Officials punished by party

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said today the party has disciplined three employees of the Chernobyl nuclear plant for failing to recognize the scope of the disaster and bungling the evacuation of nearby residents.

The measures announced in Pravda were the first known disciplinary action resulting from the April 26 explosion and fire at the Ukrainian power station. The accident spewed a cloud of radiation over much of Europe.

The 12 Common Market nations today agreed to ban imports of fresh food from the Soviet Union and six Eastern European countries closest to the nuclear plant, said Willy de Clercq, a trading bloc official in Brussels. Besides the Soviet Union, the ban applies to Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Officials in charge at the plant, 80 miles north of Kiev, said Sunday the worst danger had passed, and that they were working to encase the fire-damaged atomic reactor in concrete to prevent any further radiation release.

Reporting from the town of Polessk, temporary home to some of the 92,000 people removed from the officially designated "danger zone" around the Chernobyl facility, Pravda said three party members who worked at the plant have been punished.

An official identified only as A. Shapoval, chief engineer of the branch supplying construction materials and transport at Chernobyl, was expelled from party ranks for "indifference and shirking his duties" to evacuees, Pravda said.

Another worker, A. Sichkarenko, received a reprimand entered in his party membership record for the same neglect of duty.

A. Gubski, head of the Communist Party at the branch where Shapoval and Sichkarenko also worked, was given a lesser reprimand for failing to give timely and accurate information on the disaster, Pravda said.

Court ruling unlikely to have local impact

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Midland and Ector County judges, prosecutors and defense attorneys generally believe recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings regarding jury selection in criminal and death penalty cases will have little impact in the two counties.

On April 30, the high court ruled that prosecutors cannot, without valid reason, exclude minorities from criminal juries. Later, on May 5, the court held prospective jurors who strongly oppose the death penalty can be excluded from juries in death penalty cases.

Midland District Judge Vann Culp, stating he had seen only newspaper reports concerning the decisions, said he was hesitant to comment because those newspaper accounts do not always reflect the precise scope of U.S. Supreme Court decisions.

However, concerning the Supreme Court ruling that prosecutors cannnot, without reason, exclude minorites from criminal juries, 238th District Court judge said, "I don;t see any problem with that in Midland County at all because I've never noticed any indication of anything like that ever occurring."

"I don't think the problem is as big here as it is in some places," concurred Ector County 161st District Court Judge Tryon Lewis. "I really haven't seen a pattern of the state striking jurors based solely on monority or ethnic background. I sure think the decision was right," the judge said.

Ector County 70th District Judge Gene Ater, also saying he hadn't seen the entire opinion, said he expects defense attorneys to be filing motions in every case, contending prosecutors have violated their clients' constitutional rights by using discriminatory practices in jury selection.

"We'll have to rule on such motions as they come before us," he said.

ECTOR COUNTY District Attorney Eric Augesen, who has not seen the full Supreme Court opinion, said that from what he understands of the ruling, "It wouldn't have any effect at all because we don't do that sort of thing."

Midland County Assistant District Attorney David Rosado, who was with the Ector County District Attorney's office before joining the Midland DA's office, said, "I don't think it will have much of an impact here. One of the reasons, I think, is that prosecutors normally don't strike people (for ethnic or racial reasons). We have had blacks and Mexicans on juries here."

Oilfield worker sorry about anti-Regan remarks

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — Oilfield technician Jack May said trash was thrown on the lawn of his East Texas home and his wife received threatening phone calls because he criticized President Reagan after the bombing of Libya.

But since his return he has not met with much hostility and has been able to get Palestine residents to understand his point in a few minutes, he said.

"I'm trying to take a reasonable tone and trying to get reasonable people to understand," he said. "I am not angry at these people who have accused me of being a monster."

May, who returned to Texas Friday without incident after a stay in Libya, caused an angry backlash after the U.S. bombings of Libya last month when — during a long-distance telephone interview from Libya with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram — he characterized Reagan as "insane," "Rambo Reagan," "an idiot" and a "damned maniac."

"I'm kind of hot-tempered, and I don't think too good when I'm angry," May said. "I would like to apologize for my language, but I will not apologize for my sentiments."

May, 57, is one of 800 Americans who defied Reagan's orders to leave Libya. He earns $4,400 a month maintaining oilfield equipment in the Libyan desert, and said he plans to return there next month.

He said he will continue to speak his mind about what he considers the Reagan administration's misguided policy toward the North African nation.

But he said he will temper his language.

"I think I turned a lot of people off with my radicalism," May said. "I'm highly opinionated, but I'm not an idiot."

May said he had expected to be arrested upon his return home, but was waved through immigration formalities without incident when he arrived in Houston.

May said he does not sympathize with Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

"He's a hard-headed sucker who does what he has to do for his ideas. He makes mistakes. He's made a lot of them."

But he said the United States sank to a low level by bombing Libya.

May also defended his decision to continue working in Libya, saying that he is doing nothing more than exercising his right as an American citizen to pursue economic opportunity anywhere in the world.

Libya to expel diplomats from seven nations

LONDON (AP) — Libya today announced it was expelling 36 diplomats representing seven West European countries in retaliation for what the state-run radio called "oppressive measures."

The announcement was carried over Libyan radio and the broadcast was monitored in London.

The radio report said diplomats from the embassies of Italy, West Germany, France, the Netherlands, Spain, Belgium and Denmark would be expelled. The announcement gave no deadline for the diplomats to leave Libya.

"In retaliation for the oppressive measures taken by European states, under pressure from the United States of America...the People's Bureau for Foreign liaison announced today the expulsion of 36 diplomats," the radio said.

The broadcast then listed the seven countries affected, all Common Market members.

The 12-nation European Community, or Common Market, on April 21 decided to reduce the number of Libyan diplomats in Europe, tighten visa requirements for Libyans and halt cut-price sales of surplus butter and possibly other foodstuffs to Libya.

Since then, most of the 12 nations have announced cuts in diplomatic staff in Libya.

The Common Market move followed the April 15 U.S. bombing raid on Libya. The United States said it attacked Libya because of Libyan involvement in international terrorism, specifically the April 5 bombing of a West Berlin nightclub that killed an American GI and a Turkish woman.

Greece, a Common Market member that refused to take action against Libya, was not mentioned in the radio broadcast today. Nor was Britain, which cut diplomatic ties with Libya in 1984 after a London policewoman was killed by a gunman firing from the Libyan embassy.

After the April 21 Common Market decision, Libya ordered 53 Italian residents, 36 Spaniards and 19 Britons to leave the North African country.

Shooting suspects at large

From Staff Reports

Two Hispanic men suspected in a double shooting Sunday are still at large today, Midland police reported.

Around 8:27 p.m. Sunday, a man and women were shot while parked in a pickup near the Hogan Park swimming pool. Manuel Carrasco, 17, of Midland was shot in the back of the head once, and 22-year-old Maria Navarrette, 2439 Whitmire, was shot once in the chest while sitting in a '83 Ford pickup, police said. Ms. Navarrette and Carrasco were treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released .

Another occupant, Socorro Terrazas Moreno, whose age is unknown, received cuts to one arm from shattered glass. Ms. Moreno's 5-year-old daughter, Jessica, who was also in the pickup was not injured during the shootings.

The men shot at the group as they drove by in a pickup, police said.

Police said no motive was known for the shootings and the investigation is continuing.

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees are expected to bring an end to the long and bitter battle between proponents and opponents of high school boundary changes when it meets at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the MISD board room, 702 N. N St.

Trustees are to decide the fate of a plan to change Midland and Lee High School boundaries — the topic of a three-month-long debate that arose after the board learned that possible disparities in total and ethnic enrollments could occur by 1989-90 if boundaries are not readjusted.

School administrators have predicted that neighborhoods in the LHS attendance area currently are growing at a faster rate than those in the MHS attendance area and report that the growth is expected to continue through 1996; meaning the schools could see an enrollment difference of as many as 300 students by 1989 and 350 students by 1990.

But a group of concerned citizens have asked school board members to delay a boundary decision until the the impact of the current economic depression is reflected in this fall's enrollment. Many have asked that trustees revert back to the time frame originally recommended in their August 1985 Retreat, which did not call for recommended boundary changes until December of this year.

The grassroots organization claims that none of the data compiled for recent projections has taken into account the severe downturn in the price of oil, and the resulting slowdown of the local economy. The group suggests the board hold off on any decision until it is able to review enrollment figures this fall when the economic scene should be easier to analyze.

Former Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr., a member of the Midland Parent Action Committee, has been critical of the boundary plan which he says creates a greater socio-economic imbalance between the high schools.

Noting the correlation between family income/education level and student achievement in academic and extra-curricular activities, Angelo said "The socio-economic balance is critical for children from all backgrounds. If you remove that motivated group, you reduce that motivating factor for those who don't generally have it."

Chinese official's visit to Midland starts today

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

The Consul General of the People's Republic of China and his wife were to arrive from Houston at Midland Regional Airport late this morning for a two-day tour of the city.

The visit of Ni Tao Li and his wife is in conjunction with a two week-long trip to Dongying, China, Midland's Chinese sister city, being planned by a group of about 30 Midland business and civic leaders in June.

According to Midland Chamber of Commerce acting director Steve Hardin, the consul general and his wife were to be guests of honor at a Petroleum Club luncheon today.

This afternoon, from 1 to 4:30, Ni Tao Li was to have met informally at the Midland Chamber of Commerce offices with a group of Midlanders, several of whom are expected to make the trip to China June 13 through June 26.

A cocktail party at the home of Harvey Herd will follow the informal seminar. Dick Dunbar, chairman of the International Affairs Committee of the Midland chamber, is hosting a dinner in honor of the consul general and his wife tonight.

Tuesday morning, from 8 to 9:15, the consul general will be guest of honor at a businessmen's breakfast to be held at the Pinnacle Club atop the Republicbank First National building.

A tour of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum is scheduled from 9:30 to 10:15. A noon luncheon is slated with Midland cultural and business leaders, followed by a tour of the Midland Theater Center.

Ozona man uses mural to protest

OZONA (AP) — Alfred Tobar, 28, said he painted his mural, portraying a Border Patrol officer as Bozo the Clown, to draw attention to racism in this West Texas community, but city leaders complain that it's just setting back progress that was already under way in racial relations locally.

Tobar's latest artwork, painted for the Cinco de Mayo parade, depicts a Border Patrol officer painted in the likeness of a clown riding in a jeep.

His painting, done with oils and brush on a 10-foot by 30-foot section of a wall on a building he owns in the mostly Hispanic south side of Ozona, which is about 70 miles southwest of San Angelo.

The editorial cartoon-style painting portrays "Peanuts" cartoon character Charlie Brown attempting to cross from Mexico into the United States, with a Border Patrol officer stopping him and asking: "Aren't You BROWN!"

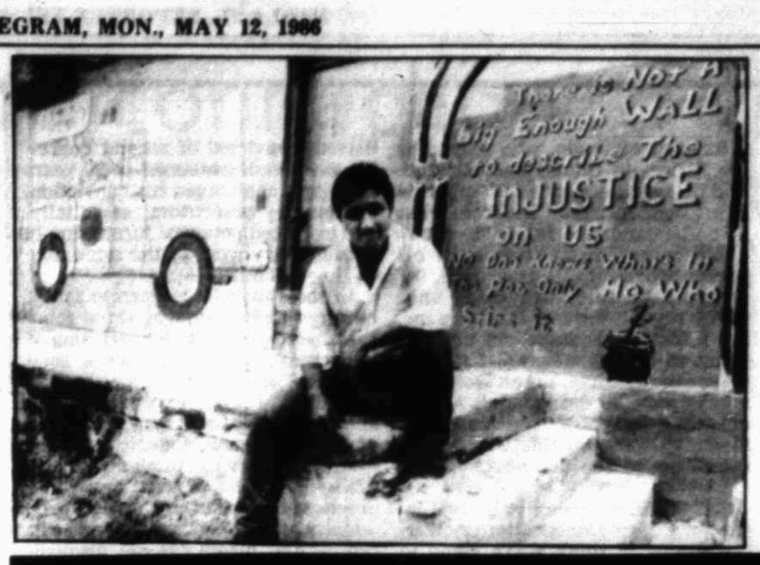
Also on the wall is the statement: "There ain't a big enough wall in Ozona to describe the injustice on us."

"It doesn't bother me a bit," said Robert Bollier, agent in charge for the five-county patrol district in Ozona. "If he ever gets personal about it — like putting my name on it — that would be something else again. Everyone is entitled to his opinion."

Tobar claims the Border Patrol subjects Hispanics in Ozona to harassment. He was driven out of the restaurant business because of it, he said.

Patrol officers repeatedly raided his eatery, asking customers to show residency permits and taking away people who worked at the restaurant, he complained.

Tobar said he used to employ illegal aliens as restaurant workers, which drew the Border Patrol's attention. But he said the federal agents do not apply the same pressure to area cattle and sheep ranchers, who Tobar said depend on foreign workers for $10-a-day labor.



Ozona artist Alfredo Tobar, 28, sits outside the building he used to display his protest of treatment of Mexican-Americans by Crockett County-based U.S. Border Patrol agents.

Borger officials survive recall

BORGER (AP) — The mayor and two City Council members have weathered a recall election that was prompted by a $1.5 million court judgment this Panhandle city is still facing over a fatal police shooting.

Voters rejected by a 2-to-1 margin Saturday a recall that would have turned Mayor Frank Selfridge, Mayor Pro-Tem Judy Flanders and councilman Bill Slaybaugh out of office.

The election was ordered amidst a furor in Borger over whether the council could have avoided the $1.5 million suit judgment by making a $500,000 out-of-court settlement that would have been covered by Borger's insurance plan.

"I'm elated of course. They are saying they have confidence in the present council," Selfridge said after the election.

JURIES

According to Rosado, blacks and Mexicans have been struck in criminal cases "because they knew the defendant or his family, that sort of thing. We have had minorities not only on trial juries but on the grand jury as well," he said.

"By and large," Rosado added, "I don't believe minorities in either Ector or Midland counties are arbitrarily cut by prosecutors as a general rule, though some prosectuors, on an individual basis, may cut jurors because of race," he said.

According to Edward Garza of Midland, who says his law practice takes him all over the state, cutting for racial-ethnic reasons "goes on and people don't realize it. It brings out an inequity in the law that I don't believe, even with the Supreme Court ruling, can be cured. It's going to exist," he said. The practice of cutting minority jurors for racial or ethnic reasons "goes on throughout the state," he added.

As Garza sees it, what the Supreme Court decision has done "is brought to light a problem that has existed. I don't know and I don't see that there will be a remedy, an equitable remedy, to the problem."

Richard Alvarado, who maintains law offices in Odessa and Midland, said he hadn't read the full Supreme Court opinion either but from what he understands the ruling "basically deprives the district attorney of his preemptor" challenges and, of course," he said, "anything that makes my job easier is fine with me, but I don't understand yet how it's going to work," he said. "The supreme court has taken away so much from the defendant," Alvarado said, "that I am very surprised that they wrote in this way, giving something to the defendant."

"I THINK it's going to be real interesting," said Odessa attorney Warren Heagy. "I think we're going to get a more representative panel as a result of that decision. Whether or not it's going to make any difference in the outcome of criminal cases I don't know," he said. "I would venture to guess that minorities would be very conscientious jurors and might tend to render slightly fairer verdicts," said Heagy.

Odessa attorneys John Cliff and Michael McLeaish felt the U.S. Supreme Court decision in the Kentucky case involving a black defendant was correct. James Kirtland Batson, convicted of second degree burglary and sentenced to 20 years in prison, challenged his conviction, contending prsecutors, essentially, had excluded potential jurors simply because they were of the same race as the defendant.

"If the opinion is written so that it requires prosecutors to show some reasonable cause for the exclusion of minorities then I think it's a good decision," said Cliff.

"I think it's an excellent ruling and high time that it was made part of our law," said McLeaish.

The high court's ruling essentially concerns the use of what are called preemptory strikes by prosecutors, under which (in Texas) as many as 10 prospective jurors can be disqualified from jury service without any cause being cited.

"It's well-known, particularly in Dallas where it was located in a prosecutor's manual, that prosecutors have a tendency, without any other reason than race, to use their strikes to cut minorities," Cliff said.

"I had a criminal case a couple of weeks ago," said McLeaish, "where there were two jurors who were related to police officers who, under normal circumstances, I would have used my strikes to keep them from getting on the jury. But, since they were both black, I knew, or felt certain, the state would go ahead and cut them and they did," he said.

In two criminal cases he's tried this year, McLeaish said, "I've told prospective jury panel members during voir dire that there would be no blacks and no Mexicans on the juries and there weren't," he stated.

"APPARENTLY, IN those type of cases," McLeaish said, "the state will no longer be able to do that without giving some type of reasonable explanation as to why they made those cuts."

As to excluding opponents of the death penalty from sitting on capital murder cases, McLeaish said, "Probably that's a correct ruling in the sense that in this state all the jurors have to be able to say that they will enforce the law to its full extent or to its least extent." The reverse of that, he said, would be cutting a juror who favors capital punishment or says he or she couldn't consider probation in a capital murder case.

Cliff noted that the Supreme Court has not said, as near as he can determine, that prospective jurors opposed to the death penalty cannot serve as jurors in capital murder cases

Cliff said it appears the high court's ruling in the Arkansas murder trial of Ardia vs. McCree is fairly well in line with the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure, which does not summarily exlude persons opposed to the death penalty from jury service in a capital case.

Under Texas law, a person opposed to the death penalty can serve on a jury if he or she states under oath that the mandatory (death) penalty would not affect his or her deliberation on any issue of fact.

Culp said under the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure there are "some magic words" prospective jurors who oppose the death penalty can be asked to determine if they should be seated in a capital murder case or struck from the panel.

Augesen said, "I don't see any effect at all. The thing is, that by seating them, you give the defendant more rights instead of less, so I think there is every possibility that Texas will continue on with its procedure of allowing them to be seated," he said.

"The constitution guarantees you the right to be tried by a jury of your peers and certainly that ruling makes the job of striking someone easier for the district attorney's office since only people who are in favor of the death penalty can judge the sentance in such a case," Alvarado said.

GARZA SAID, "I felt the Supreme Court couldn't have ruled any other way, even though I don't like it. I don't feel they could have ruled any other way and continue with the jury system as it's been delegated to use at this time," he said.

"I have not seen the decision," said Heagy, "but I think that was a horrible decision. It allows the judge to exclude a juror from possible service without making the prosecutor strike that juror, who merely says 'I'm opposed to the death penalty.' There is no such challenge for those people who say, 'I love the death penalty,' " he said, "So it makes us all cut from a pool people who love the death penalty and, numerically speaking, the poor defendant is coming out on the short end," said Heagy.

"I think it was one of the most basically unfair decisions I've ever seen," he said, "But, candidly, you can expect nothing more out of a Ronald Reagan-Richard Nixon court."

Fears cause visitors from 'land of cowboys' to change plans

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — The 740 travelers from "the land of cowboys and skycrapers" had their annual Mystery Tour shifted at the last minute from Tunisia to the Ivory Coast because of fears of terrorism.

The change in destinations by the Denver-based Ports of Call travel club was welcomed in this West African country because the tour group is expected to spend $400,000 by the time they leave Tuesday.

The newspaper said their arrival was "a whiff of oxgyen" for the slumping tourist industry. It asked Ivory Coast residents to treat the adventurers from "the land of cowboys and skyscrapers" well.

While the local economy is mostly based on coffee, cocoa, tropical woods and shipping, this New Mexico-sized country is not on the normal tourist agenda of the world's jetsetters.

French is the official language of the 9 million residents, dating from colonization in the 1910s by France to independence in 1960.

The Ivory Coast has 340 miles of coastline, and pictaresque savanna and woodlands, but it is perhaps most noted for its rugged 600-mile railroad from Abidjan to Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso (formerly Upper Volta).

Many of the seasoned travelers from the club said they found out the original destination was Tunisia, a North African neighbor of Libya, but that threat of terrorist reprisals against Americans convinced tour organizers to change locales.

Larry Turrill, club president, admitted the destination was hurriedly changed. But, he added, "We never confirm or deny any destination. We might want to go there some other time."

Members of the private travel club, many of them retired, have tallied hundreds of thousands of miles and visited more than 50 destinations in the club's fleet of 11 Boeing 707s.

Timid travelers they are not.

"I've been to Athens three times since all this baloney began and I've never been worried," says Garey Erickson, a retired Phoenix, Ariz., resident. She said, however, that many people, including the Ivorian government, take the threat seriously. "We've had escorts everywhere we go here," she said.

"They as much as told us it's because of (Libyan leader Col. Moammar) Khadafy we've had all this security," added Mavis Hartman of Tucson, Ariz.

Soldiers stationed around the five-star Hotel Ivoire, which stands above a lagoon in the suburb Cocody, confirmed they were there to protect the Americans. The soldiers said they had had no problems, but expected one.

President Felix Houphout-Boigny is considered a good friend of the United States. The conservative president has pressed France to oppose Libyan influence in Chad, where Khadafy has backed forces trying to oust the government.

Although the Ivory Coast did not comment publicly on the April 15 U.S. raid on Libya, American and British diplomats say the government privately supported it.

Ivorian officials have gone out of their way to accommodate the Americans, who arrived during the rainy season.

On short notice, the 740 tourists and flight crews of their four 707s were admitted without visas. It was an unusual concession from the Ivorians, who have the usually slow bureaucratic inclinations of France.

Turrill said tour members probably will spend about $400,000 by the time they depart, most on West African artifacts.

"Anyone who doesn't have fun on this trip, it's their own fault," said Lou Robinson, also retired, of Grand Lake, Colo. She sports a name tag decorated with small placards proclaiming visits to South Korea, the Canary Islands, Hong Kong, Scandinavia and the Dominican Republic.

OFFICIALS

The newspaper indicated the measures were taken last week by the party committee for Pripyat, the evacuated settlement adjacent to the power station.

It also hinted the officials would lose their jobs, saying the party committee found it "inexpedient that the leaders who had compromised themselves should remain in their posts."

Party disciplinary measures do not preclude criminal prosecution. Speeches at the recent 27th Communist Party Congress stressed that party officials in the future would be more liable to criminal as well as party punishment for misdeeds.

There has been no public indication that higher-ranking officials, such as ministers, top scientists or senior Ukrainian party officials, might be punished in connection with the world's worst nuclear power disaster.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has yet to say a word in public about the accident or its aftermath, which has drawn foreign criticism and damaged Gorbachev's desired image of peacemaker and campaigner for nuclear disarmament.

However, two top Kremlin officials, Communist Party Central Committee Secretary Yegor K. Ligachev and Soviet Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov, visited the disaster area May 2.

After that visit, the evacuated zone was expanded from six miles to 18 miles around the plant, and measures were announced to care for evacuees and to warn the 2.4 million residents of Kiev, the Soviet Union's third-largest city, of potential radiation hazards.

The Soviet government reported Sunday that work had begun to sheathe Chernobyl's wrecked No. 4 reactor in concrete. The three-paragraph government statement made no reference to any new casualties. A West German report during the weekend quoted one Soviet official as saying four people have died.

Official Soviet statements have said that in addition to two dead, 204 people were hospitalized, and that 18 of those hospitalized were in serious condition.

Physicist Yevgeny Velikhov, vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences and one of the leaders of the Chernobyl cleanup effort, said Sunday that a turning point had been reached.

"Theoretically until today, there existed the possibility of a catastrophe since a large amount of fuel and reactor graphite was burning. This is now not the case," Velikhov was quoted as telling Soviet journalists in Kiev.

"A new stage in the work sets in now," Velikhov was quoted as saying. "It is necessary to take a whole number of measurements, carry out research, determine the spots that are contaminated the most."

Television footage from inside the evacuated zone was shown on the national news program "Vremya" (Time) Sunday night. Some of the estimated 150 people working in the area were shown walking along tree-lined streets. Several wore gas masks.

All homes have been locked up and workers are preparing to decontaminate them, the Soviet reporters were told.

None of the officials they interviewed gave any indication how long the decontamination work would continue or when evacuees might be able to return.

The government newspaper Izvestia, in a report on the journalists' visit, wrote that food, money, clothing, housewares and even jobs were being provided to nearly 92,000 people evacuated to the northern Ukraine.

Last week, Ukrainian officials told a group of foreign reporters in Kiev that 84,000 people had been moved. Izvestia gave no explanation for the higher figure.

In an interview with the West German magazine Der Spiegel, Valentin Falin, chief of the official Soviet Novosti news agency, was quoted as saying the death toll in the disaster had reached four, with two people dying of radiation exposure.

However, an assistant to Ukrainian Health Minister Anatoly Romanenko, reached by telephone in Kiev, said Falin's reported statement "is not true."

"We have no such information. You are telling me about this for the first time," said the woman, who did not identify herself. She then hung up.

Shultz criticizes proposed budget cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Returning from a 17-day Asia trip, Secretary of State George P. Shultz today was ready to take on Congress over contemplated cuts in U.S. programs overseas that he said would result in "a tragedy for national security interests."

Shultz said a projected reduction of a half-billion dollars in anti-terrorist measures proposed by the Reagan administration might expose embassies to terrorist attacks.

In that event, Shultz said, he would tell Congress "I'm not derelict in my duty, you're derelict in your duty because you would not appropriate the money."

The White House has proposed a budget of $22.6 billion for the State Department for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. This includes $1.4 billion to enhance security measures at U.S. embassies.

The consul general and his wife will be taken on a brief driving tour of the city, prior to meeting Midland College President Jess Parrish and touring the college campus.

The consul general and his wife will leave Midland at 4 p.m. Tuesday to return to Houston.

The Midland visit of Consul General Ni Tao Li and his wife will lay the groundwork for the June China trip, which Dunbar says "will be a working trip" by business and civic leaders to Midland's sister city, Dongying, during which they will explore trade opportunities.

Dunbar said Midland is probably the last U.S. city that will be granted a sister city relationship with a Chinese city. The relationship between Midland and Dongying should afford a great many opportunities for the Permian Basin oil industry for the export of geophysical, seismological, drilling and service technology, he said, since Dongying is located in Shandong Province, about 225 miles south of Peking in the Shengli oilfield, the second largest in the People's Republic of China.

Midland's sister city relationship with Dongying grew out of a March 1985 cultural tour of the Thouvenal String Quartet and several Midland residents.

Child dies during liver transplant

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN

BOSTON (AP) — When the life of 9-month-old Alex Kevin Girard began ebbing away because of his damaged liver, his parents launched themselves into the public eye to seek help, something they felt forced to do.

Experts say the lack of a computerized national organ transplant system for children suffering from deadly liver diseases and a reluctance by some doctors to actively solicit donations make desperate parents do what Paul and Ellen Girard did.

The boy's death Saturday, nine hours into a transplant operation at Children's Hospital that came 24 hours too late, has refocused attention on the way donor organs are found.

The night before Alex died, doctors rushed to Houston after learning of a suitable donor liver, but at the same time, the baby's heart, lungs and kidneys began deteriorating rapidly.

His parents' desperate publicity campaign and pleas for help had even caught the attention of first lady Nancy Reagan, who offered the use of an Air Force jet to transport the donor liver from Houston.

The Girards, pale and emotionally drained, conducted scores of interviews during the week and asked the advice of Charles Fiske of Bridgewater, whose nationwide media blitz in 1982 helped find a donor liver for his daughter, Jamie.

"What happens for families like the Girards is there are no alternatives," Fiske said.

Fiske, who works for a nonprofit agency to raise money for the treatment and prevention of birth defects, said a national computerized system is needed to match donor organs to patients quickly. A law to create such a computer bank was passed by Congress two years ago, but money has not been appropriated.

The Girards said public awareness through hospitals is critical.

NATION

By JOAN MOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lobbyist Michael K. Deaver may have violated federal conflict-of-interest laws because he handled U.S.-Canadian issues as a top White House official and then signed a private contract with Canada, the General Accounting Office said today.

"Because the information we developed...indicates a possible violation of the post-employment laws and a need for further investigation, we have referred our findings and relevant documents to the Department of Justice," said James F. Hinchman, the GAO's deputy general counsel said.

Hinchman presented the congressional watchdog agency's findings to the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigation, chaired by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.

At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes refused to comment on the Deaver investigation.

Speakes also said he did not know whether Deaver has spoken with President Reagan since the question of conflict-of-interest violations arose.

The spokesman acknowledged, however, that Deaver continues to receive the detailed, unpublished schedule of the president's activities and retains his White House pass enabling him to enter the White House compound.

In a 20-page prepared statement, Hinchman detailed Deaver's involvement in negotiating the differences between Canada and the United States over acid rain.

The report said it appears that Deaver, who was the White House deputy chief of staff, "participated in an administration decision to invoke the special envoy process by which the United States and Canada have attempted to resolve their differences over acid rain."

After leaving the White House on May 10, 1985, two months after Reagan named an envoy, Deaver "represented the Canadian government in a meeting with the U.S. special envoy for acid rain at which differences between the United States and Canada over the contents and issuance of the special envoy's report were discussed," Hinchman said.

The GAO said Deaver's representation of Canada calls into question conflict-of-interest laws that bar former federal employees from representing anyone before the government on particular matters in which the ex-employees were "personally and substantially" involved.

Also, the GAO said there is a question as to whether Deaver's appearance before the special envoy on Oct. 25, 1985 was a violation of the law prohibiting people from lobbying before their old agencies.

The envoy, former Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, was a representative of the president, and as such might be considered "an officer of the White House office," Hinchman said.

Deaver, 48, the former White House deputy chief of staff who is a close friend of Reagan and his wife, Nancy, has denied doing anything illegal in running a multi-million dollar lobbying firm he started a year ago.

Pentagon pushing missile development as tests continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is pushing ahead with development of a new air-to-air missile before testing of the weapon is complete, a General Accounting Office report says.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger recently asked for congressional approval to proceed with the weapon, even though a new round of congressionally ordered flight tests had just barely begun, the GAO said.

The draft report from the congressional watchdog agency was obtained by The Associated Press over the weekend. It has not been released publicly.

The GAO report reviewed the Pentagon's AMRAAM — Advanced Medium Range Air-to-Air Missile — a weapon that has run into a series of problems in recent years.

Last fall, Congress ordered that the AMRAAM be canceled unless Weinberger notified Capitol Hill by March 1 that its problems had been corrected and that 17,000 of the weapons could be purchased for no more than $5.2 billion.

The weapon, whose primary contractor is Hughes Aircraft Co., has been under development since 1981, and purchases were to have started last year. The program is chiefly for the Air Force, although the Navy wants to buy as many as 7,000 of the missiles. The Air Force plans to buy 17,000.

The Pentagon, arguing that the problems are now solved, has asked for $795.9 million to start buying the missiles in fiscal 1987, which begins Oct. 1.

The GAO said it is too early to "fully assess the results of the flight test program" because by the end of March, only four of the 90 scheduled deveopment flight tests had been conducted.

In his certification to Congress, Weinberger assured Capitol Hill that the AMRAAM would meet its required performance specifications.

NATION IN BRIEF

Forest fire crosses line

HAMPSTEAD, N.C. (AP) — A stubborn week-old forest blaze that firefighters thought they had whipped appeared to have eluded them again today although they burned thousands of acres in its path in an effort to head it off.

"I wish I had never become optimistic in the first place," Tom Hegele, a spokesman for the state Division of Forest Resources, said shortly after he learned the blaze seemed to have slipped through fire lines just before midnight Sunday.

The fire has blackened 70,000 acres of coastal North Carolina and more than 5,000 people have been asked to evacuate, but so far the fire has destroyed only two small buildings.

One death has been blamed on the blaze, that of a man who died of a heart attack while fighting it, but officials said about 30 people, mostly firefighters, were treated at the scene Sunday for smoke inhalation, and cuts and bruises.

Shcharansky says thanks

Shcharansky

NEW YORK (AP) — For nine years, New York's annual rallies for Soviet Jews were dominated by cries of "Free Anatoly Shcharansky." This year, before an estimated 300,000 wildly cheering people, the freed Soviet dissident said thanks.

In a moving speech to the annual Solidarity Sunday rally sponsored by the Coalition to Free Soviet Jews, Shcharansky recalled his years in prisons and labor camps and said the Soviets tried constantly to convince him he was alone.

"But I knew what they only sensed," he said. "That I was never alone — that my wife, my people, that all of you are with me. They were trying their best to find me a place where I would be isolated...but all the resources of a superpower are not enough to isolate a man who hears the voice of freedom, to isolate a Jew who hears the voice of solidarity with his people, the voice which he hears from the very chambers of his soul.

"And that is why, in every point of my confrontation with them, they were forced to retreat."

"All of this," he added, "has become possible because of you."

Appoitment opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — His spelling is poor and his grammar leaves something to be desired, but Daniel Manion's critics say those aren't the reasons he is unfit to serve on a federal appeals court.

They say he is low on qualifications and too strong on right-wing ideology.

Manion, whose father was a founder of the ultraconservative John Birch Society, has been nominated by the Reagan administration for the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals which sits in Chicago and hears appeals from trial courts in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

Last week Manion gained the distinction of becoming the first Reagan administration judicial nominee to fail to receive the endorsement of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Moms' day celebrated

Associated Press

For some mothers, it was a day to protest for peace or the right to ride a motorcycle without a helmet. For others, the more traditional flowers and phone calls did the trick. And for one Ohio woman, it was a day to have a second Mother's Day baby.

Fourteen people were arrested outside the South African Embassy in Washington, D.C., in a demonstration sponsored by a group calling itself Mothers Against Apartheid.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. estimated it would handle 23.2 million interstate phone calls Sunday, a Mother's Day record, said spokesman Steve Cross.

Nuclear lesson

Some hazy, sleepy West Texas morning you could be driving to work when a news flash over your radio informs you that an accident at a nuclear power plant in Arizona is spewing deadly radiation into the atmosphere. What do you do next?

Do you seek shelter? Where will you go? How can you protect yourself and your family from the horrors of radioactive contamination? Is there a plan to deal with such emergencies?

Those questions and a multitude of others come to mind in the wake of the Chernobyl nuclear power plant disaster in the Soviet Union little more than a week ago. Regrettably, that incident has underscored how grossly unprepared the American public is to effectively respond to that type of disaster — one that could happen on any given day in this nation.

Of course, variables would determine the danger posed in such a situation. The experts note that radioactive material dissipates as it travels away from its source. And some radioactive materials are more hazardous for longer periods of time than others. Those variables and more would determine the severity of any particular nuclear accident.

But the simple fact remains that the American public — and other populations around the world — is largely unaware of the dangers posed by the nuclear industry and suggested methods for responding to particular kinds of disasters.

What medications help counteract the effects of exposure to radiation? What materials provide the best shelter from radioactive particles? How long must one remain in shelter before it's safe to emerge? Who can the general public turn to for help and assistance in event of an accident?

Spokesmen contend that the nuclear power industry in the United States is much safer than that in other countries and insist that the Chernobyl experience will not be repeated in this country. Let's hope not, but their assurances have to be weighed against the reality that there are now 98 nuclear reactors operating in this country and over 30 more are now under construction. The potential for disaster exists and that fact cannot be disputed. U.S. reactors may be safer than the uncontained reactors at Chernobyl, but to fail to recognize the potential for disaster would be unconscionable.

The Chernobyl disaster should serve as a warning to officials and the public in general that a tightrope is being walked. At the very least what is needed is widespread information detailing the dangers associated with nuclear power and what to do in case of an emergency. There are Civil Defense plans for attacks against the United States, but do you know what they recommend? Is anything available for a domestic nuclear disaster? Those are crucial questions and the answers to them and others are needed quickly.

It would be ludicrous to even think of backing away from the use of nuclear power, but to use that power without utilizing the most advanced equipment and safety procedures, and without the public being informed of how to respond to the inevitable future problems, is flirting with disaster.

As the Chernobyl disaster confirmed, mankind is using nuclear power but he may not be using it intelligently.

Another View: Past the rhetoric

What a difference a little persuasion can make. It was just two years ago, at the economic summit meeting in Bonn, that the Western allies couldn't bring themselves to pledge a hard-hitting stance against terrorism. For instance, on the subject of banning weapons shipments to terrorist states, all they could muster then was a declaration that some countries wanted to consider such bans.

But at the just-concluded meetings in Tokyo, Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany joined the United States in an anti-terrorism statement that suggests that our allies have come a long way in finally understanding the situation. They denounced "blatant and cynical government use of terrorism," and promised to ban the export of arms to terrorist states, advocated closing or limiting diplomatic missions of nations that support terrorism, will impose tighter immigration and visa requirements on diplomats suspected of terrorist activity and stepped up extradition procedures for suspected terrorists.

While the statement does not endorse last month's bombing raid on Libya, it condemns Col. Moammar Khadafy's government directly as a sponsor of terrorism. And while it avoids threats of military action, it declares that "terrorism must be fought effectively through determined, tenacious, discreet and patient action combining national measures and international cooperation."

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz certainly professed to be highly satisfied with the agreement, declaring that it amounted to a message to Col. Khadafy that, "You've had it, pal."

It might have been a good deal stronger if France's foreign minister, Jean-Bernard Raimond, had not felt it necessary to reiterate France's policy of not allowing U.S. warplanes to fly over its territory en route to military strikes against Libya. Never mind such "ancient history" as how U.S. forces rallied to the aid of France in two world wars; Mr. Raimond's invoking of diplomatic niceties in forbidding U.S. overflights suggests that France's heart really isn't in the war on terrorism.

Certainly, its commitment falls far short of that of Great Britain, whose prime minister, Margaret Thatcher, once again backed the United States position to the hilt after taking considerable political heat for having permitted U.S. bombers to take off from British bases for the Libyan raids. She is said to have firmly supported President Reagan's plea to the summit leaders "to consider an attack on one as an attack on all."

There's a good deal of rhetoric in the summit partners' statement on terrorism. But there's also considerable meat in the form of specific pledges to implement international cooperation, the only strategy that offers real hope of success against the shadowy forces so eager to murder the innocent to achieve their goals.

But to law enforcement people, the ability of the underworld to obtain state-of-the-art high technology is no joke; it has cost them too much money and frustration.

Jack Anderson

The Drug Enforcement Administration has been especially plagued by electronic countermeasures employed by dope smugglers, who have millions to spend on the fanciest equipment available. An agency report listing several examples of the problem, prepared more than a year ago but never released, was obtained by our associate Donald Goldberg. Here are some of the cases it describes:

— Operation Southern Comfort was conducted in 1983 with members of the Gambino Mafia family in Florida and Georgia as the targets. Federal agents got a court order allowing them to "bug" a residence in Fort Lauderdale. But Gambino gang members had hired a retired New York City detective to "electronically sweep their homes for electronic eavesdropping equipment on a weekly basis."

The federal tap was discovered, and the drug agency had to buy additional equipment to pursue the investigation, which ultimately led to at least one arrest.

— In Chicago, officials blame sophisticated electronic gear for hindering two recent investigations, the report states. In one, "an individual known to have organized crime connections has been monitoring DEA radio communications and contacting the violators, advising them that they are targets of a DEA investigation."

The agency has some taped conversations between undercover agents and this underworld "Paul Revere," which confirmed his activities.

— In a 1981 New York case, the lawmen lucked out. "One Willard Williams, a notorious repetitive drug offender linked with the major drug organization of Frank Mathews and Louis Curillo" was monitored by a court-sanctioned telephone tap in two rooms of his apartment. Based on the information obtained, drug agents got a search warrant and discovered a telephone analyzer capable of detecting phone taps, as well as a radio frequency detector that could spot body transmitters.

"Fortunately," the report noted, "the defendant ... approached a DEA undercover officer to check his telephone." And presumably the agent wasn't wearing a body transmitter.

— In Detroit in 1984, DEA agents arrested several suspects in the very act of monitoring the agency's internal radio communications on a Bearcat 210 scanner.

— In a Florida investigation that is still continuing, suspected drug smugglers used a device enabling them to compose messages in a "digital data format," which are then transmitted over telephone lines in "bursts" that are difficult to detect. The equipment can also be used from an aircraft, and has a 12-digit access code that effectively prevents the cops from listening in.

"This system is being utilized by a drug organization to ensure security over phone lines and radio communication links when conducting various narcotics transactions," the report explains.

The drug agency report takes a slam at the press, stating that "incidents of the monitoring of DEA's radio frequencies by the news media have been a cause of alarm." The report complains that "in their quest to gather the news, the press has interfered with ongoing investigations, risking injury to agents and the news media."

But sometimes the feds ask for trouble by making eavesdropping by outsiders too easy. In 1984, a Los Angeles area professor and a graduate student listened in and taped sensitive radio communications of several agencies, including the DEA. They used a $300 scanner from Radio Shack.

INTELLIGENCE DIGEST: The People's Republic of China is quietly making moves to establish itself as an influential presence in the Middle East. Envoys have been establishing relations with several Arab leaders, and they point proudly to the improved conditions for Moslems in China, who are allowed much more freedom since the brutal repression of the Cultural Revolution.

— With true Gallic pique over allied criticism of the French government's sordid role in the fatal bombing of the anti-nuclear ship Rainbow Warrior, French leaders are secretly threatening to pull out of "Totem," the espionage information exchange with the United States, Britain, West Germany and Italy.

— German leaders never quite give up hope of an eventual reunion of their country's East and West. Now we're told that West Berlin officials are hoping East Berliners will participate in a major cooperative celebration this year: Berlin's 750th anniversary.

EVANS & NOVAK
Chernobyl victims may disappear

WASHINGTON — Top-secret White House information strongly hints that many of the estimated 40,000 Russians evacuated — 36 hours late — from the nuclear power town of Chernobyl will die of radiation exposure.

Rowland Evans

That horrible possibility, not planned now to be made public by the U.S. government, results from the long gap between the nuclear explosion — just after midnight Saturday — and the beginning of evacuation a day and a half later. One Soviet specialist here believes the radiation victims will be shipped to remote towns to die forgotten and unknown.

Robert Novak

A footnote: In the 1950s, U.S. intelligence reported that a Soviet nuclear accident in the Sverdlovsk region of Siberia was never made public. Soon afterwards, Soviet maps suddenly wiped out the existence of 30 villages — presumably plowed under.

HART-NUNN IN '88?

Sen. Gary Hart, early front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, raised speculation that he was looking South for a running mate when he went out of his way to praise Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia in a closed-door party caucus.

Nunn, ranking Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee, had just presented an explanation of the committee's military reform bill about to come up in the Senate. It was then that Hart, a senior member of Armed Services, took the floor to raise some eyebrows.

Hart not only effusively praised Nunn but suggested that he rather than the Republican committee chairman, Sen. Barry Goldwater, should get the credit for the bill. To politically-attuned senators, that sounded like Hart seeking Southern exposure and maybe an '88 running mate.

MISSING LIBYA

Under orders from the top, the Pentagon is holding up detailed showing of targets and damages in the attack against Libya by the U.S. Air Force and Navy carrier aircraft because so many targets were missed.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has not given any order fobbidding full publicity for "damage assessments." But a conscious effort has been made not to promote inquiries on it and to keep whatever is put out low-key. Although many targets were struck, such key objectives as the military airfield, some command centers and selected barracks areas were largely missed.

Long-flying F-111 bombers that were forced more than a thousand miles out of their way by French refusal to grant overflight rights performed worse than the Navy carrier aircraft. Critics of military preparedness have told the White House that, despite claims to the contrary, the raid did not show the U.S. has solved technical equipment problems.

KHADAFY'S FRIEND DAN

While House Democrats were grumbling that administration spokesmen were trying to stir anti-Sandinista sentiment by linking Daniel Ortega with Moammar Khadafy, the Nicaraguan president was sending "sentiments of solidarity" to the Libyan dictator.

Chris Matthews, assistant to Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, had suggested that administration spokesmen had established the Ortega-Khadafy link to try turning American public opinion in support of Contra aid. While O'Neill has led a long fight against such aid, he instantly endorsed the bombing of Tripoli.

But an April 18 message from Ortega, addressing Khadafy as "my brother," came to light last week and suggests the connection is not the invention of Reagan propagandists. "Given the brutal terrorist action launched by the U.S. government ...," said the Nicaraguan, "I wish to send sentiments of soldiarity ...." Simultaneously, the Sandinistas staged pro-Khadafy demonstrations throughout Nicaragua.

BUSH BASH

On hand in addition to Brady were pollster Robert Teeter, political consultant Lee Atwater and chief of staff Craig Fuller. Their presence raised speculation in Washington political circles of an emergency meeting to end the rash of political blunders afflicting Bush. But Atwater denied it, insisting to us: "We didn't even talk politics."

A footnote: No sooner had Atwater returned to Washington than he faced a mini-crisis caused by Bush's cancellation of a speaking engagement at the right-to-life national convention in Denver June 12. Atwater soothed ruffled feathers by promising a private meeting with Bush, and the right-to-life officials declared they were not upset.

CHARLEY REESE
Soviets fear admission of truth

The Soviet Union's stonewalling and lying about the nuclear reactor catastrophe reminds me of a conversation I once had with an attorney.

Charley Reese

This brilliant trial lawyer had just won an enormous fee for engineering a miscarriage of justice by getting a client acquitted on a federal tax rap.

I asked the attorney if he had put his client on the stand.

"Heck, no," he said. "He would lie even when it was in his own best interest to tell the truth."

Anyone who has bothered to study the Soviet Union was, of course, not surprised at all that the Soviet government would lie about the nuclear accident (only two killed, they said) and show no concern whatsoever for the lives and health of other people. The Soviet government routinely lies about the most banal of subjects and routinely kills or imprisons people who have the audacity to oppose it.

The people who are disconcerted by this latest example of Soviet duplicity and callousness are American liberals. One remarked in obvious distress that if the Soviets would lie about a reactor accident, then how could we trust them on an arms control agreement. I felt like saying, "Ah, hah!"

It's always been obvious to realists that you cannot trust the Soviets on an arms control treaty. They don't even live up to the International Postal Union Agreement, for heaven's sake. Their record of broken agreements would earn them a place in the Guinness Book of Records if the book had a category for perfidy.

Pondering the thought processes of the modern liberal mind has become something of a hobby for me. After much observation and thought, I have a new theory why otherwise intelligent and well-meaning people strain so hard to avoid facing the reality of the Soviet Union.

It's not the truth about the Soviet Union they fear, it's the consequences of admitting the truth. You see, if they admit that the Soviet government is indeed a treacherous, murderous, expansionist gangster government like the Nazis, then a lot of cherished liberal notions fall to pieces.

They would have to admit, for example, that people they despise like Defense Secretary Cap Weinberger and assorted military leaders are right: that we had better make darn sure our deterrent is in good working order.

They would have to admit the folly of pursuing arms control agreements with a government that cannot be trusted to tell the truth even about Soviet egg production.

They would have to take a very hard look at the fashionable revisionists who have blamed the Cold War on Americans.

Worse, they would have to admit that instead of a world in which all conflicts are merely the result of misunderstandings and therefore amenable to negotiations, the world in reality is a dangerous place in which both freedom and human life are threatened by an evil empire that much prefers force to reason as a means of achieving its political objectives.

I think it is this world view that American liberals strive so valiantly to avoid facing. Nobody, least of all comfortable upper middle class Americans, likes to envision the possibility of having to risk death, pain, injury, fire and destruction just to survive. Yet that becomes a real possibility once the reality of the Soviet government is admitted. We may well indeed reach that point where our choice is surrender or war.

If you buy Dr. Karl Menninger's theory, a deliberate turning away from reality is a form of mental illness. When a person, he believes, cannot cope with the reality of his situation, he creates a new reality as a temporary survival mechanism.

Being a hunter, however, I can tell you that whether a rattlesnake tries to bite you is not determined by what you believe the nature of the rattlesnake to be, but by the reality of what the rattlesnake is.

Khadafy unable to muster much Arab support

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press

Khadafy

CAIRO, Egypt — Nearly a month after the U.S. bombing raid on Libya, Col. Moammar Khadafy is increasingly isolated diplomatically, unable to muster credible support from fellow Arabs or his European trading partners.

Appeals from Khadafy, the Libyan leader, to the Arabs to "liquidate" American interests in the Middle East following the April 15 air raids on Tripoli and Benghazi have fallen on deaf ears.

No major Arab leader has visited the Libyan capital of Tripoli since the attack to show solidarity with the mercurial Khadafy, and Libyan efforts to organize an Arab summit to condemn Washington broke down this month.

The 12-member European Common Market, which had $10 billion in trade with Libya last year, agreed to curtail the number of Libyan diplomats in the capitals of its member countries and make it less attractive to sell certain agricultural products to Libya.

At this month's Tokyo economic summit, President Reagan convinced leaders of Britain, France, Japan, Canada, West Germany and Italy to cite Libya as a supporter of terrorism and agree to restrict arms sales and diplomatic contacts with the Khadafy regime.

The Reagan administration said the bombing raid was in retaliation for Libyan-supported terrorism.

Even the Soviet bloc, which condemned the raids, has been cautious in its support for Khadafy. Western diplomats as well as Arab and Eastern bloc sources, all speaking on the condition of anonymity, say the Kremlin was alarmed over the poor air defense mustered by the Libyans.

An Analysis

The sources also say the Soviets are concerned over the state of the Libyan economy, severely strained by the fall in oil prices.

Although Arab governments were quick to condemn the U.S. air raids, most showed little interest in lining up with Khadafy against a superpower with whom many maintain economic, political and military links.

Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and other Arab countries accepted Khadafy's call for a summit on condition that the agenda also include Libyan and Syrian support for non-Arab Iran in its war with Arab Iraq.

When Libya balked, the summit fell through. All the Libyans could do was rail against fellow Arabs for their failure to unite against the threat of what Tripoli called "U.S. imperialism."

Arab sources, requesting anonymity, say Syria, Libya's principal Arab ally, has provided some pilots and air defense personnel to the Libyans but is hardly in a position to do more.

The Syrians are bogged down in the Lebanese civil war, face the Israeli military presence in the Golan Heights and have a non-military foreign debt estimated at $3 billion.

Faced with diplomatic problems among the Arabs and Western Europeans, Khadafy has threatened to turn to the Soviet bloc for help. Libya's state-run media have said the country may join the Moscow-led Warsaw Pact or offer naval facilities to the Soviet fleet to counter U.S. pressure.

But Western diplomats in Tripoli, speaking last month on the condition of anonymity, said they believe Moscow will be slow to respond to Khadafy's overtures.

"The Soviets are trying to cultivate moderate countries in the (Persian) Gulf," said one diplomat. "That's a bigger prize for them, and they will want to make sure their support for Khadafy does not threaten this strategy."

Despite verbal support for Khadafy, the Soviets have in recent months been cautious in their approach to the Libyan leader.

During a visit to Moscow in September, Khadafy failed to win Kremlin agreement for increased arms sales and came away without a treaty of peace and friendship such as the Soviets have signed with Syria and South Yemen.

The Soviets pressed him to repay a $2 million debt but agreed to long-term economic cooperation to improve the North African country's lagging economy.

Following the U.S. raid, Eastern bloc sources in Tripoli said the Soviets were pressing Khadafy to conduct a thorough investigation into his military's poor performance against American warplanes before they would pour more money into Libya's defenses.

Tunisian admits he committed terrorist acts

NANCY, France (AP) — Police sources said today a Tunisian arrested after a domestic quarrel has admitted to carrying out terrorist attacks, including store bombings in Paris and London that killed one person and injured 16.

Habib Maamar, 25, a native of Bizerte, Tunisia, was arrested Friday after his girlfriend went to police complaining that he had beaten her. Further investigation linked Maamar to terrorist activities, the sources said.

The sources, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said that in questioning overnight, Maamar admitted to the Feb. 23, 1985 bombing of the Marks & Spencer store in Paris, in which one person died and 14 were injured, and the December 1983 bombing of the company's London store, in which two people were slightly injured.

The sources said Maamar also furnished police with the name of his contact in Baghdad, Iraq, a man identified as Abu Ibrahim, who they said appeared to be an official of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

According to the sources, Abu Ibrahim gave Maamar his orders and explosives.

The sources said Maamar also acknowledged responsibility for the August 21, 1984 bombing attack on the Israeli Leumi Bank in Paris, which caused only material damage, as well as an attempt on an El Al counter in London. The sources gave no date or other details on the El Al affair.

The sources said several other people were being interrogated in the case, including his Algerian girlfriend and a French woman.

In the Paris Marks & Spencer bombing, the explosion occurred near the rear entrance of the store, a British chain specializing in clothes and food. An employee died about five hours after being injured.

The bomb was described as a home-made device containing a little more than two pounds of explosives. It was the third attack on the same store since 1976. The two previous blasts caused damage, but no injuries.

Maamar has lived illegally in the Nancy region for several years, the sources said.

He was held over the weekend on charges of violating French immigration laws and breaking into the home of his girlfriend while investigators continued to question him about any involvement in terrorist activities.

Italy to aid Lampedusa tourism

LAMPEDUSA, Italy (AP) — The Italian government has promised to try to help lure tourists back to this tiny Mediterranean island, the target last month of two Libyan missiles.

Minister of Tourism Lelio Lagorio, visiting here Sunday, promised "immediate measures" to revive tourism, which along with fishing is Lampedusa's main source of revenue.

Officials say the number of visitors to Lampedusa has dropped sharply since the April 15 attack in which navy boats from Libya — 155 miles away — fired two missiles at the island hours after U.S. warplanes bombed the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi.

The missiles fell harmlessly in the water short of their target, a U.S. Coast Guard radar station.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy on Friday again provoked a fearful response from island residents when he was reported to have said, "We will have peace with the island of Lampedusa only if the Americans withdraw."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Ex-member of East German party emigrates to West

BERLIN (AP) — Hermann von Berg, a former ranking member of East Gemany's Communist Party who was stripped of power and then officially rehabilitated, emigrated to West Germany on Sunday, officials said.

Berg, an economics expert who represented East Germany in trade negotiations with West Germany in the 1960s and early 1970s, left East Berlin by train early Sunday and traveled to Cologne, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He was stripped of his positions in the Communisty Party and the Economics Ministry in 1978 and jailed for three months on suspicion of anti-state activity.

Berg, 53, later was rehabilitated, but again fell out of favor in the early 1980s when authorities suspected he gave unauthorized information to Spiegel, a West German news magazine.

He became increasingly critical of East Germany's government and resigned from the Communist Party on Aug. 5, 1985, and applied for permission to emigrate.

Counterfeit bills discovered

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Security agents have discovered a number of counterfeit $50 bills circulating in northern Mexico and arrested an American soldier who was trying to pay for a purchase at a store here with one of the fake bills, the newspaper Excelsior reported Sunday.

The newspaper identified the arrested soldier only as Richard Dallin. It said that, when questioned by police, Dallin claimed he got the bill when he cashed a check at the Air Defense Credit Union in El Paso, Texas, across the Rio Grande from this city.

The newspaper quoted Oscar Valle, commander of the local security police detachment, as saying the fake bills "were astoundingly well falsified."

Freight train hits bus

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A freight train hit a bus at a rail crossing in the East Java capital of Surabaya, killing at least 10 people and injuring five others, the newspaper Kompas reported today.

The report said all the victims were passengers of the bus, which was hit by the train Saturday evening and dragged for more than 30 yards.

Tutu: South Africa press 'sells its soul' for profits

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Bishop Desmond Tutu today said most white-owned newspapers in South Africa try to shield white readers from the realities of the conflict over apartheid in order to make money.

The South African press "has sold its soul in exchange for immediate realizable advantages, mainly financial ones, which go hand-in-glove with popularity in the white community," Tutu said.

The black Anglican bishop of Johannesburg, a leading campaigner for black rights and the 1984 winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, made his remarks at the opening of the general assembly of the International Press Institute, a London-based organization that seeks to promote press freedom.

More than 300 editors, publishers and broadcasters from the West and the Third World have gathered for three days of discussions on issues of news coverage around the world.

Tutu referred to South Africa's two English-language and two Afrikaans-language newspaper groups, all independently owned, and to the South African Broadcasting Corp., which he described as "a lickspittle sycophant of the government."

On the whole, Tutu said, the South African press "is a great deal freer than in most other parts of the African continent," and has "often been a vigorous champion of human rights."

But he said this was a "deliberately cultivated aberration by the South African authorities, who have wanted the outside world to believe that things were not so bad in South Africa."

Tutu said news media have failed in a larger task — to bridge the gap in understanding between the 5 million whites and 24 million blacks in a deeply divided society.

"Where there is such a serious breakdown in communications between two communities, a far heavier responsibility then lies with the media to provide the means of that much-needed communication, more so than in normal societies," he said.

He said a few newspapers that tried to cover black views and shake whites out of their complacency, including the Rand Daily Mail, Sunday Express and the Cape Times, have either stopped publishing or are in danger of closing.

Tutu said Afrikaans-language newspapers "make no bones about being propaganda agents for the government," and said the South African Broadcasting Corp. "would not know what to do with the truth if it stared it in the face." English-language newspapers, he said, "should be our salvation" but "have come to believe that white sectional interests are somehow coterminous with the broader national interests."

Tutu said that the newspapers "fear that, if they consistently told whites in an unambiguous way that the problem was really not out there but very much here in South Africa, they would put paid to their chances of succeeding financially."

The System's Dream Pill combines the natural substances L-arginine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Dr. Robert Harris, a specialist in nutritional medicine in Stafford Springs, Connecticut, was recently quoted as explaining: "Growth Hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail."

"Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body 'think' it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat [their favorite foods] — and still be thin and wiry."

Life Extension Authors Confirm Results

Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. They discovered the weight-loss effects by accident. Sandy fell and broke her foot and started taking L-arginine because of its well-known healing qualities. Much to her amazement Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

Highs could reach mid-90s

From Staff and Wire Reports

Local temperatures are warming up as summer approaches, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be fair with an expected low temperature in the mid-60s. Winds will be from the southwest at 10 to 15 mph.

Tuesday will be partly cloudy with a high temperature in the mid-90s and southwesterly winds at 10 to 20 mph.

The highest temperature ever recorded for today's date was 95 degrees set in 1984. A record low of 41 degrees was recorded in 1931.

STATE

A light wind and tropical moisture combined to form dense fog across parts of the Gulf coastal waters this morning, cutting visibility to a half-mile at Beaumont and zero at Corpus Christi.

Travelers advisories were posted for parts of the middle and upper coast, according to the National Weather Service. Otherwise, clouds blanketed the south, while high clouds were visible elsewhere.

In the forecast for North Texas, skies should be clear to partly cloudy through Tuesday with a slight chance of thunderstorms. Highs should be in the 90s and lows in the upper 60s.

South Texas should be partly cloudy and warm through Tuesday with highs in the 80s and 90s and lows in the 60s and 70s.

West Texas should have widely scattered evening thunderstorms in the Panhandle. Otherwise, it should be fair with lows mostly in the 50s and 60s and highs in the 90s to near 102 in the Big Bend valleys.

NATION

Rain spread from northern Michigan across eastern Wisconsin, Indiana, central Kentucky and Tennessee and was scattered along the northern Pacific Coast.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms from the lower Ohio Valley across the Tennessee Valley and from North Carolina across Georgia and eastern Alabama; rain scattered along the New England coast and from Minnesota across southeastern South Dakota into northern Nebraska; and rain across the Pacific Northwest.

DALLAS — Andy Bean turned back the last-gasp challenge of Mark Wiebe for a one-stroke victory Sunday in the Byron Nelson Classic. Bean acquired his second title of the season and the 11th of his 11-year PGA Tour career with a closing round of 68 and a 269 total, 11 under par on the new TPC course at Las Colinas.

The winners' share of $108,000 from the total purse of $600,000 also lifted the 6-foot-4, 230-pound Bean from fourth to first on the year's money-winning list at $380,304... Page 6B.

SAN ANTONIO — Bruce Crampton dropped a crucial 25-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole Sunday en route to a two-stroke victory over Bob Charles in the Benson & Hedges PGA Seniors. Crampton carded a final round four-under-par 68 for a 54-hole total of 202, 14 under par. Charles, the second-round leader, closed with a 72 and finished at 204, after missing two short par-saving putts over the closing holes...

SUFFOLK, Va. — Muffin Spencer-Devlin came out of the pack Sunday to fire a 3-under par 69 and win the LPGA-Golden Virginia Bank Classic. The 32-year-old finished with a 216 for the 54-hole tournament over the 6,184-yard, Sleepy Hole Golf Course. She won $37,500 in registering her second LPGA Tour victory...

Tennis

HOUSTON — Second-seeded Kathy Rinaldi won a set but Chris Evert Lloyd charged back for a 6-4, 2-6, 6-4 win in the Virginia Slims of Houston tennis tournament. "I can't stand to lose to 18-year-olds, I guess that's what keeps me going," Lloyd said. "When you're 18, you recover quicker than at 31."

"I was a little tired but I lasted so that's the important thing." Rinaldi now has lost 14 of 15 sets to Lloyd...

HAMPTON, Ga. — Bill Elliott and Ford Thunderbird ran away from the field Sunday to win the $500,000, 126-mile The Winston and claim the richest first-place prize in stock car history. Elliott averaged 169.123 mph and gained $200,000 for his 2.85-second victory over Dale Earnhardt's Chevrolet. Midland's Bobby Hillin took third place to win $30,000.

Bucks eliminate 76ers, 113-112

MILWAUKEE (AP) — With the Philadelphia jinx now out of the way, the Milwaukee Bucks will seek to work some magic in the next round of the playoffs against the NBA's winningest team.

But the Bucks have yet to succeed this season against the Boston Celtics, who finished with a 67-15 record and defeated Milwaukee in all five regular-season meetings.

Still, Milwaukee forward Terry Cummings is thinking positively.

"We're going to go in there expecting to win. We can't afford to have any emotional letdowns," Cummings said after scoring 27 points in the Bucks' 113-112 victory over the 76ers Sunday to advance to the Eastern Conference finals. "It's the only way to think. You can't go in there thinking otherwise."

Boston should be well-rested for Tuesday's Game 1 in the Boston Garden after it eliminated Atlanta in Game 5 of their series last Tuesday. The Bucks, however, endured a bruising seven-game series with Philadelphia and guard Sidney Moncrief, the soul of the team, is still hobbling on an injured left heel.

The Bucks won all three games against Philadelphia when Moncrief played and managed just one victory without him.

"It's still day to day," Moncrief, who scored 23 points in 35 minutes Sunday, said of his status for the Boston series. "I didn't reinjure it playing (Sunday). That's a positive sign."

"We're a little bruised up," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said, "But we won't hurt as much (today) as we would have if we had lost."

But Moncrief said it will be difficult to erase the memory of losing four of five playoff matchup with Philadelphia, including last year's four-game sweep.

"It's in the past. All we can deal with is 1986," he said. "But I don't think people are going to forget the years prior to 1986."

Although Cummings said the jinx didn't apply to this year's squad — "this team is different" — he admitted the win was sweet.

"I think it's something our team will relish for many years to come," he said.

"I've been waiting four years for it to happen," Milwaukee forward Paul Pressey added.

Nelson said Sunday's victory was the "nicest win I ever had" because the Bucks came out on top of an emotional, hard-fought series.

"You can put on top of that our beating Philly and winning the seventh game of a seven-game series for the first time," Nelson said.

Julius Erving took the 76ers' last shot, a short jumper with three seconds remaining, but missed. Players from both teams were scrambling for the ball as time ran out.

"I had the open shot and it was not a bad shot to have in that situation," Erving, who scored 17 points, said. "It was a shot that we would ask for if we were in that situation again."

Cummings, who played most of the game with a dislocated finger on his left hand, said the first thing he did after Erving's shot was to make sure Charles Barkley didn't get the rebound. Barkley had 18 points and 12 rebounds, well below his playoff averages of 25.6 and 16.1.

Tough Out

Chicago White Sox runner Jerry Hairston bowls over Cleveland Indians catcher Chris Bando, but is still out at the plate on an attempt to score from second on a base hit. The White Sox beat the Indians to sweep the series and keep Manager Joe LaRussa on the job.

TULSA— Midland's Angels moved into first place in the Texas League West Division by sweeping a doubleheader over the Tulsa Drillers here Sunday afternoon, 7-3 and 4-3.

In the opener, Sherman Corbett pitched a two-hitter in a route-going performance while James Randall knocked in four runs, hitting his sixth homer of the season, and Mike Brady belted his third homer of the year.

In the nightcap, Vance Lovelace and Terry Clark combined for a six-hitter with Clark getting the win on 2 2/3 innings of one-hit relief.

Randall again homred for the Angels while Glenn Walker and Billie Merrifield each had three hits.

For the day, Randall went 4-for-6 with six rbi. Mark McLemore added to his league leading stolen base total with three in the first game and two more in ther second.

The Angels and Drillers meet again today at 7:30 p.m. and finish the series Tuesday.

Beaumont dropped its sixth straight game and second consecutive contest in the late innings, falling 4-2 in 10 innings to the Shreveport Captains in a Texas League baseball game Sunday night.

The Gators are now 16-17 for the season and Shreveport is 18-13.

"We won a few like this in San Antonio," Smith said, "and it's now coming back to haunt us. Hopefully, this is the end of it. Of course, our players can't get down but it's still early in the year. Our players will come back."

In other Texas League action Sunday, San Antonio split its doubleheader against Jackson 4-3 and 2-4.

Shreveport itself hasn't exactly been enjoying good times: It had lost seven games before winning, and Greg Litton was celebrating the good times Sunday. His 10th-inning single drove home Mike Jones and Mackey Sasser in lifting the Captains to the victory.

Litton slapped a slider from Rusty Ford off the end of his bat to bring home Jones and Sasser, who doubled and walked respectively.

In the bottom of the 10th, Randy Byers doubled and Shane Mack, who reached on an error, stood on third base. But for the second straight game, Steve Lubratich could not bring in the runs as he took a called third strike.

Trivia brain tickler for 2000

Sometime in the future, it will be a Trivia brain-tickler, like against whom did Roger Maris hit No. 61 and who did Hank Aaron take out of the park for No. 715?

What college confessed its sins and threw itself on the mercy of the NCAA?

Perhaps Texas Christian University deserved everything it got. According to the list of violations disclosed by the NCAA, those misguided alumni left no sin unturned in their zeal.

One recruit allegedly was stashed away in a motel room for safe-keeping until signing time and provided companionship to keep him from getting restless.

TCU's transgressions stretched from 1979 to 1986, at least the ones they owned up to, and the Frogs during that time were never big winners.

It may be that the NCAA's punishment was as much for TCU's lack of success, even though it cheated.

Of course, TCU's failure to make better use of its ill-gotten talent could also mean that even with all of its underhanded dealings, it still wasn't competing on the same level for the Blue Chips as college football's perennial success stories.

If TCU, a long time have-not that was just beginning to turn its program around, was this evil, what about those who were winners? To what lengths did they go to stay on top?

We'll never know. Even the NCAA admitted that without TCU's wholehearted cooperation, it would never have known the extent of the Frogs guilt. It just doesn't have the investigative force to uncover shady recruiting tactics, unless someone happens to supply the information, possibly in an attempt to get even.

Over the years, recruiters at more experienced schools apparently have learned to be discreet. They launder the evidence so that it can't be tracked down and traced to the culprit. It's only a clumsy neophyte who blows the cover and gets a school in trouble. And as you may have guessed, the Frogs Boosters have more than their share of unsophisticated, in the ways of recruiting, country boys who were carried away by their eagerness to help reestablish the program.

However, in reeling under the punishment, TCU supporters must be wondering if this were one of the TV favorites, the powers who get things done on and off the field, if the punishment would have been as severe.

Two years ago, TCU was the Cinderella story of the SWC, a team which had caught the imagination of the nation. Welcome back Sammy Baugh, Davey O'Brien, Bob Lilly, Jim Swink. Happy days are here again. Fort Worth was astir with interest.

True, a late season swoon in 1984 prevented the Frogs from making it back all the way, but fans were anxious to see what the UNBEElievable Jim Wacker could do in 1985.

Then came the disclosures of salaried players and the dismissals. Instead of a triumphant return, 1985 was a disaster.

Now, with the NCAA punishments, who knows when the Frogs will get back, or whether Wacker will still be around when it happens.

What really hurts is that the guys doing time are the kids who didn't draw a paycheck. The others, those good enough, are off to the pros where they belonged all the time.

Rose paces slumping Reds against Gooden

Associated Press

Pete Rose again led the Cincinnati Reds by example, and again he did it the hard way.

Rose, the Reds' player-manager, hit a three-run single in the second inning Sunday that sent Cincinnati to a 3-2 victory over Dwight Gooden and the New York Mets.

Gooden, the 1985 National League Cy Young winner, absorbed his first loss of the season as Cincinnati broke the Mets' seven-game winning streak.

"I can't ever remember having a three-run single," Rose, baseball's all-time hit leader, said.

Gooden, 5-1, lasted just five innings, giving up eight hits.

"I made a lot of mistakes with my location," Gooden said. "It was one of those days when you go out there against a team that's struggling and you don't want to lose to them."

The victory was just the third in 19 games for Cincinnati and broke a three-game losing streak. Prior to the game, Rose told his players to discuss the problems in a team meeting, minus him and all other front-office personnel.

Rangers make AL history

Sweep of Yankees first for Texas

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers swept a doubleheader from the New York Yankees for the first time in the team's history Sunday, but Manager Bobby Valentine had words of caution for his team.

The Rangers won the first game 6-3 and exploded in the second game for 13 hits to win 9-1.

"We're a good team that's starting to play like a team," Valentine said. "We came back after a tough loss (4-3 Saturday night) and beat a good team. But, by the same token, we're not the kind of team that can rest on our laurels."

The Rangers had many hitting stars, but the brightest was rookie Pete Incaviglia, who went 4-for-7 for the afternoon, including a major league-record-tying two doubles in the seven-run fourth inning that broke open the second game. With hits in both games, Incaviglia extended his hitting streak to nine straight games and is batting .419 during the streak.

"I am starting to swing it better," said Incaviglia, who raised his average to .242. "I feel more comfortable."

Valentine said it was just a matter of Incaviglia, who up to 11 games ago was batting .127, going back to what got him to the majors.

"It was a matter of getting back to basics," Valentine said. "We didn't want to overcoach. We went in one day and got out the old college films and showed them to him. We got him to go back to being Pete."

Yankees Manager Lou Pinella was just glad the day was over.

"It's been a long afternoon," he said. "It's hot, we've been here four days and it seems like two weeks. We certainly didn't play well. They swung the bats and hit the ball, and we didn't score any runs."

Oddibe McDowell's two-run homer in the first game led the Rangers to a 6-3 victory. In the second game, Jose Guzman won for the first time since opening day.

In breaking a personal five-game losing streak, Guzman, 2-5, struck out six and walked only one in seven innings. Ricky Wright and Mitch Williams finished up for Texas as the Rangers swept a doubleheader from the Yankees for the first time in their history.

Loser Bob Tewksbury, 3-2, lasted only 3 13 innings in the second game and gave up eight hits.

The Yankees scored first in the second game on Mike Easler's home run to open the second inning. It was Easler's second home run of the season.

The Rangers tied it in the bottom of the inning on Tom Paciorek's RBI single.

The Rangers then broke open the game with seven runs in the fourth on eight hits. Seven Texas players had hits, with Pete Incaviglia getting two doubles to tie a major league record. McDowell, Pete O'Brien, Incaviglia, Larry Parrish, Porter, Paciorek and Curtis Wilkerson all scored in the inning.

Parrish added his sixth home run of the season to lead off the fifth to give the Rangers a 9-1 lead.

In the first game, winner Mike Mason, 2-0, scattered five hits and struck out three in 6 13 innings. Joe Niekro, 4-1, gave up nine hits in six innings to take his first loss of the season.

Greg Harris came on in relief to record his sixth save.

The Yankees took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on an RBI double by Dale Berra. The Rangers tied the game in the third when Scott Fletcher tripled and scored after second baseman Willie Randolph's relay throw to third bounced into the Yankees' dugout.

New York went ahead 3-1 in the fourth on a two-run single by Berra, but the Rangers came back to tie in their half of the inning. Pete O'Brien led off with a double and moved to third on a single by Incaviglia. Gary Ward then singled home O'Brien and moved Incaviglia to third. Incaviglia scored when catcher Butch Wynegar's throw to second trying to catch Ward stealing bounced into center field.

Celtics, 76ers come out winners in lottery

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD

NEW YORK (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers and Boston Celtics came out the winners over the NBA have-nots in the league's lottery Sunday, winning the first two picks in the June 17 draft.

The two archrivals were the last two teams to have their logos picked out of sealed envelopes at the NBA lottery, and when the last envelope was opened, it was the 76ers who won the right to pick first.

Following Philadelphia and Boston were the four teams in the lottery who did not make the playoffs — Golden State, Indiana, New York and Phoenix, respectively. Dallas, a third playoff team, will pick seventh, and Cleveland will choose eighth.

Williams, who sat next to Celtics President Red Auerbach as the seven lottery envelopes were opened, said both the 76ers and Boston were winners in the lottery.

"Boston will get a very good player, and with the kind of team they have, that's not good news for the rest of us," Williams said. "Everything Red touches seems to come out right."

The NBA lottery is designed to give each of the league's seven non-playoff teams a chance at the No. 1 pick in the draft, but one of those teams, the Los Angeles Clippers, traded their 1986 first-round choice to the 76ers in 1979 in exchange for Joe Bryant. Philadelphia was 54-28 this season, fourth-best record in the NBA.

Boston, whose 67-15 mark was the best in the league, made a trade with Seattle in 1984, giving the Celtics an open door to the lottery.

Last year, when New York won the lottery, the Knicks' pick of Patrick Ewing was a foregone conclusion since he was considered the dominant center everyone wanted. In 1986, however, there is considerable doubt about who the 76ers will take.

"We've got a month to figure it out," Williams said when asked who he would pick. "We need size and we also have the option to trade."

The first pick could be 7-foot Brad Daugherty of North Carolina.

"If you polled any five NBA executives, Daugherty would probably be the front-runner," Williams said.

Williams also spoke highly of Walter Berry of St. John's and William Bedford of Memphis State, a pair of draft-eligible juniors.

Top seniors in the draft besides Daugherty are Len Bias of Maryland, Chuck Person of Auburn, Johnny Dawkins of Duke and Kenny Walker of Kentucky. Leading underclassmen in addition to Berry and Bedford are Chris Washburn of North Carolina State, John Williams of Louisiana State and Dwayne Washington of Syracuse.

In the lottery, which was conducted at halftime of the Philadelphia-Milwaukee playoff game, the envelopes were opened in reverse draft order, and as each revealed a team other than Boston, Auerbach, smoking his trademark cigar, cheerfully counted down the number.

Paul Mancuso, working in relief of Gator starting pitcher Mike Mills, suffered his first loss in two decisions while relief pitcher George Ferran won his fourth game without a loss for the Captains.

In San Antonio, the Dodgers ended a string of 14 scoreless innings and held on to beat the Mets 4-3 in their doubleheader's opening game.

The Mets parlayed Rick Lockwood's double, a pair of San Antonio errors and a passed ball into a 2-0 lead in the first inning of the opener, but the game then settled into a pitcher's duel between the Dodgers' William Brennan and the Mets' Kyle Hartshorn.

Hartshorn shut down the Dodgers on just two hits before encountering trouble in the fifth.

Brennan got the win, raising his record to 2-1 in his fourth start after beginning the year as a reliever, while giving up just three hits and one earned run.

Jackson spoiled the debut of the Dodgers' Jeff Edwards as a starting pitcher in the second game by scoring all its runs in the first three innings.

Three killed in van wreck

LOS BANOS, Calif. (AP) — A van loaded with San Diego athletes returning from a college rowing meet went out of control, rolled over and caught fire, killing three of those inside the vehicle and injuring ten others, according to the California Highway Patrol.

"One of the officers at the scene reported a tire apparently blew and the driver lost control," a dispatcher for the patrol said today.

The dispatcher said 13 people were in the van when it crashed Sunday night.

The names of those killed were not immediately available.

One of the injured, Tory Freeman of the San Diego State University junior varsity crew, said the van was going "over the speed limit, but not faster than the other traffic" when a tire blew and the van went off the freeway where it rolled over.

Warren defeats Ronnie Shields

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Hometown favorite Frankie Warren used an aggressive attack and a 12th-round knockdown to gain a unanimous decision over Houston's Ronnie Shields and win the vacant U.S. Boxing Association championship in a nationally televised bout Sunday afternoon.

Warren, 20-0 with 14 knockouts, dominated the fight from the fourth round on, successfully getting inside to pound away to Shields' midsection. In the final round, a looping overhand right caught Shields on the left temple, sending him to the mat for the count.

Shields, ranked No. 2 by the World Boxing Council, is the North American Boxing Federation champion, but did not risk his title against Warren.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The financial outlook brightens in the months ahead. A new project shows every sign of being a big success. Pay close attention to detail to prevent costly foul-ups. Recent retirees find more to do than they thought possible. Lend your talents to a community or charitable campaign. A leadership vacuum is waiting to be filled. Be careful not to alienate potential allies with your blunt speaking. Build for the future.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Bea Arthur of "Golden Girls," the Atlanta Braves' Pasquel Perez, Stevie Wonder, New York Post critic Clive Barnes, writer Daphne du Maurier, boxing's Joe Louis, poet Walt Whitman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You benefit financially from other people's mistakes! Seize an unusual opportunity that comes your way. Acting too emotional could scare off a romantic partner. Be wary of a strong father figure.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Give prompt attention to potential financial problems. This is not a good time to make speculative investments. Search for new ways to boost profits.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Domestic life is on an even keel, allowing you to pursue your career wholeheartedly. An investment begins to pay handsome dividends. Your social life picks up. Romance looks especially promising for singles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Long-distance travel is a distant possibility. Renew your passport. An unconventional idea could bring unexpected rewards. Put money in an emergency fund.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A friend or relative could provide the answer to a tricky financial problem. Travel helps you advance your career or business interests. Domestic life looks much better following a candid talk with mate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Events taking place at a distance could influence a major career or business decision. Mate may turn difficult if you put work ahead of family life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An old friend helps you find the solution to a puzzling problem. Be willing to mediate a dispute between two loved ones. Be careful not to overlook important business details. Double check financial figures.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A new approach is essential in business or romance. Be flexible. A regular physical fitness program helps you feel and look your best.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Review past mistakes before deciding what you want to do next. Be willing to pay for expert advice. Hold your ground if you feel you are being pushed into an uncomfortable position at work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your career blossoms when you emphasize long-range projects. Mate or partner is your strongest ally. Recycling a clever idea saves both time and effort. Romance begins to look promising. Be discreet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Seek new outlets for your ideas. Capitalize on an unexpected opportunity to travel. Family business proves especially lucrative. Join forces with mate or a sibling. Respond to letters and phone calls.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K72 ♡K93 ◇732 ♣9853
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dble	3 ♡	Pass
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—At this vulnerability, partner must have a pretty good hand for his bidding—after all, he has contracted for nine tricks all on his own. You have some useful values, and your king of spades should solidify partner's suit. However, your king of hearts is worthless unless you declare the hand, so we would opt for three no trump.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠83 ◇AK10952 ♣AKJ82
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—For his jump to game in hearts, partner should have a long suit and little outside strength. If that is so, your hand is eminently suitable for him. Pass. There is no reason to suppose that you can make 11 tricks at a minor-suit contract.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ982 ♡AQ83 ◇872 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	1 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You are a whisker short of a raise to game. (Switch your minor-suit holdings around and we might have ventured four hearts.) However, you should take very positive action, and an invitational raise to three hearts fits the bill.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A10762 ♡854 ◇92 ♣A76
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner has shown as strong a hand as possible without making a demand bid. Facing such strength, two aces and a five-card suit are not to be sneezed at. We feel you are worth one move toward slam, and a cue-bid of five clubs is the obvious step.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠85 ♡K9 ◇AKQ873 ♣K104
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♠	1 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Throw away your point-count book! You have a hand that rates to produce six or more tricks. If partner has as little as a spade stopper and one ace (not too much to expect for his no trump bid), you can virtually count nine tricks. Bid three no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K8762 ♡A ◇AJ93 ♣K102
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—With your wealth of controls, slam is a distinct possibility if an adequate trump suit can be found. Since you have an unbalanced hand, there is no reason not to show it by bidding naturally, so we would proceed with three diamonds. If partner shows a fit for either of our suits, we would look for greater things.

McNair funeral service scheduled

LAKE CITY, S.C. (AP) — The body of astronaut Ronald McNair, who was killed in the explosion of Challenger, is scheduled to be flown to his hometown on Friday and buried on Saturday.

A funeral service is scheduled Saturday morning at Lake City's Wesley United Methodist Church, according to the Graham and Godwin Funeral Home. A memorial service for the 35-year-old laser physicist was held at the church in February.

McNair and six other astronauts, including New Hampshire schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe, were killed Jan. 28 when the space shuttle exploded shortly after liftoff.

McNair, who grew up in Lake City, was regarded as a hero in his hometown. A parade was held here and a street named in his honor in April 1984.

Ronald McNair Boulevard, a part of U.S. Route 52, is Lake City's most traveled highway. The South Carolina General Assembly recently designated all of U.S. 52 through Florence County Ronald McNair Memorial Highway.

McNair once said he hoped someday to return to South Carolina to teach at the University of South Carolina.

The remains of the Challenger crew, recovered from the ocean off Cape Canaveral, Fla., were flown to the military mortuary at Dover Air Force Base in Delaware last month to be prepared for burial.

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz, who last performed in Germany in 1932, was a smash hit here on his first stop in the West following his triumphant return to the Soviet Union.

Horowitz

He brought some 1,800 people to their feet before playing a single note Sunday. After the 2½-hour concert, in which he played the works of Liszt, Schumann, Chopin and others, they gave him a 10-minute standing ovation.

The 81-year-old Horowitz, a U.S. citizen, played here after performing in his Russian homeland for the first time since leaving 60 years ago.

Landers

LINCOLN, Ill. (AP) — Columnist Ann Landers received an honorary degree from Lincoln College, then told graduating students to be kind to others.

Many depressed and troubled people look normal, but thoughtless words or harsh looks can send them to the depths of despair, she told about 130 associate degree recipients and their parents, friends and teachers on Saturday.

Ms. Landers, 67, whose real name is Eppie Lederer, said in an interview later that she admires Abraham Lincoln and thinks Nancy Reagan copes well with stress.

But she said she differs with the first lady over abortion.

The columnist described her own stance as "free choice," not pro-abortion. Mrs. Reagan is strongly against abortion.

"I do not think it's perfectly OK to have a child out of wedlock," or live together before marriage or engage lightly in premarital sex, Ms. Landers said.

MIAMI (AP) — Screen star Hedy LaMarr, who gained fame in 1933 when Americans caught a glimpse of her running nude through the woods in a European film, is trying to prevent a tabloid from publishing two recent photos of her.

Attorney Ellis Rubin said the photos were stolen from her wallet by an acquaintance and that The Globe, a tabloid published in Boca Raton, obtained them for either $300 or $350.

"There are those who would exploit my past and interfere with my future," Ms. LaMarr said. "I will not allow this abominable invasion of privacy. I trust our system of justice will protect me."

The nude glimpse of her in the film "Ecstasy" was the first time American audiences saw nudity in a legitimate film.

Rubin said he would seek an injunction today in Dade County Circuit Court against publication of the pictures and will ask for their return. He would not describe them except to say they were of a personal nature.

Attempts to contact The Globe Sunday night were unsuccessful. Nobody answered the phone at the newspaper's office.

Pavarotti

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Tenor Luciano Pavarotti raised about $300,000 for cancer research with a benefit concert before about 6,000 people.

They packed into Turin Sports Palace Sunday to hear him perform a series of his favorite opera triumphs with the orchestra of the RAI television network.

The audience gave the reknowned tenor several loud ovations and even threw lillies on stage after he sang "Mamma."

Pavarotti told a news conference Saturday that he was a lucky man who had achieved all he had hoped for and now wanted to help "defeat cancer and save millions of lives." In 1981, he performed a benefit concert in Turin for handicapped children.

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Donahue, who deftly handles a variety of sensitive issues on his syndicated television talk show, brawled in an airport terminal with a man who shouted abuse at him and his wife, authorities said.

The fist fight in LaGuardia Airport's central terminal broke out Sunday after the man, a supporter of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, shouted that Donahue and his wife, actress Marlo Thomas, "ought to be murdered," said Port Authority Police Officer Mitchell Kaufman.

Donahue responded, the two began shouting and the fight began, Kaufman said.

The incident occurred as Donahue and Ms. Thomas were at the airport to catch a flight to Boston where Ms. Thomas received an award Sunday night for her work against nuclear arms.

"I thought about it on the plane. And you know, if we have to have war, let it be man-to-man and fist-to-fist," Donahue said when he arrived at the dinner. "What this technology does is make it impossible to be brave. If you drop a bomb on my neighborhood, I can't prove that I'm tough."

Donahue and Ms. Thomas were walking through the terminal about 12:15 p.m. EDT when the man yelled, "Donahue and his wife ought to be murdered," police said.

"The fists were flying," said Kaufman. "Several officers responded, and they had to pull them apart."

The protester was identified as William Ferguson Jr., 44, of Ridgefield, N.J., a member of the International Caucus of Labor Committees, said Port Authority spokesman Leon Katz. The caucus is a pronuclear group affiliated with LaRouche.

Ms. Thomas and Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alice Walker received the Helen M. Caldicott Leadership Award Sunday night at a ball sponsored by the Women's Action for Nuclear Disarmament.

An Associated Press reporter who was in the terminal said Donahue's face was bruised and the other man was taken away in handcuffs after the fight. Neither man required medical treatment, Katz said.

Traveling airlines tiring experience

Whenever I come back from an extended series of airplane trips on several different carriers, as I have this week, I am reminded anew that, although the airlines do a creditable job – I'm always afraid some day they'll get like the railroads and discover it's a great deal more profitable, and a lot less trouble, to move goods and animals than people – there are areas that need attention.

The first thing that comes to mind is a dress code. Now, I'm not one to advocate that air travel requires a three-piece suit or shoes that lace or that women should wear a shawl or mid-calf-length skirts but it does seem that some minimal standards could be enforced.

For instance, I think – well, let me tell you of an experience I had in London once. I was sitting in my seat, awaiting takeoff for a polar flight to L.A., when an international traveler got on board wearing dirty shorts, a tank top, thong sandals and nothing else – unless you count the gold chains and the three cameras he had slung across his chest.

I looked at this apparition and thought, "If he sits next to me I'm getting off and taking a boat."

Being trapped in a seat next to those hairy legs and sweaty armpits for the next 12 hours would have been the equivalent of holding lighted cigarettes to my feet all across the flight.

IF THE KGB ever wanted to get anything out of me, all they would have to do is just move this guy in a cell with me and say he was going to stay a week. I'd tell them anything they wanted to know.

Fortunately, he went elsewhere, hopefully beside some guy who had a less sensitive set of olfactory nerves.

But why couldn't the airline tell this guy to go home and put on a shirt and slacks, that this was an airborne living room, not a gym? The airlines always ask you if you want an aisle or window seat in a smoking or no-smoking section, why can't they offer you your choice of seat companions?

And while they're at it, why can't they do something about those people who seem to be moving three rooms of furniture or the entire contents of a warehouse from coast to coast when they board a plane?

You know who I'm talking about, those passengers who get on carrying everything but a live chicken and the stove to cook it on. Some flights look more like a Tijuana bus than a jet plane.

THE AIRLINES remind us that carry-on luggage must be such that it can be stowed beneath the seat in front of you or in the overhead compartment. But they don't say how many seats in front of them or how many overhead compartments. You find out when you get on late and try to stow your own truckload of essentials there.

Americans hate to check things. They get on board carrying everything from a statue of Beethoven to the kitchen sink. You can see them staggering through airports with crisscrossing straps from suit bags, duffels, hatboxes, beer coolers, a year's supply of canned goods and a portable hi-fi the size of a small locomotive.

They used to make you pay for overweight in this country. And, in Europe, they made you weigh the carry-on luggage as well as the checked. But of late, people get on carrying a load of home furnishings Bekins would hire three men and a truck to move across country.

Whoever said "Bad news travels fast!" never took many flights. Our plane to Louisville the other day was three hours late leaving LAX. To this day, nobody who was on that flight knows why – with the possible exception of the pilot.

We sat on the ground for an hour even after boarding the aircraft but there was not a peep from the flight deck. Those guys are full of information in flight. They love to tell you that if you look out of the right side of the aircraft you can have the thrill of seeing the skyline of Topeka. They wake you out of a sound sleep to look at a dot on the horizon that is Hastings, Neb.

But, do any of the sweltering, seatbelted customers find out why Flight 18 is not taking off, a matter of considerably more interest than the whereabouts of Topeka? Is it a bomb scare? Is the wing coming loose? The pilot oversleep?

FINALLY there was the passenger clerk who makes all-pro in my book. After waiting in line for 20 minutes, I was informed that the flight was full, there was no room.

"Wait a minute!" I told him. "I got this reservation on the 13th! Four weeks ago!"

He looked at me haughtily. "A reservation is not a seat," he said.

Now, that is world-class chutzpah, you have to admit. In fact, I would like the airline to adopt that as its motto instead of the internationally famous one it does have.

"A reservation is not a seat" is one of the ringing declarations of prose in our history. It ranks with the best of Patrick Henry.

In fact, it ranks right up there with Commodore Vanderbilt's contribution to thoughts to live by: "The public be damned."

Flames eye clincher in St. Louis tonight

NHL Playoffs

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Special teams and a special effort by some young players have given the Calgary Flames a three games to two lead over the St. Louis Blues in their NHL Stanley Cup semifinal playoff series.

The Flames, 4-2 winners in Saturday night's important fifth game in the best-of-seven Campbell Conference final, can clinch the series — and their first berth in the Stanley Cup championship — tonight in Game 6 at St. Louis.

The winner of the series will face the Montreal Canadiens in the final, beginning Friday at Montreal. The Canadiens are seeking their 23rd league title. If a seventh game is needed to decide the Blues-Flames series, it will be at Calgary Wednesday night.

A short-handed goal early in the game, two goals by young Dan Quinn in the second period and a penalty-killing unit that did its job eight times, led the Flames to the victory.

"We're up 3-2 and we have two kicks at the cat. I would say we certainly like our chances now," said Calgary's Lanny McDonald, a 12-year NHL veteran who never has won a Cup.

McDonald and veterans Doug Risebrough and John Tonelli played major roles in Calgary's upset of the two-time defending champion Edmonton Oilers in the Smythe Division final this year.

But Calgary Coach Bob Johnson said before Game 5 that the Flames would need better efforts from some of their younger players to get past St. Louis.

Saturday night, the young players responded.

"We're playing a lot of hockey at this time of the year and we can't expect the same guys to do it every night," said Steve Bozek, one of the key special team members who haunted the Blues throughout the game.

"You have to be ready to play at this time. In the Stanley Cup playoffs you don't want to go out and be ordinary when you get the chance to play."

Bozek's penalty killing constantly disrupted St. Louis' power play, and he set up Colin Patterson for Calgary's first goal, a short-handed score at 3:11 of the first period.

"That really hurt us," St. Louis Coach Jacques Demers said. "You don't see too many teams win when they allow one of those."

Backcourt Rocket key against LA

By JOHN NADEL

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — While the hopes of the Houston Rockets would seem to hinge upon the effectiveness of their "Twin Towers," it could be the backcourt that makes or breaks them against the Los Angeles Lakers.

In the opener of the best-of-seven NBA Western Conference final playoff series between the Rockets and the defending champion Lakers, it was obvious that the play of the guards had a lot to do with Los Angeles' 119-107 victory.

"They (the Rockets) weren't able to get the job done in the backcourt," Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers said after Saturday's game at the Forum. "They didn't get enough points out of their guards.

"Our guard play was definitely better than their guard play. I think that was the key."

Houston Coach Bill Fitch said, "We did not have a guy take charge. Some of the passing that we did, we normally don't do in games."

"No doubt about it ... they played very well. If we don't play better, it's going to be over in a hurry. ... (But) we're not going to panic, having lost one game," Fitch said.

ABDUL-JABBAR, at 39 the oldest player in the NBA, scored a game-high 31 points, but starting Los Angeles guards Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Byron Scott also were major contributors with 26 and 18 points, respectively.

In Johnson, the Lakers have a player who takes charge. The 6-foot-9 point guard had a game-high 18 assists and triggered the Los Angeles' devastating fast break.

"Houston is fun," Johnson said. "You know they're going to run. They like to run and that's what we're going to do. It should be fun."

It wasn't much fun for the Rockets. Houston's starting guards, Robert Reid and Lewis Lloyd, combined for only 12 points and 12 assists Saturday.

"It just seemed like we didn't have that inner drive," Reid said. "We have to come out in the first quarter with as much drive as possible and take it from there."

THE ROCKETS will get their next opportunity Tuesday night in Game 2 at the Forum. The third and fourth games will be played at Houston next Friday night and Sunday.

Houston's "Twin Towers," 7-0 Akeem Olajuwon and 7-4 Ralph Sampson, had 28 and 19 points, respectively. Olajuwon also had a game-high 16 rebounds.

Reserve guard Mitchell Wiggins scored a career playoff high 24 points for Houston, but many of his points came in the fourth quarter, after the Lakers were safely ahead.

"We know exactly what they're up to," forward Kurt Rambis of the Lakers said. "We are at our best when we run. It's going to benefit us when they run also."

The Lakers took the lead for good by outscoring the Rockets 15-7 in the final 4:26 of the first half and led 64-58 at halftime. It was 94-82 after three quarters and the Rockets didn't get closer than eight points after that.

The Lakers, attempting to become the first team to win consecutive NBA championships since the Boston Celtics accomplished the feat in 1968 and 1969, have had good luck against the Rockets for the past three years.

Bean survives Wiebe's late bid

By BOB GREEN

Byron Nelson

DALLAS (AP) — It almost — not quite, but almost — got away from Andy Bean on the final few holes of the Byron Nelson Classic.

Mark Wiebe's last-gasp challenge fell one stroke short, a chip shot that he just missed holing on the 72nd hole.

"I gave it all I had," Wiebe said. "I think it went over the left lip."

But it didn't fall.

And Bean, three strokes ahead with three holes to play, got the last-hole par he needed to acquire his second title of the season and 11th of his 11-yeard PGA Tour career.

"You don't like to do that, start to give some things back, when you have such a good lead," Bean said.

"I thought it was mine and I almost gave it away. Sometimes things like that happen," he said, and grinned. "But it was good enough."

The winners' share of $108,000 from the total purse of $600,000 also lifted the 6-foot-4, 220-pound Bean from fourth to first on the year's money-winning list at $380,304.

Bean, who had a two-shot leader at the start of the final round, briefly surrendered the lead after Bobby Wadkins birdied three of the first five holes.

Responding to the challenge, Bean reeled off a string of three consecutive birdies beginning on the seventh, added another on the 11th and appeared to have the situation well in hand.

Wadkins, who has yet to win in 12 years on the tour, made double bogey from a bunker on the 12th, taking himself out of the title chase.

That left Mark Wiebe as the only man within sight of the leader. And when he three-putted for bogey on the 15th, Bean had a three-stroke lead with three to play.

But it was far from over.

About the time a television commentator was congratulating Bean on his victory as he stood on the 17th tee, Wiebe rolled in a long putt for a birdie.

Moments later Bean hit into a bunker, blew it out some 40 feet beyond the pin and eventually had to make a three-foot putt for bogey.

Foyt leaves no doubt

Unable to qualify on Saturday after officials ordered his car out of line for a violation, Foyt joined the fastest field in Indy-car history with an average speed of 213.212 mph for his 10-mile run Sunday.

"They always say the older you get, the slower you go," joked Foyt, 51, the only four-time winner at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. "Seems I'm getting faster with age."

The holder of nearly every Speedway longevity record, Foyt's is the fifth-fastest among the 28 cars that qualified in the opening weekend of time trials. Several of the drivers in the field weren't even born when he started racing here.

"When I get where I don't feel good or I'm not healthy, that's when I'll quit and just become a car owner or team manager," said Foyt, who has started from the pole a record-tying four times and won the race for the first time 25 years ago in his fourth start. He also won in 1964, 1967 and 1977, making him the only Indy 500 driver to win in a front-engine roadster and in a modern rear-engine machine.

Trials conclude next weekend to determine the 33-car field for the May 25 race. Once the field is filled, the slowest cars can be bumped by any car completing a qualification run with a faster time.

The 28 cars in the lineup so far averaged 210.651, compared with last year's 208.026.

Most of the field was determined Saturday, the opening day of qualifying, when two-time Indy champion Rick Mears captured the pole position with record one- and four-lap performances.

Mears, who was 6 when Foyt made his debut here, broke the track's one-lap record with his first 2½-mile qualification lap with a speed of 217.581 mph. Mears earned his third Indy pole by averaging 216.828 for his four-lap, 10-mile run.

As a second-day qualifier, Foyt has the 24th position in the tentative starting field. That is as far back as he has ever started at the Speedway.

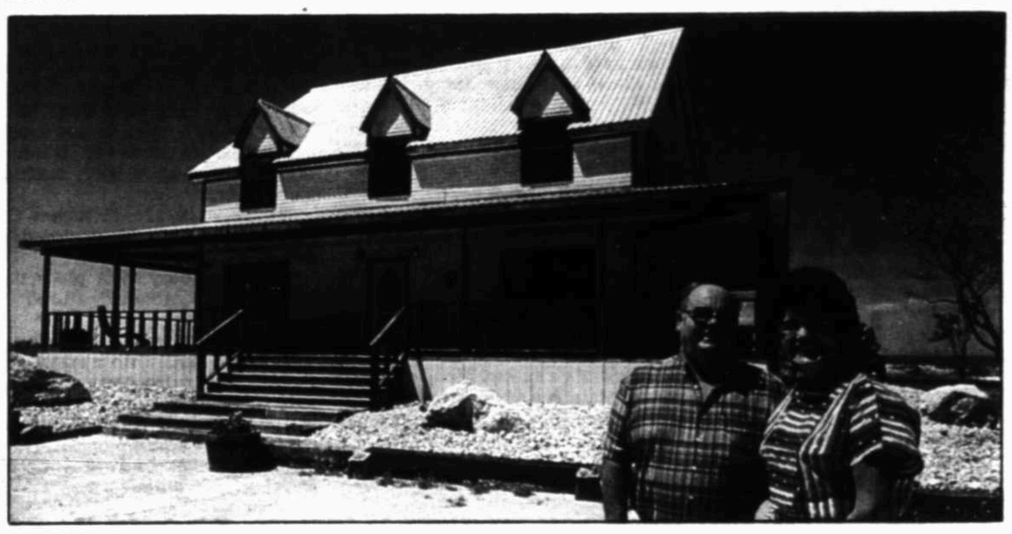
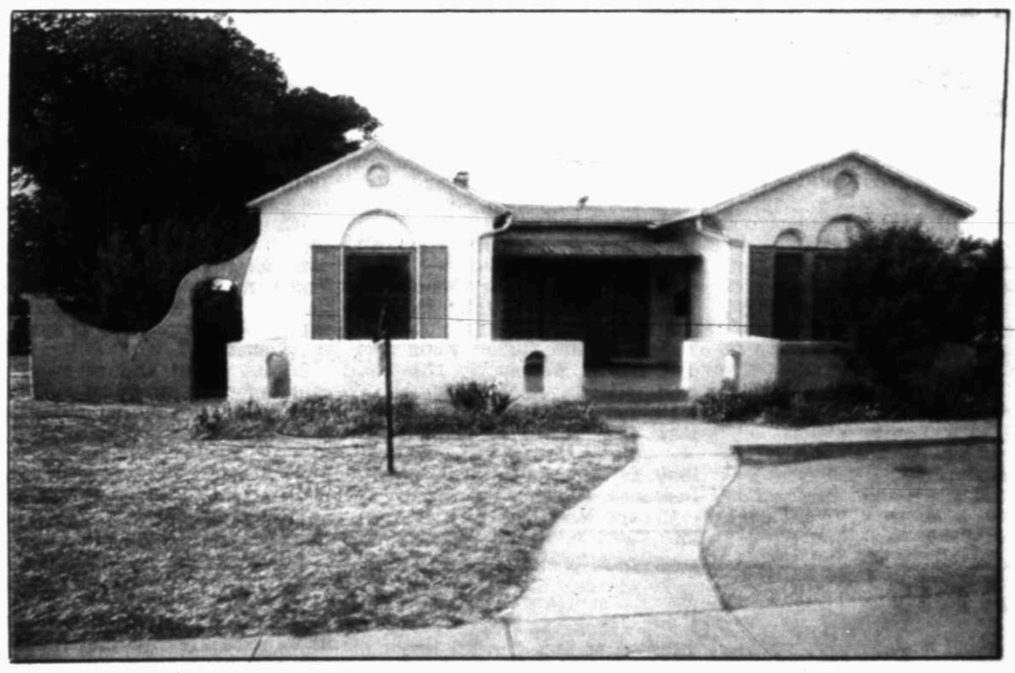
Abandoned for the last two years, this unusual Odessa home, built by real estate man Larry Spruill, was recently renovated by an Odessa couple. The house has 28-foot ceilings, two billiard rooms and a monstrous 200-year-old chandelier that had to be put into place with a crane.



Herbie and Freddie Jean Moore stand outside their one-of-a-kind house, a former real estate development office located on State Highway 191 near Farm-to-Market 1788.



Fondly referred to as the "Pepto-Bismol" house by its owners, Martin and Rosanelle Meissner, this residence/business at Louisiana and A Streets is not missed by many.

Text by Ron Gilmore Photos by Cody Bell

Within a week of a Lubbock robbery that left the Moores with virtually no furnishings, Freddie Jean contracted with a local interior design firm. The Moore's ranch-style house is furnished in an eclectic manner.

The Meissners have called the "Pepto-Bismol" house their home for more than 20 years. Meissner runs his insurance business from the front of the house and the couple lives in the rest of it.

The large, ranch-style structure plopped desolately near the intersection of State Highway 191 and Farm-to-Market 1788 shares a common trait with other homes in the Midland-Odessa area — it's one of a kind.

Easily recognized by passing motorists, they're the kind of homes most people take a second glance at, perhaps wondering who lives there and what the inside looks like.

Ms. Moore said she knew the house was for her the moment she saw it.

The real bonus for Ms. Moore, born to a long-time Odessa ranching family, the Wheelers, was the unrestricted view of the West Texas landscape.

"I can see forever from this house," said Ms. Moore. Indeed, the rambling home, sometimes referred to by friends and gawkers as "the Chicken Ranch" (due to it's physical resemblance to the infamous bordello featured in "Best Little Whorehouse in Texas"), has a plenitude of windows on all sides of the house, providing an airy ambiance.

The house, however, was not built as a residence, but rather as the offices of Glen Day Construction, a firm that was considering residential development in the area. Ms. Moore, a long-time associate of Day, stopped by one day after moving back to the area from Lubbock.

"We bought a house in Odessa but this is more what I was looking for," she said.

The Moores' move from Lubbock, however, was not without incident. Shortly before they moved, they were robbed of most of their possessions, including family heirloom furniture.

For the fast-acting Ms. Moore, however, it was no problem.

"She called us up about noon on a Monday and said she had moved back to Odessa," said Dolores Hundley of Santa Fe Contract-Design, who did the interior decorating for the Moores' new residence. "She said she had been cleaned out of everything in Lubbock and asked if the whole home could be done by Wednesday. That's just how she is. When Freddie Jean does something, she does it right now."

While the couple moved into the house in late December, it already resembles a homey ranch house with furnishings, shrubbery and hydromulched grass in place.

"It's a great place to live," said Ms. Moore, despite the occasional curious passerby who stops to see the house. "You get the feeling of living on a big ranch without the trouble of having to take care of it."

Still another house that most people gawk at when they pass by has also been recently renovated after nearly two years of vacancy and neglect. The family, to be referred to as the "Johnsons", asked their name not be used for personal reasons.

Multiples change young mom's image

WEATHERFORD (AP) — Laura Daut, a woman who grew up wanting a career and no children, once had a lousy image of homemakers.

But a 4-year-old daughter, 3-year-old twins and 8-month old triplets have brought about a radical change of opinion.

"I used to have this image of homemakers that was really lousy. I thought if you were a homemaker, you were a ridiculous female who couldn't do anything without your husband. You gossiped and just sat around in a duster, drinking coffee and eating coffee cake with the neighbors."

Mother's Day comes seven days a week for the 24-year-old Mrs. Daut.

She is accustomed to thinking in multiples of six. Six mouths to feed. Six children to dress. And, ultimately, the ordeal of dealing with six teen-agers going through adolescent crises simultaneously.

To outsiders, the production-line efficiency that Mrs. Daut has developed to take care of her children all can seem like unrestrained chaos. Silence rarely punctuates the cacophony. The marathon pace begins about 5 a.m. and doesn't stop until the last child is in bed by 8 p.m.

"After that, I don't do anything," she said. "I'm just too tired."

To try to keep up with all the expenses, her husband, Michael, 25, works two jobs designing and repairing electronics. Occasionally, he says, when he comes home he has to pull his wife "off the ceiling."

"My parents came down for a week about a month after the triplets (Erica, Ian and Cara) were born, and they left two days early because they were so exhausted they could not keep up," he said.

AP Laserphoto

Babysitters come in pairs, usually two sisters or a brother and a sister.

"A lot of the teen-agers think all the babies are really neat," Mrs. Daut said, smiling. "That's enough to scare their parents to death."

In spite of the numbers, the diapers get changed and everyone gets fed. There's even time for trips to a shopping mall or the park, with the triplets squeezed into a stroller designed for two babies, twins Natalie and Arianna holding onto the sides, and the oldest daughter, Megan, sometimes pushing.

"One thing we learned, if you ever plan a trip to a mall, you plan to only go to one place," Daut said. "Because once you hit the mall, you don't go anywhere else. People walk in front of you and stare at you."

Daut understands.

"They're pretty cute," he acknowledged with paternal pride. "That's not coming from me, that's coming from 400,000 people who've said so."

Mrs. Daut sometimes contemplates having a T-shirt printed with answers to the questions she is most frequently asked on family outings:

"Yes, they're mine."

"Yes, they're all mine."

"No, I didn't take fertility drugs."

"No, we're not going for four the next time."

Mrs. Daut assures anyone who asks that she's not interested in a next time. Six are enough, thank you very much. Her third pregancy was a complete surprise, she said. The number of babies was an even bigger surprise, although family history might have served as a clue.

Mrs. Daut's great-great grandmother gave birth to two sets of twins, and her husband's great-grandmother had 21 children, including three sets of twins and two sets of triplets.

The expenses mounted after the Dauts' triplets were born. Erica suffered a brain hemorrhage and was in an intensive care nursery for a week. The infant also suffered from colitis and pneumonia, but recovered after being hospitalized again and several follow-up visits to doctors.

Creditors have taken back their van, a washer and dryer and the family rocking chair. Food for the children costs $130 a week.

From Staff Reports

A Midland man has been arrested on charges of possession of child pornography and retaliation, the Midland Sheriff's Department reported.

The man was arrested around 10:30 p.m. Friday when narcotics officers searching his car came across a roll of child pornography involving a 14-year-old area girl, officers said. The 25-year-old man gave officers permission to search his car while they were searching a home in the 600 block of Mitchell Street for drugs, a sheriff's spokesman said.

He bonded out of jail Saturday morning, but was arrested again around 5 p.m. Saturday after he threatened the girl, now 15, who posed in the photos, the spokesman said.

The suspect has lived in Midland for about three months and over the last two years has listed addresses in California, New Mexico, Washington D.C., New York and Florida.

Possession of child pornography is a Class A misdemeanor that can carry up to a $2,000 fine and one year imprisonment. Retaliation is a third degree felony punishable by 2 to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Justices' use of private plane not listed as contribution

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Associate Justice C.L. Ray, his wife and other members of the court used the private plane of four Houston lawyers to do more than $10,000 worth of traveling during a six-month period, the San Antonio Light reported Sunday.

The flights, which took the justices and Mrs. Ray on trips throughout the state, were not reported by Ray or any other justice as campaign contributions in records filed with the secretary of state, the newspaper said.

The justices were never billed for the service, according to the Light.

The flights were noted in records maintained by Longhorn Express Co. Inc. of Houston.

During the time of the 1984 private plane travel, Ray was running for re-election and involved in a fight with Fort Worth lawyer Shelby Sharpe to retain the Democratic nomination for his high court bench.

A woman who answered the telephone at Ray's Austin residence Sunday told The Associated Press he could not come to the phone. The Light said it was unable to reach Ray for comment on whether the trips were campaign-related.

Ray and Associate Justice William Kilgarlin have been named in connection with several allegations of improper conduct during testimony before a House committee investigating Supreme Court justices.

In testimony last month before the House Committee on Judicial Affairs, former Supreme Court briefing attorneys related instances in which Ray and Kilgarlin may have improperly provided confidential information concerning the status of cases to attorneys involved in those cases.

Ray was the only justice whose name appeared on flight records, but other entries in the log book referred to "Supreme Court justices" or the "Supreme Court" riding on the plane, the Light reported.

HOUSES

The home, a large, Spanish-style mansion located on Loop 338 in between State Highway 191 and Highway 80 in Odessa, was the former residence of Larry Spruill, a local Realtor, who built the house in the 1970s with the help of Mexican, Spanish and Italian architects.

While the Moores put emphasis on plenty of viewing room, the Johnsons chose just plain "living" room. And with 8,000 square feet, 28-foot ceilings, two billiard rooms and three dining areas, lack of space is no problem.

Myths about the mysterious mosque-looking structure abounded even before they moved in, the couple indicated.

"I had heard the house had four bowling lanes in the basement (it has no basement)," laughed Ms. Johnson, an avid bowler. "Now if I ever find the basement, I'll let you know."

Still, the gargantuan residence has oddities enough for any house gawker.

The kitchen has two dishwashers (there were three, but they removed one), two stoves and a gigantic blue-tiled "island" in the middle. There are five bedrooms, two dining rooms and a breakfast area, an abundance of sun-pattern stained glass windows, 52 electrical plug-ins, a 32-foot by 32-foot living room, a guest cottage on the grounds, which include a tennis court and swimming pool and a three-car garage.

The crowning feature of the house, however, is the 200-year-old chandelier that dominates the main living room.

"It had to be put into place with a crane," said Ms. Johnson of the monstrous fixture from Mexico. An 18 inch steel beam runs the length of the ceiling from which huge pine timbers help support the massive structure.

Everything about the house is unique, including its address. The house has its own street.

"We have people come over from the Odessa Hilton and ring our doorbell," said Ms. Johnson of the curious. "They usually say 'Oh, we thought it was a museum or something.'"

While the house may seem more museum than residence, it's still the Johnsons' home and a place for family to gather — even if the family doesn't know each other is there when they visit.

"We had a family reunion recently and everyone was spread out around the house," joked Ms. Johnson. "When it came time for them to leave, some of them checked the guestbook and discovered they had missed seeing certain people."

"We've put in about $150,000 fixing it up," said Johnson. A new paint job, plumbing problems and general grounds work were needed.

A new paint job is something Martin Meissner doesn't think about much. But when he does, his job is cut out for him.

Meissner, owner of what locals have come to call "the Pepto-Bismol" house, a shocking pink and green house located at the corner of Louisiana and A Street, must have the painters mix a special blend of colors to maintain his vivid residence.

Meissner indicated it's not his fault.

"It was this color when I bought the place in 1960," said the insurance agent, who lives and works in the house.

"In 1980, someone painted the words "Pepto-Bismol" on our fence," he said. "A friend of mine was trying to get me to call the police, but I didn't. I didn't consider it vandalism. I just figured someone was having their fun."

While the house remains a beacon of individuality and brightness from the outside, Meissner and his wife Rosanelle decided they couldn't live with the original interior's paint job when they moved in.

"It was all different shades of green with green carpeting," he said.

"These walls are 11 inches thick, red-tiled and double-stuccoed," he said. "It's tornado proof."

Miessner estimates the house was built in the 1920s with a major extension, plus a guest cottage added in 1946. Today the home is filled with antique family heirlooms of the couple including a pump organ, Thomas Edison Victrola and an assortment of other collectables.

The house also has all-cedar closets, a greenhouse, a garage with doors that open sideways and like the other homes — plenty of curious passersby.

"They come by to take pictures all the time," joked the couple.

The pink house, built in Spanish-style, was the former residence for an oil company president and included fountains, a "pink" well and a fire pit on the grounds.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION ON THE HIGH SCHOOL BOUNDARY ISSUE

Hundreds of concerned parents attended a recent public hearing to voice their strong disapproval of high school boundary changes proposed by the MISD staff. They questioned the wisdom of making these changes in the face of the current economic downturn. Most importantly, they felt that these changes were very unfair to Lee High School. Currently, the two high schools are balanced in important areas, such as SAT scores, IQ scores, honor students, extra-curricular participation and success, and curriculum. However, the board feels changes need to be made to rectify an imbalance in minority and rural students and to compensate for staff-projected growth at Lee. However, these changes are perceived by many to be devastating to LHS in that a great percentage of its high-achieving students and the accompanying parental support would be removed to Midland High School, leaving Lee with a net deficit in this most important area. The information contained here represents research conducted during the past three months by a group of concerned Midland parents.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF EVENTS REGARDING THE BOUNDARY DECISION

On February 11, 1986, the MISD Board of Education voted on a list of indicators for equal schools that was to include the following criteria:

1. Total Enrollment
2. Ethnic Enrollment
3. Achievement, in the form of
   a. test scores
   b. honors/remedial students
4. Extra-curricular participation
5. Socio-economic factors

On April 22, MISD Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi presented a boundary proposal now being considered, which would balance the schools in only the following areas:

1. Total Enrollment
2. Ethnic Enrollment
3. Test Scores
4. Rural Enrollment

This staff plan (to be voted on tomorrow) does not include balance in the following areas:

1. Honors students
2. Extra-curricular participation
3. Socio-economic factors

During this three-month period, a group of interested parents/citizens formed the Midland Parent Action Committee (M-PAC) to study the situation and offer assistance to the board and staff of MISD. While M-PAC agrees with the board's goal of equal high schools, and will support a plan that includes balance in the above areas, it disagrees with the limited criteria used in the staff plan to determine equality.

STUDENTS FROM UPPER ECONOMIC AREAS

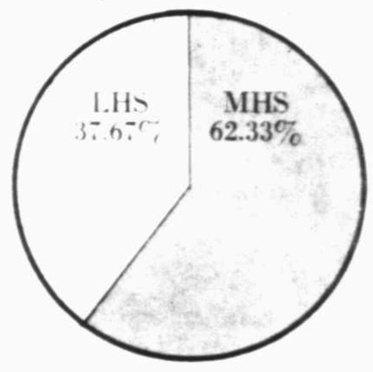
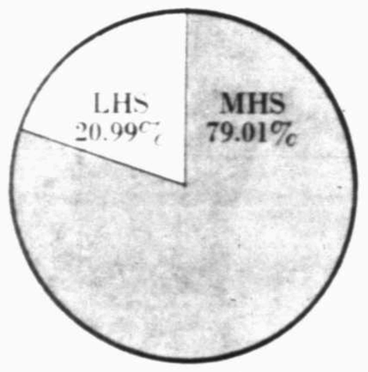
CURRENT:



STAFF PLAN:



NOTE: Of all students currently enrolled in honors classes at both high schools, 55% come from upper socio-economic areas. Of these upper-economic honors students, 131 currently are at Lee and 302 are at Midland High. Under the staff proposal, 57 would remain at Lee, while 376 would attend MHS.

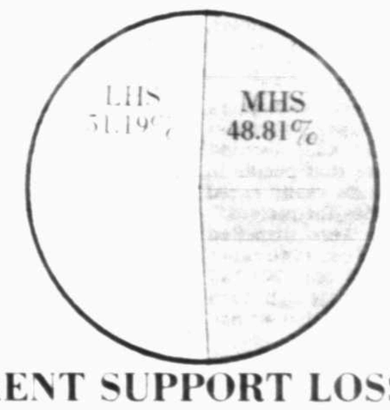
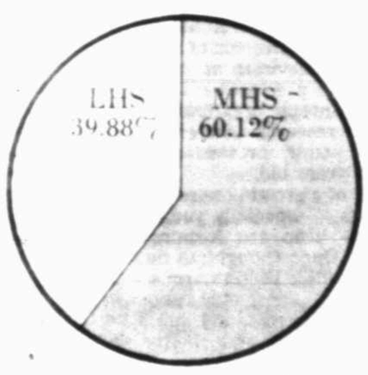
GIFTED EDUCATION (GEM) STUDENTS

GEM students are gifted 4-6 graders who represent tomorrow's high school honor students. The following graphs depict only the high GEM participation areas where 10% or more of the total student enrollment is involved in the GEM program. These high participation areas indicate a greater pool from which honor students will come.

CURRENT:



STAFF PLAN:



LEE HIGH PTA LEADERSHIP & PARENT SUPPORT LOSS

Under the staff plan, LHS would lose 29 out of 48 of its current PTA board, while gaining only 2 board members currently residing in the MHS areas being moved to Lee. Out of the current Lee Freshman PTA board, 14 out of 34 would be moved to Midland Freshman, and only 4 MFHS board member would move to LFHS. The loss of Lee's PTA and parent leadership under the staff plan is in direct proportion to the loss of upper socio-economic areas from Lee.

QUESTIONS THAT SHOULD BE ADDRESSED

1. Why is this boundary decision being made six months ahead of its previously scheduled December 1, 1986 date? (The time-table was adopted by the board in August, 1985.)
2. Is it wise to make such a far-reaching decision in the midst of an extreme economic downturn that may leave our schools with far fewer students than the board first projected?
3. Should the board wait for a court decision in the current appeal for minority representation in the decision-making process?
4. Why does rural have to be split 50-50? Should they be treated as a separate entity when there has been no documentation to prove that suburban students are different from any other group?
5. Why move 3,000 students to adjust a projected imbalance of 373 students in 1992-93?
6. Why are not all of the board-adopted indicators for equal schools being used?
7. Why are socio-economic factors being ignored in this plan, when research proves the strong correlation between achievement and upper socio-economic backgrounds? The board's own consultant, Dr. Delbert Taebel of UT Arlington, has expressed his belief that if you balance the schools socio-economically, all other factors for balanced schools will fall into place.
8. Why is there not sufficient growth potential already in the current developing MHS areas, i.e., Saddle Club North and South, Polo Park, Vista West, Plantation Hills, and Meadowpark, to satisfy the growth needs of MHS?
9. Where are the future support areas for Lee to come from to replace those being taken, when few growth areas remain in the LHS area under the staff plan?

The future of Midland's high schools is at stake. We feel that keeping high schools balanced in ways other than mere numbers is vital to all Midlanders. We request that the school board delay action on these changes and devise a plan that meets all standards of fairness. A board decision to return to the original time schedule, which would allow an analysis of October enrollment figures, would be in keeping with a consistent and prudent decision process. To defer because of a rapidly changing economy, over which the board has no control, exhibits good leadership.

The board is scheduled to vote on the proposed boundary changes at an open meeting tomorrow, Tuesday, May 13, at 1:30 p.m., at the MISD Administration Building, 702 N. "N" St.

Annual Crystal Ball benefits High Sky Children's Ranch

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

From the sparkle of fine crystal auction items to the flash of fine diamonds adorning guests, the 12th annual Crystal Ball glowed Saturday night as it raised money for High Sky Children's Ranch.

The dance floor at the Holiday Inn Convention Center was filled as the irresistible beat of songs — from country to rock, played by Fort Worth's First Crossing — brought party-goers to their feet.

Hors d'oeuvres served before the auction included chicken nuggets, chicken and beef kabobs, fresh fruits, crab and bacon-wrapped scallops. After the auction, the breakfast menu included eggs, sausage, pastries, bacon, fruit and biscuits.

The crystal theme was carried out in table decorations, which featured crystal vases filled with silk flowers and crystal "droplets." These tiny droplets were also scattered over tablecloths and serving tables, giving the illusion of raindrops.

The 16 pieces of Lalique, Baccarat, Steuben, Val St. Lambert and Waterford crystal auctioned included vases, a candy dish, candlesticks, a champagne cooler, decanter and glasses and a Steuben trout which was auctioned off last year and donated back for this year's event. The trout was sold for $3,250 Saturday night. The auction raised a total of $23,550.

Linda Powell, chairman of the Crystal Ball committee, said approximately 350 Midlanders were expected to attend. The committee's goal was to raise $100,000 from the event, she said.

Funds raised will be used for High Sky's operating fund, said Jackie Carter, executive director of the children's home, for such items as "food, clothing, housing, utility bills ... "

High Sky currently is home to 30 children, Ms. Carter said. "Four are boys," and more boys are expected to arrive soon. Formerly High Sky Girls Ranch, the home now accepts children of both sexes.

"High Sky serves children not only in Midland, but in the (entire) Permian Basin," Ms. Powell said.

Russell L. Freeman was co-chairman of the event. David Griffin, member of High Sky board, was master of ceremonies. Chairman of the board of directors is Steve Huggins. Joe Skeen of Skeen's Auction Exchange of Midland was auctioneer.

Charity groups drawing younger volunteers

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Derek Alpert is hardly your stereotypical volunteer. He is the 29-year-old director of music for film and television at A&M Records and also is president of Concern II, a philanthropic organization funding cancer research whose 500 members are young professionals from 18 to 35 years old.

Alpert is one of a growing number of young adults — especially young professionals — who are forming charity groups. Once thought to be the domain of middle-aged matrons, support and fund-raising organizations are courting fresh blood, hoping these new members will stay involved for life.

Established charities are discovering, sometimes the hard way, that volunteers who have devoted time and money for years can't be counted on forever. To build a new base of support, they're enticing new recruits with parties that don't cost an arm and a leg and events and meetings planned around 40-hour work weeks.

EVEN WITHOUT top-notch business contacts, many young professionals are proving to be pretty good money-raisers. Derek Alpert had his doubts that anything would come of Concern II when he and a handful of others decided in 1981 to form the group, a spin-off of the senior group, Concern, which was founded in 1968 and also funds cancer research. (Many Concern II members are sons and daughters of Concern members, though Alpert's family is not involved.)

"We all said it could never happen, but it did," said Alpert, the nephew of musician Herb Alpert, co-owner and vice chairman of A&M Records. "I wasn't really sure that people in their early or mid-20s really cared about anyone besides themselves."

Such misgivings were dispelled when Concern II's first fund-raiser drew 750 people, and only 200 had been expected. "We knew right then and there," he recalled, "that we had something pretty special."

Alpert and others involved realized that if they were to keep Concern II afloat, they would have to ignore certain unwritten rules about charity organizations. After all, they weren't dealing with men and women who had a lot of time or money. Thus, dues are a minimum of $25, and tickets to Concern II events are about $30. Members are not asked to conduct massive fund drives, and meetings are held at off-hours.

COMCERN II members also do something you won't find at your average $500-per-plate black-tie fund-raiser: They invite young cancer patients to their events. "It's reality staring you in the face," Alpert said. "You realize there is more to life than hanging out in singles bars."

He is adamant that Concern II is not for the young and unattached on the make. "People who join thinking it's going to be like that drop off real fast. We're not the lonely hearts club."

Some become involved because of personal experiences with cancer. "But if they have," Alpert added, "they don't let you know about it. A couple of years ago I was asked if that's why I got involved. But, really, I've been lucky — no one in my family has had cancer. Someone told me (working with Concern II) was like an insurance policy. God forbid it should happen, but if it does I'll know I did something in my life to try to stop it."

So far Concern II has raised $450,000 through parties, fashion shows and donations.

Clayton Sommers, a private investor who is president of Concern, believes that this younger generation of volunteers has had a positive effect on the older generation. "It has been an impetus," he said, "seeing the energy they put into things. It was clear when Concern II was started that unless we got younger people involved, Concern would not survive."

BUT WHEN IT comes to charity groups, time is just as important as money. In fact, most working people probably find it less trouble to write a check for $250 than to spend five hours a week stuffing envelopes.

The solution? At least one volunteer believes that more philanthropic organizations will have to schedule well-organized meetings after business hours. Janet Jones-Rutt, vice president of George Elkins Co., a Beverly Hills real estate concern, said that she resigned from the Junior League because she felt that this women's organization, dedicated to community service work, "did not recognize the special needs of women who work."

The 33-year-old Jones-Rutt now has other involvements with Luminaires Juniors, a spin-off of the Luminaires, which benefits the Estelle Doheny Eye Foundation; and Colleague Helpers and Philanthropic Service (CHIPS), a spin-off of the Colleagues, which benefits the Children's Institute International, a Los Angeles foundation for abused children. Both are women-only groups, and she says that most members do not work. The ones who do tend to own their own businesses or be business executives.

"With these younger groups," she said, "you're seeing many more night meetings, and committees being set up for research and development to establish long-term goals. If these groups can't adapt to women's work schedules, they will disappear."

Community efforts varied

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — An information exchange program is helping American towns learn what other local governments, businesses and citizen groups around the country are doing to solve problems and improve the quality of life in their communities.

In a public service program, American Can Co. has created a databank of information on successful local activities, offering them as models for communities to replicate or adapt to their own needs.

"With current federal cutbacks, communities are seeking creative ways to address their economic and social problems," said Frank J. Connor, president of American Can, which has headquarters in Greenwich.

During 1984-1985, its pilot year, the program identified 164 outstanding community projects. They are detailed in the "1985 AMERICA CAN! Report on Model Community Programs," which has been distributed to more than 3,000 leaders nationwide, including national and local legislators, corporate and foundation executives and educators.

Among the programs cited is Aunts and Uncles, in the St. Louis, Mo., region, an effort that last year provided 14,000 pairs of new shoes — donated by local retailers — to needy St. Louis children.

The volunteer organization also provides surrogate "aunts" and "uncles," who are companions to the children. One impact of this program is that the school dropout rate among participating children has decreased from 25 percent to 10 percent.

In the St. Cloud, Minn., region, People, Too! Central Minnesota Center for Independent Living Inc. has helped establish the area as a model in integrating handicapped citizens into the community.

The project, formerly known as Handicap Service Program, assists physically disabled residents with lifestyle issues such as housing, employment and attendant care. It promotes a better understanding of handicapped people through special events such as Handicap Awareness Day, and ongoing educational efforts such as a speakers' bureau and a show featuring "handicapped" puppets.

For more information about the program or to obtain a copy of the Report on Model Community Programs, contact AMERICA CAN! Coordinator, Dept. A, American Can Co. P.O. Box 3610, Greenwich, CT 06836-3610.

Foreign volunteers attracted by Mother Teresa's work

CALCUTTA, India (UPI) — Mother Teresa's face crinkles with concern as she grips the hand of one of the dying destitutes she loves. Beside her a young American deftly lances an infected and grotesquely swollen leg, sending a spurt of bloody fluid into a stainless steel basin.

He is one of hundreds of foreign volunteers who have been attracted by the example of Mother Teresa, donating their time and emotion to ease the last moments of people found dying on the streets of Calcutta.

"It is important that people feel care and love before they die," said Mother Teresa, clad in the white muslin sari of the order she founded.

"With love around them some of these people die a beautiful death," the tiny Albanian nun said, gesturing to the sick and emaciated people laid out in rows on the scrubbed stone floors of the hospice.

Those that care for them also benefit, she said.

"We see suffering. We respond to it and we do something about it," she said. "That is good for our own hearts."

MICHAEL FINNEGAN of Salisbury, Md., said his experience was an invaluable complement to his clinical psychologist training in the United States.

"We so sterilize dying in the States that it loses its humanity, its emotion. Here we can love them, be close to them," he said, gently dusting antibiotic powder into the suppurating wound on a man's leg.

"What is important is touching one individual life and making it better even if only for a few moments before death. Mother tries to show us this.

"She has taught us the importance of human touch, of caring," Finnegan said. "I've learned more here than in all my years of training. The thing we need most is love. Simplicity is the key."

Paulette, from Dunkirk, France, was nearly overwhelmed by the stench of death and the physical suffering at the hospice.

"The first time I wanted to run out. But somehow you ask for strength and get to work. You feel a kind of love that frees you to work," said Paulette, who declined to give her last name.

Nirmal Hridal, which means "Immaculate Soul" in Bengali, is an outbuilding of the ancient Kalighat temple for which Calcutta is named. It was given to Mother Teresa for the work she began in the 1950s.

ON A CORNER of a rundown area known for its six-rupee (30 cent) prostitutes, Nirmal Hriday's thick stucco walls house 80 to 100 victims of India's crushing poverty.

In the monsoon season, when disease is at its worst, dozens are brought daily to Nirmal Hriday. Five to 10 of them are in the hospice's tiled mortuary by nightfall.

Those who recover are sent to a shelter run by Mother Teresa's Missionaries of Charity, where they receive further food and medical care.

The mission also operates leper colonies, dispensaries, clinics, and an orphanage in Calcutta. But Nirmal Hriday is the last stop for the poorest of the poor.

Sister Luke, the efficient, Singapore-born nun who runs Nirmal Hriday for Mother Teresa, said most people die from infections that their bodies, worn out by overwork and malnutrition, are too weak to fight.

SHE SAID the 20 nuns at the hospice carry out most of the work, but foreign volunteers, particularly those with medical training, are welcome.

"It is a labor of love for them. Sometimes they cause us problems, but they offer their love so we cannot deny them," she said.

Glen, a printer from Sydney, Australia, came to India as a tourist when he decided to devote at least part of his trip to work at Nirmal Hriday.

"It is hard to be with someone, clean them up, hold them and then see them die. I work only five hours a day and I'm exhausted. The sisters are here all the time," he said. "It must be God."

Like some other foreigners at the hospice, Glen was reluctant to give his last name. He said he did not have a visa that permitted him to work. Police had questioned some volunteers about their activities.

"I tell them not to be angry because that would stop us from doing something — from loving them and bringing them with love into everlasting life," Mother Teresa said.

"Mother knows what she wants and she just goes straight for it," one nun said. "It is very hard to deny her. Her method is to just allow God to use her without question or limit."

Book answers emergency questions

Copley News Service

Any parent who ever has been frozen with fear over a child's medical emergency — or worries about such a time — will welcome a thin, spiral notebook that simply and clearly outlines what to do to keep a child alive until help arrives.

The lean handbook, titled "Emergency Medical Treatment: Children," was written by a man who knows that necessity really is the mother of invention.

"I can remember almost every detail of that night when Sam, who had been ill with a slight fever, suddenly went into a seizure after his fever soared to 105 degrees," recalls David Manhoff, a Chicago advertising copywriter.

Sam was 18 months old. He had stopped breathing and stiffened in his mother's arms. His eyes had rolled back and he was turning blue.

His father, using procedures learned as an Army combat medical corpsman, tried to revive the baby while Janice Manhoff called paramedics and ran across the street for Dr. Stephen Vogel, a neighbor and a specialist in emergency medicine.

"Steve came immediately and took over," David remembers. "As Sam was recovering from the seizure, the ambulance arrived. What seemed like an eternity really only took about four minutes. But the experience of seeing my son lying there turning blue, and feeling so helpless, is something I'd like to help other parents avoid."

Thus the book — 26 pages of do-it-yourself, step-by-step instructions for dealing with loss of breathing, drowning, bleeding, poisoning, burns, broken bones and other emergencies.

The experience with Sam (now 5), plus the fact that Manhoff could not find a "simple" emergency handbook, led him to work with Vogel in preparing the illustrated manual that addresses 15 of the most common, life-threatening emergencies.

"We tried to boil this down to things that are truly life-threatening or perceived as such," Manhoff says. "The book is not designed to provide definitive treatment. It's meant to answer the question, 'What can I do to keep my child alive while waiting for the ambulance?' "

Vogel provided the medical explanations, which Manhoff says he "translated" into the simplest possible language so that the handbook can be read and understood by everyone who might need it, from grandparents to teachers to teenage baby sitters.

CNS Graphic

A convenient part of this little manual is its tabbed sections, which make for instant access to the particular emergency treatment needed. While the authors say the tabs make it unnecessary to have to read the book before you need it that wouldn't hurt.

Each section consists of two facing pages that will lie flat for reading, leaving hands free to administer life-saving procedures. Oversize print adds to the book's efficiency, as do the follow-by-number instructions.

In the poisoning section, for example, the first instruction is to call for help. Then check for pulse and breathing. If there is neither, the reader is advised to go to page 6 for cardiopulmonary resuscitation instructions. Next, call the doctor or Poison Control Center for help in determining whether the child should be made to vomit.

If neither is available, illustrations of various poisons then guide adults to make the decisions themselves — acids and caustics should not be thrown up, while medicines and other toxic substances should be gotten out of the system — and the book tells how to proceed. Finally, the child should be transported immediately to a hospital.

Vogel points out that in cases such as choking and drowning, reviving a child as quickly as possible lessens the chances of brain damage due to prolonged lack of oxygen. He adds that, with toddlers, the bathtub is as dangerous as a swimming pool, making drowning a potential year-round accident.

The book is available by mail order only from EMT Inc., P.O. Box 983, Wilmette, IL 60091. The cost is $5.95, including postage and handling.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I would like to comment about the letter from an Alabama reader who gave examples of "how one vote changed history." His purpose, to encourage voting, was a good one, but most of his facts were wrong.

He said: "In 1645, one vote gave Oliver Cromwell control of England."

Wrong! In 1645, Oliver Cromwell became leader of the New Model (Puritan) Army, but NOT of England, which was then in the midst of a civil war. He didn't establish his own government until 1649 — and then did so in part by expelling opponents from Parliament. It wasn't primarily votes but strong leadership and military force that established his control.

He said: "In 1649, one vote caused King Charles of England to be executed."

Wrong! In 1649, King Charles I of England was executed — but not as a result of a one-vote margin. Cromwell's soldiers excluded the moderate majority from the House of Commons and shut down the pro-royalist House of Lords entirely; a newly established revolutionary tribunal then tried the king and overwhelmingly condemned him to death.

He stated: "In 1845, one vote brought Texas into the Union."

Wrong! In 1845, the U.S. Senate passed the convention annexing Texas by two votes (27-25), not one; and it entered into force only after ratification by the Texas Congress and voters.

Wrong! In 1876, France was not a monarchy; it had become a republic in 1875, by a larger margin. (Its empire had ended in 1870; previous monarchies ended in 1830 and 1848.)

He stated: "In 1923, one vote gave Adolf Hitler leadership of the Nazi Party."

Wrong! Hitler acquired dictatorial control of the Nazi Party in 1921, not 1923, and by a party congress vote of 553-1 — not exactly a one-vote margin.

Abby, if your Alabama correspondent wanted his argument to be effective, he should have checked his facts. — LOUISE E. HOFFMAN, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. HOFFMAN: I was hesitant to publish his letter without checking his facts, but he seemed so cotton pickin' sure, I didn't question his sources. My fault, not his.

DEAR ABBY: You tell old people it's all right for them to touch, hug and kiss, but what about getting between the sheets for a little sex once in a while? We are both 85 years old and in good health, and we are very good friends.

Is this an unpardonable sin? Please answer in the newspaper — maybe someone else would like to know. — H.B. IN ILLINOIS

DEAR H.B.: I am not authorized to pardon sins, but if I were, I would worry less about what two old lovers did between the sheets and more about man's inhumanity to man.

DEAR ABBY: You've had a lot of letters about adopted children in your column lately. I'd like to add to it.

After I was born, my mother was not able to have any more children, so she and my father adopted a 5-day-old boy. (I am also a boy.) In their determination to make their adopted son feel as loved and wanted as their natural child (me), they went overboard. I heard that "Jimmy" was their "chosen" child, which made me think that when I was born they had to take what they got — but Jimmy was special, so they "chose" him.

I grew up feeling inferior and less wanted than my little brother. I felt that I had to prove my worthiness by being competitive with him. I wanted to love him, but it was hard when he was given preferential treatment and told he was their "special, chosen child." I know my parents loved me, too — but it took a lot of understanding, not to mention several years with a psychoanalyst, to straighten my head out.

Print this. It may help other well-meaning parents. — NAMELESS

CHICAGO (AP) — A 4-year-old left alone with his 2-year-old brother is in trouble: the younger child has cut his leg and the older boy doesn't know what to do.

"We started off immediately getting unbelievable calls," she said in a recent interview.

Kids Line is non-profit and supported by money from federal, state, and local governments, the United Way and other sources, said Mrs. LaSusa. Today, there are similar programs nationwide, including one each in Arizona, New York, Florida, New Jersey, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

"The numbers will continue to grow because you have more and more women entering the work force," said institute co-director Lynette Long.

Most of the calls to Kids Line are from children who are lonely and depressed, Mrs. LaSusa said. That's followed by children who want suggestions on how to constructively use their time.

"Kids want to be able to do something," she said. "We've had kids call just to say, 'Hey, I had a good day.' "

She said she's also handled calls that made her lie awake at night.

"This was when it was cold, it was snowing and the child didn't have a coat," she said. "The guard found a master key, and when they went inside, there was a 7-year-old taking care of a 1-year-old."

In the case of the 4-year-old boy seeking care for his 2-year-old brother, whose leg was cut, "They'd been left alone and he just didn't know what to do," Mrs. LaSusa said.

"He wanted to stop the bleeding on the leg, so we gave him first-aid instructions.

"The kid had been told by the parents, 'Don't you dare tell anybody your number or where you live.' So when he got the information, he hung up."

In situations where the children appear to be in danger, volunteers may have calls traced, then notify police, juvenile officers or social workers, Mrs. LaSusa said.

"I talked to her for a little bit and then she seemed to get real, real scared and hung up on me," said Budinger. "And then she called up 15 minutes later and said she wanted to talk some more. But then she said she heard some noise and hung up, and I never heard from her again."

CHICAGO (AP) — An estimated 5 million school-age children between the ages of 5 and 13 are so-called "latchkey children" — kids who care for themselves while parents are at work — according to a new publication from the National PTA.

The brochure, "Kids with keys ... Parents with jobs ... Who's in charge?" reminds parents of the "bottom line": a parent is still in charge whether physically present or not. Also included are alternatives to leaving children alone, safety rules, and constructive after-school activities for children.

Many working parents must make the important decision of whether or not to let children care for themselves for part of the day, the PTA notes. It recommends that parents consider their children's maturity and personality, and whether they can be relied upon to obey agreed-on rules, finish homework and complete chores.

Check to see if your community offers such backup services as block parent, green hand or safe house programs, where signs placed in windows signal that children can come for help in an emergency, or hotlines that children can call if they are frightened or lonely. If not, the organization adds, consider getting the local PTA involved in starting them.

The PTA publication encourages parents to practice good parent-child communication and to teach responsibility and self-discipline, which will help develop children's judgment and self-confidence.

Parents also need to show children their concern, the PTA advises. They need to know you think of them while you are away ... and that you're happy to see them at the end of the day. The brochure suggests complimenting children on jobs well done and making plans to spend time together during the evenings and on weekends.

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell in nervous early trading against all major currencies today and plunged to new post-World War II record low against the Japanese yen. Gold prices were mixed.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar slumped 2.65 yen to close at 160.20 yen, its eighth postwar record low in 14 trading days. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 160.60 yen.

Traders attribute the dollar's continuing fall against the yen to speculative selling and the lack of a specific agreement at the May 4-6 Tokyo economic summit on measures to prop up the dollar.

The dollar now has fallen 15.65 yen in 14 trading days and more than 81 yen since last September, when monetary authorities of five major industrial nations agreed to work for a lower dollar to help ease U.S. trade deficits.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $344.60 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $344.80, but moved up later. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $344.90.

GAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Higher oil costs have pushed up gas prices after a five-month plunge and more retail hikes loom as the summer motoring season shifts into overdrive, an industry analyst says.

The weekend upswing of 2.33 cents a gallon brought the new 50-state average to 92.29 cents a gallon, analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday.

"This Mother's Day increase reflects an earlier-than-usual price boost normally associated with Memorial Day," said Lundberg, adding that the early price jump was unprecedented.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Engineers and Amtrak have agreed to hold talks Tuesday on proposed changes in working conditions after union officials called off a threatened midnight strike that would have disrupted service for 24,000 intercity travelers and possibly thousands of commuters.

Amtrak officials, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers international Vice President Joe Carberry, and William G. Hausleiter, general chairman of the BLE Amtrak local in Trenton, N.J., will meet in Washington on Tuesday, said Amtrak spokeswoman Sue Martin.

Arthur B. Shenefelt, consultant to the BLE's Amtrak committee, said union leaders talked informally with Amtrak officials on Sunday and were "making progress."

The 2,000 members of the BLE Amtrak local had threatened to strike at 12:01 a.m. EDT today on trains in the Northeast corridor route and two spurs running from Springfield, Mass., to New Haven, Conn., and from Harrisburg, Pa., to Philadelphia.

New York City and Philadelphia commuters also could have been affected because engineers for commuter lines in those cities had pledged to walk out with the Amtrak engineers, even though contracts and court orders prohibit sympathy walkouts.

However, Ms. Martin announced Sunday that BLE headquarters had instructed local union members not to strike, and Hausleiter confirmed that there would be no strike.

"Amtrak expects to operate all of its trains normally without disruption," Ms. Martin said.

"I'm sure my members will be relieved. We want to serve the traveling public but we just can't let Amtrak trample on our rights," Hausleiter said. "We weren't looking for a strike, but we're ready."

Anthony Grazioso, a spokesman for the NJ Transit Corp., said Amtrak officials told the New Jersey state transportation agency Sunday that a strike appeared unlikely.

The formal talks between the union and Amtrak officials are expected to focus on "a whole program" of proposed changes in working conditions.

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — The wooden plaques above Kathy Ashton's desk tell it all.

For years, Village AMC-Jeep-Renault heralded its Salesman of the Year. But the latest one is unisex: Sales Leader of the Year, it says.

Car salesmen take a back seat to Ashton and the dealership's other saleswomen most of the time these days, reflecting the growing power of women in the car market and the good fortune of dealers who make special efforts to land women customers.

"Women who come in here usually go straight to my desk," said Ashton, 26.

Henry Ford peddled Model Ts to women aggressively 60 years ago, so catering to women isn't new. But the splintering of American families and the growing number of working women have increased their marketplace power, and dealers are catching on.

A host of new surveys indicate that women, who accounted for 15 percent of new-car purchases 20 years ago, now buy more than 40 percent, spending more than $55 billion on new cars in 1985. The influence of women on car purchases by their husbands also is growing.

Mesa Partners will curtail production

AMARILLO (SWN) — T. Boone Pickens, Jr., general partner of Mesa Limited Partnership, announced that the partnership will curtail approximately 20 percent of its crude oil production beginning June 1, 1986.

Pickens said the decision to reduce production is based on the expectation that posted oil prices will rise significantly above the current level of $14 per barrel for West Texas Intermediate.

"Mesa's management has carefully analyzed crude oil supply and demand, and we believe that prices will rebound to $20 per barrel by the end of 1986," Pickens said. "We believe it is in the economic best interest of Mesa's owners to limit production until prices rise to a level offering more attractive returns to the partnership."

Mesa Limited Partnership, the nation's largest independent oil and gas producer, operates oil wells with current production of approximately 4,500 barrels per day. The Parntership intends to curtail up to 1,000 barrels per day from its working interest share of total crude oil production. The reductions will be limited to those properties that can be curtailed without reservoir damage and that can be returned to full production. Although the affected properties are being operated profitably at current prices, Mesa believes the Partnership ultimately will realize enhanced returns by deferring this production. The reduction will have no effect on the Partnership's ability to maintain annual cash distributions in the range of $1.50 to $2.00 per unit.

Proxy fights becoming popular

Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The old-fashioned proxy contest has gained new popularity for groups seeking to take control of a company.

"I think we're beginning to see more and more of them and we're going to have more and more," said Arthur Long Sr., president of proxy solicitors D.F. King & Co. This year, he says, there have been 18 contests, compared with 15 at the same time in 1985.

In the last few years, proxy fights have changed from mud-slinging popularity contests for control of a corporation into "a tool for takeovers that is often used in combination with other tactics, such as bids to buy the company," said John Wilcox, managing director of proxy solicitors Georgeson & Co. Inc.

No longer are the fights aimed solely at discrediting a company's management. "The appeal is as much to the pocketbook of the shareholders and their desires to make money quickly," Wilcox said.

—The relative low cost of a proxy fight. An investment group with only 10 or 15 percent of a target company's stock can spend as little as $100,000 to gain control of a company by ousting its board.

—The increased use of poison pills and other anti-takeover measures that are triggered when an acquirer buys a specified portion of a target company's stock. Proxy fights are not covered by such rules.

Public alert urged for Audi

WASHINGTON (AP) — An auto safety group that claims unwarranted sudden acceleration in Audi 5000S vehicles has caused hundreds of accidents has urged the government to issue a "public alert" on the alleged problem.

The private Center for Auto Safety called on the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to issue the warning following the death Monday of a woman in Buffalo Grove, Ill., who was struck by a 1983 Audi 5000S that reportedly experienced uncontrolled acceleration after its driver shifted the car into reverse.

The center also wrote to Illinois Attorney General Neil Hartigan urging him to alert Illinois drivers about the potential problem, and to consider imposing a ban on the sale of new Audi 5000S vehicles until the alleged problem could be corrected.

The center, joined by New York Attorney General Robert Abrams, in March filed a petition with NHTSA that asks the agency to upgrade its preliminary inquiry into the alleged defect and to order the recall of all 1978-86 automatic transmission models.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Summer job market expected to be stagnant

NEW YORK (AP) — Youngsters nationwide will likely encounter difficulty finding jobs this summer, just as they did in 1985, because of economic sluggishness and declines in federal aid, the Conference Board says.

The business-sponsored research group said Sunday that a survey of job-program administrators showed there will be no growth in job placements this summer, with the possible exception of New York City and Philadelphia, where private-sector commitment has been strong and effective.

Signs point to national economic strength

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Encouraged by signs of new growth and low interest rates, top business experts say the U.S. economy should strengthen for the next two years.

But they expressed nervousness about the consequences of tax reform on the business community and acknowledged that capital spending and commercial construction remain weak.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Boston area was the nation's most expensive housing market during the first three months of 1986, with a median price of $149,000 for existing homes, a trade group's quarterly survey shows.

Damages of Third World debt widespread

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration policy on the Third World's nearly $1 trillion debt has helped big banks but damaged small banks, farmers, workers and the debtor nations, a congressional study shows.

A report by the staff of the Joint Economic Committee released on Friday also said there is strong pressure on leading debtor nations to defer or default on loan payments, which threatens some banks with large losses.

The report cited estimates that more tha a million jobs have been lost in this country because of reduced U.S. exports to debtor countries, and increased imports from them.

Supply fears, demand drive NYMEX higher

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices have jumped sharply because of rising demand for gasoline and fears of supply disruptions in the Persian Gulf, where the Iran-Iraq war has intensified.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for June delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. grade of crude, closed Friday at $15.86 a barrel, up 12 cents for the day and capping a week in which the price rose above the $15 mark for the first time in more than two months.

Chernobyl effects not figured in crop forecasts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union's 1986 grain harvest may produce 190 million metric tons, the same yield as last year, the Agriculture Department says, but the forecast does not reflect the possible impact on crops

Stock Market Mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market traded in a tight range today, with the blue chips held aloft by strength in oil and technology issues.

In the broader market, declines outnumbered advances by 675 to 669 and 447 issues were unchanged in the overall tally on the New York Stock Exchange. The NYSE composite index edged up 0.11 to 137.23.

Stocks were restrained by weakness in the bond market, where some actively traded long-term government bonds were off nearly 2 points, or $20 for each $1,000 in face amount.

Several oil stocks were among the most actively traded issues and benefited from reports that Norway might cooperate with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on a plan to stabilize oil prices. Exxon, one of the Dow industrial stocks, rose 1⅜ to 60.

Inexco Oil rose 1⅛ to 4⅞, Mobil gained ½ to 30⅞, Occidental Petroleum moved up ¾ to 29¼, Atlantic Richfield rose ⅝ to 57¾ and Phillips Petroleum was unchanged at 10½.

Some technology stocks moved ahead. Industry leader International Business Machines spurted 1½ to 151¼.

Non-explosive weapons can also wreak economic havoc

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — The Chernobyl nuclear disaster has reminded people that the Soviet Union and the United States, among other nations, have enough nuclear warheads to reduce the civilized world to ashes.

But there are non-explosive weapons that in their own way can wreak havoc, and the Western world is vulnerable to them. They are economic weapons, which, of course, can be employed much more subtly than can bombs.

Fidel Castro last week provided an example, suggesting again that Latin American nations default on their huge debts to international commercial banks, and backing up his idea with plans to defer Cuban interest payments.

While a cartel to default on loans could boomerang on Cuba and its allies, it might also cause chaos for international banks, and U.S. banks particularly, some of which already are weakened by domestic and foreign problem loans.

Dependence on foreign investments — as opposed to loans to foreigners — creates another vulnerable area for the U.S. economy.

If the United States cannot continue to attract those investments, or if foreigners for any reason withdraw investments suddenly, the consequences could be serious, affecting stocks, bonds, banks, construction and more.

Fears are frequently voiced by economists and government officials that the United States is risking that very threat now in pursuing a lower value for the dollar in relation to other currencies.

As the dollar's exchange rate falls, investments in the United States are less attractive to foreign interests, particularly the Japanese. Already, therefore, that vulnerability affects American policy toward that country.

Among other potential affects, according to some financial analysts, is a tighter Federal Reserve monetary policy in order to force interest rates higher. As some of them view the scenario, that would mean more inflation too.

While many Americans rejoice in lower oil prices, the possibility exists that good news could become bad news. It is a real possibility, one that President Reagan explained to reporters in his latest news conference.

It is possible, said the president, that "somebody would think of driving it (the price of oil) down to the point that they get rid of a lot of competition..."

What might happen then, he continued, is "what comes naturally to a monopolist — the price would start going up again, as it once did when others had a very dominant voice and hold on the oil market."

Meanwhile, as a consequence of lower oil prices, much domestic exploration has ceased, and many organizations that were relied upon to seek and develop new supplies are out of business. And the United States is more vulnerable.

Most people probably thought Reagan referred to Saudi Arabia and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. But, says economist Sam Nakagama, "it seems more likely that he was actually speaking of the Soviet Union."

One reason for concern is that in late April the Soviets seem to have abandoned fixed prices in favor of a flexible-pricing system aimed at getting a larger share of the market. For the most part, their prices will fall.

Says Nakagama, who advises many corporations and financial institutions, the Soviets could "flood the world oil markets and so be in a position to knock out a large portion of U.S. oil production capacity."

Such an event, he adds, could "destabilize the Mexican economic and political system, and seriously undermine the American banking system."

Questions have been raised, however, about the Soviet's ability to keep up with current export agreements, especially if reduced nuclear plant operations raise domestic consumption of oil.

Soviet-U.S. competition in arms spending could be another area of economic warfare. Although most economic analysts might give the winner's edge to the United States, some Soviet goals might be achieved in the process.

Still another area of potential problems exists whenever nations trade. Just as big borrowers can damage lenders, big buyers can have a negative affect on sellers, and nobody knows this more than the American farmer. Once a big supplier to the Soviets, he is now out of favor — and feeling it.

Whether it was the intention of the Soviets to do their bit to worsen the American farming industry is debatable. From one perspective, in fact, it was Americans who tried to hurt the Soviets (for intervening in Afghanistan).

Such situations, however, illustrate the potential for economic warfare — a devious sort of aggression that can be practiced so quietly, relatively speaking, that suddenly it can have the unsuspecting victim by the throat.

IRA sponsors may charge whatever market will bear

By BILL DOYLE

Q. As a married couple getting ready to retire, we are chagrined by the fees which erode our individual retirement accounts.

Annual maintenance fees of $20 each were applied to my account and my wife's spousal IRA. Recently, we decided to transfer our IRAs from the brokerage firm where we had them to a mutual fund. The brokerage charged a $50 termination fee on each account — total $100.

Aren't these fees excessive? If so, to whom should I report this?

Doyle

A. "Excessive" is a properly descriptive word, especially if your IRAs aren't large. A $20 annual fee might eat up most or all of the income in a small account.

Unfortunately, it's unlikely there's anything you can do about those charges. Each IRA sponsor or trustee sets its own fees. Some don't charge any. Others levy fat fees. Generally, brokerage firms charge the highest IRA fees.

It's too late for you to recoup those brokerage house charges, but you should check out all charges before opening any IRA or any other account.

• • •

Q. The savings and loan association at which I have my individual retirement account sent me a notice that the $5 annual administrative fee has been eliminated and that a $25 fee will be applied to any retirement plan withdrawals, other than normal retirement distributions.

The certificate of deposit I have in my IRA will mature in a few months. At that time, I intend to transfer my IRA elsewhere. It is unfair to change the rules under which I bought the CD. Can the the S&L get away with this?

A. Not if the IRA agreement you signed specifically prohibits a withdrawal fee. But the chances of such a clause being in the agreement have to be counted as slim to nil.

The typical IRA agreement gives to the sponsor or trustee a great deal of leeway to raise fees. Naturally, outfits handling IRAs don't want the money to leave. So, many of them are fattening up withdrawal fees.

By TOM RAUM

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the new international monetary system embraced at the Tokyo economic summit works, it could mean fewer overseas bargains for tourists but more reliable foreign markets for farmers, manufacturers and other exporters.

And that could help ease this nation's $150 billion trade imbalance considerably, say U.S. officials who worked on the new plan for increased exchange-rate coordination.

The program, largely engineered by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, seeks to eliminate wild swings in the value of one major currency against another.

The current 13-year-old "floating" exchange rate system, in which currencies seek their own levels based on market forces, had too much built-in flexibility, claim framers of the new plan.

The first test of the new coordinated system could come in September, in conjunction with a meeting of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

The director of the IMF will play a central role in carrying out the coordination of the new exchange-rate system — serving as a referee of sorts.

When one currency is unusual "strong" against another — as the U.S. dollar was against the Japanese yen just a year ago — foreign goods become less expensive for those with the strong currency.

Thus, Japanese goods were artificially low-priced in this country — or for U.S. tourists shopping in Japan — while the counterpart U.S.-made products became overpriced in Japan.

That may have been good news for tourists and import-hungry consumers — but not for U.S. farmers or manufacturers who saw their overseas markets dwindling.

Now, the dollar-yen relationship has come full circle. The dollar that equaled 250 yen a year ago now buys barely more than 160 yen.

And, as Americans attending the Tokyo summit discovered the hard way last week, the U.S. dollar doesn't go very far in Japan these days — buying about 35 percent less, in fact, than it did a year ago.

It is these sort of fluctuations in exchange rates that the new plan is designed to head off before they snowball. They are to be moderated through constant monitoring by the five nations that have major currencies: the United States (dollar), Japan (yen), West Germany (mark), Britain (pound) and France (franc).

This group of nations — called the "Group of Five," or G-5 in international monetary parlance — would be joined by Canada and Italy when most major exchange-rate actions are to be taken, under terms of the plan.

All seven nations, by design the same seven who participate in the annual economic summits, would get together from time to time, but at least once a year, to fine-tune exchange rates.

Economic "indicators," reflecting production growth, trade balances, inflation, interest rates, and so forth, would be used to determine how well each nation was doing in living up to the goals.

The IMF director would monitor these indicators. When one or another started to act up, it would put in motion the mechanism that could lead to concerted action by the big five — or seven — industrialized nations.

This action would include, but would not be limited to, so-called "intervention," in which governments themselves buy or sell currencies on international markets in volumes large enough to affect exchange rates.

However, "We have a clear idea of where we want to go and we have very good support for it," said a senior Reagan administration official who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

"Even if we should not be able to implement this in the way we'd like, we're better off than we were before," the official said.

But, because international agreements of this sort don't arrive by fiat but are the result of painstaking compromises, getting the new system fully in gear will be a delicate operation, the official said.

"We had to address a number of different interests in giving birth to this," he said. "Those same interests will have to be addressed in the implementation stage. Some (nations) will have an interest in moving more promptly than others."

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell in nervous early trading against all major currencies today and plunged to new post-World War II record low against the Japanese yen. Gold prices were mixed.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar slumped 2.65 yen to close at 160.20 yen, its eighth postwar record low in 14 trading days. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 160.60 yen.

Traders attribute the dollar's continuing fall against the yen to speculative selling and the lack of a specific agreement at the May 4-6 Tokyo economic summit on measures to prop up the dollar.

The dollar now has fallen 15.65 yen in 14 trading days and more than 81 yen since last September, when monetary authorities of five major industrial nations agreed to work for a lower dollar to help ease U.S. trade deficits.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $344.60 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $344.80, but moved up later. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $344.90.

In Zurich, the bid price was $344.70, down from $346 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, rose 53 cents an ounce to close at a bid $344.47.

GAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Higher oil costs have pushed up gas prices after a five-month plunge and more retail hikes loom as the summer motoring season shifts into overdrive, an industry analyst says.

The weekend upswing of 2.33 cents a gallon brought the new 50-state average to 92.29 cents a gallon, analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday.

"This Mother's Day increase reflects an earlier-than-usual price boost normally associated with Memorial Day," said Lundberg, adding that the early price jump was unprecedented.

Crude oil prices broke at a $15-a-barrel level, the highest price in three months.

Amtrack, engineers agree to hold talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Engineers and Amtrak have agreed to hold talks Tuesday on proposed changes in working conditions after union officials called off a threatened midnight strike that would have disrupted service for 24,000 intercity travelers and possibly thousands of commuters.

Amtrak officials, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers international Vice President Joe Carberry, and William G. Hausleiter, general chairman of the BLE Amtrak local in Trenton, N.J., will meet in Washington on Tuesday, said Amtrak spokeswoman Sue Martin.

Arthur B. Shenefelt, consultant to the BLE's Amtrak committee, said union leaders talked informally with Amtrak officials on Sunday and were "making progress."

The 2,000 members of the BLE Amtrak local had threatened to strike at 12:01 a.m. EDT today on trains in the Northeast corridor route and two spurs running from Springfield, Mass., to New Haven, Conn., and from Harrisburg, Pa., to Philadelphia.

New York City and Philadelphia commuters also could have been affected because engineers for commuter lines in those cities had pledged to walk out with the Amtrak engineers, even though contracts and court orders prohibit sympathy walkouts.

However, Ms. Martin announced Sunday that BLE headquarters had instructed local union members not to strike, and Hausleiter confirmed that there would be no strike.

"Amtrak expects to operate all of its trains normally without disruption," Ms. Martin said.

"I'm sure my members will be relieved. We want to serve the traveling public but we just can't let Amtrak trample on our rights," Hausleiter said. "We weren't looking for a strike, but we're ready."

Anthony Grazioso, a spokesman for the NJ Transit Corp., said Amtrak officials told the New Jersey state transportation agency Sunday that a strike appeared unlikely.

The formal talks between the union and Amtrak officials are expected to focus on "a whole program" of proposed changes in working conditions.

Women boost car sales

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — The wooden plaques above Kathy Ashton's desk tell it all.

For years, Village AMC-Jeep-Renault heralded its Salesman of the Year. But the latest one is unisex: Sales Leader of the Year, it says.

Car salesmen take a back seat to Ashton and the dealership's other saleswomen most of the time these days, reflecting the growing power of women in the car market and the good fortune of dealers who make special efforts to land women customers.

"Women who come in here usually go straight to my desk," said Ashton, 26.

Henry Ford peddled Model Ts to women aggressively 60 years ago, so catering to women isn't new. But the splintering of American families and the growing number of working women have increased their marketplace power, and dealers are catching on.

A host of new surveys indicate that women, who accounted for 15 percent of new-car purchases 20 years ago, now buy more than 40 percent, spending more than $55 billion on new cars in 1985. The influence of women on car purchases by their husbands also is growing.

U.S. and foreign automakers who once treated women as second-class customers have changed their ways dramatically in recent years, holding seminars for salespeople, flooding dealerships with videotapes on how to keep women from walking out the door and gearing more advertising toward women.

Mesa Partners will curtail production

AMARILLO (SWN) — T. Boone Pickens, Jr., general partner of Mesa Limited Partnership, announced that the partnership will curtail approximately 20 percent of its crude oil production beginning June 1, 1986.

Pickens said the decision to reduce production is based on the expectation that posted oil prices will rise significantly above the current level of $14 per barrel for West Texas Intermediate.

"Mesa's management has carefully analyzed crude oil supply and demand, and we believe that prices will rebound to $20 per barrel by the end of 1986," Pickens said. "We believe it is in the economic best interest of Mesa's owners to limit production until prices rise to a level offering more attractive returns to the partnership."

Mesa Limited Partnership, the nation's largest independent oil and gas producer, operates oil wells with current production of approximately 4,500 barrels per day. The Parntership intends to curtail up to 1,000 barrels per day from its working interest share of total crude oil production. The reductions will be limited to those properties that can be curtailed without reservoir damage and that can be returned to full production. Although the affected properties are being operated profitably at current prices, Mesa believes the Partnership ultimately will realize enhanced returns by deferring this production. The reduction will have no effect on the Partnership's ability to maintain annual cash distributions in the range of $1.50 to $2.00 per unit.

Proxy fights becoming popular

Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The old-fashioned proxy contest has gained new popularity for groups seeking to take control of a company.

"I think we're beginning to see more and more of them and we're going to have more and more," said Arthur Long Sr., president of proxy solicitors D.F. King & Co. This year, he says, there have been 18 contests, compared with 15 at the same time in 1985.

In the last few years, proxy fights have changed from mud-slinging popularity contests for control of a corporation into "a tool for takeovers that is often used in combination with other tactics, such as bids to buy the company," said John Wilcox, managing director of proxy solicitors Georgeson & Co. Inc.

No longer are the fights aimed solely at discrediting a company's management. "The appeal is as much to the pocketbook of the shareholders and their desires to make money quickly," Wilcox said.

The reasons for the contests' new popularity include:

—High stock prices that make tender offers expensive.

—The relative low cost of a proxy fight. An investment group with only 10 or 15 percent of a target company's stock can spend as little as $100,000 to gain control of a company by ousting its board.

—The increased use of poison pills and other anti-takeover measures that are triggered when an acquirer buys a specified portion of a target company's stock. Proxy fights are not covered by such rules.

Public alert urged for Audi

WASHINGTON (AP) — An auto safety group that claims unwarranted sudden acceleration in Audi 5000S vehicles has caused hundreds of accidents has urged the government to issue a "public alert" on the alleged problem.

The private Center for Auto Safety called on the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to issue the warning following the death Monday of a woman in Buffalo Grove, Ill., who was struck by a 1983 Audi 5000S that reportedly experienced uncontrolled acceleration after its driver shifted the car into reverse.

The center also wrote to Illinois Attorney General Neil Hartigan urging him to alert Illinois drivers about the potential problem, and to consider imposing a ban on the sale of new Audi 5000S vehicles until the alleged problem could be corrected.

The center, joined by New York Attorney General Robert Abrams, in March filed a petition with NHTSA that asks the agency to upgrade its preliminary inquiry into the alleged defect and to order the recall of all 1978-86 automatic transmission models.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Summer job market expected to be stagnant

NEW YORK (AP) — Youngsters nationwide will likely encounter difficulty finding jobs this summer, just as they did in 1985, because of economic sluggishness and declines in federal aid, the Conference Board says.

The business-sponsored research group said Sunday that a survey of job-program administrators showed there will be no growth in job placements this summer, with the possible exception of New York City and Philadelphia, where private-sector commitment has been strong and effective.

Signs point to national economic strength

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Encouraged by signs of new growth and low interest rates, top business experts say the U.S. economy should strengthen for the next two years.

But they expressed nervousness about the consequences of tax reform on the business community and acknowledged that capital spending and commercial construction remain weak.

Boston, Louisville anchor realtors' price list

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Boston area was the nation's most expensive housing market during the first three months of 1986, with a median price of $149,000 for existing homes, a trade group's quarterly survey shows.

The National Association of Realtors' found that the Louisville, Ky., area was the least expensive metropolitan real estate market, with a median price of $48,100. The survey was released Friday.

Damages of Third World debt widespread

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration policy on the Third World's nearly $1 trillion debt has helped big banks but damaged small banks, farmers, workers and the debtor nations, a congressional study shows.

A report by the staff of the Joint Economic Committee released on Friday also said there is strong pressure on leading debtor nations to defer or default on loan payments, which threatens some banks with large losses.

The report cited estimates that more tha a million jobs have been lost in this country because of reduced U.S. exports to debtor countries, and increased imports from them.

Supply fears, demand drive NYMEX higher

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices have jumped sharply because of rising demand for gasoline and fears of supply disruptions in the Persian Gulf, where the Iran-Iraq war has intensified.

Stock Market Mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market traded in a tight range today, with the blue chips held aloft by strength in oil and technology issues.

In the broader market, declines outnumbered advances by 675 to 669 and 447 issues were unchanged in the overall tally on the New York Stock Exchange. The NYSE composite index edged up 0.11 to 137.23.

Stocks were restrained by weakness in the bond market, where some actively traded long-term government bonds were off nearly 2 points, or $20 for each $1,000 in face amount.

Several oil stocks were among the most actively traded issues and benefited from reports that Norway might cooperate with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on a plan to stabilize oil prices. Exxon, one of the Dow industrial stocks, rose 1⅜ to 60.

Inexco Oil rose 1⅛ to 4⅞, Mobil gained ½ to 30⅞, Occidental Petroleum moved up ¾ to 29¼, Atlantic Richfield rose ⅝ to 57¾ and Phillips Petroleum was unchanged at 10½.

Some technology stocks moved ahead. Industry leader International Business Machines spurted 1½ to 151¼.

Volume on the Big Board came to 57.24 million shares at midday, compared with 59.64 million shares at the same point in the previous session.

Non-explosive weapons can also wreak economic havoc

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — The Chernobyl nuclear disaster has reminded people that the Soviet Union and the United States, among other nations, have enough nuclear warheads to reduce the civilized world to ashes.

But there are non-explosive weapons that in their own way can wreak havoc, and the Western world is vulnerable to them. They are economic weapons, which, of course, can be employed much more subtly than can bombs.

Fidel Castro last week provided an example, suggesting again that Latin American nations default on their huge debts to international commercial banks, and backing up his idea with plans to defer Cuban interest payments.

While a cartel to default on loans could boomerang on Cuba and its allies, it might also cause chaos for international banks, and U.S. banks particularly, some of which already are weakened by domestic and foreign problem loans.

Dependence on foreign investments — as opposed to loans to foreigners — creates another vulnerable area for the U.S. economy.

If the United States cannot continue to attract those investments, or if foreigners for any reason withdraw investments suddenly, the consequences could be serious, affecting stocks, bonds, banks, construction and more.

Fears are frequently voiced by economists and government officials that the United States is risking that very threat now in pursuing a lower value for the dollar in relation to other currencies.

As the dollar's exchange rate falls, investments in the United States are less attractive to foreign interests, particularly the Japanese. Already, therefore, that vulnerability affects American policy toward that country.

Among other potential affects, according to some financial analysts, is a tighter Federal Reserve monetary policy in order to force interest rates higher. As some of them view the scenario, that would mean more inflation too.

While many Americans rejoice in lower oil prices, the possibility exists that good news could become bad news. It is a real possibility, one that President Reagan explained to reporters in his latest news conference.

It is possible, said the president, that "somebody would think of driving it (the price of oil) down to the point that they get rid of a lot of competition..."

What might happen then, he continued, is "what comes naturally to a monopolist — the price would start going up again, as it once did when others had a very dominant voice and hold on the oil market."

Meanwhile, as a consequence of lower oil prices, much domestic exploration has ceased, and many organizations that were relied upon to seek and develop new supplies are out of business. And the United States is more vulnerable.

Most people probably thought Reagan referred to Saudi Arabia and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. But, says economist Sam Nakagama, "it seems more likely that he was actually speaking of the Soviet Union."

One reason for concern is that in late April the Soviets seem to have abandoned fixed prices in favor of a flexible-pricing system aimed at getting a larger share of the market. For the most part, their prices will fall.

Says Nakagama, who advises many corporations and financial institutions, the Soviets could "flood the world oil markets and so be in a position to knock out a large portion of U.S. oil production capacity."

Such an event, he adds, could "destabilize the Mexican economic and political system, and seriously undermine the American banking system."

Questions have been raised, however, about the Soviet's ability to keep up with current export agreements, especially if reduced nuclear plant operations raise domestic consumption of oil.

Soviet-U.S. competition in arms spending could be another area of economic warfare. Although most economic analysts might give the winner's edge to the United States, some Soviet goals might be achieved in the process.

Still another area of potential problems exists whenever nations trade. Just as big borrowers can damage lenders, big buyers can have a negative affect on sellers, and nobody knows this more than the American farmer. Once a big supplier to the Soviets, he is now out of favor — and feeling it.

Whether it was the intention of the Soviets to do their bit to worsen the American farming industry is debatable. From one perspective, in fact, it was Americans who tried to hurt the Soviets (for intervening in Afghanistan).

Such situations, however, illustrate the potential for economic warfare — a devious sort of aggression that can be practiced so quietly, relatively speaking, that suddenly it can have the unsuspecting victim by the throat.

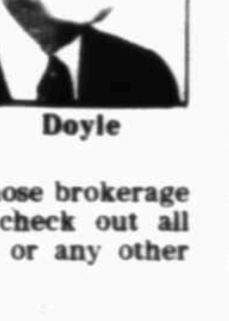
IRA sponsors may charge whatever market will bear

By BILL DOYLE

Q. As a married couple getting ready to retire, we are chagrined by the fees which erode our individual retirement accounts.

Annual maintenance fees of $20 each were applied to my account and my wife's spousal IRA. Recently, we decided to transfer our IRAs from the brokerage firm where we had them to a mutual fund. The brokerage charged a $50 termination fee on each account — total $100.

Aren't these fees excessive? If so, to whom should I report this?



Doyle

A. "Excessive" is a properly descriptive word, especially if your IRAs aren't large. A $20 annual fee might eat up most or all of the income in a small account.

Unfortunately, it's unlikely there's anything you can do about those charges. Each IRA sponsor or trustee sets its own fees. Some don't charge any. Others levy fat fees. Generally, brokerage firms charge the highest IRA fees.

It's too late for you to recoup those brokerage house charges, but you should check out all charges before opening any IRA or any other account.

Q. The savings and loan association at which I have my individual retirement account sent me a notice that the $5 annual administrative fee has been eliminated and that a $25 fee will be applied to any retirement plan withdrawals, other than normal retirement distributions.

The certificate of deposit I have in my IRA will mature in a few months. At that time, I intend to transfer my IRA elsewhere. It is unfair to change the rules under which I bought the CD. Can the the S&L get away with this?

A. Not if the IRA agreement you signed specifically prohibits a withdrawal fee. But the chances of such a clause being in the agreement have to be counted as slim to nil.

The typical IRA agreement gives to the sponsor or trustee a great deal of leeway to raise fees. Naturally, outfits handling IRAs don't want the money to leave. So, many of them are fattening up withdrawal fees.

By TOM RAUM

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the new international monetary system embraced at the Tokyo economic summit works, it could mean fewer overseas bargains for tourists but more reliable foreign markets for farmers, manufacturers and other exporters.

And that could help ease this nation's $150 billion trade imbalance considerably, say U.S. officials who worked on the new plan for increased exchange-rate coordination.

The program, largely engineered by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, seeks to eliminate wild swings in the value of one major currency against another.

The current 13-year-old "floating" exchange rate system, in which currencies seek their own levels based on market forces, had too much built-in flexibility, claim framers of the new plan.

The first test of the new coordinated system could come in September, in conjunction with a meeting of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

The director of the IMF will play a central role in carrying out the coordination of the new exchange-rate system — serving as a referee of sorts.

When one currency is unusual "strong" against another — as the U.S. dollar was against the Japanese yen just a year ago — foreign goods become less expensive for those with the strong currency.

Thus, Japanese goods were artificially low-priced in this country — or for U.S. tourists shopping in Japan — while the counterpart U.S.-made products became overpriced in Japan.

That may have been good news for tourists and import-hungry consumers — but not for U.S. farmers or manufacturers who saw their overseas markets dwindling.

Now, the dollar-yen relationship has come full circle. The dollar that equaled 250 yen a year ago now buys barely more than 160 yen.

And, as Americans attending the Tokyo summit discovered the hard way last week, the U.S. dollar doesn't go very far in Japan these days — buying about 35 percent less, in fact, than it did a year ago.

It is these sort of fluctuations in exchange rates that the new plan is designed to head off before they snowball. They are to be moderated through constant monitoring by the five nations that have major currencies: the United States (dollar), Japan (yen), West Germany (mark), Britain (pound) and France (franc).

This group of nations — called the "Group of Five," or G-5 in international monetary parlance — would be joined by Canada and Italy when most major exchange-rate actions are to be taken, under terms of the plan.

All seven nations, by design the same seven who participate in the annual economic summits, would get together from time to time, but at least once a year, to fine-tune exchange rates.

Economic "indicators," reflecting production growth, trade balances, inflation, interest rates, and so forth, would be used to determine how well each nation was doing in living up to the goals.

The IMF director would monitor these indicators. When one or another started to act up, it would put in motion the mechanism that could lead to concerted action by the big five — or seven — industrialized nations.

This action would include, but would not be limited to, so-called "intervention," in which governments themselves buy or sell currencies on international markets in volumes large enough to affect exchange rates.

Many details of how the new system will function have yet to be worked out.

However, "We have a clear idea of where we want to go and we have very good support for it," said a senior Reagan administration official who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

"Even if we should not be able to implement this in the way we'd like, we're better off than we were before," the official said.

But, because international agreements of this sort don't arrive by fiat but are the result of painstaking compromises, getting the new system fully in gear will be a delicate operation, the official said.

"We had to address a number of different interests in giving birth to this," he said. "Those same interests will have to be addressed in the implementation stage. Some (nations) will have an interest in moving more promptly than others."

Stars' salaries soaring to new heights

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the 1960s, Cary Grant and Irene Dunne could earn $150,000 a picture. Today Sylvester Stallone gets $12 million for acting in a movie and Dustin Hoffman can collect $6 million.

Star salaries are soaring to dizzying heights these days, prompting concerns that the film industry is losing its economic balance.

The escalation, some in the industry say, is caused in part by the new aggressive companies, such as Cannon Films and Tri-Star Pictures, which need big names to market their movies and are willing to pay big bucks for recognizable faces.

"The trend continues down the line," said Art Murphy, Daily Variety's financial expert who teaches film at the University of Southern California. "Stars of the 1960s and 1970s like Bruce Dern and George Segal are asking $750,000 per picture and getting it, whereas they were paid $400,000 before."

Stallone is the current contract king. MGM-UA paid him $15 million for writing, directing and starring in "Rocky IV."

$12 million: Sylvester Stallone.

The list does not include Clint Eastwood, who works only for his own company; his annual take would put him near the top of the list. Nor do the figures take into account the percentages of profits exacted by stars. Hoffman has reportedly drawn $25 million for his interest in "Tootsie."

Menahem Golan, chairman of Cannon, and Yoram Globus, president, insist Cannon's star salaries are based on sound business practices. Globus used Cannon's deal with Stallone for "Cobra" as an example: The star was paid an unrefundable $500,000 with the promise of a total salary of $12 million if the movie was made.

"We sold 'Cobra' to our world distributors, and as a result the picture was assured a profit before it started filming," Globus said.

Art Murphy said the extended product life of films also has contributed to skyrocketing salaries.

"After a film plays in theaters, it goes to cassettes, pay-TV, cable TV, network TV and syndication," he said. "In anticipation of these new markets, agents and lawyers are making deals that include an assumed percentage of future receipts."

Critics argue that the salary escalation is suicidal for the film industry, adding to the ever-mounting cost of a movie.

Mary Tyler Moore didn't like 'Mary'

Her show, which bounced from time slot to time slot on CBS without finding an audience, was not "the kind of show that I want to do," America's darling tells Dick Cavett in an interview airing Tuesday on cable's USA Network.

"It's too bad," she says. "We all started out with such high hopes. I thought we had an understanding of what we were going to try to do, but I was mistaken."

CBS has announced that Miss Moore will have an entirely different vehicle, but, so far, the program hasn't been included on the network's new prime-time schedule. "It will be different and it will be better, or it won't be," she says.

Cavett doesn't ask what she disliked about "Mary," passing up one of his few chances to elicit any information. Miss Moore is obviously reluctant to open up, and Cavett is too gallant to pry.

The world could use more people who don't blab on about their lives, or ask nosy questions, but politeness doesn't make for a gripping hour of television. Miss Moore fidgets through the interview, and viewers are apt to join her.

Cavett tries to talk about the tragedies in the star's life, which have included the death of her son. She shuts him down politely, kindly and quickly with one of those 1,000-watt MTM smiles, saying that he reminds her of people who interrupt her in restaurants to ask for autographs.

There are no similar guarantees about this hour, but Mary Tyler Moore's admiring legions will be pleased to see that she looks great, she's conquered alcoholism, quit cigarettes and is now withdrawing from nicotine chewing gum.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

BUICK WILDCAT: New Dream Machine

by Tom Cooper

BUICK wants to change your mind. Over the years this cornerstone of the GM empire has built a reputation of being the car of the elite. But now they want to change your mind. Oh, don't worry, buick is not trying to change its image completely. They just want you to know they are capable of more than they have been given credit for. So, they are preparing to enter the sports car market, possibly as early as 1990.

The Buick Wildcat is this divisions idea of the future. The Wildcat is a dream machine that is designed to take the public's pulse on a number of issues involving engineering and design. One of the unique features is the focus on the engine for exterior appearance by exposing it rather than hiding it. The interior design is equally unique with a two place cockpit and the latest in steering-hub-mounted electronics.

There are many other mid-engined four-wheel-drive prototypes around, but there are a number of features that make this vehicle innovative. One is a chain-drive transfer case that splits the power with about two-thirds going to the rear wheels and the rest to the front.

Sports car enthusiasts have not had much of a choice in Buicks in the past. Look for that to change with a production model somewhat like this one by the end of the decade.

This feature appears each Monday in the Classified Section as a reader service of the Midland Reporter-Telegram.
