Bond issue defeated

■ MISD's bond issue was voted down by 5,708 Midlanders, or 57.6 percent of those who cast ballots.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Voters resoundingly pummeled a $24.5 million Midland Independent School District bond issue Saturday, leaving stunned school officials saying they may have to call another election within three months.

Of the 9,911 who voted, about 57.6 percent, or 5,708, opposed the issue, which would have financed a new junior high, elementary school, alternative education center and other school building projects.

"I think voters are basically saying they don't want to pay the taxes to pay for the facilities," Superintendent Joe Baressi said. "We need to analyze what happened and why it happened.

"Our needs are still there."

Baressi blamed the defeat on public apprehension over the proposed site for the junior high, an increased local property tax burden this year and a ballot containing too much for voters to chew at once.

Ken Morrison, MISD school board president, said trustees may have to rethink the proposed site for the junior high, which would have been built near the intersection of North Loop 250 and Texas Highway 349.

The issue could come before the board for discussion at Tuesday's meeting, he said.

"I'm not going to say it will be done," Morrison said of a site change. "It will split the board and the community and that's what we've tried to avoid doing.

"We've already sunk so much cost into that site that it's hard to abandon it."

The proposed site, donated by the Abell-Hanger Foundation and selected by trustees in March, became controversial after a group of residents said a new junior high would make more sense on the growing west side.

Morrison said Saturday's defeat will delay the proposed projects, slated for completion by September 1992, by a year. By then, a pupil population bubble now in elementary school will explode into junior high, aggravating an already overcrowded situation.

Morrison said the loss could mean having to purchase more portable buildings to handle overcrowding.

"I don't think people realize how big a need there is for that school," he said. "I thought it would be a close election either way it went."

Saturday's bond package included a new elementary school, additions to 11 elementary schools, completion of Bush Elementary School, and Lee High School and Sam Houston Elementary School library expansions. The issue also included 29 classroom additions to seven elementary schools and science lab renovations at Lee and Midland high schools and Lee Freshman High School.

There were 4,203 voters, or 42.4 percent of the ballots, who favored the bond issue.

Morrison said trustees will consider breaking up the proposals into three or four bond issues, the first of which could be held within three months. A board vote

Scalding probed

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston school and police officials are investigating the apparent scalding of a 12-year-old special education student at an elementary school, according to Houston Chronicle reports.

The child, who is severely retarded, reportedly had soiled his clothes Thursday and left class with two teacher's aides to be washed. When he returned, officials discovered his hand was scalded, Houston police spokesman Rick Retz said.

The child, a resident of Thomas Care Center, a nursing home for severely handicapped or retarded children, was listed in good condition at Hermann Hospital Friday night with second- and third-degree burns on his hand.

The teachers' aides have been removed from the classroom pending the investigation, Houston Independent School District spokeswoman Ria Griffin said.

Aviators fly for benefit of memorial

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Aircraft blasting out violent streams of prop wash and jet blast reaffirmed mankind's fascination with flight — slow and fast, straight ahead and upside down.

It was the Vietnam Memorial Air Show which began Saturday and resumes at 1 p.m. today at Big Spring Air Park. Gates to the airfield open at 10 a.m. Proceeds form the air show will go toward the proposed Big Spring's Vietnam memorial.

Above the airfield and on the flight line, things American prevailed, although, among the aircraft, there were strong influences of the English and French.

U.S. Army Golden Knights parachutist Mark French prepared to join his jump-mates aboard the American-made Lockheed C-130 Hercules transport for a sailing jump in opening the two-day air show.

"It's fun," said the 33-year-old paratrooper from Fort Bragg, N.C. "It's something I've always wanted to do — jump."

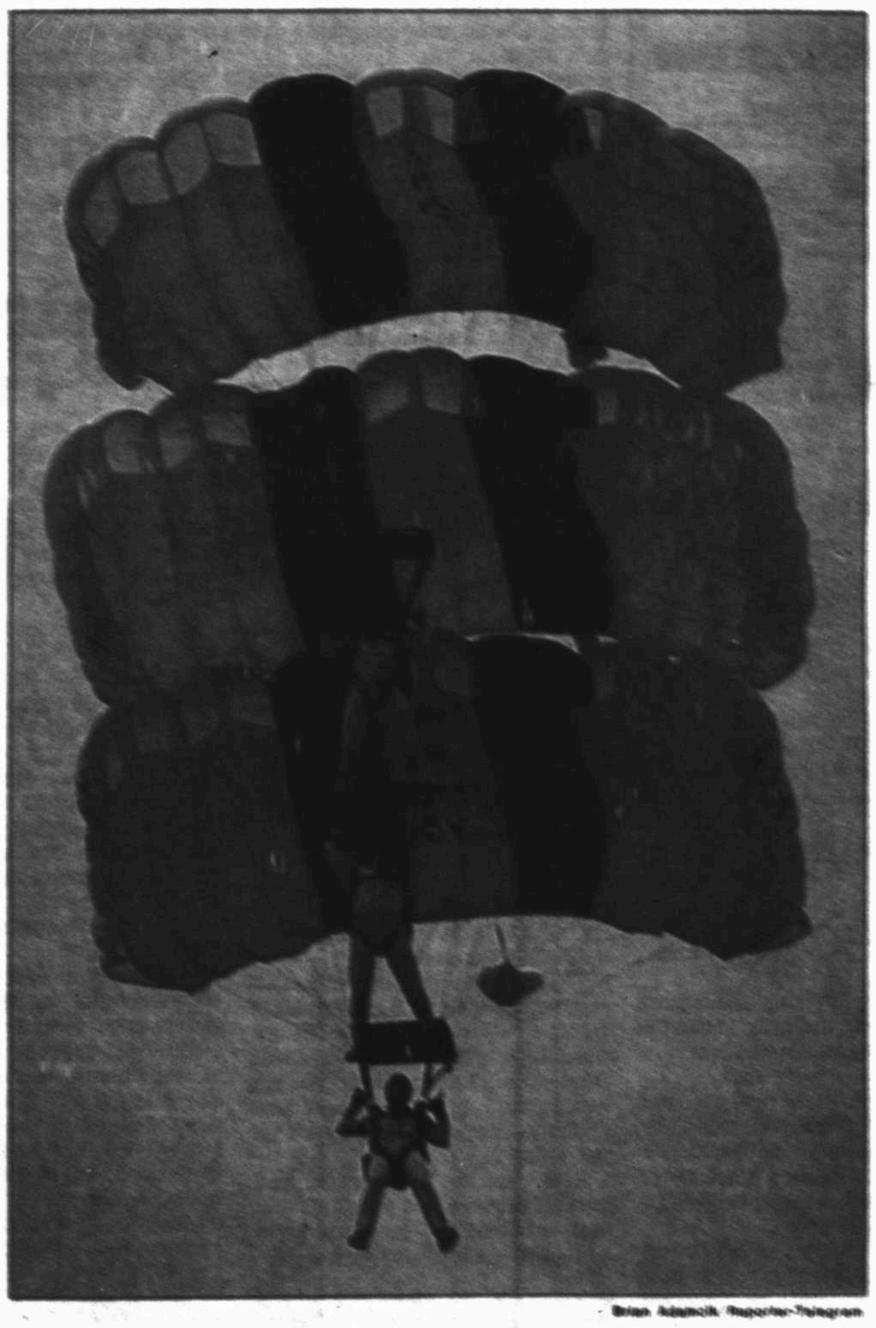

He figured that parachuting — aerial sailing — is at least as safe as flying in powered airplanes.

"All of those (military) jets over there have ejector seats," said French, "and parachuting may be as safe or safer than flying."

Now, he admitted that there is a bit of drama in his jumping job.

"It's dangerous," French said. "Anything to do with aviation is dangerous." Still, he spoke of the freedom associated with flying and parachuting. "You're in control, and are able to determine your own

Bush vetoes government spending bill

■ While budget negotiators remain deadlocked over the federal deficit, Bush vetoes a bill that would have allowed the government to operate for another week.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush successfully vetoed legislation Saturday to restore the government's ability to spend money and presided over the gradual shutdown of non-essential services in a confrontation spawned by deadlock over the federal deficit.

Negotiators from the White House and Congress resumed negotiations on a package of spending cuts and tax increases that could win approval and end the impasse, but not before Sunday night at the earliest.

But in the meantime, the president said he would no longer abide "business as usual" by the Democratic-controlled Congress. He vetoed a bill that would have permitted the government to operate normally for another week, and a few hours later, the House failed to override the veto.

The 260-138 vote override was six short of the two-thirds majority required. On the vote, 235 Democrats and 25 Republicans voted to overturn Bush's veto and nine Democrats and 129 Republicans voted to uphold it.

"Responsible congressional action to reduce the deficit can be delayed no longer," Bush said in his veto message.

Democrats denounced the president's decision. "Unnecessary, unjustified and harmful," said House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash.

But under the eyes of tourists packing the visitors' galleries because many federal tourist attractions in town were closed, the House mustered only the 260 votes to override, well short of the two-thirds vote needed.

Reflecting the importance of the budget fight and lawmakers' recent spate of long hours, the debate was unusually acrimonious.

"Mr. Speaker, there are snakes loose in the chamber," shouted Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., after Democrats hissed during the reading of Bush's veto message.

But Republicans were hissing moments later after Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., said Bush's veto resulted in "treating 2 million federal workers like Saddam Hussein treats his so-called guests in Iraq."

Feelings ran so high that angry conservative Republicans blocked an effort by leaders of both parties to recess the House for two hours so lawmakers could have dinner while budget negotiators tried to work out a compromise.

Both the House and Senate adjourned for the evening after the House vote, which made any Senate override action moot, but scheduled Sunday afternoon sessions to be available to consider any new budget proposals. Bush, meanwhile,

U.N. stockpiling food for gulf refugees

Associated Press

The United Nations, fearing the Persian Gulf crisis might last through the winter, announced Saturday it will stockpile food for another 120,000 refugees from Iraq and Kuwait and buy winter tents for those stranded in camps.

Saudi Arabia recalled its ambassador to Jordan, diplomatic sources said, in another reflection of souring relations between the Arab neighbors since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2.

Saudi Arabia, which requested a U.S.-led multinational force to help defend it after the Iraqi invasion, expelled Jordanian diplomats and cut oil and aid to Jordan last month because Amman had not strongly protested Iraq's actions.

U.S. officials, meanwhile, said the 2-month-old U.S. troop buildup in Saudi Arabia is virtually complete. But the officials in Washington and Saudi Arabia said the U.S. forces still lack the firepower and supplies necessary to launch a successful ground offensive against Iraqi troops in Kuwait.

Duke loses despite strong showing at polls

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sen. J. Bennett Johnston won a fourth term Saturday, defending off a strong challenge from state Rep. David Duke, a former Klan leader who so rattled the political establishment that the endorsed Republican quit the race.

With 83 percent of the vote counted, Johnston, a Democrat, had 590,824 votes or 53 percent and Duke, a Republican, had 489,359 votes or 44 percent. Two minor Democratic candidates divided the remaining 3 percent: Nick Accardo had 16,671 votes or 1 percent and Larry Crowe had 16,326 votes or 1 percent.

Duke

In Louisiana's open primary system, all candidates run against each other regardless of party affiliation. Had neither captured a majority, Johnston and Duke, a first-term legislator who was a Ku Klux Klan grand wizard in the 1970s, would have met in a Nov. 6 runoff.

Despite his defeat, Duke's surprisingly large vote showed the popular appeal of many of his ultra-right positions and seemed certain to boost his political ambitions. Duke claims he has put his anti-black, cross-burning days behind him, but calls himself a champion of civil rights for white people. He advocates ending affirmative action and cracking down on welfare abusers.

GULF: Pentagon says U.S. troop buildup almost complete

(From 1A)

Britain's armed forces minister, Archibald Hamilton, said in Dharhran, Saudi Arabia, he expected Britain's 7th Armored Brigade, with about 7,000 troops and 120 Challenger tanks, to be in place in the Saudi desert by early November, alongside U.S. Marine units already there. The unit won fame as the Desert Rats during World War II North African campaigns.

Also Saturday, Italy's remaining two diplomats abandoned its diplomatic mission in Kuwait and half of Britain's delegation left the emirate after Iraq cut supplies and power to the compounds.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein reportedly assured a top Soviet diplomat that Soviets in Iraq may leave the country soon.

The official Soviet news agency Tass reported the assurance, which it said was made by Saddam to Kremlin envoy Yevgeny Primakov. Primakov left Baghdad Saturday after talking with Saddam and delivering a message from President Mikhail Gorbachev.

About 5,000 Soviets have been prevented from leaving Iraq since the invasion, although they are not among the Westerners being held as "guests" at hotels and strategic sites in an Iraqi effort to deter Western attack.

Hundreds of thousands of foreigners have fled Iraq and Kuwait since the invasion, and U.N. and Jordanian officials fear 80,000 more refugees may arrive in Jordan this week.

In Amman, U.N. Undersecretary-General Mohammad Essaafi said the U.N.'s disaster relief agency and Jordanian authorities are preparing food stockpiles to feed 120,000 more people. Essaafi said the agency also is buying 7,600 winter tents to replace the summer tents now set up in refugee camps around the country.

"If there's a worsening of the situation in Iraq and Kuwait, we might expect an increased flow of evacuees, particularly Egyptian nationals, who might cross in very large numbers," he added.

Some 422,400 refugees, mainly Egyptian and Asians, have been flown out of Jordan in more than 1,796 flights by military and civilian aircraft since Aug. 5, Jordanian civil aviation officials said.

Another 60,000 have been flown home from Turkey and hundreds of thousands, mainly Egyptians, have been taken home by sea.

In other developments:

■ Iraqi radio, monitored in Britain, said Iran and Iraq would hold talks this week on reopening embassies in Tehran and Baghdad. An Iraqi delegation will arrive in Iran Tuesday. The two nations fought a war from 1980-88. Baghdad now seeks to persuade Iran to help it skirt U.N. economic sanctions on Iraq.

■ Jordan announced an energy rationing program, effective next Saturday, due to Saudi Arabia's recent cutoff of oil supplies.

■ The British Foreign Office said a 46-year-old Scottish man has died in Kuwait after suffering an undisclosed illness. William Norrie Atack, a scientist, had worked in Kuwait for eight years as a scientific officer at the Ministry of Public Health, his family said.

MISD: Voters defeat $24.5 million bond issue

(From 1A)

Baressi said another bond issue would mean waging a more visible campaign to educate the public on MISD facility needs.

"We've got to work longer and harder to get some support," Baressi said, adding that a bond issue is the only way to financially support the proposed construction projects.

Dianne Anderson, a member of a movement against the bond issue, said she was shocked that it failed.

"I really, in talking to people, thought there were going to be people from a couple of schools coming out and really voting for it," Ms. Anderson said. "I thought we had done too little too late."

She and others in her group accused MISD of not looking at the long-range education needs of the city when planning the projects.

"I'm glad that the people who see the whole picture came out and voted it down," Ms. Anderson said.

Ernest Angelo Jr., a former mayor who spoke out publicly against the bond issue last week, said Midlanders have sent MISD a clear message about the proposed projects.

"I don't take a lot of pleasure in seeing a bond issue defeated," Angelo added.

Angelo and others, though, called the proposals extravagant and a waste of taxpayer money. He suggested that an alternative school could be housed in existing facilities rather than the planned $1.7 million building.

BUSH: Government spending legislation vetoed motored to Camp David for the night.

The federal shutdown presumably would increase pressure on the negotiators trying to piece together a plan to replace the five-year, $500 billion package of tax increases and spending cuts that was defeated in the House after midnight Thursday night.

House GOP Leader Bob Michel of Illinois said he hoped Congress and the White House could break the gridlock before the end of the three-day Columbus Day weekend, when millions of federal workers face the threat of furloughs.

There was no immediate word from congressional leaders on their next move. One possible step was to pass legislation replenishing the government's coffers, but coupled with across-the-board spending cuts mandated by the Gramm-Rudman anti-deficit law. Bush hinted he might accept such a measure, which would give negotiators time to craft a larger deficit-reduction package.

The earlier deficit-reduction plan went down in a crescendo of criticism — with Republicans expressing anger over tax hikes and Democrats rebelling over $60 billion in cuts in the Medicare program that pays for health care for the elderly.

Bush and the Democratic leaders of Congress had jointly forged that agreement — and the president said he still supported it.

But at the same time, his decision to veto the short-term funding bill and proceed with the shutdown of non-essential government services meant a high-stakes political showdown was unfolding with the Democratic majorities of Congress.

Asked how long he was willing to keep government doors locked, he replied:

"It's not a question of how long I can take it," Bush said. "It's a question of how long Congress can take it. Congress is where the action is."

The White House last week estimated the fiscal 1991 budget deficit would be about $294 billion. The budget agreement the House rejected would have cut the deficit $40 billion this year and $500 billion over five years.

Bush said he was "very sorry" if anyone was inconvenienced by the shutdown, which was felt first at the Washington Monument, Lincoln Memorial, Smithsonian museums and popular sites in the nation's capital.

In fact, the early disruptions were minimal, confined largely to government tourist attractions.

The full impact of the shutdown of non-essential services was not likely to be felt until after Monday's Columbus Day holiday for federal workers. And the administration said it had the authority to maintain essential services such as the military, air traffic safety control and prison control.

Despite his criticism aimed at Congress, Bush seemed to offer the possibility for a fresh compromise on taxes.

Parks services curtailed

Associated Press

Those driving hundreds of miles to Big Bend and Guadalupe national parks were met with an unpleasant surprise Saturday resulting from a federal shutdown prompted by the budget stalemate.

National park visitors in Texas were turned away from seashores and mountain lodges Saturday as they were among the first to feel the effects of the federal inability to hammer out a budget.

The full impact of the shutdown of non-essential services was not likely to be felt until after Monday's Columbus Day holiday for federal workers. And the Bush administration said it had the authority to maintain essential services such as the military, air traffic safety control and prison control.

Spokesman Roy Given of Big Bend National Park said the park's visitors center was closed noon Saturday. Services such as guided walks and nightly programs conducted by rangers were cancelled, and no back country or river permits were being issued, he said.

"We've sent the vast majority of our weekend people home," Given said, adding that the park also stopped collecting its entrance fee Saturday.

He said that the park had begun notifying visitors that the campgrounds would be closed as of 6 p.m. today.

"The park has turned into a day-use area," Given said. "Visitors can continue to come in and see the sights."

For now, the park hotel, restaurant and stables will remain open, but that could change if the federal government fails to finalize a budget soon, he said.

"We are keeping a skeleton crew to handle emergencies and protect the resources," Given said. "We can respond to fire, emergency medical situations and search and rescue, but we are limited.

"If the situation continues, we will have to cut back even more."

Guadalupe Mountain and Carlsbad parks officials could not be reached for comment. No one at those parks' headquarters was answering telephones.

DUKE: Former member of KKK loses election to help Johnston gain the majority he needed to claim a fourth term. Bagert and national Republican leaders feared that party candidates across the country might suffer political damage if Duke kept his candidacy alive into November under the GOP banner.

Bagert's name remained on the ballot, but under state law his votes could not be counted as part of the official tally. Despite the law, clerks in 22 parishes around the state reported 7,266 votes for Bagert — mostly absentee ballots cast before he dropped out.

That total would not have been enough to push Johnston below 50 percent, but it raised the possibility that had all Bagert's votes been counted, a runoff might have resulted between Johnston and Duke.

Johnston, 58, had carried a strong lead in the polls, but analysts said the level of support of Duke, a first-term state representative who was a Ku Klux Klan grand wizard in the 1970s, might not be accurately reflected.

Bagert had run a distant third throughout the campaign despite President Bush's endorsement.

Eight Republican senators and Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Jack Kemp endorsed Johnston.

A poll released Wednesday by Mason-Dixon Opinion Research of Columbia, Md., showed Johnston was the choice of 53 percent of voters surveyed. Duke drew 26 percent, while Bagert polled 8 percent, with 13 percent undecided. The poll of 825 registered voters had a margin of error of 3.5 percent.

Duke, 40, threatened to sue over absentee ballots cast before Bagert got out, arguing the voters should have another chance. About 62,000 absentee ballots — a state record — were cast.

A proposed state lottery was passing with about 69 percent.

In U.S. House races, Democrats were hoping to gain a majority of the state's eight-member delegation, now split 4-4.

In the 4th District of northwest Louisiana, Jim McCrery, a Republican, held a 56-44 lead against state Sen. Foster Campbell, a Democrat who previously lost to McCrery, in a race dominated by debate over abortion.

In New Orleans' 2nd District, 12 candidates vied to succeed retiring Democrat Lindy Boggs, the only white House member to represent a majority black district. With about a third of the precincts reporting, the top two vote-getters state Sen. William Jefferson of New Orleans and Marc Morial, both Democrats.

In the 8th District of central Louisiana, Republican Clyde Holloway was picking up 54 percent of the vote in a race with two Democratic state senators, Joe McPherson and Cleo Fields.

Incumbents Bob Livingston, a Republican, and Jerry Huckaby and Billy Tauzin, both Democrats, easily won re-election to the House.

Other incumbents were having no problems. Rep. Richard Baker, R-Baton Rouge, was unopposed.

Other races included the battle for the New Orleans district attorney's office.

Incumbent Harry Connick, acquitted over the summer of federal charges of illegally helping a bookmaker by returning copies of his gambling records, was picking up 63 percent of the vote against two opponents in early returns.

destiny."

French "flies" lightly — suspended from his airfoil-canopy called a parachute.

Parachuting opened the air show.

Tex Edwards mostly flies "big iron" aircraft: big, loud, sturdy, and mostly of World War II vintage. His father, Connie Edwards, and their fellow "big-iron" West Texas aviator, Howard Pardue, do likewise.

Pardue, who is a Breckenridge oilman, flew aerobatic maneuvers in his American-made F4U Corsair fighter with U.S. Marine Corps colors.

Tex Edwards, 18, flew in the 2,000-horsepower Grumman TBM Avenger, an American-made aircraft designed as a torpedo bomber.

"It could carry about the same bomb load that the (Boeing) B-17 (Flying Fortress) could," said Edwards. The B-17 was developed, in the United States, in the 1930s.

"It's just real heavy on the controls," he said of the TBM. "It's real fun to fly. It's like flying a truck."

And on takeoff, the powerful, lumbering airplane that gulps about 50 gallons of fuel per hour can operate out of a 1,000-foot airstrip. But the throttle has to be "pushed to the fire wall" and the flaps extended, Tex Edwards said.

His 56-year-old father, Big Spring rancher Connie Edwards, flew around his American-made Grumman Albatross amphibian with U.S. Coast Guard markings. With him, as co-pilot, in a sea-rescue exercise performed by flight crews in a French-made Dolphin helicopter and a French Falcon jet airplane was Coast Guard pilot Elvis Thomas.

"It looks mean and aggressive, and it's a bulky-looking aircraft," Thomas said of the twin-engine Albatross, "but it handles like a pussycat."

New Mexico aerobatic pilot Jim Franklin donned his mysteriously black "Zar" costume and flew spectacular routines, including the hammerhead stall, in his American-made twin-engine Ted Smith Aerostar, which he dubs "Starship Pride."

Lynne Geringer, who is on the U.S. World Aerobatic Team, flew the BD-5J jet aircraft. The aircraft is billed as the "world's smallest" manned jet aircraft and has enough aluminum to make 11,672 beer cans.

Meanwhile, a North American B-25 Mitchell medium bomber of World War II vintage took on sightseers, who looked into the aircraft's bomb bay and peered into the cockpit.

Marine Corps aviator Eddie Holcomb flew the powerful English-American Harrier attack aircraft which has "vectoring thrust" that allows the airplane to take off straight up like a helicopter. The aircraft hovers like a helicopter and performs aerial ballet in air shows.

The Harrier was designed by Hawker Siddeley in England but was manufactured through a joint venture of British Aerospace and McDonnell Douglas Aircraft Corp.

"It's the most maneuverable (jet) airplane in the world," said Holcomb, because the Harrier uses thrust vectoring. Although the sub-sonic airplane has "plenty of horsepower to make it supersonic," he said, "you can make a barn door only go so fast."

And an airplane that is really fast and, aside from actor Tom Cruise, was the flying star in the move "Top Gun," the Grumman F-14 Tomcat, came to the air show.

The Tomcat, which is the U.S. Navy air-superiority fighter, exceeds Mach 2, according to F-14 aviator Jim Ingalls from Squadron VF-111 at Miramar Naval Air Station in California.

"I like the sea," said 29-year-old Ingalls, whose father flew jet aircraft at the old Webb Air Force Base in Big Spring. "I like landing on (aircraft) carriers. I like getting shot off" — catapulted off at about 140 knots.

Williams insists Richards supports income tax

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams on Saturday said Democratic rival Ann Richards supports a state income tax.

Richards has consistently said she opposes such a tax. Her campaign on Saturday rebutted Williams' charge and said the Republican is getting desperate.

Williams, appearing with other Republican candidates and Wendy Gramm, wife of Sen. Phil Gramm, also described Richards as a "Hollywood liberal" and said "she has engaged in one of the most negative campaigns in Texas history."

Speaking at Texas A&M University before giving a pre-game pep talk to the Aggies football team, Williams said Richards 'is on the wrong side of the issues."

'My opponent believes Texas will need an income tax," Williams said.

"That's really getting tiresome," countered Richards spokesman Chuck McDonald. "It seems like the bigger the lie, the prouder Clayton Williams is of it. Ann Richards has said on numerous occasions, including virtually every stump speech, that she is opposed to a state income tax.

'The man (Clayton Williams) is running the trashiest radio ads that have ever been run...'

— Chuck McDonald, Ann Richards spokesman

"The primary reason she is opposed to an income tax is the only people who pay income taxes are the middle classes and the working poor," McDonald said. "The people in the upper echelon of the tax bracket like Mr. Williams hire lawyers and rarely pay any income tax."

Williams, an A&M graduate, said Republicans are 'looking for a landslide" and described the Democrats as in disarray.

McDonald said the Williams campaign is "in a free fall."

"Every public opinion poll has indicated the race is tightening," McDonald said. "The voters need to ask themselves if Clayton Williams really thinks he has a double digit lead in the polls, why did he put up two more negative ads last week. Frontrunners don't run negative campaigns."

McDonald said Richards has run only positive advertising since the first week in September.

"The man is running the trashiest radio ads that have ever been run and the same time he is on TV running ads where he claims to deplore negative advertising," McDonald said.

Williams said Sen. Gramm could not attend the rally because he was "fighting the tax collector in Washington, D.C."

Gramm, like President Bush, supported the budget deficit reduction measure that was defeated Friday in the House. That measure was a package of tax increases and cuts.

Later, Williams said he did not know enough about the Bush plan to say if he could support it.

'I agree with the position of no more taxes, but the deal is complicated and I haven't even seen the provisions ... I really haven't seen enough details to make an intelligent statement," Williams said.

In the back of the speech crowd about a dozen men dressed as women held up a sign, saying "Queens for Claytie." Williams has made his support of the state's sodomy law an issue in his campaign.

The group said it supported Williams, but they made fun of the speakers.

"It should not matter what a person's sexual preference is we should be able to support Clayton Williams with all our heart," said one of the protesters who refused to give his name.

Alleged addict abandons 2 sons

HOUSTON (AP) — A 6-year-old boy and his 6-week-old brother were in the care of a foster family Saturday after they allegedly were abandoned by their 28-year-old mother who told authorities she was addicted to crack.

A woman called police about 9 a.m. Friday after she heard squealing tires outside her home and looked outside to see the older boy struggling to hold onto his baby brother as he dodged rush hour traffic, police said.

Officers found the boys in their northeast Houston home without food or supervision, said Houston Police spokesman Richard Retz. The baby was shivering and needed a diaper change, he said.

Erica Lewis, the boys' mother, told police she'd left the children about 1 a.m. Friday with a friend and her boyfriend, who were to care for them until she returned. But she said the two left Friday morning.

"Everybody goes through a little hard time," said Ms. Lewis, who added she hopes to start drug treatment soon and find a job. "I don't want to get rid of them."

Ms. Lewis said she had no food in her home because she has no stove or refrigerator. She said she keeps their groceries across the street at a friend's house, where the family spends a lot of time.

But police said Ms. Lewis previously abandoned the infant a week ago. She dropped the child off at a women's shelter about 3 p.m. and didn't return until contacted by juvenile authorities the following day.

"We're seeing an alarming increase of single mothers abandoning kids," Retz said.

Every month, between 30 and 40 children are abandoned in Harris County, said Judy Hay, spokeswoman for Children's Protective Services.

"I have a lot of concern with how much crack cocaine is involved in our cases," she said. "They're on drugs and they do things they have never done before."

When police picked up the children Friday, they obtained a bottle of formula for the infant, changed his diaper and took the older boy to a McDonald's restaurant before transferring them to CPS workers.

The older child spent Friday night at a foster home, while the younger boy stayed at a licensed group home.

Inmates help build needy family's house

HOUSTON (AP) — At a time when many residents are rallying against housing prisoners in their neighborhoods, a Houston church congregation opened their homes to four federal prisoners who were armed with hammers and nails.

"I was scared to death," said Matthew Criswell, construction manager for Houston Habitat for Humanity. "When I got the word they were sending us four prisoners, I automatically started asking questions: 'Are we going to have to keep an armed guard here? Are they going to do what I say? Am I going to have to keep them away from telephones?'

"Now I just wish they were back, doing more work," Criswell said.

Last week, three convicted drug dealers and an income tax evader helped build a four-bedroom house for a needy family in Houston's impoverished Fifth Ward.

"It's been a blessing for me to be out helping people," said inmate Calvin Edwards, 33, of Center. Edwards said he was donating his time and labor "for the Lord."

For the third year in Houston, federal inmates, with recommendations from their warden and chaplain, were permitted to give their time to the project cosponsored by Prison Fellowship-Houston and Houston Habitat for Humanity, a non-profit housing group providing interest-free mortgage to low-income families.

Prison Fellowship USA is a Christian ministry founded in 1976 by former President Nixon aide Chuck Colson after his prison sentence stemming from Watergate offenses.

Unlike work-release programs, the inmates in this program volunteer to hammer and saw in the heat and humidity for nine days in less than idyllic surroundings. And because they've nearly finished their prison terms, they will not get credit for good behavior.

"They do construction or renovation for needy families that couldn't be met through conventional financing," said Don Beard of Crossroads Baptist Church, which found homes for the inmates during their week of construction work. Other churches provided lunches for the workers.

"They stayed with these families ... showed up every night for Bible study and then they went to the job site between 8:30 a.m. and nightfall," said Beard, himself a former inmate convicted of embezzlement.

"They were just an inspiration to me," Criswell said. "Just the fact that they have decided to turn their lives around and do what's right and help other people."

"That's why we're doing this," said Bruce Daniel, 49, of Sherman, a federal prisoner serving time in Texarkana. "We're helping others while serving the Lord."

Criswell, who has been with Houston Habitat four months, said the community also is pleased with the results.

"They're excited with what has taken place with them helping us," Criswell said. "It absolutely was a blast. I enjoyed having them. They were all Christian men and they understand that they had made mistakes in their past and they wanted to correct that. They did everything that was asked of them and more."

Yet none of the men had ever done construction in the past, said Teresa Geisheker, affiliate manager of the Houston Habitat for Humanity.

Prison Fellowship-Houston urban director Rick Bradshaw said the high recidivism rate shows the correctional system only hardens convicts. His group uses community service work to rehabilitate non-violent and first-time offenders.

"They are the ones that made everything fall into place," Criswell said of the inmates.

Waite, other Westerners may be released this week

WORLD

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's leading newspaper reported Saturday that Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite and some other Westerners held hostage by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem groups may be released this week.

Waite

An-Nahar, which has a record of accurate reporting on the captives, attributed its short report to informed sources but did not identify them.

The paper indicated that the releases would follow visits to Syria and possibly to Lebanon by Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati.

Velayati was to visit Damascus "in the next two days for consultations with the Syrian command" of President Hafez Assad and might travel to Beirut for talks with President Elias Hrawi, the report said.

"The release of a number of foreign hostages held in Lebanon, topped by Anglican Chrich envoy Terry Waite, is possible next week," the newspaper said in its Saturday edition.

It gave no further details. The one-paragraph reference to the hostages was part of the paper's main front-page story.

An-Nahar did not disclose the nationalities of the hostages to be released, beyond identifying Waite. But the report was the latest of several to indicate that foreign captives would be freed following renewed diplomatic ties between Britain and Iran.

The two nations restored ties last month after an 18-month break over British author Salman Rushdie's book "The Satanic Verses," which Iran said defamed Islam.

Hussein Musawi, the Shiite mentor of some hostage-holding factions, said Sept. 29 that the four British hostages would benefit from the development.

Musawi said, however, that the six American captives were not expected to be released soon because of the U.S. military deployment in the Persian Gulf following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

"Improving relations and the new British conduct toward Iran would serve British interests in general, including the British hostages," said Musawi, whose Islamic Amal movement falls under the Hezbollah umbrella.

Waite, 51, the personal envoy of the Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, disappeared Jan. 20, 1987. He had left his hotel in Moslem west Beirut for a meeting with Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, the underground faction believed holding American hostages Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland.

No group has claimed Waite's abduction, but former Irish hostage Brian Keenan, released in August, said he was held with the Anglican envoy for a while in the same house.

Anderson, 42, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, is the longest-held foreign hostage in Lebanon. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

In addition to Waite, the British captives are journalist John McCarthy, World War II flier Jack Mann and writer Alec Collett.

McCarthy, 33, was kidnapped April 17, 1986, as he drove to Beirut airport to catch a flight to London. Mann, 76, was kidnapped in Beirut May 12, 1989.

Collet, a New York-based writer on assignment in Lebanon for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency, was kidnapped March 25, 1985.

The Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems, believed linked to Palestinian terrorist Abu Nidal, claimed on April 23, 1986 that it hanged Collett in retaliation for Britain's support of U.S. air raids on Libya.

No body has been found, but British officials believe Collett is dead.

The 13 Western captives, held mainly by pro-Iranian factions in Lebanon, also include two Germans and an Italian.

The An-Nahar article also said Velayati was to develop, along with Syrian and Lebanese leaders, a settlement to the 3-year-old conflict between two rival Shiite Moslem militias — the pro-Iranian Hezbollah and the more secular Amal.

On Saturday, the two militias fought a 30-minute battle in the slums of south Beirut before Syrian troops separated the combatants.

Police said two people were killed and three wounded in the clash with automatic rifles and rocket-propelled grenade launchers a few blocks from where the western captives are believed held.

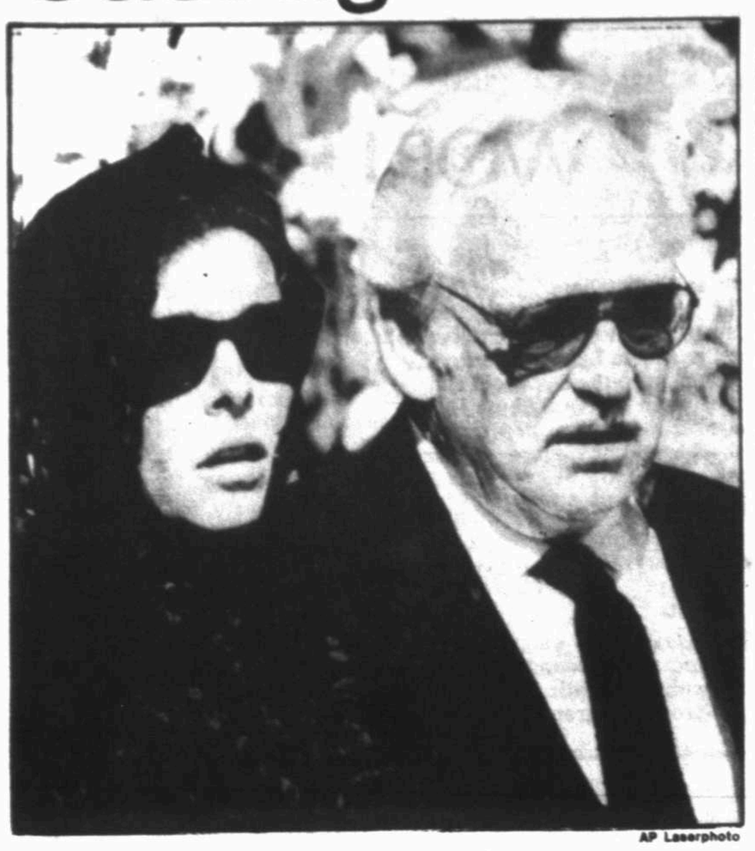

That raised the overall toll of the Amal-Hezbollah power struggle to 1,099 killed and 3,225 wounded since the conflict broke out in June 1985.

Syria is Amal's main ally and has a limited influence on Hezbollah through its close ties with Iran.

About 40,000 Syrian troops went into Lebanon under a 1976 peacekeeping mandate from the 21-nation Arab League. Syria is the main power broker in Lebanon's 15-year-old civil war.

Casiraghi buried at private service in Monaco

Princess Caroline of Monaco arrives with her father Prince Rainier III at the funeral ceremony of her husband Stafano Casiraghi Saturday at the St. Peter Cathedral in the principality.

MONACO (AP) — The grief-stricken royal family laid Princess Caroline's husband, Stefano Casiraghi, to rest Saturday in a plot overlooking the stretch of blue Mediterranean where he was killed in a boat-racing accident.

The private burial at the tiny Chapel of the Peace followed a public funeral at Monaco's nearby cathedral. Thousands of people, including tourists in bright beach outfits and citizens in black mourning garb, crowded around the 115-year-old cathedral during the tearful ceremony.

The tiny, wealthy Riviera principality appeared sad but not stricken by the same shock that accompanied the death of Caroline's mother, Princess Grace, in a car accident in 1982.

Gambling continued at the famed casinos without interruption. Small businesses closed during the funeral but quickly reopened for the afternoon.

Casiraghi, 30, an Italian businessman, died instantly Wednesday when his boat flipped during the World Offshore Championships. The somersault slammed him headfirst into the water. The other driver, Patrice Innocenti, was injured.

"The brutality of his death adds to our pain," Archbishop of Monaco Joseph Sardou said at the service. "The sea, so calm today, holds dangers that must constantly be confronted."

Princess Caroline, 33, wept occasionally during the 55-minute service as sunlight streamed through stained-glass windows and a Bach dirge wafted from the organ.

The princess wore dark sunglasses, a black-lace head-covering and black dress. The three children from her seven-year marriage to Casiraghi were not present.

Referring to Caroline, Sardou said: "It was through his union with you, Madame, that he found the greatest expression of his Christian faith."

Caroline occasionally leaned on her father, Prince Rainier, for support. Prince Albert, heir to the realm, comforted younger sister Princess Stephanie when she briefly fled the cathedral weeping.

Only 1,600 of the several thousand mourners who began lining up Saturday morning fit inside the cathedral. The rest remained outside under the warm October skies.

The mourners included Danielle Mitterrand, wife of French president Francois Mitterrand, actor Alain Delon, exiled King Michael of Romania, and fashion designer Karl Lagerfeld.

Thousands of floral bouquets covered the cathedral's steps. The brightly colored shorts and T-shirts worn by tourists contrasted with stark black worn by Monaco's citizens.

"Oh, dear Stefano," sobbed one elderly Italian woman. "I was here for Grace's funeral and now I'm here to mourn young Stefano. There is a curse on the royal house."

A white-uniformed, five-man honor guard wearing red-tasseled hats stood stiffly at attention during the ceremony. Squads of police kept watch on the mourners outside.

The princess decided to bury her husband at the simple chapel over the objection of her in-laws, who wanted him interred in Italy, French and Italian newspapers reported.

The couple had three children: Andrea, 6; Charlotte, 4; and Pierre, 3.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Major changes made in Cuba

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Cuban Communist Party will allow local elections by secret, direct ballot, the Cuban government news agency Prensa Latina said, in an apparent move toward greater democracy.

The party wants to be more "flexible to the characteristics of the territory," the daily newspaper Granma reported. The report Friday was picked up by Prensa Latina, monitored in Mexico City.

In elections scheduled for November through February, city and provincial committees will be elected by secret and direct vote and there will be 20 to 25 percent more candidates than committee seats, Prensa Latina said.

In another development, the Central Committee secretariat reduced its own membership from seven members to five and the committee's departments from 19 to nine in what is said was an attempt to eliminate bureaucratic bloat.

The agency quoted Granma as saying the committee wants to be an example of "the coherent and systematic effort that is required to overcome the hypertrophy of the state aparatus, the administration and the political organizations of the masses."

President Fidel Castro continues as first secretary of the secretariat and his brother Raul as second secretary. Other members are Ramon Machado, Julian Rizo and Carlos Aldana. Jorge Risquet, who will continue as a member of the Politburo, and Brig. Gen. Sergio Perez were removed.

Troops sell weapons

BONN, Germany (AP) — Red Army soldiers stationed in what was East Germany before last week are pilfering their arsenals and selling everything from assault rifles to small rockets, a newspaper reported Sunday.

German officials are worried the weapons might end up in the hands of terrorists, Welt am Sonntag reported.

Federal officials report that Soviet soldiers are selling AK-47 assault rifles, ground-to-air rockets, mines, hand-held weapons and anti-tank weapons. The AK-47s are said to be selling for the equivalent of $227, the newspaper reported.

Bernd Wilz, a lawmaker with Chancellor Helmut Kohl's governing coalition, urged that a group be set up to investigate the sales.

"The Soviet Union cannot have an interest in seeing its weapons flooding the black market in Germany," Wilz was quoted as saying.

The 370,000 soldiers based in what was East Germany are to be returned home over the next four years under a Soviet-German agreement.

Many of the soldiers, who have lived relatively well in East Germany, are said to be worried they will not have jobs or housing when they return home.

Sudan relief may resume

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — U.N. officials have resumed contacts with the military government aimed at resuming relief flights to rebel-held areas in southern Sudan, a U.N. relief official said Saturday.

Trover Page, director of the World Food Program and representative of the U.N. secretary-general, called this week's government decision to lift the ban on the food shipments "extremely good news."

Figures released recently by the United Nation in New York indicate famine threatens up to one-fifth of Sudan's 25 million people.

"Much of the Sudan is affected," Page said. "It is much more than that . . . Much of Sudan faces food scarcity at the time."

Page said he would not call it famine but "serious food shortage."

Sudan's military leader, Lt. Gen. Omar Hassan El-Bashir, last weekend banned Red Cross and U.N. relief flights to south Sudan, where the Sudan People's Liberation Army holds most the three provinces except for some garrison towns.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar confronted el-Bashir about the ban during meetings in New York this week.

El-Bashir's foreign minister, Ali Sahloul, later said mercy flights would resume.

The rebels took up arms in 1983 to demand greater autonomy and economic and administrative reforms.

Roh apology demanded

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition legislators demanded Saturday that President Roh Tae-woo apologize for alleged political surveillance by military intelligence agents.

The nation's main opposition group, the Party for Peace and Democracy, urged Roh to overhaul the Defense Security Command — the military surveillance unit — and end military interference in politics.

The party also demanded a full explanation from Roh of the alleged activities.

The outcry followed the disclosure Friday of alleged evidence of undercover operations by the command against 1,300 dissidents, journalists, intellectuals and lawmakers from both the opposition and government.

The alleged evidence was revealed by Yoon Suk-yang, a 24-year-old army private who deserted from the security command taking with him classified papers, computer discs and other data.

The data included the names and personal records of ruling party chairman Kim Young-sam, opposition leader Kim Dae-jung and 89 other lawmakers.

The data characterized Kim Dae-jung as "dangerous, untrustworthy" and showed that Kim Young-sam and his followers were under surveillance even after his party joined the ruling group in January.

Mandela relative killed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A grenade and shotgun attack Saturday killed a baby girl related to Nelson Mandela, and his African National Congress called the incident a "curious coincidence."

Police said unknown assailants hurled a grenade and fired shots before dawn at the home of Monde Mandela in the black township of Soweto. The attack killed Gloria Mandela, 1, and injured her parents, Monde, 43, and Susan, 29, police said.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility for the attack. Police said they did not know if the attack was deliberate or a random incident linked to the chronic violence in Soweto and other townships.

ANC officials said Nelson Mandela is close to the Monde Mandela family, who are distant cousins. They said Nelson Mandela's father was the brother of Monde Mandela's grandfather.

White House lights dim as cutbacks take effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, who rarely stays in town on weekends, presided Saturday over an executive mansion darkened and empty of tourists and where even finding someone to type up a veto proved problematic.

The president canceled a holiday weekend visit to his oceanside home in Kennebunkport, Maine, but later in the day motored to Camp David, Md. for the night.

When Congress failed to produce a new budget agreement on Friday, the government officially ran out of money and all non-essential government services were shut down effective Saturday at 12:01 a.m. EDT.

Much of the White House also was shut down. Tours were canceled Saturday and only a skeleton staff of aides and attendants were allowed to come to work.

But the president declared a defiant "watch and learn" when asked how long he was prepared to allow the government to remain closed down to make his point with Congress.

And he raised the stakes by vetoing a bill Congress had passed the night before to avert a government shutdown.

But since the bulk of Bush's clerical and press staff had been deemed "non-essential" and told not to report to work, getting the word out about the veto wasn't all that easy.

Well, Bush conceded to reporters, "it hasn't been vetoed yet. Need a typewriter in there to get it done."

"By the time we finish this press conference that has gone longer than I thought, it'll probably be all typed up," he added.

Bush's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, explained later: "We don't have any secretaries around here" — although he also said that he thought the veto message had been typed the night before.

Even Bush's news conference to announce the veto was unusual.

The press briefing room, where he usually speaks with reporters, was dark and empty. But the president had no problem finding cameras and reporters.

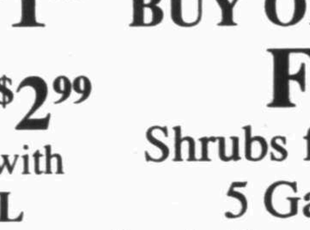

He walked outside the White House and stepped up to the battery of microphones in the driveway from which congressional leaders had just departed — including Democrats who blasted Bush for his veto decision.

It was the first time in recent memory that a president has held a news conference in the driveway. Dozens of tourists, barred entry to the White House because of the shutdown, pressed against the fence along Pennsylvania Avenue to peer at the president and the large crowd of reporters surrounding him.

The rule that only essential government workers could remain on the job apparently did not apply to presidential motorcades. Bush took an 11-car procession to a church in the Georgetown section of the city to attend the wedding of White House personnel chief Chase Untermeyer.

Since taking office in January 1989, Bush has only spent a handful of weekends in the White House. Usually he spends Saturdays and Sundays at the presidential retreat in Camp David, or at his vacation home in Maine.

Federal budget dispute closes nation's parks

AP Laserphoto

A man and two young children pose for a photo in New York's Battery Park Saturday. The Statute of Liberty on Ellis Island, in the background, was one of the first federal areas closed to tourists because of the budget crisis that has shut down non-essential government services.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine-year-old Michael Woodward went looking for pandas and koala bears at the National Zoo on Saturday, but instead found locked and shuttered buildings because of a budget fight between the White House and Congress.

"I'm really disappointed. I've been saving for a long time for this trip. I guess I'll have to come back to see the pandas," said the boy, who journeyed from Harrisburg, Pa., with his parents and a church group to see the zoo.

The zoo's grounds were open but huts housing reptiles, apes, birds and aquatic life were closed.

The scene was duplicated at some of the nation's most famous tourist spots — from the Statue of Liberty in New York to the St. Louis Arch — as President Bush's decision to shut down non-essential services took effect early Saturday in the absence of a budget agreement.

"I think it's a cheap shot — closing the (Smithsonian Institution) museums like this. You can bet they didn't cut their salaries," Maria Raices, a New Hampshire resident, complained about Congress' and the White House's inability to settle the budget dispute that allowed the government to run out of money.

If tourists were inconvenienced, most federal workers had not yet felt the impact of possible furloughs. A three-day Columbus Day weekend meant most cuts would not be felt until Tuesday at the earliest. And the Bush administration said it had authority to maintain essential services — such as the military, prisons and the air traffic control system — well beyond then.

The National Hurricane Center announced plans to remain in business, and was continuing to keep tabs on Tropical Storm Klaus.

That was little comfort to those who flocked on Saturday to the nation's capital in hopes of visiting its famed attractions — the White House tours, the Washington Monument, the Smithsonian's 13 museums and art galleries.

"Their first comment, in harmony, was 'It stinks,'" Boy Scout leader Bill Johnson said of his scouts' reaction to finding the National Air and Space Museum closed. The troop had traveled from Roanoke Rapids, N.C., to spend the day sightseeing.

The 15 scouts marched down the Mall, past the closed museums toward the Capitol, hoping they could get in to see Congress.

"Maybe this won't be a lost weekend, after all. The boys won't forget this and I expect they'll go home and tell their parents about what happened to them," Johnson said.

At the air and space museum, tourists packing cameras and video equipment pressed their noses against the glass front, straining to glimpse the NASA rockets, boosters and airplanes suspended from the ceiling inside.

"This one's closed, too, Dad. The people are just peeking inside," one youngster glumly called out.

Evelyn Abes of New York City, who was wrapping up a five-day visit to Washington with her 9-year-old grandson, had been saving the air and space tour for last.

"This was going to be the highlight of our trip," she said, waving toward the museum. "I guess we'll have to do the car stuff now. ...

"The government's shutdown is not making you stop eating or causing a loss of blood or anything, but this is a quality of life issue, enlightening children and helping them learn about the world," Mrs. Abes said.

Many out-of-town sightseers were flustered by the locked museums, wondering out loud at signs that said, "All Smithsonian museums are closed today. We regret the inconvenience."

Friendly, informed tourists told them why, 'Congress couldn't pass its bill," they said, or "The government's run out of money."

Sightseers from around the globe felt the impact in New York, when they trekked to lower Manhattan to catch ferries to Liberty and Ellis Islands to see the Statue of Liberty, only to find the boats weren't running.

Helen Bealka, 62, traveled from St. Paul, Minn., to see Ellis Island, where her father first set foot in America. "This is horrible. I don't know if I'll live long enough to come back," she said.

The nation's parks were affected, too, as rangers nationwide began locking gates and closing down camp grounds when word was dispatched from Washington that the federal government was out of money.

'Fast track' expected on free trade

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Congress is expected to put any trade pact the United States might negotiate with Mexico on a "fast track" just as it did with Canada several years ago.

That approach has been endorsed by two key Texas Democrats — Senate Finance Chairman Lloyd Bentsen and House Agriculture Chairman E. (Kika) de la Garza.

Formal talks with Mexico, which will also include Canada, are expected to begin by next spring. And a boost to the process will come next month, when President Bush and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari meet in Monterey, Mexico.

As envisioned, a free trade pact would phase out both tariff and non-tariff barriers to the exchange of goods and services. Bentsen said such an agreement with Mexico "has the potential to provide new jobs and other benefits for Texas and the United States as a whole."

Bush formally notified Congress that trade talks with Mexico would begin on Sept. 25, noting that Canada would also like to participate and that one or more agreements among the three countries might emerge from the discussions.

A free trade pact between the United States and Canada took effect in January, 1989, after being considered on a fast-track basis. That accord took more than three years to be implemented.

Any objections to speeding up the negotiating process with Mexico must be filed within 60 congressional working days of the president's Sept. 25 notification. Only members of the Senate Finance and House Ways and Means committees can prevent trade talks from proceeding on a fast track, and staff members say the sentiment for such action is lacking.

If no objection materializes, the trade talks between the U.S. and Mexican administrations can begin. Once accords are fashioned, Congress must then give them fast-track treatment; that is, members must vote on the proposed pacts within 90 days and without revisions.

Should either congressional panel reject the fast-track process, the administration can still negotiate the proposed trade accords, and it has signaled it will. However, Congress could then amend the proposals and would not be required to act on them in any set timeframe.

Canada is the United States' largest trading partner while Mexico ranks third behind Japan. If the United States and its neighbors strike free trade accords, a market of nearly 400 million people would be created.

Such a market would be larger although not as comprehensive as the European Community market scheduled to take effect in 1992. A North American market, for instance, would not provide uniform tariffs against outside goods nor would be it be aimed, at least in the early going, at establishing a single currency.

U.S. officials also note that talks with Mexico are unlikely to serve as a forum for resolving concerns about Mexicans working here illegally, a source of tension between the two countries. Nevertheless, officials from both countries have argued that a U.S.-Mexico pact should make it more attractive for Mexican workers to remain there.

The U.S. pact with Canada is widely viewed as a model for the accord to be sought with Mexico. In addition to providing for phased reductions in tariff and non-tariff barriers to trade, the proposed pact is expected to broaden protections for intellectual property rights while enhancing investment prospects in both countries.

It also is expected to extend to all of Mexico the benefits enjoyed by businesses operating within the so-called Maquiladora system, which permits nearly tariff-free U.S. deliveries of products assembled in Mexican plants but made with American materials.

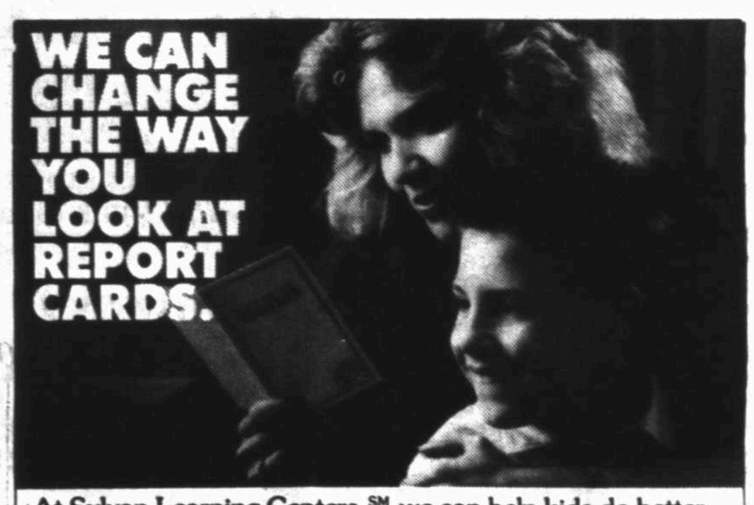

That a free trade pact with Mexico would, in effect, blanket Mexico with Maquiladora benefits is a sore point for the American labor movement.

U.S. negotiators have maintained that national wage differences cannot be resolved within trade talks.

A crew of five astronauts lift off from Kennedy Space Center early Saturday morning aboard the Space Shuttle orbiter Discovery. The Space Shuttle Mission STS-41 will carry the Ulysses satellite into space where it will be deployed for a trip around the polar regions of the sun on its five-year mission.

Discovery crew successfully casts Ulysses robot into orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery rocketed into orbit Saturday, carrying Americans into space for the first time in nearly six months and starting the robot craft Ulysses on a five-year voyage of solar exploration.

The five-man Discovery crew smoothly accomplished its primary goal, casting off Ulysses exactly as planned. The probe then rocketed itself out of Earth orbit.

"Good deploy, Houston," said mission commander Richard N. Richards after the solar probe was freed from the shuttle. "Ulysses is on its way."

"That's a great job," Mission Control replied.

Three rocket stages then fired automatically on Ulysses, and the craft was accelerated out of Earth orbit at 34,130 mph, the fastest speed ever for a manmade object.

Mission Control told the astronauts that ground monitors in Guam and Australia determined Ulysses was exactly where it should be, indicating that the rocket stages fired as planned.

"Fantastic!" exclaimed an astronaut from space.

The atomic-powered solar explorer started its independent voyage six hours after the shuttle was launched by dawn's early light. Discovery roared from its seaside launch pad and climbed flawlessly to a 184-mile-high orbit.

Ulysses will follow a roundabout path, first cruising away from the sun toward Jupiter. The powerful gravity pull of that giant planet will act like a slingshot, accelerating the probe to an even higher speed and sending it streaking back toward the sun.

In 1994, Ulysses will pass over the sun's south pole, then curve over the north solar pole. The sun's poles cannot be seen from Earth and have never been explored.

Because Ulysses is powered by a generator energized by more than 20 pounds of plutonium, anti-nuclear activists filed a lawsuit to block the launch of the radioactive material. But a federal judge ruled against their petition Friday. That same day, two of 20 anti-nuclear demonstrators were arrested at the Kennedy Space Center.

NASA staffers cheered as Discovery soared into space only 12 minutes later than the planned 7:35 a.m. launch time. The delay was caused by a minor weather problem and a last-minute technical glitch.

Discovery's mission is scheduled to last four days with a landing Wednesday in California. The launch wasn't affected by the shutdown of many federal agencies because funds for the mission already had been set aside, officials said.

After the craft settled into orbit, Mission Control in Houston told the astronauts: "There are a lot of smiling faces down here on the ground."

"There's a lot of smiling faces up here, too," replied Richards. "You all did a great job getting us off the pad this morning. We couldn't ask for anything better."

A mysterious hydrogen fuel leak, still unsolved, forced a series of launch cancellations for space shuttles Columbia and Atlantis. NASA's last previous launch was April 24, when Discovery took off.

Another embarrassment came over the summer when NASA engineers learned that the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope had been manufactured with an error that gives it a blurred view of the universe. The error was not found until after it had been deployed in space by Discovery last April.

And last week, NASA was embarrassed again when workers left a 70-pound metal beam inside the engine compartment of Atlantis and the beam caused some minor damage when it clanked around inside as the spacecraft was lifted and rotated by a crane.

The smooth launch on Saturday was a boost for NASA's morale, said launch director Bob Sieck.

Balloonist killed

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A hot-air balloon taking part in a balloon festival drifted into power lines and burst into flames Saturday, killing one man and seriously injuring another.

A 46-year-old Albuquerque man was pronounced dead at 11 a.m., said University Hospital spokeswoman Annie Olson.

NATION IN BRIEF

Students end campus protest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Students at the University of the District of Columbia Saturday relinquished control of an administrative building and ended a 10-day protest after school officials agreed to most of their demands.

Following several all-day negotiation sessions, the board agreed to 35 of 44 demands, including amnesty for the activists, student leader Mark Thompson said.

The students took over a campus services building on Sept. 26 to press their demands for improvements in academic and athletic programs and the resignation of the 11 members of the 15-member board of trustees appointed by Washington Mayor Marion Barry.

As many as 500 students occupied the building during the protest, which forced cancellation of classes for several days on the northwest Washington campus.

Thompson said students compromised on the final demand that the 11 trustees resign. The trustees had said their resignation would create confusion at the campus of 12,000 and do more harm than good.

Some survived blast

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The pilot and at least 147 other victims of the Lockerbie disaster may have survived the bomb blast that ripped the plane apart at 31,000 feet and died when they hit the ground, a forensic pathologist said.

"And there's a good possibility they were conscious," said Dr. William G. Eckert, director of the Milton Helpern International Center of Forensic Sciences at Wichita State University. Eckert has performed thousands of autopsies and consulted on hundreds of cases involving medical-legal issues.

Pan Am Flight 103 was ripped apart by a bomb on Dec. 21, 1988, over southern Scotland. Whether any of the 259 victims survived the fall to the ground could be a crucial point in lawsuits seeking payment for the victims' pain and suffering.

Eckert said the 148 Lockerbie victims who landed on or near Tundergoth Hill may have lost consciousness because of lack of oxygen when the Boeing 747 exploded but would have revived at about 15,000 to 10,000 feet.

He said the victims would have been aware of what was happening for the final third of their 36-second fall.

Squirrel killing banned

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An animal rights group has won a court order against a Navy program to kill squirrels at a weapons station. The group claims the chemical bait used also threatens endangered species.

U.S. District Judge Thelton Henderson on Friday granted a temporary restraining order to the Contra Costa County chapter of In Defense of Animals.

The group sued the Navy in federal court, contending a squirrel control program was started at the Concord Naval Weapons Station without an environmental impact report.

Contra Costa County paid for half the poisoned grain but was not named in the lawsuit. The county has sponsored an eradication program for years that has not been challenged in court.

The Navy began the eradication program Monday because neighbors of the base complained squirrels were damaging property and buildings and because the animals burrowed into ammunition bunkers, said Assistant U.S. Attorney James Coda, respresenting the Navy.

About five tons of oats containing the anticoagulant chlorophacinone were spread over 800 acres of the Navy's 12,900-acre station north of Concord before the ban was imposed.

Candidate apologizes

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Mary Mead is sorry for a speech she made — but not because of anything she said.

"I got reports saying it was boring and that I hadn't really said anything," she said.

A week after the Sept. 19 speech, she wrote a letter to apologize for the speech "not necessarily to change anybody's mind about me, but just to let them know that it mattered to me."

Mead addressed the Wyoming Association of County Officials and lightly touched on court reform, recycling, and legalized gambling, among other topics.

In her letter, she said she heard people say that she "didn't address the issues" and "wasted an opportunity to make a favorable impression on some important Wyoming voters."

"And, regrettably, I agree," Mead wrote. "Even before I left your meeting I knew that my remarks had not served me well. Some days are great and some aren't — and I wish I could redo that one."

Mead is hoping to unseat incumbent Gov. Mike Sullivan, who's seeking his second term in the state's executive office.

Harvard tops in survey

WASHINGTON (AP) — A world-class faculty and "the nation's choosiest admissions office" made Harvard University the top large school in a poll, and Amherst College was selected the best small liberal arts college.

U.S. News and World Report, in its annual survey, also selected Juilliard School, Babson College and Harvey Mudd College as the best specialty schools.

Fair focuses on parenting skills

■ Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program offers teen parents workshops on life skills and information on available resources in this area.

By Michael Kashgarian

When Tomasa Molina's 1-year-old daughter threw a tantrum, the 18-year-old Midland mother wasn't exactly sure how she should handle the situation.

But after attending the Teen Parent Fair Saturday, Ms. Molina said she feels more confident about what to do.

"I learned about a lot of different things. I learned to take care of her better when she throws a tantrum, not just spank her," Ms. Molina said.

Midlander Susie Leon, 6½ months pregnant, said she feels more comfortable about having her baby now that she has attended the fair.

"It taught me a lot of what to expect when I have the baby," Ms. Leon said.

"I feel more comfortable now that I know how to do more things," Ms. Leon said. "Some pregnant girls at our age don't know what to do when the baby cries and cries. They panic."

Hopefully, the approximately 125 teen-age parents who attended the fair will now know what to do when the baby cries.

Organized by Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program (PBCAPP), the fair included a variety of workshops to educate the youngsters about parenthood.

John Chacon, program director for parent/teen education of Project Redirection in El Paso, was the keynote speaker at the fair.

"We are going to talk about your case — how to get people off your case," Chacon told the group, adding that this could be accomplished by the youngsters taking control of their lives.

"Ask yourselves, 'Who am I? Where am I going? How am I going to get there?'" Chacon said.

"The way you see yourself will influence your everyday life, how others see you and how your child will see you," Chacon said.

As tools to build a positive self-image, Chacon discussed life skills, communication, education, values, goals, birth control, sex and decision-making.

In addition to Chacon, parents were able to attend two of five seminars about: communication, with Jane Hellinghausen of Planned Parenthood; infant health, with Syndii McCreary, divisional director of maternal/-

Gift may end MISD office crowding

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

People have to be careful where they step in one of the school district's offices.

A step to the left will land them in the migrant education program department. A couple of steps in another direction will put them in the drivers' education or fine arts department.

Circumnavigating the small office, which is home to 14 departments, requires a certain amount of finesse, according to Marsha Samponaro, coordinator of federal/kindergarten programs for the school district.

But Ms. Samponaro's days of mincing her steps may be over soon, thanks to the Exxon's Southwestern Production Division's recent gift to the school district. The oil company gave MISD its seven-story 80,000-square-foot downtown building free of charge.

Roger Olsen, manager of the southwest division, said the company decided to give its 615 W. Missouri Ave. building to the school district rather than sell it.

Midland Independent School District's administration offices, housed in three locations, now encompass about 45,000 square feet, according to Superintendent Joe Baressi.

There will be plenty of room to spare once all the offices have been moved to the new building. School officials expect to lease some of the additional space.

Baressi said that while 80,000 square feet sounds expansive, the square footage includes a lot of hallways. "Also, Exxon's conference room is not large enough for our board meetings." He said the first order of renovation will involve constructing a large board room with first floor access.

The official contract will be signed at 11 a.m. Tuesday at the building. Exxon will lead school district officials on a tour of the building prior to the signing.

Olsen said an inspection period will follow and Exxon will remove asbestos from the insulation of a boiler. "It's a miner amount to remove, but we will contract experts to handle the removal," Olsen said.

"We will also test for radon, lead in drinking water and other environmental tests," Baressi said, since the building was built in 1951 before certain environmental requirements existed.

Olsen said the building "really is in excellent condition. We maintained the utilities even in interim times."

Families of mentally ill gather for support

■ Advocacy groups battle lack of state funding for services for the mentally ill, as well as the public's misunderstanding of mental illness.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Being the family of a mentally ill person can mean living in a private hell of fear, despair and anger.

Not only does it often involve watching a mother, son or sister turn into a stranger, it also requires standing a lonely vigil against public ignorance of mental illness.

The Permian Basin Alliance for the Mentally Ill (PBAMI) is out to make that life a little less painful.

"There are people who have dealt with a mentally ill loved one for 20 years and they're so isolated," said Sue (her last name has been withheld to protect her family), a PBAMI member. "They come to our meetings and some express so much anger and hurt and outrage — it's been bottled up so long."

The two-year-old organization, which is affiliated with both the Texas Alliance for the Mentally Ill (TEXAMI) and National Alliance for the Mentally Ill (NAMI), has about 40 members, mostly parents of schizophrenics, manic-depressives and depressives.

It serves as a support group for families and, together with other chapters throughout the state and nation, speaks as an advocate for the mentally ill.

"What's exciting is that we're trying to bring everybody together," said Sue. "We want to be one big large powerful coalition for grass-roots support across the country — advise state agencies, raise money for research, and educate."

Julia Prillaman, a family support services coordinator with the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation (MHMR), said PBAMI and the other groups that comprise TEXAMI provide constructive suggestions for MHMR, the state hospitals and community programs.

"The AMI families want a new location for Friendship House (MHMR's Midland psychosocial program center) and we're real excited about working with them to help achieve that," she said. "AMI is great for us."

Ms. Prillaman said MHMR currently has a caseload of 997 Midlanders. "But out here we're so scattered it's hard to get an accurate census of how many need our help," she said.

Statewide, 2.58 million Texans suffer from serious mental illness, she said.

Nationwide, 25 million adults and 8 million children will have a mental illness in any six-month period, she added.

TEXAMI's charter described its goal as, "Promoting the development of programs for improved acute care; increasing rehabilitation; and promoting independence, employment possibilities and integration into the community for the mentally ill."

It has a long way to go.

Texas ranks 45th in NAMI's 1990 ranking of state mental health systems for funding public services for the mentally ill. "Texas has given new meaning to the word stingy," the NAMI report said.

"We go to Austin to stump for mental health bills," said Charlene, PBAMI's secretary-treasurer, who is also a TEXAMI Region 1 representative. "We recently got more money for psychosocial programs approved."

She said MHMR does a good job with what resources it has. Its psychosocial program, for example, is designed to help the mentally ill function in the community and live as normal a life as possible — holding down jobs, taking care of themselves, making friends.

The agency's shift from institutionalization to community-based care is one PBAMI applauds because it shows a change in attitude about mental illness.

Members stress that schizophrenia, manic-depression and major depression are not character flaws, split personalities or the result of bad parenting, but brain diseases with neurological, biochemical, genetic and viral components not well understood.

"Mental illness is a medical problem like diabetes," said Charlene, whose 28-year-old son is

GARY OTT

Surely this can't be me entering drug rehab center

EDITOR'S NOTE: On July 31 of this year, Reporter-Telegram City Editor Gary Ott checked into Clearview Hospital for treatment of alcoholism. He has written a series of four columns detailing his experiences. Today's installment focuses on taking that first big step.

It was shortly before 4 p.m. on a Tuesday when I approached the large double doors at Clearview Hospital.

An overnight bag stuffed with a couple of pairs of jeans, three or four pullover shirts, some underwear, toothpaste, deodorant and a radio was slung over my left shoulder. Before I yanked the door open, I inhaled a final puff from my cigarette and tossed it aside. I took a deep breath, glanced briefly at the clear sky above, mumbled something about the unfairness of life and then entered.

Ott

I was scared to death.

And why not? My life, at least as I had known it for the past 18 years, was about to change.

The day before, during an emotional conversation with my boss to discuss a DWI charge against me, I had admitted being an alcoholic. Now things were moving fast, too fast, and I was becoming less and less certain of my decision to enter a rehabilitation center. Suddenly, it sounded too severe. There must be an easier, less painful, way. I mean, really. Me? Spend 28 days in a drug rehab center? Surely, you jest.

I don't stick needles in my arm, for crying out loud. I just drink a little too much.

So I like my Scotch. Doesn't everyone? I can cut back on my own. I'm a man of strength. Willpower is my middle name. Gary, get the hell out of here while the getting's good. You don't belong in this place. These aren't your kind of people.

"Excuse me, sir, may we help you?"

It was a voice coming from the gentleman behind the front desk. He was smiling and directing his comments at me.

I stammered a bit and stared at my shoes, an irritating habit I had adopted back in high school.

He repeated his question.

"Uh, yeah," I finally responded as beads of perspiration formed on my forehead. I took a piece of paper from my shirt pocket, stared at it and said, "Uh, I'm supposed to a see a guy named John Reed."

The gentleman again smiled and said, "Please have a seat. I'll call him."

Well, this is it, I mumbled to myself while absent-mindedly grabbing a magazine from the table beside me. There's no turning back now. You've hit the big time, hotshot. A drug rehab center. I hope you're proud of yourself.

DEATHS

J.W. 'Bill' Arnett

Services for J.W. "Bill" Arnett, 84, of Midland, will be held at 11 a.m. Monday in Greenwood Baptist Church with the Rev. Waymon Swopes of Greenwood Baptist Church officiating. Also officiating will be the Rev. James Denison of First Baptist Church, the Rev. Jim Fields of Cotton Flat Baptist Church, the Rev. Ralph Caffey — Arnett's nephew — and the Rev. Roy Roach of Travis Baptist Church.

Arnett

Burial will be in the Greenwood Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. Arnett died Friday at his residence.

Born Oct. 10, 1905, in Anson, he and his family moved to Big Spring when he was very young. The family later moved to Midland.

Arnett is a 1927 graduate of Midland High School and has a degree from Hardin Simmons University. He continued his education at Fort Worth's Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary and was ordained to the ministry in the early 1930s. He pastored at many churches throughout Texas, beginning in the 1930s.

He served as chaplain in the 64th Armored Division of the U.S. Army from 1942-44. In 1945, after his discharge, he was the District 8 Baptist Mission secretary until 1961. While he was secretary, he lived in Big Spring from 1945 to 1967. At that time he moved to the Greenwood Community. He retired in 1985.

Arnett was a member of the First Baptist Church of Midland. He married Jewel Juanita Raggett of Stanton on June 3, 1928.

Survivors include his wife; three daughters, Mrs. Glen (Mary) Richardson of Midland, Mrs. Don (Grace) Karns of Big Spring and Mrs. Roger (Harriet) Cook of Wichita Falls; four brothers, Leon Arnett of Comanche, Hershell Arnett of Orangevale, Calif., Fred Arnett of Durant, Okla., and Garrett Arnett of Weatherford; four sisters, Irene Rice of Seminole, Joan Nichols of Odessa, Lillian Jones of Midland and Lucille Richters of Kaufmann; 13 grandchildren; 23 great-grandchildren; one great-great-grandchild and numerous nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be Paul Richardson, Peter Kelleher, Kevin Powell, Ervin Smith, Chris Rose, Keith Smith, Phillip Smith, Cary Karns, Rocky Karns and Dale Karns. Honorary pallbearers will be Brian Kelleher, Alan Kelleher, Michael Smith, Wesley Smith, Shane Karns, Casey Moore and Heith Moore.

Alma Louis Lander

STANTON — Services for Alma Louise Lander, 75, of Tarzan, will be held at 2 p.m. Monday in the First United Methodist Church of Stanton with the Rev. Milton Jochetz and the Rev. Monroe Teeters officiating. Burial will follow in the Evergreen Cemetery under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Born Oct. 13, 1914, in Phillipsburn, she married Herman A. Lander on Jan. 8, 1934, in Malone. They moved to Tarzan 48 years ago.

Survivors include her husband; two sons, Junior Lander and Jack Webb of Stanton; three daughters, Mrs. Ronnie (Josie) Deatherage and Mrs. Charles (Faye) Wagner, both of Tarzan, and Brenda Webb of Stanton; two brothers, Fred Kellerman of Gatesville and Raymond Kellerman of Odessa; three sisters, Earlene Fabion of Gatesville, Hulda Luckemeyer of Ganado and Lydia Struempler of Priddy; six grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

William Fultz

HOBBS, N.M. — William "Bill" Fultz, of Hobbs, N.M., and formerly of Midland, died Saturday at a Midland hospital.

Services will be Tuesday, but additional details are pending with Griffin Funeral Home in Hobbs.

He was retired from Mobil Oil.

Survivors include his wife, Ailene Fultz; one son, Elbert Gragg Fultz; and several grandchildren.

Kenneth Rolls

Kenneth Rolls, 69, of Midland, died Thursday night at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Grace L. Ward

Services for Grace L. Ward, 60, of Midland, have been set for 3 p.m. Monday in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Street Baptist Church officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Ward died Friday at her residence.

Born Sept. 22, 1930, in Fox, Okla., she was raised in Denton and graduated from high school there. In 1945, she moved to Borger, where she met Charles L. Ward and married him in 1951. They moved to Midland in 1953. At the time of her death she was employed by Mrs. Baird's Bakery.

Survivors include her husband; one daughter, Janiece Lenamond of Jackson, Miss.; one brother, C.E. Hope of Bartlesville, Okla.; and two sisters, Vondie Sanders of Azle and Juanita Land of Albuquerque, N.M.

Helen Brown

Helen Brown, 92, of Midland, died Friday at her home following a lengthy illness.

There will be no services.

She was born April 29, 1898, in Evanston, Ind., and had been a Midland resident since May 1973.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Earnest M. Brown on April 20, 1975, and by a daughter, Daisy E. Marshall on May 13, 1981.

Survivors include one son, Floyd C. Brown of Okmulgee, Okla.; one daughter, Irene L. Banks of Midland; 12 grandchildren; 21 great-grandchildren and several great-great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Texas, 79702.

Ruth Jones

Funeral services for Ruth Jones, 80, have been set for 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Street Baptist Church officiating. Burial and graveside services will be held at 3 p.m. in Resthaven Memorial Park in Lubbock under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Jones died Friday in a local nursing facility.

Born Aug. 7, 1910, in Jones County, she grew up in Terry County on a farm. She was married Feb. 12, 1927, in Levelland to Dalton W. Jones. They lived in Lubbock from the early 1930s until 1954, when they moved to Midland. Jones died in 1954. Mrs. Jones worked in private duty nursing until 1976, when she retired. She was a member of Central Baptist Church in Lubbock.

Survivors include her son, Doyle D. Jones of Midland; one daughter, Joyce D. Shackelford of Midland; two sisters, Daisy Smoot and Addie Green, both of Rising Star; two grandchildren, three great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621.

Norman Slaughter

Memorial services for Norman Slaughter, 69, of Midland, have been set for 2 p.m. today in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. The Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Baptist Church will officiate.

Slaughter died Thursday at a local hospital.

SUPPORT: Some attitudes changing

schizophrenic. "If someone has medication, he can function in the world."

Sue's daughter Mary, a 25-year-old schizophrenic, is stabilized on Navane, a neuroleptic drug, and lives at home. Nevertheless, Sue said her daughter's early illness was devastating to the family.

"Often schizophrenics are straight-A students, walking encyclopedias with photographic memories. That's what's so hard," she said.

"You're raising a child who's smart, an achiever and has everything going for her. Then at 17 or 18 they start to change. The illness blossoms. It's very painful to go through."

Charlene said a psychiatrist who worked with her son described him as moving along on wheels, "and all of a sudden the wheels would lock under some stress."

Mary credited the drug with normalizing her behavior. "Navane has helped me restore my life to a functional level," she said. "It brought me out of the pits of disorder. It was trial and error at first, but then they put me on this drug and it worked overnight. It helped more than anything else."

"The psychiatrist told her it would be as important as food to her, that if she worked with the medication, it would work for her," said Sue.

The public needs to realize that mental illness is chronic, but controllable with drugs, Charlene said.

"What doctors have told me is that one-third of patients get on medication, stay on it and never have another problem. Another third get on it and get off it but are still functional. And one-third there's no help for," she said.

"The problem is that some mentally ill think there's nothing wrong with them," said Sue. "As soon as they're feeling better, they go off their medications and suffer a relapse. The ones out in the community are the ones taking care of themselves."

She believes the ones who quit taking their prescriptions are in a state of denial about their illness because of the social stigma against it.

"I had to surrender to it," said Mary. "In the first few months I realized the horrors I was putting my family through.

"My recovery means everything to me. I wouldn't risk getting off the medication. Everything would crumble for me."

Sue and Charlene said the PBAMI group has helped them realize they don't have to cope with their children's mental illness alone.

But they said there is still much that needs to be done, including an overhaul of insurance, Medicare and Medicaid programs to help with prescription and hospitalization costs for the mentally ill.

"What happens when we're dead?" asked Charlene. "No one wants a mentally ill person to take care of."

PBAMI will recognize Mental Illness Awareness Week, which begins today, by hosting Jim Hanophy, MHMR's chief of programs, at its Monday meeting. PBAMI meets the second Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the basement conference room at the Allison Cancer Center at Midland Memorial Hospital. For more information, call 683-5591.

Types of mental illness listed

Staff Report

The Permian Basin Alliance for the Mentally Ill describes chronic mental illness as catastrophic brain diseases that strike young people and are socially disabling.

Although its origins are not well understood, heredity and biochemistry may play large parts in the development of mental illness, officials say.

Psychological stress and drug abuse may precipitate a psychotic episode in a vulnerable individual.

The major types of mental illness are schizophrenia, manic-depression and severe depression.

Some symptoms of schizophrenia are disconnected language, eating and sleeping disorders, hallucinations and delusions, loss of motivation and deterioration of appearance.

Persons with manic-depression or bi-polar illnesses (mood swings) may have symptoms including boundless energy, grandiose ideas, poor judgment, impulsive behavior and a rapid switch to severe depression.

Severely depressed people have difficulty in sleeping, a loss of appetite, feelings of despondence or sadness, an inability to concentrate and suicidal tendencies.

STEP: First there's 'a few questions'

It wasn't supposed to turn out this way. All my life things have come easy for me. Captain of my high school basketball team. A subsequent college scholarship. Member of the student council. Better than average grades. Journalism degree from a major university. City editor of a daily newspaper. Weekly columnist. Winner of a couple of statewide writing awards. Why, it was just a few short months ago that I was at the White House having lunch with the president of the United States.

Now, look at me.

A drunk getting ready to be admitted to a drug rehab center.

Ain't it funny how time slips away.

John Reed was now standing before me, snapping me back from my thoughts of the past. He was telling me to follow him to a private room so he could ask me "a few questions."

Yeah, right, I thought. And then you'll hook me up to a killer machine for shock treatment. I've heard about you people. I'll leave here crazier than I am now.

My imagination obviously was getting the best of me. For a brief moment I even thought about making a mad dash for the outside world. After all, I hadn't signed any papers yet.

I don't need this, I kept telling myself. I'm not a skid row bum. I just drink a little too much. What the heck, starting tomorrow I'll quit after that third drink. Well, maybe the fourth. I can handle it. My resistance has been enhanced over the years. Besides, I'm not all that sure I do have a problem. Maybe this is all a giant conspiracy. People are always out to get me.

I was now following Reed down a long hallway.

At least the walls aren't padded, I surmised. I could sure use a cigarette. Oh, great, I didn't bring any. Life is so unfair. I wish I was dead. Maybe I'll volunteer for shock treatment. I could be like that Jack Nicholson character in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." Crazy.

Yeah, that's me. Crazy.

"About how much do you drink each day?" The question was being directed at me as I squirmed in my chair in the private room.

I cleared my throat and tried to do the same with my brain. "Uh, I don't know," I said. "Not all that much."

Even I didn't believe that answer. I crossed my legs and reached in my shirt pocket for a cigarette that I knew didn't exist. Nervous energy, I think it is called.

He tried a different tact. "How many drinks do you consume each day?"

I gave him a ridiculously low figure.

Much to my surprise, he accepted it and moved on to the next question.

This is a piece of cake, I thought. He'll quickly see that I don't have a problem and I'll be sitting on my favorite bar stool within the hour.

The interrogation continued for at least 45 minutes. He asked me every question in the book, from my parents' drinking habits to whether or not I had ever contemplated suicide. I didn't tell that many out-and-out lies, but I did fudge on most of my answers.

Keep it realistic, I cautioned myself. You don't want to sound too goody-goody. He'll never buy that. Just give him middle-of-the-road answers. Admit you drink a little too much, but that's all. Be cool.

Finally, the interview was concluded. I was quite proud of myself. Surely he would see that I was your average social drinker, and nothing more, who would be just fine if encouraged to practice a small degree of moderation.

After all, my performance had been impeccable.

Instead, he looked me straight in the eye and said, "Gary you're a mid-level alcoholic."

There was that nasty word again — alcoholic. I hated the sound of it, especially when it was used in the same sentence as my name. It stung, is what it did.

No, I silently reasoned, alcoholic is much too strong a description. Problem drinker? Perhaps. Alcoholic? No way.

I snapped back to reality. "What does this mean?" I asked.

"I suggest you check yourself into our 28-day program," he said.

"OK," I replied. "I'll do that first thing tomorrow morning."

He smiled and said, "Why not now?"

I shrugged. But I knew and so did he — I wanted a chance to back out.

"Let's go put you in detox right now." He was smiling in an understanding way and his words had a soothing effect. "Everything's going to be fine." Then he patted me on the shoulder.

"Yeah," I finally said. "Let's do it."

MONDAY: Entering the program — from detoxification to self-examination. The road to recovery continues.

GIFT: MISD staff likely to move in during holidays

(From 1B)

Baressi said he hoped the school district would begin moving staff into the building during the Christmas holidays.

While the building itself was estimated to be worth $1.5 million, Midland County Tax Appraiser Ron Stegall said the property is valued at about $3.8 million, according to county tax rolls.

The school district will be exempt from paying property tax on the building. As the largest taxing entity in Midland, MISD would have received about $41,800 from the building this year at the school district's levy of $1.10 per valuation. Baressi said the school district would save at least $100,000 per year in rent alone for its offices rented at 1031 Andrews Hwy.

FAIR: Event result of year-long study

child services at Midland Memorial Hospital; ways to discipline and nurture a child, with Jackie Ashby, with the infant stimulation program of the state's Mental Health and Mental Retardation department; taking care of yourself as a parent, with Charles Tankersky of the alternative school program; and helping prepare a child for reading, with Carolyn Johnson of Region 18 Education Service Center.

An abundance of literature and information about parenthood also was available to the parents. In addition, the teen-agers were treated to lunch, a fashion show, and number of door prizes.

"It is a day of fun and a day of education," said Carol Steele, executive director of Permian Basin CAPP.

Ms. Steele said the fair was the result of a year-long support assistance study by PBCAPP to determine what resources were available to young parents.

Although many resources are available to young parents, Ms. Steele said they don't always reach everyone and the fair's purpose was to spread the word on the availability of those services.

Chacon agreed, adding that the fair served a twofold purpose: to educate teen-agers and to gain community support through public awareness.

"Being together at the fair can help them identify with themselves by seeing others in the same situation," Chacon said.

"The biggest thing is that they have the community coming forth and addressing the issue. We need to come out of the closet and deal with the issue, then we will be able to help the teens through education and self-awareness."

You can pretend teens don't have sex. But the evidence is hard to ignore.

Although Planned Parenthood believes that teens are neither emotionally nor physically ready for sex, we have to deal with reality. And reality is that three-quarters of American teens have had sex by the time they're 19, but only a third of these teens use birth control every time. That is why more than half of the girls get pregnant unintentionally.

Texas ranks fourth in teen pregnancies in the United States, with 18% of all births in the Permian Basin being to teens. This is the highest the teen pregnancy rate has been since 1985.

This isn't because our teens are more active - frequency is about the same. Our teens are simply more ignorant, confused and stymied about sex.

Given a chance to behave responsibly, they do. Studies of sex education and family planning services prove it.

Most kids, however, aren't given the chance. Adults spend more time trying to suppress teen sexuality than prevent teen pregnancy. Facts are few and far between, but commercial tease is as close as the TV.

The only sexual mystery left is contraception. It's never mentioned. What can we do, as a nation?

Be honest. Neither sexual hype nor hypocrisy gives our children any guidance.

While our children acquire values from their parents at home, they need to get the facts at school. Comprehensive sex education is needed at all grade levels.

Meanwhile, there's no reason to keep contraceptive advertising off the air. And plenty of reasons to urge the mass media (especially television) to treat sexuality in an accurate, non-exploitive way.

Few teens visit a family planning clinic before they become sexually active. Most come a year later - when they think they might be pregnant. It's time to eliminate every barrier to confidential birth control services, low-cost or free, for any sexually active teen.

Everyone agrees that teen pregnancy is a serious national problem. Direct health and welfare costs have reached $18 billion. But experience right here in the U.S. shows that every $1 invested in preventing teen pregnancy can save taxpayers $3.

It's a matter of facing the facts of life. And about time our leaders set the example.

Chaps court fans with preview night

By H.A. TUCK

Fall is in the air and Chaparral basketball is less than a month away. Fans can get a preview, however, if they attend Tuesday's "Meet The Chaps" night at 7 p.m. in Chaparral Center.

Tuck

They also get a bonus by meeting all the MC golfers, tennis players, and cheerleaders. That's followed by a brief intrasquad scrimmage among the basketball players.

Tennis coach Joe Williams and golf coach/athletic director Delnor Poss already have had their charges in several competitions.

Basketball head coach Reggie Franklin and assistant coach George Walker began fullscale workouts last week. The NJCAA this year mandated that basketball workouts would not begin until Oct. 1, except for a physical education period of one hour for three days each week.

Chaparral basketball has an interesting non-conference schedule, beginning with Cisco at MC on Nov. 5, followed by the Chaparral Classic Nov. 8-10. This year's Classic returns to pre-determined opponents rather than a tournament format. Involved are Midland, Western Texas, Howard, Murray State, Angelina and Jacksonville.

After the South Plains Classic in Levelland Nov. 15-17 and the Dodge City Classic in Dodge City, Kansas, Nov. 22-24, there's a nifty doubleheader which should get any fan's blood running faster. The event, on Nov. 30-Dec. 1, matches Midland vs. former NJCAA champion Dixie College of St. George, Utah, and Odessa against former NJCAA champion San Jacinto of Pasadena, Texas. MC and OC switch opponents the following night.

A home game with New Mexico Military and a road game to Frank Phillips College in Borger closes out the fall campaign.

MC and OC have another doubleheader at the Chap Center Jan. 5-6, with Hill College and another former national champion, Westark of Little Rock, Ark., providing the opposition. Then comes the tough part: 14 straight conference games.

The 13th annual Midland Arts Association's Fall Juried Art Show opens officially 7 p.m. Thursday at McCormick Gallery in the Allison Fine Arts Building. There's a reception and awards ceremony to begin the show's four-week run.

This show always presents some local talent, plus area artists, displaying work in oils, watercolors, mixed media, ceramics, and photography. Juror for this year's show is Neal Wilson, associate professor of art at Southwest Texas State University.

MAA's show ends Nov. 2. It's being followed by "Matrix," a display of photographs and drawings created by Lubbock youth and borrowed from the Lubbock Fine Arts Center. Matrix is scheduled Nov. 5-21.

Dr. Carl Frailey, geology instructor, is leading a family expedition to the Coahoma area Saturday as part of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum's Dinosaur exhibition. Frailey has made some significant discoveries in the Howard County area and will share some of that with those who attend the Dino Safari. The Petroleum Museum reported last week there were no spots left for the Safari, but you may call 683-4403 to find out if there have been any cancellations.

Dr. Michael Jordan, coordinator of vocal music, is presented a concert Sunday, Oct. 14, at 2 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. He'll be doing works by Schubert, Mozart, Honegger, and Harrison. His accompanist is Shari Weiner-Santorelli. Jordan has sung with the Desert Chorale at Santa Fe the past two summers.

The recital is free and open to the public.

Tickets go on sale tomorrow at Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa, plus the Chap Center box office, for the Nov. 1 concert by Restless Heart and Alan Jackson. The show is being presented by KGEE, KTPX, and the Lone Star Chevrolet Dealers. Tickets are priced at $17.50 with all seats reserved. You may charge your tickets at Chap Center or by calling 685-4584. There is a service charge for this.

Next Saturday the Watchtower Society is meeting in Chaparral Center for a daylong convention.

Response has been good for the college's information service through the Reporter-Telegram's Cityline. You can access nine different information lines about MC by dialing Cityline at 560-2400, then the MC line, which is 1835.

These services are: Chaparral Center events, line 1; Registration, line 2; Continuing Education, line 3; Business and Economic Development, line 4; Local and International Business Bids and Leads, line 5; Arts and Entertainment, line 6; MC Sports, line 7; Adult Basic Education, line 8, and Student Activities, line 9.

The college's Cityline number also is listed for information on the recording reached when off-campus calls are made to the central switchboard number after regular business hours.

Oh yes, you can access more than one of the college's information lines at a single call without hanging up, but you must press 1835 to get the menu after each information call.

This week's menu of Continuing Education courses is another mental feast, not to mention some physical possibilities. Select one or more from among: Rollerskating for Fun and Health, Travel in England, Scotland and Wales, Aerobic Dance, The Power of Imagery, Pottery, Introduction to Computer Usage in Business, or a Career Opportunities Workshop.

And area firefighters are signing up for the Volunteer Firefighter Weekend, being conducted through Midland College by the Midland Fire Department. The training is scheduled Oct. 13 and 14 from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. both days.

Call 685-4518 for more information or register in the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building.

210 7th-graders eligible for search

Staff Report

Two hundred and ten Midland seventh-graders are eligible to participate in the renowned Duke University Talent Identification Program: 56 from Alamo Junior High, 96 from Goddard Junior High and 58 from San Jacinto Junior High School.

To be eligible to participate in the program, the student must have scored at the 97 percentile or higher on a nationally normed test. Participants take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or the American College Testing (ACT) — college entrance examinations taken by college-bound high school juniors and seniors.

High test scores earn participants state and national recognition as well as opens doors to enrichment activities offered by a variety of educational organizations.

Last year, 17 local students earned honors in the program; five received national honors, 12 state honors.

To be eligible for national honors a student must score a minimum of 600 on the math portion of the SAT and 550 on the verbal portion of the SAT or a combined score of at least 1000. A similar score by a high school student would gain acceptance into many major colleges.

Eligibility for state recognition requires a minimum score of 500 for males and 450 for females on the math section and a minimum score of 430 on the verbal section.

Budget madness serves nothing

When Congress turned thumbs down on the $500-billion deficit reduction plan late last week, it became evident that even with the shutting down of the federal government staring them squarely in the face, lawmakers could not put aside special interest concerns long enough to pass a spending bill.

Oh, the federal government won't be allowed to fold. By the time you read this, a spending measure of some sort will have been passed or the automatic budget cutting device known as Gramm-Rudman will have taken effect. Politics simply mandates that resolve be tested to the limit.

The compromise bill reached by budget negotiators was evenhanded on cuts, a fact that led to its resounding defeat 254-179. It even included $134 billion in new taxes. In some manner, it touched virtually every American in an adverse way. Yet that is what is needed if the deficit is to be reduced significantly.

President George Bush, who had moved away from his no-new-taxes pledge to accept the deficit reduction compromise, attempted to sell the compromise to Congress and the nation, but the outcome made it obvious that one segment of the electorate was not ready to hear that the deficit would be reduced at their expense. Another segment believed that the deficit could be reduced without a tax increase, simply by making deep cuts in services. Others opposed deep cuts in services, but thought taxes should be increased anyway to pay for the deficit. There was no consensus on what needed to be done.

In the wake of the four-month summit to arrive at a budget compromise only to meet with rejection, one is left to wonder whether the deficit can ever be addressed short of being forgiven by the president, a move which could bring devastation to the economy. The deficit can be solved, but the economic medicine won't be pleasant.

Nonetheless, the deficit must be brought under control, whether or not Americans recognize it as the source of many recurring economic ills plaguing this country including inflation and high interest rates.

Getting the American public to accept cuts in governmental services such as Social Security and Medicare or even getting Congress to effect such cuts has proven unrealistic. People will continue to want more than they're willing to pay for and elected representatives will continue to dole out benefits because such action pays dividends at the polls on election day. And we'll all continue to suffer the economic ills stemming from the unresolved overspending habit in Congress.

The budgetary process has become a charade. The president submits his proposal, which is traditionally contrived to support his personal philosophy, and Congress plays to the crowd rather than to the interests of the nation as a whole. The result is a budget deficit that climbs ever higher and a "goodies giveaway" policy that mocks the meaning of representative government.

Democrats claim that more tax revenue is needed to help bring down the deficit; Republicans contend that such a move will only lead to a continuation of the tax and spend philosophy for which Congress is noted.

It's time for a change.

We must determine what we want our government to do for us at a cost we're willing to pay. Then we should tell Congress to carry out that plan and voters must vote out of office any representative or senator who won't follow through. Before that, though, we must be willing to pay our bad debt — called the deficit — so that our children and grandchildren don't get stuck with the bill.

AIDS in West Texas: Readers Respond

In conjunction with "AIDS in West Texas: An update on where we are ... and what's ahead," the recent series, readers are invited to express their opinions about AIDS care in the Permian Basin.

How will Midlanders, with their tradition of volunteerism, respond as AIDS spreads outside "easily definable communities"? As teen-agers are increasingly at risk for AIDS, what is the appropriate role of the schools in educating teens about that risk? Who will pay for the long-term health care of persons with AIDS? What do you think?

Letters received by Tuesday, Oct. 16, will be considered for publication in our reader-participation feature, "Sound-Off." They should be addressed to Antoinette Moore, Associate City Editor, PO Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702.

The special community forum will be published Sunday, Oct. 21.

JACK ANDERSON

Success may end Gorbachev career

WASHINGTON — Mikhail Gorbachev is looking more and more like the sacrificial lamb for his own altar.

It is no secret that the breathtaking changes he has brought about in the Soviet Union have won him more praise abroad than at home. Soviet citizens, crushed under an economic cave-in, are unimpressed by the Gorbachev revolution. "Make it work," his people seem to be saying.

Anderson

Maybe he can't.

Gorbachev's fans in the West are quick to blame his foibles on his conservative rivals, or on bureaucratic deadbeats and even on stereotypical Soviet sloth.

But Gorbachev has tied his own hands without the help of his detractors. He appears paralyzed at the prospect of championing one cause over another. Even as Soviet legislators have written him a blank check to make reforms at will, it is far from certain whether Gorbachev will muster the initiative.

How is it that the new Soviet messiah could fumble so momentous a mandate?

Gorbachev is hamstrung by the very qualities that brought him to power. He is a creature of the system that he now seeks to dismantle. That system is doomed, to be sure, but Gorbachev, as its undertaker, may be buried with it and its founders.

Gorbachev's personal political philosophy has long-since parted ways with communist dogma, but its influence still hobbles him. What matters is not his new ideas, but the fact that his tutelage under the old order is keeping him from leading under the new order.

The problem is that while Gorbachev's heart and mind boldly invoke perestroika and glasnost, his party underpinnings tell him to vacillate, compromise and procrastinate.

It isn't a character flaw. It's his conditioning. Gorbachev rose through the ranks of an exclusive club where one stroked egos, slapped backs and only stabbed them if absolutely necessary. His expertise, like that of the men who went before him, was in cutting deals and consolidating power in the corridors of the elite. Survival required compromise and sleight of hand, all to placate rivals so they would not unseat him from the top. The only change that the Kremlin was ever interested in was a change of autocrats.

It was never necessary to inspire popular support because the populace didn't matter.

This byzantine approach to power instilled some artful skills in Gorbachev. By most accounts, his deftness enabled him to slip rudimentary reforms past the party's old guard as it nodded off.

But if the foundation of reform is democracy, then Gorbachev's skills won't get him from here to there.

Try as he might to take sides or confront the opposition, Gorbachev remains a pol, skilled chiefly in co-opting his rivals.

Gorbachev's limbo tells us a lot about the impotence of the system that sired him. For all the five-year plans that litter Soviet history, change was never part of the schematic. Preservation of power was.

The irony that was unnoticed by so many fearful Westerners during the Cold War is now clearer: Soviet autocrats could only envy the power wielded by the elected leaders of Western democracies. The commissars could decree changes, but they couldn't make them work. They could crack the whip, but no one would be sent scampering. They could push, but they could not lead because they didn't know how.

Gorbachev was recently given a free hand to effect a 500-day plan to reach a relatively unbridled market-style reform. However, he probably won't act boldly enough to pull it off, despite the fact that his country is in crisis.

It is more likely that the sword by which he came to power will be turned against him, after cutting a swath for those with bolder ambitions. The prophet of a new Soviet society won't get to taste the fruits of his own labor.

Males dislike responsibility of growing up

Many people have been angered by the story of the New England Patriots football players displaying themselves naked to a female sports reporter in the locker room.

Many others are angry at the female sports reporter.

Baker

They ask, why does she want to be in a locker room anyhow? Doesn't she know there's likely to be nudity in a locker room?

Locker rooms are places where athletes shower and change clothes. These activities require undress. Doesn't she know that?

Oh come off it, says the other side. Unless these players grew up rich, they probably spent their boyhoods sharing one-bathroom households with mothers and sisters.

Surely they know how to bathe and change in close proximity to women without embarrassing the female side of the family.

This view of the matter is too sensible.

It suggests the only thing involved is the mechanics of etiquette, like how to use a finger bowl.

Don't athletes, like everybody else, learn in boyhood how to knot a bath towel around the waist?

This isn't about etiquette, however. It's about the male dislike of growing up.

Eternal boyhood is the dream of a depressing percentage of American males, and the locker room is the temple where they worship arrested development.

Schoolboys first experience locker-room rites when they learn the joy of flicking each other on bare buttocks with wet towels.

The activity in locker rooms of professional athletes can be more infantile, according to traitors who have spilled the beans in print.

Jim Bouton, the Yankee pitcher whose memoir, "Ball Four," is a classic of the genre, detailed antics so idiotic many athletes still think of him as Benedict Arnold in a jockstrap.

Television's traditional end-of-season visit to the winning team's locker room is a spectacle of boyish joy at its most intense, and boyish ignorance of how to treat champagne.

(It is said that owners provide eleventh-rate champagne, possibly because they can't bear to waste the real thing on overgrown boys who spray it around like water out of a garden hose.)

In less exciting times the locker room is the stage where the athlete engages in quiet boyish pastimes: for instance, refusing to talk to the press because it has hurt his feelings, or sulking pointedly so the press will report that he feels unappreciated by management or fans.

As the place where boyhood never ends, the locker room is naturally hostile to invasion by women.

This is not only because women are not boys. It's also because while women as a class may not like growing old, neither do they yearn to remain children forever. They are not simpatico. They spoil the ambiance.

The athletes' resentment, according to female sports writers who have had to work the locker rooms, varies according to the maturity of the sport.

A sports reporter quoted in The New Yorker a few years ago said she found acceptance easiest among basketball players, most of whom had been through college and seemed relatively adult. The most hostile were baseball players.

The locker room's resistance to female reporters is very different from the resistance to feminism put up briefly by the stag bar and much longer by the private men's club.

The stag bar was not a refuge for people who wanted to be boys forever, but only a place where males could take alcohol without incurring such complications as may ensue when men and women take alcohol together.

The locker room will not fall so easily. Too many American athletes cherish their boyhoods.

They will not grow up without a fight, bare knuckles and everything else.

A silver lining may lie behind dark clouds in Middle East

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Amid all the anxiety about higher taxes, a recession, Middle East war danger, and the decline of America as a world power, there was some encouraging perspective this past week about the future of our country.

One of our most distinguished specialists in world affairs is confident that if political wisdom prevails in Washington, there will be a bright future for America.

Hearst

Joseph S. Nye Jr., Harvard director of the Center for International Affairs and former deputy secretary of state, takes issue with those who contend the decline of America as a world economic and military power is inevitable.

In a New York Times article, Nye pointed out that "America, for all its problems, remains the world's largest economy, with the highest level of absolute productivity and a share of world product that has held constant for 15 years."

Noting that six weeks before Iraq invaded Kuwait there was speculation that the end of the Cold War had lessened the value many people put on military power, Nye said the Iraq crisis proved such thinking wrong.

"U.S. military power was," he added, "critically important in preventing Saddam Hussein from gaining control of 40 percent of world oil reserves and veto power over global economic growth." He also said America's success in mobilizing an international coalition against Iraq showed that we retain a broader range of power than any other country.

That strengthens my confidence that the efforts President Bush and Congress are making to cope with the budget deficit problem will, despite political pitfalls, lead to an agreement that within a few years will restore our country's prosperity.

I am also confident our military and diplomatic power will, with or without war, stop Iraq's tyrant, Saddam Hussein, from conquering the Arab world and creating an Islamic empire that would, in effect, dominate the world economy until we have the good sense to develop our own immense oil or alternative energy sources.

Meanwhile, the Iraq crisis has become a precarious race between a peaceful solution and war with the fateful finishing line minutes or months away.

President Bush now lacks United Nations Security Council support for military action under Article 42 of the U.N. Charter to force Saddam Hussein to stop defying the Security Council's demand that he withdraw his conquering army from Kuwait. So the president has acquiesced in a "diplomatic solution" movement led by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and French President Francois Mitterrand, to the delight of the worst anti-American terroristic elements in the Middle East. These include the murderous wing of the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Islamic barbarians.

The appeasement option is also strongly supported by Jordanian King Hussein who has just recently been accused of playing a diabolical double game in the Iraq crisis. The once popular Jordanian monarch has been accused by the Saudi royal family of plotting with Yemen President Ali Abdallah Salih to follow up Saddam's conquest of Iraq by invading Saudi Arabia and carving up the oil-rich Saudi territory among themselves.

According to a Washington Post report from Riyadh attributed to a U.S. diplomat, the Saudi royal family claims to have evidence that King Hussein was counting on Saddam Hussein to help him restore the Hashemite dominion over the Hejaz region in western Saudi Arabia, which includes the holy cities of Mecca and Medina.

Saudi officials informed the U.S. diplomat that King Hussein led his court ministers to believe weeks before the Iraq invasion of Kuwait that he would soon have the title of Sherif Hussein, the title his great-grandfather bore as ruler of the Hejaz. Saudi suspicion soared when the king, speaking to Jordanian legislators, said he would be honored if they would address him as "Sherif Hussein."

If the Saudi claims are true, it could mean King Hussein had a secret pact with Saddam Hussein and the Yemeni leader to join in the invasion of Saudi Arabia following Iraq's conquest of Kuwait. The Saudis believe that under this plot, Yemen's booty would have been the verdant and mountainous Asir province in southwestern Saudi Arabia, claimed as a traditional part of Yemen since it was ruled by the Queen of Sheba. The plot, if true, was undoubtedly blocked by President Bush's quick dispatch of powerful U.S. forces to defend Saudi Arabia.

As this Byzantine intrigue unfolds, there is intense international diplomatic activity under way to try to find a peaceful settlement that would, at the very least, compel Saddam Hussein to disgorge Kuwait.

President Mitterrand flew to the Persian Gulf ostensibly to visit the 4,000 French Legionnaires and naval units sent there to join the allied forces. However, he also met with Arab leaders to discuss peace proposals. This followed the French leader's suggestion at the U.N. General Assembly in New York that an Iraqi pledge to withdraw from Kuwait would be enough to start talks about a negotiated settlement. I cannot believe President Mitterrand would trust any pledge made by the Iraq ruler who, a few days before he invaded Kuwait, gave solemn face-to-face pledges to Arab leaders that he had no intention of doing so. It reminds me of the French and British appeasement acceptance of Hitler's pledges that he had no intention of attacking any country in Europe.

President Gorbachev sent a member of his Presidential Council to Jordan and Baghdad to discuss a diplomatic solution amid reports that Saddam Hussein might visit Moscow to meet directly with the Soviet leader.

There is now talk of Iraq's peaceful withdrawal from Kuwait leading to negotiations for a general Middle East settlement. This concept would include creation of an independent Palestine state in Jordan, withdrawal of Israeli forces from the West Bank in return for Arab recognition of the permanent existence of the Jewish nation, and establishment of a powerful U.N. anti-aggression security force in the region.

That strikes me as too good to be true, but who would have imagined a few years ago the historic changes that would soon take place in Europe and the Soviet Union?

Recognizing Vietnam just bowing to reality

By James R. Reckner

LUBBOCK — It is well past time for Americans to confront reality in Southeast Asia. It is time for the United States to extend diplomatic recognition to the Communist regime that now governs there.

More than 15 years ago we witnessed the sad end of the Republic of Vietman (South Vietnam) as North Vietnamese Army tanks knocked down the front gates of the presidential palace in Saigon. (It is officially named Ho Chi Minh City, but I am told everyone there still calls it Saigon, and Saigon it will always be to me.)

Perhaps more traumatic for most Americans were the chaotic scenes played out at the American Embassy in downtown Saigon during the last hours before the arrival of the North Vietnamese. Tens of thousands of South Vietnamese citizens had worked for the United States in various capacities. Fearing for their future under communism, they mobbed the barricaded embassy compound in a desperate effort to flee with their former patrons. Some were lucky; other would spend years in Communist "re-education camps."

A U.S. Navy task force stood by offshore, and as South Vietnamese Air Force helicopters too numerous to retain on board the U.S. ships landed, carrying escaping officials, the crafts were pushed over the side. Millions of dollars of U.S.-provided aircraft were abandoned. Doubtless they were better off at the bottom of the sea than in the hands of the communists.

But the image of these costly helicopters falling over the side of the ships came to symbolize, to many Americans, the squandering of U.S. treasure in Southeast Asia.

As America beat its hasty and undignified retreat from Vietnam, yet another problem remained: discovering the fate of the many Americans still unaccounted for throughout both Vietnams, Laos and Cambodia.

'It is time for America to acknowledge the unavoidable fact that the Hanoi government is in total control of Vietnam and is the only government of that nation, whether we like the way that government was established or not.'

— James R. Reckner, director, Texas Tech Center for the Study of the Vietnam Conflict

Since 1975, we have witnessed the Khmer Rouge reign of terror in Cambodia (Kampuchea), which in mindless murder and uncontrolled terror far surpassed anything undertaken by the North Vietnamese during America's time in Vietnam.

Vietnam's 1978 invasion of Cambodia, which triggered an abortive Chinese invasion of Vietnam, ousted the Khmer Rouge and established a Vietnamese puppet regime in Cambodia. It also highlighted the complexity of centuries-old relationships in the region, which Americans only superficially appreciated when we became involved there.

For the past 15 years, the United States has had no direct diplomatic representation in Indochina. We have not officially recognized the Socialist Republic of Vietnam (SRV), the unified Vietnamese government which was established after the fall of Saigon.

Recognition remains an exceedingly emotional issue. We tend to remember the final defeat of South Vietnam as a reflection of North Vietnamese violation of the 1973 Paris Peace Accords. We tend to forget that in the final months of the war Congress took effective control of U.S. foreign policy and, by curtailing supplies to the South, undermined the confidence of the South Vietnamese armed forces. Our Congress reneged on promises of continuing military material support the Nixon administration had made to the South Vietnamese at the time of the Paris Peace Accords. In this sense, we assured a North Vietnamese military victory when they conducted their full-scale invasion of the South in 1974-75.

It is time for America to make a "reality check" regarding our relations with Southeast Asia. It is time for America to acknowledge the unavoidable fact that the Hanoi government is in total control of Vietnam and is the only government of that nation, whether we like the way that government was established or not.

Before you tar me with the liberal brush, let me assure you that I am not a supporter of the Vietnamese communists.

The act of extending diplomatic recognition does not necessarily mean the United States agrees with the principles of the government recognized. After all, not only do we recognize the government of Communist China — the folks who so brutally crushed the student democracy movement in Beijing — we have also extended our "most favored nation" status to them. And Communist China is the most consistent supporter of the murderous Khmer Rouge organization now trying to regain control of Cambodia.

Glory of war fades into grim reality of blood, body bags

By Don Handley

Since my time of war in Vietnam, I have visited some of the famous old battlefields, including the Alamo and San Jacinto here in Texas. In my mind, I could hear the muskets and cannons firing, commingled with the screams of the wounded and dying.

I forgot the reasons why these battles had taken place.

Before I went to Vietnam, these battlefields were merely interesting places to visit. War, to me, was just a word in a history book, and dreams of glory gleaned from the war films of my youth.

Now, I can never view war again in terms of history, strategies, and glory. I saw too much spilled blood, and helped load too many body bags. War has become an entirely personal thing for me.

This has given me an insight as to how it will probably be for our young American soldiers now poised on the edge of war in the Middle East.

There are certain obvious differences between Saudi Arabia and Vietnam. The soldiers are wearing desert tan, where I wore jungle green. I had trees for shade. There are no bars or brothels — at least not yet — in Saudi Arabia. The weapons deployed are more powerful and destructive than those used in Vietnam. Then again, so are the potential enemy's weapons.

Most important, we seem to have a measure of support from other nations, for now. Some have sent various-sized forces to join ours. Some of them have promised money to help fund this operation. We had very little of this type of support in Vietnam, and half the world was against us.

There are similarities between Vietnam and the Middle East. These similarities have existed in every war since Mr. Ug's clan took on Mr. Mug's clan for control of the water hole, with rocks and clubs, one Stone Age day so long ago.

When soldiers are sent off to war, we are saying the reasons for fighting are worth more than their lives. We will be sending them, knowing full well that a goodly number will be coming home in flag-draped aluminum caskets. We will task the survivors to carry the physical and psychological scars of battle for the rest of their lives.

'We learned in Vietnam — I hope — that we cannot fight a war on a piecemeal basis. Gradually increasing the pressure does not work. We cannot be concerned with civilian casualties, or the fate of the hostages that Saddam Hussein is hiding.'

— Don Handley, Midland Vietnam veteran

We learned in Vietnam — I hope — that we cannot fight a war on a piecemeal basis. Gradually increasing the pressure does not work. We cannot be concerned with civilian casualties, or the fate of the hostages that Saddam Hussein is hiding.

We won't be carrying out the contradictory ideas of war-making and nation-building at the same time, as we failed at in Vietnam.

This war will be a maximum quick-strike — a two-sided blitzkreig, designed as Gen. Patton said, "to cause the maximum amount of death and destruction in the shortest period of time."

When the smoke clears, there will be thousands of American casualties, hundreds of thousands of civilian casualties in Iraq, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. Cities will be damaged, towns and villages will be destroyed.

The ironic and tragic outcome of all this will be to severely damage the oil production and transportation facilities to the point it will take several years to bring them up to full capacity again. We and Saddam Hussein will have destroyed the very things our troops were sent to protect.

Let's not kid ourselves about one other thing. Our soldiers will be facing a large, well-equipped, highly trained, battle-hardened force. They are not going to roll over and play dead any more than the Viet Cong or the North Vietnamese Army did, just because they have Americans to contend with. This will be a very costly war that Saddam seems willing to pay the price for. This will force us to do the same.

I have come to view war as Gen. William T. Sherman did:

"I am tired, and I am sick of war. Its glory is all moonshine. Only those who have never fired a shot, or heard the screams and groans of the wounded, would want more blood, more desolation and more vengeance. War is hell, boys, war is hell."

When I hear others talking of protecting "our" oil supply, or stopping an "aggressor," all I can think of is spilled blood and loaded body bags. There are too many advocates of war, whose knowledge of war has come from the movies, and whose concept of winning or losing is more appropriate for a football stadium.

When a soldier must endure the obscene tragedy of battle; when he must kill to survive; when he must watch a comrade die; the soldier loses, no matter the outcome.

I will pray that no American soldier has to die for my "right" to fill up my car with cheap gasoline. I would rather get out my cane and walk.

I will pray for a quick end to this mess. I will pray that every American in Saudi Arabia comes home alive without having fired a shot.

I will pray for the American people and their leaders to turn their attention back to some debilitating problems here at home. I'm not betting next week's gas money on it, though.

Midland resident Don Handley served in Da Nang, Vietnam, with the 366th Tactical Fighter Wing July 1968-July 1969.

Are there any lessons from the Vietnam War that can be applied to the Mideast conflict?

"I think the people learned something, but the government didn't. It's all politics. I think the government sees money involved."

— Brenda Mullins, Midland

"If war starts over there, it's going to be another Vietnam, you know. It's not oil, it's Saddam Hussein. This guy wants to take everything under his control. It's been a long time since Vietnam. It could be worse."

— Steve McEdward, Midland

"It's really two different types of conflicts. You had a jungle war in Vietnam whereas this is a desert. I spent 21 years in the Air Force. If it goes on too long like Vietnam, people will lose support in it. I had a bunch of friends who were killed in Vietnam. People really didn't understand what we were doing over there."

— Travis Pipes, Midland

"First of all, if we're going to send young men over there to die, then we ought to support them. I also believe that because America does have interests there, soldiers should not be put down like the vets were upon their return from Vietnam. We ought to support them. I think there's going to be a war. There may not be an alternative."

— Rev. Billy Ashley, Midland

"The lesson is, war should be avoided. I feel we're in the beginning stages like Vietnam. I'm very much against it. I think the (potential) loss of lives is senseless."

— Tressa Elig, Midland

"I don't think we learned anything. We're in a war situation over there aren't we? I have a nephew and a cousin over there. We have U.S. people over there. We have to go over there and do something. It doesn't surprise me, it seems like the U.S. never learns anything. That's my opinion."

— Danny Nix, Midland

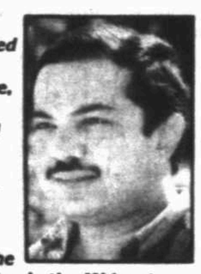

"What we learned in Vietnam was that nationalism is a stronger motivational factor behind people's behavior than any ideology. People care more about where they live than they do about anyone else's ideas. If you invade their backyard, it doesn't matter what reason they think they're fighting for, they're fighting for their backyard."

— Carl Frailey, Midland

"I don't know if we necessarily use what we learn. I think there were lessons. Vietnam wasn't a war supported by the country as a whole; it wasn't a war we got into to win. It was more of a defensive war. Now whether Americans apply this to the Mideast or not, I don't know."

— Ron Mancuso, Lubbock

"The lesson we learned from Vietnam, I believe, is not getting involved in something that we're not sure about. We're overreacting to the whole situation in the Mideast. In many ways, it's an internal matter between Iraq and Kuwait. I think we're making the same mistakes as before. Iraq is not going to be someone you can just bowl over. I'm not saying what they did was right, but I really feel it's something they can settle between themselves, rather than getting us in the middle of it."

— Nagib Muhammed, Midland

"A lot of lives would be lost if we chose to go to war. From what Mr. Saddam Hussein says, that's what it sounds like. Americans are a little lax at this point, they're not as worried as they should be. A lot of them don't have loved ones over there, but if they were in that situation, they would be just as worried."

— Greg Garrett, Midland

"I think it's two different situations. I'm not sure I agree with the way the Middle East is being handled, but we had to do something. We couldn't just let it ride. I guess time will tell. What I wonder is, if we can marshal support for this why can't lawmakers and people do the same for the budget, which is more insidious, in my mind."

— Steve Benson, Midland

"If we're going to get into a war, we need to be very serious about it and not have just a police action, but something that would be decisive. I'd hate to get into something about oil resources. I'd prefer we put the money into oil development in the Permian Basin and the United States."

— Ethel Matthews, Midland

Series was impartial and well-researched

On behalf of the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans' Memorial Committee Inc., I wish to commend Chris Van Wagenen on a well-researched and impartially presented series on the Vietnam conflict.

Those of us who were personally involved or touched by that war have always been at a loss for words to express to others the experiences, feelings, frustrations, helplessness and hopelessness generated by that war.

Van Wagenen's articles help to clarify and give credence to the efforts in progress to establish a memorial to the 200 men from the Permian Basin who perished or remain missing in action in Southeast Asia.

Thank you, Mr. Van Wagenen.

U.S. still involved in senseless wars

I can recall in 1959, sitting in my eighth-grade class in Midland reading an otherwise obscure monthly publication called "The Messenger." An article in it predicted further escalation and U.S. involvement in a war 10,000 miles away in a country called Vietnam.

Ridiculous, I thought. How could this paper know that? But by 1964, a 1-A classification on my draft card was proof it was right.

At first I supported the war, believing in the Domino Theory and that the evils of communism had to be checked.

Slowly, I began to change my mind. By the invasion of Cambodia, I was sure U.S. involvement in Vietnam was a big mistake, and I found myself deeply opposed to the war.

Believing as I did put me between the proverbial rock and a hard place, for I was not going to lose my life for a country that could not differentiate between democracy and communism, much less have a preference for one; on the other hand I did not want to leave the U.S.

The price for my choice — serving but not going to Vietnam — was four plus years active duty stateside.

A bunch of friends died over this nonsense. Of my two close friends who died, one was the only child born to a couple in their mid-40s.

Tell them about principle; convince them, but don't talk to me about it. I am still angry that the U.S. made many of us choose between our conscience and our country, thus splitting our nation.

We are creatures of duty, but blind allegiance to duty is not a defense to wrongdoing; that principle was established in Nuremberg after the end of World War II. It still applies today.

So now we stand in the sands of Saudia Arabia. There are differences between Saudia Arabia and Vietnam, argue those who would sacrifice my neighbor's son, or maybe my son. Yeah, there are differences: the Vietnamese didn't think that killing an American was a one-way ticket to heaven.

My regretful conclusion is that we didn't learn a thing from Vietnam. The willingness of the U.S. to play Lone Ranger is both appalling and disgusting.

Somebody's son is going to come home draped in an American flag because it has been the intentional policy of the U.S. government to rely on cheap foreign oil since the end of World War II, and because of our insatiable craving to have the world as we want it.

As for myself, I haven't walked the floor at night worrying over sick children, and spent a million hours trying to raise intelligent, happy, resourceful kids just to supply the never-ending designs of the bloody hands of the hypnotized.

In this war, as in all the senseless wars to come, I will do anything to make sure it won't be my children.

My son didn't die for useless cause

My son, Charles Rush, was 31 years old when he went to Vietnam. He had been in the Marine Corps for 15 years and was considered a "lifer." He was a drill sergeant at Paris Island, N.C., and from there went to Cherry Point, N.C.

He had a beautiful wife, Emily; and two children, Teresa, who was 10 years old, and Chip, who was 8. He was a good father and husband and a wonderful son.

When I found out he had volunteered for Vietnam I was very up-

Budget madness serves nothing

When Congress turned thumbs down on the $500-billion deficit reduction plan late last week, it became evident that even with the shutting down of the federal government staring them squarely in the face, lawmakers could not put aside special interest concerns long enough to pass a spending bill.

Oh, the federal government won't be allowed to fold. By the time you read this, a spending measure of some sort will have been passed or the automatic budget cutting device known as Gramm-Rudman will have taken effect. Politics simply mandates that resolve be tested to the limit.

The compromise bill reached by budget negotiators was evenhanded on cuts, a fact that led to its resounding defeat 254-179. It even included $134 billion in new taxes. In some manner, it touched virtually every American in an adverse way. Yet that is what is needed if the deficit is to be reduced significantly.

President George Bush, who had moved away from his no-new-taxes pledge to accept the deficit reduction compromise, attempted to sell the compromise to Congress and the nation, but the outcome made it obvious that one segment of the electorate was not ready to hear that the deficit would be reduced at their expense. Another segment believed that the deficit could be reduced without a tax increase, simply by making deep cuts in services. Others opposed deep cuts in services, but thought taxes should be increased anyway to pay for the deficit. There was no consensus on what needed to be done.

In the wake of the four-month summit to arrive at a budget compromise only to meet with rejection, one is left to wonder whether the deficit can ever be addressed short of being forgiven by the president, a move which could bring devastation to the economy. The deficit can be solved, but the economic medicine won't be pleasant.

Nonetheless, the deficit must be brought under control, whether or not Americans recognize it as the source of many recurring economic ills plaguing this country including inflation and high interest rates.

Getting the American public to accept cuts in governmental services such as Social Security and Medicare or even getting Congress to effect such cuts has proven unrealistic. People will continue to want more than they're willing to pay for and elected representatives will continue to dole out benefits because such action pays dividends at the polls on election day. And we'll all continue to suffer the economic ills stemming from the unresolved overspending habit in Congress.

The budgetary process has become a charade. The president submits his proposal, which is traditionally contrived to support his personal philosophy, and Congress plays to the crowd rather than to the interests of the nation as a whole. The result is a budget deficit that climbs ever higher and a "goodies giveaway" policy that mocks the meaning of representative government.

Democrats claim that more tax revenue is needed to help bring down the deficit; Republicans contend that such a move will only lead to a continuation of the tax and spend philosophy for which Congress is noted.

It's time for a change.

We must determine what we want our government to do for us at a cost we're willing to pay. Then we should tell Congress to carry out that plan and voters must vote out of office any representative or senator who won't follow through. Before that, though, we must be willing to pay our bad debt — called the deficit — so that our children and grandchildren don't get stuck with the bill.

AIDS in West Texas: Readers Respond

In conjunction with "AIDS in West Texas: An update on where we are ... and what's ahead," the recent series, readers are invited to express their opinions about AIDS care in the Permian Basin.

How will Midlanders, with their tradition of volunteerism, respond as AIDS spreads outside "easily definable communities"? As teen-agers are increasingly at risk for AIDS, what is the appropriate role of the schools in educating teens about that risk? Who will pay for the long-term health care of persons with AIDS? What do you think?

Letters received by Tuesday, Oct. 16, will be considered for publication in our reader-participation feature, "Sound-Off." They should be addressed to Antoinette Moore, Associate City Editor, PO Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702.

The special community forum will be published Sunday, Oct. 21.

Success may end Gorbachev career

WASHINGTON — Mikhail Gorbachev is looking more and more like the sacrificial lamb for his own altar.

It is no secret that the breathtaking changes he has brought about in the Soviet Union have won him more praise abroad than at home. Soviet citizens, crushed under an economic cave-in, are unimpressed by the Gorbachev revolution. "Make it work," his people seem to be saying.

Anderson

Maybe he can't.

Gorbachev's fans in the West are quick to blame his foibles on his conservative rivals, or on bureaucratic deadbeats and even on stereotypical Soviet sloth.

But Gorbachev has tied his own hands without the help of his detractors. He appears paralyzed at the prospect of championing one cause over another. Even as Soviet legislators have written him a blank check to make reforms at will, it is far from certain whether Gorbachev will muster the initiative.

How is it that the new Soviet messiah could fumble so momentous a mandate?

Gorbachev is hamstrung by the very qualities that brought him to power. He is a creature of the system that he now seeks to dismantle. That system is doomed, to be sure, but Gorbachev, as its undertaker, may be buried with it and its founders.

Gorbachev's personal political philosophy has long-since parted ways with communist dogma, but its influence still hobbles him. What matters is not his new ideas, but the fact that his tutelage under the old order is keeping him from leading under the new order.

The problem is that while Gorbachev's heart and mind boldly invoke perestroika and glasnost, his party underpinnings tell him to vacillate, compromise and procrastinate.

It isn't a character flaw. It's his conditioning. Gorbachev rose through the ranks of an exclusive club where one stroked egos, slapped backs and only stabbed them if absolutely necessary. His expertise, like that of the men who went before him, was in cutting deals and consolidating power in the corridors of the elite. Survival required compromise and sleight of hand, all to placate rivals so they would not unseat him from the top. The only change that the Kremlin was ever interested in was a change of autocrats.

It was never necessary to inspire popular support because the populace didn't matter.

This byzantine approach to power instilled some artful skills in Gorbachev. By most accounts, his deftness enabled him to slip rudimentary reforms past the party's old guard as it nodded off.

But if the foundation of reform is democracy, then Gorbachev's skills won't get him from here to there.

Try as he might to take sides or confront the opposition, Gorbachev remains a pol, skilled chiefly in co-opting his rivals.

Gorbachev's limbo tells us a lot about the impotence of the system that sired him. For all the five-year plans that litter Soviet history, change was never part of the schematic. Preservation of power was.

The irony that was unnoticed by so many fearful Westerners during the Cold War is now clearer: Soviet autocrats could only envy the power wielded by the elected leaders of Western democracies. The commissars could decree changes, but they couldn't make them work. They could crack the whip, but no one would be sent scampering. They could push, but they could not lead because they didn't know how.

Gorbachev was recently given a free hand to effect a 500-day plan to reach a relatively unbridled market-style reform. However, he probably won't act boldly enough to pull it off, despite the fact that his country is in crisis.

It is more likely that the sword by which he came to power will be turned against him, after cutting a swath for those with bolder ambitions. The prophet of a new Soviet society won't get to taste the fruits of his own labor.

Males dislike responsibility of growing up

Many people have been angered by the story of the New England Patriots football players displaying themselves naked to a female sports reporter in the locker room.

Many others are angry at the female sports reporter.

Baker

They ask, why does she want to be in a locker room anyhow? Doesn't she know there's likely to be nudity in a locker room?

Locker rooms are places where athletes shower and change clothes. These activities require undress. Doesn't she know that?

Oh come off it, says the other side. Unless these players grew up rich, they probably spent their boyhoods sharing one-bathroom households with mothers and sisters.

Surely they know how to bathe and change in close proximity to women without embarrassing the female side of the family.

This view of the matter is too sensible.

It suggests the only thing involved is the mechanics of etiquette, like how to use a finger bowl.

Don't athletes, like everybody else, learn in boyhood how to knot a bath towel around the waist?

This isn't about etiquette, however. It's about the male dislike of growing up.

Eternal boyhood is the dream of a depressing percentage of American males, and the locker room is the temple where they worship arrested development.

Schoolboys first experience locker-room rites when they learn the joy of flicking each other on bare buttocks with wet towels.

The activity in locker rooms of professional athletes can be more infantile, according to traitors who have spilled the beans in print.

Jim Bouton, the Yankee pitcher whose memoir, "Ball Four," is a classic of the genre, detailed antics so idiotic many athletes still think of him as Benedict Arnold in a jockstrap.

Television's traditional end-of-season visit to the winning team's locker room is a spectacle of boyish joy at its most intense, and boyish ignorance of how to treat champagne.

(It is said that owners provide eleventh-rate champagne, possibly because they can't bear to waste the real thing on overgrown boys who spray it around like water out of a garden hose.)

In less exciting times the locker room is the stage where the athlete engages in quiet boyish pastimes: for instance, refusing to talk to the press because it has hurt his feelings, or sulking pointedly so the press will report that he feels unappreciated by management or fans.

As the place where boyhood never ends, the locker room is naturally hostile to invasion by women.

This is not only because women are not boys. It's also because while women as a class may not like growing old, neither do they yearn to remain children forever. They are not simpatico. They spoil the ambiance.

The athletes' resentment, according to female sports writers who have had to work the locker rooms, varies according to the maturity of the sport.

A sports reporter quoted in The New Yorker a few years ago said she found acceptance easiest among basketball players, most of whom had been through college and seemed relatively adult. The most hostile were baseball players.

The locker room's resistance to female reporters is very different from the resistance to feminism put up briefly by the stag bar and much longer by the private men's club.

The stag bar was not a refuge for people who wanted to be boys forever, but only a place where males could take alcohol without incurring such complications as may ensue when men and women take alcohol together.

The locker room will not fall so easily. Too many American athletes cherish their boyhoods.

They will not grow up without a fight, bare knuckles and everything else.

Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Amid all the anxiety about higher taxes, a recession, Middle East war danger, and the decline of America as a world power, there was some encouraging perspective this past week about the future of our country.

One of our most distinguished specialists in world affairs is confident that if political wisdom prevails in Washington, there will be a bright future for America.

Hearst

Joseph S. Nye Jr., Harvard director of the Center for International Affairs and former deputy secretary of state, takes issue with those who contend the decline of America as a world economic and military power is inevitable.

In a New York Times article, Nye pointed out that "America, for all its problems, remains the world's largest economy, with the highest level of absolute productivity and a share of world product that has held constant for 15 years."

Noting that six weeks before Iraq invaded Kuwait there was speculation that the end of the Cold War had lessened the value many people put on military power, Nye said the Iraq crisis proved such thinking wrong.

"U.S. military power was," he added, "critically important in preventing Saddam Hussein from gaining control of 40 percent of world oil reserves and veto power over global economic growth." He also said America's success in mobilizing an international coalition against Iraq showed that we retain a broader range of power than any other country.

That strengthens my confidence that the efforts President Bush and Congress are making to cope with the budget deficit problem will, despite political pitfalls, lead to an agreement that within a few years will restore our country's prosperity.

I am also confident our military and diplomatic power will, with or without war, stop Iraq's tyrant, Saddam Hussein, from conquering the Arab world and creating an Islamic empire that would, in effect, dominate the world economy until we have the good sense to develop our own immense oil or alternative energy sources.

Meanwhile, the Iraq crisis has become a precarious race between a peaceful solution and war with the fateful finishing line minutes or months away.

President Bush now lacks United Nations Security Council support for military action under Article 42 of the U.N. Charter to force Saddam Hussein to stop defying the Security Council's demand that he withdraw his conquering army from Kuwait. So the president has acquiesced in a "diplomatic solution" movement led by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and French President Francois Mitterrand, to the delight of the worst anti-American terroristic elements in the Middle East. These include the murderous wing of the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Islamic barbarians.

The appeasement option is also strongly supported by Jordanian King Hussein who has just recently been accused of playing a diabolical double game in the Iraq crisis. The once popular Jordanian monarch has been accused by the Saudi royal family of plotting with Yemen President Ali Abdallah Salih to follow up Saddam's conquest of Iraq by invading Saudi Arabia and carving up the oil-rich Saudi territory among themselves.

According to a Washington Post report from Riyadh attributed to a U.S. diplomat, the Saudi royal family claims to have evidence that King Hussein was counting on Saddam Hussein to help him restore the Hashemite dominion over the Hejaz region in western Saudi Arabia, which includes the holy cities of Mecca and Medina.

Saudi officials informed the U.S. diplomat that King Hussein led his court ministers to believe weeks before the Iraq invasion of Kuwait that he would soon have the title of Sherif Hussein, the title his great-grandfather bore as ruler of the Hejaz. Saudi suspicion soared when the king, speaking to Jordanian legislators, said he would be honored if they would address him as "Sherif Hussein."

If the Saudi claims are true, it could mean King Hussein had a secret pact with Saddam Hussein and the Yemeni leader to join in the invasion of Saudi Arabia following Iraq's conquest of Kuwait. The Saudis believe that under this plot, Yemen's booty would have been the verdant and mountainous Asir province in southwestern Saudi Arabia, claimed as a traditional part of Yemen since it was ruled by the Queen of Sheba. The plot, if true, was undoubtedly blocked by President Bush's quick dispatch of powerful U.S. forces to defend Saudi Arabia.

As this Byzantine intrigue unfolds, there is intense international diplomatic activity under way to try to find a peaceful settlement that would, at the very least, compel Saddam Hussein to disgorge Kuwait.

President Mitterrand flew to the Persian Gulf ostensibly to visit the 4,000 French Legionnaires and naval units sent there to join the allied forces. However, he also met with Arab leaders to discuss peace proposals. This followed the French leader's suggestion at the U.N. General Assembly in New York that an Iraqi pledge to withdraw from Kuwait would be enough to start talks about a negotiated settlement. I cannot believe President Mitterrand would trust any pledge made by the Iraq ruler who, a few days before he invaded Kuwait, gave solemn face-to-face pledges to Arab leaders that he had no intention of doing so. It reminds me of the French and British appeasement acceptance of Hitler's pledges that he had no intention of attacking any country in Europe.

President Gorbachev sent a member of his Presidential Council to Jordan and Baghdad to discuss a diplomatic solution amid reports that Saddam Hussein might visit Moscow to meet directly with the Soviet leader.

There is now talk of Iraq's peaceful withdrawal from Kuwait leading to negotiations for a general Middle East settlement. This concept would include creation of an independent Palestine state in Jordan, withdrawal of Israeli forces from the West Bank in return for Arab recognition of the permanent existence of the Jewish nation, and establishment of a powerful U.N. anti-aggression security force in the region.

That strikes me as too good to be true, but who would have imagined a few years ago the historic changes that would soon take place in Europe and the Soviet Union?

Recognizing Vietnam just bowing to reality

By James R. Reckner

LUBBOCK — It is well past time for Americans to confront reality in Southeast Asia. It is time for the United States to extend diplomatic recognition to the Communist regime that now governs there.

More than 15 years ago we witnessed the sad end of the Republic of Vietman (South Vietnam) as North Vietnamese Army tanks knocked down the front gates of the presidential palace in Saigon. (It is officially named Ho Chi Minh City, but I am told everyone there still calls it Saigon, and Saigon it will always be to me.)

Perhaps more traumatic for most Americans were the chaotic scenes played out at the American Embassy in downtown Saigon during the last hours before the arrival of the North Vietnamese. Tens of thousands of South Vietnamese citizens had worked for the United States in various capacities. Fearing for their future under communism, they mobbed the barricaded embassy compound in a desperate effort to flee with their former patrons. Some were lucky; other would spend years in Communist "re-education camps."

A U.S. Navy task force stood by offshore, and as South Vietnamese Air Force helicopters too numerous to retain on board the U.S. ships landed, carrying escaping officials, the crafts were pushed over the side. Millions of dollars of U.S.-provided aircraft were abandoned. Doubtless they were better off at the bottom of the sea than in the hands of the communists.

But the image of these costly helicopters falling over the side of the ships came to symbolize, to many Americans, the squandering of U.S. treasure in Southeast Asia.

As America beat its hasty and undignified retreat from Vietnam, yet another problem remained: discovering the fate of the many Americans still unaccounted for throughout both Vietnams, Laos and Cambodia.

'It is time for America to acknowledge the unavoidable fact that the Hanoi government is in total control of Vietnam and is the only government of that nation, whether we like the way that government was established or not.'

— James R. Reckner, director, Texas Tech Center for the Study of the Vietnam Conflict

Since 1975, we have witnessed the Khmer Rouge reign of terror in Cambodia (Kampuchea), which in mindless murder and uncontrolled terror far surpassed anything undertaken by the North Vietnamese during America's time in Vietnam.

Vietnam's 1978 invasion of Cambodia, which triggered an abortive Chinese invasion of Vietnam, ousted the Khmer Rouge and established a Vietnamese puppet regime in Cambodia. It also highlighted the complexity of centuries-old relationships in the region, which Americans only superficially appreciated when we became involved there.

For the past 15 years, the United States has had no direct diplomatic representation in Indochina. We have not officially recognized the Socialist Republic of Vietnam (SRV), the unified Vietnamese government which was established after the fall of Saigon.

Recognition remains an exceedingly emotional issue. We tend to remember the final defeat of South Vietnam as a reflection of North Vietnamese violation of the 1973 Paris Peace Accords. We tend to forget that in the final months of the war Congress took effective control of U.S. foreign policy and, by curtailing supplies to the South, undermined the confidence of the South Vietnamese armed forces. Our Congress reneged on promises of continuing military material support the Nixon administration had made to the South Vietnamese at the time of the Paris Peace Accords. In this sense, we assured a North Vietnamese military victory when they conducted their full-scale invasion of the South in 1974-75.

It is time for America to make a "reality check" regarding our relations with Southeast Asia. It is time for America to acknowledge the unavoidable fact that the Hanoi government is in total control of Vietnam and is the only government of that nation, whether we like the way that government was established or not.

Before you tar me with the liberal brush, let me assure you that I am not a supporter of the Vietnamese communists.

The act of extending diplomatic recognition does not necessarily mean the United States agrees with the principles of the government recognized. After all, not only do we recognize the government of Communist China — the folks who so brutally crushed the student democracy movement in Beijing — we have also extended our "most favored nation" status to them. And Communist China is the most consistent supporter of the murderous Khmer Rouge organization now trying to regain control of Cambodia.

Are there any lessons from the Vietnam War that can be applied to the Mideast conflict?

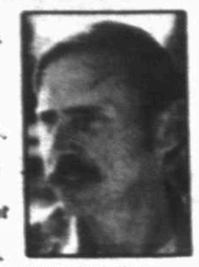

"I think the people learned something, but the government didn't. It's all politics. I think the government sees money involved."

— Brenda Mullins, Midland

"If war starts over there, it's going to be another Vietnam, you know. It's not oil. It's Saddam Hussein. This guy wants to take everything under his control. It's been a long time since Vietnam. It could be worse."

— Steve McEdward, Midland

"It's really two different types of conflicts. You had a jungle war in Vietnam whereas this is a desert. I spent 21 years in the Air Force. If it goes on too long like Vietnam, people will lose support in it. I had a bunch of friends who were killed in Vietnam. People really didn't understand what we were doing over there."

— Travis Pipes, Midland

"First of all, if we're going to send young men over there to die, then we ought to support them. I also believe that because America does have interests there, soldiers should not be put down like the vets were upon their return from Vietnam. We ought to support them. I think there's going to be a war. There may not be an alternative."

— Rev. Billy Ashley, Midland

"The lesson is, war should be avoided. I feel we're in the beginning stages like Vietnam. I'm very much against it. I think the (potential) loss of lives is senseless."

— Tressa Elig, Midland

"I don't think we learned anything. We're in a war situation over there aren't we? I have a nephew and a cousin over there. We have U.S. people over there. We have to go over there and do something. It doesn't surprise me, it seems like the U.S. never learns anything. That's my opinion."

— Danny Nix, Midland

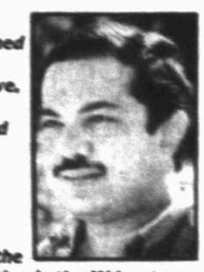

"What we learned in Vietnam was that nationalism is a stronger motivational factor behind people's behavior than any ideology. People care more about where they live than they do about anyone else's ideas. If you invade their backyard, it doesn't matter what reason they think they're fighting for, they're fighting for their backyard."

— Carl Frailey, Midland

"I don't know if we necessarily use what we learn. I think there were lessons. Vietnam wasn't a war supported by the country as a whole; it wasn't a war we got into to win. It was more of a defensive war. Now whether Americans apply this to the Mideast or not, I don't know."

— Ron Mancuso, Lubbock

"The lesson we learned from Vietnam, I believe, is not getting involved in something that we're not sure about. We're overreacting to the whole situation in the Mideast. In many ways, it's an internal matter between Iraq and Kuwait. I think we're making the same mistakes as before. Iraq is not going to be someone you can just bowl over. I'm not saying what they did was right, but I really feel it's something they can settle between themselves, rather than getting us in the middle of it."

— Nagib Muhammed, Midland

"A lot of lives would be lost if we chose to go to war. From what Mr. Saddam Hussein says, that's what it sounds like. Americans are a little lax at this point, they're not as worried as they should be. A lot of them don't have loved ones over there, but if they were in that situation, they would be just as worried."

— Greg Garrett, Midland

"I think it's two different situations. I'm not sure I agree with the way the Middle East is being handled, but we had to do something. We couldn't just let it ride. I guess time will tell. What I wonder is, if we can marshal support for this why can't lawmakers and people do the same for the budget, which is more insidious, in my mind."

— Steve Benson, Midland

"If we're going to get into a war, we need to be very serious about it and not have just a police action, but something that would be decisive. I'd hate to get into something about oil resources. I'd prefer we put the money into oil development in the Permian Basin and the United States."

— Ethel Matthews, Midland

Glory of war fades into grim reality of blood, body bags

By Don Handley

Since my time of war in Vietnam, I have visited some of the famous old battlefields, including the Alamo and San Jacinto here in Texas. In my mind, I could hear the muskets and cannons firing, commingled with the screams of the wounded and dying.

I forgot the reasons why these battles had taken place.

Before I went to Vietnam, these battlefields were merely interesting places to visit. War, to me, was just a word in a history book, and dreams of glory gleaned from the war films of my youth.

Now, I can never view war again in terms of history, strategies, and glory. I saw too much spilled blood, and helped load too many body bags. War has become an entirely personal thing for me.

This has given me an insight as to how it will probably be for our young American soldiers now poised on the edge of war in the Middle East.

There are certain obvious differences between Saudi Arabia and Vietnam. The soldiers are wearing desert tan, where I wore jungle green. I had trees for shade. There are no bars or brothels — at least not yet — in Saudi Arabia. The weapons deployed are more powerful and destructive than those used in Vietnam. Then again, so are the potential enemy's weapons.

Most important, we seem to have a measure of support from other nations, for now. Some have sent various-sized forces to join ours. Some of them have promised money to help fund this operation. We had very little of this type of support in Vietnam, and half the world was against us.

There are similarities between Vietnam and the Middle East. These similarities have existed in every war since Mr. Ug's clan took on Mr. Mug's clan for control of the water hole, with rocks and clubs, one Stone Age day so long ago.

When soldiers are sent off to war, we are saying the reasons for fighting are worth more than their lives. We will be sending them, knowing full well that a goodly number will be coming home in flag-draped aluminum

'We learned in Vietnam — I hope — that we cannot fight a war on a piecemeal basis. Gradually increasing the pressure does not work. We cannot be concerned with civilian casualties, or the fate of the hostages that Saddam Hussein is hiding.'

— Don Handley, Midland Vietnam veteran

caskets. We will task the survivors to carry the physical and psychological scars of battle for the rest of their lives.

We learned in Vietnam — I hope — that we cannot fight a war on a piecemeal basis. Gradually increasing the pressure does not work. We cannot be concerned with civilian casualties, or the fate of the hostages that Saddam Hussein is hiding.

We won't be carrying out the contradictory ideas of war-making and nation-building at the same time, as we failed at in Vietnam.

This war will be a maximum quick-strike — a two-sided blitzkreig, designed as Gen. Patton said, "to cause the maximum amount of death and destruction in the shortest period of time."

When the smoke clears, there will be thousands of American casualties, hundreds of thousands of civilian casualties in Iraq, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. Cities will be damaged, towns and villages will be destroyed.

The ironic and tragic outcome of all this will be to severely damage the oil production and transportation facilities to the point it will take several years to bring them up to full capacity again. We and Saddam Hussein will have destroyed the very things our troops were sent to protect.

Let's not kid ourselves about one other thing. Our soldiers will be facing a large, well-equipped, highly trained, battle-hardened force. They are not going to roll over and play dead any more than the Viet Cong or the North Vietnamese Army did, just because they have Americans to contend with. This will be a very costly war that Saddam seems willing to pay the price for. This will force us to do the same.

I have come to view war as Gen. William T. Sherman did:

"I am tired, and I am sick of war. Its glory is all moonshine. Only those who have never fired a shot, or heard the screams and groans of the wounded, would want more blood, more desolation and more vengeance. War is hell, boys, war is hell."

When I hear others talking of protecting "our" oil supply, or stopping an "aggressor," all I can think of is spilled blood and loaded body bags. There are too many advocates of war, whose knowledge of war has come from the movies, and whose concept of winning or losing is more appropriate for a football stadium.

When a soldier must endure the obscene tragedy of battle; when he must kill to survive; when he must watch a comrade die; the soldier loses, no matter the outcome.

I will pray that no American soldier has to die for my "right" to fill up my car with cheap gasoline. I would rather get out my cane and walk.

I will pray for a quick end to this mess. I will pray that every American in Saudi Arabia comes home alive without having fired a shot.

I will pray for the American people and their leaders to turn their attention back to some debilitating problems here at home. I'm not betting next week's gas money on it, though.

Midland resident Don Handley served in Da Nang, Vietnam, with the 366th Tactical Fighter Wing July 1968-July 1969.

Series was impartial and well-researched

On behalf of the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans' Memorial Committee Inc., I wish to commend Chris Van Wagenen on a well-researched and impartially presented series on the Vietnam conflict.

Those of us who were personally involved or touched by that war have always been at a loss for words to express to others the experiences, feelings, frustrations, helplessness and hopelessness generated by that war.

Van Wagenen's articles help to clarify and give credence to the efforts in progress to establish a memorial to the 200 men from the Permian Basin who perished or remain missing in action in Southeast Asia.

Thank you, Mr. Van Wagenen.

U.S. still involved in senseless wars

I can recall in 1959, sitting in my eighth-grade class in Midland reading an otherwise obscure monthly publication called "The Messenger." An article in it predicted further escalation and U.S. involvement in a war 10,000 miles away in a country called Vietnam.

Ridiculous, I thought. How could this paper know that? But by 1964, a 1-A classification on my draft card was proof it was right.

At first I supported the war, believing in the Domino Theory and that the evils of communism had to be checked.

Slowly, I began to change my mind. By the invasion of Cambodia, I was sure U.S. involvement in Vietnam was a big mistake, and I found myself deeply opposed to the war.

Believing as I did put me between the proverbial rock and a hard place, for I was not going to lose my life for a country that could not differentiate between democracy and communism, much less have a preference for one; on the other hand I did not want to leave the U.S.

The price for my choice — serving but not going to Vietnam — was four plus years active duty stateside.

A bunch of friends died over this nonsense. Of my two close friends who died, one was the only child born to a couple in their mid-40s.

Tell them about principle; convince them, but don't talk to me about it. I am still angry that the U.S. made many of us choose between our conscience and our country, thus splitting our nation.

We are creatures of duty, but blind allegiance to duty is not a defense to wrongdoing; that principle was established in Nuremberg after the end of World War II. It still applies today.

So now we stand in the sands of Saudia Arabia. There are differences between Saudia Arabia and Vietnam, argue those who would sacrifice my neighbor's son, or maybe my son. Yeah, there are differences: the Vietnamese didn't think that killing an American was a one-way ticket to heaven.

My regretful conclusion is that we didn't learn a thing from Vietnam. The willingness of the U.S. to play Lone Ranger is both appalling and disgusting.

Somebody's son is going to come home draped in an American flag because it has been the intentional policy of the U.S. government to rely on cheap foreign oil since the end of World War II, and because of our insatiable craving to have the world as we want it.

As for myself, I haven't walked the floor at night worrying over sick children, and spent a million hours trying to raise intelligent, happy, resourceful kids just to supply the never-ending designs of the bloody hands of the hypnotized.

In this war, as in all the senseless wars to come, I will do anything to make sure it won't be my children.

My son didn't die for useless cause

My son, Charles Rush, was 31 years old when he went to Vietnam. He had been in the Marine Corps for 15 years and was considered a "lifer." He was a drill sergeant at Paris Island, N.C., and from there went to Cherry Point, N.C.

He had a beautiful wife, Emily; and two children, Teresa, who was 10 years old, and Chip, who was 8. He was a good father and husband and a wonderful son.

When I found out he had volunteered for Vietnam I was very upset. I could not understand at first why.

He came to see me before he left, and said, "Mother, think of it this way. If I built a brick wall around my family and an enemy came and destroyed it and harmed my family, I would want someone to come to their aid. That is the way I feel about this war. I am protecting my family and my country by going."

After he was killed, the only thing that held me together was hearing and remembering those words, for I knew that he gave his life so that others would have freedom.

My son DID NOT give his life for a worthless cause. He gave it for a country and people that he believed in. I resent those people talking about what a worthless war Vietnam was when most of them never set foot on foreign soil; therefore they have no right to even speak, much less give an opinion.

That war is over now but the hurt that goes on in the hearts of the families that lost loved ones will never be over.

We're still not asking the right questions

Vietnam Veterans Against the War is the oldest Vietnam veterans organization, formed in 1967. We remain alive and well, older and at least a little wiser, having been active in veterans' issues and American foreign policy issues for 23 years.

The most important things to learn are to ask the right questions. "Why did we wage war in Southeast Asia?" is a question that should encourage us to ask, "Why will we go to war in the Middle East?" In the past, we've too quickly accepted easy and misinformed answers, and sometimes, out-and-out lies.

If we've learned anything, we've yet to put our knowledge to use. Vietnam's desire for self-determination and Vietnamese willingness to pay a very high price for it was matched by our lack of recognition of the former and our willingness to make them pay the latter. The war in Southeast Asia cost us: more than 58,000 dead; more than 300,000 disabled, and trillions of dollars, the cost of which we are still paying today — with interest.

Another cost of the Vietnam War: 2.5 to 6 million people dead in Southeast Asia, hundreds of thousands wounded (at the height of the fighting, in 1968-69, civilian casualties were 130,000 per month). We dropped more bomb tonnage on Southeast Asia than in all of World War II and the Korean War combined.

A main justification for U.S. war on Southeast Asia involved the idea that we needed raw materials and the only way to get them was military intervention. Yet, despite Vietnamese desire to have normal economic and trade relations with us today, we seem willing to do without these materials.

Maintaining a supply of "cheap" oil from the Mideast is not worth the cost. The American people would best be served by a national policy of energy conservation, and the development of alternative, clean and renewable energy resources — all initiatives cut during the last 10 years.

Mideast oil will not seem so cheap if thousands of American lives and billions of tax dollars are the price of its purchase.

Our real vital interest — our young people — will once again be wasted in a war. Our society has many problems; poverty and homelessness, violence, drug abuse, AIDS, toxic pollution and waste, profiteering and corruption such as the savings and loan scandal. These are our vital interests.

We can't even take care of the veterans from the last war. What would be the result of the largest hostage crisis in American history?

American military intervention solves none of these problems, but would repeat past tragedies. Fighting for the "American way of life" is soon becoming the "American way of death."

American military force can no more bring peace and freedom to the Mideast than it brought to Southeast Asia.

Blood is more precious than oil. Bring the troops home now.

Men, women who served weren't losers

As an interested party, I wish to commend your publication, and especially reporter Chris Van Wagenen, for the well-researched and meaningful series, "Vietnam: Beyond the Black Wall."

Being a Vietnam veteran myself, and having worked with others for the past five years, I realize this was not an easy story to write or publish; not only for Van Wagenen and the Midland Reporter-Telegram, but especially for the veterans and families interviewed. Ten to 15 years ago, this series would have been nearly impossible to do.

Kudos also go to Van Wagenen for getting the veterans' views — those who were actually there. If these experiences, and those of hundreds of thousands more, had been told, or known, by the American public 20 or so years ago, there might not have been any need for counseling centers.

If anyone who has read the series takes one point to heart, I hope it is that those men and women who were there, were not, are not and will not be, losers. They served their country when called, as did all other veterans in the past, but were not given the respect for doing so.

I also wish to extend appreciation to those family members of Vietnam veterans, killed or missing in action, for allowing their feelings to be told. That took inner strength and courage.

Once again, thanks to the Reporter-Telegram and Van Wagenen for giving some of us who were there the chance to tell your readers what would not be told in the past.

Series brought back painful memories

Some memories dredged up by your series needed review while others would be wished forever away.

I flew 208 combat missions in the F-4 Phantom from Cam Rahn Bay, RNV, and from Ubon RTAFB, Thailand. Three days before my tour ended, I took two 23mm shells in the belly of my airplane while deep inside enemy territory.

Home a week later, I was expected to resume life where I had left it. No wind down, no transition. Friends had grown lots of hair, lots of distance and a penchant for quoting the gospel according to Time magazine.

I dealt with it alone, spending my Friday evenings at the O-Club Bar with other fighter pilots in the same mess, wishing we were back dropping bombs. Sometimes that made more sense than the world we returned to.

A few years ago, my seventh-grade daughter asked me about grandfather's World War II experience. She needed to make a school report for Veterans' Day and he was the only vet she knew of. She knew nothing of my combat tours because she had never been told.

Overall, I've had it easy — only one divorce, and I make a good living. And I'll never again have to watch the friend I ate breakfast with explode on some stinking hillside. I've even mounted Vietnam service ribbons around our stores, like a secret sign of brotherhood. It works.

LHS grad assigned to DPS office

Staff Report

Trooper Arthur Williams, 27, son of Arthur and Artelia Williams of Midland, has graduated from the Texas Department of Public Safety Training Academy and has been assigned to the Highway Patrol Service in Canyon.

Williams

Williams, who graduated from Lee High School in 1981 and from Abilene Christian College in 1986 with a degree in mass communications, was one of 100 cadets recently commissioned as Texas state troopers in graduation ceremonies at the DPS Administrative Headquarters in Austin. Williams assumes his new duties immediately.

Williams participated in track and football at LHS, was a part of the ACU football team and took part in the 1984 Olympic trails. During 1987 he tried out for both the Miami Dolphins and the Cleveland Browns.

Col. Joe Milner, DPS director, said he's very proud of the new troopers and is looking forward to their service with the Department.

"These men and women received a comprehensive 22-week course extensively covering the many responsibilities of DPS troopers," Milner said. "They have been well-trained to uphold the laws of this state in routine as well as hazardous law enforcement circumstances.

"A Texas trooper must perform a number of different tasks in addition to enforcing traffic laws. The trooper will assist in narcotics arrests and other felony cases as well as manhunts and disaster situations," Milner pointed out.

The DPS training course included comprehensive instruction in traffic law, criminal law, arrest procedures, accident investigation and numerous other law enforcement-related topics.

REALITY: Discussion key to conflict resolution

(From 5B)

nized Hitler's Nazi government in Berlin and maintained relations with it while it invaded and enslaved most of Western Europe in 1939 and 1940. Our ambassador remained in Tokyo during the late 1930s, as Japan invaded and pillaged China, and stayed until the attack on Pearl Harbor in December 1941. Not until Nazi Germany actually declared war on the U.S. following Pearl Harbor did we sever relations with them.

It is difficult to understand how this nation expects to resolve the many differences outstanding in Southeast Asia without talking to the nation with the greatest influence in the Indochinese peninsula. After all, discussion is the key to peaceful conflict resolution.

Doubtless there are those who will argue that recognizing the Vietnamese government would amount to a betrayal of the men still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. I would argue just the opposite.

An American government with the courage to establish relations with Vietnam would soon have diplomatic personnel permanently stationed in that country. Such a mission probably would offer greater prospects for gaining the release of former South Vietnamese officials still held in so-called "re-education camps" and also for determining the fate of American men still missing in Indochina.

As an example, improved relations between the two nations might encourage village chiefs and others in the Vietnamese countryside to come forward with information about the location of crashed aircraft, etc. Our diplomats there might even offer rewards for such information. This could lead to more rapid location and identification of the remains of some of the MIAs. Given the present icy state of our relations with Vietnam, such approaches are unlikely.

What would America have to lose by recognizing Vietnam? She lost much of her integrity in 1974-75 when Congress withdrew promised support of the South Vietnamese. She lost much of her dignity in 1975 during the withdrawal.

We need to face the realities of Southeast Asia. We lost the war — or at least the so-called "peace" — in Paris and in Washington as much as in Hanoi and Saigon.

It is time to come to grips with that reality. It is time to end the U.S.-imposed embargo on trade with Vietnam; after all, it has not caused a change of regime — it hurts the common people more than the government. It is time to move toward establishing relations with Vietnam, no matter how detestable we might consider their leadership. And it is far past time to resolve forever the fate of our men still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia.

James R. Reckner, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of history at Texas Tech University in Lubbock. A retired naval officer and veteran of two tours of duty with Vietnamese navy riverine forces, he directs Tech's Center for the Study of the Vietnam Conflict.

Frat member found dead at UT

AUSTIN (AP) — A member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity was found dead on the fraternity's front lawn Saturday.

Police said University of Texas student, Byron Wesley Gauntt, 18 apparently was asleep or intoxicated and fell off the roof.

Officers said they don't suspect fraternity hazing in the death.

MC offers 10 short courses beginning next week

Staff Report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer ten short courses beginning the week of Oct. 15.

Morris Shaw will teach Driver Education on Mondays through Thursdays from 6:30-8:30 p.m., Oct. 15 through Nov. 8. Students receive classroom and behind-the-wheel instruction in preparation for Texas driver's licensing procedures. Students must be 15 years old on or before the first class meeting. Class limited to 35 students. Fee is $175.

Aware: Violent Crime Prevention Course will be taught by Fred Lewis on Mondays, Oct. 15 and Oct. 22, from 6:30-9 p.m. The Aware program trains to turn the odds in favor of survival, not to become a street fighter. Not a defensive tactics course, it teaches how to sharpen senses, organize thoughts, control emotions, recognize a dangerous situation and know what tactics to use to avoid a violent criminal. Learn how to escape, negotiate, deceive, comply or fight in an unavoidable confrontation.

Course is offered free of charge.

Rene Chambers will teach Acting, The Basics on Tuesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m., Oct. 16 through Dec. 13. Learn the process of making the printed words come alive as a character on stage. Helpful for beginners who have never been on stage or as a review for more seasoned performers. Class will include some basic audition techniques. Fee is $41.

Steve Forbes will teach Employee First Aid on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., Oct. 16 through Oct. 25. Training in emergency care of injured or ill person while on-the-job. Course includes certification in adult CPR. Fee is $20.

Financial Planning Seminar will be taught by Lee Hobbs on Tuesdays from 7-9:15 p.m., Oct. 16 through Nov. 6. Class designed for students of any age seeking knowledge in investments and financial planning and desire to develop strategies to achieve financial goals in life, i.e. mid-life, pre-retirement, and retirement. Topics include: sources of income, investment types and strategies, insurance and funding strategies; and effects of inflation, taxation and compound interest on income and asset growth. Will use concepts to develop a personal financial plan. Notebook and materials are included in tuition. Fee is $35.

Home Landscaping Design I will be taught on Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m., Oct. 16 through Dec. 4. Learn the fundamentals of creating a beautiful home landscape environment. Topics include construction techniques for patios, walks, fences, decks, trellis, sprinker systems, nightlighting, etc. An introduction to plant material will also be covered. A finished landscape plan for home or dream-home will be class project. Class limited to 12 students. Fee is $33.

Jane Hunt will teach Beginning International Folk Dance on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7-8:30 p.m., Oct. 17 through Nov. 19. When is it correct to shout, "Haj, haj, bozhe dai?" The answer is when dancing an authentic Yugoslavian Kolo. How about trying Misirlou, a Greek-American favorite or Erev/Shel/Shoshnin, straight from Isreal? Folk dance brings to life the music and dance of other countries. For all ages, no partners required. Casual clothing and comfortable shoes are recommended. Fee is $31.

Career Opportunities Workshop will be taught on Thursday, Oct. 18 and Friday, Oct. 19 from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Presented by a motivational expert, this valuable workshop will provide techniques for enhancing job-seeking skills. Participants will receive practical instruction in preparing a more effective personal resume, perfecting interview techniques and completing a complicated employment application. Course workbook included in fee and is available at first class meeting. Class limited to 30 students. Fee is $37.

Brenda Kothmann will teach Silk Flower Arranging II on Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., Oct. 18 through Nov. 29. Develop style and techniques and create special arrangements and wreaths for home/business locations. Emphasis will be given to the creation of large pieces with more extensive use of design. Also included will be one evening of fresh flower arranging instruction. Basic supply list available at the Continuing Education Office; additional supplies available at the first class meeting. Class limited to 12 students. Fee is $25.

Medic First Aid will be taught by Steve Forbes Saturday, Oct. 20 from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. The Medic First Aid program is a course designed to train individuals in adult and child CPR for certification or non-certification. This course also teaches the proper way of performing a secondary assessment in order to recognize various life-threatening illnesses and injuries so that the lay person may be able to manage or treat an injured or ill victim. Class limited to 20 students. Fee is $20.

For information, contact the Office of Continuing Education in the Administration Building, 685-4518.

Spam theft spoiled

DALLAS (AP) — They may not have been Monty Python fans, but three men appeared ready to open their own version of the eatery in the British comedy troupe's skit that has a menu of just Spam.

When Dallas police found the men strolling down the street with eight cases of the canned meat, it prompted a few questions: Where did the Spam come from? Where was it going? What exactly is it?

The police confiscated the $240 worth of 7-ounce cans of Spam and waited for someone to claim it. As of Friday no one had.

INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER CARRIER WEEK
OCTOBER 7 - 13, 1990

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON
August 1, 1990
I am pleased to join the International Circulation Managers Association in honoring our Nation's newspaper carriers for their outstanding efforts.
The public has long relied on the dedication and efficiency of our newspaper carriers, whose devoted service helps to bring the world to our doorsteps. Lone Star Auctions auctioneer Marilyn Burgess takes bids on a desk at Saturday's FDIC auction.

FDIC auction draws area's bargain hunters

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Bargain hunters and the curious alike descended on the FDIC Auction facility, located on West Highway 80 a mile west of Midland International Airport, for the first Saturday FDIC auction held in the Permian Basin.

On sale were numerous assets held by Texas banks that were acquired by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. According to Gene Shrode, property manager for the FDIC, about half the items were from Midland banks, the rest from other banks in the state.

He added that the auction brought in $600,000 — 100 percent of its appraised value — and that every item for sale was sold. "Even the drilling rigs, and prices for them were up," he noted.

There were 650 registered buyers, and Shrode estimated that a couple of thousand shoppers were at the facility during the sale.

"Like everyone else, I'm looking for a bargain," said Russ Hickerson of Odessa, with Permian Brine Sales. Hickerson was the successful bidder on some office furniture, and said he was pleased with the price. "I think I paid about 20 cents on the dollar," he estimated.

The voices of the two auctioneers for Lone Star Auctioneers could be heard in the background as browsers milled about. Outside a Lone Star auctioneer took bids on a variety of cars, semi-trucks, boats and oilfield supplies.

Inside, a second staff member auctioned off large amounts of office furniture — everything from desks to chairs to sofas — as well as office equipment like computers, microfilm machines and phone systems, some which had the phone lists still on them.

There were also refrigerators, stoves, a vacuum cleaner, a supply of auto parts and the inventory of a failed dime store.

Also on the auction block were a Jaguar and a red Porsche, an airplane that sold for $27,000, artwork, and a 3.66 carat diamond that sold for $5,000.

"We're very pleased with the sale," Shrode said.

LHS Marching Band sweeps contest

Staff Report

Lee High School Marching Band once again swept contest awards in its district.

The Rebel percussion section and color guard won the sweepstakes trophy for the highest cumulative point total at the West Texas Auxiliary Championships recently.

This competition was hosted by Coronado High School in Lubbock. This is the second year in a row that LHS has won this award.

The drum line, flag line and the rifle line each advanced to the finals and placed first in their respective areas at the WTAC. Other honors include the best percussion ensemble (Holly Monroe, Terry Pullig and Kristin Roberts), best twirler solo (Starla Adams), best rifle solo (Teri Pullig) and best flag solo (Patricia Moudy).

Competitors receiving a division one on solos were Starla Adams, twirler; Geoff Elsner, tenor; Amy Gould, rifle; Holly Monroe, rifle; Patricia Moudy, flag; Chris Neill, drum major; Teri Pullig, rifle; and Jennifer Stapp, snare.

Ensembles which received a division one rating are the rifle ensemble, Holly Monroe, Teri Pullig and Kristin Roberts; flag ensemble, Misty Chapman and Tiffany Henry, another flag ensemble, J.J. Bean and Michele Hayes; pit ensemble, Starla Adams, Jeff Castillo, Wade Cothran, Kelli Keegan, Greg Kroeger, Lindsey Walker, Kendra Sorrells, Nathaniel Tague, Jane Varela and Jason Westbrook; bass drum ensemble, Jeff Castillo, Geoff Elsner, Darrell Hawkins, Lynn Holdridge, Mike Hopper and Jennifer Stapp; and snare ensemble, David Bryant, Lynn Holdridge, Mike Hopper, Rob Hunt, Cory Shouse and Jennifer Stapp.

Members of the rebel drum line are: snare line, David Bryant, Lynn Holdridge, Mike percussion (percussion lieutenant), Rob Hunt, Cory Shouse and Jennifer Stapp (percussion lieutenant); tenor line, Geoffrey Elsner, Charles Hunter and Paul Mansour; bass line, Jeff Blaylock, Jonathan Hagan, Darrell Hawkins, John Lester, Stephanie Morrison and John Smith; Cymbals, Anita Lambert, Rena McCain, Lisa Murray and Kelcie Pepper; pit, Starla Adams, Jeff Castillo, Wade Cothran, Kelli Keegan, Greg Kroeger, Kendra Sorrells, Nathaniel Tague, Jane Varela, Lindsey Walker and Jason Westbrook.

Members of the rebel flag line are Becky Alvarez, J.J. Bean (flag captain), Melanie Carrizales, Misty Chapman, Teresa Davis, Wendy Fields, Cris Gipson, Michele Hayes, Colleen Hennessy, Tiffany Henry, Cassie Heredia, Cindy Hooten (flag captain), Susanne Martin, Rachel McPherson, Tami Miller, Patricia Moudy, Heather Murphy, Elizabeth Noble, Elecia Osadchuk, Karen Ramirez, Ann Sqyres, Teresa Talent, Lori Travis and Jennifer Zambrano.

Members of the rebel flag line are Amy Gould, Holly Monroe (rifle captain), Teri Pullig, Kristin Roberts, Kelly Rose and Jennifer Wassenburg.

Others participating in the competition were drum majors Chris Neill and Missy Pollard, and feature twirler Starla Adams.

The band is under the direction of Randy Storie, Duane Young and Rick Villareal, auxilliary coordinator.

Chap classic

Gil Pyle and his children, Casey, 8, and Kallie, 6, examine one of the vehicles at Saturday's classic car auction held at Chaparral Center on the campus of Midland College. Classic Cars of Midland, Michael B. Trost and Jess Brookings, in conjunction with Balog and Balog Auctioneering hosted the event. Approximately 100 "vintage" vehicles, dating from the 1920s to the '80s, were put up for auction.

Former Midlander to autograph cookbook at Pages and Prints

Staff Report

Mimi Hackney Kerr, formerly of Midland, will be at Pages and Prints Bookstore, 40 Plaza Center, Saturday for a booksigning of her book, "A Young Chef's Nutrition Guide and Cookbook."

Kerr

She is the daughter of John Hackney and the late Betty Hackney. She grew up in Midland and acquired her family's love of cooking.

A former kindergarten teacher, "she took her love of cooking and of kids, rolled them all together and began teaching children's cooking classes in Houston where she now lives with her husband and three daughters," said a press release provided by the bookstore.

All the recipes in the "Young Chef's Guide" were tested by Ms. Kerr's students at the LePanier Cooking School in Houston. In addition, each recipe provides nutritional information on a youngster's level.

"Jack-O-Lantern Cookies (page 262) will be served to all the little cooks who come to the booksigning in their Halloween costumes," said Patteann D-Beverley, owner of the bookstore.

Lights' cancellation provokes anger

AUSTIN (AP) — Hundreds of people, angry that the City Council pulled the plug on an annual Christmas light display, lit up the phone lines at City Hall.

"They were calling us Scrooge," said Ann Denkler, aide to council member Smoot Carl-Mitchell.

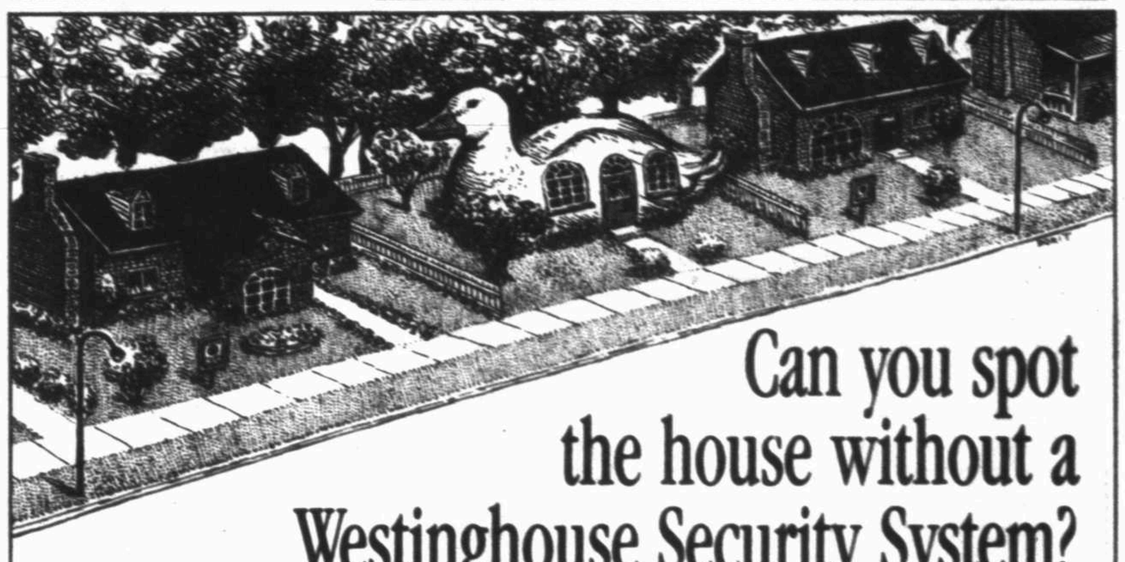

The Zilker Park Trail of Lights is a mile-long, drive-through exhibit featuring 30,000 lights. The vote to cut funding for it was unanimous, with council member Max Nofziger suggesting the money be used for a tree specialist.

Some Austinites darkly vowed to remember the action come election time.

Restaurants along the street that leads to the trail also got some calls. The restaurateurs for years have complained about the gridlock caused by more than 25,000 cars creeping past their businesses.

Gas.
It's A Natural.

When it comes to doing things better for less, nothing works like gas. Naturally. Nothing heats your home, heats your water, cooks your food, or dries your clothes as efficiently. Or as cost-effectively. Or as cleanly.

What's more, no other form of energy helps to protect our environment – or our economy – quite like natural gas. Leading scientists state that the use of natural gas can guard against many of the environmental problems facing us today. And, virtually all of the natural gas we consume in the United States is produced right here in North America.

As for reliability, when's the last time your natural gas went off?

Use natural gas for your household energy. For cleanliness, cost-efficiency and reliability, it's a natural.

A's batter Red Sox, 9-1

■ What looked in foresight to be a battle of superstar starting pitchers deteriorated for the Boston crew Friday night as Oakland's late-inning offense allowed the defending World Champs to take a 1-0 series lead over the Bosox.

Associated Press

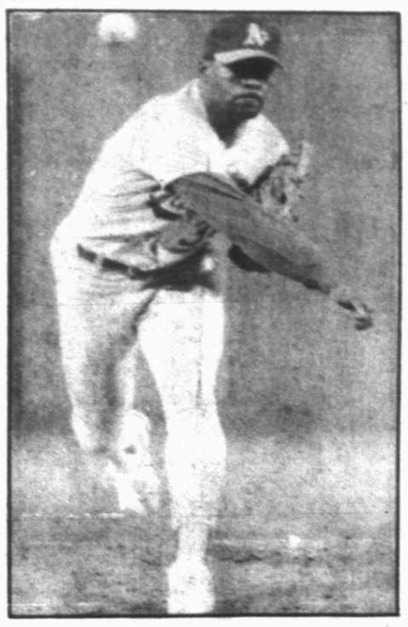

BOSTON — Dave Stewart's pitching held up after Roger Clemens' arm gave out and that was all the Oakland Athletics needed.

Stewart did not beat Clemens, but he again beat the Boston Red Sox, this time 9-1 Saturday night in Game 1 of the American League playoffs.

ALCS

A classic pitching duel fell apart the instant Clemens tired and left after six innings with a 1-0 lead. Then the game turned into what Boston feared most — a battle of the bullpens.

Oakland tied it in the seventh on Rickey Henderson's sacrifice fly off Larry Andersen and went ahead in the eighth when Jose Canseco led off with a single, advanced on Harold Baines' first sacrifice bunt since 1984, stole third and scored on Carney Lansford's one-out single off Jeff Gray.

Oakland's Dave Stewart

With Stewart shutting down the Red Sox on four hits through eight innings, the Athletics made it official in the ninth. They tied an AL playoff record with seven more runs against Dennis Lamp and Rob Murphy. Canseco had a sacrifice fly and Rickey Henderson added a two-run single.

Eckersley took over in the ninth, as if it was really necessary, and finished the five-hitter.

Stewart, pitching the playoff opener for the third straight year, recorded his eighth consecutive victory over the Red Sox. Six of them have come against Clemens and, even though this one didn't, it felt just as good.

For Stewart, it was his sixth victory in nine postseason starts. For Clemens, the no-decision left him just 1-1 in seven playoff and World Series games.

The heavily favored Athletics, who rudely swept Boston out of the 1988 playoffs, now send 27-game winner Bob Welch against rookie Dana Kiecker (8-9) on Sunday night.

From the start, this looked like a great duel between the 20-game winners who like each other only a little but respect each other a lot. Neither gave up a hit until Wade Boggs homered with two outs in the Boston fourth.

By then, though, Clemens was starting to struggle. He had not pitched more than six innings since Aug. 30 — the start before he lost to Stewart and left for four weeks with tendinitis — and it showed.

Clemens needed a nice running catch by second baseman Jody Reed to end the fourth with runners on first and third, and he retired Henderson on a fly ball to finish the fifth with runners again at the corner.

In the sixth, Clemens started with six straight balls and it was apparent he was

MC sweeps Rolex regional

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Saturday's singles finals of the Rolex/ITCA Southwest Junior College Regional tennis tournament at Midland College had distinctive international and MC flavors.

Three of the four players in the men's and women's singles finals were all Chaparrals, as well as all being from abroad.

Myriam Berthe of Dakar, Senegal in West Africa represented MC in the women's championship match and came away with a 6-2, 6-1 dismantling of Saiko Matsuda of Cooke County College.

The men's final featured MC's Greg Muller, a cannon-armed freshman from South Africa, and fellow Chap David Draper from England. Muller, using a powerful serve to record a number of aces, broke Draper's service three times in the match to come away with a 6-4, 6-4 win.

JUCO Tennis

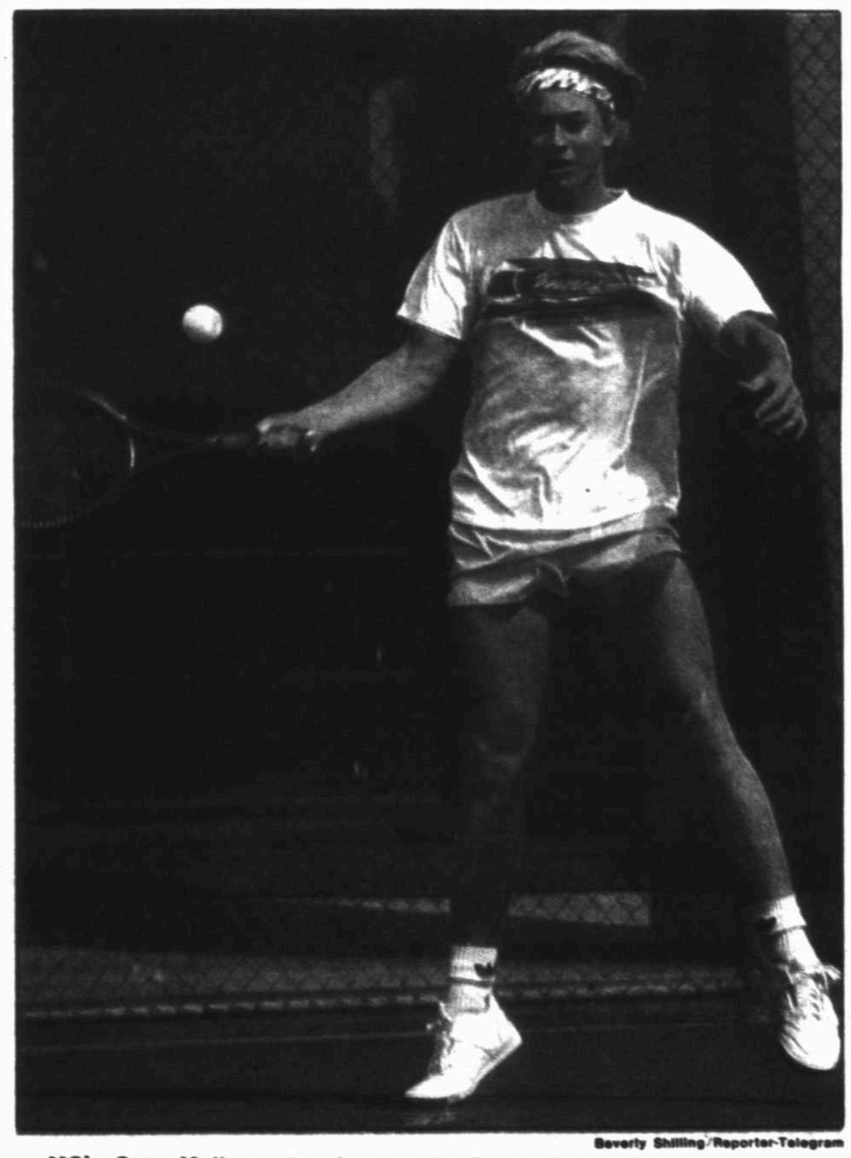

"Right from the beginning I felt I had to serve well to win the match. I've always thought to win on these courts, you have to serve well because they are so fast," Muller said.

After breaking Draper's service in the third game of the first set, Muller was able to maintain control the remainder of the set. But Draper answered in the second set by breaking Muller in the second game and going on top 2-0.

Muller came right back, though, with a break of his own in the third game to turn the momentum back his way.

"I thought I had to break back as soon as possible because it's so hard to break on these courts," he said.

MC's Greg Muller not only won the Rolex Junior College Southwest singles title, but paired with teammate Jerod White to grab top doubles honors as well.

Frogs wallop Hogs

Associated Press

Leon Clay completed six of his first seven passes for 214 yards and three touchdowns as Texas Christian opened a big lead Saturday night and coasted past 21st-ranked Arkansas 54-26, the Horned Frogs' biggest point total ever in a Southwest Conference game.

The Frogs, at 4-1 off to their best start since 1984, scored on their first five possessions and led 34-10 midway through the second quarter. The victory was TCU's first over Arkansas since 1984 and only the third in the last 32 years.

Clay, never under pressure in the early going, threw touchdown passes of 88 yards to Kyle McPherson and 57 yards to Richard Woodley in the first 93 seconds of the second quarter as TCU built a 28-10 lead. At that point, TCU had run 13 plays.

TCU is 2-0 in the Southwest Conference for the first time since 1958, while Arkansas, seeking a third straight SWC championship, is 2-2 overall and 0-1 in the league.

The Frogs scored on their first two possessions of the second half and led 40-10. Clay wound up completing 19 of 28 passes for 322 yards, the best of his career.

The Razorbacks started in a hole and the Frogs kept them there. Arkansas began from its 6 after a clip on the opening kickoff and Tony Rand blocked and recovered Glen Ray Hines' punt for a 7-0 TCU lead with less than two minutes gone.

MHS returns favor to Lee

■ After a district-opening loss to Lee in the first go-round last month, the MHS volleyball team got back at the Lady Rebs to remained tied for first in the league race.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Maybe Sally Gibson doesn't know Yogi Berra personally. But the Midland High junior knows it isn't over until it's over.

And Gibson knows it — the District 4-5A volleyball race — isn't over even though her Bulldogs came on strong in the last two sets to defeat Midland Lee, 13-15, 15-5, 15-5, Saturday at the MHS gym.

"We have a lot of tough games remaining," Gibson said.

The Bulldogs maintained their share of the district lead with Odessa Permian, which trounced Odessa High, 15-0, 15-6. In the other 4-5A match Saturday, third-place Abilene High clobbered Abilene Cooper, 15-4, 15-11.

Midland High visits Abilene High on Tuesday with only a one-game lead. But for awhile, Gibson and her teammates were still able to savor revenge against a Midland Lee squad that had handed them their only district defeat last month.

"We hadn't expected them to beat us, but we didn't get down," the 5-11 junior said. "We told ourselves we couldn't get down against them."

Lee opened up an 11-3 lead in the first set, but Gibson went wild at the net with repeated scoring spikes to help pull the 'Dogs to a 14-13 deficit, before the Midland High back row mishandled the ball on set point.

Still, MHS coach Sonja Pittman felt her squad was on the way, despite the first-set loss.

"We sort of really relaxed and came back for the next two sets," Pittman said.

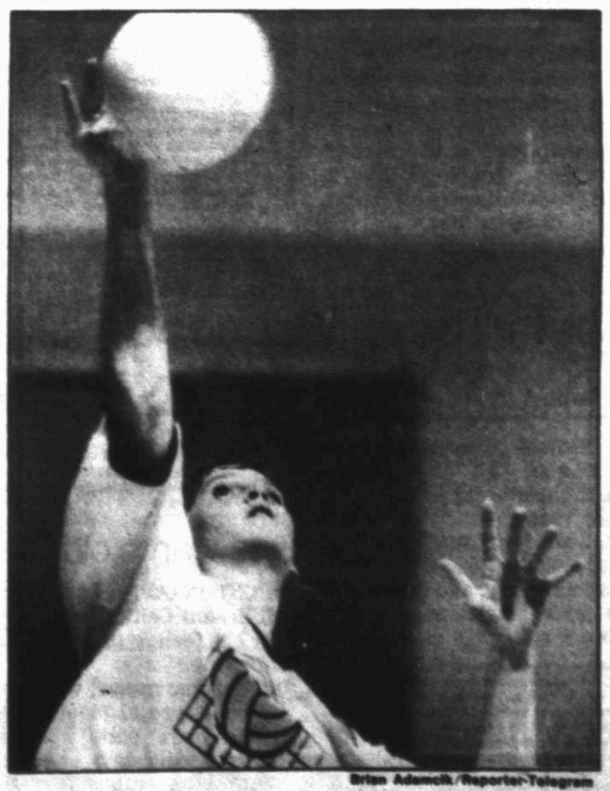

Did they ever.

The Bulldogs were never seriously challenged in either of the last two sets. Lee made repeated mistakes in both front and back rows to help along the hostesses. Still, Lee coach Elise Wheat said her team played well.

In fact, Wheat said a tactical error on her part hurt Lee's chances in the deciding set.

"I needed to change my substitution rotation, and I didn't do it," Wheat said. "I needed to put our big people in at certain time."

NETS: Rolex event has distinct flavor

From 1C

Berthe and Muller now will advance to the Small College Singles Championships in Corpus Christi Oct. 17. Along with the junior college representatives at Corpus Christi will be players from NCAA Divisions II and III schools, as well as NAIA players. Winners from each divison will then play a tournament to see who will qualify for the draw into the national Rolex tournament.

One thing Muller and Berthe probably won't have to deal with in Corpus is winds like those that blew in West Texas Saturday. With gusts blowing cross court in the 25-mph range, most of the players had trouble with ball placement.

"It's tough to get a groove because it's so windy and you have to get the volleys up," Muller said.

Berthe sang a different tune, however.

"It was not a problem for me. Before the match I was more afraid about the girls I was playing because I didn't know how they played. I was just trying to slide the ball because I can't shoot the top-spin with the wind. I was trying to come to the net more, too," she said.

In doubles play Saturday, Muller and Jerod White prevailed over Draper and Toby Curtis in another all-MC final on the men's court, while Berthe paired with Janneke Garos to drop Jenny Del Valle and Mercedes Fernandez of Cooke County College in the women's final. However, under the new Rolex format doubles are no longer played, forcing Garos and White to stay home Oct. 17.

Texas 26, Rice 10

Walk-on Michael Pollak, the nation's leading kicker, had field goals of 41, 37 and 27 yards in the first half and a 31-yarder in the fourth period, helping Texas beat the Rice Owls for the 25th consecutive year.

Texas' domination of the Owls is the longest streak in the Southwest Conference. The Longhorns improved to 2-1 and 1-0 in the SWC. Rice dropped to 2-3 and 0-2.

Pollak, a fifth-year senior who had never attempted a college field goal until this season, kicked three field goals in each of Texas' three games this season.

No. 13 Houston 31, Baylor 15

David Klingler hit Patrick Cooper with two third-quarter touchdown passes on and the 13th-ranked Houston Cougars whipped the Baylor Bears.

Klingler, the nation's total offense leader, completed 35 of 68 passes for 405 yards as the Cougars improved to 4-0 overall and 3-0 in SWC play. Klingler was just one short of Andre Ware's school and SWC record for pass attempts.

Houston is the only unbeaten team in the SWC but is ineligible to play in a bowl because of NCAA probation.

Baylor dropped to 2-3 overall and 1-1 in the loss before 36,289 fans in Floyd Casey Stadium.

North Texas quarterback Scott Davis ran for 203 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Eagles over Southern Methodist.

Davis added 115 yards in the air in front of an overflow crowd of 22,750 at Fouts Field, capacity 20,000.

With the victory, North Texas improves to 3-2. Southern Methodist fell to 1-3.

SMU's final drive was stopped with 14 seconds left when Keith Wilkerson intercepted a Mike Romo pass and returned the ball 31 yards to the SMU 2. Davis downed the ball to run out the clock.

Romo was 31-of-52 for 233 yards and one touchdown. He was intercepted twice.

Davis keyed UNT's winning touchdown by breaking free for a 19-yard run on third-and-2 from the SMU 23 after bouncing off defenders at the line of serimmage.

'Meet The Chaps' night on tap for this Tuesday

Staff Report

The official "Meet The Chaps Night" starts at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at Midland College's Al G. Langford Chaparral Center.

It's free for anyone who enjoys collegiate athletics and wants to know more about Midland College's sports programs. Fans will have an opportunity to meet the Chaparral golf and tennis teams, the cheerleaders, the trainers, and to watch the 1990-91 Chap basketball team in an intrasquad scrimmage.

"With the golf and tennis teams well into their fall competition and basketball season opening in less than a month, we want everyone to come out and get acquainted with these fine young people," said Delnor Poss, MC athletic director and head golf coach.

Midland College placed third in the 1990 National Junior College Athletic Association's golf championship tournament. The 1991 national tournament will be hosted by Midland College and held at Green Tree Country Club and Mission Dorado.

Poss is assisted by Mike Stevens, who serves as assistant golf coach as well as director of Chaparral Center. Joe Williams will introduce members of the men's and women's tennis teams, which have already captured several tournament titles this year. The 1990 women's team won the NJCAA title, while the men won the national crown in 1989 and are among the favorites again this year. Lance Armstrong is serving as assistant tennis coach.

Basketball coach Reggie Franklin and assistant George Walker returned just three lettermen, but recruited an outstanding group of players. They'll open their season at home Nov. 5, hosting Cisco Junior College. That's followed by the Chaparral Classic Nov. 8-10.

Season tickets for the Chaparrals' home basketball games go on sale Tuesday evening.

After the introduction of athletes and cheerleaders at 6:30 p.m., the "Adopt-A-Chap" parents and players will be introduced. Coaches for the intrasquad basketball scrimmage will be Doug Strickland, KOSA-TV sports; Skip Baldwin, KMID-TV sports; Jay Hendricks, KTPX-TV sports; and Jimmy Patterson, assistant sports editor of the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

MHS: Mojo, 'Dogs still tied

From 1C

Gibson made the Rebs pay for their coach's error. Paired against a smaller player for most of the third set, the 5-11 junior was dominant in the second set before yielding center stage to teammates Mich Neatherlin and Lisa Sanchez in the final set.

Sanchez and Neatherlin started the 'Dogs off with five straight points when the former back-set to the latter for a scoring spike. Neatherlin then nailed the coffin door all but shut with her ace serve that made the score 14-5.

Pittman said the Bulldogs clicked on all cylinders in the last two sets.

"We ran our offense very smoothly with a blend of power and finesse. We did some things that were reallty well thought out."

NOTES: The Bulldogs have beaten six teams ranked in the state Top 10 from Class 4A downward by the Texas Girls Coaches Association.

In the junior varsity match, Midland High pulled out a 15-4, 4-15, 17-15 thriller over Lee. Jennifer Yocham's kill to the edge of the back line provided the deciding point for the young Bulldogs.

'Dog netters fall to Permian

Staff Report

The Midland High Bulldogs fell victim to the Panthers of Odessa Permian in District 4-5A team tennis Saturday.

Permian posted a 10-8 victory over the 'Dogs, dropping MHS to 2-3 for the season despite a 7-2 Bulldog edge in boy's play.

Bird wants old feeling

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird says the Boston Celtics have to regain that old feeling of one-for-all and all-for-one.

"For some reason, we don't have the same type of togetherness we had in years' past," Bird said at Celtics' media day.

"Am I as enthusiastic as I've been in past years? Yes. Or else I wouldn't be in camp and ready."

Leach passes Lobos past UTEP, 48-28

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Jeremy Leach threw three touchdown passes and New Mexico complimented them with a rare rushing attack Saturday to beat the University of Texas-El Paso, 48-28, in a Western Athletic Conference game.

Leach, shaking a slump in which he had been intercepted eight times in the last three games, found Mike Henderson open for TDs of 10 and 11 yards and hit Eric Morgan with a 7-yard scoring pass.

The win snapped a four-game losing streak for the Lobos, 2-4 overall and 1-0 in the WAC.

UTEP, whose two first-half turnovers helped stake New Mexico to a 31-7 halftime lead, is now 2-4 overall and 0-3 in the conference.

Leach, who now has thrown touchdown passes in 12 straight games, was 21 of 32 for 290 yards. The Lobos' usually dormant running game added a season-high 282 yards, including touchdowns of 43 yards by Derek Coffman and 9 and 6 yards by Aaron Givens, who led the ground assault with 124 yards.

UTEP, its offense ineffective for most of the game, scored twice on big plays. Derek Hewitt returned a blocked New Mexico punt 52 yards for a second quarter score, and Roy Ross returned the second half kickoff 89 yards. An 8-yard end-around touchdown by wide receiver Ricki Lopez with 6:01 left in the third quarter cut the deficit to 38-20.

New Mexico then put together a 66-yard, 15-play drive that killed the rest of the quarter and produced a 30-yard field goal by David Margolis, his second of the game.

Givens' 6-yard scoring run with 8:45 left put it out of reach, although the Miners' added a final-minute touchdown on a 1-yard dive by Lee Gadison.

WTSU 20, Cameron 17

Mark Reiland threw a 1-yard touchdown pass to Tim Anuszkiewicz as time expired to lift West Texas State over Cameron 20-17 in Lone Star Conference action Saturday.

Trailing 17-14 with 1:28 left in the game, the Buffaloes drove 58 yards in nine plays for the winning score. The scoring pass came on fourth down with time expired.

Cameron (1-4 overall, 0-2 in the conference) took an early lead on Steve Youman's 45-yard field goal with 2:13 left in the first quarter. They added to the lead on Lamont Buckner's 10-yard touchdown run with 2:45 left in the second quarter.

Reiland completed 19 of 44 passes for 223 yards on the night.

Irish out of luck; Miami upsets Florida State

Associated Press

Rick Mirer reached deep for one more Notre Dame miracle, only to find the well of dazzling tricks had run dry.

Stanford quarterback Jason Palumbis, disappointed by three close losses, found luck finally playing on his side.

With 36 seconds left, Tommy Vardell plunged for his fourth 1-yard touchdown to give Stanford a comeback 36-31 victory over No. 1 Notre Dame.

"I don't know if I've ever been in a loss this difficult," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said.

Stanford (2-3) trailed 24-7 at 6:30 of the first half before stringing together Vardell's touchdowns series, two coming after Notre Dame (3-1) fumbles on punts.

"We ran the same play over and over again," Vardell said. "We figured they would shift over and tighten up."

"We call number 44 (Vardell) Touchdown Tommy," Stanford coach Dennis Green said. "We know he's going to get the ball, you know he's going to get the ball, and we want to see you try to stop him."

No. 10 Florida 34, LSU 8

Florida recovered two fumbles and blocked a punt to set up three first-half touchdowns and Shane Matthews directed two long scoring drives in the fourth quarter to lead the 10th-ranked Gators over Louisiana State.

The triumph before a crowd of 75,039 at Ben Hill Griffin Stadium kept Florida (5-0, 3-0 in the SEC) unbeaten, although Coach Steve Spurrier's team is ineligible to win the league title and play in a bowl game because of NCAA sanctions.

Backup quarterback Charles Johnson ran one yard for a touchdown on the final play — possibly on an extra down — as 12th-ranked Colorado slipped by Missouri 33-31.

Johnson's off-tackle run came after Missouri stopped Eric Bieniemy — who rushed for 217 yards on 29 carries — twice near the goal line. Game statistics showed that Johnson also threw two incomplete passes after Colorado had a first down at the Missouri 3.

Christoval shows why it's top-rated six-man squad

By Charlie Dowd
MRT Correspondent

The Christoval Cougars traveled to Midland with the top ranking in the state for six-man squads and you'd be hard pressed to find a member of the Midland Christian Mustangs who might disagree with that designation.

Christoval rolled to an impressive 88-39 victory over Midland Christian in a game shortened by 2:34 by the 45 point mercy rule.

The Mustangs, the top rated private school in the six-man poll, started out looking like world beaters — taking the opening kickoff and driving 60 yards in five plays as Andy Bayley connected with Alan Weaver for a 44 yard scoring play.

The ensuing PAT gave the Mustangs a 7-0 lead and a bit of confidence which they converted into another first quarter score to take a 15-6 lead after less than half a quarter of play.

That's when the roof caved in. More specifically, that's when the Christoval ground attack went to work.

Led by senior Randy Robertson, the Cougars erupted for 48 straight points as they rumbled to a 54-15 lead. Only a Bayley-to-Aaron Awtry touchdown strike with 0:03 showing on the clock could stop the first half onslaught.

Things didn't get much better for the Mustangs in the second half. The big Cougar backs rushed for a game total of 324 yards seemingly at will.

Robertson was the main contributor (10-105, 5 touchdowns) but he certainly was not the whole story. Kenny Rivard added 69 yards to go with his three touchdowns while Andy Young chipped in 52 yards and a score.

Quarterback Dusty Barton showed senior poise as he ran Christoval's split-T to perfection putting the ball up only when necessary and connecting on 9 of 11 passes for 253 yards and one touchdown.

Some outstanding performances were turned in by the Mustangs. It was simply a case of the Cougars having too much speed, strength and depth. Bayley turned in a sterling performance operating out of Coach Homer Jackson's spread offense as he connected on 18 passes for 406 yards and 5 touchdowns.

Tarpley looks forward to playing all year

DALLAS (AP) — Roy Tarpley has only one goal for the upcoming Dallas Mavericks season — playing the whole season.

Tarpley reported to training camp with gains in more than one area. Team officials hope Tarpley's 15-pound weight gain will be worked off quickly, but that his new, responsible attitude will stick.

"It's been a long time since I've finished a whole season," Tarpley said. "I just want to do that. That's my only goal.

"Winning the rebounding championship is in my sights, too," he said. "But being here the whole season is the biggest thing for me. I have a lot to prove. I want to be here the whole time for my teammates and for the fans."

Tarpley said he blames himself for the Mavs' failure to reach their goals last season, citing the team's record when he doesn't play. He missed 100 regular-season games the last two years.

ATTENTION BOWLERS

Fairmont Park Lanes Bowling Center has been wrongfully accused of attempting to steal league bowlers from one of the other Midland bowling centers.

Our business philosophy dictates that we operate our Center in a businesslike manner with established policies.

So that there will be no misunderstanding among the bowling community, our established pricing policy is as follows:

Regular Open Play - Summer - $1.62 - Per Game
Winter - $2.05 - Per Game

League - Daytime - $4.50 - 3 Games
Prime Time - $6.00 - 3 Games

City Tournament - Women's or Men's - $5.90 - 3 Games

Included in the above charges are all state and local sales taxes.

Additionally, the following services are provided all Fairmont Park Lanes league bowlers at no additional charge:
- Computerized printouts of all league records.
- Trophies or food trays and Fun Nite at season's end for all full season leagues.
- League Secretaries do not pay for Lineage
- Lane attendants.
- Playroom attendants.
- Food and beverage service.
- A league courtesy card is issued to each league bowler allowing him/her to bowl whenever lanes are available for $1.08 per game. Included are the Women's and Men's City Tournaments.

Midland Christian spikers headed for title game

Staff Report

The Midland Christian volleyball team set up a TAPPS District 8 championship game with Amarillo Christian by beating the visitors 15-7, 15-12 Saturday at the MCS gym.

In other action at MCS, the Mustang spikers lost to El Paso Agape, 15-0, 13-15, 15-6; and Midland Baptist was defeated in straight sets by both Amarillo Christian and El Paso Agape.

Three players from both Midland Christian and Amarillo Christian made the District 8 all-conference team. Mustangs on the honor squad included Holli Hutton, Karen Nash and Tracy Burgess, while Amarillo representatives are Jenny Mayfield, Elena Aleman and Kristy Branch.

MCS' Leslie Carruth and Jeanette Morales earned honorable mention.

Ranger harriers take fourth at Lubbock Invite

Staff Report

LUBBOCK — The Greenwood girls varsity cross country team collected 210 points to finish fourth among 31 teams at the Lubbock Invitational Saturday, and the boys team captured ninth place.

Caroline Clanton led the Greenwood girls with an 18th place finish and a time of 13.23. She was followed closely by Myrna Erives, who took 21st honors at 13.27. There were 140 girls competing Saturday and 131 boys.

Teams from Canyon won both the girls and boys divisions at the event.

Greenwood's next action will be next Saturday at the Big Spring Relays.

East stars beat west in JUCO baseball

BRENHAM (AP) — Lee College shortstop Robert DeLeon hit a two-run homer in the seventh and added another RBI as the East team beat the West 9-5 in the 12th annual Texas Junior College Baseball Coaches Association All-Star game Saturday.

The two teams battled to an 8-8 tie Friday in a game called after 10 innings.

The East scored four runs in the seventh to take a 6-3 lead.

Browns looking worse

After the Cleveland Browns looked dismal in their final exhibition game, a 28-10 loss to the Giants, owner Art Modell was still upbeat.

"We'll be OK," he said.

After four weeks, they're not OK and looking worse — 1-3, headed for 1-8.

So Modell, so close to the Super Bowl three of the last four years, is looking for a way, short of firing coach Bud Carson, to realize the dream he's held for so long.

After one of those high-level crisis meetings this week, both Modell and Carson took some blame for the problems, which rest on the offensive line and quarterback Bernie Kosar — Kosar's problems are only accentuated by the line. But Carson is safe for now.

Bucs working out on gridiron

■ With the Steelers preparing for day's game against the San Diego Chargers, the baseball Pirates were forced to practice near the goal line instead of near home plate.

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates prepared for Game 3 of the National League playoffs Saturday by playing catch near the 50-yard line and running sprints in and out of bounds.

If it sounds a little strange, it was. The Pittsburgh Steelers play the San Diego Chargers on Sunday and Three Rivers Stadium was already set up for football during the Pirates' practice.

The weather in Pittsburgh was perfect for baseball Saturday — clear skies and temperatures in the upper 70s. But after a brief workout, the Pirates went home. Some even said they would watch college football on television.

The Pirates and Steelers are both having trouble scoring lately. The Steelers, in fact, have not scored a touchdown on offense in their first four games.

For various reasons, including TV, the NL playoffs took a two-day break after Cincinnati won Game 2, 2-1, tying the series 1-1.

"The only reason we're here today is for the media," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said after a light early afternoon workout.

The Pirates left Cincinnati Friday night even though the Reds invited them to stay in case they wanted to practice Sunday. The Reds planned to arrive in Pittsburgh on Sunday.

"We could have stayed and worked out at Riverfront," Leyland said, "but it's better to get back home for a couple of days. At this point in the season, neither team needs any extra work. It's better to be in your own home."

Well, maybe a little extra batting practice wouldn't hurt.

In the first two games, the teams combined for only 10 runs and 23 hits. The Pirates hit .210 and the Reds .175.

"Don't be surprised if that continues," Pirates pitching coach Ray Miller said. "When you get to this point, it's because you have pitching that can stop the other team."

In Game 3 Monday, Zane Smith is scheduled to start for the Pirates against Danny Jackson in a matchup of left-handers.

Smith was acquired from Montreal Aug. 8 and went 6-2 in 11 starts for the Pirates. In 76 innings with Pittsburgh, he gave up 11 earned runs for a 1.30 ERA.

"I think maybe both pitching staffs have been a little underrated," Reds manager Lou Piniella said. "I don't expect a lot of runs to be scored in this series."

The Reds' hitting problems go even deeper than the Pirates'. In their last 11 games, including the regular season, Cincinnati batted .194 and scored only 25 runs.

"We're trying to do too much, that's a lot of the reason," said Reds second baseman Mariano Duncan, who is 0-for-6 in the playoffs. "You try to do too much, then you do nothing. That's the playoffs, I guess."

In his last 28 at-bats, Duncan has four hits. Third baseman Chris Sabo also is in a 4-for-28 slump, catcher Joe Oliver 1-for-16, center fielder Billy Hatcher 6-for-28, first baseman Hal Morris 5-for-22 and shortstop Barry Larkin 6-for-25.

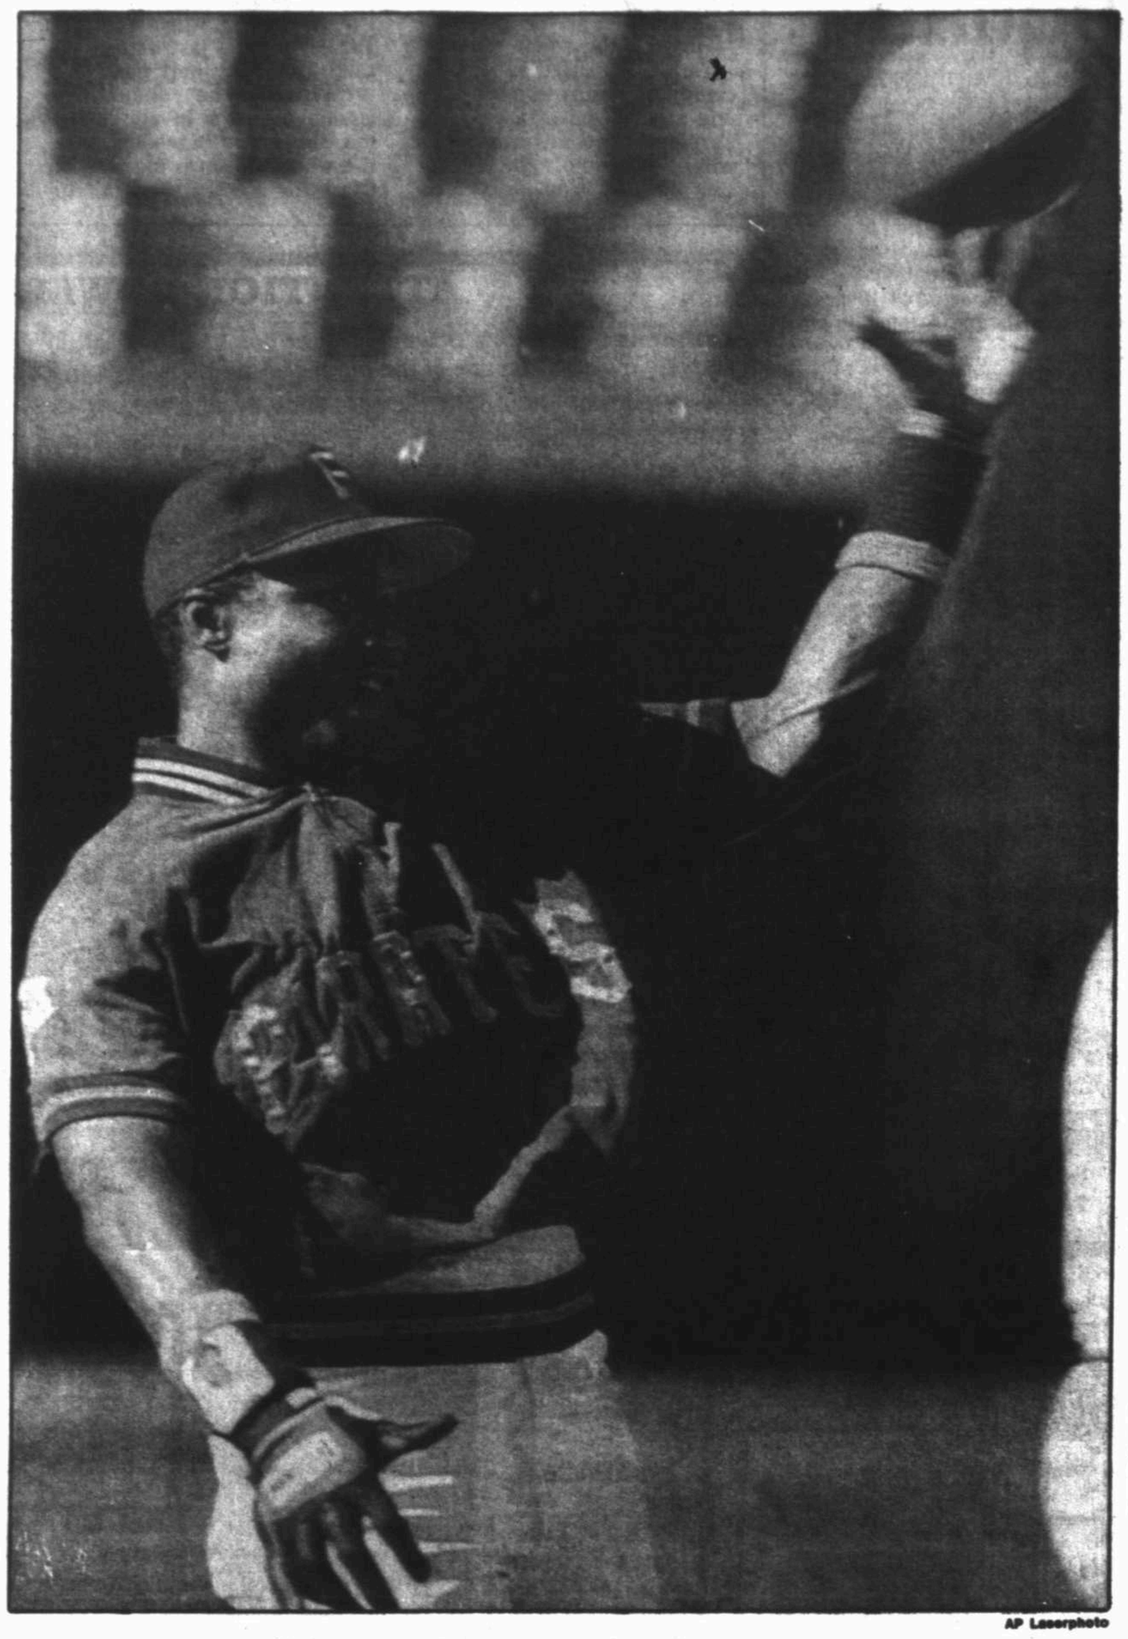

"We need to start swinging the bats better," Piniella said. "We faced two good pitchers in the first two games, but we need to score more runs."

During the regular season, the Reds were 0-6 when they scored three runs or less against the Pirates. In their six wins over Pittsburgh, the Reds averaged six runs.

"I think both teams may have been a little overaggressive in the first two games," Pirates center fielder Andy Van Slyke said. "This is a new experience for both teams and some guys may be going after pitches they would usually take. Now that we have a couple of games in, the hitting should pick up."

In the first two games, Van Slyke, Barry Bonds and Bobby Bonilla combined to go 5-for-23 with one RBI.

"It's only two games," Bonilla said. "We won one, 4-3, lost one, 2-1. Not hitting? Is it going to be like this all postseason?"

Rested Rams test tired Cincy

The Los Angeles Rams haven't played in two weeks.

The Cincinnati Bengals played in Seattle Monday night, then stayed over in the Pacific Northwest to practice for Sunday's game with the Rams in Anaheim.

Call it the first test of the NFL's policy of giving every team a week off during the regular season.

Call it a break for the Rams and a major negative for the Bengals, who are coming off their first loss of the season, a 31-16 debacle in Seattle in which Cincinnati was just plain bad.

"If you put me in charge, I wouldn't have scheduled it that way," says Cincinnati coach Sam Wyche, who has spent much of the week explaining why he barred a woman reporter from his team's locker room — an additional distraction on top of the short week.

Los Angeles Raiders (4-0)
at Buffalo (3-1)
(Sunday night)

The Raiders have been building up their agression by pitting themselves against what they view as outside skepticism at their unbeaten record. "Now we're the worst 4-0 team in the league," Greg Bell said after the 24-10 win last week against previously unbeaten Chicago.

If they win, they won't have to worry about that this week — since the Giants are off and the 49ers didn't play last week, they'll be the ONLY 5-0 team in the NFL.

Whether that happens depends on which Bills show up.

They were awful in a 30-7 loss to Miami two weeks ago and brilliant in a win by the same score over the Jets the next week after a lot of backbiting following the Miami loss.

And they were a) lucky or b) opportunistic last week when they were outgained by more than two-to-one against Denver but took advantage of three turnovers to score three touchdowns in 1:07 and beat the Broncos. That may be a little tougher against the Raiders, who have only five turnovers in four games.

San Francisco (3-0)
at Houston (2-2)

The 49ers' off week came at a perfect time — they come off a win over Atlanta, a run-and-shoot team and now play the Oilers and Falcons again the next two weeks.

So nobody can say they will be unprepared for Houston, which has rebounded from two dismal early wins to beat the Oilers and Chargers the last two weeks. Predictably, they rank second in the NFL on offense — first in passing and next-to-last in rushing.

For that, San Francisco's George Seifert credits Jack Pardee.

"They were beaten as badly as I've ever seen anybody get beat in their first game," Seifert says. "The next game they were a little shaky but they were better. And then the next two games they win.

"I have a sense they just kept coaching their system and got better at what they do. It's possible that there were other coaches who might pull the rip cord."

Green Bay (2-2)
at Chicago (3-1)

The Bears won 31-13 in Green Bay in the hamburger war — Dan Hampton is now pushing them in Chicago the way Tony Mandarich was in Chicago in the first meeting.

The good news for the Packers is that so far this year teams that were bombed at home (Cowboys by Giants, Lions by Bucs) did a lot better on the road. The bad news for Green Bay is that they lost.

On the other hand, Don Majkowski finally showed his Majik last week to bring the Packers back to beat the Lions. He'll need more this week against a team that, in Mike Ditka's words "just played lousy" in their 24-10 loss to the Raiders.

It's unlikely this one will be anything like the last eight teams between these two (51-45, 45-3, 37-31, 37-28, 44-30, 38-34, 40-33 and 31-23).

But this year, Miami has barely allowed that many points in four games — just 57 and they rank second in the league in yardage allowed. That will be tested by two outstanding rookies, Blair Thomas, who ran 20 times for 100 ayrds in the 37-13 New York win over New England last week and Rob Moore, who caught 8 passes for 175 yards.

at Denver (2-2)
(Monday night)

Two teams that have fallen on bad (or mildly so) times after playing for the AFC title three of four years.

Mildly applies to Denver, which blew a game it should have won in Buffalo last week. But 2-2 doesn't sit well in Denver and John Elway has spent the week reassuring local fans that the Broncos remain in trouble. This time, a rocket saved The Rocket when Baines lined into a double play with two runners on.

ALCS: Clemens yanked in the sixth

From 1C

Boston manager Joe Morgan made his move to start the seventh, Clemens leaving after allowing four hits and four walks and striking out four.

The sellout crowd of 35,192 seemed to sense trouble when Andersen relieved and Mark McGwire drew a leadoff walk. After Walt Weiss grounded into a forceout, Oakland's best pinch hitter, Jamie Quirk, singled Weiss to third. Henderson's fly ball tied it, with Weiss sliding in safely when center fielder Ellis Burks' throw home hit him.

Clemens set the tone early, opening with five straight strikes and setting down the first three Oakland batters on just eight pitches. Stewart came right back and retired the Red Sox on 10 pitches, fanning Boggs to end the inning.

It went on the same way, two pitchers with different styles getting the same results.

Clemens, more measured and more deliberate, did not give up a hit until Baines singled with two outs in the fourth. Stewart, working quickly, was interrupted only by a two-out walk in the second to Dwight Evans until Boggs homered over the Green Monster.

While Clemens struggled through the middle innings, Stewart was efficient, if not perfect. He got Tony Pena to ground into a double play to finish the fifth and, with a runner on second in the sixth, got Carlos Quintana on a fly ball and fanned Boggs again.

"We're capable of putting up some runs in a hurry and that's what happened," Dave Stewart said after the Athletics overcame a 1-0 seventh-inning deficit and won 9-1.

"A beautiful game turned into a horrible evening," Boston manager Joe Morgan said. "It was 2-1 until the ninth. Then it got away."

Price takes Texas Open lead from Jones

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — South African Nick Price, twice a bridesmaid this year but yet to win, fired a 7-under-par 63 Saturday to capture the third-round lead in the $800,000 Texas Open.

Price's bogey-free round under perfect playing conditions gave him a 54-hole total of 194, 16 under par, and a 2-shot lead over first-round leader Gary Hallberg, who shot a 64.

Price, who hasn't won on the American tour since the World Series of Golf in 1983, finished second earlier this year at the Fort Worth and Atlanta and has won $336,669.

He ranks 31st on the official money winning list, putting him on the "bubble" for the lucrative Nabisco Championships later this month. Only the top 30 money winners qualify for the $2.5 million Nabisco and a shot at its $450,000 top prize.

After scores of 65, 66 and 63 on the defenseless little 6,576-yar Oak Hills course, Price is in position to match the all-time tour record for 72 holes with another 63 Sunday.

Eight players enter the showdown round within four strokes of the lead, including 1968 Texas Open champion Corey Pavin, who's flawless 8-under-par 62 was the top score of the day.

"That's the way golf is supposed to be played," said Pavin, who actually was eight under through the first 11 holes and could do no better than par on the final seven.

"I thought about a 59 but I didn't want to dwell on it on the course," Pavin said. 'I kept going at the hole but..."

His 62 put him at 197 and three off the lead in the race for the $144,000 first prize.

Second-round leader Steve Jones failed to match Saturday's torrid pace but his par 70 left him at 198 and tied with five players at 12 under — still within striking distance of a faltering leader.

Sharing the 198 slot were Mark Brooks, 64; Mike Donald, 65; Mark O'Meara, 66; Phil Blackmar, 66; and Duffy Waldorf, 68.

Though two strokes back, and without a PGA victory since 1987, Hallberg indicated he likes his chances Sunday. One reason is a new "old" putter he purchased this week and the other is some advice last week from friend and fellow professional Larry Rinker.

"I've been working real hard on my game, trying everything," Hallberg said. "I was playing with Larry, and he said, 'Gary, just go out and swing and hit the ball like you used to when you were winning.' It worked.

"The next time I see him I'm going to hug and kiss him."

Steve Jones — within striking distance.

NFL: Improved Buccaneers get a taste of Cowboys

Cleveland is another story after losing 34-0 in Kansas City last week. . Coach Bud Carson pleaded "mea culpa" after a session with owner Art Modell, who calls Cleveland's performance "totally unacceptable" and says: "I will not run up the white flag and surrender the 1990 season."

Tampa Bay (3-1)
at Dallas (1-3)

A home Super Bowl? Vinny Testaverde seems to be coming into his own and Gary Anderson has added pop to the offense although the defense still leaks — 22nd overall in the league.

This could be an interesting test for the Bucs, who are coming off an uplifting overtime win in Minnesota in which Testaverde led a last-minute drive to tie it.

They can't afford a letdown here. The Cowboys, with Emmitt Smith and Alonzo Highsmith learning the offense, are improving — they came within four points of the Redskins and were much better the second time through against the Giants than they were the first.

Kansas City (3-1)
at Indianapolis (1-3)

The Colts got their first win last week by going 86 yards in the final two minutes to upset Philadelphia. Jack Trudeau, who led the drive, remains at quarterback for Jeff George, who may not get it back even when his pulled stomach muscle heals.

The Chiefs are beginning to look like a real contender, particularly since Steve DeBerg is comfortable without a John Elway, Vinny Testaverde or Joe Montana waiting in the wings. "This is the best team I've played for and I don't have the next Joe Namath behind me," he says.

New Orleans (1-2)
at Atlanta (1-2)

John Fourcade is in quite a different position from DeBerg — he DOES have to look over his shoulder. The guy behind him is Steve Walsh, obtained from the Cowboys just as the two-week hiatus started for the Saints. Jim Mora says Walsh is well enough versed in his offense that he could play if Fourcade stumbles.

The question in Atlanta is how well the team settles down from its perhaps over-emotional start under Jerry Glanville. But the two-week break helped heal Steve Broussard's knee and Mike Rozier has arrived to provide depth.

Detroit (1-3)
at Minnesota (1-3)

Things could be very testy in Minnesota if the Vikings lose this one — Keith Millard is now out for the season, putting a major hole in the defense. One consolation — Rich Gannon played well at quarterback in relief of Wade Wilson in last week's 23-20 overtime loss to Tampa Bay.

The Lions are hurting at quarterback, too. Bob Gagliano takes over for Rodney Peete, who pulled a hamstring last week, but Andre Ware may be about ready to take the job that will probably be his on a permanent basis some day soon.

San Diego (1-3)
at Pittsburgh (1-3)

Help wanted — offense needed.

That applies to both teams, but Pittsburgh is in the most dire straits, without an offensive touchdown this season and the cries intensifying for the scalp of Joe Walton, the new offensive coordinator. It's gotten so bad that people in this football town may actually pay attention to the Pirates in the baseball playoffs.

The Chargers aren't in much better shape although the only move they've made is changing kickers — John Carney for Fuad Reveiz. The defense is holding up, though, which means a good game by Carney could mean a 3-2 win.

at New England (1-3)

Seattle sets an NFL record with its second consecutive game against a team with a controversy over women in the locker room. The Seahawks, with Derrick Fenner emerging as a threat at running back, could actually be 3-1. Their 31-16 win over the Bengals made them the last team to win a game, but their losses to the Raiders and Broncos could easily have been wins.

The Patriots can't say that. They've allowed 78 points and scored just 20 in losses to the Bengals and Jets and all the controversy hasn't helped their concentration.

Stouffer yet to play in game

Associated Press

The Phoenix Cardinals shocked most football people when they chose Kelly Stouffer with the fifth pick overall in the 1987 draft. But they recouped a bit when they got a No. 1 pick for 1988 plus two No. 5s for Stouffer from Seattle.

Stouffer, who is being paid $700,000 this season, is making the skeptics look right.

So far this season, he has yet to dress for a Seahawks game and is the third-stringer behind Dave Krieg and 10-year journeyman Jeff Kepm.

According to several people close to the Seahawks, he's a better game player than a practice player. But the gospel according to Chuck Knox is that if you don't practice, you don't play.

In Memoriam
Valentin Reyes Jr.

April 28, 1970 - October 7, 1988

You brought us sunshine to brighten our days,
You had a magic that was found in your warm ways,
Your laughter brought gladness and warmth to a room,
You broght us such happiness,
You were a gift from above,
Your were a wonderful, magical treasure of LOVE,
We keep your memories close to our hearts,
We LOVE and MISS you so much.

Meet Our Classified Service Professionals

Zena Sikes
Classified Telephone Sales Manager

I love this business because it is a vibrant, people business. We have one main rule in the Classified Department - "The Customer Is Always Right!" A customer is the most important person who ever walks into our department whether he or she is placing a three-line garage sale ad or a full page ad for a leading business.

Katie Harmon
Classified Consultant

I've been working in the Classified Department of the Midland Reporter-Telegram for a little more than two years. I love the newspaper business and enjoy working with people most of all. I feel like each customer should be treated the way I would want to be treated. The customer should be satisfied and if they aren't, I haven't done my job. Satisfying customers is very important to me.

Debby Brewster
Classified Consultant

My career at the Midland Reporter-Telegram began two years ago this month. The thing I like best about my job is the customer contact. Most of the people I deal with are a lot of fun. Customer service is my number one priority. If I have shared the benefits of my training and experience, then and only then, have I given quality customer service.

Connie Fillingim
Classified Consultant

I came to work at Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Department in August of this year. My favorite thing about my job here is working with people and making them happy. When my customers are happy, so am I. I believe it is important to give the type of service you yourself would like to receive, and that's what I try to do.

Carrie Carter
Classified Consultant

Helping my customers with their ads - whether it's a small word ad or a big display ad - is very rewarding for me. My goal is to help them place the kind of ad that will get the best results - sell what they're trying to sell or find the right person for a job - whatever. I'm committed to doing the very best job possible for my customers and our readers.

Janine Browne
Classified Consultant

I began my career with the Midland Reporter-Telegram only a month ago, but it feels like I've been here much longer. I love my job and especially enjoy working with people. I believe it's important to always remember that the voice on the other end of the phone is a person. I want to treat people the way I would want to be treated - fairly, with efficiency and courtesy.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE!!!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW!

Simply Irresistible

The master bedroom has a vauled ceiling and access into a cozy sitting area or study.

SIMPLY: 1,200 sq. ft. patio home located in quiet area

(From 1D)

A carved front door opens onto the entrance hall. The master bedroom is situated to the right. A short hall leads past two mirrored closets on one wall into the bedroom area. A vaulted beamed ceiling adds dimension to the room. A door opens into a small secluded sitting room or study. Cedar adorns the walls and a bay window frames the courtyard. A shelf by the window is perfect for house plants.

The master bath is located across from the closets and includes a two-sink marble vanity and a bathtub. A beveled edged mirror lines the wall above the vanity.

The second bedroom is located to the left of the entrance. A window frames the front yard. The other amenities include a spacious closet, a ceiling fan and access into a full bath.

A wallpaper in shades of rose, blue and slate adorns the walls of the bath. A door also opens into a hallway next to the entrance. It has a marble vanity and a bathtub.

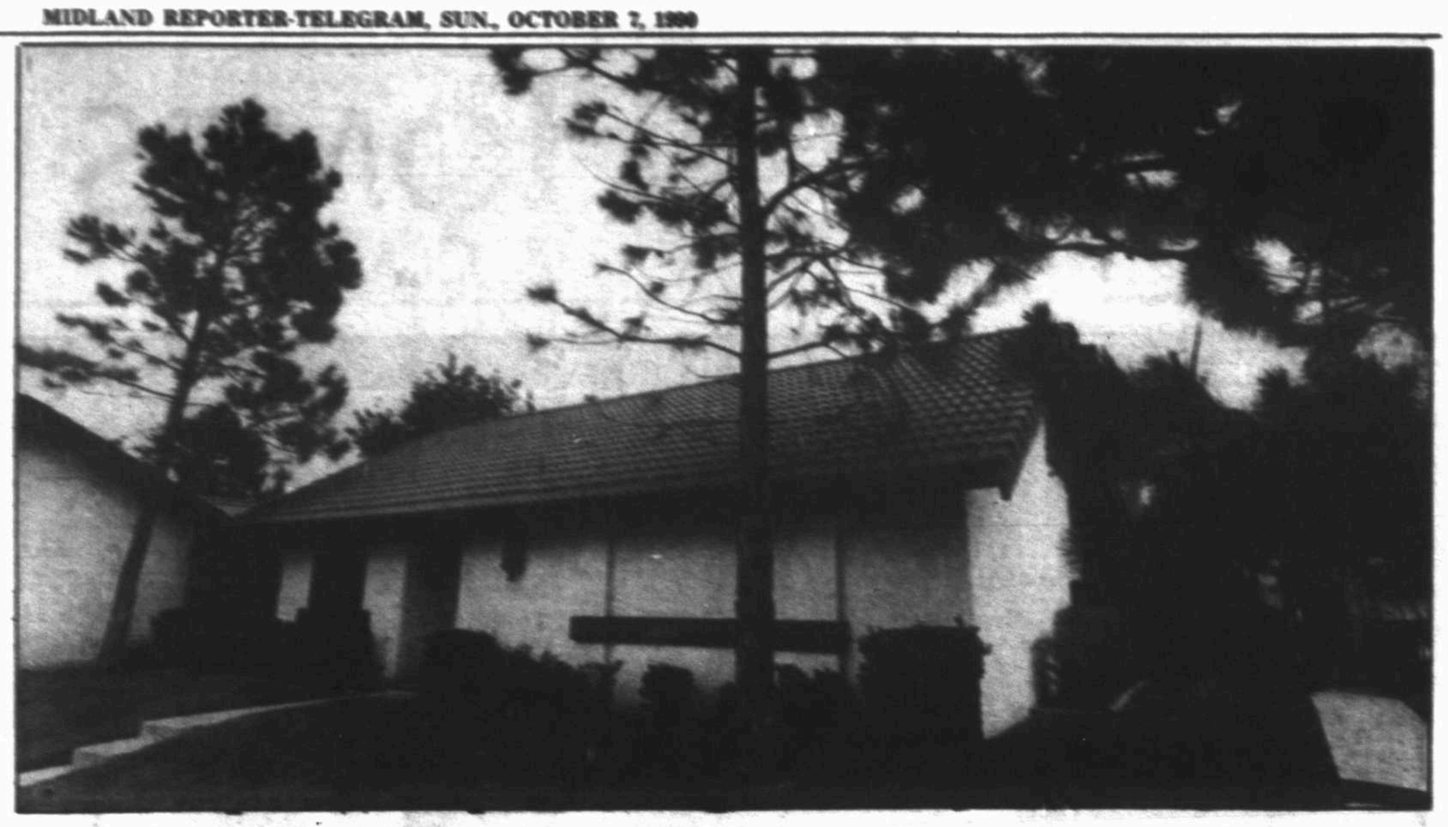

This hallway flows past the galley-style kitchen, to the right, into the living room. The kitchen has cream cabinets with pale terra cotta accents. A window above the sink frames the private courtyard. The appliances include a Modern Maid range and a Magic Chef dishwasher. The kitchen also opens into the sitting/study area next to the master bedroom.

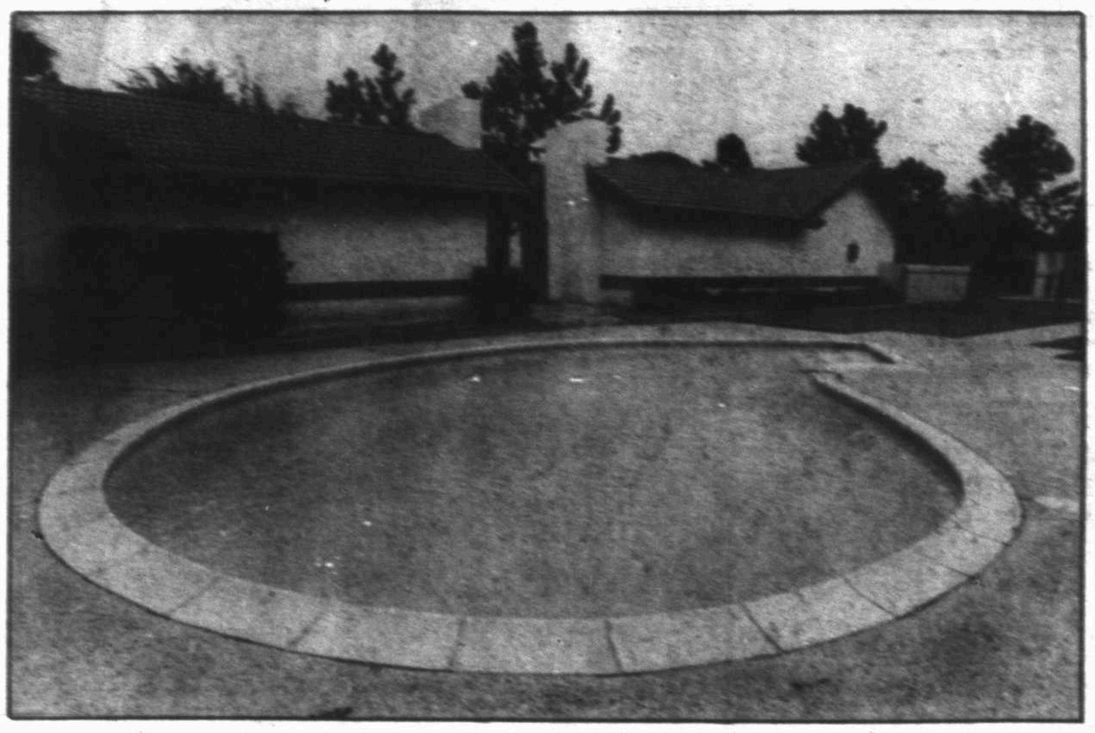

An intimate dining area is situated in the left corner of the living room. Vertical mirrors are placed along the two walls. A painted fireplace is inset against the back wall. A tall window is situated on each side. A sliding glass door and a floor-to-ceiling window on the right wall overlook the courtyard.

The courtyard was planned for a small area that enables owners a place to sit outside with a morning cup of coffee. It is lined with low maintenance beds, one of which can be used for a small vegetable garden. This area is shaded by mature pine trees at one end.

A door on the left wall in the living room opens into a laundry area and a huge storage closet. The closet is lined with rods and shelves for out-of-season clothing. A door provides access into the rear-entry, two-car garage with an automatic door opener.

Langston, Realtors is offering this Park Villas patio home for $56,500.

This week's featured home, above, is situated in a planned community of patio homes. Residents will enjoy the outdoor pool, left, as well as the tennis courts and clubhouse.

Melton, Boyd discuss the RE/MAX concept, advantages

Melton

RE/MAX of Midland is part of a growing network that is designed for professional full-time agents. RE/MAX is the only real estate organization designed for the top producers in real estate, according to Jan Melton.

"There are many advantages to becoming an agent with RE/MAX," stated Melton. "The two things that set RE/MAX above the rest are being in business for yourself, thereby receiving the highest possible commission."

The other reasons that Melton feels are important to note are: being able to negotiate your own commissions if desired, building an investment portfolio without paying your broker a commission, being creative with advertising, unlimited advertising and mailouts and pride of owning your own business.

From the high-percent commission idea came the idea of the high commission concept so agents could keep virtually all their earned income. From conventional companies came the benefits of administrative support.

Boyd

By combining the advantages of both approaches, RE/MAX could offer real estate agents the best of both worlds. The RE/MAX concept allowed salespeople with initiative to be entrepreneurs without undue risk.

This concept was formulated in the early 1970s by Dave and Gail Liniger, who were eager to help the real estate industry grow with the times. They realized that the successful agents were tired of giving their brokers up to one-half of their earned commissions. Combined with the need agents had for support services such as image, advertising and referrals, the Linigers devised a system that provided the best of both worlds.

At RE/MAX, agents are truly in business for themselves, but not by themselves. "The RE/MAX concept has become a fresh model for the entire industry and it has provided a framework for individuals within the business to function as entrepreneurs themselves. In many real estate offices, you have what is called the Prato principle, where 20 percent of the people are doing 80 percent of the business," said Carolyn Boyd. "Our office has only the top producers in the Midland market."

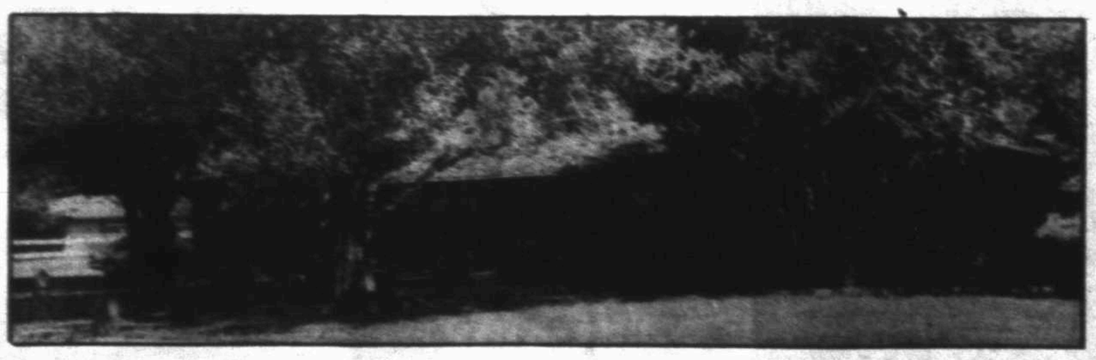

Just recently, the Midland Board of Realtors named eleven of the nineteen agents in the RE/MAX of Midland office which stands above the crowd in congratulating these agents — Jan Melton, Marilyn Jo Smith, Sandy Scott, Dennis Rambo, Randy Pittman, Esther Hasting, JoAnn Gaddy, Joyce Brickey, Carolyn Boyd, Fay Baum and May Barber.

RE/MAX of Midland is offering an incentive for agents who want to join this independent professional team. Information can be obtained by calling Jan Melton or Carolyn Boyd at 697-8232 for a private consultation.

Lanier & Co. has wonderful family home, guest house open today

By Jill Hancock
Advertising Feature Writer

For certain families, finding a suitable home is an easy task due to the variety which are available and have endless amenities. But for an extended family, a second residence for an older adult may be a top priority. Lanier & Co. has a unique three bedroom home that is well-suited for a family who needs to have an older adult close by. A one bedroom guest house is situated in the back yard for just this purpose.

This three-bedroom home is located at 1012 Alpine and is open today from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m.

This family home is located at 1012 Alpine on a large corner lot. The exterior is highlighted by mature oak trees, brick-edged flower beds and a split rail fence with brick columns lining the walkway. It is evident thoughout this home the quality of workmanship that was used when it was remodeled a few years ago.

The foyer is divided from the formal living area by a brick planter. A wall of windows frames the front yard. Two doorways open into the family room.

A corridor to the right of the living room leads to the home's three bedrooms. Two of the rooms have personalized decors and windows viewing the front yard. A hall bath is situated across from two of the bedrooms and has been totally remodeled. It has a double-sink vanity, an oversized tub and a skylight. A teal paper in a floral design adorns the walls of this extra wide bath.

The master bedroom is highlighted by two walls of windows. It can accommodate a small sitting area or a desk at one end. A private bath with a shower, has a wonderful view of the back yard. The walls are lined with a country print wallpaper.

The family room is situated behind the formal living room. A fireplace is inset along the wall between the two doorways that lead into this area. A hearth extends the length of the fireplace. Furniture can be arranged in this room in a variety of ways.

This area flows into the kitchen which is planned around a work island. A breakfast bar was planned as a divider between these two rooms. Stained leaded glass inlays decorate the upper cabinets. The appliances include a General Electric oven and cooktop and a Hotpoint dishwasher and microwave. A floral paper with a taupe background features a floral pattern in shades of rose, blue and plum. The utility room is situated off the kitchen.

The kitchen and family room open into a sun room. Plantation shuttered windows line the back wall. A bookcase is inset along the right wall, next to the dining area. The right part of the room is lined with cedar and features a spa.

A glass door leads onto a large deck area that surrounds the back yard pool. The guest house is situated to the right of the pool. The spacious back yard also has two lawns shaded by large trees.

The guest house is ideal for an older adult or provides privacy for out of town guests. It includes a spacious living area with a fireplace, a dining area, kitchen, a bedroom and a full bath. The guest house also has separate utilities.

The other amenities in this unbelievable home include a sprinkler system, water well and a side-entry, two car garage with an adjacent two-car carport. The house contains over 2,300 square feet and the guest house is approximately 1,100 square feet.

The home is being offered for $118,000. Call Lanier & Co. at 682-1144 for a private showing or go by today between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. to view this home during Lanier & Co.'s open house.

Langston Realtors talks about...

Chamber, United Way, new Big 5 contest

Langston

This week I hung up my hat as chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and donned a full-time Realtor chapeau. What a year! We did not have a CEO for more than three fourths of of my term, but few realized it outside of staff and volunteers who performed double and triple duties!

The successes were very "heady": getting the CAF, recruiting three new companies from California, having one of the highest levels ever in membership and volunteer participation, bringing thousands to the city through the efforts of our Convention and Visitors Bureau, sponsoring trade shsows and seminars for local businesses, finanalizing and utilizing our Forward Midland Program, etc., etc. Then finally, in July, getting our super new CEO, Janna King, on board! The year really worked and all because of the wonderful people involved. Thank to every one of you!

One last reminder, please do plan to attend the Chamber's annual meeting Thursday, 11:30 a.m. at Midland Center. James Dunlap, president, Texaco U.S.A., will be our featured speaker. Just call the Chamber for reservations, but hurry — we're pleased to say they are coming in quickly.

Now on to talking about another great example of community involvement and support by so many nice citizens: the United Way campaign. Don't forget to make your contribution. Once again a lot of people at Langstons' are involved in helping Pat Orseth, residential division chairman and our office administrator.

And finally, a word about our new Big 5 Program. Now selling agents of our Big 5 properties have an opportunity to win $1,000 every time five homes have sold! This is Langston Realtors way of encouraging all agents in MLS to show and sell your property if listed with Langston Realtors and enrolled in the program. We've have super interest and are looking forward to more frequent drawings and lots of lucky winners!

Survey discusses home ownership

Associated Press

American homeowners spent an average of $6,600 on remodeling, renovation or repair over the past five years, according to a survey by the Better Homes and Gardens Consumer Panel.

The survey also found that most considered family a key reason for home ownership, but one-quarter of those asked felt the home was important as an investment and for financial security.

"Part of the satisfaction of home ownership," says Allen Sabbag, president of Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate Service, "stems from the deep feelings Americans hold toward their home as a focal point for the family.

"Survey results show that for nearly two-thirds of the panel a home's primary importance is to serve as a place to protect and gather the family."

Thirty-eight percent of the respondents spent between $2,500 and $10,000 for remodeling and renovating in the five-year period, with 17 percent spending more than $10,000.

SUDDENLY SILENT

Props courtsey Doug's Baby Store

Text by Tina Stewart

Shortly after Sandy Kneer of Carrollton gave birth to her firstborn, Allison, in January 1986, she became frightened. She had watched a couple of programs dealing with sudden infant death syndrome and started to feel uneasy about the mysterious syndrome. Trying to ease the panic, she would just sit and watch Allison sleep and breathe, whenever she could.

Eventually Mrs. Kneer returned back to work and Allison was left at the home of a babysitter. In June 1986, Allison was put down for a morning nap. When the babysitter tried to rouse the child from the nap for a feeding, she discovered that the infant had stopped breathing.

Acting promptly, the babysitter called 911 and tried to resuscitate Allison with CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation). The paramedics worked on the child for an hour and she was rushed to the hospital. All attempts were futile, and Mrs. Kneer and her husband, Pat, were called to the hospital where they were notified that their daughter, just 19 weeks old, had died suddenly and without cause.

Each year approximately 7,000 to 8,000 babies die of sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS). According to recent data, SIDS (also called crib death) is the leading cause of infant deaths (28 days to 1 year of age) in the United States. It has been estimated that up to two deaths per 1,000 live births will be the direct results of SIDS every year.

UNDERSTANDING AND coping with the death of a child is difficult under any circumstance. In the case of a SIDS death, a tremendous feeling of helplessness is felt by the surviving members of the family, pediatricians and nurses, the clergy and everyone involved. In an effort to create more awareness about SIDS, the National SIDS Foundation in Landover, Md., has declared October as "National Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Awareness Month."

Terri Banks, a registered nurse at Midland Memorial Hospital, estimates that she has experienced 60 to 70 SIDS deaths during her 13 years working in the emergency room (ER). While she's had first-hand experience dealing with SIDS cases, she said the death of a child is a loss not only for the family but for society. "One thing to learn with SIDS is that more often than not, you can't help the baby, but you can help the survivors — that becomes the primary focus."

SIDS has been described as far back as medieval and possibly biblical times. At the end of the 13th century, a mother was forbade to take their infant to bed with her, the fear being the infant would be suffocated by the mother or wet nurse overlaying the child and forcing the child to suffocate in their own bed clothing or bedding. Even cats who slept with an infant were blamed for stealing the child's breath and causing the sudden death.

Suffocation continued to remain as the leading cause of infants who died suddenly until the 1940s and 50s when evidence was presented that discounted suffocation and proved a natural mechanism as the cause. In more recent times, research has been thrust into the area of SIDS, but a conclusive cause has not been determined.

ALTHOUGH THERE ARE not many "knowns" about SIDS, the common misconceptions of the past have been erased. What is known now is that SIDS is unpredictable and unpreventable; it is neither caused by vomiting, external suffocation nor choking; it is not contagious and doesn't cause pain or suffering to the infant and usually occurs during sleep.

J. Bruce Beckwith, M.D., said in a speech he delivered in 1983 that he did not believe SIDS was a disease, but was a way of dying. "It's an episode which occurs over a very brief span of moments that results in the death of a baby. Things that preceeded that episode may or may not be relevant to SIDS."

In the case of the Kneers' baby, Allison weighed nine pounds and one ounce at birth and was a perfectly normal and healthy newborn. Mrs. Kneer said her daughter was never really sick, except for having an episode of the sniffles a week prior to her death. Concerned, Mrs. Kneer took Allison to her pediatrician. She was prescribed an antibiotic to combat the beginnings of an ear infection. Mrs. Kneer said that by the day of her death, Allison had taken the last dose of her medicine and was back to her "happy self."

Leslie Malone, professional counselor, is coordinator for the North Texas SIDS Information Counseling Project in Dallas. The SIDS center, established in 1978, offers information and counseling services and is currently the only federally funded chapter in Texas.

Ladies Association sees fashion show

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Exclusive designs, including glamorous dresses, afternoon attire, sportswear and coats for the chilly days ahead, were presented by Julian Gold at the Midland Country Club's Ladies Association's first meeting of the fall season. Vicki Bailey, the shop's manager, introduced the show, which was accompanied by upbeat music as the models paraded the runway.

McKnight-Harrison

All agreed it was an outstanding showing, with hats and gloves and pantsuits making a comeback. Black, combined with white and/or gold, was a popular color choice.

Among the crowd pleasers was a black and gold dress, accented with a black and white ascot and black hat and gloves. Another was a bright turquoise suit with fuchsia accents.

A segment of the show was devoted to dark floral dresses and suits with coordinated hats. Formal wear included several show stoppers, including a red sequined short dress with floor-length satin detachable skirt.

The runway area was decorated with silver, bronze and gold pumpkins and leaves, and tables were centered with baskets of gold daisy mums, which were later awarded as door prizes. Dollie Ballenger was winner of a Julian Gold gift certificate. Hostesses for the social hour preceding lunch were Sarah (Mrs. Lowell) Branam, Poddy (Mrs. Jim) Lucas and Dorothy (Mrs. Loyd) Sanders.

New members introduced were Gail (Mrs. J. Scott) Matthews and Kathy Freeman. Among others seen enjoying the event were Dorothy (Mrs. James) Moring, Carol (Mrs. Peter) Crain, Norma Jean (Mrs. Bud) Boles, Flo (Mrs. Sam) White, Wilda (Mrs. Maurice) Bullock and Susan Askins.

Next month's program on Oct. 26 promises to be interesting and quite different from anything presented before. Dallasite Gloria Hocking will read letters from the late Margaret Mitchell, author of "Gone with the Wind," in reply to the correspondence she received from fans and critics.

JAMES CRAMER was honored recently with a surprise farewell party at the home of Judy Coleman.

James has moved to Las Vegas to dance with the Nevada State Ballet Company. Formerly with Ballet Midland, he also is known for his dance group, James Cramer and Friends.

In addition to dance company members, Karen Keaton-Scarcelli, Theresa Thetford, Amy Greer, Shannon Smyrl, Carol LaRoche, Louis Rameriez and Ms. Coleman, guests included Mary and Pat Lipscomb, Peggy and Rancy McClay, Judy Gorlin, Jackie Comola, Joe Rosse, Ann and Richard Dunbar and Phyllis and Mike Peek.

MORE RUSH NEWS — We just learned that Midland has another new pledge at the close of fall rush. Tonya Williams, daughter of Marilyn and Charles Williams, has pledged Phi Mu at the University of Arkansas.

IN VISITING with Wanda (Mrs. Tom) Scott, newsletter editor for the Midland Woman's Club, we learned of the activities taking place at the club this fall, which are open to the public.

A gigantic rummage and bake sale is scheduled on Oct. 19 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Oct. 20 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Jane (Mrs. Robert) Ward, ways and means chairman, adds that sack lunches and beverages also will be available.

In addition, Shopper's Luncheons are held on Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. While there, you can view the works of artist Marvin Stevenson, a prize-winning water colorist. His paintings, which are on exhibit during October, come from his art gallery in Odessa.

In further club news, we hear those attending last Monday's combined meeting of the Woman's Club and Book Review Unit were quite taken with Rose-Mary Rumbley's program on the History of Germany. The members' husbands, who were issued a special invitation to attend, particularly enjoyed her entertaining treatment of the subject matter. She is a popular Dallas lecturer and entertainer.

AT WIT'S END

Behind every successful mother is big load of guilt

By Erma Bombeck

Kids don't change. I realized that when I read a story recently about Theresa Grentz from Rutgers University, who was nominated to be the U.S. women's basketball coach for the 1992 Summer Olympics.

Bombeck

Her older son reacted with joy and pride that his mother had been singled out for the honor of a lifetime. Her small son, however, wanted to know, "Am I goin'?"

My mind went back to 25 years ago when my typewriter was in my bedroom, resting on a piece of plywood supported on either side by cement blocks. I received a letter from my mentor, Glenn Thompson, then editor of the Dayton (Ohio) Journal Herald, who informed me that at his suggestion, Newsday Syndicate had picked up my column to be distributed throughout the country.

My husband was thrilled for me, the boys were stunned, but my daughter thought a minute and said, "Who's going to drive me to Scouts on Tuesdays?"

You wouldn't believe the guilt that a small human being capable of walking under a coffee table can lay on you. With one look, he can get the candy bar you were saving for yourself or get you to take the bent fork or the egg with the broken yolk.

Parents set themselves up for guilt. From the moment children are born, we elevate them to the center of the universe. Schedules are readjusted, lifestyles change, sacrifices become a way of life. Nothing is going to get in the way of our children's happiness.

We tend to operate under a double standard. If a mother locks herself in the bathroom, reading the morning paper in peace, and a child interrupts, she yells through the door, "I'm busy." If she is on the phone talking to an editor and a child demands her attention, she calls the editor back.

If dinner is late because she met Grace in aisle 3 and got to talking, no big deal. If dinner is late because her plane was on the ground at O'Hare, she'd better arrive home with a new Nintendo game as a peace offering.

It has always been. It makes you wonder, if the sons of Sandra Day O'Connor had been small when she was named to the Supreme Court, would they have lamented, "YOU go to Washington! We're not leaving our friends." Were Carol Burnett's daughters ever in tears because their mother hadn't washed their favorite sweater as she was going out the door to make millions laugh? Did the little Kennedy kids hang around the knees of their First Parents as they prepared to leave the White House and whine, "You guys going out again?"

Mother's guilt. Don't even think of leaving home without it.

Plastic recycled into picnic tables

Copley News Service

You hear a lot about recycling these days, but most people just put out their trash and hope someone else will do it for them.

Not Alan Robbins of Akron, Ohio, who is busy melting down empty plastic milk jugs and turning them into picnic tables. Plastic picnic tables, plastic mailbox posts and whatever else he can think of.

The plastic lumber Robbins manufactures isn't sturdy enough for building houses yet. But his plastic picnic tables never have to be painted or sanded, look like wood and have no splinters.

SILENT: Syndrome is totally unpreventable, unpredictable

(From 1E)

"SIDS is totally unpreventable and unpredictable. SIDS can determine what an infant didn't die from, but it's not telling what an infant did die from because nothing was overwhelming or out of the ordinary about the death," Ms. Malone said.

IT'S THE NOT knowing that cloaks the sudden death of an infant with mystique. It's the not knowing that sharpens the already painful grief of the sudden loss of a child. It's the unexplainable reason of cause that substantiates the amount of guilt a parent feels. It's the suddeness of the event that robs a parent of any type of early grieving.

"The two things parents (who have lost children to SIDS) always ask are first, 'Why did this happen to my baby?'; and second, 'What did I do wrong?' " Ms. Banks said.

Although television programs she had watched about SIDS frightened Mrs. Kneer initially, she said the small amount of knowledge she had acquired about SIDS helped her to alleviate any guilt or blame that she might have tried to place on the babysitter, herself or her husband.

The Rev. Dr. Alan Williams, director of pastoral care at Midland Memorial Hospital and coordinator for Compassionate Friends (a support group for parents who've lost children), often is called immediately to the emergency room when an infant who's apparently died to SIDS is brought in. He said the parents display a tremendous amount of guilt and typically run through a stream of "If only I had" events that in the parents' minds might have made a difference.

"Nine times out of 10, the parents are still in shock when they come into the emergency room. Anything that you say, you're talking to their heart and not their head," Williams said.

PROCEDURES IN THE ER can heighten the fear of already shocked and scared parents. Ms. Banks said that the ER is obligated to provide a special waiting room for the family. To help keep the parents informed about what is happening with their child, another ER staff member is appointed as a liaison to be a go-between for the parents and the medical personnel working on the child.

Parents are strongly discouraged from being in a room where an infant is being treated. "Resuscitation is a very aggressive procedure. It's not always pleasant to watch. If a child doesn't make it we try to make the infant more presentable. We try to preserve the image of a sleeping child for the parent's sake," Ms. Banks said.

A SIDS death is one of the hardest incidents for the emergency personnel to handle emotionally. Williams said a SIDS death affects not only the family in a profound way, but also touches the nurses emotionally. He said it was not unusual for him to spend as much time trying to comfort the ER personnel after a SIDS death as he does comforting a family.

"We take it all personnally. We all have children and can't help but think, 'What if it were mine,' " Ms. Banks said, adding that the emotional strain sometimes makes it hard to continue working. "We see so many major and minor incidents in such a small emergency room. It is difficult to lose an infant and pull yourself together and go out of the room and take care of another problem. It's very difficult."

GRIEVING IS NECESSARY for all involved with a SIDS death, but for a parent, it is both unexpected and traumatic. Parents want answers and solutions to make sense of the infant's death. "One expectation for a parent is that medical science knows everything. The western world wants solutions. The only solution to a SIDS parent is to bring the child back," Williams said.

Sharing the grief and helplessness felt by the parents is one of the responsibilities that friends and families sometimes ignore. Mrs. Kneer said that her family was deeply hurt and affected by the baby's death. Some family members reacted by not mentioning or talking about Allison, thinking they were protecting Mrs. Kneer from more pain. "What they don't realize is that the lost of a child already hurts. Just because they don't mention her name, doesn't mean that it's not going to hurt you anymore. One of my biggest fears is that Allison will be forgotten, and when people don't talk about her, this fear is more evident," Mrs. Kneer said.

Just as each case of SIDS is unique, each method of grieving for a parent is individual. There is no right or wrong way to grieve, nor is there a time limit. "Sometimes all you can do is offer coffee and Kleenex and listen ," Ms. Banks said. She added that other times it might take a little more effort. "For example one parent just wanted to sit and hold their baby two or three hours before the funeral service. It's not always convenient, but to a parent, it might be the only way to help."

SUPPORT GROUPS, such as Compassionate Friends in Midland, can offer help to grieving parents. Parents can vent their feelings and know that the others listening have been through similar situations. "A lot of my friends didn't know what to say, or were afraid of saying the wrong things, so they didn't say anything. Other friends, I got the impression, were tired of hearing me talk about it; whereas parents in the support group had been through something similar and would sit and listen for hours," Mrs. Kneer said.

Participating in support groups also can help parents learn how to deal with situations — such as holidays or birthdays — after the loss of a child, as well as the everyday occurrences that make it hard to deal with the child's death.

During a meeting of Compassionate Friends, Williams said the question came up about how to respond to the inquiry of how many children a parent who's lost a child has. "One man wanted to know if it was proper to say one living and one deceased. I answered that it was proper to the degree in which he felt comfortable with it," Williams said.

Ordering an autopsy for a SIDS baby is sometimes difficult for a grieving parent. However, it is one of the most useful procedures to help parents immediately relieve the overwhelming amount of grief they feel. Because there was nothing substantial that pointed to a cause of Allison's death, the justice of the peace ordered an autopsy. The autopsy was performed and the cause of death was attributed to SIDS.

Mrs. Kneer had mixed feelings about having an autopsy performed on Allison. "It was twofold. In a way, I wanted a reason for her death. But I worried that if they would have found something, it would have been something I should have known about and could have prevented," she said.

SOME PARENTS ARE hesitant to go ahead with an autopsy. Ms. Banks said that these parents have an irrational fear of an autopsy. "An autopsy is done with the same care and compassion that a surgery is done. The benefits are overwhelming as compared to the drawbacks," she said.

Getting on with their lives wasn't easy for the Kneers after Allison's death. However three months later, Mrs. Kneer became pregnant. Today she has two healthy children; a girl who's 16 months old and 3-year-old boy. While both children were put on breathing monitors, neither experienced any health-related difficulties.

Mrs. Kneer said wanting to have other children so soon had nothing to do with trying to replace Allison. "The loss hurts just as much, even though I have another child to hold onto. I personally don't think anyone can replace a child. I don't want to and will never forget Allison. Filling a void in my life is not replacing."

SIDS is frightening, especially for new or expecting parents. However, the message about SIDS can be miscommunicated. The goal is to create awareness about SIDS, not to cause panic."We all have kids and have slept with one eye open. Everyone has the same fear of SIDS. But it isn't a fear that happens often and it shouldn't be a fear that runs rampant," Ms. Banks said. Remember the statistics can easily be reversed — 998 babies out of 1,000 do not die from SIDS.

The first year of life is full of wonderful events. New parents have so many exciting times to look forward to. So much more time and energy can be expended positively on the wonderful times than wasted on all the "what ifs." Unfortunately and tragically there is nothing anyone can do to prevent SIDS from happening to a baby.

Grief turned to joy by organ donations

By Cliff Hadley

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Virginia Zimmer watches for death.

It's grim work, but she can't let death have the final say.

At St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, Zimmer matches organ donors with people from all over the country who also watch for death.

There are miracles, and she somehow finds ways to turn grief and tragedy into joy.

"I tell people it's the gift of life — it's the finest gift we can give," she says.

For the thousands of seriously ill with diseased hearts, kidneys and livers, the choice is simple — a transplant or death. They wait anxiously for the call that another person has died so they might live.

The donors share a profile. They die quickly, violently. It may be a traffic accident, a blood vessel exploding in the brain, a suicide. In any event, the brain is destroyed while the organs still function.

Almost always, they're young.

"They're 16- to 20-year-olds. . . . That's why it's difficult. They're the hope of the family. They die, and it's tough," says Zimmer, 55.

The awful moment comes when the family is told their loved one is dead. Machines can maintain the organs in a brain-dead person for a couple of days at most. Zimmer must work quickly, compassionately.

Gently, she tells the family of the donor program. She answers questions. The grieving struggle to understand.

"Eighty percent say yes," she says. "I've never had anybody get angry with a request to donate. They can only say no."

In 1986, Zimmer volunteered to coordinate organ donation at St. Alphonsus on top of her regular duties as a nurse educator. Her 24 years as an intensive-care nurse were ideal training.

The volunteer work grew into the full-time position she assumed in August working with all the hospitals in southwestern Idaho. A top priority for Zimmer is to educate the public about the donor program.

Her first year, she managed 13 donor cases. There were 14 the following year. Then eight. And only four donors so far this year.

In any given year, only 8,500 to 12,000 people can be considered to be donors, says Wanda Bond, a spokeswoman for the United Network for Organ Sharing in Richmond, Va.

"It may be that hospitals already burdened with bureaucracy and red tape see the donor program as just one more thing to do," Bond says. She also thinks stricter drunken driving laws, higher seat belt use and motorcycle helmet laws all may affect the number of available donors.

Nationally, donors of solid organs such as the heart, lungs, liver, kidneys and pancreas fell from 3,975 two years ago to 3,898 in 1989. Yet the number of transplants rose more than 5 percent to 13,384, through multiple use of donor organs.

Zimmer says up to a half-dozen recipients may benefit from the organs of one donor. A donor also can provide eyes for cornea transplants, bone to graft onto shattered limbs and skin to protect burn patients.

'I tell people it's the gift of life — it's the finest gift we can give. ... When they can donate, it helps the donor family almost as much as the recipient family.'

— Virgina Zimmer organ donor matcher

"When they can donate, it helps the donor family almost as much as the recipient family," Zimmer says.

After a patient has died and permission is obtained from relatives to donate organs or tissue, an intricate choreography involving scores of people is performed. Most of the work must be done within 12 to 18 hours.

"We treat (the donor) respectfully," says Merry Reed, an intensive-care nurse at St. Alphonsus. "But we can't treat them as though they're going to get well. Now you're working to save another life — or three or four lives — with the organs."

If the heart or other organs have been donated, Zimmer is on the phone with the national organ-sharing network for its lists of the people needing organ transplants.

The lists are brutally efficient. Only the most feeble rise to the top. The likelihood of survival through an organ transplant increases only as a person's medical condition deteriorates.

Lab work is done to check for hepatitis and AIDS. Blood pressure is stabilized. The chest is measured. The kidneys are kept working. Organ recovery teams fly in from Salt Lake City or Portland, Ore.

A heart must be transplanted within four hours after being removed from a donor. Lungs, two hours. A liver, 24 hours. Kidneys, 72 hours.

More than 17,000 people in the United States are waiting for kidney transplants. Nearly 1,000 need liver transplants. An additional 1,700 need hearts.

Nine months ago, Virginia Zimmer's own son, Joe, died in a car wreck. He was 28 and strong, a former Marine. The nurses at St. Alphonsus, out of respect for their co-worker's feelings, didn't ask her the obvious question.

Zimmer, in her grief, didn't remember until it was too late.

"I could have donated his eyes," she says. She pauses.

"The ones who feel badly are the ones who weren't asked."

Remarriage not uncommon

Divorcees discover being single is not as much fun as it use to be

By Suzanne Schlosberg
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Judy Melton and Roger Teel were high school sweethearts.

Judy was on the drill team, Roger was a jock. They took algebra together, went cruising in Roger's '56 Chevy and, in 1966, they got married in a Bellflower church.

"That's just what you did," Roger said.

Over the next 10 years, the Teels fought constantly. Roger would go golfing with his buddies, while Judy would stay home with the kids and feel sorry for herself. Then, in retaliation, Judy began dancing at bars, staying out late and having an affair.

Finally the Teels agreed on one thing: divorce.

But they weren't any happier. They moved back in together, fought, split up, reconciled again, split up again. Even during the separations, though, Roger sent flowers on their anniversary.

Eventually, they tried counseling. Roger stopped asking Judy to cook and clean every day and began calling her from work just to say hello. Judy, feeling more secure, agreed to stop frequenting bars.

LAST SEPTEMBER, 23 years after their wedding and 13 years after their divorce, the Teels remarried on the Laguna Niguel golf course where they live. Roger forgot to arrange for music, so his friends hummed. The guests wore golf shorts.

"It was a fun wedding because we were ready to get married," said Roger, an assistant golf pro.

Said Judy, an escrow officer: "We've grown up and we're happy with ourselves. We know who we are."

Marital reunions of celebrity couples are well-publicized. Among those who've said "I do" again to each other are Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, Melanie Griffith and Don Johnson, Natalie Wood and Robert Wagner, Neil Simon and Diane Lander.

But celebrities aren't the only ones who remarry their former spouses. Among couples in general, marriage therapists say, the practice is not uncommon, especially in the era of AIDS.

"Being single is no fun these days," said Tracy Cabot, a Van Nuys psychotherapist. "It's a different world out there than it used to be. . . . It makes going back to someone you consider safe a lot more attractive."

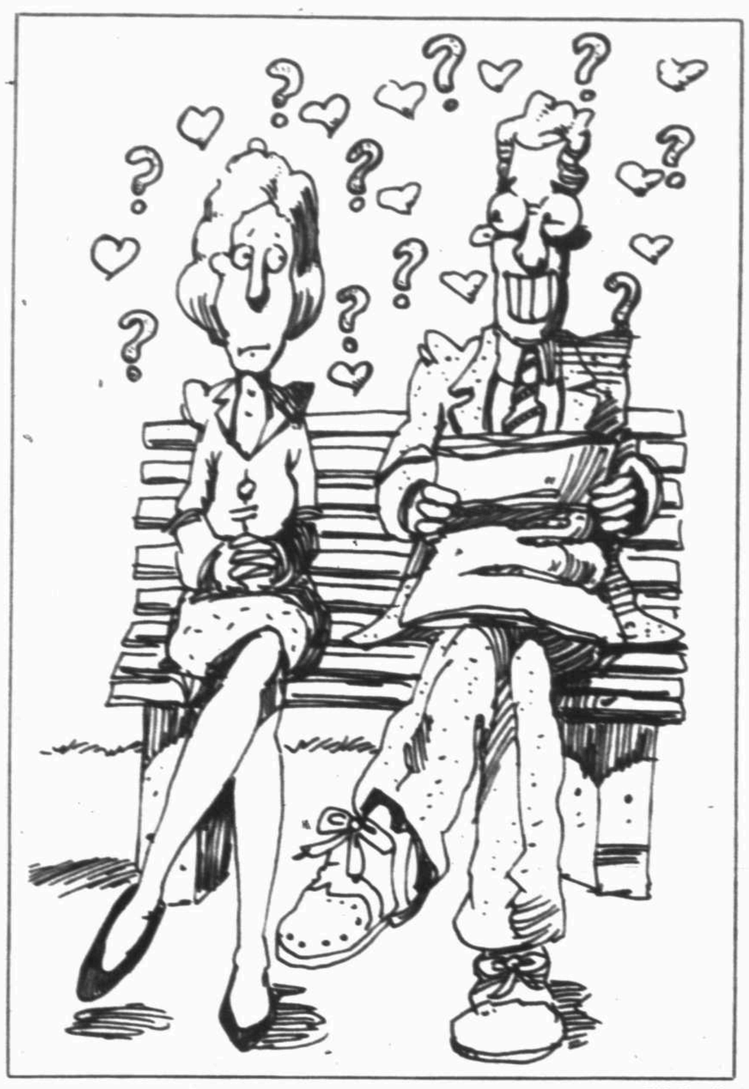

About 1.2 million marriages end in divorce each year, according to the National Center for Health Statistics. Between 5 and 10 percent of the divorced couples will remarry each other, therapists estimate.

MOST OF THESE remarriages are doomed to failure, experts say, because people reunite for the wrong reasons.

"It's a very risky thing to do," Cabot said. "They bring the same problems to the relationship . . . and fall back into the same trap."

Fear of AIDS is just one impetus for divorced couples to remarry. Another is loneliness.

"They feel that as bad as it was, it's better than four empty walls and trying to play the dating game," said Sven Wahlroos, a Van Nuys psychologist.

CNS Graphic

That's a familiar scenario to Patty Ihle (pronounced eye-lee) of Mission Viejo, who married and divorced the same man twice. "You're secure," said Ihle, who sought the reunion despite several unresolved problems. "You know the person. You don't have to put on airs."

During a separation, Cabot said, people forget how awful the relationship was. But soon after the reunion, reality sets in. "When people start living together on a day-to-day basis, they find out the person hasn't changed. . . . They say, 'This bum still doesn't have a job,' or 'She's still a slob.' "

Kim Fuller, a psychologist at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in Woodland Hills, said many couples will continue to have mixed feelings about each other. "You're not talking about real healthy relationships to start with," Fuller said. "These are not peaceful, warm marriages."

SOME COUPLES reunite because they have such a long history together. They find it especially hard to let go when children are involved, counselors say.

"The longer people have been married, they feel like they've invested a lot in the marriage and it seems like a waste to throw it all away," said Barbara Swenson of Sherman Oaks, a licensed marriage and family counselor who considered doing a doctoral dissertation on recoupling. (She ultimately chose another subject.)

For a reunion to succeed, therapists agree, both people must grow. "Merely separating and then getting back together isn't going to change the relationship," Fuller said.

The Teels learned that lesson. They began living together just two weeks after their divorce was final, "probably because it was comfortable," Judy said. It wasn't long before they were yelling at the dinner table. Their two daughters, upset by the constant fighting, asked why they bothered living in the same house.

"The problems hadn't been worked out from before," Judy said. "There was a lot of resentment on both sides."

Patty Ihle and husband Dean agree that they reunited for all the wrong reasons.

Married in 1968, they first divorced in 1984. According to Patty, Dean would stay out all night partying, and she'd end up throwing dinner down the drain. One time she got so mad, she threw a plate of noodles at him.

Still, she said, he wouldn't respond. "He'd just clam up," she said, and then he'd explode and leave the house. "I felt like something was dying inside of me."

DEAN DENIES he has a drinking problem and said he stayed out late only because Patty, a caterer and banquet coordinator, was always out late.

"She was never home," Dean said. "She was always out working or doing whatever, so consequently I was never there either. What was I supposed to do?"

Dean said Patty makes too big an issue of his drinking. "She's hung up on that," he said. "No matter what I would do, I was wrong."

After the divorce, Ihle said, she continued to believe Dean would change. Dean said he believed the same about Patty. Two years later, they remarried on their anniversary.

"She slipped right back to her old ways, and I did as well," Dean said.

In April she filed for divorce again. It will be final in November, two days after what would have been their 22nd wedding anniversary.

WHILE REUNIONS of stagnant couples can result in the worst marriages, therapists say, reunions of couples who have changed significantly can be among the most successful.

"If both people have had a chance, through therapy or another marriage, to learn more about what they contributed to the difficulties, there should be a very good chance of success," Wahlroos said. "It can be ideal."

Fuller said the reunions most likely to succeed are those in which one spouse has recovered from substance abuse. "That might actually change things," she said.

It did for Lolita and Alan Russell of Sepulveda.

The Russells married in 1979. Alan's two children from a previous marriage moved in with them, and together they had daughter Lisa.

Lolita tried too hard.

"I felt like I had to be the perfect mother, dealing with the homework, telling them to pick up their room, cooking dinner," Lolita said. "I'm a lousy cook, and I don't like to cook. . . . Yet he was able to go to work and go golfing and have a good old time."

Then Alan went through a midlife crisis. He began managing a rock band, staying out late and doing cocaine.

"I got deeper and deeper into it," Alan said. "We made $140,000 one year and had nothing to show for it."

Lolita never suspected his cocaine problem.

"He said he had meetings, that he had to run his computer program at night," Lolita said. "All I knew was that when he was home, he was someone else."

THEY DIVORCED. Both thought it was over for good. "I still loved him," Lolita said. "But he wasn't the man I married."

After they split up, Alan cleaned up his act. He quit drugs and started water skiing.

For two years, the Russells had no contact. Then one day Alan decided to take Lisa to a baseball game. Before the game, Lolita brought their daughter to a restaurant so Lisa could get reacquainted with her father.

"It was almost like a first date - that bubbly feeling," Lolita said.

A month later, they all went miniature golfing. "It felt so good," Alan said. "All the bad stuff - it was history."

A few weeks later, in October, 1989, they remarried.

Alan now takes Lisa to school, helps clean the house and attends school meetings. "I'm Mr. Mom, and I love it," he said.

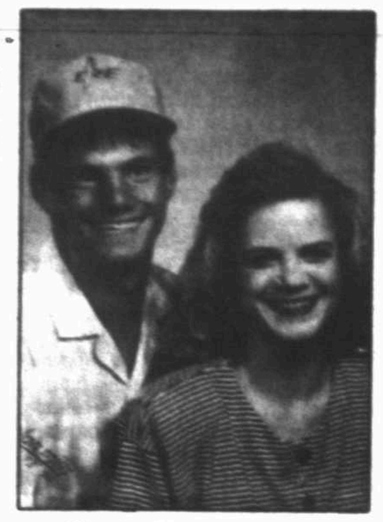

Lolita has changed, too. "I realized you don't have to be supermom," she said. "Life will go on."

Couple restores log cabin

By Pamela A. Stokes

TYLER (AP) — Loy and Alice Gilbert are living their dream of being able to give others a better appreciation of American heritage. They have restored, as authentically as possible, a rustic East Texas pioneer log cabin dating back to the early 1880s. The cabin is in a pasture beside their Smith County home.

"We hoped to perpetuate a page in history," said Gilbert, who is a longtime history buff and Smith County Historical Society past president.

The Gilberts considered undertaking the project when they found most of the few remaining pioneer buildings to be in bad shape and those on display often sparsely furnished.

During a trip to Dalby Springs in Bowie County in 1971, the Gilberts found and, after months of negotiating with the owner, purchased a hand-hewn log cabin.

They learned from two of the cabin's elderly original occupants who live in DeKalb that it was built in 1881 by the Hornbuckles, a family who moved by covered wagon to Texas from Tennessee, and originally was a one-room building with a dirt floor and an area on the back porch used as the kitchen.

"As the family grew, they added a room across the dog trot (an open hallway) and later a separate kitchen," Gilbert said. "A two-room, dog trot log house with a separate kitchen and log barn are typical of the one-family farm in East Texas for the period 1840 to 1890."

"We asked them what it was like to live there and they said it was extremely cold. The family stayed warm at night simply by throwing more quilts on the bed," Mrs. Gilbert added.

THE CABIN WAS very dilapidated, recalled Gilbert, who undertook the huge task of dismantling the cabin, moving it to Smith County and restoring it with his son, Randal, a Tyler attorney, and the late Henry Camel, a long-time family employee.

The men drew a plan, dismantled the cabin and numbered and color-coded the logs. Except logs from the kitchen, many of the oak logs were sound and worth saving, Gilbert said.

It took more than four trips using two trucks and a trailer, to move it in pieces to the Gilbert's farm, located on Farm-to-Market Road 724, near Tyler Pounds Field Airport.

"We worked on it for 18 months before putting it (back) up," Gilbert said. A few changes from the original cabin were made. Wooden floors were added, the loft area restored and a steep narrow stairway replaced a ladder to the loft.

"Electric wiring was carefully concealed in the chinking in restoration. And the stick-and-mud chimney was rebuilt with handmade bricks from this area," he said. "Eventually, after several years, we got it all back together."

They used the help of contractors to rebuild the roof and used outside help with the chimney. Now with the pioneer plantation fully restored to its yesteryear splendor, antique tools are lined up along the outside of the cabin. A few old books and knick-knacks and antique pieces fill the inside.

"The furnishings are all things people have given us," Mrs. Gilbert said.

In 1976, with most restoration completed, the Gilberts hosted an open house to members of the Smith County Historical Society. The separate kitchen and the barn were added later.

THE GILBERT PLANTATION — cabin, kitchen, barn and blacksmith shop — was the center of attention when Smith County Historical Society presented its second Fall Fest celebration at the site on Saturday.

Fall Fest featured a recreation of pioneer life on a typical Smith County farm during the time period of 1845-1900. Visitors were able to take tours and spent the day watching demonstrations of yesteryear crafts, including spinning, weaving, soap-making, log hewing and shoe cobbling. Games and entertainment included fiddling, square dancing and gospel singing.

The adjoining kitchen to the cabin, which was finished in 1983, includes a wood-burning stove that occasionally is used, and old-timey utensils, wash boards, lye soap, a churn and several bushels of hanging, dried peppers. A dome-shaped mesh screen, once used to keep flies off food, sits on the table.

The kitchen roof is made of split oak boards or shingles that were rived, or split, by Randal Gilbert. Rather than the oak logs found in the main cabin, the rest of the kitchen is made of pine, taken from an old house east of Lindale that dates back to "sometime around" the 1850s, said the younger Gilbert.

"A log house can be dated by the complexity of the notching," Randal Gilbert said. "The older the building, the more elaborate the notching is. Half dove-tail notches are the type found in the kitchen. These notches cannot be pushed apart — they are self-locking. Logs in the main cabin are square-notched joints and are a little simpler to build than half dove-tail notches."

THE GILBERTS were looking for a barn to restore and go with the place. They were offered a barn built in 1857 from Old Chapel Hill provided they moved it, Gilbert said. Some of the equipment in the barn today came with it and dates back to that time.

"The barn presented some peculiar problems," Randal Gilbert said. "Some logs had significant termite damage. There was a close call with a tornado."

"There were logs strewn as far as 50 yards away," his father said. "It was torn down, built and rebuilt."

Today classes, school groups and even garden clubs tour the pioneer plantation and learn how the men and women of yesterday lived.

"There was even a wedding here, that's what the vine arch was used for," Mrs. Gilbert added. "We keep a little guest register," she said.

Money most popular wedding gift

Associated Press

According to the "Brides Book of Etiquette," money is today's most popular wedding gift, in the form of checks, cash, government bonds, stock certificates or traveler's checks.

Gifts of silver, crystal, toaster ovens and furniture follow in popularity, according to the book, published by Bride's magazine, which adds: "If you prefer not to give a monetary gift, but don't know exactly what the couple would prefer, it's quite appropriate to ask the mother of the bride or groom, or the attendants, if the couple has a wedding gift registry at a local store. The registry is a list of items needed by the couple, from the smallest, most inexpensive kitchen utensil, to the largest, most expensive major purchase."

ASK DR. EPSTEIN

Parents worried that daughter is trying to grow up too fast

By Bruce A. Epstein, M.D.

DEAR DR. EPSTEIN: I'm very upset with my 12-year-old daughter. She asked permission to wear jewelry and makeup to school. Since my husband and I don't believe in children growing up too fast, we agreed she could wear only lipstick and blush. However, yesterday I picked her up at school and she had more makeup on than Madonna. How can we make her realize we're only trying to protect her and that the "Madonna" look is too harsh at 12 years old? — OLD FASHIONED PARENTS

Epstein

DEAR OLD FASHIONED PARENTS: At the age of 12, many girls are more influenced by their friends than by their parents. Peer pressure is hard to resist. Do your daughter's close friends were excessive makeup? If so, preventing your daughter from doing so will be a difficult task. Explain to your daughter that her defiant behavior is not acceptable. Then ask her to put in writing what she believes is a reasonable amount of makeup and jewelry to wear. Review with her what she has written and discuss her requests. Your goal should be to maintain your standards. Explain your reasons to your daughter. In addition, try to consider her point of view. Perhaps some of her requests (maybe only one) are reasonable. If so, you should be flexible. Good luck with this all too common, but difficult, issue.

DEAR DR. EPSTEIN: Drug use is an every-day occurrence in my neighborhood. My 17-year-old son is very active in school sports, particularly basketball. Because he's a good student and an exceptional basketball player, he has the potential to receive a basketball scholarship to college. However, lately he has been hanging around with boys who use drugs, skipping school and missing practice games. When I talk to him about drug use, he becomes sullen and obstinate. His coach told him about sports figures who used drugs and are now drug free. Where can I turn for help? — MRS. J.F.

DEAR MRS. J.F.: Encouraging your son to channel his energies into sports is wise on your part. Because he loves basketball, he would probably be interested in learning more about Spencer Haywood, former NBA great and Olympic Gold Medalist. Since his recovery from cocaine addiction in 1984, Spencer Haywood has dedicated his life to reaching out to our country's youth with an anti-drug message.

He has created the videotape "The Choice of a Lifetime: A Program for Drug and Alcohol Recovery," which is an account of his life. Your son would probably be very interested in this tape which features commentary by many NBA superstars including Michael Jordan and Magic Johnson.

The Spencer Haywood Foundation distributes this videotape free of charge to schools throughout the country. This tape also is available free of charge through major video stores in the Midwest. For further information about Spencer Haywood and the excellent work with youth being accomplished by the Spencer Haywood Foundation, please contact The Spencer Haywood Foundation, 16500 North Park Drive — Suite 1615, Southfield, Mich., 48075.

Two generation trips can strain relationships

By Lawrence M. Kutner
N.Y. Times News Service

To celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary, Larry and Helen Kasman recently went on a cruise to Alaska with one of their grown daughters.

Mr. Kasman, a retired pharmacist who lives in Manhattan and Coconut Creek, Fla., said he found that old father-daughter relationships die hard.

"Even today I was concerned about what time she went to bed," he admitted. "I always think about that."

During the cruise, each generation tried to be sensitive to the other's needs. "We didn't do everything together," Mrs. Kasman said. "We were sure to give each other space. The trip was a wonderful success."

Traveling together — going somewhere other than to each other's homes — can help take the parent-child relationship to a new and more rewarding level. It can be a time to shed old perceptions of each other.

But traveling together can involve challenges as well. Former roles and responsibilities may now feel awkward or aggravating.

Either the parent or the child can become overly protective. The question of who pays for what can take on great significance.

"Meals are the most common family rituals of childhood," said Dr. Marion Lindblad-Goldberg, a psychologist and family therapist at the Philadelphia Child Guidance Clinic. "What, when and how you eat, where you sit, what you talk about and who's in charge are reflections of the basic patterns of your family. But what felt good when you were young and what feels good when you're older are very different."

MONEY MATTERS often have deep emotional underpinnings. Who picks up the restaurant check or pays the hotel bill can be symbolic of a refusal to change roles or of a desire to prove one's worth in other areas.

"There's sometimes a feeling that if you pay for something, you have the right to control the people involved," said Dr. Matti Gershenfeld, a psychologist who is the president of the Couples Learning Center in Jenkintown, Pa., near Philadelphia.

Dr. Gershenfeld went on an 11-day trip this summer with one of her sons, a 34-year-old psychiatrist. She admitted that before she left she was nervous about the joint vacation.

"I was worried because he is very strong-willed," she said. To avoid problems, she booked them on a tour in which almost everything was prearranged and paid in advance.

"That avoided our getting into arguments over where we went to breakfast and what sightseeing we did," Dr. Gershenfeld said. "The only decisions we had to make were where to go for two lunches. I think it went very well." And she added that her son wants to take another trip with her.

Susan Horwitz, a senior therapist at the Family and Marriage Clinic at the University of Rochester Medical Center, took a vacation with her husband, their two teen-age children and her mother last February.

SHE DESCRIBES that trip as particularly good for her children, who learned about their family's history through mealtime discussions. But Ms. Horwitz said that even though her mother was very active and independent, it took her a while to adjust to having a parent around.

"It was difficult to feel suddenly like my mother's child again," she said. "Her approach to raising children hasn't changed, and it's different from mine."

Ms. Horwitz described how her daughter would dance at the resort's disco until her midnight curfew. "My husband and I trusted her; she's a responsible kid," she said. "But my mother wouldn't go to sleep until she knew I was in my room."

The tug toward old relationships and roles was so strong that Ms. Horwitz found herself saying things to her children that she had never said before. "They didn't sound like me," she said. "They sounded like they came from my mother."

After a few days, the three generations adjusted to each other. Since then they have taken another trip and are planning a third.

"You forgive and forget your parents' idiosyncrasies when you're not with them for a period of time," Ms. Horwitz said. "These come back when you're together on vacation."

Of course, her own children may say that of her in another 10 years.

Travel time together, apart important for parents, children

N.Y. Times News Service

Grown children and their parents who are considering traveling together should keep several things in mind:

■ Discuss your expectations ahead of time. This will allow you to clear up potentially volatile misconceptions before they cause problems. Susan Horwitz, a senior therapist at the Family and Marriage Clinic at the University of Rochester Medical Center, discovered that she and her mother had different images of their vacation together.

"My mother's expectations were that she would be with her loving children who would look after her," Ms. Horwitz said. "I, however, was exhausted and wanted my mother to take care of me."

■ Schedule times to spend together and apart. Too much togetherness can be irritating, no matter how noble your intentions. "You can be who you really are during the time when you're away from each other," said Dr. Marion Lindblad-Goldberg, a psychologist and family therapist at the Philadelphia Child Guidance Clinic.

■ Discuss the trip's finances before you leave. Remember that money is symbolic of power, maturity and competence in many families. An argument over who picks up a check is seldom simply a matter of who can best afford it.

"Try to work out ahead of time who will pay for what," Dr. Lindblad-Goldberg said. "That avoids the problems that come from falling into old roles."

■ Be careful to avoid sliding into out-of-date and inappropriate roles simply out of habit. If you are traveling with grown children, try not to treat them like 10-year-olds. Telling them to go to bed early or to eat a healthier meal undermines much more important aspects of your relationship, even if your unwanted advice is correct.

"Treat them like they're adult friends," said Dr. Matti Gershenfeld, a psychologist who is the president of the Couples Learning Center in Jenkintown, Pa. "You wouldn't tell a friend to take his elbows off the table or ask why he's wearing that faded shirt."

Similarly, if you are traveling with your parents, avoid the trap of dependency. It may feel comfortable at first leaving the day-to-day decisions up to your parents, especially if, as Ms. Horwitz recalled, you are feeling exhausted. But doing so is unfair and can breed resentment.

■ Pay attention to little matters that reflect issues of adulthood and competence. Is one person doing all the driving or making all the hotel and meal arrangements? Are you keeping watch or commenting on another adult's bedtime or what someone else eats?

"Everyone should have his or her own room key," Dr. Lindblad-Goldberg said. "That's a very symbolic issue. Not having a key makes you dependent upon another person's schedule."

■ Discuss the trip when it is over. Dr. Lindblad-Goldberg recommends that family members write letters to each other saying what they appreciated and learned about the other person during the trip.

"This will help you move your relationship to a new adult-to-adult level and to break free of old and inappropriate family roles," she said.

Motion sickness caused by eye, ear interaction

Associated Press

Scientists agree that the cause of motion sickness lies in the delicate relationship between the eyes' focus and the inner ear's tiny balancing mechanisms. Normally both senses operate in perfect harmony. But in the air or at sea in turbulent weather, the eyes register little movement while the inner ear reacts to the shaking. The brain, receiving conflicting messages, gets confused. Motion sickness results.

Don't bring home excess baggage from trip treats

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — For some, travel and vacations can mean adding extra ~ pounds unintentionally.

To avoid gaining weight, Charles Sekeres, president of Physicians Weight Loss Centers, has these tips:

■ Don't eat at airports. The food is often high in fat and calories.

■ Keep to your normal mealtime schedule while away and eat all foods slowly.

■ Drink up to eight glasses of bottled water daily and avoid alcohol.

■ In restaurants, order smaller portions of meat and larger ones of vegetables or rice.

■ Get plenty of exercise and a full quota of sleep.

Fighting fires

through education

For the past 20 years, Midland school children have made posters such as those shown above for the Midland Fire Prevention Poster Contest. Some of the posters shown are winners and other entries from the 1989 contest, and some are entries in this year's contest.

Crackling campfires or homey fires in a fireplace are warm and friendly. But other fires can be devastating — and deadly.

According to information from the Insurance Information Institute, every 45 seconds, fire breaks out in a home or apartment somewhere in this country; every year about 20,000 people are injured — and about 5,000 are killed — by residential fires.

This week, Oct. 7-13, has been named National Fire Prevention Week in order to educate citizens about fire hazards in the home and ways to prevent home fires from beginning in the first place. In Midland, Mayor Carroll Thomas also has proclaimed the week to be Fire Prevention Week. The week "commemorates the Great Chicago Fire of 1871, in which 250 persons were killed, 100,000 were left homeless, and more than 17,400 buildings were destroyed..." according to the mayor's proclamation.

According to information from the Midland Fire Marshal's office and the National Fire Protection Association, every 97 minutes fire kills someone; every 19 minutes fire causes injuries; a fire is reported every 15 seconds; and every second, fire causes $274 in property loss. NFPA information lists smoking materials as the number one cause of home fire fatalities in the United States; cooking equipment is listed as the number one cause of home fire injuries; and heating equipment rates as the number one cause of home fires.

Many of the deaths and injuries associated with residential fires could be prevented if the homes had working smoke alarms, according to the International Association of Fire Chiefs, the American Burn Association and the Everready Battery Company, co-sponsors of the annual "Change Your Clock, Change Your Battery" program. The program suggests the "fall back" to standard time — this year Oct. 28 — is an excellent to time to not only change clocks from daylight savings time, but to replace old or missing batteries in home smoke alarms and flashlights.

FIRE OFFICIALS say that a working smoke alarm may double an individual's chance of surviving a fire by sounding an early warning and providing time to escape.

Fire Marshal Jerry Petree of Midland agreed, saying that while fire deaths total about 5,000 annually, just a few years ago the yearly total was closer to 10,000 to 12,000. "Smoke detectors prevented a lot of deaths," he said. "The National Fire Protection Association attributed the decrease in fire deaths to smoke detectors in the home and better fire prevention. The combination saves 5,000 to 6,000 lives a year."

The Midland Fire Department has such faith in smoke alarms that four or five years ago, Petree said, the fire department, "through a community development fund grant, purchased 3,000 smoke detectors and gave them away (to Midland residents). We even installed them in houses for people — that's how much we believe in them.

"Smoke detectors have one purpose," said Petree, "to wake people up in a fire so that they can get out." But the other important aspect of a family fire protection program is to "have an escape plan. We teach that smoke detectors and fire planning are essential elements."

The fire department recommends that, in a fire escape plan, each room should have "two ways out, and you have a place to meet once you are out — and don't go back in to a burning house once you are

Winners announced

For about the past 20 years, the Midland Fire Department and the Independent Insurance Agents of Midland have sponsored a Midland Fire Prevention Week poster contest for Midland's school children. The contest is judged in five grade-level divisions: special education; kindergarten through second grade; third through fifth grades; sixth through eighth grades; and ninth through 12th grades.

First, second and third prizes are awarded for each of the divisions. This year the prizes are $50 government bond and a trophy for first place winners; $15 cash and ribbon for second place; and $10 and ribbon for third place.

This year there were no entries in the special education division. Winners from the other divisions are:

Kindergarten-second grade:
1. Billie Long, second grader from Lamar Elementary School
2. Niki Hall, second grader from Rusk Elementary School
3. Kelly Dumas, second grader from Quanah Parker Elementary School

Third-fifth grades:
1. Angela Thomas, fifth grader from Scharbauer Elementary School
2. Meagan Gravelle, fourth grader from Burnet Elementary School
3. Luke Hardaway, fifth grader from Fannin Elementary School

Sixth-eighth grades:
1. Molly Cowell, seventh grader from Goddard Junior High School
2. Raymon Villarreal, eighth grader from Alamo Junior High School
3. Dusty Stafford, eighth grader from Goddard Junior High School

Ninth-12th grades:
1. Chris Hall, ninth grader from Midland Freshman High School
2. Lisa May, ninth grader from Midland Freshman High School
3. Chris Voss, 10th grader from Midland High School.

Some of the posters entered in the contest will be on display this week at Dellwood Mall.

WEEK: Fire officials suggest safety tips out," he said.

Other fire safety tips from the Texas State Board of Insurance, State Fire Marshal's Office, and from the International Association of Fire Chiefs, the American Burn Association and the Everready Battery Company, include:

■ Test smoke alarms each month to make sure batteries are still working.

■ Install smoke alarms in each level of the home, at locations such as near the kitchen, stairwells and in hallways near bedrooms.

■ Keep working flashlights at different locations around the house, such as in the kitchen, family room and near beds.

■ Keep fire extinguishers in the home, especially in the kitchen.

■ Keep emergency numbers by the telephone.

■ Reduce the risk of scalds by setting water heater at 130 degrees or lower.

■ Teach children not to play with matches or other sources of fire.

■ When cooking, turn pot handles inward out of children's reach, and don't leave the stove unattended.

■ When cooking, don't disconnect smoke alarms. Instead, open windows or use a fan.

■ Keep curtains away from the stove.

■ IN CASE of home fire, map out a family escape plan with two escape routes from each room. Review and practice the escape plan.

■ Designate a meeting place outside the home.

■ To slow the spread of fire, smoke and heat, sleep with bedroom doors closed.

■ In a fire, touch the door before opening it. If the door is hot use an alternate exit or the window. If the door is cool open it a crack and check for smoke. If your path is clear, keep low to the ground to minimize smoke inhalation — air near the floor will have more oxygen and be easier to breathe.

■ If clothes catch fire, stop, drop and roll. Do not run.

■ If caught on an upper floor in a residential fire, do not jump. Hang a sheet or pillow case out the window so firefighters will know where you are, close the window and wait.

■ During a fire, do not hide in closets or under beds.

■ Keep lighters and matches away from small children.

■ Never use gasoline or other flammable liquids to clean the home, or to start or freshen a fire for heating or cooking.

■ Make sure portable gas and oil heaters, and fireplaces, are properly ventilated.

■ Never smoke in bed.

■ Before going to bed, make sure all cigarettes, cigars and other smoking materials are out, and check upholstered furniture to be sure smoking materials are not lodged there.

■ Be sure all heating and cooking appliances are properly installed and used according to directions.

■ ROUTINELY CHECK electrical cords for wear. Never puncture them with tacks, nails or other sharp objects. Never use electrical cords that look frayed, cracked, pinched, punctured or damaged in any way. Worn or damaged electrical cords should be disposed of immediately.

■ Use only the correct size of fuses in fuses boxes.

■ Keep the home and garage cleared of combustibles such as papers, old furniture, clothes, cartons and oil-soaked rags.

■ Store flammable liquids, such as gasoline, in closed containers away from heat, sparks or other flames, and away from children.

er store flammable liquids in glass jugs, old bleach bottles or makeshift containers.

■ Keep paint stored in closed metal containers and discard paint-laden brushes.

■ Keep furnaces, stoves and stove pipes away from combustible walls and ceilings.

■ Have heating equipment checked each year by a qualified service person.

MANY OF THE home fires are electrical. In fact, the Insurance Information Institute claims that each day more than 450 residential electrical fires start. The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission says these fires are the cause of 1,100 deaths, 5,600 injuries and $1.1 billion in property damage annually.

The I.I.I. suggests the following electrical safety tips for dwellings:

■ Don't bury electrical cords under rugs or carpets, or behind curtains.

■ Only use extension cords on a temporary basis. Have new outlets installed if you need them.

■ Inspect wall outlets. If cover plates are warm or lights are flickering, it could mean an unsafe wiring condition. Call an electrician.

■ Don't overload outlets with multiple appliances or lights.

■ Make sure light bulbs are the correct wattage for the fixture.

■ Check electric blankets for worn spots and cracks in wiring, plugs and connectors.

■ Immediately stop using any appliances that give you even the slightest shock (except from static electricity). Take it to an electrical repair shop to be inspected.

■ Don't enclose televisions or stereo equipment in cabinets without proper openings. Blocking air flow can cause overheating.

■ Inspect fuses or circuit-breaker boxes — wrong fuses can be a fire hazard. Have all boxes and wiring checked by an electrician.

Book guides older women to college

NEW YORK (AP) — Wives and mothers who return to school and worry about how they and their families will cope may find Anne Bianchi's book comforting.

"Smart Choices: A Woman's Guide to Returning to School," recently published by Peterson's, offers advice from Bianchi, a New York psychologist, and first-hand accounts from women who have been there.

The $9.95 paperback tells what financial aid is available and how to apply for it and what services such as child care and career counseling are available.

Not only is financial aid available at Smith College in Northampton, Mass., but there is no deadline for completing a degree. Chatham College in Pittsburgh provides a low-cost dormitory for students with children, as well as nearby child care facilities.

Bench-stepping healthy aerobic exercise

Copley News Service

Bench-stepping, which consists of stepping up and down on a bench or sturdy box, is an excellent and inexpensive aerobic conditioner that requires little space.

Dr. Frederic Goss at the University of Pittsburgh reports that bench-steppers can reach 90 percent of their maximum heart rate during a workout.

A routine consisting of making 20 steps per minute burns about 10 calories per minute, while a more vigorous 30-step workout burns about 16 calories per minute.

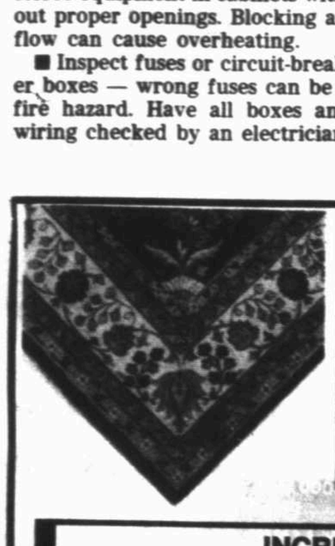

Add 2-pound hand weights, and you increase caloric burn by about 14 percent.

Slang common as tumbleweeds

By Ann Charde
N.Y. Times News Service

Learning to talk like a cowboy will come easily for anyone browsing through Edgar "Frosty" Potter's paperback, "Cowboy Slang."

Phrases like:

"When the Lord poured in his brains, someone musta jaggled his arm."

"All duded up like a bob-wire drummer."

"Hot 'nough to sunburn a horned toad."

Then there's the colorful description of a drunk, who "couldn't hit the ground with his hat in three tries."

Potter, who lives in Payson, Ariz., comes by his collection of slang firsthand, being born in 1895 on a cattle ranch in North Dakota, the Diamond N Ranch, which was located across the Cannonball River from the Sioux Indian Reservation.

Afterward, he spent 35 years in the Bitteroot Valley in western Montana. Potter credits the cowboy's colorful language as being "common as tumbleweeds" in those days. His own talk is still ladled with it.

Phrases like "as pleased as a little dog with two tails" and "like trying to tie a bobcat with a piece of string" cover the pages.

Along with these phrases Potter includes a dictionary of horse terms, gear and such. The list explains terms such as broom tail, go short, martingale and remuda.

DEAR ABBY

High-caliber secretary isn't suited for low-budget boss

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Jo in Denver," the efficient, mature secretary who said the present-day office manager wants "a 19-year-old with good buns" missed the mark.

Van Buren

Besides ignoring the fact that many bosses these days are women, she also overlooked the fact that many companies these days are downsizing, streamlining, paying off leveraged debt. The sad truth is that many bosses would love to have a woman of her caliber, but they can't afford to pay her what she's worth, so they settle for an inexperienced 19-year-old. I know. My husband hired one. His secretary's name is "Arthur." He's Chinese and loves rock music. As far as I know, he doesn't have "great buns," but he doesn't cost $30,000 a year, either. — WITHHOLD MY NAME IN DALLAS

DEAR WITHHOLD: Here's a letter from an office manager who prefers an inexperienced 19-year-old for another reason:

DEAR ABBY: I'll take a young, inexperienced secretary any day over the "mature woman with years of experience." Why? Because I will not have to hear, "That's not the way we did it at Mahoney, Valenti, Schwartz and Schlockenberg." — NO NAME, NO LOCATION, PLEASE

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't believe your saying that while good looks and youth never hurt anybody's chances in the job market, they will never be valued over competence! Where have you been?

My qualifications were tops, but I happen to be a large woman (5-10 and 188 pounds), and I'm not old — unless you call 43 "old."

First, I was interviewed by the office manager; then she said the boss "wanted to see me briefly." It was brief, all right! He came in, took one look at me, turned around and walked out. (Not even a "hello.") Would you believe the office manager returned and said, "He wanted a more petite person"?

As it turned out, my disappointment didn't last long. My next interview landed me in a position as secretary to a lawyer in one of the most prestigious law firms in Manhattan. — BIG BUT BANKABLE

DEAR ABBY: I would like to respond to Jo in Denver on Appalled in Chicago.

If you think 19-year-olds are only hired so the boss can get excited your (sic) wrong.

I am a very pretty 19-year-old secretary, but I am also very knowledgeable on secretaial (sic) skills, not only can I type, spell, add, make coffee, water plants, and run errands, I have a good attitude towards people that is how I qualified for my job. — KNOWLEDGEABLE IN PHOENIX

DEAR READERS: "Sic" is Latin for "thus" and amounts to "that is exactly the way the writer wrote it."

DEAR ABBY: We both lost our spouses — he in August of '89, and I in May of '89. We plan to marry this December.

Now the question: Should we ask our children, who are grown and married, to attend the ceremony? My husband-to-be says he is not sure his children could handle it, but if he invited them, they may feel obligated to attend.

What should we do? — "US"

DEAR "US": If there is the slightest doubt about how any of your children will handle it, please consider just the two of you quietly tying the knot alone.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Maine provides elegant getaways

State's resorts are 'home away from home' for nation's first families

By Andrew Nelson
Copley News Service

When ABC's "Nightline" set out to interview former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger about the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, they did not send their cameras to Georgetown or Manhattan's Upper East Side. Instead, Ted Koppel's cameras tracked him down on Mount Desert Island, a rock-bound island off Maine's rock-bound coast.

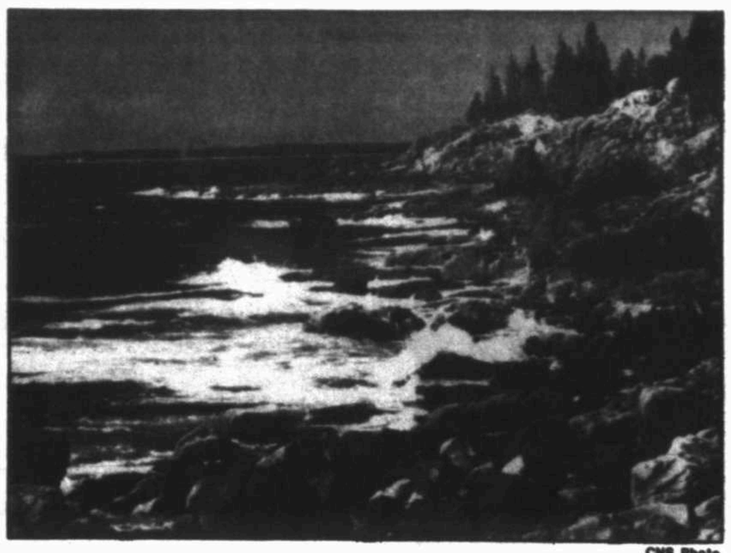

Every summer, Mount Desert (pronounced like dessert) becomes a retreat for many of America's first families. Farther north than President George Bush's famed spread at Kennebunkport, and an hour's drive from Bangor, Bar Harbor and the other resort villages of Maine, Mount Desert is a WASP nest of "old money" and "old families": Rockefellers, Fords, Vanderbilts and Astors to name a few of those who have made this a power-money summer resort since before the turn of the century.

Mount Desert was named by Champlain, the great French explorer, who discovered it in 1604, and is one of the largest islands on America's East Coast.

UNTIL THE 1850S, Mount Desert remained a rugged collection of small lumber and fishing villages. But easy access via steamships, spectacular scenery and cool temperatures attracted the Victorian well-to-do sweating out Boston and New York summers. Ensconced on the island, they built grandiose and extravagant "cottages." And by century's turn, Bar Harbor could challenge Newport to the claim of being the goldest coast in the East.

Today, most of the palatial mansions are gone — victims of the Great Fire of 1947 that sent half the island up in smoke. The blaze destroyed 67 of the great estates on "Millionaires' Row," as well as numerous other structures. The fire and the progressive income tax put an end to much of the island's elitism.

The automobile, plus the ever-increasing popularity of the island's scenery brought a middle-class tourist boom. The old families retreated from Bar Harbor to other parts of the island.

Maine's Acadia National Park preserves natural beauty amid a growing resort population.

"Too crowded for them," says one longtime summer resident.

Wealthy Yankees now rusticate in nearby Somesville and Seal Harbor. Their homes can be seen along Sargent Drive — a spectacular road that parallels Somes Sound (the only true fiord in America) and is studded with clapboard mansions and Adirondack-style lodges.

But thanks to the foresight of many of the old guard, much of the island's natural beauty has been preserved as Acadia National Park. Alarmed by Bar Harbor's rapid growth and the explosion of summer visitors, George Dorr, the Rockefellers and others contributed land and money to establish the park in 1919.

TODAY, ACADIA'S 35,000 acres are accessible to all. The easiest way to tour the park is to drive on the 20-mile Park Loop Road — a one-way road through the park with a turnoff for Cadillac Mountain, the highest point on America's Atlantic Coast. In a romantic gesture, the Park Service opens the Cadillac road an hour before sunrise (locals like to say the peak is the first place the sun greets the U.S.A.), and it stays open until midnight, which, on clear nights, offers a star-studded sky.

There are plenty of activities. Summer offers naturalist walks, swimming, hiking and lectures on the natural and social history of the region. In the winter, cross-country skiing, snowmobiling, ice fishing and hiking are permitted.

The Park Service maintains two campgrounds in Acadia. Thanks to monumental crowds in warm weather, visitors are strongly encouraged to write or phone for campground reservations up to eight weeks in advance, of their arrival. There also are plenty of private campgrounds.

For reservations and other park inquiries, write to the Superintendent, Acadia National Park, Bar Harbor, Maine 04609, or call (207) 288-3338.

To get a taste of what life was like in the island's heyday, visit the Jordan Pond House, (207) 276-3316, located in Acadia near the park's Seal Harbor entrance. A restaurant even in the early 1870s, the Jordan Pond House continues its tradition with an enticing lunch and dinner menu. But the highlight of any visit is still tea on the great lawn offering expansive views of the "Bubbles," two rounded mountaintops. Popovers, with jam and butter, are the house specialties.

TO WORK OFF the calories, the area around Jordan Pond is laced with 47 miles of carriage roads. Built between 1915 and 1933 by John D. Rockefeller Jr., the gravel paths offer glorious views for hikers, horseback riders and bicyclists, whose numbers, thanks to the recent craze in mountain biking, can be annoying.

For those who don't want to sweat it, horse-drawn carriage drives from Wildwood Stables, (207) 276-3622, offer an easy way to experience the winding trails. Reservations are advised.

After your trek, you can cool off at Seal Beach, a small beach on the Atlantic near the park's entrance of the same name. The water temperature is invigorating to say the least. For those who prefer warmer water to splash in, try Echo Lake, a freshwater lake on the mountain side of the island.

The choice of lodging on Mount Desert, especially in Bar Harbor, is abundant. The towns are chockablock with rooms to suit all price ranges. Still the best places to stay are the dozens of old inns and bed-and-breakfasts that seem to flourish at every pretty intersection. Needless to say, rates are higher during the May-to-October season. As always, reservations are strongly recommended.

A FEW picturesque suggestions:

■ Bar Harbor Inn, (207) 288-3351, overlooks Frenchman's Bay in town. A former private club, it retains its elegant and formal atmosphere in its attempts to duplicate the old resort feel.

■ Thornhedge Inn, (207) 288-5398, is another grand old house. Once owned by a Harvard Medical School dean, the inn retains many of its original Victorian furnishings.

■ The Claremont, (207) 244-5036, is the spot in the town of Southwest Harbor. It is also the site of an annual August croquet classic — well worth watching for the competitive stake are well-dressed dandies who attend the games.

For more information on where to stay and what to do, write the Bar Harbor Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 158, Bar Harbor, Maine 04609, or call (207) 288-5103.

Cassettes brief travelers on road

By Jayne Clark
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — In his best-selling chronicle of America's back roads, "Blue Highways," author William Least Heat Moon writes no area is boring in itself. Boredom merely represents our lack of understanding of what is around us.

The sentiment struck a nerve in Robert Magee, a retired CIA personnel director from Maryland. A veteran of numerous trips up and down Interstate 95, he had suffered the monotony of the so-called dreadful drive.

Inspired by Moon's words, Magee hit on a plan to make the interstate a little less dreadful.

The result is his series of "Ride With Me" cassettes, which contain a narrative of history, geography and geology, along with bits of local color and culture and a smattering of turnpike trivia. The 90-minute tapes are keyed to mile markers on specific stetches of highway, so that motorists can synchronize them with their location.

Of the 12 tapes in the series, nine cover the states along I-95 from Boston, Mass., to Orlando, Fla. Other tapes are devoted to Delaware, Williamsburg, Va., and the stretch from Houston to San Antonio. Magee plans to expand the series to include some Western states, including Interstate 5 between Los Angeles and Seattle, but has not yet embarked on the project.

The tapes are recorded in 15- to 20-minute segments and include brief examples of regional music, interviews with local people and roadside trivia. Magee uses the turnpike as a springboard from which to launch into related topics — some weighty, some trivial.

Magee's criteria for including a particular tidbit is, simply, is it interesting? He begins collecting information from history and other books then goes into the region to interview the people who live there.

The tapes cost $9.95 each and can be ordered by calling (800) 752-3195. Or write: Ride With Me, P.O. Box 1324, Bethesda, Md. 20817.

Copley News Service

Ski season is just around the corner; slopes at Sun Valley, Idaho, and Taos, N.M., open on Nov. 22.

Sun Valley will celebrate winter '90-'91 with five special ski weeks. "Prime Time Special," Jan 5-12, 1991, is aimed at skiers over 60 and includes a Big Band dinner dance. "Singles Week" is scheduled for Jan. 12-19, 1991. A community-wide winter carnival is slated for Jan. 19-26, 1991; "Western Ski Club Week" follows on Jan. 26-Feb. 2, 1991.

All packages include seven nights' lodging and lift tickets; prices start at $326 per person.

Meanwhile, Taos is promoting "real skiing for real skiers." That means a strictly skiing experience without video arcades and chi-chi boutiques. The Ernie Blake Ski School offers a Ski-BETTER-Week, an all-inclusive program of lifts, lodging and meals. The seven-night program offers fast-paced instruction for schussers of all levels. Early season prices start at $454 per person.

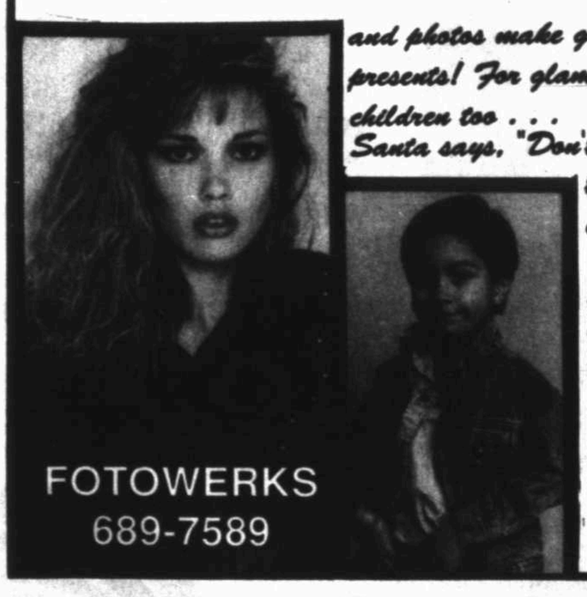

For more information contact Sun Valley Company, Sun Valley, Idaho 83353; (208) 622-4111. Taos Ski Valley Inc., Taos Ski Valley, N.M. 87525; (505) 776-2291.

These Midlanders represent all facets of our community. They are volunteers who are responsible for raising the money that funds our United Way. They spend countless hours in their respective divisions, planning team strategy. And when they hit the playing field during our annual campaign, they're out to win for the 35,000 Midlanders who will benefit from services provided by our 17 United Way Agencies this year.

These volunteers come from diverse backgrounds with varying skills, but they share a common goal -- a commitment to seeing that Midlanders take care of our own. And they give of their time to help make it happen.

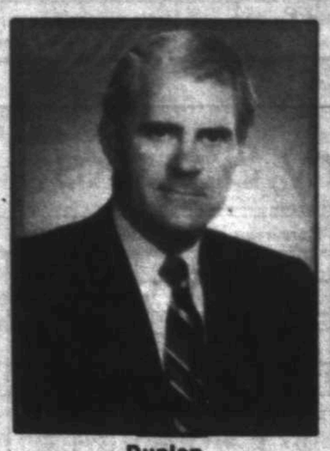

So if you see one of them walk through your door, welcome them in and hear what they have to say. Their enthusiasm could change the way you think about your community.

SUNDAY BUSINESS DIGEST

Dunlap

Chamber meets

Payzone of the Permian Basin is the subject of the Midland Chamber of Commerce's 1990 Annual Meeting and Luncheon.

The keynote speaker for the October 11th meeting is Texaco's president, James L. Dunlap. The meeting will begin at 11:30 a.m. in the main bay of Midland Center, located at 105 N. Main in downtown Midland.

A short business meeting will precede Dunlap's remarks and announcement of the Chamber's Volunteer of the Year will also be made.

Tickets for the Chamber's Annual Meeting Luncheon are $12 or $88 for reserved tables seating eight persons. For reservations, contact the Chamber at 109 North Main or call 915-683-3381.

Car sales up

Midland car dealers reported a 10.2 percent increase in car and truck sales in their September 1990 month end sales recap.

The dealerships reported that 704 vehicles were sold in September on 1990 while only 639 vehicles sold in September of 1989.

Luskey wins

The Dallas Menswear Mart held its third annual Western Image Awards at Cowboy's Western club in Dallas.

More than 800 retailers, manufacturer's representatives and their management gathered to salute individuals and companies who have heightened the spirit and tradition of America's Western heritage.

This year's awards honored Luskey's Western Store as retailer-of-the-year and Lucchese as manufacturer-of-the-year. MCA recording artist Steve Wariner was honored as the 1990 Celebrity Award recipient for his focused approach to country music and sense of western influenced style both on and off stage.

Luskey's, founded in Fort Worth in 1919, takes the 1990 honor after three consecutive nominations.

Just for laughs

Flying may be neither cheap nor especially friendly these days. But on some planes, at least the smile is back.

Three years after USAir acquired Pacific Southwest Airlines and wiped the smile off the noses of PSA planes, the image is back on the USAir Express fleet of turbo-propeller planes.

USAir Express, owned by Phoenix-based StatesWest Airlines, has a marketing agreement with USAir to link its San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego hubs with smaller cities in California, Arizona and Nevada.

MOHRE continues seeking retirees

■ The Midland/Odessa Health and Retirement Endeavor is starting a new year of working to attract retirees to the area, and has a new target group — the Confederate Air Force.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

With new funding from the cities and chambers of Midland and Odessa, MOHRE kicks off a new fiscal year and is hard at work attracting retirees to the Permian Basin.

Mary Larsson, executive director of the Midland/Odessa Health and Retirement Endeavor, reports that the group has tracked 213 retiree households into the Midland-Odessa area during the past fiscal year. "The economic impact of these new retiree households is $6,390,000 for our economy during the past year." That figure is based on a $30,000 per household annual income.

The Odessa City Council has appropriated $18,000 to MOHRE, and the Midland City Council has tentatively agreed to give the same amount. The group's total budget is $115,000 for 1990-91. The monies from the cities will go for administrative costs.

Additional funding is expected from a letter fund-raising campaign targeted at members of the Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce.

Larsson adds that MOHRE has seen a 21 percent increase in retiree households locating to Midland-Odessa for the past 18 months as opposed to the prior 18 months. Since it began tracking retiree households to the area, MOHRE has seen a total of 712 households arrive, bringing an economic impact of $21.36 million dollars.

Charles Spence, who just began his term as president of MOHRE, states that MOHRE "is one of the most successful programs of the two cities working together."

He credits the area's health facilities, climate and housing availability for the success of MOHRE's efforts.

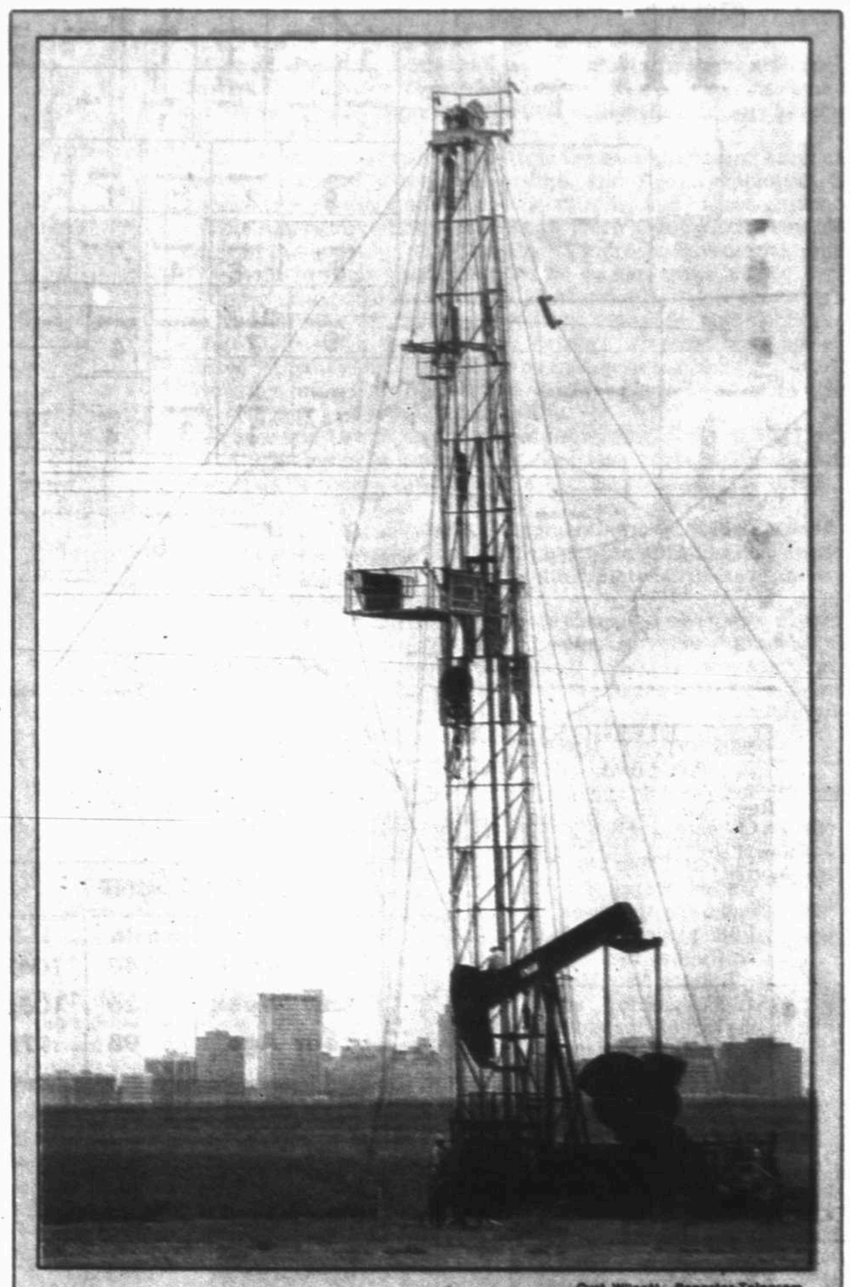

Observing that MOHRE's continuing role is to try to sell Midland and Odessa as a good place to retire, Spence noted that the retiree market has been one of the most undersold opportunities of economic development. "They bring dollars into the community and help expand our economic base. We can make an immediate difference in our economy by attracting retirees."

Statistics show the 55 and over age bracket controsl 70 percent of household finances in the country, money spent for food, housing, health care, automobiles and discretionary spending.

One of MOHRE's primary marketing strategies is local advertising, encouraging Midland-Odessa residents to bring retirement-age relatives such as parents to the area. Larsson is currently designing a local campaign for that purpose, and she said the campaign should go before the marketing committee and then the general board for approval before hitting local newspapers, television and radio stations and billboards.

National advertising should appear after the first of the year, she said, adding that she is considering advertising in Golden Years, The Rotarian or Modern Maturity magazines.

A workover rig east of Midland, tax incentives, if they survive, could bring more activity to the industry.

Oil tax incentives will move industry

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The budget compromise package has gone down in flames and what emerges next is anyone's guess.

However, if incentives for the oil industry contained in the package survive, most in the industry agree that they will provide a double whammy for getting the oil industry moving again.

"If all of the incentives survive," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, "they could attract outside investors back into the industry." Spannaus noted that any tax incentives for the oil industry would need to be sufficient to put oil on a level playing field with other investments. "If you can make 10 percent on a CD without any risk, you would be dumb to risk in a oil well to make 10 percent without a good tax incentive."

He noted that the incentives provided in proposed budget contained most of what the oil industry had been seeking, including help on the Alternative Minimum Tax.

"These tax incentives could work to really stimulate activity in the oilpatch," said Spannaus.

NARO meeting deals with royalty-operator relations

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Tension between royalty owners and operators has always been a problem in the oilpatch but Conoco is looking to minimize that tension.

At the annual meeting of the National Association of Royalty Owners in Fort Worth this week Conoco became the first ever oil company to host a booth at the the three-day meeting.

The booth was hosted in connection with Conoco's recently organized Business Associates Unit which provides a single source of contract for the 100,000-plus royalty, overriding royalty and working interest owners doing business with Conoco.

Each year the Unit responds to more than 20,000 calls, and contention goers at the NARO meeting were provided a direct line, at the booth, to the business unit.

It is a concept that has earned the oil company industry recognition. In August, Secretary of Interior Manuel Lujan presented Conoco with his department's Payor/Reporter Award for payment of $91 million in federal royalties and the reporting of 388,000 lines of data with a margin of error of about 2 percent.

The company also won NARO's award for Outstanding Industry-Interest Owner Relations.

In addition to the Conoco booth the National Association of Royalty Owners meeting which concluded Saturday featured a number of seminars aimed at the royalty owner.

Among the topics covered were horizontal drilling and leases; oil and gas tax laws, take or pay agreements, lease negotiations, and mineral management.

NARO is composed of 5,000 individual members and reprsents an additional 38,500 mineral owners that have joined regional and county organizations affiliated with NARO.

New well logging unit makes debut

■ A new well logging unit, five times faster and capable of presenting an expanded reservoir image, has been introduced into the Permian Basin.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Schlumberger has introduced the next generation of logging units for the Permian Basin.

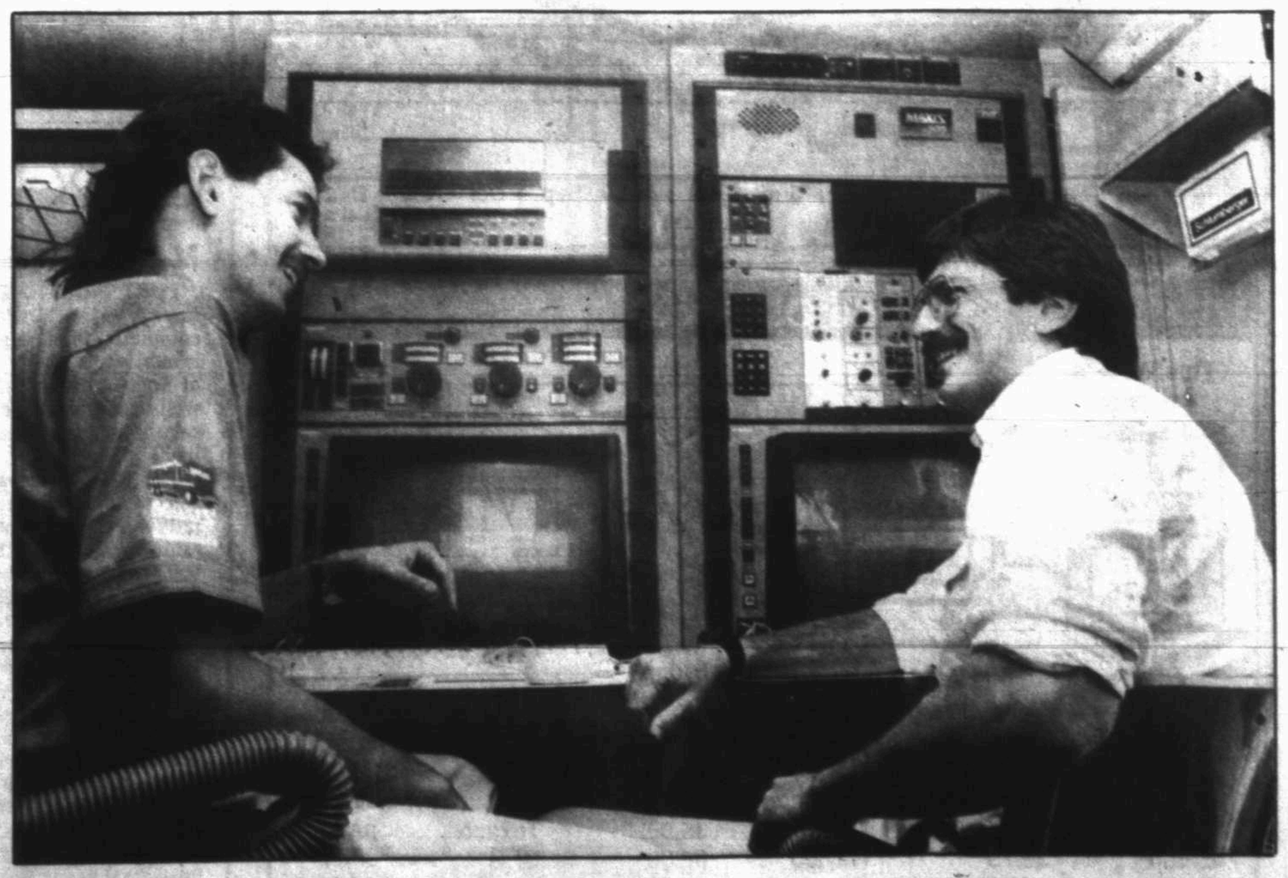

The company introduced its Maxis unit Thursday at a coming out party at Claydesta Plaza. The unit has been 10 years in development and only 10 are available throughout the U.S., but the logging company plans to eventually replace all the logging units in the Schlumberger fleet with the Maxis 500.

"This unit is out here for the Oil Show, and will remain in the Basin after the Show," said sales engineer Ray Hedman. "In six to seven years the Maxis 500 will comprise the entire fleet."

At a cost of $1 million-plus (without tools), the wireline trucks are packed with computer power that gives it five times more speed than any present system. Downhole data can be sent to the surface at rates of 500 kilobits per second. And when it comes to processing power, special software allows for the computing of 9,000,000 instructions per second.

Hedman says the units are capable of Schlumberger operator Lance Smith, left, with Philip Lindauer discuss the merits of the new Maxis 500 logging unit, at the twin color monitors. The unit, in town for the Oil Show, is Schlumberger's next generation of logging units, and will replace the present units in the company's fleet.

Oryx pushing horizontal drilling

By Jack Z. Smith

FORT WORTH, Texas — Oryx Energy Co. of Dallas says it has completed 18 more successful horizontal wells in the Pearsall Field of South Texas, with the average well testing at more than 700 barrels of crude oil production per day.

The wells tested at a combined rate of 13,100 barrels of oil and 7 million cubic feet of gas per day, said Oryx, which has been the leader in horizontal drilling in the Austin Chalk geological formation of South and Central Texas.

Fifty-five horizontal wells in which Oryx has an average 80-percent interest now are producing 22,000 barrels of oil and 11 million cubic feet of natural gas per day, accounting for about one-fifth of Oryx's total U.S. oil and gas production, the company said Thursday.

Oryx plans to have drilled 75 horizontal wells by year's end in the Austin Chalk and eventually may drill more than 200 there, said Jim McCormick, the company's president and chief operating officer.

Oryx presently is realizing revenues of approximately $625,000 every 24 hours from its 80-percent interest in the 55 producing wells. On an annual basis, that translates to about $230 million in revenues. The average well is producing about 400 barrels of oil per day.

Oryx is "absolutely delighted" with its horizontal drilling program, which has been the prime factor stimulating investor interest in the company, McCormick said.

Oryx common stock, traded on the New York Stock Exchange, closed Thursday at $45.875 a share, down 12.5 cents. The stock was trading below $30 a share before Oryx's horizontal drilling program began attracting widespread attention from the news media and stock analysts.

Oryx eventually could be producing up to 45,000 barrels a day from the Austin Chalk if it drills 200 or more wells there, McCormick said. Production could peak in about two years once all the wells are drilled, he said.

"Right now we've identified at least 200 locations," he said.

A horizontal well typically costs about $1.1 million to drill, Oryx said.

By December, Oryx's Pearsall Field oil production probably will have risen to about 24,500 barrels per day, surpassing the Midway-Sunset Field in California as the company's largest domestic producing area, McCormick said.

The company also is a major producer in the Ninian Field of the North Sea, where it acquired properties last year from British Petroleum. Oryx's share of production in the Ninian Field currently totals more than 26,000 barrels a day.

Oryx has received widespread attention for its high-profile role in horizontal drilling, the hottest technology now sweeping the oil and gas industry.

A horizontal well is first drilled vertically and then, with the help of special directional drilling equipment, the wellbore is turned horizontally to allow it to tap into a larger number of oil-and gas-bearing fractures that run roughly perpendicular to the ground surface.

Japan's taste in U.S. properties changes

By E. Scott Reckard

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Japanese purchases of U.S. "trophies" like Rockefeller Center and Columbia Pictures had slacked off until a Tokyo tycoon bought Pebble Beach Co., with its exquisite golf courses and famous cypress tree.

But don't be deceived by fewer high-profile deals. The Japanese are still hungry for American investment, despite pressure from their government to tone down purchases and this year's nearly 40 percent drop in the value of stocks in Japan.

In fact, the Japanese are making more U.S. investments than ever, and more sophisticated ones, as they become confident enough to look past blue-chip targets.

"They're becoming insiders in the United States," said Jack Barthell, a managing partner of the Los Angeles accounting firm Kenneth Leventhal & Co., which tracks Japanese investment.

Nowhere is that more apparent than in real estate, Leventhal's specialty. Having moved from office buildings to hotels to resorts and golf courses, the Japanese are now developing property, often in partnership with American companies, here and abroad, Barthell said.

While the total value of Japanese real estate investment fell 11 percent from 1988 to 1989, to $14.8 billion, "the volume of transactions was way up," Barthell said.

The Japanese also are moving from primary investment areas, such as Honolulu, Los Angeles, San Francisco and New York, to other metropolitan areas and the suburbs.

A Leventhal study said four-fifths of Japan's total U.S. investment was in the primary areas in 1985; by last year, the figure was about one-third.

"We're finding the very distinct move from the archetypical downtown trophy office tower to developing single-family residential in the suburbs, or even apartments," Barthell said.

Another new target zone is Europe, where Japanese real estate investment last year was twice the level of 1988 and nearly 4½ times that of 1987, according to Clark Whitehill, a British accounting firm.

A prominent example of the trends is Shuwa Investments Corp., which owns $2.7 billion in American real estate. Shuwa led the charge into office towers, buying the ITT Corp. headquarters in New York, the U.S. News and World Report building in Washington, the Arco Plaza in Los Angeles and the Quaker Tower in Chicago.

Shuwa made different kinds of headlines during the past year: announcing plans to build luxury apartments in Los Angeles; forming a $154 million partnership with Los Angeles-based Tishman West Cos. in a London office building.

Many observers say the Japanese were surprised last year by the harshness of U.S. reaction to high-profile deals. Those included Mitsubishi Estate Co.'s $846 million purchase of a controlling stake in New York's Rockefeller Center, and Sony Corp.'s $3.4 billion purchase of Columbia Pictures Entertainment Inc.

Despite the negative publicity, the Japanese still appear ready to buy U.S. landmarks if the circumstances are right.

Those acquainted with this month's deal for Pebble Beach, where a round of golf can cost $175 and the scenic 17-Mile Drive winds past the often-photographed "lone cypress," say competition was intense between two final bidders, both Japanese.

Businessman Minoru Isutani won, buying the property for more than $800 million from a partnership including Beverly Hills billionaire Marvin Davis.

But Isutani owns an empire of golf clubs and sporting goods companies in Japan and abroad and will be able to exploit Pebble Beach with cross-memberships and marketing tie-ins of all sorts. So even the top-dollar price for Pebble Beach is not interpreted as a sign of a new rush for megadeals.

"The situations where a guy walked around Manhattan or Waikiki with a wad of money in his pocket and bought the first overpriced property are gone," said Daniel Schwartz, managing director at Ulmer Brothers Inc., a New York investment bank specializing in deals involving the Japanese.

Research at Ulmer Brothers shows the trend extends beyond real estate to investing in and buying out U.S. businesses. In the first half of 1990, the company counted 103 such deals. That compared with 74 in the first half of 1989 and 47 in the same period of 1988.

At the same time, the average deal size fell from $162 million in 1988 to $51 million this year. That reflects that the Japanese increasingly are taking minority stakes in American businesses, often to provide new capital, Schwartz said.

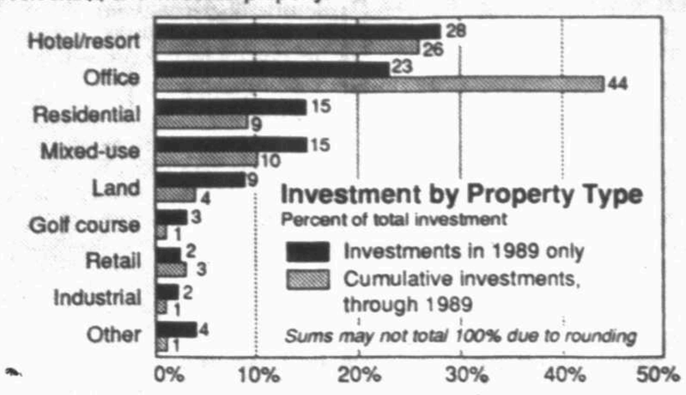

Japanese investments in Midwest steel, automotive and other manufacturing industries are being praised by such groups as the Indiana Chamber of Commerce for upgrading the economy of what once was the "Rust Belt."

Even in Hawaii, where Japanese investments totaling $7.7 billion have many residents worried that the character of their small state will be ruined, some deals are welcomed.

Still, the big Japanese deals have drawn more protests than praise.

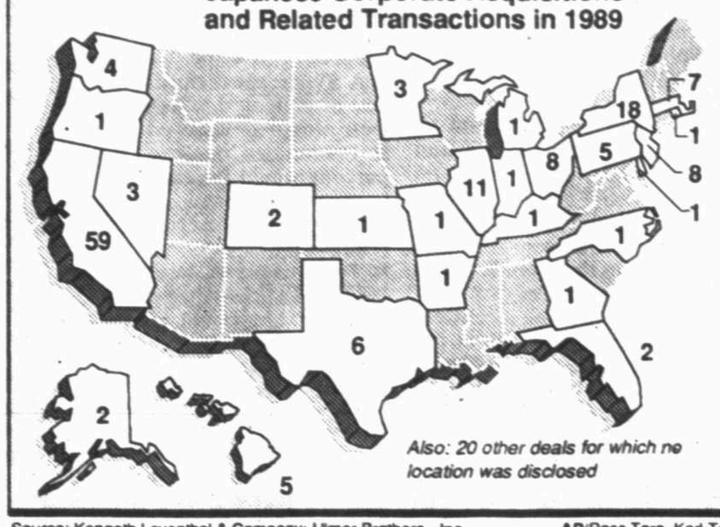

Japanese Investments Diversify

Japan's spending pattern has changed. In a break from previous years, the Japanese in 1989 spent less on office property and more on hotels, residential, and industrial property.

The Japanese are also moving from primary areas like San Francisco, Honolulu and New York, to other metro areas and the suburbs.

Toyota advertises its concern for U.S.

N.Y. Times News Service

In a move clearly calculated to counteract the recent spate of anti-Japanese advertising, Toyota Motor Corporate Services of North America Inc. has begun an extensive campaign intended to convince Americans that Toyota cares about their country.

One ad shows the basketball team from North High, a school in Torrance, Calif., that Toyota has adopted. The ad explains some of the big and, just as important, the little things the company has done for the school.

The car maker not only underwrote the basketball team, but it also provided summer school scholarships, and Toyota employees are giving some of the students special tutoring and career guidance.

"The American public doesn't know much about what we've been doing in this country," said Timothy P. Andree, a Toyota spokesman. "We want to show them what we do besides make a good car."

Toyota's campaign comes when American advertisers are stepping up their attacks on Japanese products, especially automobiles.

But Andree said the trend and Toyota's campaign were not connected. "Toyota is becoming more of an American company," he said. "Now that we are a neighbor, we want people to know more about the company and what it believes in."

Andree said Toyota manufactured nearly 250,000 cars in the United States and employed thousands of American workers. Toyota Motor Corporate Services, a subsidiary of the Tokyo-based auto maker, is based in New York.

An official of the Japanese government, who insisted on not being identified, said Monday that Tokyo had been encouraging Japanese companies doing business in the United States to become more involved in their communities.

Some experts on Japan said Toyota's campaign was a wise strategy. "It will probably be effective in helping to correct some of the American public's misperceptions about Japanese companies," said John Wheeler, the vice president of the Japan Society, a private organization in New York devoted to enhancing understanding between the United States and Japan.

Selling to Japanese can mean big profits

By E. Scott Reckard

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Did Marvin Davis sell at the top of the market again, and what's the next target for the cash-heavy billionaire investor?

Can Minoru Isutani, who bought the Pebble Beach golf resorts from Davis for between $800 million and $1 billion, package that famous name to recoup his huge investment?

Davis and Isutani aren't talking publicly about last month's deal for the 5,300-acre Monterey Peninsula property, one of the most famous chunks of land in the world.

It includes the Pebble Beach Golf Links, home to the U.S. Open in 1992 and to the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, now called the AT&T Pro-Am. There are also three other golf courses, two hotels, and a cypress tree so famous the Pebble Beach Co. is seeking a trademark to stop commercial photography of it.

Technically, the new owner is Fort Worth's Ben Hogan Properties, a subsidiary of the golf conglomerate Cosmo World Corp. in Los Angeles, which is controlled by Isutani. And the seller was a Denver-based partnership, Miller, Klutznick, Davis & Gray.

AP Laserphoto

Japanese investment in U.S. properties had slacked until a tycoon bought Pebble Beach Co. and its renowned golf course.

But the deal was struck between Davis, 64, and Isutani, 50, whose Los Angeles offices are nearly within spitting distance in the pricey Century City district.

Davis is the former wildcatter who liquidated his oil holdings just before the industry slumped in the early '80s. He acquired Pebble Beach in 1981 as part of a $720 million purchase of 20th Century Fox. Davis sold Fox to Rupert Murdoch four years later, netting $325 million, but kept Pebble Beach.

Isutani capitalized on Japan's golf mania by building courses and buying Ben Hogan Co., which makes golf clubs and sportswear, in 1981. He's developing one golf club in the San Fernando Valley, is a partner in another golf resort on Hawaii's Kona Coast, and is also developing a golf resort and luxury housing project near Las Vegas.

He has declined to comment on recent news reports in Japan and the United States linking him to the former Nippon Telegraph and Telephone chief who is being tried on bribery charges in Tokyo. He's also generated complaints from Japanese golfers who say he sold so many expensive golf club memberships that they were forced to wait months before being able to schedule games.

Businesswomen elect officers

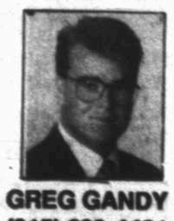

Hines

Angela K. Hines has been elected president of the Petroplex chapter, American Business Women's Association for 1990-91.

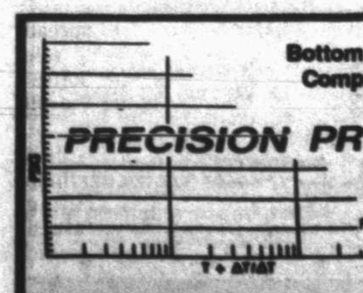

Other officers elected include Mary Pat Devine, vice president; Opal Mattlin, treasurer; and Shirley O'Neal, secretary.

The chapter was founded to provide college scholarships to women, provide leadership for community events and to provide friendship and support to businesswomen. The national organization was founded in 1959.

MOHRE: CAF new target

(From 1G)

With the relocation of the Confederate Air Force to Midland International Airport from Harlingen, MOHRE has gained a new market of potential retirees. "This year we hope to build programs around the CAF," Spence said.

"Our research indicates over 70 percent of CAF members are retirement age," said Larsson, adding that she is planning advertising for the CAF publication, the CAF Dispatch.

In addition, according to Spence, "We will continue to look at areas with the best potential for attracting retirees.

"The great thing about retirees — and there's a misconception that they won't vote for tax increases or bond issues, that all they want to do is sit in their rocking chairs — is that they want to be involved in the community, in cultural activities. They're supportive of the community's infrastructure. You could say they're the pension elite and they bring a lot of dollars to the community," he continued.

MOHRE has 21 board members, divided equally between Midland and Odessa residents. The presidency alternates between Midland and Odessa residents. Jim Butler of Butler & Kirby Co. in Odessa will succeed Spence as president in October 1991. It is a joint effort of the Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce and the Private Industry Council.

TAX: Industry incentives

(From 1G)

If incentives for natural gas survive, Robert Anderson, a natural gas consultant, says it will be very good for the industry.

"The tax compromise would restore incentives for drilling and developing tight sands gas, and that would really get things moving in certain parts of the Permian Basin," said Anderson. He said there extensive tight sands in the Sonora and Ozona area.

"It is evident that the incentives work. One only has to look at the rapid development of coal seam gas, which has been developed with incentives, to know that they work," he noted.

Senator Pete Dominici (R-NM) in a press statement said his state was blessed with an abundance of coalbed methane and tight formation sand and stood to benefit significantly from reinstatement of the incentives.

He said the oil incentives in the package were needed to shore up a national energy policy.

Among the enhanced recovery provisions included in the compromise tax package were the following:

- Section 29 of the tax code would be reinstated to allow tax credits for coal bed gas, tight sand formations, oil shale, biomass and geopressured brine.
- A 10 percent credit for tangible cost of enhanced oil recovery projects would be allowed.
- Percentage depletion of 27½ percent would be allowed for incremental oil produced, limited to pay-back with a reinvestment requirement.
- The incentives would be triggered if oil prices dropped below a $30 floor, but would not be in effect above that floor.

According to Dominici, incentives for stripper wells would include:

- A provision that would increase the net income limitation on percentage depletion to 100 percent and repeal all transfer rules.
- Limiting the amount of percentage depletion to 50 percent of net income from the oil and gas property. Increasing the income limitation to 100 percent would double the amount of percentage depletion that an independent could take on a property.

Dominici notes that the compromise package also contains $7 billion in Alternative Minimum Tax relief for oil and gas taxpayers.

Austin tops in business

Associated Press

Austin is one of the top cities in the country for expanding companies, according to a new ranking by Fortune magazine.

In the Oct. 22 issue, the business publication ranked Austin fifth behind Salt Lake City, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Atlanta, and Sacramento, Calif., in the magazine's "Best Cities for Business."

The primary determinant for the ranking was a plentiful supply of high-quality, low-cost workers for new or expanding companies.

running a new generation of downhole tools now in development and will be able to present an expanded picture of reservoirs that was not possible before.

Schlumberger says the Maxis imaging will assist operators in learning how the the reservoir will produce, which zones should be treated and where to drill the next well. The company claims it can integrate other data to better assess the reservoirs character. This can permit the drilling of fewer wells and better performance than wells drilled on a grid.

"Three Microvax III computers provide the power," says Hedman. "they are work station main frames."

Two large color monitors, each with its on keyboard and mouse, permit the company geologist to work along side the unit operator and perform his own evaluation of the data, saving valuable rig time.

Midlander elected D&D treasurer

Staff Report

A Midlander has been elected Treasurer of the Association of Desk & Derrick Clubs.

Kaye Cassie of Nearburg Producing Co. of Midland was elected treasurer of the 4,500 member organization at its 39th annual convention in Pittsburgh in September.

Carolyn Malone of Dallas was elected president. Lisa McCoy of Jackson, Miss. was elected first vice president and Jan Lewis of Cleveland, Ohio secretary.

The Midland Desk & Derrick Club was also a winner in the program contest, winning first place for Best Non-Industry Program.

The Association is composed of eight regions throughout the U.S.

Desk & Derrick is composed of men and women in allied services in the petroleum industry and has 113 clubs throughout the U.S. and Canada.

New Orleans has been designated as the site for the 1991 convention.

SCOTT BURNS

Congress again triumphs over taxpayer

By Scott Burns

The late Andy Warhol would be proud. The Expanding Plastic Inevitable, government division, has triumphed again.

Burns

Announced as a five year, $500 billion deficit reduction package that was four months in the making, the Budget Summit has proved, once again, that Republicans and Democrats share a common bond: a deep belief that when push comes to shove, THEY have better ways to spend our money than we do.

That's why they are increasing taxes rather than reducing spending. That's also why they have increased taxes in dozens of little pockets rather than simply applying an income tax surcharge. In the next week, as Congress debates passage of the Budget Summit agreement, you and I will read charges and counter-charges of unfair tax burdens.

Some of our heroic representatives will do their best to protect Free Enterprise and Incentives. Others will protest the burden on the Poor and Downtrodden. Each will decry the insensitivity and ignorance of the other side.

In fact, calls to envy and accusations of inequity are a smokescreen. They distract our attention from the fact that our representatives, whatever their party ilk, have once again decided to take and redistribute more of OUR pie because that is what they want to do. Worse, there is a good chance they will expand the deficit rather than decrease it.

How can this be? Look at three alternatives:

GRAMM RUDMAN. This is what we were all facing without the applauded Summit Agreement. According to the Mid Session Review of the Budget released by the Office of Management and Budget in July, federal spending for 1990 was estimated at $1,264 billion while federal spending for 1991 was estimated at $1,312 billion. Note the increase in spending: $48 billion. If there had been no agreement and Gramm Rudman had gone into effect, spending for 1991 would have been cut by a required $105 billion. In other words, federal spending would have been reduced from $1,312 billion to $1,207 billion.

Translation: an actual cash spending reduction of $57 billion compared to 1990 spending.

A SPENDING FREEZE. Using the same OMB figures, an across the board freeze in government spending would have cut spending from the projected $1,312 billion to the 1990 spending level of $1,264 billion. Congress would call that a spending "cut" of $48 billion. Government agencies would call that a spending cut. All those who depend on rising government spending would call it a spending cut.

But the actual cash spending reduction, compared to 1990, would be exactly $0. Nada. They would spend, in 1991, exactly what they spent in 1990.

THE SUMMIT AGREEMENT. Before factoring in the $5.7 billion cost of Desert Shield, the budget agreement claims a deficit reduction of $40.1 billion. The actual reduction, however, is $34.4 billion and that is composed of $18.2 billion in spending cuts and $16.2 billion in new taxes.

Now let's look at those figures again. Federal spending is projected to increase $48 billion in 1991 to $1,312 billion. — Now it is being cut back by $18 billion to $1,294 billion. In other words, our friends in Washington are being forced to give back $18 billion of the $48 billion increase they had planned on. They will still enjoy an INCREASE over 1990 spending of $30 billion.

Think about that. They are going to pay for $30 billion in increased spending with $16 billion in new taxes. If tax revenues from other sources are the same in 1991 as in 1990, the actual result of the Budget Summit will be an INCREASE in the deficit!

Some readers, no doubt, will think this is an unduly harsh interpretation of the Budget Summit.

Young judge ready to decide Milken's fate

By Rick Gladstone

NEW YORK (AP) — She speaks softly, neutralizing adversarial lawyers with grace and charm.

Wood

U.S. District Judge Kimba M. Wood's gentility may belie the stiff discipline of her federal courtroom, but acquaintances know better.

Wood is strict, shrewd and exacting.

She is about to make history by pronouncing sentence on Michael R. Milken, the billionaire junk-bond pioneer described by prosecutors as Wall Street's most devious crook.

"She's a brilliant judge, careful, patient, considerate, concerned about reaching the right decision," said Jeffrey Mishkin, chairman of the New York City bar association's federal courts committee, who has known Wood for years.

But Wood's sentencing record, largely for minor drug offenses, reveals nothing about how she may punish Milken, whose case may set a standard for the future treatment of white-collar criminals.

At 46, she is the youngest member of the 21-judge Manhattan federal court, one of most active in the nation, where celebrity defendants ranging from Imelda Marcos to John Mitchell have stood trial. She was appointed two years ago and received Milken's case by random assignment.

The ex-Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. executive faces up to 28 years in prison for admitting to six felonies in a plea bargain last April, most stemming from his relationship to inside trader and government informant Ivan F. Boesky.

Speculation over how Wood will decide Milken's fate has become a hot topic, especially since she took the extraordinary step of delaying a scheduled Oct. 1 sentencing to allow for a hearing into other crimes Milken may have committed.

She ordered the hearing, which begins Thursday, after digesting mounds of documents from the prosecution and defense, along with hundreds of letters, painting widely divergent pictures of Milken.

The prosecution's pre-sentencing memorandum alleged a range of crimes well beyond those the financier admitted. The defense called his crimes aberrations in an otherwise upstanding life.

Wood opted for the hearing to get a better understanding of the real Milken.

"From all I can see about how she's handling the case, she's doing it very well," said Harry First, a New York University law professor familiar with Wood's background.

"She's not going to give in wildly one way or the other on the pressure," First said. "I doubt she'll see him as this wonderful man who's been railroaded by the government, nor someone who made so much money that he should go to jail for a long time."

Still, it's conceivable she will spare Milken from prison, as his lawyers have urged, and put the financial wizard's talents to work in a community service program. She can't give him any more than the maximum 28 years.

The few nationally significant cases Wood has handled don't provide a full picture of her views but suggest she's willing to buck conventional thinking.

Benetton marks birthday with spending binge

PONZANO VENETO, Italy (AP) — From a small, family-owned business in a backwater city, the Italian sportswear firm Benetton Group SpA has grown into what some in the industry call the McDonald's of fashion.

The $1.5 billion retailing giant has its trademark colorful clothing sold through 5,900 outlets in 82 countries. Benetton also has interests in department stores, hotels and real estate, as well as fashion spinoffs such as watches and perfume.

Now a quarter-century old, Benetton has embarked on a buying binge with investments in tennis rackets, ski boots, even Barbie-doll clothes.

At a recent 25th anniversary party at Villa Minelli, a castle near Venice used as the Benetton headquarters, founder Luciano Benetton discussed plans to expand his empire into the sports and leisure arena.

Earlier this month, the company purchased 80 percent of Prince Holdings Inc., a U.S. manufacturer of tennis and squash equipment, for an estimated $220 million. The Lawrenceville, N.J., company sponsors tennis stars Jennifer Capriati and Gabriela Sabatini.

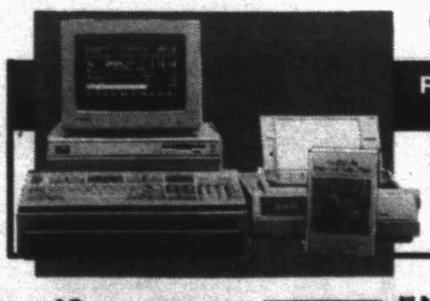

In the past year, Benetton also acquired an Italian mountain climbing and trekking equipment company and an eyeglasses manufacturer

Bob Lilly: Football player turned photographer

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Bob Lilly was in Midland recently to talk about his dual careers — football and photography. A sample of his photography is on display through Oct. 19 at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library.

Bob Lilly didn't know it at the time, but his second career began in 1961, the same year he began playing professional football.

Lilly, who was the first player drafted by the Dallas Cowboys, went to New York City in July of 1961 as a member of the Eastman Kodak Coaches All American team.

"They gave me a 35 millimeter camera and about 200 rolls of film with prepaid mailers," Lilly said. "You just mail it in and they send it back to you all developed. I started as a snap shooter like everybody else and immediately started taking pictures of my teammates and all kinds of things such as stadiums and airplanes and out of the windows of airplanes.

"As the years wore on, I started noticing scenes and other subject matter rather than stadiums and people and such as that. I started buying a few photo books — books of other people's works. I just saw beautiful pictures that people were taking, and then I would try to take pictures like them, but I couldn't do it."

Lilly began reading all he could on the subject of photography.

"I started learning about light, which I think is what the key to any art is," Lilly said. "Your contrast control and color of your light and your subject matter, obviously. But, the subject matter is not good unless you have it well-lighted in photography."

Lilly was raised at Throckmorton and garnered All American honors in football in 1961, his senior year at Texas Christian University. He played for the Cowboys through 1975 and earned All-Pro status seven times. In 1980, Lilly became the first Dallas Cowboy to be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

In 1982, Lilly and Sam Blair, sports editor of the Dallas Morning News, published "Reflections," a book of portraits and team pictures taken by Lilly.

"He did the dialogue. He knew a lot of the things I didn't know, and I knew a lot of the things he didn't know."

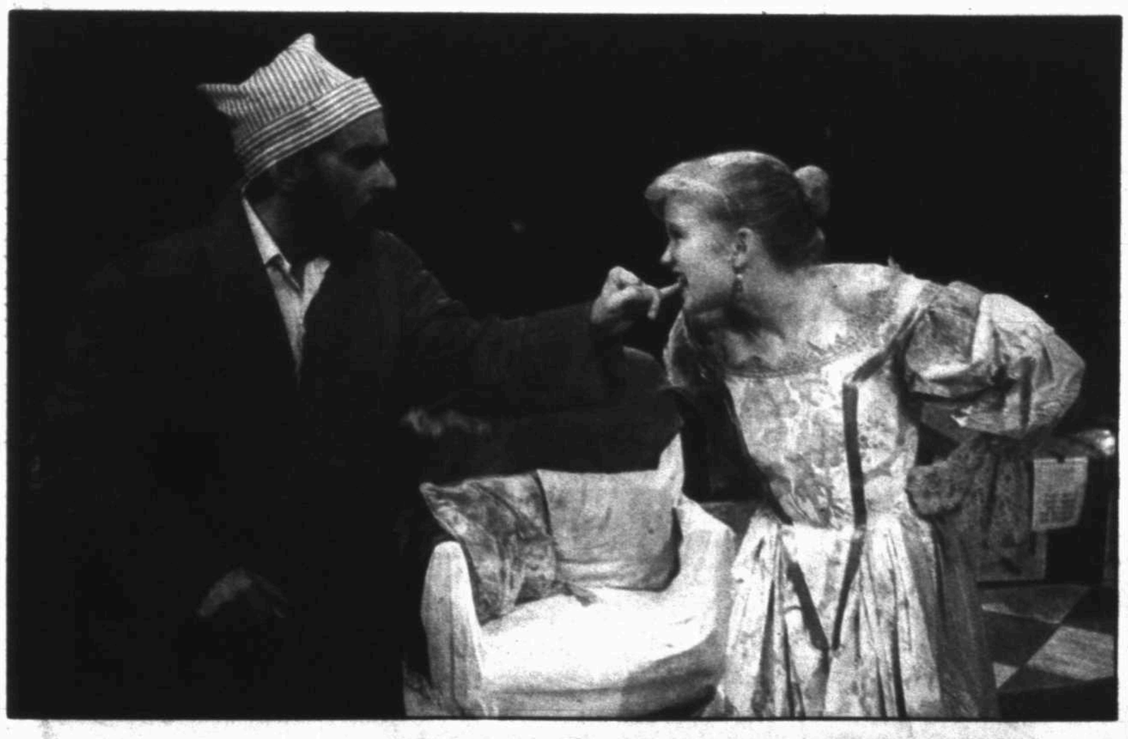

Lilly was recently at Midland's Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library in conjunction with the debut of an exhibition of his photography. "Western Visions: The Landscape Photography of Bob Lilly" will be on display at the library through Oct. 19. The works are for sale.

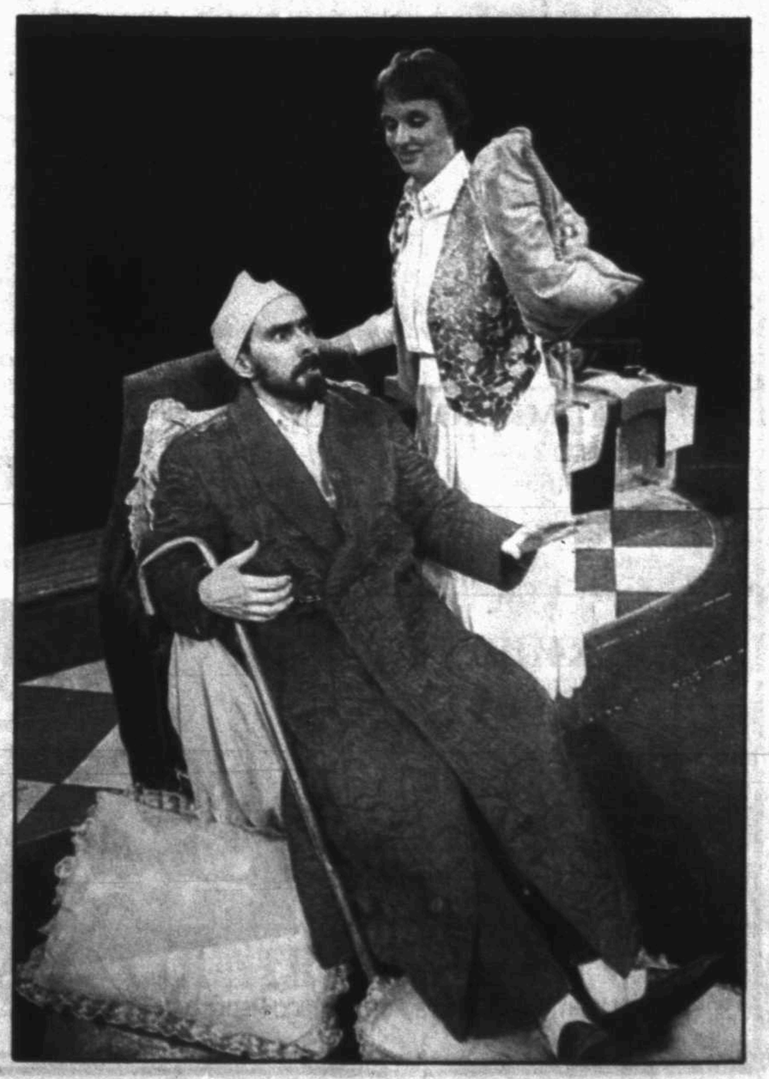

It wasn't until four years ago that Lilly began selling his work. He compares the first photograph he sold to his first professional football game.

"I'd been playing football all my life for nothing, it was sort of hard to believe I was finally getting paid for something I loved, and that was sort of how I felt when I sold my first picture."

When asked if he sees similarities between his two career choices, Lilly said, "It's similar, but it's a lot different. Really, photography is a very creative entity. I'm not saying that football isn't. But football I just started when I was very young and never knew any different. Photography is something that I enjoy and

Louise (Caitlin Durham) bites her father, Argan (Charles Meek), above, in this scene from Midland Community Theatre's production of Moliere's "The Imaginary Invalid." He accuses her of lying, saying, "This little finger knows and tells all." She bites the finger for telling lies. 'Imaginary Invalid' is play full of surprises

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Commedia dell'arte comes to Theatre Midland Friday as Midland Community Theatre stages Moliere's last play, "The Imaginary Invalid," in Mabee Theatre Two.

"Moliere died while he was doing this — he played the part of Argan," said Jane Burgess, director for the MCT production and drama teacher at San Jacinto Junior High.

"He died during the third act. We are; however, taking it back to Moliere's beginnings. He was influenced a whole lot by the commedia dell'arte from Italy."

Ms. Burgess said, "commedia dell'arte, in its purest form, is very much like the slapstick of today. It's all that Three Stooges kind of thing and Marx Brothers — all of that came directly from commedia."

Those attending "The Imaginary Invalid" will discover a few surprises.

"We are doing it very much like a commedia troupe would do, where the actors are dressed in their costumes and meeting the audience as they come in and asking them please not to throw cabbages and tomatoes and that sort of thing. We do play a lot to the audience, so anyone who sits on the first rows will probably be winked at."

She said the cast will only be offstage during intermission.

"Even then if they wish to go out and deal with the audience, that's fine. After the curtain call, they will go immediately out in the audience and greet their friends just as any troupe would have done" asking " 'How did you enjoy the show?' Wasn't that great fun?'

"So, in a way, they're playing double parts. They are the actors playing the commedia troupe members playing in Moliere's play."

Cast members include Charles Meek as Argan, the hypochondriac; Meg Harrison as his daughter, Angelica, whom he wants to marry off to a medical student so he will have a doctor in the house; Chris Linehan as Thomas Diafoirus, the silly fool of a medical student; Bill Ross as Cleante, the suitor Angelica prefers; Caitlin Durham as Louise, Argan's younger daughter; Diane Calogero as Toinette, the impertinent housemaid who tries to open Argan's eyes to the quackery of his Apothecary, Greta Grubb, and his swindling doctors, Bill Schenider and Neal Allen; Jennifer Smith as Beline and Schneider as Mr. Bonnefoy, the victim's scheming wife and her co-conspirator; and Jeff McDonald as Beralde, the deluded invalid's sensible brother who helps him escape his victimizers.

"They have been marvelous to work with," Ms. Burgess said. "I'm used to working, at this point, with children, and it's been such a grand experience to work with adults. With little kids, my babies whom I adore working with, you pretty much have to give them everything you have. With this group, you give then a tad of a suggestion, and they just run with it. It really has been great fun."

Ms. Burgess said Mabee Theatre Two's "intimate staging" lends itself to commedia dell'arte "because you really are right there in the audience's lap. This would not work this way in the big theater. I would have had to have done it comedy of manners, which indeed it is, but because we have this intimate staging, it's easier to play it that way."

The production features as minimal a set as it would for a traveling performing troupe, Ms. Burgess said.

"Two large doorways and a window arch and right behind the window arch there is a drop that shows an outside scene. You realize that that's exactly what it is — a drop that has an outside scene. If they were to travel, this could travel with them very easily."

"The Imaginary Invalid" is one of the two Moliere plays not written in verse.

"Moliere, in a lot of his plays, was making fun of specific people," Ms. Burgess said. "In this particular play, he was making fun of groups more than specific people."

Moliere satirized the people and professions of his time and emphasized the comic contrast between how people see themselves and how others see them.

Moliere was the stage name of the greatest French writer of comedy — Jean Baptiste Poquelin.

Born in 1622 in Paris, Moliere, the son of a prosperous upholsterer, earned a law degree, but never practiced law. Instead, he and his friends founded the Illustre-Theatre in 1643. A performance by the troupe in 1658 attracted something that I really like to do.

"It's probably like hunting for a lot of people. I have been a bird hunter. You're always looking for that perfect picture, that spectacular picture. I love to view nature. Many times I don't even take a picture. I just look."

Creativity is part of human nature, Lilly said. "I believe there's a tremendous desire to be creative in all people at times. I know that's true for me taking pictures.

The out-of-doors is quite important to Lilly, who feels that many Americans don't spend enough time with nature.

"I really think people should go out and enjoy our country more, enjoy the wide-open spaces more, instead of watching TV and going to the movies. I'm not knocking that, but not far from here, we have beautiful places," he said, referring to the Davis Mountains and the Big Bend country.

Lilly, who lives in Graham, ventured into landscape photography after moving to Las Cruces, N.M., in 1984. His interest led him to document the modern western environment in New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Utah. He operated a photography gallery for many years in Las Cruces before returning to Texas in 1989 to relocate near his family.

He's spent the last year remodeling his home, including putting in a lawn, and building a photography lab.

As for his football career, he said, "I thoroughly enjoyed every minute of it. My body's glad it's over."

The "great challenge" for Lilly now is "getting the picture. And being in the right place at the right time. And a lot of times you plan that. You know where the pictures are, and you know what time to be there and what time of year, but it doesn't always work out. Sometimes it's raining. Sometimes the moon is behind the clouds. And sometimes the sun doesn't set as spectacularly.

"So, it's a challenge. Since I know the entire process, I know exactly what I'm looking for, and exactly what it will look like when I finish it. But I don't find a lot of things I even want to photograph.

"The timing's not right. Many times I never push the button so it's kind of like hunting. You enjoy the chase. Many times I've been deer hunting, and I've just looked at them through my scope and let them go and never shot at them.

"I think for me every facet of photography is fun. I enjoy the equipment — playing with it — I enjoy testing different films. I do all my own processing. I enjoy printing. I even enjoy matting and framing. I don't do my framing and much of my matting, but I enjoy doing it."

Lilly has a grading system he uses to determine what to photograph and when. A 10 is the highest. He won't click his shutter unless he feels the resulting print will be at least an eight.

"That's the fun of it — sitting out there on top of a hill or mountain or in the middle of a desert or by a stream and just smelling the smells and listening to the sounds and watching mother nature. That's really what it's all about to me.

"I may drive 2,000 miles and never get a shot, but when I get home I'm totally relaxed, renewed. I feel almost like I've had a sabbatical. It's just a wonderful feeling to have that freedom out in the open spaces."

the attention of Louis XIV, who provided Moliere with a permanent theater and asked him to write court entertainments.

Ms. Burgess finds Moliere's work relevant to today's audiences.

"I think there have been hypochondriacs through the ages. If people don't actually see themselves or people they know within this play, they'll enjoy it because the whole theme of the hypochondriac is so universal. Besides that, slapstick is such a part of comedy still — physical comedy."

MCT's production of "The Imaginary Invalid," which is co-produced by ARCO, is set for 8 p.m. performances Friday, Saturday, Oct. 18, 19, 20, 21, 25, 26 and 27. The matinee performance is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Oct. 14.

Free tickets are available to the matinee for people who are handicapped or disadvantaged through the Reach Out Program. For more information call 682-4111.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

OC displays prints, paintings

ODESSA — "Movements, Moments, Gestures," an exhibit of prints and paintings by Deborah Von Greyerz-Monroe, is being presented through Oct. 5 at Odessa College's Learning Resources Center Options Gallery.

Ms. Von Greyerz-Monroe is a graduate of Staaliche Hochschule fur Bildende Kunste, Frankfurt, West Germany, where she studied printmaking with Christian Kruck. She is a graduate of the University of Rochester with a bachelor of arts in studio arts. She studied lithography and etching with Edith Smith, Los Altos, Calif.

Focusing on both the fusion and the disparity of photography and painting together, Ms. Von Greyerz-Monroe attempts to "draw my experience into the real world."

"One of the tremendous freedoms is that each vision is different and that these manipulations lead further and further into the artist and his or her individual experience and less and less close to the false objectivity of photography," the artist said.

Eliminating elements of the photo is one of Von Greyerz-Monroe's techniques, hoping that "its absence will cause the viewer to see the missing parts more clearly."

The Options Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Chinese art exhibited

ODESSA — "An Artistic Renaissance: The Hefner Collection of Contemporary Chinese Oil Paintings" opens today at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin.

The exhibition, which will remain on display through Nov. 25, features oil paintings from the People's Republic of China which represent the progression of Chinese painting from traditional brush and ink paintings to oil paintings influenced by the West. The exhibition is co-sponsored by The Connoisseurs and the Texas Commission on the Arts through the Odessa Cultural Council.

The 40 works by 30 contemporary Chinese artists manifest the changes in the political climate in China from the post Workd War II period to the present.

For more information call Marilyn Bassinger, 1-368-7222. HOurs at the institute are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

No admission is charged.

'Ike' commemorated

ODESSA — In celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of President Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St., has announced a special exhibit commemorating his life.

Featured in this exhibit is a selection of paintings entitled "Eisenhower the Painter." This selection of paintings by Eisenhower was loaned to the Presidential Museum by the Wichita Art Museum, Wichita, Kan. Other items in the display were assembled from Dennison and Abilene, Kan., Gettysburg, Pa., and the museum's own collection.

The exhibit will be on display through October. Hours at the museum are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information call 1-332-7123.

Landscapes on display

This month Gallery 1114, Inc., features the works of Pat Cowan and Boyd Harris, both local artists and gallery members.

Originally from Staten Island, N.Y., Ms. Cowan found her interests lay in the vast and varied landscapes of the Southwest. She moved to Midland in 1980, Sime that time, her travels personally and as a geologist are evident in her work.

"Her interpretations translate the history and palette of an earth in motion," says a release from the Gallery.

Harris' interest in the history and archaeology of the area are obvious in his sculpture and paintings.

The Gallery is located at 1114 N. Big Spring. For more information call 685-9944.

GLEN ROSE — Oakdale Park's "42" tournament starts Saturday at 10 a.m.

Trophies will be awarded for first and second place teams. The tourney will be made up of three rounds, with each round consisting of four games. Games will have a 25 minute time limit and standard "42" rules will be followed.

Entry fee is $5 per person or $2.50 per person for Oakdale weekend campers. A 20 percent discount will be given to those registering in advance.

For more information call the park office, 1-817-897-2321.

Jones art at theater

Watercolors by Joyce Jones are on display at Midland Community Theatre Gallery, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., until Oct. 27.

Jones

Mrs. Jones is a member of the West Texas Watercolor Society, the Lubbock Art Association and the Midland Art Association. She recently completed a one-woman show at the "Old Pecos Gallery" in Carlsbad, N.M.

Mrs. Jones and her husband, Jerry, live in Lamesa where she has a studio and gallery.

Karsh photos hanging

"Photographs by Karsh," an exhibition of 82 portraits by master photographer Yousuf Karsh, is on display at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through Oct. 28.

The exhibit is on national tour and is an exclusive for the State of Texas.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Jordan to give recital

A faculty recital featuring Michael Jordan, who teaches in the Division of Fine Arts, is set for 2 p.m. Oct. 14 at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

The recital includes works by Schubert, Mozart, Honegger and Harrison. Pianist for the performance will be Shari Weiner-Santorelli, staff accompanist for Midland College.

The recital is free to the public.

Sting speaks on rock

Occasional rock star and Broadway stage performer Sting put things into perspective recently when he told reporters what he thinks of rock 'n' roll.

All these bands who wear their hair long and their sisters' clothes while playing heavy metal are no different from glitzy Las Vegas acts, says Sting. He maintains there aren't any non-conformists anymore, and that the idea of rock 'n' roll being rebellious is absolutely dead.

Symphony plays at the Myerson

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Hundreds of Midlanders traveled to Dallas last weekend for the Midland-Odessa Symphony's performance at the Meyerson.

While many patrons spent a lazy Sunday morning, musicians were rehearsing for the afternoon performance. John Fairlie, principal bassoonist and the musicians' elected representative to the board of directors, said, "I was actually rather euphoric during the rehearsal listening to the incredible sound in the place."

When asked if the Meyerson was all he had been told it was, Fairlie said, "Oh yes. More. I've played in a lot of good symphony halls before, but the acoustics here were superior to any place that I've ever played."

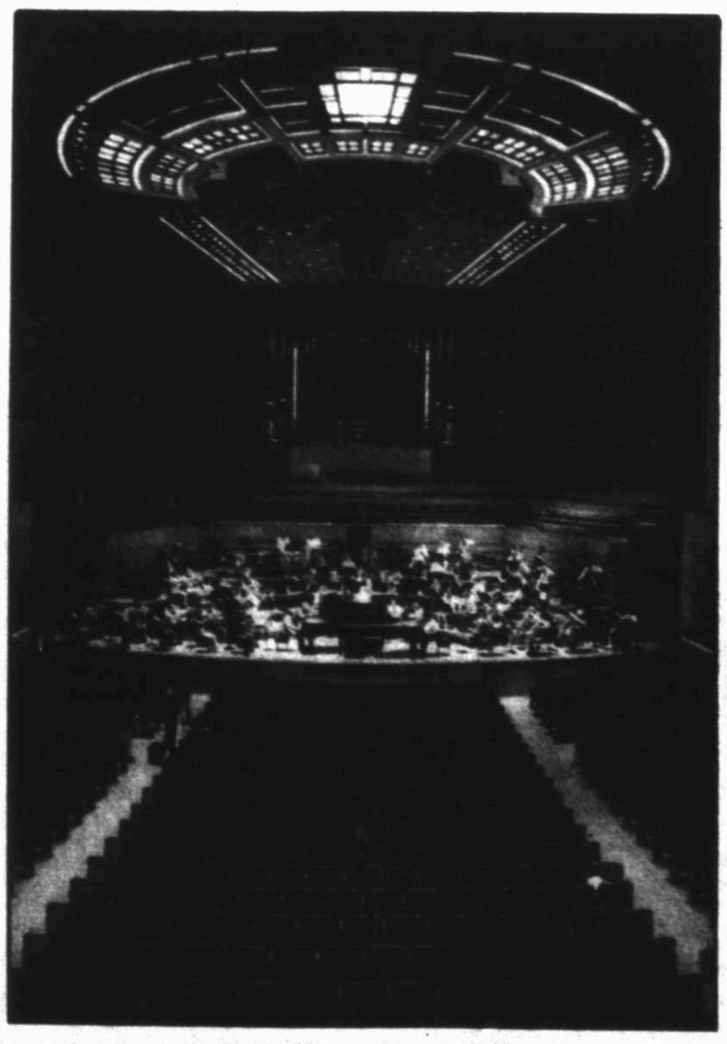

During the rehearsal, the musicians were aware that a picket line was planned by the Fort Worth and Dallas musician unions for the performance that afternoon. Symphony management and players had been contacted by the Fort Worth Musicians Union prior to leaving West Texas.

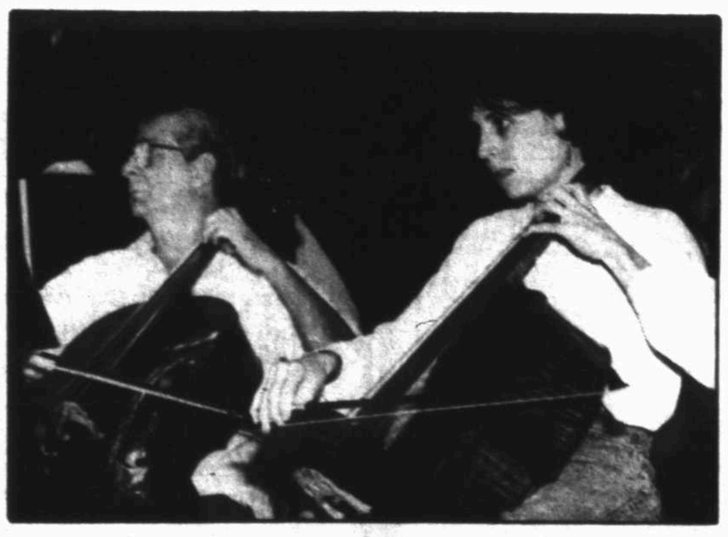

"The union informed the symphony that they had found out that our compensation for performance was substandard to what they considered minimum level," Fairlie said. "There was a lot of correspondence that went back and forth between the two groups. The symphony responded by saying they simply couldn't afford to pay more."

The minimum union scale for a performance is $75. The minimum pay per hour for a rehearsal is $23. The Midland-Odessa Symphony section players are paid $24 a performance or a rehearsal, no matter how many hours. Principal chairs are paid $33 per rehearsal or per performance.

When faced with the picket line, only the Dallas musicians hired by the MOSC decided not to play. Those musicians were members of the union there. The others knew what they were going to do.

"The reality is we wanted to play in the Meyerson," Fairlie said. "We wanted to show how good our orchestra really is."

Tenor, guitarist to perform for Spanish Heritage Festival

Staff Report

ODESSA — Tenor Luis Maria Bilbao and guitarist Robert Guthrie will perform Friday and Saturday at Permian High School Auditorium as part of the Spanish Heritage Festival.

Balboa toured the world in 1989 with the National Lyric Company of Spain, replacing Placido Domingo after the company's opening in London. Following the tour, he returned to Mexico, opening the season with Opera de bellas Artes, Mexico City, as Rodolfo in "La boheme."

A native of Bilbao, Spain, Bilbao spent four years as the leading tenor in the National Lyric Company of Spain, established at Teatro de la Zaruela in Madrid. In 1975, he won the Pablo Cassals scholarship given by the Grand Teatro del Loceo, Barcelona, Spain. This scholarship enabled him to attend the Melano Conservatory in Italy.

In 1976-77, he performed as first tenor with the Israel National Opera performing in "I 'Elisir D'Amore," "La Traviata," "MAcbeth," "Madame Butterfly," "La Boheme" and "Lucia Di Lammermoor."

From 1978 to 1982 and again in 1984, he sang with the National Opera of Mexico. In 1983, he toured Spain, Portugal, France and Monte Carlo with Placido Domingo.

Guthrie is known to American audiences through his apeparances as recitalist, concert soloist and chamber player with soprano Mary Endress as the Duo Classico and as guitar duet partner. He has collaborated with conductors Eduardo Mata, Anshel Brusilow and Abraham Chavez.

He attended the North Carolina School of the Arts, where he first came under the guidance of guitar masters Andres Segovia and Jesus Silca. He merited numerous scholarships for world-wide music study, including one given him by Segovia personally.

Guthrie was one of the first Artist-in-Residence appointments by the North Carolina Arts Council. He gave more than 250 performances as an affiliate artist for Texas and West Virginia and is cited by that organization as being one of its most successful and popular artists.

He has made recordings for National Public radio and the PBS affiliate, KERA-TV in Dallas, has produced a half-hour documentary about Guthrie, highlighting his performance virtuosity and teaching expertise.

He has toured in most major cities in the U.S., Mexico, Venezuela, Canada, Italy and Spain and is in great demand for masterclasses for North America's most gifted students.

Guthrie became a faculty artist of the Aspen Music festival in 1976. He has served on the faculties of Yale University, the Queens College, Southern Methodist University and as visiting Artist at the Boston Conservatory. He is the recipient of a Texas Touring Artist grant for the last several consecutive seasons.

Performance times in Odessa are 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Saturday. Admission is $12 for adults, $10 for students and $8 for senior citizens and students.

"Imported" retirees bring in $6.4 million

The Midland Odessa Health and Retirement Endeavor (MOHRE) has tracked 213 retiree households moving into Midland/Odessa during its last fiscal year.

Using a $30,000 per household annual income, the economic impact of the new residents is $6.4 million."

In the past three years, MOHRE has tracked 712 new retiree households with an impact of $21.4 million.

Midlanders sought for state appointments

The Chamber's Government Affairs Committee keeps the conduit between Midland and Austin open by supporting West Texas candidates for state board appointments. These boards regulate everything from agriculture to vocational nurses. If you know of good, willing candidates, please contact Bruck Partain at the Chamber, 683-3381.

Ready to beam down

Midland Center reports completion of cable installation in the exhibit hall and meeting rooms. Dimension Cable and the City of Midland were primarily responsible for the installation, which is the first step to providing down-link services such as closed-circuit television conferencing and sports events.

Red ribbons on the way

The Red Ribbon Campaign for Midland is bursting at the seams with plans on coloring our city red during the week of October 21, 1990 through October 28, 1990. Our choice -- Drug Free will be heard loud and clear.

For more information contact Co-Chairs Karen Jones, 684-2597 or Jerie Orr, 560-4900.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to fun and adventure! Next month will find you in hot pursuit of a coveted job or assignment. You crave variety in your work and should get plenty now. December brings unexpected financial help or a free trip to foreign shores. Choose your friends carefully in January 1991 or you could jeopardize a pet project. Good eating habits and regular exercise will improve your physique. Romance looks terrific next spring. A summer wedding is possible.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Archbishop Desmond Tutu, actress June Allyson, Col. Oliver North, author Helen MacInnes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The emphasis today is on your marriage or a long-standing romantic relationship. A candid conversation will help you come to better terms. Revising the family budget can eliminate stress.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friends could be more demanding than usual. Stand your ground and do not let them deplete you. Work harder to establish better rapport with an older person. Family ties deepen.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A reunion with someone who was once an important part of your life could be the highlight of your day. Iron out conflicts with loved ones. Starting a new exercise regimen is rewarding.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Domestic issues cannot be avoided. You delight in spending some cash to give your home a new look. Consult other family members before making household changes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A smooth response to your overtures is forthcoming in the days ahead. Inspired ideas show your leadership skills to full advantage. An adventuresome new romance starts now! Stop dwelling on the past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your trust in a rather superficial person may be broken. Financial transactions involving a friend could prove risky. A romantic masquerade ends. Write letters to teen-agers away at school.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emotional peaks and valleys require objectivity. A new system could improve your work. A change in attitude salvages a sagging romantic relationship. Be patient with someone in a quandry.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Relax today and your boisterous high spirits will return. Do not be overly concerned with details. Think in terms of the whole picture. Romance heats up. Guard your privacy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your social calendar may be busy today and tomorrow. A romance could suffer if you are inattentive. Do not let other people sap your energy. A good day for visiting parents.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seek creative outlets for your fantasies. Do not be misled by flattery or sensationalism. Now is the time to seek favors. Mate could disagree with your choice of associates.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are urged to explore all your options now. Keep your eyes open! Focus on your aims rather than the "how." A friend or neighbor could be unreliable. Travel beckons. Pursue romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could be in a position of real power today or tomorrow. It behooves you to be generous. Public recognition or a special honor is possible. Share the limelight with the worthy.

There was a refreshing mixture of guile and innocence at the European Junior Championship in Neumunster, West Germany. Both were in evidence on this hand from the Great Britain–Ireland match.

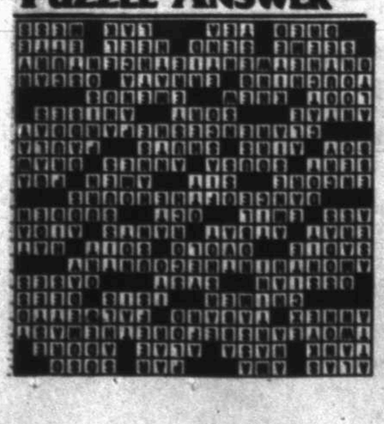

In one room, the Irish were content to double five hearts and collect their three aces for a score of 200. In the other, the British South refused to take the small profit and bid on to five spades. Here, too, it seemed that, since the bidding had marked East with 11 cards in the red suits, declarer had three sure losers, but a funny thing happened on the way to the forum.

Declarer won the opening diamond lead, cashed the ace and king of trumps and then casually led a low club—since East could not hold more than one club, the odds were 4-to-1 in favor of it being a low card. A guileless West saw no reason to squander the queen of clubs—partner might have held a singleton honor—and one of declarer's losers had vanished.

Had West paused for thought, he might have wondered about South's lead of a low club from hand. To compete vulnerable at the five-level, East's red suits could hardly have been worse than K Q J in diamonds and ace of hearts. And since East had bid diamonds first, he probably held only five hearts. Therefore, West could afford to go in with the queen of clubs. Even if partner held a singleton honor, the defenders were due to get a trick in each red suit.

PUZZLE ANSWER

'Nunsense' has been extended

ODESSA — The Broadway musical "Nunsense" has been held over at the Permian Playhouse. Additional performances are set for 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

"'Nunsense' is a madcap musical that satirizes convent life with a hysterical anything-goes sense of fun," says a release from Odessa's Permian Playhouse.

The comedy tells the story of a benefit revue presented by the Little Sisters of Hoboken to raise money to bury the last four of 52 nuns who died from botulism. The setting is a shabby high school gym/auditorium where a production of "Grease" has been staged by the school's junior high students.

The Playhouse negotiated the rights for the production since the musical is still touring professional theaters across the United States and recently played New Orleans and Dallas.

Museum to celebrate 25th anniverary

Staff Report

The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., begins an extended observation and celebration of its 25th anniversary with the exhibition "Midland Collects" through Nov. 11.

The exhibit features work of art belonging to Midlanders.

The museum, chartered in September 1965, opened its doors in rented quarters with the exhibition "Echoes of Texas" in March of 1966. The museum moved into the Turner Mansion in 1968.

Jean C. Hagman, director, said the museum is planning a series of events with the above dates in mind. The "Midland Collects" is the first of these events. There have been several of these exhibitions of works from Midland collections through the years. Such an exhibition in 1963 gave impetus to the idea of a museum for Midland.

"The tradition of 'Midland Collects' exhibitions has been a high point for the Museum of the Southwest acclaiming the great interest in art in our community," Ms. Hagman said. "Each time it has been held, new 'surprises' have been plucked from the homes of collectors to delight gallery visitors at the museum. The great variety and suberb quality of the works combine to form an excellent exhibition, and, always, a fresh view of collecting in Midland."

Works include oil and acrylic paintings, pastels, drawings, bronzes and stone sculptures by artists ranging from Degas to members of the Taos Society of Artists to such artists of today as Andy Warhol, Larry Rivers, Joe Beeler, Wilson Hurdley, G. Harvey, Melissa Zink, Fleur Cowles and Robert Daughters.

Artists are from, in addition to the United States, France, Germay, Spain and Italy.

Hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Jazz Classic ends today

The 14th annual Midland Jazz Classic closes today at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

The event features nationally known professional musicians.

Playing this year are Randy Sandke, Warren Vache, Dan Barrett, Bill Watrous, Ken Peplowski, Flip Phillips, Lew Tabackin, Cal Collins, Dick Hyman, Derek Smith, Ralph Sutton, Phil Flanigan, Milt Hinton, Jack Lesberg, Jake Hanna, Butch Miles and Jackie Williams.

The Classic features different combinations of players performing sets. Each set naturally includes a basic characteristic of jazz — improvisation.

The Midland jazz party was the third established in the United States, not counting Monterey and Newport, which are different in composition. A jazz "party" is held indoors in a listening situation. The first was established in Colorado more than 25 years ago by Dick Gibson, who is considered to be the father of jazz parties. The second was the Odessa party, which is held in the spring.

Today's set runs from 2 to 6 p.m. For more information call 683-5208 or 682-5334.

Pickwick Players will be staging 'Robin Goodfellow'

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Old English folk tales and Shakespeare keep company in Aurand Harris' "Robin Goodfellow."

"The play is a combination of Old English folk tales about the sprite Robin Goodfellow mixed with parts of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream,'" said Rene Brister Chambers, director of Midland Community Theatre's Pickwick Players. The youth performing troupe is presenting Harris' comedy to the public schools this week.

"The major plot is that Robin, a human, has been bestowed with fairy powers by King Oberon, king of the fairies, to be tested to see if he can be King Oberon's jester. To win the test, Robin gives a love potion to the queen of the fairies, Titania. Titania then falls in love with a human being who has, through magic, been given the head of a donkey."

Harris is the most produced children's playwright in the United States, said Ms. Chambers, who is the director of MCT's youth theater school. She chose his play because of his popularity. In addition, the school system is interested in students being exposed to the classics. The Pickwicks will present the comedy to Midland seventh and eighth graders this week.

"Robin Goodfellow," Ms. Chambers said, has "a simplified plot. 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' is very complex, it has so many plots and characters. This is the most famous plot within that play."

Even this famous plot has a different twist. In "A Midsummer Night's Dream" Puck, the character Robin is loosely playing, is already a fairy.

"Robin is human at the beginning, and then becomes endowed with fairy powers," Ms. Chambers said. "That's where the Old English myth about Robin comes from.

"One particularly funny scene not from Shakespeare at all is Robin playing tricks on Quince, the weaver. Robin leads her around in circles in a magical path. She appears as her double so all of a sudden Quince is seeing herself. That comes from the Old English fairy tales."

Ms. Chambers finds "Robin Goodfellow" "a good introduction for children to Shakespeare. A lot of the sections use the actual blank verse from 'A Midsummer Night's Dream.' I think with a simplified plot and the comedy, it appeals to people of all ages."

The production will be presented to the public at 1:30 p.m. Saturday. Tickets are $3. An adult will be admitted free with a paying child under 12. For more information or to purchase tickets, call 682-411.

The Pickwicks playing in "Robin Goodfellow" include a combination of veterans and newcomers.

"It looks like a real strong group," Ms. chambers said. "They're really doing a fine job with the Shakespeare. I'm real pleased with the performances by the king and queen fairies. They have really gotten the power and the regalness of those parts. Then, the two young actors who are playing the humans, seem to have a fine touch for the comedic."

The role of Robin is being played by a girl.

"The young actress playing our Robin is the youngest professional clown in Texas and she has a good feel for physical movement and humor. That's what got her the part."

Amber Hanson, who is 12 and a student at Goddard Junior High, has held the honor of youngest professional clown in Texas since she was 8.

"Most kids want to be in the circus when they're younger, and I really thought clowns were neat," Amber said.

Ms. Chambers also is complimentary to the supporting cast of young fairies.

"The fairies are kind of fun. They are doing summersaults in one scene. I think it's going to play real well. It will be a fast-paced show."
