Hostage flown to Switzerland for medical aid

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Richard Queen, the first American hostage freed from Iran in more than seven months, arrived in Switzerland today and was whisked off to a Zurich hospital for treatment of a reported psychological or neurological problem.

Iran's revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered the 28-year-old vice consul's release because of his illness. But an official in Tehran said this did not mean any change in Iran's attitude toward the 52 Americans who remained behind, in their 251st day of captivity today.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preliminary medical tests indicate Richard Queen, the American hostage freed from Iran, has a neurological problem involving some lack of coordination and stiffness of his left arm, the State Department said Friday.

Queen is hospitalized in Zurich, Switzerland, and his parents were en route from New York via London to be with him, spokesman John Trattner said.

The 28-year-old diplomat told Swiss doctors he had been treated well during his four-day stay in a Tehran hospital, Trattner said.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered him freed from Iran on Thursday for what the Iranian leader called humanitarian reasons.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman, who reported Queen's arrival, said the freed American would remain at a Zurich hospital for an indefinite time for treatment. A State Department spokesman said his parents would be flown here to join him later today.

Queen, who grew up in Scarsdale, N.Y., was met by the U.S. ambassador to Switzerland, Richard Vine, when the scheduled Swissair jetliner touched down in Zurich at 11:16 a.m — 6:16 a.m. EDT — after a six-hour flight from Tehran.

The young man was immediately placed on a stretcher, taken to an ambulance that had been waiting on the tarmac, and driven to the hospital.

Security guards kept reporters from talking with Queen. Fellow passengers said they had not noticed anything unusual aboard the plane and did not recognize Queen.

He was accompanied to Zurich by an official of the Swiss Embassy in Tehran, which looks after U.S. interests in Iran.

The U.S. Embassy spokesman, Peter Reuss, said he had no idea about Queen's condition but that U.S. doctors would be flown to Switzerland from Germany or Austria to join Swiss specialists in examining the freed hostage.

Queen told reporters in Tehran as he was put aboard the flight to Zurich that his illness was "something with the brain. Some sort of virus or something. I'm not sure," CBS News reported.

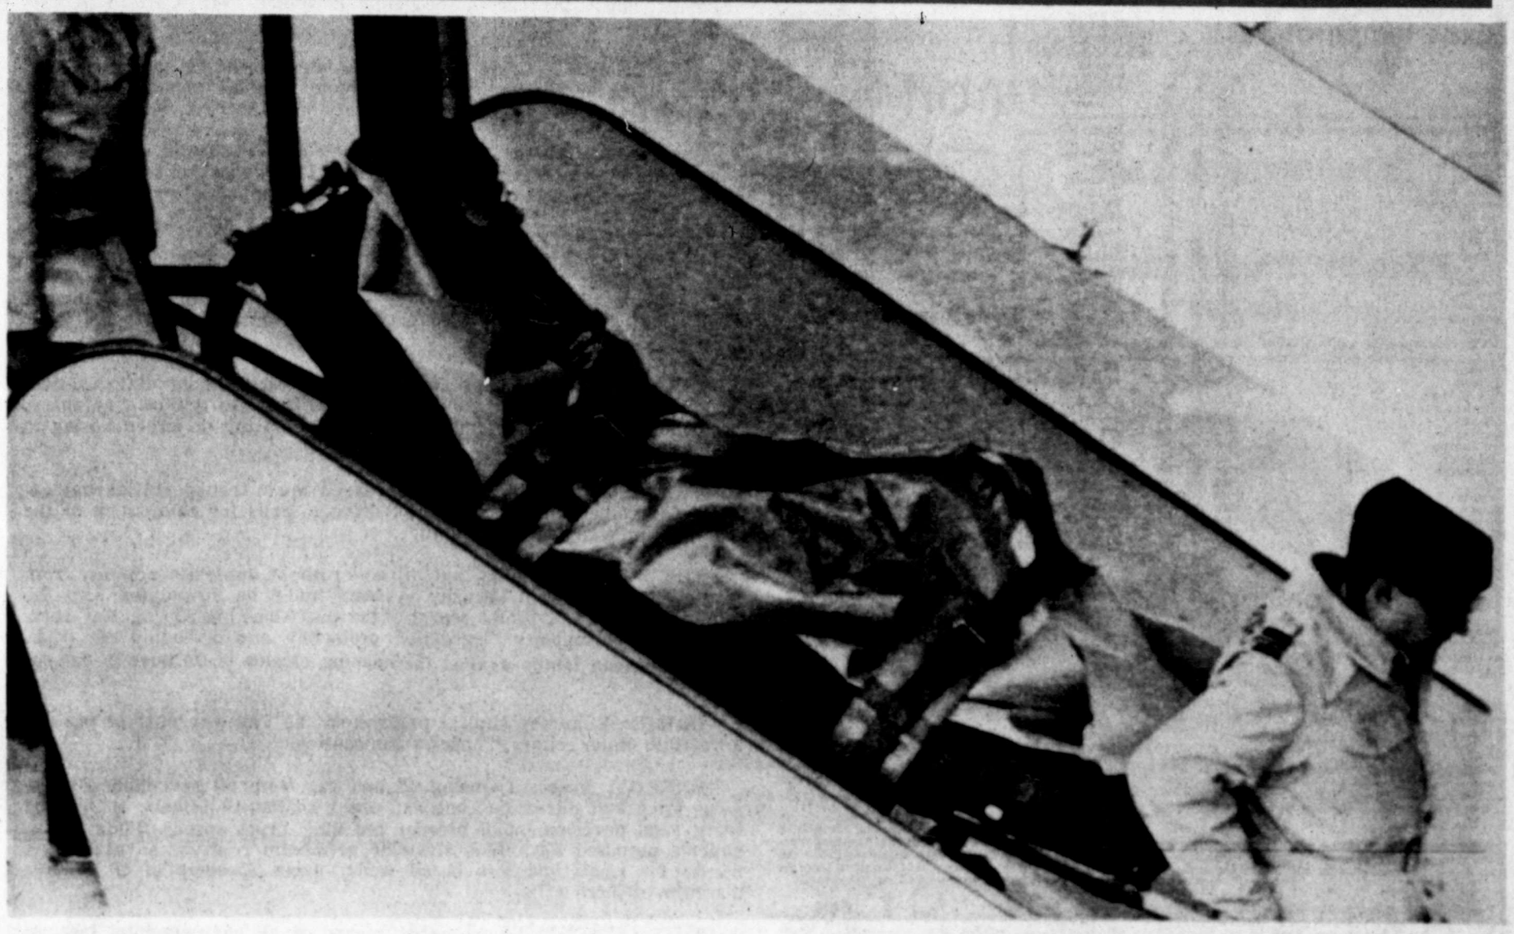

"I feel a lot better right now, in the last hour," he said. "I'll just be coming home as soon as possible. That's all I can say."

Queen had been treated at Martyrs' Hospital in northern Tehran, where a medical duty officer said he "seemed to have a psychiatric problem," The Washington Post reported from Iran.

A reporter for station KEZY in Anaheim, Calif., said a doctor at the Tehran hospital mentioned paraplegia — paralysis — in a telephone interview.

The hostage's father, Harold Queen, said that in a letter in February his son said he "had some kind of a twisted spine or something like that." Two months later, a minister who visited Queen said he told him an insensitivity had developed in his fingers.

The elder Queen said he doubted his son had a psychological disorder, judging from the content and spirit of his letters. Harold Queen and his wife talked to reporters during a visit with relatives Thursday in Scarsdale.

After 250 days as a hostage in Iran, American Embassy vice consul Richard Queen this morning is carried into the Zurich airport. Queen, of Lincolnville, Maine, was released Thursday by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini for "humanitarian reasons" and will remain in a Zurich hospital until his illness is diagnosed. Platform committee completes job

Reagan expected to approve GOP positions

DETROIT (AP)— The Republican platform committee finished its work today on a 1980 issues document, delivering a searing blast at the foreign policy and national defense programs under both President Carter and the Democratic controlled Congress.

"Never before in modern history has the United States endured as many humiliations, insults and defeats as it has during the past four years — our ambassador murdered, our embassy burned, our warnings ignored, our diplomacy scorned, our diplomats kidnappped," said an introductory section to the platform adopted unanimously today.

The platform preamble sighted "unparalleled unity within our ranks" and said the Republican party, under Ronald Reagan, could "make America great again."

The platform asserted that "America is adrift" and headed toward "one of the most dangerous and disorderly periods in history."

"In ultimate humiliation, militant terrorists in Iran continue to toy with the lives of American diplomats," it asserted.

The proposed 1980 platform, now being reviewed by Reagan in Los Angeles, reflects a "rightward move" in the nation, according to the party's platform chairman.

Calling for sharply higher defense spending, a broad tax cut and efforts to strengthen the family, the platform was tentatively approved in committee Thursday night by drafters who sought to avoid contentious debate when the convention opens next week.

Meanwhile, advocates of a plank conspicuously missing from the platform — support for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment — sought ways to dramatize their cause.

Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., urged Reagan to meet with delegates who support the ERA to explain what role women would have in his administration. And a national women's group planned a protest march at Cobo Hall here next week for the opening of Republican National Convention.

With its preamble written, the 106-member resolutions committee finished work on the bulk of the document with acceptance of a foreign policy and defense section carefully shepherded by Reagan loyalists.

These planks in particular, reflect Reagan's statements and positions.

Committee Chairman Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said today that while parts of the platform appear more conservative than the 1976 document, he does not think this will hurt Republicans in November.

"I think the country has moved to the right and I think the Republican party reflects that rightward move in the country," Tower said. He was interviewed on NBC's "Today" show.

He called the overall product "a pretty moderate platform" and denied that the Reagan campaign organization "was heavy handed in bludgeoning people into voting a certain way."

U.S. Postal Service planning draft registration procedure

The U.S. Postal Service in Midland is making arrangements for the Selective Service registration required for men born during 1960 or 1961, according to Midland Postmaster D.E. Holster.

In Midland, men may register at the Main Post Office, 100 E. Wall St.; Village Station, 2315 W. Louisiana Ave.; Graves Station, 3304 W. Wadley Ave.; and Air Terminal Station, Midland Regional Airport.

Men born in 1960 will register during the week of July 21. Those born in 1961 will register during the week of July 28.

The Postal Service has suggested that those born in January, February or March register on Monday; those born in April, May or June register on Tuesday; July, August or September, register on Wednesday; October, November or December, register on Thursday.

Each service window at the postal facilities will have brochures and registration forms available. The registrant should take the form to a lobby table and complete the form. Instructions for filling out the form are listed on the back.

After he completes the form and signs it, he should take the completed form — with drivers license or other identification — to a window clerk who will date the top and bottom parts of the form and initial it.

All inquiries from registrants concerning how the registration will affect them are to be answered by the Selective Service and not the Postal Service, said Holster.

The registrant won't receive a receipt. Confirmation will come by mail from Selective Service headquarters.

Socialist Workers Party files ballot petitions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' Socialist Workers Party apparently qualified for the November ballot Thursday with a stack of petitions they said contained the signatures of 40,000 eligible Texas voters.

Two other third party and independent political campaigns announced said they would submit their qualifying petitions on Monday, the deadline for ballot approval.

The Texas Libertarian Party said earlier it would turn in more than 55,00 signatures, more than twice the 23,700 needed for third parties.

A spokesman for Rep. John Anderson said Thursday the former Republican turned independent would submit about 60,000 "raw signatures" on Monday. Anderson needs sanction of 40,719 eligible voters to qualify him for the ballot.

John A. Sarge, Houston steel worker and Socialist Worker party candidate for the unexpired term on the Texas Railroad Commission, gave the Secretary of State petitions that he said contained more than 40,000 signatures.

"In filing far above the legal requirement for ballot status," Sarge told a news conference, "the Socialist Workers Party strongly protest the undemocratic and restrictive character of the Texas election laws. We have been forced to spend thousands of dollars and countless hours collecting and processing signatures, while the Democratic and Republican parties are guaranteed permanent ballot status without petitioning."

Milton Mallory, attorney for the Secretary of State, said the signatures would be counted and if there appeared to be more than 23,700 then preliminary ballot approval would be given. Later, a random check will be made of authenticity of signatures.

Sarge said 85 to 90 percent of the signatures were accompanied by voter certificate numbers.

If finally approved, the Texas ballot will include a Socialist Worker Party column with their candidate for president, Andrew Pulley, and Matilde Zimmerman, for vice president.

Texas candidates other than Sarge include congressional candidates Arturo Ramirez for Dist. 18, Laura Garza, Dist. 23, and Lea Sherman, Dist. 5.

Gordon Adkins, a Dallas real estate man, told a news conference Thursday that he hoped to have 40,000 signatures by Monday as an independent candidate who represents the People's Party. He said God directed him to run for president on Feb. 14 "while hitch-hiking a plane ride ... at 13,000 feet in the midst of a mechanical failure."

Adkins said Thursday he had tried several times to resign from the race, but "each time God has told me to stay in the race, that I am right on schedule."

Adkins said he mailed letters to every Texas newspaper last Sunday asking them to print his appeal along with a blank petition form for the 40,719 signatures needed.

"This is an last-minute appeal with a short fuse but with God willing it will be enough," Adkins said.

Three killed, 20 injured in suicide attempt

WANTAGH, N.Y. (AP) — "My kids are in there, my kids are in there," cried Maureen Murphy as a young man sped away in her car. Before the car came to a halt, three people were dead and 20 were injured. The driver, who police said was trying to commit suicide, was badly hurt but survived.

Robert Kabolowsky, a 20-year-old Long Island man whom a neighbor called "a beautiful young man, always with a smile on his face," was in critical condition after the incident Thursday. Police said he would be charged with murder, assault and grand larceny if he lived.

Police said the rampage started when Kabolowsky, despondent over losing his job at an automotive repair shop last week, got into an argument with his father, Murray, 50.

After smashing his head against a plate-glass sliding door, the younger Kabolowsky apparently went into the kitchen, ripped out a drawer full of knives and tried to kill himself with them. When his parents tried to stop him he cut his father and bit his mother, Lillian, officials said.

Police and neighbors reported that Kabolowsky then raced into the street, wearing only his underwear, and stole a car from Stephen Masurkewicz, who was loading his boat onto the car's trailer.

"I had the rope from the electric winch in my hand when I heard someone yell, 'Bob, don't take that car, it's not yours," Masurkewicz said.

According to officials, Kabolowsky drove on and collided with a car driven by Frances Mastrelli, 29, of Wantagh. With her were her 4-year-old son and Jane Donahue of Wantagh and her two sons.

All five were in serious condition, police said.

Maureen Murphy, of Massapequa, was driving by when she saw the crash. She stopped, and Kabolowsky allegedly pulled her from the driver's seat and sped off with her two children, Dennis Jr., 4, and Jennifer, 8, and another child, Jennifer Laprae, 8, in the back seat.

David Briggs, another bystander, gave chase in his car, and Mrs. Murphy went with him. "All she kept saying was, 'My kids are in there, my kids are in there,'" said Briggs.

At speeds police estimated from 70 to 80 miles an hour, the Chrysler careened around curves in Wantagh Park, jumped a curb, crashed through a fence and plowed into a one-story concession stand.

One child at the stand, Michael Grimes, 10, of Wantagh, was killed instantly, police said. Another, William Lewis, 7, of Wantagh, was dead on arrival at a hospital.

Marvin Blumberg, 51, of Levittown, who sitting at a nearby picnic table, was slammed some 200 feet across a patio and crushed to death against a cigarette machine, police said.

Surprise! Forecast still hot

The weekend weather forecast for Midland contains nothing exciting. According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, the forecast is calling for fair skies with continued hot afternoons.

And it's a safe bet that the rest of the weekend will be the same.

Predicted high for Saturday should be in the upper 90s, with tonight's low near 70 degrees.

Winds will be southeasterly tonight at 5-10 mph, shifting on Saturday to 10-15 mph out of the south.

Thursday's high of 96 degrees fell short of the record high for the date. In 1964, it was egg-frying-on-the-sidewalk weather with a record high of 105 degrees.

The 1947 record low of 62 degrees remains in the books although this morning's low of 70 degrees was comfortably cool for most Midlanders.

In North Central Texas, temperatures remained in the triple-digit figures. Dallas-Fort Worth reported a 101-degree reading, while Wichita Falls, quickly becoming the hot spot of the state, recorded a high of 108.

GOP platform as approved Thursday

DETROIT (AP) — Here, at a glance, are the key elements of the Republican Party's 1980 platform approved Thursday night by the platform committee in preparation for next week's convention.

The prologue remains to be written on Friday and the entire platform will go to the convention floor next Tuesday for delegate approval.

—WOMEN'S RIGHTS: Supports "equal rights and equal opportunities" for women and acknowledges "legitimate efforts" both for and against the Equal Rights Amendment; but declares that ratification of the ERA is "now in the hands of the state legislatures," ending a tradition of GOP support for a women's rights amendment that began with the party's 1940 platform.

—ABORTION: Calls for constitutional amendment barring abortions and, in the meantime, for legislation restricting the use of federal funds to pay for abortions for poor women; suggests that Supreme Court and other judicial vacancies be filled by judges "who respect traditional family values and the sanctity of innocent human life."

—TAXES AND ECONOMY: Advocates a 10 percent reduction in personal income tax rates for 1981, already endorsed by prospective GOP presidential nominee Ronald Reagan; also recommends similar cuts in 1982 and 1983. Proposes lower tax rates on interest earned from savings accounts; labels the current economic downturn "Mr. Carter's recession."

—GOVERNMENT: Urges cuts in government spending and a balanced budget; calls for elimination of cumbersome federal regulation of business.

—WELFARE: Opposes a federal takeover of the share of welfare costs now borne by state and local government; proposes changes in food stamp program to root out recipients "who are capable of paying for their own needs."

—BLACK AMERICANS: Asserts that the Carter administration broke faith with blacks and vows that Republicans "will not make idle promises to blacks and other minorties;" pledges programs to help blacks begin small businesses and for establishing "enterprise zones" in depressed areas to promote jobs.

—EDUCATION: Advocates abolition of the Department of Education, created last year; supports congressional efforts to restore "voluntry, non-denominational prayer in school;" condemns use of forced busing to achieve racial balance.

—TRANSPORTATION: Urges increased mass transportation but opposes government efforts to restrict driving; calls for elimination of the federal 55 mile an hour speed limit.

—THE FAMILY: States that all government domestic actions, from tax laws to the Social Security system, "must be formulated with the family in mind;" advocates repeal of tax provisions biased "against working spouses;" supports "legislation protecting and defending the traditional American family against the ongoing erosion of its base in our society."

—CRIME: Endorses capital punishment as "an appropriate penalty for certain major crimes;" opposes gun control.

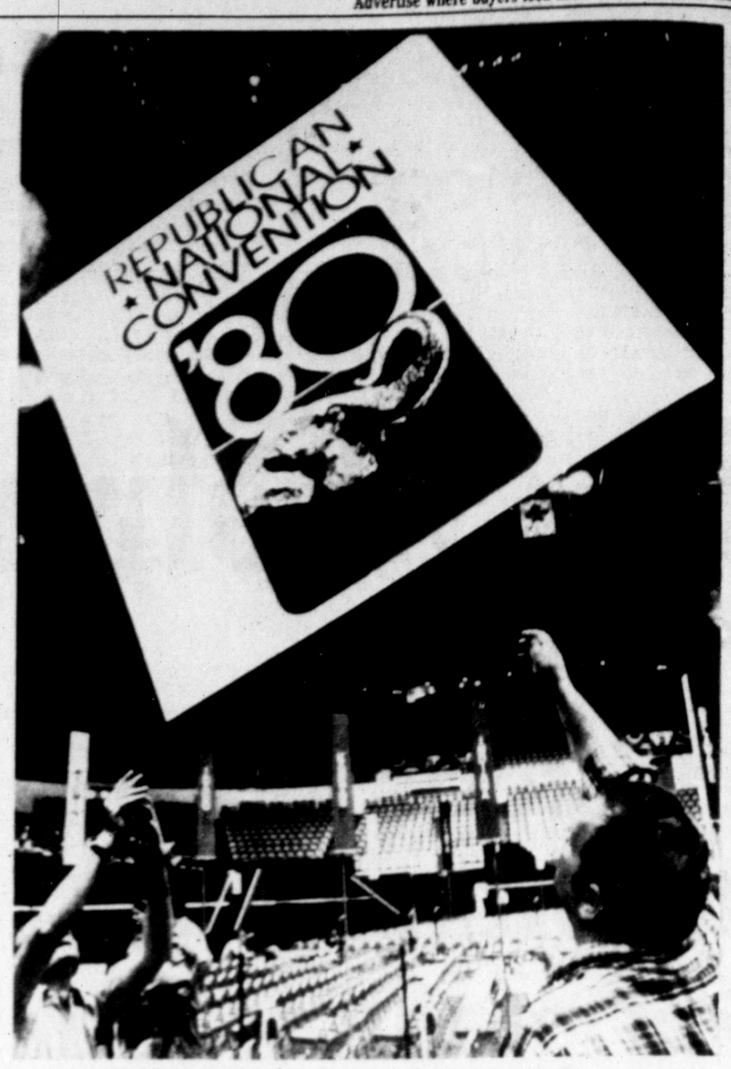

—ENERGY: Proposes freeing oil and gas from all remaining government price and allocation controls; urges continued reliance on nuclear energy and development of breeder reactors; urges speedy filling of the nation's proposed 500-million strategic petroleum reserve; advocates tax breaks for small investors in oil wells; urges speed-up of oil production from offshore wells.

—ENVIRONMENT: Recommends review of all environmental laws to see if their costs justify their benefits to society.

—AGRICULTURE: Advocates elimination of President Carter's Soviet grain embargo, claiming it discriminates unfairly against U.S. farmers.

—FOREIGN POLICY: Urges maintaining current U.S. relationship with both China and Taiwan, while declaring, "We would regard any attempt to alter Taiwan's status by force as a threat to peace in the region;" vows to restore confidence of allies in Europe it claims Carter's "inept policies" have alienated; urges a moment of silence at the start and end of next week's convention to honor the U.S. hostages in Iran; opposes U.S. assistance "to Marxist governments" in Latin America.

DEFENSE: Seeks to commit the administration to increased spending on weapons and manpower to reverse what it said was the posture of the Carter administration that "stood paralyzed in the face of an inexorable march of Soviet or Soviet-sponsored aggression;" supports European deployment of medium-range cruise missiles, ballistic missiles and the neutron warhead; rejects as "fundamentally flawed" the SALT II disarmament treaty negotiated with the Soviet Union by the administration; opposes a peacetime military draft "at this time."

Outlook for settling Detroit strike optimistic

DETROIT (AP) — Bargainers say they are making rapid progress and that a tentative settlement may be reached today in the 11-day-old walkout by 9,000 Detroit workers which has threatened to spoil next week's Republican National Convention.

"We've got some lumps to get out of it (a new contract), but we're moving downhill to a settlement pretty fast," city negotiator Mark Ulicny reported shortly after 5 a.m. as he emerged from 90 minutes of bargaining with union leaders.

About the same time, Lloyd Simpson, chief negotiator for the union, said he was not as optimistic as Ulicny about the length of time needed to reach a settlement but agreed that progress was being made quickly. Simpson said a settlement could be 12 hours to 24 hours away.

"We've reached a point where the union has presented what we feel will be the platform for a settlement," Simpson said.

City workers belonging to Council 25 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees walked off the job at one minute before midnight June 30. The walkout halted garbage collection in the city and led to a suspension of bus service for 220,000 daily riders. The GOP convention begins Monday.

The city began reviewing the union's latest proposal late Thursday. Earlier, Ulicny had said the two sides were "much closer" and that a breakthrough was possible.

William Lucy, international secretary treasurer of the striking union, said the union had lowered its overall package demands by $12 million.

But Mayor Coleman Young remained adamant that the city, which faces a $70 million deficit, cannot meet the union's demands.

"The reality is that this city faces the worst economic conditions since the Depression," Young said.

Young said the city's offer of a 6 percent annual increase in wages and benefits was the "final offer." Union officials continued to deny they had seen the 6 percent proposal, which 1,200 members of Teamsters Local 214 accepted earlier this week.

By late Thursday afternoon, Young was optimistic.

"I'm optimistic because there's a dawning in the mind of the AFSCME people that we can't pay any more," Young said.

Of Detroit's 23,000 city workers, only AFSCME members have walked out. Striking AFSCME members' salaries average $10,000 to $12,000, Detroit officials have said.

Meanwhile, a 20-foot mountain of garbage blocked eastbound traffic on West Davison on Detroit's northwest side. The pile in front of a city sanitation yard began growing Wednesday when city residents dumped their trash outside the gate because the entrance was blocked by striking sanitation workers.

Heitman will replace Crisp in GOP post

DETROIT (AP) — The quiet leader of 200,000 Republican women has been chosen by GOP presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan to become co-chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Reagan's choice is Betty Heitman, president of the National Federation of Republican Women, who has avoided taking a stand on the Equal Rights Amendment, party sources said Thursday.

She will replace current party co-chairman Mary Crisp, an ERA supporter who drew Reagan's ire by criticizing this week's party platform committee votes against the ERA and abortion rights.

"I am afraid we are suffering from serious internal sickness," Ms. Crisp said, adding that the controversial planks could cost Reagan and the GOP the fall election.

Reagan, in Los Angeles, responded: "Well, Mary Crisp, I think, should look to herself to see how loyal she has been to the Republican Party for quite some time."

Mrs. Heitman, of Baton Rouge, La., will almost certainly be elected when the RNC meets July 18, the day after the GOP convention ends. Ms. Crisp's term runs out at the end of the convention.

The party's presidential nominee is always permitted to decide who will hold the top posts in the party structure. Reagan already has said he will keep William Brock as national chairman.

Mrs. Heitman has never made public her feelings on ERA because of her position with the GOP women's group, according to Judy Hammerschmidt, spokeswoman for the federation.

Mrs. Heitman voted in 1976 for the Republican platform, which included a plank endorsing ERA ratification, the spokeswoman said. She became head of the women's group in 1978.

Reagan told Mrs. Heitman a few days ago that she is his choice to be co-chairman, customarily a post filled by a women, her associates said.

Reagan sees new political coalition

DETROIT (AP) — Ronald Reagan will accept the Republican presidential nomination next week with a speech designed to lure normally Democratic voters into a new GOP political coalition. The California conservative will appeal to "a community of shared values," according to a campaign source.

Reagan's acceptance speech, the climax of the GOP convention next Thursday night, is "80 percent written," the source said Wednesday.

The candidate took a draft of the speech with him to Mexico when he and his wife, Nancy, traveled there for a six-day vacation early in July.

Reagan has told his speechwriters he wants to emphasize the need for a spirit of renewal to overcome the nation's domestic problems. He also wants the speech to emphasize his concept that a new coalition — of Republicans, Democrats and independents — is emerging in American politics.

Reagan has defined this community as a coalition of people who share moral values, a belief in family and in a need to curb government involvement in their lives, as well as a disenchantment with the economic and defense policies of the Carter administration.

The former California governor often said during the primary campaign that he believes blue-collar workers are breaking traditional ties to the Democrats, and John Anderson, the independent presidential candidate, also is calling for a coalition involving those of all political stripes to support him.

Reagan will fly to Detroit on Monday, the opening day of the Republican National Convention.

Next Wednesday, Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada will deliver the speech nominating Reagan for president. Reagan almost certainly will be the only candidate presented to the convention and should officially receive the nomination that night.

Edwin Meese, Reagan's campaign chief of staff, said in Los Angeles on Wednesday that the candidate probably won't decide on his choice for the vice presidential nomination until after he has been designated the presidential nominee.

Meese belittled the flood of speculation that one possibility or another has the inside track for second spot on the GOP ticket.

For example, Laxalt is known to believe that the field has narrowed to himself, George Bush and Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana.

"Anybody who knows what's going on isn't talking," said Meese. "And anyone who's talking doesn't know what's going on."

The Reagan aide said six top staff members are sifting the material on the various vice presidential possibilities under consideration. The six are Meese, Lyn Nofziger, Mike Deaver, Richard Wirthlin, William Timmons and William Casey, the campaign manager.

"The way our process works," said Meese "nobody is irrevocably eliminated but, obviously, we have to concentrate on some more than others."

Those getting the most attention are understood to be Laxalt, Bush, Lugar, Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., Reps. Jack Kemp of New York, Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan and Tom Evans of Delaware, former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and former Treasury Secretary William Simon.

Bush repeated Wednesday that if offered the vice presidential nomination "I would do it."

Jury finds former MC instructor not guilty

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Kennis Earl Grismore, a 31-year-old ex-Green Beret and a former weightlifting instructor at Midland College, was acquitted by a jury in 238th State District Court on charges of holding up a 7-Eleven Store here April 19 and absconding with more than $700.

The eight-woman, four-man jury deliberated about 1½ hours before returning its verdict Thursday afternoon to Judge Vann Culp.

But Grismore, instead of being set free, was returned to Midland County Jail to await trials or hearings on three additional aggravated robberies the state claims he pulled off at convenience stores and at a gasoline station earlier this year.

His bail is set at $15,000 on each of the indictments.

THE STATE CALLED several witnesses to bolster its case, while the defense presented none in Grismore's behalf. But two of the state witnesses, Wilbur Roy Gossett and Aletha Cross, clerks at the store at Indiana Avenue and C Street at time of the armed robbery, testified that Grismore did not appear to be the person who held up the store April 19. Gossett was robbed at gunpoint, while Ms. Cross watched from the back of the store.

Their testimony apparently conflicted with reports they gave police shortly after the hold-up.

Gossett testified that Grismore's courtroom voice didn't match that of the robber's.

Ms. Cross swore that the robber's physique was smaller than Grismore's 6-foot-1, 205-pound build.

And Joyce Sanders, a 17-year-old mother who was holding her baby when the robbery took place, identified Grismore as the hold-up man.

But Edward T. Garza, Grismore's court-appointed attorney, suggested to the jury that she might be mistaken.

"She (Ms. Sanders) was concerned about her baby, and she was watching the gun," Garza told the jury.

"DO NOT 'SPECULATE' a man into the penitentiary," he cautioned the jury.

Garza noted Gossett's testimony that defendant Grismore and the robber had "different speech patterns" and that Ms. Sanders said Grismore did not resemble the robber in height or built.

"We want clear, convincing, competent evidence before sending somebody to the penitentiary," the defense attorney said.

David Joers, the state's lead prosecutor in the trial, advised the jury to disregard Gossett's description of the voice and said that Ms. Cross "doesn't really have any concept of height."

Furthermore, Joers intimated that the testimony of state witnesses Gossett and Ms. Cross may have been damaging to the state because Garza was Gossett's lawyer in a divorce proceeding and currently is representing Ms. Cross in a divorce.

JOERS SAID GRISMORE is guilty of the offense "not because the police say so, not because the district attorney says so, but because he did it."

Rob Sutphen, an assistant district attorney, worked with Joers in prosecuting the case.

Garza's co-counsel, David Lashford, accused the police of over-exuberance in trying to solve the case.

"The police try to do a good job and try to do what they think is right," Lashford said, "but sometimes they overdo things, step too far...Instead of trying to find the guilty one, they have a suspect and try to build a case around the suspect."

Lashford said the police are "trying to get a conviction on him, so they can chalk up one for the police, chalk up one for the DA."

Just before their closing agruments and before the case was turned over to the jury, the defense attorneys noted the irony of state witnesses effectively becoming defense witnesses.

AND LASHFORD SAID he might "burn" his license to practice law if his client were found guilty.

"If we don't get an acquittal, I think I'll burn up license," he said.

"I'll tear mine up," responded Garza.

Grismore, who also is known as Kenneth Earl Grismore, currently is on a 10-year probated sentence handed him in January after he pleaded guilty before Judge Culp to theft. At that time, the court, following a plea-bargaining agreement between the district attorney and the defense attorney, dismissed a forgery indictment against Grismore. Another indictment charging Grismore with possession of heroin was dismissed on grounds of insufficient evidence.

No dates have been set to try Grismore on the other three aggravated robbery indictments or to otherwise dispose of the case.

Grismore has been held in jail in lieu of posting bond for about two months.

Kissinger edging into Reagan circle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Much to the chagrin of some of Ronald Reagan's most conservative supporters, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger appears to be edging his way into Reagan's circle of foreign policy advisers.

Kissinger will deliver one of the main speeches at Tuesday night's Republican convention session, and recently he began to offer advice indirectly to Reagan, through meetings with the chief of Reagan's foreign policy advisory group, Richard V. Allen.

Allen confirmed such contacts Thursday, saying, "Henry Kissinger is one of those people I consult with regularly. I saw him the other day."

But, he addedd, "I can't judge the relative growth of influence of one adviser or the other. We have more than 100 formally with us and another two dozen or so who are outside the circle of advisers. I truly would not know how to forecast what would happen if Gov. Reagan became president."

Earlier Allen described Kissinger as "a singular personality in the field of foreign affairs. I would expect that a Reagan administration would obviously not overlook the kind of asset that he represents."

In Detroit, site of next week's convention, sources said some delegates who resent Kissinger's inroads into the Reagan camp may demonstrate when he takes the convention podium.

Sen. Jesse Helms, an outspoken opponent of Kissinger's, said he had heard rumors of a protest, but would take no part himself.

"I don't see that his talking serves any value," said the North Carolina conservative, adding, nonetheless, "I believe in courtesy."

One angry conservative summarized his distaste for Kissinger this way:

"This (Kissinger) is the guy who gave us SALT I and SALT II, the Panama Canal treaties, and had (then President) Ford hide under his desk when (Soviet dissident author Alexander) Solzhenytsin came to town. The party's done fine without him over the last four years."

Kissinger's recent emergence has occurred despite a history of strife between him, Reagan, and some of Reagan's advisers.

Four years ago, Reagan supporters pushed for, and won, a 1976 GOP platform that repudiated many of the policies Kissinger initiated during the Nixon and Ford administrations.

On a personal level, Allen was Richard Nixon's chief foreign policy adviser in 1968. But after Nixon took office, Kissinger quickly maneuvered into the position of chief foreign policy adviser, and Allen left the administration a few months later.

Kissinger and Reagan did nothing to bury the hatchet during the primary campaign. Reagan said he would not consider appointing Kissinger his secretary of state. Kissinger informally advised several Republican contenders, including John Connally. When they all dropped by the wayside, Kissinger encouraged Gerald Ford to run as an alternative to Reagan.

Since securing the nomination, though, Reagan has moved carefully to broaden his base of support, and Kissinger's inclusion on the convention schedule appears to be part of that effort.

Teens coming to watch convention

DETROIT (AP) — Forty-five teenagers who raised $73.75 each to pay for the trip are coming to Detroit to watch Republican convention activities and erect what must be the world's largest elephant made of bedsheets, sewn together and painted gray.

They are members of Teen-Age Republicans from Delaware, Ohio. Their hometown is the birthplace of Rutherford B. Hayes, 19th U.S. president, and their club has enrolled 350 of the 1,100 students who attend Rutherford B. Hayes High School.

About that elephant: The students will get under 32 bedsheets to form a textile replica of the GOP mascot. It will measure 49 feet up-and-down and 28 feet across. The elephant will be portrayed standing on two feet, waving an arm and wearing a cowboy hat, chaps and boots.

A cartoon-like balloon coming from its mouth will say, "Howdy, Gov. Reagan."

Junior College Funding panel meeting in city

Midland College will be the site for a meeting of the Select Committee on Junior College Funding at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday in the Roadrunner Room.

"This is a rare opportunity for West Texans," said MC President Dr. Al G. Langford, who is a member of the committee. "Almost all committee meetings are held in Austin or in larger metropolitan cities in the state. We are delighted that the committee agreed to meet in this area."

Established during the regular 66th session of the Legislature by House speaker Bill Clayton, the charge to the committee states, "The committee shall study current funding formula and programs of public junior-committee colleges in Texas and develop an equitable funding pattern which meets future needs of these institutions."

Specifically, the committee should determine: how the formula needs to be adjusted to meet costs; the problems of small taxing districts and small enrollments in junior colleges; and how to deal with declining, as well as fast growth, enrollments.

Members of the committee are: Rep. Wilson, chairman; Marvin Baker, president of South Plains College, Levelland, vice chairman; Rep. Jerry Donaldson; Rep. Tom Uher; Rep. Erwin Barton; Rep. Bill Hall; Tony Bonilla, Corpus Christi; H.J. Shands Jr., Angelina College, Lufkin; Dr. Jerome Weynand, president of San Antonio Junior College System; and Dr. Langford.

Among those expected to testify before the committee Wednesday are: Dr. Kenneth Walker, president of Navarro College, Corsicana; Dr. Phil Speegle, president of Odessa College; Dr. Theodore Nicksick Jr., president of Wharton County Junior College and Dr. Robert L. Clinton, president of Western Texas College, Snyder.

Dr. Nicksick is immediate past president, Dr. Weynand is current president, and Dr. Langford is president-elect, respectively of the Texas Public Community-Junior College Association, which is comprised of the presidents and chief executive officers of the 47 public junior college systems in the state.

Texas public and community colleges currently receive funding, basically, from three different sources. The legislature funds on contact-hour count for each school, with taxes from local junior college districts, and tuition and fees providing the remainder of the funds. Building costs are paid exclusively from local funds.

While enrollment has generally been stagnant or declining in public four-year colleges and universities, it has been growing rather dramatically in the state's community colleges.

The general public is invited to attend the sessions.

Reagan at home until Monday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan is relaxing at his Pacific Palisades home, preparing for his triumphant trip to Detroit to accept the Republican presidential nomination.

The 69-year-old former California governor has no public appearances planned until going to the Republican National Convention on Monday. But he is taping a series of lengthy network television interviews for broadcast over the weekend or on Monday, the opening day of the convention.

Meanwhile, Reagan aides remained secretive about the process of picking a vice-presidential running mate — the only remaining item of suspense.

Published speculation about Reagan's choice for a running mate varies day to day, with former presidential rival George Bush and Sens. Richard G. Lugar of Indiana and Paul Laxalt of Nevada the names mentioned most recently.

Midland's shining future

Midland is a financially healthy community. That's important.

A recent story on the deposits and loan tabulations for Midland's six banking institutions during the second quarter of the year reaffirmed once again the financial strength and stability of the Tall City. Bank deposits set an all-time high record at $1,139,965,029.

That strength and stability is one of the most valuable assets this city — or any community — can possess. Without stable financial strength a community cannot grow and prosper. It stagnates and begins a downhill course that often ends in failure.

Of course Midland is fortunate in that its economy is based on the vital oil industry. Energy and energy-related based communities are booming right now and will continue to prosper in coming years.

If an individual stayed in Midland, he or she might not be able to recognize the value of this area's economic strength. But if that person visits other cities — both in the state and elsewhere in the nation — he or she likely will realize just what economic soundness really means to a community.

When the nation's economy slows down or slumps, as is the case currently, a community blessed with economic strength can survive almost unscathed, even continue to grow.

Drive around Midland and take in the sights. You'll see growth, prosperity, vitality. New buildings are being constructed. Those new construction projects create new jobs which, in turn, increase the personal wealth of individual workers.

Those workers and all workers spend money within the community to purchase goods and services. That money can be spent by merchants to replenish supplies and to increase bank deposits.

What does that mean? How does it affect you?

As money deposited in local banking institutions it is available to be loaned to other individuals. Those individuals may be borrowing money to expand their businesses or build new ones.

All-in-all, this circle of prosperity feeds on itself and helps a community such as Midland to grow, prosper and develop a bright future.

In Midland, the future is the brightest.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, July 11, the 193rd day of 1980. There are 173 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: in 1804, Alexander Hamilton was mortally wounded by Vice President Aaron Burr in a pistol duel on the heights in Weehauken, N.J.

On this date:

In 1767, the sixth American president, John Quincy Adams, was born in Braintree, Mass.

In 1944, President Franklin Roosevelt announced he was available for an unprecedented fourth term.

In 1955, the new Air Force Academy was dedicated at Lowry Air Base in Colorado.

In 1978, at least 180 people were killed in Spain when a truck carrying industrial gas exploded and set fire to a campsite on the Mediterranean coast.

Ten years ago, there were three clashes between South Vietnamese and enemy troops in Cambodia.

Five years ago, Congress was advised that President Gerald Ford's administration planned to sell $350 million worth of weapons to Jordan.

THE BIBLE
CAN YOU QUOTE IT?

By LAVINA ROSS FOWLER AND ELIZABETH ROSS WIERSEMA

1. What was the occasion when Jesus said to His followers, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the earth?" Matthew 28:20.

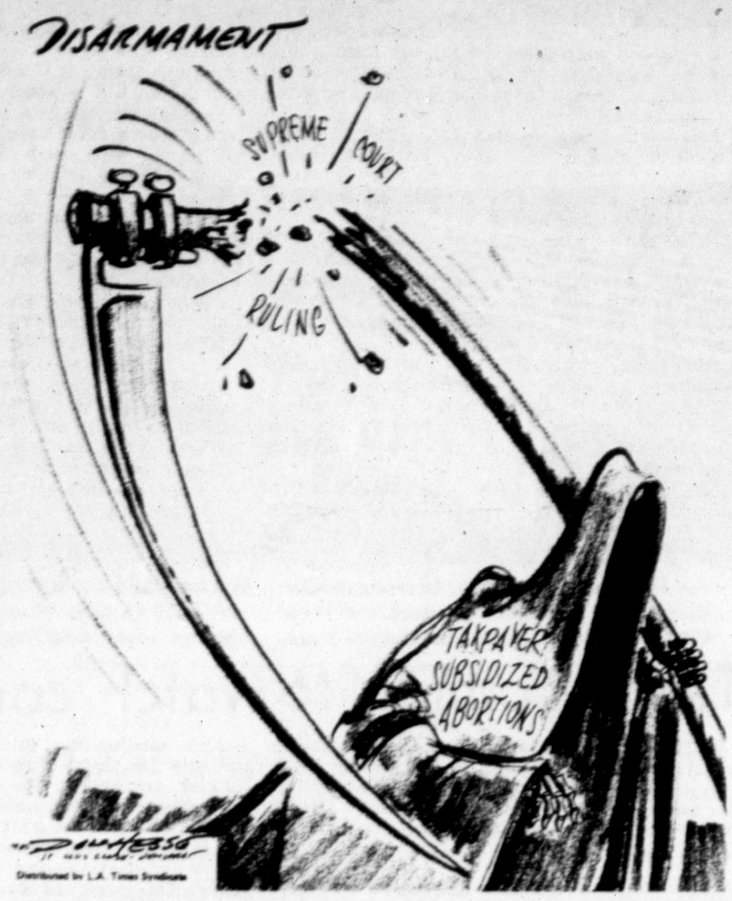

2. There are very few really new ideas. Occasionally a writer or speaker comes forth with something that appears to be original, but little is. What did Solomon say on this subject? Ecclesiastes 1:1-9.

3. What fee did Daniel ask of Nebuchadnezzar for interpretting his dream? Dan. 5:17.

4. To whom did Jesus point as a perfect example of humility? Matt. 18:1-5.

5. "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew -------" Psalm 51.

Four correct ... excellent, three ... good.

CHARLEY REESE
Jefferson provided summary of government

Charley Reese

This is the time of the year for all Americans to remember who and what we are. To remember that we are free men and women whose rights come from God, not by permission of the government; that government has no authority except that which we delegate and no purpose but to serve us; and that our destiny lies in our hands to shape as we see fit and as God permits.

We should remind ourselves and especially our public servants that we have the right to change any government which abuses us — by the political process if possible, by force and violence if necessary.

We should remind ourselves that we are revolutionaries and that the power to correct the evils that inflict us is there if we but use it.

We should remember that there is no officeholder who cannot be thrown out, no law which cannot be repealed, no unjust judicial decree which cannot be overturned, no bureaucracy which cannot be abolished.

We should remember that the Constitution can be amended and the federal judiciary altered as we see fit.

Our revolutionary forefathers gave us a republic. They did so because they did not fear overwhelming opposition or even death itself. They fought the British Empire for 13 years before Great Britain accepted as fact their declaration of independence.

Too many Americans today have been lulled into apathy. They have allowed the enemies of liberty to convince them that they are powerless to change their country. Nothing could be further from the truth.

A simple majority in the House and Senate of strong men and women dedicated to restoring constitutional government could stop the plunge toward economic slavery in two days.

Who believes that out of 230 million Americans we cannot find 286 men and women who have the strength of character to return this country to its proper course? We would not even need to find that many, for some of them are already in the Senate and House fighting the majority of demagogues, crooks, and collectivists who are destroying the republic.

The anti-Americans employed the tactic of tax and spend to bribe their way to power. We can defeat them with the tactic of defeat and elect, but we must be determined and persistent. If we have to defeat 12 incumbents in 12 successive elections until we find the right person, then let's do it.

We must declare war on the counter-revolutionaries who are attempting to destroy our revolution and return us to the status of serfs who exist at the whim of a powerful elite.

To do that, we must first return to our roots and understand the Ameriplished. We cannot obtain something if we do not know what it is we want.

Thomas Jefferson gave us a summary in his first inaugural address. What else does man require for happiness? "Still one more thing, fellow citizens — a wise and frugal government which shall restrain men from injuring one another, which shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor and the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government."

Let us from this day forward judge every incumbent and every candidate by his commitment to this ideal, and let us make it clear to everyone that the sun has set on the day when any person can betray our ideals and escape punishment.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
Carter loan clouds U.S.-Arab policies

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Saudi Arabia's wily King Khalid is aware that his influence isn't rooted in real power, that his country's vast oil wealth is mismatched to a small backward population and that he can achieve his ends only through a foreign policy of bribery and manipulation.

This makes all the more suspicious the sequence of events that I reported yesterday, showing how Jimmy Carter's drive to sell 60 sophisticated F-15 jet fighters to Saudi Arabia appeared to be linked with the tangled trail of a $1 million loan, the first installment of which was given to the Carter family peanut business in 1975.

The president owed the money to a bank controlled by a Saudi businessman whose father advises King Khalid on how to deal with the United States. This is the first time in history that an American president has been in the position of being financially beholden to foreign interests with a clear stake in U.S. foreign policy decisions.

The dependence of the president's personal financial well-being on a Saudi-controlled bank also adds a disturbing factor to the Carter administration's "tilt" toward the Arab position on the Israeli-Palestinian question.

The final approval of F-15 sales to the Saudis in May of 1978 came only days after Carter's warehouse loan was renegotiated on terms that resulted in a saving of $60,000 for the Carters that year. The Saudi Connection didn't stop then, however. An investigation by my reporters Peter Peckarsky and Peter Grant reveals that:

— In January 1980, shortly after the Carter trust posted a $255,000 deficit for 1979 — largely due to warehouse losses — the president's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, visited Riyadh. He learned, among other things, of Saudi Arabia's request that the United States add offensive capability to the F-15s we had sold them. The modifications, which would enable Saudi aircraft to strike Israel, had explicitly been denied to the Saudis in 1978.

— In March 1980, the Carter administration, in a supposed communications foul-up, voted in the United Nations to condemn Israeli settlements on the West Bank. Faced with an uproar in the Jewish community shortly before the primary in heavily Jewish New York, Carter disavowed the vote two days later.

— Also in March 1980, Charles Kirbo, the old Carter friend who is trustee of Carter's business interests, traveled to Saudi Arabia and spent five days conferring with Saudi leaders. What they discussed has never been made public.

— In June 1980, the Carter administration considered providing the Saudis with the additional equipment that would give their F-15s offensive capability. After another furor, the administration decided to shelve the idea — at least until after the election.

— Also in June, the Carter administration abstained, instead of vetoing an Arab-backed U.N. resolution condemning Israel's plans to make Jerusalem — including the once-Arab Old City — the Israeli capital.

Meanwhile, Jimmy Carter's family business is in hock to a bank controlled by a Saudi Arabian. The debt is now believed to be about $600,000, but the Saudi can demand payment once each year.

Footnote: My report on the status of the Carter loan is based on a check last month of Sumter County, Ga., records. These showed that the Carter warehouse was still in hock to the National Bank of Georgia. But the bank's recently appointed president, Roy Carlson, insists that the loan has been "paid in full." He steadfastly refused, however, to provide details. The two trustees of the president's personal trust, Charles Kirbo and Robert Lipshutz, refused to answer our questions.

BENDING THE RULE: Rep. James Quillen, R-Tenn., a former newspaper publisher with an honorary law degree, has found a creative — and legal — way to get around House Rule 47, which limits the annual outside income of congressmen to 15 percent of their $60,662.50 salaries.

Before the rule took effect on Dec. 31, 1978, Quillen drew generous salaries from two companies in Tennessee, well above the new 15 percent limit. So Quillen took a pay cut from the two firms to get within the legal limit. It was only what might be expected of a one-time member of the House Ethics Committee.

But Quillen has since arranged to rent two computers to the Tennessee companies — for at least $50,000 a year. Under House Rule 47, the computer-rental income is classified as "unearned" income, and thus exempt from the 15 percent limitation.

Quillen is not the only member of Congress who has found loopholes in the law. I'll tell you about others in future columns.

CINESCAM: Like Watergate, the ABSCAM scandal appears to be headed for Hollywood. Producer Mike Viner is already planning a movie based on the FBI's influence-peddling scheme. One proposal he's studying is a flick centered around the picturesque, gravel-voiced con man Mel Weinberg who is expected to be the government's most important witness in the upcoming trials.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., recently sent a clipping of a news story speculating on Ronald Reagan's vice-presidential choices to Rep. Tom Evans, R-Del., who is heading the preliminary screening of possible running mates. The story made no mention of Dole, so the senator penciled in a note: "Tom, there must be more." ... Security at Republican National Committee headquarters on Capitol Hill has supposedly been tightened in the wake of the bizarre bugging scare recently. Yet last week, staffers report, a salesman was roaming the halls, peddling packets of forget-me-not seeds for Republican candidates to send out to voters ... The administration's "point men" in the war against inflation, Alfred Kahn and R. Robert Russell, are both regarded as hopelessly bad administrators. This could be refreshing in bureaucracy-encrusted Washington. But the trouble, insiders tell me, is that Kahn in particular is so reluctant to lobby for his views among members of the top-level Economic Policy Group that he is largely ignored in their decisions.

INSIDE REPORT:
Quie is good running-mate prospect, but is he visible?

WASHINGTON — With less than two weeks remaining before Ronald Reagan picks his vice president and none of his eight choices fully satisfying, serious attention is being quietly directed to a late addition: Gov. Albert Quie of Minnesota.

For Reagan to belatedly look over Quie is to find a rare gem overlooked before. No previously considered prospect so completely fills Reagan's specifications. While fully reassuring to centrist and traditional Republicans who still recoil from Reagan as a wildman out of the West, he is acceptable to conservatives and passes muster on issues vital to the New Right.

During 21 years in Congress before going home to run for governor in 1978, Quie won a reputation as a solid, thoughtful public servant. He became best known in the 1960s for crafting Republican alternatives to Great Society extravaganzas. While a moderate on civil rights and social welfare, he advocated high defense spending and voted against abortion. In Washington, he was an active evangelical Christian, but never alarmed others with his intensity.

Reagan scarcely knows Quie and is far from selecting him. The odds are still against Reagan moving outside his list of eight. Nevertheless, the fact new names are being considered reflects the unspoken view within the Reagan camp that nobody on that list fully satisfies their needs.

Sen. Howard Baker, favorite of the liberals and the news media, never had a chance. He is the most unacceptable to the right; Reagan knows Baker better than most on the list, and his opinion of him could be higher. William Simon was not seriously considered. Rep. Guy Vander Jagt and Donald Rumsfeld have more detractors than supporters. Sen. Paul Laxalt is a Reagan intimate, but choosing a fellow conservative from neighboring Nevada poses problems.

That leaves the big three: Rep. Jack Kemp, George Bush and Sen. Richard Lugar. All serious conversation has revolved around them the past month.

Like Laxalt, Kemp is a personal favorite of Reagan. He is the most charismatic, innovative and perhaps the smartest of the lot. His oratorical talents and ability to swing blue-collar voters might overcome the immediate negative reaction certain from the media and liberals. But Reagan insiders, observing Kemp closely in recent weeks, have sadly concluded he still looks like a "college sophomore" even if he does not think like one.

At that, however, Kemp's chances are better than those of Bush, favored by traditional Republicans. While more acceptable to the right than Baker, he may be less so to Reagan. Bush's dismal front-running performance in New Hampshire left a bleak and ineradicable impression on Reagan.

The survivor: Lugar. He is acceptable to everybody, has made an excellent impression during four years in the Senate and has no detractors. But unlike the Miss America pageant, the last contestant is not necessarily the winner. Looking at Dick Lugar as the end product of the elimination process, there is unease within the Reagan camp that he does not quite measure up.

So, renewed observation of available Republican talent began last week. Al Quie popped out quickly as a Midwestern governor with impressive Washington credentials and connections to the farm vote. But a closer look shows he is much more than that.

A youthful-appearing 56, he has developed as governor into a more forceful speaker and television personality. Without drifting leftward, he has gained substantial support from rank-and-file Democrats in Minnesota; his statewide approval rating is 65 percent. Tax reduction has been his great feat as governor, fitting Reagan's national economic policy.

Indeed, Quie endorsed Reagan earlier this year than his liberal Republican backers preferred. Although his liberal voting record in Congress (measured by the Americans for Democratic Action) once rose to 72 percent, it was usually much lower than that. Quie's career conservative record (measured by the American Conservative Union) was only 54 percent, but his anti-abortion record is 100 percent. No other prospect gives such simultaneous reassurance to both left and right.

Quie's two obvious liabilities are that Ronald Reagan might not recognize him in a crowded room and that this inability is shared by most Americans. But Lugar is only a little better known to Reagan and no better at all to the rest of the country. While Reagan at this writing is not even close to picking him, the fact is that Quie gives some Reagan advisers a markedly better feeling than the prospects they have been examining for the past month.

Group fights to keep aliens in U.S.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The Legal Aid Society is planning a court battle to keep the Immigration Service from expelling 12 Salvadorans who survived a desert trek into the United States that killed 13 illegal aliens.

Meanwhile, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Thursday called on U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti to grant the aliens permission to live in the United States, and another politician announced plans to raise funds for bail.

"There is no reason why these people need to be held in jail," said Mike Martin, a state legislative candidate who said he has set up the Salvadoran Relief Fund to raise bail. "They can be helped right now if the people of Tucson open their hearts, minds and wallets."

The aliens, who entered the country last week without proper documents, were being held today at the Pima County Jail as material witnesses in an alien-smuggling case being pressed against a Mexican and a Salvadoran who allegedly led them into the desert.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service set a bond of $2,000 each to hold the 12 for administrative proceedings on their immigration status. Material witness bonds also were expected to be set at an appearance in U.S. Magistrate's court today, said Deputy U.S. Attorney A. Bates Butler.

Mary Louise Harris, a Legal Aid lawyer, said she talked to eight of the survivors Thursday. "All eight are begging to stay in the country," she said, adding Legal Aid lawyers would represent them in a fight to stay in the country.

Butler said no criminal charges were planned against the 12 survivors. Earlier reports from the Border Patrol said they would be charged with illegal entry.

"We consider these people to be victims," Butler said. "We're not treating them as criminals.

Meanwhile, bond of $50,000 each was set Thursday for the Mexican and Salvadoran who are charged with transporting illegal aliens. They allegedly lead across the U.S.-Mexico the 12 survivors and 13 who died in the blazing sun of the Arizona desert.

Elias Nunez-Guardado, 26, of Chalatanengo, El Salvador, and Mateo Preciado-Navarro, 54, of Sonoita, Sonora, Mexico, are charged with one count each of transporting illegal aliens.

Federal officials allege the two are among four men who arranged for the Salvadorans to travel through Mexico to a spot just below the U.S. border last week.

The four, two Salvadorans and two Mexicans, allegedly led the group across. But the group ran out of water, and by the time authorities were alerted, 13 were dead, apparently including one of the smugglers, and the rest were in danger from searing temperatures and lack of water.

DeConcini's aide, Paul Wattles, said the senator was asking the attorney general for a "parole" for the 12.

"It gives them a legal basis for being in the country and allows them to avoid immediate deportation," Wattles said. "This is the same thing that was given to the Cubans and Haitians who fled their countries."

Anderson shortens tour to see Begin

JERUSALEM (AP) — Independent presidential candidate John Anderson today cut short a controversial tour of largely-Arab East Jersualem to visit Prime Minister Menachem Begin at a Jerusalem hospital where he is recuperating from a mild heart attack.

Anderson aides had been trying to arrange the meeting with Begin since the candidate arrived here Tuesday on a trip clearly designed to woo Jewish voters. Begin's doctors have strictly limited the number of persons visiting the ailing prime minister and Anderson's meeting was not announced until early today.

Anderson cut short his trip through the rebuilt Jewish Quarter of the walled Old City of Jerusalem in order to make the meeting with Begin.

The Old City, with its holy places revered by Christians, Moslems and Jews, is part of the Arab East Jerusalem district that Israel captured from Jordan in the 1967 Mideast war. Israel's annexation of the predominantly Arab district has become focal point of the Arab-Israeli dispute.

Anderson's visit to East Jerusalem angered Palestinian leaders and drew negative press comment in Egypt, where Anderson is due to arrive later today on the second stop of his fact-finding tour.

In Cairo, the Egyptian newspaper Al Akhbar said in an editorial that Anderson's support for Israel's claim to Jerusalem as its capital was "immoral" and a sign the independent candidate was fishing for Jewish votes "by any means."

Anderson also drew an angry Arab response for his visit Thursday to two Jewish settlements on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. Because of that visit, Bethlehem's Arab mayor, Elias Freij, refused to meet with the candidate and said he was "lobbying for the support of Jewish voters in the United States."

Miss Mary celebrates 99th birthday

LYNCHBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Mary Bobo had plenty of help celebrating her 99th birthday. Family, friends and a congressman showed up — along with 5,000 birthday greetings, a giant postcard and some sexy red underwear.

"It's the biggest one I ever had," the frail white-haired woman said of Thursday's bash.

Mrs. Bobo's big day got a boost when her friends at the nearby Jack Daniel Distillery spent $80,000 over the last couple of months for nationwide magazine advertisements inviting readers to send birthday cards to Miss Mary, as she is known in this south-central Tennessee town of 400.

Family members said she had received more than 5,000 cards by Thursday, along with a 3-by-4-foot postcard from a group of Madison, Wis., residents. The mailed gifts included a pair of red lace bikini panties and a taped cassette containing a song written about Miss Mary. She has yet to claim the panties at the distillery office.

She also received a New England Telephone Co. directory containing Brockton, Mass., listings. Attached to it was a note saying, "Happy birthday Mary from all of us at New England Telephone.

Consumers starting to buy again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers apparently have taken to heart the Carter administration's advice to start buying again.

The Commerce Department says retail sales rose 1.4 percent in June, ending a four-month decline caused in part by the government's campaign to tighten credit as a brake on inflation.

"This is very encouraging news," Courtenay Slater, the department's chief economist, said Thursday. "It is a sign that the decline is slowing and things are approaching the point of turn-around. But I don't think we've hit the bottom of the recession."

Sandra Shaber of the private Chase Econometrics said the sales report "is further evidence that the worst declines in consumer spending are over." She, too, cautioned against over-optimism that the recession is ending, noting that consumer incomes still are being eroded by inflation and that the health of the automobile industry is poor.

The Commerce Department said sales in June totaled $75.35 billion, an increase of 4.5 percent over a year ago. Sales in May had fallen 1 percent.

The report is adjusted to account for seasonal fluctuations, but does not reflect inflation — an adjustment that would diminish some of the improvement in the sales picture.

The figures showed a turn-around in the sharp drop in sales by automobile dealers in recent months. But, Ms. Slater noted, there is no evidence that new-car sales are improving. She said the 3.9 percent increase in sales by auto dealers in June could reflect rising new-car prices as well as increased sales of used cars, parts and repairs.

The June figure for automobile dealers is still 9.5 percent below the level a year earlier.

Sales of durable goods — those expected to last three years or more — were up 2.5 percent in June, to $23.1 billion. That is 6.6 percent below the year-ago level. Nondurables rose 1 percent, to $52.3 billion, or 10.2 percent higher than June 1979.

Retail sales, a key measure of economic health, account for a third of all goods and services produced in the United States. When it appeared earlier in the year that excessive consumer spending was feeding inflation, the Carter administration and the Federal Reserve Board imposed selective credit restraints.

Then, as sales plummeted, raising fears of a deeper recession, administration officials said publicly that there was no longer a need to curtail purchases. The credit restraints were halved in May and now are being phased out altogether.

The Commerce Department report showed furniture sales rose by 1 percent last month while building materials, hardware and garden supplies were off an equal amount.

Gasoline sales increased by 1.5 percent, to a level 28 percent higher than in June 1979. Sales by apparel and accessory stores and by drug stores were up 1 percent, while sales at eating and drinking establishments increased 2 percent.

Some of the nation's largest retailers issued reports Thursday of slightly higher sales in June. K Mart Corp. reported sales of $1.38 billion, up 13.5 percent from May. J.C. Penney Co. registered a 1.5 percent increase, to $876 million, and F.W. Woolworth Co. reported an increase of 5.6 percent, to $648 million.

In other economic news Thursday:

—Honda announced it would break ground for its first American auto assembly plant, in Marysville, Ohio, later this year. The first cars are expected to roll off the $200 million, 2,000-worker facility in late 1982. A company official said the decision to build the plant was not connected to building pressure on President Carter to restrict auto imports.

—Ford Motor Co., hit by staggering losses in both car and truck operations, cut the $1 quarterly dividend it has paid since the second quarter of 1979 to 30 cents for the third quarter of this year. Ford's losses in the April-June period were its worst ever.

—Four major steelmakers said they were following the lead of Bethlehem Steel and cutting prices on some products. Industry analyst Gene Frank said the moves, some of which are temporary, point up "the fierce domestic competition for orders."

Cutting prices are U.S. Steel, Republic Steel, National Steel and Inland Steel. Bethlehem previously announced price cuts averaging 4.5 percent.

Anderson ballot rights challenged

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Democratic National Committee and 11 prominent North Carolina Democrats on Thursday formally challenged the right of independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson to be on the state's general election ballot.

David F. Kirby, a Raleigh attorney acting for the Democrats, filed for a hearing on the matter before the state Board of Elections.

In the petition, the Democrats charge that the Independents for Anderson Party in North Carolina is not a "bona fide" political party.

Ousted A&M head 'extremely proud' of record

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Ousted Texas A&M University president Jarvis Miller says he is "extremely proud" of his record as head of the school.

Regents removed Jarvis from his post Thursday and named a civil engineering professor, Charles Samson, acting president. Jarvis was appointed special assistant to the Texas A&M System Chancellor Frank Hubert.

Samson is also president of the Southwest Conference.

"I'm extremely proud of my record as president of Texas A&M," Jarvis said in a statement. "Major progress has been made in every area of the university's life — academic programs, student services, research, public service, administration and external relations."

The board gave no official reason for Miller's removal, but board chairman Clyde Wells said "it was brought to our attention that there was a need for adjustments," and that the board had received "numerous complaints ... about the actions that occurred."

"I will not say what those (actions) were, but the board of regents received mail on the critical side in terms of how the university was run," Wells said.

The university received widespread publicity in May when Miller refused to shake hands with graduating senior Melanie Zentgraf.

Ms. Zentgraf is suing the school's Corps of Cadets for sex discrimination, alleging "extreme harassment, humiliation and threats" against women who participate in the predominantly male corps.

Miller has not explained why he did not shake Ms. Zentgraf's hand when she came forward for her degree.

Although the Zentgraf incident alone may have not brought about Miller's downfall, "it certainly did not help it," one university source said. There are also reports of conflict between Miller and the chancellor's office.

Wells said the board reached its decision to reassign Miller "after long and careful consideration ... yesterday (Wednesday) afternoon."

The shakeup came during a regularly scheduled meeting of the board on Thursday. The board's executive committee spent several hours in executive session late Wednesday night when word of Miller's impending departure began spreading.

Miller, 51, became president three years ago this month. He was director of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station for five years prior to that.

He said Thursday he looks forward to "the new assignment and the opportunity to continue to serve the university in a new capacity."

Acting president Samson joined the A&M faculty in 1960 as a professor in the civil engineering and aerospace engineering departments. He served as department head from 1964 until last year when he began devoting more time to intercollegiate athletics. He has been the Aggies' representative on the SWC faculty board in 1972.

Samson is a 1947 graduate of Notre Dame and earned his doctorate from the University of Missouri in 1953.

Texas A&M, known as a research leader in the Southwest in engineering, agriculture and veterinary medicine, has an enrollment of 35,000.

Stepdad charged in death

FORT WORTH (AP) — The stepfather of a 4-year-old girl who died after she apparently was beaten and sexually abused has been charged with murder, said Assistant District Attorney Bob Marshall.

The 36-year-old man, a resident of Germany, was held in the Tarrant County jail on $50,000 bond.

The suspect was arrested Sunday after his stepdaughter died at a local hospital.

Congressman 'looking for a few good statesmen'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Phil Gramm is looking for a few good statesmen to run the country.

"Where are the Jeffersons and the Adamses and the Washingtons now that we need them?" rhetorically asked the U.S. Congressman, a former Texas A&M University economics professor.

"They're in the professions, in the board rooms, in the busineses," Gramm said Thursday in lashing out at a weak presidency, an over-spending Congress and a powerful bureaucracy that seems to control both.

Gramm, a middle-aged congressman from College Station and a tax-cut-conservatism advocate who unsuccessfully went after the senatorial job of moderate-to-liberal U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen two years ago, said the bureaucrats are in control.

"I THINK BUREAUCRATS are in power when the Congress and the president are weak," Gramm said at the Thursday noon meeting of the Midland Downtown Rotary Club in the Midland Hilton.

Gramm, though displeased and upset with the present tax structure and rampant inflation, optimistically said a tax cut would be best postponed until next year when the nation may have a new, more fiscally-responsible Congress.

"With the wrong Congress, we're going to have the wrong tax cuts," he reasoned.

But Gramm suggested that inflation is a graver concern than taxes, though one is fueling the other.

"I believe that inflation is the No. 1 problem in the country," Gramm said. He said the nation has undergone three cycles of inflation and unemployment since the late 1960s.

In 1980, Gramm predicts a $35 billion federal deficit without tax cuts.

"We're in the process of triggering a new wave of inflation," he charged.

Deficit spending has contributed substantially to inflation, which is at 18.5 percent, Gramm said.

"I am still committed to balancing the federal budget," the congressman pledged, "but the president and the Congress are not willing to take the steps to cut (programs) to balance the budget."

MOST EVERY congressman, most every constituent and most every bureaucrat talk about budget-cutting and see the dire need for it, said Gramm. But none wants any programs cut that might affect their special interest.

"There are a thousand federal budgets that should be cut," Gramm said. But no one wants his program cut back for the national good.

Gramm noted that the government to a large extent has taken over the care of the old, the poor and the sick — cases which 20 years ago, he said, were handled by the family, the church and by the community.

"One way or another, every person in American has come to depend on the federal government," he said.

THE CHALLENGE of today is to change the trend and to get people "to expect less from government."

Gramm attacked spiraling inflation as well as soaring taxes, which, he said, at the city, county, state, and federal levels take 42 cents out of every dollar. That rate, he said, is the "highest level in American history."

Back in 1943, at peak of World War II, the federal government was taking 23 cents out of every dollar. Much of that was going into the war effort. Today, that rate is at 23 percent, he said.

Taxes have so cut into family and business budget that it is endangering the economy.

"It has stifled the incentive to produce, to save and invest and to work," he said.

GRAMM ADVOCATED a tax cut to limit federal spending.

On other subjects, the congressman:

—Shunned a gasoline-rationing plan. "I'm opposed to rationing. I would never under any set of circumstances impose it." However, he said that "there are a lot of people who think rationing would be a good idea."

—Windfall-profits tax: He tabbed that tax as an "excise tax" which the consumer pays seven-eighths of it and the royalty owner pays one-eighth.

—Draft: "Our problem is retention — not recruiting." "We're not paying competitive wages (in the military). "We're going to have to get one-third of our enlisted men off of food stamps."

—Redistricting: Congressional redistricting "offers us the best hope" for the country. He suggested that Congressional membership should be increased in Texas and decreased in New York, "since there are not any good members of Congress in New York City."

Record jobless claims forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The recession will push the nation's unemployment insurance system $3.5 billion into the red next year as states brace for a record number of jobless benefit claims, federal officials say.

Only three months ago, before the depth of the recession was apparent, the Carter administration was projecting the insurance system would show an $800 million surplus in fiscal 1981, which begins Oct. 1.

Now, with the economy contracting and unemployment rising more than had been expected, the system will have to borrow from the federal treasury, for only the second time in its 45-year history, to meet payments to the more than 11 million people expected to file claims during the year, officials confirmed Thursday.

The dramatically changed financial outlook for the unemployment system illustrates how President Carter's much publicized drive to balance the budget this spring has become a forgotten cause this summer.

"There's no way to balance the budget with the kind of recession we've got," said one administration source, who did not want to be named.

Congressional sources estimate the 1981 budget will wind up with at least a $20 billion deficit. However, some private economists say the deficit could top $50 billion.

Carter proposed a balanced budget in March based on an overly optimistic economic outlook. Congress more recently adopted a nominally balanced budget — its first in 12 years — based on the same outlook.

Now, the administration acknowledges that a deeper recession will mean lower revenues than were anticipated and higher government spending on assistance programs — such as unemployment insurance — that automatically rise with the jobless rate.

The administration is raising its unemployment estimate from a peak of 7.3 percent to 8.5 percent by the end of 1980, with the rate averaging about 8 percent for all of 1981.

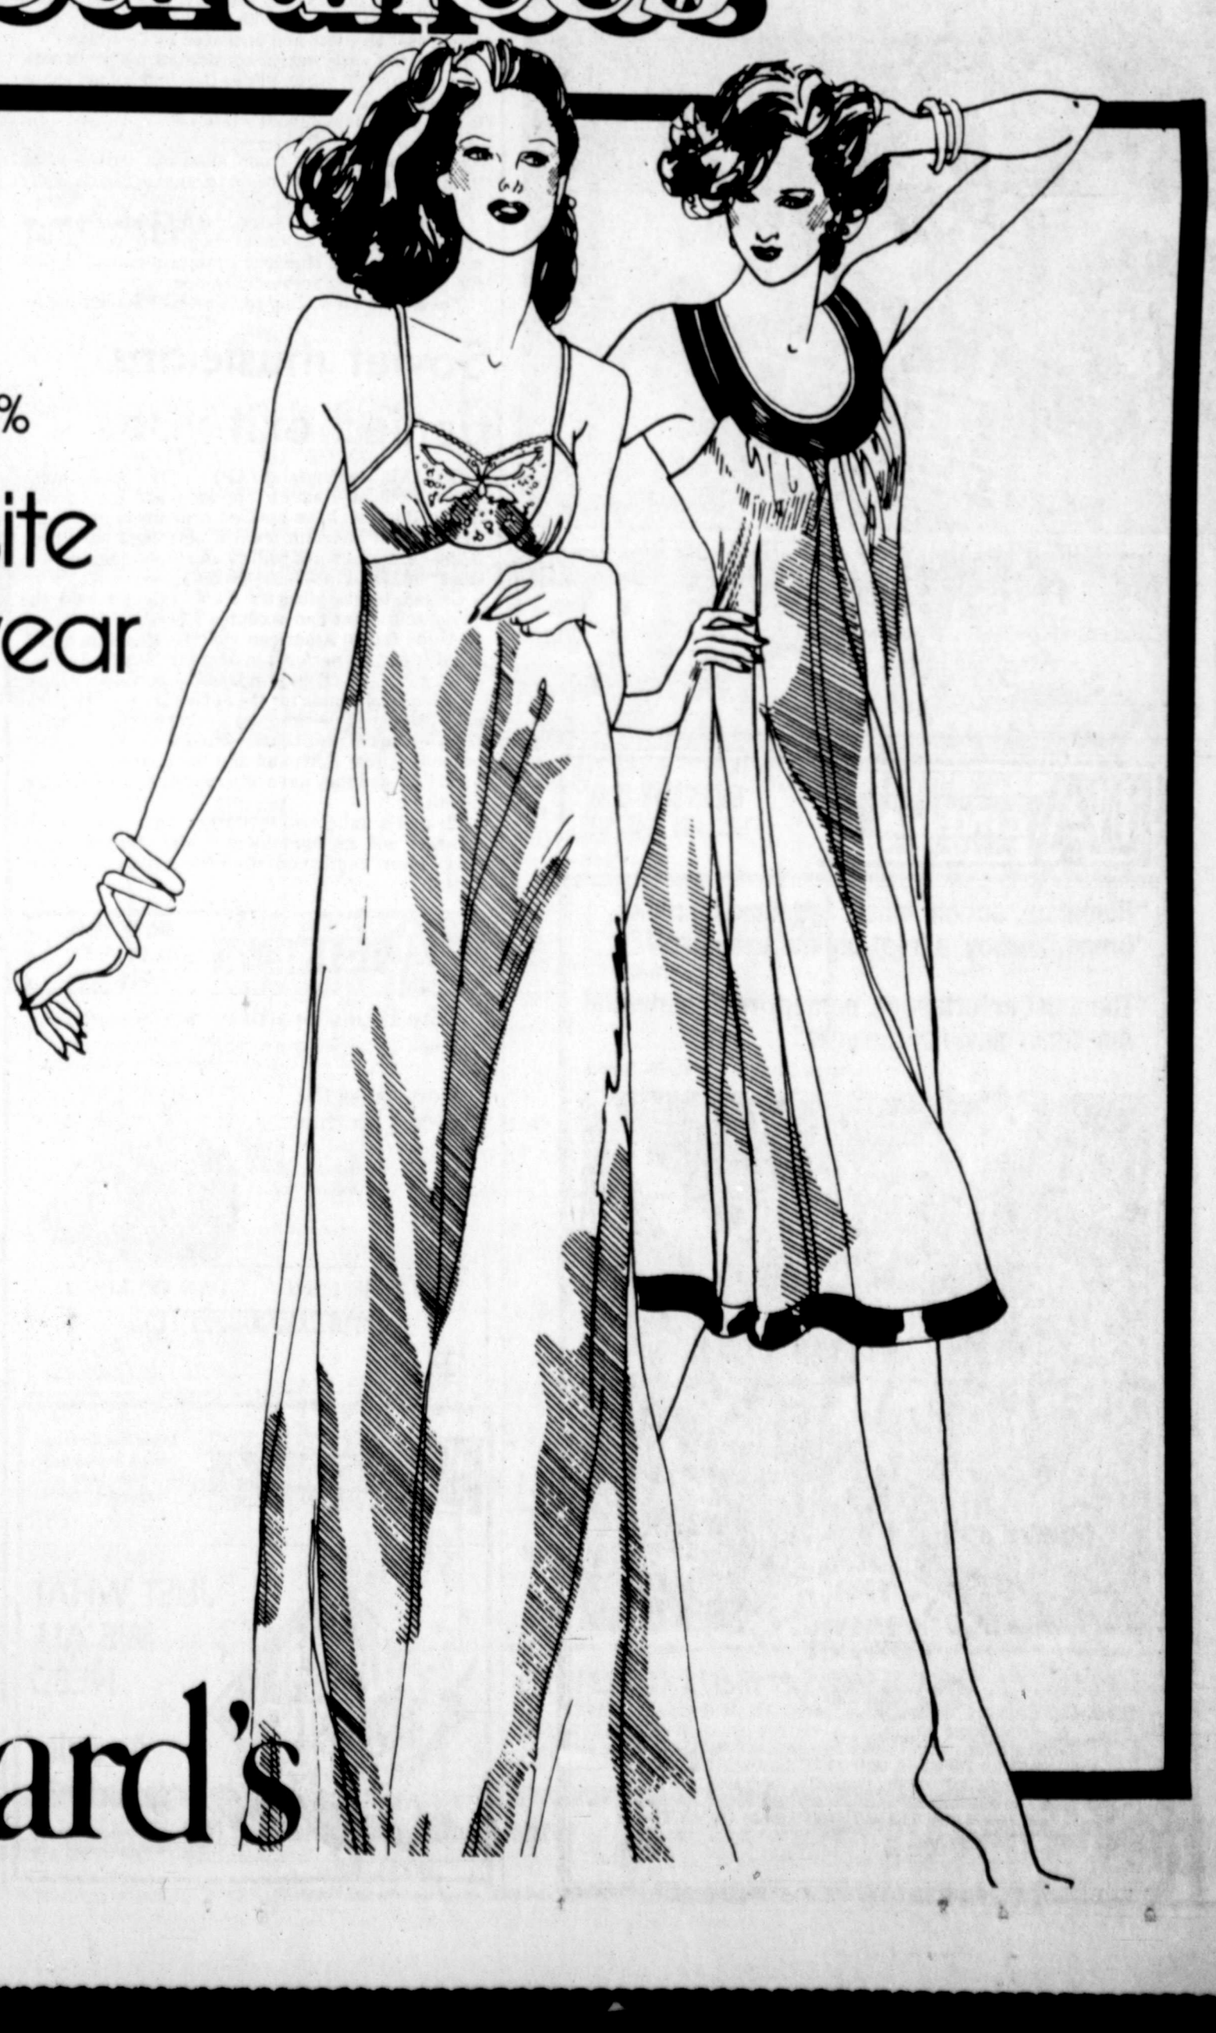

By contrast, unemployment during the 1975 recession topped out at 9 percent, the highest level since the Great Depression.

The administration's revised 1981 budget, which is to be released later this month, estimates payments for unemployment benefits at nearly $25 billion and revenues at just over $21 billion. This year, the program is expected to break even with outlays and revenues each totaling $16.5 billion.

A record 11.4 million jobless Americans are expected to receive state-paid benefits for at least some time during fiscal 1981, up from the 11.1 million who received benefits in 1975. Although the unemployment rate was higher then, fewer people were in the labor force and not as many were eligible for jobless benefits.

Administration sources said the system will need to borrow $2 billion to provide loans to states that run out of their own money. Another $1 billion will be needed to help pay extended benefits that are expected to come into play later this summer, after unemployment reaches a certain level.

No-show TV stars facing lawsuits

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If it were a new television series, it might be called "The Holdouts."

Three television stars seeking more money failed to show up for fall season filming, and production company attorneys filed $1 million lawsuits against no-shows Judd Hirsch and Danny DeVito ("Taxi") and Robert Guillaume ("Benson").

Hirsch, who plays the wise-cracking Alex on the consistently top 10-rated ABC-TV show, and DeVito, the diminutive but hard-nosed dispatcher, were charged with breach of contract by Paramount Pictures Corp. for their failure to begin filming Monday.

Guillaume, the butler with the rapier-like wit, also was to begin his filming duties Monday for his popular ABC-TV series, said Witt-Thomas-Harris Productions in its breach of contract action.

The Superior Court filings also sought to restrain all three stars from working elsewhere during the 23-week term of their contracts.

Hirsch, who was to begin his third season, reportedly gets $15,000 an episode.

"I'm not thrilled with the economics of my deal," Hirsch said Wednesday through his agent Sandy Bresler.

Bresler said Hirsch has no intention of quitting the series.

"We're not saying he's a big movie star or anything like that," Bresler said, noting that talks with Paramount had broken off and that there were no new ones scheduled.

"The creative atmosphere, the climate between Judd, Ed. Weinberger and everything is wonderful. He likes the show; he likes the people," Bresler added.

Cronkite hosts science news show

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Cronkite says the challenge of translating complex technological data for the viewer with no background in science was of particular interest to him during CBS' coverage of the space program in the 1960s and early '70s.

"With both the space coverage and a program we did called 'The 21st Century,'" the "Evening News" anchorman says, "we had the opportunity to talk with technicians and scientists and describe their work in the common vernacular.

"It's a constant struggle, the deeper you are involved in a story, to avoid the jargon. But I've always felt it must be done.

"Science is taking far too large a role in our daily lives to be ignored," Cronkite says. "The problem is the material generally is too complex to deal with in a minute or two. It demands exploratory reporting."

Cronkite gets the opportunity to consider some complex scientific subjects in detail in "Universe," a new CBS News science magazine that begins a four-week run Saturday evening at 8 p.m. EDT.

A pilot for the summer miniseries was broadcast a year ago. Cronkite has mentioned "Universe" among the projects he intends to pursue after he steps down as "Evening News" anchorman early next year.

"The shape of the program in the future will be determined by how often it's on — weekly, monthly, or whatever," Cronkite says. "I do believe it will continue, and obviously, if it goes on deep into the future, I will take a more active role in developing and reporting stories."

In the premiere edition, Cronkite considers the "curing" of a genius and the construction, by computer, of a perfect campaign speech. Correspondent Diane Sawyer looks at gas-mileage tests, and Charles Osgood talks with some people who are analyzing human tears.

Each of the four programs in the series will include four stories. In addition to Osgood and Miss Sawyer, correspondents Morton Dean, Charles Crawford, Ray Brady and Bernard Goldberg have been assigned to the summer miniseries.

"The 21st Century," by the way, was a sequel to a CBS series called "The 20th Century" broadcast between 1957 and 1968 and anchored by Cronkite.

While the early series considered major events, movements and personalities that had helped shape modern history, "The 21st Century" was a look at the future. It ran into January 1970.

A five-part series from Australia called "The Human Face of China" begins a weekly run on many Public Broadcasting Service stations Friday night.

Each program focuses on a different aspect of contemporary life in China, beginning with a segment called "One Hundred Entertainments," a profile of a traveling acrobatic troupe.

The second show, July 18, is called "Something for Everyone." The subject is life in a commune.

The series continues July 25 with "Son of the Ocean," a journey along the Yangtze River; Aug. 1 with "It's Always So In The World," on the day-to-day life of a Shanghai family, and Aug. 8 with "Mind, Body and Spirit," which follows the rounds of two of China's many barefoot doctors.

As with most PBS programs, air date and time may vary, so check local listings.

Fred Rogers, best known as host of the children's series "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" on public TV, returns Friday night for a second season of "Old Friends ... New Friends."

The PBS series features interviews with well-known people who have significantly influenced the lives of others.

Soviet musicians denied exit visas

GSTAAD, Switzerland (AP) — Five Soviet musicians, violinist Vladimir Spivakov and the Borodin String Quartet, have notified organizers of the annual Yehudi Menuhin festival here they have been denied exit visas and will be unable to take part in the event, local officials said today.

Gstaad tourist director Paul Valentin said the Soviet musicians had accepted a personal invitation from the famed American violinist Menuhin, a personal friend, to perform in next month's festival.

The report was denied in Moscow, however. Alla A. Butrova, spokesman for the Soviet Culture Ministry, said Gosconcert — the state agency that handles trips by musicians abroad — had never told festival organizers that Spivakov and the quartet would be available, and they have other engagements for next month.

"It was a unilateral invitation, and there was no contract and no agreement," Mrs. Butrova said. "We never confirmed that the artists can take part."

Summer films worth watching

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

MY BODYGUARD is a soul-satisfying film, totally involving and richly rewarding. Unlike most of the other summer product, it touches the heart. The simple story concerns a new kid in a Chicago public high school, beset by a bunch of extorting punks. His solution is to hire as bodyguard a hulking fellow student with an aura of violence. Then the head tough hires his own bodyguard, who resembles a Russian wrestler. The inspired script by Alan Ormsby and crisp direction by Tony Bill draw the best from a talented cast: Chris Makepeace, Adam Baldwin, Matt Dillon, plus grown-ups Ruth Gordon, Martin Mull and John Houseman. Rated PG, with a minor amount of swearing.

THE BIG RED ONE harks back to the best of the World War II movies — "The Story of G.I. Joe," "Battleground." Like the others, it is filled with bomb bursts, littered battlefields and grudging sentiment among comrades in arms. Samuel Fuller, who served in the Big Red One (First Infantry), devoted half a lifetime to getting the story on the screen, and he has succeeded with valor. He wisely avoided the full panoply of war and concentrated on the lives of a sergeant and four "wet-nose" recruits. Lee Marvin is the sergeant every G.I. wished he had; his performance is flawless. His work is well-supported by Mark Hamill, Robert Carradine, Bobby DiCicco and Kelly Ward. The rating is PG, with much carnage and the kind of soldierly language that wasn't perimitted in earlier war films.

George Segal: actor who plays banjo or banjo player who acts?

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Is George Segal an actor who plays the banjo, or a banjo player who acts?

Even he is not sure. While acting pays better — by a thousand-fold — it has an obvious hazard: "Movies are only eight-week jobs; I can get steady work with the banjo."

He can be heard twice weekly as a member of The Beverly Hills Unlisted Band. The combo plays oldtime numbers every Sunday night at the Beverly Hills cafe, The Ginger Man, owned by Carroll O'Connor and Patrick O'Neal, and on Tuesday night at the Sunset Strip comedy club, The Improvisation.

Now his two careers are merging for the first time. In "Carbon Copy," his current film with Susan St. James, Jack Warden, Paul Winfield and Dick Martin, he has a scene in which he plays the banjo.

Segal started by learning the ukulele from a musically minded neighbor in Great Neck, N.Y. He began with the standard "Five Feet Two" chords, then made the easy transition to the four-string banjo (he admires virtuosi like Steve Martin who play the five-string).

"I worked in a band in college, and in fact, my wife Marion sang with us," the actor said. "I also played in the army, which was a good way of getting out duty."

He continued playing during his acting career, only as a hobby until he went on Rocky Mountain locations for "The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox" three years ago. One of the actors was Conrad Janis, an accomplished trombonist. Back in Beverly Hills, director Mel Frank invited Segal, Janis and others for jazz sessions at his home.

The Beverly Hills Unlisted Jazz Band was born. Other players: writer Sheldon Keller ("Movie Movie") on bass; former big-band pianist Arnold Ross and jazz drummer Allen Godman ("our ringers," said Segal); public school language teacher Bill Vogel on trumpet; clarinetist Russell Reinberg ("I don't know what he does, but he has a business card").

The band "came together under fire" at last year's Sacramento Jazz Festival. They have appeared on the Tonight Show and with Dinah Shore, but have no real plans for the bigtime.

"I think it's nice we keep our amateur standing," Segal reasons. "If we were to make records, it would mean adding professional musicians, making arrangements, a whole new scene. It's better this way. If it stops being fun for us, then it stops being fun for our listeners."

In his movie career, George Segal has been beset with myriad problems: an elusive Glenda Jackson in "A Touch of Class;" middle-class poverty in "Fun with Dick and Jane;" marital strife in "The Last Married Couple in America."

"Carbon Copy" presents a new predicament. Segal plays a business executive in the nearby, conservative community of San Marino, on the rise, well-married to Susan St. James. Then a son he never knew about appears on his doorstep. The boy is black, product of a brief liaison with a coed in college.

Clayton trial set Aug. 18

HOUSTON (AP)— Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton and three others indicted by a federal grand jury in the FBI undercover Brilab investigation are to stand trial Aug. 18.

U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor set the new trial date after a hearing in federal court Friday.

The trial was to begin July 21, but defense attorneys said more time was needed to listen to the hundreds of hours of tapes that the prompted charges of fraud, conspiracy and racketeering against the veteran Texas legislator.

Also scheduled for trial in August are L.G. Moore, a Houston labor leader, and two Austin attorneys — Randall B. Wood and Donald W. Ray.

O'Conor said all motions should be filed by July 28. Another pretrial hearing would be held Aug. 4.

Mike Ramsey, attorney for Moore, said it would be almost impossible to be ready by Aug. 20 and "we probably will ask for a continuance. There is a mountain of tape to listen to and I don't see how we can be prepared by Aug. 20. I think a more realistic trial date would be sometime in October."

Roy Minton, chief attorney for Clayton, said he would file a motion within the next few days asking that the testimony given by Rusty Kelly, administrative assistant to the speaker, be made available to the defense.

Minton said Kelly's statements "were vital to preparing our defense.

"His (Kelly's) attorneys have advised him not to talk to us until he receives a transcript of his grand jury testimony. There is some concern that Mr. Kelly may be indicted if he talks with us."

Kelly was named a co-conspirator by the grand jury, but not as a defendant.

Prime rate cut by Citibank

NEW YORK (AP) — Citibank, the nation's second largest bank, cut its prime lending rate to 11.25 percent from 11.5 percent today in a move analysts believe signals the beginning of another round of rate reductions by banks.

The prime is the rate banks charge on loans to their most creditworthy corporate customers. While it is not directly linked to consumer loans or mortgage rates, prime rate changes are considered an indicator of credit conditions and a foreshadowing of changes in other kinds of interest rates.

Analysts have been predicting a reduction in the prime rate from the 11.5 percent level which become prevalent throughout the banking industry early this week. That belief is largely because rates in money markets have dropped much lower and loan demand appears to be weakening.

Zip code will gain four digits in 1981

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service, with an eye toward reducing cuts through increased mechanization, plans to add four digits to the five-digit zip code system next year.

"We'll start notifying business mailers probably next February of their new codes and we'll begin notifying individual customers shortly after that," a Postal Service spokesman said today.

The first five digits of each zip code will remain the same after the new system goes into effect.

Central YMCA to accept yoga class registrations

Registration for Central YMCA's second summer session of yoga will be accepted July 14-18.

Yoga is a system of attaining physical fitness and health through slow, smooth and controlled movement, according to the YMCA. The breathing exercises bring calmness to the body and mind and the general toning and conditioning offers the release of tension and increases one's ability to relax.

Classes begin Thursday, July 24 and continue once a week through Aug. 28. Program fee is $12 for members and $24 for non-members. Advance registration is necessary as enrollment is limited. Classes will be held in the newly decorated Dora Roberts Room. For further information, call the Central Y, 682-2551.

Sharing a smile at news of their son's release from Iran are Harold and Jeanne Queen, parents of Richard Queen. The Queens gathered Thursday evening in a friend's home in Scarsdale, N.Y., following an announcement by Iranian radio that Queen would be released due to failing health. (AP Laserphoto)

250th day of captivity marked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American hostages in Iran have marked their 250th day in captivity, reportedly in good health but facing what U.S. officials expect will be months more of confinement before their ordeal ends.

Officials said most of the hostages are believed still to be at the U.S. Embassy compound in Tehran, but the prospects that they will be released soon are dim because of the chaotic political situation in Iran.

The U.S. assessment was given on the 250th day of captivity Thursday, shortly before Tehran Radio announced that Richard I. Queen, one of the 53 hostages, would be released to his parents because he was ill.

Queen was flown to Zurich, Switzerland, today, where U.S. officials said he would undergo medical treatment for an indefinite time and be reunited with his parents, probably later today.

Before leaving Iran, Queen told CBS News that his medical trouble involved "something with the brain, some sort of virus or something."

Arriving in Georgia for a vacation, President Carter told reporters early today that "we hope Queen will be OK and hope they will release all the hostages."

The broadcast did not disclose the nature of Queen's illness, but said he had been hospitalized in Tehran and his doctors had concluded that he should be transferred to a country with better medical facilities.

It said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's religious leader, personally recommended that the 28-year-old consular officer from Lincolnville, Maine, be handed over to his parents so that "they may provide treatment for him wherever they wish."

U.S. officials said they have received reports that the hostages are examined periodically by Iranian Red Cross doctors and "we are assured they are in good health."

They emphasized that they have little hard information on the whereabouts of the hostages, though they said most are believed to remain at the embassy.

Before the aborted rescue operation April 25, 50 hostages were held at the embassy and three others at the Iranian Foreign Ministry. After that, the Islamic militants who overran the embassy last Nov. 4 said the hostages were disbursed to undisclosed locations around Iran to prevent any new rescue effort.

In retrospect, U.S. officials said the Carter administration may have erred early in the crisis by making the safety of the hostages the highest priority. The effect of that policy, they said, might have been to prolong the situation.

Current administration objectives are "forestalling Soviet hegemony" over Iran, freedom for the hostages and trying to establish a working relationship with Iran afterward, the officials said.

Health problem undetermined

By The Associated Press

Iran's decision to release hostage Richard I. Queen for health reasons left the exact nature of the problem unclear.

The fragmented reports indicated the problem involved his nervous system. But they were unclear on whether the illness involved emotional problems or a disabling nervous disease.

Queen told CBS News in Tehran that his illness involved "something with the brain. Some sort of virus or something."

An Omaha, Neb., minister who visited the hostages in Iran, the Rev. Darrell Rupiper, said Queen told him in April that an insensitivity had developed in his fingers.

However, a duty officer at Martyrs' Hospital in Tehran told the Washington Post that Queen "seemed to have a psychiatric problem."

Queen's family said he had no history of serious illness.

"He was always healthy, expcept once, I mean, in one of his letters in February he said he had some kind of a twisted spine or something like that," said his mother, Jeanne Queen of Lincolnville, Maine.

His father, Harold Queen, said reports of a psychological disorder were "totally inconsistent not merely with what he wrote but with the spirit in which he wrote it."

A letter at Christmas indicated he "was really scared and didn't know if he would get shot," said Alex Queen, a brother. A later letter indicated he was tired. "He wrote about the boredom and fatigue of being there and that it was getting to be routine and part of his daily life. The tension was way down and the terror and horror wasn't there."

The Tehran Radio broadcast that announced the release did not disclose the nature of Queen's illness, but said he had been hospitalized in Tehran and his doctors had concluded that he should be transferred to a country with better medical facilities.

The Washington Post report from the Tehran hospital that raised the possibility of emotional illness was one of many conflicting reports coming from the facility.

Gary Johnson of KEZY in Anaheim, Calif., placed a call to a Tehran hospital and was told by a doctor that Queen had been in a neurological ward. The doctor, who said he was not actually the one treating Queen, mentioned paraplegia.

Parents excited, concerned

SCARSDALE, N.Y. (AP) — It has been more than a year since Harold and Jeanne Queen have seen their son Richard, who was on his first government foreign assignment when he was taken hostage in Iran. Now he's coming home, but the news that he is ill has tempered their excitement.

"I think our first reaction is deep concern," the elder Queen said Thursday. "We don't know why he's being released. We gather it's something to do with his not feeling well...that's our main concern. Is he sick? How sick is he?"

The question arose after Mrs. Queen heard news of her son's release after eight months in captivity while she was in a doctor's office here. She and her husband called the State Department, which said Iran radio reported their son would be sent home because he needed better treatment for an undisclosed ailment.

As he left Tehran, young Queen said he wasn't sure what was wrong with him.

"I really don't know," he said at the airport, before boarding a flight for Zurich, Switzerland. "Something with the brain. Some sort of virus or something. I'm not sure."

His parents said Queen, a vice consul on his first foreign State Department assignment when the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was captured Nov. 4, did not have any health problems in the past.

"He was always healthy, except once, I mean, in one of his letters in February he said he had some kind of a twisted spine or something like that," Mrs. Queen said.

She said she and her husband moved to Lincolnville, Maine, from Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., last December to get away from reporters calling about the hostage situation.

They were in Scarsdale visiting a neice Thursday and spoke freely with reporters, saying their last letter from Richard came at the end of May.

"The tone of his mood was consistently high, spirits very good, morale very, very high," Queen said. He said he had not seen his son for a year, but discounted reports of a possible psychological disorder as "totally inconsistent not merely with what he wrote but with the spirit in which he wrote it."

Queen's brother, Alex, said that a letter the hostage wrote before Christmas suggested that "he was really scared and didn't know if he would get shot." A second letter indicated that he was exhausted.

"He wrote about the boredom and fatigue of being there and that it was getting to be routine and part of his daily life," the brother said. "The tension was way down and that terror and horror wasn't there."

Queen — described by his father as "rather serious, quite straightforward, undevious, quite patriotic" — was born in New York City, reared in Scarsdale and graduated from Edgemont High School.

He had spent two summers in Army ROTC with hopes of attending the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, but was denied admission because he was nearsighted.

He graduated from Hamilton College in 1973, and earned a master's degree in Balkan history at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

He had sought to go to Pakistan on his first diplomatic assignment overseas, but got Iran instead. He left last July 1. In Tehran, he processed visas for Iranians wishing to study in the United States.

Queen's mother and three other hostage relatives went to Europe in April to meet with government officials and to urge Europeans to launch a letter-writing campaign to the Iranian regime.

Queen's release offers hope for other families

By The Associated Press

Iran's release of one of 53 American hostages has given the families of other captives new hope that all will eventually be freed — and that Richard Queen will be able to give them news about their loved ones.

But friends and relatives of the men and women held captive for eight months worried about reports of the vice consul's ill health.

"It gives me hope for all of them," said Theresa Gallegos of Pueblo, Colo., mother of Marine Cpl. Billy Gallegos. "I hope he is not too ill to tell us how the others are doing."

Queen, 28, vice consul at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, was released Friday for what Iranian officials said were medical reasons.

"I'm real curious to find out what's going on," said Carol Ellegdge of Kennewick, Wash., sister of hostage Joseph Hall of Bend, Ore. "He (Queen) was Joe's roommate at the Embassy. I certainly hope that he's not so ill he can't let us know what's happening over there. I'm glad in a way, I just hope he's not so sick he won't be able to handle talking to people."

The Rev. Earl Lee of Pasadena, Calif., father of Embassy security guard Gary Lee, said Queen's release could be a harbinger of more releases.

Mexico informed that tuna exports will be embargoed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has informed Mexico that its tuna exports to the United States will be embargoed "as soon as possible" if Mexico fines an American tuna boat and seizes its catch, officials said Thursday.

The Mexican government said it "had forseen the possible embargo" but would continue to fine any foreign boats fishing within Mexico's 200-mile limit without a license.

Officials said a U.S. consular official has made the American position known to Mexican authorities in Mazatlan, on the Mexican Pacific Coast.

The embargo is required by U.S. law, officials said.

Mexico this month declared its intention to enforce a 200-mile fishing limit for tuna. Foreign boats fishing inside that limit must have licenses. But the United States does not accept a 200-mile limit for highly migratory species like tuna.

Mexican patrol boats Tuesday seized the Marla Marie, a U.S. boat operating out of San Diego, about 30 miles from Mazatlan. U.S. officials said it appeared "likely" the boat would be fined and its catch confiscated, triggering the tuna embargo.

They estimated Mexico's tuna exports to the United States at $20 million per year, with another $15 million coming from third countries via Mexico. The latter category would also be embargoed.

In an official statement issued Thursday night, the Mexican Foreign Ministry said Mexico, the United States and other countries in the area have tried unsuccessfully for the last three years to negotiate a tuna agreement.

Pope winds up visit in jungle town

MANAUS, Brazil (AP) — Pope John Paul II, winding up a 12-day visit to Brazil with a flight to this steamy Amazon jungle town, spoke up for his "Indian brothers" in their fight for survival against the forces of a spreading civilization.

"I made this trip specially to meet you ... whose ancestors were the first inhabitants of this land," he said, defending their "right to live in peace and serenity without the fear or the nightmare of being expelled to the benefit of others and be assured of a vital space which is essential for your survival and the preservation of your identity of a human group."

As sweat dripped from his face in the humid tropic heat, John Paul listened intently to the Indians' grievances and asked them to put them in writing.

The Indian chiefs, bare-chested and wearing feather ceremonial headresses, gave the pope necklaces, an Indian headress and handicrafts from the various tribes. In return the pope gave them one of his paper miters, the conical hat he wears when celebrating Mass.

"We are being massacred, we are being exploited," Luis Pereira, a Micanha Indian from northern Brazil, told the pontiff in an impromptu meeting Thursday night on the porch of the local bishop's house.

He gave the pope a letter drafted by 50 Indian tribes asking that John Paul publicly defend the Indians, most of whom are Catholic converts.

The Indian population, estimated at 5 million to 6 million when the first Portuguese settlers arrived five centuries ago, has dwindled to 210,000 — a tiny minority among Brazil's 123 million inhabitants.

The Indians say they are being driven toward extinction by farmers and ranchers seeking heir fertile jungle lands, government development projects spreading into the jungle and imported diseases for which they have no natural defenses.

"We were a great nation," Marcal de Souza, a Guarani Indian, told the pope. "This country is getting so small for us and so big for those who took our land. We do not have conditions of survival. We are hit by assassinations. No one gives us hope anymore. You are our only hope because you are the representative of God."

Many of the missionaries spreading the faith among the Indians of the Amazon are from the United States.

Ray Crone, a Franciscan originally from Memphis, Tenn., said he and 19 colleagues shared an Amazon river boat with 30 cows on a three-day journey to see the pope. "It was worth these 30 years in the Amazon," he said.

The New Romantics of American fashion are a various breed, ranging from the tulle, ballerina-like dress from Halston, far left, to Ralph Lauren's new sweater girl, center, wearing a Victorian-looking Fair Isles sweater over tweed midi. DEAR ABBY

Do not disturb son denies best gift to Mom

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Now that Mother's Day and Father's Day are gone, and lots of June weddings have taken place, please say something about children who get married and never ask their parents to their apartment or home.

Most parents would appreciate an invitation to visit their kids, and if the kids don't want to bother preparing dinner, they could take their parents out. It would mean so much more than flowers, cards or a fancy gift.

Our son has been married for two and a half years, and we have never been asked to his place. I have hinted plenty. Is it OK to just drop in?—BEWILDERED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: If after "hinting plenty" for two and a half years, you haven't been invited, you can assume that there's still a "DO NOT DISTURB" sign hanging on their door. And I agree, most parents would consider an invitation the best gift their kids could give them.

DEAR ABBY: My husband never did any work around the house, primarily because he was never home. He was always involved in running his own place of business. Consequently, the painting (inside and out), window washing, carpet cleaning, housekeeping, cooking, plus all the yard word and gardening, were done by me all our married years. The children helped me when they could, but they have their own homes now, so I have to do everything myself.

We are building a new house, and I just finished painting the interior. (I laid all the brick for the patio.)

We live on a ranch, so feeding and looking after the cattle is my job.

Now my husband wants me to start going to the office with him every day and be a steady office hand. As it is, I take care of all his bookkeeping and do the taxes.

Abby, I'm 59 and would love to take it a little easier now, and just stay home and sew for the grandchildren. Don't you think I have earned a little rest?—PUSHING 60

DEAR PUSHING: Earned it? I'd say you REQUIRE it! I'm exhausted from just reading your letter, lady.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old married woman. I am 5 foot 5, weigh 240—down from 294—and after wanting a child for nine years, I find that I am two months pregnant.

I am thrilled, but at the same time I have some fears because of my age and weight.

I understand that you have access to the very best medical advice, so would you please find out what my chances are for having a healthy, normal, full-term baby? Also, what are the risks involved with my own life?

Some of my friends have told me that I'll have a heart attack and never make it through delivery. Others say that women over 35 should not risking having a baby because the older the mother, the higher the risk for an abnormal child.

Please hurry your answer. I have only been to a clinic to confirm my pregnancy, and if you think I should continue this pregnancy, I will go to my own physician. Thank you.—OVERAGE, OVERWEIGHT AND OVERJOYED

DEAR OVER: No competent physician would venture an opinion without first examining you. Simply knowing your age and weight is not enough. Don't listen to the tales of your friends. Instead go immediately to your own doctor. Fortunately, today it is possible to determine (by amniocentesis) whether the fetus is normal. Good luck and God bless.

DEAR ABBY: You asked if there were any adult thumb-suckers among your readers.

Well, I have been in the mortuary business for over 40 years, and I had to embalm a 77-year-old woman who had died with her thumb in her mouth! As I recall, we had one devil of a time getting that lady's thumb out of her mouth. And judging from the condition of her thumb, she had been a thumb-sucker all her life.

This is a small town and we're still in business, so if you use this in your column, please forget my name. Or sign me...—"DIGGER O'DELL"

DEAR ABBY: Has anyone ever written to you in defense of mothers of young children?

A bride complained that a baby's crying "ruined" her wedding. I agree, the mother should have taken the baby out, but at 4 months old, some babies cannot be left with anyone else. My breast-fed son nursed every other hour, and he would have driven a sitter crazy. He's 2 now, and I refuse to leave him unless the place (and person) is familiar to him.

Anyhow, I'm tired of childless people telling me how to raise my child. They're entitled to a child-free life if they so choose, but if that means I can't attend their weddings, etc., they'll have to accept my regrets. (One friend said, "Oh, can't you leave him for a few hours with Aunt Agnes?" whom I had never met.)

Abby, if you don't print my letter, please print someone's to give our side of the story.—I LOVE MY KIDS, RICHLAND, WASH.

Adult Rosacea a skin condition

Copley News Service

Q. I am 72 years old and have been having trouble with my skin. My cheeks are usually red and sometimes pimples appear on them. I've tried several over-the-counter ointments with cortisone, but nothing seems to relieve this problem. Could you give me any idea as to its cause and what method to use for treatment? — H.F., Briston, Ind.

A. Acne Rosacea is a skin condition occurring in adults, which causes red cheeks and pimples on the nose and face. This condition is usually made worse by cortisone applications. It is unlikely, however, that over-the-counter cortisone preparations are strong enough to aggravate your skin.

Another condition called milia, which is caused by long-term sun exposure, damages the openings to the oil glands, which can also lead to pimples on the face.

I suggest that you seek treatment by a dermatologist in order to bring this problem under control. These conditions are usually not related to any underlying disease, and a simple routine of several topical medications and possibly one internal preparation should give you excellent results.

Dr. Howard Milstein, assistant clincial professor of medicine at the University of California, San Diego School of Medicine.

Q. I have had several strokes and have had a nervous condition and a hearing disability. For the past six months I have had irregular and soft bowel movements, with a heavy "growling" in my left side. Is there a name for this condition, and, if so, what causes it and how can it be remedied? — M.A.L., Senecaville, Ohio

A. The symptom of loud heavy abdominal growling is known as borborygmi. In and of itself it is not a worrisome complaint, however, I worry more about the relatively recent onset of irregular bowel movements. I believe that this symptom is best evaluated by your physician. Subtle changes in bowel habits can sometimes be the first presentation for more serious underlying disorders of the bowel.

Dr. William A. Norcross, assistant clinical professor, Division of Family Medicine in the Department of Community Medicine, University of California, San Diego School of Medicine.

Number of psychiatrists decreasing

CHICAGO (AP) — The number of psychiatrists is decreasing, according to a recent article in the American Journal of Psychiatry.

The almost constant rate of 7 percent of medical-school graduates entering psychiatry during the years following World War II began to fall in the mid-1960s and has continued to decline since then, reports Dr. Arthur Nielsen of Northwestern University Medical School. He predicts further declines for the next several years.

In the period of 1925-1929, the percentage of graduates entering psychiatry was 2.7. It was 7.1 in the 1945-49 period and 7 in the 1960-1964 period. In 1977, it was 4.7.

The best steak...

VESTAL, N.Y. (AP) — Seconds, anyone?

Certainly there's no shortage of the best cuts of steak in certain quarters. Just where that is, though, the police here would love to know.

When the Ponderosa Steak House restaurant opened its doors Thursday, dozens of rib eye, Delmonico, sirloin and T-bone steaks were discovered missing.

And at about the same time, police were called to the Vestal Parkway Restaurant just up the road to investigate the disappearance of another 195 steaks, packages of chopped beef patties and hotdogs. Also taken was a case of A-1 Steak Sauce.

But there have been no reports of missing charcoal briquettes. So far.

'Blon-deeeee!' still elicits smiles

Dean Young carries dad's 50-year-old brainchild

By MORT YOUNG
Special to The Midland Reporter-Telegram

The shutters are drawn against the shimmering midday sun. At the drawing board, under a pool of yellow light, sits the cartoonist.

Dean Young snaps a rubber band. He is working.

His pencil traces a scribbled phrase across a yellow pad of legal-sized paper: "goes to to the office in his pajama bottoms."

Another "Blondie" comic strip is struggling to be born.

When the story line for the day's strip is completed, Young will send it to Jim Raymond, who does the actual drawing. In a couple of months "goes to the office in his pajama bottoms" will appear, in its finished form, in 1,800 newspapers to be read by more than 150 million "Blondie" readers around the world.

At 42, Young is an athletically-built man with a grave responsibility. He has to make those 150 million people smile seven days a week.

It takes a certain humility and a large, sometimes deprecating, sense of humor.

"I have to make my mind blank first. Which is easy, for me," Young says with a sudden laugh. "Once I've achieved total blankness" — an uncontrollable guffaw now — "I'll let the characters come into my mind. I let them bounce off one another until something happens. I'll concentrate on that little spark of an idea. You just keep going until it works out."

A simple enough formula for success, perhaps.

But "Blondie" is 50 years old this year, on September 8 to be precise. That 18,250 little sparks, day after day after day — a cumulative conflagration.

You grew up with "Blondie," the brainchild of his father, Murat Bernard "Chic" Young, who was earning all of $22 a week as a King Features artist until he struck cartoonist's gold in 1930.

Back then, Blondie Boopadoop was a flapper and Dagwood Bumstead the playboy heir and only son of J. Bolling Bumstead, railroad tycoon supreme.

The world was reeling from the continued blows of the Great Depression. The unemployed bought newspapers to look at the employment ads. The daily escapades of a flapper and a playboy deviated from reality. And reflections of reality, as seen through the eye of a humorous cartoonist, were to become the basis of the strip's eventual success.

Upon the advice of the late Joseph V. Connolly, then manager of King Features, Chic Young married off Dagwood and Blondie. It wasn't easy. J. Bolling wrote his son out of his well. That wedding day, Feb. 13, 1933, was the culmination, for Dagwood, of a 28-day, 7-hour, 8-minute, 22-second hunger fast.

The world of Dagwood and Blondie; of his boss J.C. Dithers and Dithers' wife Cora; the neighbors Herb and Tootsie Woodley; of Alexander (born Baby Dumpling on April 15, 1934) and Cookie (April 11, 1941); of Daisy and the five puppies (named after the Dionne quintuplets, except for Elmer, the lone male pup); of Mr. Beasley, the mailman, and Elmo, the neighborhood kid; and a host of other characters emerged.

In 1973, the immortal "Blondie" gang lost its creator. Chic Young left his own heir, however: for 11 years, Dean had been supplying some story lines for the strip. Now he had to take it all on his own shoulders.

"It did not work," Dean recalls. "Immediately after his death, 200 papers dropped the strip. The next year, another 300. So, I'm sitting here with sweaty palms, trying to figure out what to do.

"My father was my teacher and mentor. He gave me guidelines. He taught me all I know about the comic strip business," Young continues. "I knew what he wanted. I was still trying to write the strip for him. I was very constricted. I had both hands right at my throat and I was lying there on the floor.

"I decided to write them for myself, stuff that I thought was funny. And the papers started coming back. When my dad died, 1,600 papers were carrying the strip," Young says. "We gained then all back plus another 200."

Since then, Young can't remember taking a day off except for a rare week's vacation now and then.

"I come in here every day," he says of the darkened studio, the same studio in which his fathered once worked. "I sit in this chair after a swim in the morning. I don't eat lunch. I'll work right through until six or seven o'clock, and then a couple of nights a week."

The Bumsteads remain the same yet change to remain contemporary. They've never owned a car. They live in an unnamed suburb. Dagwood is office manager of the J.C. Dithers Company, whose function remain unidentified — thought, for the 28 movies starring Arthur Lake and Penny Singleton, the firm was put in the packaging business.

Dithers & Co. will go back into packaging for the Broadway musical Young is writing based on the comic strip.

Young and his collaborator, Jim Raymond, have definite ideas about the strip and its inhabitants. "First, it has to be fun," Young explains. "I try to show Dagwood and Blondie as a very loving, very affectionate couple. I believe it adds to the charm of the strip. Here are two people going through life who sincerely love one another. It makes me feel good."

"Blondie" has given the world more than a few laughs. The Dagwood sandwich, for example. Another is the fastest goodbye kiss in the world, delivered by Dagwood to Blondie as he zips out the door, flattens Postman Beasley and races to catch the bus — which, of course, is pulling away.

So stamped upon the psyches of Young's readers are the layout of the Bumstead house and the proper places of its inhabitants that Young dare not — would not, either — change them.

"Once, because of who was delivering the punchline, I put Dagwood on the wrong side of the bed, on the reader's right," Young says. "The mail was heavy."

Close involvement with its audience had been a "Blondie" trademark. Years ago, a midwesterner threatened to sue because he felt the strip was making fun of him, so true did it seem to his own daily life.

That sense of association was never lacking, even before Dean took over the strip. When Alexander's little sister was born, King Features ran a national contest offering $100 to pick a name for the baby. A Mrs. Beatrice Barken of Cleveland was one of the 431,275 people who wrote in. She suggested "Cookie."

Young himself is fond of all the characters, including Daisy.

Villagers aren't ready to sell

By SCOTT KRAFT

CONWAY, Kan. (AP) — This tiny Kansas village, much of its water polluted by underground propane leaks that pose some threat of explosion, is balking at the chance to sell itself to four oil companies who say they can't pinpoint the leaks.

"Why should little people like us be forced to move out just to make way for big oil companies?" asked Elsie Schafer, 67, as she sat on her shady lawn Thursday. "I'm not against big oil companies, but they shouldn't force us out."

Few of the 60 or so residents of Conway are inclined to accept the offer, which was advanced at a town meeting Wednesday by a lawyer representing Getty Oil, Home Petroleum, National Cooperative Refineries Association and Mid-America Pipeline System.

The companies already have bought four homes in town and are offering to buy all 39 households and half-dozen businesses.

They have provided water storage tanks and paid to have water brought daily to affected residents. But Hadley Sizemore, attorney for the companies, says he doesn't know how long that will continue.

"We didn't say we were going to cut them out of water, but we also didn't say we would continue it," Sizemore said of his meeting with townspeople.

The community, which has coexistedpeacefully for more than 20 years with the mammoth underground facilities at its perimeter, isn't inclined to fold up and move its 100-year-old settlement.

"It's kind of hard to think of selling out," says Mrs. Schafer, who has lived in Conway 60 years. She and her husband, a retired worker for one of the storage facilities, learned this week that their well, too, was polluted.

"It's not fair really," she said. "Most everybody who lives here came here intending to make it their home. And families shouldn't have to worry everytime they go to bed that the house might explode."

So far the propane hasn't leaked into the well of Junior Martin, the manager of the grain elevator at Conway for the past nine years. But he heads a citizens' committee investigating the problem and already has made up his mind — "I'm staying. I ain't moving."

Since January, the town has been plagued by intermittent pollution of its wells by the leaking propane. The problem resurfaced early this week when state officials tested the wells and found a high level of propane in many of them.

Sizemore said no lawsuits have been brought or threatened. But he added the companies still haven't been able to determine how to stop the contamination.

Geologist Bill Bryson of the Kansas Department of Health and Environment said the propane poses a danger of explosion if it accumulates in a house or well. He said the leak is difficult to pinpoint because it appears to move around and affect different water supplies.

Bryson speculated that the propane was leaking from the storage cavities through some kind of fracture system and had found its way to an area right above the groundwater level. He said state officials were setting up a relief well system to purge the old wells and drill new ones to intercept the propane and blow it out. They also are continuing to monitor propane levels in the town's wells.

The oil companies created the propane storage caverns by forcing fresh water into the earth to erode salt formations 1,000 feet below the ground. The propane then is pumped into the caverns, pushing the brine out to ground-level pits. As propane is removed, the brine, which does not mix with gas, is pumped back in to keep the caverns full.

The caverns, with an estimated capacity of 4 million barrels of liquid propane, are spread across a 75-mile-by-25-mile area in central Kansas.

The Conway area, located about 60 miles north of Wichita, was chosen for the storage because of the sprawling rock salt desposits in the area, company officials say. Flushing out the caverns is less expensive than building containers to store gas above the ground.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, July 12, 1980

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Two very funny comedians—Bill Cosby and Milton Berle—were born on this date. Your sense of humor will become more sharply honed in the year ahead, and good will helps you to peacefully resolve a number of difficult personal situations. Loved one's admiration grows. Be less demanding and more openly affectionate towards family members. Considerable spiritual growth is possible if you will dismiss some old prejudices. Personal finances improve as you learn the drawbacks of being overly-modest about your talents. A romantic relationship becomes revitalized following a near-tragedy!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pay closer attention to foreign events. Innovations at work will succeed. Burden may be lightened or lifted. Love relationships enjoy favorable influences if you will leave any worries at the office.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not allow idealism to obscure your view of reality. Maintain a practical outlook. Romance can be extremely happy if you employ extra tact this evening. Try to fulfill an old promise without further delay.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone who has paid only lip service in the past will now make a genuine offer of assistance. Quiet chat with relative is enlightening. A mystery may be solved. Spotlight is on the possibility of a permanent union.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep temper under control. Household chores, errands should be completed by early afternoon. Take extra cash along when going shopping. Bargains abound in small stores off the beaten path.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tread lightly where a romantic relationship is concerned. The object of your affections could be playing games. Act confident of this person's love and adopt wait-and-see attitude.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Foster spirit of independence in a young person. Some news you receive should be acted upon without delay. Contact influential friend if in need of professional help to get new project off the ground.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Try not to wear your heart on your sleeve! Romance is happiest if you allow partner to set the pace. Paragraph in a book or newspaper could inspire loved one to make a bold move.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be an early bird if trying to track down a busy associate. Discussion of a sensitive or difficult situation should be postponed until after the weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis is on constructive change. Older individual may need some special assistance. Do whatever you can to help without begrudging the time that must be spent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid all types of speculation, gambling. Friends may ask favors. As long as these requests do not involve money, go ahead and fulfill them. Problems related to parents will be less of a burden.

AQUARIUS Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Steer clear of money discusssions with mate, family members. What one person thinks a luxury another considers a necessity. A visit to a friend's home brings contentment tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If eager to break out of a rut, get in touch with friend or neighbor who feels the same way. Financial results related to business transactions are favorable today.

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

When this hand was played at a recent tournament, six clubs was quite a popular contract. The declarers adopted two widely different lines. Strangely enough, both were absolutely correct. It was the opening lead that made the difference.

In response to his partner's demand bid, North elected to treat his hearts like a four-card suit, so he responded in diamonds. After a club preference, South's hearts could not be a natural suit—it had to be a cue-bid. North had nothing further to contribute, and South closed out the auction at six clubs.

If West led a trump, declarer was faced with a certain diamond loser and had to handle the spades as well. Since he could not ruff sufficient losers even if he guessed the location of the king of spades, he decided to play to set up hearts. That needed a 3-3 break, distinctly against the odds.

Declarer won the first trick in his hand, cashed the ace and king of hearts, then crossed to dummy's jack of clubs. He ruffed a heart and, when both opponents followed, the slam was home. Declarer drew trumps, crossed to the ace of diamonds and discarded a diamond and a spade on the good hearts. He ended up losing only a spade trick.

When the opening lead was a heart, declarer had a better line—the more so because it now appeared that hearts were not breaking evenly. It depended on losing no spade tricks. To accomplish that, declarer had to guess who held the king of spades.

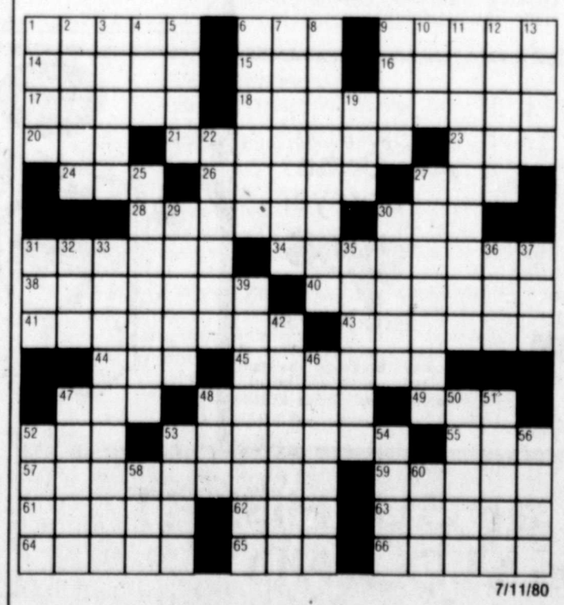

At the table where we watched, declarer took the winning line. He cashed the ace of spades and led the queen. West did not make declarer's lot easy by covering. He played low, but declarer was committed to discarding from dummy. The low spade was ruffed with a low trump, and declarer had to risk returning to his hand with the king of hearts.

That held, and the rest was easy. A spade ruff with the jack of trumps was followed by a heart ruff to get back to hand. Trumps were drawn, and the ace of diamonds was the twelfth trick.

Eyes useful at any age

Dear Dr. Solomon: I would like to donate my eyes after my death, but I have always been very nearsighted. Would this have any bearing on their suitability for transplantation? Also, can eyes taken from an older person be used? — Jesse

Dear Jesse: A person does not have to have perfect eyes or 20/20 vision to be a donor. And even if the donor is over 65 years of age, eye tissue can be used for emergency grafts or to improve phusicians' knowledge of the function of the cornea.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I work in a large machine shop in which the noise level is almost deafening. Most of the time I am not even consciously aware of it; at other times, however, I find myself tensing up as the lathes, milling machines and other equipment are operated. I would like to know whether exposure to such noise for eight hours a day, five days a week, can be hazardous to health. More generally, I am interested in any information you can provide on the relationship between a person's place of employment and heart disease. — Mr. F.A.

Dear Mr. A.: Currently there is no clear proof of an association between most environmental risk factors and heart disease, but that does not mean that such a relationship does not exist. Dr. Wiliam T. Harlan, chairman of the Department of Postgraduate Medicine at the University of Michigan, headed an American Heart Association task force that studied this issue. He reported that while a review of the medical literature failed to reveal a link between a number of ecological risk factors and cardiovascular disease, this probably reflected a lack of information rather than proof of a safe environment.

In regard to your specific situation, it has been established that blood pressure levels do rise when noise levels are high. There is also some evidence of an increase in cholesterol in the blood. However, the long term effects of exposure to noise are unknown.

The same lack of date is seen in other areas as well. For example, officers who direct traffic in tunnels are exposed to low levels of carbon monoxide; yet they do not show an increased rate of cardiovascular disease. On the other hand, firemen do show an increased incidence. What is not clear is whether the higher rate of cardiovascular disease among firemen may be related to risk factors other than carbon monoxide inhalation, such as the person's weight, blood pressure and cholesterol level.

The AHA task force also studied stress as an occupational hazard. Recent studies have shown a link between employment as an air traffic controller and high blood pressure, with the more conscientious and dedicated workers most susceptible. In regard to acute physical stress, Dr. Harlan noted that extremes of heat and humidity are linked to cardiovascular disease, and can even prove fatal.

He has called for additional research on the relationship between environment and health.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

In the world's nuttiest race, it's neck and neck

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — England and California are still running amok, neck and neck, nip and tuck, way out ahead on the wild side in the international cuckoo competition for free form uninhibted eccentricity.

London leaped out front some weeks ago by putting three piles of coal on display at the Tate Gallery. Exhibitions director Michael Compton pronounced them "very witty."

Mulligan's Stew

But California closed fast with a three-ring circus of wacky wonders that included: moving the 93-year-old Pottawattamie County Courthouse from Council Bluffs, Iowa to Torrance, offering for sale at the Fresno Zoo an unnamed baby hippopotamus, the 13th love child of "Bulgie" and "Bubbles," and having the sheriff of Sacramento rustle up a posse to seize Gov. Jerry Brown's 1974 blue Plymouth sedan, sainted symbol of austerity in his administration, to settle a $808.50 small claims case.

No other competitors even came close in the nut and fruitcake sweepstakes.

A freak-out should be arranged between these two finalists to determine the all time mind-boggling champion. Maybe an international confrontation could be scheduled for the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, since, by the rules, the host country is allowed to introduce a new event.

Historically the British have the edge here, free style eccentricity has long been a major sport in this other Eden, this demi-paradise, thanks to several mad monarchs, a delightfully decaying aristocracy and wave after wave of dotty academics and offbeat clerics supplying limitless world class performers.

But California, land of the free for consenting adults, home of the sandstone retreat, the Beat Generation, the alternate electorate, and signs in the Sausalito macarame boutiques that warn "No Bare Feet or Roller Skates," has been playing catch-up hardball with a frensy that would torment the ghost of Pelham Grenville Wodehouse, who regarded zaniness as a British birthright.

In Van Nuys, Calif., a short while ago, while England slept, election campaign workers were handing out marijuana to passers-by in the downtown streets. It was a smoke-in to advance the cause of legalized pot.

The politicians were miffed about marijuana, the evening television news reported, not because it was sinful or unlawful, but because it was California's second most important cash crop (after grapes?), worth $90 million a year and no way of collecting taxes on it.

Having pioneered topless and bottomless go-go girls, naked ski slaloms, the $1.98 Beauty Show featuring 300-pound lovelies and the roller disco craze now knee-capping the land, California's ever inventive entertainment entrepreneurs (known locally as moguls) are presently offering mud wrestling as a discotheque diversion under the pulsating strobe lights.

Any number of any of the four recognized sexes (a biologian house rule) are invited to participate in this gooey grope-in for fun and prizes. The main event in most mud tanks around Hollywood and Vine features the house Amazon, a spectacularly assembled mass of sinew and suet in a Sumo-wrestler's baby doll leotard, taking on all comers in the psychedelic ooze.

Unlike Britain, this sort of behavior in sunny California is not believed to be hereditary, since few bona fide natives excel in eccentricity.

The fault, Dear Brutus (after the San Francisco gay bar of the same name), is not in their stars but in their hills — or what's under them.

Brennan's play approved by Mashpee Indian tribe

By JOHN J. MULLINS

BOSTON (AP) — John Brennan is an Irish-American from New York City who has written a play about American Indians, of which they approve, and formed a troupe of Indian actors to stage it.

"The interesting thing about it, is there is no logical reason" for writing the play, the 36-year-old Brennan said from his Cambridge home.

The play, "Mashpee," has been approved by the Mashpee Wampanoag tribal council, including Russell Peters, the Wampanoags' political leader.

"It has been endorsed. They feel that the words are authentic, and that it is a correct interpretation of how Indian people perceive history," Brennan said.

"They thought that I could relate to them as Indians, that my feeling toward many things could more identify with Indians' than white men's."

Perhaps more unusual — "Going on stage is not Indian," Brennan said — he formed a troupe of Indian actors, The Native American Ensemble, to perform his play and go on to do others.

"Out of the play came the need to form a native American theater company," Brennan said. "That's been neglected for a long time. Basically, it's not their way."

But, "a lot of Indian people would like a chance to act, to read poetry," he said. "This is just the beginning. Eventually I will train somebody to direct who is native American. Then I will slip out."

The roles of whites in his play are performed by members of The Theater Ensemble, which Brennan co-founded eight years ago.

The two troupes recently performed "Mashpee" at the Modern Theater, on Washington Street, with Brennan directing.

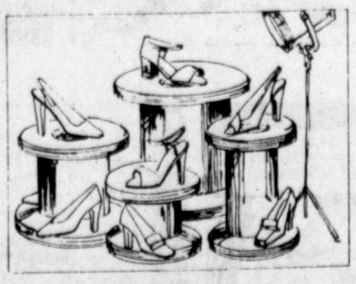

The play focuses on the 1976 Mashpee land trial in which the Wampanoag claim to land in that Cape Cod town was denied with a finding the Wampanoags did not prove they were a tribe on certain dates.

Blame laid on regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace puts the blame for lagging coal production increases squarely on overzealous federal regulators.

"A morass of federal rules and regulations have been promulgated to resist and impede coal production," he said Thursday.

Wallace was in Washington for a meeting of the Interstate Mining Compact Commission, which he chairs this year. He said the 16 states belonging to the commission produce 80 percent of the nation's coal.

Wallace said the mining commission concluded recently that "unrealistic, inflexible federal rules and regulations bore most of the responsibility for this nation's failure to achieve its goals for increased production and use of coal."

Members of the commission met with Interior Department officials this week to discuss problems some states are having in complying with the federal timetable to develop programs for surface mining regulation.

The Texas plan was the first to be approved last February.

Wallace said the Interior Department has gone farther than federal statutes allow in making rules and regulations for coal production.

Heat wave has taken nearly 300 lives

By The Associated Press

A heat wave that has baked much of the Southwest and Plains for 20 days apparently has claimed almost 300 lives in 14 states.

Health officials say elderly people living in poorly ventilated houses are the most frequent victims of the triple-digit temperatures, which also have taken a heavy toll of crops and livestock.

Through Thursday, heat-related deaths numbered 87 in Texas, 83 in Arkansas, 33 in Oklahoma, 27 in Tennessee, 16 in Missouri, 12 in Mississippi, 10 each in Georgia and Kansas, six in Illinois, five in Louisiana, four in Alabama, two in Kentucky and one each in Indiana and Nebraska. The number of deaths is an unofficial tally by The Associated Press compiled from reports by health authorities.

Some state officials contended the latest death figures were exaggerated. Arkansas' state medical examiner, Dr. Fahmy Malak, said in most cases other health factors were more significant in the deaths. But other medical officials argued the heat could not be discounted as a factor in the deaths.

James Hankins, coroner of Leflore County in Mississippi, said six elderly people who died in his area since Sunday had various illnesses, but "the heat had to be a contributing cause."

Meanwhile, health authorities warned blacks with sickle cell anemia to cut back on activities and drink plenty of fluids during the hot weather.

"Dehydration is bad or even worse for those with sickle cell," said the Rev. Leo Gray of Mem[illegible]ecutive director of the Sickle Cell Council.

Continued high temperatures were forecast today with the mercury expected to range from the mid-90s to more than 100 across the southern half of both the Plateau and Rockies, a large portion of the Plains and from the mid- and lower Mississippi Valley to the south Atlantic coast.

In Texas, farmers have lost at least $750 million worth of crop and livestock from the heat wave and dry spell, said state Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown. He said greater losses could occur if no rain falls by Aug. 1.

In Arkansas, Gov. Bill Clinton said more than 8 million broilers and breeder hens have died since the heat wave began.

Water rationing was in effect for at least 30 Oklahoma communities, and Tulsa city commissioners opposed a $100 fine for violators.

Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh said the state has arranged to spend $180,000 from last winter's emergency energy program to aid those suffering from the heat. He said fans could be bought with the money.

Demand for electricity Thursday set a record across Georgia, Alabama, southern Mississippi and northeastern Florida, surpassing Wednesday's record by 218,000 kilowatts.

Meanwhile, a string of thunderstorms moved across South Carolina late Thursday, killing two people playing baseball. In both instances — one at Shaw Air Force Base in Sumter and at Surfside Beach — high winds caused a dugout to collapse on the victims.

Heat has sent electric bills in orbit

DALLAS (AP) — Summertime, and the living's uneasy — especially now that electric bills are putting Dallas consumers in the financial hot seat.

What price comfort? High. Very high. Dallas Power & Light officials estimate the bills for the month of June will be 50 to 90 percent higher than last year.

"Some of the bills are as high as 94 percent (greater than the same billing period for 1979)," DP&L's Jim Lawrence said Thursday. "But you have to keep in mind that last summer was extremely cool — for Dallas — and we had a rate increase (9.7 percent) last October."

Dallas thermometers have shot past 100 every day since June 23 and 105- to 113-degree readings have shattered long-standing temperature records 17 days in June and July.

But during the same period in 1979, the average temperature was a balmy 97 degrees. The mercury reached 100 only three days in that fortnight.

Most of the weather records broken this summer have stood since the heat waves of 1954, 1936 and 1917, years when air conditioning was either a dream of the future or an innovation beyond the reach of most household budgets.

In 1936, the year of the Texas Centennial Exposition, sweltering residents escaped 110-degree heat by flocking to the new "air-cooled" art deco exposition buildings at Fair Park. According to newspaper accounts at the time, the buildings were the first "to take advantage, on a large scale, of modern science that regulates weather conditions."

Today, DP&L estimates more than 80 percent of the homes in Dallas have air conditioning, and all residents have to do to escape the heat is turn down a thermostat.

But they may get a sudden dose of pioneer spirit after opening their electric bills.

Lawrence said DP&L estimates a residential customer with an 1,800-square foot home cooled by three tons of central air conditioning paid about $100 for any summer month last year.

This year, he can expect to fork over somewhere between $125 and $150, maybe more.

"I'll tell you, some may run higher than that. It's possible they could run up to $200, but we figure it will run closer to a 50 percent increase than a 100 percent," Lawrence said.

"Of course, when the temperature stays above 100 for a long time, the unit is going to run a lot more," Lawrence said. "Even if you set your theromstat at 80, when it's 105 outside, you're really not going to save that much.

"And if you want to keep it cooler inside, and turn down the thermostat, you're going to have to expect your bill to reflect that."

Elderly customers on a fixed income may be allowed to pay out their bills, Lawrence said.

"If they've got a legitimate problem, we'll be glad to work it out with them," he said.

Refugees will be released one at a time to sponsors

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The remaining Cuban refugees among those brought here from last month's riots in Fort Chaffee, Ark., will be released for lack of evidence against them, immigration officials say.

Pete Reyes, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said Thursday the 38 remaining refugees at a federal detention center here would be freed one at a time as U.S. sponsors are found for them.

The releases could begin as early as next week, a U.S. Catholic Conference representative said.

The Cubans were among a group of 60 refugees transferred here from Fort Chaffee after riots broke out last month when Cubans at the Arkansas processing center became impatient with the ordeal and stormed the main gate.

Since they were brought here, 22 have been tagged as troublemakers and sent to more secure facilities elsewhere.

But Reyes said there was no evidence that the remaining 38 were involved in the riots. He said there were no charges against them and therefore no reason to hold them.

"We don't know who arrested them," Reyes said. "We have no arrest records, no convictions."

The 60 Cubans were originally brought here to await exclusion hearings that could have led to deportation. At that time, Reyes said all 60 were "involved to some extent" in the riots. But Thursday he said that information was apparently wrong.

"We got a mixed group, we found out," he said. "We have no official documentation that could support an exclusion at this level."

Among the original 60, 11 were transferred to a federal penitentiary in Atlanta June 20, six were moved to a federal jail near Tacoma, Wash., June 23, and earlier this week another five were sent to the Reeves County Jail in Pecos, about 200 miles east of here. Reyes said those 22 refugees still face exclusion hearings that could lead to their deportation.

He said the hearings would take place "at the different detention facilities" where they are being held.

Reyes said the local U.S. Catholic Conference was trying to find sponsors for the remaining 38 refugees, and as soon as sponsors are found, he said they will be released.

Reyes did not say when the decision to release the 38 refugees was reached, but Lily Gutierrez, deputy director of the Catholic Conference here, said efforts to locate sponsors and relatives began two days ago.

She said the Catholic Conference representative at Fort Chaffee had been summoned to El Paso with files on all the refugees.

"A lot of these people — about half — have families residing in Miami," Miss Gutierrez said.

Viets, guerrillas fighting on Thai-Cambodian border

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese, guerrillas loyal to ousted Cambodian Premier Pol and anti-communist groups were reported fighting today along the Thai-Cambodian border. The International Red Cross said at least 85 perople were injured, many seriously.

The number of dead was not immediately known. Diplomats from a dozen embassies in Bangkok were on a tour of the border area but it was not known whether they were near the scene of the battle.

The fighting took place at Nong Samet, a refugee camp housing some 80,000 Cambodians under the control of anti-communist Free Khmer guerrillas who fled their country last year. The fighting began Thursday, relief officials said.

They said the clashes were between the anti-communist "Free Khmer" and troops loyal to Pol Pot and did not report Vietnamese involvement.

But a spokesman for the Thai supreme military command in Bangkok said the Vietnamese were also involved. Earlier, the command blamed the Vietnamese for the fighting, saying Vietnamese mortars and artillery shelled Nong Samet, wounding at least a dozen refugees.

The Free Khmer and the Pol Pot side are both fighting Vietnamese forces inside Cambodia but have at best a live-and-let-live attitude toward each other. Periodic clashes occur.

Pol Pot and his government were driven from Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, 18 months ago by Vietnamese troops who installed a pro-Hanoi communist government headed by Heng Samrin. The Khmer Rouge and the Vietnamese have been battling in the countryside ever since.

The Phnom Penh government announced today it is ready to negotiate with Thailand "without pre-conditions" on problems between them, particularly on the repatriation of Cambodian refugees from Thailand, the Vietnamese news agency reported.

The announcement denounced the Thai-U.N. voluntary repatriation program in June which it claimed was an attempt to smuggle Khmer Rouge guerrillas into Cambodia to fight against the Phnom Penh government.

Texas may not have to pay for driving over speed limit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas officials apparently have convinced a Federal Highway Administration representative the state should not be penalized for the huge number of drivers who ignored the 55 mph speed limit last year.

David Oliver, an attorney in the office of the administration's general counsel, said Thursday he was satisfied Texas was close enough to the federal compliance goal to avoid penalty.

Oliver chaired a meeting at which he voiced displeasure with Texas' efforts but listened to reasons why the state was not doing better.

Last year's federal requirement was that no more than 70 percent of the cars monitored could exceed the 55 mph highway limit. Failure to reach that goal would cost a state 5 percent of its federal highway funds in 1980, or $8 million in Texas' case.

Oliver said Texas' monitoring stations reported 70.3 percent of the autos counted were over the speed limit. But results from one station were "erratic," he said, and dropping them would give Texas a 69.7 percent non-compliance figure, barely within the federal standard.

"I think the 69.7 percent is a reasonable settlement," he said.

Asked if that meant Texas would not be penalized, Oliver replied, "That's a fair assumption."

Oliver said he had "seen some good things. ... I think the state is making a sincere effort. But there are further actions that could be taken."

One such action might be a minimum fine for speeding — Texas does not have one now. Another, Oliver said, might be suspending licenses of drivers with two tickets in a year for speeding between 55 and 65 mph or one ticket for exceeding 75 mph.

State law now authorizes suspension of a driver's license if he or she accumulates four speeding convictions in a year.

Oliver also said the Federal Highway Administration "didn't like it" when the 1979 Legislature repealed insurance premium penalties for traffic violations.

Argentina doubles grain exports to Soviet Union

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — After refusing to join the U.S. grain embargo against the Soviet Union, Argentina is more than doubling its grain exports to the Russians.

Argentina signed an agreement Thursday to deliver 22.5 million metric tons of corn, sorghum and soybeans to the Soviet Union over the next five years. Heavy purchases of Argentine wheat are also expected.

Argentina has sold the Russians 3.75 million tons of grain since January, when President Carter blocked the shipment to the Soviets of 17 million tons of U.S. grain to punish the Kremlin for its military intervention in Afghanistan.

Argentina's rightist military government condemned the Soviet thrust into Afghanistan and boycotted the Moscow Olympics but refused to join the grain embargo and cut its lucrative trade with the Kremlin.

Under terms of the new contract, private Argentine companies will sell the Soviets 4 million tons of corn and sorghum and 500,000 tons of soybeans a year through 1985 at market prices.

Argentina is the world's second-largest exporter of corn after the United States. The U.S. embargo has forced the Russians to pay $30 to $35 a ton above prevailing world market prices for Argentine corn. Grain dealers here say they expect corn prices to remain high until the U.S. embargo is lifted.

The Soviets also have stepped up purchases of Argentine beef and wheat. Their purchases are expected to earn Argentina $800 million this year and reduce the expected trade deficit.

Meanwhile, the Australian wheat board announced the sale of 2 million tons of wheat to the Soviet Union for about $330 million. Officials in Australia, which supports the U.S. embargo, said the sale was in line with the limited U.S. sanctions on wheat sales to the Soviet. They did not elaborate.

Bomb explosion kills three in West Bank village today

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Three Palestinians were killed in a West Bank village today, apparently when a bomb they were working on exploded prematurely, an Israeli military spokesman said.

He said the village of Al-Fuwar, near Hebron, was rocked by a tremendous explosion early today. The village leader, who rushed to investigate, found three shattered bodies, the spokesman added.

Troops closed off the area and were searching for additional explosives, he said.

It was the second apparent accidental bomb blast in as many days on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. On Wednesday, an Arab from Nablus was killed when a bomb he was working on went off prematurely, the Israeli spokesman said.

The explosions appeared to signal a possible new surge of violence in the occupied area, despite Israeli claims that the region was "absolutely quiet and normal."

The West Bank was hit by a rash of violence beginning May 2, when Palestinian guerrillas killed six Israeli settlers in Hebron. A month later, saboteurs — possible Jewish settlers seeking revenge — booby-trapped the cars of three Palestinian nationalist mayors, maiming two of them.

One of the victims, Nablus Mayor Bassam Shakaa, returned home Wednesday after medical treatment in Jordan, and was welcomed by a joyous crowd. His return raised fears that West Bank tensions, suppressed under a blanket of Israeli troops, would rise again.

Meanwhile, Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir was quoted in a newspaper interview as saying Israel is "not at all satisfied" with its relations with Egypt.

IF EVERY CAR IN THE U.S. GOT THE SAME FUEL ECONOMY AS THE AVERAGE IMPORTED CAR

WE WOULDN'T HAVE TO BUY ANY OIL FROM OPEC

■ If all of the cars in the U.S. (in 1977) had been as fuel efficient as the average imported car, the country would have saved 45.6 billion gallons of gasoline, or nearly 57 percent of the amount of gasoline we did consume.

■ Conserving 45.6 billion gallons of gasoline would have decreased our need for crude oil by 2.5 billion barrels. Since we imported 2.4 billion barrels of crude in 1977, this means that, had all cars been as fuel efficient as the average imported automobile, we would not have needed to import any crude oil at all to meet American gasoline requirements.

To put it another way, without the imported cars operating in the U.S. in 1977, we would have been forced to import an additional 311 million barrels of crude oil, at a cost of $4.5 billion.

Driving a fuel-efficient automobile, domestic or imported, helps reduce America's dependency on the oil-producing nations. The more than 4,500 American businesses that sell and service imported automobiles and their 138,000 American employees thought you should know.

A's earn split, but bullpen rests

By The Associated Press

It may not be long before the members of Oakland's bullpen staff start wearing "Work Wanted" signs. A's starters have pitched complete games in 11 of the last 14 games, including both ends of Thursday night's doubleheader split with the California Angels.

Matt Keough went the distance in the opener, giving up four eighth-inning runs and losing a 5-1 decision to Frank Tanana but extending his American League-leading complete game total to 14.

Rick Langford went the route in the nightcap, holding on for a 5-4 triumph that gave him 13 complete games this season and 10 straight, tying the club record he set last season.

The one-run victory helped somewhat in reversing the hard luck Langford has endured this season. During his complete-game streak, the A's have won only three times and suffered six consecutive losses — three of them by one run.

"It may even out in the end, but it hasn't evened out yet," said Langford, now 6-9. "After I lost the shutout (in California's three-run seventh), I was just determined that the tougher they ggot, the tougher I got."

Oakland Manager Bill Martin says Langford has been tough all season.

"I have a lot of confidence in him," Martin said. "His record should be a lot better. It's a shame we don't get him some runs."

They got him some runs in the nightcap, building a 5-0 lead through five innings and leaving it to Langford to hold on from there.

"I was just trying not to let them score," said Langford, who saw the Angels pull within 5-4 on an eighth-inning run. "Billy has a lot of confidence in me and I don't want to disappoint him."

Right now, the Oakland starting staff is pleasing the manager, but making it awfully difficult for the relief staff to get into a game.

After being stifled on five hits by Tanana in the opener, the A's pounded Don Aase early in the nightcap. They got two first-inning runs on RBI singles by Mike Davis and Dave Revering, added a run in the second when Davis laid down a squeeze bunt to score Rickey Henderson, and made it 5-0 in the fifth on RBI singles by Mitchell Page and Jim Essian.

Don Baylor's two-run homer keyed the four-run, eighth-inning burst that helped the Angels win the opener. Tanana, 4-9, has given up only 12 earned runs in his last 48 innings pitched.

Brewers 2-0, Red Sox 1-7

After Milwaukee had taken the opener on a tie-breaking, eighth-inning single by Gorman Thomas, Boston's Steve Renko and Bob Stanley combined on the five-hitter that handed the Brewers their third shutout in the last five games.

"I kind of think we're not hitting," said Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger, "but I don't want to take anything away from the (opposing) pitchers."

The Brewers have scored six runs over the last five games.

Fred Lynn had four RBI in the nightcap with two homers and a sacrifice fly as the Red Sox improved their road record to 26-17. They're 16-20 at home.

Yankees 13, Rangers 5

Reggie Jackson clubbed a two-run double in New York's 10-run first inning and added a two-run homer later in the game to carry the Yankees over the Rangers and raise Ron Guidry's career record against Texas to 7-0.

New York has scored 10 in one inning before: Last July 21, they did it in the fifth inning of a 12-4 victory over Oakland.

Twins 12, Mariners 4

Jose Morales powered a pair of three-run homers and Minnesota strafed three Seattle pitchers for 20 hits to back Jerry Koosman's eight-hitter and give the veteran left-hander six consecutive victories over the Mariners.

Orioles 9, White Sox 2

Eddie Murray snapped an 0-for-21 slump with two singles, a homer and four RBI in Baltimore's romp.

"Was it 0-for-21? It seemed more like 0-for-30," said Murray who helped Scott McGregor, 9-4, to his eighth victory in the last 10 decisions.

Royals 3, Tigers 2

Willie Mays Aikens hit a double and the game-winning home run to boost Kansas City over Detroit in temperatures that reached 105 degrees at gametime in Kansas City.

Indians 7, Blue Jays 3

Ron Hassey's two-run single keyed the three-run third inning that sparked Cleveland to its victory over Toronto. The Blue Jays' Jim Clancy got himself in trouble with control problems; he walked seven batters and five of them scored.

Dodgers find a way to beat Astros

By The Associated Press

Nolan Ryan is almost impossible to beat with a lead in the late innings.

But Thursday night, the Los Angeles Dodgers found a way — even if it wasn't very artistic.

Bill Russell doubled home the tying run, then Davey Lopes got the winner in with a weak tapper in front of the plate as the Dodgers rallied to beat Houston's hard-throwing right-hander 4-3.

"I have to say that's the toughest loss for me this year," said Ryan. "I had a one-run lead in the ninth and I just let the game get away."

Before Thursday night, Ryan had posted a phenomenal 111-2 record in games where he held a lead going into the eighth inning.

"He was throwing well," said Houston Manager Bill Virdon of Ryan, "as good as he has all year. It's a shame."

Russell had doubled home two runs in the seventh before knocking in the tying run in the ninth with a one-out, two-base shot. Steve Garvey launched the Dodgers' winning rally with a leadoff single and one out later, Ron Cey singled to center. Russell followed with his ground-rule double that scored pinch-runner Derrel Thomas with the tying run.

Dave Smith replaced Ryan and after walking Mike Scioscia intentionally to fill the bases, struck out pinch-hitter Pedro Guerrero, but gave up Lopes' tapper in front of the plate that Smith fielded and threw home late.

"I can't say I like that kind of a situation," said Russell, talking about the pressure of a ninth-inning rally. "But I felt confident at bat. I just didn't want to strike out."

Giants 9, Padres 2

Left-hander Bob Knepper continued his mastery in Candelstick Park as San Francisco erupted for 14 hits to beat San Diego. Knepper, 8-9, pitched an eight-hitter as he improved his record at home to 7-1 this year. He is 1-8 with a 5.92 earned run average on the road.

The Giants broke The game open with four runs in the third, the key blow a 400-foot, two-run triple by rookie Rich Murray. Rennie Stennett and Knepper added run-scoring singles in the rally.

"I don't know why," said Knepper, unable to explain magic at home. "The only thing I can think of, is that some guys let the elements at Candlestick Park bother them and I don't."

Mets 2, Pirates 0

Pat Zachry pitched a three-hitter and Lee Mazzilli hit his sixth home run in 10 games to lead New York over Pittsburgh. Zachry, 3-5, struck out five and walked five in pitching the Mets' first complete game since June 25.

Mazzilli homered with one out in the third off Pittsburgh left-hander John Candelaria, 5-8. The Mets picked up another run in the inning on John Stearns' sacrifice fly.

"I had nothing on my fastball," said Zachry, "so I went to the change. At times they looked the same, but I was throwing it for strikes.

"When they figured they'd sit back on my change, I'd throw a little half-fast fastball, and it looked just like my change up," Zachry added. "But I don't care — they can hit fly balls to the warning track all day."

Expos 4, Cardinals 3

Ken Reitz's bases-loaded throwing error opened the door for three eighth-inning runs and helped Montreal beat St. Louis. The Expos broke a 1-1 tie after loading the bases against reliever John Littlefield on a walk by Ron LeFlore, Rodney Scott's single and an intentional walk to Andre Dawson.

Gary Carter then hit a grounder to third base but Reitz fired wildly attempting to get LeFlore at the plate. The Expos added two more runs on a fielder's choice by Warren Cromartie and Larry Parrish's sacrifice fly to offset Ken Oberkfell's two-run homer in the St. Louis ninth.

Phillies 5, Cubs 3

Bob Boone drove home two runs in a three-run fourth inning, carrying Philadelphia over Chicago. The Phillies trailed 3-1 when Garry Maddox walked to start the bottom of the fourth. Maddox took second when third baseman Lenny Randle booted Manny Trillo's grounder for an error and Larry Bowa walked to load the bases with one out.

Boone then singled to score Maddox and Trillo and one out later, Cubs starter Mike Krukow, 6-10, walked Lonnie Smith to reload the bases. That brought on Bill Caudill, who was greeted with a sacrifice fly by Pete Rose that gave the Phillies a 4-3 lead. The Phillies added a run in the eighth on an RBI single by Greg Gross.

Dick Ruthven, 8-5, was the winner.

Reds 8, Braves 6

Two-run homers by Dave Concepcion and Dan Driessen in the fifth inning helped Cincinnati beat Atlanta. Ray Knight also drilled a two-run homer and Johnny Bench and George Foster hit solo shots as the Reds continued their mastery of Atlanta, beating the Braves for the fifth straight time and the 10th in 11 games this season.

The first four Cincinnati homers came off Atlanta starter Phil Niekro, 6-11. The victory went to Paul Moskau, 6-2, who relieved starter Charlie Leibrandt in the fifth.

Tour set for baseball junkie

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Here's a vacation idea for the baseball junkie in the family.

A young man in Fremont, Ohio, has put together a 10-day tour to see 10 major league baseball games involving 19 teams in 10 different stadiums.

At a cost of $849 ($969 for single occupancy), those taking the 3,000-mile bus tour will be able to see teams from Chicago to Boston, plus the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, the Babe Ruth Shrine in Baltimore and any other baseball-related attraction along the way.

"We're even going to try to stop at the homes of some old ballplayers," says Chuck Laterza, 26, organizer of the tour. "The public relations guys with some of the teams are going to try to line those visits up for us.

"We'll be going to anyplace that has anything at all to do with baseball."

The Aug. 1-10 trip starts and ends in Toledo. Because of the tight schedule, two nights will be spent on the bus, but there also will be two days in New York City. The bus will be supplied with keg beer and baseball movies, Laterza said.

Laterza, who played football at the University of Toledo, said his only promotion has been a small ad in The Sporting News. Since placing it, about 85 people from as far away as Arizona and Florida have sent in deposits. The tour also has been featured by several newspapers and television stations.

"We have a gal from Arizona who is flying in from Phoenix for the trip. She has seen a lot of exhibition games down there, but never a regular season game," said Laterza, who is a school board treasurer.

"We've heard from people in California and a lady from Jacksonville, Fla., is going to send her husband away for 10 days. She said when he gets back, he might not want to watch any more baseball games."

The price of the trip includes 21 meals, tickets to the 10 games and motel accommodations for seven nights.

Laterza originally set July 13 as the deadline for accepting reservations, but said because of the recent publicity, he moved it back to July 18.

"It's strictly a non-profit deal," he said. "Any money left over will be used for next year."

Here's the schedule:

Aug. 1 — Leave Toledo for Detroit, where the Tigers host Seattle; 2 — Oakland at Cleveland; 3 — Houston at New York Mets; 4 — Texas at New York Yankees; 5 — Milwaukee at Boston, plus all-night bus trip to Cooperstown; 6 — Morning visit to Hall of Fame, St. Louis at Philadelphia at night; 7 — Morning visit to Babe Ruth Shrine in Baltimore, Chicago White Sox at Baltimore at night; 8 — Philadelphia at Pittsburgh; 9 — Los Angeles at Cincinnati, plus all-night bus trip to Chicago; 10 — Montreal at Chicago.

WBC champion wants to find family members

McAFEE, N.J. (AP) — Matthew Saad Muhammad is willing to pay $10,000 to anyone with information leading to the whereabouts of the family he was separated from 21 years ago.

Muhammad doesn't remember much about the day that changed his life so dramatically. In fact, he can't even remember what his name was at the time.

"I think I was 5 years old," Muhammad said. "I remember racing my brother, I think he was two years older, to my grandmother's house. The only thing I can remember is the police found me crying on the Ben Franklin Parkway."

Muhammad, the 26-year-old World Boxing Council light heavyweight champion, is an orphan from the streets of Philadelphia. A burning desire has enveloped him recently to find out just who he is. Muhammad, who embraced the Muslim religion eight years ago and changed his name from Matthew Franklin last year, is offering the money to anyone supplying evidence that would put him in touch with his relatives.

"I could tell him (his brother) a mile away. I just would like to know and that's it," he said. "I guess it's my conscience. I just would like to meet them and then I would be happy."

He has sketchy recollections of his brother leaving him on the Ben Franklin Parkway. The next thing he knew he was in a police station.

"When the policewoman asked me my name, I said, 'I don't know,'" Muhammad recalled.

He didn't say, why, at the age of 5, he didn't know his name. That's as baffling to him as the inability of his parents to find him. The police tried very hard to locate his parents but he was eventually placed in a foster home presided by nuns — and that's how he got the name Matthew Franklin.

"They named me Matthew because it means chosen one," he said. "And Franklin, because I was found on the Ben Franklin Parkway."

Muhammad, who defends his title against Yaqui Lopez Sunday, has begun the process of tracing his roots. He is reluctant to recount details of his early years, wary that imposters in search of the $10,000 will surface.

Muhammad was adopted at the age of 7 by John and Bertha Santos, a Portuguese couple. His stepmother recently died.

Milwaukee golfers have par-shattering frolic

MILWAUKEE (AP) — From 1973, when he spectacularly won the U.S. Open, through 1976, Johnny Miller was a master on the Professional Golfer's Association tour.

He won eight tournaments in 1974, four the next year, and three in 1976, including the British Open.

Then came the slump. It appeared in 1977 and deepened in 1978 to $17,440 and 111th place on the money list.

When he won at Inverrary last March, he walked the final hole to the cheers of thousands of spectators, and his smile returned. It had been missing a longtime.

Was Johnny Miller back at last? Not quite. A tie for 25th was his best in his next three tournaments. Then he had a tenth finish, a tie for 23rd, and finally failed to make the cut in the U.S. Open.

It looked as if he were snapping back with an eighth place finish in the Canadian Open, but his putting started to haunt him again.

"I made only four putts over six feet in the Canadian Open," said Miller, whose four-under-par 68 put him in a pack of par-busters in the first round of the $200,000 Greater Milwaukee Open Thursday.

Miller, though, found himself sharing 18th place with nine other players after par-shattering frolic.

Of 143 starters, 88 broke par 72 on the hilly 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course, whose rough is like a backyard that hasn't been mowed in a week.

Leading the hot-shooting board into Friday's second round was Ron Streck, the 1978 Texas Open titleist, whose 65 included a streak of five birdies.

Breathing down his neck with 66 were Miller Barber, Fred Marti, Barney Thompson, George Cadle, and defending champion Calvin Peete.

Marti fashioned the most spectacular shot of the first round — a double-eagle two with a 226-yard 4-wood.

Eleven players tied at 67. Scott Simpson, fresh from his Western Open victory and trying for a $100,000 bonus if he can win this tournament, which pays a $36,000 first prize, was lost in the pack with 71.

Miller, who missed only one green Thursday, had been so troubled about his putting that he started stroking the ball cross-handed.

Jury awards Forstater money

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal jury has awarded $69,167 to the former chief financial officer of the Philadelphia Eagles in a countersuit which sought more than $500,000 from the football team and its owner Leonard Tose.

After 15 hours of deliberations, the jury denied three additional claims against Tose by former Eagles officer Sidney Forstater, including one alleging Tose defamed him by publicly calling him "disloyal."

Thursday's verdict came just 10 days after a federal judge dismissed due to insufficient evidence Tose's $23 million antitrust suit against three banks and three individuals, including Forstater, charging a conspiracy to oust him as owner of the National Football League team.

In awarding the sum on Thursday, the jury ruled that Tose reneged on an oral contract with Forstater in May 1977.

Officers have orders to committ Reaves to mental center

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Hillsborough County sheriff's deputies say they will try again today to locate Minnesota Vikings reserve quarterback John Reaves to serve him with an order committing him to a mental health center.

The order from a Hillsborough circuit judge resulted from affidavits signed by three persons who said Reaves had threatened to kill them and was "spaced out on drugs."

One of the affidavits said Reaves had been seen "using cocaine, quaaludes and alcohol at the same time."

Deputies attempted to locate Reaves Thursday but without success. "We know where he was last night, but we still haven't caught up with him," Sgt. Joe Collins said today.

The commitment order was signed Wednesday by Circuit Judge Benjamin C. Sidwell of Tampa. Reaves' wife Patti said her husband could be confined to Hillsborough Mental Health Center for as long as 28 days.

'He's a fantastic person," Mrs. Reaves said of her husband, a former University of Florida star quarterback. "Football has been his life. He's always tried so hard and it has been one frustration after another."

Reaves, 30, joined the Vikings last season but didn't play a down. He was not expected to make the final cut this year. He was the Philadelphia Eagles' No. 1 draft pick in 1972 and played there for three years before going to the Cincinnati Bengals. He was released by the Bengals in 1979 and was acquired by the Vikings.

Reaves was picked up here twice in May on charges of driving while intoxicated. During the second arrest, May 23, police said they also found a small amount of marijuana in the car Reaves was driving.

According to the persons who filed the affidavits, Reaves allegedly became irrational Monday night in a Tampa restaurant. After another incident Tuesday night, the three filed the commitment affidavits.

One of the affidavits was filed by restaurant co-owner Anthony D'Alvanza. He said Reaves had been taken to a mental health crisis center Tuesday night and stayed there about two hours. After leaving, D'Alvanza said Reaves came to his home and threatened him.

Lou Ann Salmon said she had known Reaves for some time and added, "I believe him to be totally out of his mind at this time."

In her affidavit, she said she asked him to leave the restaurant Monday night because his foul language was disturbing people. "He went berserk, pushed me in the face, threatened to kill my husband and said he was going to get a gun," she said.

An affidavit by Christopher Gray said he had seen Reaves use "cocaine, quaaludes and alcohol at the same time. He looks wild at these times. His eyes were red with rage ... he went berserk ... and used foul language and grabbed men and threatened me, and I have heard him threaten to kill people many times in the past few days."

"We're shocked and distressed to hear about the incidents in Florida involving John Reaves," said Vikings Coach Bud Grant in a prepared statement Thursday. "We want his family to know of our concern and we hope that John can make a complete recovery."

Cubs' win streak halted by Captains

SHREVEPORT — All good things must come to an end and Shreveport taught the Midland Cubs that lesson all over again here Thursday night as the Captains ended the Bruins' six-game winning streak with a 10-8 Texas League victory.

The Cubs looked as if they were going to run that winning string to seven games early in the contest as Midland jumped to a big 7-2 lead with ace Jon Perlman on the mound, but Perlman couldn't hold the tide and reliever Vince Valentini couldn't either and was charged with the loss after giving up two runs in ⅔-innings of work, one of which was unearned.

The Cubs started quickly in the first with three runs when Scott Fletcher lead off the game with a solo homer. Later in the inning, Tom Grant and Gary Krug had RBI singles for a 3-0 lead. Then Joe Hicks opened the second with a solo homer for a 4-1 lead.

The Caps begin their comeback in the bottom of the second when they got a run on back-to-back doubles by Jim Wojcik and Dave Wiggins to cut the margin to 4-2, but Midland pulled away to a 7-2 margin in the fourth on straight singles by Mike Shepston, Fletcher, Jesus Alfaro and J. W. Mitchell for one run and Fletcher scored on an error while Alfaro scored on a grounder by Grant.

Shreveport exploded in the bottom of the fourth for three runs on a homer by Jim Rothford, a grounder by Dan Gladden and a key double by Wojcik. The game was tied in the fifth at 7-7 on an RBI double by Rothford and an RBI single by David Cardwell.

Shreveport won it in the sixth on an RBI single by Dave Wiggins and an error by the Cubs. Both teams scored in the eighth, but the margin had been decided.

The two teams meet in a doubleheader tonight and a single game Saturday before taking Sunday off.

Celts may lose cager

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics plan to make another bid to keep free agent forward Cedric Maxwell, but his agent says the chances that he will re-sign with the National Basketball Association team are "extremely remote."

While acknowledging that "something could change," agent Ron Grinker said Thursday that Maxwell, who has spent all three years of his NBA career with Boston, probably will sign with another team within 10 days.

Moxness, Alcott beat U.S. Open heat

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Despite turning in a 1-under-par 70 to share the first-round lead in the U.S. Women's Open with Barbara Moxness, Amy Alcott says the sweltering heat hurt her feelings — literally.

She made the comment to reporters Thursday afternoon, minutes after carding an 18-hole score that included three bogeys, two on the back nine.

The 150-player field began competition Thursday at the Richland Country Club to determine the winner of the 72-hole, $140,000 event.

Hot, humid weather with temperatures in the mid-90s followed the women as they made their way around the par-71, 6,229-yard golf course.

Alcott, 24, currently the No.2 money winner on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour with more than $130,000 for the year, said a 35-foot birdie on the second hole built her confidence and gave her some momentum for the round.

"I feel I played a good short game today," the personable brunette from Santa Monica, Calif. said. "I'd be satisfied if I played as well tomorrow."

But Alcott admitted the heat gave her some problems.

"I have a problem with the heat; my hands swell up and I lose some of the feeling," she said. "Then I hit some of the squirreliest shots you've ever seen.

"It especially affects your 'feel' shots, the short ones. But I put some ice on my hands and I feel that helped my short game today."

Co-leader Moxness, from San Diego, Calif., said an early morning tee-off time helped her game.

"I was fortunate to tee off early," the 27-year-old blonde said. "I ran out of gas on the last four or five holes ... I think my score indicates that."

She fired a 3-under par 55 through the 15th hole, then bogeyed the next two holes before two-putting her way out with a par 4 on No. 18 to preserve the 1-under score.

That was still good enough to give her, along with Alcott, a 2-stroke advantage over the seven golfers who turned in identical scores of 72.

The group included Donna Caponi-Young, Marlene Floyd, Penny Pulz, Kathryn Young, Lori Garbacz, Martha Hansen and Janet Alex.

One of the early surprises of the four-day tournament was Nancy Lopez-Melton, a pre-tournament favorite who carded a 36-38-74.

She came into the clubhouse just three over par on the back nine despite racking up a quadruple bogey on No. 13, a 524-yard, par five hole.

"I played well today except for that hole," she said. "That was the only hole that gave me trouble.

"When I finally hit my fifth shot (of nine) and it hit that tree, I felt stupid," she said. "Then I began to laugh.

"Still, I didn't let it get me down because I knew I was playing pretty good. I knew there were three more days to play in the tournament."

Unsigned players headache to NFL

By The Associated Press

With rookies from the San Diego Chargers opening the first National Football League training camp Friday, 11 of the league's 28 first-round draft choices still have not signed with their clubs.

Six of the unsigned players were among the first 10 players chosen at the April 29 draft, including No. 4 Bruce Clark, who has agreed instead to play with Toronto of the Canadian Football League. Clark bypassed Green Bay because of a money disagreement and the Penn State defensive tackle's reluctance to play nose guard in a 3-4 alignment with the Packers.

Besides Clark, the other players drafted among the first 10 who remain unsigned are: the No. 3 pick, Southern California tackle Anthony Munoz, drafted by the Cincinnati Bengals; the No. 5 pick, Texas A&M running back Curtis Dickey, drafted by the Baltimore Colts; the No. 7 pick, Nebraska tight end Junior Miller, drafted by the Atlanta Falcons; the No. 8 pick, Colorado defensive back Mark Haynes, drafted by the New York Giants, and the No. 9 pick, Washington defensive tackle Doug Martin, drafted by the Minnesota Vikings.

The other unsigned first-round players are: No. 13, Rice running back Earl Cooper, drafted by the San Francisco 49ers; No. 15, Brigham Young quarterback Marc Wilson, drafted by the Oakland Raiders; No. 20, Clemson defensive tackle Jim Stuckey, drafted by the 49ers; No. 24, Texas defensive back Derrick Hatchett, drafted by the Colts, and No. 25, Notre Dame running back Vagas Ferguson, drafted by the New England Patriots.

It was the lure of the CFL that kept last year's No. 1 pick, Tom Cousineau, out of the Buffalo Bills' lineup. Cousineau, a linebacker from Ohio State, has been the NFL's only No. 1 selection to sign with another league. Except for Cousineau, every first-round draft choice signed with an NFL club last year.

Although Oklahoma running back Billy Sims' agent was dickering with the CFL, this year's No. 1 choice did not follow Cousineau to Canada. The 1978 Heisman Trophy winner signed a multi-year contract with the Detroit Lions that reportedly is worth between $1.5 and $1.7 million.

The value of Sims' deal, and the reported $1.4 million package the No. 4 pick, Texas' speedy wide ruceiver Johnny "Lam" Jones, signed with the New York Jets, have apparently been the yardsticks first-round selctions have been testing in their negotiations.

Some teams have been reluctant to follow the Sims-Jones precedent, which seems to be the biggest reason why nearly one-half the No. 1 draft picks remain unsigned a week before many regular training camps are set to open.

Wayne Webb paces PBA list

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Wayne Webb continues to lead the Professional Bowlers Association earnings list this week, having won $78,380 in 21 tournaments.

Mark Roth is in second place and inched closer to Webb by taking home the $5,000 third prize in the $90,000 Fresno Open on Tuesday. The tournament's $11,000 first place went to Steve Cook. Paul Moser took second.

Roth has now won $75,850 on the 1980 tour.

Gary Dickinson is third on the PBA winnings list, while Mike Aulby is fourth. Nelson Burton Jr. rounds out the top five.

The tour is in Torrance, Calif., for the $80,000 Southern California Open this week. Finals are set for next Tuesday.

SOC gives another star to Chaparrals

Puntus Wilson, named 1980 high school basketball's "Player of the Year" in Dallas, has signed to play for the Midland College Chaparrals.

"Wilson is another in a great succession of guards from South Oak Cliff High School to come to Midland College," MC coach Jerry Stone said. "Midland College started with Tommy Parks, followed by Cullen Mayfield and now Wilson."

At 6-foot-3½ and 175-pounds, Wilson is larger than either Parks or Mayfield. He was named first team All-District for Class 12-4A in 1979 and 1980. He also was named to the Dallas All-Metro first team both his junior and senior years. His scoring average was 20.2 points per game, plus eight rebounds.

At the Dallas-Ft. Worth All-Star game last month, in which Stome was one of the coaches, Wilson was named Most Valuable Player. He also was chosen as senior class favorite and most athletic at SOC this year.

"Wilson is a versatile player, who is tall enough to go inside for rebounds and big enough to play good defense against opposing guards. He's always around the ball and has great court judgement," Stone said.

Wilson becomes the third signee for MC this summer. Chester Smith, of Dallas Wilmer-Hutchins, and Lance McCain from Andrews earlier joined the fold.

BOWLING BEAT

Lacy snares 812 series

By RANDY ISENBERG

Charlie Lacy rolled out an 812 series this past week at Super Bowl to become the third bowler in the city of Midland to reach the 800 milestone.

Lacy, who gave the pro tour a whirl in 1979-80, was happy to accomplish the high honor score, and wondered if he would ever reach the level. Lacy's scores were 265, 278 and 269 for the first three games and 211 in the final game of the four-game set for a robust 1023 set.

Other bowlers to reach the 800 level are Brent Gallagher and youth bowler Darrin Matlock.

Gallagher and Arthur Correa teamed to win the Air Park Lanes Fourth of July Double Elimination Tournament for the second consecutive year, and was also the sixth doubles title for the twosome. Finishing second were Jim Ledbetter and Sonny Poole, who were the leaders through the first three rounds before losing twice in the championship match. Third went to Gary Stephens and Ken Culp.

Trivia notes from the American Bowling Congress yearbook and press and TV guide recently released: The oldest ABC sanctioned league is the Bankers League of New York, which is in its 88th year. Next in line are the Stock Exchange, 84 years; Drug and Chemical and New York Athletic Club League, both in their 83rd year.

Speaking of 800 series, ala Lacy, Gallagher and Matlock, Elvin Mesger rolled six 800 series during the 1966-67 season in St. Louis, Mo. Mesger has also rolled 21 800s since he started bowling. Mesger has also rolled 27 sanctioned 300 games, more than anyone. Pro bowler Dave Soutar of Kansas City is the nearest to Mesger with 18 perfectos while Dick Weber and George Billick of Old Forge, Penn., both have 17 sanctioned all strike games. Fourteen bowlers have recorded back-to-back 800 series.

JIM MURRAY

Fans need a second look

By Jim Murray
Los Angeles Times

Baseball fans are traditionalists of the staidest sort. They make the House of Lords look like a crowd of Bolsheviks, and Ronald Reagan a social worker. They frown on change, scorn innovation. They prefer the world the way their grandfathers had it and the ball field is the last place they can find it anymore. They are as prone to ancestor worship as members of the Mayflower Society, or the DAR. They think things were better in 1910, and that football is beneath contempt because it changes its rules every half hour.

But some of their most cherished axioms don't stand the scrutiny of empirical inspection. Such as,

"THE TEAM THAT IS IN FIRST PLACE ON THE FOURTH OF JULY WILL WIN THE PENNANT" --Not lately. Last year, in the National League, Montreal was first in the East on the Fourth by six games. Houston led in the NL West by six. Pittsburgh and Cincinnati won. In 1978, the Dodgers were three games out of first on July 4 but won by 2 1/2. In 1978, in the American League East, Boston was nine games ahead of New York but lost. In 1977, the Chicago Cubs were 7 1/2 games in front on July 4 but lost by 10. The 1951 Brooklyn Dodgers squandered a 13-game July 4 lead. The 1934 New York Giants blew a seven-game lead.

But, the baseball fan is indomitable. He loves to tell you the 1914 Boston Braves were in last place July 4 -- and won the world championship. But, he uses the word "miracle" to describe such happenings. The 1914 Braves were forever more "The Miracle Braves." And in 1951 the home run that knocked Brooklyn out of first place was "The Little Miracle of Coogan's Bluff." Therefore, baseball lore is correct. It takes a "miracle" to upset it. Right?

"A WALK IS AS GOOD AS A HIT" -- Eddie Yost, a light hitter, got 1,614 walks in his lifetime which put him fifth on the all-time list. He scored 1,215 runs which made him 95th on the all-time list. Ty Cobb got 4,191 hits, first on the all-time list, and he scored 2,244 runs, first on the all-time list.

"TED WILLIAMS NEVER SWUNG AT A BAD PITCH OR MISSED A GOOD ONE" -- Ted Williams struck out 709 times in his career which is once every 11 times up. If you're looking for a really selective hitter, try Joey Sewell who played for Cleveland (1920-30) and the Yankees (1931-33). Joey struck out 114 times in his 14-year career. Four different seasons (1924, '27, '30 and '32) he struck out only three times all year. Lloyd Waner struck out only 173 times in his 18-year career. Gorman Thomas of the Brewers struck out more times than that last season. Williams struck out 40 times a season, Sewell only struck out 44 times in his last nine years in the big leagues.

"WALTER JOHNSON NEVER HIT ANYBODY WITH A PITCH BECAUSE HE WAS AFRAID HE'D KILL THEM" -- Walter Johnson hit 206 batsmen, more than any other pitcher who ever threw. He hit more poeple on the head than Heinrich Himmler. Johnson also threw 156 wild pitches which means there were a few that got away. Ducked in time. If you're looking for a guy who was afraid he might kill somebody, try Sandy Koufax. Sandy hit nobody in 323 innings in the last season of his career.

"BASEBALL'S 'BLACK SOX,' THE 1919 CHICAGO AMERICAN LEAGUE CLUB, WERE FOUND GUILTY OF THROWING THE WORLD SERIES AND EIGHT PLAYERS WERE THROWN OUT OF BASEBALL THAT YEAR" -- The eight indicted players were all found not guilty by a jury in 1921. The jurors lifted them on their shoulders and carried them from the courtroom. Then, all of them, judge, judged, and jury, partied at a nearby restaurant. The commissioner of baseball, Judge Kenesaw Landis, was not amused. He barred them from the game for life anyway. The judge, like certain mass murderers, was not going to be intimidated by the law.

"PITCHING IS 75 PERCENT OF BASEBALL" -- So, how come Pittsburgh won the pennant last year with only 21 complete games? At that, it was better than the Cubs. They had 17. Cy Young had 750 complete games. Most pitchers nowadays don't have that many complete innings.

"TINKER-TO-EVERS-TO-CHANCE WAS THE GREATEST DOUBLE-PLAY COMBINATION EVER" -- The year that Franklin P. Adams wrote his famous poem, 1908, the Chicago Cubs, for whom the Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance combination played, made a total of 76 double plays. Last year, the Minnesota Twins made 203 and nobody is writing any verse about "Smalley-to-Randall-to-Jackson." In 1908, the Cubs made 205 errors. In 1903, the Tinker of the verse made 72 errors. In 1903, he improved. He only made 61. In 1904, he made 64. So much for poetic license.

"THE GREATEST TEAM IN BASEBALL HISTORY WAS THE 1927-28 YANKEES" -- Maybe so. But the 1929 Philadelphia Athletics beat them by 18 games.

"FRED MERKLE OF THE GIANTS PULLED THE GREATEST 'BONER' IN BASEBALL HISTORY WHEN HE FAILED TO RUN OUT A HIT IN THE PENNANT GAME AGAINST THE CUBS IN 1909" -- Merkle didn't hit it. He was on first base when Al Bridwell got the winning hit, scoring a winning run from third. Merkle sprinted to the Polo Grounds clubhouse, failing to touch second base. But the real villain was the Cubs' second baseman, Johnny Evers, who spotted the omission and called for the ball which was lost in a crowd of fans. The center fielder retrieved the ball but threw wildly to the infield where the ball got to Tinker, Evers, and Chance, one of the great wild throws of history. A Giants coach got it and heaved it far out in the left-field seats.

Somehow, Evers got a ball he insisted was the right one and tagged second. He got it out of a ball bag, presumably, because the fans had the other, but the umpire ruled Merkle out, even though, if it was the incorrect ball, Merkle could still have come out of the shower to touch second base.

Neither was it the pennant game. It was two weeks before that. Neither did the Cubs win it. Since the fans were on the field, and in an ugly mood (in the replay for the pennant two weeks later the Polo Grounds fans pulled knives on the victorious Cubs on their way to the locker room), the umps didn't dare order the game resumed, but declared it a tie. Merkle didn't pull a boner so much as Evers pulled a miracle. He hid the ball from the umps, who would have seen, for all that activity, that the ball still didn't have a mark on it.

Stargell goes on DL list

NEW YORK (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates first baseman Willie Stargell, the most valuable player of the 1979 World Series, Thursday was placed on the 15-day disabled list retroactive to July 7 Thursday.

Stargell, who was hitting .259 with nine home runs in 50 games this season, has a mild strain of his right hamstring muscle.

Infielder Vance Law, son of former Pirates pitcher Vernon Law, was recalled from Portland of the Pacific Coast League to fill the spot on the Pittsburgh roster.

Lane says Green Bay forced show cancellation

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Chuck Lane, fired in January as public relations director of the Green Bay Packers, says pressure from the Packers has now caused radio station WNFL to cancel a pro football show he conducted for eight years.

Lane and station officials said broadcast arrangements with the National Football League club would be imperiled if the Packers' wishes were not obeyed.

Lee Remmel, Lane's successor as Packer publicity director and now his successor also for the WNFL show, denied the club ever uses pressure to influence broadcasting decisions.

Lane said he is to host a similar call-in sports show on another Green Bay station, WGEE.

The Lane show and the WNFL show featuring Remmel are tentatively scheduled for the same night, Mondays, beginning with the NFL exhibition season.

Lane was quoted Wednesday by the Green Bay Press-Gazette as saying WNFL "elected upon some pressure from the Packers to drop" his program. He cited a letter to him from Phil Kelly, a co-owner of WNFL.

"I checked on the pressure you mentioned and sure as hell it is there," the Kelly letter says. "It looks (as if) we would seriously jeopardize our broadcast rights (to Packer game coverage) if we carried your show. As you would expect, it was not clearly stated, but damn near."

Kelly told the Press-Gazette when reached by telephone in Dubuque, Iowa, where he operates other stations, that that was his interpretation of the situation.

Kelly said conversations about the Lane show took place between Remmel and Tom Simmons, general manager of WNFL, and that no one from the Packers actually contacted him.

New football league is now forming

Boys entering grades four, five and six this year still have time to sign-up for the Greater Midland Football League, a new organization aimed at providing youngsters skills for junior high and high school football.

To sign-up, contact Gil Kenny, league commissioner, at 682-5912 or 683-5341, or get a registration form at any sporting goods store in Midland.

According to a league spokesman, more than 100 boys have already registered for the program, which begins three days of pre-season practice Aug. 25. A scrimmage game is planned for Sept. 6. League play is scheduled to begin Sept. 11 and run through Oct. 23, with games set for Thursday nights.

The spokesman said the new league is similar to Pop Warner football programs which have been established in many metropolitan areas. The spokesman added that sportsmanship would be stressed.

Teams are expected to be organized according to school areas, and each team will consist of varsity and junior varsity squads.

Also, the spokesman said the possibility existed a game would be played between the varsity winner of the GMFL and the champion of leagues in either Odessa or Andrews.

Roberts four hits Dodgers

By The AP

Tulsa Drillers pitcher Mike Roberts limited the San Antonio Dodgers to 4 hits Thursday night as the Drillers took a 2-0 Texas League baseball victory.

In other Texas League action, Shreveport edged Midland, 10-8, Amarillo slipped past Arkansas, 3-2, and Jackson beat El Paso, 4-1.

Roberts, 4-1, struck out 8 Dodgers and gave up 4 walks, but needed help from Jack Lazorko, who got the final out, to snuff out a San Antonio rally in the bottom of the ninth.

The Drillers scored both runs in the first inning. Nick Capra singled and scored on Tracy Cowger's triple. Cowger scored the game's final run on a sacrifice fly by Phil Klimas.

Fernando Valenzuela, 6-8, was the losing pitcher. He gave up 7 hits and struck out 8 Tulsa batters.

Garmon Heimeuller, 2-5, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Vince Valentini, 0-3.

John Alvarez doubled home the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning as the Amarillo Gold Sox slipped past the Arkansas Travelers, 3-2.

Alvarez' double down the left field line drove home Curt Reed, who had singled.

Amarillo had jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Arkansas scored a run in the third inning and tied the game, 2-2, in the ninth inning on a double by Jim Riggleman.

Randy Miller, 5-1, was the winning pitcher. Dave Jorn, 4-2, was the loser.

Jackson Mets pitcher Ray Searage held the El Paso Diablos hitless for 7 inning as the Mets took a 4-1 victory.

Bill Haserlig had a homer for the Mets. Ricky Adams had a home run for the Diablos.

Searage, 2-1, had 11 strikeouts and gave up 5 walks. Mike Walters, 3-2, was the losing pitcher.

Carey eyes Al Cowens

CHICAGO (AP) — State's Attorney Bernard Carey is seeking the help of baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in getting outfielder Al Cowens of the Detroit Tigers to surrender to Chicago authorities.

Cowens has been charged with battery in connection with his June 20 attack on Chicago White Sox pitcher Ed Farmer during a game at Comiskey Park.

"I strongly urge you as commissioner of baseball to use your good offices to arrange for Cowens to voluntarily surrender to the Circuit Court in Chicago," Carey wrote to Kuhn on Wednesday. "It is imperative that acts of violence such as this be brought before a court of law for resolution.

"Further, it should be noted this case is but one of a growing number of violent incidents in professional baseball. It must be recognized that relatively minor clashes on the field can quickly escalate to serious instances of fan violence."

Wimbledon proves big hit

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC estimated Thursday that a Wimbledon record 30 million viewers watched portions of the classic men's tennis final between Bjorn Borg and John McEnroe last Saturday.

The match was televised live to the eastern, central and mountain time zones and broadcast on taped delay on the west coast. That means the live broadcast began at 7 a.m. in the mountain time zone, 8 a.m. central time and 9 a.m. in the east.

Despite the unusual starting time, the six-hour telecast averaged a 7.0 rating (percentage of total sets) and a 31 share (percentage of sets in use.) Last year's final-day live broadcast from Wimbledon had a 5.1 rating and a 24 share.
