Seventeen presumed dead in ship attack

AP Photo

A U.S. Air Force honor guard carries the coffin of a killed sailor from a C-17 Air Force aircraft at the U.S. air base in Ramstein, Germany Friday. The United States says 17 sailors died and 33 were injured in the explosion on the USS Cole while it was refueling in the Yemeni port of Aden. Seven bodies have so far been recovered. The blast tore a hole 30 feet high and 40 feet wide at the ship's waterline. U.S. officials say suicide bombers blew up a small boat next to the destroyer.

ADEN, Yemen — With the crippled USS Cole listing slightly in the harbor, American investigators, Marines and soldiers swarmed into this deep-water port Friday, bringing sniffer dogs and sophisticated equipment to search for clues in the blast that killed 17 American sailors.

Wounded U.S. sailors and the bodies of some of the dead were flown to Germany en route home; the Navy said the ship would be repaired and stay in service.

The Navy released the names of the 17 dead on Friday. All but one were from the enlisted ranks and two were women. Lt. Terrence Dudley, a U.S. Navy spokesman in Aden, said Navy chaplains had arrived to console survivors.

"I'm just numb. It hasn't sunk in yet," said Patty Wibberley, mother of Seaman Craig Wibberley, 19, killed in the explosion. His duties had included raising and lowering the destroyer's small anchor.

Western diplomats said the attack was apparently the work of a well-organized group.

Bomb experts quickly determined Thursday's explosion "was a blast from the outside," Adm. Vernon Clark, the chief of naval operations, said in an interview with The Associated Press in Washington. His comments countered any suggestion weaponry aboard the ship might have been responsible.

Mexico's energy leader will speak at international oil show Thursday

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Mexico's energy commissioner Dr. Raul Monteforte will be a member of a panel discussion on "Global Energy Demand, Supply and Prices," Thursday at the Permian Basin International Oil Show.

"With recent international events impacting oil prices, Monteforte will bring excellent insight on global energy demand and pricing," said Dave Robbins, president of the Permian Basin International Oil Show, which gets under way Tuesday.

Now a leading oil exporter, Mexico's growing economy is consuming a larger share of its oil and gas production, which could diminish its role as an oil exporter. Monteforte, along with four other commissioners, has responsibility for regulating the energy industry of Mexico.

As a member of Mexico's Comision Reguladora de Energia (CRE), Monteforte has the same regulatory duties as a Texas Railroad Commissioner. Along with Texas Railroad Commissioner Charles Matthews, he has been involved in fostering closer relations between Texas and Mexico in the energy sector.

No funds from MISD likely for downtown reinvestment plan

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

When and if it is approved by City Council, a tax reinvestment zone in downtown Midland may not have as much impact as city officials had originally hoped.

Due to possible state penalties, any downtown reinvestment project that utilizes property tax revenue will have to exclude the financial involvement of the Midland Independent School District, according to Deputy City Manager Glen Hackler.

For the better part of 2000, city of Midland officials and Downtown Midland, Inc. (DMI) members have been researching the possibility of establishing a Tax Increment Reinvestment Zone (TIRZ) in downtown Midland.

DMI officials have spoken of their desire to mirror the downtown revitalization successes of other Texas cities such as Abilene and Fort Worth. The TIRZ can help accomplish that goal, they say.

With the implementation of a TIRZ, only new property tax revenues from downtown — resulting from increased downtown property values over time — would be invested in downtown

TXU seeking fuel surcharge

From Staff Reports

TXU Electric Friday filed a request with the Public Utility Commission of Texas for a fuel surcharge to allow the company to recover $230 million in customer fuel underpayments for the months of August and September.

It is the second fuel surcharge the company has requested for the year, and company officials attributed the requests to the rising cost of natural gas.

The proposed surcharge for an average residential customer who uses 1,000 kwh per month will be approximately $2.80 per month, beginning in January 2001. The PUCT previously approved a surcharge of $3.05 per month to recover fuel under collections through July that will begin billing in November. Both surcharges will end in December 2001.

The cost of natural gas has increased dramatically since the first of the year and has affected nearly every industry, TXU officials said. TXU Electric recovers only the costs it must pay for fuel and does not make a profit on fuel costs. Periodically, TXU Electric reviews the fuel costs and applies when necessary to the PUCT for rate adjustments, officials said.

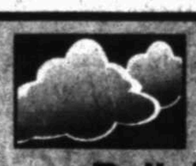

Natural gas is used by TXU Electric as a fuel for many of its generation plants. TXU Electric also has lignite-fueled generation plants and a nuclear plant.

Women's role grows in presidential politics

ELECTION 2000 The Voter Perspective

By Timothy V. Kreitz
MRT Correspondent

Since the ratification of the 19th Amendment on Aug. 26, 1920, women in America have had the right to vote, and during those 80 years the role they have played in all facets of life has grown significantly.

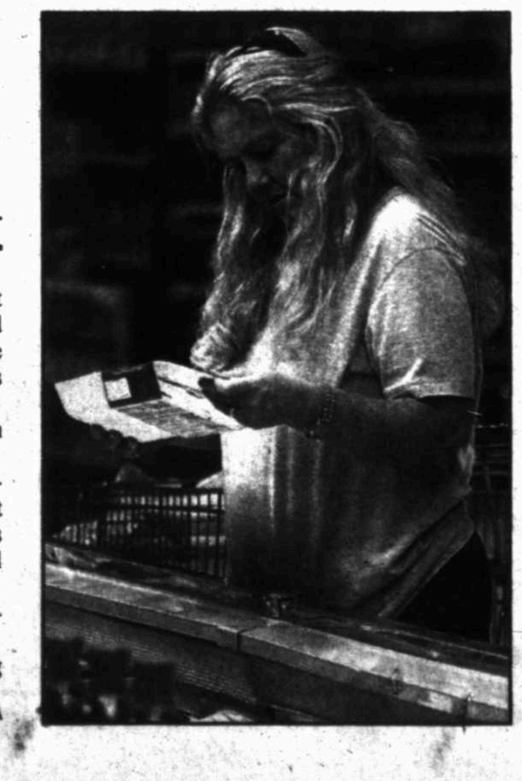

But, perhaps, no place has that influence been more obvious than in the voting booth.

Indeed, many observers say the female voter has become a powerful political force, especially in presidential elections. In recent years, that female vote has leaned toward Democratic candidates — specifically Bill Clinton in 1992 and 1996 — and today that trend is now referred to as "the gender gap."

But will it carry over to this presidential election which pits Democrat Al Gore against Republican George Bush?

Nationally, most polls show Gore with a modest lead among

Police Reports

Drug bust

The Midland Police Department searched the residence at 501 S. Tyler earlier this week, finding more than an ounce of crack cocaine (valued at over $5,000) and arrested five people in connection with the drug, according to police.

LaSalle Dewitt Guice, 22, of Waco, and Ronnie Ray Dedrick, 25, of Midland, were both arrested on federal charges of intent to distribute.

April Mitchell, 25, Karna Taylor, 19, and Jamon Jenkins, all of Midland, were also arrested on charges of possession of a controlled substance.

Guilty plea

BIG SPRING — David Martinez, 17, pleaded guilty to three counts of murder in a Big Spring court Friday.

Martinez shot four people June 25, killing three and wounding the fourth, who identified Martinez.

According to Martinez's attorney, John Young, of Sweetwater, Martinez will serve three life sentences concurrently instead of facing capital murder charges and possibly the death penalty.

Young said Martinez will be eligible for parole in 30 years, the year he turns 47. Martinez, who is a father and has a second child on the way, was allowed to hold his seven-month-old baby for five minutes before being escorted out of the courtroom.

Young said, "I think the plea agreement was a sound resolution to this situation, but three people are dead, and two others are essentially losing their father. There's really nothing good about the whole thing."

San Antonio Police investigate death of off-duty deputy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Police searched for clues Friday in the death of a Bexar County sheriff's deputy whose body was found in a north San Antonio drainage ditch.

Sgt. Rudy Lopes, 45, was off duty when he was shot in the head, authorities said.

They said Lopes, whose hands were tied behind his back, may have been the victim of a carjacking.

A passer-by found Lopes's body Thursday night. His truck was still missing Friday.

Colleagues of the 15-year department veteran wore black tape over their badges to honor Lopes.

"I was devastated," Capt. Ron Sanchez said. "It was a total shock. We were up most of the night last night."

An autopsy has been ordered.

Breast cancer activists bicycle through Midland

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

Activist bicyclists riding coast to coast spent Friday night in Midland as they continued on their 3,200-mile journey to increase education and awareness about breast cancer.

The eight women riders and seven support team members hail from all over America and their message is simple, powerful: breast cancer afflicts 185,000 women in the U.S. every year, 44,000 of whom die.

Pedaling 80 to 110 miles a day in all kinds of weather, it takes 12 minutes to ride one mile. Coincidentally, breast cancer kills one woman every 12 minutes.

The event's organizer, Karen Harding, said, "Our prime objective is to get the word out about breast cancer. There's over a 90-percent survival rate if it's detected early."

She said if the ride saves just one woman's life, it will have all been worth it.

Ms. Harding also noted that men can get breast cancer, but it's seldom talked about.

Mary Cusick, a rider from Cleveland, Ohio, became personally involved when a close friend was diagnosed four years ago. She realized how little information is available about breast cancer. Although her friend died more than a year ago, Ms. Cusick remains committed to combining her love of bike riding with helping to educate.

Student expulsions for guns drops

■ More state news/6C

AUSTIN (AP) — The number of students expelled for bringing guns onto Texas public school campuses declined by 19 percent last school year, the Texas Education Agency reported.

A preliminary report on school year 1999-2000 expulsions reinforced statistics indicating that campus crime has been declining since the April 1999 Columbine High School massacre in Colorado focused attention on school violence.

The report says 237 students were expelled last year in Texas — 173 for handguns, 38 for rifles or shotguns and 26 for "other firearms" such as air guns and blank starter pistols. Students in the eighth and ninth grades brought the most guns to school, the report said.

During the 1998-99 school year, 294 students in Texas were expelled for bringing guns onto campus.

TEA spokesman Joey Lozano, whose office compiled the data from more than 1,200 Texas school districts, told The Dallas Morning News in Friday's editions he doesn't know whether the new data indicate fewer students are bringing guns to school or whether fewer are being caught and expelled.

"We have no way of knowing, really," Lozano said. "What we know is that there has been a tremendous emphasis on school safety since Columbine and a heightened awareness of its importance."

Couple go to jail for taking girls to Mexico to be in cult

ANGLETON (AP) — A couple who took two Lake Jackson teenage girls to the Mexican wilderness as part of a reported millennium cult were sentenced to jail time Thursday after accepting plea bargains.

Tara Burmeister Nelson, 23, was not given jail time as part of the plea agreement, but was sentenced to six months behind bars after an outburst in court.

Her husband, James Nelson, 29, was sentenced to a year in jail. He will serve only 241 days because of credit earned for the 124 days he was jailed before posting bond.

Tara Nelson pleaded guilty to two counts of harboring a runaway and pleaded no contest to two counts of enticing a child. James Nelson pleaded no contest to the same charges, The Facts newspaper reported Friday.

The Nelsons were accused of taking Harmony Olachia and Nicole Conrad, then Brazoswood High School freshmen, on Feb. 8, 1999. The teens left notes telling their parents they had been called by God to do missionary work.

The parents believed they went to join a doomsday, Y2K or religious cult.

The girls returned home more than a month after their disappearance, saying they had suffered through "five weeks of hell." They recounted living in a cave, eating animals the adults killed to survive, drinking water from streams and going without food for days at a time.

Tara Nelson was given jail time for disobeying Judge James Blackstock's order to remain quiet after Harmony's mother, Carol Ann Olachia, made a lengthy victim's impact statement.

"Tara, I think you're a misguided individual. When you entered into this, you were possibly misguided and didn't understand the gravity of what you were doing," Olachia said. "You're no friend of mine, Tara, and you're no friend of Harmony."

As Olachia was leaving, Nelson said, "You lied," and, "It's not over."

Olachia said her daughter, who now lives in another state, has nightmares from what she experienced in Mexico, including stabbing a horse in the heart to put it out of its misery after it had been wounded with an arrow by the adults who were trying to kill it for food.

The Nelsons have disagreed with much of the girls' account of what happened that month, including the fact that they ate horse meat.

COLE: Terrorist group being sought ton destroyer, ripping a 30-by-40-foot hole at the water line.

(From 1A)

Western diplomats in Yemen said the explosion seemed to be the work of a well-organized group with good connections in the port of Aden who might have provided the bombers with logistical support.

The diplomats, insisting on anonymity, said the boat used by the bombers was similar to boats used by port authorities to guide vessels into port or help ships with refueling.

If terrorism is proven, the toll would make it the worst such attack on the U.S. military since the bombing of an Air Force barracks in Saudi Arabia in 1996 that killed 19 military personnel.

More than 200 miles away, in the capital, San'a, an explosion on Friday rocked the British Embassy. Windows shattered but nobody was hurt. Britain's foreign secretary said a bomb may have been flung into embassy grounds. Authorities were investigating.

Anti-Western sentiment has been running high in the Arab world, with protesters condemning the United States in particular during demonstrations against Israel's use of force in two weeks of deadly clashes in Jerusalem and the Palestinian territories.

"The world should not underestimate the anger of Palestinians at this moment," said Mohammed al-Sharq, a member of the small Palestinian community in Aden who, like many here, said he believed "outside forces" were responsible for the attack on the Cole.

Esam al Najjar, a Palestinian-Yemeni working for a cement company, said such attacks can never be condoned, "but you must put yourself in the place of the people who carried it out. You have to try to understand that for some people, this is the only way left to respond."

Yemen was one of the countries where members of the Palestine Liberation Organization settled after being forced from Lebanon. The Palestinian community has dwindled from several thousand in the 1980s to 200-300 today in Aden, a desert city known for its infestation of crows — a bad omen to Arabs — and blocky, Soviet-era architecture.

President Clinton dispatched investigators from the FBI, U.S. State Department and Pentagon to Yemen, and ordered a heightened state of alert for all U.S. military installations around the world. More than 100 FBI evidence and explosives experts were expected to arrive over the weekend.

The Cole investigation was taking place under tight security in this city of 800,000 squeezed between the sea and a range of jagged hills. Yemeni soldiers were posted outside the hotel where most U.S. investigators and their Marine guards were staying. Inside, the Marines carried automatic rifles and closely monitored anyone coming in.

The ship, a white cloth billowing over the gaping hole ripped into the hull by the blast, sat isolated in an inner area of the harbor. Yemeni speedboats patrolled the area bounded by the coast and a peninsula.

Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said Friday the ship is stable, some power has been restored and Navy divers found the keel in good shape.

Other large ships — container ships and cargo vessels — were moored elsewhere as business went on as usual in much of the rest of the large harbor. But the Cole drew attention, with dozens of people gathered along a stone seawall on the harbor to gaze at the mighty, stricken ship.

The Cole is a $1 billion guided missile destroyer home-ported at Norfolk, Va. It was heading with a crew of about 293 to the gulf to support the U.N. embargo against Iraq.

At the Ramstein Air Base in western Germany, a flight carrying the bodies of five of the dead arrived Friday.

Light rain fell as an Air Force honor guard silently transferred the caskets draped in U.S. flags from an Air Force jet into separate hearses. Flags at the base in western Germany flew at half staff, and sailors in dress blues stood on the tarmac during the ceremony.

Lt. Cmdr. Daren Pelkie, at the Bahrain base of the U.S. Navy 5th Fleet, said more than 30 sailors had been flown to Germany for medical attention. Others were taken to the east African country of Djibouti.

There have been no claims of responsibility for the blast that have gained widespread credibility. One U.S. official said this reflected a trend among militant groups not to claim responsibility for attacks in order to elude intelligence gathering.

However, Omar Bakri Mohammed, a leader of Al-Muhajiroun, a London-based Arab militant group, said Friday he had received an international call claiming responsibility for the attack on the American ship. It was in the name of "Muhammad's Army," an extremist group previously known to be active only in Chechnya and Dagestan.

Bakri, who is known to have ties to terror suspect Osama bin Laden, said he was skeptical of the claim but some of his skepticism waned after Friday's bombing at the British Embassy because the group promised more attacks in its call Thursday. It warned that "strikes will continue until the Muslim land and Palestine are liberated," he said.

Meanwhile, a close associate of bin Laden urged Muslims worldwide to attack U.S. and Israeli targets to avenge the deaths of Palestinians killed in bloody and protracted clashes with Israel.

Ayman el Zawahri, who was found guilty in absentia of the 1981 assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, faxed his call for "jihad," or holy war, to the Islamabad bureau of the Abu Dhabi channel of the United Arab Emirates Television, bureau chief Jamal Ismael said.

The U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the call was similar to others that have been made recently and would be evaluated.

Islamic extremists have been active in Yemen. However, Yemen's Prime Minister Abdul-Karim al-Iryani said in March that bin Laden, at one time had "colleagues" in Yemen but now "has no place in Yemen, no military camps."

The United States accuses bin Laden of organizing a network with followers across the Mideast, including Yemen, and says he masterminded the 1998 bombings of U.S. embassies in Africa that killed 224 people.

VOTE: Midland woman believes Gore kiss was 'absolutely gross'

(From 1A)

women. In Midland, however, that might not be the case.

Not only is Bush a former resident of Midland, but the city itself has become a staunch Republican hotbed.

In recent presidential elections, Midlanders — both male and female — have voted overwhelmingly for Republicans.

That is expected to continue this year, although some local women acknowledge having a lack of enthusiasm for both candidates.

"Personally, I'm not thrilled with either one of them," said Midlander Monica Byars. "But I prefer Bush over Gore." Ms. Byars said she thinks Gore lacks sincerity and does things that ultimately make him look bad, even though his intentions may be good. "That kiss he gave Tipper was absolutely gross," she said. "I have little boys who didn't need to see the vice president of the United States making out with his wife on national television."

Ms. Byars referred to the now famous lengthy kiss Gore gave his wife on stage at the Democratic National Convention.

"The kiss was a planned vehicle, intended to separate the Gores from Bill and Hillary Clinton's bad marital image," said homemaker Cecilia Speck. "Although very polished and impromptu in appearance, I definitely believe it was staged."

But Ms. Speck, who is a Republican, was not without her criticisms concerning Bush. "I believe Bush's plan for cutting taxes is not the thing to do," she remarked. "There are too many things that need to be paid for, like the national debt."

Ms. Speck also said Bush should be more willing to accept legislation supporting background checks for gun purchases. "I'm opposed to people having their guns taken away," she said. "However, no one can deny that doing background checks can help keep guns out of the wrong hands."

But other women, like Midlander Debbie Stone, think any more gun control legislation would simply be overkill. "There are over 20,000 gun laws on the books right now," she said. "It should be obvious that more laws will be useless. If criminals cared about the law, they wouldn't be criminals."

Ms. Stone said she supports Bush not only for his stand on guns, but because she likes his ideas on foreign policy, capital punishment and how the budget surplus should be handled.

But Kendra Miller, who just moved here from out of state, said Gore was the only real choice in her opinion. "I just came back to Midland so my kids and I could move in with my grandparents," she said. "I'm trying to get my life together, and I think Al Gore will do his best to help people in my situation."

Ms. Miller, 23, is recently divorced and hopes to find a part-time job and go to school in search of a degree, but said she cannot do it without help from the government.

Abortion, always an emotional issue in an election year, was a point of contention with some women voters, as well. "Abortion is wrong," said Barbara Gibson. "It is imperative to get a Republican president into office, in an effort to overturn Roe vs. Wade." Ms. Gibson added that she believes Bush will carry the torch for the pro-life movement.

Deborah Fischer, a self-described independent, said even though she views both candidates as being unaggressive and subdued, she will probably end up casting her vote for Bush. "Although I favor some Democratic views, I think the Clinton-Gore administration has been a farce," she said. She also voiced her frustration with the current education system, saying she now home-schools her daughter.

Regardless of their respective political views, Ms. Byars summed up the one point that was shared by almost all the women interviewed. "It will be difficult for either candidate to make any kind of an immediate impact," she said. "No matter who you vote for, the effects of their administration are likely not to be felt until years after they have already left office."

OIL: Speaker has list of credentials

(From 1A)

A political and social scientist from the Universidad Nacional Autonoma de Mexico (UNAM), he earned his masters degree in energy economy and planning at Sussex University, in England and his doctorate with the thesis, "Energy and Styles of Development: the Case of Electricity in Mexico," at that university's Institute of Development Studies.

He held the public administration positions of Special Projects Director at the Ecology Institute of the Environment Secretariat (SEMARNAP) and Chief Advisor to the Energy Policy and Development Deputy Secretary at the Energy Secretariat (SE). He also worked as a consultant for the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO), the United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America (CEPAL) and the Electricity Research Institute (IIE).

Monteforte worked at the National Science and Technology Council (CONACYT) as a specialized editor for eight years and was a researcher and professor at the UNAM's Technological Innovation Center for five years. He has published numerous articles nationally and internationally on energy policy and economics and, in 1982, was awarded the National Scientific Journalism Prize.

Other panel members will include: Jerry Jordan, chairman of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, who will present an independent perspective to oil prices and policy; Tim Bradley, president of Kinder-Morgan CO2, who will address oil prices, recovery and the Permian Basin; Clayton Williams, president of Clayton Williams Energy, who will address the issue of oil company financial and operational performance in light of high oil prices; and John Bell, a Kermit independent oilman and organizer of the Oil Workers March on Austin in 1998, who will provide insight on the economic impact low oil prices played on the industry during the 1997-1999 downturn and the need for an energy policy.

The panel, which will be at 10:15 a.m. on Thursday just inside the west entrance of the Ector County Coliseum, will be moderated by Dr. Michael Economides, author of the Color of Oil, a book on the oil industry and its impact on world economies.

MISD: City Council has final say development. The original property tax income prior to the creation of the TIRZ would continue to be apportioned to the five taxing entities: city of Midland, Midland Independent School District, Midland County, Midland County Hospital District and Midland College. And the success of the TIRZ would hinge on the participation of the five taxing entities.

But in an interview earlier this week, Hackler, a TIRZ committee member, said the committee will not seek MISD's participation in the program. He said state legislation, which went into effect in September 1999, punishes school districts for participating in programs such as the TIRZ. By forgoing any future additional property tax revenue from the downtown area, MISD would also lose potential matching funds from the state, Hackler said.

MISD currently receives 57.1 percent of all property tax revenues generated in the county. In excluding MISD from the equation, the economic impact on downtown that a fully funded TIRZ could provide will be reduced.

Despite Hackler's comments, MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said MISD hasn't officially ruled out its participation, because "we haven't even begun to consider it."

Baressi and school board president George Lara will review the finer points of the TIRZ with DMI officials at an October 25 meeting.

But Shawn Ellison, executive director of DMI, shared Hackler's outlook saying that MISD would suffer financially if it chooses to participate.

"It's not feasible for them at all," she said. "At this point, we've made the decision that we will not be asking MISD to participate."

Ms. Ellison acknowledged that the TIRZ's impact will be lessened by the absence of MISD. But, she added, "It does still have some effectiveness. There still is potential."

In recent months, a consultant has been studying the viability of establishing a TIRZ in downtown Midland. The city had resolved to spend no more than $100,000 on a consultant. To date, $40,000 has been spent, Ms. Ellison said.

The City Council will review the consultant's study October 24 and then consider creating the TIRZ. If approved, each taxing entity will be given 60-day notice of the impending change. Each entity will then determine their own level of participation.

The goal of the TIRZ will be to rejuvenate a downtown that has experienced a continual decrease in economic activity and property values.

"The major reason the city is considering the TIRZ is we need to do something to stem the tide of what has been years of a declining tax base in downtown," Hackler said.

Hackler said a recent TIRZ Committee study revealed that downtown property valuations have been on a steady decline. In 1991 property values downtown totaled $175 million. Today they're worth only $125 million. Hackler defined "downtown" as being the area encompassed between Cuthbert Avenue and Front Street, and A Street and Lamesa Road.

And Hackler added, "Our suspicion is that if you went back into the '80s you would see much higher than $175 million in downtown property valuations. We've got to turn that around. The TIRZ is designed to first and foremost stop the hemorrhaging. The TIRZ will grow the tax base and grow the economy."

But, Hackler concluded, "This is only a proposal. Ultimately the City Council must be briefed on it to decide if this is what is best for Midland."

From small towns, from military families: the victims from the USS Cole remembered

By David Crary
Associated Press

Some were still teen-agers. Two were young women. Several had fathers who preceded them in serving their country. Most grew up in small or mid-size towns and joined the Navy with adventure as well as duty in mind.

On Thursday, 17 sailors died doing their duty when a suspected terrorist bomb tore through the hull of the destroyer USS Cole during a refueling stop in Yemen.

One of the victims, Cherone Gunn, aspired to be a policeman and saw the Navy as a stepping-stone. Another sailor, Kevin Rux, actually tried police work after 10 years in the Navy, but reconsidered — and re-enlisted last summer.

Sharon Priepke of Fond du Lac., Wis. — who son, 24-year-old Marc Nieto, was among the dead — probably spoke for all the grieving families.

"He had goals to the sky and he was going to achieve those goals," she said, clutching some of her son's commendations. "He was just starting to live his life."

A brief look at some of the dead:

Lakeina Monique Francis, 19, of Woodleaf, N.C., a mess management specialist aboard the Cole, graduated from high school last year and followed her father into a military career. "The family is taking it real hard," said the Rev. Willie Gray, a neighbor. Two of Francis' brothers, James and David, play football at West Rowan High School. "We're just going to work with the boys, help them through the day, do whatever the mom and dad would like us to help them through this," said the school principal, Henry Kluttz.

Information Systems Technician Tim Gauna, 21, of Rice, Texas, was a 1997 graduate of Ennis High School. Teachers said he was a quiet student who excelled in baseball and art. In 1999, he joined the Navy as a radio man. "He went there to better himself, to make a better life for himself," said his mother, Sarah Gauna. The family last heard from Gauna by phone a few days ago as the Cole headed for a secret destination. "He just kept saying, 'We're in dangerous waters, Mom, but we're OK. I'll be OK. I promise you,'" Sarah Gauna said.

Signalman Seaman Recruit Cherone Louis Gunn, 22, grew up in Virginia Beach, Va., but lived with an aunt and uncle in Rex, Ga., in recent years. He enrolled in the Navy in January because he wanted to be a policeman someday, said Brandon Ervin, a former neighbor in Rex. Ervin said Gunn used to baby-sit for his children. "Most guys his age, their thing is to go out and party, not to give their time to anyone else," Ervin said. "To see a guy like him be able to share his time with children, that was really great."

Ensign Andrew Triplett from Macon, Miss., had been in the Navy for 13 years. "He was a good family man. He had two children and he was just a likable person," said his mother, Savannah Triplett, a cook at C&K Super Stop in the small Mississippi town of Shuqualak. "He just loved the Navy. That's all he used to talk about." Triplett, who will be buried in Norfolk, Va., where he lived with his wife, Laurie, of Detroit, and their children.

Petty Officer 3rd Class Ronchester Santiago, 22, of Kingsville, Texas, had been in the Navy since graduating in 1996 from H.M. King High School. He was scheduled to get out of the service in December and planned to study electrical engineering at the University of Texas at Austin. "He was attracted to the adventure in the Navy," said his father, Rogelio Santiago, a retired Navy petty officer first class. "He wanted to see the world. He just wanted the experience."

Duties aboard the Cole for Seaman Craig Wibberley, 19, of Williamsport, Md., included raising and lowering the destroyer's small anchor. "He was a good all-American boy," said the Rev. Anne Weatherbolt, the Wibberley family minister. "Any time there's a loss on a small community everybody feels it." His mother, Patty Wibberley, is a nursing assistant at an assisted-living center. "I'm just numb. It hasn't sunk in yet," she said. One of Wibberley's friends, Tyler Growden, 19, said the two liked to fish in the Potomac River. He and others described Craig — who graduated from Washington Technical High School last year — as someone who had no enemies.

Kevin Shawn Rux, 31, of Portland, N.D., was an electronics warfare technician on the Cole, and son of a Navy veteran. "His dad was Navy lifetime, and he was so much like his dad," said Rux's aunt, Joy Ust, of Finley, N.D. Finley said most of Rux's family, including his mother, lives in West Virginia. Rux joined the Navy after high school, stayed about 10 years, then tried being a policeman, Finley said, but this summer decided to re-enlist in the Navy. Rux was married; his wife lives near where the Cole is based in Norfolk, Va.

Seaman Recruit Lakiba Nicole Palmer of San Diego graduated in 1996 from San Diego High, where she was a stalwart on the track team. "She was a hard worker and a dedicated athlete, well-liked by the rest of her teammates," said Paul Locher, her former coach. Palmer specialized in the sprints and 400-meter relay. "We're all saddened by this," Locher said.

Hull Maintenance Technician 3rd Class, Kenneth Eugene Clodfelter, 21, of Mechanicsville, Va., was planning to sign up for another tour of duty in January. He was the father of a 2-year-old boy, Noah. Clodfelter graduated from Lee-Davis High School in Mechanicsville in 1997, and was described as a good student who wrestled and played football. He was an Eagle Scout.

Engineman 2nd Class Marc Nieto, 24, of Fond du Lac, Wis., joined the Navy six years ago and was just two weeks away from finishing his stint in the service. His mother, Sharon Priepke, said Nieto worked in the engine room on the Cole and loved repairing machinery. "His biggest joy in life was his vehicles, working on the engines. He was always into engines and repairing," she said. "He had himself a truck and he had himself an '81 Camaro that he had been working on and rebuilding the engine."

Petty Officer 3rd Class Ronald Scott Owens, 24, was a native of Vero Beach, Fla., married, with a 4-year-old daughter. He graduated from Vero Beach High in 1994, joined the Navy in 1998 and had just shipped out in August for his first tour. He e-mailed his wife Wednesday about plans for a weekend vacation to the beach when he returned home in February. "Always at the end of his letters, he said, 'Keep smiling. I'll be home soon,'" said his wife, Jamie.

Electronics Technician 1st Class Richard Costelow, 35, was from Morrisville, Pa., a blue-collar suburb across the Delaware River from Trenton, N.J. His wife and three children had been staying at the Paxtuxent River Naval Air Station in Lexington Park, Md. "The whole Costelow family, they are wonderful people," said Antoinette Abel, who grow up across the street from them in Morrisville.

CAMPAIGN 2000 IN BRIEF

■ Gore talks on Mideast relations

Al Gore stumped today against a backdrop of growing international tensions that threatened to divert attention from the presidential race. Opening a noontime rally in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Gore soberly noted that a national security meeting was set later in the day in Washington and he was jumbling his schedule to be on hand. "This is a time of great tension in the Middle East, and it is a time when our country's leadership is needed," he said. "And as a nation we're going to stand together and do everything we can to promote peace and security and the right outcome." But at the same time, Gore found time to rip into George W. Bush's record as governor of Texas, accusing him again of presiding over a state with the worst record for health coverage in the nation.

■ Bush 'troubled' by Mideast fights

Pointing out a widely distributed photo from morning newspapers, George W. Bush told a crowd today at a General Motors truck plant in Pontiac, Mich., "I continue to be troubled by the violence in the Middle East. The picture of the young man with blood on his hands, celebrating the death of an Israeli soldier — that kind of action must be condemned. It is important for our administration to continue to seek calm and peace in the Middle East. It is important for Chairman (Yasser) Arafat to ask the Palestinians to step back so that peace can take hold."

■ Bush criticizes Gore arms deal

George W. Bush, criticizing Al Gore, said today that a report of a U.S.-Russian agreement allowing the sale of Russian arms to Iran was "a troubling piece of information." He demanded an explanation from Gore. The New York Times reported that under a 1995 agreement signed by Gore and Russia's then-Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, the United States allowed Russia to fulfill existing sales contracts for conventional arms to Iran on condition that Russia would end the sales by the end of 1999. Moscow continues to supply Iran with arms, over the protests of the Clinton administration. Said Gore spokesman Chris Lehane, "This agreement was made public when it was signed."

■ Russian denies Bush's charges

George W. Bush's accusation that aid money from the International Monetary Fund lined the pockets of former Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin was denied on Thursday by the IMF and Chernomyrdin, raising questions about Bush's pointed charge in the second presidential debate. Bush named Russia as an "egregious" example of misspent aid, and charged that some of the IMF's money "ended up in Viktor Chernomyrdin's pocket." The barb was clearly aimed at Al Gore, who has had a prominent role in managing relations with Russia. The Gore campaign cited the dispute over the accuracy of Bush's statement as proof that the Texas governor "does not meet presidential standards" in foreign policy.

■ Cheney urges 'swift retaliation'

Dick Cheney urged "swift retaliation" against those responsible for the apparent bombing of an American destroyer, an attack that killed 17 sailors. "Any would-be terrorist out there needs to know that if you're going to attack, you'll be hit very hard and very quick," Cheney said today in Madison, Wis. "It's not time for diplomacy and debate; it's time for action." The terrorist bombing of the USS Cole near Yemen provided Cheney, a former secretary of defense, with a potent anecdote in calling for a stronger national defense and highlighted his experience in dealing with military threats. He said the incident is a reminder that "it's still a hostile and dangerous world out there."

■ Lieberman tours Texas

Joseph Lieberman walked down the muddy streets of El Flaco Colonia with Felipe and Irene Gonzalez on Friday, asserting that if George W. Bush would come see their tiny plywood home "he would do more than he's done" to improve conditions.

"Al Gore and I are not saying Governor Bush is a bad person. We are saying he has bad priorities," said Lieberman, the Democratic vice presidential candidate.

Bush, the Republican candidate and Texas governor, has never visited one of the colonias, which many of Texas' poorest citizens call home near the Mexican border. But Bush aides say he's done plenty to help, pointing to federal and state spending of $600 million.

"You don't have to go to Alaska to know it's cold," Texas Secretary of State Elton Bomer said. "And I don't think you have to go to a colonia to know what it's like."

Irene Gonzalez told Lieberman her family lives with limited water, unpaved streets and no street lights. Her three-room home, which sits on cinder blocks, has plywood walls both outside and inside. Roosters run through the home along with the couple's eight children.

"We pay taxes and everything and we don't know where the money goes," she told Lieberman as they walked up the street to a neighbor's home.

"I wanted to see it with my own eyes," Lieberman said. "This place cries out for help."

He said the federal and state governments should work together to make sure there are improvements for the 400,000 Texas residents living in colonias.

"There hasn't been, from what I've been told, much of a reaction from the state government," Lieberman said. He said of Bush, "If he saw this, he would do more than he's done."

Bush officials said that during his tenure as governor $600 million has been allocated to improving living conditions along the Mexican border.

Lieberman said of the residents, "What they are asking for from the governor is not a handout. They are asking for basic services."

Lieberman was winding up a two-day Texas campaign trip during which he criticized Bush's record as governor. On Thursday, he visited residents of a neighborhood in Odessa that is within five miles of an industrial complex that residents blame for environment-related illnesses.

■ Candidates focus on debates

Over the weekend, both of the major candidates will turn their attention to preparing for the third and final presidential debate in St. Louis next Tuesday. The debate, in a town hall format with questions from audience members, comes exactly three weeks before an election that remains close in the polls. George W. Bush was to spend the weekend at his ranch in Crawford, Texas; Al Gore was taking more than a dozen "real people" advisers, including Atlanta firefighter Matt Moseley, to the Innsbrook Resort near St. Louis.

■ Gore changes Web site claim

On his Internet-based resume of environmental accomplishments, Al Gore's campaign boasts he led an effort that prompted the "successful revitalization of over 30,000 brownfield sites across America since 1995." But voters beware: The Clinton administration hasn't cleaned up or redeveloped 30,000 polluted sites. In fact, Environmental Protection Agency records indicate the administration has started to redevelop 228 brownfields and completed cleanups on just 131 properties since President Clinton took office. When The Associated Press brought the numbers to the attention of the Gore campaign, it quickly changed the claim on the official Web site. "This was a staff level error that was corrected as soon as it was brought to the campaign's attention," said Gore spokesman Dan Pfeiffer.

■ Running mates change styles

As the campaigns of Al Gore and George W. Bush have evolved, so too have the roles of their vice presidential running mates. In the beginning, Joe Lieberman was a phenomenon, campaigning exuberantly as the first Jew on a major party ticket. Now, with polls showing a tight race just weeks before the election, his appearances are a bit less cheerful, his tone sharper. By contrast, Dick Cheney, criticized at the start as a humorless, lackluster campaigner, has lightened up a bit, sprinkling a few jokes and wry comments into stump speeches still laden with criticism of the Democrats. The "attack dog" moniker, once readily assigned to Cheney, now fits Lieberman as well, said Kathleen Hall Jamieson, dean of the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania.

■ Democrats looking for vigor

Seeds of concern over Al Gore's campaign are developing among House Democrats, some of whom say that they were disappointed with his performance in the second presidential debate. Gore, they say, missed opportunities to strike back at the Republican-controlled Congress and to help the Democrats regain control of the House. As Rep. Jose Serrano (D-N.Y.), put it: "Gore was told by the world not to be aggressive. But now, if he's not aggressive, that's the criticism. The other guy can do whatever he pleases." Some Democrats on Capitol Hill said Gore seemed to take the notion of bipartisanship too far. They worried that if he doesn't paint differences more starkly, congressional Democrats will stay in the minority.

Candidate battles breast cancer in N.D. governor's race

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Heidi Heitkamp is waging a battle on two fronts in her effort to become the first woman governor of North Dakota. She is fighting both her Republican rival and breast cancer.

The illness has generated a wave of sympathetic publicity, but it has also raised questions of whether the 44-year-old Democrat is up to the job.

Heitkamp dismisses the concern and says with a laugh that chemotherapy will probably cause the temporary loss of the red hair that helped make her one of the state's more recognizable politicians.

"All those people out there who wanted me to get a new hairdo are going to get their way," she said.

Behind the jokes is a tight race to succeed Gov. Ed Schafer, a Republican who is stepping down after two terms.

The cancer diagnosis may have changed the dynamics of the campaign in favor of Heitkamp, who has served eight years as state attorney general after six years as tax commissioner.

Before she disclosed her illness Sept. 20, Heitkamp believed she was slightly behind her Republican rival, John Hoeven, former president of the Bank of North Dakota. She was sidelined for two weeks after surgery to remove her right breast and some lymph nodes.

But in a newspaper poll published last weekend, Heitkamp was favored by 48 percent of the likely voters surveyed, compared with 42 percent for Hoeven. The poll, in The Forum of Fargo, had a margin for error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Both Heitkamp and Hoeven say they want the campaign to return to issues they have debated all year — how best to promote high-wage jobs, improved teacher salaries and ways to stem rural population losses.

"Cancer has touched us all, and that sympathy and that empathy for Heidi is there, and it will continue to be there," Hoeven said. "But I think as North Dakotans go through and sort this thing out, they're going to separate their voting decision from those factors."

Heitkamp agreed. "This campaign isn't about cancer," she said. "It is about North Dakota's future."

North Dakota has lost population in each of the last three years. Only three counties had more young people in 1999 than in 1990.

The outgoing governor has suggested Heitkamp's illness could hamper her ability to set up a new administration. Schafer's successor, who takes office Dec. 15, has less than a month to draft spending recommendations for the Legislature.

"You come in, get thrown into a legislative session, you're putting a cabinet together. I mean it is a 16-, 18-hour day, very, very intense," Schafer said. "I hope Heidi isn't going to get herself into a situation where physically it would be to her detriment."

Some Republicans also grumbled about a Heitkamp television ad in which she discusses her cancer treatment, saying it goes against her professed wish to stick solely to the issues.

Heitkamp said the ad is ending this week and was taped because she felt she should address voters directly about her illness.

Hoeven, who worked at his family's Minot bank before taking the state banking job, is a political newcomer who has emphasized his business background.

In one of the nation's older states — almost one of every five North Dakotans is 60 or older — the race matches up two people who would be among the nation's youngest governors. Hoeven, at 43, is a year younger than Heitkamp.

Heitkamp has emphasized her rural, working-class background, which has included jobs as a waitress, day-care provider, water pipe layer and cleaner in an ice cream factory. She is a native of Mantador, a hamlet of 77 people in southeastern North Dakota, where her father was a construction worker and her mother a cook and janitor.

Heitkamp, who expects to start six months of chemotherapy next week, insisted she can lead the state.

"I've always been a person with a lot of energy, a lot of natural stamina," she said. "I fully expect that I will be able to give 170 percent."

Corzine spending hits high in Senate race in New Jersey

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Democrat Jon Corzine's record-shattering spending on his Senate campaign has climbed to nearly $46 million.

The former Wall Street investment banker with a net worth estimated at $400 million spent $36.6 million to win the Democratic primary over former Gov. Jim Florio in June. He spent an additional $9.3 million from July to September, according to a campaign finance report released Friday.

And his spending is likely to go at least $5 million higher in the five weeks between Oct. 1 and Election Day.

He has spent more than anyone in history on a Senate race. The old record was set by California Republican Michael Huffington, who spent $30 million on a losing bid in 1994.

Corzine's Republican opponent, Rep. Bob Franks, has not yet completed his campaign finance report, the campaign said.

Former asbestos producers seek tax breaks to offset health claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former asbestos producers Owens Corning, W.R. Grace, U.S. Gypsum and others struggling to resolve tens of thousands of health-related lawsuits would get $2 billion in tax breaks under legislation being circulated on Capitol Hill in the frenzied final days of the congressional session.

Republican leaders have not endorsed the bill, but it gained new urgency following last week's Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing by Owens Corning, which says it has paid $3.1 billion in asbestos settlements and may owe $3 billion more. Sponsors say the legislation could prevent further bankruptcies and ensure that victims get just compensation.

"Bankruptcies have created even more suffering for these victims who must look elsewhere for their compensation or receive no compensation," House Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., wrote to House members.

The bill, Hyde added, "does preserve a limited pool of funds available to compensate asbestos victims."

Asbestos, which has been found to cause cancer and lung disease, was widely used from the 1920s until the 1970s for insulation, in Navy ships and in power plants. In some cases, federal government contracts required asbestos use, but the government is immune from the lawsuits.

"We do believe the federal government has a moral responsibility here," said Ken Kies, a well-connected former congressional staffer who now works for PricewaterhouseCoopers, which is representing Owens Corning in Washington.

There are an estimated 200,000 outstanding asbestos health claims, and more are expected because the diseases it causes can take years to manifest themselves. Owens Corning, a major supplier of insulation and building materials based in Toledo, Ohio, estimated it has paid some 440,000 claims — while only earning $135 million from the asbestos products before halting production in 1972.

"We tried very hard to avoid filing for Chapter 11, but it just overwhelmed us," said company spokesman Bill Hamilton.

Other major former asbestos producers, including W.R. Grace & Co., Owens-Illinois, U.S. Gypsum and Armstrong Holdings, could face heightened financial pressure from the lawsuits because of Owens Corning's action. About two dozen companies preceded Owens Corning in filing for bankruptcy over the avalanche of lawsuits.

The tax legislation is an outgrowth of a bill Hyde has pushed for two years that would set up a government-sponsored asbestos settlement system and place medical limits on who is eligible. The Clinton administration and the Association of Trial Lawyers of America fought that bill vigorously as an infringement on individual rights. However, the lawyers' group is not opposing the tax measure.

The bill, costing about $2.1 billion in revenue over 10 years, would broaden the ability of companies to use so-called "carryback" rules that permit current-year losses to reduce income tax payments made in prior years, resulting in a refund. The time period for such claims would be extended from 10 years to 40 years or more, depending on the earliest date the companies were earning income from asbestos.

The measure also would exempt from taxes any interest paid on asbestos-related settlement funds.

"This legislation would help to stem the rash of bankruptcies among additional companies," said Michael Baroody, senior vice president at the National Association of Manufacturers. "Moreover, the legislation would help ensure that asbestos claimants are paid in a timely manner."

While the bill so far hasn't been fully embraced by Republican congressional leaders, it has attracted 83 co-sponsors including Rep. John Conyers of Michigan, ranking Democrat on the Judiciary Committee. Rep. Bill Archer, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, has asked for a review by staff but has not taken a position, an aide said Friday.

GOP leaders intend to move one final package of tax legislation before adjourning this month, which would provide a vehicle for asbestos language.

"We believe we have a pretty decent shot, given the merit of the situation and the crisis created by the Owens Corning bankruptcy filing," Kies said.

City's top syphilis rate may be slowing

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The city's syphilis infection rate — the highest in the nation last year — appears to be improving, though health officials said Friday that more teen-agers are contracting the disease.

A report from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention last month showed Indianapolis had 407 cases reported in 1999, or about 50 cases per 100,000 people.

Through the first nine months of this year, Indianapolis recorded 250 cases, compared with 292 during the same period of 1999. The drop is a sign that efforts to curb the disease are taking effect, said Dr. Virginia Caine, director of the Marion County Health Department.

However, teens account for 17 percent of the cases this year — an increase from 10 percent a year ago, said Dr. Janet Arno, medical director of the Bell Flower Clinic, the county's clinic for sexually transmitted diseases.

Childbirth Classes for Expectant Teens

Expectant teens tend to have different concerns than older mothers. Many are not comfortable in a class with older couples. Also, the healthcare needs for younger women are different than those of older expectant mothers. That's why its very important that pregnant teenagers get comprehensive prenatal care and instruction.

At the Birthplace our goal is to obtain better outcomes for babies and their mothers. This includes shorter, more comfortable labors with fewer complications, and greater satisfaction.

Mary Ellen will assist a laboring young woman throughout the entire labor, providing emotional support, practical comfort measures, and help to make the birth experience a positive memory with rich rewards and feelings of accomplishment.

Campaigns grapple with events beyond U.S. shores and their control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Until now, voters have been able to consider Al Gore and George W. Bush in relative peace and quiet. No more.

Middle East conflict and the attack on a U.S. warship, combined with some economic nervousness at home, are introducing unpredictable elements into the campaign and perhaps forcing people to look at Democrat Gore and Republican Bush in new ways, late in the game.

Whether the new elements will be consequential is beyond the understanding of both campaigns. At this point, they are bewildered over how the violence and disquiet might play in the Nov. 7 election — as alert as campaigns always are for a so-called October surprise.

On one hand, Democrats consider Gore's years of experience as vice president a strength for him when matters overseas take a dangerous turn — a point Republican strategists and supporters do not dispute.

"I can see how that might make people look at the candidates differently, like, 'Can they lead us at a time like this?'" Mike Scanlon, a Bush supporter and General Motors project manager, said while awaiting the Republican nominee's speech at a Pontiac, Mich., truck assembly plant.

Said Democrat Dennis Dochterman at a Gore event in Cedar Rapids, Iowa: "When there's uncertainty, people are less inclined to take a chance."

On the other hand, it is a Clinton administration-mediated peace process that is falling apart between Israelis and Palestinians, and an economy that Gore has been running on that is causing some worries, with inflation up and the stock market swooning before rebounding Friday.

Gore strategists prefer smooth economic trends, public satisfaction with the nation's overall direction, and no rude shocks — however unrelated to the campaign — in newspaper headlines.

On Friday, a day after suspected terrorists blew a hole in the destroyer USS Cole in the port of Aden, Yemen, leaving 17 U.S. sailors dead, neither candidate was jousting outwardly for advantage.

The White House was playing it somewhat carefully, too, even while offering a platform for Gore to show his experience.

President Clinton's spokesman, Jake Siewert, welcomed Gore back as the candidate interrupted campaigning for a second day to join Clinton in meetings. But the White House did not exactly place him at the center of its crisis management.

"I think it was his decision to come back here," Siewert said. "But the president ... always has appreciated his work on the Mideast peace process."

While saying he'd let "the experts" decide whether the crisis helps Gore, spokesman Chris Lehane took the occasion to trumpet the candidate's strengths.

"The bottom line is that he is involved because he has a wealth of experience on these issues," Lehane said while flying to Washington. "He is a valuable part of the foreign policy team at the White House."

Given that Gore and Bush have not voiced major differences on Middle East policy, Andy Kohut of the Pew Research Center questioned whether the violence there will mean much in the election.

Gore may have rushed back to Washington, "but it's not as if he is being summoned home to find a way for peace, or to find a way to wage war," Kohut said, predicting little fallout from developments short of a significant threat to U.S. national security.

Much the same sentiment was voiced in Cedar Rapids by Gore supporter Chuck Silliman.

"I think this administration can bring some stability to things if anybody can," he said. "But I'm also impressed with what Bush had to say about politics stopping at the water's edge."

Kohut noted, however, that each day devoted to problems abroad is one less day for Gore to pitch his prescription drug plan, challenge Bush on taxes or otherwise tangle with the Republican on domestic issues where polls suggest he has an edge.

About three weeks are left for that, absent persistent distraction, after the candidates lie low for a few days to prepare for their final debate.

"What it might do is take attention away from the domestic issues and that, I think, would be bad news for Gore because he has more to gain from a focus on health care, Social Security, even taxes, than Bush does," Kohut said.

But presidential historian Henry Graff of Columbia University said: "If we get into a critical situation, we're going to look for tried hands rather than new hands."

As for October surprises, Republicans feared that President Carter would pull one off in 1980 by winning the release of American hostages in Iran in time to take credit from voters and turn a looming defeat into victory. He didn't.

Machinists reach partial agreement

BATH, Maine (AP) — The Bath Iron Works and its largest union reached a tentative agreement Friday that would end a seven-week strike by 4,800 shipbuilders, a federal mediator said.

The agreement with the Machinists was reached after 36 hours of negotiations with mediators in Washington, said Elayne Tempel of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service in Portland.

The 3 1/2-year agreement calls for wage increases of 4 percent, 4.5 percent and 5 percent in three steps, said Tony Provost, one of the union negotiators. It also cuts workers' health care premiums by up to one half, with average savings per worker of $400 to $500 in the first year of the contract, he said.

The company also backed down on cross-training proposals that workers feared would lead to job cuts, he said.

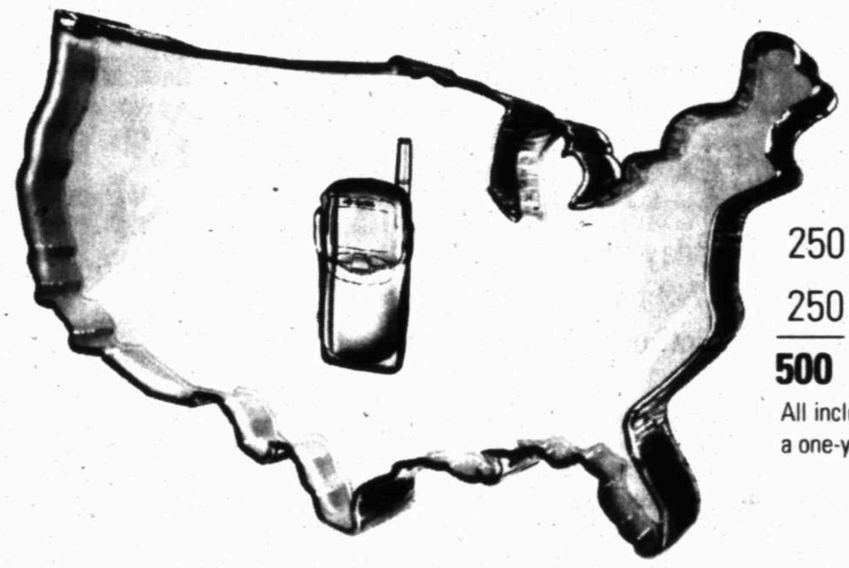

"Nobody ever gets everything they want, but we're quite pleased with what we got," Provost said.

The union planned to maintain picket lines until the agreement is ratified. Union members will vote on the contract on Oct. 22.

Shipyard spokeswoman Sue Pierter expressed optimism that the contract would be ratified since it has the support of the union's negotiating committee.

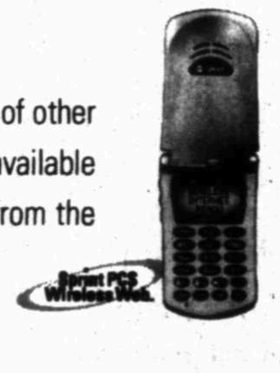

Bath Iron Works, owned by General Dynamics, has 7,600 workers and builds the Aegis destroyer.

China embarks on Herculean task: counting its teeming masses

BEIJING (AP) — It will be a snapshot of China from the snowy mountains of Tibet to its teeming cities, a Herculean effort to answer a question of global ramifications: How many Chinese are there, exactly?

China's fifth national census, already under way in remotest areas of the country, is a statistician's dream.

Six million census-takers, who will delve into issues as personal as whether families cook with gas and have flush toilets, have just a few weeks to knock on 350 million doors.

"It's very exciting," said Zhang Weimin, a senior statistician with the National Bureau of Statistics and one of the top officials overseeing the census.

That the census will confirm China as the world's most populous nation is beyond doubt.

At the last count in 1990, China had 1,133,680,000 people. Many tens of millions have been added since then, swelling the population to an estimated 1.26 billion now.

But with questions about family size, number of children, education levels, and even whether households share kitchens and bathrooms with other families, the census will provide a raft of information for government policy planners.

Questions about family housing, how much they paid for their house or their monthly rent will offer insight into rising living standards.

By asking families how many members are working away from home, officials are hoping to pin down the size of China's massive floating population — an army of around 100 million mostly rural migrants who have left poor villages in search of more lucrative city jobs.

Demographers are also looking to the census for information about China's missing baby girls — countless female infants aborted, drowned or not reported to authorities by families stuck on the traditional preference for boys.

Recent studies suggest the problem is getting worse, with figures released in January 1999 putting the ratio of men to women at 120 to 100.

The moment of truth is zero hour, Nov. 1.

Census takers who will visit all of China's estimated 350 million households on Nov. 1-15 will ask how many family members there were at that freeze-frame in time.

People who die before the census takers' visit but who were still alive in the first moments of Nov. 1 will be counted. Children born after that won't be counted.

Foreigners are not counted. To beat the approach of winter in Tibet, the census there started in September.

Preliminary results, including the population, the number of women, men and families, will be released in February, with full data available in 2002.

The 1990 census cost $145 million, but this one could cost twice as much, Zhang, the census official, said at a briefing for reporters Friday.

Secrecy is important if census takers are to get the truth from families who have had more children than allowed by China's strict family planning rules, or from migrants moonlighting in cities without papers.

People in China's more conservative countryside may also be embarrassed to admit to previous marriages or to having adopted children, said Zhang.

He said police will not have access to the information gathered and that the census forms would be destroyed after they have been scanned into computers that will number-crunch the data.

Rules are in place to stop officials from using the census as an excuse to expel migrants, and family planning officials — who police the regulations that restrict many families to just one child — will not be used as census takers, Zhang added.

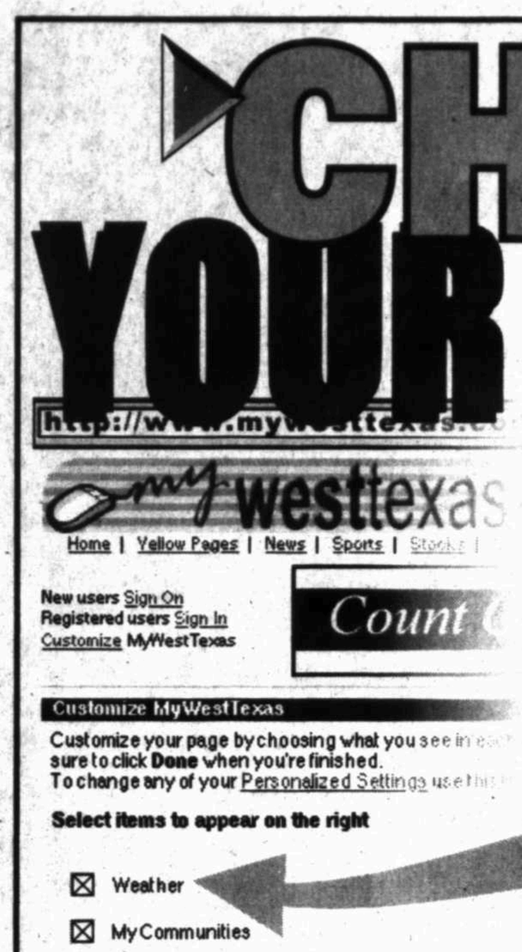

"The most crucial element to having citizens declare the facts, especially with regard to issues of personal privacy and sensitive questions, is secrecy," Zhang said. Only then "will citizens dare speak the truth."

Census takers — made up of factory workers, local government and village administrators and teachers — are being given seven days of training followed by an exam to screen out those not up to the task.

They have to be healthy — each census taker is expected to have to register between 250 and 300 people — and honest.

Zhang said there have been cases of officials charging villagers for the census forms.

Airwaves yet another battleground for Israelis, Palestinians

■ More World news/3C

JERUSALEM (AP) — It was no coincidence that when Israel rocketed Palestinian government buildings for the first time during a wave of violent street clashes, official Palestinian radio was a prime target.

Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Authority says it's simply keeping its people informed — and getting the Palestinian message out to the world.

But as far as Israel is concerned, the Voice of Palestine radio and television are as much a weapon as a firebomb or an assault rifle, serving up a nonstop diet of nationalistic songs, running commentary on the clashes and flowery tributes to what it calls the glorious martyrs of Palestine — those killed in battles with Israeli troops.

Israel has long accused Palestinian media of incitement. But amid the current spasm of violence, it has sharply stepped up its denunciations.

With the confrontation entering its third week, Israeli officials blamed Palestinian media for whipping up the mob that killed and mutilated two Israeli reservists Thursday after the soldiers took a wrong turn and wound up in the middle of Ramallah, one of the West Bank's worst flashpoints.

"The mob lynched them because the mob was incited for the last 10 days by the Palestinian Authority in newspapers, television, radio," said Israeli army spokesman Lt. Col. Ranaan Gissim, explaining why Palestinian transmitting facilities were targeted in rocket attacks launched from Israeli combat helicopters in retaliation.

The Israeli rocketing of the Voice of Palestine radio transmitter in Ramallah was reminiscent of NATO's airstrikes on Serbia in the spring of 1999 that took repeated aim at Slobodan Milosevic's official broadcast outlets.

Within hours of being knocked off the air by the Israeli attacks, the Voice of Palestine's programming was being carried on the FM band by private Palestinian stations across the West Bank.

The Paris-based press group Reporters Without Borders protested the attack in a letter to Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak, saying civil buildings should not be military targets.

The Palestinians insist their programming is a reflection of on-the-ground realities, not merely a propaganda tool.

"Look, when there's peace, I'll broadcast that," said Radwan Abu Ayyash, chairman of the Palestinian Broadcasting Corp., the Voice of Palestine's parent group. "But when they make war on us, that's what will be on the air. I'm not inventing all this."

In the early days of the clashes, Voice of Palestine radio infuriated Israel by broadcasting Hebrew-language appeals aimed at Israeli soldiers, urging them not to fire on young demonstrators. "Remember, our blood is as red as yours," said one.

The radio service, which previously ran twice-a-week Hebrew news programs, has now added Hebrew-language hourly bulletins.

Throughout the course of the conflict, both sides have been acutely aware of the power of TV images. Viewers around the world were shocked by footage shot Sept. 30 of a terrified 12-year-old Palestinian boy caught in a hail of gunfire in the Gaza Strip as his desperate father tried to shield him.

The incident fueled international condemnation of Israel and helped Palestinians win their fight for a U.N. Security Council resolution criticizing excessive use of force. The Israeli army has acknowledged its soldiers likely fired the shots that killed the boy, Mohammed Aldura, and seriously wounded his father.

"The biggest problem we have right now is how things look on television," former Prime Minister Shimon Peres told Israel's army radio. "When you see a child throwing a stone, facing an armed soldier, it of course looks bad on television."

Sympathy for the Israelis, on the other hand, was boosted by horrifying TV footage of the mob in Ramallah that killed the reservists. An Italian film crew captured graphic images of the Israelis' limp bodies being dumped from the second-floor window of the Palestinian police station in Ramallah while the mob rejoiced wildly and then converged on one corpse to beat it with bricks and bars.

Newspapers in Israel and around the world featured front-page photos of one of the assailants framed by the window, grinning in triumph, bloody hands raised high.

While the Palestinian media are under the strict control of Arafat's government, personal ideology fires the staff at the Voice of Palestine's satellite channel in Gaza, which broadcasts images of strife 24 hours a day to the entire Arab world.

Samir Al-Amasy, 23, spends long shifts assembling clash footage, leaving many of the most grisly images of injured Palestinian protesters intact. "It's hard, because I see each one of these wounded ones as my brother," he said.

Cameraman Hadar Abu Sultan described how his wife and children would weep and kiss him as if they would never see him again when he left the house to spend a day in the thick of furious clashes. And Mahi Adwan, a young video editor, said she saw her job as part of the struggle for a homeland.

"With my task here," she said, "I feel I complete the work of those who throw the stones."

Uh-OHS: No. 4 Rebs get upset

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

ODESSA — Hollywood invented Friday the 13th. District 4-5A football brings it to perfection.

Odessa High, which was picked by many to finish dead last in the 4-5A district chase this year, stunned No. 4 state-ranked Midland Lee, 27-17, at Ratliff Stadium Friday night, acting like the long-nailed Freddy Krueger.

Broncho quarterback Danny Vasquez torched the Lee's once proud defense for 272 yards passing, including two first half touchdowns. And then a leaping Jeff Casas scored two second half touchdowns to bring the Bronchos back from a 14-13 deficit at the half to produce the upset.

One fan on the OHS side of the field, said, "After what we've seen here tonight, you don't even have to listen for a score over in Midland, you just know Midland High had to win."

LEE

He was correct as MHS knocked off No. 9-ranked Abilene High, 20-6. This 4-5A beginning couldn't have picked a better day to start district play. Friday the 13th is real, not imaginary.

"Odessa High got in a goal line front and we just were not good enough to do anything about it," said Lee coach John Parchman.

OHS coach Jim Carson said, "Our defense was the key because if you score just 27 points against Lee, you're going to lose more times than not."

The Bronchos held Lee tailback Cedric Benson to only 113 yards rushing, letting him loose only once for a 30-yard TD run in the second quarter. He had only 24 yards rushing in the second half. The second half was a bad offensive outing for Lee. Not only did Benson get shut down, but quarterback Nick Hand didn't complete a second half pass after throwing for 98 yards and a touchdown in the first half.

Hand's four-yard pass to tight end Eric Winston opened the scoring in the first quarter after Lee had failed to score on its first drive of the night, stalling at the OHS 18 and couldn't convert on fourth down.

The more OHS stayed in the game, the more they were ready to bring some firepower to the table. And with Vasquez' arm in high gear, the Bronchos had more than enough bang to get the job done.

"We clicked," Vasquez simply said. "We finally showed that we can play with the best. This was a great win for us, and if we continue to play like this, we can play with anyone."

With Lee leading 17-13 late in the third quarter, OHS faced fourth-and-goal at the Lee 2. The ball went on a deep pitch to running back Jeff Casas. He was greeted at the 1-yard line by both linebackers Mark Gonzales and Robert Rogers. Casas leaped high in the air, landing in the end zone, giving OHS a 20-17 lead. That proved to be the back breaker.

This was the first victory for Carson over Parchman. Carson's was Parch-

■ Midland High knocks off No. 9 Abilene High in 4-5A opener.

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Sure, it was Friday the 13th, an eerie reddish moon was peeking through the clouds, but Friday night at Memorial Stadium, the scariest thing for Abilene High was the team it was facing.

The Midland High Bulldogs, a 21-point underdog, shocked Abilene High, Class 5A's ninth-ranked team and captured the District 4-5A opener for both teams, 20-6.

Midland High won its third straight game to improve to 4-2. Abilene High lost its first game of the year, falling to 5-1.

"In my five years (at Midland High), this is the biggest win to date," Midland High coach David Browning said.

That might be the understatement of his five seasons. Browning's teams have often been at the doorstep of pulling off an upset of Abilene High proportions, but fell short. In 1997, Cooper, a top-10 team in the state, used a last-minute field goal to hold off the Bulldogs, 23-21, in Abilene. Last year, MHS took No. 1-ranked Midland Lee to the limit, but fell just short.

Friday night, though, the Bulldogs got the win. It was the program's first district-opening win since 1988. It was also a victory over an Abilene High team, which last season clinched its first playoff berth since 1959 on the same Memorial field against the Bulldogs. The Eagles also happened to be one of the pre-district favorites for a playoff spot. That can't hurt much.

"We wanted to come out here and prove we are contenders in this district," said Ray Johnson, who scored a touchdown and picked off one of three interceptions for MHS. "This win is huge. Last year, they knocked us out and clinched a playoff berth. We want to go to the playoffs this year."

With games like this, that may now be possible. MHS clung to a 7-6 lead for most of the second half when it cranked up its biggest drive in a long time. Starting on its 26-yard line with 11 minutes, 42 seconds to play in the game, MHS took the ball and played an unbelievable game of keep away. The Bulldogs, first, tried to extend the drive on fourth and one from their 35. They succeeded.

They took the ball to AHS' 28, where on fourth and one, the Bulldogs had a first down run negated by a procedure call. They faced fourth and six, and it was time to "go for three," a fake field goal play.

MHS initially appeared as if it was going to line up to go for it. Then, with time running down on the play clock, MHS brought in James Gripp to attempt a 50-yard field goal. The ball was snapped, and Ryan Rowland, the holder, stood up and lofted a pass into the West Texas wind. When it came down, Lamar Hickey grabbed the ball for a completion of 26 yards.

"It was just a reaction," said Hickey of catching the trick-play pass. "It didn't hit me that I had it until I got up. That was a big play. AHS is a real good team, but we stepped up and played Bulldog football tonight."

Some Bulldog fans may remember the play. They used it to score touchdowns against Lee last year and in an upset of Odessa High in 1997.

"I am disappointed we didn't score," said Browning, chuckling.

Quarterback Chris Howard scored the first of two late touchdowns one play later.

Abilene High still had a chance to tie. The Eagles needed to go 69 yards with 4:56 left to play. However, like most of the game, the Bulldogs' defense gave AHS too many problems, and when Robert

Outlaw leads Rangers on Tiger hunt

By Oscar LeRoy

GREENWOOD — There was an Outlaw on the loose Friday night causing havoc against the Slaton Tigers.

Justin Outlaw had 157 all-purpose yards and scored on a 42-yard pass, on a 7-yard run and returned a kickoff 70 yards for a score as he led the Greenwood Rangers to a 44-7 win over Slaton in the District 3-3A opener for both teams. By the way, Outlaw also was a part of a stingy Ranger defense as he had an 17-yard interception return.

"The victory was the highlight for me," said Outlaw, turning attention away from his individual performance. "The team did great and everybody just came together."

"Outlaw had himself a game, of course, he's had himself a year " said Greenwood coach Bob Purser about his 5-foot-6, 140-pound speedster. "That little body needs to stay healthy so we can have a chance."

The only score allowed by the Ranger defense came early in the second half when Slaton running back Edward Roberts scored on a 62-yard run to cut Greenwood's lead to 28-7. Roberts finished with 124 yards on 24 carries with half of his total coming on the TD run.

"He's tough to stop," Outlaw said. "Our defense did a great job and we got it done."

"He's a load," said Purser about the 5-foot-9, 202 pound Roberts. "The kids that missed tackling him, he's got them outweighed by 100 pounds and probably bench presses 200 more than they do. But that's the way he's looked against everybody they've played against this year."

Roberts ended up with 45 percent of the Tigers 271 yards of total as the Greenwood defense had another shining performance. Slaton (0-6 overall, 0-1 in district) had come into the game averaging 25 points per game.

"I think our defense played better than anybody has played against them and that's pretty encouraging," said Purser, whose team improved to 4-2 overall and 1-0 in district.

On the ensuing kickoff after Roberts' score, Greenwood's Mitch Stack returned a kickoff 78 yards for a touchdown to spoil any momentum the Tigers might have had at the time.

Yankees look like dynasty again vs. M's

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — Big homers from Bernie Williams and Tino Martinez.

Big outs by Andy Pettitte.

Key hits by David Justice and Paul O'Neill.

And, of course, perfect relief from Mariano Rivera.

The Yankees finally are playing like, well, the Yankees.

LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES 2000

After slumbering through the final three weeks of the regular season and the first 10 days of the playoffs, the Yankees have shaken their lengthiest slump in five seasons, pummeling the Seattle Mariners 8-2 on Friday night to take a 2-1 lead in the AL championship series.

"Maybe that last game helped us get over the hump," O'Neill said. "We believe we're going to take the field and score some runs now."

On Wednesday at Yankee Stadium, they were six outs from falling behind 2-0 in the series before riding a seven-run eighth inning to a 7-1 win.

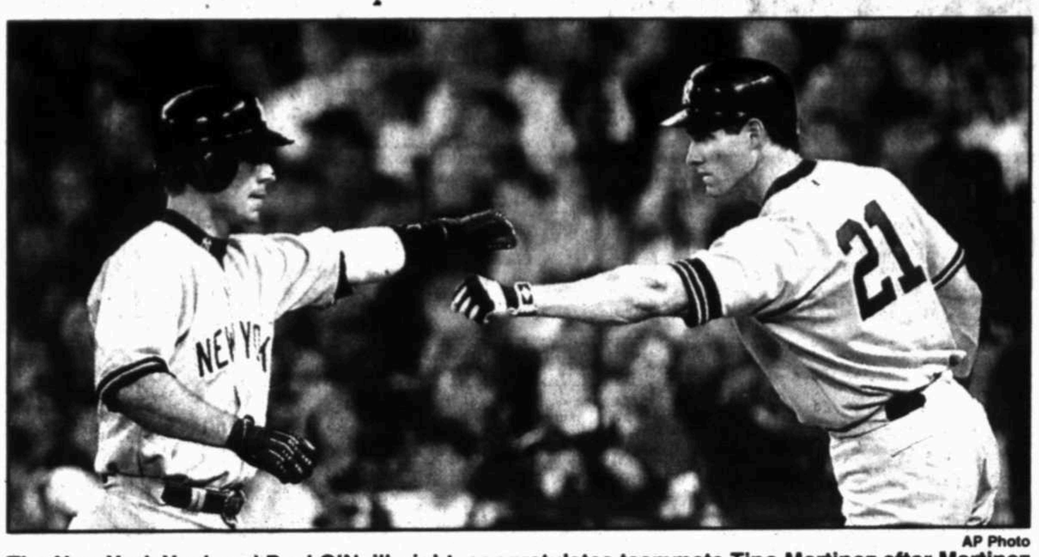

Before that, the Yankees were starting to wonder if they would ever hit again.

"It did help. It helped boost our confidence," Williams said. "We were grinding it from the first inning on. We were able to score a lot of runs, it was just a great game for us."

The Yankees, who could wind up in New York's first Subway Series since 1956, made their third cross-country trip in less than a week and fell behind in the first, then did everything right, from timely hitting to clutch pitching.

New York got 13 hits and scored in four innings for the first time in this year's playoffs, breaking open the game with four runs in the ninth.

"Tonight was more like when we are winning," Yankees manager Joe Torre said.

Pettitte improved to 8-4 in postseason play, allowing nine hits in 6 2-3 innings, but just two runs.

"He walks that high wire without a safety net and gets himself in trouble," Torre said. "Andy, when he needed to get out of a jam, made some quality pitches."

Rivera broke Whitey Ford's record for consecutive scoreless postseason innings, getting five straight outs for his fourth save of the postseason.

With a runner on second and the tying run at the plate in the eighth, he retired pinch-hitter Stan Javier on a grounder and John Olerud on a flyout, then pitched a perfect ninth for his fourth save of the playoffs.

His teammates think he's Mr. Automatic.

"I hope they always feel like that," Rivera said.

Rivera has 33 1-3 consecutive scoreless innings in the postseason since Sandy Alomar's homer in Game 4 of the 1997 division series, one more than Ford, the Yankees' Hall of Fame left-hander. Rivera has allowed two earned runs in 55 postseason innings, a 0.33 ERA.

"You get spoiled with him," Pettitte said. "The guy just comes in and just doesn't give up runs."

Meanwhile, eight of nine Yankees' starters got hits.

For the first time this October, the two-time World Series champions looked like they were in control, playing with renewed resolve rather than cringing from the weight of their past accomplishments.

Even O'Neill came through. The right fielder, the Yankees' warrior and backbone, had been 0-for-8 in the series, flailing at the plate in perhaps the worst slump of his career.

After Seattle clawed back to 3-2 in the fifth, O'Neill came right back with a sharp two-out single in the sixth off Aaron Sele, his first RBI hit of the postseason.

Chuck Knoblauch tacked on an RBI single in the ninth against Brett Tomko, Justice followed with a two-run single and Williams added a sacrifice fly off Rob Ramsay.

Roger Clemens takes an 0-2 postseason record this year into Game 4 Saturday night, pitching against Paul Abbott. Seattle has just five runs in three games.

"I have a feeling we're going to come out tomorrow and start swinging the bats the way we're capable of," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said.

Jeff Nelson also extended his scoreless streak, to five innings in this fall's playoffs. He relieved Pettitte with the score 4-2, and struck out Mike Cameron to end the seventh with a runner on first.

After Alex Rodriguez singled off Nelson leading off the eighth, Nelson struck out Edgar Martinez, who is 9-for-11 against Rivera. Only after that did Torre bring in his closer.

At the beginning, it looked like yet another Yankees' struggle. Consecutive one-out singles by Cameron, Rodriguez and Edgar Martinez put Seattle ahead in the first, but Pettitte retired Jay Buhner on a pop and the Yankees rebounded in the second with their first consecutive homers in 16 games since Sept. 23.

"It's never easy for me, always a battle," Pettitte said. "After I gave up the run in the first, the guys came right back and battled."

Williams connected to right on a 3-0 pitch and Tino Martinez, who played for the Mariners when they beat the Yankees in the 1995 playoffs, followed four pitches later with a drive just over a leaping Cameron in center. Neither had homered since Sept. 24 against Detroit, the Yankees' next-to-last home game of the regular season.

New York made it 3-1 on Justice's RBI double in the third, scoring in consecutive innings for the first time during this year's playoffs.

Seattle closed within a run in the fifth when Rickey Henderson doubled with one out and Cameron followed with an RBI single.

But New York came right back in the sixth, getting the single from O'Neill after Sele picked up a slow roller by Martinez but couldn't get the ball out of his glove.

With that, it seemed like the hex finally was off the Yankees. And why not?

It was, after all, Friday the 13th.

"I don't think pressure's off until we can plan on going to the World Series," Torre said. "You can't take anything for granted."

Notes: Jorge Posada was the only Yankees starter without a hit. ... Sele gave up four runs and nine hits in six-plus innings, dropping to 0-3 in the postseason — with all three losses to the Yankees. ... It was the 40th anniversary of Bill Mazeroski's home run that won Game 7 of the 1960 World Series for Pittsburgh. The roof was closed at Safeco Field, where the Mariners were 10-3 in regular-season games that ended under cover.

Cards face tough challenge going into Shea down 2-0

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Down two games and facing a challenge no team has ever overcome in a league championship series, the St. Louis Cardinals now confront Shea Stadium, where the Mets had baseball's best home record.

Anybody got any ideas?

"Most clubs get down two don't do very well," manager Tony La Russa said during workouts Friday. "It is possible."

La Russa said the solution was fairly clear.

"I'm not sure it's anything that's too complicated," he said. "It's just straight baseball. We had a couple of chances with men in scoring position where we could do a better job of having an at-bat. We gave up runs with two-strike pitches where we threw breaking balls that got up. We've got to make better pitches.

"We need to compete like we competed the last two days. When it gets down to the winning difference, a little bit better at-bat, a better pitch, you've got to make that thing happen. We played very hard and pretty good. They played better."

History is not on St. Louis' side.

Thirteen times, teams have frittered away the home-field edge in an LCS by losing the first two games at home. None recovered to win the series. The Cardinals are trying to avoid becoming No. 14.

"Down 2-0, it's definitely going to be a project," first baseman Will Clark said. "Especially here."

Playing at home has been an edge for the Mets all season. After losing a designated home game in Tokyo at the start of the season, the Mets were 55-25 at Shea, including a three-game sweep of the Cardinals in July.

In that series, Mike Bordick and Bubba Trammell, both acquired in trade deadline deals, homered in their first at-bats for New York.

"Our team plays well all over," manager Bobby Valentine said. "I think we just got a lot of hops when we were playing at home to make our record a little uneven. But we've played the same brand of baseball whether we're here or on the road.

"We don't get any signals from the scoreboard or any of that good stuff that some home-field advantages supposedly have. We just play the game of baseball."

Rick Reed, who starts Game 3 for New York against the Cardinals' Andy Benes, thinks the Mets are simply more comfortable in their stadium.

"You get used to your home field, obviously," he said. "I guess it's the excitement of the fans. They're into every game. They're into every pitch. So that's a little advantage on our side."

Complicating the Cardinals' task is the fact that the Mets are hot. They have won five consecutive postseason games for the first time in franchise history and displayed remarkable resiliency doing it, winning three of those games in their final at-bat.

In Game 2 of the division series against San Francisco, J.T. Snow wiped out a 4-1 New York lead with a pinch home run in the bottom of the ninth. The Mets won it in the 10th on a hit by Jay Payton.

In Game 3, the Mets fell behind 2-0 early and were hitless through five innings. They tied the score in the eighth and won it in the 13th on a home run by Benny Agbayani.

Then came Game 2 against the Cardinals when New York let leads of 3-1 and 5-3 get away but won the game in the ninth on a hit by Payton.

They give every indication of a team on a mission.

Clark said he saw some hopeful signs for the Cardinals on the team's late-night flight into New York.

"When we got on the plane last night, I saw a lot of people go to sleep," he said. "That told me that everybody that Tony La Russa sent out there gave everything they had. They left everything they had out on the field. That's the effort Tony gets, Tony expects. And that's the kind of effort he'll get tomorrow."

Byrum stays on roll with third straight round of 65 in Vegas

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Tom Byrum is stuck on a pretty nice number.

Byrum, who began the week in danger of losing his PGA Tour card, shot his third straight 65 under ideal conditions Friday to take a two-shot lead in the Invensys Classic at Las Vegas.

On another day when par seemed merely an abstract thought on the three desert courses pros shared with amateur partners, Byrum finished with five straight birdies to lead Billy Andrade with two rounds still to play in the 90-hole tournament.

"I don't have an explanation for it, but I'll take it," Byrum said.

Byrum, a stroke ahead of Blaine McCallister to start the day, played before only a handful of people at one of two satellite courses used in the tournament and didn't see a leaderboard all day.

When he was finished, though, he was on top of the board at 21 under. And he has no plans to change his strategy for the weekend.

"My mentality will be to not look at any scores and try to birdie every hole I play," Byrum said.

Andrade was at 19 under after a 63, which was matched by Mike Weir as the low round of the day. Weir was another shot back at 18 under, followed by Scott McCarron and McCallister at 17 under.

Casey Martin remained in contention at 15 under, six shots back, as did Phil Mickelson, who is using the tournament as a warmup for next week's Presidents Cup.

"You feel like if you don't shoot 8 or 9 under, you're giving one back," Mickelson said after shooting a 67 at TPC Summerlin, where both weekend rounds will be played.

Byrum, who came to Las Vegas on the bubble for making the top 125 and retaining his PGA Tour card, played like tour survival was the last thing on his mind.

Byrum is 125th on the money list with $330,583, a position he must hold if he is to be exempt for next year.

"I wish we had started the season in June," said Byrum, who says he plays better in the summer and fall. "I'd never be on the bubble then."

U.S. makes early exit again at Dunhill Cup

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — With its top players unavailable and awaiting the Presidents Cup, the United States was swept by Argentina on Friday and eliminated from the Dunhill Cup in the first round for the second straight year.

The 3-0 loss came a day after the Americans were beaten 2-1 by Australia. The United States could finish last in its group again if it fails to defeat Japan on Saturday.

Larry Mize, a Dunhill Cup rookie, shot a 72 and lost by two strokes to Eduardo Romero. John Daly, who had a double-bogey 6 at the 17th, shot a 75 and was beaten by two strokes by Jose Coceres. Tom Lehman fell by three shots to Angel Cabrera, who had a 68.

This is the weakest American team, in terms of world rankings, since the Dunhill Cup began in 1985. In no way does it measure up to the squad that will compete at the Presidents Cup next week in Virginia. That team will feature Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson, Hal Sutton, David Duval and Davis Love III.

Lehman was on the 1999 Dunhill Cup squad that lost 3-0 to Italy and 2-1 to Sweden to finish last in the group.

"It's very disappointing. I don't really feel like talking about it," said Lehman, who will play in the Presidents Cup. "It's not what we came here for and I'm not real pleased."

Inkster stings field at Samsung

VALLEJO, Calif. — If Juli Inkster keeps playing this way, she'll be more worried about being stung than being caught.

Undeterred by yellow jackets and a late charge by Pat Hurst, Inkster shot a 5-under 67 on Friday to take a three-stroke lead after two rounds of the Samsung World Championship.

She went to 8 under for the tournament, with Hurst three strokes back and Lorie Kane five behind at Hiddenbrooke Golf Club. The $725,000 invitation-only event features just 20 players and no cut, but Inkster already leads 12 of the players by 10-15 strokes.

"By no means do I feel at ease, but I played a very solid game of golf," Inkster said. "It'd be great to win here at home, but I'm not putting any pressure on myself."

Morgan, North share lead

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Gil Morgan and Andy North shot 6-under-par 66s in ideal conditions Friday for a share of the first-round lead in the Gold Rush Classic.

Howard Twitty, Ed Dougherty and Bruce Summerhays also opened with 66s in the Senior PGA Tour event at Serrano Country Club.

Jim Thorpe, coming off a victory last week in the Transamerica Championship, and three-time Gold Rush winner George Archer were a stroke back at 67.

Several days of hard rain made for good scoring conditions on a sunny day with little wind. The greens were soft and the putts ran slow as players fired shots at the flag. It also helped that players were allowed to left, clean and place their balls in the fairways.

"The greens were obviously soft, you could hit it real close to the hole if you had the right distance," Morgan said. "If there is no wind tomorrow, if might get even easier. It won't get much harder unless there is a weather change."

Rivera sets postseason record

SEATTLE (AP) — Move over, Whitey Ford. Mariano Rivera is now October's king of the hill.

Rivera broke Ford's record for consecutive scoreless innings in postseason play, extending his streak to 33 1-3 as the New York Yankees beat Seattle 8-2 on Friday night in Game 3 of the AL championship series.

"I didn't think about it at all. It just happens," Rivera said. "It's important, but it's not about the record, it's about winning."

The slightly built closer with the exploding cut fastball tied Ford's mark of 33 — set for the Yankees in the World Series from 1960-62 — by breaking pinch-hitter Raul Ibanez's bat on a soft liner in the ninth inning.

History came when Rivera retired Mark McLemore on a weak grounder to end the game. First baseman Tino Martinez fielded the ball, touched the bag and presented the souvenir to Rivera. Catcher Jorge Posada patted the relief ace on the back.

"I feel pretty comfortable knowing he's going to be on the mound, God love him. He's been so consistent for us," Yankees manager Joe Torre said.

"He gets that look in his eye when you get to postseason play. It's pretty tough to duplicate what he has accomplished here."

The game over, it was time for Rivera to shake hands with his teammates — a scene all-too-familiar for those who have tried to solve him at the plate.

Last year, Atlanta's Chipper Jones even chuckled as he watched teammate Ryan Klesko break three bats in one plate appearance against Rivera in the World Series.

"You hate to sit there and laugh. Sometimes, it's comical," winning pitcher Andy Pettitte said.

Said Rivera: "I never laugh. I don't want hitters to think about me being a bad guy."

Rivera got the final five outs to preserve the victory, giving the Yankees a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series. It was Rivera's fourth save of this postseason and 17th overall, extending his own record.

Rivera reduced his postseason ERA to 0.33, the lowest ever for a pitcher with at least 30 innings.

AREA FOOTBALL GAMES

Big Spring 28, Levelland 7

LEVELLAND — In a battle of District 4-4A unbeatens, Big Spring came out looking the best, beating Levelland 28-7 Friday night to move to 3-0 in district.

The Steers (4-2 overall) were dominant on both sides of the ball throughout, particularly on defense. Levelland (4-2, 2-2) managed only 106 yards total offense and six first downs against Big Spring.

Jaroe Parnell led a balanced rushing attack with 84 yards. Parnell scored Big Spring's touchdowns in the first quarter on runs of 9 and 4 yards as the Steers took a 14-0 lead.

Big Spring led 21-0 before the Loboes finally got on the board in the third quarter.

Jason Woodruff also ran for 54 yards and a score for the Steers, who will continue district play next week at Plainview.

Andrews 7, Snyder 3

ANDREWS — In what was the epitome of a defensive struggle, Andrews solidly put the clamps on Snyder to score a key District 4-4A victory, winning 7-3 Friday night.

The Mustangs (3-3 overall, 2-1 in district) only allowed a second quarter field goal from 37 yards by Ralph Ramon, as they held the Tigers (2-4, 0-3) to only 141 yards of total offense.

Andrews wasn't much more productive offensively, but the Mustangs did manage to put the ball into the end zone. Midway through the third quarter, tailback Jamie Bueno, who had 181 yards on 27 carries, scored on a 35-yard run, which was all the Mustangs needed.

Snyder had a minus-9 yards rushing in the second half and never seriously threatened.

Andrews will take some momentum into next Friday's game at district frontrunner Wolfforth Frenship.

Stanton 39, Plains 6

STANTON — Stanton forgot all about a surprising loss to Midland Christian two weeks earlier by jumping on Plains early Friday night in a 39-6 victory to open District 3-2A.

Clay White was instrumental in the first Stanton touchdown, as he recovered a fumble at linebacker deep in Plains territory midway through the first quarter. Fittingly, White was the one who got to cash it in at fullback, scoring from 5 yards out to put the Buffaloes (5-1 overall, 1-0 in district) on the board.

White's first score would be all Stanton would need, although he would get in the end zone twice more in the second quarter, on a 1-yard run and an 18-yard reception from Keith Cook which gave the Buffs a 25-0 halftime lead.

Jeremy Hull, who had 132 yards on 23 carries, scored a pair of touchdowns for Stanton. White had 15 carries for 77 yards.

Trinity 62, Faith Christian 6

EL PASO — Trinity thoroughly dominated in its TAPPS 1-3A opener Friday night, crushing El Paso Faith Christian 62-6.

The Chargers (5-2 overall, 1-0 in district) jumped out to a 27-0 lead in the first quarter and didn't let up. Jeehoun Yi scored two touchdowns in the first quarter on runs of 14 and 2 yards and again in the second quarter on a 46-yard run as he led the way with 127 yards rushing. The Chargers scored on every first half possession.

"We had a lot better team and we jumped on them right quick like we wanted to," said Trinity coach John Wilkins. "We got to play all our kids and that was good."

Aaron Mays, who rarely gets a chance to run the ball, had 109 yards rushing and scored on a pair of short runs in the fourth quarter. Clint Kitto caught two short scoring passes from Matt Midkiff.

Trinity will host Amarillo San Jacinto next Friday in a district game.

Rotan 11, Garden City 8

GARDEN CITY — The Garden City defense held tight again Friday night, but couldn't hold on in the end, as Rotan's Jordan Shipley kicked a 27-yard field goal with 11 seconds remaining to defeat the Bearkats 11-8 in their District 9-A opener.

The two teams were tied at 8-8 for most of the second half until the final minutes. Rotan's Chad Tuttle broke loose on a 55-yard run which set up Shipley's winning kick.

The game was a major defensive struggle as the two teams combined for only 16 first downs and neither team could crack the 200-yard barrier on offense. Garden City (4-2 overall, 0-1 in district) scored its only touchdown on a bizarre play, as Donato Gonzalez recovered a field goal attempt in the end zone which Rotan had blocked.

Rotan (5-1, 1-0) tied the game in the third quarter on a 6-yard run by D.J. Alvarado, which is the way the game stayed until the end.

Curtis Eggemeyer led Garden City with 66 yards rushing.

Marathon 18, Sierra Blanca 0

MARATHON — Marathon took full advantage of its situation against undermanned Sierra Blanca Friday, as injuries forced a premature end to the six-man game which Marathon won 18-0.

Marathon scored three touchdowns in the first quarter, as Johnny Samudio scored on runs of 20 and 43 yards and also threw an 8-yard touchdown pass to Israel Hernandez. The game ended with 2 minutes and 20 seconds left in the first quarter as Sierra Blanca, which entered the game with only seven players, lost two players to injury and had to forfeit.

Lions' Crowell breaks foot

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Lions receiver Germane Crowell broke the fifth metatarsal on his left foot in practice Friday.

Team spokesman Steve Reaven said Crowell was running a pass pattern when the injury occurred, and it was not caused by contact with another player.

Jay Shoop, the team's head trainer, said the injury usually requires 6-8 weeks to heal.

Shoop said there are two ways to treat such an injury — either by putting a cast on the foot or by inserting a screw.

Quarterback Charlie Batch, who broke a bone in his right knee in the offseason and returned to the team for the second game of the season, always has had a special connection with Crowell.

"It's definitely going to affect things but at the same time, I'm not sure how long he's going to be out, but until then, we have to get the other receivers on the same page," Batch said.

Ags need better tackling vs. Bears

By Rusty Burson
San Antonio Express-News

COLLEGE STATION — After taking it on the chin Saturday and losing their 22-game winning streak at home, the Texas A&M Aggies might be in need of a hug. But their prospects for the rest of the season would be greatly enhanc[illegible]he Aggies would start giving more hugs.

Great big [illegible]es, where arms are fully wrapped around shoulders and squeezed to exhaustion. The kind that take your breath away. The kind Aggies defenders have gotten away from at times this season. We're talking about tackles, here.

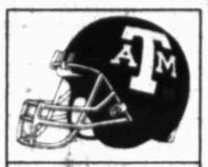

Bad snaps on special teams and blown opportunities in the red zone certainly played major roles in Texas A&M's 26-19 loss to Colorado last Saturday. But another alarming culprit was the Aggies' occasional poor tackling.

On Colorado's first touchdown, for example, freshman quarterback Craig Ochs was bounced around like a golf ball hitting the pavement. At least five A&M defenders had a chance to tackle Ochs on his 18-yard scoring run.

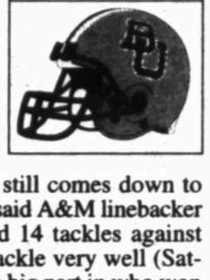

None did.

"We didn't wrap up," A&M senior safety Michael Jameson said. "It's basically as simple as that. We were going for the kill shots instead of grabbing cloth and wrapping up. It cost us."

And not just against Colorado. Missed tackles have hurt A&M in both its losses this year and have been evident even in some of its wins. The Aggies still rank fourth in the Big 12 and 25th nationally in total defense. But with a few more tackles, those numbers could be even better.

Texas A&M at Baylor

And possibly, so could the most important numbers of all — A&M's 3-2 record.

"You can talk about schemes and strategies and formations all you want, but when all is said and done, football still comes down to blocking and tackling," said A&M linebacker Brian Gamble, who had 14 tackles against Colorado. "We didn't tackle very well (Saturday), and that played a big part in who won the ballgame."

The missed tackles have been most evident — and costly — on third downs. In two Big 12 games against Texas Tech and Colorado, A&M's opponents are converting 45.5 percent (15 of 33) of their third-down opportunities.

That ranks 11th in the Big 12. It's just plain rank to the A&M defenders, who pride themselves in carrying on the legacy of past Wrecking Crew defenses.

"We really don't know what's been going on," said A&M junior cornerback Jay Brooks, who registered the Aggies' lone sack against Colorado. "It could be third and long, but somehow (opponents) are getting it. It's frustrating, because it shows that we have been inconsistent.

"I guess we haven't played every third down hard enough. We have to change that, or it is going to be a long season. The real meat of our schedule is still ahead of us. There's a real sense of urgency."

That's why the Aggies have returned to the fundamentals of tackling this week in practice.

Poor tackling, of course, is not a problem limited to Texas A&M. It's an epidemic across all levels of football, as offenses spread the field to create more one-on-one matchups.

It's just more noticeable at A&M, where dominant defenses have been as much a part of the traditions in recent years as yell practice and Reveille.

"We're the Wrecking Crew, and we're going to make sure we tackle well," A&M linebacker Jason Glenn said. That means plenty of hugs this Saturday when A&M plays at Baylor. Bear hugs, so to speak.

Missouri needs win against Kansas

Associated Press

COLUMBIA, Mo. — For all the talk of beating archrival Kansas at home, Missouri knows Saturday's game against the Jayhawks could decide if its season ends with a bowl game.

"Looking at our schedule, we have six games left and our whole focus is get to a bowl game and have a winning season," defensive end Justin Smith said. "This game — if we can win it — will make us 3-3 and from there on we can start building on the winning side of our record."

Missouri (2-3, 1-1 Big 12) is right where most thought they'd be five games into the season, maybe even a game better after last weekend's 24-10 win against Oklahoma State. Kansas (2-3, 0-2) is simply trying to recover from a 52-13 beating at the hands of Kansas State — the Jayhawks' eighth straight loss to the Wildcats.

"We're down, there is no question about that," nose tackle Nate Dwyer said. "But I think they are a little bit down, too. It's going to come down to who wants it more."

Missouri coach Larry Smith set the tone last weekend, screaming "Beat Kansas" into a camera linked to the videoboard at Faurot Field as he ran into the locker room. It seems he's still smarting from the Tigers' 21-0 loss at Kansas last year, a game he succinctly described afterward as a butt-kicking.

"I use it one way and that was that our archrival beat us, beat us badly," Smith said. "They humiliated us."

The home team has won the last five games in the second oldest rivalry in college football, just a year behind Wisconsin-Minnesota.

Darius Outlaw will get his second career start at quarterback for Missouri, coming off last week's win against Oklahoma State. The redshirt freshman was 14-of-27 for 191 yards with one passing and one rushing touchdown in his first start in relief of Kirk Farmer, who's out with a broken left clavicle.

Kansas coach Terry Allen has spent the week trying to figure out how to protect his quarterback, Dylen Smith. After not allowing a sack in its first three games, the Kansas offensive line has given up 12 in the last two.

"We needed to do something. Hopefully they will respond to it," Allen said about this week's practices, which included more hitting and live action work. "We're changing some things because we obviously saw something wrong."

Against the Wildcats, Kansas had just 231 yards of total offense to Kansas State's 468.

Smith, whose fumble on the Jayhawk's first possession against Kansas State set up the Wildcats' first score, hasn't completed more than 50 percent of his passes since a win against Baylor last year — a streak of seven games.

Kansas has turned the ball over 13 times in its three losses, giving up 55 points. They're 110th in the county in turnover margin.

NOTES: Kansas hasn't won on the road in October since 1996, a 52-24 win against Oklahoma. ... The Jayhawks have run the ball on their first offensive possession in all five games this year.

MHS: Bulldogs take lead in district

(From 1B)

Spells was corralled for a five-yard loss on fourth down, the deal was done. Abilene High was left stunned.

MHS scored the next time it touched the ball, going 40 yards on eight plays.

"I don't know how many big plays we made on defense," Browning said. "We made big plays at critical times when we needed to have them."

The most prolific offense in the district was left wondering what happened. The Eagles totaled 107 yards rushing and 131 passing. There were no real game-breaking plays to speak of, and usually reliable quarterback Kevin Goodman threw three interceptions.

"You can't turn the ball over in this district and expect to win," AHS head coach Steve Warren said. "They did a good job of stopping the big play, and when you do that, that makes things tough for us. We couldn't find any place to throw the football tonight."

"Give coach Browning credit and his team credit," Warren added. "I know how hard these wins are to come by, and they outplayed us tonight."

In the first half, MHS held its own, thanks to an advantage in the field position war. The first score came, thanks to a big play, by the defense. Linebacker Matt Bose, a candidate for 4-5A's Defensive MVP, intercepted a pass inside AHS' 30. MHS turned the turnover into points three plays later as Howard hit Johnson for 18 yards and the first score of the game.

AHS came back with a nine-play drive. The Eagles moved the ball 74 yards and found the end zone for the only time when Goodman hit Marcus Johnson on a 15-yard touchdown pass.

The following extra point was blocked by Michael Forrest, who also had a big interception in the third quarter to suppress an AHS scoring opportunity.

MHS-AHS Notes: AHS owns a 23-16 record over MHS... James Gripp had six punts for a 44.5-yard average... Things weren't exactly perfect on Friday the 13th (MHS missed an extra point), but they were pretty close... RANGERS: Greenwood blasts Slaton nine more points in a matter of 2 minutes, 12 seconds as Greenwood added a safety as the snap on a punt attempt sailed through the end zone, and then Outlaw returned the ensuing Slaton free kick 70 yards for a TD to put the game away.

"We just wanted to come back after a big play and make something happen," Outlaw said.

"We hadn't run a kickoff back in about 10 years and then we run two back in one night," Purser said. "I don't know, it was kind of a strange night. I don't think the defense liked it much, they were kind of tired."

It doesn't get easier for the Rangers as they travel to Seminole next Friday.

"We've got to get a lot better fast," Purser said. "We beat Seminole twice last year and I'm sure they don't have that short of a memory and they'll be ready for us. That will be a crucial game for us to go up there and play. We need to find a way to win."

Ranger notes: Four different Rangers scored Friday night as Brandon Smith had a 2-yard TD run, while Brandon Audas added a 6-yard scoring run... Fullback Kevin Thornton finished with 82 yards on 12 carries to lead all Ranger rushers.

Elsewhere in 3-3A: Denver City (5-1, 1-0) defeated Seminole (0-6, 0-1), 23-8; while Lamesa (5-1, 1-0) defeated Brownfield (1-5, 0-1), 53-6.

"This win is so special in so many ways for us," Carson said, but quickly added, "When you play in District 4-5A, you can't get too high or too low. I've been saying that all week. District 4-5A isn't like running a 40-yard sprint. You have to play through the peaks and valleys."

Parchman seemed to take the loss in stride.

"This isn't the end of the world," Parchman said. "We haven't been in this position (with a district loss) in a while and our feathers are ruffled, and that's the way it should be. We'll go back to work, put things together and go play again."

Lee will host Abilene Cooper next Friday at Memorial Stadium. But on that night, Midland High and Odessa High will be playing for the league lead. Believe in Friday the 13th.

4-5A FOOTBALL

Cooper 28, Permian 21

ABILENE — The Abilene Cooper Cougars welcomed T.J. Mills to District 4-5A by beating his Odessa Permian Panthers 28-21 Friday night at Shotwell Stadium.

Abilene Cooper (4-2) got three touchdowns from Jordan Neal and a fourth quarter touchdown from Tremaine Diles to account for its scoring. Neal had 212 yards passing which was most of the Cougars' yardage. Diles gained only 58 yards rushing.

The Panthers (3-3) trailed 28-7 in the fourth quarter, but tried to make a game of it with two late scores, the last of which was a 36-yard pass from Justin Whitaker to Matt Stewart. However, it was too little too late.

The Panthers had little success on the ground as Mark Gonzales was Permian's leading rusher with 41 yards, Whitaker added 129 yards in the air. Mojo also committed two turnovers to Cooper's one.

Cooper, which is tied with Midland High and Odessa High at the top of 4-5A, will travel to Midland to face Midland Lee next week.

Nebraska will try to defend regained No. 1 spot at Tech

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — Before Nebraska can get comfortable in its return to No. 1, the Cornhuskers must prove Saturday against Texas Tech that they have a good enough defense to keep the ranking this time.

The preseason favorites lost the top spot after a series of unimpressive victories. Their stint at No. 2 lasted only one week not because they improved but because Florida State lost to Miami.

Defense has been the weak link for Nebraska (5-0, 2-0 Big 12).

In their last two games, the Cornhuskers allowed Missouri to gain 492 yards and Iowa State's Sage Rosenfels to throw for 346 yards. He had just 83 last season against a Nebraska secondary that featured a first-team All-American and a second-teamer, both of whom are gone.

Tech (5-1, 1-1) uses the same pass-happy offense that has vaulted Oklahoma to No. 8. The common denominator is Mike Leach, who became the Red Raiders' coach after one year as the Sooners' offensive coordinator. Prior to that, he ran the same system at Kentucky with Tim Couch.

Tech has thrown the ball three of every four plays and has racked up the 10th-best passing offense in the nation. Quarterback Kliff Kingsbury leads the Big 12 in completions, attempts, yards and touchdowns.

The running game is a different story. Ricky Williams appears to have lost a step because of the knee injury that kept him out last season, and backup Shaud Williams is reluctantly becoming a bigger threat.

While Leach said he hopes this game will be his team's coming-out party, he's wary of the perception Nebraska is struggling. After all, the Cornhuskers are No. 1.

"Some people have thrown it on them a little bit, but they're still a great defense," he said. "It's not like, 'Oh my gosh. There are some glaring weaknesses.'

"I think one of the strengths of Nebraska over the years has been that every player's not great, but they don't really have any holes out there."

The Cornhuskers will try outsmarting the Red Raiders with some unique formations they tinkered with last week against the Cyclones. At times, Nebraska used linebackers as cornerbacks and safeties as linebackers.

The schemes are called the quarter, dollar and penny. All are variations of the nickel and dime packages.

"If you are caught without the right kind of people, they can rip you apart," said George Darlington, Nebraska's defensive backs coach. "You're not going to shut them out and you have to be patient and disciplined. They'll throw the 5-yard under route over and over, then get you with an out, a post or a jailbreak screen."

Despite an exciting offense, the Red Raiders actually have been led by a defense that has allowed 9.8 points per game, the fewest in the conference. It has helped that their opponents have a combined 10-23 record. Their only loss was to their toughest foe thus far, Texas A&M.

Still, Tech has posted two shutouts, something it hasn't done since 1970, and the unit boasts the Big 12's leading tackler in sophomore linebacker Lawrence Flugence.

"They're not as strong and physical as a couple of the teams we have played this year, but I think they're the fastest," said Nebraska I-back Correll Buckhalter.

The Cornhuskers will try grinding away with an offensive attack led by quarterback Eric Crouch, who had 138 yards rushing and 164 yards passing against Iowa State.

That performance earned Crouch conference offensive player of the week, but it also left him so banged up that he missed practice Wednesday.

"That's just the nature of being a quarterback," said Nebraska coach Frank Solich. "Whether you're taking those hits in the running game or mainly from the passing game, they're still hits.

"One thing about the running game is you generally see a guy coming at you. A lot of times in the passing game you'll get blindsided."

Tech should provide Nebraska a good indication of what to expect in two weeks against Oklahoma. The teams did not meet last season, when Leach was calling plays for the Sooners.

The Red Raiders surely won't be looking ahead. Their next game is on the road against No. 2 Kansas State.

OU-Kansas State game features some stars besides quarterbacks

Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. — All this quarterback hype is overshadowing a few other standouts who'll be on the field for Saturday's Oklahoma-Kansas State game.

Josh Heupel is personally rewriting passing records for No. 8 Oklahoma (5-0, 2-0 Big 12), and Jonathan Beasley has led No. 2 Kansas State (6-0, 2-0) to six easy victories.

But what about running back Quentin Griffin?

All he did was score a school-record six touchdowns last week in a 63-14 victory over Texas. Defensively, the Longhorns were throttled by cornerback Derrick Straight, who had a career-high 10 tackles, and linebacker Rocky Calmus, who had two tackles for losses, one sack and an interception he brought back 41 yards for a touchdown.

Kansas State, which owns a 25-game home winning streak and has won 35 of its last 36 regular-season games, has running back Josh Scobey, who has scored at least one rushing TD in the last five games. On the receiving end of many of Beasley's passes is Quincy Morgan, with 28 catches for 520 yards.

When the Sooners punt, back to catch the ball will be David Allen, who needs one touchdown return and less than 150 yards to break long-standing NCAA records.

Kansas State is No. 1 in the nation in total defense, allowing only 228.5 yards per game overall. They have forced opponents to give up the ball without a first down on 41 of 84 possessions.

Clearly, these two did not survive unbeaten until mid-October only by having outstanding quarterbacks.

"They're physical and disciplined in how they play. We've got to be able to handle their pressure, protect the quarterback," said Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops.

"We've got to be able to run and throw the football. We've got to take care of the football and be responsible with the ball like we have been. Defensively we've got to create turnovers. We've got to take away the run game and limit big plays."

Despite all the offensive firepower, Kansas State coach Bill Snyder does not expect a high-scoring game.

But neither would be surprised at a touchdown-fest.

"I think both teams have some similarities even though their style in offense in particular are different. Both teams have very fine defenses and productive offenses," Snyder said. "Ours has not been able to do some of the things that Oklahoma's has. That doesn't mean that I expect to see both teams marching down the field on each other. I have more respect for both defenses than that."

The Sooners may be caught in the middle of a brutal scheduling quirk. Historically, they are not at the top of their game the week immediately following Texas. And next week, after meeting No. 2 Kansas State, they'll face No. 1 Nebraska at home.

"I know this is not what you want to hear, but I'm approaching this game just like I approached UTEP and Arkansas State and KU and Texas," said Oklahoma assistant Mark Mangino, another former assistant under Snyder. "It's the biggest game right now because it's the next game."

Southern Mississippi T-shirt slogan causes controversy

Associated Press

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — T-shirts bearing a slogan for the Southern Mississippi football team that was considered borderline offensive are being sold on the Internet.

Www.eagletalk.net, an unofficial Web site for Southern Miss athletics are selling shirts with the "Let Us Prey" printed on them.

The 2-year-old slogan authorized by Conference USA to promote Southern Miss athletics was used on billboards in Hattiesburg, but hasn't been for seen around the city in many months.

One of the most vocal critics of the slogan was USM athletic director Richard Giannini.

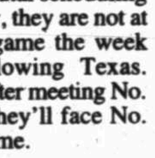

"I'm not in favor of it," said Giannini. "If it offends people, it's something you shouldn't use, and I know that some people are offended by it. I know I am."

Giannini said that none of the paraphernalia officially sanctioned by the athletic department bears the slogan.

Giannini said he had heard some complaints, but nothing in an organized form, demanding its removal.

The campaign was funded by Conference USA in the summer of 1998 to promote its various sports, with individual slogans going up on billboards, bus wraps and other outdoor advertising in each of the league's cities.

Truck crash leaves driver badly injured

FORT WORTH (AP) — NASCAR Trucks driver Tony Roper was critically injured after his truck slammed into a wall during the O'Reilly 400 at Texas Motor Speedway on Friday night.

Roper was unconscious and unresponsive when he was pulled out of his vehicle, TMS officials said. Roper was airlifted to a Dallas hospital where he was listed in critical condition and in need of a ventilator to assist in breathing.

Polesitter Bryan Refiner won the race, his first victory on the series. Refiner won in his 112th career start, ending the longest streak of futility on the NASCAR trucks circuit.

Refiner finished with an average speed of 112.993 mph and was 1.277 seconds ahead of Andy Houston.

Greg Biffle clinched the NASCAR trucks season title, even though he was knocked out of the race on lap 81 and finished 25th, his worst finish of the season.

Roper was injured after his truck slammed head-on into a wall after trying to squeeze through a gap between two other trucks along the frontstretch at the end of lap 32 of the 167-lap race.

When Roper tried to get between Steve Grissom and Larry Gunselman, the gap began to close and his truck was nudged by Grissom's. Roper's truck crashed into the wall, burst into flames and spun out of control before stopping on the infield grass.

Emergency crews had to cut the roof off Roper's truck to pull him out, and feverishly worked on him after he was placed on a stretcher and taken to an ambulance. He was taken by helicopter to the hospital.

Nine other trucks were also knocked out of the race because of accident, but none of the other derivers were seriously injured.

Biffle was knocked out of the race after he lost control of his truck and crashed into the wall coming out of the second turn. The one-vehicle accident did heavy damage to the front end of Biffle's truck.

He needed only to finish 27th or better to claim the points title with one race left.

Nemechek takes 2nd straight Winston 500 pole

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — About the only similarities between Joe Nemechek's two consecutive pole victories in the Winston 500 are the driver and the Talladega Superspeedway oval.

A year ago, Front Row Joe, then driving a Chevrolet for Felix Sabates, took the top qualifying spot with a white-knuckle, jaw-rattling lap of 198.331 mph. Nemechek's run Friday in Andy Petree's No. 33 Chevy was much smoother — thanks to some new NASCAR engine and aerodynamic rules — but it was also considerably slower.

Still, his fast lap of 190.279 on the 2.66-mile, high-banked oval was easily the best of the day, beating out Talladega qualifying record-holder Bill Elliott, whose Ford took the other front row spot for Sunday race with a 190.045.

"The cars definitely drive different than where we were last year at this point," Nemechek said after grabbing his first pole of the season and the sixth of his career. "We're nine mph slower, but the cars drive really good.

"Last year, the way the rules were, the cars were really sucked down to the race track. It was really hairy making your qualifying runs. The mode we're in now, I think they're going to race great."

In an effort to give the drivers more power in tight situations while still keeping speeds down, NASCAR widened the holes in the power-robbing carburetor restrictor plates used here — creating more horsepower — and gave the cars a less aerodynamic silhouette with a new rooftop strip, a higher rear spoiler and a lower front air dam.

Lemon Drop Kid eats, sleeps like a champ

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Lemon Drop Kid pleases Scotty Schulhofer at the feed tub and in repose, not just when he is thundering around a race track.

"He's a pleasure," the Hall of Fame trainer said. "He eats, sleeps and does everything perfect. He's done about everything a man could want a horse to do."

If Lemon Drop Kid wins the $1 million Jockey Club Gold Cup on Saturday, Schulhofer thinks his horse will have done all Eclipse Award voters should want a Horse of the Year to do.

"In my mind, he is Horse of the Year," the trainer said. "And if he wins Saturday and doesn't get it, there's no justice."

A victory in the Gold Cup over 1 1/4 miles at Belmont Park would be the fifth consecutive graded stakes win and third straight Grade I win for the 4-year-old son of 1977 Triple Crown champion Seattle Slew.

Those should be Horse of the Year credentials regardless of what Lemon Drop Kid might do in the $4 million Breeders' Cup Classic on Nov. 4 at Churchill Downs.

The Gold Cup is the main event on card that includes three other Grade I stakes. One of them, the $750,000 Beldame for fillies and mares, pits Riboletta against Beautiful Pleasure in an anticipated confrontation.

Lemon Drop Kid's winning streak consists of the Grade II Brooklyn and Suburban handicaps at Belmont, the Grade I Whitney Handicap at Saratoga and the Grade I Woodward at Belmont.

Missing from the Gold Cup will be Kentucky Derby winner Fusaichi Pegasus, who won the mile Jerome on Sept. 23 at Belmont Park in his only start since he finished second in the Preakness on May 20.

The colt, sold in June for a reported $60 million, injured his left foot last weekend. Trainer Neil Drysdale said Fusaichi Pegasus still is being pointed to the Breeders' Cup Classic.

Among Lemon Drop Kid's rivals will be Behrens, beaten by a head in the Woodward; Skimming, winner of Del Mar's Pacific Classic and fourth in the Woodward; and 3-year-old Albert The Great, winner of Belmont's Dwyer, second in the Travers at Saratoga and third in the Jerome.

Although Behrens has won only once in six starts this year, he has three seconds and two thirds. His 10th victory in 27 career starts would be worth $600,000 and push him past $5 million in earnings.

Others in the Gold Cup are Gander, third in the Woodward; Agol Lack, winner of grass stakes in France in his last two starts; and Vision and Verse, whose one win in two starts this year was in an allowance race in May.

Author, singer to be featured speaker at area-wide service

■ Dennis Jernigan is to perform at 'Rejoice — Call to Praise,' planned for Oct. 22 at Chaparral Center.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

The name and the position on the calendar have changed, but the event is still a high point of the year, not only for the congregation of Golf Course Road Church of Christ, but for an ever-widening community of worshipers who will come together for a 10th year to raise their voices in praise and worship.

"Rejoice — a Call to Praise," formerly "Community Thanksgiving Service," is planned for 6 p.m. Oct. 22 at Chaparral Center with recording artist and author Dennis Jernigan as the featured worship leader.

Jernigan said that a major component of his message is that God changed his sexual orientation from gay to straight. In his autobiography published last year, Jernigan describes his early confusion, his intense bouts of depression, his inability to find anyone, even within the church, who would offer him hope, and finally, how through turning his life over to God he overcame his homosexual orientation.

Throughout the book, Jernigan includes suggestions for biblical "weapons of warfare," a means to "recognize the enemies in our lives" and other suggestions for using Scriptures and prayer to overcome the evils that befall humans.

In a recent telephone interview, Jernigan said that in the upcoming Rejoice event, about 85 percent of his presentation will be music. Although he is known as a singer, he said his intent is never to focus on himself as performer.

"The message is freedom and hope and security in God's love and we call it a praise and worship service, not a concert," he said. "I consider myself a worship leader, and we'll be using an overhead projector to show the words, so that we all can sing. If I were the only one singing most of the time, the focus would be on me, and not on the Lord.

"We want people to go away remembering that they've been touched by the Lord."

Jernigan, who is married, said the story about his change from practicing homosexual to practicing heterosexual is very much a part of his message about God's love, and one that he will not hesitate to discuss.

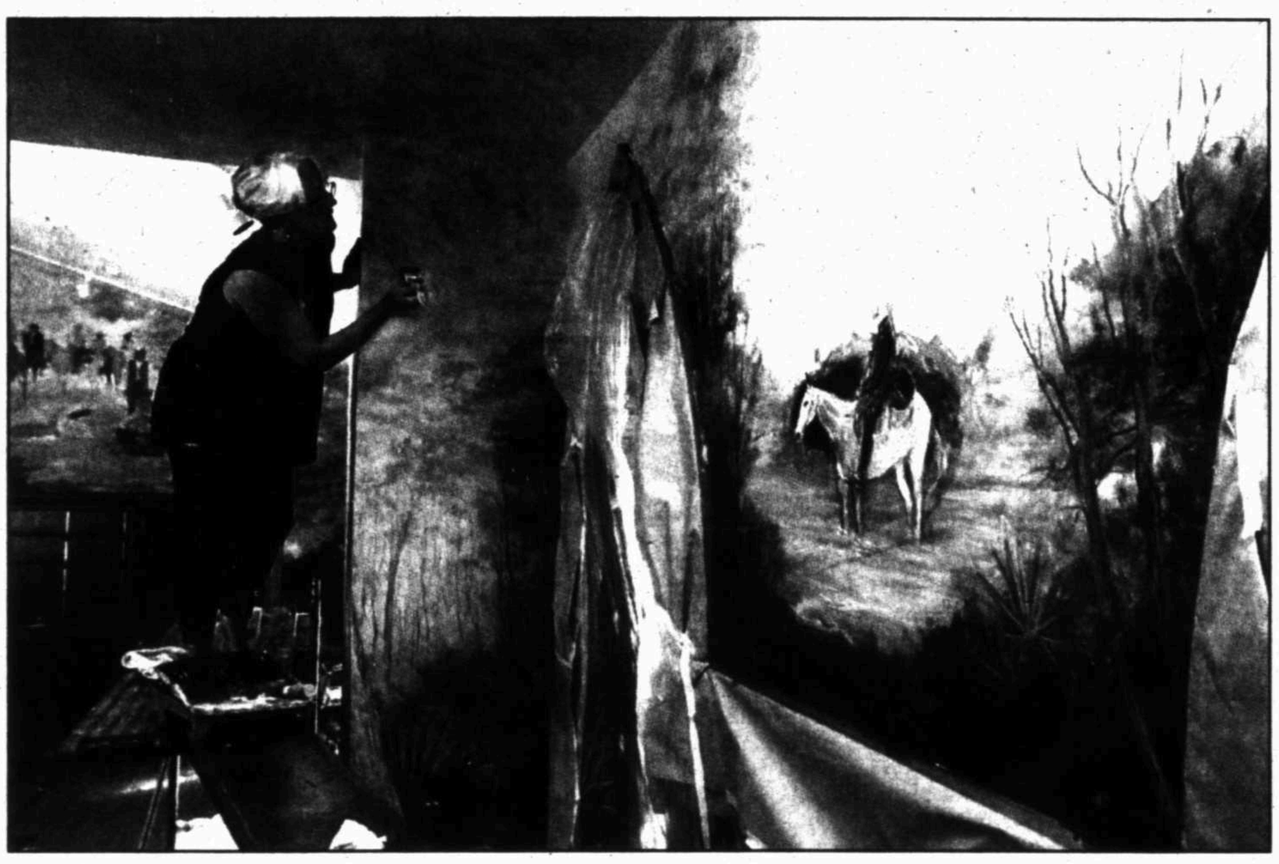

"I feel the power was broken in 1981. It was an instant healing, but I've been walking toward healing in my mind ever since," he said." It's a struggle and a battle to undo the mental habits grown through years of sin, and this is what I say to people who have prayed and don't seem to find an answer.

"The sin of homosexuality is so self-centered. What I've found to be the case is that people want to be (completely) healed instantly. But God planted that seed in my heart and required me to water and nourish it. Don't give up."

Mural depicts history of Gonzalez church

By Janet Whitehead Jones
Associated Press

GONZALES — The first settlers have not been forgotten in this city that basks proudly in its rich history.

But it is a relative newcomer that has befriended them in a profound way and has put their spirits in a spiritual place.

When the First United Methodist Church began raising money for a new fellowship hall, Lynne Looney, an artist and a single mother, couldn't make the financial commitment.

But she did have a lasting gift to give.

Knowing that her riches lie in her ability to create art on a large scale, she offered up her talents as a contribution. In turn, the church gave her the foyer walls, a book on the church's history and the nod to get started.

"This is a God-given talent. I've been able to draw since I was little bitty," Ms. Looney said.

She has done a number of murals and decorative art in private homes as well as large-scale painting such as one of her most recognizable works, the Mr. Wigglesworth billboard on Interstate 35. Many people have seen the board on their way to Dallas, she said.

So far, she's logged more than 400 hours of her time at the church, creating a mural that reflects the history of the church as part of the rich history of the city itself. Although she has not yet brushed in all the details, she had enough of it done so that it was a centerpiece for the recent "Come and Take It" celebration.

"I think this is the finest thing I've ever done in my life," she said. It's certainly the most meaningful project she's worked on, previously doing mostly commercial art and decorative painting in upscale houses.

In the church, she's managed to create a relationship with the subject of her mural, researching the fates of many of the people living in the Gonzales area in 1835 and the years that followed.

"It's meant to tell a story," she said.

Each panel is part of the story. It celebrates the earliest missionary ministers that braved the frontier and the conflicts with Native Americans. Another panel shows minister W.P. Smith praying with the men of the town before the "Come and Take It" battle over the small cannon that started the Texas Revolution.

On the panel facing the doorway of the hall, Smith is shown again speaking to widows and orphans of the Alamo and some of the men who stayed behind with their families. Smoke is seen rising in the background to represent the burning of Gonzales during the Runaway Scrape.

Another panel shows minister W.P. Smith praying with the men of the town before the 'Come and Take It' battle over the small cannon that started the Texas Revolution.

Some have criticized the mural as being not very religious, Ms. Looney said. But it is meant to focus on the spirit of the people affected by the events more than the events themselves. It is a tribute to the courage and patriotism of the settlers.

"Every one of the people I have pictured here is a real person with a name and a history," Ms. Looney said.

When she talks about the bravery of the people or the hardships they faced after the town was burned, her eyes redden as tears appear. "I can't talk about it without crying," she said. Researching the Gonzales founders, she grew attached to the spirits of the people.

"They became real people," she said.

She also researched details in the clothing of

MMH chaplain has been called to serve church

■ The Rev. Alan Williams has accepted a post as pastor of a Lutheran church in San Angelo.

By Johnnye Montgomery

After almost 17 years as chaplain at Midland Memorial Hospital, the Rev. Alan Williams is returning to full-time ministry in a Lutheran church environment.

Williams has accepted a call to serve as pastor of Calvary Lutheran Church in San Angelo, where he has been guest preaching for the past 1 1/2 years.

His last day at the hospital is Nov. 3 .

He said although he has gained great satisfaction from his ministry with the hospital, he has never lost his love for preaching and teaching.

Williams

"We don't have preaching at chapel services here because while people need encouragement, they really don't feel comfortable spending much time in the chapel (away from the hospital room), so we have a brief service with Scripture, prayer and singing," he said.

He came to Memorial Hospital from a church in Alberta, Canada, in January 1984, and has been the hospital's only chaplain. The hospital's community relations staff would not comment about whether a new chaplain would be hired.

Williams said that from the outset he has enjoyed the support of local clergy but he recognized the need for a network of pastoral assistants who could maintain a friendly and prayerful presence for patients who had expressed a desire for spiritual help, keep busy clergy informed of their parishioners' needs and progress and fill in at critical times when a minister might not be available. His solution was to train volunteers — members of various churches throughout the community who would be willing to spend regular time at patients' bedsides, listening as well as praying for them.

The hospital presently has 27 pastoral volunteers on rotating duty. Williams said they will continue their work when he's gone.

As chaplain, he makes from 30 to 35 bedside visits a day.

"We always let local ministers know when members of their congregation are here, but we have a large number of persons here who have no church connections and have no desire to have a church connection. But I try to be a friend to them and to help them. We also are here to minister to the clergy who are admitted to the hospital."

Another role Williams has filled is in staff support.

"We had a young person die a few days ago, and a couple of the physicians had a hard time dealing with that, and I tried to be supportive of them. One of our intensive care unit members died unexpectedly and the staff was upset. Then there are those times after bad accidents, when a minister is needed," he said.

"Once after a terrible accident, one of the victims required emergency surgery and his survival was in doubt. Since a priest wasn't immediately available, the family requested that I anoint him. I got permission to scrub and go into the OR where the team was working hard to save his life. I stayed out of their way but anointed him, and left.

"I think that giving him over to God's care helped the staff as well as the family," Williams

The best answer to one's prayers is not always the desired answer

Williams

The annual conversation begins in September and goes something like this: "Mom, I really, really, really want a laptop for Christmas."

"Well, honey, a laptop is not the best toy for a 10-year-old."

"My friend has her own laptop."

"I know, but they're pretty expensive. I wouldn't get my hopes up for a laptop."

"OK, how about a real mouse for a pet? I really, really, really want a mouse, and they're only 17 cents at the pet store."

"Maybe. We'll see. We have awhile until Christmas."

I do not even get into the mouse issue — the fact that the food, shavings, and elaborate cage with entertainment options cost more than a membership at the Y — not to mention the potential emotional devastation when the hungry cat at our house makes a snack out of Squeaky.

When Christmas arrives, my children find presents under the tree, and are so happy with what they got, they don't even notice what they didn't.

I should take a lesson from my children. As adults, we approach God with our wish lists.

"Oh, Lord, I really, really, really want (fill in the blank) a job, a spouse, a child, a house, good health."

As we mature in the faith, it occurs to us that maybe it's more important to ask for qualities than things, so we pray, "Oh, Lord, I really, really, really want (fill in the blank) patience, forgiveness, love, etc." The principle is the same; we're just operating on a higher plane.

Contrary to the way it sometimes feels, God does answer every prayer. Answers include, "No," "Yes," "Later," and "Yes, but not the way you had in mind."

The lesson I want to learn from my children is gratitude for the blessings He does give me, when what I really, really, really want is denied.

My daughter read aloud the story of Daniel last week. I was struck by the parallels between Daniel and Jesus. They were both popular religious leaders; they were both betrayed; and both prayed to escape death. Daniel's prayer was granted. Jesus' prayer was denied.

Guess I can get used to the fact that if God were willing to deny the prayer of His own Son to be spared a cruel, premature death — then He's likely to deny some of my own prayers as well.

Guess I can also get used to the knowledge that when I get the big heavenly "NO," Easter is just around the corner.

The older I get, the more I realize that what I really, really, really want most of all is the presence of God. The best gift of the Spirit is the Spirit.

In the meantime, I keep a card up on my bulletin board in front of my computer as a reminder: "Faith is ... confidence that God is acting for my highest good when He answers 'no' to my prayers."

WALLS: Church mural depicts real people

(From 1C)

the period and the colors of the cloth they would have used.

She found a likeness of "Come and Take It" hero Eli Mitchell that was taken long after the battle. She used it anyway, taking away the silver hair and giving him a softer look to make him look the age he actually was during the battle.

The horses of the time period were more mulish looking than they are now.

She used photographs of similar creatures to paint the beasts of burden among the early settlers and participants of the Come and Take It battle and the Runaway Scrape that followed the fall of the Alamo.

The flora and fauna painted in the mural are all native to the area, unlike many of the trees and landscapes in the area today.

She gets especially emotional about the women and children who lost their husbands and fathers at the Alamo.

One woman in the mural is carrying twins. Another woman has two girls who will die young because of the lack of shelter and medical help, and the damp weather.

"Not only do they find out they're widows, they have to leave their homes," Ms. Looney said. "I've had to deal with hardship, but I still had shelter and I had shoes."

One of Ms. Looney's worst times was about five years ago when she had to have surgery for uterine cancer. Not only was she a single mother, but she had no insurance.

"God answers prayers," she said, adding that the answers often come in unexpected ways.

Luckily, the cancer was very curable, but the surgery and the cost were a huge setback for her personally and professionally.

"What I do is very physical. I couldn't work at all."

She was living in Atlanta but decided to come to Gonzales to be near her parents while she started over.

During the crisis period, fellow Christians helped her out and began sending her money to keep her and her daughter afloat, she said. She had become a Christian herself about 15 years earlier, she said.

Moving to the town has been a good thing for her 16-year-old daughter, Ms. Looney said. Her parents help out when she is commissioned to work odd hours or travel out of town.

"She was becoming a latchkey child (in Atlanta)," Ms. Looney said.

In Gonzales her daughter has more security and is able to feel more rooted. After coming to Gonzales a few years ago, she joined the Methodist church with her daughter in mind.

"The Methodist church had such a strong youth group," she said.

In doing her research she's discovered much more about the church.

For one thing, it's the oldest established church in the Southwest Conference of the United Methodist Church. Before the people built the first building on the courthouse square, they met in the homes of members. One panel of the wall is dedicated to that part of the church history.

It's also the second oldest church in Gonzales, organized in 1841 by the Rev. J.P. Sneed, a circuit rider, or traveling minister. His circuit included Victoria, Port Lavaca and Seguin. They have been meeting at the same site since 1843, when the church got its first full-time pastor. It has continued to build membership, programs and buildings ever since.

Ms. Looney, who was raised in Temple, also learned something about her family history. She discovered that she was actually a descendent of Sneed, the church's organizer.

Several of today's church members also are descendants of the original settlers, she said, so she has been extra careful in the research of names and dates.

said.

While serving the hospital, Williams has also maintained a supportive presence in the community. He's been an active member of the Midland Association of Churches, the Kiwanis, United Way and various other groups.

He said leaving Midland will not be easy.

"We've loved Midland and we'll miss seeing our friends. Also, we have to sell our house, buy a new house. And our son, who's a senior at Lee High, will have to transfer. And I have a lot of good memories, powerful memories, of this place.

"I can remember some wonderful young people who have gone home to be with the Lord from this place, and I will certainly always remember them."

REJOICE: Jernigan to sign copies of his book, CD

(From 1C)

he had been an admirer of Jernigan's music and his ministry long before he became aware of his personal past. McGraw said that Jernigan coming out with that particular issue is a "non-issue."

McGraw went on to say that his understanding of the sexual orientation issue comes not from scientific or theological discipline, but from Scripture.

"God says through his apostle in 1 Corinthians 6:9-11, 'Do you not know that the unrighteous will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived: neither the immoral, nor idolators, nor adulterers, nor homosexuals, nor thieves, nor the greedy, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor robbers will inherit the kingdom of God. And such were some of you. But you were washed, you were sanctified, you were justified in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and in the spirit of our God.' I personally have naturally wired tendencies toward greed, and I have to work to overcome that, but by grace we're all saved, and Dennis' testimony is a great ministry in the Lord's church," McGraw said.

This will not be the first time the Golf Course Road church has stepped to the front to proclaim its stance on sensitive nationwide issues. The empty lot just west of the church is filled with small white crosses symbolizing aborted fetuses.

The annual praise and worship service began in 1990 when the congregation invited author Max Lucado as keynote speaker to an event that McGraw said was "primarily an event that our local people, mainly our congregation, would come to, but with the same mission that we have today: To tear down walls and build bridges within our Christian community, to be thankful and give praise to God with a unified voice."

McGraw said the name of the event has been changed to reflect the more widespread audience the event has attracted as the earlier date.

"We've been holding it earlier and earlier in the year, and we realize that a lot of people associate the word 'thanksgiving' with the national holiday, so that might be confusing. Also, we decided that the term 'community' might be a little misleading. There have been so many people come from all over the Permian Basin and beyond, that we can't say it's a community get-together, because that might be taken as local."

More than 3,200 people attended last year's event, which featured the internationally known Katinas, a family quintet from American Samoa and a choir made up of singers from churches throughout Midland. Attendees came from as far away as Colorado and Oklahoma, representing Christian churches of a wide spectrum of denominations — Mennonite, Catholic, Assembly of God, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Methodist, Baptist and others as well as Church of Christ congregations.

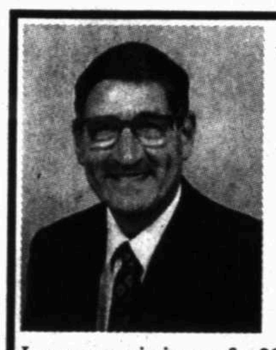

Jernigan's ministry started 15 years ago with Christian music. Many of the songs he has written are used in praise and worship songbooks, and are often sung at Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Jernigan's autobiography, "This Is My Destiny," was published concurrently with a CD of the same title. Jernigan will autograph copies of his book and CD at Rejoice and will be available to answer questions.

Admission will not be charged to Rejoice.— a Call to Praise, but a love offering will be taken.

South Korean president awarded Nobel Peace Prize

■ State News/6C

TOKYO — In fulfillment of a lifetime dream, President Kim Dae-jung of South Korea, a long-time champion of democracy in his own country whose tireless push for national reconciliation led to a historic summit meeting between the divided Koreas in June, was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize Friday.

Praising what it called his "great moral strength," the Nobel committee's citation amounted to a salute for an unusually broad contribution by the 76-year-old president to "democracy and human rights in South Korea and in East Asia in general, and for peace and reconciliation with North Korea in particular."

Kim has reportedly said in recent years that his two most ardent wishes were to achieve peace between two halves of a nation divided by a civil war, which ended in 1953, and to win a Nobel Prize.

Largely because of Kim's unstinting efforts to engage North Korea, at no other time since the war ended has a conclusive peace between the two countries seemed more possible. And with Friday's award, Kim, who is halfway into a five-year presidential term, seemed fulfilled.

"It's an honor that will not come again," Kim was quoted as saying by his spokesman, Park Joon-young. "I am only thankful.

"Today's honor is due to public support for democracy, human rights, peace, reconciliation and cooperation between South and North Korea during the past 40 years."

In giving the award to Kim, the Nobel committee appeared to have decided to finesse the sticky question of equal recognition for his North Korean counterpart, Kim Jong Il, who hosted the first-ever summit talks between the leaders of the two countries in Pyongyang, North Korea, in June.

At the very end of the citation, the committee diplomatically stated its "recognition of the contributions made by North Korea's and other countries' leaders to advance reconciliation and possible reunification on the Korean peninsula."

The careful language clearly amounted to a tacit recognition of two important facts. First, that the South Korean initiated and has sustained the difficult reconciliation process at considerable political risk at home, often through the sheer force of his enthusiasm.

And that North Korea, although on extraordinarily good behavior for nearly two years now, remains a grave potential threat to international peace with its missiles and programs to develop weapons of mass destruction — not to mention its total lack of democracy and woeful human rights record.

The new Nobel laureate is a man whose life has been so packed with activism and with history, but also with variety, that its details could easily constitute the backbone of two or three life stories, with plenty of intriguing loose ends left over.

Born on the small island of Haui, off the southwestern coast of Korea, he ran his own shipping company and published a newspaper before becoming a politician, winning a seat in the legislature in 1961.

In the tumultuous succeeding years, when South Korea was under the authoritarian grip of President Park Chung-hee, Kim Dae-jung successively became a dissident, exile, death row prisoner, determined human rights campaigner, champion of democracy and, improbably — given that many Koreans believed that the military would never allow him to rule — president, beginning in 1997.

In one of the darkest episodes of his life, Kim was kidnapped from a Tokyo hotel during his exile in 1973 by agents of the South Korean government and was about to be dumped, bound and blindfolded, into the sea when agents from the United States intervened.

Yet his first act as president was to pardon the former generals who had sentenced him to death as an opposition leader. That move drew criticism from some of his supporters. But it was consistent with a long-held philosophy, often compared to that of the Nobel laureate and former South African leader Nelson Mandela, which he expressed to one of his sons in a letter from prison 17 years earlier. "Only the truly magnanimous and strong are capable of forgiving and loving," he wrote.

Kim's struggles have been marked by an almost preternatural optimism, matched by a serene self-confidence and, most of all, a reservoir of patience.

That is how, swimming against a tide of general disbelief among his main allies in the United States and in Japan that a workable accommodation could ever be reached with the North, Kim persisted until even grudging disbelievers became convinced.

Until quite recently, Kim maintained his diplomatic efforts to engage with the North, now widely known as his Sunshine Policy, in the face of the utter contempt and venomous scorn of the North's official propaganda machine, which treated him as stooge of Washington unworthy of serious consideration.

In an interview at his official residence, the Blue House, early this year, when his government was still being snubbed by Pyongyang and was drawing some quizzical glances from Washington, Kim resolutely stated his ambitions.

"I can simply say that I seek to see the Cold War on the Korean peninsula over by the end of my mandate," he said. "The North Korean leadership understands our sincerity, but they just cannot say so yet, because they must maintain control."

It later emerged that the summit meeting in Pyongyang was being secretly negotiated at that time by the two governments.

Just months later, two countries with huge armies that had recently fought a fierce naval battle over disputed territorial waters were marching together in the Olympic ceremonies, arranging visits between long-separated families and working to restore rail links that had been cut off since the war.

And this week came news that after high-level meetings in Washington, Pyongyang had extended an invitation to U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and to President Clinton. The talk at the Washington meetings, which were clearly made possible by Kim's June breakthrough with the North, was of a "radical improvement" in relations between the United States and Pyongyang, deadly enemies for half a century.

Man claims to have handed pot plant to Queen

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Police said Friday that they plan to question a man who claims to have given Queen Elizabeth II a bouquet containing a marijuana plant.

Colin Davies of the Medical Marijuana Cooperative, which is pushing for legalization of the substance, said he handed the bouquet to the queen during her whistlestop visit Thursday to this north England city. She was pictured receiving a bouquet from Davies outside an arts center.

"There were more important issues for our staff to be concerned with on what was a highly successful day," said Detective Chief Inspector David Booth, head of Greater Manchester Police Special Branch. "However, arrangements will now be made to speak to Mr. Davies about his claims."

Buckingham Palace said Friday that the queen did not bring the bouquet back to London.

Bouquets handed to the queen during royal engagements are routinely distributed to hospitals or old people's homes.

Davies, 43, said he grew the marijuana plant himself.

"It was a harmless way of trying to bring to the notice of Her Majesty the ludicrous restrictions on cannabis," he said. "We set up the cooperative to supply sick people who benefit from the therapeutic value of cannabis."

Rulon Gardner gets heroes welcome after big win in Sydney

Gardner

AFTON, Wyo. (AP) — Olympic gold medalist Rulon Gardner, once a chubby kid ridiculed by bullies as "Fatso," was hailed as a hero in a homecoming that drew thousands.

Gardner, as big as he is gentle, paraded Thursday through the downtown of this western Wyoming community where he grew up in celebration of his Greco-Roman wrestling triumph over Alexander Karelin, one of the greatest upsets in Olympic history.

"This medal is not mine," he said, holding the gold off his 54-inch chest. "This is all of ours."

Gardner, who said he uses the childhood insults as motivation, won the heavyweight title last month in Sydney. Karelin had not lost an international match in 13 years until Gardner's 1-0 victory.

Gardner drove from his family farm to the community of 1,630 on a tractor. He then rode on a fire truck, dismounted as thousands of red, white and blue balloons were released and walked with an American flag through the five-block downtown.

"Still a lot for me to swallow, all these experiences," he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kristy Swanson, who starred in the film version of "Buffy the Vampire Slayer," was ordered to attend 10 Alcoholics Anonymous meetings after pleading no contest to misdemeanor drunken driving.

The 30-year-old actress was also fined, put on probation and ordered to perform community service. Swanson did not attend Wednesday's hearing.

Swanson was stopped Aug. 30 by officers who reported seeing her drive erratically as she pulled away from a stop light.

Tests showed she had a blood-alcohol level of 0.23 percent, nearly three times California's legal limit of 0.08, a city attorney spokesman said.

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — John Denver fans gathered on the third anniversary of his death to help create a garden dedicated to his memory.

About 40 people gathered Thursday at the John Denver Sanctuary to garden and swap stories about the hometown singer many considered a friend.

"It was like a loss in the family when he died," said Cindy Dougherty, who came to Aspen from Idaho for the occasion.

Denver was killed Oct. 12, 1997, when his home-built Long E-Z airplane plunged into Monterey Bay on the California coast.

Work on the memorial began last spring.

"I think he is standing up there smiling," Dougherty said. "To have this done in his memory is far out."

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — Erin Brockovich, the crusading legal assistant whose fight against a powerful utility was the basis of a hit film, has been given an award by a First Amendment group.

Brockovich's efforts helped lead to a $333 million settlement against Pacific Gas & Electric Co. for injuries to residents of Hinkley.

"Brockovich's effort is a shining example of how public records can be used by a citizen to right a serious public wrong," said the California First Amendment Coalition, which presented her with its Beacon Award.

Cynthia Ossias, the whistleblower whose allegations led to the ouster of California Insurance Commissioner Chuck Quackenbush, also won the award, as did former CBS producer Lowell Bergman, whose interview with a former Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. executive was the basis of the movie "The Insider."

LONDON (AP) — Still in diapers, Madonna's 3-month-old son has been named one of Britain's most eligible bachelors.

Rocco Ritchie, son of Madonna and British film director Guy Ritchie, ranks 20th on a list of eligible bachelors under age 24 compiled by the British Broadcasting Corp.'s new celebrity magazine, Star.

The top spot was awarded to 22-year-old Lord Frederick Windsor, the son of Prince and Princess Michael of Kent who is 28th in line to the British throne.

With the boyish athletes, actors and pop stars on the list were names from the worlds of politics and royalty, including Prime Minister Tony Blair's 16-year-old son Euan — fourth on the list — and 18-year-old Prince William, ranked sixth. William's 16-year-old brother, Prince Harry, placed 14th.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Richard Gere has appealed to South Korea's president to grant an entry visa to Tibet's spiritual leader, the Dalai Lama.

A press secretary said the president had no comment on the letter.

A local Buddhist group has been trying to organize a visit by the Dalai Lama to Seoul in November.

South Korea fears the visit by the Dalai Lama, winner of the 1989 Nobel Peace Prize, may hurt relations with China, which has warned against giving the Dalai Lama a forum to promote his campaign for Tibetan autonomy.

China annexed Tibet by force in 1950. A Buddhist monk, the Dalai Lama went into exile in India in 1959. Buddhism, with an estimated 12 million followers, is the largest religion in South Korea, which has a population of 47 million.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Oct. 14, 2000:

You can be an unusually creative person, but make sure that your ideas are grounded. Check in often with a trusted partner and get feedback. You will not be as gregarious as you have been in the past, preferring the company of one other person rather than the multitudes. Use your financial skills. If you are single, your life becomes much more like what you want. The key, however, will be to remain realistic about the person you choose to relate to. If attached, you discover just how important your sweetie is. TAURUS helps you anchor.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Don't kid yourself about finances. You might feel challenged to deal with others and let them know where a mistake has been made. Confusion surrounds friends. Your pals certainly mean well. Don't go overboard with spending and overindulgence. Tonight: Walk the straight-and-narrow path.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ Someone you put on a pedestal presents a different point of view. Be realistic when making decisions. Others mean well but do not see life as practically as you do. Claim your power, knowing what you want from another. Tonight: You're top cat.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ A change in plans could disappoint you. Don't lose your focus; stay on top of what is going on. Though you might not realize it, you need time to relax. Get into a project you have been putting off. Tonight: Do your thing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Gather where others are. Don't feel intimidated by another. You might not be seeing a loved one clearly. Recognize where this person is coming from. Plans made together could have quite a romantic tone. Don't underestimate how much this person cares. Tonight: Whatever makes you smile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Stand up and be counted. Friends surround you. Bring others together for a fun get-together. You have the ability to organize while a partner is off in never-never land. Realism might not be your strong suit. Tonight: Out and about.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Return calls, but do take off ASAP. A day's outing gives you a different perspective. Invite a loved one along. You enjoy just about anything as long as it is away from your day-to-day life. In a relaxed atmosphere, you get a good idea that affects your work or personal life. Tonight: Try a new restaurant.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Reach out for others. You might not be exactly sure what is up with a child or loved one. Do a better job of listening and absorbing what he says. One-on-one relating adds another dimension to a bond. Tonight: A close encounter.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Others take a strong stand. Listen carefully to family. You might not be sure about what to do. Buy time, rather than making a decision you could regret. Revise your thinking about another. You might not have realized how controlling this person can be. Tonight: Accept an invitation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Listen carefully to another. Don't hesitate to ask questions or reiterate a statement. Strive for clarity but don't be upset if you don't get it. Emphasize a more relaxed quality in your life. Someone has an odd way of expressing affection. Don't stand on ceremony. Tonight: Easy works for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Say no to a risk, as enticing as it might be. You can express your caring to a loved one in many ways, without being wild or doing something you regret. Let your playful nature come out, packing away your business profile. Tonight: Play the night away.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★ Stay close to home. A family member appreciates your calls and attention. You might not always know what to do for a loved one, but it becomes quite clear. Your confusion might result from fatigue and taking on too much. Make it your day to put up your feet. Tonight: Invite friends over.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Keep talking, especially if you cannot get a clear sense of what is going on. Others might not be able to clarify, but you get a sense of where your thinking might have been off. Listen to another when making plans. Stroll through favorite stores, or maybe stop at a crafts fair. Tonight: You don't have to go far.

Texas relatives await more word in wake of ship's bombing

By The Associated Press

At least eight Texas families with relatives at risk in the Mideast terrorist bombing of the warship USS Cole were anxiously waiting Friday for more news from half a world away. Three Texans were among the 10 sailors missing and presumed dead in the destroyer's attack.

Relatives of sailor Tim Gauna learned that the Ennis man was missing when Navy officials arrived at their home Thursday with the news.

The same word was delivered to the Kingsville family of Ronchester Santiago that he, too, is missing.

Navy spokeswoman Lt. Cmdr. Cate Mueller said Friday that families of the 10 missing sailors were now being notified that they are presumed to have died in the explosion. She said efforts to recover their remains are continuing.

Besides the seven confirmed dead and 10 presumed dead in Thursday's attack, about 35 were injured in the blast.

Navy seaman Kesha Stidham of Austin, Texas was reported in critical condition Friday.

A photo helped relay the news that Stidham, 19, was wounded Thursday as the ship entered port in Yemen on the Arabian peninsula.

A photographer with the Austin American-Statesman showed Marc and Michelle Poston a photo of an injured female in a Yemen hospital. The victim in the photo, broadcast over Yemeni television and picked up by wire services, was Stidham, whose face was covered with bandages but was very recognizable, family members said.

"I just burst into tears again because of the joy," said Michelle Poston.

She received an e-mail from her daughter prior to the attack that read, "I'm alive, and I'm doing OK." Then a Navy official called to tell her that her daughter had been injured in the explosion.

"I just burst into tears after I read it," Poston said Thursday afternoon. "I've been feeling numb and crying all day."

She wept in relief Thursday night when she saw a picture of Stidham, a Leander High School graduate who had been stationed for 10 months in the Cole's supply area, with her eyes open and her face partially covered with bandages.

"We think it's the power of prayer," Holly Bara, a 36-year-old family friend, told The Associated Press. "It was very comforting — all we knew was that she was injured."

Meanwhile, Rogelio Santiago was told by Navy officials that his 22-year-old son Ronchester was missing.

Rogelio Santiago, a retired Navy petty officer first class, told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times, "As a Navy man myself, I have my fears about what might have happened to him but I'm trying to think positive about it, hoping that some way, some how, that he'll be safe and that he survived."

Gauna's family struggled with news that he was missing after a visit to their home from naval representatives Thursday.

"I see this happening on TV, but I never thought it would be my son," Sara Gauna told The Dallas Morning News from her Rice home.

The sailor was a 1997 graduate of Ennis High School.

"If he is missing, there is still a chance," said Raymond Carrillo, an uncle. "We've got to keep faith. Maybe they'll find him."

Two other families were told by Navy officials that their relatives are safe.

Diana Gomez was told by the Navy on Thursday evening that Petty Officer 2nd class Sarah Gomez of San Antonio was not a bombing victim.

"We never knew that we were so close until a tragedy like this happened," the officer's mother told the San Antonio Express-News in Friday's editions.

Her daughter, a 23-year-old graduate of Breckenridge High School, works in radio communications aboard the ship, where she has been stationed the past two years of her five-year Navy career.

A North Texas family waited anxiously until military officials called Thursday night to tell them their son, seaman Eric Lamar Baker, 20, was OK.

"It's the waiting that kills you," A.C. Baker Jr., the sailor's father, told the Arlington Morning News. "It's agony to go through all this."

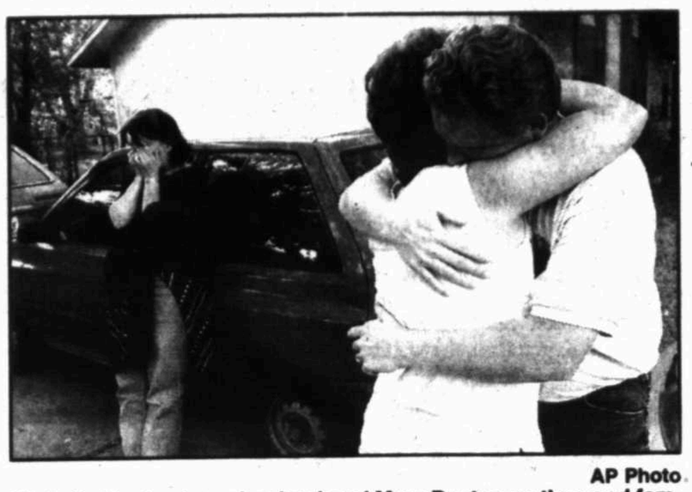

The operations specialist was among about 350 crew members aboard the destroyer when the attack began.

"Oh, thank you, Jesus. He's all right," his father responded when Sherry Baker received the call from the Navy.

The Caller-Times said Esther Arriaga Hood, a 19-year-old 1999 Miller High School graduate, was also on the USS Cole's crew. Relatives said she was alive, but they had not gotten word if she was among those injured.

The family of sailor David Sanders, 21 of Houston was also contacted by naval officials who said he was unharmed. Also safe, the Navy said, is 21-year-old Rocky Haggard of Caldwell.

"They showed a picture of the ship," Haggard's father, V.T., told the Bryan-College Station Eagle. "It had a hellacious hole in it. I said, 'That's Rocky's ship.'"

AP Photo

Michelle Poston hugs her husband Marc Poston as they and family friend Holli Bara, left, react Thursday, in Austin, after seeing a photo of an injured sailor they believe is Michelle's daughter, Keisha Stidham, who is stationed aboard the USS Cole. At least seven American sailors were killed early Thursday in an apparent suicide terrorist attack on the ship in the Yemen port of Aden.

Dell recalls notebook batteries

AUSTIN (AP) — Dell Computer Corp. recalled 27,000 notebook computer batteries Friday, saying they could short-circuit and catch fire.

Dell said it had received one report of a computer catching fire. It said no one was injured, and damage was minor.

It was the second notebook-related problem this year at Dell. The company in August warned as many as 400,000 customers that their machines may have defective memory chips.

The latest recall involves only certain Sanyo Electric batteries, not the computers themselves.

The batteries were contained in computers shipped to customers around the world between June and October.

The recalled batteries are the Latitude, CPiA, CPiR, CPtc, CPtS, CPtV, CPxH and CPxJ Inspiron 3700 and 3800 models.

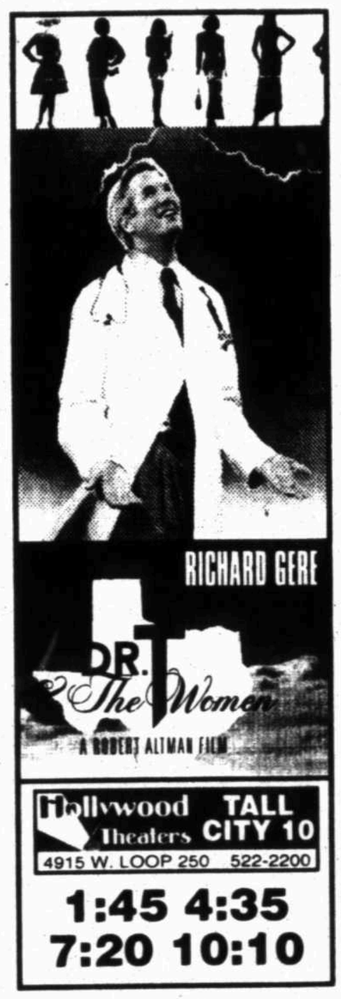

Customers should call Dell or visit a Web site the company has set up:

Former street person elevated to government research post

HOUSTON (AP) — A former homeless man was hired by the state Health Department to conduct intimate interviews with violent juveniles without going through normal procedures or even supplying a resume, the Houston Chronicle reported Friday.

Andre Eleazer was not required to fill out a job application for the $38,000 a year position. Records show he did not even possess a Social Security card until shortly before starting work May 11 at the Giddings State School, near Austin.

Other records obtained by the Chronicle indicate Eleazer was acquainted previously with Gerald L. Campbell, a special adviser to state Health Commissioner Dr. William "Reyn" Archer III. Campbell met Eleazer on the streets of Washington, D.C., while doing a personal photojournalism project.

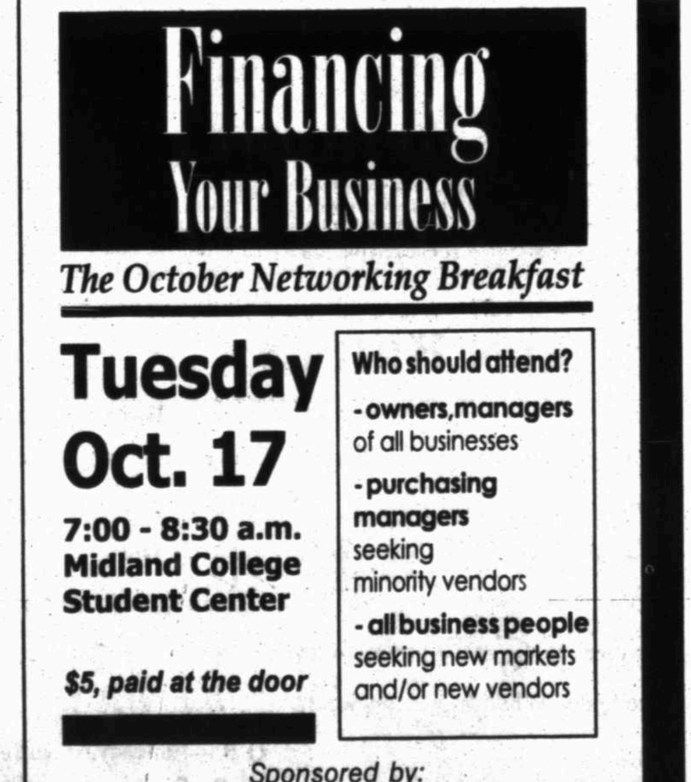

Campbell, who served in former President George Bush's administration as special adviser to the director of the U.S. Information Agency, is listed in Eleazer's personnel files as an emergency contact.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETINGS RURAL TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

The Texas Department or Transportation will conduct public meetings in Andrews, Fort Stockton, and Monahans, Texas, to discuss the 2002-2004 Rural Transportation Improvement Program (TIP).

The Rural Transportation Improvement Program is a three-year plan developed by the Texas Department of Transportation for Andrews, Crane, Ector, Loving, Martin, Midland, Pecos, Reeves, Terrell, Upton, Ward, and Winkler counties [outside the boundaries of the Odessa- Midland Metropolitan Area].

The Rural TIP includes: (1) A priority list of projects and project segments that will be carried out within the 3-year period 2002-2004, and; (2) A financial plan that demonstrates how the TIP can be implemented, indicates resources from public and private (if any) sources that are reasonably expected to be made available to carry out the plan, and recommends any innovative techniques to finance needed projects and programs.

The PUBLIC MEETINGS will be held:

- ANDREWS- Tuesday, November 14, at 6:30 p.m., at the Community Center, 200 N.E. Sixth Street, Andrews, Texas.
- FORT STOCKTON- Thursday, November 16, at 6:30 p.m., at the Large Community Center at Rooney Park, South US 285, Fort Stockton, Texas
- MONAHANS- Tuesday, November 28, at 6:30 p.m., at the Ward County Convention Center, 400 East 4th Street, Monahans, Texas.

Persons with disabilities who plan to attend this meeting and who may need auxiliary aids or services such as interpreters for persons who are deaf or hearing impaired, readers, large print or braille, are requested to contact Glen W. Larum at (915)498-4746 at least two (2) work days prior to the meeting so that appropriate arrangements can be made.

A 10-day comment period following the public meeting will permit other interesting persons to submit written comments to Gary L. Law P.E., Director of Transportation Planning and Development; Texas Department of Transportation, Odessa District; 3901 E. Highway 80, Odessa, TX 79761. All written comment must be received at the Odessa District office no later than 12 noon on December 8, 2000. A friendly Advertising Consultant will help you word and schedule your ad for best results.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

❶ Promote Your Merchandise - The more descriptive you are the more likely your merchandise will appeal to someone.

❷ Check The Market Value - The most common mistake that occurs is over or under pricing your goods.

❸ Always Include The Price - People are more likely to respond when they know the price range.

❹ Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item, such as "Stove" or "Guitar" rather than "Kenmore" or "Gibson", "Ford 1997" instead of "1997 Ford", or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads.

Evolutionary trucking: 2001 FORD EXPLORER SPORT SUV

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

The Ford Motor Company has remained true to its corporate DNA when it comes to trucks. Starting ten years ago, consumers have been treated to an increasing number of new and exciting products from the truckmaker – and the pace has intensified in recent years.

Ford continues to develop and market products and concepts that are blurring assumptions and expectations of what a truck, minivan, sport utility and car are and should be. The two-door Explorer Sport is a case in point.

At a time when other automakers are concentrating on new product derivatives and four-door SUV models, the folks at the blue oval have developed the Explorer into a complete product line. This lineup now consists of the two-door Explorer Sport, four-door Explorer and segment-blurring Sport Trac – a cross between a four-door Explorer and pickup truck – based on the Explorer chassis.

Built exclusively at the automaker's Louisville, Ky., assembly plant on the same line as the four-door Explorer and Explorer Sport Trac, the Explorer Sport is available in two- or four-wheel drive. As the market leader in the two-door compact SUV segment – with over 70 percent market share, the Explorer Sport receives significant interior and body improvements for the 2001 model year.

The new rugged sporty exterior look required the updating of every outer body panel except the liftgate. The prime mover for the truck is the sophisticated 4.0L SOHC V-6 engine. A manual five-speed gearbox is standard. The company's 5R55E electronically controlled five-speed automatic with overdrive is a $1,095 option.

This truck is no wimpy compromise when considering its off-road capabilities. Body-on-frame construction is complemented with added lateral stiffness achieved with additional gussets on the vehicle's longitudinal beams, as well as a new tubular cross member and thicker frame side rails. New microcellular polyurethane body mounts rather than the typical rubber ones found on most SUVs yield quiet, confident handling and a more balanced ride.

On the road, the Sport drives and handles with ease. A short/long control arm suspension, with an independent torsion bar, is used up front. A two-stage variable-rate leaf spring set up in the rear, complete with fine tuned bushings and isolators, maintain stability in most on and off road applications. Front and rear stabilizer bars with the standard P235/75R15 tires round out the suspension package.

Inside the cabin, excellent interior lighting introduces driver and passengers alike to a very friendly environment. Updated displays and controls have been improved with two dash mounted power points, clipboard and a removable fabric carry bag in the center console. A unique dual cupholder supports all kinds of drink containers.

The optional power driver's seat provides world class outward visibility for short drivers. Rear seating is comfortable and flexible with a 60/40 split seating that folds flat for secured cargo space. When the rear seats are folded flat, the Explorer Sport offers 71.4 cubic feet of cargo room. Access to the cargo area is enhanced with a flip-up rear window. This reduces the need to open the entire hatch for small items.

By the numbers

Engine performance numbers are 203 hp at 5,250 rpm and 237 lb/ft of torque at 3,000 rpm. EPA fuel economy figures range from 17 city/22 highway for two-wheel drive and 15 city/ 19 highway for four-wheel drive using regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are easily accessible and clearly marked.

Properly equipped, the Explorer Sport has a maximum payload of 1,000 pounds and a towing capacity of 5,140 pounds.

Standard safety equipment includes: dual front airbags, front and rear side impact door beams, passive anti-theft Securilock system and four-wheel anti-lock brakes. Optional safety equipment includes: driver and front passenger side airbags ($390) limited-slip differential ($355) and skid plates (4wd) ($125). Fog lamps are available only as part of the optional Premium Sport Group ($550 – 2wd, $700 – 4wd).

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the 2001 Ford Explorer Sport starts at $20,840 for the two-wheel drive model and $23,860 for four-wheel drive. Destination charge adds $575. Dealers report good inventories. There are no rebates.

Firestone Tire Recall Update

This fact sheet will help you understand some of the issues related to the Firestone tire recall. For additional information, refer to the sources listed on the reverse side.

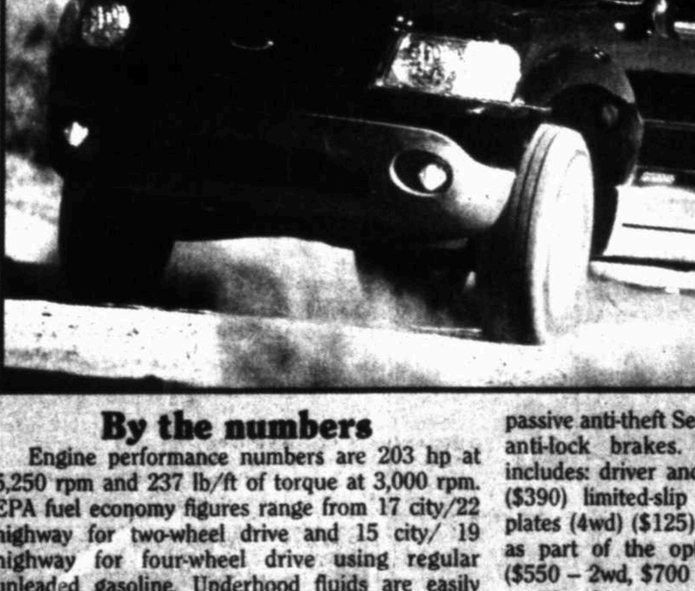

Explorer Safety

Safety data from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) show that the Ford Explorer has a lower fatality rate industrywide than passenger cars and other SUVs.

- For all types of accidents, Explorer's fatality rate is substantially lower than the rate for passenger cars and other compact SUVs.
- For rollover accidents, the Explorer has a 19 percent lower fatality rate than other compact SUVs.

Key Tire Information

Should other Firestone tires also be recalled?

Ford has analyzed Firestone's tire field data. This is what Ford has found:

Firestone tires not included in the recall are performing at world-class levels.

Although tread separations are rare events, they occur much more frequently among the recalled tires. Firestone ATX P235/75R15 tires are much more likely to fail than Wilderness AT P235/75R15 tires. All P235/75R15 ATX tires are being recalled.

Virtually all Wilderness AT P235/75R15 tires included in tread separation claims were built at Firestone's Decatur, Ill. plant, and these tires are also being recalled.
