PREPARING TO PUT an overturned auto back on its wheels is wrecker driver Clarence Johnson. The car was one of three involved in an accident at the intersection of Big Spring Street and Scharbauer Drive about 3:30 p.m. Thursday. Police said the car was being towed by Abner Joe Smith of Tulia, who was southbound on Big Spring Street. Smith swerved to avoid hitting another car and lost control of the towed vehicle, which broke loose and rolled over, police said. The other two cars then collided, according to police reports. Carter's Texas travels begun

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A luncheon crowd of 5,000 persons is expected to hear President Carter today in Fort Worth as the president begins a two-day Texas trip that Democrats hope will put money in campaign coffers and strength in Carter's popularity.

But Carter's first trip to Texas in almost two years will not be without its problems as some farmers say they will have a demonstration waiting for him minutes after he lands while some Mexican-American leaders are still claiming they were snubbed by the Carter adminstration.

The protesting farmers, mainly from West Texas, say they are unhappy with the President's agricultural policies.

Both Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Attorney General John Hill, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, say they will attend a Democratic fundraiser in Houston.

But Hill, perhaps concerned about Carter's declining popularity in Texas, has declined any presidential campaign assistance.

Before returning to Washington, the president will spend Friday night in Houston and make stops Saturday at Beaumont and at the Army's sprawling Fort Hood where Lt. Gen. Marvin Fuller confirmed Thursday the military manuevers planned for the president will cost over $2 million.

Texas was a key state in Carter's 1976 election victory and would probably be critical again if he seeks reelection in 1980.

The President is scheduled to arrive at Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth at 12:30 p.m. today. He will address a joint luncheon of Fort Worth civic organizations at 1 p.m. at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

The stop in Fort Worth, hometown of U.S. House Majority Leader Jim Wright, is billed as non-political, but some Republican Party leaders say the president needs to shore up his popularity, which has plummeted in recent polls.

Leaving Fort Worth, Carter will fly to Houston, which was the initial reason for his trip to Texas. He will address a Democratic Party fundraising dinner at 9:30 p.m. The dinner is one of six regional fund-raisers to benefit the Democratic National Committee.

Local organizers said about 1,500 tickets, at $500 each, had been sold for the dinner, which will attract party leaders and followers from Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

The Houston visit also includes private meetings with groups of blacks and Mexican Americans.

A small controversy among Hispanics has developed over the Friday afternoon meeting with about 25 Mexican-American leaders.

Ruben Bonilla, state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said he was not invited and guessed that was because of his criticism of the Carter administraion.

An aide to Houston Mayor Jim McConn said, however, the session arranged that the request of the White House will be a meeting "of people and not of organizations."

The Saturday morning meeting with about 100 Houston blacks was suggested by Mickey Leland, the Democratic nominee to succeed U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan from Houston's predominantly black, inner city 18th Congressional District.

"If people are left out, it will be an oversight, not intention," said Leland of the meeting with blacks.

R-T earns TPA honors

AMARILLO — The Midland Reporter-Telegram today received the general excellence award from the Texas Press Association at the 99th annual convention being held here.

The award goes to the top winner in the Division 1 category which includes daily newspapers with a circulation from 8,000 to 150,000.

Also winning first place at the convention was R-T columnist Ed Todd, who was honored in the column-writing competition.

The Reporter-Telegram received second place awards in editorial writing, feature stories and appearance.

Editorials entered were "Just for a paddling" which was published March 15, 1977, and "Midland together," published June 2, 1977. A story on string players (musicians) and one on Fort Davis comprised the feature category entries.

W.H. "Bill" Collyns, editor of The Reporter-Telegram, accepted the first place plaques and certificates at the convention. The event opened here Thursday and will continue through noon Saturday.

Other general excellence awards went to San Marcos Record, Division 2; Arlington Citizen-Journal, Division 3; Houston Business Journal, Division 4, and Canton Free State News, Division 5.

Winners in various categories for Division 3, area weekly over 3,500 circulation, were Andrews County News, second in news photos, and Lamesa Press Reporter, third in sports photos.

Community Service Awards went to Hereford Brand, a daily, and Azle News-Advertiser, a weekly.

Special session seems less likely

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Chances for a special legislative session on tax relief dimmed slightly today, with Gov. Dolph Briscoe reportedly telling House leaders he remained unconvinced one would succeed.

House Speaker Bill Clayton met with Briscoe in the morning, then closeted himself with aides.

"The word is that the governor is still not convinced a special session would be successful," said Clayton's news secretary, George Works. "He (Briscoe) still thinks there are problems with the legislation presented to him. Till he is certain in his own mind there is a chance of success, he won't make an announcement."

He said Clayton no longer believed Briscoe would make an announcement before the weekend, as the Speaker had predicted Wednesday.

A Briscoe aide said that as late as 6:30 p.m. Thursday, the governor had not made up his mind. "He is still saying he doesn't like special sessions, just as he always has," the aide said.

Speculation earlier in the week was that Briscoe would call a session for July 10.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock, in Amarillo today to speak to the Texas Press Association, said that he thought the governor would call a special session.

Bullock said Briscoe told him three weeks ago he was planning one and "asked us for a study on the various combinations he might use and my people are still working on it."

A special session can last no more than 30 days and is limited to subjects submitted by the governor.

Attorney General John Hill, the Democratic nominee for governor, indicated Thursday he hoped Briscoe would limit the call to tax relief measures left over from the 1977 regular session.

Hill said committee work done last session produced enough information to warrant approval of bills or constitutional amendments that would:

— Repeal the 4 percent state sales tax on residential utility bills.

— Tax farm and ranch land according to productivity formulas, not its value — often inflated by speculation — in Texas' booming real estate market.

— Raise the inheritance tax exemption from the first $60,000 to the first $200,000.

Gas ration would favor those with auto 'stable'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration says gasoline rationing is unlikely, but if it comes, those with a stable of automobiles would be the big winners, while one-car families would take a back seat.

President Carter's proposed standby rationing plan announced Thursday would allot gas in times of national petroleum shortages on the basis of motor vehicle registration. The more cars a family or business had, the more rationing coupons it could obtain.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said it is unlikely the program ever will have to be used, adding that "only in a period of national emergency could one make such a plan work."

As was the case with the country's only other rationing experiment during World War II, the Carter proposal, which must still be approved by Congress, may also bring out those trying to avoid it.

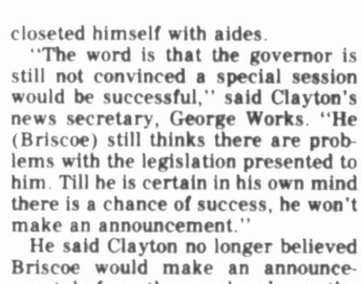

What's to stop a person from filling his yard with low-cost second-hand "clunkers" just to make himself eligible for more rationing coupons? Probably little, says Schlesinger.

But Schlesinger added that such a motorist "would have to think that through well in advance" to make sure he is getting his money's worth. And he said the government is studying ways to prevent people from exploiting the program with such tactics, but hasn't found an answer.

How much gasoline would be allocated for each vehicle?

That would depend on the seriousness of the shortage. But Schlesinger estimated that a repeat of the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo would result in a ration of about two gallons per day for every vehicle in the nation.

Westviewites not too keen about tax increases

WESTVIEW — Not much has happened since your last visit, Elaine Crawford said from the obvious comfort of her rocking chair. Like her, it wasn't budging much.

The news was slim pickings. It had been about a year since Roustin' About last dropped by.

"All's fine," she said. "Just the same as it has been."

She has reason to know. She runs Mrs. Crawford's Country Store at Westview Estates. And in the course of a day's work, she hears the rumblings about this rural, unrushed community of 51 families.

"We haven't proved anything .... Nothing's changed much."

The store takes up two side rooms, the former wash rooms, at Bill and Elaine Crawford's old and somewhat weathered white frame house at Westview, just west of Midland and about five miles north of Midland Regional Airport.

She's open for business six days a week to sell what scant goods she stocks and to pass the time of day with her neighbors and passers-by, who drop by to spend loose change. Many just "while away" the time. She closes the store each Tuesday, which is "a lean business day." Otherwise, she's in that rocking chair from 10 'til 10. She, like her husband, reads a lot.

Business was slow the other afternoon.

Bill Crawford had driven the 10 miles into town to pick up some vittles for supper. She said he'd be back soon.

She did have some news about her Bill, though.

"He's thinking about quitting smoking," Mrs. Crawford said. "He hasn't smoked since January, but he hasn't made up his mind. He has gained some weight."

She got on the no-smoking kick herself, but her physician suggested she go back — half-heartedly — to the habit."

"I did (quit), but my doctor said I

California moving to tax rescue vote

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The California Legislature is preparing for final votes on a $5 billion rescue plan for local governments to ease the Proposition 13 sting of $7 billion in property tax cuts.

Democratic Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. was expected to quickly sign the measure expected to be passed today.

Beginning July 1, the bill would start a flow of billions of dollars from the state surplus to cities, counties and schools to avoid layoffs of teachers, policemen and other employees.

"Having rescued the state from chaos, the Legislature can now address the problem of total confusion," joked Sen. Albert Rodda, when the committee he headed completed its work Thursday.

Major provisions of the aid bill provide one-time grants of $2.2 billion for schools, $1.48 billion for counties, $250 million for cities and $125 million for special districts.

Other key provisions include a $900 million short-term loan fund for local governments facing cash flow problems and a guarantee sought by Republicans that no police or fire agency could reduce "the level of service...actually provided during 1977-78."

The aid for counties includes state takeover of the county share of welfare, Medi-Cal and food stamp programs, a $1.04 billion item currently paid by local property taxes.

A week-long deadlock over the aid bill was broken Thursday when a two-house committee approved a compromise that repeals proposed 7.65 percent welfare grant increases for 2.17 million recipients and freezes salaries of 1.4 million state and local government employees.

Another key compromise that Republicans demanded was the proposal not to cut police or fire services.

Both the wage freeze and the freeze on welfare grant levels would last for one year.

Terrorist convicted of subversion

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Founder Renato Curcio and other leaders of the Red Brigades terrorist group were convicted today on subversion and other charges and sentenced to prison terms of between 13 and 15 years.

The verdict came at the end of a three-month trial during which the Red Brigades, responsible for a wave of urban terrorism in Italy in recent years, kidnapped and killed former Premier Aldo Moro, claimed responsibility for five other slayings and vowed revenge against judges, lawyers and jurors.

Curcio and the others were not in court when the verdict was read by Presiding Judge Guido Barbaro. The jury had deliberated for almost five days.

They remained in their cells at the nearby Nuove Prison and made it known through lawyers that they were not interested in the decision by "a court of the regime."

Curcio, a former philosophy student, was sentenced to 15 years, convicted of forming an armed band, subversion and political kidnappings.

Four other Red Brigade ringleaders — Pietro Bassi, Pietro Bertolazzi, Alberto Franceschini and Paolo Maurizio Ferrari — were sentenced from 13 to 15 years on similar charges.

Westview not happy over taxes

needed to go back to smoking," Mrs. Crawford said. She said she figured that many "hooked" smokers would like to have a doctor like that. "He said I needed to smoke about half a pack a day to keep down my weight."

It was quiet in the store and throughout the 12-room house; it's got eight rooms downstairs and two up.

Their youngest son, Craig, 16, was inside painting some furniture and re-doing a room for his good-looking cousin, Melinda Farmer.

She's from Merkel, she's 20, and she just moved in. And she has already latched onto job in town, where's she's an account clerk at City Hall. She was still at work. The afternoon was far from spent.

The Crawfords' oldest son, Jimmy, 20, has returned to the States following a tour of duty with the U.S. Army in Korea.

"He said he was lucky to come home when he did. His company was scheduled to go back to the DMZ (demilitarized zone) for several 'glorious' weeks." Jimmy, the soldier of the Crawford clan, was somewhere in Odessa visiting friends. He's on leave.

The Crawfords' daughter, Cindy, 18, was in Abilene, where she's staying with her grandmother.

Dusk was bout 2½ hours away when Cousin Melinda came home from work. She likes this country living.

"I like it. It's nice. It's quiet and peaceful most of the time." She, an "Army brat," had lived in San Antonio, which is not quiet and peaceful most of the time, and moved to Merkel, where her kinfolks live, about six months ago.

You'd expect Merkel, a community outside of Abilene and about 1/500th the size of San Antonio, to be a law-abiding town, and probably it is. But Miss Farmer's car tires — all four of them — were slashed and flattened, and she got looked up by a peeping tom. The law caught the tire slashers and made them pay for the tires. The looker went unpursued.

"You'd think a little town like Merkel wouldn't have people like that," Mrs. Crawford said.

Three young and stout working men drove up in a green pickup truck, and came into the store. They seemed preoccupied.

"Is it warm enough to suit you fellows?" the storekeeper asked.

"Oh, yes," one of them replied.

They bought a couple of canned soft drinks and a carton of chocolate milk and asked where Ronnie Jackson lived; he raises hunting dogs. She pointed toward his house; they thanked her, left, and drove off.

Mrs. Crawford said her husband had returned to Midland, where he works as an electronics technician for the U.S. Postal Service, to pick up some vittles at a delicatessen; she didn't feel like cooking supper. He'd be back shortly.

Just like Mrs. Crawford said, there wasn't really anything new to talk about.

But she said the taxpayers out here are still upset over the raising of their taxes through higher assessed values on their property.

"Anyone and everyone was out fussing (over the increases) because of our water situation. It's no meadow; it's a dry spot."

The families out here depend on well water for their needs, she said. Besides, Westview is notorious for being passed up by rainfalls.

"About everybody out here complained (about the taxes), signed the petition and hired an attorney," she said."

Soon, a neighbor, Jay Pedigo, who is a carpenter in town, dropped by. He said both of his grandfathers were ailing pretty badly. One was crushed when a grain company crane fell on him in Muleshoe; he's all wired up in a Lubbock hospital now, Pedigo said.

His other grandfather has severe lung disorders and is hospitalized in Baird.

"But, as far as I know, they're doing all right," Pedigo said.

Like she knew he would, Mrs. Crawford's spouse soon returned with the eats.

He didn't have much news to spread but did say that, to his surprise, Westview got in on a recent rain. That's good. There's farming, ranching and home gardening out here.

Upon Crawford's return, the country-store talk took on new life and covered the usual this 'n' that.

Talk drifted into the seeming declining pride in good workmanship these days.

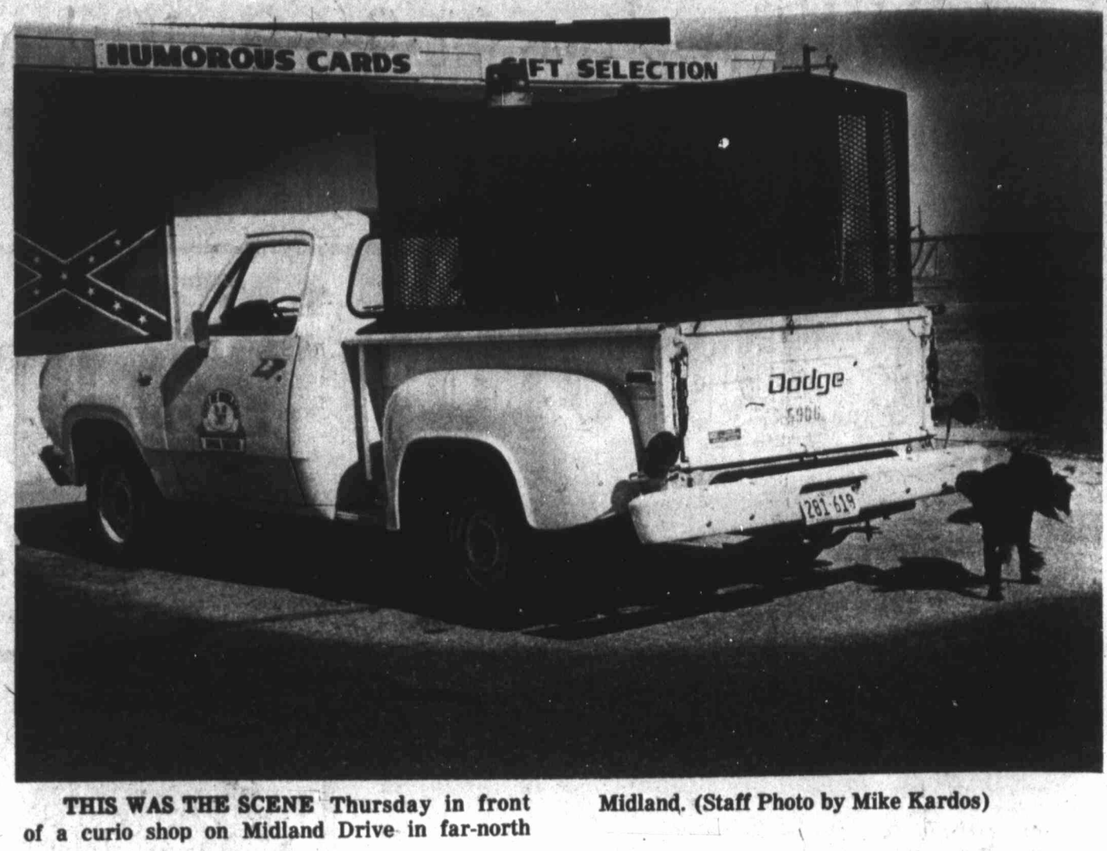

"It's not just here. It's everywhere . . . .

And the non-newsy chatting continued. May it live on.

Man hospitalized

A Berryville, Ark., man was in satisfactory condition in Midland Memorial Hospital today after being injured in a motorcycle accident Thursday five miles east of Midland on Interstate Highway 20.

The Department of Public Safety said Dwight Leuden Ballard, 47, was eastbound on Interstate 20, when the front wheel of his motorcycle began to wobble, causing him to lose control. He ran into the highway median, according to the DPS.

Welfare proposal shelved for tactical reasons

By ROBERT PARRY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders, citing lack of time and a clogged legislative calendar, say President Carter's welfare overhaul bill is dead for this session. However, supporters are already planning to revive the $20 billion proposal next year.

Rep. Jamel C. Corman, D-Calif., sponsor of the adminstration bill, said Thursday night the welfare plan was shelved for the year after several days of talks among House and Senate leaders.

Corman said the decision came after House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. was told by Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd that a backlog of legislative business — and a lack of time in this election year — would prevent the bill from being considered in the Senate.

Some Democratic leaders were also reportedly concerned about the cost of the bill at a time when tax-conscious voters seem to favor spending restraint.

"The speaker has said all along that unless there was reasonable hope to get it through the Senate, he was not going to bring it up this year," Corman said.

O'Neill informed his Democratic lieutenants of his decision not to press ahead with the welfare bill at a closed meeting Thursday morning, Corman added.

The White House had no immediate comment on the decision.

Carter made reform of the nation's welfare laws one of his campaign pledges in 1976. He unveiled his overhaul plan last August, urging Congress "to totally scrap" the existing welfare system.

The administration proposal would create 1.3 million public service jobs and abolish existing food stamp and multiple assistance programs in favor of single cash payments for welfare recipients.

Carter's welfare proposal cleared a special House welfare committee largely unscathed in February, but has made little progress since then.

Corman, chairman of the special committee, said the welfare bill was in trouble when the president's tax cut bill was sent to the House Ways and Means Committee first.

"When the administration decided to put the welfare bill behind the tax bill, that doomed it," Corman said. "If the tax bill had gone through quickly, we might have gotten the welfare reform bill over there (to the Senate) quickly."

The president's tax cut proposal has been bogged down in the Ways and Means Committee for several months.

House wants $56 million program retaliation for Korean refusal

By BRIAN B. KING

WASHINGTON (AP) — In retaliation for South Korea's refusal to let former ambassador Kim Dong Jo talk with Leon Jaworski about allegations of passing out money to congressmen, the House wants to take away $56 million in easy-credit food sales to that country.

If Korea is cut out of the Food for Peace program next year, it would be an unprecedented cutback of economic aid to a major ally.

The Agency for International Development said at the same time that, if the Senate goes along with the ban on such economic aid for 1979, it will cancel the $59.5-million contract for such purchases this year that it is to sign Monday.

In response to the House move the South Korean here issued a statement decrying what it called the demand for Korea to be "coerced into violating international legal order and its dignity as a sovereign state.

"This action is particularly regrettable in that it ignores the cooperation the Republic of Korea already has extended to the executive and legislative branches of the government of the United States in the investigation of alleged improprieties."

About $806 million in Food for Peace funds were included in the $18-billion fiscal year 1979 appropriations bill for the Agriculture Department, Food and Drug Administration and related agencies before the 273-125 vote to delete the South Korean funds. A final 326-59 vote sent the package to the Senate.

Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Tex., said that no attempt would be made to cut the hundreds of millions in military aid destined for South Korea and the vote should not be seen has severing relations or an opening for "military adventures" by North Korea.

But Wright, declaring "the honor and integrity of the House is at stake," said that the roughly $4 million in other economic aid to that country is vulnerable to a similar move if the South Korean government doesn't get the message this time.

On May 31, by the greater margin of 321-46, the House voted a resolution stating it was prepared to deny or reduce economic aid if South Korea didn't waive diplomatic immunity for Kim to testify under oath.

Since that time, Jaworski said in a letter to House leaders on Monday, "there has been no substantial indication of cooperation."

Public testimony has accused the former ambassador and his wife of trying to give the money-stuffed envelopes to at least three congressmen. Jaworski reportedly has told the ethics committee to which he is special counsel that eight to 10 current House members may have received such funds.

Quake toll rises to 29

SALONIKA, Greece (AP) — Nine more bodies have been pulled from the rubble left by the earthquake that hit Salonika three nights ago, raising the death toll to 29.

The bodies were removed from the debris of an eight-story apartment building and included two 7-year-olds and six members of the family of former Gov. Ionnis Voliotis, who was away when the quake struck Tuesday.

Light tremors continued Thursday in northern Greece, eastern Hungary and neighboring Romania. Experts said they would go on for many days. Some said they feared the worst was yet to come.

Most of Salonika's 600,000 population stayed outside the downtown area and camped in parks or open fields. Hospitals kept their patients outdoors.

Arrest made in abduction case

A 19-year-old unemployed well service worker was in Midland City Jail today, charged with aggravated kidnapping in connection with the alleged abduction of a Midland convenience store employee Thursday.

Perry Lance Curtiss was arrested about 3 a.m. today at Skyline Mobile Home Park on Star Route B. Police said the 23-year-old woman picked Curtiss' picture out of a photographic "lineup." The photograph was included in the array of pictures on the basis of information given to police, Lt. Earl Luckey said today.

The 23-year-old clerk was reported missing early Thursday, after an Odessa man reported an open door at the convenience store.

The woman later called police from an Andrews Highway location. She told police a man forced her to leave the store and later attacked her.

Weather forecast just hot air?

Not much can be said about the prospective weather that hasn't been said recently.

It promises to be hot and sunny, according to the weatherman.

While Midlanders roasted in Thursday's high of 100 degrees, it was not as hot as the record 107 degrees set in 1951. The overnight low of 70 degrees did not give as much relief from the heat as the record low of 61 degrees set in 1957 would have.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport today said Midlanders can expect more of the same type of weather, with a forecast of fair skies for Saturday. Winds should become southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph tonight. High Saturday should be around 100, while the low should be about 70, the weatherman said.

City taps in on new record

A new record was set Wednesday in Midland, but this time it was not simply on the basis of a new high temperature.

Midlanders used 29.32 million gallons of water that day, surpassing the record set the day before of 26.77 million gallons, according to John Lowe of the Utilities Department.

This is the earliest in the summer that so much water has been used, Lowe said. Usually the peak days are from around June 26 through July 4. But last year the peak hit in August.

The length of time since the last rain and the hot temperatures account for the high water usage, he said.

Midland's last rain fell June 6 "and the moisture from that is about gone," Lowe said. He added that people who have been on vacation are returning now and starting to water lawns again.

Many Republicans campaigning by 'not campaigning'

By DON McLEOD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald Ford makes speeches and public appearances and works with an organization called the American Enterprise Institute as he doesn't run for president.

Ronald Reagan makes speeches and public apperances and works with an organization called Citizens for the Republic as he doesn't run for president.

Bob Dole makes speeches and public appearances and works with an organization called Campaign America as he doesn't run for president.

It is hard to find a Republican who will admit running, but just the hope of making Jimmy Carter a one-term president has lots of them tripping over one another trying to campaign by not campaigning.

The presidential primaries are nearly two years away. Nobody has announced a candidacy yet; it would be unseemly. But there is no shortage of candidates to be candidates: "We must have 20 of them out there," says one Republican strategist.

The list is long and luminous, including senators, congressmen and governors.

There is Sen. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee, who got a national image as ranking Republican of the Watergate committee; former Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who turned Republican after heading Democrats for Nixon; and George Bush, who has done most everything else for the GOP, as former envoy to China, CIA director, U.N. ambassador and party chairman.

Newer names include Reps. Philip Crane of Illinois, Jack Kemp of New York and John Anderson of Illinois.

Reagan's near miss against Ford in the battle for the 1976 Republican nomination and Ford's against Carter in the election have kept their partisans dreaming of what might have been. Recent polls showing either leading Carter in hypothetical rematches rekindled the flame.

Party insiders believe Ford still commands the loyalty of the traditionalists; that no new mainstreamer has a serious claim to the mantle.

Reagan keeps himself in the forefront of candidate talk through Citizens for the Republic, which he formed from the remains of his 1976 organization. It supports one of the busiest speaking schedules in politics. Reagan also writes a newspaper column and has a radio show.

Ford has benefit of the staff provided all former presidents, but he leans even more on his position as "distinguished fellow" of the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank based in Washington.

Ford spends a lot of time speaking on behalf of the institute, largely to college audiences, but he also is busy maintaining party fences at rallies and fundraisers across the country.

In a recent speech, Ford listed the people he thinks are the Republican contenders. He included his own name. But when pressed on his intentions, he says only that he is keeping his options open.

Dole, who commands a lot of party loyalty for his 1976 campaigning, has formed Campaign America, a committee to support his political activity. He has been to at least 35 states this year, making him and Bush the most active prospects.

When Ford passed over Baker for the No. 2 spot on the 1976 ticket, Baker let it be known that No. 2 would not be enough the next time around. As Senate minority leader he has a large staff and shares with House GOP leader John Rhodes a "Leadership Fund" that supports their party activities.

Baker now spends most of his off-duty time in Tennessee running for re-election. A big victory would raise his prestige for 1980.

Kemp is a rising star, an early tax revolter said to be developing into the GOP's hottest platform personality.

He was among the first to tap the rising taxpayers' rebellion and is sponsoring proposals in Congress to cut income tax rates by 30 percent. A former professional football star, he also appeals to youth.

Crane also is young and dynamic. He is more closely identified with the New Right conservatives. His power base is the American Conservative Union, which he heads. He helped lead the fight against the Panama Canal treaties.

There is talk about some young GOP governors, people like James Thompson of Illinois, Robert Ray of Iowa, William Milliken of Michigan and Pierre S. DuPont of Delaware.

Thompson is running for a second term, and like Baker needs a big victory to boost his national prospects. He won popularity in the party by winning in a 1976 election that otherwise was dismal for Republicans.

Ray, who seems sure to win a fifth term in Iowa this fall, is among the country's most popular governors. Milliken has the same kind of young and bright image, but faces a closer race for re-election in Michigan.

Connally may be the most invited speaker in the party. He formed the John Connally Citizens Forum to support his travels.

He was charged during the Watergate scandals with taking illegal payments from the dairy industry. He was acquitted and now says he is the only one from that era whose name has been officially cleared by a jury.

Fans of Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, another Watergate committee veteran, have formed a Weicker '80 committee to sound out his prospects. And Sen. Richard Schweicker of Pennsylvania, who Reagan picked in 1976 as his would-be running mate, might inherit some help from the old campaign should Reagan drop out.

Firm developing new 'bionic' arm

SEATTLE (AP) — Ken South was a lineman for the city when the aerial boom he was riding touched a 26,000-volt powerline.

The 33-year-old former Seattle City Light employee lost both arms and shoulders to amputation. Now his former employers are working with doctors to design electronic arms for South.

A pair of the 27-volt limbs now being developed could change South's life — and life for many amputees.

Most artificial limbs have no motors. They are dependant on muscles in the upper arm or shoulder for movement. But South no longer has those muscles, and doctors told him he could never be fitted with artificial limbs.

But six months ago, a crew of City Light mechanical engineers began developing "the impossible arm" for their former employee.

"We have — in house — some of the finest engineers around," said City Light Superintendent Gordon Vickery. "We do a million dollars worth of research and development a year. Why not use the resources for Ken?"

The engineers' prototype arm — 3½ pounds of motors, batteries, wire and metal — would attach electrodes to the back muscles to run four motorized joints: a shoulder, elbow, wrist and hand. It is powered by transistor-sized batteries.

"I'd have to come home and plug the things in every night," South jokes.

When completed, the arms should provide rotation in the wrist, opening and closing of the hook, extension and flex in the elbow, and possible forward and backward motion in the shoulder.

"If successful, it would be a world-wide breakthrough for amputees," said Bernard Simons, a University of Washington prosthetist. "It could help a lot of people."

The university medical school's department of rehabilitation and medicine is working on a special shoulder socket for the arm, and Milo Collier, a California prosthetist, will work on the final design.

Simons, who said he originally advised South to forget about having artificial arms, said there are numerous problems to overcome.

"No one has yet been fitted with anything like this," he said. "The state of the art is still pretty bad for high-level amputees. Then there are problems with sensory feedback and training. But this would be a big stride, if it works."

Simons said the Veterans Administration has spent millions of dollars — without success — attempting to develop a similar arm. So far, the arm has cost $6,500, and Vickery said City Light will cover the cost if state industrial insurance does not.

Construction site closed to allow bomb search

GLEN ROSE, Texas (AP) — A bomb threat received in a letter has been cited as the reason for the evacuation of about 4,000 workers Thursday from the construction site of a $1.7 billion nuclear power plant.

Officials said no bomb was found at the Comanche Peak plant construction area southwest of Fort Worth after a search by federal, local and plant investigators.

The facility is being constructed by Texas Electric Service Co., Dallas Power and Light Co. and Texas Power and Light Co.

TESCO spokesman Vic Zemanek said the letter containing the bomb threat was received by officials of Brown and Root Construction Co., one of the firms involved in building the plant.

"For precautionary measures, we evacuated the plant site to give us time to search for the bomb," Zemanek said.

The evacuation order was given in the early afternoon, and the site remained closed to workers through the remainder of the existing shift and the following.

Clinic agrees to injunction

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An abortion clinic with offices in several Texas cities has agreed to a temporary injunction in a deceptive trade practices suit, the attorney general's office said Thursday.

Attorney General John Hill had alleged Reproductive Services Inc. and Reproductive Associates, P.A., failed to advise women of possible dangers from an abortion.

The injunction was signed by Dallas District Judge Dee Brown Walker.

The order prohibits the clinic from using counselors without medical degrees and allowing unlicensed personnel to give shots. The injunction also requires the clinic to tell women that abortion procedures could result in uterine punctures.

California's 'end run' for Hughes estate 'fails'

By SUSAN STOLER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — California — in cahoots with Howard Hughes' heirs — made an end run to win the right to tax the billionaire's estate but failed, Attorney General John Hill says.

Hill jubilantly held a news conference Thursday after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to decide whether California or Texas was Hughes' legal residence.

The reclusive industrialist died aboard a plane en route from Acapulco to Houston in 1976 and was buried in Houston.

"This was just an end run by California to entice the Supreme Court," Hill said. "This decision obligates California to go through their own courts."

At stake are millions of dollars in inheritance taxes on the estate, valued at between $166.8 million and $1 billion.

"We feel that $160 million to $180 million is very low and based on faulty premises," said Hill, who personally argued Texas' case in Washington in March. "The state comptroller and the IRS (Internal Revenue Service) are trying to ascertain the true value, and it could be as much as a billion dollars."

The comptroller's office has almost finished field work on the estate valuation, spokesman Bill Collier said Thursday. However, he said it would be months before an exact figure emerges.

Texas has a 16 percent inheritance tax, meaning the state could get as much as $160 million, Hill said, adding he expects the state will receive its share in the next four years.

The Supreme Court noted that Texas and California are not obligated to acknowledge each other's court actions on the estate.

A Houston probate jury ruled in February that Hughes was a Texas resident.

Hill said he doubted California would be successful in a similar case in its own courts, and said he was ready to oppose such a move.

"They (California) ought to be forced to go into their own courts and fish or cut bait," he said.

California made "a deal" with some Hughes heirs, Hill said, to cut the state inheritance tax rate from 26 percent to 18 percent if they would accept California as Hughes' residence.

The deal was supposed to influence the Supreme Court to rule in California's favor, he asserted.

What the heirs had to gain, he said earlier in Washington, was avoiding numerous claims against the estate that would arise under Texas law but not under that of California.

Other Hughes heirs have contested the Texas and California claims, asserting that Hughes was a resident of Nevada — the only state without death taxes.

Hill said a motion for new trial in the Houston case is pending. Following a decision on that request, the attorney general said he expects the case to be appealed to the Texas Supreme Court.

Tax ruling issued to honor request of Sen. Snelson

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Use of tax increment financing by a city for urban renewal must be specifically approved at an election held by the city and cannot be implemented on the basis of legislation passed in anticipation of a constitutional amendment.

Attorney General John Hill issued that ruling in an opinion released here Thursday and made at the request of Sen. W. E. "Pete" Snelson, of Midland, regarding use of tax increment bonds.

Hill noted that the 1977 Legislature had approved SJR 44 by Sen. Ray Farabee, Wichita Falls, to give the Legislature power to authorize cities and towns to issue bonds to finance "redevelopment of blighted areas."

Lawmakers also approved SB 635, the enabling legislation passed in anticipation of the amendment, which sets out how cities are to use the taxing powers.

But, Hill noted, that act will not be effective unless the proposed constitutional amendment is approved Nov. 7.

Hill said the language of the act "compells the conclusion that a municipality has no authority to issue tax increment bonds under SB 635 prior to voter approval..."

Handle with care!

Like those great issues that seem to follow their own destinies, the national health insurance idea finally has reached its time after 30 years of debate and defeat.

The question in Washington now is not, as in the past, whether there should be a national insurance plan but how it should be organized, and how extensive—and expensive—its coverage.

A subsidiary issue is whether national health insurance will bear the imprint of the White House or Capitol Hill.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, long the leading champion of national health insurance, has modified his plan to have the government foot everyone's bill at a cost of more than $100 billion annually. He has joined hands with the Carter administration's program in which private insurers would play a significant role.

But last month three senior members of the Senate Finance Committee — Sens. Russell Long, D-La., Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., and Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn. — got the jump on the President by introducing a health plan to pay any family's medical expenses above $2,000 a year and any hospital cost after the first 60 days; the catastrophic-cost coverage would be financed by a tax on employers. Yes, that's correct — a tax on employers.

President Carter plans to present his health insurance program in broadline to Congress shortly, to be followed by detailed proposals in August. The administration envisions nothing less than health security for all Americans in the same way the New Deal envisioned old age security in its Social Security program.

Mr. Carter's national health insurance would cover almost all illness for every citizen and participation would be mandatory, as in Social Security.

The program would be administered by a "government guarantee agency," operating through two huge agencies — one based on the Blue Cross and Blue Shield plans, the other on commercial insurance carriers. Medicaid for the poor and unemployed and Medicare for the elderly would be absorbed into the President's program.

The chief source of funds would be premiums, equal for all, paid by employers and employees. Still, the government's projected cost would be about $80 billion — $35 billion more than the approximately $45 billion in the federal health care budget now.

Although wide differences exist among lawmakers and the American people generally, including those who are health-care providers, there is a broad consensus about the need for some form of national health insurance.

Soaring medical and hospital costs, which have almost reached an annual rate of 20 percent, pose serious financial problems for multitudes of citizens, including those covered by insurance. For example, a gall bladder operation which cost $361 in 1950 cost approximately $2,500 in 1978, on the average, nationwide. This year, Americans are expected to spend $200 million for medical expenses — a tenth of the gross national product. Indeed, health care has become the third largest industry in the United States.

And yet 24 million Americans have no health insurance and 74 million others are inadequately covered.

It appears obvious that a problem of such magnitude and so national in scope can be dealt with only at the federal level, as distasteful as that is.

While its magnitude properly is commanding action in Washington, that action most certainly bears close watch by the nation.

Otherwise, the government, instead of being a coordinator of private enterprise health programs, might become a mammoth operator and nationalizer of medical care — reducing doctors and hospitals to the costly, inefficient level of the U.S. Postal Service.

It is a hazardous, costly proposition at best and it most certainly must be dealt with accordingly.

We waited all those years for the promised Alaskan oil for our own security only to see it go to someone else. I feel like the jilted suitor.

CHARLEY REESE

'We deserve it, but we can't stand much more'

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — There is justice in the universe and it is catching up with Jimmy Carter. Unfortunately, it is also catching up with us in the process.

Carter lied his way into office. He promised to cut the bureaucracy (a lie), to ease the tax burden on the working man (a lie), to demand an accounting of the MIA's before consenting to Vietnam's admission to the United Nations (a lie), to seek deregulation of new natural gas prices (a lie), to give us a non-Establishment administration (a lie), to make appointments on the basis of merit instead of politics (a lie), to never give up control of the Panama Canal (a lie) and to never lie (a lie).

There is something wrong with us when a man who had an undistinguished career in the Navy, an unexceptional career in small business, and a mediocre career (the most charitable assessment) in small state politics can convince us to put him in the White House.

Of course because of our failure to exercise better judgment in the primaries, we were stuck with a choice between a known non-entity and an unknown non-entity. We get the kind of government we deserve; it's just that we can't stand much more of it.

As it is we find ourselves in peril. For the first time since World War II, we are a second ciass military power. The economy is a mess with inflation, high unemployment, a gigantic public debt, and a staggering balance of payments deficit.

None of these conditions is necessarily fatal, but they do require bold, wise leadership and skilled diplomacy. Yet, look at the White House. We have a small town huckster presiding over a bloated staff of relatives, rednecks, and leftist ideologues — a strange mix of Tobacco Road and Radical Chic.

Two years ago I wrote that Carter is mentally unfit to be president. I think today fewer people are outraged by that statement. Richard Nixon and Lyndon Johnson used to lie to the American people but at least they knew when they were lying and when they were telling the truth and why they were doing either.

Carter, I'm still convinced, actually believes what he says at the moment he says it. He lives entirely inside his own head immune to any messages from the external world. He's like a plane flying through a storm on a dark night with all its instruments out of order.

The Congress is in no better shape. We have peopled it with a dominant group of radical liberals who are intent on disarming us, dismantling our intelligence and security operations, abandoning our allies, and aiding the communist nations.

The news media needn't smirk. We generally cover politics as a sporting event and politicians as celebrities. Too often there is a mutually self-serving relationship between politician and newsman. Politicians do things and say things because they know we will consider it news and we report it as news, knowing they said and did it just to get us to report it.

None of it much mattered in the halcyon days of pre-World War II. The U.S. was so strong and so protected by geograhy that no amount of political blundering or public apathy could cause fatal damage.

Technology has changed that. The Atlantic and Pacific and Arctic are puddles. Missiles can cross them in less than half an hour. The dollar is not the world's most sought after and stable currency. American friendship is no longer the most prized alliance. The U.S. does not have an overwhelming lead in either military technology or industrial strength. And the Armed Forces are no longer No. 1.

Thus, time, technology and our own folly have eaten away our margin for political error. From now on out, when we make a political choice, we'd better be right or we'll pay dearly and personally for our mistakes.

"What can we do?" people ask. "We vote for who we think is best and he turns out to be a twirp." Well, inform yourself. You can't learn to play bridge by reading the bridge column in this newspaper and you can't learn to be effective in politics by reading a newspaper and watching television.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Amin's cabinet meetings unruly

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The secret minutes of Idi Amin's cabinet meetings read like comic opera, but there is nothing funny about them. They help to explain why the Ugandan dictator massacred thousands of his own subjects. The terrible toll has been estimated between 150,000 and 300,000.

The minutes, smuggled to us at great risk, reveal the inner workings of Amin's murderous regime. His cabinet meetings are as chaotic as he is capricious.

The discussions are dominated, of course, by the dictator who is obsessed with dark forebodings. He imagines plots against his regime and suspects his closest associates. He is apt to turn viciously upon anyone without warning. The more people Amin kills, apparently, the more secure he feels about his own life.

On Feb. 20, for example, he proclaimed that exiles were preparing to assault Uganda. "Exiles based in neighboring countries," he charged, "are now fully trained by the Imperialists and Zionists and are armed from head to toe, with sophisticated weapons."

Yet intelligence sources told our reporter Murray Waas that there is little likelihood of an attack. The exiles are too few, too disorganized and spread too thin. The minutes show that Amin, nevertheless, is convinced that his predecessor, Milton Obote, will lead an attack against him.

Amin professed that he "had never cared about Obote" in the past, but this time, he said, "Obote means business." On the contrary, State Department sources insist that Obote has absolutely no following.

Then Amin bellyached about security. He "was not happy" he said, "with security in the country." The secret minutes relate: "He reiterated that some members of the Cabinet, including high ranking security officers who were present at the meeting, were collaborating with Ugandan exiles."

The thought of this conjecturable betrayal sent him into a rage. "You security officers," he roared. "I have given you everything you need. You all have smart cars. You all have good houses. You are all married to beautiful Baganda ladies ... What else do you need? Why do you collaborate with your guerrillas?"

After simmering down, he complained about dissension between the army and police. "I have personally come across a (police) chief quarrelling with a battallion commander and almost going to exchange fire," he said. "I also failed to calm them. What is all this?"

A cabinet official volunteered a similar report. "I went to investigate an incident," he said, "where a person was killed. I went to Nakesero for an investigation, and they locked me up."

This provoked a noisy argument among Amin's ministers about who was to blame. The defense minister, gaining control of the air space for a moment, chastized his colleagues. He told them, the minutes state, "that they were abusing the presence of Amin and later told them to keep quiet or otherwise he would take disciplinary action."

Amin's vice president was also offended. According to the minutes, he "became angered and asked the President to pass an order to retire some of the high-ranking officers because they have become unruly."

This stirred a greater ruckus. Continue the minutes: "Then a dozen voices grooned and said, 'With you first.' Amidst the confusion, the secretary signaled for a break."

After the recess, Amin's ministers resumed their bickering. This finally caused the dictator to explode. Relate the minutes: "The disgusted President stood up and asked the Council how they could defend the country when they had so many grudges against themselves."

Then Amin lashed out at them all. "You are all working for my downfall," he screamed. "You are all working for my downfall. But I pity you, because your time will come, too. The guerrillas will kill you."

Footnote: Not long after the February meeting, Amin purged some of the ministers.

WHO'S NEWS: President Carter's suave trade ambassador and trouble shooter, Robert Strauss, has a reputation for high living. He is the only White House subordinate, for example, who has been able to defy the president's dictum against first-class travel. Strauss quietly refused to sit in the tourist section, and Carter finally granted him a special dispensation to fly first class.

Perhaps with this in mind, the president twitted Strauss about contributing to the inflation he is supposed to restrain as his official inflation fighter. Strauss solemnly assured the president that he is economizing. I eat beef one night and fish the next night," he attested.

Carter found this hard to believe. "It's true," said Strauss. "I have sirloin strip one night and caviar the next."

Congress gaining control of nation's foreign policy

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The degree to which the presidency is losing control of foreign policy to Congress is dramatized by two private meetings in which the Carter administration felt compelled to bring members of Congress into face-to-face dealings with foreign leaders in trying to repeal the Turkish arms embargo.

Meeting No. 1: Late last month, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance invited five congressmen fighting to repeal the arms embargo into his office to plot strategy with none other than the Turkish ambassador.

Meeting No. 2: On Sunday evening, June 4, congressional leaders of the Greek lobby went to Manhattan for a 2½-hour negotiating session with Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit in a United National Plaza Hotel suite. Vance himself helped arrange the meeting, using U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young as intermediary.

These two meetings reflect President Carter's frustration in conducting foreign policy after the drain of executive power following Vietnam and Watergate. Indeed, he faces the possibility of a humiliating failure to lift the three-year-old embargo, with serious consequences both for the Western alliance and his own worldwide prestige.

The strategy session in Vance's office infuriated the Greek lobby, whose own activities had prompted it. "Outrageous!" one eminent pro-Greek leader told us. "That's the first time I know of that members of Congress have met with the ambassador of a foreign country in the secretary of state's office to plot Capitol Hill strategy."

The Sunday evening meeting between Ecevit and the three principal leaders of the Greek lobby — Rep. John Brademas of Indiana, Rep. Ben Rosenthal of New York and Sen. Paul Sarbanes of Maryland — solved nothing. The congressmen could not negotiate Turkish troop and territorial withdrawals from Cyprus. Ecevit could not persuade them that continuing the arms embargo would prove fatal to a strong North Atlantic Treaty alliance.

Brademas and his colleagues returned to Washington more determined, stronger than ever to defeat the president's efforts to lift the arms embargo. Majority whip Brademas, No. 3 Democrat in the House, is now putting finishing touches on a bill of particulars that charges the Carter administration with systematic and intentional efforts to undermine the congressionally-imposed embargo.

In a private meeting with Vance, Brademas has upbraided the secretary of state for an interview given the Turkish press by U.S. Ambassador Ronald I. Spiers. That interview, Brademas charged, virtually promised that Turkey would soon be rid of the embargo. He will also argue in the House debate that the administration found loopholes to get NATO arms to Turkey.

Accordingly, despite their decision bringing Congress directly into the negotiations with Turkey, the president and secretary of state have failed to move Brademas and other hard-core members of the Greek lobby. On this fight, in contrast to battling for the Panama treaties and the Saudi aircraft deal, Mr. Carter is opposed by one of the shrewdest of his own legislative leaders in the House.

Mr. Carter's demand for repeal of the embargo, an about-face from campaign statements supporting it, was caused by his perception of rising Soviet military power in Central Europe. But that argument carries surprisingly little weight with Brademas and the Greek lobby.

Dismissing the Soviet angle as unimpressive, Brademas and his colleagues will wield the president's own human rights campaign as a clincher against repeal of the embargo. Their argument: Mr. Carter has turned a blind eye to alleged human rights violations by Turkey on the island of Cyprus.

The president may be in a larger and tougher fight than he bargains for. Warnings to the White House from friendly congressmen strongly urge a national campaign, in the two weeks before the House vote, as intense as the White House push for the Canal treaties and the Saudi arms deal. Illinois Republican Rep. Paul Findley has passed word to the president that a fireside chat, putting Mr. Carter's prestige on the line, may be the only way to defeat Brademas.

But the administration's campaign seems half-hearted by comparison to the earlier battles. On May 25, key congressmen backing the Carter policy went to a White House strategy session they expected to be attended by Mr. Carter, press secretary Jody Powell and chief aide Hamilton Jordan. None of them showed up, leaving chief congressional lobbyist Frank Moore to hold the fort.

A loss for the president would be a political humiliation. More to the point, it would show that, even when key members of Congress — both for and against — were deliberately brought into the bosom of his negotiations with another country, he could not assert his will as president.

Nazis plan park rally in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Nazi leader Frank Collin says his battle has been won and he has "totally succeeded in restoring white man's free speech rights." But the possibility lingers for a street confrontation between neo-Nazis and militant Jews.

Collin, in full storm trooper regalia, told a news conference Thursday that he was calling off a Skokie march planned for Sunday because a federal court has made it possible for his group to rally in a Chicago park. Collin described his attempts at getting a parade permit in Skokie as "pure agitation" over the free speech issue.

Cancellation of the rally in Skokie — where more than 4,000 survivors of World War II Nazi concentration camps live — was hailed as "a triumph for mankind" by village Mayor Albert Smith.

Collin said he would hold a "victory rally" Saturday afternoon outside a federal building in downtown Chicago. The Jewish Defense League said it would confront the Nazis at the rally.

The militant Jewish Defense League had threatened to confront the Nazis in Skokie.

City's boom neglects those left behind

HOUSTON (AP) — The job market in the nation's fifth largest city is expected to continue expanding, but many of those who are looking for work have no marketable skills, according to a report by the Texas Employment Commission.

The report also indicates that although average unemployment in the metropolitan area is expected to drop from a projected 4.2 percent in 1978 to 4 percent in 1979, unemployment among blacks will remain significantly higher.

According to the 1970 census, about 24 percent of the city's 1.7 million inhabitants are black while the Hispanic-surnamed population is estimated at around 20 percent.

Job opportunities in Houston, says the TEC, are "overbalanced" towards those who have specific training, skills or experience. And trainee positions, once the avenue of the unskilled into the job market, are less common as firms tend to promote more within the organization.

The report says white collar workers will continue to hold the bulk of the jobs in Houston, followed by those in professional, technical and related fields.

Approximately one-fifth of the population lives below the poverty level. The report notes that the need for job training programs will grow. But it goes on to say that many who have participated in a federally funded program prefer to wait until another comes along rather than take an entry level job which usually pays less.

TEC offices in Houston report that 50 percent of their applicants depend on public transportation to get to and from work whereas many of the available jobs are beyond existing bus lines.

Projected black unemployment for 1978 is 6.9 percent while the rate among Hispanic-surnamed persons is only 4.1 percent.

Federal order called monstrous for schools

FRIENDSWOOD, Texas (AP) — A federal court order requiring a Galveston County school district to provide an education for an emotionally handicapped child has "monstrous" financial implications, according to the district superintendent.

Citing the Handicapped Children's Act of 1975, which guarantees "free and appropriate" education to all handicapped children between 3 and 21, U.S. District Court Judge Finis Cowan granted a preliminary injunction Wednesday against the Friendswood Independent School District which expelled a 16-year-old youth for disciplinary problems in 1977.

Cowan told the district to set up a program for the youth and also said the FISD was liable for the $2,200 monthly tuition for the youth who is now at a private institution in Austin.

The parents of the youth, identified only as Douglas S. in the suit, claim their son was expelled from school because of behavior problems brought about by his handicap. Authorities at the Brown School threatened to discharge the youth when his parents could no longer meet tuition payments.

Ted Thomas, who was not superintendent when Douglas left school, said the youth was not expelled but taken out by his mother.

"This ruling makes it sound like we tried to boot him out of school. As a matter of fact, while the parents were suing us to try and get us to take him back, we were writing letters saying 'would you please bring him back,'" Thomas said. "But they said they couldn't put him back in the same program. We felt that program was fair and adequate for him."

Cowan has ordered the district to draw up a program for Douglas which would provide him with as much contact as possible with his non-handicapped peers. He said the FISD could either educate Douglas or pay someone else to do it. The district was also ordered to pay the youth's tuition back to January 1977 when his parents claim he was expelled.

Patrick Wiseman, Douglas' attorney, said the youth suffers from minimal brain damage that makes it difficult for him to pay attention and follow directions.

Thomas said the FISD had offered Douglas a program but he refused it.

"The problem with this ruling is the residential placement," Thomas said. "We offer almost everything the Brown School offers. But as we understand this, we are required to place him in a residential setting be cause we can't keep him in school, because he wouldn't take advantage of what we were offering him."

FISD has a $4.4 million budget, Thomas said, of which 3.4 percent is spent on special education. He said of 3,000 students in the district some 242 receive special education. Only 92 are full-time participants in the special education program.

Thomas said the district spends an average of $1,600 annually per special education student while the court now requires that $2,200 be spent per month on one youngster.

Auction becomes most profitable in recent history

By WILLIAM WILSON
The Los Angeles Times

LONDON — A spectacular marathon art auction escalated into the realm of the unbelievable here Thursday when a 5 3-4 inch enamel medallion sold for $2.2 million.

The Sotheby Parke Bernet auction of the Robert von Hirsh collection was proceeding with an opulence that has come to seem almost normal. Total sales reached $21.5 million.

Tuesday evening the sale of old master drawings brought more than $5 million. Wednesday a small group of old master paintings drew almost $3 million.

Then Thursday morning, Von Hirsch's renowned collection of medieval bronzes enamels and metal work came to the block. Scarcely any of the pieces is over a few inches tall. They range through enamels, glass and precious Romanesque and Gothic ivories.

Von Hirsch assembled the collection between 1925 and 1935, when wealth and power were shifting hands in a troubled Europe. It included objects the Soviets sold from the Hermitage collection, pieces from the legendary 12th century Quelph treasure and the 19th century German collection of Prince Karl Anton von Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen.

Comparable works rest in museum collections, in New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Louvre. They never come to public sale. But here they were.

Sotheby's chairman Peter C. Wilson banged his gavel and 96 objects began to change the history of auctions.

Art dealer Reiner Zietz, bidding for Berlin's Staalich Museum, paid $2,214,000 for the 12th century Mosan enamel medallion. It was a world record any work of art — other than a painting — sold at auction.

The medallion, commissioned by a German abbot, depicts the angel of charity in blue and yellow enamel against a gilt ground.

The London art firm of Agnew's, acting for an undisclosed client, purchased a 12th century Russian enamel arm ornament for $2,029,500. It depicts the crucified Christ and was probably part of the coronation costume of Emperor Fredrick I. A companion piece is in the Louvre. It is just 5 inches high.

An 11th century Byzantine ivory relief of Christ in majesty, 10 inches high, fetched $1,162,350. A 4-inch English gilt altar candlestick of the 12th century brought down the hammer at $1,014,750. It, too, came to Von Hirsch via the Hermitage.

Prices ran so high that one German dealer bid more than $2 million and came away empty handed. Ten works fetched between $100,000 and $500,000. The lowest successful bid was $1,500, for a pair of enamel spandrels.

American museums made several purchases. Sherman Lee, bidding for the Cleveland Art Museum, paid $551,435 for four objects. The Cincinnati Art Museum bought a late 12th century Limoges enamel crozier for $16,000.

An afternoon sale of 107 antiquities, Renaissence bronzes ad sculptures, would have been significant by earlier standards. The pieces brought more than $1.4 million, with the highest price of $202,950 going for an Italian woodcarving of the Virgin and Child. A sale of Von Hirsch books at a nearby Sotheby's annex brought $294,460.

'Borin' Orrin' won big round in law filibuster Thursday

By DAVID ESPO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once Orrin Hatch was a card-carrying union member — Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union — to be exact.

Now he doesn't seem to have much in common with the AFL-CIO.

Hatch, an intense, fast-talking Republican conservative from Utah, was the point man in a long filibuster against organized labor's cherished proposed labor law revisions.

He won a very big round on Thursday, when the Senate voted to send the hotly contested measure back to its Human Resources Committee for redrafting.

The move came after backers of the bill conceded they could not crack the tenacious five-week filibuster that Hatch and a group of other, mostly freshmen Republicans threw up against the measure.

The legislaton would stiffen penalties labor law violators must pay while also giving unions added leverage in organizing workers.

It would speed up the timetable for union representation elections, expand the National Labor Relations Board and allow unions to send recruiters onto company premises under tightly controlled circumstances.

After the vote, Hatch stood in a small room off the Senate floor accepting congratulations from friends.

"I hope at least we've won some respect," he said.

It was an interesting comment from a relatively new senator who took on what appeared to many to be a hopeless task, a senator who confided to others that he sometimes feels he does not fit into the clubby atmosphere of the Senate.

Asked to describe how his boss approaches his work, aide Bill Hendrix said: "Total commitment, almost consecration. He is just very intense on everything. Driven."

It was Hatch who spent long hours on the Senate floor during the filibuster that began May 16, reading speeches, citing studies, parrying opposing senators.

He sought ceaselessly to portray himself as the underdog, telling reporters more than once, "I'm just a freshman senator" battling against the giants of the Senate.

"They've got all the power, immense power," he often said of the Carter administration and the Democratic leadership working for the bill.

Senate labor law supporters sent back to square one

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of proposed labor law revisions are back almost to square one in their long fight to win Senate passage of the labor-backed legislation.

Backers of the measure conceded defeat Thursday in their struggle to break a long, Republican-led filibuster against the bill and had the measure returned to the Human Resources Committee for redrafting.

It was a setback for both the Carter administration and organized labor, both of which worked hard to get the bill through the Senate.

Sens. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., the majority leader, and Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., the panel's chairman, both said the bill will be back.

But Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, leader of the filibuster, said he is ready to mount a second talkathon if the measure re-emerges from committee along its current lines.

"I suspect if they literally try to write a fair bill it would not be acceptable to organized labor," he said.

Under the Senate's action, the committee has authority to return the measure to the floor any time after July 15, but is not required to do so.

Normally, sending a measure back to committee under these circumstances is tantamount to killing the bill.

The legislation calls for stiffer penalties against labor law violators and would give unions additional leverage in their drive to organize workers.

Specifically, it would speed up the timetable for electons on union representation, would expand the size of the National Labor Relations Board and would give unions the right to send professional organizers onto company premises under tightly controlled circumstances.

Organized labor lobbied hard to win approval for the bill and was hoping to come away with a clear victory in light of other setbacks in recent months.

CARLA DELANE LAMBERT, 17, of Midland, will be entered as Miss West County Plaza of Odessa in the Miss West Texas Pageant June 29 and 30 and July 1 in the Ector County Coliseum in Odessa. Miss Lambert will sing in the talent phase of the beauty contest. She is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Lambert of Midland and has attended Midland High School and the American School.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Ask about substitutes

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: My mother is on a low-salt diet and would like to use the salt substitutes available in the supermarket. The doctor never said anything about these, and she hates to call him up just to ask that sort of question. But I think I'd feel better if I simply knew whether they are indeed safe—and if you honesty think they are a good idea.—Amy K.

DEAR AMY: The substitutes for table salt—or sodium chloride—are mixtures of potassium salts, such as potassium chloride, monopotassium glutamate, and glutamic acid. Potassium is widely available in foods and is an essential nutrient. But it is possible that your mother could not tolerate additional amounts in concentrated form.

A report in a recent issue of the "Journal of the American Medical Assn." describes the cases of two elderly patients who developed serious heart irregularities from the excessive use of sodium substitutes containing potassium. So if your mother wishes to try these products, she would be wise to check first with her doctor.

My advice to anyone who is looking for flavorings to take the place of salt would be to use herbs and spices. Thyme, tarragon, oregano, basil, mustard, dill—there are lots to choose from. You can mix a few favorites and put them in a little dish to use at the table. Just sprinkle a bit over the food.

One note of caution: the garlic, onion and celery salt you get in the supermarket are not salt substitutes. They contain sodium.

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: Isn't it true that the new low-tar, low-nicotine cigarettes are much safer than the old type?—Sheldon W.

DEAR SHELDON: I wouldn't say they are much safer. I'd put it this way—they are probably not quite as dangerous. Dr. E. Cuyler Hammond of the American Cancer Society reported recently on a very large survey showing how you are less apt to die of lung cancer or heart disease if you smoke a low-tar, low-nicotine cigarette than if you smoke a high-tar, high-nicotine one.

But the death rates among the smokers of low-tar, low-nicotine cigarettes are still way above those of people who never smoked regularly. The non-smokers' death rate from heart disease was a third less. And for lung cancer, it was less than a sixth of the rate in the low-tar, low-nicotine group.

It is as important as ever not to take up smoking—because cigarettes are so addictive. According to a British study, 85 percent of the teen-agers who smoke more than a single cigarette become regular smokers. So the best thing is: don't start.

Dr. Grimm to head college ministry

Dr. Larry Grimm, associate minister of First Presbyterian Church, will head the Midland College United Campus Ministry during the 1978-79 academic year.

Grimm was elected chairman of the campus ministry at a recent meeting of the organization's board of governors. Selected to the executive committee with Grimm were Helen Clemmer, vice serve on chairman Maggie Artley, secretary, and Bill Bucy, treasurer.

The Midland College United Campus Ministry is an ecumenical coalition of 13 Midland churches which sponsors efforts in campus ministry at Midland College.

Better look out, Hollywood!
Oklahoma new film 'capital'

By DAVID EGNER

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Hollywood, look out. Moviemaking has come to Oklahoma.

"We can do anything here we can do in California," said Oklahoma movie producer Arthur Leonard. "I'm trying to start an excitement here ... I want to bring the film and TV industry to Oklahoma."

Leonard, who has completed work on one movie and hopes to produce at least five more in Oklahoma, said the state offered moviemakers low production costs and a variety of settings for films.

"Five Faces," a fantasy thriller about five corpses that come to life, cost $600,000 to film in the Oklahoma cities of Stillwater, Ponca City and Yale last November and December, Leonard said.

Making the same film in California would have cost at least $1.2 million, the producer said.

"People here let you use their facilities for less," Leonard said.

An example, he said, was a hospital that charged only $50 per day to be used as the scene of filming for "Five Faces."

Leonard's film company, Myriad Cinema International, is based in the heartland of Oklahoma wheat country, the city of Enid.

Enid, with a population of about 45,000, became the movie capital of Oklahoma because it is the home of Leroy and Marvin Boehs, two oilmen who've agreed to supply $500,000 in financing for each of six Myriad films, Leonard said.

There are also smaller investors in the company.

"If you make a fairly good film, you can't have a dry hole," Leonard said, turning to oil industry terminology to describe what he considers the bright financial outlook for Warner Brothers and Columbia Studios, but always on B-grade films, he said.

Leonard moved to Oklahoma seven years ago for a land promotion, and has since been engaged in writing and public relations work.

"I like this state because here I could be No. 1" among movie producers, Leonard said, since no other feature film companies are headquartered in Oklahoma.

Shatner's projects have time spectrum covered

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Bill Shatner's been hopping so dextrously fror past to future that he's had very little time lately to live in the present.

In "The Bastard," a four-hour, two-part Operation Prime Time production for MCA TV-Universal, he played Paul Revere.

Then, racing to Paramount, he resumed the role of Capt. Kirk in "Star Trek—The Motion Picture," a new and expensive treatment of the further adventures of starship Enterprise.

The film reunites him not only with Leonard Nimoy and producer Gener Roddenberry who created and produced the television series "Star Trek," but with the futuristic hardware so dear to the hearts of sci-fi fans.

"Everything people in the street wants to recognize will be recognizable in the picture," Shatner promises. "But it will have been modernized and brought up to date.

"The ship Enterprise has been so accepted by television viewers that it's almost old hat."

"Star Trek," probably more than any television series, has generated a cultish following for which Shatner can't precisely account.

"No one factor was reponsible for the effect of the show," he judges, "but many elements came together to create a magical thing. That happens with a hit stage show.

"'Star Trek's' popularity built slowly. The series wasn't a block buster at the end of the first season."

Though "Star Trek — The Motion Picture" will reach theaters after the sci-fi enthusiasm generated by "Star Wars" and "Close Encounters" has had time to run its course, Shatner doesn't think it will come too late to find a market.

"Really great space movies are so expensive, only a few will be made," he believes, "so the public won't get tired of the subject any time soon."

Shatner, who has appeared recently giving dramatic redings with the Los Angeles and Chicago Philharmonic Orchestras, will follow his work in "star Trek — The Motion Picture" with an extensive tour during which he'll star in an evening of sound, light, music and recitation.

•

Joseph Bottoms who played Rudi Weiss in "Holocaust" will co-star with Elizabeth Taylor in Hallmark Hall of Fame's "Return Engagement" to air over NBC-TV during the 1978-79 season.

•

Tanya Tucker's dad, Bo Tucker, phoned former cowboy star Monte Hale to offer him the role of Gov. John Connelly in a movie the Tuckers plan to produce.

East ruffed the third club and returned a trump to dummy. Now South needed the rest of the tricks.

South planned to cash the ace of diamonds, ruff a diamond, get back with a trump and ruff another low diamond. When the king of diamonds drops South is home; if it fails to drop, South can try the heart finesse later.

However, when South ruffed the deuce of diamonds West dropped the nine. South therefore decided to lead dummy's queen of diamonds, hoping to pick up the jack and king on the same trick.

This ambitious play didn't work. East played the king of diamonds, but West's jack failed to drop. South eventually tried the heart finesse and went down.

GIVE CREDIT

Give West credit for a fine deceptive play. But give South a demerit for trusting his opponent.

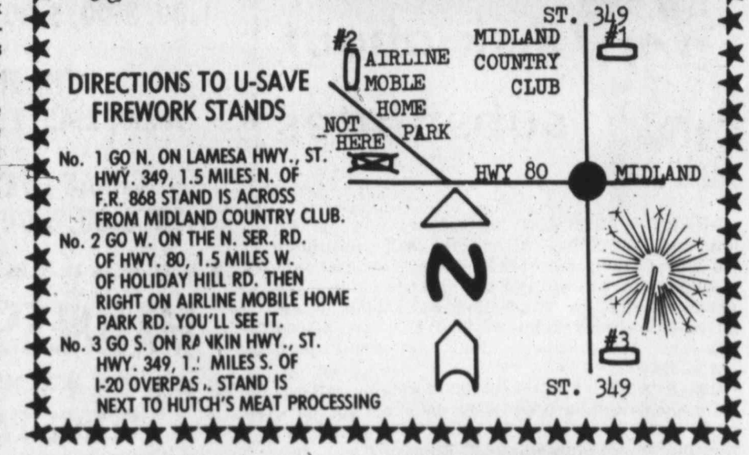

When the nine of diamonds dropped the four and six of diamonds had not appeared. Who had them, and why had East played the five and seven of diamonds if he had started with K-7-6-5-4?

Operas heard in head

ATLANTA (AP) — The opera composed by Ted Lashley has received standing ovations the two times it has been performed, but Lashley could barely hear the music or the applause.

"You don't have to be able to hear the music out loud, just to hear it in your head, and know how to work with it," said Lashley, who is nearly deaf.

The piano teacher, who began losing his hearing when he was 4 years old, added, "I don't feel my hearing loss is a a handicap at all. In fact, sometimes it's an advantage."

Lashley composed the opera based on the play, "Song for a Hero," even though he dislikes operas.

"I don't care for vocal music, because I am not able to understand sung words," he said. "So to me, the voice is kind of like a noise on top of the music."

Lashley understands normal conversation, thanks to lip-reading abilities and the 12 percent hearing he has left in one ear. His hearing loss is mainly of higher-pitched sounds. So, while he can hear the meow of a fully grown cat, a higher-pitched kitten's meow is not in his range.

Middle C is in his hearing range, said Lashley, who explained he knew what high C sounded like by using imagination, logic and music theory.

He said the University of Georgia denied him entrance to its music program because of his disability, but he got his bachelor's degree with highest honors at Georgia Southern College in 1976.

Lashley said he planned to continue teaching piano and would like to teach at a college for three or four years, then earn his doctorate.

"I simply want to teach in a senior college ... composing on—the side," he said.

JUST BACK HOME from a recent 10-day Government-in-Action youth tour of the nation's capital are, from the left, Donita Lea, 16, of Greenwood, about 10 miles east of Midland; Robert Cox, 18, of West Stanton, and Lesa Angel, 18, of Stanton. Miss Lea's trip to Washington, D.C., was sponsored by Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., of Stanton, since she won a Cap Rock essay contest on "Energy Conservation." Miss Lea, who will be a junior at Greenwood High School this fall, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Lea. Cox and Miss Angel, 1978 graduates of Stanton High School, were sponsored on the trip by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Cox and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Ed Angel, who are members of the cooperative.

Zaire's biggest threat own army

By JONATHAN C. RANDAL
The Washington Post

KINSHASA, Zaire — To most Zairians and many whites here, the biggest threat to everyday existence comes not from the rebels, but from Zaire's own army.

Born in mutiny in the first days of independence from Belgium in 1960, the 45,000-strong force has become synonymous with extortion, looting, murder, rape — not with protecting the country or citizenry.

Diplomats fear the success of current Western efforts to put Zaire back on sound economic and administrative rails may be undercut by this military force that acts like an army of occupation in its own country.

Trained on-and-off since 1960 by Belgians, French, Italians, Israelis, North Koreans, Chinese and Americans, the army, according to Western military specialists, is without effective non-commissioned officers, reserves or a meaningful general staff.

In normal times the only regularly fed and paid unit is the presidential guard, chosen from President Mobutu Sese Seko's northwestern home province of Equateur. The guard's long suit is loyalty: Western military specialists are not impressed by its professional training nor by its discipline.

"If the president thinks he is adequately protected by the guard," a military attache said, "he is woefully mistaken."

According to Zairian citizerns, when the guard launched a punitive expedition in the interior last winter as many as 800 unarmed villagers were killed.

The officer corps has been noted for absenteeism, with many officers staying at home or looking after business interests.

Theoretically, privates are paid $60 a month at the official exchange rate — a sum which they and other Zairians find difficult to live on. But since the troops are paid only intermittently, they have taken to setting up roadblocks to extort money from passersby, ordinary Zairians complain.

Recruiting has often consisted of rounding up young men at random on city streets, cordoning off neighborhoods or emptying prisons.

Even the crack Kamenyola Division, trained by North Koreans, lost two battalions last month when officers and men melted into the bush near the road-and-rail hub of Mutshatsha during the rebel invasion of Shaba. They have yet to re-emerge, informed sources reported.

Mobutu appears to distrust the military to the point that some Western military specialists question whether the one-time sergeant really wants an efficient army, since it could threaten him. Within the past year, he removed all army officers from the important Politburo of the country's one party, the Popular Revolutionary Movement.

Following a spring trial of 84 military defendants accused of plotting, 13 of those convicted were executed before their lawyers could file appeals.

Little meaningful evidence was produced at the trial, according to independent observers authorized to follow the proceedings.

Just before the renewed fighting in Shaba last month, some 200 officers and warrant officers were cashiered, Western sources said, because they belong to the Baluda and Lunda tribes that are important in volatile Kasai and Shaba provinces, respectively.

After that move, according to Western specialists, the general staff — which had shown marked improvement after the first Shaba invasion of last year — ceased to be effective.

The present decline of the army dates from its brief and disastrous engagement during the Angolan civil war in 1975 when, with U.S. backing, its crack units were committed to help stop the eventual winners — the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

They abandoned considerable equipment, much of it American, and returned with their morale shattered. Even the wounded were hidden since Zaire did not want to publicize its participation in the Angola fighting.

In last year's Shaba campaign, the Westerners say, the high command committed troops to the combat zone without sufficient food, ammunition, or cadres.

Apparently mindful of the mess in the military, Mobutu recently said Belgium would train a 10,000-man infantry division, France would accelerate formation of 30,000 paratroopers and Morocco would also help train new troops.

But privately, Belgian and French officials have cast doubts on such reports. Belgian officers insisted that in the past their training missions did not have sufficient authority to exercise discipline.

Some diplomats still hope that a lean force of 15,000 to 20,000 men could be formed, with most of the present troops cashiered.

That was the approximate size of the old Belgian colonial force that maintained law and order in pre-independent days throughout this land as large as the United States east of the Mississippi.

Some Western specialists contended that the only way to achieve an effective and disciplined army is by having white officers perhaps as far down as battalion or even company level.

"That is politically out these days," a specialist said, "if only because the Russians and Cubans would seize on it as a pretext to justify their own military operations in Africa and even expand them."

Nor are mercenaries, a traditional recourse in Zaire's early independent history, considered politically palatable in the West in these days of open government.

"The army is likely to bring the regime down through its own mindlessness," a Western diplomat said. "It all sounds like a rerun of Chiang Kai-shek's army in the Chinese civil war."

For the time being, an African expeditionary force is propping up the regime. According to a Western specialist, though, "the only way out for Mobutu is a political solution. Failing that, the Western powers are going to have to face the possibility of more rescue operations along the lines of the Shaba interventions of the past two years."

Eggs 'farm fresh,' but most hens bred in 'city'

By WAYNE M. DAVIS

SALISBURY, Vt. (AP) — The box may say "farm fresh eggs," but the chickens have never seen the farm.

They spend all but a tiny fraction of their lives indoors, tens of thousands of living "parts" on a single assembly line.

The machinery feeds them, waters them, controls the light. It regulates the temperature and humidity. And it carries away the eggs on constantly moving conveyor belts to automatic grading and packaging lines.

George and Lois Devoid have what state extension officials call a "moderate size" egg business in Salisbury.

"Moderate" means they have 25,000 birds, housed in two automated barns. The larger of the two measures 300 feet by 42 feet, home for 14,000 chickens under a single roof.

Marketing may still demand the image of a fresh-faced farm girl returning from the hen house with a basket under her arm. But the market itself has demanded mechanization.

"There wasn't much choice. The people who didn't want to make changes in housing and production techniques are out of business today," says University of Vermont poultry adviser Len Mercia.

The trend was nationwide, he says. "The signs were there in the '50s, but the big change came about 10 years ago when most suppliers took the birds off the floor and put them into cages."

Now, he says, the business of supplying Americans with their daily breakfast ration is becoming the province of enormous operations.

"One California company, called Egg City, has 6 million birds by itself," he says.

But in Vermont, at least, the independent producers have held out. Mercia says that although "hundreds" have folded in the last 15 years, almost all of Vermont's remaining 35 egg businesses are still family-owned.

The Devoids, one of the survivors, made the switch in the late 1960s.

"Our old barn burned down in 1965. We thought of just rebuilding, but George had been keeping his eyes open and had a fairly good idea of what was coming," Mrs. Devoid says.

Dinousaur park open to visitors

ROCKY HILL, Conn. (AP) — One hundred and eighty-five million years ago monstrous creatures lumbered across the Connecticut terrain, leaving "an instant of time captured in sandstone."

The dinosaur footprints caught the attention of construction workers who were digging for a state highway department building in 1966. Excited geologists termed the footprints the largest and clearest fossilized evidence of dinosaur activity in the country, and Connecticut soon preserved the area as a park.

More than two years ago Dinosaur State Park was closed after an inflatable dome which protected the footprints from daily weather wear collapsed. Now, the public once again can see the tracks of prehistoric creatures.

About 500 of the estimated 2,000 dinosaur footprints that have been discovered are protected by a geodesic dome, made of concrete blocks covered by aluminum. Geologists buried the rest of the footprints to protect them from weather; the process of freezing and thawing causes flaking of the prized footprints, preserved for millions of years because they were buried.

"It's actually an instant of time captured in sandstone. In some ways it's more interesting than bones because it is a record of how the dinosaurs moved," said Richard L. Kreuger, a state geologist who directs the park's educational program.

Use of nitrite studied

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Department of Agriculture has issued a proposal that would permit processed meats such a bacon, ham, hot dogs, salami, etc. to be manufactured without sodium nitrite and still be labeled with their traditional names.

Currently these products must be called by such names as "uncured cooked sausage or uncured pork strips." The nitrite-free meats would have to carry a warning to highlight the fact that they are nitrite-free so that refrigeration is essential. The warning would say: "NO NITRITE OR NITRATE ADDED — NOT PRESERVED, MUST BE REFRIGERATED BELOW 40 DEGREES AT ALL TIMES."

The meat industry has maintained that processed meats cured without sodium nitrite may someday be responsible for a person's death because nitrite-free processed meats are subject to spoilage from clostridium botulinum. Botulism is a deadly toxin that can be fatal.

Small manufacturers, however, have been curing bacon, hot dogs, hams and luncheon meats for years without nitrites; there have been no reported deaths in this country from nitrite-free meats. The meats are kept safe through refrigeration or freezing.

But 14 congressmen, fearful that nitrite-free products may cut into the market for meats cured with nitrites, have asked Agriculture Secretary Bergland to reverse the proposed rule on nitrite-free meats.

In a letter dated May 22, the congressmen said they haven't had any requests from their constituents, "whom we consider well-enlightened," for nitrite-free meats.

They said that the new regulation is "a dangerous proposal" and that if children take nitrite-free meats to school, keep them in a "warm school locker for hours on end," the children are subject to "potential disaster."

The congressmen want the nitrite-free meats to have different names: for example, "cold dogs" instead of hot dogs. They want the shape of the hot dogs changed too, from round to square.

More than 300 letters show support for Braniff

A letter-writing campaign organized last week to show support for Braniff Airways' application to serve the Permian Basin netted more than 350 letters from businesses and individuals in Midland, Odessa and surrounding communties.

W.J. Mewhorter, chairman of the aviation committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said efforts by the chambers of commerce in both Midland and Odessa were "highly productive" in gaining citizen response to an opportunity for improved air service between Midland-Odessa and Dallas-Fort Worth.

Mewhorter said the letters have been forwarded to Washington, D.C., for delivery to the Civil Aeronautics Board by a legal representative of the two cities and their chambers of commerce.

"We are very pleased at the response we received, and we are now hopeful that, because of the interest shown by the people in this area, the CAB will expedite its review of the Braniff brief and give us an answer as soon as possible," Mewhorter said.

He said the majority of letters came from businesses in the area, but he indicated more private citizens participated in the effort than had been expected.

Subjects of the letters, Mewhorter said, ranged from expressions of increased business and personal air travel needs to the East and Northeast to personal accounts of problems that have been caused by the reduction of the number of flights daily between Midland-Odessa and Dallas-Fort Worth.

Recount of 'wet' vote postponed for 30 days

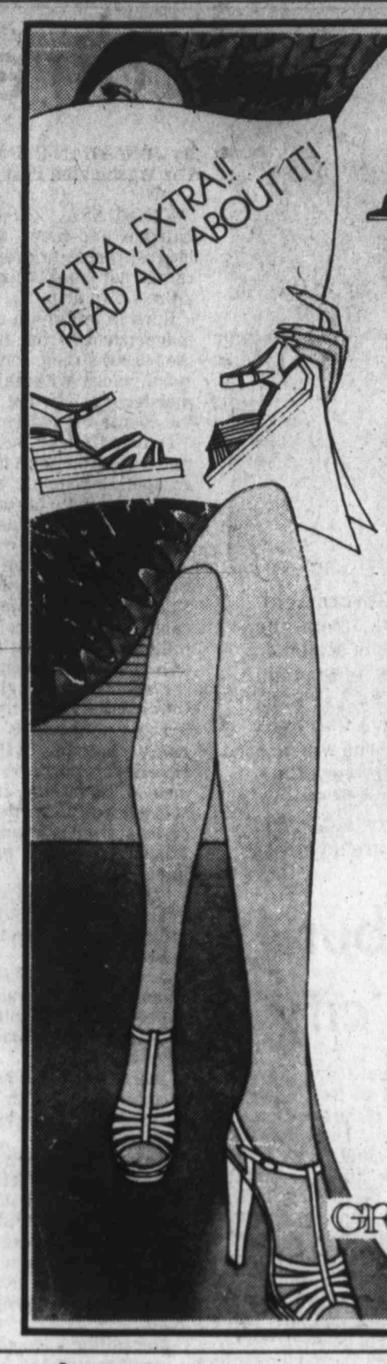

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Taylor County Commissioners voted 3-2 today to postpone for 30 days any recount of last weekend's election in which voters narrowly approved the local sale of alcoholic beverages.

The commissioners voted to seek a formal opinion from Attorney General John Hill as to whether a recount is legal in such an election.

Opponents of liquor sales pressed for a recount, but the legality of such action was questioned by the commissioners' legal adviser Gary Hacker. Hacker said there is no provision for a recount of local option liquor elections in the state election law because paper ballots were used and because only a candidate may request a recount.

The commissioners were first locked in a 2-2 tie over whether to delay the recount until County Judge Roy Skaggs cast his tie-breaking vote.

Voters approved the liquor option last Saturday by a vote of 11,591 to 11,460.

Julia Hogue, Jones say double ring vows

DENTON-Julia Diane Hogue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Hogue of Denton, formerly of Midland, and Charley Michael Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charley A. Jones of Roy, Utah, were married at 2 p.m. Saturday in Highland Baptist Church.

The Rev. James Stiles performed the double ring ceremony. Sharon Haygood and Pattie Splecter were the organists, and Miss Haygood and Mike Splecter were soloists.

The couple will reside in Beaufort, S.C., where the bridegroom is stationed with the U.S. Marine Corps, after a trip to the Bahamas.

The bride, presented in marriage by her father, wore a white Polyester organza gown with slightly full sleeves cuffed at the wrists, high neckline trimmed in Chantilly lace and bodice trimmed with seed pearls. The chapel train was of Chantilly lace. She also wore a fingertip veil trimmed with layers of Chantilly lace, and carried a colonial bouquet of white pixie carnations, starburst pompons and gypsophila centered with a white orchid.

Beverly Hogue of Irving, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Debbie Hogue, sister of the bride, Missey Henery and Donna Harris. Ramey Wilson of Gourdanton, cousin of the bride, was bridesmatron.

Mike Hogue, brother of the bride, was best man. The groomsmen were Ted Hogue of Irving, brother of the bride, Bill Pennington of Wooster, Ohio, Rick Hyman and Jimmy Don Hogue of Atlanta, uncle of the bride. Rhonda Thornton of Mt. Olive, N.C., was the flower girl, and Matt Longoria was ring bearer. The miniature bride and bridegroom were Michelle Splecter and Tyler Haygood. The ushers were Eddie Lunsford and John Gann.

The reception was held in Denton Country Club.

Mrs. Charley Michael Jones

Pomegranates yield pleasing flavor

Pomegranates are a versatile fruit. Eat them fresh from the tree or make pomegranate punch or pomegranate jelly.

Pomegranates yield a very attractive deep purplish-red colored juice with a pleasing flavor, says Judy Germany, Midland County extension agent (home economics).

To obtain pomegranate juice, cut the fruit in half and remove the juice filled sacs. Crush and press the sacs to remove the juice.

A fine-holed colander covered with a light weight cloth works well, she suggests.

Take care to remove all of the skin--it's high in tannins and makes the juice undesirable. The seeds are equally bitter and should not be crushed in the juice extracting process, the agent explains.

One large fruit will yield one-third to one-half cup of juice. Use the juice in preparation of beverages and jelly.

POMEGRANATE PUNCH

1 quart of pomegranate juice(unsweetened)
Juice of one lemon
1/2 pound of sugar(use less if juice was sweetened before bottling)

1 quart water

Mix and serve with crushed ice. Fresh fruit such as crushed pineapple, peach, orange, grapefruit, berries and cherries may be added. Or, use the juice from any variety of canned fruit to increase the yield and improve the flavor.

GRENADINE SYRUP

Grenadine Syrup is simply pomegranate juice plus sugar. After extracting the pomegranate juice, add about one pound of sugar per quart of juice. Process for five minutes at 10 pounds pressure.

Store in a dry, dark place. Pomegranate juice tends to turn dark and discolor with age, so use within six months.

POMEGRANATE JELLY

4 cups pomegranate juice
7½ cups sugar
1 bottle liquid pectin

Shell out juice-filled sacs. Crush and press to remove juice. Strain into non-metal container through double thickness of white cloth.

Measure juice into kettle. Stir in sugar. Place on high heat and, stirring constantly, bring quickly to a full rolling boil that cannot be stirred down. Add the pectin and heat again to a full rolling boil. Boil hard for one minute. Remove from heat and skim off foam quickly. Pour jelly immediately into hot containers and seal.

Makes 11 to 13 six-ounce glasses.

Group members return from state convention

Thirteen members of the local Epsilon Eta and Zeta Xi Chapters of Delta Kappa Gamma Society, International, have returned from the 49th annual Alpha(Texas) state convention held in Abilene.

One thousand key women teachers from all parts of the state, as well as guest members from several states attended.

Newly elected presidents of Alpha State's 256 local chapters participated in a Leadership Development Workshop held on the campus of Hardin-Simmons University. Planning for the 12 area fall workshops took place the second day of the convention.

Dr. Gloria R. Little, southwest regional director from Scottsdale, Ariz., addressed the convention at the 49th annual birthday luncheon.

As a climax of the convention, the outgoing presidents received special recognition during the final banquet in their honor. The Founders and Presidents Banquet annually highlights the lives of the dozen women educators who pooled their dreams during a time when women were treated as second-class citizens. Dr. Annie Webb Blanton, who initiated the idea of such a group, later became the first woman in Texas to hold an elective state office, state superintendent of public instruction. The society was organized by 12 women educators May 11, 1929, in Austin and has grown to almost 150,000 women educators in the United States and other countries.

The international convention will be held in Chicago, Ill., in late July, with more than 3,000 members expected to attend.

Midlanders attending the convention were Paula Booth, Gladys Griffin, Carolyn Sowell, Frances Walker, Hazel Smith, Ann Donaldson, Roberta Bain, Martha Preston and Lois Rogge, Epsilon Eta Chapter, and Cynthia Williams, Dolly Benson, Pat Morgan and Eloise Mayberry, Zeta Xi Chapter.

Midlanders' kin presented as debutante

ROSWELL, N.M.-W. T. Gilbert of Roswell, formerly of Midland, Texas, attended the 14th annual Debutantes Ball of Sigma Gamma Rho sorority.

Gilbert's daughter, Collette, was one of 35 debutantes presented at the ball. She is the granddaughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Worthy G. Gilbert of 202 S. Carver St., Midland.

Miss Gilbert plans to begin pre-medicine studies this fall at the University of Northern Colorado.

SUPER HANDYMAN

You, too, can get the hang of this 'sticky' business

By AL CARRELL

Few do-it-yourself projects can make such a dramatic change within your home as wallpapering. Actually, most wall coverings are not paper anymore, but they're still called by that name. While wallpapering is a "sticky" business, it's really sort of fun once you get the hang of it.

One of the weird things that many people don't believe right off is the way you fold the strip of wallpaper after you have smeared paste all over the back. You take the top of the strip and fold it, paste against paste, down to the middle, and then do the same thing at the other end.

The process is called booking. It ends up with a strip only half as long, and that's one of the reasons why you do it that way. It's easier to handle and, since there isn't any exposed paste, you don't end up getting the goo all over everything.

Once you get the booked strip over to the wall, you take the top and let that part unfold. After the top is smoothed and in place, you then unfold the bottom part. It doesn't seem right, but after a few strips, you'll agree it's a great idea. Hang in there, and you'll end up with a job you can be proud of.

•

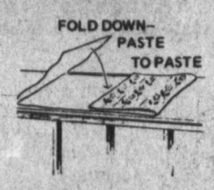

Dear Al:

Instead of the usual paste brush, I used a paint roller to smear the paste on the back of the paper. It was quicker and easier, and I think I got better coverage. — J.S.

•

Dear Al:

One of the things you have to be absolutely sure all the lumps are gone. Otherwise, you end up with a lumpy wall. The best mixing tool I have ever used is one of those wire egg beaters from the kitchen. They're called French whisks. Unless the cook finds out about it, it really does no harm since the paste is water soluble. — W.B.

The really best way to get rid of lumps is to stick your bare hands into the paste. It's messy, but fun.

A SUPER HINT — One of the worst things you can do is order the wrong amount of wallpaper. If you order too much, you probably won't be able to return the leftover rolls. If you order too little, when you come back for more, you may find that the new is from a different run, and thus the colors may be slightly different. Or worse, the entire pattern may have been discontinued. (They seem to do this about every three days.)

Figuring your needs is strictly a matter of measuring and arriving at the square footage. Then you need to know the magic number which is 30. All standard rolls of wallpaper have approximately 36 square feet in them... no matter how wide the roll. However, plan on only a yield of 30 square feet. Trimming and matching and all that will take care of the difference. Divide the total square footage of the walls by 30, and this will tell you how many rolls to buy... but figure it more than once, and then ask the dealer for his figures, too.

•

Dear Al:

Do you ever step back to admire the latest strip of wallpaper you just pasted in place only to find out it was upside down? I did, and soon devised a system that prevented such an error. As soon as I cut each strip, I write "top" on the back and also number each strip. This makes it easier to get the right strip in the right order and with the right end up. — K.K.N.

Don't mark with a felt marker or your writings may bleed through. A pencil is best.

SHOP TALK—If you have seams on a vinyl wallcovering project where strips overlap, the regular paste probably won't hold. There is a special vinly-to-vinyl pasge in a squeeze bottle that will hold. Ask your dealer.

Hooray for guacamole, everyone's favorite dip

Copley News Service

Many readers have asked for ways to use, and to preserve, avocados.

The answer can be given briefly: Puree the avocados and freeze the puree. It will keep for four to five months. It can be used in salads, sandwiches, dips or any recipe calling for mashed avocado. Add one-fourth teaspoon ascorbic acid, or three tablespoons lemon juice to each quart of puree.

The puree also may be sweetened before freezing, and used in recipes for ice creams, sherbets and other desserts. Add one cup of sugar to each quart of puree.

Avocados never ripen on the tree. The best way to ripen them is to place them in a paper bag at room temperature. To test for ripeness, cradle the avocado gently in the hand. The ripe fruit will yield to the touch.

When ripe, avocados may be held in the refrigerator for several days. The whole fruit must never be put in a freezer.

Probably the most popular way to use avocados is in the dip called guacamole (pronounced wah-kah-moe-lay, with the accent on the "moe"). In their new book, "The Elegant Hors d'Oeuvre," authors Margon Edney and Ede Grimm give this version:

AVOCADO DIP

5 slices bacon
3 large ripe avocados, peeled and mashed
2 cloves garlic, crushed or minced
1 small tomato (not too ripe), peeled and cut in chunks
One-half cup onion, chopped
Lemon juice to taste

Fry and drain bacon, then crush fine and set aside. The easiest way is to put the bacon in a plastic bag, tie and crush with a rolling pin. Combine all the other ingredients in a serving bowl, garnish with the bacon and serve with corn chips or strips of fresh vegetables.

For a Mexican version, add a few drops of Tabasco or hot taco sauce. Makes about two cups.

Among other tempting recipes are these for guacamoles:

GUACAMOLE WITH TOMATOES

2 avocados, mashed or pureed
One-fourth cup sour cream
2 tsps. minced onion
2 tsps. salt
1 tsp. chili powder
1 clove garlic, crushed
Dash Tabasco
4 tsps. lemon juice
2 medium tomatoes, peeled and chopped

Combine all ingredients. Cover and chill. Makes about three cups.

GUACAMOLE WITHOUT TOMATOES

4 avocados, mashed or pureed
2 tsps. salt
2 tbsps. lime juice
One-eighth tsp. Tabasco
One-half tsp. Worchestershire sauce
2 cloves garlic, crushed

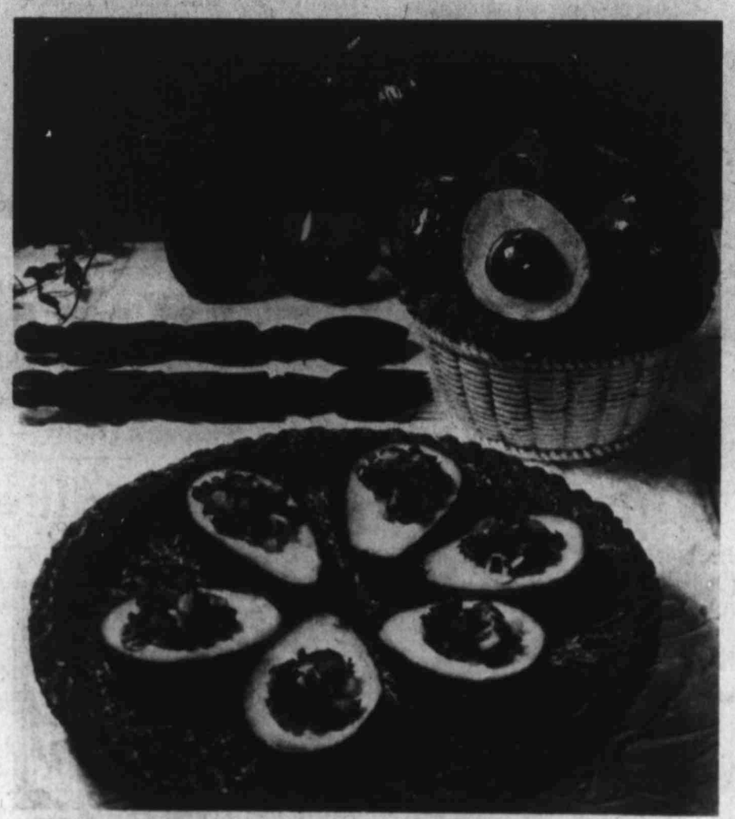

Combine all ingredients. Cover and chill. Makes about three cups.

Here is a picture-pretty as well as delicious appetizer, first course or salad:

AVOCADOS SALSA VERDE

One-fourth cup chopped green pepper
One-fourth cup chopped parsley
2 tbsps. chopped celery
1 tbsp. finely chopped scallion
1 tbsp. finely chopped pimiento
1 tbsp. drained capers
1 tsp. finely chopped anchovy fillets
One-half tsp. salt
One-eighth tsp. each pepper and basil
One-half cup Spanish olive oil
2 tbsps. lemon juice
4 soft California avocados

Combine all ingredients except avocados and chill thoroughly. When ready to serve, halve avocados lengthwise, twist to separate halves, ram a sharp knife directly into seeds and twist to lift out. Brush half shell with lemon juice, fill with salsa.

This salad star of vitamin-loaded avocados may be served in a number of exciting ways. Today's column gives recipes for guacamole and this picture-pretty treat, avocados salsa verde, delicious as an appetizer, first course or salad.

Kitchen can have warmth

By CAROLE EICHEN
Copley News Service

No matter how fantastic your living room looks, there's something that always draws people into the kitchen.

That custom or habit may be a throwback to the days when there were big farm kitchens, but even today's small-scaled apartment kitchens can have their appeal.

If space is a problem, the kitchen can be made to feel warm and friendly by adding a few personal touches that won't cost too much.

First of all, decide what kind of mood you wish to create for the kitchen. Do you want it to be warm and cozy or bright and cheerful?

In an apartment you are stuck with the cabinetry that exists. However, there's no rule that says you have to leave it that way. If you do it in good taste and clear it ahead of time, most landlords won't mind if you apply a little paint to brighten things up.

Instead of painting all of the shelves, one idea is to use graphics.

Children can express individuality by resisting

COLLEGE STATION—Most children express their individuality by resisting parental control or guidance to some degree.

At these groping stages, children have an exaggerated awareness of "self." They may feel limits or directions imposed on them by parents are threats to their developing independence, says a family life education specialist.

"Just a minute..." is a favorite expression of children who dawdle, daydream, poke around and are angry.

Often parents interpret these actions as "pure contrariness"--and they may be right.

A contrary or uncooperative child is usually behaving in this manner to show parents his resistance to demands.

However, sometimes the age and stage of development of the child causes him to resist, Dorthy Taylor with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, explains.

Woman named to judge post

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)-Lucy Kelly McCabe, the first woman elected president of the San Francisco Bar Association, has been appointed by the governor as a municipal judge here.

A native of St. Louis, the 38-year-old divorced mother of two received her law degree from George Washington University in 1967.

Dancer now collecting bills

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)-Charlene Choate's first love is landing dancing roles with performing arts groups but such opportunities are not a reliable source of steady income. So for the past 10 years, she has been working for a bill collection agency.

"The brickbats I get regularly from people don't faze me because I believe in paying bills. I grew up with a dad who would walk downtown to pay a bill the day he got it. I pay my bills, and I believe others should, too."

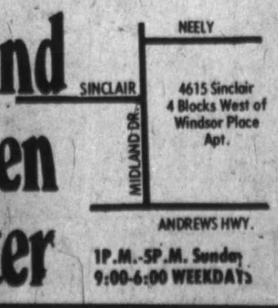

During an average day, Mrs. Choate contacts about 35 people with overdue bills. She hears all sorts of hard-luck tales, she said. One family, she said, "has had the same uncle die several times in the past three years, and in each case, unanticipated funeral expenses were enormous."

Friends see Ford's campaigning as cause of Betty's problems

NEW YORK, N.Y.—Betty Ford is insisting that her husband, Gerald, not seek reelection to the Presidency, and he is ignoring his wife's wishes, despite the fact that his frequent absences are considered by close friends to be the main cause of Betty's alcohol and drug addiction problems, it was disclosed Wednesday in a copyrighted article in McCALL'S magazine.

According to close friends and aides, Betty Ford turned to alcohol and drugs to relieve the emotional problems caused by years of coping with an absentee husband. Even though "Mrs. Ford and her children—and even her husband . . . frankly acknowledge his constant traveling as a major source of her problems," Gerald Ford has not let up on his whirlwind political schedule which keeps him constantly away from home.

"Mrs. Ford has been adamant in saying she does not wish him to run for the Presidency again, but Ford has apparently not heeded that message," according to political observer Myra MacPherson.

The former first lady's feelings have become stronger over the last two years since Gerald Ford has been out of office. "Betty Ford was increasingly disappointed that once her husband was out of politics, at least officially, he did not diminish his travels," friends are quoted as saying in the McCALL'S article.

Although Gerald Ford attended a few therapy sessions after his wife admitted herself to an alcohol and drug treatment program, "the day she entered the rehabilitation center, her husband was off giving a political speech in Alabama and playing golf in a charity match," according to Ms. MacPherson, even though aides report that "her decision to seek such help had been planned by the family two weeks before."

Other factors contributing to Mrs. Ford's decision to seek professional help were the pressure of a book deadline, the tension of waiting for a new home to be built and the responsibility of fulfilling a $1 million contract with NBC-TV, according to McCALL'S.

Mrs. Ford's public confession of drug and alcohol abuse has inspired an unprecedented number of similar admissions. "Betty Ford's story has touched people like nothing else has," said Robert L. Du Pont. "It is a constant topic whenever I go out to make speeches," McCALL'S quotes him as saying. Du Pont is the director of Health, Education and Welfare for the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

Luxurious silk becomes popular despite its expensive prices

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Smooth as silk. Silk Stockings. It's the very essence of luxury. It hugs the skin like a protein-enriched balm and flutters at even a hint of breeze. It's silk.

And silk, the natural fabric that goes back to ancient China, is giving its phony but sometimes succulent rival, polyester, a run for the fashion dollar in stores around the country.

For the past three years, sales of silk designs have risen steadily. Henri Bendel reports a growing demand for silk clothing. At Bonwit Teller alone, dresses and separates made of silk have increased in sales by 50 percent since 1975.

But silk is not the mainstay of Middle America. Long-sleeved silk blouses can run anywhere from $75 to $300 at better New York stores. Sporty short-sleeved dresses might cost from $130 to $400. For evening clothes, the prices can mushroom to the thousands. A man's two-piece silk suit ranges from $500 to $1,000.

Add to that the cost of caring for silk — though no one's sure how much that concerns the customer. Sears, Roebuck and Co. says it's lots, Filene's in Boston isn't so sure.

Sears plans to have just one silk item in its retail stores around the country this fall. It is a silk blouse selling for under $25.

"Our customers can't relate to anything priced higher than that," a spokeswoman said. "But the important thing is that our customers prefer items that don't have to be dry cleaned. They prefer something that can be put in the washing machine."

Filene's also has silk items priced slightly lower than the more expensive specialty stores. Blouses sell for $30 to $40 but can go as high as $150 if they carry a designer label.

"About two years ago, there wasn't much around in silk," said Donna Carhart, Filene's ready-to-wear fashion director. "Then, silk became an in-fabric because it drapes so well. At first there was customer resistence to silk because of the care and price. But now, that doesn't matter. It's all a part of the return to natural fibers."

DEAR ABBY

Most girls prefer boys to use 'slow approach' on first date

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old male with a problem. On the first date with a girl, I feel no irresistible urge to kiss her or to make out with her as is expected of most guys now days. I feel that I should get to know the girl better in order to be certain of my feelings toward her.

It seems that most girls expect a guy to do more than just talk or hold hands even before they know him very well. Is my slow approach normal and something to be desired? Or should I go ahead and jump all over a girl as is expected? I'm sure many boys my age are wondering the same thing and we'd be greatly relieved of much pressure if we knew how to act.—UNCERTAIN

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Who said "all" girls expect a guy to jump all over them on the first date? My mail tells me that most girls prefer the "slow approach," and I recommend it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him Frank) and I are in our late 20s, have been married four years and have a 2-year-old daughter I'll call Tammy.

Frank has always had a rotten temper. Well, last week he got mad and slapped me around and I cried. Tammy was in the room at the time and saw it all, and now Tammy won't have anything to do with her father. When he comes near her, she turns her head away and cries. If he tries to touch her, she screams and draws away.

This hurts Frank something terrible. I keep telling him that Tammy will forget and get over it in time. Will she?—RHODE ISLAND RED

DEAR RED: Tammy may, in time, become more "forgiving"——but don't count on her to forget.

In the meantime, unless you enjoy being slapped around, insist that Frank get some professional help in learning how to control his temper. A man who "slaps" his wife around has serious problems.

DEAR ABBY: My wife is one of those women who knows everything. And her most thorough area of knowledge is what "most" husbands do and do not do, although I can't for the life of me figure out where she gets all her information.

The specific question at the moment is who should shampoo the rugs—the husband or the wife?

We have an electric "shampooer" that is no heavier to push around than the average vacuum cleaner, so it's not too hard for her to operate.

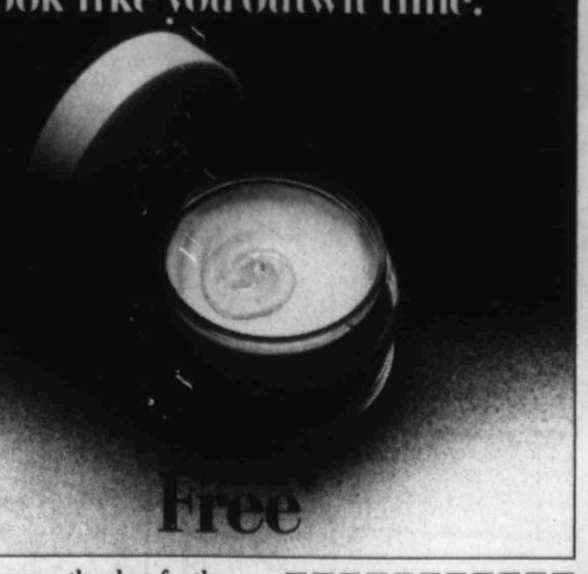

I am employed full time. My wife is not employed outside the home. Our three children are in school all day. We live in a well-furnished house with all the modern conveniences. My wife insists that I should shampoo the rugs because "most" husbands do. Do they?—DENVER DUDE

DEAR DUDE: I can't speak for "most" husbands, and neither can your wife. But what "they" do should have no bearing on who does what in your home. Instead of working yourself into a lather over this seemingly trivial problem, why not take turns?

CONFIDENTIAL TO M. M.: If you want your children to turn out well, spend twice as much TIME with them, and half as much MONEY.

Nuclear plant decommissioning 'hot' subject for San Diego talks

By PAUL JACOBS
The Los Angeles Times

SAN ONOFRE, Calif. — Sunbathers in the year 2027 may stake claim to the site of what is now the San Onofre nuclear power plant south of San Clemente in Orange County about 60 miles south of Los Angeles.

But not until the utility companies that own it have spent more than $85 million (in 1978 dollars) to "decommission" the plant — a process that requires removing all traces of nuclear fuel, "mothballing" the plant for 17 years while radiation levels drop, removing structures and their foundations, and then filling in the resulting holes with 12 feet of sand.

Such estimates of the cost of cleaning up after nuclear power plants are becoming commonplace in an industry that has been attacked for underestimating the true costs of nuclear power by not taking final cleanup into account.

Calculating the cost of decommissioning nuclear power plants was the subject of a series of talks at the annual meeting of the American Nuclear Society in San Diego this week.

The cost of liquidating the first generating unit at San Onofre is likely to be much higher than plants in other locations and circumstances.

(The U.S. Navy leased 84 acres for the power plant on the condition that the site be restored and all structures removed by 2027 when the lease expires.)

But even under the worst of circumstances, the nuclear scientists say, the cost of decommissioning a plant is small when compared to the cost of operating a utility and can be absorbed comfortably into the rates charged consumers.

The Southern California Edison Co., which owns 80 percent of San Onofre, has asked the state Public Utilities Commission to allow the company to put aside $2 million a year for 18 years to provide for some of the cost of decommissioning the power plant. The San Diego Gas and Electric Co. owns the remaining 20 percent.

But the PUC has not yet decided how it will handle decommissioning costs or the tax benefits that utilities will gain by writing off those costs.

A large nuclear plant dismantled soon after it stopped generating power would cost no more than $74 million to decommission, said Thomas LaGuardia, an executive with Nuclear Energy Services of Danbury, Conn. Others peg the maximum costs somewhat higher.

Over the six years required to complete the demolition of a plant, the costs would add only 1 percent to expenditures of a utility with annual revenues of $575 million, LaGuardia said.

That expense is "insignificant," he said, adding that it makes little sense for state utility commissions to require that money be set aside before demolition actually begins.

And many plants will be able to be removed from service and cleaned up by simply "entombing them" — sealing up their radioactive remains at the existing site.

Entombment is less expensive than the complete dismantling and restoration required at San Onofre.

In a talk at the society conference, LaGuardia estimated the cost of entombing a 1,000-megawatt plant at $16 million.

But many plants will require some combination of decontamination and demolition. In those cases, money can be saved by waiting several years after power generation has ended to do removal work.

The long wait allows the natural decay of irradiated materials to lower the levels of radioactivity.

After a 108-year dormant period it would be possible to set up equipment for removing a nuclear reactor vessel without using remote control devices, at a saving of $1 million or more, LaGuardia said.

By then the radioactivity levels outside the central reactor vessel will be low enough to allow a man using lead shielding to work there, he said.

The nuclear age is less than four decades old — young enough that experience with dismantling and decontaminating old plants is not extensive.

In the United States, at least 27 plants have been closed down, but only one of them, a small demonstration plant in Minnesota, has been completely dismantled.

The others have been decontaminated — cleaned of their nuclear fuel and waste but still contaminated by radioactivity that is deposited during the life of a plant.

The figures for decommissioning the first San Onofre generating unit were completed last year by the NUS Corp. of Rockville, Md.

The calculations considered the detailed costs of decontaminating the plant, guarding it for 17 years and then dismantling it, according to R. Jon Stouky, manager of radioactive waste projects for NUS.

Until 2027, when the plant site is cleared of all structures and filled in with sand, the two utilities that own it will continue to be bound by their license from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Lee High graduate earns silver wings of Air Force pilot

Second Lieutenant Alan J. Pryor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert J. Pryor of Midland, has received his silver wings following graduation from Air Force pilot training at Vance Air Force Base in Oklahoma.

Pryor, a 1972 graduate of Lee High School and a 1976 graduate of Texas Tech University, now is undergoing three months of advanced training at Randolph Air Force Base at San Antonio after which he will begin a three-year tour of duty as an instructor pilot at Williams AFB in Arizona. He will be instructing in the supersonic T-38 Talon.

During the recent graduation ceremonies at Vance AFB, Pryor was one of several new pilots singled out for recognition of special achievements. Pryor received the Air Training Command's Top Flying Award. The "Top Stick" award was made by Brig. Gen. John P. Rollston, inspector general of the Air Training Command, and by Col. Thomas J. Magner, commander of the 71st Flying Training Wing at Vance.

China's top leader to make European trip this summer

Agence France-Presse

PEKING — China's top leader, Communist Party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng will make his first European trip to Romania and Yugoslavia, near the end of summer, an informed diplomatic source said here Thursday.

The Communist Party leader and premier will stop off in Iran, either at the beginning or the end of the tour, the source said, quoting Chinese officials. The tour probably will take place in late August or early September, the source said.

There has been no official Chinese confirmation of this European tour, which has been rumored here during the past few weeks.

Chairman Hua's visit to North Korea at the beginning of May, which amply demonstrated the good relations between the two countries, was his first foreign trip and also the first by a head of the Chinese Communist Party since 1957, observers said.

The coming visits coincide perfectly with Chinese priorities and the importance of Romania and Yugoslavia in China's foreign relations, in view of the cooling between China and Albania since the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung in 1976.

China has maintained excellent party-to-party relations with Romania, since Peking's schism with Moscow in the early 1960s and the general chilling of its relations with other East European countries.

Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu has paid three official visits to Peking, the last one in May.

During that visit, China, eager to modernize its economy, signed a long-term economic and technical agreement with Romania, and there have been more exchanges of delegations between the two countries, particularly industrial and militry ones.

Chairman Hua's visit to Yugoslavia will seal the normalization of Sino-Yugoslav relations, long tense because of ideological choices made by Belgrade.

Yugoslav leader Josip Broz Tito was for a long time attacked in Peking as the father of "modern revisionism."

However, China's new foreign policy positions after the death of Chairman Mao resulted in President Tito's historic visit to Peking in August and September last year.

At the end of the visit, President Tito annouced that Chairman Hua had accepted an invitation to visit Yugoslavia at "an appropriate date."

The two countries decided to increase their exchanges in all fields, especially trade, but the most spectacular development was the normalization of relations between the Chinese Communist Party and the Yugoslav League of Communists.

China is interested in Yugoslavia and Romania because of their policies of independence toward Moscow.

Unconfirmed reports suggested that General Yang began to work out a military cooperation plan concerning arms manufacture while in Belgrade.

Bell expected to issue reminder on aliens

By FRANK DEL OLMO
The Los Angeles Times

At the request of Latino leaders, Attorney general Griffin Bell will issue a formal statement later this week reminding local police agencies that they are not authorized to enforce U.S. immigration laws, the Los Angeles Times learned Wednesday.

Bell agreed to issue the statement during a meeting in Washington, D.C., with members of the congressional Hispanic Caucus.

Latino activists throughout the country have alleged recently that, with growing public concern about illegal aliens, many local police departments have taken it upon themselves to seek out and detain suspected illegal immigrants for deportation by U.S. immigration officials.

The congressmen told Bell that because local police lack knowledge of U.S. immigration law and procedures, they often harass Latino citizens or legal residents in their zeal to track down illegal aliens.

The Hispanic Caucus warned Bell that this has created an "extremely explosive situation" in some cities between local police and Mexican-Americans, Puerto Ricans and other Latino citizens.

A spokesman for Bell said Wednesday that the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Justice Department has had a long-standing policy that local lawmen should not try to enforce immigration statutes.

But the members of the Hispanic Caucus "thought it would be helpful for the attorney general to emphasize that it is a national policy, and he is willing to do that."

He said the policy statement was being drafted by Bell's staff and should be made public by Friday.

Other participants in the meeting Tuesday between Bell and the Latino congressmen were the chief counsels of the Mexican-American and Puerto Rican Legal Defense and Education Funds, two national public interest law firms.

MALDEF's general counsel, Vilma Martinez, said Wednesday that Bell's decision represented an "extremely important development" in the area of Latino community-police relations.

"It will emphasize to local police that they should not run around trying to enforce immigration laws which they know nothing about," she said in a telephone interview from her San Francisco office.

Miss Martinez said MALDEF and other civil rights groups have received many complaints in recent months from Chicano groups alleging that local policemen are harassing Mexican-Americans while looking for illegal aliens.

(Most police departments in Los Angeles County follow the lead of the Los Angeles Police Department, which advises its officers that persons are not to be detined or arrested solely on suspicion of being in the country illegally. If an undocumented alien is arrested in the course of a criminal investigation, however, he is turned over to INS.

(Police detention of suspected illegal aliens has been a more sensitive issue in Orange County, where police in Santa Ana, Brea and other cities were criticized by Chicanos when they asked for the authority to question persons as to their immigration status.

(The Santa Ana request was watered down by the City Council. The Brea inquiry led the state attorney general to issue a legal opinion last year stating that local police cannot arrest persons solely on suspicion of violating immigration laws.)

Trucking 'deregulation' would have serious safety side-effects

WASHINGTON — Substantial economic deregulation of the trucking industry could have a serious side-effect on highway safety, according to an extraordinary survey of some 12,000 truckers.

According to the study by Harvard Business School professor Daryl Wyckoff, the results "could very realistically be used to show that continued economic regulations would be in order, and raises questions about the unregulated sector."

Perhaps the most alarming revelation in the responses to the detailed 4-page questionnaire is the correlation between economic regulation and driver safety.

"There is in fact a significant correlation between economic regulation and motor carrier safety," says Dr. Wyckoff. "When you look at these figures that is the only conclusion you can reach."

Wyckoff's survey, which was equally divided among owner-operators and company drivers, shows that drivers working for regulated carriers drive slower and are considerably more likely to follow safety rules because they are usually watched by the firms they work for.

For example, the study shows that exempt drivers who are not regulated, cruise at an average of about 63 mph, while the average cruising speed for regulated drivers is about 59.5 mph.

In addition, exempt drivers reported that they had been ticketed for moving violations almost twice as many times as regulated drivers.

"There is a lot of argument today over whether or not economic regulation is sufficient," Wyckoff said in a telephone interview. "We have discovered that is the effective way of enforcing safety regulations."

Part of the reason the regulated carriers do better on safety satistics is the fact that they are better paid than most independents, Wyckoff says.

"Where drivers make enough, they can afford to be safe," he says. "Under the regulated environment they can afford to be safe, while many of the unregulated cannot."

Among the most ignored federal safety rules are the "hours of service" rules, which requires that a driver may work only 10 continuous hours and then must have eight uninterrupted hours of rest. Enforcement of those rules is based on an honor system, and periodic checking of log books kept by drivers.

"The results of our survey show clearly that voluntary compliance is working relatively well in the case of regulated common carriers." Wyckoff said, "while at the other end of the scale, safety rules are being blatantly circumvented."

Wyckoff called the results "a sad commentary on the enforcement procedures in the trucking industry." His figures show that about a third of the exempt drivers keep multiple log books — one showing their real hours and the others showing hours that would be in compliance with safety laws.

Almost half of the exempt drivers told Wycoff that they "regularly" drive beyond the 10-hour limit, while only about 10 percent of the more regulated drivers say they did.

Federal motor carrier safety regulation is handled by a branch of the Department of Transportation called the Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety, under the Federal Highway Administration.

Wyckoff points out that his study produced results in direct contradiction to BMCS data that regulated carriers have higher accident rate figures than non-regulated carriers.

In the Harvard study, exempt drivers reported having almost three times the number of accidents as regulated carrier drivers.

A highly respected researcher, Wyckoff took great pains to insure the objectivity of his study, which was sent to 65,000 people. Considerating the size of the questionnaire (178 questions) the 12,000 responses to a special post office box represented "a tremendous turnout," he said.

The survey showed younger drivers also relying more heavily on pep pills. He said 34 pecent of the under-25-year-old drivers used amphetamines, while 27 percent of the 25-50 odds and 9 percent of the over-50's said they used "uppers."

One alarming fact uncovered by the survey, Wyckoff said, was the number of drivers who admitted to having fallen asleep on the road while driving with hazardous materials (2.5 percent said "regularly," 1.6 percent said "sometimes.") Oddly enough, drivers who said they did not transport hazardous materials said they fell asleep fewer times than those who transported dangerous substances.

But the major lesson of the study is that the best weapon of enforcement of truck safety standards we have is the present economic regulation, Wyckoff said.

"Before we deregulate anything, we better come up with an effective means of enforcing safety," he said.

Dolly Parton look-alike contest slated for Cow Creek cooking bash

WAXAHACHIE, Texas (AP) — For those who like to keep abreast of such events, the third annual Cow Creek Cabrito Cooking Championship will feature a Dolly Parton look-alike contest this weekend.

For the great unwashed, cabrito is a well-known Texas and south-of-the border delicacy — cooked goat meat.

For the greater unwashed, Dolly Parton is well known for her song writing, singing and just plain breathing.

"Contestants in the Dolly Parton Look-Alike event will only be heavily judged on a couple of major points," says Del McLane, the Supreme Allied Goat Commander. "However, singing is not required and its not necessary to have a sister named Stella."

Any Yankee who shows up and can pronounce Waxahachie (Wawks-uh-ha'-chee) correctly may get in free.

She was just the quiet lady who lived next door

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — She is among the little-noticed persons who live in Washington — squirreled away in apartments and houses, often in suburbs. Friendly, but not too friendly; liked by the neighbors, but not really known. Someone who comes and goes for years at a time.

And then, suddenly, the morning newspaper arrives and there she is, staring stoically out of a front page, looking not at all like a next-door neighbor.

She is now charged, one year later by the Russians, with transporting poison used to kill an unidentified person while she was in Moscow last summer. She is not the Foreign Service officer she said she was. Official Washington sources confirm: She was a CIA agent, Martha D. (Marty) Peterson. A mystery woman. As they say in the trade, it was apparently an extremely good cover.

In some two dozen interviews with people who knew Marty Peterson in Russia and in her middle-class suburban neighborhood five miles from CIA headquarters, there is surprise over Peterson's second life.

"One of the great exercises while in Moscow was to try to find out who were CIA among the F.S.O.s," says one American living in Moscow. "I can't recall anyone who ever even imagined Marty, which makes me think now, 'Boy she must have been a good one.'"

A Falls Church, Va., neighbor, whose garden court townhouse faces Peterson's, said, "I just couldn't believe it. That picture doesn't look anything like her."

There was nothing convert about 33-year-old Peterson's personality — the adjectives used over and over to describe her are "wholesome, outgoing, an All-American type, good-natured, ladylike, vivacious, ebullient, friendly." The kind, one Moscow co-worker said, "who could get excited about a checker game." Played a piano-organ combination at parties, waved hello in the embassy snack bar to people she had met but once, offered Falls Church neighbors rides home from the grocery store. The neighbor who sunbathed in her balcony and asked the teen-ager to cut the lawn.

About 5 feet 7, not fat but a bit hefty, with frosted-blond hair. Quite glamorous when she dressed up. Athletic. A green-belt in Tae Kwon do, a Korean martial art. Referred to herself as "Mrs. Peterson."

Then comes the stunning realizaton that these people know virtually nothing concrete about this woman described as wholesome, friendly, outgoing, good-natured. Not where she went to school, the name of her parents, where she grew up, her maiden name, what she did before she went to Moscow.

Oh yes, there is this one thing.

Mentioned by nearly everyone — even those who say, "I barely know her at all." It was a tragedy in her life. Her husband was a Navy pilot, killed in Laos in 1973. The source is always the same. Marty Peterson. One former CIA agent knows a man who says he saw Marty and her husband together in Laos. He does not know the first name of the husband.

A computerized check of Depatment of Defense casualties reveals no Navy pilot by the name of Peterson, nor anyone by that name in any other branch, killed in action or accidentally in Southeast Asia.

The Pentagon is now checking its files to confirm preliminary investigations which indicate that he is a John Peterson who served in the Army Special Forces — from 1967 to 1969.

The alleged episode of Marty Peterson's cloak-and-dagger-espionage is generally viewed as a retaliatory response to recent American disclosures that Soviet eavesdropping gear had been secreted within the U.S. embassy in Moscow. It also seems to be linked to the arrest in New Jersey of two Soviet citizens accused of espionage.

Houston meeting today on alleged redlining

HOUSTON (AP) — The Senate subcommittee on consumer affairs will meet here Friday to hear testimony about the alleged reluctance of lenders to make inner city home loans — a practice known as "redlining."

"In the absence of credit, a neighborhood can deteriorate when prospective homeowners cannot obtain mortgages and current residents cannot obtain home improvement loans," said Sen. Ron Clower, subcommittee chairman.

"When this occurs," Clower added in a statement, "the tax base of the city may be eroded, businesses vital to the health of the community may flee, and public services may disintegrate to the point where frustrated families would have no choice but to leave the neighborhood."

The hearing is scheduled for 10 a.m. at the University of Houston student center.

CROCKETT WELL

James L. Lamb Jr. of Midland No. 3-26 University is a new oiler in the Howard Draw, Northeast (San Andres) pool of Crockett County.

It completed for a daily pumping potential of 8 barrels of 32.7-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio too small to measure, through perforations from 1,442 to 1,526 feet.

The pay was acidized with 1,000 gallons.

Total depth is 1,565 feet and the plugged back depth is 1,553 feet.

Location is 330 feet from north and 2,319 feet from west lines of section 26, block 30, Universty Lands survey. It is 16 miles northwest of Ozona.

IRION WELI

Union Texas Petroleum Corp. of Midland No. 4-56 Farmer has been completed in the Rock Pen (Canyon oil) pool of Irion County, 5.5 miles west of Mertzon.

Operator reported a daily flowing potential of 138 barrels of oil and 24 barrels of water, through a 15/64-inch choke and perforations from 7,146 to 7,170 feet and from 7,188 to 7,198 feet.

The pay was acidized with 5,000 gallons and fractured with 60,000 gallons.

Total depth is 7,550 feet and 5.5-inch pipe is set on bottom.

Location is 1,829 feet from south and 1,912 feet from east lines of section 56, block 1, H&TC survey.

ELLENBURGER WELL

Gulf Oil Corp. has finaled potential test for its No. 3-VE State, flowing well two miles southeast of Barnhart in Irion County.

The well, assigned to the Irion 163 (Ellenburger) pool, is one location northwest and southwest of other production in the six-well field.

On 24-hour potential test it made 447 barrels of 44.7-gravity oil, plus 50 barrels of water, through a 13/64-inch choke and perforations from 8,662 to 8,698 feet and 8,702 to 8,748 feet. Gas-oil ratio is 257-1. Operator acidized with 64,000 gallons.

Wellsite is 1,980 feet from south and 760 feet from west lines of section 5, blockT40, University Lands survey.

Penn pool gains well, project

Dorchester Exploration, Inc., of Midland announced location for a 7,-600-foot project 1.5 miles northeast of the Conger (Pennsylvanian) area of Sterling County.

It is No. 1-28 Westbrook, 1,420 feet from north and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 28, block 13, SPRR survey and 4.5 miles south of Sterling City.

GLASSCOCK WELL

Wagner & Brown of Midland No. 1 Edmundson has been completed in the Glasscock County portion of the Conger (Pennsylvanian) pool.

On 24-hour potential, through a 4/64-inch choke and perforations from 8,155 6o 8,536 feet, the well made 14 barrels of 40-gravity oil and 11 barrels of water. The gas-oil ratio is 17,714-1.

Opertor acidized the pay with 500 gallons and fractured with 48,500 gallons,.

Total depth is 9,800 feet and 4.5-inch casing is set at 8,744 feet. The plugged back depth is 8,703 feet.

WINKLER TEST

Gifford, Mitchell & Wisenbaker No. 1 Two Moons will be drilled as a 3,300-foot project in the Cheyenne (Capitan) area of Winkler County, seven miles northwest of Kermit. It is 900 feet west of production.

The location is 340 feet west of the southeast corner of section 16, and 122 feet north of scrap file 13022, and in section 2, block WF2.

COKE WILDCAT

Rankin Oil Co. of Midland No. 1 Calla Mae is a 6,800-foot wildcat in Coke County, 7.5 miles east of Silver.

Location is 660 feet from southand east lines of section 301, block 1-A, H&TC survey. Elevation is 2,185 feet.

The site is 5/8 mile southwest of the north portion of the Arledge (Pennsylvanian sand and Odom lime) pool.

The operator will attempt to reopen the San Bendito (Ellenburger oil) area.

It is No. 1-B I. W. Rogers, 467 feet from southeast and 3,100 feet from southwest lines of James B, Shaw survey No. 540.

The location is 1/2 mile north of the operators No. 1-F V. Merfeld, active project, and one mile north of the Cold Duck (Gardner sand) field.

NOLAN OFFSET

Frank W. Biurger of Abilene staked No. 1-A B. Sproul as an east offset to production in the six-well JMR (Strawn) pool of Nolan County, 3.5 miles south of Sweetwater.

The 6,250-foot test is 467 feet from north and 700 feet from west lines of section 74, block 22, T&P survey.

6,000-FOOT TEST

Master Drilling Co., Inc., of Abilene No. 2 Exxon-Walker will be dug as a 6,000-foot wildcat in Coke County, three miles east of Silver.

It is 1,787 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 305, block 1-A, H&TC survey.

The site is one and one-eighth miles northeast of the depleted Bloodworth, North (5650 Canyon oil) pool.

Soviets secretly urged use of oil against West

The Washington Post

LONDON — The Soviet Union was secretly urging leaders of Arab nations to use oil as a weapon against the West more than six years before the embargo and price explosion that helped end a quarter-century of unrivaled prosperity.

Meeting in Moscow on July 17, 1967, Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin told the chiefs of Algeria and Iraq that Arab oil could "split the ranks of the imperialists" and "create great political problems" for the United States, and its allies. He urged them to set up an oil subcommittee of foreign ministers to study this tatic.

Neither Prime Minister Houari Boumedinne of Algeria nor President Abdul Aref of Iraq appeared much interested at that time. They had gone to Moscow representing the Arab states to seek Soviet support for a continued war against a freshly triumphant Israel. But the seeds Kosygin planted bore fruit in the Middle East in 1973, and Western nations are still struggling with the consequences.

An account of the Soviet strategy appears in Friday's Ad-Dastour, an Arab-language weekly printed in London. The magazine obtained unofficial but near-verbatim minutes of the meeting from Abdul-Majid Farid, who was the Cabinet chief of then-Egyptian President Nasser and is now a key aide to Boumedienne in Algiers.

Farid, who was in London recently, said in an interview that the account was rcorded by an Arab minister who was present at the Moscow meeting. It was then given to Nasser as a report of the conversations.

Farid has also been publishing in Ad-Destour the official and hither-to secret minutes of other 1967 meetings betwen Nasser and the Russians in the wake of the six-day war. That conflict shattered Egypt's army and cost it most of its Soviet-made arms.

In June and July 1967, Nasser met endlessly with fellow Arab leaders and Russian officials, Farid said. Nasser sought not only huge quantities of weapons, but also direct Soviet participation in Egypt's air defense.

Minutes show that the Russians were willing to supply arms but rejected the proposal to supply Russian fighting forces to the Mideast conflict.

Kosygin told them:

"I think that your big mistake is believing that if we send you 50 pilots or 1,000 soldiers you will achieve victory. This is not thinking clearly.

"If we send you troops, then America and Britain will also send their troops to Israel . . . I do not mean to say that we are afraid, but we should think seriously about the results before they become critical.

Then Kosygin added:

"I have recently learned that an Arab foreign ministers' conference will soon be held. I wish this conference would set up a subcommittee on oil. Try to split the ranks of imperialists on the oil question by supporting one country against another, and follow the same policy on ecnomic concessions (presumably, concessions to exploit oil) for America and the West in Arab countries.

"You can create great political problems for them, and you should make great use of these problems . . .

"You should start to move against imperialism from a strong, not a weak, position.

Explorers scheduled

A trio of wildcats have been staked in West Texas counties.

The Wil-Mc Oil Corp. of Dallas No. 1 Pet-Co is to be drilled as a 6,300-foot explorer in Kent County, 14 miles southwest of Spur.

Location is 3,107 feet from north and 3,300 feet from east lines of section 40, block 2, H&GN survey and one location northwest of a 7,870-foot dry hole. It is one and one-eighth mile southeast of the Gar-Kent (Strawn) pool.

MOTLEY TEST

Perkins-Prothro Co. of Wichita Falls announced location for a rank wildcat in Motley County, 13 miles east of Matador,.

Scheduled as No. 1-R Swenson, it will be drilled to 6,500 feet, 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 16, D. M. Harris survey, abstract 1198.

DAWSON EXPLORER

Cotton Petroleum Corp. of Midland No. 1 Page will be drilled as a 12,000-foot wildcat in Dawson County, 10 miles northwest of Lamesa.

Drillsite is 1,600feet from north and 1,320 feet from east lines of lot 1, section 6, block 3, D. L. Cunningham survey. It is one location northwest of the Wells (Devonian) pool.

Elevation is 3,051 feet.

76 strikes reported

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Wildcatters made successful hits at 23 oil explorations and 53 gas tests from June 1 to June 15, the Texas Railroad Commission reported Thursday.

The commission's oil and gas division said there were 428 oil completions and 264 gas completions in the first half of June 1978, compared to 399 oil and 162 gas completions in the same period last year.

From June 1-15, 201 exploratory and field tests were dry holes.

Scientists recommend increased use of sun

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Scientists from around the world ended a week-long conference on solar energy Thursday by recommending increased use of sun power in developing countries.

Position papers submitted by the 400 participants from 50 countries covered topics ranging from solar-powered greenhouses for desert agriculture to a space station to collect the sun's rays and beam them back to earth.

Dr. Tarek M. Khalil, of the University of Miami (Fla.), said developing countries should prepare now to tap the sun's energy "so that whenever the economics of solar become feasible ... immediate implementation can take place." He said more research is needed before widespread use of solar power will be possible.

Many scientists wrote papers stressing that supplies of fossil fuels such as oil, gas, coal and uranium are rapidly running out.

Drs. Nejat Veziroglu and Sadi Kakac, also of the University of Miami, said if one percent of the earth's surface were covered with solar collectors, the amount of energy produced "would support the world equilibrium population of 11 billion people with a quality of life 10 times better than today's."

Dr. Ibrahim Sakr, Egyptian co-chairman of the conference, said Egypt could save 16 million tons of the 120 million tons of fossil fuel it consumes a year by heating water in homes with solar power. He said Egypt will begin producing solar water-heating units within six months and will manufacture 12,-000 a year.

Another Miami scientist, Dr. Homer Hiser, suggested solar space stations should be used to beam sun rays back to the ground via a microwave antenna.

"The microwave beam would permit all-weather transmission so that full use could be made of nearly 24 hours of available solar energy," he said.

He said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is investigating the idea to see if the microwave beams would have harmful side effects.

"This beam would have no effect on humans or on large animals such as cows, but we still don't know yet about insects, lizards and worms," Hiser said.

Field work announced

J. Cleo Thompson No. 1-B C. E. Davidson III has been completed as a long extension to production in the Davidson Ranch (7890 Pennsylvanian) pool of Crockett County, six miles east of Ozona.

Scheduled as a wildcat, it drilled to 8,870 feet and set 4.5-inch casing at 8,838 feet.

It finaled for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 300,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 7,863 to 7,933 feet.

The pay was acidized with 3,000 gallons. No fluid was reported with the gas.

Location is 467 feet from south and 990 feet from east lines of section 52, block GH, GC&SF survey.

LAWRENCE WELL

C. F. Lawrence & Associates, Inc., of Midland No. 2-65-E Halff has been completed in the east side of the Onlaw (Queen) field of Crockett County, eight miles south of Iraan.

The well finaled don the pump for 49 barrels of oil per day, with a gas-oil ratio of 370-1. The gravity of the oil is 32 degrees.

Administration not sure about missing artworks

By WARD SINCLAIR
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Semantics are the nuts and bolts of the Big Washington Game, but no one is smiling over this one — 257 works of art owned by John Q. Public are among the missing.

Missing, in the view of the National Collection of Fine Arts, is not the right word. Nor is "unlocated." Nor is "purloined" or any word like that.

Semantics aside, it is believed the art works are somewhere in the White House, in the Executive Office Building next door, across the street at Blair House, or out in the Maryland countryside at Camp David.

But no one knows for certain and that is the problem.

The problem was brought to light by the National Journal, a govenmental-affairs weekly, which raised the possibility that at least some of the NCFA's art works may have found their way into the private collections of former White House employees.

And some in the present administration have even gone so far as to imply the same thing, that the paintings went the way of their admirers — out.

The absence of the 257 works of art, mostly paintings, was discovered when officials of the NCFA began a review of loans made to presidential staffers since 1929.

According to the NCFA, 1,930 pieces of art have gone on loan to the White House and environs. All but the 257 are accounted for.

NCFA rejects the idea that they are lost, unfindable or any other synonym. But they are not certain.

"The word 'unlocated' implies that I or someone went over and conducted a thorough search. We have not done that, and until we have, I think "outstanding' is a better word," said Robert Johnston, the NCFA registar.

"Until we have had a chance to go and look, we can't say they are missing. It will take a long time and a lot of prying into closets," he said.

Does NCFA intend to make a formal request to gain access to those security-tight hallways of the executive complex?

"I don't see how we can avoid making a formal request," Johnston said.

Joshua Taylor, director of the NCFA, described the situation in another way. He said the list of 257 was an "innocent" inventory of works "that we are checking physically to determine present location and to re-lend or recall to the museum."

About the possibility of outright theft, he said: "We are resigned to the fact that some few...may have become so important to their borrowers that they went with them into retirement."

The inventory of the 257 works indicates that many of the works were intended for other than White House staff viewing. Among the borrowers were the CIA, the old Office of Economic Opportunity, the Council of Economic Advisers and the White House helicopters.

Among other borrowers named on the list are former presidents Truman and Nixon, and former vice-presidents Agnew and Rockefeller.

Johnston said that in those cases the NCFA records indicate the names of staff assistants to whom the paintings were loaned and that they could possibly be traced that way.

Johnston, assistant NCFA Director Harry Lowe and others at the museum, a branch of the Smithsonian Institution, contended that part of their problem is that Clement Conger, the White House art curator, isn't being very cooperative.

They said NCFA has asked Conger for help in tracking down the art, but the help has not been forthcoming. "The curator will take no responsibility to help us," Lowe said.

Conger is out of the country on vacation, but Betty Monkman, registrar in his office, said assistance has been promised in looking for paintings in the White House.

"We've said we can't control things in the EOB and we can't take responsibility for the art works there," she said.

The National Journal reported that, near the end of the Nixon administration, when NCFA became concerned that loaned objects were being neglected, it found pictures assigned to Nixon's helicopter were in fact in housing quarters for U.S. fliers.

Johnston said that since early 1977 a tighter loan and registration policy has been in effect at the museum. Any painting loaned to the White Hosue or its adjuncts since then has been signed for by its individual borrowers.

NCFA says it is unable to place a value on the "outstanding" paintings. But then, who knows what's missing?

The Washington Post

LIMA, Peru — The Peruvian government may once have had a friend at Chase Manhattan but the results of last Sunday's national election here clearly show that Chase Manhattan doesn't have many friends these days in Peru.

By an overwhelming two-thirds majority, Peruvians voted for left-of-center political parties that, during the election campaign at least, put costly social programs and theories far above repaying the $2.5 billion Peru owes to a consortium of European, Japanese and American banks, including Chase in New York.

Indeed, the election results indictate that a substantial majority of Peru's 16 million people are fed up with their current military government, the international debts it has incurred and the economic austerity measures it was forced to impose last month to avoid a massive international default.

Although the election results are still unofficial and incomplete, the patterns have emerged: the left-of-center Popular American Revolutionary Alliance (APRA) of Victor Raul Haya de la Toree was the big winner with close to 40 percent of the vote while the extreme left, composed of Marxist, Maoist, Trotskyite and assorted other socialist parties, came in second with 27 or 28 percent.

The conservative Popular Christian Party of Luis Bedoya Reyes came in a close third with 26 or 27 percent while assorted other centrist and conservative parties made up the rest.

The election was solely for a costituent assembly that President Francisco Morales Bermudez has said will only write a new constitution in preparation for general elections promised for late next year or 1980. But the polling also was designed to serve as a sort of national political thermometer after 10 years of military rule and 15 years without a nationwide election.

It appears to have been an accurate sampling and will be difficult for the current government to ignore. Unlike past elections here, not one of the 12 parties that participted last Sunday has charged any voting fraud.

The government harassed the extreme leftist parties — exiling 12 of their leaders, several of whom were candidates — last month after a two-day general strike called to protest the government's austerity measures. But it is difficult to know whether the official harassment helped or hurt the left.

On the one hand, several of the six parties that made up the extreme leftist bloc were without their most prominent leaders in the last weeks of thecampaign. Additional arrests may have hampered organizational efforts as well. On the other and, the harassment may have provoked a certain amount of sympathy for the ultra left and certainly drew more attention.

Diplomatic obervers here were saying last week that they expected the six extreme leftist parties to receive 15 to 20 percent of the vote. Anything more, they said, would be significant because Peruvians had never before strayed much beyond the moderately leftist — but democratic — ideas of Haya de la Toree's APRA Party.

Although APRA was considered to be quite radical when Haya founded it in 1924, it has, in recent years, occupied a centrist position as a younger generation of leftists — influenced by the Chinese and Cuban revolutions — moved the political spectrum farther to the left.

Nonetheless, while Haya, at 83, may have mellowed over the years and may have wound up closer to the center of the current spectrum, his victory will not necessarily make life any easier for the bankers intent upon collecting their principal and interest payments from Peru's depleted treasury.

During the campaign, Haya demonstrated an incredible agility — both physical and mental — of a man half his age. He attended mass rallies in every corner of Peru, spoke for half an hour at a clip and then thought nothing of sitting with his supporters in various APRA offices until 1 or 2 in the morning. Before the election, he spoke in eloquent generalities and fudged on specifics.

But early Tuesday morning, after his victory was assured, Haya, in an interview that lasted more than an hour was more specific. He said he hoped to be elected president of the constituent assembly when it begins work on July 18 and ruled out a coalition with Bedoya's Popular Christians to obtain a majority. Haya said he expects the assembly to be "sovereign with all thesolemnity of (Peru's suspended) congress" and added that the new constitution should guarantee "economic and social human rights" as well as politicalfreedoms.

Education shuld be free, public health should be within reach of all Peruvians, public transport should be vastly improved and the government should find jobs for the unemployed, he said.

While these ideas might not raise eyebrows in the United States or Europe, in Peru there remains the question of how to pay for increased social welfare programs — especially at a time when the country must use virtually all of its foreign exchange to pay its debts.

The bankers have warned Peru's current government that it must reduce itspublic spending if it wants to continue to borrow.

Haya talks of the need to restore confidence in Peru's economy to attract foreign investment. He also talks about increased social welfare. How he and the new constituent assembly balance the two should make life interesting over the next couple of years for Peru's friends at Chase Manhattàn and the other banks thatTwant their $2.5 billion back.

Latest television trends turn tables on old 'no news is good news' attitude

By JOHN CASHMAN
Newsday

NEW YORK — The First Law of Television ratings has always held that no news is good news. There is a movement afoot for repeal.

In something of a turnaround, reporting on what's happening in the world has suddenly become the latest minitrend in prime-time network programming. After years of neglect, news (or a modified form of it) has become the new hot commercial item.

Two of the networks, CBS and ABC, already have weekly, hour-long news-oriented shows in prime time, and NBC will join the ranks in September. Meanwhile, David Frost is doing six weekly "personality" shows on NBC that look suspiciously like a trial run for yet another marginal piece of relevance, and on ABC Barbara Walters continues with her occasional multi-interview shows with entertainers and newsmakers.

And, while not of prime-time significance, CBS has the monthly, women-oriented "Magazine" show on in the afternoon, and has set a half-hour, youth-targeted news show for Saturdays in the fall, called "30 Minutes." Also in the works is a syndicated early evening news show, which the Group W broadcast chain will launch in September. Columbia Pictures-TV already syndicates "Special Edition," hosted by Barbara Feldon, and WABC-TV here produces a news-format show called "You."

But it is the commercial prime-time involvement with news-style programming that has commanded attention. A cynic might describe it as television's singular talent for continually rediscovering the obvious, but, whatever the dynamics, down at network programming these days, the news is the news.

This paradoxical turn of events raises several interesting questions, all of which have the same answer: "60 Minutes."

"60 Minutes" on CBS is a news magazine show that has been around for more than 10 years. For most of those years, it was the answer to nothing, except, perhaps the inquiry as to which is the lowest rated prime-time show on the air. But this season, after a slow, three-year climb through the numbers, the program has been consistently in the top 10 rated shows, right up there with "Laverne and Shirley" and "Little House on the Prairie" and "Fantasy Island."

In television, such things not only are noticed, they quickly attain mystical significance. It's like reading chicken innards. A sign is a sign. And you don't mess with a sign, you ritualize it.

That is why ABC already has rushed "20-20" into its schedule, and that is why NBC, after hemming and hawing for a couple of years, is finally giving "Weekend" a regular slot on its fall roster.

A magazine news show, it should be explained, is not about what happened yesterday (the nightly straight news shows cover that), nor is it a one-subject-in-depth documentary (still a prime-time commercial no-no). It is, rather, a melange of short, to-the-point and, hopefully, informative and entertaining reports on whatever the producers consider timely, available and, most important, suitable to the medium, which translates to the ability to film it. "If we don't have pictures, we don't have a story," says "Weekend's" executive producer Reuven Frank. "This is television, not expensive radio."

But that doesn't explain "60 Minutes'" sudden rise to prominence.

"I'll give you thee reasons for our success," says Don Hewitt, the show's executive producer. "Mike Wallace, Morley Safer and Dan Rather.

The three, of course, are the show's on-air correspondents, each of whom, on most shows, handles one of three main segments usually featured.

"And I'll give you some more reasons," Hewitt continues. "The 19 CBS producers who turn out the stories for Mike, Morley and Dan. They are as good as any journalists, broadcast or print, in the world."

Adds NBC's Frank, who, like Hewitt, is firmly anchored in news and once produced his network's nightly news: "There are many reasons for the show's success, not the least of which is that it is a damn good show."

Bob Shanks, the executive producer of ABC's "20-20," which underwent radical surgery after a disastrous opening show recently, was unavailable for comment.

In any case, the success of "60 Minutes" cannot be entirely explained in terms of content and execution. It had several other things going for it that have absolutely nothing to do with news or with the quality of the show.

First and foremost, the program was allowed an unheard of period of time to find its audience. From its premier on Sept. 24, 1968, up to the 1974 season, "60 Minutes" hardly qualified, in terms of audience, as a success. It averaged about an 11 Nielsen rating (based on the number of TV sets in use), which placed the show consistently in the bottom 10 (out of some 60 or 70) programs on the air.

The numbers got better in the 1974-75 seasons and continued upwards until this season when it entered the top 10. The May 7 program, for example, had a 22.6 rating, good for seventh place. (The same week, it is interesting to note, the straight documentary "CBS Reports," which was featuring a story on Civil Service rip-offs of the taxpayers, was dead last in the ratings — 66th —Twith an 8.5 rating.)

There are two other external reasons for the climb of "60 Minutes" into the television firmament. One is the strong lead-in from Sunday professional football, which has occasionally forced a shortening or cancellation of theshow, but, nevertheless, has made the large football audience aware it was there. The second is the time period itself, which is mandated for eitherchildren's or public affairs broadasting. With ABC ("Hardy Boys-Nancy Drew") and NBC ("The Wonderful World of Disney") opting for children's programming, "60 Minutes" has the adult audience to itself.

The success of "60 Minutes," therefore, would seem to be the result of a unique set of complex circumstances, rather than its content alone. That leaves unanswered the question of whether ABC and NBC can duplicate the success of "60 Minutes" with an entirely different set of circumstances.

Hewitt, who stresses the internal strengths of his show, rather than its placement and long search for an audience, has his doubts about the success of the magazine news shows on the other two networks.

"To say that '60 Minutes' works, therefore the other shows will work, is like saying that because 'All in the Family' is a success, all you have to do is another show about a bigot who lives in Queens. It doesn't work that way," Hewitt said.

"I believe in execution. This is the varsity. If NBC could put David Brinkley and John Chancellor on its show, it would have something. But they don't have the bench strength that we do. Let me put it this way: we're playing hardball and they're playing softball."

Frank, for his part, thinks he's playing hardball — and with the varsity — on his "Weekend" show, which will be cut from its 90-minute format to an hour when it moves to prime time. ("Weekend," which is off the air for the summer, was originally seen one Saturday each month as a replacement for "Saturday Night Live.")

"I'll stand on our journalism record. All of us here have grown up in the news business. Lloyd Dobyns (the show's lone anchorman for the past four years) is one of the best writers in the business.

"Now we'll have Linda Ellerbee (over from network news) to share the load, otherwise Dobyns would never get out on a story. And the biggest reason we picked Ellerbee is that she was the only one who could write as well as Dobyns.

"This is, essentially, a writers' vehicle and I say, and I will prove, that we will do as well as any other show. The change in format means we will do four or five pieces each show, two of which will be documentaries with all the crap squeezed out. And we will still do lighter pieces, some of them heavier than our heavy pieces. But all of our pieces will tell you how people live.

"I've been in this business 30 years and with 'Weekend' for the last four, which got to be a comfortable rut. That's bad for the corpuscles. We're taking a chance by a going weekly and that is good for the corpuscles. And we can play in anybody's league."

Shanks, the only one among the three executive producers without a solid news background, has not had anyting to say about anything since the first "20-20" show was being put together a couple of weeks ago. After the initial show was aired, the reasons for Shanks' retreat into his bunker became apparent. The show, to be kind, had some problems. Roone Arledge, president of ABC News and Sports, summed it up this way: "I hated it."

Co-hosts Harold Hayes (a former Esquire editor with minimum television experience) and Robert Hughes (art editor for Time magazine with some television exposure) were quickly replaced by former "Today" host Hugh Downs, who immediately improved the tone of the second show just by being there. In addition, the circus-like format, which included inane banter, hysterically quick cuts, a couple of cheap-shot film reports, and a tasteless cartoon, was jettisoned in favor of a more decorous approach to the happenings of the day.

The second show was a vast improvement over the first, but that may not be saying much.

Shanks, who was more talkative before "20-20" became a reality, had not only promised that the show would be a blend of "60 Minutes," "Saturday Night Live" and the old "Omnibus" (which it may have been, given the infinite possibilities), but had also invoked the memory of Life and Look magazines:

"Our goal is to revive through electronic means the standards of excellence achieved in that great age of photojournalism and bring that kind of quality offering to the mass audience of prime-time television."

If execution is the game, as Hewitt says, then it would seem that Shanks is not playing to his strength.

The problems with "20-20" have given rise to some speculation about the firmness of network support for the two new magazine shows. At te moment, only "60 Minutes" is assured of a weekly slot. ABC and NBC are hedging their ratings bets by opening the season with their respective magazine shows on a "temporary" monthly schedule. NBC says "Weekend" will become a weekly entry in December, while ABC has said that "20-20," after going monthly in September, will revert to its weekly schedule next January.

Says Frank: "I have received absolute assurance that we will be on a weekly schedule starting in December. At least, that's what they tell me."

Catholic fight 'lax'

BOSTON (AP) — A Jesuit priest says American Catholics have been lax in fighting the growing tide of public obscenity and pornography.

The Rev. Paul J. Murphy, a Holy Cross College theologian and president of Morality in Media of Massachusetts, writes in Homiletic and Pastoral Review that "too few Catholics as citizens are standing up in public to confront the frightful foulness."

Jeff Hewes takes Canadian lead

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — "Sensational," said Jack Nicklaus.

"Unbelievable," said Lee Trevino.

The object of their comments was one of the pro golf tour's more unlikely heroes, Jeff Hewes, who slipped through a howling wind to a 4-under-par 67 and a 3-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of the $250,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

"I hope the wind keeps on blowing," grinned Hewes. "It just seems to go right by me."

He's 6-foot-3½ and said his listed weight of 146 isn't quite right. "I've lost some weight since then. I'm 139 now."

Hewes, 31, has attended the PGA Tour Qualifying School seven times. On four of those occasions he failed to gain his playing rights. He's had his card lifted twice because of poor play. This is his third attempt at it.

And he's assured of playing at least one more year. He's won some $14,000 this season, well above the minimum standards. Most of that — $9,000 — came off his victory in the Oklahoma City Open, a satellite event.

"It was real windy there, too," Hewes said. "I've never really considered myself a good wind player, but I think the key to it is patience. I've got a lot of patience. Anybody that's been to as many schools as I have has to have a lot of patience. In the wind, you just go along and try not to do anything real stupid."

The winds were 25-30 miles per hour and combined with the undulating greens to produce some of the highest scores of the year on the pro tour. Fifty players, approximately one-third of the field, shot 80 or higher.

Among them were Hubert Green, 81; Billy Casper, 81; Mark Hayes, 82, and Lon Hinkle, 80.

"The golf course was very difficult," said Nicklaus, who designed the 7,050-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club layout. "Under the conditions, it's hard to believe anyone could shoot the score Hewes had."

Arnold Palmer, who won his first professional title in this tournament 23 years ago, Terry Diehl and Ben Crenshaw were tied for second at 70. The group at par 71 included Mark Lye, Australian Bob Shearer and Jim Colbert.

Andy North, who won the U.S. Open last week, played his back nine in 40 but got in with a 72. "I'm playing pretty well right now. Why not go ahead and win two in a row?" he said.

Nicklaus birdied two of his last three holes for a 73 that he said "is a pretty good score." Defending champion Lee Trevino and Masters champ Gary Player each had a hard-won 74.

"Mercy, what a tough day," Trevino said.

Hewes said he has played well in the last two months since speeding up his pace of play.

"A couple of months ago I could be playing in a one-some and take four hours to finish a round," he said. "Now I could play it in two hours. The faster pace makes me have better concentration. I feel I can concentrate on each shot now. Before, I'd start losing concentration after about 12 holes."

Putting was the key to his round, however. He one-putted nine times and once chipped in for a birdie. He reeled off one string of four consecutive birds, two of them on 20-foot putts, and closed with a flourish, making a great save of par on the 17th and then dropping a 12-15 foot birdie putt on the 18th.

Gabriel's football career washed out by doctor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The professional football career of quarterback Roman Gabriel appears to be over, and the 37-year-old veteran is upset, to say the least.

"They've killed my career," said Gabriel, a 16-year National Football League veteran who flunked the Los Angeles Rams' physical examination and was placed on waivers. "I'm very disappointed. It's hard for me to be mad, but it's not easy to understand."

Gabriel, who hasn't been claimed on waivers by another NFL club and said he doesn't expect to be, wasn't given a physical examination by the Rams until June 7. He signed with the team as a free agent April 12.

It was made public this week that Gabriel had flunked the physical, primarily because of a problem with his right knee, a Rams' spokesman said. Gabriel has had a number of knee operations.

Gabriel said he breezed through all other parts of the physical until arriving at the office of Dr. Robert Kerlan, the Rams' team physician.

"The first thing he told me to do was my squat-downs," said Gabriel. "So I squatted down as far as I can squat, a little more than halfway on my right leg. He said, 'Oh, you have a problem squatting because of your leg ... arthritis. That's not good for a football leg.'

"Then he said, 'Your calf on your right leg that's supposed to be the bad leg is bigger than the calf on your left leg, the good leg. That's not good for a football player.'"

What bothers Gabriel the most is that he was cut in Kerlan's office, not on the playing field.

"He didn't come out to see what I can do, what I can lift with the leg, how much strength I have," said Gabriel. "Range of motion, that's the only limitation. I went out the other day and ran a 5.1 40. I know I'm physically fit because that's one thing I spend a lot of time on."

Diablos crush Midland's Cubs

EL PASO — The El Paso Diablos kept there hopes alive for a first half Texas League West Division championship here Thursday night with an 8-6 victory over the Midland Cubs.

Going into tonight's game with Midland, El Paso is tied with San Antonio for the first half lead, which ends Saturday night.

El Paso jumped to a 2-0 lead in the third inning off Midland loser Jeff Albert (2-6). Scott Moffitt started the damage with a single and Terry Stupy followed with a double. Orlando Ramirez then brought both of the runners home with a single up the middle.

Midland vaulted into a 4-2 lead in the top of the fourth when El Paso starter Dave Steck got into trouble by the walk route. Steck loaded the bases with two outs on walks to Kevin Drury, Brian Rosinski and Greg Keatley. Steck followed that with walks to Kurt Seibert and Steve Macko for two runs, and Joe Hernandez brought home two more with a hot single to left.

El Paso recaptured the lead in the bottom of the frame with a three-run uprising off Albert. Jay Peters brought the first run with a run scoring single and later Floyd Rayford hit a bases loaded single to score two more. El Paso then led by a 5-4 margin, and they were never behind again.

Moffitt hit his fifth homer of the year in the sixth for another run, and Bob Slater drove in Moffitt with an eighth inning run to complete the Diablos' scoring parade off Cubs' reliever Larry Groover.

Midland tried to get back in the game in the top of the eighth when they scored two runs. Seibert scored on a fielder's choice by Hernandez and Macko drove in Keatley with a key single, but the attack was too little.

Jack Ledbetter was scheduled to start Thursday's game, but he developed a sore arm just before taking the mound. Manager Jim Saul then told Albert he would pitch just minutes before game time.

El Paso now owns a 3-1 lead in the current series between the two teams. They play tonight and Saturday to end the first half. The second half race begins Monday when the Cubs travel to Amarillo for a five-game set with the Gold Sox.

San Antonio holds off Sox

By The Associated Press

Mickey Hatcher's first inning home run gave San Antonio an early lead, but the Dodgers had to hang on for a 6-5 Texas League baseball victory over the Amarillo Gold Sox Thursday night.

The victory kept San Antonio tied with El Paso for first place in the Texas League West.

In other action Thursday night, El Paso dumped Midland 8-6 while Arkansas skinned Jackson 3-2. Tulsa downed Shreveport 6-3.

Doug Slocum was the winning pitcher for San Antonio.

In Jackson, Bob Harrison hurled a six hitter in upping his record to 2-3 in going the distance. He was supported by Tommy Herr's three hits and two scores. Don Kainer notched his sixth win of the year against three losses in going the route in Tulsa's victory. Dave Rivera belted his sixth homer of the year.

In tonight's games, Midland is at El Paso while San Antonio is at Amarillo. Tulsa and Shreveport square off for a doubleheader, and Arkansas is at Jackson.

Talk of merger may come to end

By The Associated Press

Talk of a merger between the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association could come to an end one way or another sometime next week.

That is when the NHL's board of governors and representatives of four WHA clubs — the New England Whalers, Winnipeg Jets, Quebec Nordiques and Edmonton Oilers — will likely get together to hammer out remaining details of an NHL accommodation with the WHA.

Officials from both leagues are being very guarded in their comments on the matter. No one wants to say officially where and when the meetings will be held.

The WHA people do not want to get burned as they were last year when they went to the NHL to ask for a merger and returning empty handed. The NHL, meanwhile, is wary of U.S. antitrust laws.

Last June 24, it appeared that plans for accommodating six WHA teams were all set, but in early August, the WHA owners were shocked when NHL Commissioner John Ziegler said the NHL had decided not to expand and would go ahead with 18 teams. The WHA operated as an eight-team league last season.

There were some rumblings during the recent NHL meetings in Montreal that secret meetings were going on with NHL and WHA officials.

There have been reports that those WHA teams prepared to join the NHL would each put up $300,000 to start paying off the other WHA clubs who will not be included. They are also expected to hand over another $1 million each next week and by doing so, the excludedFclubs will not launcl any lawsuits against the NHL for invading WHA territory.

"This thing (merger) would be a great thing for hockey," Larry Gordon, a former WHA executive and now one of Edmonton's executives, said Thursday.

"We are not being led down the garden path," said Gordon. "It is quite evident that we are building a club that will be competitive in either league.

"We feel right now that with the 20 contracts we have, we'd have a team that would win the WHA championship hands down. We would have a competitive team if we were in the other league."

If the NHL decides to expand to include the WHA teams, it would take a three-quarters majority from the 17 members of the NHL's board.

Harold Ballard of the Toronto Maple Leafs, one of the people most opposed to the plan last summer, has been strangely silent this year. Little has been said by Paul Mooney, the president of the NHL's Boston Bruins or Jack Kent Cooke, the owner of the Los Angeles Kings, both opponents to the plans last year.

"We're a lot further ahead this year than we were at this time last year," one source said. "There are still some things to be done."

Spinks arrested again; this time for speeding

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Heavyweight boxer Leon Spinks has been arrested a second time in as many days, the latest ticket coming for speeding.

The newest citation, in which the 24-year-old fighter was charged with driving 45 miles an hour in a 20 mph zone Thursday, was the fifth traffic ticket he has received this year.

On Wednesday, Spinks was stopped by a city policeman for driving without a license and driving with an expired license plate. Officers said he told them he had a valid Michigan license but that they ticketed him for driving without it.

However, officials in Michigan said that Spinks has applied for a license but not been granted one yet.

In Detroit, Spinks' attorney, Ed Bell, said the fighter does have a temporary permit. He joked about the arrests.

"Leon should never drive by himself in Southern towns with a new Cadillac," Bell said.

Spinks told police he was leaving Jacksonville Thursday for Michigan to begin training for his Sept. 15 bout with Muhammad Ali.

In both cases here, he appeared before a magistrate and paid fines.

Spinks won the heavyweight crown from Ali on a split decision Feb. 15. He still holds the World Boxing Association title, but the World Boxing Council stripped Spinks of its version of the championship for allegedly backing out of an agreement to fight challenger Ken Norton.

Norton subsequently lost the WBC title to Larry Holmes.

Spinks has been ticketed three times for driving without a license and twice for speeding during the last four months.

He was arested in St. Louis in April on charges of possession of one hundredth of a gram of cocaine and a small quantity of marijuana and driving without a license. Spinks suggested then he had been framed. The drug charges were dismissed, but he was fined on the traffic citation.

He was arrested in St. Louis in March for driving without a license and driving the wrong way on a one-way street. A highway patrolman arrested Spinks in Beaufort County, S.C., last Saturday for speeding.

By The Associated Press

The last time he pitched, his opposite number was Tom Seaver — and the Cincinnati ace threw a no-hitter.

Thursday night, he ran into a hot Steve Carlton and the result was another tough loss for the St. Louis Cardinal pitcher.

"He pitched as good a game as I've seen since I took over (in April), including Tom Seaver's no-hitter," Cardinal Manager Ken Boyer said after a 2-1 loss to the Phillies. "With the stuff Denny had tonight, I wouldn't have been surprised if HE pitched a no-hitter."

Denny allowed only three hits, struck out five and walked none in a complete-game performance, but lost because the Cardinals' offense consisted only of Keith Hernandez's home run.

Carlton, meanwhile, allowed the Cardinals only six other hits as he gained his fourth victory in his last five starts, his eighth this year and No. 199 of his career.

"He had superb command of his pitches tonight," said catcher Tim McCarver. "He had total command."

McCarver compared Carlton with Don Drysdale, the former Los Angeles' Dodgers great and Seaver as a durable type year after year, who rarely misses a start and who is consistently effective.

"Carlton is so strong, tough to hurt," McCarver noted.

Garry Templeton's fourth-inning throwing error allowed an unearned run that gave the Phillies their victory. The Phillies led 1-0 in the fourth when Larry Bowa opened with a single and took second on a groundout. Greg Luzinski grounded to Templeton, who threw wild past first, allowing Bowa to score for a 2-0 Philadelphia advantage.

The unearned run became the clincher when Hernandez homered following an RBI single by Rich Hebner.

Reds 5, Giants 0

Bill Bonham and Manny Sarmiento combined on a three-hitter and Bonham belted a run-scoring single, helping Cincinnati beat San Francisco. Bonham was lifted after a one-out single and two walks loaded the bases for San Francisco in the seventh. Sarmiento took over and worked out of the jam, allowing just one hit the rest of the way for his fourth save.

The victory, the Reds' seventh in their last eight games, gave them the rubber contest of the three-game series and left them only one game behind the Giants in the West.

The Reds scored all runs the they needed with a two-run rally off Bob Knepper in the first, capped by George Foster's RBI single.

Astros 4, Dodgers 3

Enos Cabell's two-out, tie-breaking single in the ninth inning led Houston over Los Angeles. Joe Niekro scattered six Los Angeles hits to earn the victory. He allowed only three hits after the first inning, when the Dodgers scored twice on Dave Lopes' home run and a sacrifice fly by Dusty Baker.

In the Houston ninth, Terry Puhl walked with one out, Wilbur Howard sacrificed and Cabell followed with a single to center.

"It helped my confidence to battle back after the first inning," said Niekro, who entered the game with an inauspicuous 6.80 earned run average. "I hope this is my chance to get back in the rotation and do something. I can't say what I was doing wrong before. But at least now I'm getting them out."

Padres 2, Braves 0

Bob Owchinko combined with Rollie Fingers on a five-hitter to pitch San Diego over Atlanta. Owchinko struck out two and walked one through 7 2-3 innings before Fingers finished up to record his 16th save.

RBI singles by Ozzie Smith and Derrell Thomas produced all the runs for the Padres.

"We hit some balls a long ways," said Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox, "but they just turned into long outs. The San Diego stadium has to be the toughest park in baseball to hit a ball out of."

Owchinko took his dismissal in the eighth inning in stride, although he was four outs shy of his second straight shutout.

"I felt strong enough to finish," said Owchinko. "But winning the game and staying out of last place was the most important thing. Roger (Padre Manager Roger Craig) obviously felt I was getting tired so he did what he felt was right."

Expos 2, Mets 0

Wayne Garrett's first home run of the season staked Hal Dues to an early lead and the young right-hander combined on a two-hitter with Mike Garman to help Montreal beat New York. With one out in the first, Garrett, a former Met, homered to give the Expos with a 1-0 lead, and they added a run in the fourth on an RBI single by Del Unser, another former Met.

Dues, a 23-year-old in his first full season in the majors, allowed singles in the third and fifth innings but faced only one over the minimum number of hitters. Garman relieved in the seventh inning and got his fourth save for the Expos.

Guidry takes 12th victory

By The Associated Press

When you're hot, you're hot, and Ron Guidry can only hope that one of these days the rest of the New York Yankees will join him.

Guidry was trailing 1-0 — Ron LeFlore's leadoff homer in the first inning — and was two outs away from having his unbeaten 1978 streak snapped at 11-0 Thursday night when the Yankees, with the aid of a costly Detroit error, rallied for four runs in the ninth inning and defeated the Tigers 4-2.

That enabled Guidry to tie the club record with a 12-0 start and left him three short of the American League record. The major league mark is 19-0.

"This is a big boost," said Guidry, who allowed six hits and struck out eight before giving way to Rich Gossage following a leadoff walk in the bottom of the ninth. "I feel very fortunate to win this game. When you're in a streak, you get breaks once in a while like this."

The rest of the Yankees have been slumping — take away Guidry's 12 wins and they are 27-28 — and they still trail first-place Boston by 7½ games in the AL East. They also are one game behind the Baltimore Orioles, who hammered the Milwaukee Brewers 10-3.

Reggie Jackson homered with one out to begin the Yankees' four-run ninth after Dave Rozema held them to four singles over the first eight innings. An error by second baseman Lou Whitaker and Graig Nettles' single chased Rozema and pinch hitter Lou Piniella greeted reliever John Hiller with a tie-breaking single. Singles by Fred Stanley and Roy White got the other runs home. Gossage wild-pitched a run home in the bottom of the ninth.

Jackson said his game-tying homer came on "a change-up in and down, a good pitch. He did not make a mistake. I was lucky enough to muscle the ball out."

Guidry's 12-0 start matches that of Yankees Tom Zachary in 1929 and Atley Donald in 1939. Ironically, Donald is the scout who signed Guidry.

"It's a privilige for me to tie the record by the guy who signed me," Guidry said. "It shows he knew what he was doing."

Manager Billy Martin, whose job reportedly is in danger if the Yankees don't get hot pretty soon, said Guidry didn't have his best stuff.

"I've seen him pitch a lot better than he did tonight," Martin said. "He didn't have the velocity going in. It was obvious because the last time out, when he got the 18 strikeouts, it took a lot out of him."

Of the rumors that he may be fired, Martin said: "I've never been scared in my life and I'm not scared now. We've got a pennant to win. My mother didn't raise a quitter. Remember when I was going to get fired here last year? I'll show you the World Series ring I got fired with."

Orioles 10, Brewers 3

The Orioles also have a hot pitcher in Mike Flanagan, 11-4, who scattered 10 hits in posting his sixth consecutive triumph, while Eddie Murray's two-run homer sparked a four-run first inning and Kiko Garcia knocked in three runs with a double and a single. Lee May also homered as Baltimore won for the 18th time in its last 20 games.

"After I got that four-run lead, I threw 90 fast balls, " said Flanagan, who is 24-6 since last June 27. "Last year I started out 2-8 and I was throwing a lot outside. Hitters would just extend their arms and hit the ball. Now I throw a little across my body, which makes the ball cut by itself and run in on hitters. Pitching inside sets up a lot more things for me."

Angels 4, Twins 2

Ken Landreaux and Ron Jackson drove in 12th-inning runs with consecutive singles, enabling California to move within one percentage point of first-place Kansas City in the AL West. The Angels meet the Royals eight times in the next 15 games. Landreaux's broken-bat-single came off reliever Mike Marshall, 1-6, and drove in Lyman Bostock, who had singled and moved up on a base hit by Don Baylor.

The Angels, held to two hits by Gary Serum over the first seven innings, got singles from Rance Mulliniks and Rick Miller in the eighth, bringing on Marshall. Dave Machemer walked to load the bases before Joe Rudi's two-run single tied the game.

Rangers 8, A's 2

Texas battered teenager Mike Morgan for six runs in the first three innings, including Bump Wills' triple and Bobby Bonds' double, and romped behind Dock Ellis' six-hit pitching. The 18-year-old Morgan, losing his third game in as many professional and major league starts, lasted only 2 1-3 innings. Meanwhile, Ellis blanked Oakland until the seventh when Wayne Gross hit a two-run homer.

Mariners 8, White Sox 6

Bob Stinson, who homered in the second inning, drilled a tie-breaking double in Seattle's two-run 10th as the lowly Mariners posted their fourth consecutive victory and third in a row over the White Sox. Bob Robertson singled with one out in the 10th off Jim Willoughby and pinch runner Larry Milbourne went to second on Bill Stein's single. One out later, Stinson doubled and a second run scored on Julio Cruz's infield hit.

Brown chases the sun

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — John Y. Brown, owner of the Buffalo Braves, has kissed off his hometown and forsaken the compelling attractions of Texas and New York to chase after the sun-drenched West Coast.

Only cool-but-energetic Minneapolis stands between Brown and a move by the Braves to San Diego, a city he hadn't considered much until last week, he said Thursday.

Brown ordered his staff to investigate other cities when the National Basketball Association season ended in early April. On May 8, the Braves broke their lease on Memorial Auditorium.

But when the NBA Board of Governors met June 14-16 in San Diego, Brown, finding unexpected support in the host city, asked and got 20 more days to decide.

Now the board has agreed to meet July 7 to hear his final proposal, he said.

Brown ruled out two sites Thursday — his hometown of Lousville, Ky., and Nassua County, N.Y. Earlier he had eliminated Hollywood, Fla., Toronto and Dallas, which won the vote of the team's front office.

He also said in a telephone interview he won't talk with Buffalo's Common Council or Buffalo investors about selling the Braves.

"I said it's too late," he said of his conversation with George K. Arthur, the council majority leader. "I'm sympathetic with Buffalo losing its professional basketball team, but the franchise has really had trouble the whole eight years of its existence. I think Buffalo is a good sports market, but maybe just for hockey and football."

Mayer may be best 'outsider' at Wimbledon

LONDON (AP) — British tennis star John Lloyd says American Sandy Mayer is the best "outsider" vying for a title at Wimbledon — which starts on Monday. The judgement may have been meant as salve for his own psyche.

Mayer had just beaten Lloyd 7-5, 6-3 Thursday in the quarter-finals of the $125,000 Queen's Club international tournament.

Lloyd, ranked No. 2 in Britain, was full of praise for the 26-year-old American who has risen from a world ranking in the mid-twenties last year to 10th this year.

"I reckon he is a good outside bet for Wimbledon. He must have as good a chance as anyone."

Mayer is seeded eighth for Wimbledon.

"Mayer returns serve really well," Lloyd said. "And he is always pressing at the net."

Mayer says, too, that his game has improved recently.

"I feel I am a more complete player, now," he said. "I don't feel I am volleying as well as I have in the past, but while my volleys are maybe down seven or eight percent, my groundstrokes are probably up 30 percent."

Mayer, who has beaten all the world's top players — with the exception of Connors — in the last 18 months, was making no predictions about his Wimbledon chances.

"It's always open on grass," was all he would say.

Lloyd, however, was worried about his Wimbledon prospects.

The Briton meets fifth seeded American Brian Gottfried in the first round at Wimbledon and he admitted he will have improve a lot if hopes to win.

"I'm worried about my serve," he said. "If I serve that badly against Gottfried he will murder me. I've got just three days to get it right. If I don't, I won't win."

Mayer's semifinal opponent will be the veteran Australian Tony Roche, who Thursday beat another unseeded player, American Nick Saviano.

Saviano, rated just 51st in the United States, went down 3-6, 4-6.

The two other semifinals, one all-American affair between John McEnroe and Tom Gullikson, and the other an all-Australian affair between John Alexander and Colin Dibley were both rained out and will be played today.

Extension is granted

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Pitcher Roger Moret's request for an extension of his leave of absence has been granted, the Texas Rangers said Thursday.

The Rangers also announced that they are recalling Len Barker, a right-handed pitcher from their Tucson team in the Pacific Coast League.

Moret, who left the team last weekend to go to Puerto Rico, sent a telegram to the Rangers saying he wishes to remain there with his wife.

John Tate finds himself in heavyweight picture

NEW YORK (AP) — "I didn't think it would turn out to be this fantastic," said Big John Tate, who at the age of 23 and with just 13 pro fights finds himself in the heavyweight championship picture.

Before Tate went into the Madison Square Garden ring against previously unbeaten Bernardo Merado Thursday night, promoter Bob Arum had said that the winner of the scheduled 10-rounder would be in line for a title shot against World Boxing Association champion Leon Spinks should Spinks beat Muhammad Ali in their rematch in September.

A crowd of 4,528 also saw Vito Antuofermo, the WBA's No.3-ranked middleweight and the WBC's No.4, pound out a onesided 10-round decision over veteran Willie Warren. Antuofermo, 160, of New York, now is 42-3-1. Warren, 161, of Sweetwater, Texas, is 38-35-3.

Tate, showing right hand power he had not exhibited as an amateur, stopped Mercado in the second round, then said, "I could have beat Spinks tonight if I had fought him."

Arum can bring about a Spinks-Tate fight — the two were sparmates in training for the 1976 Olympics at which Spinks won the light heavyweight gold medal and Tate the heavyweight bronze — because he has promotional contracts with both fighters.

Ace Miller, the manager of Tate, who hails from Knoxville, Tenn., said that Tate, now 13-0, is in the second year of a three-year promotional deal with Arum and "if we win the title, it goes for two more years."

"I'm punching harder," said Tate, who at 226¼ weighs about 20 pounds less than he did as an amateur. "I just thank God for all my success."

Tate opened his match against Mercado, 222, of Colombia, by catching two solid left hooks to the jaw. "I said, 'John, you better get your right hand up.'" said Tate, who was able to avoid the big hooks for the remainder of the brief fight, mainly because Mercado was too busy catching punches to find time to punch.

In the second round, Tate shook Mercado with a good right-left to the head early and stayed on top of him, working both hands to the head and body. At about the two-minute mark, Tate knocked out Mercado's mouthpiece, then had him in deep trouble with a series of shots to the head. As Mercado turned his back and leaned over the ropes, referee Joe Santarpia leaped in and stopped the bout at 2:24.

Mercado immediately complained to the referee, and he seemed to be all right.

Tate didn't agree. "Oh yeah, he could have gone done. I had him out and then I hit him again and it woke him up," said Tate. Mercado, who went into the bout ranked No.7 by the World Boxing Council.

Martin's ground is shaky

NEW YORK (AP) — "A team is supposed to win — if it doesn't, the axe falls on the manager," President Al Rosen of the New York Yankees said Thursday after returning from Boston where he watched the team fall eight games behind the Red Sox.

"We are in danger of falling so far behind we cannot catch up. It is very discouraging. The team seems to lack motivation. It needs to be shaken up."

Rosen's pointed comments came amid recurring speculation that Billy Martin, the Yankees' fiery manager, was in danger of dismissal.

Rosen, the former Cleveland infielder, who replaced Gabe Paul as straw boss of the Yankees, declined to say such action was imminent but he stressed that the New York club, studded with multi-million-dollar free-agent talent, could not be content with a secondary performance.

"The Red Sox are knocking the cover off the ball," he said. "The Baltimore Orioles are on a hot streak (winning 16 of their last 18 games). Milwaukee is pressing.

"All of these teams have had winning streaks. But not the Yankees. We seem to be playing dead-center. That is not enough."

In Boston, Martin, addressing himself to the latest crisis in his stormy career, attributed rumors that he was danger of getting the sack to newspaper sensationalism.

Referring to the Yankees' inordinate epidemic of injuries, particularly to the high-salaried pitching staff — Catfish Hunter, Andy Messersmith, Don Gullett and Ed Figueroa —, Martin said, "I get along great with Al Rosen. I get along great with George Steinbrenner (club owner)."

Rosen countered with his comment:

"Injuries are part of the game. Billy knows this. He is now in the position of having to turn the team around — and quickly. He may do it. We hope so. But if he doesn't, well, the buck stops with the manager.

"This is not a personal thing. It's cold-hearted business. It's a situation we must watch closely and then make a hard decision. We feel the fans deserve a winning team, whatever measures we need to take."

Steinbrenner, Rosen and Cedric Tallis, vice president and general manager, were in Fenway Park Wednesday night when the Yankees bowed to the Red Sox 9-2, thus losing the "rubber" game of the three-game series.

The Yankees moved into Detroit Thursday night for a four-game series and will return to Yankee Stadium for two games with the Red Sox Monday and Tuesday nights.

The Yankees' hopes of repeating as American League champions — and Billy Martin's destiny as Yankee manager — may hinge on these vital six days.

Martin was in almost constant hot water with management last season because of a feud with $2.9-million superstar Reggie Jackson. He was almost fired after a dugout shoving match with Jackson in Boston.

However, on Oct. 18, 1977, just before the Yankees clinched the World Series against the Los Angeles Dodgers, the Yankees hastiy called a press conference to give Martin a public pat on the back and a sizeable bonus. Martin, fired by Minnesota, Detroit and Texas after successful tenures, has a $100,000-a-year contract running through 1979. Steinbrenner has said he would leave the managerial decision to Rosen.

Holland features veteran attack

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Holland could go into the World Cup soccer final against Argentina this Sunday with nine players who have been through it all before. That would be an all-time record.

If experience in big matches counts for anything, the Dutch will have a head start over the host country. Four years ago, at Munich's Olympic Stadium, they lost 2-1 to West Germany after taking a first-minute lead.

The greatest of all Dutch players, Johann Cruyff, has retired. Another 1974 star, Wim van Hanegem, has left the team. But the other nine are likely to be in Buenos Aires' River Plate Stadium Sunday.

"Cruyff was a wonderful player and is a great loss," said Arie Haan, the man who took over from Cruyff as captain. "But we had to start afresh and we have evolved a new style and a new pattern."

The survivors from the 1974 final who could play this Sunday are goalkeeper Jan Jongbloed, defenders Haan, Wim Suurbier, Wim Rijsbergen and Ernie Brandts, midfielders Wim Jansen and Johan Neeskens, and strikers Johnny Rep and Rob Rensenbrink.

A 10th member of the current squad, Rene van der Kerkhof, went on as a substitute in the later stages of the 1974 final.

Not all of these men will necessarily play. Jongbloed, the oldest player in the tournament at 37, has kept goal in only some of the games. His appearance depends on whether Holland's other goalie, Piet Schrijvers, recovers from injury.

Suurbier and Rijsbergen have both missed three matches because of injury but are working hard to be fit for the final.

If they all turn out they will surpass Brazil's record of fielding eight of the same players in the finals of 1958 and 1962. Brazil won the cup each time.

That great Brazilian team included legendary names like Pele, Didi and Garrincha.

Rhode Island loses game

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Spain's Real Madrid defeated the University of Rhode Island 127-102 (64-40) Thursday in the World Basketball Championship of Cup Winners.

The Spanish team led 64-40 at the half.

In a second game, Obras Sanitarias of Argentina downed Italy's Mobil Girgi 95-89.

On Friday, Sirio of Brasil meets Rhode Island and Real Madrid will play Mobil Girgi.

Ongais earns pole slot for Sunday's Schaefer

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — If anyone expected Tom Sneva to be upset that he got knocked off the pole position by Danny Ongais for Sunday's Schaefer 500, they would have been disappointed — because he wasn't.

"Winning poles doesn't win races," Sneva said. "I learned that in the Indianapolis 500 last year. And in case I'd forgotten, I got reminded again this year."

Sneva, the pole position starter at Indy for the past two years, finished second both years.

Starting second here he hopes will be the right setting for a first-place finish.

In seven previous runnings of this event, the guy who started first and the guy who finished first have never been the same guy. Sneva came from fourth to win it a year ago.

Sneva grabbed the pole position early during Thursday's qualifying, and appeared to have it clinched with a speed of 189.534 miles per hour, especially since the speedy Ongais, a four-time pole winner already this season, seemed to be having mechanical troubles.

Ongais, after an aborted qualification attempt earlier in the day, waited for temperatures on the track to cool off just before the 6 p.m. EDT shutdown.

The next-to-last of 25 qualifiers, Ongais turned the fastest lap, 190.396 mph, at Pocono International Raceway since the late Peter Revson set the track record of 191.367 mph in 1973.

His average for the two laps was 190.315 mph, plenty good enough to unseat Sneva.

The other spot on the front row went to Johnny Rutherford, the 1974 winner, at 188.976 mph.

Two-time winner A.J. Foyt starts third. Al Unser, the Indianapolis 500 winner last month in the car owned by Midland's Jim Hall and 1976 champion here, earned 10th in the 33-car lineup.

Bubby Jones, driving the Midland entry of Bobby Hillin, qualified for the 25th and final first day slot. Jones is driving the Wildcat that failed to qualify for the Indy 500.

Thursday's qualifying was marred by three crashes, two of them by the same driver. Larry Rice's car was heavily damaged the second time.

Lopez stands on brink

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, the peppery Mexican-American whose record-smashing play and pretty smile have made her a darling and a drawing card for women's golf, stood on the brink of another first today in the opening round of the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open.

A win by the 21-year-old rookie would extend her record victory skein to six straight, more than any woman professional has ever won and a notch closer to the men's record — 11 in a row by Byron Nelson in 1945.

It also would add to the record purse of $153,336 she's won since turning pro July 29. No other golfer, man or woman, has ever won that much in a rookie year.

"Every shot I hit feels easier than it did a month ago," Lopez said Thursday after testing the par-72, 6,398-yard long Hershey Country Club Course. "I have a great deal of confidence. I'm hitting the ball right where I want it to go."

In 1978, she's won seven tournaments. In contrast, no LPGA rival has won more than once this year.

Her fifth straight victory at Rochester, N.Y., last weekend broke an LPGA mark held, among others, by Mickey Wright and Kathy Whitworth, the tour's all-time money-winner. Whitworth's 13 wins in one year is a record within Lopez' grasp.

"When you get on a winning streak everything really seems easy," explained Whitworth, who at age 38 has won 81 LPGA tournaments.

"You never really see past tomorrow so I can understand why Nancy doesn't feel the pressure.

"As a player she's phenomenal and as a person, from what I know of her, she's terrific. She's so young. I don't think she's reached her peak."

Every time Lopez steps onto the course, "Nancy's Navy," a swarm of admirers, closes in for a better look.

Thursday she visited a nearby amusement park, accompanied by photographers and writers. While cameras clicked, she rode the merry-go-round, fed goats at a petting zoo, drank the first birch beer of her life, tossed popcorn in the air and tried to catch it in her mouth and never stopped smiling.

When she returned to the clubhouse another knot of reporters and photographers were waiting. It's been like that all week.

"It's neat," she says of all the fuss. "It's fun being recognized by people and to really feel important. But it's all happening so fast."

By year's end, the almond-eyed superstar, a 140-pound package of spritely effervesence and raw power, hopes to top $200,000 in earnings — $10,000 more than Hall-of-Famers Patty Berg and Louise Suggs amassed each during their entire careers. Lopez said Thursday she'd pick up another $200,000-plus in endorsements.

Nobody here can say for sure why she's so good. Carol Mann, for instance, says her swing is "a combination of mistakes."

Sunday newspapers basis for new Lampoon parody

By G.G. LaBELLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Parody is no gentle art.

Publisher Henry Luce was outraged at Wolcott Gibbs' 1936 parody of Time magazine. Ernest Hemingway surely wasn't pleased by E.B. White's "Across the Street and into the Grill." And now, dear reader, it is our turn — and maybe yours — to feel the parodist's bite.

For next week, the National Lampoon parody of a Sunday newspaper, the Republican-Democrat in mythical Dacron, Ohio, will hit newsstands and bookstores.

The Republican-Democrat is the usual jumble of Sunday sections — among them the magazine "Pomade," a section called "Living Life ... formerly the Women's pages,' even an ad supplement, for "Swillmart ... Where Quality Is a Slogan."

There also are literally hundreds of improbable headlines, stories, ads and photographs. One page 1 headline screams:

"Two Dacron Women Feared Missing in Volcanic Disaster."

"Japan Destroyed," reads a smaller headline underneath, twitting the local newspaper's penchant for local news.

Also on page 1, "The Greater Dacron A.S.P.C.A., honored by Mayor Pilegravey last fall for capturing a pack of 30 wild dogs which were later gassed at the city pound, will now have a lawsuit brought against it for that action, says Dacron Estates Hunt Club Master of Foxhounds Edward Duffy. ... "

Or the correction in minuscule type hidden inside under an ad: "Arnold Piesner of 1554 Woodrow, Dacron, did not commit a violent act of homosexual assault on his next-door-neighbor's seven-year-old son as was erroneously reported in Friday's Republican-Democrat. The assaulter was a Mr. Andrew Neebler and the incident took place in San Jose, Cal. We regret..."

Reporters and editors may pale at all this. Witness Luce's reaction to Gibbs' description of Times inverted style: "Backward ran sentences until reeled the mind. ... Where it all will end knows God!" Or Hemingway's when White reduced the love affair of "Across the River and into the Trees" to decidedly smaller proportions.

But in this parody, there is something for the reader too. P.J. O'Rourke, the parody paper's editor, notes that he and his staff — many of them Midwesterners, he says — put their teeth into Middle America as much as into the newspaper business.

"Dacron is Toledo," said the Toledo-born editor. "Dacron or Day-cron — there's disagreement about the pronunciation — sounds like the Ohio city that isn't there but should be."

So in Dacron, a drive is launched against child pornography despite the organizer's admission that "so far there has been no child pornography ... we will all have to become very vigilant to keep it out." The drive's organizer will visit Los Angeles, New York's 42nd Street and San Francisco to "identify the problem."

Dacron's major industry is the VanHusen trailer company, and the city's government, not without VanHusens as officials, seems to be constantly buying trailers — for storage facilities, low income housing and portable jails, called "mobile homes of detention."

No one in Dacron seems to make that connection. Nor do they connect when asphalt company heir Bobby MacAdam shows up at a party with a paper bag over his head and in high-heeled shoes — the costume of Dacron's own "Son of Sam" — "the Powder Room Prowler."

"Unusual shoes and paper accessories have been his trademark this past year," the society page notes.

Making connections will be the reader's job — and joy. Connecting, for instance, a story on an oceanographers' convention predicting the polar ice caps will melt with one on a meteorologists' meeting that says the ice caps will spread. Or connecting the stabbing murder of the wife of the paper's crossword editor, Hermwood Litmajor, with a bloody knife with initials "HL" found in a city park. Police say an ice fisherman probably dropped it.

There will be more connections for readers of the 1974 Lampoon parody of a high school yearbook, in of all places, Dacron, Ohio.

Multitude of candidates, parties confuses issues

By HAROLD OLMOS

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivians re going into their July 9 presidential ections with 10 opposition candiates backed by about 50 political arties and one candidate backed by resident Hugo Banzer.

The situation seems destined to put anzer's man in office.

A last-minute gesture to unite the orces of two of the leading opposition andidates — former Presidents Vicor Paz Estenssoro and Hernan Siles uazo — failed because of differences ver the vice presidency and dividing p government power.

Another opposition candidate, Col. ose Patino, is a candidate in name nly, because the party backing him, the Bolivian Socialist Falange, decided to call on its followers to abstain from voting. The Falange charged that the election results would be fraudulent.

Banzer, an army general who came to power in a coup seven years ago, planned to run for president himself when he called the elections. But he ran into opposition within his own military and failed to get the backing he wanted from rightist political groups.

Banzer reluctantly gave his support to Gen. Juan Pereda, 46, former air force commander and interior minister. The rest of the military and a coalition of small rightist civilian groups also back Pereda.

Pereda does not appear to have the popular support Banzer enjoys. But under Bolivia's electoral rules he will need only a plurality of the popular votes to win.

It works this way: the law requires a simple majority for outright election, but in the likely event no one gets that, the decision will be taken by the Congress, which is being elected at the same time. However, the candidate who gets the plurality in each region will get 80 percent of the seats in Congress from that area for his party or parties. Thus, a candidate with only a slight plurality can get firm control of Congress, which would then elect him with the necessary majority.

The opposition calls this system antidemocratic, but Pereda told The Associated Press in an interview that he is willing to consider opposition participation in his administration.

Pereda said his government would differ from Banzer's in that it would be constitutional. In addition, he said, "the responsibility will not rest exclusively with the armed forces. The destiny of the country will be in the hands not only of those who make up the government but also the opposition parties and the people in general."

Pereda's most serious opposition is expected to come from the 69-year-old Paz Estenssoro, Siles Zuazo and Gen. Rene Bernal Escalante, the candidate of the Christian Democratic Party.

Paz Estenssoro and Siles Zuazo were leading figures in the National Revolutionary Movement that governed Bolivia from 1952 to 1964 and gave the country agrarian reform, universal suffrage and other social reforms. Paz Estenssoro was elected president in 1952, Siles Zuazo in 1956, and Paz Estenssoro again in 1960 and 1964. A military coup then desposed him.

The two men eventually split to lead different factions of the Revolutionary Movement. Both recently returned to Bolivia from exile.

The other candidates include peasant leader Luciano Tapia, who represents the Tupac Katari Indian movement, which wants to restore Inca rule to Bolivia.

About 1.6 million Bolivians are registered to vote from among 2.4 million eligible persons, which includes anyone 21 or older. The country has a population of just under five million.

Hall selected

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer-songwriter Tom T. Hall has been named headline performer for the fourth annual Truck Drivers Country Music Awards Show Sept. 9 in Kansas City.

Truck drivers across the country will select winners in 10 categories.

Comedian Charlie Farquharson of "Hee Haw" and singer Charley McClain also will perform during the show.

Stock market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned mixed today as immediate worries over the rising cost of money abated a bit but as the the dollar continued its recent slide.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, ahead by 2.34 at 11 a.m., was down .34 to 827.36 at noon. Gainers outnumbered losers by just under a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume came to 12.99 million shares in the first two hours, against 13.7 million in the same period the day before.

Citibank, usually the leader in prime rate changes, left its prime at 8¾ percent today, a day after the Federal Reserve reported the nation's basic money supply fell by $1.1 billion in the week ended June 14. The prime rate is that paid by top-rated corporate borowers and a possible jump to 9 percent had been anticipated.

But analysts noted pressures for higher interest rates are likely to continue. They pointed out long-term money growth is exceeding Fed targets and predicted new moves toward tighter money in the next week or two. And the dollar retreated against most foreign currencies in trading here and in Europe.

Once again, virtually anything connected with casino gambling was in the trading spotlight. Allegheny Airlines rose 1 to 11½. The company noted the past few days' heavy interest in Allegheny stock may be because it has the only certificated airline service to Atlantic City, N.J.

Ramada Inns, which owns 7 percent of casino operator Del E. Webb, was the NYSE volume leader at 9¾, up ⅞. Del E. Webb gained 2¼ to 24⅞. Resorts International class A added 5¾ to 81¾ in active American Stock Exchange trading.

Columbia joins effort to fight apartheid policy

By NANCY L. ROSS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Columbia University recently became the latest in a series of institutions of higher learning to announce that it would withdraw its investments from U.S. corporations doing business in South Africa unless conditions improve there.

At the same time, Miami University of Ohio bowed to legal and financial realities by becoming the first academic institution to reverse its previous publicly enunciated decision to sell such stocks in its portfolio. "Universities are established to test ideas, but not to effect political change," Miami President Phillip Shriver declared.

Church and campus threats of economic reprisal against American corporations as a means of fighting South African apartheid have accelerated in the past year. Boards of trustees have been torn between ideological and fiduciary responsibility. Ad hoc committees have weighed the pros and cons and issued solemn statements of policy.

So far as can be determined, four colleges and universities have withdrawn all or part of their South African-related portfolio investments. A fifth is in the process. The total amount of such securities sold amounts to nearly $11 million. The bulk of this comes from a single source, the University of Wisconsin. At least three universities, California, Chicago and Stanford, have announced an outright refusal to follow this lead for fear of adverse financial consequences.

The vast majority of institutions have taken a middle stance amounting to a strong denunciation of apartheid and a warning to U.S. companies that if they do not push for fair employment practices in South Africa, academe will exert financial pressure against them by selling their stock. Yet some, like Miami University, already have learned this is a two-way street. IBM, which controls 70 percent of the computer industry in South Africa and is also a large corporate donor to education, recently did an in-house survey to find out what position various universities were taking on the issue of South African-related investments. An IBM spokesman denied, however, that divestiture had any effect on donation activities.

College and university boards have rallied around the so-called Sullivan principals, named after the Rev. Leon Sullivan, a civil rights activist who is minister of Philadelphia's Zion Baptist Church and a member of the board of General Motors. Last year Sullivan drafted a code of conduct for American firms in South Africa. Its six tenets call for racial intgration on the job, equal pay for equal work, fair employment practices, training programs to prepare minorities for supervisory jobs, promotions of blacks to management, and improvement of employees' outside living conditions. In one year the number of U.S. firms agreeing to this code has risen from 12 to 98, according to Fortune magazine.

The first institution to divest itself of South African-related securities for ideological reasons was Hampshire College in Amherst, Mass. Hampshire, established in 1970, has only a $2 million endowment, only 2,000 young alumni and few corporate gifts. So, according to Treasurer Allen Torrey, the May 1977 decision in the face of student pressure to sell not only $39,000 in these securities but the rest of its $200,000 portfolio was relatively easy. The college received a few unflattering letters but suffered little economic effect, he said.

Its neighbor, the University of Massachusetts, with an annual budget of $200 million, sold $629,000 worth of South African-related stock, representing more than half of its portfolio. It suffered a net loss of $71,000. Only two or three alumni wrote saying they would reduce their contributions, a spokesman said, and one corporation, Johnson & Johnson, wrote to ask why they were selling. Another neighbor, Smith College, in Northampton, sold $688,000 worth of Firestone stock because the corporation's response to the college's inquiry about its stand on the Sullivan principals was deemed inadequate. Ohio University has authorized the sale of $13,000 worth of stock but has not received confirmation the order has been executed.

Regents at the University of Wisconsin wanted to exert influence through the use of this code but were overruled by the state attorney general, who declared that state law prohibited investing in corporations that practice racial discrimination. Wisconsin began divestitute of its $11 million in South African related stocks in April, a process that will be completed later this year. Berwyn Westra, the trust fund accountant, estimated a loss of $1.2 million on the transactions.

Wisconsin held between $750,000 and $1 million of common stock in each of General Motors, General Electric, Exxon and IBM, plus lesser amounts in other corporations. Asked if the corporations objected, Westra replied that none had made a major effort to dissuade the university because they knew there was nothing they could do — even though they all claimed to be improving conditions in South Africa. The reverse happened in Oregon, where the state Board of Higher Education, which had decided to divest, was overruled by the attorney general. He ordered that the educators should have no say about investments, that the decisions should be left to investment managers to make on solely finaccial — not ethical or political — grounds. The University of Oregon has South African-related stocks worth $6 million.

Midlander wins $1,200 scholarship

Pamelia Denise George, a Midland High School graduate, has been awarded a $1,200 Permian Honor Scholarship co-sponsored by The First National Bank and The Reporter-Telegram Publishing Co.

The award provides $300 a year for two years at Midland College and two years at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Miss George is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. George Sr. She plans to major in business management. She has participated in National Honor Society and student council and is a National Merit Scholarship Commended student.
