Things are 'down' on the farm

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Farming, which depends on the weather and economics for survival, is a mighty risky venture for farmers who love their toil and for those who are in a rut and who are looking to get out.

"It's just like any other business," said Bud Lea, who farms cotton for a living. "If you don't make any money at it, you've got to get out and do something else."

Back in the 1950s when farmers and ranchers were beset by the drought, many farmers shut down their tractors, cleaned their plows and let their land rest and blow. They worked in the oilfields for a livelihood and to make payments on their farm and crop loans. The Spraberry Field was just opening up, and it afforded blessed relief.

Today, there's a slump in the oil patch, unemployment is rising in urban areas, the farm economy is depressed, cotton prices are down, the drought may get what cotton the boll worms left behind, and the boll weevil may get its share of the crop elsewhere if not here.

Lea, who's getting accustomed to but not comfortable with the topsy-turvy economics of farming, doesn't foresee a bumper crop or top prices this year.

"THERE'S A LOT of people who are going to go broke this year — people who managed to get financing last year," said Lea, who took a break from farming and paid a visit at the Midland Farmers Co-operative office, which is the coffee shop for many farmers and ranchers. "They don't know how bad it's going to be."

Lea mulled over the dire economic straits which are haunting farmers and figured that banks which are strongly linked to agriculture are in trouble, too.

"I'm sure they're in as much trouble as farmers are in now. I know the oil-based banks are."

R.V. Robinson, a retired farmer who, according to cotton gin talk, is the county's "disaster consultant," said: "When you get this chain reaction going, you've got problems."

The farmer who has to work on the side just to keep the farm afloat may have problems should he decide to get out of agriculture.

"If you want to sell it," said Lea, "you don't get back what you owned on it."

Lea's not yet in that predicament.

"You know," he said, "if you didn't have next year, you wouldn't have nothing. Maybe it'll get better."

MAYBE IT WILL. Meanwhile, farmers will just work and wait and sip coffee, chat and exchange compliments at the co-op's coffee shop. Gene Jones does it all.

"Why aren't you out there working?" accountant Clelan Atchison asked Jones.

"I'm recuperating," said farmer Jones.

"From what?"

"From working."

Jones, who mainly grows alfalfa, also raises — or raised — cotton.

"Had cotton," he said, "and it died. Couldn't stand the storm, that sand storm."

Guy Leonard blamed the worms for some of cotton's ills. "I think the worm is getting some of it. The dry weather is getting the other."

Entomologist David Fosters noted that the boll worm has "pretty well cycled out now."

"A lot of fields are dry," he said, "and they're not going to bother it anyway."

In the meantime, Lea is counting on

"Back then, you could get a pretty good job to keep the farm floating. It's a little different now. You can't get a job to pay your farm debt."

Begin sees peace plan as affront

JERUSALEM (AP) — For Prime Minister Menachem Begin, President Reagan's Middle East proposals are more than an unacceptable challenge to his fundamental vision of peace. Informed sources say the stiffly proud Begin considered them a personal affront underscoring recent U.S.-Israeli tensions.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said Saturday that Reagan is trying to force his ideas on Israel and warned this is "a grave and regrettable mistake."

"It won't succeed," Sharon declared. "There is no chance of anyone from the outside dictating a plan like this to us."

He said Washington "will have no choice but to back down on the plan because it cannot be carried out. We not only reject it, we refuse to discuss it."

In his proposal, Reagan called for a freeze on construction of Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, and for Palestinian autonomy in the regions in close association with Jordan. He rejected creation of a Palestinian state, as well as eventual Israeli annexation of the occupied areas.

Begin sees the settlements as fulfilling a Biblical mandate for the Jews to live in the "promised land." Despite U.S. assurances that Israel's security would be guaranteed, he rejected the Jordanian association as opening the door for Palestine Liberation Organization control of the West Bank.

Sources close to Begin say the Cabinet's flat rejection last Thursday of the U.S. initiative could have been softened if Reagan had discussed the plan more thoroughly with Israel.

The specific proposals laid out by the American president had been heard before, unofficially.

But Israeli officials contend Reagan consulted with Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Egypt before he sent Begin a letter detailing his initiative, and later outlined the package on American television before Israel had a chance to respond.

They said the letter contained a favorable initial reaction from King Hussein of Jordan and this violated written promises by the Nixon and Ford administrations to consult Israel before launching a major initiative.

"I was boiling. I thought I was going crazy when I heard the speech," said an official in Begin's inner circle, who described the speech with the Yiddish word "chutzpah," or brassiness.

In Washington, State Department spokesman John Hughes denied Friday that the Reagan initiative violated any agreements. He said Hussein was briefed before the speech, but Israel and the Arab governments had been consulted equally before the proposals were put together.

Begin is fond of saying the Jewish people existed for 3,000 years before Columbus sailed west, and is super-sensitive to Israel's dependence on the United States for political and military support.

In one emotional outburst last year after Washington imposed sanctions on Israel for the third time in six months, Begin accused the United States of treating Israel like "a vassal state" or a "banana republic."

There was another clash of wills last month during the siege of Beirut, when a furious Reagan charged that Israel's bombing of the Lebanese capital was disrupting diplomacy leading to the Palestinian evacuation that was completed last week.

The Reagan initiative also opened a new political rift here as the opposition Labor party gave its support to the plan and vowed to campaign for its acceptance. Party leader Shimon Peres called it "a proper step in the right direction."

Labor has long argued that the Palestinian question can be resolved only with Jordan, and has made proposals similar to Reagan's.

Jack O'Connell — friend, journalist

Hearst

Jack O'Connell, a close, kindly, dear, considerate and brilliant friend of mine for many years has just gone up to join Bob Considine, Frank Conniff, Toots Shor and other pals too numerous to mention at the "speakeasy in the sky," as Teddy Hayes tagged it the other day.

Jack was the epitome of the patience and professionalism it takes to be a good journalist. It was not by accident that he became editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine at the age of 29, and went on to become executive editor of the Hearst Newspapers and Hearst Feature Service, and my right hand.

Jack's death at the age of 61, after losing a torturous three-month bout with cancer, takes from our publishing business an able practitioner who set examples for reporting and editing that raised the standards for all.

It takes from his countless friends and acquaintances an engaging wit, and an observer of the American scene known for astuteness, a classic sense of humor and, always, an abiding social conscience.

He's going to be missed for a long time by his sweet wife Carmel, his two boys and two girls and by all whose life he touched and graced, including, heaven knows, me.

Editor's Report

Jobless rate 'decades in making'

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan said on Saturday the high unemployment rate plaguing the nation was the result of decades of government tax and spending policies and not just the recession that began during his administration.

In his weekly radio address, broadcast live from his mountaintop ranch, Reagan noted that Monday is Labor Day and said, "Unfortunately, on this Labor Day, however, too many of our fellow citizens are unemployed."

The nation's unemployment rate, according to a report Friday, held steady at 9.8 percent, with 10.8 million people out of a job. It is the highest jobless figure in 41 years.

The administration, meanwhile, expressed sympathy with 19,000 employees of the Internal Revenue Service who will be laid off next week because of Reagan's veto of an appropriations bill containing funds for IRS salaries.

White House Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes called the IRS employees "innocent victims of the Congressional overspending that took place and forced us into a veto."

Speakes said the IRS, on Aug. 27, wrote to the chairmen of the House and Senate appropriations commmittees seeking authorization to shift money into payroll accounts from other accounts that have funds.

"They have not seen fit to do so," Speakes said, referring to Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss. He said the administration had not made more than one inquiry about the transfer of funds, adding, "they know how to get back to us."

In his radio address, Reagan said unemployment "has been gaining on us for years" and has averaged more than 7 percent since 1976.

"I'm convinced that in these last few decades the increased intervention by government in the market place, tax policies that took too great a percentage of overall earnings, plus burdensome and unnecessary regulations reduced economic growth and kept us from creating new jobs for newcomers entering the job market," Reagan said, speaking into a microphone set up outside his ranch house.

"I guess what I'm trying to point out is that our unemployment problem is due to more than just the present recession," Reagan said.

"We must not only work our way out of the recession," he added. "We must adopt policies that will stimulate economic growth and create new jobs for the increased numbers entering the job market."

Mexico begins two-tier currency exchange

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico announced Saturday night that it was establishing a two-tier foreign currency exchange system effective immediately.

Carlos Tello Macias, president of the Central Bank, said a preferential rate of 50 pesos to the dollar will apply for the importation of essential products and payment of the country's $81 billion foreign debt — largest in the Third World.

A second exchange rate of 70 pesos to the dollar will apply for all other transactions, he said.

The new rates replace a three-tier system implemented last month after Mexico devalued its peso for the second time this year.

After the devaluation, the peso sank as low as 135 to the dollar on the free market until President Jose Lopez Portillo announced currency exchange controls Wednesday and nationalized the country's banks to halt the outflow of badly needed dollars.

He ordered all banks closed until Monday.

All unauthorized transactions in foreign currency were declared illegal by the presidential decree. Only banks or authorized government agencies will be allowed to accept dollars. People caught selling foreign currency in the black market will face up to 15 years imprisonment.

Black-market speculators at Mexico City's international airport were offering arriving tourists 80 to 100 pesos for each dollar this weekend. They were reselling them to departing Mexicans for as much as 150 pesos.

In New York, the major foreign exchange house Noonan, Astley and Pearce listed the peso at 115 for buyers and 120 for sellers on Friday afternoon.

Clements leaves party lines behind

VERNON (AP) — While Democrats were on the road with their candidate preaching unity, Gov. Bill Clements took his campaign to North Texas, where he sparred with one fellow Republican and said the rest "couldn't elect a dog-catcher."

"If I had to rely on only Republicans to win this election, I'd go home and retire right now," he told a rally in Sherman after a day of campaigning in the Panhandle.

Clements repeatedly stressed that he needs the estimated 45 percent of Texas voters who are "ticket-splitters" to beat Attorney General Mark White.

AT A STOP in Fort Worth, Clements showed little of the intra-party lovey-doveyness the Democrats were displaying.

He accused Republican U.S. Senate candidate Jim Collins of committing "a breach of good taste and a breach of etiquette" in releasing a poll that showed Collins within 4 percent of incumbent Lloyd Bentsen — and Clements trailing White by 10 percent.

"I don't care what Mark White says. He's my competitor and he's in the race and he can do whatever (he) wants," Clements said. "But I don't want somebody else dipping into my race.

"I also feel very strongly that, if under those circumstances it continues, what's good for the goose is good for the gander," he concluded ominously.

Clements said he has done no polls since late June, when four separate surveys showed him with between 5 and 16 percentage points on White.

PARTY POLITICS WERE left behind when Clements embarked on a day of "barnstorming" in Panhandle towns.

Incumbents traditionally rely on — or are stuck with — current conditions as the basis of their re-election campaigns, and Clements is no exception.

He touted Texas' prosperity at every campaign stop, even in this dusty plains country where four years of bad luck have worn Texas' cushion against the recession from thin to none.

Clements, accompanied by wife Rita, Fort Worth oilman Eddie Chiles and King Ranch Manager John Armstrong, hopped from tiny airport to tiny airport in Chiles' corporate jet.

At Vernon, about 50 miles from Wichita Falls, party worker Susie Byers said her cotton-farming husand shares her support for the incumbent Republican, even though drought and low prices have dogged him for four years.

"I know he thinks Gov. Clements is trying to help him," she said during a drive from the airport to a courthouse rally, "and, bad as it is right now, he knows Reagan is trying to help him, too."

CLEMENTS, A STRONG backer of President Reagan, insisted voters will not connect him with bad economic times nationally.

"I think people are smart enough to know I don't control the interest rates," Clements told reporters in Canyon earlier in the day. "We're still searching to find out who does — but it sure as hell ain't me."

At each stop, he recited Texas' happy economic news: a $1.3 billion surplus and a $235 billion "gross state product" that would place Texas 13th in the world.

He also insisted that Houston homebuilders had told him they have no problems.

"They're all busy," he said. "Their construction is continuing."

State Democrats find love in bloom

AUSTIN (AP) — The spring spat that blossomed into a summer romance is now a full-blown affair. Democrats — forget those bad things they said about each other earlier — are in love.

Buddy Temple, who rode daddy's money to a second-place finish in the gubernatorial primary, and Bob Armstrong, the nice guy who finished last, have signed on for Mark White's effort to beat Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

"If that isn't love it'll have to do until the real thing comes along," Texas Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle said at an airport political rally this past week.

Even former Gov. Dolph Briscoe and John Hill, who opposed each other in the great schism of '78, are slapping each other on the back and preaching unity. Hill defeated Briscoe but lost to Clements.

"We're going to stick together this year as we never have done before," Hill told a Mark White Night fiesta, an event someone called "the Democrats' answer to the pope's conference on ecumenical peace."

"It is a privilege tonight to join with John Hill, Buddy Temple and Bob Armstrong on this program to see to it that Mark becomes the next governor of Texas," said Briscoe.

Throughout a three-day tour Temple and Armstrong told crowds that White is a great attorney general and would make a fine governor. There was no public mention of the nasty words the Democrats tossed around during the primary.

"Had Mark White been in private practice, he would today be worried about being sued for malpractice," Armstrong said in the spring.

"His response has been to ask his clients, the people of Texas, to overlook his shortcomings as attorney general and elect him governor."

Temple's spring campaign included this shot at White's handling of a lawsuit against a General Motors' rebate plan: "He botched the job. It's obvious that not all the lemons are on the car lots."

Temple ran a television ad displaying White's phone number and encouraging Texans dissatisfied with the attorney general's work to call White.

But that's all forgiven now, thanks to Clements and memories of the Hill-Briscoe split.

"I'm very proud to stand here tonight with Dolph Briscoe, John Hill, Bob Armstrong and Mark White to show the Republicans in this state that the Democrats are no longer going to self-destruct," Temple said.

Prosecutor says woman deserves lifetime sentence

HQUSTON (AP) — A young mother convicted of allowing her boyfriend to torture her 3-year-old son to death deserves to spend the rest of her life in prison, a prosecutor says

Eva Lott, 27, was convicted Friday night of murder by omission in the death of her son, Tommy. After 3½ hours of deliberations, jurors found that she had failed to stop her boyfriend, Gary Ray Barber, from killing the little boy.

Earlier this year Barber was convicted of murder and sentenced to life in prison. His trial was moved to Corpus Christi because of publicity surrounding the case in Houston.

Bond for Ms. Lott was revoked and she will be held in the Harris County jail until State District Judge Dan Walton sentences her Tuesday.

Assistant District Attorney Jim Lavine said Ms. Lott should get the same sentence Barber received. Her attorney, Victor Blaine, contends she should be given probation because "she is not a threat to society."

Blaine called the verdict "disappointing" and speculated the jury "got carried away by the emotions of the whole thing."

Jurors wept as Lavine showed pictures of the child's burned and bruised body and asked them to "walk through the gateway...to Tommy's living hell."

"I wonder if anyone heard his last prayer: 'Dear God, I'm dead now. The pain's gone. I'm free at last,'" Lavine said.

Defense attorney Maria Elena Castellanos argued that a medical examiner said all but one of the boy's injuries could have occurred the same day of his death. Ms. Lott was not home that day, she said.

Paramedics were unable to revive the child April 30, 1981, when they were called to the apartment shared by Barber and Ms. Lott.

The child suffered injuries to his rectum and scrotum and had scalding burns over 25 percent of his body and a face injury that resulted in a hole between his nose and upper lip.

Doctors also found cigarette burns, puncture wounds, bruises, cuts and rope burns.

Dr. Ben Raimer, a pediatrician who has researched child abuse since 1974, said several of Tommy's injuries were two or three days old and that the boy's body showed signs that he had been abused for months.

He said of the thousands of cases he has studied, Tommy's injuries were the worst he had ever seen.

Showing off may have led to boy's death by shooting

DALLAS (AP) — A 13-year-old boy's habit of showing off his mother's .38-caliber pistol is blamed for the death of a schoolmate who was shot fatally when the weapon accidentally discharged, police said.

Anthony Quinn Harris, also 13, was killed Friday by a single shot to the chest, investigators said.

Officers were called about 9 a.m. after a neighbor saw a boy dragging Harris' body toward an apartment complex dumpster. The youth told the neighbor he was trying to throw the body away, police said.

"He was scared to death," another neighbor said. "He said they were playing and he (Harris) tried to grab the gun and it went off."

The other boy was held at the Dallas County Juvenile Dentention Center. Although police said juvenile court action against the boy is being considered, they added that the shooting appeared to be accidental.

A friend of both boys, Tony Cooks, 14, said it was not unusual for the gun, kept under a mattress, to be used as a toy.

"We went over to his house, and he said, 'Let me show you my mama's gun,'" Tony said, recalling a recent incident. "He pulled the hammer out. Then he took the bullets out and started shooting it."

The victim's mother, Dorothy Harris, said she was working at Kessler Hospital when she received a phone call from a woman whose voice she did not recognize.

"She said, 'Anthony's been shot. He's deceased.' I just threw the phone down."

Police said the youth told them the shooting occurred about 9 a.m., but that low body heat indicated the death took place at least an hour earlier.

"I'm trying not to hold no grudges," Mrs. Harris said. "But that little boy left him in the house just lying there dying."

CRIME STOPPERS

Help fight arson and save high costs

Arson is becoming a major activity in our state and Texans are getting the bill. Last year, more than 5,000 buildings were destroyed, an estimated loss of $100 million in structures.

When criminals play with fire for revenge or profit, you pay the price with higher insurance rates. A key element in detecting and prosecuting an arsonist is the exchange of information between concerned law-abiding citizens, insurance companies and public officials. By facilitating the exchange of information, more fraudulent arson claims will be denied and the number of arrests and convictions will increase.

Governor William P. Clements and the Texas Legislature have provided the state's criminal justice system with new tools to fight crime in Texas and stiff laws with which to prosecute. For the month of September, the Crime Stoppers Advisory Council is focusing its statewide "Crime of the Month" on arson. Any citizen having information regarding arson activities is urged to call the anti-crime hotline at 1-800-252-TIPS. Cash rewards are available for information leading to the arrest and indictment of these criminals.

If arson schemes are to be curtailed or controlled, we need your help. Call 1-800-252-TIPS today and help burn an arsonist.

(CRIME STOPPERS IS PRESENTED ONCE EACH MONTH IN COOPERATION WITH THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICE, CRIMINAL JUSTICE DIVISION.)

Long weekend comes with heat

The outlook for the long Labor Day weekend is one of sunny skies and warm temperatures, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The high today should reach the mid-90s, while the mercury should edge into the low 90s Monday afternoon. The low tonight is expected to be in the mid-60s.

The high Saturday reached 94, five degrees off the record for the date set in 1937, while the low of 66 was a full 10 degrees above the 1934 record.

No precipitation was recorded in the 24-hour period ending at 10 p.m. Saturday, leaving the yearly total at 10.19 inches.

Panic may have led to 19 fire deaths

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A fire roared through an aging downtown apartment building Saturday, killing 19 people, most of whom apparently panicked and ran to their deaths in burning hallways, authorities said.

One of the victims, a 14-month-old boy, clung to life for 14 hours before dying of burns, officials said.

Authorities originally termed the fire "suspicious," but later said arson had been ruled out as a cause.

AT LEAST 38 people were injured, some when they jumped out windows in the four-story Dorothy Mae apartment hotel. Many of the one-room apartments were packed with beds.

The 50-year-old brick building on Sunset Boulevard had been deemed a "high-risk" potential fire hazard by the city at least a decade ago.

Half the victims were children — four of them infants.

Four of the injured were listed in "extremely critical" condition with second- and third-degree burns over 90 percent of their bodies, said a county health spokesman.

"There's no question, there's no doubt, that if those people had stayed in their rooms, they'd still be alive today," said Deputy Chief Al Shultz.

Dozens of the survivors were rescued by neighbors and firefighters who yelled at frightened residents to stay away from the hallways, said Battallion Chief Gerald Johnson.

"IF THESE people had stayed in their rooms, they'd be OK," Johnson said of the fatalities.

Most of the victims were Hispanic, he said, adding that he was concerned there may have been more unreported injuries.

"Several who might have been illegal aliens...may have been burned or hurt (but) they just took off because they were scared," Johnson said.

All but two of the one-room apartments were virtually untouched by smoke or flame, and smoke alarms still blared in several apartments two hours after the blaze was extinguished. Smoke detectors are not required in apartment hallways, said fire department spokesman Ed Reed.

Between 170 and 200 people lived in the brick, stucco-front building, located in a low-income area five miles east of the heart of Hollywood.

The swift-moving blaze, which broke out at 4:27 a.m., was not controlled until 90 minutes later because firefighters made rescue of the residents their first priority, Reed explained.

CITY FIRE Chief Allen Evansen said arson investigators ruled out a "suspicious" cause, but were not sure what caused the blaze, which may have started in he first-floor boiler room or near the second-floor stair landing.

He added that the fire "probably was burning 45 minutes before we got the call. You can't fault that person for not calling the fire department. They all think someone else will do it."

Johnson said it appeared flames rushed down the long corridors past open fire doors designed to keep the flames from spreading.

All of the victims died in the charred hallways and stairwells of the second and third floors, Reed said. Bodies were strewn along the third-floor corridor, down the stairs and piled in a heap at the second-floor exit door, just a few feet from safety.

"It's not confirmed, but it could have started in that hallway because of the severe amount of charring," said Reed.

One young woman apparently died trying to save an infant, her body huddled over that of the child in a corner of the second-floor stairwell.

Gustavo Escobedo, 21, said he was awake in his apartment across the alley when he heard a man yelling: "Fire! Fire! Fire!"

"I RAN OVER there, and there was a lady screaming on the fire escape," he said. "She threw her baby to me and I caught it. Then there was another guy who was cut on the neck, so I took him to the hospital."

Gustavo's 18-year-old brother, Pedro, said he told residents not to jump from their windows and to stay away from the hallway, where he could see flames.

"They wanted to jump, they were about to jump, but we told them to stay there," he said. "We talked to them and got them not to jump until the fire department came."

The injured were taken to five hospitals for treatment for smoke inhalation, burns and broken bones, said Tony Tripi, information officer for the Los Angeles County Department of Health Service.

Reed said the fire department had declared the building a "target building," meaning it was considered a high fire risk "because of the age (of the building) and the type of people who occupy it.

"There were a lot of transients there," he said, but the building was not considered dangerous enough to be closed down.

"WE GENERALLY don't close one down unless it's in terrible condition," he said. "People have to have shelter. They don't have anyplace else to go."

More than 100 survivors, some whose hair and clothing was scorched and sooty, were loaded onto buses and taken to an emergency Red Cross center at Belmont High School. Several were later taken to area hospitals for treatment of minor injuries, said fire department spokesman Ray Walker. They were included in the number of injured.

spiders and beneficial insects, such as lady bugs, lacewings and assassin bugs (robber flies), to protect his top crop from harmful insects. The bottom crop is virtually lost.

"I don't think a rain would help it," Lea said of the crop. "It'd have to be a slow, good rain" to be of any benefit.

"Cotton brought 40 cents a pound in 1950," he said, when government restraints were placed on acreage. "I remember it, because I got hailed out that year," Robinson said. A year earlier, when farmers were without those restraints, cotton was selling for 23 and 24 cents a pound. "'49 was the year you couldn't sell it."

"OF COURSE," said Robinson, "in '52, '53, '54 we were in a drought."

"It didn't much matter what it (the price) was then," said Hoot Leonard, a farmer who manages the co-op and the cotton gin. "We didn't have it (cotton) anyway."

His son, Guy, was born in '54 when the drought was well under way.

"If Guy had realized how dry it was back when he was born," his father said, "he never would have been a farmer."

"Yeah," agreed the son. "But I'm catching on quick."

Hoot Leonard, who noted the farmers' sense of humor, said his father joked about that: "My dad used to say, 'Laugh to keep from bawling.'"

Even today, some farmers are working in the oil patch, which at least affords steady income, so that they can keep on farming.

Thirty years ago, the situation was somewhat similar but different.

"Back then (in the '50s), you could get a pretty good job to keep the farm floating," Hoot Leonard said. "It's a little different now. You can't get a job to pay your farm debt."

The drought of the '50s reminded the "disaster consultant" of something.

"There was crop insurance available," Robinson said. "But there wasn't any crop to insure."

"'49 and '50 were good crop years," said Hoot Leonard, "but we got hailed out in '50."

Then, he reflected:

"You look back over the years. There's been some good years and bad years. It's always been up and down."

THE GOOD YEARS could be better and the bad years not quite so hard if farmers were to practice conservation by rotating crops and letting the soil rest and thereby get replenished.

"They're both pretty smart," he said. "They realized they weren't going to get anything out of cotton." Both put part of their land in milo, a grain sorghum. "Plus, they're resting their land," Leonard said.

"He (Graham) could see the price of cotton wasn't going to be good. He figured he could lose less money on milo than on cotton. He wasn't going to make money on either."

Farmers in the Midland area primarily grow cotton. "Cotton is really the only thing that does well," Leonard said. But therein is a drawback. "It's cotton, cotton, cotton, and it's just about ruined us."

"Anything will wear out," said Robinson.

The fear which compels farmers to plant cotton year after year is that they'll go broke if they don't plant cotton. But Leonard figured that farmers will "make just as much cotton" if they let their land rest ever four or five years.

"Somebody down the line has got to take care of the soil," said Robinson.

THE PAYOFF in conservation is enduring.

"We'll make just as much cotton and let the land rest every four or five years," said Leonard. Southeast of here in the San Angelo area, farmers alternate between planting cotton and milo. "It's paying off amazingly well.

"That's what we need to do," Leonard said of crop rotation and resting the land to replenish the soil with nutrients. "We've been planting cotton wall to wall for years."

To the north in Dawson County, cotton is the perennial crop, and dust storms are as common as anything. "Dawson County is wall to wall in cotton," said Leonard. "They've been planting cotton up there ever since I can remember."

In noting how farming's good and bad years go in cycles, Leonard saidthat the cotton outlook eventually will change for the better.

"Cotton's going to have good prices; it's going to be real rosy," said the optimistic Leonard.

Robinson, the disaster consultant, didn't necessarily concur.

"I don't know how it going to be that," he said. "If you nearly drown in a swimming pool, you're not going to jump back in."

Unions wondering where 'jobs and more jobs' are

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year ago on Labor Day, President Reagan told an audience of New York City unionists that the goal of his economic program was "jobs, jobs, jobs and more jobs." Today, unemployment has sidelined almost 11 million Americans and the jobless rate threatens to break into double digits.

Reagan aides say the president considers the jobless rate unacceptable. Because of it he is the target of derision and unhappiness among the predominantly Democratic union leadership across the country. Says Lane Kirkland of the AFL-CIO:

"Because of actions and policies that have been carried out on the other 364 days of the year, American workers have less to celebrate on Labor Day 1982 than at any other time in a nearly half-century."

JUST SHORT of every 10th American worker must observe this year's 100th annual Labor Day tribute to working people by contemplating post-holiday searches for work and visits to unemployment offices.

Reagan, who was said Friday to consider August's 9.8 percent unemployment rate "at an unacceptably high level," attributed the high jobless rate to long-term economic policies during his radio address Saturday.

"I'm convinced that in these last few decades, the increased intervention by government in the marketplace, tax policies that took too great a percentage of overall earnings plus burdensome and unnecessary regulations reduced economic growth and kept us from creating new jobs," the president said.

"I guess what I'm trying to point out is that our unemployment problem is due to more than just the current recession," Reagan said.

The president said that "unemployment has been gaining on us for years," although he added that the number of people with jobs "is a higher percentage of those of working age than we had in times of full employment."

Reagan, who rode to the White House telling people they were worse off after four years of Jimmy Carter's Democratic presidency, violently disagrees with organized labor's prescription for a critically ill job market.

He brushes aside calls for Roosevelt-era government-subsidized works programs, saying the only lasting jobs are in private business and pleading with critics to give his program a chance to achieve an economic turnaround.

"WE MUST adopt policies that will stimulate economic growth and create new jobs for the increased numbers entering the job market," the president said Saturday, adding that the nation must have "the will and determination to hold our course."

Behind the heated political crossfire are the cold statistics:

—Some 10.8 million Americans were out of work in August as unemployment remained at a post-World War II record high.

—Joblessness among adult males, the traditional family bread-winners, was at 8.9 percent, an all-time high.

—Unemployment in the black and Hispanic communities was much higher — 18.8 percent for blacks and 14.6 for Hispanics. Unemployment among black teenagers stood at 51.6 percent.

—Some 5.6 million people had to settle for part-time work, either because that was all they could find or they had their hours curtailed by financially pressed management.

—Only slightly more than 40 percent of those without jobs are drawing unemployment compensation, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. That's far below the 60 percent coverage during the recession of 1974-75.

U.S. soldier tells press of defection

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea's news agency said the American soldier reported missing from the demilitarized zone dividing North and South Korea held a news conference Saturday to say he defected to the North of his own free will.

"Nobody instigated me to come to North Korea," the dispatch from Pyongyang quoted Pfc. Joseph T. White of St. Louis, Mo., as saying. "I sought a political refuge not by any passing emotion but by my deep emotion."

The United Nations Command said Thursday that U.S. troops had seen White, 20, being forced into a North Korean bunker on Aug. 28, the day he was reported missing. His parents told reporters in St. Louis they believed their son was a prisoner, not a defector.

North Korea has not responded to repeated U.S. requests to see White.

The Korean Central News Agency said White told foreign reporters Saturday that he came to North Korea was because he "thought it unjustifiable for the U.S. administration to send U.S. troops to South Korea."

"High-ranking officers told us when we were sent to South Korea in March this year that the U.S. troops were being sent to South Korea to 'protect' South Korea from 'aggression' from the North," it quoted White as saying. "But I had some doubt of the mission of the U.S. forces in South Korea while serving in the army there.

"I am opposed to the unwarrantable policy pursued by the U.S. Administration. I also wanted to show the world the corruptness, criminality, immorality, weakness, and hedonism of the U.S. society and government," the dispatch said.

Special session has candidates fighting it out

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislators will meet in special session Tuesday to prevent a Depression-era unemployment tax fund from going broke. The fund has been drained by the current recession in Texas as more and more workers are being laid off and collecting benefits.

The election-year session could determine the political fortunes of the two men seeking to become governor in 1983 — Republican Gov. Bill Clements and Democratic Attorney General Mark White.

White already has made the session an issue, claiming Clements had advance word that the fund was in trouble but did nothing about it.

"I think it's going to be a disgrace for a man who claims to run government like a business to preside over the first bankruptcy in the Southwest of an unemployment fund," White said.

"It's kind of a crisis-to-crisis approach to government," White added. "We just kind of bump along from one crisis to the next."

The special session will be the third since the Legislature adjourned its 140-day session June 1, 1981, but Clements said those claiming that he knew the fund was in danger are "snapping at gnats."

One proposal that might not set too well with prideful Texans is to borrow money from the federal government to cover the projected deficit in the state unemployment tax fund.

Some have suggested that this would violate the pay-as-you-go provision in the Texas Constitution. White, however, held that the state could borrow money from the federal government.

Clements and other high state officials have said they have no desire to get involved in all-out legislative debate on the tax fund, but merely want a "quick-fix" to carry the fund over until the Legislature meets in regular session in January.

A report from Rep. Lloyd Criss' office warns, too, that "all would-be reformers should bear in mind that Texas' unemployment compensation system is so complicated not even the professionals at the TEC (Texas Employment Commission) fully understand exactly how the system works."

Basically, more money is being paid each week to jobless Texans than is flowing into the fund on a quarterly basis from a tax employers pay on the basis of each worker. The total draw on the fund for August was in excess of $61 million.

TEC administrator estimates at the current rate of withdrawal the fund would go bankrupt before Thanksgiving, and another report distributed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby estimates the deficit could reach $340 million next year.

Texas businessmen obviously are not pleased with predictions that they may have to pay huge increases in unemployment taxes to cover deficits, but various reports note that Texas now taxes its employers at the lowest rate in the nation. A 1981 study showed that the average tax in Texas was $36 per employee — $12 an employee lower than the next lowest, Colorado — and the majority of Texas employers pay only $6 per employee, the minimum required by state law.

Criss, D-La Marque, has filed a bill that would raise the wage base on which the tax is levied from the first $6,000 of an employee's salary to $7,000, which would bring in additional money.

Police rescue reluctant suspect

DALLAS (AP) — A man spent an hour handcuffed to the outside of the 11th floor of a parking garage early Saturday after he scaled six floors trying to flee from security guards, police said.

"We just rescued him. He didn't want to come," said police Sgt. Jack Ross.

Firefighters used sledge-hammers to break through the cinderblock wall so authorities could get to the man and pull him through to the inside about 5 a.m., officials said. An aerial ladder truck brought to the scene had been unable to reach him.

The 28-year-old Dallas man was held in the city jail for investigation of burglary of a motor vehicle and investigation of evading arrest, police said.

Security guards at the First International Building garage, adjacent to the Dallas Times Herald building, said they found him inside a car on the fifth floor about 2:15 a.m., police said.

He then climbed up six floors on the outside of the garage, within feet of the top, apparently by putting his hands and feet in the holes of the cinderblocks. Ross said the man shouted to police, "Get back, get back. I'm going to let go."

Ross said that Officer Bishop Spencer began talking to the man, "gesturing with his hands and gesturing so he could get close to him." Spencer then grabbed the man's left hand and Ross grabbed the right hand and they put the handcuffs on, Ross said.

All the time, the man was unwilling to cooperate, Ross said.

"He said he was going to fight and we couldn't take him," Ross said.

He was tied with a rope while fire officials knocked a hole measuring two feet by four feet so the man could be pulled inside.

Two sentenced in connection with shooting of Dallas man

DALLAS (AP) — A 21-year-old man has been sentenced to a 10-year probated prison sentence after pleading guilty to a reduced charge stemming from the fatal shooting of a Boy Scout executive.

Gregory Gene Bellas, who was charged with murder and aggravated robbery in the Jan. 5 slaying of Michael Lynn Bishop, entered the plea Friday to a charge of robbery.

Another defendant, James Russell Goodwin, has been sentenced to 12 years in prison after he pleaded guilty to the same charge. Goodwin, 23, admitted firing the fatal shot, authorities said.

Bishop, 39, a district director of the Boy Scouts, was found dead in his Northwest Dallas apartment with a bullet wound to the forehead. An autopsy showed he was shot with a .22-caliber pistol.

In a statement to police, Goodwin said he and Bellasdrove to Bishop's apartment, intending to rob Bishop.

TWO TERMS IS ENOUGH

Texans have a healthy skepticism of their elected officials, a wariness of entrenched power that they have embodied in the state constitution. They have historically refused to keep top state officeholders more than a few terms.

Now my opponent comes along, having spent nearly ten years in the Lt. Governor's office, one of the top state policy-making offices. Mr. Hobby wants yet another term to make it 14 years in that crucial job. That is unprecedented. Never in Texas' history has any Lt. Governor served that long — or wanted to.

His desire, frankly, puzzles me. You would think he would have other goals, other challenges he might want to tackle. As his primary opponent this year said, "If he had anything to get done, you'd think he would have done it by now."

My opponent will tell you that experience is what counts. I think voters need to look at the experience they have had with him. After ten years, our highways are in bad shape, the quality of education has declined, we still do not have a new, statewide water plan and he has refused to tackle the growing crime problem. We can't afford more of that kind of experience.

I have a long-held belief in what I call the citizen-politician: someone who holds a job, serves his country (or state) for a reasonable time, then returns to that job and private life. For that reason, the first order of business after I am elected will be to have a constitutional amendment introduced in the legislature limiting the Lt. Governor to two terms — eight years. That is enough time for anyone. Too great a concentration of power for too long is bad. That is a principle of democracy.

If you have any thoughts on this subject, please write me at 1213 W. 34th, Austin, 78705.

Dallasite may face 30 years

DALLAS (AP) — A 39-year-old man who barricaded himself and his ex-girlfriend inside a North Dallas grocery store for four hours faces a 30-year prison sentence following his conviction for aggravated kidnapping.

Patrick Edward Arnold also was sentenced Friday to two 15-year terms for aggravated assault on two employees of the Kroger Co. store.

Arnold entered the store March 31 with a pistol and a can of gasoline and forced his former girlfriend, who worked as a cashier, upstairs into the manager's office, officials said.

Arnold remained inside the store for four hours and issued various demands, including that he be allowed to see his ailing mother and that he receive psychiatric treatment, investigators said. Police eventually convinced him to surrender.

Although no one was hurt, four people, including a pregnant woman and her young daughter, spent more than an hour in a store freezer before police rescued them.

The standoff took place shortly after Arnold broke up with his girlfriend, lost his job and learned his mother was dying of cancer, authorities said.

Sentencing next month

DALLAS (AP) — Sentencing is set for Oct. 8 for a former military supply firm representative who pleaded guilty to charges of bribing employees of the U.S. Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Gerald A. Dohrmann entered the plea Friday before U.S. District Judge Robert Porter.

Dohrmann was accused of offering bribes between July 1976 and November 1980 while working for Phoenix Sales and Service Corp. of Los Angeles.

Campaign tempo increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — Comeback-hungry Democrats stepped up the political tempo this Labor Day weekend with speeches describing Ronald Reagan as "a president who only listens to millionaires" and blaming his policies for continuing high unemployment.

Reagan defended his economic policies in a radio address Saturday and planned to plunge into the 1982 campaign on Thursday with an appearance in Utah on behalf of Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch, who is facing a tough re-election battle.

In the broadcast from his mountaintop ranch in California, Reagan said the current high unemployment rate is caused by long-time economic policies — not just the current recession.

"I'm convinced that in these last few decades, the increased intervention by government in the marketplace, tax policies that took too great a percentage of overall earnings plus burdensome and unnecessary regulations reduced economic growth and kept us from creating new jobs," the president said.

Unemployment held steady in August at a post-World War II high of 9.8 percent, with 10.8 million workers unemployed.

The president said the nation must follow his economic recovery program to stimulate economic growth and create new jobs, and must have the "will and determination to hold our course."

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale also was on the radio this weekend — the traditional start of the campaign season — with five-minute speeches scheduled Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

In his Saturday speech, Mondale said the Reagan administration "is well on the way toward creating two Americas — one where the well-to-do get more and more, and another where the rest of us get less and less."

He concluded by saying that "if you feel good about what's happening to our country today, I suppose you'll vote Republican. But if you believe, as I do, that we must reject this idea of two Americas and fight instead for one strong United States of America, then vote Democratic."

A representative of the political action committee set up to promote Mondale's presidential aspirations said the organization — The Committee for the Future of America — is spending about $125,000 to broadcast the talk in 17 U.S. cities.

Mondale will be in Pennsylvania on Tuesday to campaign for Democratic candidates for the House and Senate.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, heavily favored to win election to a sixth term, was spending the Labor Day weekend on Cape Cod with his family and then heading for Kentucky on Tuesday to address a Democratic fund-raising event.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, another Democrat with presidential ambitions, was campaigning in North Carolina on Saturday and was scheduled to help Democrats in Ohio on Monday. He is not up for re-election this year.

In addition, Glenn supporters were preparing to form a presidential "exploratory committee," a customary preliminary step for White House aspirants. A second Glenn move will be formation of a political action committee to finance the Ohio senator's 1982 campaign travels.

Democratic Party leaders sent a sample speech to local party officials looking for something to say on Labor Day.

"Labor Day 1982 is Job-Wanted Day for the 3 million Americans who've lost their jobs since Ronald Reagan's unfair, unworkable economic program became law," was the opening line of the Democratic speech.

After citing unemployment statistics and calling them "the cold facts we face on Labor Day 1982," the speech continued, "Unemployment like that is what you get when you have a president who only listens to millionaires, a president who wants tax breaks for the rich and high interest rates for everyone else."

With eight weeks remaining until Nov. 2, Democrats hope continuing high unemployment will trigger a voter reaction against Republican candidates while the GOP is counting on political benefits from Reagan's personal popularity and recent declines in interest rates and inflation.

The Labor Department announced Friday that the unemployment rate in August was 9.8 percent, matching the figure for July and standing at its highest level since 1941.

Democratic Party chairman Charles T. Manatt was quick to brand the jobless figure "evidence of the continuing human tragedy being caused by the unfair policies of Reaganomics."

AFL-CIO president Lane Kirkland also followed the Labor Department announcement with a news conference at which he reaffirmed the labor federation's commitment to help Democratic opponents of the Reagan economic program.

"We're working very hard to assure that we'll have a substantial impact" on the elections, said Kirkland.

He said labor would rely heavily on voter education and registration drives rather than on money "because our adversaries have the resources to outspend us very many, many times."

The Republican National Committee and the GOP House and Senate campaign committees have far outstripped their Democratic counterparts in fund-raising for the 1982 campaign.

According to the Federal Election Commission, the Republican committees raised $146.25 million in the 18 months ending June 30, while the Democrats raised $18.88 million during the same period.

Alan Houot, 18-months-old, tackled the heat one recent afternoon with apple juice and a surreptitious swig of his father's beer as they sat outside their home in Los Angeles. High temperatures and heavy smog are expected to grip southern California over most of the Labor Day weekend.

Bus accident injures 33 people

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — A chartered bus collided with a tractor-trailer on the New Jersey Turnpike here Saturday, injuring 33 people traveling to a family reunion, officials said.

Two of the passengers were trapped in the bus for 2½ hours and were admitted to hospitals, officials said. The remaining 31 bus passengers, all from Balitmore, and the driver of the tractor-trailer were treated and released, officals said.

The bus, chartered from the Gladney Bus Co. of Baltimore and en route to Boston, was traveling in the northbound left lane of the turnpike about six miles from Philadelphia.

The driver, George L. Brooks, of Baltimore, changed into the right lane, striking the rear of the tractor-trailer at 3:03 a.m., said Trooper Larry DiSimone, of the Moorestown barracks.

The cause of the accident was under investigation, said DiSimone.

Mary Wilson, 61, of Baltimore, was listed in serious condition at Cooper Medical Center in Camden, said Barbara Silverman, a hospital administrator.

Shawn Purviance, 15, of Baltimore, was expected to be admitted to the intensive care unit of Cherry Hill Medical Center with a fractured leg for 24 hours observation, said a nursing supervisor who asked not to be identified.

Miss Purviance was listed in stable condition, the supervisor said.

Brooks was not injured, but the driver of the tractor trailer, Eugene Peterson Sr., 26, of Plainfield, was treated and released, said DiSimone.

Some of the 33 passengers on the bus had climbed out through windows by the time Trooper Wayne Young arrived on the scene, but Ms. Wilson and Ms. Purviance were trapped in the bus, which had extensive damage, said DiSimone.

Four states to hold primaries

By The Associated Press

Three governors are seeking re-election nominations and former Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is trying for a comeback as four states hold primary elections Tuesday.

Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt and Sen. Dennis DeConcini, both Democrats, face little or no opposition in the primary, but Republicans are fighting it out for the chance to oppose them in November.

In Florida, Gov. Bob Graham is expected to emerge from the Democratic primary with a nomination for a second term. Sen. Lawton Chiles has no Democratic primary opposition, but Republicans consider him vulnerable and a major fight is being waged to pick his opponent.

Connecticut has a primary, too, but little statewide action. Gov. William O'Neill, a Democrat, and Sen. Lowell Weicker, a Republican, are unopposed, and their November opponents have already been selected at party nominating conventions.

Wallace, 65 and out of office four years, is trying to rekindle on a more moderate note a political career that saw him first elected governor in 1962 as an ardent segregationist. Wallace, a Democrat, is seeking an unprecedented fourth term as governor. After four years out of office, he was elected to a second term in 1970 and to a third in 1974.

THIS TIME he is actively seeking black votes, but has failed to win major black endorsements and faces two formidable opponents — Lt. Gov. George McMillan and House Speaker Joe McCorquodale.

To be nominated, a candidate must win a majority of the vote in the primary. So the big question appears to be whether Wallace will be forced into a runoff Sept. 28.

Gov. Fob James, stepping down after a single term, has not made any endorsement.

One of the unknowns is whether Wallace's physical shape will be a liability at the polls. Paralyzed in the legs by a would-be assassin while campaigning for president in Maryland in 1972, Wallace has been confined to a wheelchair for a decade.

Unopposed in the Republican primary is Montgomery Mayor Emory Folmar, a hard-line conservative who seeks to be Alabama's first Republican governor this century.

Alabama's primary also will determine whether Supreme Court Justice Oscar Adams has a chance to become the first black ever elected to a statewide office in Alabama.

ADAMS, 57, was appointed to the court to fill a vacancy two years ago — the first black to sit on Alabama's highest court. He is opposed in the primary for his seat by Jim Ziegler, a former member of the state Public Service Commission, and George Williams, a Huntsville attorney.

The federal government has announced it will send election officials to Alabama and Georgia to monitor elections and register blacks. The 461 observers to be sent to Alabama's primary are the most ever assigned to one election in that state.

The GOP side matches state Rep. Pete Dunn, 40, a moderate backed by most party regulars, against Dean Sellers, 35, a conservative Mesa real estate developer.

Babbitt, who was appointed to the governor's post and then elected in 1978, has an opponent on the ballot, but Steve Jancek, a 59-year-old retiree, died last month of a stroke.

ONE OF THE state's liveliest battles is in the 1st Congressional District, a Republican stronghold where the retirement of former Minority Leader John Rhodes has inspired four entries.

They are John McCain, a retired Navy captain and Vietnam war hero; state Rep. Donna Carlson-West, 44, a four-term legislator whose following comes from Equal Rights Amendment foes and supporters of an anti-abortion amendment; state Sen. Jim Mack, 49, a staunchly pro-business conservative, and Mesa veterinarian Ray Russell, 50, a Mormon conservative with a past record of community service.

Democrat Bill Hegarty, 57, a Scottsdale high school driver education teacher, is unopposed in that primary.

Three Florida Republicans are vying for the nomination to oppose Chiles, a two-term incumbent who has been targeted by the Republican National Committee as vulnerable. He has no Democratic opposition.

George Snyder, a Sarasota businessman and former Maryland state senate president, is battling state Sen. Van Poole of Fort Lauderdale and Palm Beach County prosecutor David Bludworth for the GOP nomination.

Graham faces colorful but limited competition in the Democratic primary from Bob Kunst, 40-year-old self-styled spokesman for Florida homosexuals and Fred Kuhn, a 34-year-old Homestead businessman.

GRAHAM HAS been sitting on his war chest in anticipation of a high-spending showdown with Rep. L.A. "Skip" Bafalis, who is expected to have little trouble outpolling lawyer Vernon Davids in the GOP gubernatorial primary.

Florida's population gains have brought it four new House seats this year. In the new 12th District, the Republican primary pits Apollo 15 astronaut Al Worden against state Sen. Tom Lewis. The winner will be opposed in November by the victor in the Democratic primary between Fort Pierce attorney Brad Culverhouse and Palm Beach County Commissioner Dennis Koehler.

In Connecticut, O'Neill, who succeeded to the office on the death of Ella Grasso, is seeking his first full term. His Republican opponent in November will be Lewis Rome, a former state senator.

Weicker had been threatened with a primary challenge until Prescott Bush, brother of Vice President George Bush, withdrew in the interests of party unity. His Democratic rival in November will be Rep. Toby Moffett.

Hospitals charged with illegally dumping infectious waste materials

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Three hospitals have been charged with illegally dumping infectious waste materials in a public landfill.

Memorial Hospital Medical Center and St. Mary's Medical Center, both in Long Beach, and the Antelope Valley District Hospital in Lancaster were named in complaints filed Friday in Long Beach Municipal Court.

The complaints involved the alleged dumping of hospital wastes such as used syringes, needles, test tubes and blood-soaked pads in the Puente Hills landfill near Pomona.

White youth in protective custody

BOSTON (AP) — A white teen-ager jailed for urinating in front of a black family in defiance of a court order prohibiting racial harassment has been separated from the main jail population, officials say.

Michael Gaine, 18, of Boston was sentenced to 60 days Thursday and taken to the Charles Street Jail. He was placed in "protective custody," according to Suffolk County Sheriff Dennis J. Kearney.

"General tension within the community, racial or otherwise, tends to spill over into the jail, where the population is racially mixed," Kearney said, adding: "Gaine could be a reason or excuse for someone in the jail to start problems."

Chart tells if person drank too much

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Taverns and restaurants in the San Fernando Valley soon will have bathroom wall charts to tell patrons when they have had enough to drink.

The charts, paid for by the United Restaurant and Lounge Association, are being delivered by beat motorcycle patrolmen, said Deputy Los Angeles Police Chief Dan Sullivan.

Across the top of the 13-by-20-inch poster is a black-and-white graph that lists weight in blocks from 100 to 250 pounds. Down the side are 10 blocks representing one to 10 drinks.

Match weight to consumption, and if the corresponding block is red, the individual is probably over the .10 blood-alcohol level that signifies a drunken driver to California authorities.

Men drag llama behind pickup

CENTERVILLE, Iowa (AP) — Two men accused of dragging a llama behind a pickup truck have been charged with injury to an animal.

The charges were filed Friday aainst Daniel Wayne Stroud, 21, of Centerville, and Kermit Ray Williamson, 23, of Numa.

The Appanoose County Sheriff's Department said the men are accused of taking a llama owned by Tracy Conder of Moulton, tying it to the rear of a pickup truck and dragging it for six blocks along a Moulton street last Saturday.

The llama, valued at $1,000, was so severely injured it had to be destroyed, deputies said.

Youth dies in game of Russian roulette

NEW YORK (AP) — A Brooklyn youth was awakened from a nap by another young man who shot him to death in what apparently was to have been a game of Russian roulette, police said Saturday.

Michael Alston, 17, of Brooklyn was charged with murder in the slaying of Ray Charles, 13, who was shot once in the head with a .44-caliber Magnum handgun, according to police spokesman Ed Leschack.

"It seems like they were going to play a game of Russian roulette," said Brooklyn police Detective Bernard McSweeney. "It wasn't really a game. There were four live rounds in the gun. The guy who was arrested pointed the gun at the fellow who is dead and pulled the trigger."

Jury deliberation starts in Corona case

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Jurors are to start deliberations this week in the retrial of Juan Corona, a man who has spent 11 years behind bars denying that he killed 25 farm workers.

The 28-week retrial included a witness who said he lied in the courtroom, testimony about a homosexual half-brother of Corona who defense attorneys said may have committed the crimes and Corona's sworn accusation that a Mexican official fabricated details of an alleged confession.

The retrial, expected to cost about $5 million, featured more than 1,300 exhibits and 175 witnesses.

If convicted again, Corona is eligible for immediate parole consideration by the state Board of Prison Terms because of time served.

In order to find him innocent, jurors must find only that there is reasonable doubt that Corona committed the crimes. If he is acquitted, he will draw his first breath of freedom since his arrest on May 26, 1971.

Corona was convicted and given 25 life sentences in 1973. Five years later, an appellate court granted him a new trial, saying his defense by attorney Richard Hawk had been inadequate.

Superior Court Judge Richard Patton, who presided over both trials, has dealt with little but Corona for the past 10 years.

"It's turned out this is not a case," said Patton. "It's a career."

The 25 corpses were found buried in rural orchards north of Yuba City about 100 miles northeast of San Francisco in May and June 1971. Twenty-four had their heads chopped open with a knife or machete. Most were stabbed in the heart or chest.

In the first trial, Hawk tried to persuade Patton to allow jurors to hear his theory that Natividad, Corona's half-brother, may have committed the crimes.

Patton declined. But in the second trial, he has allowed defense attorney Terence Hallinan's suggestions that Natividad was a more likely suspect in the case.

No one saw Juan Corona, now 48, kill anyone. The convictions in the first trial were based on circumstantial evidence.

Testimony that would seem to support defense theories that Natividad was the killer suffered when a key witness admitted he lied on the stand about his own background.

Arie Jones testified he once saw Natividad slash one of the 25 victims during a homosexual act in the back room of the Guadalajara Cafe in Marysville east of Yuba City. But he admitted later that he lied when he said he was a crop duster and a major in the Air Force.

It was "a fib," Jones explained. "I was just trying to be a big shot." He swore the part about seeing Natividad stab one of the 25 victims was the truth.

Natividad died May 23, 1973, in Mexico, according to a death certificate.

Corona also said he did not confess to either a former Mexican consular official or a former cellmate.

Angry crowd pummels 'preacher' who ran down three children

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An angry crowd pummeled a sidewalk preacher with chains and pipes after he drove his car at some teen-age hecklers and instead ran down three small children heading home from a circus, police said.

Two of the children, both 4-year-olds, were killed and an 18-month-old boy was critically injured.

The suspect, William Daguman, was being treated in the jail ward of San Francisco General Hospital Hospital on Saturday, police said.

Daguman, 22, of San Francisco, who is unemployed, was booked for investigation of two counts of murder and one count of attempted murder, police said.

"It was crazy what he did," said an unidentified witness. "He just jumped the curb and crushed those children into the wall like bugs."

Police said the children had been to a circus at the Cow Palace, a few blocks away, and were waiting for a bus at the corner Friday evening when Daguman's car hurtled over the curb.

The car rammed the children into the wall of a store, leaving a 4-foot-wide hole in the wall, police said.

"I understand he was preaching the Gospel and he was being heckled by the neighborhood kids, teen-agers,'" said Police Sgt. Bob Donsbach. "He got upset and tried to run them down and unfortunately the two little kids got in the way" at a bus stop.

"The teen-agers were making fun of him, and it turned into a shoving match and then an actual fight," said Sgt. Dennis Schardt.

"The suspect was gotten the better of, and was actually beaten up," Schardt said.

According to police, Daguman drove around the block, near a housing project, and then spotted his tormentors and aimed his car. The teen-agers darted out of the way, but the younger children were hit.

Coroner's investigators said the two 4-year-olds were so badly crushed, they would probably have to study dental charts to officially identify the remains.

Police identified the dead children as Lamont Metoyer and Tiffany Sommers.

The injured child, 18-month-old Griffin Tamaris, underwent about eight hours of surgery, much of it delicate microsurgery to repair nerves in his arm. He was in critical condition Saturday, said Marilyn Potash, nursing supervisor at San Francisco General Hospital.

Cleveland council seeks sheik's generosity

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sheik Mohammed al Fassi's generosity to the cities he visits is well known, so when Cleveland's mayor didn't rush to invite the Saudi billionaire, the City Council stepped in.

The council frankly admitted its motives in asking the controversial sheik to come to Cleveland.

"We can't say we don't need the money," said Councilman Gary Kucinich. "It shouldn't be a matter of pride. We need help."

Kucinich last week co-sponsored with Council President George Forbes a resolution inviting al Fassi. He said the sheik might donate up to $100,000 to the city, which has battled back from its 1978 default but is troubled by the same economic woes as other Midwestern industrial cities.

Al Fassi, 27, who lives in a Miami Beach mansion, recently completed a five-day trip to about a dozen U.S. cities, leaving hundreds of thousands of dollars in donations to charities, social programs and city governments.

ON HIS visit to Tallahassee, Fla., al Fassi gave $30,000 to a drug rehabilitation program, $10,000 to the city's beautification fund and $10,000 to various youth programs.

In Detroit, where he spent less than 24 hours, al Fassi donated $20,000 to the city for beautification projects and $20,000 for youth programs.

A plea from American Indian activist Russell Means brought the sheik's chartered plane, his 28-person entourage and a $10,000 donation to the Yellow Thunder Indian settlement southwest of Rapid City, S.D.

He also has donated $115,000 to several Florida communities, including $30,000 to Opa-Locka for beautification, and given thousands more to private charities.

But the sheik's generosity is only part of the story. Equally well publicized is his divorce fight with his first wife, Sheika Dena al Fassi and his money mixup with a Hollywood, Fla., hotel.

The sheika, who has hired well-known attorney Marvin Mitchelson, is seeking custody of the couple's four children and $3 billion, half of the estimated $6 billion that she claims he is worth.

THE HOLLYWOOD Diplomat Hotel sued the sheik earlier this year after his check for a $1.4 million bill bounced, due to what al Fassi said was a bank mixup. The bill was paid and the suit dropped.

About five years ago, al Fassi was criticized for painting flesh colors on nude statues located on his Beverly Hills, Calif., property. The property burned down on New Year's Day 1980.

Of the publicity, he said: "There have indeed been many stories in the press of my problems, but the one thing I have learned about in the United States is that the media has the freedom to write negative things.

"I am rich enough to help. Whatever I am doing here, I am doing in the faith of God. I believe the people need me more than I need them.

"Any negative things written do not matter," he said. "It is not a matter of changing a bad image because my image does not need improved. I believe the people of the United States love me very much, as they show in the hundreds and thousands of letters they write me every week."

The sheik's fortune comes through the family business. He is the vice president of the firm, which has holdings in oil and deals in medical and hospital supplies.

THE VISIT to Cleveland came about when television newsman Simeon Smith contacted al Fassi's secretary, Ali Laggoune, after reading reports of his generosity. Smith then suggested the administration of Mayor George Voinovich invite the sheik to Cleveland.

Smith said the administration was unresponsive and finally told him nothing would be done.

"We being in the administration are just not in the habit of initiating things of this nature. Asking him to come amounts to asking him for his money," said Peter Blum, a spokesman for Voinovich.

So the council acted instead. No date for the visit has been set.

Laggoune said al Fassi goes nowhere uninvited.

"We want to be assured that the sheik would receive the welcome he is used to and the security he requires," he said.

Blum said Voinovich was worried about the cost of the security. But Laggoune said al Fassi reimburses cities for any expenses incurred by his visits. "We want these visits in no way to be a burden on the taxpayers," Laggoune said.

"I am rich enough to help. Whatever I am doing here, I am doing in the faith of God. I believe the people need me more than I need them...I believe the people of the United States love me very much."

Gorton is natural legislator

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a Senate turned Republican by a new crop of conservatives, one of the rising GOP stars is a moderate with a consumer-oriented background and a reputation for legislative craftsmanship.

His colleagues say Slade Gorton of Washington may be their rookie of the year.

He has a crisp bearing that contrasts with the old-shoe folksiness of some of the other 15 Republican newcomers swept in by the conservative tide that ended 25 years of Democratic dominance.

His record of consumer advocacy in 12 years as Washington state's attorney general and his support of environmental measures in a decade as a state legislator also set him apart from his conservative colleagues.

But it may be his knack and appetite for legislative footwork that is making the greatest impact.

"SLADE GORTON is one of the most natural legislators I have ever met," says Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn. "It's his whole life. He has never wanted to do anything else and he is very, very good at it."

Says Gorton: "I think I am much more a natural-born legislative type than an executive type. I think I did good job as attorney general, but I was glad to get back into the legislative arena."

Early this year, the public television program "The Lawmakers" sent a questionnaire to members of Congress asking who they considered likely future leaders. The winners among Senate Republicans were Gorton, Alan Simpson of Wyoming and Warren Rudman of New Hampshire.

"His style is within the framework rather than confrontational," says James H. Davenport, an assistant counsel for the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, on which Gorton serves. "He gets to the meeting early and gets his requests in."

On the environment panel, Gorton helped put together a compromise on the Clean Air Act designed to preserve pristine areas while making it easier for industries to comply with pollution control standards.

He co-sponsored legislation preserving the Endangered Species Act, which environmentalists had feared would be gutted, and strengthening the procedure for protecting species by putting them on the protected list.

HE FOUGHT a losing battle against a congressional resolution overriding a Federal Trade Commission rule that would have required used car dealers to tell customers about defects they knew about.

On an issue scheduled to come to the Senate floor this fall, he is expected to help lead the fight to preserve FTC authority over unfair advertising.

As a member of the Budget Committee, he has been a staunch ally of Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and has generally supported President Reagan's budget cuts, in line with his avowed fiscal conservatism.

He voted for the administration's sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia, despite initial misgivings about their potential use against Israel, and says he remains "fully satisfied" with his vote. A large home-state employer, Boeing, lobbied hard for the AWACS deal.

He also introduced a bill to prohibit courts or government agencies from requiring the busing of students to schools on the basis of race or color. Gorton said such efforts had "frequently caused greater racial imbalance than that they sought to cure."

"Even though it is cast in terms that appear to be positive, the measure would in essence prohibit racial balance in school assignments," says Althea Simmons, a lobbyist for the NAACP. "If it surfaces again, we will definitely fight it."

THE AMERICAN Conservative Union, which ranks the conservatism of senators on the basis of selected votes, rated Gorton 71 out of a possible 100 last year, the seventh lowest rating in the Republican class of '80.

Americans for Democratic Action, which measures liberalism the same way, gave him a 10 out of 100. Five of the GOP newcomers were rated more liberal than this, and seven less liberal.

Those who have jousted with him concede that Gorton is good at his job.

"Slade is an extremely intelligent man," says Marvin Williams, president of the Washington State Labor Council, which has never supported him. "He knows the players and he knows how to get his viewpoints over."

Frank McCarthy, executive vice president of the National Automobile Dealers Association, which lobbied for the veto of the used car rule, says he found Gorton "effective and reasonable."

Most who have watched him in action also say he can be very set in his ways.

"HE STATES his opinions and conclusions rather strongly as if there were only one side of the story," says McCarthy.

"I don't know whether it's a fault or not, but he's pretty hard-nosed," says Williams. "If he has his mind made up, the odds are you are not going to change his mind."

Boschwitz, however, disputes any suggestion that Gorton is abrasive or arrogant.

"I think he is very smart and very well prepared," he said in an interview. "Sometimes that may rub people the wrong way."

Gorton says, "It has been my observation, both in the legislature and here, that if you stake out a very, very firm position on any controversial subject you get lobbied far less than if you were considered to be wavering."

Palermo, Italy, police examine the car in which Gen. Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa and his wife, Emanuela Setti Carraro, were murdered Friday night. As head of the city's police force and the government's prefect in Palermo, Chiesa was the most important Italian government official to be murdered in five years.

Soviet phone service to West cut

MOSCOW (AP) — In what some observers saw as a further effort to control the flow of information to and from the Soviet Union, the government has cut nearly all direct-dial lines from the United States, Western Europe and Japan.

The restrictions came two months after drastic cuts in direct dialing out of the Soviet Union and also followed a KGB crackdown on religious and political dissidents.

"I think its obvious the authorities are doing this (the phone restrictions) as part of their overall tightening up of the society," a Western diplomat, who asked to remain anonymous, said Saturday.

Western communications officials said their Soviet counterparts cited "technical" reasons for the new cuts in telephone communications, which were made quietly over the past several days.

There was no official U.S. reaction, but a West German government spokesman said the explanation was considered "not especially plausible."

The government-controlled news media have not announced the cuts to the public, and officials at the Communications Ministry could not be reached Saturday for comment.

Since the action was taken, callers from the West have complained of delays of several hours in telephoning the Soviet Union. By Saturday, it was taking up to eight hours to get a call through to Moscow from the United States. Similar delays were reported in Europe.

Telex and international telegraph service appeared to be operating normally.

With the limitation on incoming calls and the previous cuts in direct dialing and available lines out of the Soviet Union, average citizens no longer have telephone access to friends and relatives in the West. They must now rely wholly on Western short-wave radio broadcasts for uncensored news of the world.

Filipinos charged with conspiracy

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The military Saturday formally charged 68 people, including a prominent labor leader, with conspiring to commit rebellion against the government. The defendants are expected to be tried in civilian court and face prison terms up to 12 years.

Trade unionist Felixberto Olalia and 31 others already are in custody after being arrested in waves of military raids on private homes and union offices that followed President Ferdinand E. Marcos' claim to have uncovered a Communist plot to overthrow his government.

Most of this group are members of Olalia's "May 1st Movement," which claims a following of 500,000 Filipino workers. The 79-year-old Olalia was charged earlier with four counts of inciting sedition and rebellion in speeches at labor rallies a year ago.

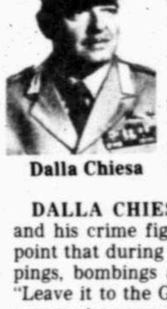
The official Philippine News Agency said Brig. Gen. Hamilton Dimaya, the military judge advocate general, filed the charges at a summary proceeding before a panel of civilian state prosecutors in the gymnasium of a suburban Manila military camp.

Defense Lawyer Rene Saguisag said State Prosecutor Sergio Apostol was to file a criminal information against all 68 people before a civilian court Monday for eventual trial. Saguisag said the crime of conspiracy to commit rebellion is punishable with 6 to 12 years in prison.

Earlier this summer, Marcos claimed some unions were conspiring with subversives to launch nationwide waves of bombings.

'Iron General' left strong mark on Italian crime-fighting community

ROME (AP) — Italy's top fighter against terrorism and the Mafia, the once-invincible "Iron General" Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa, evoked the doggedness of the FBI's J. Edgar Hoover.



Dalla Chiesa

His assassination in Palermo Friday glued millions of Italians to their televisions and radios, as in the dark days of the 1978 kidnap-murder of former Premier Aldo Moro and the 1981 abduction of U.S. Gen. James L. Dozier.

"We feel the same shame as in those days and the same nausea when we write about it," commented Saverio Barbati, president of the National Order of Journalists.

DALLA CHIESA'S feats, his brushes with death and his crime fighting had become legendary to the point that during the height of Red Brigades kneecappings, bombings and abductions, many were saying, "Leave it to the General." They meant he should take over as strongman of Italy.

Dalla Chiesa, 61, was a Carabinieri, a member of Italy's paramilitary police. His father was a member of the prestigious corps. So are his son, his brother, his son-in-law and his father-in-law.

After fighting the Nazis as a partisan during World War II, he got his first taste of the Mafia in the "Godfather" town of Corleone.

A quick rise through the ranks shifted him to Milan, reorganizing the local police into responsive "flying squads," to speed to crime sites.

But he was back to Sicily in the 1960s, hauling in 30 Mafia kingpins including Frank "Three Fingers" Coppola, the Italian-American gangster. "He even knows their shoe sizes," top aides boasted about Dalla Chiesa's Mafia knowledge.

IN 1974, DALLA Chiesa crushed a prison revolt in an operation that cost the lives of seven hostages and convicts.

His toughness brought him an appointment to overhaul Italy's escape-plagued prison system and jailbreaks were soon down to a trickle as terrorists and Mafia convicts were penned in desolate island penitentiaries.

After the 1978 kidnap-murder of Moro, Dalla Chiesa's 180 super-secret terrorist hunters started to make headway against the Red Brigades. But his greatest stroke was to convince the Italian government to pass legislation enabling "repentant" terrorists to receive diminished sentences for their cooperation.

Outraged terrorist groups in clandestine propaganda portrayed his bespectacled face and his thin mustache as the bulls-eye of a target with 10 points for a hit. Three times, Red Brigades attempts on his life were foiled.

After vaulting to deputy chief of the Carabinieri, Dalla Chiesa was appointed chief of police of Palermo, where he settled four months ago with his new wife, Emanuela Setti Carraro, after a brief honeymoon in northern Italy.

Former official says U.S. behind Cuban troubles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former chief of the U.S. diplomatic mission in Havana charged Saturday the United States is largely responsible for U.S.-Cuban hostility because it has systematically spurned Cuban overtures for an accommodation.

The allegation was made by Wayne S. Smith, who ended a three-year stay in Havana in July and resigned from the Foreign Service last month because of what he described as profound policy differences with the Reagan administration.

Last week, Smith, 50, joined the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, a private research group in Washington, after 25 years in the diplomatic corps, most of that time as a leading Cuban specialist.

IN AN ARTICLE in Foreign Policy magazine, published Saturday, Smith said the United States has responded to several Cuban peace feelers over the years with misleading statements, provocative actions and a refusal to explore seriously the possibility of friendlier relations.

"Neither the historical record nor an objective analysis of the existing situation suggests that a policy of relaxing tensions with Cuba is impractical."

— Wayne S. Smith

The State Department, in a lengthy response, said successive administrations had tried to maintain a dialogue with Cuba and had failed to dissuade the Cuban government from "its persistent efforts to interfere in the domestic affairs of Latin-American countries and of countries outside this hemisphere."

Smith also challenges a fundamental premise of American policy toward Central America by stating there is no solid evidence of substantial Cuban arms shipments to El Salvador since late last year and perhaps earlier.

"U.S. evidence of arms shipments...has never been solid," Smith writes. "While some arms have been sent from Cuba to El Salvador, the quantities are almost certainly far less than alleged. If the guerrillas had received all the arms reported by U.S. intelligence, the Salvadoran army would be outgunned 20 to 1."

Asked at a news conference how the administration could misrepresent the situation, Smith said that if requested, the bureaucracy is "capable of producing intelligence reports that would say almost anything."

HE SAID THAT much of the intelligence reporting on alleged Cuban activities in El Salvador is based on sources of dubious reliability.

The State Department did not respond directly to the allegation on arms shipments, but said the United States had never closed the door to discussion of that or any other issue with the Cubans.

"We do not accept that illegal activities in support of guerrilla movements and terrorism in Central America should somehow give them a role in negotiations on the political future of these countries," the department said.

Susan Pittman, a department press officer, said Cuba's longstanding policy of trying to export revolution and subversion "has led to Cuba's currently poor relations with many counties, including most in this hemisphere." She quoted Smith himself as saying the United States had "justifiable" concerns about Cuban involvement in turbulent conditions in Central America.

Smith says a succession of administrations, to the detriment of U.S. interests, has repeatedly squandered away opportunities for an easing of tensions with Cuba.

"Neither the historical record nor an objective analysis of the existing situation suggests that a policy of relaxing tensions with Cuba is impractical," Smith writes.

HE SAID THE United States should abandon years of "threats, pressures and philippics" and turn instead to a policy of "gradual engagement" with Cuba.

By pursuing confrontation, Smith says, the United States has ensured a continued high level of Soviet influence in Cuba and limited the possibilities of internal reforms by the Castro government.

Shao-Shao, a panda bear at the Madrid Zoo, gave birth Saturday to twins, accepting the first and turning her back on the second, an occurrence doctors say is normal among pandas, which don't often give birth to twins. Officials say both cubs' survival chances are good.

Officials hopeful panda twins will both survive

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Palm-sized panda twins weighing less than four ounces each were born in the Madrid Zoo Saturday to 209-pound Shao-Shao, who lovingly caressed her first-born and turned her back on the second. Veterinarians put the smaller cub in an incubator and were confident both would survive.

The twins were the fifth set born in captivity since 1978. Four other sets were born in zoos in China, but only two of the cubs have survived.

Shao-Shao became pregnant 158 days ago through artificial insemination using semen shipped by the London Zoo after repeated failures to mate with her male companion Shang-Shang. The sperm used for insemination was supplied by Chia-Chia, one of a pair of giant pandas at the London Zoo who was sent to Washington last year in an unsuccessful attempt to impregnate Ling-Ling.

Shao-Shao and Shang-Shang were presented to King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia of Spain during their state visit to Peking in 1978.

One of the new panda twins, whose sex cannot be determined until they are adults, weighed 110 grams — slightly less than four ounces — and the other 75 grams — slightly less than three. They were born within 50 minutes of each another.

By the time the smaller one was born, Shao-Shao was already caressing her first-born. Shao-Shao immediately turned her back on the smaller one, which veterinarians put into a specially prepared incubator.

Experts said she acted that way because female pandas rarely give birth to twins and they only care for the baby they see first.

Veterinarians said they were confident the bigger cub will survive through normal feeding by its mother. "The little one will be fed artificially but it appeared so healthy that we are also confident it will survive," they said.

Dr. Liliana Monsalve, one of the zoo's veterinarians, said that when the bigger cub was delivered, Shao-Shao grabbed it, brought it to her mouth and then, gently, put it close to her chest. "For a moment we feared she would devour the cub," she said.

Dr. Monsalve said she and her colleagues were helped all the time by experts from the London Zoo.

"We are really excited about the births. Calls from a number of places are coming in non-stop. Everybody wants to know details about them.

"Shao-Shao felt first laboring symptoms at 8:00 p.m. Friday but it was not until seven hours later that she gave birth to the twins. All was smooth with no complications."

Shao-Shao has been placed in a cubicle of the zoo far from visitors and only veterinarians can see her.

"We have little experience on newly born pandas, thus we have got to keep a 24-hour watch of our pair," said one official.

He said they have installed a closed-circuit television near Shao-Shao and her baby "because we are afraid she might inadvertently crush it to death."

Zoo officials said the news of the births spread quickly and that scores of people rushed to the zoo in the belief they would be able to see the newly born bears.

Japanese arms industry growing

TOKYO (AP) — Although weapons account for less than 10 percent of the sales of Japanese companies that make them, U.S. pressure on Japan to increase its defense capability is helping to give a strong boost to the arms industry in the nation, banned by its constitution from making war.

Annual production is set for about $2.7 billion in fiscal 1982, almost doubling in size in five years. It is expected to reach $3.8 billion in a few years, according to industry officials.

This growth has attracted public attention at a time when Japan's Cabinet-level National Defense Council has approved a Defense Agency plan to buy more than $17 billion worth of military hardware in the next five years. The buildup, strongly urged by Washington to help meet what it calls a rising Soviet military threat in Asia, parallels government efforts to keep a lid on the overall budget, to control deficit spending.

NON-BINDING GUIDELINES of the defense plan call for purchase of 75 new U.S.-designed F-15 jet fighters, 50 P-3C anti-submarine patrol planes, 373 tanks, 49 ships and submarines and other equipment, designed to strengthen Japan's ability to defend its airspace from intruders and protect its vital sealanes as far as 1,000 miles out from these islands.

Among 100 or so companies making arms or components, the biggest three are Mitsubishi Heavy Industries, Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries and Kawasaki Heavy Industries, which are building F-15s and P-3Cs under U.S. license.

The government acknowledges that unless the economy improves, the five-year military program will push defense spending above 1 percent of Japan's gross national product — an arbitrary but symbolic ceiling set in 1976.

Japan is the only major Western nation which bans the export of arms and arm components. In 1967 it adopted "three guiding principles in exporting arms" — banning shipments to Communist bloc nations, countries excluded from sales by U.N. resolutions, and those involved in international conflicts.

In 1976, then-Prime Minister Takeo Miki tightened the guidelines by virtually banning all weapons and weapon parts exports.

THE INDUSTRY'S recent rapid growth has renewed fears in some political and pacifist circles that Japanese-made weapons some day may be exported along with autos and television sets, but industry officials disavow any such intentions.

"We've never officially discussed the issues of arms export and the defense expenditure ceiling," said Hiroshi Morikawa, director of the Defense Production Committee in the powerful Keidanren (Federation of Economic Organizations), whose 820 member companies include about 80 arms contractors.

"The committee deems the issues highly political, and maintains that it's not proper for the industry side to advocate an opinion on those matters," Morikawa said. "Every time someone starts talking about relaxing the (export) ban, it becomes even tighter.

"Even if the ban is lifted, Japanese-made weapons are too expensive and lack international competitiveness," he added, giving as an example the Mitsubishi-built 74-type tank, which costs nearly twice as much as West Germany's Leopard I, although the two have nearly identical capabilities.

Moreover, Japanese-made weapons have not been battle-tested so potential foreign clients cannot properly evaluate them, he said. Thus the export ban means Japan's Defense Agency is the industry's only customer.

MORIKAWA SAID HE shares the belief of U.S. officials and others that Japan's defense budget should be closer to 1.0 percent of gross national product — the sum of the nation's goods and services. In fiscal 1982, the defense budget was $9.9 billion, 0.933 percent of GNP. Morikawa said the other 0.027 percent, equal to $714 million, would mean a lot to the industry.

While the military budget has grown, the arms industry complains that the ratio of capital expenditures to the total — 25.8 percent — is too small and should be raised to 30 percent. The Defense Production Committee says other major Western countries allocate more than 30 percent to capital outlays.

SALE-LEASEBACK FOR HOMEOWNER

The sale-leaseback has been a common method of industrial real estate investing for years. Now, in our current gyrating home mortgage circus, this method of selling and leasing back your own home is spilling over into the residential market.

Say, you need the $50,000 or so cash equity that has built up in your home from a combination of paying off the mortgage plus the yearly increase in value. Perhaps the money is needed for college tuition or business investment. You check out refinancing the entire loan or applying for a partial loan as a second mortgage. In both cases, you don't like the high interest rate. So here comes the sale-leaseback alternative.

You sell the house for the full price (minus what's owed on the mortgage, of course) and arrange a long-term lease with the buyer as part of the sales agreement. You'll have to find the right Realtor who has interested investors (especially foreign investors) who may like this type of arrangement.

U.S., other nations considering increasing IMF lending

TORONTO (AP) — Acknowledging growing strains on the world's financial system, the United States and nine other industrial nations agreed Saturday on the need to increase lending to developing countries, but disagreed on how much.

The United States stood firm against a major increase in loans made through the 146-nation International Monetary Fund, which opens its annual meeting here Monday.

Finance ministers from the major industrial countries agreed to consider as an alternative a U.S. proposal to create an emergency loan fund limited to giving prompt help to countries such as Mexico facing financial crises.

The general increase in IMF lending now being considered could not take effect until 1985, while the emergency fund could provide credits more quickly.

Final decisions on both matters are not expected before next spring.

"I think there are quite a few problems currently in the international economic system," U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told reporters. "At the current moment they seem to be able to be handled, not without difficulty...by the existing framework.

"However, were things to deteriorate, we'd have to take another look, but I'm not forecasting that."

Mexico's inability to meet payments on its $80 billion debt, the Third World's largest, and similar problems confronting Poland, Argentina, Romania, Zaire and other nations have sent a nervous chill throughout the international banking system.

Ministers from the "rich" countries — the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy, Canada, Belgium, the Netherlands and Sweden, known as the Group of 10 — met Saturday in preparation for Monday's opening session.

The IMF now has about $67 billion in lending resources, but only about $26 billion is in U.S. dollars, Japanese yen, German marks and other hard currencies that hold their values worldwide. The remainder is limited to the issuing countries.

Regan said most of the rich countries favor increasing their quotas — the measure of their lending contributions — by at least 50 percent.

He said the United States has not taken a formal position, although it favors a smaller increase than do the other countries. U.S. officials indicated they were pushing for an increase of less than 25 percent.

The United States is the largest contributor to the fund. Its present quota of $14 billion equals nearly 20 percent of the total lending pool.

Ministers representing poor countries called Friday for at least a doubling of the quotas, saying that if current trends were not reversed the world financial system could collapse.

Mubarak's Belgrade visit to help improve relations

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak arrives Monday for a two-day state visit expected to thaw the chill in relations caused by Yugoslavia's criticism of the Egyptian-Israeli peace accords.

Yugoslav officials said the talks between Mubarak and Yugoslav leader Petar Stambolic will include charting a new strategy for the turbulent Non-Aligned Movement they helped create along with India more than 20 years ago.

An official announcement from Bucharest said Mubarak will go to Romania from Belgrade to confer with Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, who has been an intermediary for years between Israel and the Arab states.

Miners freed after two weeks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Four coal miners trapped by a cave-in 800 feet underground were rescued 14 days later in fair condition, officials said Saturday.

President Chun Doo-hwan sent a telegram to the miners praising their courage and patience during the two-week ordeal that ended when rescue workers dug them out Friday from a mine near Taebaek, 100 miles east of Seoul.

The workers said the miners survived by drinking from puddles and eating bark from timber inside the pit.

U.S.-supplied jet crash possible

JEDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — American Embassy officials on Saturday refused to confirm or deny reports that one of the four U.S. F-15 jetfighter planes delivered to Saudi Arabia had crashed.

"We have no information at all," an embassy spokesman said. "That doesn't mean it did crash and it doesn't mean it didn't crash."

Another U.S. Embassy official said it would not be appropriate to comment on the F-15s since it was an internal Saudi matter.

Reliable sources reported Thursday that the plane crashed southwest of the oil city of Dhahran after an engine fire. The Saudi pilot ejected to safety, the sources said, but no other details were available.

Union agrees to sympathy strike

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Union leaders representing 257,000 British coal miners on Saturday endorsed plans for a one-day general strike on Sept. 22 to back the health workers' three-month pay dispute with the government.

"It will be a one-day stoppage and we hope that every mineworker will join in a fight for basic natural justice for all health service workers," said Arthur Scargill, an executive of the National Union of Mineworkers.

The 11.6 million-member Trade Unions Council, Britain's equivalent of the American AFL-CIO, urged its affiliated unions Friday to join in the nationwide protest in sympathy with nurses and other health workers.

It suggested wildcat strikes of one hour or more, but left it to individual unions to decide what action to take.

National Health Service workers are seeking a 12 percent pay rise to their $147 weekly salaries. The government has offered nurses 7.5 percent and blue-collar hospital workers 6 percent on their $102 weekly wages.

American-fathered Vietnamese will be transported to U.S.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Vietnamese government will permit the immediate emigration to the United States of 63 children fathered by Americans during the Vietnam war, says the nation's foreign minister.

In a copyright interview appearing in Sunday's Los Angeles Herald Examiner, Nguyen Co Thach said his government eventually wants to release all of the youngsters of mixed parentage still in Vietnam.

Thach met in Hanoi on Aug. 23 with Herald Examiner Publisher Francis L. Dale, who visited Vietnam at the government's invitation with other members of a Church World Service delegation. The group is an affiliate of the National Council of Churches.

During the 90-minute interview, Dale asked Thach specifically about 63 mixed-parentage children whose histories were obtained by Church World Service.

Thach replied: "We want to release all of them, but those (63) can go right away. You have my word on it."

U.S. officials estimate conservatively that there are 2,800 mixed-race children in Vietnam, which was united under a communist government after the fall of South Vietnam in 1975. Efforts by various relief agencies to bring them to the United States for adoption have often been frustrated.

Thach also said that his government hopes for improved relations with the United States in the future, and regards the bilateral situation as better today than it was in the 1960s and 1970s.

"We are both, your people and ours, the victims of (the Gulf of) Tonkin (incident)," he said, referring to the 1964 naval engagement that led to the U.S. military buildup in Vietnam. "The misunderstanding of the Tonkin incident was a tragedy...We must never have war again. For now, it is enough that we have no hostility toward each other."

Thach indicated that Vietnam is looking toward noncommunist countries in Southeast Asia for support in its conflict with China. "We don't consider the Southeast Asian countries to be our enemies," he said. "China is our enemy."

Thach said the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia is feasible if other Southeast Asian countries would "help us stop China." Cambodia would be neutralized, he said, in return for areawide neutralization.

The foreign minister suggested that if the security of Indochina — Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos — were guaranteed by treaty, Vietnam would be willing to guarantee the security of Thailand. All three Indochinese countries have communist governments; Thailand is aligned with the West

A Museum Piece

The letter read:

"We are planning a museum expansion of approximately 28,000 square feet. Interested?"

Of 50 architects contacted nationwide, 47 replied yes.

For the Museum of the Southwest staff and board members, the responses marked the beginning of their selection process for an architect.

For some years, board members and staff had been involved in planning committees, master planning committees and search committees. The 50 names came out of the architect search committee, whose members did extensive research on locating architects with museum experience.

At almost the same time another committee was engaged in a hunt for a landscape architect familiar with West Texas.

"Architects love to do museums because they're public buildings," said the museum's director, Joan Hellen. In addition, "the architects were all interested in the project because it presented a very challenging design problem to be solved.

"The brick Turner mansion is a West Texas version of Italianate, the stone Lancaster House is British Isles cottage and the Marian Blakemore Planetarium is a modern design done with a regional flavor, in a different color brick than the Turner mansion," Ms. Hellen said, asking, "How do you build a new space that is visually compatible?"

As the replies came in, the architect search committee had its hands full.

"We reviewed a large portifolio sent by each firm, which is a major undertaking," Ms. Hellen said.

"We also conducted extensive phone interviews with people they'd worked with and for, such as contractors, engineers and curators. We went beyond their reference lists," Ms. Hellen said.

The list of 50 was narrowed to five.

The next step was a "marathon week of interviewing." As a result, the architect firm of Ford, Powell and Carson of San Antonio was hired.

As for the landscape architect, the museum discovered "it is easier to find an architect that's familiar with museums, than a landscape architect who's familiar with West Texas," Ms. Hellen said. "We started off with almost 50 names of architects, but only 10 names of landscape architects." The firm chosen for this part of the project is the Dan Heyn landscape firm of Richardson.

The initial planning years spent in meetings between board members, committees composed of board members, Ms. Hellen and professionals in museum planning and management, gave way to those filled with meetings conducted between museum representatives and professionals in museum design.

All of the meetings had a singular goal: moving the Museum of the Southwest from a quiet facility tucked inside two homes and a garage-stables, to a multi-purpose complex with numerous galleries set amid landscaped interior gardens.

Through the countless hours of meetings, planning sessions, revisions, revisions of the revisions and more revisions, the museum's staff and board have arrived at today's options, which are still subject to revision.

The spacious lawns which surround the Turner House and the Lancaster House will be utilized as gallery, storage and support space, with patios, atriums and courtyards sprinkled throughout the navigable maze to give the complex an open and warm Southwest feeling. The area of Indiana Avenue which currently separates the two properties (the approval for the necessary rezoning is pending at this time) will be closed off, becoming no longer a street, but rather part of the complex.

The museum's entrance, which faces Missouri Avenue, is easily recognized today as the front door of the Turner House. This entrance is reached by entering the side gate on K Street and parking in the semi-circle drive. Although the front of the Turner House will not be changed, it was impossible to keep it as the main entrance.

Tomorrow's door into the museum's world will be located on the west side of the complex, with the current vacant lot at the corner of Indiana Avenue and K Street becoming the main parking lot for museum visitors. The new entrance will be a covered walkway which runs behind the Turner House and in front of the stables and garage.

The entire complex will be enclosed in an 8-foot garden wall made of cast stone.

The Turner House will be renovated, as will the Lancaster House, with the former being used for the new museum foyer, offices, the museum shop and gallery space, and the latter for a research center which will house offices, lab space and an art and anthropology library.

At a recent meeting of the current museum committees working with the projected expansion and the architect firm, several members were asked how they felt about the museum expansion.

Blonkvist said, "Until we have more square footage, we cannot give the community as much as we'd like and it deserves. We need additional support space and educational space."

"The way I feel about it can be summed up very simply," said board member Mike Collins. "This little museum started with nothing and it is now, 14 years later, time that the museum is as quality a center for the arts and anthropology as this community deserves. The task we've set for ourselves is not an easy one; it will be a lot of work and require a lot of help to have a museum that will live up to the community's expectations."

Collins, who is also chairman of the architectural review committee, feels the museum's goals will be reached because "Midland is surprising in its involvement in and support of the arts."

Money is the bottom line. The completion of any or all of the desired additions depends upon the museum's capabilities to secure the necessary funds.

"It depends on the response we get from the public," Ms. Hellen said. The projected cost is "$5 million in today's money."

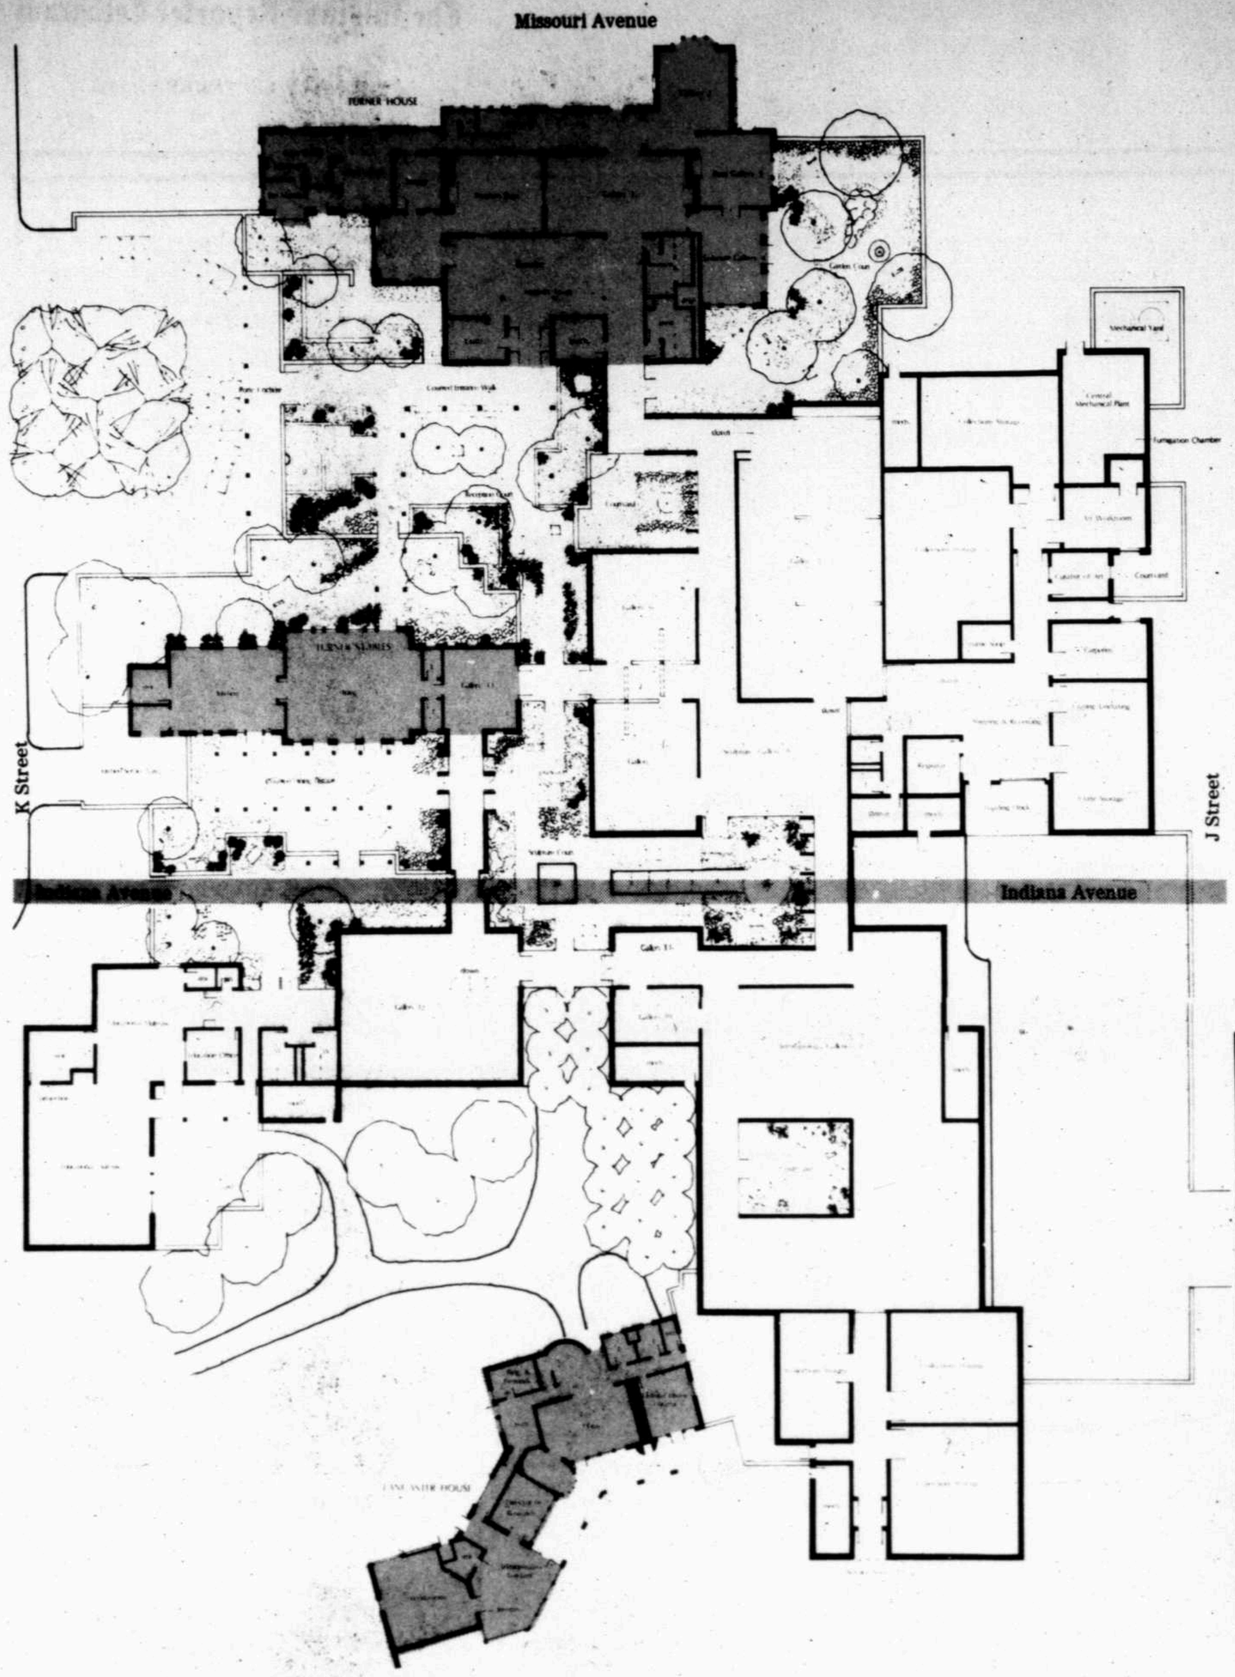
(See 'MUSEUM, Page 2B)



The shaded areas indicate existing buildings at the Museum of the Southwest. The remainder of the floor plans show the proposed expansion of the Museum. Also, the proposed expansion would include closing Indiana Avenue in front of the Lancaster House. Also shaded is the street to be closed.

'Museum piece' in planning stage

money, but with that secured in the months and years ahead.

Fredda Durham, chairman of the expansion steering committee, feels very positive about the current plans, but said the project has "to be phased."

"We have to have a long-range plan in order to do the project. You must know where you are headed in order to get there," Mrs. Durham said, adding, "The destination must be clear."

"We didn't want to get cut short," Ms. Hellen said. "Too many non-profits build a wonderful building and then they can't afford to run it. We wanted to move toward our goals in a logical manner."

THUS, THE PROJECT has been divided into four phases, with the first one being the largest individual phase. Each phase has been designed so that its completion creates a whole entity.

To date, the exact elements involved in each phase have not been formally approved, but it is possible to roughly define Phase I.

"The first phase is the big unit south of the Turner mansion, which gives us the additional storage and support space in addition to the gallery space needed," Ms. Hellen said, explaining that "a desirable ratio is three square feet of storage and support space to every one foot of gallery space."

Storage is a problem. Citing as an example the current museum exhibit, "Texas Women — A Celebration of History," Ms. Hellen asked, "What do you do with 11 350-pound crates?"

"We do want to relocate the front door and start creating the interior courtyards as soon as possible," Ms. Hellen said.

PHASE I also includes the necessary renovation work on the Turner and Lancaster houses.

"It is hoped that groundbreaking on Phase I will start within a year," Ms. Hellen said. "We are looking for renovation work to begin in late 1982 and new construction in 1983."

Phase II will be started, Ms. Hellen said, "when the collection demands it and when our financial resources make it possible."

In the past five years the museum has gone from defining its goals — dealing with the art and the cultural history of the Southwest — to taking the actions necesary to make them a reality. The next step is money.

Architect Milton Babbitt and Mike Collins, seated, discuss the accessibility of the passageway connecting the proposed anthropology gallery with the educational center for the "new" Museum of the Southwest. Babbitt is with the architectural firm of Ford, Powell and Carson of San Antonio. Collins is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Museum of the Southwest and chairman of the museum's architectural review committee.

Child-abuse investigation continues

Midland police officers are continuing the investigation of a child-abuse case and several robberies which occurred Friday night and early Saturday morning.

The search for a Midland man wanted in connection with the attempted rape of the 3-year-old niece of his girlfriend at about 10 p.m. Friday was continuing Saturday morning.

According to police reports, the witness walked into her sister's house to visit her "old man," who was babysitting the child while her sister was at the movies. The woman said lights were on in the house and the door to the back bedroom was open. Reports indicate the woman saw her boyfriend bent over the child, holding her on the bed. The child was nude from the waist down.

The woman told police she called her aunt, who immediately came to the residence. While the man and the woman were outside arguing, the aunt went into the house to call the police. When the man followed her into the house and learned that the police had been notified, he ran from the house.

Police Roundup

The burglary of $500 in cash was reported by Brian Sayre, of 3600 N. Loop 250 No. 1106, at about 11:30 p.m. Friday. Reports indicate the burglary took place between 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Friday. Entry apparently was gained by breaking the north patio sliding glass door and opening the door. Sayre reported that when he returned to the apartment, he found that it had been ransacked and that $500 in cash had been taken from the pocket of a shirt hanging in a bedroom closet. Police reports indicate the burglar or burglars exited through the front door.

A television set and bedspread were reported stolen from a motel room at 3838 W. Wall by Don Palrum early Saturday morning. According to reports, Palrum left the room at 8 p.m. Friday and returned at 2:45 a.m. Saturday to find the items missing. Total value of the television set was estimated at $400 and the bedspead at $40. Entry apparently was gained by forcing the door open.

Joyce Ann Ko reported the theft of four hubcaps from a vehicle owned by Bruce Piepiora, of 408 Woodcrest. According to reports, Ms. Ko was sitting in a vehicle with her father near the victim's automobile in front of 501 W. Wall at about 10:30 p.m. Friday. Ms. Ko reported that a man in an early model dark pickup with a white camper pulled up to the victim's car and, with a tool, removed all four hubcaps from the victim's car. Value of the hubcaps was placed at $300.

In other action, Andy Posey, of 1800 Belmont, reported that while driving away after he and his brothers let a couple of people out near the Dillard's entrance at Midland Park Mall about 9:30 p.m. Friday, four or five white males, two wearing black cowboy hats, in a blue Monte Carlo, threw a can of beer at him, shattering the windshield of his car. Total damage was set at $200.

YMCA designs program for youngsters, moms

The Midland YMCA has designed a new Parent/Child program, Y-Trailmates, exclusively for mothers and their kindergarten through third grade boys and girls. Although designed for children in the lower grades, those in fourth through sixth also will be accepted.

Trailmates was initially established to meet the needs of single mothers, but the format and activities are designed for all mothers, children and family situations to enjoy.

Activities will begin this month and will continue throughout the school year. Tentative activites include day trips, picnics, YMCA parties, overnights and car rallies. Planning and guidance will be provided by a special Trailmates Committee and the Midland YMCA.

Membership requirements include a YMCA membership for either mother or child or a $25 limited membership for the child.

The Trailmate organizational meeting will be at Fannin Elementary School at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and at the Alamo YMCA at 9 a.m. Saturday.

All interested parties are encouraged to call the Alamo YMCA at 694-2528 for further information and registration procedures.

Hogan Park Pool becoming an issue

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Residents on the south and east sides — the city's perennial stepchildren — are confused by the varying answers they say they're getting from city hall on why Hogan Park Pool wasn't open this year.

"People were first told it needed repairs," said eastside businesswoman Oralia Corrales. "Then they were told it wasn't used enough. Then that it would cost $150,000 and the city wanted to use that money for a recreational lake."

Corrales also said when she talked to Parks and Recreation Director Wayne Kohout about the matter, he told her the kids could be bused (by MidTran) to Washington Park Pool on the southside. "When I asked him why not Alamo Pool on the westside, he said fine — that he only suggested Washington because it's closer.

"We pay taxes. There's a lot of people in this area and they shouldn't have to bus their kids across town to swim. With high unemployment, there are no jobs. Now there's no recreation. We don't have private pools. It's not fair to save money to build a lake at the kids' expense."

Except for Halff Park Pool, Hogan and Washington are the only pools on the south and east sides. Washington has had equipment problems, according to Dr. Viola Coleman, whose medical practice serves the southside. And there have been times when Alamo, where her son Reginald worked two years ago, has been temporarily closed for repairs.

But she says she doesn't know of any pool other than Hogan that's been closed all year. "And it's quite some distance from Hogan Park to Halff Park. In a city without public transportation, it's a problem.

"With MidTran, you have to call in advance and make an appointment to have them pick you up."

Until the advent of federal community development programs, which the city refused to accept for several years, the south and east sides had trouble getting things like paved streets, traffic signs, street lights, code enforcement, sewer and water lines.

But even with recent improvements brought by government funds, those sections of town would be off-limits, no doubt, to visiting Russian dignitaries and tourists — just as portions of the Soviet Union are closed to Western visitors.

During a tour of the area last week, Dr. Coleman pointed to weed-obstructed intersections, several rutted, unpaved roads, streets and yards cluttered with junk cars, and rent houses that look more like shacks than homes.

"Code enforcement is probably the biggest problem we have in this community," said Dr. Coleman. "If the city would just enforce the codes we'd be all right."

Noting that she couldn't be sure there wasn't a good reason for closing Hogan Pool, she said: "Several mothers told me they called city hall and got a different story.

"I don't know who makes these decisions. Hogan is gone. Is Washington next? Or maybe Halff Park? Sitting where I am, it seems like an arbitrary decision. The people in this community should have been informed it was going to be closed."

Perhaps people were confused because everything they were told about the closing of Hogan Pool is true, according to Parks Director Kohout.

There are costly problems with corroded pipes and pumps; there is a proposal to build a 20-acre recreation lake in conjunction with the final expansion of the golf course at Hogan Park; and use of the pool has declined — along with a nearly 30 percent downturn in the use of pools throughout the city because of the opening two or three years ago of Water Wonderland and Wild River Canyon, privately owned water amusement parks west of town.

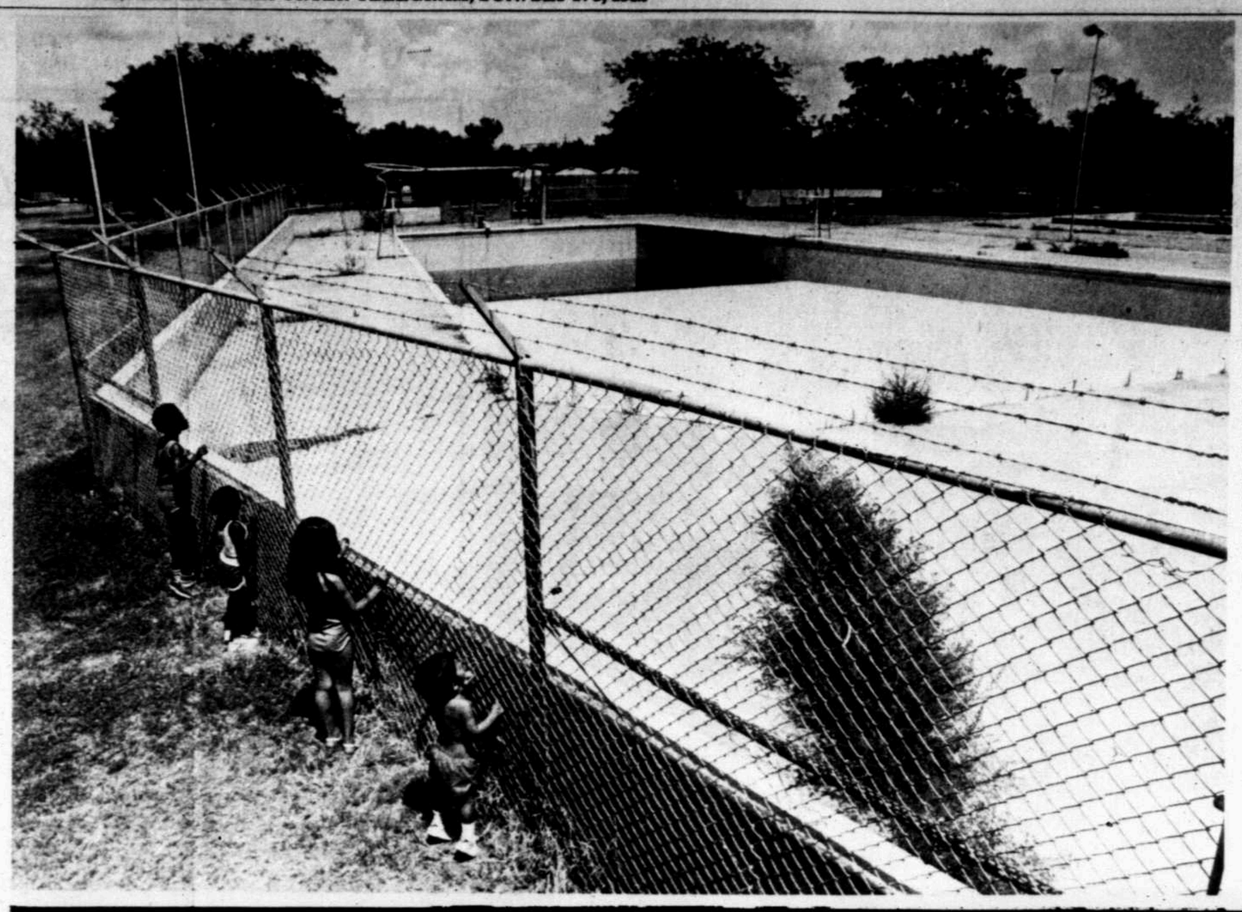
There have also been problems recruiting qualified lifeguards to staff city pools, due in large part to their employment by the private water amusement parks.

Regarding the closing of Hogan Pool, Kohout said: "Basically, it was a decision on the part of myself and the Parks and Recreation Commission. We decided to see what was happening before we spent $150,000 worth of tax money on a facility that might not be the best thing we could have over there."

Whether or not it will be renovated or completely eliminated in the future is still up in the air because of other factors in the equation.

They include tentative plans by the YMCA to construct another building — probably with an indoor pool — a mile south of Hogan Park; a three-year-old proposal by the City of Midland Swim Team for an enclosed 50-meter pool adjacent to its present pool, which is off of A Street, south of Wadley Avenue; and a suggestion that Hogan Pool be converted into a "Wave-tech" pool similar to Water Wonderland.

A final decision will likely emerge from city hall in the next year or so. Said Kohout: "We can't buy too much more time than that, you see, because obviously we'll start running into political problems."



Peering through the fence at Hogan Park Pool, which was open only sporadically last year and not at all this year, are, from left, Brandon Richardson, Germaine Tatum, Marisa Correa and Joey Correa. Residents on the south and east sides suspect they're being shortchanged by the city.

Judy Phelps, VIPS chairman at Fannin Elementay School, prepares the volunteer forms that will be sent home with all elementary school children Tuesday. The forms are the beginning of a recruitment effort for the 1982-83 school year.

VIPS seeking volunteer workers for elementary school programs

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Volunteers in Public Schools (VIPS) will be sending volunteer forms home with all elementary school children Tuesday in the beginning of a recruitment effort for the 1982-83 school year.

"Even if you have only one hour a month to spend as a school volunteer, we need you," Gayle Dodson, VIPS chairman, said.

Those who volunteer in Midland public schools have a variety of placements from which to choose, including classroom assistant, office helper, library assistant, room parent, Halloween Carnival/Fall Festival worker or Gifted and Talented classroom assistant.

Other areas for voluntary service are "Partners-in-Reading," where a volunteer works on a regular basis with a child who is having reading problems; the traveling troupe of library storytellers; "Helping Hand," which provides neighborhood security for children; school improvement and beautification projects; Head Start; the Carver Center, where volunteers help with the elementary Cultural Exchange Program; and "Share," in which one volunteers to share knowledge of particular subjects such as hobbies, careers or travel experiences by giving talks or demonstrations.

The volunteer program is not limited to parents or to elementary schools. According to Mrs. Dodson, anyone interested in volunteering time who does not get a form should go by a school office and pick up a form or contact the volunteer chairman in the school in which he or she wishes to volunteer.

Secondary school volunteer chairmen will recruit volunteers at PTA meetings and through school newsletters.

"It is a tremendously satisfying experience for all involved — school employees, volunteers and children," Mrs. Dodson said. "VIPS program evaluations filled out by teachers and volunteers last spring prove the program is successful."

"I have an excellent rating to give to all involved with VIPS," one teacher commented. "My volunteer has given attention and assistance and love to students while helping them learn."

"They all took the job seriously and were dedicted to what they were doing," another teacher commented.

Reflecting on the past year, one volunteer said, "These children are so special. I have certainly received more than I gave."

Another summed it up, "I think it was a wonderful and worthwhile experience. I'm hooked. Every parent should be closely associated with their child's classroom."

With the goal "to enrich the quality of education in Midland public schools by increasing citizen involvement and to promote better community understanding and support for school programs," VIPS will have a successful year, Mrs. Dodson predicted.

"Anyone who has worked with our public schools is already aware of the high quality of teachers and programs. We think everyone should take the opportunity to become involved," she said, adding that volunteers do not replace teachers but work under their direct supervision, allowing teachers more time to use professional skills and training in working with children.

The majority of Midland volunteers are mothers of school children, Mrs. Dodson pointed out. Others are fathers, grandparents, retired people and other members of the community.

"The education of a child requires time, effort and responsibility on the part of all concerned citizens of the community as well as the school and home," she said. "The quality of eduction makes a difference in the quality of lives and this affects the entire community."

State 'PTA Membership Month' declared

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements has issued an official memorandum of the State of Texas proclaiming September as "PTA Membership Month in Texas," calling for citizens to join with the Texas PTA in its efforts to improve the lives of children and youth.

Texas PTA president Connie Miller, of Dallas, is urging leaders in more than 2,400 local units throughout the state to ask their mayors to make similar designations of "PTA Month."

In his official memorandum, Clements wrote, "September is the month when some 3 million Texas students and more than 235,000 teachers and other school personnel return to the important work of teaching and learning; when parental involvement in public education begins again in full force."

Texas mayors and school officials were chief supporters of PTA when it was organized in October 1909 at the First Methodist Church in Dallas.

Representatives from 25 "mother's clubs" and councils around the state answered a call from Ella Caruthers Porter, of Dallas, to meet and organize a State Congress of Mothers. They elected Mrs. Porter as first president.

In the early 1920s, the name was changed to Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations. In 1932, it became the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers (Texas PTA).

Scholarships available to teachers

AUSTIN — The Texas PTA will give 18 $600 scholarships to career teachers in Texas public schools for college study next summer.

Connie Miller, state president, is announcing the Texas PTA 1983 summer scholarship program in a letter to local PTA units and public school officials.

Application deadline is Jan. 1, 1983. Scholarship applications may be obtained from the Scholarship Committee, Texas PTA, 408 W. 11th St., Austin 78701. Winners will be selected by a scholarship committee appointed by the state president.

To be eligible, an applicant must have at least three years' teaching experience in Texas schools immediately prior to applying. Also, the applicant must be teaching in a school with a PTA unit in good standing with Texas PTA and be a member of that unit.

Each scholarship recipient must agree to teach in a Texas public school for the 1983-84 school year.

The $10,800 to be granted for the summer of 1983, will bring to more than $115,000 the total college scholarship funds awarded to 251 career teachers since 1964. Funds for the program come from gifts by local PTAs and individuals to the Texas PTA Endowment Fund.

Midlanders earn juris doctorates

WACO — Two Midland residents were among 58 law students receiving juris doctor degrees recently at Baylor University in Waco.

Training in law was offered at Baylor as early as 1849, and the School of Law was formally organized in 1857. The law school currently carries an enrollment of about 400 students.

Schools to offer computer courses

Beginning Sept. 20, both Midland high schools will offer computer courses designed for College Entrance Examination Preparation (CEEP). The program is designed to provide students with individualized instruction which will help prepare them for standardized achievement and aptitude tests.

Cost for six lessons, which last an hour and meet two nights a week for three weeks, is $38. Enrollments are now being accepted in the offices at either high school.

CEEP contains a total of 56 instructional modules on 12 disks which are organized according to the SAT's major test categories. Many of the modules can be presented in any one of three different modes.

The test mode simulates test conditions and provides an overall evaluation of student performance. Scoring includes speed of response and correctness. The mode also itemizes questions requiring further study.

The lesson mode includes helpful hints and explanations of questions as well as simple reinforcement of student responses.

The information mode provides the student with exhaustive background information on correct responses as well as information about the distractors used in the questions presented.

The CEEP management system is tailored to its most effective use by students and teachers. It will provide an instant, detailed analysis of student performance in all categories; recommend items needing further study; display student performance based upon the SAT scale; determine if altering the amount of time spent on each item could optimize the student's score; and offer several other features designed to help the students in overall learning as well as in practicing test-taking strategies.

CEEP class hours are 7-8 p.m. or 8-9 p.m. Students planning to enroll in CEEP will be scheduled into the session nearest his or her chosen test date. SAT tests are scheduled Oct. 16, Nov. 6, Dec. 4, Jan. 22, March 19, May 7 and June 4. ACT tests are scheduled Oct. 30, Dec. 11, Feb. 12, April 16 and June 11. CEEP sessions will be offered Sept. 20-Oct. 8, Oct 11-29 and Nov. 1-19. Four other sessions will be offered after the November session although dates have not been set at this time.

Textbook panel to adopt material

AUSTIN — The estimated total cost of materials to be adopted by the State Textbook Committee Nov. 13 is $37.8 million, according to a news release issued by the Texas Education Agency. However, replacements for books still under adoption, Braille and large type books, freight and other costs is expected to boost the total 1983 textbook expenditure to $60.5 million.

The 15-member committee opened the balloting session Wednesday. A final public hearing is scheduled Nov. 11 before final adoption.

New textbooks to be selected for use in elementary classes include English as a Second Language, kindergarten through fifth grade; vocal music, grades one through six; health education, grades four through eight; civil government, eighth grade; and homemaking, grades six through eight.

High school subjects to receive new materials are accounting; advanced accounting; record keeping; personal finance; band I, II and III; orchestra I, II and III; choral music I, II and III; fundamentals of mathematics I-II and III-IV; marine science; physiology and anatomy; German I, II and III; world geography studies; and cosmetology.

The Midland 4-H Vaulting Team returned to Midland from the National Vaulting Fest, held in Hollister, Calif., Aug. 11-15, with two gold medals, an individual championship and a total of 50 ribbons for both team and individual performances.

After being the first Texas vaulting team to attend the American Vaulting Association's National Fest where they won second place last year, the team placed fourth in compulsories, Kurs and overall this year. Although the placing was lower, Midland's overall scores were higher than last year's.

Winners of gold medals were Jay Purvis, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Purvis of 3205 Maxwell, and Eric Eggleston, son of Dr. and Mrs. David M. Eggleston of 1605 W. Tennessee.

Purvis also won first place in compulsories, second in Kur I and third in Kur II, finishing second overall in the silver men's categories. He represented Midland earlier in the summer as a participate in the International Friendship Vaulting Fest held in Hamminkeln-Brunen, Germany.

Eggleston, coach of the 1982 team, placed third in compulsories and Kur I and fourth in Kur II, finishing fifth overall in silver men's categories. He won first in compulsories to the right and second in the barrel routines, resulting in a second overall position in silver men's two-phase.

Karen Eggleston, who defended her title of National Silver Women Two-Phase Champion, won first in compulsories to the right, first in the barrel routines and first overall in two-phase. She also won fourth in compulsories, seventh in Kur I and fifth in Kur II, coming out fifth overall silver woman.

Kimberly McElhinney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McElhinney of Wildomar, Calif., formerly a bronze medalist, earned her bronze medal to the right with honors, her silver medal and her silver medal to the right. She also placed second of 56 in compulsories and won first in compulsories to the right.

Meghan Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Peterson of 1602 N. D St., won sixth place in compulsories to the right. She and team member Sara Purvis, both former winners of bronze medals, also earned their bronze medals to the right.

Hillary Stimmel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Stimmel of 4612 Sinclair, a silver medalist, earned her silver medal to the right.

Other team members participating in individual competition were DeeDee Detlof, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Detlof of 31 Carol Lane, and Erin Hotchkiss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bart Hotchkiss of 1701 Community Lane.

The competition was filmed by the crew of The Today Show and will appear on national television sometime during the year.

Student Senate believes in involvement

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Jack Nielsen doesn't believe college life should merely be an existence.

And to him, that's what going to class, coming home, doing homework and returning to class the next day is.

"People need to get involved to make their college life the best possible," Nielsen, 20, president of the Midland College Student Senate, said. "Otherwise, it becomes one long school experience."

The uninvolvement of MC students is something Nielsen and his co-officers, Kevin Gillette and Durlene Gunter, plan to change.

According to Nielsen, of the almost 3,000 students enrolled at the junior college, only about 500 are "about my age and full-time."

He said he realizes that part-time students often have families or jobs that take up most of their time. But plans of the student senate are to involve them in campus functions during the upcoming school year anyway.

Although the three officers were elected by student vote last spring, 26 more senators will be elected Sept. 15. According to Nielsen, to be an officer in the senate, a student must take a full load of 12 hours and maintain a 2.5 grade point average. To be a senator, however, a student can be enrolled in only one hour, although he or she also must have a 2.5 grade point average throughout their term.

"We want to get them (those students taking only one course at the college) involved just as much as the others," Nielsen said.

Nielsen, born in Denmark, was a resident of Canada before moving with his parents to Midland in 1980.

"I love this place," he said, referring to his adaptation to West Texas. "It becomes home pretty fast if you get involved."

According to Nielsen, he worked at Greentree Country Club until he decided he "didn't want to spend the rest of my life in a locker room and decided to go to school."

During his first year at MC last year, he became involved in the student senate, which prompted him to run for president for the upcoming year.

"We want to broadcast what we do for the students," he explained, "and let them know that we represent them, rather than just being a club where all of the senators just hang around together."

Acting as [illegible]een the administration and the student body isn't always easy, he explained. For example, when some students approached the senate about getting a restricted section of the campus and putting it to more use, the senate's request was turned down by the administration.

Nielsen said that students and faculty were asked to keep off of the grass in the area in question. As a result, the area was seldom used. When the students approached the senate and asked that the section be used for Frisbee throwing or roller-skating, Nielsen said the administration turned it down.

"They said it would damage the grass," Nielsen said. "I understand because I can see how hard it is to get grass to grow here anyway. If we damaged that grass it would die — history.

"It has to be a structured request," he continued. "We can do a lot of things as long as we stay within the perimeter."

And those are the types of activities the student senate hopes to push.

"It was a way to meet people," he said. "The college furnished the food and the students had to build a sundae from about four feet away. It got pretty fun with cherries and stuff flying everywhere. The senate and senate prospects handled the clean-up. We had a pretty good turn-out, a lot of athletes and student senate prospects and the Rodeo Club — they helped a lot. It introduced the students to senate life. We tried to show them they can do stuff that's fun — as long as it's in the perimeter."

Other activities the senate hopes to have this year, to involve students and as money-raising activities, include the Fall Funtastic, hayrides, jazz concerts, spaghetti dinners, car washes and a dance-a-thon.

"What people need to do is decide where they want to go and put a direction to their life," Nielsen said. "To enjoy the situation you are placed in you have to work very closely with others. You've got to get involved.

"Our goal is to get the senate working for the student body and get more people involved," he continued. "The student senate is just a group of students that feel like they have a debt to the school."

"Our goal is to get the senate working for the student body and get more people involved. The student senate is just a group of students that feel like they have a debt to the school."

Donald Higgins is the 1982 recipient of the Jno. P. Butler Scholarship, established earlier this year by the Board of Directors of The First National Bank of Midland for dependents of bank employees. Higgins, son of Nina Higgins, will attend Texas A&M this fall where he will major in petroleum engineering. A 1980 graduate of Lee High School, he attended Midland College. He also was an Eagle Scout and worked at the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center as a physical therapist's aide.

MC enrolls about 2,900

The count reached 2,901 by Friday, compared with 2,707 for the same period last year.

Late registration for full-time students ends Tuesday while those wishing to take three courses or less may late register until Sept. 15. Midland College will by closed Monday in observance of Labor Day.

Late registration resumes Tuesday in the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building, between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

"We anticipate that the enrollment will go slightly above the 3,000 mark by the time late registration ends. We're already slightly above the final registration figure last year," said Dee Windsor, associate dean of students and registrar.

"In past years, we have noted that a lot of students don't even register until after the Labor Day weekend, but we urge all prospective students to enroll as quickly as possible. If they wait until the last day, they might have difficulty making up the early class assignments," said Dr. Don Hunt, vice president of instruction.

"Due to increased enrollment, some classes have been closed. But we have created additional sections in some of the most popular courses to accommodate extra students. We even started a Saturday class in computer science to handle all those who wanted to take classes in this subject, but couldn't be handled during the week."

ARMED FORCES NEWS

Changes noted in status of area military personnel

Navy Lt. Cmdr. Fredrick I. Grant, son of Samuel I. Grant of 4400 W. Dengar St., Midland, recently returned from a deployment to the Western Pacific.

Grant is an officer assigned to Air Anti-submarine Squadron 38, based at Naval Air Station North Island, San Diego.

During the seven month deployment, his squadron was embarked aboard the aircraft carrier USS Constellation, where it participated in various training exercises with other 7th Fleet units and those of allied nations.

Port visits were made to Kenya, Australia, Singapore, the Philippines and Hawaii.

The 22 day exercise involved extensive training in anti-aircraft, anti-ship and anti-submarine warfare. Both surface-to air and anti-ship "Harpoon" cruise missiles were fired at targets 400 miles off the southern California coast.

Marine Pfc. Joseph C. Weaver III, son of Donna and Joseph Weaver Jr. of 1505 McDonald St., Midland, has reported for duty with 3rd Maintenance Battalion, on Okinawa.

Navy Aviation Ordnanceman 3rd Class Jimmy D. Horsley, son of Jimmy and Ruby Honea of Big Spring, has received a Letter of Commendation.

Horsley received the letter for superior performance of duty while serving with Attack Squadron 192, Naval Air Station, Lemoore, Calif.

Saul Torres Luna Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Saul T. Luna of 1517 S. Marshall, Midland, was graduated recently from Basic Training in San Diego, Calif.

Luna distinguished himself as Honor Recruit attaining the overall highest scores in all areas of training out of several hundred recruits. He will start training for Officer Appointment in Sept. through the Navy's Broadened Opportunity For Officer Selection and Training (BOOST) program.

He enlisted in the United States Navies Delayed Entry Program while still in high school and reported for basic training following graduation in May from Midland High School.

Navy Electrician's Mate Fireman Robert B. Bicknell, son of Ted and Elsie Bicknell of 3207 Marmon, Midland, has completed the Basic Electrician's Mate Course.

During the self-paced course at the Service School Command, Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill., the students received instruction on electrical theory and studied the operating principles of the batteries, generators, motors, and transformers used aboard ships and at shore installations. The course was designed to provide a thorough understanding of the operation, maintenance, and repair of electrical systems.

Navy Ensign Michael L. Dowdy, son of Lawrence and Dorothy Dowdy of 710 Sinclair, Midland, was graduated from Basic Civil Engineer Corps Officer Course.

During the two-month course at Port Hueneme, Calif., Dowdy received instruction on engineering management, network analysis, financial management, and Naval organization.

Additionally, he studied civilian personnel management, personnel administration, Navy industrial funding, shore facilities planning and construction battalion ("Seabee") operations.

Marine Lance Cpl. Reynaldo Barela, son of Donato and Elida Barela of 3311 Perry, Midland, has reported for duty with 3rd Maintenance Battalion, on Okinawa.

Marine Cpl. Thomas A. Hudgens, son of Thomas and JoAnn Hudgens of 2210 Kelton Ave., Crane, has departed on a deployment to Okinawa.

The unit will spend six months overseas as part of the Marine Corps' Unit deployment program. The concept is designed to rotate whole battalions or squadrons at a time instead of individuals at separate intervals. In this way unit integrity is retained and the actual time they spend overseas is shortened.

MISD values released

AUSTIN — Figures released by the State Property Tax Board show the Midland Independent School District had total taxable property, at market value, of $3,673,479,747 in 1981, an increase of almost $1.5 billion over the 1979 figure.

The board calculated the school district's property for 1979 at $2,178,002,822, based on market value.

SPTB executive director Kenneth Graeber reported statewide totals show an increase in property values of approximately 53 percent over 1979.

However, Graeber also noted that results were preliminary at this time.

The SPTB is charged by the Legislature with determining the value of property in the school districts on a uniform basis, with new values assigned every two years.

The figures will be used in determining state education aid to districts which may appeal the values established by the board.

Petitions of appeal must be filed with the SPTA by Oct. 1. Those appeals are to be reviewed by "impartial panels apointed by the agency and the six-member State Property Tax Board," Graeber said.

He also said that an estimate of the impact on individual districts from the new values "is not possible at present because the Legislature will consider the final results in conjunction with a new appropriation for 1983-85 funding."

—Farm and ranch improvements, $41,180,000.

—Commercial/industrial real property, $736,523,897.

—Utilities, $143,201,979.

—Business personal property, $269,710,212.

—Other personal property, $16,760,360.

Reserve police officer's two sons shot in their sleep

MUNCIE, Ind. (AP) — The two young sons of a reserve police officer were shot as they slept, and police say they aren't ruling out the possibility that retaliation was the motive.

The only evidence police have is a handwritten message on a bedroom mirror. "The effect of the message is that the person said 'I took the two things you love most,'" said Sgt. Norman Ireland.

Kathy Sells, the reserve officer who also works as a dispatcher, has been placed under guard and Detective Paul E. Cox said a patrolman will watch over her indefinitely.

"We can't rule out the possibility of a grudge or a retaliation (for her police work)," Cox said. "However, we have nothing to indicate it was a retaliation, and our investigation hasn't turned that way yet."

The family was asleep Friday when Eddie Griffin, 11, was shot twice in the face and Dennis Sells, 7, was shot in the abdomen and leg. Their mother was struck on the head in the incident.

Eddie Griffin was listed in critical condition at Methodist Hospital at Indianapolis. Physicians said they did not attempt to remove the bullets, one of which is lodged in his brain, because they feared an operation would do more harm than good, police said.

Dennis Sells was listed in serious condition at Ball Memorial Hospital in Muncie.

Mrs. Sells was treated and released.

Ireland said the substance used to write the message appeared to be lipstick and was being analyzed.

Mrs. Sells and her two former husbands, Edward Griffin Sr. and Kenny Sells, have been questioned.

NOTHING DOWN!

Los Angeles Times challenges claim...

IN LESS THAN 57 HOURS I BOUGHT SEVEN HOMES WITHOUT CASH OR CREDIT, AND LATER CLOSED ON FOUR.

THE RECESSION HAS CREATED THE BEST BUYER'S MARKET IN 50 YEARS. I CAN QUICKLY TEACH YOU HOW TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS TO CREATE REAL WEALTH FOR YOURSELF.

"I promised to buy one property in 72 hours... they took me to one of the toughest cities for buying real estate in America — San Francisco...and I bought SEVEN properties in only FIFTY-SEVEN hours. (In fact, we spent over one of those hours watching a real estate agent's son play soccer.) The Los Angeles Times reporter stayed in the same motel room with me and never let me out of his sight for the entire fifty-seven hours... just so he'd be sure no trick was involved.

"There is no trick! You can learn the techniques I used to begin your road to financial independence—buying EXCELLENT real estate right where you live. YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE RICH TO BUY REAL ESTATE — even in these times of inflation, tight money and high interest rates.

"You can strip me of everything most conventional thinkers feel is necessary for buying real estate — cash, credit, a steady job, a strong financial statement — and I'll still be able to buy as much property as I want. (It's actually easier in so-called recessionary times, and I won't end up with big negative cash flows, either).

"How? Because I understand creative financing! That's how I bought most of the real estate I now own and it's made me a millionaire at the age of thirty-two. YOU, too, using the PROVEN, SAFE, HONEST principles that will be outlined in an introductory "NOTHING DOWN" seminar (absolutely NO COST OR OBLIGATION) can buy real estate with little or no money down.

"I HATE REAL ESTATE! I really do... but I know of no other way you can start with NOTHING, learn some basic facts in a short time, and then — with only a little time and effort — make lots of money in just a few years. Yes, EVEN IN TODAY'S TOUGH MARKET, you can create real wealth for yourself and — in five years, if you follow my plan — retire with a TAX-FREE INCOME OF UP TO $25,000 A YEAR.

"My introductory seminar (no cost or obligation) describes a complete program that ANYONE can learn to use — a program that includes over 50 specific creative financing techniques! (My successful associate, who teaches the introductory seminar, will clearly explain TWO of these techniques in detail.) NOTHING DOWN is the modern approach of the eighties and many thousands of people from all walks of life — plumbers, doctors, secretaries, teachers, salesmen, students, retirees — have learned HOW TO PROSPER DURING A RECESSION using my program.

"By the way, I don't have any calluses on my hands because I don't advocate buying run-down, slum-type buildings and fixing them up and trying to rent them. You can make money that way, but it's the hard way...and it takes lots of time!

"My NOTHING DOWN methods are EASY and SIMPLE. After you've learned them step-by-step, they can turn you from a doubting novice into a CONFIDENT EXPERT. Come to the introductory seminar (absolutely NO cost or obligation) and get a complete outline of my methods, plus some specific NOTHING DOWN techniques. You'll discover how to find the BEST buys (often in your own backyard); how to locate the 'Don't Wanter' who'll do almost anything to get rid of a property; how to borrow at SIX to TEN PERCENT INTEREST when the prime rate is over 16%; two specific NEW creative financing techniques; how to buy even if your credit rating is terrible; how to pyramid your buried assets into MILLIONS...and many other SPECIFIC NEW METHODS.

"My brother, Dr. Richard Allen, is a specialist in adult education. After nine years on the faculty of Johns Hopkins University, he has joined me to develop the most COMPLETE, EASY-TO-UNDERSTAND, WORKABLE teaching methods available. Our graduate surveys prove IT WORKS!

"Please take the time to come to my introductory seminar. (They all start at 8 P.M., but COME EARLY...we often run out of chairs!) It's a terrific learning experience, conducted by my successful associate and, again, there's ABSOLUTELY NO COST OR OBLIGATION. The ninety-minute seminar will introduce you to some life-changing facts that should revolutionize your plans for the future. Don't wait to buy real estate...buy real estate and wait! Thanks!"

Robert G. Allen

SOME OF WHAT YOU'LL LEARN AT THE SEMINAR...

- How to still get 6%-10% interest rates instead of 14%-20%
- How to achieve financial independence in the current economy in the shortest possible time
- How to make 150% interest on your investments instead of 6%-16%
- How to take advantage of the new tax laws and to fully shelter your income
- How to take advantage of assets you now own that you may not even know about that can make big $$$
- How to turn your willingness into creative and money making investments (even if you're low on assets and cash poor)

Presidential Museum's mission growing

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Dallas, Nov. 22, 1963: the shots that shook the nation, claiming the life of its president and paving the way for several more political assassinations and attempted assassinations during the next decade.

Shocked by the horror of the events, a group of Odessans gathered in vigil that evening, and within two days the catharsis had reached fruition: a memorial to the slain president would be initiated.

Nineteen years later the emotions have calmed, the blackness of that day having given way to a glimmer of light at the end of the tunnel. And likewise time has metamorphized the John F. Kennedy memorial into a museum dedicated to all presidents of the United States.

"Museums are about ideas and people, and the past and present and future," said G.F. Crabtree, executive director of the Presidential Museum, 7th and Lee in Odessa. "What a museum does is reach people...and we just happen to use objects to do that."

In order to further its goal to enlighten people about the nation's presidents, a $114,000 remodeling contract has been awarded Ralph Rhodes Associates, Inc. of New Harmony, Ind. Under the terms of the contract, Rhodes will develop and install a "Hall of Presidents" as well as remodel the lobby and two chambers for displays. Prefabricated materials will be shipped to the museum by March or April 1983, with completion of the project set for May 1983.

"Rhodes is a well-established firm," said Crabtree, who previously served as director of Fort Concho in San Angelo. "They designed a big Franklin Delano Roosevelt exhibit for the Smithsonian for his 100th birthday."

When the project reaches fruition, the museum will be unique in the area in its presentation of American history through display cases in the Hall of Presidents, as well as in its exhibit detailing the electoral process.

"We want to avoid super-graphics and get the emphasis back on objects," said Crabtree, a 30-year veteran of museum work. "(The museum) has relied very heavily on reproductions, but we're trying to get originals."

One such original object is a 1789 button in the George Washington display, which the museum purchased from a private dealer recently. Another rarity is a Garfield death ribbon, as well as some 1840 Harrison material.

"The collection has been built up over the years mostly by gifts, and partly by purchase," said the director, who noted that it also includes 750 political cartoons, campaign material, presidential memorabilia pieces, commemorative items, presidential post cards and early 19th Century ballots.

"What I've been trying to do is get away from waving the flag and saying everything's marvelous, and at the same time not going to the other extreme and throwing rocks," said Crabtree of his two years as director.

Spawned by just such a flag-waving, patriotic gesture, the museum began as a single room display in the basement of the Ector County library Feb. 6, 1965. A constitution and bylaws were adopted and incoporation procedures finalized Sept. 26, 1978. When the county library was moved to another location in July 1981, the museum assumed occupancy of the entire building, and Crabtree has been hard at work since on portions of the building which will not be altered by Rhodes Associates.

"I ran out of carpentry money, so I'm doing it myself now," he said, pointing out the skeleton-like framework of storage rooms, offices and an education department which someday will help enlighten school groups.

The museum also intends to obtain temporary exhibits, not necessarily relating to the presidency, on a rental basis from other facilities, as well as to upgrade its 3,500-volume presidential library.

"We intend to have long-term exhibits with a five-year useful life," said Crabtree. "One will focus around the presidency, and (be flexible enough) to give us time to change our image and build a broader constituency. We'll also have an exhibition dealing with the history of the United States, but shown through the presidency."

A president is assassinated; interest in preserving the memorabilia of all presidents and educating the American public of its legacy is aroused. The Presidential Museum in Odessa, open now for visitors and students, is living proof that a ray of sunshine and hope lies beyond even the darkest of nights.

Second off-duty trooper injured

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — A Texas Department of Public Safety patrolman Saturday became the second trooper in as many days to be wounded while working off duty, authorities said.

The trooper, who was not identified, was taken hostage by two men about 3 p.m. while working as a security officer at a Safeway grocery store in this community west of Houston, said Larry Todd, a DPS spokesman in Austin.

The trooper was held for about an hour and then released, Todd said. He suffered a gash on his forehead, apparently from a scuffle, and was treated and released from Baytown Hospital, Todd said.

Authorities were uncertain whether the two gunmen robbed the store.

Meanwhile, trooper Carlos A. Jones, 32, was recovering in Hermann Hospital's intensive care unit. Jones was shot in the head early Friday as he tried to stop two bandits who had robbed the grocery store where he was working off duty as a security guard.

No suspects have been arrested in either incident, he said.

Midland family thankful for baby's 'mended heart'

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

After a difficult pregnancy and a two-week premature delivery, Mark and Bettie Thornsburg brought home their seven-pound, five-ounce newborn son, Russell Tanner Thornsburg, March 30, 1981.

They struggled for days and weeks coping with their newborn, attributing his irritability and panting to colic — but the infant was having chest pains.

They knew their baby had a slight heart murmur, but the pediatrician was keeping a close watch on that.

"We noticed that Rusty would pant, sweat and become irritable, but we thought he was having colic," Bettie said. "And his color (skin tone) didn't look right.

"We thought Rusty was olive complected...it turned out to be a shade of blue," she added. "We didn't realize newborns were supposed to be pink."

It was at this point Gupta recommended that the Thornsburgs take Rusty to Lubbock General Hospital to see a heart specialist.

What they thought would be a one-day trip turned out to be a week-long nightmare for the first-time parents.

Mark and Bettie drove to Lubbock feeling anxious and afraid. They met with Dr. Joon Parks, a cardiologist, who diagnosed pulmonary stenosis in their six-week-old infant.

Panic set in. The Thornsburgs feared they would lose their son.

On May 8, Rusty had a heart catheterization — a delicate diagnostic test which measures the heart pressure, releasing a dye through the heart for X-rays.

"The doctor explained to us that the heart has two parts with four chambers," Bettie recalled. "He told us that the left side of the heart circulates the blood and the right side pushes the blood to the lungs for oxygen.

"Rusty's pulmonary valve (on the right side of the heart) was deformed," she said. "Instead of being a valve it was a mass of tissue with a narrow opening in the center which caused the blood to jetstream against the wall of the artery to the lung instead of flowing.

"This caused pressure on the heart and the artery to balloon like an aneurysm," she said.

Aneurysms occur when the blood vessel wall becomes weakened by a physical injury to the vessel, a congenital defect or disease.

On May 9 congestive heart failure set in.

"Thank God he was in the hospital hooked up to the heart monitor," Bettie said, adding that the condition was corrected with a drug that slowed down his heart. "Like a machine, his overworked heart was ready to quit."

Rusty, at six weeks of age, had open heart surgery May 12, 1981.

The surgeon performed a valvectomy on the twice-enlarged heart, a five-minute, intricate surgical procedure in which a slit is made on the pulmonary artery, removing the valve.

Dr. John P. Judson, a cardio-thoracic surgeon at Lubbock General Hospital performed this surgery which seven years ago was not perfected, the Thornsburgs said.

"He looked inside the heart and saw a hole which had a flap over it that acted like a valve," Bettie said in a quivering tone. "It still gives me goose bumps to think about it. This flap is what actually saved him for the first five weeks of his life."

"By taking the valve out, it allowed the blood to go to the lungs, resuming normal blood flow and relieving the heart from pressure," Bettie said, adding that the pulmonary valve is not absolutely necessary to sustain life, while the other valves in the heart must be replaced.

"The doctors went to great lengths to prepare us for the two to three hour surgery," the Thornsburgs said. "They explained to us what he'd look like after the surgery — hooked up to the respirator which breathed for Rusty — but he was beautiful, because he was alive and pink for the first time."

"He (Judson) and I cried together after surgery," Mark recalled. "Dr. Judson spent a lot of his own time with us — spending the night with Rusty when he was in ICU (intensive care unit) after the surgery. That made us feel much more secure."

After the 10-day ordeal, Rusty's parents brought their son back to their Midland home. The surgery resulted in a right ventricular dysfunction, or a missing right valve.

In the next 10 months of Rusty's life he went into mild congestive heart failure several times which was controlled with medication

But that was not the end of the horror for the Thornsburgs.

"Rusty couldn't be left to cry for more than five minutes at a time, we couldn't take him out in public and all visitors had to be screened," they said. "We couldn't risk exposing him to any kind of infection."

And so they isolated themselves away from people, except for family and some friends who would abide by the restrictions placed on the Thornsburgs.

"We became irritable with each other," Mark said. "One of us was always doing something the other thought could be done better."

"We felt the stress," he added.

Then in May 1982, there was another change in their lives. Rusty went back to Lubbock General for another heart catheterization.

"The results of this were that his heart is still enlarged, but he is growing into it," Mark noted. "He's going through his catchup game. The heart is still slightly larger. Now as long as he takes his medicine and his heart is monitored twice a day with a stethescope, he's got a good bill of health."

Mark added that Rusty is now part of an elite test group of babies who have had open-heart surgery and he is a member of the Mended Heart Association at Lubbock General Hospital.

Four months later, the 28-pound Rusty is like any other normal toddler.

Although he is on a special low-sodium diet with no caffeine, the Thornsburgs said there is a "good chance he will be able to partake in normal activities when he is older.

"We've had to learn to treat him like a normal one-year-old," Rusty's parents said, looking at each other laughing and adding "what's that?"

"I still find myself fighting very hard to let him cry," Bettie said.

"We've gone through a whole year of the spoils," Mark chuckled. "We just want him to be normal...letting him get angry."

Although the Thornsburgs are still cautious of exposing Rusty to sick children, they can do just about anything they want. In fact, the three of them left Saturday on a vacation to San Diego, Calif.

"I can't wait for Rusty to see the animals, maybe even go up to Disneyland," Mark said excitedly.

"We still check on him during the night," Bettie admitted. "It's not absolutely necessary now, but we're trying to live an everyday normal life with Rusty, our miracle baby."

Mark and Bettie Thornsburg say it's hard to believe that 17-month-old Rusty had such a struggle for life in his first year. The Thornsburgs' son was born not only premature, but also with a congenital heart defect which has been corrected with open-heart surgery.

Hearst reveals completion of Redbook acquisition

NEW YORK — The Hearst Corporation has announced completion of acquisition of Redbook magazine and Charter Data Services from The Charter Company.

The announcement was made jointly by Frank A. Bennack Jr., president and chief executive officer of The Hearst Corporation, and Raymond K. Mason, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of The Charter Company.

Bennack said Redbook is Hearst's first magazine acquisition since 1958, but that the two purchases from Charter are the 15th and 16th acquisitions Hearst has made since December 1978. In the past year, Hearst's acquisitions have included two television stations, KMBC-TV in Kansas City, Mo., and WDTN-TV in Dayton, Ohio, and a group of 28 weekly and two daily newspapers in southern California.

B.B. Fisher, Midland Community Theatre's executive secretary, and George Thomas, chairman of MCT's cinema series committee, talk about the cinema series' past and present. Both are movie buffs who attend all the classic film showings.

Film series one of best buys in town

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

As he drove up to the theater he felt for just an instant as if his heart had stopped beating. He caught his breath.

The theater's marquee was dark.

"Top Hat" was supposed to be playing. The lights should have been on, but they weren't. Then he saw the theater's manager standing out in front. As he suspected, the news was not good.

Laughing today about the episode, which wasn't funny then, almost 10 years ago, George A. Thomas described it as "one incident I really remember." Thomas is the chairman of MCT's cinema series.

It was Thomas' first experience with a breakdown in the old saying, "The show must go on," a breakdown which affected him and all those who had season tickets to Midland Community Theatre's Cinema series.

This particular series was the Summer Cinema '73 at the Yucca. It was not the first cinema series MCT had sponsored, nor was it to be the last.

"Robert Boykin was really involved in that (Summer Cinema '73)," Thomas said. "He talked with Art (Cole, MCT's executive director) and he wanted the Hodges (Howard Hodge, Midland theatre owner) to be partners. I was on the board (MCT's Board of Governors) at the time. Art talked to me and I formed the committee. We selected six films. I got together with B.J. McKenna, the Hodge manager, and we got all the films ordered and everything set up.

"EVERYTHING WENT great until 'Top Hat,'" Thomas said.

"I drove up to see that the marquee lights were off. He (McKenna) was out front telling everybody to come back the next day.

"They did," he said, adding dryly, "It didn't come."

The membership waited it out. Eventually the movie arrived and almost everyone who had been so patient made the Oct. 9 showing.

"The real problem with movie house showings was the availability of old films in 35mm; most can't be found. They are available in 16mm," Thomas said, citing this as the reason the series finally died out again.

Through the years numerous film series had been attempted by MCT with similiar difficulties encountered. Prior to the 1970s, each series was basically foreign films, with more recent series primarily featuring American classics.

TODAY'S CINEMA series officially began in 1979.

"When the theater (Theatre Midland) opened, Art decided he wanted to run a couple of films as an opening festival," Thomas said. Because of the response, Thomas said, "we decided to have a regular series. It's been very successful, much more so than any of the other series."

Thomas is referring to the fact that the current series runs in the black, not in the red. Before, the series had cost MCT money to offer it to the community. It doesn't make a profit, and is not intended to, but rather pays for itself.

The series represents one of the best buys in town per entertainment dollar at 11 films for the price of $15 for MCT members and $20 for non-members.

"It's still a real bargain," said B.B. Fisher, MCT executive secretary and a movie buff. Looking back through MCT's files at previous film series, Mrs. Fisher noted that the cost was $6 for 10 films in 1958 and 1959 and $7.50 in 1968. Taking inflation into consideration, Mrs. Fisher said, "Fifteen dollars for 11 films is more of a bargain now, than it was back then."

The difficulties encountered in the earlier series attempts have been solved, Thomas said, citing as examples, the current use of 16mm footage, plus a brand new reflective screen which has made a tremendous improvement in brilliance and new sound equipment."

MANY CINEMA series patrons have been faithful followers through the past series, hanging in through good and bad times.

"The people who belong are genuine old movie buffs," Mrs. Fisher said.

Both Mrs. Fisher and Thomas fall into that category.

For Thomas, "There was a magic back then you don't get now."

Although the movies chosen by Thomas and committee members Jim Chapman, Sherri Hensley, D.A. Plumlee and Sandy Landua come from the American movie periods prior to the X, R, PG and P ratings, they are not children's films; they are adult movies.

Some of the finest American films were made before standards were relaxed, Mrs. Fisher said.

"There were plenty of adult movies back then without having dirty language and excessive sex and violence. It does get offensive when it's overdone as it is in the movies today," she said.

One of the difficulties associated with showing old films is television.

"Showing films that don't crop up on television every year and still qualify as classics involves a lot of reading on each one," Thomas said. This research is passed along to the subscribers in the form of handouts at the beginning of each movie, Thomas said.

SUBSCRIBERS ARE given the opportunity at the final showing to list movies they would like to see, Thomas said.

Sometimes it's impossible, especially when there's a great popular demand among subscribers to not pick a movie which has been shown frequently on television. Such is the case with this year's opening classic — "Casablanca," starring Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman.

Those who love old films will never tire of this one. And, as Thomas said, "One of the things I like about seeing these movies on the big screen over television is I'm caught up in the story."

The season begins Oct. 25 and closes March 21, with all showings on alternate Monday nights beginning at 7:30 p.m.

This year's films include suspense thrillers such as Alfred Hitchcock's "Saboteur," released in 1942, and "The Red House," with Edward G. Robinson and Judith Anderson, released in 1947; musicals as in the original "Showboat," with Irene Dunne and Allan Jones, released in 1936, and Fred Astaire and Cyd Charisse in the 1953 release of "The Band Wagon;" gangsters via James Cagney in the 1948 release "White Heat;" epic-adventure tales in the form of the 1940 color release of "Northwest Passage," with Spencer Tracy and Robert Young, and the John Wayne western "The Searchers," with Natalie Wood, released in 1956; Broadway dramas represented by "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," with Raymond Massey and Ruth Gordon, released in 1940; and comedies such as "Some Like It Hot," with Marilyn Monroe, Tony Curtis and Jack Lemmon, released in 1959, and the 1942 release "To Be or Not To Be," with Jack Benny and Carole Lombard.

Shown with each feature will either be a newsreel or short from the period.

"One of the things we're doing is Ronald Reagan bloopers, outtakes from 1942," Thomas said. Another short features bathing beauties of the 1940s and Miss Americas of the 1940s, Thomas said.

A tip for area movie buffs — no single admissions are sold and seating is limited to 500.

PBS stations start selling air time

NEW YORK (AP) — By one account, CBS is asking $450,000 for a half-minute ad on the last, two-hour episode of "M-A-S-H." And with sponsors willing to even talk that kind of dough, it's no wonder there are those in public TV eager for a cut of the action.

In fact, 10 Public Broadcasting Service stations have been selling or trading air time, mainly to local businesses and institutions, since March. Seven of them got together the other day to market that very valuable commodity on a national basis.

"I would expect that with individual exceptions some of the ads you are going to see on public television will be identical to those now carried by commercial stations," says Vincent Saele, president of New Orleans' WYES.

Congress initially appropriated $172 million for public radio and television for fiscal 1983, but that was cut to $137 million. The Reagan administration then sought to chop the fiscal '84 appropriation from $130 million to $105.6 million, but Congress, late in the game, maintained the higher level of funding.

The message, however, is clear: The federal government wants out of public broadcasting. Indeed, there are those in public TV who feel the heretofore non-commercial institution should support itself, largely with corporate and foundation support, viewer subscription and — here's what's new — the sale of time and services.

PBS announced a month ago that such "revenue-producing initiatives" — college courses for credit, the sale and rental of videocasettes and other material and facilities, notably the network's advanced satellite distribution system — raised $4 million in the year ending June 30. It's not much, but enough to suggest a lucrative source of income for the future.

The long-term answer, and there are those in public broadcasting vehemently opposed to the idea, may be in the sale of commercial time.

There's no question advertisers are interested in the public television audience which is, as they say, "upscale," meaning sharply defined in composition, with money to spend.

For that reason, the stations participating in the national spot sales campaign will be asking premium prices, roughly what CBS charges for "60 Minutes" or ABC for "20-20." "I think what you're buying is an untapped audience," says one station executive, "so you're offering the advertiser a unique situation."

Beyond that, the sponsor gets an uninterrupted program and none of the commercial "clutter" that accompanies a network show.

Saele says the New Orleans station, for instance, had enlisted 83 commercial accounts through mid-August, with gross ad sales of more than $200,000. And that's strictly local business.

The seven stations involved in the newly conceived joint effort to sell advertising time to national sponsors — WYES, WPBT in Miami, WTTW in Chicago, WHYY in Philadelphia, WQLN in Erie, Pa., WIPB in Muncie, Ind., and KCSM in San Mateo, Calif. — represent a cross-section of the PBS community.

The stations are restricted in their efforts — programs can't be interrupted for commercials, no more than two minutes' advertising at a time, no political, religious or special-interest spots. And some have imposed their own standards, rejecting, for example, commercials for "personal hygiene" products, or refusing ads adjacent to programs for children.

The fear, often expressed but never really demonstrated, that commercials would chase viewers away from public TV, seems so far to be without foundation.

"I think it's fair to say that stations that have started advertising have experienced a very low level of viewer concern," says Frank Nesbitt, vice president for development at Chicago's WTTW. "It's really a non-issue."

Right now, it's just a trial. No one is willing to predict what advertising can mean to public broadcasting, but there is agreement among stations participating in the project that the potential for income is enormous.

The federal government wants out of public broadcasting. Indeed, there are those in public TV who feel the heretofore non-commercial institution should support itself, largely with corporate and foundation support, viewer subscription and — here's what's new — the sale of time and services.

US Festival rocks into second day

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Temperatures hit the 100s, desert dust hung in the air and a brush fire flickered a dozen miles away but 100,000 fans kept rocking as a giant music and computer festival swung into its second day Saturday.

The $12.5 million US Festival was billed as the "rock event of the century" by Unuson Corp., the staff of 30 assembled a year ago by Apple II computer creator Steve Wozniak to turn his vision of a major music event into reality.

Some of those who shelled out $37.50 for the three days agreed that it had evolved into a high-tech hybrid of Woodstock and Disneyland.

"They've thought of a lot of things to do to try to keep people comfortable, but I don't know how long they can keep it up," said Randy Banis, a 21-year-old UCLA student, as temperatures soared above 100 at the 57-acre natural amphitheater in Glen Helen Regional Park.

"I've heard a lot of negative things about big events like this, but I wouldn't have missed it for the world," added Banis, who became trapped in one of the weekend's worst traffic tie-ups on Interstate 15 Friday morning.

The sole death related to the festival came early Friday, when a car plowed into three others on I-15 and caused a fiery explosion that also injured five people, California Highway Patrol officials said.

Traffic was running smoothly again by Saturday morning, when the day's performers included Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers, Pat Benatar, the Kinks, the Cars, Santana and Eddie Money.

More than 1,000 security officers rode herd at the site. Two arrests were reported, one of a man who allegedly tried to burglarize a beer truck and the other of a camper who tried to drive into the campground despite a deputy's attempt to halt him.

Banis and thousands of others pitched tents on campgrounds carpeted by dust, which mingled with smog to create a brown-gray cloud over the site.

The dust and heat accounted for most of the medical problems, with more than 500 people treated by Saturday for ailments ranging from heat exhaustion to asthma, said Dean Grose, head of the medical team.

Twelve miles southeast of the festival, flames blackened 800 acres of tinder-dry grass and brushland, but firefighters had thrown a line around the blaze by Friday evening, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman John Tomasini.

The fire never threatened the massive rock festival, he said, adding "it had kind of a long ways to travel."

During the day, many concert-goers sought refuge in air-conditioned exhibit tents filled with banks of blinking, beeping video games and displays of the latest in personal technology.

But at night, when the air cooled and the darkened sky filled with spotlights and an occasional Goodyear blimp flashing a multi-colored message of thanks to Wozniak, music lovers headed for the amphitheater.

The concertgoers, who filled about a third of the huge concert area, either sat, bobbed or danced as images of the performers flashed on 50-foot video screens on either side of the stage.

The show, with acts ranging from the new wave rhythms of the Police to the pop-country sound of Jimmy Buffett, received good reviews from most of the crowd. But for some, the music couldn't offset the problems.

"They might have worked a whole year to do this, but they didn't do it right," said Jackie McAlister of Long Beach, who said she spent more than $200 to get to the festival with her friend, LuAnn Cathe of Bellflower.

Ranching Heritage Center trip planned

Back in the pioneer days when the range was unfenced and the plains unsettled, Texas ranchers solved housing problems by combining new materials and construction methods with more traditional ones.

Due to their isolation from shipping and trading centers, pioneer ranchers made do with what they had. The compromises they made and the creative architecture that resulted are part of the heritage that have made "dog-run" and "ranch-style" houses familiar in Texas.

The Ranching Heritage Center in Lubbock is an outdoor exhibit of 22 ranch buildings depicting these earlier days set on a 14-acre park at the Museum of Texas Tech University. A day trip, sponsored by The Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, is planned for Sept. 25 to see this exhibit.

Restored structures include a milk house, a one-room school house, a half dug-out and two-story dug-out, a carriage house, a granary and a blacksmith shop. The stone headquarters building of the well-known XIT Ranch, brought to the site from Deaf Smith County in numbered pieces, and the office building of the Matador Ranch are featured as well. Each building is in a setting typical of its original location.

Reservations may be made by calling the Haley Library at 682-5785 during library hours. Cost of the trip, including catered lunch at the Ranching Heritage Center, is $25.

The Haley Library is a ranching and range library and archive located at 1805 W. Indiana Ave, open to the public from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

MC orchestra seeks musicians

Musicians are being sought to play in the Midland College Community Orchestra.

The orchestra, formed last year, rehearses on Thursdays beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building.

"We have scholarship money available to cover the cost of tuition and fees for the orchestra program, plus weekly 30-minute private lessons," said Brian Gum, the orchestra's conductor.

While string players are in particular demand, the orchestra also has spaces available for brass, woodwind and percussion players.

"The Midland College Community Orchestra offers an excellent opportunity for former high school or college musicians to renew their enjoyment of ensemble performance," Gum said. "In most cases, it is necessary for the musician to have his own instrument, although percussion instruments are provided by the college."

Deadline for enrolling is Sept. 15. For more information contact Gum or Don Grant, coordinator of instrumental music at MC.

Montagne watercolors to be at MCT

Midland Community Theatre will be showing original watercolors by Louis Montagne, 1879-1960, beginning Friday and closing Sept. 26.

The art work will be hanging in the main foyers into Theatre I and will be showing during the run of MCT's production of "Jesus Christ Superstar," which also opens Friday.

A Frenchman, Montagne was a student at the national school of Beaux-Arts in Paris, France and a director of the school of Beaux-Arts at Avigon, France. He was president of the Association of French Artists of Scenery, president of the Association of French Artists of Watercolor and a founding member of the Salon of Drawing and Watercolors.

Listed among the private collectors of his works are the Rothschilds of New York and some of his work can be found in the two Paris museums, the Museum of Fine Arts and The Louvre.

American Guild of Organists to meet

The American Guild of Organists, the West Texas Chapter, will hold its first meeting of the 1982-83 season Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Memorial Christian Church, Andrews Highway and Cuthbert Street.

Choral directors, organists and music lovers are invited to attend. The program includes Dr. Stanley Engebretson, director of music at Memorial Christian, conductor of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale as well as a staff member at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, leading an anthem reading session of recently published works for church choirs.

The program also will focus on beginning rehearsals of J.S. Bach's "Orgelbuchlein," which the members are pursuing as a year-long project for the West Texas Chapter.

Highlights of the coming year include a Dallas organ tour in September, an AGO exam workshop in November, a guest artist recital with the date yet to be announced, a children's choir workshop and festival concert and a spring wedding program.

Teen idoldom in midst of slump

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Faded jeans spray-painted onto his slender legs, arms folded in adolescent defiance, teen heartthrob Scott Baio slouches restively in a chair, his lips curled in a savory smile on the color centerfold of the current issue of 16 magazine.

"Scott Baio wants you, love," teases the headline, and across the land, millions of dreamy-eyed girls in training bras do their best to believe it.

Baio's brown eyes and flashing white teeth appear not only in 16, but on the cover of every teen magazine on the stands. The breathless prose accompanying the photographs varies little in detail after fatuous detail — hagiographic hype focusing intently on the ingredients of Scott's dream date.

"If you went on a dream date with Scott, he'd make sure that you had the best time ever!" proclaims the August issue of Superteen magazine.

"An afternoon with Scott is absolute heaven," reports the September issue. "A day with Scott is enough to make any girl's knees buckle."

In his parents two-story Studio City home, furnished in early '60s "Leave it To Beaver" middle-class normality, Baio appears to be just an average kid who likes to wash cars and play basketball. Up to now, his popularity has been confined to television and films. He appears weekly on "Happy Days" and is about to star in his own spinoff series this fall, "Joanie Loves Chachi," which made a highly successful debut last spring as a pilot. Following a string of made-for-TV movies and feature films, Baio's new movie, "Zapped," opened this August; although R-rated, "Zapped" is clearly aimed at adolescent audiences.

But, at 20, Baio has decided that his film and television success isn't enough and recently launched himself as a pop-rock singer. His first single and LP came out this summer, and Baio made his singing debut in July at Knott's Berry Farm, where the decibel level of 2,000 hysterical teeny-boppers at each of six performances all but drowned out whatever vocal talents he may or may not have.

Despite the steady barrage of publicity surrounding the current crop of pretty faces, many in the business say teen idoldom is in the midst of a dismal slump.

"There are no teen idols," says Chuck Laufer, the king of the teen magazinesa and founder of Tiger Beat magazine. "There are teen stars like Baio, who has a faithful following from a weekly television series and who can fill a 2,000-seat auditorium when he decides to launch a singing career. But when you had David or Shaun Cassidy, you had 15,000 people. When you had the Monkees, you had the Hollywood Bowl filled."

At his peak, David Cassidy received up to 7,000 letters a week at each of the 15 or so magazines then on the market. By comparison, the most popular of teen idols today — Baio, Matt Dillon and Christopher Atkins — receive only about 100 letters a week at the magazines.

Truck rams house, loses sandy cargo

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — A 10-wheel truck flipped on its side and smashed into a house, filling the home and yard with 14 tons of sand, police said.

Edward Brisson, 72, was in the bathroom reading a newspaper when the truck hit his home Friday morning.

Said his 70-year-old wife, Anna: "He had quite a nice pile of sand at his feet."

According to police Lt. Glendon Button, the truck's brakes failed on a turn. The vehicle flipped on its side and crashed into the house, wiping out most of the living room wall and spilling its cargo of sand in the living room and side yard, he said.

Mrs. Brisson said the sand flowed into the bathroom through a window after piling up in the side yard. She was sitting in the dining room when the truck hit, and said she thought it was a bomb.

Brisson said he knew right away what had happened since trucks pass by his home frequently.

"I told my wife a week ago this was going to happen," he said. "That's a tough turn for those trucks.

The truck's gasoline tank exploded and started a fire, but firefighters were able to extinguish it quickly.

The truck driver, Lawrence Pecor, suffered bruises, officials said.

There was extensive damage to the house and foundation, but the Brissons said they will continue living there while repairs are made.

"We didn't get hurt. That's the main thing," Mrs. Brisson said.

Murder defendant cleared

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 30-year-old man who spent nine years in prison for the murder of a Chinatown gang member has been cleared after a retrial.

"I thank everybody," said Chol Soo Lee, 30, after the San Francisco Superior Court jury announced his acquittal Friday night. "The truth in this case is that I was always innocent."

The jury in the month-long trial deliberated for three days before reaching a verdict. Lee jumped from his chair at the word, and his supporters in the courtroom cheered, embraced and wept.

However, Lee, a Korean immigrant, remains imprisoned at San Quentin on a 14-years-to-life sentence for a 1977 slaying at Deuel Vocational Institute, a state prison. He is appealing that conviction.

In 1973, he was found guilty of the killing of Yip Yee Tak during a wave of gang violence in Chinatown. The conviction was overturned on appeal in 1978, based on arguements that the defense had not been told of an eyewitness who might have exonerated Lee.

Jury foreman Scott Johnson said the nine-man, three-woman jury found "many reasonable doubts." He added, "I personally had a lot of complaints about the (prosecution) eyewitnesses."

But San Francisco homicide inspector Frank Falzon, who investigated Tak's killing, criticized the verdict.

Sagging economy may create needs for future farmers

COLLEGE STATION — The sagging economy, which has forced thousands of American farmers out of business and resulted in declining enrollments in the nation's colleges of agriculture, ultimately will create good opportunities for future farmers, says the dean of agriculture at Texas A&M University.

"Although the current depressed economic condition discourages students from looking at agriculture as a career option, the situation should create substantially increased needs for agriculturalists within the next decade," said Dr. H.O. Kunkel.

A shortage of trained professionals in agriculture will occur by 1985 and a serious manpower shortage could be acute by 1990, according to a manpower assessment by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

While many people equate agriculture with farming and ranching, most of the ag job market today is in the "infra-structure" of agriculture, including jobs in agri-industry, agri-business, government, education and financial institutions.

Ranching center sponsors Ranch Day

LUBBOCK — Tall and true tales of the West, ethnic dances, pioneer food and ranch chores and crafts will highlight the 13th Annual Ranch Day on Sept. 18 at the Ranching Heritage Center at Texas Tech University here.

The restored Ropes Depot will be dedicated at 10 a.m.

Other activities on the 14-acre center will include:

—Horseshoeing and branding will be demonstrated by Burney Chapman and son at the Renderbrook—Spade Blacksmith Shop.

—Muleshoe fourth-graders and their teacher will act out pioneer school days in the Bairfield Schoolhouse.

—The story of the buffalo — the bison — will be related by Crosby County Pioneer Memorial Museum staffers at the Matador Office Building.

—Mule team rides through the center will be given by Arch and Karl Lamb.

—A pioneer lunch, featuring Scottish beef pie, German sausage, Southern fried chicken and chuck wagon brisket and beans will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. just north of the 6666 Barn. The meal will cost $5.75.

—An exhibit of Western movie memorabilia from the 1930s through the 1970s will be displayed in the Mallet Ranch Building.

Ranch Day, sponsored by the Ranching Heritage Association, will climax the 1982 National Golden Spur Award weekend at which Golden Spur recipient J. Ernest Browning of Willcox, Ariz. will be honored for his role in ranching.

Means to control boll weevil sought

LUBBOCK — Means to control the pesty and profit-crippling boll weevil are under way on cotton acreage in the High Plains area.

Signs of weevil infestations have been definite this season: a mild winter and much moisture and a higher and earlier weevil trap catches in areas, such as eastern Dawson County, where no weevils have been found in almost four years.

Stopping the weevil from infesting "clean" cotton may require the spraying of at least 200,000 acres of cotton, according to Ed Dean, a Plains Cotton Growers Inc. field service director.

In 1978, approximate 700,000 acres were sprayed in an effort to stymie the cotton beetle.

Symposium offered on mesquite control

LUBBOCK — Ranchers interested in ridding their rangeland of mesquite and making money at the same time may learn how in a Mesquite Utilization Symposium at The Museum of Texas Tech University Oct. 29-30.

"This symposium culminates five years of Texas Tech research specifically on uses for mesquite," according to Dr. Robert C. Albin, associate dean of the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences. "In no way do we advocate growing mesquite for beneficial use. Rather, the symposium will show ways to defray the costs of cleanup and control of mesquite.

Registration for the symposium will begin at 7:45 a.m. Oct. 29. Cost is $30 and includes meals.

Seminars to be offered on estate taxes

COLLEGE STATION — Farmers and ranchers will be offered insight into handling estate taxes in the "How to Lower Your Estate Tax Burden" seminars Sept. 21-22 at the Texas A&M University Research Center in El Paso and Oct. 21-22 in Waco.

"Of major importance is how every farm estate will be affected after the recent estate tax law changes," said Dr. Wayne Hayenga, Texas Agricultural Extension Service economist. "The best tax planning of the past may be the worst under the new law," he said.

Additional information on the seminar may be obtained by contacting local county agricultural extension offices or Hayenga in the Department of Agricultural Economics, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843 or by calling TAEX at 713-845-2226.

Ranch has 100 quarter horses for sale

KERRVILLE — Shelton Ranches will offer more than 100 registered American Quarter Horses for sale at its third annual production sale Sept. 25 at ranch headquarters four miles south of Kerrville off U.S. Highway 173.

Shelton established a Quarter Horse breeding program at his Comanche Trace Ranch near Kerrville in 1978. Today, Comanche Trace boasts a broodmare band of more than 200 proven mares and championship-quality foundation stallions.

"We're proud of what we've built and developed at Comanche Trace," said Shelton.

The sale will begin at noon. Brunch will be available at 11 a.m.

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Tax incentives to encourage soil and water conservation practices, increased state commitment to agricultural research, and leaving groundwater conservation in the hands of local officials and groups are among the recommendations of the governor's Task Force on Agricultural Development.

Those recommendations are being put into final form for submission to Gov. Bill Clements.

Among the proposals in the report are the following:

— Requesting the Legislature to provide "additional financial support for technical assistance, research and educational programs" in connection with soil conservation programs.

Concern also is expressed about the "irreversible conversion of important agricultural lands to other uses," including urban expansion, developments, utility construction, etc.

The governor and the Legislature are urged to look at "conservation tax credits and other similar incentives" to promote conservation practices.

AGRICULTURE

— Expanding agricultural markets in the U.S. and overseas.

The State should work with commodity groups and agribusiness interests in promoting exports, and increased use of Texas agricultural products.

The Legislature is asked to look at legislation to allow consenting producers to collect check-off monies for promotion, research and education. Currently there are eight such programs operating (wheat, grain sorghum, soybeans, mohair, turkeys, pork, peanuts and corn), the report says.

Agricultural market news collection and dissemination efforts also should be "improved and substantially expanded."

— Proving additional research, and expanding existing programs.

Creation of an "Agricultural Policy Center" for research and education programs for issues affecting Texas and Southwest agriculture is suggested, along with increased efforts on water, energy, transportation, marketing and production research.

— Improving transportation for agricultural needs.

Stress is put on continued support for, and upgrading of, the farm-to-market road system and other rural roads.

Deregulation of intrastate agricultural carriers also is recommended, and the Railroad Commission is urged to "thoroughly monitor potential rail abandonment" which could affect movement of agricultural products.

— Funding of the Family Farm and Ranch Security Act.

That program was established to provide loan guarantees — and lower interest rates — for persons wishing to establish family farms and ranches.

However, funding for the program has run into difficulties (partly due to Internal Revenue Service rulings on use of bond proceeds) and the task force suggests the Legislature consider appropriating funds to pay for bonds which have been issued, with the program then to become self-sustaining.

— Discouraging efforts to restrict foreign investment in farmland.

The report says that while less than 1 percent of Texas farmland is owned by foreign interests, efforts have been made in the past two legislative sessions to restrict foreign ownership.

That, the report argues, contradicts "the basic freedoms associated with the American free enterprise system."

The report does suggest that "studies are needed" on the "extent and economic impact of foreign investment in farmland," but argues that restricting foreign investment would reduce the quantity of capital available for investment in Texas agriculture.

— Controlling groundwater through local water districts.

The report says that local leaders and the Department of Water Resources should encourage organization of local underground water conservation districts.

Also suggested for consideration are such approaches as loan programs to allow farmers to purchase more efficient irrigation equipment, and continued study on importing water to Texas.

— Designating agriculture as a high priority sector for fuel allocation purposes during times of "energy emergency," and developing alternate sources of energy for agricultural use.

— Reviewing agricultural commodity warehousing laws to determine the adequacy of bonding requirements, regulations, inspections, etc., including consideration of the effects of bankruptcy of warehouses on producers.

— Monitoring effects of the "New Federalism" on State and local taxes, as those taxes affect farmers and ranchers.

— Modification of State usury laws.

The report notes problems faced by agriculture due to high interest rates and suggests that usury laws be changed to "give lenders the flexibility to charge their cost of funds plus a margin."

The Legislature is urged to consider the change, on grounds that it would enhance the ability of producers to "compete effectively with non-farm borrowers for available loan funds" during periods of tight credit.

Usury ceilings on loans to individuals have created "artificial shortages" of funds in the case of sole proprietorships, the report comments.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Farm Bureau Federation is putting further pressure on the Reagan administration to "retaliate against subsidized exports" by the European Community.

Robert B. Delano, president of the federation, said Thursday that American farmers "must not be forced to compete with the power of national treasuries" which enable the Europeans to export commodities at prices undercutting U.S. sales.

Delano made his group's demands known in a letter to Agriculture Secretary John R. Block — who currently is in Europe on what one spokesman described as a "working holiday" in Austria and Rome.

"Farm Bureau has a strong distaste for export subsidies," Delano said.

WEST ORANGE, N.J. — A group of industrialists sat quietly in the office of J. Pierpont Morgan, their eyes darting nervously back and forth from a wall clock to several transparent glass orbs hanging from a ceiling and a restless young man who paced the heavily-carpeted floor of the multi-billionaire investor's headquarters.

At precisely 3 p.m., Sept. 4, 1882, the board of directors of the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of New York let out a loud cheer when a soft steady glow filled the room.

Incandescent lightbulbs in 85 other houses on Pearl Street in downtown Manhattan also lit up — powered by 200 separate pieces of equipment developed by one of the true geniuses of modern times — Thomas Alva Edison — a man whose name has become synonymous with technological creativity and business innovation.

It was a momentous event in history. The age of electricity had arrived.

Saturday, researchers into Edison's life and work at Edison Museum here — led by Edward Pershey and Paul Israel — were recreating the event for starry-eyed visitors, an event that changed the world's lifestyle.

What will happen in the energy field 50, 70 or 100 years from now?

"WE WILL probably have a revolutionary development in the generation, transmission and distribution of electricity," said Dan Van Atta of the Electric Power Research Institute (EPRI) at Palo Alto, Calif. The institute is the principal research and development headquarters for the privately-owned electric utilities.

"We're involved in research in metals that carry electricity," Van Atta said. "We are likely to reduce loss of electricity in transmission and to develop a system preventing outages."

"But we are not looking for replacement of electricity," Van Atta added.

"I cannot envision anything down the road as a new kind of energy," Blair Swezey of EPRI said.

"Fusion is also out as an immediate replacement," he said. "Scientists have been working for over 25 years to control fusion as a power source. It may well be the most difficult technical task ever attempted."

"Work on fusion is continuing since the possible pay-off of a virtually unlimited energy supply is enormous," Swezey added.

Another EPRI official said that "in the absence of additional evidence the fusion reactor should be not considered a contributor to the national energy budget much before the middle of next century."

Today, some 100 years since Edison laid the groundwork for the modern electric power system, 34 percent of energy is converted into electricity before it is used.

By the end of the century, almost half of our energy consumption is expected to be in the form of electricity.

Dr. Pershey, curator of the Edison Museum here, says that unless a new form of energy is discovered — and there is nothing on the horizon indicating such a development — we will be "stuck" with electricity as our principal energy source.

Electricity can be transported over long distances almost instantly. It is versatile enough to fulfill many different needs, from heating and cooling to running the machinery upon which industrial society is based.

Mostly, however, it is a clean energy source at the point of use.

Electricity is produced in plants that burn fossil fuels, including coal, oil and natural gas.

Diablos put end to Cubs season

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

EL PASO — The message from Arturo Gonzalez and Mark Corey came across loud and clear, one miracle to a customer.

The Midland Cubs had staged a mini-miracale of sorts by coming from five games back with 18 wins in 22 games to claim the Texas League West second half pennant, but the El Paso Diablos were in another league in this best-of-three intra-divisional playoff.

With Gonzalez, 4-2, pitching a seven-hitter and Corey powering two homeruns, the Diablos beat Midland, 9-2, before 2,013 fans at Dudley Field Saturday night for a 2-0 sweep.

Gonzalez had a shutout going into the ninth inning when Midland finally pushed over a couple of runs, but up until then, Midland had gone 17 innings in this hitter's paradise without scoring an earned run.

"You've got to give their pitchers credit," said Midland manager Brian Murphy. "We are supposed to be a homerun hitting team, but they pitched to our power and kept them from getting it up in the air."

JON PERLMAN, 13-8, had won six of his last seven decisions going into Saturday's game, but when he left after five innings, he had given up just six hits, but four of them were for homers.

"Only the last one by Corey was hit hard," the Baylor ex simmered after the game. "It is a shame to have to play a championship series in a band box park like this."

John Hansen's two-run homer to left in the second came with two out and gave El Paso a 2-0 lead. Eric Peyton powered a two-run homer to right in the third and then Corey hit a solo homer to right center with two out in the same inning.

When Corey busted a two-run homer to left to make it 7-0 in the fifth, it was El Paso's 56th homer of the year after two were out in an inning.

In a way, El Paso used a couple of ringers to win the playoff series, although there is no questioning the legitimacy of their eligibility.

Gonzalez is on loan from Monterrey of the AAA Mexican League and Milwaukee has the option of buying his contract if he is sufficiently impressive.

Corey, who has been playing pro ball since 1976, was a obtained in a trade with Baltimore. "I have been playing in Charlotte in the AA Southern League. Baltimore traded me for Ed Brunson about a month ago and I was happy to get away from the Orioles. Milwaukee got me because I have major league experience and I guess they figured I can help them down the line."

Corey's homers were his fifth and sixth since coming to the Texas League and "came off fastballs. Last night I was looking for the slider and they were breaking my back by pitching inside. Tonight I wasn't looking for anything. I just went up there swinging."

GONZALEZ BEAT Midland at Cubs Stadium, 12-4, Aug. 14, yielding only one run in the eight innings he worked. He was knocked out by Midland in two innings in the last series here, but tonight "he had a good slider and we couldn't do a thing with it," said Joe Carter.

Gonzalez' confidence received a big boost in the early innings when his defense turned second and third inning double plays to keep Midland from scoring in two-hit innings. From the fourth through the eighth, he issued a couple of walks while the lone hit was a double by Dave Owen.

El Paso will now play the East Division champion Tulsa in a best-of-five playoff beginning Monday in Tulsa.

Newsome's run gives Cowboys 20-14 victory

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Timmy Newsome dashed 15 yards for a touchdown with 22 seconds left to play, rallying the Dallas Cowboys to a 20-14 Saturday night win over the Houston Oilers in the final National Football League preseason game for both teams.

Newsome's touchdown run concluded an 81-yard drive by the Cowboys.

The Oilers had taken a 14-13 lead on two second-half touchdowns by rookie running back Donnie Craft.

Craft ran 20 yards for one score and caught an 18-yard pass from starting quarterback Gifford Nielsen for another.

Dallas quarterback Danny White tossed a 14-yard touchdown pass to Tony Hill with less than two minutes to play in the first half, for the initial score of the game.

Houston was unable to move the ball and punted to the Cowboys, who promptly drove into field goal range. Rafael Septien kicked it from 39 yards out to make it 10-0 Dallas at the half.

Septien added a 47-yard, third-quarter field goal to give Dallas a 13-0 lead.

Patriots 41, Packers 27

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Tony Collins dashed for 130 yards and grabbed a touchdown pass as the opportunistic New England Patriots rolled to a 41-27 preseason victory Saturday over the Green Bay Packers to give Coach Ron Meyer his first National Football League triumph.

The Patriots, who bolted to a 21-0 lead after the first quarter, turned two interceptions and a pair of fumble recoveries into 24 points as they ended their preseason with a 1-3 record. Green Bay, which cut the lead to 24-13 at halftime, fell to 2-2.

New England took a 7-0 lead after just 2:40 of the first period when Mosi Tatupu recovered a fumble by punt returner Johnnie Gray and carried the ball 7 yards for a touchdown.

Gerry Ellis scored twice in the second quarter for Green Bay, on a 1-yard run and a 7-yard pass from Lynn Dickey, to make the score 21-13. Dave Jacobs kicked a 37-yard field goal for the Patriots 1:17 before halftime.

Eddie Lee Ivery's 1-yard burst drew the Packers to within 24-20 with 9:57 left in the third quarter. But the Patriots soon regained control.

Cavanaugh hit Collins with a short pass and the running back completed the 16-yard scoring play. Jacobs added a 20-yard field goal late in the third quarter after John Zamberlin recovered a fumble at the Green Bay 22-yard-line.

Steelers 27, Eagles 24

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Terry Bradshaw threw a 15-yard touchdown pass to Bennie Cunningham with 1:59 left in the game to cap a 98-yard drive as the Pittsburgh Steelers rallied to defeat the Philadelphia Eagles 27-24 in a National Football League pre-season game Saturday night.

Pittsburgh ended a 4-0 exhibition season. The loss, the third by the Eagles in four exhibition games, marred a standout first half performance by quarterback Ron Jaworski, who completed 14 of 21 passes for 206 yards and three touchdowns as Philadephia took a 21-7 halftime lead.

Bradshaw completed six passes for 91 yards during the Steelers' final scoring drive, including passes of 22 and 10 yards to Jim Smith and three passes for 27 yards to John Stallworth.

After a 17-yard pass play from Bradshaw to Cunningham gave the Steelers a first down at the Eagles' 33, Bradshaw threw to Stallworth on two straight plays for 18 yards.

The Eagles stalled on offense after Pisarcik replaced Jaworski and scored only three points, on a 27-yard field goal by Tony Franklin, in the second half.

Bills 13, Lions 10

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Nick Mike-Mayer booted his second field goal of the game, a 25-yarder with 1:35 remaining, to lift the Buffalo Bills to a 13-10 National Football League exhibition victory over the Detroit Lions Saturday night.

Mike-Mayer put the Bills up 3-0 early in the second quarter with a 27-yarder. Wide receiver Robert Holt scored the Bills' only touchdown on an 81-yard reception late in the game.

Permian magic is back as Mojo routs Coronado

ODESSA — Mojo magic wasn't bothered a bit by its move from W.T. Barrett Stadium to the new Ratliff Stadium as Odessa Permian bombed El Paso Coronado by a 41-7 count here Saturday night.

Mike Troglin paced the Panther attack with 180 yards rushing on 16 carries, including TD romps of 30 and 17 yards. Quarterback Brent Kelley also had a good night for Permian in the Panther 1982 debut by passing for 78 yards, including a nine-yard TD to Eddie Bizell, a 22-yard scoring strike to Roger Turner and a two-point conversion to Billy Rogers.

Permian, the defending 4-5A champion, rolled out 391 yards rushing and another 78 in the air. Mojo also exploded for 28 second quarter points against Coronado after the two teams battled to an 0-0 deadlock in the first quarter.

Permian's victory gave District 4-5A a 6-2 record against outside foes this weekend. Midland High and Abilene Cooper were the only teams to suffer defeat in the first week of the 1982 football campaign. MHS fell by a 17-2 count to Lubbock Monterey while Cooper took a 21-14 loss to Brownwood.

Boston College spoils Sherrill's debut as Texas A&M coach

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Boston College sophomore quarterback Doug Flutie spoiled Coach Jackie Sherrill's Texas A&M debut Saturday night by rifling three touchdown passes and running for another score in a 38-16 victory over the stunned Aggies.

It was the worst opening loss in 16 years for the Aggies since a 38-3 defeat at the hands of Georgia Tech in 1966.

Flutie, the ninth leading passer in the country as a freshman, winged a 44-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Jon Schoen in the first period and hit him again for a 16-yard scoring strike in the second quarter.

His third TD pass was a 32-yarder to Brian Brennan in the third period.

The 5-10, 175-pound Flutie also scored in the first half on a bootleg run around left end after he had faked a handoff that fooled the entire Aggie team.

Ken Snow kicked a 31-yard field goal for the Eagles and Bob Biestek bulled across from a yard out in the season opener for both teams played before 55,177 fans in Kyle Field.

Flutie completed 18 of 27 passes for 346 yards against the porous Aggie secondary.

They jumped to a quick 7-0 lead when Doug Guyer, who was the 1981 starting quarterback until he lost his job to Flutie, recovered Ernest Jackson's fumble at the BC 49 and Flutie hit Schoen for his first touchdown pass.

A field goal by Hardy cut the lead to 7-3, then Flutie took the Eagles on an 80-yard drive for the touchdown he scored himself.

George Radachowsky intercepted a pass and returned it to the Aggie 15. Snow's field goal made it 17-3.

Hardy kicked another field goal for the Aggies, but Flutie took the Eagles on another 80-yard drive that he climaxed on a 16-yard touchdown pass to Schoen and Boston College led 24-6 at halftime.

Brannan leads Baylor past North Texas State

WACO, Texas (AP) — Scrambling senior quarterback Mike Brannan guided Baylor to touchdowns on all three of its first-half possessions Saturday night in a 21-17 non-conference football victory over North Texas State.

Brannan's running, passing and his alert fumble recovery spoiled the homecoming of North Texas coach Corky Nelson, who quit as Baylor defensive coordinator two months ago to take the North Texas job.

The Baylor offensive was kept in mid-season form by Brannan for the first two quarters with help from Alfred Anderson, goal-line specialist Allen Rice and split end Gerald McNeil, billed as the smallest starter in college football.

Anderson, a former wingback making his debut at halfback, scored Baylor's first touchdown with a 1-yard leap and set up the second score with a 43-yard run, the longest of his career. Rice, alternating at halfback and quarterback near the goal, pitched out to Horace Ates on a 5-yard touchdown play and sprinted 5 yards for another score.

McNeil, only 5-foot-7 and 142 pounds, grabbed four passes for 49 yards in Baylor's first scoring drive, which tied the game 7-7.

BRANNAN scrambled for 13 to keep Baylor's first drive going, pulled away from a tackler behind the line of scrimmage for a 16-yard gain on Baylor's second possession, and had an 8-yard scramble and fumble recovery on Baylor's third scoring march.

Brannan also chased down Rice's fumble at the North Texas 26 on a key play in that march as Baylor took a 21-10 halftime lead.

North Texas quarterback Rusty Hill brought his team to within 4 points by tossing a 6-yard pass to fullback Bobby Daniels for a touchdown late in the third quarter. The Southland Conference team also missed a chance to score when Gordon Charleston stumbled and fell at the Baylor 5 on a fourth-and-2 play that failed to make a first down.

Walker expected to miss Georgia-Clemson clash

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — All-America tailback Herschel Walker is expected to be on the sidelines Monday night when Georgia opens its 1982 campaign against defending national champion Clemson in a nationally televised battle of college football powerhouses.

A sellout crowd of 82,122 is anticipated for the 9 p.m. EDT contest — the first night game at Sanford Stadium in 31 years. ABC will telecast the game nationwide.

Georgia leads the series with Clemson 33-14-3, but the teams have split the last six games. Clemson won 13-3 last year when the Bulldogs were the defending national champions.

Georgia is a slight favorite even though Walker, who has 3,507 rushing yards in two seasons, is not expected to play after breaking his right thumb Aug. 21.

Coach Vince Dooley said earlier in the week that Walker would suit up, but added that the 6-foot-1, 222-pound running back would not play.

"Herschel worked Tuesday for the first time with a pad so thick that there was no possible way he could get hurt, but it's something he could not play in," Dooley said. Walker may be ready for the Brigham Young game Sept. 11, he said.

Walker, however, has said that if he suits up, he'll play.

"I'm not going down there (the stadium) to watch," he said. "If I'm dressed out and on the field, I'm convinced I'm going to play. If it's the fourth quarter, I'm going to play. If they decide Saturday or Sunday I'm not going to play, I don't think I'll dress out. I'll watch it on TV."

DANNY FORD, the fourth-year coach at Clemson isn't taking any chances. He has put his Tigers through practice as if Walker will play.

"We're expecting him to play," Ford said. "We don't need any surprises. We don't need to go down there and have him trot out on the field, pull off that jersey and have Superman on underneath it. That's what he is. He's the best I've ever seen."

The Bulldogs, shooting for a third straight Southeastern Conference title, will start senior Carnie Norris at tailback in place of Walker, said Dooley.

"Carnie is a good solid performer that's answered the bell on a couple of other occasions and responded well. He'll do a good job but he's no Herschel Walker," said the coach.

Starting tight end Norris Brown, who injured a knee, also is expected to miss the game for the Bulldogs, who will be starting junior John Lastinger at quarterback. Lastinger replaces three-year starter Buck Belue, who graduated.

"This will no doubt be the biggest challenge we've had in quite a while. Clemson is the national champion and they have the majority of their starters back ... They have the entire backfield including senior quarterback Homer Jordan who led them to the national championship," said Dooley.

"Clemson is good, very good. What makes them good is that every phase of their football game is good — everything. They can run, they can throw, they can play defense and they've got a great kicking game," he said.

ASU rolls to 34-3 win over Oregon in PAC-10

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Willie Green returned an interception 43 yards to set up one touchdown and Mitch Callahan recovered a fumble for another TD Saturday as 19th-ranked Arizona State rolled to a 34-3 victory over Oregon in a Pacific-10 Conference football opener.

Green, a linebacker, set up the only touchdown the Sun Devils needed when he picked up a Kevin Lusk lob pass and returned it to the Oregon 20-yard line. Dwaine Wright scored on a 1-yard run moments later to give ASU a 10-3 lead.

Arizona State's veteran defense, first against the run in the Pac-10 a year ago, accounted for the team's second touchdown. Lusk, a two-year starter who had trouble moving the sluggish Oregon offense most of the day, fumbled the ball on his own 10-yard line with 2:37 left in the third quarter.

Backup quarterback Todd Hons, playing for injured Sandy Osiecki, directed two touchdown drives late in the third and early in the fourth quarters.

He completed five straight passes in the fourth quarter, including a 15-yard scoring toss to Doug Allen in the opening play of the period. Tony Lombardi's 6-yard touchdown run four minutes later concluded the Sun Devils' scoring.

Trailing 13-3, Oregon drove deep into Arizona State territory in the third quarter, but Ladaria Johnson fumbled and Arizona State's Greg Battle recovered at the Sun Devil 8-yard line.

Arizona State fumbled the ball away on its first offensive play to set up Oregon's only score, a 43-yard field goal by Paul Schwabe. Luis Zendejas had field goals of 21 and 27 yards for Arizona State.

Ten fast quarter horses to run for $1 million

By PETE HERRERA

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — At Ruidoso Downs Monday, the All-American Futurity will be run. On hand will be 10 fast quarter horses, a $1 million check for the winner and two state policemen to make sure no one tampers with the world's richest horse race.

Horse racing in New Mexico began inconspicuously enough, with match races in such towns as Silver City, Tucumcari and Hot Springs (Truth or Consequences). But during the last two decades, it has mushroomed into one of the state's biggest industries. Estimates on its economic impact on the state run from $80 to $100 million.

But while the industry has grown in impressive fashion, it's governing body, the state Racing Commission, has slowly receded into a Catch 22 situation.

The commission was created by the Legislature in 1933, the same year that a pari-mutuel horse racing bill was enacted into law. It numbers five members, an executive-secretary and, according to its chairman, a budget that borders on the ridiculous.

"We have an $80 million industry and a two-bit budget," said Commission Chairman Raymond Eaves during a recent interview. "There is no arguing that our budget is archaic and has failed to keep pace with the industry."

Eaves said the commission's current budget totals $500,000 a year, an improvement over the previous budget of $280,000, but still too small for the commission to do an adequate job of policing a sport that in New Mexico features no less than three million dollar races.

"When you are running for that kind of purses, you have to have a good enforcement policy," said Eaves.

The fact that there will be only two law enforcement officials working for the commission at Ruidoso Downs Monday when the $2.5 million All-American Futurity is run illustrates the problems the commission faces.

Ron Beserra, the commission's executive-secretary, said prior to the 1981 All-American, the commission had no state police officers assigned to it for security work at the racetracks. And while two is better than none, Beserra said the ideal situation would be to have "five to seven officers working" on big race days.

Agents Manny Aragon and Freddie Garcia, the latter on loan to the commission from the state attorney general's office, will try to make sure that all 10 horses get an equal shot at the $1 million first place payoff.

The commission's primary worry is over the illegal use of drugs to influence a horse's performance in a big race, a concern that recent history would indicate is not totally unwarranted.

Several years ago, the brilliant filly Denim and Diamonds was disqualified from competing in the All-American Derby, the second richest race held at Ruidoso Downs each year. The reason was that traces of the illegal drug Sublimaze were found in urine samples taken from the filly after she had qualified for the derby. And this summer two horses, Jays Mainspring and Rebelier, were disqualified from the $250,000 Kansas Derby because traces of a morphine derivitive were found in their urine samples.

And during the period from 1974 through 1979, New Mexico recorded more case of illegal drug use in racehorses than did such neighboring states as Colorado, Arizona and California.

Eaves, who has been a member of the commission for four years and its chairman the last two, says the problems are widespread, and most of them could be solved with more money.

"We are one of the few agencies that brings in more money than we spend," said Eaves, "and while some of the legislators understand what we are facing, but most of them don't."

Eaves said the commission will seek additional funding from the Legislature during the 1983 session.

"We need our own state lab and testing facilities at each track," said Eaves. "In racing, you are only as good as your testing facilities."

At present, the commission contracts out the testing of urine and plasma samples to a private laboratory in Albuquerque, ANACHEM Inc.

The commission, however, also catches criticism from horsemen and racing officials, some saying it tries to do too much, and others contending it doesn't do enough to better racing in the state.

One of the most outspoken is trainer Don Farris.

"There is a lot of money in New Mexico because of horse racing," said Farris. "It runs into the millions. People from outside the state bring in their horses, contribute their money and nothing runs smooth.

Noah, Navratilova post victories

Yannick Noah leaps after defeating Eric Korita Saturday in the U.S. Open Tennis Tournament at the National Tennis Center. Noah won a 7-5, 6-7, 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 marathon over Korita.

AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ninth-seeded Yannick Noah of France was pushed to the limit before escaping the upset bid by qualifier Eric Korita, while top-seeded Martina Navratilova crushed her third-round opponent Saturday in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Also advancing into the fourth round at the National Tennis Center were defending champion Tracy Austin, the women's No. 3 seed, No. 7 Pam Shriver, No. 14 Virginia Ruzici of Romania and No. 15 Andrea Leand.

THIRD—SEEDED Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia completed the day action with a dull 6-3, 6-0, 6-1 victory over Harold Solomon in a match that featured long baseline rallies.

In night matches, fifth-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia took on Bulgarian Manuela Maleeva, while Sweden's Mats Wilander, the French Open champion and seeded 11th in the men's singles here, played Tim Wilkison.

Noah needed 3½ hours to outlast Korita 7-5, 6-7, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4. Navratilova cruised by Nancy Yeargin 6-3, 6-3; Austin stopped Jo Durie of Great Britain 6-4, 6-3; Shriver eliminated Dana Gilbert 3-6, 6-2, 6-3; Ruzici defeated Beth Herr 7-5, 6-2, and Leand ousted Heather Ludloff 6-4, 6-2.

"He is the best server I have ever played against," Noah said after edging Korita on the hard courts at Flushing Meadow. "He serves very well . . . Maybe he served very well today because this is the first time I have seen him. It (the ball) almost hit me four or five times."

THE NO. 5 player at Southern Methodist University, Korita had to qualify for the 128-player field in this $1.5 million tournament, the richest in the world. He earned his shot at Noah by beating SMU teammate Jerome Vanier of France in the opening round and Brad Gilbert in the second, serving 16 aces.

Both Vanier and Gilbert also had to qualify for this year's Open.

Agsinst Noah, Korita, a native of Glenville, Ill., boomed eight aces. He followed his serve to the net and followed up many of them with put-away volleys.

"I served pretty well," Korita admitted. "I was hoping to come up with a few boomers, and a couple times I did and a couple times I didn't. You can't hit them all."

But the experience and mastery of strokes pulled Noah through. In the final set, he broke Korita in the fourth set, only to be broken back in the seventh.

Then came the crucial 10th game with Noah leading 5-4 and Korita serving.

THE FRENCHMAN jumped out to a love-30 advantage before Korita fought back to knot the score. The next two points were split, bring the pair to deuce.

Noah took the advantage with a soft, angled cross-court forehand, then broke for the match on an identical shot that Korita could only tip with his racket.

"When I broke back at 4-2 to make it 4-3 (in the fifth set), then I had break point, I said I have to stand back and go for it," Korita said. "If I could hit then, I could hold my serve. And I was close. But close doesn't really count much."

"I started working for this after last year's Open," she said, referring to when she lost to Austin in the finals. "If you can't enjoy being No. 1 and playing here, than it's time to quit and you may as well pack your bags and go."

UTEP stuns NMSU, 20-17

LAS CRUCES (AP) — Junior Scott Wedell booted a 25-yard field goal with 13 seconds left in the game to give Texas-El Paso a come-from-behind 20-17 win over rival New Mexico State Saturday in the season opener for both schools.

The Aggies had a chance to break a 17-17 tie with 6:41 left in the game, but a 35-yard field goal attempt by freshman Todd Sorenson was wide to the left side.

UTEP took over at their own 20 and marched all the way to the NMSU nine when Wedell entered on a fourth down play and made good on his winning kick.

The Aggies led after one quarter 3-0 on a 46-yard field goal by Sorenson and took a 9-7 lead at halftime on a six-yard pass from senior quarterback Jamie McAlister to James Bridges. The point-after-try failed.

In the third quarter, UTEP went ahead 14-9 as defensive end Don Kimble pirated a McAlister pass and rumbled 54 yards for the go-ahead touchdown.

But the Aggies came back with 7:13 left in the third quarter as McAlister found Bobby Humphery on a 12-yard pass play. McAlister passed to Bridges for a two-point conversion to give the Aggies a 17-14 advantage going into the final quarter.

Statistically, both teams were nearly even as UTEP outgained the Aggies in total offense 311-304.

A belt sander is a belt of abrasive rotated by two motor driven drums. The belt sander is perhaps the most versatile of all since, because of the drums, it can be used as a drum sander as well as a belt sander for finishing curved surfaces as well as straight surfaces. The abrasive paper discs for disc sanders are available in various types and grits.

Mike-Mayer put the Bills up 3-0 early in the second quarter with a 27-yarder. Wide receiver Robert Holt scored the Bills' only touchdown on an 81-yard reception late in the game.

Despite a listless three quarters, Detroit was even with Buffalo 3-3 on Eddie Murray's 47-yard field goal on the Lions' last possession in the half.

Broncos 20, Jets 13

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Sammy Winder's 8-yard touchdown run capped an 84-yard drive led by quarterback Craig Morton with 4:58 to go to give the Denver Broncos a 20-13 victory over the New York Jets in the final National Football League preseason game.

The winning drive was highlighted by a 37-yard pass to Jim Wright, followed by a 15-yard run by Gerald Willhite.

Denver tied the score 13-13 with 14:11 remaining in the game when safety Mike Harden intercepted a Richard Todd pass and returned it 54 yards for a touchdown.

An aggressive defense got the Jets in position for their first touchdown, in the second period. The Broncos were driven back 20 yards in three plays to their own 1 before Luke Prestrige's 38-yard punt was returned to the 25 by New York's Bruce Harper.

Five plays later, Freeman McNeil bolted over from the 2-yard-line at 12:57 to give the Jets a 7-0 lead.

New York's other points were also set up by Denver mistakes.

The other score came when defensive end Mark Gastineau recovered a Rick Parros fumble at the Denver 46, then fumbled at the 42, where safety Darrol Ray picked it up and took it to the 22.

The Jets moved the ball to the Denver 4 before settling for a 22-yard field goal by Ramsey at 7:16.

Denver's first-half scoring came in the second period on a 22-yard field goal by Fred Steinfort at 10:56 and Rich Karlis' 34-yarder as time expired.

Colts 26, Bears 17

CHICAGO (AP) - Rookie quarterback Mike Pagel threw first half touchdown passes of 22 and 41 yards to Ray Butler Saturday night as the Baltimore Colts rolled to a 26-17 victory over the Chicago Bears in their National Football League preseason finale.

The Colts closed with a 3-2 record while the Bears finished the exhibition season at 1-3.

Pagel, who is set to be the starting quarterback against New England in the Colts' regular season opener next week, played only the first half and completed 4 of 7 passes for 73 yards.

Midway in the second half, Pagel hurled a 41-yard touchdown pass to Butler for a 13-0 lead. On the final play of the half, Chicago's Bob Thomas booted a 33-yard field goal to make it 13-3.

Butler, who caught 5 passes for 139 yards, caught a 33-yard pass from David Humm to set up a 40-yard field goal by Wood midway in the third quarter to make it 16-3.

But Butler came back to grab a 44-yard pass from Humm in a 76-yard drive which ended on the first play of the fourth quarter with Humm sneaking for a touchdown to make it 23-10.

Browns 27, Raiders 10

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Brian Sipe threw three first half touchdown passes as the Cleveland Browns defeated the Los Angeles Raiders 27-10 Saturday night in the final National Football League exhibition game for both teams.

The Browns finished the exhibition season at 4-0 and scored a complete sweep over southern California teams, having defeated the Rams earlier this summer 26-23. The Raiders finished with a 2-2 preseason record.

Akers hopes Chapman's injury only sprain

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Longhorn coach Fred Akers said Saturday that he hopes an injury plaguing starting tight end hopeful Mike Chapman is only a sprain.

Chapman suffered what Akers said "we hope is just a badly sprained ankle." Chapman is in a battle with Bobby Micho for the starting tight end job.

Anthony Byerly, a freshman running back from Newton, also was injured. Byerly said he had a hyperextended knee, but officials did not think it was serious.

The injuries were reported as Texas quarterback Robert Brewer led his first team offensive unit to four touchdowns in six possessions against the No. 2 Longhorn defense in a two-hour scrimmage Saturday.

Diaz' double leads Phillies to victory over Astros, 4-2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bo Diaz drove in three runs with a bases-clearing double Saturday, leading the Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

Reliever Sid Monge pitched three scoreless innings to pick up his sixth victory against one loss. Ron Reed hurled the final 1⅓ innings for his ninth save. Bob Knepper, 5-14, took the loss.

In the fourth, Tony Scott led off with a single against Phillies' starter Dick Ruthven and scored ahead of Ray Knight's fifth home run of the season to make it 3-2.

Houston loaded the bases against Ruthven in the fifth on two walks and a fielder's choice, but Monge came in to retire Alan Ashby on an infield popup.

A crowd of 35,742 turned out for the game, pushing the Phillies' home attendance past the two-million mark for the sixth time in the last seven years.

Expos 4, Braves 1

MONTREAL (AP) — Scott Sanderson and Jeff Reardon combined on a seven-hitter and Warren Cromartie cracked a solo home run as the Montreal Expos snapped Atlanta's four-game winning streak by defeating the Braves 4-1 Saturday night.

Sanderson, 9-11, was hit on the right leg by a line drive off the bat of Claudell Washington in the sixth. Sanderson, who scattered five hits, finished the inning and was relieved by Reardon in the seventh with Montreal ahead 4-0.

Reardon picked up his 22nd save despite allowing Atlanta's only run on pinch-hitter Bob Watson's RBI single in the seventh. The hit scored Chris Chambliss, who led off with a single and took second on a two-out walk.

Cromartie, who had three hits, unloaded his 12th homer in the first inning against starter Pascual Perez, 0-4. Two-out singles by Al Oliver, Gary Carter and Tim Wallach made it 2-0 later in the inning.

Singles by Cromartie and Dawson plus Oliver's walk loaded the bases in the third. Carter then drove in a run with a force out.

Mets 3, Reds 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Kingman's 32nd homer of the season gave the New York Mets a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday night in a game between last-place teams.

Craig Swan, 8-6, got the win although he was forced to leave the game after the fifth inning with stiffness behind his right shoulder. Charlie Puleo took over with a 3-1 lead and recorded his first save of the year.

Cincinnati, last in the National League West, lost despite getting 12 hits, while the Mets had only six. New York is in the cellar in the National League East.

But New York took a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the inning off starter Bruce Berenyi, 8-15. Gary Rajsich singled with one out, Ron Hodges walked and Hubie Brooks singled to tie the score. Hodges took third on the hit and scored on Brian Giles' sacrifice fly.

Kingman's homer in the third inning tied him with Atlanta's Dale Murphy for the National League lead and gave the Mets a 3-1 lead.

Missouri gains sloppy win over Colorado State, 28-14

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Brad Perry threw two touchdown passes and Marlon Adler scored once and tossed a scoring pass Saturday, leading Missouri past Colorado State 28-14 in a sloppy college football opener.

The long, ragged game included 16 turnovers. Twice, the teams exchanged back-to-back giveaways.

Colorado State, which a year ago became the only college team ever to lose 12 games in a season, gave up the ball on its first two possessions. On the second, Troy Lindsay fumbled to Brad Opel on the 14, and Perry immediately hit tight end Andy Gibler with a 14-yard touchdown pass.

A 31-yard pass interference penalty on Colorado State gave Missouri a first and goal from the Ram three early in the second quarter. And Adler, a walk-on who has been dueling Perry for the quarterback job, hit Tony Davis with a short touchdown pass.

Bob Lucchesi's extra point attempt failed wide and Missouri, climbing back from an 8-4 year, held a 13-0 halftime lead.

Adler engineered a 12-play, 80-yard touchdown drive with the second half kickoff, keeping the final three yards himself, then passing to Gibler for the two-point conversion and a 21-0 lead.

Colorado State quarterback Terry Nugent, who was intercepted four times in the first half, finally found his touch in the second.

Midway through the third quarter Nugent tossed a perfectly timed 35-yard touchdown spiral to Jeff Champine.

But Perry reentered the game in the third period for Missouri and teamed with Curtland Thomas on a 40-yard scoring pass for a 28-7 lead.

A 28-yard pass interference penalty on Missouri's Terry Mitichak set up a second Ram touchdown late in the fourth period.

Otis' hit with five-day suspension, fine

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City Royals center fielder Amos Otis has been fined and suspended for five games for a bat-throwing incident last week against the Texas Rangers, American League President Lee MacPhail said Saturday.

Otis, who sat out games Friday and Saturday, was to begin serving the suspension Sunday, MacPhail said. The amount of the fine was undisclosed.

The penalties stemmed from an incident in Texas' 7-3 victory over the Royals Wednesday in Kansas City.In the game's third inning, Otis was struck in the back of his batting helmet and Royals second baseman Frank White was hit in the elbow by pitches from Texas' Mike Smithson.

On three consecutive pitches in the sixth inning, the bat went flying from Otis' hands. The first swing sent the bat into the seats behind the Rangers' third base dugout. On the second two tosses the bat sailed between the pitching mound and third base.

Otis was ejected on the third swing as players from both benches and bullpens streamed onto the field. No punches were thrown.

Darrell Johnson, the Rangers' interim manager, said Otis let the bat fly intentionally and should be suspended.

Otis was unavailable for comment Saturday following Kansas City's 3-2 loss to the New York Yankees, and Kansas City Manager Dick Howser had little comment. However, Otis earlier denied that he had let the bat fly intentionally. He said the bat slipped from his hands.

Dotson pitches four-hitter, Luzinski belts 17th homer of season

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard Dotson fired a four-hitter and Greg Luzinski crashed his 17th homer of the year Saturday night to lift the Chicago White Sox to their sixth straight victory, a 2-0 triumph over the Texas Rangers.

Dotson, 10-11, won for the seventh straight time as he held Texas hitless through 4 1-3 innings before Bill Stein reached on a scratch single. John Grubb blooped a two-out double in the sixth, George Wright lined a single in the eighth and Pat Putnam doubled in the ninth for the other Texas hits.

Dotson struck out two, walked one and allowed only Grubb and Putnam to reach second.

Texas starter Frank Tanana, 6-16, gave up 10 hits, struck out five and walked two in a losing effort.

Chicago touched Tanana for a run in the second when Ron Kittle doubled to left for his first major league hit, moved to third on Vance Law's sacrifice bunt and scored on Chris Nyman's single.

Luzinski homered in the third and Steve Kemp, who had three hits, added a two-run single in the eighth.

Brewers 8, Angels 2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ted Simmons singled in the go-ahead run and Gorman Thomas followed with a two-run triple in Milwaukee's fifth inning and Pete Vuckovich won his 16th game as the Brewers defeated the California Angels 8-2.

With the score tied 2-2 in the fifth, Robin Yount and Cecil Cooper singled with one out to put runners at first and third. Simmons singled to right-center off California starter Luis Tiant, 2-2, to score Yount.

Thomas then blooped his first triple of the season to the same spot for two more runs.

Vuckovich, 16-4, was backed by a 15-hit attack as he won his seventh game in a row. Vuckovich allowed five hits, walked six and struck out four in going the distance for the eighth time. He is now 5-0 lifetime against the Angels.

Each team scored a run in the first. California's Rod Carew extended his hitting streak to 19 games with a single and later scored on a wild pitch with the bases loaded. The Brewers tied it in the bottom half on a fielding error by Bobby Grich.

Orioles 3, Twins 0

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jim Palmer pitched a one-hitter for his 11th straight victory and Eddie Murray homered as the torrid Baltimore Orioles downed the Minnesota Twins 3-0 Saturday night for their 14th triumph in 15 games.

Palmer, 13-3, retired the first 11 batters before Gary Gaetti bounced a single through the middle with two outs in the fifth inning. The only other baserunners were Len Faedo, who walked in the sixth, and pinch-hitter Randy Bush, who walked in the ninth.

It was the 261st career triumph for Palmer and his 20th over Minnesota. He now has at least 20 victories against every team in the American League except the expansion franchises in Seattle and Toronto.

Murray, batting .375 in his last 18 games with nine homers and 26 runs batted in, hit his 26th homer in the first following a double by Glenn Gulliver.

Bobby Castillo, 8-11, allowed another run in the second on a triple by Cal Ripken Jr. and a single by Gary Roenicke.

Baltimore's second seven-game winning streak since Aug. 20 moved the Orioles into second place in the American League East, one-half game ahead of the Boston Red Sox, who dropped a 4-3 decision to Seattle Saturday.

Indians 4, Blue Jays 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rick Manning's seventh-inning single drove home the winning run and Tom Brennan picked up his first victory of the season as the Cleveland Indians edged the Toronto Blue Jays 4-3 Saturday.

Yankees 3, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Dave Winfield crashed his 27th homer with one out in the ninth inning to snap a 2-2 tie and power the New York Yankees to a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals Saturday.

Left-hander Shane Rawley, 10-8, scattered six hits in eight innings for his fourth consecutive victory while Royals' southpaw Larry Gura, 17-9, was thwarted in his bid to become the American League's first 18-game winner. The loss was only Gura's third in 12 career decisions against New York.

The Royals tied the game 2-2 in the eighth on George Brett's sacrifice fly that scored Greg Pryor, who singled, went to second on another single by Willie Wilson and was sacrificed to third.

New York had gone ahead in the top of the inning when Roy Smalley and Rick Cerone drilled consecutive doubles.

Mariners 4, Red Sox 3

BOSTON (AP) — Julio Cruz stroked a two-run single to highlight a four-run second inning Saturday as Seattle edged the Boston Red Sox 4-3 despite three wild pitches by Gaylord Perry of the Mariners.

Perry, 8-12, allowed two of Boston's runs on wild pitches, but permitted only one extra-base hit, a second-inning RBI-double by Dwight Evans. Perry got relief help in the eighth from Bill Caudill, who got his 23rd save.

Seattle got seven of its nine hits off Bruce Hurst, 3-7, who replaced starter Dennis Eckersley after just four pitches. The Red Sox said Eckersley strained a muscle in his right arm.

Luis Aponte relieved Hurst in the third and limited the Mariners to two hits the rest of the way.

A's 4, Tigers 3

DETROIT (AP) — Tony Armas homered and hit a tie-breaking, ninth-inning sacrifice fly Saturday to hand the Oakland A's a 4-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The A's loaded the bases in the ninth with none out before Armas lifted a fly ball to right, scoring Davey Lopes, who opened the inning with a double and took third on Dwayne Murphy's infield hit.

Elias Sosa, 3-3, the fourth of six Detroit pitchers, took the loss.

Armas' 23rd homer, a two-run shot in the seventh, gave the A's a 3-1 lead in the seventh before Detroit rallied to tie in the eighth.

Lou Whitaker's 13th homer, a two-run blast, followed a two-out single by Alan Trammell to pull Detroit even at 3-3.

Results don't change at Arlington, only owners

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas — It's another August and the Texas Rangers have shriveled away again like uncovered tomato plants under a hot prairie sun.

Another owner, another crop failure.

The results haven't changed in 11 years — just the owners.

Crowds of 9,000 or so passively come and drink their beer and eat their nachos and go home almost too cynical to boo the second worst team in the American League.

Only 1982 is distinctive in that it had the Eddie Chiles brand. Meet Bob and Brad, Eddie.

Chiles worked his way up from a $29.50 a month merchant seaman to become the chairman of the board of The Western Company of North America.

Becoming a millionare may have been easier for the 71-year-old Chiles than trying to figure out how to field a winning major league hardball team.

Chiles fired his general manager, Eddie Robinson, then fired his manager, Don Zimmer, after asking him to resign in a messy situation that stretched over a three-day period. Zimmer refused to resign "because my friends would know I'd be lying."

Then Chiles blamed the press for making the Rangers look bad by breaking the story.

'I think a lot of the media still have the old Watergate syndrome where you have to make something negative always," Chiles said at the time.

Then he hired Darrell Johnson but wouldn't tell the press why he fired Zimmer. "It's a private problem, a private situation."

The entire chaotic year prompted Buddy Bell, who has seen it all in a Ranger uniform, to say: "Things have gone worse than any time since I've been here."

In the last week of August, Chiles was still looking for another general manager and Johnson didn't know what his 1983 status would be.

And the accountants are going over the books. The estimated losses for 1982 were expected to range over $1 million. Nobody knows for sure because the Rangers have radio and television rights this year.

However, they'll not reach their projected 1.5 million in attendance and that means red ink.

Remarkably, the Rangers passed the million mark again this year. This with the third worst team in baseball.

The collapse of the 1982 Rangers can be traced to the failure of their starting pitching and the bullpen, plus unsettled lineups.

For example: When Bucky Dent came from the New York Yankees in a trade for Lee Mazzilli, Dent became the seventh person to play shortstop for the Rangers this year.

Chiles has finally come to the conclusion that he isn't the baseball man he thought he was and is trying to hire someone who can put the Ranger puzzle together.

It's certainly a Rubik's cube of a baseball puzzle. The Rangers have had enough talent to win in the past, but the chemistry between players and management has never jelled.

Short, Corbett, and Chiles have desperately tried to field winners. They have spent, spent, spent but unevitably made the wrong decisions on personnel, particularly in the farm teams where they let promising players get away.

The Ranger needs are evident even to casual fans.

At one point last week, the Pittsburgh Pirate pitching staff had more RBIs than the Ranger DH's.

With an infield of Bell at third, Dent at shortstop, Mike Richardt at second, Dave Hostetler at first and Jim Sundberg behind the plate the Rangers have some solid potental for next year.

But they need pitching, improved DHs and outfield help to place around centerfield George Wright.

Of course, "potential" means you haven't done it yet.

It's Chiles' call.

Midlander has two horses in Futurity

RUIDOSO, N.M. — It's hard enough to qualify one horse for the $2.5 million All-American Futurity, which is to be run here Monday, but Midland's Clarence Scharbauer Jr. will have two entries in the famed race.

Ten horses will shoot from the gate Monday in the richest horse race in the world and Scharbauer has two shots at the $1 million first prize. Last place pays $51,000 and the potential for finishing 1-2 for the Midland owner is $1,343,500.

The Midland entries are Call Me Favorite and Dynago Victory. Call Me Favorite is a filly who has won $140,072 in prize money. She has started nine times with four wins to show for it. She also has four seconds and one third. Call Me Favorite qualified fifth with a time of 22.17 in the 440 yard distance and was second in her heat to Mr. Master Bug.

Dynago Victory is a gelding who has won $164,508 and had the ninth fastest qualifying time with a 22.29, but was first in his heat. He has won six times this year, placing second twice and third once.

Yankee Win is the favorite with a qualifying time of 21.81 and Mr. Master Bug, who already owns a win over Call Me Favorite, had a qualifying time of 21.88. All the rest of the field is in the 22 second range.

MCC golf race down to four players

The Midland Country Club golf championship for 1982 is now down to four players with two days left to go in the match play club championship tournament.

The final champion will be either Randy Geiselman, Craig Campbell, Kelly Cox or Larry Snyder. Geiselman won a 2-1 decision over Kirk Branum Saturday while Campbell took a 1-up win over Andy Shapira. Geiselman and Campbell will square off today in the semifinals and the finals will be held Monday.

In the other semifinal bout today, Cox will meet Snyder. Cox advanced Saturday with a 1-up victory over Ted Fergeson while Snyder gained the semis with an easy 8-7 win over Kelly Sewell.

Champions will also be decided in the other flights over the next two days.

One of the biggest tournament happenings, however, came Friday when Bill Franklin, playing in the second flight, produced his first hole-in-one in a 4-3 win over Tom Welch. Franklin's ace came on the par three No. 16 hole with a six-iron shot.

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sportswriter

The three judges split their opinion. Using Michigan's "10 must" rule, Judge Bernard Humphrey scored it 96-94 Duran. However, judges Nate McAlpine and Steward Kerschenbaum each scored it 96-94 for Laing.

In the first two rounds, Laing literally ran from the more experienced Duran, perhaps attempting to tire his opponent.

Duran took the early rounds with good combinations but the knockout power once known as the "hands of stone" clearly was not there.

Laing stung Duran with a smashing right hand in the seventh round that seemed to weaken the Panamanian. Laing won that round, fought about even in the eighth, then won the ninth and 10th as he became the aggressor, scoring points with good left jabs by holding off Duran's bull-like rushes.

The fight had been seen as the first step in Duran's determined comeback to regain the reputation he enjoyed first when he was lightweight champion and then as welterweight champ when he beat Sugar Ray Leonard a little more than two years ago in Montreal for the World Boxing Council crown. Duran fell from grace in November 1980, however, when he quit in the eighth round of the rematch with Leonard in New Orleans.

The bout with Laing, the former junior middleweight champion of the British Commonwealth, was Duran's first since Jan. 30, when he went 15 rounds and was defeated handily by Wilfred Benitez in a match for the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title.

Eighteen months ago Laing, who has a reputation as a playboy, lost his British super welterweight title to Colin Jones on a TKO, then lost a rematch to Jones.

The bout was televised to a national cable television audience by ESPN.

Tulsa rips Air Force, 35-17

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Tulsa running back Michael Gunter shredded the Air Force defense for 240 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Hurricane to a 35-17 victory over the Falcons Saturday night.

Hurricane quarterback Skip Ast also ran for two touchdowns and passed for a third as the defending Missouri Valley Conference champions won their non-conference season opener.

He struck again in the third quarter, taking a pitch from Ast and racing 31 yards untouched to the goal line.

Nicholls State beats Texas Southern, 14-6

HOUSTON (AP) — Oscar Smith scored on a one-yard dive to lift Nicholls State to a 14-6 season-opening college football win over Texas Southern here Saturday night.

Smith's touchdown capped a 44-yard, 10-play march. Keith Menard then skirted the right end for a two-point conversion.

Texas Southern drove 70 yards in 10 plays to open the scoring with 25 seconds left in the first half. Quarterback Harold Smith lofted the ball the final 18 yards to Arthur Cox. The extra-point attempt was blocked.

Nicholls tied the score when Barry Valcin recovered a fumble on the TSU 18 and then Dwayne Brown bulled over from the one. Rhett Tranchina's extra-point attempt was wide.

Blackledge throws Penn St. to victory

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Quarterback Todd Blackledge threw four touchdown passes in a Penn State aerial show as the eighth-ranked Nittany Lions beat Temple 31-14 Saturday in the 1982 college football opener for both teams.

Penn State, famed for its tailback-oriented running game, gained just 100 yards on 31 carries. It was the Lions' 10th lowest running total since Joe Paterno became coach 17 years ago.

Blackledge completed 14 of 25 passes for 203 yards as he became only the third quarterback in Penn State history to throw four touchdown passes in a game.

Blackledge threw for three scores to open up a 21-0 lead in the first quarter.

The junior from Canton, Ohio, tossed scoring passes of 40 yards to Curt Warner, 31 to Kevin Baugh and 16 to Jon Williams. Freshman Massimo Manca converted after each score.

Peete vaults into B.C. Open lead with 64

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Calvin Peete, putting on one of the best shows in a magnificent year for him, used an eagle 2 on the 441-yard 13th hole Saturday to vault over Fuzzy Zoeller into the lead of the $275,000 B.C. Open Golf Tournament after three rounds.

By carding a 7-under-par 64, his 54-hole total of 196 was good for a one-shot edge over Zoeller, whose 62 Friday broke the record on the 6,966-yard En Joie Golf Club course.

Jerry Pate was third, three shots back at 14-under 199 after firing steady rounds of 67-66-66.

From there, the list of pursuers dropped to 11 shots off the pace where Jim Simons, Wayne Levi and Jim Colbert were bunched at 207.

Peete was 13-under and trailed Zoeller by two strokes with just seven holes to play but warmed up for his eagle on the following hole with a birdie at No. 12, while Zoeller settled for a par.

Zoeller, the 1979 Masters champion, came back to tie at 16-under with a birdie on 14th hole but the deadlock was short-lived because Peete responded with another birdie — his fifth and last of the round — on No. 16.

Zoeller also had an eagle, sinking his third shot on the par-5, 550-yard third hole, and went 17-under on the front nine before bogeys at Nos. 7 and 9 cost him two strokes.

Pate, playing in the same threesome with Peete and Zoeller, came out smoking with birdies on five of the first seven holes, but then lost his deadly touch and finished the round with 11 pars in a row.

Lobos open WAC season with win over Wyoming

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Quarterback Dave Osborn threw for one touchdown and ran for another late in the game to spark New Mexico to a 41-20 victory over Wyoming in the Western Athletic Confernece football opener for both colleges Saturday.

New Mexico's defense, the best in the conference in the past two years, stymied Wyoming Quarterbacck Craig Johnson's passing, scored one touchdown and set up another.

Wyoming jumped out to a 10-0 lead in the first quarter before New Mexico came back with three touchdowns in a row.

New Mexico scored less than a minute into the second quarter on an interception and 26-yard touchdown run by linebacker Jake Simpson. Then a Johnson fumble, recovered by New Mexico defensive end Jimmie Carter set up the second New Mexico score with eight minutes left in the half and the Lobos never relinquished the lead after that.

Osborn's passing was on target for key plays in the game, including a 45-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Keith MaGee, which gave New Mexico a comanding 21-10 lead at the half.

Johnson put together several successful plays in the third quarter to pull within one point, 21-20, but the fourth quarter was all New Mexico's.

Wyoming is now 0-1 and New Mexico 1-0. The victory gives the Lobos the WAC lead at 1-0.

Washam shoots 64 to take Rail Charity Classic lead

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Playing her best round of golf in 10 years, Jo Ann Washam broke out of a mental "seventh inning slump" Saturday, shooting an 8-under-par 64 to take a one-stroke lead in the $125,000 LPGA Rail Charity Classic.

"I'm excited about playing golf again and that's what's important to me because if you don't want to be out there, there's no sense in playing," said Washam, who has not won on the women's golf tour since a victory here in 1979.

More than half of the 104 players in the field were at par or under because of perfect playing conditions and little wind at the 6,281-yard course. Most players said the low wind made the course particularly easy.

"I didn't feel that this golf course is an easy course but it played easier than you might expect from the rest of the tournaments," said Washam, a nine-year LPGA veteran from Dallas. "Tomorrow the tour staff will try the pin placements a little tougher."

Carole Charbonnier of Deray Beach, Fla., and Martha Hansen of St. Paul, Minn., shot 5-under-par 67s and are 3 shots behind Washam.

Much of the attention in the first round was stolen by a 21-year-old amateur playing in her first LPGA tournament. Mary Ellen Murphy of Itasca, Ill., shot a 4-under-par 68 and is in a large group 4 shots off the lead. Murphy said it was her best round of golf ever.

"It was pretty wild walking down the fairway and seeing my name on top of the leader board," she said. "I said 'Man, I wish I had a camera.'"

A senior on the University of Illinois golf team, Murphy had planned to attend Saturday night's Illinois-Northwestern football game but decided to stay in Springifeld to prepare for Sunday's second round.

Defending champion Jo Anne Carner of Lake Worth, Fla., aiming for her third victory in as many weeks, shot a 69, five shots off the lead.

The tournament concludes Monday.

Angelo State romps

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — Angelo State's Ernest Pennington scored three touchdowns and teammate Eddie O'Brien ran in one while rushing for 123 yards to beat Cameron University, 45-25, in non-conference football Saturday night.

Cameron's Larry McCrinnon set three school records in the high-flying opener for both schools.

O'Brien led off the scoring with a 17-yard touchdown run and Angelo State established a 21-10 halftime lead.

The Aggies narrowed the gap to six points at 31-25 when Alfred Wilder, who set a school record with 11 receptions, took a 5-yard pass from McCrinnon with 10:46 left in the game.

Pennington scored touchdowns of 9, 17 and 8 yards as Angelo State turned a pair of interceptions into keys for quashing Cameron's comebacks.

TP&W to hold drawing for 2,700 deer permits

Approxiamtely 2,700 permits to hunt deer on nine state wildlife management areas will be up for grabs when tle Texas Parks and Wildlife department holds a drawing Sept. 30 to determine the lucky winners.

About 40 of the permits will be issued for mule deer on the Sierra Diablo WMA, 32 miles northwest of Van Horn in Culberson County.

The remained of the pemits will be for white-tailed deer in eight areas. The areas include Chaparral, in Dimmit and La Salle Counties; James Daughtrey (formerly Choke Canyon) near Three Rivers in Live Oak and McMullen Counties; Engeling near Palestine in Anderson County; Kerr near Hunt in Kerr County; Pat Mayse near Paris in Lamar County; Gene Howe near Canadian in Hemphill County; Sommerville Unit near Caldwell in Lee and Burleson Counties; and Walter Buck near Junction in Kimble County.

TO PARTICIPATE in the drawing, hunters must fill out and submit application cards. They may be obtained by writing the Parks and Wildlife Department at 4200 Smith School Road, Austin 78744, or by calling the toll-free information number, 1-800-792-1112. Applications are also available at many department offices around the state.

For those lucky enough to be drawn, the cost will be $20 for a two-day whitetail hunt and $40 for the mule deer hunts.

All appilctions must be submitted to the department headquarters in Austin by 5 p.m. Sept. 27. The drawing will be held at 10 a.m. Sept. 30.

This is a grand opportunity for hunters to hunt excellent deer hide-a-ways without paying an arm and a leg. As you probably know, it's becoming harder and harder to hunt deer in Texas because of all the private land. And if you're lucky enough to find a good deer lease, it's normally overly expensive to hunt the place for a year. So take advantage of these state offerings, it will save you a lot of money and time.

BESIDES DEER hunting in Texas, dove and quail hunting is being offered on various Texas Parks and Wildlife management areas this upcoming hunting season.

Mourning dove hunts will be held on Chaparral WMA, James Daughtrey, Longoria Unit of Las Palomas near Santa Rosa in Cameron County, and Penitas Unit of Las Palomas, west of Mission in Hidalgo County, on a first-come, first-serve basis . Hunters must check in at headquarters of each area on the day of the hunt for the five dollar permit.

Free dove hunts will be held at the Black Gap WMA, 55 miles south of Marathon in Brewster County; Gene Howe; Matador and at the Pat Mayse, Granger, Toledo Bend, Dam B and Somerville unites of the Eastern Wildlife Management Area. Hunters will be required to register before hunting but no fee will be charged.

QUAIL HUNTS will be held on the Black Gap, Chaparral, Daughtrey, Howe and Matador Wildlife Management areas where the hunter is required to check in at the headquarters on the day of the hunt. The fee will be five dollars per day, per hunter.

Free quail hunts will be held on Toledo Bend, Dam B and Granger units of the Eastern Wildlife Management area. Again there will be no fee but the hunters are required to register before hunting.

Only persons 12 years of age and older will be able to hunt these areas. All persons between 12 and 17 years old must be accompanied by a parent or person over 21 years old.

Information sheets on the dove and quail hunts may be obtained by writing to the department at the same address we listed for deer hunting information.

A RECENT study by an independent research foundation appears to confirm what Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologist have observed for some time. The supplemental stocking of largemouth bass into lakes which already have standing populations of bass usually ia a waste of time and money.

The report, by the Bass Research Foundation, is entitled "Stocking Bass to Improve Your Fishing—Is it the Key to Better Fishing?"

Ernest Simmons, head of the department's Inland Fisheries Branch, said the report's findings indicate that while stocking bass into new reservoirs can be a tremendous boon to fishing, older lakes which have already reached their peak in fish production, are less affected by new introductions.

"IT'S LIKE overstocking a pasture with too many cows," he said, "except that the cows starve slowly while stocked fish perish quickly when the habitat won't support the extra numbers."

There are some exceptions, however, in Simmons' view. The department has had excellent success stocking with the Florida strain of largemouth in new reservoirs, and in some cases placing the Floridians into lakes with existing populations has proven beneficial because of their faster growth.

While stocking bass in older reservoirs has limitations, non-native species often can give fishing a boost, Simmon said.

"Examples of this are small mouth bass, striped bass and walleyes which occupy habitates different from that of the largemouth," he said. "Many lakes which have declined as producers of largemouth bass have proven to be excellent for these other species.

Byers outkicks Scott to win slow Fifth Avenue Mile

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Byers, noted more for his work as a "rabbit" than for his fast times on the track, outkicked American record holder Steve Scott and won the second Fifth Avenue Mile in the relatively slow time of 3 minutes, 51.35 seconds Saturday.

Byers, his long blond flowing hair blowing in the breeze, hung with the leaders for most of the race before making his big move down the stretch and outstprinting the more heralded Scott to the finish line.

Instead of sprinting early as they had done a year ago, the runners tried a more tactical approach this time and went slowly through the first quarter and half mile marks.

Byers, who still had not received the recognition he deserved after beating Britain's talented Steve Ovett at Oslo, Norway last year, was injured early this season and did not race until about 3½ weeks ago.

"I stayed behind some key individuals," said Byers. "The strategy was to hang back and kick and see what happens.

"It was an all-out effort."

Scott finished second in 3:51.54 and New Zealander John Walker, the former world record holder, was third in 3:51.97.

Prior to the men's race, Debbie Scott of Canada pulled away in the second half of the race and scored a surprisingly easy victory in the women's event in 4:23.96. Wendy Smith of Britain finished second in 4:25.62 and Kim Gallagher was third in 4:30.69.

Debbie Scott of Canada pulled away in the second half of the race and scored a surprisingly easy victory in the women's Fifth Avenue Mile Saturday in 4 minutes, 23.96 seconds.

Wendy Smith of Britain finished second in 4:25.62 and Kim Gallagher was third 4:30.29.

Scott's best mile time on a track is 4:29.67. The Fifth Avenue Mile was run on a straight course from 82nd Street to 62nd Street.

"I didn't know how big a lead I had," said Scott, whose biggest advantage over the field was about 15 yards. "I saw the finish line and I kept going.

Late TD lifts Gators past Miami-Florida

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida quarterback Wayne Peace tossed a 17-yard touchdown pass to senior fullback James Jones, who made a one-handed catch as he fell backwards into the end zone with 1:48 remaining Saturday, to give the 16th-ranked Gators a season-opening 17-14 college football victory over No. 15 Miami of Florida.

The victory, before a record Florida Field crowd of 71,864, halted a four-game losing streak in the bitter intrastate rivalry and enabled the Gators to maintain a 23-21 edge in the series.

Jones' tumbling catch came less than four minutes after Miami's Jeff Davis missed a 31-yard field goal attempt that would have put the Hurricanes up 17-14.

Miami trailed 10-7 at halftime, but took a 14-10 lead late in the third quarter when senior quarterback Jim Kelly, who hit his first nine passes of the second half, engineered a time-consuming, 14-play, 86-yard drive that led to Mark Rush's 1-yard plunge.

Peace moved the Gators to the Miami 21 on Florida's first possession after Davis' field goal missed, but the Miami defense stopped freshman running back John L. Williams on a fourth-and-4 situation to thwart the threat.

Peace got another chance, however, after Miami failed to move the ball and punted four plays later.

The junior quarterback started the Gators' winning drive at his own 39-yard line and used a 27-yard completion to wide receiver Dwayne Dixon to set up the touchdown pass to Jones.

Florida drove 75 yards in 11 plays to take a 7-0 lead with 12:18 left in the first quarter. Peace circled right end for the final 4 yards on a third-and-goal situation.

Miami took the ensuing kickoff and, with the help of three first downs by penalties, marched down the field to tie the score just 3:41 later.

Patterson won't lose Malone

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets General Manager Ray Patterson says he is not about to let star free agent center Moses Malone get away, despite the Philadelphia 76ers' offer of a $13.2 million contract.

"I can tell you there is no way that Moses will play for Philadelphia," Patterson said. "The Rockets are not ready to start rebuilding this franchise from the ground up.

"We have built this team up to a certain level that is right near the top of the league. And it is now easier to stay at the top than to go back to square one and start all over," he said Friday.

Malone led the National Basketball Association last season in rebounding and finished second in scoring, pulling down more than 14 rebounds a game and averaging 31.1 points.

Team spokesman Jim Foley said the Rockets had no trouble deciding to match the offer, which is to be paid over a six-year period.

"It's almost a case of where we have to match it, because if we don't match the offer we get left with nothing," Foley said.

Malone said the $13.2 million contract offer from Philadelphia is a cash deal with no deferred payments.

"It's real, it's not deferred," Malone said in a telephone interview with Houston radio station KIKK. "There's not much else I can say about it. All the money is in cash."

The 76ers announced Thursday they had a signed offer sheet from the 6-foot-10, two-time NBA most valuable player.

Malone, reached at his hotel in Amsterdam, The Netherlands, said he had never wanted to become a free agent and had hoped to settle with the Rockets before being forced into free agency.

"The only thng guaranteed about the whole situation is that somebody over the next six years is going to pay Moses $13 million," Foley said.

He said the Rockets were faced with four options: match the offer and keep Malone; match the offer, then trade him; agree with Philadelphia not to offer the same amount in return for compensation; or ignore the offer and get nothing in return.

"All this has to happen by Sept. 18," Foley said Friday. "We did receive the offer sheet today."

The league requires the Rockets to make their decision within 15 days.

Longshot sets world harness mark

Driven by Doug Ackerman, the colt emerged from a four-horse photo finish to capture the first heat of the $126,410 race in 1:584-5.

He paid $102.20 to win, $60 to place and $41.60 to show.

Cape Canaveral came out of the pack to challenge leader Mr. Drew in the stretch of the second heat, moving to the front when Mr. Drew broke stride. The winning time was 1:581-5.

The old two heat record of 1:59 and 1:58.2 was set by Speed Bowl in 1981 at Du Quoin.

Another longshot, 2-year-old pacer Timely Bow, driven by Doug Fletcher, challenged for the $102,150 Governor's Cup but lost the final heat to Vel's J.R. in 1:584-5.

Timely Bow paid $116.20 to backers in the second division, winning in 1:58 2-5. Vel's Jr. with David Magee in the sulky won the first division in 2:02.

Fame, with William O'Donell driving, won the Almahurst Farm 2-year-old pace in 1:564-5 and 1:561-5. The purse was $108,655.

Don't let water softener 'sale' take you to cleaners

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

Many Permian Basin residents complain about the water's taste (although it is safe for drinking), and the scummy deposit left on surfaces, hair and clothing when combined with soap. Since over 80 percent of city water is used for sprinkling lawns, flushing toilets, fighting fires, washing cars and industrial use, it is understandable that a city water supply would not be treated for hardness and objectionable taste, therefore it is up to each individual household to improve the water at the point of use.

Hard water, caused by invisible particles of dissolved rock — principally calcium and manganese, is present in over half of the homes in the United States. According to standards set by the U.S. Department of the Interior and the Water Quality Assoc., very hard water is defined as water containing over 180 parts per million (ppm). Midland's water supply contains 285 ppm.

Water is softened by the use of an appliance that removes sediment by filtration and invisible dissolved solids by a process called ion exchange. The ion exchange process substitutes sodium ions for the calcium and manganese ions present in hard water producing water containing less than 20 ppm.

The two most frequently used methods of reducing water hardness are buying or renting water softening equipment or contracting with a company to provide water conditioning service. Soft water service is usually recommended for households with moderate water usage since the company merely hooks up a portable appliance to your water line, and periodically replaces the unit with a freshly-recharged one. No electrical connection or drain is necessary.

For those households where consumption is large it may be more economical to buy or rent a permanently installed water softening appliance. The most automatic units use an electronic sensor to initiate recharging of the water softener, just before the water becomes hard. Water softeners which are controlled by a time clock must be recharged on a pre-set schedule.

In the past claims have been made by a few water conditioning companies that could not be substantiated, therefore use the following guidelines when shopping for water conditioning equipment:

—You should be aware that no single type of water conditioning appliance will cure all water problems. A false claim is made by a salesman who promises the unit will remove the invisible dissolved solids and produce water equivalent to bottled water. Although there is a purifier available that uses reverse osmosis to remove the solids found in water, it affects only the water channeled through one faucet, usually water used in the kitchen.

—If you are not sure you want to invest in equipment, look for a company that will rent a water conditioning appliance. Check to see whether part of the rental cost will be applied toward the purchase should you later decide to buy the appliance.

—Since prices can vary dramatically from one company to another, shop around. If the company charges a flat fee that includes the appliance and installation you may be paying too much, particularly if your house is already plumbed for water conditioning equipment. The most reliable companies will send a qualified representative to review your situation, determine the costs and provide a written estimate.

—Don't be pressured into buying an appliance by a fast-talking salesman. If he states he is giving you a special price today and tomorrow the price will increase, look elsewhere. Do your homework by gathering manufacturer's pamphlets, reading ads and consumer product testing magazines, and talking to friends and neighbors who use water conditioning equipment.

—Find out about service after the sale by asking about warranties, the availability of parts, and references. Also, since salt must be added to the unit on a regular basis, determine if the company provides that service and what it will cost.

—When choosing a water conditioner, look for equipment that bears the Gold Seal of the Water Quality Assn.

Water conditioning equipment can be considered an investment. Smaller quantities of soaps and detergents are needed, usually water systems last longer, and water is more palatable. For more information write for "Tips on Water Conditioners" from the BBB/Permian Basin, P.O. Box 6006, Midland, TX. 79701.

Minimal increase in beef price not good news to nation's tuna industry

Copley News Service

Housewives, take heart! Beef prices will barely rise over the next six months or longer.

Tuna workers, take cover! Beef prices will barely rise over the next six months or longer.

Yes, beef prices, which went up less than 1 percent last year, will rise less than 2 percent this year, say some economists. It's good news for shoppers — but bad news for the tuna industry, because tuna consumption tends to rise when tuna is priced favorably with beef — and vice versa.

"Tuna prices will have to stay low because of competition from other kinds of protein," said analyst William F. Maguire of Wall Street's Merrill Lynch in the first of several interviews.

The industry has negotiated a lower tonnage price on yellowfin tuna with the boat owners — from $1,200 to $1,020, noted Maguire. At the same time, however, owners were given price incentives to hold down the amount of salt in the fish.

The tuna canners "are cutting case prices, but the retailers are not passing all those cuts on to the consumer," noted Ronald L. Strauss of Chicago's William Blair & Co. Volume is flat now "and there will be more of the same until the excess supplies are worked off," he said, noting that the huge catch is the major problem.

"I'm looking for flat, or perhaps moderately higher unit volume for tuna the rest of this year," said Barry Ziegler of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields.

Southern California has lost thousands of jobs because of the industry's plight. Van Camp, a San Diego-based unit of St. Louis' Ralston Purina, laid off 350 workers in late May. Recently they were called back and some additional workers were hired, but employment is still down from earlier, fatter times.

Bumble Bee, the brand of Hawaiian conglomerate Castle & Cooke, closed down its San Diego plant in early June, leaving 900 out of work.

Analysts Strauss, Maguire and Ziegler agree that Ralston is losing money on tuna, and would sell Van Camp if the right offer came. "If they could get an offer which would get them out with their pants half on, they would take it," said Strauss. Ralston refuses to say whether it is losing money and whether Van Camp is for sale — and how it intends to compete in the environment of low beef prices.

Analysts also agree that Bumble Bee is in trouble. It's a poor third in market share. Ziegler estimates that H.J. Heinz has 34 to 35 percent of the market, with Ralston 26 and Bumble Bee under 10. Maguire puts Heinz' Star-Kist brand at 35, Ralston at 33 or 34 with Ralston's lead Chicken of the Sea brand around 30, and Castle & Cooke a distant third.

Castle & Cooke admits it is losing money in tuna now, but expects to break into the black early next year. Although it has had offers for its San Diego cannery, it has not decided to sell and is not actively marketing it. It still has three plants open — and says it has more than 12 percent of the market, not less than 10. This year, Bumble Bee's tuna volume is down less than 1 percent, said the company. "We're definitely staying in the business," said an executive.

Even Heinz, which has been mopping up the industry in recent years, is hurting, said Maguire. "My guess is that Heinz' pre-tax profit margin is down to 3 or 4 percent. Normally, they would make double or triple that rate," he said, emphasizing that Star-Kist is not for sale.

Ziegler, however, said Heinz "still is making very good money — 8 percent on sales pre-tax, I would say." Heinz will not return calls.

Competition for the housewives' dollars will be fierce from beef, but pork won't present major problems.

"Last year, beef prices at retail were up only ½ of 1 percent," said Dennis Steadman, agricultural economist for Philadelphia's Chase Econometrics. "Thus far this year, they are up only 2 percent (at an annual rate). For the rest of this year, we expect only a 1 percent increase — so on average for the year, beef prices will only go up 1.5 percent."

Next year, beef should rise 5.5 percent, "which will be pretty close to the rate of inflation," said Steadman.

Astute American consumers have noted the price trends and are buying more beef. Consumption plunged when beef prices were sky-high in 1978 and 1979, but then leveled off with prices. This year, beef consumption should rise slightly, said Steadman.

However, "beef production is still 14 percent below the record production of 1976," noted Ewen Wilson, economist for the American Meat Institute in Washington, D.C.

One factor that should help tuna is that hamburger consumption per capita has been dropping: It was 23.7 pounds in 1976 and plunged to 17.2 in 1979, but last year climbed back to 18.6. (Tuna consumption per capita runs less than one-third of that.) Hamburger averaged 88 cents per pound in 1976, soared to $1.58 in 1980, but last year was down to $1.55, noted Wilson.

Frescoes turn church to gallery

GLENDALE SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — When Statesville artist Ben Long IV began painting frescoes in a small Ashe County church eight years ago, he couldn't have foreseen the impact his art would have on the community.

Nowadays, it isn't unusual for 600 visitors a day to pass through the doors of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in the hamlet of Glendale Springs to see Long's fresco of "The Last Supper."

Art has become so closely associated with the church that it has become an art center of sorts, according to the Rev. J. Faulton Hodge, pastor of Holy Trinity.

"I don't know how many thousands of visitors we've had since the fresco was completed last year, but it's not unusual to have six or seven busloads of people here at one time," Hodge said. "We get anywhere from 200 to 600 visitors a day."

This year, Hodge began a continuing art show at his parsonage — called the "Mission House" — and Chapel Hill artist Bill Hipp plans to start work soon on a bronze sculpture which will sit in the churchyard. Hipp will also teach classes in sculpture as he works.

Long, who now lives in Florence, Italy, completed "The Last Supper" in September 1981, putting a coat of egg and wine over the fresco to seal in the glowing colors. In 1976, he painted three frescoes in St. Mary's Episcopal Church in nearby West Jefferson. Both chuches are open to visitors 24 hours a day.

The four frescoes are believed to be the only authentic frescoes in the South.

Fresco is an art form perfected by Michelangelo more than 400 years ago during the golden age of Italian art. It is a painstaking process in which earth pigments are applied to wet plaster so the color becomes one with the wall. It is the most durable form of painting, dating back 2,000 years to the Egyptians who used it for teaching in the classrooms.

Hodge said the attention the frescoes attracted persuaded him to add the other art programs at the church.

"It seemed natural, when there was so much interest in art here, to expand," said Hodge, who is also pastor of St. Mary's. "Art is still a sideline with us. Service to the community through the church is still top priority. But we feel that art does serve a definite purpose in the community."

Theater to be closed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The venerable National Theater will be closed until September 1983 to allow the most extensive renovation of the building since it was constructed 60 years ago on Pennsylvania Avenue.

The National has been dark since May 2, when "The Pirates of Penzance" ended an engagement, amid a worsening dispute between theater officers and the Shubert Organization, which manages the 147-year-old theater.

Part of the dispute centered on confusion over renovation plans. The original proposal was to keep the theater operating and to limit renovation to the summer months over the next three years.

National president Harry Teter said the board of directors voted unanimously recently to close the theater until September 1983, to make all structural changes and redecoration at once.

Teter predicted that the result will be "a spectacularly refurbished National Theater which will be second to none in this country."

Theater officials said there was no firm figure for the total cost. Quadrangle-Marriott, the developer which rents the building to the theater corporation, will absorb all construction costs and the theater corporation will pay an estimated $1.5 million for redecorating the auditorium.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Caesarean delivery risky, necessary

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine recently had a Caesarean delivery. I know this is not unusual but she has a heart condition and I had heard that a Caesarean delivery is never used for a woman with a heart condition. Has the thinking about this changed? — Ms. J.C., Tulsa, Okla.

Dear Ms. C.: According to Dr. Ronald Taurelle, of the French College of Gynecologists and Obstetricians, vaginal delivery is preferable to Caesarean section in women with heart disease. The reason, of course, is that the Caesarean delivery may be dangerous for cardiac patients. For example, even the use of anesthesia may involve some risk.

However, there are certain circumstances — such as a breech presentation — when a Caesarean delivery is necessary. Apparently, your friend was the exception to the rule about vaginal delivery for cardiac patients.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am writing this letter in response to your recent statement regarding the macrobiotic diet. Over 20 years ago some early works of the noted Japanese teacher and philosopher, George Ohsawa were poorly translated from Japanese to French to English. From these books some people got the impression the goal of the macrobiotic diet was to eat exclusively brown rice and tea. This was and is a mistake. The goal (if we want to phrase it that way) is to be healthy and in order to achieve this, we recommend: a nutritious diet from the foods listed (properly selected, prepared and chewed), physical and mental activity and a respect and gratitude for all life.

Any one individual claiming they are following macrobiotics while indulging in extremes is only stating their personal practice. I might add that on specific occasions the use of just brown rice or whole grains, soup and tea can be used as a fast for short periods of time (3-5 days). This therapeutic use of whole grain has been a traditional recommendation for thousands of years in the Orient. However, no one that I am aware of recommends this as a daily way of eating or as the ultimate diet. In fact, if one wishes to do that it usually is the result of their personal prerogative and not as a policy or teaching of our educational centers.

I have been eating macrobiotically for 15 years and in that time through my travels and teaching have been thousands of people in the United States, Europe, and South America regain their health or improve their condition using macrobiotics. — Murray Snyder, Baltimore, Md.

Dear Mr. Snyder: Thank you for clarifying your view of the diet's intent. I myself believe one should eat a balanced diet from all five food groups, and that fasting should be done only under the supervision of a doctor.

For T.J. (Los Angeles): Using my comprehensive anti-smoking approach, I have done the only long-term follow-up series in the United States. For over three years, over 50 percent of the thousands of patients that I have personally treated have not gone back to cigarettes. If people are motivated, the program should work.

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 150 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 15.50%.

Tired of Searching?

Just like many Midlanders you want to provide your family with the best home you can. You want your new home in a modern, well planned Midland neighborhood that is both attractive and convenient. And of course you want to be able to afford the kind of home that suits your needs and tastes. Those are sensible goals but not an easy task. Yet BROOKEHAVEN has some answers. And among them a few pleasant surprises.

Through a uniquely exclusive program of new home selections, BROOKEHAVEN will eliminate the worry and confusion often associated with searching for a new home. Instead of "house hunting" BROOKEHAVEN will enable you to shop for your new home amid a variety of distinctive styles, floor plans, and color schemes.

You will actually have five completely furnished model homes in which to browse – as much as you like. Each home will be furnished and accented according to its own architectural style and motif.

They are beautiful, and they will each be on display, with one thought in mind: that you not only be able to afford and finance the home of your dreams but also that your family can shop for that home with the ease and pleasure home buying could be.

(Watch for our Grand Opening!)

SEPTEMBERFEST

September. School is in session after a long, lazy summer. Football teams can be seen both on the practice fields and the playing fields. Leaves are beginning to fall and the air is finally cooling off just a little.

September. And in Midland, a community tradition for the past 14 years is Septemberfest, a community art show/sale and family fair to benefit the Museum of the Southwest. Septemberfest is sponsored by Las Manos, the Museum support group.

This year Septemberfest will be Sept. 11 and 12 on the grounds of the Museum of the Southwest. A preview party will be held Sept. 10.

"Septemberfest started quite a few years ago for two purposes," said Jeannine Donnelly, publicity chairman of Septemberfest. The main purpose is to raise money for the Museum. The second purpose is to bring artists that might not otherwise be seen in the Midland area to the Midland public. It brings outside talent to Midland." She said the artists who participate in Septemberfest must live no closer than 100 miles of Midland.

To kick off the celebration of Septemberfest this year, a preview party will be held Friday night, Sept. 10 from 7 p.m. — 10 p.m. "Mexican Fiesta" will be the theme, and a strolling Mariachi band and a Mexican buffet will be featured. All Septemberfest artists will have their work on display and for sale. Admission for the preview party will be $20 per person, $15 per person for Museum of the Southwwest members. Invitations are available through Lynn Lynch, 694-9890.

"There will be 71 artist's booths this year, ranging from painters to sculptors to jewelers, a shipwright who makes model ships that are exact replicas of historical ships, some batik people, a doll maker, copper and metalsmiths, potters, leather-workers, and quite a few others," said Mrs. Donnelly.

Artists from all over the country set up their booths at Midland's Septemberfest. "The artists apply each year," Mrs. Donnelly said. "This year we had about 350 applications. Then we narrow it down by the jury process." The jury that selects the artists to appear at Septemberfest usually consists of the Septemberfest chairman and assistant chairman, the artist chairman and assistant chairman, one or two members of Las Manos, and one or two local artists, she added.

But there's more to Septemberfest than artist's booths. There's food and beverage booths, entertainment, Kinderfest and the Second Annual Septemberfest Lite Run For Fun.

This year the food booths will feature cotton candy, snow cones, egg rolls, desserts, lemonade and iced tea, beer and soft drinks, bean soup, brisket sandwiches, ice cream, nachos, German sausage, hot dogs and dill pickles. "A limited number of outside organizations can have food booths," said Mrs. Donnelly, "and they split the profits with the Museum of the Southwest. With the food booths they can make money for the Museum and for their organizations as well. But only non-profit organizations are allowed to do it."

Free entertainment will be offered hourly during both days of Septemberfest. "We have a different something each hour," Mrs. Donnelly said. "Everything from bands to a magician. Most of the entertainment is local."

Kinderfest is to be held in conjunction with Septemberfest, and will be located on the grounds of the Lancaster House behind the Museum. Kinderfest consists of booths and entertainment designed for the young and the young-at-heart. Included will be a petting zoo, makeup booth, panning for "gold," and other attractions sure to please any child. "Kinderfest grew from being a group of people who took care of the children of the people who worked at Septemberfest into what it is today," said Mrs. Donnelly.

This year Septemberfest will also feature a dunking booth, probably located between the grounds of the Museum and the grounds of Lancaster House, and which will be manned by well-known local personalities, she added.

The Second Annual Septemberfest Run For Fun is sponsored by Miller Lite, J. E. Borron Clothing and Midland Jaycees. The event is a race through the streets of downtown Midland, and will begin at 8 a.m., Saturday, Sept. 11. Race day registration will be held from 6:30 a.m. — 7:30 a.m. The event will feature 10-kilometer and two-mile races, special Jayce Division for 10-kilometer only, special Fatman 10-kilometer Division for runners over 205 pounds, and free T-shirts for all finishers. First, second and third place trophies will be awarded in all divisions, and free admission to Septemberfest will be given to all runners wearing a race T-shirt and number. Special guest for the race will be Marvelous Marv Throneberry, former first baseman for the New York Mets. The race will benefit the Museum of the Southwest and the Midland Jaycees.

For a family fair as well-attended as Septemberfest, massive amounts of planning are required. "We start about two months after Septemberfest is over, planning next year's," Mrs. Donnelly said. "We had last year approximately 10,000 paid entries, and we estimated roughly 20,000 people attended because kids under 12 don't pay. And workers don't pay. Las Manos, which has about 100 members, couldn't run the whole thing by themselves, so they call interested friends to work. It takes roughly 1000 people to run Septemberfest — it takes almost 200 people just to do food because they work in two-hour shifts, and it takes two days. And tickets have to be taken — there has to be somebody at the entrances at all times..."

"We started setting up booths this past weekend, and for the four nights before Septemberfest we'll be setting up every night," she added.

In 14 years of existence, Septemberfest has grown steadily. "I think the first Septemberfest had 20-25 artists," Mrs. Donnelly said. "Some things have been changed. At one point they used to serve dinner. We have substituted continuous food service. They used to have a street dance that was cut for security reasons."

The Friday night preview party will be Sept. 10 from 7 p.m. — 10 p.m. Hours of Septemberfest will be Saturday, Sept. 11 from 11 a.m. — 8 p.m. and Sunday, Sept. 12 from 12 noon — 5 p.m. Free parking has been donated by Commercial Bank and Trust at the bank's parking lot, two blocks west of the Museum. First National Bank will supply shuttle buses from CB & T parking lot to the grounds of September.

September is also Museum Membership month. Applications for membership are being accepted at the Museum of the Southwest. Contact Ann Sherburn at 683-2882 for further information.

Various local entertainment groups will be performing hourly during both days of Septemberfest. The entertainment schedule is as follows:

Taiwan promoting frugal diet

By TINA CHOU
AP Writer

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — To discourage lavish banquets and promote a more frugal and healthful diet, the Taiwan government is promoting a five-course meal which it has dubbed "Plum Flower."

The dinner, which includes familiar Chinese delicacies such as shrimp and sweet and sour pork, receives its name from the five-petal shape of the national flower.

While actual plum blossoms are not used, each course represents one petal, and a soup rounds off the selection as the center of the flower. The courses themselves vary from restaurant to restaurant.

The campaign was started by Nationalist Premier Sun Yun-suan, who said Chinese people here were eating too much and too well. A demonstration of an economical meal was presented recently by top political, party, military and economic leaders to show the way to the people.

The latest culinary fad also seeks an end to the communal digging with a spoon and chopsticks into one dish or pot that is typical of Chinese eating and a habit believed capable of transmitting hepatitis.

According to Taiwan's National Health Administration, the disease afflicted 15 to 20 percent of adults on Taiwan last year, compared with 0.1 percent in the United States. The medical profession attributed it partly to the custom of diners using their own chopsticks to serve themselves portions from the same dish.

At the demonstration dinner, each guest had a side plate or bowl with chopsticks and each dish had a serving spoon. Instead of serving and eating with the same utensils, there were separate ones by function.

It is one for one and no longer one for all.

The campaign strives to cut down the time spent on banquets, reducing to 60 or 90 minutes the minimum two hours set aside now. A Plum Flower meal for 12 people is priced by many restaurants at $50 to $100 depending on the quality of the food, a sharp drop from the cost of at least $200 for feasts of 10 to 15 courses.

Many hotels and restaurants reacted quickly to the call for frugality by offering Plum Flower meals. But a restaurant source said the new cuisine is not being received favorably.

Many people tried the Plum Flower dinner out of curiosity, but when most people find out what it is they go back to the old custom of immoderate eating, said the source, who asked not to be named.

One manager for a hotel which offers the economical meal does not think the fashion will last long. Old customs die hard when it comes to Chinese food, he says.

His hotel is reluctant to present the Plum Flower meal to foreigners, because it "reduces our chances of making money from foreigners and prevents them from learning about Chinese food."

Amendment to tax bill may bring hospice surge

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Pat Baker's husband developed a malignant brain tumor, the couple agreed on two things: he would not undergo difficult life-prolonging treatments, and she would care for him at home as long as possible.

Because of a Los Angeles hospice, Mrs. Baker was able to keep both promises. Her husband died at home.

"I feel like I did something for him," she says, less than two months after his death. "It has been a comfort to me since. There was nothing he liked better than his home."

Although almost 1,000 hospice programs have emerged since the first one opened 11 years ago in Branford, Conn., the movement in home care for the dying has been stunted because few insurance plans cover homemaker, counseling and other of its integral services.

But a major growth spurt is expected because of a provision in the $98.3 billion tax bill passed last month by Congress.

THE AMENDMENT, LOST in the furor over the tax increase, makes hospice care reimbursable for the 29 million elderly and disabled Americans in the Medicare program.

With around 300,000 Medicare cancer deaths reported annually, the new benefit is expected to give hospices their first large stable funding base.

"It will definitely make it a lot easier for hospice programs to stay alive and provide a full range of services. It will also encourage home health agencies and hospitals to develop hospice programs," said Claire Tehan, vice president of the National Hospice Organization.

Pain control, family involvement, home care and emotional support for the terminally ill patient are the cornerstones of hospice care in the United States.

While some hospices have their own buildings or wards, most are agencies that provide visiting nurses, therapists, social workers and volunteers to help relatives care for the patient at home.

SUPPORTERS, INCLUDING many who have cared for dying relatives with hospice assistance, believe hospice programs offer a simpler, more personal alternative to the high-technology hospital environment.

"I feel sorry everybody doesn't know about it," says Sara Hallam, whose 55-year-old husband Bill died three years ago of prostate cancer. "It's uplifting. It's comforting. They help you face it. They help you deal with it. They make it very bearable."

The hospice amendment was a sudden and late addition to the tax bill by Sen. John Heinz, chairman of the Special Committee on Aging.

"This represents a choice that more people ought to have," said Heinz, R-Pa.

"Most people think of hospice as having to do with dying. I think of it as having to do with living on one's own terms — albeit the last three, six or 12 months of your life. They can be the most important," he said.

TO GET THE amendment into the tax bill, Heinz had to overcome the resistance of Sen. Russell Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Commititee. He did it by lining up 67 Senate co-sponsors.

"It's a new idea and new ideas require a considerable amount of time for acceptance," Heinz said.

One argument proved particularly persuasive: cost effectiveness.

The Medicare system spends $4 billion or 11 percent of its annual budget on the last 40 days of life. The Congressional Budget Office projected that hospice coverage would save $58 million over three years after an initial $1 million start-up outlay.

"If you can keep people at home, there's definitely a savings," said Mrs. Tehan, who directs a hospice program at the Hospital Home Health Care Agency in Los Angeles.

MRS. BAKER'S CASE is a dramatic illustration. She said insurance paid 80 percent of a $19,000 bill for a one-month hospital stay early in her husband's illness. The total insurance bill for more than five months of home hospice care: $1,500.

Some insurance plans have covered certain elements of hospice care, such as registered nurses. But the new federal law — scheduled to take effect in November 1983 after completion of an ongoing demonstration program — entitles Medicare patients to a full range of services.

Among them are nursing care; occupational, physical and speech therapy; social worker visits; homemaker and home health aide services; short-term in-patient care; out-patient drugs for pain relief; respite care — a break for the family of up to five days; and bereavement, dietary and nutritional counseling.

The last two items require a 5 percent contribution from patients. The legislation stipulates an overall cap of $7,840.

Professionals involved with hospice care say they welcome the impending expansion, but are cautious about the involvement of the federal government. They also warn the hardest work lies ahead.

"The important decisions will be made when the regulations are written," said Dr. Ed Olsen, president of the National Hospice Organization. "Over-regulation may take out some of the humanitarianism that we hope to keep in. We are more concerned with care than square footage."

Controlled stress not necessarily bad

By CHARLES SILVERMAN
YMCA Positive Lifestyle Director

Stress is often misunderstood and people assume that stress is bad for you. This is not always the case: Stress in proper amounts is a necessary ingredient in a life which includes vitality.

Stress is to be managed, not simply avoided. We are often victimized by stress, an insidious form of illness which comes as a result of our prosperity and of the pace at which we live. Stress-related diseases are real. Excessive stress has been linked to illness from low-back pain to cancer, even common colds.

We must distinguish between what causes stress and what it is. Pressures and demands from your environment — i.e. family, job, friends or the govermnet — are called "external stressors." Various internal demands are called "internal stressors." They include pressures you put upon yourself by being ambitious, materialistic, competitive and agressive. In most of us, the internal stressors have a far more intense effect than do the external stressors.

The body response to these stressors is what we call stress.

Stress may be good for you. The body's stress response (stereotyped biochemical responses to demands, whether pleasant or unpleasant) is not only normal, but essential! A fatigued body encountering danger will momentarily override its own exhaustion in order to deal with the danger. This type of short-term stress is functional.

The "killer" form of stress is not the short-term but long-term stress. Long-term stress is when there exists higher levels of prolonged and uninterrupted stress in which your system never fully returns to baseline levels of activity.

In proper amounts, stress is not necessarily bad for you. It is like running a temperature. We all run a temperature as long as we are alive; it is only temperature above or below "normal" that concerns us.

So it is with stress. As long as your stress load is within reasonable limits, or within your capacity for coping well, you will thrive on it. It is when you cross your threshold level that stress becomes distressful. Hans Selye uses the word distress for the harmful variety of stress. "Eustress" (from the Greek eu, good, as in euphoria) is the word he uses for the pleasant form of stress.

Try this brief stress test below to see how you handle stress. Answer the following questions YES or NO.

1. Do you feel tired and unenergetic most of the time?
2. Do you work constantly throughout the day without taking breaks to recharge and relax?
3. Do you find difficulty in delegating responsibility and authority?
4. Do you hesitate and put off facing problems and making decisions?
5. Do you take your briefcase home with you?
6. Do you often reach for a cigarette, drink or tranquilizer to reduce tension?
7. Do you have too many things to do and not enough time to do them?
8. Do you eat in excess of your body's daily requirements?
9. Do you find difficulty in going to sleep each night and getting up to face the day each morning?
10. Do you suffer with any of the following ailments: ulcers, constipation, coronary difficulties, digestive troubles?

To score: for each YES, one point; for each NO, no points. Average is 0-4; 5 or more is above average stress; 7-10 indicates significantly high stress levels.

Selling million-dollar homes not easy

By SUSAN WARFEL
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — If selling a typical $100,000 home in Southern California seems a near impossible task, consider the chore facing someone trying to peddle a million-dollar-plus estate.

According to Beverly Hills real estate agent Marion Forrest, significantly different sales methods must be employed to move homes with price tags topping $1 million.

"The person who buys a $100,000 home really needs a place to live in," Forrest said. "But the person looking for a big estate is not under pressure to buy a home. He can afford to be choosy."

Forrest, who has specialized in sales of million-dollar estates for the last three years, sat on the steps of a $4.7 million, 11,750-square-foot mansion on Rodeo Drive as she explained the difference between selling $100,000 and $1 million homes.

"Someone who can afford this estate," she said, gesturing behind her, "has many to choose from." Seventeen Beverly Hills estates in the $4 million to $13 million range are on the market now and there are many more in the $1 million to $4 million category, she said.

"You have to really know your market," she continued. "You have to be able to go back and show them what actually sold recently and at what price."

Real estate sales agents who deal with millionaires also must be more flexible and more persistent in scheduling appointments to show properties. "It's much easier to show homes to someone spending $100,000," Forrest asserted. "They have regular jobs. You know how to reach them. But I might have to call a millionaire five times and never reach him. These people are extremely mobile."

But perhaps the biggest element in selling a million-dollar home that's absent in most real estate sales is showmanship. Forrest recalled a luncheon she hosted a year ago to draw brokers to a $3.7 million colonial-style mansion she was trying to sell in Malibu.

Forrest dressed as Scarlett O'Hara for the event, while the co-listing agent came as Rhett Butler. The luncheon-open house wound up costing $5,000 and attracted about 50 brokers and a local television program.

More recently, Forrest developed a sales gimmick akin to the pet rock to help promote the Beverly Hills mansion she's selling. Dubbed "The Beverly Hills Estate," the $2.95 product is a small cardboard box containing a small amount of "genuine" Beverly Hills dirt.

Six-year cancer study began Wednesday

CHICAGO (AP) — The relationship of diet, living conditions and workplace environment to cancer will be the subject of a six-year study by the American Cancer Society, officials say.

The study, which was begun Wednesday, is based on questionnaires that will be distributed to about a million people around the nation, said Stanley Green, chairman of the society's Illinois division.

Green called it "the largest human cancer study in history," saying it would focus on consumer products linked to cancer in the past decade, including artificial sweeteners, hair dyes, coffee, birth control pills and low-tar cigarettes.

Concoct coffee custard

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

COFFEE CUSTARD

An epicurean dessert.
3 large eggs
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1¾ cups milk, scalded
¼ cup coffee liqueur (53 proof)

In a medium bowl beat eggs slightly; add sugar and salt and beat just enough to blend. Gradually but vigorously, stir in milk, then coffee liqueur. Pour into 4 six-ounce custard cups. Place cups in an 8 by 8 by 2-inch cake pan. Pour enough cold water into the pan to come up about as high as custard mixture. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a knife inserted halfway between edge and center comes out clean — about 45 minutes. Cool cups in a pan of cold water. Chill. At serving time, with a small spatula loosen edges; invert on serving dishes. Pass extra coffee liqueur as a sauce. Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Getting close for comfort may be too close

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think this is a dumb question, because I need to know, and I can't ask anyone else. I am a 13-year-old girl who became a woman five months ago. My boyfriend is 15 and we are very much in love. I know you will say we are too young to know what real love is, but you are wrong, Abby. We are both very mature for our ages. Now my question: Is there a chance of becoming pregnant if a boy and girl are very, very close but keep their underwear on?

A girlfriend said you explained this in a book and even said a girl could become pregnant without losing her virginity. That is hard for me to believe. Please answer soon. I am ... WORRIED SICK

DEAR WORRIED: Your question is far from "dumb." In my booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," in the chapter titled, "How to Get Pregnant," I wrote:

"One of the questions I have been asked often by teens is: 'How far can I go without getting pregnant?'

"That is not a dumb question. It's a very intelligent one. A lot of kids get aroused by just lying close to each other while kissing. Then they just naturally proceed to the next step, which is petting.

"Sometimes they remove some of their clothing because it's 'in the way,' or they burrow underneath it to explore each other's bodies with their hands. This is known as heavy petting, or 'doing everything else BUT.'

"The technical (and legal) definition of sexual intercouse is 'penetration.' (The male's sex organ must penetrate the female's.) However, as impossible as it may sound, in the medical literature can be found cases where there has been NO penetration — the girl remained a virgin, but after engaging in heavy petting, she found herself pregnant.

"How can that be? Simple.

"The boy and girl were lying very close to each other (unclothed), doing 'everything but,' when a small amount of sperm leaked out ... near (not inside, but very close to) the girl's vagina. The sperm got into the moisture around the vagina and found its way up into it, and fertilized the egg!"

A copy of this booklet, which also contains a chapter titled "How NOT to Get Pregnant," can be obtained by sending $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

DEAR ABBY: I have a question for you: Is God a creation of mankind? — T. BALL, LINCOLN, NEBR.

DEAR MR. BALL: According to atheists, who do not believe in the existence of "God," God is a creation of mankind. But according to theologists, mankind (and all living things) is the creation of God.

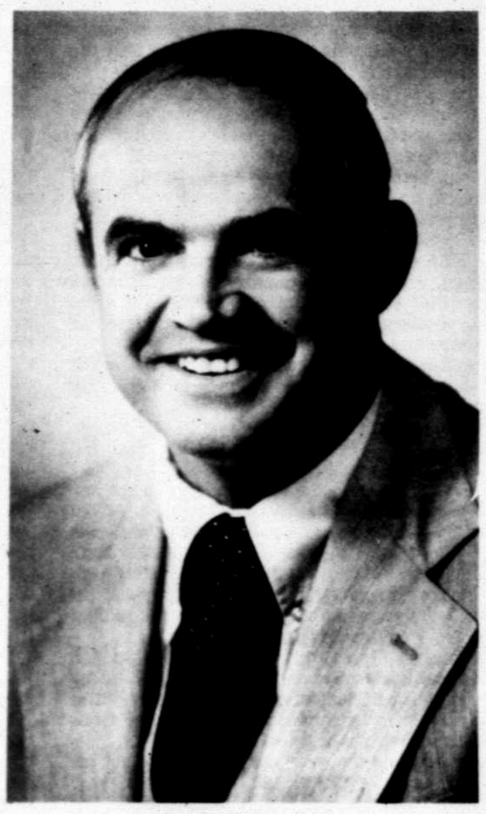
Marcum named PPPB fund-raising chairman

Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin has announced that Gordon Marcum II will serve as Midland fund-raising chairman during this year's campaign.

Marcum, vice-president of Perry Energy Co. Inc. Oil & Gas Division, is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma. He has worked for various petroleum companies over the years and is a member of Oklahoma and Texas Bar Associations, American Association of Petroleum Landmen, International Association of Drilling Contractors, Midland Chapter of the American Cancer Society and Midland City Council. Marcum and his wife, Margaret, have three children.



Gordon Marcum II

September marks the beginning of Planned Parenthood's annual fund-raising drive for 1982, with a goal of $100,000 for the year. Donations enable Plannned Parenthood to provide health care sevices in a 17-county region of the Permian Basin and assist more than 12,000 patients a year.

Although partially funded by federal government funds and patient fees, the agency depends heavily on private contributions. Self-sufficiency for the community service is a major goal becoming nearer every year, a spokesperson stated.

Family planning assistance is needed now more than ever in the Permian Basin, the agency stressed. At least 11,000 women in the region are still not receiving basic family planning care.

Because services are provided according to the patient's ability to pay, a low-income patient may receive medical care and/or a birth control method at low cost, according to a sliding fee scale. Those who can afford to pay regular charges also are encouraged to come for complete family planning care.

Services offered are physical examinations, Pap smears and other cancer screening, birth control devices and methods, pregnancy testing, venereal disease screening, information about all facets of family planning and counseling. Referrals to other medical services are provided as needed. Educational programs and materials are also provided to clubs, schools and churches in the community.

Although most patients are married and between the ages of 20 and 44, younger patients are also assisted by Planned Parenthood and are promised confidential services. A class called "Girl Talk" is offered, specifically designed for mothers and their 8- to 13-year-old daughters.

Nine clinic locations are provided by Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin. They are located in Odessa, Midland, Big Spring, Andrews, Monahans, Fort Stockton, Lemesa, Pecos and Seminole.

Salt Lake City is paradise

By MICHAEL CARLTON
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah — Arriving at the sparkling-clear airport in this bastion of the Mormons, I was reminded of a joke I had heard the previous year from a young American priest who was studying at the Vatican:

The pope was sleeping in the early morning hours when a young monsignor awakened the pontiff.

"Excuse me, Your Holiness," said the nervous monsignor, "but I have to tell you some good news and some bad news."

"That's all right, my son," said the pope. "I would like to have the good news first."

"Your Holiness, Jesus Christ is calling you on the telephone."

"Glory, glory," said the pope. "How could there possibly be any bad news?"

"Well, Your Holiness," said the monsignor, "He is calling collect from Salt Lake City."

SALT LAKE CITY, like the Vatican, is the center of one of the most powerful religious organizations in the world. To have influence here is to be a Mormon, and even a casual visitor to this city is aware of the position of the church to the city.

Temple Square is the heart of the city and the heart of the Mormon church. a great temple rises high above the city, as splendid as any medieval cathedral in Europe. It was here, on July 24, 1847, that a struggling band of 143 men, three women, two boys, 17 dogs, 93 horses, 52 mules, 70 wagons, one boat, one cannon, and 19 cows arrived to establish what has become one of the world's great religions.

Brigham Young, who led his people on the 111-day trek through the harshness and heart of the West, reputedly said, when he saw the parched valley surrounded by a bowl of mountains, "This is the place." Crops were planted immediately, a fort was built, and the tiny community began its struggle against nature, the Indians, and the United States government.

That struggle went on for decades — great hordes of crickets came out of the hills to devour crops, rattlesnakes roamed the parched earth freely, deep snows caused misery to the tattered settlers, and the government forced the Mormons to give up their practice of polygamy. But the Mormons persevered, and today have fashioned one of this country's most beautiful cities.

MUCH OF THE credit for the city's beauty must go to Brigham Young, who carefully planned a city that has streets 132 feet wide and sidewalks 20 feet wide. The great boulevards here are as grand and as open as those of Europe. The entire city radiates from Temple Square.

Nature, as well as Brigham Young, must be given some of the credit for the city's beauty, for it rimmed the city with the Wasatch Mountains.

The mountains around Salt Lake City seem close enough to touch, looming high over the skyline like great, jagged teeth. Within 45 minutes of landing at the Salt Lake City airport, you can be deep into the mountains, skiing at any of the 11 resorts surrounding the city.

In the basin created by the mountains is the other great natural attraction of Salt Lake City, Great Salt Lake. More than 72 miles long and 35 wide, its salt-saturated waters have been luring tourists ever since Jim Bridger discovered them in 1824. Nearly 2 million people come here each year to float in the salty water lkthe salty beaches, and inhale the salty air. A new pavilion and recreation area called Saltair has just opened on the lake. When completed in September it will provide water slides, a "Star Trek" ride, bumper boats, a dance floor and restaurants for the amusemement of tourists.

But the mountains and the waters of the lake are not the reason most of Salt Lake City's 3 million visitors a year come here. They come because this is the center of the Mormon empire, an empire that many say is rivaled only by the Vatican's.

Although non-Mormons are not permitted to enter the temple, they can enter the tabernacle, and are encouraged to do so. When the Mormon Tabernacle Choir is performing on a Sunday morning or a Thursday evening, when the great, 11,000-pipe organ is being played, and when the lights behind the huge organ change from red to orange to light blue as the music soars and grows, even a non-believer is moved.

THE CHURCH GIVES tours of Temple Square every day. Volunteer guides, people who are comfortable in their religion and make you comfortable, too, lead the tours, which all start at the seagull monument. The monument, central to Mormon beliefs, represents a day, in 1848, when a huge flock of gulls descended on Salt Lake City to devour the crickets that were ruining the crops of the young settlement. Had the gulls not appeared, the crops would have failed and the Mormons would have had to leave their refuge. They took the arrival as a sign of God and the gull has been revered since. Today, it is the state bird.

Next you visit the tabernacle, where a demonstration is given of its acoustical brilliance, and a tape made by the Mormon Tabernacle Choir is played.,

Finally, the tour arrives at the visitor's center. Here, you curl up a spiral staircase carpted in blue, rising above the main floor and into the clouds — or at least into a room painted with clouds and stars and planets. A huge statue of Christ looms over you as the guide explains the Mormon beliefs. the rest of the tour deals with the rise of the Mormons and why they feel they have the one, true church.

This segment of the tour can be a bit uncomfortable and commercial, but it does give one some insight into the beliefs of the faithful.

Near Temple Square are some of the historic houses of the Mormons: Beehive House, which Brigham Young used as his official residence, and Lion House, where he housed his 13 wives and his 56 children. Nearby is the Eagle Gate, which was first erected in 1859 as the gateway to the Mormons' irrigated farmlands. Today it sits in the midst of the concrete and glass of a modern city.

ALTHOUGH TEMPLE SQUARE is the center of this city, and of its tourism, there is more to Salt Lake City. Trolley Square, with its restored trolley barns now housing chic restaurants and shops, is a shopper's delight, much like Ghirardelli Square in San Francisco, and the state Capitol is one of the most magnificent state edifices in America.

Along South Temple Drive, many of the 28 millionaires' homes still stand as regal reminders of the past, and at the Union Pacific Depot, you'll see the opulent architectural style of the era when trains were the only comfortable transportation in the West.

Fort Douglas is one of the most handsome U.S. Army forts in the country, with comfortable brick homes clustered around a tree-lined park. Just outside town, Pioneer Park offers tours of a number of pioneer homes which have been moved here from all parts of Utah to show how life was when the territory was being established.

And then, of course, there is the attraction of the liquor laws. Getting a drink in a Mormon community is an adventure. You can join a private club (usually only $5) and have a drink, or you can go into one of the numerous package liquor stores, buy your bottle, take it into a restaurant, and pay the restaurant owner for mixers, or a corkage fee for wine. It can be a bother, but if you are really parched and want a drink in Salt Lake city, you can get one — with effort.

But getting a drink, or visiting a state Capitol building, or even marveling at the wondrous scenery, is not why one comes to Salt Lake City. One comes here for the spiritual, for the history of a brave people who carved out an empire in the midst of a desert. Like a trip to Mecca or Rome, a trip to Salt Lake City is one that should be taken no matter what your religion. At its best it is a thrilling experience; at its worst it is educational. Remember, one never knows who may be on the phone.

Stewart too tough to die

By JERRY HULSE
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

STEWART, British Columbia — Anybody out there searching for a warmed-over frontier town?

Then drop the saddlebags here.

With a history of depressions, avalanches, prospectors and hidden wealth, Stewart (pop. 1,800) is the Virginia City of the North, its main drag lined with old-time storefronts and good-natured citizens.

Before the road to Stewart was laid down, the first load of sourdoughs arrived up the Portland Canal. The fever spread. Others roared into town with dreams of quick wealth.

MORE THAN 80 fierce winters have passed since the first miners set off the mad scramble for Stewart's hidden wealth.

It was a stampede that frequently turned into a nightmare as screaming Arctic winds funneled through mountain passes and avalanches thundered off surrounding mountains.

Still, others followed the paths of the sourdoughs into Western Canada, joining Stewart's boom-to-bust-to-boom drama as prospectors fought weather, grizzlies and other misfortune.

According to the town's historian they were joined by "businessmen, profiteers, priests and trappers."

As a result, Stewart's citizens still dig copper and gold while courting the tourist who flies in to fish for salmon, trout and halibut.

Dave Neuman, who swears he is not given to exaggeration, insists that halibut weighing 200 and 300 pounds are landed regularly along the Portland Canal.

There's a $199 package deal for tourists who fly in from Ketchikan, Alaska. It includes one night in Stewart, the bus ride up to Salmon Glacier and the return flight to Ketchikan.

For most visitors, one night in Stewart is sufficient. Unless, of course, there's somebody who loves to fish. Because after taking a look at Stewart's big deep freeze, which is its primary attraction in the first place, there's really little else to do except commune with nature or else get Hyderized.

How does one get Hyderized? Simply by dropping next door to the Alaskan village of Hyder (two miles down the road from Stewart) and visiting one of Hyder's three saloons.

Considering Hyder's population stands at only 80 souls, one is led to believe that it has the greatest number of saloons per capita in the entire Western world.

To get Hyderized, guests take part in a ritual that calls for swallowing — in one gulp — a two-ounce belt of 95-proof grain alcohol that's been known to bring tears to the eyes of the toughest sourdough.

WITHOUT QUESTION, it leaves the visitor speechless and on occasion totally knocked out. Absolutely unconscious. Barkeeps swear no one tries it twice.

One can choose to become initiated at the Glacier Inn, the Last Chance Saloon (where a coffin makes do as a telephone booth) or at the lively Sealaska where jovial Gary Benedict, an ex-Marine from Long Beach, Calif., holds court.

Benedict, 47, settled in Hyder more than 20 years ago. He launched the Sealaska on Halloween, 1964.

"It's been good to me," he says of the saloon.

Some would debate him on this point simply because a couple of years ago Benedict was shot and very nearly killed while trying to break up a fight between two customers arguing over who caught the biggest fish.

One man was armed with a shotgun, the other with a rifle. During the scuffle, both guns went off and both bursts hit Benedict. Buckshot remains embedded in both his head and the front door of his saloon.

BESIDES POURING BOOZE, Benedict rents rooms over the bar. Everyone agrees that the price is right, $18 for a single and $24 for a double. The trouble is, one must go to bed early (7 o'clock seems a proper hour) and sleep until the bar gets crowded around midnight. After this, unless one is stone deaf, the idea is to get dressed and join the party. Because it's impossible to snooze what with all the racket going on downstairs.

A friend of ours, a bush pilot, told of going to bed one night at the Sealaska, only to be awakened by gunshots that crashed through the floor from downstairs, very nearly doing him in.

"Well," said our friend, "I got dressed and went back to the bar and ordered a beer. I'd lived through two tours in Vietnam and I had no intention of getting killed in bed."

Irish village is gastronome's delight

By BILL BILLITER
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

KINSALE, Ireland — "If you think holidays are a time to enjoy good food, you'll love Kinsale," said a tourist adviser in Dublin. "It's also a pretty place."

Indeed. Kinsale, which seems to have an outstanding restaurant every half block, is a gastronome's delight. And "pretty" hardly does the village justice: Kinsale is serenely beautiful.

History buffs also find a movable feast in this colorful fishing town 17 miles south of Cork. Kinsale's lovely and geographically well-protected harbor has drawn Vikings and Normans, Spaniards and conquering British.

An Irish Gettysburg of sorts, it was near here in 1601 that rebelling Irish chieftains, with Spanish allies, made their last, and unsuccessful, battle against the English. It was here, too, that King James II landed in 1689 as he made his ill-starred effort to win back the crown of England.

Even the footnotes to Kinsale history are fascinating. For instance, a few miles from the protected harbor, off the land spit called the "Old Head of Kinsale," a tragedy of profound consequence to the United States occurred on May 7, 1915. The luxury liner Lusitania was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine with the loss of 1,198 lives, including Americans, a major event leading to America's entry into World War I.

The remains of James' Fort and Charles' Fort, dating to the 17th century, guard the entrance to Kinsale Harbor. They are among the interesting explorations available to hikers.

But most visitors to the village, and tourists are predominantly Irish from the metropolitan areas, do not come to Kinsale for the history as much as for the good eating.

The 1,600-population village has an unusual number of ethnic restaurants for its size. Within the space of three twisting, narrow blocks in the village center one can find a veritable smorgasbord of Europe.

Menus are posted on the front doors of all the establishments, and the prices are decidedly less expensive than in the Irish cities. Entrees and wine for two under $20 is not uncommon.

Kinsale restaurants are relaxed places where atmosphere seems as natural as the mantle of history casually draped about the picturesque village. Plates of Irish soda bread and fresh buttered vegetables are endlessly brought to diners by smiling Irish waiters.

Apart from sports fishing, there are few organized activities in Kinsale: one small cinema, a nearby golf course, pleasure boats for rent. But the Old World calm of the little town is soothing and tranquilizing.

Australians need lessons

By RICHARD YALLOP
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WOLLONGONG, Australia — Australians are the worst native speakers of English in the world, according to an Australian professor of philosophy.

Prof. Lauchlan Chipman, of the University of Wollongong in the Australian state of New South Wales, claims that compared with other English-speaking races Australians cannot express themselves articulately because they have not been taught to develop oral communication skills. He says the problem lies not in the education system, but in Australian attitudes toward correct speech.

Chipman's theory is that it all goes back to the early days after the British founded the colony in 1788 by shipping out boatloads of convicts. He feels that from then on there was a good deal of suspicion toward the carefully turned phrase.

"It is only conjecture on my part," Chipman says, "but the problem could go back to our colonial past and the false equation that careful speech was akin to being uppity or 'lah-di-dah' or feigning some position above your social status."

Chipman says the education system must now take the lead in stressing the importance of oral skills of presentation and communication.

Methodist church offers workshop to those coping with divorce

"Divorce Is Also A Beginning: A Divorce Adjustment Workshop" is being offered Wednesday evenings from Sept. 8 through Nov. 17 by the First United Methodist Church. Both men and women are invited to attend and child care is provided.

The first workshop session will run from 6:15 p.m. to 7:15 p.m. and the remaining ten sessions will run from 6:15 p.m. to 8:15 p.m. There will be a charge of $20 for the workshop and textbook, "Rebuilding: When Your Relationship Ends" by Dr. Bruce Fisher. This will be one of several courses offered in the Wednesday Night Live series which begins with dinner served at 5:15 p.m. each week.

According to John Young, a counselor at Family Services of Midland and workshop co-leader, the latest predictions are that 40 percent of those who marry today will divorce. Half of all children born in the 1970s will live at least a part of their lives in a single parent household. In Midland County in 1981, there were 1,502 marriages and 863 divorces.

The question of divorce requires two answers: How divorce can be prevented, and how it can be survived.

Dr. Buce Fisher has mapped out a fifteen-step "Divorce Process" to help divorced and divorcing persons stay on the path to recovery and self-renewal.

The divorce workshop, which begins this Wednesday, is based on Dr. Fisher's book.The workshop co-leaders will be John Young, counselor from Family Services of Midland, and a volunteer from First Methodist.

President of the Family Therapy Association of the Permian Basin, and a clinical member of the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy, Young received his Masters degree in Psychology from The University of Texas at Austin and his Masters degree in Scoial Work from the University of Michigan. Professional consultant to the newly forming Step-family Association of the Permian Basin, he is a member of the Academy of Certified Social Workers, is a State Certified Social Worker, and is listed in the NASW Register of Clinical Social Workers. Past president and present secretary of the Midland Health and Welfare Association, he is also secretary of the West Texas Unit of the National Associaton of Social Workers, a member of the Permian Basin Counselors' Association, and a member of the Mexican Advisory Council of Midland.

AT WIT'S END

Football widows need protection

By ERMA BOMBECK

The U.S. Supreme Court recently handed down a decision refusing to limit the number of professional football games cable television can broadcast each Sunday.

To me that means only one thing. That Statue of Justice who pretends to be a blindfolded woman is really an umpire in drag.

Who else would sanction Jock Sunday featuring 85 televised sports events from sign-on to sign-off in one day? I don't know who presented the proposition, but someone certainly ramrodded it through behind women's backs.

O.K., so I respect the law and I'll abide by it, but in the name of mercy, I ask the courts to consider a couple of amendments to keep women happy.

If a man sleeps during two consecutive innings or quarters, he should be declared legally dead and his estate probated.

Legalized Sunday dating for women married to sports nuts will not only be allowed, but enforced.

Admittance to his chair in front of the TV set will occur only after relinquishing his car keys, checkbook and credit cards to his wife.

Live with the possibility that any given Monday, Curt Gowdy could be named in an alienation of affection suit and you would have to offer proof that you had not spent 15 hours on Sunday with him.

Wives of the watchees will not be responsible for catheters or I.V.'s that become dislodged during the day.

If sports are appearing on more than two TV sets in the home, a woman has the right to smash one of them with a tire iron.

There's a lot more at stake here than women vs. televised sports. It is now a moral issue. When men are hooked up to these electronic support systems all day Sunday, do women have the right to let them go on living in their catatonic state, with no hope of functioning as a person? Or is it merciful to pull the plugs and watch them writhe in agony as they view their own children in the real world?

As I said to my neighbor last Sunday, "What kind of life does he have in there watching replays, reruns, and overdosing on statistics? I'm going in and turn off the set and see what happens."

As I leaned over to turn off a speedboat race in the South Pacific a voice threatened to alter the length of my arms.

I'm beaten. He's also covered by the temporary insanity law.

Is feminism 'Ms.'ing the mark?

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Lifestyle Writer

Remember "the good ol' days" when society was governed by a specific set of rules, everyone knew what was expected of him and, to quote one former Nebraska state senator, "Men are men and women are glad of it"?

Well those days have been replaced by an era of confusion, where rules are made up along the way and almost anything goes.

"If you're offended by the changes that have come about so far, hold on to your hat, because there's going to be some even better changes to come," predicted Darrell F. Smith, Midland County Democratic chairman.

Feminism has brought about many transformations that would have been unthinkable a few years ago. Today it is not uncommon to see fathers pushing children in grocery carts down the aisles; women calling up men for dates and even — what's this world coming to? — paying for them; a husband doing the laundry while his wife changes the oil in the car (well, perhaps not common, but not impossible); and to hear widespread use of that catch-all term "Ms."

Yep, change has been as rapid and confusing as the currents on Wadley Avenue during a heavy rain. And just about as popular.

"MEN AND WOMEN got along pretty good in this world for centuries without having to be one sex," said Jack Zengler, 2814 Cimmaron. He commented on women referring to themselves as "Ms.":

"I don't think much of it. I basically don't believe in the equality of the sexes, because men and women are different. I thank God for the differences. I don't think it's degrading to be called 'Miss' or 'Mrs.' It seems to me that the way God set up nature, we have two sexes and trying to make them one isn't going to make them one. Terminology isn't going to change nature.

"So many of the people who use the term appear to be radical — heads of organizations like NOW (National Organization of Women). They seem somehow not to be satisfied with their sex. I think it creates hostility among some people. I'm just not comfortable with it. I can't see what it gains.

"I don't see why women who aren't married would have an objection to that being known. And women who are married...I would assume they got married because they wanted to."

"It (use of the title "Ms.") used to be a badge of confrontive feminism," said Smith, a local attorney, "and someone who insisted on being called "Ms." was telling me her ideas about feminism were really important to her.

"It's just relegated itself now to an item of confusion, because I don't know whether they're using it because it's generally accepted or because they are very concerned with feminism. It could be a statement of concealment of their marital status, for whatever reason."

"It sounds like you're trying to hide something," agreed insurance rating secretary Frances Smith.

"I'm from the old school," her co-worker, Edith Drake, said. "It (Ms.) doesn't say who you are. I'd rather be called by my first name, but I wouldn't want anyone to think I wasn't married."

"I DON'T LIKE the term 'Ms.' It doesn't appeal to me," said Terri Trentham, president of the Midland League of Women Voters. "It's not important to me if somebody calls me 'Mrs.' I think when it comes to feminism there's a lot more important things to worry about than the term 'Ms.' Those are simple little things that shouldn't even bother people. I think sometimes people get hung up on little things and don't face the important issues."

But there is at least one defender of the practice.

"I find it convenient when I'm writing and I don't know if the woman is married or not. It's kind of a catch-all," said Marion Kimberly, president of the Uptown Business and Professional Women's Club. "I want to present myself as a professional. I don't want people to think of me as a wife — I want them to deal with me according to my professional capacity and that (marital status) shouldn't enter into it."

Another change that, apparently, has not gained general popularity is a married woman using her maiden name or a hyphenated name.

"I don't like that," Mrs. Drake asserted. "I prefer the customary ways of taking your husband's name. I can't imagine that a man would like it."

"That's so way out to me," Mrs. Smith said. "I wouldn't object to it if it was someone who wanted to use it in her professional life, but socially I think she should use her husband's name."

"I think it's silly," Zengler declared. "If they were so concerned about their identity that they wanted to keep their name, why did they get married? By tradition and custom, names have been carried down through the man."

BUT TITLES AND names were just the beginning of a rash of social changes in recent years. Now women have the dubious pleasure of pacing the floor, rehearsing a clever line, drawing upon every ounce of courage they possess, picking up the phone with damp palms and dialing some man's number to see if he has plans for Saturday night.

"That's a radical change," said Mrs. Kimberly. "My son is a sophomore in high school and the girls call him a lot. I think it's fine."

"Back in our day that was unthinkable," Mrs. Smith recalled. "The bad girls were the only ones who called up boys."

"Here in Midland they had two weeks of the year called Twirp Season, and that was the only time it was socially allowed for a girl to call a guy," Mrs. Drake added. "I didn't even let my daughter call up a boy just to talk to him. I just didn't feel it was proper. I think now if I had a young child I'd have to conform to the times. It would be difficult."

"So many women wait around for a male to do something for them. That's exemplified in dating," Mrs. Kimberly maintained. "Why should a woman wait until the guy asks for the date?"

She mentioned a new book called "The Cinderella Complex."

"It says women are all looking for someone to take care of us, so we don't have to be responsible for ourselves. The unfortunate part is that she has no control over her life — it's up to someone else. That's a passive approach to life.

"I think that philosophy of life is detrimental to a mental health point of view. It's important to be active and try to get what you want rather than waiting for someone to offer it to you. Of course, dating is just a very small part of that. But that's a difficulty that women have in general — just waiting around. We're taught it's not feminine to speak up — we should wait until it's offered.

"It's considered brash and overbearing and too aggressive, and it is still considered that by a lot of people — both men and women."

"I DON'T SEE anything particularly wrong about that (women asking for dates)," Zengler said. "Sometimes the boy is too bashful and she might have more nerve. I still think, in general, he should pay for the date."

"I do notice, with my older children, they split costs," Mrs. Kimberly said. "It's sort of a practical matter, sometimes she makes more money. It seems a lot more practical to me. I like to see that, because it seems ridiculous to have a rigid rule about who should pay for things. It should depend on who can afford it."

"I don't see why the man should bear the entire burden of going out on dates," Mrs. Trentham agreed. "Especially when they're in a school situation and money is tight anyway."

But more bewilderment than celebration appears to have followed the abandonment of many customs of the past. Several interviewees felt that common courtesy has become a casualty of change, and that often men are unsure whether an offer to open a door or take a coat will be viewed as a polite or offensive gesture.

Productive symphony

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP)— America's big business organizations harp on productivity, but now one company here has brought it to the sound stage.

Productivity has been set to music by Emhart Corp., which commissioned composer-arranger Richard Einhorn to create an original score of manufacturing impressions.

Out of the sound effects recorded in 20 plants located in eight states and six foreign countries, Einhorn orchestrated a unique blend of harmonious notes and beats into the industrial opus, "Symphonic Automatique."

Chuck Wilcox, president of Texas Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association of Midland, Affiliate No. 56, creates a hairstyle for Jess Ann Thomason. The Midland association is preparing for the first fall meeting, which will be held Tuesday, Sept. 7, at 8 p.m. at Lee High School, and will be to help in planning National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Week, scheduled for Oct. 3 — 9.

National Cosmetologists Week is set aside to help make the public aware of beauty salons and their professional services of hair, skin and nail care, said Wilcox.

National Cosmetology Week scheduled for Oct. 3 - 9

Cosmetologists throughout the United States are trained and licensed to answer the public's grooming, hair and beauty care questions, according to the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

"There is no better time to take advantage of the licensed cosmetologist's and men's stylist's training and background than during National Cosmetology Week, which is scheduled for Oct. 3-9," said Chuck Wilcox, president of Texas Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association of Midland, Affiliate No. 56.

During this designated week, cosmetologists throughout the country are inviting the public to come into their salons and ask them specific grooming and beauty care questions.

"If members of the public do not come into the salon, they will never know of the vast amount of grooming and beauty care knowledge that today's trained and licensed cosmetologists have," Wilcox said.

"To survive in today's competitive personal care market, cosmetologists must be as informed and knowledgeable as possible of the needs of concerns of today's client. Cosmetologists are no longer trained for one specific service. Today they are trained to provide complete hair care, skin care, beauty care and fashion advice for the male, female and today's young client," he added.

Cosmetologists throught the United States are using National Cosmetology week to inform the public of the importance of why seasonal hair fashion changes are important for Fall-Winter.

"The nation's top fashion designers are making very important statements for the colder months ahead. This fashion impact does not create a total look if hair is not redesigned to go with the new fasion silhouettes for Fall-Winter," Wilcox said.

"We don't create new seasonal hairfashions just for the fun of it. We do it in order to help today's men and women create a total put-together look with the new fashions they will be wearing this fall and winter," he said.

National Cosmetology Week, sponsored by the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, is a time when the general public is invited to visit cosmetology and men's hairstyling salons and ask their grooming and beauty care questions.

"Most individuals have specific grooming or beauty care needs that are not being answered today. The public does not generally understand that cosmetologists are trained and licensed in all areas of hair, beauty and skin care and have professional answers available that can be most helpful to members of the public," said Wilcox. "Cosmetologists are better trained than ever and are ready to help the entire country look its best. Just ask us."

Young diabetic installed with unusual treatment

By JOE FRISINO
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Shira Putter has what no other child in the world has — a second "belly button."

Shira is an 8-year-old Redmond, Wash., diabetic who had faced death because her body rejects insulin, the life-saving treatment for her ailment. But her second "belly button" — installed last month — serves as a unique way of feeding insulin directly into her abdominal cavity.

The device, which bypasses Shira's resistance to insulin, is the only one of its kind that's been placed in a child's body, doctors at the University of New Mexico-Albuquerque said.

Shira's life has been one of pain, illness and uncertainty, but she says she now wants her story told to "help other children to be brave and not as scared when things happen."

Shira was diagnosed as diabetic when she was 5 and the problem of her body's inability to accept insulin in normal ways was diagnosed in 1980. She received as much as 60 units of insulin — roughly eight times the normal dosage for someone her weight — but the drug had no effect. Then she began developing kidney problems and was prey to infection.

Doctors at the Joslin Clinic in Boston, well known for its work on diabetes, had never seen a case of a child so young having insulin resistance. They gave her drugs in combination with insulin to combat the resistance, which worked, but not consistently.

Italian goodies feed crowd

If you're planning a bash soon, why not please your guests with everyone's favorite — pizza. The recipe below makes three to four pizzas, surely enough to make your gathering a gustatory success.

You might vary the toppings on the several pizzas for a bit of variety — sample toppings are listed beneath the recipe, or you may improvise your own. (If you cannot use all that pizza at one meal, simply prepare as instructed and freeze for later use.)

The dough and sauce can be made in advance, and the toppings readied, so that final preparation is a snap. The dough may be rolled out, placed on pans and frozen before pre-baking. Then it needs only to be thawed for one hour before preparation. If there is not room in your freezer for several pizza pans, just punch down the dough, roll into a ball, wrap in plastic and freeze. It will then, however, take around four hours to thaw.

The casserole will, of course, make a healthy meal in itself. The grains and the soybeans are a complementary protein combination and a tasty one. You might serve a large tossed green salad on the side, with crusty rolls (or pizza slices). Recipes are from "The Vegetarian Feast" by Martha Rose Shulman.

VEGETARIAN PIZZA

For the dough:
2 tbsps. (2 envelopes) active dry yeast
1¼ cups warm water
2 tbsps. honey
¼ cup olive oil or safflower oil
1 tsp. salt
1 cup soy flour
2½ cups whole wheat flour, plus additional flour for kneading
Cornmeal
1 egg, beaten

For the sauce:
3 tbsps. olive oil
1 cup chopped onions
4 cloves garlic, minced or put through a press
4 cups chopped tomatoes
1 can (12 oz.) tomato paste
1 tbsp. oregano
1 tbsp. chopped fresh basil or 1 tsp. dried
1 bay leaf
Pinch of ground cinnamon
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

For the topping:
1 lb. mozzarella cheese, sliced or grated
1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
Garnish or garnishes of your choice (see below)

Dissolve the yeast in the water with the honey, then combine with the oil and salt in a large bowl. Mix in the soy flour, then the 2½ cups whole wheat flour, a cup at a time. Turn out onto a floured board and knead until smooth and elastic. Put into a large oiled bowl; cover with a damp towel and place in a warm spot. Let rise until doubled in volume, about 1½ hours.

Meanwhile, make the sauce.

In a 3- or 4-quart saucepan, heat the oil and saute the onion until tender. Add the garlic and cook for 2 minutes, then add the remaining ingredients. Bring to a simmer and simmer for 1 hour, stirring occasionally. (If a thicker sauce is desired, cook longer.) Remove the bay leaf before pouring over the pizza.

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees.

Punch the dough down and knead again for a few minutes to make it easy to handle, then divide it into three pieces (or four if you're using 10-inch pans). Roll each piece out to a thickness of about ¼ inch (or thinner) and place on cookie sheets or pizza pans oiled with olive oil and dusted with cornmeal. Pinch a lip around the edge to contain the sauce, then brush with beaten egg.

Pre-bake for 7 minutes, then set aside to cool slightly. Meanwhile, turn up the oven heat to 450 degrees.

Sprinkle about one-third of the mozzarella cheese over the pre-baked pizza crusts. Pour the tomato sauce over each and sprinkle with equal amounts of the remaining cheese. Top with the garnish or garnishes of your choice and bake for 10 to 15 minutes.

Note: You can top your pizzas with any of the suggestions below, either singly or in combination:

Sliced fresh mushrooms, sauteed in butter and olive oil with salt and freshly ground pepper; sliced green pepper; pitted, sliced black olives; sliced artichoke hearts; sliced eggplant, sauteed in olive oil with garlic, salt and freshly ground pepper; sliced onion, sauteed in olive oil until crisp-tender; sliced zucchini, sauteed in olive oil with garlic, salt and freshly ground black pepper; sliced pimientos.

Yields 3 to 4 pizzas.

ITALIAN SOYBEAN-GRAINS CASSEROLE

1 onion chopped
¼ cup olive oil
2 or more cloves garlic, minced or put through a press
8 tomatoes, chopped
1 can (6 oz.) tomato paste
1 tsp. oregano
1 tbsp. chopped fresh basil or 1 tsp. dried
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
2 zucchini, sliced
Vegetable salt
2 cups cooked soybeans or soy flakes
2 cups cooked brown rice or bulgur or 1 cup each, mixed
4 oz. cheddar cheese, sliced or grated
½ cup wheat germ

Saute the onion and garlic in 2 tablespoons of the olive oil until the onion is tender. Add the tomatoes, tomato paste and seasonings, then cover and simmer for 30 minutes.

Saute the zucchini in the remaining oil until just beginning to be tender and translucent. Sprinkle with a little vegetable salt and drain on paper towels.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees; oil a 2-quart casserole.

Combine the soybeans and grains with one cup of the sauce and spread them over the bottom of the prepared casserole. Layer the zucchini over the grains and beans. Pour on the remaining sauce, sprinkle on the cheese and top with wheat germ. Bake for 30 minutes. Serves 6 to 8.

BACON TROUT

We used commercially frozen trout but fishermen may have their own catch.

8 thick (⅛-inch) slices bacon
¼ cup (about) fine dry bread crumbs.
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Four 5-ounce frozen (dressed but not boned) rainbow trout, thawed

In a 12-inch skillet gently cook bacon until crisp; drain on paper toweling and keep warm. Pour bacon fat and drippings into a fine-mesh strainer to drain; discard residue; if necessary add enough salad oil to bacon fat to make 1-3rd cup; reserve. On wax paper stir together bread crumbs, salt and pepper; coat trout with mixture. Heat reserved bacon fat (or bacon fat and oil) in the clean dry skillet; add trout and fry over moderate heat, turning once, until golden and opaque through — about 5 minutes on each side.

Story Hour will begin Sept. 7 at the Midland County Library. Kathy Langley, left rear, assists Kristie Turner, front, and Marci Langley hang a poster announcing Story Hour.

Story Hour will begin on Sept. 7 with the story/party day program titled, "Let's Be Friends!"

Story Hour is held each Tuesday from 10 a.m. — 11 a.m. in the Children's Room on the second floor of the Midland County Library. Story Hour is sponsored by Midland Junior Woman's club, and is for children ages 3, 4 and 5.

Story Hour is to "provide an hour each week of 'fun with a purpose' for your child. We hope to acquaint your child with the library and the joy of reading. Through books, songs, records, films, puppetry, special visitors and characters, we hope to achieve a meaningful and productive hour with your child," said Kathy Langley, Story Hour chairman.

"We do accept a limited number of children from day care centers and such groups; however, this year we are emphasizing the attendance of your individual children and their neighborhood friends. Because Story Hour is for your children, may we encourage you to bring your children each week to build a beneficial relationship the Story Hour Characters, Storytellers, activities and the Midland County Library," she said.

Mrs. Langley said some of the features being offered by Story Hour this year are:

Jingles the Clown, a favorite Story Hour personality will be at every Story Hour throughout the year.

Each week children will be taught a safety tip to learn. They will cover areas of crossing streets, fire and matches, strange animals, pool safety and much ore.

Story Hour is done as a community service to make future leaders aware of what their community and library have to offer. Story Hour can open doors of life, science, nutrition and more by way of stories, songs, films and lots of fun.

Story Hour has many visitors, covering areas of community (fireman, police, doctor, dentist, dietitian), clubs (Indian Guides, cheerleaders), story book (Mother Goose, Little Bo Peep, Raggedy Ann), and holidays (Easter Bunny, witch, pilgrims and Santa), and much more.

"Due to a parking problem this year we will allow children to be dropped at the front door of the library, (we will escort them inside) so drivers can locate a parking spot. We will not do this after Story Hour, so mothers and leaders will have to be at the bottom of the staircase promptly at 11 a.m.," Mrs. Lagley said.

"This is the fifth year Story Hour has been presented by a group of members from Midland Junior Woman's Club, but it has been an ongoing project of the community for over 20 years," she said. "The Story Hour Committee of Midland Junior Woman's Club is looking forward to this fun-filled year with your children. We appreciate your continued support and we thank you for sharing your child with us for Story Hour."

Repairing squeaky stairs

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Putting powdered graphite or ordinary talcum powder in the area of a squeak on a staircase may diminish or silence the noise, but the remedy will not last very long. It's only a temporary solution. A permanent or near-permanent cure requires more attention.

In nearly all cases, stair squeaks occur when there is an opening between a riser and a tread. The riser is the vertical portion of the step, the tread being the horizontal part or section on which you place your weight.

Risers and treads usually are held together with nails and-or glue — or with special joints that sometimes are reinforced with wedges. The easiest way to end squeaks is via the nailing method. By bouncing on the tread, you can get the feel of where the squeak is.

If it is in the front part of the tread, drive nails through that section so they go into the riser below. Drive two of them at an angle so their points meet or almost meet inside the wood. If you could see through the wood, the nails would look like a V. With hardwood, which might split when the nails are driven in, first make pilot holes with an electric drill, using bits thinner than the nails. The nails, by the way, preferably should be of the threaded kind.

Should the squeak be coming from the back part of the tread, you usually will find there is a slight opening between the back portion and the bottom of the riser. Drive a thin wedge into that opening by inserting the wedge a bit into the gap. Complete the insertion by placing a block of wood against the block, which will push in the wedge. Sometimes it will go all the way in and sometimes it won't. When it doesn't, slice off the part that protrudes. If the area will not be covered by carpeting, the patch can be neatly concealed with a piece of moulding.

Common sense plays a part in silencing squeaks other than those mentioned. It might be possible to repair them from underneath the stairway or one side that is open or with metal menders or any way your imagination tells you will work.

When a staircase has resilient floor tiles or some kind of sheet material on it, you can go right through them.

When sewing, use care with white

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Off-white, cream, oyster, eggshell, ivory — whatever you call it, it isn't quite white and that can get you in trouble sometimes.

When shopping for pure white fabric, take along a piece of pure white paper to match. There is such a subtle difference between white and some of the offshoots.

If you are into color analysis, you know that not everyone can wear pure white successfuly, and that those who wear pure white do not wear off-white well. When you are selecting a "white" for your wardrobe, make sure it is the right one for you.

Dear Betty: I just finished reading your article, "Building a Workable Wardrobe," in the Times. Where did you take the course, "Color Me Beautiful"? I have the book already. — Stella Dorling, Richmond, Calif.

I took the course in Independence, Mo., and it was one of the most self-indulging, self-satisfying $50 I ever spent! I loved it. Then, to really treat myself well, I took the wardrobe course that follows. What a terrific service.

If you have the book, you have taken the first step. But you really should follow it up with the analysis to get full benefit.

One word of caution — steer clear of those who have read the book (just as you have) and feel compelled to conduct classes. Proper training takes two weeks of concentration and hard work. Just reading the book isn't enough.

Once you have taken the course, watch out! Your first inclination will be to torch your closet and start all over. Don't do that. Just take it easy and it all will come together after awhile. Honest.

Questions may be addressed to Mrs. Betty Kinser, Ragtime Sewing Shoppe, 1305 W. 40 Highway, Blue Springs, MO 64015.

Home owners: Be aware of proposed tax change

By JAMES M. WOODARD
Copley News Service

Home ownership represents the most valuable form of investment to the American way of life. It gives families "pride of ownership" and the incentive to save and invest, just to mention a couple of healthful benefits.

NOW THERE ARE LEGISLATIVE proposals that would make it more difficult for families to acquire and own a home, and housing groups are fighting them with all the arsenal they can muster.

The proposals would reduce or eliminate home mortgage interest and property taxes as income tax deductions. "Home owners are unduly favored under current tax law," say proponents of the proposals.

The bottom-line incentive for the proposed change in tax laws is, of course, to raise additional tax revenues.

HOUSING INDUSTRY LEADERS are pointing out that elimination or restriction of the home owner deductions would put these taxpayers at a definite disadvantage to owners of other investments.

Such a change in the tax code would generate a strong incentive for current home owners to sell their property and become renters.

They also point out that home owners are not allowed to take deductions of depreciation and upkeep of their homes, as are investors in other real property.

A home owner in the 25 percent tax bracket with a $56,000 mortgage at 15 percent on a $70,000 home under current tax law would have after-tax monthly payments of $776. If the mortgage interest and property tax deductions were eliminated, those after-tax payments would rise to $971 — an increase of $195.

The NAR economists also pointed out that such a change in taxing policy would have a dramatic effect on housing affordability. Eliminating the current home owner deductions would have the same impact on affordability as increasing the price of a home from $70,000 to $89,000. And, of course, qualifying for home loans would become more difficult.

FOR MOST AMERICANS, owning a home is a top-priority goal. Politicians who put up more obstacles to achieving that goal do so at their peril.

Most politicians and government leaders, as well as consumers, recognize the value of home ownership to the total community. Home owners are more inclined to actively participate in decisions of their community, city, county and beyond.

BUT THE KEY DETERRENT to removing those long-established home owner benefits is related to the voting process. Home owners represent a very large segment of voters, and they influence other voters — a fact that successful politicians respect.

Q. The condo building, in which we own and live in one unit, recently was completely insulated. Are we eligible for a tax credit?

A. Yes. You may claim a residential energy credit based on your share of the total cost. Check with your own tax adviser, and your condo home owners association to determine costs.

Generally, the income tax credit for the installation of energy-conservation expenditures is available to a condo owner, if the condo is his principal residence.

Q. Are developers of new housing subdivisions always required to provide park areas in or adjacent to their new development?

A. No. It depends on local and state laws. In many cases, however, developers are required to dedicate land for park use or pay a fee in lieu of dedicated land.

Inquiries are invited and may be answered in this column. Write: James M. Woodard, 6862 S. Zephyr St., Littleton, CO 80123.

Man enjoys life as inventor of children's electronic games

By ANDREW JAFFE
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — What did the mad scientist do in college? He fixed door knobs so they wouldn't open, became expert at reducing junked pianos to a pile of rubble and shut off dormitory power by putting Scotch tape over the leads to fuses and light bulbs.

But his professors at Cal Tech knew better than to discourage Jay Smith, who today is riding the edge of the video-game craze, inventing new games and new kinds of hardware to delight another generation. Smith's staff of gnomes at Smith Engineering in Santa Monica developed toys which accounted for over $20 million in retail sales in 1981. He expects the figure to double in 1982, due in part to his design of a self-contained home arcade game unit called Vectrex, soon to be marketed by Milton Bradley.

A RECENT MAGAZINE referred to Smith as "a sort of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Kid," — not far off the mark. At times, the balding, 42-year-old Smith appears to be an astute company executive, worrying about corporate sales figures and inspiring his people to come up with new ideas in a field where products have a shelf life of only three years. Then he literally turns into a man-child, getting obvious pleasure out of demonstrating a $20 "Sound Gizmo," a handheld electronic synthesizer he invented to allow kids to imitate the sounds of space guns.

AFTER CAL TECH, Smith took an aerospace engineering job with TRW, which convinced him that aerospace had no allure. In 1966, he went to work for Mattel. Three years and two dozen toys later, he broke away to invent toys on his own. With two partners, he created, "Karate Chop," a foam brick that retailed for $3.95 and fell on the market with a dull thud. Smith limped through the '70s doing contract work for other inventors. Then in 1978, Smith Engineering finally hit pay dirt, with "Microvision," a hand-held game for Milton Bradley that exploited some of the early video game fever. Microvision did well enough to fuel a number of other inventions that have made his company one of the hottest "free lancers" in the toy business.

Besides Sound Gizmo, Smith has produced "Game Time," a game-watch for General Consumer Electronics; Star Rider, a Star Wars-like cockpit for Playskool; live action football for Kenner, and a computer center for running racing slot cars on AFX tracks.

ON THE HORIZON are new variations of game calculators, video games for established systems, and Vectrex, a self-contained game unit that Milton Bradley hopes will bring the video arcade into the home and give Atari and Intellivision a bit of competition.

Smith sees his mission not in finding answers but in coming up with the right questions, not only in toys, but in appliances and consumer products. "I want to be the first to put a microprocessor in a toaster or a computer control on a can opener," he says with a wicked grin.

Baby born by Caesarean section after mother's heart stopped

Both mother and baby survive ordeal

By BRUCE DALLAS
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The revival of a woman who died a half-hour before her baby was delivered was the first time in the 2,200-year recorded history of post-mortem Caesarean sections that both mother and child survived, doctors say.

The woman, a Chinese immigrant from Hong Kong, gave birth to a daughter 2½ years ago at Hahnemann University Hospital. When the woman's heart stopped, doctors performed a Caesarean section, removing the baby by surgery.

As soon as the baby was delivered, the woman's heart began beating again, said Dr. Nicholas DePace, a cardiologist in Hahnemann's cardiovascular unit, and Dr. Joel Betesh, an associate professor of internal medicine.

THE TWO PHYSICIANS wrote about their experience as medical residents in April 1980 in the Sept. 3 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association .

The woman, who speaks no English and who wasn't identified, and the child show no ill effects from the incident, DePace said.

"We see her in the clinic. She rides her bicycle by, but she doesn't understand the impact of what happened," DePace said. "But in my medical career, I've never seen a case as astounding as this.

"It's pretty close to being a miracle," he said Wednesday.

"We are the first to claim the dual survival of the mother and infant in a sudden-death situation," DePace said. The physicians waited more than two years to be sure the mother and child were healthy and to determine no other such survival had been recorded.

THE WOMAN WAS 27 YEARS OLD and 36 weeks pregnant when she went to the hospital because she was coughing up blood.

DePace was examining her when "her eyes rolled back" and her heart stopped. DePace immediately began cardiopulmonary resuscitation, but after 30 minutes without a spontaneous response, he became convinced she was dead. Doctors decided to perform a Caesarean section to try to save the baby.

"Dr. DePace began CPR the moment the pulse stopped. If unwitnessed, there would have been brain damage in four minutes," Betesh said. "This (survival) is surprising, but possible because a physician was there" when the woman's heart stopped.

The moment the baby was delivered, the mother's heart began beating, Betesh said.

"It turns out it can be explained physiologically. But it never happened before, and to us, it was a miracle," Betesh said.

THE WOMAN, WHO HAD been showing no signs of labor, suffered a common problem in that her swelling uterus pressed against the major vein returning blood from the legs, the doctors said.

"Combined with her coughing up blood, it almost cut off all the blood to the heart," stopping it, Betesh said.

When the baby was delivered, the pressure on the vein was relieved, sending blood to the heart, which resumed pumping, Betesh said.

Having to choose between saving the baby or keep trying to save the mother "was a terrible decision," DePace said.

The woman was coughing up blood because her lung was bleeding, and she eventually lost the lung, DePace said.

THE FIRST SUCCESSFUL CAESAREAN section on a dead woman occurred in 237 B.C. in the Roman Empire, the doctors said. The baby grew up to be Scipio, the Roman general who defeated Hannibal in 202 B.C. According to legend, Julius Caesar was also born in this fashion, and gave his name to the procedure.

Throughout history, 154 successful post-mortem Caesareans have been recorded, the doctors said.

Until the 19th century, the mother seldom was saved even if she was alive when the operation was performed because the risk of infection was so high. But since then the operation has become routine in cases of healthy women where normal delivery is difficult or dangerous.

MELON SHERBET

1 large (2½ to 3 pounds) ripe cantaloupe
2 cups buttermilk
1 cup light corn syrup
1-3rd cup sugar
Grated rind of 1 lime

Halve cantaloupe; scoop out and discard seeds. Slice each half into quarters; cut flesh from each slice, discarding rind. Puree cantaloupe — there should be about 3 cups puree. In a medium bowl beat together cantaloupe puree, buttermilk, corn syrup and sugar until blended; stir in lime rind. Place in freezer until mixture is firm at the edges and mushy in the center. Beat until a uniform consistency but not melted; freeze until firm. Dip bowl in warm water for a second or two; turn out on a chilled serving dish. Makes 6 servings.

Traditional barbecued pork of Illinois called 'best'

By PEGGY KATALINICH
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

It's quite rare to have a dish so sublime that months later you can conjure up the very smell and taste of it so vividly that your mouth starts to water and your knees grow weak.

This is one of those finds. I call it the best barbecued pork in the world, knowing full well I have not tried every available version, yet convinced it is simply not possible to make it any better.

James Brigham, the cook, demurs; he says it's no better than what you could get back home in Carbondale, Ill. For those of us without a home back in southern Illinois, Brigham's variation is recorded below.

WHILE HE RELATED the story of the derivation of the dish, Brigham bathed two 5-pound pork butts in a basting liquid, adding a few hickory chips to feed the clouds of smoke that billowed from the Weber grill whenever the top was opened.

"My inspiration for the barbecue came from this wonderful old black man we used to know in southern Illinois. Theodore Freeman," said Brigham, sipping gin and tonic on the patio of his summer home in East Hampton, N.Y. "Theodore was a huge man, 250 pounds, 6 foot 3 inches, with a tremendously delicate touch.

"He would come early in the morning to build his pit out of concrete blocks with a steel screen over the pit," said Brigham. "In those days, at least around Carbondale, you didn't get charcoal briquets. He would build a hickory fire off to the side and shovel in the coals underneath the grill as needed. The ribs would be above the fire, about one and a half to two feet. The ribs would cook from 9 to 6, real slowly over the mildest kind of heat. The smoke would come up, and the fat would drip down, causing more smoke. They were never dry; they were wonderful."

THERE WAS A PAUSE in the story while Brigham's wife, Holly, passed around a platter of mussels in a delicious remoulade sauce. He took another peek at the pork and basted for good measure.

The ritual should be repeated every 30 minutes to 45 minutes unless you need to go to the beach, in which case it can be stretched to an hour, but no longer.

"We never got the basting-sauce recipe, but it was clear that it had vinegar, orange juice and lots of black and cayenne pepper," said Brigham. "But no tomatoes, because they burn. Theodore was an amazing man, one of those guys who would have beads of sweat standing out of his forehead. Every once in a while he got thirsty, so he would have a glass of gin and a beer chaser he would down in two gulps. He did that about three times during the day, and that kept him going."

BARBECUED PORK is a tradition in southern Illinois, a region that has more in common with Memphis than with Chicago, according to Brigham. The East Hampton version is usually served on "squishy" white-flour buns — "they sop up all the good sauce," says Holly Brigham — along with coleslaw, cucumber salad, corn on the cob and a first-rate California zinfandel.

Holy Brigham, who staffs the kitchen while her husband mans the grill, served another house speciality, barbecued shrimp swimming in rosemary-seasoned butter. "One night we served the shrimp to Mayor (Edward) Koch," she said, Brigham having served for more than three years as New York City budget director under Koch. "We didn't have any matching utensils, so we decided to serve a meal you could eat with your hands. You just picked out the shrimp in shells and peeled them, then sopped up the sauce with bread. We must have had a stick of butter each — but the mayor loved them." When the Brighams are not serving delicious food al fresco, he is a financial consultant, and she is a design consultant.

HICKORY SMOKED PORK BUTT

1 boned pork butt, about 6 pounds

For basting sauce:
1 quart apple cider vinegar
1-4 cup brown sugar
8 tablespoons butter (1 stick)
4 tablespoons worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons Tabasco sauce
2 tablespoons ground black pepper
2 tablespoons salt
1-2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 cloves garlic, minced

For barbecue sauce:
2 cups apple cider vinegar
1-4 cup tomato juice
1-4 cup soybean or other vegetable oil or butter
1-4 cup brown sugar
juice of one orange
3 tablespoons worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons cornstarch dissolved in a small amount of water
2 teaspoons chili powder
1-2 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon cumin
1-2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 teaspoon ground black pepper
salt to taste

1. Combine the ingredients for the basting sauce in a saucepan. Bring to the boil, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat.

2. The pork butt should be smoked 8 to 10 hours. A covered barbecue grill, such as a Weber, is required. Start the fire with about 12 to 15 charcoal briquets. When the briquets are ready, add a handful of hickory chips which have been soaked in water. The pork butt is cooked by indirect heat and should not be placed directly over the coals. Baste the pork about every half hour. Add two to four briquets to the fire about every hour as required. Add soaked hickory chips to the fire about every half-hour.

3. The finished pork butt is best served sliced as barbecue sandwiches. These should be made on a hamburger bun and served with the barbecue sauce. To make the sauce, combine the ingredients — vinegar, tomato juice, oil, sugar, orange juice, worcestershire, cornstarch dissolved in water, chili powder, paprika, cumin, cayenne, pepper and salt — in a saucepan, stirring with a wire wisk. Simmer for 20 minutes. Stir occasionally. Makes enough to serve at least 10 people.

NEW ORLEANS BARBECUED SHRIMP

1 stick melter butter
1 1-2 to 2 tablespoons worcestershire sauce
a lot of Tabasco sauce, 5 to 10 dashes juice of 1-2 lemon
3 or 4 slices of lemon peel
1 teaspoon dried rosemary or 1 tablespoon fresh
1 pound fresh shrimp

Cook butter, worcestershire, Tabasco, lemon juice, lemon peel slices and rosemary together in a saucepan until it foams. Place shrimp in a dish large enough to hold them in one layer. Pour hot butter over shrimp and place dish in very hot oven, about 550 degrees for 7 to 10 minutes.

The 90 Club of Trinity Towers celebrated the club's second anniversary Aug. 31 with an anniversary party. Leona Armentrout, activities director at Trinity Towers, said the celebration was a double one because the oldest member of the group, Rolla Trumbo, marked his 95th birthday this month.

"You must be over 90 to get in the group," said Mrs. Armentrout. "There are 18 active members in the group. They hold their own meetings, make their own plans. All are residents of Trinity Towers."

The anniversary party was given by the 90 Club sponsors and Trinity Towers auxiliary. Elsie Stephenson is 90 Club director and president.

Beating express lane blues

By SARAH FRITSCHNER
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

After sitting in traffic for 45 minutes, you pull into your neighborhood grocery with a growing appetite and waning sense of humor. Standing in the express lane behind 12 other people who have stopped to take advantage of the air conditioning, you stare at your deli potato salad and gelatin-packed sliced ham. What a dinner.

There's more to life than a 15-minute line. Meat and potatoes — real meat and potatoes — can solve this problem. And to make up for the fact that you have to cook one night, we'll give you a bonus — two complete dinners in exchange for one trip through the express lane.

HERE'S HOW THIS two-meals-for-one scenario works: The first dinner is hot and hearty — sliced rump roast with gravy, potatoes and steamed green beans with butter. (If that sounds too heavy, slice the beef for sandwiches and serve them either hot or cold.) The meat and potatoes cook in one pot, and the gravy is made from the cooking juices. For this first dinner you're cooking enough for leftovers, which can be combined in a sort of all-American version of salade nicoise for the next day.

Day two: Though the second dinner will draw on many of the same ingredients used in the first, it tastes completely different. Once you've finished your hot meal, combine all the leftovers with the vinaigrette in a large bowl and refrigerate, covered, overnight. (We don't even peel the potatoes, but if you want to, it's easy when they've been cooked and cooled.)

You should already have flour, sugar, salt, pepper and oil and-or butter in your kitchen.

EXPRESS LANE LIST: rump roast; onion, beef bouillon, potatoes, sweet gherkins (small pickles), dijon style or green peppercorn mustard, a good quality vinegar (red wine or tarragon, for instance) and green beans.

BEEF ROAST
(3 to 4 servings with leftovers)

2 1-2 pounds (more or less) beef rump roast
Vegetable oil
1 onion, left whole
2 cups beef bouillon (either canned or reconstituted powder or cubes)
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
6 to 8 large potatoes
Flour for gravy

Brown meat on all sides in hot oil in a large dutch oven with a tight-fitting lid. Add remaining ingredients except potatoes and flour, bring to a boil, reduce heat and cover tightly. Simmer about an hour. Place potatoes in pot, cover and continue to simmer another hour or until potatoes are tender. Remove meat and potatoes from broth; set aside. Remove onion from broth and pour broth into a large bowl or pitcher. To make gravy, put 1 1-2 tablespoons each of vegetable oil and flour in the bottom of the dutch oven. Stir over medium heat about 2 minutes. Slowly whisk in 1 1-2 cups of the reserved beef broth. Simmer several minutes until the gravy thickens. (Be sure to reserve 1-4 cup of broth for the salad you will be making later.) Slice meat, reserving about half for tomorrow's dinner, cut potatoes (peeled or unpeeled as desired) into large chunks. Serve with green beans and pass gravy separately.

MEAT AND POTATOES SALAD
(4 servings)

1 1-4 pounds cooked beef, julienned
3 to 4 large potatoes, cooked and sliced
2 cups cooked green beans
4 sour gherkins, julienned
2 medium white onions, thinly sliced
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
1-4 cup beef broth
1 tablespoon dijon-style mustard
3 tablespoons red wine or tarragon vinegar
2-3 cup olive or vegetable oil, or combination

Combine beef, sliced potatoes, cooked green beans, gherkins, onion and pepper in bowl. Drizzle with beef broth and toss. Combine mustard, vinegar and oil in a small jar with a screw top. Shake vigorously and pour over beef mixture. Cover and refrigerate until serving time. Toss salad again, serve on chilled plates and pass extra mustard. Accompany with crackers, if desired.

Home additions call for careful planning, working

By CLYDE SMITH
Copley News Service

So you want to improve your home, remodel your kitchen or bathroom, or perhaps make a room addition or two, such as an extra bedroom or family room?

Careful advance planning is highly important before embarking on such projects, whether large or small. That entails self-evaluation and considered judgment on just what you and your family need and desire.

In the case of room additions, first make rough sketches of various floor plans to help you judge how your ideas will fit together. For finished drawings or a blueprint, you can go to professionals, an architect or draftsman or a building contractor who may offer such services. Professionals, of course, will charge a fee, unless it is a building contractor who gets the job and includes blueprints in his price.

BEFORE GOING THIS FAR, however, check with city or county planning and building inspection departments on any project involving new construction to see how much of your lot you can legally build on and what other restrictions and regulations apply. Also get a reasonable firm and in the ball-park cost estimate. In other words, can you afford it? Do not overextend the family budget.

As plans take shape on paper, you may be considering which parts of the job you could do yourself, thus paring costs. In making this decision, take care not to overestimate your skills or underestimate the time the work will take, especially if you are planning major remodeling that will disrupt your normal schedule at the office or other salaried job.

IN THIS REGARD, perhaps my own experience years ago would be of interest. I was fortunate to have purchased an "expandable" house — that is, one especially designed for later addition of two bedrooms. The concrete slab foundation had been poured along with construction of the original part of the house, and doors were in place leading from a hall to the two potential additional rooms.

My family was growing and in urgent need of extra space. At the time, I was bothered by the affordability bug-a-boo. I thought ... well, maybe, I could do part of the work myself, but unfortunately, I was not blessed with skills in the mechanics of construction.

However, and fortunately, I happened to know a friendly contractor who lived nearby.

So I took my problem to him, wondering if we could work out an arrangement whereby my teen-age son, with muscle and a strong back, and I could do at least part of the work. "Sure," he said, "you can build it yourself. I'll keep you out of trouble." And that is what happened. The rooms went up and were completed within my two-week "vacation" period.

THE CONTRACTOR, who was not interested in taking on the entire job because his crews were busy on larger, better projects, helped in these ways: He figured out the materials needed and ordered them, including precut framing lumber, to the job site, then showed my son and me step-by-step just what to do.

Each evening, the contractor would drop by, tell us what we were doing wrong, how to correct it and outline the next step in the process. When it came time to "plumb" the framing — that is, to make sure the framework is in absolute true alignment — the contractor sent his foreman over to supervise this critical step. He also ordered roof beams, precut to size, and showed us how to secure them. My son and I needed the help of a friend to lift them in place.

No blood, but it surely took sweat and maybe a few tears to accomplish this task. My friend also helped us nail the roof sheathing in place.

WE ALSO PUT ON THE PAPER and wire netting for the stucco base, plus installing "buttonboard" for interior walls (the common practice now is to use drywall), and we also did the painting. Professionals were called in for the stuccoing process, interior plastering, installation of windows, including frames and sills, electrical wiring — no plumbing was involved — for building wardrobes and for the final "hot-mop" roof covering.

The price was, believe it or not, $1,500, including materials and everything, and the contractor said he made a profit. Really. Without doing the basic, rough work ourselves, the cost would have been at least $4,000. That is peanuts compared with today's costs, but everything is relative. That was about 30 years ago, when salaries were relatively low.

"To me that comes under the heading of good manners," Mrs. Drake commented. "It makes you feel special."

"I think there's still a place for me to be nice," Darrell Smith said. "I like the idea of being able to open a door for a woman. I'm disappointed by women who take it as being demeaning. I think you can carry that to an extreme — there's nothing wrong with being nice."

WHILE EVERYONE QUESTIONED felt that husbands should share equally in housework, especially when the wife works, most agreed that the ideal is seldom carried out into reality.

"I don't help as much as I probably should," Zengler admitted. "I was raised with the idea that men should provide for the family and women should be the homemakers."

"There's a lot of lip service given to the idea of sharing the housework, but basically the running of the household is still the woman's responsibility," Mrs. Kimberly stated. "She might delegate some of the work, but she still feels responsible.

"The assumption is always that it's the woman's position to do this, and it's great if he helps out. I hear a lot of career women complain about that.

"It's going to take awhile to change. Those things are much more ingrained than any current attitudes. And the women play as active a part in it as the men. They feel that's their job and they feel uncomfortable when they don't do it."

"I think boys ought to be brought up to help in the house," Mrs. Smith said.

"I agree with that," Mrs. Drake nodded, "but I failed on mine. My husband wouldn't know what end of the mop went to the floor."

"WHEN I WAS A kid I never understood why father could get up from the table and watch the news and mother always got stuck cleaning up," Mrs. Trentham said. "We always share the housework. He helps me clean the house or he'll do the cooking, and he always helps in taking care of the kids. I think that's important. I think raising kids should definitely be a 50-50 proposition."

"There's no reason why, because the woman bears the child, she has to have 100 percent of the responsibility of raising the child," Darrell Smith agreed.

Frances Smith said she believes fathers today are taking a more active role in raising children. "I think they've got a long way to go. I don't think they do as much as they really need to," she maintained.

Zengler disagreed. When asked if both parents should share the responsibility of child rearing he replied, "No, I don't think so. If it's possible, the wife should be the homemaker as far as raising the children. This doesn't mean the father doesn't have anything to do with it, but I think the woman is generally more satisfactory. I think history has shown that pretty well."

Many of the biggest social changes of recent years have come about because of the number of women striving to combine marriage with a career. Many of the biggest conflicts between couples are also a result of this.

"When we were kids, mothers who worked full time were unheard of," Mrs. Drake said. "Today a career is becoming almost as important for them as for the male.

"I think, on the ego part of it, it's more important for the man to earn more than his wife. He needs to feel like he's head of the house."

"TODAY YOUNG MARRIED couples start out with all these high ideals of equality, and that's fine until push comes to shove and then who gives?" Mrs. Kimberly asked. "Mostly you follow your husband. It's that awful Catch-22. Usually she makes less than her husband, so if he's offered a promotion and transfer they'll take it. Then after moving she gets farther behind and never gets caught up. It's kind of a 'you're damned if you do, and you're damned if you don't' situation.

Mrs. Kimberly also commented on the growing number of long-distance relationships that are the result of trying to accommodate two careers in a marriage.

"I really admire people who try new things and try to put together a more satisfying life. But the divorce rate is very high for those kinds of couples. It seems to put a lot of pressure on those marriages, and marriage is hard enough."

Many persons interviewed felt that feminism has brought about some positive and long-overdue changes. Many also felt that some changes have been too extreme.

"To the extent that women are liberated I think men are liberated," Darrell Smith asserted. "To the extent that women have tried to become surrogate men, there's a disservice being done."

"SOME CHANGES HAVE been good and others have not," Mrs. Drake commented. Mrs. Smith added, "I like the openness that young people have with one another these days. They're very honest, and they have such open communications, and that's good. I did like the openness about sex — we were so hush-hush about it when we were young — but I think it's gone too far."

"I have always thought feminism has gone too far when all the anger and blame is put on men," Mrs. Kimberly said. "That is a passive approach. I don't see anything constructive about placing blame."

"When I was a kid women were told that they shouldn't leave their children and go out and work," Mrs. Trentham said. "Now I hear feminists saying they have to go out and work. I think both those things are bad. People should do whatever makes them happy. I don't think people should always be telling others what they have to do in life.

"I always did what I wanted to do. I'm not really big on militant feminism. I think it'll take time for things to change. Nothing ever changes overnight."

The winds of change have blown over every corner of the country, and things will never be the same. And while some lament the passing of "the good ol' days" and others struggle to adjust, many herald the freedom that has come with change and try to seek the best of both worlds.

1960s commune still thriving

By FRANK GREEN
Copley News Service

As the sun breaks, the sound of a sea conch echoes through the lush, fertile valleys and hillsides overlooking Santa Barbara, Calif.

Sleepy-eyed families — members dressed in farm clothes — stumble out of their small cottages, adobe huts and tepees.

The children go one way on bikes to the nearby community school. The adults separate into two groups. Some start the trek to the orchards, where they will pick, clean and package for market dozens of different types of produce. The rest board old buses headed for the community's thriving businesses in the Santa Barbara area — including a natural foods restaurant and a chain of wholesale and retail produce markets.

They will all attend to their assigned tasks until nightfall, returning to their austere quarters to ready for another predictable day.

This daily regimen may not sound like paradise to most middle-class folks weaned on material luxuries. But to the 250 former seekers, seers, dreamers, radical firebrands and other society dropouts inhabiting the 5,000-acre Sunburst Farms commune in an unincorporated area of Santa Barbara County, it is heaven on earth.

JUST ASK DUSK and Willow Weaver, Sunburst members in their mid-30s, who during an interview recently explained the workings of what has become the most successful — and one of the last — of the hippie communes established in the 1960s. They have chronicled their experiences in the book "Sunburst: A People, A Path, A Purpose."

For them, the 12-year-old agrarian community's eclectic synthesis of Judeo-Christian, American Indian and Buddhist philosophies, coupled with an abiding concern for nature and the ecology, is the way of the future.

"We're moving toward a communal goal of demonstrating virtue in our lives," Willow explained simply. Short, dark-haired and dressed like a pioneer woman of the late-1800s, she described Sunburst as a merging of the spiritual and the physical.

Each morning, commune members — mostly alienated ex-professionals and back-to-the-land homesteaders from the '60s generation — get together to meditate. "We attempt to make a common connection with the core of the world's religions," Willow said, explaining their non-doctrinaire, non-evangelical approach to religion. (Unlike some religious sects, new members are never actively recruited.) "We pool our visions and come out with a common set of goals, the foremost of which is getting closer to the creator."

This isn't to imply that they are attempting to trace the vanished steps of naturalist Henry David Thoreau. On the contrary, commune members are eminently practical, said Dusk, a soft-spoken, heavily bearded man who always wears overalls, shirt and work shoes.

A CAPITALIST-SOCIALIST enterprise of sorts, Dusk said the sect today manages a $16 million annual business of health food stores, farmer's market, a restaurant and hundreds of acres of agricultural land. They also say they are the largest supplier of pesticide- and chemical-free produce to restaurants and grocery stores in America.

Like a microcosm of American society, decisions affecting the community — from money matters to personal disputes — are mediated by a democratically elected board of directors.

As with past recruits, new members pool all of their assets in a common account. Each week, Dusk said, individual families make a list of their needs and each week one person is assigned to go into Santa Barbara and purchase the requested goods.

"If we want something that's a little expensive, we call the budget manager and ask him if we can drop that on him that week," said Willow.

Lately, she added, some families have been getting a little excessive in their demands, requesting everything from miniature Pac-Man arcade games to video cartridges for the few televisions at the commune.

"Some people are taking on more luxuries than necessary," exclaimed Willow. "We're not trying to judge people, but from our perspective, it's excessive."

EVEN WITH THE wealth their businesses gross, the Weaver's — and their peers — are content going about their work in the fields and stores without drawing salaries. They don't worry that someone with their hands on the single bank account might be skimming a little bit off the top.

"We're a very, very close-knit community. If something like that was going on, we'd know," Dusk said.

He stressed that the community isn't interested in profits. They operate on a very low profit margin and much of future profits will be spent paying off a recently acquired ranch on the Santa Barbara coast that cost "millions of dollars."

If there is any trouble in paradise, Dusk said, it is to be found in the handful of communal taboos endorsed by most Sunburst members.

Smoking, drinking and the use of drugs is not permitted, and sex is discouraged even with a married partner unless for the purposes of procreation.

"The chastity part is the toughest thing for most people to get used to," Dusk admitted. "The idea is to reserve and rechannel the sexual force into art, meditation and other creative pursuits. Our goal is coming closer to the creator. Sex is a stumbling block for us in the reaching of that goal."

THE PROBLEMS THAT the Weavers faced when they decided on communal living are similar to the experiences of other Sunburst members.

Married in the mid-1970s, they had each previously been striving for middle-class careers in Atlanta; Dusk as a druggist, Willow as an interior decorator.

"I had slowly become disillusioned by the low standard of life in the cities," said Willow.

"I was looking at my pharmaceutical career and my college classes and asking if they were really central to my life," added Dusk.

By the time they met, they were ready for the country. With Willow's two daughters from a previous marriage, the newlyweds rented a country house outside Atlanta and managed to raise a garden, while attempting to maintain city jobs.

"We went through that for nearly two years," said Willow. "We weren't very successful. The farmers laughed at us."

In 1977, almost on a whim, they left everything behind to join a planned community in the Ozarks. This turned out to be less of a cooperative venture than they had guessed, with many members defaulting on their leaseholdings.

Warning issued

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission is warning people to throw away some imported Walt Disney-character squeeze toys because they may pose a choking hazard to children.

There was no immediate comment from the importer, Danara International Ltd. of South Hackensack, N.J.

CPSC spokeaman Lou Brott said that small handles on the toys pose a hazard, although no choking incidents have been reported involving these particular items.

Brott added that similarly shaped toys have been involved in previous chokings.

He said the toys in question are made of soft, easily compressed plastic material and are packaged under the name "Safe-Guard" and labeled "Walt Disney Character Squeek-a-Toy."

The commission said the toys, with bulbous-shaped ends measuring ¾-inch to 1½-inch in diameter, included:

The Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck toys are labeled No. 5523 and on the back are stamped "Walt Disney Productions, Made in Taiwan, Danara International," the commission said.

It said the mallet is stamped No. 5503 and carries the statement "Walt Disney Prod., Made in Taiwan, Danara International."

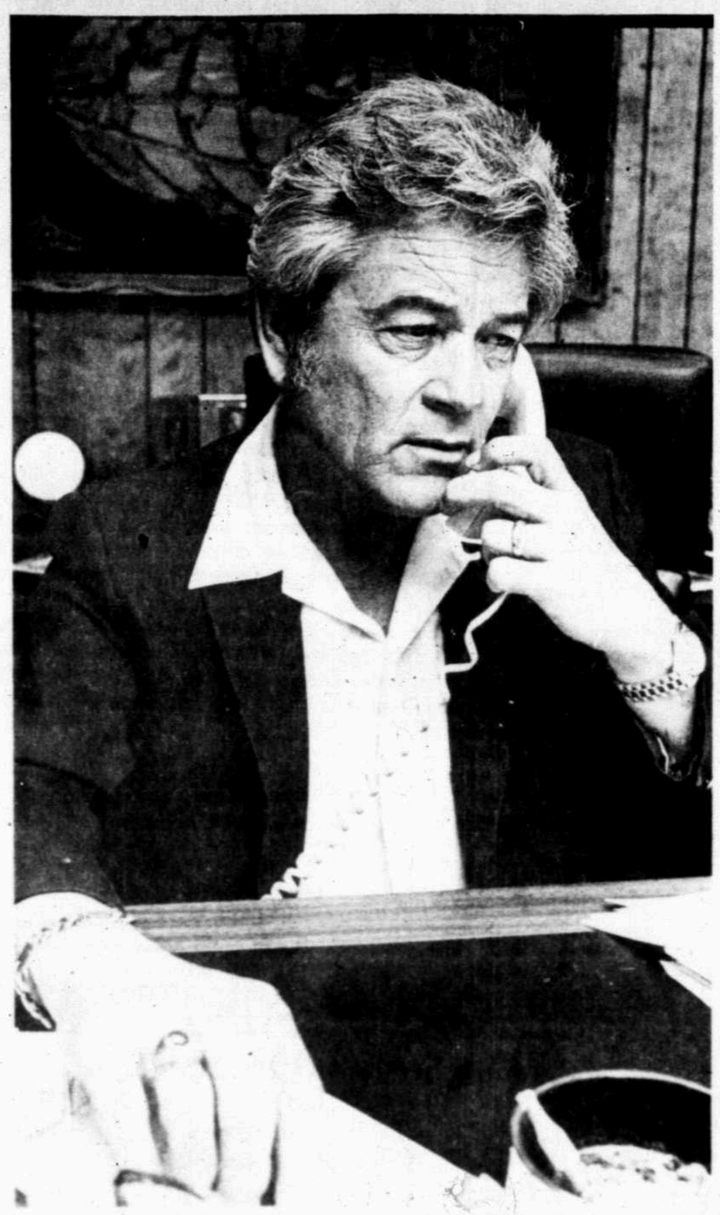
FOCUS: Joe Henderson

He'll for darn sure let you know what he thinks



Joe Henderson

Staff photo by Paul Gilbert

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Joe Henderson believes in direct communications — with his family, his business associates, and his friends. He is direct and frank. If he likes something, you'll know it. And if he doesn't like something, you'll darn sure know it.

"I'm a nut about communications. I'm neurotic about it," he says.

The phone rings, again, and he enthusiastically greets a friend, or one of his men in the field. Putting his feet up on the desk, he leans back in his chair, laughs and begins.

Henderson talks fast, doodles constantly, and puffs on a cigarette. (When asked if he's still athletically active, as he was in college at Oklahoma University, he laughs and says, 'Yeah, I smoke fast.').

He is the owner and president of Southwestern Drilling Mud Service Inc., one of the largest independent mud companies based in the Permian Basin, with operations in eight states.

He also serves on the board of directors for Ike Lovelady Inc., and the Western State Bank.

THAT IS ONE REASON why he rises at five or six every morning. Another big reason is to let his wife sleep in. "I enjoy her enjoying sleeping in," Henderson says. A third reason is to cook breakfast for his children and see them off to school.

"It's my one-on-one time with them. It's the most important thing in the world to communicate with your kids. We're homebodies. We enjoy home life."

Henderson probably didn't communicate well with his father until he was older. "He was a strong disciplinarian. By the time I got big enough to whip him, I couldn't, because it dawned on me what he was doing for me."

During the boom, which Henderson refers to as the "coyote syndrome — everybody was hollering and yelling," people were so busy, it was harder to communicate with them to sell his company's services. Henderson knew he had a communication problem.

He needed an "in" to get past all the receptionists and secretaries, if he was going to expand his market share in the tough, competitive mud business.

"THE MUD BUSINESS IS totally a contact sport," he says.

Who would probably be easily and warmly received in every oil company office in Houston? Henderson, an avid football fan and ex-college player (until he found out that physical education majors don't make much money), knew in a momemt.

And thus, he set out to convince Houston Oiler Earl Campbell to be a mud salesman in the off-season.

"I just told him he wasn't meeting reality by being in professional sports, that in this industry, he would meet some of the brightest, most successful men in Houston, and they would be good contacts for him later, when he stopped playing football," Henderson explains.

Again, contacts lead to communication.

Faulty communication, in the form of rumors, has plagued not only Henderson's company, but many of Midland's successful companies.

HENDERSON SAYS HIS company is not going under, as has been rumored, although he has made cutbacks, just like most other companies in town.

"Midland right now is saturated with rumors. We've been victimized by it. A lot of rumors are 99 percent pyschological, you know. Midland, like any other town, has what I call saloons full of experts that are, in general, running from their own problems, or else why would they be in there in the first place?

"I've got four auditors hired to tell my what the firgures are in this office, and I'm right in the middle of it. If some guy on the outside thinks he knows about it, why doesn't he come in here? He sure could save me some money."

While on the subject of rumors, Henderson mentions something that has bothered him most — the rumor that he and his wife, Pat, are splitting up.

"If there was even one percent truth to it, I wouldn't be so adamant about it, but it's 100 percent untrue. This is totally asinine," Henderson says. "She is the greatest thing in my life, period. And I owe my successes to her, and my failures to me."

HENDERSON HAS A unique theory about the situation.

"I believe in syndromes. I call this the chicken syndrome. Anyone who grew up on a farm knows what I mean," he says. "When one chicken has a flesh wound, the other chickens pick it to death."

Since December, he has laid off 250 of his 500 employees, who operate out of district offices in eight states. He admits he grew too fast, but he feels good about the company now.

"We expected to come back, just like everybody else. We've had to adjust. We have really polished it (Southwestern): controls, management. We're down to my street fighters now," he says. "I've gotten a lot stricter. If anyone so much as coughs twice, I run him off. During the boom, I tiptoed around. Fear is an important motivator."

Things look to be on the upswing. Henderson has noticed Southwestern's sales volume picking up gradually since June, and he is excited about the fourth quarter of 1982, even though, like most oil field service companies, he has had to do more bidding and some price cutting.

"The competition is more severe now than it was before. I do like one aspect though — quality is on the upswing, in application of the technology, and in just paying attention. Each job is extremely important.

"You know, we're going to make it fit. We're going to make every dollar we spend make sense."

HIS PHILOSOPHY IS simple and direct. He believes in hard work and the rewards it will bring.

"The harder you work, the luckier you get. The most important thing is self respect. I enjoy having people depend on me, because it means they trust me."

Henderson started working after attending O.U., when Magnolia Oil Company hired him as a mud engineer almost 30 years ago. He scarcely believes that in the early days of his own company, a one-man operation at first, he drove 25 to 30,000 miles a month.

Henderson says he was broke once and destitute twice, and that it only made him "fight harder." He says he would never consider filing for bankruptcy, if it came down to that, but would instead, somehow, pay his creditors. "I don't believe in it (filing). I just don't believe in copping out."

Henderson says he was much happier when he was broke, because it brought him closer to the things that are important, like his family.

BUT, HE ADMITS TO being a workaholic. "I have a lot of respect for work. Like someone working on a garbage truck, for example. If he applies himself, someday he'll be the truck driver, and if he's the best truck driver, he'll get to be the supervisor of all the drivers, and so on."

Henderson believes now is the time for Midlanders to circle the wagons and work together to weather the oil industry shakeout. Doing this, there's no limit to what can be accomplished.

"Midland is an absolute mecca of power. By that, I mean that Midland-based companies should try to office in Midland-owned buildings, to keep the money in Midland. We need to bring the money back to Midland, where everyone shares in it — the dry cleaners, the 7-Eleven."

The downturn won't be any big problem to the hard workers, who will work right through it, he says. "I'll say this: We sure as hell learned how to handle the next boom."

Henderson says he's optimistic about Southwestern Drilling Mud and Midland's economic future. He believes in accepting what life offers, working hard, and enjoying one's family. He doesn't like complainers.

"It ought to be a law that a person should have to stop by a crippled childrens' home every morning on the way to work. Then, no one would have anything to gripe about. They would realize how well off they are, wouldn't they?"

Watt finds himself on cutting edge of sharply worded letter

By DALE RUSSAKOFF
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In a sharply worded letter to Interior Secretary James G. Watt, the governors of nine western states have called his department's new coal-leasing policies a move "to once again centralize on the Potomac critical decisions affecting western states."

The governors, seven Democrats and two Republicans, said that the new regulations would reduce the influence of state officials and open the way for "excessive leasing of federal coal." This could drive down the price the government receives for its resources and lead to "needless, delaying litigation that will not serve the interests of the federal government, the affected states, the energy industry or the energy consumer," the letter said.

Interior officials declined to comment on the letter, saying Watt had not yet received it. The Washington Post has obtained a copy of the letter.

The letter was signed Monday at a western governors' meeting in Idaho, where the same nine officials unanimously passed a resolution critical of the Reagan administration proposal to sell millions of acres of public lands to help retire the national debt.

The resolution and the letter represent unusually sharp criticism by the governors, whom Watt has often cited as his strong supporters and who have praised many of his pro-development policies. Watt's policies directly affect the nine governors' states, where the Interior Department owns more than one-third of the land and much of the coal.

The governors who signed the letter and the resolution are: Ed Herschler of Wyoming; Richard D. Lamm of Colorado; Scott M. Matheson of Utah; Ted Schwinden of Montana; Bruce King of New Mexico; Allen I. Olson of North Dakota; John V. Evans of Idaho; William Janklow of South Dakota and Bruce Babbitt of Arizona. Janklow and Olson are Republicans.

In an interview published in July in Human Events, Watt said of the western governors: "We have the full support of all those governors, which drives the Democrats among them up the wall. ... They don't have one reason to be against me, and are not against me." Watt also said that Babbitt and Lamm "are both liberal Democrats who have supported me without exception."

The new coal regulations have been in effect for only five weeks and have not yet been used in a major sale of federal coal rights. Interior revised the rules as part of the Reagan administration's effort to "eliminate burdensome and unnecessary rules," according to a July 30 press release. The release also said the new regulations would increase the governors' role in leasing decisions.

Western governors proposed 175 changes when Interior circulated a draft of the new rules earlier in the year. Interior rejected 159 of them, according to the governors' aides.

The main charge in the letter was that the regulations "eviscerate the most vital organ for state-federal cooperation, the regional coal teams." The teams, composed of governors and Interior officials, were among the Carter administration's more popular initiatives among westerners.

The governors had recommended that Interior retain the old system, under which the regional coal teams recommended how much coal should be auctioned off at a time and where the development should take place. The Interior secretary made his decision after receiving the recommendations.

Under the new regulations, the teams will forward several options, rather than one, to Watt. Aides to the governors said they fear the Interior Department will put more coal on the market than state officials want. They cited the department's recent proposal to lease between 800 million and 1.2 billion tons of coal along the Montana-North Dakota border, after a regional coal team recommended leasing between 400 million and 800 million tons.

"We don't want to stop coal leasing by any means, but we're afraid these guys may be pushing too hard," said DeWitt John, an official of the Colorado Department of Natural Resources.

The Interior Department came under fire earlier this year after a record-breaking sale of federal coal rights along the Wyoming-Montana border. The sale came during a glut in the coal market, and drew little competition from mining companies. Interior officials defended the timing of the sale, saying it is not up to the government to manipulate the coal market.

The governors said in their letter that Interior's policies "appear to be the product of a misconception that the department can ignore the marketplace in making its coal leasing decisions.

Little chance Mexico will ignore debt, experts say

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

Is Mexico's seizure of its banks a prelude to eventual repudiation of all or part of its $80 billion external debt? International bankers and economists think it would be a very remote possibility; actually, Mexico desperately needs outside capital, they say. Some see the seizure as a means of guaranteeing that debt.

However, note other analysts, there is precedent for such a move. If there were a revolution — as is now being discussed openly — a new government might repudiate debts of the old regime. When the Bolsheviks took over Russia early in this century, the debts of the former ruling czars were repudiated.

When Germany experienced hyperhyperinflation in the early 1920s, it eventually repudiated its war debts, on the ground that its "old money had no value. Only the new money had value. Since the debts were incurred in the old money, they were worthless," said Andre Levie of La Jolla Securities.

However, noted Gary Schlossberg, economist for San Francisco-based Wells Fargo Bank, "Repudiation of the debt would be a drastic step for Mexico. The country needs large infusions of foreign capital to keep growing, and it must keep growing as its population expands."

Because of its currency and debt crisis, however, "it must adopt deflationary policies," noted Schlossberg, and that could present problems.

Its debt was incurred to rebuild the infrastructure, build up capital-intensive industries and, to a certain extent, support social programs. "Any scaling back of this effort (which Mexico must undertake as part of its agreement with international bankers to get its house in order) could cause pain."

And that pain, say some analysts, could feed the revolutionary fervor. "I'm afraid of a military takeover. And in any country in which the great bulk of wealth is concentrated in the hands of 1 or 2 percent of the population, there are always the seeds of revolution," said Richard Russell, publisher of Dow Theory Letters.

Russell thinks a debt repudiation is possible. "You can sum up the whole history of Mexico in one word: 'confiscation,'" said Russell, who is concerned about what happens in Argentina and Brazil, which also have massive debts to the major industrial nations.

"It's a matter of when, not if, the debts of Argentina, Brazil, Poland and some other countries will be arbitrarily canceled," said Levie. "Everyone says that international loans are 'evergreen' — that you just keep rolling them over and over. But eventually they will be canceled as conditions deteriorate. Once the precedent is established that the government doesn't adhere to its obligations or respect private property, debts will be canceled."

A major worry is what the situation will do to the United States. It's the largest U.S. banks that have the big loans outstanding to Mexico. Business Week Magazine estimated that Bank of America is owed $2.75 billion by Mexico, and New York's Citicorp $2.5 billion, Chase Manhattan $1.75 billion and Manufacturers Hanover $1.5 billion.

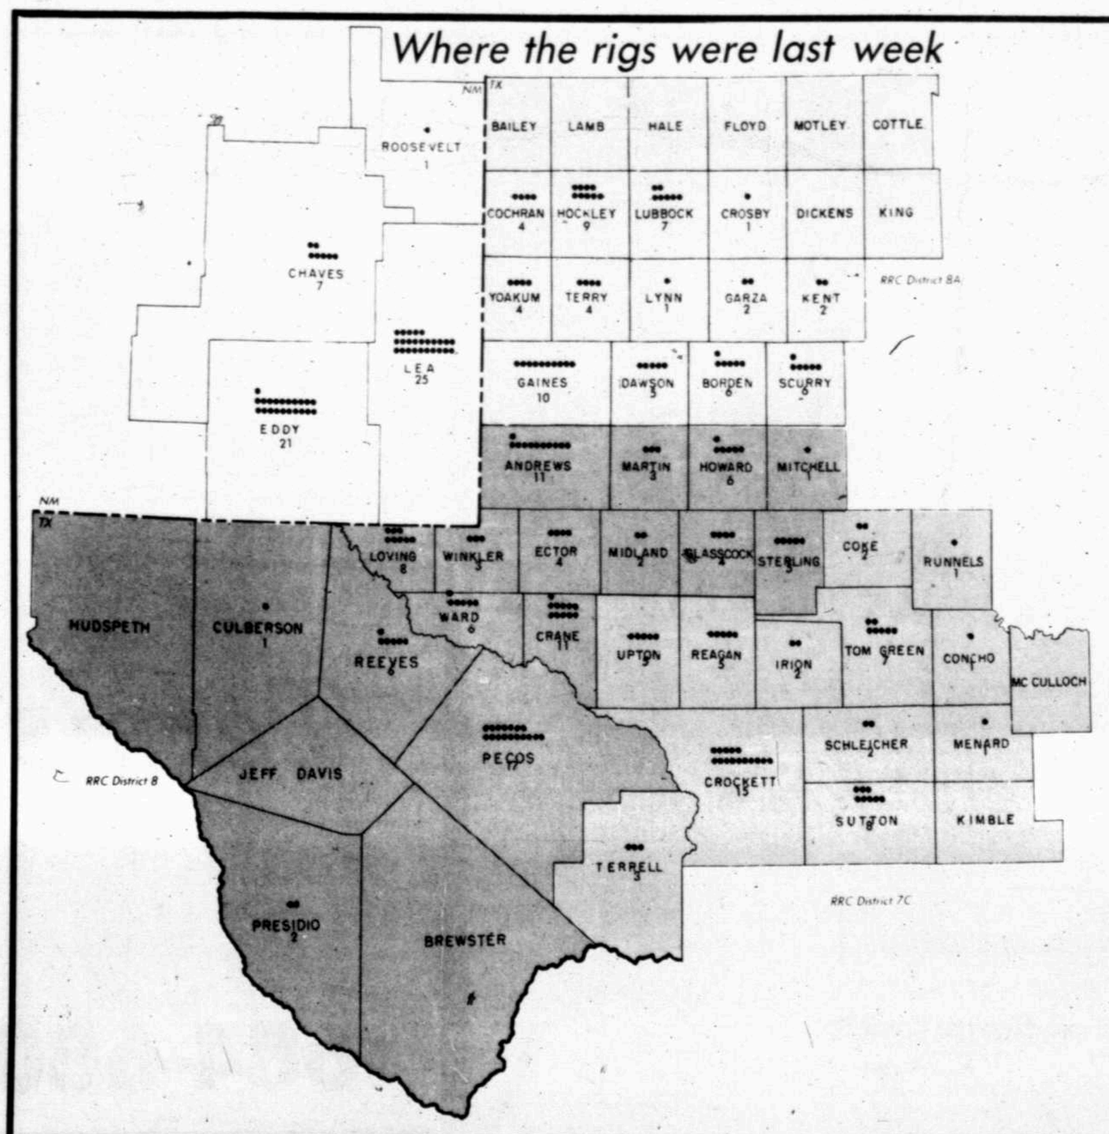
Where the rigs were last week



Rig tally drops

The Permian Basin area rig count dropped to 257 last week, according to a survey by Reed Rock Bit Co. That's four less than half the rigs running in the area covered by the map when the region's rig count peaked at record high levels in early January.

To help put last week's rig count in perspective: the high rig count in 1974 was 251; in 1975 it was 267.

For previous weeks the count was: 271, August 27; 284, August 20; 277, August 13; and 282, August 6.

Nationwide, 2,528 rotaries were making hole August 30, according to a report by the International Association of Drilling Contractors. The count is down from the 2,600 spotted one week earlier.

The IADC figures show rig counts are down all across the nation with four exceptions. August 30 there were five land rigs drilling in Florida, the same as last year; there were four rigs in Tennessee, compared to none last year; 77 rigs working offshore Texas, compared to 76 last year; and 51 rotaries making hole in West Virginia, compared to 48 in 1981.

There were 701 active land rigs in Texas August 30. Another 62 were spotted in New Mexico.

By TOM REDBURN
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Americans are better informed about the economy than they give themselves credit for and are more knowledgeable than some economists expect, the Los Angeles Times Poll indicates.

Although only 21 percent of all Americans rate themselves as well informed about economic affairs, nearly half of the public correctly identified the Federal Reserve System as the agency most responsible for regulating the money supply, and a similar proportion knew what banks have been posting as the prime rate.

The nationwide telephone poll, in which 1,592 persons were interviewed late last month, found that public knowledge of the economic situation varies widely, with 22 percent unable to correctly answer even one factual economic question. But 31 percent of the respondents were quite well informed about the state of the economy and another 47 percent were moderately knowledgeable.

"I would have said the public is generally quite poorly informed about economics," said George Perry, a leading economist at the Brookings Institution in Washington and a member of the Times Board of Economists. "I'm surprised more than 10 percent of the people knew the prime rate."

The prime, which currently stands at 13 1-2 percent at most banks, is the interest rate banks use as a benchmark in setting borrowing costs for most corporate customers.

The poll also found that support for President Reagan's economic policies among the public increases as knowledge about the economy rises. Whether you are a Democrat or a Republican, are highly educated or less educated, or have a high income or a lower income, the more basic economic information you know, the more likely you are to back Reagan's approach.

Respondents to the Times poll were asked to rate their own knowledge of the economic situation and were also asked five basic questions, ranging from who controls the money supply to whether the inflation rate is higher now than it was a year ago.

Fully 48 percent of the public identified the Federal Reserve as most responsible for controlling the money supply and 45 percent put the bank prime rate within its recent range of 13 percent to 15 percent. On the other hand, only 20 percent knew that inflation, which measures the rate at which prices are rising, has abated in the past year. One-third correctly recognized that restrictions on imports of foreign cars would tend to increase the price of U.S. automobiles and 25 percent knew how high the national unemployment rate is today. It currently stands at 9.8 percent of the workforce.

Persons interviewed were considered to be well informed if they answered three questions or more correctly, were considered moderately informed if they correctly answered one or two questions, and were considered poorly informed if they failed to answer any questions correctly.

Of those who were well informed on economic affairs, 51 percent felt that President Reagan was going in the right direction in his economic policies, while 17 percent said he was on the wrong track. Of those who were poorly informed, 24 percent agreed with Reagan's economic approach while 29 percent believed he was on the wrong track.

Even among Democrats, the same relationship prevailed. Well-informed Democrats were more likely to support Reagan's economic direction than poorly informed Democrats. By a 35 percent to 28 percent margin, Democrats knowledgeable about the economic situation backed Reagan's economic policies, while poorly informed Democrats opposed him by a 43 percent to 12 percent margin. Other respondents either were not sure or believed he was somewhere in-between.

The poll results are bound to disappoint many leading economists, who have argued against President Reagan's economic policies. Reagan's economic approach has received applause from some conservative economists and from a relatively small group of "supply-side" economists who overwhelmingly favor cutting tax rates as the best method to improve the nation's economic health.

But many mainstream economists have opposed Reagan's economic approach, warning that his policies supporting tight money together with a large fiscal budget deficit are inconsistent. They concede that inflation has eased but blame Reagan for producing the highest unemployment since the Depression.

"I guess we have not been that effective in getting our point across," said Perry, a liberal economist who said he was surprised that the best-informed respondents tended to support Reaganomics.

The well informed, by almost a two-to-one margin, said their main source of information about the economy came from newspapers rather than television. About 16 percent of the well informed, compared with 10 percent of all respondents said their best information source was books or magazines. Americans as a whole split about evenly between newspapers and television as their principal source of economic information.

The Times Poll was conducted Aug. 22 to Aug. 26. With 1,592 randomly selected respondents, there is 95 percent probability that the poll results are within 3 percentage points of reflecting the attitudes of all Americans. I.A. Lewis is director of the Times Poll.

Dogs' best friend

OKLAHOMA CITY (SWN) — If you feel like your pet is one of the family, you're not alone. And at Commerce Bank's drive-in facility, the pets of dog lovers get a special treat!

"It's a practice that started about five years ago," says C. E. Renfro, Executive Vice President in charge of bank operations. "One of our tellers was a great dog lover, who felt that since the bank gives lollipops to our customers' children, we should have something for their dogs, too."

So whenever a customer came through the drive-in with his pet in the car, she would give them a dog biscuit. "We've continued it ever since."

"I have never received a single complaint about our canine policy," he said.

Nearly one-third of cars sold in August were imports

By DONALD WOUTAT
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post-News Service

DETROIT — Americans didn't buy many cars in August and an unprecedented 32.7 percent of the cars that they did buy were imports, the industry reported Friday.

There was no sign of a revival in the auto industry as total sales tumbled 24 percent below the same month last year. It was the second consecutive month in which foreign cars captured a record share of the market, based on preliminary estimates.

Sales of domestic makes sagged 32 percent below the relatively strong levels of August 1981, although sales as measured on a seasonally adjusted annual basis were slightly improved from June and July.

Import sales only matched those of the previous August, but the sharp falloff by Detroit's products enabled the foreign models to capture the record share of the market.

The imports' strong showing seems likely to fuel more protectionist sentiment in Washington as the November elections approach. Congressional action is scheduled next week on proposed legislation forcing major auto importers to build cars in this country and thus provide domestic jobs.

A spokesman for one importer responded "oh, no" when told Friday that foreign models had nearly taken one-third of the market in August.

Analysts and U.S. auto executives have said that recent declines in some interest rates and the encouraging economic indicators won't noticeably affect auto sales before winter.

Price cuts announced this week on about half of General Motors Corp.s' cars apply to 1983 models, which aren't on sale yet, and generous dealer incentives on GM's remaining 1982 models came too late to affect August sales.

But GM offered other marketing programs all month, and they did little to boost the company's sales. Likewise, special cut-rate loan programs announced Aug. 24 by Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. apparently spurred few sales.

The sharp year-to-year decline for domestic makes is not as bad as it seems, however, because the comparison period covered Detroit's best sales month of 1981. The seasonally adjusted annual sales rate for this August was 5.4 million cars, slightly better than expected and up from July's 5.2 million. The rate is a reflection of the number of cars that would be sold if Augusts' sales pace continued for a full year.

A spokesman for Toyota, whose 1 percent sales increase over last year was its first year-to-year gain since last October, credited the rise to improving consumer confidence in the economy. He said Toyota had no special sales programs on cars in August.

August was the second month in a row in which foreign cars set an all-time high in their penetration of the U.S. market. Final figures for July showed imports with 31.7 percent of all sales, barely exceeding the old record set in December.

Earlier this year, the economic slowdown and spot shortages of Japanese cars due to government-imposed export ceilings, had trimmed the import share of the market. So far this year, the figure is 28.4 percent, compared to 27.6 percent by this time last year.

The record year for imported cars in terms of market penetration was 1981, when foreign models accounted for 27.3 percent of sales, despite the cutback in car shipments from Japan to 1.68 million a year.

Importers have cited this as evidence that the limit on car shipments hasn't helped the U.S. auto industry, but supporters of the limit say the foreign-car share of the market would be even greater without it.

The ceiling expires next March 31. But William Brock, the U.S. trade representative, indicated last week that the administration will probably ask that the program be extended another year.

Finance Commission votes to seek new banking legislation

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Members of the Banking Section of the State Finance Commission voted to seek legislation in 1983 regarding real estate development activities by state-chartered banks.

That action came as the section considered proposed rules on real estate development, with Department of Banking General Counsel Archie Clayton reporting that any attempt to authorize such activities "could come up against" the restriction in the Texas Banking Code on real estate holdings of state banks being limited to their domiciles.

Such powers may be available to state banks under theory that it is an "incidental power" for national banks, and so available to state banks under reciprocity provisions, Clayton explained.

But, he added, it's possible that theory could be rejected if challenged.

Section member Gerald Hicks Smith, Houston, recommended Clayton prepare "parity legislation" to but banks on the same basis as savings and loan associations, with member Carroll Sullivan, Georgetown, agreeing that "it's essential that we have a level playing field."

In other action, the SFC adopted a resolution to the Depository Institutions Deregulatory Committee, urging the DIDC to allow Texas institutions to compete with money market funds by setting up setting up new accounts — either with or without reserves.

Sam Kimberlin, Texas Bankers Association, in urging approval of the resolution, noted money market mutual accounts have attracted millions of dollars from accounts in Texas banks.

State Board of Insurance has approved a rule providing for a five percent reduction in homeowners insurance premiums for approved home security devices and "crime-proofing activities" (the so-called "deadbolt discount") effective Oct. 1.

No discounts or credits are to be allowed under the rule until that date.

Language on the discounts was taken directly from HB 764 by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, passed by the Legislature in 1981.

Persons seeking the credit must apply in writing to the Texas Crime Prevention Institute, a non-State agency, in San Marcos, which will assign an inspector to check the applicants' premises, SBI says.

The inspector will then report on whether the home qualified for the reduction, and if it does, SBI will issue a certificate for the credit.

Certificates are good for three years and may be renewed.

The Texas Crime Prevention Institute has been training inspectors, including local police officers, to make the inspections.

Industrial Accident Board has asked Attorney General Mark White to rule on whether the IAB may award lump sum worker's compensation benefits to the surviving spouse or child of a deceased worker in cases where there is no "bona fide dispute" as to the liability of the insurance carrier, and in cases where there is no dispute as to the liability of the carrier, but only as to the proper beneficiary.

White also was requested to rule on lump sum payments in cases where the IAB finds "manifest hardship and injury would otherwise result," and on lump sum payments "of fatal benefits to non-resident alien beneficiaries."

The IAB, in asking for the ruling, said it is "continuing to encounter controversey in the administration of the worker's conpensation laws with respect to lump sum payments in certain fatal cases."

••••

SBI has approved changes in worker's compensation insurance rates effective Sept. 1, including a 7.2 percent increase on all statutory classes and a 10.5 percent decrease in rates for federal classes, other than stevedoring.

Stevedoring rates are to decrease by 2.9 percent Oct. 1.

Changes by industry groups amount to increases of 6.5 percent for manufacturing, 7.7 percent for contracting, 9.3 percent for oil classes, and 6.9 percent for all other classes.

••••

Attorney General White has ruled that a savings and loan association or other mortgage lender which collects an escrow account for payment of taxes is the "authorized agent" to receive the original tax bill, as provided by the Texas Property Tax Code.

White also ruled that a bank isn't disqualified from serving as a county depository when an officer, director and one percent share-holder in the bank is the county judge, "so long as the county judge does not participate in the voting on the selection of the county depository and his interest in the bank stock combined with that of any other members of the commissioners court does not exceed 10 percent."

A bank could be disqualified, White added, if the judged owns 17 percent of the stock of the bank's holding company.

Executives don't earn enough for the little they do

By ANDREW JAFFE
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Executives pick up an average of $12,940 a year for attending seven or eight corporate board meetings a year, but feel inadequately compensated, according to a survey just released by Heidrick and Struggles Inc., a national executive recruiting firm.

The study of 409 executives serving on boards in 1981 showed that compensation for directors sampled had doubled in the last six years. But one out of five in the survey said they considered their payment inadequate.

"What's happening is that board members are being asked to assume more responsibility," said Michael B. Schoettle, senior vice president and manager of Heidrick's Los Angeles office. "It used to be that you went in, sat down and didn't have to worry about being held financially accountable for what occurred. But now they are liable, and the role of a board member is becoming more burdensome. Besides going to the meetings, board members are having to do a lot more homework."

Schoettle said responsibility and compensation has increased, but at the same time businesses are paying board members more. "Not only have time requirements and public scrutiny risen, but the income level of directors demonstrates their earning capacity is far greater at non-board pursuits," the survey reported.

The survey showed that women and minorities still are barely represented. Women's participation on boards has remained a near constant at slightly higher than 5 percent in the last six years, according to the survey, while minority representation has risen from 2 percent in 1976 to 3.5 percent this year.

"I think that three to five years ago there was considerable pressure to put minorities and women onto boards that didn't have any," Schoettle said. "Now that they've done that, many companies have decided that one's enough, I guess."

The survey also established the disparity of women's salaries in the board room. Male board members in the study earned on average $288,900; women made $113,800. But women are paid more for board service — $15,900, compared to $12,770 per year for men.

Schoettle said that in recruiting executives to serve on boards, money is not usually a key question. "People we contact want to know what role they will have to play, what is the relationship between the board and the chief executive officer, how solid is the company and how active the board is in company affairs."

$24,000 To File Paper?

By JAY DAVISON

You may have noticed that your company is filing more paper than ever before. You may have wondered whether the cost of filing that paper was also increasing. If your company has 30 four-drawer file cabinets, it may cost your company more than $24,000 each year to keep those files.

Why is there so much more paper to file? Computer systems often generate a great variety and volume of reports and supporting listings. Frequently, these reports are prepared in multiple copies for distribution to anyone who requests them. Photocopy machines also encourage producing extra copies just to "keep everyone informed."

What happens to all this paper? Frequently, firms take the attitude of "don't throw anything away." This attitude can easily develop just because government regulations are sometimes unclear regarding how long documents should be kept. Furthermore, many customers are demanding more detailed documentation to support invoices and statements.

The Association of Records Managers and Administrators (ARMA) estimates that each four-drawer file cabinet costs a business $822 each year. Over half this cost is clerical time to file, find, and refile documents. Other costs include supervisory time for administration of the filing functions, the file cabinets themselves, floor space, and supplies. A quick count of the files in your own office will provide a basis for estimating your company's record maintenance costs per year.

All this means that many organizations pay too much to maintain their records. Additional studies by ARMA indicate that many companies could destroy one-third of their records by devising a records management program. Many organizations have not systematically inventoried their records within the past three to five years. Furthermore, many companies never inventory their records at all.

A sound records management program could reduce costs. In addition, such a program should help inprove the efficiency of office operations by making it easier to find and refile records.

The first step in establishing a records management program is to identify one person to be responsible for the new program. This person might start by taking a phuysical inventory of the company's files. The file contents may then be classified into active and inactive categories depending on their age. The program would also define who needs access to the active files and specify a simple indexing method that is easy for everyone to use. The program should also determine which set of files could be combined and where those files should be located.

A business might consider developing a records management program if it is moving to a new office location. If the business has a shortage of floor space or needs more file cabinets, a records management program may help avoid some of these additional costs.

During seasonal lows or slow periods, a business may undertake a records management program to help cut costs. In addition, a slow period offers the advantage of being able to use existing office staff to help set up the new file systems.

Record management is often overlooked because it is assumed to already be economical and efficient. Unless records have been inventoried as part of a records management program, there is a good chance that excess files exist and file storage costs are higher than necessary.

Wright warns of problems

AUSTIN — Anyone considering drilling a natural gas well prospect should carefully apply current economic considerations to his proposed project. Be the operator large or small, industry return on gas wells is averaging a little over 8 percent on investment, while an oil well averages 15 percent.

This warning was expressed by Harold E. "Gene" Wright, President of Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, and Chairman of the Natural Gas Supply Association.

TIPRO represents 5,500 producers and royalty owners in Texas. The NGSA represents the producers of 90 percent of all gas produced in the United States.

"Advance arrangements with the pipeline company should be made to sell his gas before he makes any drilling commitment," Wright stated, "otherwise, the investor may find that he cannot sell a sufficient amount of gas to provide any return on an otherwise profitable venture."

Wright warned oil and gas operators to be aware that the Congress now has pending two pieces of legislation that would substantially alter existing gas sales contracts. Both bills are supported by the American Gas Association (mostly distributors) and many pipeline companies.

One bill would relieve the pipeline of any obligation to take gas from a well during the early life of that well. The second bill relieves the pipeline from any obligation to pay the average price in the area where the gas is produced.

"Since pipelines need a long-term contract (conventionally 20 years) to initiate the sale of gas from a new area," Wright pointed out, "the investor requires these assurances in order to negotiate such a sales agreement."

As an add-on to your refrigeration system, an evaporative air conditioner can cut your cooling costs several ways.

It costs less to run, because it draws less current. It costs less to repair, because mechanically it's a very simple piece of equipment.

And if it's a McGraw-Edison evaporative air conditioner, it gives you • a rigid, all-welded cabinet of hot-dipped galvanized steel (superior to plastic cabinets because they deteriorate in strong sunlight, eventually sagging and leaking) • a durable, corrosion resistant alliance-like Polybond paint finish • certified air delivery based on standards of the Air Movement and Control Association.

It keeps you cool.

During all but the hottest days of summer, an evaporative air conditioner cools the air to a comfortable temperature just as well as a refrigeration unit, and for a lot less money. Because the air it circulates is slightly moist, it's better for your pl[illegible] your lungs and your complexion. And because outside air is drawn through your home, stale odors from cooking, pets and cigarette smoke are never a problem.

Sophisticated swap shop swinging into action in Midland

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business writer

When Midland businessman Jack Pallick decided to open a local franchise office of Barter Systems Inc., he wanted to see if bartering really works.

It did.

Pallick bartered for 70 percent of the building materials and furnishings for the BSI office on Highway 80 near Regional Air Terminal: no cash changed hands for the metal building, the carpet, office furniture, telephone system, or the electrical and concrete work.

"It works like a charm," Pallick said. "We really stepped out in faith with these people, because we hadn't even opened yet and we had nothing here to barter with them. But we're looking around; we're making arrangements."

After being open just a week, the local Barter Systems office already has a 28-foot cabin cruiser, a $380,000 house in Greentree Country Club, assorted wooden kitchen cabinets, attache cases, golf balls and a 1973 MGB on the system and ready for trade.

"It's exciting, because no two trades will be alike," Pallick said.

For the businessman or woman who joins Barter Systems, there is the entire inventory of a beauty shop that went out of business, and motel furniture from a major chain in the Midland-Odessa area which is remodeling its rooms.

Since BSI is national in scope, if Pallick doesn't have what a member wants, he just asks around. "Last week, the Saint Louis office came on and said it had 50 Monroe calculators for trade. Within four minutes, there were all gone," he said.

Bartering clearly amazes him, as he talks animatedly about the new idea whose time has come — again, as a BSI promo film says.

The national company was created in 1975 in Oklahoma City and now has 70 offices in 29 states and three foreign countries. The company helped its clients do $200 million worth of trading last year.

The means of exchange is not dollars, however. It's trading units. One trading unit is worth one dollar. Members build up trading units on their account for the goods or services they have to trade. When they make a "purchase," Barter Systems debits their account so many trading units, based on the fair market value of the goods or services traded.

Anything can be traded: real estate, appliances, cars, airplanes, jewelry, restaurant meals, dental, medical and legal work, even airline tickets and time sharing in ocean-front condominiums in Florida and Hawaii.

One couple in another city in the system bartered their entire wedding, from rings to cake to flowers to photography, Pallick said.

"We will not allow deficit spending in barter," he emphasized. "If you don't have enough trade units, there is no extension of credit."

The company is really just a broker, much like a bank which keeps track of a checking account balance, or a stock broker who keeps track of stock transactions. Members get a monthly statement of all trades made and the balance of trade units sitting in the account.

A rider on the $100 billion Reagan tax bill passed late in August formally designated bartering companies as third party brokers, ending two years of legal questions about the new system.

There are no tax problems involved in bartering, Pallick said.

Here's how the system works: John Doe is a dentist. He joins Barter Systems, and system members are then referred to him for dental work. When, for example, he does $100 worth of work for a member, 100 trade units (TUs) are credited to his account. The patient's account is debited 100 TUs.

What John has in mind is accumulating enough TUs to get a boat. Luckily, a local boat dealer has brought three boats into the system. With the 100 TUs he just earned, he now has enough to get the boat he wants.

And so on and on.

In these illiquid times, cash is becoming a "four letter word," Pallick explained with a laugh. But Barter Systems doesn't replace money, it supplements it, improves a company's cash flow, and brings in new business, said Pam Kuch, trade broker director.

Staff Photo by Don Hunter

Jack Pallick is waiting for merchandise to fill up the new warehouse of Barter Systems Inc. of Midland. Waiting to be traded are a cabin cruiser and boxes of new kitchen cabinets. Pallick bartered for 70 percent of the warehouse and office materials and furnishings.

"We realize you can't live on trade units, but there's a lot you can do with them," she said. Barter Systems claims it can get seven out of 10 items or services requested, and "if you'll give us a little time, we'll get all of them," she added.

Bartering has grown tremendously in the last few years, and now appears to be filling a real need as the economy continues to languish.

INC. magazine's August issue reports that about 65 percent of the companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange use barter for part of their business transactions.

Speedy computerization processes now enable barter companies to act as go-betweens for people all over the country. No longer do the parties on each side of a trade have to meet face to face, or even over the telephone, to make an exchange.

Pallick and Kuch attended a 40-hour school at Oklahoma City headquarters to learn the system. The whole week was on barter: the rooms, the meals, the transportation.

Pallick is excited about Barter System's future. Company officials just signed a deal with U.S. Steel, and are negotiating with Chrysler Corporation, and appliance and electronics manufacturers in Japan right now.

"If the government doesn't want to trade, why not let barter do it?" Pallick asked. The only entities which don't trade are the federal government and some utilities. Independent telephone systems have joined Barter, as has Xerox, Continental Airlines, and the Love Boat cruises.

The beauty of the system is that although a merchant or professional pays wholesale prices to obtain a product, when he sells it through barter, he is credited TUs for the retail value. Depending on a business's mark-up, this can greatly help cash flow.

"The key to barter is, whatever it costs you, it gives you buying power," Pallick said.

"Great," Pallick exclaimed. "Just the other day I broke my racquetball racquet. Now I can barter it."

Labor unions face uncertain future unless change is made

By SUSAN WARFEL
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — The nation's labor unions face an uncertain future unless they adopt new goals and build more cooperative relationships with employers, a University of Southern California professor of organizational behavior believes.

As the 100th anniversary of the first Labor Day celebration approaches, the outlook for the U.S. labor movement is "cloudy," said Edward Lawler of the university's School of Business Administration. Lawler said the main problem is that the traditional manufacturing environment where unions have drawn most of their strength is accounting for fewer and fewer jobs. "Unions are seen as a blue-collar phenomenon," he observed, "and many white-collar workers are suspicious of them."

Many manufacturing companies also are forsaking the Northeast and Midwest, where unions have been particularly strong, in favor of the South, which has tended to resist organized labor in the past, he said.

Other obstacles lie in the path of the labor movement as well, the professor noted. Questions regarding the safety of working conditions and fairness of employment practices that workers once brought to their union officials now are being taken to state and federal courts. And companies that want to keep unions out are establishing pay and benefit scales as good or better than those at union shops.

These difficulties are compounded by the fact that those industries where labor has had the most strength — automobiles, construction and steel — have been the same industries hit hardest by the recession.

Said Lawler: "People are becoming increasingly aware that unions cannot guarantee job security. They only guarantee that seniority will be used in determining job layoffs."

Statistics confirm that these are difficult times for the American labor movement. Union membership has declined steadily since the 1940s, from a peak of about 35 percent of the labor force to about 20 percent today, Lawler said. At union certification elections, employees are opting to forego union representation more than 50 percent of the time, compared with about 80 percent approval in the '40s, he said.

At the same time, nearly 1,000 elections are being held annually to break union ties, up from about 200 a year in the '50s and '60s, he said. And unions lose 75 percent of those elections.

Lawler said there is no consensus among labor officials and members as to what changes should be made to ensure their position in the U.S. work environment. "My own feeling is that they should try to bargain with management for more employee involvement in the decision-making process," he said. "This seems to be the path taken by the United Auto Workers and the Communications Workers Union."

Lawler believes the movement of new people into the top ranks of labor organizations will help spur changes that unions need to survive. But he is unsure whether labor will be able to gain new ground if it develops successful new strategies.

"I expect there could be a resurgence," he predicted, "but it's going to be difficult."

Aluminum won't bend for steel workers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The United Steelworkers and the nation's three largest aluminum producers ended a week's negotiations Friday without reaching agreement on reopening the current contract for possible concessions.

"Even though a great effort was made, the parties have been unable to come to an accommodation. As a result we have concluded our discussions without a solution," said USW district director Bruce Thrasher.

The USW and major steel producers failed in July to reach an agreement that would help the industry cut labor costs and at the same time aid more than 100,000 steelworkers who are laid off.

Thrasher told a closed-door meeting of the union's policy-making Aluminum Industry Conference that the contract talks with the Aluminum Co. of America, Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. and Reynolds Metals Co. were "on friendly terms with no hard feelings."

In a joint statement issued by ALCOA spokesman John McMahon, the three companies expressed disappointment that the talks failed to make progress in resolving the industry's problems.

The industry said the discussions, which began in April and received formal authorization Aug. 26 by the conference, "were wide ranging and conducted in a constructive atmosphere."

Both the companies and Thrasher said informal talks will continue on the aluminum industry's problems before the current contract expires in May 1983.

"We are firmly convinced that the aluminum industry is in some difficulty and that our union where possible should help to moderate those difficulties," Thrasher said.

"Hopefully, during the next nine months, the recession will ease before the industry suffers permanent damage. But that alone will not assure their recovery. We still have to face the long-term problems of growth, layoffs, plant closings, imports, energy costs, declining productivity and increasing employment costs," he said.

Thrasher said he feels the union, which represents 40,000 aluminum workers industrywide, can help ease the industry's plight in the negotiations for the next contract.

The three companies, which together employ about 70 percent of the aluminum industry's workforce, are suffering from the economic effects of the national recession.

Mills are operating at less than 50 percent of capacity, and the three companies have furloughed approximately 40 percent of the estimated 25,000 USW members they employ.

Any agreement with the union and the big three aluminum makers would likely have affected another 15,000 to 20,000 USW workers employed by 100 smaller aluminum firms.

"The industry, which is experiencing a sharp decline in the free world aluminum price structure, faces continuing problems of underutilization of capacity accompanied by extensive layoffs and rapidly escalating costs for energy," the company statement said.

TIPPERARY CORP.
(OTC: TIPR)

Chairman of the Board Deane H. Stoltz has released unaudited financial results for the third quarter ended June 30, 1982.

The company is following a program of selling low and nonearning assets, along with a restructuring of the debt/equity ratio in order to reduce high interest debt.

For the quarter, revenues were $12.44 million, compared to $11.89 million for the same period a year ago. The company suffered a net loss of $1.75 million or 30 cents a share, versus net incpme of $15.77 million or $2.74 a share in the same quarter a year earlier. There was a gain of $1,005,000 on the sale of assets and tax credits.

During the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1981, the company changed its method of accounting for oil and gas properties and expenditures to the full cost method.

MITCHELL ENERGY & DEVELOPMENT
(AMEX: MND)

THE WOODLANDS (SWN) — The company has reported earnings of $17,804,000, or 37 cents per share, for its second quarter, which ended July 31.

The earnings were 35 percent below the $27,540,000, or 56 cents per share, earned by the company in the same period a year earlier.

Revenues for the current year's second quarter amounted to $235,013,000, compared with $259,915,000 for the corresponding period of the prior year.

Chairman and President George P. Mitchell said the second quarter earnings decline, like that of the first quarter, was mainly attributable to depressed market conditions for natural gas liquids, to the related effects of the national recession on some other company operations, and to high interest costs.

In the first half of the year, the company earned $34,117,000, or 37 percent less than the $54,029,000 earned in the same period a year earlier. Per share earnings amounted to 71 cents, compared with $1.13, and revenues totaled $498,150,000, compared with $483,143,000.

First half operating earnings from the production and sale of natural gas and from real estate activities were at record levels, Mitchell said. Overall company operations in the second half are expected to benefit from the continued firming of natural gas liquids prices, the lowering of interest rates, and the easing of the national recession, he added.

Third World leaders warn of financial system collapse

By WILLIAM J. EATON
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

TORONTO — Third World leaders warned Friday that the international financial system may collapse unless action is taken immediately to spur a worldwide economic recovery.

Representatives of developing countries, meeting as the Group of 24, called for sharp expansion of lending by the World Bank and International Monetary Fund as part of a global assault on slow growth and trade stagnation.

The group, however, did not consider a new U.S. proposal by Secretary of the Treasury Donald T. Regan for creation of a crisis fund — reportedly $10 billion or more — to help financially shaky nations like Mexico avoid default on foreign debt.

In any case, the Group of 24 said in a statement, such a fund would be no replacement for a doubling of contributions to the IMF so it could help poor countries overcome their economic ills.

The United States, which contributes about 20 percent of the IMF's resources and has a veto over major policy actions, has indicated it favors only a "modest" increase in IMF dues, more like 20 percent.

World Bank President A.W. Clausen, who addressed the Group of 24, shared some of its concerns and endorsed the call for a big step up in loans and aid to the have-not nations of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

"Certainly in the near term, the developing nations, particularly the poorest ones, face a gloomy outlook," Clausen said, according to a summary of remarks made available to reporters.

The communique issued b the Group of 24 nations — ranging from Algeria to Zaire and including Mexico, Brazil, Nigeria and Argentina — staked out a Third World bargaining position on the eve of World Bank and IMF annual meetings.

In strongly worded language, it blamed much of the Third World's problems on the recession in the industrialized nations as well as the high interest rates that have been employed in the United States to fight inflation.

In the context of the continuing stagnation in the major industrial countries, "the growth prospects of developing countries look grim," the Group of 24 statement said.

"Unless the adverse trends in the international economy are reversed, the whole international system of trade and finance could collapse."

It proposed channeling some of the money now used for military spending into foreign aid.

The statement also called for increased lending by the IMF and World Bank on easier terms, even while contending that existing debt burdens were "extremely onerous" because of lower commodity prices and high interest charges.

Few of the proposals advanced by the Group of 24 were likely to be accepted by the United States and other major industrial nations which provide the bulk of the funds for the two international agencies.

C.A. Jocelyn, finance minister of Trinidad and Tobago who chaired the group's meetings, said its statement reflected views held by 126 of the 146 nations in the IMF and World Bank.

If the richer nations refuse to increase their contributions to help ease the Third World's troubles, he told reporters, "the implications for the developing world would be very serious."

In the past, however, recommendations by this group usually have been brushed aside by the industrialized countries as a visionary "wish list" that cannot be achieved.

The only allusion to the Mexican crisis in the statement came in a section dealing with the proposal for doubling of IMF contributions starting in 1985.

The statement said "recent events" — a possible reference to the nationalization of Mexican banks — have shown that commercial banks cannot deal adequately with balance of payments problems.

Williams announces layoff of 72 workers

Clayton Williams Jr., Midland independent oil and gas operator, announced Saturday the layoff of 72 employees, mostly in the Williams Company's exploration and production division and aviation department.

The severances were in the company's Midland, San Antonio, Giddings, Fort Stockton, Jackson, Miss., and Tulsa offices. Fourteen employees were let go in the Midland office.

"The 72 employees account for seven percent of the work force in all my companies," Williams said, "leaving the Williams interest with 976 emplyees. We will not make any cutbacks in Clajon Gas Company, Century Pipe Company and Maverick Mud."

Williams also said the ClayDesta Corp., developer of ClayDesta Plaza in north Midland, has not been affected by the layoffs. "We will not make any cutbacks in the ClayDesta work force," he added.

"Everyone is aware that at the present time the oil and gas industry is not the booming entity it was six months ago," Williams said. "We made the cutbacks in order to slice overhead and get lean again."

The Williams Company will keep a healthy exploration and development program underway, Williams pointed out. "Currently, we have three rigs at work in Texas, two in Montana and one each in Wyoming and Mississippi."

Action's needed now!

Midland County Commissioners apparently have decided not to decide the issue of the jail stockade proposed a number of months ago by Sheriff Dallas Smith as a means of handling overcrowding in Midland County Jail. But the issue needs to be resolved and as soon as possible.

It looked as though commissioners would approve a site near the county barn for construction of the jail stockade, but opposition to that site arose and in succeeding weeks commissioners could not settle on a site acceptable to all involved parties. They opted instead to call a bond issue for a date to be determined and to let the voters decide, but not before Jan. 1.

Giving the voters the opportunity to decide the issue may be the most fair method in this instance, but in the meantime the voters are going to be footing the bill. And the bill is going to be no small one.

That's because the Jail Standards Commission ordered little more than a week ago that the county jail be limited to housing 85 inmates with the excess being transferred to surrounding counties. Midland County Jail consistently has been averaging more prisoners than that already and, according to Sheriff Smith, if the city's growth continues at current levels the jail load could top the 160-170 pisoner mark in the foreseeable future.

The county's options in the current dilemma have been significantly reduced by the Jail Standards Commission. If the county is in violation of the JSC ruling and the JSC obtains a court order to force the county to comply, the county can challenge the court order in the courts. But the jail could be closed if that came to pass.

To avoid that nasty transaction, it seems logical the county should attempt to comply with the ruling. that means transporting the excess prisoners to other county jails, an expensive and dangerous proposition at best, or finding housing for the excess prisoners. The county already has in hand approval from the JSC for a trial jail stockade to house minimum security jail inmates — mostly those awaiting trial. We still think it's a good concept.

Instead of toying with the idea of a new county jail facility — an idea some estimates indicate would cost $9 million at least, taking into account additional space needed in Midland County Courthouse — why doesn't the county further explore a joint jail, stockade with Ector County? That seems the logical alternative.

The jail stockade concept is now being explored by the Governor's Blue Ribbon Commission studying the penal system as a means of keeping jail costs down. If Midland and Ector counties can jointly construct a jail stockade between the two cities, cut down on personnel and other costs and save the taxpayers thousands or millions of dollars, why not? Expansion of the courthouse could be handled separately.

Sheriff Smith estimates a cost of $200,000 to build a joint stockade, excluding land cost and the cost of added security personnel. If needed, of course, the plan could be modified to include only one county. But that's still a relatively insignificant sum, comparatively.

And if at some point the jail stockade is no longer needed it can be disposed of or utilized for storage by the two counties. But the expense will have been only a fraction of what it would have to be if major new facilities are constructed.

Every day that Midland County delays is costing Midland taxpayers money. In the interest of responsible, cost-effective government, Midland County Commissioners should act quickly to resolve this issue.

Another View: Restoring turmoil

With his veto of a $14.1 billion supplemental appropriations bill last week, President Reagan reassured his conservative backers that he has not gone soft on government.

But the same veto that restored calm among conservatives threatens to shatter the moderate coalition in Congress that gave the president his recent victory on a tax bill designed to shave the deficit by $98.3 billion over three years.

Reagan may well defeat any effort to override the veto when Congress returns from its Labor Day recess next month. But he has now set the stage for more guerrilla warfare between Congress and the White House at a time when he desperately needs bipartisan help for future budget-cutting efforts.

Many leaders of the moderate coalition are also leaders of the president's own party in the Senate. Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee, for example, is as committed to smaller budgets as anyone.

But Domenici also supported the $900 million in domestic programs that triggered last week's veto, and he did so on the grounds that even with those programs the 1982 budget could come in under its ceiling.

The president will need every moderate vote that he can get when it comes time to trim programs that are far more controversial and far more crucial to balancing the budget than those at issue last week. Taking a chance on alienating that support was a mistake.

The next big program scheduled for major overhaul, for example, is Social Security. The system must be restructured not simply to hold down the budget but also to keep Social Security itself solvent. Moderate members of Congress will provide the swing votes on that overhaul.

The president's veto also prolongs, without resolving, another fundamental issue: one involving the proper balance between defense spending and domestic spending.

The bill that the president vetoed included cuts in defense spending of $2 billion and increases in domestic spending of $900 million — a clear shift in White House priorities.

But even Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger did not argue that the loss of the defense money was important enough to warrant a veto. Congress, in turn, held that if it could cut defense it could raise domestic spending without breaking the budget ceiling.

The same case of desperate need cannot be made for all of the programs in the package that the president vetoed, but some of them illustrate what Congress means when it says that some domestic spending has been cut to the marrow.

A $112 million cut in highway spending will mean only deferring the highway projects to a later budget.

But a $217 million cut in a program that supports work by senior citizens at neighborhood poverty centers would eliminate useful services by 55,000 older Americans without necessarily cutting federal costs.

The elderly work at the centers at or near minimum wages, and many — perhaps all — would turn to welfare or supplementary Social Security income to make up for lost wages.

Another $217 million cut would trim $126 a year from the federal grants now available for low-income college students. Finally, there is $350 million in emergency aid for Caribbean countries to support the president's own Caribbean Initiative.

The president obviously believed that his veto involved a principle that is important enough to bring back turmoil to relations between the White House and Capitol Hill. On balance, we cannot agree.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

World body now an anti-American 'stage'

WASHINGTON — Forty years ago, the United Nations slowly groped to its feet — a spavined body, to be sure, but the symbol of a surging hope born of idealism. Today it has become little more than a forum for the denunication of the United States.

Jack Anderson

To add injury to insult, this favorite U.N. sport is heavily subsidized by the American taxpayers. They contribute close to $1 billion a year — one-quarter of the U.N. budget — to promote the rhetorical excesses of Third World orators.

Many Americans are ready to give up on the United Nations. Others still see it as the world's last, best hope for avoiding a nuclear holocaust. Should we pull out of the U.N. and spend the billion-a-year for some more congenial public purpose? Or should we remain within the society of nations where we can at least respond to the daily castigations and utilize its peacekeeping machinery? Consider these points:

— The United Nations is deeply anti-American. What emerged from a wartime coalition of allies dedicated to the defeat of Adolf Hitler and the Japanese warlords is now an organization dominated by nations that weren't even in existence during World War II. The anti-colonial heritage of these emerging nations has become twisted into an anti-American bias.

The United States is regularly denounced as "imperialist" whenever it tries to negotiate international understandings, arrange peaceful solutions to explosive situations or simply uphold its national interests.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union, with its retinue of docile satellites, has succeeded in manipulating the U.N. to its own advantage. By what one diplomat calls "an Orwellian inversion of the language," the Soviet bloc has managed to make "western" and "capitalism" dirty words in the lexicon of Third World diplomats who are often naive and shallow.

— The United Nations is counterproductive. The delegates bombard each smoldering crisis with oratorical artillery, which is more likely to exacerbate the problem than to produce peace. The parties to a dispute also tend to become polarized, and the dispute is widened to encompass the "blocs" they are perceived to belong to.

Thus a petty grievance, which should involve only the two nations directly involved, will often be blown up into a major confrontation as each side solicits the support of other members of its bloc.

— The United Nations is too costly. At a time when our own budget deficits are soaring out of control, we can no longer afford to pump up the U.N. budget. Our billion-a-year contribution could pay for a lot of food stamps, disability pensions and other social services for down-and-out Americans.

Meanwhile, our hard-pressed taxpayers are asked to subsidize U.N. flunkies — probably the highest-paid paper shufflers in the world — who tool around New York City in chauffeured limousines and dine in the fanciest restaurants while millions of Americans are lining up at unemployment offices and free cheese dispensaries.

— The United Nations is wasteful and inefficient. The delegates are a collection of inordinate egos bound together by a web of rules, protocols and courtesies. They are pampered by a bloated bureaucracy which engages largely in unproductive, make-work activities. There seems no way to end the proliferation of task forces, special committees and conferences, whose original purposes have long since disappeared in a sea of paperwork.

Once established, the special teams never seem to complete their assignments nor go out of existence. A recent investigation by U.S. auditors found that hardly a dent has been made in the U.N.'s "marginal activities."

The U.N. paperwork not only is excessive but it must also be translated and printed in all the official languages. It costs an average of $3,648 simply to print the summary record of a single meeting of one of the U.N.'s principal committees.

— The United Nations is a nest of spies. The Soviets and their satellites use the U.N. as a glorified cover for espionage around the world. In every strategic office of the vast U.N. bureaucracy will be found a communist diplomat or functionary.

They are training professional agents who serve the Kremlin, not the United Nations. They use their U.N. positions to promote Soviet causes and to thwart U.S. policies. As professional spies, they also gather information for the KGB and recruit foreign personnel through cajolery, blackmail and bribery.

Footnote: On the other side of the argument, the United Nations provides valuable contacts. A number of important nations don't have diplomatic relations with the United States but do have representatives at the United Nations. Thus the U.S. government can maintain behind-the-scenes contacts but still present an official confrontational posture in public.

Though the U.N. forces in Lebanon was criticized and ultimately was unable to prevent armed conflict, this testifies more to its lack of a broad enough mandate than to any inherent weakness in the concept.

Advocates also argue to my associate Lucette Lagnado that the United Nations is better than nothing. The international body can serve as a "damage-control" instrument when situations seem to be getting out of hand. And with its veto power, the United States can keep hostile resolutions from taking effect.

GEORGE F. WILL

Reagan's 'squeeze' is pinching Israelis

WASHINGTON — On Wednesday, President Reagan squeezed Jordan and Israel said "ouch." The president put Jordan and its Arab sustainers under pressure for more fundamental concessions than Israel need make. But while asking Israel to trust him, he has behaved cavalierly toward his past statements and historical fact.

George F. Will

In 1980 he said: "Israel and Jordan are the two Palestinian states envisioned and authorized by the United Nations. Jordan is now recognized as sovereign in some 80 percent of the old territory of Palestine. Israel and Jordan are the parties primarily authorized to settle the future of the unallocated territories in accordance with the principle of the Mandate and the provisions of Resolutions 242 and 338." Last Monday he said Jordan is not a Palestinian state. Yet it is, according to the Palestine Mandate. And Reagan's plan implies the continuing relevance of the Mandate. The plan assumes the West Bank and Gaza are "unallocated" portions of the mandated territory.

Reagan proposes allocation of most territory to Jordan. But by doing so with reference to the Mandate the proposal affirms a fundamental principle of Israeli statecraft since 1948: Israel and Jordan must do the allocating through direct negotiations acknowledging Israel's legitimacy, and resulting in full peace.

In opposing additional West Bank settlements Reagan did not say, as Carter indefensibly did that the settlements are illegal. Under the Mandate, pending allocation, they are not. Why does Reagan not accept the relevance of the Mandate yet reject the entailed conclusion that Jordan is, historically and legally as well as ethnically, a Palestinian state?

Reagan opposes a Palestinian state in the "unallocated territories" (West Bank, Gaza); he endorses Palestinian self-government "in association with Jordan." The logic of Reagan's reasoning is: Jordan is not a Palestinian state but it is the only state Palestinians will have. By casting Jordan in the role of superintendent of Palestinian self-determination, Reagan's plan would nullify the mischief of the 1974 Rabat conference that annointed the PLO the sole legitimate representative of Palestinians. Israel's Lebanon operation made this possible.

Arabs spent 19 years (1948-67) saying that any Israeli borders are inherently and infinitely illegitimate; many have spent the subsequent 15 years saying, illogically, that the post-1967 borders are even more illegitimate. Israel has always and rightly insisted that 242 does not envision total withdrawal from occupied territories. Reagan's call for some withdrawal from the West Bank offends Israelis who say Israel's obligations under 242 were exhausted by withdrawal from the Sinai.

But Reagan rejects the Arabs' willful misreading of 242. By saying Israel must not live again with the vulnerabilities of the 1967 borders, he says that Israel should withdraw from where it is but not to where it was. The extent of withdrawal should be a function of security considerations, and hence contingent upon Jordanian movement toward what Israel has offered for 34 years: peace and "normalization."

Israeli annexation of the West Bank either would involve means (suppression or expulsion of Arabs) incompatible with Israeli democracy, or the result would be incompatible with Israel's nature as a Jewish democracy. But settlements, begun by Begin's predecessors, have a security rationale: altering the West Bank population mix may be the only way to prevent the independent Palestinian state Reagan says he opposes.

The day after Hussein said all of Israel is "Palestinian soil," Reagan reversed himself by saying Jordan is not a Palestinian state. Israel must say to Hussein: No progress is possible until you stop talking rot. And to Reagan: Hussein may not want "association" with a West Bank Palestinian entity; and your mind is too changeable (as the subject of Palestine shows; as Taiwan can attest). Can you be trusted to oppose a movement toward disassociation from Jordan by a Palestinian entity?

Israel said "ouch," because it believes Reagan's plan was prepared exclusively with Arab collaboration as a payoff for Arab help in dispersing the PLO. Also, Israel says the plan violates the Camp David agreements because it makes specific what Camp David left unspecific — the shape of a settlement after a five-year autonomy process. Thus, the plan resembles a reprise of the Rogers' plan of 1969 — an imposed settlement.

But although Reagan's plan moves the United States from mediation to taking a position, Camp David does not prescribe that. And the United States will not — cannot — impose its views. Israel may have to reject all or part of the plan. But why rush?

Reagan has put the burden of the first and most fundamental movement on Hussein. Only Begin can remove Hussein's burden, by precipitous and wholesale rejection of Reagan's approach.

ART BUCHWALD

Reagan's refrigerators still selling!

The thing I like the best about Ronald Reagan is that he is probably one of the greatest salesmen in the country. He owes this talent to his training when he was spokesman for General Electric products. Ronnie sells Reaganomics with the same sincerity he sold appliances, and every time I watch him on television I can't help thinking he wants me to buy a new refrigerator.

Art Buchwald

If he was still working for GE this is probably how his pitch would go.

"My fellow citizens,

"I am speaking to you tonight to set the record straight concerning the pricing of our new 1982 refrigerators. There has been a lot of confusion about it in the media and you, the American people, deserve to know what is going on.

"I'm sure you've heard that we are proposing the largest price increase in history, and I've reversed my previous policy on refrigerator rebates to get the economy moving again. Well, don't you believe it.

"We are not raising our prices on refrigerators — we are 'reforming' them. It is the greatest icebox reform package in history, and one that will benefit everyone in this country.

"When I became spokesman for GE, inflation and interest rates made it impossible for the average American to buy a refrigerator.

"The reason for this was I inherited 40 years of reckless spending and fraud by previous managements who didn't care what it cost to build one. Since I took this job we cut out the fat and brought our costs under control. Last year we announced a 25 percent rebate for the next three years. This price cut was our way of stimulating the sale of refrigerators, creating new employment, and making the economy strong.

"We are not going back on these rebates. But in order to get our GE house in order, we are now making certain reforms which, contrary to reports, will not hurt the old, the sick and the poor. For example we are closing the loopholes to make the cost of a refrigerator much fairer to the working man and woman. There are many people who have not been paying for ice cube trays at the present time. Dealers have been throwing them in free so favored customers will buy our product. From now on everyone will pay for an ice cube tray no matter what tax bracket he is in.

"We have added a surcharge to our vegetable compartments which will only cost the average family $2.50 a month. Our meat storage drawers will now be priced separately.

"There will be a slight price rise in freezer drawer shelves for people over 65 years of age, and we are asking five dollars more for those who want a place to store eggs. If you like handles on your refrigerator we will add them for a mere $20, which you will easily make up in energy costs in a month.

"When I became spokesman for General Electric I promised you the best refrigerator that money can buy. With your help I can achieve this goal. Write to your dealers today and tell them that you support my efforts to move their products out of their showrooms.

"The refrigerator recession is bottoming out, thanks to the firm actions my administration has taken. But without the new reform I am proposing, we will never see the light at the end of the defroster behind closed doors."

SPEAKING OUT

Manna available at local church

By MICHAEL SPARKMAN

Michael Sparkman has lived in Midland six years and has his own CPA practice. A graduate of Angelo State Univeristy in San Angelo, he is an active member of Midland's First Baptist Church and plays "seven-handicap golf."

A couple of weeks ago I went back to my hometown of Sweetwater to play in a golf tournament on the course where I grew up. On Sunday morning before the final round I went to the First Christian Church where Charlie Reece (not to be confused with the infamous journalist), an old friend of mine, preaches. He's your basic grass-roots country preacher whose sermons are simple but scriptural. He's also a sports freak who played in the same golf tournament and placed in the money in his flight. I met him at the turn and he said he would go over in the corner and pray for my partner and me to finish with a 63. We settled for God's will and 73.

BACK TO THE PEWS. As I looked around I was saddened to see very few young people, even young adults, in attendance. I remembered my younger days growing up in Sweetwater and the warmth I always felt from the ladies at First Baptist Church, and the fellowship of the small youth group at First Christian. I've never, even in the worst times of my life, forgotten those feelings. The Bible calls it manna.

As I continued to pew-gaze — SURPRISE! A familiar family, parents in their early forties with high school kids, was sitting the the pew in front of me. The father has been a golfing friend of mine for several years (yes, he played in the tournament too). He has always been very well-liked by everyone, but like most of us, has had to overcome some significant hurdles in life.

During the service, I noticed that the son, a BIG, strong-looking high schooler, was sniffling and holding hands with his mother. After the benediction, Charlie announced that the whole family was making a commitment to God and joining the congregation. As I left for the golf course, I shook their hands and saw the happiness in their faces. Manna strikes again!

THAT MANNA — a friend of mine says it's as warm as homemade bread fresh out of the oven — that has remained in the back of my mind for many years, I got at an early age in those Sweetwater churches. Two years ago, at age 32, I decided I wanted more manna in my life, so I found a church.

Now a church as such can't give you that manna. The Church, as the body of Christ, where the Holy Spirit resides, can. So having found a church with manna (I found several, actually), I immediately began to ask friends, relatives, clients and even golfers to church. Accountants (better yet, lawyers) are known for procrastination, but some folks can come up with some far out reasons not to go to church. I've been told that if everyone in Midland went to church on Sunday, based on the last census, at least 40,000 would have to stand up.

THE CLASSIC EXCUSE, "Churches are full of hypocrites." So what? The same logic says if you are a businessman, since the business world is also full of hypocrites (don't tell me it's not, I am a CPA who has been around the block), you should close your business. Somehow, our sometimes illogical society has created the notion that you should be near perfect to be an active church member. Churches are for sinners, i.e. hypocrites, most of whom are making a genuine effort to get right and stay right with God.

"I don't have time," or "It's my only day to sleep in." What if God decided to skip "his day" when he created the world. We'd have no day off, no weekends, just one big salt mine.

Then there is "I play golf every Saturday and Sunday morning, have for years." I play regularly with Doug Parsons, who likes golf as much as anyone I know. He preaches, much better than he plays golf, every Sunday morning at Golf Course Road Church of Christ. Play Saturday morning and Sunday afternoon.

HOW ABOUT SOME touchy ones, like "I'd have to quit drinking." Well personally I love light beer. It taste good and is also less filling. No one can make a biblical case against drinking. But you can quote scriptures against drinking too much, or encouraging others to over-indulge. Ask yourself this question, "who controls your life, God or alcohol."

Better yet, "I go to the Stardust every Saturday night and don't feel right about going to church the next morning." In the last two years I've gone there, and to church the next morning. I won't let any Christian intimidate me about my great fondness for the two step and the waltz. But the last time I went there, I acted a bit foolish, so I haven't been back. I can just see St. Peter now, "You had to make a choice between heaven and the 'Dust and you chose what?" Just don't let it get to the point where you have to choose. If its other singles you are looking for, First Methodist, First Baptist, and Golf Course Road Church of Christ have excellent singles programs.

If you have to work Sunday morning, as some do, go on Sunday night. Instead of having to go looking like Joe Banker, you can dress like Joe Hawaii. I's usually loose and casual.

How about "I'm right with God, I don't need to go to church." WRONG! You can't be right with God because he commands you, in the Bible to go, no exceptions. None.

Then there's "I've gone to First Church all my life. I don't like the preacher there now. He's boring (sometimes aloof). I'll go again when they get a new preacher." WRONG AGAIN! Keep looking, or maybe take a better look at yourself. Two years ago, before I joined a church, I took my self-righteous self into Daniel Vestal's (First Baptist — he only talks about playing golf) office to question some of the "finer points" of some of his sermons. I walked out of his office realizing what a truly great and down-to-earth person he was (and is) and what a jerk I was (and sometimes still am — no amens please). I also had to humbly admit that he probably knew a lot more about the Bible than I did. A week later he baptized me and we've been close friends ever since.

The toughest of all, though, is "what will my friends think?" It's easy to find yourself "straddling the fence." I know, I've been there too many times in the past two years. I'll still love my good friends on the other side of the fence, even if they never go to church. But what was once a sensitive subject with many of those friends, is now a humorous subject treated with respect.

YOU MAY BE SAYING to yourself, "I feel so unworthy. I can't go to church with all those nice people." God loves everyone. There's a popular poster that says "I'm me and I'm good, cause God made me and God don't make no junk." Nuff said Charlie Brown, and nuts to you Lucy.

Now that you've all decided to attend church this Sunday, you may be asking yourself where. I suggest any congregation that uses the Bible as their only source of instruction and has a strong emphasis on scriptual study. Why? I'll give you an example.

IN 1970, I returned from Vietnam and entered a liberal, private church college where I was preparing myself for seminary. Not once in two years was the Bible used in any of the 30 or so hours I took of philosophy, religion and sociology. We were all wrapped up in social issues and the "real meaning of life." When someone asked me why I was going to be a preacher, I replied that I was interested in helping solve the social problems in the world. Truth is, I was more of a secular humanist than a Christian. All this idealistic liberalism sounds good, but the fact is it just doesn't work. Why? No manna.

A popular movie comes to mind that sums it all up. Dolly and Burt are talking about the problems of the world over some cold beer and a warm campfire down by the lake. Paraphrased:

Amen Burt.

Governor's race stuck in economic web

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A somewhat cynical quip making its way around the Capitol is that the reason Gov. Bill Clements called the special session on the crisis in the unemployment tax fund is that the governor is sincerely worried about unemployment — particularly his own.

It's been a prevalent theory that Clements' re-election bid will benefit, or suffer, according to the condition of Texas' economy come election day, and Clements' Democratic challenger, Attorney General Mark White, admitted early in the campaign that he wants to make the election a referendum on "Reaganomics" and "New Federalism."

That, Clements has said, is fine with him.

Over the past few months, White and Clements have been exchanging various unpleasantries, including comments on the state's economic situation.

White has charged that Clements is "callous to the worsening state of Texas' economy," and "still maintains that half a million able-bodied Texans...looking for work isn't 'all that significant.'"

Clements has issued statements, including on the occasion of Lone Star Steel's massive lay-off, on how he is "deeply concerned" and has "the greatest sympathy" for Texans losing their jobs during "this period of temporary economic imbalance."

He's also promised that he's "preparing a program to encourage development of more jobs."

Clements also has continued to talk about how much better Texas' economy is than that of the rest of the nation — with White countering that's not much consolation to those who have lost employment.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Many observers saw Clements' apparent reluctance to call the special session as reflecting the governor's desire not to acknowledge that the state's economy has gone somewhat sour.

Clements has been sparring for weeks with the Texas Employment Commission over TEC projections of tax increases for employers — projections which have now climbed as high as 2,700 percent.

Clements first diputed the figures, then decided his staff would study them, and then attacked the TEC for not telling him about the problems sooner — with the TEC and some lawmakers saying Clements had been told several times but chose to ignore the warnings.

Even after conceding a special session would be needed, Clements first indicated it would be after election day (although it turned out the session would be called for after Labor Day instead).

On the heels of Clements' announcement came a charge from White that the matter was just another instance of Clements' "bungling" and how the governor has "bullheadedly refused to face reality."

Presumably even White would be willing to agree that Clements isn't single-handedly responsible for the state's economic problems.

But it is the fate of politicians to be blamed at times for things that aren't their fault (just as they sometimes escape blame for things that are).

It is indisputable that people are worried, understandably worried, about the economy, and it is inevitable that they will hold something, or someone, responsible for the economy's problems.

This is why candidates and candidate-watchers in Texas are keeping an eye on Washington and the nation as a whole, in order to monitor feelings on the Reagan Administration and its policies.

Clements ran his first election against President Jimmy Carter, whom he promised to hand around Democratic gubernatorial nominee John Hill like an albatross (although Clements actually used a rubber chicken as his prop in demonstrating that intent).

In running against Carter, Clements closely identified himself — philosophically as well as by party affiliation — with Reagan. Thus, White argues a vote on Clements is in some sense a vote on Reagan, or at least of Reagan's policies.

Some of those policies may not be too popular at the moment, and even Clements has appeared to be breaking with the president on some things — such as lack of a national energy policy — and has seemed at times to be getting a little room between himself and the president.

This November election isn't likely to be a referendum just on federal policies, judging by past experience. But the election may be determined in part by the state of the economy, since voters could decide to vote for a change on the theory that doing something different could be better than continuing the existing situation.

Cutting the SALT

To The Editor:

More info on President Reagan's decision to continue the illegal SALT policy. Both SALT I and II, as you know, have not been ratified. The executive branch is unilaterally deactivating and limiting its own forces in order to adhere to SALT I and II. This is in violation to U.S. law.

Now get this — To comply with SALT, $187 million are being used to disarm 10 U.S. subs which cost $3.5 billion. Two of the 10 Polaris submarines have already been dismantled illegally, the third of the 10 would be dismantled beginning this past June.

The cost of dismantling each submarine is about $15.7 million. So the cost of dismantling the eight remaining Polaris submarines is about $125.6 million. These operations have never been authorized by Congress for the purpose of dismantling Polaris submarines.

The total investment of the 10 Polaris submarines over the last 24 years is about $3.5 billion. So if this dismantling is allowed to continue that much money of good military capability will be thrown away.

The U.S. has 94 attack submarines totally. The Soviets about 189. And our Polaris subs are still in good working order. Is it wise to continue to dismantle our Polaris subs?

Secretary of the Navy in February of '81 stated that compliance with Salt I and II was illegal and consistent with President Reagan's campaign statements and the Republican platform. But the State Department reprimanded Secretary Lehman and said that the U.S. and Soviets would continue to comply with Salt I and II.

The U.S. complies to the treaties but do the Soviets? Do they ever if it's to their disadvantage? Of course not, if you are at all aware of how they operate.

Why continue supporting the treaties? It's illegal. Let your senators know and strongly urge them to stop complying to the SALT treaties.

Laser light

To The Editor:

The purpose of my letter is two-fold: to inform the Midland community and to publicly thank a physician and his wife.

I was in almost unbearable pain on Sunday afternoon. The cause was acute glaucoma. The cure was the laser beam. Until then, I was not aware that any opthomologist in Midland had a laser. Therefore, I wanted to inform our community of how very fortunate we are that this advanced method of surgery for the eyes is available now in Midland.

Dr. J.F. Ruda and his wife met me at his office that Sunday, used the laser to open my eye and relieve that pressure of 65, and the pain was gone overnight. Later that same week, he used the laser to open the other eye, as he stated that the type of glaucoma which I have usually comes in pairs.

Prior to the laser, they would have required a lengthy stay in the hospital for surgery. I missed no work, even though surgery had been performed on both eyes. To Dr. Ruda and his wife: Thank you so very much.

Dogging question

To The Editor:

I wish to thank the person or persons that moved our red chow dog off the Rankin Highway after he was hit and killed. I'm sure the person who hit him could not avoid hitting him, as he has always been contained in our back yard, and he did not know what a car was. He got out late Thursday or early Friday morning. Always stop and render aid if possible, you might save their life.

Also about the pit bulldog situation, with our sheriff's department with a budget of over $1 million for the year of 1982 and with asking for more for 1983, with all of the deputies, and all the modern equipment he must have bought with all this money, our tax money, to think that something like this could operate in our county, right out in an open field, and with that many dogs and no one spotted this.

Do they patrol the county, or what do they do? Rumors have been out for a long time this was operating in the county, so why was it not checked out? A good question.

Go to Spain

To The Editor:

I am writing this in reference to an article by Richard Orr on claims to mineral rights by Mexican-American descendants of Jose Narcisco Cavazos given to him by the Spanish government.

My sympathies are with him and his descendants for the brutal rape by the Anglos of the Spanish people. My sympathies are also with the Indians of this country for their brutal rape by Spain and the Anglos.

To be absolutely fair to the rightful owners of this hemisphere, I think all Anglos and the people of Spanish descent should pack up and move back to Spain and Europe. For Europe and Spain are where pomposity is rewarded.

To The Editor:

"Pops in the Park" is the nicest possible way to spend a summer evening in West Texas.

Thank you to the Midland-Odessa Symphony, to Midland National Bank and to the city for such a delightful event. I only wish we could enjoy it more frequently.

Public service

To The Editor:

I was in Midland having dinner at a restaurant Friday night (Aug. 27). I was with my husband, daughter and a friend of hers. We were sitting in the bar visiting and my daughter saw a couple across the aisle having some nachos (it was about 8 p.m.).

She requested some from the waitress and the waitress informed us that she could not serve us nachos, that the people having the nachos were stockholders of the restaurant and came in every night and they served them because the manager said to. Some other people sitting next to us had also requested service of some nachos and were given the same answer.

I don't care if it had been the president of the United States sitting there. In a public restaurant, the public should be treated equally. I think the owners and stockholders of the restaurant should take another look at how their establishment is being run.

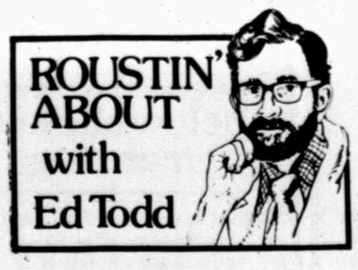
BIBLE VERSE

But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Rom. 5:8

Of humans, expect progress — but not perfection



If you should ever err and suspect that those about you noticed and are offended, you mustn't hesitate to explain that you're "only human." Otherwise, you might be mistaken for an errant saint, a cherub in the costume of an oaf, a mad dog, a crazed cat or a cross-eyed asp.

You're human; therefore, you err. Sinner.

"Nobody's perfect."

"I'm only human," you tell your conscience. "What do you expect — perfection?"

No. Just progress.

Beware, friend, when someone, particularly your boss, spouse, co-workers, classmates, partner or sidekick, tries to shackle you with a guilt complex. Whether they're aware of it or not, they're just trying to get their way and by intimidation are trying to build up their ego and vanity. Are they worth more than you?

Not hardly, though you or they might think otherwise.

Do you play their game? Probably. But it's far easier to talk about their imperfections than it is honestly to confront your own.

It does no earthly good to belabor another's faults when yours go unchecked and get out of bounds. By seeking a power greater than yourself, you can make progress toward perfection in your own life.

But don't let the "I'm-only-human" excuse justify your behavior.

You might try to make simple amends — don't complicate them — to whomever, including yourself, and begin each day afresh.

Sure, you're only human and imperfect. So is everyone else. Never forget that. Don't try to overcome being human. Just try to live comfortably in your blessed condition; it's widespread. Things will change. You'll find out that doing something right is just as human as doing something wrong.

RRC plans statewide hearing

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission has scheduled a statewide hearing for Sept. 8 to examine the impact of natural gas sales into the Texas intrastate market by interstate pipelines.

The hearing will be held at 9 a.m. at the Commission headquarters building.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's off-system sales program was implemented following the passage of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978. Operating under the provisions of the act, some interstate natural gas pipeline companies found they had a surplus of natural gas supplies. FERC then implemented the off-system sales program which allowed interstate pipelines to seek new intrastate markets for their surplus gas.

FERC is now reviewing the program and asking for comments on whether it should be continued, modified, or eliminated. The Railroad Commission intends to submit comments since interstate pipelines are seeking new customers in Texas which have been traditionally served by intrastate pipelines.

The Commission has invited comments from natural gas end-users, producers, pipelines, distributors, municipalities and other local regulatory bodies, state agencies, and the general public on the effect of the FERC off-system sales program on those groups and the Texas intrastate gas market.

Any person, company or group wishing to testify at the hearing must notify the Commission's Office of Special Counsel by Friday, Sept. 3. Participants will be given a maximum of 10 minutes for oral testimony, but written statements may be of any length.

Data received at the hearing will be used by the Railroad Commission in preparing its comments to FERC. FERC has scheduled an informal public conference on October 10 to review its off-system sales policy.

The Railroad Commission has signed an order declaring that certain privately-owned lands in Bastrop County are not unsuitable for surface mining.

The determination was made in response to petitions to the Commission from the City of Bastrop and John Prager of Elgin. Both requested that the Commission declare certain areas of Bastrop county unsuitable for mining.

In recommending that the Commission deny the petitions, Hearings Examiner Ches Blevins of the RRC's Surface Mining and Reclamation Division said that sufficient evidence for a blanket declaration of unsuitability was not presented at a hearing held in Bastrop on June 3.

Blevins explained that mining within the petition areas is technologically and economically feasible, and can be established in a manner compatible with existing land use plans. he also pointed out that the Commission would very carefully study any surface mining permit applications for this area on a site-specific basis to ensure that adequate precautions were taken to protect fresh water and the environment.

To date, the Commission has not received any applications for permits to mine land in the areas mentioned in the petitions. Any such applications filed must meet mining and reclamation provisions of state law as enforced by the Commission before a mining permit is granted.

Today's Commission action does not involve federal lands in the Camp Swift area, which are under the jurisdiction of the federal Office of Surface Mining.

Two oil and gas operators were each fined $24,000 by the Travis County District Court earlier this month for failing to properly plug oil and gas wells. The operators were also directed to perform the plugging within 45 days or face contempt proceedings.

At the request of the Railroad Commission, the state Attorney General brought suits against Geophysical Petroleum Corporation of Dallas for failing to properly plug six wells in Archer County, and Charles B. Marino of Houston for ignoring a plug order for a Karnes County wells.

In both cases, Railroad Commission investigators found the operators had abandoned wells without properly plugging them, posing a potential pollution danger. Commission orders directing that the wells be plugged in accordance with Commission rules were ignored.

Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent announced that 63 refineries in Texas processed 134,376,115 barrels of crude oil and hydrocarbon blends during May 1982. Through the first five months of 1982, Texas refineries ran 616,186,225 barrels.

May's volume compares with 138,487,860 barrels in the same month a year ago, the Commission's Oil and Gas Division reported in its monthly recapitulation of Texas refinery operations. Inputs of crude oil and blends totaled 123,850,765 barrels in April 1982.

Texas refineries ran 103,589,243 barrels of crude oil in May compared to 108,754,957 barrels in May 1981 and 93,816,467 barrels in April 1982.

Products manufactured in May 1982 totaled 134,781,561 barrels, down from 136,955,903 barrels in the same month the previous year, and up from the 123,855,258 barrels in April 1982.

May 1982 manufacture of motor gasoline totaled 58,958,782 barrels, compared to 50,508,683 barrels in the year-earlier month and 51,752,932 barrels in April of 1982.

Texas refineries manufactured 10,394,508 barrels of home heating oil in May 1982- an increase of 1,711,292 barrels from the year-earlier volume. April 1982 output was 9,326,307 barrels.

State leases in bays, inlets and the Gulf of Mexico produced 81,421 barrels of crude oil during June 1982, in contrast to 85,130 barrels in the same month of 1981 and 82,981 barrels in May 1982, according to Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent. Through the first six months of this year, state leases produced 468,803 barrels of crude oil offshore.

Gas well gas production from state leases amounted to 16,002,319 Mcf in June against 20,259,643 Mcf a year earlier and 17,218,935 Mcf in May of this year. Total gas well gas production offshore from state leases was 102,612,036 Mcf through June.

Casinghead gas production totaled 258,575 Mcf in June against 259,431 Mcf in the same month of 1981 and 219,432 Mcf in May. That makes 1,379,259 Mcf through the first six months of 1982.

Condensate production from state leases amounted to 44,442 barrels in June, down from 68,399 barrels a year earlier and up from 44,235 barrels in May. Through June, state offshore leases produced 292,693 barrels of condensate.

In June, offshore crude production was about .11 percent of total estimated crude production in Texas. Offshore gas well gas production was approximately 4.2 percent of the state total.

••••

The figure compares with reported May production totaling 74,392,114 barrels and June 1981 production of 74,004,250 barrels.

Texas oil production averaged 2,374,710 barrels daily in June, down from 2,395,470 barrels daily in May and down from 2,466,808 barrels daily in June 1981.

Through the first six months of this year, Texas has produced 573,315,659 barrels of oil.

••••

The Commission announced that Texas oil and gas wells produced 498,341,510 Mcf of gas in May 1982, down 12.21 percent from field runs a year earlier.

Marketed gas production totaled 404,422,197 Mcf and reflected a 14.31 percent decrease from the May 1981 volume. Marketed production is the total gas to transmission lines, carbon black and plant fuel and lease use.

Gas exported from Texas in May totaled 244,352,185 Mcf. Exports of Texas-produced gas in May totaled 178,016,289 Mcf, and reflected a 9.29 percent decrease from the year-earlier month.

Texas gas production in May came from 226,694 oil and gas wells.

In April 1982, Texas wells produced 514,491,982 Mcf of gas. Marketed gas production in April totaled 432,068,820 Mcf. April exports of Texas-produced gas totaled 209,219,248 Mcf.

Through the first five months of this year, Texas produced 2,586,557,821 Mcf of gas. For the same period, marketed gas production totaled 2,171,402,698 Mcf.

Way to measure microbes reported

BARTLESVILLE, OKLA. — A new procedure for determining the activity of micro-organisms in the underground petroleum reservoirs is described by the Department of Energy in a report entitled "Application of ATP Measurements to the Microbial Evaluation of a Petroleum Reservoir."

Single, free copies of report no. DOE/BC/10301-11 are available from the Bartlesville energy Technology Center, Attention: Bill Linville, P. O. Box 1398, Bartlesville, Okla. 74005.

Oilfields producing oil by the secondary recovery method of waterflooding are becoming less productive as the water-to-oil production ratio reaches economic limits. The remaining oil is trapped by capillary forces and chemical adhesion to the reservoir minerals. Efforts to displace this residual oil require addition of energy.

A potential source of supplemental energy for petroleum reservoirs is from micro-organisms. Thousands of different species have been classified and examined to determine their nutrient requirements, products of their metabolism, and limits of environmental conditions they can tolerate.

The Bartlesville Energy Technology Center, the DOE lead laboratory for research on enhanced oil recovery, is performing research in this area, with Dr. Erle C. Donaldson as project manager. Investigations include reduction of oil viscosity by micro-organisms, production of surfactants and polymers in underground reservoirs, transport of micro-organisms and nutrients, identification of micro-organisms that can exist in oil reservoirs, and biodegradation of chemicals used for enhanced oil recovery.

The procedure described in this new report was developed by Science Applications, Inc. under contract to the DOE. The procedure is based upon the detection of adenosine triphosphate.(ATP) in produced resevoir fluids. ATP is found in nature only in living systems; therefore, its presence is a reliable indicator of the presence of life.

The United States and Venezuela will jointly sponsor a forum on "Subsidence Due to Fluid Withdrawal" November 14-17, 1982 at Fountainhead State Resort, near Checotah, Okla.

The purpose will be to discuss current and future scientific research in the area of subsidence-the sinking of the earth's crust- caused by the withdrawal of fluids such as water and oil.

Dr. Erle Donaldson, a petroleum research specialist at the Department of Energy's Technology Center in Bartlesville, says the forum is expected to attract researchers from several countries.

The forum is open to all scientists and engineers interested in the subject, and additional information is available from Donaldson at the Bartlesville Energy Technology Center, P. O. Box 1398, Bartlesville, OK 74003; telephone (918) 337-4292.

The forum is an outgrowth of an agreement between the U. S. Department of Energy and the Ministry of Energy and Mines of the Republic of Venezuela to cooperate in energy research.

Subsidence above water and oil wells is a problem in parts of both countries. The 3-day-forum will discuss the mechanisms of compaction and subsidence, and abour 15 papers will be presented by scientists from around the world.

Following thorough discussion of the papers and other points brought up during the event, forum participants will formulate recommendations for future subsidence research. The recommendations will lead later to the preparation of a research proposal for conducting necessary studies under joint sponsorship of the United States and Venezuela.

AIME grants six professors achievement awards

Six university professors have been named 1982 recipients of the Society of Petroleum Engineers Distinguished Achievement Award for Petroleum Engineering Faculty.

For this honor, they will receive a cash award and be recognized at the SPE Annual Technical Conference and Exhibition in New Orleans in September.

Award winners are Daniel M. Bass, Jr., PhD., Colorado School of Mines; Christine A. Ehlig-Economides, Ph.D., University of Alaska; Lyman L. Handy, Ph.D. University of Southern California; Ronald Nicholas Horne, Stanford University; Leonard F. Koederitz, Ph.D., University of Missouri; and John Lee, Ph.D., Texas A&M University.

Bass has taught at CSM since 1962 and was chairman of the petroleum engineering department from 1962 to 1980. He earned a doctorate in 1971 from Texas A&M.

Ehlig-Economides, head of petroleum engineering department, joined the faculty of the University of Alaska at Fairbanks as assistant professor. She earned a doctorate from Stanford University in 1979.

After earning a doctorate in 1951 from the University of Washington, Handy joined the USC at University Park faculty as department chairman. During his 30 year career, he has concentrated on the interaction of miscible and immiscible fluids within and with porus rock.

Horne, assistant professor of petroleum engineering, joined the faculty at Stanford in 1976 as a visiting professor after completing his education at the University of Auckland. Horne has worked in the area of convection in porous media. In 1977, he was awarded a Fulbright-Hays Traveling Fellowship.

Koederitz completed his doctorate in 1970 at the University of Missouri at Rolla and returned in 1975 to join the faculty. For five of his six years at the university, he has been awarded the Outstanding Achievement Award for Teaching, an honor presented to only 2 percent of the faculty.

Lee earned a doctorate from the Georgia Institute of Technology in 1963. Always active with SPE, Lee served as a Distinguished Lecturer in 1978 and 1979. He is currently developing a videotape course for the SPE Continuing Education Department entitled "Pressure Buildup and Drawdown Analysis" and is working on an undergraduate textbook on well testing.

On December 4, 1981, John D. Wisenbaker of Dallas, his son Mike B. Wisenbaker, Joe Gifford and Bascom Mitchell, all of Midland, filed a lawsuit in Federal Bankruptcy Court in Dallas against Walter Davis of Midland (Cause No. 381-01384-F). That lawsuit contained charges against Davis of "Unlawful Scheme" and "Conspiracy". It sought $2.5 billion in damages for the plaintiffs and $5 million in attorney's fees for their lawyers.

On August 12, 1982, the lawsuit against Davis was dismissed and the following letter of apology signed and delivered to him. It is published at the request and expense of Walter Davis. As you can see, the charges against Walter Davis were not supported by the evidence.

August 2, 1982

Mr. W. R. Davis
309 North Marienfeld
Midland, Texas 79701

Dear Mr. Davis:

On December 4, 1981, we joined in naming you in a lawsuit filed in the United States Bankruptcy Court in Dallas.

Our complaint contained certain serious allegations against you which, as a result of further investigation and discovery in the lawsuit, we have determined are unsupported by the evidence.

Accordingly, we are dismissing you from the lawsuit and withdrawing those allegations we have made against you. We regret any embarrassment caused to you.

Very truly yours,

Joe N. Gifford

Money squabble threatens AFL-CIO Labor Day ceremony

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A squabble between AFL-CIO officials and a sculptress threatens to disrupt the unveiling of a statue of union founder Samuel Gompers, planned as a highlight of the nation's Labor Day celebration.

Bette Jean Alden contends she is being underpaid for sculpting the 16-foot tall, 15,000-pound marble, bronze and oyster shell likeness of Gompers, surrounded by 12 seven-foot tall statues of American workers.

Gompers died here in 1924 at age 74 after serving more than 40 terms as president of the American Federation of Labor, which he helped found.

Mrs. Alden, 50, contends some AFL-CIO officials threatened her to keep quiet about her complaints until after Labor Day, and laughed when she wanted to invite President Reagan to the unveiling. She said she telephoned the White House and extended the invitation anyway and was told Reagan would send her a letter to read at the ceremony.

National AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland plans to make his Labor Day address during Monday's unveiling ceremony near the San Antonio River Walk, but Mrs. Alden said she refuses to be on the podium.

"I've portrayed Gompers with a contract in his hand to symbolize a good thing between two people, and what's ironic is that they will not honor my contract," she said.

Texas AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard and local AFL-CIO president Joan Suarez denied the artist was underpaid, saying she has been paid $5,500 more than the $24,000 she contracted for and now demands $16,000 more.

However, Mrs. Suarez confirmed Thursday a Texas AFL-CIO official told Mrs. Alden that Reagan was not welcome at the ceremony.

"He is not our friend," Mrs. Suarez said, "and if any labor union leader knew that, it was Samuel Gompers who said, 'Elect your friends and defeat your enemies.'

"What turned out to be something very beautiful is getting very ugly indeed, because if Samuel Gompers knew about this he might climb down off that pedestal," she said.

At the local AFL-CIO headquarters, Mrs. Suarez displayed a contract for $24,000 signed by Mrs. Alden for producing both the statue and 200 porcelain replicas. She also showed check stubs that indicate Mrs. Alden was paid $29,500, and contended the sculptress made only two porcelain reproductions, both unacceptable.

The issue was complicated by Mrs. Alden's personal donation of the 12 seven-foot statues that surround the Gompers statue.
