Survey on curfews

On April 30, the city of Dallas imposed a curfew that prohibits youths aged 16 and under from being on the streets after 11 p.m. on weekdays and midnight on Fridays and Saturdays. Midland and Odessa city officials are studying the same type of curfew to help curb youth crime. Do you feel a curfew is necessary, or do you feel such a law would not help reduce the youth crime rate in Midland? We'd like to know your views. . . . Call Cityline's Community Pulse Poll at 560-2400, and then enter category 7655. If you feel the curfew is necessary, press 1. If you feel time restrictions on youth are not needed, press 2. You also are invited to leave your comments. We ask that you leave your name, but that is optional. The poll will remain open until noon today. Results will be published in Wednesday's edition.

Music City awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Alan Jackson knows a lot about livin' and a good deal about claiming awards. He picked up five at the TNN-Music City News Country Awards on Monday. He was voted entertainer of the year and male artist of the year, and his work was voted best album, single, and video. There were other repeat winners. The Statler Brothers won vocal group of the year for the 24th time, Ray Stevens got comedian of the year for the eighth straight show, and Jackson's award as male artist was his third consecutive. Waylon Jennings, Billy Dean and Michelle Wright were hosts of the telecast, broadcast on The Nashville Network cable station.

Independents shake hard times, look ahead

Richards courts oil producers' votes

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards attempted to woo independent oil producers Monday by touting the energy industry legislation she has backed in Texas and taking aim at federal policies.

"I want you to know that you have a governor who is in this fight with you every step of the way," Richards told the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

Republican challenger George W. Bush speaks to the annual TIPRO convention today. Richards took several jabs at Bush, whom she didn't refer to by name but called "the guy who's running against me."

"It's going to be a tough race," she said. "The way I feel about it is it's

D-Day plus 50: Victors pause to remember a time long past

By Jerry Schwartz
Associated Press

For one day, the world of 1994 stopped to remember a world long past — a time when the difference between good and evil was so obvious, when civilization itself was rescued, when ordinary people became heroes in the flash of a battleship's guns.

D-Day plus 50 was a day for old soldiers and their long-loved brides. It was a day for remembering — on the beaches where men died, in the small towns where they lived to grow old.

There were grand speeches: "On these beaches, the forces of freedom turned the tide of the 20th century," said President Clinton, at the American cemetery overlooking Omaha Beach in Normandy.

But they paled beside the quiet moments. Like Charles Neighbor, surveying the same

Ceremony at Centennial Plaza tips hats to area WWII soldiers

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

About 70 local World War II veterans received certificates of recognition at a 50th anniversary of D-Day ceremony at noon Monday at Centennial Plaza.

The crowd — estimated at about 300-350 by city officials — was addressed by Col. Kenneth W. Hess, a brigadier general select and commander of the 47th Flying Training Wing, Laughlin Air Force Base, and Mayor Bobby Burns during his first day in office.

The ceremony began with several military jets — including a Stealth fighter bomber — performing fly-bys over the plaza.

A local group of Boy Scouts presented the color-guard ceremonies. The Pledge of Allegiance followed.

Hess described the events of D-Day and spoke of the "courageous undertaking" by allied troops.

"If it (the invasion) failed, it may have been a different world today," he said.

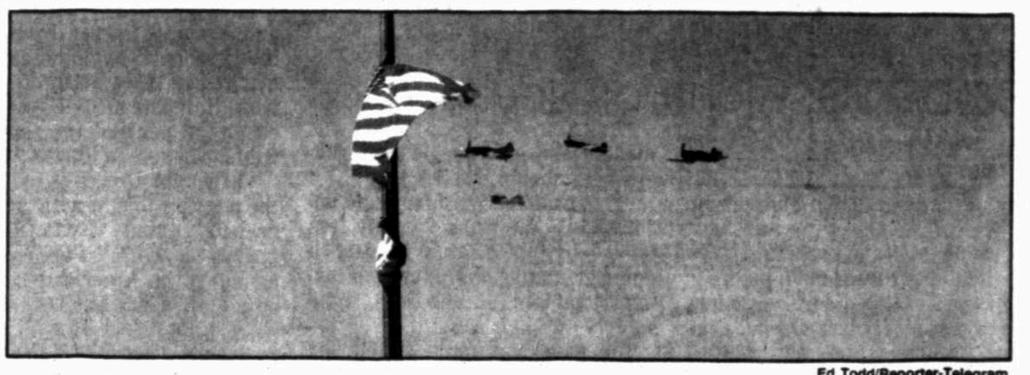

Hess said veterans and others were paying tribute around the world "to remember and acknowledge the price of freedom."

Doyce Penney, who served in the U.S. Navy from 1944-46, said he attended the ceremony to commemorate the day, to get a certificate and "maybe to see some (World War II) friends."

Penney, 68, wasn't involved in the invasion of Normandy but was in the Pacific area during the war. "But it was all for the same cause," he said echoing the sentiment of organizers to honor all local World War II veterans.

Another veteran to receive a certificate was Floyd Wheeler, who served in the U.S. Navy on

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high near 103 and south to southwest winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low near 70, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly sunny with a high near 100.

After an overnight low of 69, Monday's high reached 105, compared to the record high for that date of 107 set in 1990. The record low was 48 set in 1983.

NATION

Thunderstorms and showers drenched much of the East on Monday and were scattered across parts of the Plains and Pacific Northwest.

An afternoon thunderstorm spawned a tornado southwest of Bowdle in north-central South Dakota. In Ohio, dime-sized hail pelted Zanesville and the Dayton area, the National Weather Service said.

A severe thunderstorm watch was posted Monday night for much of the Northeast and parts of the mid-Atlantic states, the Midwest and the Plains.

Close to 2 inches of rain fell in six hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT in Valparaiso, Fla., and about 1½ inches fell in Montgomery, Ala. More than half an inch of rain fell in Mullen, Idaho, and Knoxville, Tenn.

Overnight, thunderstorms produced very heavy rainfall across parts of the Plains and the Southeast.

In the 24 hours ending at 7 a.m. CDT, 2¼ inches of rain fell on Biloxi, Miss., 2¼ inches fell in Milton, Fla., and just over 2 inches fells at New Orleans, Nashville, Emporia, Kan., Sioux Falls, S.D., Hinesville, Ga., and Meridian, Miss.

Rain also fell Monday in Portland, Ore., as cold, wet air spread across the Pacific Northwest. Clear skies and hot, dry weather ruled the rest of the West.

Overnight lows stayed in the 70s across the Gulf Coast states and parts of the southwestern deserts.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

AHEAD: Industry possibilities are topics

that the North American Free Trade Agreement represents great opportunity for U.S. oil and gas producers and the industry in general.

Jones said it was essential to make the commercial side of NAFTA work first before getting involved in the social and environmental aspects of the treaty. He said that once the commercial side of NAFTA begins to work, the rest will fall into position and that NAFTA should not become bogged down by social and environmental issues.

The ambassador described the opening of Mexico as one of the most significant events in the history of this hemisphere and said it offered great opportunity to the U.S. industry.

He noted that Petroleos Mexicanos planned to sell many of its petrochemical operations and that the opportunity for private companies to generate electricity in Mexico was now open. He also noted that PEMEX, the national oil company of Mexico, had reduced its work force from 250,000 to 100,000 during the past four years in an effort to improve efficiency.

While noting that oil and gas reserves were likely to remain in the control of the government, he said there still are numerous ways U.S. producers could participate. He noted that last year, U.S. companies sold more than $5 billion in oil and gas supplies to Mexico and sales were likely to be even higher this year.

It also noted that companies such as Enron and El Paso Natural Gas now are selling natural gas to Mexico and that a network of pipeline systems joining Mexico, Canada and the U.S. was likely to evolve, making it one giant market.

Jones said that PEMEX will invest more than $20 billion over the next five years in its oil and gas industry and also will look to the U.S. for expertise. He said that half of that $5 billion would go to the exploration and production sector of Mexico's industry and that much of the funds would go for contracts to independent consultants.

Noting that PEMEX definitely is downsizing and that we will see an even smaller PEMEX in the years to come, Jones, a former congressman and aide to President Johnson, said that U.S. energy expertise is absolutely critical to the development of the Mexican oil industry.

Jones said his office in Mexico City would be happy to work with members of the U.S. energy industry in conducting market surveys, and on some occasions would go directly with the industries to the proper government officials to help set up ventures and also to perform credibility checks of potential Mexican partners.

He said that during the next six years, there will be tremendous openings in the Mexican oil industry.

In addition to providing the keynote speech at the meeting, Jones was presented with the Hats Off! award by the organization in recognition of his contributions to the industry.

George Alcorn, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, told TIPRO members that the industry finally is getting a chance to tell its story on national security and oil imports.

IPAA has obtained signatures of 116 congressmen for a June 16 meeting with President Clinton and is in the process of conducting three meetings in New York, Dallas and Santa Clara, Calif., so that producers can provide input to the panel of government officials.

Alcorn said the independent producers of America remain concerned about prices, regulation and access to federal land. Industrywide, the main concern is stability.

He said it is inconceivable that the nation's oil and gas producers could produce 50 percent of the nation's energy and not have a thing to say about the price.

The government panel's findings will be used in turn to help the Department of Commerce in its investigation to determine if oil imports are posing a threat to national security.

The question of oil imports and national security was first raised in 1988 during the Reagan Administration, when oil imports were only 37 percent. Reagan agreed at that time that 37 percent did pose a threat to national security and initiated a number of incentive measures for the oil industry. Now that the import level is 50 percent, Alcorn said he is hopeful that the industry will be able to convince the Clinton Administration that imports do pose a threat to national security.

The initiative being presented to the president does not directly ask for an import fee, but Alcorn said IPAA does support an import fee.

But despite low prices for oil and overregulation, Alcorn said he is very optimistic about the future of the industry. He said that great opportunity faces the oil industry because of technology that could create major breakthroughs in recovering oil that already has been discovered.

Alcorn predicted that in 10 to 15 years, the U.S. could be 70 percent dependent on foreign oil. He also said that if oil prices go up at that time, when the U.S. is so dependent on foreign oil, the nation could end up paying $140 billion per year for oil imports.

The meeting also marks the retirement of Julian Martin, who had served the organization for 35 years as executive director. He was roasted Monday evening by Texas humorist Cactus Pryor.

Shelby Pitts, a principal in the Pitts Energy Group of Dallas, was named Mr. TIPRO for his efforts to bring a new level of membership and a solid revenue base to the organization.

The group also was addressed at a membership luncheon Monday by Gov. Ann Richards, and will be addressed at this morning's farewell breakfast by gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush.

symbol of America's air power in World War II.

A marker salutes the 8,000 airmen, the "Hell-from-Heaven" bombardiers, who underwent training at the old Midland Army Air Field, home of the world's largest bombardier school 50 years ago.

Roaring above the landscape were four vintage warplanes flying in missing-man formation. And Old Glory was flying at half-staff in honor of "the mourned, the valiant slain."

"It was certainly a marvelous thing for them to do," said Midland's venerable John P. Butler. "We don't intend to forget. And we don't."

Mrs. Robert H. Nash of Midland's Colonial Dames XVII Century saluted those Americans who committed their young lives to the war effort.

"They didn't say they had a better idea. They only asked 'How can I serve? How far can I go? How much can I give?' "

The Colonial Dames XVII Century chapter sponsored the marker honoring the bombardiers.

"Today we proudly honor the band of brothers who more than self their country loved," Mrs. Nash said.

Midland's Courtney Clark, who was a B-24 Liberator bombardier with the 13th Air Force in the war's Pacific Theater, emceed the morning ceremony.

"We were on the far-side of the world (from the D-Day invasion at Normandy), but we were fighting a war at that time," Clark said. In his "outfit," Clark said he had "good friends who got shot down or otherwise lost their lives."

Jack Edwards, a naval aviator in the Pacific, said the Allied troops in the D-Day invasion "just faced annihilation when they stepped off those damn barges and boats over there. I think they deserve all the credit and respect in the world.

"Not a one of them knew they would get ashore (alive)," Edwards said. "And if they did, they didn't have any idea if they were going to get back."

John Young, who was an artillery officer in the second wave of infantry men to arrive on Normandy's Utah Beach on June 6, 1944, said, "Our fighting started when we got over the seawall into the flooded area" after the morning beach landing. "We were just sitting ducks."

Once "in position" at dusk, "we fired all night."

Eventually, the American forces prevailed.

"It was a good feeling to link up with the paratroopers and glider troopers . . . (to) become a fighting force."

By daylight on D-Day plus one, "things were pretty well organized," Young said. "I was glad to be ashore. I was glad to be alive."

Midland historian Marguerite Crain professed that "World War II was my war.

"It brings back so many memories, the sacrifices, and all the men who died. My first husband died as a result of the war."

Mrs. Crain, who is affiliated with both the DAR and the Colonial Dames, said "it is so proper that we do this" — erect the monument and marker in remembrance of World War II soldiers, sailors and airmen.

"Every (Southern) courthouse has a statue to the Confederate War," she said. "And there are none to World War II. We must do it. Our generation must do it. If we don't, it won't be done. Every war should be memorialized. World War I is lost because nobody did anything about that to speak of. World War I got away. And we don't want World War II to get away."

Among those at the ceremony were Jerry and Molly Krueger and sons John, 10, and Michael, 13.

"My Dad was in World War II as a naval aviator" on submarine patrol off the Strait of Gibraltar, Krueger said, and his wife's father was on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff.

"And so many people we know were part of World War II," Krueger said. "It was part of our heritage. We wanted the boys to be part of it also."

cemetery and its 9,386 graves, peering intently but not too carefully for fear of seeing the names of men with whom he served.

"I got a lot of friends buried here," he said. "I haven't tried to see any of them. I want to remember the way they were."

Neighbor is 69 years old now, and lives in Roanoke, Va. But 50 years ago, he was a teen-ager, thrown into the bloodiest battle of the day with the 29th Division, fighting alongside men like Henry Tyler. A half-century later, Tyler's memories of the war are untinged by sentiment.

"It's dog eat dog. You live like an animal," said Tyler, 76. "If a guy gets wounded, you say he's a lucky bastard. If he gets killed, you say he got it. Not much you can say."

Some had no interest in returning. Willie Usher, 71, was among the veterans who gathered in Jerusalem at the Yad Vashem Memorial to victims of the Holocaust. In 1944, he was in a British artillery unit.

"I thank God I came out of it alive, and I don't ever want to see the place again," he said. "That's my feeling."

The Germans weren't there either, though they watched on television.

"The recreation of the 'longest day' smacked not a little of Hollywood," said the newspaper Die Welt. "But who can criticize our former war enemies for using the tools of our media age to reflect on the sacrifice of their sons?"

Others thought they did not receive their due: "There's a lack of recognition of what Belgium did," complained Jean Hoogewyss, 71, of Brussels, once an Allied radio man. "You never hear much about the Polish contribution to the invasion," sniffed Stanislaw Dyszynski, who fought on Gold Beach.

And there were veterans who objected to the presence of a president who avoided service — albeit in a very different war, at a very different time.

But these were minor notes on a day when the guys who once ate C rations were the focus, not the leaders who dined Monday on oysters in lobster sauce, fresh goose liver in apricot sauce and baby lamb with 13 garden vegetables.

Charles MacGillivary of Braintree, Mass., attended a ceremony at the Massachusetts Statehouse. He recalled watching as men drowned at Omaha Beach; he survived the battle, only to lose an arm at the Battle of the Bulge.

"I wasn't thinking of medals. I was thinking of living," said MacGillivary, who was awarded the Medal of Honor.

the USS Idaho from 1940-46.

Wheeler served in the Pacific and was busy bombing the Japanese on the day allied troops landed at Normandy, he said.

Wheeler has many memories of the war, but recalled one in particular — the end. In September 1945, Wheeler watched from his battleship through a range-finder as leaders signed the war treaty on the USS Missouri in Tokyo Bay, he said.

"That was an experience in itself," he said.

kind of like out of the blue people appear at election time and have solutions to all the problems when we didn't hear from them before."

Richards wasted no time telling the oil producers how she believes her administration has helped their industry.

The state will provide $300,000 to be matched by TIPRO and the University of Texas Bureau of Economic Geology for a "technology transfer" program that will give independent producers access to up-to-date industry technology and information, the governor said to applause from TIPRO members.

Richards also reeled off a list of tax breaks approved in the last legislative session, including incentives for enhancing oil recovery and restarting inactive wells.

Richards said other states are looking to the Texas legislation as models and said the federal government should, too.

"It is time for Washington to understand, that when you pay less for a barrel of oil than it costs to pump it, taxing a producer is taking blood out of a turnip," she said.

The governor again stated her support for an oil import fee, criticized the lack of a national energy policy and blasted the United States' dependence on foreign oil.

"The Department of Energy needs to get off its duff and recognize the fact that this industry is vital to the national security of this country," she said. "Over the years, through foreign policy or absolute stupidity, we have allowed ourselves to become increasingly dependent on cheap, foreign oil."

"How many times do we have to say it? We need a national energy policy," Richards said.

SALUTE: Aging vets return to D-Day beaches

grimage, not the fanfare.

"I came back to deliver thanks and a small prayer from many, many people back home," said Bill Pepe, 73, a retired engineer from Hampstead, N.C., who landed at the peak of the fighting at Omaha Beach on June 6, 1944.

"I thought I owed it not only to the people I fought with, but to everybody lying in those small graves up there," Pepe said, gesturing to the American Cemetery on a bluff above the beach.

Bill Clinton, the first U.S. president born after World War II, invoked the invaders' heroism in a speech at the cemetery, where 9,386 graves are marked with simple, white crosses and Stars of David.

"They secured a foothold for freedom," he said. "Today many of them are here among us. They may walk with a little less spring in their step, and their ranks are growing thinner. But let us never forget when they were young, these men saved the world."

About 100,000 people attended ceremonies to remember the day that 156,000 Allied soldiers crossed the English Channel aboard the largest armada in history and breached Adolf Hitler's Atlantic Wall.

The landing's first day ended with an estimated 10,000 Allied dead and wounded, but it gained a foothold that allowed millions of soldiers to pour into France and, with Soviet armies advancing in the east, defeat Nazi Germany 11 months later.

On a damp, windy day much like that of the momentous day a half-century ago, Clinton, Queen Elizabeth II and other leaders of the Allied nations presided solemnly at a series of ceremonies along the Normandy coast.

The climax was a multinational commemoration at Omaha Beach, scene of D-Day's bloodiest combat.

"I thank you for the world's freedom," the French president, Francois Mitterrand, said. "What we won that day on the Normandy beaches was our freedom today."

Earlier, Mitterrand and Clinton placed wreaths at a monument to U.S. soldiers at Utah Beach, then went to a British cemetery at Bayeux with Queen Elizabeth.

"The Europe which we know today could not exist had not the tide of war been turned here in Normandy 50 years ago," the British monarch said.

Throughout the region, there was fog, mist and light rain, the kind of weather the Allies encountered on D-Day. The queen wore a beige rain cape; veterans huddled against the chill in hats and windbreakers.

"All gave some, some gave all," read matching white windbreakers worn by Edwin Pound, 78, a former P-47 Thunderbolt pilot from Ocoee, Fla., and other members of the 404th Fighter Group, U.S. 9th Air Force.

Younger members of the audiences were impressed, including French children who fanned out through the grandstands getting veterans to autograph their programs.

"To actually stand here is beyond belief," said Staff Sgt. Edmund Sealey, 25, of Cleveland, Tenn., now a soldier in the U.S. Army's 82nd Airborne Division.

Surreal scenes: Lone American in surfer shorts takes Omaha Beach

By Mort Rosenblum
Associated Press

OMAHA BEACH, France — At dawn under a drizzle, on D-Day plus 50 years, the same gray shapes loom again out on the choppy sea. This time, the beach is empty but for a curious little band: a few Italian war buffs in costume, an American who took a flag for a swim and newspeople.

"Move along," commanded two French cops, who for unknown reasons wanted to end this early-morning communion with history. No one paid any attention, and the cops wandered off.

"HEY!!" shouted a television cameraman, a little later, as he panned what he wanted to be a swath of empty sand. That cleared the beach.

Off-camera at D-Day ceremonies, poignancy is masked by shades of P.T. Barnum. Big events usually breed a media circus and general confusion. But here the scene falls somewhere beyond the surreal.

For one thing, an ad hoc army of non-veterans is parading around in hodgepodge camouflage — Gulf War chocolate chip, Vietnam tiger and the rest —— seeking separate statements to make.

That's why those Italians were on the beach, looking like they had strayed off the set of "La Dolce Vita."

Enzo Maio of Torino, 38, in combat fatiques and an Airborne helmet over scholarly spectacles, explained: "We're military enthusiasts, and we're proud of what the Allies did."

His club members came to try out their antique collection, especially their prized pieces, a pair of Ducks. Before Normandy, the amphibious vehicles were used to invade Italy.

On D-Day plus 50 years, that fit the mood. In a cemetery for 21,000 Germans who died for the Fatherland, ex-Wehrmacht officers stepped on soldiers' graves to hug the men who killed them.

Sometimes imagination ran to the extreme.

The American on the beach was Mark Rooney, a 30-year-old banker who lives in Prague. "You try to find an American flag in the Czech Republic," he said. He got his in Zurich.

Rooney wanted to honor his uncle, a D-Day veteran. A Bostonian, he was used to cold water. So he swam out 200 yards and came back. In an invasion replay, a lone guy in surfer shorts took Omaha Beach.

More elaborate ceremonies later in the day brought together the heads of 17 states which bled to free France. Still, a lot of American visitors missed the point.

"I don't see why we had to do it alone," one woman told another, loudly. A French protocol official, assigned to help the visitors, gritted his teeth and said nothing.

But, although nearly half the Allied troops followed other flags, the show around Omaha and Utah Beaches was strictly Franco-American.

The Vierville post office, a businesslike little structure, suddenly spouted music: "Don't Sit Under The Apple Tree With Anyone Else But Me."

The people of St. Laurent entertained U.S. veterans until 3 o'clock in the morning, presenting each with a pebble from Omaha Beach set on a base of Baccarat crystal.

In every village, citizens smiled indulgently as aging veterans sought to establish their bearings.

"That wasn't here when we were," one old soldier told another, pointing to a 17th-century chateau.

"Yes, Ralph," his buddy replied. "It was."

All around there were scenes of it-could-only-happen-in-France.

An engineer from Mobile, Ala., brought his family to stay with his wartime girlfriend, a Resistance fighter he met while his wife was still his fiancee back home. He had briefed his daughter.

"My mom learned this when the woman announced it at dinner," the daughter said, laughing.

Army invasion hero introduces Clinton at beach ceremony

COLLEVILLE-SUR-MER, France (AP) — An Army captain, one of three men to make it off his boat alive on D-Day and help make the first breach of enemy lines, returned Monday to Omaha Beach to salute his comrades and introduce President Clinton.

Joseph T. Dawson, a company commander in the 16th regiment of the 1st division, was the first one off his boat and was closely followed by a communications sergeant and the company clerk. The other 30 men on his boat never got out.

Dawson of Corpus Christi, Texas, was introduced by Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, at the U.S. Military Cemetery overlooking Omaha Beach.

The general quoted Dawson as recalling, years after D-Day, that "utter chaos reigned because the enemy controlled the field of fire so completely."

Dawson had told people, "'There was nothing I could do on that beach except die,'" Shalikashvili said. "But he was not destined to die that day."

Dawson followed the general to the podium to continue the story.

"Where we landed at 0700 on the beach below was total chaos," Dawson said. "Men lay dead or dying, and the equipment of combat was choking the shoreline."

Never faltering, Dawson led his men over the sea wall, through the mine fields of the beach and up the bluff, where they became the first to penetrate enemy lines.

"I recall how I was overwhelmed with a feeling of anger and hate," he said. "And I knew we had to get to the enemy before we were destroyed."

It was Clinton's turn next. The president paused before speaking, then said with emotion: "Mr. Dawson, you did your men proud."

DEAR ABBY

Mother's bank account loses in her quest for contest winnings

DEAR ABBY: I just returned from visiting my mother in a small Midwestern town where the whole family gathered to celebrate her 85th birthday.

Van Buren

Mom is a lovely person, independent and full of fun, but she has one flaw — she's hooked on those mail sweepstakes. She's convinced that one day she is going to win big. Meanwhile, all she "wins" is a lot of cheap jewelry and coupon books, which she gives to her grandkids. Recently, for the money she spent trying to win a cheap TV, she could have bought a good one.

I keep telling her she is throwing her money away, but she still believes she'll win the sweepstakes.

One day she got a telephone call saying that her chances for winning a car were excellent if she put up $2,000. I called the local police, and they said they could do nothing unless my mother filed a complaint which, of course, she refused to do.

Meanwhile, Mom keeps writing checks for these contests she enters. She lives in an independent retirement home and has her own locked mailbox. The junk mail she gets is unbelievable! Mom has enough money to live comfortably but, at this rate, she'll end up in the poorhouse. How can I help her? — HER DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: If you really think your mother is out of control, you can help her by taking over her checkbook and putting her on an allowance. (Do it now while there's still something left to handle.) Ask your lawyer how to accomplish this without upsetting your mother.

However, if this is simply a harmless pleasure, leave your mother alone, no matter how much her behavior irritates you. Perhaps you can persuade her to budget a modest amount every month to play the contests.

DEAR ABBY: Please respond to the following: Recently we had a death in the family. Our relatives let it be known that money would be acceptable in lieu of flowers, contributions, Mass cards, etc.

I am appalled. Is money really appropriate? — FLORIDIAN

DEAR FLORIDIAN: Money is always appropriate and very much appreciated if the family is destitute and needs help to pay for the funeral.

DEAR READERS: Although Mother's Day has come and gone, may I share this letter with you:

MY DEAR ABBY: With Mother's Day approaching, I was reminded of that old ballad that recites a mother's many virtues, creating the acronym of "Mother." A few years ago, I rewrote the lyrics to describe the vision my stepdaughters apparently have of their mother:

M is for the many things she gave us,
O is for the other things we took.
N is for the nothing that we gave her,
E's 'cause she's an easygoing schnook.
Y is for the questions that she asked us,
Like: "Why won't you get up and look for work?"
Put them all together, they spell MOTHER:
A child-indulgent, masochistic jerk.

Abby, if you print this, please omit my name so as to avoid adding embarrassment at my hand to the anguish my wife has already suffered at theirs. — NAME WITHHELD, HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

DEAR READERS: Thought for today: The best safety device for an automobile is a rearview mirror with a cop in it.

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Equality makes advances but still has some bugs to work out

The breakthroughs by women to make this an egalitarian society have been slow but steady.

Bombeck

It took a while before females were cast as villains on TV cop shows. It has been only in recent years that bad mothers have emerged.

Women hucksters still don't sell computers, beer, fertilizer or sneakers. (Unless you count the women playing basketball in pumps and pantyhose.)

That's why this story is going to give you goose bumps. The Orkin Man is being replaced by a woman. Did I tell you it was going to make you glad you're a woman? Why, I haven't been so excited since Rotary clubs opened their doors to us.

I don't know what the thinking was behind a half-man, half-cyborg hunk who looked like Arnold Schwarzenegger and could terminate a basement full of termites by giving them the laser eye. Frankly, if a guy in a black helmet and a ski mask who walked like Frankenstein appeared at my front door, I'd dial 911 and hide in the furnace duct.

But the Orkin Man was just window dressing. Most of the service people who made the calls were women.

Whatever the reasoning, Mother Orkin will have the same menacing costume. With a single look in her eye and movement of her hands, the insects are history. She will then shed her 40 pounds of robot gear and smile, "One call destroys them all."

As a woman I have always had great respect for those men and women who are not afraid to go into basements.

I have friends who are such animal activists, they can't kill flies. My reasoning is that anything you can't turn into a fur coat is fair game.

I know we must share our space with a certain number of bugs and insects. But if I see one sewer roach in my house, I stalk it with a broom, a shoe and a paperwieght. If I see two sewer roaches in my house preparing a nursery, I list the house with a realtor.

For years I had those electronic plugs in every outlet in the house. They were supposed to send out a signal so deafening to bugs that it killed any insect within earshot. Then I got to thinking, if I can't hear anything and I never see any dead bugs, how do I know it's working?

People generally fight fear with a call to the professional. I don't care if the RoboCop is male or female or if he or she brings the kids to work, just so when either leaves I see little bugs with lilies on their chests.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Members of Gladewater musical group don't like to be called old

By Bill W. Hornaday
Tyler Morning Telegraph

TYLER — They're called many names, this roving band of rowdies, whose reputation preceeds them anywhere they go in East Texas or beyond.

Musicians notwithstanding, they include spry, eccentric, dependable goodwill ambassadors — even ministers.

Originally known as the Symfunny, some locals refer to them as the Gladewater Philharmonic Orchestra. Officially, they're the Silly Symphony and there's one name you don't call them — old.

Despite an average age of 72, the youngest 69, you'll find them every Thursday at Gladewater's Carousel House Complex, plus 150 other venues in Texas and Louisiana each year, moving audiences of varying vintage.

Still, some folks can't quite peg their moniker, which does not stop them from trying.

"We once played a church function in White Oak, where the assistant pastor exclaimed, "On Tuesday night, we're gonna have the Crazy Band!" said Jo Frances Hudec, 70, one of the band's two keyboard players.

Mrs. Hudec formed the group in 1985. Save guitarist B.R. Bearden, 78, and banjo player A.J. McCullough, 71, the rest were self-taught or had limited experience.

Their other keyboardist, Dorothy Ellis, played only by ear when recruited, while Dr. Harold McDowell rushed to a pawn shop for his bass guitar.

"It sounds corny, but when I first came to play I was scared to death," Ms. Ellis, 72, said. "I've been at it ever since, but sometimes Mary Alice (Allen, 69, the band's accordian player) laughs at me. She says I play so fast it looks like my fingers might fall off."

"When I joined, I knew so little about a guitar I asked the clerk to name the strings," said McDowell, 70. "The rest I've done myself, with a little help here and there."

Death, health and, yes, age have winnowed the band's original 15 members to 10, but Symphony performances generate a life of their own.

Starting with their Thursday gig, the result of Mrs. Hudec "hitting up" the local senior citizen center, word spread to area nursing homes, Ms. Ellis said.

Soon the band booked two or three appearances daily, eventually landing invitations to the State Fair of Texas, Marshall's Fire Ant Festival (where the band donned antennae) and the Christmas parade in Natchitoches, La.

Former President Ronald Reagan, former Gov. Bill Clements and the late Sam Walton, have gotten wind of the Symphony's act, Ms. Ellis said. The Symphony also inspired similar groups, including the Silver Threads of Pittsburg, Ms. Ellis said.

"It all happened by word-of-mouth. Once folks heard us play, they asked if we would travel and enjoying what we do, we've been here, there and yonder," Ms. Ellis said.

Woman of waves commands, gets respect from her male Coast Guard crew

By Greg Orwig
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

CORPUS CHRISTI, — Tacked above Lt. J.G. Deirdre Doherty's desk is a cartoon that shows a sailor asking a female officer, "And what's a woman like you doing on a ship like this?"

"Commanding it," the woman replies.

Which is exactly what Doherty, 26, has been doing for two years aboard the Coast Guard cutter Key Biscayne, based in Corpus Christi. But, unlike the female cartoon character, Doherty says, her all-male crew has ignored her gender and showed her the respect owed to a commanding officer.

The Coast Guard, she said, has taken the lead among military services in seeking gender equality. Women have been eligible for assignment to any mission in the Coast Guard since restrictions on sea and aviation duties were lifted in 1977.

"The Navy is now opening its doors to women on some combat ships, but it's been a long struggle, and they'll have to go through the same process women in the Coast Guard went through 10 years ago," Doherty said.

"In the Coast Guard, the equality is already there. I think a lot of women are starting to look in our direction. This is the best service to be in if you're a woman."

The percentage of women enrolled in the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn., has nearly doubled, from 15 percent in Doherty's 1990 graduating class to 28 percent in this year's freshman class.

Her first assignment after graduating from the Coast Guard Academy was as weapons officer aboard a 270-foot cutter based in Boston. The primary mission of the ship was counter narcotics and environmental law enforcement, Doherty said.

"We'd go out on five- to seven-week deployments and my roommate was the only other woman on board," she said. "So there was the two of us and 95 guys. But we were always treated as junior officers and not treated as female junior officers."

In 1992, she was given command of the 110-foot cutter Key Biscayne, which patrols the Gulf of Mexico from Port O'Connor to Brownsville, enforcing environmental regulations and conducting search-and-rescue operations.

The highlight of Doherty's tour in Corpus Christi which ends this month when she returns to the Coast Guard Academy as a company officer, was the rescue of a burning 400-foot Spanish cargo ship in September 1992.

"The captain spoke Spanish and the crew spoke Romanian, and there was only one interpreter. It was really interesting," Doherty said with a chuckle. "They got the engine room fire out, but it started spreading up through the electrical system, so we were putting out fires one deck at a time.

The World in brief

■ Veterans, not politicians, heroes of day

OMAHA BEACH — They look no different from the other guys who hang out at the Grange Hall or the ones who bow in the Friday league. But talk to them, the heroes of Omaha and Utah Beach and the others, and they have a thousand tales to tell.

That is just the point. Most led ordinary lives before their supremely testing moments on D-Day, and ordinary lives afterwards as well. Most do not see themselves as heroes, and they talk hesitantly, if at all, about the scenes of carnage that met them on that grey morning in 1944.

Yet, as Donald Boyce, 69 years old, from Carmichael, Calif., said here in Normandy this weekend, they got the job done. A jumpmaster in a C-47 that dropped one of the first sticks of paratroopers from the 101st Airborne Division over Ste. Mere Eglise in the pre-dawn hours, he still marvels at it all, a half-century later.

"Somehow or other," he said, "a bunch of people who were only civilians they told us what to do, they trained us — and we went out and battled a professional army and made Europe free."

■ Kantor signals Japan trade deal

WASHINGTON —- U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor signaled Monday that the Clinton administration would be ready for a partial trade deal with Japan, jettisoning the hard-nosed, all-or-nothing approach with which the administration first confronted Tokyo.

Kantor, speaking to reporters in Paris where he was participating in a meeting of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, said of the current negotiations with Japan: "You want to make progress where you can. This is a long-term situation and you won't resolve all the problems overnight." He added: "It would be immature to become so impatient that we rejected market-opening advances under the guise of wanting a number of deals at any one time."

Kantor's remarks were only the latest in a series of subtle shifts in the Clinton Administration's trade policy toward Japan, as it has learned the hard way that it does not have as much leverage over Tokyo as it initially thought.

■ North Korea: Sanctions mean war

SEOUL — As the Clinton administration continued consultations with its allies over how to calibrate economic sanctions against North Korea for its defiance of nuclear inspectors, the Communist government issued its most strident and ominous warning yet, declaring that "sanctions mean outright war."

The statement, which was combined with an unusually specific threat against the president of South Korea, Kim Young Sam, was issued by the Committee for Peaceful Unification of the Fatherland, the group within the North Korean government that oversees inter-Korea affairs.

While American and South Korean officials have grown somewhat inured to Pyongyang's often-inflated rhetoric, the comments Monday clearly prompted concern, and there were small signs of increased military readiness here.

■ Air crash kills 160 in China

BEIJING — China's overstressed and fast-growing aviation industry suffered its worst single air disaster Monday when a Russian-built passenger jet crashed near the ancient northwestern capital of Xian, killing all 160 passengers and crew members.

In separate incidents, a Dragonair flight from the Chinese city of Nanjing to Hong Kong made an emergency landing that injured eight passengers. And, Monday night, a Chinese domestic flight originating in southern Fujian Province was hijacked to Taiwan.

Monday's crash came as China has placed record orders for new American passenger jets and just this week agreed to lease five more Russian airliners to service the unabated growth in passenger miles, which are up another 20 percent this year after record growth in 1992 and 1993.

Aid agencies struggle with mounting crisis

RUHANGO, Rwanda (AP) — As the sun set Monday behind a smoky field of sick, starving and dying people, another body was bundled into a blanket and carried away to a large burial pit.

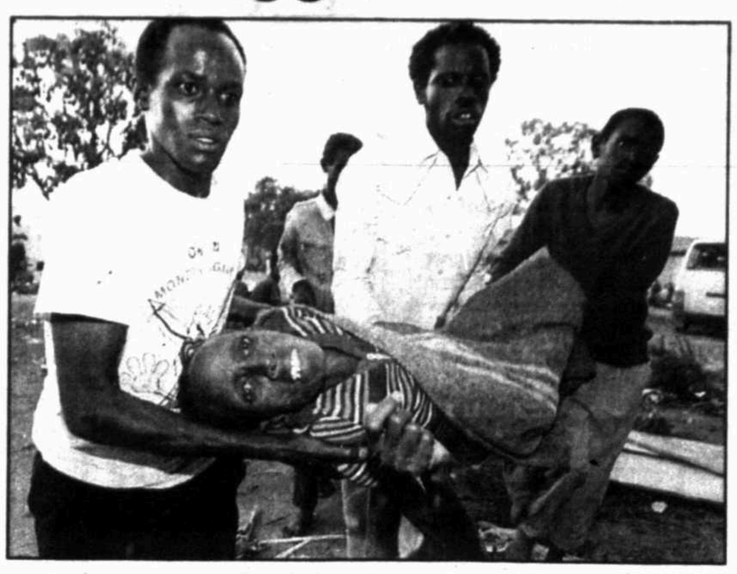

It is a scene repeated at least 20 times a day here as skeletal victims pour into Ruhango from the front line of Rwanda's civil war 15 miles away.

But there are no foreign aid workers in Ruhango, no clean water, barely any food, no new medicine for these forgotten victims. And as long as fighting rages, aid seems very far away.

"We can't cope with the situation alone. I don't know that we can do much more," said Margit Pesonem, a Finnish Red Cross worker at the agency's hospital in Nyanza, about 15 miles southwest of Ruhango.

Most aid agencies have pulled out of Rwanda to escape the bloodletting. An estimated 200,000 people have been massacred there, U.N. peacekeepers have been brutally attacked, and Hutu-led government troops are fighting rebels of the Tutsi-led Rwanda Patriotic Front.

Aid groups feeding the estimated 300,000 Rwandans at a refugee camp in neighboring Tanzania say they could do the same in Rwanda — if it were safe.

Workers at a makeshift health clinic carry a starving woman inside for treatment Monday at Ruhango, 30 miles southwest of Kigali, Rwanda.

But attracting aid to Rwanda has been difficult from the start. In April, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali called it a "scandal" when only four nations responded to his appeal to take part in a peacekeeping mission here.

The rebels say the government scared off relief organizations when government-backed militias seized civilians from the agencies' care and executed them. Such atrocities were reported shortly after President Juvenal Habyarimana was killed in a mysterious plane crash April 6, sparking the massacres and reigniting the civil war.

On Monday, government forces struck at rebels near the southwestern town of Kabgayi, their first major counterattack since the civil war was rekindled two months ago.

The Red Cross is one of the few agencies still active in Rwanda. It did not learn of the situation in Ruhango until journalists visited the site Sunday.

"They have no food, but we have no food either," said Dr. Mike Van Joost, at the Red Cross hospital.

A convoy of all-terrain vehicles carrying food was due to leave Monday from Burundi for Ruhango, but there was no telling when it might arrive. In the meantime, more bodies pile up and more survivors try to get to Nyanza.

On Saturday, there were 100 patients at the Nyanza hospital, most of them evacuees from Kabgayi, the town at the front line. By Monday, the number was at 143, with two doctors to handle the load.

Up the winding, tree-lined road to Ruhango, some 2,000 people were crammed into a makeshift health clinic run by a few Rwandan doctors.

They seemed to spend most of their time wandering through a dusty field full of huddled people.

Assassinated PLO aide's widow has key role in self-rule

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Six years ago, the Israelis assassinated Intisar al-Wazir's husband. Now they will have to deal with her across the negotiating table.

PLO chief Yasser Arafat has made her the minister for social welfare in the Palestinian National Authority, which will govern the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho until elections.

The job will inevitably bring her face-to-face with Israeli leaders who ordered the assassination of her husband, Khalil al-Wazir, Arafat's revered military commander and strategist.

It is a situaton certain to be duplicated as the Israelis and Palestinians try to make peace after half a century of war.

Al-Wazir, better known by the nom de guerre Abu Jihad, or Father of the Holy War, was shot to death in the early hours of April 16, 1988, with three bodyguards in an Israeli commando raid on his villa in a Tunis suburb.

His 52-year-old widow vividly remembers that night, when she stood over her husband's bullet-riddled body with her children expecting to be killed herself, and then the decades of exile.

Mrs. al-Wazir, elegantly clad in an orange dress in the same villa, was reluctant to say just how she would deal with the Israelis, but told The Associated Press: "We were enemies engaged in all kinds of war. Now we're in a battle for peace, so we should focus on that."

She accepts the "new reality" of a peace accord that is less than she and many other Palestinians had hoped for, returning "only a small portion of Palestine" — the Gaza Strip and Jericho in the West Bank — rather than all the territory Israel captured in 1967.

"This is only the beginning. It's up to us to make it work, make something out of it," she said.

The Israeli withdrawal, she said, was "a historic achievement and ... a very happy moment for me. It's like something that was taken away from you has been restored. ... Yet I still feel I'm one of those fedayeen (guerrillas), just with a different job to do now."

So far, Arafat has named 15 people to the 24-member authority, which will have executive powers in the newly autonomous Gaza and Jericho.

Some Palestinians he approached have refused to join it, reflecting widespread criticism of the Sept. 13 agreement with the Israelis. Many Palestinians say Arafat gave too much for too little, and dislike his autocratic style of leading the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Mrs. al-Wazir's appointment is popular because of her welfare work with the families of Palestinians killed in the struggle.

British millionaire gets 9 years for killing wife

CADIZ, Spain (AP) — A British millionaire convicted of bludgeoning his wife to death in 1992 was sentenced to nine years in jail Monday by a Spanish court.

Jeremy Lowndes, 65, also was ordered to pay $30,000 in compensation to his stepson, John Armine Wodehose, who was at the Lowndes' luxurious villa in Sotogrande, just north of the Rock of Gibraltar, at the time of the killing.

In its verdict, the three judges said Lowndes was depressed and had been drinking when he got into a fight with his wife, Carmel.

The reason for the fight was not determined, but the court said Lowndes proceeded to beat his 68-year-old wife repeatedly, first with his fists and then with an heavy, unspecified instrument.

Pursuing charges will benefit system

Former Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski has been a powerful player on Capitol Hill for many of the 35 years he has been in Washington, D.C. In fact, according to Congressional Quarterly, he has been heard to brag that his committee is the House of Representatives. In one regard, he's correct. Rostenkowski's influence and control over matters coming before the House is tremendous.

That's why it is important that the charges of public corruption brought against him recently be fully pursued. Congress does not need the "black eye" from another scandal, but if Rostenkowski is found guilty of the charges against him, the members of Congress should be the first to call for reform of the system.

Rostenkowski was indicted last Tuesday on 17 felony counts that he plundered nearly $700,000 from the government and had ghost employees kick back paychecks to his office. The indictment also asserted that Rostenkowski had a future son-in-law employed who did no work and that the congressman received personal gifts from the House stationery store that he charged to a congressional account and lavished on family members and friends. The gifts included 60 wooden armchairs, 250 pieces of china and 26 pieces of luggage.

U.S. Attorney Eric H. Holder Jr. said that Rostenkowski's conduct was a "betrayal of the public for personal gain. In essence this indictment alleges that Congressman Rostenkowski used his elective office to perpetuate an extensive fraud on the American people."

Rostenkowski certainly should be afforded the benefit of the doubt given to all people charged with criminal offenses. That is the way the American system of justice is designed, and it is the best system yet devised by mankind. Realistically, however, the political system in the United States affords great opportunity for corruption, and that opportunity must be reduced if at all possible. Thus, if Rostenkowski is found guilty of the charges, he should be punished to the fullest extent of the law.

Tragically, the charges against Rostenkowski no doubt will only reaffirm in the mind of many Americans the casual assumption that all who serve in the Congress are corrupt or unworthy of public appreciation for doing a difficult and oftentimes thankless job. The truth is that many who serve in the Congress are decent, kind, loyal Americans who do that job out of a desire to make life better for all in this land.

Rooting out those who are corrupt is essential to keeping the system worthy of the American electorate.

White House staffers need humility lesson

Slowly but surely, the Clinton administration appears to be learning that the best way to handle a bad situation is quickly. The dismissal of David Watkins, director of administration, for hopping a presidential helicopter to a Maryland golf course at taxpayers' expense, was not only right, but properly prompt.

That said, the White House staff needs a re-education program — make that a presidential chewing out. The president is not one to hand down dicta, but he ought to make an exception for the people who work for him.

In plain terms, some of these folks are getting swelled heads and think they are Very Important People. It's not unique to this administration.

It would be uplifting to be a fly on the wall if Clinton were to round up the senior staff, shut the door and proceed to lecture:

"Nobody elected you. The only importance you have is derived from your association with the person who was elected — me. And you will only be associated with me only so long as you understand that your function is to help me to do the job I was elected to do.

"This incident has caused me great embarrassment. It has made my job more difficult, not less. You work on the people's tab and time. You play on your own time and at your own expense. Your hat sizes have not changed because you were hired to work in the White House. Period. Dismissed."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, June 7th, the 158th day of 1994. There are 207 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

June 7, 1769, is recognized by Kentucky's Historical Society as the date that frontiersman Daniel Boone first began to explore the present-day Bluegrass State.

On this date:

In 1654, Louis XIV was crowned king of France in Rheims.

In 1776, Richard Henry Lee of Virginia proposed to the Continental Congress a resolution calling for a Declaration of Independence.

In 1848, French postimpressionist painter Paul Gauguin was born in Paris.

In 1864, Abraham Lincoln was nominated for another term as president at his party's convention in Baltimore.

In 1892, the Republican National Convention began meeting in Minneapolis. In the days that followed, the delegates nominated President Benjamin Harrison for re-election and Whitelaw Reid for vice president.

In 1929, the sovereign state of Vatican City came into existence when copies of the Lateran Treaty were exchanged in Rome.

In 1948, the Communists completed their takeover of Czechoslovakia with the resignation of President Eduard Benes.

WILLIAM SAFIRE
We need to take stand in reactor roulette

WASHINGTON — Stalinist North Korea watched the way Serbia diddled the "Great Powers" of the West — a promise here, a false concession there — and proceeded to use the same technique on the "Great Powers" of the East.

Safire

Duplicity worked again; years of hand-wringing diplomacy gave North Korea time to produce enough fissionable material for perhaps a half-dozen nuclear bombs.

We must now decide whether to continue the protracted runaround, hoping vainly that Kim Il Sung wants only to be bought off, or to enforce international law — which would require the credible threat of war. We have seen how the lack of such resolve failed in the West; now we will see if we can make our threat believable in the East.

Once again, the U.S. will take the lead in trying to marshal the forces of its allies. Under color of a U.N. Security Council resolution, we will seek to coerce the nuclear lawbreaker by means of economic sanctions.

That means blockade. Japan must stop the flow of hard-currency remittances to the dictatorship from its Korean residents. China and South Korea must close their borders to all trade with North Korea, including vital oil. And U.S. armed forces must interdict sea supply of Pyongyang.

North Korea has said it would consider any of that an act of war. That's accurate; a blockade, even euphemized as "sanctions" and legitimated by world bodies, is an act of war.

What would North Korea, with strangulation in prospect, then do?

One alternative is the one we hope for: to recognize that the world's threat of war is credible and to "join the family of nations." Because no more reactor roulette would be tolerated, the North would back down before its plutonium could be developed into bombs and placed on missiles being built to threaten Seoul, Tokyo and Shanghai.

The North's other alternative is the one we dread: to launch Korean War II and invade the South. That would engage the United States, with 37,000 troops on hand to back up longstanding treaty commitments; we would then be in a real war with an enemy that fought us to a standstill two generations ago.

What should the U.S. do to give Kim Il Sung incentives to end nuclear blackmail and admit inspectors?

First, get absolute, public assurances from Japan that no leakage will be permitted, and that it will wage economic war. Russia should also announce its intention to isolate the nuclear outlaw.

Second, tell South Korea that its days of appeasement and complacency are over — no more only 4 percent of GNP for defense — and full-scale mobilization is in order; its forces would bear the brunt of the first attack, as U.S. bombers destroy the North's nuclear potential.

Third, reach an understanding with China that neutrality is not enough: if the North besieges Seoul, allies expect Chinese "volunteers" to stream across the Yalu to threaten North Korea's capital.

CHARLEY REESE
Map shows Israeli-PLO peace accord flaws

There's nothing like a map to bring you down from the clouds of optimism and hope to the rocky road of reality. The so-called peace agreement between Israel and the PLO isn't going to work. There's going to be continuing trouble.

Reese

This becomes obvious from a map of the Gaza Strip produced by the Foundation for Middle East Peace. Superficial news reports certainly give the impression that the Israelis have "withdrawn from Gaza." The map corrects that false impression.

About half of the coast remains under exclusive Israeli control. This control is anchored by a large area in the south with 13 Jewish settlements, and in the north by another area with three Jewish settlements. In the middle of the strip, also on the coast and separating Gaza City from the large refugee camps, is a third Israeli enclave around the settlement Metzarim.

If the Israelis aren't willing to get out of Gaza, an overcrowded hell on earth, then this whole exercise is a farce. Rather than a move toward peace, as it is being billed, it increasingly looks to me like a well-executed ambush of Palestinian hopes. They are being set up to fail, and to fight a civil war among themselves.

Already the theme has been sounded by some American Zionists — the Palestinians may not be ready for autonomy. This is equivalent to a slave owner in 1860 saying the slaves may not be ready for emancipation. There are two points to be made here.

No. 1, the Palestinians' right to self-determination and self-government on their own land is a political and moral issue. Whether they can govern themselves well or poorly is irrelevant to their right to self-government.

No. 2, the Israelis have done everything possible to make sure they don't succeed. The economy has been destroyed by Israel's periodic closure of the occupied territories, thus unemploying thousands of Palestinians who go into Israel to work. Palestinian leaders have been exiled, assassinated and imprisoned. Schools have been closed and more than a 1,000 people have been killed.

Furthermore the Oslo agreement retains Israeli control over land and water. In other words, despite high hopes and high-blown rhetoric, it grants limited autonomy to people but no autonomy over the land. The Jewish settlements remain, and Palestinian police are forbidden to disarm armed Jewish militants who go into Jericho or Palestinian areas of Gaza.

It was well known and written about in Israel that the Israeli government initially encouraged the formation of Hamas, the Islamic group, to counter the PLO. Now people who have been in Gaza report that there has been an increase in gun smuggling — guns from Israel going to Gaza. There is one thing the Israelis are as good at as anybody in the world, and that's security. If guns are going from Israelis to Palestinians in Gaza, it's because the Israeli government want them to.

And why is that? So Hamas, the PLO and other dissident factions can kill one other. Under the Oslo agreement, unless the PLO agrees to be Israel's enforcer, it won't be "living up to the agreement." A sure formula for civil conflict in an area already virtually destroyed economically and socially by Israeli occupation.

Then, of course, the massive Zionist propaganda machine will metaphorically throw up its hands and say, "You see. We tried. These terrible Palestinians just can't get along with anybody."

Remember there would be no conflict but for a decision by Europeans to colonize Palestine. The mainstream Palestinians have said they will settle for the West Bank and Gaza — about 18 percent of their country. If the Israelis continue to resist even this, the conflict will go on for decades.

DAVE BARRY
Most Americans have horrible science IQs

What is your "Science IQ"? To find out, take this multiple-choice quiz:

1. Tides are caused by:
(a) Gravity leaking out of the moon.
(b) Clams burping in unison.
(c) Sen. Howell Heflin.

Barry

2. What is magnetism?
(a) Invisible rays that shoot out of a compass.
(b) The force that causes dogs to bark when you ring the doorbell.
(c) The molecular attraction that forms between refrigerators and little ceramic vegetables.

3. The Earth rotates:
(a) Around the cosine.
(b) At night.
(c) In a direction away from Cleveland.

ANSWERS: The correct scientific answer to all three questions is: "d. No Opinion."

If you did poorly on this quiz, do not feel bad: When it comes to scientific knowledge, a great many Americans are every bit as stupid as you are. This was the conclusion of a recent nationwide survey reported in The New York Times (motto: "All The News Blah Blah Blah"), which showed that Americans had the same basic level of scientific literacy as road salt.

This does not surprise me. I constantly see evidence that Americans do not understand basic scientific principles. For example, the great mathematician and dead person Sir Isaac Newton (who also invented gravity) proved in 1583 that, no matter how hard you push, you cannot fit an object into an airplane overhead storage compartment if the object is way bigger than the compartment. Americans still do not understand this. I am writing these words on a flight from Miami to San Francisco, a flight that I frankly thought was never going to leave the gate because the aisle seemed to be permanently blocked by a man and a woman who — after taking approximately 15 minutes to figure out that row 19 was the one between row 18 and row 20 — attempted to stow a wicker basket that, to judge from its size and weight, contained an elk. I can personally vouch for the weight, because at one point in their struggle the couple (this is true) dropped the basket on my head, after which they glared at me. I think they thought I was trying to harm their elk.

These Americans would definitely benefit from better science training, similar to what I received in Mrs. West's eighth-grade science class at Harold C. Crittenden Junior High School in Armonk, N.Y. I vividly remember Mrs. West standing at the blackboard, drawing a diagram to illustrate the electron, which is a tiny particle of electricity found in extension cords, while the entire class stared with rapt attention at Tom Parker, who was listening to a concealed earphone attached to a transistor radio tuned to a critical World Series game between the Yankees and the Pirates. Mrs. West, diagraming away, would tell us an important fact about electrons, such as that they mate for life, and Tom would signal that, say, Bobby Richardson had singled, and the classroom would erupt with muffled cheers, and Mrs. West would turn around, startled, thinking, whoa, these young people are INTO electricity.

Tragically, many Americans did not receive this caliber of science training, which is why they did so poorly in the survey. According to the Times story, one of the questions that most people answered incorrectly was:

"Which of these is the nearest living relative of the dinosaur, Tyrannosaurus rex? (a) A chicken; (b) A crocodile; (c) A lizard; (d) An elephant."

The correct answer, of course, is: Sen. Howell Heflin.

No, seriously, the correct answer, according to The New York Times, is: A chicken. I'm serious. Your immediate reaction to this is: "Wait a minute. The giant, fearsome creature that ate a car AND a lawyer in 'Jurassic Park' is related to a CHICKEN?"

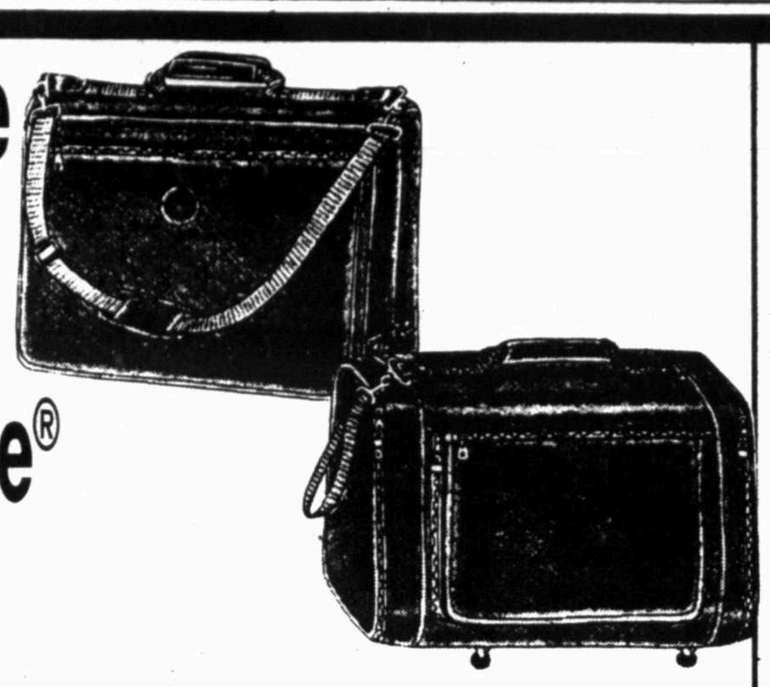

Yes. By studying the bones of dinosaurs that, fortunately, died in a standing position at the American Museum of Natural History, scientists have been able to determine that Tyrannosaurus rex used to stride through the prehistoric jungle, its massive weight causing the Earth to tremble with each step, until it located its prey; and then, with a horrifying roar audible for miles ("COCK-A-DOODLE-DOOOO"), it would lunge downward and administer the awesome Peck of Death to a kernel of prehistoric corn weighing upwards of 3,000 pounds.

But the point is that we need to improve our scientific literacy, and the place to start is with our young people. I think we should have a program wherein our top scientific minds go into the public schools and lecture to the students, and if the students fool around, our top scientific minds should whack them on the head with slide rules.

Speaking of which, I want to stress that my mental faculties were in no way affected by the elk-basket blow to my head head head head head hey look there are BIG spiders on the airplane wing.

High-ranking GOP legislator faces savings and loan lawsuit

■ Federal regulators sued Hyde year ago for his role as director of Chicago S&L that failed in 1991.

By Richard Keil
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A prominent politician has for months been trying to distance himself from a savings and loan failure, saying he's done no wrong.

Another story about Bill Clinton and his Whitewater-related problems? No, it's about Henry Hyde, a senior House Republican, and Clyde Federal Savings and Loan, a failed thrift on whose board Hyde once sat.

Hyde was sued a year ago by federal regulators for his role as a director of Clyde, a suburban Chicago S&L that went under in 1991 at a cost to taxpayers of at least $68 million.

Hyde, the only member of Congress to be sued in connection with the S&L debacle, says he had no role in the institution's demise. "The judge in the case has been saying encouraging things, but I'm still in the damn case," Hyde said in an interview.

In its civil suit, the government alleges that Hyde and the S&L's other 11 directors "carelessly, negligently and with gross negligence mismanaged Clyde" and that they ignored warnings and recommendations from regulators. The government hopes to recover more than $17 million.

Hyde insists that as an outside director at the thrift, he was uninvolved with, or unaware of, the S&L's doings.

"I never had a loan. I never had a transaction. I never had anything with the bank," Hyde said. "I never participated in any of their investments or anything. I was about as arm's length as you can get."

■ More national news/6B

Still, documents indicate Hyde played a regular role in the board's decisions, including one to trade in risky commodities options. The arrangement, severely criticized by regulators, ultimately cost the S&L at least $10 million.

Records show trades with Refco Inc., the Chicago commodities trading firm that has been scrutinized for helping Hillary Rodham Clinton generate nearly $100,000 from an initial $1,000 investment.

The S&L's financial documents, minutes of board meetings and other records obtained by The Associated Press counter one of Hyde's basic arguments — that the thrift was "solvent and flourishing" when he left the board in July 1984.

The Office of Thrift Supervision oversees the S&L industry and the Resolution Trust Corp., which was formed to clean up failed thrifts. OTS prepares quarterly balance sheets on S&Ls.

In the first quarter of 1984, Clyde had deposits and assets worth $432 million and liabilities of $463 million, leaving it almost $31 million in the hole.

By three months later, the situation had hardly improved. In June 1984, the month before Hyde left, the S&L's debts still exceeded its assets by $30.4 million.

"If so, I certainly wasn't told. That would surprise me, (but) I'm not disputing the facts," Hyde said of the thrift's financial condition during his board tenure, which began in December 1981. He was paid more than $10,000 in director's fees during that time.

Hyde said the thrift's problems began well after he left.

Less than two years after Hyde's departure, the S&L began operating under a supervisory agreement with regulators, usually the last step before a troubled institution is shut down. Under such arrangements, S&Ls are stripped of the right to make almost any independent investment or loan decisions. The thrift was taken over by regulators in 1990.

A focal point of the suit against Hyde and others is the options trading arrangement, which the RTC criticized for its lack of internal controls, especially since no one on the Clyde board or staff had any experience in such high-risk investments.

Minutes from the Clyde board meeting of Sept. 26, 1983, show that Hyde seconded the motion that ultimately led to the options trading program.

Mormons select new leader after death of Benson

N.Y. Times News Service

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints announced on Monday the selection of Howard W. Hunter, an 86-year-old former corporate lawyer, as its 14th president, recognized as the supreme authority and "prophet, seer and revelator" by the world's 8.7 million Mormons.

As successor to Ezra Taft Benson, who died at 94 on May 30, Hunter heads a church that is rapidly growing but is also facing lingering disputes about feminism, intellectual freedom, a recent series of excommunications and, indeed, about the system that has a top leadership advanced in age and in some cases failing in health.

The new leader sought to deliver a conciliatory message at a news conference on Monday at Mormon headquarters in Salt Lake City.

"I pray that we might treat each other with more kindness, more courtesy, more humility and patience and forgiveness," he said. "To those who have transgressed or been offended, we say come back. To those who are hurt and struggling and afraid, we say let us stand with you and dry your tears."

But Hunter also signaled continuity in the church's policies by appointing Gordon B. Hinckley and Thomas S. Monson his first and second counselors. Both had served Benson in those positions. The president and his two counselors constitute the First Presidency, the church's top executive and policy-making authority.

Hunter was next in line for the presidency as senior member of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles, the church's highest level of leadership after its president. His ordination by the Quorum to the church's top position took place on Sunday in the church's Temple.

Hinckley, who will turn 84 this month, is also next in line to become the church's president, which is a lifetime post. He is followed in seniority on the Quorum of Apostles by Monson, who is 66, and then Boyd K. Packer, the new acting president of the Quorum, who is 69.

Rare tiger fatally mauls zoo worker

MIAMI (AP) — A rare white Bengal tiger fatally mauled a zookeeper Monday after he mistakenly entered its outdoor exhibit. Zoo officials had no plans to destroy the 350-pound predator, saying "the tiger was just being a tiger."

David Marshall's death was believed accidental but was being investigated by Metro-Dade homicide officers as well as officials of Dade County's Metrozoo, police spokesman Israel Reyes said.

"There were several safety features that apparently were bypassed. We have more questions than answers right now," zoo spokesman Ron Magill said.

The tiger, known as Lucknow and one of Metrozoo's best-known attractions, is known to be dangerous.

"As beautiful, as majestic, as approachable as these animals seem to be, there's the old saying, 'You can take the animal out of the wild, but you can't take the wild out of the animal,' " a visibly upset Magill said. "Unfortunately, that's been proven in a tragic way today."

The keeper was mauled at 7:30 a.m., when the cats in the exhibit are moved.

Magill said all safety features were in place, including a sign warning that the tiger was out on its moated grounds.

Workers had looked for Marshall after failing to raise him by radio. They moved in a truck to retrieve Marshall's body and the tiger was moved to an isolated pen.

Marshall, a veteran of 11 years at Metrozoo, had no pulse when found in the tiger's lair.

Labor statistics

AUSTIN — The campaigns of Democratic incumbent Gov. Ann Richards and GOP challenger George W. Bush are putting their own spin on the latest labor statistics.

Richards campaign spokesman Chuck McDonald says there are more than half a million more people employed in Texas now than when Richards took office in 1991.

Bush spokeswoman Deborah Burstion-Wade said Monday that May 1994 statistics show the number of unemployed Texans has grown by 87,600.

In addition, U.S. Bureau of Labor statistics show Texas employment in May was 6.7 percent, while the national rate was 6 percent, Ms. Burstion-Wade said. The January 1991 rate was 6.28 percent, she said.

McDonald said Texas "did real great for the last three years, and the country was sucking wind. The reality is they are just catching up with Texas."

Human services

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards has named Carlela K. Vogel of Fort Worth to the Texas Board of Human Services for a term extending to Jan. 20, 1999.

Ms. Vogel, 51, owns a public relations and marketing firm.

She is president-elect of Communities in Schools and is on the board of directors of the Women's Center of Tarrant County. She also is a member of the executive committees of the Adolescent Pregnancy Board, Children's Advocacy Network of Tarrant County and Youth Impact Centers.

Ms. Vogel will replace Karen Heltzel of Duncanville, who resigned.

The appointment, announced Monday, is subject to Senate confirmation.

Burns becomes Midland mayor

■ Bobby Burns, council members are sworn in before standing-room-only audience at City Hall.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A new mayor and a new City Council member were sworn into office before a standing-room-only audience in the council chambers at City Hall on Monday.

Bobby Burns took the oath of mayor while Ed Vogler officially became City Councilman for District 3. In addition, Claudia Egan, District 4 representative, was sworn in to serve her second term on the council.

"I think our city is in the perfect position to move ahead," Burns said shortly after assuming the position of mayor.

Burns recognized out-going Mayor J.D. Faircloth for his dedication and hard work to the city. "I appreciate him leaving this city in good shape so we can move ahead," Burns said.

Faircloth — who lost to Burns in a more than 3-to-1 vote in May — received a plaque signed by all the council members and a standing ovation from the audience. Faircloth served one term as mayor, which followed his service as an

Trial to begin for second man in Musick death

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Jury selection concluded Monday afternoon in the capital murder trial of the second man charged in the 1993 shooting death of a Midland hairdresser.

Michael Scott Thomas, 20, of Midland, is on trial for capital murder, aggravated robbery and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Thomas is charged with the April 14, 1993, shooting death of Tommy Edward Musick, 48, of Midland. Musick was shot four times in the back of the head and left dying on a county road. He died in the early morning hours of April 15 in an Odessa hospital.

Thomas is the co-defendant in the case. Ramsey Blake Harrell, 18, the other co-defendant, was convicted of murder Feb. 14 and sentenced to 12 years in prison. Harrell confessed to being the trigger man in the shooting.

Thomas remains free on a $25,000 bond he posted in August. He is under "house arrest."

Jury selection lasted all of Monday with a jury seated about 5:30 p.m. The seven-man, five-woman jury will begin hearing evidence this morning. An alternate was also selected for the jury.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said he anticipated the trial will end by Friday.

A Midland County grand jury re-indicted Thomas last month adding the additional two charges to the former indictment of capital murder.

The district attorney presented evidence to the grand jury resulting in the new indictment. Both men were charged with capital murder in the case in May 1993, but the jury found Harrell guilty of a lesser charge of murder.

Schorre said the additional charges were filed to give the jury "a couple of extra choices." He added that the prosecution won't change from the Harrell trial.

Schorre said the evidence and the testimony will basically be the same un-

Ray Sharp, a colonel in the Confederate Air Force finds much meaning in the "CAF" lettering at base of the flagpole at CAF Headquarters at Midland International Airport.

Colonel in CAF takes pride in his heritage

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Ray Sharp is proud of his heritage — all the way from the old Missouri mining town of Joplin to war-ravaged Europe and fighting in World War II to the West Texas oil town of Midland.

And he is very much a part of them all and of the Midland-based Confederate Air Force, which is "keeping a heritage alive."

Sharp, who is a sentimental colonel in the CAF, brought a bit of his historic old hometown, Joplin, to Midland in the planning and building of Memorial Garden, which is dedicated to World War II veterans at the CAF headquarters at Midland International Airport.

"When I look up to the flag" flying at half-staff and "see that missing-man formation going over, it's history," Sharp said following the dedication of the Memorial Garden on the 50th anniversary of the Allied forces' invasion of Normandy on D-Day on June 6, 1944.

Sharp was an 18-year-old paratrooper when he first served in combat following D-Day.

Taking that extra step to ensure her students were on the road to becoming decision makers garnered Brandi Cox the EPIC Teacher of the Year Award.

The fourth grade teacher at Henderson Elementary School did the best job of 60 local teachers in incorporating Effective Parenting Information for Children into school lessons, according to Centers for Children & Families.

"Ms. Cox used the lessons at least once a week. She went above and beyond what was required," said Teresa Warren, Centers development coordinator.

Oscar Bejil, Centers Parent Resource Coordinator, said, "It's difficult to sum up the wide variety of positive life skills that EPIC instruction provides. The philosophy behind this program is to start training children at a very early age on how to become responsible adults, citizens and parents."

While Ms. Cox has taught for five years, this was her first year to incorporate EPIC into her lessons.

The centers developed the lessons, which include activities on decision making, group relations skills, problem solving, and learning rights and responsibilities.

Victim is in serious condition

Staff Report

A Garden City man was in serious condition at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center Monday after being shot four times during a robbery.

Pablo Flores Azua, 24, was found by officers about 5 a.m. Monday at Sandstone Apartments after residents reported shots being fired in the area, according to police officials. Azua had been shot three times in the chest and once in the knee by a small caliber weapon and was transported to the hospital, police said.

Officials said three males were apparently attempting a robbery when one of the subjects shot Azua, and the men fled the scene.

No further information on the incident was available Monday. An investigation into the incident continues.

at-large City Council member.

Recognition was also paid to outgoing District 3 representative L.D. "Buddy" Sipes, who did not seek re-election. He was given a bronze plaque.

Vogler, a civic leader and former chairman of the airport advisory board, presented comments on Midland's progress and made reassurances of the need for the planned new airport terminal.

Ms. Egan also addressed the crowd. She expressed her appreciation for being able to continue to serve on the council and said she will continue to work to help Midland prosper.

The taking of oaths was preceded by an invocation by the Rev. A.E. Burns, the new mayor's father, and a presentation of the colors by the Midland Police Department color guards.

Cheryl T. Sparks, president of Howard College in Big Spring, was the keynote speaker. Her message, she said, was inspired by Stephen R. Covey, author of "Seven Habits of Highly Effective People".

Ms. Sparks said communities that prosper, and effective public servants, possess qualities of honesty, integrity, fairness and justice.

"And Midland wants that type of community," she said.

Ms. Sparks urged the council to continue with their "sense of purpose and sense of unity."

In excess of 150 people attended the swearing-in ceremony, estimated City Secretary Bill Clanton. Among those attending were three former mayors, State Rep. Tom Craddick, and Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman.

TRIAL: Thomas faces capital murder charge in Musick death less Thomas testifies and contradicts any testimony from Harrell.

The trial will begin today in the 238th District Court, which is the same court where Harrell was tried.

Harrell's highly publicized trial focused on his defense that he shot Musick, a homosexual, for making sexual advances toward Thomas.

Harrell testified in his own behalf during his trial in February.

According to Harrell's testimony, he and Thomas were in the driveway of Thomas' home with Musick, in Musick's car, when Musick allegedly made a sexual advance toward Thomas. Harrell said he became afraid and shot Musick in the back of the head. He said he didn't recall pulling the trigger.

Harrell testified he was in shock after the shooting and indicated Thomas "took over" from there instructing him to clean up the blood and push Musick's body into the back seat of the vehicle. The men then drove Musick's car to a vacant field off a county road and dumped the body.

Harrell claimed the pair never intended to rob Musick of his money or vehicle. Harrell said after they dumped the body Thomas drove the car, and they left it near the airport and walked to Harrell's home.

The men returned to Harrell's home following the shooting. They were arrested there in the early morning hours of April 15.

Harrell could have been sentenced in the range of five to 99 years. Following the announcement of his 12-year sentence, the Lesbian/Gay Rights Lobby of Texas organized the "Justice For All" rally in Midland to protest the sentence.

COLONEL: Sharp brings part of heritage to Midland

(From 1B)

Horseshoe Cafe at Joplin: the 10-inch bronze letters "CAF" now for Confederate Air Force instead of "CAF" for "CAFE" without the "E."

"Soldiers of World War I, World War II, and the Korean War walked over these (10-inch) bronze letters when it said "CAFE," recalled Sharp, who has offices in Midland and Joplin as an agent for Childress Royalty Company and the farming-and-ranch operations of Acme Land Company.

"They (the GIs) went into (the cafe) and had breakfast, had lunch."

Back then, Joplin was a popular town and not just for GIs, miners and others. There was an Army post, Camp Crowder, nearby.

"Kansas and Oklahoma were dry," Sharp recalled, "and they bootlegged out of Joplin," which is in the southwest corner of Missouri near Kansas and Oklahoma.

At one time, there were 118 saloons and similar places in the mining town of 40,000.

In the 1960s, that all changed in the urban renewal of Joplin. The historic old buildings, including the Connor Hotel and the Horseshoe Cafe, were demolished.

Sharp managed to salvage the bronze cafe letters. And after three decades, they took on meaning in a more patriotic vein.

Sharp got involved in World War II in 1944 after he graduated from high school in Joplin.

He wound up in the United States Army at Camp Hood in Texas and, following D-Day, was among replacement troops for the Army's 82nd Airborne Division, which was involved in the D-Day invasion. At first, Sharp was assigned to Camp Lucky Strike just outside of Le-Havre, France.

Sharp was witness to much of the devastation in Europe — from France to Germany where many cities, such as Munich and Mannheim, were "totally destroyed" by Allied bombing.

Outside of Munich in 1945, Sharp was among Gen. George Patton's troops to liberate Jewish prisoners at the Dachau extermination camp, which was part of Adolf Hitler's Holocaust.

"It was not a pleasant thing," Sharp recalled. "It was terrible."

In these post-war years as he reflects on the 1939-1945 World War II period, Sharp, 68, said "in my later life" he wishes to continue working with the CAF and to do his part to instill patriotism into the minds and hearts of America's youth. His prayer is to "honor" the soldiers, sailors, and airmen "who lost their lives over there."

RECOGNIZE: Teacher receives award from Centers

(From 1B)

EPIC that I noticed is that is provides a simple, activity oriented way to present a variety of principles," Ms. Cox said. "These are the principles that we've always wanted to teach, but just didn't have an organized way to do it.

The teacher said her favorite lesson involved asking her fourth graders how they would spend $1 million dollars to benefit Midland public schools.

"It was a surprise to find out the students' perspectives of what was needed. They focused on smaller things — like basic classroom supplies — instead of larger items like a computer system."

Other EPIC Teacher of the Year nominees were Alison Montgomery from South Elementary School and Jan Loll from DeZavala Elementary School.

Ms. Montgomery, a third grade teacher, said, "I used the lessons for building self-esteem, teaching rights, responsibility, and decision making.

"Most of the lessons incorporate the same social skills and cooperative learning skills I was already teaching," Ms. Montgomery said.

"The lessons were about 10-30 minutes long. And once I knew the basic goals and concepts, it was easy to come up with ideas, especially with the wonderful teacher guide."

"I found that, through the EPIC lessons, my students became more responsible for their actions," Ms. Cox said.

Each of the three elementary schools in the program nominated one teacher for the EPIC award from their respective campus.

EPIC is a Centers program, and the centers are a member agency of United Way of Midland and Odessa. The EPIC program also includes parent workshops offered during the year at several Midland and Odessa locations.

As EPIC Teacher of the Year, Ms. Cox received a certificate from Centers.

Registration to be held for summer sessions at Sibley Learning Center

Staff Report

Registration is set for Saturday for several summer sessions at the Sibley Learning Center, 1307 E. Wadley Ave.

Registration hours that day will be 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Persons wanting additional information can call 684-6287.

The sessions are:

■ June 27-July 1:

— 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.: First grade will be taught by Kathleen Bears, a science lab teacher at St. Ann's School. A different group of animals will be investigated each day.

— 10 a.m. to noon: Second grade will be taught by Nancy Mercer, a life science teacher at Lee High School. The group also will be studying a variety of animals.

■ July 11-15:

— 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.: Third graders will be taught by Linda Pogue, a sixth-grade teacher at Crockett Elementary. Like with the first- and second-graders, these students will investigate various animals.

— 10 a.m. to noon: Fourth-grade students will be taught by Evelyn Grant, a fourth-grade teacher at Rusk Elementary. Students will explore an area of the Sibley pasture that has never been viewed by students before.

■ July 18-22:

— 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.: Fifth-graders will be taught by Jim Pogue, a fifth-grade teacher at Bowie Elementary. Students will do research of insects of West Texas.

— 9:30 a.m. to noon: Sixth-graders will be taught by Debbie Cockerell, a seventh-grade teacher at San Jacinto Junior High. Students will conduct original research on the pond at Sibley Learning Center.

NOTE: The classes, which are limited to 15 students per class, are for students entering that particular grade level in the fall of 1994.

Black women recall '42 battle to join women's corps

By Carol Rust
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — When President Franklin D. Roosevelt announced the formation of the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps in May 1942, the most difficult thing for Dovey Roundtree "was to knock down the doors of the United States Post Office and get the application to apply."

That's because Roundtree was black, the time was during segregation, and the town was Charlotte, N.C.

"They (at the post office) told me that they didn't know anything about it," she said. Her story was part of an oral history presented Saturday by Janet Sims-Wood at the Third Southern Conference on Women's History at Rice University.

"That was our first battle, which became across this country a campaign," said Sims-Wood, quoting Roundtree's account. "For if they could shut you out and you couldn't get in the door to get the application, that was an easy way to eliminate you."

The nearly 10,000 black women who served in the WAAC, later incorporated into the U.S. Army as the Women's Army Corps, overcame the gender barriers prevalent at that time, just like their white counterparts. But the black women were up against more than the Nazis when they joined the U.S. war effort: Their presence in the military was a constant battle against discrimination and segregation.

Sims-Wood, a historian at Howard University, has spent almost 10 years researching and interviewing black women who served as Wacs during World War II. She presented some of those oral histories in her talk "We Served America, Too: Blacks in the Women's Army Corps During World War II" at the weekend conference, which drew about 300 participants.

"I tell their stories, but I encourage them to get out there and tell their own," she said. "Some of them don't want to talk about it to people because they feel they're not educated enough, but I tell them, 'Nobody can tell your story better than you can.' "

Several Houston women have their own stories, too.

Ruby Lee Seals Carvin was walking down Main Street feeling sorry for herself.

She'd worked several years as a ticket-seller at Lincoln Theater on Prairie Street to help get her older sister through college so that she could return the favor after she graduated. Instead, her sister and brother-in-law returned to Houston with her degree — and the news that she was pregnant.

Carvin's dream of a higher education was all but over. Work had not been plentiful for her father since they moved to Houston from the sawmill town of Bessmae in East Texas, which shut down almost entirely during and after the Great Depression.

As the dejected 23-year-old Carvin reached the corner of Main and Walker, she saw the billboard.

From it, the stern eyes of Uncle Sam seemed to penetrate right to her heart as he pointed his long, long finger at her and demanded, "I want you!"

"I felt like he was talking to me," Carvin recalled from her Third Ward home Friday. "I knew I could save my money for college, and here was a chance to do something for my country, too."

The purpose of the WAC was to take care of noncombat details so that as many male soldiers as possible were available to fight. Carvin, for example, served at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., as an enlisted technician.

Women were sent all over the world to do these tasks, most traveling outside the United States for the first time in their lives.

Except if the women were black, Sims-Wood said.

Recruits made no secret that part of the allure of becoming a Wac would be to see the world. That phrase became part of recruiters' pep talks as they tried to get black women to sign up.

But once they joined, the recruiter's words became empty promises.

The black press kept the question of discrimination in the military before the reading public and brought up the question of overseas assignments, Sims-Wood recounted.

The War Department said no black women had been sent overseas because no overseas commander had requested black Wacs, and commanders had the right to specify the race of units being sent to them.

Pressure from black groups — and from Eleanor Roosevelt and Col. Oveta Culp Hobby (the Houston woman in charge of the WAC) — finally forced the War Department's hand, and 800 black Wacs were sent to England in November 1944 to set up a central postal directory.

Myrtle Rhoden, in her account to Sims-Wood, recalled her ship's landing in Scotland.

The Scots were astonished at their color. Rhoden overheard one woman say to another, "They're so brown, it must be very warm where they come from."

Nealie and Leader Hoskins' two uncles had served proudly in World War I, and when the government announced a place for black women to serve their country, the two Texans decided to join. Plus, they needed money for college.

When the two sisters, who now live in the Acres Homes area, enlisted, their pictures were splashed in newspapers all over the world because they were the first set of sisters to sign up.

But that was a brief limelight.

After basic training, she worked in an electronics shop at an Oklahoma fort for a white supervisor who didn't like blacks.

Equipment turned up missing. The supervisor blamed his black workers.

School board to vote on AIDS curriculum

Staff Report

Should AIDS Education be added to the health curriculum of local secondary schools?

School board trustees will vote on adding "AIDS is No Game" to curriculum for students in seventh grade through high school. The vote is listed to be taken as Item 7 on the school board agenda for today's 4 p.m. meeting.

The board will also present the Julie Conaway and the Midland ISD scholarships at the meeting.

Other action items on the agenda include:

■ Voting on the policy, on its second reading, concerning possession or sale of drugs or alcohol on campus.

■ Revising Uniform Training Rules for participants in extracurricular activities.

■ Election of the delegate and alternate to the Texas Association of School Boards.

■ Considering supporting Price Robinson as TASB district 18A representative.

■ Authorization to purchase 5 portable buildings for the 1994-95 school year.

■ Authorizing the restructuring of the school nursing program.

dred different directions.

— This doesn't qualify as earth shattering news, of course, but it does bear repeating from time to time: Just because someone goes to church every time the doors are open doesn't necessarily mean that person is a Christian.

— It is unfortunate that so many people, especially workaholic men, don't know how to enjoy their retirement years.

— And, today's final quote comes from Bill Mauldin, who once said, "I feel like a fugitive from the law of averages."

The State in brief

■ Gunman kills 1, wounds 1 outside cafe

DALLAS — Police on Monday were looking for a gunman who pulled a rifle out of his car and opened fire on two men outside a busy east Dallas restaurant, leaving one man dead and another in the hospital.

Jose Bautista, 32, died after he was shot in the head and Alfredo Amaro, 21, was in serious condition late Monday afternoon at Baylor University Medical Center.

The men were shot Sunday night after a shoving match with their assailant outside Annis Restaurant, police said. Investigators said they don't know what sparked the argument that preceded the shooting.

Dallas resident Melvin Wynn heard three men shouting at each other at the cafe's entrance.

"It sounded like it started because they bumped into each other or something," Wynn said. "One of the guys said, 'What are you going to do about it,' and this guy goes to his car and pulls out a .22 rifle."

The assailant fired at both men from not more than 10 feet away, then drove away, Wynn said.

■ 13-year-old dies in go-cart accident

AUSTIN — A 13-year-old San Angelo boy was killed and another teen-ager was injured after a go-cart accident in a school parking lot Sunday evening, officials said.

David Patrick Huie, 13, was pronounced dead at Bailey Middle School after suffering massive head injuries, said Sally Muir of Austin's Emergency Medical Service.

The boy apparently was driving the go-cart when it ran into a chain barrier at about neck level, Ms. Muir said.

Thirteen-year-old Paul Halweg of Austin suffered a hip fracture and facial injuries, Ms. Muir said. He was listed in fair condition Monday at Brackenridge Hospital.

The two were wearing helmets but no seatbelts, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

■ Texas man wins $3.5 million at casino

RENO, Nev. — A Texas business owner is $3.5 million richer and the Treasure Island Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas has its first Megabucks winner in the seven months it has been open.

Ralph Allen, 47, was staying at the hotel with his family and hit the progressive jackpot on Monday after 11 pulls of the handle.

"I knew what those four double diamond symbols meant," he said. "I knew I had won the big jackpot."

Allen, who would not disclose his home town, said he will save his money to secure his future, but also plans to enjoy his favorite hobby, fishing.

■ Police find body in trunk of woman's car

PLANO — Police said Monday they found a dead body stuffed in the trunk of a car owned by a Plano woman who has been missing for a week.

Allen police told the Plano Star-Courier they were fairly certain the body was Hayako Garland, but they were waiting for a coroner's confirmation.

Ms. Garland, 39, left her house early Memorial Day, but didn't show up at her job at a nursing home in nearby McKinney.

On Monday, an Allen apartment complex manager reported an abandoned car and a foul odor emanating from its trunk.

Allen Police Lt. Ed Stevens confirmed the recovery of the body.

Christian conservatives will drive GOP convention

N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Christian conservatives will be in the driver's seat at Texas' Republican State Convention this week — a development that has set off a bitter fight for the party chairmanship and created potential embarrassments for the state's three top Republicans.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, who wants to run for president in 1996, has put his prestige on the line by backing U.S. Rep. Joe Barton in the party chairman's race. If Barton loses, it would send a signal that Gramm can't make his home-state party follow his lead.

For U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, the convention could highlight her shaky relations with Christian conservatives. The Christian wing of the party was further alienated by Hutchison's "feminist" votes this year to restrict abortion clinic protests and to strip rank from retiring Adm. Frank Kelso because of the Navy's Tailhook sexual harassment scandal.

And for Texas GOP gubernatorial nominee George W. Bush, the convention could resurrect a ghost of the 1992 Republican National Convention in Houston. Many political observers believe the inflammatory rhetoric at that convention branded the GOP in many voters' minds as the party of religious extremism and social intolerance and contributed to the loss of the presidency by Bush's father.

Activists in the Texas Republican Party are roughly divided into three factions:

■ Christian conservatives, who style themselves as the party's "pro-family" wing and are variously referred to as social conservatives and the religious right. They place their opposition to abortion and gay rights in the forefront of their ideology. Opponents say Christian conservatives are trying to purge from the party those who disagree with them.

■ Traditional Republicans, also referred to as fiscal conservatives. They may share the Christian conservatives' beliefs on social issues, but they prefer that the GOP emphasize its distaste for big government and over-regulation of business.

■ Moderate Republicans, who share the traditional Republicans' fiscal conservatism but want the party to steer clear of its hard-line anti-abortion and anti-gay rights stances. They claim that those positions drive away middle-of-the-road voters.

It is estimated that as many as 60 percent to 70 percent of the 6,000 delegates to the two-day convention that starts Friday in Fort Worth will be affiliated with the religious right.

Control of the convention is the Christian conservatives' reward for a decade of network building through organizations such as Pat Robertson's Christian Coalition, the Republican National Coalition for Life and Texans United for Life.

Five towns join forces in battle for lower electric rates

Associated Press

Utility customers in five Texas Panhandle towns are protesting electric rates they say are 50 percent higher than rates paid by neighboring cities.

Those customers claim their Texas-New Mexico Power Co. rates drive away prospective businesses and burden families in the Panhandle's far northeastern corner.

Leaders in the three-county area's towns — Spearman, Perryton, Follett, Booker and Higgins — formed a coalition to negotiate with the Fort Worth-based utility.

TNP customers in the Panhandle paid $92.43 per 1,000 kilowatt-hour of electricity in May, said Jim Boyle, an Austin attorney for the towns. But Southwestern Public Service Co. customers in other Panhandle cities paid just $61.29 per 1,000 kwh, Boyle said Monday.

The Texas average is $82.30, he said.

"It's a huge number of dollars when you consider it on the basis of a year, or what businesses must pay," Boyle said. "It just puts the area at a tremendous competitive disadvantage."

But Helen Manroe, TNP communications manager, said the utility has proposed a 3.2 percent decrease in costs for residential customers in the Panhandle. That move would cut Panhandle costs to $88.17 per 1,000 kwh, she said.

"We are making an effort to take into consideration the Panhandle customers' unique position within our service territory," Ms. Manroe said.

About 4 percent of TNP's 171,000 Texas customers live in this area, which was acquired by one of TNP's predecessor companies in 1929, she said.

Spearman Mayor Burl Buchanan, chairman of the Panhandle Cities coalition, said it isn't fair for these five towns to pay costs for a new Central Texas coal-type generating station to which they aren't connected.

Buchanan said high electric bills forced a radio station in Spearman to cut its broadcasting time by several hours. And the Hansford County Library closed an hour earlier each day last summer because of expensive air conditioning, Buchanan said.

"I talked to a guy this morning, and he said, 'We just started shutting ours (air conditioning) off.' "

Police find family of three dead

ARLINGTON (AP) — Police asked to check on a family's welfare discovered the bodies of a couple and their 9-year-old daughter Monday in what police said appears to be a double homicide-suicide.

Authorities made the grim discovery about 8 a.m. at the family's home in a well-established, close-knit north Arlington neighborhood.

"We've really just begun the investigation," said Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson. "All of our speculation at this point is going to lead toward a double homicide and an apparent suicide."

The victims were identified as Richard D. Moore, 54; Sherrye L. Moore, 43; and Lisa L. Moore, 9, officials said.

Moore's son contacted police shortly before 8 a.m. after his father did not show up for work at a sheet metal factory in Dallas, authorities said.

The son became suspicious when he found some papers at work indicating the business was about to be turned over to him.

Police believe Richard Moore did all the shooting, and apparently left some documents at the office and at home indicating what he would do.

"The gentleman apparently made some preparation for this," Anderson said.

Police found a handgun in the master bedroom where the bodies of Moore and his 9-year-old daughter were discovered. The body of Sherrye Moore was found in a kitchen-dining area.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JUNE 7, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your interest in other cultures is renewed when you travel for both business and pleasure. A reorganization at work could put you in line for a promotion. Your popularity soars in November. If single, you could meet the love of your life over the winter holidays. Expect an expansion on the home front early in 1995. Your lifestyle will change for the better!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Oscar-winning actress Jessica Tandy, author Gwendolyn Brooks, baseball player Thurman Munson, rock video star Prince.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Artistic or creative work is best pursued independently. A friend's well-intentioned advice could impede progress. Someone comes to you with an interesting proposition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Finish up old business before launching a new project. A co-worker's inexplicable behavior could catch you off-guard. Seek the facts before passing judgment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Knowing a second language will give you a terrific advantage in the job market. Those in the import-export business should have a banner day. A government official helps you navigate the red tape.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It pays to be super-organized when around detail-oriented supervisors. You could be falling in love with someone considerably older than you. Take things slowly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look beyond surface appearances. Patience will make you a winner in your dealings with a member of the opposite sex. A business enterprise is supported by unusual clients.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You possess lots of stamina and ambition today. Make the most of it! A legal problem can be settled out of court. Find time for those pleasurable pursuits that add luster to your life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accept any reverses gracefully, but resolve not to repeat your mistakes. You can expect to make real headway this afternoon. Do not play guessing games with your health.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Fierce pride or a strong sense of loyalty could boomerang now. You know instinctively when to move on. Heed that strong inner voice. Your partner's or mate's needs outweigh your own. Drop selfish interests.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stick to projects already underway and near completion. Small comforts mean more to you than a gaudy splash. Treat yourself to a few luxuries but postpone making major purchases. Romantic thoughts brighten your evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It pays to adopt a logical approach when trying to convince difficult people. Recycling old projects could improve the bottom line. Someone may have a terrific idea but lack financial backing. Guard your savings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Not everything will go as smoothly as desired. Try to get any difficulties ironed out before noon. A chance encounter may result in love at first sight. Let things develop in their own time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Work pressures could mount today if higher-ups attempt a drastic reorganization. Bide your time until you see where your niche is. Romance is more rewarding than in the recent past. Avoid rocking the boat.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have a lively charm and wit that will draw people like a magnet. Given so many options in career and friendship, these Gemini may have difficulty deciding which to choose.

The European Mixed Pairs Championship, held in Barcelona, Spain, in March, was won by the German Pair of Sabine Zenkel, recently a Chicago resident, and Georg Nippgen. The prize for the best-played hand by a woman went to France's Daniele Allouche-Gaviard for this effort.

Over West's one-heart opening bid Alain Levy, North, made the technically correct call of a takeout double to keep the spade suit in the auction. When Allouche-Gaviard responded with a jump to four spades, Levy judged the North hand worth a direct raise to the small slam.

Those who believe it is incumbent on the defenders to show length at every opportunity might want to rethink their position after this result. On West's lead of the king of hearts, East signalled an even number of cards in the suit by dropping the ten. Since East-West were playing five-card majors, that marked West with six cards in the suit. At trick two West shifted to the king of clubs and, when dummy's ace won, East followed with the two, showing an odd number of cards in the suit. Nine of West's cards could now be inferred.

Before touching trumps, declarer discarded two clubs from hand on the ace-king of diamonds, then ruffed a diamond. When West produced the queen of diamonds, the whole hand was an open book.

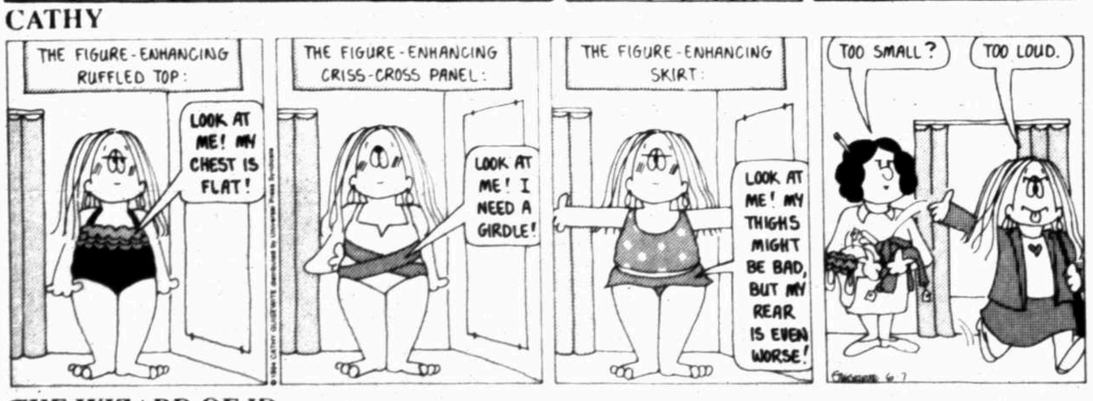

The king of trumps drew West's only trump, a heart was ruffed and the two good diamonds were taken, declarer discarding a club and a heart. A club ruff was followed by a heart, ruffed with the ace. Declarer was left with the K 8 of trumps poised over East's J 6 and a trump finesse brought home the slam!

Once-hot pubescent New Kids are grown up, leaving the block

BOSTON — The New Kids are leaving the block.

The group of once-popular pubescents are now grown up and pursuing individual careers.

They were scheduled to appear at a concert Saturday in Mansfield, but the only Kid to show up was Jordon Knight, and he stayed backstage.

"All the guys are doing different things, so it was hard to get everyone here for this," Knight said. "We wrapped up our promotional tour and decided to take the summer off and to get on with our individual things."

That's probably a good idea, considering that last year's New Kids album and concert tour met a lukewarm reception.

"I don't feel bad about that, really," Knight said. "I feel free and relaxed. I'm starting a solo album and it feels good to have finished on a proper note, on good terms. We didn't let other things get in the way of our friendship."

NEW YORK — Here's the good news for boxing fans: Mickey Rourke says he's giving up the sport.

Rourke says he'll give up boxing after five more matches.

Here's the bad news: He's going to fight five more times first.

Rourke told the Daily News that his last fight will take place on Bastille Day in Monaco with a yet-to-be-determined opponent. Then he's going to turn his attention back to acting.

"I'm gonna stop at the lucky number of 13 fights," he said in Monday's newspaper. "And that's it. No more boxing."

Speaking of acting, Rourke is working on a sequel to "9½ Weeks." The film will pick up nine years later in Paris with Rourke searching for the only woman he ever really loved. He said he hopes to find a no-name actress to play the role that Kim Basinger created.

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Gin Blossoms returned to their roots to say goodbye to an old friend.

The Blossoms headlined a show Sunday at Long Wong's, the burger-and-beer shack where they got their start. Proceeds of the show went to the family of Stacy Keller, a 21-year-old former waitress who died May 22 in a boating accident.

Keller, who worked at Long Wong's to help pay her way through Arizona State University, had befriended the Blossoms and other local bands that played the show, including Dead Hot Workshop, Grievous Angels and Chimèras.

About 700 people turned out for the concert in the bar's parking lot, while a cluster of underage patrons gathered within listening distance outside the fenced stage area.

The Gin Blossoms' hits include "Hey, Jealousy."

AUSTIN — Jack Wagner's prescription to cure the blues? Hit two golf balls and call me in the morning.

Wagner's blues cure: hit golf balls, call in morning.

Wagner, who plays Frisco Jones on the ABC soap "General Hospital," is a golf fanatic who now plays on the Celebrity Golf Association tour.

"When I came back to 'General Hospital,' the producers were willing to work the shooting around my golf schedule and I appreciated that," Wagner said during a tour stop this week in Austin.

Someone asked him what's in store for his TV character.

"I'm off on another secret mission," he said. "Trying to avoid bogies."

DETROIT — One-time sports car mogul John Z. DeLorean is headed for another legal detour.

DeLorean is being sued by his former lawyer, who claims DeLorean defrauded him of millions of dollars in legal fees. The lawsuit filed by Mayer Morganroth seeks $31.2 million in fees and damages, and is scheduled for trial this week in U.S. District Court.

DeLorean counters that Morganroth provided incompetent legal advice that cost him millions.

DeLorean, 69, left a job as an executive with General Motors Corp. in the early 1970s to build stainless steel, gull-winged sports cars.

DeLorean Motor Co. went bankrupt 12 years ago. DeLorean himself was later charged with — and acquitted of — drug trafficking charges.

■ Amtrak train-truck collision kills driver

COMSTOCK, Mich. — An Amtrak train hit a dump truck Monday at an unmarked private rail crossing, killing the truck driver and injuring a dozen train passengers.

All three passenger cars on the train headed from Chicago to Toronto derailed in the midday accident, which occurred just after the train pulled out of Kalamazoo, said Cliff Black, an Amtrak spokesman in Washington, D.C.

The injuries to the train passengers were described as minor.

Witnesses said the train's crew blew a whistle and tried to stop. Black said the train is authorized to travel 60 mph on that stretch.

In 1993, at another private crossing about a hundred yards away, a propane truck slid on snow into the path of a passenger train. The truck driver was killed. No passengers were hurt.

■ Judge lifts injunction that halted logging

SEATTLE — A federal judge lifted the 1991 injunction that barred logging on millions of acres of government land in an effort to protect the northern spotted owl.

U.S. District Judge William Dwyer ruled Monday that the Clinton administration's Northwest forest-management plan resolved concerns that prompted the ban.

"The legality of the new plan should be tested in proceedings directed to it," he wrote. He added that his order "does not constitute a ruling one way or the other on the legality of the new plan."

Dwyer scheduled a hearing Sept. 12 for challenges to the 1994 plan, already the subject of lawsuits from environmental groups who filed the original complaint.

"What we're looking forward to is the schedule Judge Dwyer has set to give us an opportunity to show that the Clinton plan still has some very serious defects in it," said attorney Todd True of the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund, which represents 13 environmental plaintiffs.

A timber industry official said Monday's action would have no immediate effect on logging operations.

"Obviously we're pleased, but from a practical standpoint, there will be no timber sold between now and when oral arguments are heard on the environmentalists' suit against the Clinton forest plan," said Jim Geisinger, president of the Northwest Forestry Association.

■ State high court to hear Kevorkian cases

LANSING, Mich. — The state Supreme Court agreed Monday to hear appeals in several cases involving Michigan's law banning assisted suicide and attempts to prosecute Dr. Jack Kevorkian for murder.

The court said it would decide whether the assisted suicide law violated the state or federal constitutions and whether Kevorkian can be tried for murder in the assisted-suicide deaths of two women who killed themselves before the state ban was in place. Arguments were scheduled for Oct. 4.

The Michigan Court of Appeals ruled May 10 that the assisted suicide ban was unconstitutional because of a flaw in the way it was adopted.

The law, passed specifically to stop Kevorkian, was added to a bill setting up a commission to study assisted suicide; the Michigan Constitution requires that bills cover only one subject.

The appeals court also ruled May 10 that the state constitution guarantees no right to suicide or assisted suicide. And it said Kevorkian could be tried for murder in connection with two assisted suicides that took place in 1991 before the law was passed.

Party shooting shocks California community

By Maura Reynolds
Associated Press

SAN MARINO, Calif. — Robert Edens was snuggled in bed with a book when a sound not often heard in this quiet community of old-money California homes echoed through the house. It was the sound of gunfire.

"It was automatic weaponry, no question about it," the 74-year-old retiree said Monday. "It's unmistakable."

By the time the staccato burst had ended, two teen-agers lay dead. Seven others were wounded, one seriously. The walls and interior of the million-dollar ranch house where about 100 people had been celebrating the end of the school year were riddled with bullet holes.

And this quiet, wealthy hamlet nestled in the shadows of downtown Los Angeles had its first homicide since 1990 and its first multiple murder ever. "When something like this happens so close, you have to think that maybe you weren't as safe as you thought," Edens mused Monday as he tended the rose bushes at his home a few doors down from the shooting.

No one was arrested immediately.

Police Chief Frank J. Wills said a disc jockey hired for the party apparently knew the assailants and quarreled with them. The assailants then left the party but returned with automatic weapons as it was breaking up early Sunday, police said. Eight to 10 of them vandalized cars as a young man and woman sprayed the house and yard with gunfire.

Two unidentified women leave the home in the affluent Los Angeles surburb of San Marino, Calif., Monday morning, where two teens were killed and seven others were wounded at a party. Damage from gunfire is visible in the stucco at left.

Among those killed was David Hang, a 15-year-old San Marino High School freshman who was watching TV when the shooting erupted. Dennis Buan, 18, of nearby South Pasadena also was killed, the Los Angeles County coroner's office said.

Neighbors said they were shocked, especially since the family who sponsored the party took precautions. They notified neighbors and police in advance. They served no alcohol. And they hired a guard with a metal detector to search guests for weapons.

"They did everything they could to make it a fun, safe party," said Mayor Bernard LeSage.

Authorities believe the shootings were gang-related, although San Marino police have never identified a single gang member among their city's 13,000 residents.

"The whole community feels violated," Wills said.

Indeed, with the towering San Gabriel Mountains providing a picturesque backdrop, San Marino's normally quiet, tree-lined streets, large homes and manicured lawns give it the feel of a safe haven from Los Angeles, just 10 miles away.

Built on ranchland once tended by some of the state's oldest and richest families, it is home to the prestigious Huntington Library and its rare book collection.

In recent years, the city's population has come to be made up more and more of wealthy Asians. About 35 percent of the city is now Asian, mostly Chinese.

Authorities said they believe the assailants belong to one of three large Filipino gangs based in the Los Angeles area.

"Our kids did not know these people," said San Marino High School Principal Don Banderas.

A day after the shootings, party balloons still hung limply from a tree in front of the large, beige ranchhouse. A newspaper lay uncollected on the walkway near the large manicured front lawn and the colorful rose bushes.

People periodically came to the door and knocked, but no one answered.

The party's hosts, high school student Frank Chen and his parents, were too distraught to talk, Wills said.

Supreme Court strikes down taxing of drug offenders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, thwarting what was once considered a potent anti-crime strategy, barred states Monday from forcing drug offenders to pay a tax in addition to their criminal fines.

Such drug-possession taxes are barred by the Constitution's ban on double punishment for the same crime, the court said. The ruling marked the first time the court has concluded a tax can amount to double jeopardy.

Most states impose taxes on people already convicted of drug possession. The 5-4 decision striking down Montana's tax cast doubt on those laws, most of them enacted in the 1980s.

In other action, the court:

■ Revived a lawsuit by a transsexual inmate allegedly raped in Indiana by ruling that prison officials can be sued successfully if they knowingly disregard excessive risks of harm confronting prisoners.

■ Ruled in the case of a Georgia man that federal prison sentences may be stiffened by considering defendants' prior minor-crime convictions even if the defendants had no legal help at the earlier trials.

■ Said the federal Superfund law does not allow those who clean up their environmental contamination to recover the legal fees they incur in getting other polluters to help pay for the cleanup.

■ Left intact a ruling that barred a public school district in Virginia from charging church congregations higher rents than other noncommercial groups for the weeknight or weekend use of school buildings.

■ Refused to review a most unusual death penalty case from Pennsylvania, in which both a convicted murderer and his prosecutors urged the justices to set aside his death sentence.

The court's drug-possession tax ruling freed an extended family from having to pay $181,000 in dangerous-drug taxes for growing marijuana on the Chouteau County, Mont., ranch and farm it used to own.

Richard and Judith Kurth pleaded guilty after police and federal agents raided their farm in 1987 and found 2,155 marijuana plants and more than 100 pounds of harvested marijuana.

Kurth had been a respected rancher and grain farmer, active in local and state affairs. He was Montana's Conservation Rancher of the Year in 1971.

But by the mid-1980s, the Kurths' ranch was $2 million in debt. Trying to save it, the Kurths began growing and selling marijuana. They recruited their adult children and their spouses to help.

Richard and Judith Kurth went to prison; daughter Cindy Halley and her husband, Clayton, son Douglas Kurth and his wife, Rhonda, and son William Kurth all drew suspended prison sentences.

The family filed for bankruptcy protection but lost its ranch and farm.

Brown hopes to follow her father, brother to governor's office

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Democrat Kathleen Brown stumped the state one last time Monday seeking the nomination to challenge Republican Gov. Pete Wilson for the job once held by her father and brother.

Her main Democratic rival, Insurance Commissioner John Garamendi, continued to attack Brown's opposition to the death penalty. Brown says she would enforce the law despite her personal beliefs.

California is one of eight states holding primary elections Tuesday, with voters selecting candidates for five Senate and dozens of House seats. Wilson is one of five governors who face challengers.

In a final round of rallies, Brown, the state treasurer, promised to create 1 million new jobs in recession-wracked California in the next four years.

"I want to bring back the California dream," Brown said at a San Francisco employment office, blaming Wilson for most of California's economic woes.

Garamendi told a Sacramento rally that Brown didn't understand the crucial role of the death penalty in criminal justice. Brown's father, Pat, and brother, Jerry, also drew political fire for opposing the death penalty.

"I am the only Democrat who believes in the death penalty," Garamendi said.

The other main Democrat in the gubernatorial primary is state Sen. Tom Hayden, the radical student leader of the 1960s and former husband of actress Jane Fonda. He is running on a political reform agenda.

Although her family's political legacy helped boost Brown's candidacy, neither her 89-year-old father, Pat, governor from 1959-67, nor brother Jerry, governor from 1975-83, has been active in her campaign.

Wilson, who has had low approval ratings throughout his first term, ignored conservative challenger Ron Unz on Monday.

Instead, Wilson held an election eve rally kicking off his general election campaign, even as Unz blamed him for betraying GOP principles with the biggest state tax increase in history.

Brown led Garamendi by 11 to 20 percentage points in the final round of polls and Wilson led Unz by up to 23 points.

In the state's Senate race, incumbent Dianne Feinstein faced Ted J. Andromidas, a follower of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, and entrepreneur Daniel O'Dowd for the Democratic nomination.

Protesters become first charged under abortion clinic blockade law

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Six anti-abortion demonstrators were charged Monday with blocking access to a women's clinic in the first application of a federal law providing stiff penalties for the offense.

The demonstrators had chained and cemented themselves to two cars in front of a clinic Saturday near downtown Milwaukee. The clinic was closed for about 90 minutes before police and firefighters pried the protesters loose.

Carl Stern, a Justice Department spokesman in Washington, said the charges were the first under legislation signed by President Clinton on May 26.

The law prohibits protesters from blocking access to women's health clinics or threatening patients and employees. A first offense carries a maximum penalty of six months in prison and a fine of up to $10,000.

"This isn't just a legal issue," said U.S. Attorney Thomas P. Schneider, who announced the charges at a news conference. "There were real patients who were prevented from getting reproductive health care. There were real doctors who were prevented from treating patients."

Opponents contend the law interferes with free speech, and some have gone to court to block it. Members of the group who blocked access to the Milwaukee clinic said they wanted to be the first to break it.

Charged were Dale Robin Pultz, 32; James Daniel Soderna, 31; Michael Charles Suhy, 20; Ronald Dean Brock, 55; Colin Lester Hudson, 46; Marilyn Ruth Hatch, 51. A juvenile was arrested but won't be charged, authorities said.

Some abortion opponents criticized the arrests.

Aces wild

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. — Aces were wild Saturday at the Lake Placid Club Resort — five golfers had holes-in-one.

Doug Livingston Jr. of Canada began the barrage with an 8-iron, acing the par-3, 138-yard eighth hole.

Larry Barry of Lake Placid and Gary Stratton of Canada were next, two groups apart. Stratton got his hole-in-one with an 8-iron on the par-3, 126-yard 11th, and Barry followed minutes later using a pitching wedge.

Robert Munson of Swarthmore, Pa., got his third career ace on the 202-yard par-3 12th hole.

Maryellen Decker of Saranac Lake completed the series of aces, at the 113-yard third hole, also with an 8-iron. The resort has two regulation 18-hole courses and one nine-hole par-3 course. Decker's ace came on the par-3 course, the others were on the regulation courses.

Rangers ink 5

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers signed five of their draft picks on Monday, including third-round choice Scott Podsednik.

Podsednik, an outfielder from West High, was assigned to the Gulf Coast League. Joining him in the GCL is 25th round choice Rodney Cook, a right-handed pitcher from Stephen F. Austin.

The other three players were sent to Hudson Valley of the New York Penn League.

They are: right-handed pitcher James Brower of Minnesota, a sixth-rounder; and second basemen Erik Sauve of Virginia Commonwealth, a 19th rounder, and Ryan Rutz, a 23rd-round pick from Washington.

Valenzuela 9-2

GUADALAJARA, Mexico — Former major league star Fernando Valenzuela has pushed his record to 9-2 with a seven-inning victory in the Mexican League.

The lefthander allowed five hits and two walks while striking out five batters from the Dos Laredos team on Sunday. His Jalisco Charros won 9-3.

Valenzuela is pitching for the Triple-A rated Jalisco Charros this year after spending 1993 as a starter for the Baltimore Orioles. He spent most of his career with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The game was limited to seven innings because it was part of a double header. Jalisco won the first game 9-4.

1994 NJCAA GOLF CHAMPIONSHIPS

No. 1 MC hopes for No. 2

■ The Midland College golf team is currently No. 1 in the land, but they are hoping for their second national title.

Staff Report

SCOTTSDALE, ARIZ. — Ranked as the No. 1 team in the country, the Midland College Chaparrals head for Arizona in hopes of capturing their second national men's golf title.

Action in the 1994 National Junior College Athletic Association Division I championship starts today at 8 a.m. (CDT) for the four-day, 72-hole event at the McCormick Ranch Golf Club in Scottsdale, Arizona. After the first 36 holes, the field will be cut to the low 15 teams or teams within 15 shots of the leading team. The best 24 individuals, or those within 15 strokes of the leader, also will be in the field for the final two days.

"Winning a national championship this year would be special because we have made an extreme effort the last few years to recruit the best players we could find in West Texas," said Midland College golf coach Delnor Poss. "I think that is a group of West Texans with Chad Campbell of Andrews, Shawn Savage of Plainview and Jason Garduno of Monahans. This is an exceptionally nice group of young men and we have had great leadership from our sophomores and have achieved more than any other group we have had."

Pacing the record-setting Chaparral team this season was Campbell, a sophomore from Andrews. He was ranked as the NJCAA's No. 1 player, which earned him a spot on the 1994 USA team for the World University Games, being played later this summer in Spain. Campbell was the Western Junior College Athletic Conference medalist with a 70.4 stroke average. He edged teammate Savage, a sophomore from Plainview, who finished second with a 71.8 average.

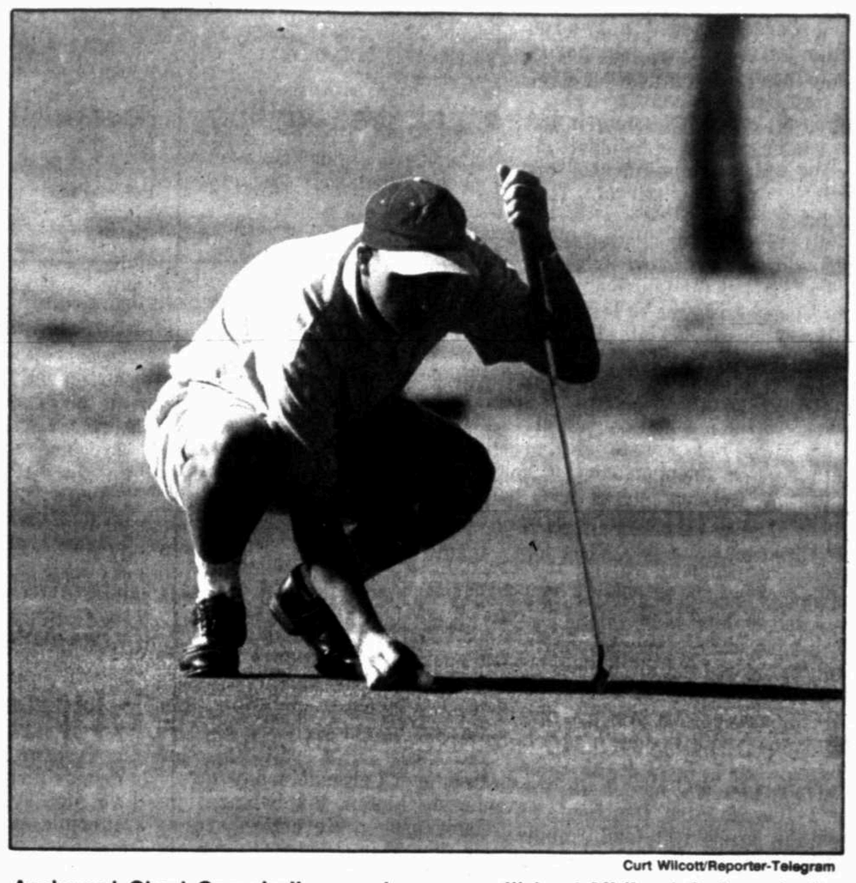

Also named to the Chaparral squad for the national tournament, along with Campbell and Savage, were: Garduno, freshman from Monahans; Jason Brooks, sophomore from Georgetown; and Lance McCullough, sophomore from Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. Team alternate is Judd Burkett, sophomore from Amarillo.

In a record-shattering year, the Chaparrals won 17 of the 20 tournaments they entered and set a conference record 835 team total for 54 holes.

The Chaps are hoping for another championship at Scottsdale, where they captured the 1992 NJCAA crown. Midland first made the NJCAA tournament field in 1988, finishing 13th. They were sixth in 1989, third in 1990, second in 1991, first in 1992, and third last year.

Houston bullpen ace John Hudek has become the Astros' new closer with the recent departure of Mitch Williams, a fact that never occurred to manager Terry Collins in the early season.

Hudek saves Houston's bullpen

By Jayne Custred
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — The possibility that John Hudek could be the key to the Astros' 1994 season never occurred to manager Terry Collins.

Not until recently, that is.

Certainly not in spring training, when Hudek was struggling with the strike zone and didn't make the Astros' opening-day roster despite an eye-opening 95-mph fast ball.

Definitely not in late April, when Hudek was called up from Class AAA Tucson despite some erratic outings to fill the roster spot of Roberto Petagine.

Obviously not during Hudek's first few weeks in the big leagues, when veteran Mitch Williams was the club's closer.

Hudek, after all, was unproven, an unknown.

"On every good team, there's a surprise," Collins said. "You expect good things from guys like Doug (Drabek) and (Jeff) Bagwell and (Craig) Biggio. But on every good team, every winning team, there's one guy you didn't expect that really comes out.

"Right now, Hudek's that guy. He's really helping us out."

In a most surprising way. At 27, with just 45 days of El Paso clinches 1st half tie

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

El Paso has a big lead in the Texas League Western Division. The Diablos showed Monday night at Christensen Stadium in a 5-4 win over Midland it's because they do the little things right.

El Paso played flawless defense as they clinched a least a tie for first place in the West in the first half of the Texas League West season. The Angels made three errors and a costly base running gaff that kept them from challenging for a win.

"You've got to do the little things to win ball games and we're not doing that now," Angel right fielder Mark Sweeney said. "We have to bear down, not neccesarily as individuals, but as a team."

The Angels' three errors led to one El Paso run. And left fielder Mike Wolff was put out at third base in the seventh inning on a bunt by Tim Harkrider that could have been a base hit. Instead, it ended the inning when Diablo third baseman Tim Unroe took Harkrider's hard bunt down the baseline and tagged Wolff out unassisted as he came from second base.

Meanwhile, the Diablos turned two critical double plays in the third and fourth innings.

They halted an Angel rally in the third with a 4-6-3 double play to end the inning. Midland had the bases loaded with not outs but failed to score.

In the fourth, the Angels again had the bases loaded and got only one run as El Paso turned another 6-4-3 twin killing.

"They were actually pretty routine double plays," said Diablo second baseman Kevin Castleberry, who started both DPs. "The charts we have are

Gouging Lone Star fans on tickets isn't illegal

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The fervent Houston Rockets fan who wants to sit courtside during the NBA Finals might have to apply for a small loan to do so.

Although all four of the possible NBA Finals games in Houston are officially sold out, agencies in Houston are holding hundreds of tickets. It's easy to get a ticket — just dial up a neighborhood ticket scalper — but it's not cheap.

Prices for Game 1 Wednesday against the New York Knicks start at $100 for seats up near the rafters of The Summit. Midcourt tickets can be had for $750, while the best seats in the house command a hefty $1,200.

It's enough to keep the average Rockets fan out of the 16,611-seat arena and in front of the television.

The practice of gouging fans isn't illegal in Texas, a fact that has angered consumers and Rockets management who see it as a berserk free market that slam dunks fans.

"It's a very passionate issue because it involves the strong sense of fairness," Steve Hapel, an Arizona State University economics professor who has studied ticket scalping, told the Houston Chronicle.

"Normally we praise people who buy low and sell high," Hapel said. "But there are two instances when we get real upset with the free market system: when someone scalps tickets and when someone sells water for $5 a gallon after a natural disaster, like a hurricane."

The business of scalping has boomed in Texas since the Legislature repealed

Alou hot against Houston

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Moises Alou hit two homers and drove in a career-high five runs Monday night to lead the Montreal Expos to their fifth straight win, 10-5 over the Houston Astros.

■ NL Roundup

Wil Cordero added a two-run homer for the Expos, who got 18 hits to move 11 games over .500 for the first time this season.

Alou hit a two-run homer in the third inning off Greg Swindell (5-2), and added a three-run shot, his seventh, in the sixth off Tom Edens.

Butch Henry (3-0) allowed three runs and seven hits over six-plus innings. It was the fourth straight time Henry has gone at least five innings since moving into the starting rotation on May 10.

John Wetteland, who closed out a bases-loaded threat in the eighth, pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

Mike Lansing went 3-for-5 and scored twice for Montreal.

Tony Eusibeo and Caminiti each had three hits and two RBIs for Houston.

Swindell was pounded for five runs and 11 hits in 2⅔ innings — his shortest outing this season. He had worked at least six innings in each of his previous 11 starts.

Henry also got his first two hits this season with a double and a single.

Alou's two-run homer in the third scored Mike Lansing and gave the Expos a 3-2 lead. Randy Milligan and Wil Cordero each hit singles and scored on Mitch Webster's double to make it 5-2.

Marlins 11, Dodgers 10

MIAMI — Rookie Jesus Tavarez's pinch-hit RBI single in the bottom of the ninth completed a wild comeback from a six-run deficit as Florida beat Los Angeles.

Dave Magadan singled with one out in the ninth, and Chuck Carr also singled before Tavarez followed with his game-winning hit off Roger McDowell (0-3).

Willie Fraser (1-0) allowed one run in two innings in winning for the first time since Sept. 2, 1991.

The Marlins established a club record with their fifth consecutive victory. The Dodgers have lost four in a row, tying their longest losing streak this season.

The Dodgers took a 9-3 lead with the help of four home runs, including Mike Piazza's 477-foot grand slam, the longest homer in Joe Robbie Stadium history.

Florida bunched seven two-out hits in the seventh inning against four pitchers, scoring six runs to tie it 9-9. The seven consecutive hits were a franchise record.

Los Angeles took a 10-9 lead on Cory Snyder's bases-loaded double-play grounder in the eighth.

Piazza went 4-for-4 with hits against four pitchers. His first career grand slam in the second inning gave him the National League lead in RBIs with 54.

Mets 11, Rockies 3

DENVER — Ryan Thompson drove in four runs and Bobby Bonilla and Kevin McReynolds each had three RBIs, powering New York over Colorado.

Doug Linton (5-2) blanked the Rockies over six innings, losing his shutout in the seventh and giving way to Josias Manzanillo.

The Mets, swept by the Rockies in a three-game series at Shea Stadium last week, tied a season-high with 16 hits off five Colorado pitchers. Rookie Kelly Stinnett had his first four-hit game, and Thompson and Bonilla had three hits apiece to hand the Rockies their third straight loss. Bonilla also walked three times.

Thompson's three-run triple in the eighth, enabled the Mets to tie a NL record with two bases-loaded triples, the 11th time the feat has been accomplished.

New York scored five runs in three innings off starter Kent Bottenfield (3-1) — all with two outs. Stinnett tripled and Bonilla doubled for a run in the first.

Giants 4, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Bill Swift pitched eight effective innings to win for the first time since coming off the disabled list and John Patterson's pinch single keyed a three-run ninth, giving San Francisco a victory over Pittsburgh.

Swift (7-3) won his fourth straight decision by limiting the Pirates to three hits, including Al Martin's solo homer. He recently spent three weeks on the disabled list with right shoulder inflammation.

Phillies 3, Cubs 1

PHILADELPHIA — Shawn Boskie pitched eight strong innings and hit an RBI triple against his former team as Philadelphia beat Chicago, the Cubs' seventh straight loss.

Boskie (3-2), traded from Chicago to the Phillies on April 12 for pitcher Kevin Foster, beat the Cubs for the second time in six days.

Padres 4, Braves 3

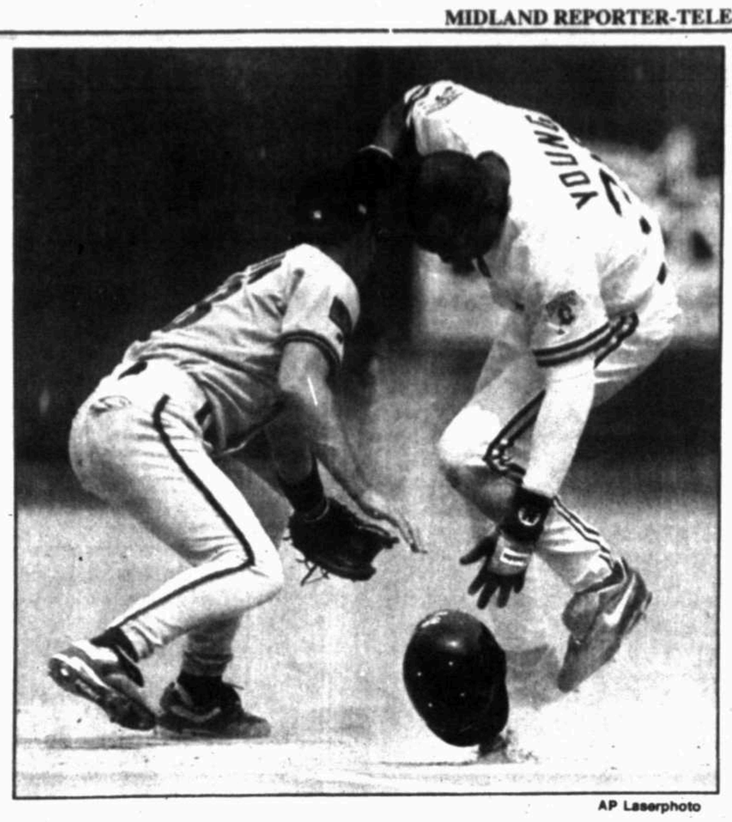

ATLANTA — Craig Shipley's run-scoring single in the ninth inning capped a two-run rally to give San Diego a victory over Atlanta, snapping the Braves' six-game winning streak.

Trailing 3-2, the Padres tied it when Greg McMichael (2-3) threw a wild pitch, scoring Ricky Gutierrez. Gutierrez singled to open the inning and took third on a pinch-hit single by Billy Bean.

Tim Mauser (2-2) earned the victory by getting the final out in a two-run eighth inning by the Braves.

Donnie Elliott got two outs in the ninth before Pedro Martinez came on and struck out Jeff Blauser with two on for his second save.

San Diego's rally prevented Greg Maddux from becoming baseball's first 10-game winner.

Yanks bury Rangers

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Bernie Williams homered twice and drove in seven runs and Jimmy Key won his seventh straight decision Monday night as the New York Yankees beat the Texas Rangers 17-7 in a game between division leaders.

New York took a 10-0 lead in the fourth after a two-run homer by Williams and a three-run shot by Wade Boggs. Williams had an RBI single in the eighth and hit a grand slam in the ninth.

Key (8-1) left after the sixth inning ahead 10-6. He tied Kansas City's David Cone and Ben McDonald of Baltimore for the AL lead with eight wins. Atlanta's Greg Maddux leads the majors with nine.

The Yankees ended a four-game losing streak and won for only the second time in eight games. The Rangers lost for the second time in eight games and missed a chance to reach .500 for the first time this season.

Brewers 9, Athletics 6

OAKLAND — Jose Valentin drove in a career-high four runs and Cal Eldred pitched seven strong innings to lead Milwaukee over Oakland.

Valentin hit a two-run homer and a two-run single as the Brewers handed the A's their fourth straight loss.

Eldred (6-6) won his third straight decision, allowing five runs, three earned, and four hits. Mike Fetters pitched the ninth for his sixth save.

■ AL Roundup

Mariners 5, Indians 4

SEATTLE — Felix Fermin hit a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning and Seattle defeated Cleveland, ending the Indians' eight-game winning streak.

Ken Griffey Jr. hit his 23rd homer, most in the majors, and first in eight games for the Mariners.

Eric Anthony, in a 1-for-33 slump, opened the eighth with a double and Mike Blowers. Fermin, traded with Reggie Jefferson from Cleveland to Seattle in the offseason for Omar Vizquel, drove in a run with a line drive to center.

Bill Risley (4-2) got the victory by pitching a 1-2-3 eighth and Bobby Ayala earned his seventh save by pitching the ninth.

Tigers 11, Red Sox 5

DETROIT — Tony Phillips hit a two-run triple that put Detroit ahead for good, and the Tigers beat Boston.

Phillips, who had the first two-homer game of his career Sunday, tripled in the fourth inning for a 4-2 lead. Alan Trammell homered and drove in three runs as the Tigers improved to 27-27, the first time they've been at .500 this season.

Tim Belcher (4-8) won for the fourth time in five starts. He gave up three runs and six hits in seven innings.

Joe Hesketh (3-4) allowed four runs and seven hits and three walks in four-plus innings.

The Red Sox took a 2-0 lead in the second inning when Damon Berryhill hit an RBI triple and Scott Cooper had a sacrifice fly.

Orioles 4, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mike Mussina mastered Kansas City again, shutting out the Royals after the second inning.

Mussina, 6-1 in 10 lifetime starts against the Royals, gave up single runs in the first and second innings. He is 4-0 in Kansas City.

Mussina (8-3) gave up seven hits, struck out three and walked none in 7⅓ innings. Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his 22nd save.

Tom Gordon (5-4) gave up five walks as the Royals saw their three-game winning streak stopped.

Twins 8, Angels 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Kevin Tapani won his sixth straight start and Kirby Puckett and Scott Leius hit two-run homers as Minnesota beat California.

Tapani (7-2) scattered seven hits, including a home run by Tim Salmon, in seven innings. He struck out three and walked three.

Tapani's winning streak is his longest streak since 1991, when he won nine straight decisions. This is the first time he has ever won six starts in succession, and he has a 2.08 ERA during the string.

Leius also had an RBI single and Pedro Munoz had a pair of run-scoring groundouts as the Twins sent California to its seventh loss in eight games.

Van Slyke suffers worst slump

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Andy Van Slyke, a three-time All-Star in the worst slump of his Pittsburgh Pirates career, is taking two days off in hopes of getting his batting stroke back.

Van Slyke, a starter in the last two All-Star games, did not start Monday afternoon's game against San Francisco and also won't start Tuesday against the Giants, manager Jim Leyland said.

The 33-year-old Van Slyke has been in a slump since his 8-for-9 doubleheader May 8 against Chicago jumped his average to .283. He is hitting .150 in 21 games since May 13 and two hitless streaks of more than 20 at-bats have lowered his average to .229.

The five-time Gold Glove center fielder has just 16 RBIs in 201 at-bats despite hitting third in the order in 51 of the Pirates' first 53 games.

Leyland emphasized he wasn't benching Van Slyke and he has contemplated for more that a week how to get Van Slyke untracked.

"I don't want to pick up the newspaper and read the headline 'Van Slyke Being Benched,' " Leyland said. "He's going to get a rest and get away from it for a couple of days. I'm not putting pressure on anybody and I'm not mad at anybody, but if we're to do anything we've got to get Andy and Jay Bell going."

Bell, an All-Star shortstop who hit .310 last season, had two hits and two RBIs in the Pirates' 4-3 victory Sunday over Colorado after dropping from second to sixth in the batting order. He will continue to hit sixth for the time being, Leyland said.

However, Leyland doesn't anticipate moving Van Slyke down in the batting order once he returns to the lineup Wednesday.

"Hey, if we can't play Jay Bell and Andy Van Slyke, we're in serious trouble," Leyland said. "I mean, we're messed up. It's that simple. We've got to do something to get them going ... and I've slept on this, and I think it's the best thing for Andy."

Leyland said he had a long talk with Van Slyke, who agreed a couple of days' rest wasn't a bad idea.

"Face it, I'm not helping the team win games and I'm a big reason we're not winning," Van Slyke said. "If I'm hitting, we're right there."

Complicating Van Slyke's nearly season-long slump is his contract status. He is in the final year of a three-year, $12.65 million contract and the Pirates have not yet offered him a new contract or an extension.

General manager Cam Bonifay has said only that the Pirates will inform Van Slyke of their plans by the All-Star Game.

The financially troubled Pirates are expected to trade Van Slyke to a pennant contender for the stretch drive if they don't have the money to re-sign him. If they don't deal him by the end of the season and he signs elsewhere, they would receive only two draft choices as compensation.

"I don't want to hear any gossip, any trade stuff," Leyland said. "These issues can be real sensitive. I had a long conversation with Andy and he is as concerned as anybody. But the farthest thing from his mind is free agency and his contract. He's upset because he's not helping us win games."

The Pirates had lost 15 of 20 before winning at Colorado on Saturday and Sunday.

Baseball owners look at salary cap proposal

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball owners are set to elect a new American League president and debate a salary cap proposal when they gather in Cincinnati for three days of meetings that start Tuesday night.

Gene Budig, the chancellor of the University of Kansas, is the choice to replace Bobby Brown as AL president but probably won't take over until later this summer, a baseball official said today speaking on the condition of anonymity.

The AL president vote is to take place on Wednesday. Budig, 55, was scheduled to attend the baseball meetings, which will be dominated by the labor situation.

Richard Ravitch, management's negotiator, is seeking permission to make a salary cap proposal to the Major League Baseball Players Association, which is considering whether to strike during the second half of the season.

If owners give Ravitch the go ahead, he intends to make the proposal to the union next week, possibly Tuesday. The players' association already has scheduled meetings of its executive board for Chicago on June 16 and Pittsburgh on July 11.

The union is fearful that owners will unilaterally implement a salary cap unless the players strike and force an agreement. It is not clear whether clubs would hold to their bargaining position during a work stoppage, since large-market clubs make money under the current system of free agency and salary arbitration.

Small clubs, fearful they can't compete, want a salary cap that is tied to increased revenue sharing.

Players are expected to set a strike date at the Pittsburgh meeting, which will take place a day before the All-Star game. Agents say they expect a walkout would occur around Aug. 1.

Baylor coach will stay

WACO (AP) — The head coach of Baylor's basketball program, which is the target of a Southwest Conference investigation, said Monday he's decided to stay at the school and decline an out-of-state offer.

Darrel Johnson last week had considered leaving the program to run the Oklahoma City Cavalry of the Continental Basketball Association.

Meetings between the coach and Cavalry officials came as Baylor president Herbert H. Reynolds announced that the SWC investigation into the Waco school's basketball program had turned up some NCAA violations.

"While I cannot comment specifically on the investigation of our program, I have a clear conscience regarding my personal involvement in the alleged infractions as I have never knowingly, willfully or intentionally violated NCAA or conference rules," Johnson said in a prepared statement.

"As the head coach responsible for the men's basketball program, I am deeply regretful that even the appearance of impropriety would exist and for any embarrassment caused (to) Baylor University and President Herbert H. Reynolds," he said.

Cavalry president Chip Land had met three times with Johnson and also submitted a contract for Johnson's lawyer to study.

Published reports this month had detailed the contract proposal and timing of the offer.

NBA Final Matchup

By The Associated Press

The NBA Finals pairing between New York and Houston, with season meetings between the teams, key players, outlook and prediction (averages are for all playoffs):

Season Meetings

Houston won 94-85 at New York on Dec. 2 and 93-73 at Houston on Feb. 24.

Key Players
Houston

Hakeem Olajuwon — He carried the Rockets through the first three rounds, averaging 29.8 points, 11.9 rebounds, 4.3 blocks and 43 minutes. His quick first step makes it difficult for Ewing to guard him. Olajuwon averaged 33 points and 16.5 rebounds in the two victories over the Knicks.

Otis Thorpe — Although he's shooting 59 percent from the field, Thorpe's average is just 12.3 in the playoffs because he's concentrated on defense. He fared well against Karl Malone, Charles Barkley and Chris Webber. Charles Oakley won't be such a tough chore, but Thorpe — averaging 9.3 rebounds — needs to neutralize Oakley's rebounding, especially at the offensive end.

Vernon Maxwell — He's a streak shooter, averaging 14 points on 38 percent accuracy in the playoffs, but has been outstanding in spots. He saved Houston with 34 points — 31 in the second half — in the Rockets' third game against Phoenix after the Suns led the series 2-0.

Kenny Smith — Another streak scorer, averaging 13.1 points on 47 percent shooting. Coach Rudy Tomjanovich has not hesitated to go with Sam Cassell at point guard if Smith struggles. He twice had 25 or more against Utah, three times had 10 or less.

Robert Horry — Defense is his game, but he's stepped up offensively, averaging 12.3 points. When Anthony Mason comes in the game, look for a physical Horry-Mason battle.

Sam Cassell — His minutes are up in playoffs, from 17 to 21, but Cassell has had some big games. He had 10 assists in the pivotal Game 3 against Phoenix and 22 in Game 7 against the Suns.

Mario Elie — A defensive stopper off the bench, Elie also will make aggressive plays offensively. He scored 17 in Game 2 against Utah on 10-for-10 free-throw shooting.

New York

Patrick Ewing — Ewing took over in Game 7 against Indiana with 24 points, 22 rebounds, seven assists and five blocked shots. He's averaging 23.1 points, 11.4 rebounds and 2.6 blocks in the playoffs, but has yet to face a center close to Olajuwon's caliber.

Charles Oakley — Coach Pat Riley calls Ewing his one indispensable player, but says Oakley is the cornerstone of the team's physical style. An improved jump shot has helped him average 14 points in the playoffs, and he leads the team with 11.6 rebounds. Unofficially, he also leads in floor burns diving for loose balls.

John Starks — Starks has never fully recovered his form after a late-season knee injury and has seen his scoring average drop from 19 in the regular season to 13.3 in the playoffs. He's also shooting just 38.8 percent from the field, but is still capable of a big scoring game, like his 26 points on 5-for-6 3-point shooting in Game 6 against Indiana.

Derek Harper — He's averaging just 9.3 points in the playoffs, but has a knack for making big plays. He hit the go-ahead shot with 1:50 left in New York's vital Game 6 victory at Indiana, and scored 16 in Game 7. Riley likes to use Greg Anthony when defense is needed, but Harper is steadier offensively and a better leader, so he averages 30 minutes to Anthony's 20.

Anthony Mason — Mason has been in and out of Riley's doghouse, but he's out now after his 12 points and 10 rebounds in 39 minutes in Game 7 against Indiana. Mason's problem is his own inflated view of his offensive abilities. His nine turnovers in Game 6 against Indiana nearly cost the Knicks the series.

Charles Smith — With Smith a big disappointment with an 8.7 scoring average and consistent foul difficulties in the playoffs, Riley has given more minutes to Mason. Look for that to happen again.

Greg Anthony — The quickness of Maxwell, Smith and Cassell increases the chances Anthony will play more against the Rockets. Anthony has improved his 3-point shooting — he has 17 in 18 playoff games.

Outlook

The teams are similar in style and makeup, relying on their centers to make the big plays. Both have enigmatic guards in Maxwell and Starks, as likely to go 1-for-12 as 10-for-12. Both have physical power forwards in Thorpe and Oakley. Both have low-scoring, defensive-minded forwards in Mason and Horry. Both have young, inconsistent backup point guards in Cassell and Anthony. This will be a tough, hard-fought series, with plenty of spurts and hurts. The Rockets have homecourt advantage, very important against the Knicks, and a little more firepower.

Prediction: Houston in 6.

SAVES: Hudek finally has pitching role set

major-league experience, Hudek has established himself as the Astros' new closer. He won the role from Williams, who was released by the club last week.

"It was something I certainly didn't expect to come this year," Hudek said. "With the club having Mitch being the closer, especially with the kind of closer he was with all those saves, I would have been happy to just set up for him.

"I would have been happy learning more of the closer role, learning about the hitters and what to do. I mean, how many pitchers come right from the minors to be a closer?

"It wasn't something I was looking for."

It was something that found him, nonetheless. And Hudek has embraced the new role and the new responsibility with confidence and enthusiasm.

"It's an honor to jump in," Hudek said. "I'll give them everything I can. I know there will be days when it won't work. You can control your walks somewhat. But you can't control hits. They're going to happen.

"My big concern is keeping the walks down, keeping the hits limited. Basically everything else will fall in line."

Or so it seems this season. Hudek has not allowed a run in his past 10 appearances or in his nine total appearances at home. In 17 games since being recalled, the right-hander has allowed only seven hits and one run in 17 innings and struck out 21.

He has seven saves, six coming in May, which was good enough for fourth in the National League that month.

"I think confidence has a lot to do with how he's pitching right now," Collins said. "He's got great confidence."

And a great fast ball.

Hudek is much more of a classic closer than Williams was, consistently throwing a 93 to 95 mph hopping fast ball that batters are having a hard time getting hold of. His fast ball has been so effective, in fact, that he's thrown little else, mixing in a few sliders and a rare change up.

But most important in Collins' mind is the fact Hudek throws that fast ball for strikes.

"When I saw him in spring training, I was very excited," Collins said. "But the one thing he didn't do was throw strikes. I thought he'd make the club, but when we opened with 10 pitchers, we all felt it would be good for him to go down and get a lot of pitches.

"He went down with a great attitude and did a great job."

Hudek maintains he has not surprised himself. Despite his lack of major-league experience, he is not a newcomer to baseball. Hudek began his minor-league career in 1988, taken by the White Sox in the 10th round of that year's June draft. He joined the Detroit organization in 1992, then was claimed off waivers by the Astros in July 1993.

"People always say we have a young bullpen, but I'm not so sure," Hudek said. "We don't have a bunch of guys right out of college. We've all got years in the minors. We've all been wanting to break in, and now we've finally got our chance.

"I think success is showing all the way around in the bullpen."

It was actually during winter ball last season, when he played in the Venezuelan league, that Hudek began attracting attention. He was the closer for the Magallanes club.

TICKETS: NBA costly

laws barring the practice in 1974. No fewer than 29 ticket agencies are listed in the Houston telephone book, more than double the number listed a decade ago.

The Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan Houston warns that sky-high prices aren't the only thing buyers should beware of when dealing with agencies.

Some scalpers have been less than honest about seat locations, and credit card bills sometimes turn up higher than the agreed-upon price.

"But we don't hear as many complaints, because the public has become jaded to the practice," said Dan Parsons, a spokesman for the bureau.

Rockets officials say scalpers cause them a number of problems. Mostly, they can't be assured The Summit will be filled for every game.

Area fans drew harsh criticism from Rockets players for a weak turnout for Game 1 of the Western Conference semifinals against Phoenix. Rockets vice president John Thomas said scalpers held tickets for most of about 2,000 empty seats.

In their own defense, ticket agencies argue that their businesses help fans who don't have time to wait in line, and they blame season-ticket holders for the high prices.

GOLF: Chaps favored

tational earlier this spring and that along with seven consecutive appearances in the national tournament leave the Chaps familiar with the course heading into today's play.

"Chad, Shawn and Lance have played the course several time and I have a lot of course knowledge because we have played there eight times since I've been here," said Poss. "It's similiar to Midland Country Club from the standpoint you have to hit it straight and its in great shape. But there is a little more water and trees are a little taller."

Western Junior College Athletic Conference members Odessa College and New Mexico Junior College are in the field of 19 teams. NMJC finished runner-up in the conference behind Midland and Odessa College received an at-large berth to qualify into the tournament.

"I think this year there are truly about seven that could win it, it just depends on who is playing well," said Poss. "Central Alabama was rated first in the nation for a short while this year. Bervard (Fla.) Community College, Florida Community College, Odessa, Scottsdale are other teams that I think would be the frontrunners."

Sooners win in 11

OMAHA, Neb. — Rick Gutierrez's sacrifice fly in the 11th inning gave Oklahoma a 4-3 victory over Arizona State on Monday night in the winners' bracket of the College World Series.

The run broke up a string of seven scoreless innings by relievers of both teams, with each team's ace getting the decision — Bucky Buckles (3-4) for the Sooners and Noah Peery (11-2) for Arizona State.

Peery walked pinch-hitter Dustin Hansen to lead off the 11th and a sacrifice bunt and passed ball got him to third for Gutierrez's fly ball to center, his second sacrifice fly of the game.

Buckles, who threw three innings, retired the Sun Devils in order in the bottom of the 11th.

The Sun Devils (44-17) will play Miami, a 7-5 winner over Auburn, in an elimination game Tuesday. Oklahoma (48-17) will await the winner of that game in a Thursday afternoon semifinal.

Both starting pitchers were roughed up early. Rich Hills singled in a run for Oklahoma with two outs in the first, just before Billy McGonigle made the first of two defensive gems, running down Chip Glass' long, slicing drive on the warning track in left.

Danny Buxbaum's two-run double in the seventh inning helped Miami overcome six errors as the top-seeded Hurricanes stayed alive with a victory over Auburn.

Miami (49-13) advanced to Tuesday's elimination game against the loser of Monday night's game between Oklahoma and Arizona State.

Auburn (44-21) went home, loosing both games in its first CWS appearance since 1976.

Miami took advantage of an error for four unearned runs in the first. Wicho Hernandez was hit by Kevin Humphrey's first pitch of the game and moved to third on two groundouts.

Buxbaum hit a high popup behind second that was lost in the sun by Mark Bellhorn, who dropped it and Hernandez scored. Rick Gama followed with a single and Michael Torti hit his ninth homer of the year.

Bellhorn atoned for his miscue with four hits and two runs scored. He tripled and scored on Brandon Moore's infield grounder in the fifth and doubled and scored on infield singles by Moore and Mike Killimet in the eighth before reliever Jay Tessmer worked out of the jam.

Moore also drove in a run with a single in the third and doubled in two runs to tie the game 4-4 in the sixth.

The Hurricanes came up with three in the seventh when Mike Metcalfe walked with two outs, Bruce Thompson singled and Buxbaum delivered the two-run double off reliever Chris Morrison.

Ranger star is born

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — It's fitting that in a rare Broadway production of the Stanley Cup finals, a star has been born.

Brian Leetch has emerged as the leading man in the New York Rangers' epic quest for their first title since 1940.

"We were aware of his offensive skills, because he kept showing it and his numbers certainly prove it," said Vancouver coach Pat Quinn, whose Canucks must stop Leetch and the Rangers on Tuesday night to avoid falling behind three games to one.

"But he's clearly much better in leading the play and defending than I expected," Quinn added. "He's made very few mistakes defensively, and that's the part I hadn't recognized in his game before."

Leetch shares New York's top billing with forceful leader Mark Messier. The rest of the Rangers, also known as the Broadway Blues, clearly play supporting roles.

Everybody's raving about Leetch, a 26-year-old defenseman who leads all playoff scorers with 28 points. He has been compared to Bobby Orr, Paul Coffey and Ray Bourque, all-time NHL superstars at the position.

Though Leetch doesn't possess the electrifying end-to-end offensive capabilities that Orr did, Quinn said, "Leetch is better defensively and is better at jumping into holes" to create offensive chances.

He demonstrated the latter Saturday in Game 3, swooping in from the point, pouncing on a rebound and lifting a backhander over Vancouver goalie Kirk

Stanley Cup Finals

McLean. The goal, Leetch's second of the game, gave the Rangers a 3-1 lead and they went on to seize control of the series with a 5-1 win.

"He's right up there with the great ones," said Jeff Beukeboom, Leetch's defense partner. "He has that rare ability to control a game. There are times he does things that make you shake your head and say, 'Wow, you don't see that every day.'"

While helping the Edmonton Oilers win three Stanley Cups, Beukeboom played with Coffey, the NHL's career scoring leader among defensemen.

"Brian's a much better defensive player. He doesn't possess Coffey's flat-out speed, but no one can match Brian's lateral movement," Beukeboom said.

"And people don't realize how good defensively he is. He's always knocking the puck down, breaking up plays, and right away we're on offense. It's like Coffey or Bourque, but I don't think Bourque is as skilled offensively as Brian."

Although it took the Rangers' first appearance in the finals since 1979 to showcase Leetch's talent to a broad audience, he has been a star in the making since arriving in New York after the 1988 Olympics.

Leetch was NHL rookie of the year in 1988-89, was team MVP in 1990-91, became only the fifth defenseman ever to score 100 points and won the Norris Trophy as the league's top defenseman in 1991-92, and was playing great last season before neck and ankle injuries forced him to miss 48 games.

Damaging moment saves Conseco

By Jack Curry
N.Y. Times News Service

ARLINGTON — One of the most embarrassing and damaging moments in Jose Canseco's career probably rescued his career.

If Canseco had not torn a ligament in his right elbow while foolishly thinking he could be a pitcher last May, he might not have discovered how he could still be a feared power hitter.

After having reconstructive surgery on his elbow in July and missing the last three months of 1993, Canseco's career was in doubt. One miserable inning of 33 pitches against the Red Sox had helped transform one of the game's great home run hitters into a great question mark.

But Canseco underwent four months of rehabilitation on his elbow and also underwent therapy to ease some of the personal problems with his former wife that had beset him last year.

He wanted to return to the Rangers as the superb Canseco of 1988. He did not want to be remembered as the silly Canseco of 1993. The surgery helped erase arm and shoulder problems he had endured for two years and has helped restore his bat speed.

"From the first day back, I knew this was amazing," said Canseco, who had a series to remember — for all the right reasons — against Boston last weekend by going 10 for 13 with four homers and 10 runs batted in. "Imagine coming out of surgery, going through four months of rehab and then feeling better the first time you hit a ball off a tee. The first day I felt like I was 90 percent"

As the Yankees limped into the Ballpark in Arlington for the opener of an 11-game road trip and with a four-game losing streak and six losses in their last seven games, the complete resurgence of Canseco was not a scene they were anxious to witness.

Quite susceptible to inside pitches before his injury and so worried about his dwindling bat speed that he switched from a 35-ounce bat to a 31-ounce model, Canseco is worried no more. With a .307 average, 52 runs batted in, 15 homers and 12 stolen bases, Canseco, now the Rangers' designated hitter, is worrying the opposition and pushing toward another 40-homer, 40-steal season.

"He's having fun again," said Texas Manager Kevin Kennedy, discussing the only major leaguer to ever reach 40-40 when he was the American League's most valuable player in 1988.

"I really think some of the things that happened to him personally last year affected him on the field. He wants to be one of the best players in the game again. He wants to be the old Jose again."

After New York's advance scout, Ted Uhlaender, filed his report on the Rangers from last weekend in Boston, Manager Buck Showalter conceded that the Yankees had to make some adjustments on how to pitch Canseco.

Showalter made it obvious that the days of jamming Canseco on his fists had passed. Asked if Uhlaender had sounded an alarm in his scouting report, Showalter said.

Tarpley fears harassment in Dallas

CHICAGO (AP) — Roy Tarpley, banned from the NBA the past three seasons, says he would not rejoin the Dallas Mavericks because he fears harassment from the city's police and media.

Tarpley was barred from the NBA in October 1991 for a minimum of two years after violating the NBA's drug policy three times. He has since completed a substance-abuse program and applied for readmission to the league.

The Mavericks drafted him in the first round out of Michigan in 1986 and retain his NBA rights.

Tarpley, 29, told the Chicago Tribune in Sunday's editions that he likes the Mavericks' organization. However, he said he's had "police officers come up to me when I've gone back there and say, 'They're waiting for you. They'll plant something on you.' I know they're doing a good job of scaring me off."

Mavericks vice president for basketball operations Keith Grant said Monday he would be meeting "at some point" with Tarpley and his agent, George Andrews.

"Until I talk to those guys, there's not a whole lot from my standpoint to say," Grant said.

But Tarpley told the Tribune it would be counterproductive for him to be in a Mavericks uniform.

"It would be like stepping back into the fire to return to Dallas," he said. "That's where I failed. I don't want to go back. The media is going to be waiting for me with all the harassment and bringing everything up again. I'm not saying the grass is greener on the other side, but I'm looking for a new start."

He expressed no preference for any other team.

"I'm not a savior. I'm not saying some team is going to win 50 games because I show up, but I do feel I was on the way to becoming one of the league's best players, and I feel I can get it all together again," he said.

Tarpley won the 1987-88 NBA Sixth Man Award, averaging 13.5 points and 11.8 rebounds that year. He averaged 12.6 points and 10.5 rebounds for Dallas during his five injury-plagued seasons.

After being barred from the NBA, he played two years in Greece for one of Europe's top teams, in a league with drug-testing agreements similar to the NBA's.

"I was playing at a world-class level, submitting myself for random testing. I never had any trouble with anyone or any authorities," Tarpley said.

"Before, I couldn't mix my basketball and my outside life. Now I know I have it together."

ANGELS: 1st half elimination near

right on the money about how they hit the ball. We don't follow those charts and one of them might have gotten through."

The Diablos lead the league in hitting with a .285 team average. But their defense, as much as anything, is the reason they are 38-19 and 11 games ahead of second-place Midland (27-30).

"For (manager) Tim Ireland you have to play defense," Castleberry said. "That was his specialty when he played ball and he took pride in that. We're always going to get the hitting ... but you've got to have gloves up the middle."

The Angels trailed throughout, cutting a 4-0 lead to 5-4 in the ninth inning with Wolff's solo home run. They got a decent start out of Keith Morrison, who allowed four earned runs in 6⅓ innings. But the missed chances early proved too critical.

With 11 games left in the first half of league play, the Angels now have to think about winning the second half to make the playoffs.

"I think it's more important to get playing time and develop players," Sweeney said. "But it's always important to win ... to develop winners. Sometimes you lose sight of that in pro ball. You get so many players shuffling in and out and it's hard to jell as a team."

The Diablos won the first and second halves last season. They may have all but wrapped up the first half title this year and the playoff berth that goes with it, but Castleberry isn't worried about complacency.

"Last year, this team played better the second half than the first half," Castleberry said. "We have a lot of guys here who like to win and they won't accept anything else."

They haven't had to accept less many times this year.

ANGEL DUST: The last five games of the El Paso series will be played at 7 p.m. instead of 6 p.m. as stated in yesterday's Reporter-Telegram ... Angel J.D. Ramirez continues his hot hitting. He had a solo home run Monday and entered the game third in the Texas League with a .335 average. He has hit in 21 of his last 23 games ... Angel Chris Pritchett was hitting .314, good for ninth in the TL, before going 2-for-3 Monday.

TOUR OF DUTY

Think firefighters get hot on the job? Wait til we ride 500 miles around West Texas in June!

Yes, it's crazy, but it's also for a good cause - we're raising money for the Odessa Charity Fund, which supports the Children's Miracle Network, March of Dimes, the American Heart Association, Easter Seals and the American Cancer Society.

As firefighters we are reminded every day of the good work these organizations provide to the citizens of Odessa.

You can help us support them! Join us (for all or part of the trip) June 3 at 9 a.m. as we head out from Central Fire Station to Brownfield, then Plainview, Lubbock, Colorado City and Odessa on our five-day tour. Or support a rider by pledging a donation. Either way, it's a great way to make a difference!

Prices hold

NEW YORK — Oil futures finished slightly lower on Monday with few surprises to move prices and many traders willing to wait for the outcome of the next OPEC meeting before making significant changes.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July settled at $18.11 per barrel, down 1 cent at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Crude moved between $17.91 and $18.20 during the day.

A report from the International Energy Agency had little effect on the market. The IEA said production from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was steady in May while world oil production rose 60,000 barrels per day to 67.52 million barrels per day.

News of a unilateral cease fire announced by northern Yemen also raised a bearish note in the oil market. Prices had gotten a lift a month ago when the civil war started, threatening the country's 350,000 barrel-per-day output.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in July settling at $1.970 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 0.5 cent.

Sara Lee cutbacks

CHICAGO — Sara Lee Corp. said Monday it plans to lay off 6 percent of its employees — between 8,000 and 9,000 people — as the food and personal products conglomerate closes plants worldwide.

Although Sara Lee expects to announce record annual sales and earnings in early August, it said it must cut back to become more efficient after a string of acquisitions in recent years.

Most of the layoffs will be in the personal products division, which makes and markets underwear, pantyhose, and fleece products under brands including Hanes, Champion, L'eggs, Liz Claiborne and DKNY.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar was mixed in quiet trading Monday, closing unchanged against the German mark and Japanese yen and falling against other major currencies. But analysts found signs of strength in the greenback's performance.

In New York the dollar fetched 105.30 yen, unchanged from late Friday.

In New York, the pound rose to $1.5075 from $1.5060.

Stocks rise

NEW YORK — Stock prices ended mostly higher on Monday as bonds rallied and interest rates fell amid easing fears about inflation.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 3.70 points to 3,768.52.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 11 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 259.08 million shares, down from 270.37 million in the previous session.

Programming keys Cox cable deal

Associated Press

ATLANTA — New programming is the key in Cox Enterprises Inc.'s acquisition of the cable TV unit of Times Mirror Co., a $2.3 billion deal that forms the nation's third-largest cable system.

The company formed in the merger, to be called Cox Cable Communications Inc., plans to spend $300 million to develop and invest in cable programming, starting next year with the Outdoor Life Channel that Times Mirror had previously announced.

The plans reflect the unusual nature of the deal.

Times Mirror, a big media company, has decided to get out of cable TV transmission technology. It is selling the cable systems to Cox, which owns its own cable systems. However, Times Mirror will stay in cable TV programming in an ongoing relationship with Cox.

"Programming is going to be a very important part of this business," James C. Kennedy, Cox's chairman and chief executive officer, said Monday.

"Both parties at this point are willing to commit, in the next three to five years, to be engaged in ventures together," said Times Mirror Chairman Robert F. Erburu, who joined Kennedy and other executives of the two media companies in a teleconference with reporters.

The programming partnership will be managed by executives from the Times Mirror cable units.

Cox Cable Communications will be publicly traded, but will be controlled by privately held Cox Enterprises, which also owns the Atlanta Journal-Constitution and 17 other daily newspapers.

It will have about 3 million subscribers nationwide. Tele-Communications Inc., with 10 million subscribers, and Time Warner Inc., with 7 million, are larger.

While important strategically, new TV programs may not make money for Cox Cable for some time, said Michael A. Kupinski, a media analyst at A.G. Edwards & Sons in St. Louis.

"It's important that Times Mirror has a delivery channel open for the development of this programming. ... It can be placed on a meaningful number of systems immediately," Kupinski said. "However, I'm not placing much emphasis at this point as far as its contributing to the bottom line."

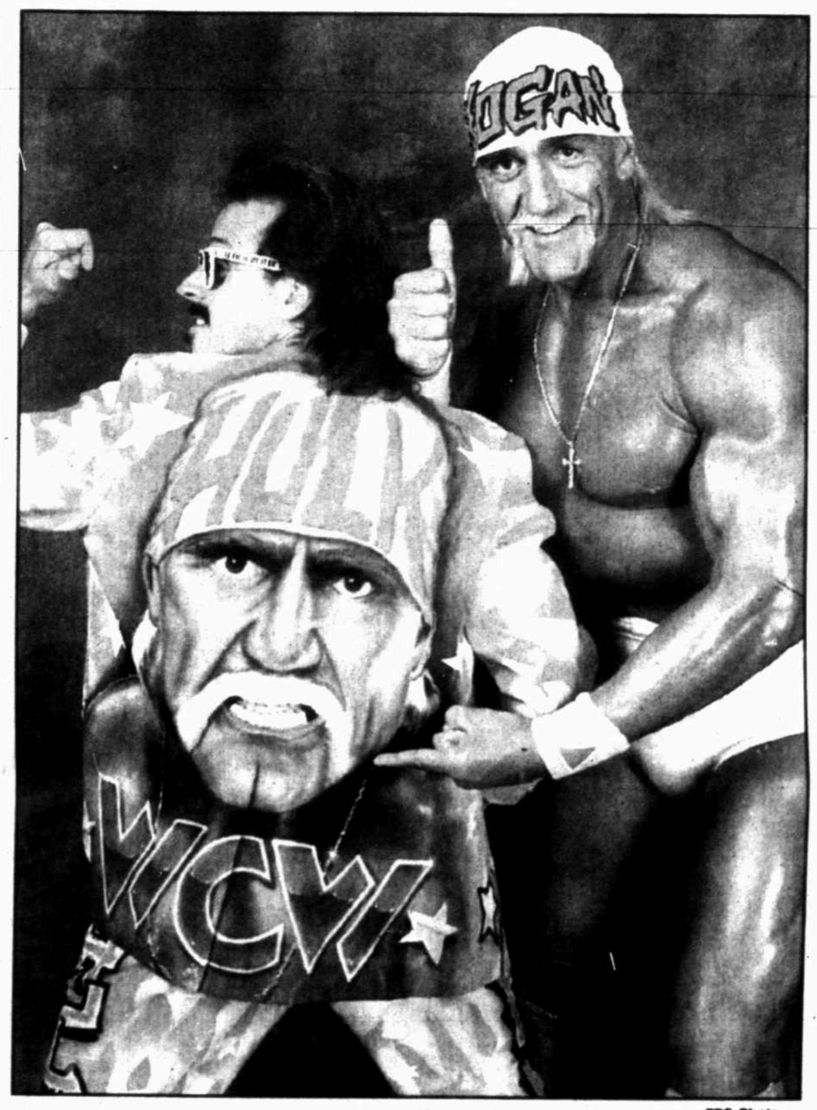

Cox Enterprises had plans earlier this year to link most of its cable systems to Southwestern Bell Corp., a regional phone company, but they fell apart because of uncertainties about regulations and the value of the companies.

James O. Robbins, Cox Cable president, said the company is also pursuing interactive services and is still interested in telephone transmission of information.

Shareholders of Times Mirror will receive about 20 percent of Cox Cable's common stock, valued at about $932 million.

In addition, Times Mirror will borrow $1.36 billion, which Cox Cable will record as debt. Times Mirror will keep the borrowed money after the deal closes.

Los Angeles-based Times Mirror also owns the Los Angeles Times, Newsday and other media outlets. Its stock dropped $3 to $32.75 on the New York Stock Exchange Monday after gaining $3.75 Friday when news of the impending deal first broke.

Radisson expands into basin by acquiring Odessa Hilton

Staff Report

ODESSA — The former Odessa Hilton hotel located at 5200 E. University Blvd. has become the Radisson Hotel & Conference Center, Odessa, marking Radisson Hotels International's expansion into the Permian Basin. The name change was effective Monday.

John Norlander, president of Radisson Hotel Corp., said, "We are excited to bring the Radisson name to this hotel. We are committed to offering world-class service and facilities in each of the more than 300 locations where we are operating."

Frank J. Shandor Jr., general manager of the Odessa hotel, said, "Radisson is quickly earning a reputation as the 'Hotel Company of the '90s' by anticipating the needs and then exceeding the expectations of Radisson's guests, hotel owners and employees. We feel this philosophy is right for this hotel."

The new Radisson Hotel and Conference Center, Odessa has 194 guest rooms, including two whirlpool suites and four parlor suites, the Legends Restaurant, Spirits Lounge, Crossings Lobby Bar and eight meeting and banquet rooms with over 7,000 square feet of function space, including the Alamo Ballroom. The hotel also has an outdoor pool and spa.

It is owned by Alchemedes/Willowtree Limited Partnership of Minneapolis and managed by Victor Management Co. of Newport News, Va.

Employees at the Odessa hotel will participate in Radisson's guest relations and graining program, "Yes, I Can!"

The hotel will be linked to Radisson's toll-free telephone reservation service that provides instantaneous, convenient service for its worldwide customers.

Electronic Data Systems, Sprint fail to resolve terms, end merger talks

DALLAS (AP) — The merger that never was now really isn't.

Electronic Data Systems Corp., a big provider of computer services, and Sprint, the No. 3 long distance phone company, said Monday they had called off merger talks, saying they could not agree on financial terms.

The two companies three weeks ago formally announced they were talking, forced by anonymously sourced news accounts to respond to speculation that had been growing for months.

The companies acknowledged Monday they were pushed to go public before they had resolved key issues, including financial terms. But even their vague statement at that time triggered a round of news stories heralding a rosy, lucrative future of technology and telecommunications.

"It's not a divorce. They were never married," said Peter Bernstein, senior vice president of research for Probe Research in Cedar Knolls, N.J.

"These are people who hadn't even picked out their pattern yet, or the hall or the caterer. And the press wanted them standing up at the altar saying, 'Does anybody object?' It doesn't work that way," he said.

In a joint statement, EDS and Sprint said they were "no longer considering a merger of equals, but are continuing to explore other forms of a strategic relationship." They were not specific.

EDS, a unit of General Motors Corp., is the largest provider of computer services, designing and implementing sophisticated systems regardless of their make. In addition to its long distance business, Sprint is active in other telecommunications areas.

Sprint spokeswoman Susan Kraus said the merger talks ended because the companies couldn't agree on an acceptable exchange ratio for a stock-to-stock merger.

"The ratio proposed by EDS was unacceptable to us, and the exchange ratio we proposed was unacceptable to EDS," she said.

Neither she nor EDS were specific, however.

The companies also declined comment on a Wall Street Journal report that EDS wanted Sprint shareholders to get 1.1 share of the new, merged company's stock for each share of Sprint, while Sprint wanted the ratio to be 1.3. Holders of GM's Class E stock, which reflects EDS' performance, would have received one share in the new company.

Union-airline negotiation to begin soon

DALLAS (AP) — A scheduling conflict between American Airlines and its flight attendants' union has put contract negotiations on hold, but talks should begin shortly, the carrier said Monday.

Officials of American and the Association of Professional Flight Attendants had planned to go back to the table Monday to try to sidestep lengthy arbitration hearings.

American spokesman Al Comeaux said a scheduling conflict kept the talks from starting as planned. He was unsure when they would begin, but said it should be soon.

The two sides agreed to submit their contract dispute to binding arbitration last November at the urging of President Clinton, ending a five-day strike

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Eliminating debt is best use of cash-on-hand

By Bill Doyle

Q: My husband is 60 years old; I am 58. Both of us must work eight more years before we are eligible to retire with pensions. He is putting 20 percent of his salary into a 401(k) retirement plan, in which he has accumulated $15,000. I have approximately $19,500 in my individual retirement account.

Doyle

We bought our home last year, putting $15,000 down on a 30-year mortgage. We pay $125 a month on our car loan and have 18 months to go. Our credit card balance is about $400.

Between the two of us, we earn a little more than $40,000 annually. But our combined retirement income will be at the poverty level. We have been remiss in not investing for retirement.

We have $50,000 set aside in cash, earning no interest whatsoever. We do not need this money for living expenses, but it has created a problem. My husband says we should invest the $50,000; I believe we should leave it where it is.

What is your best advice on how to invest the savings on hand?

A: You two have been misdirecting your assets and seem to be awakening to your mistakes. Here's hoping my recommendations help prevent future errors.

Although this column normally refuses to call any investment "best," let's make an exception in your case. The absolute best use — bar none — for the cash you have on hand would be to reduce your debts, starting with the one on which you pay the highest interest.

Begin by eliminating your credit card balance. And, from here on out, square away your card charges monthly, so that an unpaid balance never begins to build up again.

Next, unless there is a prepayment charge, pay off the car loan.

Finally, again assuming no prepayment penalty, take a big whack out of your mortgage. Do that either by prepaying a bundle or by refinancing with a smaller loan.

The former would shorten the length of the mortgage and save you a great deal of interest over the long run. The latter, which probably is the better choice, also would reduce your total interest costs. More importantly, it would lower your monthly mortgage payments.

Q: How could my mother leave her house and car to me without her will being probated? What kind of form must be filled out, and where do we obtain that form?

She is a widow. I am her only child, sole beneficiary and executrix under her will. Her certificates of deposit and bank account have my name on them. There is nothing else, except household furnishings.

A: You could have the ownership of the house and the car registered in both your names. That can be arranged at your county courthouse and motor vehicle bureau. Then, when one of you dies, the survivor will become sole owner.

But I certainly don't recommend that — especially for the house, which undoubtedly has a much greater value than the car. One major disadvantage of joint ownership is that only half the tax cost basis "steps up" to current value when one of the two co-owners dies.

So, if the house is jointly owned and you sell it after your mother passes away, you might have to pay a much larger capital gains tax on the profit than you would if you had inherited the house, in which case the entire tax cost basis would have stepped up.

Here, we are assuming you do not live in that house and are not entitled to the once-in-a-lifetime exclusion from capital gains tax on $125,000 of the profit from sale of your principal residence.

Probate can be bothersome and time-consuming. However, except for certain states — notably New York and California — where the lawyers really get their claws in, it needn't be terribly expensive.

Starks adds fuel to NBA Final fire

By N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — In the madness of the moment that engulfed the Knick players and fans in Madison Square Garden on Sunday, the unfettered John Starks, still aglow in sweat from the comeback victory in Game 7, told an interviewer at courtside: "After these tough playoff series we've had, Houston will be a breeze."

"He said that?" asked Charles Smith. "Good, old John. That adds a little fuel to the fire." It was now Monday afternoon. Smith had driven to SUNY-Purchase where he and the rest of the Knicks were meeting the team bus for the trip to Houston for the National Basketball Association finals starting Wednesday.

"This is not going to be a breeze by far," said Smith, hoping to toss a little water on the fire. "Houston is very explosive."

Greg Anthony put a different spin on Starks' statement.

"We don't feel as much pressure being in the championship as we did having to get there," said Anthony. "And especially after the frustrations of losing out in each of the last three years. But this is the moment we've all dreamed of, ever since we were kids."

Pat Riley, the coach, arrived and said his job now was to "calm them down from last night and the high of getting here."

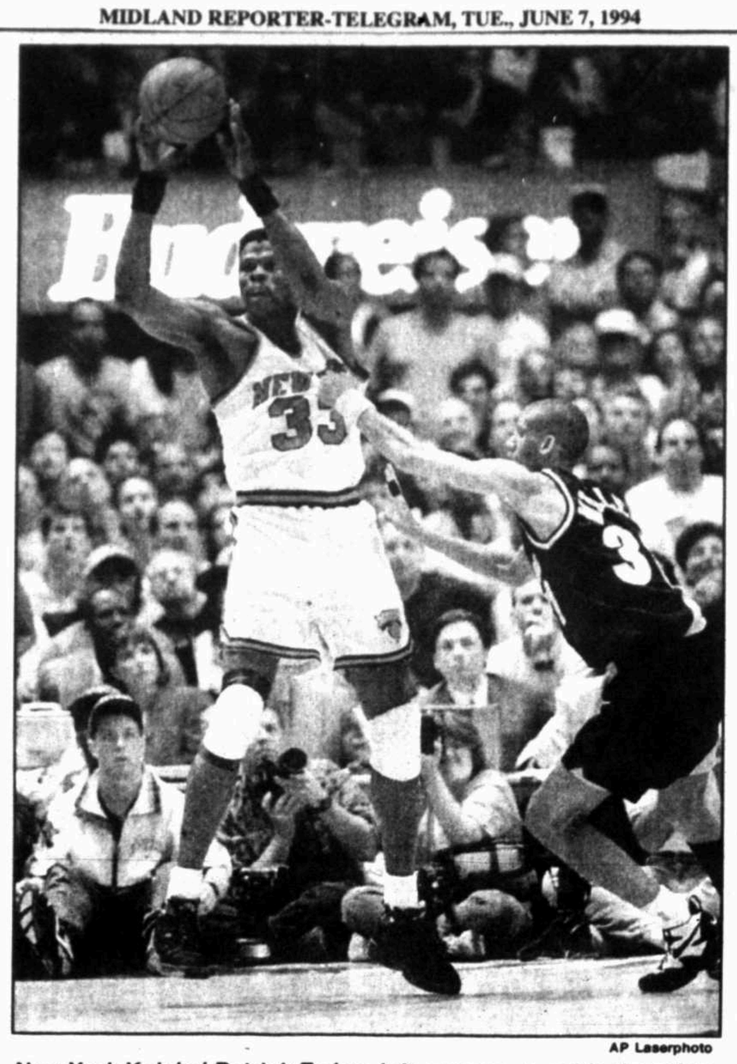

He was reminded that they were only four victories away from the championship.

"Four wins is a millennium," he said. "This is the toughest team we've faced."

Patrick Ewing, with the media flocking to him, said, "Excuse me." He wasn't talking. He didn't have to. For the game he played Sunday night was the finest he has played in the nine years and 750-some games he has been a New York Knick, and it echoed from the rooftops of all the boroughs.

While Ewing has been an all-star, it was believed here that he was never quite as good as he might be. Sunday he was all he could be, and that was simply magnificent. While he had scored all those points over the years and got all those rebounds, he never quite combined the great ballplayer's savvy with his great physical skills.

"When I heard Patrick come past our bench, and yell to Riley, 'Call 'em for me!' when we were down in the last quarter," said Smith, "then I knew how much he wanted to win."

Rockets' rocky road plays key

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Rudy Tomjanovich will recall more than just the good times in the Houston Rockets' drive for an NBA championship. He'll remember the rocky times, too.

"You have to be able to weather a couple of storms," the Rockets coach said. "I believe in taking negatives and making them into positives. The other thing is, don't lower yourself to a situation. If you do, you fall apart."

There were plenty of storms that could have sunk the Rockets' drive to Wednesday night's Game 1 of the NBA Finals.

After the Rockets' NBA record-tying 15-0 record to start the season, starters Robert Horry and Kenny Smith went into a mid-winter funk.

Horry had more trauma in February when the Rockets tried to trade him to Detroit but the deal was aborted when Sean Elliott failed his physical.

Smith recovered to become an effective leader in the playoffs, helping Vernon Maxwell in making the Rockets a potent 3-point shooting threat.

"If it gets tough, you can start making excuses and pointing fingers, but we had a very minimum of that stuff," Tomjanovich said. "I think that's unbelieveable. It happens on every team, it happens in families."

Horry overcame his reluctance to be aggressive on offense and put the distracting trade attempt behind him.

"I've got to give Robert a great deal of praise for the way he took the situation," Tomjanovich said. "It's turned out good for the team. I look at it now and wonder how the hell we could have done it myself.

"Those things could be misunderstood with young players. Robert knows how I feel about him as person and player. But as coach you have to do things you think are right."

The San Antonio Spurs also provided a distraction, starting April with the Midwest Division lead. Still, the Rockets wouldn't fold.

"A lot of times its like horse race and you're pacing and all of a sudden that guy that's leading tightens up after being to get comfortable and the other guy comes on," the coach said.

"A lot of teams would fold but we regrouped and had a helluva kick. We decided we were better than a pace horse."

The Rockets saved the biggest downer for the conference semifinals when they lost the first two home games to Phoenix. After being called Choke City, they rallied to eliminate the Suns.

"It hurt to be called chokers because that's been a trait of this team, holding onto leads," Tomjanovich said. "All those things helped prepare us for the playoffs. Every game was so big and helped us to focus."

The Rockets blew a 20-point lead with 10 minutes left in the game and lost to the Suns 124-117 in overtime. Fans wrote off the Rockets, never suspecting they would come back and reach the NBA final.

"I told them it just happened," Tomjanovich said. "If you can get up on a team 18-20 points you can beat them. I told them if they fell behind 0-3, I'd still believe we could still do it."

Oddsmakers have made the Rockets a 2-1 favorite to beat the Knicks.

The presence of Houston center Hakeem Olajuwon and the problems the Knicks had in beating the Indiana Pacers were cited by oddsmakers as the main factors in setting the betting line Monday.

The Rockets were also made 5½-point favorites to win Wednesday's opening game at home.

"Before the Knicks played the Pacers and the Rockets played the Utah Jazz, this would have been a pick 'em series," said Michael Roxborough, who sets odds for most of the sports books in the city. "I think now the perception has changed that the Knicks are a beatable team and that the Rockets are playing as well as they have all year."

Can Houston fans dare to believe?

HOUSTON (AP) — Do Houston sports fans believe the Rockets are better than the New York Knicks?

Absolutely.

But are they confident the Houston Rockets will actually give the city its first major sports championship since the Oilers won the AFL title in 1960 and '61.

Not quite. These oft-burned fans have been here before.

"How many times have we had teams that were good, but ended up losing to teams that weren't that good?" said Eric Neil of Houston, who sums up the sentiment of Rockets fans who aren't yet daring to dream of championship glory.

"I'll believe it when I see (broadcaster) Ahmad Rashad say we're the NBA world champions. Even then I probably won't buy a T-shirt until the next week."

This is the Rockets' third appearance in the NBA championship round — Larry Bird's Boston Celtics ruined hopes for titles in 1981 and 1986.

Baseball's Houston Astros have never been to the World Series, although they have twice played in the National League playoffs.

The Oilers appeared poised for an NFL title the past several years, but each season ended with disappointment. In particular, the colossal playoff choke in the 1992 AFC wild-card playoff game. A 35-point lead at halftime dissolved into a 41-38 loss to Buffalo, the biggest comeback in league history.

"We've got plenty of reason to doubt," said Andre Bryant, a Houston security guard. "They'll choke. They always do."

Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said fans should be thankful for the past success of Houston teams.

"I've had some pretty heated discussions about this very subject in some sports bars," said Tomjanovich, who played on the Rockets team that lost in the 1981 finals. "Look at all the cities that haven't come as close as Houston.

"At least we have a chance to be a part of that. It's amazing to me. I've been disappointed by the reaction. You wonder if people really enjoy the game or just the winning."

Not everyone in Houston has a doom-and-gloom attitude about the Rockets.

"I think this team is different," said Houston minister David Capart. "I don't think this is going to be a runaway series but I think the Rockets are going to win. I think it will be a seven-game series."

Said fan Jeff Ham: "We've finally got a good player in every position. While all those guys might be inconsistent in their own games, the odds are on any given night one of them will be hot."

The chief cheerleader for the Rockets is Houston Mayor Bob Lanier, who has proclaimed Tuesday "Rockets Red Day."

Pyle, Moulton get Twin Cities wins

Midlanders Tim Pyle and Steve Moulton each won feature races Friday at the Twin Cities Speedway. Pyle won in the street stock division and Moulton took the mini stock feature.

Top three finishers in Friday's featured races at the Twin Cities Speedway:
Street stock: 1. Tim Pyle, Midland. 2. J.M. Harrison, Midland. 3. Paul Wheeler, Midland. Mini stock: 1. Steve Moulton, Midland. 2. Curtis Stone, Midland. 3. Shay Lane, Odessa. Late model: 1. John David Jr., Odessa. 2. C.E. "Hook" Miller, Odessa. 3. Bob Barnett, Odessa. Bomber division: 1. David Barnett, Odessa. 2. Terry Register, Odessa. 3. Darren Anthony, Midland.

Watson records second TIDA win

SAN ANTONIO — Midland's Jay Watson became the first Texas International Drivers Association racer to win two features this season Saturday at the San Antonio Speedway. Watson, driving an Oldsmobile Cutlass, started in the eighth position. He took the lead on the 21st lap.

Watson is now second in the point standings to David Umscheid. Umscheid has 64 and Watson 57.

WT Heat third, fourth in Hobbs

HOBBS, N.M. — The West Texas Heat girls softball teams recorded third and fourth place finishes last weekend at the Hobbs ASA Girls Fastpitch Tournament. The 14-and-under team placed third, winning three games by shut out: 8-0 over L and W Outlaws, 18-0 over Yates Construction and 10-0 over Midland's Blue Diamonds.

The Heat's 12-and-under team placed fourth and received the Sportsmanship Trophy.

Sutherland aces

Leroy Sutherland fired a hole-in-one on the No. 16, 157-yard, par-3 and Ranchland Hills Country Saturday. He used a 4-wood and the shot was witnessed by Don Cox, Bill Cope and Wilbur Motley.

Patsy Sayers: The trained hands of a professional

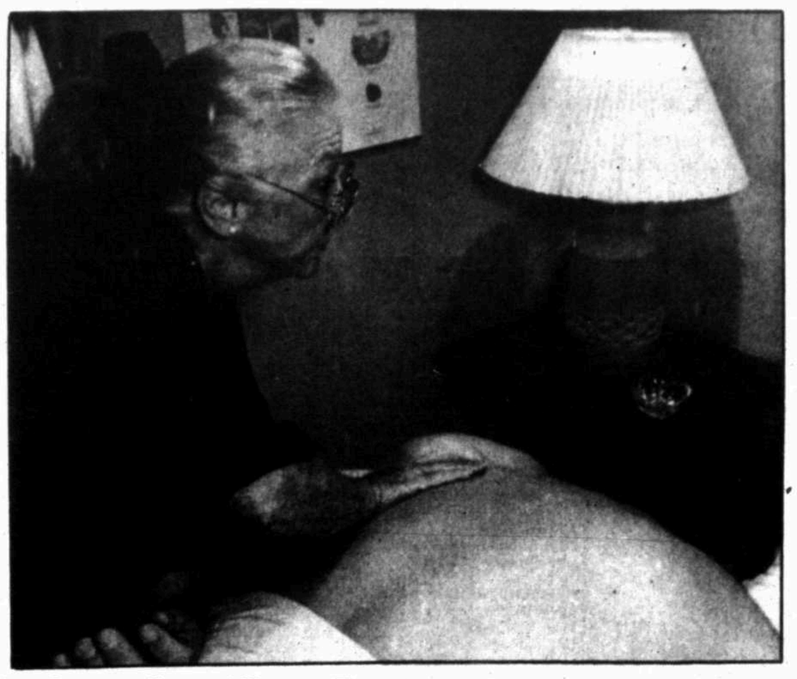

What athletes do to their bodies in the heated pursuit of victory, time does too...slowly but surely...to all of us. Wear and tear on the body over the years is inescapable, but, like athletes even senior citizens can find salvation in the hands of a trained professional massage therapist; many age related health problems and illnesses are associated with the circulatory system, which is improved by massage.

Therapeutic massage by a trained professional is designed to stimulate both the nervous and lymphatic systems, release the body's natural tranquilizers (the endorphins), increase blood circulation, relax muscular tension and break down scar tissue.

As more is learned about attaining and enhancing good health through proper nutrition, vitamins, minerals herbs and exercise, more people are tuning into the relaxing and therapeutic of massage performed by properly schooled and state licensed massage therapists.

To become licensed, massage therapists must graduate from a state approved school and then pass a rigid State Board Examination given by the Texas Department of Health. Therapists not licensed by the State of Texas may not practice in Texas. After being licensed, having studied anatomy, physiology hydrotherapy and reflexology as well as a myriad of massage techniques such as Swedish, Japanese Shiatsu, Chinese Chi balancing, Polarity Therapy stretching and joint range of motion, therapists are qualified to work with clients from a physicians prescription and also file insurance claims.

An added incentive is that massage treatments prescribed by a physician and not paid for by insurance, are tax deductible as a medical expense.

Patsy Sayers, a licensed Massage Therapist, uses a number of techniques to alleviate ailments such as pain and stress. For more information, call 686-9691.

Patsy Sayers is a Texas licensed Massage Therapist professional who works with many different kinds of clients, using a variety of massage modalities on clients who suffer from various illnesses and symptoms such as arthritis, fibromyalgia, migraine and other forms of headache, stroke, stress, water retention and pain, as well as those suffering from illness and/or injury and many others.

The principle benefits of massage are that: it improves circulation, causing the blood to flow three times faster than normal thereby lessening the work required by the heart and relieving congestion throughout the body. It pushes lymph through the body, strengthening the immune system that is so valuable in fighting disease, and it helps rid the body of the toxins which enter it daily.

Patsy uses a particularly soothing and healing massage cream which contains arnica and ivy and well as a paraffin oil to enhance skin moisture.

She also gives hot oil scrubs to rid the body of dead, dry, flaky skin. These are quite popular in West Texas because nearly everybody has a dry skin problem. Now is the perfect time to Spring Clean your skin, 'off with the old and on with the new'!

Patsy practices by appointment only, at many locations, and she does make house calls, all for the convenience of her clients.

Call her at 686-9691 for an appointment.

The gift of a massage for a birthday, an anniversary, mother's day, father's day or just because you appreciate and care for someone is a loving, thoughtful and much appreciated gift.

Call Patsy for an appointment. If you would like to learn more about massage, give her a call she'd love to tell you all about it.

If her answering service answers, just leave your name number and message and she'll get back to as soon as possible.

The Lewellen Construction Company: A rapid response to storm damage

The spring and summer months are the perfect time to have any additions or remodeling work done to your home.

Unfortunately however,finding the right people to do the work can often be fraught with problems: 'are they reliable?', what kind of warranties do they have?' and 'do they specialize in the kind of work that I need done?' are all potential questions and/or problems.

Fortunately for the residents of the Permian Basin, the Lewellen Construction Company, owned and operated by Bill and Melody Lewellen, is a one-stop-source for a whole variety of home improvement and remodeling services, and they have the experience and warranties to back up their claim that they 'can remodel from the foundations to the roof'.

Bill Lewellen has been in the siding business since 1976, and local residents have come to trust his skill and judgement on all matters that pertain to remodeling.

In their new showroom, located at 3415 West Wall, the Lewellens are now offering their usual services plus they are now organized into departments in order to make decision making easier for the customer.

For example, in their showroom, they have a separate department dealing with maintenance free siding and storm windows, a department for roofing, one for painting and one for general remodeling (including vinyl fencing).

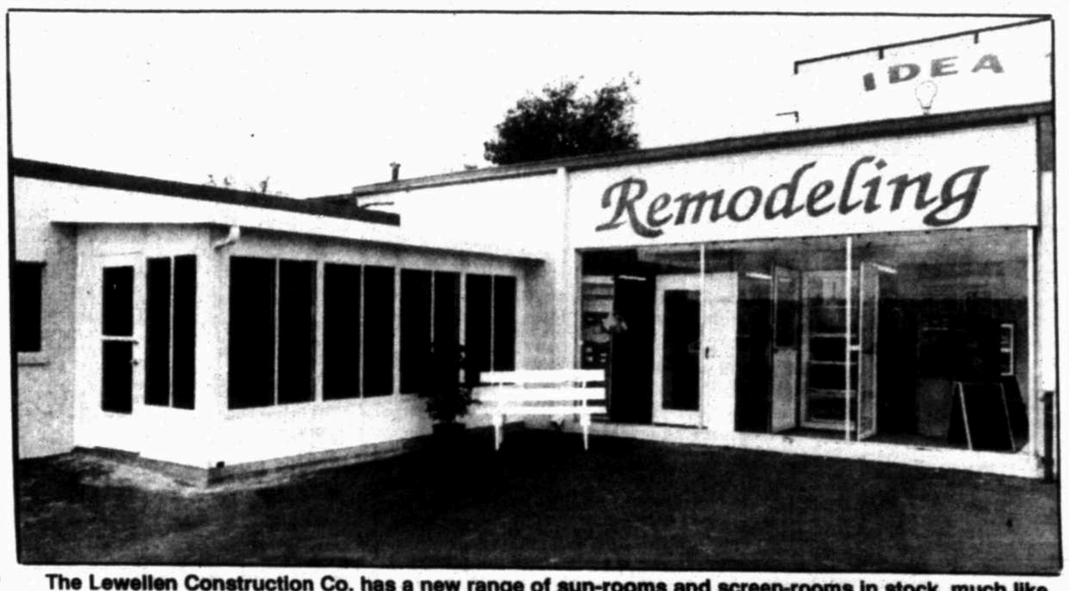

But, for the Lewellens, just having a wide range of products and services is not enough. Bill and Melody believe in total construction management.

Instead of worrying about an endless stream of contractors, about whom you know nothing, traipsing through your house, the Lewellens will look after the whole job, proving a more cost-effective and secure service.

It is this kind of philosophy that has brought them contracts with large commercial organizations as well as residential owners. Ector ISD, the City of Midland, The Texas Department of Transportation and the Odessa Housing Authority are all organizations which have had large projects managed and completed by the Lewellens.

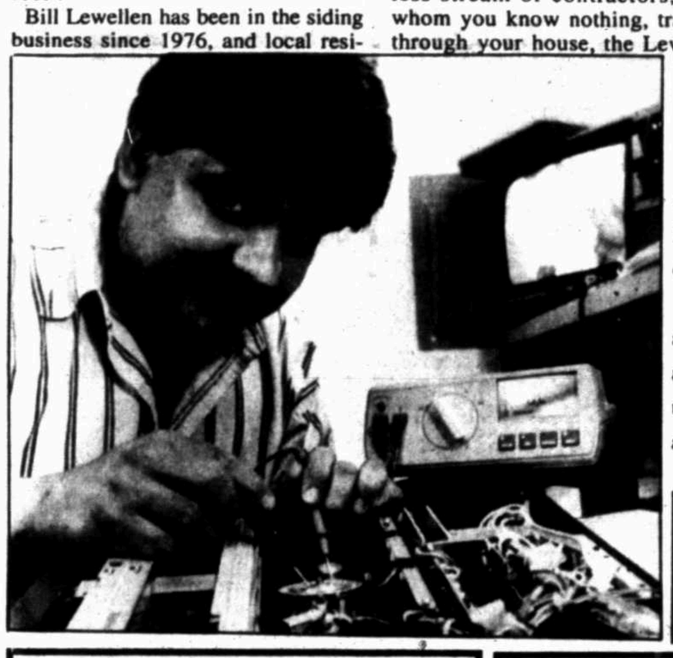

The Lewellens have also added a range of new services to their repertoire; they are now offering screen-rooms (screened-in porches) and sun-rooms in a variety of sizes and styles.

For more information about their services, warranties (they offer virtually unlimited warranties on all their products and services) and financial plans, call them at 520-0244 or stop by their showroom at 3415 West Wall in Midland.

The Lewellen Construction Co. has a new range of sun-rooms and screen-rooms in stock, much like the one in the photograph. For more information about their range of products and services, warranties and financing options, call 520-0244, or stop by their location at 3415 West Wall, Midland.

An expanded team of experts at Delta Electronics

To help the residents of Midland and Odessa with their VCR repairs, Delta Electronics has announced a new member of their repair team.

The thoroughly trained Rene Salcido has already been with the team for six-months and is, as all members on the team are, undergoing continual training to remain abreast of the cutting edge of VCR technology.

Rene Salcido is the latest member of the expert electronics team at Delta Electronics. For more information about repairs or services, call 683-3582, or stop by 1308 South Midkiff in Midland.

The tram at Delta Electronics prides itself on doing good, professional work with individual care and attention to each job. Because they are a factory authorized service center for over 20 major name brands , they have access to parts, information, technical assistance and technical training that is not available to the average repair center.

This enables them to meet your needs whether they are warranty or non-warranty repairs.

Delta can not only help with VCR repairs, but also with all 0of your other audio, video and household needs. Whether it is your video-game, VCR, cam-, corder, computer monitor, microwave oven, television or any auto or home audio equipment, the repair team will be there to repair it for you.

Unlike some organizations, when Delta repairs a unit, they don't just fix it. With every repair they service the system by cleaning and inspecting the entire operation. The system is then tested to ensure full operation. As an added benefit, most repairs are then sealed in plastic to keep out dust and are ready for pick-up.

It is this kind of extra service and attention to detail which helps make Delta Electronics the best place to take your expensive electronic equipment.

If you need the services of a professional electronics team, call Delta Electronics at 683-3582 or stop by their location at 1308 South Midkiff in Midland.

RESOLUTION NO. 94-166

RESOLUTION DECLARING CERTAIN STRUCTURES WITHIN THE CITY TO BE DANGEROUS, DILAPIDATED AND PUBLIC NUISANCES ORDERING THEIR DESTRUCTION OR REMOVAL AND AUTHORIZING THE ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS FOR SUCH WORK

WHEREAS, the Department of Engineering and Development has determined that the structures described in Section Two hereof are unsafe and dangerous structures and must be abated by repair or demolition and removal from the premises; and

WHEREAS, the Director of Engineering and Development or his designee has given notice of the defects to the owner of each of said buildings as required by Section 4-8-3 of the City Code of Midland, Texas, and

WHEREAS, on May 11, 1994, after having failed, neglected or refused to correct the defects, those owners were notified, by letter or publication, that a public hearing before the City Council would determine whether certain structures are each dangerous structures and a public nuisance; and

WHEREAS, a notice of such hearing was also published on May 15, 1994, in a newspaper of general circulation in the City and County; and

WHEREAS, on this 24th day of May, 1994 at the time and place prescribed by that notice, the Council held a public hearing for that purpose; and

WHEREAS, the Council finds that all notices required by the City Code of Midland, Texas, have been complied with and that notices of said hearing have been duly given; and

WHEREAS, the Council has heard the evidence and arguments presented by all persons who appeared before it; and

WHEREAS, the Council finds that the notice of the Director of Engineering and Development or his designee to make the structures safe, either by repair or demolition and removal, has not been complied with.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS

SECTION ONE. That the Council hereby finds and determines that each of the improvements, buildings and structures described in Section Two hereof is a dangerous structure, is structurally unsafe, constitutes a fire hazard and is dangerous to human life, and their continued use will constitute a hazard to the safety, health and public welfare, and each is hereby declared to be a public nuisance.

SECTION TWO. That the owner, agent or occupant of each dangerous structure described in this Section is hereby ordered to take down and remove the same from the premises within ten (10) days from the date of notice as set out in Section 4-8-3 and Section 4-8-4 of the City Code of Midland, Texas. 310 General Help Wanted

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions.

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
