U.S. expands Persian Gulf policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has decided to expand its Persian Gulf policy to allow U.S. warships to aid neutral merchant ships under attack, administration officials said Friday.

The policy is aimed at deterring Iranian attacks against gulf shipping and is a direct result of the mining of a U.S. frigate and Monday's extensive fighting between Iranian and U.S. forces, the officials said.

Under the new policy, for which support is being sought from congressional leaders and allied governments, Navy warships would no longer be told to ignore Iranian attacks on merchant ships that weren't flying the Stars and Stripes.

If a U.S. warship observed an Iranian attack and was close enough to intervene, it would have the authority to do so, said the officials, who agreed to discuss the matter only if not identified.

"It's a random, target-of-opportunity approach designed to throw the Iranians off guard," said one source.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, confirmed that the new policy had been discussed Friday with the congressional leadership. He said the policy would "enable U.S. Navy vessels to defend themselves fully and to take appropriate action to deal with specific circumstances."

Although Aspin refused to discuss specifics of the policy, another Capitol Hill source who was briefed on the matter said, "This will give a lot of authority to local commanders and a lot of leeway to do as they see fit."

"Our purpose is not to get into a war with Iran," said an official. "Our purpose is to secure safe passage for neutral shipping moving back and forth between neutral ports."

The sources stressed the policy change did not entail an extension of the U.S. military umbrella to foreign-flag ships in regular convoys. Even under the new policy, only ships flying the American flag will be entitled to "door-to-door protection" in convoys.

Also rejected in formulating the new policy were suggestions that Navy warships start protecting American-owned ships that fly a foreign flag of convenience, the sources said.

Because of those decisions, the Pentagon is hopeful it can avoid the assignment of additional ships to the gulf to implement the new policy, the officials said.

The new policy will extend in certain cases, however, to Western-operated oil rigs in the gulf, the sources said, refusing to elaborate.

Rejected film makers plan suit

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

While moviemakers from one West Coast company are laying groundwork to produce the Jessica McClure story, a second company is planning a lawsuit after failing to secure a citizens panel's recommendation.

Producer Larry Spivey said Friday he remains as a consultant to Highland Communications Group Inc. in planned litigation alleging interference with contracts the company signed in pursuit of rights to the film.

Defendants in the suit may include Interscope Communications Inc., the company that a panel of prominent Midlanders Friday recommended produce the television movie, and Martin Allday, attorney for a now disbanded association of rescuers, Spivey said.

"Highland and appropriate counsel will probably make some kind of announcement next week," said Spivey.

Interscope officials — including the movie's producer, John Kander II, equated the Highland threat with "sour grapes."

"It sounds kind of ludicrous, honestly," Patricia Clifford, Interscope executive vice president for television, said Friday.

Kander said the allegations are "absolutely groundless."

Allday could not be reached for comment Friday night.

While details of the Interscope movie still are being formulated, Ms. Clifford said producers would work with a budget of between $2.6 million and $2.7 million.

Delays are expected because of the current Hollywood writer's strike, which Ms. Clifford postulated may reach a conclusion by the end of May.

Writing the script would take about six months, she said, and if the network planning to air the story, ABC, approves, production would start soon thereafter, she said.

Interscope plans to pay no more than $200,000 for all portrayal rights, a figure Ms. Clifford called "very, very high."

"We have a good idea who we would like to obtain rights from now," she said, but declined to divulge names.

A bulldozer works to remove a truck partially buried in debris after two explosions ripped through a grain elevator complex in Joliet, Ill., Friday. At least two people were killed and three were injured.

Grain elevator complex explodes

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Two explosions ripped through a river-side grain elevator complex Friday, killing at least two people, injuring three others and leveling four grain silos and an office building, authorities said.

Three more people were reported missing at the ADM Growmark complex, along the Des Plaines River about 40 miles southwest of Chicago, said Lynn Behringer, a spokeswoman for the Will County Emergency Services and Disaster Agency.

Officials on the scene confirmed that two people died and at least three others were injured, Ms. Behringer added.

"It shook this building like a truck or something had hit the back of this building," said John Vanderlinden, a worker at nearby Stonitsch Construction Co. "It was quite a big explosion."

Authorities suspect grain dust may have caused the first explosion about 11 a.m., which ruptured a natural gas main and touched off a second blast moments later, said Fire Chief George Piese. Granaries pose an explosion risk because of highly flammable grain dust.

The explosions leveled the complex's 100-foot tall concrete silos, which hold a total of about 100,000 bushels, said Dick Burkett, a spokesman for the granary.

Initial reports said six silos were destroyed, but David Munchalfe, a security guard at the facility, said there had been four silos at the site, and only a sheet-metal covered grain dryer remained standing. One silo crushed the adjacent one-story office building.

"It's gone, totaled, level complete — just like dynamite," said Bob Butterfield, 64, a Wilmington farmer who said he saw metal and concrete flying through the air after the blast.

Temporary taxes may be dropped

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas economy has improved to the point that the 1989 Legislature could allow $575 million in temporary taxes to expire, Gov. Bill Clements said Friday.

The governor also predicted that lawmakers will make no major changes in the state tax structure next year.

Clements said the tax adjustments lawmakers made in 1987 are bringing in enough to retire the $1.2 billion fiscal 1987 deficit, erase the $700 million cash-flow problem in the Treasury and leave a $350 million surplus by the Aug. 31, 1989, end of the current budget cycle.

"Our revenue stream has moved forward, our economy is growing," the governor said. "I think that those temporary taxes will drop out. That means that this revenue stream we now have — not considering growth, inflation and other factors...will be reduced by about $575 million."

Tony Proffitt, spokesman for Comptroller Bob Bullock, says the comptroller's office sets the value of the temporary increases in franchise and insurance taxes and attorneys' professional registration fees at about $550 million. Those increases are scheduled to expire at the end of the current budget cycle.

"Right now what Clements is saying is not far from being on target," Proffitt said, noting particularly that the 1990-1991 budget won't need the extra $1.2 billion used this time to pay off the 1987 deficit. "Any other problems could be manageable."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, however, pointed out that lawmakers borrowed about $280 million from the highway fund and sold state land worth another $120 million last year to balance the 1988-1989 budget. "I'd just really be very surprised if we can get through the next session without a tax bill," Hobby, a Democrat, said.

Although a special committee Clements helped appoint has spent 10 months trying to fashion a new tax structure and although he said he personally favors some changes, the governor said senators and representatives have told him they have no desire to take on tax reform next year.

"There is no inclination to get into a big tax restructuring fiasco in the 1989 legislative session," he said. "Chances of considering a restructuring of the Texas tax system are nil."

MADD given credit for fewer DWIs

The number of misdemeanor DWI cases filed in Midland County dropped during the first quarter of 1988, and the chief prosecutor of drunk drivers said it was thanks to a local citizens' group.

"I think it (the drop) is primarily due to an increase in public awareness of the dangers inherent in drunk driving," County Attorney Mark Dettman said.

"And I think MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving) has made a significant impact" in that public awareness.

The first three months of this year, 154 DWI cases were filed in Dettman's office, according to records. In 1987, 205 cases were filed during the same period, and in 1986, 320 cases were filed.

In 1984, the Texas Legislature rewrote the drunk driving laws, but Dettman doubts that has had as much impact on the lower figures as public awareness.

Board candidates give views on desegregation plan

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

An assemblage of candidates vying for the seven seats on the Midland school board differed Friday on how they viewed a 12-year-old school district desegregation plan.

The group — appearing at a Midland Coalition of Black Democrats forum for the first time since they announced their respective candidacies — responded to questioning from a small but attentive audience, who heard candidate opinions on such issues as busing and educational opportunities for minorities.

The candidates present during the two-hour question-and-answer session said they would be willing to assess the effectiveness of the Midland Independent School District's "Cluster Program," which resulted from a 1976 federally court-ordered desegregation plan.

Although a total of 23 candidates are running for the seven seats, only 15 were present Friday night.

In the past dozen years, children have attended neighborhood schools through the third grade and then are bused across town to schools in one of the district's seven clusters.

District 1 candidates Edia Hernandez and James Fuller agreed that the clustering of Anglo, black and Hispanic students in the elementary schools should be kept intact.

Mrs. Hernandez, who was instrumental in leading the battle to get single-member district representation on the school board, promised to fight opposition to the desegregation issue in federal court should it be tampered with.

Fuller, who serves on the district's community panel publicly supporting the upcoming $11.8 million bond election, said the move to desegregate Midland schools has resulted "in a tremendous period of enlightenment" for all students.

"If parents can come to act half as adult as our elementary school children do in this environment, the entire community would be much better off," Fuller said.

Candidates in the District 2 race, Adela Marmolejo and Clarence "Putty" Zachary, advocated quick action by the school board to halt and prevent acts of racism in the classroom.

Zachary also advocated that the district make a "concerted" effort to improve the quality of education in its elementary schools by "funneling taxpayer's money from secondary education."

District 3 candidate Ken Morrison expressed concern for the MISD minority students who are at risk of dropping out of school. He advocates that the district hire more teachers, clerks and aids in the elementary schools "so the pattern of success will be established early."

District 4 candidates Jim Builita and Jackie Hamilton favor the cluster system, but added that they would be open to suggestions on how it might be improved.

"If there's a way to change it, then I'm willing to go back in there and look at it," Mrs. Hamilton said.

Volunteers receive awards for their deeds

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland volunteers, who represent an "American trademark" of "the spirit of neighbor helping neighbor," were paid homage Friday by the Volunteer Center of Midland in its 1988 Outstanding Volunteers-of-the-Year Awards Luncheon in the Holiday Inn Convention Center.

"You're all volunteers; you're doers," Judith "Judy" Devenport, Midland corporate executive and a volunteer, said at the awards ceremony. "We are here today to join in this annual salute to volunteerism and to pay tribute to all that you are doing — to you Midlanders who give your time and energies to help others who are less fortunate than yourselves."

Awards for volunteerism were presented to:

— Civic: Faye Higgins for her volunteer work in Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD).

— Education: David Hamm for Casa de Amigos.

— Social Services: Rueben Richardson for the Midland County District Attorney's Victim Assistance Program.

— Arts-Humanities: Dorothy Perkins for the Museum of the Southwest.

— Board Member: Karl Reagan for Boys Club of Midland.

— Paid Staff: Corina Hernandez for the Midland County Adult Probation Office.

— Paid Staff: Joanne Mundy for West Texas Epilepsy Association.

— Direct Service: John Bourke for Big Brothers-Big Sisters. (Bourke is a Big Brother to 10-year-old Loren Stillwell, who presented the Volunteer Award to Bourke.)

— Health: Carolyn Achee for the West Texas Juvenile Diabetes Foundation.

— Group Service: Summer Mummert volunteers for Midland Community Theatre.

— Media: Midland Reporter-Telegram for Volunteer Center of Midland and Casa de Amigos.

— Corporate: Arco Oil and Gas Co. for Volunteer Center of Midland.

GOP advocates preventing straight-ticket voting for judges

By JEANETTE ALLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Republican Party of Texas opposes eliminating elections of state judges, but supports a proposal to rid judicial races of straight-ticket voting, GOP State Chairman George Strake said Friday.

The proposal, designed to appease those on both sides of the judicial selection issue, is not really a compromise, Strake told the Joint Select Committee on the Judiciary.

"It is simply an appointed system which tries to trick the public into believing they have impact on the process through retention elections."

A proposal being considered by the committee — fashioned after the merit-selection system long used in Missouri — calls for a bi-partisan panel to recommend three nominees to the governor for each open seat on state appellate courts. The panel would hold a public hearing before submitting the candidates' names to the governor. The governor would pick one who would serve, with Senate approval, until the next general election, when voters would cast a yes-or-no vote.

STATE

To take effect the plan requires a constitutional amendment with a two-thirds vote of the Legislature, plus voter approval.

Strake said the GOP opposes allowing candidates to file in both primary elections — a method designed to rid races of partisan politics — because it would confuse voters.

But Strake said a proposal ridding judicial races of straight-ticket voting introduced by Rep. Brad Wright, R-Houston, would focus attention on the candidates' qualifications. The plan calls for adding the heading "judicial races" to the end of the ballot, thus requiring voters to choose each candidate individually.

But Strake said he does not like the idea of completely eliminating partisanship. He said the bill should be amended to keep candidates' party labels. In cities where candidates can be inaccessible to voters, a party label "would give some inkling of where a person is coming from philosophically," he said.

Excessive trial lawyer contributions could be attacked by putting a $5,000 limit on campaign contributions, Strake added.

State Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle said his party supports keeping partisan elections, but added, "I don't know that as long as you put candidates' names down at the end of the ballot you are doing anything to eliminate straight-ticket voting."

Explaining the new method to voters would make the system "more complex," leading to voter confusion, Slagle said.

Workmen unearth ancient spear points, skull fragment

EAST WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) — Spearheads uncovered in an apple orchard here and a human skull fragment found in Kansas date back more than 10,000 years and could be evidence of the first humans to walk the continent, scientists say.

Two workers installing underground sprinklers at R&R Orchards last May stumbled upon stone spear points that could be 11,000 years old, said C. Vance Haynes, a University of Arizona professor of anthropology and geology.

"This is probably one of the most exciting finds that's occurred in many, many decades," Haynes said. "There is a possibility these were the first people into the New World."

Artifacts uncovered so far in this central Washington town include stone tools, projectile points and bone implements. No human remains have been found since formal excavation began April 11, scientists say.

However, a human skull fragment discovered in Kansas was recently shown by new dating techniques to be about 15,400 years old, reported Larry Martin, a systematics and ecology professor at the University of Kansas.

The skull fragment, found in 1975, was dated using electron spin resonance, which involves measuring the density of trapped electrons that accumulate in bone as a result of environmental radiation after the material is buried.

The fragment likely "has a real shot at being one of the oldest Americans," Martin, curator of the university's Museum of Natural History, said last week.

Haynes, however, said resonance is a "much newer and less tried" method than the Carbon-14 dating usually used in dating archaeological discoveries. He said he was unaware of the Kansas discovery and was reluctant to compare the two finds.

The Washington artifacts have not been scientifically dated, say archaeologists on the excavation team, which includes representatives of Washington State University, the University of Wyoming and the Smithsonian Institution.

The orchard workers initially unearthed about 20 stone pieces, and an additional seven were found by archaeologists on April 11. Many are so-called Clovis points, named after a New Mexico site where such stone tools were initially discovered in the 1920s and 1930s.

The points would have been used on the end of spears to stab mammals like elephants, horses and bison, said Peter Mehringer of Washington State and director of the excavation project.

He, too, contended the find indicates people at least as old as any previously discovered in North America, although finds on other continents may be as old as 40,000 years.

"Clovis is the oldest (North American) culture for which we have duplicated evidence," Haynes said. Archaeologists on the scene said all previous Clovis finds have been scientifically dated to about 11,000 years ago.

Richard Daugherty, a retired WSU professor involved in the digging, said the Clovis points — which are fashioned from chipped rock — are unique in their number and their size.

Some are more than 8 inches long and are brown and cream in color.

— Special: Judi Crawford as chairman of Midland's National Volunteer Week.

Prior to the awards ceremony, Midland Community Theatre's Winning Season Singers sang several musical selections, including "We've Got Magic To Do," "Jellycat Cats," "Razle-Dazle Em," "It's Not Where You Start; It's Where You Finish," and "One Brick At A Time."

"You start with volunteers and people who care very much," said Linda Bond, the Midland Community Theatre's director of development and marketing, "and you get something special."

In her talk to the volunteers, Ms. Devenport said that "helping those in need is the mark of a proud and generous community." And Midland is a "proud and generous community," said Ms. Devenport, an executive in the oil-and-gas business and past United Way of Midland campaign chairman. "Midlanders represent the best America has to offer by responding to community needs with time, money, and other resources year after year — in times of economic distress as well as in times of abundance."

Charitable and arts organizations "simply would not continue to exist" without volunteers, she said.

Ms. Devenport said Midland is a "proud and close-knit community" which values "the dignity of all our people" and is a community which cares "enough to listen to the needs of our people."

"The more we learn about the needs of our people, the more we care."

A secret of happiness is to "find a need and fill it, to find a hurt and heal it, to find someone with a problem, and offer to help solve the problem with warm hands and full hearts."

Sylvia Quinones, Volunteer Center's executive director, said, "Volunteerism offers hope" to build America and Americans "economically as well as spiritually."

The rejuvenation of volunteerism is proof that our best hope lies in something as simple as venturing forth from the comfort and familiarity of our homes," Ms. Quinones said,

"and discovering who our neighbors are."

M. McCabe, founder of the Volunteer Center which recruits volunteers to work in charitable organizations' causes, quoted President Reagan in recognizing National Volunteer Week this week.

"Volunteerism is rooted in the world's religions and cultures," Reagan wrote. "And just as those religions and cultures have found haven in America, so has the spirit of neighborly compassion that (American essayist Ralph Waldo) Emerson envisioned when he wrote: 'The only gift is a portion of thyself.'"

Reagan, McCabe said, wrote that "Volunteerism's essence is the willingness to share blessings and the courage to pursue an ideal."

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas proclaimed this week National Volunteer Week in Midland. "One of America's greatest national resources is its volunteers," Thomas said. "Volunteers devote their time, energy and talent toward a healthy, productive and humane society."

The tradition of Midland's community volunteers is "to perform work of the highest quality and to brighten the lives of others."

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

The forecast calls for a typical spring day in West Texas, with sunny skies, mild temperatures and gusty, dusty winds, say forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Today will be sunny, with a high in the lower 80s. Winds will be from the west to southwest at 15 to 25 mph and gusty.

Forecasters say tonight will be mostly fair with a low in the upper 40s. On Sunday, skies will be mostly sunny and the high will be near 80 degrees.

Friday's high of 84 was 12 degrees cooler than the record of 96, set on that date in 1965. The low Friday of 50 degrees was 13 degrees warmer than the 37, set on that date in 1944.

STATE

High wind warnings were issued for the Texas Panhandle and for the Guadalupe Mountains in far West Texas late Friday afternoon as westerly winds swept through at speeds of more than 60 mph.

Winds exceeding 60 mph were reported at Guadalupe Pass, while gusts up to 48 mph were reported in Amarillo at about 3 p.m.

Meanwhile, a front stretching from near Paris into the middle Rio Grande Plains brought fog and haze to the Lower Rio Grande Valley and along the Gulf Coast. The fog reduced visibility to less than seven miles.

North and northeast winds breezed parts of Central Texas while west and southwest winds prevailed over the rest of the state. Wind speeds were in the 10 mph to 20 mph range outside of the high-wind areas.

Thunderstorms were expected Saturday in parts of East and southeast Texas, with highs ranging between the 70s and 90s.

NATION

Snow fell Friday over parts of the northern Plains and over some of the mountains of the West, and rain was scattered over the South, New England and the West Coast.

Snow fell heavily across northwestern and north-central Nebraska with accumulations by afternoon of 15 inches at Mullen, 10 inches at Alliance, 8 inches at Scottsbluff and 6 inches at Valentine.

Light snow fell southern South Dakota and southwestern Minnesota, with winter storm watch was posted overnight for south-central and east-central South Dakota and a snow advisory was posted overnight for southwestern Minnesota.

An upper level weather disturbance produced snow in the mountains of northern and central Arizona and into the mountains of southwestern Colorado.

Accumulations in Arizona included 16 inches at Munds Park, 14 inches at the Happy Jack ranger station. And up to 10 inches of snow fell in the San Juan mountains of Colorado.

STATE IN BRIEF

Area off-limits to probation officers

DALLAS (AP) — An area around the state fairgrounds in Dallas has been declared off-limits to probation officers because it is considered too dangerous. Concern increased after the disappearance earlier this month of probation officer Stephen Grayer.

Now off-limits is the area between downtown and the grounds of the State Fair of Texas, said the director of the Dallas County adult probation department.

Police have said the area contains a number of "crack houses" where drug dealers sell large quantities of cocaine, and shooting often erupts between rival dealers armed with automatic weapons.

Grayer has not been seen since April 7, when he left his office to visit probationers in Grand Prairie. His car was found a week later in south Dallas, and police said the vehicle apparently was abandoned there the same day of Grayer's disappearance.

Some probation officers have complained they are often put in dangerous neighborhoods without partners and radios, and some claim the department bungled the reporting of Grayer's disappearance.

Department officials waited four days to report the officer missing, officers said.

Customs agents tow pot-filled boat

PORT ISABEL (AP) — A fishing boat carrying 2,600 pounds of marijuana was being towed by U.S. Customs agents Friday to Port Isabel, where it apparently drifted after being swamped two weeks ago off the Florida coast.

Charles Conroy, public affairs officer for the Customs Service in Houston, said the marijuana was in bales. No one was aboard the 35-foot sport fishing boat, which had been abandoned. Owners and the boat's origin or destination have not been determined, he said.

If the marijuana had been sold by the ounce, it would have brought in more than $5 million, Conroy said. The Coast Guard found the boat at Thursday afternoon some 30 miles east of Port Isabel, Conroy said.

Mattox won't try and oust judge

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorney General Jim Mattox decided Friday not to try to remove Travis County District Judge Harley Clark from the state school finance lawsuit.

Clark ruled the system unconstitutional in 1987 and has made several speeches about his decision since. Earlier this week Mattox's office considered asking Clark to remove himself from the case, now under appeal, because his speeches indicated he may have lost his objectivity.

"The most we can say is we decided it was not appropriate or in the state's best interest to try to oust Harley Clark," Mattox spokesman Ron Dusek said Friday when asked to explain the decision.

Migrant student program refined

AUSTIN (AP) — A program by the University of Texas at Austin to keep migrant students in school is being refined so more than twice as many youths can be served next year, the university said.

The Dropout Prevention Program targeted about 300 high-risk students in 20 school districts in 1987-88, said Shirley Crook, special projects coordinator for the extension instruction and materials center in the university's division of continuing education.

Next school year, as many as 700 students in hundreds of districts could be served, Ms. Crook said Friday.

The program, which receives $152,000 from the Texas Education Agency, is designed to help Texas migrant students who cannot attend a single school on a regular basis because they must follow planting and harvest seasons.

In the program, each student is given material to take along to a new locale. The material can be mailed to the university for grading.

Galveston workers to get pay cut

GALVESTON (AP) — About 600 of Galveston city workers are getting a 6.25 pay cut and another 10 are being laid off in order to save the island city money.

The layoffs and pay cuts, approved by the City Council in a 4-2 vote Thursday, are expected to save the city an estimated $400,000 year, said Councilman Steve Greenberg, who proposed the cuts as a means of reducing taxes and hiring more police officers next year.

Mayor Jan Coggeshall condemned the pay cuts, insisting that city workers have been doing a good job for citizens.

"I think it's a terribly demoralizing issue to slap on the city employees when they have been working so hard, when we have a balanced budget, when our revenues are up, our expenditures are down," she said. "There's no need to do this."

Royalty toasted with Lubbock wine

DALLAS (AP) — Sweden's King Carl XVI Gustaf and Queen Silvia, in town to celebrate Sweden's ties with the United States, washed down lunch with West Texas wine as they toured Dallas Friday in a fleet of blue Volvos.

After lunch, served with Lubbock County white wine, vintage 1986, Mayor Annette Strauss toasted "Skol" in welcoming the monarchs.

"It is only in Dallas, or rather nearby Mesquite, that you are being exposed to true folklore Americana — the Old West," Mrs. Strauss said, referring to the Mesquite Rodeo that the royal couple will visit later.

The king responded to the toast, saying, "And of course we met old friends, Nobel laureates who had been in Sweden, so in that sense there has been a very close link between Sweden and...the city of Dallas."

Earlier the royal couple visited the University of Texas Southwest Medical Center, where they met the 1985 Nobel prize winner for physiology and medicine, Dr. John Goldstein. Goldstein and Dr. Michael Brown, both researchers at the center, won the prize for cholesterol research.

The royal couple later dined with Mrs. Strauss at the DeGolyer Estate, part of the city's botanical gardens, where the king raised a toast to President Reagan for declaring 1988 the year of New Sweden.

"On the Swedish side, we have always been looking for peace and disarmament in the world. I think we're all very glad that we could have this meeting," the king said concerning the upcoming summit between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

They royal couple also toured Ericsson Inc. in suburban Richardson, and inspected a telephone switch, called AXE, which took 800,000 man hours, or 400 people working two years, to create.

ing laboratory links telephone networks in 71 countries including the United States. The 112-year-old Swedish company is one of the world's largest telecommunications firms and sponsor of the royal couple's Dallas trip.

Earlier, at the medical center, the royal couple met Stormie Jones, 10, recipient of the first tandem liver-heart transplant 14 months ago. Stormie gave Queen Silvia a bouquet of yellow and purple flowers and received in return a crystal bowl with an engraved lid depicting a crown. During the exchange, the wind blew the queen's hat off her head, and she later kept one hand on her headgear.

Stormie later said of Queen Silvia, "I thought she would be with the crown on and robe," but she added that she was not disappointed by meeting the monarch who wore a knee-length print dress and red high-heels.

Dallas is the couple's first stop on the Texas tour, designed to celebrate New Sweden's 350th anniversary and Sweden's contributions to the United States. They will visit Houston today.

The couple began a national tour in Washington April 10 and arrived in Dallas after a visit to Atlanta.

In Dallas, the monarchs also visited Texas Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, where they inspected an antique doll house refurbished by hospital volunteers. The queen played in a plastic-block fort with three outpatients.

Another tour stop was the hospital's Child Life center — a room of video games and computers. The king entered as a PAC-Man game chirped in the background — Coleman Faris, 14, in a wheelchair, was playing a game against his mother.

The monarchs received young outpatients in a park containing special play equipment for children with limited mobility.

Jerry Matthew Dillon, 6, an outpatient, gave Queen Silvia a picture he painted of the royal couple in front of the Swedish flag. Tina Maddux, 7, of Paradise, gave the king a statuette of a child cradling an infant.

Agency temporarily grounds smokers' charter service

DALLAS (AP) — Smokers hoping to light up on the nation's first airlines for smokers will have to hold their fire.

The Great American Smokers Club, a charter service that was to begin service Friday from Dallas Love Field, has been forced to postpone all flights because of complications with federal regulations, company executives said.

"We were geared up and ready to go," said founder Kay Colhina, but the Department of Transportation has not exempted charter services from some regulations governing smoking. "Now we've got to pull back and regroup."

The government's smoking ban on flights of two hours or less takes effect today.

Preparing for the first day of the smoking ban, Houston-based Continental Airlines said it plans to distribute more than 450,000 pieces of a special formula gum that helps temporarily control the urge to smoke.

The gum giveaway will be given to passengers upon request at Continental's three largest hubs — Newark, N.J., Denver and Houston.

Fort Worth-based American Airlines, meanwhile, will give away hard candy to passengers that request it.

American spokesman Steve McGregor said the carrier contacted the American Heart Association to determine the best substitute that smokers could use on the flights.

"They said either cinnamon stick or hard candy," he said.

The Great American Smokers Club was hoping to capitalize on smokers' discontent over the new federal regulation. Free cigarettes were to be distributed on the new airlines' flights, and smoking was to be permitted in all seats.

The airlines' first flight was to take off from Love Field at 8:30 a.m. CDT Friday, bound for Houston's Hobby Airport.

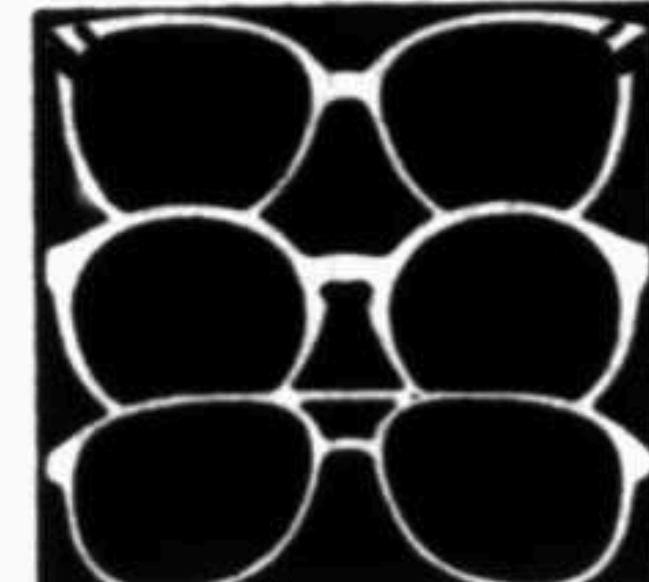

Colhina said he hopes the complications with federal regulations will be cleared up soon. But even then it could take several more weeks for the airline to begin service because new arrangements will have to be made to lease aircraft, he said.

Churches take on burden of anti-apartheid fight

By GREG MYRE

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — With secular anti-apartheid groups effectively silenced, clergymen have sharpened their attacks on the white-led government and rekindled a longstanding church-state conflict.

Spared in recent government crackdowns, activist church leaders represent one of the few prominent opposition forces operating without restrictions.

In recent weeks, Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu and other clergymen have organized and led demonstrations, issued harsh anti-government statements, focused sermons on political themes and dared authorities to act against them.

"The churches have been pushed to the front line of the struggle," said the Rev. Alan Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. "We have always protested against apartheid. We must now go over to participate in the resistance against apartheid."

Although President P.W. Botha's National Party government has refrained from clamping down on the clergymen, it has attempted to undercut the credibility of Tutu, Boesak and other prominent ministers.

Botha regularly refers to South Africa as a country guided by Christian principles, yet pointedly tells anti-apartheid clergymen they have no business in politics.

In recent letters to activist church leaders, Botha said the clergymen "love and praise" the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla movement, "with its Marxist and atheistic ideology."

"You embrace and participate in their call for violence, hatred, sanctions, insurrection and revolution," Botha said. "The question must be posed whether you are acting on behalf of the kingdom of God or the kingdom promised by the ANC."

"I work for God's kingdom," replied Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize. "For whose kingdom, with your apartheid policy, do you work for?"

At one point, the Anglican church threatened to sue Botha, saying his statements were defamatory.

"I would like that," responded Botha. "Then the government will come forward with all the knowledge and facts it has at its disposal."

Botha did not elaborate.

The long-simmering church-state feud began to boil over after the government on Feb. 24 banned 18 leading anti-apartheid organizations from participating in politics. Church leaders marched on Parliament on Feb. 29 to protest the ban, and 25 clergymen, including Tutu, were briefly arrested.

In early March, church leaders formed the Committee for the Defense of Democracy in a bid to fill the void created by the government crackdown. But within days, Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok barred the new organization from "performing any activities or acts whatsoever."

Boesak reported March 11 that his house had been stoned and that he had received death threats. He said that if anything happened to him "suspicion should fall on the South African government and the police."

"I work for God's kingdom. For whose kingdom, with your apartheid policy, do you work for?"

— Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize

Two weeks later, police searched the home of a Catholic bishop, Edward Adams, and confiscated documents related to local organizations in the southern Cape Province.

"The state is intent on an open confrontation with the church," the Southern African Catholic Bishops Conference said in a statement condemning the search.

Anglican bishops, backed by Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie in Britain, declared the government had "launched a carefully planned attack" on Tutu, Boesak and others, "aimed at portraying them as Marxists and isolating them from their churches as a prelude to state action against them."

However, Botha's verbal attacks on activist clergy have won support from sectors of the white community, including the Dutch Reformed Church, the largest white denomination.

In this deeply religious country, the Dutch Reformed Church has long had close links to the government and maintained until 1986 that apartheid was justified in the Bible.

Apartheid establishes a racially segregated society in which the 25.6 million blacks have no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

Dutch Reformed leaders said recently that black clergy do not represent the Christian church when they confront the state. The leaders called on Tutu and Boesak to "di-voice themselves from this impious road and to discuss their problems openly" with Botha and Vlok, "who are both avowed Christians."

The anti-apartheid clergy are denounced frequently in letters to the editor in the pro-government newspapers.

"These men are doing Satan's work," said one recent letter in The Citizen, a Johannesburg daily. "It is hoped that these troublemakers are dealt with, and not to worry about the cloth they wear."

"I am not going to allow this government to choose my friends for me," Tutu said at the same service. "If teaching the gospel of Jesus Christ is going to lead me into trouble, tough luck."

Mrs. Reagan's breast examination 'A-OK'

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan had her first major examination Friday since her cancerous left breast was removed six months ago, and the White House physician said the exam showed no cancer in her right breast.

Dr. John Hutton also said that a series of dental X-rays performed on President Reagan at the same time showed he requires no immediate treatment of any kind.

The exams were performed at Bethesda Naval Medical Center in suburban Maryland and the couple left by helicopter afterward for their usual weekend at the presidential retreat, Camp David, in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains.

"The president had a series of routine dental X-rays in the dental clinic, while Mrs. Reagan had her first post-operative mammogram," Hutton said in a statement. "The mammogram was negative. No immediate treatment of any kind is required as a result of today's procedures on the president and first lady."

The White House said earlier that the examinations were not prompted by any current physical problems of either of the Reagans.

The Reagans made no comment on their examinations when they left the White House or when they arrived at the hospital or left it. However, the president made an "A-OK" thumb-and-finger sign, indicating that things are well, as he boarded the helicopter for Camp David.

Elaine Crispin, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said, "It's wise and routine to check the other breast" after surgery of the kind the first lady had six months ago.

She said the first lady has had periodic examinations since her operation on Oct. 17, 1987, but this was her first X-ray of the right breast.

Mrs. Crispin said the couple wanted to have the results of Mrs. Reagan's exam promptly "so they could send her off for a comfortable, worry-free weekend."

Leaving the White House for the hospital, the Reagans stopped mo-

Leaving the White House for the hospital, the Reagans stopped momentarily to greet a group of sixth graders from Shipsewana, Ind., who had brought them a red, white and blue quilt they had made with the legend, "We the People," in honor of the bicentennial of the Constitution.

mentarily to greet a group of sixth graders from Shipsewana, Ind., who had brought them a red, white and blue quilt they had made with the legend, "We the People," in honor of the bicentennial of the Constitution.

In announcing plans for the hospital visit Thursday, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater described the procedures as "routine checkups...not associated with any current physical findings or problems."

Fitzwater skipped his usual briefing for reporters on Friday. Aides said there was not time to work it into his schedule.

The last time Reagan visited the hospital was in January, when he underwent his semi-annual checkup for colon cancer. He has had regular checkups every January and June since he underwent surgery for an intestinal malignancy in July 1985.

The 77-year-old president "will undergo a routine series of dental X-rays in the dental clinic, while Mrs. Reagan will have her first post-operative mammogram," Fitzwater said.

Mrs. Reagan, 66, had her breast removed after doctors discovered a quarter-inch cancerous lesion. She chose to undergo a modified radical mastectomy, which involves the removal of the entire breast and some lymph nodes.

Mrs. Crispin said the mammogram of the first lady's right breast was to be conducted by a radiologist, Dr. Claudia Galbo.

Mrs. Crispin said that not only was it time for the first lady's six-month checkup, but the president could use the time "to get his dental X-rays taken, rather than usually doing it at the White House."

Fitzwater said Reagan usually has a cleaning and checkup every three months at the White House, but that the president planned to have a "panoramic" X-ray done this time in order to get a full-view picture of his mouth.

The spokesman said the White House has X-ray machines that take pictures of parts of the mouth, but does not have the larger machine that pans the entire mouth area.

Panoramic radiographs, or X-rays that provide an overall view of the teeth and jaws, are used to diagnose problems ranging from cavities to tumors.

Fitzwater identified Reagan's dentist as Navy Cmdr. Dr. James Judkins. He said the president has not had any complaints about his teeth.

President and Mrs. Reagan depart Bethesda Naval Hospital Friday aboard Marine One. The president had a dental check up and Mrs. Reagan had her first major examination since her cancerous left breast was removed six months ago.

Jews in Soviet Union find release from oppression in humor

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recent classified ad in an East German newspaper offered this deal: "Prepared to exchange a luxury apartment in East Berlin for a hole in the wall."

True? As much as any of the hundreds of anecdotes in a newly released compilation entitled "The Jokes of Oppression: The Humor of Soviet Jews."

Jews may not be free in the Soviet Union, but the Jewish joke is — it doesn't fear jails or labor camps, escapes detection by the KGB, targets sacred institutions and venerated leaders, and permeates every nook of society.

"In the absence of an open press in this kind of claustrophobic, stifled society, where publicly people wear one kind of face and privately an entirely different type, these jokes are of great significance," says the book's co-author, David Harris.

Harris, the Washington representative of The American Jewish Committee, spent 10 years collecting the jokes from Jews living in the Soviet Union, Israel, the United States and Europe. His co-author, Izrail Rabinovich, is a Soviet emigre who teaches at the Defense Language Institute in Monterey, Calif.

"For Soviet citizens, humor is a private way of coping, criticizing, distancing themselves. A punch line, just for a moment or two, permits release of tension and anger that otherwise tends to build up with no outlet," Harris says.

For Jews, in particular, the jokes reflect the pain of a 2.5 million minority suffering anti-Semitic persecution and restrictions on emigration, free worship, and the study of Jewish culture and the Hebrew language.

Last year about 8,000 Jews were allowed to leave the Soviet Union, although the figures for this year have increased significantly. Israel estimates that some 400,000 Soviet Jews wish to leave.

This joke illustrates frustration with repeated rejections of emigration requests: A Jew named Khaimovich is turned down for an exit visa because he is in possession of state secrets from his place of work. "State secrets? You must be kidding. In my field the Americans are at least 20 years ahead of us," he exclaims. "That's precisely the secret," comes the curt reply.

The jokes, say the authors, are also embraced widely by non-Jews who identify with the recurring themes of a hostile bureaucracy, discontent with the standard of living, memories of Stalinist terror and frustration with the stifling presence of the Communist Party.

For instance, the same Khaimovich is being chastised at a district party meeting. "Why weren't you at the last party meeting?" asks an official. "If I had known it was the last, not only would I have come, but I'd have brought my entire family as well," he replies.

Or this one: "What's the difference between Catholicism and Communism?" The answer: "In Catholicism there's life after death. In Communism there is posthumous rehabilitation."

While the humor of other countries doesn't always travel well, laughter about the Soviet Union is usually culturally translatable in the United States. President Reagan enjoys telling jokes about the Russians, and he trots them out periodically at summit meetings with Soviet leaders.

"Americans find it reassuring to laugh at the Soviets. It reinforces a feeling of political and social superiority toward the Russians," Harris says.

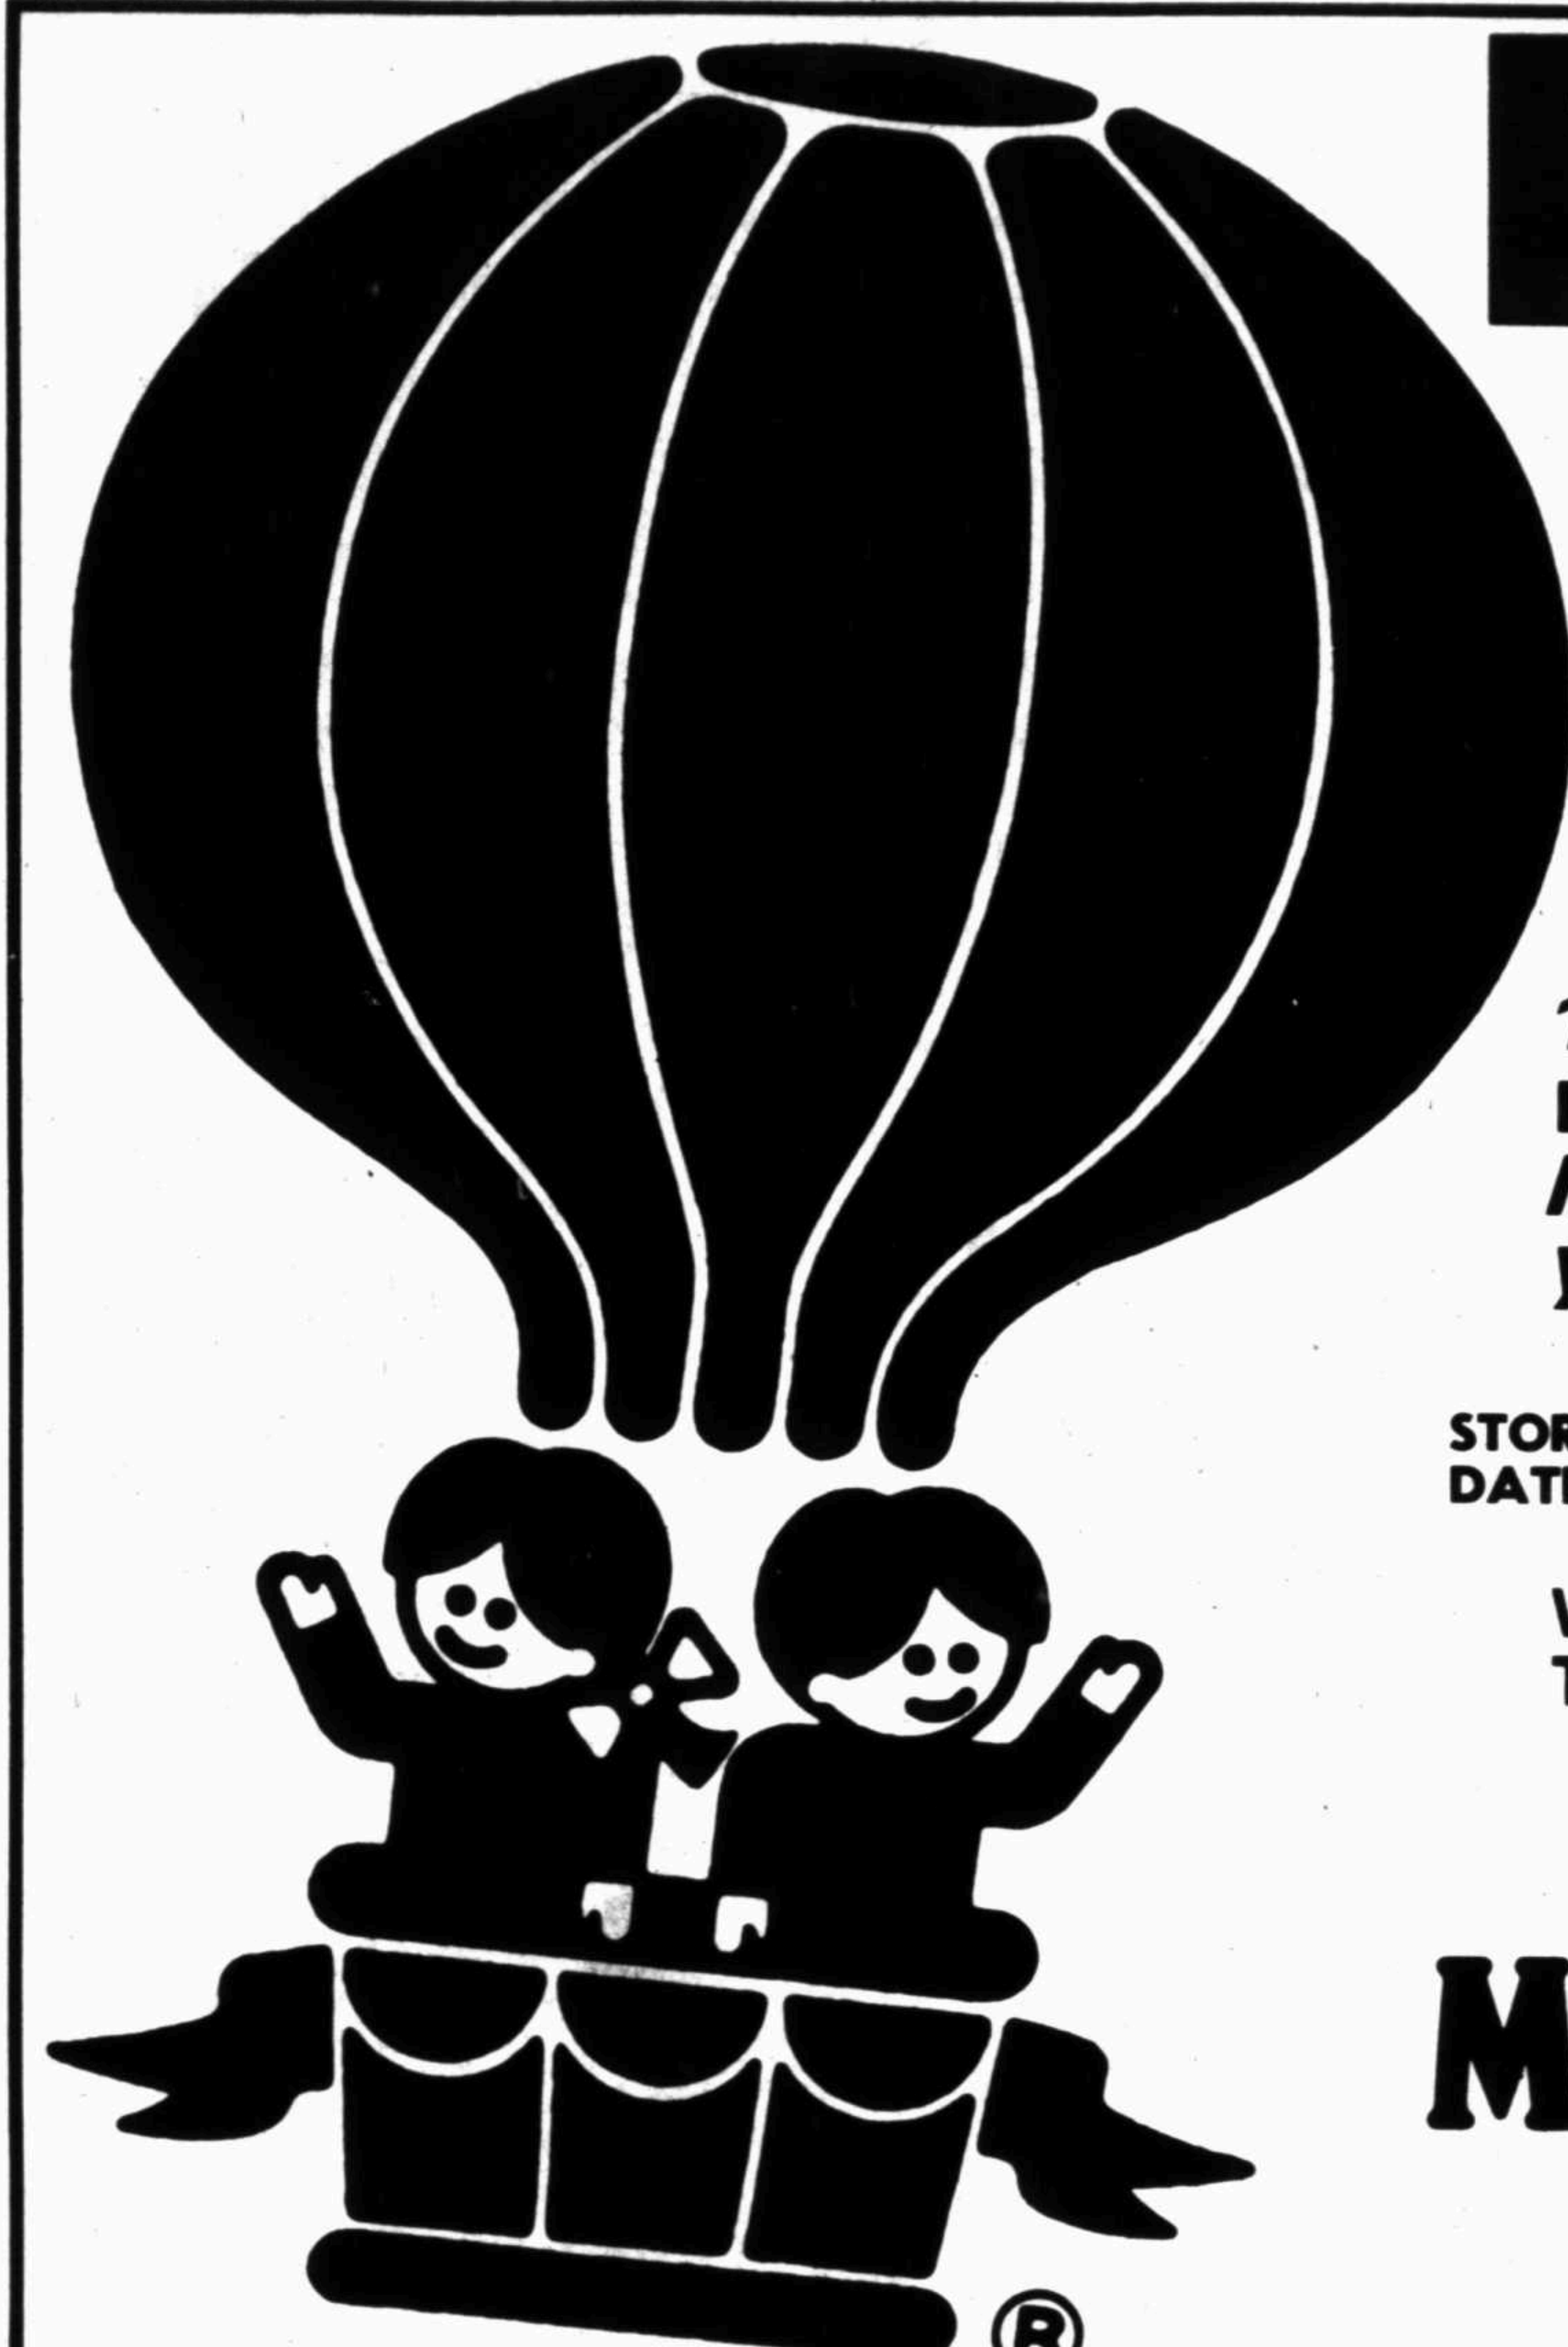

As a refugee official for Jewish organizations in Europe, Harris dealt with thousands of emigre Soviets, including Rabinovich, who arrived in Rome from the Soviet Union in 1976.

The two men discovered an interest in jokes, and although they have not seen each other since, they have conducted a prolific correspondence for some 11 years which yielded a collection of some 2,000 jokes. The book is only a part of the collection.

Americans familiar with the humor of the "Borscht Belt" — those areas of the United States with large concentrations of East European Jews — will likely be a receptive audience for this one.

Khaim and Abram devised a scheme for crossing the border — dressed up as a cow. As they approached the border in their four-legged outfit, Khaim whispered: "Oy vey, we're in for big trouble."

"Border guards?" Abram asked. "No, a bull," Khaim whispered. Then there are jokes that appeal on the level of superpower competition.

Some women ignoring warning about acne drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — A popular anti-acne medication that can cause birth defects when taken by pregnant women is coming under intensified federal scrutiny because some women are ignoring explicit warnings accompanying the prescription drug.

Those warnings are direct: Don't take the drug if you are pregnant and don't get pregnant while you are taking it.

Food and Drug Administration spokesman Don McLearn said Friday the agency's dermatologic drugs advisory committee will meet next Tuesday to review use of the drug Accutane because "we're concerned that a drug is not being used as the labeling indicates."

"The drug has all sorts of warnings that people who are pregnant should not be using it and that the drug is only for a very severe form of acne," said McLearn. "It's clear that it's being used for a larger group than that."

Dr. Robert Stern, a dermatologist from Beth Israel Hospital in Boston and a member of the advisory panel, emphasized that renewed concern about the drug does not involve any new discovery about its side effects — but rather that the warnings of those effects are being ignored.

"These warnings or their precursors have been there from the first time the drug was studied. The company has always been upfront about letting people know about it through package inserts, through labeling, through all of their advertising."

— Dr. Robert Stern

62 birth defects associated with the drug from the time it was first marketed in 1982, but scientists believe that may understate the problem simply because many side effects from any drug are often unrecognized and under-reported.

Accutane is specifically intended for treatment of severe cystic acne, a type that often causes severe disfiguring and deep pitting scars and sometimes can be treated only with Accutane.

It is prescribed more often for men than women.

Since the drug was approved in 1982, the FDA and the manufacturer — Roche Laboratories, a division of Hoffmann-La Roche Inc., — have strengthened the warning label, made repeated mailings of special letters to doctors and pharmacists emphasizing the risks and discussed the risks twice in the FDA Drug Bulletin that is sent to more than 1 million health professionals.

Additionally, red warning stickers have been distributed to pharmacists to be placed on each prescription bottle.

Carolyn Glynn, a spokeswoman for Roche Laboratories, said the drug is sold in more than 40 countries around the world by the parent company, F. Hoffmann-La Roche and Co. Ltd., based in Basel, Switzerland.

The New Jersey-based U.S. division issued a statement late Friday saying it would challenge the validity of the Michigan Medicaid study projections at Tuesday's meeting and propose additional measures to see that the drug is not misprescribed and used.

It said it will propose tighter restrictions on use of the drug in women of childbearing potential and offer to provide "innovative blister packaging to ensure that female patients receive the pregnancy warning with every prescription."

The statement did not detail what type of restrictions the company will propose.

Indian troops have failed to end violence in Sri Lanka

By EARLEEN FISHER

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — India sent its soldiers to this small island nation with a declaration of noble intentions: to end a murderous ethnic war, supervise a peace accord, then get out.

That was eight months ago. The killings have not stopped, the biggest Tamil rebel group quickly renege on the Indian-arranged peace accord and the Indian peacekeeping force of 3,000 soldiers has swelled to more than 50,000.

Tamil rebels, seeking autonomy or independence for their ethnic minority on the island once known as Ceylon, are still massacring civilians from the Sinhalese majority and recently started turning their guns, axes and arson torches on the previously unthreatened Moslem minority.

In addition, as direct or indirect results of the accord, Tamils are killing fellow Tamils, Sinhalese are killing fellow Sinhalese, and some young Moslems are taking up arms against Tamils.

There appears to be a strange paradox here: the intensity of the violence being directly proportional to the increase in the number of Indian troops, the independent newspaper The Island said in a recent editorial.

"It is time that every citizen of this country told the Indians that if they cannot do their jobs fast enough they got to get out and leave our problems to us."

But defenders of the peace accord say it still offers the best, if not the only, hope for ending ethnic mayhem on a beautiful island that was building a booming tourist industry until 1983. That was the year militant Tamils, chafing under economic and political domination by the Sinhalese, exploded their cause into a guerrilla war that has now claimed more than 8,000 lives.

"We couldn't have done anything different," said Gamini Dissanayake, Sri Lanka's minister of land development and a key negotiator of the accord.

For the first time, he said, the accord specifically and publicly provided "a solid understanding" that the Sinhalese-dominated government would share power with the Tamils, a concept that he said was "just an abstraction in the past."

The accord guarantees some autonomy to the Tamils, provided the rebels surrender their arms.

However, the Sinhalese, who make up 75 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million people, fear the accord makes too many concessions to the Tamils, who account for 18 percent of the population.

An underground organization of ultranationalist Sinhalese has assassinated at least 150 people who supported the accord or were prominent members of President Junius R. Jayewardene's United National Party.

The largest Tamil rebel group, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, are engaged in internecine warfare with smaller Tamil guerrilla groups that support the peace accord.

Moslems, who comprise about 7 percent of Sri Lanka's population, became targets of Tamil rebels trying to dominate the Eastern Province, where the population is about equally divided among Tamils, Sinhalese and Moslems.

Both the Tamils and the Sinhalese are descendants of people who migrated from India centuries ago, but most Tamils are Hindus, most Sinhalese are Buddhists, and they speak different languages. The Moslems trace their religion and ancestry to Arab seafarers.

Apart from the continuing violence, there is also a feeling that time is running out to enforce the peace accord.

Under Sri Lanka's constitution, the 82-year-old Jayewardene has just 10 months left in office and cannot run again, unless he pushes through an amendment or a new interpretation of his tenure.

"He, President Jayewardene, is about the only man who can put an end to the situation," said National Security Minister Lalith Athulathmudali.

Jayewardene's own Cabinet is divided over the implementation of the accord and the Indian military presence. Although the ministers' public remarks tend to be fairly circumspect, their views are well-known — and can be measured by the bodyguards around them.

A dozen men guard the corridor leading to the office used by Dissayake, point man in the efforts at reconciliation and therefore a top target for assassination by extremists in his own Sinhalese community. The more hawkish Athulathmudali has only a single guard in sight at his official residence.

J.N. Dixit, the Indian high commissioner, or ambassador, who once moved freely around Colombo with a single bodyguard, now has what he calls "my rather embarrassing contingent of five gunmen."

Gorman's lawsuit against Swaggart to be reinstated

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Marvin Gorman, the former television preacher who has vowed to make public his evidence against televangelist Jimmy Swaggart, must be heard in court, a state appeal court ruled Friday.

The 4th Circuit Court of Appeal ruled that the state judge who dismissed Gorman's $90 million defamation suit against Swaggart last year must hear the dispute between the two fallen ministers of the Assemblies of God.

"This case is not like that of a business corporation seeking damages for statements made about the personal morality of one of its officers or a member of its board of directors in matters unrelated to business. Gorman's personal reputation was one of Marvin Gorman Ministries' primary assets," said the ruling by a three-judge panel.

Like Swaggart, Gorman withdrew from the Assemblies of God after a sex scandal. He now runs a storefront church in the New Orleans suburb of Metairie. Judge Richard Ganucheau ruled last year that Gorman's claim that Swaggart and 13 others had conspired to ruin his television ministry was a church matter and should be resolved there, not in the courts.

The appeals court said, however, that Louisiana law does provide corporations with a right to take action against defamation and libel.

In the case of Marvin Gorman Ministries, the appeals court said, the need for redress through the courts was particularly clear.

"In many ways, defamation of Gorman was defamation of his ministry," wrote William H. Byrnes III, who heard arguments in the case March 3 with Judges Philip C. Ciccio and Steven R. Plotkin.

Gorman has said evidence gathered by private detectives who investigated Swaggart for him would be made public in court if his suit was revived. Gorman filed the lawsuit in March 1987 — a year before Swaggart's fall from grace and resignation from the denomination.

Gorman claims Swaggart and the others plotted to ruin his television ministry through a smear campaign accusing him of a series of adulterous affairs with women whom he had counseled.

He said he had confessed to Swaggart that he had had one affair with a parishioner in 1979, but that the other allegations were all lies.

Lawyers for Swaggart and his codefendants said Gorman had the right to appeal within the church and instead chose to leave it.

Early this year, Gorman sent church leaders photographs of Swaggart entering and leaving a Metairie motel with a reputed prostitute. A woman who later claimed to be that prostitute said Swaggart paid her to pose naked and talk dirty.

Family of Contra's victim going to Nicaragua

MIAMI (AP) — The family of an American engineer killed by Contras in Nicaragua last year boarded a plane Friday to be in that Central American nation on the anniversary of his death.

The family of Benjamin Linder took along a check for $250,000 in donations for a project he was working on when he was fatally shot April 28, 1987.

"Nicaragua is our connection to Ben right now," said his brother, John Linder, just before the family from Portland, Ore., boarded a Laca flight to Managua.

Traveling with John Linder were his parents, David and Elisabeth Linder, and his sister Miriam.

The family will attend activities commemorating Linder's death while he worked on a rural electrification project, and are taking with them the fruits of a yearlong fund-raising campaign.

Family members visited 220 cities across the country to collect the money, John Linder said.

"His death brought the war home to the U.S. in a very personal way," said the brother. "Many people told us they had simply never heard our side of the story before."

The family filed a $50 million wrongful death suit Wednesday against Contra leaders headquartered here, charging that Linder, 27, was shot point-blank in the head by anti-Sandinista guerrillas after he was wounded in a gun battle.

The Contras have acknowledged Linder's death but have said only that it occurred in the middle of a battle.

The Linders have said one reason for their suit and the national campaign is to end U.S. backing of the Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

The suit "will help bring to light who the real people responsible for his death are," said John Linder. "It was part of a policy, a policy that begins right here in the United States."

Attorney general to investigate Mecham's remarks

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona's attorney general Friday launched an investigation into ex-Gov. Evan Mecham for urging supporters to "have a lapse of memory" about their association with him if they are questioned to be jurors for his criminal trial.

Attorney General Bob Corbin said the investigation will determine whether Mecham violated one of several laws, including the solicitation law that prohibits asking somebody to commit or help commit a crime.

On Thursday, Mecham acknowledged making the remark Monday during an invitation-only Republican meeting but said he was only joking.

When told about Corbin's action Friday, Mecham said, "I have no objection to his investigating anything he wants" and declined further comment.

The attorney general said he did not know how long the investigation would take or whether investigators would talk to Mecham.

However, Corbin said he did not think the investigation would delay

Mecham's May 19 trial on six felony charges of fraud, perjury and filing false documents for failing to report a $350,000 loan to his 1986 campaign. Mecham's brother and 1986 campaign treasurer, Willard Mecham, faces three similar counts.

On Thursday, Mecham told The Associated Press during a telephone interview: "Somebody asked if we could get a fair trial. I said (not) unless we could get some people who were friendly that might have a lapse of memory" when they were questioned about whether they could be impartial.

"I said it tongue-in-cheek. In fact, everybody laughed about it," Mecham said. "I'm not going to quit talking...just because we've got a bunch of people without a sense of humor."

Mecham was removed as governor April 4 upon his conviction by the Arizona Senate on impeachment charges that he attempted to thwart an investigation of an alleged death threat and that he misused a protection fund by loaning $80,000 to his dealership.

NATION IN BRIEF

Officials prepare should civilians be evacuated

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — With lessons learned from the Grenada evacuation, Charleston County officials are preparing for the possibility of a hasty civilian evacuation from Central America.

"I guess that the national network interviews of Americans in Panama made me think in terms of that. Basically, it's just headlines until you start seeing people and their concerns about things like that," William J. Knowles, director of Charleston County's Department of Social Services, said Friday.

During the past three weeks, social services employees have been assembling "survival boxes" containing items ranging from registration forms to diapers.

They also have a stockpile of quarters for any new arrival who might need to make a telephone call. The repatriation would be similar to the last-minute handling of the more than 500 evacuees flown to the Charleston Air Force Base after the 1983 invasion of Grenada, said Knowles.

Ships going to gulf

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION, Fla. (AP) — Four ships, including the aircraft carrier USS Forrestal, sail next week for routine deployments in the Persian Gulf, Mediterranean Sea and Indian Ocean, officials said.

The Forrestal will be joined by the destroyer USS Hancock, the frigate Elmer Montgomery and the destroyer Spruance.

Two Arabs killed when Israeli police storm holy site

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli police stormed the holiest Islamic site in Jerusalem to pursue hundreds of stone-throwing Palestinians after Friday noon prayers. Soldiers shot two Arabs to death in the occupied lands.

Police arrested more than 30 Moslem worshipers in the compound of the Dome of the Rock and Al Aqsa mosques on Temple Mount, which is sacred to both Moslems and Jews. The hill is known in Arabic as Harim es-Sharif, or Noble Enclosure.

Israeli warplanes attacked Palestinian guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon. The military command said they scored accurate hits on targets north of Sidon and returned safely.

Ten Palestinians were reported wounded in the Gaza Strip during street battles between soldiers and Arabs protesting the assassination of Khalil Wazir, the PLO military commander. He was killed in Tunis last Saturday by commandos said to be Israelis, and buried Wednesday in Damascus, Syria.

Friday's death brings to 171 the number of Arabs killed since a rebellion began Dec. 8 among the 1.5 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza, which Israel has occupied since capturing them from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 war. An Israeli soldier and Jewish settler also have been killed.

About 10,000 worshipers attended prayers on the Moslem Sabbath at Al Aqsa and the adjacent Dome of the Rock, the site from which the prophet Mohammed is said to have ascended to heaven on his horse.

Afterward, hundreds of people threw stones at police, who responded with rubber bullets and clubs. Associated Press photographer Max Nash reported from the scene.

He said the protesters carried black banners and Palestinian flags, which Israel has outlawed, and chanted: "With our spirit and our blood, we will avenge Abu Jihad!" — Wazir's nom de guerre, which means Father of the Holy War.

Police spokesman Rafi Levy put the number of arrests at more than 30. He said officers stayed off Temple Mount until the Arabs stoned a nearby police station, and did not enter the mosques.

Six Arabs were reported injured by rubber bullets and beatings, and five Israeli policemen were hurt by stones.

It was the most violent confrontation on the sacred site since Jan. 15, when up to 100 Palestinians were treated for the effects of tear gas and a police officer was wounded in a knife attack.

In the Gaza Strip, where Wazir spent part of his childhood, Arabs waved black flags and shouted "Abu Jihad sacrificed his blood!"

Israel radio said a Palestinian was killed when soldiers opened fire in Khan Younis. Soldiers wounded 10 Arabs at the Jabaliya refugee camp near Gaza City, and U.N. officials reported 18 injured by rubber bullets or beatings.

At Idna, a West Bank village near Hebron, troops shot and killed a Palestinian when he tried to attack a border policeman with a nail-studded club, the army said. Military officials said the soldiers were there to search the village.

Many mosque preachers used noon prayers on the first Sabbath in the Moslem holy month of Ramadan to denounce Israel for Wazir's death and urge the faithful to continue fighting occupation.

Wazir's picture appears on leaflets ordering Palestinians to attack with "stones, petrol bombs, metal balls and slingshots" to avenge his death. Soldiers fought protesters after Friday prayers in at least three Gaza Strip mosques.

Outside the Omari mosque in Gaza City, troops hurled tear gas canisters and fired in the air when about 200 young Palestinian left prayers throwing rocks and chanting slogans, Arab witnesses said.

"Youths gather! Gather because Abu Jihad sacrificed his blood!" the crowd chanted.

In Ramallah and neighboring El Bireh in the West Bank, soldiers guarded main intersections and patrolled the streets in trucks and jeeps.

Spray-painted on walls were such slogans as: "The blood of Abu Jihad will not go in vain." That one was signed by the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

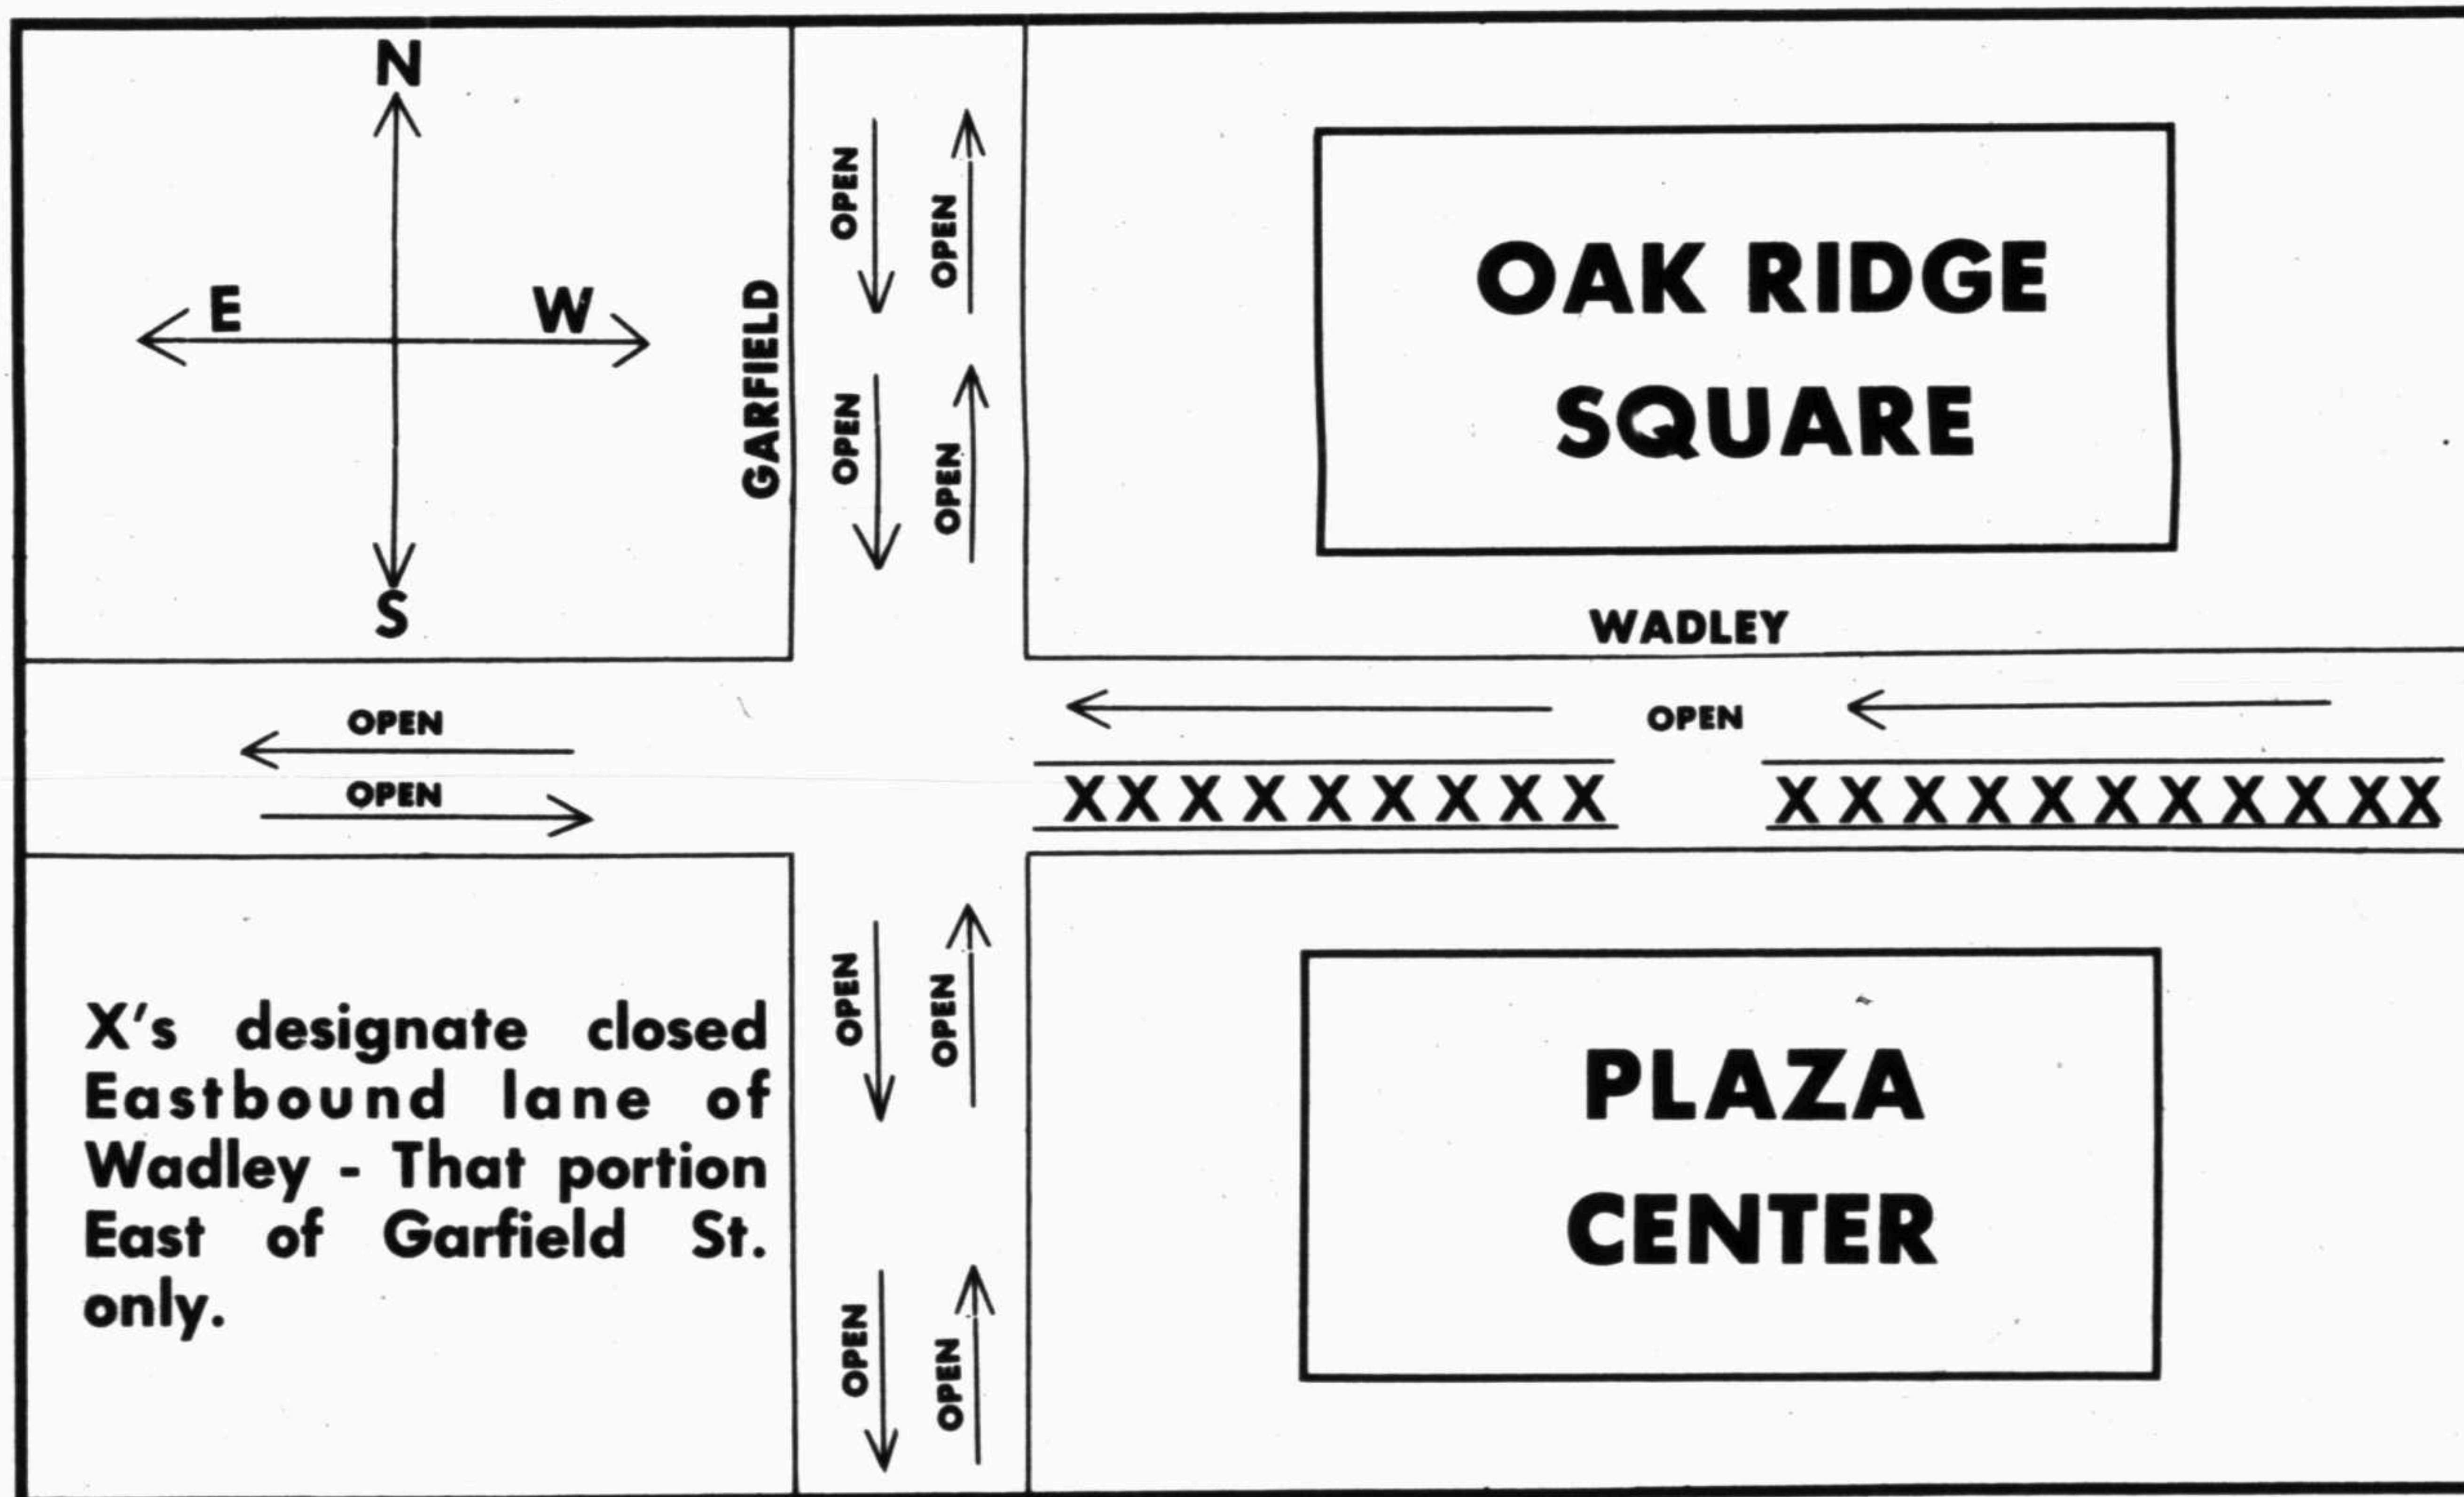

At the Abdel Nasser mosque in El Bireh, a preacher told 500 worshipers Israel killed Wazir to end the uprising. The Israeli government has not confirmed it was behind the attack.

"They killed him to create despair among the people," said Bassam Jarrar, who exhorted Palestinians to continue the rebellion.

Jarrar said the assassination of Wazir showed Israel's arrogance, and declared: "They plan expulsions, but they will harvest expulsion themselves. They plan death, but they will only harvest revenge."

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE WADLEY CONSTRUCTION

The Truth about the Wadley Construction is that the magnitude of the detour signs lead you to believe that Wadley is inaccessible. This is simply not the truth. In reality, Wadley is open to all traffic except for a small portion of the east bound lane. So if the numerous detour signs around Midland have scared you away from your favorite shopping areas, try again. Irish Catholics have trouble finding jobs BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — For 23-year-old Claran Hall, a Roman Catholic whose entire life has been caught up in the violence of Belfast, finding a job has become an impossible dream.

"All my life I've been unemployed," he said. "I've tried everything now to get a job. I even tried to be a street cleaner. But there doesn't seem much likelihood; there's too much prejudice."

Northern Ireland's overall jobless rate is 17 percent — nearly double mainland Britain's. Catholics, although 40 percent of the province's 1.5 million population, suffer 2½ times more unemployment than Protestants.

In mainly Catholic west Belfast, unemployment is about 47 percent with pockets as high as 86 percent for young men.

The British government is under pressure from local community and religious leaders, the moderate Catholic Social Democratic and Labor Party and the Irish government to tackle unemployment and urban decay in west Belfast.

They argue that the area is a recruiting ground for the outlawed Irish Republican Army because many of its 100,000 residents have no jobs, live in poor housing and are in constant friction with the security forces.

"People only turn to paramilitary organizations in desperation, only when they are a last option," said Don Keenan, a spokesman for the Catholic Social Democratic Labor Party. "If you do give them a chance — treat them with decency, humanity, and give them jobs — I think you will find support for the IRA withering away."

The government has unveiled legislation to stamp out bias by making companies monitor the religious makeup of their work forces. It also threatens criminal charges against those who make insufficient effort to recruit minority workers.

The Rev. Matthew Wallace told mourners at the funeral of a Catholic man killed by a Protestant extremist that the nation's leaders must stop talking and do something to alleviate the "great deprivation" in west Belfast.

"For many young people, unemployment is their lives and that is an indictment of those who look after us, those who govern our country," Wallace said. "Unless something is done, we will be celebrating a lot more funerals."

Northern Ireland Secretary Tom King, Britain's chief minister in the province, said that the government is working on proposals for the economic regeneration of west Belfast.

One proposal before the government would finance the creation of up to 20 companies, employing 30 to 50 people each, which would be owned initially by the West Belfast Enterprise Board.

The government has financed various youth training programs, but surveys show that over 80 percent of the trainees fail to get jobs when the courses end.

Claran Hall said he was forced to quit a bricklaying course after being hit between his eyes by a police plastic bullet in 1981.

Five years later he completed a three-month toolmaking course run by a private company in a Protestant area in 1986 but wasn't kept on.

'First couple' reflect on town's 'heyday'

WALPACK TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — The late afternoon sun casts long shadows over the clapboard houses that line Main Street in Walpack Center. It's dead still, but that's not unusual.

Walpack Township is dying. And Walpack Center, the once-thriving hub of the community, is nearly a ghost town, having faded year by year since the federal government bought up the surrounding countryside to build a dam — and then changed its mind.

"There seems to be no trace of what was here, like it never happened," Township Clerk Virginia E. Fuller said, as she and her husband, Mayor Raymond Fuller, settled into chairs on the glass-enclosed front porch of their home outside Walpack Center.

"It was an active community," she recalled. "We had a fire department and a ladies auxiliary. We used to take the bus to the city every now and then."

"It's like it was all erased," she added. "Suits me fine," her husband said, trying to appear cantankerous but breaking into booming laughter.

Only the municipal building — an old one-room schoolhouse — and the rescue squad garage are still owned by the township.

The federal government owns the former Methodist church, which is now locked, along with six houses and a post office that make up the rest of Walpack Center.

The houses all are painted the same beige with green trim, lending an eerie quality to the silence. The post office is open only two hours, six days a week.

Spreading from the township center are acres of what once was pasture. But the farmhouses, the fences and barns are long gone.

The death knell for Walpack sounded in 1962 when Congress authorized a plan to build a dam at Tocks Island, a few miles north up the Delaware River. The idea was to create a 12,000-acre lake along 37 miles of the Delaware River from Port Jervis, N.Y., to the Delaware Water Gap.

The federal government spent $9 million on engineering for the proposed dam between Pennsylvania and New Jersey. An additional $75.2 million bought land for the lake and a surrounding park. The lake was to be used for recreation and water supply, while the dam would provide hydroelectric power and flood control.

But Congress never appropriated money to build the dam because of environmental and economic objections.

In 1978, it turned the project over from the Army Corps of Engineers to the National Park Service, which is turning the land and river into the 69,000-acre Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

The federal government now owns all but about 5,000 acres of the land it intends to incorporate into the park. That land, in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, is still privately owned.

The Fullers, whose home is on a half-acre plot, are among about 90 residents left in Walpack Township, a 45-square-mile community that falls entirely within the recreation area.

The Fullers, both 62, say they intend to stay in Walpack, and serve as mayor and clerk, as long as they are able. They won't sell out to the government, as their neighbors did.

"People think we're crazy for staying, but it's great," Mrs. Fuller said, gazing across a deep ravine to the pines on a far ridge.

The government's objective for the area is to "provide opportunities for outdoor recreation," said Richard Ring, the park service's assistant superintendent of the area.

"Probably got just as much use before," Mrs. Fuller said.

"More," said her husband.

But Ring says 2.5 million people visit the recreation area annually to hunt, fish, swim, ride bikes, hike and go boating and canoeing on the river. Officials expect the number to double in the next decade, he said.

To accommodate the visitors, the park service plans to set up restrooms, picnic areas, refreshment stands, boat landings and trails for hiking and biking.

"There also are a number of historic facilities that folks can come and tour," Ring said.

Among those historic facilities are homes once owned by people like the Fullers. The buildings in Walpack Center may eventually house country inns, craft shops, art galleries, museums, restaurants or "other facilities consistent with the government's objectives for the area," Ring said.

Thousands of other houses, that were deemed to have no historic or cultural value, were torn down.

"We fought it like the devil," Fuller said of opposition to the federal plans.

Walpack, established in the 1750s, had a year-round population of about 375 in the early 1960s, with numbers swelling to about 3,000 in the summer, the Fullers said. Most residents were dairy farmers and most summer people came for the fishing and hunting, or the solitude.

"Sometimes it's hard to remember what it was like," Mrs. Fuller said.

Midland Angels' Jesus Alfaro
...12 years and still hoping

Alfaro seeking elusive dream

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Once upon a time, young Jesus Alfaro was considered a hot prospect in the Chicago Cubs organization. Consecutive seasons of .352 and .356 for the then-Midland Cubs in 1979 and 1980, respectively, did nothing to dispel those high hopes.

But the Cubs gave up on him after a so-so season at Triple-A Des Moines in 1981. Since then, the 29-year-old Venezuelan has seen time in three major league organizations, but has never seen a moment of major league action despite a lifetime batting average of .305 and 122 home runs in 12 minor league seasons.

Alfaro is back in Midland for what may be his last go-around as a player after the California Angels signed him as a free agent and assigned him to their Double-A farm club here.

He signed with the Angels organization because he felt like it might be his best route to the big leagues.

"At least I may have a chance to go up here," Alfaro said. "They've told me that the first guy to go up would be me."

BUT ALFARO has heard that line before. After the Cubs traded him to Baltimore in late 1981, he went to 1982 spring training with their Triple-A farm club at Rochester.

"I thought they might give me a chance, but they sent me to Double-A (at Charlotte)," he said.

He played every day at shortstop for Charlotte, batting .301 with 13 homers and 71 RBI. The Orioles then invited him to the big league camp in 1983. Again hopes were high.

But Alfaro played in only three "B" games before being sent back to Charlotte, where he played two more seasons before the Milwaukee Brewers signed him as a free agent and sent him to El Paso.

Alfaro excelled at El Paso, hitting 51 home runs and driving in 294 runs in two-and-a-half seasons for the Diablos. Still, it wasn't until July 12 last season that he got the call to Triple-A Denver.

Alfaro batted a respectable .272 for the Zephyrs in the final weeks of the season. Despite that success, he was unable to impress the big league brass.

"I've proven I can hit in Double-A and Triple-A," he said. "At the end of the season last year, I was thinking 'this is the time.'"

But it wasn't, and Alfaro is at a loss to explain why he has been passed over so many times.

"I don't know what happened," he said. "I know I can't run, and I don't have a great arm. But I've had some very good years with the bat and I feel like I can hit big league pitching."

In recent years, Alfaro has played mostly third and first base, though he still takes an occasional turn at shortstop. Midland manager Max Olivares is also using him as a designated hitter.

"I like third base better now," Alfaro said. "Shortstop is a very busy position. You have to be alert."

"The shortstop is supposed to be one of the captains, while the third baseman is usually more laid back."

Olivares is glad to have someone with Alfaro's experience, especially since less than half of the M-Angels have previous Double-A experience.

"He's been a great asset with the younger kids," the skipper said. "He's going to be like a player-coach."

"He's a great guy who keeps his mouth shut, and if I ask him to throw BP, he's there."

OLIVARES SAID Alfaro has been a victim of the numbers game throughout his pro career.

"You have to be in the right place at the right time," he said. "No doubt he has the tools to be a big league player, but right now, age is his biggest enemy."

Alfaro realizes that, too. "I don't want it to be my last year as a player, but it may be this year or never."

The veteran hopes to get a professional coaching job after his playing career is finally over. But he hopes that scenario is still far in the future.

He remembers Midland as the place where he learned how to live independently for the first time as a 20-year-old from a foreign country. He hopes that his second stint here provides the springboard to some sort of major league career.

Alfaro was batting .280 through Wednesday's game with one homer and three RBI. He was also among the team leaders in walks despite seeing only spot duty.

Fennell: Winning never hard part

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Winning has never been a problem for Midland Lee hurdler Jimmy Fennell, but nagging injuries have kept him out of the state's track spotlight — a fact that he would like to correct in the next month.

When you look for an example of a winner, you have to place Fennell's name at the top of the list.

Fennell has been a rare three-year starter at safety for the Rebels in football, covering a span in which the team posted a 29-6 record, three consecutive state playoff berths and two District 45A championships. In track, Fennell is the two-time champion in the 110-meter high hurdles, owning state rankings in that event the last two years.

Fennell has also been rewarded for those statistics. He is headed for Oklahoma on a football scholarship, was named District 45A's most valuable defensive player in 1987, landed a second team All-State berth in football, and most recently, has been named as a participant in the Texas High School Coaches Association's football All-Star game July 26 in Houston's Astrodome.

IN SHORT, his high school sports career has been littered with reward and awards. One could ask for little more in the world of high school athletics — except Fennell.

His current world revolves around the track oval and that oval hasn't always been kind.

Last year Fennell was the Region I favorite in the 110 hurdles, but a damaged foot ligament turned his shot at a state berth into a nightmare.

With that season behind him, Fennell looked to this season as his year to shine in the hurdles. He started fast, winning at Fort Stockton as expected. But injury trouble came again the following week in Andrews when he pulled a hamstring, missing five weeks of quality meet time.

He returned to form in the Tall City Relays two weeks ago with a state-ranked 13.88. He lowered that to 13.74 by winning the District 45A high hurdle championship at San Angelo last weekend. And now will have a chance to earn that state berth when he competes next week-end in Lubbock's Region I run.

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Lee's Jimmy Fennell has had a long and successful high school sports career, but this Rebel still feels like he has another major hurdle to clear in the month ahead as he looks toward competition on the region and state level in track.

But that injury bug has left Fennell perplexed.

"I started in football for three years at Lee and never missed a whole game. I had a few injuries along the way, but was always able to compete," said Fennell. "But in track, the injuries have hurt. I aggravated the hamstring in football and I think it just got to me in track, but I feel like I can win anywhere if I can run."

Fennell almost comes across as cocky in his attitude toward his own abilities, but no one expects more than he does of himself.

"It really makes you wonder where he would be right now if he hadn't had the hamstring injury," said Lee track coach Eddie Wolski. "When the bell rings, Jimmy is ready to compete, whether it's in football or track."

And you can't blame Fennell if he is looking at next week's Region I meet with guarded optimism.

"My sophomore year, I got to go to the regionals with the mile relay and that's the year Kevin Witt came up lame on the first leg and I didn't get to run. Last year, I thought I could win in the hurdles, but the foot injury took place. I have flat feet and you really come down hard on your feet when you run the hurdles."

"I'm thinking again that I can win it this year. I just need to be healthy and I will take care of the rest."

Angel hurlers produce first shutout

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Finally, some pitching for the Midland Angels.

In the finale of their first home-stand of the year, Angel pitchers combined for a seven hit shutout in defeating the San Antonio Missions 3-0. With the win, the Angels move their record to 6-9 in Texas League play.

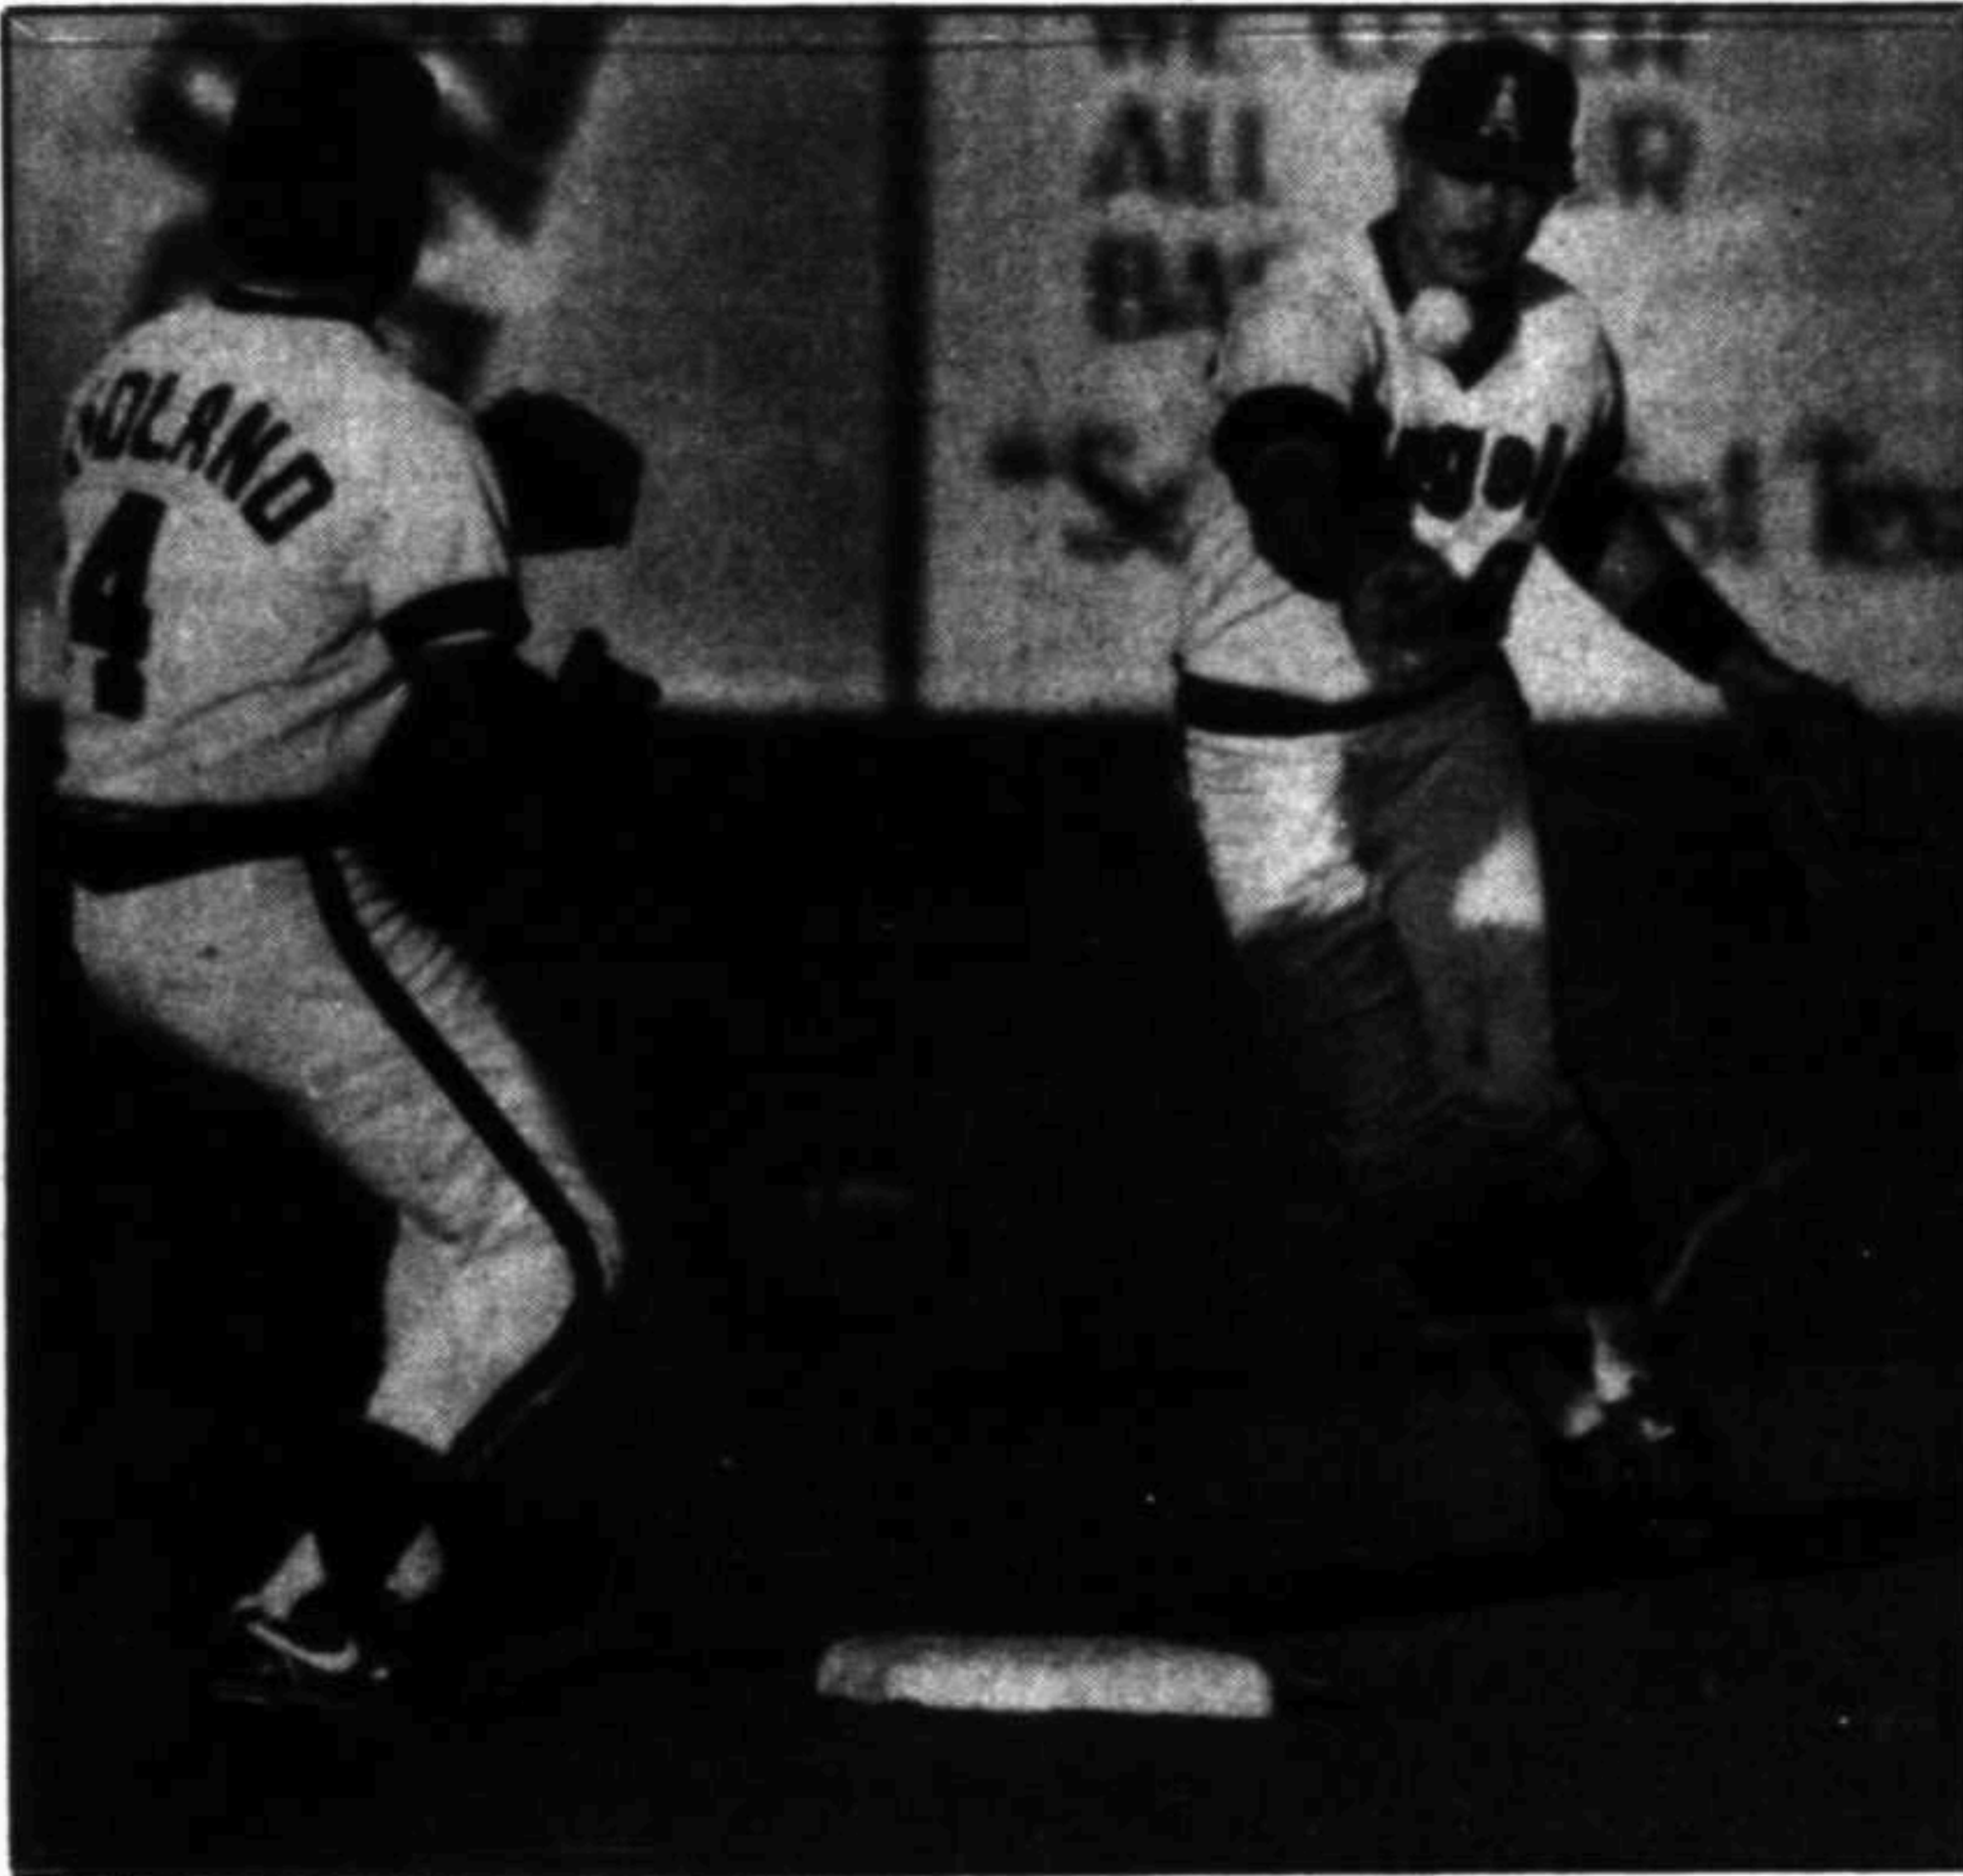

Midland starter Mike Fetters, whose ERA going into the game was 13.50 through eight innings, pitched 7½ innings Friday night, yielding six hits while striking out 10. Fetters was one K away from doubling his strikeout total of the young season. In pitching the seven-plus innings of shutout ball, Fetters lowered his ERA to 7.11. The nine scoreless innings by Midland moundsmen also lowered the team ERA from 7.36 to 6.90.

"He was more aggressive," Manager Max Olivares said of Fetters. "He was making the right pitches when he was ahead in the count. He pitched a heckuva ball game."

Kurt Walker came on in relief for the Angels, pitching 1½ innings, allowing no hits and striking out one in earning his second save.

of the game on Alfredson's third-inning double to left. San Antonio left-fielder Domingo Michel misplayed the roller, allowing Jim McCollum to score from first.

McCollum was the night's hitting hero, going 3-for-4 with three singles and one run scored.

The game was relatively short by early-season Mission and Angel standards. Five of the ten matchups between the two teams have gone extra-innings this season, many of which have stretched over the 3½ hour mark. Friday's game ended at three-hours, and was witnessed by the largest crowd of the year — 2,567.

Two controversies sparked the night, the first being an altercation between fans and members of the San Antonio club. Security was called in and the two fans were ejected from the ballpark without further incident.

In the ninth inning, with San Antonio pinch-runner Wayne Kirby on first, Mission shortstop Juan Bell hit a fly to deep centerfield. Thinking the ball would fall in for a base hit, Kirby headed for second and slid in before C.L. Penigar made the catch. In returning to first after the catch, Ontiveras claimed Bell did not cross back across the base as the rulebook states a runner must do.

Chaps just miss national golf berth

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Midland College lost an outright berth in the National Junior College Athletic Association golf tournament to two other nationally-ranked teams in a most unlikely way at Green Tree Country Club Friday.

Midland freshman Marty Scoles led the Chaparrals all season and ended only a bogey on the 54th hole of the Region V tournament for the Chaparrals to the seventh-ranked New Mexico Junior College and force a playoff for the second national tournament berth. But Scoles missed a one-putt en route to a double-bogey while NMJC's Per Nyman parished the Thunderbirds to a one-stroke advantage and the second national tournament berth.

Odessa College coasted to the regional championship after opening up a nine-stroke lead after the first 18 holes Thursday. The fifth-ranked Wranglers finished with a 54-hole team total of 852, followed by NMJC with 857 and Midland at 858.

Odessa and NMJC advance to the NJCAA tournament June 6-10 in Scottsdale, Ariz. But MC coach Delnor Poss said the Chaps may be in a position to receive one of two at-large berths.

SCOLE'S SECOND shot on the last hole landed at the lip of a sand trap, while Nyman put his second shot about 20 feet from the pin. But Scoles appeared en route to forcing a tie when he blasted out of the bunker and putt to within inches of the pin. But his putt for bogey just missed, and Nyman sank a four-foot putt for par to clinch second place for the Birds.

Poss refused to pin the loss squarely on Scoles' shoulders.

"Marty had a good year, and he shouldn't let that putt bother him," the coach said. "It's hard for a guy to get up over the putt when the wind's blowing so hard."

Scoles earned medalist honors in the recently-completed Western Junior College Athletic Conference tournament.

The Chaps got a lift from sophomore Steve Alexander, who exceeded expectations with a 54-hole total of 213, including a 69 on the last 18 holes. Alexander led MC individuals and finished fourth overall.

Alexander earned a spot on the 10-man all-Region team along with Scoles, who was tied for fifth, and 10th-place Rob Anderson.

Scoles finished in 214, while Anderson shot 217. Nobody gave Odessa's Lance Posey much of a challenge for medalist honors after the Oklahoman shot an seven-under-par 64 in the first round Thursday.

Posey finished with an nine-under-par 205, five strokes ahead of Nyman and six in front of Grayson County's Chris Learmonth. The Wrangler standout only finished sixth in conference play, but he has shot 15-under-par in his last eight rounds of competitive golf.

Poss expects to hear from the at-large selection committee within the next two weeks. The Chaps' chances will depend mightily on the results of the Region VIII tourney in Florida, in which four teams are ranked among the top 11 nationally.

Only 15 players are real No. 1s

By DAVE GOLDBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — They've been poked, prodded, tested and analyzed to death. Now the members of the NFL draft class of 1988, all 15 of them, are ready to be plucked.

Fifteen? That's right. According to the gray eminences of the NFL scouting fraternity, only 15 of the 27 players picked in the first round Sunday have the overall grades of true first-rounders. Moreover, only a few more than 100 have the potential to make it in the NFL compared to the 250 or so rookies who normally make opening-day rosters.

That's led to confusion, even among the people who do the picking.

"If anyone says the Giants have decided to do something, they're in confusion," says George Young, New York's general manager.

"It's the strangest draft to predict that I've ever seen," says agent Leigh Steinberg, who represents potential first-rounders Dave Cadigan of Southern California and Gaston Green of UCLA but stands to make more from the man he calls his prime No. 1 this year — Olympic figure-skating gold medalist Brian Boitano.

ON THE other hand, there are those who think it's underrated.

"I think a lot of scouts have deliberately given lower grades than they have in the past because most teams are fairly set," says New Orleans General Manager Jim Finks.

"There's no other league competing with us for talent and we've had an influx of players from the USFL who have taken spots we might have for rookies. Overall, I don't think it's as bad as everyone says."

The draft, such as it is, begins at noon, EDT Sunday at the Marriott Marquis Hotel.

It's the first Sunday draft in history, scheduled for the benefit of the NFL's eternal benefactor — television, in this case ESPN. It's also the first two-day draft since 1962 — no round will begin after 9 p.m. Sunday and the rest will be finished on Monday.

And as with most drafts in the last two years, the suspense begins with

AP/Wide World

No. 2 Atlanta, which has the first pick, has already drafted and signed Auburn's Aundray Bruce, a pass-rushing linebacker the Falcons hope will become a Lawrence Taylor-Andre Tippett type.

Then comes Kansas City, which moved up from third to second in an exchange with Detroit, presumably so it could take defensive end Neil Smith of Nebraska, whom the Los Angeles Raiders had hope to get in a trade with the Lions.

Detroit, which got the Chiefs' second-round pick in exchange, still has available to it the players it wants — Miami safety Benny Blades, Wisconsin tackle Paul Gruber, cornerback Ricky Dixon of Oklahoma and two wide receivers, Sterling Sharpe of South Carolina and Heisman Trophy winner Tim Brown of Notre Dame.

That group represents the cream of the draft, which is heavy in running backs and wide receivers, fairly deep in offensive linemen and threadbare on defense — outside of Smith and Blades, the rest of the projected defensive first-rounders are gambles of one sort or another.

And there are no quarterbacks worthy of the first round — Cris Chandler of Washington is rated the best but had a poor senior year. Given that, it's no surprise that something of a boomlet is developing for Stan Humphries of Northeast Louisiana, the school that provided the NFL with Bobby Brister, Pittsburgh's third-stringer.

The best of the running backs may turn out to be Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, who could have played another year at Pitt had he not been tossed off the team for misconduct and dealings with an agent. He is coveted by several teams, including the Los Angeles Rams, who pick 14th and 20th and may trade up to get him.

Other potential first-rounders include Lorenzo White of Michigan State; Gaston Green of UCLA; Brad Muster of Stanford; John Stephens of Northwest Louisiana and perhaps Thurman Thomas of Oklahoma State and Tony Jeffrey of TCU.

In addition to Brown and Sharpe, first-round wide receivers include Michael Irvin of Miami; Anthony Miller of Tennessee; Aaron Cox of Arizona State and, perhaps, Wendell Davis of LSU. Irvin is something of a gamble — with a year of eligibility left, he must graduate from Miami before he can play.

The two sure-shot offensive linemen are Gruber and Cadigan, followed by a group that includes Eric Moore of Indiana, John Elliott of Michigan, Randall McDaniel of Arizona State and Gerald Perry of Southern.

But basically, that second-line talent could go anywhere, particularly on defense, where there are an inordinate number of question marks.

For example, is Michael King, an awesome linebacking talent from Mississippi Valley State, too raw? Is Miami defensive end Dan Stubbs too weak against the run? Is Scott Davis, a defensive end from Illinois, too inconsistent? Is Michael Dean Perry of Clemson, the Fridge's brother, too short and weight-prone?

"It's a draft where the 15th, 25th and 35th player are all pretty much the same," says Gil Brandt, Dallas' principal picker for the past two decades. "So you take the player who best fits your needs and your style of play."

All that could mean last-minute trades, the kind that provide a boon to the various phone companies every draft day and keep the 15-minute clock running down to the last second on many first-round picks.

The Rams have five picks in the first two rounds and might trade up to get Heyward.

Colts swap picks; sign Joe Klecko

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indianapolis Colts, who traded their picks in the first two rounds of the NFL college draft, announced the signing of veteran defensive lineman Joe Klecko to a two-year contract today.

Klecko, 34, played 11 seasons for the New York Jets and was released after the 1987 season after being advised by the team doctor to retire because of chronic knee problems.

General Manager Jim Irsay announced the signing and also said the Colts were close to signing veteran quarterback Joe Ferguson, a 15-year NFL veteran with Buffalo and Detroit.

"We feel it's very close. Today we might have something on that," Irsay said, regarding Ferguson. "All negotiations have been concluded. At this point, it's just (the Colts) waiting for an answer."

Klecko said he decided to join the Colts because he wanted to be with a contender, and that he was convinced that last year's AFC East title by Indianapolis was "not a flash in the pan."

Klecko, the Jet's sixth round pick in 1977 out of Temple, had talked to several other NFL teams, including the Denver Broncos and New England Patriots.

Pirates keep on rolling

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — R.J. Reynolds hit a tie-breaking single in the seventh inning and Mike LaValliere went 4-for-4 with a two-run double, leading the streaking Pittsburgh Pirates to an 8-4 come-from-behind victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Pittsburgh, which trailed 3-0 after 1½ innings, won for the ninth time in the last 11 games with a two-out uprising against reliever Les Lancaster, 0-2.

Lancaster walked Bobby Bonilla and Sid Bream before Reynolds' single put the Pirates ahead 4-3. LaValliere, who tied his career high for hits in a game, followed with his second double to score two more runs. LaValliere scored on a triple by Rafael Belliard and the Pirates scored an unearned run off Frank DiPino in the eighth. Jody Davis hit his second home run of the season in the Cubs' ninth.

Doug Drabek, 3-0, scattered eight hits with a career-high 11 strikeouts for the 114 Pirates, off to their best start since 1962.

Leon Durham opened the Cubs' second with a double and scored when Davis singled. Davis was thrown out trying for a double but Vance Law doubled to extend his hitting streak to a career-high 15 games and Shawon Dunston hit his fourth home run.

The Pirates began their comeback in the third when Bobby Bonilla's fifth homer followed a walk to Andy Van Slyke. The Pirates tied the score in the fifth when Barry Bonds walked, stole second, went to third on an infield out and scored on Van Slyke's grounder.

Chicago starter Calvin Schiraldi, who entered the game with a 12.27 ERA in two previous starts, left for a pinch hitter in the seventh after allowing three runs and five hits.

Phillies 2, Expos 0

PHILADELPHIA — Kevin Gross pitched a six-hitter and struck out a career-high 12 batters as Philadelphia beat Montreal.

The Phillies scored in the second inning off Pascual Perez, 2-2, on a leadoff double by Von Hayes, Lance Parrish's grounder that sent Hayes to third and a passed ball by Jeff Reed. Parrish hit his fourth home run in the eighth inning on the first pitch from Jeff Parrett.

Gross, 1-1, who issued only one walk, lowered his ERA over 31 innings to 0.86. Perez allowed six hits in seven innings.

Gross pitched out a ninth-inning jam after Tim Walach and Andres Galarraga singled with one out by striking out pinch hitter Graig Nettles and retiring Tom Foley on a grounder.

Tim Raines was the only Montreal baserunner to get as far as third base when he singled to start the sixth inning and stole second and third.

Herm Winningham reached second base in the Montreal first on an infield hit and a steal and Hubie Brooks singled and stole second in the Expos' fourth.

National League

Philadelphia loaded the bases with two out in the bottom of the fourth on a pair of errors and an intentional walk but Perez got Kevin Gross on a tap back to the mound.

In the fifth, the Phillies loaded the bases with none out when Milt Thompson led off with a single, Phil Bradley beat out a swinging bunt and Juan Samuel walked. But Mike Schmidt hit into a forceout at the plate, Hayes struck out and Parrish flied out.

Reds 4, Braves 0

ATLANTA — Danny Jackson pitched a six-hitter, the third shutout in a row against Atlanta, and red-hot rookie Chris Sabo hit a three-run homer.

The Braves had their string of scoreless innings extended to 28 following consecutive shutouts at Houston on Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Jackson, 3-1, who retired 13 in row during one stretch, struck out nine and walked two in his first National League shutout. He had six during his five seasons with the Kansas City in the American League.

It was the 10th consecutive home loss for the Braves, who are winless in nine home games this year and 2-13 overall.

Mets 4, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Ron Darling scattered eight hits for his second shutout in four starts and Howard Johnson hit a three-run homer as the Mets defeated St. Louis, their fourth triumph over the Cardinals without a loss.

Darling, 2-1, struck out five and walked two while handing St. Louis its sixth loss in its last seven games. He pitched out of a two-on, none-out jam in the first inning by picking Vince Coleman off second base.

Darryl Strawberry, who started the night as the National League's top hitter, doubled into the right-field corner off Jose DeLeon, 1-2, to start the Mets' second and scored when Kevin McReynolds dropped a single in front of center fielder Willie McGee.

Padres 3, Astros 1

SAN DIEGO — Marvel Wynne and Benito Santiago homered to back the eight-hit pitching of Jimmy Jones and Mark Davis as San Diego Nolan Ryan.

Santiago's second home run of the season, a two-run shot in the sixth inning, broke a 1-1 tie. The Padres had tied the game on Wynne's second homer in the fourth, ending a string of 22½ scoreless innings by Houston pitchers.

Jones, 2-1, went 6½ innings, allowing six hits. Davis earned his second save with 2½ innings of two-hit relief.

Ryan, 2-1, who hasn't beaten the Padres since Oct. 5, 1965, allowed seven hits and struck out eight in six innings.

Orioles' loss streak at 16

Alexander comes back to haunt Rangers

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Just when it couldn't get any worse for the Baltimore Orioles, it got grotesque.

The Orioles lost their 16th straight game to start the season, their trouble turning to travesty Friday night when the Kansas City Royals scored nine runs in the first inning and romped 13-1.

"It is embarrassing. It looks like we're starting to accept losing," fumed Baltimore manager Frank Robinson, who unleashed an obscenity-filled tirade at his team in a closed-door meeting after the game.

"Tonight was not a professional baseball game as far as the Baltimore Orioles were concerned," Robinson raged. "We played like losers. They're starting to expect to lose."

The Orioles' woes reached new proportions as they extended the major league record for season-opening losses and their club mark for consecutive defeats.

Kansas City started the game with seven straight singles, setting a team record. Willie Wilson and Kurt Stillwell capped the first-inning carnage with triples while the bumbling Birds contributed two errors.

Even the Royals, who ended a five-game losing streak — which had been the second-longest in the majors — were in shock at the rout.

"Maybe, in some perverse sense, this will be good for them," said Kansas City general manager John Schuerholz, a native Baltimorean who worked in the Orioles' farm system in the mid-1960s. "Maybe when the world says, 'these guys are brutal, this is a joke,' then you really look to see if there's a sickness that needs to be cured."

The Orioles' embarrassment reached new proportions as they extended the major league record for season-opening defeats and the club mark for consecutive losses.

The Orioles' 16 straight losses ties the ninth longest streak in American League history. The record is 20 by three teams. The major league record for consecutive losses is 23 by the 1901 Philadelphia Phillies.

Mark Gubicza, 3-1, held the punchless Orioles to three hits as the Royals ended a five-game losing streak, which had been the second-longest in the majors.

Tigers 5, Rangers 3

ARLINGTON — Doyle Alexander scattered seven hits over 8½ innings and Tom Brookens hit a two-run homer as Detroit beat Texas.

Alexander, 2-1, struck out six and walked none. He was relieved in the ninth by Tom Henneman who earned his sixth save.

With the scored tied 1-1 in the third, Brookens walked off starter Paul Kilgus and two outs later, scored on Lou Whitaker's triple. Luis Salazar then singled to score Whitaker.

Detroit took a 5-1 lead in the fourth on Ray Knight's two-out single and Brookens' first homer of the year.

In the Texas sixth, Oddibe McDowell singled and Ruben Sierra homered to right.

Alan Trammell's single, a steal of second, and Larry Herndon's single gave the Tigers a 1-0 lead in the second inning.

Texas tied it in the second on Pete Incaviglia's homer to center field, his first of the year.

Indians 11, Twins 6

MINNESOTA — Cory Snyder and Joe Carter hit grand slams and Greg Swindell won his fourth game as Cleveland beat Minnesota.

The Indians, 13-3 and off to their best start since 1966, had never before hit two grand slams in a game. It had been done 39 times previously in major league history. The defending World Series champion Twins have lost four straight games and seven of their last eight. Cleveland scored six runs in the first inning on Mel Hall's two-run single and Snyder's third career grand slam, which ended a 1-for-15 slump.

Carter's grand slam, the fourth of his career, came in the eighth off Keith Atherton after Minnesota had pulled to within 7-6. Carter was 5-for-32 against the Twins last season.

Swindell, 4-0, allowed eight hits in six innings, joining Dave Stewart of Oakland and Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets as the only four-game winners in the majors.

Bert Blyleven, 1-2, tied a modern major league record by hitting four batters, two scoring. The record has been accomplished 15 times, last by Tommy John when he was with the Chicago White Sox in 1968.

Doug Jones pitched the final 2½ innings for his third save.

Tom Brunansky's run-scoring single in the fourth cut Cleveland's lead to 6-1 before Jay Bell made it 7-1 with an RBI single in the fifth.

Kirby Puckett's RBI double and Gene Larkin's two-run homer cut it to 7-4 in the sixth. Dan Gladden's RBI single and a bases-loaded walk to Larkin pulled Minnesota to within 7-6 in the seventh but Jones struck out Brunansky to end the rally.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 4

NEW YORK — Pinch-hitter Nelson Liriano singled home Lloyd Moseby with the tie-breaking run in the 12th inning.

Moseby opened the 12th with a single and continued to second when left fielder Rickey Henderson bobbled the ball.

Dave Wells, 2-1, the third Blue Jays pitcher, pitched 12½ innings for the victory.

Liriano grounded a single to center off reliever Tim Stoddard, 1-1, to score Moseby and cap a comeback for the Blue Jays who trailed 3-1 before scoring runs in the eighth and ninth innings.

Liriano stole second and, after Stoddard walked Sid Campasano, Lee Guetterman relieved Stoddard and allowed singles to Pat Borders — loading the bases — and Fred McGriff, scoring Liriano.

Toronto added another run when Kelly Gruber grounded into a fielder's choice and Borders scored from third.

Tom Henke pitched the 12th to earn his fourth save and secure the Blue Jays' fourth straight victory. Don Slaught hit his third homer to make it 6-4.

The defeat broke the Yankees' three-game winning streak and was their first loss at home after five wins.

White Sox 7, Oakland 5

CHICAGO — Carlton Fisk hit a two-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the 10th inning.

With two outs in the 10th, Greg Walker singled and Fisk followed with his fifth home run of the season on a pitch from reliever Eric Plunk, 1-1. It was Fisk's 300th homer of his career.

John Pawlowski, 1-0, pitched 2-3 innings for his first major league victory.

The defeat ended a four-game winning streak for Oakland.

Chicago tied the score 5-5 in the ninth with two runs. Donnie Hill singled in Fisk and Fred Manrique, who had singled, scored on a force out.

With the score tied 3-3 in the seventh, Oakland's Don Baylor doubled off Jack McDowell. He moved to third on Glenn Hubbard's sacrifice and scored on Doug Jennings' fly to center.

Chap netters spill NMJC

From Staff Reports

HOBBS, N.M. — Johan Dysholm marked his return to competition with a convincing win at No. 1 singles, and his Midland College teammates went on to shut out New Mexico Junior College 9-0 in a Western Junior College Athletic Conference tennis match here Friday.

The Chaparrals, 20-3, will play Odessa College for the WJCAC championship at 2 p.m. today in the Odessa College Tennis Center, following the WJCAC championship match between the MC women and their Odessa counterparts at 9 a.m.

Dysholm celebrated his return from a foot injury with a 6-4, 6-2 win over NMJC's Jorge Rendon. The Thunderbirds failed to win a set against the nationally-ranked Chaps.

MC may be without the services of No. 6 singles player Robert Antoun today. Antoun has been suffering from acute tonsillitis, but MC won both of the matches in which he would have played because NMJC has only four players on its roster.

Singles
Johan Dysholm def. Jorge Rendon, 6-1, 6-4; Gilles Ameline def. Denny Sweeney, 6-1, 6-0; Annie Boustani def. Billy Willis, 6-4, 6-1; Tommy Heiting def. Paolo Barietti, 6-2, 6-0; Scott Randolph won by default; Robert Antoun won by default.

Doubles
Dysholm-Luke O'Loughlin def. Rendon-Sweeney, 6-4, 6-2; Randolph-Boustani def. Willis-Barietti, 7-6, 6-0; Ameline-Antoun won by default.

ANGELS

A lengthy disagreement between the Angels and the higher authorities — the umpires — resulted in the ejection of third baseman Jeff Manto.

The Angels take to the road tonight, beginning a five game road trip in Wichita. Midland returns home next Thursday to begin a ten game homestand with El Paso and Wichita.

HALO HOOPS: Texas League president Carl Sawatski has suspended Midland pitcher Vinicio Cedenro for five games for his role in a brawl against El Paso last week. According to Oliveras, Cedenro walked off the playing field during the brawl and picked up a bat in the dugout. Cedeno was ejected after picking up the bat. Cedenro missed Friday night's game, and will also be out for the first four games at Wichita.

The Angels announced that pitcher Mike Shull has left the team indefinitely for treatment of a shoulder injury. Shull has spent all of the season on the injured reserve list.

Wichita, the Angels' next opponent, is averaging only 555 fans per game in their first 10 home games.

No. 4 Texas beats No. 5 A&M

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Fourth-ranked Texas took a 5-0 first-inning lead and went on to defeat fifth-ranked Texas A&M 10-2 in a Southwest Conference baseball game Friday night that gave the Longhorns a one-game edge over the Aggies atop the league race.

An overflow sellout crowd of 7,250 watched as Texas improved its record to 45-7 overall and 12-1 in SWC play. A&M fell to 42-9 and 11-2. The two teams play a doubleheader on Saturday.

A&M starter Sean Snedecker didn't last the first inning — surrendering four runs on just one hit but six bases on balls, including four walks in a row.

His replacement, Keith Langston, didn't fare much better. He hit the first batter he faced to force home the fifth run of the inning.

"We just got off to a slow start and put ourselves in a whole we couldn't get out of," Aggie Coach Mark Johnson said. "It's just a part of the game. That's why you play them one game at a time. We can come back tomorrow and play just fine."

Snedecker came into the game with a 7-0 overall record and an 0.95 earned run average in conference play. He had only walked seven batters in four previous conference outings.

six hits as Texas Christian registered a Southwest Conference baseball victory.

Steve Stone's 2-run double in the third inning gave Mauser all the runs he needed.

The Horned Frogs raised their record to 6-7 in league play, one game behind third-place Arkansas, and 24-25 for the season. Tech fell to 5-11 and 30-22-1. Tech and TCU play a doubleheader Saturday.

In league play, Mauser now has a conference-high 60 strikeouts in 44 2/3 innings. For the season, he has 107 strikeouts, only two short of the school record of 109, set 25 years ago by TCU head coach Lance Brown. He has gone the distance on all five of his starts this season, with 10 or more strikeouts each time.

Arkansas 4, Baylor 2
WACO — Arkansas' Dennis Fletcher and Bobby Edwards combined on a five-hitter that gave the Razorbacks a Southwest Conference victory over Baylor.

Rebels seek end to baseball skid

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

If you've recently heard a rather large "thud," or "kerplunk," the sound most likely was coming from the vicinity of the Midland Lee baseball diamond.

Like the major league Baltimore Orioles, the Lee Rebels have fallen on hard times.

While not setting any record losing streaks, the Rebels have dropped their last three consecutive contests and have eliminated themselves from title contention.

Today at 2 p.m. the Rebels try to get back on a winning track as they host the Odessa Permian Panthers.

Both teams will end the year with less than successful seasons. The Panthers, though, are by now used to losing, posting a district mark of 1-9 and an overall record of 9-13; Lee did not get into its losing ways until two weeks ago.

When Lee and Midland High got together Apr. 9 in Angel Stadium, the Rebels were 4-2 in district and tied for the lead. They are now in fifth place with a 4-5 district record; 9-10 overall.

Head coach Ernie Johnson said his team has had one of the worst hitting years he has seen in 27 seasons of coaching.

The Rebels have only a .248 team batting average, down from the .360 they displayed when they sat at the summit.

"We're just going to go out and try to have fun," Johnson said. "Actually, it hasn't been a whole lot of fun. But we're just going to try to end with our heads up."

Lee continues district play Tuesday in San Angelo; Midland High, which played Hobbs, N.M., Friday night in a non-district game, returns to league play Tuesday against Odessa High at Angel Stadium.

Quarterback Stouffer comes to terms with Seahawks

KIRKLAND, Wash. (AP) — Quarterback Kelly Stouffer, who sat out what would have been his rookie year in 1987 in a bitter contract dispute with the St. Louis Cardinals, agreed to terms with the Seattle Seahawks Friday.

"We have reached an agreement in principle," said Seahawks president-general manager Mike McCormack. "But the deal is not done yet. There are some technicalities that are going to take time."

The Seahawks acquired rights to Stouffer, who played at Colorado State, from the Cardinals in exchange for five-time Pro Bowl selection Kenny Easley and a future undisclosed draft choice.

The draft pick is believed to be Seattle's 1989 first-round pick. The Seahawks will not have a first-round selection in Sunday's draft.

McCormack said he expected the trade to be completed later Friday. "We think he'll be the quarterback of the future," McCormack said of the 23-year-old Stouffer, who came to terms a day before he would have gone back into the draft pool.

Stouffer, who is 6-foot-3 and 212 pounds, was St. Louis' first-round draft selection in 1987, and was the sixth player selected overall.

He is thought to have signed a four-year contract worth $3.1 million with the Seahawks, including a $1 million signing bonus.

"That's fair to assume," said Mike Blatt, Stouffer's agent, when asked about the contract.

"It's in that neighborhood," said McCormack.

The Seahawks announced Wednesday they had made a tentative trade with Cardinals, now based in Phoenix, saying the deal was contingent upon them signing Stouffer.

Blatt negotiated all day with McCormack Thursday.

"Kelly decided it would be much better to be here than working for the other organization," said Blatt of Stouffer's decision to play in Seattle after rejecting the Cardinals' contract offers. "The organizations are totally opposite."

McCormack did not announce the trade involved Easley until Friday, but their one-time defensive superstar confirmed it did when he showed up in Phoenix Thursday night. He said he liked the deal.

Easley was Seattle's starting strong safety for seven seasons. He was selected to play in the Pro Bowl five times and four times as a starter.

"Kenny has been a valuable part of this organization," said McCormack. "He'll be a loss. But we feel it's now the time for this organization to bring a young quarterback in."

'Skins Schroeder back on market

Associated Press

First the Washington Redskins leak stories about the availability of quarterback Jay Schroeder. Then they say they want a king's ransom for Schroeder. Now, with what looks like the most unpredictable draft in years upon us, Schroeder is back on the market.

The most likely buyers are the Los Angeles Raiders, who crave a quarterback like Schroeder — a big, strong, long-distance thrower who fits their style. And the Raiders are desperate. Al Davis is said to have told several people that they can't go into the 1988 season as they are and remain competitive.

One reason Schroeder is on the market is the feeling that his demotion to second-string behind Doug Williams has made him a negative influence in the Washington locker room. That's something that never bothered the Raiders, who have a history of taking on other people's problems.

One scenario has the Raiders taking Brad Muster or Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, the heavy-duty running back Washington wants, then trading him to the Redskins for Schroeder. A less likely one has them trading one or both picks to Washington who would then pass one of them on to Atlanta for Gerald Riggs.

NFL Notebook

By dealing Sean Jones to Houston for one of their two first-round picks, they now have something to deal the Redskins — the sixth and ninth choices in the draft.

And while highly placed Raiders sources insist there is no deal for Schroeder, the Redskins, whose first pick now is the 57th in the draft, have been working out players who are likely to be taken fifth to 15th. The only thing that can mean is that they think they have a shot at one.

One scenario has the Raiders taking Brad Muster or Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, the heavy-duty running back Washington wants, then trading him to the Redskins for Schroeder. A less likely one has them trading one or both picks to Washington who would then pass one of them on to Atlanta for Gerald Riggs.

The problem for the Redskins would be entering a season with 33-year-old Doug Williams, who has a history of knee problems, backed up only by Mark Rypien, who has spent his first two seasons as an injured reserve red shirt. One possibility: that the Raiders thrown in Marc Wilson as a backup for Williams.

Washington is also very high on talented, but raw, Stan Humphries of Northeast Louisiana. But so are a lot of other teams in a quarterback-poor draft, so there's no guarantee they can get him.

The Redskins, however, have done this before. In 1985, they entered the season with 36-year-old Joe Theismann at quarterback, backed up by a guy who had played just one game in college and, like Rypien now, had never thrown an NFL pass in anger.

His name? Jay Schroeder.

Wadkins birdies nine holes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lanny Wadkins shot a 7-under-par 65 and established a one-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $750,000 USF&G Classic golf tournament.

"I got ahead of the course early, and I was thinking birdie on every hole," Wadkins said after completing two trips over the Lakewood Country Club course in 132, 12 shots under par.

Wadkins putted for birdie on 17 holes, did not make a bogey and missed eight birdie putts from 15 feet or less. He was seven under par after 14 holes.

"When I got it that many under with four holes to play, I felt like I should have made a couple of more coming in," said Wadkins, a winner in Hawaii earlier this season.

But he made enough to leave some of his closest competitors shaking their heads.

"When you give Lanny the ball, he knows how to run with it," Mike Donald said.

"The way Lanny is playing, somebody is going to have to play awfully good this weekend to have any chance of catching him," Larry Mize said.

Chip Beck gave himself the best chance of doing that.

Beck, who scored the first victory of a 10-year career at Los Angeles two months ago, birdied four holes in a row and had 11 one-putt greens during a round of 8-under-par 64 that lifted him to within a stroke of the lead at 133.

He was followed by Tom Byrum at 10-under-par 134 and Scott Verplank at 135. Byrum had a 68 and Verplank had a string of five consecutive birdies during a 64.

Donald, Mize, Mark Wiebe, Dave Rummels, Greg Ladehoff and Dan Forsman were next at 136. Donald and Rummels each had a 66, Wiebe shot 67, and Forsman, Ladehoff and Mize each had a 68.

Tom Watson, a two-time winner of this event, led a group at 137 after a 69 in the occasionally drizzly weather.

First-round leader Hal Sutton slipped to a 73 and was six back at 138 at the tournament's halfway point. Defending champion Ben Crenshaw struggled to a 73 and, with a 145 total, failed to qualify for the final 36 holes.

Same old story as NBA regular season concludes

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The 843-game NBA season concludes Sunday, bringing to an end a six-month schedule that once again left the Los Angeles Lakers and Boston Celtics on top of the conference races.

The two teams have met in three of the last four NBA Finals, and it will be June before it is known if the Celtics will try to stop the Lakers from becoming the first team to repeat as champions since 1969.

The Lakers were almost unbeatable in the second and third quarters of the season, going 38-4 from Dec. 11 through March 9, and many believed they had the best NBA team ever.

Injuries to Magic Johnson, James Worthy and Michael Cooper and continued signs of age in center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who turned 41 on April 16, have tarnished that aura of invincibility.

From March 10 to April 17, Los Angeles was 9-10, including 6-6 with Johnson absent from the starting lineup.

All season, it seemed, the Lakers were meeting challenges from suitors to their title.

They went 6-0 against three of the best Eastern Conference teams — Boston, Detroit and Atlanta. The Lakers also snapped Dallas' 11-game winning streak in Dallas on March 6 and beat Houston the first four times they met.

Portland beat the Lakers on April 9 to take a 3-2 lead in the season series, and when Los Angeles beat the Trail Blazers three days later, Johnson said wearily,

"We're sending no more messages. We're all messaged out."

The Celtics, widely perceived as getting too old to meet the challenge of Detroit or Atlanta, once again ignored their critics and won the East for the fifth straight season.

Early injuries to Larry Bird, averaging a career-high 30 points, and Kevin McHale were healed by the All-Star break and center Robert Parish is coming back strong from back troubles. Veteran guard Jim Paxson, acquired during the season from Portland, and the return of Bill Walton, who missed the entire regular season with foot and ankle woes, could make the Celtics a strong contender again.

The Pistons, led by Isiah Thomas, Bill Laimbeer and Adrian Dantley and a group of eager younger players, passed the 1 million mark in home attendance and won their first division title since moving to Detroit in 1987. They outlasted talented Atlanta, which at times relied too heavily on Dominique Wilkins, the league's second-leading scorer.

Chicago, eighth in the East a year ago while Michael Jordan became the first player other than Wilt Chamberlain to score more than 3,000 points, challenged Atlanta for third in the East in the final week. Jordan, making a strong bid for MVP honors, scored two points per game less than in 1986-87, but he improved his shooting from 47 percent to 53 percent and led the NBA in steals.

For three-quarters of the season, it appeared that every team in the Central Division would make the playoffs. All six had .500 or better records on Feb. 28.

Mavericks destroy Spurs

Associated Press

DALLAS — Mark Aguirre scored 26 points and the Dallas Mavericks rushed to a 20-point first period lead Friday night, then coasted to a 127-96 rout of the San Antonio Spurs.

Dallas remained alive in its attempt to repeat as Midwest Division champion, but needed losses by first-place Denver in its last two games to have a chance to catch the Nuggets.

The Spurs, losers of six of their last nine, have already clinched the eighth and final Western Division playoff berth and will meet the defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers in the first round.

Alvin Robertson led San Antonio with 20 points against the Mavericks.

Dallas scored 14 consecutive points in the last five minutes of the first quarter and finished the period with a 34-14 lead, their biggest of the season after one quarter. The 14 points marked the fewest scored by a Mavericks opponent in any quarter this season.

The Mavericks extended the margin to 63-40 at halftime. Dallas committed only two first-half turnovers while San Antonio was guilty of 14.

The Mavericks, losers of four of their previous five, got 12 third-quarter points from Aguirre to boost their advantage to 94-64 entering the final period.

Hawks 133, Celtics 106
ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins

NBA Roundup

scored 16 of his 35 points in the first quarter and the Atlanta Hawks rolled over injury-weakened Boston. Atlanta, in a close battle with Chicago for third place in the Eastern Conference, sank its first 10 field-goal attempts, and used a 13-0 run early in the game to take control. The Hawks led 36-24 at the end of the first period and 67-45 at halftime.

The Celtics, however, rallied at the start of the second half. Kevin McHale and Danny Ainge each scored four points during a 15-5 stretch that closed the gap to 72-60 with 7:55 left in the third quarter.

But Atlanta followed with a 13-5 spurt that extended the Hawks' lead to 95-75 with 44 seconds left in the period.

Kevin Willis added 21 points for the Hawks, and Glenn Rivers had 19 points and 10 assists. Ainge led Boston with 25 points, while McHale scored 18.

Boston, which has clinched the best regular-season record in the Eastern Conference, played without Larry Bird, who has a sprained left ankle and did not make the trip to Atlanta.

Robert Parish, suffering from an injured back, and Dennis Johnson, with an injured shoulder, arrived late and played little.

Pacers 103, Pistons 98
PONTIAC, Mich. — Vern Fleming scored five of his 16 points down the stretch, leading the Indiana Pacers to a crucial victory over Detroit.

The Pacers, one of four teams fighting for two Eastern Conference playoff spots in the final three days of the season, can clinch a postseason berth with a victory over New York in their final game Saturday night.

The loss was only seventh in 40 games at the Pontiac Silverdome for the Pistons, the Central Division champions.

Cavaliers 107, Bulls 103
CHICAGO — Mark Price scored 26 points and Larry Nance added 13 of his 20 points in the third quarter as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Chicago Bulls despite 35 rebounds by Charles Oakley, highest in the NBA in the 1980s.

Oakley, who went into the game 018 behind Michael Cage for the NBA rebounding lead, had the most rebounds in a game since Feb. 9, 1979, when Moses Malone, then of Houston, had 37. Malone also had the previous high this decade, with 32 on Feb. 11, 1982.

Oakley, a 6-foot-9 forward, now leads the NBA with a 12.9 rebounding average to 12.6 for Cage.

The Bulls, who trailed 88-80 at the end of the third quarter, got as close as 105-103 on a jump shot by Dave Corzine with two seconds left.

Bruins closer to ousting Canadiens

Associated Press

BOSTON — Reggie Lemelin stopped 22 shots in his second consecutive strong performance in goal and the Boston Bruins, seeking their first playoff series victory over Montreal in 45 years, beat the Canadiens 3-1 Friday night to take a 2-1 lead in the Adams Division finals.

Lemelin appeared headed for his second shutout in 37 career playoff games until defenseman Chris Chelios scored with 3:42 left in the game on a rebound of Guy Carbonneau's shot.

Boston got a goal by Moe Lemay in the first period, a short-handed tally late in the second by Bob Sweeney and an insurance goal by Gord Kluzak in the third.

The fourth game of the best-of-7 series final is scheduled for Sunday night, as the Bruins try to win a series from Montreal for the first time in 19 tries.

Until their goal, the closest the Canadiens came to scoring was when Chelios' slapshot from the right point at 11:47 of the second period beat Lemelin, hit the underside of the crossbar and stayed out.

Lemelin shut out the Canadiens for two periods and finished with 27 saves in Wednesday night's 4-3 victory in Montreal, only the Bruins' second in their last 17 playoff games in the Forum.

Devils 10, Capitals 4

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Patrick Sundstrom set an NHL playoff record with eight points and Mark Johnson scored four goals as the New Jersey Devils rolled to a penalty-filled victory over the Washington Capitals in Game 3 of the Patrick Division finals.

The victory gave the Devils a 2-1 lead in the best-of-7 series, which resumes Sunday night at the Brendan Byrne Arena.

Sundstrom scored three goals and added five assists, including one on each of Johnson's four goals, to break the record of seven points held by Wayne Gretzky, who did it three times.

Sundstrom, acquired from Vancouver during the off-season, scored the first and last goals during a five-goal second period and assisted on a goal by Anders Carlsson as the Devils took a 7-4 lead after two periods.

He added his third goal on a backhand at 14:14 to break the record.

Johnson, who scored twice in the first and third periods, became the first American-born player to score four goals in a Stanley Cup game. His teammate, Aaron Broten, had become only the second American to get three in a game in Wednesday's 5-2 victory in Game 2.

The two teams combined for 221 minutes in penalties, with confrontations after nearly every whistle and numerous fights in the final two periods.

New Jersey's Brendan Shanahan and Washington's Greg Smith were given match penalties early in the second period and ejected from the game.

The 10 goals were by far the most allowed by Washington in its six seasons of playoff competition. The Caps had allowed six goals four times.

Massey fails in no-hit bid

GRANGER, Texas (AP) — Lago Vista pitcher Todd Massey fanned 15 and ran his shutout streak to 32 innings Friday, but failed to pick up his fourth straight no-hitter.

The lanky senior shrugged and smiled after the lone Granger hit was lined into center field by Scott Grimes with two out in the third inning.

"A one-hitter. I can't complain about a one-hitter," Massey said after Lago Vista's 6-0 victory over Granger in a Class 1A district game.

"I kind of hated to do it to him," said Grimes, who struck out on three pitches in his next at-bat. His single was a solid shot to center that no Lago Vista player had a chance to get.

"I just swung the stick," Grimes said, calling Massey the best pitcher he's seen.

A crowd of about 50 was on hand at Granger's field in this Central Texas city about 50 miles northeast of Austin. Lago Vista is a small town on Lake Travis, west of Austin.

On Tuesday, Massey tied a state record with his third straight no-hitter.

Granger had three hits off Massey in an earlier game won 9-0 by Lago Vista.

Massey began his no-hit streak with an 11-0 win over Hutto. He walked six in that game, but was near-perfect in his next outing when the Vikings punted Holland 30-0. Holland's only runner reached base on a catcher's interference call.

On Tuesday, Massey added no-hitter No. 3 against Jarrell.

Coming into Friday night's game, Massey had pitched 20 consecutive hitless innings. The games against Holland and Hutto were stopped after five innings because of the 10-run rule.

Two Texas schoolboy pitchers — Ricky Tricek of La Grange, in 1985 and Brent Ranser of Waco Robinson in 1978 — have thrown three consecutive no-hitters. The national high school sports record book lists two pitchers with five straight no-hitters and five others with four in a row.

What's the fuss? Balks don't concern Phils, Dodgers

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Finally, something nice to say about balks. The Philadelphia Phillies and Los Angeles Dodgers are the only teams in the majors without any.

With balks being called at a 500 percent increase over last year's record rate, the pitchers in Philadelphia and Los Angeles are doing something right.

"It's something we're really working on here," Phillies pitcher Don Carman said. "I know it must be frustrating for the teams that are getting a lot called on them. Fortunately, we haven't had to worry about that problem for now."

The Oakland Athletics, meanwhile, have already set a team record with 22 balks, most in the majors. Milwaukee pitchers, called for several balks in a game against New York, got a reminder to stop in their set position. The next day, someone mounted a traffic "Stop" sign in the Brewers' dugout.

The Baltimore Orioles are trying to keep cool despite their recent woes. After they set a major league record with their 15th straight loss to start the season Wednesday night, a shoving match broke out between a newspaper reporter and a television interviewer as they jockeyed for position in the Orioles' locker room. Manager Frank Robinson, sometimes testy, was quick with a joke. "You guys' nerves are getting edgy," he said. "We're going to have to win one before you explode."

Food For Thought: There's a new luxury for the star set who watch games at Dodger Stadium: sushi. The cafeteria at the ballpark started serving the raw fish delight this month. Only in L.A. Land. Among other culinary offerings: The Phillies have added Chinese food at Veterans Stadium and the Yankees have opened a food mart with various ethnic foods and desserts, plus a wet bar that will serve daiquiris.

Dwight Gooden, who enjoys hitting almost as much as pitching, is 3-for-4 with four RBI when runners are in scoring position this season. He's still more valuable on the mound, especially at night — his career record under the lights is 55-11. The Texas Rangers have two shutouts this season, against Boston and Cleveland. The Rangers' first shutout last season came on June 9.

The biggest change between Mike Schmidt in the past and Mike Schmidt now? He rarely swings and misses these days. Schmidt struck out just four times in his first 55 at-bats this season. But, making more contact has taken its toll on his walks. He drew only six passes in that same span. "You get walks when you swing and miss and when you foul off a lot of pitches. You take a lot of pitches in-between," Schmidt said. "Now, I put the ball in play almost everytime I swing."

Joe Pepitone's first wife is working as a waitress at Rusty Staub's restaurant in New York.

Jeff Stone made a quick trip home this week and it helped him break out of a horrible slump. So did some new bats.

Stone, acquired by Baltimore this spring to be its "cliff" hitter, began the season 1-for-32. On an off-day Monday, Stone drove from Baltimore to his New Jersey apartment to pick up some tapes of him hitting while with Philadelphia. Then, when the Orioles arrived in Milwaukee on Tuesday, a set of his personal bats was waiting — his personal shipment was late this year and he started the season using other models.

With his new bats and his old approach, Stone went 6-for-11.

By now the New York Mets should know how to spell Terry Pendleton's name. It was Pendleton's two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning last September that sent St. Louis past the Mets in a key pennant race game, and the shot was considered the Cardinals' biggest hit of the year.

Prior to the Cardinals' game in New York on Sunday, the Mets posted a lineup card in their clubhouse listing "Pendleton" at third base for St. Louis. Pendleton refreshed the Mets' memory quickly with a home run in his first at-bat.

FENNELL

Regardless of what happens to Fennell in track the next month, his future lies with football and that future begins July 26 in Houston when he becomes a member of the North squad.

"I'm really excited about being picked to play in the All-Star game," said Fennell. "I've seen a lot of kids from Lee go and play in that game before me and that was one of my goals."

"I really didn't think I would be picked after I got second team All-State, but it gave me a good feeling when I was picked to play in the game."

Fennell becomes the fifth Rebel in five years to be picked for the All-Star game. His name joins Michael Johnson (1984), Tyrone Thurman (1985), Jake Young (1986) and John Bradley (1987). Johnson ended a big career at Texas Tech last fall and will probably be drafted today in the NFL draft. Thurman is still at Tech and is known as the smallest player in college football. Young was a sophomore starter at center with Nebraska last fall and Fennell will join Bradley at Oklahoma this fall.

"I heard the South team will probably throw the ball a lot and that excites me since I'm a defensive back. I hope they will be throwing to me some," said Fennell.

Odessa Permian's Shawn Crow, District 45A's all-time single season rushing leader, will also be in the All-Star game as will be Monahans running back Charles Thompson.

IN ADDITION, Permian coach Gary Gaines will be the North coach, and he will be glad that Fennell is on his team this time around since Fennell did a lot of damage to his Panthers in a 42-21 Lee victory back in October.

"It'll be nice to have Jimmy on my side for a change," joked Gaines. "He's one fine player and a great kid. I'm looking forward to it. I have Crow and Thompson in the backfield and you can't have two finer running backs. But I also have Steve Needham of Plano at quarterback and that's another kid I'm glad to have on my side after what he did to us in the semifinals."

"We'll have a line that averages in the neighborhood of 260 pounds. There is a lot of talent on both teams and that makes it all exciting to think about."

Fennell, too, thinks it will be a unique experience to play for Gaines.

"It will be different, to say the least," noted Fennell. "I always wanted to beat Coach Gaines, but now we will be on the same team. I never dreamed that this would ever happen. It will be a great chance to get to know him a lot better and I'm looking forward to that."

But Friday and Saturday in Lubbock comes first where Fennell expects to win — as usual.

Ram linebacker gets arrested

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Former Los Angeles Rams' linebacker Isiah Robertson has been arrested by Irvine, Calif., police on three outstanding warrants totaling more than $20,000.

The arrest was made Thursday by officers responding to a disturbance call at the home of the six-time Pro Bowl player.

Robertson, 38, was booked into the Orange County Jail and posted bail at 2 a.m. Friday, said Sheriff's Lt. Richard Olson.

Irvine Police Lt. Mike White said officers were called to Robertson's home Thursday morning by neighbors who reported he was fighting with his girlfriend.

After running a records check on Robertson, authorities discovered a $10,000 arrest warrant alleging possession of amphetamines, a $10,000 warrant alleging disturbing the peace, and a $222 warrant for alleged traffic violations, White said.

All of the warrants were issued by Orange County courts, White said, adding that Robertson listed his occupation as sales and public relations when arrested.

Robertson was a starting linebacker for the Rams from 1971-78, and played in the Pro Bowl every year during that time except for 1972. He was traded to the Buffalo Bills in 1979.

Bulldog JV defeats Bronchos

From Staff Reports

The Midland High JV baseball team boosted its record to 19-3 with a 10-4 win over the Odessa High JV at Zachary Field Friday.

Gabriel Salazar was the winning pitcher for the young Bulldogs, who won the rematch.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Group to sponsor legal issues seminar

The Hands of Friendship Singles Group at St. Luke's United Methodist Church is sponsoring a seminar on legal issues at the church from 10 a.m. to noon April 30.

The meeting will be directed toward three groups: those recently widowed, those in the process of obtaining a divorce and those who have been divorced within the past five years. Single parents are urged to attend.

Conducting the meeting will be two Midland lawyers, Carol Kirk and Tom Bruner.

"The forum will seek to answer all questions concerning such topics as recent changes in divorce and child support laws, child custody, wills, probate procedure and taxes," says a news release from the singles group.

Participants are asked to pre-register by sending their name, a statement of whether they are divorced or widowed and a $2 registration fee to Hands of Friendship Seminar, 2829 Metz, Midland, TX 79705.

The church is located at 3011 W. Kansas Ave. For more information call 687-4350 or 684-4950.

Prayer Day set May 5

May 5 marks the 36th consecutive observance of National Day of Prayer.

The National Day of Prayer Task Force and its parent, the National Prayer Committee, have joined with President Ronald Reagan to urge all Americans to become personally involved in the observance.

National Days of Prayer have been part of the country's heritage since the first one was declared by the Continental Congress in 1775. With the encouragement of Benjamin Franklin for "prayers imploring the assistance of Heaven," the founding fathers sought the wisdom of God while framing the United States Constitution.

"As we reflect on the vital role of prayer in the foundation of our Constitution 200 years ago, it is important to realize that the need for Americans to pray is as great today as it was during the establishment of our nation," says Vonette Bright, co-chairman with entertainer/author Pat Boone, of the National Day of Prayer Task Force.

Rev. Villa to speak today

The Rev. Ismael Villa is speaking at special services today and Sunday at Iglesia Bautista Betel, 1311 W. Florida St.

Service times are 7 p.m. today and 9:45 a.m. and 5 p.m. Sunday. Music is being provided by Ray Jimenez. Both are from Midland.

The services are in Spanish (Espanol). For transportation call 682-1404 or 684-0094.

Marriage retreat slated

A Marriage Enrichment Retreat, sponsored by Crestview Baptist Church, is planned for May 12-14 at the Holiday Inn in San Angelo.

Cost is $90 per couple. For more information call Crestview Baptist Church, 684-7701.

Workers to meet Tuesday

The monthly meeting of Parish Workers of Grace Lutheran Church will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the home of Becky Holder, 3804 Permian Court.

The topic will be given by Mina Fitting who will speak on various mission projects. Janet Matschull will give the closing prayer.

Parish workers meet every fourth Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. The group is affiliated with the International Lutheran Women's Missionary League and is open to all ladies of Grace Lutheran's congregation. Those interested in attending may call Denise Burns, president, 689-4484, or Sarah Wheeler, vice president, 688-0812.

'Food Fair' scheduled

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is sponsoring a "Food Fair" from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday in the LDS chapel, corner of Crestgate and Gateway.

The "Food Fair" is designed to teach those participating how to provide for themselves and their families in difficult times. Participants may attend two classes of their choice, which will run for 45 minutes each.

The five classes being taught include "Gardening," "Freezing and Drying," "Canning," "Food Storage" and "Wheat and What to Do With It."

The classes are free and the "Food Fair" is open to the public.

Canadian trip planned

First Baptist Church has finalized its plans for the October 3-14 Canadian trip.

Cost is $1,300, due in full by August 1.

Presently, 33 are signed up for the trip, which can accommodate 40. Organizer for the trip is Charles Elliott, who may be reached at 682-7669.

The trip was originally priced at $1,200, and those who have already paid their $45 deposit and are unwilling to pay the additional $100 for the trip may receive a refund by calling Elliott.

Cost of the trip includes air, train and motorcoach fares, accommodations, tours and some meals. For more information call Elliott.

CRS workers barred

NEW YORK (AP) — Catholic Relief Services says the Ethiopian government has ordered CRS workers out of Eritrea and Tigray, threatening millions with starvation in that war-ravaged region.

"The governmental action frustrates our ability to aid innocent people facing emergency need," CRS says.

Methodists seek to redefine identity

NEW YORK (AP) — Often called the most typical of American denominations, United Methodism detects a blurring of its identity and is seeking to define it more clearly.

That's an objective of the church's governing general conference, which starts next Tuesday in St. Louis and has before it proposed new summations of doctrine and mission.

The 10,000-word doctrinal paper has stirred controversy, suggesting that theology — the heart of belief — is going to be a volatile topic of the 11-day meeting.

Other issues, such as challenges to the 9.1-million-member denomination's stand against homosexual practice and against ordaining active homosexuals, have gained the most attention.

But the proposed doctrinal exposition deals with the rudimentary expression of the church's character. At issue is the document's backing away from previous strong affirmations of diversity, or "pluralism," in concepts and approaches, a variety that some see as reflecting vagueness.

The new doctrinal paper seeks "to move away from glorification of pluralism," says the Rev. Richard Heitzenrater of Dallas, vice chairman of the commission that prepared the document.

But some contend it is too restrictive.

"We believe that the proposed substitute to our current statement would move our church into a narrow sectarian and repressive stance," says a group of about 100 clergy. Others, however, maintain the tightening up is needed to counter a tendency toward ambiguity about belief.

In any case, writes the Rev. Richard Neuhauser of New York, a Lutheran, a tradition strong on theology:

"Whatever happens, it is certain that within United Methodism today there is a seriousness about theology and church doctrine that did not exist a couple of years ago."

"That in itself is a most promising sign."

Generally considered the most representative of American denominations, Methodism took root at the country's origins, and moved west with the population, with Methodist circuit-riders common on the American frontier.

The church is spread through all sections of the country, both rural and urban. Mostly middle class, it has only about 4 percent ethnic minority members, although it lately has emphasized ministry to them.

The denomination initially arose in England under John Wesley's leadership with a special mission — to serve the working classes and socially neglected. Wesley's spirit-filled verve, not doctrinal exactitude, marked the movement.

Methodism retains much of its socially activist urge. But the scene now has changed, become more complex in a multi-cultural nation, and some say the church's vision and direction have clouded.

Two Midlanders named to mission board

Among the 64 young adults approved by the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board for training as journeymen are Julie Gallagher and Mark Cox, both of Midland.

The 64 college graduates, who are under the age of 27, represent the 28th Southern Baptist group selected to work overseas since the journeyman program began in the mid-1960s.

Journeymen work two years alongside career missionaries, sharing missionary duties that can be accomplished in English and freeing missionaries to carry out more crucial assignments.

Candidates will fill assignments such as school teachers, teachers of missionaries' children, coaches, music and student workers, clerical workers and communication workers. The journeymen are scheduled to work in 35 countries.

Those who receive medical clearance and successfully complete a five-week training session at the Missionary Learning Center, Rockville, Va., will be commissioned for service July 12.

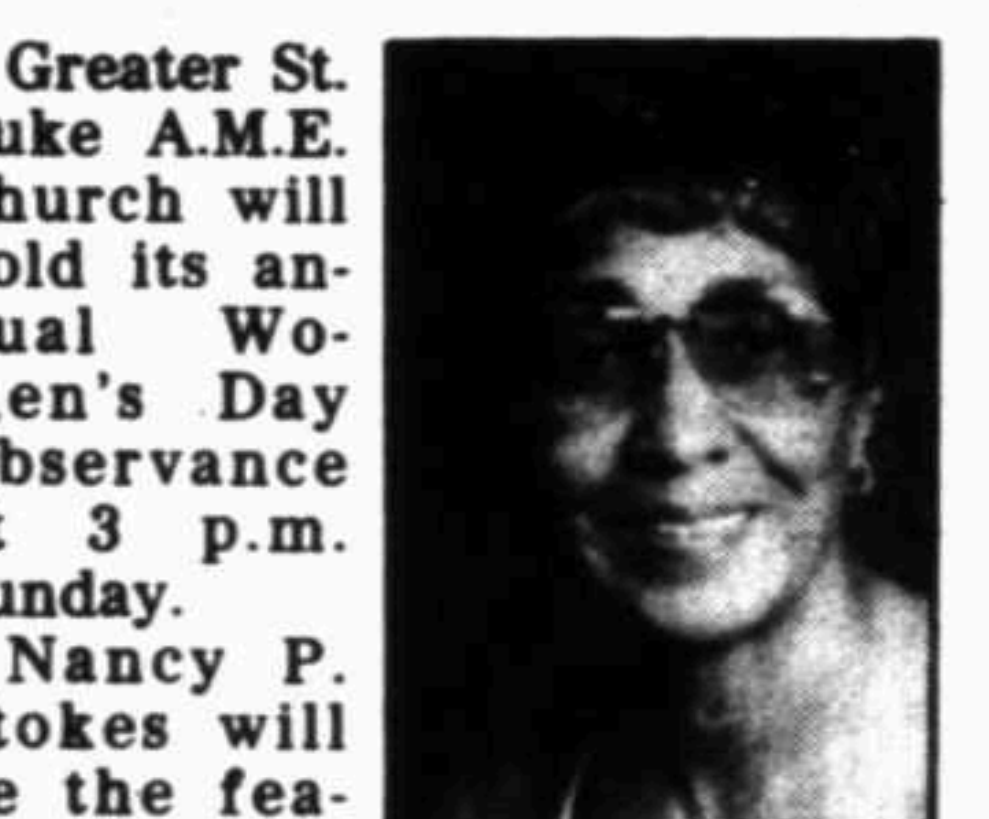

Ms. Gallagher, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Gallagher of Sugar Land, was born in Monahan, but considers Midland her home.

She graduated from Baylor University in 1986, and has a degree from Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, Mill Valley, Calif. She has made mission trips to Brazil and Mexico, sponsored by Midland's Crestview Baptist Church. Ms. Gallagher has been assigned as a nurse in Mbeya, Tanzania.

Cox, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Cox of Midland, is a native Midlander. He has been assigned as a Baptist center worker, Bamako, Mali. Cox was most recently employed as a computer instructor at Union School, Petaluma, Calif., and is a 1985 graduate of Texas A&M University and a graduate of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, Mill Valley, Calif.

St. Luke's church will observe Women's Day

Nancy P. Stokes

Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church will hold its annual Women's Day Observance at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Nancy P. Stokes will be the featured speaker.

Mrs. Stokes, wife of the presiding prelate Bishop Rembert E. Stokes, is Episcopal Supervisor of the Women's Missionary Society of the church. Mrs. Stokes holds a master's degree in social administration from Western Reserve University.

"She is widely renowned as a missionary," says a release from the church. In Ohio, she established dental clinics for indigents and for the Governor's Advisory committee authored procedures for use on school premises in cases of drug suspicion.

In West Africa, she developed the West African Empowerment Project, secured textbooks for Monrovia College and initiated translation of church missionary documents into the Bassa tribal language. She founded the "Mission Possible" Project in southern Africa.

The dossier for her honorary doctorate reads: "Nancy Phillips Stokes spends her life and talents ministering to her fellow human beings. She lives by the creed that there is only one family in the world, and the name is God's family."

Theme for the Women's Day Observance is "The Christian Family: An Endangered Species." Mrs. Katherine Thomas is chairman of Women's Day. The public is invited to attend.

Episcopal conference for lay people begins Friday

"The Foundations of Faith," a theological conference for lay people, will be held at St. John's Episcopal Church on Madison Square, Savannah, Ga., Friday and April 30.

Sponsored by the Fellowship of Traditionalist Clergy, an association of clergy in the Episcopal Diocese of Georgia, the conference will feature four major themes — The Sacraments, Holy Scripture, The Creeds and Holy Orders.

Registration will begin at 6 p.m. Friday at the church. A service of Evensong will begin at 7:30 p.m. The preacher will be the Rt. Rev. Clarence C. Pope Jr., bishop of the Diocese of Fort Worth. His topic will be "The Sacraments." A reception will be held after the service.

A celebration of the Holy Eucharist will be held at 7:30 a.m. April 30 at the church with the Rt. Rev. Paul Reeves, seventh bishop of Georgia, as celebrant.

On April 30, three addresses will be given. They are:

— 9 a.m., the Rev. Andrew Mead, rector of the Church of the Advent, Boston, Mass., will speak on "Holy Scripture";

— 10:15 a.m., the Rev. Titus Oates, rector of All Saints, Ashmont, also in Boston, will speak on "The Creeds"; — and, at 11:30 a.m., the Rev. Dr. Wayne Hankey of Kings College, Halifax, Nova Scotia, will speak on "Holy Orders."

A panel discussion and question and answer session featuring all four speakers will be held following the final address.

The conference is designed with the specific purpose of informing the laity of the church, prior to the Lambeth Conference, on the four points of the century old "Chicago-Lambeth Quadrilateral."

For more information, call the Rev. Richard Cantrell, 1-912-985-3676.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE:

Someone from your past could re-enter the picture, giving you fresh inspiration and spurring your desire to move forward. Have no fear of change. New technologies will improve the bottom line in business without threatening your job. Larger financial gains lie just ahead. Winning the freedom to promote your own ideas will solve a relationship dilemma. Emotions run high in July. Travel will serve a double purpose in December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: artist Willem de Kooning, actor Leslie Howard, actress Jill Ireland, comic Jack E. Leonard, actress Shirley MacLaine, singer Barbra Streisand, poet Robert Penn Warren.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): When getting together with family members, try to keep things on an even emotional keel. The pressure to conform is strong; you may have to go along. You are drawn to an older person.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make a long-postponed decision and let the chips fall where they may. Your communication skills bring you career success and a stronger romantic relationship.

Revealing the truth also works to your advantage.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Let go of negative feelings. New scientific or medical developments could help you. You will have to get behind a community movement if you want it to succeed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will get more done by staying home today than you imagined possible. Although many people find you attractive, you are looking for a partner who shares your intellectual interests. Take your time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Protect yourself from stress. Avoid emotional confrontations with siblings. Do what you can to help a troubled neighbor or co-worker. A relationship will mend itself if you give it a chance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A lucky day to travel. Your close relationships are your greatest asset now. An inspirational service has a profound effect on your outlook. Open up. Share your feelings and dreams with loved ones.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Lasting happiness in romance depends on your ability to read between the lines. Loved ones will be more cooperative if you pay attention to their needs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Childish spats could mar what ought to be a happy day. Know it and act in a mature manner. Check on recent expenses and stay within your budget.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your personal relationships are a great source of strength. Family matters will dominate during the next few days. Romance and finance enjoy favorable influences. Make an effort to contact a former flame.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Check your books — you could have more money than you think. Entertaining at home is fun and more relaxing than going out. Be yourself. Partner admires you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The age difference adds an extra dimension to a relationship. You gain new insights into your own feelings and attitudes. Creative endeavors will prove especially rewarding this coming week.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An attractive stranger makes an instant impression with you. Be friendly but not too eager. Let this newcomer seek you out. Invite close friends and neighbors to a casual supper or dessert party.

Sex star/Parliament member shunned by Japanese politicians

TOKYO (AP) — Ilona "Cicciolina" Staller, the sex star who won a seat in Italy's Parliament, arrived in Japan on Friday to campaign against AIDS but was shunned by Japanese politicians.

Clutching a pink teddy bear and blowing kisses, Staller was greeted by more than 60 photographers, reporters and well-wishers at Tokyo's Narita International Airport. Even Japan's usually staid police lined the rails to watch her news conference.

Japan permits her movies to be shown here, but they are heavily censored.

Sitting in front of posters featuring a topless Cicciolina, she faced tough questioning from the media about her recent test for AIDS, which she said she passed.

The Japanese Diet, or parliament, is currently discussing a bill that would bar AIDS-infected foreigners. As of August, the Ministry of Health and Welfare reported 43 AIDS patients in Japan, and 225 virus carriers.

There were reported plans for Staller to be met at the airport by a member of Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party. But those plans were apparently scrapped at the last moment.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tabatha Foster, the world's longest survivor of a five-organ transplant, was reported doing well Friday, a week after minor surgery as a result of problems with her new liver.

"Essentially, she's back to where she was" before the April 15 procedure to relieve a threatening buildup of bile, said Marc Rowe, chief of surgery at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh.

Doctors inserted a drainage tube into a bile duct leading to the 34-year-old girl's liver.

Tabatha remained in serious condition. The Madisonville, Ky., toddler received a new liver, small intestine, pancreas and parts of a stomach and colon during rare, experimental surgery Nov. 1. She had been born with a fatal intestinal deformity.

CLARKSDALE, Miss. (AP) — Blues-rock band ZZ Top donated one of a pair of specially commissioned guitars made of wood from the home of late Muddy Waters, to kick off a $1 million fund-raising campaign for the Delta Blues Museum.

More than 1,500 people attended the ceremony Thursday night on the steps of the Carnegie Public Library, where the museum is housed.

The two guitars were made from cypress wood taken from the house where Waters grew up on Stovall Plantation, north of Clarksdale.

One guitar will be put on display in the museum, while ZZ Top member Billy Gibbons will take the other on tour. The guitars are white with a replica of the Mississippi River running down the neck and base.

"He (Waters) would have been honored by the presence of the press and public," ZZ Top member Frank Beard said. "But he probably would have just picked up a guitar, gone over in a corner and played."

The ceremony was followed by the library's annual catfish fry.

Waters, born McKinley Morganfield, won fame as a Chicago bluesman from the 1950s through the 1970s with classics such as "Hoochie Coochie Man," "Rolling Stone," and "Got My Mojo Working." Waters died in 1983 at 68.

GERALDTON, Australia (AP)

Queen Elizabeth II arrived in the small fishing community of Geraldton on Friday to proclaim it a city.

Officials and a crowd of more than 1,000 greeted the queen and her husband when they arrived from Perth. The royal couple were then driven to Geraldton's civic center, which the queen opened in 1963.

There the queen proclaimed Geraldton a city, a status attained when the population rises above 20,000.

The couple next go to the dusty outback gold town of Kalgoorlie, which she last visited in 1954. On Tuesday, they began a 22-day tour of Australia, which is celebrating its bicentennial.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The University of Pittsburgh has named its center for international security studies after Matthew B. Ridgway, one of the last surviving full generals of World War II.

At a tribute Thursday night in the school's Cathedral of Learning, the center officially was named The Matthew B. Ridgway Center for International Security Studies.

"Only through the pursuit of ideals was our nation and our government brought into being... Those ideas should be still our guide and that, in the long run, will determine whether we stand our fall," said Ridgway, 94, a Pittsburgh resident for 33 years. He attended the tribute with his wife, Penny.

Ridgway, an innovator of airborne tactics, planned and led the attack on Sicily in 1943. It was the first large-scale airborne assault in Army history.

The Ridgway center, founded in 1975, will focus on research, teaching and programs covering security issues such as "Star Wars" and strategic arms control.

BOSTON (AP) — Patrick Kennedy, youngest son of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, was reported in "very satisfactory" condition Friday, a day after surgeons removed a non-cancerous tumor from the top of his spine.

The operation encountered no complications and Kennedy, a sophomore at Providence College, was expected to make a complete recovery, said Kennedy spokesman Jeff Smith, in Washington.

Kennedy's father, his mother, Joan, his sister, Kara, his brother, Teddy, and his aunt, Jean Kennedy Smith, were at the hospital with Patrick.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Melvin Price, D-Ill., a 22-term congressman who was one of the longest-serving members of the House, died Friday of cancer at the age of 83.

Price, who had been ill for some time with arthritis and diabetes, learned in the last month that he had pancreatic cancer, said Mike Mansfield, his administrative assistant.

He went to the hospital Friday morning complaining of excessive pain, Mansfield said. He died at Malcolm Grove Hospital at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland.

He is survived by his wife, Geraldine, and one son, Dr. William Price of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Four student musicians will give concert

From Staff Reports

Surrounded by art work created by Midland secondary students, four young musicians will perform a "Musical Sunday" 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the Thomas Gallery at the Museum of the Southwest, 1706 W. Missouri Ave.

The concert is presented in conjunction with the "Student Art Festival—Secondary Grades," on exhibition through May 8.

Students performing will be Nina Olien, 12, violin; Brad Leshnower, 15, cello; Michael Leung, 15, piano; and Christina Leung, 17, piano.

Works to be performed include Christian Sinding's Violin Suite, Bach's Partita in E Major, Saint-Saens' Allegro Passionata, Chopin's Fantasia Impromptu and the first movement of Beethoven's Sonata in C Major.

Miss Olien, a student at Goddard Junior High School, began violin studies at age 5. She currently studies with Eugene Purdue and has studied music theory with Pamela Bristol. She will be accompanied by Darryl Knapp. She lists drawing, reading and swimming among her interests. Her parents are Dr. and Mrs. Roger M. Olien.

Leshnower is a student at Trinity School where he plays basketball. His interests include the study of history and French. His music instructor is Walter Osadchuk, and he has attended orchestra schools in Wisconsin and Illinois. He will be accompanied by Shari Santorelli. Dr. and Mrs. Alan C. Leshnower are his parents.

Both Miss Leung, a senior, and her brother Michael, a sophomore, are honor students at Midland High School, where both are active in student affairs. Each has studied violin as well as piano. He is on the tennis team. She is valedictorian of the 1988 MHS senior class and has received honors in science and literature as well as in music. They are music students of Dorothy Matthews. Their parents are Dr. and Mrs. Patrick Leung.

"These young musicians, as well as the student artists whose works are shown in the museum, are more representative of Midland's students than are the problem minority we usually hear about," said Marilyn Bassinger, education director at the museum. "The Museum of the Southwest is proud to host both the student musicians and works by student artists."

The public is invited to attend.

Poker tournament slated

LAS VEGAS — The world's best known poker faces will show up at Binion's Horseshoe Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas to enter the various events of the 1988 World Series of Poker Tuesday through May 19.

This annual poker showdown is the grandest free show in Las Vegas. Players come from throughout the United States, England, Ireland, Scandinavia, Australia, Greece, South Africa, Nepal, Central America and South America to pit themselves against the finest players in the world.

Johnny Chan, the defending champion, will head a field of more than 2,000 players who are expected to participate in the 12 events of this year's tournament. Chan claims Houston as his hometown, but was actually born in the People's Republic of China. The restaurant owner won $825,000 along with the title of World Poker Champion when he captured first place in last year's World Series.

A record turnout is expected this year prompted by the fact that a growing number of amateurs have finished in the money in recent years.

"Every Friday night poker player now feels he has a chance against the pros," says Jack Binion, who hosts the event. "Truth is that anyone can win. The qualities one needs to enter the series are self-confidence, an ability to play good poker, guts and the ambition to best the pros," Binion says.

Eric Drache, a world-class player in his own right, will serve once again as tournament director.

Marble Falls festival planned

From Staff Reports

The 17th annual Howdy-Roo Festival, to be held May 5-7 in Marble Falls, will feature a chili cook-off, arts and crafts fair, carnival, food booths and street dance.

The carnival will kick off Howdy-Roo — a fund-raiser for Marble Falls non-profit organizations — on Thursday, followed by a softball tournament and beauty pageant Friday night. The pageant is scheduled for 6 p.m.

There will be a Fun Run Saturday beginning at 8:30 a.m. and the chili cook-off will begin 11:30 a.m.

The street dance, featuring Rocky Thompson and The Lost Hat Band will be held Saturday from 8 p.m. to midnight behind city hall, 3rd St. between Main and Highway 281.

A free park and ride service will be available to visitors from along points of Highway 281 to downtown Marble Falls.

Balloons to be launched for literacy

From Staff Reports

Twin Cities Speedway will be the site for Big 2 KMID-TV's "Balloon Launch for Literacy and Family Fest" from 2 to 5 p.m. May 7.

Events include a demonstration by the Eagle's Nest Parachute Team, an air show by the Vulture Flight of four World War II vintage airplanes, an exhibition stock car race and live music by the local band "Room Service."

No admission will be charged. Thousands of cards were distributed through Midland, Ector and Greenwood school systems, as well as through local libraries, and those returned will become part of a giant balloon launch scheduled to be released during the event. Local literacy councils will be running games for the kids, a dunking booth and concessions. Clowns, demonstrations by local organizations and a special appearance by Sesame Street's Bert and Ernie are part of the activities planned.

Big 2 KODM and KNFM radio stations will be broadcasting live from the grounds with local celebrities from all three in attendance.

Numerous businesses, organizations and individuals are donating their services and time as part of PLUS-Project Literacy West Texas and all proceeds from the project will benefit Odessa's West Texas Adult Literacy Council and Midland Need to Read.

Twin Cities Speedway is located between Highway 80 and I-20 between Midland and Odessa. To get to the speedway from Midland, take Highway 80 to Coors Road and follow the signs.

Car races are held every Friday night at Twin Cities Speedway. Coming up Friday during intermission at Twin Cities Speedway is a "Kids Bicycle Race," sponsored by Koala Springs Mineral Water. Classes for all ages including an open class will be performed in the bicycle race. Trophies and ribbons will be awarded, and all contestants will be included in a drawing for a new bicycle.

Panhandle man uses new invention to restore old cars

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The 1967 Ford Mustang, which Bruce Peters is working to restore, rolled over last week. But it was no accident.

The "rollover" is part of Peters' detailed breakdown and reconstruction of the classic American automobile. Peters, a retired aircraft mechanic, built what he calls a "turning fixture" and mounted the Mustang coupe on it. The car, bolted to the device by its front and back bumper brackets, looks like it's on a giant rotisserie ready to be barbecued.

The turning fixture makes the hardest part of restoring a car — cleaning it, getting rid of all the rust, dirt and dried-on grease — easier, said Peters, because he can roll the car from side to side and even turn it completely over. It's also convenient for the rest of the job.

He said his car spit, which can suspend up to 2,500 pounds in midair, is not an original idea, but he designed and built the device he's using.

Peters restored his black, bullet-nose 1961 Studebaker before he had the turning device. But after he's finished with the Mustang coupe, he plans to use it when he renovates his 1967 Mustang convertible.

The Studebaker and two Mustangs make up Peters' car collection. He said he only has room to store three cars, so he'll leave it at that.

Restoring cars is Peters' retirement career. He planned it so he would have something to do.

He was working at the Amarillo Air Force Base and left the military after 30 years when the base closed in 1968.

"It's just the joy of doing it," said Peters, "and seeing the outcome: the joy of accomplishment."

He works in his garage next to the house where he lives with his wife, Lois.

The Mustang coupe has been under reconstruction since 1982. He broke the car down to its unitized body-frame. As he took off a part, he restored it and then boxed it up to put back on later.

He's been working on the coupe for six years, but plans to have it together in another 10 months.

"I'll have it on its wheels in two months and then comes all the detail work," he said.

He's done all the work himself, except for some machine work on the 289 cubic inch, V-8 engine, like boring out the cylinders. He said he's never painted the outside of a car before and is really not equipped to do it in his garage. He has a friend who's a painter and will help with the vintage burgundy paint job.

After he restores it back to the original, he plans to show it, not just in Amarillo but in Dallas, Albuquerque and Oklahoma City.

He bought the '67 Mustang coupe in 1975 and his daughter used it for several years before he started to renovate it.

He bought the Studebaker, with its familiar cone-shaped grill, brand new in 1961. It has 133,000 miles on it and has been driven coast to coast and border to border. He has entered the renovated model in local car shows.

Peters, who works every day at his hobby from 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., with a lunch break, bought the '67 Mustang convertible in 1982. It will be renovated with its power-steering and brakes, factory air-conditioner and power retractable top in original condition.

"I wanted something that had some complexity that would keep me occupied," said Peters.

German to sing with native chorus again

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — Heinz Bromme has never left Germany far behind, despite living in the United States for the last 17 years. He still drives a Mercedes. And he still sings.

On May 14, he will get the chance to sing with a German chorus once again. MGW-Datteln-Meckinghoven, a 30-man German chorus, will make its fourth tour of the United States this summer with a stopover in Palestine.

"The group visited the U.S. for the first time in 1973 and made me an honorary member," Bromme said. "They said that wherever we are, they would visit and play."

Until last year, home for Bromme and his wife, Ursula, was Los Angeles. Now he lives in south Anderson County near Alderbranch.

"So now, they are coming here," Bromme says.

The Palestine Chamber of Commerce and numerous local businesses are handling ticket sales for the concert at the Texas Theater. The show is called "Sangeslust," which is German for "joy to sing."

Other stops on the chorus' tour include Las Vegas, San Francisco and Calgary, Alberta. The Palestine stop will be its only perform ance in Texas.

The chorus' repertoire includes opera, operetta, show tunes and folk songs.

"It's going to be a thrill to see them," Bromme said. "The last time we sang together was 1984."

Datteln and Meckinghoven are towns near Cologne in the industrial heart of Germany. The chorus was formed in 1950 with 23 people and today includes 63, Bromme said.

Bromme was a full-fledged member from 1955 until 1971, when he decided to emigrate to the U.S.

"I had two sisters living in the U.S.," Bromme said. "I visited one sister in Long Island in 1970, and she talked me into coming over."

Bromme had worked 20 years as a coal miner in Germany. The Brommes began a new career in the U.S. as sausage makers in a German delicatessen in Los Angeles.

That came to an end in 1987.

"Our boss sold our company to the Japanese and we got fired," Bromme said. "At my age, I couldn't get another job, so we came here to live near our children."

The Bromme's son-in-law and daughter operate a convenience store in Elkhart.

Release of three French hostages expected

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three French hostages held by pro-Iranian Shiite Muslims will be freed soon, a source close to the Syrian army command said Friday.

"Their release is a matter of hours. All arrangements have been worked out," said the source, who spoke Friday evening on condition of anonymity.

He said the hostages probably would be freed in the vicinity of the seaside Summerland Hotel in Moslem west Beirut's Jnah district, where former French hostages Roger Auque and Jean-Louis Normandin were released last November.

The hotel is close to south Beirut's Shiite slums, where many of the 22 foreigners missing in Lebanon are believed held. It also is close to Beirut airport.

A chartered Swissair executive jet flew to Beirut from Larnaca, Cyprus, and a Lebanese security source said it brought Syrian hostage negotiator Omran Adham.

But the Lebanese police later denied that Adham was in Beirut and said he was not aboard the executive jet.

The plane's pilot said after returning to Larnaca, "We went to get the hostages but there were no hostages ready. So we came back to spend the night here."

The pilot said he would fly to Beirut again early this morning. He declined to be identified.

The Beirut weekly magazine Ash-Shiraa said earlier Friday that contacts were under way between France and Iran for the release of three Frenchmen held hostage in Lebanon.

They are French diplomats Marcel Carton and Marcel Fontaine and journalist Jean-Paul Kauffmann. The three were kidnapped in 1985 by the pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War.

A fourth Frenchman, Michel Seurat, a scientific researcher, was kidnapped May 22, 1985. The Islamic Jihad claimed it killed him March 5, 1986.

Although no body has been found, Seurat's wife, Marie, said in a book she published last month that French officials have confirmed to her that her husband died in captivity.

The magazine said Paris and Tehran had agreed on the release of two French hostages in Lebanon in return for "the release of Iranian assets frozen in France in addition to a $1 billion compensation to Iran."

It is believed the magazine referred to full repayment of a $1 billion loan made by the late Shah of Iran, Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, to France and disputed interest that could amount to an additional $1 billion.

"Last minute snags delayed the release," the magazine said.

It indicated that France's insistence on the release of a third French hostage held up implementation of the deal.

The April 5 hijack of a Kuwait Airways jetliner by another group of Shiite extremists also apparently delayed negotiations.

Papers about U.S. subs found

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — A seashell collector found a bundle of 800 papers about the U.S. nuclear submarine fleet at a naval base in Scotland, a newspaper reported today.

But the U.S. Navy said the papers apparently found near the Holy Loch base contained no classified information.

The Scotsman, based in Edinburgh, said the papers contained details of the running costs and the maintenance of the 10 Lafayette and Benjamin Franklin class submarines operating out of Holy Loch, the largest U.S. submarine base outside the United States.

The 10 submarines are armed with Poseidon and Trident nuclear missiles.

A woman collecting shells at Helensburgh, seven miles from the high security base, picked up a black plastic bag that contained the bundle of papers, the newspaper said.

In a statement issued in Washington, the Navy said the bag was "routine refuse that fell ashore by accident and contains only routine maintenance and logistics documents."

Holy Loch is the principal U.S. submarine base in Europe and is of key strategic importance to the Western NATO defense alliance.

The base is wholly operated by the U.S. Navy, which employs more than 1,700 personnel there.

WORLD in brief

20 people sentenced for killing giant pandas

HONG KONG (AP) — A court in China's central Sichuan province convicted 20 people for killing giant pandas and selling the rare animals' skins, a pro-Beijing newspaper reported Friday.

The Chinese-language New Evening Post said the culprits were caught with the help of residents in Pingwu county in the northern part of the province, but did not elaborate.

Pingwu is one of the few areas in southwest China where the giant panda, an endangered species and a national symbol, is found in the wild.

The report identified only two defendants, Hu Tianyin and Wang Jinhua. It said some defendants received life terms and others received lighter sentences in the April 8 trial.

The New Evening Post did not give details of how the gang operated or say how many of the animals were killed.

China's panda population, just under 1,000, has been declining for the last five years because a rare flowering cycle of the arrow bamboo, the animals' main food, has caused many of the plants to die.

Bank employee on trial

HONG KONG (AP) — A computer operator at a bank in China's central Sichuan province is being tried on charges of fraud involving $233,540, an official Chinese news report said.

The China News Service, in a dispatch appearing Friday in Hong Kong, said Xie Wendong used a computer at the Agriculture Bank in Chengdu to transfer the money from the bank to accounts of an accomplice, Li Qisheng.

The report said the city Public Security Bureau and the bank discovered the fraud and froze the accounts before the money could be used.

The news service did not explain how the case came to the attention of authorities. It said Li also was on trial.

Soviets explode device

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union exploded a nuclear device at the Semipalatinsk testing range of the Central Asian Republic of Kazakhstan, the official Tass news agency said Friday.

Tass said the purpose of the blast was to test research on the physics of nuclear explosions. It was the fourth test this year.

The explosion had a yield of up to 20 kilotons, equivalent to 20,000 tons of TNT. Tass gave no other details of the test.

The Soviet government wants to ban all nuclear tests, but U.S. officials have resisted on the basis that they do not agree with proposed Soviet enforcement procedures.

American scientists visited the Semipalatinsk range in January to gather information that may be used in verifying U.S. Soviet compliance with a future test ban. Similar exchanges with Soviets visiting test sites in America are planned.

2 East Germans escape to West

BERLIN (AP) — Communist border guards fired a warning shot Friday to block an escape attempt at the Berlin Wall, but a forest ranger and a farm worker successfully fled to West Germany in separate incidents, officials said.

It was the second time this week that East German guards fired shots during an escape attempt at the Berlin Wall, which splits the city into its communist and Western halves.

West Berlin police said witnesses reported a man running toward West Berlin territory shortly after 1:00 a.m. with several East German guards in pursuit.

The man stopped with his hands over his head after East German guards fired a single shot and was led away by the armed soldiers, police quoted the witnesses as saying.

Meanwhile, a 23-year-old East German man avoided communist border guards, climbed over steel-mesh fences and strings of barbed wire to escape to the West German state of Lower Saxony, about 100 miles west of Berlin.

Border police in Hanover identified the man as an East German forest ranger.

Near the Bavarian town of Coburg, police said a 22-year-old East German man who was working near the border escaped across the barriers to West Germany before border guards noticed his flight, police said.

97-year-old man's memory's as good as his legs

By RICK SMITH

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Willie Whibbey takes care of himself.

Patiently, he urges an old wire shopping cart over a railroad crossing as if he were driving a stubborn mule.

"Come on, now, come on," he mutters, working the worn rubber wheels over the track.

A wheel hangs on a steel rail. He gives the troublesome wheel a dead-solid kick with his big brown boot.

The cart springs free. "Can't be stopping to rest on railroad tracks," he explains.

Willie Whibbey, 97, may be Sherman's oldest regular walker.

At least twice a week — sometimes more — he walks the four blocks from his Music Street home to Reid's Grocery on Brockett.

"I've been here six years, and he's been coming at least that long," said Kathy Williamson, store manager.

More like 16 years, Whibbey said. "I do lots of walking. Something I run out of, I just walk down and get it."

He shops for a neighbor, too. Never uses a list.

Whibbey's memory is as good as his legs. Eggs, bacon, butter. He thoughtfully pushes his cart — always clockwise — around the small market.

Pays for his purchases from a worn leather billfold that's chained to his belt.

Pushes the stained brown fedora down low over his forehead as he leaves the store, points the shopping cart west on Brockett.

Willie Whibbey can quote you his life, every chapter and verse.

Want the names of every man he has ever worked for as a farmer and concrete mason and oil mill hand? They're right here, under the brown fedora: Blackie Campbell, Charlie Miller, fellow by the name of McDonald. The list goes on and on.

Want dates and places? He was born in Sherman 97 years ago on August 21. Moved to Oklahoma in 1919. Moved back to Texas in 1940.

"No, wait a minute," Whibbey says, braking the basket, pausing in mid-step to think.

"No, I want to get this right. It was 1945."

Now the Test. Listen to Whibbey run through the list of his 13 children in one long breath: "Let's see, there's Minnie Whibbey; Willie Mae Boyd, deceased; Willie Pat Whibbey, deceased; A.C. Whibbey, deceased; Ernestine Kemp, deceased; Donnie McDonald; Ola Mae Jordan; Beatrice Johnson, deceased; B.C. Whibbey; Martha Pete; Archie Whibbey; Fannie Lee Love and Jessie Lee Whibbey; deceased."

And, oh yes, 48 grandchildren, 81 great-grandchildren and 48 great-great-grandchildren.

A granddaughter who lives in Sherman and a daughter in Colbert, Okla., keep close tabs on him.

He visits the rest regularly. "When we get together," he says, smiling, "we have a time."

Willie Whibbey turns suddenly stern and serious when a young neighbor gently joshes him about his age.

"Mr. Willie, when I get to be your age..." the young man begins.

"You won't live this long," Whibbey says, cutting him off.

Willie Whibbey, 97, can recite the names of every man he has ever worked for, when and where he has lived and the names of his 13 children. The Sherman man lives alone in a small ramshackle house, among the leftovers of his life.

AP Laserphoto

neighbor's on Pacific, then rounds the corner and parks his rusty shopping cart under a tree.

Two cats — Mother and Daughter he calls them — wander up to brush the legs of his old pin-striped suit.

Whibbey lives alone in a small place, a ramshackle house piled up with the leftovers of life: carpet scraps and banded up buckets, wormy scrap lumber and old leather straps, bottles and jars and on and on.

He doesn't have much. That doesn't worry him.

"Where trouble comes from, mister, is when people are too crazy about money."

"I could tell you about worry. At one time in my life, I didn't weigh but 130 pounds. Worried all the time about this and that."

"Not now."

Not, he adds, that there isn't plenty to worry about.

"The truth about it is the government has messed this whole United States up. Twice, they made me plow cotton under because we raised too much."

He's never forgiven them for wasting all that good cotton.

He's never forgiven them for chipping away at his independence, either.

"Back when I was coming up, we raised what we ate. Didn't have to buy water. Pay somebody to carry off your trash. Didn't need so much stuff, back then."

"Now, if it wasn't for Social Security, we older folks couldn't live."

Willie Whibbey takes care of himself.

For the longest, he would have nothing to do with free meals for senior citizens.

"Didn't want to be a drag on anyone."

Now he grudgingly accepts a daily lunch from the Meals-On-Wheels lady.

Other meals, though, he prepares himself.

"I'm no fancy cook. But I can make eggs, potatoes, such."

"And if I need something, I still got legs, mister. I walk myself to the store to get it. Man's got to take care of himself."

Diplomat says he's not typical Soviet KEARNEY, Neb. (AP) — Soviet diplomat Alexander Kluyev says most Americans expect him to look like a stereotypical Russian. Instead, they meet a "cuppie" — a communist urban professional.

Sporting a gray pin-striped suit with a bright red tie, the 33-year-old Soviet citizen described himself as "very typical of businessmen in Moscow and Leningrad."

Kluyev, third secretary for economic affairs from the Soviet Embassy in Washington D.C., was among ambassadors, economists and political leaders from 25 nations who attended a four-day Midwest World Affairs Conference here.

He said his delegation has become accustomed to questions from curious Americans, and he is aware he doesn't meet the expectations of most Nebraskans.

"Anytime we leave Washington D.C., we are a constant subject of interest," Kluyev said. "You have your yuppies here. Well, I am a 'cuppie' — a communist urban professional."

Kluyev said he enjoyed his Midwestern visit.

"Nebraska is very flat and very American looking."

"KEYS TO THE SELL"

Co-op and Color
—one saves money
—one gives clout

Retailers should take advantage of those $illion$ of co-op dollars being offered to help pay for their ads, and for using color in the copy. Co-op saves you money. And color adds clout to your message.

- Use of color increases sales of the advertised product by as much as 64%
- Use of color increases readership of the ad by 50 to 80%.
- Over $3-billion in offered co-op dollars were left on the table unspent in 1986.

Battling world cocaine traffic

VILLA TUNARI, Bolivia — Roadside spotlights flashed on as the 10-year-old truck, loaded with foodstuffs and silent peasants, rumbled down a dirt highway in the midnight darkness near this jungle crossroads.

From behind the blinding beams stepped four U.S. Border Patrol agents and a group of Bolivian police. They stopped the truck, inspected it and found beneath bundles of food a costly cache of sulfuric acid, which is used to make cocaine paste.

Once unheard-of, such spot checks are becoming more and more common in the Chapare, a semi-tropical lowland region where 90 percent of Bolivia's huge coca crop is produced.

Helping direct the effort are the four U.S. agents, who volunteered to transfer from the U.S.-Mexican frontier to train Bolivian police officers in drug interdiction.

Before their arrival in October cocaine traffickers controlled the roads around Villa Tunari, about 60 miles northeast of the city of Cochabamba. Now, the drug dealers move warily, sometimes falling into police traps.

On March 28, the Bolivian police and the border agents snared two trucks carrying an estimated $80,000 worth of cocaine-processing chemicals at Paracti, a control point on the main road to the Chapare.

Paracti is the agents' base. They rough it there in a 12-by-9-foot guardhouse filled with supplies, clothing, weapons and other equipment and an electrical generator.

There's room only for two bunk beds, so the four agents take turns sleeping. The guardhouse has no running water.

Nevertheless, Darryl Brown, a bearded 40-year-old Californian, said he would volunteer for a second tour when his current four-month stint ends.

"Here we can have an impact," he said.

The work sometimes can be hazardous.

One February night, Brown was among a force of Border Patrol officers, U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agents and Bolivian police who took over a stretch of jungle road used as a landing strip by traffickers. At dawn when a small plane landed and inside the group found 963 pounds of cocaine paste.

The pilot offered them $50,000 to let him fly on with his cargo. A hostile crowd of hundreds of farmers and peasants, many of whom are employed in cocaine-paste production, gathered.

A woman stepped forward with bundles of U.S. dollars to offer as a bribe but was arrested. The crowd then started throwing rocks and sticks of dynamite at the officers. Barricades of burning tires and lumber were thrown up, trapping the officers until reinforcements could arrive and disperse the mob with gunfire.

Brown suffered a cut on his cheek; two of the protesters were killed.

The agents are part of a 60-man U.S. force trying to help stem drug production in Bolivia. About 30 U.S. Army Special Forces members are training a special Bolivian police anti-drug unit, called The Leopards, and 25 to 30 DEA agents help coordinate in cocaine interdiction. The U.S. Army has thrown six Huey helicopters into the effort.

"We want to make it so expensive to produce cocaine that it is no longer cost effective," said one DEA agent, who asked not to be identified. "Bolivia has the potential, and probably is the most successful program in South America."

The efforts in the Chapare, which is about the size of New Jersey, has made it difficult for cultivators to sell their harvested coca leaves to drug processors, according to Col. Nicolas Anaya Camacho, the regional Leopard commander.

A 100-pound sack of coca leaves, the raw material for cocaine, sells for $25 to $30. It sold for $200 three years ago. In July 1986, when 170 U.S. troops flew in to assist in a special two-month operation, the price plunged from $125 to $40, which is about what it cost to grow the crop.

With prices sinking below the cost of production, many coca farmers are joining a government program to eradicate coca acreage. About 3,400 acres of coca have been voluntarily destroyed by farmers, who receive $2,000 for each 2.5 acres eradicated.

The money is intended for crop substitution. The United States contributes $350 of the total, and the rest comes from the Bolivian government.

The U.S. government has earmarked $33 million a year for crop substitution and development programs, according to the U.S. Embassy in La Paz. But coca farmers, and many Bolivian officials, say more is needed.

"We need at least $300 million over a three-year period to combat the cocaine industry effectively," Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal said recently. "We are at war with the cocaine mafia, and if we don't defeat them, forget democracy and be prepared for the violence found in Peru and Colombia."

A U.S. border patrol agent (top photo) and Bolivian anti-narcotics police unload bags of lime hidden in flour sacks that were on route to cocaine paste processing pits in the Chapare. A teenage Indian boy (left) smokes opium in New Delhi. A deluge of illegal narcotics has cascaded across the world in the 1980s, experts say.

Drug production called scourge of world

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — A deluge of illegal narcotics has cascaded across the world in the late 1980s in a scourge that threatens to sap the energy and resources of nations, corrupt their officials and disrupt national policies, U.S. experts say.

They estimate that this year producers mainly in Latin America and Asia will grow 213,700 metric tons — 471.1 million pounds — of illicit opium, coca (the source of cocaine), marijuana and hashish. And with increased production, street prices of processed narcotics are coming down in many areas, resulting in a sharp rise in addiction in poor countries.

While the United States remains the No. 1 gross consumer of illicit drugs, the poorer nations are finding themselves afflicted with even higher addiction rates. The trend is forcing Asian and Latin American countries to divert scarce resources from development to the fight against drug use and addiction.

The U.S. experts, who were in Malaysia for a recent world narcotics conference, also said that criminal drug syndicates appear to be prospering as never before, using their staggering profits to buy off law enforcers, to arm their followers and in some cases to influence national policies.

New trafficking connections resemble a map of global airline routes.

"There is now a realization almost everywhere that the drug problem, no matter how it manifests itself in individual countries, is an international problem," said U.S. State Department consultant Manuel Gallardo. "It's the litany, the gospel."

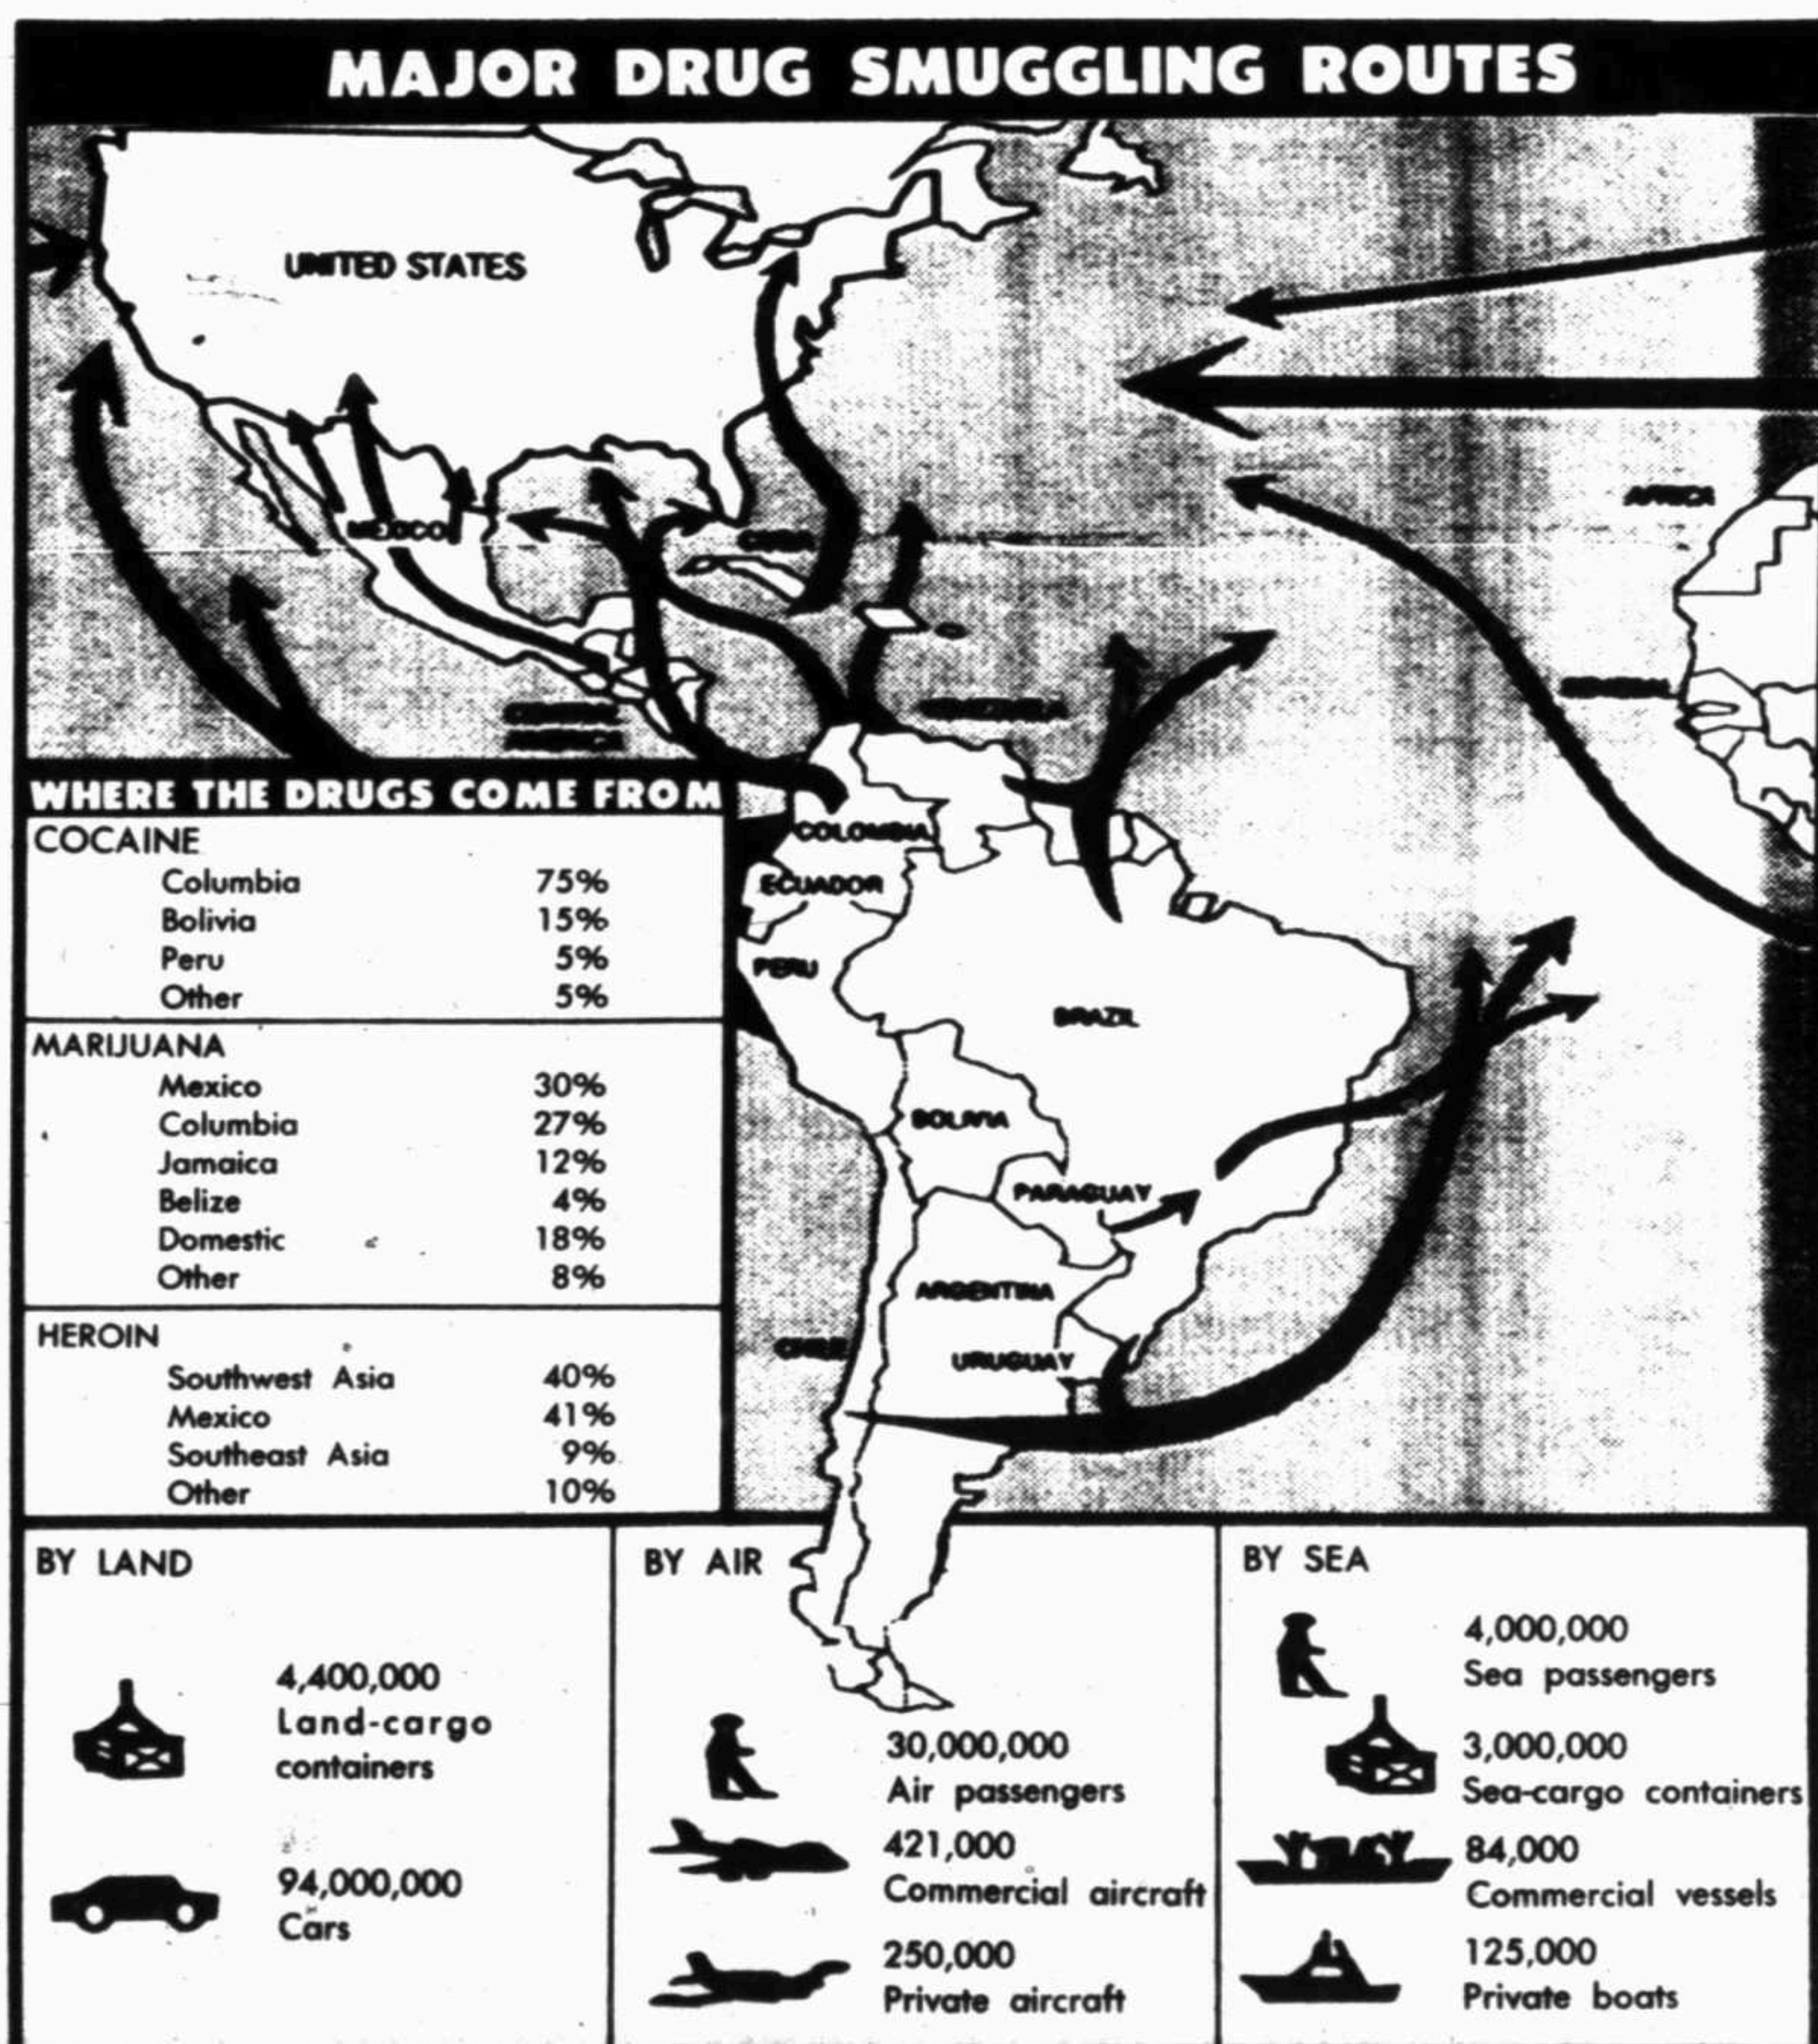

Senior officials of the White House, U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) and State Department, interviewed in Kuala Lumpur by The Associated Press, gave this picture of the magnitude and global reach of narcotics:

— Worldwide illicit production in 1988 of opium, from which heroin is derived, may be as high as 3,000 metric tons and will originate mainly in Asia's Golden Triangle, where the borders of Thailand, Burma and Laos converge, and in the so-called Golden Crescent — Pakistan, Afghanistan and Iran. About 200,000 tons of coca will probably be produced, almost all of it in Latin America, along with 9,500 tons of marijuana and 1,200 tons of hashish in various parts of the world.

While these figures are roughly comparable to production in 1987, they represent substantial increases over the mid-1980s. Meanwhile, drug prices are reported at low levels in many markets.

— New trafficking routes are sprouting as authorities make headway in blocking old ones.

Recently uncovered connections include the passage of cocaine through Brazil across the Atlantic Ocean to Senegal and the Ivory Coast in Africa, then on to Western Europe. Heroin

bility of trafficking organizations," said DEA chief John C. Lawn.

— Pakistan, which was virtually drug-free in 1980, now has 600,000 or more heroin addicts, a far higher percentage of the population than in the United States. Countries in Latin America, which once shrugged off cocaine as an exclusively "Yankee vice," are finding more of the drug is diverted for domestic abuse.

Cocaine is also spreading to Western Europe, and some say it is only a matter of time before it penetrates Asia where heroin is still the dominant hard drug.

"A number of countries have moved from zero to large addict populations within a few years," said U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Mark Dion. "It's a heavy anchor around the necks of governments trying to bring development. The costs are tremendous."

— The United States is the globe's top drug market, with 38 million Americans having consumed illicit drugs last year, according to White House estimates. These included 12 million cocaine users and 18 million who regularly used marijuana. An estimated half million are heroin addicts.

About $54 billion, three times the gross national product of impoverished Bangladesh, was spent in the United States last year on health care, job absenteeism and other consequences of drug abuse.

While not drawing any direct, apocalyptic parallels between the drug situation today and that of the Manchu Dynasty in China at the turn of the century, the experts noted that opium addiction there affected foreign policy and led to the collapse of the Manchu imperial rule. Some 15 million Chinese, from coolies to mandarins, may have been addicted to opium at the time, they said.

Despite the grim statistics, a few hopeful signs are appearing.

With some exceptions, international cooperation is growing in fighting traffickers, funding projects and exchanging views on addiction, rehabilitation and anti-drug education.

"We're talking the same language," said White House official Donald Ian Macdonald of increasing U.S.-Soviet cooperation on drugs. China is also becoming more active, while regional organizations in several parts of the world have been formed to tackle the problem.

The United States, widely viewed as both the key anti-drug fighter and a major source of the problem, has taken a tougher drug stance abroad and may follow suit domestically.

"What came through in the case of Panama is that the United States will not do business with a drug country," said the State Department's Dion, referring to pressure Washington put on Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the Panamanian strongman under indictment in the United States on narcotics trafficking charges.

Macdonald, who is the White House special assistant for drug abuse policy, predicted a U.S. hardline on narcotics might include greater focus on and tougher action against American drug users, a move many nations would probably welcome.

"For a lot of politicians it's easier to talk about nasty foreigners than their own constituents," Macdonald said.

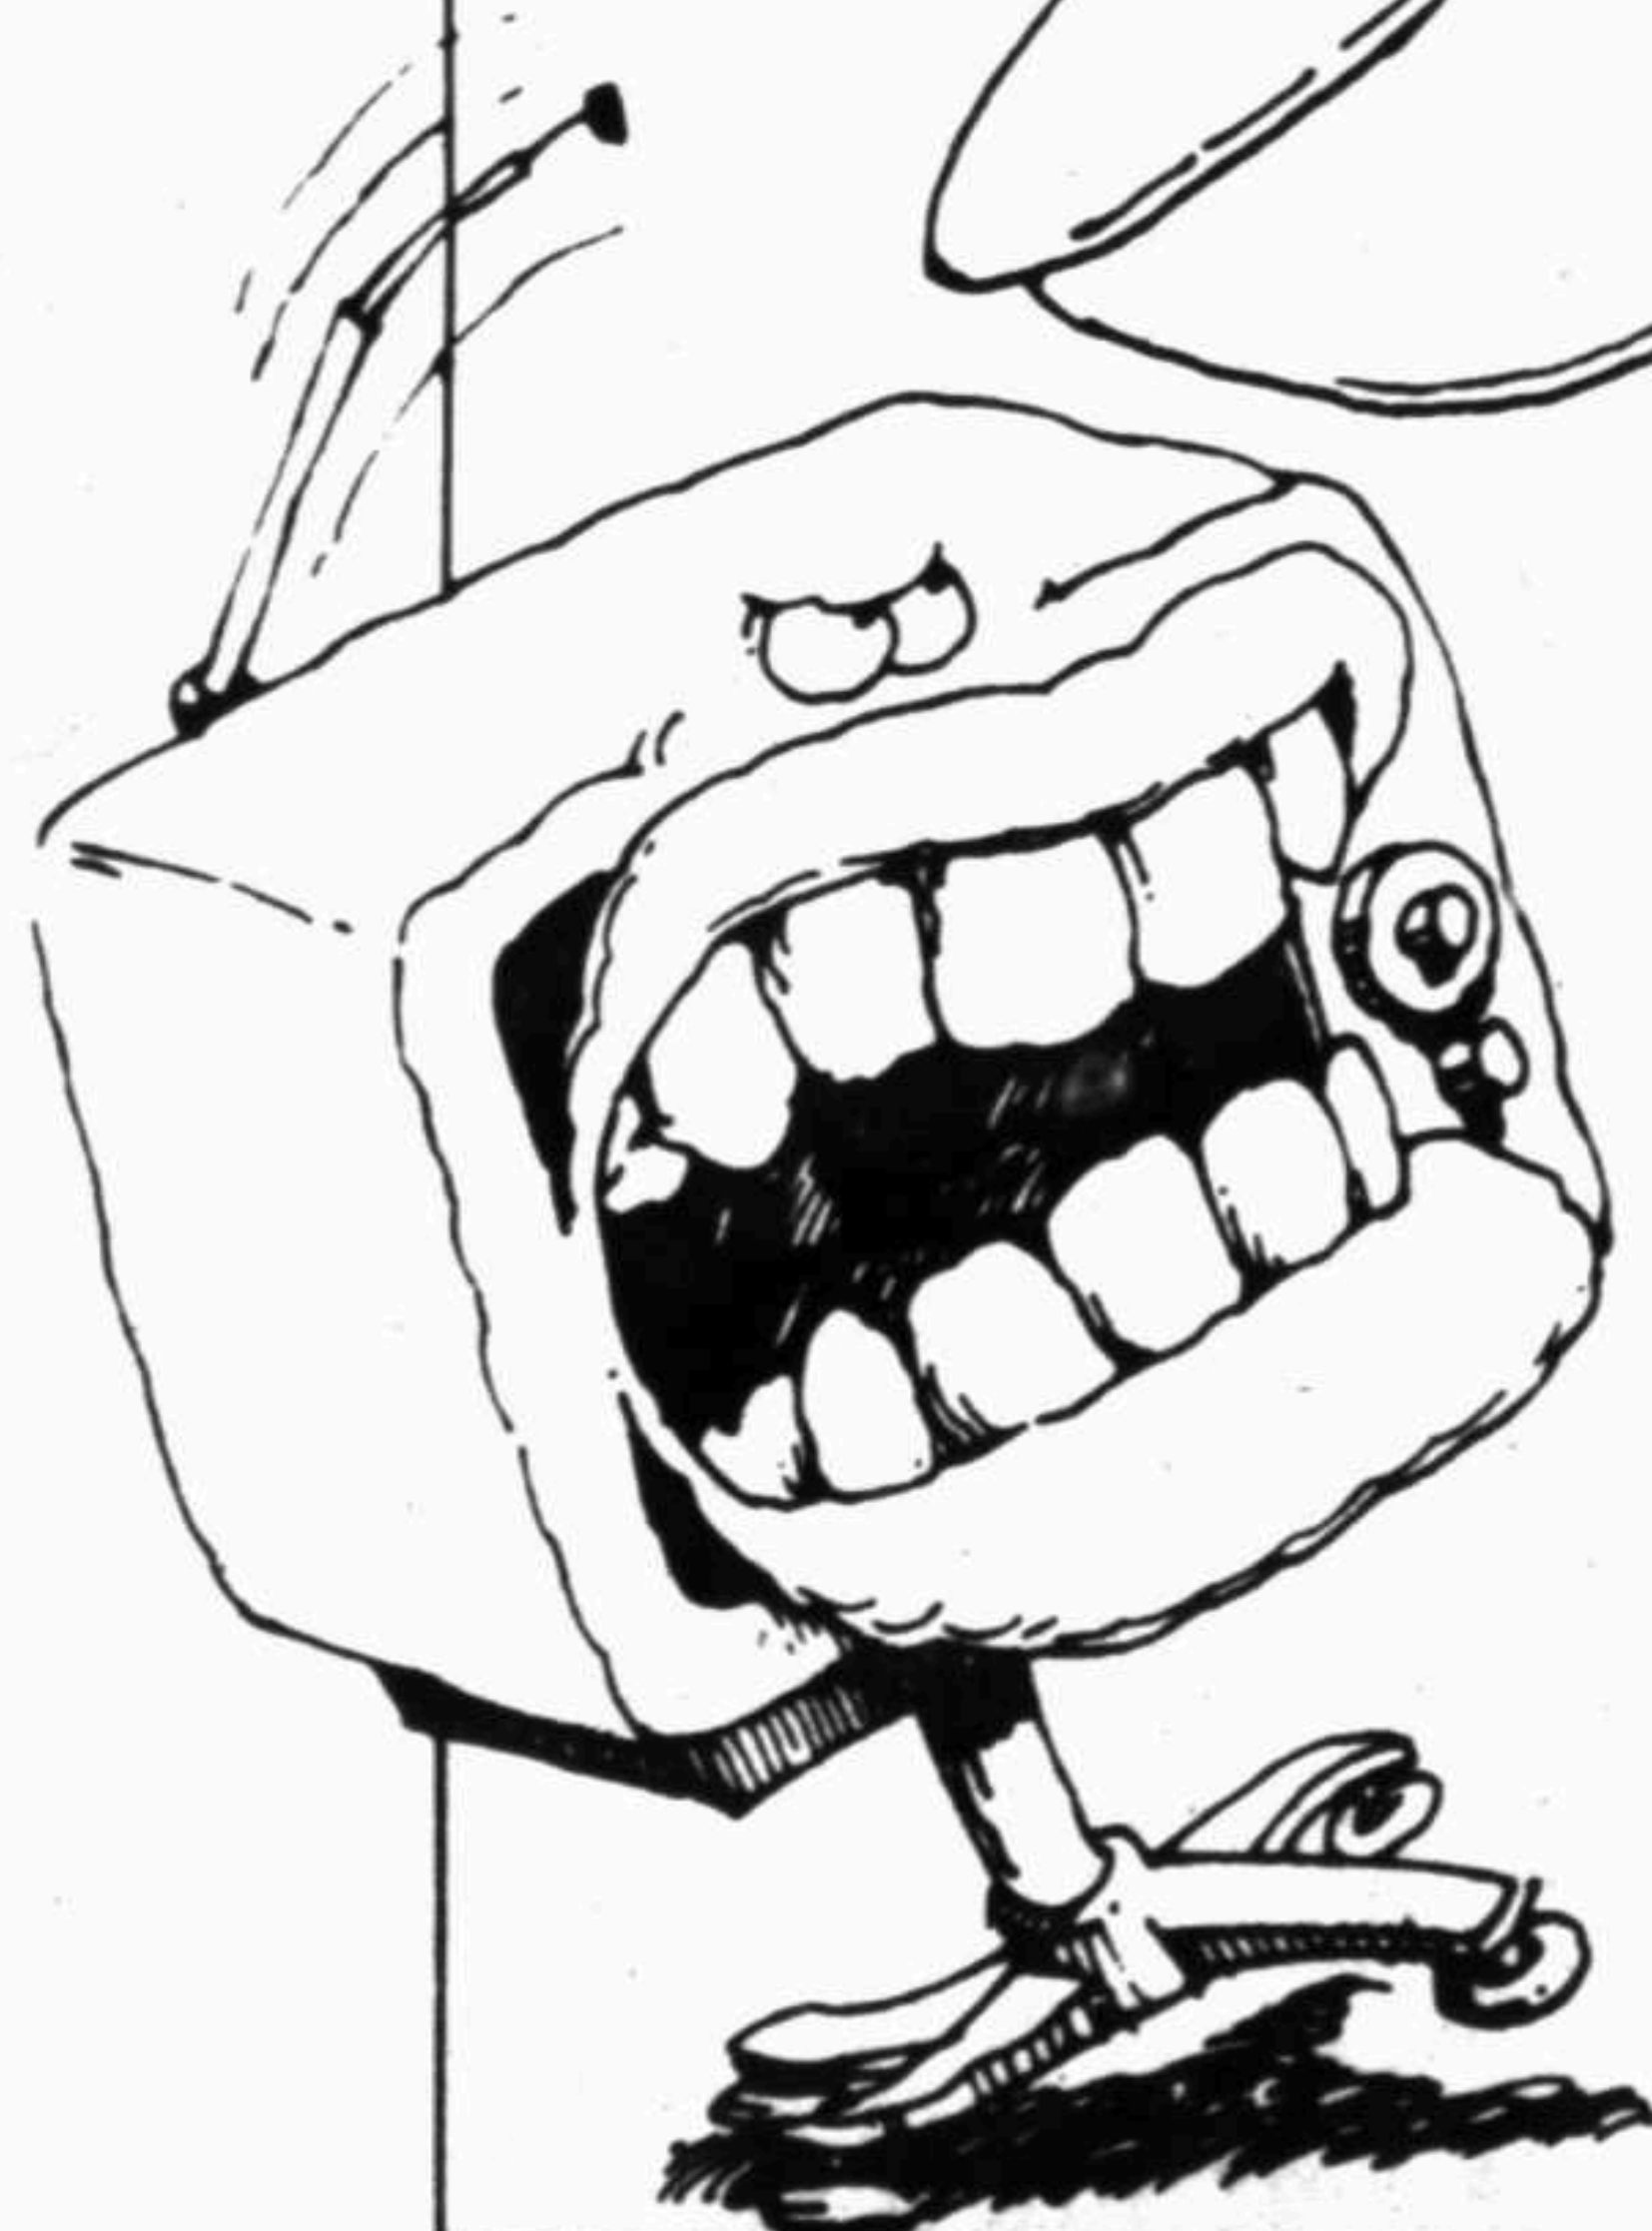

WHO DO YOU THINK YOU'RE TALKING TO?

If you advertise on television or radio, you never really know.

Advertising in the Midland Reporter-Telegram is quite another story, however. In our most recent readership survey, people talked to us and we listened. They shared a lot of interesting things with us like their household income, for example, as well as how, when and where they like to spend it. They also told us that a newspaper ad is 4 times more likely to influence where they shop than a television commercial.

You can learn a lot by listening.

So give us a call at 682-5311. And when it's time to tell your story, you'll have a pretty good idea of just who you're talking to.

Six MISD students speak out against drug abuse

From Staff Reports

Students from Midland and Lee high schools this week spoke out against drug abuse at two luncheon meetings.

The speeches were part of activities associated with "Just Say No To Drugs" month. Selected from hundreds of entries, three finalists from each school were chosen to address the Westside Lions' Club and the Downtown Rotary Club. Lee finalists spoke to the Lions' Club and Midland High finalists spoke to the Rotary Club.

A panel of community leaders and educators were assembled to judge the five-to-seven minute presentations. First, second and third place winners were announced prior to the conclusion of the meetings.

Scholarship awards of $500, $250, and $100, sponsored by the local Council Against Substance Abuse, were given to each contestant.

Finalists from Lee High School were Peter Zimmerman, 1st Place; Joanna Horn, 2nd Place; and Jennifer Lane, 3rd Place.

Finalists from Midland High School were: Tony Debalt, 1st Place; Christie Craddick, 2nd Place; and Christie Stephenson, 3rd Place.

Jackson says it's too early to be 'giving out coronation roses'

Associated Press

Jesse Jackson said it is too early to be "giving out coronation roses" for front-runner Michael Dukakis as the Democrats held their first one-on-one debate Friday and joked about choosing a vice presidential nominee for the fall.

"I look forward to choosing a running mate; Mike looks forward to choosing a running mate," Jackson said. "But however it goes, when it's all said and done and coming out of (the Democratic national convention in) Atlanta, we will come out as a unit to send the Reagan-Bush forces back to private life."

It was a good-natured, hour-long confrontation between the two surviving Democrats five days before the Pennsylvania primary.

There was little heated rhetoric in the debate and what existed was directed at Vice President George Bush and the Reagan administration, echoing the themes from the candidates' day of campaigning across the state.

Jackson did press Dukakis seriously on policy toward South Africa, which Jackson said sponsored terrorism.

"I would be very tough on South Africa," the Massachusetts governor replied.

The No. 2 spot on the Democratic ticket in the fall was a major topic of the debate — the first in the two-man end-game for the nomination — as it has been since Dukakis took a giant step toward the presidential nomination with his New York victory on Tuesday.

During the debate sponsored by the Pennsylvania Democratic party, Jackson was asked if he wanted the vice presidential spot.

"It's a bit premature to be giving out coronation roses for the governor and taps for me," Jackson said. "We're now moving into the last lap of a significant race, and I'm a long-distance runner. I look forward to it."

Then Dukakis turned to Jackson and asked in a soft voice:

"Are you interested?"

Jackson smiled and replied, "You got it, Mike."

Later Dukakis was asked how he could win in the South in the general election. Jackson added his analysis:

"Mike Dukakis on my ticket will win the South," provoking laughter from the audience at the University of Pennsylvania campus in Philadelphia.

Asked if he believed polls saying Jackson as vice president would hurt Democratic chances in the fall, Dukakis gave a one-word answer: "No."

Jackson was late arriving for the debate, walking onto the stage about three minutes after it began. He shook Dukakis' hand and then the two held their clasped hands high, like prizefighters.

Both men pleaded with voters to ignore the polls, which give Dukakis a big lead in the state.

"People ought to vote conscience, courage and conviction. If they do, they will vote for Jesse Jackson or, at least, they will vote for their choice," Jackson said. "I give you a choice. You give me a chance. I will make you a good president... When I win, there are no more impossible American dreams."

During the debate, both men repeated the themes they used campaigning Friday.

Dukakis praised the trade bill moving through Congress, saying it would be "a tragedy" if President Reagan vetoed the measure over a provision requiring companies to give a 60-day notice before shutting down a plant.

"A very modest, very mild, 60-day notice provision seems to me to be just simple justice for workers and working families," Dukakis said while campaigning in Toledo, Ohio.

Jackson turned his attention to Central America.

"Your generation must go beyond war in Latin America," he told students at a rally at West Chester State University near Philadelphia. "We're not threatened by three million Sandinistas. And, if so, we can't be saved by 15,000 Contras."

Dukakis aides said the Massachusetts governor was spending $100,000 on television advertising in Pennsylvania in advance of next Tuesday's primary, a relatively modest amount that reflects his status as overwhelming favorite in the race.

Bush, his nomination secure and his general election campaign planning well under way, spent the day fishing in Florida.

DEATHS

Neal McDonald

Graveside services for Neal McDonald of Midland will be at 3 p.m. today at Resthaven Memorial Park with Rev. Bob Porterfield, pastor of Kentucky Street Baptist Church, officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

McDonald died at a Midland nursing home Friday morning. He was born Jan. 6, 1911 in Coleman, moving to Cleburne as a young boy. While attending school, he met Reece Belcher and they were married in Cleburne on May 20, 1934. They continued to reside there until the early 1940s. At that time, they moved to Abilene and he was employed with Shell Oil Company as a geologist assistant.

While with Shell, McDonald was transferred to Midland. He later joined Hunt Oil Company. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald also owned and operated McDonald Shelton Green House from the early 1940s until they sold the business in 1965.

He then joined the U.S. Postal Service, working at the Downtown, Louisiana and Graves stations. He retired in 1976. Mrs. McDonald preceded him in death March 1 of this year.

He was a member of the Baptist church. Survivors include one son, David McDonald of Midland; two daughters, Diane Schlottmann of Houston and Cynthia Smith of Midland; two brothers, Paul McDonald and Winfield McDonald, both of Cleburne; three sisters, Simone Barrett of Chicago, Willie Margaret Olson of Itasca and Stella Fanchier of Longview; eight grandchildren; one great-grandchild and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to Alzheimer Association of the Permian Basin, 40911 Clover, Odessa, Texas, 79762, or to a favorite charity.

Maria Castillo

Rosary was recited for Maria Castillo of Midland Friday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel.

Funeral services will be at 9 a.m. today at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery.

Pallbearers are Jesse Carrasco, Jesse Castillo Jr., Arturo Navarrete, Ramon Ochoa Jr., David Ruiz and George Galindo. Honorary pallbearers are Tom Ruiz, Frank Ochoa, Jerry Navarrete and Sirlido Reyes.

Carl O. Hyde

Funeral services for Carl O. Hyde of Midland, will be at 11 a.m. today at the First Baptist Church with the Rev. Daniel Vestal, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers are Kelly C. Hyde, Kenneth C. Hyde, Thomas R. Hyde, Dr. M.P. Cummings, David E. Holster and Erwin Teggegan.

Honorary pallbearers are Lions Club members of Midland.

Judgment holds Railey liable for wife's attack

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County judge returned a default judgment against Walker Railey on Friday — holding the former prominent First United Methodist Church minister liable in the near-fatal choking attack on his wife almost exactly one year ago.

The decision by Judge John Whittington was announced one day after the one-year anniversary of the day that Peggy Railey, 39, was found lying unconscious on her garage floor.

She is still alive, but has remained in a coma since the attack.

Whittington made the default judgment in a civil lawsuit filed by Mrs. Railey's mother, Billie Jo Nicolai. Although he was served twice with the suit, Railey, 40, never responded in court to the allegation he brutally attacked his wife.

"If you bring allegations against the defendant and you give the defendant notice of the allegations and an opportunity to come in and respond to those allegations, and he refuses to do that, the court can hold the defendant liable and hold those allegations as true," Bill Arnold, attorney for Mrs. Nicolai, said Friday.

Mrs. Nicolai's suit against Railey asks for damages for Mrs. Railey and her family. The Raileys' two children are living with family friends in Dallas.

"We're not at liberty to make any comment," said William Nicolai, Mrs. Railey's father.

Arnold said a jury trial will be scheduled to decide the amount of damages Railey must pay. Arnold says he plans to subpoena Railey for the civil trial and seek a warrant for his arrest.

The suit alleges Railey lied about the attack and tried to cover it up.

No criminal charges have been filed against Railey, although his attorney said Railey is the only suspect. The former senior minister at First United Methodist Church in downtown Dallas denies the allegations.

Women's Ministry will have Ladies Spring Day

From Staff Reports

The Women's Ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ is conducting a Ladies Spring Day today in the church's Family Center.

Speaker for the event will be Mary Oler of Dallas, a popular inspirational speaker who specializes in women's concerns. Her topic is "Nurturing Others."

Registration begins at 9 a.m. A luncheon, served at 12:15 p.m., will be provided for all in attendance. For more information call Gail Parnham, 663-8836.

OUR USED CARS HAVE A WARRANTY THAT WON'T WASH OFF.

Maybe you think the only used car warranty you can get is the one soaped on the windshield.

At Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Saab, we inspect every used car we sell. We test, we tune and then we attach a special 90 day, 3,000 mile warranty on the engine, drive train and transmission - for parts and labor - on every used car in our lot.*

So when we say we stand behind the cars we sell, that's a promise written in stone. Not just on a windshield.
