Cruz, Perry top GOP presidential picks

Second UT/TT poll shows Cruz is main choice; Perry closing gap

By Ross Ramsey
Texas Tribune

U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz remains the top presidential choice of Texas Republican voters, but Gov. Rick Perry is starting to close the gap between the two, according to the latest University of Texas/Texas Tribune Poll.

It might not seem that way at first glance. While 27 percent of likely Republican voters say Cruz would be their choice in a hypothetical primary for the 2016 presidential nomination, only 14 percent choose Perry. Author and former surgeon Ben Carson is looming in the governor's rearview mirror, with 10 percent, followed by former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, U.S. Sen. Rand Paul of Kentucky and former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee, each at 7 percent.

But in the June UT/TT Poll, Perry was running fourth, with 7 percent, while Cruz was way out in front with 33 percent of the respondents at his side. A year ago, Cruz had a 3-to-1 lead over the governor.

"Rick Perry's political instincts about how to respond to law and order at the border are still pretty good," said Jim Henson, co-director of the poll and director of the Texas Politics Project at the University of Texas at Austin. "Everyone else is milling around in the middle of the pack."

Other Republicans included in the survey — U.S. Sens. Paul Ryan of Wisconsin and Marco Rubio of Florida, New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie, Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal, Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker, former U.S. Sen. Rick Santorum and Ohio Gov. John Kasich — each come in with 4 percent or less. Eleven percent of the likely Republican voters say they

THE MAGIC OF MARFA

Marfa makes Lonely Planet, Vogue lists

■ Marfa Lights inlcuded on "The World's Most Illuminating Experiences" list; El Cosmico listed on "7 Outdoor Outings With Just the Right Touch of Luxury"

By Joshua Fechter
San Antonio Express-News

One tiny West Texas town, two high-profile lists, and a mystique that is irresistible to travelers all over the world.

Marfa, population of about 2,000, is home to El Cosmico, a hotel that opts for trailers, tepees and tents rather than hotel rooms, which made it on to Vogue magazine's list of "7 Outdoor Outings With Just the Right Touch of Luxury." And the Marfa Lights recently made Lonely Planet's list of "The World's Most Illuminating Experiences."

In celebration of the United Nations' Year of Light in 2015, travel authority Lonely Planet compiled a list of recommended light attractions worth a visit and the Marfa Lights are number two on the list, behind Northern Lights viewing in Sweden.

The Lonely Planet writeup of the Marfa placing begins with a strange admission: "As illuminating experiences go, this one really isn't."

So how did it make the list?

It is the mysetery surrounding the "odd-reddish orbs" that makes the Marfa Lights worth a visit, according to Lonely Planet.

The mystery of the Marfa Lights are a more must-visit attraction than the lantern festivals in China or The Museum of Fluorescent Art in Amsterdam, according to the list.

El Cosmico made the Vogue list for its "artsy vibe," installations, sewing classes and live music along with its 600-title library and Dutch hot tub.

Analysis: A missing piece in the voter ID debate

By Ross Ramsey
Texas Tribune

Republican state officials working to pass a voter photo ID law in 2011 knew that more than 500,000 of the state's registered voters did not have the credentials needed to cast ballots under the new requirement. But they did not share that information with lawmakers rushing to pass the legislation.

Now that the bill is law, in-person voters must present one of seven specified forms of photo identification in order to have their votes counted.

A federal judge in Corpus Christi has found the law unconstitutional, but the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that the state can leave it in place for the November election while appeals proceed.

The details about the number of voters affected emerged during the challenge to the law, and were included in the findings of U.S. District Judge Nelva Gonzales Ramos.

During the 2011 legislative struggle to pass the voter ID law, she wrote, Republican lawmakers asked the Texas secretary of state, who runs elections, and the Texas Department of Public Safety, which maintains driver's license information, for the number of registered voters who did not have state-issued photo identification.

The answer: at least a half-million.

There was evidence, the judge wrote, that Sen. Tommy Williams asked the Texas Department of Public Safety to compare its ID databases with the list of

FROM WIRE REPORTS

AUSTIN

Perry's 1st court appearance now set for Nov. 6

A judge has rescheduled for Nov. 6 in Austin Texas Gov. Rick Perry's first court appearance to face abuse-of-power charges.

The Republican originally was to appear at an Oct. 31 pretrial hearing, but Perry attorney Tony Buzbee said the hearing was postponed until Nov. 7.

In an order signed Friday, though, state District Judge Bert Richardson set the hearing for the previous morning.

A Travis County grand jury indicted Perry in August on charges that he abused his official powers and coerced a public servant. The charges arose from his public threat and eventual decision to veto state funding for public corruption prosecutors.

That came after the Democratic district attorney overseeing the unit wouldn't resign after a drunken-driving conviction.

Perry's attorneys have challenged the case on constitutional and technical grounds.

HOUSTON

Mayor: '2 moms' cause daughter's driver's license woes

Houston Mayor Annise Parker said her daughter faced difficulty in getting a driver's license because she listed two mothers as her parents on her application.

Parker is gay and married partner Kathy Hubbard in a California ceremony earlier this year. Together, they adopted daughters Daniela and Marquitta in 2003. Texas doesn't recognize same-sex marriages, however.

The Houston Chronicle reported Parker tweeted Friday that the Texas Department of Public Safety denied Daniela a driving test Thursday because of inconsistencies on her personal identification documents. In some spots Daniela listed Parker as her mother and listed Hubbard as her mother on others. Only on a third trip Friday to the license office did she get her license.

DPS spokesman Tom Vinger blamed the glitch on insufficient documentation to prove residency.

BROWNWOOD

Pit bull recovering after attack

A West Texas pit bull is recovering after police say its owner tried to kill it with a knife and hammer.

Veterinarian Carren Bowden told KTXS-TV on Thursday that the 4-year-old dog named Bruiser is expected to live but could need treatment for unspecified skin issues. She's also watching the animal for post-traumatic stress.

Brownwood police said they went to the suspect's house Tuesday on an animal cruelty call. They found the man and Bruiser in the backyard and said the dog and hammer were covered in blood.

The man told officers Bruiser had been suffering and that he was trying to put him down.

Bruiser will be fostered by Angles and Outlaws Bully Ranch in Stephenville when he is released.

No charges have been reported.

SULLIVAN CITY

South Texas pre-K student, 4, takes gun to school

Nobody has been hurt after a 4-year-old pre-kindergarten student took a loaded gun in his backpack to a South Texas elementary school.

Officials with the La Joya Independent School District said a teacher confiscated the weapon and locked the gun in a safe until police arrived.

The incident happened Thursday at Rosendo Benavides Elementary School in Sullivan City. The boy mentioned the gun to other students, who then told a teacher.

Police are speaking with the child's relatives to determine how he acquired the gun, which had 15 bullets in the magazine but no rounds in the chamber.

District police Chief Raul Gonzalez said investigators do not believe the boy planned to use the gun. School officials will consider any possible punishment for the child.

POLL

haven't thought enough about the race to have a favorite.

Texas voters have favorable impressions of the two Republicans currently at the top of the GOP pileup, with 44 percent saying they have a very or somewhat favorable opinion of Cruz and 45 percent saying the same about Perry. More than a third of the voters — 36 percent — have an unfavorable opinion of Cruz; 40 percent have an unfavorable impression of Perry.

"This race on the Republican side shows that there is no heir to the throne," said Daron Shaw, co-director of the poll and a professor of government at UT-Austin. He said the GOP tends to nominate candidates for president who finished in second place four years prior. "There's no runner-up looking for the title this time."

Shaw said the numbers are still volatile and the changes in the standings are relatively small. But he added that Perry's profile is rising some. "You guys in the media love second acts, and Perry is a great second act," he said.

Democrats, on the other hand, have a straight-up front-runner in Hillary Clinton, who has the support of 60 percent of likely Democratic voters in Texas, according to the poll. She's followed by U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts, at 13 percent, and Vice President Joe Biden, at 10 percent.

Other potential Democratic candidates — New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, former Montana Gov. Brian Schweitzer, former U.S. Sen. Jim Webb of Virginia and Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley — each get support from 2 percent or less of voters, and 13 percent of the Democratic likely voters said they have no favorite.

"The not-Hillary vote is sort of befuddled right now," Shaw said.

According to the poll, Perry gets better job reviews than either the president or Congress, with 46 percent of Texas voters saying they approve of his performance and 38 percent saying they don't. Among those who feel strongly about it, 22 percent approve and 27 percent disapprove of the governor's work in office.

President Obama gets good reviews from 36 percent of Texans and bad reviews from 57 percent. And most of the voters who disapprove — 48 percent — say they strongly disapprove. Only 14 percent strongly approve of his performance.

Texas voters have hard views of Congress, with 14 percent saying they approve of its job performance and 71 percent saying they disapprove. Among those who feel strongly, 2 percent approve and 41 percent disapprove.

"The president remains deeply unpopular, and I think we're seeing that expressed in races from governor to dog-catcher," Henson said. "Anyone wondering why the president has been turning up in so many ads on TV can find their answer right here."

The University of Texas/Texas Tribune internet survey of 1,200 registered voters was conducted from Oct. 10 to Oct. 19 and has an overall margin of error of +/- 2.83 percentage points. Among 866 likely voters in the head-to-head general election races, the margin of error is +/- 3.33 percent. Among 560 likely Republican primary voters, the margin of error is +/- 4.14 percent, and among 429 likely Democratic primary voters, the margin of error is +/- 4.73 percent. Numbers in the charts might not add up to 100 percent because of rounding.

registered voters to find out how many people would not have the most common of the photo IDs required by the law. No match was done to see how many people did not have other acceptable IDs. "That database match was performed by the SOS, but the results showing 504,000 to 844,000 voters being without Texas photo ID were not released to the Legislature."

Gonzales Ramos sourced that finding in a footnote, noting that in a deposition, Williams, a Republican from The Woodlands who has since left the state Senate, said he requested that information and then did not share it with fellow lawmakers.

That many voters could make a real difference. Rick Perry, a Republican, beat Bill White, a Democrat, handily in the 2010 race for governor, winning by almost 13 percentage points. That was a difference of 631,086 votes. Earlier this month, the secretary of state announced that a record 14 million Texans are registered to vote in the coming general election. Using that office's 2011 estimate, it is no stretch to think that 3.6 percent to 6 percent of current registered voters do not have the photo IDs now required to cast a ballot.

State Sen. Rodney Ellis, Democrat from Houston, testified in the federal case that he asked the secretary of state for the information and never received it. But not everyone was uninformed. Citing depositions from Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst and Ann McGeehan, an elections official with the secretary of state at the time, the judge wrote, "Lt. Gov. Dewhurst was aware of the no-match list results showing 678,000 to 844,000 voters being potentially disenfranchised."

A spokesman for Dewhurst, Andrew Barlow, said the lieutenant governor was aware of the results when he gave his deposition, but not when the Legislature was debating the bill.

The no-match list was not enough, apparently, to prompt voter ID proponents to revisit the measure during the 2013 legislative session. So far, three statewide elections have been held using the new voter ID requirements, without clear evidence that it affected either turnout or outcomes: a vote on constitutional amendments in November 2013, and the party primaries and runoffs earlier this year.

The fate of the legislation was never in question in 2011. On the final vote, only 47 of 150 House members and 12 of 31 senators voted against it. Litigation started immediately and led to the ruling this month that the law is unconstitutional; has "an impermissible discriminatory effect against Hispanics and African-Americans; and was imposed with an unconstitutional discriminatory purpose." The judge capped that by saying the law acts as an unconstitutional poll tax.

The Republicans who wanted the law won in the Legislature, and the Democrats who did not want it won the first round in court. However, the Supreme Court left the law in place, apparently wanting to avoid any disruption in this year's elections.

At the moment, that leaves a legal contradiction: The law is both unconstitutional and in force.

Bernalillo County woman contracts West Nile virus

Health officials said the first clinical case of West Nile virus has been confirmed in Bernalillo County.

They said a 45-year-old woman was hospitalized briefly with the more severe neuro-invasive form of West Nile, but now is recovering.

Bernalillo County has also had one horse diagnosed with West Nile this year and the horse had to be euthanized.

West Nile can cause flu-like symptoms such as fever, nausea, headache and muscle aches.

Most people who become infected with the virus have either no symptoms or have only mild symptoms.

But a small percentage of infected people can develop meningitis or encephalitis.

Police: 'Explosive device' hit mosque

Police said an unknown suspect has thrown what appears to be Molotov cocktail at an Albuquerque mosque.

Albuquerque police spokesman Tanner Tixier said the explosive device was tossed Friday morning at a window of the Islamic Center but did not break the glass and enter the building.

He said the device briefly ignited and smoke caused damage to the exterior of the mosque. No injuries were reported.

Tixier said a number of agencies, including the FBI, are investigating the attack.

No arrests have been made.

The Washington, D.C.-based Council on American-Islamic Relations said in a statement the attack on the mosque should be investigated as a hate crime.

Feds cancel classes for West African delegates

The U.S. State Department has confirmed that dozens of delegates from Ebola-affected countries in West Africa will not be coming to the International Law Enforcement Academy in southern New Mexico as planned.

The State Department, which runs the training center in Roswell, made the decision to defer invitations to the West Africans several weeks ago.

The Roswell Daily Record reported a total of 72 delegates from Liberia, Senegal and other countries were scheduled to arrive for four weeks of law enforcement classes beginning Nov. 24.

State Department spokesman Noel Clay said classes for Latin American officers will continue and the West African officers will be rescheduled next year.

NM hospital screening patients in parking lot

New Mexico's top health officials said the risk of an Ebola case in the state is low, but administrators at Roosevelt General Hospital aren't taking any chances.

Starting Friday, the rural eastern New Mexico hospital will begin pre-screening for Ebola at a parking lot checkpoint.

Each incoming vehicle must stop so visitors and patients can answer a series of questions regarding recent travel and symptoms.

Hospital CEO Larry Leaming said he's taking the proactive measure to keep staff and patients safe.

In the event of a positive screening, Leaming said the person would be transferred to a quarantined section of the hospital.

State and federal health officials aren't aware of any other hospitals that have set up parking lot checkpoints.

Cornyn, Democrat Alameel meet in only debate

Associated Press

DALLAS — Problems with the nation's immigration system dominated a debate Friday between U.S. Sen. John Cornyn and Democratic challenger David Alameel.

Alameel cited the GOP, with its House majority, as the biggest obstacle to a comprehensive overhaul, while Cornyn said the fractured political culture in Washington is to blame. He endorsed a step-by-step approach to changing the system.

The debate at Mountain View College in Dallas was sponsored by Univision and streamed live over the Internet.

Alameel touted comprehensive immigration system changes as the cure for most of the ills faced by Latinos in the U.S., even those in the country legally.

Associated Press

"Most of the Latinos here who are undocumented are people who have been here for many, many years; people who are very hard-working, God-fearing, pro-family. ... And I believe that they deserve the same path to the American dream as every other community," he said.

Cornyn said he doesn't think anyone is happy with the current immigration system. "The issue is how do we find some consensus," he said. "And I think the way we begin to do that is to find a way to break this down into smaller pieces because frankly there's so much distrust and division in Washington, D.C., these days. It's hard, if not impossible, to pass a comprehensive bill that does everything."

The debate was the only one scheduled between the candidates.

Democrats have been working to maximize the Latino vote, something that was lacking in 2012. That year, turnout among voting-age Latinos was 39 percent, compared with 61 percent for whites, according to U.S. Census Bureau estimates. In the last governor's election, only a quarter of the valley's Latino voters cast ballots.

Cornyn, the second-ranking Republican in the Senate, has done little outright campaigning against Alameel, a dental mogul from Dallas who lost a bid for Congress in 2012 and was previously a top GOP donor. When questioned about backing Cornyn and the Republican Party previously, Alameel dismissed it as a mistake.

Republicans can retake control of the Senate if they gain six seats, which has Cornyn keeping an eye on competitive races elsewhere as much as his own.

The debate originally was scheduled to air only on delay on Univision stations across Texas, although both candidates debated in English. But the Texas Tribune announced this week that it would stream the debate live, with C-SPAN carrying it on a two-hour delay.

Alameel is a Lebanon-born multimillionaire who tapped his own fortune to finance this race and his failed bid for a U.S. House seat two years ago. He has said he was part of once-secret negotiations in Afghanistan, trying to persuade the Taliban to turn over Osama bin Laden before the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

NY, NJ order quarantine for doctors, others

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Alarmed by the case of an Ebola-infected New York doctor, the governors of New Jersey and New York on Friday ordered a mandatory, 21-day quarantine of all medical workers and other arriving airline passengers who have had contact with victims of the deadly disease in West Africa.

The move came after a physician who returned to New York City a week ago from treating Ebola patients in Guinea fell ill with the virus. Many New Yorkers were dismayed to learn that in the days after he came home, Dr. Craig Spencer rode the subway, took a cab, went bowling, visited a coffee shop and ate at a restaurant in the city of 8 million.

New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie and New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo said the case led them to conclude that the two states need precautions more rigorous than those of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which recommends monitoring of exposed people for 21 days but doesn't require quarantine, in which they are kept away from others.

"It's too serious a situation to leave it to the honor system of compliance," Cuomo said.

Those who are forcibly quarantined will be confined either to their homes or, if they live in other states, to some other place, most likely a medical facility, the governors said. Those quarantined at home will receive house calls from health officials. Twenty-one days is the incubation period for the Ebola virus.

Dallas nurse receives thanks, hug from Obama

Associated Press

BETHESDA, Md. — A nurse who caught Ebola while caring for a Dallas patient who died of the disease walked out of a Washington-area hospital virus-free Friday and into open arms.

Nina Pham got a hug from President Barack Obama in the Oval Office at the White House. And outside the hospital where she had been since last week, she got hugs from the nation's infectious disease chief, who oversaw her care.

White House spokesman Josh Earnest called the meeting with Obama "an opportunity for the president to thank her for her service." But the close contact between the president and the former patient also came as officials in New York tried to calm fears after a doctor was diagnosed with Ebola in that city.

Pham said she felt "fortunate and blessed to be standing here today," as she left the National Institutes of Health's Clinical Center in Bethesda, Maryland, where she had been since she arrived Oct. 16 from Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital Dallas.

Pham thanked her health care teams in Dallas and at the NIH and singled out fellow Ebola survivor Dr. Kent Brantly, who recovered after becoming infected in Liberia, for donating plasma containing Ebola-fighting antibodies as part of her care.

"Although I no longer have Ebola, I know it may be a while before I have my strength back," Pham said at a news conference.

Dr. Anthony Fauci,, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, told reporters that five consecutive tests showed no virus left in her blood. Five tests is way beyond the norm, he stressed, but his team did extra testing because the NIH is a research hospital. He had walked out to the news conference with his arm around Pham and later gave her a big hug.

"She is cured of Ebola, let's get that clear," Fauci said.

Pham stood throughout the approximately 20-minute press conference and was joined by her mother and sister. She read from a prepared statement and took no questions, but she called her experience "very stressful and challenging for me and for my family."

"I ask for my privacy and for my family's privacy to be respected as I return to Texas and try to get back to a normal life and reunite with my dog Bentley," she said, drawing laughter with the mention of her 1-year-old King Charles spaniel. Bentley has been in quarantine since Pham's diagnosis but has tested negative for the virus.

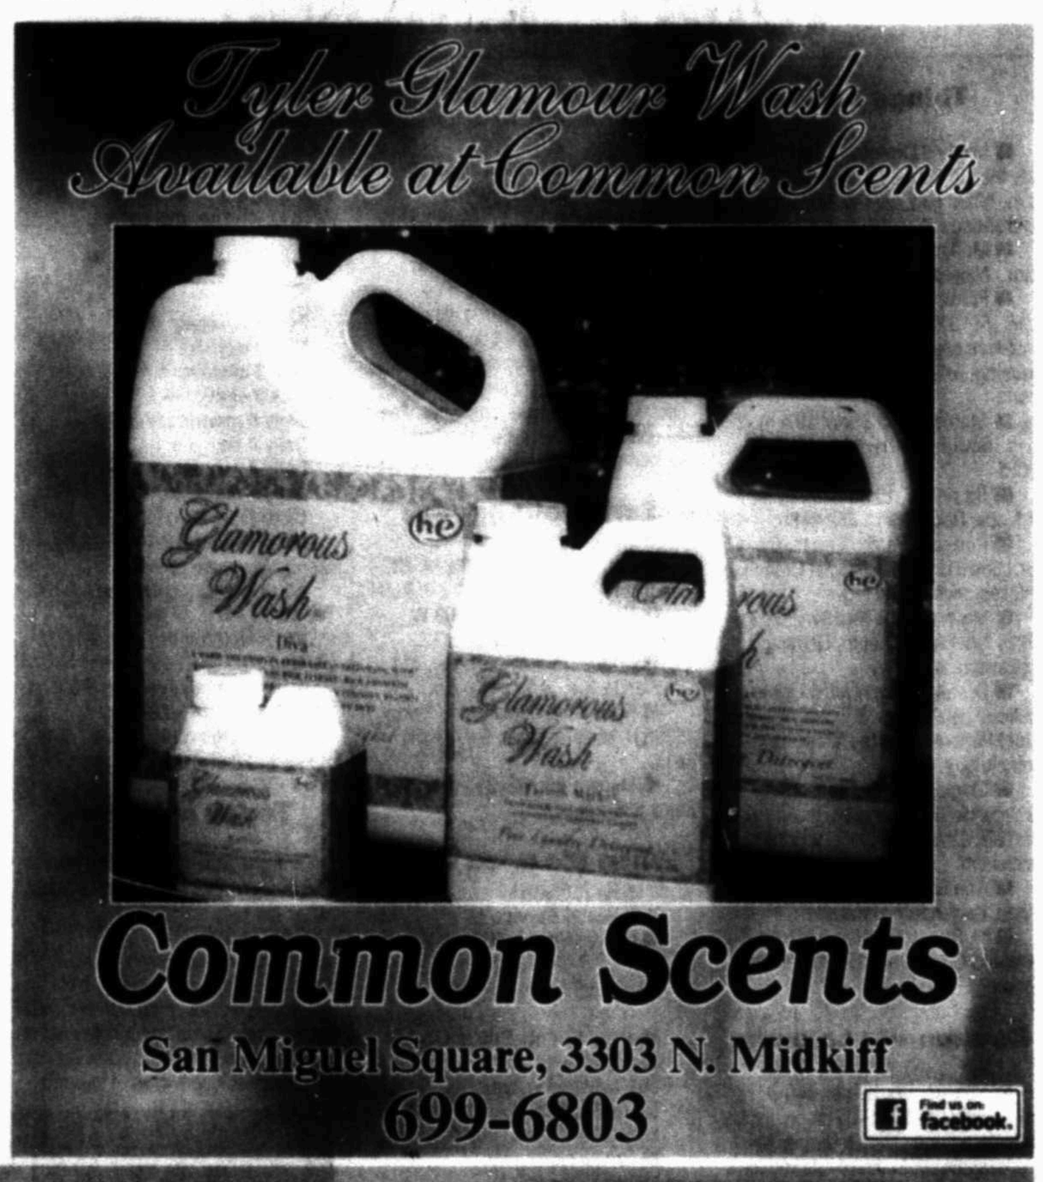
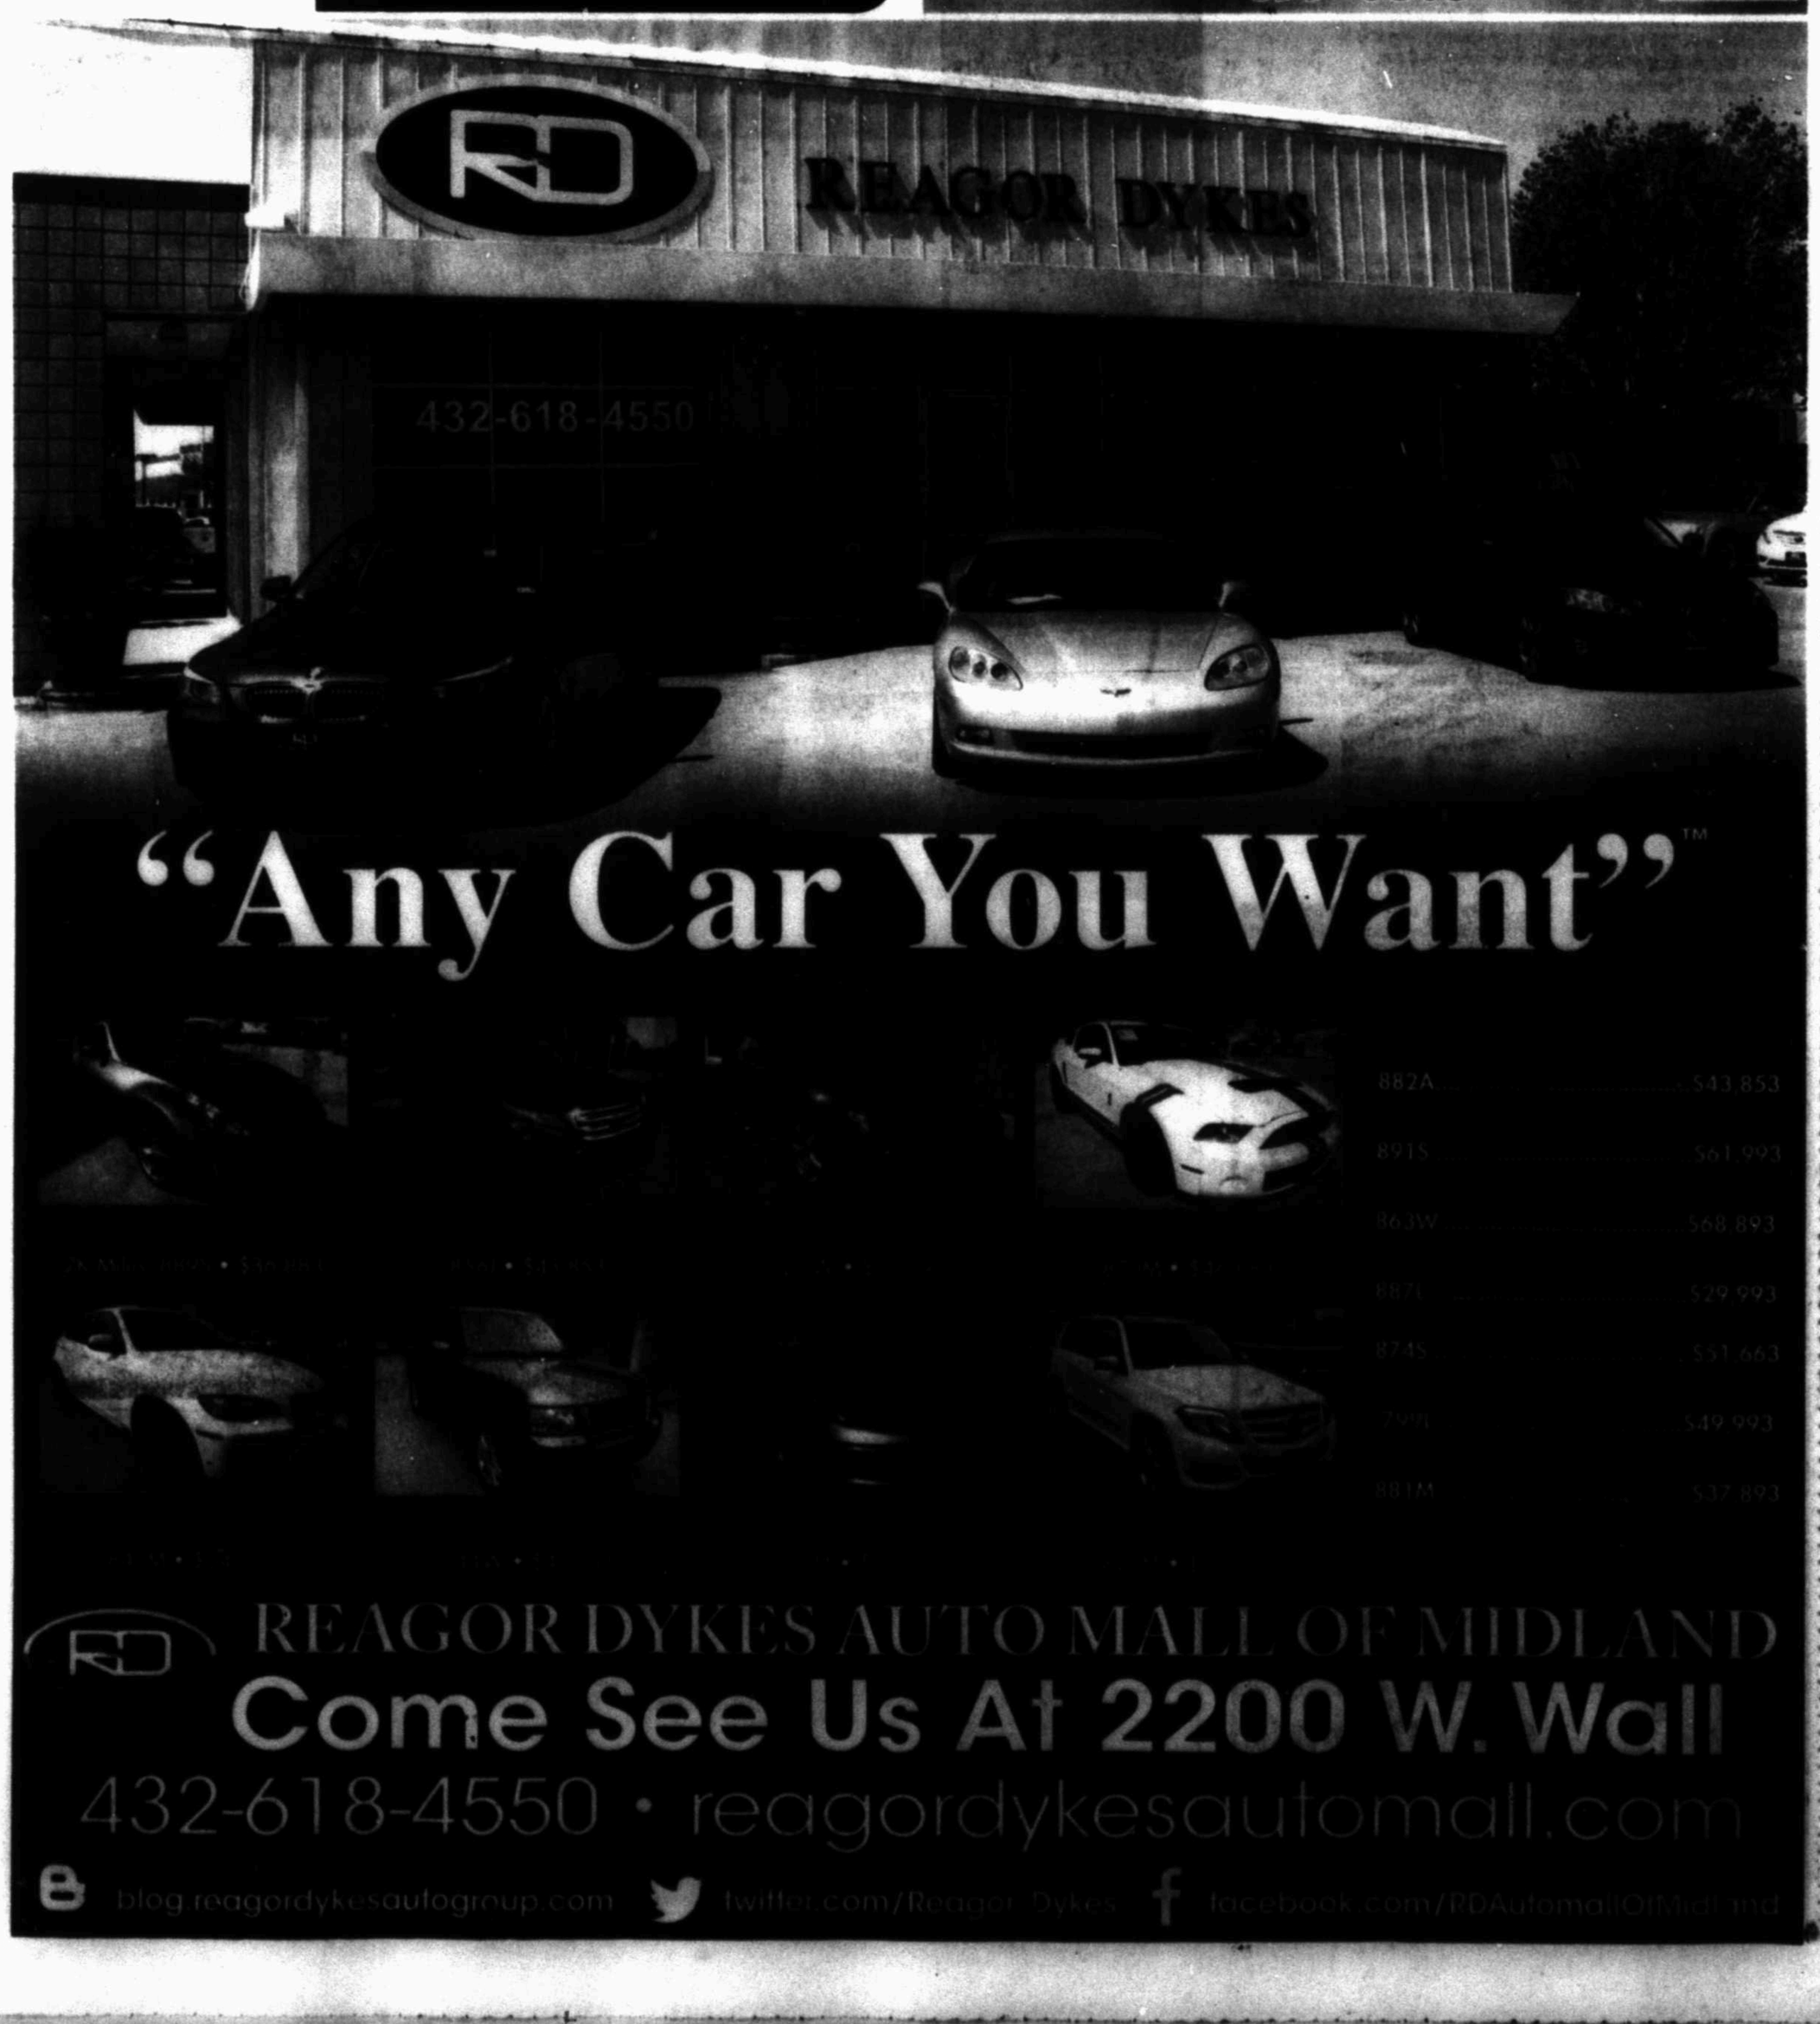
Pham, the first nurse diagnosed with Ebola after treating an infected man at a Dallas hospital is free of the virus. The 26-year-old Pham arrived last week at the NIH Clinical Center. She had been flown there from Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital Dallas. Pham's mother Diana, center, and sister Cathy watch.





Canada gives slain soldier hero's send-off

Associated Press

OTTAWA, Ontario — The soldier shot dead by a gunman who then stormed Canada's seat of government was given a hero's send-off Friday, with a motorcade along the highway where the country honors its war dead.

Bagpipes rang out from the crowd of around 1,000 people as two new ceremonial guards were reinstated to the post at Canada's national war memorial for the first time since Cpl. Nathan Cirillo, 24, was gunned down earlier this week.

Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper watched as the soldiers took their spot before the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Spontaneous applause erupted from on-lookers as members of Cirillo's regiment, the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, marched in procession before the motorcade left Ottawa headed toward Cirillo's hometown of Hamilton, Ontario, 320 miles to the west.

The Highway of Heroes, which has frequently seen the repatriation of soldiers killed in Afghanistan, is the stretch of Ontario's Highway 401 between Canadian Forces Base Trenton and Toronto.

As many as 500 people jammed one overpass, breaking into a rendition of the national anthem as the procession went by.

Police: 2 dead, including gunman, in school attack

By Doug Esser
Associated Press

MARYSVILLE, Wash. — A student recently crowned freshman class Homecoming prince walked into his Seattle-area high school cafeteria Friday and opened fire, killing one person and shooting several others in the head before turning the gun on himself, officials and witnesses said.

Students said the gunman was staring at students as he shot them inside the cafeteria at Marysville-Pilchuck High School. The shootings set off a chaotic scene as students ran from the cafeteria and building in a frantic dash to safety while others were told to stay put inside classrooms at the school, 30 miles north of Seattle.

The gunman was identified as student Jaylen Fryberg, a government official with direct knowledge of the shooting told The Associated Press. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to speak to the media.

Students and parents said Fryberg was a freshman who played on the high school football team. He was introduced at a football game as the school's 2014 Homecoming court freshmen class prince, according to a video shot by parent Jim McGauhey.

Marysville Police Commander Robb Lamoureux said the gunman died of a self-inflicted wound, but he could not provide more details.

Shaylee Bass, 15, a sophomore at the school, said Fryberg had recently gotten into a fight with another boy over a girl.

"He was very upset about that," said Bass, who was shocked by the shooting.

"He was not a violent person," she said. "His family is known all around town. He was very well known. That's what makes it so bizarre."

Three of the people shot by Fryberg had head wounds and were in critical condition. Two young women were taken to Providence Everett Medical Center, and a 15-year-old boy was at Harborview Medical Center in Seattle, hospital officials said. Another victim, a 14-year-old boy, was listed in serious condition at Harborview as well, the hospital said.

Witnesses described Fryberg as methodical inside the cafeteria.

Brian Patrick said his daughter, a freshman, was 10 feet from him when the shooting occurred. She ran from the cafeteria and immediately called her mother.

Patrick said his daughter told him, "The guy walked into the cafeteria, pulled out a gun and started shooting. No arguing, no yelling."

Malia Grato, a junior, said she heard a few pops then the fire alarm before moving to leave her classroom.

She didn't realize something was seriously wrong until teachers started shouting there had been a shooting.

Other students streamed from the building, with some trying to jump a fence to get away.

A crowd of parents later waited in a parking lot outside a nearby church where they were being reunited with their children. Buses pulled up periodically to drop off students evacuated from the school, with some running to hug their mothers or fathers.

Patrick said after the shooting that his other daughter, a senior at the school, was "hysterical" when she called him from her classroom.

"I thought, 'God let my kids be safe,'" he said.

Marysville-Pilchuck High School has many students from the Tulalip Indian tribe.

Ron Iukes, a youth counselor with the tribe, said Fryberg was from a well-known tribal family.

"They're real good people, very loving, a big part of the community," he said. "Jaylen was one of our good kids. It's just a shock this happened. I've known this boy since he was a baby. It's just devastating."

Nathan Heckendorf, a 17-year-old junior, said he saw Fryberg on Friday morning before the shooting and that there was nothing to indicate that he was upset.

"He looked happy. Everything seemed fine," Heckendorf said.

Spain challenges Canary Island poll on oil plans

Associated Press

MADRID — The Spanish government says it will ask the Constitutional Court to block proposals by the Canary Islands regional government to stage a referendum on oil exploration in waters off the popular tourist archipelago.

Deputy Prime Minister Soraya Saenz de Santamaria said Friday that energy issues are a matter for the state to decide on, not regional governments.

The Spanish government has licensed energy company Repsol to begin exploration some 40 miles off the islands in the coming weeks.

The Canary Islands, located off the northwest coast of Africa, plans a referendum Nov. 23 asking residents if the archipelago should change its environmental and tourism policies for the sake of oil and gas exploration.

If the court agrees to study the challenge the vote will be automatically suspended.

EU reaches deal to cut greenhouse gas emissions

By Mike Corder & Monika Scislowska
Associated Press

Associated Press

Activists dressed as corporate lobbyists hold bags of coal and put up blackened hands as they demonstrate outside an EU summit in Brussels on Thursday. Demonstrators called for EU leaders to resist pressure by the fossil fuel industry and agree an EU 2030 climate and energy package. EU leaders will gather Thursday for a two-day summit in which they will discuss energy and climate change.

BRUSSELS — European Union leaders agreed early Friday to cut greenhouse gas emissions in the 28-nation bloc to at least 40 percent below 1990 levels by 2030.

The deal was aimed at countering climate change and setting an example for the rest of the world ahead of key international climate negotiations next year.

A package agreed by leaders at an EU summit in the early hours of Friday after lengthy negotiations also requires climate-friendly, renewable energy to provide at least 27 percent of the bloc's needs and demands that energy efficiency increase by at least 27 percent in the next 16 years.

"It was not easy, not at all, but we managed to reach a fair decision," said European Council President Herman Van Rompuy. "It sets Europe on an ambitious yet cost-effective climate and energy path."

The decision makes the EU the first major economy to set post-2020 emissions targets ahead of a global climate pact that is supposed to be adopted next year in Paris. Other countries including the U.S. and China are bound to be measured against the EU goals as they present their own emissions targets.

The EU pledges will carry weight because they come from an economic powerhouse. The combined Gross Domestic Product of EU member states is larger than that of the United States, which has the greatest GDP of any single nation. The bloc said it is responsible for less than 10 percent of greenhouse gas emissions worldwide.

EU leaders also pledged to increase the amount of energy countries can trade with one another — a move pushed for by Spain and Portugal, which want to be able to sell renewable energy they generate.

Van Rompuy said that countries should be able to import or export 15 percent of their power by 2030, saying the move would help match energy supply and demand across borders.

"This agreement keeps Europe firmly in the driving seat in international climate talks ahead of the Paris summit next year," said EU Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso said.

But environmental activists said it fell short of what the 28-nation bloc should have done.

"The global fight against climate change needs radical shock treatment, but what the EU is offering is at best a whiff of smelling salts," said Greenpeace EU managing director Mahi Sideridou.

Natalia Alonso, Oxfam's Deputy Director of Advocacy and Campaigns, called the targets welcome "but only a first step, which falls far too short of what the EU needs to do to pull its weight in the fight against climate change."

The pact came after strong opposition from Poland and other poorer and developing eastern European nations.

Poland had argued that pace of change was too fast for Eastern European countries that are trying to grow their economies as they restructure old, energy-dependent industries.

Almost 90 percent of Poland's electricity comes from coal. The nation intends to continue that way for decades because mining creates 100,000 direct jobs and many thousands more in related sectors. Warsaw argues that green energy, large wind farms and solar panels still create energy that is too expensive.

Van Rompuy said poorer EU member states would get help reaching the targets.

He pledged "extra support for lower-income countries, both through adequate targets and through additional funds to help them catch up in their clean-energy transition."

Poland's Prime Minister Ewa Kopacz said the deal would not cost her country.

"I said that we will not return from this summit with new (financial) burdens, and indeed there are no new burdens," Kopacz told Polish reporters.

Republicans question federal response on Ebola

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The new Ebola infection in New York City exposed flaws in the system and raised new concerns, lawmakers said Friday, as they criticized the federal response to the outbreak and questioned top officials' credibility.

"I can tell you it's not working. All you need to do is look at Craig Spencer," said Rep. John Mica, R-Fla., naming the doctor in New York who was diagnosed with Ebola late Thursday a week after returning from Guinea. "He was tested there, it's not working."

Spencer, the fourth person diagnosed in the U.S., did not exhibit symptoms until Thursday and so the temperature screening in place at the five U.S. airports that receive passengers from Sierra Leone, Guinea and Liberia, the three West African countries that have borne the worst of the outbreak, would not have caught him. Some lawmakers questioning administration officials at a House Oversight and Government Reform Committee hearing said that just showed that a new approach was needed.

Less than two weeks before hard-fought midterm elections, many lawmakers, especially Republicans, have called for a travel ban from the hot spots in West Africa, where the deadly disease has infected roughly 10,000 people and killed about half of them. Others have suggested quarantining people for the 21-day incubation period once they arrive.

The Obama administration has resisted, saying such an approach could make things worse by limiting sorely needed supplies and medical workers to West Africa and encouraging travelers to hide their travel histories. Instead the administration has implemented new guidelines for screening all people arriving here from the hot zones and ensuring they're all monitored by medical experts for 21 days.

"We think a travel ban would be incredibly unproductive, or counterproductive," Dr. Nicole Lurie, assistant Health and Human Services secretary for preparedness and response, told lawmakers Friday. "We've really tightened it up quite a bit, and I believe it should be sufficient."

GOP candidates tread gingerly on climate change

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans in competitive races are treading gingerly around climate change this campaign season, often saying they are not in a good position to make a judgment on the issue, then pivoting quickly to express concern for the environment, the economy or both.

"I am not a scientist," Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky has said numerous times, a response that other members of his party have employed when asked if human activity is causing the earth to warm.

Former Rep. Frank Guinta of New Hampshire, running to reclaim a House seat he once held, says, "I think the science is not complete on this issue."

Senate hopeful Joni Ernst of Iowa, said recently, "I don't know the science behind climate change. ... I can't say one way or another what is the direct impact from whether it's man-made or not." She prefaced her comments by saying she believes in protecting the environment, offering as evidence, "I drive a hybrid car, and my family recycles everything."

Polls routinely find that climate change is far down the list of voter concerns, particularly in an era of slow economic growth.

Yet the issue has come up persistently in the fall campaign, including in debates and interviews as well as political commercials.

Surveys suggest there may be political safety for Republicans in straddling the issue, since doing otherwise could anger conservative GOP voters who deny climate change's existence or offend the majority of the country that says it is an established fact.

A year-old survey by Pew Research showed that only 25 percent of tea party supporters believe global warming is occurring, compared with 67 percent for the nation as a whole. Nationally, 44 percent said the earth is warming mostly because of human activity, a view held by only 9 percent of tea party backers — a group that Republican candidates hope will turn out in large numbers this fall.

More recently, a New York Times poll said 42 percent of Republicans said global warming won't have a serious impact, a view held by 12 percent of Democrats and 22 percent of independents.

Global Climate Change, a Web-Site of the nation's space agency, says, "Ninety-seven percent of climate scientists agree that climate-warming trends over the past century are very likely due to human activities, and most of the leading scientific organizations worldwide have issued public statements endorsing this position."

But that consensus is hotly disputed by critics, including some office-holders.

One high-profile doubter, Sen. James Inhofe of Oklahoma, published a 2012 book, "The Greatest Hoax: How the Global Warming Conspiracy Threatens Your Future."

Among Democratic candidates, there is a strong consensus that global warming is a fact.

Sen. Mary Landrieu, running for a new term in oil and gas-producing Louisiana, said during a recent debate, "I do believe our climate is changing, and I do believe humans contribute."

Sen. Mark Udall, another energy-state Democrat in a tough race, said on his campaign website, "Climate change threatens our special way of life in Colorado."

Yet many Republicans in this year's campaign appear highly reluctant to stake out an unequivocal position.

"Well, I am not a scientist," Florida Gov. Rick Scott said last spring.

More recently he expressed no opinion whether human behavior is affecting the climate. Instead, he said in a debate he focuses on solving problems.

"We've spent $350 million to deal with sea level rise; we spent $100 million to deal with protecting our coral reef; we've increased the funding by 45 percent for beach re-nourishment and spent $880 million on the Everglades," he said.

Former Obama lawyer nixes attorney general offer

By Nedra Pickler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former White House counsel Kathryn Ruemmler has told President Barack Obama she doesn't want to be nominated for attorney general, after he asked her to consider succeeding Eric Holder, people familiar with the discussions told The Associated Press on Friday.

Ruemmler was concerned that her experience as a close adviser to the president would have led to a difficult confirmation process in the current highly charged partisan environment, the sources said, speaking on a condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss private discussions. They say Ruemmler, a top official at the Justice Department before moving to the White House, was also concerned that could ignite political attacks against Obama.

Ruemmler's withdrawal, in a phone call to the president Wednesday, leaves no obvious front-runner to replace Holder, who announced a month ago that he would step down once a replacement was confirmed. Ruemmler brought the law enforcement bonafides of a former prosecutor in the Bush administration who won convictions against Enron's executives and the national security expertise of a top White House official.

Midland High can't hold off Permian's 4th-quarter surge

By Chris Hummer
chummer@mrt.com

Panthers 15
Bulldogs 14

ODESSA — Midland High stymied Odessa Permian all evening through the air, with Panthers quarterback Heath Wood completing three passes for 11 yards the entire evening.

Only problem was, all three of those passes came in the fourth quarter. More importantly, two went for touchdowns and spurred Odessa Permian to a 15-14 come-from-behind victory.

Midland High (4-4, 1-2 in 3-6A) had a 14-3 lead entering the final frame, but the Panthers' Wood hit Taylor Thompson in the right flat on a screen pass, and the senior cruised for a 45-yard touchdown.

On Permian's next series, Wood completed his first real downfield strike of the game to Kobe Robinson. The sophomore absorbed a big hit around the 25-yard line, shimmied past another MHS defender and then bolted the rest of the way for a 55-yard touchdown to give Permian a 15-14 lead.

"They scored two touchdowns off of (throwing)," said Midland High senior linebacker Emilio Solis. "They caught us and they beat us with that. It's simple."

The Bulldogs had an opportunity to respond but went three-and-out. On the next possession, Permian (6-2, 2-1 in 3-6A) wound down the final three minutes on the clock with nine straight runs for 50 yards.

The blown fourth-quarter lead continues to be a disturbing trend for the Bulldogs. In the first half this season, Midland High has outscored opponents 138-93. But in the second half the spread flips, with opponents holding an 87-65 advantage. The fourth quarter numbers are even more drastic, as MHS has been outscored 47-14 in the frame.

"(We) could have shut them down and would have won the game if we did our job," Solis said. "We didn't do it. It's football ... just got to have faith after this and make the playoffs and go on from there."

The Lee football team did nearly everything it needed to do to pull off the upset of Abilene High on Friday night.

But in the fourth quarter, Eagles quarterback Derek Scott found enough holes in Lee's secondary to make some key passes and help Abilene High escape Grande Communication Stadium with a 24-17 victory.

Lee's defense nullified Abilene High's running game, holding the Eagles to 15 yards rushing for the night, but Scott threw for 302 yards and two touchdowns, including a 41-yarder to Reese Childress to tie the game in the fourth quarter.

Then later in the fourth quarter, Scott connected with Payton Coffman on a 63-yard pass to set up the game-winning touchdown late in the final period.

While Lee (1-7) didn't give up a lot of big plays, they gave up enough to move its losing streak to seven games and fall to 0-3 in District 3-6A.

Steers win shootout with 6th-ranked Stephenville

Steers 64
Yellow Jackets 57

By Oscar LeRoy

BIG SPRING — Hunter Hill has a habit of taking over games when his team needs him the most.

In a shootout with No. 6 Stephenville on Friday night, Hill proved to be the difference in Big Spring's 64-57 wild victory with 356 total yards and seven touchdowns at Memorial Stadium.

Hill has had a few multiple-touchdown performances in his two years on the Steers varsity, including five touchdowns on five touches in last year's playoff win over Andrews.

Six of Hill's seven touchdowns went for 47 yards or more on Friday night.

The senior running back finished with 301 yards rushing and six TDs on 13 carries and added two catches for 55 yards.

The Steers (6-1, 2-0 in District 3-4A Division I) needed every bit of Hill's production on this night as the Yellow Jackets (6-2, 1-1) matched Big Spring's offensive firepower even without stud quarterback and Texas Tech commit Jarett Stidham for most of the game.

Stidham reportedly left with an injury to either his right throwing hand or arm during the Yellow Jackets' first series and was seen in street clothes in the second half. He only attempted two passes, completing one for 11 yards, while also rushing one time for 6 yards.

But the Yellow Jackets didn't skip much of a beat as backup quarterback Anthony Chavarria, along with running back Kaegun Williams kept them in the game.

Chavarria was 23-of-36 passing for 389 yards with six touchdowns and two interceptions. Williams, the super sophomore, rushed for 196 yards and two more scores.

This game started with a bang as three plays into the game Tobyn Tannehill (9-of-14 for 189 yards passing) found Hill for a 55-yard TD pass.

Then on Stephenville's first drive and

Royals beat Giants, take 2-1 World Series lead

Royals lead series 2-1

SAN FRANCISCO — Sparkling defense, a stingy bullpen and just enough timely hitting. That winning formula of fundamental baseball has put the Kansas City Royals ahead in the World Series.

They even looked comfortable in the tricky territory at unfamiliar AT&T Park.

Jeremy Guthrie outpitched fellow World Series newcomer Tim Hudson, four Royals relievers combined on four hitless innings and Kansas City beat the San Francisco Giants 3-2 Friday night for a 2-1 lead in the Fall Classic.

Alex Gordon hit a run-scoring double for his first hit of the Series in 10 at-bats and Lorenzo Cain added an RBI and some slick defense in right field as the Royals backed Guthrie with nifty glove work.

Eric Hosmer had a sixth-inning RBI single in an 11-pitch at-bat for his first World Series hit — on his 25th birthday.

Game 4 is tonight, with right-hander Ryan Vogelsong trying to get the Giants even against Kansas City lefty Jason Vargas.

Royals manager Ned Yost moved Cain from center field to right in place of Nori Aoki for a defensive boost in the trickiest position at AT&T Park. It paid off, too. Cain chased down Buster Posey's slicing line drive in the first for a pretty catch from his knees, then snagged Travis Ishikawa's sinking liner in the second.

Lady Dawgs win in straight sets

From staff reports

ODESSA — The Midland High volleyball team clinched at least a tie for second place in District 3-6A with a tight three-set victory against Odessa Permian on Friday at the Permian Field House.

The Lady Bulldogs handled the Lady Panthers easily in the first game but then held off Permian over the final two for the 25-18, 26-24, 26-24 victory.

Midland High improved to 29-7 overall and 6-3 in District 3-6A and is now tied with Abilene High for second spot. If Midland High beats Odessa High on Tuesday and Abilene High wins, the Lady Dawgs would tie for the spot and flip a coin to see which team is the second seed out of the district in the Class 6A playoffs.

The two teams split their season series.

Channing Burleson had a big game for the Lady Bulldogs with 18 kills, along with 14 digs and an assist. Jenna Gillean added 12 kills, Kristia Epley had 11, and Claire Lancaster had 10. Emily Key had 28 assists, and Emily Wickman had 20.

Even with the loss, Permian clinched the fourth and final playoff spot in District 3-6A thanks to Lee's loss to Abilene High on Friday.

Notes & quotes: Midland College saw its four-match winning streak end with a straight set loss at NMMI on Wednesday as the Lady Chaparrals were plagued with errors across the board — including 10 blocking errors — and only had a .130 attack percentage. ...MC coach Tammie Jimenez said Wednesday was one of those situations when NMMI had the gym packed with cadets in an attempt to rattle her team. She said whether it was nerves or distraction, the Lady Chaparrals didn't show up ready to play. "Our goal was to minimize our blocking errors and be more productive at the net and we had the opposite," Jimenez said. "I'm hoping that Wednesday's match was a wake-up call and our girls understand that every match is vital and that we must play our best and attempt to win in order to be in good position for the regional tournament. Hopefully that loss fueled their fire a little better and they are not so inconsistent." ... Against NMMI, Yahelis Villegas led MC with nine kills, Samantha Orta had 22 assists and Ashley Rocha added 13 digs. ... MC defeated WTC 3-1 in the teams' first meeting in Snyder on Sept. 24. ... Jimenez said the Lady Westerners are an aggressive team from its swinging at the ball to its blocking and making hustle plays. She said her team needs to contain the Lady Westerners' top two outside hitters in Lupita Quintanilla and Monahans grad Karley Pounds as both of those players gave MC the most trouble in the last meeting. ... The winner of this match will stay at worst in a two-way tie for second place in the WJCAC. MC, WTC and NMMI are all tied for second place, three matches behind first place Odessa College with three matches left in the regular season. "This is a big game for us. I'm, hoping we show up ready to play," Jimenez said.

STEERS

Chavarria's first play of the game, the quarterback tied it at seven when he found Ben Martin for a 54-yard touchdown pass.

The rest of the half continued to go back and forth before Big Spring took a 28-22 lead at the break when Hill scored on an electrifying 51-yard run. Hill started to go to his left, had a defender grab on to his jersey for a brief moment, then broke free from the grasp, reversed his course and then raced down the far sideline for the score.

Hill added touchdown runs of 70, 1, 63 and 47 yards in the second half as he either found an opening along the offensive line to race almost untouched or he would run so hard and was so strong that he would break potential tackles.

Hill's last TD of the night proved to be the game-clinching score of a game featuring two exciting offenses. With Big Spring holding a 57-50 lead and facing a fourth-and-1 from the 50-yard line, the Steers decided to go for it to try to ice the game. To no one's surprise, Hill got the ball and raced 50 yards for the touchdown to push the lead to 64-50 with 2:46 remaining in the game.

The win over Stephenville was the second over a sixth-ranked team in the Associated Class 4A poll as the Steers knocked off then No. 6 Graham 27-20 earlier in the year.

Ted Bishop out as PGA president

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. — Ted Bishop was ousted Friday as president of the PGA of America over a sexist tweet and Facebook post directed at Ian Poulter.

Bishop was irritated by remarks Poulter made in his book on the Ryder Cup captaincy of Nick Faldo in 2008 and Tom Watson this year. He referred to Poulter as "Lil Girl" on Twitter when stacking up Poulter's feats next to Faldo. In a Facebook post, he noted that Watson (with eight majors) and Faldo (with six majors and the Ryder Cup record for most points) were getting "bashed" by Poulter.

"Really? Sounds like a little school girl squealing during recess. C'MON MAN!" he wrote.

The PGA of America board voted Friday to remove him, meaning Bishop will not be invited to future PGA Championships and Ryder Cups, or any other courtesies extended to past presidents. He is the first PGA president to be ousted. Bishop had one month left on his two-year term.

Bishop, who has two daughters, apologized to Poulter and "anyone else I might have offended" in a statement.

But the head pro from Indiana went down swinging.

Bishop said his fellow PGA officers asked him to resign Friday and he refused, wanting instead to apologize in person to the board and let the process run its course.

"The board heard me out and then voted to impeach me," he said. "That is the due process, and I respect that, as painful as it might be."

In removing Bishop as president, the PGA of America board said the remarks were inconsistent with association's policies.

"The PGA of America understands the enormous responsibility it has to lead this great game and to enrich lives in our society through golf," PGA chief executive Pete Bevacqua said in a statement. "We must demand of ourselves that we make golf both welcoming and inclusive to all who want to experience it, and everyone at the PGA of America must lead by example."

The PGA of America has 27,000 members, about 1,100 of them women.

Jamie McMurray celebrates winning the pole with his son, Carter, after qualifying for Sunday's Sprint Cup Series auto race at Martinsville Speedway in Martinsville, Va., on Friday

McMurray bests Chase drivers, wins pole

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Jamie McMurray bumped all eight of NASCAR's championship contenders with a surprising pole-winning run Friday at Martinsville Speedway.

McMurray, who did not qualify this year for the Chase for the Sprint Cup title, set a qualifying record with a lap of 99.905 mph to nudge the six championship-eligible drivers who had advanced with him into the final round of qualifying. The Chip Ganassi Racing driver felt he had a shot at the pole based on a strong test session with his team earlier this month.

"We made the car better throughout the test and hit on a couple of things that really had a lot of speed in it, so I was pretty excited about getting here this weekend," McMurray said. "Our cars have been so quick the past two or three months. This is a great track for me, we had a really good test, and when things are going well, you get excited to come to the track."

Joey Logano and Matt Kenseth, who are both in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship field, qualified second and third.

Non-Chase driver Tony Stewart was fourth, followed by title contenders Denny Hamlin and Brad Keselowski.

It was a terrible qualifying session for Kevin Harvick, who appeared to twice slap the wall and failed to advance out of the first round. He'll start 33rd on Sunday, worst of all the Chase drivers.

"We just missed it today," Harvick said in a statement distributed by his team. "We were way too loose. We struggled in practice and just missed it in qualifying. We have to get better (Saturday) and be ready to go on Sunday."

It was an uncharacteristically poor effort for the Stewart-Haas Racing entry. Harvick has a series-leading eight poles this season and is consistently one of the fastest cars each weekend.

So to start near the back at the .526-mile paperclip puts him in a precarious position for the opening race of the third round of NASCAR's Chase.

The eight-driver field will be cut in half after three races, with the four remaining drivers scheduled to compete for the Sprint Cup title in the Nov. 16 finale at Homestead. A win in any of the next three earns a driver an automatic berth into the finale, so a fourth driver is guaranteed to make it on consistent finishes.

But at a track as small as Martinsville, the leaders can lap the back of the field quickly and Harvick could be in trouble early.

"I've been there and it ain't no fun," said Brad Keselowski, who qualified sixth. "But if you have a strong car and you can stay out of the early trouble, it doesn't seem to be too big of a hurdle."

Keselowski teammate Logano said Harvick will have to race hard to avoid being lapped by the leader, but will also be stymied by traffic.

"When you're that far back, the inside lane just keeps checking up a lot into the corners and you can shove the nose in pretty quick there," Logano said. "The next thing you know, you're in the back of a car. So I think that will probably be something you've got to be aware of, and obviously guys fighting to the bottom and the sense of urgency back there is very high, so you're not really saving any tires because you've got to go."

BULLDOGS

quarter, the Bulldogs defense held the Panthers to 224 yards in the game.

Midland High's offense struggled to sustain consistent drives for most of the night, and it cost the team in the fourth quarter. While the Panthers did control the ball for much of the period, Midland High had the ball twice and mustered only one play of over five yards — a 22-yard pass from quarterback Ryan Goodrum to Raekwon Anderson on the Bulldogs' opening offensive of the quarter.

"Their defense was just playing good," Goodrum said. "They were reading the plays well and we couldn't get anything going."

The Bulldogs' offense was further hampered by injuries to starting running back Darius Reed and tight end Trevor Abney. Neither Reed nor Abney played in the second half, and both were in walking boots on the field after the game.

Midland High had a 14-3 lead going into the fourth quarter because of two drives, the second of which was sparked by Goodrum's legs, as he rushed for 32 yards and a touchdown on a drive near the end of the third quarter.

The majority of the first half was rather benign, with Permian leading 3-0 with 4:30 remaining in the second quarter. But things got zany leading to Midland High's first score.

The Panthers pinned the Bulldogs at their own one-yard line to start the drive. Permian appeared to have MHS stopped on the one too, but a pass inference call extended the Bulldogs' drive. Two plays later, Reed was caught for a 10-yard loss, and at the end of the play sophomore Courtney McMaryion was ejected for fighting while also putting Midland High farther back.

But another pass interference penalty two plays later extended the drive once again. Midland High then began to move the ball, with another personal foul penalty netting a third first-down for MHS later on, and eventually scored on an 18-yard Reed touchdown reception.

Permian committed four penalties for 55 yards on the 99-yard Midland High drive, which put the Bulldogs up 7-3 at half.

But even Mojo's six penalties for 66 yards didn't make a huge dent in the game, as Midland High offset that with 11 penalties of its own.

The loss puts the Bulldogs at 1-2 in district with two games remaining. They've been in every game thus far, but costly mistakes and an inability to finish are combining toward the only thing that counts — wins.

"We've still got to make our statement," Solis said. "We're a way better team than this.

SERIES

of Famer Tony Gwynn, Kansas City produced just enough run support even without designated hitter Billy Butler. The Series shifted to AT&T Park and National League rules for three games.

The Giants had their six-game home winning streak in the World Series snapped. The unbeaten run dated to the 2002 wild-card club of Barry Bonds and Co. that lost in seven games to the Angels.

The Royals seemed unfazed by the fanfare and tough conditions in improving to 5-0 on the road this postseason. Of the first 56 times the World Series was tied 1-all, the Game 3 winner went on to win in 37 of those instances and four of the last five.

A cast of Giants Hall of Famers were celebrated on the field in a star-studded pregame featuring a "Play Ball!" chant by Huey Lewis.

Pinch-hitter Michael Morse hit an RBI double with none out in the sixth to chase Guthrie. Royals manager Ned Yost turned it over to his fantastic bullpen, and Kelvin Herrera immediately walked Gregor Blanco.

With the hard-throwing Herrera clocking 99-101 mph on the radar gun, Joe Panik had a tough time attempting a sacrifice bunt. His high-bouncing grounder still did the trick to advance both runners, and Buster Posey pulled the Giants to 3-2 on a groundout.

Then, the Royals shut down San Francisco the rest of the way.

Herrera worked 1 1-3 innings, rookie Brandon Finnegan got two outs in his World Series debut, and Wade Davis pitched a 1-2-3 eighth.

The four hitless innings of relief were the most in the World Series in 22 years.

Guthrie retired 10 straight during one stretch and combined with Hudson to retire 20 in a row. That was the longest Series streak since the Yankees' Don Larsen and the Brooklyn Dodgers' Sal Maglie retired the first 23 batters during Larsen's perfect game in 1956, according to STATS.

As a gorgeous Bay Area afternoon turned into a breezy night along the water, the 39-year-old Hudson left in the sixth to a rousing ovation from the crowd.

Maddon exercises opt-out, won't return to Tampa Bay

By Fred Goodall

Maddon

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Joe Maddon's highly successful run as manager of the Tampa Bay Rays is over.

After discussions on a new deal bogged down with the Rays, Maddon is now free to listen to offers from any club — a prospect the manager apparently found too difficult to resist.

Tampa Bay announced Friday that Maddon had exercised an opt-out clause in his contract. The Rays had expected to have him in their dugout at least through 2015, when his contract was due expire.

"We are turning the page to begin a process to look for a new manager," Rays president of baseball operations Matt Silverman said. "It's going to be a deliberate and comprehensive search, including both internal and external candidates."

Maddon managed the Rays for nine seasons, compiling a 754-705 record. Tampa Bay made the playoffs four times, won two AL East titles and appeared in the 2008 World Series.

He did not immediately return a telephone message from The Associated Press.

The 60-year-old did tell the Tampa Bay Times that leaving the Rays after nine seasons was a gut-wrenching decision.

"I have been doing this for a long time," Maddon told the newspaper. "I have never had this opportunity to research my employment on my terms. Never, never, never. And I think anybody given the same set of circumstances would do the same thing."

The departure is second major loss for the team in less than two weeks. Executive vice president of baseball operations Andrew Friedman left for the Los Angeles Dodgers on Oct. 14.

LEE

see," Lee head coach James Morton said. "I can't say enough about how proud I am about how they played. We had a lot of personnel issues with our kids, but they continued to fight."

The Rebels started the night without two starters in the secondary as safety Garrett Chalker was out with a knee injury and cornerback Darien Wallace was on the sidelines in street clothes.

As the game progressed, Lee's injury issues didn't get any better. Starting linebacker Blake Blessie went out with an apparent knee injury in the second quarter and tight end Kaleb Nunez didn't play the second half. Plus, quarterback Wesley Hall went down in the first half with a leg injury forcing Jon Schwalbach to take over signal calling duties.

But even with those injuries, Lee had a chance to win the game in the second half thanks to its defense. Lee stymied Abilene High's running game for much of the night and also put pressure on Scott, forcing an interception and a fumble.

"Lee was on the ropes a little bit, and they played rally hard, and we didn't play particularly well, especially offensively," Abilene High coach Steve Warren said. "But that had a lot to do with them defensively. They did some things that we didn't react very well to in the first half."

The Eagles (6-2, 2-1 in District 3-6A) grabbed some momentum late in the third quarter when a scrambling Scott hit Trey Dennis with a 25-yard TD pass at the 2:59 mark to tie the game at 10.

But on the first play from scrimmage on Lee's next possession, Terry Sims burst through the middle of the line for a 73-yard run to give Lee a 17-10 lead.

That was the last time Lee scored in the game.

The Eagles tied it 12 seconds into the fourth quarter when Scott hit Childress on a fourth down pass.

About eight minutes later, the Eagles took the lead when David Earles scored on a 9-yard run that was set up by Coffman's 63-yard catch and run.

Scott completed 20-of-29 passes for 302 yards.

"The only thing we could do was play hard because we didn't play very well in the first half," said Childress, who caught 12 passes for 159 yards and set the school mark for receptions in a season with 82. "We were just starting to feed off the defensive stops and the defense made stops all game. We fed off that energy."

After Sims' touchdown run, Lee had three possessions that didn't yield points and all three ended in Rebel territory.

Aron Dobbins rushed for 68 yards on 26 carries, while Sims had 78 yards on five carries. Schwalbach and Hall combined for 117 passing yards.

"Coming into this game, the odds weren't in our favor," said Lee senior linebacker Tyler Matthews. "We weren't predicted to win but we came out and executed well, and with all the injuries we had and the starters getting hurt we kept on fighting. It was little mistakes that cost us a lot."

Judge halts NJ's sports betting plan

By David Porter
Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. — A federal judge on Friday granted a request from the four major U.S. professional sports leagues and the NCAA to temporarily stop New Jersey from allowing legalized sports betting.

U.S. District Judge Michael Shipp issued a temporary restraining order after a request by the NFL, the NBA, the NHL, Major League Baseball and the NCAA. He said the leagues have shown that they would be irreparably harmed if the state's casinos and racetracks were permitted to allow sports betting.

The leagues' lawsuit against the state to permanently prevent it from allowing sports betting will proceed.

Gov. Chris Christie signed a law on Oct. 17 that effectively repeals the state's ban on sports wagering and allows it at racetracks and casinos.

"This is a temporary order while the core issues surrounding sports wagering in New Jersey are fully considered by the court," Christie spokesman Michael Drewniak said in a statement. "We continue to have full confidence in the strength and appropriateness of our position as we move forward in the litigation."

Monmouth Park racetrack said that its plan to start accepting bets on Sunday has been put on hold following the decision.

"While we are disappointed not to be able to start this Sunday, we are confident that sports betting will be coming to New Jersey in the very near future," Dennis Drazin, a legal consultant for the racetrack, said in a statement.

Racetrack officials pointed out that the restraining order applies only to the four pro leagues and the NCAA, and does not outlaw betting on other sports, including boxing, MMA fighting, NASCAR and soccer. They did not unveil plans to offer betting on those sports.

Unless Spike Dykes returns to the Texas Tech sidelines, don't expect the Red Raiders to go back to "three yards and a cloud of dust" days anytime soon.

But with the way running back DeAndre Washington is playing, second-year coach Kliff Kingsbury might want to make the ground game about as important as the "Air Raid" attack.

The 5-foot-8, 201-pound junior from Fort Bend Marshall has not only shown he's capable of carrying a big load for the Red Raiders (3-4, 1-3 in the Big 12), but gets big yards. His 5.9 yards per carry not only leads the Big 12 but his three games of 100 yards or more rushing also is tops in the conference.

It's not a stretch that Washington is having a breakout season, and it would be wise for Kingsbury to keep feeding him the ball in order to take pressure off sophomore quarterback Davis Webb. In the Red Raiders' 34-21 victory over Kansas last week, Washington rushed for 164 yards on 23 carries — his second straight 100-plus yard performance.

"I joke around with Coach Kingsbury all the time, trying to tell him we're going to try to get this into a running back school," said Washington, whose 622 yards this season is the most by a Red Raider through seven games since Ricky Williams had 1,168 yards in 1998. "As long as we keep a balanced attack, we're a very efficient offense."

The Red Raiders need to have that balanced attack when they visit No. 10 TCU (5-1, 2-1) at 2:30 p.m. today at Fort Worth's Amon G. Carter Stadium.

The Horned Frogs are riding high with the revival of junior quarterback Trevone Boykin and their new-look offense with co-offensive coordinators Doug Meacham and former Red Raider Sonny Cumbie running the show.

While it would take a gigantic effort for the Red Raider defense to slow down the Horned Frogs, the offense could get a big boost by getting the running game to complement its passing game.

Take last Saturday's game for example. On the four Red Raider drives that resulted in touchdowns, Tech did a nice job of mixing in the run with the pass. On drives that were pass heavy, those drives resulted in either a field goal or nothing at all. Coincidence?

"I've said it since I got here. If that's what we're having success at, we'll keep doing it," Kinsgbury said. "(Washington's) been really running well. The o-line has been opening up some holes, so we'll keep going to it. At the end of the day, we've got to be able to throw it and win on the outside with our receivers, and that is something that's still coming along

Texas quarterback Tyrone Swoopes throws pass against Oklahoma during a game on Oct. 11 at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas.

No. 11 Wildcats preparing to stop Texas, Swoopes

By Dave Skretta

MANHATTAN, Kan. — There was already plenty of competition for carries at Texas, where veteran running backs Johnathan Gray and Malcolm Brown have formed a potent one-two combination.

Now, the Longhorns are boasting a three-headed attack.

With the emergence of quarterback Tyrone Swoopes as a dangerous run-pass threat, Texas has a more diversified offense under Charlie Strong. And that's giving Kansas State coach Bill Snyder plenty of reason to worry heading into today's showdown in Manhattan.

"The guy that has really come front and center has been the quarterback," Snyder said while previewing No. 11 Kansas State's game against the Longhorns this week. "You can just see the progress that he has made. He is a talented, talented young guy."

That talent was evident in the Longhorns' 48-45 victory last week over Iowa State, when Swoopes threw for 321 yards and a touchdown while running for 95 yards and another score.

Swoopes was the leading rusher for the Longhorns (3-4, 2-2 Big 12) in the game.

"I told him he outshined us a little bit, so we need to pick it up," Brown said, with a laugh. "I'm definitely happy for him, but we need to catch up."

Meanwhile, Kansas State (5-1, 3-0) features its own run-pass quarterback.

Jake Waters threw for 225 yards and two touchdowns without a pick in last week's win at Oklahoma. He also ran for 51 yards. The senior has thrown for at least 200 yards in every game this season, and twice he's gone over 100 yards on the ground.

As Rebs win, Ole Miss balances Dixie and diversity

By Emily Wagster Pettus
Associated Press

OXFORD, Miss. — Ole Miss is enjoying its best football season in a half-century, and that's bringing new attention to Mississippi's flagship university.

The Rebels haven't played this well since 1962, which happens to be the same year troops stood up to mob violence to force the University of Mississippi, under federal court order, to admit James Meredith as its first black student.

School leaders have struggled ever since to improve both the image and the reality of a place once seen as a bastion of segregation.

The latest initiative is a diversity plan Chancellor Dan Jones is rolling out this year, addressing symbols and substance to make the campus more inclusive.

The United States is not yet "a truly post-racial society," Jones explained. "Our unique history regarding race provides not only a larger responsibility for providing leadership on race issues, but also a large opportunity — one we should and will embrace."

For example, the school will hold onto its Ole Miss nickname, but only for athletics. Although consultants said fans and alumni generally view it only as a chummy name for their favorite team, "Ole Miss" was what slaves called a plantation owner's wife, and critics say it is too rooted in the past to be used today.

I was proud of the way DeAndre played and really protecting the football all day."

And it's not just Washington. Sophomore Quinton White and true freshman Justin Stockton provide the most speed in the Tech backfield in quite some time. And now that senior Kenny Williams has gone back to playing running back after a stint at linebacker, the Red Raiders add a back with some power to go with experience.

But a reason that Williams got a chance to even play linebacker at the start of the season was the confidence the coaching staff had in Washington and his development.

That confidence has showed especially in the last two weeks as he carried the ball 29 times against West Virginia (a 37-34 loss) and another 23 times against the Jayhawks.

Washington said his offseason preparation has helped him carry a bigger load this year.

"This offseason, I really tried to push my body to the limit and get the most out of myself," he said. "Right now I'm feeling good, feeling healthy as I've felt in a while."

Washington added that running behind a more experienced offensive line has helped.

"It's like night and day," Washington said when asked about the difference in the offensive line this season compared to last. "Those guys put in so much work this offseason, this spring and this summer. It's just showing out there. The camaraderie they have, how comfortable they are. I know where they're going to be and it just makes things a lot easier for me. "

If they continue to hand the ball to Washington and the other running backs, it should make a lot things easier for Webb and the offense.

Longhorns' Jeff Swaim said. "He can run well, and he can also throw the ball. I think that's one thing he doesn't really get recognition for is he's a really good passer. They're real effective, and they do their jobs."

Kansas State is the only school in the Big 12 that has a winning record against Texas, an 8-6 mark that's been bolstered by five wins in the last six meetings.

That fact hasn't escaped Strong, who is in his first season with the Longhorns.

"We haven't done well at all," he said. "This is a road game, and it's one of those games that is all about our focus and our emotion, but it's all about our defense, too. We've got to play great defense. If we're going to go out there and get that game, we've got to play great defense, and it's about playing great defense on the road."

Here are a few things to keep in mind as the Wildcats take on the Longhorns:

PRESSURING JAKE: Texas already has 24 sacks this season, its best rate since 2008. But the Longhorns' front seven will be facing one of the Big 12's best offensive lines.

SPEAKING OF D: The Longhorns may have put up 48 points against Iowa State, but they also gave up 45. Cyclones quarterback Sam Richardson hurt them for 345 yards and two TDs through the air, and Aaron Wimberly ran for 110 yards and another score. "We didn't play the way we were supposed to, plain and simple," Texas cornerback Quandre Diggs said. "We'll get it fixed."

LOCKETT HISTORY: Kansas State wide receiver Tyler Lockett needs one receiving touchdown to tie Quincy Morgan for second-most in school history. Lockett would be three behind his father, Kevin Lockett, who still owns the record with 26 touchdown grabs.

PACING BIG 12: The Wildcats are the only team unbeaten in Big 12 play. Their only loss came against then-No. 5 Auburn, a 20-14 defeat in which they missed three field goals. If they have any hope of qualifying for the inaugural college football playoff, they need to handle business the rest of the season. That begins with today's game against Texas.

"It's about not letting our record, or what the media is talking about, or thoughts of winning the Big 12, or the playoffs at the end of the year, get to our head," Kansas State cornerback Morgan Burns said. "Texas is still a good football team, they will be hungry. We have a target on our back right now. We've got to stay focused."

Engagement, where African-American students can get mentors. The university plans to hire a vice chancellor for diversity. And, there's a scholarly effort to document not-so-flattering aspects of the school's history.

The plan builds on previous changes: Jones' predecessor, Robert Khayat, banned hand-held flagpoles from the stadium in 1997 after coaches complained that Confederate flag-waving was hurting recruiting, and about a decade ago, the university retired Col. Rebel, a mascot whose image recalled a crusty old plantation owner.

But there is no official talk now of doing away with the Rebels team name. Instead, Jones plans to add more black symbols on campus. Part of an athletics training facility was recently named after the school's first two black football players. A life-size statue of Meredith was dedicated outside the administration building in 2006.

Trying to put distance between Dixie and a school that has represented Southern elites since its founding in 1848 bothers Frank Hurdle, a developer in Oxford who edited The Daily Mississippian student newspaper in 1987-88.

"You just don't sweep every bit of history under the rug," Hurdle said. "I don't see any reason to act as if the past never happened. It's not healthy."

Some sports fans also are rolling their eyes — isn't it enough, they wonder, that the Rebels are finally ranked No. 3 in the nation in the Associated Press poll?

Athletics Director Ross Bjork would like to change the conversation, saying journalists don't write about segregationist Gov. George Wallace blocking the door to black students at the University of Alabama in the 1960s every time the Crimson Tide has a good year, nor do they mention that Mississippi State, now ranked No. 1, integrated later than Ole Miss.

But Bjork says the topic of race relations comes up when Ole Miss recruits for its football team, which is about 70 percent black. African-Americans comprise 14 percent of the overall student body.

Oxford is in the gently rolling hills of north Mississippi — cotton and kudzu country immortalized by Nobel laureate William Faulkner.

Civil War-era traditions have a tenacious hold here: As the Rebels trounced Tennessee 34-3 on Homecoming Saturday, cheers echoed down from the shiny modern stadium into a nearby cemetery where Confederate troops are buried. The University Greys, a unit of students and faculty who fought for the Confederacy, are commemorated in a stained-glass window in a campus building. A marble statue of a Confederate soldier salutes from atop a pillar near the administration building.

Kiffin's presence adds to Vols-Tide rivalry

By Steve Megargee
Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The Lane Kiffin factor has added intrigue to the increasingly lopsided Alabama-Tennessee rivalry.

Kiffin, who coached Tennessee in 2009 before leaving for Southern California, is back in the Southeastern Conference this season as Alabama's offensive coordinator. Kiffin's presence has made today's matchup a much-anticipated moment for Tennessee's fans, though both teams have downplayed the impact his return to Neyland Stadium will have on the game itself.

Nobody on Tennessee's current roster ever played for Kiffin. Tennessee coach Butch Jones says he has never even met Kiffin.

Both teams have said the recent results haven't diminished the meaning of this rivalry.

While Tennessee is attempting to boost an offense that hasn't scored a touchdown in its last two SEC games, Alabama is seeking to keep its playoff hopes alive and build on the momentum it established last week in a 59-0 blowout of Texas A&M. That game featured three touchdown passes and one touchdown run from Alabama quarterback Blake Sims, who strongly considered going to Tennessee when Kiffin was still coaching the Vols.

"If he didn't go to USC, that's where I would have" gone, Sims said.

Here are some things to watch today when Alabama plays at Tennessee:

VOLS' QB UNCERTAINTY: The accumulation of hits that Tennessee quarterback Justin Worley has taken this season could prevent him from playing against Alabama. Worley was knocked out of last week's 34-3 loss to No. 3 Ole Miss, and his status for Saturday's game has been uncertain all week.

THIRD DOWN: Alabama has converted 53 percent of its third-down opportunities to rank third among all Football Bowl Subdivision programs in that category. Tennessee ranks eighth nationally in third-down defense.

HOME vs. ROAD: Alabama hasn't been the same team away from home this season. Alabama has won all four of its home games by an average margin of 40.3 points. Alabama's 2-1 away from home (including one neutral-site game), and one of those victories was a one-point decision at Arkansas. This game represents a chance for Alabama to prove it can deliver a dominant road performance.

Series Record: Texas Tech leads 30-23-3.
WHAT'S AT STAKE
The Horned Frogs are trying to keep pace with a bevy of one-loss teams that are waiting for next week's debut of the rankings from the College Football Playoff selection committee. The Red Raiders are trying to improve to 3-0 against TCU since the former Southwest Conference foes were reunited in the Big 12 when TCU joined in 2012.
KEY MATCHUP
TCU QB Trevone Boykin vs. young Texas Tech secondary. Boykin, fourth nationally in total offense at 370 yards per game, threw for a career-high 410 yards in a 42-9 rout of Oklahoma State. Freshman cornerbacks Tevin Madison and Nigel Bethel II are seeing plenty of playing time for Texas Tech, along with sophomore Justis Nelson.
PLAYERS TO WATCH
Texas Tech: RB DeAndre Washington is on a two-game streak of setting a career high in yards rushing. He had 138 in a loss to West Virginia two weeks ago and 164 in last week's 34-21 win over Kansas. That was the most yards rushing for pass-happy Texas Tech since Taurean Henderson had 169 against Kansas in 2004.
TCU: WR Josh Doctson missed a school record by a yard when he finished with 225 yards receiving, including touchdowns of 77 and 84 yards, against Oklahoma State. He's the only player in TCU history to score a touchdown for and against the Horned Frogs. The Wyoming transfer had a 7-yard scoring grab in Laramie, Wyoming, in 2011.
FACTS & FIGURES
TCU has taken at least a 14-0 lead in all six games this season, getting touchdowns on the opening drive five times. ... The Red Raiders snapped an eight-game conference losing streak last week against the Jayhawks. ... TCU co-offensive coordinator Sonny Cumbie was Texas Tech's quarterback in 2004 and spent the past four seasons as an assistant coach at his alma mater. ... Texas Tech QB Davis Webb needs 160 yards passing to take Cumbie's spot at No. 9 on the school's career list. Cumbie had 5,116 yar.

Texas (3-4, 2-2 Big) at No. 11 Kansas State (5-1, 3-0 Big 12), 11 a.m. (ESPN)
Line: Kansas State by 10.
Series Record: Kansas State leads 8-6
WHAT'S AT STAKE
The Wildcats are trying to build on a victory over No. 17 Oklahoma while impressing voters in the new College Football Playoff. The Longhorns snapped a two-game skid by beating Iowa State last weekend, but they're still in search of a signature victory under Charlie Strong.
KEY MATCHUP
Texas QB Tyrone Swoopes against the Kansas State defense. Swoopes threw for 321 yards and ran for 95 more last weekend against the Cyclones. The Wildcats have had a bend-but-don't break attitude, giving up big chunks of yards to the Sooners but also shutting down Auburn earlier this season.
PLAYERS TO WATCH
Texas: RBs Malcolm Brown and Johnathan Gray are one of six tandems that ran for at least 750 yards each last season. Their ability to keep the chains moving will take the pressure of Swoopes to carry the load.
Kansas State: DB Danzel McDaniel has earned a reputation for being one of the hardest hitters on the team. He also had a pick-six last weekend against Oklahoma.
FACTS & FIGURES
Kansas State is the only Big 12 school to lead an overall series against Texas. The Wildcats have won five of the last six. ... Texas has 24 sacks through seven games, its best mark since 2008. ... The Longhorns have 11 interceptions this season. They had 10 all of last year. ... WR John Harris has six TD catches through seven games, third-most in Texas history. Jordan Shipley has the record with nine. ... The Wildcats' next victory will be the 500th in school history. .. Kansas State has scored at least 30 points 22 times in its last 32 games. ... Wildcats QB Jake Waters has a 154.9 quarterback rating, the best in school history. His completion rate of 62.68 percent is third-best behind Carson Coffman and Matt Miller. ... WR Tyler Lockett needs two receiving TDs to pass Quincy Morgan (23) for second-most in Kansas State history. His father, Kevin Lockett, holds the record with 26.

No. 22 WEST VIRGINIA (5-2, 3-1 Big 12) at OKLAHOMA STATE (5-2, 3-1), 2:30 p.m. (ESPN)
Line: Oklahoma State by 1.
Series Record: West Virginia leads 3-2.
WHAT'S AT STAKE
The winner remains within a game of Big 12 leader Kansas State, and both teams have yet to play the Wildcats. Oklahoma State is coming off a blowout loss to TCU, and another loss would further stall the excitement generated by its unexpected hot start. West Virginia is coming off a big win over Baylor, and another win would give the Mountaineers momentum heading into a showdown with TCU.
KEY MATCHUP
West Virginia QB Clint Trickett against Oklahoma State's secondary. West Virginia's attack is relentless under former Oklahoma State assistant Dana Holgorsen. Trickett ranks third nationally with 360.7 yards passing per game. Oklahoma State has the worst pass defense in the Big 12, allowing 288.4 yards per contest.
PLAYERS TO WATCH
West Virginia: WR Kevin White leads the nation with 145.7 yards receiving per game. He ripped Maryland for 216 yards, Oklahoma for 173 and Baylor for 132 and two touchdowns. He has 10 or more catches in four of his seven games.
Oklahoma State: RB Desmond Roland. He's the No. 4 rusher in the Big 12, averaging 79.2 yards per game. The Cowboys need him to chip away at West Virginia's defense as QB Daxx Garman has a chance to hit the deep ball.
FACTS & FIGURES: West Virginia ranks sixth nationally in total offense. ... Both teams allow 27.1 points per game. ... Oklahoma State scores 93 percent of the time in the red zone. ... West Virginia's Mario Alford is third in the conference with 34.8 yards per kickoff return. Oklahoma State's Tyreek Hill is fourth at 27.3 per runback. ... West Virginia won last year's game 30-21.

NORTH TEXAS (2-5, 0-3 C-USA) at RICE (3-3, 1-1), 11 a.m. (FSN)
Line: Rice by 14 1/2.
Series Record: Tied 2-2.
WHAT'S AT STAKE
The Mean Green are trying to avoid their first four-game losing streak under coach Dan McCarney, who is in his fourth season. They haven't had a winless October since 2008. The Owls are trying to win their fourth straight after starting 0-3, and a victory would avenge their only loss in Conference USA play last year.
KEY MATCHUP
Rice RBs Jowan Davis and Darik Dillard vs. North Texas LB Derek Akunne. Davis (517) and Dillard (407) give Rice the only pair of running backs from the same team in the top 10 in the C-USA in rushing, while Akunne leads the league with 65 total tackles. He has 44 in the past three games and needs 26 to surpass his career high of 90.
PLAYERS TO WATCH
North Texas: WR Carlos Harris had just the second 200-yard receiving game for North Texas since 1992 last week against Southern Miss, getting 216 yards on 15 catches in a 30-20 loss. He leads C-USA in yards receiving per game (79.7).
Rice: QB Driphus Jackson threw for a career-high three touchdowns in a 41-21 victory over Army in the Owls' last game two weeks ago. He has thrown for 1,185 yards and 11 touchdowns with three interceptions and ranks 26th nationally in pass efficiency.
FACTS & FIGURES
North Texas has had 17 players make their first career starts this season, second nationally behind Tulsa ... Three Rice defensive backs have combined for 21 career interceptions. Bryce Callahan is tied for fourth on the school's career list with 11, while Malcolm Hill has six and Julius White has four. ... The Mean Green have scored five times on defense and special teams this season, bringing the total to 21 since McCarney took over in 2011 (19 touchdowns, two safeties). ... Dillard leads Rice with seven touchdowns, giving him 11 for his career. Older brother Jarret Dillard holds the NCAA record with 60, giving them 71 combined.

MEMPHIS (3-3, 1-1 American Athletic) at SMU (0-6, 0-2), 11 a.m. (ESPNews)
Line: Memphis by 23.
Series Record: Tied 3-3.
WHAT'S AT STAKE
The Tigers can match their highest win total from the past six seasons and be above .500 this late in the year for the first time since finishing 7-6 after losing to Florida Atlantic in the 2007 New Orleans Bowl. The Mustangs are looking for their first win in their fifth game under interim coach Tom Mason, who took over when June Jones resigned two weeks into the season.
KEY MATCHUP
SMU offense vs. Memphis LB Tank Jakes. The Mustangs have as many touchdowns as they do quarterbacks who have seen meaningful playing time: four. But they appear to have settled on junior walk-on Garrett Krstich, who gets his fourth straight start. SMU has the second-worst turnover margin in the country at minus-12, and Jakes leads the nation with four forced fumbles in six games (0.67 per game). He's third nationally in tackles for loss and seventh in sacks.
PLAYERS TO WATCH
Memphis: RB Sam Craft, the son of former Memphis receiver Ray Craft, had 170 yards rushing and a touchdown on 38 carries in his first career start against Cincinnati two games ago after moving from receiver. He's now the team's leading rusher with 301 yards.
SMU: Kevin Pope is still the Mustangs' leading rusher — with a mere 105 yards — but that might change soon since Mason moved him back to linebacker after he began the season as the starting running back. Prescott Line, younger brother of former SMU running back Zach Line, had 36 yards on eight carries last week against Cincinnati while Pope was limited to one carry for 3 yards.
FACTS & FIGURES
Memphis is playing consecutive games against the Texas teams in the AAC. The Tigers had five turnovers in a 28-24 loss to Houston at home two weeks ago. ... SMU is last in the nation in total defense (549 yards per game) and second-to-last in total offense (249 yards per game). ... Memphis LB Ryan Coleman tied an NCAA record last year with two fumble recoveries for touchdowns against SMU as the Tigers lost 34-29 after falling behind 31-3 at halftime. ... The Mustangs have been outscored 288-39.

Occasional hookups keep flame alive for 10 years

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I have known "Justin" for 10 years. I'm very interested in him. I'm sure he knows it, but we have never talked about it. Once in a blue moon we "hook up," and I'm usually the one to set the date up.

We're friends on social media, but weeks — even months — can pass without our speaking to each other. Justin and I have no mutual friends, so I can't "accidentally" bump into him at gatherings or anything like that.

I honestly don't mind hooking up with him because he's the only one I do that with. But it does hurt when I don't hear from him afterward. What should I do? It's obvious I'm head over heels for him — he can't be that blind! — PLAIN JANE IN STOCKTON, CALIF.

DEAR JANE: If Justin was interested in more than an occasional hookup, he'd be the one calling you, and it wouldn't be once in a blue moon. Ten years is long enough to chase an emotionally unavailable man. If this was meant to be, it would have already happened, and you'd be more than friends on social media.

DEAR ABBY: I'll be 30 soon. My friends and I have drifted apart because we're all in different stages of our lives. Some of us still frequent the bar scene; others have gotten married or dropped off the radar. My closest friend is so wrapped up in "mommy blogs" and all things "baby" that she's no longer able to discuss much else.

I don't have children, and I'm tired of going to bars. I'm in a happy, committed relationship, but neither of us wants to focus on marriage for a few years. How do people connect with others at this stage of the game? — FRIENDLESS IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR FRIENDLESS: One way is to expand your interests. You and your boyfriend should join groups and meet people with whom you'll have some things in common. If you're interested in politics, the next two years should give you plenty of opportunity to meet new people. Volunteering is another way to expand your circle of acquaintances. While you won't make dear friends overnight — friendships usually take a while to grow — the more people you meet, the greater your chances will be of developing meaningful relationships.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 20-year-old college student who is a virgin. I think this is the time to date people and get a better understanding of who I am and what I like in men. When I tell guys I'm a virgin, they don't want to talk to me anymore. When is the best time to bring it up, and how do I do that in conversation? — DIAMOND IN THE EAST

DEAR DIAMOND: You may be jumping the gun and announcing your status prematurely. The subject of one's virginity — or lack thereof — is relevant at the time when there's a reason to anticipate there will be intimacy in a couple's relationship.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Oct. 25, 2014:

This year you will discover that your first judgment often is wrong. Your immediate circle seems to be more open, so if you give up rigidity and decide to understand those around you better, your relationships will improve. If you are single, you could meet someone with ease through one of your friends or just in your daily travels. Give yourself time before deciding this is "it." If you are attached, you find that with more openness, your relationship develops more depth. SAGITTARIUS can be an expensive friend.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Someone who has been difficult will want to make amends. You might go overboard, as you'll feel so relieved. Try to avoid a serious talk at the moment, and simply use this period to add to your interactions. Tonight: You finally hear an explanation that makes sense.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Others seem far more relaxed and willing to be open. Seize the moment rather than question why. Overthinking could stop you from happily getting into the mood of the moment. A family member, even a beloved pet, will sense the upbeat energy. Tonight: Let the fun begin.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ A jovial interaction will set a positive tone to the day. You could find that a problem that has been haunting you is cleared up. Avoid having a major discussion right now, and keep your interactions light. Much information will head your way shortly. Tonight: Play it by ear.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Your creativity will flourish when making plans with a loved one. A child that can't be ignored won't allow you to look the other way. Do not push to have your way right now. Be receptive to what others have to say. Tonight: Make the most of the night.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You might want to stay home, yet you could be delighted to be with friends. Give into that impulse and decide to combine the two. Opt for a spontaneous party. Not only will you be delighted, others will be too. Be careful with a difficult friend. Tonight: Know what you want.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Be receptive in a conversation. Return calls, read your paper and enjoy what occurs spontaneously. A child or loved one might be changing right in front of you. Nevertheless, you could be surprised by this person's behavior. Tonight: Hang out with friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ You have a tendency to go overboard and overindulge. You might be sitting on a grievance or a problem that you are not ready to air out. As a result, you could feel less in sync with a partner than you would like. Communication will open up soon. Tonight: Your treat.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ You are always a dominant personality, but it will be even more evident today. You seem to attract many different people with many different opinions. Allow your creativity to emerge, and help resolve the difference. Being congenial and open will work. Tonight: As you like.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★ You might feel an emotional undertow regarding a money matter and your dealings with someone else. Your creativity and imagination will merge together to help you come up with a solution. Use your instincts. Tonight: Do what you want. Refuse to be pushed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Emphasize what is going on with others. You might be surprised by how good news could set off a celebration. Friends who often don't see you will want to catch up on news. Unexpected events might force you to refocus. Tonight: Make calls, then decide.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ Check in with an older relative or friend. You might feel as if you need to handle certain responsibilities first; however, the day seems to be filled with obligations. Recognize that this is your weekend as well. Try to schedule some free time. Tonight: Indulge a little. You deserve it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Take off for a day adventure. Head out to a flea market with a friend. Difficulty with a close loved one will dissolve if you detach and let go of preconceived judgments when having a long-overdue conversation. Tonight: Relax to an exotic dinner and great music.

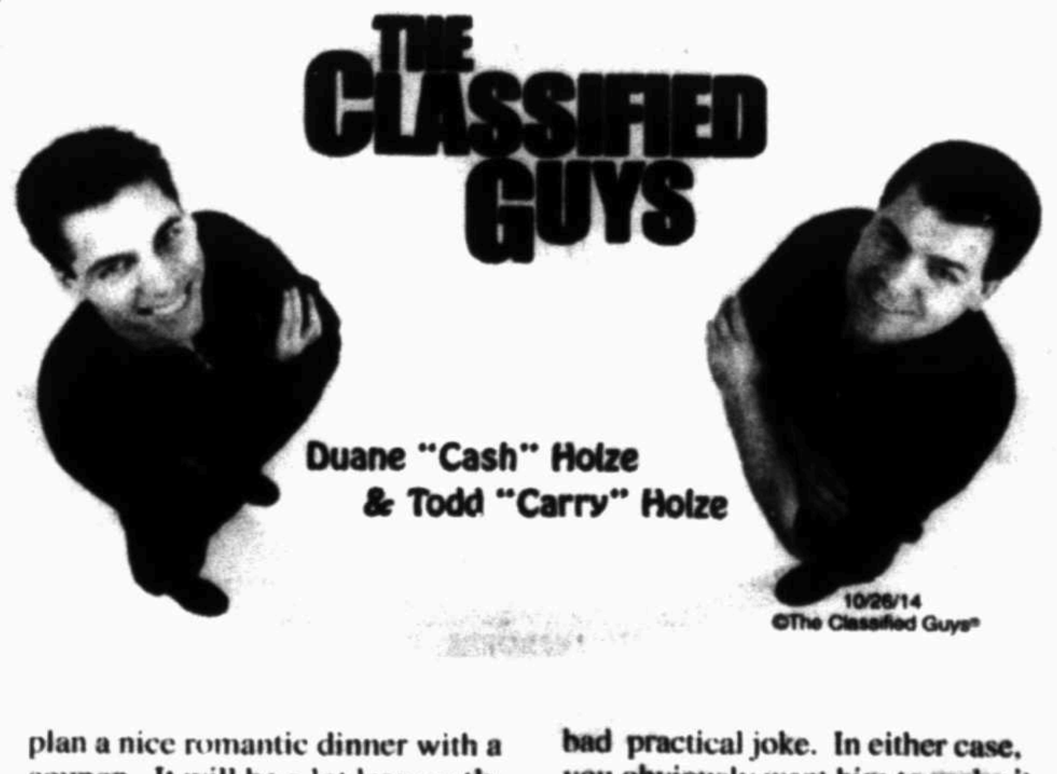
Ask the Guys



Dear Classified Guys,
My husband is a real cheapskate. Every time we go out to dinner, he brings a "buy one, get one free" coupon. So you can imagine my surprise when I opened the classified section this year and saw that he placed a Special Announcement for my birthday. There in large print at the top of the column was, "Happy 50th Birthday to my lovely wife Nancy." He would have gotten tremendous bonus points except for one little fact. I was only turning 40! Now he's looking for a way to dig out of this whole mishap. Maybe you guys can help him.

Carry: We'd love to help your husband, but it's never a good idea to hold on to an anchor as it's going down. This seems like a mistake your husband will hear about for the next 10 years.

Cash: At least by then the advertisement will be correct.

Carry: There are two things a husband should never get wrong: his wife's age and her weight.

Cash: It could have been worse. He could have accidentally mentioned weight in the ad as well. Maybe next year you both can plan a nice romantic dinner with a coupon. It will be a lot less costly in many ways.

Carry: Every marriage seems to have some mishap. When my wife and I got married, one of the ushers had her walking down the aisle long before the music started. When she reached the alter, I commented that she must have been in a hurry to marry me. To this day, we still joke about it.

Cash: Except, she claims that she was looking for the exit and accidentally took the wrong door!

Carry: We don't know if your husband's mistake was a typo or a bad practical joke. In either case, you obviously want him to make it up to you. So to avoid having this matter come up for the next ten years, come up with a list of things that he can do to apologize.

Cash: When he completes his list, you need to forgive him and let it go. It should not be something that comes up whenever you're mad at him. With any luck, you both will be laughing about it for years to come.

Carry: And if not, you could take the advice of my wife: Nothing says you're sorry like flowers, chocolate and diamonds!

Fast Facts

Costly Typos

Typos are problems that everyone tries to avoid, but they do occur in newspapers, memos and other documents. While most are harmless or create a funny headline, one was upsetting to thousands of people. The Daily News, one of the major newspapers in New York City, accidentally misprinted their scratch off card for a promotional game in one of their issues. Thousands of readers thought that they had won the $100,000 grand prize, but were even more surprised when they learned it was just a typo.

How Old Are You Now?

We all like to sing "Happy Birthday". However, that catchy little tune is a copyrighted song that nets Warner/Chappell Music nearly 2 million dollars in royalties. While consumers are free to sing it at family gatherings, commercial enterprises must pay a royalty whenever they use it. However, their copyright is now the subject of a class-action lawsuit claiming the song is actually public domain and cannot be copyrighted. To date, no decisions have been made by the courts.

Reader Humor

Playoffs

Whenever anything controversial happens in our community, the local newspaper publishes a question and asks its readers to call and leave their opinion on a recorded telephone line. The next day, they publish everyone's response in the newspaper.

One weekend, a 75-year-old man ran naked across a football field at a big game to oppose a local ordinance. The newspaper posed a question the very next day that asked, "What's your opinion about the 75-year-old man who streaked the football game in his birthday suit?"

Among all the serious political responses, there was one caller with a sense of humor. He said, "I think his birthday suit needs ironing."
