Death penalty

WASHINGTON — The military death penalty has been upheld against a constitutional challenge by a Marine facing the first military execution in 30 years. ### Sinatra salvo

PHOENIX — Frank Sinatra had some unkind words about Kitty Kelley, whose new unauthorized biography on Nancy Reagan alleges that the famous crooner and the former first lady had an affair in the White House. Early in his concert Thursday night at the Desert Sky Pavilion, Sinatra said: "I hope the next time she is crossing a street, four blind guys come along driving cars. You should not degrade the president's wife in Washington. She is a great lady." Sinatra concluded his salvo by saying if Kelley were a man, "someone would be whacking her out every 15 minutes."

Bonham Elementary School pupils watch a horse shoeing demonstration during the school's San Jacinto Day Friday. Blacksmith Buddy Swinney, who demonstrated his skills for the children, was just one of many participants in the event which celebrated early Texas history.

Bonham's little 'pardners' get taste of Texas history

■ Kindergartners through fourth graders at Bonham Elementary celebrate San Jacinto Day.

By Myra Lee Salcedo

"Step on up little pardners and pet the armadillo. Don't be afraid," said Sam "Jalapeno Sam" Lewis of San Angelo.

Several Bonham Elementary School fourth graders gingerly approached the animal which stood on its hind legs in a small pen. Once they saw that the creature was gentle, their peers swarmed around Rosita, a 22-year-old armadillo.

The armadillo, which has appeared in television commercials and a Willie Nelson movie, was one of a dozen attractions at the elementary school Friday.

The little "pardners" (pupils in kindergarten through fourth grade) saw a blacksmith shoe a horse, laughed at the antics of a rodeo clown, sang and danced along with a folk song presentation, learned about quilt making, tried their hand at stationary mechanical "calf" roping and were entertained by the music of Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys.

Texas lore was depicted in various demonstrations to give pupils a taste of Texas history, according to Teresa Marmolejo, a teacher at Bonham. "We're celebrating San

Iraq told not to interfere

■ American general tells Iraqi officers to stay out of the way as allied troops build refugee camps.

Associated Press

ZAKHO, Iraq — A U.S. general met with Iraqi military officers Friday to tell them to stay out of the way as allied troops build camps for Kurdish refugees struggling to survive in the mountains of northern Iraq.

Lt. Gen. John L. Shalikashvili, head of allied military forces mobilized to deal with the refugee crisis, delivered the warning during a 45-minute meeting at an empty customs station just inside northern Iraq.

"We had a very frank exchange of views," he said after emerging and shaking hands with the two Iraqi officers.

But he added that "as in all first meetings there are some issues that remain to be worked. We will work them (out) in due time."

He did not elaborate. A Pentagon spokesman, Air Force Capt. Sam Grizzle, said the Iraqis had confirmed they would not operate any aircraft north of the 36th parallel. He said he couldn't confirm British newspaper reports the Iraqis were told to withdraw all troops from a zone about 30 miles wide along the Turkish border.

The meeting took place as U.S. troops continued to scout for sites for the refugee camps. U.S. officials said six Special Forces teams had been formed to search for suitable locations.

Dad kills children, commits suicide

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The mother of four children whose father lined them up and shot each one in the head before committing suicide apparently left the family four days earlier with another man, police said Friday.

Chung Dinh Vu, 42, apparently bought a Polaroid camera and a .45-caliber semiautomatic handgun six to eight hours before he lined up his children behind the dining room table, took their pictures and killed them, execution-style, about 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

Police Sgt. Brad Rudolph said Vu left two notes — one in English addressed to the Houston Police Department, and one in Vietnamese that was left at his brother-in-law's apartment in the same working-class Southwest Houston complex.

"We got information that the mother possibly fled to the Southeastern part of the United States," Rudolph said. "She

Agreement reached in ClayDesta bank suit

■ Williams' bank and insurance company could owe plaintiffs between $870,000 and $1.25 million.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Hundreds of people who say they were illegally forced to buy expensive insurance policies to secure car loans from former gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams' bank could recover about $1 million under a proposed agreement reached in court Friday.

The agreement would make ClayDesta National Bank in Midland, and Service Life & Casualty Insurance Company, pay 891 people for portions of their insurance premiums. Depending on how the payments are made, the total payback would range from $870,000 to $1.25 million, attorneys said.

State District Court Judge Joe Hart declared the agreement reasonable but said he would hold a hearing soon to allow plaintiffs testify on whether they thought it was fair. After that, he said, he would decide whether to accept it.

ClayDesta and Service Life, in agreeing to the deal, admitted no wrongdoing.

Williams, the Republican nominee last year, was dogged by allegations about the loans during his unsuccessful campaign.

An investigation into criminal allegations surrounding the loan program continues, according to Travis County Attorney Ken Oden. Oden, who was present at the hearing, said one of the loanbrokers in the program agreed last week to a fine for an insurance code violation in connection with the loans.

Car buyers in Dallas and Houston alleged they were forced to buy expensive credit life or credit disability insurance in order to receive a car loan from ClayDesta.

Under the settlement proposed Friday, people who decide to keep their insurance policies would get back 52 percent of the premiums they paid. The money could be applied to their car loans, or if the loan is paid, they would get cash.

If a person wants to cancel the policy, they would get back 87.5 percent of the premiums they paid.

"There is a substantial amount of money changing hands here as a result of this lawsuit," said David Bragg, who represents the plaintiffs. "When we took the case, the bets were that we were suing the next governor of Texas. The risks were somewhat high," he said.

Hale surrenders to marshals for trip to Missouri

Staff Report

Bryan Allen Hale surrendered to U.S. Marshals on Friday afternoon in preparation for a trip to Missouri for psychiatric evaluation.

Hale, the 47-year-old suspended Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital administrator arrested April 8 on child pornography charges, was in the Midland County Central Detention Facility on Friday night, marshal's service officials confirmed.

Hale, who had been free on bond in Midland and Ector County, was taken back into custody in response to a Wednesday order from U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III. Bunton ordered Hale sent to Springfield, Mo., for evaluation at the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners.

Doctors there will determine whether Hale, who faces a burglary charge in Ector County in addition to child pornography charges, is competent to stand trial.

A marshal's service official said two deputies would fly with Hale via commercial airline to Missouri before 8 a.m. today.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery said this week that the length of Hale's stay at the Springfield hospital will depend on the case load there. He said Hale could be gone as long as three months.

U.S. Customs officers arrested Hale on April 8 at his Glenwood office after finding a videotape there entitled "Educating Valerie." The tape reportedly depicts

People want packaging that is recyclable, poll indicates

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans want less wasteful packaging in stores, and about a third are willing to pay a dime per dollar extra for such items, an Associated Press poll found.

Reducing landfill-choking waste is one of the issues environmentalists hope to publicize in weekend activities leading up to Earth Day on Monday.

Industry spokesmen say they already have gotten the message and are making packages with materials that are reusable, recyclable, less wasteful or safer for the environment.

About two-thirds in the AP poll said they have bought such items in the past year. Only one in 10 wouldn't prefer such packaging if they had a choice. Excluding those people, 39 percent of the rest say they would choose the less wasteful package even if it cost 10 percent more.

The telephone survey of 1,001 adults was taken Friday through Tuesday by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa. Results have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Texas creates more jobs in '90 than any other state

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Economically, things are not all that bad in Texas. Fiscally, things are bad all over.

Texas created more jobs in 1990 than any other state, adding nearly one of every five new jobs in the nation, according to a publication of the Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts.

Texas employment grew by 2.5 percent in 1990, and most of the state's 168,700 new jobs came from the service industry. The second leading gainer was government employment, which the publication, Fiscal Notes, attributed to a growing school enrollment and court-ordered reforms of state prisons and mental health and retardation services.

California was second in adding new jobs, and Ohio ranked third.

Also, the publication noted that as of Jan. 1, Texas was one of 30 states facing budget deficits that total $13 billion.

States listed as the hardest hit were Virginia, California, New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Vermont.

Texas officials are projecting a shortfall of about $4.5 billion for the next two-year budget cycle, which is equal to 15 percent of the general revenue expected for that period. By comparison, California expects a $12.6 billion shortfall, equal to 23 percent of its revenue. In New York, Gov. Mario Cuomo has proposed a $4.5 billion budget cut, with one-quarter of that coming in education.

Reasons for the deficits include the national economic slowdown, which is cutting revenue collections; federal mandates that have shifted spending for some programs from the national to the state level; and public pressure for spending to improve education.

In Texas, as in other states, the largest single budget item is for education.

Other deficit factors include a growth in school enrollment and in people needing health and human services, inflation-driven costs for Medicaid and a larger prison population.

In 1990, 24 states raised taxes, Fiscal Notes reported, and the dollar volume of increases, at $7.6 billion, was the largest combined total since 1983.

But more is yet to come. For the first time, Texas, Connecticut and Tennessee state officials are considering a personal income tax on wages and salaries. Connecticut already taxes personal income from capaital gains, dividends and interest. Tennessee taxes income from stock dividends and interest from bonds.

Texas Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock has proposed a personal income tax to replace local property taxes and reduce the sales tax, along with a corporate profits tax to replace business franchise taxes.

Texas is one of 10 states that does not tax personal income, according to Fiscal Notes.

Jacinto Day," she said.

Little "pardners" got into the spirit of the event by dressing in western garb, fringed Indian jackets and sequined Mexican dresses and sombreros.

School hallways were decorated with Texana artwork, including construction paper blue bonnets and three-dimensional replicas of the Alamo.

While the armadillo was popular and pupils squealed in delight at the dilemma befalling rodeo clowns they viewed on video tape, some of the youngsters were more impressed with the trappings of modern day transportation.

When asked what they liked best of all the activities, a gaggle of fourth graders cried in unison "Jody Nix's bus!"

fled with another male companion and left home on Monday of this week. That is a distinct possibility of what set Mr. Vu off."

The mother, Hue Lam Vu, was in seclusion, but was notified of the killings by family members, relatives told police. Officers said she probably would return to Houston.

Rudolph said the note to officers indicated Vu, a carpenter, enjoyed his job. "It wasn't a typical suicide note," he said.

KHOU-TV in Houston reported late Friday that the letter in Vietnamese told of Vu's plans to kill himself and his children and asked that their bodies be cremated. Houston police, however, would not confirm the report, saying the letter had not been sufficiently translated Friday.

Rudolph said Vu's brother-in-law initially had difficulty telling officers what was in the letter, whether because he was distraught or because he was unable to discern Vu's handwriting. But Rudolph said authorities were having the letter formally translated Friday.

Killed in the slaying were Vu's three daughters, Hong Lam Vu, 18, Yen Ngoc Vu, 16, and Huyen Ngoc Vu, 8, and his son, Long Mong Vu, 12. Police said the couple had been married for 19 years and had no apparent marital problems.

Eddie Lee Taylor Jr., who lived next door to the family in the Brentwood Village Apartment complex, said Long Mong had been playing outside with Taylor's nephew less than an hour before the shootings.

"About 7:45, his father asked him to come in, but that wasn't unusual because it was dinner time," Taylor said.

But about a half-hour later, Taylor heard a shot and then five to six more in rapid succession. One bloody bullet pierced through the sheetrock in Taylor's apartment, nearly missing his year-old nephew who had been playing on the floor.

Taylor notified apartment manager Terry Yarrington and called the police, who had to break down the door to the first-floor apartment.

"When they opened that door, I just couldn't believe it," recounted a tired and shaken Taylor. "He seemed like too nice of a guy to do something like that."

Yarrington also was shocked.

"I can't believe it," he said. "I can't associate something like this with them — maybe with someone else around here, but I had no inkling with them."

The Vus, immigrants from Vietnam, had lived in the modest apartments for four or five years, Yarrington said.

Rudolph choked back tears as he described the death scene to reporters Friday.

"The blood was extensive," Rudolph said. "It's hard to describe. When you see four kids like that taken for no apparent reason.... It was a mess."

Rudolph said the children were "huddled around a table. It appeared the younger one may have tried to get out of the way." Early reports indicated she apparently was reaching for one of her older sisters.

"My gut feeling is they were probably caught by surprise," Rudolph said. "They knew something was amiss, but didn't know what. You can see in the pictures, they weren't happy."

At White Elementary School where Huyen Ngoc attended, classmates spoke with their teacher about the slaying, said Sarah Smith, spokeswoman for Houston Independent School District.

"A couple of school psychologists have been dispatched to the middle school and the high school and the director of elementary counseling went to the elementary school to talk to students there herself," Ms. Smith said.

Long Mong attended Sharpstown Middle School, while his older sisters, Hong Lam and Yen Ngoc, were students at Sharpstown High School.

Reagan explains decision to visit Bitburg cemetery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Reagan said he visited a German military cemetery in 1985, despite a maelstrom of criticism, because he believed some SS troopers buried there had been killed by the Nazis for trying to shield Jews, according to letters released Friday.

Reagan's 1989 letters to the World Jewish Congress marked the first time he was known to have used that explanation for his wreath-laying at Bitburg, a bitterly divisive event at the time and since.

He had been asked to avoid visiting Bitburg because among the graves of German World War II troops were 49 belonging to members of the SS, Adolf Hitler's dreaded elite troops.

At the time, Reagan described his decision, made after much agonizing, as a gesture of reconciliation with Germany 40 years after the end of World War II.

In the newly disclosed letters, Reagan was responding to World Jewish Congress Vice President Kalman Sultanik who had expressed concern about how the former president intended to depict the Bitburg affair in his autobiography. Sultanik, a member of Reagan's Holocaust Memorial Council, wrote him in March 1989 that he was worried Reagan might inadvertently support revisionist historians who reject evidence that the Nazis exterminated six million Jews.

On March 16, 1989, Reagan wrote Sultanik that he had done some research on his own and learned that some SS troops buried at Bitburg "were buried in prisoner uniforms. They had been executed for trying to shield inmates from torture and the ovens."

He added that several individuals had written him to describe how SS men had saved their lives. The letter did not say whether these were the same SS men Reagan believed were buried at Bitburg.

Sultanik, himself a death camp survivor, wrote back that he had not found any reference to executions of SS troopers.

REFUGEES: U.S., Iraqi officers discuss camps

(From 1A)

U.S. construction units in Turkey began building a base to serve 550 American personnel at Hakkarri near the Iraqi border.

Italy and the Netherlands, as well, pledged new assistance for the refugees inside Iraq.

Italy's Foreign Ministry said the government will open a camp — guarded by 500 soldiers — for 60,000 Kurdish refugees, possibly near the Iranian border. The Dutch promised to send 1,000 soldiers and set up a camp for up to 10,000 refugees, according to the ministers of Defense and Foreign Affairs.

And tons of relief supplies continued to pour into Turkey on British, French and Canadian planes. A Soviet plane also brought relief supplies for the hungry Kurds.

Shalikashvili, accompanied by other allied officers, met with Staff Brig. Gen. Nushwan Danoun and Staff Brig. Gen. Abdul-Hafiz Jazail. The Iraqis declined to speak to reporters but told U.S. officers they were from staff headquarters in Baghdad.

Shalikashvili said the meeting's purpose was to set ground rules that would "as much as possible eliminate any possibility of clashes between coalition forces and Iraqi forces in this area."

President Bush has ordered U.S. troops to build refugee camps for Kurds who fled their homes after the collapse of their rebellion against Saddam Hussein. Several thousand U.S., British and French soldiers are to protect the camps.

In Washington, the White House welcomed Iraq's agreement with the United Nations on Thursday to establish centers for refugees in northern Iraq. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the plan "appears to provide a basis for the U.N. to take over the operation we will establish" with allied troops.

The special U.N. envoy who reached the agreement with Iraq, Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, had said earlier in the day in Geneva that he expected the U.S. and U.N. plans to be reconciled, but he declined to speculate on when.

The U.N. plan calls for Iraq to create camps and way stations in the border area to help refugees wishing to return to their homes in Iraq, but there is no provision for outside security forces.

Sadruddin added that the U.N. plan would remain an "empty shell" without urgently needed international funding. The U.N. has appealed for $178 million to help worst-hit groups in Iraq, and a further $400 million for Turkey and Iran.

Sadako Ogata, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said in Geneva Friday that there was little prospect that refugees would return to their homes while Saddam remained in power.

Friday's meeting was about 6 miles north of Zakho, which was a city of 50,000 people before the Kurdish rebellion.

It now is inhabited by 5,000 to 10,000 people, said Dayton Marshall, head of a State Department relief team working with the military. The others are in the squalid refugee camps in the mountains along the borders with Turkey and Iran, he said.

Before the meeting, Shalikashvili said the allies could begin building camps within a day or two after the Iraqis cleared out of the area.

The general, who arrived in Turkey on Wednesday, said he had not "gotten a handle" on how many refugees there are, but his working assumption is 500,000.

The arrest followed a three-month undercover investigation in which a person believed to be Hale, using the pseudonym "Ready Man," purchased the tape from Florida Customs agents via a computerized bulletin board system.

A federal grand jury on April 11 indicted Hale on one count of receiving child pornography and a forfeiture count that will allow the videotape's return to federal authorities. If convicted, Hale could face up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

On April 12, Glenwood community relations manager Marilee Kyler filed burglary charges against Hale, alleging that he took some documents from her Odessa house while she was on vacation in March.

If convicted on first-degree burglary charges, Hale could face up to 99 years or life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine.

POLL: Americans want recyclable packages

(From 1A)

say they recycle: 58 percent say they recycle cans regularly, but that drops off to 42 percent for newspapers and 36 percent for bottles.

"Aluminum cans have a high value because the material is worth more," said John Ruston, economic analyst for the Environmental Defense Fund in New York City.

An additional one in seven said they recycle each item occasionally. That leaves the population of hard-core non-recyclers at 50 percent for bottles, 43 percent for newspapers and 25 percent for cans.

About 70 percent said their community does not require any sort of effort to separate and recycle items such as cans and newspapers. Of those people, six of seven said they would support such a requirement.

"That shows pretty impressive support — really demand from citizens that they get recycling services," Ruston said.

But the finding means only that people support a recycling requirement in principle. Whether they would cooperate with a specific plan that requires them to sort their garbage and haul bundles to curbside is another matter.

Recycling is a "symbolic focus of a broad range of environmental concerns," Ruston said.

The packaging issue also has taken center stage with the reduction of plastic in containers for such varied things as fast-food burgers and fabric softener.

Edward Stana, executive director of the Council on Plastic and Packaging in the Environment, said the companies in his industry coalition have been listening to environmentalists and have made changes consumers might not notice.

"For example, a typical plastic soft drink bottle has been reduced ... using less materials," he said.

Packages have grown more elaborate over the years to prevent theft and convey information that sales people used to provide, Stana said.

"The old friendly hardware man who knew everything there is to know about Molly bolts" has been replaced by packages that enshroud and identify each kind of nut and bolt.

Staff Report

ODESSA — "Rhythm N' Rhythm," a jazz concert featuring trombonist Dan Barrett and tenor saxophonist and clarinetist Ken Peplowski, is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. today at Ector Junior High School Auditorium, 809 W. Clements.

The 33-year-old Peplowski, who played his first professional engagement when he was 10, traveled with the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra in 1978. His playing styles are reminiscent of Benny Goodman and Zoot Sims.

The winner of the 1990 Jazztimes Critic's Poll on clarinet, Peplowski records and plays with such performers as Mel Torme, Peggy Lee, George Shearing, Leon Redbone, Scott Hamilton, Howard Alden and Rosemary Clooney. He records on the Concord Jazz label and has three solo albums to his credit — "Mr. Gentle and Mr. Cool," "Double Exposure" and "Sonny Side."

Barrett, who formed his first group when he was in high school, played both valve and slide trombone for the motion pictures "The Cotton Club" and "Brighton Beach Memoirs;" performed three times at Carnegie Hall with Woody Herman, Joe Bushkin and in a tribute to Louis Armstrong; composed and arranged the theme music for the American Playhouse television production of "Rocket to the Moon;" and appeared at numerous jazz parties and festivals throughout the United States, Canada, Europe and Japan.

Barrett has recorded under his own name, such as his Concord Jazz album "Strictly Instrumental," and with such jazz artists as Doc Cheatham, Scott Hamilton, Warren Vache Jr., Rosemary Clooney, Joe Bushkin and Benny Goodman. Barrett played lead trombone and was a featured soloist for Goodman.

The concert also features pianist Ray Sherman, drummer Jake Hanna and bassist Frank Tate.

The Odessa performance is sponsored by the West Texas Jazz Society and is part of Child's Play, a project designed by the Junior League of Odessa with the objective of bringing the arts to the children and families of the Permian Basin.

Other Child's Play events include the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale presenting "I See a Song, I Hear a Picture" at 2:30 p.m. April 28 at Bonham Junior High School Auditorium, which is sponsored by AMI Women's and Children's Hospital; and "The Art of Eric Carle," on display through April 29 at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin.

Tickets, priced at $5 for adults and children for the series, may be purchased at the door. For ticket information concerning the April 28 symphony concert call Permian Playhouse, 362-2329.

Belo may appeal $58 million judgment

The State

WACO (AP) — In the largest libel judgment in U.S. history, a jury Friday awarded $58 million to former McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell, saying WFAA-TV defamed him in a 1985 series that accused him of taking payoffs in exchange for the dismissal of drunken driving cases.

"I want to thank God. God led us, God preserved us, God gave us the victory," Feazell, 39, said at a victory party shortly after the verdict.

Feazell said the 11-part series in 1985 by the Dallas television station and reporter Charles Duncan ruined his reputation and led to an FBI investigation.

He was indicted in 1986 on federal racketeering charges, but was acquitted in June 1987. He resigned in September 1988 to go into private practice as an attorney in Waco.

"This whole thing was an orchestrated retaliation against me for exposing the Henry Lee Lucas confession hoax," Feazell said Friday.

He has contended for years that state and federal officials harassed him after he launched a grand jury probe into the one-eyed drifter's confessions — later recanted — to hundreds of murders.

Mike McCarthy, senior vice president and general counsel of A.H. Belo Corp., which owns WFAA, said the verdict will be challenged.

"The company believes there is absolutely no factual basis to support this jury verdict, which involves a public official. We will obviously pursue all available post-trial motions; and, if necessary, appeal," McCarthy said.

Neither Duncan, who has since left WFAA, nor his attorneys would comment on the outcome.

Feazell and his attorney, Gary Richardson, said they are confident the jury's judgment will stand.

"There's no reversible error in this case. We tried a very conservative case. If there was ever any question, we backed down on it," Feazell said.

Visiting State District Judge James Meyers of Austin presided over the case.

Before Friday's $58 million award was announced, the largest previous libel judgments reported were $34 million that a jury awarded Philadelphia lawyer Richard Sprague last May over a 1973 story in The Philadelphia Inquirer that criticized his handling of a homicide case when he was an assistant district attorney.

Feazell filed his lawsuit in 1986 against Duncan, Belo Broadcasting Corp., and A.H. Belo Corp. The lawsuit alleged that the series was malicious and filled with inaccuracies and defamatory statements.

A.H. Belo was dismissed from the lawsuit last month in an agreement after attorneys for WFAA proved that Duncan never actually worked for the parent company.

Belo attorneys said Duncan started his series after the inception of the federal investigation, which led to an indictment of Feazell, alleging bribery, racketeering and mail fraud.

The series was fair comment on the performance of a public official, attorneys for Belo contended.

The 10-count federal indictment against Feazell in 1986 accused him of accepting about $19,000 in payments from defense attorneys in exchange for leniency for their clients.

School drops Rebel flag

AUSTIN (AP) — Travis High School in Austin has decided to replace the Confederate flag as a school symbol after a poll showed that the school banner was not especially important to students.

But some had complained that the Confederate flag was offensive to minority students.

Gary Bledsoe, president of the Austin branch of the NAACP, supported the decision to change the flag. He said the banner "symbolized a time when family members were killing family members."

A poll last fall found that the flag was "not that big of a deal to the vast majority of the students," said chairman Gary Swenson of the Travis Positive Public Relations Committee.

Some students said they didn't think the flag was a negative symbol.

"I did not find it offensive," said Ahmad Bell, 17, who plays on the Travis football and basketball teams. "When I saw the flag, I thought, 'We're getting ready to play football.'"

Student Candi Archer, 16, said, "It didn't mean anything to us about the Civil War. It symbolized our school spirit."

The school's principal, Elena Vela, banned use of the flag last fall.

"We're getting ready to go into a new century, and we have to be examples of positive role models," Ms. Vela said. "Schools should be a model to reflect harmony in our society."

Richards writes Mosbacher on census

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards says she has tried personal diplomacy among state efforts to obtain a higher census count for Texas.

Richards told reporters Friday that she wrote U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher several weeks ago, "saying that we felt that Texas was under counted, and we wanted to urge him to adjust those census figures."

She said she got a note back, and Mosbacher "just penned down at the bottom, 'Hope you can get all the Texas delegation together for the free trade agreement.'"

"So, I just wrote him a note back today and said, 'I'm working very hard on the free trade agreement. Now I hope you'll do right by us and adjust the census count' — that's all I said."

Richards said with an accurate count Texas should get yet another congressional seat. "I think we all think that Texas is entitled to another one," which would increase the size of the delegation from 27 to 31.

The bureau said Thursday that it may have missed as few as 236,490 or as many as 632,490 Texans when it counted 16.9 million people living in the state last April.

"I thought the news story today where the census is saying that we were under counted is very encouraging," Richards said.

Gov. Richards calls first 100 days a success

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — Ann Richards sees her first 100 days as governor, a hectic stretch that included overhaul of public school funding and a crackdown on bureaucratic waste, as a satisfying success.

But she is frustrated about one thing. As the state's most visible politician, she says she has had to quit telling jokes.

"I can't make jokes because y'all put it in the paper and then it's not funny anymore," the governor recently told a small group of news reporters.

Other than that, Ann W. Richards enjoys life in the state's top job.

"Yes, I worry about the weight of this job, the weight of the responsibility," she said. "But I try to keep a perspective that these decisions are going to be resolved by someone — and they might as well be resolved by someone I have confidence in."

On Wednesday, the Democratic governor completes her 100th day in office.

She has made nearly 400 appointments, including numerous firsts for women and minorities.

She signed the $1.3 billion-plus school finance bill, approved another giving Texas one of the nation's toughest oil spill cleanup laws, and slapped a moratorium on new hazardous waste dumps.

She pushed hard for a state lottery, but it failed in the House. She pushed hard for a new government ethics law, but it remains pending in the House.

She struggled with state insurance regulators, naming a longtime associate as insurance board chairman and winning the resignation of one of former Republican Gov. Bill Clements' appointees.

And Richards has battled with the Department of Commerce, installing her own team to end what she says was waste and inefficiency run amok.

Being governor, she said, is even better than she had thought it would be while campaigning for 18 months.

"I wasn't sure that I'd be able to make an immediate impact. It's a lot better in that sense," she said. "By and large, the people I see — Republicans and Democrats alike — say just thank God there's somebody there who's going to work, who has some sense of where they want to go."

AP Laserphoto

Gov. Ann Richards shows off a photograph of herself and granddaughter, Lilly, during a tour of her private quarters at the governor's mansion Thursday in Austin.

Asked about disappointments, Richards paused for nearly half a minute before finally replying: "I really can't think of any."

Richards, 57, won a bruising election race against Republican oilman Clayton Williams.

She came to the governor's office after two terms as a Travis County commissioner and two as state treasurer, with the admission that she prefers serving to campaigning.

High on her "New Texas" agenda was opening doors to people she says were shortchanged for decades: women, Hispanics, blacks and those relying on state services.

She named the first Hispanic judge to the Court of Criminal Appeals, the first Hispanic woman to the Railroad Commission, the first black to the University of Texas regents and the first disabled person to the Department of Human Services board.

Aides quickly point out that of 384 appointments during her first three months, 192 were men and 192 were women. Twenty-five percent were Hispanic, 21 percent black and 54 percent Anglo.

All, she says, were the best people for the jobs.

"I don't think that we move the cause of minorities or women forward by placing people in positions and have them fail. So I feel very good about the quality," Richards said.

The governor has tangled with bureaucrats over what she labels "dumb brother-in-law deals" where officials give state business to their friends.

"I think it's everywhere. I know it is," she said. "But it is not acceptable in government. You cannot take the private sector attitude of doing business with your buddies and put that in government, because you're not dealing with your dollars, you're dealing with other people's dollars."

She remains angry over a $100,000-plus trip taken by state Commerce Department officials to open a European trade office.

"Let me tell you this — there isn't anybody that's going to take another lavish junket in this state for a long time," she said.

No governor has much authority to fire agency heads, who work for the independent boards overseeing each department. But Richards said she's making her will known.

"We're going to meet with those department heads. We're going to lay out for them what we have seen, what we think they need to be leery of and wary of."

For all the accomplishments she touts, some of Richards' toughest days lay ahead.

The state is at least $4.6 billion in debt, the budget won't be written until after July 1, and Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock wants to create a state income tax, a levy dreaded by many lawmakers who view it as political suicide.

Richards says she's ready to deal with the problems. She's anxious to see Comptroller John Sharp's audits of agency spending and a blue-ribbon committee's recommended changes for the tax system.

But except to say that the corporate franchise tax needs changing, the governor remains tight-lipped about other tax possibilities.

Oilfield fires visible from deep in space

By Mark Carreau
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — A NASA shuttle crew on Friday displayed dramatic photographs taken from space showing that the environmental damage from the Kuwait oil fires has spread far beyond the Middle East.

"It was quite amazing," said Atlantis astronaut Linda Godwin.

During a news conference, she and her crew mates narrated a film and slide show that revealed dense smoke from dozens of oil field blazes in the Middle East rising into the Earth's atmosphere.

Shuttle commander Steve Nagel and his crew returned April 11 from a successful six-day flight to deploy NASA's $617 million Gamma Ray Observatory and to evaluate space station assembly techniques.

"As we flew from the western part of Africa towards Kuwait, you could see darkness in the atmosphere ... that was due to the huge smoke cloud being carried aloft by the winds and dispersing," said Atlantis pilot Ken Cameron.

Cameron said it was "visible almost across the continent."

The Atlantis astronauts circled the Earth at an height of 280 miles, one of the highest altitudes flown by a shuttle crew, and reported that with the exception of Kuwait, they had an unusually sharp view of the ground.

Iraqi military forces set hundreds of oil wells ablaze in Kuwait as they retreated from allied troops earlier this year.

Teams of firefighters are in Kuwait now in the opening round of a months-long battle to extinguish the many fires.

Astronauts Jerry Ross and Jay Apt performed successful back-to-back spacewalks during the flights, one to free a balky antenna on the Gamma Ray Observatory and the second to test several methods of moving hardware and tools around NASA's planned space station.

The two walks were NASA's first in 5 1/2 years, and both participants said the space agency must attempt to regain its old expertise.

"It's not my decision to make, but if I was asked, I'd recommend one every six months," said Ross.

In addition, the Atlantis astronauts established an amateur radio link between the shuttle and the Soviet's Mir space station, the first direct contact ever between the vessels of the two space-faring superpowers.

It was, however, a case in which the occupants of both ships hailed one another without clear acknowledgement because of static on their designated radio channel.

"I felt we contacted them," said Cameron. "I heard English. I tried Russian myself. It probably didn't sound too red hot if they heard us."

"For all of us it was a pretty profound experience to look up there and see the only other folks orbiting the planet pretty close — 60 miles — and know that each spacecraft carrying its own little world of oxygen and food was orbiting nearby," said Apt.

Meanwhile, NASA planned Saturday to start the countdown for the launch of the shuttle Discovery.

Discovery and a crew of seven are scheduled to blast off Tuesday at 6:05 a.m., CDT, on an eight-day research mission for the Department of Defense.

Gorbachev in South Korea to seek more aid

N.Y. Times News Service

CHEJU ISLAND, South Korea — The Soviet Union and South Korea continued their whirlwind courtship Friday as President Mikhail S. Gorbachev arrived here for his third meeting with South Korea's president, Roh Tae Woo, in 10 months and the first visit to this divided peninsula by a Soviet head of state.

While South Korea pledged $3 billion in economic aid earlier this year, Gorbachev is expected to seek more aid faster. In comments shortly after his late-evening arrival from Japan, where he received no commitments for economic assistance, Gorbachev said that the Seoul government's offer was "badly needed" and that he hoped to "secure a setting for further economic cooperation."

The South Korean leader was expected to ask for Soviet backing in his campaign for U.N. membership this fall, over the objections of North Korea.

A South Korean official said his delegation would also seek more information on the Korean Air Lines jet shot down by a Soviet fighter in September 1983, in which 269 people died, and the return of any remains recovered.

Both sides, though, emphasized the the post-Cold-War symbolism of the visit, in what amounts to little more than a stopover for Gorbachev after his four-day visit to Japan.

Officials noted with some enthusiasm that the Soviet leader was first visiting the capitalist South, rather than Communist North Korea, whose hard-line government has resisted the changes that have been reshaping the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

In his comments before dinner, Gorbachev said it was "hardly possible to imagine the new relationship between Seoul and Moscow just one year ago." Trade between the two countries is modest, but accelerating rapidly.

The choice of this resort island, just off the nation's southern coast, rather than Seoul, the capital, for the discussions was taken as a modest face-saving gesture for the North Koreans, who have fumed over each of the Soviet-South Korean meetings. Cheju Island, a rocky backwater that has beome a resort, is 280 miles from Seoul.

Gorbachev's visit here is regarded as a a sign of the remarkable speed with which the Soviet relationship with the South is moving. The two nations established diplomatic relations only six months ago.

Gorbachev had originally planned to stay just a few hours on Friday night before returning to Moscow. But as his inconclusive talks with the Japanese prime minister, Toshiki Kaifu, dragged on, he decided to leave Japan later than scheduled and to extend his stay here overnight.

Soviet troops seize Baltic customs post

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet troops on Friday shut down a customs post run by Lithuania on its border with Byelorussia, enforcing a Kremlin decree to curb independence-minded republics' control of their borders, officials said.

A spokesman for the parliament accused the Kremlin of heightening a "war of nerves" in the Baltic republic since the Jan. 13 Soviet crackdown that left 22 people dead in Lithuania and two other Baltic republics.

About 15 Red Army troops, led by two officers, seized the post in the town of Medininkai, the republic's parliament said in a statement. They threatened punishment if it were reopened, a customs official said.

The troops said they were carrying out Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's recent decree ordering the nation's 15 republics to rescind any rules banning the export of products to other republics, the statement said.

Discussions fail to settle differences

N.Y. Times News Service

JERUSALEM — Secretary of State James A. Baker III failed Friday to settle key Arab and Israeli differences on the framework for holding a Middle East peace conference.

Baker declined to talk with reporters after two hours of discussions with Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy followed by more than three hours with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

Later, Israeli and U.S. officials said more time was needed to digest the discussions. Israel Radio reported that Baker may return to Israel as early as next Tuesday after visiting a number of other Middle East countries.

The summaries of Friday's talks by both sides made clear that no breakthrough had been achieved.

"There are a number of outstanding issues that will have to be worked out and resolved if a (peace) process is to result," State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said in a written statement given to reporters following the talks.

The statement said only that Baker "went over differences in Arab and Israeli positions on a number of issues and made suggestions as to how to bridge the gap in order to get to a conference that would launch direct bilateral negotiations" between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

Shamir's spokesman Avi Pazner said "It is impossible to reach conclusions now. We must speak more."

Sources close to the talks said the following key hurdles are barring progress toward a peace conference:

■ There is no agreement on who would represent the 1.7 million Palestinians who live in the Israel-controlled West Bank and Gaza Strip, which were captured by Israel in the 1967 Middle East War. Shamir is reportedly not willing to permit participation by any Palestinian connected to the Palestine Liberation Organization, which Israel considers a terrorist group, and is said to have threatened to walk out of any talks in which delegates are representing the PLO.

Shamir is also said to object to any Palestinian delegate who lives in East Jerusalem, which Israel captured in 1967 and annexed. East Jerusalem, the cite of Judaism's holiest shrines, is the center of Palestinian social and economic life. Forbidding participation by any Palestinian from East Jerusalem would exclude Faisal al-Husseini, who many consider the top Palestinian leader in the Israeli-occupied territories.

■ There is disagreement on who should sponsor the peace conference and how many parties should be involved.

Israel wants little outside involvement in a peace conference, reportedly fearing that it might evolve into a international conclave in which Arab-allied countries might gang up on the Jewish state. Arab nations feel a number of other countries, including the Soviet Union, should be involved so that non-Arab representatives could step in and represent their interests in the event the negotiations begin to fall apart.

Israel has reportedly suggested that any peace conference be held in Washington under U.S. auspices, while the Arabs have suggested it be held in a neutral location other than the United States.

The foreign ministers of the Western European nations that form the European Community suggested to Baker in Luxemburg on Thursday that the EC and the Soviet Union should cosponsor the peace conference.

Babies are tragic victims of Kurdish refugee crisis

ISIKVEREN, Turkey (AP) — Row after row of small dirt mounds line this refugee camp, the final resting place for hundreds of infants who are the most tragic victims of the Kurdish exodus from Iraq.

Each day, 15 to 40 new graves are dug in the camp's seven cemeteries. Grim-faced Kurdish men in checkered headdresses gently lower the tiny bundles into the earth, marking the tombs with lines of stones.

Doctors say about two-thirds of the refugees dying at the crowded, primitive camps on the Turkish border are children. Most suffered preventable diseases caused by lack of water and nights of sleeping outdoors.

Hundreds more infants likely will die of illness before U.S. and allied troops can build new refugee camps in northern Iraq, the doctors say.

Complicating matters, epidemics may sweep the overburdened camps now that warm spring weather is arriving, health workers warn. Temperatures reach near 60 degrees some days and are expected to rise further, perhaps within days, when seasonal rainstorms end.

"The situation will only get worse," said Bart Meijman, a medical coordinator for the relief organization Doctors Without Borders.

Authorities estimate 800,000 of Iraq's 4 million Kurds fled to the poorly accessible mountains along the Turkish border. Nearly 1.5 million sought safety along Iraq's rugged frontier with Iran.

Dozens of Kurdish women clutching blanket-swathed babies wait outside the aid group's tents in the Isikveren camp, temporary home to 160,000 Iraqis. Many of the bundles are limp.

In one tent, about 15 infants are hooked to intravenous tubes, receiving rehydration fluids.

Nearby, a mother feeds a small bottle of milk to a baby with saucer eyes and a shrunken body.

"This one hasn't had enough food," said Henk Reitsma, another official with Doctors Without Borders.

Dr. Ernst Krebs of Swiss Disaster Relief said many of the mothers were sick themselves. "On top of that, the baby doesn't have enough to eat or drink," he said.

Throughout the camp, the story is the same: coughing, dirty children and frail babies. The wailing of infants rarely ceases.

"Everyone in my family is ill," said Muhammed Ali, 26, whose daughters are 1½ years and 6 months old.

Aveny Albarwary, an Iraqi doctor, thinks her 9-month-old daughter, Kurdvin, will survive the bout of severe diarrhea that afflicts most children in the camp. But the bright-eyed child, whose name means "Love of Kurdistan," can no longer stand up.

More reserve units possible

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — New U.S. reserve units might be sent to the Persian Gulf for support duty to replace other reservists whose families are facing financial hardship and want their soldiers home, congressmen said Friday.

Democratic Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery of Mississippi, the leader of a congressional delegation looking into the matter, said the new reservists might be sent over on a volunteer basis.

Hundreds of reservists and National Guardsmen already have been shipped to the gulf in recent weeks or assigned stateside duty to help in the pullout. They range from flight coordinators to cargo handlers.

As long as American forces are in the gulf, they will need support troops such as water purification specialists and doctors.

And even after the bulk of the troops are gone, hundreds of tons of equipment will have to be readied by specialists for shipment home.

But the Army doesn't have enough regular specialized units to handle this job, and a 12-member congressional delegation arrived Friday on a four-day visit to look into the problem.

Juarez plants closed

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The Mexican government has closed two maquiladoras and a chemical plant for environmental offenses in the first such shutdowns this year.

Inspectors with the Mexican environmental agency, known as SEDUE, shut the plants Tuesday for improper treatment of residual water, defective emissions controls and other offenses, the El Paso Herald-Post reported Thursday.

"Temporary shutdowns are mandated only after a particular facility has been cited or warned many times in the past," said Rosa Manuel Salas, SEDUE's local director.

Ms. Salas would not to identify the plants, saying only that two were American-owned, mid-size maquiladoras and one was a Mexican chemical manufacturer.

The plants will be allowed to resume production once problems are corrected, she said.

Disease eradicated

ROME (AP) — Foot-and-mouth disease, which has devastated European livestock for centuries, has been eradicated from the continent, a U.N. agency said Friday.

The last outbreak of the highly contagious virus was recorded in July 1989, the Rome-based Food and Agriculture Organization said.

It said the number of cases had fallen because of a massive campaign of vaccinations, import controls and cooperation among national veterinary services.

Flier convicted in assault

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) - Mathias Rust, who amazed the world by flying a small plane to Moscow's Red Square in 1987, was convicted Friday of attempted manslaughter for stabbing a student nurse who spurned his advances.

A three-judge court sentenced the 23-year-old daredevil pilot to two years and six months in prison, less than the eight years asked for by the prosecution.

Rust seriously wounded Stefanie Walura in November 1989 at a hospital where both worked in this northern port. He attacked her after she rejected his advances.

On May 28, 1987, Rust flew from Finland to the Soviet Union in a borrowed Cessna 172, landing in the middle of Red Square.

His undetected violation of Soviet airspace so embarrassed Moscow that President Mikhail Gorbachev retired his defense minister and sacked his air defense chief.

Rust was convicted of hooliganism, although he insisted he made the flight to deliver a message of peace. He was released from Soviet custody and returned home to a hero's welcome in August 1988.

Church leader enthroned

CANTERBURY, England (AP) — George Carey, a son of the working class elevated to lead the Church of England as archbishop of Canterbury, said Friday the church will continue to speak out on social and political issues.

The hospital porter's son was enthroned as Canterbury Cathedral's 103rd archbishop before royalty and representatives of the world's religions, in a ceremony blending medieval splendor with hand-clapping gospel songs.

Oilers trade too

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oiler dealt their first-round draft choice — 17th overall — to the New England Patriots Friday for second- and fourth-round selections in Sunday's NFL draft, increasing the number of Oilers' picks to seven in the first four rounds.

The Patriots' second-round pick is 28th overall. There are only 27 picks in the first round this year because the New York Jets forfeited their selection when they chose Syracuse receiver Rob Moore in the supplemental draft last summer.

Oilers general manager Mike Holovak said he doesn't expect the quality of players to be much different between No. 17 and No. 28.

"I talked to a lot of other clubs about trading down. The key to the whole thing was getting New England's first pick in the second round."

The Oilers' top priority in this year's draft is defensive back and Holovak thought the three defensive backs rated highest by the Oilers — Notre Dame's Todd Lyght, Nebraska's Bruce Pickens and Texas' Stanley Richard — would be unavailable at the 17th spot.

The Oilers enter Sunday's draft without a first-round pick for the first time since 1981, which was Holovak's first year with the team. They are fortunate that there is a lot of depth in the secondary.

Dallas gets No. 1 after all

■ After saying Thursday that any deal for the NFL draft's top pick was dead, the Dallas Cowboys eventually do take the top spot from New England.

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys acquired the top pick in Sunday's NFL draft from the New England Patriots on Friday, trading one of their own first-round selections and a second-round pick, as well as other undisclosed considerations.

In simultaneous news conferences Friday afternoon, the Cowboys and Patriots announced the deal, which would allow the Cowboys to take Notre Dame wide receiver Raghib "Rocket" Ismail if they decide to do so.

Dallas, which has the 11th, 12th and 14th choices, traded its 11th choice and a pick in the second round, which is the 41st selection overall.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones refused to say what the undisclosed considerations were.

He also declined to disclose the status of talks with Ismail's agents.

"We're in negotiations and we have visited with his agents," he said.

A source told The Associated Press that Ismail is expected to ask for about $3 million a year plus a bonus in the negotiations. San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana is the highest paid player in the NFL, making approximately $4 million a year.

Asked if it was possible that Dallas could take another player with the pick, Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson replied: "Anything is possible with the Cowboys."

The 11th choice traded to the Patriots was obtained from Minnesota in the Herschel Walker deal. The Cowboys now have the 1st, 12th and 14th picks as well as two picks apiece in the third and fourth rounds.

"We're very excited about the prospect of holding the No. 1 overall selection in the draft," Jones said.

The Patriots had been considering trade offers from the Cowboys and Atlanta. But the deal seemed to have hit the skids Thursday, when Jones told The Associated Press: "We came close, but there's no deal."

The Pat's 1-15 record last season means one new outstanding player isn't likely to make them a winning team. In addition, the team hadn't been able to reach a contract agreement with Ismail.

Atlanta, which has the third and 13th picks, was the first team to express serious interest in positioning itself for a shot at Ismail, who is foregoing his senior season at Notre Dame.

Ismail also has been wooed by Toronto of the Canadian Football League, which reportedly has made a two-year, $4 million offer. That would increase the importance to an NFL team of signing him before the draft rather than risk picking him and then losing him.

Ismail reportedly was to announce Thursday whether he would go to the CFL, but Ed Abram, his agent, had no comment.

"Our position is if the trade was made to Dallas ... the challenge is to try to sign him before the draft," Abram said. "The Canadian offer is still on the table and quite viable."

Lee, MHS can clinch playoff tie

■ Wins today by the local high school baseball teams can assure them of no worse than a tie for a playoff spot.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Both Midland High and Midland Lee can bring their hopes of postseason baseball play to fruition today, as each team can clinch no worse than a tie for a playoff spot with a win.

Tenth-ranked Lee will host Odessa High on Johnson Field at 2 p.m., while MHS travels to Odessa Permian, also at 2 p.m.

In other District 4-5A action today, San Angelo travels to Abilene Cooper while Abilene High takes the day off.

Wins by Lee (15-8 overall, 7-2 in district) and MHS (11-9, 7-3) would make San Angelo the only team capable of tying either local squad. The Bobcats are 5-4 in district and 12-12-1 overall.

However, a if AHS (12-9, 5-5) wins out while Lee and-or MHS loses out, the picture become progressively muddied.

After today, Lee plays at AHS Tuesday and hosts San Angelo next Saturday. MHS closes its regular season Tuesday by hosting Cooper and is open for the final district date.

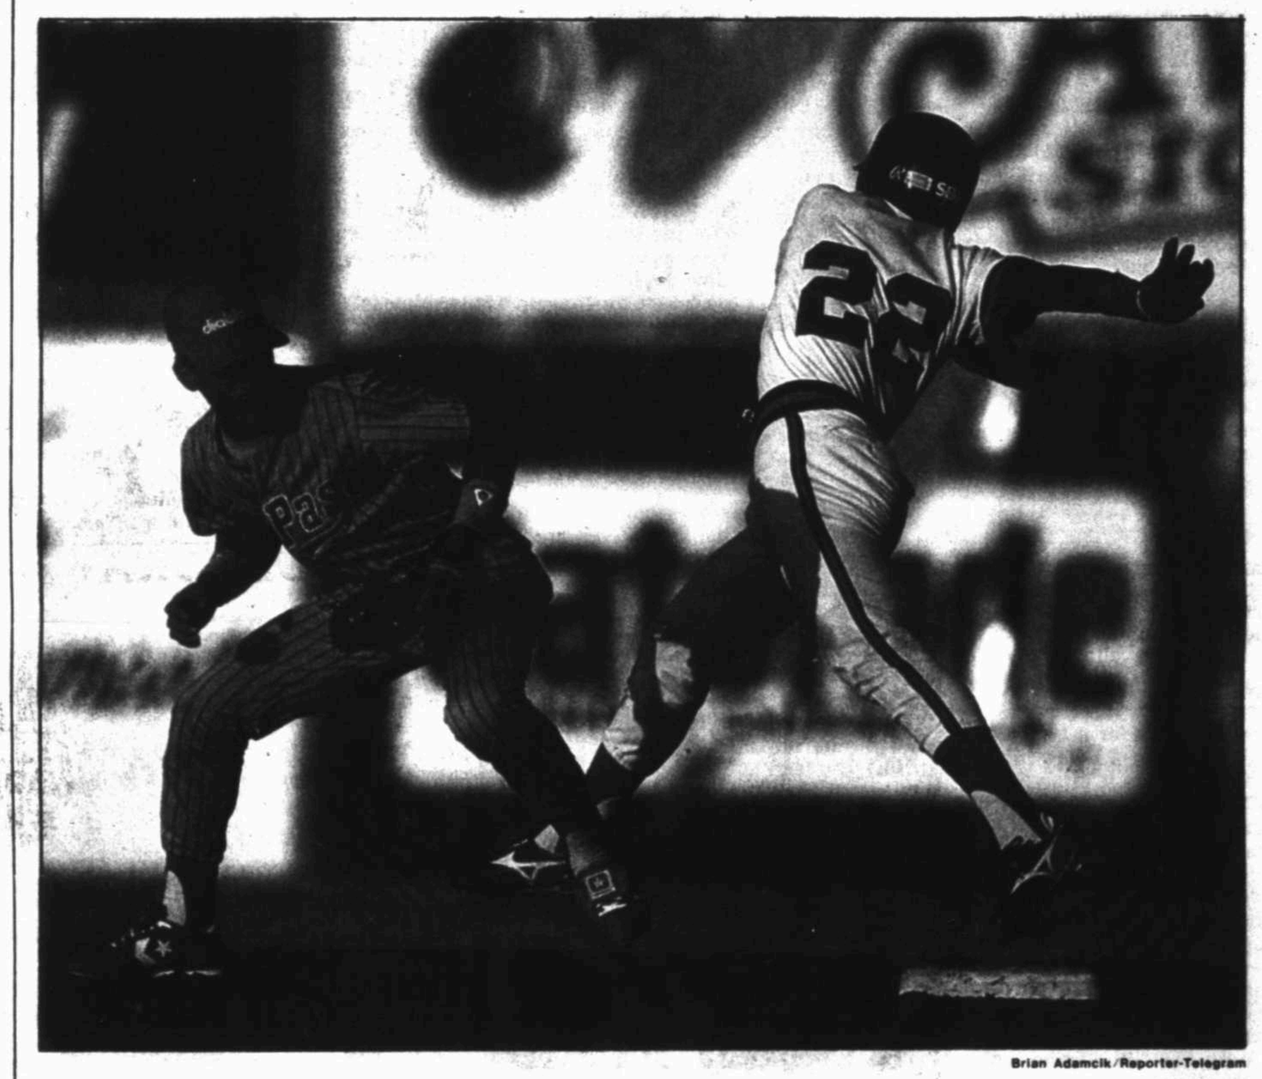

But Jesse Benavidez, head coach of the league-leading Rebels, is refusing to look past today's game.

"We're in a situation where we can win the district outright, come in second place or not go to the playoffs at all," he said. "I think our kids have shown enough character to make the playoffs, maybe, but you never know with this game.

"We are not going to worry about that until it happens, though. If you start worrying about all that stuff, you won't get anywhere."

The Rebels are coming off an open date, so Benavidez has his choice of pitchers, opting for strapping sophomore Julian Urquidez. The right-handed Urquidez (1-2), has a 4.67 ERA in the 18 district innings he has thrown, and so far has relied on his curveball to strike out 24 opposing batters in that span.

El Paso second baseman Luis Lopez get the force out on Midland Angel Ramon Sambo (22) to end the second inning Friday night at Angels Stadium.

Angels shut Diablos down

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Television's top animated character, Bart Simpson, may have been at Angels' Stadium for the kids' sake, but it was Midland's Todd James and Tim Salmon who looked like the real cartoon Super Heroes Friday night.

James handcuffed El Paso's once-mighty offense and Salmon did almost everything else as the Angels defeated the El Paso Diablos, 5-2, for their second straight victory.

Salmon bashed a three-run home run in the bottom of the first to set the tone for the remainder of the evening. The homer, which cleared the scoreboard in left field, was Salmon's fifth of the season, good for the early Texas League lead.

Later in the evening, Salmon combined with left fielder Ramon Sambo, third baseman Jeff Barns and catcher Ken Rivers for spectacular back-to-back throws to nail would-be runners at home plate and save at least two runs.

The defensive gems came in the sixth when El Paso's Jim Tatum and John Jaha, two of the league's Top 5 hitters, led off with back to back singles. After Shon Ashley flied out to right field, John Byington, another of the league's top hitters, singled to center field. Sensing a good chance to score, Tatum tore around third on his way to the plate, but was thrown out on Salmon's perfect throw.

One pitch later, El Paso's Kenny Jackson singled to left, and Jaha attempted to score from second, but was thrown out on a relay from Sambo-to-Barns-to-Rivers.

"It was the best throw of my life," Salmon said. "I just got a good one off and got a great carry on the ball."

James, who went from being in danger of being lifted from the game to getting out of an inning after allowing four hits but no runs, praised his teammates.

It's unanimous: Holyfield wins

Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The "Battle of the Ages" went to youth, but it was more of a battle than most thought it would be.

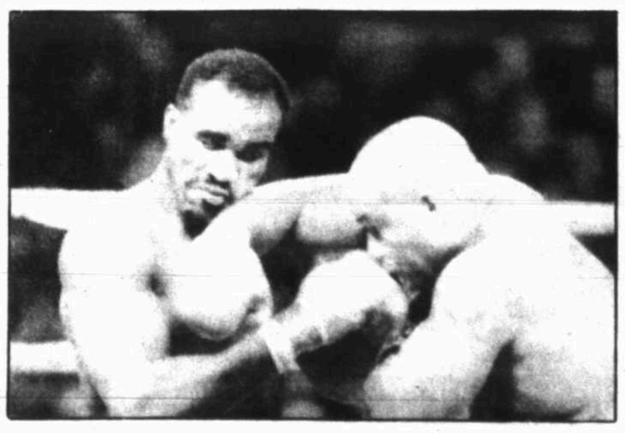

Evander Holyfield retained the heavyweight championship with a unanimous 12-round decision over George Foreman Friday night, but the 42-year-old challenger managed to thumb his nose at Father Time with a game and gritty performance.

Holyfield, 14 years Foreman's junior, just had too much hand speed and foot movement for the 257-pound Foreman, a former champion who lost for the first time in his comeback campaign and may have fought for the last time.

"I threw more punches than George," Holyfield said. "I thought I outboxed him. He was strong throughout the whole fight."

Foreman, trying to become the oldest man ever to win a championship in any weight class, came back from a 10-year retirement four years ago with the express purpose of regaining the title he held in 1973-74.

ODESSA — If team points had been kept at Friday's Regional Qualifiers Track Meet at Ratliff Stadium, the girls from Midland Lee might have been in line for a trophy of some kind.

Their numbers were not quite as spectacular as the ones they posted in the tense surroundings of last week's District 4-5A track meet, but the Lady

AL Roundup

BALTIMORE — Jeff Robinson bounced back to beat Texas with seven strong innings and the Baltimore Orioles handed the Rangers their third shutout in eight games this season.

Glenn Davis hit his second home run and every Baltimore starter except Bill Ripken got a hit in stopping the Rangers' three-game winning streak. The Orioles finished with 10 hits and Ripken added a suicide squeeze bunt.

Brian Downing got three of Texas' five hits off Robinson and Paul Kilgus. Downing has reached base in 20 of 24 plate appearances this season.

Robinson (1-1), obtained during the offseason in a trade with Detroit, gave up five runs in two innings in his first start last Sunday at Texas. But he didn't allow a runner past second base this time as he scattered four hits, struck out five and walked four.

The Orioles used a walk, two singles and a pair of well-placed bunts to take a 2-0 lead against Kenny Rogers (0-2) in the second inning. Dwight Evans walked and took second on a single by Craig Worthington.

Both runners advanced on a sacrifice by Leo Gomez, and Bob Melvin followed with an RBI single before Ripken scored Worthington on a suicide squeeze.

Yankees 3, Royals 1

NEW YORK — Tim Leary pitched a three-hitter and tied his career-high with 12 strikeouts and Jesse Barfield's two-run homer broke a sixth-inning tie as the New York Yankees beat the Kansas City Royals.

Leary (2-0) walked three in sending the Royals to their fourth straight defeat. Leary led the majors last year in losses, going 9-19.

Barfield's first home run of the season came with two outs against Mike Boddicker (1-2) and put New York ahead 3-1. Boddicker gave up six hits, walked four and struck out none in six innings.

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — John Olerud pounded Milwaukee for two more home runs and Rance Mulliniks also connected, leading Dave Stieb and the Toronto Blue Jays past the Brewers.

Olerud is 7-for-15 against Milwaukee this season with three home runs. Toronto has won four of five games between the teams.

Stieb (1-2) gave up Paul Molitor's leadoff home run in the first inning, but settled down to win his fifth straight start at County Stadium.

Stieb allowed eight hits in his first complete game since pitching a no-hitter last Sept. 2 against Cleveland. He struck out two, walked two and was backed by three double plays.

Olerud homered in the second off Don August (0-2) to tie the game at 1.

Bucs end Cub streak

NL Roundup

PITTSBURGH — Jeff King's two-out single in the bottom of the ninth inning negated Andre Dawson's grand slam in the top half as the Pittsburgh Pirates rallied to end the Chicago Cubs' six-game winning streak with a 5-4 victory Friday night.

Dave Smith (0-1), perfect in four previous save opportunities, started the ninth by giving up singles to pinch-hitter Curtis Wilkerson and Gary Redus. After Jay Bell's sacrifice, Smith's wild pitch tied the score.

Andy Van Slyke, who homered and had three RBIs, grounded out before Bobby Bonilla and Barry Bonds were intentionlly walked. King hit a 1-1 pitch to short center field to make a winner of Stan Belinda (1-1) who allowed Dawson's two-out pinch homer.

The fifth grand slam of Dawson's career spoiled a brilliant performance by Vicente Palacios, who limited the Cubs to only one hit in 6 2-3 innings in his first start since 1988.

Belinda, who came on to start the eighth, walked Ryne Sandberg with one out, gave up a double to Mark Grace and struck out George Bell. Then Belinda hit Dwight Smith with a pitch before Dawson hit the next offering into the left field seats.

Van Slyke hit a two-run homer in the third, when Cubs starter Danny Jackson left because of a strained left groin muscle.

Jackson left after throwing a 2-1 pitch to Bell. Mike Bielecki came in and completed the walk, charged to Jackson. Van Slyke followed by hitting the ball into the third level in right field for his second home run.

Expos 2, Mets 1

MONTREAL — Dennis Martinez allowed five hits over 7 2-3 innings to beat Dwight Gooden in an encore matchup and give the Montreal Expos a victory over the New York Mets.

Martinez (2-1), who lasted only five innings against Gooden in a loss last Saturday in New York, struck out two and did not walk a batter to help Montreal win its third straight game. The Mets broke through in the eighth inning, snapping a 22-inning scoreless streak by Expo pitchers.

Gooden (2-1), who felt stiffness in his arm after throwing more than 140 pitches while striking out 14 in Saturday's victory over the Expos, was as effective as Martinez. Gooden allowed four hits, one earned run and struck out six while walking one in seven innings.

Delino DeShields led off the Montreal first with a triple to right field and scored one out later when Ivan Calderon was safe on shortstop Howard Johnson's fielding error. Calderon stole second and scored on Tim Wallach's single to right.

Tim Burke, the third Montreal pitcher, worked the final inning for his second save.

Mark Carreon, pinch hitting for Gooden, doubled with two out in the eighth. Vince Coleman followed with an RBI single.

Reds 8, Braves 3

ATLANTA — The Cincinnati Reds took advantage of tormentor Tom Glavine's wildness to score four runs on only one hit in the fourth inning and beat Atlanta despite three home runs by the Braves.

The Reds sent 10 batters to the plate in the fourth as Glavine (1-1) and reliever Marvin Freeman issued four walks and hit two batters. Glavine lost to Cincinnti for only the third time in 12 career decisions.

Barry Larkin opened the inning with a walk and was doubled to third by Eric Davis. After an infield out, Mariano Duncan was hit by a pitch. Larkin scored on a passed ball before Todd Benzinger and Joe Oliver walked, forcing in another run for the Reds, who won their third straight game.

Cardinals 3, Phillies 1

ST. LOUIS — Todd Zeile, whose .162 average with runners in scoring position was the worst in the National League last season, had a two-run single as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies in their home opener.

Bob Tewksbury (1-1) gave up four hits and a run in seven innings, striking out a career-high eight, to win his second straight matchup against Terry Mulholland (1-2). Lee Smith, the third Cardinal pitcher, got the last five outs for his fifth save and St. Louis' fifth victory.

The Cardinals, who scored all their runs in the sixth inning, were the last team in the major leagues to hold their home opener.

Mulholland entered the sixth with a three-hitter.

ANGELS: James handcuffs EP

(From 1B)

"You can't ask for a better defense," James said. "I've never seen anything like it in my life. I could've very easily been out of the game."

James, the first pitcher on the Angel staff to win two games, allowed nine of the 10 Diablos' hits — all of which were singles — through seven innings. Very much in control of his pitches throughout practically his entire stay, the 23-year-old Californian didn't allow an El Paso runner to second base until the fifth inning; only two made it to third in his appearance.

The Diablos' feared big guns of Jaha (.645 season average), Tatum (.500), and Byington (.519), were limited to four hits in 11 at bats. Entering Friday's game, the three were the Nos. 1, 2 and 4 hitters in the league. Jaha's averaged dropped 45 points and Byington's 19 after Friday's game.

"There's just something about those guys," James said. "It's the way they stand at the plate or something. It's like they're going to tear your head off.

"It's nice being the third pitcher in the series because you get to see what they can and can't hit."

Salmon, who "Baseball America" has compared to a young Dale Murphy, was undaunted by his offensive heroics.

"You've got to take 'em while you can," he said. "Once you're satisfied, you tend to relax, so you can't just sit back and say 'This is great.' "

Salmon was not the only Angel who provided the offense; Kevin Flora was 2-for-4 with a double and a triple and Sambo was 1-for-4 with two RBIs.

Mavs hand Rockets another loss

Associated Press

DALLAS — Derek Harper scored 19 points, including a key 16-footer with 31 seconds to play Friday night, sending the Dallas Mavericks to a 113-107 victory over the Houston Rockets.

The Rockets slashed what had been an 82-72 Mavericks lead earlier in the quarter to 108-107 with 50 seconds to play on Hakeem Olajuwon's 14-foot turnaround jumper.

On Dallas' next possession, Harper hit from the left of the foul line for a three-point lead, and Herb Williams added a free throw with 21 seconds to play.

Vernon Maxwell led the Rockets with 28 points and Olajuwon added 26. Houston was seeking a franchise-record 52nd victory and record 22nd road win.

Dallas, which won its second straight after losing eight in a row, got 16 points off the bench from Kelvin Upshaw.

Bulls 115, Hornets 99

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Michael Jordan scored 18 of his 41 points in the fourth quarter, and the Chicago Bulls won their 60th game for the first time in franchise history.

Chicago led 82-58 with 3:35 left in the third quarter and 86-72 going into the fourth period. But Charlotte climbed within four on three occasions in the final quarter, the last time at 94-90 with 5:11 left on Kelly Tripucka's short jumper.

After Jordan scored to make it 96-90, Charlotte's Kenny Gattison was called for a technical foul for arguing a referee's call with 4:42 left.

Timberwolves 109, Bucks 91

MINNEAPOLIS — Pooh Richardson, who spent the last 13 minutes of the first half on the bench, singlehandedly outscored Milwaukee 13-10 in the first seven minutes of the third period as the Minnesota Timberwolves built an 18-point lead and beat the Bucks.

Heat 114, 76ers 100

MIAMI — With Philadelphia's starters sitting out half the game, Rony Seikaly grabbed 20 rebounds and scored a season-high 35 points to help the Miami Heat beat the 76ers for the first time ever.

Charles Barkley, playing in his second game since a knee injury that sidelined him for seven games, had 14 points and 12 rebounds in 22 minutes for Philadelphia.

Pacers 130, Knicks 118

INDIANAPOLIS — Chuck Person scored 25 points as the Indiana Pacers beat New York, clinching the No. 7 seed for the Eastern Conference playoffs.

Magic 112, Bullets 107

ORLANDO, Fla. — Scott Skiles scored 32 points as the Orlando Magic defeated the Washington Bullets for the first time.

The Magic, who outrebounded the Bullets 56-30, trailed by 10 in the second half, although Washington was playing without leading scorer Bernard King because of a sore back.

Nuggets 125, Spurs 122

DENVER — Michael Adams scored 30 points and Jerome Lane grabbed a career-high 23 rebounds as Denver snapped a 10-game losing streak and narrowed San Antonio's lead in the Midwest Division to a half-game.

Cavaliers 124, Celtics 117, OT

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Craig Ehlo scored six of his 20 points in overtime, including a clinching layup with 11.7 seconds left, as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Boston Celtics.

The loss was the third straight for the Celtics.

Pistons 126, Hawks 120

ATLANTA — Joe Dumars matched his season high with 42 points, including 15 in the final quarter, as the Detroit Pistons swept the season series with the Atlanta Hawks.

FIGHT: Foreman earns moral victory by going the distance

(From 1B)

Most of the estimated crowd of 15,000 at the Convention Center rooted him on, but it was not to be.

Holyfield never let Foreman get set and simply outpunched Big George.

Judge Jerry Roth scored it for the unbeaten Holyfield 117-110. Eugene Grant saw it for the champion 116-111 and judge Tom Kazmarerk had it surprisingly close, 115-112.

The AP favored Holyfield 118-110, giving Foreman only the second and fifth rounds.

According to a computer analysis, Holyfield landed 355 punches, while Foreman landed 188.

Foreman appeared to be the harder puncher, but he couldn't put his punches together as Holyfield did.

"Holyfield is not the kind of guy who makes your knees shake," Foreman had said before the fight.

Holyfield, however, is a well-schooled, superbly conditioned professional fighter, and his strategy of making Foreman move a lot to tire him out worked to perfection.

Holyfield worried before the fight that he wouldn't be given any credibility for beating a 42-year-old fighter who constantly joked about the size of his stomach and his love of food.

But Holyfield also knows that is the champion's job to beat anyone placed in front of him. He's done that to 26 opponents, including nine heavyweights. Not bad for a man once considered too small to fight in boxing's biggest, most glamorous division.

Foreman had the public's attention in the run-up to this wildly-hyped bout. But in the end, Holyfield still held the champion's belt.

"I'm glad I didn't take him for granted," Holyfield said. "I hurt him, but he recovered. George is a determined fighter. He has that desire to win. George is a lot quicker than people think. He had me confused at times. George can hit."

TRACK: wins in the shot put

(From 1B)

Rebels took this meet for what it was: a tune-up session for next weekend's Region I Track Meet in Lubbock.

"This is a practice meet. You don't try to kill yourself," said TaNisha Mills, whose 59.15 in the 400-meters was good enough to beat the field despite being nearly three seconds off the 4-5A record of 56.80, which she posted here a week ago.

"I got tight at the top of the last curve," Mills explained her time lapse.

However, the Lee sophomore loosened up in time to run a leg for the winning 1600-meter relay team, which at 4:02.08 was about three ticks off its regional qualifying time.

Traci Logan provided Lee with another first when she posted a 46.36 in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles. And coupled with Takeria Strambler's second-place effort of 17-3 in the long jump, her third place in the triple jump (35-7) and Rosie Eaden's third-place leap of 5-2 in the high jump, the Lady Rebels pretty much had their way in the events they entered.

El Paso Hanks also took first place in three girls events.

Lee's only boys on their way to regionals also had solid outings Friday as Scott McCloud took first place in the shot put with a heave of 53-0¼, and teammate Jovan Tellez finished third at 52-5¼.

"This helped get me mentally ready for regionals," McCloud said. "I'd like to add another foot to my distance first, though."

Most of the boys successes at Ratliff were split three ways as Lubbock Estacado captured three first places, and Odessa High and Odessa Permian won two events each.

The OHS 1600-meter relay team chopped nearly five seconds off its district meet time to win the event in 3:21.92. And OHS' Brad Givens, who did not even qualify in the 100 meters, won it outright in 10.57.

Permian won the boys 400-meter relay in 41.83 and Gerrod Bergen of the Panthers topped the 200-meter dash with a 21.86.

NFL recruiting crop brings mixed reviews

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK — An NFL personnel man was asked last week about a player expected to be among the first 10 chosen in Sunday's draft.

"We've got a mixed review on him," was the reply. "On the other hand, we have a mixed review on just about everybody."

It's that kind of draft, coming as it does a year after the first one in which underclassmen were allowed for the first time. Eight were chosen in the first round and one more in the supplemental, leaving the pickings in this year's draft a lot like the offerings in most households the day after Thanksgiving.

Only in a season when most blue-chip seniors are already in the NFL would everyone's first choice be a ...kick returner, Notre Dame's Raghib "Rocket" Ismail.

Only in a league crying for pass rushers would one of the best defensive line prospects be a guy named Eric Swann who played last year for the ... uh ... Bay State Titans. He'll be the first player without college experience drafted since the Rams took Emil Sitko in 1946. (Sitko, nikcknamed "Six-Yard" for his average per carry, chose Notre Dame instead.)

Ismail is so talented; so far the best of a so-so class that he will be the first choice overall, either by the Dallas Cowboys, who obtained his rights from New England for one of their No. 1s, or by someone to whom the Cowboys trade, like Atlanta. Who can can pass up a man who averaged 14.4 yards every time he touched the ball at the top level of college football?

But what is he besides a return man? Is his 175-pound body big enough to stand up to the pounding he would take as a running back? Are his hands reliable enough to make him another Jerry Rice? Is he anything more than a faster, more glamorous version of Dave Meggett, whom the New York Giants got on the fifth round two years ago?

Analysis

"He's a great, great player," says Bill Polian, general manager of the Buffalo Bills. "He's done everything that was asked of him on the highest of college levels?"

"I don't see why he can't be a reciever in the pros all the time," says Dick Steinberg of the New York Jets.

But there are respected dissenters.

"Some people say it's Ismail and then 10 other guys," says George Young, general manager of the Giants. "I'm not sure it's not 10 other guys and Ismail."

"He's a dilemma to me," says Tony Razzano, San Francisco's personnel director. "He's the greatest return man I've ever seen, but if you don't kick him the ball you're not going to hurt yourself. The question is how is he as a receiver and what he can do for you out of the backfield. At those positions, he's a project."

But so is everyone else in this 1991 version of the NFL lottery. Maybe there are, as Young says, 10 other guys beyond Ismail, but ask 10 scouts, coaches or personnel directors for their list and you get 10 different names.

The deepest position seems to be wide receiver.

There are Ismail and Herman Moore of Virginia, the two pre-eminent underclassmen this year; Alvin Harper of Tennesee; Randal Hill and Wesley Carroll of Miami; Mike Pritchard of Colorado; Reggie Barrett of Texas-El Paso, and, coming up fast on the outside, David Daniels of Penn State.

Then you hear about the flaws — Hill is a hot dog in a long Miami tradiion; Moore isn't quite quick enough off the line; Harper doesn't run good routes; Barrett and Daniels aren't fast enough ... .

In addition to Ismail, the draft has two other pivots — Swann and the Cowboys, who sat in the middle with the 11th, 12th and 14th picks, their own and the ones they got from Minnesota for Herschel Walker and New Orleans for Steve Walsh. Then they traded the 11th to New England to grab Ismail, but they still have the other two.

"Anything is possible with the Cowboys," says coach Jimmy Johnson.

Swann is 6-foot-4, 311 pounds of rare defensive talent who was a high school All-American in North Carolina, signed a letter of intent to play at North Carolina State, but failed half-a-dozen times to total 700 on his SAT exams. So he played semi-pro (call it minor league) ball in Massachusetts and decided to enter the draft this year.

In this era when dominating defensive linemen are a rarity, everyone raves at his natural ability; everyone questions how much experience he needs.

"A lot of teams are scared to death of him," acknowledges his agent, Dick Bell, who doubles as the Titans' general manager. "I can understand that. But I also know his talent."

So do the teams, making Swann a temptation, even to Denver (No. 4 overall) at the very top of the draft.

"If you polled all 28 teams, I think they all would say they have the same pressing need — a pass rusher," says Steinberg. "Probably more mistakes are made on defensive linemen because teams are so desperate for them and they will take a chance to fill a glaring need."

Then there's Dallas.

"I'll wait for the phone to ring," Jimmy Johnson, who last year guided a team that was 1-15 in his first year to 7-9, said before the Ismail trade.

He may still wait — in his first two drafts, he's proven to be a wheeler-dealer in the Bill Walsh-Bobby Beathard mode, trading up and down with the picks he got from Minnesota for Walker.

So who are the players people want?

Brett Favre of Southern Mississippi has passed Long Beach State's Dan McGwire as the top quarterback with Louisville's Browning Nagle a longshot first-round pick.

Nick Bell of Iowa is the only running back rated in the top 10 with Fresno State's Aaron Craver and LSU's Harvey Williams other first-round possibilities.

There's that flock of wide receivers, although no first-round tight ends.

The offensive linemen include tackles Antone Davis and Charles McRae of Tennessee; Pat Harlow of Southern Cal; Stan Thomas of Texas; Ed King of Auburn and John Flannery of Syracuse.

Miami's Russell Maryland will probably be the top defensive lineman taken, followed by Swann; Ted Washington of Louisville; Bobby Wilson of Michigan State and Kelvin Pritchett of Mississippi.

Nebraska's Mike Croel is rated the top linebacker along with Alfred Williams of Colorado, Huey Richardson of Florida and Keith Traylor of Central State in Oklahoma.

And defensive backs are relatively deep, led by Todd Lyght of Notre Dame, who may be the second pick overall by Cleveland to join Ismail as the third 1-2 combination in history from the same college. Eric Turner of UCLA, Bruce Pickens of Nebraska, Stanley Richard of Texas, Jesse Campbell of North Carolina State and Henry Jones of Illinois are also considered of first-round quality.

In addition to Dallas' three picks, Atlanta will have two first-round picks, the second from Indianapolis as part of the trade that gave the Colts the right to Jeff George, the top pick in last year's draft. The Colts, Vikings, Saints and Jets have no first round picks, New York having used its choice when it took Rob Moore in the supplemental draft.

Aggies upend third-ranked Longhorns, 4-1

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Freshman Jeff Granger allowed the third-ranked Texas Longhorns only four hits, pitching the Texas Aggies to a 4-1 Southwest Conference victory Friday.

Texas, which has scored only two runs in its last 27 innings of conference play, fell to 9-4 in league play and 37-13 overall. A&M improved to 7-6 in a scrambled SWC race in which only three games separates the top eight teams. The Aggies are 35-17 for the season.

Granger, who has two straight complete game performances, raised his record to 6-2 while leading the Aggies to their fourth straight conference win. He outdueled Texas freshman Brooks Kieschnick (4-1) who had his consecutive scoreless inning streak halted at 34.1 innings, just 1.2 innings short of the school mark set by Roger Clemens in 1982.

Granger, who is a quarterback on the Aggie football team and has been participating in spring drills all week, fanned 10 and allowed three walks in front of 4,467 fans. The 6-4 lefthander is fourth in the nation in strikeouts, having whiffed 14 Rice batters a week ago.

A&M took a 3-0 lead in the fifth inning after infield singles by Brian Thomas and Sittichoke Huckuntod and RBI doubles by Blake Pyle and Mike Hickey.

SWC Baseball

Texas never got a runner past first base until the seventh inning. Pinch-hitter Kevin Pate walked, moved to third on Clay King's single and scored on a Kieschnick's single.

Houston 8, Rice 7

HOUSTON — Phil Lewis had four hits and scored two runs to lead Houston to a victory over Rice in Southwest Conference baseball.

Rice took an early 3-0 lead, mainly due to Chris Feris' two-run homer in the first inning. But Houston answered with five runs in their half of the first

Rusty Smajstria lead the first-inning blitz for Houston with a three-run homer, his sixth of the season.

Houston added two more runs in the fourth on RBI singles by Brian Blair and Scoot Kohler.

But with Houston leading 8-4 in the ninth, John Eierman led off the inning with his fourth home run of the season, this one coming off reliever Al Benavides.

Benavides was replaced by right-hander Bobby Stone who pitched the next two-thirds of the inning and allowed one run on one hit.

TCU 9, Texas Tech 5

LUBBOCK — First baseman Chris Thomsen hit two home runs, leading Texas Christian past Texas Tech 9-5 in a Southwest Conference game Friday.

TCU improved to 29-17 overall and 7-6 in SWC play. Tech's Red Raiders fell to 39-14 and 8-8.

Thomsen, who now has 20 homers for the season, hit a solo shot to lead off the second inning after Tech jumped off to a 2-0 lead. He followed with a 2-run homer in the sixth that tied the game at 4-all.

TCU led by only 5-4, but exploded for four runs in the eighth inning, chasing Tech starter Mark Brandenburg (11-4, 3-2).

Arkansas 13, Baylor 5

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Bubba Carpenter had a two-run homer in the first and Arkansas collected seven runs in the eighth inning to plow over Baylor.

Arkansas (33-16, 8-8) jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first on Carpenter's hit. After Arkansas scored a run in the third, Baylor (34-11, 7-6) tied the game at 3 in the fourth on a Mike Bohny single to right and took a two-run lead in the fifth with a two-run home run by Kevin Ellis.

Borg draws Arrese

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Bjorn Borg drew clay court specialist Jordi Arrese of Spain on Friday as his opening-round opponent in the Monte Carlo Open, as the Swede makes a comeback after an eight-year retirement.

Borg has played just three official matches since 1981 after he won five Wimbledons and six French Open titles between 1974 and 1981.

Borg, looking fit at 34, did not stay around to answer questions and rushed out of the Monte Carlo Country Club for a television interview.

Canadiens, Penguins use overtime to tie series

Associated Press

BOSTON — Stephane Richer's second goal of the game 27 seconds into overtime ended a shootout that gave the Montreal Canadiens a 4-3 win over the Boston Bruins, tying their NHL playoff series at one game apiece Friday night.

Brian Skrudland passed the puck from behind the net to the left of Boston goalie Andy Moog to Richer behind the other side of the net. Richer passed it to Shayne Corson, whose shot went wide, but Richer collected the puck and beat Moog from the left corner of the crease.

NHL Playoffs

The loss ruined the Bruins' perfect overtime record. They were 5-0-12 in overtime during the regular season, while Montreal was 3-3-11.

The best-of-7 Adams Division final shifts to Montreal for games Sunday and Tuesday nights.

Both teams changed their defensive approach from Wednesday night, when Boston outshot Montreal 25-19 in a 2-1 victory. This time, the Bruins held a 44-36 shooting advantage through three periods. Richer's shot was the only one of overtime.

The only overtime either team played in the opening round was in Game 5 of Montreal's six-game series with Buffalo. The Canadiens won that on Russ Courtnall's goal at 5:56 of the extra period.

Richer's sixth goal of the playoffs tied the Bruins 3-3 with 8:30 left in the third period. Corson passed the puck from behind the net into the slot. It hit Skrudland's skate and was stopped by Moog.

But Skrudland went into Moog, knocking him down, and Richer stuffed the loose puck into the left corner of the net.

Boston had led 2-0 after one period on goals by Ray Bourque and Ken Hodge. Corson got Montreal back in the game and provided momentum going into the third period when he scored with 29 seconds left in the second.

Russ Courtnall tied it at 4:24 of the third, but Dave Christian gave Boston a 3-2 lead at 7:54 on a 30-footer from the left circle, his fifth playoff goal.

Penguins 7, Capitals 6

PITTSBURGH — Kevin Stevens scored his second goal of the game at 8:10 of overtime as Pittsburgh blew a two-goal, third-period lead and then rallied to beat the Washington Capitals and even the Patrick Division finals at a game apiece.

The Penguns, who sent the game into overtime on Randy Gilhen's first playoff goal at 15:25 of the third, ended Washington's streak of six consecutive overtime playoff wins.

The Capitals hadn't lost in an overtime playoff game since a 3-2, four-overtime loss to the New York Islanders on April 18, 1987.

Pittsburgh, which three times took two-goal leads only to see Washington rally, dominated the overtime and almost won it on Mario Lemieux's near-miss with three minutes gone.

Ron Francis took the puck from Al Iafrate in the Penguins' zone, skated up ice and feathered a pass to Stevens in the left circle. Stevens beat backup goaltender Mike Liut with a 10-footer for the winning goal.

Pittsburgh had lost the opener 4-2 after blowing a 2-1 lead in the third, only the fourth time in the Capitals' 75 playoff games they've won when trailing after two periods.

Paul Coffey, highly critical of his teammates' play and coach Bob Johnson's substituting in Game 1, set up all three Pittsburgh goals in the second period as the Penguins surged back from a 1-0 deficit to lead 5-3.

PREPS: 3-5A race surprising

(From 1B)

The Lee coach also has senior lefty Jeff Johnston (9-1) at his disposal, but is hoping the save his ace for the unfriendly confines at Abilene Tuesday. Maybe of more concern to Benavidez, though, is how the newly state-ranked Rebs' foes will react to playing the No. 10 team.

"The kids don't really know how to take it, and I really didn't want it," he said. "I can see where it might put pressure on our kids, but also the people coming in here to play you play a little harder.

"You take Cooper (the preseason No. 1 team that has fallen to 3-6 in 4-5A). Look at that situation and look at where they are. It's nice to be up there, but on any given day ..."

Though at this writing Bulldog head coach Rick Wood was undecided on a starter, MHS' bats should be able to keep it in any game. The 'Dogs are averaging more than seven runs and 10 hits a game in 4-5A play.

However, Wood foresees a game where one key hit could make the difference.

"The pitchers have definitely caught up with the hitters. You're not going to see any more 15- or 16-run games, I don't think, so it boils down to who gets the key hit," he said.

NOTES: The race in District 3-5A, 4-5A's perennial bi-district foe, has so far brought a surprise or two. With four district dates left counting today's games, Lubbock Coronado is atop the standings at 7-1 (14-9 overall). Amarillo High is currently in second place at 6-2, 16-5, while Lubbock Monterey is 5-2, 19-6 and owns a loss to Amarillo. Amarillo Tascosa is not out of it yet, either, at 4-3 and 9-10.

O's activate McDonald

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles activated pitcher Ben McDonald off the disabled list on Friday and waived reliever Jose Bautista, who had a 20.77 ERA and an 0-1 record in four games.

McDonald, who had been sidelined with an elbow injury, was assigned to the Oriole bullpen for Friday night's game against the Texas Rangers.

"He could pitch tonight if I need him," manager Frank Robinson said.

There is no timetable on when the 23-year-old righthander would get his first start, Robinson added.

McDonald was slated to pitch on opening day for the Orioles, but he hurt his elbow in March and was put on the 15-day disabled list. He pitched five innings in Florida earlier this week and reported no pain.

Bautista was 2-0 in spring training, but was ineffective in each appearance during the regular season.

Marine loses death-penalty appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The military death penalty has been upheld against a constitutional challenge by a Marine facing the first military execution in 30 years.

At the same time, the U.S. Court of Military Appeals said that Lance Cpl. Ronnie Curtis may bring at least one more appeal, challenging the racial composition of his jury and other matters.

The court, in its ruling Thursday, rejected arguments by Curtis' attorneys that murder defendants in military trials are denied the protections accorded civilians in state courts. The defense contended, specifically, that President Reagan abused his authority when he signed an executive order in 1984, without congressional approval, outlining rules for military capital cases.

Curtis, who is black, contends racial taunts drove him to kill Lt. James Lotz of Scranton, Pa., and Lotz's wife, Joan, at Camp Lejeune, N.C., on April 13, 1987.

Curtis, who confessed to a state trooper and to other investigators, was sentenced to death by a nine-member court martial panel, including three blacks. His defense contended in the appeal that he was entitled to 12 sentencing jurors, as is the practice in all states with death penalties.

But the military appeals court disagreed.

The last military execution was in 1961 when a soldier was hanged for rape and attempted murder. The military has built a chamber at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., for lethal injections.

Curtis, the adopted son of a working-class couple from Wichita, Kan., could take his case to the U.S. Supreme Court if he loses in the military tribunal.

The Ultimate Connection

Communication is a basic need in our world. For over one hundred years, the telephone has transformed the invisible energy produced by our voice into an intelligible form of communication. Whether we phone next door or around the world, we expect to make that connection.

Now let us consider another invisible, more ethereal form of communication . . . prayer. Each time we come to God with faith and the acceptance of His will, we should expect to connect with Him, our Source of all that is wise and good.

Mark 11:24 confirms this as we read . . .

"Though I say to you, all things for which you pray and ask, believe that you have received them and they shall be granted you."

What an incredible impact prayer can have upon each day of our lives!

As we worship God this week, may we remembe, to thank Him for the divine communication of prayer which is truly the ultimate connection.

The program, which begins at 9:55 a.m., will be in Spanish only.

The subject of the assembly is "Become Holy in All Your Conduct," based on 1 Peter 1:15.

The public address will be given by a member of the Bethel family, Daniel Molcham.

Topics include the positive growth among Jehovah Witnesses, being holy in today's society, the Bible's messages regarding obedience and the cleansing and refining period God's people are undergoing before entering into Jehovah's kingdom, said a release from Jehovah's Witnesses.

At least 1,200 people from across West Texas are expected to attend the one-day assembly.

Final video to show

The final showing at Golf Course Road Church of Christ of "The Hurried Family," a film series by author and lecturer Tim Kimmel, is Wednesday.

Ms. Spradlin began her ministry in freelance writing and public speaking nationwide in October of 1990.

She has experienced the crushing grip of pain.

"In 1984, Marsha was given no chance to live," said a release from the church. "In her book, 'Transformed One Winter,' Spradlin writes: 'I know now that my fear of dying was not fear of dying at all, but the sorrow of never having lived with a purpose.'"

Her second book, "LIVINGtouch: Your Personal Witness in an Impersonal World," was selected by the National Christian Bookseller's Association as one of 1990s outstanding Christian publications, thereby awarding it "The Best of Books" award.

All interested women are invited to attend her talk. Those doing so need to bring a brown bag lunch.

The Singing Americans will perform April 28 at Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

"Since their establishment in 1980, the Singing Americans have gained the reputation of consistently giving top-notch concerts, releasing albums that yield numerous chart singles, and garnering awards in their field year after year," said a release from the church. "The Singing Americans are also known as a group of young men that have a heart for ministry."

"Each member of the group," said Charles Burke, the group's founder, "tries to set an example and show young people they don't have to join the ranks with the world. They know that enjoyment and success can be found serving God."

The public is invited. Nurseries and children's classes are available.

Church renovation reveals 10 long-lost rose windows

GALVESTON (AP) — The preservation committee expected headaches, not revelations, from the renovation of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church.

Their revelations were 10 rose windows, long-lost prizes hidden between the church's roof and ceiling.

The windows have been cause for celebration at the 600-family parish in central Galveston. They add a bit of mystery to the 119-year-old church's rich past.

Designed by noted 19th century architect Nicholas J. Clayton, St. Patrick's is among other historic houses of worship in Galveston, including Reedy Chapel AME Church, First Presbyterian Church, St. Mary's Catholic Cathedral and Trinity Episcopal Church.

After several delays, St. Patrick's interior was being completed when it was severely damaged by the 1900 Storm, a massive hurricane that claimed at least 6,000 lives on Galveston Island.

A 1971 parish history said the church's lofty spire topped "the highest structure in Galveston and was the first object to welcome the approaching traveler to our island home and the last to bid adieu to the departing visitor."

The current restoration of the mysterious windows is part of a $500,000 renovation project that has included: adding a new roof, painting St. Patrick's Gothic-Revival interior, restoring its other handsome stained-glass windows and the church's tolling bell, replacing the cross on its steeple, building a confessional, adding restrooms to the church foyer and installing a handicapped ramp at the church entrance.

Years of storm damage and neglect prompted the eight-year facelift, begun under the guidance of a former pastor, the Rev. Tim Buchek. Finishing interior touches, including restored pews, were put in place shortly before Easter.

"The work is worth it when other people are happy with it, too," said Patricia Novelli, preservation committee chairwoman. "Actually, it's been a joy. But I wonder what I'm going to do with all my free time now."

Novelli said the parish is tracing the history of the mysterious windows. "I have spoken to some parishioners in their 80s who do not remember these windows.

"Then I've spoken to a couple who are in their 60s, and they say: 'You know, the more I see them, the more I think maybe they were here when I first came here.' But they can't really say for sure."

St. Patrick's pastor, the Rev. Walter Sheffield, said, "It's a strange thing. We've talked about it so much that sometimes people will think that they remember when maybe they really didn't. I've talked to a lot of people who are 80 years old or in their late 70s and they can't remember ever, at all, seeing the windows."

Now reinforced by Plexiglas, the windows were found in a dirty crawl space behind the church's ceiling, 35 feet up. At some point, the church plastered over the windows. No one knows when, how — or why.

They were discovered by Killis Almond, the architect originally in charge of the renovation. The preservation committee and a diocesan representative have overseen the completion of the project. Margaret Tramonte, a preservation committee member, speculates the windows may have been sealed after storm damage.

At one point, St. Patrick's had dormer windows on its roof.

"The dormers were there to shed light into these windows, through which light shone into the church," Tramonte said. "But I guess the dormers leaked. So when they put a new roof on, they took the dormers out, so there was no light for the windows. No one thought to light them artificially as we have done."

She said the windows were part of the church's original design. Clayton's original blueprints show 10 round windows in St. Patrick's ceiling. Tramonte believes the windows must have been installed after the 1900 storm when the church's roof had to be replaced.

Painted in delicate tones of rose, tan, brown and maroon, the windows are called "rose" because, historians believe, they are shaped like rose petals. Each has a different Christian symbol in the center. The symbols include familiar representations of the Alpha and the Omega (symbolizing Jesus Christ as the beginning and end of all), the cross and the Virgin Mary.

Unity plan appears temporarily stalled

By George W. Cornell
AP Religion Writer

A move aimed at bridging a historic divide in Christianity between Lutherans and Episcopalians has stalled, though leaders in both churches insist the delay is only temporary.

"The genie is already out of the bottle," said the Rev. William Rusch of Chicago, ecumenical officer for the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Said the Episcopal Church's ecumenical officer, the Rev. William Norgren of New York: "A change in timetable or process doesn't alter our mutual search for recognition between these two churches."

The plan would make for essential unity between churches that reflect two principal heritages of the faith — one maintaining organizational continuity from Christ's time, the other stressing continuity of beliefs.

Directly involved are the 2.5 million-member Episcopal Church, which upholds "apostolic succession" of bishops, and the 5.2 million-member Lutheran body, which doesn't require that unbroken line of bishops.

Lutherans hold that the church is perpetuated by the proclamation of Christ's message and right administration of the sacraments.

That view, to varying degrees, typifies most Protestant denominations. On the other hand, the ancient organizational lineage is upheld by Roman Catholicism and Eastern Orthodoxy as well as the Episcopal Church.

Overcoming that difference, which constitutes the central rupture in most all Christianity, was the objective of a proposal lofted last January by an Episcopal-Lutheran dialogue team.

After 20 years of talks and agreements on doctrinal and liturgical matters, the representatives of the two denominations in January came up with a plan for establishing "full communion" between the two denominations.

The dialogue team recommended that the plan be approved for a two-year study by conventions of the two churches late this summer, with potential implementation of it by ensuing conventions.

However, suspension of action this year was indicated when the ELCA's interim policy-making body, the Church Council, this week advised laying aside the matter for the time being.

The 37-member council decided to recommend that the proposals not be taken up until the next biennial convention in 1993, allowing the church to first complete its current study on the ministry dealing with related issues.

The Rev. James Cobb, a council member from Norfolk, Va., said the ELCA "has too much on its plate" already to move forward on the unity plan.

The Rev. George Forell, an Iowa City, Iowa, theologian, said the proposal would align Lutherans apart from other Protestants and "not get us a bit closer to Roman Catholics."

It would buy into an "understanding of what makes the church the church that is something we cannot really accept."

Bibles appreciated

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. Army Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf has written a letter of appreciation to the American Bible Society for 300,000 Bibles in special desert-camouflage covers provided to U.S. military forces in the Gulf War.

The head of the U.S. Central Command wrote that the enthusiasm generated by the Bibles "is proof that today's young men and women are as hungry for spiritual nourishment as were those of any previous generation."

Questions surround police probe of Kennedy case

By Dan Sewell

The Nation

'If you were to take away the Kennedy name, no one would have ever been in court for this.'

— Pablo Perhacs, assistant state attorney

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — With "the Kennedy aura" hanging over them, Palm Beach police and the county prosecutor are under fire for their slow-moving, tentative handling of an alleged rape at the Kennedy estate.

"We're going to be extremely careful," David Bludworth, the Palm Beach County state attorney, said after asserting that the Kennedys have "absolutely not" affected the investigation. "We hear it from both sides. Some would say you have to prosecute somebody because of the notoriety."

The last prosecution of a case here involving the Kennedys followed the 1984 drug overdose death of David Kennedy, a son of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy. Defense attorneys and the prosecutor said afterward the Kennedy name dominated handling of the case.

At the Mediterranean-style police headquarters near the posh boutiques of Worth Avenue, police on Friday released a terse statement saying no additional information was available on the case.

On the second floor, officers looked over critical news articles, including a Newsweek comparison of their department to "Keystone Cops."

"We have a reputation we're proud of," police spokesman Craig Gunkel said. "We know the job we're doing. It (the criticism) doesn't bother us.

"You can't play favorites in a town like this," Gunkel said of the 11-mile-long, quarter-mile-wide enclave of the rich and famous.

However, among the questions raised about handling of the case are:

■ Why did it take 13 days after the March 30 incident for a police crime-scene team to begin searching the beach, by then washed repeatedly by tides and rain? Although the rape allegedly took place by the Kennedy estate pool, police reports included a description of the woman being chased on the beach.

■ Why were no Kennedy family members, including suspect William Kennedy Smith, interviewed the day of the rape report or the following day, instead of a week later when scratches or other signs of a struggle on the suspect could have been undetectable?

■ Why did Bludworth suggest a meeting that would include police investigators and attorneys for both sides?

■ Why will it be at least six weeks after the alleged assault, by Bludworth's estimate, before any decision is made whether to charge Smith?

"If you were the attorney for the accused, would you like a little time?" asked Bludworth, the county prosecutor for 18 years. "We certainly would expect that if you were the accused, and you would get that in this circuit."

Three private investigators hired by the Kennedys have been scouring Palm Beach, bringing a complaint by the woman's attorney of intimidation and possible witness-tampering. Police say they are looking into the matter.

Police this week said they went to the Kennedy's seaside estate soon after they received the rape report from the 29-year-old Jupiter resident. They returned several times through the next day, and now are "looking into why residents of the Kennedy home did not make themselves available to police."

That brought a response from William Barry, a retired FBI agent who is a close friend of the Kennedy family. He insisted through an attorney that he hadn't known the whereabouts of family members, including Smith and his uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Barry also said police asked him about a theft of an urn from the estate, but asked nothing about a rape.

Police Chief Joseph Terlizzese declined to discuss police handling of the case.

The chief also ruled out presenting any police investigative material in a meeting involving Kennedy attorneys, saying police would only observe if a such a meeting were held. Gunkel said such a meeting would be "unusual."

Bludworth said Thursday his suggestion to hold the meeting was misunderstood, and that he only wanted to have as much information as possible before deciding how to proceed.

In West Palm Beach, attorney Michael Salnick has been following the events and remembering his own struggle against what he calls "the Kennedy aura." Salnick represented one of two bellhops charged with providing the drugs that caused David Kennedy's death.

"The fascination with the Kennedys. The desire for secrecy. The protectiveness. Six years later, it's all happening again," Salnick said.

Rep. Mo Udall, D-Ariz., left, is sworn in by House Speaker Sam Rayburn, D-Texas, in May 1961 to become a member of the 87th Congress. Udall was elected to fill out the term vacated by his older brother, Stewart, who left Congress to become President John F. Kennedy's interior secretary.

Poor health forces Udall to hand in his resignation

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Rep. Morris K. Udall, who brought a rare sense of humor to his three decades in Congress and once sought the presidency, announced Friday that he was resigning because of ill health.

The 68-year-old Udall, who has Parkinson's disease and recently suffered injuries in a fall, will resign his House seat effective May 4, said his administrative aide, Matt James.

If Udall were able to make the announcement himself, "he would be gracious and he would be dignified," his daughter Anne Udall said, "and we would know the decision would be timely and right."

The announcement ended months of speculation about Udall's health and political future. It came 13 days before the 30th anniversary of a special election Udall won May 2, 1961. He was elected to fill out the congressional term vacated by his older brother, Stewart, who left Congress to become President Kennedy's interior secretary.

Letters making the resignation official were delivered to House Speaker Tom Foley in Washington and Gov. Fife Symington in Phoenix.

Udall, the only Democrat among five House members from Arizona, has been hospitalized for nearly four months. His condition was complicated by several broken ribs, a fractured shoulder blade and a concussion that he suffered when he fell down stairs in his McLean, Va., home, in January.

Even before the announcement, politicians praised Udall for his integrity, long service and effectiveness.

"He will be missed; he cannot be replaced," Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said Thursday. "He will be succeeded but he cannot be replaced."

The departure of the congressman who chairs the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee will strip Arizona of its last congressional committee chairman.

Under Arizona law, Symington will have to call a special primary election within 75 to 105 days of the resignation date, to be followed by a general election within 35 to 45 days.

There has been speculation that Democratic contenders could include former Phoenix mayor and unsuccessful gubernatorial candidate Terry Goddard, Tucson Mayor Thomas Volgy, former Rep. James McNulty, former state Sen. Luis Gonzales and state Sen. Jaime Gutierrez.

Udall's overwhelmingly Democratic 2nd Congressional District stretches from Yuma on the California-Mexico border to parts of Tucson and South Phoenix.

Udall announced last year that he would retire from Congress at the end of this term.

But on April 5, Udall's wife, Norma, wrote Foley to say Udall might have to resign because of his poor health. Parkinson's disease is progressive deterioration of nerve centers in the brain that interferes with body coordination and movement.

Last month, Udall was transferred from the National Rehabilitation Hospital to the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Washington because of cost. His deteriorated physical condition precluded Udall from announcing his resignation himself.

Study: South is nation's dump

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The South has made few strides toward improving its ailing environment and remains the nation's dumping ground, according to a study by a private research group.

"We have a lot of pollution, but we don't have the policies to meet the challenges of that pollution," said Bob Hall, research director of the Institute for Southern Studies, a non-profit research group based in Durham, N.C. "The number one item on the agenda is to keep bringing in new factories.

Hall is the co-author of the "1991-92 Green Index: A State-by-State Guide to the Nation's Environmental Health."

The listing, due out in June from Island Press, is an expanded, updated version of the group's first index last year. Excerpts were released Thursday to coincide with this weekend's Earth Day activities.

The research group said the South maintains resistance to environmental action in the face of extraordinary levels of poisons.

It said the South was in last place behind five other regions: the Far West, Rocky Mountains, Farm Belt, Midwest and Northeast.

Southern states account for 9 of the 17 states with the highest per-capita amounts of toxic chemical emission and 9 of the 12 states producing the most hazardous waste, the group said.

The South also is home to 108 of the 179 plants posing the greatest risk of cancer to surrounding populations.

Tucker Eskew, a spokesman for South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell, questioned the validity of the study, although he agreed with its basic premise.

"I have not seen the study. But in previous years, I recall a number of odd non-environmental questions that were a part of the survey. Some sounded very much like labor-relations type questions," Eskew said.

The group said many states in the Northeast and Great Lakes regions rank worse than the South on indicators of air quality, water pollution and toxic waste. But many of these same states have taken aggressive action to clean up the environment, it said.

By contrast, the relatively clean Rocky Mountain states scored poorly in nearly all areas of government initiative and planning, the group said.

The Farmbelt also leans heavily on its natural beauty and bounty. But decades of chemical assault on the land has left the region with some of the most contaminated groundwater and worsening public health conditions, the report said.

Only the 13 southern states — Texas, Arkansas, Kentucky, West Virginia, Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia — were lacking in redeeming features.

Brazil carves place in snow

COMANDANTE FERRAZ BASE, Antarctica (AP) — The girl from Ipanema would get frostbite at the lonely outpost that exhibits tropical Brazil's presence on the frozen continent.

President Fernando Collor de Mello reaffirmed Brazil's interest in the region by visiting the base in February. He was the first Brazilian leader to set foot in the Antarctic.

Collor told an audience of scientists and navy officers his government opposes commercial or military exploitation of Antarctica. Brazil supports a permanent ban on mining.

"Brazil is determined that the destiny of this immense continent be dedicated to peace and science, beyond the reach of any military activity and free from the risk of nuclear contamination," he said.

The Brazilians built their Antarctic station in 1984 among the massive glaciers and frozen mountains of Keller Peninsula on King George Island, 3,600 miles south of Rio de Janeiro.

It will have a voice in revising the 30-year-old Antarctic Treaty at a conference next week in Madrid. Thirty-nine countries have signed the treaty, which governs development.

Twenty-six countries, including Brazil, the United States, Soviet Union, England, Japan and Chile, are members of the treaty's consultative committee. The other 13 signers have no voting rights.

Adrien de Gerlache, a Belgian explorer, first placed the green and yellow Brazilian flag in the Antarctic in 1898, but Brazil did not send an official expedition of its own until 1982.

Two years later, the Comandante Ferraz base was inaugurated with eight container-type housing modules.

Today, 59 of the galvanized steel modules provide sleeping quarters, a kitchen, dining hall, game room, gym, laboratory and a communications center with telephone, telex and fax.

Electricity comes from two diesel-powered generators and a nearby lake is the source of drinking water.

The modules stay at a cozy 70 degrees Fahrenheit while, outside, temperatures often dip to minus 31 and winds swirl at 125 mph.

Twelve people run the base during nine months of winter: four scientists and eight navy personnel who handle administration. In summer, up to 25 people occupy the modules.

Those who have lived at the station describe it as an unforgettable experience.

"This is a true re-education, a new type of learning," navy Cmdr. Arnaldo Caiado said.

Rosalinda Montone of the Oceanographic Institute of Sao Paulo, said: "The isolation and adverse environment help bring people together." She was on her second tour at Ferraz, studying marine pollution.

Summer staff members fight homesickness by playing soccer on an improvised field, watching videos of Rio's wild Carnival celebration and listening to a broad range of music.

'Buckyballs' move from technology to realm of science

ATLANTA (AP) — A newly discovered carbon form called Buckminsterfullerenes — "buckyballs" to the folks in the lab — turns out to be the basis for a superconductor, scientists for AT&T Bell Laboratories said recently.

The significance has not been determined, but scientists are exuberant at the possibilities.

"This has got our scientists running around like a bunch of 8-year-olds with charge cards at Toys R Us," said AT&T Bell Labs spokesman Russ Glover.

"It's now in the realm of science, rather than technology," said Robert C. Haddon of AT&T Bell Labs, who outlined the findings to reporters at the American Chemical Society's national meeting.

Scientists learned in 1985 that Buckminsterfullerenes might exist. They were produced in quantity last year. The carbon cluster has a soccer-ball shape resembling Buckminster Fuller's famous geodesic dome design, hence the nickname.

Scientists have postulated that the new carbon structure could be used in such things as ion-propelled spacecraft, long-running batteries or lightweight tennis rackets.

Now, they say the carbon form is a superconductor, a material that carries electricity without resistance.

However, buckyballs, which become superconductors in compound with potassium, do so at 427 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, Haddon said. That's actually 50 percent warmer than other molecular superconductors, but it's still pretty cold, the researchers conceded.

"That's why I said it's still in the realm of science," Haddon said. "We don't anticipate any large rush to commercialize this at the moment."

The research was published in the British journal Nature, Haddon said.

Chemist Robert L. Whetten of the University of California, Los Angeles, said the superconductor discovery will lead to even more research.

"This is most astonishing," Whetten said. "Obviously, it's going to stimulate a lot of work going on."

Snakes gain in popularity; sales climb

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Friends tease Carl Hess about his pets, but his telephone answering machine, which asks callers to leave a message at the sound of the rattlesnake, shows he takes it all in stride.

The rattle may startle Hess' pets and their dinner as much as it does callers. Twenty snakes — six of them poisonous — lounge in cages and aquariums in his living room and basement and about 200 mice await their fate in the garage.

"Snakes have taken a bad rap," said Hess, who lives in Hamburg in southeastern Pennsylvania.

That may be changing. Sales of pet snakes have climbed steadily in the last several years, and the buyers aren't limited to 10-year-old boys, according to pet stores and distributors.

The Central Pennsylvania Humane Society shelter in Altoona recently doubled the price of rabbits, guinea pigs and hamsters because of fears that local snake owners were snapping up cheap rodents to feed their pets.

Scott Grace, president of the shelter, said he had been told more than 70 snakes had been bought in the area in recent months.

"One guy came into the shelter to buy a rabbit and let it slip," Grace said. "He said, 'This is going to be a good meal for my snake.'"

Grace said he fears the snake craze will pass, and owners will be stuck with pets they are not equipped to handle.

But snake fans say they intend to keep their reptiles because they're fascinating and sometimes easier to care for than more traditional pets.

"Snakes have a very strong following," said Norman Frank of Pottsville, editor of Reptile and Amphibian Magazine. "They're different. They're not dogs and cats with scales."

Joan Broslawik, manager of Animal House, a bird and reptile wholesaler in Wickliffe, Ohio, said demand for snakes has more than doubled in the past five years.

Ms. Broslawik raises snakes in her apartment and loves to sit and watch them.

"I think they're incredibly amazing, beautiful animals," she said. "Do you think you could climb a tree with no hands?"

Hess, an elementary school art teacher, recalls being bitten by a friend's dog. The same friend, he said, was wary of coming to his house because of the snakes.

"You can walk in my door," he said. "You aren't going to have a dog jumping on you. My snakes aren't going to be out there howling in the middle of the night. I know where my snakes are all the time."

His neighbors hope so.

All snakes are meat eaters. In the wild, they kill their prey, but those raised in captivity usually accept dead mice, rats or rabbits. Pet stores sell live "feeder mice" for about $2 each and frozen rodents that can be warmed up in a microwave as needed.

Hess raises his own mice. He catches toads on rainy nights for one frog-loving snake and is always on the lookout for squirrels on the roadside.

"Every once in a while I'll pick up a road kill if I know it's a fresh one," he said.

Most pet snakes are fed once a week, though they can go weeks without eating — making them popular with owners who travel frequently.

Laurie Bingaman, a biotechnician at the National Zoological Park in Washington, D.C., said many people who buy snakes don't realize what they're getting into.

A snake easily can live 15 years, and the zoo gets countless calls from people who no longer want their reptile.

Zoos and most shelters won't take them. Gary Hodge, a naturalist for The Humane Society of the United States, said he fears some people set their unwanted snakes free, leaving them to die in an unsuitable environment.

Artist turns junk wood into fine art sold in galleries

AP Laserphoto

Archie Hartkopf poses with some of the thin-walled hollow vessels he creates from wood at his home in Texas City.

By John Simsen

TEXAS CITY (AP) — Trees ravaged by insects, hurricanes or chainsaws usually wind up in the city dump, or someone's fireplace.

But if Archie Hartkopf gets a hold of those logs, he'll unleash their inner beauty, and perhaps give them a taste of eternity.

Hartkopf turns junk wood into fine art that is sold in galleries from Houston to New York. His creations command top dollar — from $200 into the thousands — and they are purchased by art lovers who rarely blink at prices.

Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams didn't blink when he plunked down $1,250 for his timeless creation.

"There's a diamond in every chunk of wood," said Hartkopf, a longtime Texas City resident. "All you have to do is find it."

Hartkopf creates what he calls "thin wall hollow vessels." Unlike the salad-variety bowls created by the less-skilled, these objects are very thin, feather light and have a small base and even smaller mouth. They are designed to show off the impressive colors, lines, markings and natural grain typical of certain species of wood.

They aren't made to hold things. They are to behold.

The hollow vessels are attached to a lathe and cut into shape with hand tools in a process called "turning."

Hartkopf cuts a stump of wood to a manageable size, glues one end to a block on the lathe, then turns on the power. As the lathe spins the wood, Hartkopf carefully creates the exterior shape he's looking for, then uses other tools on the interior to obtain the exact thickness.

A beautiful example of shape and form emerges. Then a great deal of finish work and polishing follows.

Hartkopf makes the vessels in his garage, which is cluttered with carving and cutting tools, electric sanders and buffers. Wood chips grow like a thick carpet of moss over every square inch of the floor, and dust lays like a light snow on everything else.

While the lathe is turning, Hartkopf can't hear the telephone. So he rigged a strobe light near the lathe that flashes when someone calls.

Four or five days a week, this is home.

"I was an insurance adjuster for 30 years," said Hartkopf. "I retired in 1985, and began to turn full-time.

"There was no place around here where you could get instructions, buy tools, buy books, anything that would teach you.

"So I took a two-day course in Canada," where he bought the lathe he still uses today.

"Since then, I've gone to North Carolina and had a two-week session with a fellow I consider to be the best in the world, David Ellsworth. He's as far as I know, one of the first to do these hollow vessels like I'm doing."

Hartkopf refined his skills further at a week-long session in Tennessee, and has since attended conferences for woodworkers and woodturners in California, Kentucky and Washington.

In addition, he attends meetings of a Gulf Coast wood turners club that has about two dozen members.

Survival class helps single mothers plan future

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Self-esteem, confidence and ambition — these are the intangibles six women say they acquired in a survival-skills course offered by the Texas Department of Human Services.

But Rachel Bueno also has a tangible reward to show for her participation — a monetary triumph that her fellow classmates, all single mothers, can relate to.

"It helped me make my husband give me some child support," said Mrs. Bueno, a 30-year-old mother of three. "I finally got the first check today. It really helped me make him pay what he owes."

Mrs. Bueno is one of six Robstown women who recently completed a 10-session course entitled "Survival Skills for Women." The program is offered free to women dealing with the challenges of economic hardship, single parenting and low self-esteem.

It is the seventh graduating class from the program since its inception here in May 1990, said Yolanda Palacios, program facilitator. "It's a very motivating and powerful life-skills training for women," said Ms. Palacios. "They move very quickly from feelings of low self-esteem, passivity and powerlessness, to taking a greater stance in life.

"In essence, what we're trying to do is to help them have control over their lives," she added. "These are ladies who want to break the poverty cycle. They're not sitting at home watching soap operas."

Mrs. Bueno, who has twin 10-year-old sons by her estranged husband, said the course gave her the skills and knowledge necessary to contact her spouse and insist on child support. She also has a 13-year-old daughter.

She says she now plans to return to school and get her graduate equivalency degree, then to pursue a career as a secretary.

The course, developed by a University of Kansas psychologist, is designed to teach women how to achieve economic and personal independence.

The women in the most recent class were selected to participate by Maria Saenz, TDHS case manager. Ms. Saenz said the most important lesson for the women was how to survive on about $184 a month. That is the approximate amount of assistance provided for a single mother of two through state and federal welfare benefits.

All seven participants in the class receive federal welfare benefits through Aid for Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), said Ms. Palacios.

"I learned a lot," said Paula Gamez, 22. She has three children, aged 3, 5, and 7. "Every class was helpful to me in every way. I don't know how women can live without survival skills."

During 10 workshops, participants learn assertiveness, money management, child management, self advocacy, legal rights, personal health, nutrition, coping with crisis, community resources and employment.

Ms. Palacios said the seven Robstown women attended the course twice weekly, from 12:15 to 3:15 p.m., for five weeks. All had perfect attendance.

Participants can arrange the classes to accommodate their schedules — some prefer 10 days in a row, while others can only attend once a week for 10 weeks, said Ms. Palacios.

"It changes them. Sometimes, they come back and say, 'My family is wondering what's happening to me,' " she added.

Sandra J. Larson, executive director of the Women's Shelter of the Corpus Christi Area Inc., a refuge for women and children victimized by emotional, physical, verbal or sexual abuse, said the course had given participants additional tools for dealing with life and reminded them of the right to be free from abuse and violence.

Endangered species list will increase

SEATTLE (AP) — Environmentalists say imperiled Northwest salmon and spotted owls are only two recent examples of a long list of species needing rescue nationwide.

But development interests, fearing conflicts between jobs and animals, say wildlife protection must be tempered to keep the U.S. economy off the endangered list.

Both sides expect a big congressional battle next winter over reauthorizing the 1973 Endangered Species Act. Environmental groups want the act expanded to protect whole ecosystems as well as individual species; their opponents want it changed to allow more economic considerations.

"It's going to be the fight of the century," promised Robert Irvin, a National Wildlife Federation attorney.

The law has pitted wildlife protection against economic development since 1978, when a fish called the snail darter temporarily halted construction of Tennessee's Tellico Dam.

In the Northwest, conflict boiled up last June when the northern spotted owl was declared a threatened species. Owl-protection measures are expected to close much old-growth forest to logging and could eventually cost more than 20,000 timber jobs.

Now the spotlight has turned to the sockeye salmon of Idaho's Snake River, a nearly extinct fish whose rescue could dwarf the cost of saving the owl.

Federal biologists last week recommended endangered status for the salmon. That raised worries that releasing extra water from reservoirs to help the fish migrate past dams could dry up irrigated farmland and raise electricity rates throughout the hydropowered Northwest.

And that's not all — 3,500 animals and plants are being considered for addition to the federal endangered species list.

You've got to expect more conflicts, said Jay Sheppard, a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologist who helps oversee the 606 species already listed as endangered or threatened.

"As we pour more concrete, cut more forests and build more dams, it restricts species to smaller and smaller areas," he said.

In the Southeast, a plan to protect red-cockaded woodpeckers would close a million acres of national forest to logging. In Arizona, construction of a mountaintop astronomy observatory is pitted against the Mount Graham red squirrel. Home-building has been blocked by golden-cheeked warblers in Texas, by desert tortoises in Nevada.

But conflicts are most widespread in the Northwest. Environmentalists here wield the Endangered Species Act as a weapon to protect shrinking old-growth forests and other ecosystems.

Petitions asking that four salmon stocks in the Columbia River basin be listed as endangered are up for a federal decision in June. Even if those salmon don't make the list, others likely will. The American Fisheries Society released a study Tuesday predicting a high risk of extinction for 101 stocks of salmon and sea-going trout from Washington to Southern California.

The Oregon Natural Resources Council is considering filing petitions for wildlife including woodpeckers, salamanders, 26 freshwater fish and seven plants, said Andy Kerr, the group's conservation director.

The group is awaiting word on its petition to grant endangered status to the marbled murrelet, a small seabird that nests in coastal old-growth forests. "If the Fish and Wildlife Service doesn't list it, we'll sue their butts," Kerr said.

Such confrontational tactics outrage development interests, who claim environmentalists are misusing a law that once focused on saving a few critically endangered species like the whooping crane or California condor.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, APRIL 20, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Forge an alliance with progressive thinkers and business progress will accelerate rapidly. An August visit will be quite successful if you plan it carefully. Overseas travel in late fall leads to important new professional contacts. Existing marital ties become even stronger over the winter holidays. Financial caution is a necessary ingredient for long-term business success.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Jessica Lange, Justice John Paul Stevens, artist Joan Miro, slugger Don Mattingly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Music plays a key role in making this a pleasurable day. Your loved ones come up with wonderful suggestions. Be tender and considerate. Your romantic partner is sure to reciprocate!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Leave any worries on your doorstep and head out for adventure. Fun awaits you in a distant locale. Dress with style and act confident at social gatherings. A newcomer admires your taste.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Only your insecurity can hold you back now. Step out and shine! Take a chance on a new idea. Fun and love will surround you. Widen your social circle in the weeks ahead.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Forgo public events and concentrate on family affairs. A parent-child relationship merits attention. Seek advice from experts. A do-it-yourself decoration project will interest loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What your friends do may not be right for you. You have good money management skills and know how to find bargains. Fulfill your travel dreams. Be a doer instead of a watcher.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Certain people could be difficult to reach today. Do not give up. It may prove impractical to attend a social function. Be candid. Spend the day in the comfort of your home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your financial hunches are right on target. A private arrangement could be a real moneymaker. Be prepared to deal with some uncomfortable questions. Play by the rules in romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): A longtime friendship influences your plan. Accept a last-minute invitation. Recent visits begin to pay off; so does dinner with a VIP. A telephone call or message brings thrilling news. Celebrate quietly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A quiet, relaxing day will be good for both body and soul. Set aside any chores that can wait. Answers will come to you in a peaceful setting. Your wisdom stems from compassion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You could be lucky in your dealings with a VIP. Confidential information empowers you. Plan on being heard and seen this evening. Cupid takes aim in your direction! Keep spending within reason.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A blue mood could stem from lack of companionship. Let love lead the way. Get together with true pals and have fun. A friend shares an important confidence; guard it! Pursue romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Remember to keep your loved ones' interests at heart. Taking care of their basic needs could keep you busy today. Socializing with a newcomer pays big dividends. Romance takes a serious turn.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are practical, loyal and kind-hearted. Their childhood friends often remain their lifelong pals. These Taureans love their possessions and will want to decorate their own rooms. Although these youngsters work hard at their studies, good grades may not come easily. Their strongest subject will probably be mathematics. Quick to anger, they are equally quick to forgive. The ideal job will make use of these Taureans' affinity for financial computations.

Prince Andrew says being in combat 'almost a drug'

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew, a helicopter pilot with the Royal Navy, said being in combat during the Falklands War was addicting.

Prince Andrew

"Combat is almost a drug, it's a 'high'," he said in an interview to be broadcast April 28 on British Broadcasting Corp. television.

"Some people want more and more and more of it," he said.

"The first time, you do not know what you're letting yourself in for, the second time you do, therefore in a strange way, it makes it worse but you're prepared."

Prince Andrew, Duke of York and second son of Queen Elizabeth II, is a flight commander on the Royal Navy frigate Campbeltown.

He flew a helicopter from the aircraft carrier Invincible during the 1982 Falklands War with Argentina.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Country singer Tammy Wynette was in a hospital Friday with severe stomach pain, and doctors believe the cause may be either a gallstone or inflammation of scar tissue from surgery done years ago.

Wynette

Her publicist, Evelyn Shriver, said by telephone from Nashville, Tenn., that she was unsure how long Wynette would remain at the hospital.

Wynette canceled an appearance Friday night in Denver, Shriver said.

The 48-year-old star was stricken with stomach pains Thursday afternoon while riding in a private bus caravan in southern Illinois. She was taken to Belleville Memorial Hospital in Belleville, Ill., and transferred later Thursday to Barnes Hospital in St. Louis.

David Trousdale, a Barnes spokesman, said Wynette was in the intensive care unit Friday in satisfactory condition "and basically at this time it's more or less for observation."

Wynette, a native of Tupelo, Miss., popularized the songs "Stand By Your Man" and "D-I-V-O-R-C-E." In March, she performed before President Bush and other dignitaries at a gala Washington celebration of America's victory in the Persian Gulf War.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Former star musician Sly Stone is being sued by a woman who claims he reneged on a deal to make her his producer and collaborator.

In a lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Newark, Ruby Tuesday Jones says she took Stone in and took care of him from February 1988 through June 1989 in exchange for a promise she would be his musical partner.

The lawsuit said she was a co-author and producer for a song collection with Stone during the time he was living with her.

Stone had a string of hits in the 1960s and 1970s, including "Everybody Is A Star," "Dance To The Music," and "Family Affair."

Stone's lawyer, Glenn Stone, said his client was in the depths of a well-publicized drug dependency during the time of the alleged contract with Ms. Jones. "It is my belief that he was incompetent as a matter of law at that time," he said.

Ms. Jones is asking for $2 million for the physical injury and emotional distress she said she suffered. She also is asking for a court order permitting her to use for her own benefit the songs she claims she co-wrote with Stone.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Sylvester Stallone has been sued over a real-life car chase in which the star of the "Rambo" and "Rocky" films allegedly rammed an auto with his Mercedes.

Stallone

The lawsuit, filed Thursday in Santa Monica Superior Court on Phillip Norris' behalf, seeks unspecified damages for injuries and emotional distress stemming from a March 28 chase through a ritzy West Los Angeles neighborhood.

Norris was a passenger in a car allegedly pursued by two autos driven by Stallone and his bodyguard. The chase reportedly occurred after a photographer snapped pictures of Stallone as he left a Sunset Boulevard nightclub.

Stallone bodyguard Gary Compton was named as a defendant in the lawsuit. Compton was driving a Nissan 300 ZX and participated in the chase, according to police reports.

Norris contends that Stallone, driving a black Mercedes-Benz sedan, repeatedly rammed a rented Honda Civic, driven by photographer E.L. Woody.

Woody and Norris had been sitting in the Honda outside the nightclub waiting to photograph Stallone.

Stallone contends he was pursued by the two photographers and compared the chase to a scene from the 1971 film "The French Connection." The actor said Woody's car hit his three times. Stallone had no comment on the lawsuit itself.
