and the children.

Last week he offered me money to let my 14-year-old daughter go to bed with him. I told him he was crazy. I told a policeman about it, and he said there is nothing anyone can do unless the man commits some kind of crime.

Abby, I am terrified that he might catch my daughter somewhere and rape her. (Maybe even kill her).

I know he's a sick man or he wouldn't have asked me something like that. What should I do?

UPSET IN IOWA

Dear Upset: Don't wait until this man commits a crime. You don't say where in Iowa you live, but I advise you to immediately alert your chief of police, sheriff or county attorney. Let them know about this sick and potentially dangerous man and what he has in mind. Alert your daughter, too. And let me hear from you again. This situation should not be ignored.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: All my life my parents have taught me to be courteous and to respect my elders, but it's getting harder every day. I will give you an example.

Last week I went to a baseball game with two of my friends. They left their seats in the stadium for a few moments and while they were gone, a man about my father's age moved in and signaled another man to come join him. I told him those seats belonged to my friends, who would be back any moment. He said he would move when my friends returned.

Well, when my friends came back, this man refused to move. I reminded him that he had given his word, but he said, "Listen, kid, I'm 30 years older than you. You kids go find other seats."

LOVES BASEBALL

Dear Loves: Teenagers complain (and justifiably so) that they are individuals and want to be judged by their own actions — not by what their peers do. The same goes for adults. The men were rude, but they, fortunately, do not represent ALL adults. Be fair.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are middle-aged and we're watching our weight. We do all right at home, but our troubles begin when we're guests in someone's home — expecially when they serve midnight "snacks" after cards, etc.

We count our calories all week, and then the hostess puts all this stuff on the table and pushes it onto our plates, saying, "I've worked so hard, you've GOT to eat this!" Or, "If you don't eat it, I'll have to throw it out!"

We have come home stuffed and uncomfortable because we couldn't get out of eating. We tell ourselves, "Never again," but the next weekend it's the same story. Any suggestions?

KICKING OURSELVES IN HINSDALE

Dear Kicking: Don't blame your hostess. Tell her in advance that you're dieting and ask her to please have some carrots, celery or fresh fruit for you to nibble on. (Or you could bring your own.) No one is forced to eat anything he doesn't want.

BATHTUB RACE — Urged on by Geisha bands on the shore, contestants race down the Matsukawa River during the Tarai Nori — bathtub races — in the quiet resort town of Aragwa, Japan, on the Izu Peninsula Sunday. The madcap races take up most of the afternoon, with racers trying to reach the finish line six-tenths of a mile down the swiftly flowing river, often spending more time in the water than floating on it as the tubs overturn frequently. Escape Forces Minister To Quit

BERLIN (AP) — Justice Minister Juergen Baumann resigned Monday as West Berlin's top law enforcement official, forced out of office — as was his predecessor — by the escape of alleged terrorists from prison.

"I leave without ill will," Baumann said at a news conference, adding he would "not have considered it possible that positive work counts for so little here."

Baumann, 56, came under heavy criticism after terrorist suspect Till Meyer was freed from a maximum security Berlin prison on May 27. He said weekend meetings showed he no longer was fully trusted by the city's political leaders.

Meyer was freed by two armed women who got into Moabit Prison by flashing forgeries of allegedly fake-proof identification cards that said they were defense attorneys.

Baumann had been in office two years. His predecessor, Herrmann Oxfort, was forced to resign after terrorist suspects Inge Viett, Monika Berberich, Juliane Plambeck and Gabrielle Rollnik escaped from a womens' prison.

Miss Viett, Miss Rollnik and Miss Plambeck are suspects in the Meyer jailbreak. Miss Rollnik and Meyer were caught at a Bulgarian Black Sea resort June 21 and both have been brought back to West Berlin.

Meyer is one of six defendants who went on trial April 11 for the 1974 murder of a West Berlin judge and the 1975 kidnapping of city politician Peter Lorenz. Miss Rollnik also is a suspect in the cases.

West Berlin police said Monday they had tracked down a second "conspiratorial apartment," believed linked to the Meyer jailbreak.

Police said the apartment, in the city's Schoeneberg district, was rented by Klaus Viehmann, a 24-year-old West German bookseller arrested on a West Berlin street June 5.

Viehmann, allegedly a member of the Movement June 2 terrorist group to which Meyer and Miss Rollnik also belonged, rented the apartment under the alias of Dieter Winkler about two weeks before Meyer was freed, police said.

They said they had linked the apartment to a revolver attack on a lawyer in the Meyer trial and believed that Meyer and Angelika Goda, another terrorist suspect arrested in Bulgaria, had spent time in the apartment after the jailbreak.

Kidnappers Left To Deal With Victims –Their Kids

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — An Enid, Okla., couple were stopped by five police cruisers over the weekend. And they weren't even speeding.

But their children had placed a sign in the rear window that said: "Help. We're being kidnapped."

Ethnic Chambers To Meet Here

Delegates to the third annual convention, which was held last weekend in Austin, elected to hold the convention in the Hub City after hearing a presentation from Comerciantes Organizados Mexico Americanos, Lubbock's Mexican-American Chamber of Commerce.

Lubbock business persons Mario Perez and Esther Sepeda were elected as co-chairman for the 1979 TAMACC convention, slated to be held in July.

In other business, Mrs. Sepeda, co-owner of Sepeda Builders, was elected as secretary to the state organization.

Other new officers include Nelson Rodriguez of Harlingen, president; Joe Pena of Dallas, vice-president; and Leo Rivera of Houston, treasurer.

Painter Depicting American History In U.S. Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allyn Cox, at 82, is celebrating the 202nd anniversary of American independence this week with his brush and easel.

On a scaffolded wooden causeway, high in the arch of a corridor on the House side of the Capitol, Cox is filling the bare, brown walls with his vision of the origins and fruits of the American experience.

"The beginnings are down there," said Cox, one of America's last active muralists, as he waved down the corridor in the general direction of his sketch of the Mayflower Compact.

"The idea is to show this whole experiment of representative government and democracy, the beginnings and the flowering of our form of government."

Cox was interrupted last week as he applied a preliminary undercoat of paint to a scene of Thomas Jefferson working on the Declaration of Independence.

"I put that portrait of John Locke up there on the wall," Cox said. "I don't suppose there was anything of the kind on the wall of Jefferson's boarding house in Philadelphia. But Locke's ideas were the underpinnings of the declaration that Jefferson wrote, so I thought it would be interesting to do it."

Cox pointed to the chairs that Jefferson and his colleagues are using.

"I put my own chairs in that picture," he said. "I happen to own a pair of American Chippendales of just the right period, so I drew them in."

"I start with a small sketch," he said. "People in difficult positions, like John Adams there who is standing, bent over the table to look at Mr. Jefferson's product, I draw first in the nude. Then I find the proper costumes and I put it all together in the entire scene."

As Cox talked, the voices of tourists and the current generation of congressmen drifted up from below. He and his assistant work in a special, private world divorced from the bustle just below them.

"That's the Albany conference," he said. "That's when delegates from all the 13 colonies met together for the first time. At first I had them assembling on horseback, but when I found out that Benjamin Franklin came by boat I put them all on their feet again."

Bare light bulbs dangling from cords light the images of the American past. The Monroe Doctrine, Washington's farewell to his officers, Teddy Roosevelt on the stump, a Pilgrim woman spinning, the digging of the Panama Canal, a farmer and his scythe, a scientist uncovering the bones of a mammoth, a black Civil War soldier casting his first vote, the first amphibious steam vehicle lumbering out of the water in 1804.

"Here are the suffragettes marching in New York in 1917," Cox says. "There was a lady in here the other day who was in that parade. I told her that if she could find a photo of herself at 18 I'd put her in."

"There's no special feeling about painting him. He's just my ancestor, that's all," Cox says.

The new hall of murals has taken more than a year to research and plan and will take another two years to complete. Actual work began in May. It is costing the U.S. Capitol Historical Society $139,000, all of it in private funds.

"It's a steal," said society President Fred Schwengel, a former Iowa congressman. "There's no way we could get any other artist of his ability to do this so inexpensively. But he sees it as the capstone of his career."

Cox has been painting in the Capitol off and on since 1951, when he was called to complete a 36-foot section of frieze surrounding the rotunda that had been left unfinished at the death of artist Constantine Brumidi in the last century.

Cox has been painting since the age of 6 when he first began to help his father, muralist Kenyon Cox, who is responsible for several large murals in the Library of Congress.

Allyn Cox already has completed one House corridor. Its theme is the development and history of the Capitol itself. Plans have been made to paint a third House corridor following the theme of the westward expansion of the United States.

Missile Research To Be Continued

WASHINGTON (AP) — Research and development of the proposed mobile missile should continue, pending a final decision in the early 1980s on its deployment, according to a Carter administration study.

However, the study warned that deployment of the missile could increase chances of nuclear war and have destabilizing effects on the arms race.

DR. LAMB

Disease Of Arteries

DEAR DR. LAMB — My wife who is 57 years of age had a heart attack three years ago. This year she had a bilateral aorta femoral bypass with inservin of dacron bifurcation prosthesis from just below the heart and down into her legs.

In November she began having dizzy spells and some numbness in her fingers and the side of her face. Also she seemed to be very forgetful. The doctor said it was from lack of blood flowing to the brain and if medications did not work they would have to operate on the arteries in her throat by cleaning out the arteries.

My question is how successful is medication and is there some method or medicine that will dissolve the fatty and chemical deposits of the arteries other than by operating?

DEAR READER — Your wife's history demonstrates the point that the fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries is a disease of arteries. The same disease in the arteries to her heart caused the heart attack. This disease process in the arteries in her legs made it necessary to provide a detour of the circulation around the blocked arteries.

Now according to your letter she has evidence of poor blood flow to her brain because of blocked arteries in her neck, those that go to the brain. It is fairly uncommon to have such extensive involvement of arteries throughout the body in a woman as young as your wife unless she happens to have diabetes or high blood pressure.

Medicines to improve brain functions aren't really too successful. I wish I could say otherwise but they have been somewhat disappointing. The combinations of medicines and diet to help lower cholesterol and stop the fatty-cholesterol deposits in the body have been helpful but it's a slow process and, of course, even cleaning out the arteries won't correct the damaged heart muscle that has already occurred.

To help slow the progressive changes in the arteries it is important to be on a diet that has rather severely restricted the fat, particularly the saturated fat and cholesterol intake. The calories should be limited to the point that there is no obesity. If the person is already obese this means the calorie restriction should provide for gradual, sensible weight loss. There is some hope that such diets do help to improve the circulation.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis.

Easy Meals Not Easy To Pay For

By KIM COBB

Lubbock residents preferring a "meat and potatoes" diet may now have to cut out the potatoes — as well as the meat — in planning their food budgets.

A marketbasket survey of 16 staple grocery items indicated a steep rise in the cost of potatoes is chiefly responsible for the overall jump in grocery prices this month. The July total of $20.91 is a 45-cent increase over June's total of $20.46 for the same staple items.

Ten pounds of potatoes increased 30 cents, selling for $1.69 this month and $1.39 in June. The potatoes sold for $1.19 in May, registering a 50-cent increase over the past two months.

Five pounds of flour increased 10 cents, selling for 85 cents in June and 95 cents in July. Flour sold for 97 cents this time last year after having reached a high of $1.13 the previous month.

Sugar also showed a significant increase, going from $1.23 last month to $1.30 in July. A pound of all-beef wieners rose from $1.79 in June to $1.83 this month, indicating a 4-cent increase.

A gallon of homogenized milk climbed from $2.04 last month to $2.08 in July. Milk has been climbing slowly but steadily, selling for $1.92 in July last year.

Chicken registered the only other increase, moving from 60 cents a pound for fryers last month to 63 cents a pound in July. Chicken was selling at 49 cents a pound this time last year.

The biggest decrease was seen in a meat item. A pound of round steak is selling for $1.89 this month in contrast with last month's $1.98. Round steak sold at $1.09 a pound in July last year.

Price of a dozen medium eggs continued to decline, selling for 53 cents this month compared to 57 cents in June. Eggs have been decreasing slowly since they reached a high of 75 cents in March.

All other items remained stable.

A large loaf of bread is priced at 65 cents and a can of whole green beans is marked 43 cents. A pound of stick margarine still sells at 81 cents and a pound of hickory smoked bacon is $1.69 .

Regular grind coffee is priced at $3.39 a pound, still high, but down from October's price of $3.79 a pound.

Iceberg lettuce and peanut butter remained unchanged, the lettuce selling for 59 cents a pound and a 12-ounce jar of creamy peanut butter priced at 82 cents.

Laundry detergent completes the list of items remaining stable, priced at $1.63 for a 49-ounce box.

The local grocery prices are following the national trend, which has seen the rise in the cost of food as one of the major factors in the inflationary spiral. The most recent Consumer Price Index reported by the federal government showed a rise of nine-tenths of one percent in May, chiefly as a result of increases in the cost of food and housing.

Administration officials still are predicting that food prices will stabilize during the last half of the year, giving the nation an inflation rate of from 6 to 7 percent for the year. Some economists believe the figure will be considerably higher than that.

Meeting Nixon Puts Pilot In Clouds

HYDEN, Ky. (AP) — Randy Moore, co-pilot of the jet aircraft which Richard M. Nixon used on his trip to Kentucky this past weekend, says, "I'm still flying at 33,000 feet" after meeting the former president.

Moore, who spent a half-hour "making small talk with the president" said Nixon was very emotional about the reception he received here during the weekend.

"He told me that he really enjoyed it and would like to be invited back," Moore said, explaining that the conversation took place Sunday while the jet sat at the London, Ky., airport, 50 miles away, waiting for the weather to clear.

"I had gone into the cabin to get some maps and found Mr. Nixon eating ice cream and snack crackers, so I excused myself and started to back out. But he invited me to sit down and chat a while.

"It was easy to see that Mr. Nixon was very emotional about the whole thing. It really touched him."

About 4,000 people jammed the gymnasium named for the former president at Sunday ceremonies dedicating the building.

Plant Revitalizes Dimmitt Vegetable Production

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

DIMMITT — The area's vegetable production and processing industry received renewed emphasis here Friday with the opening of the new Dimco Industries vegetable processing plant.

Construction of the 300-by-120-foot facility had been underway since the first of the year, following nearly a year in the planning stage.

The $1 million vegetable plant, scheduled to begin processing potatoes and onions grown in Castro County this week, is equipped with various forms of up-to-the-minute vegetable packing equipment, according to Truman Touchstone, president of a corporation of Dimmitt area farmers who own the plant.

Other owners include Carl Bruegel and Ben Holcomb, vice presidents, Jerry Watts, secretary-treasurer, and Allan McClure, manager.

During the peak of the vegetable season in July and August, the facility is expected to employ 125 workers, plus an additional 150-175 field hands.

The packing shed will process carrots and lettuce this fall after the summer run of onions and potatoes.

"We feel we've made this facility as modern as we can get," Touchstone commented. "We have machinery that can process 1,400 sacks of onions per hour and 800 sacks of potatoes per hour.

"Everything that can be done that way is automated, and we have a product pump which will carry potatoes to the trading tables with water. We also have electronic sizing for count cartons," he added.

Touchstone indicated that an interest in expanding vegetable acreage in the Dimmitt area led to the construction of the Dimco facilities.

"Primarily, we are looking at vegetables as another production option. Maybe we can make them work for us, because wheat and corn haven't been doing so well the past couple of years," said Bruegel.

"We feel that with vegetables, maybe we can use our water a little better, irrigating vegetables when we don't need the water for grain crops. It's just a gamble on whether vegetables will make more money. They are a high risk commodity, and some years are better than others," he emphasized.

Bruegel indicated that the idea for the new vegetables shed was formulated among the Dimmitt farmers with the encouragement of Ben Holcomb, and informal discussions eventually led to the decision to build.

Bruegel reported that the new Dimmitt packing shed will process some 1,100 acres of potatoes, 550 acres of onions, 500 acres of carrots and 500 acres of lettuce in its first season.

"We felt like one shed here could handle only so many acres of vegetables, and this will give our area an opportunity to increase its acreage and give local farmers another option, if we can establish sufficient markets.

"We are dealing in perishable commodities, and we'll be limited by the market availability," Touchstone said.

Board Of Trade

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and corn futures plunged sharply, but wheat prices posted gains on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

The Department of Agriculture's report that farmers seeded a record 64.3 million acres of soybeans this spring triggered the collapse in those futures.

The amount was 9 percent more than soybean plantings last year, and exceeded average trade estimates by nearly two million acres.

Although the 78.7 million acres of planted corn reported by the department represented a 5 percent acreage cutback this season, it was on the high side of industry guesses.

A separate government report showed substantial soybean oil stocks as of the end of May, which prompted selling that pared those futures as much as the daily limit of 1 cent a pound.

Weekend rains in dry sections of the Midwest amplified the bearish mood. Also prompting selling were the heavier-than-expected deliveries of corn against open July contracts. Previous sellers of July contracts issued notices that they would deliver 5.5 million bushels of corn to satisfy their obligations in the futures market.

Wheat prices, however, recovered from a lower opening and finished with good-sized gains. Reports of lower yields in the winter wheat crop currently being harvested influenced the upswing. Winter wheat, which is planted in the fall, accounts for roughly 75 percent of total wheat production in the nation.

At the close, soybeans were 15 to 25 cents lower, with July contracts quoted at $6.70 a bushel; wheat was 2¾ to 4 cents higher, July $3.17½; corn was 4 to 4½ cents lower, July $2.44 and oats were 3 to 3¾ cents lower, July $1.23¾.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A record outturn — probably about 200,000 tons of lint — has been achieved in Argentina, and a very satisfactory crop has been harvested in both South Africa and Australia.

As in the United States, weather conditions in virtually all foreign Northern Hemisphere producing countries have been more favorable this month for young crops.

International trade interest has centered largely upon Russia, whose major producing areas earlier suffered substantial rain and hail damage which necessitated much replanting.

THERE IS STILL ROOM FOR DISAGREEMENT as to how confident Russia now is of her ability to achieve normal yields even if weather conditions are favorable for harvest.

However, the Cotton Outlook's own interpretation of recent Russian domestic press comment is that virtually all areas expect to approach their production targets unless the onset of winter is exceptionally early.

Eastern Mediterranean countries have reported excellent initial growth. Reports suggest that normal crops of around 140,000 and 525,000 tons, respectively, can be expected in Greece and Turkey and a record production of nearly 80,000 tons can be foreseen in Israel.

Optimistic comment is being received from both Pakistan and India, where good monsoon rains have been received in virtually all producing zones.

RAIN IS THE PRINCIPAL DETERMINANT of production in most African countries south of the Sahara, and these also have reported excellent precipitation during the past month.

Egypt's disappointingly small acreage was making good progress until last week, but concern regarding the severity of the first-generation leafworm attack — which in some past seasons has ravaged the crop — has crept back into reports within the past few days.

In Latin America, Mexico still looks for a lint outturn of around 1.4 million running bales. The Central American republics, just beginning planting, foresee production generally at very close to 1977-78 levels.

FAVORABLE CONDITIONS ARE REPORTED from North Brazil, where much of the cotton is of the perennial type. Initial estimates for that region are at or above the 180,000-ton level.

Colombia, in contrast, still reports gloomily upon production prospects for planting in the coastal region, normally the area which provides much of the medium staple exported to Western Europe.

Bad weather drastically reduced yields from the last crop, putting farmers in great financial difficulties. Loans still outstanding have been refinanced by the government credit organization, but these apparently will cover no more than about 25 percent of total costs.

148 Cities Seeking Housing Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Housing and Urban Development has received applications from 148 cities seeking federal funds to rehabilitate more than 50,000 housing units in 198 neighborhoods, HUD Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris said Sunday.

HUD regional offices are reviewing the requests and will forward those deemed eligible to Washington in mid-August. The HUD secretary will make the final selection in mid-September of those to receive a share of the $85 million in funding under the program, an amount estimated to be sufficient for 20,000 units.

August Leads Live Cattle Sales Surge

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 20 to 147 points higher Monday led by nearby August on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Sales were 21,818 cars. The prices shot up 570 points from recent lows to three-week highs on aggressive local selling and commission house buying.

Buying carried over from Friday as traders noted light arrivals and further strength in carcass beef, along with sharp gains in live cattle futures. Some demand also was touched off by weakness in most feed grains after sharp increases in planted acreage as reported by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Six-market arrivals today are expected to total 300 head. Cash feeders were unchanged to up $3 with the top at $74.50 per hundredweight in San Antonio.

Hog futures aborted an early gain of 100 points and ended 20 to 112 lower led by October. December was off 115 before stiffening. Turover was 5,218 contracts.

Reaction came after prices were lifted to two-week highs, up four cents per pound from recent lows on light hog runs and sharply higher prices. Profit-taking and other selling was induced mainly by some sharply lower feed grain prices.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up one cent at 75 to 77 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were unchanged to up $1.25 with the top at $50.50 per hundredweight in Indianapolis.

The contract was down 185 points for a time. The downturn followed an initial gain of 120 points in nearby July to a one-week high.

Initially, traders were impressed by light hog runs and higher prices. However, demand lacked follow-through as traders noted reduced bacon slicings and weakness in most feed grains.

Stock Mart Prices Sag

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices sagged and trading volume slowed to its lowest level of the year Monday in a session squeezed in between a weekend and the July 4 holiday.

New York Stock Exchange volume came to only 11.56 million shares, down from 18.11 million Friday and the lightest total since a 10.58 million-share day Analysts noted that it was difficult to read much significance into the market's meanderings given the absence of many traders.

The markets will be closed Tuesday for Independence Day. Monday was officially a normal business day, but it was evident that many market participants had taken it as part of an extended weekend.

Antitrust Suit Judgment Against Kodak Signed

NEW YORK (AP) — The final judgment in an $87.1 million antitrust suit filed by Berkey Photo Inc. against Eastman Kodak Co. was signed Monday, clearing the way for an appeal which Kodak lawyers said would be filed before the end of the year.

"We continue to believe the court applied an incorrect standard of law to the case and we shall so argue on appeal," said Kodak Chairman Walter A. Fallon.

The judgment was signed by U.S. District Judge Marvin E. Frankel, who presided over two jury trials which resulted in a finding that Kodak injured Berkey by monopolizing various amateur photography markets since 1969.

The first trial, which lasted six months and ended Jan. 21, established Kodak's liability. The second, ending March 22, resulted in the damage award of $37.6 million, which was reduced to $27.2 million by Frankel and then trebled as provided by regulations governing antitrust judgments.

Under the terms of the final judgment, the damage award comes to $81.5 million, with an additional $5.6 million to cover legal fees.

The judgment also spelled out two remedial actions Kodak must take to offset the practices the jury found gave Kodak an unfair competitive advantage.

One was that Kodak must sell Berkey and other customers who request it color photographic paper without Kodak's identifying marks under the same terms as paper containing the Kodak trademark.

Court Backs States On Water Use Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Monday broadened the power of states to control water resources in federally built conservation projects.

In a 6-3 decision, the court upheld the efforts of California state officials to impose conditions on the use of water in the federal government's New Melones Dam, a part of the California Central Valley Project.

In a separate but related case, the court decided in favor of New Mexico in a dispute with the federal government over diversion of water from the Rio Mimbres River. The court ruled 5-4 that the state has primary control over water from the river, which flows through the federal government's Gila National Forest.

The majority opinion in the California case, written by Justice William Rehnquist, held that the Reclamation Act of 1902 "clearly provided that state water law would control in the appropriation and later distribution of the water" for federal projects.

The ruling overturned a decision by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that California lacked authority to place conditions on use of the water for the federal dam.

As a result of the Supreme Court ruling, California, even though it has already granted the federal government general rights to the water, may require federal officials to show firm commitments before the water may actually be used. The court sent the case back to the lower courts to determine what conditions California may attach to its water grant.

The New Melones Dam, on the Stanislaus River in the San Joaquin Valley, is intended to provide flood control, irrigation and hydroelectric power. Today's ruling does not deal with another controversial federal practice that limits sale of water to holders of tracts of land of less than 160 acres.

Justice Byron R. White, in a dissenting opinion joined by Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall, said the majority ruling ran counter to previous interpretations of the Reclamation Act of 1902. White suggested that Congress could straighten out the problem by passing legislation to make it clear state agencies should control spending of federal funds on reclamation projects as well as priorities for the use of water.

The New Mexico Supreme Court held that under the Organic Administration Act of 1897, states have primary control over water rights in national forests.

The decision was challenged by the federal government on grounds that the ruling "contradicts nearly eight decades of legislative and administrative understanding."

Frampton Remains In N.Y. Hospital

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock star Peter Frampton remained in satisfactory condition Monday at Lenox Hill Hospital, where he was being treated for injuries suffered in an car accident last week in the Bahamas, hospital officials said.

Frampton suffered a broken right arm and cuts that required 12 stitches when the car he was driving ran off the road in a rainstorm and struck a tree last Thursday, according to his press agent, Paul Block.

Holiday Music Custom Continues

BOSTON (AP) — With a bob of his regal, snowy head, Arthur Fiedler swings down his baton and sweeps the Boston Pops Orchestra into Tchaikovsky's bombastic 1812 Overture. It happens every July 4th, but this year is special.

This is the 50th Independence Day in which Fiedler will conduct free outdoor music, open to anyone, on the banks of the Charles River.

And this exercise in musical democracy will be a landmark not just for Fiedler, but for music throughout the United States.

The free concerts here were the first of their kind. Now they have been imitated by hundreds of orchestras across the country.

The same day, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and the Grant Park Symphony Orchestra will play the 1812 Overture on their lakefront. The Philadelphia Orchestra, once led by another popularizer of classical music, the late Leopold Stokowski, will be entering a 49th summer of free outdoor concerts. And the San Francisco Symphony will be planning a similar free park concert July 23.

But Fiedler did it first.

He got the idea while leading a chamber orchestra called the Boston Sinfonietta. He directed the first concert in Boston's riverbank park, called the Esplanade, on July 4, 1929.

Fiedler, now 83, remembers that first outing, which he opened with John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

"When we started, we had a crowd there of about 5,000 people, which was mostly rubbernecks wondering what it was all about. I started to play music that the people like very much and also some classical music."

This musical oddity caught on. The crowds grew, and Fiedler and the Pops became a Fourth of July must in Boston. On the bicentennial Independence Day in 1976, 400,000 people crammed the Esplanade for a wildly exuberant patriotic bash.

Fiedler's aim was to bring people in to hear Sousa and send them away humming Beethoven. He is convinced it has worked.

"It's very gratifying to me to meet a man who is perhaps 60 years old whose first approach to music was at the Esplanade," he says. "I think that is achieving something."

This year's program is typical Fiedler.

He will start with "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," then play the first movement of Beethoven's 5th Symphony and Strauss' "Blue Danube" waltz.

Next will come Stephen Foster songs, "The Star Spangled Banner," and a sing-along medley of patriotic tunes.

In addition to the Fourth of July concerts, there are 10 other outdoor programs in a typical summer. Most are conducted now by Fiedler's assistant, Harry Ellis Dickson.

Often 50,000 people or more spread blankets on the grass in front of the music shell. They picnic and nonchalantly sip beer and wine beneath signs that emphatically warn that drinking is illegal.

With flowing white hair, military mustache and dignified bearing, Fiedler looks the very image of decorum. So the contrast is all the more unnerving when he launches into show tunes and top 10 hits.

Fiedler's name is inseparably linked with the "Pops" — the 105-member Boston Symphony Orchestra minus its 12 first-chair players. He began directing it in 1930, and although 17 conductors preceded him in the job, he has held it longer than all of them combined.

His Pops albums have sold more than 50 million copies, and a spokesman says this is more than any other orchestra. His weekly television program, "Evening at Pops," is the most popular one carried by the Public Broadcasting System.

At indoor Pops performances each spring, concert-goers sit at round tables, nibble sandwiches, and listen to music against a background of popping champagne corks. The season is usually sold out.

"Arthur has broken down and trampled on our stuffy old customs and let some fresh air into the concert hall," said Ralph Black, director of the American Symphony Orchestra League, a trade group.

"He has revolutionized music in America today," Black said. "We used to simply have the black tie and long dress people come to concerts. I think to a large extent Arthur Fiedler has changed that around, showed that you can smile at a concert, have a good time and laugh and enjoy yourself."

Black says almost all the nation's 1,452 orchestras have at least one or two free concerts a year.

Fiedler still works at a hectic pace — more than 100 appearances as a guest conductor in 1977. But he is starting to think of retirement.

"I haven't come to any conclusion, really," he says. "I'm thinking yes, and I'm thinking no.

"It will have to come sometime. I don't want to stay until they kick me out. I'd rather kick myself out."

Longest Split Effort Comes Up Short

That's what the youngsters and staff at Camp Samoset are assembling to celebrate the Fourth of July and, they hope, make the Guinness Book of World Records.

Stephen Shatkin, one of the summer camp's directors, said, "We don't know that there is a current record" for banana splits.

Some 25 boys, aged 15, and five members of the kitchen staff are assembling the banana split made up of 600 bananas, 75 gallons of ice cream, 50 pounds of strawberries, 25 pounds of marshmallow topping, 25 pounds of chopped nuts, three gallons of chocolate syrup and three gallons of cherries.

But is it a record? Sorry, but Shatkin should have checked the Guinness book which now lists a mile-long split. That one used 10,580 bananas and 33,000 scoops of ice cream.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We are trying to rearrange our finances. My husband is collecting $366 a month from a teacher's pension and will get about $140 a month from Social Security when he retires from the sales job he now holds. When he retires in a year or so, we will sell our present home for about $100,000 and buy a smaller home.

The question is what to do with the money we will have at that time — hopefully, about $40,000. I want to put it in insured savings accounts. My husband wants to invest it in a company which is working on "cars of the future," using different energy sources. I say that is too risky. He says I am short-sighted. What do you say?

A. The last thing this column wants to do is get involved in family financial arguments. But yours is such a clear-cut case, I have to side with you.

Your husband just might turn out to be right. It's possible that the company you named in your letter might hit it big and make a bundle of money for its stockholders. But the odds are against it.

The hard financial facts are that relatively new, small companies operating in "exotic" lines of endeavor have high failure ratios. They have to be counted as speculations, rather than investments.

Stocks of such companies are made to order for people who have absolutely spare cash they can afford to put at risk. But, from your letter, it's clear that you cannot.

Insured savings accounts or insured savings certificate — which pay higher interest — are far more suitable for you.

• • •

Q. Assuming that two parties agree on a price, is there any reason they cannot exchange stocks between themselves — without dealing through a broker?

A. No reason at all. If you want to buy some stock from someone you know who owns that stock, you can handle the details yourself. Just make sure you don't overlook any of those details.

The seller must sign the stock certificate on the back, exactly as his or her name appears on the front. The signature must be guaranteed by either a broker-age firm or a commercial bank.

The certificate should be sent, by registered mail, to the transfer agent — whose name appears on the front of the cerfiticate — with instructions to issue a new cerficate registered in the name of the buyer. The transfer agent will let you know if any transfer taxes are due.

A new cerificate will be issued in the name of the buyer and the deal will be over and done with.

The seller should provide a written bill of sale to the buyer and the buyer should provide a receipt to the seller, so they will both have records for tax purposes.

One Catch 22. Don't make a habit of buying and selling stock on your own. You might get in trouble for acting as a broker without a license.

• • •

Q. I bought three over-the-counter stocks and nearly flipped at the commissions I was charged. I'll never do business with that broker again. Why were the commissions so high? Is there no limit?

A. Fixed commission schedules on stocks went out the window on May 1, 1975, when the Securities and Exchange Commission mandated that all commissions be "negotiated."

Since that time, commission charges have been wide open and vary all over the lot. It's up to the customer to find out what the broker will charge. Why didn't you ask before you bought?

• • •

Q. I heard about a firm which has been providing people with 25 percent return on their investments for 11 years. Would this involve great risk?

A. Indeed it would, if it exists. I'd call it hogwash.

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2..

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Most Americans Advance After Wimbledon Fourth-Round Play

The Americans joining Evert in today's quarter-finals are Billie Jean King, Martina Navratilova, Jimmy Connors, Vitas Gerulaitis, Brian Gottfried and Sandy Mayer.

In the women's bracket it will be Evert vs. King, defending champion Virginia Wade of England vs. Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia, Virginia Ruzici of Romania vs. Evonne Goolagong of Australia and Marise Kruger of South Africa vs. Navratilova, while the men's pairings are defending champion Borg vs. Mayer, Tom Okker of the Netherlands vs. Nastase, Gottfried vs. Gerulaitis and Raul Ramirez of Mexico vs. Connors.

Nastase beat Tanner, the American left-hander, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3. And on a dull, cold day in which spectators sat huddled in overcoats, the final point of the day's play brought the crowd to life.

Tanner, serving to save the match, was beaten when a linesman called a double fault. Tanner argued with the umpire for several minutes and demanded to see the referee, Fred Hoyles, who ventured onto court but refused to intervene.

Tanner then shook hands quickly with Nastase, gathered up his sweater and rackets, nodded quickly to the Duke and Duchess of Kent in the Royal Box and strode brusquely off, with Nastase trotting several yards behind him.

"The serve was good," Tanner said later. "Nastase said it was in and was ready to play the point again. There was no communication with the umpire. He refused to comment or give me any explanation, but simply kept repeating, 'Game, set and match.' That was why I asked to see the referee."

Tanner admitted, though, that Nastase was in great form and beat him soundly. "I was failing with my first service and he kept hitting my second service back at my feet and winning the points," Tanner said.

Evert turned back 10th-seeded Kerry Reid of Australia 6-3, 6-4 to set up a quarter-final confrontation with King. The fifth-seeded King, seeking a seventh singles crown which would give her a record 20 titles (singles and women's and mixed doubles), beat 15th-seeded Sue Barker of Britain 6-2, 6-2.

King, who has undergone surgery on both knees, needed a cortisone shot in her left heel 15 minutes before the match because of painful bone spurs. She didn't know whether she would repeat the shot before her match against Evert.

"I said, 'Give it to me quick,' because I go into shock when I see a needle," King said. "Mentally, I feel fine. Physically, I just don't know."

Borg, trying for his third successive Wimbledon title, swept past unseeded Australian Geoff Masters 6-2, 6-4, 8-6 and called it his best match of the tournament. The Swedish star served several double-faults, but usually followed them up with brilliant winners.

Borg, who had a tough five-setter against towering Vic Amaya in the first round a week ago, said: "The first few rounds at Wimbledon are always difficult, when you go straight onto grass from clay court tournaments. If you can pass the first round or two, you begin to play better."

Navratilova, the No. 2 women's seed, routed 15-year-old American Tracy Austin 6-2, 6-3 while Connors, No. 2 among the men, overcame his own sloppiness to defeat Australian John Alexander 6-2, 6-2, 6-4.

Gerulaitis dropped a set but beat Hank Pfister, a lanky American with a powerful service, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3. Gottfried, playing with professional efficiency, downed Tim Gullikson, right-handed half of the Dayton, Ohio, twins, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2.

Mayer figured in the only five-setter of the fourth round, defeating Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-4, 6-2, 6-8, 1-6, 7-5. Ramirez mastered Australia's John Newcombe, the 34-year-old three-time Wimbledon champion, 6-2, 9-8, 6-3, and Okker eliminated Tom Leonard of the United States 6-1, 9-8, 6-1.

Wade was relegated to a court at the far end of the grounds, where she made many errors in the swirling wind before overcoming 22-year-old Ruta Gerulaitis, Vitas' sister, 7-5, 6-4. Ruzici, the dark-haired Romanian, came from behind to eliminate Betty Stove of The Netherlands, last year's defeated finalist, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

Goolagong, the 1971 champion, beat Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 6-2, Kruger disposed of Dianne Fromholtz of Australia 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Fireworks

IT WAS HOT in Big Spring; but it was even hotter in Del Rio. In West Texas, however, it's always hot on the Fourth of July.

But, back in the days when air conditioners were for the rich but definitely not for three-year-old Studebakers, folks heading for Del Rio one Fourth of July were sweating.

Traffic through that part of the state never gets very fierce, but this is before the roads converge on the border city. Once past Del Rio, and heading toward the river, the road was plenty dusty and plenty hot and plenty congested. Trees provided little comfort from the heat, and only when one could catch a glimpse of the customs house on the U.S. side of the international bridge did one have the feeling he might make it across before nightfall.

National holidays may be for waving flags and Red, White and Blue, and fireworks. But, frankly, it's also a holiday. . . time off from the store. And the people in hundreds of cars lining the highway to cross that narrow bridge on a hot Fourth of July in the early 50's weren't unpatriotic so much as they were just plain vacationers.

• • •

THAT SUMMER, THERE was talk of pushing a general from Kansas, named Dwight Eisenhower, as the Republican nominee for president. And there was a real shooting war going on in Korea. A "Police Action" it was termed, as much from derision as from realism.

But, that Friday, the police action belonged to the men on either sides of the bridge inspecting cars, collecting the pennies of toll and trying to make some order of the congestion. They were forgotten, however, once the people gushed past the bottleneck and fanned out south of the bridge.

Not far from that bridge was a bull ring. This, now, wasn't Mexico City or Barcelona, and the ring wasn't overpowering in size or beauty. It was workable, and it held the people.

And that sweaty and hot afternoon, there was an American going against the bulls. Not only an American, but a woman.

From Big Spring, Tex.

• • •

SHE WAS THE one many of the folks from north of the Rio Grande had some to watch.

Some came with a knowledge of the sport, knowing when and why to yell, "Ole!" Others came only to gawk and be initiated, their only knowledge of such places being to watch where they stepped in the vicinity of the brave bulls.

The Bleacher Bums in Wrigley Field would have felt right at home in Del Rio's bull ring that afternoon. They would have known immediately that the tickets marked sunny side were cheaper —and why.

There, the fans kept on their sombreros, but off came the shirts. Across the way, the shaded spectators, possibly a bit more affluent, just sweltered, pride preventing them from shucking pieces of outer wear and reaching a more comfortable state.

But, to a wide-eyed Texan, schooled only in the ways of firsts-and-ten, five-minute miles and summer-scrub softball, a bullfight was a new and different world.

• • •

THERE WERE A couple of young Mexican bullfighters on the afternoon program. But the attraction was an attractive young woman.

This was not the first fight for Patricia McCormick, who through the winter months studied art at the University of Texas.

An artist she was, but there was more than an art form on her mind as she concentrated on the bulls that afternoon. This was not a young woman standing, racquet in hand, peering across the net at a singles opponent.

She eyed the bulls as something more, as the sweat of work peppered her face. She answered questions put to her as she stood behind the wooden barricades which separated her from the bulls, but the answers were wooden as the barriers; her interest was focused on the bull. There was a serious and respectful look in her eyes as she stared at the. And, her concentration and respect of the animals reached the outer ring of spectators.

Some of the happier ones in the stands even set aside their sudsy refreshments to study her movements, as they mentally walked with her, hoping the horns would speed on past her hip or arm with at least some space to spare. To these fans, their cries of "Ole!" were expressions of relief as much as praise.

Through the afternoon, Patricia McCormick toiled, until finally the final acts were done and the crowd rewarded her with ears from each bull. Then, slowly, the arena emptied, only to create another bottleneck at the nearby bridge as the traffic sped northward and home.

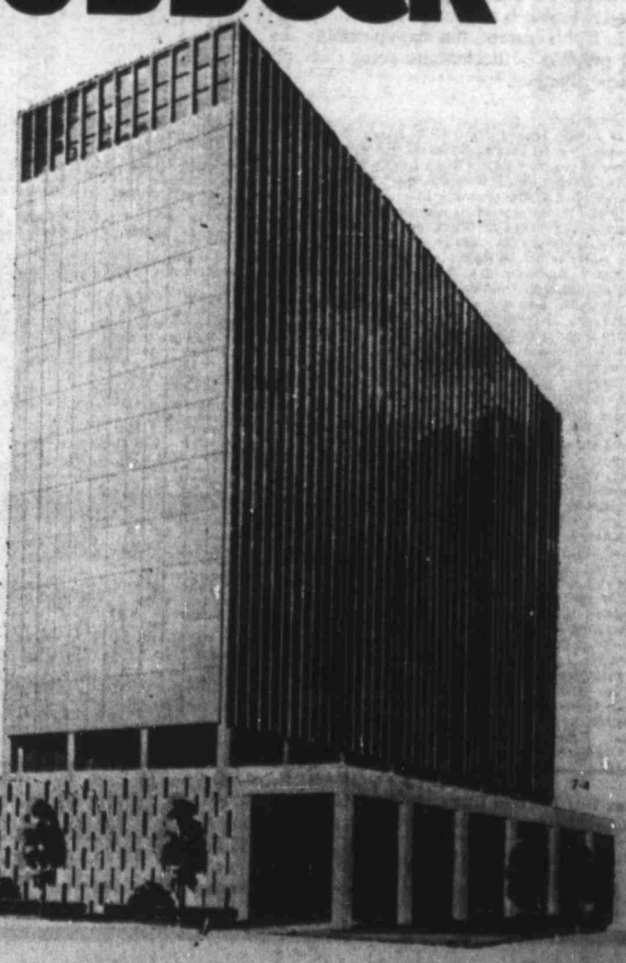

Today, Patricia is living in California, pursuing an art career, her days in the ring a part of her past. But, maybe in a moment of relaxation, she will mentally return to the days of the 50's, to a hot, dusty border town, to a small bull ring, to a Fourth of July holiday when she gave some Texans their only look at a most deadly game.

Bean Defeats Rogers For Western Crown

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Andy Bean rolled home a 3-foot putt for a par on the first sudden-death hole Monday to defeat Bill Rogers in a playoff for the Western Open title and claim his third victory on the pro golf tour in five weeks.

They went to the 16th tee tied with scores of 6-under-par 282 after Rogers salvaged a bogey on the 18th, where he put his tee shot into a water hazard.

On the playoff hole, the par-4, 381-yard 16th, Rogers whipped his tee shot down the middle of the fairway while Bean found the right rough. But their fortunes soon shifted.

Swinging a four-iron, Bean put his ball within 5 feet of the pin. Rogers sent his second shot sailing into the gallery behind the green. Rogers then chipped his ball to within about 5 feet of the hole, left his first putt short and tapped in for a bogey 5.

All Bean needed was to putt out in two from about 5 feet to win the $45,000 first prize of the $225,000 purse. But he went about 3 feet by the hole before dropping his tournament-winning putt.

He earned $60,000 by winning the Kemper Open by five strokes on June 4. The next weekend he won $50,000 in the Memphis Classic, which he captured on the first sudden-death hole in a playoff with Lee Trevino.

First-day leader Cesar Sanudo and defending champion Tom Watson, who also won the Western in 1974, finished at 285. Sanudo had a 68 Monday and Watson 71.

Bean, who shot a 75 Saturday, went into the final round trailing 14 golfers and tied with six. But as many of the others stumbled through up-and-down rounds, Bean weathered three bogeys with a brilliant performance from the fourth to the 16th holes.

After three-putting from 35 feet for a bogey at the third, he repeatedly put his approach shots close to the hole and came up with birdies at 4, 6, 7, 8, 10, 12, 14, 15 and 16. His other bogeys were at the ninth and 11th holes.

Meanwhile, Rogers, the third-round leader who shot a 72 Monday, persevered as his steady game became erratic. He had a birdie at the first hole and followed it with nine pars. His bogey at the par-3, 176-yard 11th hole tied him with Bean but the 26-year-old Texan came back.

Blalock Wins LPGA Tourney

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Jane Blalock, a 32-year-old former schoolteacher, pulled away from the field with birdies on her fifth and sixth holes Monday and easily captured her 20th career victory in the $75,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Harbour Trees course.

Blalock finished with a seven-under par 209, three strokes ahead of runnerup Joyce Kazmierski on the 6,044-yard, par-72 course. Amy Alcott, who had an eagle on the 452-yard fifth hole, was third at 213.

The victory, her second this year, was worth $11,250 to Blalock, a former New England amateur champion, who is now the LPGA tour's third-leading all-time money winner.

Blalock, known for her pigtails throughout the tour, has won about $538,650 since turning pro in 1969. Only Kathy Whitworth, with about $755,000 and Judy Rankin, with about $630,000, have won more.

Blalock began her final round protecting a one-stroke lead over Kazmierski and Jerilyn Britz, with a three-under 141. She started with four consecutive pars before scoring birdies on the 377-yard fifth and the 312-yard sixth holes, both par-fours, putting her out of reach.

Blalock later sank a 20-foot putt for a birdie on the ninth hole and added bird on the 11th and 16th before getting her only bogey for the day on No. 17.

Kazmierski, who is still seeking her first victory since joining the tour in 1968, was unable to gain any ground on Blalock as she parred hole after hole. Kasmierski scored her first birdie of the day on the 14th hole and followed with another birdie, but it was too late.

Rankin, the defending champion here, made a late charge with five birdies on the back nine and finished one-under par in a tie with Jan Stephenson for fourth.

Rookie Nancy Lopez, who has won seven LPGA tournaments this year—including a record five in a row—had a bogey and double-bogey on her first two holes and finished three-over par at 219.

JoAnne Carner, Sandra Palmer and Britz wound up tied for sixth at an even par-216. Donna Caponi Young, who needed four stitches in her left thumb Sunday and had to visit a chiropractor for a back ailment Monday morning, was next at 218, followed by Lopez.

Lopez began the day three strokes behind Blalock, with an even par 144 for 36 holes. But the 21-year-old rookie, who said Saturday she felt she was regaining some lost confidence in her putting, two-putted for a bogey on the 380-yard, par-four opening hole.

Then she went three over with a double bogey on the 515-yard, par-five second hole before settling down and parring the next two holes.

Dietzel Returns To LSU As AD

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Paul Dietzel said Monday he will return to Louisiana State University, a school he coached to the national football championship 20 years ago, as athletic director.

Dietzel's decision, three days after he was interviewed for the post at Baton Rouge, was announced jointly by Indiana University president John Ryan and LSU chancellor Paul Murrill. Dietzel became athletic director at Indiana in 1976 after serving as commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference.

"Paul Dietzel has served Indiana University well in several ways, including effective representation in the Big Ten Conference and the National Collegiate Athletic Association and has improved the organization of our athletic department," the announcment by Ryan said.

"Under his leadership, there has been an increase in support of our athletic program by alumni and friends, just as there has been an increase in general public awareness of our intercollegiate athletic activities. While we regret his decision to leave, we understand his desire to return to LSU and wish him well in his future endeavors," Ryan said.

Until a new athletic director is named, Ralph Floyd, who was Dietzel's assistant, will be responsible for the administration of the athletic department, the Indiana president said.

Ryan said he will confer immediately with the IU athletic committtee and Jack Wentworth, faculty representative to the Big Ten and the NCAA regarding Dietzel's successor.

Dietzel, who coached the LSU Tigers from 1955 to 1961, said he will meet with newsmen at Baton Rouge on Friday morning at the LSU Assembly Center.

He said he and his wife, Anne, "have decided that we must return to the place we feel most at home—to Baton Rouge and LSU."

"President Ryan returned from Europe a day early and was a most gracious listener as I explained the situation, and I am grateful that he understands. It has been a most difficult decision because of my respect and admiration for Indiana University and the Big Ten Conference."

Dietzel was appointed athletic director at Indiana in September 1975, after the university conducted a year-long search to replace Bill Orwig. Dietzel fulfilled his commitment as Ohio Valley commissioner, then took over full-time at Bloomington in March 1976.

His football coaching career was highlighted by an 11-0 record and the national championship with LSU in 1958. Overall, his LSU teams were 46-23-3, including 35-7-1 the last five seasons. After the 1961 season, he left to take the coaching job at Army.

As recently as a month ago, Dietzel said he was not an applicant to succeed retiring athletic director Carl Maddox at LSU. But last week, a special selection committee recommended him for the job. He said he would not make a deicision without consulting Ryan.

"It is the most flattering thing I have ever received," Dietzel said of the LSU offer, "to be invited to come back home to a great institution of immeasurable assets and incalculable potential by the LSU board of supervisors."

He said the athletic directorship "is a great challenge to me. . . Maddox has done as fine a job as any athletic director in the country. Thanks to his leadership, the athletic department has great facilities plus fine coaches and personnel."

He said his major task will be "to get all of the Tigers and their fans aimed in the same precise direction for the good of LSU with no worry about who gets the credit. It's going to be fun."

Guidry Tops AL Mound Corps

NEW YORK (AP) — Unbeaten Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees heads a list of seven pitchers named Monday by Manager Billy Martin to compete for the American League in baseball's All-Star Game at San Diego July 11.

Martin, manager of the World Champion Yankees, said he will add an eighth pitcher to the team later this week.

Guidry, a slender left hander with a blazing fastball, set a club record for consecutive victories Sunday when he beat the Detroit Tigers 3-2 to raise his record to 13-0. He is two short of the major-league record for consecutive victories, which is shared by Johnny Allen and Dave McNally.

This will be the first All-Star appearance for Guidry, who is in his second major league season. He leads the AL with a 1.75 earned run average and 123 strikeouts in 134 innings.

Joining Guidry on the squad will be Jim Palmer and Mike Flanagan of the Baltimore Orioles, Frank Tanana of the California Angels and Matt Keough of the Oakland A's, all starters, and relief pitchers Rich Gossage of the New York Yankees and Jim Kern of the Cleveland Indians.

The seven pitchers have a combined record of 60-30 and a 2.53 earned run average.

Besides Guidry, it will also be the first All-Star Game for Flanagan and Keough.

Gossage appeared in the 1975 game for the American League as a member of the Chicago White Sox and in the 1977 game for the National League as a member of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Daytona Stock Car Race Unfolds Today

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — David Pearson's biorhythms were the best of any driver in the field for the Daytona 500 here in February, and naturally the people who put stock in such things said Pearson had the best chance to win the race. If Pearson didn't win, the biorhythm charts then favored Darrell Waltrip's chances.

So what happened? In the race, Pearson crashed into Waltrip, putting them both on the sidelines.

Nobody seems to have checked Pearson's intellectual, physical or emotional curves as the Grand National stock car tour returns to Daytona International Speedway for today's $190,000 Firecracker 400.

They seem to be more interested in the horsepower curve— as it shows up on the engine dynamometer, which appears to be favoring Cale Yarborough, the pole position starter, and his snub-nosed Oldsmobile 442.

"Cale must have 20-25 more horsepower than we do," moaned second-place qualifier Benny Parsons, despite the fact his Oldsmobile's qualifying speed was only .174 of a second off Yarborough's 186.803 mph run.

That gave the critics of the supposed advantage General Motors cars enjoy under current NASCAR rules all the ammunition they needed for a renewed verbal assault.

"It's the same old story," complained Maurice Petty, Richard's brother and crew chief, after the Petty Dodge qualified seventh. "Our car is wider and not as streamlined as the GM products. We've been fighting this problem all year. We're just hoping our car hangs in the draft real good."

Pearson, even though he qualified third, said he hoped his Mercury was "running fast enough to hang on to the GM cars, I reckon. If I don't lose the draft, I'll be all right.

German Miler Sets Record

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Thomas Wessinhage of West Germany clocked 3 minutes, 52.50 seconds to smash the European mile record in the first of a two-day international track and field meet Monday night.

Wessinhage, who beat Josef Placy of Czechoslovakia and Steve Scott of the United States, bettered his own record by six-tenths of a second. Placy timed 3:52.59 for second with Scott taking third in 3:52.93.

The strong American team, expected to dominate this meet, took a 1-2 victory in 400 meter hurdles, with Quentin Wheeler finishing in front of Rick Graybehl.

Al Feuerbach avenged an earlier defeat by Hreinn Halldorson of Iceland, and won the shot put with a toss of 67 feet, 2 inches, well ahead of Wladislaw Komar of Poland at 65-8½ and Halldorson at 64-11½.

Other American winners included Jodi Anderson in the women's long jump, with a leap of 21 feet, 5 inches and Clancey Edwards in the men's 100 meters, with a time of 10.34. Houston McTear was third in 10.51.

In the men's 800 meters, John Higham of Australia clocked 1:47.30 to beat American Tom Mclean and Milovan Savic of Yugoslavia.

In the women's 100 meters, Sweden"s Linda Haglund, with a late rush, shook off the two American entries to win in 11.30. Evelyn Ashford was second in 11.37 and Judi Anderson third in 11.58.

Gabriella Dorio won the women's 800 meters in 2:01.93, outrunning second-placed Kathy Weston of the U.S. by more than two seconds.

Montreal Hands Pittsburgh Shutout

By The Associated Press

Hal Dues and Steve Rogers, making a rare relief appearance, stopped Pittsburgh on four hits and Dave Cash and Ellis Valentine each knocked in a run to give the Montreal Expos a 2-0 victory over the Pirates Monday night.

Dues, 2-4, left in the seventh inning for a pinch-hitter and Rogers pitched the last two innings, allowing just a single and a walk. Rogers, normally a starter, was making his first relief appearance since 1976.

The loser was John Candelaria, 7-8.

TWINS 7, BREWERS 2

Roy Smalley capped a four-run sixth with a two-run homer and rookie Roger Erickson won his ninth game of the year as the Minnesota Twins beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-2.

The Brewers staked Jerry Augustine to a 1-0 lead in the fourth on singles by Dick Davis, Larry Hisle and Sixto Lezcano.

The Twins knocked out Augustine in the sixth. Rod Carew, led off with a single and moved to third on a wild pitch and a fly ball before scoring on Jose Morales' single.

Willie Norwood doubled, sending Morales to third. Then Morales scored on Larry Wolfe's sacrifice fly for a 2-1 Twins lead.

INDIANS 9, ORIOLES 0

Seldom-used Larvell Blanks hit a solo homer and a two-run single, both in Cleveland's six-run third inning, to back Mike Paxton's six-hit pitching and lead the Indians to a 9-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Cleveland collected 16 hits, including three each by Blanks, Andre Thornton — who homered and scored three times — and Ted Cox.

Scott McGregor, 8-7, lasted until the third, when the Indians used six hits to put the game away.

They were ahead 2-0 when Blanks led off with a home run, his second of the season. Buddy Bell and Thornton followed with singles and Gary Alexander walked to load the bases.

ANGELS 7, ROYALS 4

The California Angels rode a three-run fourth inning to a 7-4 victory over Kansas City, the Royals' seventh loss in eight games.

Knapp, 9-6, recorded his second victory over Kansas City in five days. The Angels, winning their sixth in seven games, got their first four-runs-off-starter Doug Bird, 3-4.

California took a 1-0 lead in the first when Rick Miller led off with a walk, moved to third on a wild pitch and a ground ball, and scored on Lyman Bostock's sacrifice fly. George Brett singled in the Kansas City second, stole second, and came home when Darrell Porter doubled to right.

RED SOX 9, YANKEES 5

Carl Yastrzemski, reaching another milestone in his brilliant career, keyed a Boston barrage of extra-base hits with a double and a pair of singles, powering the Red Sox to a 9-5 victory over the New York Yankees.

Yastrzemski's run-scoring double in the third inning was the 2,800th hit of his career. He and Carlton Fisk, who added a double and a single, had three RBI each in Boston's attack on three pitchers.

The Red Sox' 12 hits included seven doubles, two by George Scott, and a triple by Jim Rice.

REDS 8, ASTROS 7

With one out in the 11th, Johnny Bench doubled off the third base bag. Auerbach came in as a pinch-runner and scored one out later on Kennedy's single.

Doug Bair, 3-3, picked up the victory in relief. Joe Sambito, 3-5, took the loss.

Houston tied the game in the ninth with two runs. One scored when reliever Dave Tomlin hit Terry Puhl with a pitch with the bases loaded and the other on a sacrifice fly by Wilbur Howard.

The Astros scored twice in the first inning on a home run by Terry Puhl and Art Howe's RBI-single.

The Astros came back in the third, scoring three runs in a rally capped by rookie Luis Pujols' RBI-single.

CUBS 6, CARDS 2

Pitcher Dave Roberts belted his sixth career home run and hurled six-hit ball through five innings as the Chicago Cubs beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2.

Roberts, a veteran of seven major league clubs, improved his record to 4-3 with his third victory over the Cardinals in as many tries. Loser Pete Falcone, 1-6, was the victim of Roberts' blast.

Ivan DeJesus' leadoff single and stolen base and Bobby Murcer's one-out double gave Chicago a 1-0 lead in the first inning.

But in the third, Jerry Mumphrey's two-out triple down the right field line and Keith Hernandez' single produced a 1-1 tie which held until Roberts connected for his homer to start the Cubs's fifth.

TIGERS 6, BLUE JAYS 5

Lou Whitaker's two-run single in the bottom of the ninth inning lifted the Detroit Tigers to a 6-5 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Toronto starter Jim Clancy walked Tim Corcoran to start the rally. Tom Murphy, 2-6, relieved and gave up a pinch double to John Wockenfuss. Murphy intentionally walked Ron LeFlore to fill the bases, then Whitaker poked his single off Mike Willis — the inning's third pitcher — to score Corcoran and pinch-runner Steve Dillard.

Biffy Pass Outsprints Rainbow Derby Field

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (Special) —Biffy Pass went flying down to the wire on the far outside and grabbed a neck victory in Monday's $516,500 Rainbow Quarter Horse Derby at Ruidoso Downs.

Biffy Pass, which went for a modest $15,000 in the 1976 All American Yearling Sale at Ruidoso, collected a hefty $179,025 for her Rainbow win.

Miss Thermolark, a 9-2 shot owned by Ronny Schliep of Miami, Tex., got the lead early in the 440-yard dash and appeared to be en route to victory at the halfway point.

Miss Thermolark was moving with great eagerness with about 100 yards to go. But that's when Biffy Pass really began wheeling. The filly swept down to the finish with plenty of momentum and overtook the game Miss Thermolark not far from the wire.

The winning time for Biffy Pass was 21.89 but did not approach the top qualifying time of 21.21 set by Seco Mia. The patrons evidently felt Seco Mia's performance in the trials was a one-time thing and did not lean toward her in the Derby. The judgment proved to be correct as Seco Mia, pretty well ignored at just over 8-1, failed to offer any arguments and never got into contention.

Biffy Pass returned $9.20, $5, and $3.60. Miss Thermolark refunded $5.40 and $4.20. Stoa Minga $5.

Rest of the way in the rich race, Easy Saint was fourth and returned $21,994 to its owners, followed by Medley Glass, fifth, $19,948; Magnum Load, owned by Robert and Bruce Gentry of Lubbock, sixth, $19,437; Seco Mia, seventh, $18,925; Jun Jun Ni, eighth, $18,414; Perfect View, ninth, $17,902, and Little Flyin, tenth, $17,391.

Chicago Rally Downs Texas

CHICAGO (AP)—Jorge Orta's two-run homer, following a solo shot by Chet Lemon in the ninth inning Monday night, carried the Chicago White Sox to a 7-6 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Lemon led off the ninth with his 10th homer of the season and Lemar Johnson followed with an infield single before Orta crashed his 12th homer off reliever Reggie Cleveland.

Mike Hargrove, who homered in the first inning, led off the seventh by drawing a walk and Bert Campaneris sacrificed Alomar to second before Harrah delivered his double and broke a 4-4 tie.

Texas added a run in the eighth when Bobby Bonds walked and stole second, then scored when Eric Soderholm threw past first base after fielding John Ellis' grounder.

Hargrove opened the game with his fifth homer of the year and the Rangers aded three in the second when Jim Sundberg was hit by a pitch and Ellis followed with his second homer this season. Kurt Bevacqua doubled and scored when Hargrove's grounder went through Lemar Johnson for an error.

The Sox tied it 1-1 in the first on a single by Ralph Garr, a stolen base and a double by Johnson. They tied it again with three runs in the second on a single by Soderholm, a double by Bill Nahorodny and singles by Don Kessinger, Garr and Lemon.

Billie Jean King After 20th Title

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billie Jean King, pumping cortisone into an aching left heel to keep mobile, vowed Monday to "gut it out" in quest of a record 20th Wimbledon tennis title.

She needs only one additional crown in singles, doubles or mixed doubles to move ahead of Elizabeth Ryan as the holder of the most championships in this 101-year-old event.

The 34-year-old grand dame of American tennis received a shot of pain-killer 15 minutes before taking the center court for a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Britain's Sue Barker in the fourth round of women's singles.

She plays defending champion Chris Evert next.

"Nobody understands me," Billie Jean said after her victory. "I love to play tennis just for tennis' sake. I get a kick out of every event, doubles as much as singles.

"Now that I've committed myself to playing here, I am going to gut it out all the way. I am happier with myself psychologically."

She is paired with Martina Navratilova in women's doubles, seeded No. 1, and with Ray Ruffels in mixed doubles, seeded No. 2. In women's singles she is seeded fifth.

King, winner of six Wimbledon singles, nine women's doubles and four mixed doubles, has undergone operations on both of her fragile knees, quitting tournament tennis in late 1975 but returning early in 1976.

"People who know me realize I can't quit tennis so easily — I love it too much," she said.

She said a bone spur in her left heel has bothered her for weeks. "I got a cortisone injection just before my match," she added. "I said 'Give it to me quick!' I go into shock when I see a needle."

She said she didn't know whether she would repeat the shots before her future matches.

As for her tennis future, she said: "Mentally, I feel good. Physically, I just don't know. I won't make a decision about whether I'll keep playing on this scale until after the U.S. Open.

Miss Ryan, a Britisher, never won a Wimbledon singles crown but captured 12 women's doubles and seven mixed doubles with various partners just after World War I. She paired with the great French star, Suzanne Lenglen, and with such male standouts as Jack Crawford and Francis T. Hunter.

Five of Billie Jean's women's doubles titles were forged with Rosie Casals. Her four mixed doubles crowns were as a partner of Australian Owen Davidson.

Asked if she recalled any titles that she let slip away, Billie Jean replied: "A couple of years ago Betty Stove and I were ahead 3-0 in the third set against Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova. We choked nicely."

LPGA Tourney Has Big Field

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — A flurry of late entries has increased the field of golfers for this weekend's fifth annual Wheeling LPGA Classic to a tournament record 94.

Last year, only 63 pros competed. But local sponsors responded by boosting the prize purse by $20,000 to $75,000 for this week's event — more than double the $35,000 purse of the first LPGA tournament here in 1974.

The top two money winners on the tour, Nancy Lopez and JoAnne Carner, won't compete. That's caused tournament officials some concern, especially since Miss Lopez' unprecedented string of successes has raised interest in the LPGA to a record level nationally.

However, local officials point out seven of the top 10 money winners will be here for the July 7-9 tournament, as will 17 of the top 20 money winners — by far the most in the tournament's short history.

"Not only is this the biggest field we've ever had, but overall it's the most talented to play in Wheeling," said Phil Day, exeeeutive director of the sponsoring Wheeling Area Chamber of Commerce.

Among the late entries received over the weekend were from 1976 and 1977 tour money winnings leader Judy Rankin, curerently 16th this year after being bothered by injuries; Amy Alcott, the young Californian who currently ranks 10th; LPGA Hall of Famer Carol Mann, who's played in just seven tournaments this year; Sandra Palmer, the third leading money winner in LPGA history; and JoAnn Washam, currently 14th on the money list.

Both Alcott and Washam will be playing here for the first time.

"We're hoping for a great tournament," said Day. "This tournament is the highlight of the sporting year in the Ohio Valley."

Two golfers, Jan Stephenson and Dot Germain, were last minute withdrawls, according to LPGA officials. Stephenson placed fourth here a year ago, shortly after she posed for a Sport Magazine cover in a scanty blouse, while Germain wasn't entered here.

Nine of the 10 top finishers last year, all with the exception of Stephenson, will return, including defending champion Debbie Austin. She fired a tournament record seven under par 209 last year in leading the tournament from wire to wire.

"But I wouldn't be surprised to see somebody break the record," said Ed Murphy, the director of golf for the Wheeling parks system and the superintendent of the Oglebay Park Speidel golf course, where the tournament is played. Oglebay Park is a public facility owned by the city of Wheeling.

"The course is in real good shape, and I wouldn't be surprised to see a record if the weather holds up."

'Stars' Deadline Given Extension

Entry deadline for this summer's Lubbock Super Stars competition has been extended, the Parks & Recreation Department has announced.

Originally, the cutoff time for entering was last Saturday, but persons interested in competing can sign up until Wednesday.

Entry fee is $5 which includes a Super Stars t-shirt. Persons wanting to enter the competition can register at any community center.xz Entry blanks are available at the community centers and local sporting goods stores.

The competition, bracketed for men and women in various age groups, will be held every Sunday the remainder of the month, beginning next Sunday.

Brunansky Accepts Pro Baseball Pact

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Tom Brunansky, the No. 1 selection by the California Angels in the June free agent draft, signed with the American League baseball club Monday as he changed his mind about playing football at Stanford.

From West Covina, Calif., Brunansky had first told the Angels that he had chosen to attend college.

Then he signed with the Angels for a bonus of between $80,000 and $90,000 and will report to their Idaho Falls farm club in the Pioneer League later this week.

In the past three seasons, the right-handed hitting Brunansky, who plays center field, hit .470, .496 and .465 with his West Convina High School team. During the past season he stole 21 bases.

He stands 6 feet 4 inches and weighs 205.

Arthur "Red" Patterson, assistant to Angels' owner Gene Autry, said several teams had expressed interest in Brunansky but feared he would choose a collegiate career rather than playing professional baseball.

JAPANESE GOLF

SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — Teruo Sugihara of Japan posted the 34th victory of his golfing career Sunday, matching par 72 to win the $29,300 first prize in a Japanese tournament at Sapporo Golf Course.

Upbeat 'Love Boat' Role Pleases Actor

If the role calls for a lighthearted, upbeat pesonality, the actor invariably finds himself smiling a great deal on his own time. If he plays a heavy, then indubitably the ham is on a personal downer.

On the other hand, if he swashes and buckles a lot, the thespian may find himself in a brawl or at least bunching his muscles around a swimming pool.

Gavin MacLeod is a case in point. He spent seven years as caustic, cynical news writer Murray Slaughter of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Everyone else in the cast was lovable. Mary herself was cuddly and bright and beautiful. Ed Asner as Lou Grant was a gruff Teddy Bear. Ted Knight as Ted Baxter was an hilarious bungler.

Murray was secretly in love with Mary and totally rejected. Murray resented his lowly status. He was underpaid and wore sweaters. He was, in fact, a loser.

MacLeod, ordinarily a cheerful, ebullient man, was profoundly affected by Murray's low station in life and is irritable disposition. So much so, that he felt as if he'd been set free when "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" came to an end.

Now MacLeod stars as Capt. Merrill Stubing of the new hit series, "The Love Boat." Stubing is upbeat, witty, urbane and obviously a success. The ladies like him and he runs the cruise ship with elan.

At 20th Century-Fox, where the Aaron Spelling production is filmed, MacLeod is unable to wipe the smile from his face. He sounds and looks like a cheerleader.

"I was a happy, carefree guy before I began playing Murray," MacLeod said. "I never worried about anything. But after a couple of years on Mary's show I was really a different personality.

"Murray held doors open for everyone. He wore unflattering clothes. He was unglamorous and it was the most untheatrical role I've done in my career. It was difficult playing him at first.

"I sat there at his desk looking up at Ed and Mary and Ted. I got to know the bridgework of every member of the cast. Murray was passive. He couldn't make a decision.

"Even the fan mail reflected sympathy for him. There are a lot of Murray Slaughters in the world. But I'm not one of them. And I didn't want to be associated with him. But viewers and people in the business began to equate his personality with mine."

When "The Mary Tyler Moore" series ended, the cast branched out in series of their own. Asner succeeded in "Lou Grant." Knight and Betty White bombed out in short-lived series. Mary returns this fall with a weekly variety show.

MacLeod was aware that because Murray was the least attractive character in the show he would stand the least chance of carrying a series himself.

"I'd have come in last in the betting to succeed in a show of my own," he said, his grin broadening. "I wasn't even nominated for an Emmy during those seven years. Everyone else in the cast won at least one.

"You can imagine how I feel now. The captain is a winner. .he's got color, glamor, sex appeal and a uniform.

"Some reviewers and interviewers call me 'the handsome Gavin MacLeod.' Imagine! Nobody described me like that on Mary's show."

MacLeod ran a hand over his bald head. "I'm seven years older than when I started Mary's show. But I'm beginning to believe that handsome stuff now.

"My wife, Patti, says I'm easier to live with as Captain Stubing than I ever was as Murray. I'm a lot more fun. When I get home now I'm on MacLeod Nine. In the old days as Murray I'd drag myself through the front door in misery."

MacLeod was cast in "the Love Boat" by Fred Silverman, then chief of ABC and who has since moved to ailing NBC where he will try to pump new life into the network.

According to MacLeod, Silverman had seen his work on TV and in movies before "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

"I'll always be grateful to Silverman," the actor said. "He also was able to see the vulnerability in Murray. He knew I was a performer who had little or nothing in common with Murray Slaughter."

MacLeod is so unremittingly buoyant, so unreservedly happy and talkative, one would welcome a few minutes with the dour and downbeat Murray.

Some Vegas Shows Don't Allow Kids

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Families headed for Nevada gambling spas this summer to see big-name entertainers in the main rooms had better check before they promise to take their children to see the shows. Some of them don't admit kids.

New Jersey's new gaming mecca, Atlantic City, on the other hand, welcomes youngsters with open arms.

Two of Nevada's largest showrooms — at the Stardust in Las Vegas and the MGM Grand in Reno — strictly ban children, both because of partial nudity on stage.

At the Stardust, where the "Lido de Paris '78" is the main attraction, a spokesman said, "We recently lowered the age limit from 21 to 18, but the show is very strict about letting anybody younger than that in." Dancers in the show aren't even allowed to bring their kids backstage during the show or rehearsals, he said.

Youngsters also are banned from the much-acclaimed "Hello Hollywood, Hello" because of hotel policy at the MGM Grand-Reno.

"Nudity is part of the reason," a hotel spokesman said. "We also don't want to risk having some children getting fussy and annoying other people at the show. It's a 2½-hour performance, and that's pretty long for little kids to sit still."

In Atlantic City, meanwhile, it's a different story. Children over 12 are allowed into the city's "Superstar Theater" at the Resorts International hotel-casino, and the hotel features a Sunday matinee for families with kids under 12.

Not all showrooms in Nevada are down on kids. The Las Vegas Hilton admits children 6 or older, and occasionally makes some exceptions below that. A spokeswoman explained, "We're pretty family-oriented." She said there is nothing in the Hilton's shows which might be considered unsuitable for younger children.

"I was in security here before moving to publicity and never experienced any problems with children in the shows," she added.

Children can get into most shows at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, although a spokeswoman said they aren't allowed to attend some in which the language is considered too salty.

At other main rooms in Nevada, children can attend the dinner show, but not the midnight shows. A spokeswoman for the Las Vegas News Bureau said, "We hav a 10 p.m. curfew in Las Vegas and the language usually gets a lot more off-color at the late shows. Definitely not for children."

The Desert Inn in Las Vegas also is aware of the curfew and closes its doors to children for the late show. The maitre'd has the final say over whether children can see the dinner show, a spokeswoman said, and some of the big productions do not want children in the audience — again because of some nudity.

Cabaret shows, where only drinks are served and which generally offer abundant nudity, are all closed to youngsters.

As far as the main rooms are concerned, the Las Vegas spokeswoman said the best bet for persons with children visiting Las Vegas, Reno or Lake Tahoe is to confirm that everybody can get in when they're making reservations for a show.

Festive Pilot Earthbound For Holiday

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — It will be a quiet, earthbound July 4 this year for Bill Dennis, who would like to celebrate the holiday by hawking wares high in the Iowa skies.

Dennis won't be airborne, towing banners and electronic advertising signs in his small plane this year. Last month, he had his first airplane accident in some 2,500 ours of flying when his plane crashed while he was doing a traffic report.

So while his broken leg and wrist mends — he's watching the fireworks for the ground for the first time in many years — and finds he's getting a different view of things.

"Usually, we are up a little higher — to about 1,000 feet — when you are towing things during the Fourth of July parties and celebrations," Dennis said. "You've got to keep a close eye for any wayward firecracker. They usually only go up to 800 feet when they are set off — but you can't be too careful.

"You get a whole different perspective watching from the sky. You can see the people out looking at you as much as looking at what you are towing. You really are entertaining the people," Dennis said.
