They are at home in Lubbock and expect to go on a honeymoon trip to Fort Worth Christmas. Members of their family were among the Lubbock folk who attended.

Program At Post Is Given By Epworth League Group

A program was given at the Post Methodist church last evening by members of the Senior Epworth league, of the First Methodist church, under the direction of Miss Dorothy Cooper, student secretary for that organization. About 30 from here were in attendance and were served buffet supper in a Post home. The program was given during the regular church hour.

A Christmas play featured the program with Miss Miriam Cross, Menard Hance, Beecher Bennett and Alvin Logan taking parts. Joe Foster sang a solo, the Sunday school orchestra played numbers and Miss Cooper gave a reading.

Haynes gave a reading.

typical of the sturdy, but inexpensive kinds being constructed in many sections.

The Orlando is efficiently and compactly built, but offers a real home for the small family. There are five large rooms, a separate breakfast nook and hallway connecting all the rooms, yet the house occupies only a 28 foot front and is not the type that requires large surrounding space to set it off to advantage.

The bath is conveniently located and in the rear of the house. Front and back porches are partly enclosed and the refrigerator is iced from the outside. There is a large fireplace and ample closet space for the bedrooms.

The breakfast nook, although adjoining the kitchen, really is a separate room. Notice the wealth of windows through the house. This is the type that is made doubly attractive by the use of awnings.

Construction is of tile and stucco, so arranged as to give extraordinary coolness in summer and warmth in winter. The cost, complete, is $5,500.

RE-ELECTION OF LANDIS IS SEEN

National League Club Owners Favorable To Additional Seven Year Term

(By the Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, will be re-elected for a seven year term at the joint meeting of the National and American Leagues in Chicago, Thursday, in the opinion of National League club owners in New York for their own league pow-wow tomorrow and Wednesday. The circuit is expected to vote for Landis as a unit.

But the magnates of both leagues are chafing under the "benevolent despotism" of Commissioner Landis. The New York World said today. Dissatisfaction is felt over the belief that the high commissioner has ignored the existence of the advisory council, for no meeting has been called in the past two years, the paper says.

Carl Duane Coming Star, Says Gibson

CARL DUANE

No less an authority than Billy Gibson, who piloted Gene Tunney to the heavyweight championship and who sponsored Benny Leonard as lightweight king, is shouting the praises of Carl Duane, promising eastern youngster. Duane is headed for the light-weight title in the opinion of the astute Mr. Gibson.

Duane gave an excellent account of himself in his recent bout with Tod Morgan, junior, light-weight champion. Duane led for the first 10 rounds of the bout and looked to be a striver. However, he lacked the stamina to go the route Morgan's reserve strength decided the issue.

FEW PITCHERS WERE ABLE TO GO THE ROUTE

By NEA Service
CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—This is an era of specialists in major league baseball, if you would believe the American league averages, particularly as to pitching.

With every major league club using one pitcher almost exclusively for relief purposes, the starting pitcher had to be working in high all the time to finish his ball game.

Last season only four pitchers in the American League worked in 29 or more complete games. George Uhle showed the way with 32, a remarkable performance these days. Lyons of Chicago worked 24, Walter Johnson 22 and "Lefty" Grove 20.

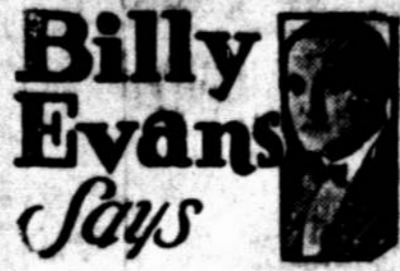

THREE LEADERS HOLD POSITION IN AMERICAN

Now that Tris Speaker has retired, only three members of the old guard remain. Connie Mack, Stanley Harris and

White Sox Infield Offered Best Defense In American

Miller Huggins still held the fort and are certain to continue in a managerial capacity.

Not in the history of the major leagues has there ever been so many changes made in team leaders as in 1926.

Billy Evans Says

Rival Opinion
It was the day of the Army and Navy game in Chicago. One of the first persons I bumped into was Manager Jack Hendricks of the Cincinnati Reds. We exchanged the usual greetings then—

"What does a manager have to do in your league to keep his job?" asked Hendricks. I professed ignorance.

"Haven't you seen the report that Tris Speaker intends to resign at Cleveland?" I admitted I had.

"That must be a tough league," continued the genial Jack, "when fellows like Sider, Cobb and Collins get the gate and now comes the Speaker rumor."

"I'm glad I am managing a club in the National League. My team finished second last year, like Cleveland, but I feel reasonably sure of holding my position."

I told Jack I had decided that umpiring wasn't such a bad job after all. Many Surprises
Two days later, what Hendricks and I regarded as a mere rumor, turned out to be the whole truth. Speaker announced his retirement from baseball.

The retirement of Cobb was no great surprise. I knew that Cobb was more or less disgusted with the showing that his team had made, that he realized he was about through as a regular player, and that he didn't look on managing from the bench with favor.

The Sider affair was more or less expected. It was known that Owner Paul Ball was dissatisfied with the way the club had been managed, which meant the dropping of Sider.

The passing of Collins, however, was a distinct surprise. If I were asked to pick one American League manager sure of his job, prior to his dismissal, I would have named Collins.

The retirement of Speaker was as unexpected as the release of Collins. Big Proposition
Managing a major league ball club is a tough job. Your worries being when the starts, and instead of ending when the game is over, simply commence anew.

I am inclined to think that the handling of a big league club has assumed such proportions that it is a non-paying job. It is enough simply to have to look after the details of directing the club.

A winning ball club gets the money, but a losing one can drop it just as fast. The big league manager of today must consistently deliver if he is to feel at all safe as to his job.

High salaries in engaging a huge stadium that can be used only 77 days during the year has made the life of a big league manager a decidedly precarious one.

HARDY KRUSCAMP

How the well-dressed football player looks-off the field of battle. Hardy Kruscamp, Ohio State halfback, snapped on the campus at Columbus, far from the maddening cheers of the throng but the cynosure for co-ed eyes. Kruscamp's name didn't appear in print very often during the playing season, but he had no little part in the Buckeye success, standing out especially as a defensive player. Note the gaily gloves the young athlete is wearing.

Floydada Will Meet Clarendon Tuesday In Title B Clash

(Special to the Journal)

FLOYDADA, Dec. 13.—The championship of the Panhandle in class B football will be determined here tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock, when it will be between Floydada Whitebirds and the Clarendon Bronchos. This game was to have been played last Friday but due to the weather conditions at that time the game was postponed until tomorrow.

Both clubs are exceptionally strong on offense, especially in the passing game. In view of this fact a very fast and interesting contest is anticipated. Clarendon has been defeated once during the 1926 season; and Floydada has suffered one defeat.

Efficient officials have been secured for the contest and are as follows: McMillan (Texas A. & M.) referee; Honey (T. C. U.) umpire; and Jackson (T. C. U.) headlinesman.

Boosters from Clarendon are expected to storm the city here tomorrow morning. The Broncho eleven will arrive in Floydada this afternoon in time to take a very light workout.

The big league manager of today must consistently deliver if he is to feel at all safe as to his job.

Hitting Sports Highspots

With James R. Dow

The Plainview Bulldogs will have a hard bunch to handle in the case performance this season with practically their entire crew back into action. The defenders of the Green and White have already played one contest with the Ochoa high school, defeating the Lamé county quintet by a score of 24 to 12.

Jack MacCallister has been named to succeed Tris Speaker as manager of the Cleveland Indians. MacCallister has been connected with the Indians for 15 years, as coach and scout of the Cleveland nine.

MacCallister has never been no baseball nine in the big show, but I well experienced in knowing ball players.

The Floydada Whitebirds and the Clarendon Bronchos will meet tomorrow in Floydada for the Panhandle championship of class B grid honors. The game was postponed on account of weather and now it seems like they will have to play in snow or sleet.

The state grid championship of high schools now rests between the Waco Tigers and the Oak Cliff Leopards. It is generally thought that the Waco crew will be the favorites for the state title.

Coch Tyson of the Waco high school, eleven has produced winning combinations in the Central Texas city for many years. He is no doubt one of the smartest high school coaches in Texas.

Handolph College, of Cleco, will meet the National Academy champions Bellfonte, at Cleco on Christmas day. The Handolph crew has a strong combination and will likely give the Eastern school much to worry about.

"Red" Grange and George Wilson will clash in Dallas on the 19th—Texas fans from all parts of the state will flock to see these two grid heroes battle at the Fair Park Stadium in Dallas.

BOSTON'S DEFEAT OF HOLY CROSS BIG SURPRISE

Boston University's 3-0 victory over Holy Cross was one of the outstanding surprises of the coming football season.

Up until the game with the Terriers Holy Cross hadn't met defeat. Boston on the other side, had lost the majority of its games. Hence, the contest looked like a practice affair for Holy Cross.

But the Beantown eleven, playing the best brand of ball it had ever seen, all season, played Holy Cross to a standstill. A field goal by Harry Herbert, the fellow who was once laid up with a broken neck, proved the winning margin.

THREE HOMERS BIG THRILL SAYS BAMBINO

Until the 1926 world series, despite the many batting feats Babe Ruth had registered, he always regarded a pitching performance as his greatest thrill.

A 3-1 victory in the 1916 world series over Sherry Smith, then with Brooklyn, gave Babe his biggest kick as his best individual performance.

Now he admits that the three home runs he made in one of the games with the St. Louis Cardinals surpassed it as a blood tingler.

SOUTHPAW PATE MADE UNUSUAL MAJOR DEBUT

By NEA Service
PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—Few pitchers in the history of major league baseball have enjoyed as unusual a season as did Joe Pate, making his big league debut with Philadelphia last year.

Joe won nine games for the Athletics, even though he didn't pitch a complete ball game. He started only one battle; the rest of the season he was used in relief roles entirely. Pate managed to break into 17 ball games for Mr. Mack.

Editorials CIGARET ADS FOR THE LADIES

Among other signs of the approaching millennium, we beg consideration of cigarette advertisements for women which have just begun to appear in London and American magazines.

The ad at the bottom is taken from one that appeared in a recent issue of a smart magazine in America, and it is the first direct appeal to women smokers we have seen in American periodicals.

We are wondering what sort of artistic advertisements showing women holding cigarettes would stir up in those states. We are not sure that even states which do allow cigarette sale and advertising are ready for the women's cigarette ads.

It is just possible that the reason why the advertiser's face is not shown in the American ad is the fear of a storm of protest and legislation.

Advertising has undergone remarkable advances in this country in the last few years. The result of this kind of advertising will be watched with interest. It marks a long step from the days when it was regarded as most risqué to publish a picture of a bathing girl in a magazine or on a poster.

HIDEOUS HANDICAP The name of Ellen Mackay, who before she married Irving Berlin, America's foremost song writer, was herself America's foremost heiress, has been stricken from the chaste sheets of New York's Social Register.

Strangely enough, the latest edition of the register made its annual debut on almost the very day that the Berlin's latest edition in the person of a blue-eyed, even-pounded daughter was born.

The infant therefore, faces life with the hideous handicap of neither its mother nor its own small self being given a paragraph, a sentence, even a period or comma, in that arbiter of human destinies, the Social Register.

Perhaps the fact that Dad Irving is one of the best looking men in America, that his face looks down from the sheet music on millions of pianos, that his hitting tunes give joy to millions of people the world over, may compensate a bit.

Perhaps, too, the fact that the names in the improbably-correct Social Register are put there for reasons of pedigree rather than of achievement may compensate the little lady, too.

Here's hoping that young Miss Berlin has no colic brought on by worry at the grave omission!

TO EAT NOISILY? If we would just forget that we are perfect ladies and gentlemen, and crunch our food loudly and with vigor at our dining tables, our teeth would last years longer and give less wear while we have them.

This from Dr. Boyd S. Gardner, dental surgeon. The doctor explains that there is nothing for the teeth quite so good as home-picking, toast-crunching, celery-cracking, and all the various forms of mastication upon which Etiquette with a capital E frowns.

Which will win, good teeth or fine manners? It will be a brave man or woman who dares say the former shall be first.

LINES FROM THE Old Masters

O Captain! my Captain! our fearful trip is done, The ship has weather'd every rack the prize we sought is won, The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,

O Captain! my Captain! rise up and hear the bells, Rise up—for you the flag is flung—for you the bugle trills, For you our banners and ribbons wreaths—for you the shores a-crowding,

For you they call the swaying mass their eager faces turning, Here Captain! dear father! This arm beneath your head! It is some dream that on the deck You've fallen cold and dead.

My Captain does not answer, his lips are pale and still, My father does not feel my arm, he has no pulse nor will; The ship is anchor'd safe and sound, its voyage closed and done,

From fearful trip the victor ship comes in with object won, Exulting shores and ring O bells! But I with mournful tread, Walk the deck my Captain lies, Fallen cold and dead.

—W. Whitman: O Captain! My Captain!

IN NEW YORK SEE-SAWING and DOWN BROADWAY NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—There remains at least one cafe in Manhattan—and this in wild, wild 42d street, if you please—where women still are forbidden to smoke.

This is, perhaps, the last stand in all the Broadway belt of the latter day conventions. One would expect such a place to be a mirror of Victorianism. On the contrary its windows reflect all the gaudy salad-and-lobster trimmings of the midtown "quick-and-hasty."

Uninitiate flappers are daily making the mistake of "lighting up a smoke" with their demi-tasse and being cautioned by waiters to stop. Their arguments are invariably more heated than one is likely to hear when a man is reprimanded.

Strangely enough, this place is not flooded by fat dowagers and old-fashioned women. In fact a man I know, who prides himself on making odd surveys, brings the report that he has noticed more smoking among fat dowagers and old-fashioned types than among any others.

Those who were inclined to sigh at the space accorded the passing of Valentino when measured beside that given the late Dr. Elliot may find some solace in a few figures I have just gathered.

The rush for old films in which Valentino appeared according to a Broadway film agent, lasted for but a few weeks, whereas, a member of the who-who-of-bookings tells me, the sale of five-toothettes goes on a pace.

The West Point influence on Broadway movie theater ushers becomes weekly more amusing. Not only is the military academy uniform suggested by that of the latest film palace, but the solemn discipline and carriage of these seat conductors is carefully patterned.

Going to be smoking room in the basement of one million-dollar-wonder theater the other night I was amazed to see a side door open and out came marching in double file some 5 of these "superfluency-ushers." Their heads were thrown back, their backs rigid, their feet stung out rhythmically and a "floor captain" sent them up the stairs with unsmiling severity to martial them in the aisles in time for the closing of the picture.

I learned later that the almost fawning politeness of these young men is the result of a month of schooling. Anyone searching for future valets might look them over carefully—with this warning, however I have heard that just before performances the click of "crap dice" may be heard as usual on the cement floors just behind the theater.

His Work's All Laid Out For Him

WASHINGTON LETTER

RIDE IN WHIRLING BATHTUB TELLS WHETHER YOU'D MAKE SKYMAN TRIED AND TRUE

BY RODNEY DUTCHER (NEA Service Writer)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—If you would determine your qualifications as an aviator, just hop into the nearest electrical butterchurn and have someone press the button.

After a half hour in the butter churn you can emerge smiling, unflustered, and with your hair still as job as a pilot. The physical, mental and neurological faculties of a man, if any, all are brought into play.

F. Trubee Davison, the army's secretary of aviation, has returned from an inspection trip in Texas, enthusiastic over the possibilities of the "bathtub test."

His experiments to date indicate the orientator is an indispensable means of quickly determining who is fit to fly and who isn't.

The contraption is parked at Brooks Field, Texas, and in operation it stimulates an airplane's turtle-turnings, cart-wheelings, flip-floppings, tail-spinning and other antics. The physical, mental and neurological faculties of a man, if any, all are brought into play.

Old regular army men trying to join the air corps and youths seeking their first commission are placed in the tub. They are instructed to hold tight, and that if they know their stuff they can "steer" or direct the motion by use of controls inside.

The fun begins when the juice is turned on and the machine and its occupant begin to skid, roll, twist and loop the loop.

The applicant's reactions under this pressure are recorded, either mechanically or by judges, and a verdict is given as to his probable possibilities as an aviator. The candidate goes through the regular training course and a flying board officially pronounces its judgment.

But, according to Davison, the "whirling bathtub" has such a fine record for showing whether the candidate should be allowed to progress further, that he believes it will be recognized as a decisive preliminary test within another year, thereby saving everyone time, bother and money.

ONLY RELIGION CAN DESTROY WAR

Of the three great enemies of mankind—plague, famine, war—but one remains. Science has killed the first two; only religion can destroy war.

Says Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, D. D., in the December McCall's. "Plague, famine, war, these three; but the worst of these is war. Science has killed one after another of the great plagues which decimated humanity—they lie dead snakes by the side of the road. The banishing of distance and the swift movement of aid make man master of famine. Only religion can kill war; new religion as a great love and passion of life, purifying the heart of man of evil envy, and hate, lifting humanity into brotherhood."—Galveston Register.

YES, IT'S TRUE

A friend calls us to task for giving more attention to football than to debate. Well, all we can say is that the people of this age are greatly interested in football and unfortunately, not greatly interested in debate—unless it is a debate over a football game or a prize fight. When Dr. Charles Elliot, the noted educator died at the same time with Rudolph Valentino, nearly all newspapers gave most prominence to the death of Valentino. Why did they do it? Simply because the American people were greatly interested in the death of Valentino and all the events connected with it. No doubt the work of Elliot was infinitely more valuable to the country than that of Valentino and history will so record it—but the people of today were much more interested in Valentino and his doings and his death than in Dr. Elliot's passing. Not much to the credit of the people, but true.—Howell Daily Record.

SAINT AND SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

"What's the matter, darling? Are you crying? You really must hurry, Cherry baby." Faith leaned against the locked door and spoke softly, pityingly. If Cherry was spending those last minutes of her girlhood in loneliness and despair and fear and remorse, her sister could not find it in her heart to blame her.

There was no answer. Something in that absolute stillness beyond the locked door sent a sharp, sickening pang of fear through Faith's overwrought nerves. What if Cherry had fled—oh, no! She couldn't do that, not life-loving little Cherry! But Faith, as she leaned dizzily against the door, remembered that she had left the bottle of bromide tablets on the dresser, after giving Cherry a mild dose to quiet her nerves.

"Cherry! Cherry! You're scaring me to death!" she cried sharply, rattling the knob of the door desperately.

There was no answer. Faith, panic-stricken, dropped the lovely golden-peppy bridesmaid dress to the floor and flung her weight against the door.

"Cherry! Cherry! Open this door this minute!" There still was no answer.

If only her mother and father or Junior were there to help her. But they were in the church by this time, or nearing it in George's swift car. But the chauffeur who was to call for her and Cherry—old Mr. Cluny's chauffeur, with the magnificent Rolls Royce that would be Cherry's—

"Oh, I'm going crazy!" Faith groaned. Then realization of her portly clad state rushed over her and she sped into her bedroom to fling on her shabby old winter coat.

She hardly knew what she was doing when she rushed from the house, down the path to the street, which was covered now with the feathery, big flakes of snow that were falling steadily, out of an almost windless sky. The Cluny limousine was not in sight, as she turned back toward the house, a glimpse of fluttering window drapery caught her eye. Cherry's window—open! Wide open! And the thermometer at thirty! Running through the six inches of soft snow in the yard, she arrived at Cherry's open lighted window. By standing on tiptoe she could peer into the room.

Cherry was not in the room. On the floor, on one of the small rose-colored chenille rugs, lay a little pool of fire and snow—Cherry's rhinestone-and-pearl-embroidered wedding dress. And across a chair back drifted the feather-light cloud of Cherry's wedding veil. But there was no bride to wear them. The wedding dress was in a little round heap—as if Cherry had put it on, and had then let it slip to the floor and had stepped out of it.

Faith's first reaction from numbing horror was one of heart-clutching relief. At all events she was not dead. She had fled. But she was not dead. Her second reaction was one of almost insane joy that somehow Cherry had cheated the altar of the sacrifice of her growing youth. Anything was better than that lovely Cherry should marry an old man who she did not love.

Near the window stood an old paint bucket, unless Joy had removed it. Faith groped for it in the dark, found it, snatched it up, planted it beneath the window, and hoisted herself. Surely Cherry would not run away without a word to her mother, to her sister who loved her and understood her—understood even the panic which would make her flee into snow and the night.

She found it on the dresser, weighted down by a nail buffer—Cherry's hastily scrawled note written with lead pencil on the back of an old envelope addressed in Chris Vinylo's bold, black, dashing handwriting.

"I'm running away, Faith. Tell Muggsy I'll be all right. Don't worry, I couldn't do it after all, Faith. He was so old. Please don't try to follow me. Give me time to get away or I'll kill myself. Love, Cherry." And across the envelope was a childish row of crosses, made with quick, heavy slashes of the pencil.

Torn between her love for Cherry which dictated that she heed the frantic girl plea to give her a chance to get far enough away to elude pursuit, and her instinct to cry out for help, because she knew that she could not trust her own judgment in such a crisis, she moved almost mechanically to the telephone and called Bob Hathaway's number.

After what seemed an age of waiting without a response, she realized that Bob undoubtedly had left for his uncle's house, for it was he who was to escort the aged bridegroom to the church.

She had just hung up the receiver when there came a ring at the door, which she flew to answer. It was the chauffeur of Ralph Cluny's Rolls Royce, come to take bride and maid of honor to a wedding which would never be celebrated.

THE PAST

JIMPSON WEED, who was called "Jimp" for short, fell into a well and lost his job. Besides that, he fell in love with PEAR HANDLE, who was the daughter of MR. HANDLE and his wife, MRS. HANDLE. MR. HANDLE shot at JIMP but the chapter ended before the bullet hit him. Between chapters JIMP moved, thus dodging the bullet. PEAR and JIMP were being married when MR. HANDLE enters and shoots JIMP over the heart, the bullet coming out of JIMP'S back.

NEW STUFF

CHAPTER III

This is chapter three of this powerful novel. If you don't believe it look just above this paragraph. The last chapter closed when Jimp was shot over the heart by Pearl's nifty father. The bullet entered directly over the heart and came out Jimp's back. He sank to the floor.

The author did not intend to end the chapter at this point. But the author was so overcome by the shooting he could not continue.

Today's chapter, however, starts upon the exact spot where yesterday's chapter ended. Jimp was stretched out on the floor. Pearl was bending over him. The irate parent was standing with a triumphant smile upon his lips and the smoking pistol in his hand.

The minister was under the table. The minister's wife was in the kitchen where minister's wives usually stay. The minister's son was down town hunting for a job. The minister's daughter was not to be seen because the minister had no daughter.

"Tell me darling, are you dying?" sobbed Pearl as she bent over the prostrate form of the man who was almost her husband.

"No, I don't see any angels," said Jimp, weakly. "I don't see any angels, except you sweetheart." "You would see devils. Do you see any devils?" "None except you," said Jimp, gone until his last breath.

The father merely laughed. He was proud of the shot he had made. It was over the heart and surely Jimp would die.

The doorbell rang because someone at the front door pushed the button.

Going to the telephone, Pearl picked up the receiver. "Hello," she said.

"Number please?" said Central.

"The phone rang," said Pearl, hanging up the receiver.

The doorbell rang again because someone at the front door had pushed the button again.

Pearl went to the door. She opened it. There stood a fellow with a satchel full of tools.

"Do you need any doctoring done today?" asked the fellow.

"Goody! Goody!" laughed Pearl. "Are you a doctor? You are just in time." Pearl was so tickled.

"I'm a horse doctor," said the man.

"Then come in and look at the guy I was about to marry," said Pearl. "My father shot him over the heart."

The horse doctor examined Jimp. He took his temperature, his respiration, his watch and chain.

"Shot me over the heart just as I was being married," said Jimp.

The horse doctor smiled. "Getting married is all that saved you," he said. "Otherwise you would have been shot through the heart. At the time the bullet struck you your heart was not in its proper place. It was in your throat."

"Then, he's all right?" giggled Pearl.

"Yes," said the horse doctor. "I'll patch him up fine."

Mr. Handle had been standing in the corner chewing on the end of his pistol during this conversation.

"How! How! How!" he said with a howl of rage as he jumped forward to shoot the minister again.

"Don't shoot," cried the minister's wife, rushing in from the kitchen. "Don't shoot! You'll wake the baby."

"How! How! How!" howled the angry father as he realized he was foiled again.

"Weep! Weep! Weep!" wept Pearl as her father grabbed her by the hair and yanked her out of the door. Her loved one dashed to rescue his loved one, but too late.

Pearl was placed in a taxi and taken home. She was locked in her room while Mr. Handle sat down outside the door to clean his gun.

The following day Detective Gumshoe was loafing in his office when the phone rang. Mr. Handle was calling.

Hurrying to the Handle home Detective Gum ran up the steps. He knocked once. He knocked twice. He did not care to be mistaken for opportunity. Gum had been seized before.

"Pearl is missing," shouted Mr. Handle as he opened the door. Detective Gum calmed the excited father by repeating his slogan, "She will be found, by Gum."

"I locked her in the room," wept the father. "She always was missing something. Now she is missing herself."

"Show me the room," cried Gum. "But wait," he added. "I'll go to it." Gum's great experience had taught him there might be some trick in bringing the room to him.

The detective examined the room. He opened a dresser drawer. Her clothes were gone. Everything was gone.

"She isn't in there," cried Mr. Handle. "I looked."

Gum rushed to her dressing table. He picked up Pearl's soap dish. It was empty. Even her soap was gone.

"She isn't in the soap dish," cried Mr. Handle. "I looked."

"No," admitted the great detective. "Pearl isn't in the soap dish. Her soap is gone. Her towels are gone. Looks like a clean get-away."

Detective Gumshoe was stumped. Really, he was worse than stumped. He was up a tree.

As the two men stood facing a great problem and each other, the door knob turned. It rattled. The door was locked.

There was a creak and a splintering wood. The door flew open. Detective Gumshoe's pipe entered.

Gum had forgotten his pipe, so it followed him. Reaching the locked door the pipe had kicked it open.

Remarkable? Not in the least. You evidently don't know just what a kick Gum's pipe had. It was strong. It could lick Tunney.

Its great strength was discussed for miles around. When not following Gum it passed away the time by pulling autos out of the mud.

Gum's pipe was stronger than the entire onion crop of the United States combined with the garlic crop of Italy.

One time when Gum was hunting in Africa he sent the pipe out to bring back a dozen eggs for dinner. The pipe got into a fight with a lion and forgot what Gum had sent it for. Two days later it returned carrying a dozen elephants instead of eggs.

The pipe was stronger than a burning rubber factory where the firemen used hair tonic for water.

It was a very brave pipe. One time it followed Gum to a bridge party where dozens of women were playing bridge.

That's how strong and how brave Gum's pipe was.

Detective Gum lit the famous pipe. "I always say," he said, "that it is better to have your pipe lit than to be lit yourself."

"Pearl's eloped," wailed Mr. Handle, as Gum smoked.

The detective calmly puffed away and blew enormous smoke rings. These rings were so perfect they settled to the floor and remained intact. Gum expected to be rich very soon, rich enough to retire.

He hoped to start an ice cream factory where the tires would be made out of smoke rings. It was one of his great accomplishments, blowing smoke rings.

Frequently, when he passed motorists who had plenty of punctures but no spare tires, he stopped long enough to light his famous pipe and blow a smoke ring to help them out.

Then too, the smaller smoke rings were very delicious when rolled in flour and fried in hot fat. Powdered sugar was added after they cooled, and just a touch of cinnamon.

Oh, there is no telling how well Detective Gum really could blow smoke rings with his famous pipe.

When working on a case, he blew rings, and the solution to the case frequently formed itself in the smoke.

Now, as Gum sat and puffed and thought about the missing Pearl Handle, four rings rolled about the floor and formed themselves into a line of naughts. A fifth ring turned sideways at the head of the line.

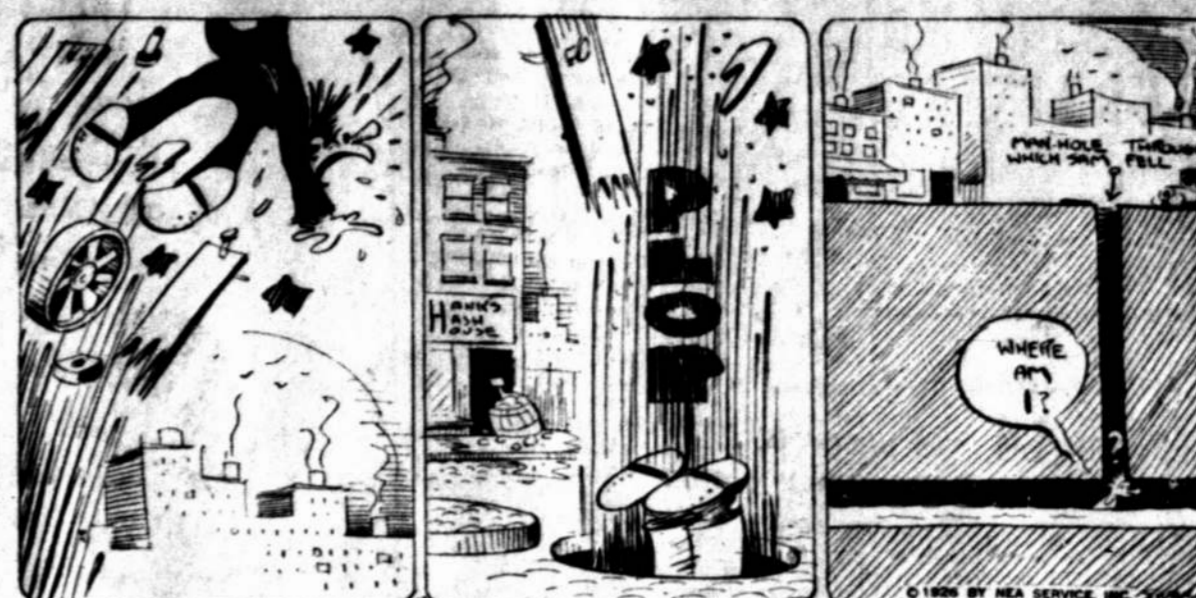

"I have it!" cried Gum.

They Never Knew

"You haven't my Pearl," wailed the sad father. "She's cloped. She's gone away from Omecomy, Ohio, with Jimmison Weed.

"The smoke rings say offer a $10,000 reward," cried the detective. "Good," shouted the father. "Ten thousand single or thirty cents married."

It was a dark and stormy evening when Detective Gum and Mr. Handle arrived in Omecomy, Ohio. It was even darker than the river sky, whenever that is. After a long search through the telephone and city directories they found Jimm and Pearl, comfortably situated in the city jail. Jimm was smoking and reading the evening paper while Pearl was arranging for a little bridge party to which she had invited a number of friends. The Detective and Mr. Handle entered the cunning little apartment, which had all the conveniences of a modern jail, without the formality of knocking. The warden had been lovely to them. He had even said they might enter under suspicion.

"Pearl!" her father cried in unmistakable joy. "You've reduced at least ten pounds!"

"Father," Pearl cried back at him. "I'm to be Queen of the May."

And then the prison chaplain was called and he married them so it would be possible for them to live happily ever after.

Police Not Rushed As Christmas Nears

In spite of the fact that the holiday season fast approaching is generally heralded by an increase in petty crimes, the city police department is not enveloped in a "rush" desk.

A quiet and peaceful Sabbath rejoined over the municipal bastille, not a single law violator being registered, Mr. Innon.

Teachers Of Five Counties Meet In Colorado Session

BIG SPRING, Dec. 13.—Teachers from five counties will meet in Colorado on Dec. 20-21-22 for institute; they are Howard, Nolan, Borden, Scurry and Mitchell.

The meeting will be held in the new high school building that has just recently been completed and dedicated. Dr. H. W. Morelock, president of Sul Ross State Teachers college of Alpine will be superintendent in charge of the institute. The purpose of the five counties holding institute together is in order that speakers and instructors of wider experience can be secured at a more nominal cost per teacher than where each county holds its own institute.

Those of prominence taking part on the program are: Dr. Morelock, Dr. J. P. Jarrett of the West Texas State Teachers College at Canyon, Dr. Sandifer, president of Simmons University, E. M. N. Mars, State Supt. and Dr. J. W. Hunt, president of McMurry's College.

Miss Lewellyn Rogers, principal of South Ward school of Big Spring has been made Supt. of the primary department at the institute.

It is estimated that there will be between 300 and 400 teachers in attendance during the week.

CANTON, Ohio, Dec. 13. (AP)—A crowd of 300 persons stampeded the corridor of the court house here prior to convening of the afternoon session of the trial of Patrick Eugene McDermott, charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher.

Deputy sheriffs were forced to charge into the crowd to prevent bursting of the court room doors. Opening statements of both sides were presented at the morning session.

Sleeping Sickness Victim Much Better

The case reported here a week ago by Dr. V. V. Clark which was thought to be an example of the dread "sleeping sickness" has turned out to be a similar disease but not an exact case of the sleeping malady. It was announced by Doctor Clark this morning.

The patient is responding well to treatment which is little by little clearing away the habit of falling to sleep when he is not physically occupied. The patient is an 18 year old boy.

Denies He Is Husband
Rogers at first said he was Miss Bradley's husband. He later denied this, leaving his relationship to Miss Bradley somewhat in doubt. The girl's mother, Mrs. G. E. Bradley, last night denied that her daughter was married to Rogers.

"There's some terrible mistake," she said.
Rogers appeared yesterday at the office of the Amarillo News, asked for developments in the "flapper hold-up case", and gave the name of C. J. Morris, saying he was the husband of the girl. Recognized in the newspaper office, he admitted his identity but said he was going to the aid of the girl, who is employed in the office of Dan Moody, attorney general and governor-elect, and is a graduate of the same institution as Rogers, the University of Texas.
Miss Bradley is not required to be in court today when Judge George Calhoun considers the sufficiency of her bond, which was fixed at $5,000 by Judge O. S. Lattimore of the court of criminal appeals. Announcement that she would waive examining trial was made last night by her attorneys.

The cold waves hit Amarillo about 3 p. m. last night following a bright, warm but windy day Sunday.

Miss Bradley was presented in court to determine whether she should be tried on bond or sent to jail. A $5,000 bond was granted by Judge O. S. Lattimore of the court of criminal appeals Sunday after he had granted a writ of habeas corpus returnable in Judge Calhoun's court today.
As soon as court had been called to order, Attorney John Cofer, representing the 22 year old defendant, said the point that "since the girl has not been indicted, there is no defense necessary."
Recess Granted
A brief recess was granted for the state to prepare an answer.
In the interim, Miss Bradley chatted with newspapermen and friends.
A photographer took a flash-light of her and her mother, as they sat at the attorney's table. The court then said there would be no more pictures taken.
Several times the bailiff had to call the court to order and Judge Calhoun said he wanted it understood that the court proceedings "was not a picture show, or any other kind of a show."
Miss Bradley was cordial, smiling, but non-committal. She talked about clothes, pictures, friends, and marriage, but not about robbery. She made no objection to pictures being taken.
"I think it's all right for them to take them if they want them," she said, but she added that she did not have any of her own pictures to give away.
Denies She Is Married
Miss Bradley emphatically denied she was married to Otis Rogers, Amarillo attorney, "for any one else."
"Don't believe Otis said we were married," Miss Bradley told the Associated Press. "They are dragging my friends into it now. I have gone with four or five other boys, and I suppose they'll be dragging them in some way or another."
Miss Bradley "kidded" newspapermen who asked her of what material

her green dress was made, and good-naturedly criticized newspaper accounts of other costumes. "I wish I had all the clothes I've been described as wearing."
