Two die in Fort Worth shooting spree

—AP Laserphoto

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A man wearing a black wig in the darkened mansion of millionaire T. Cullen Davis shot two persons to death early today and wounded two others, including Davis' buxom blonde wife, police said. Davis was arrested a short time later.

The gunman "put on a black wig and started shooting all my kids—he went wild," Mrs. Davis, 35, said from an ambulance stretcher.

Officers later surrounded a residence on the city's south side and used bullhorns to demand that Davis surrender. Police said the 42-year-old industrial scion emerged, head bowed, minutes later and was taken into custody for questioning in connection with the 12:30 a.m. attack.

Police identified the dead as Stan Farr, former basketball star at Texas Christian University, and 12-year-old Andrea Davis.

The wounded were Mrs. Davis, shot once in the stomach, and Gus Gavrel, 21, shot in the chest. Both were in critical condition at John Peter Smith Hospital.

Davis is president of Stratoflex, Inc., a subsidiary of Kendavis Industries Inc. International. Stratoflex manufactures oil field equipment fittings.

Police said the Davises were involved in divorce proceedings and had been separated. Cullen Davis was heir to a fortune built by his father, Ken Davis.

A neighbor, retired businessman Clifford Jones, said Mrs. Davis, clad in a skirt and halter top, "ran better than a quarter of a mile," climbed over or through a barbed wire fence and reached his home "semi-hysterical." Jones summoned police and an ambulance after she told him a man was "killing everybody."

The Davis mansion is on a 140-acre estate in a secluded setting of West Fort Worth, scene in the past of gala parties. The elegant enclave is guarded by security forces and watch dogs.

Ambulance driver Daniel Bruner said Mrs. Davis told him she and Farr arrived at the mansion around midnight. She and Farr were confronted by a gunman who tried to force them into the basement, Mrs. Davis was quoted.

Bev Bass, a friend of Mrs. Davis' eldest daughter, Dee, 18, said she and Gavrel were approaching the mansion by car when the assailant fired at them.

He hit Gavrel, she said, and tried to shoot her, giving chase as she fled on foot.

"I've known him for years," recounted Miss Bass as police sought to quiet her, "and then I saw the look on his face as he chased me, trying to shoot me. I've never been so freaked out in my life. Can you imagine someone shooting your boy friend? I ran down the field barefoot."

Farr, a 6-foot-9 native of Texarkana, Tex., was a TCU basketball star in the middle 1960s. He later became owner of a now defunct night spot and more recently managed a country music club named the Rhinestone Cowboy.

Flash flood deaths climb to 82

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — Eight helicopters flew into Big Thompson Canyon today, their crews making a followup visual sweep for flood survivors, as ground teams assembled to renew the search among mud slides and debris for the dead.

The fatality count stood at 82, but authorities feared the toll would climb far higher.

Air rescue operations were halted abruptly early Monday night after officials said they had flown out all known survivors who wished to leave the devastated canyon.

An estimated 135 persons told rescuers they wanted to stay in motels and mountain homes on high ground where they had ample food and water.

But 10 of those, at Park Terrace Motel about six miles up the canyon toward Estes Park, changed their minds after spending their third night after the flood in the wet and cold Rocky Mountains, said Capt. John Englebert, chief of operations for the Larimer County Sheriff's Department. He said they are to be flown out today.

Contrary to predictions by the National Weather Service, skies were blue and bright over the canyon today, and an Air Force pilot at a makeshift helicopter landing pad in a farmer's field said flying conditions were "outstanding."

E. M. Stiger of the U.S. Forest Service said repeated trips over the 30-mile canyon showed no signs of critically injured persons along the Big Thompson River.

The emphasis today for the first time was on recovering the dead.

Cathy Sayler of the sheriff's department said 62 bodies had been brought out of the canyon and 20 others were pinpointed inside but not recovered.

Larimer County Sheriff Robert Watson said the death figure could reach 200.

"Who knows what's buried in all this silt? Some farmer will dig down in his corn patch some day and find a body," the sheriff said.

Flying close to the craggy canyon walls, military helicopter pilots Monday evening ferried to safety all remaining survivors who wanted to leave. The popular Colorado Rockies vacation spot had been turned into a death trap by a torrential downpour Saturday night.

"Some survivors refused to leave their mountain homes," Watson said. "They were in good shape and thought they could do more good where they were."

Besides the 77 confirmed dead, authorities said 260 persons were injured, an estimated 559 were unaccounted for, and the search for the dead was just beginning.

Officials said the 12-foot wall of water unleashed by the flood was so powerful that many of the dead were found with their bodies stripped of clothing. One body was found 15 miles downstream from the canyon mouth.

"All the bodies will never be recovered," said Watson, who earlier had refused to estimate how high the death toll might reach, saying he feared public "panic and hysteria."

President Ford declared the 2,700-square mile county a federal disaster area Monday, making local residents eligible for federal relief assistance.

But Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm said it would take three years and $10 million just to rebuild U.S. 34, the once-scenic route that wound 30 miles down the canyon from Estes Park east to Loveland. The road ran beside the Big Thompson River, and little remained of it.

Monday's evacuation flights brought to 1,000 the number of persons lifted from the canyon since the airlift started early Sunday morning. More flights were planned as a precaution. Helicopter pilots said they were so busy dodging other helicopters in the canyon that they might have overlooked someone.

As the survivors emerged from helicopters at a landing zone here, ground crews scurried in white jackets to meet them. They were taken by bus to an evacuation center at Loveland High School, where the personal tales unfolded.

Nancy Witte, 30, Fort Yukon, Alaska, said the area near the Rocky Mountain National Park looked like "the creation of the world before roads were put in, before bridges were put in, before anything was put in."

Others emerging grimy and mud-soaked reported that communities along the winding stretch of scenic canyon — Drake, Glen Comfort, Cedar Grive, Modway and Glen Haven — were transformed into piles of debris and mud.

The more than 50 bodies that had been recovered were brought to makeshift morgues, where the grim task of identification had barely begun. At least 20 other bodies had been spotted in the canyon but had not been recovered.

Only a few of the dead had been identified by nightfall. They included four members of a national Crusade for Christ retreat at Estes Park. Thirty members of the group had been rescued.

THE PROJECTION BUILDING of the Old Cactus Drive-In at Odessa burns in what was supposed to be a fire practice for the Odessa Fire Department. The fire department was reprimanded by the Environmental Protection Agency for allowing the building to burn completely. Odessa Fire Chief Jack Childress said the fire department wanted to test some new chemicals after the intensity of the fire had lessened.

Mystery deaths up; experts seek cause

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) -A mysterious disease has taken the lives of 19 persons who attended an American Legion convention last month and hospitalized 52 others, a state official said today.

State Health Secretary Leonard Bachman told a news conference that doctors and researchers still haven't identified the disease, which has symptoms of fever, headaches, chest pains and lung congestion.

"I think it is most likely a virus, but virus pneumonia is the closest I'd call it now," Bachman said.

But Dr. Jay Satz, head of the state health department's immunology division, said a bacteria could have caused the illness.

Other authorities have suggested swine flu as the possible cause, and investigators from the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta were here trying to isolate the cause of the deaths.

Bachman refused to release the names of the three latest victims.

"It may take some time to find all the victims," Bachman said earlier. "I don't think we've gotten all the deaths yet."

The ages of the 16 dead identified earlier ranged in age from 39 to 82. At least one death has been recorded as pneumonia. Autopsies have been ordered in many of the deaths.

All of the victims suffered the same symptoms, which included fever of up to 107 degrees.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Bachman.

Blood samples and throat swabbings from the victims were sent to state health laboratories in Philadelphia and flown to the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta for tests.

It will take two to three days to grow cultures from the samples. These cultures could lead to identification of the disease.

Cases of the illness were reported throughout the state. All the persons affected attended the three-day Legion convention in Philadelphia that ended July 24. The first reports of illness came last Monday; the first death last Friday. It was the mounting death toll Monday that alarmed public health officials.

Bachman was asked if it could be swine flu. "That's a possibility," he said. "We're trying to pin it down, but we don't know right now. But there's no reason to panic, everyone should realize that."

More than one million people from throughout the world are gathered in Philadelphia this week for the Roman Catholic International Eucharistic Congress. Congress officials said they had no plan to curtail activities.

The Center for Disease Control, an arm of the U.S. Public Health Service, dispatched a three-man medical investigative team to Pennsylvania. Two other virus experts from the CDC were already in the state.

Dr. Michael Gregg, director of the center's Viral Disease Division, said the symptoms reported by victims are similar to influenza, but it was too early, he said, to say whether it was swine flu.

One recruit died when several hundred soldiers at Fort Dix, N.J., contracted swine flu early this year. The

Wounded evacuated

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An International Red Cross convoy finally got through to the besieged Tal Zaatar Palestinian refugee camp today to evacuate wounded from the Moslem enclave in Christian east Beirut, Moslem and Christian radio stations reported.

The Moslems' Beirut radio reported the first evacuee was brought out just before noon and several more followed soon after.

A Palestinian spokesman said 91 wounded were taken out on stretchers within the first three hours. But a Red Cross spokesman in Geneva said 47 wounded Palestinians were evacuated. Neither figure could be independentiy confirmed.

The Palestinian spokesman claimed Red Cross workers came under Christian sniper fire just as the rescue mission was getting under way, but Christian spokesmen denied the charge.

They love busing at Klondike school

KLONDIKE—People like James Logan must get a huge laugh out of the hassles going on in Boston and Dallas about the question of school busing.

Logan is superintendent of the 325-student Klondike school system that would have vanished years ago if it hadn't been for the big yellow vehicles that gather the "sweathogs" from one of the larger school districts in the state—604 square miles.

Lamesa Press-Reporter Editor Stephen Henry took time out from destroying bacon and eggs at the neighborhood breakfast in Lamesa's Forrest "Lake" last weekend to tell me about the little school with the big territory, and I detoured through the cotton patches to see the old-fashioned rural school for myself.

(And talk about cotton: I passed through more boll weevil banquet halls than I saw from Mississippi to the Carolinas and Florida on a Dixie trip three years ago.)

Of course, there are two or three pumpjacks scenically situated in the middle of most cotton and grain fields hereabout, which go a long way toward buying blackboards and buses for a school surrounded by cotton wagons instead of residences. But Dawson County claims to be the Number One cotton producing county in Texas, and that white stuff buys lots of blackboards too.

The Klondike system ranges from near Lamesa to Stanton and over into Martin County and serves areas formerly in the Union and Flower Grove Districts, which were "consolidated out" in 1971 and '73 respectively. The building at Flower Grove houses kindergarten through fifth graders, and the Klondike campus serves sixth graders through high schoolers.

They play Class B sports, and a trophy case in the hall is a testimonial to the caliber of the Klondike Cougars.

The longest bus route is about 130 miles a day, and the district saves money on fuel and bus wear by having some of the drivers take school-owned cars home after depositing the scholars and the gas-eating buses at the school.

Is everybody satisfied with a little school in a great big cotton patch?

The school board voted last week to seek a $995,000 bond issue in an election Aug. 24, for an auditorium, cafeteria, and renovation of some classrooms, and my guess is it will be approved easily by the 145 voters who made their marks in the last election and their peers.

Supt. Logan, in his fourth year at Klondike, is, typically, for schoolmen talking money, noncommital.

But the folks who own and work in all those cotton-patches have gone out of their way a long time to maintain their neighborhood school—and a pleasant, efficient site it seemed during my brief visit—and a million dollars, more or less, seems little enough for a fine school reflecting local values with bus routes of no more than 130 miles a day...

CARMEN ANN McCOLLUM of Odessa, Miss Texas of 1976, performs on the alto saxophone at a public reception in her honor Monday night in the ballroom of the Inn of the Golden West. She played the medley of Boots Randolph hits that won her top honors in talent at the Miss Texas pageant. Miss McCollum left Odessa this morning to return to Fort Worth, after a whirlwind schedule of appearances in her hometown, to prepare for the Miss America pageant Sept. 8-11 at Atlantic City.

Midland man supports bid by Southwest

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An independent geologist from Midland was one of 10 public witnesses called by Southwest Airlines in support of its application before the Texas Aeronautics Commission to expand its passenger service throughout the state.

Bruce Pearson, a geologist and private pilot, agreed with other Southwest witnesses, testifying that current commercial air fares don't usually attract his business on the trips he makes around the state — and that he often ends up driving to business appointments rather than flying.

Southwest is proposing to service Midland-Odessa, Austin, Corpus Christi, Lubbock and El Paso, in addition to its current routes to Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and Harlingen.

Pearson said he would be especially interested in routes to Houston and Austin from Midland, which he and his family would fly frequently for pleasure trips.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner John White also testified Monday in favor of the application, saying that Southwest's proposed fares to the Rio Grande Valley from Austin would cut his department's travel expenses in half and reduce travel time spent by state employes on trips to South Texas.

Witnesses from Harlingen, South Padre Island and Lubbock also testified Monday in support of the application. Tuesday's public witnesses are scheduled to include State Sen. Rep. John Hoestenback of Odessa.

"We would like very much to tap that lucrative Midland-Odessa and Lubbock market," said John Austin, mayor of South Padre Island.

Terry Wimmer, president of the Texas Tech University Student Association, presented the Texas Aeronautics Commission examner with a petition from Tech students and a resolution from the student senate in support of the Southwest application.

White spoke in support of extending Southwest's flights to Austin. "About 10 per cent of the agriculture income of the state comes from the Valley and we have many department workers there," White said.

"Now it is a three-day trip for me to go to the Valley or them to come to Austin. It takes a day going and coming and another day for the meeting. If Southwest had a flight we could do it in one day and certainly would use it. We'd see to it our employes flew Southwest."

Odessa Mayor Dan Hemphill testified today that his city council had unanimously endorsed the Southwest application.

"We're interested in Southwest stopping at Midland-Odessa today, tomorrow at the latest," he said. "The people have shown by petitions and telephone calls they want Southwest service."

He said the present air service to Midland-Odessa was "not frequent enough and it's overloaded. We have trouble getting reservations...The planes come in from Los Angeles and they're pretty full when they get there."

Hemphill was asked what Odessa would do if Continental Airlines dropped some of the flights they have now through Midland-Odessa. "I don't think that is going to happen," he said.

DEATHS

Services held for Mrs. Sams

Services for Mrs. Perkins D. Sams, 42, of Midland, publisher of newspapers at Buena Vista and Gunnison, Colo., were held at 4 p.m. today in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity here.

Officiating were the Rev. Bob Currie, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, assisted by the Rev. Kenneth Eade of Arlington, Va.

Burial was in Resthaven Memorial Park under direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Sams, 1601 N. D St. in Midland, died Sunday in a one-car mishap northeast of Gunnison, where she also maintained a home.

Memorial services were held Monday in Gunnison.

She was publisher of The Buena Vista Times and The Gunnison Country Times.

Mrs. Sams was born Dec. 15, 1933, in Greenville, S.C., and was married to Perkins D. Sams there in 1951.

Survivors include the husband; two daughters, Elizabeth Foretich of Wheat Ridge, Colo., and Sarah Haskell Sams of Midland; two sons, Perkins Lourcey Sams of Sherman and Roe Smith Sams of Sonora; her mother, Elizabeth Bentley of Maitland, Fla.; her father, James Jones of England; a brother, James Jones of Greenville, S.C.; and a grandson.

Pallbearers were John Alexander of Dallas; William H. Aikman and Joe Stickney, both of Midland; Albert Sklar and Gordon Lambert, both of Lousiana; George Galloway of Chicago; Don Weinacht of Pecos and J. Hiram Moore of Austin.

Honorary pallbearers were C. J. Kelly, A. A. Bradford, Robert L. Wood, Buddy Branum, Hugh Munn, L. R. French Jr. and Robert L. Pendleton, all of Midland; and Robert A. Gandy Sr. and W. M. Lurcey, both of Fort Worth.

The family has requested that memorials be given to the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center.

H.J. Williams services held

Services for H.J. Williams were at 4 p.m. Monday at Ellis Funeral Home chapel with burial at Fairview Cemetery.

Williams died Saturday at a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

Pallbearers will be Sidney Williams of Clyde, Purvis Williams of Farmington, N.M., J.D. Williams of Midland, David Williams of Dublin, Dean Carlisle of Dallas and Dan Williams.

Rain possible for Basin area

Rain may again come to the Permian Basin tonight or Wednesday.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal gives the area a 30 per cent chance of rain tonight and a 20 per cent chance Wednesday.

Otherwise, weather is expected to be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms. The low tonight should be in the upper 60s with a high Wednesday in the low 90s. Winds are predicted to be between 10 and 20 mph from the southeast tonight.

Today's low was 65 degrees and Monday's high was 94 degrees.

Area weather this morning was warm with little wind. Lamesa reported partly cloudy weather but other cities reported clear skies.

Flooding rain blocked a stretch of highway for a time as menacing thunderstorms pounded parts of West and Central Texas today.

At the same time light rain fell in the Texas Panhandle and thundershowers stirred the Gulf of Mexico east of Texas' Coastal Bend, The Associated Press reported.

Accumulated rainfall halted traffic temporarily on Interstate 20 near Merkel, 20 miles west of Abilene in West Central Texas, and a flash flood warning was posted in that area for a time.

During the night a tornado funnel spun overhead about 2 miles east of Merkel. There as no word of any damage.

Some of the heavier storms concentrated in an area embracing points near Abilene, Breckenridge and Rising Star.

Temperatures mounted as high as 99 degrees Monday at such widely separated points as Alice, Cotulla and Waco.

Four named to committee

Four area persons have been appointed to a steering committee to help develop a proposal for a combined alcoholism-drug abuse prevention demonstration project for the Permian Basin area.

The steering committee will work with the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission staff in developing the proposal.

Appointees include R. B. Snell, attorney from Lamesa; Mrs. "Sam" Brannon, director of Third House in Midland; Bob Dickson, executive director of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health-Mental Retardation in Midland; and Roy Bell, attorney from Odessa.

The four were appointed by Cope Routh of Odessa, chairman of the PBRPC alcoholism advisory committee, and Gorman Wiseman of Fort Stockton, chairman of the drug abuse advisory committee.

Midland gets block grant

AUSTIN — U.S. Sen. John Tower announced Monday that the Department of Housing and Urban Development has approved a $576,000 Community Development block grant to the City of Midland.

The funds will be used for code enforcement, clearance and demolition, acquiring property for public use, paving curbs and gutters, park conservation and rehabilitation.

Planners delay request

By DEBBIE PIERCE

The Midland Planning and Zoning Commission deliberated almost 45 minutes Monday on a zone change request before agreeing to recess the matter until its next session Aug. 16.

The request, by Garth Neill of 3301 W. Cuthbert St., was to change the zoning at that location from single-family to local retail.

Neill told the commission that area "is not a good area for a residence." He cited the noise and danger from the increased traffic on Midkiff Road and his hope of receiving more from the property if it were zoned local retail, should he decide to sell it, as reasons for the request.

Wayne Kohout of 3305 W. Cuthbert St. agreed the area is not very good for residences, but said he was against the change because of its effect on nearby residences. He suggested the commission take on a comprehensive plan for the zoning of that area, considering a larger section in the zoning and maintaining a buffer zone between the retail and residential areas.

City planning director Richard Hennessy said there was "no good way to handle this situation," as problems would arise in where to cut off that type of zoning. He said an office district zoning, at that location would have less traffic than a retail zoning, but the city planning department was concerned with the change's effect on the remaining property.

Hennessy also suggested the area could be zoned as a planned district, whereby the structure would maintain its appearance as a residence, signs and lighting could be controlled and parking could be in the rear.

Commissioner George Veloz then suggested a recess for two weeks so the planning staff could study the possibility of zoning this lot and the two lots to the west as a planned district. Neill agreed to the recess, and it was approved unanimously by the commission.

The zoning commission also approved a request by Pierce, Pace and Associates for a zone change from local retail to planned district in the 800 block of Scharbauer Drive for the Midland Housing Authority's $2 million housing project for the elderly and handicapped.

The request was originally for a change to multiple-family zoning but was changed to planned district by the commission because of the project's projected density.

Ground was to be broken at the project site this afternoon.

In other action, the commission:

— Tabled consideration of a preliminary plat of the Gamblin Addition Subdivision at 1100 Midland Drive, as no one was present to represent the request;

— Agreed to recommend to city council approval of a preliminary plat of Office Plaza at A-1 Mobile Homes on U.S. 80 west for construction of an office plaza for professional clientele; and,

— Agreed to recommend to city council approval of a preliminary plat of the Plunk Addition on Garden City Highway for construction of warehouse.

outbreak prompted plans for a nationwide immunization campaign this fall. The program is bogged down on issues of insurance protection for the drug companies producing the vaccine for immunization.

Most of those stricken in Pennsylvania were delegates to the Legion convention, although some wives and children who attended with delegates have also fallen ill.

More than 10,000 legionaires attended the convention. Bachman said the number of dead and sick in the outbreak will not be known until a statewide hospital-by-hospital survey is finished.

All the deaths were in Pennsylvania, with the exception of one Philadelphia man who died in North Carolina during a postconvention trip to Florida.

"In the few households we have contacted, we have found no secondary spread to family members," said Dr. William Parkin, chief of the state Health Department's epidemiology section. "That may be the exception rather than the rule as we get more information.

"I can't say there will be transmissions from American Legionnaires to people they are in contact with. We have not had any cases like that yet."

The convention was headquartered at one of Philadelphia's largest hotels although delegates stayed in at least six different hotels.

4-H drill team to perform at coliseum

The far-famed Midland County 4-H Club mounted drill team, holder of five state championships, will perform Wednesday night in the American Junior Rodeo Association (AJRA) Rodeo in the Ector County Coliseum at Odessa.

The team won first place in precision drill and second in regular drill in state competition at Amarillo recently.

Kenneth R. Lynch is the drill master.

Burglars take cash, stereo from house

Burglars boke into the residence of Patricia Traylor, 1624 E. Magnolia, Monday and took a total of $770 worth of merchandise.

Taken in the burglary was a stereo valued at $270, two coin banks containing $50 worth of coins, a wedding ring valued at $150 and a shoe box containing $220.

Entry into the residence was gained by opening a south bedroom window, police said.

Traylor told the police that the burglars were familiar with the residence because they knew where the shoebox containing the money was hidden.

STEREO, RECORDS TAKEN

Burglars also took a stereo, records and tapes valued at $350 from the residence of Wanda Kendrick, 1200 E. Spruce Ave., Monday.

Entry to the residence was gained by forcing a back door on the south side of the residence open, police said.

A south bathroom Window was also found open, and Kendrick told police that the window was closed when she left home earlier. Nothing else was reported missing, police said.

WOMAN INJURED

Lola Mae Blair, 52, of 4405 Storey Ave., was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released after she was injured in an auto accident about 3:15 p.m. Monday at the intersection of Ohio Avenue and Andrews Highway.

Police said Mrs. Blair was injured when a car driven by her husband and a car driven by Boots Johnston, 3309 Shandon Ave., collided.

Blair was headed east on Ohio, and Johnston was going north on Andrews, when the accident occurred. The Blair vehicle and a car driven by Mrs. J. C. McNatt, 2501 Terrace Ave., which was stopped at a red light on Ohio, also collided, police said.

BICYCLIST INJURED

James Richard Parker, 10, of 906 W. Michigan Ave., was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released after the bicycle he was riding and a car driven by Gary Dean Bolding, 2601 N. A. collided Monday afternoon.

Police said Bolding was backing from his driveway when the two vehicles collided.

THREE FIRES REPORTED

A house occupied by Carolyn Lovell, 610 S. Loraine St., was heavily damaged by fire Monday night.

The cause of the fire was a cigarette burning on the couch. Damage was heavy to living room with smoke damage throughout the house, firemen said.

A truck fire at 507 E. Front St. was reported Monday afternoon. Cause of the fire was a short in the electrical wiring. Damage to the truck, which was owned by Harold Long, was minor.

A city trash dumpster at 1306 S. Mineola St. sustained minor damage from a fire Monday morning. Cause of the fire was unknown, the firemen said.

Housing board sets meeting

The Midland Housing Authority will convene in regular session at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the council chamber at city hall to consider a short agenda.

Vice chairman Gene Abbott will present a report on the negotiations with architects to perform inspection services for the authority on its $2 million housing project.

A contract with the Department of Housing and Urban Development for the housing project for the elderly and handicapped was approved by the authority last month. The project will be located at Scharbauer Drive and Pecos Street, with Pierce, Pace and Associates of Midland as architects And developers of the project. Ground was to be broken this afternoon for the housing project.

The housing authority also will consider approval of a contract with Jimmie E. Leath of Midland for the inspection services for its turnkey project. The turnkey project is another name for the housing authority's $2 million housing project at Scharbauer, Drive and Pecos Street.

Top speaker named

Convention rules aimed toward peace

By JAMES CARY
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Winds of change have brushed the Republican Party and to some degree will affect the way a presidential nominee is selected at the national convention in Kansas City beginning Aug. 16.

But the rules under which the 2,259 GOP delegates will operate there after the gavel drops still will be considerably different in many respects from those used by the Democrats at their convention in New York City.

Like the Democrats, the Republicans do have rules, or proposed rules changes, that deal with equality of the sexes, representation of minority groups among the delegates selected and open procedures.

But they have not been swept up in arguments over the number of votes required to place a minority position on the platform or rules committee reports before the convention.

Likewise they have no credential fights in sight, just as the Democrats had very few this time, and they have not become involved with attempting to amend state primary laws to outlaw winner-take-all results.

The Democrats were shaken by cataclysmic changes in 1972 that sought, among other things, to impose quotas guaranteeing strong representation of blacks, Indians, Mexican-Americans, the poor, senior citizens, women, the young and other segments of the party.

So disruptive and divisive was this — with everyone insured representation except the party majority — that the rules were altered for 1976 to require "affirmative action" programs down to the lowest party level to work toward full representation of minorities but with no fixed quotas.

The closest the Republicans have come to a parallel requirement is their Rule 32 adopted in 1972. It states in part:

"Participation in a Republican primary, caucus, any meeting or convention...shall in no way be abridged for reasons of sex, race, religion, color, age or national origin.

"The Republican National Committee and the Republican state committees...shall take positive action to achieve the broadest possible participation by everyone in party affairs, including participation by women, young people, minority and heritage groups and senior citizens in the delegate selection process...Each state shall endeavor to have equal representation of men and women...in its delegation to the national convention."

But before even this existing rule can be made applicable to the 1976 convention and the four years beyond certain procedures must be completed by various organizational units of the party.

The units are the rules committee of the Republican National Committee, the so-called Rule 29 Review Committee headed by Rep. William Steiger of Wisconsin, and the Convention Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

All are separate groups, although Kent McGough, Ohio state chairman and RNC rules chairman, under normal procedures also will become chairman of the Convention Rules Committee.

The RNC rules group will meet here Aug. 9 and 10 to recommend changes to the Convention Rules Committee, which in turn will convene Aug. 14, two days before the convention opens, to make its own decisions.

Before the convention's rules committee will be an RNC rules recommendation that will require all delegates to vote for the candidate they were elected to represent and to prohibit delegates from abstaining from voting.

Although delegates now are considered bound normally through at least one or more ballots, there is in actuality no convention requirement at this time that would compel them to vote in accordance with their election mandate. This could be of major importance this time. The delegates are nearly evenly split between President Ford and his challenger, Ronald Reagan.

Harris mistrial pleas rejected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge in the William and Emily Harris trial, accused repeatedly by the defense of prejudice, again has refused to declare a mistrial or remove himself from the case.

Defeated in their efforts to win a mistrial, the Harrises today waited for a possible verdict as a jury entered its fourth day of deliberations.

Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler, attacked by defense attorneys for what they said was misconduct and bias, insisted Monday that testimony about the possible prejudice of a juror did not warrant further action.

"The motion for a mistrial is denied," he said. "The motion to disqualify this court is denied."

Brandler also rejected a defense request to have a neutral judge arbitrate the matter.

"Unless we develop new evidence, with Judge Brandler foreclosing every form of relief ...the matter is closed," said chief defense attorney Leonard Weinglass.

The jury, unaware of the courtroom controversy, deliberated for eight hours Monday on the kidnap, robbery and assault charges against the Harrises.

The charges stem from the Harrises' flight from a Los Angeles sporting goods store where a clerk allegedly caught Harris shoplifting. Patricia Hearst, a codefendant, is to be tried later on the same charges.

Brandler voiced doubt about the honesty of two women who reported irregularities in jury behavior.

The judge said he believed at least one of them had "triggered her imagination or magnified what she heard." He said he suspected she was disgruntled at not being chosen as a juror.

Brandler said he discounted the complaint of Jeannie Barton — related to him by a fellow judge — as no more important than a crank phone call.

Mrs. Barton, who was a prospective juror in the Harris case, came forward last Friday to report possible prejudice of a sitting juror.

She said she tried to get word to counsel through the judge but instead was placated by a bailiff. An attorney's wife, she said she was distressed at apparent bias among jurors being screened for the trial.

But chief prosecutor Sam Mayerson, siding with the judge, denounced Mrs. Barton's testimony as the words of "an hysterical woman."

Moments later, the judge said he doubted the credibiity of Mrs. Barton and another prospective juror, Corinne Hansen, who said they heard a member of the current jury prejudge the Harrises weeks ago.

The two quoted juror No. 6, an insurance company executive, as declaring that the outcome of the Harris trial was "a foregone conclusion."

Death memory lingers

"Etched forever within the life of this intelligent, sensitive and compassionate man is the knowledge that in one terrible moment he took the lives of two innocent people..."
Judge Pearce Young
Superior Court, Santa Monica

By FRANK SURACI
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — M. Norvel Young admits he would give anything, including his life, to relive those few hours prior to a fiery traffic accident in nearby Malibu.

Unable to recreate the past, the 60-year-old former chancellor of Pepperdine University is determined to give back to society some part of that which he took away.

He stood before a luncheon gathering recently and spoke openly of the Sept. 16 tragedy — the result of a problem drinker behind the wheel of a car.

"Two older women were killed and another woman and myself were hospitalized because I was driving under the influence of alcohol," Dr. Young said.

His reactions dulled by the effects of a quart of vodka, Young's car slammed into a vehicle stopped for a red light.

The immediate rupture of a gas tank engulfed both cars in flames, claiming the lives of 80-year-old Christine Dahlquist and 78-year-old Beulah Harrison.

By his own admission, Young was drunk. A blood test showed a blood alcohol reading of .23, more than twice the legal inebriation standard.

His message before the San Pedro Rotary Club was one he has delivered countless times in the last six months.

Punctuated with a string of statistics, the talk reflected an intensive research project he has undertaken at the University of Southern California safety center.

Young cautioned the Rotarians about stress, alcohol and the obvious relationship between the two.

"In my case, I didn't drink at all until I was 50," he said. Beset with health problems, he had an occasional drink to relax.

But gradually, he said, drinking became a convenient way to escape from stress-related problems.

"I never did become addicted to the regular use of alcohol. I didn't keep it in the house. But I was destined to become chemically dependent on it."

In the days leading to the accident, Young was hit with a series of traumas as chancellor of the school's Malibu campus.

"We were facing the coming of President Ford to the campus in three days. The Secret Service was uptight because Ford's life had just been threatened by Sara Jane Moore."

In addition, the university was faced with a financial crisis and a faculty member was killed on campus in a motorcycle accident.

While his wife was consoling survivors of the professor, Young said, "I took a drink."

Young had spent 40 years building a substantial reputation as a church leader and educator.

He emphasized that anyone, particularly those in positions of responsibility, can weaken in the face of stress.

He called it "one of the poisons that is killing us."

He urges the people in his audiences:

"Slow down...take time off work...smell the flowers, for these are the golden days," he said.

"What are you hurrying for anyway? Forest Lawn and the other cemeteries will be there when you need them.

"Exercise...meditate...look up and see the stars. Take time to live because now is the time to enjoy the things that are important to you," Young said.

"I learned this lesson at great cost."

Attention, motorists

Here's something which most certainly should shake all Americans, to a marked degree:

More Americans have died in U.S. highway accidents in the last 75 years than Americans who lost their lives in all the wars in which the United States has engaged.

The Statistical Services branch of the Texas Department of Public Safety says that the war dead figure totals 1,186,654. The highway accident figure is 2,090,351.

The death figure by wars is Revolutionary War, 4,435; War of 1812, 2,260; Mexican War, 13,283; War Between the States, 529,332; Spanish American War, 2,446; World War I, 116,563; World War II, 407,828; Korea, 54,246, and Viet Nam, 56,261.

This isn't a very pretty picture from the highway accident fatality standpoint, is it? It certainly isn't something of which the nation can boast.

Yet the accident figure continues to mount, day by day.

Statistical Services also paints another dismal picture, this one relating to the amazing cost of traffic accidents.

The story is told this way:

"The playing area of a football field measures 300 feet by 160 feet. United States currency measures about 2 5/8 inches by 6 1/8 inches.

"If a football field was completely covered with one dollar bills, then a layer of two dollar bills, then a layer of five dollar bills, then a layer of ten dollar bills, then a layer of twenty dollar bills, then a layer of fifty dollar bills, then a layer of hundred dollar bills, then a layer of five hundred dollar bills, then a layer of one thousand dollar bills — THEN start all over with another layer of one dollar bills, another layer of two dollar bills, another layer of five dollar bills, another layer of ten dollar bills, another layer of twenty dollar bills, another layer of fifty dollar bills, another layer of one hundred dollar bills, another layer of five hundred dollar bills — THEN on top of these seventeen layers of money, place another layer of five hundred dollar bills and four more layers of hundred dollar bills — the money on that football field would still not represent the economic loss suffered from traffic accidents in Texas for the year 1975.

"The $1,440,000,000 estimated loss for this one year would buy 10,000 homes at $45,000 each, 10,000 refrigeretors at $400 each, 10,000 electric ranges at $350 each, 10,000 tv sets at $600 each, 10,000 dishwashers at $350 each, 10,000 central air conditioning units at $1,500 each, and furnish the head of each of the 10,000 households with a bank account of $89,300.',

This most certainly is one way of relating a shameful situation in a manner clearly understandable by one and all.

And it is something with which every American should be concerned. These are facts and figures which every automobile owner should study carefully. The figures also touch the pocketbooks of all car owners through insurance premiums.

Please think about this the very next time that you get behind the wheel of a car. With your help, both the fatality and cost figures can be reduced materially.

Excelsior silenced

The most influential and independent newspaper in Mexico City, which frequently has criticized government policies, was seized recently by a group of dissidents who took over by force.

The dissidents are believed to have the backing of the government of President Escheverria.

Julio Scherer, the editor, and about 200 members of his editorial staff were ousted from their jobs. The independent editorial policies of the newspaper were changed.

Thus, an independent voice of criticism has been silenced.

Freedom of expression, unfortunately, has suffered a serious setback in Mexico.

ART BUCHWALD

A sheer coincidence; that's what it was

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — One of the big surprises of last week's dramatic political events was the sudden decision by John Connally to come out in support of President Ford. Mr. Connally visited Mr. Ford on Tuesday, the day after Ronald Reagan announced he had chosen Sen. Richard Schweiker as vice presidential candidate.

There were some cynical people in Washington who thought that Connally, who had remained neutral up until that moment, made the hurried trip to Washington after he was eliminated as running-mate on the Reagan ticket.

This, I have been assured by Connally's people, was not the case. Connally has always been "secretly" for President Ford, but he was just waiting for the most opportune time to come out for him publicly. The timing of it was sheer coincidence.

This is what really happened.

On Friday, three days before Reagan dropped his bombshell, Mr. Connally said to his wife, "Honey, I think we ought to fly up to Washington and tell Gerry Ford we support him."

"That's fine, John," his wife said. "But one of the calves is sick and we can't leave him today. Can't we go tomorrow?"

"All right," Connally said. "I don't imagine one day's delay in coming out for Ford will make any difference."

On Saturday Connally said, "Honey, are you packed so we can go to Washington and tell Gerry that we have decided he would make the best candidate for the presidential ticket?"

"My dress hasn't come back from the cleaners," Mrs. Connally said.

"Well, take another dress."

"I will not," Mrs. Connally said. "I selected this dress especially for the moment that you would announce your support for the man who could lead the Republican Party to victory in November."

"Daggonnit," Connally said. "I want to come out for Ford in the worst way and the cleaners are holding up my endorsement."

"We can go tomorrow," Mrs. Connally said.

"There are no reporters at the White House on Sunday," Connally said. "They're all in church."

"Well, then we'll go Monday. What's the big rush? You've been sitting on the fence for so long a couple of days won't matter."

"I guess you're right," Connally said.

Monday morning the Connallys took off from Houston. But when they got to Washington their plane was stacked up over National Airport for two hours.

When they finally landed a reporter told the former Texas governor that Ronald Reagan had just announced that he had selected Richard Schweicker to run with him if he was nominated on the Republican ticket.

Connally was furious. "If it wasn't for that sick calf and your dress," he told his wife, "we could have come out for Ford on Saturday. Now it looks like I'm coming out for Ford just so he'll make me his Vice President."

"Nobody who knows you would dream that, John," Mrs. Connally said soothingly, "leastwise the President. In his heart he knew you were for him all the time."

Connally immediately called the White House and asked to see the President that afternoon.

One of the President's aides told him, "I think you better see him tomorrow. If you saw him today people would think that you were too anxious to get on the Ford bandwagon. By tomorrow they'll know your endorsement of Mr. Ford was sincere."

Well, the rest is history. Connally and the President came out of the White House arm in arm on Tuesday and despite snickering from the White House Press Corps about the timing, President Ford believed everything Connally told him. That's the kind of man Gerry Ford is, and that is why Connally made his decision long ago to support him 1,000 per cent.

WASHINGTON MERRY—GO—ROUND

Corporate bagmen investigated

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Those corporate bagmen who have been delivering bribes to foreign officials may wind up beind the eight ball.

Federal lawmen are quietly investigating the couriers, some of them as high as company vice presidents, who have smuggled payoff money overseas.

Under the law, the couriers were required to report to Customs any amounts over $5,000 that they took in or out of the country. The law, which went into effect in 1972, was intended to catch couriers for world drug rings. But it will now be used to nail the boardroom bagmen as well.

More than 215 firms are suspected of sending tens of millions of dollars overseas to pay off foreign princes, potentates and politicians for contract favors.

Baksheesh, cumshaw and cold cash reportedly have been delivered to Brazil, Colombia, France, Gabon, Iran, Italy, Japan, Malaysia, Netherlands, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, South Korea, Taiwan, Turkey and West Germany.

Some of the nation's most powerful and prestigious corporations have admitted making foreign payments. Among them are Ashland Oil, Burroughs, Exxon, Gulf Oil, Lockheed, McDonnell Douglas, Merck, Northrop, G.D. Searle, Tenneco and United Brands.

In some countries, notably Italy and Japan, the revelations of largescale bribery have shaken the governments. Yet the corporate executives, who paid the bribes, have largely escaped punishment.

The Securities and Exchange Commission forced the firms to disclose the bribery to its stockholders and, thereby, to the public. But because the SEC's main role is to regulate the markets, not to prosecute malfeasance, the boardroom bribers have gone free.

Yet probing by Sen. Frank Church, D.-Idaho, and Rep. Ben Rosenthal, D.-N.Y., has turned up evidence of criminal violations that cry out for prosecution. At stake is the principle that justice in this country should apply equally to the rich and the poor.

Therefore the Justice Dept., Customs Service, SEC and special prosecutor's office are quietly cooperating to bring indictments against offending firms and their corporate couriers.

The Currency and Foreign Transactions Reporting Act, which sets the $5,000 limit, will be used to catch the couriers. Tourists leaving the United States usually aren't checked by Customs. Thus the bagmen have had no difficulty getting money out of the country.

Probably more often, the payoffs have been channeled through the foreign subsidiaries of multinational companies, thus avoiding the physical transportation of the money out of the United States. Yet these transactions can be traced and conspiracy cases possibly can be made.

One fact is evident: Illegal loot was delivered overseas. Federal agents intend to find out who delivered it.

Footnote: The Internal Revenue Service, meanwhile, is investigating the misreporting of foreign bribes as business deductions. And SEC sleuths are still digging out more evidence of corporate bribes.

•

WATCH ON WASTE: Not all government waste is measured in the millions. But the smaller extravagances also add up. Here are a few random examples:

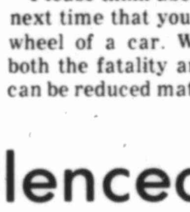
— At the Labor Dept., Undersecretary Michael Moskow moved to a new suite several weeks ago. He had it redecorated to suit his taste. He displaced an assistant secretary, who found new space in the legislative affairs section. An official spokesman assured us this game of musical offices cost the taxpayers only $20,000. But our sources inside the department insist the true cost came closer to $200,000.

— At the Interior Dept., Secretary Thomas Kleppe and his wife are fond of parties. The secretary invited friends, relatives and aides to his offices, for example, for a Bicentennial party. And his wife threw another party for ambassadors' wives in the secretary's dining room. A spokesman admitted the taxpayers picked up the bill for both parties.

— Tom Cresswell, director of the Federal Aviation Administration's aeronautic center, hopped a government plane from Oklahoma City to Washington to attend a retirement party for FAA chief James Dow. This little junket cost the taxpayers about $990. Cresswell told us he had official business in Washington and the crew had to take a "training flight" anyway.

NICK THIMMESCH

How in the world can they attack John Connally now?



Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — Pardon me, but if John Connally is picked for the Vice Presidency, how could Democrats raise a stink over bribery charges he was tried on during the Watergate period?

I mean, look at the prestigious Democrats who worked and testified for Connally in the federal courtroom where he was aquitted in one of those milk money cases. Among them are:

Robert Strauss, chairman of the Democratic National Committee; Edward Bennett Williams, treasurer of the Democratic National committee; Barbara Jordan, keynote speaker at the Democratic National Convention; Mrs. Lyndon Baines Johnson; former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara; former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, and James Rowe, longtime adviser to Democratic presidential candidates.

Now that's quite a gang of Democrats who stood up and proclaimed how upstanding a man John Connally is. I indulge in no such advocacy here, rather, I undertake an exercise in irony.

Anyway, Ed Williams, a powerhouse in the Democratic Party, pled eloquently and successfully for Connally before a jury of 10 blacks and two whites drawn from a community (D.C.) which voted 79 per cent Democratic in 1972.

Strauss, who has praised Connally to the vast Texas skies and elsewhere since the two were chums in university days, was delighted to testify as a character witness for Connally. After informing the judge about his strong voice, Strauss proclaimed that Connally had a "perfect" reputation in Texas, and among his associates, for honesty and integrity.

Barbara Jordan, whom blacks, women and assorted guilty liberals in the Democratic Party worship as Joan of Arc, represents Houston, where Connally lives. She knew him when he was Governor, when she was in the Texas senate. In his trial here, Ms. Jordan testified: "As far as I know from my association with him, he has a very good reputation for honesty." Congresswoman Jordan's testimony had major impact on the nearly all-black jury.

So did that of Claudia Taylor Johnson, who testified that she was also known "by the nickname of Lady Bird." The widow of the last Democratic President, L.B.J., the man who did the most to help advance black Americans since Lincoln, was quite willing to tell what a good man John Connally is. She knew him, she testified, since "he came to work for Lyndon" in the late Thirties.

Mrs. Johnson stated that she maintained a close relationship with Connally and his family, and that "it is the opinion of the community in the state and the people that we have known together in Washington that he is a man of integrity. Some folks don't like him, but I don't think any of them doubt his integrity."

If that wasn't enough, there was Dean Rusk lavishing so much admiration on John Connally, the patriot, that the judge had to shut him up. Robert S. McNamara testified that Connally "had the highest reputation I know of for integrity." And Rowe, whose Democratic credentials date to the Franklin D. Roosevelt era, stated that Connally's reputation for honesty and integrity is "extremely high and excellent."

Running Mate?

As President Ford shakes loose from the worry of losing the nomination to Ronald Reagan, he might have more time to think about a running mate. Surveys taken by U.S. News and World Report, The Associated Press, and United Press International, all show Connally the big favorite among Republicans.

Connally won't say publicly that he is interested in the Vice Presidency, but he is. What he wants, though, is a commitment from Mr. Ford that he, John Conally, will have a major say-so about how the campaign will be run. Connally is a hard driver who likes to take risks and win, rather than meander and hope, by-guess and by-golly.

He became a Republican because he was convinced that his views were no longer acceptable in the Democratic Party, and that the Republicans were the instrument. He remained privately in support of Mr. ford this year, and broke out with the endorsement only because he felt Schweiker was too far off the ideological base.

In any case, if Connally does wind up on the Ford ticket, Democratic Chairman Strauss will sigh. It was behind the podium at the convention that Strauss told me:

"John Connally and I are good friends, and hopefully will be for the rest of our lives. If he's on the Republican ticket, why he'll do his best to eliminate my candidate, and me, and I'll do the same to beat him. He would expect no less from me, and I of him."

DEAR ABBY

Give nursing home resident occasional scenery change

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A letter in your column about visiting the elderly in nursing homes prompts my first "Dear Abby" letter.

I agree, it's a great service to visit an elderly friend or relative in a nursing home, but consider this: Instead of going there to sit with him while you both look at the same four walls he looks at day in and day out, why not give him a change of scenery?

Take him for a little drive and stop for a bite to eat. Or take him window shopping. Or treat him to a home-cooked meal with the family. Just being away from the institution will relieve his boredom and lift his spirits.

If he isn't able to walk, be aware that they now make lightweight wheelchairs that can be easily folded and tucked into the trunk of the car.

Abby, this is a plea to your readers who visit someone in a nursing home: Please turn those routine duty-visits into special events by treating the patient to an occasional outing. It will do wonders for him. And for you, too. I know. I've been a volunteer in such a home for over 10 years.—BESS

DEAR BESS: What a pity you'll never know how much happiness your suggestion will bring to countless residents of nursing homes throughout the nation. Bless you for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I am so glad I can write to you with this problem because it has bothered me for years and I can't go to anyone else with it.

You see, my parents were never married, which makes me illegitimate, right? I'm not exactly proud of it, but I don't let it bother me too much because there is nothing I can do about it.

I married a very nice man and we have two lovely children. I want so much for them to be legitimate, but if I'M not, then THEY can't be either,

WOMEN'S NEWS

and that is my problem.

What must I do to make my children legitimate? Thank you.—MEMPHIS MOM

DEAR MOM: You did it. You married their father. All children born to a married couple are legitimate, regardless of the legitimacy (or illegitimacy) of their parents.

DEAR ABBY: I am planning my wedding. I want my bridesmaids to wear southern belle-type dresses and enter carrying parasols instead of flowers.

I want them to walk down the aisle with their parasols open, until they reach the back of the church. Then they would turn to face the congregation and close their parasols, keeping them closed for the duration of the service.

My fiance and his mother say this would look stupid. What do you and your readers think?—BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: I think it might look as though you were trying to create a Broadway musical production effect. And for those who are superstitious, it's bad luck to open an umbrella indoors.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Luggage care hints

To keep luggage looking nice, clean it regularly. Give vinyls or uncoated linen, cotton and canvas a cleaning with a damp soapy cloth. Clean smooth leather with saddle soap. After it is thoroughly dry, rub with paste wax or a neutral shoe cream.

Rotate the food

When microwave cooking, rotate the dish when you notice that one part of the food is cooking faster than the rest. Rotate it so the least cooked part will be in the area of the oven previously occupied by the portion that was cooking fastest.

AT WIT'S END

Animals make nice children

By ERMA BOMBECK

In trying to improve the quality of children, a reader in Illinois suggested it would be nice if children were like geese. To support his theory, he noted, "Geese come supplied with their own boat, airplane, sleeping bag, swimsuit, flippers and rain gear. They carry an all-purpose utility knife and fork set, complete with airhorn, feather fixer, fly snatcher, egg turner and grass clipper all mounted on a self-propelled chassis. (I like that.) "Their feet are always clean, have non-skid soles that last a lifetime, and dark sensible clothes that are stain resistant and drip dry." Ah, yes, I too have often looked at animals and thought what nice children they would make. I never see a self-cleaning cat that I don't remember my son with a chocolate mustache that his tongue can't reach. I never see a hamster tidying up his bed by nosing his little chips into a pile that I don't think bitterly of the day my son's aquarium caught fire from pollution. I never see a kangaroo with her young in her pouch that I don't remember our daughter who fell out of the bunk bed and required five stitches.

The grizzly bear who doesn't have to be told to put on his coat when he goes out in the cold. The parakeet who has the sense enough to go to sleep when you cover his cage. The family dog who not only recognizes you in public, but sits next to you.

Even a newborn sea turtle without vision, without experience, will head toward the sea in search of his own drink of water.

The list of animal accomplishments is dazzling. I could go on forever comparing children to them. So why do we settle for bad plumbing, sticky fingers, erratic behavior, and a body that grows out of clothes even before the bill for them arrives?

Have you ever heard a child laugh? It starts from somewhere around the navel and works its way up by a series of hiccups and melodious sounds and finally travels between two spaces in the front teeth and out. It's infectious. It gladdens the heart. It's probably the most wonderful sound you'll ever hear.

There isn't an animal in the world who can do that.

Midland club officer attends national meeting

Mrs. Kathy Peters, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Midland, was among 3,000 delegates attending the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., in Denver, Colo.

Liz Carpenter and Elly Peterson, Democratic and Republican co-chairmen of the ERAmerica, spoke to the delegates on equal rights.

"Women in the World and Women in America" the national federation's theme for 1976-77 and an adopted 10-year program plan of action, stresses the responsibility of each member to herself, to all women, to B&PW and America.

After returning from the convention, Mrs. Peters, trust officer at The First National Bank, said clubs should make an effort to support and publicize banks in their areas which grant first-class status to women, particularly banks which have a record of equal treatment of women clients.

New furniture styled for apartment dwellers

By ADELE FAULKNER
Copley News Service

At last manufacturers of furniture are recognizing the special problems apartment and condominium residents have in selecting furnishings right for smaller living quarters.

In the past, apartment tenants have had to select furniture from among the large-scale items featured by most furniture stores for large homes. The result was pieces that weren't quite right for their special living requirements.

With more and more people moving to apartments and condominiums or purchasing a condominium as a second home there is new furniture on the market designed for this purpose.

Some major national furniture manufacturers have taken their best basic designs and scaled them down so that they fit well into smaller apartment and condominium living rooms.

Others have come up with some new ideas for dual and in some cases multiple uses of the same piece of furniture. One example is a handsome oak coffee table which flips up to reveal a large storage area.

The inside storage area could be used to keep bedding for a convertible sofa, games for the children or coasters, napkins and other items used to entertain.

The Landes Co. has designed a complete line of convertible furniture with the apartment and condominium resident in mind.

It includes a three-way table.

The basic structure is chrome with a white Formica or wooden butcher block tabletop. Arranged one way, it is a low cocktail table.

However, a quick flip of the chrome base converts it into a medium-high continental table for games. And, with another alteration to the base, it becomes a dinner table.

To accompany this piece is a two-way chair. It may start out as a lounge chair, but by removing the pillows and flipping the base the height is raised so it can function as a dining chair.

Completing the set is a two-way sofa bed. Used as a sofa it has very modern, clean lines with a chrome base. The base and pillows fold out to create a comfortable queen-size sofa bed.

(Wed., Aug. 4)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to be articulate and express your views and opinions. Also a good day to see new places and meet with persons of different background and viewpoints from your own.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can advance via new situations that come up and will bring you closer to your goals. You are able now to get at the sources of data that have been closed to you before now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Tap your subconscious and know what is best for you to do in important matters. A loved one looks upon you with more favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are able to reach more accord with associates if you are willing to meet them halfway. Get into some civic work that brings fine results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Handle routine tasks carefully, and you accomplish a good deal in a minimum of time. Come to a better understanding with associates and fellow workers. Be happy with kin in evening.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take time for amusement and relaxation to relieve tensions. Avoid those who are not congenial, although little risks can be taken.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Make changes at home that will bring more harmony and contentment there. Some out-of-town interest can bring you benefits you had not counted on.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Work out some plan that will help you gain the goodwill of a successful person who can be of help to you. Pay bills on time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are now able to gain some cherished wishes with ease, if you make right plans early. Avoid one who has an eye on your job, assests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be thorough in working every angle of practical affairs so that they are successful. Try to please loved one more. Avoid a troublemaker.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Research information you need for business and personal matters and then make good use of it. You have good ideas and can convince others easily now. Try not to be extravagant in any way.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Handle vocational and credit affairs well although you may encounter a few stumbling blocks in the path of your progress.

Second scoop of Martian soil may supply answers

By RICHARD SALTUS

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Viking 1, the robot detective probing strange activity in the soil of Mars, should get more clues from a second handful of dirt to be dug from the rustcolored surface.

The sample will be studied by a tester that could help determine whether Martian life, or merely an unusual chemical process, is causing the activity that had scientists baffled Monday.

Viking's 10-foot mechanical arm was to reach for a handful of soil today. If successfully deposited in one of the chambers in Viking's automated experimental package, the dirt could yield some clues later this week.

The instrument — a gas chromatograph mass spectrometer — will search for molecules of organic matter which, if found in sufficient amounts and complexity, would strongly suggest living organisms are present.

A hastily organized special scientific team still straddled the fence Monday on the puzzling gas emitted by a dirt sample already inside the minilaboratory.

Soon after a liquid nutrient was fed to the bit of soil last week, gas containing a radioactive tracer in the nutrient began pouring out at a startling rate. Dr. Gil Levin, who heads the team monitoring the experiment, said Monday the gas generation was no longer accelerating and had reached a plateau.

But neither earth organisms nor nonliving chemical processes known to scientists here could explain the rate at which gas was emitted by the soil sample, said Levin.

"Biological responses (in experiments on earth) that started this rapidly have generally continued to evolve gas for a longer period of time," said Levin.

"But the shape of the curve (information plotted on a graph) doesn't fit the shape of nonbiologic responses we have seen, either.

"So we're in between."

Since the scientists never have seen anything like the tantalizing reports Viking is sending back, Levin said a special team had been formed to search for an explanation.

Organized by chief Viking scientist Dr. Gerald Soffen, the team is comprised of organic chemists, physicists, physical chemists, biologists and biochemists.

"They have formed a tentative hypothesis that some unique photochemistry (reaction of sunlight on the soil) is occurring on Mars that is causing the surface to produce the kinds of responses we are seeing," said Levin.

Levin would not say what the odds were that the mysterious process was being caused by living organisms.

But Soffen sounded a note of caution, saying, "It's very easy to misread this as life signs when actually it may be a unique chemistry...."

Levin said another shot of nutrient, a mixture of amino acids and carbohydrates, would be fed to the soil sample on Friday. If this caused a new burst of activity in the soil, it would suggest that a biological process is at work, he said.

In the language of the Viking researchers, biological process means life.

Clayton predicts water deficiency

RENNER, Tex. (AP) — House Speaker Bill Clayton said Monday that Texas will become water deficient with the decade of 1980 to 1990.

Clayton quoted "authoritative surveys" in an address to about 200 members of the Dallas Agricultural Club, Fort Worth Farm and Ranch Club, and area legislators and political delegations during a meeting at the Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center at Renner.

The House speaker said one of the biggest problems facing water's future in Texas is "to get awareness and concern of people" about the encroaching shortage.

"I know you have all heard the old story about the leaky roof and rain," he said. "When it's raining you can't patch the roof, and when it isn't raining, the roof doesn't need patching.

"We've been blessed with rain in many parts of the state to prevent crops from slumping and pastures from scorching and urban water supplies out of danger, but any farmer or rancher or home-owner knows what 60 days of cloudless skies can do to this country."

Clayton said he based his concern over the future of water on his experience as a cotton and grain farmer at Springlake, located in the heart of the intensely irrigated South Plains, and as a legislator for the past 14 years.

"We are well aware of droughts, and what our agriculture community can do to produce food and fiber needed worldwide," Clayton added, "but unless water development is increased hot winds will be blowing dust over our parched land and over dry lake beds."

To help head off this potential disaster the house speaker called for full development of water resources in Texas.

"One of the most critical needs now is to move forward with approval by Texas voters of a water development bond to be on the ballot in the November election," Clayton added.

"Approval would authorize the Texas Water Development Board an additional $400 million needed for future development."

Judge pleads innocent; trial set for Sept. 21

HOUSTON (AP) — A trial date of Sept. 21 has been set for State District Court Judge Garth Bates, charged with accepting a bribe to ensure that a defendant in his court would not go to prison.

Bates, 61, pleaded innocent Monday at his arraignment before Judge John Barren of Bryan, a visiting judge assigned to hear the case.

"I enter a plea that I am not guilty," Bates told Barron, a retired justice of the 11th Court of Civil Appeals.

Barron set Aug. 18 as the deadline for pre-trial motions and Aug. 30 as the date for a hearing on the motion.

Bates is accused of accepting a $59,000 bribe from Nukie Fontenot, 38, a Houston pawn shop operator, who was accused of receiving and concealing stolen goods from a $90,000 jewelry robbery.

Bates was indicted by a Harris County grand jury July 21, along with Ed Riklin, 46, a Houston salesman.

Riklin also pleaded innocent to the bribery charges. Both Bates and Riklin are free on $118,000 bonds each. No trial date was set for Riklin.

The indictment alleges that Fontenot paid the bribe July 16 in return for "representation" from the judge that he would use his influence to see that Fontenot did not receive a prison sentence.

The trial of Fontenot had been set this month before Bates. Fontenot was not charged in the bribery case.

Bates appeared dapper and friendly during his brief court appearance Monday. He steadily refused to comment specifically on the bribery charges to newsmen.

"I am not guilty of anything," he said. "I'll wait for my day in court."

Passengers may put bite on car thieves

HOUSTON (AP) — A couple of passengers in a stolen car may put the bite on the thief who took it.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Powell said Monday their sports car, which was stolen Saturday, contained two rare and very poisonous Asian rattlesnakes.

Mrs. Powell, 23, said the snakes, which she purchased at $550 each for a friend who owns an exotic pet shop here, were in a shoe box on the floor in the passenger side of the car.

She said the rhinoceros vipers, commonly called "horned toad adders" were a little more than two feet long and "very poisonous like most rattlesnakes."

She said the car and snakes were stolen when her husband, 26, left the car motor running as he went inside their house.

Police said they will check out persons who show up at local hospitals with snake bites.

A detective predicted possibly other injuries for the thief.

"Can't you imagine some guy driving along at 70 miles an hour when a rattlesnake crawls out on the front seat?" asked Lt. D. L. Singleton.

Q. What does the word "nightmare" mean? What causes nightmares?

A. Nightmare is a dream filled with great dread or terror. The word mare at one time meant an evil spirit thought to cause the nightmares. Indigestion, or improper blood circulation or breathing causes nightmares. So do personal problems that are worrying the dreamer.

Three witnesses call for tighter flow-through cost regulations

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission's "fact-finding" hearing on automatic flowthrough of higher gas costs to consumers ended today with three witnesses calling for tighter regulation.

Examiner John Camp said the possibilities for commission action are "open-ended"— meaning it could issue some proposed rules, resume the hearing or take no action.

Jack Hopper of Austin, a private economic consultant who advised Lane Denton in his losing race for a seat on the commission, said the commission should send out audit teams to verify the gas purchase costs that utilities are passing on to customers.

"The fact that the commission is not here is an indication that the commission doesn't take much interest in this problem," Hopper said.

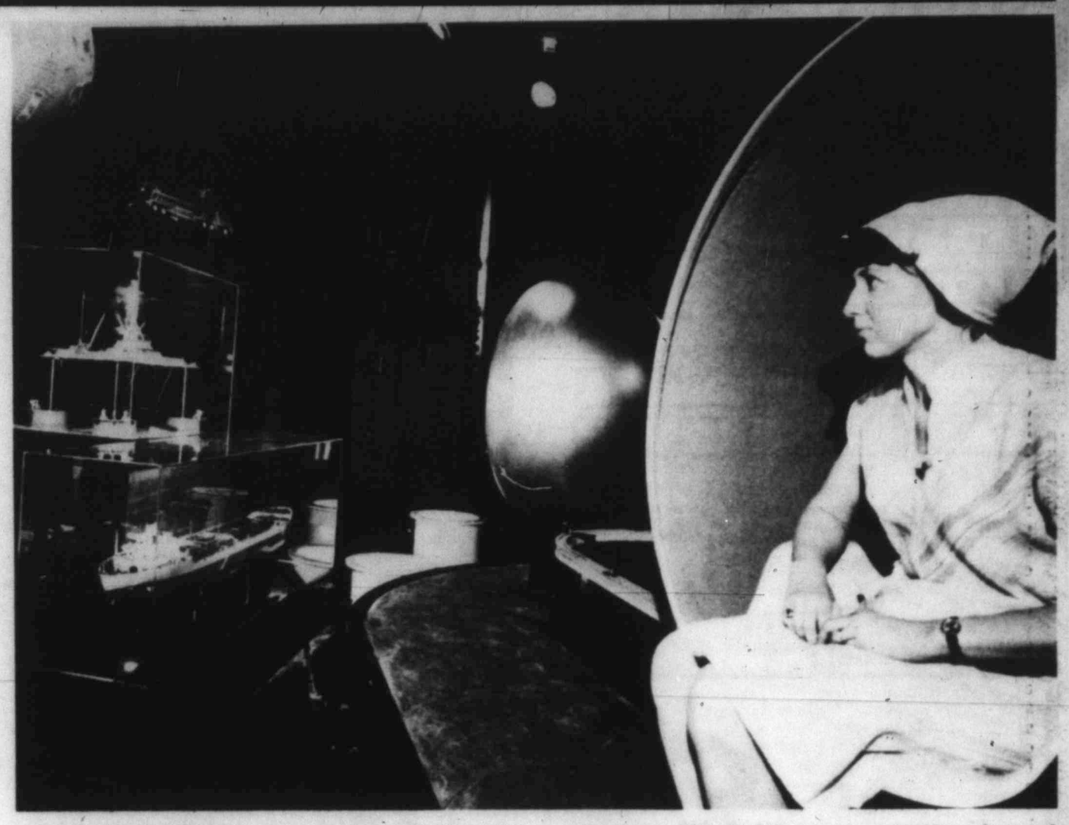
Bill McMorries of Amarillo, president of McMorries & Associates, consulting engineers, said automatic pass-throughs were a cause of rising gas prices.

He countered the utility companies' view that requiring hearings before higher gas costs could be flowed through would produce a welter of expensive proceedings.

"It is no more inconvenient for utilities to obtain prior approval for rate increases than it is for the consuming public to endure those increases," he said.

R.H.Aughinbaugh, Fort Worth director of consumer protection and public utilities, said the automatic pass-through is a reasonable measure but should be limited to 85 per cent of cost and closed in with safeguards.

In Monday's testimony, a small town gas company spokesman, who operates some gas wells of his own, said it was hard to understand why the big companies pay so much for gas.



SCALE MODELS OF a giant offshore oil platform, supertanker, and tank truck show three vital elements in the chain of operations which brings oil from beneath the earth's crust to the American consumer. The models occupy a portion of one of the 10 exhibit chambers of the new petroleum exhibit presented to the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago by Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

West Texas areas get wildcat sites

Exploratory sites have been staked in Reeves, Crockett and Fisher counties.

Gulf Oil Corp. filed application to drill a 13,300-foot prospector in Reeves, 9½ miles northwest of Toyah. It is No. 1 E. B. Adams, et al-State.

Drillsite is 10 miles southwest of the Toyah, North (Wolfcamp and Siluro-Devonian) field, 1,980 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 35, block 59, PSL survey.

CROCKETT VENTURE

J. Cleo Thompson of Dallas intends to drill No. 1 C. E. Davidson III as a 8,800-foot explorer in Crockett, seven miles east of Ozona.

It is 2⅞ miles west of the depleted Clayton Ranch (Ellenburger) gas field and 1⅝ mile north of detrital production in the Davidson Ranch pool.

Drillsite is 1,220 feet from south and west lines of section 21, block IJ, GC&SF survey.

Also in Crockett, Robert M. Wynne of Midland will drill No. 3-88 Paul Pearson as a project in the Pure-Bean, South field, nine miles northwest of Ozona.

Location is 1,770 feet from south and 2,890 feet from east lines of section 88, block OP, GC&SF survey. Scheduled depth is 1,500 feet.

The field has four wells.

FISHER TRY

Sojourner Drilling Corp., Abilene, has staked site for No. 1 Harvey Maberry, a 5,600-foot wildcat in Fisher, five miles southwest of Hamlin.

It spots 2,173 feet from north and 1,787 feet from west lines of section 197, BBB&C survey, ⅜ mile southwest of depleted4,600-foot .Canyon production in the Celotex field.

Oil, gas tests set

A wildcat site was staked in Edwards County, and a stepout was scheduled in a Scurry field.

Amoco Production Co. will drill No. 1 Less Shanklin Wardlaw, a 10,500-foot wildcat, in Edwards County, 24 miles northwest of Rocksprings.

Drillsite is 2,280 feet from north and 1,126 feet from east lines of section 170, CCSD&RGNG survey, abstract 2197, 2½ miles north of the Wardlaw field.

SCURRY PROJECT

Lario Oil & Gas Co. plans to drill No. 2 Brumley as a location north stepout to the two-well Tonto, North (Strawn) field of Scurry County.

It is projected to 7,200 feet, and spots 517 feet from south and 670 feet from east lines of section 446, block 97, H&TC survey, six miles northeast of Snyder.

RRC okays shutdown

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The railroad commission has approved abandonment of a small gas line in Kilgore because of the high cost of installing electrical wiring required by the federal government to prevent rusting in the line.

Few residential users were served by the 91,900-foot Warren Petroleum Co. line, and only one complained about the abandonment, a comission spokesman said.

When Exxon agreed to serve that customer, the commission approved Warren's request to shut it down.

The gas comes from a casinghead system, where the gas is produced incidental to oil recovery. Had the commission not acted, Warren would have had to cease oil operations at that site, a spokesman said.

Spraberry tests slated

Parker & Parsley, Midland, has scheduled two projects in the Spraberry Trend Area in Midland County, 10 miles southeast of Midland.

Both are slated to 9,200 feet, and are in section 44, block 37, T-2-S, W. T. Holcombe Sr.

No. 1-E Turner, spots 1,320 feet from south and east lines of the section.

No. 1-F Turner spots 1,320 feet from north and east lines.

Kent area gains well

Highland, Brown, Brock & Equity of Midland completed No. 1 J. W. Morrison as a new producer in the Lyn-Kay (SMS) field of Kent County, 19 miles northwest of Clairemont.

It was completed on the pump for 139 barrels of oil daily, through perforations at 6,211-6,226 feet.

Location, ⅜ mile northeast of production, spots 1,002 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 67, block 1, M&GN survey, 19 miles northwest of Clairemont.

Gas lawsuit set Aug. 23

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The city's $200 million suit against its natural gas supplier will go to trial Aug. 23, "barring an act of God", says State District Court Judge Peter Michael Curry.

Five of the city's fine councilmen already have stated they will vote against a proposed out-of-court settlement of the suit when the council meets Thursday morning.

Abd, Curry said Monday there is no indication that lawyers on either side will seek further delays.

"I am taking no excuses from the attorneys," said Curry.

San Antonio and its city public service utility have filed the breach of contract suit against Lo-Vaca Gathering Co., its corporate parent Coastal States Gas Corp., and Coastal States Chairman Oscar Wyatt Jr.

The city charges that the gas supplier failed to meet terms of a 20-year natural gas supply contract.

Other customers of the same supplier also have filed more than $1 billion in similar suits against the company.

Potentials announced

New producers have been completed in Sterling and Runnels County fields.

Stoltz, Wagner & Brown, Midland, finaled No. 1-32-A Glass, ⅜ mile southwest of production in a northeast area of the Big Salute (Canyon) oil field of Sterling.

It flowed 122 barrels of 40-gravity oil on 24-hour potential test taken on a 12-64-inch choke and through perforations at 7,567-8,030 feet, after fracturing with 98,000 gallons and 150,000 pounds.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 32, block 22, H&TC survey, 15 miles southwest of Sterling City.

A second current Caddo lime oil well and ¾-mile southwest extender for that pay has been completed in the Motley, North pool of Runnels.

Desert Oil Co., Abilene, No. 1-A Walter Templin finaled on the pump for 64.47 barrels of 42-gravity oil and 73 barrels of water daily. Gas-oil ratio measuring 1,800-1 was reported.

It was potentialed through perforations at 4,810-4,816 feet.

Location is 1,750 feet from north and 2,200 feet from east lines of section 24, F. Brandt survey, 10 miles northwest of Ballinger.

Ministers working on fund

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Finance ministers from the members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) will work out details of a new special fund for developing countries at a meeting here this week, an OPEC spokesman said today.

The conference, which begins Thursday and is expected to last two days, is the first toplevel OPEC meeting in Vienna since a bloody terrorist raid on an oil ministers' meeting here last December.

The organization had announced the meeting last week, but did not disclose its agenda at that time.

The special fund was set up at a Paris meeting of the finance ministers last Jan. 28. They agreed to distribute $800 million this year, but a number of details were left unresolved.

Hamid Zaheri, the OPEC information chief, said the Vienna meeting might also consider several applications for aid that already have been received.

Extension potentials

A one-mile south extension into Ward County of the Wink, South (Montoya-Ellenburger) field has been assured with the flowing of gas at the rate of 1.1 million cubic feet daily, plus 25 barrels of distillate in 24 hours, at BTA Oil Producers, Midland, No. 3 7417 JV-S Winkler.

The flow was gauged through a 14-64-inch choke and perforations at 18,720-19,129 feet, after the pay had been treated with 12,000 gallons of acid. Testing continued.

Drilled to 19,150 feet, it has a 5-inch liner hung from 14,256-19,149 feet, and is plugged back to 19,130 feet.

Location is 1,320 feet from north and east lines of section 88, block F, G&MMB&A survey, six miles south of Wink.

Expansion scheduled

PORT ARTHUR — ARCO Polymers, Inc., a subsidiary of Atlantic Richfield Co., has announced plans for a major expansion of high-density polyethylene facilities at its Port Arthur chemical plant.

Dr. Paul A. McKim, ARCO Polymers president, said construction of a second high-density polyethylene unit is expected to begin by mid-1977, with completion plans for 1979.

The new unit, rated at 175-million pounds per year, will double ARCO's current high-density polyethylene production capacity.

San Andres pay opens

The Four C field gained a fourth pay, San Andres gas, and San Andres oil pay was extended in the same pool.

Joe H. Warren of Dallas finaled No. 8 Nelle Gray as a San Andres gas pay opener, nine miles east of Imperial.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 430,000 cubic feet of gas per day. Production is through perforations at 2,985-1,995 feet. No treatment was reported.

Drilled to 3,130 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set on bottom.

Location is 467 feet from south and 1,787 feet (amended from 1,767) feet from east lines of section 34, block 9, H&GH survey.

Warren's No. 6-R Nelle Gray, sixth San Andres oiler, was completed for 96.74 barrels of 39-gravity oil per day, producing through perforations at 2,298-2,308 feet, after treating the pay with 500 gallons of acid.

Location is 476 feet from south and 567 feet from east lines of section 34.

Petroleum exhibit new part of Chicago's science museum

CHICAGO, Ill. — The new petroleum exhibit, which literally transports visitors into a world of energy and petroleum,opened at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry Monday.

The 8,700-square-foot exhibit was presented to the museum by the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

One year of planning and designing and six months of construction were necessary to complete the $1.2-million exhibit.

Highlighting the exhibit is a unique conveyor transport for visitors. A highly complex timing system activates each of 23 exhibit sections as museum-goers ride past in individual hemisphere-shaped pods, each wired for sound.

A 650-foot-long articulated slat conveyor, the longest in the world, carries visitors on their 10-minute trip through the exhibit, the only one of its kind anywhere.

The colorful exhibit units show how oil and gas were formed and describe modern methods of recovering these resources. The thousands of uses for petroleum in daily life, the need to conserve energy, and the search for new energy sources all are explained in dramatic displays.

More than a thousand miles of wire, 6,000 lights, 30,000 moving parts, 300 slides, and 10 tons of plastic, wood, metal, and Plexiglas went into the construction of the exhibit, which was designed by Sphere Inc. of Chicago.

In addition to the unique transport system, the exhibit includes several popular features from the previous petroleum exhibit which had been at the museum since 1968.

Visitors can win a souvenir medallion if they "strike oil" at an oil rig. A fractionating tower illustrates the many products derived from petroleum, and a rolling mill bearing weighing 4,834 pounds can be turned with just one finger because it rests on a film of oil only .012 inches thick.

Other exhibit units allow visitors to test for themselves the properties and characteristics of oil and other petroleum products.

The exhibit can be visited during museum hours, 9:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. daily.

Oil field thefts part of rising crude costs

PONCA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Oil field thefts are becoming a big factor in the rising cost petroleum, northern Oklahoma peace officers reported Monday.

Kay County Sheriff Thomas Johnston said 200 barrels of crude oil stolen from an oil field tank near Braman, northwest of here near the Kansas line, was worth about $2,400 on the legitimate market.

On the black market, officers estimated the oil would bring about $1,000 clear profit.

Johnson said the oil theft near Braman was "very similar to thefts in Garfield, Major, Kingfisher and Grant Counties" in Okiahoma.

In Kingfisher County, authorities said the black market for oil is very active.

"They're taking everything but the hole," said Kingfisher County Undersheriff Charles Lietzke.

Lietzke and other officers in Oklahoma are joining with authorities in Arkansas, Kansas and Texas in combatting the problem.

The United Petroleum Security Cooperative (UPSC), formed in February, pools the resources of the oil companies and law enforcement officers.

"We estimate a minimum of $5 million in losses in oil thefts for the four-state area in 1976," said Richard Iorio, UPSC cochairman.

The crude oil, authorities said, is sold on the black market and then recycled into the reclaimed oil market through several channels where it is difficult to detect the addition of stolen petroleum.

Iorio said the cost of the stolen oil is included in the overall price the consumer pays for petroleum products, including gasoline.

Murphy appointed

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Edward H. Murphy Jr. has been named deputy director of the American Petroleum Institute's Department of Statistics, API President Frank N. Ikard announced.

Murphy has been a senior economist in API's Policy Analysis Department since 1975. He will assist in developing policies and procedures governing the institute's statistical program and help direct the gathering and disseminating of data on industry operations.

Refinery draws fine

HOUSTON (AP) — A state judge has fined Gulf Oil Corp. $49,000 for alleged air pollution at its Port Arthur refinery.

State District Court Judge Arthur Lesher also ordered the firm Monday to install further pollution abatement equipment estimated to cost $10.5 million at the plant to reduce sulfur compound emissions.

He told Gulf to install a tail gas cleanup system on two of its sulfur recovery units before Dec. 31, 1977.

Lesher also ordered the corporation to change the catalysts in the two sulfur recovery units annually rather than every three years.

The suit, filed March 20, 1975 by the state attorney general's office, alleged the firm was violating a regultion of the Texas Air Control Board. Asst. Atty. Gen. Jim Jard said the state estimated Gulf exceeded allowed sulfur emission by 50 per cent on some occasions.

Jim Gatten, a Gulf spokesman, said the two units were initially installed in the 1950s and were the latest technology available at the time. He said that since the creation of the Texas Air Control Board, Gulf has acted in good faith at making modifications of the units to reduce emissions.

125 delegates hold GOP key

By EVANS WITT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only 15 days before the roll call is to begin in Kansas City, 125 Republican partisans clutch the key to their party's biggest prize, the presidential nomination.

In two months of intense courtship by President Ford and Ronald Reagan, the ranks of the uncommitted convention delegates have dwindled by more than 50.

Both camps claim enough delegates to grab the nomination, but neither candidate has been able to win the hearts — and votes — of the 1,130 delegates needed for a first-ballot victory, according to The Associated Press survey of delegates' legal commitments and public declarations.

Both continue to woo delegates, with strategies that range from White House dinner invitations to the stunning selection by Reagan of a liberal senator for a running mate to claims of allegiance from new blocks of delegates.

Reagan campaign manager John Sears gave out names of 12 delegates on Monday, saying they now back his candidate. He listed 10 from Pennsylvania, one from New York and one from West Virginia, as Reagan backers try to prove their choice of Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania as a running mate is an asset, not a liability.

"We are not aware of any individual delegates we have lost from our count," Sears said.

He claimed at least six of the 12 were previously Ford supporters, but The AP survey had listed six of them for Reagan and six as uncommitted.

Sears repeated his claim that the former California governor has 1,140 votes on the first ballot. Ford's chief delegate hunter, James Baker, claims Ford now has 1,134 delegates committed to him.

The AP survey shows Ford with 1,105, Reagan with 1,029 and the remaining 125 uncommitted.

Baker followed Sears' news conference with one of his own, saying that the changes were certainly not a big surprise.

But Baker admitted under questioning that the President Ford Committee's "hard count, conservative count," as he calls it, had slipped by at least five in Pennsylvania and one in New York since the Schweiker announcement a week ago Monday.

The AP survey, based on interviews with the individual delegates, counts only those who say they will vote for Ford or Reagan on the first ballot. Delegates who are leaning toward a candidate or who have given some other, less certain indication of preference, are not counted for either candidate.

For example, The AP count listed as uncommitted all the Pennsylvania delegates who had been counted by the Ford committee as favoring the President, but who were named Monday as Reagan backers by Sears. The Ford people had counted these delegates based on their votes for a pro-Ford resolution at a delegation meeting. But The AP counted them as uncommitted when the delegates said in individual interviews that they did not consider the resolution binding and were actually uncommitted.

Ford's campaign has similarly counted for the President certain delegates from New York and West Virginia on the basis of votes at delegation meetings. But these delegates have told AP they are uncommitted.

These three states account for the principal differences between the Ford and AP tallies.

Even second trick may be dangerous

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Some bridge writers waste your time telling you about the danger of making the wrong play at the first trick. Pay no attention to them. Sometimes your opportunity to destroy yourself doesn't present itself until the second trick.

Opening lead — ♣ A

West took the ace of clubs and continued with the king. South ruffed, led the ace of spades and continued craftily with the jack of spades.

Undeceived, West stepped up with the king of spades and led a heart. East won and led a third club, whereupon West was sure to take the setting trick with the ten of spades.

Clearly, South did nothing wrong at the first trick. It was correct for him to follow suit, and he did so.

South's blunder occurred at the second trick, when he ruffed the king of clubs. After this "automatic" play he could no longer make his contract even if he stood on his head.

IMPORTANT DISCARD

South should discard his losing heart on the king of clubs at the second trick. This gives the defenders an unearned club trick but deprives them of a heart trick later on. More important, the heart discard cuts communications between the defenders.

When West gets a trick with the king of spades he cannot get to his partner's hand. East therefore never gets a chance to lead a third club. Instead of losing 200 points, South scores 790 points for making the doubled game and rubber.

DAILY QUESTION

ANSWER: Bid one spade. You have nine pretty sure playing tricks, but the hand is not worth a forcing opening bid. If you open with a two-bid, your partner may put you in a slam with useless kings and queens in your short suits.

Butter, coffee, eggs go higher

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Bad news for consumers who like to start the day with a hearty breakfast! An Associated Press marketbasket survey shows prices for such staples as butter, eggs and coffee increased during July.

The increases at the retail store generally reflected trends at the wholesale level which, in turn, mirrored the over-all supply situation.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed the marketbasket bill increased last month at the checklist store in eight cities, rising an average of 1.7 per cent. The bill decreased at the checklist store in four cities, down an average 2 per cent, and was unchanged in the 13th city. Over-all, the marketbasket bill at the checklist store increased a little less than half of one per cent during July.

The situation represented an improvement over June, when the marketbasket bill went up at the checklist store in nine cities and the over-all total was up 1.3 per cent.

A comparison of prices at the start of August with those in January showed the marketbasket bill for food and nonfood items surveyed went up at the checklist store in eight cities, went down in four cities and was unchanged in one city. The over-all increase was 1.7 per cent.

The government has predicted that retail prices for food alone will increase about 2 per cent to 5 per cent this year, although the exact size of any increase depends to some degree on the crops still being harvested. The recent strike by California cannery workers could provide an unexpected boost in the cost of canned fruits and vegetables.

The major increases in July occurred in breakfast items. The price of a pound of butter went up at the checklist store in 11 cities, rising an average of almost 10 per cent. In June, the price of a pound of butter went up in nine cities, increasing about 5 per cent.

A strong demand for milk and other dairy products is blamed for the increase in the price of butter. An Agriculture Department spokesman explained that there is a particularly strong demand for cheese, which is a more profitable item for manufacturers than butter. The more milk used for cheese, the less there is available for butter.

In other developments:

—The price of a pound of coffee increased at the checklist store in seven of the cities surveyed. Coffee now averages about $2 a pound, an increase of more than 50 per cent over the past year. The increases are blamed on last year's frost in Brazil.

—The price of a dozen eggs went up at the checklist store in 12 of the cities surveyed. Higher prices for chicken feed, combined with lower production, are blamed for the boost.

—On the bright side, the price of frankfurters decreased at the checklist store in eight cities, as did the price of a pound of chopped chuck. Increased supplies, combined with scattered summer sales, were responsible for the drop in prices.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, chocolate chip cookies, milk, all-beef frankfurters and granulated sugar.

Marine Corps has most recruit abuse reports

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps, smallest of the armed services, reported more than twice as many incidents of recruit abuse as the combined incidents reported by the Army, Navy and Air Force over the past two years.

The Marines listed 234 confirmed incidents in fiscal 1975 and 1976 while the other services registered an overall total of 96.

This was disclosed in a report by Pentagon manpower officials to Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, who ordered a review of all service recruit training after allegations of Marine brutality arose earlier this year. The report was made available Monday.

Pentagon investigators found current service policies are generally adequate. They said that comprehensive data on how scrupulously these policies are followed has been difficult to obtain.

"Some cases of abuse undoubtedly occur which do not come to light," the report said.

The report's publication comes after renewed criticism of corps training practices in the wake of the death last Dec. 6 of Pvt. Lynn McClure of Lufkin, Tex., who died after a severe beating in pugil stick exercises at the San Diego, Calif., Marine training base.

There also has been testimony by a former psychiatrist at the Parris Island, S.C., base that physical abuse occurs regularly there.

Manpower officials recommended that each service establish "a credible protected channel through which recruits can bring alleged abuses to the attention of senior commanders."

They noted with approval that the Air Force has set up a "suggestion box" for recruits. "Only the commander has the key and reports of alleged abuse received are promptly investigated," they said.

The report urged that officer supervision of drill sergeants and instructors be intensified and that the services file quarterly statistical reports on alleged abuses.

In a summary of confirmed incidents of recruit abuse, the Army with 53 cases was a distant second to the Marine Corps, followed by the Navy with 34 and the Air Force with only 9.

The Marine Corps appeared to deal less harshly with its offenders.

The report listed only 26 Marine court-martial convictions with 208 offenders given lesser administrative punishment. The Navy court-martialed 13 and administratively punished the other 21, Army courts-martial convicted 11 while the remaining 42 received minor penalties, and the Air Force court-martialed two and gave lighter punishment to seven.

While others talk mail, DPS now flies its own

By LARRY FORGY
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Everyone talks about the mail, and no one does anything about it, right?

Wrong.

The Texas Department of Public Safety has taken the mail in its own planes, and is saving a lot of money in the process.

In the first 10 months of this fiscal year the DPS has saved more than $54,000 by delivering its own mail.

Every Wednesday three DPS airplanes leave the department's regional offices carrying district supervisors with business in Austin. It occurred to someone in the department that much of the DPS mail traveled between the regional and state offices, and since the planes were going that way anyway...

From Sept. 1 to June 30 of this year, G. W. Burnup, who is in charge of the planes, estimates that the planes carried 57,272 pounds of mail during their 117 scheduled flights.

Burnup said maintenance on the planes costs the department $45,045, but that the cost of sending that much mail first class would have been $99,081. He said they would have saved more but that they had to replace the engines in all the planes during the year.

During the 1975 calendar year it cost the DPS $25,851 to transport 61,139 pounds of mail that the post office would have charged $76,424 to deliver.

Burnup says each flight carries an average of 490 pounds of mail in both directions. The trip costs $378, but the "mail" would cost $847 to mail.

The Dallas-Waco-Austin flight carries the heaviest load, followed by the Corpus Christi-Houston-Austin and the Midland-Lubbock-Abilene flights.

So why does it take so long to get your driver's license back? The DPS airmail system delivers only intradepartmental mail, Burnup says. Otherwise it would cost even more to carry it in the plane and then mail it anyway from the regional office.

Martinez trial gets under way

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The theft trial of former Senate Print Shop supervisor Alex Martinez and Penni Soner begins today.

A six-man, six-woman jury was selected for the trial Monday.

Senate Secretary Charles Schnabel accused Martinez and Stoner last September of stealing Senate paper.

Martinez in turn accused Schnabel of wrongdoing.

The Travis County Grand Jury indicted all three. Schnabel's trial is set Sept. 12. He faces indictments on theft, forgery and official misconduct.

Joe Martinec, attorney for Martinez and Stoner, told prospective jurors Monday, "There is a pervasive, cynical feeling that people who work for the government ... are crooks.

"There is a feeling—'Well, this sort of thing goes on in state agencies all the time. What a rotten group of people run the state government.'"

Martinec asked the jurors if any among them felt that way. There was no response.

"What you're telling me (by their silence) is you're not going to require a person who works for the state to prove he is more honest than anybody else," Martinec said.

Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, a member of the Senate Administration Committee, has said Schnabel ordered Martinez to "get rid of" Stoner after other employes in the shop complained.

Arab states bid to curb trouble-making neighbor

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Sudan are taking steps to contain the multimillion-dollar troublemaking of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, diplomatic sources say.

The present attitude of the three governments is essentially defensive, but Egypt and Sudan could turn to offensive action if there is a "clear provocation" from Khadafy, the sources said. It is understood they would have Saudi Arabia's petrodollar treasury to draw on.

"Khadafy is creating trouble everywhere in the Arab world — Lebanon, Oman, in Morocco, in Egypt, the recent Sudan coup, everywhere," said one source.

"Now he has been warned: 'Either you behave yourself, or else.'"

Another source said Egypt and Sudan would probably take action only against "something really grave and directly and indisputably of Khadafy's doing." He declined to give a hypothetical example.

The radical 34-year-old Libyan leader has been feuding with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Sudanese President Jaafar el-Numairi, his neighbors to the east and southeast, for the past two years. Libyan newspapers also express suspicion openly of the conservative Saudi monarchy.

The attempt to overthrow Numairi on July 2-3 crystallized the new coalition against Khadafy. Numairi accused him of training and equipping a force of 2,000 mercenaries and anti-Numairi Sudanese and sending them across the border. Independent sources confirmed that Khadafy provided the money and the equipment for the rebels and said the Libyans probably gave them some training also.

After Numairi put down the revolt, Sudan and Egypt concluded a mutual defense pact aimed at Libya on July 15. A joint military planning staff is being created, and some aspects of military training are being standardized. There will also be frequent high-level exchanges of information, sources said.

Carolinian apparently sets record

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Fletcher Williams of Camden, S. C., has fired an apparent world record score in sporter class benchrest rifle competition at 200 yards.

Williams' cluster of five shots within a diameter of .215 inch was fired during the National Benchrest Shooting Association championships here last week.

The target was submitted to the association's scoring committee for verification that it topped the old record of a .242-inch cluster.

Rifles used in the competition must be at least .243 caliber.

Folklife fete set Thursday

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — More than 6,000 persons from 27 different cultural and ethnic backgrounds are expected to participate in the fifth Annual Texas Folklife Festival which opens on the Hemisfair grounds here Thursday.

Participants at the four-day event will display the foods, costumes, customs, songs, dances and handicrafts of their native lands.

The participants represent the groups which settled and tamed the Lone Star State.

Festival officials expect 100,000 visitors to attend before the event ends Sunday evening.

Instruction sessions will demonstrate how to make butter, beer, wine and adobe brick among other things. Visitors also can learn how to chop wood and prepare native foods.

"We hope to show younger generations the crafts our forefathers had to master in order to survive," says O.T. Baker, director of the festival.

"The idea of the festival is to allow the various cultural groups of Texas an opportunity to show themselves as well as others what they're really like," he adds.

The emphasis on cultural and ethnic diversity is consistent with the purpose of the Institute of Texan Cultures, which sponsors the event each year.

Groups to be represented include Indians, Mexicans, Blacks, Japanese, Swiss, Lebanese, Yugoslav and others.

For the first time, the Russian community from the Dallas area will be on hand with foods and costumes of their native country.

Stocks log light gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved ahead slightly today in an advance attributed to technical forces within the market.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up .94 at 983.20, and gainers held an 8-7 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market, flat and listless through most of the morning, turned upward just before the noon hour. Brokers said the absence of any further selling after Monday's mild decline appeared to attract some buy orders from traders.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the most active NYSE issue, climbed ¾ to 58½. On Monday a Federal Communication Commission official ruled against an FCC staff recommendation tht AT&T be forced to divest itself of its Western Electric manufacturing subsidiary, and also held that its rates on interstate calls were reasonable.

The Big Board's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .11 to 55.24. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .05 at 103.38.

Volume remained light on the NYSE, totalling 6.91 million shares over the first two hours against 6.31 million in the like period on Monday.

Boeing, another actively traded issue, gained 1⅝ to 41¾. On Monday, the company reported higher quarterly earnings and received an order for six planes from American Airlines.

Experts cite uranium sale world danger

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Countries being supplied with U.S. uranium now possess enough raw nuclear material to make about 1,000 atomic bombs, according to American and foreign experts.

And these experts said Monday that even if those countries wanted to return the nuclear material to U.S. control, the United States has neither the facilities nor the space to reprocess or store it.

A senior U.S. authority familiar with the situation came up with this explanation:

"If all this spent nuclear fuel is permitted to lie around indefinitely there is an obvious danger that some of it might be diverted for military purposes, despite international checks and treaties," he said.

"If, on the other hand, the United States were to exercise its option to buy back the spent fuel, then this country would in time become a dumping ground for highly hazardous material."

Spent nuclear fuel after reprocessing yields plutonium — an ingredient of atomic bombs.

Sources, including diplomats and scientists, estimated that more than 4,000 metric tons of spent fuel has piled up since about 1971 in Latin American, European and Asian lands, which buy low-enriched uranium from the United States.

This material would be enough to construct about 1,000 atomic bombs, the sources say. Such weapons presumably would be crude devices with the explosive capacity of the bombs that destroyed Hiroshima and Nagasaki at the end of World War II. The two bombs dropped on Japan in 1945 each had an explosive force of about 20,000 tons of TNT.

Indian experts said their country has a stockpile of about 200 metric tons. And despite frequent requests, the Indians said, Washington has avoided repurchasing it.

U.S. agreements of 1963 and 1966 with India included provisions that figure in most nuclear cooperation accords Washington has negotiated with friendly powers.

Under these agreements, the United States ships low-enriched uranium (meaning nonweapons grade) for use in nuclear power stations, then has first option to buy back spent fuel India doesn't need.

If America won't exercise its buy-back option, India can sell its surplus spent fuel to other countries for civilian use. Use of the material would be subject to safeguards and inspections supervised by the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA).

Only Monday a new storm blew up over America's projected sale of nuclear power plants to Egypt and Israel.

Assistant Secretary of State James J. Atherton appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Monday to talk about the proposed sales behind closed doors. Later, he said the agreements for the sale provide the tightest safeguards yet for preventing the use of nuclear fuel in atomic weapons.

But Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said after the meeting that "for the life of me I can't see why we want to participate in proliferation all over the world." And Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said "the whole concept of increasing nuclear capability in the Middle East is a matter of grave concern."

Judge denies bid by Alaniz lawyer

EDINBURG, Tex. (AP) — An elderly woman testified Monday that lawyer Nago Alaniz of Duval County beat her and said "don't talk to the federales" several months after she saw him at the scene of a burglary.

Mrs. Maria Elena Cardenas of San Diego gave the testimony as the final witness before Asst. Texas Atty. Gen. Neal Duvall rested his case in the burglary and theft trial of Alaniz, 63.

After Duvall rested his case, District Court Judge Darrell Hester denied a defense request for an instructed verdict of innocent.

Defense lawyer Dick DeGuerin of Houston asked for the instructed verdict on grounds that the prosecution had failed to prove that Alaniz did not have permission to enter the Duval County Conservation and Reclamation District and remove records.

Alaniz is charged with burglarizing the water district office and taking records that were being sought for a federal grand jury investigation into the income tax returns of George B. Parr, the "Duke of Duval." Alaniz was a close political associate of the late South Texas political boss.

Although the charge against Alaniz is burglary, testimony in the closing phases of the state's case Monday focused on the alleged beating, allegations of blackmail and extortion and claims that a missing prosecution witness was Alaniz' mistress.

Mrs. Cardenas, a key prosecution witness, testified earlier that she saw Alaniz enter and leave the water district office one night in early July, 1972.

The woman testified that Carmen Munoz, her niece who is now 27, had a close personal relationship with Alaniz. Earlier witnesses said Miss Munoz was with Alaniz the night of the water district burglary.

Mrs. Cardenas said it was after she told her niece she had seen Alaniz at the water district office when she was called by Alaniz one night in September, 1972, and told to go to Parr's home.

Mrs. Cardenas testified that after she drove to Parr's home alone, accordingto instructions, Alaniz beat her about the face. "Every time he hit me, he told me not to talk to the federales," Mrs. Cardenas said.

"He told me to be thankful that he didn't kill me," she continued.

Under cross examination, Mrs. Cardenas denied she had been blackmailing Alaniz with pictures of the lawyer and her niece together. DeGuerin produced a note from Mrs. Cardenas asking Alaniz for $500.

Flash flood warnings heard in two states

By The Associated Press

Flash flood warnings were posted today for parts of Colorado and Texas as scattered thundershowers fell along the High Plains and in the East and South.

Thunderstorms also roamed southern Atlantic and Gulf Coast areas as well as Northwest Texas and eastern Colorado. Showers or thundershowers were widely scattered in the northern Rockies and the northern plateau and ranged into the Northwest.

Rainfall during the night generally was an inch or less although locally heavy downpours hit parts of the Southeast.

Fair weather dominated most of the country from the Great Plains to the middle Atlantic states.

Players approve baseball peace treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor peace has been reached in baseball.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, told the Select House Committee on Professional Sports that the new four-year agreement with management has been ratified overwhelmingly by the union membership.

With 15 of the 24 clubs having cast their ballots by Monday, the vote was 352-18 in favor of the pact which, for the first time, recognizes freedom of movement for the players.

UNDER THE terms of the agreement, the result of 13 months of negotiation, a player with six years' major league service can become a free agent by notifying his club in writing after the season.

A player with five years of major league service has the right to demand a trade at the end of a season, and he may list a maximum of six clubs to which he doesn't want to be traded. If he isn't traded by the following March 15, he becomes a free agent.

Other key terms include the right of an unsigned player to become a free agent at the end of this season and a signed player to become a free agent after playing out the renewal year in his current contract.

The tentative agreement was reached between representatives of management and the union during the All-Star break three weeks ago, subject to ratification by the 24 owners and the players. The owners ratified the pact two weeks ago.

MILLER TOLD the committee that despite baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's comments to the contrary, "collective bargaining in baseball has been impeded because of its antitrust status."

Miller said the union had tried repeatedly for the past 10 years to make modest modifications in the reserve system through collective bargaining.

"Despite its limited goals, which never included complete abolition of the reserve system, the club owners' response invariably was to the effect that they liked it just the way it was and that they would not change one comma in any of the relevant provisions," he said. "There was never any deviation in the club owners' position that players could never, on their own initiative, become free agents."

Miller said an arbitrator's decision on pitcher Andy Messersmith turned things around.

"BY UTILIZING impartial arbitration, subsequently enforced by the courts, the association obtained the ruling that baseball's reserve system was not as air-tight as the owners had been led to believe, and indeed, every player could play or sit out his contract and reservation in one year," he said.

"Then and only then were the owners first interested in modifying the reserve system. But now they wanted it modified in their favor. We could have, with great justification, taken the same attitude the owners had expressed for 10 years ... but we did not. We agreed to modifications to arrive at what we believe will be a fair and workable system."

Miller said if in the Curt Flood case the Supreme Court had removed "baseball's anomalous immunity," the bargaining which took place this year could have occurred four years ago.

MILLER ALSO attacked his football counterpart, Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, for his criticism of the baseball agreement.

"What I find appalling is that in the middle of another organization's ratification procedure, he would publish an article like this," said Miller, alluding to an item in the football players' internal newspaper, "The Audible," in which the agreement is called "the worst decision for professional athletes in years."

Miller also said that the baseball players union, in another vote, ratified 424-3 a new pension plan which will increase benefits 30 per cent over last year.

Rangers smash TL Stars,

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Rangers return to the real world tonight after annihilating the Texas League All-Stars Monday night, 18-4, behind a barrage of big hits led by Joe Lahoud's fifth inning grand slam.

Lahoud, who picked up a couple of other hits in the rout, was named most valuable player for the game.

The Rangers open a home stand tonight in Arlington Stadium against the California Angels while the All-Stars return to their respective homes to lick their wounds.

Jeff Burroughs smashed a second-inning home run to start off the scoring, and the hapless minor leaguers were never in it after that.

The all-stars scored all their runs in the ninth inning, two of them coming on Lin Hamilton's homer.

Hamilton, who plays for Amarillo, was the only substitute available to the Texas Leaguers, and collected a double to go with his home run in two trips to the placte.

All the losers' runs came off Steve Barr.

Fritz Peterson picked up the win, giving up only one hit in the four innings he worked.

The Rangers collected aa total of 18 hits, and 10 of the Rangers had RBIs.

Coaches back OU suit

KANSAS CITY (AP) — In a unanimous show of solidarity, head football coaches of the Big Eight Conference declared their support Monday of Oklahoma in its suit against the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

They did so with an air of resignation.

Oklahoma went to court last week and got a temporary injunction against an NCAA rule which went into effect Aug. 1 limiting the size of coaching staffs to eight fulltime and two parttime assistants. The new rule, which will affect an estimated 400 assistants in Division I schools natonwide, was legislated by the entire body of the NCAA as a cost-cutting measure.

A HEARING on the suit is scheduled next week in Oklahoma City.

"If they had done something like this when I was a young assistant just getting started I probably wouldn't be speaking to you now as the head coach at the University of Nebraska," said Tom Osborne at the annual Big Eight football kickoff luncheon.

"I wholeheartedly support Oklahoma's action."

Bud Moore of Kansas, voted the Big Eight Coach of the Year in 1975, recalled his first coaching job at Kentucky in 1962.

"I WAS the 10th man on a 10-man staff," he said. "If that legislation had been enacted at that time I probably would not be a head coach today."

Nobody could remember if the NCAA had ever lost a suit.

"I certainly hope they get some positive results," said Kansas State boss Ellis Rainsberger. "But the NCAA doesn't lose many lawsuits. None, in fact. And what if Oklahoma does win? The NCAA would probably just say, 'Okay, I guess you don't want to be a member of our voluntary organzation anymore.' And where would that leave Oklahoma? They would have no recourse."

"WE COULD be legislated to death," said Osborne, who has had to trim his staff by five. "We'll have five fewer people on the road recruiting than last year. A universal problem the Big Eight has is low population density. We have to hustle to compete with places like Texas and California for the good athletes. The rule, if it's allowed to stand, will hurt us and help schools like USC."

"I wish Oklahoma all the luck in the world," said Bill Mallory of Colorado. "It's a shame we have to be legislated against like this and so limited. If a school can afford to have 10 or 12 assistants, it should be allowed to do so."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer would not speculate as to the suit's outcome. But the four assistants which would be forced off his staff by the rule will not be out of a job, he said.

"THOSE PEOPLE came to us in good faith and signed contracts with the University of Oklahoma,'" he said. "I'm not going to tell a man and his family that he's out of a job even though he's been doing a good job. They'll all have jobs."

Michael Spinks won't rush to pro ring career

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Twenty-year-old Michael Spinks, one-half of the world's first Olympic gold medal brother duo in boxing, has arrived home to mull over his future, possibly as a pro.

But the man who has exerted a major influence in shaping his destiny said Monday he's advised Michael to take his time before making a decision.

"When he came off the plane he was talking. He told me, 'What I want to do is go back to school,'" said John Holus, president of the Ozark Amateur Athletic Union.

"ALL I hope is that life can be made a little easier for him and his family," Holaus said. "It (professionalism) is one step out of the ghetto. Maybe God is in his destiny, but the almighty dollar means a lot too."

A smiling Spinks, wearing a sombrero given to him by his hometown coach, Ken Loehr, arrived at Lambert Airport with his mother, Kay, at his side.

"Mostly what I feel is gratefulness," he told a small but boisterous crowd. "Right now, though, what I need is sleep. I slept some Saturday night after the fight, but since the closing ceremony I haven't been able to sleep at all."

THE RISE of Michael to boxing's amateur pinnacle at Montreal came swiftly after he and his brother, Olympic lightheavyweight champion Leon, fought in a Russian-United States meet here in January, 1975.

A high school dropout, Michael toured the Soviet Union last winter with an American team and gained valuable international experience.

In the Olympic finals he won by TKO over Russia's Rufat Riskiev in the third round, and the feat was probably no accident.

"I knew what he was going to do," recalled Spinks, who had lost to Riskiev earlier. "I was catching little flurries of punches every once in a while, but I threw the ones that counted."

ON MONDAY, after being presented the key to the city, Michael retired to a quiet homecoming and awaited the expected arrival of Leo, 23, from Camp Lejeune, N.C., where he had returned to duty as a Marine corporal.

Chief rally changes Wiggin talk

KANSAS CITY (EP) — Paul Wiggin had to do a quick rewrite of his dressing room oratory.

"I was trying to decide in the middle of the fourth quarter what my speech was going to be," he smiled amid the excitement of the Kansas City Chiefs' locker room Monday night.

"I was going to say we were a young team, but played a lot of people...but it's a strange game."

IT WAS indeed. Wiggin's Chiefs, outplayed most of the evening by the Houston Oilers, sent their National Football League exhibition game into overtime with 92 seconds remaining in regulation and finally won 9-3 when Emmitt Thomas grabbed a blocked field goal attempt and dashed 68 yards to victory.

The Oilers, who had two touchdown passes nullified by penalties, mounted a 3-0 advantage on Skip Butler's 31-yard second quarter field goal and nursed it until Jan Stenerud's 22-yarder sent the game, which had been exceedingly dull to that point, into sudden death.

THEN THE Chiefs won without their offensive unit taking the field again. The Oilers seemed poised at victory at 9:20 of the overtime period when Butler lined up for what could have been the winning shot from the 33-yard line.

A pair of rookie lineman, Willie Lee and Keith Simons, each got a hand on the ball and Thomas did the rest.

"Really, we did not play well," Wiggin admitted. "We made a lot of mistakes. But they were young types of mistakes, things like not staying with teams they were on and not substituting right.

"But we sell two things on this team: Enthusiasm and refusal to die. If we stay with those, we'll win some football games."

THE OILERS and Chiefs both substituted rookies and reserves throughout the night although Houston Coach Bum Phillips rushed his aces onto the field for the overtime period and Wiggin stayed with his fledglings.

"We were trying to win," said Phillips. "We were trying to win throughout the game, even though we took a look at a lot of people.

"We made too many penalties to move the ball consistently. You can't have offensive success when you have a lot of penalties."

"Over-all," Wiggin concluded, "we accomplished two things: We won, and we got a chance to judge a lot of people."

Jenner may quit track

CANTON, Conn. (AP) — Bruce Jenner, the record breaking Olympic decathlon gold medalist, says he's had enough of track and field and may want out.

"I really don't know (about track). We've talked about professional track, but I think I've had enough running. I may want to get out, I just don't know," Jenner said Monday.

WEARING BLUE jeans, a form fitted white shirt and open-toed sandals, Jenner arrived here about 3 p.m. with his wife Crystie and his parents, William and Esther, after a 300-mile drive from Montreal.

Jenner and his family were greeted by hundreds of children and a handful of reporters and photographers who waited for their arrival at his parents apartment complex.

"After 12 years of training, you can get one of these, guys," said Jenner, holding his gold medal up for youths gathered at his parents' home to see.

AS THE world's greatest athlete signed autographs he talked with interviewers.

"I've signed with three agencies and I've just sold a book on the Olympics written with Phil Finch, Thank God everything turned out all right. It wouldn't have been much of a book of I had lost," Jenner said.

Jenner, a 26-year-old Newtown, Conn., native who set a state pole vault record in 1968 while a senior at Newtown High School, scored a record number of points in the two-day decathlon last week. He won five of the ten events in the contest of speed, strength and stamina.

JENNER LEFT Monday night for New York where he was scheduled to have a news conference to explain what direction his life would take.

He told reporters Monday that after New York he and his wife plan a Hawaiian vacation before returning to their home in San Jose, Calif.

After that Jenner wasn't sure what he would do.

"I'm sort looking for a job. We've talked to a few people in the past few days, but we're going to take our time and sit back and take a look at what areas I'd be comfortable in. Right now it's just too early to tell," Jenner said.

Bob Watson NL top player

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Houston Astros' Bob Watson won the National League's Player of the Week award today for his seven-day performance which included a .481 batting average, three home runs and eight runs batted in.

Watson's slugging helped the Astros, third in the Western Division, move over the .500 mark.

Others nominated for the weekly baseball award were Houston pitcher Larry Dierker and the Astros' Jose Cruz, pitcher Dale Murray of Montreal, first baseman-outfielder Pete LaCock of Chicago, Chicago pitcher Ray Burris and Los Angeles pitcher Don Sutton.

COM breaks relay record

HOUSTON—The City of Midland Swim Team's 11-12 girls relay team won the 400 meter freestyle relay with the fastest time in the nation here over the weekend in the annual summer TAGS meet.

Heather Dunbar, Gretchen Koch, Carrie Mayes and Isabell Torres recorded a time of four minutes and 25.3 seconds. Needless to say, it was also a state record.

Miss Torres also won the 100 freestyle with a state record 1:04.27 while Carlton Fancher, Jr. had a national qualifying time in the 100 backstroke with a 1:03.60. Miss Torres also won the 200 freestyle and 100 backstroke. Wendy Williams had a second in the 1500 freestyle while Miss Torres had seconds in the 50 free and 200 individual medley. Curt Buthman won a third in the 100 back and Don Dunbar was third in the 200 breaststroke.

COM placed eighth in the meet.

Thomas to be ready for Cowboy-Ram tilt

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams might remember seeing Dallas' second-string running back duo somewhere when they line up for the Cowboy-Ram clash in the Coliseum Saturday.

Duane Thomas is back at full speed and will team up in the backfield with Ron Johnson Saturday as the "second set" of backs.

The recently-acquired duo will play behind starters Robert Newhouse and Doug Dennison, Cowboy coaches said.

THOMAS, PICKED up after a brief hitch with the World Football League, had been hampered by a strained hamstring since he reported to the Cowboy camp July 5. Prior to that, Thomas played with Dallas and Washington.

Johnson is a former New York Giant in his first year with Dallas.

Center John Fitzgerald, who bruised a knee in Dallas' 17-14 loss to Oakland Saturday, is also expected to be available against the Rams.

Free safety Cliff Harris tore a knee ligament and was back in Dallas, where doctors said he should be ready for duty in six weeks.

SOME COWBOYS were being limited in their work because of minor injuries.

Dallas released three players Monday and said more might be waived Tuesday. Waivers were asked Monday on quarterback Reggie Jackson, defensive back Tommy Moriarty and defensive lineman Joe Harvey.

Injuries slight but grim at Games

MONTREAL (AP) — Among the coveted gold, silver and bronze of the Olympics was a smattering of red, blue and purple.

Strains, sprains, cuts and bruises are normal fare in athletic competitions, but medical officials say the injury toll of the 1976 Games was minimal.

Dr. Reginald Owen, chairman of the International Association of Olympic Medical Officers, said in an interview that no injuries of "a permanent nature" were incurred by the athletes.

THE BRITISH doctor said that the top physical condition of world class athletes almost precludes the possibility of serious injury.

"Besides, there is not much out there on the competition field that you can really hurt yourself with."

To the layman, however, some of the reported injuries make fairly grim reading. It is also the stuff of which tales of superhuman endurance in the face of excruciating pain are made.

Early in the two-week Games, Japanese gymnast Shun Fujimoto set a heroic example when, despite a broken kneebone suffered while landing a triple somersault, he went on to obtain an almost perfect score on the rings, enabling his team to beat out the Soviets for a gold medal.4

FUJIMOTO HOBBLED to the podium to receive the medal with the rest of his team.

Afterwards he shyly told reporters: "I just forgot about the pain and competed.

"Yes, when I came off the rings the pain shot through me like a knife. It brought tears to my eyes but I managed to stand still and move my weight to my left foot."

Injuries also put Cuba's leading male gymnast in a leg cast. Roberto Leon Richards fractured a shin bone when he crash-landed after misjudging a double somersault off the pommel horse.

The 1976 Games saw Russia's Olga Korbut deposed as the popular queen of women's gymnastics to be replaced by 14- year-old Romanian Nadia Comaneci.

IF AN ankle injury incurred during a vault on the third day of competition affected Miss Korbut's performance, the 21- year-old star refused the chance to say "uncle."

When reporters asked her if she was hurt she replied "Nyet."

"I feel very good," said Miss Korbut flashing a smile, her taped ankle swathed in an icepack.

"But every athlete always has something that hurts. If you don't, that's when you begin to worry."

PRINCESS ANNE, the only royal competitor at the Games, made the injury list when her temperamental mher for a tumble in the cross-country portion of the equestrian events. She sustained a mild concussion and bruised right arm and cheek.

"A bit stiff," was how she described her condition next day.

Boxers from all nations took a beating, or rather a butting at these Games. The senior medical official at the boxing tournament, Dr. Lewis Blonstein, complained there were too many cuts caused by boxers butting with the head.

It was a butt from Hungary's Joszef Nagy that gave Canadian boxer Chris Clarke a deep, bout-stopping gash over the left eyebrow, taking away his chances for a bronze medal.

TOP PRIZE for facial injuries didn't go to a boxer, but to Canadian field hockey player Reg Plummer. He suffered a broken nose and two badly swollen eyes when he was struck by a stick during Canada's 3-1 victory against Argentina.

In another of the martial arts, Canadian middleweight judo champion Rainer Fischer dislocated his elbow in the opening minute of a six-minute elimination bout. His team manager said Fischer won't be able to fight again for another four months.

In Greco-Roman wrestling an apparent shoulder separation meant disqualification for Bulgaria's two-time gold medalist Peter Kirov, and spectators were horrified when they saw France's Dominique Bidard dislocate his elbow while attempting to lift 320 pounds.

A MEMBER of the Swedish men's fencing team wound up having his gold medal delivered to him in hospital. Goran Flodstrom was taken away on a stretcher with the score tied 4-4 when he suffered a severe blow to the stomach from the sword of West Germany's Jurgen Hehn. Flodstrom was replaced and Sweden went on to win its first-ever gold medal in epee team fencing.

But not all of the injuries at the 1976 Games had that glow of Olympic grandeur to them. Some were downright human in scale.

There was the Cuban sprinter who needed seven stitches after he slashed his ankle on a broken bottle during a cushion fight with a teammate, and the Canadian walking competitor who fractured a rib when he slipped in his bathtub at the Olympic Village.

AND IT was a non-superhuman case of diarrhea which cost Canada its only hope for an Olympic medal in Greco-Roman wrestling.

To the puzzlement of fans and officials, Mitch Kawasaki of Ontario disappeared at the end of the second of the threebout match.

Jacket night brings fireworks

By The Associated Press

New York Mets Manager Joe Frazier went into an equipment-throwing tantrum Monday night in the ninth inning of his team's 5-4 loss to the Montreal Expos.

Jose Morales had pinch-hit a three-run homer in the top of the inning to bring the Expos back from a 4-2 deficit, but Frazier's wrath had been incited before Morales came to bat.

Just before Morales' blast, plate umpire Nick Colosi had called a ball on a close twostrike pitch by Skip Lockwood to Jerry White. The Mets argued the decision. White singled on the next pitch to set up Morales.

WHEN COLOSI called a strike on a close pitch to New York's Bruce Boisclair in the bottom of the inning, Frazier erupted. He screamed at Colosi from the dugout and was ejected from the game. Then the equipment started flying: a shin guards, six gloves, a baseball hats and a towel rained out of the Mets dugout as a "Jacket Night" crowd of over 50,000 looked on.

But Morales, the National League's leading pinch-hitter had done the damage with his 14th pinch-hit in 38 attempts and his third pinch-hit home run.

In other NL baseball action Monday, Chicago trimmed Philadelphia 4-2, San Diego swept Atlanta 7-3 and 7-0 in a twi-night doubleheader, and St. Louis blanked Pittsburgh 4-0 in the nationally televised game.

IN THE American League, Boston topped Cleveland 3-1, Milwaukee blasted Baltimore 7-1, New York edged Detroit 1-0, and Minnesota bested Oakland 3-0.

New York seemingly had won the game with two runs in the eighth inning against reliever Dale Murray. But Tim Foli and White singled to start the fireworks Frazier finished.

John Grubb belted two homers and drove in four to help Rick Sawyer win his first major league start for San Diego in the nightcap after a four-run ninth inning rally won the opener for Padres against Atlanta.

Pete Falcone shut out Pittsburgh on four hits and contributed a runscoring single in a three-run seventh inning to lift St. Louis over Pittsburgh.

CARL YASTRZEMSKI drove in two runs to back a five-hitter by Rick Wise and give the Red Sox their fourth victory in a row.

Von Joshua cracked run-scoring singles to cap a two-run burst in the sixth inning and and four-run seventh, carrying the Brewers past the Orioles.

New York's Doyle Alexander flirted with a no-hitter until two were out in the seventh inning, when Rusty Staub hit a single for one of Detroit's two hits in the Yankee triumph. The New York run tallied when an infield hit by Mickey Rivers in the third inning scored Sandy Alomar.

Butch Wynegar's two-run double provided all the support Minnesota's Steve Luebber needed for his seven-hit victory over Oakland as the Twins completed a five-game sweep of the A's.

IN LATE NL games on the West Coast, Cincinnati topped San Francisco 5-1 and Los Angeles bested Houston 5-4 in 11 innings.

Zimmer gets renewal through next season

CLEVELAND (AP) — "I'm Don Zimmer and I'm going to do what I feel has to be done to win ball games," says the manager of the Boston Red Sox for the past two weeks. That attitude has helped win him a ticket for a full season.

Red Sox General Manager Dick O'Connell called Zimmer Monday from Boston and offered to extend his contract through all of next year.

"I said, 'Wonderful,'" said Zimmer. "And he told me to go and have fun. The conversation didn't last three minutes ...

"I said when I was a coach that I had the best job in baseball with the Boston Red Sox. Now I guess I have the ultimate job."

ZIMMER, PROMOTED to interim manager July 19 when Darrell Johnson was fired, has brought some new life to the Red Sox. But he said the hardest job has been to jolt his players out of negative thinking.

"I had to get them out of the losing rut," he said. "We have won some games, but not as many as I figured."

Veteran slugger Carl Yastrzemski endorsed the front office decision to keep Zimmer for 1977, and said, "He's a daring, gambling son of a gun. I like his style of play.

"He displayed that in Sunday's game. I'm glad they didn't bring in anyone from outside the organization. Zimmer has been here for three years. He knows what the problems are."

NO MATTER where Boston finishes this season, the Red Sox who come back next year will know what fundamentals and concentration mean, especially in spring training.

"There'll be no going through the motions," Zimmer said. "If you don't work hard on a phase of the game like double plays or pickoffs, why work at all?"

Since taking over, Zimmer has compiled a 7-9 record, and taking three out of four from the division leadng New York Yankees over the weekend helped clinch the job for him.

In Sunday's game, Boston was behind New York by two runs in the ninth inning with put men on first and second. Zimmer ordered the hit-and-run. Bob Montgomery hit to the third baseman, but the only play he had was to first base — and that left two runners in scoring position. Boston wound up the inning, 5-4.

"IF IT didn't work, I'd be a bum, I suppose," said the manager. "But the next time I'd be a genius."

He added, "My way; I'm going to do things may way."

Three hours after Zimmer got tha telephone call Monday, he went out with the Red Sox and they beat the Cleveland Indians 3-1.

Midland Colts eliminated from tourney

CORPUS CHRISTI—Euless' Miller Mufflers eliminated the Midland Colts from the state National Baseball Congress tournament here Sunday, 3-1, behind the pitching of Don Welchel.

Welchel shut out the Colts until the ninth inning when Midland pushed across a run on singles by Luis Perez, Lupe Perez, and Jesse Benavides.

Euless got a run in the fourth and added two insurance tallies in the fifth.

Frank Rubia was the losing pitcher for the Colts. He was relieved by Randy Blanscett in the fifth.

MC signs two women players

A state champion from Abilene and a highly-ranked junior player from Perth, Western Australia, are the latest women recruits of Midland College tennis coach Neill McClung.

Signing with the national junior college champs were Abilene's Jana Hanks, the state interscholastic titlist the past two springs, and Jo Ann Hall, ranked second in Girls' 18 Singles and sixth in women's singles in Western Australia.

Hanks, who went through the 1976 state tournament without losing a set, is currently ranked fifth in the state in Girls' 18 Singles.

"We are really delighted to have Jana sign with us," McClung said. "She was one of the most sought-after players in the Southwest, receiving scholarship offers from major Texas schools as well as such out-of-state schools as the University of Michigan and the University of Nevada-Las Vegas."

McClung said the signings completed MC's recruiting for the year.

"We think we have signed outstanding players to replace those we lost this year and both our men's and women's teams should be as competitive as they were during the past season."

MC lost its entire women's team from last spring.

Other recruits include Susie Ingram, Abilene, UIL doubles champion and winner of three titles at the Midland Highway 80 tournament; Karen Schuchard, Abilene, ranked fifth in the state; Blanca Barriga, El Paso, ranked in the top ten in Texas singles; and Ann Layman, Perth, ranked fourth in Western Australia for Girls' 18 and Under singles.

The men's team which returns All-Americans Denis McKeown and Derek Edmonds, has signed Reg and Tony Luttrell, twins from Perth and ranked in the top ten among Western Australian juniors and Ron Cetrone of Houston.

Colombia provides major part of United States cocaine flood

By EDWARD SCHUMACHER
The Washington Post-Outlook

CHEMESQUEMENA, Colombia — In the morning, after the sun has finally risen above the surrounding mountains to melt the wet night chill, the mosquitoes come out.

They swarm everywhere, attacking bare flesh in the shade of the mud houses or in the sun of the dirt road that has wound, sometimes tenuously, up into this narrow mountain valley.

Ydang, inured to the mosquitoes, stops to buy a pound of sugar from a "civilizado," one of the white or mestizo Colombians who populate the village. He wears only one sandal but neither flinches nor slows as he pads out the far side of the village, fords a shallow river and strikes upward on the rocky path that for centuries has been beaten by Indians like him.

Ydang is happy because, this time, a buyer follows. The buyer has come to inspect his small plot of coca trees, for it is on mountains such as these, from Indians such as Ydang, that the illegal cocaine stream to the United States begins.

Colombia is the vital center of that stream, refining and smuggling about 70 per cent of the cocaine sold in the United States.

Most of the coca leaves processed here come from the Andean mountains in Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador. The immense profits, however, are also nurturing new cultivation in Colombia — and new problems for Colombian police.

Here in the Sierra Nevadas on the Caribbean coast and even more in the Andes in the southern part of the country, the scramble among growers and buyers is wide open.

It is that openness which allows the curious outsider, posing as a buyer, to penetrate this Andean Indian subculture.

After climbing three hours, through lush green mountain cuts and across bare grassy slopes, Ydang and the trudging buyer reach the Indian's isolated mud and thatch hut.

Broad-leaved plantain trees, scraggly coffee bushes and spindly yucca plants grow on the small plateau and immediate slopes surrounding the hut. These produce the basic food and cash crops for 30-year-old Ydang, his wife and three children.

An unexpected visitor, a white Colombian, has already arrived with his burro and is bargaining with Ydang's grandmother, an aged Medusa with hair that stands on end as if electrified. The visitor hikes in the mountains selling the crude, strong rum made from sugar cane in the village below.

He charges amost $1.50 a bottle, a lot of money here, but Ydang and his grandmother drink rum daily. They buy six bottles.

"It's not a bad business," the white man says as he packs his burro and departs, the beast trailing behind him.

Three months before, another white man had also come with a burro. He came to buy the leaves from the small stand of 15 coca trees, each about seven feet high, bordering on Ydang's dirt yard.

The white man will return in April, when the budding leaves are large enough for the trees again to be picked.

"I sell the leaves to anyone who wants to buy them," Ydang defiantly says to the prospective buyer.

"How much?"

"Twenty pesos for a hatful," the Indian says.

That is about 60 cents a pound, the amount held by the deep, traditional hat worn by the Arhuacos, Ydang's tribe.

Ydang's trees can produce about 50 pounds of leaves which, when processed in clandestine laboratories, will make about three ounces of near-pure cocaine. On the streets of North American cities, where the "coke" has been cut down to about 25 per cent pure, Ydang's leaves will reap about $34,000. Ydang will be paid $30.

For some reason of nature, the coca trees grow only in the Andes Mountains of South America, on the east and west slopes at altitudes between 2,000 and 8,000 feet, about the same altitudes as coffee.

The Indians in the Andes have long revered the coca leaves. At about the same rate that a heavy smokers , the men here in the Sierras chew wads of dried coca leaves mixed with finely powered seashells. The powder is carried in a dried gourd and licked off a stick.

The preparation of the leaves and the powder is traditionally a religious rite, the coca, or "hayo," trees being an important part of their nature worship. Chewing the leaves is reputed to impart sexual prowess and give a man the energy to walk for several days without feeling hungry, a feat often required of the mountain indians.

The dried leaves have a smoky, slightly bitter taste, but the seashell powder is sweet. The lime in the shells helps chemically to extract the drug from the leaves. The combination anaesthetizes the mouht mildly, almost like the deadeners used by dentists. At least for this novice, the mixture sets the head and stomach spinning.

Many traditional Indians still refuse to sell their leaves to smugglers. It is mainly Indians that live on the fringe of the "civilizados," Indians like Ydang, often corrupted by rum or feeling emasculated by the continuing invasion of what was once their land, who have turned to coca as an illegal cash crop.

Giving two to four harvests a year, it is one of the most prolific crops in Latin America.

"What we fear," Capt. Teodoro Campo, head of the elite narcotics bureau in the national police, said recently, "is that the cultivation will continue to expand, becoming more sophisticated and using better land, and then become basic to the economy of the Indians."

To make cocaine, the leaves are soaked in kerosene, potassium carbonate and water until a sediment similar to moist flour forms. This is usually done in large oil drums by the growers or smugglers near where the leaves are picked.

The paste is carried to clandestine laboratories, where it is chemically processed into a liquid or the concentrated white powder normally shipped and sold in the United States.

The laboratories are located mainly on the fringes of the large cities. They vary from simple amateur affairs to sophisticated operations employing professional chemists.

A police raid outside Cali, a pleasant city 200 miles west of Bogota, uncovered equipment which produced 100 pounds of cocaine in one batch and pressed it into fine sheets to be smuggled between pages in a book. The bust also netted a chemistry professor from a nearby university and a captain of the Cali fire department.

Then comes the smuggling. New York police, remembering the French connection in the heroin traffic, call Columbia "the Marseilles of cocaine."

The traffic is dominated by Colombians in disciplined syndicates. Some groups operate as underworld multinational corporations, vertically integrated from the clandestine laboratory in Colombia to the stateside distributors.

Almost all the syndicates are controlled by a single family, and while their sophistication falls short of the American mafia, they have layers of authority and codes of loyalty that protect their heads.

But the syndicates by no means hold a monopoly. Fortune-seeking small operators and adventurous youths, many of them Americans seeking to stake their vacations, crowd the traffic.

Wildcat rings of up to five members, usually smalltime operators in search of big money, form and fade and re-form. These rings may be Colombian, American, European or a mix. Their resources vary, but what most of their members have in common is criminal records.

The smuggling methods are ingenious. Frogmen haul in drops made by crewmen of ships as they pull into American harbors; private planes land in secret airfields in Florida; imported sugar in odd-lot bags is diluted; aerosol deodorant cans have false walls.

The bulk going northward is carried by one of the oldest methods, the syndicate runner. Appropriately called a "mula" (mule), he is usually a poor Colombian who has been handed a forged passport and often a student visa.

He runs the cocaine and the risk to earn $500 to $1,000 per kilo (2.2 pounds), a few sets of clothes and an expense-paid trip to a big city in the United States, usually New York, Miami or Los Angeles.

The mule carries from one to 20 kilos of cocaine in anything from his coat pockets to clothes soaked in a cocaine solution. One of the more bizarre methods is to fill a prophylactic with cocaine powder and swallow it. After passing through U.S. customs, the carrier vomits to retrieve the pouch.

Affidavits link Nixon to assassination plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Thomas N. Downing, D-Va., has released affidavits from two men who claim that in 1960 Richard M. Nixon, then vice president, approved a rightwing Cuban exile's plan for "elimination" of left-wing Cuban exiles after the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Downing said Monday he could not verify or vouch for the statements, which came from the son of a late anti-Castro leader and an American author who claims to have been a CIA contract employe.

But Downing said the statements raise the possibility that right-wing Cubans assassinated President John F. Kennedy in 1963 because they felt betrayed when Kennedy withheld U.S. air support during the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion in April 1961.

Downing said he does not personally believe Nixon agreed to any assassination of leftist exiles in the United States. "I don't think that was intended by Mr. Nixon. I believe he only intended to turn them over" to right-wing leader Mario Kohly, the congressman said.

An attempt to reach Nixon for comment at his home in San Clemente, Calif., was unsuccessful.

But in Miami, attorney Ellis Rubin, who said he represents the Bay of Pigs Brigade and Watergate and ex-CIA figure E. Howard Hunt, said that, "This allegation is absolutely false."

Downing has been campaigning for nearly two years for creation of a House committee to investigate the Kennedy assassination.

Kennedy assumed full responsibility for the U.S. role behind the Bay of Pigs invasion, but planning for the operation began during the Eisenhower administration when Nixon was vice president.

The two sworn statements were made recently by Mario Kohly Jr. and Robert Morrow, author of a fictional account of the Bay of Pigs.

Downing's office said Morrow brought both statements on his own to the congressman.

Morrow said Kohly told him a week after meeting with Nixon in October 1960 "that an agreement had been reached between he (Kohly) and the vice president for the elimination of Miro Cardona and all the leftist Cuban Revoluntionary Front leaders in order that Kohly could immediately take over the reins of power in Cuba once a successful invasion by exiles being trained by the CIA had been accomplished."

Morrow quoted Kohly as saying the agreement was made in return for his pledge to support the invasion with underground forces inside Cuba.

Kohly's son said:

"I was told that Vice President Nixon had agreed to the elimination of the leftist-approved Cuban Revolutionary Front leaders at time when the island would be invaded by the exile troops. . ."

Ford names two Texans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford today appointed six members of the Board for International Food and Agricultural Development.

They are James J. O'Connor of Houston, Tex., a food marketing consultant; Anson R. Bertrans, Lubbock, Tex., dean of the College of Agriculture at Texas Tech University; Charles A. Krause of Milwaukee, president of Krause Milling Co.; Orville G. Bentley of Urbana, Ill., dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Illinois; Gerald W. Thomas, Las Cruces, N.M., president of New Mexico State University, and Clifton R. Wharton Jr., East Lansing, Mich., president of Michigan State University.

The board meets periodically to discuss famine prevention and prevention of hunger in the world.

Charges filed in stabbing

Charges were filed Monday against Jerry Olgin Ramirez, 23, of 1207 E. Estes Ave., for attempted murder in connection with a stabbing incident Sunday morning.

Ramirez is accused of stabbing Jose Rubio at Mulberry Lane and Lincoln Street around 8 a.m. Sunday.

Bond for Ramirez was set at $15,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Lenorah man held in shooting

Tomas Gomez Salozar, 39, of Lenorah, was charged Monday for attempted murder in connection with the shooting of Lupe Hinojosa.

Salozar is accused of shooting Hinojosa Monday morning at the 400 block of North Lamesa Road.

Bond for Salozar was set at $15,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Nomination changes lifestyle in Plains, Ga.

By HELEN DEWAR
The Washington Post

PLAINS, Ga. — Across Main Street from Hugh Carter's worm farm office, down the block from Billy Carter's office at the peanut warehouse, a newspaper reporter was interviewing townsfolk who were photographing television cameramen who were filming the event of the day: the dismantling of an old water tower.

Jimmy Carter's hometown is like that these days, an ordinary little Southern town caught in the middle of a national political spectacular, loving every minute of it but fearing its effect on a way of life that is simple and fragile.

The daily run of tourists now easily outnumbers Plains' 683 residents and the out-of-towners eagerly pay inflated prices for everything from bronzed peanuts to Carter T-shirts, scarves and handbags. The post office is getting an electronic canceling machine and there is talk of installing traffic lights in town and extending the grass runway at the airport.

There is now a bus tour of 40 "points of interest" in Plains, including "the places Jimmy lived ... Jimmy's first public service project ... picturesque churches ... (his daughter) Amy's school ... world's largest worm farm ... location of Jimmy's treehouse, "—all for $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children.

"Plains is not on the way to anywhere. If you come here, you gotta want to come to Plains," said Billy Carter, 38, who runs the Carter family peanut business, one of the town's economic mainstays.

"I like Plains the way it is, the way it's always been," said Billy Carter, who confesses to mixed feelings about the impact on his hometown of his brother's political success in becoming the Democratic presidential noimnee. "I doubt it will ever be the same again," he added emphatically.

Jimmy Carter clings to Plains, too, returning there for weekends during his primary election campaigining and now ensconced in his comfortable ranch-style brick and frame home mapping plans for the fall campaign. Meanwhile, Plains' citizens are coping as best they can with the hundreds of reporters, photographers, Secret Service agents and tourists who are disrupting the town's normal slow pace.

It is said that some folks here don't like Carter, but they don't speak up. Jimmy Carter is a community project, a civic crusade.

Plains — looking like a Norman Rockwell creation on an old Saturday Evening Post cover — straddles the Seaboard Coast Line Railway and Georgia State Rt. 280 about 130 miles south of Atlanta.

Surrounded by neatly cultivated, gently rolling fields of corn and peanuts that are studded with stately magnolia, pecan and pine trees, Plains bears the imprint of its founding as a railroad town in the 1890s, when an existing community was uprooted and moved to this site.

The town — about 60 per cent white and 40 per cent black — hasn't changed much since then.

The schools and other public facilities are racially mixed, and blacks joined as freely as whites in celebrating Carter's primary election victories at the old train station that has been recycled into Carter's local campaign headquarters.

But otherwise life remains almost as segregated and socially stratified as it was generations ago, according to black and white residents — many of whom, like the Carters, trace their roots in south Georgia at least 200 years.

Although Americus, 10 miles away, was the scene of violent confrontations during the civil rights struggles of the 1960s, Plains escaped.

When moves were made to desegregate churches in nearby communities, leaders of the Plains Baptist Church became alarmed. At the height of the drive, the pastor at the time and 11 of the 12 deacons met and resolved to bar blacks if they sought to enter. The one absent deacon was the area's state senator, Jimmy Carter, whose fledgling peanut business had already endured a boycott because of his refusal to join the White Citizens' Council.

When the issue came to a vote of the congregation, Carter decided to speak out. "He got up," his mother, Lillian, recalled recently, "and said, 'This is not my house, nor is it your house. This is God's house, and I for one will never, I will never, stand on the steps and try to keep anyone out.'"

One other member of the congregation joined the Carter family in opposing the move to station deacons at the door to stop blacks who, as it turned out, never came. The membership of the church is still all-white, although Carter subsequently brought a black state trooper and a black Secret Service agent with him to Sunday services.

Plains has six churches (three white, three black), two gas stations (Billy Carter's and one owned by the Carters' business rivals, the Williams family), and a row of nine store-fronts that resemble a Hollywood stage setting for Dodge City or Cheyenne.

There is a white-owned grocery and a more recently established black-owned grocery, behind which is tucked a tiny tavern called the Skylight Night Club, patronized by the black community. The equivalent social center for whites is Billy Carter's gas station.

There is on restaurant though an old building is being renovated into one, no motel and no funeral establishment.

Aside from "downtown," Plains is a mix of Victorian houses, neatly kept bungalows, decrepit shacks and new, ranch-style homes attesting to a growing middle class — and the subsidized value of the peanut. Unemployment was never so high in Plains as it was in surrounding Sumter County, where it hit 14.5 per cent in May, 1975, before dropping to about 8 per cent earlier this summer, officials said.

Symbolic of Plains' future, the new water tower on the outskirts of town has become a transmission point for the three television networks, which have installed sophisticated, expensive equipment for videotape feeding directly to New York.

Two die in Fort Worth shooting spree

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A man wearing a black wig in the darkened mansion of millionaire T. Cullen Davis shot two persons to death early today and wounded two others, including Davis' buxom blonde wife, police said. Davis was arrested a short time later.

The gunman "put on a black wig and started shooting all my kids—he went wild," Mrs. Davis, 35, said from an ambulance stretcher.

Officers later surrounded a residence on the city's south side and used bullhorns to demand that Davis surrender. Police said the 42-year-old industrial scion emerged, head bowed, minutes later and was taken into custody for questioning in connection with the 12:30 a.m. attack.

Police identified the dead as Stan Farr, former basketball star at Texas Christian University, and 12-year-old Andrea Davis.

The wounded were Mrs. Davis, shot once in the stomach, and Gus Gavrel, 21, shot in the chest. Both were in critical condition at John Peter Smith Hospital.

Davis is president of Stratoflex, Inc., a subsidiary of Kendavis Industries Inc. International. Stratoflex manufactures oil field equipment fittings.

Police said the Davises were involved in divorce proceedings and had been separated. Cullen Davis was heir to a fortune built by his father, Ken Davis.

A neighbor, retired businessman Clifford Jones, said Mrs. Davis, clad in a skirt and halter top, "ran better than a quarter of a mile," climbed over or through a barbed wire fence and reached his home "semi-hysterical." Jones summoned police and an ambulance after she told him a man was "killing everybody."

The Davis mansion is on a 140-acre estate in a secluded setting of West Fort Worth, scene in the past of gala parties. The elegant enclave is guarded by security forces and watch dogs.

Ambulance driver Daniel Bruner said Mrs. Davis told him she and Farr arrived at the mansion around midnight. She and Farr were confronted by a gunman who tried to force them into the basement, Mrs. Davis was quoted.

Bev Bass, a friend of Mrs. Davis' eldest daughter, Dee, 18, said she and Gavrel were approaching the mansion by car when the assailant fired at them.

He hit Gavrel, she said, and tried to shoot her, giving chase as she fled on foot.

"I've known him for years," recounted Miss Bass as police sought to quiet her, "and then I saw the look on his face as he chased me, trying to shoot me. I've never been so freaked out in my life. Can you imagine someone shooting your boy friend? I ran down the field barefoot."

Farr, a 6-foot-9 native of Texarkana, Tex., was a TCU basketball star in the middle 1960s. He later became owner of a now defunct night spot and more recently managed a country music club named the Rhinestone Cowboy.

Flash flood deaths climb to 82

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — Eight helicopters flew into Big Thompson Canyon today, their crews making a followup visual sweep for flood survivors, as ground teams assembled to renew the search among mud slides and debris for the dead.

The fatality count stood at 82, but authorities feared the toll would climb far higher.

Air rescue operations were halted abruptly early Monday night after officials said they had flown out all known survivors who wished to leave the devastated canyon.

An estimated 135 persons told rescuers they wanted to stay in motels and mountain homes on high ground where they had ample food and water.

But 10 of those, at Park Terrace Motel about six miles up the canyon toward Estes Park, changed their minds after spending their third night after the flood in the wet and cold Rocky Mountains, said Capt. John Englebert, chief of operations for the Larimer County Sheriff's Department. He said they are to be flown out today.

Contrary to predictions by the National Weather Service, skies were blue and bright over the canyon today, and an Air Force pilot at a makeshift helicopter landing pad in a farmer's field said flying conditions were "outstanding."

E. M. Stiger of the U.S. Forest Service said repeated trips over the 30-mile canyon showed no signs of critically injured persons along the Big Thompson River.

The emphasis today for the first time was on recovering the dead.

Cathy Sayler of the sheriff's department said 62 bodies had been brought out of the canyon and 20 others were pinpointed inside but not recovered.

Larimer County Sheriff Robert Watson said the death figure could reach 200.

"Who knows what's buried in all this silt? Some farmer will dig down in his corn patch some day and find a body," the sheriff said.

Flying close to the craggy canyon walls, military helicopter pilots Monday evening ferried to safety all remaining survivors who wanted to leave. The popular Colorado Rockies vacation spot had been turned into a death trap by a torrential downpour Saturday night.

"Some survivors refused to leave their mountain homes," Watson said. "They were in good shape and thought they could do more good where they were."

Besides the 77 confirmed dead, authorities said 260 persons were injured, an estimated 559 were unaccounted for, and the search for the dead was just beginning.

Officials said the 12-foot wall of water unleashed by the flood was so powerful that many of the dead were found with their bodies stripped of clothing. One body was found 15 miles downstream from the canyon mouth.

"All the bodies will never be recovered," said Watson, who earlier had refused to estimate how high the death toll might reach, saying he feared public "panic and hysteria."

President Ford declared the 2,700-square mile county a federal disaster area Monday, making local residents eligible for federal relief assistance.

But Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm said it would take three years and $10 million just to rebuild U.S. 34, the once-scenic route that wound 30 miles down the canyon from Estes Park east to Loveland. The road ran beside the Big Thompson River, and little remained of it.

Monday's evacuation flights brought to 1,000 the number of persons lifted from the canyon since the airlift started early Sunday morning. More flights were planned as a precaution. Helicopter pilots said they were so busy dodging other helicopters in the canyon that they might have overlooked someone.

As the survivors emerged from helicopters at a landing zone here, ground crews scurried in white jackets to meet them. They were taken by bus to an evacuation center at Loveland High School, where the personal tales unfolded.

Nancy Witte, 30, Fort Yukon, Alaska, said the area near the Rocky Mountain National Park looked like "the creation of the world before roads were put in, before bridges were put in, before anything was put in."

Others emerging grimy and mud-soaked reported that communities along the winding stretch of scenic canyon — Drake, Glen Comfort, Cedar Grive, Modway and Glen Haven — were transformed into piles of debris and mud.

The more than 50 bodies that had been recovered were brought to makeshift morgues, where the grim task of identification had barely begun. At least 20 other bodies had been spotted in the canyon but had not been recovered.

Only a few of the dead had been identified by nightfall. They included four members of a national Crusade for Christ retreat at Estes Park. Thirty members of the group had been rescued.

THE PROJECTION BUILDING of the Old Cactus Drive-In at Odessa burns in what was supposed to be a fire practice for the Odessa Fire Department. The fire department was reprimanded by the Environmental Protection Agency for allowing the building to burn completely. Odessa Fire Chief Jack Childress said the fire department wanted to test some new chemicals after the intensity of the fire had lessened.

Mystery deaths up; experts seek cause

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) -A mysterious disease has taken the lives of 19 persons who attended an American Legion convention last month and hospitalized 52 others, a state official said today.

State Health Secretary Leonard Bachman told a news conference that doctors and researchers still haven't identified the disease, which has symptoms of fever, headaches, chest pains and lung congestion.

"I think it is most likely a virus, but virus pneumonia is the closest I'd call it now," Bachman said.

But Dr. Jay Satz, head of the state health department's immunology division, said a bacteria could have caused the illness.

Other authorities have suggested swine flu as the possible cause, and investigators from the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta were here trying to isolate the cause of the deaths.

Bachman refused to release the names of the three latest victims.

"It may take some time to find all the victims," Bachman said earlier. "I don't think we've gotten all the deaths yet."

The ages of the 16 dead identified earlier ranged in age from 39 to 82. At least one death has been recorded as pneumonia. Autopsies have been ordered in many of the deaths.

All of the victims suffered the same symptoms, which included fever of up to 107 degrees.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Bachman.

Blood samples and throat swabbings from the victims were sent to state health laboratories in Philadelphia and flown to the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta for tests.

It will take two to three days to grow cultures from the samples. These cultures could lead to identification of the disease.

Cases of the illness were reported throughout the state. All the persons affected attended the three-day Legion convention in Philadelphia that ended July 24. The first reports of illness came last Monday; the first death last Friday. It was the mounting death toll Monday that alarmed public health officials.

Bachman was asked if it could be swine flu. "That's a possibility," he said. "We're trying to pin it down, but we don't know right now. But there's no reason to panic, everyone should realize that."

More than one million people from throughout the world are gathered in Philadelphia this week for the Roman Catholic International Eucharistic Congress. Congress officials said they had no plan to curtail activities.

The Center for Disease Control, an arm of the U.S. Public Health Service, dispatched a three-man medical investigative team to Pennsylvania. Two other virus experts from the CDC were already in the state.

Dr. Michael Gregg, director of the center's Viral Disease Division, said the symptoms reported by victims are similar to influenza, but it was too early, he said, to say whether it was swine flu.

One recruit died when several hundred soldiers at Fort Dix, N.J., contracted swine flu early this year. The

Wounded evacuated

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An International Red Cross convoy finally got through to the besieged Tal Zaatar Palestinian refugee camp today to evacuate wounded from the Moslem enclave in Christian east Beirut, Moslem and Christian radio stations reported.

The Moslems' Beirut radio reported the first evacuee was brought out just before noon and several more followed soon after.

A Palestinian spokesman said 91 wounded were taken out on stretchers within the first three hours. But a Red Cross spokesman in Geneva said 47 wounded Palestinians were evacuated. Neither figure could be independently confirmed.

The Palestinian spokesman claimed Red Cross workers came under Christian sniper fire just as the rescue mission was getting under way, but Christian spokesmen denied the charge.

They love busing at Klondike school

Sam Pendergrast's OESTE

KLONDIKE—People like James Logan must get a huge laugh out of the hassles going on in Boston and Dallas about the question of school busing.

Logan is superintendent of the 325-student Klondike school system that would have vanished years ago if it hadn't been for the big yellow vehicles that gather the "sweathogs" from one of the larger school districts in the state—604 square miles.

Lamesa Press-Reporter Editor Stephen Henry took time out from destroying bacon and eggs at the neighborhood breakfast in Lamesa's Forrest "Lake" last weekend to tell me about the little school with the big territory, and I detoured through the cotton patches to see the old-fashioned rural school for myself.

(And talk about cotton: I passed through more boll weevil banquet halls than I saw from Mississippi to the Carolinas and Florida on a Dixie trip three years ago.)

Of course, there are two or three pumpjacks scenically situated in the middle of most cotton and grain fields hereabout, which go a long way toward buying blackboards and buses for a school surrounded by cotton wagons instead of residences. But Dawson County claims to be the Number One cotton producing county in Texas, and that white stuff buys lots of blackboards too.

The Klondike system ranges from near Lamesa to Stanton and over into Martin County and serves areas formerly in the Union and Flower Grove Districts, which were "consolidated out" in 1971 and '73 respectively. The building at Flower Grove houses kindergarten through fifth graders, and the Klondike campus serves sixth graders through high schoolers.

They play Class B sports, and a trophy case in the hall is a testimonial to the caliber of the Klondike Cougars.

The longest bus route is about 130 miles a day, and the district saves money on fuel and bus wear by having some of the drivers take school-owned cars home after depositing the scholars and the gas-eating buses at the school.

Is everybody satisfied with a little school in a great big cotton patch?

The school board voted last week to seek a $995,000 bond issue in an election Aug. 24, for an auditorium, cafeteria, and renovation of some classrooms, and my guess is it will be approved easily by the 145 voters who made their marks in the last election and their peers.

Supt. Logan, in his fourth year at Klondike, is, typically, for schoolmen talking money, noncommital.

But the folks who own and work in all those cotton patches have gone out of their way a long time to maintain their neighborhood school—and a pleasant, efficient site it seemed during my brief visit—and a million dollars, more or less, seems little enough for a fine school reflecting local values with bus routes of no more than 130 miles a day...

CARMEN ANN McCOLLUM of Odessa, Miss Texas of 1976, performs on the alto saxophone at a public reception in her honor Monday night in the ballroom of the Inn of the Golden West. She played the medley of Boots Randolph hits that won her top honors in talent at the Miss Texas pageant. Miss McCollum left Odessa this morning to return to Fort Worth, after a whirlwind schedule of appearances in her hometown, to prepare for the Miss America pageant Sept. 8-11 at Atlantic City.

Midland man supports bid by Southwest

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An independent geologist from Midland was one of 10 public witnesses called by Southwest Airlines in support of its application before the Texas Aeronautics Commission to expand its passenger service throughout the state.

Bruce Pearson, a geologist and private pilot, agreed with other Southwest witnesses, testifying that current commercial air fares don't usually attract his business on the trips he makes around the state — and that he often ends up driving to business appointments rather than flying.

Southwest is proposing to service Midland-Odessa, Austin, Corpus Christi, Lubbock and El Paso, in addition to its current routes to Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and Harlingen.

Pearson said he would be especially interested in routes to Houston and Austin from Midland, which he and his family would fly frequently for pleasure trips.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner John White also testified Monday in favor of the application, saying that Southwest's proposed fares to the Rio Grande Valley from Austin would cut his department's travel expenses in half and reduce travel time spent by state employes on trips to South Texas.

Witnesses from Harlingen, South Padre Island and Lubbock also testified Monday in support of the application. Tuesday's public witnesses are scheduled to include State Sen. Rep. John Hoestenback of Odessa.

"We would like very much to tap that lucrative Midland-Odessa and Lubbock market," said John Austin, mayor of South Padre Island.

Terry Wimmer, president of the Texas Tech University Student Association, presented the Texas Aeronautics Commission examner with a petition from Tech students and a resolution from the student senate in support of the Southwest application.

White spoke in support of extending Southwest's flights to Austin. "About 10 per cent of the agriculture income of the state comes from the Valley and we have many department workers there," White said.

"Now it is a three-day trip for me to go to the Valley or them to come to Austin. It takes a day going and coming and another day for the meeting. If Southwest had a flight we could do it in one day and certainly would use it. We'd see to it our employes flew Southwest."

Odessa Mayor Dan Hemphill testified today that his city council had unanimously endorsed the Southwest application.

"We're interested in Southwest stopping at Midland-Odessa today, tomorrow at the latest," he said. "The people have shown by petitions and telephone calls they want Southwest service."

He said the present air service to Midland-Odessa was "not frequent enough and it's overloaded. We have trouble getting reservations...The planes come in from Los Angeles and they're pretty full when they get there."

Hemphill was asked what Odessa would do if Continental Airlines dropped some of the flights they have now through Midland-Odessa. "I don't think that is going to happen," he said.

DEATHS

Services held for Mrs. Sams

Services for Mrs. Perkins D. Sams, 42, of Midland, publisher of newspapers at Buena Vista and Gunnison, Colo., were held at 4 p.m. today in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity here.

Officiating were the Rev. Bob Currie, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, assisted by the Rev. Kenneth Eade of Arlington, Va.

Burial was in Resthaven Memorial Park under direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Sams, 1601 N. D St. in Midland, died Sunday in a one-car mishap northeast of Gunnison, where she also maintained a home.

Memorial services were held Monday in Gunnison.

She was publisher of The Buena Vista Times and The Gunnison Country Times.

Mrs. Sams was born Dec. 15, 1933, in Greenville, S.C., and was married to Perkins D. Sams there in 1951.

Survivors include the husband; two daughters, Elizabeth Foretich of Wheat Ridge, Colo., and Sarah Haskell Sams of Midland; two sons, Perkins Lourcey Sams of Sherman and Roe Smith Sams of Sonora; her mother, Elizabeth Bentley of Maitland, Fla.; her father, James Jones of England; a brother, James Jones of Greenville, S.C.; and a grandson.

Pallbearers were John Alexander of Dallas; William H. Aikman and Joe Stickney, both of Midland; Albert Sklar and Gordon Lambert, both of Lousiana; George Galloway of Chicago; Don Weinacht of Pecos and J. Hiram Moore of Austin.

Honorary pallbearers were C. J. Kelly, A. A. Bradford, Robert L. Wood, Buddy Branum, Hugh Munn, L. R. French Jr. and Robert L. Pendleton, all of Midland; and Robert A. Gandy Sr. and W. M. Lurcey, both of Fort Worth.

The family has requested that memorials be given to the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center.

H.J. Williams services held

Services for H.J. Williams were at 4 p.m. Monday at Ellis Funeral Home chapel with burial at Fairview Cemetery.

Williams died Saturday at a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

Pallbearers will be Sidney Williams of Clyde, Purvis Williams of Farmington, N.M., J.D. Williams of Midland, David Williams of Dublin, Dean Carlisle of Dallas and Dan Williams.

Planners delay request

By DEBBIE PIERCE

The Midland Planning and Zoning Commission deliberated almost 45 minutes Monday on a zone change request before agreeing to recess the matter until its next session Aug. 16.

The request, by Garth Neill of 3301 W. Cuthbert St., was to change the zoning at that location from single-family to local retail.

Neill told the commission that area "is not a good area for a residence." He cited the noise and danger from the increased traffic on Midkiff Road and his hope of receiving more from the property if it were zoned local retail, should he decide to sell it, as reasons for the request.

Wayne Kohout of 3305 W. Cuthbert St. agreed the area is not very good for residences, but said he was against the change because of its effect on nearby residences. He suggested the commission take on a comprehensive plan for the zoning of that area, considering a larger section in the zoning and maintaining a buffer zone between the retail and residential areas.

City planning director Richard Hennessy said there was "no good way to handle this situation," as problems would arise in where to cut off that type of zoning. He said an office district zoning, at that location would have less traffic than a retail zoning, but the city planning department was concerned with the change's effect on the remaining property.

Hennessy also suggested the area could be zoned as a planned district, whereby the structure would maintain its appearance as a residence, signs and lighting could be controlled and parking could be in the rear.

Commissioner George Veloz then suggested a recess for two weeks so the planning staff could study the possibility of zoning this lot and the two lots to the west as a planned district. Neill agreed to the recess, and it was approved unanimously by the commission.

The zoning commission also approved a request by Pierce, Pace and Associates for a zone change from local retail to planned district in the 800 block of Scharbauer Drive for the Midland Housing Authority's $2 million housing project for the elderly and handicapped.

The request was originally for a change to multiple-family zoning but was changed to planned district by the commission because of the project's projected density.

Ground was to be broken at the project site this afternoon.

In other action, the commission:

— Tabled consideration of a preliminary plat of the Gamblin Addition Subdivision at 1100 Midland Drive, as no one was present to represent the request;

— Agreed to recommend to city council approval of a preliminary plat of Office Plaza at A-1 Mobile Homes on U.S. 80 west for construction of an office plaza for professional clientele; and,

— Agreed to recommend to city council approval of a preliminary plat of the Plunk Addition on Garden City Highway for construction of warehouse.

outbreak prompted plans for a nationwide immunization campaign this fall. The program is bogged down on issues of insurance protection for the drug companies producing the vaccine for immunization.

Most of those stricken in Pennsylvania were delegates to the Legion convention, although some wives and children who attended with delegates have also fallen ill.

More than 10,000 legionaires attended the convention. Bachman said the number of dead and sick in the outbreak will not be known until a statewide hospital-by-hospital survey is finished.

All the deaths were in Pennsylvania, with the exception of one Philadelphia man who died in North Carolina during a postconvention trip to Florida.

"In the few households we have contacted, we have found no secondary spread to family members," said Dr. William Parkin, chief of the state Health Department's epidemiology section. "That may be the exception rather than the rule as we get more information.

"I can't say there will be transmissions from American Legionnaires to people they are in contact with. We have not had any cases like that yet."

The convention was headquartered at one of Philadelphia's largest hotels although delegates stayed in at least six different hotels.

Burglars take cash, stereo from house

Burglars boke into the residence of Patricia Traylor, 1624 E. Magnolia, Monday and took a total of $770 worth of merchandise.

Taken in the burglary was a stereo valued at $270, two coin banks containing $50 worth of coins, a wedding ring valued at $150 and a shoe box containing $220.

Entry into the residence was gained by opening a south bedroom window, police said.

Traylor told the police that the burglars were familiar with the residence because they knew where the shoebox containing the money was hidden.

STEREO, RECORDS TAKEN

Burglars also took a stereo, records and tapes valued at $350 from the residence of Wanda Kendrick, 1200 E. Spruce Ave., Monday.

Entry to the residence was gained by forcing a back door on the south side of the residence open, police said.

A south bathroom Window was also found open, and Kendrick told police that the window was closed when she left home earlier. Nothing else was reported missing, police said.

WOMAN INJURED

Lola Mae Blair, 52, of 4405 Storey Ave., was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released after she was injured in an auto accident about 3:15 p.m. Monday at the intersection of Ohio Avenue and Andrews Highway.

Police said Mrs. Blair was injured when a car driven by her husband and a car driven by Boots Johnston, 3309 Shandon Ave., collided.

Blair was headed east on Ohio, and Johnston was going north on Andrews, when the accident occurred. The Blair vehicle and a car driven by Mrs. J. C. McNatt, 2501 Terrace Ave., which was stopped at a red light on Ohio, also collided, police said.

BICYCLIST INJURED

James Richard Parker, 10, of 906 W. Michigan Ave., was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released after the bicycle he was riding and a car driven by Gary Dean Bolding, 2601 N. A. collided Monday afternoon.

Police said Bolding was backing from his driveway when the two vehicles collided.

THREE FIRES REPORTED

A house occupied by Carolyn Lovell, 610 S. Loraine St., was heavily damaged by fire Monday night.

The cause of the fire was a cigarette burning on the couch. Damage was heavy to living room with smoke damage throughout the house, firemen said.

A truck fire at 507 E. Front St. was reported Monday afternoon. Cause of the fire was a short in the electrical wiring. Damage to the truck, which was owned by Harold Long, was minor.

A city trash dumpster at 1306 S. Mineola St. sustained minor damage from a fire Monday morning. Cause of the fire was unknown, the firemen said.

Housing board sets meeting

The Midland Housing Authority will convene in regular session at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the council chamber at city hall to consider a short agenda.

Vice chairman Gene Abbott will present a report on the negotiations with architects to perform inspection services for the authority on its $2 million housing project.

A contract with the Department of Housing and Urban Development for the housing project for the elderly and handicapped was approved by the authority last month. The project will be located at Scharbauer Drive and Pecos Street, with Pierce, Pace and Associates of Midland as architects And developers of the project. Ground was to be broken this afternoon for the housing project.

The housing authority also will consider approval of a contract with Jimmie E. Leath of Midland for the inspection services for its turnkey project. The turnkey project is another name for the housing authority's $2 million housing project at Scharbauer Drive and Pecos Street.

Rain possible for Basin area

Rain may again come to the Permian Basin tonight or Wednesday.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal gives the area a 30 per cent chance of rain tonight and a 20 per cent chance Wednesday.

Otherwise, weather is expected to be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms. The low tonight should be in the upper 60s with a high Wednesday in the low 90s. Winds are predicted to be between 10 and 20 mph from the southeast tonight.

Today's low was 65 degrees and Monday's high was 94 degrees.

Area weather this morning was warm with little wind. Lamesa reported partly cloudy weather but other cities reported clear skies.

Flooding rain blocked a stretch of highway for a time as menacing thunderstorms pounded parts of West and Central Texas today.

At the same time light rain fell in the Texas Panhandle and thundershowers stirred the Gulf of Mexico east of Texas' Coastal Bend, The Associated Press reported.

Accumulated rainfall halted traffic temporarily on Interstate 20 near Merkel, 20 miles west of Abilene in West Central Texas, and a flash flood warning was posted in that area for a time.

During the night a tornado funnel spun overhead about 2 miles east of Merkel. There as no word of any damage.

Some of the heavier storms concentrated in an area embracing points near Abilene, Breckenridge and Rising Star.

Temperatures mounted as high as 99 degrees Monday at such widely separated points as Alice, Cotulla and Waco.

Four named to committee

Four area persons have been appointed to a steering committee to help develop a proposal for a combined alcoholism-drug abuse prevention demonstration project for the Permian Basin area.

The steering committee will work with the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission staff in developing the proposal.

Appointees include R. B. Snell, attorney from Lamesa; Mrs. "Sam" Brannon, director of Third House in Midland; Bob Dickson, executive director of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health-Mental Retardation in Midland; and Roy Bell, attorney from Odessa.

The four were appointed by Cope Routh of Odessa, chairman of the PBRPC alcoholism advisory committee, and Gorman Wiseman of Fort Stockton, chairman of the drug abuse advisory committee.

Midland gets block grant

AUSTIN — U.S. Sen. John Tower announced Monday that the Department of Housing and Urban Development has approved a $576,000 Community Development block grant to the City of Midland.

The funds will be used for code enforcement, clearance and demolition, acquiring property for public use, paving curbs and gutters, park conservation and rehabilitation.

4-H drill team to perform at coliseum

The far-famed Midland County 4-H Club mounted drill team, holder of five state championships, will perform Wednesday night in the American Junior Rodeo Association (AJRA) Rodeo in the Ector County Coliseum at Odessa.

The team won first place in precision drill and second in regular drill in state competition at Amarillo recently.

Kenneth R. Lynch is the drill master.

Convention rules aimed toward peace

By JAMES CARY
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Winds of change have brushed the Republican Party and to some degree will affect the way a presidential nominee is selected at the national convention in Kansas City beginning Aug. 16.

But the rules under which the 2,259 GOP delegates will operate there after the gavel drops still will be considerably different in many respects from those used by the Democrats at their convention in New York City.

Like the Democrats, the Republicans do have rules, or proposed rules changes, that deal with equality of the sexes, representation of minority groups among the delegates selected and open procedures.

But they have not been swept up in arguments over the number of votes required to place a minority position on the platform or rules committee reports before the convention.

Likewise they have no credential fights in sight, just as the Democrats had very few this time, and they have not become involved with attempting to amend state primary laws to outlaw winner-take-all results.

The Democrats were shaken by cataclysmic changes in 1972 that sought, among other things, to impose quotas guaranteeing strong representation of blacks, Indians, Mexican-Americans, the poor, senior citizens, women, the young and other segments of the party.

So disruptive and divisive was this — with everyone insured representation except the party majority — that the rules were altered for 1976 to require "affirmative action" programs down to the lowest party level to work toward full representation of minorities but with no fixed quotas.

The closest the Republicans have come to a parallel requirement is their Rule 32 adopted in 1972. It states in part:

"Participation in a Republican primary, caucus, any meeting or convention...shall in no way be abridged for reasons of sex, race, religion, color, age or national origin.

"The Republican National Committee and the Republican state committees...shall take positive action to achieve the broadest possible participation by everyone in party affairs, including participation by women, young people, minority and heritage groups and senior citizens in the delegate selection process...Each state shall endeavor to have equal representation of men and women...in its delegation to the national convention."

But before even this existing rule can be made applicable to the 1976 convention and the four years beyond certain procedures must be completed by various organizational units of the party.

The units are the rules committee of the Republican National Committee, the so-called Rule 29 Review Committee headed by Rep. William Steiger of Wisconsin, and the Convention Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

All are separate groups, although Kent McGough, Ohio state chairman and RNC rules chairman, under normal procedures also will become chairman of the Convention Rules Committee.

The RNC rules group will meet here Aug. 9 and 10 to recommend changes to the Convention Rules Committee, which in turn will convene Aug. 14, two days before the convention opens, to make its own decisions.

Before the convention's rules committee will be an RNC rules recommendation that will require all delegates to vote for the candidate they were elected to represent and to prohibit delegates from abstaining from voting.

Although delegates now are considered bound normally through at least one or more ballots, there is in actuality no convention requirement at this time that would compel them to vote in accordance with their election mandate. This could be of major importance this time. The delegates are nearly evenly split between President Ford and his challenger, Ronald Reagan.

Harris mistrial pleas rejected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge in the William and Emily Harris trial, accused repeatedly by the defense of prejudice, again has refused to declare a mistrial or remove himself from the case.

Defeated in their efforts to win a mistrial, the Harrises today waited for a possible verdict as a jury entered its fourth day of deliberations.

Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler, attacked by defense attorneys for what they said was misconduct and bias, insisted Monday that testimony about the possible prejudice of a juror did not warrant further action.

"The motion for a mistrial is denied," he said. "The motion to disqualify this court is denied."

Brandler also rejected a defense request to have a neutral judge arbitrate the matter.

"Unless we develop new evidence, with Judge Brandler foreclosing every form of relief ..the matter is closed," said chief defense attorney Leonard Weinglass.

The jury, unaware of the courtroom controversy, deliberated for eight hours Monday on the kidnap, robbery and assault charges against the Harrises.

The charges stem from the Harrises' flight from a Los Angeles sporting goods store where a clerk allegedly caught Harris shoplifting. Patricia Hearst, a codefendant, is to be tried later on the same charges.

Brandler voiced doubt about the honesty of two women who reported irregularities in jury behavior.

The judge said he believed at least one of them had "triggered her imagination or magnified what she heard." He said he suspected she was disgruntled at not being chosen as a juror.

Brandler said he discounted the complaint of Jeannie Barton — related to him by a fellow judge — as no more important than a crank phone call.

Mrs. Barton, who was a prospective juror in the Harris case, came forward last Friday to report possible prejudice of a sitting juror.

She said she tried to get word to counsel through the judge but instead was placated by a bailiff. An attorney's wife, she said she was distressed at apparent bias among jurors being screened for the trial.

But chief prosecutor Sam Mayerson, siding with the judge, denounced Mrs. Barton's testimony as the words of "an hysterical woman."

Moments later, the judge said he doubted the credibiity of Mrs. Barton and another prospective juror, Corinne Hansen, who said they heard a member of the current jury prejudge the Harrises weeks ago.

The two quoted juror No. 6, an insurance company executive, as declaring that the outcome of the Harris trial was "a foregone conclusion."

Death memory lingers

"Etched forever within the life of this intelligent, sensitive and compassionate man is the knowledge that in one terrible moment he took the lives of two innocent people..."
Judge Pearce Young
Superior Court, Santa Monica

By FRANK SURACI
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — M. Norvel Young admits he would give anything, including his life, to relive those few hours prior to a fiery traffic accident in nearby Malibu.

Unable to recreate the past, the 60-year-old former chancellor of Pepperdine University is determined to give back to society some part of that which he took away.

He stood before a luncheon gathering recently and spoke openly of the Sept. 16 tragedy — the result of a problem drinker behind the wheel of a car.

"Two older women were killed and another woman and myself were hospitalized because I was driving under the influence of alcohol," Dr. Young said.

His reactions dulled by the effects of a quart of vodka, Young's car slammed into a vehicle stopped for a red light.

The immediate rupture of a gas tank engulfed both cars in flames, claiming the lives of 80-year-old Christine Dahlquist and 78-year-old Beulah Harrison.

By his own admission, Young was drunk. A blood test showed a blood alcohol reading of .23, more than twice the legal inebriation standard.

His message before the San Pedro Rotary Club was one he has delivered countless times in the last six months.

Punctuated with a string of statistics, the talk reflected an intensive research project he has undertaken at the University of Southern California safety center.

Young cautioned the Rotarians about stress, alcohol and the obvious relationship between the two.

"In my case, I didn't drink at all until I was 50," he said. Beset with health problems, he had an occasional drink to relax.

But gradually, he said, drinking became a convenient way to escape from stress-related problems.

"I never did become addicted to the regular use of alcohol. I didn't keep it in the house. But I was destined to become chemically dependent on it."

In the days leading to the accident, Young was hit with a series of traumas as chancellor of the school's Malibu campus.

"We were facing the coming of President Ford to the campus in three days. The Secret Service was uptight because Ford's life had just been threatened by Sara Jane Moore."

In addition, the university was faced with a financial crisis and a faculty member was killed on campus in a motorcycle accident.

While his wife was consoling survivors of the professor, Young said, "I took a drink."

Young had spent 40 years building a substantial reputation as a church leader and educator.

He emphasized that anyone, particularly those in positions of responsibility, can weaken in the face of stress.

He called it "one of the poisons that is killing us."

He urges the people in his audiences:

"Slow down...take time off work...smell the flowers, for these are the golden days," he said.

"What are you hurrying for anyway? Forest Lawn and the other cemeteries will be there when you need them.

"Exercise...meditate...look up and see the stars. Take time to live because now is the time to enjoy the things that are important to you," Young said.

"I learned this lesson at great cost."

Attention, motorists

Here's something which most certainly should shake all Americans, to a marked degree:

More Americans have died in U.S. highway accidents in the last 75 years than Americans who lost their lives in all the wars in which the United States has engaged.

The Statistical Services branch of the Texas Department of Public Safety says that the war dead figure totals 1,186,654. The highway accident figure is 2,090,351.

The death figure by wars is Revolutionary War, 4,435; War of 1812, 2,260; Mexican War, 13,283; War Between the States, 529,332; Spanish American War, 2,446; World War I, 116,563; World War II, 407,828; Korea, 54,246, and Viet Nam, 56,261.

This isn't a very pretty picture from the highway accident fatality standpoint, is it? It certainly isn't something of which the nation can boast.

Yet the accident figure continues to mount, day by day.

Statistical Services also paints another dismal picture, this one relating to the amazing cost of traffic accidents.

The story is told this way:

"The playing area of a football field measures 300 feet by 160 feet. United States currency measures about 2 5/8 inches by 6 1/8 inches.

"If a football field was completely covered with one dollar bills, then a layer of two dollar bills, then a layer of five dollar bills, then a layer of ten dollar bills, then a layer of twenty dollar bills, then a layer of fifty dollar bills, then a layer of hundred dollar bills, then a layer of five hundred dollar bills, then a layer of one thousand dollar bills — THEN start all over with another layer of one dollar bills, another layer of two dollar bills, another layer of five dollar bills, another layer of ten dollar bills, another layer of twenty dollar bills, another layer of fifty dollar bills, another layer of one hundred dollar bills, another layer of five hundred dollar bills — THEN on top of these seventeen layers of money, place another layer of five hundred dollar bills and four more layers of hundred dollar bills — the money on that football field would still not represent the economic loss suffered from traffic accidents in Texas for the year 1975.

"The $1,440,000,000 estimated loss for this one year would buy 10,000 homes at $45,000 each, 10,000 refrigeretors at $400 each, 10,000 electric ranges at $350 each, 10,000 tv sets at $600 each, 10,000 dishwashers at $350 each, 10,000 central air conditioning units at $1,500 each, and furnish the head of each of the 10,000 households with a bank account of $89,300.'.

This most certainly is one way of relating a shameful situation in a manner clearly understandable by one and all.

And it is something with which every American should be concerned. These are facts and figures which every automobile owner should study carefully. The figures also touch the pocketbooks of all car owners through insurance premiums.

Please think about this the very next time that you get behind the wheel of a car. With your help, both the fatality and cost figures can be reduced materially.

Excelsior silenced

The most influential and independent newspaper in Mexico City, which frequently has criticized government policies, was seized recently by a group of dissidents who took over by force.

The dissidents are believed to have the backing of the government of President Escheverria.

Julio Scherer, the editor, and about 200 members of his editorial staff were ousted from their jobs. The independent editorial policies of the newspaper were changed.

Thus, an independent voice of criticism has been silenced.

Freedom of expression, unfortunately, has suffered a serious setback in Mexico.

ART BUCHWALD

A sheer coincidence; that's what it was

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — One of the big surprises of last week's dramatic political events was the sudden decision by John Connally to come out in support of President Ford. Mr. Connally visited Mr. Ford on Tuesday, the day after Ronald Reagan announced he had chosen Sen. Richard Schweiker as vice presidential candidate.

There were some cynical people in Washington who thought that Connally, who had remained neutral up until that moment, made the hurried trip to Washington after he was eliminated as running-mate on the Reagan ticket.

This, I have been assured by Connally's people, was not the case. Connally has always been "secretly" for President Ford, but he was just waiting for the most opportune time to come out for him publicly. The timing of it was sheer coincidence.

This is what really happened.

On Friday, three days before Reagan dropped his bombshell, Mr. Connally said to his wife, "Honey, I think we ought to fly up to Washington and tell Gerry Ford we support him."

"That's fine, John," his wife said. "But one of the calves is sick and we can't leave him today. Can't we go tomorrow?"

"All right," Connally said. "I don't imagine one day's delay in coming out for Ford will make any difference."

On Saturday Connally said, "Honey, are you packed so we can go to Washington and tell Gerry that we have decided he would make the best candidate for the presidential ticket?"

"My dress hasn't come back from the cleaners," Mrs. Connally said.

"Well, take another dress."

"I will not," Mrs. Connally said. "I selected this dress especially for the moment that you would announce your support for the man who could lead the Republican Party to victory in November."

"Daggonnit," Connally said. "I want to come out for Ford in the worst way and the cleaners are holding up my endorsement."

"We can go tomorrow," Mrs. Connally said.

"There are no reporters at the White House on Sunday," Connally said. "They're all in church."

"Well, then we'll go Monday. What's the big rush? You've been sitting on the fence for so long a couple of days won't matter."

"I guess you're right," Connally said.

Monday morning the Connallys took off from Houston. But when they got to Washington their plane was stacked up over National Airport for two hours.

When they finally landed a reporter told the former Texas governor that Ronald Reagan had just announced that he had selected Richard Schweicker to run with him if he was nominated on the Republican ticket.

Connally was furious. "If it wasn't for that sick calf and your dress," he told his wife, "we could have come out for Ford on Saturday. Now it looks like I'm coming out for Ford just so he'll make me his Vice President."

"Nobody who knows you would dream that, John," Mrs. Connally said soothingly, "leastwise the President. In his heart he knew you were for him all the time."

Connally immediately called the White House and asked to see the President that afternoon.

One of the President's aides told him, "I think you better see him tomorrow. If you saw him today people would think that you were too anxious to get on the Ford bandwagon. By tomorrow they'll know your endorsement of Mr. Ford was sincere."

Well, the rest is history. Connally and the President came out of the White House arm in arm on Tuesday and despite snickering from the White House Press Corps about the timing, President Ford believed everything Connally told him. That's the kind of man Gerry Ford is, and that is why Connally made his decision long ago to support him 1,000 per cent.

WASHINGTON MERRY—GO—ROUND

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Those corporate bagmen who have been delivering bribes to foreign officials may wind up beind the eight ball.

Federal lawmen are quietly investigating the couriers, some of them as high as company vice presidents, who have smuggled payoff money overseas.

Under the law, the couriers were required to report to Customs any amounts over $5,000 that they took in or out of the country. The law, which went into effect in 1972, was intended to catch couriers for world drug rings. But it will now be used to nail the boardroom bagmen as well.

More than 215 firms are suspected of sending tens of millions of dollars overseas to pay off foreign princes, potentates and politicians for contract favors.

Baksheesh, cumshaw and cold cash reportedly have been delivered to Brazil, Colombia, France, Gabon, Iran, Italy, Japan, Malaysia, Netherlands, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, South Korea, Taiwan, Turkey and West Germany.

Some of the nation's most powerful and prestigious corporations have admitted making foreign payments. Among them are Ashland Oil, Burroughs, Exxon, Gulf Oil, Lockheed, McDonnell Douglas, Merck, Northrop, G.D. Searle, Tenneco and United Brands.

In some countries, notably Italy and Japan, the revelations of largescale bribery have shaken the governments. Yet the corporate executives, who paid the bribes, have largely escaped punishment.

The Securities and Exchange Commission forced the firms to disclose the bribery to its stockholders and, thereby, to the public. But because the SEC's main role is to regulate the markets, not to prosecute malfeasance, the boardroom bribers have gone free.

Yet probing by Sen. Frank Church, D.-Idaho, and Rep. Ben Rosenthal, D.-N.Y., has turned up evidence of criminal violations that cry out for prosecution. At stake is the principle that justice in this country should apply equally to the rich and the poor.

Therefore the Justice Dept., Customs Service, SEC and special prosecutor's office are quietly cooperating to bring indictments against offending firms and their corporate couriers.

The Currency and Foreign Transactions Reporting Act, which sets the $5,000 limit, will be used to catch the couriers. Tourists leaving the United States usually aren't checked by Customs. Thus the bagmen have had no difficulty getting money out of the country.

Probably more often, the payoffs have been channeled through the foreign subsidiaries of multinational companies, thus avoiding the physical transportation of the money out of the United States. Yet these transactions can be traced and conspiracy cases possibly can be made.

One fact is evident: Illegal loot was delivered overseas. Federal agents intend to find out who delivered it.

Footnote: The Internal Revenue Service, meanwhile, is investigating the misreporting of foreign bribes as business deductions. And SEC sleuths are still digging out more evidence of corporate bribes.

•

WATCH ON WASTE: Not all government waste is measured in the millions. But the smaller extravagances also add up. Here are a few random examples:

— At the Labor Dept., Undersecretary Michael Moskow moved to a new suite several weeks ago. He had it redecorated to suit his taste. He displaced an assistant secretary, who found new space in the legislative affairs section. An official spokesman assured us this game of musical offices cost the taxpayers only $20,000. But our sources inside the department insist the true cost came closer to $200,000.

— At the Interior Dept., Secretary Thomas Kleppe and his wife are fond of parties. The secretary invited friends, relatives and aides to his offices, for example, for a Bicentennial party. And his wife threw another party for ambassadors' wives in the secretary's dining room. A spokesman admitted the taxpayers picked up the bill for both parties.

— Tom Cresswell, director of the Federal Aviation Administration's aeronautic center, hopped a government plane from Oklahoma City to Washington to attend a retirement party for FAA chief James Dow. This little junket cost the taxpayers about $990. Cresswell told us he had official business in Washington and the crew had to take a "training flight" anyway.

NICK THIMMESCH

How in the world can they attack John Connally now?

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — Pardon me, but if John Connally is picked for the Vice Presidency, how could Democrats raise a stink over bribery charges he was tried on during the Watergate period?

I mean, look at the prestigious Democrats who worked and testified for Connally in the federal courtroom where he was aquitted in one of those milk money cases. Among them are:

Robert Strauss, chairman of the Democratic National Committee; Edward Bennett Williams, treasurer of the Democratic National committee; Barbara Jordan, keynote speaker at the Democratic National Convention; Mrs. Lyndon Baines Johnson; former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara; former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, and James Rowe, longtime adviser to Democratic presidential candidates.

Now that's quite a gang of Democrats who stood up and proclaimed how upstanding a man John Connally is. I indulge in no such advocacy here rather, I undertake an exercise in irony.

Anyway, Ed Williams, a powerhouse in the Democratic Party, pled eloquently and successfully for Connally before a jury of 10 blacks and two whites drawn from a community (D.C.) which voted 79 per cent Democratic in 1972.

Strauss, who has praised Connally to the vast Texas skies and elsewhere since the two were chums in university days, was delighted to testify as a character witness for Connally. After informing the judge about his strong voice, Strauss proclaimed that Connally had a "perfect" reputation in Texas, and among his associates, for honesty and integrity.

Barbara Jordan, whom blacks, women and assorted guilty liberals in the Democratic Party worship as Joan of Arc, represents Houston, where Connally lives. She knew him when he was Governor, when she was in the Texas senate. In his trial here, Ms. Jordan testified: "As far as I know from my association with him, he has a very good reputation for honesty." Congresswoman Jordan's testimony had major impact on the nearly all-black jury.

So did that of Claudia Taylor Johnson, who testified that she was also known "by the nickname of Lady Bird." The widow of the last Democratic President, L.B.J., the man who did the most to help advance black Americans since Lincoln, was quite willing to tell what a good man John Connally is. She knew him, she testified, since "he came to work for Lyndon" in the late Thirties.

Mrs. Johnson stated that she maintained a close relationship with Connally and his family, and that "it is the opinion of the community in the state and the people that we have known together in Washington that he is a man of integrity. Some folks don't like him, but I don't think any of them doubt his integrity."

If that wasn't enough, there was Dean Rusk lavishing so much admiration on John Connally, the patriot, that the judge had to shut him up. Robert S. McNamara testified that Connally "had the highest reputation I know of for integrity." And Rowe, whose Democratic credentials date to the Franklin D. Roosevelt era, stated that Connally's reputation for honesty and integrity is "extremely high and excellent."

Running Mate?

As President Ford shakes loose from the worry of losing the nomination to Ronald Reagan, he might have more time to think about a running mate. Surveys taken by U.S. News and World Report, The Associated Press, and United Press International, all show Connally the big favorite among Republicans.

Connally won't say publicly that he is interested in the Vice Presidency, but he is. What he wants, though, is a commitment from Mr. Ford that he, John Conally, will have a major say-so about how the campaign will be run. Connally is a hard driver who likes to take risks and win, rather than meander and hope, by-guess and by-golly.

He became a Republican because he was convinced that his views were no longer acceptable in the Democratic Party, and that the Republicans were the instrument. He remained privately in support of Mr. ford this year, and broke out with the endorsement only because he felt Schweiker was too far off the ideological base.

In any case, if Connally does wind up on the Ford ticket, Democratic Chairman Strauss will sigh. It was behind the podium at the convention that Strauss told me:

"John Connally and I are good friends, and hopefully will be for the rest of our lives. If he's on the Republican ticket, why he'll do his best to eliminate my candidate, and me, and I'll do the same to beat him. He would expect no less from me, and I of him."

DEAR ABBY

Give nursing home resident occasional scenery change

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A letter in your column about visiting the elderly in nursing homes prompts my first "Dear Abby" letter.

I agree, it's a great service to visit an elderly friend or relative in a nursing home, but consider this: Instead of going there to sit with him while you both look at the same four walls he looks at day in and day out, why not give him a change of scenery?

Take him for a little drive and stop for a bite to eat. Or take him window shopping. Or treat him to a home-cooked meal with the family. Just being away from the institution will relieve his boredom and lift his spirits.

If he isn't able to walk, be aware that they now make lightweight wheelchairs that can be easily folded and tucked into the trunk of the car.

Abby, this is a plea to your readers who visit someone in a nursing home: Please turn those routine duty-visits into special events by treating the patient to an occasional outing. It will do wonders for him. And for you, too. I know. I've been a volunteer in such a home for over 10 years.—BESS

DEAR BESS: What a pity you'll never know how much happiness your suggestion will bring to countless residents of nursing homes throughout the nation. Bless you for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I am so glad I can write to you with this problem because it has bothered me for years and I can't go to anyone else with it.

You see, my parents were never married, which makes me illegitimate, right? I'm not exactly proud of it, but I don't let it bother me too much because there is nothing I can do about it.

I married a very nice man and we have two lovely children. I want so much for them to be legitimate, but if I'M not, then THEY can't be either,

WOMEN'S NEWS

and that is my problem.

What must I do to make my children legitimate? Thank you.—MEMPHIS MOM

DEAR MOM: You did it. You married their father. All children born to a married couple are legitimate, regardless of the legitimacy (or illegitimacy) of their parents.

DEAR ABBY: I am planning my wedding. I want my bridesmaids to wear southern belle-type dresses and enter carrying parasols instead of flowers.

I want them to walk down the aisle with their parasols open, until they reach the back of the church. Then they would turn to face the congregation and close their parasols, keeping them closed for the duration of the service.

My fiance and his mother say this would look stupid. What do you and your readers think?—BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: I think it might look as though you were trying to create a Broadway musical production effect. And for those who are superstitious, it's bad luck to open an umbrella indoors.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Luggage care hints

To keep luggage looking nice, clean it regularly. Give vinyls or uncoated linen, cotton and canvas a cleaning with a damp soapy cloth. Clean smooth leather with saddle soap. After it is thoroughly dry, rub with paste wax or a neutral shoe cream.

Rotate the food

When microwave cooking, rotate the dish when you notice that one part of the food is cooking faster than the rest. Rotate it so the least cooked part will be in the area of the oven previously occupied by the portion that was cooking fastest.

AT WIT'S END

Animals make nice children

By ERMA BOMBECK

In trying to improve the quality of children, a reader in Illinois suggested it would be nice if children were like geese. To support his theory, he noted, "Geese come supplied with their own boat, airplane, sleeping bag, swimsuit, flippers and rain gear. They carry an all-purpose utility knife and fork set, complete with airhorn, feather fixer, fly snatcher, egg turner and grass clipper all mounted on a self-propelled chassis. (I like that.) "Their feet are always clean, have non-skid soles that last a lifetime, and dark sensible clothes that are stain resistant and drip dry." Ah, yes, I too have often looked at animals and thought what nice children they would make. I never see a self-cleaning cat that I don't remember my son with a chocolate mustache that his tongue can't reach. I never see a hamster tidying up his bed by nosing his little chips into a pile that I don't think bitterly of the day my son's aquarium caught fire from pollution. I never see a kangaroo with her young in her pouch that I don't remember our daughter who fell out of the bunk bed and required five stitches.

The grizzly bear who doesn't have to be told to put on his coat when he goes out in the cold. The parakeet who has the sense enough to go to sleep when you cover his cage. The family dog who not only recognizes you in public, but sits next to you.

Even a newborn sea turtle without vision, without experience, will head toward the sea in search of his own drink of water.

The list of animal accomplishments is dazzling. I could go on forever comparing children to them. So why do we settle for bad plumbing, sticky fingers, erratic behavior, and a body that grows out of clothes even before the bill for them arrives?

Have you ever heard a child laugh? It starts from somewhere around the navel and works its way up by a series of hiccups and melodious sounds and finally travels between two spaces in the front teeth and out. It's infectious. It gladdens the heart. It's probably the most wonderful sound you'll ever hear.

There isn't an animal in the world who can do that.

Midland club officer attends national meeting

Mrs. Kathy Peters, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Midland, was among 3,000 delegates attending the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., in Denver, Colo.

Liz Carpenter and Elly Peterson, Democratic and Republican co-chairmen of the ERAmerica, spoke to the delegates on equal rights.

"Women in the World and Women in America" the national federation's theme for 1976-77 and an adopted 10-year program plan of action, stresses the responsibility of each member to herself, to all women, to B&PW and America.

After returning from the convention, Mrs. Peters, trust officer at The First National Bank, said clubs should make an effort to support and publicize banks in their areas which grant first-class status to women, particularly banks which have a record of equal treatment of women clients.

New furniture styled for apartment dwellers

By ADELE FAULKNER
Copley News Service

At last manufacturers of furniture are recognizing the special problems apartment and condominium residents have in selecting furnishings right for smaller living quarters.

In the past, apartment tenants have had to select furniture from among the large-scale items featured by most furniture stores for large homes. The result was pieces that weren't quite right for their special living requirements.

With more and more people moving to apartments and condominiums or purchasing a condominium as a second home there is new furniture on the market designed for this purpose.

Some major national furniture manufacturers have taken their best basic designs and scaled them down so that they fit well into smaller apartment and condominium living rooms.

Others have come up with some new ideas for dual and in some cases multiple uses of the same piece of furniture. One example is a handsome oak coffee table which flips up to reveal a large storage area.

The inside storage area could be used to keep bedding for a convertible sofa, games for the children or coasters, napkins and other items used to entertain.

The Landes Co. has designed a complete line of convertible furniture with the apartment and condominium resident in mind.

It includes a three-way table.

The basic structure is chrome with a white Formica or wooden butcher block tabletop. Arranged one way, it is a low cocktail table.

However, a quick flip of the chrome base converts it into a medium-high continental table for games. And, with another alteration to the base, it becomes a dinner table.

To accompany this piece is a two-way chair. It may start out as a lounge chair, but by removing the pillows and flipping the base the height is raised so it can function as a dining chair.

Completing the set is a two-way sofa bed. Used as a sofa it has very modern, clean lines with a chrome base. The base and pillows fold out to create a comfortable queen-size sofa bed.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

(Wed., Aug. 4)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to be articulate and express your views and opinions. Also a good day to see new places and meet with persons of different background and viewpoints from your own.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can advance via new situations that come up and will bring you closer to your goals. You are able now to get at the sources of data that have been closed to you before now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Tap your subconscious and know what is best for you to do in important matters. A loved one looks upon you with more favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are able to reach more accord with associates if you are willing to meet them halfway. Get into some civic work that brings fine results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Handle routine tasks carefully, and you accomplish a good deal in a minimum of time. Come to a better understanding with associates and fellow workers. Be happy with kin in evening.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take time for amusement and relaxation to relieve tensions. Avoid those who are not congenial, although little risks can be taken.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Make changes at home that will bring more harmony and contentment there. Some out-of-town interest can bring you benefits you had not counted on.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Work out some plan that will help you gain the goodwill of a successful person who can be of help to you. Pay bills on time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are now able to gain some cherished wishes with ease, if you make right plans early. Avoid one who has an eye on your job, assets.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be thorough in working every angle of practical affairs so that they are successful. Try to please loved one more. Avoid a troublemaker.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Research information you need for business and personal matters and then make good use of it. You have good ideas and can convince others easily now. Try not to be extravagant in any way.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Handle vocational and credit affairs well although you may encounter a few stumbling blocks in the path of your progress.

Second scoop of Martian soil may supply answers

By RICHARD SALTUS

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Viking 1, the robot detective probing strange activity in the soil of Mars, should get more clues from a second handful of dirt to be dug from the rustcolored surface.

The sample will be studied by a tester that could help determine whether Martian life, or merely an unusual chemical process, is causing the activity that had scientists baffled Monday.

Viking's 10-foot mechanical arm was to reach for a handful of soil today. If successfully deposited in one of the chambers in Viking's automated experimental package, the dirt could yield some clues later this week.

The instrument — a gas chromatograph mass spectrometer — will search for molecules of organic matter which, if found in sufficient amounts and complexity, would strongly suggest living organisms are present.

A hastily organized special scientific team still straddled the fence Monday on the puzzling gas emitted by a dirt sample already inside the minilaboratory.

Soon after a liquid nutrient was fed to the bit of soil last week, gas containing a radioactive tracer in the nutrient began pouring out at a startling rate. Dr. Gil Levin, who heads the team monitoring the experiment, said Monday the gas generation was no longer accelerating and had reached a plateau.

But neither earth organisms nor nonliving chemical processes known to scientists here could explain the rate at which gas was emitted by the soil sample, said Levin.

"Biological responses (in experiments on earth) that started this rapidly have generally continued to evolve gas for a longer period of time," said Levin.

"But the shape of the curve (information plotted on a graph) doesn't fit the shape of nonbiologic responses we have seen, either.

"So we're in between."

Since the scientists never have seen anything like the tantalizing reports Viking is sending back, Levin said a special team had been formed to search for an explanation.

Organized by chief Viking scientist Dr. Gerald Soffen, the team is comprised of organic chemists, physicists, physical chemists, biologists and biochemists.

"They have formed a tentative hypothesis that some unique photochemistry (reaction of sunlight on the soil) is occurring on Mars that is causing the surface to produce the kinds of responses we are seeing," said Levin.

Levin would not say what the odds were that the mysterious process was being caused by living organisms.

But Soffen sounded a note of caution, saying, "It's very easy to misread this as life signs when actually it may be a unique chemistry...."

Levin said another shot of nutrient, a mixture of amino acids and carbohydrates, would be fed to the soil sample on Friday. If this caused a new burst of activity in the soil, it would suggest that a biological process is at work, he said.

In the language of the Viking researchers, biological process means life.

Clayton predicts water deficiency

RENNER, Tex. (AP) — House Speaker Bill Clayton said Monday that Texas will become water deficient with the decade of 1980 to 1990.

Clayton quoted "authoritative surveys" in an address to about 200 members of the Dallas Agricultural Club, Fort Worth Farm and Ranch Club, and area legislators and political delegations during a meeting at the Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center at Renner.

The House speaker said one of the biggest problems facing water's future in Texas is "to get awareness and concern of people" about the encroaching shortage.

"I know you have all heard the old story about the leaky roof and rain," he said. "When it's raining you can't patch the roof, and when it isn't raining, the roof doesn't need patching.

"We've been blessed with rain in many parts of the state to prevent crops from slumping and pastures from scorching and urban water supplies out of danger, but any farmer or rancher or home-owner knows what 60 days of cloudless skies can do to this country."

Clayton said he based his concern over the future of water on his experience as a cotton and grain farmer at Springlake, located in the heart of the intensely irrigated South Plains, and as a legislator for the past 14 years.

"We are well aware of droughts, and what our agriculture community can do to produce food and fiber needed worldwide," Clayton added, "but unless water development is increased hot winds will be blowing dust over our parched land and over dry lake beds."

To help head off this potential disaster the house speaker called for full development of water resources in Texas.

"One of the most critical needs now is to move forward with approval by Texas voters of a water development bond to be on the ballot in the November election," Clayton added.

"Approval would authorize the Texas Water Development Board an additional $400 million needed for future development."

Judge pleads innocent; trial set for Sept. 21

HOUSTON (AP) — A trial date of Sept. 21 has been set for State District Court Judge Garth Bates, charged with accepting a bribe to ensure that a defendant in his court would not go to prison.

Bates, 61, pleaded innocent Monday at his arraignment before Judge John Barren of Bryan, a visiting judge assigned to hear the case.

"I enter a plea that I am not guilty," Bates told Barron, a retired justice of the 11th Court of Civil Appeals.

Barron set Aug. 18 as the deadline for pre-trial motions and Aug. 30 as the date for a hearing on the motion.

Bates is accused of accepting a $59,000 bribe from Nukie Fontenot, 38, a Houston pawn shop operator, who was accused of receiving and concealing stolen goods from a $90,000 jewelry robbery.

Bates was indicted by a Harris County grand jury July 21, along with Ed Riklin, 46, a Houston salesman.

Riklin also pleaded innocent to the bribery charges. Both Bates and Riklin are free on $118,000 bonds each. No trial date was set for Riklin.

The indictment alleges that Fontenot paid the bribe July 16 in return for "representation" from the judge that he would use his influence to see that Fontenot did not receive a prison sentence.

The trial of Fontenot had been set this month before Bates. Fontenot was not charged in the bribery case.

Bates appeared dapper and friendly during his brief court appearance Monday. He steadily refused to comment specifically on the bribery charges to newsmen.

"I am not guilty of anything," he said. "I'll wait for my day in court."

Passengers may put bite on car thieves

HOUSTON (AP) — A couple of passengers in a stolen car may put the bite on the thief who took it.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Powell said Monday their sports car, which was stolen Saturday, contained two rare and very poisonous Asian rattlesnakes.

Mrs. Powell, 23, said the snakes, which she purchased at $550 each for a friend who owns an exotic pet shop here, were in a shoe box on the floor in the passenger side of the car.

She said the rhinoceros vipers, commonly called "horned toad adders" were a little more than two feet long and "very poisonous like most rattlesnakes."

She said the car and snakes were stolen when her husband, 26, left the car motor running as he went inside their house.

Police said they will check out persons who show up at local hospitals with snake bites.

A detective predicted possibly other injuries for the thief.

"Can't you imagine some guy driving along at 70 miles an hour when a rattlesnake crawls out on the front seat?" asked Lt. D. L. Singleton.

Q. What does the word "nightmare" mean? What causes nightmares?

A. Nightmare is a dream filled with great dread or terror. The word mare at one time meant an evil spirit thought to cause the nightmares. Indigestion, or improper blood circulation or breathing causes nightmares. So do personal problems that are worrying the dreamer.

Three witnesses call for tighter flow-through cost regulations

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission's "fact-finding" hearing on automatic flowthrough of higher gas costs to consumers ended today with three witnesses calling for tighter regulation.

Examiner John Camp said the possibilities for commission action are "open-ended"— meaning it could issue some proposed rules, resume the hearing or take no action.

Jack Hopper of Austin, a private economic consultant who advised Lane Denton in his losing race for a seat on the commission, said the commission should send out audit teams to verify the gas purchase costs that utilities are passing on to customers.

"The fact that the commission is not here is an indication that the commission doesn't take much interest in this problem," Hopper said.

Bill McMorries of Amarillo, president of McMorries & Associates, consulting engineers, said automatic pass-throughs were a cause of rising gas prices.

He countered the utility companies' view that requiring hearings before higher gas costs could be flowed through would produce a welter of expensive proceedings.

"It is no more inconvenient for utilities to obtain prior approval for rate increases than it is for the consuming public to endure those increases," he said.

R.H.Aughinbaugh, Fort Worth director of consumer protection and public utilities, said the automatic pass-through is a reasonable measure but should be limited to 85 per cent of cost and closed in with safeguards.

In Monday's testimony, a small town gas company spokesman, who operates some gas wells of his own, said it was hard to understand why the big companies pay so much for gas.

SCALE MODELS OF a giant offshore oil platform, supertanker, and tank truck show three vital elements in the chain of operations which brings oil from beneath the earth's crust to the American consumer. The models occupy a portion of one of the 10 exhibit chambers of the new petroleum exhibit presented to the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago by Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

West Texas areas get wildcat sites

Exploratory sites have been staked in Reeves, Crockett and Fisher counties.

Gulf Oil Corp. filed application to drill a 13,300-foot prospector in Reeves, 9½ miles northwest of Toyah. It is No. 1 E. B. Adams, et al-State.

Drillsite is 10 miles southwest of the Toyah, North (Wolfcamp and Siluro-Devonian) field, 1,980 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 35, block 59, PSL survey.

CROCKETT VENTURE

J. Cleo Thompson of Dallas intends to drill No. 1 C. E. Davidson III as a 8,800-foot explorer in Crockett, seven miles east of Ozona.

It is 2⅞ miles west of the depleted Clayton Ranch (Ellenburger) gas field and 1⅛ mile north of detrital production in the Davidson Ranch pool.

Drillsite is 1,220 feet from south and west lines of section 21, block IJ, GC&SF survey.

Also in Crockett, Robert M. Wynne of Midland will drill No. 3-88 Paul Pearson as a project in the Pure-Bean, South field, nine miles northwest of Ozona.

Location is 1,770 feet from south and 2,890 feet from east lines of section 88, block OP, GC&SF survey. Scheduled depth is 1,500 feet.

The field has four wells.

FISHER TRY

Sojourner Drilling Corp., Abilene, has staked site for No. 1 Harvey Maberry, a 5,600-foot wildcat in Fisher, five miles southwest of Hamlin.

It spots 2,173 feet from north and 1,787 feet from west lines of section 197, BBB&C survey, ⅜ mile southwest of depleted4,600-foot Canyon production in the Celotex field.

Oil, gas tests set

A wildcat site was staked in Edwards County, and a stepout was scheduled in a Scurry field.

Amoco Production Co. will drill No. 1 Less Shanklin Wardlaw, a 10,500-foot wildcat, in Edwards County, 24 miles northwest of Rocksprings.

Drillsite is 2,280 feet from north and 1,120 feet from east lines of section 170, CCSD&RGNG survey, abstract 2197, 2½ miles north of the Wardlaw field.

SCURRY PROJECT

Lario Oil & Gas Co. plans to drill No. 2 Brumley as a location north stepout to the two-well Tonto, North (Strawn) field of Scurry County.

It is projected to 7,200 feet, and spots 517 feet from south and 670 feet from east lines of section 446, block 97, H&TC survey, six miles northeast of Snyder.

RRC okays shutdown

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The railroad commission has approved abandonment of a small gas line in Kilgore because of the high cost of installing electrical wiring required by the federal government to prevent rusting in the line.

Few residential users were served by the 91,900-foot Warren Petroleum Co. line, and only one complained about the abandonment, a comission spokesman said.

When Exxon agreed to serve that customer, the commission approved Warren's request to shut it down.

The gas comes from a casinghead system, where the gas is produced incidental to oil recovery. Had the commission not acted, Warren would have had to cease oil operations at that site, a spokesman said.

Spraberry tests slated

Parker & Parsley, Midland, has scheduled two projects in the Spraberry Trend Area in Midland County, 10 miles southeast of Midland.

Both are slated to 9,200 feet, and are in section 44, block 37, T-2-S, W. T. Holcombe Sr.

No. 1-E Turner, spots 1,320 feet from south and east lines of the section.

No. 1-F Turner spots 1,320 feet from north and east lines.

Kent area gains well

Highland, Brown, Brock & Equity of Midland completed No. 1 J. W. Morrison as a new producer in the Lyn-Kay (SMS) field of Kent County, 19 miles northwest of Clairemont.

It was completed on the pump for 139 barrels of oil daily, through perforations at 6,211-6,226 feet.

Location, ⅜ mile northeast of production, spots 1,002 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 67, block 1, M&GN survey, 19 miles northwest of Clairemont.

Gas lawsuit set Aug. 23

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The city's $200 million suit against its natural gas supplier will go to trial Aug. 23, "barring an act of God", says State District Court Judge Peter Michael Curry.

Five of the city's fine councilmen already have stated they will vote against a proposed out-of-court settlement of the suit when the council meets Thursday morning.

Abd, Curry said Monday there is no indication that lawyers on either side will seek further delays.

"I am taking no excuses from the attorneys," said Curry.

San Antonio and its city public service utility have filed the breach of contract suit against Lo-Vaca Gathering Co., its corporate parent Coastal States Gas Corp., and Coastal States Chairman Oscar Wyatt Jr.

The city charges that the gas supplier failed to meet terms of a 20-year natural gas supply contract.

Other customers of the same supplier also have filed more than $1 billion in similar suits against the company.

Potentials announced

New producers have been completed in Sterling and Runnels County fields.

Stoltz, Wagner & Brown, Midland, finaied No. 1-32-A Glass, ⅜ mile southwest of production in a northeast area of the Big Salute (Canyon) oil field of Sterling.

It flowed 122 barrels of 40-gravity oil on 24-hour potential test taken on a 12-64-inch choke and through perforations at 7,567-8,030 feet, after fracturing with 98,000 gallons and 150,000 pounds.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 32, block 22, H&TC survey, 15 miles southwest of Sterling City.

A second current Caddo lime oil well and ¾-mile southwest extender for that pay has been completed in the Motley, North pool of Runnels.

Desert Oil Co., Abilene, No. 1-A Walter Templin finaled on the pump for 64.47 barrels of 42-gravity oil and 73 barrels of water daily. Gas-oil ratio measuring 1,800-1 was reported.

It was potentialed through perforations at 4,810-4,816 feet.

Location is 1,750 feet from north and 2,200 feet from east lines of section 24, F. Brandt survey, 10 miles northwest of Ballinger.

Ministers working on fund

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Finance ministers from the members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) will work out details of a new special fund for developing countries at a meeting here this week, an OPEC spokesman said today.

The conference, which begins Thursday and is expected to last two days, is the first toplevel OPEC meeting in Vienna since a bloody terrorist raid on an oil ministers' meeting here last December.

The organization had announced the meeting last week, but did not disclose its agenda at that time.

The special fund was set up at a Paris meeting of the finance ministers last Jan. 28. They agreed to distribute $800 million this year, but a number of details were left unresolved.

Hamid Zaheri, the OPEC information chief, said the Vienna meeting might also consider several applications for aid that already have been received.

Extension potentials

A one-mile south extension into Ward County of the Wink, South (Montoya-Ellenburger) field has been assured with the flowing of gas at the rate of 1.1 million cubic feet daily, plus 25 barrels of distillate in 24 hours, at BTA Oil Producers, Midland, No. 3 7417 JV-S Winkler.

The flow was gauged through a 14-64-inch choke and perforations at 18,720-19,129 feet, after the pay had been treated with 12,000 gallons of acid. Testing continued.

Drilled to 19,150 feet, it has a 5-inch liner hung from 14,256-19,149 feet, and is plugged back to 19,130 feet.

Location is 1,320 feet from north and east lines of section 88, block F, G&MMB&A survey, six miles south of Wink.

Expansion scheduled

PORT ARTHUR — ARCO Polymers, Inc., a subsidiary of Atlantic Richfield Co., has announced plans for a major expansion of high-density polyethylene facilities at its Port Arthur chemical plant.

Dr. Paul A. McKim, ARCO Polymers president, said construction of a second high-density polyethylene unit is expected to begin by mid-1977, with completion plans for 1979.

The new unit, rated at 175-million pounds per year, will double ARCO's current high-density polyethylene production capacity.

San Andres pay opens

The Four C field gained a fourth pay, San Andres gas, and San Andres oil pay was extended in the same pool.

Joe H. Warren of Dallas finaled No. 8 Nelle Gray as a San Andres gas pay opener, nine miles east of Imperial.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 430,000 cubic feet of gas per day. Production is through perforations at 2,985-1,995 feet. No treatment was reported.

Drilled to 3,130 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set on bottom.

Location is 467 feet from south and 1,787 feet (amended from 1,767) feet from east lines of section 34, block 9, H&GH survey.

Warren's No. 6-R Nelle Gray, sixth San Andres oiler, was completed for 96.74 barrels of 39-gravity oil per day, producing through perforations at 2,298-2,308 feet, after treating the pay with 500 gallons of acid.

Location is 476 feet from south and 567 feet from east lines of section 34.

Petroleum exhibit new part of Chicago's science museum

CHICAGO, Ill. — The new petroleum exhibit, which literally transports visitors into a world of energy and petroleum,opened at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry Monday.

The 8,700-square-foot exhibit was presented to the museum by the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

One year of planning and designing and six months of construction were necessary to complete the $1.2-million exhibit.

Highlighting the exhibit is a unique conveyor transport for visitors. A highly complex timing system activates each of 23 exhibit sections as museum-goers ride past in individual hemisphere-shaped pods, each wired for sound.

A 650-foot-long articulated slat conveyor, the longest in the world, carries visitors on their 10-minute trip through the exhibit, the only one of its kind anywhere.

The colorful exhibit units show how oil and gas were formed and describe modern methods of recovering these resources. The thousands of uses for petroleum in daily life, the need to conserve energy, and the search for new energy sources all are explained in dramatic displays.

More than a thousand miles of wire, 6,000 lights, 30,000 moving parts, 300 slides, and 10 tons of plastic, wood, metal, and Plexiglas went into the construction of the exhibit, which was designed by Sphere Inc. of Chicago.

In addition to the unique transport system, the exhibit includes several popular features from the previous petroleum exhibit which had been at the museum since 1968.

Visitors can win a souvenir medallion if they "strike oil" at an oil rig. A fractionating tower illustrates the many products derived from petroleum, and a rolling mill bearing weighing 4,834 pounds can be turned with just one finger because it rests on a film of oil only .012 inches thick.

Other exhibit units allow visitors to test for themselves the properties and characteristics of oil and other petroleum products.

The exhibit can be visited during museum hours, 9:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. daily.

Oil field thefts part of rising crude costs

PONCA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Oil field thefts are becoming a big factor in the rising cost petroleum, northern Oklahoma peace officers reported Monday.

Kay County Sheriff Thomas Johnston said 200 barrels of crude oil stolen from an oil field tank near Braman, northwest of here near the Kansas line, was worth about $2,400 on the legitimate market.

On the black market, officers estimated the oil would bring about $1,000 clear profit.

Johnson said the oil theft near Braman was "very similar to thefts in Garfield, Major, Kingfisher and Grant Counties" in Oklahoma.

In Kingfisher County, authorities said the black market for oil is very active.

"They're taking everything but the hole," said Kingfisher County Undersheriff Charles Lietzke.

Lietzke and other officers in Oklahoma are joining with authorities in Arkansas, Kansas and Texas in combatting the problem.

The United Petroleum Security Cooperative (UPSC), formed in February, pools the resources of the oil companies and law enforcement officers.

"We estimate a minimum of $5 million in losses in oil thefts for the four-state area in 1976," said Richard Iorio, UPSC cochairman.

The crude oil, authorities said, is sold on the black market and then recycled into the reclaimed oil market through several channels where it is difficult to detect the addition of stolen petroleum.

Iorio said the cost of the stolen oil is included in the overall price the consumer pays for petroleum products, including gasoline.

Refinery draws fine

HOUSTON (AP) — A state judge has fined Gulf Oil Corp. $49,000 for alleged air pollution at its Port Arthur refinery.

State District Court Judge Arthur Lesher also ordered the firm Monday to install further pollution abatement equipment estimated to cost $10.5 million at the plant to reduce sulfur compound emissions.

He told Gulf to install a tail gas cleanup system on two of its sulfur recovery units before Dec. 31, 1977.

Lesher also ordered the corporation to change the catalysts in the two sulfur recovery units annually rather than every three years.

The suit, filed March 20, 1975 by the state attorney general's office, alleged the firm was violating a regultion of the Texas Air Control Board. Asst. Atty. Gen. Jim Jard said the state estimated Gulf exceeded allowed sulfur emission by 50 per cent on some occasions.

Jim Gatten, a Gulf spokesman, said the two units were initially installed in the 1950s and were the latest technology available at the time. He said that since the creation of the Texas Air Control Board, Gulf has acted in good faith at making modifications of the units to reduce emissions.

Murphy appointed

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Edward H. Murphy Jr. has been named deputy director of the American Petroleum Institute's Department of Statistics, API President Frank N. Ikard announced.

Murphy has been a senior economist in API's Policy Analysis Department since 1975. He will assist in developing policies and procedures governing the institute's statistical program and help direct the gathering and disseminating of data on industry operations.

125 delegates hold GOP key

By EVANS WITT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only 15 days before the roll call is to begin in Kansas City, 125 Republican partisans clutch the key to their party's biggest prize, the presidential nomination.

In two months of intense courtship by President Ford and Ronald Reagan, the ranks of the uncommitted convention delegates have dwindled by more than 50.

Both camps claim enough delegates to grab the nomination, but neither candidate has been able to win the hearts — and votes — of the 1,130 delegates needed for a first-ballot victory, according to The Associated Press survey of delegates' legal commitments and public declarations.

Both continue to woo delegates, with strategies that range from White House dinner invitations to the stunning selection by Reagan of a liberal senator for a running mate to claims of allegiance from new blocks of delegates.

Reagan campaign manager John Sears gave out names of 12 delegates on Monday, saying they now back his candidate. He listed 10 from Pennsylvania, one from New York and one from West Virginia, as Reagan backers try to prove their choice of Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania as a running mate is an asset, not a liability.

"We are not aware of any individual delegates we have lost from our count," Sears said.

He claimed at least six of the 12 were previously Ford supporters, but The AP survey had listed six of them for Reagan and six as uncommitted.

Sears repeated his claim that the former California governor has 1,140 votes on the first ballot. Ford's chief delegate hunter, James Baker, claims Ford now has 1,134 delegates committed to him.

The AP survey shows Ford with 1,105, Reagan with 1,029 and the remaining 125 uncommitted.

Baker followed Sears' news conference with one of his own, saying that the changes were certainly not a big surprise.

But Baker admitted under questioning that the President Ford Committee's "hard count, conservative count," as he calls it, had slipped by at least five in Pennsylvania and one in New York since the Schweiker announcement a week ago Monday.

The AP survey, based on interviews with the individual delegates, counts only those who say they will vote for Ford or Reagan on the first ballot. Delegates who are leaning toward a candidate or who have given some other, less certain indication of preference, are not counted for either candidate.

For example, The AP count listed as uncommitted all the Pennsylvania delegates who had been counted by the Ford committee as favoring the President, but who were named Monday as Reagan backers by Sears. The Ford people had counted these delegates based on their votes for a pro-Ford resolution at a delegation meeting. But The AP counted them as uncommitted when the delegates said in individual interviews that they did not consider the resolution binding and were actually uncommitted.

Ford's campaign has similarly counted for the President certain delegates from New York and West Virginia on the basis of votes at delegation meetings. But these delegates have told AP they are uncommitted.

These three states account for the principal differences between the Ford and AP tallies.

Even second trick may be dangerous

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Some bridge writers waste your time telling you about the danger of making the wrong play at the first trick. Pay no attention to them. Sometimes your opportunity to destroy yourself doesn't present itself until the second trick.

Opening lead — ♠ A

West took the ace of clubs and continued with the king. South ruffed, led the ace of spades and continued craftily with the jack of spades.

Undeceived, West stepped up with the king of spades and led a heart. East won and led a third club, whereupon West was sure to take the setting trick with the ten of spades.

Clearly, South did nothing wrong at the first trick. It was correct for him to follow suit, and he did so.

South's blunder occurred at the second trick, when he ruffed the king of clubs. After this "automatic" play he could no longer make his contract even if he stood on his head.

IMPORTANT DISCARD

South should discard his losing heart on the king of clubs at the second trick. This gives the defenders an unearned club trick but deprives them of a heart trick later on. More important, the heart discard cuts communications between the defenders.

When West gets a trick with the king of spades he cannot get to his partner's hand. East therefore never gets a chance to lead a third club. Instead of losing 200 points, South scores 790 points for making the doubled game and rubber.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: SAQJ984 H6 DAQJ102 C7. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade. You have nine pretty sure playing tricks, but the hand is not worth a forcing opening bid. If you open with a two-bid, your partner may put you in a slam with useless kings and queens in your short suits.

Butter, coffee, eggs go higher

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Bad news for consumers who like to start the day with a hearty breakfast! An Associated Press marketbasket survey shows prices for such staples as butter, eggs and coffee increased during July.

The increases at the retail store generally reflected trends at the wholesale level which, in turn, mirrored the over-all supply situation.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed the marketbasket bill increased last month at the checklist store in eight cities, rising an average of 1.7 per cent. The bill decreased at the checklist store in four cities, down an average 2 per cent, and was unchanged in the 13th city. Over-all, the marketbasket bill at the checklist store increased a little less than half of one per cent during July.

The situation represented an improvement over June, when the marketbasket bill went up at the checklist store in nine cities and the over-all total was up 1.3 per cent.

A comparison of prices at the start of August with those in January showed the marketbasket bill for food and nonfood items surveyed went up at the checklist store in eight cities, went down in four cities and was unchanged in one city. The over-all increase was 1.7 per cent.

The government has predicted that retail prices for food alone will increase about 2 per cent to 5 per cent this year, although the exact size of any increase depends to some degree on the crops still being harvested. The recent strike by California cannery workers could provide an unexpected boost in the cost of canned fruits and vegetables.

The major increases in July occurred in breakfast items. The price of a pound of butter went up at the checklist store in 11 cities, rising an average of almost 10 per cent. In June, the price of a pound of butter went up in nine cities, increasing about 5 per cent.

A strong demand for milk and other dairy products is blamed for the increase in the price of butter. An Agriculture Department spokesman explained that there is a particularly strong demand for cheese, which is a more profitable item for manufacturers than butter. The more milk used for cheese, the less there is available for butter.

In other developments:

—The price of a pound of coffee increased at the checklist store in seven of the cities surveyed. Coffee now averages about $2 a pound, an increase of more than 50 per cent over the past year. The increases are blamed on last year's frost in Brazil.

—The price of a dozen eggs went up at the checklist store in 12 of the cities surveyed. Higher prices for chicken feed, combined with lower production, are blamed for the boost.

—On the bright side, the price of frankfurters decreased at the checklist store in eight cities, as did the price of a pound of chopped chuck. Increased supplies, combined with scattered summer sales, were responsible for the drop in prices.

The items on the AP checklist were chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, chocolate chip cookies, milk, all-beef frankfurters and granulated sugar.

Marine Corps has most recruit abuse reports

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps, smallest of the armed services, reported more than twice as many incidents of recruit abuse as the combined incidents reported by the Army, Navy and Air Force over the past two years.

The Marines listed 234 confirmed incidents in fiscal 1975 and 1976 while the other services registered an overall total of 96.

This was disclosed in a report by Pentagon manpower officials to Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, who ordered a review of all service recruit training after allegations of Marine brutality arose earlier this year. The report was made available Monday.

Pentagon investigators found current service policies are generally adequate. They said that comprehensive data on how scrupulously these policies are followed has been difficult to obtain.

"Some cases of abuse undoubtedly occur which do not come to light," the report said.

The report's publication comes after renewed criticism of corps training practices in the wake of the death last Dec. 6 of Pvt. Lynn McClure of Lufkin, Tex., who died after a severe beating in pugil stick exercises at the San Diego, Calif., Marine training base.

There also has been testimony by a former psychiatrist at the Parris Island, S.C., base that physical abuse occurs regularly there.

Manpower officials recommended that each service establish "a credible protected channel through which recruits can bring alleged abuses to the attention of senior commanders."

They noted with approval that the Air Force has set up a "suggestion box" for recruits. "Only the commander has the key and reports of alleged abuse received are promptly investigated," they said.

The report urged that officer supervision of drill sergeants and instructors be intensified and that the services file quarterly statistical reports on alleged abuses.

In a summary of confirmed incidents of recruit abuse, the Army with 53 cases was a distant second to the Marine Corps, followed by the Navy with 34 and the Air Force with only 9.

The Marine Corps appeared to deal less harshly with its offenders.

The report listed only 26 Marine court-martial convictions with 208 offenders given lesser administrative punishment. The Navy court-martialed 13 and administratively punished the other 21, Army courts-martial convicted 11 while the remaining 42 received minor penalties, and the Air Force court-martialed two and gave lighter punishment to seven.

While others talk mail, DPS now flies its own

By LARRY FORGY
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Everyone talks about the mail, and no one does anything about it, right?

Wrong.

The Texas Department of Public Safety has taken the mail in its own planes, and is saving a lot of money in the process.

In the first 10 months of this fiscal year the DPS has saved more than $54,000 by delivering its own mail.

Every Wednesday three DPS airplanes leave the department's regional offices carrying district supervisors with business in Austin. It occurred to someone in the department that much of the DPS mail traveled between the regional and state offices, and since the planes were going that way anyway...

From Sept. 1 to June 30 of this year, G. W. Burnup, who is in charge of the planes, estimates that the planes carried 57,272 pounds of mail during their 117 scheduled flights.

Burnup said maintenance on the planes costs the department $45,045, but that the cost of sending that much mail first class would have been $99,081. He said they would have saved more but that they had to replace the engines in all the planes during the year.

During the 1975 calendar year it cost the DPS $25,851 to transport 61,139 pounds of mail that the post office would have charged $76,424 to deliver.

Burnup says each flight carries an average of 490 pounds of mail in both directions. The trip costs $378, but the "mail" would cost $847 to mail.

The Dallas-Waco-Austin flight carries the heaviest load, followed by the Corpus Christi-Houston-Austin and the Midland-Lubbock-Abilene flights.

So why does it take so long to get your driver's license back? The DPS airmail system delivers only intradepartmental mail, Burnup says. Otherwise it would cost even more to carry it in the plane and then mail it anyway from the regional office.

Martinez trial gets under way

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The theft trial of former Senate Print Shop supervisor Alex Martinez and Penni Soner begins today.

A six-man, six-woman jury was selected for the trial Monday.

Senate Secretary Charles Schnabel accused Martinez and Stoner last September of stealing Senate paper.

Martinez in turn accused Schnabel of wrongdoing.

The Travis County Grand Jury indicted all three. Schnabel's trial is set Sept. 12. He faces indictments on theft, forgery and official misconduct.

Joe Martinec, attorney for Martinez and Stoner, told prospective jurors Monday, "There is a pervasive, cynical feeling that people who work for the government ... are crooks.

"There is a feeling—'Well, this sort of thing goes on in state agencies all the time. What a rotten group of people run the state government.'"

Martinec asked the jurors if any among them felt that way. There was no response.

"What you're telling me (by their silence) is you're not going to require a person who works for the state to prove he is more honest than anybody else," Martinec said.

Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, a member of the Senate Administration Committee, has said Schnabel ordered Martinez to "get rid of" Stoner after other employes in the shop complained.

Arab states bid to curb trouble-making neighbor

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Sudan are taking steps to contain the multimillion-dollar troublemaking of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, diplomatic sources say.

The present attitude of the three governments is essentially defensive, but Egypt and Sudan could turn to offensive action if there is a "clear provocation" from Khadafy, the sources said. It is understood they would have Saudi Arabia's petrodollar treasury to draw on.

"Khadafy is creating trouble everywhere in the Arab world — Lebanon, Oman, in Morocco, in Egypt, the recent Sudan coup, everywhere," said one source.

"Now he has been warned: 'Either you behave yourself, or else.'"

Another source said Egypt and Sudan would probably take action only against "something really grave and directly and indisputably of Khadafy's doing." He declined to give a hypothetical example.

The radical 34-year-old Libyan leader has been feuding with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Sudanese President Jaafar el-Numairi, his neighbors to the east and southeast, for the past two years. Libyan newspapers also express suspicion openly of the conservative Saudi monarchy.

The attempt to overthrow Numairi on July 2-3 crystallized the new coalition against Khadafy. Numairi accused him of training and equipping a force of 2,000 mercenaries and anti-Numairi Sudanese and sending them across the border. Independent sources confirmed that Khadafy provided the money and the equipment for the rebels and said the Libyans probably gave them some training also.

After Numairi put down the revolt, Sudan and Egypt concluded a mutual defense pact aimed at Libya on July 15. A joint military planning staff is being created, and some aspects of military training are being standardized. There will also be frequent high-level exchanges of information, sources said.

Carolinian apparently sets record

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Fletcher Williams of Camden, S. C., has fired an apparent world record score in sporter class benchrest rifle competition at 200 yards.

Williams' cluster of five shots within a diameter of .215 inch was fired during the National Benchrest Shooting Association championships here last week.

The target was submitted to the association's scoring committee for verification that it topped the old record of a .242-inch cluster.

Rifles used in the competition must be at least .243 caliber.

Folklife fete set Thursday

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — More than 6,000 persons from 27 different cultural and ethnic backgrounds are expected to participate in the fifth Annual Texas Folklife Festival which opens on the Hemisfair grounds here Thursday.

Participants at the four-day event will display the foods, costumes, customs, songs, dances and handicrafts of their native lands.

The participants represent the groups which settled and tamed the Lone Star State.

Festival officials expect 100,000 visitors to attend before the event ends Sunday evening.

Instruction sessions will demonstrate how to make butter, beer, wine and adobe brick among other things. Visitors also can learn how to chop wood and prepare native foods.

"We hope to show younger generations the crafts our forefathers had to master in order to survive," says O.T. Baker, director of the festival.

"The idea of the festival is to allow the various cultural groups of Texas an opportunity to show themselves as well as others what they're really like," he adds.

The emphasis on cultural and ethnic diversity is consistent with the purpose of the Institute of Texan Cultures, which sponsors the event each year.

Groups to be represented include Indians, Mexicans, Blacks, Japanese, Swiss, Lebanese, Yugoslav and others.

For the first time, the Russian community from the Dallas area will be on hand with foods and costumes of their native country.

Stocks log light gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved ahead slightly today in an advance attributed to technical forces within the market.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up .94 at 983.20, and gainers held an 8-7 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market, flat and listless through most of the morning, turned upward just before the noon hour. Brokers said the absence of any further selling after Monday's mild decline appeared to attract some buy orders from traders.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the most active NYSE issue, climbed ¾ to 58½. On Monday a Federal Communication Commission official ruled against an FCC staff recommendation tht AT&T be forced to divest itself of its Western Electric manufacturing subsidiary, and also held that its rates on interstate calls were reasonable.

The Big Board's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .11 to 55.24. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .05 at 103.38.

Volume remained light on the NYSE, totalling 6.91 million shares over the first two hours against 6.31 million in the like period on Monday.

Boeing, another actively traded issue, gained 1⅜ to 41¾. On Monday, the company reported higher quarterly earnings and received an order for six planes from American Airlines.

Experts cite uranium sale world danger

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Countries being supplied with U.S. uranium now possess enough raw nuclear material to make about 1,000 atomic bombs, according to American and foreign experts.

And these experts said Monday that even if those countries wanted to return the nuclear material to U.S. control, the United States has neither the facilities nor the space to reprocess or store it.

A senior U.S. authority familiar with the situation came up with this explanation:

"If all this spent nuclear fuel is permitted to lie around indefinitely there is an obvious danger that some of it might be diverted for military purposes, despite international checks and treaties," he said.

"If, on the other hand, the United States were to exercise its option to buy back the spent fuel, then this country would in time become a dumping ground for highly hazardous material."

Spent nuclear fuel after reprocessing yields plutonium — an ingredient of atomic bombs.

Sources, including diplomats and scientists, estimated that more than 4,000 metric tons of spent fuel has piled up since about 1971 in Latin American, European and Asian lands, which buy low-enriched uranium from the United States.

This material would be enough to construct about 1,000 atomic bombs, the sources say. Such weapons presumably would be crude devices with the explosive capacity of the bombs that destroyed Hiroshima and Nagasaki at the end of World War II. The two bombs dropped on Japan in 1945 each had an explosive force of about 20,000 tons of TNT.

Indian experts said their country has a stockpile of about 200 metric tons. And despite frequent requests, the Indians said, Washington has avoided repurchasing it.

U.S. agreements of 1963 and 1966 with India included provisions that figure in most nuclear cooperation accords Washington has negotiated with friendly powers.

Under these agreements, the United States ships low-enriched uranium (meaning nonweapons grade) for use in nuclear power stations, then has first option to buy back spent fuel India doesn't need.

If America won't exercise its buy-back option, India can sell its surplus spent fuel to other countries for civilian use. Use of the material would be subject to safeguards and inspections supervised by the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA).

Only Monday a new storm blew up over America's projected sale of nuclear power plants to Egypt and Israel.

Assistant Secretary of State James J. Atherton appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Monday to talk about the proposed sales behind closed doors. Later, he said the agreements for the sale provide the tightest safeguards yet for preventing the use of nuclear fuel in atomic weapons.

But Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said after the meeting that "for the life of me I can't see why we want to participate in proliferation all over the world." And Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said "the whole concept of increasing nuclear capability in the Middle East is a matter of grave concern."

Judge denies bid by Alaniz lawyer

EDINBURG, Tex. (AP) — An elderly woman testified Monday that lawyer Nago Alaniz of Duval County beat her and said "don't talk to the federales" several months after she saw him at the scene of a burglary.

Mrs. Maria Elena Cardenas of San Diego gave the testimony as the final witness before Asst. Texas Atty. Gen. Neal Duvall rested his case in the burglary and theft trial of Alaniz, 63.

After Duvall rested his case, District Court Judge Darrell Hester denied a defense request for an instructed verdict of innocent.

Defense lawyer Dick DeGuerin of Houston asked for the instructed verdict on grounds that the prosecution had failed to prove that Alaniz did not have permission to enter the Duval County Conservation and Reclamation District and remove records.

Alaniz is charged with burglarizing the water district office and taking records that were being sought for a federal grand jury investigation into the income tax returns of George B. Parr, the "Duke of Duval." Alaniz was a close political associate of the late South Texas political boss.

Although the charge against Alaniz is burglary, testimony in the closing phases of the state's case Monday focused on the alleged beating, allegations of blackmail and extortion and claims that a missing prosecution witness was Alaniz' mistress.

Mrs. Cardenas, a key prosecution witness, testified earlier that she saw Alaniz enter and leave the water district office one night in early July, 1972.

The woman testified that Carmen Munoz, her niece who is now 27, had a close personal relationship with Alaniz. Earlier witnesses said Miss Munoz was with Alaniz the night of the water district burglary.

Mrs. Cardenas said it was after she told her niece she had seen Alaniz at the water district office when she was called by Alaniz one night in September, 1972, and told to go to Parr's home.

Mrs. Cardenas testified that after she drove to Parr's home alone, accordingcto instructions, Alaniz beat her about the face. "Every time he hit me, he told me not to talk to the federales," Mrs. Cardenas said.

"He told me to be thankful that he didn't kill me," she continued.

Under cross examination, Mrs. Cardenas denied she had been blackmailing Alaniz with pictures of the lawyer and her niece together. DeGuerin produced a note from Mrs. Cardenas asking Alaniz for $500.

Flash flood warnings heard in two states

By The Associated Press

Flash flood warnings were posted today for parts of Colorado and Texas as scattered thundershowers fell along the High Plains and in the East and South.

Thunderstorms also roamed southern Atlantic and Gulf Coast areas as well as Northwest Texas and eastern Colorado. Showers or thundershowers were widely scattered in the northern Rockies and the northern plateau and ranged into the Northwest.

Rainfall during the night generally was an inch or less although locally heavy downpours hit parts of the Southeast.

Fair weather dominated most of the country from the Great Plains to the middle Atlantic states.

Players approve baseball peace treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor peace has been reached in baseball.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, told the Select House Committee on Professional Sports that the new four-year agreement with management has been ratified overwhelmingly by the union membership.

With 15 of the 24 clubs having cast their ballots by Monday, the vote was 352-18 in favor of the pact which, for the first time, recognizes freedom of movement for the players.

UNDER THE terms of the agreement, the result of 13 months of negotiation, a player with six years' major league service can become a free agent by notifying his club in writing after the season.

A player with five years of major league service has the right to demand a trade at the end of a season, and he may list a maximum of six clubs to which he doesn't want to be traded. If he isn't traded by the following March 15, he becomes a free agent.

Other key terms include the right of an unsigned player to become a free agent at the end of this season and a signed player to become a free agent after playing out the renewal year in his current contract.

The tentative agreement was reached between representatives of management and the union during the All-Star break three weeks ago, subject to ratification by the 24 owners and the players. The owners ratified the pact two weeks ago.

MILLER TOLD the committee that despite baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's comments to the contrary, "collective bargaining in baseball has been impeded because of its antitrust status."

Miller said the union had tried repeatedly for the past 10 years to make modest modifications in the reserve system through collective bargaining.

"Despite its limited goals, which never included complete abolition of the reserve system, the club owners' response invariably was to the effect that they liked it just the way it was and that they would not change one comma in any of the relevant provisions," he said. "There was never any deviation in the club owners' position that players could never, on their own initiative, become free agents."

Miller said an arbitrator's decision on pitcher Andy Messersmith turned things around.

"BY UTILIZING impartial arbitration, subsequently enforced by the courts, the association obtained the ruling that baseball's reserve system was not as air-tight as the owners had been led to believe, and indeed, every player could play or sit out his contract and reservation in one year," he said.

"Then and only then were the owners first interested in modifying the reserve system. But now they wanted it modified in their favor. We could have, with great justification, taken the same attitude the owners had expressed for 10 years ... but we did not. We agreed to modifications to arrive at what we believe will be a fair and workable system."

Miller said if in the Curt Flood case the Supreme Court had removed "baseball's anomalous immunity," the bargaining which took place this year could have occurred four years ago.

MILLER ALSO attacked his football counterpart, Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, for his criticism of the baseball agreement.

"What I find appalling is that in the middle of another organization's ratification procedure, he would publish an article like this," said Miller, alluding to an item in the football players' internal newspaper, "The Audible," in which the agreement is called "the worst decision for professional athletes in years."

Miller also said that the baseball players union, in another vote, ratified 424-3 a new pension plan which will increase benefits 30 per cent over last year.

Rangers smash TL Stars,

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Rangers return to the real world tonight after annihilating the Texas League All-Stars Monday night, 18-4, behind a barrage of big hits led by Joe Lahoud's fifth inning grand slam.

Lahoud, who picked up a couple of other hits in the rout, was named most valuable player for the game.

The Rangers open a home stand tonight in Arlington Stadium against the California Angels while the All-Stars return to their respective homes to lick their wounds.

Jeff Burroughs smashed a second-inning home run to start off the scoring, and the hapless minor leaguers were never in it after that.

The all-stars scored all their runs in the ninth inning, two of them coming on Lin Hamilton's homer.

Hamilton, who plays for Amarillo, was the only substitute available to the Texas Leaguers, and collected a double to go with his home run in two trips to the plate.

All the losers' runs came off Steve Barr.

Fritz Peterson picked up the win, giving up only one hit in the four innings he worked.

The Rangers collected aa total of 18 hits, and 10 of the Rangers had RBIs.

Coaches back OU suit

KANSAS CITY (AP) — In a unanimous show of solidarity, head football coaches of the Big Eight Conference declared their support Monday of Oklahoma in its suit against the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

They did so with an air of resignation.

Oklahoma went to court last week and got a temporary injunction against an NCAA rule which went into effect Aug. 1 limiting the size of coaching staffs to eight fulltime and two parttime assistants. The new rule, which will affect an estimated 400 assistants in Division I schools natonwide, was legislated by the entire body of the NCAA as a cost-cutting measure.

A HEARING on the suit is scheduled next week in Oklahoma City.

"If they had done something like this when I was a young assistant just getting started I probably wouldn't be speaking to you now as the head coach at the University of Nebraska," said Tom Osborne at the annual Big Eight football kickoff luncheon.

"I wholeheartedly support Oklahoma's action."

Bud Moore of Kansas, voted the Big Eight Coach of the Year in 1975, recalled his first coaching job at Kentucky in 1962.

"I WAS the 10th man on a 10-man staff," he said. "If that legislation had been enacted at that time I probably would not be a head coach today."

Nobody could remember if the NCAA had ever lost a suit.

"I certainly hope they get some positive results," said Kansas State boss Ellis Rainsberger. "But the NCAA doesn't lose many lawsuits. None, in fact. And what if Oklahoma does win? The NCAA would probably just say, 'Okay, I guess you don't want to be a member of our voluntary organzation anymore.' And where would that leave Oklahoma? They would have no recourse."

"WE COULD be legislated to death," said Osborne, who has had to trim his staff by five. "We'll have five fewer people on the road recruiting than last year. A universal problem the Big Eight has is low population density. We have to hustle to compete with places like Texas and California for the good athletes. The rule, if it's allowed to stand, will hurt us and help schools like USC."

"I wish Oklahoma all the luck in the world," said Bill Mallory of Colorado. "It's a shame we have to be legislated against like this and so limited. If a school can afford to have 10 or 12 assistants, it should be allowed to do so."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer would not speculate as to the suit's outcome. But the four assistants which would be forced off his staff by the rule will not be out of a job, he said.

"THOSE PEOPLE came to us in good faith and signed contracts with the University of Oklahoma,'" he said. "I'm not going to tell a man and his family that he's out of a job even though he's been doing a good job. They'll all have jobs."

Michael Spinks won't rush to pro ring career

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Twenty-year-old Michael Spinks, one-half of the world's first Olympic gold medal brother duo in boxing, has arrived home to mull over his future, possibly as a pro.

But the man who has exerted a major influence in shaping his destiny said Monday he's advised Michael to take his time before making a decision.

"When he came off the plane he was talking. He told me, 'What I want to do is go back to school,'" said John Holus, president of the Ozark Amateur Athletic Union.

"ALL I hope is that life can be made a little easier for him and his family," Holaus said. "It (professionalism) is one step out of the ghetto. Maybe God is in his destiny, but the almighty dollar means a lot too."

A smiling Spinks, wearing a sombrero given to him by his hometown coach, Ken Loehr, arrived at Lambert Airport with his mother, Kay, at his side.

"Mostly what I feel is gratefulness," he told a small but boisterous crowd. "Right now, though, what I need is sleep. I slept some Saturday night after the fight, but since the closing ceremony I haven't been able to sleep at all."

THE RISE of Michael to boxing's amateur pinnacle at Montreal came swiftly after he and his brother, Olympic lightheavyweight champion Leon, fought in a Russian-United States meet here in January, 1975.

A high school dropout, Michael toured the Soviet Union last winter with an American team and gained valuable international experience.

In the Olympic finals he won by TKO over Russia's Rufat Riskiev in the third round, and the feat was probably no accident.

"I knew what he was going to do," recalled Spinks, who had lost to Riskiev earlier. "I was catching little flurries of punches every once in a while, but I threw the ones that counted."

ON MONDAY, after being presented the key to the city, Michael retired to a quiet homecoming and awaited the expected arrival of Leo, 23, from Camp Lejeune, N.C., where he had returned to duty as a Marine corporal.

COM breaks relay record

HOUSTON—The City of Midland Swim Team's 11-12 girls relay team won the 400 meter freestyle relay with the fastest time in the nation here over the weekend in the annual summer TAGS meet.

Heather Dunbar, Gretchen Koch, Carrie Mayes and Isabell Torres recorded a time of four minutes and 25.3 seconds. Needless to say, it was also a state record.

Miss Torres also won the 100 freestyle with a state record 1:04.27 while Carlton Fancher, Jr. had a national qualifying time in the 100 backstroke with a 1:03.60. Miss Torres also won the 200 freestyle and 100 backstroke. Wendy Williams had a second in the 1500 freestyle while Miss Torres had seconds in the 50 free and 200 individual medley. Curt Buthman won a third in the 100 back and Don Dunbar was third in the 200 breaststroke.

COM placed eighth in the meet.

Chief rally changes Wiggin talk

KANSAS CITY (EP) — Paul Wiggin had to do a quick rewrite of his dressing room oratory.

"I was trying to decide in the middle of the fourth quarter what my speech was going to be," he smiled amid the excitement of the Kansas City Chiefs' locker room Monday night.

"I was going to say we were a young team, but played a lot of people...but it's a strange game."

IT WAS indeed. Wiggin's Chiefs, outplayed most of the evening by the Houston Oilers, sent their National Football League exhibition game into overtime with 92 seconds remaining in regulation and finally won 9-3 when Emmitt Thomas grabbed a blocked field goal attempt and dashed 68 yards to victory.

The Oilers, who had two touchdown passes nullified by penalties, mounted a 3-0 advantage on Skip Butler's 31-yard second quarter field goal and nursed it until Jan Stenerud's 22-yarder sent the game, which had been exceedingly dull to that point, into sudden death.

THEN THE Chiefs won without their offensive unit taking the field again. The Oilers seemed poised at victory at 9:20 of the overtime period when Butler lined up for what could have been the winning shot from the 33-yard line.

A pair of rookie lineman, Willie Lee and Keith Simons, each got a hand on the ball and Thomas did the rest.

"Really, we did not play well," Wiggin admitted. "We made a lot of mistakes. But they were young types of mistakes, things like not staying with teams they were on and not substituting right.

"But we sell two things on this team: Enthusiasm and refusal to die. If we stay with those, we'll win some football games."

THE OILERS and Chiefs both substituted rookies and reserves throughout the night although Houston Coach Bum Phillips rushed his aces onto the field for the overtime period and Wiggin stayed with his fledglings.

"We were trying to win," said Phillips. "We were trying to win throughout the game, even though we took a look at a lot of people.

"We made too many penalties to move the ball consistently. You can't have offensive success when you have a lot of penalties."

"Over-all," Wiggin concluded, "we accomplished two things: We won, and we got a chance to judge a lot of people."

Jenner may quit track

CANTON, Conn. (AP) — Bruce Jenner, the record breaking Olympic decathlon gold medalist, says he's had enough of track and field and may want out.

"I really don't know (about track). We've talked about professional track, but I think I've had enough running. I may want to get out, I just don't know," Jenner said Monday.

WEARING BLUE jeans, a form fitted white shirt and open-toed sandals, Jenner arrived here about 3 p.m. with his wife Crystie and his parents, William and Esther, after a 300-mile drive from Montreal.

Jenner and his family were greeted by hundreds of children and a handful of reporters and photographers who waited for their arrival at his parents apartment complex.

"After 12 years of training, you can get one of these, guys," said Jenner, holding his gold medal up for youths gathered at his parents' home to see.

AS THE world's greatest athlete signed autographs he talked with interviewers.

"I've signed with three agencies and I've just sold a book on the Olympics written with Phil Finch, Thank God everything turned out all right. It wouldn't have been much of a book of I had lost," Jenner said.

Jenner, a 26-year-old Newtown, Conn., native who set a state pole vault record in 1968 while a senior at Newtown High School, scored a record number of points in the two-day decathlon last week. He won five of the ten events in the contest of speed, strength and stamina.

JENNER LEFT Monday night for New York where he was scheduled to have a news conference to explain what direction his life would take.

He told reporters Monday that after New York he and his wife plan a Hawaiian vacation before returning to their home in San Jose, Calif.

After that Jenner wasn't sure what he would do.

"I'm sort looking for a job. We've talked to a few people in the past few days, but we're going to take our time and sit back and take a look at what areas I'd be comfortable in. Right now it's just too early to tell," Jenner said.

Bob Watson NL top player

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Houston Astros' Bob Watson won the National League's Player of the Week award today for his seven-day performance which included a .481 batting average, three home runs and eight runs batted in.

Watson's slugging helped the Astros, third in the Western Division, move over the .500 mark.

Others nominated for the weekly baseball award were Houston pitcher Larry Dierker and the Astros' Jose Cruz, pitcher Dale Murray of Montreal, first baseman-outfielder Pete LaCock of Chicago, Chicago pitcher Ray Burris and Los Angeles pitcher Don Sutton.

Thomas to be ready for Cowboy-Ram tilt

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams might remember seeing Dallas' second-string running back duo somewhere when they line up for the Cowboy-Ram clash in the Coliseum Saturday.

Duane Thomas is back at full speed and will team up in the backfield with Ron Johnson Saturday as the "second set" of backs.

The recently-acquired duo will play behind starters Robert Newhouse and Doug Dennison, Cowboy coaches said.

THOMAS, PICKED up after a brief hitch with the World Football League, had been hampered by a strained hamstring since he reported to the Cowboy camp July 5. Prior to that, Thomas played with Dallas and Washington.

Johnson is a former New York Giant in his first year with Dallas.

Center John Fitzgerald, who bruised a knee in Dallas' 17-14 loss to Oakland Saturday, is also expected to be available against the Rams.

Free safety Cliff Harris tore a knee ligament and was back in Dallas, where doctors said he should be ready for duty in six weeks.

SOME COWBOYS were being limited in their work because of minor injuries.

Dallas released three players Monday and said more might be waived Tuesday. Waivers were asked Monday on quarterback Reggie Jackson, defensive back Tommy Moriarty and defensive lineman Joe Harvey.

Injuries slight but grim at Games

MONTREAL (AP) — Among the coveted gold, silver and bronze of the Olympics was a smattering of red, blue and purple.

Strains, sprains, cuts and bruises are normal fare in athletic competitions, but medical officials say the injury toll of the 1976 Games was minimal.

Dr. Reginald Owen, chairman of the International Association of Olympic Medical Officers, said in an interview that no injuries of "a permanent nature" were incurred by the athletes.

THE BRITISH doctor said that the top physical condition of world class athletes almost precludes the possibility of serious injury.

"Besides, there is not much out there on the competition field that you can really hurt yourself with."

To the layman, however, some of the reported injuries make fairly grim reading. It is also the stuff of which tales of superhuman endurance in the face of excruciating pain are made.

Early in the two-week Games, Japanese gymnast Shun Fujimoto set a heroic example when, despite a broken kneebone suffered while landing a triple somersault, he went on to obtain an almost perfect score on the rings, enabling his team to beat out the Soviets for a gold medal. 4

FUJIMOTO HOBBLED to the podium to receive the medal with the rest of his team.

Afterwards he shyly told reporters: "I just forgot about the pain and competed.

"Yes, when I came off the rings the pain shot through me like a knife. It brought tears to my eyes but I managed to stand still and move my weight to my left foot."

Injuries also put Cuba's leading male gymnast in a leg cast. Roberto Leon Richards fractured a shin bone when he crash-landed after misjudging a double somersault off the pommel horse.

The 1976 Games saw Russia's Olga Korbut deposed as the popular queen of women's gymnastics to be replaced by 14- year-old Romanian Nadia Comaneci.

IF AN ankle injury incurred during a vault on the third day of competition affected Miss Korbut's performance, the 21- year-old star refused the chance to say "uncle."

When reporters asked her if she was hurt she replied "Nyet."

"I feel very good," said Miss Korbut flashing a smile, her taped ankle swathed in an icepack.

"But every athlete always has something that hurts. If you don't, that's when you begin to worry."

PRINCESS ANNE, the only royal competitor at the Games, made the injury list when her temperamental mher for a tumble in the cross-country portion of the equestrian events. She sustained a mild concussion and bruised right arm and cheek.

"A bit stiff," was how she described her condition next day.

Boxers from all nations took a beating, or rather a butting at these Games. The senior medical official at the boxing tournament, Dr. Lewis Blonstein, complained there were too many cuts caused by boxers butting with the head.

It was a butt from Hungary's Joszef Nagy that gave Canadian boxer Chris Clarke a deep, bout-stopping gash over the left eyebrow, taking away his chances for a bronze medal.

TOP PRIZE for facial injuries didn't go to a boxer, but to Canadian field hockey player Reg Plummer. He suffered a broken nose and two badly swollen eyes when he was struck by a stick during Canada's 3-1 victory against Argentina.

In another of the martial arts, Canadian middleweight judo champion Rainer Fischer dislocated his elbow in the opening minute of a six-minute elimination bout. His team manager said Fischer won't be able to fight again for another four months.

In Greco-Roman wrestling an apparent shoulder separation meant disqualification for Bulgaria's two-time gold medalist Peter Kirov, and spectators were horrified when they saw France's Dominique Bidard dislocate his elbow while attempting to lift 320 pounds.

A MEMBER of the Swedish men's fencing team wound up having his gold medal delivered to him in hospital. Goran Flodstrom was taken away on a stretcher with the score tied 4-4 when he suffered a severe blow to the stomach from the sword of West Germany's Jurgen Hehn. Flodstrom was replaced and Sweden went on to win its first-ever gold medal in epee team fencing.

But not all of the injuries at the 1976 Games had that glow of Olympic grandeur to them. Some were downright human in scale.

There was the Cuban sprinter who needed seven stitches after he slashed his ankle on a broken bottle during a cushion fight with a teammate, and the Canadian walking competitor who fractured a rib when he slipped in his bathtub at the Olympic Village.

AND IT was a non-superhuman case of diarrhea which cost Canada its only hope for an Olympic medal in Greco-Roman wrestling.

To the puzzlement of fans and officials, Mitch Kawasaki of Ontario disappeared at the end of the second of the threebout match.

Jacket night brings fireworks

By The Associated Press

New York Mets Manager Joe Frazier went into an equipment-throwing tantrum Monday night in the ninth inning of his team's 5-4 loss to the Montreal Expos.

Jose Morales had pinch-hit a three-run homer in the top of the inning to bring the Expos back from a 4-2 deficit, but Frazier's wrath had been incited before Morales came to bat.

Just before Morales' blast, plate umpire Nick Colosi had called a ball on a close twostrike pitch by Skip Lockwood to Jerry White. The Mets argued the decision. White singled on the next pitch to set up Morales.

WHEN COLOSI called a strike on a close pitch to New York's Bruce Boisclair in the bottom of the inning, Frazier erupted. He screamed at Colosi from the dugout and was ejected from the game. Then the equipment started flying: a shin guards, six gloves, a baseball hats and a towel rained out of the Mets dugout as a "Jacket Night" crowd of over 50,000 looked on.

But Morales, the National League's leading pinch-hitter had done the damage with his 14th pinch-hit in 38 attempts and his third pinch-hit home run.

In other NL baseball action Monday, Chicago trimmed Philadelphia 4-2, San Diego swept Atlanta 7-3 and 7-0 in a twi-night doubleheader, and St. Louis blanked Pittsburgh 4-0 in the nationally televised game.

IN THE American League, Boston topped Cleveland 3-1, Milwaukee blasted Baltimore 7-1, New York edged Detroit 1-0, and Minnesota bested Oakland 3-0.

New York seemingly had won the game with two runs in the eighth inning against reliever Dale Murray. But Tim Foli and White singled to start the fireworks Frazier finished.

John Grubb belted two homers and drove in four to help Rick Sawyer win his first major league start for San Diego in the nightcap after a four-run ninth inning rally won the opener for Padres against Atlanta.

Pete Falcone shut out Pittsburgh on four hits and contributed a runscoring single in a three-run seventh inning to lift St. Louis over Pittsburgh.

CARL YASTRZEMSKI drove in two runs to back a five-hitter by Rick Wise and give the Red Sox their fourth victory in a row.

Von Joshua cracked run-scoring singles to cap a two-run burst in the sixth inning and and four-run seventh, carrying the Brewers past the Orioles.

New York's Doyle Alexander flirted with a no-hitter until two were out in the seventh inning, when Rusty Staub hit a single for one of Detroit's two hits in the Yankee triumph. The New York run tallied when an infield hit by Mickey Rivers in the third inning scored Sandy Alomar.

Butch Wynegar's two-run double provided all the support Minnesota's Steve Luebber needed for his seven-hit victory over Oakland as the Twins completed a five-game sweep of the A's.

IN LATE NL games on the West Coast, Cincinnati topped San Francisco 5-1 and Los Angeles bested Houston 5-4 in 11 innings.

Zimmer gets renewal through next season

CLEVELAND (AP) — "I'm Don Zimmer and I'm going to do what I feel has to be done to win ball games," says the manager of the Boston Red Sox for the past two weeks. That attitude has helped win him a ticket for a full season.

Red Sox General Manager Dick O'Connell called Zimmer Monday from Boston and offered to extend his contract through all of next year.

"I said, 'Wonderful,'" said Zimmer. "And he told me to go and have fun. The conversation didn't last three minutes ...

"I said when I was a coach that I had the best job in baseball with the Boston Red Sox. Now I guess I have the ultimate job."

ZIMMER, PROMOTED to interim manager July 19 when Darrell Johnson was fired, has brought some new life to the Red Sox. But he said the hardest job has been to jolt his players out of negative thinking.

"I had to get them out of the losing rut," he said. "We have won some games, but not as many as I figured."

Veteran slugger Carl Yastrzemski endorsed the front office decision to keep Zimmer for 1977, and said, "He's a daring, gambling son of a gun. I like his style of play.

"He displayed that in Sunday's game. I'm glad they didn't bring in anyone from outside the organization. Zimmer has been here for three years. He knows what the problems are."

NO MATTER where Boston finishes this season, the Red Sox who come back next year will know what fundamentals and concentration mean, especially in spring training.

"There'll be no going through the motions," Zimmer said. "If you don't work hard on a phase of the game like double plays or pickoffs, why work at all?"

Since taking over, Zimmer has compiled a 7-9 record, and taking three out of four from the division leadng New York Yankees over the weekend helped clinch the job for him.

In Sunday's game, Boston was behind New York by two runs in the ninth inning with put men on first and second. Zimmer ordered the hit-and-run. Bob Montgomery hit to the third baseman, but the only play he had was to first base — and that left two runners in scoring position. Boston wound up the inning, 5-4.

"IF IT didn't work, I'd be a bum, I suppose," said the manager. "But the next time I'd be a genius."

He added, "My way: I'm going to do things may way."

Three hours after Zimmer got tha telephone call Monday, he went out with the Red Sox and they beat the Cleveland Indians 3-1.

Midland Colts eliminated from tourney

CORPUS CHRISTI—Euless' Miller Mufflers eliminated the Midland Colts from the state National Baseball Congress tournament here Sunday, 3-1, behind the pitching of Don Welchel.

Welchel shut out the Colts until the ninth inning when Midland pushed across a run on singles by Luis Perez, Lupe Perez, and Jesse Benavides.

Euless got a run in the fourth and added two insurance tallies in the fifth.

Frank Rubia was the losing pitcher for the Colts. He was relieved by Randy Blanscett in the fifth.

MC signs two women players

A state champion from Abilene and a highly-ranked junior player from Perth, Western Australia, are the latest women recruits of Midland College tennis coach Neill McClung.

Signing with the national junior college champs were Abilene's Jana Hanks, the state interscholastic titlist the past two springs, and Jo Ann Hall, ranked second in Girls' 18 Singles and sixth in women's singles in Western Australia.

Hanks, who went through the 1976 state tournament without losing a set, is currently ranked fifth in the state in Girls' 18 Singles.

"We are really delighted to have Jana sign with us," McClung said. "She was one of the most sought-after players in the Southwest, receiving scholarship offers from major Texas schools as well as such out-of-state schools as the University of Michigan and the University of Nevada-Las Vegas."

McClung said the signings completed MC's recruiting for the year.

"We think we have signed outstanding players to replace those we lost this year and both our men's and women's teams should be as competitive as they were during the past season."

MC lost its entire women's team from last spring.

Other recruits include Susie Ingram, Abilene, UIL doubles champion and winner of three titles at the Midland Highway 80 tournament: Karen Schuchard, Abilene, ranked fifth in the state; Blanca Barriga, El Paso, ranked in the top ten in Texas singles: and Ann Layman, Perth, ranked fourth in Western Australia for Girls' 18 and Under singles.

The men's team which returns All-Americans Denis McKeown and Derek Edmonds, has signed Reg and Tony Luttrell, twins from Perth and ranked in the top ten among Western Australian juniors and Ron Cetrone of Houston.

Colombia provides major part of United States cocaine flood

By EDWARD SCHUMACHER
The Washington Post-Outlook

CHEMESQUEMENA, Colombia — In the morning, after the sun has finally risen above the surrounding mountains to melt the wet night chill, the mosquitoes come out.

They swarm everywhere, attacking bare flesh in the shade of the mud houses or in the sun of the dirt road that has wound, sometimes tenuously, up into this narrow mountain valley.

Ydang, inured to the mosquitoes, stops to buy a pound of sugar from a "civilizado," one of the white or mestizo Colombians who populate the village. He wears only one sandal but neither flinches nor slows as he pads out the far side of the village, fords a shallow river and strikes upward on the rocky path that for centuries has been beaten by Indians like him.

Ydang is happy because, this time, a buyer follows. The buyer has come to inspect his small plot of coca trees, for it is on mountains such as these, from Indians such as Ydang, that the illegal cocaine stream to the United States begins.

Colombia is the vital center of that stream, refining and smuggling about 70 per cent of the cocaine sold in the United States.

Most of the coca leaves processed here come from the Andean mountains in Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador. The immense profits, however, are also nurturing new cultivation in Colombia — and new problems for Colombian police.

Here in the Sierra Nevadas on the Caribbean coast and even more in the Andes in the southern part of the country, the scramble among growers and buyers is wide open.

It is that openness which allows the curious outsider, posing as a buyer, to penetrate this Andean Indian subculture.

After climbing three hours, through lush green mountain cuts and across bare grassy slopes, Ydang and the trudging buyer reach the Indian's isolated mud and thatch hut.

Broad-leaved plantain trees, scraggly coffee bushes and spindly yucca plants grow on the small plateau and immediate slopes surrounding the hut. These produce the basic food and cash crops for 30-year-old Ydang, his wife and three children.

An unexpected visitor, a white Colombian, has already arrived with his burro and is bargaining with Ydang's grandmother, an aged Medusa with hair that stands on end as if electrified. The visitor hikes in the mountains selling the crude, strong rum made from sugar cane in the village below.

He charges amost $1.50 a bottle, a lot of money here, but Ydang and his grandmother drink rum daily. They buy six bottles.

"It's not a bad business," the white man says as he packs his burro and departs, the beast trailing behind him.

Three months before, another white man had also come with a burro. He came to buy the leaves from the small stand of 15 coca trees, each about seven feet high, bordering on Ydang's dirt yard.

The white man will return in April, when the budding leaves are large enough for the trees again to be picked.

"I sell the leaves to anyone who wants to buy them," Ydang defiantly says to the prospective buyer.

"How much?"

"Twenty pesos for a hatful," the Indian says.

That is about 60 cents a pound, the amount held by the deep, traditional hat worn by the Arhuacos, Ydang's tribe.

Ydang's trees can produce about 50 pounds of leaves which, when processed in clandestine laboratories, will make about three ounces of near-pure cocaine. On the streets of North American cities, where the "coke" has been cut down to about 25 per cent pure, Ydang's leaves will reap about $34,000. Ydang will be paid $30.

For some reason of nature, the coca trees grow only in the Andes Mountains of South America, on the east and west slopes at altitudes between 2,000 and 8,000 feet, about the same altitudes as coffee.

The Indians in the Andes have long revered the coca leaves. At about the same rate that a heavy smokers, the men here in the Sierras chew wads of dried coca leaves mixed with finely powered seashells. The powder is carried in a dried gourd and licked off a stick.

The preparation of the leaves and the powder is traditionally a religious rite, the coca, or "hayo," trees being an important part of their nature worship. Chewing the leaves is reputed to impart sexual prowess and give a man the energy to walk for several days without feeling hungry, a feat often required of the mountain indians.

The dried leaves have a smoky, slightly bitter taste, but the seashell powder is sweet. The lime in the shells helps chemically to extract the drug from the leaves. The combination anaesthetizes the mouht mildly, almost like the deadeners used by dentists. At least for this novice, the mixture sets the head and stomach spinning.

Many traditional Indians still refuse to sell their leaves to smugglers. It is mainly Indians that live on the fringe of the "civilizados," Indians like Ydang, often corrupted by rum or feeling emasculated by the continuing invasion of what was once their land, who have turned to coca as an illegal cash crop.

Giving two to four harvests a year, it is one of the most prolific crops in Latin America.

"What we fear," Capt. Teodoro Campo, head of the elite narcotics bureau in the national police, said recently, "is that the cultivation will continue to expand, becoming more sophisticated and using better land, and then become basic to the economy of the Indians."

To make cocaine, the leaves are soaked in kerosene, potassium carbonate and water until a sediment similar to moist flour forms. This is usually done in large oil drums by the growers or smugglers near where the leaves are picked.

The paste is carried to clandestine laboratories, where it is chemically processed into a liquid or the concentrated white powder normally shipped and sold in the United States.

The laboratories are located mainly on the fringes of the large cities. They vary from simple amateur affairs to sophisticated operations employing professional chemists.

A police raid outside Cali, a pleasant city 200 miles west of Bogota, uncovered equipment which produced 100 pounds of cocaine in one batch and pressed it into fine sheets to be smuggled between pages in a book. The bust also netted a chemistry professor from a nearby university and a captain of the Cali fire department.

Then comes the smuggling. New York police, remembering the French connection in the heroin traffic, call Columbia "the Marseilles of cocaine."

The traffic is dominated by Colombians in disciplined syndicates. Some groups operate as underworld multinational corporations, vertically integrated from the clandestine laboratory in Colombia to the stateside distributors.

Almost all the syndicates are controlled by a single family, and while their sophistication falls short of the American mafia, they have layers of authority and codes of loyalty that protect their heads.

But the syndicates by no means hold a monopoly. Fortune-seeking small operators and adventurous youths, many of them Americans seeking to stake their vacations, crowd the traffic.

Wildcat rings of up to five members, usually smalltime operators in search of big money, form and fade and re-form. These rings may be Colombian, American, European or a mix. Their resources vary, but what most of their members have in common is criminal records.

The smuggling methods are ingenious. Frogmen haul in drops made by crewmen of ships as they pull into American harbors; private planes land in secret airfields in Florida; imported sugar in odd-lot bags is diluted; aerosol deodorant cans have false walls.

The bulk going northward is carried by one of the oldest methods, the syndicate runner. Appropriately called a "mula" (mule), he is usually a poor Colombian who has been handed a forged passport and often a student visa.

He runs the cocaine and the risk to earn $500 to $1,000 per kilo (2.2 pounds), a few sets of clothes and an expense-paid trip to a big city in the United States, usually New York, Miami or Los Angeles.

The mule carries from one to 20 kilos of cocaine in anything from his coat pockets to clothes soaked in a cocaine solution. One of the more bizarre methods is to fill a prophylactic with cocaine powder and swallow it. After passing through U.S. customs, the carrier vomits to retrieve the pouch.

Affidavits link Nixon to assassination plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Thomas N. Downing, D-Va., has released affidavits from two men who claim that in 1960 Richard M. Nixon, then vice president, approved a rightwing Cuban exile's plan for "elimination" of left-wing Cuban exiles after the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Downing said Monday he could not verify or vouch for the statements, which came from the son of a late anti-Castro leader and an American author who claims to have been a CIA contract employe.

But Downing said the statements raise the possibility that right-wing Cubans assassinated President John F. Kennedy in 1963 because they felt betrayed when Kennedy withheld U.S. air support during the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion in April 1961.

Downing said he does not personally believe Nixon agreed to any assassination of leftist exiles in the United States. "I don't think that was intended by Mr. Nixon. I believe he only intended to turn them over" to right-wing leader Mario Kohly, the congressman said.

An attempt to reach Nixon for comment at his home in San Clemente, Calif., was unsuccessful.

But in Miami, attorney Ellis Rubin, who said he represents the Bay of Pigs Brigade and Watergate and ex-CIA figure E. Howard Hunt, said that, "This allegation is absolutely false."

Downing has been campaigning for nearly two years for creation of a House committee to investigate the Kennedy assassination.

Kennedy assumed full responsibility for the U.S. role behind the Bay of Pigs invasion, but planning for the operation began during the Eisenhower administration when Nixon was vice president.

The two sworn statements were made recently by Mario Kohly Jr. and Robert Morrow, author of a fictional account of the Bay of Pigs.

Downing's office said Morrow brought both statements on his own to the congressman.

Morrow said Kohly told him a week after meeting with Nixon in October 1960 "that an agreement had been reached between he (Kohly) and the vice president for the elimination of Miro Cardona and all the leftist Cuban Revoluntionary Front leaders in order that Kohly could immediately take over the reins of power in Cuba once a successful invasion by exiles being trained by the CIA had been accomplished."

Morrow quoted Kohly as saying the agreement was made in return for his pledge to support the invasion with underground forces inside Cuba.

Kohly's son said:

"I was told that Vice President Nixon had agreed to the elimination of the leftist-approved Cuban Revolutionary Front leaders at time when the island would be invaded by the exile troops..."

Ford names two Texans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford today appointed six members of the Board for International Food and Agricultural Development.

They are James J. O'Connor of Houston, Tex., a food marketing consultant; Anson R. Bertrans, Lubbock, Tex., dean of the College of Agriculture at Texas Tech Univversity; Charles A. Krause of Milwaukee, president of Krause Milling Co.; Orville G. Bentley of Urbana, Ill., dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Illinois; Gerald W. Charges filed in stabbing

Charges were filed Monday against Jerry Olgin Ramirez, 23, of 1207 E. Estes Ave., for attempted murder in connection with a stabbing incident Sunday morning.

Ramirez is accused of stabbing Jose Rubio at Mulberry Lane and Lincoln Street around 8 a.m. Sunday.

Bond for Ramirez was set at $15,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Lenorah man held in shooting

Tomas Gomez Salozar, 39, of Lenorah, was charged Monday for attempted murder in connection with the shooting of Lupe Hinojosa.

Salozar is accused of shooting Hinojosa Monday morning at the 400 block of North Lamesa Road.

Bond for Salozar was set at $15,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Nomination changes lifestyle in Plains, Ga.

By HELEN DEWAR
The Washington Post

PLAINS, Ga. — Across Main Street from Hugh Carter's worm farm office, down the block from Billy Carter's office at the peanut warehouse, a newspaper reporter was interviewing townsfolk who were photographing television cameramen who were filming the event of the day: the dismantling of an old water tower.

Jimmy Carter's hometown is like that these days, an ordinary little Southern town caught in the middle of a national political spectacular, loving every minute of it but fearing its effect on a way of life that is simple and fragile.

The daily run of tourists now easily outnumbers Plains' 683 residents and the out-of-towners eagerly pay inflated prices for everything from bronzed peanuts to Carter T-shirts, scarves and handbags. The post office is getting an electronic canceling machine and there is talk of installing traffic lights in town and extending the grass runway at the airport.

There is now a bus tour of 40 "points of interest" in Plains, including "the places Jimmy lived ... Jimmy's first public service project ... picturesque churches ... (his daughter) Amy's school ... world's largest worm farm ... location of Jimmy's treehouse, "—all for $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children.

"Plains is not on the way to anywhere. If you come here, you gotta want to come to Plains," said Billy Carter, 38, who runs the Carter family peanut business, one of the town's economic mainstays.

"I like Plains the way it is, the way it's always been," said Billy Carter, who confesses to mixed feelings about the impact on his hometown of his brother's political success in becoming the Democratic presidential noimnee. "I doubt it will ever be the same again," he added emphatically.

Jimmy Carter clings to Plains, too, returning there for weekends during his primary election campaigining and now ensconced in his comfortable ranch-style brick and frame home mapping plans for the fall campaign. Meanwhile, Plains' citizens are coping as best they can with the hundreds of reporters, photographers, Secret Service agents and tourists who are disrupting the town's normal slow pace.

It is said that some folks here don't like Carter, but they don't speak up. Jimmy Carter is a community project, a civic crusade.

Plains — looking like a Norman Rockwell creation on an old Saturday Evening Post cover — straddles the Seaboard Coast Line Railway and Georgia State Rt. 280 about 130 miles south of Atlanta.

Surrounded by neatly cultivated, gently rolling fields of corn and peanuts that are studded with stately magnolia, pecan and pine trees, Plains bears the imprint of its founding as a railroad town in the 1890s, when an existing community was uprooted and moved to this site.

The town — about 60 per cent white and 40 per cent black — hasn't changed much since then.

The schools and other public facilities are racially mixed, and blacks joined as freely as whites in celebrating Carter's primary election victories at the old train station that has been recycled into Carter's local campaign headquarters.

But otherwise life remains almost as segregated and socially stratified as it was generations ago, according to black and white residents — many of whom, like the Carters, trace their roots in south Georgia at least 200 years.

Although Americus, 10 miles away, was the scene of violent confrontations during the civil rights struggles of the 1960s, Plains escaped.

When moves were made to desegregate churches in nearby communities, leaders of the Plains Baptist Church became alarmed. At the height of the drive, the pastor at the time and 11 of the 12 deacons met and resolved to bar blacks if they sought to enter. The one absent deacon was the area's state senator, Jimmy Carter, whose fledgling peanut business had already endured a boycott because of his refusal to join the White Citizens' Council.

When the issue came to a vote of the congregation, Carter decided to speak out. "He got up," his mother, Lillian, recalled recently, "and said, 'This is not my house, nor is it your house. This is God's house, and I for one will never, I will never, stand on the steps and try to keep anyone out.'"

One other member of the congregation joined the Carter family in opposing the move to station deacons at the door to stop blacks who, as it turned out, never came. The membership of the church is still all-white, although Carter subsequently brought a black state trooper and a black Secret Service agent with him to Sunday services.

Plains has six churches (three white, three black), two gas stations (Billy Carter's and one owned by the Carters' business rivals, the Williams family), and a row of nine store-fronts that resemble a Hollywood stage setting for Dodge City or Cheyenne.

There is a white-owned grocery and a more recently established black-owned grocery, behind which is tucked a tiny tavern called the Skylight Night Club, patronized by the black community. The equivalent social center for whites is Billy Carter's gas station.

There is on restaurant though an old building is being renovated into one, no motel and no funeral establishment.

Aside from "downtown," Plains is a mix of Victorian houses, neatly kept bungalows, decrepit shacks and new, ranch-style homes attesting to a growing middle class — and the subsidized value of the peanut. Unemployment was never so high in Plains as it was in surrounding Sumter County, where it hit 14.5 per cent in May, 1975, before dropping to about 8 per cent earlier this summer, officials said.

Symbolic of Plains' future, the new water tower on the outskirts of town has become a transmission point for the three television networks, which have installed sophisticated, expensive equipment for videotape feeding directly to New York.

Two die in Fort Worth shooting spree

—AP Laserphoto

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Gunfire killed two persons and wounded two others gravely shortly before 1 a.m. today at the West Fort Worth mansion of millionaire Thomas Cullen Davis, police reported.

Officers said they found Davis' car at the home of a friend about two hours later, called on him by loudspeaker to give up, and he stepped forth to surrender after a few minutes. He was held without immediate charge.

Authorities identified the dead as Stan Farr, operator of a country music club and a former Texas Christian University basketball star, and Andrea Davis, 12. They said both had been living at the mansion.

Hospital attendants listed the wounded as Priscilla Davis, 35, shot in the abdomen, and Gus "Bubba" Gavrel, 21, hit in the left side of the chest.

Associates told police that Priscilla Davis, mother of Andrea, has been in the process of divorcing Cullen Davis. He is president of Stratoflex, Inc., and heir to a fortune built by his father Ken Davis in a giant business complex named Ken Davis Industries.

Investigators said they were told Cullen Davis has another home several miles distant from the secluded mansion, distinguished by modern architecture and sitting well away from the street on a wooded, 140-acre tract.

Police related these details:

Bev Bass, a friend of Mrs. Davis' daughter Dee, 18, frantically hailed a security guard before 1 a.m. outside the big house. She was quoted as saying that a man had shot her boy friend and three other persons and tried to kill her before taking cover on the grounds.

A family friend later said Miss Bass and Gavrel were fired on as they returned to the house in a car. Miss Bass was a guest there. Dee Davis was not at home.

Clifford Jones, a retired businessman, subsequently told investigators that Mrs. Davis, bleeding and scantily clad, ran half a mile to his front door and pleaded for help.

Jones said that Mrs. Davis cried out that a man was "killing everybody."

Ambulance drivers Daniel Bruner and Thomas Southhall said Mrs. Davis related while en route to the hospital that she fled after a gunman at the mansion "put on a black wig and started shooting all my kids — he went wild!"

Bruner quoted the wounded woman as saying her attacker tried to force everyone into the basement of the mansion, which is said to be guarded heavily by private security men and dogs.

Miss Bass said a gunman emerged from the house as she and Gavrel approached in a car, and they thought he was a burglar until he started shooting at them.

He hit Gavrel, she said, and tried to shoot her, giving chase as she fled on foot.

"I've known him for years," recounted Miss Bass as police sought to quiet her, "and then I saw the look on his face as he chased me, trying to shoot me. I've never been so freaked out in my life! Can you imagine someone shooting your boy friend? I ran down the field barefoot."

Farr, a 6-foot-9 native of Texarkana, Tex., was a Texas Christian basketball star in the middle 1960s. He later became owner of a now defunct night spot and more recently managed a country music club named the Rhinestone Cowboy.

Flood toll could climb to 200

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — Searchers switched from recovering the living to looking for the dead today in devastated Big Thompson Canyon, where officials said the death toll from a flash flood could climb far higher than the 77 known fatalities.

Larimer County Sheriff Robert Watson said the death figure could reach 200.

"Who knows what's buried in all this silt? Some farmer will dig down in his corn patch some day and find a body," the sheriff said.

Flying close to the craggy canyon walls, military helicopter pilots Monday evening ferried to safety all remaining survivors who wanted to leave. The popular Colorado Rockies vacation spot had been turned into a death trap by a torrential downpour Saturday night.

"Some survivors refused to leave their mountain homes," Watson said. "They were in good shape and thought they could do more good where they were."

Besides the 77 confirmed dead, authorities said 260 persons were injured, an estimated 559 were unaccounted for, and the search for the dead was just beginning.

Officials said the 12-foot wall of water unleashed by the flood was so powerful that many of the dead were found with their bodies stripped of clothing. One body was found 15 miles downstream from the canyon mouth.

"All the bodies will never be recovered," said Watson, who earlier had refused to estimate how high the death toll might reach, saying he feared public "panic and hysteria."

President Ford declared the 2,700-square mile county a federal disaster area Monday, making local residents eligible for federal relief assistance.

But Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm said it would take three years and $10 million just to rebuild U.S. 34, the once-scenic route that wound 30 miles down the canyon from Estes Park east to Loveland. The road ran beside the Big Thompson River, and little remained of it.

Monday's evacuation flights brought to 1,000 the number of persons lifted from the canyon since the airlift started early Sunday morning. More flights were planned as a precaution. Helicopter pilots said they were so busy dodging other helicopters in the canyon that they might have overlooked someone.

As the survivors emerged from helicopters at a landing zone here, ground crews scurried in white jackets to meet them. They were taken by bus to an evacuation center at Loveland High School, where the personal tales unfolded.

Nancy Witte, 30, Fort Yukon, Alaska, said the area near the Rocky Mountain National Park looked like "the creation of the world before roads were put in, before bridges were put in, before anything was put in."

Others emerging grimy and mud-soaked reported that communities along the winding stretch of scenic canyon — Drake, Glen Comfort, Cedar Grive, Modway and Glen Haven — were transformed into piles of debris and mud.

For some of the survivors at the evacuation center, there were joyous reunions with loved ones. For others, the waiting continued, another 24 hours gone and still no word.

Phyllis Conley, her face grim and strained, waited to learn the fate of her husband, a policeman from Colorado Springs, Colo.

"I think it's just a matter of time," she said. "Unless circumstances completely overwhelmed him, he's up there."

The more than 50 bodies that had been recovered were brought to makeshift morgues, where the grim task of identification had barely begun. At least 20 other bodies had been spotted in the canyon but had not been recovered.

Only a few of the dead had been identified by nightfall. They included four members of a national Crusade for Christ retreat at Estes Park. Thirty members of the group had been rescued. Three more were still listed as missing.

Although the weather improved over Big Thompson Canyon on Monday, officials were worried about two other areas of the state also hard hit by thunderstorms.

Officials ordered the evacuation of about 1,000 residents of the Poudre Canyon, northwest of Loveland, and flash flood warnings were issued for parts of southeast Colorado, where some minor flooding was reported along the Greenhorn and Fountain rivers.

First dead identified

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — The following are listed as among the persons killed in Saturday's flash flood in Big Thompson Canyon near here, officials said.

1. W. Hugh Purdy, 53, a member of the Colorado State Patrol.
2. Carol L. Rhoad, 23, Grantsville, Pa., a member of a national Campus Crusade for Christ Retreat.
3. Rae Ann Johnston, 28, Crystal, N.D., a member of the crusade.
4. Cathie M. Loomis, 29, Seattle, a member of the crusade.
5. Pressy Manongdo, about 25, The Philippines, a member of the crusade.

THE PROJECTION BUILDING of the Old Cactus Drive-In at Odessa burns in what was supposed to be a fire practice for the Odessa Fire Department. The fire department was reprimanded by the Environmental Protection Agency for allowing the building to burn completely. Odessa Fire Chief Jack Childress said the fire department wanted to test some new chemicals after the intensity of the fire had lessened.

Mystery deaths up; experts seek cause

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Medical researchers today sought to identify an unknown, flu-like disease which in the past four days has brought death to 16 persons who attended a state American Legion convention. Health officials said there was no cause for panic.

Public health officials said the outbreak, which has sent at least 50 other people to the hospital, may be the result of swine flu. They said that they could not now make a firm diagnosis, suggesting viral pneumonia as another possible cause.

The ages of the dead ranged from 39 to 82. At least one death has been recorded officially as pneumonia. Autopsies have been ordered in many of the deaths.

All of the victims experienced the same symptoms: headaches, fever ranging to 107 degrees and chills. These were followed, in most cases, by chest pains, lung congestion and shortness of breath.

"I've never seen anything like it," said state Health Secretary Leonard Bachman.

Blood samples and throat swabbings from the victims were sent to state health laboratories in Philadelphia and flown to the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta for tests.

It will take two to three days to grow cultures from the samples. These cultures could lead to identification of the disease.

Cases of the illness were reported throughout the state. All the persons affected attended the three-day Legion convention in Philadelphia that ended July 24. The first reports of illness came last Monday; the first death last Friday. It was the mounting death toll Monday that alarmed public health officials.

Bachman was asked if it could be swine flu. "That's a possibility," he said. "We're trying to pin it down, but we don't know right now. But there's no reason to panic, everyone should realize that."

More than one million people from throughout the world are gathered in Philadelphia this week for the Roman Catholic International Eucharistic Congress. Congress officials said they had no plan to curtail activities.

The Center for Disease Control, an arm of the U.S. Public Health Service, dispatched a three-man medical investigative team to Pennsylvania. Two other virus experts from the CDC were already in the state.

Dr. Michael Gregg, director of the center's Viral Disease Division, said the symptoms reported by victims are similar to influenza, but it was too early, he said, to say whether it was swine flu.

One recruit died when several hundred soldiers at Fort Dix, N.J., contracted swine flu early this year. The outbreak prompted plans for a nationwide immunization campaign this fall. The program is bogged down on issues of insurance protection for the drug companies producing the vaccine for immunization.

Most of those stricken in Pennsylvania were delegates to the Legion convention, although some wives and children who attended with delegates have also fallen ill.

Wounded evacuated

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An International Red Cross convoy finally got through to the besieged Tal Zaatar Palestinian refugee camp today to evacuate wounded from the Moslem enclave in Christian east Beirut, Moslem and Christian radio stations reported.

The Moslems' Beirut radio reported the first evacuee was brought out just before noon and several more followed soon after.

A Palestinian spokesman said 91 wounded were taken out on stretchers within the first three hours. But a Red Cross spokesman in Geneva said 47 wounded Palestinians were evacuated. Neither figure could be independently confirmed.

The Palestinian spokesman claimed Red Cross workers came under Christian sniper fire just as the rescue mission was getting under way, but Christian spokesmen denied the charge.

They love busing at Klondike school

KLONDIKE—People like James Logan must get a huge laugh out of the hassles going on in Boston and Dallas about the question of school busing.

Logan is superintendent of the 325-student Klondike school system that would have vanished years ago if it hadn't been for the big yellow vehicles that gather the "sweathogs" from one of the larger school districts in the state—604 square miles.

Lamesa Press-Reporter Editor Stephen Henry took time out from destroying bacon and eggs at the neighborhood breakfast in Lamesa's Forrest "Lake" last weekend to tell me about the little school with the big territory, and I detoured through the cotton patches to see the old-fashioned rural school for myself.

(And talk about cotton: I passed through more boll weevil banquet halls than I saw from Mississippi to the Carolinas and Florida on a Dixie trip three years ago.)

Of course, there are two or three pumpjacks scenically situated in the middle of most cotton and grain fields hereabout, which go a long way toward buying blackboards and buses for a school surrounded by cotton wagons instead of residences. But Dawson County claims to be the Number One cotton producing county in Texas, and that white stuff buys lots of blackboards too.

The Klondike system ranges from near Lamesa to Stanton and over into Martin County and serves areas formerly in the Union and Flower Grove Districts, which were "consolidated out" in 1971 and '73 respectively. The building at Flower Grove houses kindergarten through fifth graders, and the Klondike campus serves sixth graders through high schoolers.

They play Class B sports, and a trophy case in the hall is a testimonial to the caliber of the Klondike Cougars.

The longest bus route is about 130 miles a day, and the district saves money on fuel and bus wear by having some of the drivers take school-owned cars home after depositing the scholars and the gas-eating buses at the school.

Is everybody satisfied with a little school in a great big cotton patch?

The school board voted last week to seek a $995,000 bond issue in an election Aug. 24, for an auditorium, cafeteria, and renovation of some classrooms, and my guess is it will be approved easily by the 145 voters who made their marks in the last election and their peers.

Supt. Logan, in his fourth year at Klondike, is, typically, for schoolmen talking money, noncommital.

But the folks who own and work in all those cotton patches have gone out of their way a long time to maintain their neighborhood school—and a pleasant, efficient site it seemed during my brief visit—and a million dollars, more or less, seems little enough for a fine school reflecting local values with bus routes of no more than 130 miles a day...

Burglars take cash, stereo from house

Burglars boke into the residence of Patricia Traylor, 1624 E. Magnolia, Monday and took a total of $770 worth of merchandise.

Taken in the burglary was a stereo valued at $270, two coin banks containing $50 worth of coins, a wedding ring valued at $150 and a shoe box containing $220.

Entry into the residence was gained by opening a south bedroom window, police said.

Traylor told the police that the burglars were familiar with the residence because they knew where the shoebox containing the money was hidden.

STEREO, RECORDS TAKEN

Burglars also took a stereo, records and tapes valued at $350 from the residence of Wanda Kendrick, 1200 E. Spruce Ave., Monday.

Entry to the residence was gained by forcing a back door on the south side of the residence open, police said.

A south bathroom Window was also found open, and Kendrick told police that the window was closed when she left home earlier. Nothing else was reported missing, police said.

WOMAN INJURED

Lola Mae Blair, 52, of 4405 Storey Ave., was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released after she was injured in an auto accident about 3:15 p.m. Monday at the intersection of Ohio Avenue and Andrews Highway.

Police said Mrs. Blair was injured when a car driven by her husband and a car driven by Boots Johnston, 3309 Shandon Ave., collided.

Blair was headed east on Ohio, and Johnston was going north on Andrews, when the accident occurred. The Blair vehicle and a car driven by Mrs. J. C. McNatt, 2501 Terrace Ave., which was stopped at a red light on Ohio, also collided, police said.

BICYCLIST INJURED

James Richard Parker, 10, of 906 W. Michigan Ave., was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released after the bicycle he was riding and a car driven by Gary Dean Bolding, 2601 N. A. riding and a car driven by Gary Dean Bolding, 2601 N. A. collided Monday afternoon.

Police said Bolding was backing from his driveway when the two vehicles collided.

THREE FIRES REPORTED

A house occupied by Carolyn Lovell, 610 S. Loraine St., was heavily damaged by fire Monday night.

The cause of the fire was a cigarette burning on the couch. Damage was heavy to living room with smoke damage throughout the house, fireman said.

A truck fire at 507 E. Front St. was reported Monday afternoon. Cause of the fire was a short in the electrical wiring. Damage to the truck, which was owned by Harold Long, was minor.

A city trash dumpster at 1306 S. Mineola St. sustained minor damage from a fire Monday morning. Cause of the fire was unknown, the firemen said.

Dawson goal set at $44,500

LAMESA — The Dawson County United Way has adopted a campaign goal of $44,500 for 1976-77.

The board of directors of the United Way accepted the budget committee's recommendations, readmitting the Family Planning while rejecting the Texas Association for Mental Health due to lack of evidence that it benefited Dawson County.

Family Planning was admitted on the condition that they keep records of clients.

The Salvation Army was retained only on the condition that they not conduct a separate fund raising drive in the county.

This year's goal is $3,100 larger than last year's, which was $41,000. Requests submitted by the various agencies totaled $57,490.

Under the adopted budget, the Boys Club will receive $17,010, the Senior Citizens $3,000, the Boys Scouts $5,000 Red Cross $2,500, the Girl Scouts $5,000, Salvation Army $3,000, Day Care Center $4,300, Southwestern Diabetic Foundation $390 and Family Planning $1,500.

About $2,800 is allocated for administration expenses.

The board also voted to have the Advance Division Kickoff on Sept. 29 with the main Kickoff set for Oct. 7.

Car air bag hearings begin in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — How far should the government go to protect motorists who refuse to protect themselves?

That is a key question to be resolved by Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr. as he opens hearings today on proposals to require installation of air bags in new cars.

Coleman has promised to decide before the end of the year whether the government will require that air bags be built into new cars.

Currently, the government requires auto makers to provide seat and lap belts, so-called passive restraints such as air bags, which require no driver initiative, or a combination of the two. Almost all auto makers offer the seat and lap belts, but General Motors has sold about 6,000 luxury cars with optional air bags in the past two years.

Coleman previously said he could decide to continue the present law while testing air bags or other versions of passive restraint systems or while requiring states to pass laws requiring use of seat belts. Or, he said, he could change the law to require all new cars to have air bags or some other passive restraint system, or to require auto makers to offer passive restraint systems on some new car models.

Coleman acknowledged in announcing the public hearing that he not only must wrestle with problems of cost, effectiveness and possible hazards of passive restraints, but with the philosophical question of how far the government should go in protecting the public.

Air bags automatically inflate when sensors on the front of the car signal a crash is occurring. A small explosive charge pushes the bag out of the dash or steering wheel and inflates it, providing a pillow to catch occupants and keep them from flying into the windshield. The bags inflate in less than one twenty-fifth of a second.

Proponents of air bags, including most insurance companies, say air bags are needed because motorists will not use the seat belts already in their cars. The government says only about one-third of all drivers use seat belts. Mandatory seat belt laws would increase this figure, proponents say, but would never be as effective as air bags.

Opponents, including auto makers, say bags are unreliable and expensive and that requiring the use of seat belts would offer the same protection at less cost. Auto makers say the cost of the bags — estimated by the government at just over $100 and by auto makers at more than $300 — would discourage new car buyers.

If Coleman rules in favor of air bags, the first new cars equipped with them are likely to be 1980 models.

Government safety experts believe as many as 9,000 lives per year could be saved and 500,000 serious injuries averted if all cars were equipped with passive restraints. More than 30,000 people die each year in highway accidents.

Housing board sets meeting

The Midland Housing Authority will convene in regular session at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the council chamber at city hall to consider a short agenda.

Vice chairman Gene Abbott will present a report on the negotiations with architects to perform inspection services for the authority on its $2 million housing project.

A contract with the Department of Housing and Urban Development for the housing project for the elderly and handicapped was approved by the authority last month. The project will be located at Scharbauer Drive and Pecos Street, with Pierce, Pace and Associates of Midland as architects And developers of the project. Ground was to be broken this afternoon for the housing project.

The housing authority also will consider approval of a contract with Jimmie E. Leath of Midland for the inspection services for its turnkey project. The turnkey project is another name for the housing authority's $2 million housing project at Scharbauer Drive and Pecos Street.

Rain possible for Basin area

Rain may again come to the Permian Basin tonight or Wednesday.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal gives the area a 30 per cent chance of rain tonight and a 20 per cent chance Wednesday.

Otherwise, weather is expected to be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms. The low tonight should be in the upper 60s with a high Wednesday in the low 90s. Winds are predicted to be between 10 and 20 mph from the southeast tonight.

Today's low was 65 degrees and Monday's high was 94 degrees.

Area weather this morning was warm with little wind. Lamesa reported partly cloudy weather but other cities reported clear skies.

Flooding rain blocked a stretch of highway for a time as menacing thunderstorms pounded parts of West and Central Texas today.

At the same time light rain fell in the Texas Panhandle and thundershowers stirred the Gulf of Mexico east of Texas' Coastal Bend, The Associated Press reported.

Accumulated rainfall halted traffic temporarily on Interstate 20 near Merkel, 20 miles west of Abilene in West Central Texas, and a flash flood warning was posted in that area for a time.

During the night a tornado funnel spun overhead about 2 miles east of Merkel. There as no word of any damage.

Some of the heavier storms concentrated in an area embracing points near Abilene, Breckenridge and Rising Star.

Temperatures mounted as high as 99 degrees Monday at such widely separated points as Alice, Cotulla and Waco. The range early today was from 77 at Austin, McAllen and Waco down to 62 at Dalhart.

Midland man supports bid by Southwest

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An independent geologist from Midland was one of 10 public witnesses called by Southwest Airlines in support of its application before the Texas Aeronautics Commission to expand its passenger service throughout the state.

Bruse Pearson, a geologist and private pilot, agreed with other Southwest witnesses, testifying that current commercial air fares don't usually attract his business on the trips he makes around the state — and that he often ends up driving to business appointments rather than flying.

Southwest is proposing to service Midland-Odessa, Austin, Corpus Christi, Lubbock and El Paso, in addition to its current routes to Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and Harlingen.

Pearson said he would be especially interested in routes to Houston and Austin from Midland, which he and his family would fly frequently for pleasure trips.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner John White also testified Monday in favor of the application, saying that Southwest's proposed fares to the Rio Grande Valley from Austin would cut his department's travel expenses in half and reduce travel time spent by state employes on trips to South Texas.

Witnesses from Harlingen, South Padre Island and Lubbock also testified Monday in support of the application. Tuesday's public witnesses are scheduled to include State Sen. Rep. John Hoestenback of Odessa.

"We would like very much to tap that lucrative MidlandOdessa and Lubbock market," said John Austin, mayor of South Padre Island.

Terry Wimmer, president of the Texas Tech University Student Association, presented the Texas Aeronautics Commission examner with a petition from Tech students and a resolution from the student senate in support of the Southwest application.

White spoke in support of extending Southwest's flights to Austin. "About 10 per cent of the agriculture income of the state comes from the Valley and we have many department workers there," White said.

"Now it is a three-day trip for me to go to the Valley or them to come to Austin. It takes a day going and coming and another day for the meeting. If Southwest had a flight we could do it in one day and certainly would use it. We'd see to it our employes flew Southwest."

Planners delay request

By DEBBIE PIERCE

The Midland Planning and Zoining Commission deliberated almost 45 minutes Monday on a zone change request before agreeing to recess the matter until its next session Aug. 16.

The request, by Garth Neill of 3301 W. Cuthbert St., was to change the zoning at that location from single-family to local retail.

Neill told the commission that area "is not a good area for a residence." He cited the noise and danger from the increased traffic on Midkiff Road and his hope of receiving more from the property if it were zoned local retail, should he decide to sell it, as reasons for the request.

Wayne Kohout of 3305 W. Cuthbert St. agreed the area is not very good for residences, but said he was against the change because of its effect on nearby residences. He suggested the commission take on a comprehensive plan for the zoning of that area, considering a larger section in the zoning and maintaining a buffer zone between the retail and residential areas.

City planning director Richard Hennessy said there was "no good way to handle this situation," as problems would arise in where to cut off that type of zoning. He said an office district zoning, but the city panning department was concerned with the change's effect on the remaining property.

Hennessy also suggested the area could be zoned as a planned district, whereby the structure would maintain its appearance as a residence, signs and lighting could be controlled and parking could be in the rear.

Commissioner George Veloz then suggested a recess for two weeks so the planning staff could study the possibility of zoning this lot and the two lots to the west as a planned district. Neill agreed to the recess, and it was approved unanimously by the commission.

The zoning commission also approved a request by Pierce, Pace and Associates for a zone change from local retail to planned district in the 800 block of Scharbauer Drive for the Midland Housing Authority's $2 million housing project for the elderly and handicapped.

The request was originally for a change to multiple-family zoning but was changed to planned district by the commission because of the project's projected density.

Ground was to be broken at the project site this afternoon.

In other action, the commission:

— Tabled consideration of a preliminary plat of the Gamblin Addition Subdivision at 1100 Midland Drive, as no one was present to represent the request;

— Agreed to recommend to city council approval of a preliminary plat of Office Plaza at A-1 Mobile Homes on U.S. 80 west for construction of an office plaza for professional clientele; and,

— Agreed to recommend to city council approval of a preliminary plat of the Plunk Addition on Garden City Highway for construction of warehouse.

Mystery disease claims 16

tended the convention. Bachman said the number of dead and sick in the outbreak will not be known until a statewide hospital-by-hospital survey is finished.

All the deaths were in Pennsylvania, with the exception of one Philadelphia man who died in North Carolina during a postconvention trip to Florida.

"In the few households we have contacted, we have found no secondary spread to family members," said Dr. William Parkin, chief of the state Health Department's epidemiology section. "That may be the exception rather than the rule as we get more information.

"I can't say there will be transmissions from American Legionnaires to people they are in contact with. We have not had any cases like that yet."

The convention was headquartered at one of Philadelphia's largest hotels although delegates stayed in at least six different hotels. There were fears of food poisoning, but that was ruled out. The symptoms were not similar to those of food poisoning.

Legion officials and state health officers urged any persons with the symptoms of the disease to contact a hospital.

"We're worried about the people who may be carrying around this disease and not know it," said Joseph Adams, commander of the state American Legion.

Richard Dolan, 42, was the only survivor of a threesome from the central Pennsylvania community of Williamstown that attended the convention. His cousin, James Dolan, 39, and John Ralph, 41, both died.

Like the other two men, Richard Dolan became ill after the convention. However, he said he suffers from a chronic condition and was taking antibiotics while he was in Philadelphia.

Small company questions majors' high payments for gas

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A small town gas company spokesman, who has some wells of his own, says it's hard for him to understand why the big companies pay so much for gas.

Testimony continues today before Texas Railroad Commissioner John Camp, who is hearing evidence on the practice of passing 100 per cent of a gas purchase costs to consumers.

"I really can't understand why a company such as Lone Star or Lo-Vaca seeks such high adjustments when their real problem is not watching their gas purchases," said Sid Sers of Brady Municipal Gas Corp.

Sers said his utility company was buying gas for about $1 per 1,000 cubic feet (mcf) while the giants were paying from $1.50 to $1.90.

Gas company witnesses said it would be unrealistic to expect their firms to stay in business if they couldn't recover their costs. Some other witnesses, however, said the passthroughs often operated as a "rip-off" and could be manipulated unfairly against consumers.

"Pass-throughs are not a total evil, but public confidence is not going to be kept by permitting flow-throughs and putting the public at the mercy of the good judgment and acumen of the gas industry," said Port Arthur City Atty. George Wikoff.

Irving City Atty. Don Rorschach said the commission has proven it is not looking out for consumers by going eight months, thus far, without deciding on complaints that Lone Star Gas Co. was overcharging customers in his area through fuel adjustment charges.

Allowing automatic gas cost adjustments on consumers' bills is "proof positive the regulatory agency is abdicating its responsibility to regulate rates," Rorschach said.

Thomas E. Taylor, director of public utilities for Dallas, said passthroughs should be limited to 85 per cent and should not include advances and prepayments.

He said the commission should stop allowing inclusion of advances and prepayments— originally designed to encourage drilling of new gas wells— in calculating rates.

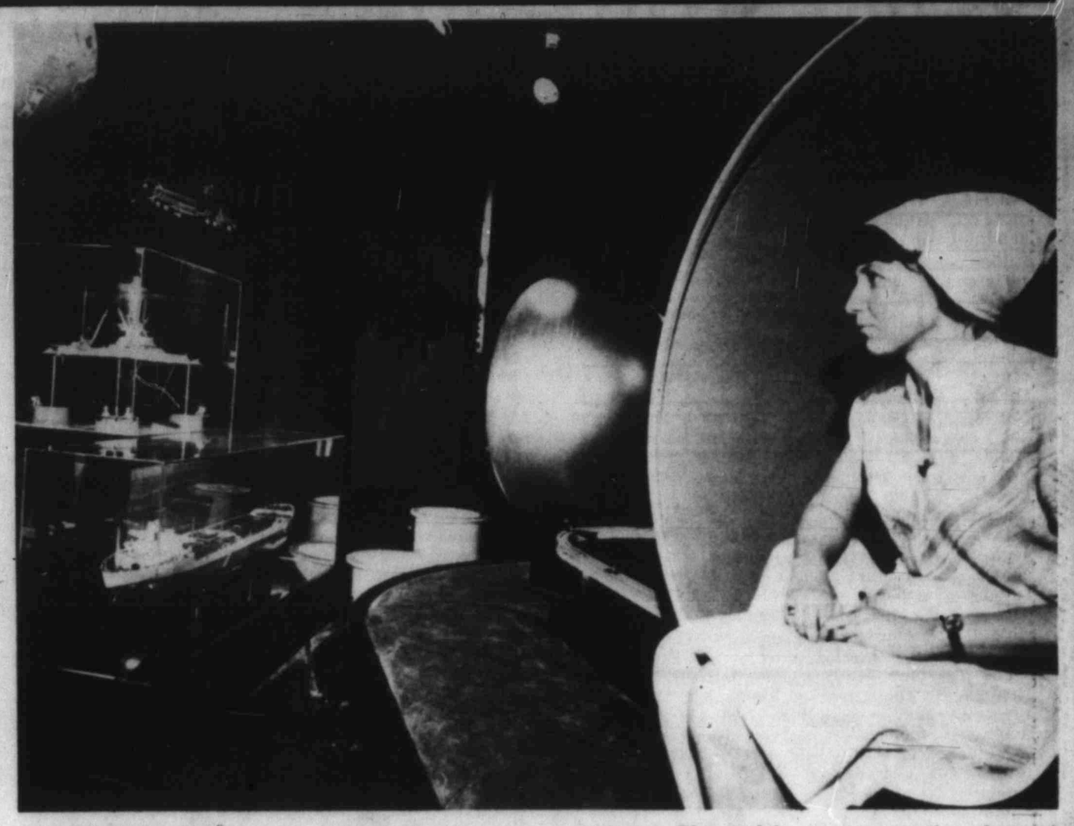
Today's high prices are sufficient to encourage drilling, Taylor said.

"Other institutions are available to provide loans to producers to finance the drilling of wells. If gas utilities want to engage in the loan business, the customer should not bear any expense associated therewith," Taylor said.

Bruce Rigler, a Plainview farmer and dairyman and vicepresident of the Plains Irrigation Gas Users Association, said Pioneer Gas, his area's supplier, has control over its market. Farmers, however, do not, he said.

He predicted that if the gas used to power irrigation pumps in his area continues to rise at its present rate of three cents per 1,000 cubic feet (mcf) per month, "most everyone in our area would go out of business in 24 months."

And if the Panhandle and South Plains reverts to dry land farming, "the cost of food in Texas and the rest of the United States would go up tremendously," he said.



SCALE MODELS OF a giant offshore oil platform, supertanker, and tank truck show three vital elements in the chain of operations which brings oil from beneath the earth's crust to the American consumer. The models occupy a portion of one of the 10 exhibit chambers of the new petroleum exhibit presented to the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago by Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

Petroleum exhibit new part of Chicago's science museum

CHICAGO, Ill. — The new petroleum exhibit, which literally transports visitors into a world of energy and petroleum,opened at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry Monday.

The 8,700-square-foot exhibit was presented to the museum by the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

One year of planning and designing and six months of construction were necessary to complete the $1.2-million exhibit.

Highlighting the exhibit is a unique conveyor transport for visitors. A highly complex timing system activates each of 23 exhibit sections as museum-goers ride past in individual hemisphere-shaped pods, each wired for sound.

A 650-foot-long articulated slat conveyor, the longest in the world, carries visitors on their 10-minute trip through the exhibit, the only one of its kind anywhere.

The colorful exhibit units show how oil and gas were formed and describe modern methods of recovering these resources. The thousands of uses for petroleum in daily life, the need to conserve energy, and the search for new energy sources all are explained in dramatic displays.

More than a thousand miles of wire, 6,000 lights, 30,000 moving parts, 300 slides, and 10 tons of plastic, wood, metal, and Plexiglas went into the construction of the exhibit, which was designed by Sphere Inc. of Chicago.

In addition to the unique transport system, the exhibit includes several popular features from the previous petroleum exhibit which had been at the museum since 1968.

Visitors can win a souvenir medallion if they "strike oil" at an oil rig. A fractionating tower illustrates the many products derived from petroleum, and a rolling mill bearing weighing 4,834 pounds can be turned with just one finger because it rests on a film of oil only .012 inches thick.

Other exhibit units allow visitors to test for themselves the properties and characteristics of oil and other petroleum products.

The exhibit can be visited during museum hours, 9:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. daily.

West Texas areas get wildcat sites

Exploratory sites have been staked in Reeves, Crockett and Fisher counties.

Gulf Oil Corp. filed application to drill a 13,300-foot prospector in Reeves, 9½ miles northwest of Toyah. It is No. 1 E. B. Adams, et al-State.

Drillsite is 10 miles southwest of the Toyah, North (Wolfcamp and Siluro-Devonian) field, 1,980 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 35, block 59, PSL survey.

CROCKETT VENTURE

J. Cleo Thompson of Dallas intends to drill No. 1 C. E. Davidson III as a 8,800-foot explorer in Crockett, seven miles east of Ozona.

It is 2⅞ miles west of the depleted Clayton Ranch (Ellenburger) gas field and 1⅝ mile north of detrital production in the Davidson Ranch pool.

Drillsite is 1,220 feet from south and west lines of section 21, block IJ, GC&SF survey.

Also in Crockett, Robert M. Wynne of Midland will drill No. 3-88 Paul Pearson as a project in the Pure-Bean, South field, nine miles northwest of Ozona.

Location is 1,770 feet from south and 2,890 feet from east lines of section 88, block OP, GC&SF survey. Scheduled depth is 1,500 feet.

The field has four wells.

FISHER TRY

Sojourner Drilling Corp., Abilene, has staked site for No. 1 Harvey Maberry, a 5,600-foot wildcat in Fisher, five miles southwest of Hamlin.

It spots 2,173 feet from north and 1,787 feet from west lines of section 197, BBB&C survey, ⅜ mile southwest of depleted4,600-foot Canyon production in the Celotex field.

Kent area gains well

Highland, Brown, Brock & Equity of Midland completed No. 1 J. W. Morrison as a new producer in the Lyn-Kay (SMS) field of Kent County, 19 miles northwest of Clairemont.

It was completed on the pump for 139 barrels of oil daily, through perforations at 6,211-6,226 feet.

Location, ⅜ mile northeast of production, spots 1,002 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 67, block 1, M&GN survey, 19 miles northwest of Clairemont.

Oil, gas tests set

A wildcat site was staked in Edwards County, and a stepout was scheduled in a Scurry field.

Amoco Production Co. will drill No. 1 Less Shanklin Wardlaw, a 10,500-foot wildcat, in Edwards County, 24 miles northwest of Rocksprings.

Drillsite is 2,280 feet from north and 1,120 feet from east lines of section 170, CCSD&RGNG survey, abstract 2197, 2½ miles north of the Wardlaw field.

SCURRY PROJECT

Lario Oil & Gas Co. plans to drill No. 2 Brumley as a location north stepout to the two-well Tonto, North (Strawn) field of Scurry County.

It is projected to 7,200 feet, and spots 517 feet from south and 670 feet from east lines of section 446, block 97, H&TC survey, six miles northeast of Snyder.

Gas lawsuit set Aug. 23

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The city's $200 million suit against its natural gas supplier will go to trial Aug. 23. "barring an act of God", says State District Court Judge Peter Michael Curry.

Five of the city's fine councilmen already have stated they will vote against a proposed out-of-court settlement of the suit when the council meets Thursday morning.

Abd, Curry said Monday there is no indication that lawyers on either side will seek further delays.

"I am taking no excuses from the attorneys," said Curry.

San Antonio and its city public service utility have filed the breach of contract suit against Lo-Vaca Gathering Co., its corporate parent Coastal States Gas Corp., and Coastal States Chairman Oscar Wyatt Jr.

The city charges that the gas supplier failed to meet terms of a 20-year natural gas supply contract.

Other customers of the same supplier also have filed more than $1 billion in similar suits against the company.

Mesa test flowing gas

Morris R. Antweil of Roswell, No. 1 Mesa Grande, Eddy County, N.M., scheduled Morrow test, 2¼ miles southeast of the Happy Valley (Morrow) gas field, flowed gas at the daily rate of 1 million cubic feet, along with a spray of water, from the Morrow.

The flow was through an unreported choke and perforations at 11,017-11,246 feet, which had been acidized with 6,000 gallons.

Drilled to 11,550 feet, it has 5½-inch casing seated at total depth, and is plugged back to 11,510 feet. Earlier, it tested, gauged unreported, through perforations at 11,431-11,452 feet, which had been acidized with 750 gallons. A cast iron bridge plug set at 11,420 feet isolated thos perforations.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 11-22s-26e, ½ mile south of Carlsbad townsite.

Mesa Petroleum Co., Midland and Amarillo Oil Co., an Amarillo firm, own a 75 per cent interest in the operation.

Oil field thefts part of rising crude costs

PONCA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Oil field thefts are becoming a big factor in the rising cost petroleum, northern Oklahoma peace officers reported Monday.

Kay County Sheriff Thomas Johnston said 200 barrels of crude oil stolen from an oil field tank near Braman, northwest of here near the Kansas line, was worth about $2,400 on the legitimate market.

On the black market, officers estimated the oil would bring about $1,000 clear profit.

Johnson said the oil theft near Braman was "very similar to thefts in Garfield, Major, Kingfisher and Grant Counties" in Oklahoma.

In Kingfisher County, authorities said the black market for oil is very active.

"They're taking everything but the hole," said Kingfisher County Undersheriff Charles Lietzke.

Lietzke and other officers in Oklahoma are joining with authorities in Arkansas, Kansas and Texas in combatting the problem.

The United Petroleum Security Cooperative (UPSC), formed in February, pools the resources of the oil companies and law enforcement officers.

"We estimate a minimum of $5 million in losses in oil thefts for the four-state area in 1976," said Richard Iorio, UPSC cochairman.

The crude oil, authorities said, is sold on the black market and then recycled into the reclaimed oil market through several channels where it is difficult to detect the addition of stolen petroleum.

Iorio said the cost of the stolen oil is included in the overall price the consumer pays for petroleum products, including gasoline.

"I can't take the $5 million estimate on thefts in a fourstate area nd turn it into a cents-added picture," he said, "but it will increase the price for the consumer."

RRC okays shutdown

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The railroad commission has approved abandonment of a small gas line in Kilgore because of the high cost of installing electrical wiring required by the federal government to prevent rusting in the line.

Few residential users were served by the 91,900-foot Warren Petroleum Co. line, and only one complained about the abandonment, a comission spokesman said.

When Exxon agreed to serve that customer, the commission approved Warren's request to shut it down.

The gas comes from a casinghead system, where the gas is produced incidental to oil recovery. Had the commission not acted, Warren would have had to cease oil operations at that site, a spokesman said.

Potentials announced

New producers have been completed in Sterling and Runnels County fields.

Stoltz, Wagner & Brown, Midland, finaled No. 1-32-A Glass, ⅜ mile southwest of production in a northeast area of the Big Salute (Canyon) oil field of Sterling.

It flowed 122 barrels of 40-gravity oil on 24-hour potential test taken on a 12-64-inch choke and through perforations at 7,567-8,030 feet, after fracturing with 98,000 gallons and 150,000 pounds.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 32, block 22, H&TC survey, 15 miles southwest of Sterling City.

A second current Caddo lime oil well and ¾-mile southwest extender for that pay has been completed in the Motley, North pool of Runnels.

Desert Oil Co., Abilene, No. 1-A Walter Templin finaled on the pump for 64.47 barrels of 42-gravity oil and 73 barrels of water daily. Gas-oil ratio measuring 1,800-1 was reported.

It was potentialed through perforations at 4,810-4,816 feet.

Location is 1,750 feet from north and 2,200 feet from east lines of section 24, F. Brandt survey, 10 miles northwest of Ballinger.

King area gets tester

Taubert, Steed, Gunn & Medders of Wichita Falls will drill No. 1-GG S. B. Burnett Estate as a 6,400-foot wildcat in Southeast King County, one mile west of the depleted Big S (Strawn) field.

Location is 660 feet from south and 3,300 feet from east lines of section 48, A. L. Jay survey, 17 miles southeasts of Guthrie.

Outpost scheduled

Monsanto Co., operating from Midland, has filed application to drill a ⅞-mile southwest outpost to a dual Fusselman and Ellenburger well in the Apollo gas field of Southwest Winkler County. It is No. 1-21-34 University.

Drillsite for the project, slated to 16,250 feet, is 1,320 feet from north and east lines of section 34, block 21, ULS. It is four miles southwest of Wink townsite.

San Andres pay opens

The Four C field gained a fourth pay, San Andres gas, and San Andres oil pay was extended in the same pool.

Joe H. Warren of Dallas finaled No. 8 Nelle Gray as a San Andres gas pay opener, nine miles east of Imperial.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 430,000 cubic feet of gas per day. Production is through perforations at 2,985-1,995 feet. No treatment was reported.

Drilled to 3,130 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set on bottom.

Location is 467 feet from south and 1,787 feet (amended from 1,767) feet from east lines of section 34, block 9, H&GH survey.

Warren's No. 6-R Nelle Gray, sixth San Andres oiler, was completed for 96.74 barrels of 39-gravity oil per day, producing through perforations at 2,298-2,308 feet, after treating the pay with 500 gallons of acid.

Location is 476 feet from south and 567 feet from east lines of section 34.

Refinery draws fine

HOUSTON (AP) — A state judge has fined Gulf Oil Corp. $49,000 for alleged air pollution at its Port Arthur refinery.

State District Court Judge Arthur Lesher also ordered the firm Monday to install further pollution abatement equipment estimated to cost $10.5 million at the plant to reduce sulfur compound emissions.

He told Gulf to install a tail gas cleanup system on two of its sulfur recovery units before Dec. 31, 1977.

Lesher also ordered the corporation to change the catalysts in the two sulfur recovery units annually rather than every three years.

The suit, filed March 20, 1975 by the state attorney general's office, alleged the firm was violating a regultion of the Texas Air Control Board. Asst. Atty. Gen. Jim Jard said the state estimated Gulf exceeded allowed sulfur emission by 50 per cent on some occasions.

Jim Gatten, a Gulf spokesman, said the two units were initially installed in the 1950s and were the latest technology available at the time. He said that since the creation of the Texas Air Control Board, Gulf has acted in good faith at making modifications of the units to reduce emissions.

125 delegates hold GOP key

By EVANS WITT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only 15 days before the roll call is to begin in Kansas City, 125 Republican partisans clutch the key to their party's biggest prize, the presidential nomination.

In two months of intense courtship by President Ford and Ronald Reagan, the ranks of the uncommitted convention delegates have dwindled by more than 50.

Both camps claim enough delegates to grab the nomination, but neither candidate has been able to win the hearts — and votes — of the 1,130 delegates needed for a first-ballot victory, according to The Associated Press survey of delegates' legal commitments and public declarations.

Both continue to woo delegates, with strategies that range from White House dinner invitations to the stunning selection by Reagan of a liberal senator for a running mate to claims of allegiance from new blocks of delegates.

Reagan campaign manager John Sears gave out names of 12 delegates on Monday, saying they now back his candidate. He listed 10 from Pennsylvania, one from New York and one from West Virginia, as Reagan backers try to prove their choice of Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania as a running mate is an asset, not a liability.

"We are not aware of any individual delegates we have lost from our count," Sears said.

He claimed at least six of the 12 were previously Ford supporters, but The AP survey had listed six of them for Reagan and six as uncommitted.

Sears repeated his claim that the former California governor has 1,140 votes on the first ballot. Ford's chief delegate hunter, James Baker, claims Ford now has 1,134 delegates committed to him.

The AP survey shows Ford with 1,105, Reagan with 1,029 and the remaining 125 uncommitted.

Baker followed Sears' news conference with one of his own, saying that the changes were certainly not a big surprise.

But Baker admitted under questioning that the President Ford Committee's "hard count, conservative count," as he calls it, had slipped by at least five in Pennsylvania and one in New York since the Schweiker announcement a week ago Monday.

The AP survey, based on interviews with the individual delegates, counts only those who say they will vote for Ford or Reagan on the first ballot. Delegates who are leaning toward a candidate or who have given some other, less certain indication of preference, are not counted for either candidate.

For example, The AP count listed as uncommitted all the Pennsylvania delegates who had been counted by the Ford committee as favoring the President, but who were named Monday as Reagan backers by Sears. The Ford people had counted these delegates based on their votes for a pro-Ford resolution at a delegation meeting. But The AP counted them as uncommitted when the delegates said in individual interviews that they did not consider the resolution binding and were actually uncommitted.

Ford's campaign has similarly counted for the President certain delegates from New York and West Virginia on the basis of votes at delegation meetings. But these delegates have told AP they are uncommitted.

These three states account for the principal differences between the Ford and AP tallies.

Even second trick may be dangerous

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Some bridge writers waste your time telling you about the danger of making the wrong play at the first trick. Pay no attention to them. Sometimes your opportunity to destroy yourself doesn't present itself until the second trick.

Opening lead — ♣ A

West took the ace of clubs and continued with the king. South ruffed, led the ace of spades and continued craftily with the jack of spades.

Undeceived, West stepped up with the king of spades and led a heart. East won and led a third club, whereupon West was sure to take the setting trick with the ten of spades.

Clearly, South did nothing wrong at the first trick. It was correct for him to follow suit, and he did so.

South's blunder occurred at the second trick, when he ruffed the king of clubs. After this "automatic" play he could no longer make his contract even if he stood on his head.

IMPORTANT DISCARD

South should discard his losing heart on the king of clubs at the second trick. This gives the defenders an unearned club trick but deprives them of a heart trick later on. More important, the heart discard cuts communications between the defenders.

When West gets a trick with the king of spades he cannot get to his partner's hand. East therefore never gets a chance to lead a third club. Instead of losing 200 points, South scores 790 points for making the doubled game and rubber.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: SAQJ984 H6 DAQJ102 C7. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade. You have nine pretty sure playing tricks, but the hand is not worth a forcing opening bid. If you open with a two-bid, your partner may put you in a slam with useless kings and queens in your short suits.

Butter, coffee, eggs go higher

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Bad news for consumers who like to start the day with a hearty breakfast! An Associated Press marketbasket survey shows prices for such staples as butter, eggs and coffee increased during July.

The increases at the retail store generally reflected trends at the wholesale level which, in turn, mirrored the over-all supply situation.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed the marketbasket bill increased last month at the checklist store in eight cities, rising an average of 1.7 per cent. The bill decreased at the checklist store in four cities, down an average 2 per cent, and was unchanged in the 13th city. Over-all, the marketbasket bill at the checklist store increased a little less than half of one per cent during July.

The situation represented an improvement over June, when the marketbasket bill went up at the checklist store in nine cities and the over-all total was up 1.3 per cent.

A comparison of prices at the start of August with those in January showed the marketbasket bill for food and nonfood items surveyed went up at the checklist store in eight cities, went down in four cities and was unchanged in one city. The over-all increase was 1.7 per cent.

The government has predicted that retail prices for food alone will increase about 2 per cent to 5 per cent this year, although the exact size of any increase depends to some degree on the crops still being harvested. The recent strike by California cannery workers could provide an unexpected boost in the cost of canned fruits and vegetables.

The major increases in July occurred in breakfast items. The price of a pound of butter went up at the checklist store in 11 cities, rising an average of almost 10 per cent. In June, the price of a pound of butter went up in nine cities, increasing about 5 per cent.

A strong demand for milk and other dairy products is blamed for the increase in the price of butter. An Agriculture Department spokesman explained that there is a particularly strong demand for cheese, which is a more profitable item for manufacturers than butter. The more milk used for cheese, the less there is available for butter.

In other developments:

—The price of a pound of coffee increased at the checklist store in seven of the cities surveyed. Coffee now averages about $2 a pound, an increase of more than 50 per cent over the past year. The increases are blamed on last year's frost in Brazil.

—The price of a dozen eggs went up at the checklist store in 12 of the cities surveyed. Higher prices for chicken feed, combined with lower production, are blamed for the boost.

—On the bright side, the price of frankfurters decreased at the checklist store in eight cities, as did the price of a pound of chopped chuck. Increased supplies, combined with scattered summer sales, were responsible for the drop in prices.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, chocolate chip cookies, milk, all-beef frankfurters and granulated sugar.

Marine Corps has most recruit abuse reports

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps, smallest of the armed services, reported more than twice as many incidents of recruit abuse as the combined incidents reported by the Army, Navy and Air Force over the past two years.

The Marines listed 234 confirmed incidents in fiscal 1975 and 1976 while the other services registered an overall total of 96.

This was disclosed in a report by Pentagon manpower officials to Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, who ordered a review of all service recruit training after allegations of Marine brutality arose earlier this year. The report was made available Monday.

Pentagon investigators found current service policies are generally adequate. They said that comprehensive data on how scrupulously these policies are followed has been difficult to obtain.

"Some cases of abuse undoubtedly occur which do not come to light," the report said.

The report's publication comes after renewed criticism of corps training practices in the wake of the death last Dec. 6 of Pvt. Lynn McClure of Lufkin, Tex., who died after a severe beating in pugil stick exercises at the San Diego, Calif., Marine training base.

There also has been testimony by a former psychiatrist at the Parris Island, S.C., base that physical abuse occurs regularly there.

Manpower officials recommended that each service establish "a credible protected channel through which recruits can bring alleged abuses to the attention of senior commanders."

They noted with approval that the Air Force has set up a "suggestion box" for recruits. "Only the commander has the key and reports of alleged abuse received are promptly investigated," they said.

The report urged that officer supervision of drill sergeants and instructors be intensified and that the services file quarterly statistical reports on alleged abuses.

In a summary of confirmed incidents of recruit abuse, the Army with 53 cases was a distant second to the Marine Corps, followed by the Navy with 34 and the Air Force with only 9.

The Marine Corps appeared to deal less harshly with its offenders.

The report listed only 26 Marine court-martial convictions with 208 offenders given lesser administrative punishment. The Navy court-martialed 13 and administratively punished the other 21, Army courts-martial convicted 11 while the remaining 42 received minor penalties, and the Air Force court-martialed two and gave lighter punishment to seven.

While others talk mail, DPS now flies its own

By LARRY FORGY
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Everyone talks about the mail, and no one does anything about it, right?

Wrong.

The Texas Department of Public Safety has taken the mail in its own planes, and is saving a lot of money in the process.

In the first 10 months of this fiscal year the DPS has saved more than $54,000 by delivering its own mail.

Every Wednesday three DPS airplanes leave the department's regional offices carrying district supervisors with business in Austin. It occurred to someone in the department that much of the DPS mail traveled between the regional and state offices, and since the planes were going that way anyway...

From Sept. 1 to June 30 of this year, G. W. Burnup, who is in charge of the planes, estimates that the planes carried 57,272 pounds of mail during their 117 scheduled flights.

Burnup said maintenance on the planes costs the department $45,045, but that the cost of sending that much mail first class would have been $99,081. He said they would have saved more but that they had to replace the engines in all the planes during the year.

During the 1975 calendar year it cost the DPS $25,851 to transport 61,139 pounds of mail that the post office would have charged $76,424 to deliver.

Burnup says each flight carries an average of 490 pounds of mail in both directions. The trip costs $378, but the "mail" would cost $847 to mail.

The Dallas-Waco-Austin flight carries the heaviest load, followed by the Corpus Christi-Houston-Austin and the Midland-Lubbock-Abilene flights.

So why does it take so long to get your driver's license back? The DPS airmail system delivers only intradepartmental mail, Burnup says. Otherwise it would cost even more to carry it in the plane and then mail it anyway from the regional office.

Martinez trial gets under way

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The theft trial of former Senate Print Shop supervisor Alex Martinez and Penni Soner begins today.

A six-man, six-woman jury was selected for the trial Monday.

Senate Secretary Charles Schnabel accused Martinez and Stoner last September of stealing Senate paper.

Martinez in turn accused Schnabel of wrongdoing.

The Travis County Grand Jury indicted all three. Schnabel's trial is set Sept. 12. He faces indictments on theft, forgery and official misconduct.

Joe Martinec, attorney for Martinez and Stoner, told prospective jurors Monday, "There is a pervasive, cynical feeling that people who work for the government ... are crooks.

"There is a feeling—'Well, this sort of thing goes on in state agencies all the time. What a rotten group of people run the state government.'"

Martinec asked the jurors if any among them felt that way. There was no response.

"What you're telling me (by their silence) is you're not going to require a person who works for the state to prove he is more honest than anybody else," Martinec said.

Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, a member of the Senate Administration Committee, has said Schnabel ordered Martinez to "get rid of" Stoner after other employes in the shop complained.

Arab states bid to curb trouble-making neighbor

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Sudan are taking steps to contain the multimillion-dollar troublemaking of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, diplomatic sources say.

The present attitude of the three governments is essentially defensive, but Egypt and Sudan could turn to offensive action if there is a "clear provocation" from Khadafy, the sources said. It is understood they would have Saudi Arabia's petrodollar treasury to draw on.

"Khadafy is creating trouble everywhere in the Arab world — Lebanon, Oman, in Morocco, in Egypt, the recent Sudan coup, everywhere," said one source.

"Now he has been warned: 'Either you behave yourself, or else.'"

Another source said Egypt and Sudan would probably take action only against "something really grave and directly and indisputably of Khadafy's doing." He declined to give a hypothetical example.

The radical 34-year-old Libyan leader has been feuding with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Sudanese President Jaafar el-Numairi, his neighbors to the east and southeast, for the past two years. Libyan newspapers also express suspicion openly of the conservative Saudi monarchy.

The attempt to overthrow Numairi on July 2-3 crystallized the new coalition against Khadafy. Numairi accused him of training and equipping a force of 2,000 mercenaries and anti-Numairi Sudanese and sending them across the border. Independent sources confirmed that Khadafy provided the money and the equipment for the rebels and said the Libyans probably gave them some training also.

After Numairi put down the revolt, Sudan and Egypt concluded a mutual defense pact aimed at Libya on July 15. A joint military planning staff is being created, and some aspects of military training are being standardized. There will also be frequent high-level exchanges of information, sources said.

Folklife fete set Thursday

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — More than 6,000 persons from 27 different cultural and ethnic backgrounds are expected to participate in the fifth Annual Texas Folklife Festival which opens on the Hemisfair grounds here Thursday.

Participants at the four-day event will display the foods, costumes, customs, songs, dances and handicrafts of their native lands.

The participants represent the groups which settled and tamed the Lone Star State.

Festival officials expect 100,000 visitors to attend before the event ends Sunday evening.

Instruction sessions will demonstrate how to make butter, beer, wine and adobe brick among other things. Visitors also can learn how to chop wood and prepare native foods.

"We hope to show younger generations the crafts our forefathers had to master in order to survive," says O.T. Baker, director of the festival.

"The idea of the festival is to allow the various cultural groups of Texas an opportunity to show themselves as well as others what they're really like," he adds.

The emphasis on cultural and ethnic diversity is consistent with the purpose of the Institute of Texan Cultures, which sponsors the event each year.

Groups to be represented include Indians, Mexicans, Blacks, Japanese, Swiss, Lebanese, Yugoslav and others.

For the first time, the Russian community from the Dallas area will be on hand with foods and costumes of their native country.

Carolinian apparently sets record

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Fletcher Williams of Camden, S. C., has fired an apparent world record score in sporter class benchrest rifle competition at 200 yards.

Williams' cluster of five shots within a diameter of .215 inch was fired during the National Benchrest Shooting Association championships here last week.

The target was submitted to the association's scoring committee for verification that it topped the old record of a .242-inch cluster.

Rifles used in the competition must be at least .243 caliber.

Experts cite uranium sale world danger

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Countries being supplied with U.S. uranium now possess enough raw nuclear material to make about 1,000 atomic bombs, according to American and foreign experts.

And these experts said Monday that even if those countries wanted to return the nuclear material to U.S. control, the United States has neither the facilities nor the space to reprocess or store it.

A senior U.S. authority familiar with the situation came up with this explanation:

"If all this spent nuclear fuel is permitted to lie around indefinitely there is an obvious danger that some of it might be diverted for military purposes, despite international checks and treaties," he said.

"If, on the other hand, the United States were to exercise its option to buy back the spent fuel, then this country would in time become a dumping ground for highly hazardous material."

Spent nuclear fuel after reprocessing yields plutonium — an ingredient of atomic bombs.

Sources, including diplomats and scientists, estimated that more than 4,000 metric tons of spent fuel has piled up since about 1971 in Latin American, European and Asian lands, which buy low-enriched uranium from the United States.

This material would be enough to construct about 1,000 atomic bombs, the sources say. Such weapons presumably would be crude devices with the explosive capacity of the bombs that destroyed Hiroshima and Nagasaki at the end of World War II. The two bombs dropped on Japan in 1945 each had an explosive force of about 20,000 tons of TNT.

Indian experts said their country has a stockpile of about 200 metric tons. And despite frequent requests, the Indians said, Washington has avoided repurchasing it.

U.S. agreements of 1963 and 1966 with India included provisions that figure in most nuclear cooperation accords Washington has negotiated with friendly powers.

Under these agreements, the United States ships low-enriched uranium (meaning nonweapons grade) for use in nuclear power stations, then has first option to buy back spent fuel India doesn't need.

If America won't exercise its buy-back option, India can sell its surplus spent fuel to other countries for civilian use. Use of the material would be subject to safeguards and inspections supervised by the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA).

Only Monday a new storm blew up over America's projected sale of nuclear power plants to Egypt and Israel.

Assistant Secretary of State James J. Atherton appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Monday to talk about the proposed sales behind closed doors. Later, he said the agreements for the sale provide the tightest safeguards yet for preventing the use of nuclear fuel in atomic weapons.

But Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said after the meeting that "for the life of me I can't see why we want to participate in proliferation all over the world." And Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said "the whole concept of increasing nuclear capability in the Middle East is a matter of grave concern."

Judge denies bid by Alaniz lawyer

EDINBURG, Tex. (AP) — An elderly woman testified Monday that lawyer Nago Alaniz of Duval County beat her and said "don't talk to the federales" several months after she saw him at the scene of a burglary.

Mrs. Maria Elena Cardenas of San Diego gave the testimony as the final witness before Asst. Texas Atty. Gen. Neal Duvall rested his case in the burglary and theft trial of Alaniz, 63.

After Duvall rested his case, District Court Judge Darrell Hester denied a defense request for an instructed verdict of innocent.

Defense lawyer Dick DeGuerin of Houston asked for the instructed verdict on grounds that the prosecution had failed to prove that Alaniz did not have permission to enter the Duval County Conservation and Reclamation District and remove records.

Alaniz is charged with burglarizing the water district office and taking records that were being sought for a federal grand jury investigation into the income tax returns of George B. Parr, the "Duke of Duval." Alaniz was a close political associate of the late South Texas political boss.

Although the charge against Alaniz is burglary, testimony in the closing phases of the state's case Monday focused on the alleged beating, allegations of blackmail and extortion and claims that a missing prosecution witness was Alaniz' mistress.

Mrs. Cardenas, a key prosecution witness, testified earlier that she saw Alaniz enter and leave the water district office one night in early July, 1972.

The woman testified that Carmen Munoz, her niece who is now 27, had a close personal relationship with Alaniz. Earlier witnesses said Miss Munoz was with Alaniz the night of the water district burglary.

Mrs. Cardenas said it was after she told her niece she had seen Alaniz at the water district office when she was called by Alaniz one night in September, 1972, and told to go to Parr's home.

Mrs. Cardenas testified that after she drove to Parr's home alone, accordingto instructions, Alaniz beat her about the face. "Every time he hit me, he told me not to talk to the federales," Mrs. Cardenas said.

"He told me to be thankful that he didn't kill me," she continued.

Under cross examination, Mrs. Cardenas denied she had been blackmailing Alaniz with pictures of the lawyer and her niece together. DeGuerin produced a note from Mrs. Cardenas asking Alaniz for $500.

Flash flood warnings heard in two states

By The Associated Press

Flash flood warnings were posted today for parts of Colorado and Texas as scattered thundershowers fell along the High Plains and in the East and South.

Thunderstorms also roamed southern Atlantic and Gulf Coast areas as well as Northwest Texas and eastern Colorado. Showers or thundershowers were widely scattered in the northern Rockies and the northern plateau and ranged into the Northwest.

Rainfall during the night generally was an inch or less although locally heavy downpours hit parts of the Southeast.

Fair weather dominated most of the country from the Great Plains to the middle Atlantic states.

Jacket night brings fireworks

By The Associated Press

New York Mets Manager Joe Frazier went into an equipment-throwing tantrum Monday night in the ninth inning of his team's 5-4 loss to the Montreal Expos.

Jose Morales had pinch-hit a three-run homer in the top of the inning to bring the Expos back from a 4-2 deficit, but Frazier's wrath had been incited before Morales came to bat.

Just before Morales' blast, plate umpire Nick Colosi had called a ball on a close twostrike pitch by Skip Lockwood to Jerry White. The Mets argued the decision. White singled on the next pitch to set up Morales.

WHEN COLOSI called a strike on a close pitch to New York's Bruce Boisclair in the bottom of the inning, Frazier erupted. He screamed at Colosi from the dugout and was ejected from the game. Then the equipment started flying: a shin guards, six gloves, a baseball hats and a towel rained out of the Mets dugout as a "Jacket Night" crowd of over 50,000 looked on.

But Morales, the National League's leading pinch-hitter had done the damage with his 14th pinch-hit in 38 attempts and his third pinch-hit home run.

In other NL baseball action Monday, Chicago trimmed Philadelphia 4-2, San Diego swept Atlanta 7-3 and 7-0 in a twi-night doubleheader, and St. Louis blanked Pittsburgh 4-0 in the nationally televised game.

IN THE American League, Boston topped Cleveland 3-1, Milwaukee blasted Baltimore 7-1, New York edged Detroit 1-0, and Minnesota bested Oakland 3-0.

New York seemingly had won the game with two runs in the eighth inning against reliever Dale Murray. But Tim Foli and White singled to start the fireworks Frazier finished.

John Grubb belted two homers and drove in four to help Rick Sawyer win his first major league start for San Diego in the nightcap after a four-run ninth inning rally won the opener for Padres against Atlanta.

Pete Falcone shut out Pittsburgh on four hits and contributed a runscoring single in a three-run seventh inning to lift St. Louis over Pittsburgh.

CARL YASTRZEMSKI drove in two runs to back a five-hitter by Rick Wise and give the Red Sox their fourth victory in a row.

Von Joshua cracked run-scoring singles to cap a two-run burst in the sixth inning and and four-run seventh, carrying the Brewers past the Orioles.

New York's Doyle Alexander flirted with a no-hitter until two were out in the seventh inning, when Rusty Staub hit a single for one of Detroit's two hits in the Yankee triumph. The New York run tallied when an infield hit by Mickey Rivers in the third inning scored Sandy Alomar.

Butch Wynegar's two-run double provided all the support Minnesota's Steve Luebber needed for his seven-hit victory over Oakland as the Twins completed a five-game sweep of the A's.

IN LATE NL games on the West Coast, Cincinnati topped San Francisco 5-1 and Los Angeles bested Houston 5-4 in 11 innings.

Zimmer gets renewal through next season

CLEVELAND (AP) — "I'm Don Zimmer and I'm going to do what I feel has to be done to win ball games," says the manager of the Boston Red Sox for the past two weeks. That attitude has helped win him a ticket for a full season.

Red Sox General Manager Dick O'Connell called Zimmer Monday from Boston and offered to extend his contract through all of next year.

"I said, 'Wonderful,'" said Zimmer. "And he told me to go and have fun. The conversation didn't last three minutes ...

"I said when I was a coach that I had the best job in baseball with the Boston Red Sox. Now I guess I have the ultimate job."

ZIMMER, PROMOTED to interim manager July 19 when Darrell Johnson was fired, has brought some new life to the Red Sox. But he said the hardest job has been to jolt his players out of negative thinking.

"I had to get them out of the losing rut," he said. "We have won some games, but not as many as I figured."

Veteran slugger Carl Yastrzemski endorsed the front office decision to keep Zimmer for 1977, and said, "He's a daring, gambling son of a gun. I like his style of play.

"He displayed that in Sunday's game. I'm glad they didn't bring in anyone from outside the organization. Zimmer has been here for three years. He knows what the problems are."

NO MATTER where Boston finishes this season, the Red Sox who come back next year will know what fundamentals and concentration mean, especially in spring training.

"There'll be no going through the motions," Zimmer said. "If you don't work hard on a phase of the game like double plays or pickoffs, why work at all?"

Since taking over, Zimmer has compiled a 7-9 record, and taking three out of four from the division leadng New York Yankees over the weekend helped clinch the job for him.

In Sunday's game, Boston was behind New York by two runs in the ninth inning with put men on first and second. Zimmer ordered the hit-and-run. Bob Montgomery hit to the third baseman, but the only play he had was to first base — and that left two runners in scoring position. Boston wound up the inning, 5-4.

"IF IT didn't work, I'd be a bum, I suppose," said the manager. "But the next time I'd be a genius."

He added, "My way; I'm going to do things may way."

Three hours after Zimmer got tha telephone call Monday, he went out with the Red Sox and they beat the Cleveland Indians 3-1.

Midland Colts eliminated from tourney

CORPUS CHRISTI—Euless' Miller Mufflers eliminated the Midland Colts from the state National Baseball Congress tournament here Sunday, 3-1, behind the pitching of Don Welchel.

Welchel shut out the Colts until the ninth inning when Midland pushed across a run on singles by Luis Perez, Lupe Perez, and Jesse Benavides.

Euless got a run in the fourth and added two insurance tallies in the fifth.

Frank Rubia was the losing pitcher for the Colts. He was relieved by Randy Blanscett in the fifth.

MC signs two women players

A state champion from Abilene and a highly-ranked junior player from Perth, Western Australia, are the latest women recruits of Midland College tennis coach Neill McClung.

Signing with the national junior college champs were Abilene's Jana Hanks, the state interscholastic titlist the past two springs, and Jo Ann Hall, ranked second in Girls' 18 Singles and sixth in women's singles in Western Australia.

Hanks, who went through the 1976 state tournament without losing a set, is currently ranked fifth in the state in Girls' 18 Singles.

"We are really delighted to have Jana sign with us," McClung said. "She was one of the most sought-after players in the Southwest, receiving scholarship offers from major Texas schools as well as such out-of-state schools as the University of Michigan and the University of Nevada-Las Vegas."

McClung said the signings completed MC's recruiting for the year.

"We think we have signed outstanding players to replace those we lost this year and both our men's and women's teams should be as competitive as they were during the past season."

MC lost its entire women's team from last spring.

Other recruits include Susie Ingram, Abilene, UIL doubles champion and winner of three titles at the Midland Highway 80 tournament: Karen Schuchard, Abilene, ranked fifth in the state; Blanca Barriga, El Paso, ranked in the top ten in Texas singles: and Ann Layman, Perth, ranked fourth in Western Australia for Girls' 18 and Under singles.

The men's team which returns All-Americans Denis McKeown and Derek Edmonds, has signed Reg and Tony Luttrell, twins from Perth and ranked in the top ten among Western Australian juniors and Ron Cetrone of Houston.

Columbia provides major part of United States cocaine flood

By EDWARD SCHUMACHER
The Washington Post-Outlook

CHEMESQUEMENA, Colombia — In the morning, after the sun has finally risen above the surrounding mountains to melt the wet night chill, the mosquitoes come out.

They swarm everywhere, attacking bare flesh in the shade of the mud houses or in the sun of the dirt road that has wound, sometimes tenuously, up into this narrow mountain valley.

Ydang, inured to the mosquitoes, stops to buy a pound of sugar from a "civilizado," one of the white or mestizo Colombians who populate the village. He wears only one sandal but neither flinches nor slows as he pads out the far side of the village, fords a shallow river and strikes upward on the rocky path that for centuries has been beaten by Indians like him.

Ydang is happy because, this time, a buyer follows. The buyer has come to inspect his small plot of coca trees, for it is on mountains such as these, from Indians such as Ydang, that the illegal cocaine stream to the United States begins.

Colombia is the vital center of that stream, refining and smuggling about 70 per cent of the cocaine sold in the United States.

Most of the coca leaves processed here come from the Andean mountains in Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador. The immense profits, however, are also nurturing new cultivation in Colombia — and new problems for Colombian police.

Here in the Sierra Nevadas on the Caribbean coast and even more in the Andes in the southern part of the country, the scramble among growers and buyers is wide open.

It is that openness which allows the curious outsider, posing as a buyer, to penetrate this Andean Indian subculture.

After climbing three hours, through lush green mountain cuts and across bare grassy slopes, Ydang and the trudging buyer reach the Indian's isolated mud and thatch hut.

Broad-leaved plantain trees, scraggly coffee bushes and spindly yucca plants grow on the small plateau and immediate slopes surrounding the hut. These produce the basic food and cash crops for 30-year-old Ydang, his wife and three children.

An unexpected visitor, a white Colombian, has already arrived with his burro and is bargaining with Ydang's grandmother, an aged Medusa with hair that stands on end as if electrified. The visitor hikes in the mountains selling the crude, strong rum made from sugar cane in the village below.

He charges amost $1.50 a bottle, a lot of money here, but Ydang and his grandmother drink rum daily. They buy six bottles.

"It's not a bad business," the white man says as he packs his burro and departs, the beast trailing behind him.

Three months before, another white man had also come with a burro. He came to buy the leaves from the small stand of 15 coca trees, each about seven feet high, bordering on Ydang's dirt yard.

The white man will return in April, when the budding leaves are large enough for the trees again to be picked.

"I sell the leaves to anyone who wants to buy them," Ydang defiantly says to the prospective buyer.

"How much?"

"Twenty pesos for a hatful," the Indian says.

That is about 60 cents a pound, the amount held by the deep, traditional hat worn by the Arhuacos, Ydang's tribe.

Ydang's trees can produce about 50 pounds of leaves which, when processed in clandestine laboratories, will make about three ounces of near-pure cocaine. On the streets of North American cities, where the "coke" has been cut down to about 25 per cent pure, Ydang's leaves will reap about $34,000. Ydang will be paid $30.

For some reason of nature, the coca trees grow only in the Andes Mountains of South America, on the east and west slopes at altitudes between 2,000 and 8,000 feet, about the same altitudes as coffee.

The Indians in the Andes have long revered the coca leaves. At about the same rate that a heavy smokers , the men here in the Sierras chew wads of dried coca leaves mixed with finely powered seashells. The powder is carried in a dried gourd and licked off a stick.

The preparation of the leaves and the powder is traditionally a religious rite, the coca, or "hayo," trees being an important part of their nature worship. Chewing the leaves is reputed to impart sexual prowess and give a man the energy to walk for several days without feeling hungry, a feat often required of the mountain indians.

The dried leaves have a smoky, slightly bitter taste, but the seashell powder is sweet. The lime in the shells helps chemically to extract the drug from the leaves. The combination anaesthetizes the mouht mildly, almost like the deadeners used by dentists. At least for this novice, the mixture sets the head and stomach spinning.

Many traditional Indians still refuse to sell their leaves to smugglers. It is mainly Indians that live on the fringe of the "civilizados," Indians like Ydang, often corrupted by rum or feeling emasculated by the continuing invasion of what was once their land, who have turned to coca as an illegal cash crop.

Giving two to four harvests a year, it is one of the most prolific crops in Latin America.

"What we fear," Capt. Teodoro Campo, head of the elite narcotics bureau in the national police, said recently, "is that the cultivation will continue to expand, becoming more sophisticated and using better land, and then become basic to the economy of the Indians."

To make cocaine, the leaves are soaked in kerosene, potassium carbonate and water until a sediment similar to moist flour forms. This is usually done in large oil drums by the growers or smugglers near where the leaves are picked.

The paste is carried to clandestine laboratories, where it is chemically processed into a liquid or the concentrated white powder normally shipped and sold in the United States.

The laboratories are located mainly on the fringes of the large cities. They vary from simple amateur affairs to sophisticated operations employing professional chemists.

A police raid outside Cali, a pleasant city 200 miles west of Bogota, uncovered equipment which produced 100 pounds of cocaine in one batch and pressed it into fine sheets to be smuggled between pages in a book. The bust also netted a chemistry professor from a nearby university and a captain of the Cali fire department.

Then comes the smuggling. New York police, remembering the French connection in the heroin traffic, call Columbia "the Marseilles of cocaine."

The traffic is dominated by Colombians in disciplined syndicates. Some groups operate as underworld multinational corporations, vertically integrated from the clandestine laboratory in Colombia to the stateside distributors.

Almost all the syndicates are controlled by a single family, and while their sophistication falls short of the American mafia, they have layers of authority and codes of loyalty that protect their heads.

But the syndicates by no means hold a monopoly. Fortune-seeking small operators and adventurous youths, many of them Americans seeking to stake their vacations, crowd the traffic.

Wildcat rings of up to five members, usually smalltime operators in search of big money, form and fade and re-form. These rings may be Colombian, American, European or a mix. Their resources vary, but what most of their members have in common is criminal records.

The smuggling methods are ingenious. Frogmen haul in drops made by crewmen of ships as they pull into American harbors; private planes land in secret airfields in Florida; imported sugar in odd-lot bags is diluted; aerosol deodorant cans have false walls.

The bulk going northward is carried by one of the oldest methods, the syndicate runner. Appropriately called a "mula" (mule), he is usually a poor Colombian who has been handed a forged passport and often a student visa.

He runs the cocaine and the risk to earn $500 to $1,000 per kilo (2.2 pounds), a few sets of clothes and an expense-paid trip to a big city in the United States, usually New York, Miami or Los Angeles.

The mule carries from one to 20 kilos of cocaine in anything from his coat pockets to clothes soaked in a cocaine solution. One of the more bizarre methods is to fill a prophylactic with cocaine powder and swallow it. After passing through U.S. customs, the carrier - vomits to retrieve the pouch. In at least several instances, however, stomach acids have apparently digested the prophylactic, releasing the cocaine and painfully killing the mule.

Many of the Americans in the smuggling business are what John Cusack, head of the Drug Enforcement Administration's international operations, calls "poor man jet set types" and "former hippies." They are often cocaine users themselves, and have graduated from running marijuana and hashish. They carry small amounts, often stuffed inside Indian artifacts.

One of the young Americans recently convicted for attempting to smuggle cocaine is Kelly Ann Martin, 23, daughter of New York Yankees baseball manager Billy Martin. She was arrested in November at the airport in Barranquilla, a Caribbean port city, with two small plastic bags of almost pure cocaine powder allegedly strapped to her upper thighs. She is appealing a three-year sentence from her Colombian jail cell.

Cocaine got its great boost in the United States after the bust of the French connection five years ago created a heroin shortage. The heroin supply has since been replenished, but the coke is still popular, though still expensive. For heroin addicts it is a exhilirating "dessert" mainliner as a liquid. Others snort it as a powder.

Most medical studies agree that cocaine is not physically addictive, but there are studies which say it creates emotional dependencies for its continued use. American police believe a cocaine-drugged person is prone to paranoia and violence.

Estimates of the flow of illegal cocaine from Columbia northward are crude. But on the basis of police seizures, its believed that about 800 pounds of coke are smuggled monthly into the United States. According to police reckoning, that would be a 10 per cent increase over a year ago.

"Sometimes it seems like carriers are just swarming across, carrying the stuff in every way imaginable," one American official in Bogota said. Both American and Colombian drug officials believe the smugglers can easily keep up with the rising stateside demand.

Over the past four years, the United States has spent nearly $3 million for training and equipment of the various Columbian drug enforcement agencies. The men of F-2, the best of these, are carefully screened and dedicated, but dedication is hard to expect from a local policeman who earns $100 a month in salary and benefits. He is suspectible to bribes; he also knows that, if he does not cooperate with the smugglers, he faces the danger of assassination.

Underlying enforcement problems in Colombia is a public attitude that the drug problem is an American problem. Colombians note that the traffic was created by American demand and money.

That attitude is changing as concern grows here over the alarming rise in the use of drugs by Colombian youth. An extensive national survey by the health ministry estimates that about 40 per cent of the urban high school students take some kind of illegal drug at least once a week, although the amounts are small in most cases.

The traffic brings dollars into the country, but it also has brought an increase in violence. "To a great extent, Colombia has been victimized from the outside," drug fighter Cusack said. "It is a developing country. There is poverty, and there is need for a buck."

Ford names two Texans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford today appointed six members of the Board for International Food and Agricultural Development.

They are James J. O'Connor of Houston, Tex., a food marketing consultant; Anson R. Bertrans, Lubbock, Tex., dean of the College of Agriculture at Texas Tech University; Charles A. Krause of Milwaukee, president of Krause Milling Co.; Orville G. Bentley of Urbana, Ill., dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Illinois; Gerald W. Thomas, Las Cruces, N.M., president of New Mexico State University, and Clifton R. Wharton Jr., East Lansing, Mich., president of Michigan State University.

The board meets periodically to discuss famine prevention and prevention of hunger in the world.

Charges filed in stabbing

Charges were filed Monday against Jerry Olgin Ramirez, 23, of 1207 E. Estes Ave., for attempted murder in connection with a stabbing incident Sunday morning.

Ramirez is accused of stabbing Jose Rubio at Mulberry Lane and Lincoln Street around 8 a.m. Sunday.

Bond for Ramirez was set at $15,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Lenora man held in shooting

Tomas Gomez Salozar, 39, of Lenora, was charged Monday for attempted murder in connection with the shooting of Lupe Hinojosa.

Salozar is accused of shooting Hinojosa Monday morning at the 400 block of North Lamesa Road.

Bond for Salozar was set at $15,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Nomination changes lifestyle in Plains, Ga.

By HELEN DEWAR
The Washington Post

PLAINS, Ga. — Across Main Street from Hugh Carter's worm farm office, down the block from Billy Carter's office at the peanut warehouse, a newspaper reporter was interviewing townsfolk who were photographing television cameramen who were filming the event of the day: the dismantling of an old water tower.

Jimmy Carter's hometown is like that these days, an ordinary little Southern town caught in the middle of a national political spectacular, loving every minute of it but fearing its effect on a way of life that is simple and fragile.

The daily run of tourists now easily outnumbers Plains' 683 residents and the out-of-towners eagerly pay inflated prices for everything from bronzed peanuts to Carter T-shirts, scarves and handbags. The post office is getting an electronic canceling machine and there is talk of installing traffic lights in town and extending the grass runway at the airport.

There is now a bus tour of 40 "points of interest" in Plains, including "the places Jimmy lived ... Jimmy's first public service project ... picturesque churches ... (his daughter) Amy's school ... world's largest worm farm ... location of Jimmy's treehouse, " —all for $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children.

"Plains is not on the way to anywhere. If you come here, you gotta want to come to Plains," said Billy Carter, 38, who runs the Carter family peanut business, one of the town's economic mainstays.

"I like Plains the way it is, the way it's always been," said Billy Carter, who confesses to mixed feelings about the impact on his hometown of his brother's political success in becoming the Democratic presidential noimnee. "I doubt it will ever be the same again," he added emphatically.

Jimmy Carter clings to Plains, too, returning there for weekends during his primary election campaigining and now ensconced in his comfortable ranch-style brick and frame home mapping plans for the fall campaign. Meanwhile, Plains' citizens are coping as best they can with the hundreds of reporters, photographers, Secret Service agents and tourists who are disrupting the town's normal slow pace.

It is said that some folks here don't like Carter, but they don't speak up. Jimmy Carter is a community project, a civic crusade.

Plains — looking like a Norman Rockwell creation on an old Saturday Evening Post cover — straddles the Seaboard Coast Line Railway and Georgia State Rt. 280 about 130 miles south of Atlanta.

Surrounded by neatly cultivated, gently rolling fields of corn and peanuts that are studded with stately magnolia, pecan and pine trees, Plains bears the imprint of its founding as a railroad town in the 1890s, when an existing community was uprooted and moved to this site.

The town — about 60 per cent white and 40 per cent black — hasn't changed much since then.

The schools and other public facilities are racially mixed, and blacks joined as freely as whites in celebrating Carter's primary election victories at the old train station that has been recycled into Carter's local campaign headquarters.

But otherwise life remains almost as segregated and socially stratified as it was generations ago, according to black and white residents — many of whom, like the Carters, trace their roots in south Georgia at least 200 years.

Although Americus, 10 miles away, was the scene of violent confrontations during the civil rights struggles of the 1960s, Plains escaped.

When moves were made to desegregate churches in nearby communities, leaders of the Plains Baptist Church became alarmed. At the height of the drive, the pastor at the time and 11 of the 12 deacons met and resolved to bar blacks if they sought to enter. The one absent deacon was the area's state senator, Jimmy Carter, whose fledgling peanut business had already endured a boycott because of his refusal to join the White Citizens' Council.

When the issue came to a vote of the congregation, Carter decided to speak out. "He got up," his mother, Lillian, recalled recently, "and said, 'This is not my house, nor is it your house. This is God's house, and I for one will never, I will never, stand on the steps and try to keep anyone out.' "

One other member of the congregation joined the Carter family in opposing the move to station deacons at the door to stop blacks who, as it turned out, never came. The membership of the church is still all-white, although Carter subsequently brought a black state trooper and a black Secret Service agent with him to Sunday services.

Plains has six churches (three white, three black), two gas stations (Billy Carter's and one owned by the Carters' business rivals, the Williams family), and a row of nine store-fronts that resemble a Hollywood stage setting for Dodge City or Cheyenne.

There is a white-owned grocery and a more recently established black-owned grocery, behind which is tucked a tiny tavern called the Skylight Night Club, patronized by the black community. The equivalent social center for whites is Billy Carter's gas station.

There is on restaurant though an old building is being renovated into one, no motel and no funeral establishment.

Aside from "downtown," Plains is a mix of Victorian houses, neatly kept bungalows, decrepit shacks and new, ranch-style homes attesting to a growing middle class — and the subsidized value of the peanut. Unemployment was never so high in Plains as it was in surrounding Sumter County, where it hit 14.5 per cent in May, 1975, before dropping to about 8 per cent earlier this summer, officials said.

Symbolic of Plains' future, the new water tower on the outskirts of town has become a transmission point for the three television networks, which have installed sophisticated, expensive equipment for videotape feeding directly to New York.
