

On The BEAM

By J. W. King, Sr.

We know that school has started for already a half dozen kids have been around trying to sell something so a class can make some money.

We are hearing again the same old story—it happens almost every year—"If we had received one more rain".

Some crops are suffering for the want of moisture and will be cut short again this year. I think it is time farmers in this area—and many others in Texas—begin in earnest some soil building and water conservation measures that will keep more of our rainfall on the land to penetrate to the roots of the crops.

Great strides have been made the past few years in conservation practices but we still have a long way to go before we find a plan that is entirely satisfactory.

We have had enough rain this year to produce a good crop but some of our land failed to catch and hold enough of it.

HOMECOMING

A short time ago I received an invitation to a homecoming of the old country school I attended. After my wife carefully mentioned all my old girl friends would notice some areas of bare scalp, a bulge here and there, and some teeth I didn't really grow, she gave her consent to go.

So we polished up the car, dolled up the four kids, and a little proud and a little self-conscious (from my wife's remarks) proceeded to outshine all the rest. I was certain none of my old buddies had four children yet—but they did. I was sure that no one's car would shine like mine—but they did; however, I noticed these years had begun to tell a little on everyone else.

The homecoming and the reunion of old friends was great, but there was one sad thing that stood out so boldly, it could not be ignored. The younger group lacked the old school spirit we loved so well. It was not as if they did not care, but rather as if it had been beaten out of them in a fierce struggle. I am glad I'm not one who can be blamed.

You see, much of the old school had been taken away from them. Only one-sixth of the classrooms were still there; the gym was gone; the tennis courts could barely be located; and the cattle were grazing over the old ball diamond, unaware of its past importance.

Freedom lives, breathes, and thrives in community spirit. I know there are those who disagree with me, but I for one am afraid in consolidating the country schools into the towns. We city people are destroying more than we are giving.

MONEY AND BANKING

In Everyday Living

IT'S THE HUMIDITY—inside the house—probably, that has damaged outside paint. In cooking, washing clothes, and so on, large quantities of water vapor are released into the air. The vapor can pass through walls that water cannot; and when it condenses, upon reaching the cold exterior surface of a house, it makes paint blister and peel. This passage of water vapor—and hence further deterioration of outside paint—can be largely prevented by having interior walls covered with two coats of a latex base paint or three coats of oil paint.
