Bentsen foresees oil turnaround

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

ODESSA — U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, senior senator from Texas, opened Energy Appreciation Week Monday by telling local oilmen that "we're one day closer to an oil price turnaround."

Addressing the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Bentsen said last week's decision to attach a repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax to the new trade bill represented a major legislative victory for the industry.

He recounted how the Senate voted to add repeal of the tax to the pending trade bill last July. Nine months later — on March 31 — Bentsen, who is head of the Senate Finance Committee, persuaded Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, to include it in the final version of the trade bill approved by the House-Senate committee.

"For the last nine months I've been trying to achieve this legislative initiative. Finally, I was going one-on-one with the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, who has always fought repealing the tax, and always won those fights," he said. "After about six hours of discussions, he agreed to drop his opposition to the repeal."

He commented later that he hopes President Reagan will sign the bill, despite the recent threat of a veto unless provisions for import curbs were changed.

Bentsen explained that the reason repealing the Windfall Profits Tax is important is that it costs the industry $100 million annually in accounting costs, even though prices are too low to trigger the tax. He added that, when prices do recover, a major disincentive would be off the books forever.

The fate of the domestic industry rests on three pillars, he told the audience:

- Removing disincentives.
- Seeing that no new burdens are placed on the industry.
- Doing a more efficient job of using existing resources.

"In this region, if you can make headway with enhanced oil recovery technology, you will benefit tremendously," he said. Bentsen pointed out that, in the U.S., more than 300 billion barrels of oil remain the ground — much of it in the Permian Basin.

He said that Dr. William Fisher of the University of Texas estimates that of the 4 billion barrels of oil discovered on University lands in West Texas, only 1.2 billion barrels have been produced. Of the unrecovered reserves, 1.7 billion is residual oil and 1.5 billion is mobile oil, much of which is recoverable through new enhanced recovery techniques.

Mecham convicted, removed from office

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Evan Mecham was convicted on impeachment charges and removed as governor in a finale to 15 months of national ridicule that began the week the political outsider took office.

"I feel relieved that this nightmare is over," Republican Sen. Greg Lunn said Monday after Mecham, a first-term Republican, became the first U.S. governor in 59 years to be impeached and stripped of his office.

Mecham, 63, showed no emotion as the Arizona Senate voted 21-9 to convict him of trying to obstruct an investigation of a alleged death threat and 26-4 of misusing $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund. Twenty votes were required for conviction.

Minutes later, Mecham smiled and told reporters, "Well, they don't like my politics, so we finished a political trial; it's as simple as that."

The 30-member Senate defeated, 17-13, a motion to bar Mecham from holding any public office again, making it unclear whether he will be permitted to run in a May 17 recall election to regain the governor's post. There is no precedent and the matter probably will be decided by the courts, said Attorney General Bob Corbin.

Acting Gov. Rose Mofford, a Democrat, became governor with Mecham's conviction.

"Let us purge our hearts of suspicion and hate," she said in a statement. "I did not ask for this burden. But I do not shrink from the job before me."

Mecham faces an April 21 criminal trial on a charge he concealed a $350,000 campaign loan. The Senate dropped a charge on that issue last week.

Mecham said he did not know what he will do next, including whether he will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. "We'll know in a couple, three days," he said.

Mecham was removed less than a week after his family announced the Mecham Pontiac dealership, which he has owned since 1950, was being sold because of declining sales his son blamed on an "avalanche" of bad publicity.

"Ladies and gentlemen, Governor Mecham has struck out," Democratic Sen. Jesus "Chuy" Higuera said as he voted for conviction on the two counts.

"The only defense that we have heard is ignorance of the law," Higuera said. "The citizens of this state will not tolerate this evil insensitivity to the (Arizona) Constitution and the laws of the state."

Lobsters freed as issue boils

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — "Shirley," a 25-pound male lobster with claws as big as baseball mitts, was headed for the sea today instead of a dinner plate, thanks to animal rights activists, a seafood vendor and state officials.

Shirley, whose age has been estimated at 40 to 125 years old, was to be released in the Atlantic Ocean today, along with a 19¾-pound lobster. Both were rescued from a Philadelphia man who wanted to serve them for Easter dinner.

"This is symbolic of what we're trying to do and what citizens are trying to do for a natural, sustainable resource," said Col. Robert Fogg, chief of the Bureau of Marine Patrol of the state Department of Marine Resources. "By protecting these large lobsters, there's more of a chance of them reproducing" and perpetuating the industry.

Kuwaiti royalty aboard hijacked jetliner

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Arabic-speaking hijackers today commandeered a Kuwaiti Airways jumbo jet with 112 people aboard, forced it to land in Iran and threatened to blow it up.

Three members of Kuwait's royal Al-Sabah family and one passenger with an American passport reportedly were aboard the Boeing 747, which was hijacked to Mashhad in northeastern Iran on a flight from Bangkok to Kuwait.

Kuwait urged Iran to handle the incident "wisely" and asked that the plane not be allowed to take off.

Iran first denied the plane permission to land, but reversed its decision when the pilot said the jet was running out of fuel, said Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency.

IRNA said the hijackers demanded fuel, but it was not known what their other demands were. IRNA said the hijackers threatened to blow up the aircraft if "any person should attempt to approach it."

Prime Minister Hussein Musavi of Iran told Tehran Radio he was trying to "resolve the incident peacefully to save the lives of the people on board."

He sent his deputy for political affairs, Ali Reza Moayyeri, to Mashhad to "look into the hijack situation," said the broadcast, monitored in Nicosia.

Kuwaiti Airways said Flight 422 from the Thai capital was carrying 97 passengers and 15 crew members.

Elias H. Shiber, the airline's manager in Bangkok, said the passenger list included 30 Kuwaitis, 22 Britons, eight Thais, various other nationalities and one person with both an American and Egyptian passport. The airline identified him as R. Attiaallaali.

Shiber said the three members of Kuwait's ruling family aboard were Ibtesam Khaled Al-Sabah, Fadil Khaled Al-Sabah and the wife of Khaled Anwar Al-Sabah. Hundreds of Kuwaitis are related to Kuwait's emir.

IRNA, also monitored in Nicosia, had reported that the flight originated in Kuwait. But Kuwaiti Airways offices in Kuwait and Bangkok said the plane took off from Bangkok.

IRNA said the aircraft landed in Mashhad at 7:30 a.m. (midnight EDT) and completed refueling three hours later.

It said the aircraft was "preparing to fly to an unidentified destination." But several hours later, there still was no word that the jet had taken off.

The Iranian agency said the hijackers spoke in Arabic, but did not identify themselves or make any demands. IRNA did not say how many hijackers were aboard the plane.

The Kuwait News Agency quoted a spokesman for the airline as saying contact was lost with the aircraft while it flew over Muscat, Oman.

An Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman said the plane flew into Iranian airspace from the direction of the Gulf of Oman.

He told IRNA that initially, the aircraft was refused permission to land in Iran, but that the pilot radioed back saying he was running out of fuel.

More American soldiers to reach Panama today

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A military-run newspaper warned the public to prepare for an invasion after the United States said it was sending 1,300 more soldiers to Panama to safeguard the lives and property of American citizens.

Some of the additional U.S. troops were expected to arrive today in Panama, where a two-week general strike aimed at ousting strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega crumbled on Monday when most businesses opened.

In another development, an offer by the Roman Catholic Church to mediate Panama's crisis appeared doomed when a government official said only hours before the church-imposed midnight Monday deadline that the government had received no official invitation to take part.

The Pentagon said last week it was sending the additional soldiers to guard 10,500 U.S. troops and installations used to protect the Panama Canal.

The decision followed five weeks of unrest and an opposition attempt to oust Noriega. As head of the 15,000-member Panamanian Defense Forces, Noriega is the power behind the civilian government. He is under indictment in the United States on federal drug trafficking charges.

La Republica, a military-run newspaper, told its readers Sunday, "Panamanians must prepare themselves to reject the invasion."

The United States contends the troop buildup is within the bounds of the 1977 treaties that gave the Panama Canal Zone back to Panama in 1979 and will give Panama the canal at the end of 1999.

The United States, which supports the opposition move to oust Noriega, has cut off Panama's flow of dollars, virtually paralyzing the already-bankrupt government and leading to closure of the nation's banks.

The U.S. government said on Monday it does not plan military or further economic actions against Panama.

White Hose spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in Washington that even though it might take more time than anticipated, Noriega will eventually step down.

Opposition leaders insisted on Monday that the strike officially remained in effect, but their call appeared to be generally unheeded by retailers.

Many factories, which are more directly under the control of the strike organizers, remained closed.

Monsignor Marcos Antonio McGrath, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Panama City, had offered to mediate Panama's dispute between Noriega and opposition groups. But government-controlled television stations on Monday quoted unidentified government officials as saying the government never received a formal, written invitation.

Kimble suspects await extradition

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Three Howard County residents suspected of robbing and killing a popular Big Spring radio personality have been charged with capital murder and are awaiting extradition from Louisiana, the lawman in charge of the case said.

Pam Newton, Patrick Newton, and Michael Hodnett were charged with capital murder Monday on a complaint issued by Justice of the Peace William Shankles, Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard said today.

The trio range in age from 17 to early 20, the sheriff said.

The Newtons are believed to be brother and sister, Standard said.

"Technically, they have been charged," he said. "Whether or not the charge stands up depends on the evidence we are able to present once our investigation is complete."

The trio — who were arrested Saturday in Louisiana by lawmen there — are accused of the slaying of 61-year-old Vance Kimble, a morning disc jockey at radio station KBYG in Big Spring.

Kimble's body was found at his home three miles south of Big Spring early Friday after he failed to show up for work. He had been shot once in the chest, and his death was ruled a homicide by Shankles.

Two vehicles, several firearms and credit cards belonging to Kimble were missing from the home when law officers arrived.

Is teacher linked to teen's suicide?

By DAVID SEDENO

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lou Ann Hogan describes herself as a good high school English teacher who got along well with her students, but school administrators say she may have gotten along too well with one of them.

Mrs. Hogan, 24, is fighting for her job after four male students told school administrators they saw her having sex with Chad Cadenhead, a 17-year-old emotionally troubled teen-ager who committed suicide a month after the alleged sex acts took place.

The case has drawn a great deal of local coverage and attracted national attention after Mrs. Hogan was fired from Clark High School on charges of "immorality" and her contract for the next school year was not renewed.

Mrs. Hogan, who has filed a $400,000 lawsuit against the teen-agers, claiming defamation of character, said they are trying to find an answer to the teen-ager's death.

The students claim they don't want to hurt anyone, but simply are compelled to tell the truth.

It's a stalemate so far, but both sides convincingly claim they are telling the truth and want the civil case tried quickly to settle the issue.

"I'm mad, but what do I do?" Mrs. Hogan said. "It will come out that they are not good boys. I just want to stare them in the in the face. I want to see how they would react."

When that time comes, Taylor Sommer, Scott Autry, Jeff Beckel and Hector Torres, who are named in her suit, said they will tell the truth, that on the nights of Dec. 5 and Dec. 11, they saw Mrs. Hogan and Cadenhead engaged in sex.

Sommer, 16, and Autry and Beckel, both 17, are students at Clark High School and Torres, 19, a former

Chad Cadenhead

Lou Ann Hogan

Clark student, now attends the University of Texas at San Antonio.

Rumors about who's telling the truth and who's lying are abundant at Clark High School and throughout the North Side Independent School District.

"We're getting made to look like the bad guys for the telling the truth," Sommer said in an interview. "I'm not mad. It's tough, but I'm telling the truth, so I'm not worried."

The twisted tale began in November when Cadenhead told friends he was having a sexual relationship with Mrs. Hogan, a second-year teacher whose youth allowed her to relate to students.

Sommer, Autry and Beckel did not believe Cadenhead, who according to an autopsy report was an emotional teen-ager with suicidal tendencies who had undergone psychological counseling.

Cadenhead told friends that he would set it up so they could watch, the teen-agers said.

On Saturday, Dec. 5, 1987, Sommer, Beckel and Torres said they went to Cadenhead's house, peeked through a bedroom window and saw Cadenhead and Mrs. Hogan engaged in sex. On Dec. 11, Autry and Beckel said they were spending a night at Cadenhead's home when Mrs. Hogan called and said she was coming over.

Autry and Beckel said they slipped out of the house and stood near Cadenhead's bedroom window. They said Mrs. Hogan arrived, went to Cadenhead's room and she and Cadenhead again had sex.

But Mrs. Hogan said the charges are ludicrous. She and her husband, Mike, said they were together on the nights the alleged acts took place.

"Never would I be stupid enough to go to a kid's house not knowing if his parents were there," Mrs. Hogan said.

The teen-agers said they never talked to Cadenhead much after the acts allegedly occurred.

On Jan. 28, Cadenhead went to his bedroom, put a .410-gauge shotgun in his mouth and pulled the trigger. No suicide note was found, but the teen-agers believe the sexual relationship may have triggered the act.

"I know if it were me, it would bother me a lot," Sommer said.

Sommer said that two weeks after he saw Mrs. Hogan and Cadenhead having sex, he told his sister and after Cadenhead's death she persuaded him to tell adults.

The Sommers told the Cadenheads, who later told school officials. On Feb. 2, the students were summoned to school administrators offices and were asked to write what they saw.

Mrs. Hogan was suspended, and on March 10, the school board fired her. Last week, the board declined to renew her contract for the coming year.

School superintendent Jack Jordan has said the teen-agers' story was very convincing.

"We are telling the truth. We have no reason to lie," Torres said. "We want to tell our side of the story and we want to tell it all in court. It's upsetting to us to have to hear the opinions of other people who think we are liars."

Mrs. Hogan, however, said many teachers get fired because of charges made by students, and that many teachers don't see the point in fighting the charges.

"I thought about fighting it and everything else," she said. "I felt if I didn't fight it, I didn't think I could have lived with myself."

LOBSTER

"It shows there's a lot of concern about our natural resources out there," Fogg added.

Maine law protects lobsters with body shells longer than five inches, covering crustaceans heavier than 4 to 5 pounds.

The Marine Patrol planned to return the lobsters to their natural habitat off Cape Elizabeth nearly 10 miles south of here, as long as the lobsters are healthy.

The crustaceans arrived in "excellent" shape Monday night after an airplane ride from Philadelphia, where they had been trucked from Long Island, N.Y., and sold to a customer for $287.

Animal rights activists took up the lobsters' cause when they heard that Art Miller, a retired carpenter, planned to use them for a feast.

Kevin Hill, owner of Hill's Main Line Seafood Co. in the Philadelphia suburb of Ardmore, persuaded Miller to take 45 pounds of smaller lobsters instead.

Hill put the lobsters in a window tank for the rest of their visit to Philadelphia's Main Line, acknowledging that saving lobsters from dinner was something new for him.

"It's been very good for business," he said. Thousands of people dropped by for a look at Shirley. "If they don't buy now, at least they know where we are," said Hill.

He said he would be in Maine for the lobsters' return to the wild.

Pity Not Cruelty Inc., a small animal rights group, made arrangements with Maine officials to turn the creatures loose and assumed the $40 flight cost.

It may seem a lot of trouble for a couple of lobsters, but group vice president Gloria Felscher-Cohen makes no apologies.

"Why not?" she asked. "These two lobsters have survived hazards, particularly Shirley, over 100 years. Why should she need to succumb to the cruelest predator of all, man?"

Americans in 'zone' concerned

BALBOA HEIGHTS, Panama (AP) — Panama's political crisis, with its uncertainties and hardships, has prompted concern among the more than 1,100 Americans and their families who still live in the former Panama Canal Zone.

The artificially high quality of life the zone afforded Americans for more than 60 years before it was returned to Panama in 1979 has changed, and there are fears that Americans could be casualties of the political turmoil.

About 1,300 American troops are to arrive this week to protect the 10,000 soldiers assigned to watch the Panama Canal and to guard American lives and property.

But that does not convince all the Americans in the zone that they are secure. "The (U.S.) army is for the army," said Ann Fahren, the wife of a Panama Canal ship pilot who has lived in Panama 10 years.

During the worst days of the recent crisis, she said, she was refused permission to shop at U.S. military-run grocery stores even after the military advised against going into the city to shop because of protests and riots.

"It burns me up," she said. "The army should not have slammed its doors in our face."

PANAMA

Monsignor Oscar Brown, the auxiliary bishop of Panama City, said in an interview on the Channel 2 television station, "We didn't make the invitation in a formal, written fashion to each of the parties involved."

"The invitation was made through our public press conference," he said. "We made this public, open invitation to all the parties involved."

The government held its own "national dialogue" Monday at a downtown convention center, without the presence of either the Catholic Church or the National Civic Crusade, the main opposition alliance.

Mario Rognoni, minister of commerce and industry, told reporters, "The government hopes the church and representatives of the opposition who have not taken part in this dialogue today take part in Wednesday's session."

On Sunday, a Panamanian military patrol car chased U.S. Ambassador Arthur Davis' limousine for two miles after he left the residence of the papal ambassador, where he had gone to pay Easter respects.

The State Department called the action "deliberate harassment," but Panama said it was only a police matter triggered by a display of weapons in a car providing security for Davis.

Justice Minister Rodolfo Chiari de Leon said the incident occurred when a patrol spotted "an exaggerated display of automatic arms carried by civilian elements traveling in three vehicles" that followed the ambassador.

Cynthia Farrell, a spokeswoman for the ambassador, acknowledged on Monday that U.S. security guards were following Davis in at least one other vehicle. She called it a routine precaution but declined to give details.

"The Kuwaiti plane was allowed to land at the airport solely for humanitarian reasons," the unidentified spokesman was quoted as saying.

Musavi, the Iranian prime minister, said hijackings were "against humanitarian and Islamic principles and unacceptable as a political tactic."

In Kuwait, a government spokesman said the Foreign Ministry summoned Iranian Charge d'Affaires Mohammed Faroughy and told him "Kuwait is confident that the concerned Iranian authorities will handle the issue wisely, in a manner that ensures the safety of the passengers, the crew and the plane."

The unidentified Kuwaiti government spokesman told the Kuwait News Agency, "Kuwait also asked the Iranian government not to allow the airliner to take off from Iran and to take all measures necessary to prevent such takeoff."

The Kuwaiti spokesman described the hijacking as a "regrettable incident" but gave no indication as to who may have been behind it.

Diplomatic relations between Iran and Kuwait have been strained since August when Iranians stormed the embassies of Kuwait and Saudi Arabia in Tehran. Kuwait closed its embassy in Tehran and brought its diplomats home. Later Kuwait limited the number of Iranians at Iran's Embassy in Kuwait to two.

Pro-Iranian gunmen hijacked a Kuwaiti Airways jetliner to Tehran in December 1984. They killed two American passengers before Iranian commandos stormed the aircraft, ending the six-day ordeal.

At the time, the hijackers demanded the release of Kuwaitis jailed in the 1983 bombings that targeted U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait. The Kuwait government refused to negotiate.

Dozens of Shiite Moslem terrorists, most of them either of Iranian descent or loyal to its Islamic Revolution, have been arrested and convicted of sabotage in the past five years. The overwhelming majority of Iran's population is Shiite.

In the Persian Gulf Arab states, Sunni Moslems dominate the government.

Kuwait is the closest Arab nation to Iran and Iraq, which are locked in a 7½-year-old war. Iran has often accused Kuwait of actively aiding Iraq's military effort.

BENTSEN

"If we can get just 25 percent of that mobile oil, it would double the proven reserves in the Permian Basin. Think what that would mean in terms of jobs, of increased business activity," he said.

The senior senator noted that the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification will help this area specialize and diversify. The region would also be the logical partner for the University of Texas' Geosciences Institute for oil and gas recovery research, which recently received $500,000 from the Department of Energy. This area, Bentsen said, would be the logical place to conduct enhanced oil and gas recovery research.

He concluded that Americans are realizing the recent problems suffered by the oil industry are not merely a regional problem, but a problem for the American economy and American security.

As befitting the opening event in a week honoring the industry that has been the heart of the state's economy, Bentsen said he is optimistic about the future. "We've taken some tough hits. This crowd has been there from the Alamo to the Dust Bowl to the Depression to low oil prices. Texans have been there and come back. You're optimists, you're risk-takers and you have great courage," he said.

MECHAM

The vote ended 15 tumultuous months that shook this staunchly Republican state and brought ridicule and criticism from politicians, comedians and the comic strip "Doonesbury."

On his fifth try for governor, Mecham was elected in 1986 in a three-way race with 40 percent of the vote. He made national headlines seven days after his inauguration by canceling a Martin Luther King holiday for state workers on the grounds it was illegally created by his Democratic predecessor, Bruce Babbitt. He subsequently offended blacks, Jews, women and homosexuals with offhand remarks and official actions.

On Feb. 5, the House impeached Mecham, making the 65-year-old Mrs. Mofford, who had been secretary of state, acting governor.

Mecham's supporters and opponents gathered all day outside the Senate building and listened to the proceedings over the radio. Each group cheered as votes favorable to their side were announced.

Afterward, Mesa resident Millie Pratt said, "I feel betrayed by our Legislature. I had more faith in them."

Barry Gabriel, who carried a sign saying, "Guilty. Guilty. Guilty," said he was "happy and relieved" because "I think he's a menace."

The Senate convicted Mecham of ordering Department of Public Safety Director Ralph Milstead not to cooperate with Corbin's investigation of an alleged death threat by a Mecham confidant against former Mecham aide Donna Carlson. At the time, Ms. Carlson was about to testify before a state grand jury about the $350,000 loan.

Mecham maintained he did not intend to obstruct justice, although he admitted telling Milstead, "The attorney general is out to hang me and I'm not going to help him in any way." The governor also insisted he was not informed of the alleged threat's seriousness.

He was convicted of misusing the $80,000 in protocol money by loaning it to his suburban Glendale auto dealership.

One of the vehicles and at least one credit card were found with the suspects when they were arrested, Standard said.

The sheriff declined to say where in Louisiana the suspects were being held. He said an "informal" extradition hearing would be held later today.

"I don't see any problem with them returning soon to face these charges," Standard said. "It is just a matter of time and following traditional procedures."

Two Howard County criminal investigators sent to Lousiana to question the trio have not returned, Standard said.

Funeral services for Kimble — a Big Spring radio veteran of nearly 40 years — were held Monday.

Dr. Percy Pierre, who became Prairie View A&M University president five years ago, surveys the revitalized campus near Houston. Pierre helped achieve a higher enrollment, millions of dollars in completed construction projects, higher test scores for freshmen, an improved curriculum and a highly regarded honors program.

Prairie View's promise finally being fulfilled

PRAIRIE VIEW (AP) — Five years ago, nearly 20 percent of the student body at Prairie View A&M University was on academic probation, buildings were dilapidated and the library was in bad shape.

Administrators tried to improve conditions, but there was little money and little support from the state.

"The school was regarded as a court of last resort," said Elaine Adams, vice president for academic affairs, who came to the school in 1983. "There was a negative attitude among the students as well as the faculty."

Now, things have changed.

More than 17 multimillion-dollar construction projects have been completed. The Texas A&M University System, through a federally approved desegregation plan and endowment funds that until 1984 couldn't be used for Prairie View, has sunk $53 million into facilities.

Another $30 million in construction is in the works.

Enrollment has climbed from 4,495 in 1982 to 5,307 in the most recent semester. Between 1986 and 1987, the increase was nearly 18 percent, the highest at any Texas college or university.

Minority enrollment — at Prairie View that means white and Hispanic students — also is up with whites making up nearly 10 percent of the student body.

"It's a promise realized," said Kenneth Ashworth, state commissioner for higher education.

When Percy Pierre was named university president in 1983, the school had fallen on hard times.

Pierre, former dean of engineering at Howard University, and his staff launched an attack on several fronts, aided by the Texas plan, special legislative appropriations and a constitutional amendment giving Prairie View a share of money from the Permanent University Fund.

The Texas plan is an agreement between the state and the federal government to integrate state universities. A large part of it requires increased spending at Prairie View to upgrade facilities.

The PUF is a state endowment funded by oil and gas royalties from 2 million acres of West Texas land. Money from it had been earmarked exclusively for Texas A&M and the University of Texas until voters approved a constitutional amendment that gave Prairie View a share.

The curriculum, which included two-year degree plans in welding, mechanics, cosmetology and other vocational fields, was streamlined, Ms. Adams said. Now only four-year degrees are offered, with most of the vocational programs eliminated.

Pierre also has lured more faculty with doctorates to the 1,440-acre Waller County campus. Of the 178 full-time faculty members, 66 percent have doctorates and nearly 34 percent have master's degrees.

The school, established in 1878 as an agricultural and mechanical school for blacks, also has undertaken an extensive recruiting program, aimed at improving the quality of the student body.

San Antonio's fiesta will have dressier look this year

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Fiesta '88, San Antonio's downtown bash, will have fewer parades this year but will have a dressier look with a new logo and banners painted by high school students.

This year's 10-year party downtown begins April 15 but a separate Rey Feo (Ugly King) Parade won't be held. Instead it will be merged with the Flambeau — the giant parade that ends the festivities, said Marleen Pedroza, Fiesta Commission executive vice president.

She said the new extravaganza, the Fiesta Flambeau Rey Feo Parade, will be held April 23.

New banners with Fiesta scenes will hang on street light poles along the parade route near Alamo Plaza. The banners were painted by students at Clark, Edgewood, Edison, Holy Cross and Judson high schools.

Another Fiesta first is a blues festival sponsored by the Institute of Texan Cultures and scheduled for April 24 on the grounds of the institute.

WE'RE USING SOUND WAVES TO CRUMBLE KIDNEY STONES.

At Midland Memorial Hospital, we're experts in lithotripsy — the intriguing new medical treatment that breaks kidney stones into tiny particles, sparing you the pain and risk of surgery.

Midland Memorial Hospital was the first to bring lithotripsy to the Permian Basin. Now, we're building on what has been a very successful program since October, 1987.

We're using the most advanced treatment for kidney stones available.

As the leaders in lithotripsy technology, Midland Memorial proudly brings to Midland the most advanced lithotriptor available in the United States. This state-of-the-art unit is designed for the utmost patient safety and comfort. The patient simply reclines in a chair with the kidney area resting against a water-filled cushion. The doctor then focuses sound waves at the kidney stone, crumbling it into sand-like particles.

Our urologists — including Dr. Kirby Terry, Dr. Nick Shroff and Dr. Robert Johnston — have been specially trained in the performance of lithotripsy procedures.

No incisions, scars or long recoveries.

Lithotripsy removes most kidney stones without the pain and risk of surgery. Patients can now return home and get back to work in about three days, compared to weeks of recovery from traditional kidney stone surgery.

For information about pricing, or to arrange a personal tour of our lithotripsy facilities, give us a call at (915) 685-1540 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. We'd like to tell you more about the newest, most advanced treatment for kidney stones available.

Human chain to be formed in body search

EL PASO (AP) — Forming a human chain to search for more graves in the desert of northeast El Paso is not the last resort, but it's pretty close, a police official says.

Police plan to form the search party next weekend to determine if they have overlooked any graves. The bodies of six young women have been found since Sept. 4 in the desert 18 miles northeast of downtown, all buried in shallow graves and all within a half-mile of one another.

And at least three young women from El Paso and neighboring Chaparral, N.M., remain missing.

Volunteers from the police department, the Sheriff's Reserves and from Fort Bliss will "saturate as much of an area as we can with as many people as we can" beginning at 7 a.m. Saturday, police spokesman Lt. J.R. Grijalva said.

A similar search might be continued the following Saturday, he said.

"This is not the last resort, but it's one of the last resorts," he said of the plan, in which volunteers would probe the ground for any signs of burial.

The final solution would be to use rototillers to search the 10-square-mile area, Grijalva said, adding that the drastic tactic likely would destroy some evidence.

Four of the bodies were found by trained dogs, but police believe any remaining bodies would be so decomposed that dogs would not be able to smell the bones. Ordinary citizens stumbled onto the first and sixth bodies.

Police hope to have 100 to 400 volunteers, Grijalva said. Volunteers are needed because the department doesn't have the money to pay overtime.

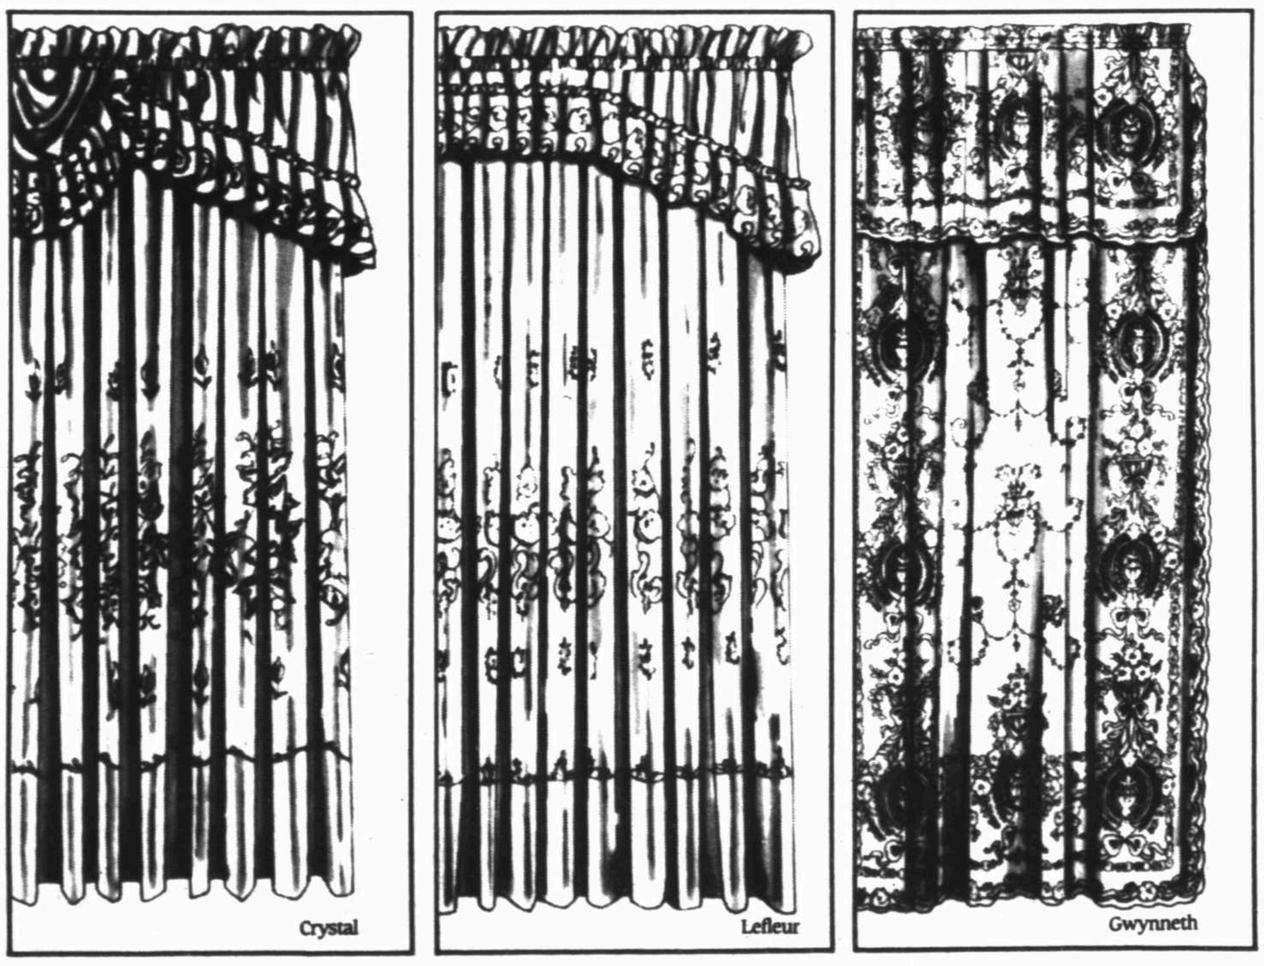

The city allocated $75,000 to the police department to pay for equipment and special costs associated with the desert deaths investigation, but the money is not being used for overtime.

Grijalva had no estimate on how much overtime has been spent on the investigation, but said the amount is substantial.

Support for the volunteer effort is strong in the police department substations, officers said.

"Everyone I asked yesterday has agreed to do it," Lt. James Carney of the East Valley substation said.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Originality will be your best tool for advancing your career. Money is more plentiful than in the recent past. A crowning achievement is within your grasp. You should be the chief beneficiary when a family squabble is resolved. New financial gains are likely in October. Work harder to keep romance alive. Talking over your problems with a sympathetic and discreet friend could reveal new options.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor John Ratzenberger, author Lowell Thomas, singer Merle Haggard, actress Marilu Henner, pitcher Bert Blyleven, conductor Andre Previn, jazzman Gerry Mulligan, actor Billy Dee Williams.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your health and outlook will improve if you lead a more active life. Routine job demands may be wearing you down. Delegate more responsibility so you can focus on creative projects. Think big!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Save any big requests for another day. Your co-workers may not share your positive attitude. You will score the biggest gains by exercising self-restraint. Let others make their suggestions first.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Any frustrations in your personal life will be temporary. A new relationship offers you a support system you have not known before. Follow your head today; your heart could lead you astray.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A dream could come true in the near future. Have the same faith in yourself that a parent has in you. Give more than 100 percent at work!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Money matters continue to demand the lion's share of your attention. Look to the mail for answers. Taking a risk is fine if you do not go too far out on a limb.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get your clever ideas down on paper. Old methods and procedures will not work now. Try innovative ideas. Be sure to fulfill your obligations to loved ones. An obstacle to romance begins to disappear.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A bit of flattery will work wonders. Do not overdramatize a situation or the person you are appealing to will be turned off. Neighbors want to become close friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Profits come from a variety of sources. Seek new investments. Think big and you will accomplish great things! Influential person offers enthusiastic support. A relationship needs more nurturing. Plan some special treats.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Swallow your pride and you will gain new allies. Seek experts' help in launching a project. A romantic transition is easier than you imagined. A long-cherished dream comes true.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seek an expert's appraisal of your investments. Forget petty squabbles with old friends and make up. An old flame tries to rekindle the past. Resist the temptation to try again. Look forward, not back.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not give up your security. Pay more attention to loved one's desires. Air your ideas to your work associates. Avoid borrowing or lending cash. Romance is happy, if not particularly exciting.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Show others that you have the determination necessary to succeed. Concentrate on projects already in progress. You will find the relationship you want when you are ready to make a firm commitment.

The bidding:

4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

Entries are precious gems. We are continually surprised by the cavalier attitude many players display toward such exquisite possessions. To make our point, we would like you to cover the East and West hands with your thumbs and decide which finesse declarer should take when he gets to dummy for the one and only time with the ace of spades.

South's choice of four hearts as his rebid is reasonable, but we do feel that one other bid should have been considered—a jump to three no trump. That contract would have posed no difficulty, regardless of the opening lead.

If you answered that declarer should use his entry to the table to take either rounded-suit finesse, you have missed the point of the hand. Declarer has 10 tricks available if dummy's lone entry is put to good use rather than squandered as an entry for a finesse.

Declarer should win the opening lead in hand, cash the ace of trumps and then play ace of clubs followed by the jack. The defenders are helpless. The best they can do is win the king of clubs and persevere with spades. But now declarer can win the ace, discard one of his side-suit losers and then revert to trumps. Declarer will score two spade tricks, five trumps, one diamond and two clubs no matter what.

Note that it would be wrong for declarer to try to draw more than one round of trumps before playing on clubs. The defenders will win the second trump and force out the ace of spades before South has set up a second club trick, and he will be forced to rely on the club finesse for his contract.

PBS takes seven broadcasting awards; NBC wins for 'L.A. Law'

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Cable News Network was cited as "the channel of record for breaking news" in winning a 1987 Peabody Award for the best in broadcasting, while Public Broadcasting System programs garnered seven awards.

NBC won two awards Monday — including one for the hit show "L.A. Law" — and NBC-owned affiliates won two others. Home Box Office won two of the 29 awards given for 1987.

The new Star Trek series, 'Star Trek: The Next Generation," won an award for its episode, "The Big Good-Bye."

The Peabody winners were selected by a 15-member national jury, assembled by the University of Georgia, from more than 800 entries.

The Atlanta-based CNN received a Peabody for its coverage of breaking news stories in 1987. The judges cited specifically CNN's coverage of the October stock market crash and recognized the network as "the channel of record for breaking news of national and global significance."

The PBS series, "Eyes On The Prize: America's Civil Rights Years" was produced by Blackside Inc. of Boston and chronicled the story of the U.S. civil rights movement from the 1950s to the present.

"L.A. Law," the dramatic series set in a Los Angeles law firm, was hailed by the judges for its "intelligent scripts, crisp direction and fine acting...what entertainment television should strive to be."

The winners will receive their awards at a May 4 luncheon sponsored by the Broadcast Pioneers in New York.

Brown

BEECH ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Warrants were issued for the arrest of soul singer James Brown after his wife told authorities he fired several shots at their car while she was inside and beat her with an iron pipe.

Brown, 54, said he planned to turn himself in today on the warrants issued Monday.

The two-time Grammy winner was charged with assault with intent to murder and aggravated assault and battery, said Aiken County Magistrate Al Bradley. The charges stemmed from two incidents at Brown's home in this town southeast of Augusta, Ga., said county Sheriff Carroll Heath.

The singer's third wife, Adrienne Brown, 38, was treated for bruises at University Hospital in Augusta on Monday evening and released, the hospital said.

Brown said the argument began because he was leaving for a South American tour Thursday and Mrs. Brown was upset because she would not be going.

NEW YORK (AP) — Movie star Kevin Bacon plans to marry blue-blooded actress Kyra Minturn Sedgwick in September, says a spokesman for the actor.

Publicist Allen Eichhorn made the announcement Monday.

Miss Sedgwick has been rehearsing with Jason Robards and Colleen Dewhurst in a production of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!" opening today in New Haven, Conn.

Bacon's screen credits include "Footloose," "Quicksilver" and the recent films "She's Having a Baby" and "End of the Line." He has also appeared on stage and television.

Miss Sedgwick is the daughter of Patricia Heller of New York, an educational and family therapist, and Henry D. Sedgwick of New York and Stockbridge, Mass., a venture capitalist. Her great-grandfather, Endicott Peabody, founded the Groton School.

Bacon's father, Edmund, is former director of the Philadelphia City Planning Commission. His mother, Ruth, teaches preschool children.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Talib-Rasul Hakim, a composer and music educator, died Saturday. He was 48.

Hakim trained in piano, clarinet and composition at the Manhattan School of Music, and studied at the New School of Social Research, both in New York City. Among his works is "Birmingham Reflections," commissioned by the New Haven Symphony Orchestra to honor the late Martin Luther King Jr. The work premiered in 1986.

He also taught and lectured at a number of colleges, including Hofstra University, Barnard College, and Pace College.

Gabor

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It's taken most of her 68 years, but entertainer-businesswoman Eva Gabor says she has finally learned to live alone without fretting.

"The last five years is the first time I'm not married in my life, and I've found my center — a sense of self-responsibility," said Gabor, who is promoting her upcoming autobiography, to be published by Little-Brown.

Gabor, the younger sister of actress Zsa Zsa Gabor and the former co-star of the television series "Green Acres," has been married five times.

"I enjoy, really enjoy, living alone, which is strange for a lady who was the clinging vine of all times," she said recently. "I became a grown-up being, an idea I always fought, and have discovered that it's better to live alone and be at peace with yourself than to be married and to be under continuous stress."

Besides running her 16-year-old, international wig business and tending her garden at home in Los Angeles, Gabor works for AIDS patients and cancer victims.

"To die with AIDS is to die without dignity," she said. "I've seen it in my hospice work. You are treated like a leper. To me it's worse than cancer, because cancer nurses don't come into your room with masks and gloves."

Minnelli

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — The organizer of an auction for a local ballet school says she's been overwhelmed by donations from more than 100 stars, including a pair of red dancing shoes from Liza Minnelli and a compact mirror from Ginger Rogers.

"Things are still coming in," Ellen Ricciardi, director of the auction to benefit the Central Wisconsin School of Ballet, said Monday. "I have been totally surpised...It's neat for little Wausau to get items like that."

Proceeds from the auction scheduled April 23 will help pay for educational programs and performances, Mrs. Ricciardi told The Wausau Daily Herald. Between 100 and 200 students from preschool through high school attend the school in this central Wisconsin city, she said.

She said other items include a signed copy of a "M-A-S-H"television script from star Alan Alda and a pewter mug from actor Paul Newman.

Nicaraguan truce start toward peace

The spirit of conciliation, born of necessity, that resulted the other day in a cease-fire accord between Nicaraguan rebels and the Sandinista government has spread to Washington, it seems. Last week, Democrats and Republicans in Congress set aside their own deep differences and approved a $47.9 million aid package for the Contras and for children injured in Nicaragua's civil war. The action was important; the aid is needed.

The measure would keep the rebels intact as a fighting force while they wait in cease-fire zones inside Nicaragua for a long-term truce to be worked out with the Sandinista government. It is confined to assistance for food, clothing, medical services and shelter, in accordance with the cease-fire agreement. Renewed military aid, according to an agreement between the White House and congressional leaders, will be considered only if the Sandinistas violate the 60-day truce.

This legislation, which met with the reluctant approval of the White House, could be the first step in the development of a truly bipartisan policy toward Nicaragua. We honestly hope that develops. Humanitarian aid for the Contras could be part of such a policy. It gives the Sandinista government further incentive to make the political changes that true national reconciliation requires. It keeps the Contras from becoming a political and economic burden on neighboring Honduras, where they have been camped while trying to dislodge the Sandinistas.

Aid to the Contras, however, is only a small component in what could be a long-range, bipartisan package — a package designed to spell out and protect U.S. security interests while encouraging peace, stability and democracy in Nicaragua. Such a package would involve immediate economic aid for the region. Nicaragua would become eligible for the aid as the Sandinistas began to implement political reforms negotiated with the Contras and with the internal opposition.

The time may be right. According to a recent New York Times report, Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega has made several public pleas recently for American economic help and a diplomatic thaw. He recognizes that the United States could be the country to provide the levels of aid that Nicaragua needs to revive its ruined economy.

His need gives the United States leverage, which we should use wisely. We should insist, for example, that the Sandinistas make good on their offer to negotiate the removal of all foreign military advisers and a formal commitment to keep all foreign military bases out of Nicaragua.

The United States also should recognize that helping relieve economic stress — in Nicaragua and in the region as a whole — nourishes democracy and, in the long run, enhances hemispheric security. Perhaps with such assistance, this country truly can help foster peace in Nicaragua.

Fraud's as simple as birth certificate

WASHINGTON — This is a safe country to play the imposter. For career criminals and illegal aliens, bogus birth certificates are about as tough to come by as baseball cards.

Jack Anderson

Getting caught is the exception. A case in point is that of the young cemetery caretaker in Massachusetts who hatched a plot while reading tombstones. He asked a local registrar for a copy of the birth certificate of a baby who had died several years earlier. Then he tried to open a bank account using the identity of the long-deceased baby. The stunned bank teller blew his cover. She was the mother of the baby.

Birth certificate fraud is so easy that often, such a macabre coincidence is all the con artist need fear. Once a false certificate is obtained through lying, theft or counterfeiting, the other tools of deceit follow — false Social Security numbers, driver's licenses and passports.

Career criminals build false identities atop bogus birth certificates to engage in drug smuggling, insurance fraud, bad-check writing, Social Security rip-offs and other creative enterprises. Illegal aliens use them to obtain citizenship.

The fake or borrowed birth certificate is the hub on which the other fake identities spin. In some states, anyone can walk into a records office and get copies of someone else's birth certificate. Other states deliver copies by mail without an application or a signature.

Our associate Jim Lynch obtained a March report from the inspector general's office of the Department of Health and Human Services that highlights examples of identity fraud, which cost society an estimated $30 billion a year.

— One legally blind man created 38 fake identities and pocketed more than $140,000 in Social Security benefits before being jailed. He escaped in 1985 and went right back to work building three new identities, which he used to collect another $1,300 in Social Security disability payments before being returned to his California jail cell in 1986.

— A Social Security Administration employee invented 25 fictitious beneficiaries over 10 years. She merely photocopied birth certificates from the files of real beneficiaries, blotted out the names, typed in fake names and then made a fresh photocopy to open a new file for the fake beneficiary. She swindled $360,000 from the government before her simple con was stopped.

— A counterfeiter in a Southwest city recently sold birth certificates for $40 to $50 each to a trafficker in false IDs who resold them for as much as $1,500 each.

The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 brought even more incentive for birth certificate fraud. Employers are now required to check the citizenship of their workers, so fake birth certificates will become more valuable than ever. And it appears the U.S. government is ill equipped to control the coming flood of phony birth certificates.

The ease of falsifying or doctoring birth certificates also fuels some little white lies that the perpetrator might not think of as crime. Parents have changed their kids' birth dates to make them eligible for Little League. Adults have dabbled in "vanity fraud" by fudging the dates on their birth certificates.

An estimated 10,000 different birth certificate seals, signatures or forms are used nationwide, making it almost impossible for employers to pick out a fake, according the Health and Human Services investigators.

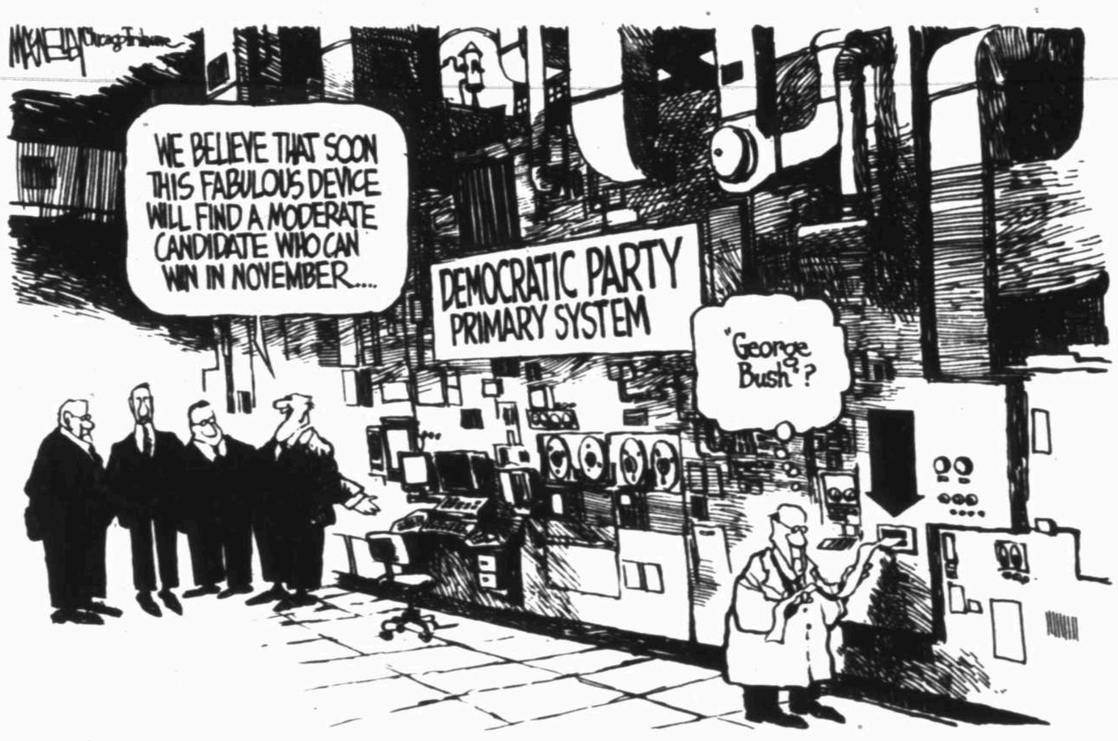

Data on birth certificate fraud is limited. One-third of the record-keeping offices that investigators looked into could not say how many cases of fraud came to their attention last year. The investigators also found out that prosecutors are reluctant to go after con artists unless big money is at stake. The small-time culprit is often busted only by chance.

The investigators recommend better cooperation between state and local agencies. For example, they pointed out that the state often doesn't pass along death records to the rural registrars who hold the birth certificates.

MINI-EDITORIAL — If there's one thing about the Chinese we like better than Peking duck, it's their attitude about age. A dramatic illustration occurred recently in the National People's Congress when a delegate rose to call for the resignation of a scientist who wanted to be re-elected as head of an education and health committee. The scientist was 89 years old and "should be given more time to rest," said the delegate. It was time, he said, for the younger generation to show off its talents. The protestor who wanted his day in the sun was 65 years old.

'Unthinkable' candidate may better Dukakis

SHEBOYGAN, Wis. — The sea of white faces that greeted the Rev. Jesse Jackson here at noon testified not only to his serious challenge in today's primary but the reality that his nomination may no longer be unthinkable.

More than 2,500 — a throng unprecedented for Sheboygan — waited patiently in the Armory for a typically hour-late Jackson and then cheered him lustily. They were neither black nor the socially upscale white leftists that have comprised his constituency until now. Indeed, local Democratic politicians on hand spotted few party activists and a good many Republicans.

But how many who came out of curiosity will actually vote for Jackson? Upon that unanswerable question hinges Jackson's chances to best Gov. Michael Dukakis in this 95 percent white state. Not since John F. Kennedy defeated Hubert H. Humphrey 28 years ago have Wisconsin stakes been so high. If Jackson can win his first real primary outside the South, panic among establishment Democrats will rise another notch; if not, the scare is over.

What is remarkable about Wisconsin is not only Jackson's rank-and-file white support but lack of panic among Democratic stalwarts. The composite view given us by state and local party chieftains amounts to thinking the unthinkable: Yes, Jesse may be our nominee; no, even though he will lose in November, he won't ruin the Democratic Party and could play John the Baptist preceding an electable black.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Non-panic is bad news for Dukakis. While he won't go near Jackson-baiting, his backers here plead with Democratic activists to save the party. He is the only alternative. Madison liberals who wanted Sen. Paul Simon have given up. Sen. Albert Gore Jr., the new prince of panderers, has not made much impact calling for higher milk price supports.

That Dukakis is having trouble winning the state in a two-man race testifies to his shortcomings as a candidate. Democratic State Chairman Suellen Albrecht, who is neutral, urged Dukakis to "punch up" his rhetoric. That's what he did in a recast campaign speech at Milwaukee's Serb Hall, which tried to close the "passion gap" by assailing President Reagan — following advice in Boston strategy meetings following his Michigan caucus defeat. But he remained passionless and still refused to confront Jackson on the issues.

At the post-Michigan meeting, Dukakis protested he could not suddenly become somebody else. In truth, he flops when he tries. His attempts at Waukesha North High School to mimic Jackson's drug dialogue were laughable. Invoking Jack Kennedy and 1960 rang false for those who remember the young senator teasing high school audiences, and the governor anesthetized students by asserting his managerial credentials.

Dukakis must contend with Jackson excitement at a level not seen here since the 1960s. Nobody in Sheboygan can remember any candidate drawing an audience of this size for Jackson's hastily-arranged rally. (A crowd double that size heard him in Oshkosh later that day.) Kept waiting for nearly an hour, they were given 50 minutes of Jackson oratory followed by a 15-minute encore leading white children in his "I am somebody" chorus.

This was not radical chic. His audience was not chic; coats and ties were as rare as blacks. Nor is Jackson's basic campaign speech radical to the ear. Emphasis on drug enforcement and a "stronger" America and abandonment of Third World mumbo jumbo makes him sound less liberal than Dukakis.

But a faulty sound system, combined with Jackson's unfamiliar accent, made it hard for listeners to catch every word. Like a black Baptist congregation, they reacted — enthusiastically and on cue — less to content than to rhythm.

Why? Scarcely because of economic deprivation, considering unemployment is under 4 percent in the Sheboygan area (which contains the big Kohler plant). The support almost surely is not ideological. Wayne Soeteber, a former school superintendent, told us he would vote for Jackson "because he cares about people."

The phenomenon evokes suspicions of self-satisfied tolerance by whites supporting a black for president. But County Democratic Chairman Nancy Simenz, who a few days before the rally endorsed Dukakis, thinks it runs deeper. "I think he (Jackson) makes people feel better about themselves," she told us, "something like Reagan. I'll bet a lot of people who came voted for Reagan."

Unlike curious voters who packed Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's 1980 Iowa events and expressed outrage over this candidacy, Jackson's high-spirited crowds are friendly. Simenz guesses that half those present will vote for Jackson. If she's right, Mike Dukakis better keep the celebratory champagne bottled up.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Sand gnats bad, but some things are worse

I've always believed that every living thing, no matter how large or how small, or how simple or how complex, has a role to play in the Great Scheme.

Grizzard

Let us take, for example, the simple sand gnat, known non-affectionately in the coastal South as "no-see-'ums."

These little boogers can drive you crazy while you are trying to play golf or tennis or fish or go on a picnic.

They get in your hair, they get all over your face and they bite.

Now, however, comes the news that a soon-to-be-published research paper will explain how to control sand gnats without harming the delicate salt marshes where they are hatched.

The study was done by Dr. Daniel V. Hagan, a biology professor at Georgia Southern College.

"Now that we know how they operate," says John Carter, head of environmental services for Georgia's coastal Glynn County, "we want to go get them."

If the sand gnat can be controlled, experts say, the economies of coastal areas worldwide could be improved. No sand gnats, more tourists and more money.

But there is another angle here, especially when it comes to coastal areas in the South.

These areas are attracting more and more Northerners (a.k.a. "snow birds"). Many of these individuals who come from places where it gets very cold not only visit the coastal South, but also wind up buying condominiums and staying there.

I don't blame anybody who wants to get out of, say, New Jersey. However, when Northerners invade a place, they can be about as much of a problem as sand gnats.

For example:

1. Northerners do not understand the proper attire to wear in beach areas. They wear over-the-calf black socks with their sandals and shorts. The last person to be fashionable in a pair of sandals was Jesus.

2. Northerners tend to drive large cars like Cadillacs and Lincolns at 11 mph around beach resorts so they won't pass by reptile farms, wax museums, those places where they sell ceramic chickens and ducks and other such locations that prey on the Yankee tourist dollar.

3. Get too many Northerners around and pretty soon Southerners might be saying, "I think I'll have a bottle of pop," instead of "I think I'll have a Co-Coler," as God intended.

4. All a Yankee needs to play golf is his wife. The only thing that moves slower than a mixed couple on a golf course is winter in Chicago.

5. The more Northerners you have around, the more you have to hear, "Let me tell you how we used to do it in Buffalo."

My point here is that we've got just about enough snow bird transplants as it is, and if we get rid of the sand gnat, there might not be anybody left in New Jersey.

They will all be on Southern beaches, golf courses and highways.

I saw a man wearing a T-shirt on St. Simon Island off Glynn County last summer that said it perfectly.

"Keep Yankee tourists to a minimum," read the T-shirt. "Protect the sand gnat."

Something treasonous

While the Sandinista Communists invade Honduras in an effort to crush the resistance, what concerns our fearless leaders in Congress? You guessed it. They are after the real enemies of freedom, Oliver North and John Poindexter.

Patriots like North and Poindexter are no match for pros like Jim Wright and Associates when it comes to the war of words or the use of illegitimate power. While they risk their lives trying to preserve our Republic, Congress passes amendments which would imprison them for doing so.

Isn't it comforting to know that pillars of moral fortitude like Stockyards Wright and Chappaquiddick Kennedy are defending our shores? Why just think what might have happened if they hadn't stopped old Ollie North. The Contras might actually force Danny Ortega and his Soviet friends out of Central America. Thank you, Jim and Teddy.

Our forefathers must be spinning in their graves if they can witness this Kangaroo Court where the brave are accused and fools act as judge and jury. This is truly a case of treason, but the wrong men are on trial.

WPT the bank culprit

Isn't it wonderful that the First RepublicBank is receiving a federal bailout? I am sure the federal government would help any of us if our businesses were in trouble.

Come to think of it, maybe First Republic and all the other monetary institutions in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana that are in such dire straits wouldn't need a federal bailout if the so-called Windfall Profits Tax (which the Wall Street Journal named the Bentsen Tax in honor of our Senator Lloyd Bentsen) had not been passed.

Teen-age suicide is 'sin'

I read in the Odessa American of the "Deadly Practice" dealing with "teen-age suicides" but that hardly is what it is called, and also of three teen-age suicides in Midland.

It is being watered down to "self destruction" a "disease called sickness" but God calls it "sin."

And when our doctors, news media, psychiatrists, and, sad to say, many of our ministers of the Gospel call it what it is, and what the end of these young people and older ones are, there would be less and not more and more of this kind of killings.

Let us pray for our nation as a whole because most of our young people are not being taught about Christ and how he can change the lives of those who feel there is nothing to live for. Christ died (and rose again) to give us life and that more abundantly. John 10:10.

I am very concerned about why our young people are taking their own lives when Christ can make such a difference in their lives. They will be our leaders of tomorrow, their future could be so bright.

Our beloved nation is fast forgetting God. Sin is on a rampage and God is the only one who can change it and turn our nation around. He has the answer.

Impeached governor faces cloudy future

NATION

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — His governorship gone, his ailing auto dealership sold, Evan Mecham faces a future in which one of the few certainties is his role as defendant in a criminal trial.

But for Arizona, the future looks brighter without the shadow of Mecham's embarrassing impeachment trial hanging over the state, said Rose Mofford, who became governor with Mecham's removal.

"Today we have reached the end of some difficult times in Arizona," Mrs. Mofford, a Democrat, said Monday. "I know the decision made by the Senate today was not reached lightly. It is time to put all that behind us and move forward."

"Today none of us are Republicans, none of us are Democrats," she said. "We are all Arizonans. Let us go forward together as Arizonans."

The impeached first-term Republican was stripped of his office Monday when the Senate convicted him of trying to thwart an investigation of an alleged death threat and misusing the governor's protocol fund.

The end of the trial did not heal the divisions that arose during Mecham's turbulent 15 months in office. Predictably, the verdict was praised by Mecham opponents and condemned by supporters.

Some legislators received police protection Monday night after getting threatening phone calls that were prompted by the vote, said Department of Public Safety spokesman Allan Schmidt.

"They've been all types of intimidating-type threatening statements ranging from voter response to the ultimate," Schmidt said.

Mecham's future troubles could include a maximum 22-year prison sentence if he is convicted on charges of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

He faces trial April 21 in Maricopa County Superior Court on six felony counts of fraud, perjury and filing false documents. His brother Willard, who was his 1986 campaign treasurer, faces three similar counts.

The Senate threw out an impeachment count based on the $350,000 loan issue.

Although the Senate did not bar Mecham from holding public office again, his lawyer, Jerris Leonard, indicated after the impeachment vote that Mecham may decide to bow out of politics.

"I think there is doubt," he said of whether Mecham would try to appeal his case to voters in a recall election May 17.

It was not clear whether the ousted governor could remain on the recall ballot given him impeachment conviction. The matter probably will be decided by the courts, said Attorney General Bob Corbin.

Leonard said, "I think the decision of where we go from now is dependent on whether or not the governor himself wants to stay in politics and that's something that he's got to decide overnight."

After Monday's conviction, Mecham left the Senate chamber smiling. Asked what he planned next, he said, "We'll decide tomorrow or the next day...We're keeping all our options open."

After he was impeached by the House of Representatives on Feb. 5, the 63-year-old Mecham hinted he might give up politics. "If I can be of service, fine," he said. "If not, I'd enjoy private life."

Mecham refused to take advice, build support

An Analysis

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Gov. Evan Mecham was removed from office by the Legislature because he was too loyal to some aides and disregarded advice from politicians who could have helped him, both supporters and opponents say.

But some observers were more critical of the first-term governor, who was convicted by the state Senate on Monday.

"Here's a guy who was going to clean up state government because it was too corrupt, and he brings in a whole legion of people who are accused in various sorts of ways of being corrupt, and some are facing trial now," said Democratic Minority Leader Alan Stephens.

Mecham exhibited "a pattern of behavior that is given to deceit as standard operating procedure," added Sen. Greg Lunn.

Still others said the former Republican governor failed to build support, apparently forgetting that he won the governorship with only 40 percent of the vote in a three-way race.

"You've got to understand that here was a man who was elected essentially without the press and without the (Republican) party...What he forgot was that he couldn't survive without them," said former top Mecham aide Sam Steiger, who resigned to face an extortion charge for allegedly trying to influence a Parole Board member's vote.

Even Mecham backers did not agree with his claim that he was a victim of a conspiracy by legislators and others in the GOP establishment, such as Attorney General Bob Corbin.

Mecham insisted on making Max Hawkins, a loyal backer, director of the Department of Administration despite strong opposition from many legislators. Hawkins eventually admitted that he told the governor an alleged death threat by DOA aide Lee Watkins was "a lot of hot air" and would go away.

On Monday, Mecham was convicted of obstructing a state investigation of the alleged death threat, one of two impeachment articles that led to his removal.

Watkins himself was allowed to stay on for a while after allegedly making the threat and after a decades-old youthful robbery conviction came to light.

In addition, Mecham ignored advice from his chief of staff, Jim Colter, who said it would be politically unwise to loan $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund to Mecham Pontiac. On the basis of that loan, Mecham was also convicted Monday of misusing state funds.

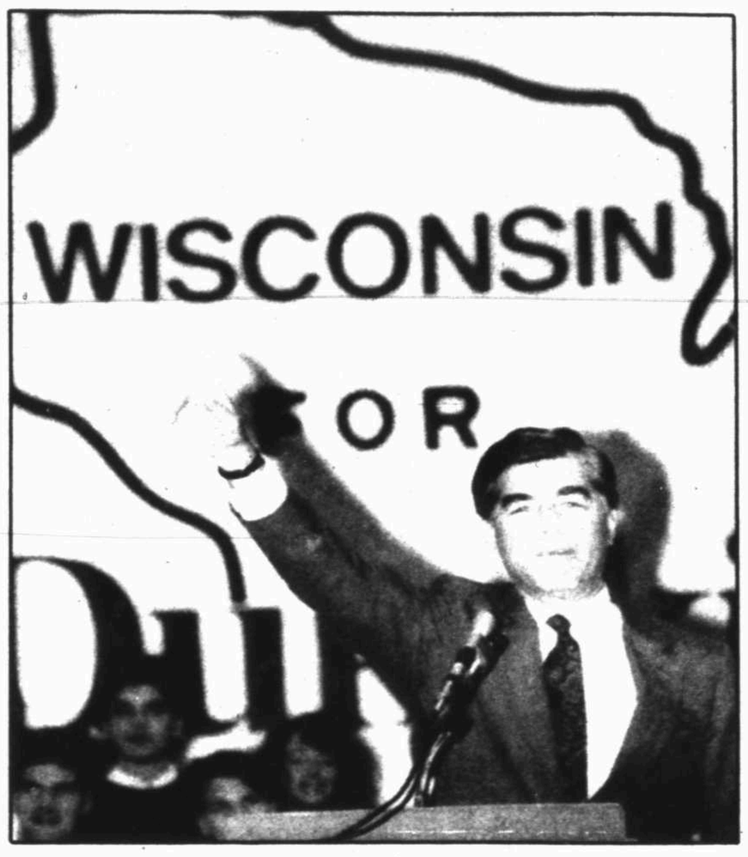

Sen. James Sossaman, a Republican who generally has supported the governor, said he believed Mecham's problems stemmed more from "perception of his inability to make a good chief executive officer for the state of Arizona than...whether he committed any crimes."

Mecham's relations with the media and the Legislature were often stormy, spurred on by his "continual ability to undermine his own credibility by silly or stupid statements," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Usdane, a Republican.

Lunn, also a Republican, cited the governor's claim in Senate testimony — retracted a day later — that the former head of his security detail had stolen a report from Colter's desk.

Former governor and U.S. Sen. Paul Fannin was a member of a group of Arizona "elder statesmen" formed last summer to help Mecham with his troubles. Fannin said he advised the governor to try harder to get along with the media and the Legislature. "But he's very stubborn and determined in his ways."

House Speaker Joe Lane contended, however, that Mecham's relations with the Legislature were really no worse than those of his predecessor, Democrat Bruce Babbitt.

Dukakis, Jackson continue fight today in Wisconsin

Associated Press

Presidential contenders Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson head into battle in today's Wisconsin primary on the heels of a hard-fought and inconclusive contest in Colorado that seemed to mirror their dramatic duel for the Democratic nomination.

Monday night's Colorado caucuses were a see-saw battle that saw first one and then the other gain the upper hand. When the state Democratic party quit counting early this morning, Dukakis had 46 percent to Jackson's 40 percent, with just under half the precincts reporting.

Dukakis had grabbed an early lead Monday night in the Colorado contest. But Jackson quickly caught up and even passed him when Denver results began coming in. Then Dukakis pulled ahead again.

Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore lagged far behind with 4 percent, and Sen. Paul Simon didn't get enough votes to count.

On the Republican side, Vice President George Bush sailed to a strong lead in Colorado's GOP straw polls.

While voters were calling the shots in Wisconsin today, the candidates scattered to regroup for big-state contests coming up in New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio in the next month.

Dukakis sounded upbeat as he awaited the verdict in Wisconsin. "It looks good," he said as he arrived home in Boston Monday night. "We worked hard."

The four Democratic presidential hopefuls campaigned Monday across Wisconsin, with Jackson getting heat from rivals for his contact with Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Dukakis joined the criticism of Jackson. But that didn't stop Gore from saying the Massachusetts governor "gives the impression of being scared to death" to take Jackson.

Dukakis, in turn, icily suggested Gore spend more time campaigning for votes and less time criticizing other candidates.

Although Bush has the GOP nomination wrapped up, former television evangelist Pat Robertson still contested Colorado, with its 36 delegates at stake.

Jackson and Dukakis made weekend campaign swings to Colorado trying to rally support for 2,784 precinct caucuses that began the state's delegate-selection process.

The Democratic front-runners are locked in a close delegate battle nationally, meaning Colorado's 45 national convention delegates were a prize well worth pursuing.

Before Colorado, Dukakis had 671.55 votes and Jackson 665.55. Gore had 381.8 and Simon 170.5. A total of 508.6 were uncommitted. At the Atlanta convention in July, 2,082 votes are needed to win.

Today's Wisconsin primary was the week's big prize.

Meese has trouble filling Justice Department jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III is having trouble rebuilding the top echelon of the Justice Department after two top aides resigned in protest, with one planned replacement blocked by the White House and the second openly saying he may not take the job.

James I.K. Knapp, Meese's choice to succeed William Weld as the assistant attorney general in charge of criminal prosecutions, is no longer being considered, a Justice Department source speaking on condition of anonymity said Monday. Knapp, 45, is a deputy assistant attorney general in the department's tax division.

Meese had planned to announce Knapp as his choice to succeed Weld last Friday, Justice Department sources said. But the White House held up Meese's plan, pending completion of FBI background checks on his choices

Department sources on Monday declined to specify why Knapp's name was being withdrawn.

Meanwhile, Arlin Adams, a Philadelphia lawyer who had been the attorney general's choice to fill the Justice Department's No. 2 post, says he told Meese on Monday that he is "not optimistic" that he will be able to take the job.

In an interview, Adams said colleagues at his law firm "take a very dim view of my leaving at this time" because he is handling an extensive caseload in Philadelphia, including a major antitrust case, and "I don't want to leave the firm in the lurch."

Adams, who would succeed Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns, pointed out that he resumed private practice just last year after stepping down from the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"I've not made a decision, but I'm not optimistic and I told the attorney general that today," said Adams.

National survey shows computer competence low among students

NEW YORK (AP) — Most U.S. students remain computer illiterates and few schools use computers effectively to teach basics despite a much-heralded "classroom computer revolution," according to a survey released today.

The study of 24,000 third-, seventh- and 11th graders found that access to computers is too limited at school and at home, school curricula haven't changed to make effective use of computers and teachers are inadequately trained.

"Computer Competence: The First National Assessment," by the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP), also found that white students scored 5 percent to 8 percent higher on average than blacks and Hispanics, mainly due to greater access to computers at home and in school.

Marc Tucker, president of the Washington-based National Center on Education and the Economy, called the results disappointing.

"The difference is between knowing a little about the computer, and being able to use it effectively. Few American school children can do the latter," he said.

NAEP is a project established 19 years ago by the U.S. Congress to conduct national surveys of various educational skills. It is administered by the Educational Testing Service in Lawrence Township, N.J.

The testing organization examined grade schoolers across the country during the spring of 1986. It used multiple choice questions to test student knowledge about computers and to gather information about their feelings toward computers.

The study found that most third graders could identify the main parts of a computer, such as the keyboard, floppy disk and joystick. By seventh grade, nearly all could.

Health Enhancement.

What is it?

As practiced by Dr. E.W. McCullough, health enhancement is a lifestyle program based upon his commitment to improving his patients' general health by using treatments above and beyond the customary. Some of these measures are designed to improve the body's immune system. These include:

1) Emotional control — a positive attitude and avoiding worry.
2) Diet — high fiber, low carbohydrate, low fat.
3) Positive lifestyle — avoiding alcohol, tobacco, coffee, drugs; engage in exercise and relaxation programs.
4) Immuno-modulators — that stimulate different immune functions.
5) Immune analysis — to correct defects.
6) Mineral and vitamin analysis — to correct defects or deficiencies.

Have you considered health enhancement?

Dr. E. W. McCullough works closely with his patients, explaining in detail their program for recovery. If you are concerned about your health, you are invited to consult with Dr. McCullough.

Administration weighs possibility of talks with Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-ranking State Department official will travel to Central America soon for consultations about the possibility of regional security talks in which the United States and Nicaragua would take part, according to administration sources.

U.S. special envoy for Central America Morris Busby will discuss the "timing and appropriateness" of such discussions when he visits Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras later this week, the officials said.

The Reagan administration has avoided participating in any negotiating forum with Nicaraguan authorities since early 1985 when it called off a six-month effort to ease differences through direct talks.

At the time, the administration accused the Sandinista government of intransigence and encouraged the Nicaraguans to engage in good-faith negotiations in a regional peace process then under way.

The administration stuck by that position until last November, when President Reagan indicated a new flexibility. He said Secretary of State George P. Shultz would be ready to meet with delegations from Nicaragua and other Central American countries once serious negotiations between the Sandinistas and the Contra rebels were under way.

That condition appears to have been satisfied by the temporary cease-fire agreement reached March 23 between the two sides.

The Sandinista government, meanwhile, has called repeatedly for a resumption of direct U.S.-Nicaraguan negotiations. Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto wrote last week that the United States "should open bilateral negotiations with Nicaragua to deal with security issues and to normalize relations between our countries."

The U.S. officials, insisting on anonymity, said they do not believe that arrangements for regional negotiations will be completed by the conclusion of Busby's visit.

One official said the administration wants to proceed slowly on this issue in order not to undercut the direct negotiations the Sandinistas and the Contras have planned for next week in Managua.

"We don't want to create a competing forum," the official said. In their Managua talks, the warring parties will attempt to work out a final settlement to the Nicaraguan conflict.

According to the officials, Busby will compare notes with Central American officials on the new situation created by the temporary truce in Nicaragua. A principal U.S. concern outside the fate of the Contras is the situation in El Salvador, where leftist rebels are planning a major escalation in their war against the U.S.-backed government.

U.S. helped Honduran general get light sentence, witness says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials helped a Honduran general involved in a drug-financed plot to assassinate that country's president get a lighter sentence, a former U.S. ambassador says.

Francis McNeil, former U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica, told a Senate subcommittee Monday that top U.S. officials interceded on behalf of Honduran Gen. Jose Bueso Rosa because he had helped the administration's program of aiding the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Among those who interceded on Bueso Rosa's behalf was Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, the administration's top official in charge of inter-American affairs and a prime architect of the Contra policy, McNeil said.

McNeil said Bueso Rosa was charged in the United States with taking part in a plot, financed by drug trafficking profits, to assassinate Honduran President Roberto Suazo in 1984.

Two others involved in the unsuccessful plot received long sentences, but Bueso Rosa got off with a five-year term after the U.S. officials interceded for him, said McNeil.

At least one reason for the intervention was the general's "past usefulness to the Contra program," he said.

The Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee also heard testimony Monday that Panamanian military ruler Manuel Antonio Noriega probably has evidence of U.S. officials' complicity in Central American drug trafficking and is using it to buy time.

Jose I. Blandon, a former intelligence official and consul general for Panama who defected last year, produced a document Noriega sent to the country's U.S. diplomatic offices in February saying he has proof that American officials knowingly established policies that supported people involved in the drug business.

"General Noriega says he has proof of the involvement of (U.S.) government authorities in drugs in Central America," Blandon said in Spanish through an interpreter at the hearing of the subcommittee on narcotics. Blandon mentioned trafficking in Panama, Guatemala and Costa Rica.

Asked by the subcommittee chairman, Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., whether he believes Noriega actually has such proof, Blandon answered, "Yes."

Later, Kerry said he, too, believes that Noriega has potentially embarrassing information about U.S. officials and is using it to try to maintain himself in power in Panama.

Kerry said he did not pursue the matter more extensively in the public hearing because he is still awaiting corroboration of that and other information about alleged use of airstrips used to resupply the U.S.-backed Contra rebels in Nicaragua to handle drug shipments as well.

"It's significant enough that it's going to create a stir," Kerry said, noting that the information involves an Israeli citizen, Michael Harare, who used airstrips in the region to help resupply the Contras.

While Congress is in recess, Kerry scheduled a full week of hearings on U.S. anti-drug efforts in Central America.

Blandon had testified at an earlier hearing before the narcotics subcommittee about the extent to which Noriega had allowed Panama to be taken over by drug interests from Colombia's Medellin cartel.

Marcos awaiting talks for return to Philippines

HONOLULU (AP) — Ferdinand Marcos said Monday he was awaiting a representative from President Corazon Aquino's government to begin negotiating his return to the Philippines, but an official here denied Aquino had authorized talks.

"I am waiting for the procedure to be completely charted," said Marcos, who was deposed as Philippine president more than two years ago. "I am waiting for whomever they send to see me."

Marcos said he had received word from supporters in his homeland that an Aquino representative was en route to Honolulu. He declined to identify the supporters or name the government representative.

"In fact, I was expecting someone today," Marcos said.

"He may have to wait forever," said Tomas Gomez, the Philippine consul general in Hawaii. "The word I get from the president (Aquino) is that there are no negotiations."

Marcos has said he needs to return the Philippines for health reasons, especially old war wounds acting up.

Mrs. Meese to undergo questioning about job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese's wife, Ursula, will undergo questioning shortly in the criminal investigation of her husband about her own $40,000-a-year job, say sources familiar with the case.

The office of independent counsel James McKay is trying to determine whether longtime Meese friend E. Robert Wallach in effect helped supplement the Meeses' income by recommending Mrs. Meese for jobs, said sources familiar with the probe, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Mrs. Meese has retained the same Washington law firm representing her husband, said James Rocap, one of Meese's lawyers. She will either make a federal grand jury appearance or be questioned by investigators from McKay's office.

McKay said last week that his investigation of Meese, also encompassing an examination of the circumstances surrounding Mrs. Meese's job, would continue at least until the end of April.

McKay last month subpoenaed records relating to Mrs. Meese's post with the Washington chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society, said a lawyer for the chapter, James Bierbower.

Second judgeship formed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lawmakers agreed to support a second Superior Court judgeship for racially tense Robeson County, eliminating the need for a special legislative session sought by supporters of a slain Indian judicial candidate.

Monday's agreement came during a three-hour meeting in Lumberton between Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, Robeson County legislators and members of the campaign committee of Julian Pierce, who was killed March 26 in what police called a domestic dispute.

If approved by the General Assembly in its June session, Republican Gov. Jim Martin could appoint a new Superior Court judge from Robeson County.

Martin said he supported the agreement and pledged he would appoint a minority, and probably an Indian.

Pierce's supporters had pressured the governor to call a special legislative session to amend state law to allow another minority candidate to run for the present judgeship. Filing for the judgeship closed in February, and state law does not allow a replacement for a candidate who dies more than 30 days after the filing period ends.

Jackson's talks rebuked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jesse Jackson pulled off diplomatic coups in the past during visits to Cuba and Syria but the Reagan administration takes a dim view of his contacts with Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Following Jackson's disclosure that he had sent a letter to Noriega two weeks ago asking him to resign, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said Monday that such communications could prolong Noriega's grip on power.

"The proliferation of channels is a tactic Noriega uses to buy time," Ms. Oakley said. "We have available channels of communication with Noriega if and when they are needed. We think it would be best to continue to use these channels exclusively."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, traveling with President Reagan in California, also criticized the Democratic presidential candidate's involvement in Panama. "We have a bipartisan coordinated plan for dealing with Noriega," he said. "That's why it's important to Congress and the public, and we believe it's been working."

Jackson has dealt successfully in the past with other U.S. adversaries. In 1984, he traveled to Cuba and persuaded President Fidel Castro to release 26 political prisoners.

Household size shrinks

WASHINGTON (AP) — American households have shrunk to their smallest size ever, containing just half as many people as at the start of the Civil War.

The Census Bureau reports that the average household contained 2.64 people as of last July 1, continuing a long-term decline. By comparison, the 1860 census found an average household of 5.28 people.

While the household size has declined, the number of households has continued to climb, topping 90 million for the first time in 1987, the bureau said Monday.

Household size is shrinking because the number of households is increasing faster than the overall population. This is occurring, said bureau population expert Campbell Gibson, because of changes in the country's age structure.

The many Americans born in the post-World War II baby boom are now in their 20s and 30s, when they are most likely to set up households on their own, he said.

Brothers granted delay

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two brothers convicted of obstructing a congressional investigation of the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp. have been granted a two-week delay in reporting to prison.

Clarence M. Mitchell III and Michael B. Mitchell, both former state senators, were to have reported today to the Allenwood Federal Correctional Camp in Pennsylvania to begin serving their 2½-year sentences.

U.S. District Judge Norman P. Ramsay on Monday also sentenced Clarence Mitchell to two more years to be served after his Wedtech term for trying to block a federal investigation of a suspected drug kingpin. Mitchell was fined $10,000.

Michael Mitchell requested a postponement in the surrender date so he could finish distributing some 20 cases from his law practice to other lawyers.

Clarence Mitchell asked for the delay until April 19 to allow him to finish placing clients from his consulting business with other consultants and so he and his wife could complete adoption of their 3-month-old daughter.

Midland firefighters huddle near the scene of a smoky fire at 204 E. Dormard Ave., above, Monday afternoon. No injuries were reported in the 4 p.m. blaze, which forced Dino Lara and his family from their home. At right, Jamie Lara, 4, is comforted by his father, Dino. The fire, which began in a central bedroom, was extinguished late Monday. But about 2:30 a.m. today, firefighters were called to the scene again when the fire was re-started. Investigators said today they don't know what caused the second fire.

Manager 'stands and delivers' film passes for students

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A Midland theater manager hopes his gift of free movie passes for junior high school dropout risks will inspire the about two dozen kids to stay in school.

Speaking of "Stand and Deliver," a true story based on an East Los Angeles High School, North Park Cinema Manager David Marmolejo said, "When I saw this (movie) I thought it might encourage some kids to stay in school because it shows what people can do if they work hard."

The movie portray's a math teacher — played by Edward James Olmos — whose intense dedication produced a scholastic miracle that clarified math and rattled the student's education.

In the end, 18 inner-city students solidly pass the mind-bending National Advanced Placement Examination for college calculus, which is administered to less than 2 percent of all U.S. students.

The film was written and produced by Tom Musca, directed by Raymond Melendez and distributed by Warner Bros. Pictures. Lou Diamond Phillips of "La Bamba" fame also stars.

Marmolejo said the 20 junior high school students who will receive free movie passes Sunday are enrolled in regular tutoring sessions at Casa de Amigos.

The majority are comprised of Hispanic students, although some black and Anglo children also are invited to attend the showing, he said.

Marmolejo agreed to open the theater to Casa de Amigos when administrators asked for free movie passes if the students earned passing grades and remained in school.

The Casa de Amigos tutoring program focuses primarily on dropout prevention, Director Lael Cordes-Pitts said.

She said the students, who are involved in twice-weekly tutoring sessions, were identified as dropout risks by the Midland Independent School District. Casa personnel visited their homes and later matched the children with mentors.

Although Casa tutors stress academics, the organization also sponsors group activities for the youth from Alamo, San Jacinto and Goddard Junior High Schools.

Ms. Cordes-Pitts hopes the youth in viewing the movie "will see something in it for themselves and that it will give them a challenge.

"We hope it will serve as an inspiration," she said.

Ticketing procedures attacked during trial of Fort Worth officer

FORT WORTH (AP) — As a police officer challenged his firing last year for fixing three traffic tickets for his plumber, Police Chief Thomas Windham acknowledged that he advised his officers against writing citations to off-duty police officers.

Other officers testified tickets often are improperly notarized by police supervisors, setting up a scenario in which tickets could be thrown out.

The revelations came during testimony Monday in an administrative hearing for officer Steve Weaver, who is appealing his dismissal last year.

Weaver has never denied he got the tickets dismissed. He testified he made good on a promise to fix the tickets by lying to court officials and saying he forgot details of the tickets, which then had to be dismissed for lack of evidence.

His lawyers Jim Lane and Robert Hasty attempted to show that Weaver's firing was too harsh by focusing on what their witnesses presented as common abuses regarding traffic tickets.

Testimony about abuses in handling traffic tickets by Fort Worth police have dominated the hearing on Weaver's firing.

Two officers testified Monday that Windham recently advised officers in Fort Worth's East Patrol Division not to issue tickets against fellow officers who are off-duty.

"Chief Windham spoke of supporting fellow officers, the brotherhood, and not issuing tickets to other officers," said Officer Paul Ware, a six-year veteran. "I took it as a policy or an accepted procedure."

Windham confirmed during testimony that he made the remarks. He said an officer who observes an off-duty officer habitually violating traffic laws can report the officer to a supervisor or to the Internal Affairs Division.

The specter of thousands of tickets being rendered invalid surfaced during the testimony of retired Sgt. William D. Roberts. He said he often notarized tickets signed by officers not in his presence — including those whose signatures he did not recognize.

A half-dozen officers testifying for Weaver said they were taught at the police department's training academy to "forget" details of traffic cases in order to get tickets quashed for friends and family members.

Windham — saying he was "absolutely appalled" by the allegations — immediately ordered an investigation by the Internal Affairs Division into the charges.

Investigators seek clues in early morning fire

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland fire investigators today were continuing to search for clues to an early morning East Dormard Avenue house fire which re-started hours after an initial blaze heavily damaged the home.

No injuries were reported in either fire, which destroyed the one-story brick home of Dino Lara and his family, according to reports.

Firefighters were first called to the home just after 4 p.m. Monday, when four units were dispatched to the blaze. The fire started in a center bedroom of the home, but the preliminary cause of the fire was unknown, investigators said.

Two rooms of the home were heavily damaged, and the rest of the structure was damaged by smoke, reports said.

The fire was put out about 90 minutes later, according to reports.

Just after 2:30 a.m. today, firefighters were called back to the home when the blaze re-started. The second fire also started in the central bedroom, according to reports.

The second fire — which took firefighters more than three hours to extinguish — destroyed the home, reports said.

"I hope it was just a re-kindle," Midland Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said of the second blaze. "But it was a long time between the two fires."

Investigators were to return to the home today to try to determine what ignited the two fires, Petree said.

Smith endorses Boulter in GOP runoff

U.S. Rep. Boulter helped lead a fight for a secure oil and gas industry as evidenced in his sponsorship of the National Petroleum Security Act of 1987, an effort led by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm in the Senate, U.S. congressman Lamar Smith said.

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter is easy for Republicans to support for senator because he fights to strengthen a weak national energy industry and reduce governmental spending, Midland's U.S. congressman said Monday.

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, was campaigning Monday with Boulter, an Amarillo Republican, through Smith's hometown, Kerrville and Midland.

The official Smith endorsement now sits beside those of Texas Republican National Committeeman Ernest Angelo and Committeewoman Fran Chiles of Fort Worth.

Boulter faces Houstonian Wes Gilbreath, a political newcomer, in a runoff election next Tuesday that will decide who will attempt an ouster of Lloyd Bentsen, a 17-year Senate veteran.

"Beau practiced what he preached in the House," Smith said during Monday's press conference.

Boulter also is known for being a "watchdog of the treasury and for being for peace through strength," said Smith.

Boulter helped lead a fight for a secure oil and gas industry as evidenced in his sponsorship of the National Petroleum Security Act of 1987, an effort led by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm in the Senate, Smith said.

The act, Boulter explained, gives tax credits to independent oil and gas producers of up to 10 percent on the first $10 million spent on the stimulation of marginal wells.

However, the bill needed the sponsorship of committees including the Senate Finance Committee of which Bentsen is the chair, the candidate said.

The act didn't receive the finance committee's approval and thus highlighted the incorrect perception that Bentsen is a friend of the oil and gas industry, Boulter said.

The Amarillo representative said his Republican runoff opponent, Gilbreath, is either "unwilling or unable to learn and articulate the issues."

Gilbreath gained 36 percent of the statewide vote on Super Tuesday to Boulter's 30 percent.

Boulter called Gilbreath the "billboard king of Houston" because of his extensive outdoor advertising company holdings.

"People weren't voting for a candidate, they were voting for a billboard," Boulter has said.

Gilbreath has sunk more than $500,000 of his own money into his campaign, reports have said, and is willing to spend nearly $1 million.

"Call me a sacrificial lamb if you want to, but I'm willing to sacrifice — and my family is also — to do what we can to see that our future is insured more than it has been in the last few years," Gilbreath said last week at a Midland news conference.

Boulter said Gilbreath has had 11 campaign donors who have contributed a total of $22,000 to his campaign; while he has had more than 1,300 campaign donors who've anted up more than $200,000.

A voter turnout of "informed" people will garner a Boulter victory, the candidate claimed.

The Amarillo representative wants to win the seat from Bentsen so that a Republican-controlled Senate will be waiting when, Boulter asserted, Vice President George Bush wins the presidency in November.

Defense firms decline to back veterans' memorial, group says

DALLAS (AP) — Most major defense contractors have declined to donate money to build a memorial for Texans who died in Vietnam and other wars, organizers of the fund raising drive say.

The largest corporate donation from a major defense contractor has been $50,000 from General Dynamics, which has a military aircraft manufacturing facility in Fort Worth, Paul Russell, president of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund of Texas and of Milton B. Levy & Son Mechanical Contractors, said.

"That's been very disappointing for us," Russell said Monday of the lack of response by other defense contractors.

The veterans are about $300,000 short of the approximately $1 million in cash and pledges they say they need before construction on the $1.65 million memorial can begin.

The donations must come within the next few months if the memorial is to be finished in time for a planned dedication on Nov. 11, Veterans Day, Russell said.

In addition to what the veterans believe to be a lack of support from defense contractors, Russell said, Texas' economic downturn has taken a toll on recent donations, requiring fund-raisers to cut their operating budget 75 percent.

The response from Texas defense contractors has been particularly rankling to the veterans group, he said.

"It's been a real kick in the teeth to us. We're trying to show there ought to be some responsible action on the part of defense companies," said B.G. Burkett, treasurer of the memorial fund and a senior vice president of the Dallas brokerage and investment banking firm of Schneider Bernet Hickman.

The veterans are especially critical of Bell Helicopter in Fort Worth, a unit of Rhode Island-based Textron, which manufactured most of the helicopters used in Vietnam.

"Particularly disappointing is the total rejection from Bell Helicopter," Art Ruff, president of Dallas-based Vantage Development Co. and a member of the fund's board of directors, said. "Their (Bell's) Huey chopper is the most enduring symbol of the war, yet they've failed to donate to our fund."

Ruff said he got a rejection letter from the Textron Charitable Trust in Rhode Island.

Bell spokesman Carl Harris said Textron decided several years ago to contribute funds to the national memorial in Washington, D.C., rather than giving to state memorials.

Textron executive Raymond Caine, chairman of a committee that approves corporate donations, said the committee gave $1,500 to the national memorial in 1982.

Retired Army Maj. Gen. Alexander Bolling , 64, who commanded the 82nd Airborne Division in Vietnam, said his appeals to area defense companies were unsuccessful.

Besides Bell, Rockwell International, Varo and Texas Instruments declined to contribute, Bolling said. Houston-based Brown & Root, a primary contractor for the port at Cam Ranh Bay, also declined, Bolling said.

Rockwell is directing its donations toward educational and medical research efforts, said Ed Casteel, the company's director of government relations.

TI's charitable foundation decided not to fund the project for similar reasons, said spokesman Stan Victor.

The veterans group asked for $25,000 from LTV Corp., a major aerospace and defense contractor. The fund received $1,000.

Another large Dallas defense contractor, E-Systems, which among other products made the PRC-25 radios used in Vietnam, donated $3,000, Bolling said.

The fund also received $5,000 from Electrospace Systems in Dallas, he said. Electrospace Systems is now a Chrysler Corp. subsidiary.

Garland-based Varo, a manufacturer of night vision equipment and missile launcher systems, among other products, does not disclose its contributions to charities, said Kevin McAleer, Varo senior vice president.

Brown & Root, a subsidiary of Dallas-based Halliburton Co., had no record of a formal request from the veterans, said spokesman Joe Stevens.

The planned memorial will measure 12,000 square feet and feature four stone tablets inscribed with the names of Texans who died or disappeared in Vietnam. It will be surrounded by a water park reminiscent of a Vietnamese rice paddy.

Jury deliberations continue in trial of 13 white supremacists

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The jurors in a federal case against nine men accused of conspiring to violently overthrow the U.S. government with a goal of establishing an Aryan bastion in the Pacific Northwest resumed deliberations today.

Deliberations began shortly before 3 p.m. Monday and lasted about 2½ hours.

The case involves 13 defendants, nine of whom are charged with seditious conspiracy, or conspiring to overthrow the government. A conviction carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

In addition, five of the defendants are accused of conspiring to kill federal officials and two are charged with interstate transportation of stolen money. The maximum penalty for murder conspiracy is life in prison. The stiffest punishment for transporting stolen money is 10 years.

Five of the defendants are in prison for other crimes.

In addition to Beam, 41, of Houston, the supremacist leaders are Robert E. Miles, 63, of Cohoctah, Mich., and Richard G. Butler, 70, of Hayden Lake, Idaho.

Miles, pastor of the Mountain Church of Jesus Christ, is the author of a newsletter that attacked Jews and the federal government. Butler is the founder of the white supremacist group Aryan Nations.

Beam is a former Ku Klux Klan recruiter who left the Klan in 1981 and became a representative for the Aryan Nations.

The government alleged that the defendants agreed to try to bring down the government by force during an Aryan Nations congress in 1983.

The government contended that some of the defendants went on to commit a series of robberies to finance their activities. The robberies netted about $4.1 million, of which about $1 million is unaccounted for, the government said.

In closing arguments Monday, U.S. Attorney J. Michael Fitzhugh said Butler, Beam and Miles came up with the idea for overthrowing the government.

Fitzhugh said the sedition defendants maintained they hoped to bring about a white supremacist nation through a peaceful move to the Pacific Northwest.

But, he said, if that was the case, why did:

— Defendant David Lane say in a taped conversation that he needed to bomb some major telephone facility?

— Defendant Bruce Pierce become a member of The Order, a violent group that committed armed robberies, by taking an oath declaring a "full state of war"?

— The Covenant, The Sword and The Arm of The Lord — an Arkansas-based supremacist group — collect an arsenal of automatic weapons, silencers, grenades and other explosives and embark on robberies, bombings and murders?

During the trial, the defense attacked the credibility of government witnesses.

But Fitzhugh told jurors, "Plots made in hell don't have angels as partners."

Attorney N.C. Deday LaRene, representing Miles, said in his closing argument Monday that the government's key witness, James Ellison, "had serious delusions." Ellison belonged to the Arkansas group.

LaRene said Ellison made up the story about a conspiracy hatched at Hayden Lake because he lost an appeal of his racketeering conviction and was looking for a way out of prison.

The defense attorney said that in three earlier reports about supremacist activities, Ellison never mentioned that alleged meeting.

Houston officer in good condition after being shot by drug suspect

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston police officer was in good condition today after a narcotics suspect being transported to jail wriggled out of his handcuffs, grabbed a gun and shot him, police said.

Authorities said they believed the Monday night shooting occurred just before the unmarked police car went out of control and collided with a pickup truck on a freeway ramp in west Houston.

Officer Dennis Nelius was shot in the left leg and right hand and taken by Life Flight helicopter to Hermann Hospital where he underwent surgery, a hospital spokesman said today. Police spokesman Dan Turner said two, possibly three, of Nelius' fingers were severed by the bullet.

Officer David Baskin, who was traveling with Nelius, also was taken to Hermann for treatment for shock, Turner said.

"One of the suspects began to struggle. The struggle caused the officer to lose control of the vehicle that he was driving," Turner said. "Both of the suspects then began to struggle. One of the suspects was able to get a hold of one of the officer's pistols and began to fire an undetermined number of shots. Sometime during this is when the officers were involved in an accident."

One of the suspects, Juan Armando Ozuna, 28, escaped briefly but was recaptured at the scene of the 7:50 p.m. shooting, police said.

Ozuna had been charged earlier with delivery of a controlled substance and was being held without bail because he was on probation from a 1984 conviction of indecency with a child. Police said he faces a charge of attempted capital murder of a police officer.

Ozuna was taken to Ben Taub Hospital with injuries suffered in the accident.

A second suspect, Jose Antonio Gallegos, was taken into custody near the scene more than an hour later. He was charged earlier Monday with possession of a controlled substance with bond set at $5,000.

Turner said the officers, both members of the Northwest Taetical Response Unit, bought a large amount of cocaine from the suspects earlier Monday and had taken them first to the northwest station. They were transporting the two suspects to the city jail downtown when the shooting and accident took place.

The driver of the pickup truck that collided with the police car was taken into custody on suspicion of driving while intoxicated.

Turner said investigators were not questioning whether the officers were using proper procedure in transporting the suspects in an unmarked police car.

The proper procedure is to call for a marked car, which has a barrier between the front and back seats.

STATE IN BRIEF

Officials expect surge in heroin trade this year

FORT WORTH (AP) — Federal officials say they expect more heroin traffic in Texas this year, breaking a trend in the opposite direction over the past several years.

"We expect 1988 to be higher than last year because of the increased activity in Mexico," said Bill Deac, a drug enforcement spokesman in Washington.

Mexico growers are substituting heroin production as their cash crop since they are being forced out of the marijuana business by cheaper South American pot and by the Mexican government's field eradications, said Phillip Jordan, head of the Drug Enforcement Administration's North Texas division office in Dallas.

Capt. B. Ray Armand of the Fort Worth Police narcotics division said both the black tar and brown heroin varieties from Mexico have shown up in increasing amounts in Fort Worth.

"One of the concerns that we have is the high purity that street addicts are getting," Jordan said.

AIDS priority, Clements says

AUSTIN (AP) — The battle against AIDS will be a priority issue for the 1989 Texas Legislature, according to Gov. Bill Clements.

"I think the state has the responsibility to dig into this and develop all the various options, work with the federal government and come up with some answers that we're all looking for," Clements said Tuesday after addressing state agency leaders gathered for a conference on AIDS and state government.

In his brief remarks at the meeting, the governor said, "Make no mistake about it. AIDS will impact every facet of our state. It will hit our health care and educational systems, our economy, our politics and even our social structure. We have to be ready for a real fight."

According to the Texas Department of Health, there have been 4,000 reported AIDS cases in the state, with 1,800 fatalities due to the disease that destroys the body's immune system.

Illegal alien arrests up

HOUSTON (AP) — The number of illegal immigrants arrested by U.S. Border Patrol agents in Texas during the first three months of the year is up by more than 8,400 from a year ago and officials blame Mexico's troubled economy for the boost.

Statistics released Monday show agents collared 123,346 illegals through March, up from 114,943 during the same period in 1987.

However, that's far below the record 196,549 arrests made from January to March 1986.

Judge lets ruling stand

AUSTIN (AP) — A state district judge Monday let stand the Texas Democratic Party's finding that Jeanne Meurer is ineligible to run for the 98th District Court bench, but said the statute allowing the party's decision was unconstitutional.

Ms. Meurer's name will remain on the runoff ballots, which have already been prepared, but the ruling means she is not considered a candidate by the party. The party had determined that she is not a Travis County resident and is not eligible to run.

Man expected to be charged with sexual assault of child

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

A 35-year-old man remains in city jail today and is expected to be charged with the sexual assault of a 5-year-old girl, Midland police said.

The man was arrested late Sunday at the Midland County Jail, where he had gone to visit a family member, police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said. Charges of indecency with a child or aggravated sexual assault will be filed against him today, White said.

Just before midnight Saturday, officers were called to an east Midland residence after the girl's grandmother had witnessed the sexual assault and identified the suspect, according to reports.

The girl was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released, according to reports.

Police are also continuing to investigate the case of a 30-year-old man who reported he was sexually assaulted early Saturday.

According to reports, police and paramedics were called to a residence in east Midland after the victim called a fire department dispatcher to report the assault.

The victim told police he had been assaulted by a man he had met at a local nightclub late Friday, reports said.

The suspect in the attack was described only as a black man with a mustache.

The victim was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released, police said.

Aliens granted more time to document their residency

HARLINGEN (AP) — It's only a month until the deadline for illegal aliens to apply for permanent U.S. residency under the amnesty program, but the federal government has granted an extension.

So long as they apply by May 4, they will be allowed up to two more months to produce the necessary documentation and medical examinations needed, said Omer Sewel, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Illegal aliens applying for amnesty must prove they have lived in the United States continuously since before Jan 1, 1982.

Previously, the INS required applicants to document their residency when they filed for amnesty.

Now, all they have to come up with initially is the filing fee and actual application. Then they'll be scheduled for an interview sometime in July or August, at which time documentation must be provided.

Sewel said the extension is part of a nationwide effort to encourage illegal aliens qualifying for amnesty to come forward.

"A number of people have waited until the last minute, and we're hoping this skeletal process will help a number of people here in the Valley," said Charlie Perez, chief legalization officer at the Harlingen amnesty center.

The Harlingen office, which has processed about 23,000 applications, hit its peak of activity last June and July, when about 200 applicants per day were processed, Perez said.

But recently, the application level has begun to approach last summer's peak, and Perez said the office is bracing for a rush of activity, perhaps as many as 300 applicants on some days.

Perez said interviews will begin 60 days after the May 4 deadline and continue at a rate of about 40 a day until all applicants have been processed.

When the amnesty program began, officials expected about 40,000 applications in the Rio Grande Valley and 2 million nationwide.

Officials now expect about 27,000 to seek amnesty in the Valley. About 1.5 million have applied nationwide and that number is expected to grow to 2 million by May 4, Sewell said.

Perez said after the application and fee are filed, applicants will receive a work-authorization receipt that is good until the date of the interview, at which time a work authorization card will be issued.

That card is good for 6 months, the time it takes to process the application. Then, a temporary residence card and social security number are issued.

Shaw orchestra coming to town

From Staff Reports

"Begin the Beguine" with the Artie Shaw Orchestra is scheduled from 8 p.m. to midnight April 14 at the Holiday Inn Convention Center.

The orchestra wil be led by Dick Johnson, hand-picked for leadership by Shaw.

"He's a remarkably talented player on everything — not only clarinet, but soprano, alto and tenor saxes and flute," Shaw says of Johnson.

The great Shaw years ran from 1938, when "Begin the Beguine" launched him as a national figure on records, through the 1940s. For a while he and Benny Goodman were touted by press agents as rivals for the "King of Swing" throne.

Shaw made headlines constantly with his marriages and divorces — Lana Turner, Ava Gardner, Doris Dowling and Evelyn Keyes, among others.

The event is a benefit sponsored by Las Manos for the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum. The $75-per-couple admission covers hors d'oeuvres and the show and dance. A cash bar will be available.

For more information or to obtain an invitation, call the Museum of the Southwest, 683-2882, and ask for Barbara Horn. Seating is limited.

Frontier 'cattle war' to be discussed

From Staff Reports

David Kirkpatrick will discuss excavation of the McSween House, located near Lincoln, N.M., at the monthly meeting of the Midland Archaeological Society, 7:30 p.m. Thursday, at the Blakemore Planetarium, behind the Museum of the Southwest.

The McSween House was the site of one of the bloodiest battles during the three-year-long Lincoln County cattle war. The notorious outlaw, Billy the Kid, was involved in this frontier feud.

Kirkpatrick will give a short history of the conflict, describe the current excavations and offer information for those who want to become involved in the project, which is being directed by Human Systems Research Inc.

The public is invited to attend the meeting.

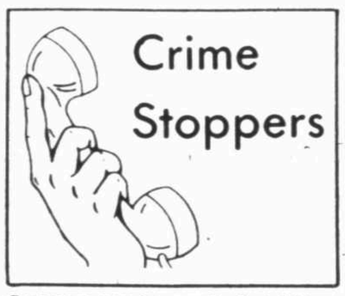

Crime Stoppers seeks help in solving burglary

Odessa Crime Stoppers is asking for the public's help to solve a storage unit burglary which resulted in a loss of property valued at more than $40,000.

On Feb.26, a lock was removed at the storage unit at 2001 E. Sixth St. before the items were stolen. So far, investigators have developed no leads in the case.

Information which leads to an arrest and indictment in the case could be worth up to $1,000 cash this week only.

Callers do not have to reveal their identity. In Midland, Crime Stoppers can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS.

Spring styles are shapely, playful

By ZENIA CLEIGH and PATRICIA DIBSIE
Copley News Service

Shoulders. Legs.

A luscious '50s figure — Gina Lollobrigida, maybe - - with a teeny waist and curves, as they say, in all the right places.

Add the hemlines of the '60s.

Pour into the new short, tight, ruffled, flounced, strapless evening dresses for the spring '88 season, and you've got a shapely, bare look that's so feminine and new it will:

Be the eye of every male at the party.

Send every woman scurrying to the store to update her evening wardrobe.

Sorry. Gone are those heavily beaded gowns of the last several seasons, which weighed their value in bullion. Today's evening dresses are light as a spring breeze and equally as playful.

Beading, where it exists, is confined to trim. Flowers are everywhere — in fabric prints, in chiffon roses at the waist and bosom, in ornaments for ears and hair.

So are dazzling combinations of brilliant tropical colors — bold yellow, apple green, peacock blue, deep fuscia, fiery red — all of them together. Polka dots, stripes, sequins, crinolines and outrageous prints? Nothing is too fluffy or loud.

Let's face it. This silhouette was created by designers to reward all those women who have been working out in the nation's gyms so faithfully for the last five years. The women who began their fitness programs when the layered look was in, and now want to show off their size 8 figures.

As New York designer Morton Myles put it: "The ladies with the no-cake waistlines are getting their just desserts."

This sassy look was pioneered by Christian Lacroix, the darling of the Paris fashion world, who introduced it in his haute couture collections a year ago. This year, Valentino, Ungaro and Paul Louis Orrier interpreted it in their couture shows.

It's what Bill Baum, couture divisional merchandise manager for Neiman Marcus in Dallas, calls a "fashion forward trend," meaning that all the New York designers and creators of less expensive ready-to-wear clothing will be copying it.

ONE PROBLEM: Older women, or those whose fidelity to fitness has not been what it should have been over the years (i.e., most of us), may find themselves hard pressed to squeeze into these cute little numbers, with their ruffles and flounces, shirred bodices and enormous bows at the bosom and fanny.

"Not my style," they may be thinking, deciding the new dresses are more appropriate as prom attire for their daughters than as evening wear for themselves.

Have no fear. Baum says this ultra-feminine look can be adapted easily for the less adventurous woman by adding a bolero jacket in a bright color over the bare shoulders, or hemming those ruffles closer to the knee. Evening dresses are arriving in the stores considerably longer than they are shown on the Paris runways, so this option exists.

Speaking of options: If pouffed skirts will never be "you," there's another way to interpret the season's new look. Go for a slimmer, cleaner line in the skirt, but add to it flounces, peplums, or tiers for an effect that's still in the ornamental spirit of spring but not quite so frivolous.

Go with black and white instead of the flower garden of colors. Pick a gown with a "ballskirt" — a flamenco dancer hemline that unveils the knee in front but swoops to graze the ankle in back, certain to satisfy almost everyone. Or choose a tulip or egg-shaped skirt.

Option No. 3 for women with size 6 figures: You might want to take advantage of the luxurious "mermaid" evening shapes that look like maillots — and are every bit as revealing as a bathing suit.

Now is the time to hold your head high and knock 'em dead. You're always as young as you want to be. Dressing up for evening — and how — is back.

For afternoon dressing this spring, a woman's fancy is turning to the fancy.

In the past, what to wear to afternoon parties, picnics, lawn concerts and engagement parties became, in two words, a dilemma.

Dressy afternoon clothes were simply too difficult to find. For the most part, party splash was something reserved for evenings. This season, however, the designers have listened.

From San Francisco to Paris, and especially on the West Coast, the challenge was cast: Give us something elegant, sophisticated and worthy of partying.

SO, FINALLY, there's no need to wait for the sun to go down before getting all dressed up.

Oscar de la Renta called it "feminine sophistication" when he previewed his spring collection in New York. Some of his dresses offered necklines with extra-large collars to be worn on or off the shoulders.

De la Renta guessed right when he tried to read the mind of the American woman, even though reading a woman's mind turned out to be tricky for most designers this season.

Designers are banking on the woman who's looking for a different approach to afternoon delight — an approach based on a fullness that's gentle.

The consensus is that women want to look appealing, alluring and sexy. Whether you're traveling in the fast lane or just coasting, this is your season to drive the opposite sex wild.

Dresses that seem to be selling the fastest are anything from the outrageous to the conservative — as long as there is an ambience of elegance and sophistication.

The woman who's more the ruffled, off-the-shoulder type can find exactly what she's looking for. She can go with a clingy fabric because she has shaped up and the fabrics have, too. Some are absolutely body-clinging.

The more earthy woman still can have her cotton and wear it, too. The cotton is polished; so is the look. Add some earrings, a scarf, bracelets and a statement piece of jewelry around the neck. The jewelry should say something about your personality. You've got the green light to be more than cautious — try being just a little outrageous.

Skirts for daytime are high-waisted, encircled with black patent belts, just right for the woman who hasn't let the winter go to her waist.

And romance is in as designers turn their attention from the legs to the shoulders — bare shoulders. Add to that a full bosom and small waist — an overall look reminiscent of the 1950s.

The curvaceous woman is about to have her day — again. Skinny is out; even thin is out this season.

A word of caution here. Finding that perfect dress is only half the fashion picture. Polishing the look with the right accessories makes the difference between being fashionable and just being dressed.

Bare your shoulders and go after that dress of your dreams. If the dress is fancy, keep the accessories simple.

Navy and white — both stripes and polka dots — are combined in some designer dresses and have turned out to be some of this year's big favorites. Black is hot, even hotter when teamed with cream. Pastels are cool, unless you're talking floral.

Add some gloves and a wide-brimmed hat, pack a picnic supper of wine and cheese and you're ready to let the sun set on a magnificent day. These provocative dresses are strictly for the woman with confidence; otherwise, they may get you more attention than you bargained for. Go ahead, make your day ... and his.

DEAR ABBY

Diners want their leftovers bagged without much ado

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I both work downtown and live in the suburbs, so we often eat dinner together downtown after work. We are usually served more than we can eat, so we ask for a "doggie" bag to take home the leftovers.

We tried a new place, and when we asked our waiter if we could take our leftovers home, he came back with a pint-sized carton with a little wire handle — the kind you get when you buy ice cream to carry home. We felt embarrassed putting our leftovers, like so much "garbage," into this carton in plain view of everybody. In other restaurants, they transfer your leftovers into a doggie bag in the kitchen and give it to you at the end of the meal.

Please print this so we can mail it to the guilty restaurateur. Thank you. — DINERS

DEAR DINERS: The "guilty restaurateur" may not feel so guilty after all. Read on for a letter I received the same day yours arrived, and file them both under: "Damned if you do, and damned if you don't."

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are both 75 years old and we go out to eat two or three times a week. We usually order two meals and take home what is left.

Last Sunday we went to a nice place and the food was not cheap. We both ordered prime rib steak. We shared my plate, and my wife ate a small piece of her steak, and asked the waiter to wrap up the remainder to take home.

When we were ready to leave, we asked the waiter for our check and the leftover meat. He came back and told us that the meat had already been thrown out, so I told him to bring us another piece of beef!

He returned with a piece of meat, saying he was able to retrieve it before they threw it in the garbage. We looked at the meat, and it wasn't ours. We were sure it wasn't, because it had some rice on it and we didn't order rice! (Evidently he took it out of the garbage can.)

We were outraged, and told him to bring us a new piece of beef — which he did.

From now on, if we have food to take home, we always ask the waiter to bring the container to our table!

— RUTH & PAUL BRANDER, DEL-RAY BEACH, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Almost five years ago, our first baby died immediately after birth. It has taken a while to gather the courage to try again, and we are expecting another child soon.

Here's the question: What do I say to people (strangers and new friends) who ask, "Is this your first baby?"

Please help us, Abby, as we really don't know how to handle that question. — HIGH HOPES

DEAR H.H.: Simply say, "No. Our first baby died immediately after birth five years ago."

Man accused of arranging murder through 'Soldier' ad goes on trial

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A man indicted in connection with a botched murder-for-hire scheme testified he was hired by another defendant who had placed a "Gun for Hire" advertisement in Soldier of Fortune magazine.

Richard Michael Savage, accused of arranging a murder contract through the ad, went on trial Monday amid tight security in a federal courtroom. Testimony in the case was continuing today.

Prosecutors labeled the 39-year-old Savage "a central figure in a murder ring." Savage was indicted with four other people in October 1986 in connection with the alleged murder-for-hire scheme.

"He said that she wanted a man named Dana Free killed. We discussed the fact that I would be the one to go down and kill Dana Free," testified William Clayton Buckley, one of those named in the indictment.

Buckley testified that the first time he and alleged accomplices tried to bomb Free's car, the grenades did not blow up.

"We watched the car drive around for a few days with the grenades dangling from underneath the car," Buckley testified.

After that, he said he and the alleged accomplices decided they needed to do more work. One man then crawled back under Free's car and rearmed the grenades.

"On or about July 13, 1985, in response to an advertisement for a Gun for Hire, placed in Soldier of Fortune magazine, by Richard Michael Savage, Alice V. Brado paid Richard Michael Savage $5,000 as a retainer fee to kill Dana Free," the indictment alleged.

The indictment claims that about 11 days later, a man named Ward C. Lambeth paid Savage "$15,000 as additional payment from Alice V. Brado for the murder of Dana Free."

Lambeth testified that he loaned Ms. Brado $25,000 for the purpose of killing Free and the money was allegedly used to hire Savage.

Free testified Monday that Ms. Brado had invested $175,000 to $180,000 in a Colorado company for which he served as president. He said the woman required him to take out a $500,000 life insurance policy, naming her as the beneficiary.

He said he has been receiving death threats for three years, beginning in Nov. 1984, when he said he went to Atlanta, Ga., on vacation.

"When I got ready to return, I was told by my secretary not to return because I would be dead within five seconds," said Free, adding the former vice president of the company also "told me I was a dead man over the phone."

Free said he moved to Smyrna, Ga., and on the morning of Aug. 2, 1985, his car was bombed at his apartment complex.

"I got into the car, and it started," said Free. "It died. I started it again, moved about 15 feet and it exploded."

Stunned, he said, he got out of the car and watched it burn.

Prosecutors accused Savage of hiring two other people to bomb Free's car in the Atlanta, Ga., area. The first attempt failed, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Gary Cobe, and two days later, one of two hand grenades hung on the bottom of Free's car exploded, but Free escaped unharmed.

Savage later sent Buckley and Sherry Lynn Breeden to Houston "with a silenced .45-caliber pistol, a semi-automatic Uzi rifle, 100 rounds of ammunition and two fragmentation grenades, to locate and kill Dana Free," according to the indictment.

Buckley and Ms. Breeden allegedly threw two grenades through the windows of a Pasadena residence where they thought he was staying, but Free was no longer there.

Superconductivity researcher turns down Berkeley offer to stay at UH

HOUSTON (AP) — In what may have been the biggest decision of his professional career, superconductivity researcher Paul C.W. Chu decided to stay put and build a research legacy at the University of Houston.

"This has been one of the most difficult decisions in my life," Chu said in a statement Monday.

"The offer from the University of California-Berkeley was excellent and had me torn between my loyalty to UH and a desire to be at Berkeley, as it has been a personal goal to join the Berkeley faculty," he said.

UC-Berkeley officials had been wooing Chu for months with an offer of a combined teaching-research position, and he was given until last Friday to respond to their offer.

Chu then called P. Buford Price, the chairman of the UC-Berkeley physics department, and announced he would stay in Houston.

"Developing the superconductivity effort at UH is a great responsibility," Chu said. "(It) has been made easier thanks to the support of the university, foundations, industry and city, state and federal government," Chu said.

"With the enthusiastic support I have received at UH, I should be able to achieve my professional goals," he added.

Chu was not available for further comment, said university spokesman Eric Miller.

Chu left no uncertainty that he was rejecting the Berkeley offer, Price said. "No further action would be taken to recruit Chu," he said.

Chu "has built up a group there (in Houston) and he feels responsible to them," said UC-Berkeley physicist Marvin L. Cohen, who first urged California officials to recruit his friend. "The program is coming along at a resounding clip."

The Houston scientist reportedly was concerned that if he moved to Berkeley, he would abandon people who have supported him for a decade.

Superconductors transmit electricity without resistance. Researchers are trying to develop materials that are superconducting at room temperature.

Existing superconductors work only at extreme subfreezing temperatures, although Chu and other scientists have been discovering substances that work at progressively warmer temperatures.

Scientists believe high-temperature superconductors may revolutionize electrical transmission, computers, trains, motors and many other electrical devices.

Cohen said much of the financing for superconductivity research in Houston was being provided because of Chu's presence.

The university pays Chu a nine-month teaching salary of $150,000, with an option to earn another $50,000 by working summers. A California spokesman said senior professors at Berkeley usually earn half that amount, although the school didn't disclose its offer to Chu.

Cohen said Chu may also have considered the career of his wife, May Chu, who is a vice president of a Houston bank.

Acupuncture catches on with AIDS patients

AUSTIN (AP) — Acupuncture this year has become one of the most popular treatments in Austin among sufferers of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Brian McKenna, an Austin acupuncture expert who initiated the AIDS treatments twice a week at St. Luke's Methodist Church, said his group has had 28 patients so far, with about half attending regularly.

"We're trying to offer the options of traditional Chinese medicine," said McKenna.

"We've been able to address pain and migraine headaches. We've been able to normalize sleep patterns and help with the appetite loss and digestive weakness often found with AIDS and ARC," AIDS-related complex.

"But it's important to recognize that no therapy is going to serve everyone all the time."

Acupuncture is an ancient Chinese art, still used in conjunction with Western medicine in China. It involves the shallow puncturing of the body at specific points with long, fine gold or silver needles to relieve pain and cure disease.

"Its optimal province is the early stages of a disease process," McKenna said. "But it has analgesic effects at any stage."

McKenna, 35, has no medical degree and does not claim to be curing AIDS. But he has studied with acupuncture experts in China and points to hundreds of AIDS patients who indicate that acupuncture helps maintain their health.

"It's way too early to predict how acupuncture is going to shape up as an AIDS treatment," McKenna said. "I do, however, believe it would be remiss on our part not to offer hope."

Acupuncture practitioners are not licensed by the State of Texas, but Austin has attracted about a dozen of them since the early 1980s.

McKenna is licensed to practice in his native New Mexico and by a national association. The needles for AIDS treatments are used only once and then discarded. He and two other acupuncturists who help always wear gloves, he said.

The virus that causes a fatal case of AIDS is primarily transmitted through sexual contact but can also be passed by exchanging blood.

Some Austin physicians who treat AIDS approve of their patients trying acupuncture.

"I have absolutely no objection to it," said Dr. Tom Smith. "I've found that people do better when they take a multiphasic approach. If something is safe, I don't object."

Several named to board

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Monday he has designated Cipriano Guerra Jr. of San Antonio as vice chairman of the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

Guerra, 60, replaces Harvey Weil of Corpus Christi.

Clements also named Dr. Richard Morton Jr., 55, of El Paso, to the State Board of Medical Examiners to replace Dr. Carlos Godinez of McAllen, who resigned. The term extends to April 1991.

Jayhawks win one when it counts most

Kansas-OU final a dandy

By Brian Brown
Copley News Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Somehow, it was inevitable. Certainly, it was the right ending.

In the 50th year of the NCAA tournament, an event that has become as much a rite of spring as the reflowering of nature, a special team of one magnificent player and a vast group of overachievers surprised us all.

The Jayhawks, behind a 31-point, 18-rebound clutch performance by forward Danny Manning, stunned Oklahoma Monday night at Kemper Arena, 83-79, and thus became one of the most unlikely national champions in this tourney's history.

It was 1952 when Kansas last won a national basketball title, the year that Harry S. Truman, an unassuming gentleman from the Kansas City suburb of Independence, stepped down as president.

Harry S., a man who knows something about upsets (just ask Tom Dewey), would have appreciated this team. So would have the late James Naismith, who introduced the sport of basketball at Kansas in 1898 and coached the team for nine seasons. If he could have seen what his successor, Larry Brown, did this season, Dr. Naismith surely would have smiled.

Brown, who may be headed for UCLA according to several reports here, was able to do two extraordinary things for these Jayhawks. Despite one personnel problem after another, he kept them believing. And, secondly, he held up his end of the bargain. He helped the Jayhawks win.

This is one statistic worth noting: Kansas (27-11) is the first national champion with 11 defeats. Oklahoma finished 35-4.

In the first half, the Jayhawks did what they said they would not do. They played full-tilt basketball with the team that has run almost all of its opponents dizzy this season. Yet, despite 15 turnovers, Kansas survived this strategic error, tied with Oklahoma at halftime, 50-50.

The Jayhawks survived because they made Oklahoma pay for its gambling, full-court press.

"We knew we couldn't just be satisfied with breaking the press," said Kansas guard Scooter Barry. "If we didn't attack the basket after we got past full court, we knew they were just going to come up from behind and make steals."

Kansas survived, too, because Brown substituted like a hockey coach, and because his bench played their tails off.

Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs, in the meantime, played four of his starters the full 20 minutes of the first half and the other starter 17 minutes. This was not unusual, but Monday night the Sooners finally hit the wall. By late in the second half, it appeared they were spent.

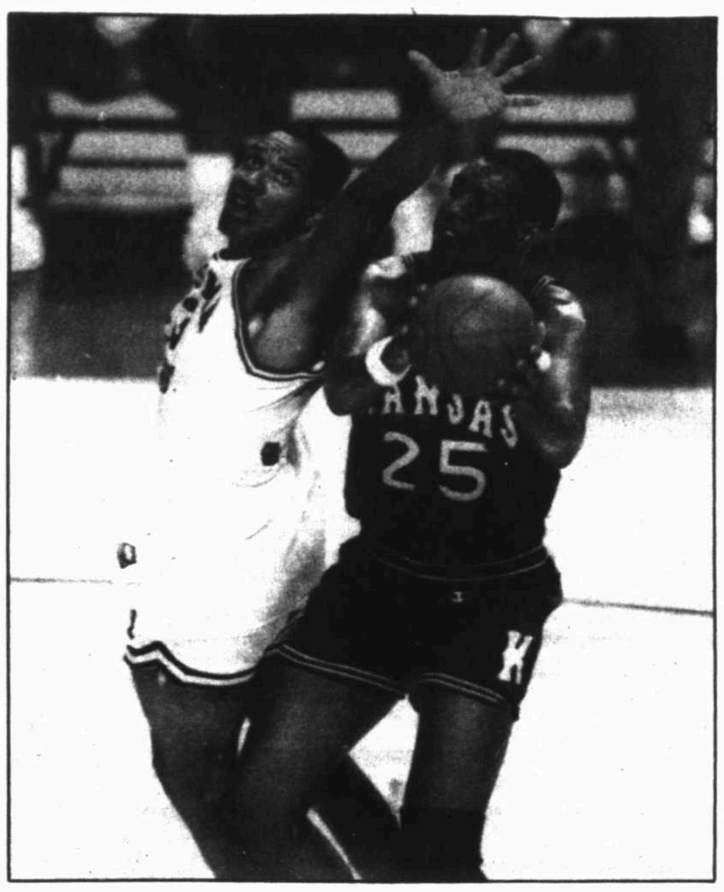

Really, Oklahoma's last gasp came with about 13 minutes to go. Forward Davie Sieger (22 points) hit one his seven three-pointers to put the Sooners ahead, 61-60. Then guard Mookie Blaylock stole the ball from Barry and sped downcourt for an uncontested layup, 63-60.

Brown called a timeout. He had seen this kind of thing from Oklahoma before; he had seen how the ballhawking, perpetual-motion Sooners had turned a close game into a rout within minutes.

So Brown took the air out of the ball, unveiling a four-corners offense for the rest of the game. He gave his players orders to use 25 to 30 seconds of the shot clock.

The Jayhawks may have rested on offense, but on defense they were

Manning chosen MVP

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY — A year ago, Kansas All-American Danny Manning had a choice to make. Either he would take the NBA's offer of instant wealth or he would take another year of listening to Larry Brown, the coach he once called "a little man with a big mouth."

Manning chose the mouth instead of the money, and because he did Brown and Kansas are the NCAA champions today.

The 6-foot-10 senior carried the Jayhawks to an 83-79 victory over Oklahoma Monday night in a virtuoso MVP performance that was a microcosm of his four years at Kansas.

His line in the box score tells the story: 31 points, 18 rebounds, five steals, two assists, two blocks.

Any questions?

Well, as a matter of fact, there was one. Twice in the last few minutes, he threw up low-percentage shots that missed badly and kept Oklahoma alive. On the bench, Brown and assistant coach Ed Manning, Danny's dad, cringed.

"We told him during a timeout that's not the kind of shots we want at that time," Coach Manning said. "At that time we wanted to take time off the clock."

"I was excited and maybe I tried to do too much at that point," his son said.

It was the only smudge on an otherwise spotless performance by Manning, who punctuated his night by dropping in four crucial free throws in the final 14 seconds to seal the victory.

What was he thinking as he stepped to the foul line?

"It's over," he said.

And that was before he shot the free throws.

The fact of the matter is it was over, and after Manning converted the shots, he made sure of that by grabbing one last rebound.

"I knew Danny wanted it bad," Oklahoma's Stacey King said. "He came out and proved it."

King and Horace Grant, who worked against Manning underneath, made sure he worked for his points. Grant said Manning had turned the game Kansas' way. "Whenever they need a big basket, they go to the big man," he said.

There was a second-half stretch of seven straight points that took Kansas from a three-point deficit and thrust the Jayhawks into a lead they would not surrender.

This after he drew a third personal foul 25 seconds into the half. He never got the fourth, though.

"This wasn't a gift," Manning said of Kansas' first national championship since 1952. "We weren't lucky. We prepared for the opportunities and capitalized on all of them to get this far."

Injuries and academic problems stripped Kansas' starting lineup during the regular season and left Manning working with a group of replacement parts. It was like surrounding a diamond with costume jewelry.

"If I had left after last year and seen all that happened, I would have felt terrible about walking out," Manning said.

His father said that last year's edition of this All-American still wasn't a finished product. "I knew he was not ready to step out," the coach said. "There was plenty of time to do that."

NCAA opens A&M investigation

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M plans to move quickly to answer NCAA allegations of 31 rules violations and 7 procedural infractions, Coach Jackie Sherrill says.

"We've gone through the process before," Sherrill said Monday after releasing a letter from the NCAA outlining its charges. "We have an outside firm that will go out and interview people."

Sherrill said the school has until the end of June to prepare its answer to the charges but the school would not take that long to respond.

No academic violations were cited in the 38-point letter.

Names of players and coaches also were withheld.

Investigators concluded that the nature of the violations "demonstrate a lack of appropriate institutional control and monitoring in the administration of the institution's intercollegiate football program."

Sherrill said the procedural violations outlined by the NCAA were not major problems.

"We take them all seriously but there are questions where you may not have followed procedures," Sherrill said. "Most of them (probes of other schools) have that part in there."

Sherrill said the NCAA did not want the allegations revealed but that A&M insisted on making them public.

Jackie Sherrill

Kevin Murray

"They asked us not to release it but because of the circumstances and how long it's been going on and because of the media process, we had to do it," Sherrill said.

The NCAA cited an unnamed coach who acted unethically and showed a "knowing and willful effort" to operate the football program contrary to NCAA requirements.

It also said that during interviews with NCAA enforcement officials on June 12, 1985, and Dec. 16, 1987, that coach gave false and misleading information about his involvement in and knowledge of an alleged violation.

"We'd like to thank the NCAA for expediting the processing of the official inquiry so that we can put this matter behind us. It's been hanging over our heads for a long time," A&M President Frank Vandiver said.

"I am pleased to note that no academic allegations are involved."

News of the accusations became public as the Aggies football team went through a spring practice.

"Myself, it will be easy to put it in the back of my mind," senior fullback Matt Gurley said. "If we got put on probation, it would be on the down side.

"But you can't look at it like that because you have to think about playing next year."

Texas A&M released an 850-page report last year that told of players selling complimentary tickets in violation of NCAA rules.

The report, released after numerous open records-law requests and suits, stemmed from a probe that began in 1985 after media reports alleged Dallas booster Rod Dockery paid then-A&M quarterback Kevin Murray $3,550 in 1983-84 for cleaning printing presses.

The in-house A&M report, however, did not mention Dockery or Murray.

Two of Dockery's former employees told the NCAA that Murray — who declined to play last season in his final year of eligibility — never performed the work for which he was paid. Such an activity could be a violation of NCAA rules.

Although large parts of the in-house report were blanked out at Attorney General Jim Mattox's direction, it included information that former assistant coach Jess Stiles said he loaned $60 to someone and received $50 in return.

Final four baseball openers set for today

Associated Press

Rick Mahler, who seems to start a season pitching like Sandy Koufax only to finish like Rick Mahler, goes for his fifth opening night victory as major-league baseball plays its final four openers.

A crowd of about 30,000 is expected for tonight's opener at Atlanta between the Braves and Chicago Cubs, who will start right-hander Rick Sutcliffe.

Mahler has allowed only 13 hits in 34 shutout innings over his last four opening day assignments, with complete-game victories the last two seasons.

"I really have no way of knowing why," Mahler said of his season-opening success. "I'm always ready for the season to start. Opening day has always been exciting for me. Maybe you just get that electric charge."

Mahler, whose record after opening day the last three seasons is 36-46, beat Philadelphia 6-0 on three hits last year, Montreal 6-0 on five hits to begin 1986 and the Phils 6-0 in 1985. He also beat San Diego 1-0 on two hits in 1982, but was only 8-10 thereafter.

"I just enjoy opening night," Mahler said. "The big crowd and everything that goes with it. Other than that, I can't tell you why I've had the success I've had."

Other openers tonight include San Diego at Houston and Pittsburgh at Philadelphia in the National League. Minnesota was at New York in an American League day game.

Mahler's record of three opening-night shutouts is equaled by only two other pitchers in major league history. Chris Short threw shutouts for Philadelphia in season openers in 1966, 1967 and 1970, and Rip Sewell had shutouts for Pittsburgh in 1943, 1947 and 1949.

Mahler appears to have the perfect opponent in the Cubs, who lost 10 of their last 12 preseason games.

"It hasn't been a great spring," new Cubs manager Don Zimmer said. "It hasn't been a poor spring. "Tuesday's for real," he said. "There's clubs that win 25 games in spring training and lose the first three when it counts. ... Things are like that every spring. It's going to happen like that in the season, too. Hopefully, more better than bad."

At Houston, the Astros played host to San Diego with a new baseball-only Astroturf playing field in the Astrodome.

Mike Scott, the 1986 Cy Young winner who was 18-13 last season, opposes San Diego's Ed Whitson, who was 10-13 last season but 2-0 in three starts against the Astros.

"You can't tell us they were that bad last year. They killed us," Scott said of the Padres, who finished last in the NL West. "We've got to do better against them this year. We can't afford to get off to a bad start."

The Astros begin the season with second baseman Bill Doran and right fielder Kevin Bass hobbled by injuries. Manager Hal Lanier said Doran would be in the lineup but Bass, bothered by a hamstring injury, was questionable.

San Diego Manager Larry Bowa is pinning his hopes this season on pitching.

"If you don't get pitching, it doesn't matter how many runs you score or how good your defense is, that's the name of the game," Bowa said. "The three veteran pitchers on our team have to pitch better than they did last year. If they don't, it could be a long season."

The Phillies hope to reverse a disturbing trend of poor starts against the Pirates.

In 1985, Philadelphia started 1-8, the next year 2-8, and last season 1-8.

"I don't see why we can't hold our own until everything settles down, and then go," says Lee Elia, starting his first full season as Phillies manager.

Shane Rawley, despite a spring in which he was 1-5 with an ERA of 9.87, is the starter against the Pirates. Rawley was 17-11 last season, losing his last five games to blow a shot at the Cy Young Award.

The Pirates will counter with Mike Dunne, 13-8 with a 3.03 ERA.

ARLINGTON - Charlie Hough's jinx over the the Cleveland Indians also includes off nights.

The Indians hit three homers off Hough on Monday night but he still survived for his 13th consecutive victory over them, 4-3, as the Texas Rangers gave 37,613 fans a happy home opener.

"Who can explain it?" Hough asked. "I know about my record over them and I know I haven't pitched well against them. I just never had a gem pitched against me and something good always seems to happen."

Two Indian errors in the bottom of the seventh paved the way for the Rangers to tie the score 3-3.

In the bottom of the eighth, Pete O'Brien hit his second homer to give Hough the victory.

Hough wasn't around at the end. He walked leadoff batter Joe Carter in the ninth inning. Reliever Mitch Williams promptly picked Carter off base then struck out the next two batters before the fourth largest home opener in the Rangers' history..

"I had a rough night and really didn't have my best stuff," said Hough, who won 18 games last year."It was an incredible job by Mitch. He was great and the pickoff really did it."

Williams said "It was great to win one for the old man. He gives it his all when he is out there and it makes you want to save the game for him.".

Hough is 16-4 lifetime against Cleveland.

Cleveland Manager Doc Edwards said "Hough did a great job but he didn't beat us. We beat ourselves.

"When you walk the eighth and ninth hitters like we did in the seventh that really costs you. The pickoff by Williams I believe was a balk."

O'Brien said he discovered a flaw in his swing on the last day of spring training.

"It really helped," O'Brien said. "Of course, I'm not going to give my secret out."

Chris Codiroli was the victim of O'Briens opposite field homer in the eight inning. O'Brien also had a solo homer off Cleveland starter Tom Candiotti in the second inning.

"It was a typical Hough game," Candiotti said."We had him on the ropes but couldn't get to him."

Julio Franco, Willie Upshaw and Cory Snyder all hit solo homers for Cleveland off Hough.

"I was lucky," Hough said. "I had a lot of line drive outs."

Hough said "It was an important game for us. It was important to get a good start. We haven't forgotten last year."

The Rangers went 1-10 to start the season last year and were never a factor in the American League West.

"It was a great scenario," Williams said. "There was a sellout crowd and Pete hit two homers and came from behind. Charlie got the win and I got the save. It was perfect."

Jessica McClure, the Midland toddler who spent 58 hours in an abandoned well last October before she was rescued, threw out the ceremonial first ball for the season opener.

Actually, it was more of a roll by the two-year-old than a throw that went to Rangers catcher Geno Petralli.

The Rangers and Indians are off today but meet against on Wednesday with Texas' Bobby Witt going against Cleveland's Greg Swindell.

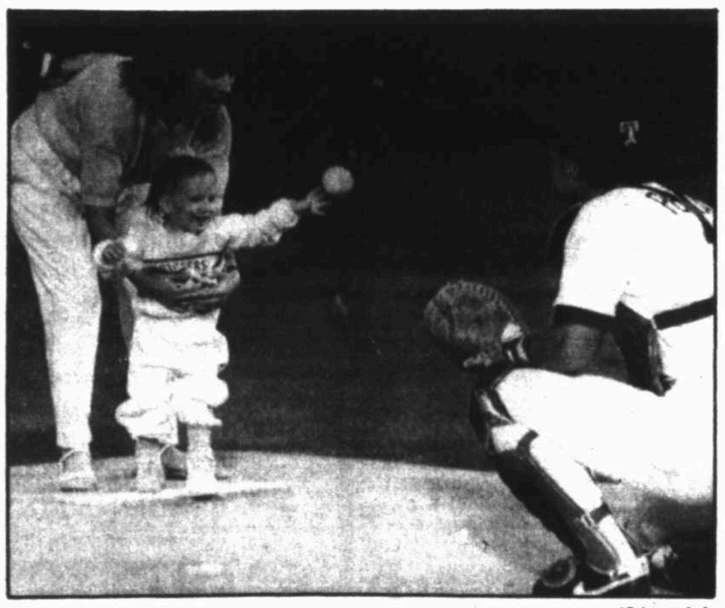

A big hit with the fans

ARLINGTON (AP) — Jessica McClure, the 2-year-old Midlander rescued last October after spending 58 hours in an abandoned water well, rolled out the ceremonial first pitch as the Texas Rangers opened their season Monday night.

Jessica bounced a one-hopper into the mitt of Texas catcher Geno Petralli from a distance of three feet prior to the Rangers' game against Cleveland.

To prove it was no accident, she did it twice to the roars and applause of the Arlington Stadium crowd.

Jessica warmed up by dropping baseballs into the glove of third baseman Steve Buechele.

Bell blasts three homers

Associated Press

Some things never change — Toronto's George Bell still is hitting home runs and Boston's bullpen still is giving them up.

Bell, Toronto's MVP and unhappy designated hitter, became the first player in baseball history to hit three home runs on opening day when he powered the Blue Jays to a 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals on Monday.

How about a big smile, George.

"I've got too many things on my mind to be happy," said Bell, who encored last year's 47-homer season with a solo shot in the second inning, a two-run homer that put Toronto ahead 3-2 in the fourth and a bases-empty homer in the eighth, all off Bret Saberhagen.

Things were supposed to be different in Boston, where the Red Sox tired of watching Wes Gardner and Calvin Schiraldi give up 32 home runs in 173 innings a year ago. They acquired fireballing Lee Smith, one of baseball's top relievers, from the Chicago Cubs.

Smith's 36 saves last year were 20 more than the entire Boston bullpen. But after allowing only run and four hits in 13 exhibition outings, he surrendered a two-out, two-run homer to Detroit's Alan Trammell in the top of the 10th inning Monday and the Tigers beat the Red Sox 5-3.

"I've never faced Alan Trammell in my life, but that had nothing to do with it," Smith said. "It's a situation at 2-1 where you've got to throw strikes. It's just one pitch, one game. He hit a good pitch. I didn't hang anything.

"I was trying to throw a strike and Alan Trammell hit it. I thought it was a good pitch, down low where I wanted it. I'm not the type of guy to take this home with me. If I lose a game, I'm not going to jump off a bridge. Hopefully, the fans won't judge me by this outing."

Blue Jays 5, Royals 3

Bell, who was fined $1,000 when he balked at DHing during an exhibition game, reached a temporary truce with Manager Jimy Williams shortly before opening day and agreed to move from left field. But he wasn't happy about it.

"A lot of people have been hounding me, but it doesn't bother me because I just have to go out and play my game," he said.

Bell referred questions concerning his DH role to his agent and Williams said, "I'm not here to discuss the designated hitter. I'm here to talk about the ballplayer. It's amazing. He's got to be happy, I know that. He's a pure hitter and he hit them off a good pitcher."

Jimmy Key, the AL's ERA leader in 1987, gave up a two-run homer to George Brett in the first inning but didn't allow another run in his six innings. Saberhagen gave up seven hits and five runs, three earned, in eight innings.

"That's one record I don't care to look back on," Saberhagen said of Bell's three homers. "The situation never came up where I could pitch around him. He got the best of me today, but maybe it will be different next time."

Tigers 5, Red Sox 3

Trammell's two-run homer — both runs were unearned because of an error by Boston shortstop Spike Owen — decided a game that began as a pitching duel between Roger Clemens, Boston's two-time Cy Young Award winner, and Detroit's Jack Morris. A crowd of 34,781 attended at Fenway Park.

Both pitchers went nine innings, with Clemens striking out 11 and Morris fanning nine. Clemens gave up six hits, including Matt Nokes' game-tying homer in the sixth inning, and also was called for three balks.

"I guess I'm a little lucky," Trammell said after his game-winning homer. "I had never seen him (Smith) before, and I hit a home run off him. I was geared up to hit a fastball because he was behind (in the count) and I know what his best pitch is. The next time out he's going to pitch even harder. I probably got him mad today."

Athletics 4, Mariners 1

Dave Stewart allowed two hits in 8⅓ innings — a single on the first pitch of the game and a one-out single in the ninth — and Dave Henderson and Jose Canseco homered.

Mike Kingery singled cleanly to left field to open the game and scored on Stewart's two-out, bases-loaded balk. But after the first inning, the Oakland right-hander, a 20-game winner last year, allowed only one baserunner, on a walk, until the ninth. He had retired 18 consecutive batters when Mickey Brantley's one-hopper caromed off his glove for an infield hit.

Rick Honeycutt and Dennis Eckersley each got one out in the ninth before a sellout crowd of 45,333 in Oakland.

Henderson homered off Seattle ace Mark Langston in the second inning. Henderson snapped a 1-1 tie with a run-scoring double in the sixth after Dave Parker got his first AL hit, a two-out single, and took second on Langston's wild pitch. Don Baylor delivered an RBI single after Henderson's double and Canseco homered in the eighth.

Brewers 12, Orioles 0

Teddy Higuera pitched three-hit ball for seven innings and Dale Sveum's two-run homer highlighted a 16-hit barrage as Milwaukee handed the Orioles their worst opening-day loss before 52,395, the largest regular-season crowd in Baltimore history.

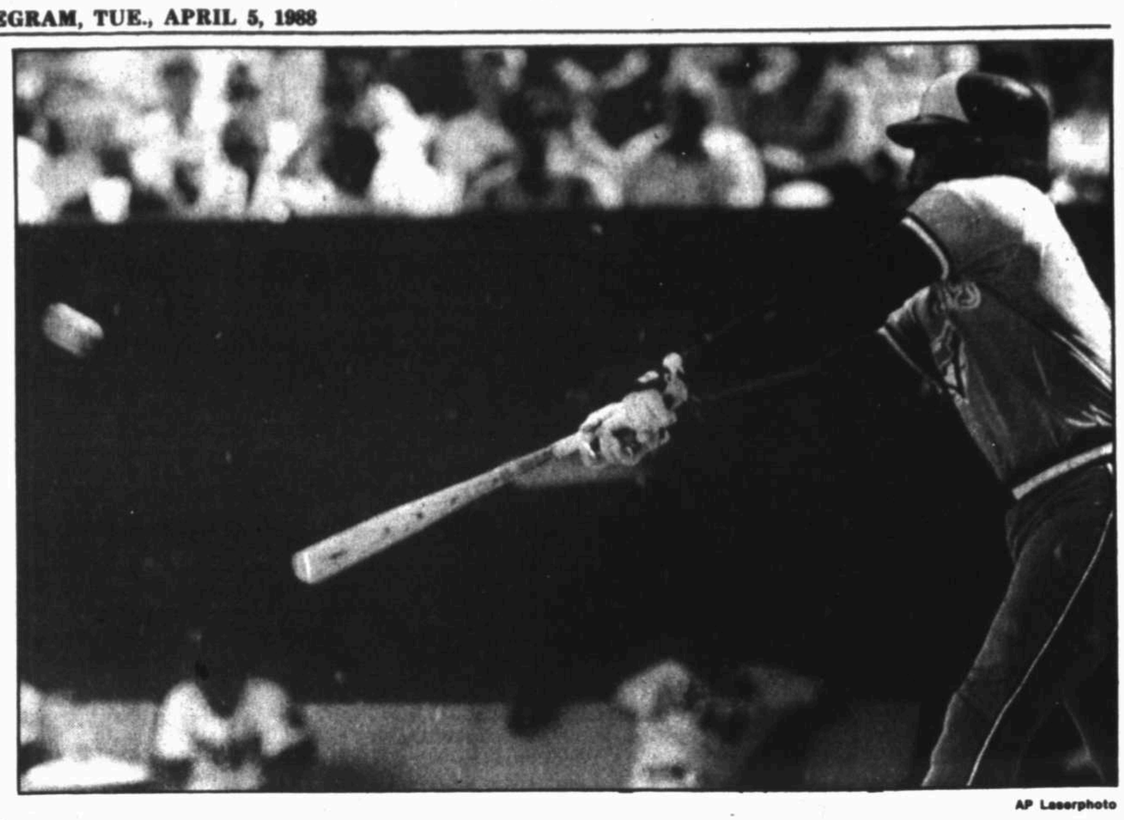

Higuera struck out seven, walked one and allowed only one runner past first base. Loser Mike Boddicker gave up four runs in 5⅓ innings and left with a slightly sprained ankle.

Rob Deer hit two RBI doubles, Ernest Riles had three hits and Paul Molitor stole three bases, including home. Sveum's homer off rookie Oswaldo Perez came during a six-run eighth inning.

White Sox 8, Angels 5

Kenny Williams homered, doubled and drove in three runs before a crowd of 35,899 in Chicago. Williams, whose homer capped a three-run fifth inning, doubled to key a five-run seventh that erased a 4-3 California lead and spoiled the managerial debut of Cookie Rojas, who took over last month when Gene Mauch stepped down.

Normore, Piper combo Kansas' key play

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — As the red lights on the square clock atop the backboard flashed the numbers, the Kemper Arena crowd counted them off.

Five...four...three...

Kansas guard Clint Normore dribbled the basketball near the top of the key, out of his shooting range and unable to find a teammate who was open.

Kansas Coach Larry Brown, clutching the rolled up program he carries during every game, stood up and implored, "Shoot, shoot."

His team was clinging to a 75-71 lead over Oklahoma in Monday night's NCAA championship game and the last thing he wanted at that moment was for the shot clock to run out on his team.

Finally, Normore made his move. He drove down the lane, then flipped the ball to Chris Piper along the left baseline, no more than 10 feet from the basket.

Two...one...

Piper spun to face the hoop and there stood Oklahoma's Stacey King, all 6 feet, 10 inches of him. Unfazed, the 6-8 Kansas senior brought the ball back over his head and flipped it in a high arc over King's outstretched arm toward the basket.

Just then, the shot clock buzzer sounded. Kansas' 45 seconds were up. But it didn't matter. Piper's shot nestled gently into the net and the Jayhawks had a six-point lead, their biggest of the game and, with 3:03 left, enough to ensure the championship.

"That isn't something I practice," Piper said. "Destiny must have been guiding the ball. That's what people are saying about us."

Although Normore and Piper took it to the extreme, their hurried improvisation typified the plan that allowed the plucky Jayhawks to pull off an 83-79 upset of the fourth-ranked Sooners and give the school its second national title.

Just when Oklahoma looked like it was cranking up its vaunted running game, Kansas put on the brakes. The Jayhawks did it by breaking the Oklahoma press, then patiently passing the ball until they found a good shot.

At times, All-American forward Danny Manning would stand just in front of the midcourt line, cradling the ball against his hip, until Kansas was ready to run its offense. Meanwhile, precious seconds that Oklahoma needed were ticking away.

"I just wanted to keep attacking but use the clock," Brown said. "I didn't worry that much about what they were doing with their press.

"The biggest concern I had was to try to utilize the clock and try to get our big people to handle the ball. Their guards are so good defensively. We wanted Danny and Chris to handle it because we thought King and (Harvey) Grant might have trouble defending them."

Just before Kansas got control of the tempo, Oklahoma appeared to be on the verge of one of its patented runs. Eight straight Sooner points, capped by King's turnaround shot over Manning in the lane, put Oklahoma ahead 65-60.

The OU fans who had hoped for a rout were starting to smell blood. But Kansas kept its cool.

"We didn't panic when we got down five," Brown said. "We were hoping to get ahead and then get it done with our defense in the final five minutes."

The Jayhawks clawed back to tie it 65-65 when Manning converted a three-point play after faking King off his feet. Oklahoma's Mookie Blaylock countered with a 3-pointer to make it 68-65 with 11:01 remaining, but that was the last time the Sooners led.

Combining its patience with tough interior defense against King and Grant, Kansas outscored Oklahoma 12-3 during the next eight minutes.

JAYHAWKS

nothing less than splendid. They pressured the ball and contested every pass in the hope of making it hard for the Oklahoma guards to get the ball into big men Stacey King and Harvey Grant, each incredibly reliable scoring machines.

This would be among the most telling statistics: King and Grant scored just two points in the last 12 minutes.

"It was a credit to Larry Brown's coaching," said Grant. "He's watched a lot of film and he knows how Stacey and I like to post up. Sometimes I felt like I was getting the ball eight or nine feet from the basket, and that's frustrating."

Appropriately, it would be left for Manning to secure the national title at the foul line.

With 14 seconds left, he made both ends of a one-and-one to extend the Kansas lead to 81-77. But it was not over and Manning, who has carried a very heavy burden all season with unusual grace, had a chance to undo all the wonderful things that had been said about him, on the line again with five seconds left.

But after Oklahoma guard Ricky Grace cut the lead to two with a driving layup, Manning converted another one-and-one to finally put this one out of reach.

MANNING

So Manning stayed and on Monday night, he displayed the finished product. His father glowed over it.

"I'm proud the way he's played, the way he's grown up and learned to be a leader," he said. "He's ready to play when the ball is thrown up and that's very important.

"A year ago, he was not strong enough. I didn't think his head was into it. It was not time to go. He had a lot to still work on. This year was a chance to do that."

It also was a chance to redeem one of the few bad moments of his Kansas career. Two years ago, when the Jayhawks reached the Final Four, they lost in the semifinals against Duke as Manning scored just four points and fouled out after playing only 23 minutes.

Mets set home run record in opener

Associated Press

A season after the Year of the Home Run, Darryl Strawberry and the New York Mets are making this the Year of the Home Run II.

Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds hit two home runs each as the Mets set a club record with six homers — the most ever by any team on opening day — and beat the Montreal Expos 10-6 Monday.

If this is the time pitchers are supposed to be ahead of hitters, no one told the batters in Montreal. They got 28 hits off eight pitchers, obviously not helped by the higher strike zone.

"Both teams got their hits today," Expos Manager Buck Rodgers said. "The difference was they added the long ball to theirs."

National League pitchers also struggled with balks on opening day. Cincinnati's Mario Soto and St. Louis' Joe Magrane each were called for two balks and Dwight Gooden of the Mets and Dennis Martinez were cited once apiece as umpires began enforcing tighter balk rules.

Mets 10, Expos 6

Strawberry, who created controversy in spring training by criticizing teammates and manager Davey Johnson, caused a commotion by homering in his first at-bat, the third season he's done that. In the seventh inning, he hit a 500-foot drive off the Olympic Stadium roof, giving him four opening-day homers.

"I've been looking forward to the challenge of getting on with my career this year and showing people what I can do," said Strawberry, who went 4-for-4.

Bulked-up Len Dykstra and rookie Kevin Elster also homered for the Mets, who broke the record of five homers set by the New York Yankees against the Philadelphia Athletics on April 12, 1932, and tied four times since.

Hubie Brooks homered for Montreal as the clubs tied the record for opening day homers by both teams last accomplished by Milwaukee and Boston in 1980. It was the first seven-homer opener in National League history.

Dykstra's three-run homer broke a 4-4 tie in the sixth. Strawberry and McReynolds, who had four hits and drove in three runs, got consecutive homers in the seventh against Randy St. Claire.

Brooks homered and tripled for the Expos, who had 15 hits.

Dwight Gooden, who missed opening day last season while undergoing cocaine rehabilitation, gave up a career-high 11 hits and four runs in five innings for the victory.

"That was not a Mets victory, but I'll take it," Gooden said.

Loser Dennis Martinez allowed seven runs on nine hits in six innings.

Giants 5, Dodgers 1

Dave Dravecky pitched a three-hitter and newcomer Brett Butler had three hits as San Francisco improved to 3-0 in opening days under manager Roger Craig.

The NL West champions took advantage of Los Angeles' sloppy fielding and beat Fernando Valenzuela before a crowd of 48,484 at Dodger Stadium.

Dravecky gave up a home run to Steve Sax on his first pitch but did not allow another hit until Sax singled in the sixth. Dravecky walked one and struck out six.

Butler, signed as a free agent during the winter, hit a two-run triple in the fourth for a 4-1 lead. Butler approached Los Angeles about a contract after leaving Cleveland and becoming a free agent, but was rejected. He vowed to get the Dodgers on opening day and went 3-for-5, but also was picked off and caught stealing.

Throwing errors by Valenzuela and center fielder John Shelby helped the Giants score twice in the third. A late throw by Valenzuela keyed a three-run fourth.

Kirk Gibson, Alfredo Griffin and Mike Davis, acquired by the Dodgers to help punch up the offense, were a combined 0-for-11.

Reds 5, Cardinals 4

Kal Daniels singled home Jeff Treadway with two outs in the bottom of the 12th as Cincinnati won its fifth straight opener.

Daniels, who grounded out in his first two at-bats, also hit a solo homer in the sixth inning before his winning single. A crowd of 55,348 fans, the largest regular-season attendance in Riverfront Stadium's 18-year history, saw the Reds win.

NCAA alleges 31 A&M rules violations

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Following are the 31 rules violations and seven procedural violations that the NCAA alleges were committed by the Texas A&M University football program:

RULES VIOLATIONS

1. (A) On Sept. 2, 1986, the university self-reported three violations of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules to the NCAA enforcement staff concerning the university's football program. These violations included that: During the 1980-81 academic year, a football coach loaned a student-athlete $60, of which $50 was repaid.

1. (B) On Sept. 2, 1986, the university self-reported three violations of NCAA rules to the NCAA enforcement staff concerning the university's football program.

These violations included that: During the 1983-84 academic year, a representative of the university's athletics interests provided a student-athlete cash and arranged food and lodging for the young man and his brother.

1. (C) On Sept. 2, 1986, the university self-reported three violations of NCAA rules to the NCAA enforcement staff concerning the university's football program.

These violations included that: During the period 1976 to 1985, 14 student-athletes sold their complimentary football tickets to teammates, friends, family members, members of the university's athletics equipment staff and other unidentified individuals at costs that were in violation of NCAA legislation.

2. During a period beginning on Dec. 22, 1983, and ending on Oct. 19, 1984, a representative of the university's athletics interests arranged for a student athlete to receive compensation for employment during the 1983 Christmas vacation, 1984 spring break and summer of 1984; further, the young man did not work the actual number of hours for which he was compensated, and finally, for those hours he did work, the hourly wage was excessive for the type of work he was performing.

3. In December 1984 and January 1985, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a football coach offered to arrange for the young man's father to receive medical treatments at the Bryan Nephrology Clinic in Bryan, Texas, even though the family previously had attempted to obtain treatment but was denied access.

4. In December 1984 and January 1985, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a football coach offered to arrange employment for two of the young man's sisters and the prospect's sister-in-law.

5. In January 1985, in a telephone conversation with the brother of a prospective student-athlete, the brother was told by a football coach that the football coach would arrange employment for his wife, the prospect's sister-in-law; further, during this same telephone conversation, the football coach told the brother that if his brother would attend the institution, arrangements would be made for the young man's father to receive treatments at the Bryan Nephrology Clinic in Bryan, Texas. Finally, during this telephone conversation, the football coach also told the brother that his brother would be well taken care of if he attended the institution.

6. In late January or early February 1985, during a visit to the home of a prospective student-athlete, a football coach offered material benefits to a student-athlete.

7. During the 1984-85 academic year, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a football coach contacted him in person off campus in excess of the permissible three occasions at sites other than the young man's high school.

8. During the 1986-87 academic year, a prospective student-athlete was contacted in person off campus for recruiting purposes on two occasions by a representative of the university's athletics interests; further, the representative offered an improper recruiting inducement to the young man, and finally, a football coach became aware of the improper recruiting contacts, but did not report this information to the NCAA enforcement staff.

9. On Sept. 29, 1984, while prospective student-athletes were making unofficial visits to the university's campus, a football coach gave each young man a pair of white high-top football shoes at no cost to them.

10. In January or February 1985, during a visit to the high school of a prospective student-athlete, a football coach told the young man that he "would be taken care of" if he signed a national letter of intent to attend Texas A&M University.

11. During the period December 1984 to June 1985, a representative of the university's athletics interests provided legal services at no cost to a prospective student-athlete at the suggestion of a football coach and made in-person recruiting contacts with the young man.

12. In May and June 1985, a representative of the university's athletics interests allegedly provided six tickets at a value of $13 per ticket to a prospective student-athlete in order for the young man to attend two professional football games.

13. April 1985, after a prospective student-athlete had signed a national letter of intent to attend the university, a football coach told the student (during a visit to the young man's high school) that an alleged representative of the university's athletic interests would provide round-trip automobile transportation in order for the young man to attend the university's spring football game and to be introduced to the crowd.

14. In February or March 1985, while recruiting prospective student-athletes, a football coach sent the young man a box containing several hats and T-shirts with "Texas A&M" printed on them.

15. During the 1984-85 academic year, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a football coach contacted him in person in excess of the permissible three occasions at the young man's high school.

16. In January or February 1985, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a football coach allegedly provided local automobile transportation and $100 cash to the young man.

17. In January and February 1985, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a football coach allegedly offered to provide the young man cash for expenses to attend if he would enroll in the university and if he performed well enough to be selected to conference or national all-star teams.

18. In April 1985, after a prospective student-athlete had signed a national letter of intent to attend the university, a football coach told him (during a visit to the young man's high school) that an alleged representative of the university's athletics interests would provide round-trip automobile transportation in order for the young man to attend the university's spring football game; further, he was prepared for this trip, but the representative did not appear at the scheduled time and location.

19. During the 1984-85 academic year, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a football coach contacted him in person in excess of the permissible three occasions at the young man's high school.

20. In January 1986 and 1987, during the official paid visits to the university's campus, three young men allegedly received sweatshirts from their student hosts.

21. (A) In January 1987, during the official paid visits of two prospective student-athletes, the young man's student host allegedly provided each prospect with a sweatsuit and baseball caps.

21. (B) In January 1987, during the official paid visits of two prospective student-athletes, the young men's student host allegedly told them that extra benefits are available to the football student-athletes, such as boots and jewelry.

22. In January 1987, during the official paid visit to the university's campus of prospective student-athletes, a student-athlete (the young men's student host) purchased a hat for each of the two young men with cash that was provided to him to entertain the prospects.

23. On February 12, 1985, the day prior to the national letter of intent signing date, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a football coach reportedly served refreshments to the young man at an apartment that was owned by a representative of the university's athletics interests.

24. (A) During the period December 1984 to February 1985, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a football coach made statements that reasonably led the young man to believe he would receive material benefits if he would enroll at the institution.

24. (B) During the period December 1984 to February 1985, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a football coach made statements that reasonably led the young man to believe he would receive material benefits if he would enroll at the institution; further, the young man's high school football coach reinforced the young man's understanding.

25. During the 1984-85 academic year, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, two football coaches contacted the young man in person off campus for recruiting purposes on more than the permissible three occasions at sites other than the young man's educational institution.

26. In the spring of 1986, after a student-athlete told members of the football coaching staff that he might leave the institution, a football coach allegedly offered to provide the young man shoes, pants and other necessities if he would remain at the institution.

27. During the enrollment of a student-athlete, a graduate assistant football coach allegedly gave the student cash on at least three separate occasions. Specifically, during the 1985 football season, the coach gave the student $400 cash for his four complimentary tickets for the institution's home football game with the University of Texas, Austin; further, the coach gave the student at least $10 on two additional occasions for the young man's personal use.

28. During the 1985-86 academic year, while recruiting prospective student-athletes, a representative of the university' athletics interests reportedly made an in-person off-campus recruiting contact with the young men at their high school campus after a football game.

Specifically, the young men's high school football coach introduced the prospects to the representative who spoke with the young men in the hallway of the field house adjacent to the coaches' offices subsequent to a home football game.

29. During the summer of 1983, members of the university's football coaching staff reportedly held meetings according to position with members of the university's intercollegiate football team.

30. In April or May 1984, in response to a request by a student-athlete, a coach allegedly provided $100 cash for his personal use; further, the coach gave the young man this cash with the understanding that the young man would repay the coach at a later date, although no such payment was made.

31. In April or May 1983, a coach was allegedly involved in attempting to arrange an extra benefit for a student-athlete. Specifically, a graduate assistant was approached by the student, who requested $500 cash.

PROCEDURAL VIOLATIONS

1. During a period beginning in 1985 and ending in 1987, members of the football coaching staff were allegedly assigned former student-athletes or the parents of these former student-athletes for the purpose of reviewing subject areas that might be discussed if an NCAA enforcement representative contacted these former student-athletes or parents and requested an interview.

2. A football coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics.

3. A football coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics.

Specifically, the coach allegedly demonstrated a knowing and willful effort on his part to operate the university's intercollegiate football program contrary to the requirements and provisions of NCAA legislation.

4. A football coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics.

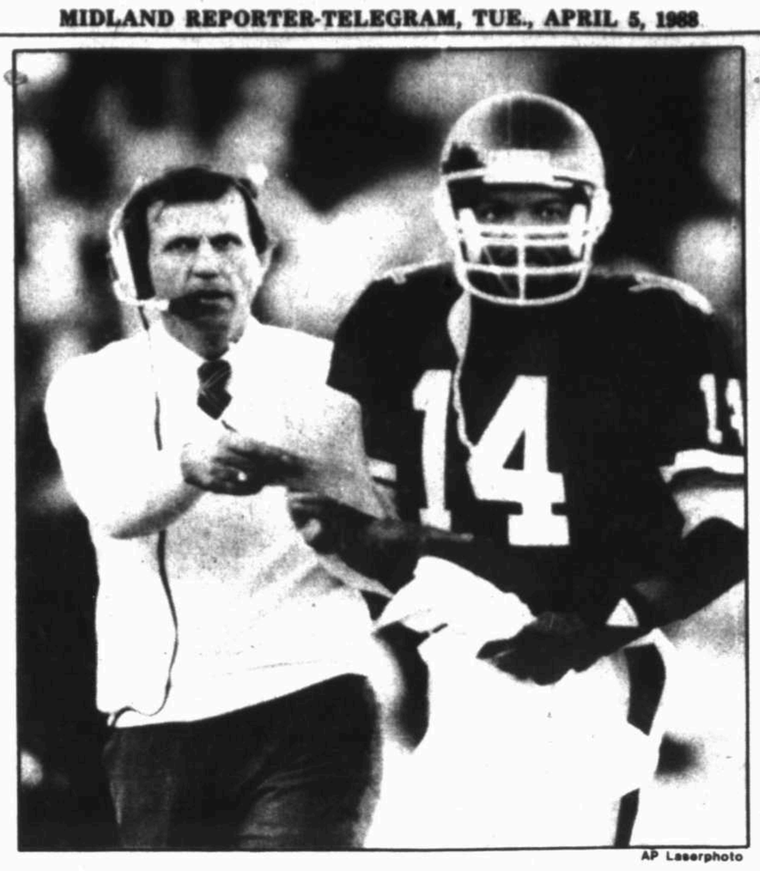

Specifically, the coach allegedly demonstrated a knowing and willful effort on his part to operate the university's intercollegiate football program contrary to the requirements and provisions of NCAA legislation. Also, in a December 16, 1987, interview with NCAA Enforcement Representatives, the coach provided false and misleading information concerning his involvement in and knowledge of an alleged violation.

5. A football coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics.

Specifically, the coach allegedly demonstrated a knowing and willful effort on his part to operate the university's intercollegiate football program contrary to the requirements and provisions of NCAA legislation. Also, during interviews on June 12, 1985, and December 16, 1987, with NCAA Enforcement Representatives the coach provided false and misleading information concerning his involvement in and knowledge of an alleged violation.

6. The institution's certificate of compliance forms for the 1984-85 and 1985-86 academic years were erroneous in that the alleged violations in this inquiry indicate that the institution's football program was not in compliance with NCAA legislation at the time the forms were signed; further, willful knowledge at the time that certain practices of the university's intercollegiate football program were not in compliance with NCAA legislation.

7. The scope and nature of the violations in this official inquiry demonstrate a lack of appropriate institutional control and monitoring in the administration of the institution's intercollegiate football program.

The report said the ticket-selling violations mainly involved former scholarship football players in violation of NCAA, SWC and university ticket policy rules.

But the report said it found no evidence "of a pattern of conscious or willful violation of NCAA or SWC rules and regulations by either present or former Texas A&M University staff or alumni."

The internal inquiry was handled by two former Aggies — Arno W. Krebs Jr. and Otway B. Denny Jr. Both were members of the Houston law firm of Fulbright and Jaworski.

Of the nine SWC schools, only Arkansas, Rice and Baylor have not been subject to football investigations.

Houston is awaiting findings on alleged violations of extra-benefits rules. Its own investigation into the Cougars football program resulted in the barring of a booster from contact with players.

At Southern Methodist, the football program was suspended for all of last season under the NCAA "death penalty" rule for repeated recruiting violations.

SMU also voluntarily has suspended its 1988 season after the NCAA reduced its schedule to seven away games. Football scholarships have been trimmed to 15 per year through 1990.

At Texas, a two-year NCAA probation reduced from 25 to 20 the number of scholarships for the 1988-89 school year. Recruiting visits were trimmed from 95 to 75.

Texas Christian is in the midst of a three-year probation for football violations. TCU was banned from bowl appearances in 1986, had scholarships restricted in 1987-88 and forfeited some $343,000 in television revenue from the 1983-84 season.

Texas Tech served a one-year probation with a reduction of three scholarships.

Henry came into his own midway through the season and it was his all-around play that helped propel Midland College into the Region V tournament and into the finals. The 6-7 all-conference, all-region selection averaged 16.3 points per game, blocked 29 shots, made 63 steals and contributed 81 assists. In addition, his 34 three-point goals led the Midland College and he was 75 per cent from the free throw line.

Henry came to Midland from Grand Prairie, where he was an all-stater, and at MC the Chaps were 25-7 last season.

Brent Dabbs, Connecticut's contribution to the U.S. A. team, is worth keeping an eye on Saturday night when Texas faces the U.S.A. The 6-9 pivotman from Mattatuck Community College, averaged 18 points and 13 rebounds and was voted Region XXI's MVP this past season.

Dabbs is one who is all for the three-point field goal shot. It not only opened up the paint for him, but when the opposition collapsed inside, he simply passed it outside. In two years, he wound up with 132 assists.

Over two seasons, Dabbs was a 61 per cent shooter from the field.

Winfield vetoes trade

HOUSTON (AP) — New York Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield rejected a proposed trade that would have sent him to the Houston Astros in exchange for right fielder Kevin Bass, the Houston Post reported today.

Quoting sources, the newspaper said the Astros and Yankees agreed to the deal and needed only Winfield's approval to complete the transaction,

But Winfield, an 11-time All-Star Monday invoked his right to refuse a trade as a 10-year veteran with five years' experience with his current club.

Astros General Manager Bill Wood said late Monday that talks involving the Astros and Winfield were "dead in the water."

But Wood did not rule out the possibility a trade eventually could be worked out between the clubs.

Wood declined further comment on the matter, saying only that he had spoken several times over the weekend with Yankees General Manger Lou Piniella about the possibility of bringing Winfield to Houston.

The Yankees reportedly had agreed to pay a part of Winfield's 1988 salary, estimated at $1.85 million and also agreed to pay a hefty portion of a $1.9 million buyout clause that would have relieved the Astros of the final two years of Winfield's contract which runs through 1990.

The newspaper reported that the buyout clause would have been attractive to the Astros because of projected availability of left-handed hitter Cameron Drew as the club's starting right fielder in 1989.

Drew, one of the brightest prospects in the Astros' farm system in several years, hit .480 during the exhibition season before he was sent to Class AAA Tucson, Ariz.

Bass, who has hit .311 and .284, respectively, and had a total of 164 RBI the last two seasons, reportedly is coveted by the Yankees for his ability as a switch hitter. He signed a two-year, $1.62 million contract plus with the Astros in February.

Although Winfield has a right to refuse any trade because of his status as a 10-and-5 man, Yankees owner George Steinbrenner has maintained there is a clause in Winfield's contract which waives his right of refusal.

Sources told the newspaper Monday the contract clause may supercede Winfield's right to refuse a trade to specific clubs, but the identity of any club or clubs to which Winfield must accept a trade, if any, is not known.

The Yankees have been actively trying to trade Winfield for several weeks.

Clements: State picking up steam

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' economic slump is nearing its end and the state's business leaders should continue efforts to diversify the state's industries, Gov. Bill Clements says.

Clements

Clements made the remarks Monday in a speech at a meeting of the Texas Association of Businesses.

The governor said recent decisions by 18 companies to relocate in Texas point to a a brighter economic future for the state.

"These are just examples of the strong evidence that the march toward full recovery is under way," Clements said.

"Because of your commitment, our economy is picking up steam.

"We're turning the corner, and we want to step on the accelerator, so to speak, gun the engine."

The latest Texas unemployment figures indicate a .3 percent decline from February to March, but the state's 8.1 percent unemployment level was the same this time last year.

Some economic experts have predicted, however, that Texas's recovery will be slow.

The governor also said that the state should be cautious as it rebuilds from the ruins of a collapsed domestic oil market.

"My confidence in Texans and our economy is unshakable," Clements said.

"There are no limits on how far we can go or speed limits on how fast we can get there, but getting there won't be easy. But then, Texans haven't come this far by taking it easy."

Clements emphasized that the state must diversify its economy. He cited as examples Ditto Apparel of California's move to Weslaco and Transdata Inc. of Ohio's move to Tyler.

TCB-Odessa honored

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas Commerce Bank Odessa on Monday received the 1988 Texas Business of the Year award for a publicly held firm.

Texas Commerce Chief Executive Officer Ronald L. Fancher accepted the 16th annual Texas Association of Business award from Gov. Bill Clements.

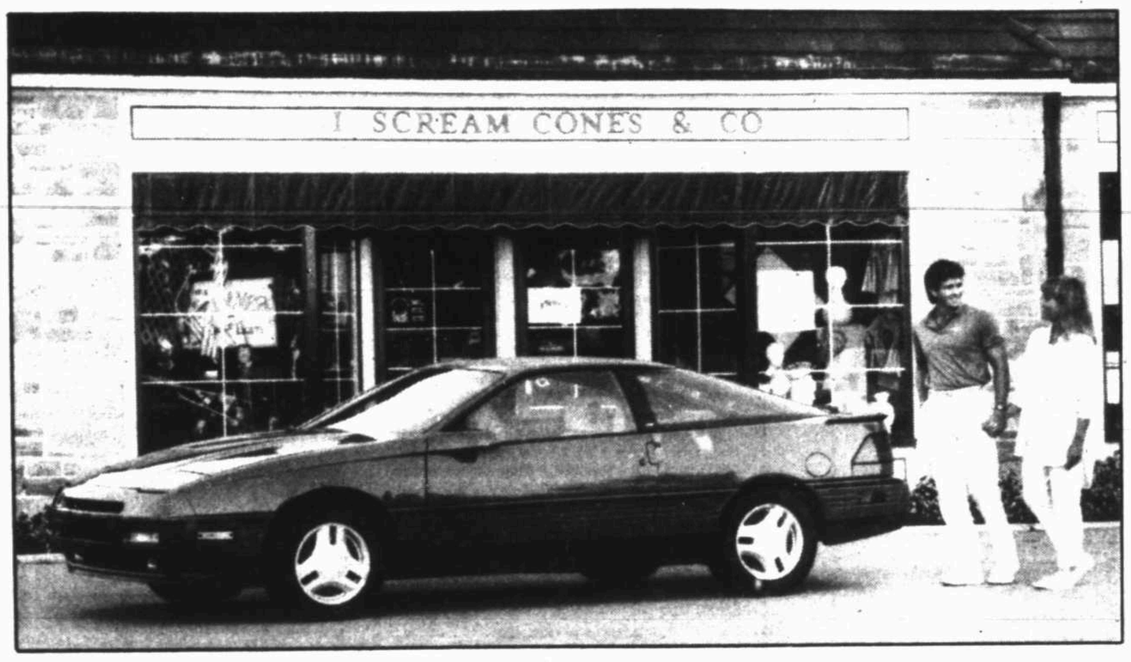

"We're delighted to be here today, we're delighted to be a part of this state and we're delighted to have this opportunity," Fancher said.

Texas Commerce has experienced increased efficiency and increased profits, "and we are pleased to report that," he said.

"Although the industry recently has "taken a lot of raps," Fancher said, "We're pleased to be bankers."

Clements said Texas Commerce and MP Industries Inc. of Tyler, the recipient of the award for a privately held firm, personify Texas' "can-do, winning spirit."

"These people and their companies have demonstrated outstanding achievements in business operations, employee relations and in contributions to their communities and their industry," Clements said.

Morgan Stanley analyst foresees '89 recession

By BRUCE RAMSEY
Hearst News Service

John D. Paulus takes little cheer from the news that the trade deficit has begun to shrink. Paulus, chief economist for the Wall Street investment firm Morgan Stanley & Co., expects the deficit to keep shrinking a bit in the next few months. But it won't be enough, he predicts, to forestall another plunge in the dollar.

The result, he says, will probably be a recession in 1989.

A year ago, Paulus' message was less gloomy: Corporate cost-cutting, he said, was making the nation more efficient and keeping a lid on inflation. No recession was in sight.

Several things have changed. In the past year, he says, Japanese and other foreign investors had stopped voluntarily financing the U.S. merchandise trade deficit by net purchases of bonds, stocks and real estate in the United States. Instead, their governments did it for them, in an effort to stop their currencies from rising too much against the dollar.

"Last year, foreign central banks supplied more than 80 percent of the capital inflow into this country, by buying Treasury bills," he says. That kind of buying, he says, cannot be relied upon.

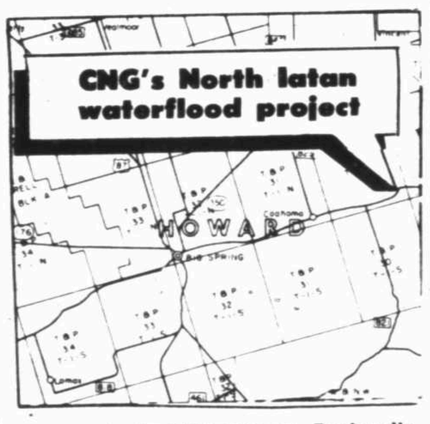

Financing the trade deficit would be less of a worry if it were shrinking rapidly. But it isn't. The reason progress is so slow, Paulus says, is "the relative price of imports hasn't gone up enough in the United States."

Foreign producers have raised their prices here only about one-fifth the amount needed to offset the fall in the dollar, he calculates. To account for the rest of the difference, he says, they have cut their costs or their margins of profit. They have gone to great lengths not to increase their prices because they have won a piece of the U.S. market and want to keep it.

CNG invests $18 million in North Iatan Field

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

A waterflood project now progressing in the North Iatan Field of Howard County is expected to result in the recovery of an additional 4.5 million barrels of oil, according CNG Producing Co. the field's new owner and operator.

"We expect production to increase from 150 barrels per day to over 1,400 barrels per day by mid-1991 when production peaks," says Robert A. Lamb, senior vice president for the New Orleans-based operator, which drills about 120 wells per year in the Midcontinent, Panhandle, Permian Basin and Rocky Mountain regions. Without the waterflood project the firm's engineers estimate only 500,000 more barrels could be recovered under primary production.

CNG, the oil and gas and production subsidary of Consolidated Natural Gas, plans to drill 19 new producing wells and 21 water injection wells in the 520-acre unit to complement the 21 existing and two salt water injection wells in the field. About-one third of the wells have been drilled to date.

"Wells in the field are about 3,000 to 3,500 feet deep, and drilling goes pretty fast," said Lamb.

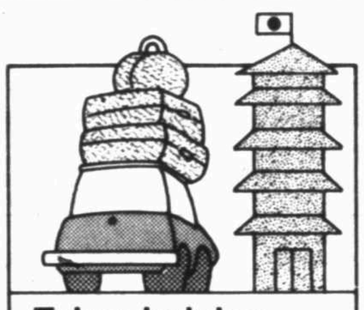

Including purchase cost, Lamb says project costs will total about $18 million when complete.

Injection in the northern edge of the 40-year-old field is expected to begin in November with an initial injection rate of 9,000 barrels water per day and an expected peak of 18,000 barrels per day within the year.

"We looked at a number of waterflood prospects for a long time before making this match," says Lamb. "We think it was a good buy." He added that the company was looking to acquire other waterflood prospects in the Permian Basin.

The Iatan waterflood project will be operated for CNG by D.L. Ray of Dallas.

New York City most costly for business travel

NEW YORK (AP) — New York is by far the nation's most expensive city for business travelers, leading other high-priced Northeastern cities with an average daily tab of about $276, according to a new survey.

At the other end of the spectrum, Roanoke, Va., and Buffalo, N.Y., tied as the cheapest U.S. cities for business travelers at an average cost of $108 a day, according to the Corporate Travel magazine survey released Monday.

The monthly trade publication said its annual business travel survey indicated the nation's top 100 business cities cost corporate travelers an average $158.08 per day, including a hotel room in a city's central business district, three meals and a rental car.

Northeastern cities dominated the survey's most expensive business centers, with No. 1 New York followed by Boston, Washington and Newark, N.J.

After Roanoke and Buffalo, the cheapest business cities were Spokane, Wash., Rochester, Minn., and Springfield, Mo.

Jane Edelstein, the publisher of Corporate Travel, said the economic uncertainty created by the October stock market crash means changes in business travel costs may not follow their past patterns.

"Travel costs in each city will fluctuate more than in the past, as hoteliers in each city closely analyze what room rate they can charge without sacrificing occupancy," Edelstein said.

In New York, she said, some hotels had up to 20 percent of their corporate contracts with Wall Street firms that may have been hit hard by the market collapse.

Magazine leads push for tax law repeal, reform

By KATHLEEN MYLER
Hearst News Service

In an unusual move for the personal finance publication, Money magazine calls upon its readers in its April issue to write Congress demanding a repeal of nine tax laws, six of which were part of the massive Tax Reform Act of 1986.

Based on policy analysis and interviews with dozens of accountants and lawyers, the magazine says it concluded that the "nine laws deserve to be repealed or amended drastically."

The story includes a suggestion that readers send a message to Washington by "checking off boxes next to the laws that outrage you, ripping out this article and sending it to the top tax lawmaker," U.S. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Magazine spokeswoman Barbara Orlando said the call for policy reforms was not entirely unprecedented. In March 1987, Money urged its readers to lobby the Securities and Exchange Commission for changes in the way fees are assessed on mutual fund accounts. The SEC reformed its rules this year in response to 1,600 letters from investors — more than half from Money readers.

"We do feel that Money can play a role in public policy," Orlando said.

In the article calling for repeal of selected tax laws, the magazine says its suggestions could reduce tax revenues. But it says its sources indicate that Americans would be willing to pay a higher tax rate to eliminate the following:

- "The kiddie tax": This reform taxes unearned income exceeding $1,000 of children age 13 or younger at their parents' rates.

The law penalizes middle-class families by taxing the investment income from a child's paper-route pay and discourages parents from saving for their children's education, Money says. The magazine says Congress should raise the amount of investment income children can earn before it's taxed at their parents' rate to $3,000, clamp down on the income-shifting advantages of trusts used by wealthy parents and adopt a proposal to tax interest or dividends earned on a child's wages at the child's rate.

- Non-deductible IRAs: The reform limiting the deductibility of contributions to Individual Retirement Accounts is hurting the nation's savings rate, the magazine says.
- The marriage penalty: The deduction for married working couples was scrapped in 1986 on the basis that tax reform's lower rates and fewer brackets made the write off unnecessary. According to a Princeton University economist, 40 percent

Oil prices open slightly lower

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices showed some weakness at midmorning, slipping 8 cents to stand at $16.93.

Oil prices hardly budged Monday in extremely light trading, which dealers ascribed to a seasonal spring slowdown, the U.S. holiday weekend and uncertainty over the outcome of an OPEC meeting scheduled later this month.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the May-delivery price of West Texas Intermediate, the key U.S. crude, closed down 7 cents at $17.01 per 42-gallon barrel.

Among refined products, wholesale No. 2 heating oil closed at 46.00 cents per gallon, down .15 cent from Thursday's close, and wholesale unleaded gasoline closed at 49.35 cents per gallon, down .03 cent from Thursday.

U.S. commodity markets were closed Friday for the Good Friday holiday.

Dealers said many market participants were reluctant to buy or sell oil pending the conclusion of an Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries pricing committee meeting April 9 in Vienna.

Dollar up against most currencies

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against most major currencies in quiet early trading in Europe today when markets reopened after a four-day shutdown in most centers for the long Easter holiday weekend.

Gold prices were mixed after the holiday break.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.58 yen to a close at 124.43 yen, compared with 123.85 on Monday. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 124.52 yen.

In London, the British pound, which hit a six-year high of $1.8895 for two straight days last Thursday and Friday, eased to $1.888. However, many dealers expected sterling to push ahead later in the week.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning today, compared with the most recent previous rates which were quoted in Europe on Friday:

—1.6585 West German marks, up from 1.6565

—1.3658 Swiss francs, up from 1.3635

—5.6225 French francs, down from 5.6270

—1.8615 Dutch guilders, up from 1.8595

—1.2415 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2335.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $455.75 a troy ounce, compared with late Thursday's $454.50. At mid-morning Tuesday, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $456.

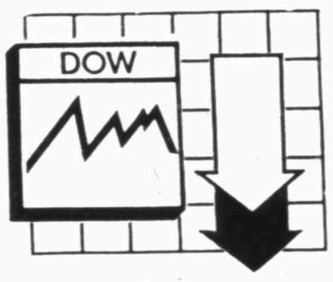

In Zurich, the noon bid price was $455.75, down from $457.50 late Thursday.

Bullion dealers said trading was quiet with no new direction following the Easter holiday.

In Hong Kong, gold markets were closed because of a public holiday.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.78 a troy ounce, compared with Thursday's $6.72.

Stock market posts 7 point loss

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted a broad loss Monday, faced with rising interest rates and renewed uncertainties about stronger-than-expected economic statistics.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 7.46 to 1,980.60.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 458 up, 1,106 down and 407 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 182.24 million shares, against 139.87 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index fell 1.43 to 145.17.

The Dow Jones industrial average would have shown a considerably wider loss but for the preformance of one of its components — F.W. Woolworth, which jumped 8⅞ to 54⅛. The company said it had received notice that a group headed by Herbert Haft was seeking regulatory approval to buy up to 15 percent of its stock.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $25.16 billion, or 0.97 percent, in value.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 3.24 to 297.15, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 2.80 at 256.09.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market dropped 2.75 to 371.89. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 295.01, down 1.42.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Woolworth seeks to avoid Dart takeover

NEW YORK (AP) — F.W. Woolworth Co. has received notice that Dart Group Corp. intends to acquire a substantial amount of the stock in the nation's 13th largest retailer.

Woolworth, which built its reputation in the five-and-dime store business before expanding into specialty retailing, responded to Dart's move with the adoption by its board of a "poison-pill" takeover defense.

The retailer said in a statement Monday it was notified a partnership controlled by Dart Chairman Herbert Haft had filed with federal antitrust officials documents indicating the group intended to acquire $15 million or more of Woolworth's stock.

Japanese auto plants could cost 45,000 jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese auto plants in the United States, through efficiency and parts imports, could cost the domestic industry 45,000 jobs between 1985 and 1990, a General Accounting Office study says.

The job-loss estimate offered Monday was far below the 200,000 forecast by the United Auto Workers union.

Japanese automakers have invested more than $5 billion in U.S. assembly plants since 1980. Seven Japanese auto manufacturers and more than 100 Japanese auto parts suppliers operate in the United States.

Consumer confidence dips in March

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer confidence dipped slightly in March amid concern about unemployment, a new survey by a business-backed research concern says.

The Conference Board reported Monday that its Consumer Confidence Index slipped to 112.8 from 114.9 last month. The index has a 1985 base of 100.

The Conference Board said consumers are confident about general business conditions, but 29 percent of the survey's respondents said jobs were plentiful, down from 31 percent in February.

Supreme Court lets stand libel award

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has let stand a $3 million libel award won by cigarette maker Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. against CBS Inc. and a television anchorman in Chicago.

In another significant case, the high court agreed on Monday to review rulings limiting Korean Air Lines' financial liability for a 1983 disaster in which 269 people died — the shooting down of a KAL passenger jet over Soviet airspace.

The justices also agreed to examine the authority of federal judges to second-guess decisions by pension and welfare plans that deny benefits to workers.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Shell Oil proven reserves reach 18-year high

HOUSTON (SWN) — Shell Oil Co.'s combined proved oil and gas reserves reached an 18-year high of 4.15 billion barrels of oil equivalent in 1987, John F. Bookout, president and chief executive officer, announced.

In Shell Oil's 1987 annual report, Bookout said that oil and gas reserve replacement in 1987 was 140 percent of total production and 133 percent of domestic production. Cost of domestic oil and gas replacement was $3.77 per equivalent barrel.

Over the past decade, Shell Oil's domestic reserves have grown by 33 percent to just under four billion barrels of crude oil equivalent–an increase of roughly one billion barrels.

Monsanto plans expansion of Texas plant

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Monsanto Agricultural Co. said Tuesday that it is doubling the original capacity of its four-year-old Alimet liquid supplement plant in Alvin, Texas, to bring total capacity to 200 million pounds a year.

Alvin is 20 miles south of Houston.

Work on the expansion is scheduled to begin immediately and be completed in 1989, a Monsanto news release said. Alimet is a liquid form of methionine, an amino acid used to promote growth in poultry and other livestock.

Officials of the company, which is based in St. Louis, said expansion of the Chocolate Bayou plant was necessary to meet a growing demand for Aliment, now sold in over 30 countries.

Kimco buys interests in producing properties

ARLINGTON, Texas (SWN) — Kimco Energy Corp. — formerly Henry Energy Corp. — has announced the purchase of working interests in certain oil and gas properties in Texas and Oklahoma and added net reserves of approximately 240,000 MCF of gas and several thousand barrels of oil.

This purchase increases Kimco's gas reserves by approximately 45 percent.

Maxus cancels agreement to sell subsidiary

DALLAS (SWN) — Maxus Energy Corp. announced the termination of its previously announced agreement to sell its Thermal Power subsidiary to Geothermal Resources International, Inc. because of the purchaser's inability to secure necessary financing commitments.

Maxus said it would continue to review the desirability of selling or continuing to operate all or a part of its geothermal business.

Pogo, shareholders agree to amend charter

HOUSTON (SWN) — Pogo Producing Co. announced that it has entered into an agreement with holders of its preferred stock providing for a charter amendment under which all such shares are to be redeemed or exchanged principally for securities on May 31, 1988.

Under the amendment, Pogo will be entitled on May 31, 1988, to redeem or exchange all outstanding shares of the preferred stock for aggregate consideration of $37,960,000 principal amount of new Pogo senior subordinated debentures, 4,380,000 shares of Pogo common stock and $9,490,000 in cash. The existing terms of the preferred stock provide for mandatory redemption of all shares on May 31, 1988, for a total of $73 million in cash, subject to availability of sufficient legal surplus and capital.

Enterra finals purchase of CRC-Evans Pipeline

HOUSTON (SWN) — Enterra Corp. has announced the finalization of two important transactions: the closing of the acquisition of CRC-Evans Pipeline International, Inc. and the closing of a financing package that provided cash for the acquisition and future expansion purposes.

Financing for the acquisition was provided by a $25 million five-year term loan arranged with Wells Fargo and Continental Illinois banks. The banks also provided a $15 million three-year revolving credit for further acquisitions and general corporate purposes.

In conjunction with the acquisition, Thomas L. Kelly II, formerly a CRC-Evans director, and D. Dale Wood, president and chief executive officer of CRC-Evans, were elected to the board of directors of Enterra.

FERC approves Transco cost recovery plan

NEW YORK (NYT) — Transco Energy Co., the major supplier of natural gas to the New York area, announced Monday that it would be allowed to pass along to customers $675 million, or three-quarters of what it expects to spend in settling contract disputes with natural gas producers.

In exchange for the permission to pass along the charges, Transco is accepting the federal designation as an open access transporter, the equivalent of a common carrier.

More than half the cost will be paid by customers in the New York area, according to the company, and the charges will raise the gas bills of residential and commercial consumers in the New York area by about 2 percent. The payments will be made over five years.

The Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., a Transco subsidiary, supplies about 80 percent of the natural gas used in the New York metropolitan area, according to David F. Mackie, the subsidiary's president. Transcontinental is also the major supplier to the Public Service Electric & Gas Co. of New Jersey, Consolidated Edison and the Long Island Lighting Co.

About two years ago Transco began settling contracts with suppliers, with whom it signed deals in the late 1970s and early 1980s to take gas supplies at pre-scheduled prices for years to come. Those contracts became uneconomical because in 1984, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission allowed consumers to buy directly from suppliers, bypassing the pipelines, and because the price of gas on the open market fell.

Transco has been settling the contracts for 15 to 20 cents on the dollar, said Mackie, and has settled contracts representing 93 percent of supplies, known as "deliverability." It has paid about $700 million, some of it in interim settlements, and expects a final charge of about $900 million, to settle past claims for gas it failed to take, and future claims.

In a decision last Thursday, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission said that in exchange for becoming a common carrier, Transco could bill customers for 75 percent of the cost of the settlements. Of that, one-third would be paid by the utilities based on their demand, and two-thirds would be paid as a surcharge on shippers. Local utilities are generally the shippers for the gas they sell, and other users who buy direct from producers are also shippers.

As an open access transporter Transco will be required, subject to certain limitations, to carry gas from producers to consumers who have contracted with each other independent of the pipeline. That will turn the company from a gas merchant into a gas carrier.

The ruling falls under the framework of the Commission's Order 500, a policy statement issued last year for resolving take-or-pay contract disputes around the nation.

Transco applied to become an open access transporter on Friday. Assuming the commission acts quickly, the settlement could take effect on May 1, the company said.

"What this does for Transco is turn a contingent asset, dollars we thought we would be able to recover from our customers, into a sure recovery method," Mackie said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

S&L should correct 1099-INT withholding error

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. I put $20,000 into a three-year certificate of deposit at a savings and loan association in October. In January, the S&L sent me a Form 1099-INT listing the interest accumulated on the CD. In February, they sent me a "corrected" 1099 showing that federal income tax had been withheld from that interest.

When I inquired at the S&L, they told me they made a mistake and didn't put my Social Security number in the computer. I gave them my SS number when I obtained the CD.

I don't mind paying the tax. However, because the amount of the tax was deducted from my CD, there will be less money there to earn daily compounded interest.

What recourse do I have? They claim they can't correct the 1099 again or do anything about the error.

A. Hogwash! Tell the clowns at that S&L that they darn well better correct their error. Be pleasant — but firm — at first. If they continue to stonewall you, let them know you are going to take your complaint to the Office of Community Investment, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, 1700 G. Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20552. FHLBB regulates federally-insured S&Ls.

The tax foul-up you ran into is known as "backup withholding." Every payer of interest and dividends isrequired to withhold 20 percent and send it to the Internal Revenue Service, if you do not give the payer your "taxpayer identification number." For most folks, that's a Social Security number.

You provided that number. You didn't goof. The people at the S&L did. They sent you one "corrected" 1099, which turned out to be incorrect. Now, they are obliged to produce one that is correct and square things away with the IRS, which gets copies of all 1099s.

The interest that accumulates on your CD is taxable as ordinary income. When you file your 1987 income tax return, you have to report the CD interest that built up last year. But there was no reason for backup withholding to be applied to that interestes of the present world always within the context of the aim and inspiration of the "development of peoples," which are still very far from being exhausted. I therefore propose to extend the impact of that message by bringing it to bear, with its possible applications, upon the present historical moment, which is no less dramatic than that of twenty years ago . . .

The configuration of the world in the course of the last twenty years, while preserving certain fundamental constants, has undergone notable changes and presents some totally new aspects. . .

The aim of the preseons.

There was no good reason for the 10-day delay. During that time, the $60,000 involved sat in the brokerage's account — earning money for that firm.

The three-day delay could be a different story. Aug. 7 was a Friday. If you placed your order for CDs late that day, the brokerage might not have been able to buy a CD for you until Monday, Aug. 10. But if you placed your order reasonably early, the three-day wait was out of line.

Q. The local office of a big brokerage firm advertised six-month certificates of deposit with 7.15 percent interest. We went to that office on the day the advertisement appeared and placed an order. The CDs we bought pay only 7.05 percent interest.

Is this a regular procedure, or is it deceptive advertising?

A. That depends on exactly what the ad said.

If it stated that CDs could be bought through that brokerage on that particular day at 7.15 percent interest, it was false advertising.

However, if the ad mentioned 7.15 percent and carried a statement that interest rates are subject to change, it was on the up-and-up. When looking at financial advertisements and sales literature, you should read everything — especially the small print.

TAXES

of two-income couples still pay more in taxes than if only one of them worked, however.

■ The second mortgage deduction: Permitting full deductibility of second mortgages and home-equity loans prompts Americans to continue overborrowing at the risk of their homes, according to Money.

"Tax reform's limits on the deductibility of interest on personal loans was supposed to discourage debt, an admirable goal."

To achieve it, the magazine suggests that interest on all second mortgages and home-equity loans should have the same deductibility limits as personal loans. The limits are 40 percent deductible in 1988, 20 percent deductible in 1989, 10 percent in 1990 and zero after that.

■ The phantom funds' tax: Money calls for the repeal of the law that says a mutual fund shareholder owes taxes on his portion of his fund's gross income, not just on the money paid out to him.

■ The charity write-off: By limiting the deduction for charitable contributions to people who itemize their tax returns, Congress has eliminated this write-off for 70 percent of taxpayers, according to the magazine. A Harvard University economist estimates that charities would get $6 billion more a year if charitable contributions remained deductible for non-itemizers as well, according to Money.

■ The penalty on laid-off employees: If a worker younger than 59-1/2 is laid off and automatically receives distributions from his company savings plan, he'll owe a tax penalty of 10 percent on the funds unless he rolls them all over into an IRA.

■ The 7.5 percent medical deduction: This steep threshold for medical deductions, up from 5 percent of adjusted gross income a year ago, should be replaced by a sliding scale based on income, says Money.

Briercroft Announces The End Of The One Way CD.

THE OPPORTUNITY PLUS C.D.

Liquidity Plus a Guaranteed Increasing Rate

Briercroft has changed the traditional "one way CD." With our new Opportunity Plus CD, you don't have to pay a penalty for early withdrawal and we will guarantee a 1.00% rate increase if you choose to renew your CD. Our rate increase guarantee means the longer you leave your money in, the more money you make. Most certificate of deposit investments work one way. You put your money in, then wait for a fixed period of time to withdraw your principal. If you take your money out before the maturity date of your CD, you incur a substantial penalty for early withdrawal. The Opportunity Plus CD gives you liquidity and a guaranteed higher rate if you renew.

Money When You Need It

At Briercroft, we know there are times when you need a liquid investment. Should you need your money for an emergency, you may withdraw anytime after the first 90 days with no penalty and without giving prior notice. Even if you withdraw a portion of your principal, we will still guarantee a 1.00% rate increase on the remaining principal when you renew your certificate.

Here's How It Works

When you invest a minimum of $10,000 for one year, you can withdraw your funds as often as once every 90 days with no interest penalty. Your interest will be paid quarterly. At the end of the year, you have an option. You can either withdraw your money or, if you choose to renew for a second year, Briercroft will guarantee a 1.00% increase over your original rate of interest. If you choose to renew at the end of year two, Briercroft will guarantee another 1.00% increase over the second year rate of interest.

Advantage Payroll offers cost efficient service to employers

"Cost efficiency is the number one reason employers should look into having Advantage Payroll take over payroll," says Charlie Jones, Advantage Payroll owner.

"Once the service is set up we make a weekly phone call, at a predetermined time, to find out how many hours each employee worked, any new hires and other personnel changes, and his payroll is done," Jones explained. "It takes about two minutes to call in a 10-person payroll and once that call is completed the employer can forget about it. We take it from there."

The figures are then entered on Jones' personal computer and transmitted to the company's central mainframe computer. The computed payroll is then transmitted to the local office for printing and distribution.

Advantage figures quarterly payroll reports, federal and state payroll taxes and with aid from the national company stays abreast of changes in tax law. "Payroll tax laws have always been volatile," Jones said. "expecially for companies like restaurants, which have always been particularly complicated." Any type of business would benefit from Advantage Payroll Services, including medical clinics, doctor's offices, various retail establishments, hotels, service companies and child care facilities.

Simplifying your bookkeeping, handling all IRS correspondence and keeping complete records on each employee is just the beginning of the advantages at Advantage.

"One of the services we offer that many other companies cannot is direct deposit," Jones said. "The employee's paycheck is deposited directly into their checking account in any local bank or savings institution. Also, checks are actually written on Advantage's checking account, thereby simplifying the client's bookkeeping."

Jones, a native West Texan, said a number of companies are finding that doing the payroll in-house or hiring an accountant is less cost-effective. "In many companies the employee who handles payroll is usually the most competent and trustworthy person on your staff," Jones pointed out. "Why waste that individual's valuable time and talents on payroll when she could be straightening out insurance claims or following up on collections?"

For a presentation on how Advantage Payroll can work for you call 687-3304 and a representative will come at your convenience to introduce you to the services Advantage Payroll has to offer.

Advantage Payroll Service owners Charlie and Patrice Jones and Linda Holt, payroll specialist, invite you to check into the advantages at Advantage Payroll. Call 687-3304 to have a representative come out and explain the services Advantage Payroll offers.

Bob's Rental Center: Your one-stop lawn equipment sales and service dealer

While summertime mowing chores may be viewed as traditionally a "man-about-the-house" job, many women actually mow their own lawns, according to Barbara Ely, assistant manager at Bob's Rental Center.

"I would estimate that as many as 50 percent of our customers are either women or couples making a joint decision on their lawn equipment," Barbara guessed. "Many women enjoy the exercise and being out in the sun. I'm sure each woman has her own reason for mowing or not mowing."

Barbara specializes in helping women and their spouses in selecting lawn mowers, garden tillers, edgers and other lawn and garden equipment at Bob's, 2700 Rankin Hwy.

"First of all I urge everyone considering purchasing a piece of equipment to read Consumer Reports," Barbara said. "Articles in this and other consumer information magazines can help you select the right equipment for your situation. If you have a small lawn and a flower garden you won't need the same equipment as someone with acreage and a large vegetable garden."

Barbara also recommends shopping around for the best prices, but reminds clients that small, local dealers are always available to answer questions and perform preventive maintenance after the sale.

"When you buy something in a department store be ready to assemble it when you get home," Barbara reminded, "and if you have any questions about the product better get them answered before the purchase because the guy you bought it from will probably be working in a different department when you call back."

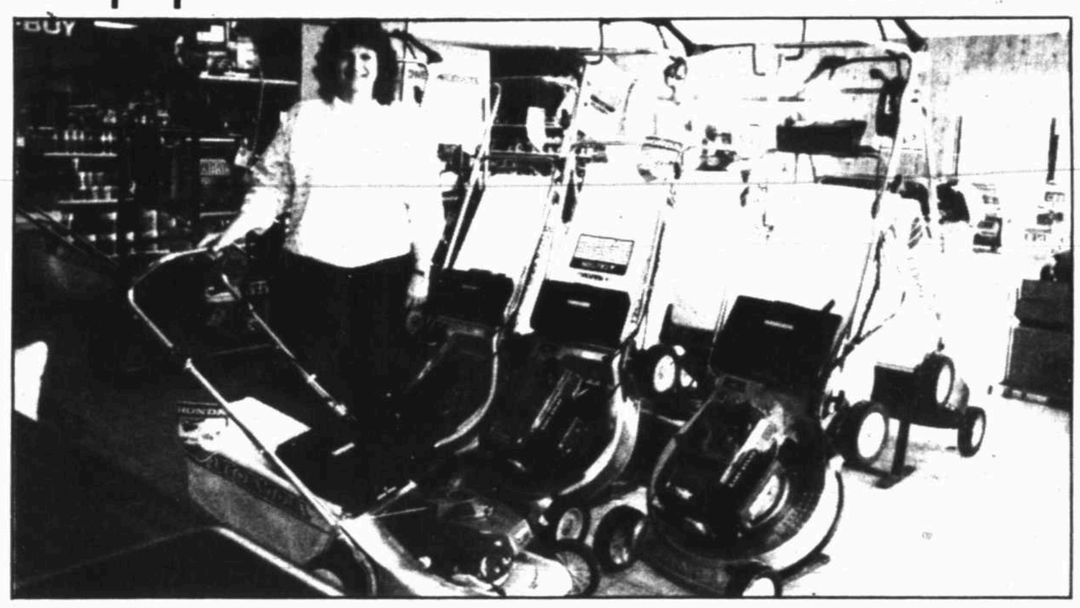

Selecting the right mower for the job is as important as deciding to purchase something in the first place, according to Barbara. "Here at Bob's we have everything from two- to four-cylinder gasoline engines, 17- to 21-inch deck sizes and polymer cases," she explained.

"Easy-starting machines are important to most consumers as are convenient, easy-to-use bags," Barbara continued. "Both Honda and Lawn-Boy specialize in these features and Bob's will deliver your purchase full of gasoline and ready to run."

Other lawn and garden equipment availalbe at Bob's includes electric-start gasoline and electric weed trimmers, garden tillers, and garden tools like shovels and rakes.

Or if you will only need the equipment periodically, Bob's will rent the equipment you need at a reasonable price. "Here at Bob's Rental we are willing to spend the time to make sure you get what you need," Barbara said.

Store hours are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday at Bob's Rental, 2700 Rankin Hwy. Come in and let Barbara or any of the friendly, efficient staff at Bob's Rental show you the different models they have available.

Barbara Ely, assistant manager at Bob's Rental Center, advises customers to read consumer information literature before making a decision to buy. Then come by Bob's, at 2700 Rankin Hwy., check their prices on lawn and garden equipment and let Barbara explain the advantages of different models.

Dimension Cable celebrates in April

The month of April has Dimension Cable services celebrating two big events. National Cable Month and the selection of a local technician for one of the highest awards Times Mirror Cable Television (TMCT) offers.

Helen "Lou" Turpin, a maintenance tech II for Dimension Cable in Midland, was admitted to The President's Club - one of seven employees chosen from a total of more than 2,300 men and women employed by TMCT.

"We are very proud of Lou's acceptance into the President's Club," affirmed Doug Smith, Dimension Cable general manager. "To be chosen for nomination into the President's Club is recognition that Lou is one of those special individuals on whom the company relies for exceptional contributions, innovation, creativity and leadership in our organization."

Ms. Turpin began her career at TMCT seven years ago as an installer and progressed to service technician and her present job as maintenance technician, described by Smith as "the most difficult field position we have."

"The fact that Ms. Turpin serves in a job that is normally not attempted by a woman is just one more example of her outstanding performance," Smith continued. Preventive maintenance of the largest of three trunk lines in Midland is the responsibility Ms. Turpin handles so well.

In his nomination of Ms. Turpin, Smith wrote, "Lou takes pride in her work and is happy to share her smile with customers she meets," and "A definitive decrease in trunk related problems has allowed us to enjoy a much improved level of customer satisfaction as a result of Lou's dedication to excellence. Syrian press critical of Shultz mission

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

DAMASCUS, Syria — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, carrying Middle East peace proposals, arrived in the Syrian capital today to a critical reception after an indecisive meeting with King Hussein of Jordan.

Shultz came to Damascus from Amman as a semi-official Syrian paper asked: "What is the use of this tour?"

The English-language Syria Times said Shultz's proposal for limited Palestinian self-rule in Israeli-occupied territories ignored "the inalienable rights of the Arab people of Palestine."

That reflected a serious challenge from Syria, Moscow's main Arab ally, to Shultz's blueprint for a Middle East peace plan. In Damascus, Shultz is to meet with President Hafez Assad.

In Amman, Shultz met with King Hussein for 90 minutes and State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said they had a "useful, thoughtful discussion."

Asked if there was any change in Shultz's statement that neither Israel nor Arab nations had made any commitment to Washington's latest blueprint for a Middle East peace plan, he said: "Nothing has changed on that."

He said that Hussein had insisted on an international peace conference as the only way to achieve a Middle East peace settlement.

Monday, Shultz met with Israeli leaders.

"We do have a sense of movement," a senior U.S. official said in Jerusalem after Shultz met Monday with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

A senior Israeli defense official said, meanwhile, that the government remained deadlocked and the only way to gain acceptance of the plan would be for Shultz to persuade Hussein to accept it.

"I feel it can bring about a change," the Israeli official said in a briefing for American reporters, under rules that barred identifying him.

But the U.S. official, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said Hussein might reply that Israel should act first. The divided Israelis "should pull themselves together as a government," he said.

The U.S. plan calls for three years of self-rule, but not statehood, for the 1.5 million Palestinians living in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Negotiations on an overall settlement would open in December.

Although Shultz set a mid-March deadline for a reply, Israel, Jordan and Syria all have held back — neither accepting nor rejecting the U.S. plan.

With the deadline past, the U.S. official said there was still time for Shultz "to get real momentum" toward a Middle East settlement in the Reagan administration's remaining nine months. He said that would give a head start to the next administration, Republican or Democratic.

Shultz returns to Jerusalem on Tuesday night and will report to Israeli leaders on Wednesday and continue his discussions with them.

In an effort to make headway, Shultz sidestepped differences with Shamir on an international peace conference and concentrated on the details of self-rule for the Palestinians and the outline of an overall settlement.

Shultz said he was encouraged that "we have now engaged in this initiative in the important aspects of its content, namely direct face-to-face negotiations."

In Amman, more than 500 Moslem fundamentalist students chanted "Shultz the devil should go home" and burned U.S. and Israeli flags in a protest rally Monday at Jordan University. There were other demonstrations in the Arab kingdom, where Palestinians are in the majority.

'War insurance' keeps West Bank movie crew safe

By MASHA HAMILTON

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — When movie stars Mariel Hemingway and Ben Cross were filming in the occupied West Bank, they checked to make sure sounds of explosions were coming from the set, not from battling Arabs and Israelis.

Israeli-born producer Yoram Ben-Ami bought war insurance for $10,000 from the Israeli government and hired extra guards to protect the actors and crew.

The insurance means that the movie-makers are covered for up to $2 million if production on their television movie is affected by Arab-Israeli strife.

The 4-month-old Palestinian uprising interfered in another way: several Arab villages chosen for filming had to be crossed off the schedule because "we just couldn't take the risk," said production designer Keith Wilson.

But actors and crew in "Steal the Sky" said during their five weeks of filming in Israel they were largely untouched by the nearly daily violence that has left more than 135 Palestinians and one Israeli soldier dead.

"We have been incredibly lucky," Cross said in an interview on a Tel Aviv set. "We have filmed in Arab quarters and Jewish quarters and have been in no danger."

At a time when the unrest has caused tourism to decline, tennis star Chris Evert to cancel plans to appear in a tournament in Israel nd Roman Catholic church officials to call off a Palm Sunday procession, the presence of actors and a film crew in the West Bank is cause for some surprise.

The Home Box Office Inc. film is the first movie to be made in Israel since the uprising began Dec. 8, said Ben-Ami.

"In a way, I wanted to make a statement by doing this film here now," said Ben-Ami, an American citizen who lives in Los Angeles.

"Steal the Sky" is based on a true story and deals with an aspect of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Hemingway plays an Israeli Mossad secret agent who persuades an Iraqi pilot, portrayed by Cross, to defect and fly to Israel in August 1966 aboard one of the coveted, Soviet-built MiG-21 airplanes the West wants to examine.

The plane, studied by the United States and Israel, is today in the Israeli Air Force Museum. The agent and the defector vanished, their identities protected.

Scenes that were to take place in Iraq were filmed in the Israeli-occupied West Bank's biblical town of Jericho and nearby Anatot.

The West Bank shooting took about two weeks. In the disputed hills, crew members could be heard shouting in English and Hebrew: "Quiet on the set please. Sheket, bevakasha."

In one scene, a military jeep was blown up.

"When we were filming and heard shots or special effects, I often wondered if it was real or not," said Hemingway.

In Israel, where politics is interwoven with daily life, Cross said it was impossible to avoid conversations about the current debate over what should be done to end the Palestinian rioting.

"Everyone wants to talk about the Arab-Israel conflict," he said. "But because it's an emotional subject, it is very dangerous for me to get caught up in it."

Israeli troops slay Arab guerrillas

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops killed two Arab guerrillas who tried to infiltrate from Lebanon today and a 16-year-old Palestinian lost his left eye when soldiers in the occupied Gaza Strip shot him with a rubber bullet.

Six Arabs were arrested overnight in Gaza and soldiers sealed off eight shops in Bethlehem as part of a campaign of mass arrests and collective punishments aimed at curbing four months of Arab violence in the occupied territories.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz continued his peace shuttle, visiting Jordan. U.S. officials said Monday that a positive answer from King Hussein of Jordan was critical for the future of the U.S. proposed peace plan.

Arab guerrillas intent on taking hostages tried to enter Israel from Lebanon overnight and clashed with an army patrol, an army statement and Israel radio said.

The troops surrounded the guerrillas and attacked at first light today, and two Arabs were killed, the army said. It said four Israeli soldiers were wounded. The statement did not say if any other guerrillas escaped or were captured.

The Palestine Liberation Organizaton's main Fatah branch, led by Yasser Arafat, claimed responsibility for the attempted infiltration, Israel radio said.

Also today, Abu Hajad Ramzi, 16, from Nuseret refugee camp, lost his left eye and was in stable condition after soldiers shot him with a rubber bullet, said Ashkelon's Barzilai Hospital spokeswoman Ilana Zeev. The army said the youth was shot by soldiers trying to break up a demonstration.

Bethlehem city official Jamal Salaman said troops have sealed 55 shops in the city in the last two weeks. In addition, army officials say about 1,000 Palestinians were arrested in the last 10 days.

In the occupied West Bank on Monday, Israeli troops killed one Palestinian and wounded eight others during demonstrations. An Arab died Monday in the Gaza Strip of wounds suffered last week.

One Israeli soldier and 138 Arabs have died in four months of anti-Israeli protests in the territories occupied by Israel in the 1967 Middle East War.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Palestinian leaders in the occupied lands on Monday showed no sign of softening their opposition to the Middle East peace plan presented by Shultz.

As Shultz met with top Israeli leaders Monday, Palestinian cities were closed by a PLO-ordered general strike to protest his visit. At the same time, Palestinian notables once viewed as possible partners in peace negotiations vowed not to meet with Shultz.

The boycott on meeting Shultz and the general strike underlined Arab demands for PLO participation in peace talks.

Shamir on Monday did not drop his opposition to an international conference proposed by Shultz to launch negotiations. The Shultz plan calls for three years of a limited self-rule for 1.5 million Palestinians in the occupied territories, with talks on the permanent settlement starting in December.

Shultz met separately with Shamir, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin. He sidestepped differences with Shamir and focused the talks on the substance of his plan rather than procedural issues.

Shultz told reporters after meeting Shamir he was "very pleased that we adressed mostly the direct negotiations that we would like to take place, and what the issues are, and how in our initiative they might be structured."

Peres, Shamir's political rival and an international conference supporter, said he "felt we moved forward though the road is still long."

"He (Shultz) looks for a way to make one of the sides become the first to say yes," Rabin said. Other Israeli officials said a positive reply from Jordan could improve the prospects of the Shultz plan.

Shultz met with Hussein today in Amman. Laer, he will fly to Damascus for a meeting with President Hafez Assad of Syria.

Iran uses missiles, air raids in response to fire

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran hit Iraqi oil centers with a missile and air raids Monday in response to attacks on its major refineries, and Iraq fired a rocket into Isfahan.

Iran said its artillerymen shelled defensive positions in the Kurdistan mountains of northeast Iraq, where Revolutionary Guards have captured a large area around strategic Lake Darbandikhan in a 3-week-old offensive.

It said Revolutionary Guards and Kurdish guerrillas repulsed counter-attacks by two Iraqi brigades in the battle zone, killing or wounding 150 men.

Javier Perez de Cuellar, U.N. secretary-general, is to meet Iranian and Iraqi envoys in New York this week in search of a cease-fire in the war, which began in September 1980. The Security Council passed a resolution July 20 demanding a truce.

The Iraqis threatened on Monday to level Iran's cities in revenge for the northern offensive. Iranian invaders are 75 miles from the Kirkuk oil fields, which account for more than half the crude oil production with which President Saddam Hussein's government finances the war.

A dispatch from Tehran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said Revolutionary Guards shot a long-range missile at Kirkuk's oil refinery Monday in retaliation for Iraqi air raids the previous day on oil refineries in Tabriz and Isfahan.

IRNA said 22 civilians were killed and 77 wounded Sunday in Tabriz but gave no report of casualties in Isfahan, the 17th century capital of Persia.

Baghdad's official Iraqi News Agency said the missile fired Monday exploded in a residential neighborhood of Kirkuk, killing or wounding "many civilians."

Other reports from the agency said Iraq's air force flew 206 sorties against Iranian troop concentrations and bombed oil installations in Mahshar on the Persian Gulf coast.

The Iranians reported casualties in Mahshar, but did not give figures. They said Iraq jets bombed Dezful in western Iran and Abadan, a southwestern oil center.

Isfahan has been the target of 12 missiles, including the one on Monday, since Iran and Iraq began firing long-range missiles in to each other's cities Feb. 29. Iraq had suspended attacks on Iranian cities for three days during a visit to Baghdad by Prime Minister Turgut Ozal of Turkey that ended Sunday.

A total of more than 250 missiles have been launched by both sides. Iran has reported more than 1,150 civilians killed and 4,000 wounded. Iraq has not given figures but said there were hundreds of casualties.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Iraq asks U.N. team to examine victims

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraq said Monday it wants a U.N. team to go to Baghdad to examine 88 soldiers it claims are victims of an Iranian chemical attack.

A U.N. spokesman said the request was under consideration.

Last year a U.N. team visited Iraq and reported it found no evidence that Iran had used chemical weapons. Its report left open the possibility the Iraqi soldiers were accidentally injured while handling their own chemical weapons.

Other U.N. teams that visited Iran said they found evidence that Iraq had used both mustard gas and nerve gas several times in the Iran-Iraq war that began in September 1980.

Copter crash kills two

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — A U.S. Army helicopter crashed in southern West Germany today, killing the pilot and another soldier on board, officials said.

There were no other casualties in the 9 a.m. crash near Nabern, 25 miles southeast of Stuttgart, said a spokeswoman at the Stuttgart-based Army 7th Corps.

"The helicopter was on a routine support mission. There were no weapons or ammunition on board," said Army spokeswoman Hilda Goodhand.

Stuttgart police said the small Bell helicopter apparently went down after running into tree branches in a heavy fog.

The helicopter crashed in an open area, police said. U.S. military officials immediately cordoned off the site.

Ms. Goodhand said the cause of the crash was under investigation. She said the helicopter was assigned to the 25th Aviation Company at Stuttgart.

The names of the dead were withheld pending notification of relatives. However, Ms. Goodhand she said one was the helicopter pilot and the other was a soldier riding as a passenger. West German police initially said the second victim was the co-pilot.

It was the third crash of a NATO military aircraft in less than a week.

Bus, cement truck collide

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The driver of a bus lost control of the vehicle as it rounded a curve and collided head-on with a cement truck in an accident that killed 19 people and injured 54, police reported.

They said the bus, bound for Belo Horizonte, was carrying 73 people and the accident occurred outside Sete Lagoas, 305 miles northwest of Rio.

"Twisted metal and bodies were strewn along the highway," local Police Chief Alceste Dutra told The Associated Press by telephone.

Dutra said the drivers of the truck and bus were killed as were 16 bus passengers and another person in the truck.

Heroin packages seized

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Police said Monday they seized more than 58 pounds of heroin in two separate operations and arrested three people.

Bernama, the national news agency, quoted superintendent Adnan Baharum of the anti-drug office as saying 47 pounds were found in a car and house in Kuala Lumpur on March 25.

Superintendent Khalid Hashim in Butterworth, 180 miles northwest of the capital, said 11 pounds were seized there on Sunday, hidden in bushes.

Neither official gave the source of the heroin, but most narcotics captured in Malaysia come from Thailand.

Police reported the Kuala Lumpur seizures followed the arrest of a 36-year-old man in a car containing heroin.

NATO training criticized

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Two jet warplane crashes near West German nuclear power plants have increased criticism of NATO pilot-training practices, and one newspaper's coverage of the issue has angered the U.S. Air Force.

Tens of thousands of West German protesters joined traditional Easter peace marches and vigils that began Saturday and lasted through Monday.

This year the demonstrators not only called for scrapping nuclear arms, but they also protested the two air crashes that occurred near atomic power plants just over 24 hours of each other last week.

The Association for General Aviation, a West German organization of private pilots, joined the protesters in demanding that NATO keep its warplanes away from nuclear power plants.

"The chance of the Chernobyl nuclear accident was more than likely very slim, but it happened anyway," Michael Schultz, spokesman for the group, pointed out in a radio interview.

Conductor's birthday revives debate on Nazi past

By TERRENCE PETTY

Karajan

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Herbert von Karajan, the powerful "conductor for life" of the Berlin Philharmonic, celebrates his 80th birthday today, and the anniversary has revived debates over his Nazi past, wealth and talents.

The Austrian-born maestro has been in frail health after years of illness and has trouble just walking to the podium.

Karajan is celebrating his birthday privately with family in Salzburg, his Austrian hometown and Mozart's birthplace.

Karajan has long been considered a major force in classical music, reaching a worldwide audience through the estimated sale of 150 million recordings.

"I set the goal for myself very early of not frittering away one minute of my life, and I've achieved that," Karajan told an interviewer just before his 75th brthday.

But critics have long been sharply divided about the true measure of those achievements.

"He is a great technician and has a vision in his conducting," Klaus Geitel, a West Berlin-based music critic, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Monday. "He has always been five paces ahead of the rest of the music world."

But Reinhard Beuth, music critic for the conservative Bonn-based newspaper Die Welt, strongly disagreed.

"Karajan has a superficial approach to music. It (his music interpretation) has no content," Beuth told the AP. "People who really understand music are not much interested in his work."

As his 80th birthday neared, Karajan's detractors also renewed criticism of his membership in Adolf Hitler's Nazi Party and of his financial success.

While he was a rising young musical star during Hitler's reign, Karajan joined the Nazi Party.

Because of his Nazi links, the Allies banned Karajan from performing for two years after the end of World War II and required him to undergo a "de-Nazification" process.

In an interview in the early 1980s, Karajan said he had joined the Nazi Party so his career would not be jeopardized. But he insisted he had no political sympathy for the Nazis.

The news magazine Stern, in a March 30 article marking Karajan's birthday, referred to that interview and criticized the maestro for "making his career at the expense" of other musicians who were persecuted for rejecting the Nazis.

Stern and another magazine, Der Spiegel, also criticized Karajan's huge financial success.

Der Spiegel, in its March 28 edition, questioned whether it was right for Karajan to amass a fortune while receiving a salary from the state-supported Berlin Philharmonic.

Spiegel quoted an unidentified legal expert in the music business as saying Karajan earns $6.2 million annually from his recordings.

Stern suggested Karajan's fame has given him too much power.

"He has succeeded in portraying himself as an artist-holy man," said Stern. "His success is so great that criticisms of him are futile."

Karajan's spokesmen could not be reached to comment on the criticisms because of the Easter holidays.

Karajan made his debut as a prodigy at age 5, when he played Mozart on the piano at a charity concert. He gave up piano in his teens and took up conducting.

Karajan, who considered Toscanini his idol, studied in Vienna but forged his career in Germany. At 27, he became General Music Director in Aachen while also conducting in Berlin.

In 1946, Karajan became conductor of the Vienna Symphony Orchestra. He also has been conductor at the Salzburg Festival, and artistic director of the Vienna State Opera.

Karajan and the Berlin Philharmonic have been feuding off and on since he was named "conductor for life" in 1955.

A bitter row over Karajan's hiring of a young female clarinetist dragged on for 18 months before a shaky truce was reached.

Karajan has battled with illness for several years.

He had major back surgery in 1976, and had to relearn how to walk straight after crushing nerves when he collapsed on the podium in Berlin two years later.

Karajan was flown to the United States for undisclosed medical treatment in January 1986.

But on Feb. 1, 1987, he was back in West Berlin with baton in hand.
