If Hermleigh proposal passes...

Annexation would follow ISD vote

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

As Hermleigh ISD taxpayers move toward an election which will decide the fate of their school district, last week an attorney with the Texas Association of School Boards listed for the SDN what steps would be required should the measure pass.

"The first thing to consider is that every child is guaranteed the right for a public education, and if a vacuum is created by the elimination of one district, steps are taken immediately to fill that vacuum."

Offering these comments was John Aldridge, director of legal services for TASB in Austin.

And these "steps" are outlined under Texas legislation revised as recently as 1983, Aldridge said.

Regarding "when" the district would actually be dissolved, the indication is "immediately" following a majority vote for such a measure.

In this case, the Scurry County commissioners court would assume responsibility for the abolished district and the time sequence for attaching it to another school district.

Aldridge noted that "the time frame could be worked out" to accomodate a smooth transition.

Under the law, the abolished district would have to be absorbed by "one or more" ISDs within the boundaries of its county.

The portion of Hermleigh ISD located within Scurry County would have to be annexed with either or both Snyder and Ira ISDs.

Since Hermleigh's district laps into Fisher County, two commissioners courts would actually be involved. The individual courts are responsible only for the portion of the district within their county, however.

Seasonal shopping off to faster start city merchants say

Snyder retail merchants report a brisk shopping day Friday as the holiday buying season began — a season which has apparently started with increased sales for many this Christmas compared to last.

All businesses contacted reported sales at least on a par with last Christmas, and many noted substantially increased sales — ranging from 20 to 35 percent in some cases.

In addition, many business owners and managers contacted in a random sampling noted "a lot of new faces" among their customers the day after Thanksgiving.

The first day indication noted heavy foot and motor traffic up and down College Ave. and around the downtown square.

Limmer noted many customers from Fisher and Kent Counties also, a fact echoed by David Polk, manager for TG&Y in the Varsity Square Shopping Center.

"This year we've noted a lot of customers who live closer to Sweetwater and Big Spring than Snyder.

Polk noted, "I was really surprised by Friday's sale. Before I was concerned I might have laid in too many Christmas decorations, and now I'm afraid I might not have enough."

Brisk sales were reported also at Kmart here, although likely "on a par" with sales last year, said Manager L.C. Greene.

Jeff Lowrance with Whites Auto on the downtown square noted "double my layaways" this Christmas compared to last.

Bob Womack at Western Auto on the square also noted the day's sales were "better than it's been considerably."

All downtown merchants contacted indicated their businesses

SANTA SEASON — Santa Claus arrived via fire truck Friday night around 6:30 p.m., and a throng of youngsters were waiting for him at the band stand area south of the Scurry County Courthouse. By 8 p.m., Santa was still visiting with youngsters. Just prior to his arrival, the new downtown decorations — featuring a red Christmas candle — were lit. During the afternoon, city workers, to include Raymond Valadez (at left) were busy attaching them to street lights. (SDN Staff Photos by Noble B. Young)

DAYS 'TIL CHRISTMAS

Yule 'Happening' here next Sunday

A week from this Sunday, Snyder's two museums will join with Western Texas College for the annual Sunday afternoon Christmas Happening in the city.

On Dec. 8, both the Scurry County Museum and the Diamond M Museum will host the traditional event with the theme "International Christmas" this year.

The county museum will be open from 1 until 4 p.m. while the Diamond M will be open from 1 until 5 with "A Musical Christmas."

At the WTC campus, "Christmas Around the World," featuring paintings and drawings by children, will be featured in the Scurry County Museum.

The "Christmas Around the World" exhibit includes about 40 pieces of art, many contributed by the Christian Children's Fund. A typed copy of the children's comments about their art work accompanies the exhibit. It is on loan from the University Museums at Illinois State University.

Music by various groups will continue through the afternoon. Children visiting the museum will receive candy treats from the museum Christmas tree.

The Scurry County Museum has scheduled a visit from Santa Claus, puppet shows, demonstrations and a mini-bazaar as part of the day.

The music department at Western Texas College will present its Christmas recital at 2:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Theatre.

There is no charge for admission to either museum. Additional information about Christmas Happening activities can be obtained by calling the museums.

Series of incidents involve tire cuttings

Police are investigating a series of seven tire cutting incidents reported early Saturday morning.

Gladys Williams, an employee of Cogdell Memorial Hospital, filed the first report at 6:10 a.m.

She said a tire on her 1984 Mercury had apparently been cut while the vehicle was parked at the hospital overnight.

While taking her report, police also discovered a tire which had apparently been cut on a late model Chevrolet El Camino pickup parked at the hospital.

The owner of that vehicle has not yet been located.

At 7:10 a.m., five tire slashing reports were filed from 3901 Eastridge Dr.

Listed as damaged there were two tires each on a 1984 Dodge owned by Tommy Holladay, a 1980 Ford owned by Monte Rawlings, a 1981 Oldsmobile owned by Ricky Smith and a 1983 Chevrolet owned by Luke Proctor.

Also damaged at that location was one tire on a 1982 Chevrolet owned by Shana Koonsman of 4100 Brick Plant Road.

Investigators said Saturday they also worked a misdemeanor assault complaint Friday night which allegedly occurred at the residence.

Officers were called to Cogdell Memorial Hospital at 9:30 p.m. Friday where a 21-year-old man who had been at the residence was undergoing treatment for a laceration to the forehead sustained in the altercation.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Facial wrinkles are the real time payments."

The passing of Thanksgiving has traditionally signaled the start of the Christmas season, although most of us can attest that Christmas shopping starts earlier each year.

At least one convenience store on South College had Christmas trees for sale in early November. There is a reason for all the excitement–and the word is "money."

Americans are no Scrooges when it comes to Christmas. Americans are expected to spend an extra $30.2 billion on gifts, decorations and other items to celebrate the holiday–almost $2 billion more than last year.

This comes to an average of $126.88 for every individual in the country. It also means an after-Christmas financial hangover of $507.52 for the traditional family of four or $351 for the average household that now has 2.7 persons.

Americans will buy 32 million live Christmas trees for $640 million and will spend $150 million on artificial trees and $500 million on lights and decorations.

Still one-third of the nation's households will have no tree at all. But once the trees are up, we'll spend another $30 billion on packages to put under them. Almost 50 percent will be spent in general merchandise and department stores, 6.2 percent will be spent in food stores, 13.4 percent in clothing stores; and 3.7 will go to the purveyor of spirits for such things as eggnog.

Every year, Americans resolve to be more prudent in their Christmas giving, yet few of these resolutions ever come to pass.

Spoiling the child these days can start in a $1,500 cradle. That's the price of a gold-plated crib at Lewis of London in San Diego, and the shop has sold 16 of these in the past 20 months.

In Dallas you can buy a $576 toy pony or a $30 rattler made of sterling silver. In Atlanta, there are mink teddy bears for $120, and for babies not born with one, a silver spoon for $40.

A rocking horse from a West Coast company costs $3,000, or there is a baby buggy for a mere $1,000. The buyers are generally not parents, but grandparents.

One might conclude that Santa is alive and well–as long as grandma is around.

In Brief

Market up

by The Associated Press

The stock market closed out the week on the plus side even though traders capitalized on the market's recent advance to record highs and took profits at week's end.

On Friday, the market turned in a mixed performance in light activity as some traders took an extended Thanksgiving Day holiday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed down 3.56 at 1,472.13 Friday.

Local

Jurors return

Jurors hearing evidence in the trial of 71-year-old Jerry William Grimes of Snyder in 132nd District Court are to return at 10 a.m. Monday.

Grimes has been on trial on charges of sexual assault on a child since last Monday.

The proceedings were recessed for the Thanksgiving holiday Wednesday afternoon after District Attorney Ernie Armstrong rested his case.

Two to meet

Two monthly meetings are set by local entities this week.

The Snyder city council will conduct its regular December meeting Monday at city hall beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Scurry County Appraisal District board members will meet in regular session Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the district's office at 2612 College Ave.

Classes resume

Classes for the county's three school districts as well as Western Texas College will resume Monday after the Thanksgiving holiday.

In Snyder, report cards at all grade levels will be distributed Monday. These will reflect work for the second six weeks period.

Court agenda

County commissioners plan to approve county bills and minutes from the court's previous meeting when they meet in regular session Monday.

The meeting will begin at 10 a.m.

Israel assesses spy damage

JERUSALEM (AP) — Government officials say the arrest of a U.S. Navy analyst charged with spying for Israel could cost the Jewish state dearly by weakening U.S. support for continued financial aid and hampering efforts to begin Middle East peace talks.

Israel relies on the United States for billions of dollars in economic and military aid each year, and has been working with the United States to initiate direct peace talks with a Jordanian-Palestinian negotitating team.

But U.S. and Israeli officials say the arrest of Jonathan J. Pollard, 31, on Nov. 21 may have put the most serious strain on Israel's relations with its closest ally since the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

Pollard, a civilian, was charged with stealing highly classified documents for Israel over an 18-month period.

ABC News quoted unidentified sources Friday night as saying the FBI is investigating reports Pollard met with Prime Minister Shimon Peres or his aides when Peres visited Washington last month.

The first casualty of the scandal was a proposed congressional amendment to ease Israel's interest payments on U.S. loans, saving Israel $700 million a year, said Israeli officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Former U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis said the scandal "does have the potential for causing a fair amount of damage" to U.S.-Israeli relations.

Lewis, now a consultant for Israeli companies, told Israel radio in an interview broadcast Friday that the damage could only be avoided if Washington was convinced Israel "is dealing openly and completely with our authorities on the matter."

Peres, who has refused to discuss the affair in public, was considering allowing two Israeli diplomats who were summoned home to return to the United States for questioning, the Israeli officials said.

But the officials said the envoys apparently would be questioned only if they could retain their diplomatic immunity, which would shield them from answering questions that could compromise Israeli security.

The return of the Israeli envoys, both scientific attaches who have been linked to Pollard, would be intended as a gesture to help ease the tensions. In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman insisted Friday that relations between the two countries have not been "fundamentally interrupted," even as he expressed dismay over Israel's recall of the two diplomats.

But the Israeli government reportedly remains braced.

Two local men earn Scottish Rite honors

Two Snyder men, Dan Gallagher and Billy Mac Davidson, have been recognized for outstanding work in the Scottish Rite organization. Gallagher and Davidson, both 32nd degrees Masons, recently received the honorary advancement, "Knights Commander of the Court of Honor."

Commonly called "KCCH," the honor is bestowed by the El Paso Scottish Rite Bodies, with the approval of the national council in Washington D. C. It is given only to those who exemplify the ideals of masonry and give "above and beyond" to the Scottish Rite in hard work and dedication.

Both men have been active in the El Paso Scottish Rite Bodies for many years and are heavily involved in the "degree work." Davidson and Gallagher are active in the 4th, 5th, 11th, 13th, 15th and 28th degrees, which are presented by the Snyder degree teams in El Paso twice yearly.

Possible owner of papers known

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Houston man claims to own the diaries and letters of early Mormon apostle William E. McLellin — documents often mentioned in the investigation of the bombing deaths of two people last month.

H.O. Traughber said he has the collection, but that he has made a commitment not to discuss them until Monday, the Deseret News said today. Earlier this week, The Salt Lake Tribune said it had located the documents in Texas, but it did not identify the owner.

Stephen Christensen, 31, and Kathy Sheets, 50, wife of former Christensen associate Gary Sheets, were killed Oct. 15 when they picked up packages containing pipe bombs.

Documents dealer Mark Hofmann, 31, identified by police as their prime suspect, was injured when a bomb went off in his car the following day.

Document dealers and others have said Hofmann tried to sell them the McLellin collection, but police said they never found evidence that Hofmann ever had the 150-year-old papers.

An attorney has said that a sale of the collection, involving Christensen as authenticator, was supposed to have been carried out the day Christensen was killed.

McLellin became a bitter opponent of church founder Joseph Smith and left the church. There has been speculation the papers might contain material embarrassing to the church.

Church officials have said they told Hofmann the church would accept the papers as a gift but would not buy them. One church official, Hugh Pinnock, helped Hofmann get a $185,000 loan that was supposed to be used to purchase the papers.

Historians have said the collection, depending on what it contains, might be worth $150,000 to $500,000.

Blast in mobile home now blamed on bomb not gas

LAKE WORTH, Texas (AP) — Federal authorities now believe the explosion that leveled a mobile home and killed three family members was caused by a bomb and not by natural gas.

The explosive device may have been planted inside a briefcase placed on the home's front porch, authorities said. The blast killed a man, his daughter and his nephew in a Lake Worth mobile home park Thursday night.

Two other family members, a 14-year-old boy and his mother, survived.

"We have what we believe to be a destructive device," said Lou Iliano, resident agent-in-charge of the Fort Worth bureau of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. "There was a ... bomb."

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram quoted an unnamed source Saturday who said 14-year-old Robert Blount told authorities the bomb was in a briefcase the family had found on the front porch.

"The kid said they came home from the store, picked up a briefcase off of the porch, carried it inside and 'boom,' " said the source, who insisted on anonymity. "We don't know if it was directed at them."

Iliano confirmed that Robert Blount had told authorities of the briefcase.

Although natural gas in a floor furnace originally was suspected as the cause of the explosion and fire, the ATF was called in shortly after midnight Thursday to assist with the investigation into a possible bomb.

Iliano declined to say what kinds of materials were found, although agents at the scene Friday morning were picking up several pieces of wiring and what appeared to be remnants of a briefcase.

Iliano said the items will be sent to the ATF laboratory in San Francisco for analysis.

"We have no motives or suspects — none," he said Friday. "We're gathering pieces of a device. We can get a lot from the evidence, but we haven't got a motive."

Dead are Joe Blount, his daughter, Angela, 15, and his nephew, Mike Columbus, 18, of Seattle. Family friends said Columbus, a student in Tulsa, was visiting the Blounts for Thanksgiving.

Robert Blount and James Walls, 25, a next-door neighbor, were injured. Blount was in serious condition early Saturday at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth, and Walls was treated at the hospital and released Friday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Blount's wife, Susan Blount, was in the back of the mobile home at the time of the explosion and was not injured. The trailer was destroyed in the fire, which burned for nearly an hour.

"When it was detonated, we're pretty sure it detonated inside the trailer," Iliano said of the explosive device.

Firefighters said the victims were apparently killed by flash burns and died instantly.

Court ruling clears way for efforts to raise the Titanic

LONDON (AP) — An Admiralty Court ruling that Britain has no claim to shipwrecks in international waters vindicated private salvors of the sunken liner Lusitania, and their leader said his next goal will be raising the hulk of the Titanic.

In 1982, a British-led salvage team brought up $3.4 million worth of treasures from the Lusitania, sunk by a German submarine off the Irish coast in 1915 with the loss of 1,198 lives.

But the British government said that under a 14th century law, it had first claim to any salvaged material brought to Britain, including that from the Lusitania.

Because of that law, John Pierce, Welsh leader of the Lusitania salvage operation, had feared that if he went ahead with his plan to raise the recently discovered wreck of the Titanic, it might be seized when he tried to restore the liner at the Belfast shipyard where it was built.

Admiralty Court Judge Sir Barry Sheen ruled Friday that the British government had no title to wrecks found in international waters, only to those within territorial waters.

The judge said no one had a better right to the salvage from the Lusitania than Pierce, the two American businessmen who claim to own the ship's hull, and the two salvage firms that took part in the Lusitania operation.

The idea of bringing the Titanic up from the floor of the North Atlantic was vetoed by the French-American team that found it last September, and at least one survivor of the 1912 disaster is "revolted" by the prospect of disturbing the wreck.

The luxury liner Titanic struck an iceberg on its maiden voyage, taking 1,513 people to their deaths. The French-American team that found it 560 miles off Newfoundland, more 13,000 feet below the ocean surface, decided to leave it where it was and make it a marine memorial.

But following Sheen's ruling, Pierce said, "The Titanic is coming up."

He said he will press ahead with operations to raise the ship using a system of giant airbags, and start work with an international team in 18 months.

Pierce, 44, said he was "very confident" the Titanic could be raised. "As far as we know, she's in a condition that she's rebuildable."

Under his plan, two specialized underwater craft will fix tear-shaped bags along the length of the Titanic's hull. They would be inflated to give the wreck sufficient buoyancy to lift it to the surface.

Not everyone is as confident the ship can — or should — be raised.

American scientist Robert Ballard, who was part of the team that found the Titanic, said at the time that any attempt at salvage would be "ridiculous." It was thought the effort would cost more than the value of the ship or its contents.

Innocent man released from prison after 81/2 months

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — Ralph Samora Sr. had a lot to be grateful for this Thanksgiving. After 8½ months in prison for a crime he didn't commit, Samora was freed when the real rapist confessed.

"I didn't expect a miracle, but it happened," Samora says.

After spending 16 months trying to convince authorities he did not rape an Edna school teacher, Samora was released from the Texas Department of Corrections Friday, in time to celebrate Thanksgiving with his wife and six children.

But Samora, 34, told the Victoria Advocate that freedom will not erase the pain and frustration of his wrongful conviction and time in prison.

"It's not fair for a man to pay for another man's crime," he said. "A part of my life has been taken away."

Samora's release came 11 days after Dennis Sacky, 24, pleaded guilty to sexually assaulting the teacher in 1984. Sacky was sentenced to 25 years in prison.

Samora said "times had gotten tough" when in 1984 he was laid off from his Freeport job as a sandblaster and painter and moved his family to Edna.

Edna residents were shaken by the April 4, 1984, sexual assault of a school teacher while she was home for lunch. They opened a bank account for donations to be used for a reward to anyone with information leading to the assailant's arrest.

An Edna woman had told authorities she saw Samora near the home where the rape occurred and close to the time of the attack. She got a $1,300 reward after Samora's conviction.

Samora said he "cooperated fully" when Edna police Chief Norman Glaze began questioning him.

"I was innocent," Samora recalls. "What did I have to lose?"

But Samora was indicted by a Jackson County grand jury on a charge of sexual assault and was arrested July 27. After a four-day trial in February, he was convicted.

"I didn't think they would convict me. I didn't do it," he said. "I told them they were putting the wrong man in prison and that the man who really did it was still on the street."

He was sentenced to 20 years in prison and would not have been eligible for parole until 1991. He said he still remembers when he arrived at the Ramsey I prison unit on Feb. 23.

"I cried. I thought why did this have to happen to me? Then I thought about my wife and six kids," he said. "I didn't have time to talk to my wife, straighten things out, say goodbye."

Samora said his imprisonment caused his family great suffering and pain. His wife, Ramona, suffered a heart attack and was hospitalized the day after he was sentenced.

Samora said he expected to receive an apology from the district attorney who prosecuted him, "but that hasn't happened."

Criminal District Attorney Robert E. Bell said Wednesday that he was "sorry this happened to Ralph and sorry that this happened to anyone. But I cannot apologize for what I did. It is what I have taken an oath to perform."

Glaze said his officers continued investigating the case even after Samora's conviction because he wasn't satisfied with it.

"I never did close the case completely," said Glaze.

Grant's sudden death comes as surprise to UT employees

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal grant's sudden death has stunned — and unemployed — about two dozen workers in a 20-year-old teacher education program at the University of Texas, officials say.

The workers, including several researchers with doctoral degrees, had been paid through a five-year, $6 million grant from the Department of Education. But the department announced Wednesday that the grant would expire Saturday and be transferred to Michigan State University.

The grant was the most recent in a series that powered the UT Research and Development Center for Teacher Education since 1965, when money for such research was made available under the Great Society legislation of President Lyndon Johnson.

Gene Hall, director of the center and professor of curriculum and instruction in the UT College of Education, said it was unusual to have only a three-day notice that a grant would not be renewed.

"Normally there would be some phase-out money to help support the closing down of a program, but I think this short notice reflects the current mentality of the Education Department," said Hall, who has been at the center 15 years.

Officer is shot in chest

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A Terrell Hills police officer was shot in the chest when he attempted to stop a man walking along an area street Friday night, authorities said.

The officer, Sgt. Robert Butler, returned the fire Friday night, hitting the man once in the right leg, and radioed for assistance, Police Chief Barney Flowers said.

Officers from Terrell Hills, Alamo Heights and Olmos Park swarmed into the area within minutes of the 9:30 p.m. incident and apprehended a suspect near the shooting scene.

No charges had been filed by early Saturday, police said.

Butler was taken to Northeast Baptist Hospital, where he was in guarded condition early Saturday, nursing supervisor Harriet Taylor said.

Police said Butler was northbound in his patrol car when he stopped in the right-hand lane to question a man walking near a tall, brick retaining wall that separates several exclusive homes from Austin Highway.

But the man, instead of stopping, drew a small-caliber gun and fired two shots into the windshield of the patrol car, striking Butler, 33, as he was getting out of his vehicle, Flowers said.

The suspected assailant was found with a gunshot wound in his leg about 75 feet from the shooting scene, reportedly lying face-down in a grassy area beside Austin Highway, police said.

He was taken to Medical Center Hospital, where he was in stable condition early Saturday, officials said.

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Proposed efforts to raise the Titanic are "nonsense" because hoisting the luxury liner off the ocean floor would be too expensive, explorer Jack Grimm said.

But John Pierce, Welsh leader of the operation that brought up $3.4 million worth of treasures from the luxury liner Lusitania, said the Titanic could be raised.

Pierce said he would go ahead with plans to raise the liner after an Admiralty Court judge ruled Friday that the British government can't claim goods salvaged from the Lusitania. That ship was sunk by a German submarine off the Irish coast in 1915 with the loss of 1,198 lives.

Grimm, a Texas oilman who led a trio of searches for the Titanic, criticized Pierce's suggestion to lift the ship that struck an iceberg on its maiden voyage in 1912 and plummeted 13,000 feet to the ocean floor.

"It's a pipe dream," Grimm told the Abilene Reporter-News. "The cost alone is prohibitive."

Grimm, who laid claim to the ship after he and his crew spotted its propeller a few years ago, said he plans to head out into the Atlantic in May or June for more work with the ship.

Earlier this year, Robert Ballard, an American working in a joint venture between the French government and Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute in Massachusetts, photographed the entire ship.

"We had a couple of French officials in town last week," Grimm said. "They are really upset with Ballard and are working with us to get an agreement.

A high-tech French underwater vessel will be used in the exploration, he said.

Police seek man for sexual assault

Despite the presence of the tatoo, the 32-year old Christie is quickly running out of luck.

He is wanted on warrants in Hopkins County charging him with aggravated sexual assault and burglary of a residence.

The charges stem from an incident on Sept. 1, 1985 when an intruder raped a 14-year-old girl and then tried to rape the girl's mother.

However, the offender, who was armed with a butcher knife, ran into more than he bargained for when he tried to attack the mother. She bit the intruder on the neck and forced him to flee the house.

This is not the first time that Christie has been in trouble with the law in connection with sexual assault charges, investigators say. He has two prior convictions for sexually related offenses and served time in the Texas Department of Corrections for indecency with a child.

Christie is a white male, 6-0, 176 pounds, with brown hair and brown eyes. Detectives say he recently cut his hair short.

In addition to the three-leaf clover tatoo, Christie also has several other tatoos on his body, including one of a butterfly on his chest.

Although Christie was living in Greenville at the time of the offense, detectives believe he has fled the state.

This week Christie has been added to Texas Most Wanted list.

A reward of up to $1,000 is being offered by the governor's office for information leading to Christie's capture. Anyone with information concerning his possible whereabouts is asked to call the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council toll free at 1-800-252-8477 or their local Crime Stoppers program.

In all cases, callers do not have to reveal their identities.

Bishops express universal support for Vatican II plans

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Roman Catholic bishops have given "universal support" to reforms of the Second Vatican Council, but are engaging in frank debate on the course their church should take as it approaches the year 2000, participants say.

The two-week extraordinary synod of the Roman Catholic Church, in which 165 bishops are taking part, opened general debate Monday on changes in the church since the 1962-65 Second Vatican Council, commonly known as Vatican II.

The synod is closed to the public, but participants have reported on the speeches at news conferences.

"The whole tone of the synod has been positive, optimistic," said U.S. Cardinal John Francis Dearden, archbishop emeritus of Detroit. "By far, the bishops have been almost unanimous in praising what the council has achieved."

Belgian Cardinal Godfried Danneels of Brussels on Friday summed up the sessions by saying the synod has achieved its aim to "celebrate, verify and promote Vatican Council II."

"But it must be deepened, inasmuch as the council must be the 'Magna Carta' of the church that approaches the third millenium," said Danneels, who writes the conference reports.

Inmates raising money

PACIFIC, Mo. (AP) — Paula Martin says she would sooner rub shoulders with the convicted killers and rapists inside a Missouri prison who are helping to save the life of her daughter, Kim, 8, than with people outside.

The tough convicts of the Missouri Eastern Correctional Center are helping to raise money to pay for medical treatment for Kim, who has leukemia, and have become her daughter's greatest friends, Mrs. Martin says.

"If Kim had her way, she'd head down there every day after school," she said. "She'd watch television with the guys and eat her afternoon snack. Everybody is Kim's buddy down there."

Even though the prison is not far from Kim's house in Pacific, about 30 miles southwest of St. Louis, the blond third grader rarely gets to visit her friends. But that's because of prison regulations, not because her mother fears for Kim's safety.

"I'd rub shoulders with the guys inside that place before I would with anyone outside it," said Mrs. Martin.

Kim was diagnosed shortly before she turned 2. The cancer went into remission after treatment, but symptoms re-emerged and physicians at St. Louis Children's Hospital had to remove a malignant tumor in 1983.

The girl's relationship with the inmates began last year when Fran Bailie, a member of the prison staff and a friend of the Martins, told some prisoners about the little girl's struggle.

Several of the inmates immediately started collecting money to help pay the Martins' mounting medical costs. They have collected more than $10,000.

Kim, who is still undergoing chemotherapy, says she feels close to the inmates.

"They are like the biggest brothers I ever saw," Kim said. "I love them because of all the things they've done for me."

"They give me stuffed animals and I get at least two letters a day," she said.

When Mrs. Martin first learned about the fund-raising effort, she asked Bailie if she could bring Kim to the prison. When the Martin family arrived in July of last year, the inmates unfurled an 18-foot banner proclaiming, "We Love Kimberly."

Michael Lenza, who has served 11 years of a life sentence at the prison for second-degree murder, said he was surprised to learn that Kim wanted to meet him and the others.

"We felt kind of small at first," he said. "Here was this little girl who didn't do anything wrong and here she was imprisoned (by her cancer).

"In a way she was like us. But we did something to deserve to get here. It made us come to terms with our own life."

Kim admits that she was frightened when the huge metal doors shut behind her when she entered the prison.

"My hands were shaking," she said. "But I pushed myself to go. I didn't want to hurt their feelings."

Kim said she immediately felt comfortable with the inmates.

De la Madrid is at mid point

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid reaches the midway point Sunday of a six-year term marked by political and economic crisis, made worse recently by the earthquake that devastated the capital.

The earthquake, ironically, brought some rare moments of popularity for the beleaguered, clearly mourning president who could be seen on regular inspection tours of the worst-hit areas and visits with hospitalized victims.

But the estimated $4 billion bill for damages from the 8.1 quake on the Richter scale, killing at least 7,000 people, can only serve to further complicate his efforts to bring the country out of the lingering economic crisis.

De la Madrid took office on Dec. 1, 1982, with the country already mired in the worst recession in half a century and with problems meeting payments on its massive foreign debt that now stands at $96 billion.

Immediately putting an austerity program into effect, de la Madrid warned that his first months in office would be "arduous and difficult."

His warning was correct, but the months have turned into years.

The economic situation has worsened since the quake, with the peso sharply falling from 350 to a current 480 against the dollar. A lack of confidence among Mexicans looking for more secure dollar investments has played a definite part in the currency's decline.

Another restructuring of debt payments is expected early next year, after Mexico won some breathing space from international lendors sympathetic to its plight.

"The only thing missing for this government was an earthquake," political commentarist Felix Fuentes said on a recent radio program.

Political unrest since the quake has centered on the problems of the 40,000 people left homeless by the quake. Small marches through the streets are taking place almost every day, although little general dissatisfaction is visible.

There have been few complaints of misuse of earthquake relief funds, but neither has there been much evidence of strong leadership.

The most sweeping action, the expropriation of about 7,000 damaged or vacant properties in central Mexico City intended to be used eventually for the homeless, quickly bogged down in errors and criticism.

In retrospect, even the government's early actions in handling the disaster have come under heavy fire. For example, it first announced that Mexico would not need foreign aid and lost valuable hours after the earthquake before saying the scope of the destruction made such help indispensable.

Members of de la Madrid's Cabinet have taken more heat than the president himself for their actions after the quake. The most strongly criticized have been Mayor Ramon Aguirre, accused of negligence and showing a lack of ability in handling the crisis; city Attorney General Victoria Adato, whose resignation was demanded by opposition parties after the bodies of six tortured inmates allegedly were found in the ruins of a collapsed police building, and Urban Development and Ecology Secretary Guillermo Carrillo Arena, who has first responsibility for the relocation of the homeless.

"And in the midst of this morass, the president seems to be alone as if we were living already in the final days of his command," columnist Francisco Cardenas wrote in the newspaper El Universal.

De la Madrid's Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has kept a tight grip on Mexico for 56 years, faces more key tests next year in state elections, including the gubernatorial race in the important state of Chihuahua on the U.S. border.

Although its dominance remains without serious challenge, there has been steady chipping away in the prosperous states of northern Mexico where a tradition of regionalism and unrest are greatest.

The response in July state and local elections was a heavy-handed show of control of the ballot box, but it is not clear how long that can go on without causing an unending escalation of more protests in return.

President's science adviser quits post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential science adviser George Keyworth, a major supporter of President Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense plan, says he is leaving his job because he has achieved his goals.

"I've been here a long time, longer than any of my predecessors," said the physicist, who assumed the post 4½ years ago. "And I've accomplished what I set out to do. It appeared to me that it was best to leave while things were going well."

In a telephone interview Friday night from his home, Keyworth said he feels the Reagan administration is committed to the Strategic Defense Initiative anti-missile program, popularly known as Star Wars, and he is no longer needed to push for it.

"The president made his commitment for continuing Star Wars at the summit in Geneva. That assures me the program will continue," he said in reference to last week's superpower summit between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Keyworth said he also had achieved two of his other goals.

"I worked for support for basic research at the universities, and there's no question that that's now a national priority," he said. "I've worked for cooperation between universities, government and industries, and there's a new presence on the campuses."

He said he handed in his resignation to White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan on Wednesday. It is effective Dec. 31.

Keyworth, a nuclear physicist who worked from 1968 to 1981 at the nation's nuclear weapons research laboratory in Los Alamos, N.M., said that when he leaves his post as unofficial chief scientist of the United States, he will try his hand at a less scientific venture.

Along with Herbert Meyer, vice chairman of the National Intelligence Council at the Central Intelligence Agency, who also is resigning, Keyworth will form a private business "to help American industry become more competitive."

"We plan to organize a mechanism for intelligence, or information, that will help executives gain a better position in international markets," he said.

Keyworth, who turned 46 today, said his birthday gave him some of the impetus for the change in jobs. "I want to leave before I become an old dog who can't learn new tricks," he said.

As director of the White House office of science and technology policy since 1981, Keyworth was responsible for advising the administration on questions ranging from defense to basic research.

Keyworth tangled with the U.S. news media last year, claiming reporters were "not responsible enough to do their job carefully or learn." He accused the press of being "drawn from a narrow fringe element on the far left" that was "trying to tear down America."

Next days critical in transplant case

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A man who waited a year for donor lungs and a heart, then learned from television that the organs were available, underwent transplant surgery Friday and was recuperating in critical condition.

Terry May, 32, of Tempe, was in surgery just over six hours at University Medical Center during which the organs of a woman who shot herself in the head were transplanted.

Dr. Jack Copeland, who led the transplant team, said he was pleased with the operation's results even though complications almost persuaded him to cancel the procedure.

The donor had suffered a "profound bullet wound to the head" which allowed air into the bloodstream and was causing premature heart failure, Copeland said. The donor was placed on a heart-lung machine during part of the procedure, he said.

"He's an awake, calm and controlled individual who understates most things that happen to him," Copeland said.

Hospital spokeswoman Nina Trasoff said there was "considerable bleeding" in May's chest during the operation but that doctors were able to control it.

May was diagnosed in June 1984 as having primary pulmonary hypertension, a degenerative lung condition that also causes the heart to fail. He was an accountant at Central Arizona College in Coolidge for three years before his illness forced him to resign in 1984.

May, who had been waiting for the transplant for about a year, was alerted that the organs were available Thursday when a Phoenix television station ran a message during a Thanksgiving Day football game. May, who was having dinner at a cousin's home in Phoenix, did not see the message but was notified by a friend who did.

Ms. Trasoff said officials sought help from the television station after finding that May was not home and that the beeper he had carried for the past several months apparently was not working.

The message line, flashed during the National Football League game between the Dallas Cowboys and St. Louis Cardinals, said: "Terry May: Call University Medical Center in Tucson."

May's new heart and lungs came from Kathryn Jordan, 38, of Las Vegas, Nev., Ms. Rooney said.

Reynold Jordan, the donor's husband, said his wife had on several occasions said she would like to have her organs donated. He said he didn't hesitate to offer them when she was declared brain dead early Thursday after she shot herself. He wouldn't go into details about what prompted the suicide.

Jordan said he came home from Wednesday night from his job at the telephone company to find his wife, a casino cashier, lying mortally wounded with a bullet to her head.

"It doesn't make me feel like a part of her is living on," Jordan told a news conference in Las Vegas. "It just feels like I helped somebody."

At sundown on Dec. 7, Jews around the world begin the eight-day celebration of Hanukkah. In 168 B.C. Seleucid Greeks desecrated the Jewish temple in Jerusalem. Hanukkah commemorates the recapture and rededication of the temple in 165 B.C. by the Jews led by Judah Maccabee. When they retook the temple, they also purified enough holy olive oil to relight the temple candelabra. So, each night for eight nights, Jews light candles in a Hanukkah candelbra (the menorah) with nine branches — one for each night and one for the "guardian candle." The engraving shows the Jerusalem temple in the first century B.C. and is from the Jewish Encyclopedia.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investment-rich church groups, armed anew with a shareholders' weapon they'd lost, are preparing attacks on South African investment, nuclear research and other hot topics for major companies' annual meetings next spring.

The groups, all interested in influencing American business policy on religious or moral grounds, have investments of more than $10 billion to back up their lay concerns. And recent decisions by a federal court and the Securities and Exchange Commission have made those investments more potent.

Of 70 or so stockholder-ballot requests filed by church groups for next spring, about 15 involving such giants as American Telephone & Telegraph and IBM would have been barred by a rule passed in 1983 by the SEC. That rule had made it more difficult to bring back ballot fights on social issues after initial defeats.

But two months ago, a U.S. District Court in Washington threw out the rule on procedural grounds. And the SEC said two weeks ago it won't seek reinstatement — at least for now.

Second-time stockholder votes can make all the difference, said Cornish Hitchcock, the lawyer who pressed the federal court case in Washington.

"Companies hate to have one of these social-responsibility issues brought up the first time," he said in a recent interview. "They hate it even more the second time," since formerly uninvolved people start asking why nothing has been done.

Since the court ruling, it's been full speed ahead for the filing of formal ballot requests, Timothy Smith, executive director of the New York-based Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility, said this week.

His organization, which is connected with the interdenominational National Council of Churches, includes 17 Protestant denominations or agencies and more than 200 Roman Catholic religious orders and dioceses.

As before the 1983 rule change, churches or other groups will need to get 3 percent of shareholders' votes the first time an issue is brought up to get the matter back on ballots the following year. The rule the court threw out had raised that threshold to 5 percent.

It may sound like a small change, but the difference between 3 percent and 5 percent has been crucial in several big votes.

"As a practical matter, (the ruling) has tremendous significance," Hitchcock said. "The church groups have found that even with 3 percent of the vote, companies will change their policies."

Among victories for protesters, he and Smith said, have been decisions by major banks to halt or curtail lending to South Africa, a frequent target because of that country's racial policies.

USDA says problems of farmers are not over yet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's index of commodity prices at the farm is going up for the first time since mid-1984, but Agriculture Department economists say farmers are a long way from being out of the woods.

A USDA report said Friday that prices farmers get for raw products rose 2.4 percent in November, the second increase in a row for the monthly index.

Despite the back-to-back increases, prices on the average were still 7.4 percent below a year ago. And the USDA view is that no major recovery in the farm economy is in sight at least through the first half of 1986.

The report said higher prices for cattle, broilers, corn, strawberries and oranges were mostly responsible for the November increase. Lower prices for lemons, hogs and grapefruit partly offset the gains for the other items.

According to department records, the rise in the price index this fall is the first since July 1984. Prices held even for several months last winter but dropped steadily until leveling off in September and rising in October and November.

Meanwhile, prices farmers paid in November to meet expenses rose 0.6 percent from October but were still down 0.6 percent from a year ago. The increase was due mainly to higher prices for feed and feeder livestock.

Department economists said earlier this week that prices of livestock and crops have declined so much this year that farmers will get about 32 cents of each consumer dollar spent on food, the smallest share in more than 50 years.

The November price report showed the farm prices of livestock and livestock products were up 3 percent from the October index but still averaged 3.5 percent below a year ago. Crop prices were up 2.7 percent from October but averaged 12 percent below the year-earlier average.

Department economists say farm income is expected to drop this year to a range of $25 billion to $29 billion from last year's $34.5 billion. Food prices are expected to rise slightly more than 2 percent, compared with a 3.8 percent gain in 1984.

According to the preliminary November figures, based primarily on mid-month averages, the price index for meat animals was up 3.6 percent from October but still averaged 2.1 percent below a year earlier.

Cattle prices were up $2.90 per 100 pounds from October, but hogs dropped 90 cents per hundredweight.

Overall, November farm commodity prices averaged 126 percent of a 1977 base used for comparison, according to the preliminary figures. That was up three percentage points from October average of 123 percent. In November 1984, the index stood at 136 percent.

In August, the index dropped to 121 percent, which was the lowest since November 1978 when it averaged 119 percent.

The November parity ratio was 51 percent, up one point from October and two points above September when it sank to 49 percent and tied the official record low reached in June 1932 during the Depression.

Many economists say the old parity standard is outmoded because it doesn't take into full account changes in farm productivity. But others contend the ratio remains useful in comparing year-to-year changes.

Caesar's neighbors welcome its closing

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Neighboring casino hotels expect to take up the slack Saturday when Caesars Atlantic City closes its casino for a day under a state penalty for helping a compulsive gambler lose millions embezzled from his employer.

It was the harshest penalty ever imposed in this city's 7½ years of casino gambling, and the first time a casino has been ordered temporarily closed in the United States for violations of state regulations.

But Caesars officials reminded patrons that its hotel, restaurant and showroom would remain open Saturday, one of the busiest weekends of the year here.

And while industry officials predict a revenue loss of between $700,000 and $800,000 because of the shutdown, they doubt that it will have an effect on Caesars' good fortune.

The closing from 10 a.m. Saturday to 6 a.m. Sunday comes as Caesars leads the 11 casinos in this resort in market share, a gaming anaylst said.

Caesars Senior Vice President Alfred Cade said earlier this week the company expected its hotel would be 95 percent booked Saturday and that a one-night performance by singer Alan Tam was sold out.

Casino employees will be paid their wages and reimbursed for lost tips, officials said. Caesars planned seminars for employees to review state gaming regulations and invited a leading national expert on compulsive gambling, Dr. Robert Custer, to spend several hours with 30 top executives, Cade said.

Alan Rosenzweig, a spokesman for Bally's Park Place, said that casino hotel planned no special efforts to lure in gamblers from Caesars.

"We assume that when people come out (of Caesars) looking for a casino, they will have two ways to turn," he said. And on one side is Bally's.

The state sanctions, including fines totaling $36,500 against Caesars employees, stemmed from the casino's violations of credit regulations and cash procedures in its dealing with Brian Molony, an assistant manager at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in Toronto.

Molony, a compulsive gambler who bet as much as $75,000 on one hand of baccarat or one roll of the dice, deposited $9.9 million at Caesars during a 15-month period.

He pleaded guilty in November 1983 in Toronto to charges that he embezzled $10.2 million from his employer and was sentenced to six years in prison.

Coffee-wielding robber burns several stores

DALLAS (AP) — Clerks at three convenience stores were treated for minor burns after a robber threw hot coffee into their faces, then rifled their cash registers before fleeing, police said.

"It's a new m.o. (method of operation) on us," robbery Lt. Gerald Calame said Friday. "The clerks thought it was a regular purchase and didn't see much after he threw the coffee in their faces."

Police said the three early Friday morning robberies were committed by the same man, who escaped.

The employees told police the man entered the store and walked to the coffee pot and poured himself a cup. He then walked to the counter, where he offered a dollar for the purchase.

When the clerk opened the register, the man threw coffee in the clerk's face and helped himself to the cash in the drawer, police said.

Last-second bucket won't go; Western falls to Chaps, 77-76

ODESSA -- Western Texas College missed two buckets in the final nine seconds here Friday and came up a point short in their first meeting of the season with highly-touted Midland in the Odessa Tournament, 77-76.

The teams will square off again in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play in January and February.

"We had a couple of chances to win it and we just couldn't hit the bucket," said Coach Phil Spradling, who was upbeat despite the loss. "It's better to lose it now than in conference play. Midland was undefeated going into the game and they are still undefeated but we know we can play with them. I think this game will help us when we get into conference."

Western had the ball with nine seconds to play in the game. Alvin Lee uncorked a shot but it bounded from the rim. Teammate James Dawn was able to rebound, however, and following a tie ball which went to the Westerners, Hicks tried a last-second shot. The 6-5 sophomore's effort also missed the mark and Midland came away with the victory.

"It's just one of those things," said Spradling. "Both of those guys (Lee and Hicks) are good shooters. It just didn't fall our way."

Now 9-3 for the season, Western is scheduled against South Plains in the third place game at 6 Saturday evening. Midland, 9-0, takes on Odessa in the championship tilt at 8.

Dawn led the Westerners with 18 points, while Wally Manns, a 6-6 redshirt freshman, had 17 points and 10 rebounds.

Hicks popped for 14 points, Cliff Langford for 13 and Lee for 12.

Both teams led by as much as 13 points in the game. Western fashioned its lead in the first half before the Chaps came back to go in front at intermission, 48-45. Midland then forged a double-digit advantage in the second half before Western rallied to go back in front.

'Rebs rip defending NCAA champ, 61-49

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) - Freddie Banks scored 19 points and Armon Gilliam added 14 as 16th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas downed defending NCAA champion Villanova 61-49 Friday in the opening round of the eighth annual Great Alaska Shootout college basketball tournament.

In earlier games, top-ranked North Carolina defeated Missouri 84-63 and Purdue overpowered Alaska-Anchorage 92-70.

Banks and Gilliam scored 10 apiece in the first half to stake the Runnin' Rebels to a 30-23 halftime lead, but strong play underneath by forwards Harold Pressley and Mark Plansky brought Villanova back at the start of the second half. A finger roll by Pressley gave the Wildcats their first lead of the night 35-34 with 11:39 left.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 3-0, sank eight free throws in the final 1:29 to seal the victory.

Villanova, 2-2 after two straight losses, was led by Pressley with 16 points.

Frad Daugherty's 22 points and 10 rebounds enabled the Tar Heels to shake off a sluggish start against Missouri.

The inspired play of Dan Bingenheimer had the Tigers smelling an upset in the first half against North Carolina. The 6-foot-9 senior from Belevedere, Ill., scored 12 of Missouri's first 18 points to stake the Tigers to an 18-7 lead seven minutes into the game.

Although all three Tar Heels on the front line are 6-10 or taller, it was their guards that brought them back. With Steve Hale scoring six points and Kenny Smith and Jeff Lebo adding four apiece, North Carolina stormed back to take a 23-22 lead with 7:28 left in the first half.

Bingenheimer led Missouri, 2-1, with 21 points.

Hogs clip Southern

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) - Sophomore center Andrew Lang swished a pair of free throws with 10 seconds left, then blocked a shot with three seconds remaining as Arkansas held off Southern University of Baton Rouge, La., 76-75, in basbetball Friday night.

Lang, who finished with a career high 21 points and 12 rebounds, hit a pair of free throws with 57 seconds left to give the Razorbacks a 74-71 advantage. But the lead melted quickly as John Staves hit a 6-foot jumper then scored on a dunk after a steal to give Southern a 1-point lead 20 seconds from the finish.

Dusters roll past Grayson

Brenda Welch and Angela Jeans led Western Texas College on a hot streak midway through the first half here Friday night and the Dusters went on to defeat Grayson County 74-54 in the WTC Classic.

The Dusters, 9-4 with the win, will take on Cisco Junior College's Wranglers at 8 Saturday evening. The Lady Wranglers defeated Howard College in the classic's early game Friday, 64-49. Also, Howard faces Grayson at 6 Saturday.

Tickets for the ballgames are $3.

Western led 20-12 when Welch, a 5-10 freshman, scored the first of eight straight field goals put up by the Dusters. Dee Ann Marr added another moments later, and Jeans followed with two in a row. Welch and Jeans then sandwiched a hoop apiece between two by Pam Cox.

Grayson began to crack under the torrid shooting display and eventually went down by 20 points in the half, 38-18.

Western had opened the game by missing five of its first six shots from the field, but finished the half by sinking 13 of the next 24. In contrast, Grayson managed only 9 of 26, and that - plus nine turnovers committed by the Lady Vikings - told the story of the first half.

Another statistic which Grayson Coach George Speer was sure not to have overlooked was that Western shot 15 first-half free throws and his Vikings tried only 5. Western made 10; Grayson 2.

"We played pretty good offense after the first three, four, five minutes," said WTC Coach Kelly Chadwick, whose Dusters were never seriously threatened in the second half. "I know we shot the ball at least pretty well. We're trying to add something new to our offense. We're trying to run the ball more. I know we had some turnovers, but I thought we did a good job of it," he added.

If Western's offense played well, the defense was outstanding.

"We played hard. Both teams played aggressive. I thought our kids played supurb defense. 'AJ' (Angela Jeans) played awfully well against their point guard (Angie Pickard), I thought. Pam (Cox) did well also. I just thought our peremiter defense was exceptionally good," said the coach.

Western managed to bang the boards against the taller Lady Vikings, pulling down 37 to Grayson's 36.

"We went to the boards and blocked out really well and that's something we've been lacking," said Chadwick. "That's really good to see."

Welch led all scorers with 32 points. She also had 10 rebounds.

Cox, a 5-8 sophomore, notched 16 points while Jeans had 9.

The Vikings, now 4-6, got 15 from 5-11 Sharon Fore. Kasi Higgs added 13.

Sherrie Hawkins pulled down 8 rebounds for the Vikings. Lesli Priebe grabbed 7.

For the game, Grayson hit only 22 of 68 shots from the field. Western made good on 27 of 61. Neither team shot freethrows well. WTC was 20 of 35; Grayson was 12 of 25.

Earlier in the evening, Cisco raised its record to 7-3 with the help of a 21-point performance from 6-3 Cara Cranford. Jeannia Nix added 13.

The Queens were led by Lorri French, a 5-8 sophomore, who also scored 21. Pam Franklin and Terri Powell dropped in 10 points each. Howard is now 4-7.

Chadwick said his Dusters would have to play well in Saturday's game with Cisco, but he had no doubts they would be up for the contest.

"They kind of embarrassed us at their place. They ran out to about a 25-6 lead on us," said Chadwick of WTC's 65-52 loss to the Lady Wranglers earlier this week. "I know our girls won't have any trouble getting up for them. They (Cisco) looked very impressive tonight against Howard. They've got a fine basketball team."

Saturday's match was to be the third time this season WTC and Cisco have squared off. Western defeated the Wranglers 53-46 on Nov. 4.

Tiger program shaping up; future should be bright one

Coach Dennis Tomlin didn't get the winning season he had hoped for in 1985, but he believes the Ragin' Tigers have made strides that will make them a contender in the years to come.

"We didn't reach all of the goals we set for ourselves. We wanted a winning season real bad," said Tomlin, whose second year at Snyder brought about a 4-6 record, the Tigers' best since 1979.

"The other goal on our time table was to compete and we felt like we did that. We had that 7-0 loss to Lake View in a game which we felt like we could have won and that 22-19 loss to Monahans which we felt like we could have won. Those and our wins show that we competed this season," the coach said this week.

"I think one of the big differences was that physically we stayed with them. As a matter of fact, I think in terms of physical strength we were better or equal than all but maybe two teams we played. That pleased me. I didn't know we could close the gap that quickly," the coach said.

One area in which Tomlin and his staff have been working on since arriving on the scene has been strength. Statictics showed that the Tigers were stronger and carried more muscle weight after the first off-season program a year ago.

"Offensively we were pleased with the way the line came along and blocked. We executed our offense so much better this year. I was real happy with how our young running backs - Michael Long, Toby Ubando, Jeff Rose and Scott Lanier - came on. And of course Justin Webb had a fine year with over 1,000 yards. He ran with a lot of authority and he was an enjoyable player to watch. We'll miss that," Tomlin said of the senior running back, who rushed for 1,128 yards and 11 touchdowns. He also caught four passes for 119 yards and another TD.

"Defensively, we were pleased with our aggressiveness. A lot of that has to do with the off-season in building confidence, strength and in knowing our system. One of our goals next year will be to improve our aggressiveness even more," the coach said.

"We have some good players coming back to build the team around. Defensively, we'll have Trey Tippens, Henry Treat, Earl Ware and Mark Helms back. Chris Garrett played a lot on defense, too. They all have a lot of playing time and they are smart, aggressive players. I feel like we can find six-seven others to go with them," Tomlin voiced.

"Offensively, we'll have Garrett and Tippens back at end, Scott Stone at center, Dewayne Murdock on the line and Ubando, Rose, Lanier and Long in the backfield. The good thing about that is having those experienced backs and linemen returning. Last year we were trying to find skill people. Next year, we hope that won't be as much of a problem.

"We've still got to find a quarterback to step up and take control and some people to catch the football," he said, referring to the fact that Mike McWilliams will graduate.

Tomlin said he believes the 1986 Ragin' Tiger team "won't be as big, but will probably be quicker. In our district, that will help us. You need size, but you better be able to move, too.

"We're looking to find 14 or so players to go with our returning starters. We want to carry about 50 on the varsity and we have 18 lettermen returning to help us. That means that we'll be looking at them, the kids coming up from the junior varsity and probably some off of this year's freshman team, too."

Both the junior varsity and freshmen teams had strong, winning seasons. The junior varsity has some size, while the freshmen class is considered to have some fine prospects in the skills area (backs, receivers).

One area Snyder coaches will focus on during the offseason is the kicking game.

"Randy Townsend did a real good job for our junior varsity this season and he's a bright spot for our kicking unit," said Tomlin. "But we lost our all kickers, punters, deep snappers and holders off the varsity. It (the kicking game) will be something we'll be emphasizing."

Akers' status 'not an issue'

AUSTIN (AP) - The next meeting of the Men's Athletics Council at the University of Texas has been tentatively scheduled for Dec. 11, but evaluation of football coach Fred Akers is not on the agenda, according to the chairman, Dr. L.O. "Tom" Morgan.

"To me, officially, it's not an issue," Morgan said.

"I know there are people who are not very happy with Fred. I sit in the stands and hear them, too. The chances of him not being retained are not very good. In fact, I really don't feel called upon to comment on that. It's not being considered. It's a non-issue."

UT Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds supported Morgan's comment, saying only the news media had made Akers' job an issue.

Two other Athletic Council members, professors Fran Bean and James Vick, told the Austin American-Statesman that Akers would be evaluated after the season and declined to comment on whether they feel Akers should keep his job.

Even an influential Akers' critic, who asked that his name not be used, said he had given up hopes of firing Akers this season.

Widespread opposition to Akers surfaced last year following losses to Texas A&M, 37-12, and Iowa in the Freedom Bowl, 55-17. This year the Longhorns were ranked from fourth to sixth in the Southwest Conference but tied for second with a 6-2 SWC record.

However, on Thanksgiving Texas was trounced by A&M 42-10, the biggest Aggie victory in the series and a defeat which did not help Akers' case.

One insider, who requested anonymity, said he started getting calls to fire Akers when the score reached 28-0.

Akers has coached at Texas since 1977 and has a record of 81-24-2, or a winning percentage of 77 percent. This year Texas will go to its ninth consecutive bowl under Akers, whose teams are 2-6 in post-season play.

'Skins and 49ers thinking playoffs

by The Associated Press

The San Francisco 49ers and Washington Redskins, the teams who have represented the National Football Conference in the Super Bowl the last four years, are starting their "playoffs" early this year.

"This is a playoff game, there's no other way to look at it," said Richie Petitbon, Washington's defensive coordinator, as the Redskins prepared for Sunday's important National Football League game with the 49ers. "Barring a total collapse, the team that wins Sunday is in the playoffs."

The 49ers and Redskins each come into Sunday's game in Washington with four wins in five games and identical 7-5 records as they chase the fifth and final playoff spot in the conference. The loser will probably be eliminated from the playoffs.

With head-to-head competition at the top of the list of tie-breakers for determining a playoff berth, the game takes on added significance.

"In essence the winner has a two-game lead over the other with just three to play," said Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs.

The Redskins are still alive two weeks after losing quarterback Joe Theismann to a broken leg because of his backup, Jay Schroeder. That the 49ers are fighting to stay alive one year after terrorizing opponents, winning 18 games, is evidence of the malaise that often strikes teams the year after they win a Super Bowl.

"We are suffering following a championship season because we have lost our edge. The scenario is typical of a championship team," said 49er Coach Bill Walsh, whose 1981 Super Bowl team slipped to 3-6 the following year.

Sunday's other matchups feature the two teams tied for the lead at 6-6 in the NFC Central, the Pittsburgh Steelers and Cleveland Browns, against two playoff contenders with better records. The Browns visit the New York Giants and the Steelers are at home to Denver.

The Monday night contest features the unbeaten Chicago Bears against the Miami Dolphins in a major hurdle between Chicago and an unbeaten season last achieved in the NFL by the 1972 Dolphins.

In other Sunday games, Houston is at Cincinnati; Tampa Bay at Green Bay; the Los Angeles Rams at New Orleans; Minnesota at Philadelphia; New England at Indianapolis; the Los Angeles Raiders at Atlanta; Kansas City at Seattle, and Buffalo at San Diego.

The Detroit Lions began the weekend by upsetting the New York Jets 31-20 in the traditional Thanksgiving Day game at the Pontiac Silverdome. The Dallas Cowboys ripped the St. Louis Cardinals 35-17 in the other holiday game.

The Giants need a victory to stay even with Dallas atop the NFC East while Cleveland enters the game tied with Pittsburgh in the AFC Central.

The Giants will be without Lionel Manuel, their best receiver, who pulled a hamstring in last week's 34-3 win over St. Louis. Cleveland quarterback Gary Danielson returned to lead last week's 24-6 win over Cincinnati but has a sore arm again.

Pittsburgh may start Scott Campbell at quarterback against Denver. David Woodley is still weak from a virus. Campbell played last week in a 30-23 loss to Washington.

But Coach Dan Reeves of Denver, which lost to the Steelers 24-17 in a playoff game in Denver last season, says he's not concerned about the Steelers' quarterback.

"Pittsburgh has probably as fine a pair of runners as there are in the NFL," Reeves says. "Frank Pollard and Walter Abercrombie have been very effective. If they can run, they'll control the tempo of the game, as they did against us in the playoffs."

The Los Angeles Rams-New Orleans game will be the first for interim Saints coach Wade Phillips, who took over when his father Bum resigned earlier this week after New Orleans ended a six-game losing streak with a 30-23 win in Minnesota.

The Raiders, keyed by Marcus Allen, who leads the AFC in combined rushing and receiving yardage, are heavily favored to beat Atlanta.

The Patriots hope to get back on the winning track after losing to the Jets last week. Thanks to Detroit's win over New York Thursday, they can get back into a tie in the AFC East with a win Sunday.

Students learn about Chinese heritage

By MARTHA HELGERSON
Rochester Post-Bulletin

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Most kids go to school five days a week, but a few Rochester students supplement their regular classes with some important cultural education about their backgrounds.

The Chinese Culture School was formally organized five years ago as a way to introduce second-generation Chinese to the ways and the whys of their parents' background.

The school began in 1980 mainly as a way to teach youngsters the Mandarin dialect of Chinese. Three years ago "folk art" aspects were added to relate the language to the culture.

The school, which has about 30 students for the Saturday classes at John Marshall High School, now includes Chinese dance, Tai Chi exercise and Chinese calligraphy in addition to language classes. There also is a class called "Chinese Expression," which embraces conversation, correct pronunciation and singing.

The program has been important for parents, for the children and for the Rochester community at large, according to Ling Chang, principal of the school during the 1984-85 school year.

The majority of students are children with parents of ethnic Chinese background. Most of the parents have either emigrated to the United States from Taiwan or have married into an ethnic Chinese family. The parents generally are associated with the Mayo Clinic or IBM. They often maintain a close social community through the Chinese Cultural Association, which boasts a membership of 120 families.

The classes allow the students to keep in touch with their heritage, beginning with their parents.

"If the kids understand their Chinese culture a little bit, they'll understand where their parents are coming from and the 'weird' things their parents do," Chang said with a laugh.

"If you don't teach them when they're young, it's difficult to pass on traditions when they're older."

Chang and her husband, Paul, speak only Chinese at home to their two elementary age children. The Changs are both natives of Taiwan who met in the United States and now work at IBM.

The one exception to the Chinese-only rule, Chang said, is when the American culture precludes any translation. "There's no way to give Barbie (the doll) a Chinese name," she said.

Understanding their heritage may also be helpful in a culture where residents take pride in ethnicity, according to a former principal.

Suei-Ching An, who was principal in 1982, recalls when her daughters questioned why they didn't have "golden hair and blue eyes" like many of their schoolmates.

"It's important to teach them their heritage," she said. "Especially in the U.S., where when you ask someone about their background, they'll say 'I'm Irish,' (not) 'I'm American.' It's the same with us."

Another former principal added her thoughts. "We're very proud of our culture and we really don't want (the children) to forget about their roots," said Theresa Hu, whose son is studying in Taiwan. "Maybe they don't appreciate it very much now. But maybe they'll have an identity crisis 10 years later, so then they will appreciate it."

Man said hit by assailant

Police are investigating a misdemeanor assault complaint filed Friday night by a 19-year-old man who said he was struck by another man.

Police were called to Cogdell Memorial Hospital at 11:57 p.m. after Charlie Sanchez of Snyder was taken there for treatment of a cut to the forehead.

He told officers another man had struck him with some sort of blunt instrument while he was standing on the parking lot of the Southside Phillips 66 station in the 3800 Block of College Ave.

No arrest has been made in that case.

Kids treated for car fumes

Four children were examined and released at Cogdell Memorial Hospital Saturday morning after apparently inhaling car exhaust fumes.

The children — between the ages of 2 and 4 — were said overcome by fumes while riding in the back of a pickup under a camper shell.

The vehicle they were riding in was spotted stopped in the roadway at the intersection of 37th St. and Ave. V. by police around 9:45 a.m.

City truck in minor accident

Involved in the 7:01 a.m. mishap was a 1978 Ford driven by Seripou Ponda Alvarado of 123 Milburn Ave. It struck a parked 1980 Oldsmobile owned by Francis Contreras of Snyder.

The accident occurred on the parking lot of the Pizza Hut restaurant in the 3900 Block of College Ave.

had a good day Friday.

Margaret Drum, owner of Margaret's on the south side of the square, said, "We saw people from Dallas, Fort Worth and Midland. Lot of folks who visit here during the holiday love to shop in Snyder."

The women's dress and speciality shops contacted all reported brisk sales also, to include Merle Norman's, Shadra's, Sunnyside, the Carriage Wheel and the Clothesline.

Shoe sales at both Thompsons and Dryden's were said good also.

Local merchants noted this is not necessarily the case in Snyder. Perry's Manager Doren Light noted, "My experience is the sales will build as we get closer to Christmas."

Crime prevention classes scheduled

The Scurry County Sheriff's Crime Prevention Office, working in conjunction with the juvenile probation office, will make the following presentations this week.

—Monday: A "Students Against Crime" talk to junior high students at 3:30 p.m.

—Tuesday: A talk related to alcohol abuse in a second junior high class in Darlene Beard's home economics class at 1 p.m.

—Wednesday: Two residential security surveys.

—Thursday: A talk to Alateen members on drug and alcohol abuse at Trinity Methodist Church at 6 p.m.

—Friday: Two residential security surveys.

School vote details noted

A new provision of the law implemented in 1983 states that the school board asked to receive responsibility for the abolished ISD also has a say in the annexation, however.

If these school trustees do not agree, the commissioners court cannot force them to receive responsibility for the district involuntarily.

In such a case, however, the Texas Commissioner of Education does have this right, and he could intercede on behalf of the abolished district.

The new state commissioner is William Kirby, who replaced former Snyder man Raymond Bynum last year.

Once the annexation is completed, both the liabilities and the assets of the abolished district are assumed by receiving districts.

This includes such liabilities as any bills due and outstanding bonded indebtedness and such assets as all equipment, buildings and the current year's taxes.

Aldridge stressed that any taxes currently billed would still be owed even with the abolition of the school district.

Such statements for the 1985-86 school year were mailed in October and are now due no later than Jan. 31.

Next school year, the taxable value of the ISD would then be placed on the rolls of the assuming district or districts for taxation.

Since the values are set countywide by the same entity, the value of Hermleigh ISD taxable property would likely be unaffected.

The tax rates charged by the individual districts vary, however. For the current school year, the tax rates per $100 valuation for each are Snyder ISD, 51.5 cents; Ira ISD, 53.2 cents; and Hermleigh ISD, 96.05 cents.

Mothers' deaths may be higher

ATLANTA (AP) — Deaths related to pregnancy or delivery may be more frequent than previously reported, a new study by the national Centers for Disease Control concludes.

A pilot study in seven states — Indiana, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Montana, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Rhode Island — found 39 maternal deaths in 1983, compared with 28 officially reported by those states.

That total, reached by combining death records with information from other sources, was 39 percent higher than the number reported by those states' statistical systems, the Atlanta-based health agency said Friday in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Embolism, or blood vessel blockage, was the leading cause of maternal death, accounting for 26 percent of those reported in the study.

The higher numbers make it even less likely that one of the nation's stated health goals for 1990, a reduction in the rate of maternal deaths, will be reached.

The U.S. Public Health Service's 1990 objectives include a rate of maternal deaths of no more than 5 per 100,000 live births in the population as a whole or in any ethnic group.

The CDC study showed a rate of 9.6 per 100,000 — 16.6 for blacks and other minority women, and 7.6 for whites.

The rate for blacks and minorities dropped from 98 deaths per 100,000 live births in 1960 to 20 in 1980. But "the relatively slow decline (since then) ... for blacks and others suggests that the 1990 objective may not be met," the CDC said.

Relatives, friends gather for funeral

OCEANSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Relatives and friends were gathering in this coastal community to pay final respects to Scarlett Marie Rogenkamp, who was slain by terrorists during the hijacking last week of an EgyptAir jetliner.

Mortuary officials transported the casket to Oceanside, where a mass and burial were scheduled today for the lone American killed in a hijacking that ended in death for 59 people.

A flag-draped casket bearing Ms. Rogenkamp's body arrived in Los Angeles Friday after a flight from London.

Ms. Rogenkamp, 38, was shot execution-style by the hijackers and her body thrown from the plane after it landed in Malta a week ago. Two other Americans on the plane were shot by the terrorists but survived.

An Egyptian commando assault on the parked jet ended the hijacking. Fifty-eight people died in the raid, including four of the five hijackers.

A civilian employee of the Air Force in Athens, Ms. Rogenkamp was on her way to Cairo for vacation when the jetliner was diverted to Malta shortly after takeoff from the airport in Greece.

She was to be posthumously awarded the Purple Heart during today's private funeral services in Oceanside. While the Purple Heart is usually awarded to military personnel wounded in action, Air Force officials said the medal has been awarded to civilians in the past.

"I was told by the Air Force this would be an honor she would be given as part of the burial procedures," said Vernon Peterson, Ms. Rogenkamp's father.

DJ is suspended

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A string of curses from an FM radio disc jockey about requests for Christmas music went out on the air, prompting a flood of complaints from outraged listeners.

Minutes after the offending epithets hit the airwaves, management at WSTF, Star 101 FM relieved Michael Lowe without pay and told listeners, in an apology 20 minutes later, he would receive "punitive action."

Lowe blamed the incident on a "technical mix-up" and said he had nothing against Christmas music.

"I know in my heart what happened. I know it was an accident and I apologize," he said.

THANKSGIVING PLANOVERS

Festivities may end the day after Thanksgiving, but turkey and trimmings linger on. You may want to try the following recipes to recycle Thanksgiving goodies.

TURKEY SALAD SANDWICH

½ cup finely diced celery
2 cups diced cooked turkey
¼ cup minced green onion
2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
3-4 cup mayonnaise
Dash red (cayenne) pepper

Combine all ingredients in a medium bowl, mixing well. Cover and refrigerate 3 to 4 hours to let flavors blend. Makes 3 cups sandwich filling.

TURKEY SALAD OLE

Crisp tortilla shells or taco-flavored tortilla chips
Lettuce, shredded
Green onions, chopped
Refried beans
Cooked turkey, diced or shredded
Monterrey Jack cheese, coarsely grated
Avocado slices
Sour cream
Taco sauce

Prepare each ingredient according to the number of people you expect to serve. Place them in individual serving dishes. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate until ready to serve. At serving time, arrange ingredients and let everyone help themselves.

TURKEY DIVAN

1 (10-oz.) pkg. frozen broccoli spears
6 to 8 slices leftover turkey
1 (10½ oz.) can condensed cheddar cheese soup
2 tablespoons milk
½ cup mayonnaise
1½ teaspoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon curry powder
1 cup sliced almonds

Steam broccoli until tender but firm. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 2-quart casserole dish. Arrange steamed broccoli over bottom of dish. Add a layer of sliced turkey. In a medium bowl, combine soup, milk, mayonnaise, lemon juice and curry powder. Pour over top of turkey. Sprinkle with sliced almonds. Heat casserole 15 to 20 minutes in a 350-degree oven. Serve with Onion Rice, if desired. Serves 4.

ONION RICE

2 cups prepared onion soup
1 cup rice

In a medium pan, bring soup to a boil over medium-high heat. Stir in rice. Cover pan. Turn heat to low. Continue to cook for 30 minutes.

Women slate homes tour

Martha Ann Woman's Club will present a tour of Snyder area homes from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Dec. 8.

The tour will include historic and recent structures, many decorated for the holiday season.

Homes to be toured include the Cornelius-Dodson House on the grounds of the Scurry County Coliseum; the Tommy Davis home, 1511 Augusta Dr.; the Eddie Johnson home, 2604 33rd St.; the Mike Otto home on the Polar Road; the Elizabeth Potts home, 3224 48th St.; and the Jene Steakley home, 2506 33rd St.

Tickets are available for $5 from MAWC board members. Tickets will also be available at the door on the tour date. For more information, call Mrs. Lloyd Hatcher at 573-5891 or Barbara Williamson at 573-7211.

Lang offers home repair suggestions

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I intend to build a cedar clothes closet. I am fairly handy when it comes to carpentry, but have never worked with cedar. Is there anything I should know?

A. — Since a closet is nothing but a rectangular box, it should be relatively easy for someone who has worked with wood. Since you will be using aromatic red cedar as a moth repellent, be sure it is used for all parts of the closet, including the door. You can buy red cedar that is tongued and grooved to make it easier to join the parts. The important thing is not to put any finish on the wood. If you do, you will seal in the desired aroma.

Q. — In reading instructions for putting things together, I sometimes see the term adhesive, sometimes cement, and sometimes black mastic. What is the difference or are they all the same?

A. — Almost, but not quite. Adhesive is the all-inclusive word for a product that bonds materials. Cement means different things in different fields, but in the adhesive market it used to designate a product that bonds together dissimilar materials — usually, but not all the time. Black mastic is used to mean a rubber-based material for bonding wood to concrete or putting down resilient floor tiles.

The city of San Francisco was rocked by an earthquake April 18, 1906. Fires raged for three days following the initial shock, destroying 490 city blocks and leaving 265,000 people homeless. The underground water mains had cracked in the quake and the fires were finally stopped by dynamiting around buildings. At

Windbreak trees for sale

The Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District will be selling windbreak trees from now until Feb. 15, 1986, according to Charlie Henderson, chairman of the board of directors.

The types of trees the district will sell include the Nondell Pine, Native Plum (wild), Cottonwood (cottonless), Russian Olive, Green Ash, Hackberry, Black Walnut, Osage Orange (Bois-d-'arc), Arizona Cypress, Austrian Pine, Ponderosa Pine, Honey Locust, Bur Oak, Pecan and Eastern Red Cedar.

The Mondell Pine originated in the regions of Southwest Asia. It will reach a height of about 18 feet in five years, and 40 feet in 15 years. This pine can be used for windbreaks as well as for landscaping. The Russian Olive is a fast growing shrub or small tree that is excellent for wildlife. It has beautiful foliage and also makes an excellent large hedge.

The native plum is excellent for wildlife and makes very good perserves and jelly.

Protection from rodents and wind should be planned for the trees. This can be done by using cans, containers, shingles, hailscreens, old tires, etc. Water is essential. A minimum of five to eight gallons per tree each week will be needed the first growing season and about 10 gallons the second growing season. An inexpensive "drip" irrigation system is recommended. This can be made by using plastic pipe and emitter tubes. This drip system is also available through the Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District.

Payment is due upon placement of the order. Refunds will be made if delivery is not completed. Due to variables in weather conditions and care required by the planter, no guarantee of liveability is made.

Due to shortages of some trees, orders should be placed as soon as possible.

Forms for ordering trees can be picked up at the Soil Conservation Office in the Snyder Shopping Center, 3423 Avenue T. Individuals may also call 573-1268 and an order blank will be mailed to them. Soil Conservation personnel assisting the district can also be contacted if additional information is needed.

The United States bought the American Virgin Islands from Denmark in 1917 for $25 million.

Revelry resurgence sours today's residents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Georgetown, the quaint Washington neighborhood favored for decades by the rich and powerful, is being spoiled by thousands of weekend revelers and a proliferation of "shlock shops," some residents complain.

Traffic, noise and commercialization have soured many people, including Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and his wife, Midge, who recently put their $208,000 house on the market.

"Alas, the dirt and drunks who wake us up every weekend at 2 a.m. are driving us out," Mrs. Baldrige wrote in a letter to the Citizens Association of Georgetown.

Still, "the village," as some locals call it, has maintained its status as an "in" spot to live with its red brick town houses, huge mansions, gourmet restaurants, green parks and smart shops.

Rising from the Potomac River in the city's northwest quadrant, Georgetown is a place where you're as likely to bump into a congressman as a preppy from nearby Georgetown University; where old ladies with blue-tinged hair walk their fashionable Jack Russell terriers; where nannies still wear white uniforms, and where the local grocery store keeps charge accounts and makes deliveries.

It is also a place which attracts 20,000 people every Friday and Saturday night; where young suburbanites come to guzzle beer and dance; where cheap shoe stores are as common as cobblestones, and where finding a legal parking space is seen as divine intervention.

The influx of people triggered a weekend crackdown as police added more officers on Friday and Saturday nights and imposed additional parking restrictions.

As more people poured into the small area, vandalism, crime and disorderly conduct increased, authorities say.

Part of Georgetown's attraction stems from peculiar drinking laws in the area. Nearby Maryland and Virginia prohibit anyone under 21 from purchasing alcoholic beverages; the District of Columbia allows 18-year-olds to buy beer and wine, but they have to be 21 to buy spirits.

"This law is an incentive for kids to drive into the district, drink and then drive home," says Hunter Wolkoff of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, a citizens group.

Others are disturbed by the type of development that has boomed, particularly on the two main thoroughfares — Wisconsin Avenue and M Street.

David Roffman, publisher of The Georgetowner, a weekly newspaper, says there are so many "schlocky shops" on the once-elegant Wisconsin Avenue that parts of the street resemble a "Middle Eastern bazaar."

Polly Shackleton, a District of Columbia council member who has lived in Georgetown for 46 years, adds, "After all, we don't need eight or nine or 10 shoe stores and we don't need palm readers or fast-food restaurants for the residents..."

Maurice and Elsa Pairel, owners of the French restaurant Chez Odette, an institution on M Street for 32 years, sold the homey establishment with red-and-white curtains last summer.

"We felt that it was just the right time to get out of it," said Mrs. Pairel.

"I have worked here for 25 years and Georgetown has changed so much," her husband says. "Georgetown has become for the young, young people, for bars and drinking."

Like Pairel, some long-time Georgetown residents complained that the charm has vanished from the Europeanstyle neighborhood.

"It's lost its neighborhood quality in many respects," says Marty Levin, whose family has run Sugar's Campus Store since 1930. But Levin refuses to become too sentimental, noting the area has always been transient.

Other parts of Washington besides Georgetown have seen rapid development and growth, and the nation's capital in some areas has turned into a cosmopolitan city with luxury hotels, outdoor cafes, a thriving theater and arts community and scores of gleaming glass skyscrapers.

Washington's new cosmopolitanism seems to have paralleled the opening and growth of a shiny new subway system, which crisscrosses the capital and reaches into Maryland and Virginia.

Residents of Georgetown bitterly — and successfully — fought efforts to put a subway stop in their area, whispering that it might allow too many people to travel to their area.

Even without a subway stop, Georgetown has exploded to the point "where it's completely saturated," Roffman says.

That saturation has helped squeeze the housing market and push up prices. A two-bedroom brick town house with a postage-size patio rarely sells for less than $200,000.

On the other end of the scale, Washington Post editor Benjamin Bradlee and his wife, Sally Quinn, paid $2.5 million for a 40-room mansion that once belonged to Robert Todd Lincoln, former President Lincoln's son.

Georgetown also is home to one of the area's most glittering new shopping malls, an underground complex with plants, swirling staircases and some of the world's best-known shops like Mark Cross Inc. and Abercrombie & Fitch.

The neighborhood's permanent population of about 30,000 includes some of the nation's most powerful people, both Democrats and Republicans.

Michael Sullivan, owner of a real estate firm, thinks Georgetown is probably more popular with high-ranking Reagan administration officials than it was during the Carter administration, when pickup trucks, cowboy boots and country-style Southern cooking were the height of chic.

Politicians aren't the only ones living in the town houses and mansions. Socialites, diplomats, lawyers, authors and newspaper people abound, among them author Herman Wouk, former columnist Joseph Alsop, and Bradlee's boss, Katharine Graham, chairwoman of the Washington Post Co.

Their neighbors include Evangeline Bruce, the wife of former diplomat David Bruce and a noted hostess; Averell Harriman and his wife, Pamela, who is active these days in political circles.

Despite certain hassles, Georgetown came in second to northern Arlington, Va., in a local magazine's recent survey in which residents rated their own neighborhoods.

So popular is the place that one real estate agent estimated she received 150 telephone calls after listing a small apartment at $675 a month. Bedlam erupted when she held an open house to show the unit.

Georgetown's reputation as a place to have fun goes back a long time.

Working helps prison inmates pass time

By STEVE ANDRIST
Rochester Post-Bulletin

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Carl Tisone is a union organizer who is happy to be working at a job that pays 66 cents an hour.

If he were working on behalf of potential union members, Tisone would be outraged with that wage. But in this case he's working on behalf of the U.S. government as an inmate laborer in the prison industry at the Federal Medical CenterRochester.

As an employee of prison industries, Tisone, a native of Youngstown, Ohio, who was convicted of conspiracy to distribute cocaine, makes a higher wage than most federal inmates.

In addition to the money, Tisone says his job helps pass the time and helps avoid the drudgery of life in prison. "The more you use your time the faster it goes," he says.

Tisone's job for UNICOR, the trade name for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons' prison industries, involves working in the newly established portable hand lamp factory at the Rochester prison hospital.

The factory is just beginning operations. It is producing trouble lights on 25-, 50-or 100-foot cords, but they must be inspected and approved by Underwriters Laboratories and the General Services Administration before they can be purchased by government agencies, according to Mike Purdy, UNICOR director at the Rochester medical center.

UNICOR has become a widely accepted method of training inmates in vocational skills and reducing their idle time, Purdy says. Idle time often gets the blame when there are prison uprisings, he says. In addition, it is an incentive for inmates to participate in educational programs at the medical center, because without meeting certain educational criteria workers can receive only minimum pay — 44 cents an hour.

Tisone says UNICOR allows inmates to buy things they otherwise couldn't, "so they don't have to give up many things ... except freedom." Some inmates also choose to send money home or establish savings accounts with their earnings.

"It's not unheard of for someone to walk out (when released) with a savings account of $1,500 or $2,000," he says.

Prison jobs outside of UNICOR — usually janitorial and maintenance jobs — pay a maximum of 37 cents an hour, Purdy says. UNICOR workers start at 44 cents an hour, and can work their way up to $1.10 an hour.

S-F authors are included in book

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Their characters walk on strange and distant planets and sometimes live in a world of magic and great deeds.

But the authors of fantasy and science fiction are real, and they are the subjects of a book of interviews compiled by three Odessans.

Daryl Lane, chairman of Odessa College's literature and language department; David Carson, director of audio-visual services at OC, and William Vernon, an analytical chemist at El Paso Products, interviewed science fiction and fantasy authors for 2½ years while producing a nationally syndicated radio show at the college.

"We had miles of taped interviews, and we thought we should do something besides let them languish in the vaults," said Vernon.

Since 1983, when the show went off the air, they have been compiling some of the program's interviews for a book. The final product was so big, it had to be published as a two-volume set, Lane explained.

"The Sound of Wonder" was introduced at the World Fantasy Convention in Tucson, Ariz., earlier this month, Lane said.

"We tried to strike a balance across a wide spectrum of fantasy and science fiction" in selecting the interviews for the book, Vernon said. He said those included range from writers of pure fantasy to those whose work is carefully based on science fact.

Carson reported the show never put any money in the pockets of the authors. Money from the show's syndication barely covered the $15-a-week production costs, even though Carson estimated about 200,000 people heard the program daily.

"The Science Fiction Radio Show" was heard in about 35 cities, including New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, he said.

Carson noted the interviews gave him a chance to meet some of his literary heroes such as Ray Bradbury, whose books he had been reading since he was a boy.

"The characters all pretty much derive from the author ... it's like meeting the characters," he said.

Carson said he also learned "what it is like to have all these characters running around their heads, arguing for the best position in the story."

During the radio show, interviews were edited into five-minute segments played five times a week. Allowing time for introductions, about 20 minutes of a three- or four-hour interview were aired in a week, Carson said.

"We had literally hundreds of miles of tape," Carson said.

Lane added that for the first year of work on the book, the three men did nothing but transcribe interviews.

They also had to secure a contract with each of the authors included in the book and write introductions to each interview and the book, Lane said.

The book includes what may be the last interview with the late science fiction writer Theodore Sturgeon and an interview with Stephen R. Donaldson. Author of "The Chronicles of Thomas Covenant," Donaldson was second only to J.R.R. Tolkien in fantasy sales, Carson said.

"We decided up front not to interview some people, because they've been interviewed so much," said Carson. There is no interview of the prolific author Isaac Asimov.

Carson said some of the interesting aspects of the radio show still haven't found a place in print.

The authors researched the life of Robert Howard. A West Texan from Cross Plains who died in 1936, Howard was the creator of "Conan the Barbarian."

"He committed suicide when his mother died. He was a mother's boy," Lane said.

Unlike his most famous character — an adventurer always finding himself in unfamiliar territory and fighting for his life against impossible odds — Howard lived quietly, seldom leaving Cross Plains and never leaving Texas, Lane said.

Howard wrote only 21 stories, which were printed in "Weird Tales" magazine, Lane said. But now many authors are getting permission to write "Conan" books and film scripts — "millions of dollars worth of material," Carson said.

Lane reported the purpose of the show partly was to educate people about the importance of science fiction. The authors they interviewed believed in the subject's importance, he added.

"A lot of these authors are futurists," he said. "People prepare themselves for the future by reading good science fiction."

For example, Carson explained that when the first atomic bomb was dropped about 5,000 science fiction readers and writers were among the few to comprehend what had happened.

Science fiction and fantasy have become the best-paying of the literary genres, but the subjects still get little respect in literary and artistic circles, Lane noted.

Sculptor switches to crane work

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — When Carol Hughes raises the boom of the crane she operates, she has a real appreciation for the millions of workers who put the ancient pyramids together by hand labor.

In the past six months this wife, mother and community volunteer has made the transition from sculpting metal mobiles for her own artistic amusement to operating a 9-ton or 20-ton crane at construction sites for her own career satisfaction.

Most mornings at 7, Mrs. Hughes is on a highway or at an industrial site, in the cab of one of her cranes, exhilarated by the prospect of working until daylight fades, and "feeling good about myself."

It all began, she says, when she wanted to make metal sculptures in the style of the famous Alexander Calder mobiles and she decided to learn how to weld. She had long been doing free-form sculptures.

Then she and her husband, attorney Bob Hughes, who loves to watch construction operations, decided to buy a crane as an investment, at the suggestion of their friend Angelo Sullo, who had purchased the John J. Farley Iron Works.

Mrs. Hughes credits Sullo with getting her started, by allowing her to use his equipment for her sculptures and for hinting at a larger use of her adaptability to the metal media.

"It was on-the-job training for me. I owe all my knowledge of the know-how basics to Tom Holland, who works for Farley Iron and also works for us now," she said a few days after she had moved 8,000-pound concrete barriers on Route 380 to shift traffic patterns while highway workers completed work on a bridge.

Mrs. Hughes has been "on the job" since last March, dismantling oil tanks for Steamtown, helping to erect prefab buildings, setting a ventilation system for a casket shells company, taking down fire escapes, and doing all kinds of assignments requiring a crane.

"Sometimes I'm in the cab eight hours without getting out of it or standing up," she said. "That's the hardest part of the job. But I find the work artistic and pleasurable. There's so much of a sense of balance. There's a certain rhythm to the operation of lifting the same size objects and setting them down right where they have to be. It's an orchestration, a dance, a ballet; it's pleasant, it's delightful."

Personally, she added, her new career has given her a great amount of confidence in herself. The fears she once had of big dogs and other things have dissolved wih the mental concentration that she calls fatiguing but absolute.

"When I'm involved in the lift, I'm totally responsible for everyone there, for the ground people. Concentration is the essence of the job. I've never had anyone hurt on a job and I'm thankful for that. But it's an awesome burden, too," she said.

One of the great advantages to operating a crane, she explained, is to look at something accomplished and say to herself: "I did that."

Author Jules Verne died in 1905.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

A while back, we speculated on the advent of middle age — or specifically "when" does this fuzzy time period begin.

In an attempt to nail it down by mathematics, we took a normal life expectancy of 75 years and divided by two. Following this criteria, middle age begins at age 37 years and six months. Presumably at noon.

Then, like any true adventurer-scientist — the Baron Frankenstein comes immediately to mind — we applied the theory to ourself. Ipso facto, we calculated that our own crossover would occur around lunch time Nov. 19, 1985.

If you're still following this, that was a week ago last Tuesday.

In truth, we would have forgotten the whole thing, except we mentioned in the earlier column that the big day would fall the week before Thanksgiving.

While the exact date escaped us, the reference remained, and last week we calculated a second set of figures. Sure enough, Nov. 19 came up.

However, we must now report further qualifications regarding the theory.

Everyone knows that for the first 13 to 15 years of your life you're actually only piddling around — learning the ropes, asking dopey questions and in general enjoying life without realizing it.

This up and down state then introduces a series of natural conflicts. Depending on how well or poorly things go, these can include such squabbles as men versus women, job versus family, income versus lifestyle, ambition versus reality and, in a few extreme cases, "you" versus everyone else.

These problems seem to be common through the teens, the 20s, the 30s and (we suspect, although we haven't got there yet) the 40s and 50s.

We're theorizing now that things might get a little calmer around retirement age — the proverbial age 65 and the so-called golden years.

We're not expecting things will be 100 percent hunky-dory by that time, but at least the problems of personal identity, choosing your mate, choosing your job and striving to reach your full potential will be behind you.

Now, back to our theory regarding middle age. Let's change our first set of boundaries, which figured the rocking of the cradle at one end and the silence of the grave at the other.

Let's now figure post-puberty as the approximate beginning and retirement as the approximate end. A so-called "life" complete with all the problems that keeps everyone's gears in motion.

To simplify matters, let's set the ages 15 and 65 as our new perimeters.

Between the two (post-puberty, pre-retirement) we have a normal "life" of 50 years. Divide in half — the "middle" you see — and middle age sets in after the first 25.

Bingo! We have now decided middle age begins at age 40.

Which, we noted with relief, means we still have approximately 2½ years remaining on the youth end of the proverbial stick.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Murphy thought he came up with a real good law when he said,"Everything that can go wrong, will."

But I'd like to propose the Law of the Country: "Everything always goes wrong. Period."

My friend Drew says it takes at least a week's worth of tinkering and cussing to get a brand-new tractor ready to use. That is, if they don't have to call a repairman from Tacoma, Washington, out.

And everybody knows that the best way in the world to make rain is to cut hay. I've seen Dust Bowl droughts broken by the simple act of cutting several fields' worth of hay and leaving it on the ground overnight before baling it. Probably the last thing Noah was going to do before boarding the ark was bale hay for all the animals...he just didn't have time before the rains started. (That's how it works, you see. The more hay you have on the ground, the more it rains.)

A Typical Day in the Life of a Farmer goes something like this: Before the rooster is through crowing, he's climbing into his pickup to go to the fields. He cranks up the engine...and it won't start. No problem. All it needs is jumper cables...which are in the trunk of his wife's car, and she just left for town 20 minutes before. No sweat. He'll rig something up. After a 20,000 volt shock, the pickup starts and he's ready to go, an hour after he intended to.

This is the day the Farmer's Almanac says he absolutely has to get his seed in the ground if he wants a crop. He's already running late on account of that historical late frost that broke all the records. About the time he makes the first turn-row, he hears a loud clank, and looks behind to see a small mountain of seed, all dumped in one place. Close examinaton reveals that he's missing a screw from one strategic place. Naturally he doesn't have a replacement in his tool box, so he drives back home (a 20-mile trip), locates a handful, and returns to the disabled tractor.

It doesn't take long for him to discover that all the screws he brought are either an eighth-inch too large or an eighth-inch too small, but he manages to rig something and get started again. He plows happily for a while, then looks behind and notices that he still has the same amount of seed he started out with. After a few kicks and curses, he realizes that he's going to have to go into town (20 miles away) to get a replacement part.

By this time the day's half gone and he's hungry. While in town, he grabs a hamburger at a drive-through place and heads home in a hurry, eating while he drives. Just as he crams the last bit of hamburger into his mouth, he crests the hill right before his own mail-box, and nearly hits a cow in the middle of the road. Lots of cows, in fact. All his.

By the time he's saddled up, gathered the cows, and fixed the fence, it's late afternoon. He races for the field, throws together the replacement parts, and starts up again. About halfway through the field, he runs out of seed. How could that happen? Must be that blankety-blank part that went into that blankety-blank piece that was sold to him by that stupid, blankety-blank...Of course, it's too late to buy more seed. The store's closed by now, and it's nearly dark.

Nothing to do but pack up and go on home to supper. Wearily he climbs into the pickup and cranks the engine, but it won't start. It needs jumper cables, which are...

SUNDAY
November 24

Western Texas College officials have sent a letter to the chairman of the Select Committee on Higher Education further defending WTC's practice of granting three-hours college credit for one course classified as "remedial" or high school-level education, it was reported Sunday.

In the same letter, college officials note they will follow any directives from the state regarding the course — to the extent of dropping it from the college catalog.

As of Dec. 5, Scurry and other rural counties of Texas will face what local Juvenile Officer Larry Thompson calls a major problem in the handling of juvenile offenders, it was reported Sunday.

After that date, youth age 16 or younger cannot be held at facilities like the Scurry County jail past a 24-hour period following their being taken into custody.

Jerry Dickey was named Fireman of the Year and Crystie Sutter was named department sweetheart at the 56th annual Thanksgiving Banquet of the Snyder Fire Department, it was reported Sunday.

The event featured also service pin presentations and awards for 100 percent attendance made to 15 members of the local unit.

Snyder High School volleyball players were welcomed home Sunday by approximately 150 students and fans as they returned to Snyder after winning their fifth State Championship in Austin.

A former Snyder resident was killed Sunday afternoon south of Midland after the seat of an ultra-light airplane he was flying apparently detached from the aircraft.

Pronounced dead at the scene was Kelly Joe Preston, 32, of Midland.

MONDAY
November 25

A feature story in Monday's SDN profiled Wallace Salmon, a master craftsman for both furniture refurbishing and wood carving.

Salmon noted he has trying to retire for four years, but his customers wouldn't let him. Now he plans to devote his full time to what he calls his first love, wood carving.

TUESDAY
November 26

The murder trial for Arthur Lee MacLeod has been set for Jan. 14 in Odessa, it was reported Tuesday.

MacLeod, 36, is accused of killing his wife and ex-Snyder resident Evelyne Feather MacLeod.

161st District Court Judge Tryon D. Lewis in Odessa is now scheduled to hear pre-trial motions in the case beginning Dec. 9.

Greenbugs have been spotted in Scurry County wheat fields, and County Entomologist Deanna Myers noted Tuesday in some cases control measures are now needed.

The hospital's board of managers tabled two requests for equipment purchases during its regular November meeting Tuesday.

These included a request for a cardiac computer for the coronary care unit, a devise which measures blood flow rate and cardiac output; and an upgraded telephone system for Cogdell's radiology department.

WEDNESDAY
November 27

Jurors in the trial of 71-year-old Jerry William Grimes of Snyder were released for the Thanksgiving holiday shortly after 3:15 p.m. Wednesday.

They are now due to continue the case Monday at 10 a.m.

THURSDAY
November 28

A new wrinkle for negotiations between four area cable companies and their source for WFAA (Channel 8-Dallas) has apparently surfaced, it was reported Thursday.

It appears Times Mirror Microwave of Austin — which provides the Dallas station for Snyder, Sweetwater, Colorado City and Big Spring — has offered an acceptable bid to purchase the microwave tower needed to continue these transmissions.

FRIDAY
November 29

Two annual Christmas projects sponsored by the Snyder Jaycees will be held again this Yuletide season, it was reported Friday.

Approximately 40 local employees for Monsanto Oil Company operations here have been officially informed of the pending sale of Monsanto operations in the U.S. and Canada to Broken-Hill Petroleum (BHP), an Australian-based oil firm.

Locally, Monsanto is the operator and a 20 percent owner of the Diamond M gas processing plant and its related production operation.

Ken Bissett, plant manager, said Friday, "We expect the transition to be very smooth."

The Hermleigh Cardinals finished their best football season ever last night — Nov. 24 — defeating the Baird Bears 40-22 to earn the Class B Region II Championship. Cardinal backs Wallace Wall, Joe Paty and James Vernon racked up a total of 365 yards rushing enroute to their 12th victory of the season with no losses.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

We would just like to say a big thanks for the support we received on our last mission project, to support the Ronald McDonald House which is being constructed in Lubbock.

A Ronald McDonald House is a temporary residential facility that serves as a home-away-from-home for the parents and families of children being treated for a serious illness.

It provides a comfortable, non-institutional setting where families can rest and privately share their concerns, thoughts and questions with each other. In addition, the Ronald McDonald House will ease the financial burden for these families.

At our bake sale, we raised $351. 50 with the help of the Vincent Baptist Church and other interested individuals.

Thanks for your support.

To the editor,

I am concerned about the abolishment of our school. We, the students, are proud of our school.

We will be the most affected people in the community; yet we have no vote. We just hope the voters of the Hermleigh ISD will consider the feelings, the pride and dignity of some 125 students in Hermleigh on voting day, Jan. 18, 1986. We, the students, are proud of our school and we want to keep it. We encourage adults to register 30 days prior to the election date to vote if they have not, and at the time each voter casts his ballot, please consider the students of Hermleigh.

If the school is abolished, very little will be left. Some of the surrounding communities have done away with their schools; nothing is left but empty buildings.

Sincerely,
Billy Joe Gannaway

Signs light up desert night

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — When President Nixon turned off the lights in this neon capital in 1973, the city's largest hotel harnessed a horse to turn a generator that kept the resort's marquee glowing.

Such is the ingenuity that has fueled the neon wars which flash incessantly between downtown's Glitter Gulch and The Strip, the electric ribbon strung across the desert.

Las Vegas, Tokyo and Mexico City have been described as the sign capitals of the world, with the art rapidly moving from the old days of the 40-watt bulb to the modern age of electronic wizardry.

Bigger and brighter are the goals as the city's gambling resorts spend millions of dollars for the glow designed to coax billions from the 13 million tourists who visit the city annually.

Visitors to downtown's Glitter Gulch find the millions of bulbs and miles of neon tubing provide a toasty warmth on chilly winter nights.

On the Strip, tourists stop to snap pictures in front of the sprawling neon artwork of the Stardust Hotel. The 18-story sign's 40,000 light bulbs are enough to illuminate a small town. There are 30 miles of wiring in the sign, 38 tons of steel, enough paint to coat 27 houses and enough concrete to provide the foundations for those homes.

Down the Strip there's Lucky, the 13-story neon clown beckoning gamblers and families to the Circus Circus Hotel and Casino. Further north is the Sahara hotel's $1 million 22-story sign. The city's highest, it requires a special built-in crane at the top to allow workers to reach its upper limits.

The newest entry is at the Palace Station Casino along Interstate 15, the artery used by millions of Californians each year. That sign is more than 12 stories tall and covers 7,500 square feet.

The bright lights of Las Vegas have long attracted worldwide attention.

"We have a steady flow of sign manufacturers from Japan tour our plant every year, checking to see the latest innovations," says Richard Linford, service manager for Young Electric Sign Co.

The Salt Lake City-based company controls 70 to 75 percent of the signs in Las Vegas. Each night, Linford says, crews fan out across the city with tape recorders, taking note of signs that have lost their glow, bulbs that have succumbed to slingshots, rocks, BB guns, weather or age.

Most Las Vegas resorts kept their signs lighted 24 hours a day until the Arab oil embargo began in 1973.

On Nov. 16, 1973, hotels shut off their outside signs to comply with President Nixon's request for voluntary cutbacks in energy use.

That's when the Las Vegas Hilton recruited an aging workhorse to shuffle in a circle three or four hours a night, pumping 5,500 watts of power from a generator and keeping the hotel marquee aglow while much of the city was dark.

"All it cost us was a little bit of hay," Hilton spokesman Bruce Banke recalls. "In fact, if we could only figure a way to do it we could put a lot of horses to work now."

The resort, which includes the world's largest hotel, spends about $4 million annually on electricity — consuming as much power as a city of 15,000 people.

As the effects of the embargo began to ebb, Las Vegas resorts were allowed to light their signs for three hours on the weekend, then three hours a day. Soon it became business as usual, with the signs glowing around the clock.

That gesture was not enough to quiet some critics.

Waste is turned into new product

By SCOTT HAMILTON
Carbondale
Southern Illinoisan

PINCKNEYVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Marian Greer is a farmer and a sawmill operator and, based on appearances, would seem to be no different from any other hard-working southern Illinois farmer.

What sets him apart is an idea — making chipboard out of sawmill waste — and the determination to turn that idea into reality.

Until about 1968, Greer operated his sawmill business in a conventional manner, cutting up oak and other hardwoods into lumber and disposing of the sawmill waste by selling it to the pulp mill.

When the federal Environmental Protection Agency instituted rules that virtually eliminated oak waste for use as a pulp product, Greer was faced with a disposal problem. That's what sparked his idea.

"I decided to try and find a way to use the sawmill waste and came up with the idea to make a chipboard product out of it," he said.

Particle board is not a new idea, but Greer's notion was to make a different type of board. Most particle board is made up of sawdust that has been processed to remove the coarse material, but removing that material produces more waste.

"You're right back to where you started, with a disposal problem," Greer said. "I wanted a process that would utilize all of the waste — bark and all.

"You see, when you make lumber out of a tree, most of the tree is wasted. I guess it is just my stingy nature, but I wanted a product that would use the whole tree."

After some experimentation at home, Greer took two bags of sawdust and wood chips and set out for Washington state to attend a symposium where he could present his idea to industry experts.

"There were probably 400 people I presented my idea to and 397 of them told me it couldn't be done. The other three thought it was possible but they doubted I could do it," Greer said.

But he persevered and, so far, has proven the experts wrong.

To prove his product was feasible, Greer bought a particle board plant from a Tennessee firm and moved it to his farm northwest of Pinckneyville. It took him six years to reassemble the plant and get it ready for production.

Just when it looked as if things were ready, he ran into a major obstacle. The chipboard plant required heat — and lots of it.

Illegals cross border from all over world

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Until a few weeks ago, when the Border Patrol collared him, a man in a little town near here had a business going for him worth a cool million dollars a month.

It was one of a number of similar businesses, similarly profitable, that have sprung up to cash in on the dreams and desperation of the ever-growing throng who see America's southern frontier as a golden door. Now that view has suddenly expanded

"We used to arrest only Mexicans, some Salvadorans, a handful of others," says Silvestre Reyes, chief of the Border Patrol in the McAllen sector.

"What has happened in the last couple of years is that we are now arresting people from all over the world, every country you can name. These people aren't hitchhikers from the interior of Mexico. These are people who pay big money for international connections — travel agents."

The "travel agent" his men arrested near here, in the small town of Raymondville, had, according to Reyes, provided his services to about 550 illegal aliens a month at fees of $2,000 to $2,500 an alien. He was in business three months.

"He used vans, 18-wheelers, mobile homes," Reyes says. "Took them where they wanted to go."

Those fees represent merely the last leg of the trip. Border Patrol investigators say that dozens of organized smugglers in Europe, Asia and elsewhere charge up to $10,000 a person to get them into America, via Mexico.

"Money and greed are what makes it work," Reyes says.

The big increase in the OTMs, as the Border Patrol classifies arrests of "Other Than Mexicans," that began about two years ago has increased monthly on every sector of the border.

The U.S. Congress is now trying to write an immigration law to control today's unprecedented surge of undocumented aliens. Uncounted thousands make it safely across the frontier every day despite the Border Patrol's arrest average of one illegal alien every 27 seconds, more than a million a year for the past three years.

For some reason, the McAllen sector, an 85,000-square-mile area of rural south Texas along a 280-mile stretch of the Rio Grande, lures more OTMs than any other sector of the 1,950-mile border — or at least more are caught here.

In fiscal year 1985, McAllen agents accounted for nearly a third of the 40,500 OTMs arrested nationwide — 12,373 arrests, an increase of 41 percent over the previous year.

The McAllen sector alone recorded aliens from 57 countries among more than 70 countries recorded nationwide. As in other sectors, the greatest numbers here were from Central and South America — 5,019 from El Salvador, 3,845 from Nicaragua, 1,258 from Colombia, for example.

But McAllen agents also arrested six Chinese, 18 Indians, five Israelis, three Iranians, eight Koreans, three Pakistanis, 157 Poles, 58 Portuguese, a Scot, four Spaniards, 13 Yugoslavs, one Australian, eight Sri Lankans, four Egyptians, a Malaysian, a Lebanese, nine Nigerians, a German, six Ghanans, 62 Cubans, one Frenchman, a Gambian, a Turk, 23 Argentinians and a Canary Islander.

"The reason we get so many OTMs here, I believe," Reyes says, "is because we're so close to Mexico City, which is where they can fly into from all over the world. They can get what they need there. Documents to place you legally in Mexico, genuine or counterfeit, are no problem. All you need is the money."

From Mexico City it is a $28 plane ride to Reynosa, across the Rio Grande from McAllen. "Also," Reyes says, "professional smugglers in Mexico City run charter buses. Yes, like a travel agency."

Border patrol investigators say smugglers of OTMs are netting tens of millions of dollars annually. They also say that many of the illegal aliens, especially those from China and India, carry so much cash they become prey for bandit gangs — tipped off by the smugglers themselves.

Along the teeming California sector of the border, the busiest and most violent sector, at least five bandits have been killed in 13 shoot-outs over the past two years.

"What's scary about this new trend," Reyes says, "is that we're no longer dealing only with hungry Mexicans sneaking across to find a job. We don't know who's getting in — terrorists, criminals. They could be anybody, for any purpose. Unless we stop it, we're vulnerable to anything."

Home provided for heart patients

By CARLA McCLAIN
The Tucson Citizen

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The hardships of making Tucson a temporary home are now over for out-of-town University Medical Center heart transplant patients, who must stay near the hospital, in a strange city, for up to six months during their recovery.

The patients are now assured of a fully stocked and furnished apartment — at no cost if they face financial hardship — under a program just launched by UMC and PF West, a Tucson apartment-building company.

Called "Lease-on-Life," the program offers a free apartment in one of PF West's 14 Tucson apartment complexes to patients who cannot afford to set up a second, temporary home here for several months.

"This helps solve one of our biggest non-medical problems as far as our heart-transplant work is concerned," said Dr. Jack G. Copeland, UMC's chief transplant surgeon. "Our patients are probably at the most traumatic period of their lives, and we believe the more we can reduce anxieties of any kind ... the more we increase the opportunity for a successful recovery."

Before the PF West offer, financially strapped transplant patients were given minimal financial help from a small fund set up by UMC, and were often forced to stage fund-raising drives here or in their home towns to pay for their Tucson housing.

Usually, there are five to eight people in Tucson from out of town, either waiting for a donor heart to be found or recovering from the transplant surgery, said Janice A. Copeland, heart transplant coordinator for UMC.

The hospital estimates that, during the next year, about 25 patients will be accepted for UMC organ tranplants and about one-third will need financial help for medical and living expenses.

During the recovery period, which can last from three to six months, patients return to the center five days a week for physical therapy, medications and frequent heart biopsies to detect organ rejection, she explained.

Your Birthday

Dec. 1, 1985

Involvements with people who were lucky for you in the past could be even more so in the year ahead. If you have something good going, do all you can to beef it up even more.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be doubly alert for opportunity today because Lady Luck may place you in the right spot at the right time to gain from something originated by another. Major changes are ahead for Sagittarians in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today's developments will give you a chance to reinforce a friendship that needs a little shoring up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You are still in an excellent achievement cycle, so it behooves you to establish meaningful objectives. Go for something big while you're hot.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You could be luckier than usual today in situations that contain elements of chance. Don't take foolish gambles, but by the same token, don't be too timid.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is a good day to implement changes that you feel will benefit your loved ones. If all are in accord, take the initiative and start moving.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Focus on the positive aspects of situations today instead of dwelling on their dark side. If your outlook is bright, the results will be bright as well.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's important today that you do something constructive that will give you a sense of accomplishment. If not, you're apt to feel guilty later for wasting time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Let your hair down, and enjoy yourself today. Keep in mind that your social involvements should be fun, then strive to make them so.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The good you do for others today will later be returned to you many times more. If you think someone needs your help, jump into the breech.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is a good day to get in touch with friends you haven't seen much of lately. They'll welcome your phone call or even a brief visit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today, something propitious could unexpectedly develop that might lead to financial gain. It will be triggered by one who likes you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.22) You're basically a very determined person and, once you set your mind on a specific target, there's no stopping you. Today will be one of those days.

December 2, 1985

In the year ahead, you are likely to become involved in some type of organizational activity that will prove both pleasurable and profitable. You'll be singled out to play a key role.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Tendencies toward forgetfulness may be prevalent today. If you are supposed to take care of something important, make a note of it or ask another to remind you. Major changes are ahead for Sagittarians in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It would be wise today not to spend funds before they're in your bank account. The cash upon which you're counting might be subject to delays.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be realistic today if you are negotiating an important matter with another. Remove your rose-colored glasses and hammer the deal out in a businesslike way.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) What you do today, you will do well, but unfortunately, you might not do everything you could. Once you get on a roll, don't watch the clock.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're basically an aware person who can recognize opportunities and know how to act upon them appropriately. But today this gift may be drowsing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Unless you are extremely careful today, an advantageous business situation won't work out as it should. Monitor every step.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Information that you pass on to associates today will be quoted later. Be doubly sure you have all your facts straight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your possibilities for increasing your holdings through hard work are good today, but you're not apt to get things handed to you just because you're a nice person.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you have taken the time to work what you believe to be a wise game plan today, it's best not to make last-minute changes. Stick to your guns.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't let it be said that you are only willing to help those you think can do more for you in return. Be kind to all today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) When socializing with friends today, do not be boastful or put on airs to try to impress them. Humility and sincerity will have a greater impact.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.22) Usually you're a good manager of family resources, but today your skills and discipline might desert you. Don't let extravagance rule you.

Former model behind martial arts school

NEW YORK (AP) — The joint is jumping with karate brown belts and black belts of varying degrees. It smells new, sort of like a new car, and there is a faint scent of money.

It's a place where men and women of means learn to defend themselves on New York's mean streets.

The new $1 million facility in a high-rent district of midtown Manhattan is called the Executive Self-Defense Center. It may be the world's most expensive karate school, but the operators say you get what you pay for.

"At some of those karate schools above fruit stands on the upper West Side, you practically already need to know karate to go there," sniffs Sharon Creal, who holds a brown belt in karate and is the financial brains behind the operation.

For a $1,200 fee, clients at the Executive Self-Defense Center get fitness training and 10 lessons in urban defense, plus evaluations of their performances. An actuarian may venture that it would be cheaper to get mugged once every six months, but what the heck.

Much of the backing for the school came from former Parisian model Suzanne Ericsson, a Swedish-born blonde who is 5-feet-11 and holds a black belt. Another investor wishes to remain anonymous.

The head instructor, Ted West, worked in the New York City prison system for 30 years and has taught martial arts for 20. At just under 6 feet tall, he is a sixth degree black belt. His demonstrations against bigger opponents are impressive.

West, a slightly balding man of 55 or so, easily dismantled the other karate teachers as they came at him with fists, clubs, and — when he allowed it —a stranglehold.

The school has six self-defense instructors and four fitness trainers. The training sessions, by appointment only, are videotaped. The center has six private workout rooms, half of them equipped with heavy bags and half equipped with dummies on which clients practice their moves.

West has dreamed up 90 scenarios in which the urban dweller can be taught to fight back. His tips are practical, but not invincible, as he is the first to admit.

The first is awareness.

"We don't want to make people paranoid, but we want them to know the tiger is out there," West advises. "We put them through simulated situations. Fear is fine, but panic is to be avoided."

The second strategy is damage control. If a mugger puts a gun in your face, give him the money. Or, if possible, disrupt his game plan. Substitute your own.

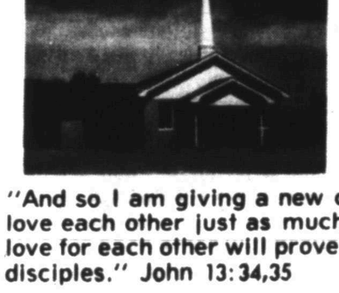
"Keep him off balance," West says. "If someone grabs you in the elevator and says he's going to take you to the roof to shoot you or rape you, tell them you're not going to the roof. Tell them to do what they're going to do right there.

"At least, he's not where he feels comfortable. That gives you an edge."

The third part of his strategy, he calls "bombs away." That's when the client will want to use all the self-defense systems he has been taught, a combination of varying forms of the martial arts, a bit of karate, some jiu jitsu, t'ai ch'i chuan and aikido, as well as some nice moves employing an umbrella.

The club is intended to be exclusive, but not quite as exclusive as it is now. Only a dozen or so executives have signed up so far. The operators hope a direct mail advertising campaign, directed at a selected clientele, will remedy that.

"We want to stay very limited," says Ms. Ericsson in her Scandinavian accent. "We want 300 to 350 members and we hope to have 50 by the end of the year."



UNION UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

"And so I am giving a new commandment to you now—love each other just as much as I love you. Your strong love for each other will prove to the world that you are my disciples." John 13:34,35

AN INVITATION

To all who sin and need a Savior-
To all who mourn and need comforting-
To all who are weary and need spiritual rest-
To all who are friendless and desire companionship-
To all who are strangers and long for a church home-
To all who are afflicted and need the Heavenly Physician-
To all who are in doubt and are seeking for light-
To ALL who wish a place of fellowship and worship-

This Church opens wide its doors and in Jesus' Name says "WELCOME".

Dear Abby

Troubleshooter's Fourth Wife Fears Trouble in Her Marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just got married for the fourth time. It was my husband's fourth marriage, too. He is 65 and I am 55. He is a well-paid troubleshooter. When his boss calls him, he goes on an assignment—usually out of town for a few days.

He told me all about his previous marriages. He married No. 1 at age 22. Five years into that marriage, he fell for another woman and divorced No. 1 for No. 2. That marriage ended seven years later when he fell in love with another woman, who became No. 3. That lasted until he met me. He cheated on No. 3 (with me) until he divorced her.

Now that we are married, I am very nervous. I can't trust him. When his boss calls him to go out of town, I wonder if he is really working or seeing another woman. He used to pull this on his third wife so we could be together. When he calls me from out of town to tell me he "loves" me, I remember him doing that to his third wife when he was holding me in his arms.

I want this marriage to last. How can I be sure he isn't cheating on me? I am desperate.

INSECURE

DEAR INSECURE: You can't. This is the price you are paying for the moments you stole from wife No. 3. The penalty for being a cheater is being unable to trust anyone else. You have my sympathy.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive 45-year-old secretary—unmarried.

How should I respond to people who ask, "How is your love life?"

If it were good, I surely wouldn't say so. If it were bad—or nonexistent—I wouldn't care to have that known either.

I am basically a very honest person and find it hard to lie. Please help me.

LOUISIANA LIBRA

DEAR LIBRA: How about, "It's none of your business." That's the truth.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My problem might not seem very important compared to some I've seen in your column, but this is about to break up my marriage. My husband hates to shower.

He insists that he washes thoroughly every morning, but if he does, it's not doing the job. I have hinted and done everything except to tell him that he stinks, but it hasn't helped.

He smokes a pipe constantly, and in addition to his body odor, his clothes smell of stale smoke, but I can handle that. He's very messy, dropping his clothes wherever he takes them off, but I can handle that, too. It's his refusal to bathe or shower that is driving me away from him. I love him, but it's very hard to make love to a man who smells bad. Please help me.

STINKER'S WIFE, PETERSBURG, VA.

DEAR WIFE: Tell the man in plain English that he stinks! And don't make love to him until he cleans up his act. If you do not take this advice immediately, I predict that your marriage will be all washed up before your husband is.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A very deaf friend of mine has been a widow for many years. Then she met this widower and they fell in love. They are being married in December at a small church in the presence of friends and family.

Their wedding invitations are charming. Perhaps you'd like to share this with your readers. Following the proper formal invitation was this lovely line at the bottom:

"We respectfully request no gifts. We have everything we need. And we soon will have each other. Who could ask for anything more?"

J. IN ALBANY, N.Y.

DEAR J.: Beautiful!

Concern about weightlifting

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Please explain why a 15-year-old boy should not get into heavy weightlifting. What restrictions should someone his age observe?

DEAR READER — A boy of 15 usually has not reached his full physical growth potential with respect to muscle mass and bone development. Therefore, heavy weight training may strain underdeveloped tissues. This is not to say that weightlifting is out. But I think maxiumum or power lifting is best avoided until he is a year or two older and has worked up from smaller weights used in a repetitive manner. I am talking in generalities; the boy you mention may be quite capable of heavy lifting. However, I would not encourage this activity without knowing more about him as an individual. And, of course, it would be helpful to know for what purpose he wishes to weight train.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Since I cannot get my husband to go to a doctor, I hope you can help. He is 61 and has been developing small white "scars" on his skin. They are about as wide as twine string, about one inch long, and the area beneath them is sunken. Could you please tell me what it is and how to treat it?

DEAR READER — As skin ages, particularly if it has been subjected to intense and chronic sun exposure, small areas of epithelial deterioration may develop. These can appear as indented scars. However, so can certain forms of skin cancer. I think your husband would exercise good judgment if he were to modify his position and let a good dermatologist take a look at his skin lesions. Although nothing may be amiss, it would be reassuring to know

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a woman, 50 years old and in good health except for my skin condition, which is steadily becoming more noticeable. I'm losing the pigmentation. My doctor, a general practitioner, says there is nothing you can do for this. I am concerned that it may spread to my face and have become very self-conscious about it. Would I benefit by consulting a dermatologist?

DEAR READER — Yes, you would. One of the conditions to be considered in your case is vitiligo, a benign loss of pigmentation of unknown cause. Treatment is available for depigmentation, and a dermatologist would be the most appropriate person to advise you.

For Dr. Gott's complete discussion of problems and treatments of the prostate gland, write for your copy of Dr. Gott's new Health Report on THE PROSTATE GLAND. Send 75 cents plus a long self-addressed, stamped envelope in care of this newspaper to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

Some old cures sound fatal

Few people would deny that life in Colonial America was difficult, even brutal. For example, take medical practice and health theory of the 1700s as they were described by observers of that time.

In those days, a young man apprenticed himself to a practicing doctor for four years and was then considered competent to provide medical care. During these four years, the apprentice was supplied "meat, drink, washing and lodging," while his parents provided clothing. Occasionally, rural craftsmen set themselves up as "physitians" and, like the Connecticut shoemaker, "laid aside his awls and leather, got himself some gallipots, and ... fell to cobling of human bodies."

Doctors had great difficulty earning livings by practicing. Those who were not independently wealthy either owned farms or participated in other commercial enterprises, such as apothecary shops and grocery stores. They often grew their own compounds. Patent medicines were universally available: "Doctor Norris's Antimonial Drops for the Cure of all Fevers" or "Dr. Keysler's Celebrated Anti-venereal Pills." Common medications included rhubarb and jalop, epsom salts, Jesuit's bark, laudanum, balm of Gilead and antimony.

Bloodletting and purgation were the principal therapeutic modalities. Eighteenth-century doctors believed that injurious particles in the blood ("morbific matter") were responsible for disease. The "morbific matter" originated from substances in the air that had a "disagreement with the juices, insinuate themselves into the body, and, mixing with the blood, taint the whole frame; or from different kinds of fermentations and putrefactions of humours detained too long in the body, for want of its being able to digest and discharge them, on account of their too large bulk or unsuitable nature." The condition of the blood was a direct consequence of the type and quantity of food, the patient's age, the time of year and other factors.

Inflammation was regarded as an obstruction of capillary circulation. To relieve this obstruction, doctors would create a counter-irritation, or "issue." To make a blister issue, the physician would apply powder of Spanish fly or would create a hole in the skin with a lancet and then imbed peas or beans in the lesion, producing an open sore through which "morbific matter" could be discharged. Often, a seton would be used: a cotton or silk cord was pushed through an opening in the skin; the ends were left outside the hole. The cord was then moved back and forth each day "to create a discharge of purulent matter."

Gastroenteritis (vomiting and diarrhea) was extremely common in Colonial times and was thought to be due to an excess of bile. It was treated with "chicken water and gruel," followed by castor oil, laudanum, mint tea and bloodletting (if the patient's blood vessels were "excessively full"). Because drinking-water supplies, especially in cities, were often contaminated, it is a wonder that patients survived the treatment, on top of the bacterial or viral intestinal infections.

We find these treatments crude today, but they lasted well into the 1800s, when more specific causes of disease began to be discovered. In 200 years, we will probably look back on medical practice of the 1980s as being incalculably ineffective. However, we do seem to have traveled at least one small step away from 18th-century panaceas and toward the one-disease/one-cure approach. Years ago, doctors had but a single therapy for a wide variety of ills. One medicine was commonly used to cure scurvy, leprosy, ulcers, cancers, ringworm, "scald heads" and sore eyes. If modern medicine has accomplished anything, at least it has shown that each disease has (or may have) a specific antidote. Even penicillin, thought originally to kill all germs, is now known to be effective against only a small spectrum of bacteria, and not at all against viruses.

Although medical practice circa 1700 had some horrendous drawbacks, there was an unmistakable quaintness about it. Certainly, patients would be better off after the application of leeches than they would after some of the bizarre treatments being offered by 20th-century medical quacks.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Man makes numbers easier

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — David Schwartz gets pensive when he hears children boast they've collected "a million" baseball cards or have eaten "a billion" hamburgers.

When reading the newspaper, the 33-year-old Wallingford resident ponders whether other adults realize the enormity of 1.5 billion gallons of water, $4 billion worth of British fighter planes, 4 million latchkey children and nearly 2 million unwed housemates.

It quickly became apparent that children often grow up into adults who don't understand how much goes into a million and a billion and especially a trillion, Schwartz said.

"Innumeracy can be just as dangerous as illiteracy," he said.

A personal mission ensued, with the end result being Schwartz's first children's book, titled "How Much Is a Million?"

"I thought I would try to write a book for children that would put them in touch with a sense of awe that I have for such large amounts," he said. "Whenever I would try to express something, I realized I was using really large numbers."

Schwartz, a former educator who is now a free-lance writer, realized he was not alone in trying to express the greatness of large numbers. During a recent interview, he pulled clippings from a file to illustrate. They ranged from an Iowa social studies class collecting 1 million bottle caps as a handson example to President Reagan explaining the trillion-dollar deficit by equating it to a stack of $1,000 bills piled 67 miles high.

Schwartz, incidentally, said he had sent Reagan a copy of his book.

"I would really like to have my book be noticed by somebody who's really talked about these numbers in a serious way because it's part of their job," he said.

Schwartz's story, in conjunction with illustrator Steven Kellogg's whimsical watercolor drawings, seeks to explain big things in a small way.

"Kids like big numbers. They're kind of intrigued by them. They don't have any way to understand them," he said. "Adults tend to prefer to skip over big numbers. When they read an article, their eyes just sort of skim over the number and what they get out of that is 'this is a big number.'"

Writing the book involved more than simply sitting down with a calculator, Schwartz said.

"I came up with different ways of viewing a million and a billion and a trillion," he said.

He did so by selecting examples in all dimensions: distance, area, volume and time.

The first live broadcast from Russia was carried by the BBC in 1961.

Former model behind martial arts school

NEW YORK (AP) — The joint is jumping with karate brown belts and black belts of varying degrees. It smells new, sort of like a new car, and there is a faint scent of money.

It's a place where men and women of means learn to defend themselves on New York's mean streets.

The new $1 million facility in a high-rent district of midtown Manhattan is called the Executive Self-Defense Center. It may be the world's most expensive karate school, but the operators say you get what you pay for.

"At some of those karate schools above fruit stands on the upper West Side, you practically already need to know karate to go there," sniffs Sharon Creal, who holds a brown belt in karate and is the financial brains behind the operation.

For a $1,200 fee, clients at the Executive Self-Defense Center get fitness training and 10 lessons in urban defense, plus evaluations of their performances. An actuarian may venture that it would be cheaper to get mugged once every six months, but what the heck.

Much of the backing for the school came from former Parisian model Suzanne Ericsson, a Swedish-born blonde who is 5-feet-11 and holds a black belt. Another investor wishes to remain anonymous.

The head instructor, Ted West, worked in the New York City prison system for 30 years and has taught martial arts for 20. At just under 6 feet tall, he is a sixth degree black belt. His demonstrations against bigger opponents are impressive.

West, a slightly balding man of 55 or so, easily dismantled the other karate teachers as they came at him with fists, clubs, and — when he allowed it —a stranglehold.

The school has six self-defense instructors and four fitness trainers. The training sessions, by appointment only, are videotaped. The center has six private workout rooms, half of them equipped with heavy bags and half equipped with dummies on which clients practice their moves.

West has dreamed up 90 scenarios in which the urban dweller can be taught to fight back. His tips are practical, but not invincible, as he is the first to admit.

The first is awareness.

"We don't want to make people paranoid, but we want them to know the tiger is out there," West advises. "We put them through simulated situations. Fear is fine, but panic is to be avoided."

The second strategy is damage control. If a mugger puts a gun in your face, give him the money. Or, if possible, disrupt his game plan. Substitute your own.

"Keep him off balance," West says. "If someone grabs you in the elevator and says he's going to take you to the roof to shoot you or rape you, tell them you're not going to the roof. Tell them to do what they're going to do right there.

"At least, he's not where he feels comfortable. That gives you an edge."

The third part of his strategy, he calls "bombs away." That's when the client will want to use all the self-defense systems he has been taught, a combination of varying forms of the martial arts, a bit of karate, some jiu jitsu, t'ai ch'i chuan and aikido, as well as some nice moves employing an umbrella.

The club is intended to be exclusive, but not quite as exclusive as it is now. Only a dozen or so executives have signed up so far. The operators hope a direct mail advertising campaign, directed at a selected clientele, will remedy that.

"We want to stay very limited," says Ms. Ericsson in her Scandinavian accent. "We want 300 to 350 members and we hope to have 50 by the end of the year."

Dear Abby

Troubleshooter's Fourth Wife Fears Trouble in Her Marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just got married for the fourth time. It was my husband's fourth marriage, too. He is 65 and I am 55. He is a well-paid troubleshooter. When his boss calls him, he goes on an assignment—usually out of town for a few days.

He told me all about his previous marriages. He married No. 1 at age 22. Five years into that marriage, he fell for another woman and divorced No. 1 for No. 2. That marriage ended seven years later when he fell in love with another woman, who became No. 3. That lasted until he met me. He cheated on No. 3 (with me) until he divorced her.

Now that we are married, I am very nervous. I can't trust him. When his boss calls him to go out of town, I wonder if he is really working or seeing another woman. He used to pull this on his third wife so we could be together. When he calls me from out of town to tell me he "loves" me, I remember him doing that to his third wife when he was holding me in his arms.

I want this marriage to last. How can I be sure he isn't cheating on me? I am desperate.

INSECURE

DEAR INSECURE: You can't. This is the price you are paying for the moments you stole from wife No. 3. The penalty for being a cheater is being unable to trust anyone else. You have my sympathy.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive 45-year-old secretary—unmarried.

How should I respond to people who ask, "How is your love life?"

If it were good, I surely wouldn't say so. If it were bad—or nonexistent—I wouldn't care to have that known either.

I am basically a very honest person and find it hard to lie. Please help me.

LOUISIANA LIBRA

DEAR LIBRA: How about, "It's none of your business." That's the truth.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My problem might not seem very important compared to some I've seen in your column, but this is about to break up my marriage. My husband hates to shower.

He insists that he washes thoroughly every morning, but if he does, it's not doing the job. I have hinted and done everything except to tell him that he stinks, but it hasn't helped.

He smokes a pipe constantly, and in addition to his body odor, his clothes smell of stale smoke, but I can handle that. He's very messy, dropping his clothes wherever he takes them off, but I can handle that, too. It's his refusal to bathe or shower that is driving me away from him. I love him, but it's very hard to make love to a man who smells bad. Please help me.

STINKER'S WIFE, PETERSBURG, VA.

DEAR WIFE: Tell the man in plain English that he stinks! And don't make love to him until he cleans up his act. If you do not take this advice immediately, I predict that your marriage will be all washed up before your husband is.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A very dear friend of mine has been a widow for many years. Then she met this widower and they fell in love. They are being married in December at a small church in the presence of friends and family.

Their wedding invitations are charming. Perhaps you'd like to share this with your readers. Following the proper formal invitation was this lovely line at the bottom:

"We respectfully request no gifts. We have everything we need. And we soon will have each other. Who could ask for anything more?"

J. IN ALBANY, N.Y.

DEAR J.: Beautiful!

Peter Gott, M.D.

Concern about weightlifting

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Please explain why a 15-year-old boy should not get into heavy weightlifting. What restrictions should someone his age observe?

DEAR READER — A boy of 15 usually has not reached his full physical growth potential with respect to muscle mass and bone development. Therefore, heavy weight training may strain underdeveloped tissues. This is not to say that weightlifting is out. But I think maxiumum or power lifting is best avoided until he is a year or two older and has worked up from smaller weights used in a repetitive manner. I am talking in generalities; the boy you mention may be quite capable of heavy lifting. However, I would not encourage this activity without knowing more about him as an individual. And, of course, it would be helpful to know for what purpose he wishes to weight train.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Since I cannot get my husband to go to a doctor, I hope you can help. He is 61 and has been developing small white "scars" on his skin. They are about as wide as twine string, about one inch long, and the area beneath them is sunken. Could you please tell me what it is and how to treat it?

DEAR READER — As skin ages, particularly if it has been subjected to intense and chronic sun exposure, small areas of epithelial deterioration may develop. These can appear as indented scars. However, so can certain forms of skin cancer. I think your husband would exercise good judgment if he were to modify his position and let a good dermatologist take a look at his skin lesions. Although nothing may be amiss, it would be reassuring to know

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a woman, 50 years old and in good health except for my skin condition, which is steadily becoming more noticeable. I'm losing the pigmentation. My doctor, a general practitioner, says there is nothing you can do for this. I am concerned that it may spread to my face and have become very self-conscious about it. Would I benefit by consulting a dermatologist?

DEAR READER — Yes, you would. One of the conditions to be considered in your case is vitiligo, a benign loss of pigmentation of unknown cause. Treatment is available for depigmentation, and a dermatologist would be the most appropriate person to advise you.

For Dr. Gott's complete discussion of problems and treatments of the prostate gland, write for your copy of Dr. Gott's new Health Report on THE PROSTATE GLAND. Send 75 cents plus a long self-addressed, stamped envelope in care of this newspaper to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

Few people would deny that life in Colonial America was difficult, even brutal. For example, take medical practice and health theory of the 1700s as they were described by observers of that time.

In those days, a young man apprenticed himself to a practicing doctor for four years and was then considered competent to provide medical care. During these four years, the apprentice was supplied "meat, drink, washing and lodging," while his parents provided clothing. Occasionally, rural craftsmen set themselves up as "physitians" and, like the Connecticut shoemaker, "laid aside his awls and leather, got himself some gallipots, and ... fell to cobling of human bodies."

Doctors had great difficulty earning livings by practicing. Those who were not independently wealthy either owned farms or participated in other commercial enterprises, such as apothecary shops and grocery stores. They often grew their own compounds. Patent medicines were universally available: "Doctor Norris's Antimonial Drops for the Cure of all Fevers" or "Dr. Keysler's Celebrated Anti-venereal Pills." Common medications included rhubarb and jalop, epsom salts, Jesuit's bark, laudanum, balm of Gilead and antimony.

Bloodletting and purgation were the principal therapeutic modalities. Eighteenth-century doctors believed that injurious particles in the blood ("morbific matter") were responsible for disease. The "morbific matter" originated from substances in the air that had a "disagreement with the juices, insinuate themselves into the body, and, mixing with the blood, taint the whole frame; or from different kinds of fermentations and putrefactions of humours detained too long in the body, for want of its being able to digest and discharge them, on account of their too large bulk or unsuitable nature." The condition of the blood was a direct consequence of the type and quantity of food, the patient's age, the time of year and other factors.

Inflammation was regarded as an obstruction of capillary circulation. To relieve this obstruction, doctors would create a counter-irritation, or "issue." To make a blister issue, the physician would apply powder of Spanish fly or would create a hole in the skin with a lancet and then imbed peas or beans in the lesion, producing an open sore through which "morbific matter" could be discharged. Often, a seton would be used: a cotton or silk cord was pushed through an opening in the skin; the ends were left outside the hole. The cord was then moved back and forth each day "to create a discharge of purulent matter."

Gastroenteritis (vomiting and diarrhea) was extremely common in Colonial times and was thought to be due to an excess of bile. It was treated with "chicken water and gruel," followed by castor oil, laudanum, mint tea and bloodletting (if the patient's blood vessels were "excessively full"). Because drinking-water supplies, especially in cities, were often contaminated, it is a wonder that patients survived the treatment, on top of the bacterial or viral intestinal infections.

We find these treatments crude today, but they lasted well into the 1800s, when more specific causes of disease began to be discovered. In 200 years, we will probably look back on medical practice of the 1980s as being incalculably ineffective. However, we do seem to have traveled at least one small step away from 18th-century panaceas and toward the one-disease/one-cure approach. Years ago, doctors had but a single therapy for a wide variety of ills. One medicine was commonly used to cure scurvy, leprosy, ulcers, cancers, ringworm, "scald heads" and sore eyes. If modern medicine has accomplished anything, at least it has shown that each disease has (or may have) a specific antidote. Even penicillin, thought originally to kill all germs, is now known to be effective against only a small spectrum of bacteria, and not at all against viruses.

Although medical practice circa 1700 had some horrendous drawbacks, there was an unmistakable quaintness about it. Certainly, patients would be better off after the application of leeches than they would after some of the bizarre treatments being offered by 20th-century medical quacks.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Man makes numbers easier

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — David Schwartz gets pensive when he hears children boast they've collected "a million" baseball cards or have eaten "a billion" hamburgers.

When reading the newspaper, the 33-year-old Wallingford resident ponders whether other adults realize the enormity of 1.5 billion gallons of water, $4 billion worth of British fighter planes, 4 million latchkey children and nearly 2 million unwed housemates.

It quickly became apparent that children often grow up into adults who don't understand how much goes into a million and a billion and especially a trillion, Schwartz said.

"Innumeracy can be just as dangerous as illiteracy," he said.

A personal mission ensued, with the end result being Schwartz's first children's book, titled "How Much Is a Million?"

"I thought I would try to write a book for children that would put them in touch with a sense of awe that I have for such large amounts," he said. "Whenever I would try to express something, I realized I was using really large numbers."

Schwartz, a former educator who is now a free-lance writer, realized he was not alone in trying to express the greatness of large numbers. During a recent interview, he pulled clippings from a file to illustrate. They ranged from an Iowa social studies class collecting 1 million bottle caps as a handson example to President Reagan explaining the trillion-dollar deficit by equating it to a stack of $1,000 bills piled 67 miles high.

Schwartz, incidentally, said he had sent Reagan a copy of his book.

"I would really like to have my book be noticed by somebody who's really talked about these numbers in a serious way because it's part of their job," he said.

Schwartz's story, in conjunction with illustrator Steven Kellogg's whimsical watercolor drawings, seeks to explain big things in a small way.

"Kids like big numbers. They're kind of intrigued by them. They don't have any way to understand them," he said. "Adults tend to prefer to skip over big numbers. When they read an article, their eyes just sort of skim over the number and what they get out of that is 'this is a big number.'"

Writing the book involved more than simply sitting down with a calculator, Schwartz said.

"I came up with different ways of viewing a million and a billion and a trillion," he said.

He did so by selecting examples in all dimensions: distance, area, volume and time.
