

On The BEAM

By J. W. King, Jr.

It is time for farmers and town people of the Loraine territory to do some serious thinking in order to keep a public institution, the locker plant, open for business.

The locker plant, as you know was established in connection with the cheese plant. Locker services were set at a low figure to accommodate patrons of the cheese plant and as long as the cheese plant was operating the locker plant had no difficulty in making ends meet. Since the cheese plant has closed, however, the locker plant has not been able to make enough money to maintain itself and take care of the fixed charges on the idle machinery and buildings if the cheese plant.

Something has got to be done immediately to keep the locker plant open for the convenience of the people of this territory. The directors are asking everyone who has a locker rented to contribute $5.00 per locker in order that the organization may have money to care for necessary expenses to maintain service at the locker plant.

The directors have done everything they can do to keep the locker plant open. Now they are calling upon the public to contribute enough to keep it open.

No one wants the locker plant to close. They didn't want the cheese plant to close either, but they made it close by lack of patronage. Now the locker plant is threatened, not from lack of patronage but from the necessity of maintaining an idle business along with itself. It would be inconvenient indeed for the 330 families who have lockers rented here to have to go somewhere else for such service. Let's keep it open. If it closes the entire town will suffer the effects of it.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

GM-UAW Sign Five-Year Contract;
June Grad Job Prospects 'Good';
Fuchs Puts Finger on U. S. Spy

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.

LABOR:

Historic Contract

An unprecedented five-year contract, hailed by labor and management alike as an important stabilization move in the labor world, has been signed by General Motors Corp. and the CIO United Auto Workers.

In the eyes of many, the most startling thing about the contract was not its terms and duration, but the fact that both management and labor are happy about it.

The agreement includes a four cents an hour increase, $100 pensions for retired workers, and a cost of living formula. The union estimated immediate benefits total 19 cents an hour.

Walter Reuther, UAW-CIO president, described the agreement as "the most significant development in labor relations since the mass production industries were organized."

Speaking for management, GM vice president Harry Anderson said the unusual and unexpected agreement was "historic in labor-management relations."

The contract is the longest ever written in the industry and assures the company of five years of uninterrupted production.

Labor observers are almost unanimous in their agreement that such contracts—long term ones—would exert a stabilizing influence on all industry.

In Washington, Secretary of Labor Tobin said the contract is "great news."

"It means that there is confidence in the future prosperity of this industry and its ability to produce so efficiently that it can continue to pay higher wages, and at the same time insure greater security for its workers when they are ill or retired," he said.

ESPIONAGE:

Successful Spy

The attorney general has announced the capture of another spy, Harry Gold, 39, of Philadelphia. As usual with the capture of a spy in the United States, the agent had operated very successfully, delivering, according to reports, top atomic bomb secrets to Russia.

Gold, whose family name is Goldnitsky, "has admitted his contacts with Dr. Klaus Fuchs, the imprisoned British atomic scientist, and has given a detailed account of his activities," the announcement said.

Gold was reported to have received written and oral information concerning atomic projects in this country and delivered them to agents of the Soviet Union.

"I thought that I would be helping a nation whose final aims I approved along the road to industrial strength. Particularly was I taken with the idea that whatever I did would go to help make living conditions far more advanced along the road as we know them here in the United States," Gold said.

The charge against Gold said that he did "conspire" to obtain "documents, writings, sketches, notes and information relating to the national defense and with intent and reason to believe that it was to be used to the injury of the United States and to the advantage of a foreign nation, to wit, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics."

A number of observers were beginning to wonder if the United States has any atomic secrets left.

DRAFT LAW:

Its 'Draftless'

By a vote of 216 to 11, the house extended the selective service law for two years and sent the measure to the senate for its approval. The measure has been called a "draftless" draft because it would be extended on a stand-by basis. Youths attaining their 18th birthdays would be required to register as at present, but they could not be ordered into uniform unless congress declared the existence of a national emergency requiring expansion of the armed forces.

Before passing the measure, Chairman Vinson of the armed services committee, told the house that "this nation must be prepared for an indefinite time in the future to counter promptly, with every means available, an attack by modern weapons."

On V-J Day the army air force had 37,000 combat planes.

QUINTUPLETS:

No Boy Friends

To millions in Canada and the United States it seems like only yesterday that the nation's newspapers carried headlines of the birth of the Dionne quintuplets. In the minds of many they are still little girls.

The rude awakening came with the recent observance of their 16th birthday. But Papa Dionne said the girls would have no boy friends for two more years.

Held as Spy

Harry Gold, 39, of Philadelphia, held under $100,000 bond, is charged with assisting the convicted British spy, Klaus Fuchs, in handing over vital atomic secrets to Russia.

GRADUATES:

Job Prospects Good

Four out of every five job-hungry June college graduates will be employed by October 1, though many will have to hunt harder and longer than did the class of '49. This is an average of the estimates of placement officials reporting in a survey of 128 colleges and universities made by Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

Actually 1950 will be a good year for the job-seeking college graduate—not as good as 1949, but much better than was considered normal in pre-war years, the report said.

Four out of every five schools in the survey—102—report that starting salaries are as high this year as in 1949—a few find the average slightly higher.

Initial salaries for business school and liberal arts seniors generally range from $175 to $275 a month; for engineering and other sciences, $225 to $350. A few outstanding seniors get higher offers, of course, ranging up to $400 a month for outstanding advanced-degree men, the survey finds.

While a few schools and individual departments reached their peak of senior enrollments in 1949, most campuses have considerably longer cap-and-gown parades this year, with more graduates seeking jobs. The vast majority of schools report their seniors to be pretty well prepared mentally for job competition—"more realistic," and "down to earth."

"Graduates realize that jobs are a little scarcer, but are putting more effort and thought into hunting work," reports the College of Business Administration of the University of Texas.

A great majority of employers contacted are optimistic, at least for the immediate business future. The University of Notre Dame, which finds employment demand "somewhat less than anticipated," observes, "The majority of employers with whom we have talked appear to feel that the period immediately ahead will be good for business, but many are still 'uncertain.'"

Says the University of Buffalo's report: "The feeling is that business is settling down. The boom is over, but prospects remain good on the whole."

Regarding the outlook for women graduates, Ohio State University reports, "The most opportunities are for girls who can combine secretarial skills with their major studies." Another typical comment on this phase, from the University of Chicago: "Professional types of positions continue to be scarce, but stenographic and secretarial opportunities are far in excess of our supply of women trained in those fields."

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

This Guy Khrustalev Must Have a Lot of Crust,
Making Fun of Poor Old Joe Stalin That Way

By BILLY ROSE

Generalissimo Joseph V. Stalin, Chairman, Council of Ministers, Kremlin, Moscow, U. S. S. R. Dear Joe:

If I may be so bold, I'd like to call your attention to a matter which is no laughing matter, even though it's been getting a lot of laughs lately. Namely, the recent efforts of your propaganda boys to win friends and influence people in this part of the world.

Take, for instance, last winter's lollipop about how your engineers were nudging mountains with uranium. We degenerate democrats, whether you know it or not, are a fact-minded people who thrive on details. When a fellow says he's Napoleon we want to see his birth certificate, and when he's atomized an Alp we want to see the hole in the ground.

Then there were the recent hum-dingers which claimed that every doodad from the wheel to the flying saucer had been invented by a Russian. Now, I can't doubt that many an important idea has been hatched between the Carpathians and the Urals, but when your propaganda machine gives the rest of the world credit for nothing but the Lindy hop and the bubonic plague, a lot of folks who might otherwise be friendly begin to titter—and even your legitimate claims get lost in the chuckle.

OUR MASS REACTIONS were neatly summed up a few months ago when The New Yorker cartooned a group of your agents in China discussing policy. "The main thing is to handle them with tact," said one of them. "Let them think they invented gunpowder." Some issues later, the same periodical ran another capacious cartoon in which several Politburocrats were debating the question, "Shall we invent television now or wait until they perfect color?"

As another, and admittedly picaresque, example of what I'm getting at, let me tell you about my own experiences with your editors and copywriters.

Every now and occasionally, as some idle-eye in your press division has apparently noticed, I take a playful poke at your regime in my column—an event which certainly doesn't figure to precipitate a crisis of state. But instead of filing it in the wastebasket and going about their business, your name-callers have twice made the mistake of answering back—and both times with the finesse of a lumberjack trying to tat.

The first time, a year ago, both Pravda and Izvestia reported I was a "white slaver" and that my humpty-dumpty little cabaret was "the biggest bordello in the world." And as if that weren't enough, they went on to say that my partners in this enterprise were John Edgar Hoover and Bernard M. Baruch.

Well, as might have been expected, this bombastic bombshell exploded nothing but giggles. Time magazine reprinted the item as a gag, my chorus girls threatened to picket the Russian consulate, and the syndicate which handles my stuff picked up a few more papers.

ALL OF WHICH should have taught your word-wasters a lesson, but it didn't. A few days ago, someone mailed me the February issue of your magazine, Navy Mir (New World), and—lo and surprise!—in it was an article by one P. Khrustalev which, by way of documenting the degeneracy of American culture, described me as "a gangster with three chins" who "murdered a man and grabbed his capital."

I took this, I assure you, as a plaudit rather than a potshot. On your way up, as I get it, you knocked off a couple of banks yourself, and since have undoubtedly knocked off an opponent or three. Khrustalev, it was evident, meant to be complimentary when he word-painted me in the image of Soviet Citizen No. 1.

All kidding aside, though, don't you think it's about time you sent for your typewriter assassins and pointed out that their releases are getting more howls than hosannas? And while you're at it, you might point out that Joe Goebbels' theory—the bigger the lie the more apt it is to be believed—only works with people who desperately want to believe the lie.

One thing more: I fraternally suggest you keep an eye on this Khrustalev fellow who said I had three chins. Such a man, in a reckless moment, might describe his premier as having two heads.

Sincerely,
Billy Rose

What's happened? Warren barked at Fargo, ignoring the incoherent babble of Mrs. Devonshire.

"It's gone," Fargo grated. "About an hour ago. I was standing behind Mrs. Devonshire in the reception line. Someone poked a gun in my back and told me to walk backwards. When I saw the fellow's face I knew it was The Flash, because he was a dead ringer for myself."

"A ringer for you!" Warren gasped. "What the devil do you mean?"

"I mean," said Fargo grimly, "that his disguise this time looked like me, generally speaking. He forced me into a closet and cracked me over the head. Naturally no one noticed that anything was happening, as Mrs. Devonshire was exhibiting her emerald at the time."

"Ten minutes ago I came to and began to kick on the door. Devonshire opened it. I rushed to Mrs. Devonshire and discovered that she had just missed her emerald.—The Flash has outsmarted us again!"

Warren slumped wearily into a chair. "Tomorrow," he groaned, "every newspaper in the city will have the story. It will be the most humiliating moment of my life."

Fargo smiled bitterly. "Every man has his weak point," he said. "Yours seems to be vanity."

Fargo crushed out his cigarette. "Have you taken any steps to prevent the robbery?"

"Fargo, as you know, the Flash's disguise is perfect. He'll appear at that party as a guest, or servant or someone with whom the Devonshires are but slightly acquainted. I want you to go up there early."

"The Devonshire party," Warren growled. The truth of Fargo's statement scored him. "Mrs. Devonshire is planning to wear that valuable emerald her husband brought her from Europe a month ago. The Flash states in this letter that he intends to steal the emerald and defies us to stop him."

This Is Your Paper
'A Little Late'
Means Trouble

By William R. Nelson

A PUBLICITY chairman of a prominent civic group rushes breathlessly into the newspaper office, her face a picture of worry.

"I hope you will forgive my being late with our news, but I simply forgot what day this is," she babbles. "I just have to get this announcement into the paper."

In a metropolitan newspaper office nothing could be done to help her. Deadline is deadline there. But, in the home town paper office it is sometimes difficult to be so rigid about deadlines. In the hypothetical instance cited, let us assume an exception is made. Here is what would probably happen.

The breathless chairman would go her way much relieved. Although received after deadline time, her organization's news would be in the paper, as usual.

At the newspaper, however, the chairman's tardiness has precipitated a chain reaction of upset schedules that will affect virtually every member of the staff.

An editor will have to handle another news story. One or more items already in type will have to be shortened to make room for the late story. Type already set will have to be discarded and more set. Page dummies will have to be altered. Lockup of page forms will be delayed. Printing and distribution will be off schedule.

This probably explains a great example of what happens when someone imposes late news upon the paper, is duplicated, even more disruptingly, whenever an advertiser fails to get copy to the paper on time.

As long as humans are prone to forget, have accidents, or otherwise be delayed in performing duties, it will probably be necessary for stores and newspapers to occasionally accept such impositions. But these disruptions of necessary schedules will be materially reduced, no doubt, when people fully realize what inconvenience their tardiness causes.

Whenever you have news or advertising for the paper, get it in well ahead of the deadline. You will get better service, and have the satisfaction of knowing that you did not impose upon the newspaper's people.

The Stupid Balk Change

BASEBALL was getting along well enough without any change in the balk situation. In the first place, 1948 was a record attendance year and 1949 was almost as good.

There was no complaint from the customers, ballplayers or umpires. The balk was where it belonged — out of sight. Then suddenly it popped back in again.

It is a type of rule violation that few ballplayers and practically no fans could ever understand.

Few umpires really do. They merely guess. The base runner who benefits from a balk gets something he hasn't earned. It is simply a blind gift.

Veteran pitchers are charged with balking four times in one game. As many as 20 or 30 balks are called in a week against various big-league teams.

No one seems to know how the plaque slipped in. Ford Frick says he was out for no vital change in calling balks. President Harbridge of the American League is even more outspoken along these lines.

There has been no public or private demand for any change. But suddenly this past spring in exhibition contests, the rubber-maker was on the scene.

The pest had arrived. Exhibition games were suddenly being rudely torn apart. Few umpires could tell you exactly how long a second was. Leo Durocher was one of the first managers to predict the upheaval that was to follow.

I believe Dizzy Dean called the turn correctly. "Brother," he said, "if one of them umpires called a balk on me, I'd just hand him the ball and my glove and say: 'After this, you are the pitcher. I'll do the umpiring.'"

Here is the main point: Who is responsible for all this trouble? The president of the two leagues, baseball's commissioner or the umpires? Certainly the players and fans are not.

Baseball has had enough trouble this spring with bad weather, television and badly conditioned ballplayers to carry a new burden.

The two big leagues are over $2,000,000, as we get the four statistics, below normal years. Many teams are playing before 1,500 and 2,500 spectators. Certainly the present balk situation isn't going to help an already soggy baseball outlook.

All Around the Map

There is at least one extra thing you can say about any Kentucky Derby. You meet practically everyone who is in any way identified with sports.

We kept track of only one day and the list included Louis B. Mayer; Bill Goetz; Harry Goetz; Don Hutson (all-time end); Paul Bryant; Kentucky's winning football coach; Wally Butts, Georgia's football coach; Billy Conn; Max Hirsch; Dick Andrade, Dallas sportsman; and too many others too mention.

The most interesting argument we waded into was the coming football situation, especially as it affected the Southeastern and the South-Western conferences.

In the first place, it was interesting to see Don Hutson and Paul Bryant together again. The last time I saw them together was against a great Stanford team in the Rose Bowl game of 1935.

Hutson and Bryant starred on Alabama's winning team that season and figured heavily in Stanford's defeat. Bryant was a great defensive end. Hutson was the finest offensive end football has ever known. He proved this later as a star on the Green Bay Packers.

Hutson, that day, gave the greatest exhibition of offensive end play I've ever seen. Don proved later against the Bears, Giants, etc., that this game was no fluke. Today he looks as if he could step into action tomorrow.

Both Paul Bryant of Kentucky and Wally Butts of Georgia agreed the Southeastern conference would be one of the best of the year ahead.

No Arcane Alibis

"A poor way to inspire confidence is to start in with an excuse," a sporting philosopher once wrote.

Christy Mathewson once said that a ballplayer needs an alibi to bolster his confidence. "When you can throw the blame on the breaks, you help your own esteem, often needed when a slump arrives."

There is something to this angle. But one competitor who never uses it is Eddie Arcaro.

WOMAN'S WORLD

This Season's Brides Will Wear Romantic Gowns

By Ertta Haley

ONCE A GIRL has that all-important diamond slipped on her finger, she starts to picture herself in the loveliest bridal dress she can find. She also pictures herself with all eyes, rather than just those of a few close friends, looking in her direction.

This season's bridal fashions are made to order for the girl who's dreaming of being the traditional white bride with all the appropriate finery. Layers and tiers of gossamer fabrics have been molded into heirloom type gowns. They are romantic looking with their trains and generous skirts.

Detailing plays an important role in the new gowns, too. You'll find collars scalloped, embroidered or appliqued for exquisite effects. Sleeves may be long and close-fitting, or they may be merest puffs for the decidedly summery dresses. The bride who wonders about the wisdom of buying the more expensive gowns with trains will be happy to note that many of these trains are attached to overskirts which can be detached. Then the dress can be used easily as a formal.

Short bridal dresses are seen frequently, too, and they're both lovely and practical. When well-styled, they can be just as romantic looking as the long gowns.

Gowns with a deep decolletage are modestly treated with a bit of lace that can be removed if the dress is to be used for evening. Another design uses a strapless wedding gown which comes with a long-sleeved net bolero that is slipped on for the ceremony and removed for wear as a dinner or dancing dress.

Head gear is much simpler than in many former seasons. Juliet caps are very popular when made of sheerest materials.

Variety of Materials Available for Gowns

The bride who wants to be married in the white satin tradition will choose that as her material for a wedding gown since there are many of these available. For those who want to go into other materials, there's a wide choice.

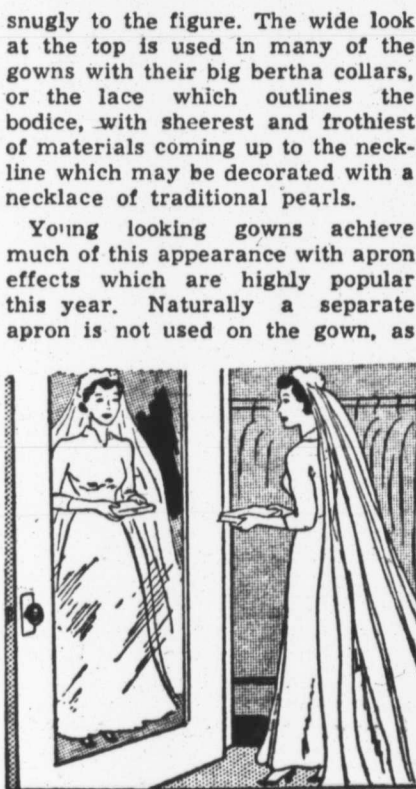

Lace is exceedingly popular this season, not only for the bridal gown itself, but for the bride's mother as well. For frothy fabrics that give the bride an ethereal look, the girl may choose mousseline, marquisette, nylon tulle or organdie.

Though skirts are full, most bodices and waistlines are molded

June Bride

This season's bride will wear sheer, frothy materials like this white nylon and marquisette bridal gown with its lace-edged peplum. The long sleeves are detailed in lace at the wrist, as is the ruffled bertha collar. A filmy fingertip veil with a simple head band is appropriate with this type of gown.

to this season's bride.

it is on dresses with the same effect, but is the result of using lace to outline a feature such as this.

Those brides who plan a small wedding may choose from organdie, batiste and organza dresses in white as well as pastels. These brides will even find some satin dresses in the shorter styles, if they look for them.

These may button down back or front depending upon the style of the dress. The sleeves may be long and slender, full and long, or tiny but puffed. Circular and bouffant skirts are used, but the waist is small and moulded.

Bridesmaids' Dresses Are Light, Billowing

Most of the bridesmaids' dresses now seen are light in coloring and billowing in silhouette. They range from those that look almost like the brides' gowns to those that bear no resemblance whatsoever to the bridal gown and look more like afternoon dresses for a garden party.

There's a great variety in length, the short type being favored. However, they are rarely shorter than just above the ankle.

Feminine in the extreme, the bridesmaids' dresses are worked out in organdie, net and marquisette. Here, too, you'll find chiffon and embroidered organdie.

One of the most popular details in the attendants' dresses is the use of the fichu or fichu-capelet style collar that is detachable so the dress may be worn for informal dancing easily.

Head gear may be simply a picture hat in one of the gossamer fabrics that go well with the dress, flowers or small, head hugging hats. The overall result is simplicity with exquisite femininity.

Include Essentials in Trousseau Wardrobe

The clothes the bride takes on her honeymoon depends largely on where it's to be spent, but there are some items that will fill the basic needs. First on the list is the going away costume itself. The bride will want to look lovely as she departs from her guests, and fashion is very helpful as well as practical.

Suits are popular, but equally so are the dress and redingote combinations, with dress and coat made of matching materials. Linen is a good choice, especially in the bleached shades.

The sleeveless or capelet styled dress may be worn as a casual dress without its matching coat, and the latter, of course, may be worn with other clothing.

One or two informal and very casual dresses may be included in the wardrobe, depending upon where you go. They'll prove practical around the home later on.

Jersey for both casual and beach clothing is highly favored because it packs readily and in a small space. Later on, it sheds wrinkles easily and helps you present a well-groomed appearance.

Bathing suits or other sports clothes such as slacks and tops or shorts and shirts should be included as necessary. These, naturally, will be used later this year and next.

Attractive, informal dresses for dinner, as well as afternoons, should find a place in the trousseau. You may be able to do with two of these at a minimum, but will need more if the honeymoon lasts longer than a week or ten days.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

The Piper Will Demand Payment

THE PROSPECT of a love affair, under the protection of marriage, is a very tempting thing to both men and women. A man can feel, "She knows I'm married," when he wants to cool off, and a woman has a corresponding privilege of retreat when she is either scared or tired of the situation.

This is, of course, an unfortunate thing for the honor of all concerned. But it is a situation for which there is no cure except the cure of fidelity and self-control. And the first things a love affair sweeps away are fidelity and self-control. There is no moment more thrilling in the life of a bored, restless wife than that in which she realizes that the attractive man from Boston, at Harriet's cocktail party, certainly was impressed. And when, the following day, she receives the inevitable note, with "the book we spoke of," or "a few of the roses you liked," her humdrum life takes on a new, iridescent color.

But in the background of these delicious forbidden affairs there lurks a piper, and in my long life I never knew one of them that did not end in a painful experience before he was paid.

Love Changed Life Take the case of one Madeleine Firkin, who lives in a Long Island City. Madeleine is 37. Some six years ago, restless and dissatisfied, she met the director of a church activity, a sort of guidance group games in the evenings and all go to church together on Sundays. I see him much less often, and when he does come he takes great notice of my girls and keeps them in the group.

"HEART BROKEN . . ." "Mrs. Norris, I was a heart-broken, disillusioned woman when I met Philip. I have given him six years of devotion. My heart will break if this is to be the end. Can you suggest to me an argument that will convince him that the honorable thing to do is to make me his wife? Surely for a man of high principle there is no other course."

Madeline, this is only a slight variation on the familiar theme of a burned-out love affair. They all end this way. Philip is done with love as far you are concerned, or no domestic comfort would keep him from offering you marriage. He is not the first man who has gratefully escaped.

Don't deceive yourself that those girls of yours are not entirely aware of what has been going on. They well may be one of the reasons why Philip doesn't want to follow up the affair. They could not possibly respect a stepfather who has been for years so flagrantly a white-sepulcher, and any fatherly advice or care he ever attempted to give them would ring very false in their ears.

No, you've had your fun, Madeleine, and that quiet figure standing in the back is your humiliated and angry and frustrated soul. The only advice I can give in this whole murky business is to other women, younger women, who are just beginning to play the fascinating game of extra-marital flirtations.

To these I would say: look around at your own home. Think what you have, in husband, children, home, friends, love and self-respect. Don't lose them all for the sake of a man who will be just like other men when the glamour of the love affair is worn away. He will seek escape like the others.

Hope Revealed For Polio Cure

Research Spurs Belief That Control Possible

NEW YORK, N. Y. — The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis says that research for a polio cure was "on solid ground." The foundation emphasized that it still was impossible to promise a practical means of control within a given number of years. But it added:

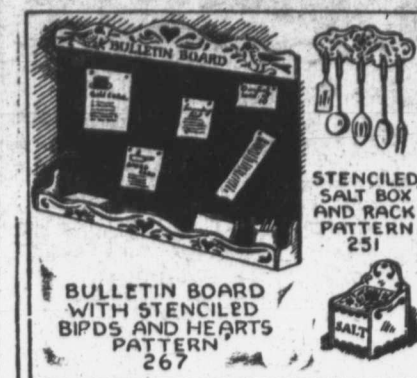

"The foundation's program of research has developed scientific reasons for the belief that such control is attainable, and it has promising leads that indicate that drugs, serums and vaccines against polio are all within the realm of possibility."

"It appears likely that 1949 will prove to have been a turning point in the history of infantile paralysis," said the foundation's president, Basil O'Connor. "We may be able to halt the rising tide of polio in the not too distant future."

The predictions were contained in the foundation's annual report — which also told the story of 1949, the country's worst polio epidemic year in history.

The report showed that the foundation aided 80 per cent of the 42,375 new patients last year, sent out a record number of respirators—803—to hospitals, and spent more than $1 million for polio research.

The president, Mrs. Frank Beights, presided at the meeting which began by singing the class song, Mrs. McDonald at the piano, and Mrs. T. C. Wilson leading. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Richey.

Mrs. Chester Beights, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting. Miss Annie Jarratt gave the treasurer's report. Social service report was given by Mrs. Mahon. The president named all of the committees for the new year as follows: Year book: Mrs. W. S. Thomas, Mrs. Marshall Bruce, and Miss Annie Jarratt; Social Service: Mrs. Joe Bennett, Mrs. J. D. Sunday Breakfast
Add new interest to an old favorite by serving sliced bananas between two or three helpings of golden French toast, made from nutritious enriched bread. Then smother all with maple syrup, jelly, or confectioners' sugar. Crisp bacon, hot pork sausages, or fried ham make this tempting fare perfect for Sunday morning breakfasts or daily lunches. Try it with other fresh and canned fruits too. It's a real treat.

Extending Soups
Add to the appetite appeal and nutritive value of your favorite soups by serving them with croutons made from crusts of enriched bread. Simply cut the crusts into cubes, and saute them in butter or margarine until golden brown, adding onion and celery salt for flavor.

Good Dessert
Here's a gorgeous dessert for your family. And it's so simple. Slice donuts crosswise and place one half in the bottom of each dish. Cover with maple syrup and add the other donut half. Fill and top with more maple syrup and garnish with cherry or walnut.

Word of Invitation
The engraved invitation to the ceremony always requests the "honor of your presence" while the invitation to the reception requests the "pleasure of your company."

FOR CHAFFE A SOOTHING DRESSING MOROLINE PETROLEUM JELLY 10¢

HED-LYTE
AFFORDS RELIEF FOR HEAD-ACHE AND HANGOVER, MUSCULAR ACES AND NEURALGIA PAINS. USE AS DIRECTED. SOLD AT DRUGSTORES FOR OVER 4 YEARS.

Mr. Trout

C. W. Trout, of Lebanon, Tenn., well-known manager of square dances and operator of several trucks, now joins in a few steps of the dancing, much to the amazement of friends who know how severe aches and pains of neuritis have made him almost an invalid for some time.

This blessed relief came to Mr. Trout as HADACOL helped overcome his deficiencies of Vitamins B₁, B₂, Niacin and Iron. This relief came to him after these horrible pains had haunted him, making it possible for him to carry on his business activities only through sheer determination. He didn't let aches and pains kill his spirits, however.

Then, one of the musicians at his square dances brought him a large economy-size bottle of HADACOL. Gave Him HADACOL.

"I am tired of seeing you suffer with these aches and pains," said the musician. "I bought you this big bottle myself because I want to see you start getting well."

Here is Mr. Trout's own story: "I have suffered with aches and pains of neuritis for some time. I have tried dozens of preparations but have had little relief. My greatest pains have been in my knees and ankles and recently there have been pains in my wrists. One of the greatest horrors was to be unable to sleep at night. Since taking HADACOL I have been able to sleep and it is wonderful to get rid of those terrible pains in the knees, ankles and wrists. I have found in HADACOL the only relief that has come after years of search."

You'll Feel Great... with the first few bottles you take, or your money back. There is only one HADACOL and it is sold on a strict money-back guarantee. So give this remarkable HADACOL medicine a chance to help you if you suffer from deficiencies of Vitamins B₁, B₂, Niacin and Iron. Remember that HADACOL is amazingly different and amazingly effective because it treats the real cause of such troubles. Make up your mind to take HADACOL regularly. Refuse substitutes. Insist on the genuine. You can't lose a cent, because it's sold on a strict money-back guarantee. Only $1.25 for Trial size. Large Family or Hospital size, $3.50. If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.—Adv.

Guide Vegetable Canning With This Chart (See Recipes Below)

Canning Vegetables

THOSE GARDENS will soon be bursting with lovely green, yellow and red vegetables which you'll want to speed onto your canning shelves for healthful eating this fall and winter. Best results can be achieved when you have the kitchen ready, the night before, to take in the produce early in the morning while the dew is still fresh on them.

Whether you pick your own vegetables or buy them from somewhere else, try to get them well on their way to canning within two hours. Vegetables which have been picked for longer than eight hours before canning do not give as tender or high quality canned products.

Can only young beets and carrots. Store the older ones in a cellar or pit.

Certainly the work is made easier if the kitchen is all set for action. This means that you have your jars freshly washed and scoured, sitting in tubs or large kettles ready to sterilize. You can put them on to boil when you go out to pick the vegetables.

Have a work table ready with colanders, knives and spoons where you can work on the vegetables after they're washed.

The pressure cooker should have been checked for use to see that the gauge is accurate. It should be clean and fitted with a rack, ready to receive the jars after they're packed.

Have a large kettle ready on the work table or range so that vegetables can be pre-cooked. Some women still use cold pack, that is pack the jars without any cooking of the vegetable. However, most women say they have more luck with precooking since this shrinks the vegetable before packing and also sets the color better.

Choosing Vegetables
 IT'S EASY to determine whether a vegetable is right for canning just by careful inspection. Here are tips to guide you.

Asparagus stalks should be green for the greater part of their length, inasmuch as the white parts are woody. Choose firm stalks.

Lima beans or snap (green) beans should be young and tender. Both types should look green and fresh. Green beans should snap readily when bent.

Kernels on corn should be plump and full of milk. The husk should be fresh and green. In greens, choose those with tender, young and unbruised leaves. Never use wilted leaves.

Pea pods should be bright and full. Avoid the puffy pods with small peas. Peas, when shelled should be tender.

LYNN SAYS:
 Treat Pressure Cooker Like Fine Machine
 One of the best things about the pressure cooker is the accuracy with which it processes foods. Treat it carefully so that the accuracy can be maintained.

Guard the cooker against blows, as these may dent it or break it. If the pressure gauge is jarred or damaged, it will lose its accuracy. Keep the sealing surface clean

Follow These Directions

WHEN VEGETABLES are brought in for washing and preparation, have your pressure cooker all ready to use. The rack should be in place, the safety valve assembled and the petcock open. The jars should be ready, too, after washing, in a pan of hot water.

Have the teakettle or other vessel with boiling water ready, too, as this is the liquid you'll need for filling vegetable jars.

Wash and prepare the vegetables to fill the jars you have.

Pre-cook the vegetable for the specified length of time, then ladle into the jars immediately. Add enough boiling water to the jar so that it reaches to within 1/4 to 1/2 inch of the top. Add salt to the jar, in the proportion of 1/2 teaspoon to pints and 1 teaspoon for quarts.

Run a spatula around the inside of the jar to release air bubbles. Wipe the sealing surface of the jars with a clean cloth.

Adjust the jar closure, using manufacturers' directions. These vary with different caps, so it's smart to read directions for the particular one you're using.

Place jars in cooker, seeing that they do not touch, and that there is enough room for the hot air to circulate. There should be enough water in the cooker to cover the bottom or the rack. Adjust the lid on the cooker, and tighten clamps as directed by manufacturer.

Processing Under Pressure

TURN THE heat under the cooker on, and let steam pour from the petcock for 7 to 10 minutes. This is necessary for releasing the air from the cooker so that when you do start the actual pressure cooking, you'll have correct temperature.

Close the petcock and let the cooker come to the desired pressure. It's important that this be maintained, as fluctuations of a pound or two either way several times during processing will drain liquid from the jars, thus giving an unattractive look to them, as well as leaving them dry to the point where they are uncovered.

Process according to vegetable chart given above.

Turn heat off and remove to a cooler place until the gauge registers zero, then release petcock, clamps and cover. Always stay far enough away so that the steam does not burn you as you open the cooker.

When you want to clean the petcock and safety valve, use a pipe cleaner, running it back and forth through the openings. Never use toothpicks as these may break and clog the cooker.

Never store the pressure cooker away without insulating it against any moving or dust and dirt. Wrap well in newspaper and cloths.

It's best to store the lid separately from the cooker, so that no

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons
 By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN
 SCRIPTURE: Malachi
 DEVOTIONAL READING: Malachi 4: 1-6

Help for Our Times

Lesson for June 18, 1950

FOR TIMES that are dull, times without hope, Malachi is the prophet. When he lived the exile was over; but it was no golden age. In the dingy little city of Jerusalem, rich and beautiful no longer, lived only a comparative handful of rather poor people, dragging out a monotonous existence. To these people, living in discouraging times, Malachi had, and has, a message from God.

His prophecies do not have the bitter tang of Amos nor the melancholy of Hosea, the grandeur of Isaiah, the dramatic power of Jeremiah or the eerie visions of Ezekiel. But with inspired common-sense, he offers in the name of God a simple remedy with four ingredients.

Better Leaders
SPEAKING DIRECTLY to the leaders of the people, namely the priests, Malachi condemns them for not really taking stock in the thing they were doing. How we need that today! If the church today in any place is dead, you may be sure there are some dead leaders. Dead from the neck up, that is. And not necessarily the preachers.

Many a good preacher breaks his heart for lack of support. How many men and women, in your church, can the minister count on to fill in where they are needed, without making up a dozen reasons why they "can't" do it?

Why do Christians talk and pray as if their religion were all-important, but act as if everything else came first?

Law Observance
ANOTHER THING for which Malachi pleads is law observance. (Eg. 2:8; 3:5) They did not need new laws, for they had good ones. What they needed was to obey the laws they had. This again is what our times need. We have so many laws now that only an expert can keep up with them. No civilized nation could live, to be sure, under the unchanged statutes of a generation ago.

Nevertheless, if all the legislatures in America were to resolve to pass no more laws for five years, and if for five years the energy, time and money spent ordinarily on getting up new laws were put in on educating the people in the laws now in existence, and in fostering law observance and in preventing and punishing crimes, ours would be a better country.

The Unbroken Home
AGAIN, Malachi stands for the unbroken home. He knows that no country can be strong when its homes are weak. (2:10-17.) In the year 1948 there were about 420,000 divorces in the United States, and 1.80 million marriages.

That is a divorce rate of about 23 per cent. In some states the percentage of divorce is even higher. Indeed, in one large midwestern city it was announced in the papers about two years ago that the marriages had "caught up with" the divorces. I.e., they were at last having more marriages than divorces! This was an extreme case.

To say nothing else about it, 420,000 divorces and 12,000 desertions means that in the United States alone there are at least 432,000 persons who have no regard for the most solemn promises.

Support The Church
FIRST AND LAST, Malachi asks for better support of the church. You need the church, of course; but then the church needs you. There is need for better leadership in the first place, and better support from the common man. Few persons want to live in a community without churches; yet a mere church building will not effect community life in the least. A beautiful building and a tall white spire are not a church.

The only church which will help a neighborhood is one in which the neighborhood takes an active part, a church where neighbors together worship God and where they are inspired to plans and acts of service for their fellow-men.

The main object of the church is not to shore up the country; still if you want a better country, one of the best ways to support it is to support the Christian church. For of all the institutions in the nation, the church is the only one devoted to the purpose of transforming human lives.

Historic Doubters
 When the Italian Galileo 300 years ago dared to question an age-old theory by Aristotle that heavy objects fall faster than light ones, learned men scoffed, scolded and finally brought Galileo to trial for his beliefs. So, he climbed the Leaning Tower of Pisa, dropped a half-pound weight and a 100-lb. cannon ball. They fell together. Even then, the wise men ran home to point out the exact page and line in Aristotle's writings to "prove" Galileo wrong.
