MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. F.

Few journalists have any illusions about the power of the press, said Wickham Steel, editor of the London Times, to journalism students at London recently. They know the weakness of the press; sometimes they know its strength. Very few could tell beforehand what would be the effect of anything in print. Yet the power of the press exists; it exists through the making of a newspaper. The only thing one could be certain of was that, if for a good period he thought honestly and wrote sincerely, he could produce a certain effect upon public opinion. It was essential, he said, that the journalist should posses an education as broad, as deep, and as varied as possible, and in addition good shorthand, good typewriting, a mastery of foreign languages, a mastery of English—the most difficult language he had ever tried to learn—a training in the use of reference books, power of compression, clearness of thought, and a sense of logic. But with all these there would be something lacking if behind them was not character. The journalist must have a strong grip on the realities of life; must have deep sympathy with, and understanding of, human passions, desires, frailties and aspirations. He must be honest in thought, word and deed, fearless in following the lead of a well informed conscience and saying what was right, and able to distinguish between what was fundamentally right and what was wrong. Those were the indispensable qualifications of the journalist. Mere talent was not enough. Cleverness alone was too frail a prop for the life work of a man or woman. The making of a newspaper was a branch of human activity which no one should enter unless he or she felt a vocation. The life of a journalist was often a dog's life, he continued. When others slept journalists worked; where others had definite hours and well defined duties there was no limit to the calls a newspaper office could make on the staff. The journalist's was not a comfortable profession. It was full of difficulties, dangers, drawbacks and disappointments, but it gave some of the highest satisfaction for which a human being could hope. No one should approach journalism unless prepared to consider the drawbacks as dust in the balance as compared with the satisfaction it offered. A good newspaper must be a commercial proposition—a business as well as an art. Unless newspapers could pay their way they could not be independent, and unless they were independent they became a danger to those who read them; for the readers believed they were getting honest and sincere opinions, whereas in reality they were getting opinions framed in accordance with interests which were hidden. The independence of the press was one of the few things which stood as a bulwark of public liberty, a guarantee to the community against secret dealings to the public detriment. Neither the churches, parliament, nor the public platform could vie with the press as the guardian of the public weal. Various interests sought to undermine the influence of the press. Dignities and titles were bestowed on eminent scribes. Pressure direct and indirect was put upon them to turn their views in one direction rather than another.

RESIGNATION JUDGE WELDON IS ANNOUNCED

Accepted by Governor Saturday and District Attorney Bert Wilson Named as Successor.

District Attorney Post Tendered to Bert King; Weldon to Re-enter Practice With Local Firm.

The acceptance of the resignation of Judge H. F. Weldon of the 30th district court, the appointment of District Attorney H. R. Wilson as his successor and the offer of the latter position to Bert King, local attorney, by Governor Pat Neff, were developments Saturday afternoon and evening which came as a general surprise to local poltical and legal circles.

It was not known that Judge Weldon contemplated resigning the district judgeship which he has held since the resignation of Judge William M. Bonner, two years ago, until it was learned Friday that District Attorney Wilson and his law partner, John Davenport, local Neff leader, had gone to Austin to confer with Governor Neff regarding the appointment of the former as Judge Weldon's successor. His appointment was announced immediately after the announcement of the acceptance of Judge Weldon's resignation.

Doubt was expressed Saturday night if Mr. King, who has practiced law in this city for several years, would accept the appointment as district attorney. Asked concerning the appointment Saturday night, Mr. King said that he had not been officially notified of the offer although local attorneys received the information from Governor Neff late Saturday afternoon.

He said that he had been asked to defer final decision in regard to the acceptance until Judge Wilson and Attorney Davenport return here from Austin. He said the appointment was made without conference with him. Mr. King was prominently mentioned for the office last July when Fletcher S. Jones resigned and Judge Wilson was later appointed. He refused to consider the appointment at that time.

Judge Weldon resigned in order to re-enter private life in this city. It was announced Saturday that he had joined the firm of McDonald & Cummings the firm to be known in the future as Weldon, McDonald & Cummings.

In connection with his resignation Judge Weldon made the following announcement:

"I was appointed Judge of the 30th district by Governor Hobby on February 1, 1920, upon the resignation of Judge Wm. N. Bonner. I felt at the time and still feel that the acceptance of the office meant a financial sacrifice to any lawyer engaged in the active practice during those boom days. Later, when the office of district attorney became vacant through the resignation of Hon. Fletcher S. Jones, Judge P. A. Martin, Judge E. W. Napier and myself asked Hon. H. R. Wilson to sacrifice his personal and professional affairs and accept the appointment from Governor Neff to the office of district attorney. Mr. Wilson responded to our request and to the great need of the district and during his term of office thus far only one jury has returned a verdict of not guilty in a criminal case prosecuted by him.

"Realizing that I should not further sacrifice the best years of my life to the salary fixed by law, and learning of Mr. Wilson's ambition and especial fitness for the office of district judge, and believing that he can and will carry the work of the office to the satisfaction of the people of this district and with distinction to himself, I have requested the governor to accept my resignation and to appoint Mr. Wilson in my stead."

TEX RICKARD IS HELD UNDER $10,000 BOND

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Tex Rickard, sports promoter, today was held on $10,000 bail for the action of the grand jury by Magistrate's court on a charge of assault preferred by 15 year old Alice Buck and the Children's society.

Counsel for Rickard in arguments before Magistrate Simpson attempted to discredit testimony given at previous hearings by the Ruck girl and her friend, Anna Hess. This testimony dealt mainly with places where the alleged assaults took place.

After listening to arguments by counsel for the society the magistrate adjourned the hearing temporarily to allow Rickard to produce bail, meantime placing him in the custody of his counsel.

HOUSEMAN FOR SLAIN DIRECTOR IS QUESTIONED

Representatives of Police, Sheriff and District Attorney Meet Together for First Time.

Jealousy Again Looms as Possible Motive for Crime Following Saturday's Developments.

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 11.—Henry Peavey, who was the houseman for William Desmond Taylor, murdered film director, was escorted late today to the office of District Attorney Thomas Woolwine by two deputy sheriffs. At the office, the deputies, Peavey, Mr. Woolwine, W. C. Doran, his chief deputy, and a court reporter, were all secluded for several hours in Mr. Woolwine's private office. A half hour after the conference began Captain David L. Adams, of the Los Angeles police department, who has had charge of the police investigation, joined the other officials and Peavey.

This was the first time that representatives of the three principal offices working on the case—that is, the police, the sheriff and the district attorney—had met in a joint conference.

Peavey has given several statements including a very extended one taken by the police. All of his stories have had to do with the life of Mr. Taylor in the months that Peavey was employed by him and with occurrences surrounding the finding of Mr. Taylor's body, bearing a revolver bullet wound, in the director's home here last week. The taking of a new statement under the circumstances existing today was deemed to mean that further investigation of the sheriff's theory of jealousy as a possible motive for the crime was to be made by all the officers employed on the case.

Other than the examination of Peavey apparently little of importance transpired today in the murder inquiry.

Peavey left the office after having been closeted with the officials about an hour. He went out alone, the officials continuing their conference as he departed.

"I've nothing to say," Peavey told reporters.

"I've just told my story over again to Mr. Woolwine."

Under-Sheriff Biscailluz and Captain Adams came out a little later.

"I cannot say that anything new has developed from the questioning of Peavey," Biscailluz said. "However, that does not mean that no new angle of investigation has been discovered."

POLICE WAR ON NARCOTIC RING AT FORT WORTH

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Feb. 11.—More raids, seeking to smash the narcotic ring operating between north Texas and Mexico will follow last night's killing of W. A. Master, special officer, who is supposed to have shot himself to death after police began looking for him on a charge of handling narcotics.

Three men, seized at the time of the raid that preceded the death of Master, are still held in jail. Federal narcotic agents also are holding much liquor and drugs. Charges will be filed, it is said, against two of the men in custody, accusing them of handling drugs between Fort Worth and Mexico. Master, at the time of his death, had left the police car to get his own car. A shot was heard in the darkness and his lifeless body was found on the roadside.

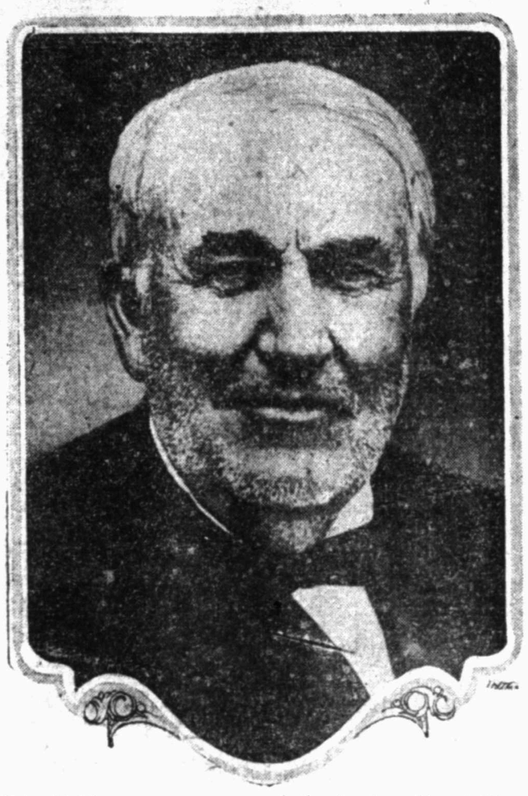

HOOVER SETS DATE FOR CONFERENCE ON CONTROL OF RADIOS

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Secretary Hoover has set February 27 as the date for the radio conference called at the request of President Harding to formulate regulations governing the disposition of air waves for the use of the wireless telephone. Radio experts of the department of the army, navy, postoffice and commerce have been invited to the meeting together with a number of radio engineers.

The purpose of the conference is to dispel congestion in the air caused by unrestricted use of the radio telephone and also to study the problem of regulation of the air communication.

Edison on Seventy-Fifth Birthday Announces That He Intends Serving Humanity for Only 15 More Years

By Associated Press.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 11.—Thomas A. Edison, inventor and electrical wizard, has just fifteen years more of service for humanity in him.

This was perhaps the most important statement he made in his annual interview with newspapermen today on the occasion of his 75th birthday.

Smilingly facing a little army of reporters and news and movie photographers who waylaid him on his way from his home to his laboratory, he answered volley after volley of questions on every subject the reporters could think of.

"I hope you will have several more birthdays," one of the reporters said as they were leaving.

"I shall have fifteen more," Mr. Edison said simply. He did not elaborate on the process by which he arrived at this conclusion.

A moment before he had answered a question as to when he intended to retire, with "never."

Asked what he was working on at present, Mr. Edison said he had "several red hot irons in the fire," but that he was not ready to talk about them as none were completed.

He placed Theodore Roosevelt at the head of a list of great men he had met—although he said he had met the former president but once.

"I liked Teddy," he said warmly.

He picked Sarah Bernhardt as "the greatest woman," declaring she was "still full of pepper."

He thought his friend Henry Ford would make a poor president as that was "not in his line" but declared he would vote for Ford if there were an election for the position of "director of manufacturers."

He said he would give Ford his full support if the automobile manufacturer obtained Muscle Shoals from the government.

"I do not think he should go into it," he added. "He is too ambitious and wants to help the farmer." But he declared he did not think Ford would fail in his undertaking if he obtained the plant.

The Washington conference on armament impressed Mr. Edison as "good—better than nothing at all," but he declared in favor of continuing naval preparations, "experimentally."

"We should experiment with the most deadly gases and the biggest guns," he said, "not that we will ever make use of them, but so that we may be prepared in case some other nation through rascality, should attack us. I want all nations to be prepared so that it will be so terrible that the game is up."

The radiophone, he said, was the greatest electrical development of the last year, with the amplifier, demonstrated at the burial of America's unknown soldier at Arlington national cemetery, as a close second.

Receipts of congratulations from his family, reading of a sheaf of telegrams of felicitations from President Harding, Sir Thomas Lipton, Charles M. Schwab and many others on the passing of his 75 milestone, and the interview with newspapermen about ended the day's celebration for Mr. Edison. As the newspaper men left he plunged into his laboratory to work on his "red hot irons."

KENNARD MAN CHARGED WITH DUAL MURDER

By Associated Press.

BEAUMONT, Texas, Feb. 11.—Tom Lowery of Kennard, Texas, has been released on bond after being arrested on a charge of murder of his son-in-law, Atmar West, and West's twin brother, Atley West, at Kennard Thursday. The trouble is said to have been the result of an altercation over Atmar West's two year old child who had been taken to Lowery's home by West's wife, from whom he was separated. The two brothers are reported to have gone to the Lowery home to obtain the child, when the shooting, in which the two men were killed, resulted. A shot gun was used in the killing.

EVEN CHINESE ACTRESSES HAVE BELONGINGS STOLEN

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 11.—Even Chinese actresses have things stolen and get their names in the papers as a result.

GREATER PART CARROLL HALL IS DESTROYED

Chapel Contained Art Department Which With Much Valuable Equipment, Is Near Total Loss.

Two Firemen Are Injured in Combatting Flames Which Originated in Dome of the Building.

By Associated Press.

WACO, Feb. 11.—The F. L. Carroll chapel of Baylor university, Waco, is practically a total wreck tonight as the result of fire, which broke out in the dome of the building late this afternoon, and caused an estimated loss of $250,000 before brought under control.

Flames were discovered in the dome of the chapel at 5 o'clock this afternoon, but even before discoverers could reach the dome to make an investigation they had so eaten their way into the construction of the building that the dome caved in, putting several students in imminent danger.

Even before firemen arrived students had begun a stubborn attack against the catastrophe.

That which multiplies the loss, however, is the fact that the second story of the building comprising the chapel with its seats, pipe organ, pianos, curtains and general equipment, is nearly a total loss. The pipe organ, say Baylor authorities, cannot be duplicated for $11,000.

The art department, situated on the first floor, is practically demolished, only a small piece of the busts, pictures and decorations being saved.

The building, itself, located at Fifth and Speight streets was erected in 1901 at a cost of $75,000. It was insured as to the building proper at $75,000; while insurance of $25,000 covered its contents. At least $200,000 equipment is believed to have been consumed, not counting books destoyed. No damage can be estimated on book losses.

Several persons were injured while fighting the flames and assisting in the work of rescuing valuable articles from the structure. Roy Hudgins, student, received a fracture of his left arm, while A. Sullins of the Central fire station, suffered a scalp wound caused by a falling rafter. Two other firemen suffered from heat and smoke but were able, after immediate aid, to continue their work.

There is no certainty as to the origin of the fire. The theory is advanced, however, that it might have started from the roof where workmen, during the day in repairing tin work, had been using blow torches. There can be no confirmation of this, however, for the present.

MASKED MEN SEIZE LIQUOR; WHIP OWNERS

By Associated Press.

TEXARKANA, Texas, Feb. 11.—Masked men near DeKalb, in the western end of Bowie county, confiscated an automobile containing twenty-one half gallon jars of moonshine, and whipped the two men who were in the car. After whipping the men they took them to Constable J. F. Bryan, instructing the officer to see that the men were locked up in the county jail, which was done.

The car containing the whiskey then was taken to DeKalb and turned over to a night watchman. The liquor was destroyed by DeKalb citizens. Both men have been released on $500 bond and will be given a hearing at DeKalb Monday on charges of transporting liquor.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The long controversy between the United States and Japan relating to the Pacific island of Yap, the subject of many notes and other diplomatic exchanges, was formally and finally ended today with the signature of a treaty by representatives of the two countries. This treaty, which defines the rights of the United States in Yap and other islands mandated to Japan under the treaty of Versailles, was signed at 2:30 o'clock by Secretary Hughes for the United States and Baron Kijuro Shidehara for Japan in the office of the former at the state department.

CLAIMING DIVINE OWNERSHIP OF GIN, BOND IS REFUSED

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Feb. 11.—One gin owner of Texas has refused to file bond with the markets and warehouse department as required by law because he says his gin is owned by God, according to Commissioner Charles E. Baughman. The man further contends that the constitution of the United States grants religious freedom to all and that he cannot be forced to bond his gin.

The man says he will take the entire matter up with President Harding because he has received direct instructions from God not to bond his gin as required by the Texas laws. He has been advised that the matter will be taken up with the Texas courts unless he complies with the law.

VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS CHARGED

Democratic Senator Denounces Recent Postmaster Appointment Made by President Harding.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Charges of violating the civil service laws were made against President Harding today in the senate by Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, in an attack upon the republican management of governmental affairs.

In appointing French Crow as postmaster of Marion, Ohio, his home city, by executive order, Senator Harrison said, Mr. Harding had "stamped" the law under foot. The appointment, which Senator Harrison announced he would oppose and urged be discussed on the floor of the senate, was, he said, "the most glaring incident in the history of civil service in the United States."

"How can followers of civil service have any faith or confidence?" he asked. "This is the beginning of the destruction of the civil service system."

Senator Harrison also attacked Chairman Lasker of the shipping board, declaring he had made statements regarding its alleged economy of administration which had not been borne out and also criticized an appropriation bill provision extending the $25,000 traveling allowance fund of the president for use of official entertainment purposes.

Chairman Warren of the appropriations committee defended the traveling entertainment fund and called attention to the expenditures abroad of former President Wilson. Senator Warren said that "some millions of dollars" had been spent by Mr. Wilson "and no accounting made for it yet."

That Senator Harrison was seeking to inject partisian politics into the discussion was charged by Senator Warren, while Mr. Harrison countered with the statement that Senator Warren had raised the question of partisanship.

Civil service examination was also attacked again by Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, and others. Senator Caraway read a letter from the commission denying his recent charges that examination marks had been raised arbitrarily and then reiterated the charges, citing alleged instances in Arkansas postmaster cases. Senator Caraway also charged that former service men had been "turned down" in seeking positions as postmasters.

Senator Harrison said it was a "farce, that postmasters are appointed." Other appointments, he said, "were subject to the same indictment." Without republican political influence, he declared, there was no chance to get a job under this administration. This condition, he said, in his opinion, "resulted from orders from above."

By Associated Press.

MEXIA, Texas, Feb. 11.—Drilling operations, except where oil companies can absolutely show that "dire consequences" would result by closing down will be shut down on Sunday in the Sunday law enforcement campaign in Limestone county beginning Sunday, February 19, according to County Attorney Eubanks.

"Sentiment seems to be for Sunday closing law enforcement," Eubanks said tonight, "and if we are going to enforce the law, it will be enforced right." Notice of the proposed stringent enforcement of the law effective February 19, was given a week ago. Theaters have never operated here on Sunday.

PUNISHMENT IS SET AT PRISON FOR TEN YEARS

Motion for New Trial Will Be Filed Monday, Attorneys for the Convicted Man Announce.

Former Instructor at State Training School Was Tried on Charge of Causing Death of Inmate.

By Associated Press.

GATESVILLE, Texas, Feb. 11.—H. G. Twyman, former drillmaster at the state juvenile training school, was found guilty of having caused the death of Dell Thames, an inmate, by a jury this afternoon. His punishment was fixed at 10 years in the state prison.

The jury agreed after twice reporting to the court it had been unable to reach a decision. After each report the court told the jury to try again. The case went to the jury Thursday.

Dell Thames died a few days after being admitted to the school. The testimony was that he had been punished for failure to drill as instructed. Twyman denied the punishment inflicted caused death, declaring it was his belief that young Thames was dead when brought to him for attention.

The case attracted statewide attention and resulted in an investigation of conditions at the school by the state board of control. Between his arrest and trial Twyman was at liberty under bond.

Twyman's attorneys announced a motion for a new trial will be filed Monday.

MASKED MEN GROUPS ACTIVE AT TEXARKANA

By Associated Press.

TEXARKANA, Texas, Feb. 11.—Masked men tonight took P. Norman, negro from Deputy Sheriff Will Jordan, of Bowie county. The deputy was returning from Ashdown, Ark., where the negro had been arrested. Norman has no connection with the Landers murder case. He is the negro who on Wednesday afternoon forced Deputy Jordan to leave another negro's farm near Texarkana, using a rifle to make the deputy comply with his commands.

At midnight search by officers for the negro was abandoned. A thorough inspection of all the territory adjacent to the place where he was seized had been made and no trace of him or of the masked men had been found.

District Attorney C. A. Wheeler expressed fear that the men who took Norman thought he was the one who had killed Landers and his body would be found somewhere in the morning.

Other parties of masked men twice appeared at the Four States Press office tonight, each of the parties being with it a white man who had been taken out and whipped, these men stating that they were told they were whipped for mistreating their wives. This makes the fourth instance of this kind here this week, not including the taking of the negro from the deputy sheriff nor the seizure of the two alleged moonshiners at DeKalb.

TRIALS ARE SCHEDULED FOR MONDAY

The trial of a large number of criminal cases will start Monday morning in the 30th district court opening with the case of C. M. Wagner, former city policeman charged with the murder of John Webb of this city in September.

Just what provision will be made in the matter of a judge for the court is not known. Judge H. R. Wilson appointed judge of the court Saturday will not be eligible to try the cases due to the fact that he served as district attorney during the time the indictment against Wagner and many others were returned. According to rumors Saturday, Judge P. A. Martin or Judge Ed Napier of the 89th and 78th district courts, will be asked to preside over the 30th district court pending the trial of the criminal cases.

This report, due to the fact that Judge Wilson is still in Austin could not be verified Saturday. A postponement of the trial of the cases set for this week was considered a possibility.

A special venire of 100 men has been ordered to report Monday morning for the Wagner trial and a large number of witnesses have been subpoenaed for it and other cases set for the week. Wagner is alleged to have shot and killed Webb at the latter's residence on Lee street. It is understood that the defense will base its case on the contention that the act was in connection with his duties as a policeman.

Peril of Lying in Bed Too Long Seen by London Doctor

(By International News Service)

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The peril of lying in bed is one of the latest ideas of doctors.

"Get up and move about" is the new prescription.

Dr. R. F. Rowlands, surgeon to Guys hospital, is the apostle of the don't lie in bed too long" creed. He expounds it vigorously in the British Medical Journal.

It is people who have undergone operations who are in peril if they stay in bed too long.

"It cheers a patient," states Dr. Rowlands, "to know that he may move about as much as he likes in bed from the first, have the freedom of the room after four days, of the bath after seven days, and may take short walks in the sunshine after ten days."

Here are some of the bad effects of lying in bed, as expounded by the doctor:

The heart beats less forcibly.

Breathing becomes slower and shallower.

Appetite fails.

FIRE COMMISSIONER MAKES HIS REPORT ON JANUARY FIRES

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Feb. 11.—There were 335 fires in Texas with a total property loss of $421,854 during January, according to the report of the state fire insurance commission.

The property loss is estimated from the amount of insurance paid by the fire insurance companies and not the valuation of the property destroyed. The commission says that 60 per cent of the fires could have been prevented.

Defective flues caused the greatest number of fires there being 60. "Carelessness" caused 38. Two fires were attributed to "matches carelessly handled" and two to cigarettes.

DO YOU KNOW MEANING OF BUCKLED GOLOSHES?

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—G'loshes—if they go flippity-flop, boys, it's all right to smile and try to get her 'phone number, but if they're laced up, well mind your own business, for she's engaged.

This is the newest of the code of Northwestern university, where it is said, diamond rings are passe and goloshes, opened or buckled, are telling the story that heretofore has radiated from a solitaire.

While the maidens with their goloshes unbuckled are "free-booters" in the field of love, even those who turn 'em down a la Captain Kidd deny that they will vamp the beaux of another girl.

How the fastened golosh came to be a mark of fidelity to a man, according to the story, originated when one youth attending Northwestern requested his fiance to button 'em up.

WICHITANS ARE AUTHORIZED TO HOLD PLACES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Under the clause of the Transportation act requiring permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission before an individual can serve as director of more than one road the Commission today authorized Frank Kell to hold, until further order of the Commission, the positions of director and vice-president of the Wichita Falls & Northwestern Railway company, vice president of the Wichita Falls & Northwestern Railway company of Texas, vice-president of the Wichita Falls Railway company and vice-president of the Wichita Falls & Wellington Railway company of Texas in addition to the positions which he was authorized to hold by the commission's orders entered December 7, 1921.

It was further ordered that J. A. Kemp be authorized to hold, until further order of the commission, the positions of director and vice-president of the Wichita Falls & Northwestern Railway company, vice-president of the Wichita Falls Railway company, and vice-president of the Wichita Falls & Wellington Railway company of Texas in addition to the positions which he was authorized to hold by the Commission's order entered January 10, 1922.

The above lines are the Katy lines radiating from Wichita Falls, the corporations including the Northwestern corporations in both Texas and Oklahoma, the Wellington branch of the same line, and the line from Wichita Falls to Henrietta, constructed by local people and afterwards leased and finally sold to the Katy—the Wichita Falls Railway company.

Under the order entered December 7, the two were authorized to hold their official positions and places on the board of the Wichita Falls & Southern Railway company and the Wichita Falls & Southern Railroad company, the former being the original corporation and the latter the corporation organized to finance the extension to the Stephens county oil fields.

In addition to these Mr. Kell was authorized to continue as president of the C. & O. W. railroad; an Oklahoma short line which he has owned for a number of years.

EDUCATORS OF STATE DISCUSS SCHOOL PLANS

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Feb. 11.—A general discussion of the entire educational system of Texas with no definite results resolutions or written statements was the theme of the "think out loud" conference held in Governor Neff's reception room today. Newspaper men and outsiders were barred from the conference and the governor's review of the conference was all that was given out.

No programs were outlined, no resolutions offered, nor any written outline of a plan for the betterment of the Texas educational system were offered or adopted," the governor said after the conference. "It was simply a general discussion of the educational affairs of Texas from the humblest rural school to the University of Texas."

The governor also said that the conference was called to "help him make a better governor" and to discuss a plan whereby the education of a Texas child, from the day it entered the public schools, until he received his college degree, could be brought into a single educational unit.

It is understood that the question of a constitutional convention for the purpose of revising the educational laws of Texas was discussed. However, it was also learned that the majority of those present favored passage of a law completely revising the educational code of the state.

The governor expressed hope that the conference would result in placing the Texas educational system on a higher plane. He said that no further meetings or conferences were contemplated at present.

Approximately fifty educators of Texas were present at the conference which lasted the entire day. Those present included the heads and members of the governing board of the Texas institutions and the heads of the various women's organizations of Texas.

Conversation to fit the rhythm of particular dance steps is the latest "jazz" notion.

Krupp Machinery That Made Giant Guns Turning Out Peace Materials

Under the terms of the Versailles treaty, all Germany's war material plants had to be shut down or converted so as to be suitable for manufacturing peace time products. MAGNOLIA BUYS PRODUCTION ON DODSON AND BEACH FARMS IN ONE OF LARGEST RECENT OIL DEALS

Sale of the Dodson Farm and Beach Farm Oil Companies property in the South Burkburnett-Texhoma shallow field, to the Magnolia Petroleum Company for $500,000 has recently been consummated. This is one of the largest deals made in this district in some time.

There are 120 acres included in the property sold, 80 out of the Beach farm and 60 out of the Dodson land. Production amounts to approximately 350 barrels daily.

J. A. Staley, J. I. Staley, W. T. Willis, A. A. Keuhn and M. Fowler were the owners of this property. The leases have been operated by this partnership, and some of the best producers in the shallow pool have been completed on these two leases. Production here is now on a settled basis.

REPORTS THAT AMERICAN COTTON EXCHANGE BOOKS ARE HELD, DECLARED FALSE

NEW YORK, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Albert Massey of the law firm of Seabury, Massey & Lowe, attorneys for the American Cotton Exchange, today issued the following statement:

"Several weeks ago a member of the American Cotton Exchange failed under distressing circumstances. This failure automatically suspended him from membership. He was afterward tried by the board of directors and was expelled as a member of the exchange. It was understood that the district attorney was making some investigations into the affairs of this former member of the Exchange, and the Exchange immediately offered to submit its books to the district attorney's office for examination. The officials of the Exchange and its attorneys have conferred with Mr. Wilson and Mr. Simmons, assistant district attorneys, and have at all times been ready to furnish them any information that the books of the Exchange might disclose, and have urged the district attorney's office repeatedly to send an accountant to examine the books of the Exchange. This has not been done up to the present time. No officer of the Exchange has been subpoenaed by the district attorney nor have any books or papers of the Exchange been seized by the district attorney. This would be wholly unnecessary as the Exchange is as anxious as any good citizen could be to suppress any illegal transaction and takes the same attitude that the other exchanges have taken in this respect."

Judge A. W. Graham, president of the American Cotton Exchange, Inc., also made the following statement today:

"Reports of the seizure of our books and closure of exchange absolutely false. District attorney is making general investigations of all exchanges The American Cotton Exchange has and general Wall street conditions, offered to assist in any way possible."—Adv.

COUNTY GETS SHARE OF 1922 AUTO FEES

The county's fund for the maintenance of improved roads was made richer by $39,032.03 Saturday afternoon when M. L. Tittle, county tax collector turned over a check for that amount to Tom McHam, county treasurer. The sum represents the county's share of automobil licenses which have been collected for the year 1922 up to and including January 28.

The county now has a maintenance fund of $177,602.18 which has collected from the sale of automobile licenses since 1913. By law the county gets one-half of the total license fees collected and can use the fund for no other purpose than the maintenance of improved roads. Due to the fact that the county had no improved roads until two years ago no part of the fund has ever been expended until the last few months.

At present the county is paying two motorcycle officers from the fund and is also paying the cost of the maintenance patrol which was recently put to work on the road. The total expenditures at present however, according to Mr. McHam, is less than half what the county is securing in interest from the fund. The fund is drawing 7.52 per cent interest.

According to Mr. McHam, the fund is one of the largest in the state. It is expected that enough additional automobiles will be licensed during the year to add $10,000 more to the fund.

Laemmle Would Rid Hollywood Of Undesirables

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Undesirables in the moving picture world will be "lopped off like rotten branches," Carl Laemmelle, producer, said today in discussing the Taylor murder.

"One hundred million American dollars invested in moving pictures is endangered by the acts of a dozen or so wastrels and degenerates," he said. "Ninety-nine percent of the film personnel is clean and sound. We do not intend to allow the infinitesimal minority to weaken the business. No producer wants to employ people like that.

"There is nothing wrong with Hollywood—the trouble lies with only a very few degenerates. I think so much of Hollywood that I am going to build a home there and I have a 20-year old daughter. I have no fear that anything in Hollywood will influence her wrongly."

CAFE COOK IS SHOT TO DEATH AT PLAINVIEW

By Associated Press.

PLAINVIEW, Texas, Feb. 11.—Oscar L. Duncan, 27, cook in a local cafe, was shot and almost instantly killed here at 10 o'clock this morning. W. B. Jordan, 41, later surrended to Sheriff J. C. Terry, of Hale county.

Five shots from an automatic pistol took effect in the chest of Duncan, who died within a few minutes without making any statement.

Jordan and Duncan were partners in the restaurant business here until about four months ago. Jordan has a wife and two children, and Duncan had a wife.

W. D. Jordan waived preliminary hearing here this afternoon on a charge of killing Oscar L. Duncan, and his bond was set at $5,000, which was promptly furnished. The grand jury will convene Monday to consider the case.

Death Writes Last Chapter of Long Romance

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Ontario, Canada, Feb. 11.—A romance that budded in youth, but did not flower until old age, has been ended by the death of R. W. Cole, 85, at Long Beach, Cal., where he was passing a honeymoon with his 75-year old bride. Word of his death reached friends here today.

More than half a century ago Cole said an revoir to his young sweetheart at Blyth, Ontario, and went west. Fortune was slow in accumulating and the young woman became Mrs. Mogridge.

Cole, learning she was married, took a bride in the west. A year ago his wife died and he returned, to find Mrs. Mogridge a widow. The old love was rekindled and they started a few weeks ago on their honeymoon.

Love In a Cottage Enters Life Of Heiress to Many Millions Who Marries Factory Worker

Mr. & Mrs. Anastase Vonsiatsky.

The cottage in which they are living.

(By International News Service)

CHESTER, Pa., Feb. 10.—"I shall stay and work at Baldwin's—how long I do not know," replied Anastase Andreivitch Vonsiatskoy-Vouslatsky, twenty-three, when questioned as to his intentions following his marriage to Mrs. Marian Stephens, forty-five, heiress to $40,000,000 in New York.

"The house at No. 505 Swarthmore avenue, where we will live, is to be mine. I may take out citizenship papers for America, but that is not certain. I would return to my own country if they would restore the Czar, for I am a monarchist. Affairs in Russia now are chaos—I do not even know if my brothers and sisters live. I have seen horrors. I have lived horrors. My wife is younger than her years; but I—I am older than my years, for I have seen men dying, suffering wounds, death!"

He shuddered and seemed to visualize the last stand of the shattered remnants of Admiral Kolchak's army against the encircling hordes of the Bolsheviki. Anastase was aide to General Denikin and Admiral Kolchak before they were overwhelmed in the rising Red tide.

Works as Chemist.

Before his marriage, Vonsiatskoy punch the time clock at Baldwin's before 7:30. In the big Eddystone shops he may be seen, in acid spattered overalls, at work in Shop No. 1, Contract No. 16, in his capacity as chemical tester. He is well liked by his fellow workmen, to whom he is known as "V. V."

Ever since he came to Baldwin's he has been working to establish the home at Ridley Park, on which he has paid a month's rent in advance. The love-nest for the $40,000,000 bride is of the familiar Pennsylvania railroad school of Swiss architecture so frequently found in this section, but its lack of artistic merit does not bother Anastase.

He is proud of it and delighted to be ordering furniture for it from Camden. Also, he prides himself on the acquirement of a second-hand automobile. He paid $100 down on the car and displayed a telegram signed "Marian" to the salesman in which the balance of the sum of $1,600 was guaranteed.

Dislikes the Publicity.

After several encounters with groups of newspapermen he has assumed a bored expression, which plainly says that he would rather face the hordes of Lenin and Trotsky ten times over than run the gauntlet of questions and telephone calls he has had to submit to since he sprang into the limelight.

Anastase prides himself on having been aide to both of the famous leaders of the "White" Russian forces.

His romance with Mrs. Marian Stephens, wealthy divorcee, was the result of a chance meeting in Paris, in which the air of romance surrounding the twenty-three-year-old soldier made a deep impression on the heart of the one-time leader of Chicago northside society.

Anastase's career as locomotive builder commenced some time ago, when a highly polished limousine drove up to the offices of the Eddystone works and deposited him armed with a letter of introduction to Samuel M. Vauclain, president of Baldwin's. A conference with William Thomas, labor superintendent followed and the next day "V. V." as his fellows know him, started work on a testing gang shop No. 1, contract 16.

Hopes for New Czar.

Since that time he has worked daily from 7:30 to 5.

"I do not want my wife to live in any house but mine," he said, "paid for with my own money. The car she is to pay for it—it will cost $1,600—the furniture also.

Smiling, young Vonsiatskoy referred to his own fortune of 1,200,000 rubles, which he modestly values as five dollars. The aristocratic Russian family from which he descended, formerly ruled over vast estates in southern Russia. These were all seized by the Bolsheviki, during the revolution, for the family were pronounced monarchists. Anastase himself, while resident in Paris, following the collapse of Admiral Kolchak, wrote the "Diary of a Monarchist," which he says would not prove unpopular if published in this country, let alone in Soviet Russia.

He plans to establish himself in a position where some day he may be able to be one of the leaders in the restoration of a new Czar.

TWO HOURS APART, BUT CRIME TOTAL DIFFERS

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Because New York is full of crime and Philadelphia is quiet and peaceful it costs 210 per cent more to operate a baggage delivery truck here than it does in the Quaker City, according to Samuel W. F. Draper, president of the New York Transfer company.

In New York, two hours distant from Philadelphia, every truck must have a chauffeur and a helper, while in Philadelphia "you can leave a wagon on the streets with some security."

When it comes to a question of staying qualities, the undertaker can lay the pugilist out.

GIRLS ENJOY PRETTY VALENTINE PARTY.

More than 100 members of the Girls' club of the high school were entertained with a pretty valentine party at the school, with Miss Nyrum, the high school librarian, acting as hostess.

The admission to the affair was a book for the library, and 60 books were brought and 40 more promised.

Several enjoyable contests furnished diversion, also a short informal program, including a piano solo by Miss Ina Ponder; a reading, "Sweet Girl Graduate," Mrs. G. H. Gipson, and a vocal solo by Mrs. Will Gray.

A ceil pond arranged in the library, where each girl fished for a picture of her future husband and received a comic valentine, proved an amusing feature of the entertainment.

At a late hour, hot chocolate and heart shaped cakes were served.

TRAVEL CLUB PRESENTS ONE ACT PLAY FRIDAY

The play was given under the direction of the president, Mrs. Ola Hamlin, and Mrs. Leslie Humphrey and Mrs. McLean of the Players' club, and the parts were taken as follows:

Miss Electra Milk, Mrs. Humphrey; Miss Cornelia Milk, Mrs. Ben G. O'Neal; Mrs. Oberly, Mrs. McClean and Mrs. Orman. Mrs. Hamlin. The Misses Milk were old maids, and the parts were convincingly taken by Mesdames Humphrey and O'Neal. Mrs. Hamlin and Mrs. McLean were very natural and also did good work.

Preceding the performance, Mrs. Luther Hoffman as an introduction said in part: "In presenting the one act plays this year, we have tried to make familiar the various dramatic and also the different types of the one-act plays being presented in the Little Theaters. In presenting George Middleton's play which through their literary quality and serious purpose stand out from the bulk of American drama, we have attempted to show his keen sense of character and apparently instructive feeling from the feminine point of view.

This afternoon we have selected a play expressive of a new section, that of the middle west, a different Little Theater group, the Wisconsin Players.

A group of non-professionals who are now in their tenth season working naturally with local material, they are trying to illuminate the burlesque and insincere. It is their hope to express the quality of the people and their peoples work. Because of this encouragement, they have achieved a style quite their own, and we interpret this afternoon the Feast of the Holy Innocents as an example of the middle western dramas.

Special guests included active members of the Players and Junior Travel clubs.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

A CONVALESCENT BOY

The active boy who was unable to sit up in bed without a support kept slipping down.

His mother put a pillow under his knees, but he wriggled it down toward the foot of the bed with his own small body.

A hard cushion was placed against the foot of the bed, but it was too far away for the small feet to reach.

Then came the woman who always seemed to have unexpected ideas tucked away in her brain. In this instance she said the idea was not exactly her own. But it solved the problem.

A short, stout board was procured and two holes bored in it, one at each end. Then the board was padded with soft material and covered with a piece of muslin.

How Box Was Adjusted.

Adjusting this footboard on edge against the boy's feet, stout cotton rope was threaded through the holes and the rope tied to the head of the bed on each side of the small body.

"It's exactly like the seat of a swing," laughed the boy, pressing his feet against it and realizing that he could not slip down any more.

Because the board interfered to some extent with the bed clothes a pair of stockings and warm, woolly slippers were put on the boy's feet. Then a blanket was folded across his knees. Big pillows were piled against the head of the bed and he leaned back against them comfortably, secure in the thought that he could not slip down toward the foot of the bed any more.

Under each elbow his mother placed a small, soft pillow, for one's elbows soon tire when one is sitting up in bed.

For a time he devoted himself to a paint box, for he was tired of reading. But even the paints tired him after awhile. He grew restless. He didn't want to lie down, and he was tired of sitting up in bed. He wanted to sit up in a chair. No amount of promises about being allowed to sit up soon soothed him.

"Soon? What's soon? I want to get up now!" he said, pushing his foot scornfully against the footboard.

Then his mother remembered the cookbook and the pile of clippings she wanted to paste in the file record at the back of the book. Bringing scissors and paste, and the clippings and the cookbook, she spread them out before the boy. He was only half interested.

Whiles Away the Time.

"That's a girl's job, makin' picture books," he said. Nevertheless his mother, called to the telephone, returned to find him absorbed in the business of sorting out the recipes and pasting them neatly in the file. He was even decorating some of the extra special ones with weird conventional designs in colored chalk.

But the weary time was whiled away, and the boy did not even slip down in the bed.

When it was time for his afternoon milk his mother looked at the glass for a moment in indecision. He was so tired of milk.

Then, putting the cool milk in a glass sealer, she added a teaspoonful of sugar and another of raspberry flavoring. And shook it hard, until it was all foamy. Then she poured it into a tall glass, put a straw in it, and carried it to the boy. He said it tasted exactly like ice cream. And it was a pleasant surprise.

Hygiene and Care of the Baby

KEEPING THE BABY WELL

To keep a baby well is much easier than to cure him after he becomes sick.

In a room crowded with strange people, there always is likely to be someone who is suffering from a catching disease, or who may come from a home where such a disease is present. For that reason, a little baby should be kept away from crowds and from crowded places in order to protect him from exposure to disease.

Most healthy grown persons carry disease germs in their mouths. They do an adult no harm. But in kissing a baby on the mouth, these germs may be transferred to the baby's tender mouth and make him ill or even kill him. Kissing the baby on the mouth, even by his own mother, should not be permitted.

A little cold in a big person is likely to mean a BIG COLD in a little baby. Anyone suffering from a cold, cough or sore throat should remain away from a young child. If the nursing mother catches a cold, she should spray her nose and throat with an antiseptic solution and take every precaution against infecting her little one.

Whooping cough is another very dangerous disease for young children. Each year ten thousand or more young children die of this disease, the greater number of them being babies under three years of age. If the whooping cough does not kill, the long period of coughing, lasting sometimes for months, makes the child so weak and ill that he takes other diseases more readily.

Tuberculosis: All children are extremely susceptible to tuberculosis. To children under three years of age it is especially fatal. Few infants survive when suckled by tuberculosis mothers. Breathing or coughing in the baby's face, kissing the baby and the use of the same eating utensils are some of the commoner methods of infection. Children born of tuberculosis parents should be carefully guarded against infection, and if possible should be removed from such opportunity of contact.

Other dangerous diseases for young children are measles, diptheria, and scarlet fever. Often they leave children suffering from sore eyes, running ears or other permanent injuries; AND ALWAYS THE YOUNGER THE CHILD THE GREATER THE CHANCES HE WILL DIE.

To keep a baby well give him regular systematic care; keep him away from crowds and away from sick people and every possible exposure to sickness or disease.

THE SICK BABY

The baby is sick if he has no appetite; vomiting.

Diarrhoea; or more than three movements a day; or if the movements are slimy, frothy, bloody or contain particles of undigested food.

Constipation: Less than one good movement a day; fever; rash.

Signs of a cold, sore throat, cough or discharge from the eyes, and nose.

Sweating of the head, especially if accompanied by restlessness and crying at night.

Loss of weight or failure to gain properly.

What to do for any sick baby:

Give him an abundance of fresh air.

Undress him and put him quietly to bed.

ELECTRA BUSY DESPITE TALK OF DEPRESSION

Business Conditions Reported as Better Than at Any Other Time During Past Two Years.

Activity Is Created to Showing of Wells in South Field and Discovery of the Duke Well.

By H. A. STROUD.

ELECTRA, Texas, Feb. 11.—Business conditions are more encouraging now than at any time during the last two years, according to a number of merchants in various lines of business interviewed this week. Nearly every line of business is reported as picking up and the unemployed in the city are rapidly diminishing, in spite of the fact that new people are coming into the city every day.

All the business streets are crowded with automobiles and the sidewalks are lined with busy throngs of people, which causes the city to take on the appearance of pre-depression times.

Building in Demand.

There has developed a great demand for business houses of all kinds. There is not a vacant store building in the city at the present time and if the demand continues to grow it is the belief that construction work will start in the near future on several new brick buildings. It has been intimated that Prince brothers are contemplating the erection of some new brick buildings on Waggoner street but no contract has been let at this date.

G. F. LeBus let a contract this week for a new brick building, which will house his machine shop on Main street at the corner of Roosevelt. The building will be 28x100 and in addition an office 16x20 is to be built adjoining. All the machinery will be moved from his sheet iron building, with the exception of the blacksmith's equipment, and the old building will be used exclusively as a blacksmith shop and assembling plant for the Eureka wrench which is manufactured in this city.

Demand for Rent Houses.

Local real estate offices have been flooded with inquiries concerning houses for rent, and according to the agents they have none to offer. All the best houses have been rented all through the depression era and all that is now available in the way of living quarters is small houses and shacks that are not equipped with modern conveniences. These are being rented as temporary places of abode by those who are not in position to build at the present time. According to local lumber men there are a number of houses under construction in the resident district and it is predicted that building activities will be on the increase within the next thirty days.

Looking For Location.

There have been a number of Wichita Falls men in the city during the past few days looking for locations to open various lines of business. Two automobile dealers are in search of quarters for the opening of branch houses in which they will carry a line of accessories for well known cars.

A new industry entered the field last week in the form of the Electra Pipe & Supply company, who have established headquarters on Front street at the corner of Electra street. This company will buy and sell used pipe and will have a shop for rethreading and straightening pipe. M. J. Persky, who was formerly an operator in the Northwest Burkburnett field, is in charge of the new enterprise.

New Work Starting.

All this activity has been caused by the recent showing of wells in the south field and the Magnolia's discovery of the Duke well. The water situation remains unchanged from natural sources, but various companies and individuals have made connections which furnishes water to the new fields. This has enabled many rigs to start work, while many are yet shut down awaiting a supply. The activity in the field begins at the very edge of Electra on the south and extends on past the south pool, with much wildcatting on the Waggoner ranch to the south and west of the main pool. The district around Fowlkes is showing much activity and numerous rigs have been built and wells started in that vicinity.

Local citizens view the activity with optimism and feel that if conditions can show such a pickup by additional water conditions that the days of 1911 will be reproduced following a gulley washing rain that would place water in the tanks and enable the wildcat drillers and those out of range of the water connections to start drilling.

R. P. Prince, one of the pioneer oil drillers and contractors in this section of the country, is emphatic in his belief that deep oil can be produced from the old Electra pool. Mr. Prince points out that only two deep wells have been drilled in the old district and does not believe that two tests are sufficient to condemn the territory for deep drilling.

In the two wells drilled a hard rock formation was encountered at about 2,300 feet which was thought to have been the Mississippi lime, and in fact was so termed by many geologists. But Mr. Prince contends that the rock might have been a fault and not the real lime at all. As evidence he points out that wells drilled north of the Electra anticline fail to pick up this formation and he believes that the Mississippi lime would be found at about the same depth throughout the district—if it were the line.

Mr. Prince does not attempt to say where the deep oil could be found but believes it is worth considering. He said that the day would come when oil would be produced from the Electra field at a depth below 3,000 feet. Many other oil men agree with this theory and it will only be a matter of time until sufficient interest will be manifested to try out the theory with a well.

On account of the large number of school and city taxes that became delinquent on the first of February, the city and school authorities have decided to extend the time limit thirty days. Those who have not paid their school and city taxes may do so before the first of February and avoid the ten per cent penalty.

It was estimated by officials that about $18,000 school taxes and $12,000 city taxes are yet to be collected.

Mayor Clarence McDannald and City Commissioner Magee met with the board of directors of the chamber of commerce Tuesday at their luncheon meeting and expressed a desire that the two bodies co-operate more closely during the coming year.

The board of directors appointed a committee to act with the city commissioners on matters pertaining to the welfare of the city, but passed a resolution declaring that the committee was one of an advisory capacity and that the chamber of commerce did not intend to take an air of dictating to the city officials.

WEDDINGS OLD AND NEW SHOW STRIKING CHANGE IN STYLES; HOW GRANDMA LOOKED AS COMPARED WITH BRIDE OF TODAY; NORMA, CHARMING IN HOOP SKIRT, SAYS IT WON'T COME BACK

Do you know how grandmother looked when she was a bride?

Have you ever peeped into the old family album and seen her all fussed up in the frilly, lacy wedding gown—hoopskirt and all—of the early sixties?

People have laughed heartily over the old family album and its many quaint, stiff and ridiculous tintypes, but somehow or other there was a certain stately charm about the styles of yesterday which has never entirely lost its appeal.

The family albums of the future will undoubtedly furnish just as much amusement to coming generations as the albums of the nineteenth century provide for humanity today.

But will they contain as much genuine charm? That is a matter for deep conjecture.

A striking contrast between the wedding styles of the nineteenth century and those of modern times is shown here by the fascinating Norma Talmadge.

At the left Norma is seen in an exquisite wedding dress of 1860, of white satin and hand-made lace with the popular hoopskirt of those times. This lovely dress, especially designed by Charles Le Maire and worn by Miss Talmadge in her latest First National starring vehicle, "Smilin' Through," cost $1,000 alone.

At the right Norma is seen in modern bridal costume. Wedding gowns are no longer tightly bound by tradition. A gown sleveless and decolette, if so the bride wishes, is quite de riguer nowadays. White it must be, with the long veil and the huge conventional bouquet. Norma is charming in this simple white satin gown, made without the train, tulle veil becomingly draped in cap fashion, held by a wreath of orange blossoms and falling to the bottom of the costume.

The length and width of the skirt, however, strikes a radically different note from the 1860 model.

In the centre panel Norma wears the old fashioned lace, mitts with half fingers, a tiny silk ruffled muff, and hat with flowing plume curling over the side in a traveling costume of the nineteenth century, also seen in "Smilin' Through." It is an elaborate and ornate affair compared with the simpler and more comfortable traveling clothes of today.

These period costumes of the last century, with their hoopskirts and side panniers, are copies of the old color prints of 1860.

For the past two years the folks who wield the scepter over the world of fashion and dictate what women shall wear have been threatening to resurrect the hoopskirt and tightly compressed waist.

Norma assures them it can't be done these busy days, however, for in order to reconstruct her modern figure into the lines of the early sixties, she had to devote two solid weeks to the task of getting rid of twelve pounds. And the star never weighed more than 115 pounds in her life!

Norma accomplished this almost-sleight-of-hand reduction for her lavish production of "Smilin' Through," in which she has a dual role as an old-fashioned girl and a modern girl.

The production, as illustrated above gives an excellent contrast of the styles of today compared with those of earlier years.

The story, though a modern one, has many flashes back to the past century. These flashbacks include an old-fashioned wedding and beautiful ballroom scenes in which the lanciers and polka are danced. The story deals also with a romance of the thrilling days of the world war.

Scenes of the two centuries are laid in England, Ireland and France, and the setting, it is said, rival the costumes in beauty and fidelity to detail in this production, the most ambitious photoplay Norma Talmadge has filmed to date.

MANY COMPLAIN OF SWINDLES BY "BUCKET SHOPS"

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Complaints of victimized investors from widows and policemen to actresses and janitors, continued to flood the office of District Attorney Canton today in his investigation of alleged bucket shop brokerage firms.

Prosecuting officials announced that two grand juries would be summoned to begin consideration of the 30 cases already prepared. It was stated that probably 100,000 persons had been swindled last year of sums aggregating upwards of $50,000,000.

Among the scores of disappointed investors who swarmed the district attorney's office was a jaintress who said she gave a brokerage firm $1900 to invest in bonds for her, only to discover that her money had been checked out for calaries and office expenses. When she demanded an accounting the firm failed.

A widow with three children who lost her savings said she had contemplated suicide when she saw the wife of a broker who had fleeced her gorgeously clothed and riding in a limousine.

A policeman reported a bucket shop scout had prevailed upon him to sell $3000 of dividend paying stock and invest the money with his firm on a promise of 14 to 15 per cent returns. He lost it all, he said.

THIEF RETURNS PART OF LOOT TO VICTIM

(By International News Service)

DETROIT, Feb. 10. — Deputy sheriffs are seeking to learn who returned by mail to George Stimson a $1000 diamond ring, part of the loot taken from him when held up by three automobile bandits. Two men under arrest have been identified as two of the bandits, police say, but the third is still sought. Police are working on the theory that the third member of the gang "lost his nerve" and finding the name of his victim in the newspapers decided to return his share of the loot.

RECOMMENDS EMPLOYMENT OF SUPERVISOR IN RURAL SCHOOLS

Supplementary Report Made to County Board by School Expert; Finds That Have Too Many Classes.

A supervisor should be appointed to have charge of the instruction of the primary grades in the rural schools of the county, according to E. E. Davis, rural life specialist. The recommendation is included in a letter received by the county superintendent of schools and the courty board of education. The letter contains additional findings of Mr. Davis who visited the schools of the county as a representative of the extension department of the University of Texas.

Teachers have too many grades to teach in the rural school of the county, according to Mr. Davis who found in visiting thirty-three teachers that each had between 8 and 26 classes daily. Mr. Davis said that he had found the teaching of primary grades especially in need of special supervision such as could be obtained if one person was employed on full time to supervise the teaching.

Centralizing Schools.

The centralizing of rural schools is the solution of the problem of securing enough teachers so that they can each instruct a few classes at most, Mr. Davis says in his letter. Improved country roads are an important factor in the solution of the problem, he said.

Mr. Davis' letter is as follows:

"I hereby beg leave to call your attention to a few important matters pertaining to the character of instruction being rendered in the rural schools of Wichita county. This information was gathered by the author through the personal visitation and observation of forty-nine class rooms during the month of December, 1921.

Number of Classes.

"The number of classes taught each day was obtained from thirty-three teachers. It ranged from 8 to 26 classes per day. This is an exceedingly unfortunate thing. It is unfortunate for the teachers and for the pupils. Some of the class periods were less than ten minutes long. Such conditions as this would not be tolerated in a first-class system of city schools. The classes would have to be fewer per teacher and the class periods longer. The country children of Wichita county and those of the State of Texas can never hope for the educational opportunities to which they are entitled so long as this condition obtains. Its only practical remedy is better country roads, rural-school consolidation and transportation of pupils bringing together larger numbers of pupils and teachers making better school organization and better instruction possible. The parent was right who said: "I had rather send my child five miles to a school having a specially trained teacher for each grade than to patronize a school located in my own front yard with one teacher trying to teach six or seven grades."

A few of the teachers showed very superior ability in formulating their questions and in stimulating their pupils to think in class. Approximately 50 per cent of the teachers showed fair skill in this respect. A great many of the others tracked the book almost to the letter. They were textbook interpreters rather than teachers. They were failing to connect the formulae and the principles of the text as closely with the problems of life as they should. This weakness was much more prevalent among the very young teachers than among the older and more experienced ones. However it was not entirely confined to the young teachers for some of the older ones showed the same weakness. A few of the young ones showed unusual ability in establishing life contacts.

"The thing that I wish to suggest in this connection is the need for closer supervision of instruction. No other one thing could conduce more to the immediate betterment of your schools. That is most especially true of the primary grades. If it be profitable for the schools of the city of Wichita Falls to have expert primary supervisors, would it not be equally as profitable for the rural schools of Wichita county to have such supervision? But the present system does not provide for this sort of thing. No county superintendent, no matter how efficient, can attend to the work of primary supervision in the way that it should be done and discharge all the other duties of the office. Such service is not expected of the superintendent of the city schools of Wichita Falls. Specially trained experts in primary instruction are employed for that purpose.

"As I have already pointed out to you, many of the teachers in the country schools are young and inexperienced. Many of them never taught before. Most of these young girls are teaching in the primary grades. No doubt but what they acquired a great many facts while they were studying at school. But many of their methods and devices for teaching these facts are very poor. An expert primary supervisor working full time among these young people would be of incalculable value in teaching them better how to teach the things they already know. They would do better teaching if the weak places in their instruction were definitely and sympathetically pointed out to them by a skilled expert spending full time on the field in their class rooms constantly observing and improving the character of their teaching.

YEAR AS MOONSHINER IS FOUND COSTLY BUSINESS BY NEBRASKAN

(By International News Service)

LONCOLN, Neb. Feb. 11.—One year as a bootlegger has cost Frank Markytan $14,750 cash, plus a good name.

Markytan gave up his $10,000 a year boot and shoe business a year ago to devote his entire attention to manufacture and sale of moonshine. His expense account, as revealed in court here, since that time reads:

Fines and costs	$1200
Confiscated automobile	600
Confiscated still	850
Internal revenue tax	2100
Loss of business	10,000
Total	$14,750

Markytan was arrested in a suburb of Lincoln when transporting 45 gallons of fresh moonshine from his Omaha plant to this city. His automobile and hooch were confiscated.

"I haven't sold a dollar's worth of the stuff since I went into the business a year ago," the former shoe merchant told the court. "Every time I get a batch ready for market the officers tag me."

The bootlegger then exhibited his startling booze budget.

"Add $200 and costs," ordered the court. "And as this is 'Thrift Week' I'll give you 60 days in jail to save money."

Clara Hi Wins District Cage Championship

Boys From Red River Banks Defeat Sunset High 33-14 in Finals of the Big Tournament

Superior Team Play and Brilliant Work of Ray Chambers Brings Title to Wichita County; Emmett Elrod Once More Stars for Losing Champions of Montague.

BY "NICK" CARTER

The little town of Clara, in size scarcely more than a filling station between Burkburnett and Electra, today holds the high school basketball championship of nine North Texas counties. By defeating Sunset high 34 to 14 last night at the American Legion hall, the Clara quintet won the undisputed title of champions of District No. 4, which includes not only this city but also the entire counties of Wichita, Young, Throckmorton, Baylor, Montague, Jack, Knox, Archer and Clay.

In its infancy, Clara sprang into fame as the seat of the first oil development in this section—but today its high school athletes have given to the little community another measure of glory which its tiny citizenship will remember for years. Today Raymond, Marvin and Millard Chambers, "Bill" Bailey, John Lancaster and Coach E. E. Rogers are home to receive the big white wool sweaters, emblazoned with the brown "C"—sweaters promised to the team if it would bring the district championship back to the banks of the Red river. Folks, I'm here to state it's a big day in Clara.

An Earned Crown.

The Wichita county champions earned the crown. Playing the same superb guarding, passing and shooting game that had crushed the hopes of Wichita Falls high school on Friday, the Clara quintet swept the Sunset boys from their feet early in the contest. The first half spelled disaster for the champions of Montague county. Ray Chambers alone piled in 4 goals from the field and 2 from the foul line, and the half ended with Sunset on the short end of an 18-4 count. In the second half, Sunset fought desperately to stem the tide of defeat, but the best the Montague boys could do was to hold the Clara whirlwind to a 14 to 10 score in that session of play.

At the outset of the game, Sunset led the attack, and repeatedly carried the ball into Clara's territory only to be blocked in every attempt to cage the hide-bound rubber. Ray Chambers, Clara's brilliant forward, finally broke the ice with a dazzling long shot from the side of the court. Emmett Elrod for Sunset, gained one of the two points back soon afterwards with a basket from the foul line. After another brief session of hard blocking and guarding, in the course of which players on both teams repeatedly fumbled the ball, Ray Chambers broke loose with a lightning dribble the length of the court and caged his shot; a minute later he repeated—and then the Clara offensive began. From that point on until the gun ended the first half, Sunset was clearly outclassed.

Teams Fight Hard.

The second half saw both teams fighting hard. The play speeded up, and Sunset tried everything in the book to hold the Clara five in check. Emmett Elrod came to life, and again played the hard, fast floor game that featured his play in earlier contests of the tournament. But the Clara quintet simply could not be stopped. Despite the hard blocking of their opponents, time and again, a Clara player would slip into the clear long enough to chalk up a score—while repeatedly Ray Chambers, shooting blind from difficult angles, missed sensational shots by inches only.

Just tuck it in your little book for future reference that the high school boys of the little community of Clara are real champions. They entered the district tournament to play basketball, and they played it; and they fought every step of the way to win. Bellevue, Wichita Falls and Sunset made 'em keep their tootsies on the gas, and the only basketball vacation they enjoyed was an easy, lopsided victory over Megargle high—and even that contest wasn't easy in the last half.

E. E. Rogers, coach of the Clara team, is principal of the Clara high chool. He also is a senior in Howard Payne College—and while he is teaching in the Clara high school and coaching the Clara boys at basketball, he is completing his senior year in college by correspondence with the Howard Payne faculty. I rather reckon, judging by the way the Clara boys play the game, that Rogers has taught 'em his own secret of old-fashioned hard work and plain, dogged persistence.

Tourney Biz Success.

It was a big tournament, and a good one. While the local fans were keenly disappointed in the failure of the Red and Black quintet to annex the district championship, they were glad in turn that the title stayed in Wichita county.

B. M. Dinsmore, of Electra, director general of high school athletics for the district, expressed his thanks to the high school authorities of this city for the splendid assistance they had given in making the tournament a big success; to the referees for their fine work in handling the games; to the coaches of the visiting teams for their sportsmanship; to the fans of this city for their support, and to the local papers for their generous publicity.

And in turn about all I can say to that is to express the other side's appreciation of Mr. Dinsmore's unflagging interest in clean high school athletics, and of the hard work, the time and the patience he contributed to make the tournament a noteworthy athletic event.

J. L. DITTERT AND DINSMORE NAME ALL-STAR FIVES

J. L. Dittert, assistant coach of the Texas University basketball squad who refereed the district championship games here and B. M. Dinsmore of Electra, director general of high school athletics for this district, last night made their selections for an All-District basketball quintet.

Dittert announced as his first string selection, the following players: Marvin Chambers of Clara and Emmett Elrod of Sunset, forwards; "Cherry" Johnson of Wichita Falls, center; Gerald Coffey of Wichita Falls and Millard Chambers of Clara, guards.

Dinsmore picked the two Chambers brothers mentioned above, also Elrod and Johnson, but in place of Coffey, he selected John Lancaster, the rangy Clara center, as a guard.

Mr. Billings Gets His'n From Mr. Rice

The sporting editor of the Record News last night received the following letter from a fan in Bridgetown:

"One of the sporting events of the season was the wrestling match at Bridgetown between G. Billings and C. Rice, two athletically inclined young men of that place.

"They wrestled one hour and thirty minutes with no falls.

"Mr. Rice being the lighter of the two had his opponent in distress several times with a hammerlock and toe hold.

"Mr. Billings got out of some tight places by putting on a good head spin.

"The decision of the bout was rendered in favor of Mr. Rice.

"Also a four-round boxing match was pulled off between Young Lowe and Sonny Boy Jackson, Sonny Boy winning the decision on points in the fourth round.

"The event was pulled off in the city hall which was crowded to its full capacity.

"Jimmy Hicks, one of Bridgetown's most popular young men, refereed the bouts to the satisfactional of every one present."

The local protest will be seconded by protests of practically every place served by these trains.

Additional train service between Wichita Falls and Seymour may be asked.

SIX ARRESTED AT LISBON ON CHARGE OF INCITING RIOT

By Associated Press.

LISBON, Feb. 11.—As a result of police investigation of events attending the revolution which overthrew the ministry of former Premier, Coelho last October, six officers were arrested yesterday accused of responsibility for the uprising. Those arrested included the head of the general staff and the next in command of the national republican guards, as well as Captain Procopio de Freitas, who commanded the naval forces during the October uprising.

Statistics of Cage Tourney

Owing to the fact that the High school district basketball championship was an elimination affair and the same number of games were not played by all the teams, entered, it would be manifestly unfair to present the players' statistics in one general list. The records that follow are given, therefore, by teams, the columns of figures reading as follows: First column, field goals; second, free tries caged; third, free tries missed; fourth, personal fouls; fifth, technical fouls; and sixth clumn, total points scored.

WILL SEEK TO PUT SPORTS ON HIGHER PLANE

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—A nation-wide investigation of college athletics for the purpose of the doing away with professionalism and other abuses that threaten incalculable harm to amateur sports, "is planned by the National Collegiate Athletic association."

Palmer Pierce, president of the association, stated today that the 200 members of the association had been asked to approve a plan to have the investigation conducted by the Carnegie foundation. The association, he added, has been influenced through reports from its nine district representatives that an investigation would be beneficial in some sections and was absolutely necessary in others.

The planet Venus moves around the sun at an average speed of 22 miles a second.

By Robert L. Ripley.

It is quite a surprise to learn that golf, the royal, and ancient game of the Scouts, is not Scotch at all, but Dutch! The Highland laddies of auld lang syne imported their national game from the Lowland Dutchmen away back in the fourteenth century.

In Holland the game was called kolf. It differed from the present game of golf of course—principally, as posts were used instead of holes. The game was played by any number, either in parties or against each other, and the object of the contest was to hit the posts in the fewest number of strokes. The balls used were about the size of baseballs, made perfectly round and elastic, covered with soft leather, and sewed with fine wire. The clubs were from three to four feet long, with stiff shafts and heads of brass resembling very closely the modern putter. And the game was played on ice in the winter and turf in the summer.

There is nothing in the ancient annals to show, however, that the early Dutch and Flemish kolfsers putted at holes. The Scotch put the holes in golf—including the nineteenth.

The game grew rapidly in Scotland and became so popular in the fifteenth century that parliament, on March 7, 1457, "decreed and ordained that golf be utterly cryit doune, and nocht usit." The game persisted, however, and about twenty years later the English parliament again ordained "that in na place of the realme there be usit golfe, fute-ball, or uther sik unprofitabill sportis."

In 1608 the present Royal Blackheath Golf club was founded. The Royal Ancient Golf club of St. Andrews, still the golfing center of the world, was founded in 1754, and organized the first competition of any size the same year.

The game was coming on.

The government at that time was trying to popularize archery and legislated against all rival sports.

Ere long the king surrendered, and in 1503 we find him breaking his own law as though it were a modern amendment, and purchasing "golfe clubbis and ballis top lay at the golfe with the Erle of Bothuile."

Royalty has played the game more or less ever since. Mary Queen of Scots, was one of the first woman players, and she was beheaded. Charles I. was the game's first enthusiast—and they cut off his head also! And thousands have lost their heads over the game since.

In 1848 the gutta percha ball was invented. Heretofore the ball had always been made of feathers compactly stuffed within a leather cover. It had served well, and was more lively than you would imagine. In fact, the first gutta balls could not be driven as far as the old "featheries."

However, it was discovered by observant golfers that the gutta balls showed a remarkable tendency to fly better after they had been subjected to a little battering with the irons. From this observation resulted the "nicking" process, and the dimples and brambles of the present day.

The first names to live through their golfing achievements are those old champions of the fifties—Allan Robertson, Willie Park and Tom Morris, who has been called "the father of golf."

Thirty years ago golf was practically unknown in the United States. It has grown rapidly since—more rapidly than any other sport—unless it is the possible exception of baseball.

WICHITA FALLS PLACES TWO MEN ON ALL-DISTRICT HIGH SCHOOL CAGE TEAM

Selecting an All-Star basketball team is in many respects a far more difficult task than the naming of eleven stars from a big field of football players. Many a forward, for example, who appears a world beater in one game is smothered by a brilliant guard in another contest; while the guard whose blocking, passing and defensive play in general one day attracts attention is frequently made to look clumsy and slow when opposed later to a fast-working, slippery forward.

But every man can make his choice, nevertheless, based on the general play as he sees it. Throughout the stretch of the district high school championship I have tried to study the work of the players on all the county championship teams, and while the fact that several teams have played more games than others has made it difficult at times to get a clear line on the ability of a number of the boys, I have no hesitancy in naming the following five players for an all district championship quintet:

Emmett Elrod, Sunset, right forward.

"Cherry" Johnson, Wichita Falls, center.

Millard Chambers, Clara, right guard.

There is little to choose between Ray Chambers and his brother Marvin for one of the forward positions. But I believe Ray has the edge for two reasons. He is unusually fast on his feet, and has the knack of getting away with a dribble quicker and with greater certainty than any player who took part in the district tournament. Secondly, he has a better pair of hands than Marvin; by that I mean that he can take a lightning, bullet-like pass with absolute sureness—his fumbles are very rare. Coupled with these two assets, Ray Chambers also has an uncanny knack of shooting with deadly accuracy while traveling at the top of his speed; one of the best tricks in any forward's bag.

I give the other forward position to Emmett Elrod, of Sunset, on his all-around ability. Despite a certain clumsiness, a lack of grace, in his shooting, he is remarkably accurate, while his floor work is beyond criticism. Although he ranks as one of the leading point-makers of the tournament, in every game he has played his defensive work has been remarkable. Time and again he has gone back like a streak, has broken up plays in his own home territory and has opened the attack again for his team.

At center "Cherry" Johnson showed himself to be easily the best man in the district. While there are a few centers who can get the tip-off on Johnson, the tournament failed to uncover a man in his class when headwork, coolness and general team play is considered. "Cherry" can shoot with the best of them, while his passing is flawless.

Gerald Coffey, of Wichita Falls and Millard Chambers, of Clara are the creme de la creme of the district guards. Both have physical advantages in height and strength over the rest of the field. As a stationary guard, Coffey is without an equal; his blocking has been beautiful. Millard Chambers is a roving guard, and a curly wolf at that type of the game. Despite the handicap of an infected hand which was swollen to almost twice its normal size, the big Clara youngster played a whirlwind floor game for his team. Coupled with his defensive work he showed an ability to shoot that many a forward must envy.

Put these five players on the court after a few weeks practice together and you'd see one of the greatest high school basket ball outfits "ever gathered under one tent."

How about the substitutes? I'm not going to attempt to pick any certain number, but will merely list some of the players who, in my judgement, deserve to have their names placed on the honor roll of the district, as follows:

Forwards: York, of Bryson, Marvin Chambers of Clara; Evans of Olney; Melear, of Seymour.

Guards: Anderson, of Wichita Falls; Birdwell, of Bryson; Kimbrough, of Bellevue.

Centers: Lancaster, of Clara; Joplin of Bellevue; L. Elrod, of Sunset.

KING LEADS IN KANSAS CITY TRAP SHOOT

R. A. King, former resident of Wichita Falls and a member of the local gun club, and holder of two national trapshooting championships, is "running wild" in a big Kansas City tournament, according to a telegram received here yesterday by Hunter Dempsey, manager of Little's Sporting Goods store.

The wire, signed by King who visited this city recently to have alterations made in the stock of his favorite trapshooting gun, was as follows:

"Was high first and second day by large margin. Had high wind from all directions. The stock is admired by a lot of shooters. Hope to see you again soon."

IRRIGATION WORK TO GO TO THOSE RECOMMENDED BY LOCAL WELFARE ORGANIZATIONS FIRST

Labor employed on the irrigation dam work will be obtained through recommendations obtained by the contractors from the Salvation Army and the Municipal Welfare board, it was learned from an authoritative source Saturday. In this way it is expected to get in touch with those most needing work.

Work by the Davis Construction company, which is expected to afford employment to semi-skilled labor of the class which would naturally be filled by white labor, is expected to be in full swing in about three weeks.

The present work is largely canal work, and is work of a class which white men who have been tried out since the beginning of operations soon abandoned. The second section of the canal work may get under way during this week.

This work, it was originally planned, was to be done by drag lines and steam shovels but owing to lack of employment for teaming contractors, it was decided to do it in this manner, although at a higher cost than was estimated for this in the bid of the general contractor. Work on the embankment for the diversion dam started Saturday morning.

SID MERCER'S CLOSE-UPS

By INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

According to Jack Kearns and Tex Rickard the forthcoming St. Patrick's Day quarrel between Jack Dempsey and Bill Brennan is entirely the idea of Leo Parnell Flynn, Brennan's managing director. Rickard recently said he had not been approached to stage this bout and indicated that he didn't think much of it. Kearns declared he had no engagement to meet Flynn.

The statement that Dempsey and Brennan would be matched for a third time therefore seems to be a trifle mature. Rickard contemplates putting on some big championship bout at the Garden on St. Patrick's Day. Last year Johnny Wilson and Mike O'Dowd were the headliners on March 17. The Garden promoter, however, has an idea that he may find an opponent for Dempsey other than Brennan.

Though Brennan has been stopped twice by Dempsey, he still ranks as the best of the men who have been flattened by the Manassa Mauler. He went seven rounds on one occasion and nearly twelve on the other. However, it is doubtful whether he would be a big attraction in a third setto with the champion.

Martin Burke, New Orleans light heavyweight, has added his voice to the chorus challenges directed at Gene Tunney, the new champion of that division. The tall red-headed Southern lad is kept busy with his ring engagements below the Mason Dixon line, but after his bout with Young Bob Fitzsimmons at New Orleans on February 12, he will come North.

Tunney holds a decision over Burke whom he fought at Dyckman Oval last summer. Burke at that time was badly handicapped by a split ear which had been giving him trouble for months and which prevented him from being one of Dempsey's sparring partners at Atlantic City. He fought Tunney shortly after he had submitted to an operation.

Burke claims decisions over Harry Foley, Bob Roper, Willie Meehan, Al Reich and Happy Little, and has stopped Dick O'Brien, Terry Kellar, Jim Coffey, Joe White and Jack Downey. He recently boxed a draw with Bartley Madden. In the ring Burke greatly resembles the late Bob Fitzsimmons.

One of the joys of operating a championship baseball club is listening to the squawks of the athletes when they received their contracts for the year following a pennant winning season. Somehow the boys do not figure a world's series prize as sufficient reward, but insist on liberal increases of salary.

The signed contracts arriving daily at the Yankee office do not include many returned by the "regulars." The rookies—ambitious lads who are willing to accept any salary to have their fling at the big chance—are getting into line rapidly, but otherwise are quibbling.

Business Manager Barrow says no cases of outright "holditis" have developed, but that he is receiving a number of minor complaints. Players who have not signed by February 15 may be regarded as hardened cases and doubtless Scout Bob Connery will be sent out to "soften them up."

There is plenty of work ahead for the Yankee board of arbitration. A new agreement must be made with Babe Ruth, whose demand will be gauged according to his strength as a box office attraction. None of the other stars of the club are yet under contract.

The firm of Kearns & McKetrick is bringing on a new lightweight from the Pacific Coast, one Jimmy Duffy. "He can puat the slug on any of these New York headliners," said Kearns. "I won't let him fight Joe Benjamin because I don't want to promote internal dissension in my camp. I am not going to take any pains to ballyhoo Duffy, but when I drop him in here soon, don't fail to have a look at him and bet on him."

BRIGHT STARS OF MOTION PICTURE FIRMAMENT ASK PUBLIC FOR "SQUARE DEAL"

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11.—Thirty members of the Independent Screen Artists Guild issued a statement here today asking fair play from the public in its consideration of conditions of the motion picture industry, especially in the lives of the motion picture people.

The statement follows:

"We do not ask for particular favors but only for the American principles upon which this democracy was founded—one of fair play.

"The recent unsavory publicity that has followed the wake of the demise of the late William Taylor has resulted in our industry being maligned, mere rumor accepted as fact and idle gossip magnified into reality.

"Billy Taylor needs no eulogy. The life he led was but an indication of the true character of the man, who was struck down by an assassin's bullet.

"The police have given as a theory that revenge accentuated the crime that resulted in William Taylor's death, exonerating the moving picture industry or any of its persons as being implicated.

"We are not rampant with vice.

"The American public did not attack all governors because a charge was filed against a certain state executive.

"The American public did not attack all ministers because a wanton crime was charged to a preacher of the gospel.

"We ask that the public bear with this industry and not accept rumors as fact.

"We are just normal human beings. We are not ethereal and do not want to be regarded as such.

"Our happy marriages far exceed those of divorce. Our church going populace is equally as large as that of any other profession.

"We are law-abiding citizens and we rear families. And yet William Taylor's death has resulted in aspersions being cast upon this industry and upon us. We are striving to make the world a better place to live through the screen and we, who have accepted that responsibility placed upon us by the public through their patronage, feel it a personal affront (for them) to assume through innuendo that we are not worthy of that honor.

"We have striven hard and, we believe, succeeded, in giving joy to millions. In return, it is only fair that we expect support, at least until rumor is substantiated by fact.

"We deny that motion picture people are as pictured. We deny that the industry is rampant with crime and vice. We deny that motion picture people are sinners and we only quote the Bible to those who malign us: 'Let he without sin cast the first stone.'

"We are a part of every American home, not through any selfish desire, but because it is the will of the public. The public has virtually accepted us as a member of each family. Yet they don't, we believe, accord us the same treatment that they would others of their household.

"The American idea of fair play—certainly we are not asking too much in expecting that."

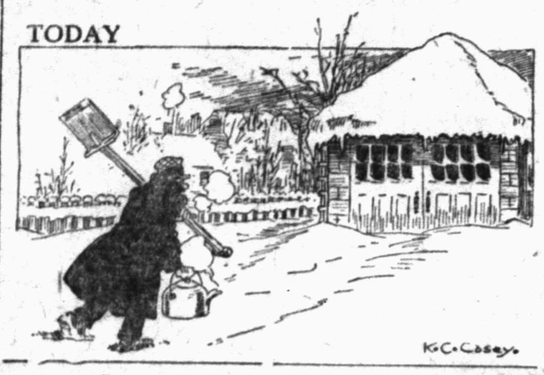

The statement was authorized by the following, all affiliated with the motion picture industry:

Joseph M. Schenk, Thomas H. Ince, Charles Chaplin, Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge, Anita Stewart, Allen Holubar, Richard Walton Tully, J. Parker Read, Jr., Colonel M. Seeling, H. O. Davis, B. P. Schulberg, Colonel Lee N. Moore, Ben Turpin, Carter DeHaven, Marshall Neilan, Mack Sennett, Louis B. Bayer, Katherine MacDonald, Charles Ray, John M. Stahl, Maurice Tourneur, Guy Bates Post, J. L. The Garden Walls.

Time and again we've heard arguments regarding the fields of the different ball lots. Very often it has been said that the Philadelphia National league grounds presented the shortest right field fence. Then again there have been bets that the Brooklyn grounds was the shortest. All that is ended right here, for we have the real measurements and the Polo grounds wins all the medals. It has the shortest fields, both in right and left.

The measurements, in feet, follows:

	L. F. Fence	R. F. Fence
*New York National	288.8	256.3
Cincinnati, National	320	334
Boston, American	321	313.6

"It's a great thing to have an edication," remarked Spike Hennessey.

"What prompts that observation?" asked his listener, to draw him out.

"Well, Dooley has been tellin' me dat guy from Boston called me a bad actor, an' I never knew it till it wuz too late."

"How did the Boston man express himself?"

"He told me my histrionic abilities wuz of an inferior order," said Hennessey, "and' den he beat it."

Why should a ballplayer who has been seasoned by several years' work in the bush leagues be a good player afterward in the major league? Don't know? Because, like good whisky, he's matured in the wood.

EFFORTS RENEWED TO MOVE COUNTY SEAT OF HANSFORD

AMARILLO, Feb. 11.—Citizens of Hansford county Monday will file a suit asking that a recent election on removal of the county seat from Hansford to Spearman, which resulted unfavorably for removal, be declared illegal.

When the Santa Fe railway was built into the north plains, the town of Hansford, which was the county seat, moved almost bodily to Hansford on the railway. The election of January 17 to remove the county seat to Spearman resulted unfavorably because of fraud, contestants allege. They ask that one entire box be thrown out.

PRIZE WINNERS IN TELEGRAM WRITING CONTEST PICKED FROM FLOOD OF SOLUTIONS SUBMITTED

Selected from a flood of answers and solutions from all parts of North and West Texas and Oklahoma, and ranging the social scale from the pastor of one of the prominent city churches to an inmate of the county jail, the prize winners of the Record News Telegram Writing contest were selected and announced by the judges Saturday night.

Both the department of the Record News responsible for the contest and the merchants participating expressed themselves as more than gratified not only by the number of the answers received, but of their distribution throughout the territory—testifying on the one hand to the area through which the paper circulates and on the other hand interesting a large number of people over a large territory in the firms which participated in the contest.

The firms participating were: Little Sporting Goods Co., Eckman & Von Allmen, United 1c to $1.00 Stores Co., Tenth Street Bakery, Wichita Music Co., Palace Drug Store: Carroll-Brough-Robinson-Gates, Security National Bank, Wichita Floral Co., Randall Anto Supply Nafziger Baking Co., and Wichita Falls Building & Loan Association.

H. P. Wartman of Dallas won first prize in the contest, with the other eight prize winners from Wichita Falls, save Miss Vivian M. Morgan of Tulsa who won one of the fourth prizes.

The solutions submitted by many of those participating in the contests were in many cases extremely clever, and it was with difficulty, the judges declare, that they made their findings on which the prize awards were based.

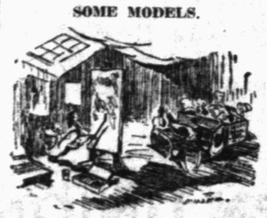

In addition to the prize winners more than a score were mentioned as deserving honorable mention for the wording of their telegrams. Among these Dr. H. D. Knickerbocker was awarded a special prize of $5 in merchandise by the Little Sporting Goods company for what was considered the best ten word message on their individual advertisement. The prize winners and those accorded honorable mention follow:

OFFICIAL TAKEN IN LIQUOR RAID ALLOWED BOND

By Associated Press.

NEWPORT, Ky., Feb. 11.—County Judge William C. Buten, who with 23 other persons was rrested yesterday when state guardsmen and prohibition enforcement officers made sweeping raids on Newport saloons, today pleaded not guilty to a technical charge of having knowledge of a conspiracy to violate the federal liquor laws and failing to reveal the same to officers of the United States. Judge Buten was released under $500 bond and a preliminary hearing on the charge was set for March 24 by Oscar H. Roetgen, United States commissioner.

A large number of the 23 others arrested entered pleas of not guilty and were released after furnishing bonds of from $500 to $5,000.

PREPARE TO GIVE BUNGER TEST SHOT

No. 1 Vick of Paragon to Get 240-Quart Jolt; Shot Fails to Explode in Panhandle No. 1 Scott.

Preparations are being made to give the Paragon Oil Company's No. 1 Vick a shot of 240 quarts of nitro some time today, according to Saturday reports from Young county. The Paragon test which is about two miles to the northwest of the Bunger pool, drilled a sandy lime around 3,785 feet early in the week. There is said to be a fair showing for production here and the outcome of the shooting today is of considerable interest.

The shot which was given the Panhandle No. 1 Scott, south of the town of South Bend Saturday to try to bring in from the 3,500 foot lime, apparently failed to go off, according to Saturday night reports from Young county. It is believed that only the primer exploded, when the shot was sent off. The hole appeared to be still bridged, according to the Saturday night reports.

A new well is reported from the Bunger pool, the No. 2-I Askew of the Cosden Oil and Gas Company, a 100 barrel producer, from the 1900 foot sand.

DIRECTORS TO HEAR REPORT ON FAIR GROUNDS

A definite report by the special fair committee of the Chamber of Commerce will be made to the directors of that organization some time in the early part of this week, according to Herbert Harrison, general manager. The directors, according to Mr. Harrison, will meet on call of the Norton-Cline-Noble committee appointed to open negotiations for securing the grounds at Call Field wanted for the fair.

The Self-Defrauded

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Nobody likes to be tricked or defrauded by another person. Many people are not merely indignant, but are moved to immediate and severe reprisals if cheated out of even a small sum of money.

Yet among those same people you will find not a few who all the while, with the utmost complacency, cheat themselves out of what is worth far more than any amount of money of which they may be swindled.

There are many, for example, who cheat themselves out of happiness by the strangely selfish lives they lead.

Day in and day out they seem to be actuated by the motive "Myself alone." And because their selfishness alienates others from them, they presently discover that their lot in life is, by its solitariness, peculiarly in keeping with the "Myself alone" motive they have permitted to govern their behavior.

Forced finally to appreciate that they are quite without friends, are miserably unhappy, they perhaps rail bitterly against fate. But fate is not to blame. The fault rests with themselves, it has its roots in their self-fraudulent egoism.

Among the self-fradulent, too, are those numerous folk who look upon work as a curse and idleness as a blessing.

Idleness might be a blessing if men were not born into this world with an instinctive urge to do, to accomplish, to create and achieve. The more fully they comply with this urge, the greater the satisfaction they derive out of life.

Consequently, when they set themselves against compliance, they actually rob themselves of something very precious to them. They may, into the bargain, bring upon themselves grave evils.

For today it is known that nervous and mental disorders, even serious bodily ailments, often are directly or indirectly the products of idleness. When these disorders and ailments do develop there is again a tendency to rail against fate. But again persistent cheating of self is the true explanation.

And often the only effective cure is to conquer the self-fradulent habit of idling. As many a wise physician, in these days of psychological enlightenment, frankly informs those among his patients who have thus come to grief.

Self-fraud, once more, is plainly in evidence in the case of all who act as though they have completely forgotten that they have minds to take care of as well as bodies.

Luckless self-swindlers of this sort, however carefully they may nourish their bodies, provide next to no nutriment for their minds. The time afforded them for mental nourishing they spend in mere pleasure-seeking, always in pleasure-seeking, and perhaps in pleasure-seeking of a vulgar, vicious sort.

But their starved minds take revenge for the deprivation.

Boredom is the lightest penalty they enforce. They enforce it unfailingly. Yet seldom do the victims of the boredom appreciate that the discomfort it causes is a punishment self-fraud has drawn upon them.

COMING AND GOING WAS ALL RIGHT.

"Well, Jimmy, do you like to go to school?"

"Yes, uncle, and I like to go from school, but I don't like to stay there."

SHOCKING HIM INTO ACTION.

Youth—Last night in my dreams I proposed to you, Miss Eva. What do you suppose that signifies?

Eva (impatiently)—It shows that you have more brains when asleep than you have when you're awake.

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

We have the makings of a fine old family feud in our town just now. Every one is taking sides. Being human, as most of us are, and therefore imperfect, the chances are that the racket will leave its mark on the town for the next twenty years. It will be at least that long before I will again recognize that whopper-jawed old wampus who is deluded into the belief that he runs the National bank, just because he has a private office in its walls. I've not only taken out my own account, but I'll switch the account of every friend of mine in it. And the man who doesn't switch is no friend of mine—and that's that.

For all that, the fool feud began over a comparative trifle. Harrison Midge, the second son of Old Man Midge who owns the mill, was standing on the street corner one day watching a couple of women have a quarrel. And, of course, listening to them. It was a bear of a quarrel, and Harrison, who is young enough to have a sense of humor, was grinning widely. He did not know that one woman was the wife of Officer Pat Morton, our handsome and efficient traffic cop, nor that the other woman was Pat's sister, and that Pat would have given his right ear for a chance to stop the two nannies from making fools of themselves but didn't dare. So he picked on Young Midge.

"Move along, there," he said. "And be quick about it."

"I'll move along because you're an officer," said Young Midge. "But change your tone of voice."

That started it, and, in spite of the fact that Pat had a little edge on Midge in weight and anger, the boy licked the officer like a saucer of cream. There never was as thoroughly licked a traffic officer. Pat was game enough not to use club or gun, and got his licking with the bare hands. But after he had been licked and admitted it he put Midge under arrest and the boy went with him. Now our town is split:

"Has a policeman the right to treat a free-born American as though he were Uncle Tom, the faithful slave?"

That's the question. It cannot be obscured by any of the collateral questions that old fools like the National banker try to inject into it. He thinks it is our bounden duty to obey when any one yells at us, and that we ought to change traffic cops at the polls if we do not like them. I say we owe something to our self-respect.

Of course, I know that argument is lost on the old wampus. He hasn't any self-respect.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

HEMORRHAAGE

A very frightened small boy rolled over on his stomach and looked at his leg. It was bleeding profusely. Terry had been playing in the loft, a thing he had been told repeatedly not to do. The reason was that in the loft there was a collection of old grass scythes and lawn mowers and various hedge shears and other sharpened things of interest, which it is much better that small boys should not play with.

Terry didn't see why. At any rate, he had cut his leg rather badly, and he was up in the loft, and he did not know how he was going to get down.

All the time the blood was flowing freely from his leg. There was quite a pool of blood on the floor.

Suddenly Terry began to feel sick. His face "prickled" and his hands were cold, and he felt a strange sinking sensation in the pit of his small stomach.

Terry Found by Coachman.

It was a good thing for Terry that just at this moment old John, the coachman, climbed the stairs leading to the loft, discovered the small boy in a half-fainting condition, and carried him hastily downstairs and into the harness room.

"Run to the house. Tell his mother. Send for the doctor. Don't lose your head," said old John, all in the same breath, to Tony, the stable boy.

And Tony ran.

Meantime old John, with a calm he was far from feeling, placed Terry on the harness table, pulled out a clean red bandanna from his overall pocket, jerked his soft cap off his head, and rolling it into a pad, placed it directly beneath the small boy's knee. He then forcibly flexed, or bent the knee backward, tying it securely with the bright red bandanna.

Dinah Has Presence of Mind.

The cut in the child's leg was beneath the knee. As soon as the pressure of the tightly rolled cap in the bend of the joint began to tell, the bleeding ceased.

Old John felt better himself as the ugly stream of red ceased to flow across the table and along the floor.

Terry's mother came flying, followed by various members of the family with rugs, comforters, glasses of water, towels, and so forth. Old Dinah, the cook, was the one who seemed to have most presence of mind.

"I done bring a litter," she said, holding out her ironing board, still warm from the iron.

"A litter?" gasped the assembled family. Then they understood. And approved. The small boy was placed on the big padded board, and it was carried, stretcher wise, across the snowy yard to the big white house.

"Fancy Dinah thinking of a stretcher," said some one.

Old John Makes Suggestions.

"The doctor? Did you send for him?" Old John had taken charge of the procession. Terry's mother said that the doctor was on his way.

"Because," said old John, "the bleeding has stopped, but we can't keep that pressure on too long without releasing it enough to let the blood flow back and circulate in the lower part of his leg. And if the wound is exposed to the air, it may clot and stop bleeding with less pressure under the knee. Also, Ma'm, if you don't happen to have any sterile things in the house to dress the wound, some clean old muslin, ironed with a hot iron will be safe dressing to use."

And, it being ironing day, some well-ironed old muslin was promptly procured. When the doctor arrived, Terry was placed flat on his back with the flexed knee supported on a pillow, a temporary dressing was applied and the color began to come back to his face as he tried to explain what had happened.

Fashionable Palm Beach Colony Revives Bicycle Craze

Smart folk years ago cast the bicycle aside as being too plebeian. Recently the bike has been coming back into its own, as is shown by the above photograph made recently at Palm Beach, Fla. The bicycle is now the pleasure vehicle of most of those belonging to the fashionable colony at the winter resort.

She SAID She Wouldn't Marry a Ball Player

But When the Boy Became a World Series Hero, the Girl Changed Her Mind About His Having "Wasted" His Time at Pitching

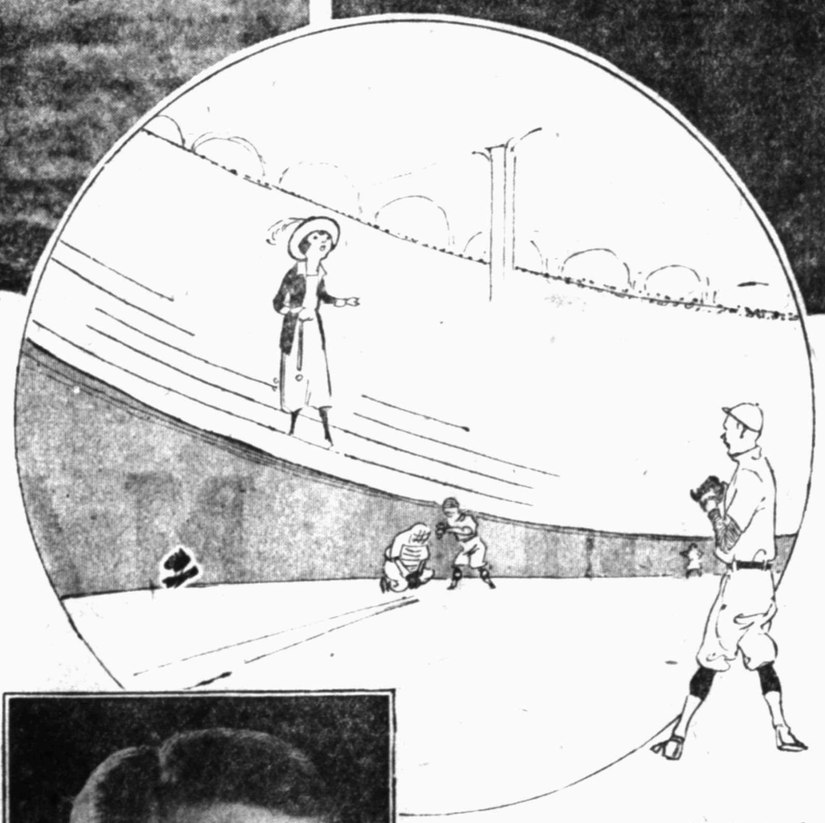

When She Realized He Was to Be a "Common Ball Player" She Bid Him Good-by.

Waite Hoyt, Star Yankee Twirler, Winning a 3-0 Victory.

Miss Dorothy Pyle, Whose Engagement to Waite Hoyt, Her Childhood Sweetheart, Is Announced.

"He Saw Only One Girl—His Boyhood Sweetheart—Dot—Up There in the Grandstand."

Waite Hoyt, Who Is Said to Be the Handsomest Pitcher in Harness.

I HAVEN'T time for a boy who hasn't time for anything but baseball!"

So decided Miss Dorothy Pyle of Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., five years ago.

That meant that Dorothy was a determined young woman with a serious mission in life. Her decision was called forth by the fact that 17-year-old Waite Hoyt, with whom she had been going to high school parties, seemed to have no other ambition than to spend all his time on the corner-lot baseball diamonds.

So Dorothy went her way and Waite continued on his.

And yet Dorothy's parents the other day announced her engagement to Waite, who hadn't changed his mind. Dorothy changed hers, but it took a world's series in which Waite starred as the outstanding hero to make her do it.

Here follows the story of how it came about:

DOROTHY PYLE is 22 years old and charming. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Pyle of No. 1914 Avenue J, Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y. Dorothy is a Flatbush aristocrat. Her parents took up residence before subways had come, at a time when one had to travel between Flatbush and the business section of Brooklyn, on what Flatbushites then called dummy engines. When part of the locomotive top blew off they would solder on an empty tomato can and proceed. It was fun, living in Flatbush, then.

Five years ago, after having kept company with a 17-year-old boy for two years, she suddenly realized that his ambition was to be a "common ball player." So she just naturally cast him off—that's the only way of expressing it—and fixed her pretty eyes on the horizon of young manhood for other likely matrimonial timber.

Then, one day last summer, as she and her mother awaited a subway train in the "grown-up" Flatbush community, the boy with the worthless ambition to become a ball player stood before her.

"Waite!" she exclaimed.

"Dot!" said he.

It was Waite Hoyt, star pitcher of the New York Yankees, the very boy she had cast off five years before because he had such a worthless ideal in life. It was Waite Hoyt, 22-year-old pitching marvel, whose name was a byword for fame, whose puzzling delivery turned back Ty Cobb and Heilman and Sisler and others of the great batsmen of the American League. It was Waite Hoyt, idol of the fans the country over, at that time leading his teammates in the gruelling last-minute fight for the pennant he eventually won for them.

An Old Flame Starts Anew!

She confessed to herself that he looked perfectly handsome. And she wasn't a bit peeved with her mother when the latter invited Waite to call. But she was a bit put out when she happened to be absent when Waite did call and had to be contented with hearing her father tell how he had enjoyed living over with Waite some of the wonderful pitching battles which had made Waite famous.

"But the next time he called I was in," Miss Pyle said the other day. "And—and—well, we renewed our old friendship and I became quite a baseball fan!"

When a ball player becomes the idol of thousands the country over, when he achieves the highest goal while still a kid, he ceases to be common, becomes most desirable, and even in the eyes of a Flatbush aristocrat must shine as a bright star at which one should gaze.

And that is just what happened.

From that moment of meeting Miss Pyle took an added interest in professional baseball. And when Waite Hoyt smiled up at the grandstand as he walked from the mound to the bench between innings of a game at the Polo Grounds, he wasn't smiling at the hundred-odd girls who immediately claimed ownership of the smile. He saw only one girl—his boyhood sweetheart, "Dot," sitting up there in the seventh heaven of her happiness.

Nor did Miss Pyle marvel a bit at the performance of the young giant retiring the best of batters with ease. For she always had before mind's eye the picture of the boy in the buff and blue Erasmus High School uniform. And when the crowd applauded and when hats were thrown in air, she harkened back to the schoolboy games when every time Waite registered a strike-out a great sea of yellow chrysanthemums carried by Erasmus rooters waved as a field of flowers in a wind.

A Niche in the Hall of Fame

She followed him through that world series and saw him emerge the victor, even though his team came out the vanquished. For the great "Big Six" did not excel Waite's record from the standpoint of pitching elegance. If ever a pitcher deserved to win three games straight that man was Waite Hoyt, even the victorious Giant players agreed.

His first time out was Thursday, Oct. 6, when he held the New York National Leaguers to two hits and whitewashed them 3 to 0. The following Monday he vanquished them again by 3 to 1, allowing them the only earned run they were to get in the series.

But his third game against them—the one he lost through sheer tough luck—proved him the master. Five hits were garnered off him, and how measly they looked can be recalled by the thousands who saw that historic contest, which settled a world's series and lost the game for the better performing pitcher.

That one run the Giants got came in the first inning. Burns went out, Bancroft walked and Frisch fouled out. Kelly, the elongated first baseman of the Giants, drove the ball toward short. A cry of derision arose from the Yankee rooters. The out seemed certain. Roger Peckinpaugh, Yankee captain, the star shortstop of the American League, was in its path. But the yell changed to groans of disgust, which were drowned out by the roar of the Giant supporters when the ball went between the legs of the Yankee shortstop. Bancroft speeded home, carrying the game with him.

Waite, at the time, did not realize what had occurred. He figured that Pipp or Meusel would surely bring in enough to overcome his captain's error. And the one and only girl in the world smiled encouragement from the stand.

But the die had been cast—1-0—and 1-0 is the score today on the page of baseball annals. And there wasn't a heart in the vast throng that did not sympathize with the kid pitcher when he walked in for the last time. But he didn't need the sympathy, after all, for someone whispered in his ear, "You did fine, Waite, you wonderful boy!" and that soothed the ache of defeat.

He knew he had won. He knew that when he won he won more than a world's series.

Right there he learned what the old bard meant when he wrote: "Sweet are the uses of adversity!"

At the age of 22 Waite Hoyt has embellished a page in the book of life. He might now write finis at its bottom and close it up with the exultation that only comes to him who has realized life's ambition. For the Brooklyn schoolboy in knickerbockers, who used to astonish admiring chums with his speed and curves in games played on the Prospect Park parade grounds, the while he dreamed of some day mowing down opposing batsmen in a world's series, did grow into the "giant killer" who twice sent McGraw's world's champions to humble defeat.

The nerve that enabled Waite to win the championship of the American League for the New York Yankees and then to hold those formidable sluggers of McGraw to two lone runs in 27 innings of peerless world series baseball, was nurtured on the Prospect Park parade grounds. All day Saturday, every week day afternoon, until the sun began to cast the shadows of the giant trees of Parkside avenue over the diamonds, Waite went through his apprenticeship.

Waite knew the history of that field. He knew that on everyone of those seventeen diamonds, where thousands every day watch 34 amateur teams battle simultaneously for supremacy, Willie Keeler had learned to "hit 'em where they ain't." He didn't remember Keeler. He was too young. But he did recall Fred Jacklitsch, one of the few big leaguers who ever "came back" after release past the age of 30, for he had watched Fred work himself back into form and into the big league line-ups by afternoon practice with the "grass-eaters" between the diamonds.

And when Waite wasn't on that field he was on the back lots of Flatbush. He used to watch Dick Cotter lazily stab a vicious grasser in his shortstop position on the old Midwout's diamond on Dorchester road. How his soul stirred when "Dick" made the Chicago Cubs and caught as understudy for Archer for a season. Waite almost wept when Cotter threw out his arm just after he had been signed by McGraw to catch the great Mathewson in the last season that the blond master of the mound performed.

These were the links in the chain that led Waite to look toward McGraw. This was the chain that dangled before his boy eyes every time he saw the umpire raise his right hand as the third strike burned across under the nose of a startled high school player.

"If I could only get on the Giants," he said to his father, "Add" Hoyt, an actor.

Dad knew McGraw. Both are members of the Lambs Club.

"The kid thinks he's a pitcher, John," Mr. Hoyt told the Giants' leader.

McGraw knows the kind of players the Prospect Park parade grounds graduates. When he learned that Waite had won two pennants in the Junior Eagle League and had pitched an Erasmus High School ball team to victory through an entire season at the age of 14, he got interested. McGraw signed up the kid twirler at the age of 15, the youngest pitcher ever similarly recognized.

But Waite didn't take it to head, even though he did take it to heart. He "pal-ed" just as he ever did with his schoolmates, and when he first met Dorothy it was someone else who told her how distinguished her new acquaintance was. Each was then 15.

They met at a fraternity dance at the Hotel St. George, given by the fraternity sisters of Dorothy at Packer Institute, Brooklyn. They danced several times together and, as Miss Pyle expressed it at her home the other day:

She Just Loved His Dancing!

"The thing that first appealed to me about Waite was his dancing. I didn't know he was a baseball player then. In fact, I didn't care anything about baseball. But, after I met him, I became interested. He's a handsome chap, everyone agrees. And when we talked things over and I found that he lived in Flatbush—he lived on Woodruff avenue then—and he and I both were among the pioneers of the section, I felt sort of close to him. But to be very frank, I took absolutely no interest in baseball. When I attended games played by Erasmus I found myself cheering like a crazy girl just because I saw Waite being cheered by others who knew what they were cheering for. Frankly, I didn't, except, of course, I was cheering for Waite."

This "puppy love" endured two years. Of course, it might be inserted here, that Waite was a pretty much overgrown "puppy." He tipped the beam at 165 pounds and combined the strength of an ox with the grace of a yearling buck.

He and "Dot" became inseparable. Their friends winked and their parents looked wise. Everything seemed pointed toward an engagement that would end with marriage.

But, when Waite quit being a schoolboy, and went out into the "bush" leagues under the guiding instructions of John McGraw, things took on a different aspect for "Dot." And when reports drifted in that he was a flivver as a bush leaguer and that McGraw had cut him loose, well, his friends began to say that after all he must have been a sort of morning glory star.

But when, in the course of five years of hard knocks, good old solid smacks of ash against leather with the bases full and all that sort of stuff, the kid "arrived," the Yankees picked him up and Brooklyn, that borough of 2,000,000 souls, claimed him solidly as its own.

So, perhaps it was to be expected that "Dot" was caught in the undertow of feeling. And that is why, one day in the near future, when she runs out to a quiet place to be married—for that is how they intend to do it—the good wishes of Brooklyn and Flatbush will go with them.

WEOWNA OIL SELLS OUT TO CAMP OIL & GAS

Announcement of the sale of the entire holdings of the Weowna Oil company, located in the Burkburnett pool to the Camp Oil & Gas company was announced here Saturday. No announcement was made regarding the consideration involved but it is understood to have been between $75,000 and $100,000.

Twenty-three producing wells are included in the purchase. The Weowna company before the opening up of the Burkburnett townsite pool, secured a lease on the right of way of the Wichita Falls & Northwestern railroad extending south from the station at Burkburnett a distance of three miles.

With the bringing in of the Fowler well in the summer of 1918 the company was one of several that sprung into overnight prominence because of its holdings. Since that time the twenty-three wells varying in depth have been drilled. The production of the wells at the present time is approximately 150 barrels daily.

The Camp Oil & Gas company has production on a 60 acre lease located on the Dodson and Beach tracts of the Texhoma field of the south Burkburnett district. The south end of the property purchased from the Weowna company adjoins their holdings and the two properties will be operated from one central plant. The Camp company has oil and gas production on their lease. Offices of the company are located in Fort Worth.

WEEK SEES HALF MILE ROAD PAVED

Between 2,200 and 2,400 lineal feet of paving was laid during the last week by one concrete mixer of Potts & Prentice, contractors, on the Burkburnett road, according to information Saturday from the local office of the contractors. The amount of paving completed, which compares favorably with the totals made during the summer months, is said to set a record for one mixer in the mouth of February.

The mixer which is located midway between this city and Burkburnett made between 426 and 480 feet daily for five days not being in operation on the sixth day. Due to delay in connection with the Frieberg cut-off north of this city, the north mixer only completed 400 feet during the last week.

It is proposed to build a monumental building in Washington, D. C., in memory of the National Guardsmen who gave their lives in the World War.

Abraham Lincoln Balked at Becoming Farmer as He Was Requested by Father Lincoln

Gutzon Borglum's Statue of Lincoln at Newark, N. J. The Photograph shows school children playing about the statue which is located in one of the parks in the city.

(By International News Service)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 12.—Abraham Lincoln, the great emancipator, would have been a farmer had he followed the inclinations of his father and had he been satisfied with the impoverished surroundings of his boyhood days.

But the immortal Lincoln, whose 113th birthday is being commemorated by the nation and the world today, had loftier ambitions and, further, a hatred for the rustic life of a soil tiller.

Scarcely had the man who later became one of the greatest figures in American history becomes old enough to shift for himself than he left the home of his father and stepmother, which was a small cabin located on what was known as Goose Nest Prairie, near Charleston, Ill., in Coles county.

This was not the home in which Abe was born, but where his father settled after coming to Illinois, Lincoln was born on February 12, 1809 in a log cabin on a barren farm in the backwoods of Kentucky, three miles west of a place called Hodgensville.

Spent Youth in Indiana.

When he was seven years old his family moved to a town called Gentryville, in Spencer county, Indiana, where his mother, Nancy Hanks Lincoln died. Shortly afterward Lincoln's father was remarried to the Widow Sarah Johnston, a Kentucky girl, and the family moved over into Illinois, where his father settled. The trip of the Lincolns from Indiana to Illinois was made in a wagon drawn by four oxen.

When Lincoln left his father's country home in Coles county, he moved west into Illinois and first settled at Salem, near Springfield.

Lincoln's early life was one of many struggles, hardships and of poverty. Always a plain man, he was first of all a "man of odd jobs," rail splitter, blacksmith, store clerk and trader before he practiced law. H later entered politics.

One of the most interesting books on the early days of Lincoln, much of which has been untouched upon by historians, is in the possession of Dennis Hanks Dowling, a blood-cousin of the Civil War President, who now resides in Springfield.

"Scrapbook" Is Valued.

Dowling's "scrapbook" upon which he has spent more than forty years, contains a vast collection of interviews with men who knew Lincoln personally, of pictures depicting the poverty of his surroundings and numerous other interesting facts of Lincoln's inner self. Among the collection of pictures is the first photograph ever taken of Lincoln.

Dowling's mother, Sarah Jane Doyling, was a second cousin of the great President and spent many years near the family when Lincoln lived in Coles County. She knew him personally and often corresponded with him after he was elected to the presidency.

In later years, Dowling said, his mother often held him on her lap and told many interesting stories about "Uncle Abe." On the morning following the night when Lincoln was shot she was telling the family at the breakfast table of a dream she had of the President, when a neighbor brought news of the assassination. Mrs. Dowling always thought her dream was a premonition of Lincoln's death.

Step-Mother's Opinion

Dowling's book, which he terms "Lincoln's Life from the Cradle to the Grave," contains a newspaper clipping of an interview with Lincoln's step-mother, in which she says:

"I think the first time I saw Abe he was the ugliest chap that ever obstructed my view. But he was honest to the core. He would not drink but at times a highly-polished cuss-word would escape his lips."

The face of Lincoln is often referred to as having had the look of deepest sadness. Judge O. B. Ficklin, who lived at Charleston and who served in Congress with Lincoln, is quoted in another clipping in the Dowling "reminiscences" as saying:

"He was naturally despondent and sad, like many another who has made mirth for a merry company. He could tell a story to make a group roar with laughter, but when his face was unlit with pleasantry it was unlit with pleasantry it was dark, gloomy and peculiar."

Hated Work on Farm.

Another clipping quotes Captain John Easton, a close friend of Lincoln, with the following:

"Lincoln hated farm work and would rather do odd jobs around town than work on the farm. He was a great boy for wrestling and, with his powerful stature, could throw anyone in the community.

After failing in business at Salem, Lincoln tried for the legislature, but was defeated in his first attempt. He was elected in his second race and served four terms in the legislature, entering, at the age of 25, in 1834, and serving until 1842.

When nearly 33 years of age, Lincoln was married to Mary Todd, of Springfield. The wedding was held in a private house on November 4, 1842 and was an important function for it was the first Episcopalian wedding that good society in Springfield had witnessed.

During the wedding ceremony Lincoln is said to have startled old Judge Brown, of the Illinois Supreme court when, in lawyerlike terms, he is reported to have turned to the bride and said:

Rebuked at Wedding.

"With this ring I thee endow with all my goods, chattels, lands and renements—"

The old judge broke in impatiently and exclaimed:

"God, Almighty, Lincoln! The statute fixes all that."

Lincoln was elected to congress in 1847, where he served one term. Following his retirement from congress Lincoln practiced law diligently and remained away from politics. In 1854 he became active in the new republican movement in Illinois and became prominent at political gatherings for several years.

It was during these years of his political activity that he engaged in the famous debates with Douglas and during which he was defeated for the senate by his oratorical contemrary.

Lincoln became the foremost figure in the country in 1861, when he was elected to the presidency.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The market for coffee futures reflected further liquidation of March contracts today under which that delivery declined 13 points under the previous close. Later positions at first responded moderately but on later buying for Wall street and trade account developed considerable steadiness which was maintained throughout the late forenoon. The opening was 8 to 13 points lower, March declining to 8.32 while July, after selling down to 8.40, rallied to 8.42, and December to 8.40 to 8.47. Final prices were 6 to 13 points net lower. Sales were estimated at about 43,000 bags. March 8.33; May 8.37; July 8.42; September 8.43; December 8.43. Spot coffee was reported quiet and unchanged at 8 7-8 to 9 for Rio 7s and 12 1-4 to 12 1-2 for Santos 4s.

DRY GOODS

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Dry goods markets generally were quiet today. Cotton goods were unsettled under a light demand. Yarns were quiet and prices easy. Silks were dull and curtailment increased in mill centers. Fancy worsted lines of men's wear were opened but new business was light. Some lines of staple worsted dress goods were offered for future delivery at old prices. Burlaps were quiet and firm. Monday will be a holiday in the wholesale districts.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Uncertain tendencies ruled during today's abbreviated stock market session. The approaching double holiday and dissatisfaction over proposed future tax legislation held down trading.

Several speculative favorites in the industrial and special divisions, particularly Gulf States Steel, were under constant pressure, closing at material recessions, but losses otherwise held within 1 opint limits.

Some junior rails retined most of their recent gains and a few utilities including Peoples Gas, were active and strong. Sales totalled 275,000 shares.

Bonds were dull and featureless, a majority of the Liberty series showing nominal net gains. Changes among other domestic bonds and the international groups were of a mixed character total sales (par value) aggregated $8,350,000.

Actual reserves of the clearing house banks showed a moderate deficit for the first time since last October, due to a cash loss of $18,510,000. Actual loans and discounts decreased $44,137,000 and reserves of members at the Federal Reserve bank dropped $21,000,000.

Week end trade reviews reported less distribution in merchandising lines, but general business improvements was noted at important agricultural centers. The one important traffic return was that of the Union Pacific system, which showed a large gain in net income for December.

Grain

CHICAGO, Feb. 11. — Highest prices on the present upturn in the wheat market were realized today but were not maintained at the finish and a sag was noted juts at the close. However, the resting spots were ⅝c to 1⅜c higher, with May at 1.33 to 1.33⅛ and July at 1.17⅞ to 1.18. Corn closed ¼c lower to ¼c higher, while oats finished unchanged to ¼c higher.

With a double holiday ahead there was considerable evening up in the wheat market and May sold at a new high figure on the present upturn and the average for the day was higher. Reports of the continued drought in the southwest and the fact that the forecast suggested no moisture in Kansas overnight were effective influences.

Corn and oats held within narrow limits with a general disposition to even up for the holidays on the part of the local element. Buenos Aires corn closed 2@3c higher, but this had little effect here. Oats were dull with commission houses fair sellers.

The provision market was dull with prices little changed.

Cotton

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Covering of shorts ahead of the holidays was a feature in the cotton market today which promoted general firmness and advanced prices at one time 18 to 24 points above the previous close with March selling at 17.35, May 17.06 and July 16.59. The opening was steady at an advance of 7 to 10 points and no aggressive offerings were encountered until just before the close when profit taking sales appeared, weakening prices slightly and leaving the market barely steady at the last with prices 9 to 18 points net higher.

Both the west and Wall street were good buyers during the second hour on the firm developments in the grain market and there was early buying of March by Liverpool and the trade which did much to sustain the early advance in the market here. Bulls pointed to the firm attitude of the British government in both India and Ireland and to the Giddes report advocating big savings in British expenditures as likely to improve the foreign situation. It was also agreed that the Fall River sales of 120,000 pieces for the week, with curtailment of only sixty thousand pieces offered encouragement to speculative buyers, offsetting to some extent the continued apprehension over New England labor conditions and the dullness of the goods trade in this city.

Clear warm weather prevailed over the cotton belt and there were further reports of improvement in spot demand through the south. Sentiment here at the close of the day as expressed in commission house letters was almost unanimously favorable to a gradual improvement in cotton prices, depending somewhat upon the wage situation and the attitude of congress toward the bonus tax.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 11.—Covering of the short interest and new buying for long account in considerable volume put the price of cotton higher today from the opening. Highest levels were reached toward the close when the March position traded at 16.31 and the list was at gains of 23 to 28 points. Just on the close the demand was much less urgent and last prices were as net gains on the day of only 13 to 19 points with March at 16.21.

Covering by shorts here was quickened by the report from New York that a large short line, estimated by some people at ten thousand bales, was being covered in that market. The market was carried to its highest prices by a private bureau estimate of 562,000 bales as the amount of cotton consumed by American mills during January. This compared with 511,800 consumed during December and only 366,463 during January of last year. These figures did much to offset the reports from New England that the mill strike still continued to spread.

The early gains were due in a large measure to private cables from Liverpool to the effect that the Geddes committee report, recommending cuts in the army and navy expenditures, had been well received and should cause a revival of confidence. Bullish comment followed the receipt of cable messages from London, claiming that large quantities of yarns were being sent to England and Germany to be woven into cloth there for the account of British firms.

Livestock

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Texas, Feb. 11.—Moderate receipts were disposed of on an unchanged market today. Receipts 400 head of cattle and 1,000 hogs. Most of the cattle consisted of yearlings which brought 5.80.

Two cars of hogs sold at 9.20 and most sales ranged 8.50 to 9.10. The market was probably a shade higher but nothing here was good enough to really develop the full strength of the trade.

Nothing was available in the sheep house. Quote:

Cattle—Beeves 3.50 @ 6.50; stockers 3.50 @ 5.75; cows 2.50 @ 5.00; canners 2.00 @ 2.50; heifers 3.00 @5.50; yearlings 350 @ 7.00; bulls 2.00 at 4.00; calves 2.00 @ 7.00.

Metals

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The demand for steel has broadened slightly and the volume of business during the week showed moderate improvement. Interest was centered largely in structural materials and plate although there was a fair business done in wire products. There were also orders in sight from the railroads. While the market appeared steady on the surface it was said that concessions were obtainable on more than moderate sized lots.

Pig iron experienced a brisk demand in spots, but on the whole the market was quiet and barely steady with producers anxious for business.

The copper market has continued weak with small lots still pressing on the market, although there are no large supplies available at much under 13 1-2c delivered for electrilytic, while the largest producers are holding at 13 1-3c delivered. Large consumers have fairly good supplies on hand and are showing little interest. Optimism is still felt in some quarters, partly over the increased exports and partly on the idea that the actual consumption of copper in 1922 will be considerably ahead of last year.

Tin has been erratic following fluctuations in London and sterling exchange. February requirements appear to have been overestimated and spot tin is now only 1-4c over futures whereas, recently the difference was 3-4c.

Lead is unchanged with producers well sold up for nearby shipment, and not disposed to offer freely for March at current prices.

In zinc domestic demand is quiet but it is said that conditions are still favoring a nearby approach of expert business, and there has been some export inquiry from abroad. There is further curtailment and some smelters are reported to be definitely shutting down.

Antimony is quiet. Recent heavy arrivals from China are said to be due to unfavorable financial conditions there and it is reported that some of the producers are shutting down and will not resume until prices warrant.

CHICAGO PRODUCE

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Butter lower; creamery extras 36 @ 36 1-2. Eggs unchanged; receipts 8,386 cases. Poultry alive lower; fowls 24, springs 25, roosters 18.

WAGE REDUCTIONS ON COUNTY ROAD WORK TO COME BEFORE COMMISSIONERS COURT MONDAY

The matter of reductions in the wages paid on the Potts & Prentice concrete road contract will come before the county commissioners court for action at their regular weekly meeting Monday morning. In accordance with agreement made two weeks ago the contractors will present a proposed reduction scale to be approved by the court.

Mr. Potts and Mr. Prentice have agreed upon their recommendations to the cvourt. The new scale as suggested by them will provide for reductions in some cases with no changes to be made in others.

It is expected that the court will also again discuss the program of paving for the county after the completion of the Burkburnett road. Last week Commissioners Kuntz, Prescott and Haynes agreed to the paving of the Henrietta road out of this city to the Clay county line provided the remaining funds were divided equally among their three precincts. Although Commissioner Jackson did not agree to the program when suggested Monday it is believed that it will be eventually adopted by the court.

With the completion of the Henrietta road the signed contract which the court has with the state and federal highway departments and the contractors will be completed and it presumed that the court can then order in what paving hey may desire.

A millionaire, buddy, is quite likely to be a man who pays taxes on a hundred thousand under protest.

CHIROPRACTIC

Consists Entirely of Adjusting the Movable Segments of the Spinal Column to Normal Position

Can Chiropractic Cure Any Disease?

Chiropractic teaches that there is a "power within" which they call "Innate Intelligence," which builds the body from a parent cell or blastoderm; and that through all the circling "three score years and ten" this intelligent power co-ordinates the physical functions, heals the body's wounds, mends its breaks, adapts it to the change of seasons, occupations and pursuits, and performs the miracle of changing common food into living, breathing, sensate bone and flesh.

This power works through the brain and nerve system and when it wants any organ to act or a part of the body to move, it sends a command, or impulse, over the nerves to the proper muscles or organs. When it wishes the liver or spleen or any other secretory organ or cell to secret, it sends secretory impulses to that organ or cell. In like manner it sends excretory impulses over the nerves to the excretory organs; sends calorific impulses to heat the body; expansive impulses to build the body; nourishes or feeds with trophic impulses; repairs with reparative and reproduces with reproductive impulses.

This innate power sees through the optic nerves and the eyes; hears through the auditory nerves and ears; tastes through the gustatory nerves and the taste bulbs; smells through the olfactory nerves and the nose; and feels through the sensory nerves and the organs of touch.

As we readily see from the foregoing, this "power within" uses the nerves for both sending of commands (mental impulses), and the receiving of vibrations. We all know that when a nerve is injured or impaired it will not properly transmit the commands (mental impulses) sent from "Innate Intelligence" to an organ, part, or cell, nor will it properly transmit a vibration from any of these to "Innate Intelligence." When this occurs the organ or part supplied by the nerve inco-ordinates, i. e., it fails to work in harmony with the rest of the body and it is then what we call dis-eased.

Chiropractic teaches that the backbone is composed of movable segments (vertebrae) between which the nerves emit that lead from the brain to all parts of the body; that these spinal joints sometimes become slightly misaligned and press upon the spinal nerves, and that this pressure impairs the work of the nerves so that it doesn't properly transmit either mental impulses or vibrations.

For instance: If the nerves leading to the stomach are pressed upon or pinched, we have stomach trouble; if it is the nerves to the liver that are pinched we have liver trouble; pressure on the optic nerve will produce blindness, on the auditory nerve deafness, and so on through the entire list of inco-ordinations, i. e., dis-eases.

Chiropractic teaches that all that is necessary for a complete restoration to health is that the point of impingement be found and the vertebra adjusted to its normal position, thus permitting "Innate Intelligence," the only power on earth that heals, cures, or mends, to restore the organs to health.

Because Chiropractors depend upon that innate power they say that in the lexicon of Chiropractic that there are no incurable dis-eases, which does not mean, however, that disease cannot reach an incurable stage.

All that the best Chiropractor or earth pretends to do is to find and ADJUST the misaligned vertebra to its normal position, which opens the lines of communication (the nerves) between "Innate Intelligence" and the dis-eased tissue.

Chiropractors do not cure, they simply ADJUST THE MISALIGNED VERTEBRA, thus permitting NATURE to cure, heal and repair the dis-eased member.

THE SCOUT OATH.

On my honor I will do my best—

1. To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout Law.

2. To help other people at all times.

3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.

THE SCOUT LAW.

1. A SCOUT IS TRUSTWORTHY. A scout's honor is to be trusted. If he were to violate his honor by telling a lie, or by cheating, or by not doing exactly a given task, when trusted on his honor, he may be directed to hand over his scout badge.

2. A SCOUT IS LOYAL. He is loyal to all to whom loyalty is due, his scout leader, his home, and parents and country.

3. A SCOUT HELPFUL. He must be prepared at any time to save life, help injured persons, and share the home duties. He must do at least one good turn to somebody ever day.

4. A SCOUT IS FRIENDLY. He is a friend to all and a brother to every other scout.

5. A SCOUT IS COURTEOUS. He is polite to all, especially to women, children, old people, and the weak and helpless. He must not take pay for being helpful or courteous.

6. A SCOUT IS KIND. He is a friend to animals. He will not kill nor hurt any living creature needlessly, but will strive to save and protect all harmless life.

7. A SCOUT IS OBEDIENT. He obeys his parents, scoutmaster, patrol leader, and all other duly constituted authorities.

8. A SCOUT IS CHEERFUL. He smiles whenever he can. His obedience to orders is prompt and cheery. He never shirks nor grumbles at hardships.

9. A SCOUT IS THRIFTY. He does not wantonly destroy property. He works faithfully, wastes nothing, and makes the best use of his opportunities. He saves his money so that he may pay his own way, be generous to those in need, and helpful to worthy objects. He may work for pay, but must not receive tips for courtesies or good turns.

10. A SCOUT IS BRAVE. He has the courage to face danger in spite of fear, and to stand up for the right against the coaxings of friends or the jeers or threats of enemies, and defeat does not down him.

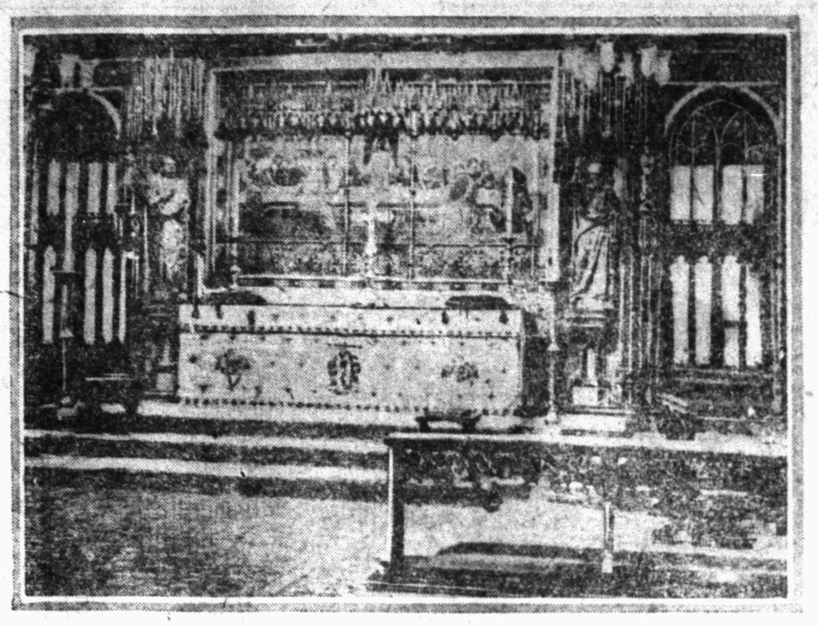

11. A SCOUT IS CLEAN. He keeps clean in body and thought, stands for clean speech, clean sport, clean habits, and travels with a clean crowd.

12. A SCOUT IS REVERENT. He is reverent toward God. He is faithful in his religious duties, and respects the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion.

"GET-RICH-QUICK" PAIR SENTENCED TO GO TO CHURCH

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Six months attendance at church was the sentence imposed on Tillie Buchinastin, 19, and John Haddock today by Judge Joseph Haas, following testimony by Dr. Ephriam Silverman that the couple had swindled him.

Silverman said that one day when he stepped from his office Tillie was sitting in his automobile. When he started to talk to her, Haddock appeared and cried, "What are you doing with my wife?" the doctor testified, adding that he paid hush money and had the couple arrested.

Tillie and Haddock were placed on probation, that status to continue if they go to church each Sunday for six months.

SURE, HE KNOWS.

His Wife—"I see by the papers the government's building another dry dock. What is a dry dock?"

Mr. Wetmore—"It's a landing pier where they search your baggage for booze."

Society Woman Helps Run New York Hotel To Aid Charity Fund

Young women members of families socially prominent in New York City are preparing to run the Hotel Hiltmore in that city for 24 hours, the entire proceeds of the day to be given to the Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis. They recently acted as bellhops, waitresses, elevator operators and automobile starters and imitated the handsome polite clerks. And of course they accepted tips. In the Crystal of Fashion

By CAROLYN T. RADNOR-LEWIS

Since the holiday excitements are over and we have welcomed little 1922 and are already feeling at least acquainted with it, our thoughts naturally veer toward clothes.

What more profitable way of spending the long wintry afternoons and evenings than by fashioning frocks to greet the spring.

"But what are they to be?" you may plaintively ask.

Let us gaze into the crystal of fashion. Out of the iridescent mist we seem to discern the trees in leaf, the flowers in bud, butterflies flitting from posy to posy, fleecy clouds chasing each other across expanses deeply blue—and girls everywhere in the great outdoors. And in the foreground focusing the attention there are these new out-dooring dresses develped in silks, the silks that are so characteristically outdoorsy.

You will recognize the dress in the photograph expressed in the silk that made out-dooring so popular, the sturdy khaki-kool. You may prefer it in white, for a white season is heralded, or in the natural shade, or again in one of the colorings that are reflected the brightest in fashion's spring rainbow, the radiant Temple Orange, cornflower blue, canna, jadite and others likewise of the pure dye, clear, rich coloring.

Or you can select the khaki-kool in white or gray or natural hair-lined in black or a color, in stripes, checks, big and little, and plaids, a late edition of this well-known silk just issued for 1922.

And besides khaki-kool there is another cherished friend—Ruff-a-Nuff. Here again you can select from a galaxy of novel stripes and check and plaid effects, all in white or with the fast dye colorings, and all of which can go straight into the tub to emerge in all their pristine loveliness, for this typical out-dooring silk will wash like a pocket handkerchief.

Hope Hampton in an out-door dress of khaki-kool, with plaited bodice and box-plaited skirt.

Shimmering over there—you can't fail to see them for their lustre fairly glistens through the mist of the crystal—are the whip-poor-will and dewkist brocades, in new and more ingenious designs, silk pictures every one of them.

February

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

"All things are not what they seem," sang Little Buttercup, and we agree with her as heartily as the chorus.

Particularly when we think of February.

February is the shortest month in the year, only it is not. It just seems so. Really it is the longest month.

It drags. It never gets done.

It is the last of winter. Winter was all right in December, with its sleigh-bells and Christmas time; but along about February, when it is slush and influenza, it gets on our nerves.

It is like a bore who will not go away.

It is like the woman caller who stands at the door and talks a half an hour after she said goodbye.

It is like the last third of the parson's sermon, which goes on after he has had many a splendid opportunity to quit.

It is like the last few sticks in the cord of wood, which everyone knows are the hardest to saw.

It is like paying off a mortgage after the house has burned down.

It is like the last year of the war.

It is like old age when one has lost interest in everything.

I never knew anyone who liked February.

It is nothing but a month.

It contains Washington's birthday and Lincoln's, and Saint Valentine's Day. And once every four years it contains an extra day.

But that is all that can be said for it.

All other seasons have their delights. Anybody can be good in spring, when the grass is greening and flowers preening. And summer is the time for holidays and loafing. And autumn is rich in fruits. And winter has its keen delights. But February is just—bla.

The little runt makes a feeble effort to be funny by bringing around Leap Year once every four years, and giving the old maids a chance. But I have never noticed that it did them much good. Before they learn how to use it, they are too old.

Besides this, it messes up the calendar. It has two days less than any other month most of the time, but we cannot even depend upon that, for every once in a while it has only one day less.

Somewhere, I suppose, in the wise counsels of destiny, February has its purpose. But as far as mortal mind can see, it is only just another thing to be lived through—like the measles or the chicken-pox.

P. T. Barnum often lectured on temperance.

TEXAS G. O. P. LEADERS WILL RENEW FIGHT

Women's Votes Will Be Objective of Drive; Want Culberson Again in the Gubernatorial Race.

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Feb. 11.—The state republican executive committee meeting in regular session here this afternoon, voted unanimously to place a full ticket in the field for county, state and congressional offices at the general election in November.

The executive committee accepted the plans of the sub-committee, headed by R. B. Creager, Brownsville, for organization of every county and precinct in Texas.

Creager announced, following the meeting, that women voters of the state would be the objective of the G. O. P. drive for ballots in the general election. He is also chairman of the state executive committee and is prominently mentioned as the next ambassador to Mexico.

Candidates for various state offices, including that of governor and lieutenant governor and also for the senate, were discussed at the conference. Friends of John G. Culberson, Wichita Falls, are seeking to have him again make the race for governor pointing out that he polled more than 100,000 votes at the last election, running on the republican ticket.

Two others badly burned were rescued by fellow workmen after they had leaped into the Mississippi, their clothing aflame.

Yates Makes Statement on Juvenile Jail

Editor Record News—So much has been said lately with reference to the juvenile jail that in justice to myself I think that the public is entitled to know that I am not custodian of this establishment, nor do I carry keys to same.

DIVORCE MACHINE THROWN IN HIGH GEAR AT HOUSTON

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Feb. 11.—Court divorces at the rate of one every minute and a half for an hour and a half were introduced today by district Judge J. D. Harvey.

Following complaint of officials that the county was losing between $2,000 and $3,000 annually on uncollected costs in divorce cases, Judge Harvey required that divorces be paid for "as you get 'em." Sixty-three were granted and none refused.

WILL CONVENE ANOTHER JURY AT OKMULGEE

Judge Christopher Announces His Intention of Returning and Calling Dismissed Jury Together.

By Associated Press.

OKMULGEE, Okla., Feb. 11.—E. J. Dick, chairman of a resolutions committee appointed at a mass meeting of citizens Thursday afternoon condemning the discharge by Superior Court Judge H. R. Christopher of the grand jury said to have been called primarily to investigate the affairs of the defunct Bank of Commerce of Okmulgee, left Okmulgee late today with the announced purpose of presenting to Judge Christopher the resolutions.

Attorney Dick stated before leaving he had telephoned Judge Christopher that he would meet him at any place agreeable to Judge Christopher.

Judge Mark L. Bozarth of the district court, after being notified of the action of the bar committee in advising Judge Christopher that it would be unwise for him to attempt to reconvene the superior court grand jury announced tonight that he would issue a call for a grand jury in the district court on Monday morning, fixing the date February 20.

Referring to the possibility that Judge Christopher might attempt to reconvene the superior court grand jury, Gordon Clarke, foreman tonight said that he would refuse to serve under any order from Judge Christopher and declared that none of the other members of the jury would act. "I would go to jail for contempt of court before I would accept any instructions from the present judge of the superior court," he said.

At County Attorney Hepburn's office, it was said that protests against any further action by Judge Christopher, toward re-empaneling the grand jury had been coming to the office all day.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 11.—Superior Court Judge H. R. Christopher drove over from Coyle, Okla., in his automobile to Guthrie, Okla., to meet E. L. Dick of Okmulgee, with whom he had an appointment this evening. Mrs. Christopher told The Associated Press over long distance telephone tonight.

Judge Christopher in a long distance conversation with The Associated Press in the day, said he would set aside his order dismissing the superior court grand jury Thursday morning when he returned to Okmulgee Monday and allow the same jury to continue deliberations in investigating failure of the Bank of Commerce of Okmulgee last November.

TODAY

14 POINTS IN THE PLATFORM OF MR. PARRISH

Opening Gun of His Campaign at Sherman a Message to His Fellow Citizens of Lone Star State.

Tells What He Stands for As a Democrat and Measures He Will Champion If Sent to the Senate.

SHERMAN, Texas, Feb. 11.—Opening his campaign here today for the United States senate, Lucian W. Parrish of Henrietta, congressman from the Thirteenth district, declared that more energetic and efficient attention to purely national problems, and a withdrawal of the national government from such problems as concern only the states, constitute the chief duties of the government in these times.

In his address here today, Mr. Parrish gave an analytical and eloquent discussion of pending national problems, dealing at length with international affairs and with the tariff. On the latter question, Mr. Parrish took a stand for tariff for revenue only, with the tax burden impartially distributed, and not so arranged as to aid New England manufacturers at the expense of the farmers and producers of the country as a whole.

Points in Platform.

The "fourteen points" of Mr. Parrish's platform are as follows:

1. Constructive co-operation with Europe in stabilizing exchange values and in creating essential to restoration of prosperity.
2. Collective bargaining, co-operative marketing and criminal prosecution of profiteers.
3. Establishment of adequate intermediate credits for financing farmers and stockmen.
4. Rigid economy in governmental expenditures, elimination of unnecessary federal bureaus, and curtailment of war budgets.
5. Preservation of state's rights and restoration to state railroad commissions control over intrastate rates.
6. Immediate reduction in railroad freight and passenger rates necessary to restoration of commerce and industry.
7. Judicious expenditures of federal funds for deepening rivers and harbors where feasible.
8. Defends right of both capital and labor to collective bargaining so long as it does not jeopardise public welfare.
9. Co-operation between state and federal governments in construction of national highways and preservation of health.
10. Irrigation and drainage vital to Texas and preservation of American water rights in Rio Grande Valley endorsed.
11. Stringent immigration laws to prevent admission of radical aliens.
12. Generous care for disabled soldiers and for the widows and orphans of those who gave their lives as well as adjusted compensation to ex-service men.
13. A democratic tariff for revenue only, levying the burdens impartially upon the products of all sections and industries.
14. Recognition of Mexico under satisfactory safe-guards for the protection of American lives and property.

Mr. Parrish took the view that, whether this country relishes such a situation or not, its affairs have become closely inter-meshed with those of Europe, and that the real prosperity of this country is dependent in very great measure upon the prosperity of other nations. Constructive co-operation among nations, he declared, is necessary to relieve financial depression, and he urged, as a first step, the removal of all barriers to foreign trade so that the products of American farms and factories may be offered with out prejudicial restrictions in the open markets of the world.

As far as is consistent without jeopardizing the interests of the general public, Mr. Parrish said, collective bargaining and co-operative marketing should be furthered and aided. Enactment of additional legislation, if necessary, to prevent collection of excessive profits on the necessities of life, he urged, in connection with a plea for rigid enforcement of laws against profiteering.

Farm Finance Measures.

Mr. Parrish expressed the belief that existing measures for financing farmers and stockmen are inadequate, and that the present service of this nature, rendered in a temporary way by the war finance corporation, should be superceded by a system of intermediate credits, running one to three years, and he pledged his earnest efforts to obtain the legislation needed.

Abolition of every unnecessary bureau in Washington and elimination of all war budget items possible, Mr. Parrish said, must be made if real economy is to be practiced by the government. Promises of economy are empty, he declared, unless they lead to a reduction of taxes for the people. By agreeing to arbitration of all international disputes, Mr. Parrish said, the United States can eliminate the necessity for much of the expenditure for naval and military armament. In this connection Mr. Parrish reiterated his opposition to any system of compulsory military training in peace time.

In declaring for the withdrawal of the national government from affairs that concern states alone, Mr. Parrish described as insidious the attempt of Washington officials to encroach upon the powers reserved to the states. He declared himself as favoring the restoration to state railroad commissions the power to make and alter intrastate rates. Mr. Parrish took a stand against government ownership of the railroads, but urged that regulation of a nature that will result in an equitable readjustment of rates is necessary.

Other Measures.

Mr. Parrish pledged his support to measures such as the maternity bill, the anti-child labor bill, and the measure providing equal pay for men and women performing the same service in various branches of the government. He promised his support also to measures continuing the federal aid for permanent highways.

Restriction of immigration by still more stringent measures than exist at present, recognition of Mexico as soon as necessary guarantees are forthcoming, and particularly a guarantee protecting irrigation water rights on the Rio Grande, were also favored by Mr. Parrish.

Mr. Parrish declared for the adjusted compensation measure for veterans of the World's War and for a more energetic policy in caring for those sick and disabled as a result of war service.

Results of the Work.

Mr. Parrish's address dealt most exhaustively with the cost and results of the war and the causes for overproduction in the United States. He reviewed the activities of the war finance corporation and its emergency relief for farmers as well as the volume of exports and imports during war peak price years and the period of depression which followed. He held inequitable exchange values largely responsible for the slump in exports, and scathingly denounced the American valuation plan enacted by the Republican congress. He declared that profiteering must be stopped, that there is too much margin in prices between the producers and consumers, and that the enforcement of the criminal laws of the land will eliminate much of this profiteering from which the farmers suffer and the adoption of a well considered co-operative marketing system will eliminate most of the other injustices and will enable the producer to get more for his product. He advised intermediate credits as a substantial relief measure, saying:

"The financial system of this country is lacking in what might be termed intermediate credits. The federal reserve system was passed for the purpose of decentralizing the money system of the country and providing facilities for financing the ordinary commercial transactions based on loan periods of thirty, sixty and ninety days. These are the short time credits which are utilized by manufactures and merchants. The federal farm loan act makes provision for long time credits under which a farmer can acquire his own farm on easy payments covering a period of years. But nothing has been done to provide intermediate credits running for one, two and three years, and this is most vital to the farmers and stockmen. If a stockman can be given a credit at fair rate for a period of three years, the natural increase of his herd will make the loan better all the time and yet he will not be forced to sacrifice his stock on a glutted market. If the farmer could borrow money for one, two and three years, he would have time to mature his crops and market them when ready and not before, and I strongly urge the creation of a system of intermediate credits, the details of which will be submitted in appropriate legislation.

Economy His Watchword.

Mr. Parrish's views on the necessity on economy and expenditures are well known to the readers of The Record-News and his remarks were along the well defined lines of interviews or extracts from his speeches which have been given publicity from time to time in The Record-News.

He welcomed prohibition and woman suffrage as settled issues, a part of the constitutional and statutory laws of the land; he holds that labor is not a comodity and has the right to organize for self-protection and self-advancement, and that the employer and employee in private industrial life should be willing at all time to submit to fair and just terms in settlement of dispute. In addition to this he said that woman should receive equal pay with man in all branches of the federal service and should have full representation on all commissions dealing with the work and welfare of female employes. He bluntly announced his devotion to state rights, the reserving unto the states of all rights and powers not inconsistent with the essential needs of the national government and not specifically delegated to it by the framers of our constitution.

Speaking of the rails he announced his opposition to government control and ownership of railways but declared that railroad rates must be speedily readjusted and reduced to the end that freight may be moved and commerced restored to its normal efficiency.

Good roads he said are most vital to the prosperity of the country and he favors the most liberal appropriation in co-operation with the state for the construction and maintenance of good roads and national highways.

He touched upon the Mexican issue lightly and said that he favored the recognition of the Mexican government just as soon as satisfactory guarantees are made that American life and property will be given full protection and that the existing government is able to maintain law and order and meet its national obligation.

Favors Tariff for Revenue Only.

After declaring it unthinkable that a Democrat would subscribe to the Republican doctrine of tariff for protection and dismissing unqualified free trade as possible, the speaker declared fealty to the doctrine of a tariff for revenue only saying:

"Tariff even for revenue gives a incidental protection and I shall insist that the producers of raw materials be given the benefit of their proportionate share of such a tariff."

He insisted that the theory of free raw materials now subscribed to by some Democrats is of comparative recent origin and quoted from the message of James K. Polk, the writings of Abram S. Hewitt, the speeches of W. C. P. Breckenridge and other illustrous chieftians dead and gone of the democracy to sustain his contention. More than this he read a plank from the platform adopted by the Democrats of Texas at Austin on June 24, 1896, to show that in bygone years Democrats had ever been opposed to the doctrine of free raw materials. This is the plank:

"We believe that the present tariff law, which lets into the country raw material free of duty and levies heavy duties on manufactured products, thus subjecting our agricultural and pastoral classes to competition with the world, while it enables the rich manufacturers by means of combinations and trusts to extort their own prices for their own goods from the people, violates the federal constitution as well as the fundamental principles of the Democratic party."

Irrigation and reclamation has no more loyal friend than Mr. Parrish and the picture he painted of the Texas of the future under the magical flow of a conserved flood of water was as alluring as it was convincing. He said he believed in the most stringent irrigation laws and that until congress shall have passed such laws he believed that immigration should be restricted to the admission of desirable members of divided families, some of whom are now residents of this country. He would hold this republic true to the American thought and American ideas.

Speaking of a Bonus.

After paying a glowing tribute to the former service men who are participants in the world war he announced his attitude as follows:

"As an act of justice and not as a gratuity I favor giving to the ex-selvice men a suitable bonus or adjusted compensation that will in a measure repay them for the financial loss they suffered while in the service over and above those who remained at home, and in this connection I wish here and now to warn the munition manufacturers of this nation who have consistently opposed every peace program that has ever been launched that if war should occur again and the young men of America are called to the defense of this country that I, as your United States senator, will insist that the same strong arm of the government which calls into service the manhood of the nation will likewise conscript the capital of this country so that the sacrifices of all will be upon a common level and that none will make a profit while others are sacrificing even life itself. I can see no reason why the young men shall be called to make the supreme sacrifice while some of those who remain at home accumulate great fortunes and this policy rigidly enforced will constitute America's greatest safeguard against future wars.

Militarism has an unrelenting foeman in "this man from west Texas" who is a candidate for United States senator. In concluding his address he said:

"When American young men went into the recent world war they were told that they were fighting to put an end to all wars. I regard those promises as sacred and favored the League of Nations as the best safeguard against future wars yet devised, and if elected United States senator, I will continue to fight for the League of Nations or some association of nations that will settle international disputes through the channels of arbitration to the end that so far as is humanly possible future wars may be avoided.

"We face the future with courage and confidence. The problems of the hour are most difficult and our people are suffering to a degree far beyond that known in recent years but the clouds of depression are now breaking on our national horizon and the sunshine of prosperity is beginning to appear once more, and the American people, now more hopeful than ever before, are marching forward to that higher life, that life of purer thinking and nobler living."

MARY PICKFORD SUCCESSFUL AS TEAR PRODUCER

Directors Were Unable to Make Little Florence Cry for Sad Scene in "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

"Our Mary" However Told the Child a Sob Story So Sad That She Had to Cry a Little Herself.

Tears sometimes symbolize sadness, sometimes gladness. To little Florence Egan they symbolized gladness, even though they were shed in a moment of sadness. This strange statement, paradoxical as it is, will probably bear explaining.

It was Mary Pickford who made Florence Egan cry. And it was the first time in her life that "America's Sweetheart" ever made a child shed tears. She felt so badly about it, did little Mary, that she, too, cried.

The tears however, were quite necessary—that is, the little girl's tears. Mary's were not. A sad scene was being made for "Little Lord Fauntleroy," to be shown at the Empress theater Monday and Tuesday. Florence Egan, playing the part of a little, oppressed tenant on the conscienceless old Earl of Dorincourt's estate, just simply had to cry. Now it isn't always easy for a child actress to cry. For Florence it was exceedingly difficult. Everybody tried to make her cry—especially Jack Pickford and Alfred E. Green, who were directing the picture. Even Charles Rosher, the cameraman, took a hand. But it was no use.

Then in stepped Little Mary, just like the heroine of a movie play at the psycological moment, and told Florence Egan a story. It was about a little girl who had lost her daddy; about the hardships and suffering this caused. She told this story in a low tense voice, vibrant with emotion and deep with appeal. And Florence Egan cried, not for one scene but for three.

The story Mary Pickford told was of her own early life. And it carried a double-headed heartache because Florence Egan's daddy, too, had died.

But sadness quickly gave way to gladness, for Miss Pickford gave the child a beautiful hand-embroideried dress with real lace on it—all because she did the scene so well. And the following Sunday, Florence Egan wore it to mass.

'WHOLE DERNED TOWN ACTED IN ALICE'S PITCHER'

Alice Calhoun Ably Supported by Cast of Villagers and School Children in New Play.

It was gala week in Saugerties, a town up the Hudson river in New York state when Alice Calhoun and her company arrived to make scenes for "Peggy Puts It Over," the Vitagraph production which will be shown at the Gem theater on Monday. Although this town has been the scene of several pictures, the coming of a film company is always hailed with great delight.

The natives feel that they are film players, for they often appear in scenes of popular productions. Never, however, has a film furnished such ample opportunities for the inhabitants of the town to act as did "Peggy Puts It Over." Atmosphere was what Director G. V. Seyffertitz was after and atmosphere was what he got. Two well-known figures about the town, Mike and Jerry Genthner, known because of their ox-cart, were used in a scene driving the yoke of oxen through the main streets.

The camera was set up before the village school and as the session was over, the children were caught romping out of play. They spied the star in her car and without instructions from the director hopped upon it and were driven home. They became so attached to the young actress that they insisted she play Indian and games with them. She, in return treated them all to candy and sodas and gave them a long automobile ride.

Several types of rural dwellers were used in scenes for the production which deals with the building boom that comes to a small town. Peggy engineers the scheme and puts it over in the face of much opposition from conservative settlers. A charming love story is interwoven in the production.

SCOTCH TOWN WAS BUILT BY FILM MAKERS

Betty Compson Stars in "The Little Minister" for Which a Little Bit o' Scotland Is Setting.

It was necessary to construct an entire Scotch village of "Thurms," for the filming of "The Little Minister," a Paramount picture produced by Penrhyn Stanlaws, with Betty Compson as the star in the role of "Lady Babbie," which will be the attraction at the Olympic theater Monday.

This is the second time Paramount has constructed this picturesque bit of Scotland on American soil. In 1920, "Thrums" was erected near Forest Hills, L. I., for the picture version of "Sentimental Tommy." Now Kirriemuir, for that is the modern name of the little Scotch town, rests quietly in the shadows of the California hills.

Experts on Scottish architecture and landscape, who saw "Sentimental Tommy," were unable to discern any difference between the "Thrums" they saw on the screen and the Kirriemuir of their own remembrance. Robert M. Haas, Paramount art director, who built the village for "Sentimental Tommy" also supervised the construction of the setting for "The Little Minister."

In detail of treatment this newest Thrums is far superior to the former village which was constructed in the East. Nannie's home, the manse, the town hall, and the auld licht kirk fairly breathe the bonnie oir of Scotland. A different section of the village was constructed for "The Little Minister" than that shown in "Sentimental Tommy." In the "Tommy and Grizel" story the outlying districts of the town were shown, but in "The Little Minister" the action is confined mostly to the center of the village, showing the town hall and the public square. Lovers of Barrie's story will get the thrill of their lives when they see the reproduction of this quaint village on the screen.

Colored lights, to act upon the emotions during the sermon, are being used in a New York church.

Sometimes a married man dislikes to visit people who try to make him feel at home.

OLYMPIC PLAY IS UNUSUALLY TRUE TO LIFE

Bath Room de Luxe Lends Beauty to Cecil B. De Mille's Paramount Picture "Saturday Night."

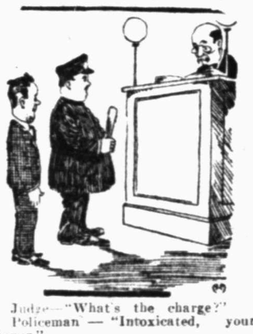

Soap-and-Water Atmosphere, Characteristic of the Title Is Introduced; It's a "Clean" Picture.

Although it was announced that "Saturday Night" Cecil B. De Mille's latest Paramount picture, was not a bathing beach picture and would not contain a bathroom scene despite the soap-and-water atmosphere of the title, the temptation to film such a setting evidently proved too strong for the producer. "Saturday Night" which will be shown at the Olympic theater beginning next Thursday for three days, boasts of a bathroom that surpasses those in "Male and Female" and "Why Change Your Wife" in both beauty and opulence.

One of the unique features of this bathroom is an inverted shower bath. It consists of a pedestal standing in a sunken bowl. Around the edge of the pedestal are inlets through which the water is sprayed upward over the bather. The height of this spray can be regulated so that it will not mar milady's coiffure. Another interesting departure is a built-in, triple-mirror dressing table of unusual design and ultra-complete equipment.

This set is only one of many designed by Mr. Iribe for this picturization of Jeanie Maspherson's story in which Leatrice Joy, Edith Roberts, Conrad Nagel, Theodore Roberts, Sylvia Ashton, Julia Faye, Edythe Chapman, James Neill, John Davidson and other players appear.

WRIGLEY, WHO BUILT GREAT BUSINESS ON ADVERTISING SEES WAY TO PROSPERITY

William Wrigley, Jr., multi-millionaire, chewing gum manufacturer, owner of Catalina Island and proprietor of the Chicago Cubs, of the National League, and Los Angeles Angels of the Pacific Coast League, was asked two questions by the International News Service. These were:

1. Are better times in sight for the United States?
2. How can the average individual help in restoring prosperity?

Mr. Wrigley, who pays experts in every part of the country to keep him reliably informed on the business situation, sounded an optimistic note in his reply which follows herewith. "The good old American dollar is coming back," he says. Here is his statement:

By WILLIAM WRIGLEY, JR.
(By International News Service)

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—My large investments necessarily compel me to keep close tab on the country's economic situation and I am glad to say I am informed business is getting better in the East and that this condition is spreading to the Middle West by degrees.

From all that I can learn the good old American dollar is coming back into its own. People from one end of the nation to the other are getting around the idea that the only basis for real prosperity is an honest day's work for a fair wage.

The United States, considered as a whole, has been on a "business drunk" for the last five years. Prices, up to recently were out of all sense and proportion for the value received. Some fellows fell into a habit of charging three times what a thing was worth and when some poor devil paid what they asked wanted to lick themselves because they didn't charge more.

The high value of our dollar has kept the foreign trade of the United States from expanding. However, I am selling more chewing gum in Europe as each month goes by and I believe other American products will show a like gain in foreign favor.

Yes, I believe American prosperity will be back before long. No one can say just how long. But it is a cinch the richest, most progressive and most intelligent people on the face of the earth are not going to let a temporary slump in business hold them down. We have the men, the money and the material. So it is only a question of setting things humming again.

The year 1921 was regarded as a pretty bad period for lots of concerns in the East and Middle West. For me it was the best year in the thirty-one years I have been established in the chewing gum manufacturing industry. One of the biggest factors for my excellent showing is advertising.

I am spending $11,000 a day this year to push my chewing gum. I am also spending what would have been a fine ransom for a King in the good old days to popularize Catalina Island.

The judicious use of printers' ink is the greatest selling force in the world. If you do business on a world-wide basis, or even in the locality encompassed within a few blocks, you have got to keep the people interested or you won't sell them your goods.

I have tried them all and I know whereof I speak, that the only effective way to appeal to hundreds of millions, or just a few hundred people, is in advertising space.

The International News Service asks me how I believe the average individual can help in restoring prosperity.

To my way of thinking the greatest cure for hard times is to stop talking, get a job, or if you are an employer hire more men, be a doer, not a dreamer, and try to keep your money circulating where it will most effectively improve the public good.

I was asked by an editor a few days ago if I thought there was a danger of bolshevism ever spreading to America.

"Not in a thousand years," I replied. "The American people use their brains for thinking. Besides there are too many of them who own their homes, who know what firesides mean, and who take pride in seeing their kiddies growing up."

SHE WASN'T A MAID.

She—And Harold! you have never loved any other girl but me!"
He—No, my love!
She—Yet somebody told me that you have been engaged once before!"
He—Yes, but that was to a widow.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

If Ernest Harvier of the New York Times has the correct dope or accurate figures, New York is going to lose one of the quill feathers from its crown of distinctions—the city having more Irish inhabitants than Dublin, more Italian inhabitants than Rome, more Jewish inhabitants than Jerusalem, more German inhabitants than Munich, and more Swedish inhabitants than Stockholm, and more Welsh inhabitants than Cardiff. The reason for this, he says, is the same as the reason for a thousand other things—economic, psychological and political—the European war. The war, no part of which was waged upon American soil, put a stop, practically, to emigration between the years 1914 and 1919 from the five countries which had contributed most to the increase in the foreign-born population of the city—Italy, Russia, Germany, Hungary and Ireland. To use an expression familiar among engineers, "the inflow was dammed" during these five years, we are told. The population of New York City (returned by the Federal census of a year ago as 5,620,048) increases at the rate of about 100,000 a year. That is, every ten years there are a million more inhabitants in New York than there were ten years before. Thus the Board of Health estimates the population of the city as likely to be 6,103,375 in 1925. Five years later (1930) by the same Board of Health computation, it will be 6,650,000—just one million more than by the Federal census of last year. The increase in the population of New York, as of other large American cities, is from two causes—immigration and the excess of births over deaths. Here immigration is always an important factor, as the city is the chief gateway for newcomers, and a very large proportion of them remain here. Of one million immigrants landing in the U. S. in a full or flush year of immigration, about 25 per cent, or 250,000, remained in New York State and nearly 150,000 of these, on the average, remained in New York City, giving it its distinctive character of a "foreign city" in many localities. During the European war the nations which were neutral continued, of course, to send immigrants, but they were all nations which have never added much to the city's population—Spain, Holland, Norway, Switzerland, Denmark, and Sweden. The demand for labor in these nations, stimulated by the war, made wages high and furnished little reason for their residents to seek homes in what some European orators called "the free republic of the West." The practical suspension of foreign emigration for the five years between 1914 and 1920 was reflected in the Federal census returns as follows: Foreign-born residents, N. Y. City: 1910, 44 per cent of the population 1920, 35 per cent of the population Nineteen hundred and ten, four years before the beginning of the European War, the population of New York City was 56 per cent native-born and 44 per cent foreign-born; in 1920, two years after the armistice, the population of the city was 65 per cent native-born and 35 per cent foreign-born.

That more than 98 per cent of all manufacturing establishments in the United States employed 100 wage-earners or fewer in the great industrial boom year of 1919 is one of the interesting and significant facts shown by a graphic development, in chart form, prepared by the National Industrial Conference Board from data of the United States census of manufacturers. An examination of the chart shows that while the overwhelming majority of manufacturing establishments in the United States are thus, what would be called today small shops, a large majority of wage-earners are to be found in establishments employing more than 100 workers. The total number of establishments covered by the United States census of manufacturers of 1919 was 290,105. Of this number 141,859 employed from one to five workers, making a total of 312,404 workers in the entire group. Of the large establishments employing more than 1,000 workers there were only 1,019, according to the census figures, but this relatively small number employed a total of 2,390,019 of the 9,096,372 workers. Nearly twice that number of workers, however, or 4,037,084, worked in establishments employing from 101 to 1,000 workers. The classification 51 to 100 workers included a total of 895,235 wage-earners. As many of these would be in establishments employing 100 or nearly 100 wage-earners, a good proportion of this 895,235 may be added to the 4,037,084 who worked in the 101 to 1,000 employes classification, thus showing that about one-half of all industrial wage-earners in the United States work in what may be termed medium-sized factories.

Production of vegetable oils in the United States greatly exceeds the output of lard. The census report for the last three months of 1921 shows production of vegetable oil, 710,467,576 pounds; fish oils, 22,952,224 pounds; animal fats, 465,023,527 pounds; grease, 85,793,660 pounds, a total of $1,284,236,987 pounds. Of the several kinds of oils and fats covered by the inquiry the greatest production, 491,979,292 pounds, appears for cottonseed oil. Next in order edible and neutral lard with 362,767,474 pounds, linseed oil with 137,527,656 pounds, tallow with 100,436,487 and cocoanut oil with 35,588,233 pounds. The report shows stocks on hand December 31 of 357 million pounds of cottonseed oil, 105 million pounds of cocoanut or copra oil, 123 million pounds of linseed oil; lard, 50 million pounds; tallow, 106 million pounds.

According to Dr. Edward A. Ross, by the year A. D. 2000 the population of the United States will number about 223,000,000. Extremists are painting vivid pictures of our country, pointing out that the condition of China, Japan and India will be rivalled here. They predict a starving country with too many inhabitants and too little space in which to house them. In their minds are scenes of war, famine and misery as a result. On the other hand, John S. Summer, secretary of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, says: "Over-population is not a menace to the peace of the world, because there is no over-population. It is not the physical fact of population but the mental and spiritual condition of people which determines the question as a menace to continued peace."

Shreveport newspapers tell of a remarkable field of oil and gas opened in Bassier Parish, eighteen miles northeast of the city. Nine wells, ranging in depth from three hundred to four hundred feet, are said to be producing twenty-five barrels or more a day, and two of them are said to be good for five thousand barrels daily. The wells have been capped, awaiting storage or transportation for the oil. The latest well is said to be producing 2 million cubic feet of gas daily at 374 feet. The Standard Oil company, the Humble Oil company and several local companies are in the field.

One of the results of the President's conference on unemployment is the vast amount of public works, chiefly state and municipal, which have already been started during the winter months. Tabulations show that 450 million is now available in the United States for "local improvements. Many public works officials have notified the conference that they are awarding contracts only on condition that the work be prosecuted throughout the winter whenever weather conditions permit. Special preparations are also being made to carry on types of work not usually done in winter.

According to a Chicago correspondent rail executives answer the charges of rail unions that reduction in wages have not been translated into lower rates and improvements by announcing that, besides the rate reductions already made public by the interstate commerce commission orders for new equipment and extensions of mileage in excess of 200 million dollars already have been placed in 1922. This sum, it is stated, is not an official compilation of recent orders. The total of appropriations for 1922 for equipment and construction eventually may double 200 million dollars. One of the biggest orders for new cars, improvements and general equipment announced thus far was made public today by the Santa Fe, which will spend $43,150,000 for this purpose during the year. The major part of this sum will be expended, it is stated, for double tracking and short line extensions. The Union Pacific has announced the purchase of 4,500 freight cars and the general expenditure of 10 million dollars for improvements. The Illinois Central has ordered two thousand gondola cars and intends to spend $3,214,000 for improvements. The Central of Georgia has placed orders for five hundred freight cars. The Chicago & Northwestern has placed 15 million dollars worth of orders, including fifty passenger coaches and two thousand freight cars. The Burlington has ordered 2,300 freight cars and 127 new passenger coaches. The Great Northern is to spend $5,400,000 for improvements. These are a few of the orders already placed. Many other railroads are about to announce big equipment purchases. These orders will do much to put life into the steel business and general industry, railroad men declare, besides giving employment to thousands of men.

Risen from the ranks of the common people to grace the throne of St. Peter as the 261st wearer of the golden tiera, Cardinal Achille Ratti, archbishop of Milan, stands out in striking contrast to his predecessor, Pope Benedict XV, a nobleman. A high dignitary of the Roman Catholic hierarchy attached to the papal legation at Washington recounted to a correspondent the events of Cardinal Ratti's life. Because of the delicate nature of ecclesiastical relations, the monsignor who told the story of the life of the new pontiff refuses to be quoted directly. It may be said, however he is acquainted personally with the new pope, having labored with him for years in the Vatican library. Achille, Cardinal Ratti, was born in Desio, a Lombardy suburb of Milan, March 31, 1857. At a parish in Desio, the young priest won distinction for his piety and love of athletics. His bourgeoise parents never had been rich, but were saved the ignominy of actual poverty. The modest priest attracted the attention of a Milanese prelate, who was astounded at the mental agility and writing ability of the then Father Ratti. The young man was brought to Milan and educated on a higher plane in things ecclesiastical. While still a priest, he became the author of several notable works on ancient literature. His work on library classics won him the appointment of prefect of the Ambrosial library in Milan. Pope Pius X ferreted the Milan priest from a maze of master librarians and appointed him prefect of the Vatican library, one of the largest in the world. The new prefect begged the Roman pontiff at the time of his appointment to permit him to spend alternate months at the library so he might spend the intervening months with his aged mother. The pope granted the request. He was heard later to remark Cardinal Ratti did more remarkable work in alternate months than his predecessors had done in continuous service. The librarian afterward became known throughout Europe as one of the continent's most famous mountain climbers.

Cash bonuses totaling $191,339,200 are being paid to veterans of the World's War in thirteen States and $156,000,000 more in "adjusted compensation" will be disbursed under legislation already passed, while many more millions are being spent in giving other aid to ex-service men. A nation-wide survey by the Bank of America shows that every State in the Union, excepting Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi, has passed legislation giving or authorizing aid for war veterans, either in the form of cash bonuses, monetary aid or relief, exemptions or other benefits. New York is the only State forced to abandon bonuses because of an adverse court decision. Fifteen States have provided for relief for needy ex-service men and three States have appropriated funds out of which loans may be made to veterans. Fourteen States have definite provisions for helping veterans secure technical education, and veterans, welfare commissions have been instituted in eight States. Help in buying farms is given in five States, and assistance in settling on farms is offered in eleven others. Other States make specific provisions for veterans seeking employment, grant exemptions from taxation, and most States have provided for admission of veterans to State hospitals and State soldiers' homes. Special hospitals for insane and tubercular veterans have also been established in some States. The cash bonuses range from $10 for every month of service in Massachusetts, Missouri, New Jersey, Ohio, Vermont and Wisconsin, up to $25 a month in North Dakota. Several of the States specify maximum limits to adjusted compensation for each veteran, varying from $100 in New Jersey, to $500 in Oregon, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island have "adjusted" veterans' compensation to the extent of $100 outright in cash. Other States in which cash bonuses are being paid are Michigan, Minnesota, South Dakota and Washington. Many States have practically completed the work of disbursing the bonuses, while the time limit for application in Maine expired with the end of 1921. Referendum elections are to be held in several States to vote on cash bonus propositions. Next November Illinois will pass on the proposal of a $55,000,000 bond issue to pay its veterans $15 for each month of service up to $300; Kansas will vote on a $25,000,000 issue to provide $1 a day for veterans' war service, and Montana will decide on $4,500,000 to pay its veterans $10 for each month of service, $200 maximum. In November, 1923, Iowa's voters will consider the issuance of $22,000,000 in bonds to pay its veterans 50 cents a day of service up to $350. In November, 1924, if the Legislature passes again a bill on the subject, Pennsylvania will vote on a $35,000,000 bond issue to pay its veterans at the rate of $10 a month of service up to $200 maximum. Legislation on this subject is reported as pending in California ($18,000,000 bond issue), Colorado, Kentucky ($10,000,000), Florida and New York. In Delaware, Indiana, Maryland, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas and Utah, legislation on bonuses has been brought in but has so far failed of passage. The usual way of paying for bonuses or other aid, the chart of the Bank of America shows, is by bond issues. Twenty States have issued or will issue bonds and notes and certificates to provide funds for their veterans' aid. Michigan leads with a $30,000,000 bond issue, although New York would have come first if the validity of its $45,000,000 bond issue had been upheld by the courts.

Idle cars on January 23 totaled 755,353, a reduction of 37,945 as compared with the total on January 15, it is stated in a report issued yesterday by the Car Service Division of the American Railway association. Of the total, 396,192 were surplus freight cars—that is, cars in good repair and immediately available for service if traffic demands warranted. This was a reduction of 43,790 cars as compared with the number of such cars at the middle of the month. Surplus box cars totaled 159,109, or a reduction within approximately a week of 31,071, while surplus coal cars amounted to 183,999, or a reduction within the same period of 11,285. Coke cars showed a reduction of 283, which brought the total to 4,542, while stock cars totaled 20,679, or 949 less than on January 15. Tabulations showed 319,512 freight cars in need of repairs on January 15, or 13.9 per cent of the cars on line. On January 1 there were 313,190, or 13.7 per cent. Allowing 7 per cent of the cars on line as being normally in need of repairs would leave 159,161 as representing the number of bad-order cars which were idle because of business conditions on January 15.

Folks Back Home

Sketches by J. H. STRIEBEL

By Robert Quillen

UNCLE GUS

A bright-cheeked little boy stood at the counter to have his pockets filled with candy, and when he had gone out Uncle Gus returned to his seat by the stove. He chuckled as he refilled his ancient corn-cob pipe. "That was one o' my boy John's chaps," he explained. "I was over to John's last night, an' this little feller sassed me about somethin'. John cussed him out fo' it, and asked him didn't he have no respect fo' age. It kind o' tickled me. What is the' respectable about age, anyway? Most anybody can git old. Might as well teach the little fellers to take off the' hats when they pass a old-model Ford. When I was younger, I used to think I'd be wise when I got old. It was old folks taught me that. But it ain't so. I had mo' sense when I was fo'ty than I got now. Old age robs a man o' stren'th ambition an' gets him sot in his ways so's he objects to new-fangled things like aeroplanes an' short skirts, an' ain't willin' to take chances on anything; but that ain't wisdom. That's jest the result o' brains dryin' up. I'd like to have folks respect me, same as ever' body would; but if I can't earn tha' respect, I don't want 'em givin' it to me fo' sweet charity's sake on account o' my hair bein' white."

WILLIE WILLIS

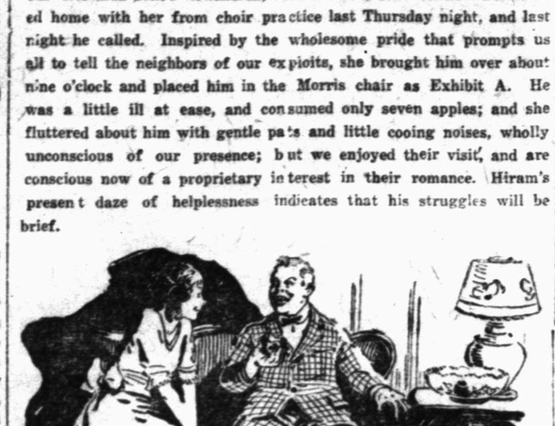

The teacher asked little Willie Willis Monday if his eyes hurt, and, being answered in the negative, pressed him for an explanation of his peculiar expression until he confessed that he was practicing the haughty stare

Dead Eye Dick, employed when facing the Red Skins.

THE GIRL ACROSS THE STREET

The girl across the street has a beau, one Hiram Fetchit, son of our esteemed fellow townsman, Abe Fetchit, the butcher. He walked home with her from choir practice last Thursday night, and last night he called. Inspired by the wholesome pride that prompts us all to tell the neighbors of our exploits, she brought him over about nine o'clock and placed him in the Morris chair as Exhibit A. He was a little ill at ease, and consumed only seven apples; and she fluttered about him with gentle pats and little cooing noises, wholly unconscious of our presence; but we enjoyed their visit, and are conscious now of a proprietary interest in their romance. Hiram's present daze of helplessness indicates that his struggles will be brief.

SERVANTS

Nearly two thousand years ago a Wise Man said: "He that would be greatest among you, let him be your servant." Of all His sayings, this one has been least understood.

It is true that those whose names are written large on the pages of history were servants of mankind; but the truth He spoke applies as well to the fortunes of nations, for servitude paves the way for the conqueror.

Those who ruled Athens in the day of her greatness were a fair-haired people. They are gone, and the dark-haired slaves they brought from other lands and taught to do their work are masters in their stead.

In any land wherein there is an upper class and a lower class, the upper is doomed to inevitable decay and destruction. The class that enjoys an easy prosperity and does no work lives only in the present. It does not grow. Its sole ambition is to cling fast to the advantages it enjoys. The lower class, having far to climb if it would escape hardship, struggles endlessly. It saves a few coins, buys a machine, a piece of land or a stock of goods, and abates nothing of its industry even while acquiring a new dignity. In the course of years it begins to feed upon the fortunes of the idle; it bargains with them, beats them at their own game, and at last brushes them aside. Those who grow fat and soft and are content cannot long stand before those who are hard and eager to get ahead.

Caste cannot be permanent where there is opportunity to grow. For those who sit among cushions at a great height are never aware of the danger their sloth has invited until a hard-visaged peasant stands at their side and invites them to be gone. They are easy prey.

If winter comes, spring cannot be far away. So when prosperity comes, softness inevitably follows, and after softness comes helplessness that invites destruction.

Only those who continue to sweat may continue to live.

Friend, do you remember a Hiram Fetchit, the butcher's son, in the town where you were raised?

And an Aunt Het and an Uncle Gus?

Renew friendships with these good people through Robert Quillen's "Folks Back Home.' You'll find all of them here.

THE TELEPHONE

The telephone is an instrument of torture connected by wire with a girl who chews gum in a place called Central. There are two kinds of telephones: those you do not wish to use, and those that are out of order. When a telephone is out of order, it is as helpless as a one-legged man at a kicking match. Some people, however, construe its impotence as stubbornness, and resort to violence in an effort to conquer its rebellious spirit. They jiggle the receiver hook frantically, hit the transmitter on the ear with a paper weight, and at length, in desperation, massage the instrument with a swivel chair. Nothing avails, however, except fasting and prayer.

In the old days, the telephone user crawled under his desk and cranked a coffee-mill arrangement to attract Central's attention. Now he merely removes the receiver and barks. Barking at Central is a sport greatly enjoyed by men who wear 13½ collars.

There is a beautiful story about a man who barked at Central. He was in Kansas City and wished to talk to a man in St. Louis. Central told him the charge would be eighty cents. "What!" barked the man, "Why, say; in Chicago I could telephone to hell for a quarter." And Central said: "I know; but that is inside the city limits."

Public phones are kept in little fixeless cookers called booths. The patron enters, drops a coin in the little hole, and begins to understand why the British never forgot the Black Hole of Calcutta.

Telephones are very useful to people who wish to know what time it is and where the fire is, and also to people who wish to address uncomplimentary remarks to a hard-boiled egg; but they discourage leg work and thus increase the national expenditure for anti-fat nostrums and digestion tablets.

GOLD AGAIN

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

Attention has often been called to the fact that gold is not really a solid basis for money.

Now that one-third of the gold is held in the United States and the rest of the world is doing business mostly on paper and everything is at sixes and sevens, this fact is being emphasized.

Anyone can see that the discovery of an enormous deposit of gold, say a mountain or mine of it, or the sudden failure of the earth to produce gold, would utterly demoralize the world's business.

Lord Clifford, of Chudleigh, pointed out that it has long been known that to obtain gold from mercury all that is necessary is to expel one Beta particle from one atom of mercury, which will convert into thallium, then if you expel one alpha particle, the thallium will be turned into gold. Also if you wish to get gold from lead, expel from the atom of lead one Alpha particle which will turn it into mercury, when you can proceed in the same manner to make gold.

Of course, this is not done, for the simple reason that to do it costs more than the value of the gold.

Besides, you can only make these transitions when you get nature in a good humor and inclined to assist you.

Gold is not a necessity for exchange anyway. It is only so because the different countries have agreed to it. Now that a good part of the gold is in America it has become, in a measure, valueless except within the limits of one community.

And if all the other nations would agree upon some other medium of exchange they could get along quite as well.

The only object of currency, says Lord Clifford, is to get a universal rate of exchange of the time and value of labor exerted in one country as compared with the time value of labor of the same sort exerted in another.

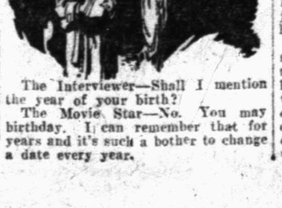

Professor Irving Fisher has repeatedly urged the selection of some other unit than gold as the measure of value. Previous to the war such a suggestion received little attention, but now that the enormous destruction of the great conflict has knocked the relations between the gold supply and the business of the world into a cocked hat, financiers and economists everywhere are becoming a little more open to reason.

You cannot base currency on nationalism without being continuously liable to playing smash with business, any more than you can base government on nationalism without being subject at any moment, to destructive wars.

Sooner or later the world will simply be compelled to get together politically.

It is more important to the average man to save his business than to go out and lick his neighbors.

Mass Suggestion

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

When they speak of "mass suggestion" psychologists commonly mean the influence exercised on the mind and behavior of individuals by groups of people—people, for example, with whom they come into contact as fellow members of political parties, social clubs, labor unions, business organizations, etc. But the term may properly be extended to include the influence exercised by groups of inanimate objects as well as living beings.

And there are some exceedingly practical reasons for emphasizing the possibilities of mass suggestion of this latter kind and making them widely known. For under present conditions numerous persons—especially dwellers in cities—are being constantly and needlessly exposed to inanimate mass suggestion hurtful to them.

The meaning of suggestion itself should perhaps be recalled—"the intrusion into the mind of ideas which, being involuntarily accepted, affect behavior." Now, ideas are intruded into the mind through the various sense organs—the ear, the eye, etc. And the likelihood of their affecting behavior is usually in proportion to the frequency with which they are presented to the mind.

This is why frequent association with groups of people who have special interests or special points of view is likely to develop a similar interest or point of view in the person associating with them. On the same principle one's thought and one's behavior are likely to be profoundly affected by the kind of surroundings—the groups of inanimate objects—amid which one spends most of his time.

Hence the importance of giving serious thought to such matters as the decorating and furnishing of one's home. Hence, too, outside the home, the influence of mass suggestion ought to be reckoned with in the case of that larger group of inanimate objects, the buildings and streets which constitute the city, the town, or the village in which the home is situated.

To this phase of mass suggestion it would seem that scarcely any thought is given in the majority of cases. It is true that there are many villages, some towns, and a few cities which, by their cleanliness, brightness, and beauty, predominantly radiate suggestions helpful to the minds of those living in them. But this can by no means be said to be the rule.

On the contrary, ugly and depressing ideas are inevitably intruded into the mind by the architectural deficiencies, the untidy streets, the unkept vacant lots, the grimy buildings, to be found in most places of collective human habitation.

Those who live in places thus constituted may—and in many individual instances conspicuously do—successfully resist the deadening and distorting influence of their mass suggestion. But because suggestion is of all forces the most potent in determining the ways of men, it must always remain true that citizens of mean cities tend as a rule to mean modes of thinking.

Here and there are signs that people are awakening to this truth.

Ordinances having the effect of improving the appearance of a city are here and there being more vigorously enforced. Landscape architects, city planners, and other workers in the field of civic aesthetics are finding their services in increasing demand.

But as yet the awakening is far from being as general as it ought to be—as it must be if the influence of inanimate mass suggestion is to be made distinctly contributory to the nation's good.

On Saturday evening the marriage of Mrs. Lillian Russell Hall and Clyde Saunders took place at the home of the bride on 4th street, Rev. T. J. Furnis of the First Baptist church officiating. Only the close friends of the couple were in attendance. The bride is the daughter of our townsman, T. A. Griffin, and the groom is a well known citizen. On Friday morning the little life of Helen Yovone Roush passed away at the Burkburnett Hospital following an attack of pneumonia. Deceased was an only child of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Roush of the Victor refinery a few miles south of the city. She was about one year of age and a child of unusual sweetness and promise. The many friends of the parents and other relatives in this city extend a heartfelt sympathy in the loss of this darling little girl, who was the center of affection in the families. The funeral services took place from the Christian Chapel, conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. W. McKinney. Interment followed at the Burkburnett Cemetery.

Among the interesting reports from the High School students, is that of a patent submitted by Arthur Urban, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Urban of this city, to Washington, D. C., He has received inquiry, this week, as to terms of sale, royalties etc., indicating the value of the tool, which is a plane for inlaid work in cabinet and similar work.

On Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock the home of Mrs. Harry Ten Brink was the scene of a happy gathering of neighbors and friends, a special honor to one of their number, Mrs. Ditter, who was the happy recipient of a "Good Luck Shower." Mrs. B. Doyle was also a hostess on this occasion and the two ladies, Mrs. Ten Brink and Mrs. Doyle, distinguished themselves as ideal and charming hostesses. On arrival the fourteen guests were asked to register in a dainty booklet, which was to become a treasured souvenir of the honoree. Following the registration, two smiling little postmen, Carl Ten Brink and Earl Doyle, entered with wheelbarrows full of dainty parcel-post packages, which they laid at the feet of the honoree, Mrs. Ditter, to the joyful surprise of that favored lady.

The house decorations were most fitting to the occasion, being the handiwork of Mrs. Johnson. Two clever little contests afforded much merriment for the young matrons, and the prize winners in the games were Mrs. Reed, who received a beautiful Madonna picture, and Mesdames Brady and Williams, each of whom were presented with a tiny silver saltspoon, that the hostess, Mrs. Ten Brink, had brought from Germany.

This unusually pleasant function was concluded with a dainty refreshment course of chicken salad, cake and cocoa.

The guests were Mesdames Taylor, Reed, Calhoen, Ed. Turnbow, Williams, Payne, Griffin, Brady, Jenson, Joungen Ditter, honor guest, and Miss Monday.

Among the recent social activities the "tackey party," given by Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Turnbow, was one of the most enjoyable. Fifty guests were in attendance, all in real honest-to-goodness "tackeys." Mrs. Johnson who impersonated "Maggie," of the Sunday funnies, won the prize. Two contests, the making of aprons by the men, and ties by the ladies, resulted in the apron prize falling to Earl Warren and the tie prize to Miss Lela Brady.

The refreshments were in keeping with the jolly occasion being a service of popcorn and "all-day suckers."

The Joy Class of the Methodist church held its social and business meeting Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ed Porterson with Mrs. E. W. Windham as joint hostess. Following the business session an informal social hour was enjoyed at the close of which dainty refreshments were served by the entertaining ladies.

The class members in attendance were Mesdames C. D. Montgomery, J. D. Ahern, Jeffries, Magee, William Nelson, Paul Weber, W. D. Utts, McCutcheon, Hall, L. E. Palmley, Mc-Kinley and J. D. Ellis. The visitors of the occasion were Mesdames Potter, Hensley, Fairbanks and M. L. Urban.

The next meeting of the Joy Class will be with Mrs. L. E. Palmley.

Mrs. A. G. Dunn, assisted by her daughter, Miss Orion Dunn, entertained Tuesday evening as a parting courtesy to their young neighbor Miss Mozelle Stokes, who is returning this week to her home in McLane after a stay of several weeks in this city. Games, music and a delicious refreshment course featured the evening amusement. Those present were: Misses Violet Hammitt, Ruth Richie, Allie Boone, Mrs. Pearl Paxton, and the honoree, Miss Stokes; Messrs McDougall, Darnell, Smith, Bell, Ira Hullum, Floyd Dawson and Rev. E. W. Ethridge.

On Wednesday evening about 33 members of the Eastern Star of Burkburnett went to Wichita Falls where they were guests of the Wichita Falls lodge at their initiation meeting. Mrs. J. W. McGuire, worthy matron of the Burkburnett lodge, responded to the greeting of welcome in behalf of the visiting members from this city. All report a splendid session which was concluded with a fine three-course luncheon.

The Wednesday Needle Work club met with Mrs. Hyram Berry this week in a pleasant informal session. The hours were given over to work in hand both artistic and practical, at the close of which the hostess favored her guests with a dainty refreshment service, including chocolate, cake and "Eskimo pie."

SAYS CALOMEL SALIVATES AND LOOSENS TEETH

The Very Next Dose of This Treacherous Drug May Start Trouble.

You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It mal s you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.—Adv.

Four Good Producers Record for Past Week In South Electra Pool

Four good producers from the South Electra pool featured the latter part of the week in Wichita county.

The Griswold Oil company for two of these new wells, both in the 1,800-foot sand. The No. 17 Burnett had a flush production between 300 and 400 barrels, according to field reports, and the No. 19 showed up for about the same, when first drilled in.

The Planet Petroleum company had a southwest extension on their lease, in the 1,900-foot sand, this new well coming in for 300 barrels daily.

On the adjoining lease to the Planet the Texas company has completed it's No. 212 Waggoner, 150 barrels, in the 1,600-foot sand.

Fair Sensation.

A fair sensation was occasioned by the Petroleum Producers company's No. 1 Waggoner, about two miles west of the Bridwell and Heydrick's Waggoner lease, which got a good sand at 480 feet, the hole filling almost to the top with oil before casing was set.

The Griswold wildcat on the Waggoner, two miles southwest of production, is waiting on developments from the shooting of the 1,900-foot lime, encountered last week. The first shot, given on Tuesday, seemed to drive the oil back, and after it was decided to drill deeper, it was found on Friday that the oil was showing up again, with indications of making a small producer. The lime will probably be given another shot, it is understood, if drilling deeper fails to show a true oil sand under the lime.

The Bridwell and Heydrick No. 9 Waggoner was reported Friday drilling in hard lime, below 1,750 feet. Several test wells are drilling on the Planet and Hobbs-Gladdioles leases.

This section continues to be considerably hampered by lack of water, this week, bringing no relief.

New Folwke Pool.

The No. 1 Roberts of John O'Neil is due to be the next point of interest in the neighborhood around the new Duke well of the Magnolia. This well, which was deepened from a shallow producer, will be the first after the discovery well to reach the 1600-foot sand level, from present indications, drilling Friday below 1300 feet. It is to the west of the discovery well.

About two miles west of this test, John O'Neill is starting his No. 1 Stringer, to also drill for the new 1600-foot sand. This test is down around 150 or 200 feet.

The Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 1 Duke, A lease, is reported drilling around 800 feet.

Both of the Gulf tests, the No. 1 Roberts, lease B and the No. 1 Powell, are reported down around 900 feet.

T. F. Hunter is reported rigging up for his No. 1 Mola Marie Trust-Roberts. He is also preparing to drill a second test, offsetting the first to the west, on a different lease.

On the J. L. Powell, a short distances from the old Powell-Long test, which got an 1800-foot sand, but failed to complete it as a producer, the Saint Louis Oil company is reported to have started operations. This test is in a northwest direction from the Magnolia's new well.

A water line is being run down from the Sunshine Hill pool, it is reported, this promising a relief in the water shortage. The Gulf and Magnolia companies have their own water lines.

Archer County Wildcat.

Some little interest has been occasioned by the discovery that oil was standing up to the top and bubbling over, in an old hole, abandoned several months ago by the Markley Oil company, on the Luke Wilson ranch, four miles north of Archer City. The well was abandoned around 1200 feet as dry and the casing was pulled. This latest development started work again.

A star is to be rigged up over the old hole, it is reported, in an effort to discover where the oil is coming from and to make a test. A new test is to be drilled on a location south, it is reported.

Severa lof the larger companies have taken leases aoout the test since the discovery of the oil running out the top of the hole.

TWO NEW DEEP SHOWINGS ARE ENCOUNTERED IN BUNGER POOL; MANY NEW LOCATIONS REPORTED

Two deep tests, one on the north part of the Bunger district, the second north of the McCluskey production, encountered new showings this week, and offered all that Young county can call really new.

The Paragon Oil company's No. 1 Vick in a lime at 3,785 is reported showing oil and gas. It is now running five-inch casing, and preparing to test, with indications considered fair for some sort of production.

The second deep showing is in the Kanowa Oil company's No. 1 Stovall, north of the 2,100 and 2,500-foot producing pool along the Clear Fork. A lime drilled at 3,380 feet is showing oil and gas, and arrangements are now being made to test it.

Cosden Well Mudded Up.

The Cosden well on the Parsons, northeast of Bunger, in the 3,500-foot lime, is reported making around 200 barrels of oil, with the hole mudded up, or possibly partially bridged. This well created a sensation the first oil the week, and had an initial flow of better than 500 barrels.

The Mann and Ashcraft No. 1 Whittenberg, an inside location in the Bunger, was a 200-barrel completion this week, in the 1,800-foot sand. The No. 2 Whittenberg of Mann and others, was drilled in the last of the week, and made several flows.

The No. 2 Bunger of the Texas company, southeast part of the pool, is reported a hundred-barrel producer.

New Bunger Location.

There were a number of new locations made in and around the Bunger pool. These include the No. 1 A. Simpson of Minp and Reynaud, the No. 1 A. P. Owen of the Mahlstadt Mook Oil company; No. 1 Whittenberg of Mutual Oil company; No. 4-A Grimshaw of the Gulf Production Company; No. 8-M Owens of the Cosden Oil and Gas company; No. 2 Askew of the Cosden Oil and Gas company; No. 1 Whittenberg of the Union Oil and Gas company; No. 1 Parsons of the Union Oil and Gas company; No. 1 Ribble of Spoonts and Varble; No. 1 Herron of Mellow, Horner and Taylor.

The No. 3 Scott of the North American Oil and Refining company is reported to shoot the 2,100-foot sand to test, before drilling deeper for the 3,500-foot lime.

The Panhandle Refining company's No. 1 Scott is reported ready to shoot in the 3,500-foot level, to test the lime.

The Roxana Petroleum company's No. 3 Goode is reported drilling around 600 feet.

The North American Oil and Refining company's No. 5 B. F. Scott is reported drilling around 1,170 feet.

The Roxana's No. 4 Burgess is reported drilling around 900 feet.

The No. 2 Payne is reported fishing around 750 feet.

The No. 2 McCluskey of W. E. Conner has started drilling. The No. 7 is reported drilling around 580 feet.

The No. 5 Scott of Henry Hobbs and others is reported temporarily shut down around 2,520 feet.

Drill For 2,600 Pay.

The No. 18 and No. 19 McCluskey of the Panhandle Refinery company are reported rigging up to start drilling for the 2,600-foot sand opened up by the W. E. Conner No. 6 McCluskey, just south of the Panhandle lease.

The Panhandle's wildcat on the Martin, two miles west of the McCluskey and Graham production, is reported drilling around 650 feet.

WIVES ASK MAYOR TO SHIELD THEIR HUSBANDS FROM WILES OF SEA VAMP

Abbreviated bathing suits which have incensed married women at St. Petersburg, Fla.

(By International News Service)

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 11—If the Purity League of this city has its way fair bathers who sport in the waters of Tampa Bay and the Gulf of Mexico will be compelled to wear long sleeves, skirts and stockings while on the beaches.

An appeal has been made to Frank F. Pulver, multi-millionaire Mayor of St. Petersburg, by the league in the form of a letter urging him to take action.

Pulver is asked to appoint a bathing suit inspector and is further informed that Annette Kellermann suits must be done away with so that the Purity League will be protected from the wiles of the sea vamps.

Mayor Promises Inspection

While expressing doubt whether there was any law in the city statutes that would give him power to say what should be worn by the fair bathers, Pulver said that he would make several inspections of the beaches and learn first hand whether the protest is justified or not.

Pulver is a bachelor.

The letter to the Mayor, signed by Hazel Milford Van Freedom, secretary of the St. Petersburg Purity League, follows:

"The attention of this organization, the Purity League, has been called to the outrageous bathing suits worn on the beaches around St. Petersburg. Abbreviated to an extreme, skirtless and sleeveless young women in reckless abandon appear before young men and their elders in costumes that never would be tolerated in Christian communities.

"Make Them Wear Sleeves"

Mr. Mayor Pulver, it is up to you to take some action on these bathing suits. You must compel the young ladies to wear stockings and skirts to their suits. You make them wear sleeves. As it is now permitted, these girls don't care how they look on the beaches. They are half naked.

"Further, this league will protect the married men in its membership from the wiles of the sea vamps even if it has to engage its own law enforcers. Members of the Purity League have gone on record in opposing the present costumes being worn on the bathing beaches and it further urges you Mr. Mayor Pulver, to do away with the suits named after a certain Annette Kellermann. Give back to us the modest bathing suit and take away the shameless ones your police permit the young women of this community to wear before the men and our husbands.

"Pressure is now being brought to bear with the State Legislature to compel restrictions on the abbreviations of bathing suits. We are also urging the appointment of a bathing suit inspector for the beaches."

GIRLS IN "KNICKERS" BARRED FROM DANCES

(By International News Service)

ALBANY, Feb. 10.—Girls wearing "knickers" have been barred from dances at Albany's most exclusive social organization, the Aurania club.

This fact was gently but firmly impressed on a young woman who appeared in the dance hall attired in the "knickers."

It is said that so many of the young men wanted to dance with the girl in "knickers" that some married women complained to the club's president.

Abie

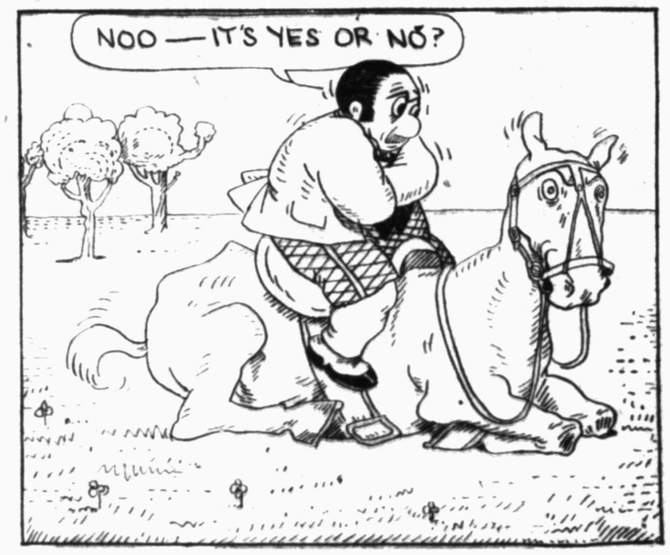

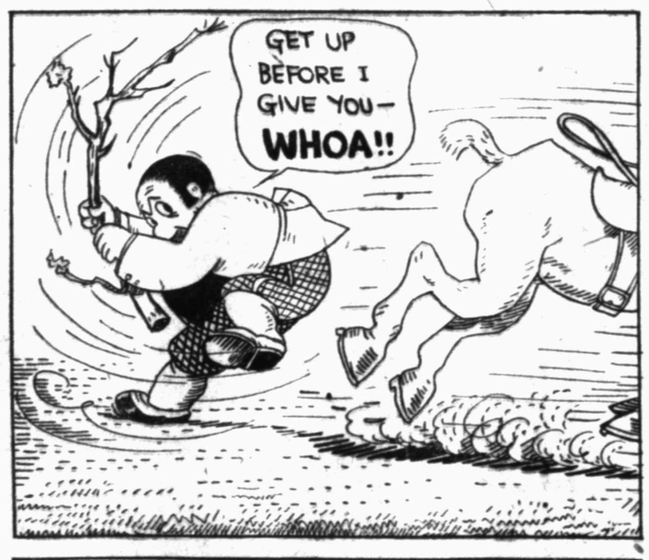

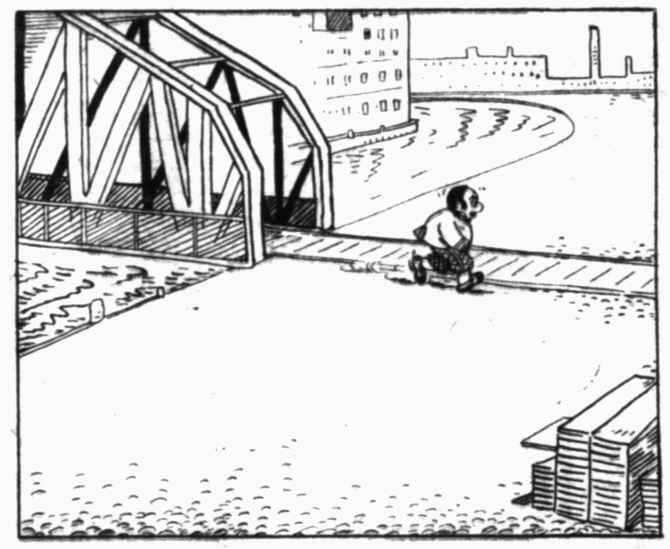

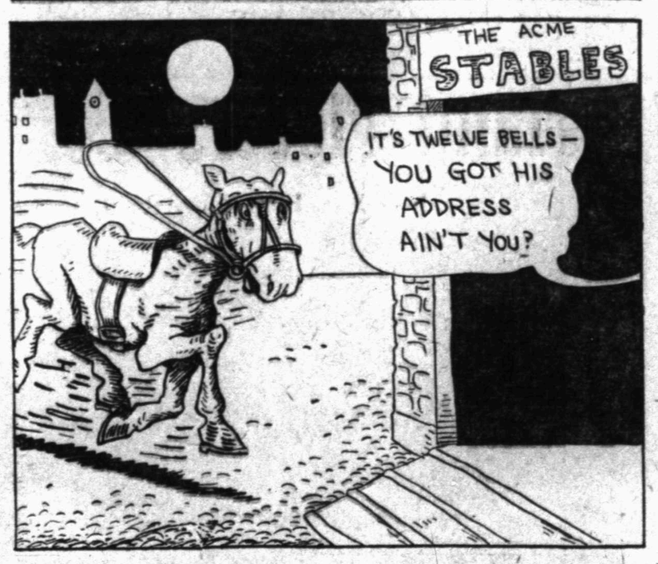

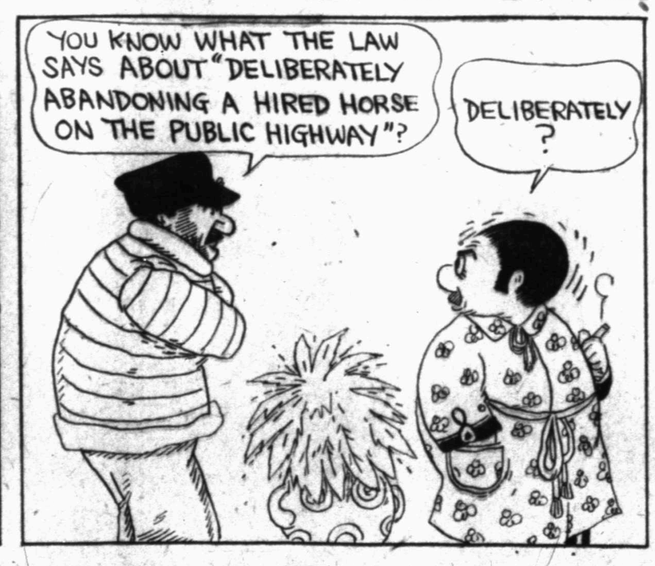

Puzzle:

Did Barney suggest checking out because he was winner, or did he forget that he was in jail?

BARNEY GOOGLE

owned his own home, while his friend KATZ paid a monthly stipend to the landlord.

Jerry, Phil and Pop thought they would be as safe as a church mouse at Katz's. They didn't realize the dangers of being a renter. And Barney thought he could slip away from his own fireside without coming to grief.

Do You Know What Happened?

They all met in the city jail. If Mrs. Barney had been a woman of large sympathies and generous tendencies, they could have had their little game at the Google home. There they would have been as safe from interruption as they were in the city bastile.

And besides, while Barney was big winner, he could have winked at his "sweet woman" who could have quickly become so sleepy that the guests would have been forced to leave. Result—Mr. and Mrs. Barney Google could have built a sleeping porch to their little home with the winnings.

MORAL:

It is safer to "Own Your Own Home."
