Reagan considering retaliatory measures

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is considering closing the Beirut airport and cutting off goods and services to the Lebanese capital in an effort to increase pressure on those holding 40 Americans hostage in the city, the White House announced today.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan could decide later in the day which of a series of steps the United States would take to put pressure on the terrorists, Iran, Syria, Libya and any other nations or groups supporting the hijackers of TWA Flight 847.

Speakes indicated, however, that no direct military action to free the hostages was contemplated, saying the safety of the 40 American men being held captive remains a top priority.

"The president has pledged he would do nothing that will put the lives of the hostages in danger, but I do not rule out any other measures," the spokesman said.

Speakes refused to say how the United States might act to close the airport, other than to suggest "international cooperation" as one option.

Asked if an embargo of the port city or closure of its ports were among the options Reagan is considering, Speakes refused to say, telling reporters, "That's for you to figure out."

The spokesman said Reagan, in a meeting with his national security advisers Monday afternoon, asked for a list of actions he could take "that could increase the pressures on those who are holding our citizens and those who support the terrorists.

"Since yesterday's meeting, these measures have been developed and are ready for presentation to the president today. He will review them during the day, and we do expect some decisions will be made."

Speakes asked rhetorically: "Does this mean cutting off goods and services to Beirut or the use of the Beirut airport? Yes, this is one option among many that will be considered by the president."

He refused to enumerate the others.

The hijacked Boeing 727, with three members of its flight crew aboard, is still on the tarmac at the airport, being guarded by Shiite Moslem militiamen. The 37 remaining hostages have been moved from the airport.

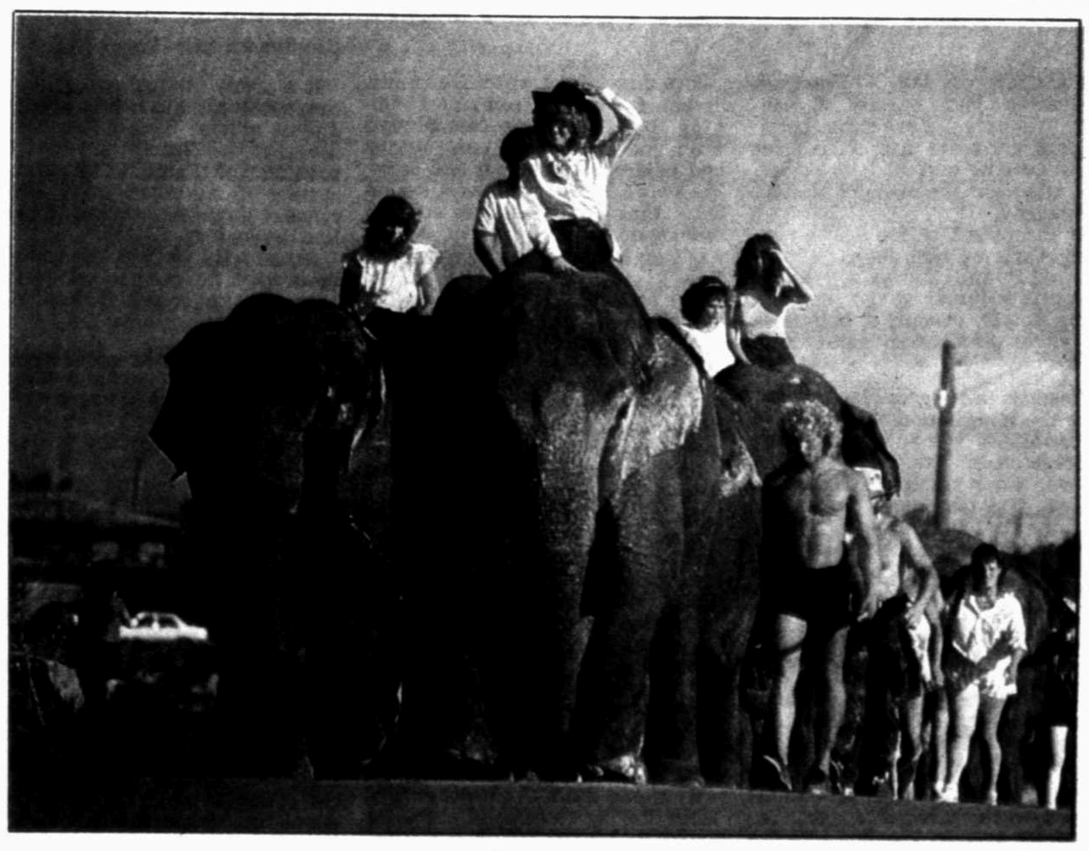

Speakes said the United States believes statements by Shiite leader Nabih Berri that all of the hostages are being held in South Beirut, although Berri has indicated about a half dozen of those are not under his control.

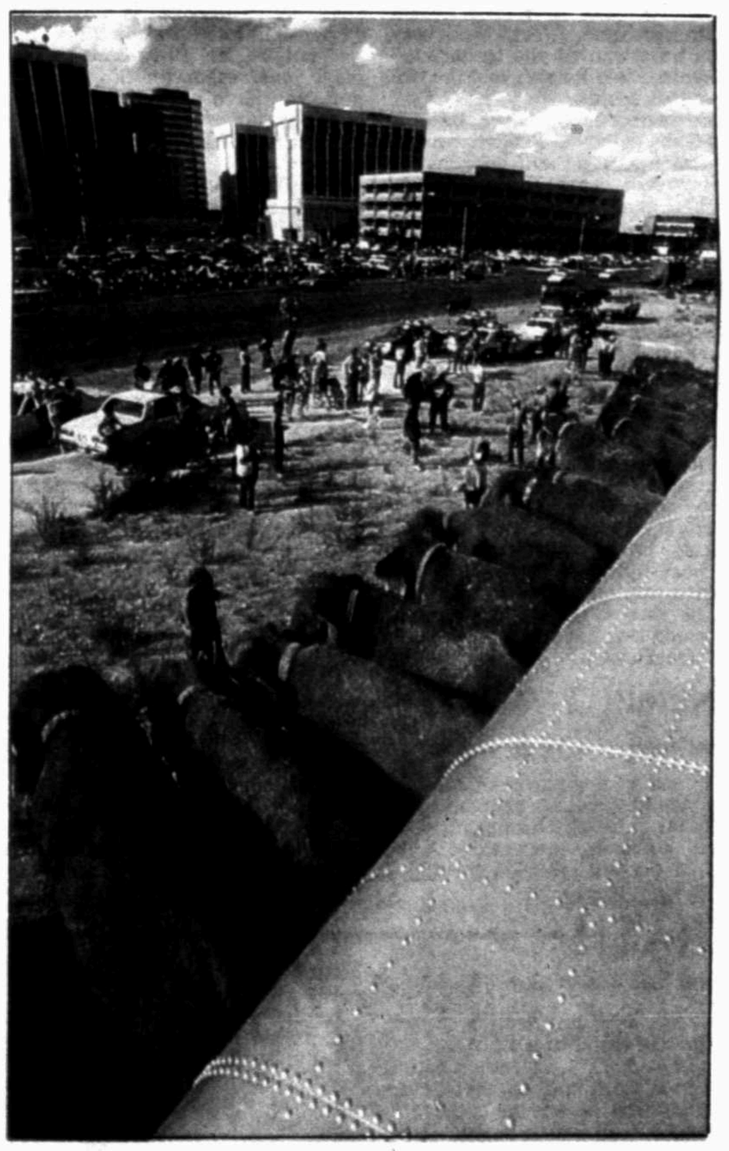

Asked if it was reasonable to conclude that the measures under consideration included efforts to increase pressure on other Arab nations, specifically including Iran, Syria and Libya, Speakes replied, "Yes, you can conclude we will try to bring pressure on those countries who try to support terrorism, yes."

Asked if the United States is in consultation with the Lebanese government, which has been receiving U.S. support, about the steps being contemplated, Speakes said there have been discussions with Lebanon's ambassador to the United States and other representatives of the government, but not to discuss the actions now under study.

Although Speakes said international cooperation was one way of bringing to bear the pressure the administration seeks, he said unilateral action also is being considered.

Expert says Air-India jet 'broke up in the air'

CORK, Ireland (AP) — An Indian expert who inspected the wreckage of an Air-India jumbo jet that suddenly plummeted 31,000 feet into Atlantic waters said today it was apparent the Boeing 747 "broke up in the air."

"Some of the pieces, like chairs and cushions, are intact, so they had to fall from high up in the sky," Captain V.K. Bhasin, deputy manager of Indian Airlines, Air-India's sister company., told reporters.

"If the whole aircraft had impacted (against) the water there would have been a lot more twists and turns in the chairs and some of the other equipment," he said.

Bhasin was part of a seven-man team of Indian civil aviation experts inspecting wreckage picked up from the North Atlantic after Air-India flight 182 from Toronto, Canada, to India crashed into the sea off Ireland on Sunday. Officials say 329 were on board. It stopped in Montreal and was to refuel in London before flying to New Delhi and Bombay.

Bashin said it was too soon to say whether an explosion brought down the plane, but "what looks quite obvious is that the aircraft broke up in the air. That everybody knows."

Air-India, meanwhile, indefinitely suspended its weekly flight to Canada "unless security gets tight" at Canadian airports, S.K. Anand, deputy operations manager, said in India.

As the air and sea search for bodies was scaled down, almost 200 passengers remained unaccounted for. Irish authorities appealed to beachgoers in France, Spain and the British Isles to look out for bodies and wreckage washing ashore.

Joe Jennings, head of the Irish Government Information Service, old a news conference that if any bodies or debris were found on foreign shores, authorities in Dublin would arrange to ship bodies and wreckage to Ireland. The plane crashed 120 miles southwest of Ireland.

Jennings said 131 bodies had been found. Earlier, the Marine Rescue Coordinating Center in Shannon, Ireland, put the figure at 133. The discrepancy was not immediately explained.

Jennings said the bodies of 84 adult females, 13 adult males, 16 girls and 18 boys had been recovered. Two Irish navy ships would continue to search the area, he said.

County Commissioners to request variances on jail cell-space rule

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners will take a gamble on the "outside chance" that the Texas Commission on Jail Standards will grant the Midland County Jail variances on the 30 percent rule on single-cell space and thus increase inmate capacity and save the taxpayers some money.

The request also will delay action on jail renovation for about a month.

Earlier, the Jail Commission had denied granting Midland County any more variances after the jail in mid-May failed to pass the scrutiny of the Jail Commission's annual inspection by Joe Slater, supervising inspector.

"They've reversed themselves a time or two in previous sessions," said Commissioner Durward Wright, who expressed hope that the Jail Commission might grant the variances.

"It's not a very big expense to ask for a variance," said Wright and jail architect Walter Pate agreed with him.

"The worst that could happen is that they'd say 'no'," said Wright.

"That's true, too," said Pate.

However, Pate was not optimistic that the Jail Commission would grant the variances, particularly after Midland voters on May 11 passed a $3 million bond issue to renovate the jail on the fifth floor of the courthouse. Renovation is to cost an estimated $2.4 million and is to be completed in late 1986.

"It's like being a little bit pregnant," Pate said. "You either are or you aren't. We either are going to comply (with jail standards) or we aren't."

Architects Pate and James Riggen, Sheriff Gary Painter and the commissioners are to confer with the Jail Commission staff in Austin on July 10 on the request for variances and then are to meet with the Jail Commission on July 25, when the Commission is to review and grant or deny the requests for variances.

The Jail Commission requires that a minimum of 30 percent of jail cells be single cells; currently, the 101-bunk Midland County Jail has 27.7 percent percent single cells. But under a renovation plan drafted by the architects, the proposed 124-

Midland unemployment rate up over April

By MELLA McEWEN
Business-Oil Writer

A number of small adjustments made to cope with the current uncertain oil industry combined to increase Midland's unemployment rate from 4.3 percent in April to 4.5 percent in May. This compares with a 3.7 percent unemployment rate for May of 1984.

Figures released today by the Texas Unemployment Commission for May 1985 show the civilian labor force numbered 64,000, down from 64,800 in April and 64,500 a year ago. Total unemployment rose from 2,800 in April to 2,900 in May.

Compared to a year ago, total unemployed was 2,400, total employment fell from 62,000 last month to 61,100, while the total employment in May 1984 was 62,100.

"There's so much happening all at once, no single reason can be pinpointed other than continued readjustments by local firms." said Paul Adams, labor analyst for the Texas Employment Commission.

He noted that while all companies are making changes, there were no major modifications, just minor ones that combined to make things unstable.

"Oil itself is in a very unstable time right now, and companies are merging with each other or merging sections, and exploration is being put on a back burner," Adams said. "It's just a very unstable, sluggish time, and I expect it to stay this way for possibly the next few months."

It was a slightly different story in Odessa as the unemployment rate there fell from 5.7 percent in April to 5.6 percent in May. At the same time, the civilian labor force went from 68,900 to 67,500. While total unemployment dropped from 3,900 to 3,800 during the past month, total employment also decreased from 65,000 in April to 63,700 in May.

This compares to the figures a year ago of 5.3 percent unemployment rate, a civilian labor force of 67,600, total unemployed of 3,600, and a total employment figure of 64,000.

Adams pointed out that the labor force in both cities is changing. "We know people are leaving. In fact, we've heard there's not a U-Haul trailer to be rented in the area. We also know there are some people coming in. We just don't know what effect that will have."

Another factor, not just in the Midland-Odessa area but in the state as a whole is the time of year. Summer is here, school is out, and many teen-agers are in the market for a summer job. This was reflected in the state's total unemployment figure, which Adams said rose some during the month, especially among teen-agers.

Midland exemplifies Illinois' situation

By NEIL McLAUGHLIN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — To understand why Illinois stands to lose a chunk of its representation in Congress, it may be helpful to think about Midland, Texas.

Recent Census Bureau reports and a study by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, a government workers' union, indicate Illinois probably will lose two of its 22 seats in the House of Representatives at the beginning of the next decade.

In contrast, Texas may gain up to five seats, boosting the size of its House delegation from 27 to 32.

Midland exemplifies the trends threatening to retire two Illinois congressional districts as well as the politicians representing them.

The latest edition of Rand McNally's "Places Rated Almanac" gives Midland the nation's highest score for personal economic outlook. The authors said Midland's combination of average household income, cost-of-living factors, rate of income growth and rate of job expansion made it the most promising place in America for prosperity.

Average personal income in Midland jumped nearly 61 percent over a five-year period and jobs expanded by almost 48 percent.

Meanwhile, back in the Decatur, Ill., area — similar in size to Midland — income rose only 34 percent in the same period and jobs declined by almost 11 percent.

And not surprisingly, when the Census Bureau earlier this month released its study of metropolitan population growth from the 1980 census to 1984, Midland registered a 38 percent increase — the highest in the nation.

In Decatur, the population declined by about 2 percent. And while most Illinois metro areas gained population, the growth was extremely modest compared with that of Sun Belt states such as Texas.

AFSCME, working with the same data, issued a study projecting a shift of 16 congressional districts from the Northeast and Midwest to the Sun Belt after the 1990 census.

The 435 seats in the House are reapportioned every 10 years after the census to reflect population shifts. The largest states receive priority in the allocation process.

After the last census in 1980, Illinois lost two of its 24 House seats.

"What you're seeing is not a loss of population, but just a slower growth rate than in the Sun Belt," said Will Robinson, a political action representative for AFSCME.

"What you're seeing is that Florida and Texas are growing unbelievably fast," Robinson added.

According to the AFSCME study, Florida will gain three seats in Congress after 1990 and California will pick up five, giving it 50 representatives — the largest delegation in Washington.

Arizona, Georgia and Virginia are predicted to gain one seat each.

In the economically static Northeast and Midwest — the so-called "Frost Belt" — New York will lose three seats as will Michigan, according to AFSCME.

Pennsylvania and Ohio, like Illinois, each will lose two seats and Massachusetts, Iowa, West Virginia and Kansas stand to lose one seat each, AFSCME said.

Reagan recalls JFK at library fundraiser

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, two normally rancorous political foes, put aside their differences for an evening to recall with tenderness and vigor the memory of John F. Kennedy.

At the behest of Kennedy's children, Caroline and John, Jr., the president and his wife, Nancy, attended a dinner at the senator's home Monday evening to help raise money for the Kennedy library near Boston.

"Many men are great, but few capture the imagination and the spirit of the times. The ones who do are unforgettable," Reagan told the 200 guests. "Four administrations have passed, five presidents have occupied the Oval Office, and I feel sure that each of them thought of John Kennedy now and then, and his thousand days in the White House."

The Massachusetts senator, who noted that his liberal brother and the conservative president would not have always agreed on the issues, told Reagan that Kennedy would have "admired the strength of your commitment and your capacity to move the nation."

Kennedy, on behalf of the family, presented Reagan with a small figure of an American eagle, which the senator said had been on the slain president's desk. "He would very much have wanted you to have it," the senator told Reagan, and the two men shook hands.

The senator has often been a vehement critic of Reagan cuts in domestic spending and his administration's civil rights policies.

Behind them on the podium were Miss Kennedy, Mrs. Reagan, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, John Kennedy Jr., and Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, a daughter of the late Robert F. Kennedy.

Reagan — the main speaker at the event largely made up of Kennedy loyalists and members of the family — made no apologies that he was a Democrat-turned-Republican and admitted that he hadn't voted for Kennedy when he ran against Richard M. Nixon.

"He would have understood," the president said of Kennedy. "He was fiercely, happily partisan, and his political fights were tough — no quarter was asked and none given. But he gave as good as he got and you could see that he loved the battle," Reagan said.

The president said Kennedy "seemed to grasp from the beginning that life is one fast-moving train, and you have to jump aboard and hold on to your hat and relish the sweep of the wind as it rushes by...I think that's how this country remembers him, in his joy. And it was a joy he knew how to communicate."

The president, as he often does in his speeches, asserted that Kennedy "wanted our defense system to be unsurpassed." Also, he said Kennedy knew that "the United States had adversaries, real adversaries, and they weren't about to be put off by soft reason and good intentions."

In his speeches, Reagan has often lauded Kennedy's tax cut and his handling of the 1962 Cuban missile crisis, when the United States succeeded in forcing Moscow to remove intermediate-range missiles from Cuba.

But present day events were not to be forgotten among the reminiscences.

The senator, taking note of the ongoing captivity of 40 U.S. hostages in Beirut, said Reagan deserved the nation's support "in the crisis of recent days."

Kennedy said his brother had asked during the Berlin crisis for the nation's good will, support and above all its prayers, as he met his responsibilities as president.

"Tonight, Mr. President, as you meet your responsibilities in Lebanon, you have our good will, you have our support and you have all of our prayers," the senator told Reagan.

The Rev. Jerry Creeden, who opened the evening's events, prayed "for all of those gripped in the hand of terror this night, especially those involved in the hijacking situation."

The dinner gave Reagan a chance to meet the first hostage to have been released by the Shiite Moslems who hijacked a TWA flight on June 14, but they only exchanged greetings and a handshake.

"I feel very honored to have met the president," Athanassios Targontsidis, 18, of Brockton, Mass., told reporters. "We did not exchange words," explaining that he only said hello and shook hands with the president.

About 200 people were invited to the event, which was held under a tent in the senator's yard overlooking the Potomac River in McLean, Va., an affluent Washington suburb.

AIRPORT

It is highly unusual and generally counter to administration policy to discuss options Reagan has before him, but Speakes volunteered the possibility of closing the airport and cutting off an unspecified "broad range of goods and services" moving into the country.

Asked why he was mentioning those when Reagan had not decided on them, Speakes said, "I chose to do so."

Reagan was asked on Sunday whether he had ruled out a military response to free the hostages, and he replied, "Yes."

Speakes said today the president was speaking only about "a violent rescue attempt" and did not mean to rule out any other military action.

He reiterated, however, that "the president has pledged that he will do nothing that will harm, that will put the lives of the hostages in danger, but I do not rule out any other steps."

In response to reports from Beirut that Syria had agreed to U.S. requests to use its good relations with the Shiites to secure the release of the Americans, Speakes said: "We have been in close contact with the government of Syria. President (Hafez) Assad has expressed a wish to be helpful. He is in a position to be helpful, but we have seen no apparent moves on the part of the Syrians, no tangible evidence that they're actually being helpful."

Reacting to the release of videotapes of several of the hostages held by Berri's Amal militia, Speakes said, "We would call it a reprehensible attempt to play on the anguish of those families whose loved ones were not shown. The television portrayal provides no basis for satisfaction about the condition of those who were shown.

"They were obviously under stress. We consider this an attempt to evade the issue, which is the fundamental barbarism of those holding innocent people against their will."

Reagan will be staying in Washington to monitor the hijacking events instead of taking his annual Fourth of July vacation at his ranch.

Reagan met Monday afternoon with his top national security advisers to review the latest terrorist incidents involving international airliners and received an update on the hijack situation in Beirut.

The president plans to fly to Chicago on Friday for a speaking engagement and perhaps meet with some hostage families. But he decided not to go on from there to California for a 10-day vacation.

"I think he reviewed the current situation regarding the TWA hijack victims and decided it would be best for him to stay here," Speakes said.

JAIL

bunk jail would devote 34.6 percent — or 43 units — to single cells. However, the commissioners indicated they would forego building four additional single cells at a cost Pate estimated between $200,000 and $300,000. That would drop overall proposed bunk space to 120. To compensate, the commissioners are proposing to retain 11 two-inmate cells instead of converting them to 11 one-inmate cells and thus increase capacity to 131 inmates. Pate had suggested converting the 11 two-inmate cells to single cells due to inadequate space for multi-occupancy cells. The commissioners want to seek a variance on the space requirement.

"I hate to see us wait 30 days to seek a variance," said Commissioner Wally Craig. "We have compounded the problem because we already are out of money to accomplish all that needs to be accomplished" to renovate the jail, which was built onto the 1930-vintage courthouse in 1973.

Craig told Pate that his design of the jail "may be the best way to go...and forget about asking for variances and proceed with some minor modifications."

"We can go on as a committee trying to design this thing and giving instructions forever," Craig said. "There's no end to this whole thing unless we take the bull by the horns and say 'this is what we are going to do' and pursue it."

Pate noted that the Jail Commission had been told that "the county intends to comply" with the jail standards.

"After all this many years, they expect us to comply. They see it as a forced renovation."

Though he suspects that the Jail Commission will turn down the request for variances, Pate said the county commissioners "are acting very responsibly" in seeking variances to increase the number of bunks.

"I think they are acting in a responsible fashion," Pate said. "I just don't give much hope (for approval of the variances). "I just don't think it's going to happen."

Wright, as did Commissioner Scott Welch, suggested that the county seek the variances.

"We sure haven't lost anything," Wright said, "and we may have a gain."

Tiger trainer Wade Burck displays his mastery over the animal kingdom.

at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center. Two additional performances are scheduled at 2 and 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Born and reared in North Dakota, Burck said his love affair with wild animals began when he was a youngster.

"It's not real populated up there (in North Dakota). The animals were my only friends," he said.

"I visited every zoo I could find to see all the animals, especially the tigers," he admitted. "It hurt to see these marvelous animals so idle, just sleeping their lives away. Wild animals need activity. They're not meant to just sit around all day."

At 17, Burck became apprenticed to animal trainer Lou Rega. On the verge of retiring, Rega was searching for a young man to take over.

There, he observed the wild animals and, in addition, learned the basics of training while caring for tigers, elephants, camels, horses and llamas. "I'm lucky," he said. "I learned so much — not only about training but about the animals' personalities and attitudes."

In his fourth year of apprenticeship, Burck graduated to performer, displaying the accomplishments of his wild charges — and his own growing expertise — in the circus ring. "It was a very valuable experience, and one I'm sure I will value all my life," he said.

After completing his apprenticesh.p, Burck worked for several years with small touring circuses and also spent five years working at the Marine Land Park and Game Farm in Niagara Falls, Canada, enabling him to "fine-tune" his training skills.

Burck joined Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey in 1976 when the circus discovered his tiger training talents while he was working in Niagara Falls.

"They were looking for something unique and were looking for a young guy from the United States, which is something of a novelty," he said."

Behind his muscular, blond good looks, Burck is a thoughtful, serious man deeply committed to all animals, according to observers.

"I really, really dig 'em," Burck said. "They're like family to me."

An advocate of positive reinforcement, Burck said, whenever a tiger completes a trick in rehearsal, he instantly receives a reward — usually a piece of beef.

The reward system "works with every animal — dogs, horses, tigers, elephants. You name it. And to be really effective, to inspire maximum results, a trainer must respect and consider feelings and egos. All animals are different, each has a mind of its own," he said.

Billed as the "Wild Animal Wizard," Burck describes himself as "pretty low-key."

"People tend to imagine show business personalities as flashy, flamboyant people. I myself have been wearing Tony Lama boots and Stetson hats since I can remember," he claimed. "For me, my enjoyment is with my animals."

During his debut season in 1984, Burck said "a lot of eyes were watching to see if the cowboy from North Dakota would fall flat on his face."

He obviously didn't.

UNEMPLOYMENT

The state unemployment rate for May was 6.6 percent, compared to a national rate of 7.0 percent. For April, however, the national rate was 7.1 percent while Texas had a 6.3 percent figure.

The lowest unemployment rate was in Austin, with 3.7 percent. Bryan/College Station and Dallas followed with 4.4 percent each, with Midland and Fort Worth/Arlington next with 4.5 percent. Odessa was 14th. The McAllen area was last in the state with 18.1 percent.

but American and British search parties had withdrawn, he said.

Later, Jennings said one relative arrived in Cork and was taken care of by officials. He was the brother of a Canadian of Indian descent who was on the flight, Jennings said. He added the man was "very distressed" and wanted to remain anonymous.

Many bodies are thought to have sunk, been trapped in wreckage or drifted away on the currents.

Air-India canceled plans to fly relatives of the victims to Ireland, and Irish police spokesman Superintendent Frank Hanlon said there was little point in them coming. "The relatives are being discouraged officially from coming to see the bodies," he told the news conference.

Hanlon said autopsies had been completed on 18 bodies Monday night and another 50 were expected to be finished today. It was hoped all would be complete by Wednesday night, he said.

None had been identified, Jennings said.

The main targets of the search were the crucial "black box" flight recorders that could confirm what kind of an explosion felled the plane.

But U.S. officials of the National Transportion Safety Board which investigates plane crashes told Associated Press Radio there was virtually no chance of recovering the recorders, believed to be lying under a mile of water. The officials, who are in Cork to assist the crash probe, declined to be identified.

The Gardline Locator, a British marine survey ship chartered by India, was expected to sail from Yarmouth on the southern England coast today with special equipment to trace the signals transmitted by the missing recorders. It was expected to reach the crash site Thursday.

Two anonymous callers to news organizations Sunday said the plane was downed by a bomb planted by militant Sikh groups fighting for independence for India's Sikh minority. Sikh leaders in India and London called the claims "vicious lies." Sikh leaders in India, London and the United States denied any Sikh organization was involved.

Canadian Press reported today that a special intelligence task force of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Metropolitan Toronto Police began looking for two fugitive Sikhs wanted by the FBI in connection with an alleged plot to kill Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi during his visit to the United States earlier this month.

The agency said the task force was looking for Ammand Singh and Lal Singh. The Toronto Globe and Mail had quoted unidentified Indian officials Monday as saying they suspected the two men were involved in the Air-India crash and an explosion at Tokyo International Airport, which went off about an hour before the Air-India crash.

Police siad the explosion at the Tokyo airport was caused by a bomb in luggage from a Canadian Pacific flight from Vancouver. It killed two baggage handlers. Air-India officials said an L. Singh and an A. Singh had reservations on the Air-India flight Sunday from Tokyo to Bombay.

Sean Brady, spokesman for the External Affairs Ministry in Ottawa, said the explosion at the Tokyo airport was "clearly terrorist." He said new information about the Air-India case had brought the government "to the conclusion that it was a terrorist incident as well, and as a result we are not discounting possible links between the two."

Canadian Press quoted the head of a private commando training camp outside Birmingham, Ala., Frank Camper, as saying Lal Singh was trained in explosives handling at the camp.

Responsiblity for the Air-India crash also was claimed by an anonymous caller claiming to represent the Kashmir Liberation Army, a terrorist group seeking independence for territory in northern India and Pakistan inhabited by the Moslem Kashmir minority.

Officials from the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board and the Canadian Aviation and Safety Board also arrived in Cork to join British, Irish and Indian investigators.

In Montreal, an airport official, Robert Beaudette, said Air-India violated a basic rule of airport security by failing to tell Canadian officials about three pieces of luggage removed from the flight because they had set off metal detectors. The luggage was found to be harmless.

Bunton swears in resident assistant U.S. attorney for Midland-Odessa

Janet Blankinship

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton today swore in James "Jim" Blankinship Jr., 31, as the first resident assistant United States attorney for the Midland-Odessa Division and Pecos Division of the federal court's Western District of Texas.

Bunton had been campaigning for a Midland-based federal prosecutor here for 5½ years — ever since he was appointed to the federal judgeship in late 1979.

"It is a significant step for law enforcement in this vast West Texas area for an assistant U.S. attorney to be assigned full-time and to reside here," said U.S. Attorney Helen Milburn Eversberg of San Antonio.

Ms. Eversberg oversees the federal government's prosecutorial functions in the sprawling Western District of Texas, which spreads from the Waco-Austin-San Antonio area westward to El Paso. The district takes in seven divisions: San Antonio, Austin, El Paso, Waco, Del Rio, Pecos and Midland-Odessa.

"I expect this increased accessibility to federal and state law enforcement officials will markedly assist in the development of federal criminal cases of all kinds," Ms. Eversberg said.

Blankinship said he enjoys "being a prosecutor."

"My background is in white-collar crime and narcotics investigation," he said.

Blankinship, a native of Paris, Texas, is a 1972 graduate of Paris High School, earned the bachelor of arts degree in government from The University of Texas at Austin in 1975 and was granted the law degree in 1977 from the University of Houston.

He initially practiced law in his home town of Paris and for 3½ years was a prosecutor in the Tarrant County Criminal District Attorney's Office in Fort Worth. He was chief of the Economic Crime Section there.

"I've never been active in politics," Blankinship said. "I vote, and that's about it."

In formally introducing Blankinship in the courtroom ceremony, Ms. Eversberg said she felt somewhat like Caesar or Napoleon in "expanding my empire."

"We are very proud to have him as an assistant U.S. attorney," she said.

Bunton was joined by the courtroom spectators, including jurors and FBI special agents, in giving Blankinship and his family a round of applause in the historic ceremony. Blankinship and his wife, Anne Elizabeth, have two children, James Houston, 8, and Laura Anne, 7.

Blankinship told the judge that "it's a pleasure" to be in Midland. "I look forward to serving your court," which takes in the six counties in the Midland-Odessa Division and the 10 counties, including Texas's Big Bend, in the Pecos Division.

"There will be plenty for you to do," Bunton told the prosecutor. The judge noted he had been working for several years to get a permanent assistant U.S. attorney assigned here.

"The wheels of government move slowly," Bunton said, "but they do move."

The Midland—Odessa Division was established in December 1967 and had been been without a resident federal judge until Bunton's appointment to the judgeship in late 1979. The George Mahon Federal Building and United States Courthouse was built here in 1974.

Ms. Eversberg said that her "chief law enforcement priorities" for Blankinship are a "substantial number of bank-fraud cases and white-collar crime, narcotics prosecutions, firearms prosecutions of repeat offenders involved in violent crimes, public corruption and immigration enforcement."

Rash of near collisions has NTSB concerned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air safety authorities investigating a rash of near collisions involving aircraft on airport runways say the frequency of such incidents raises concerns about the control of traffic at busy airports.

National Transportation Safety Board officials told a congressional hearing Monday that in the last three months, 14 incidents at a dozen airports have occurred in which a plane taking off or landing was in danger of colliding with another plane or ground vehicle.

The testimony came four days after a National Guard jet making a landing at the Birmingham, Ala., airport collided with a private plane about to take off. One person was killed in the collision last Thursday.

"These incidents appear to be randomly spread across the country," David Kelly, chief of the NTSB's operational factors division, told a House investigations subcommittee.

He said they often involve aircraft that air traffic controllers have cleared to cross a runway just as another plane cleared to take off on the same runway.

The incidents suggest "a distinct breakdown between the ground controller and local controller" at airports, he said.

A ground controller directs aircraft into positions for takeoff, while a local controller rules over the actual runway and gives clearance for takeoff or landing. Often the two stand next to each other in the airport tower.

Among the incidents under investigation are:

— The near collision of two Northwest Airlines DC-10 jumbo jets March 31 at Minneapolis airport in which one of the planes, taking off, cleared the other aircraft, which was crossing the runway, by as little as 50 feet. Two controllers simultaneously gave the planes instructions to proceed.

— A similar incident June 17 at the same airport in which a commuter plane was given takeoff clearance while a private Lear jet was cleared to cross the runway. The two planes came within about 300 feet of each other, investigators said.

— In Philadelphia, a Lufthansa Airlines DC-10 aborted its takeoff May 8 when a Republic Airlines DC-9 crossed the same runway. Investigators said the pilots of both planes were cleared to proceed about the same time.

In an interview, Kelly said the 14 incidents involve a wide variety of aircraft including commuters, private planes and large commercial jets as well as some airport ground vehicles. The incidents occurred in a dozen cities with two incidents each in Minneapolis and two in San Francisco between March 31 and June 20.

The testimony came at the opening of hearings by the House Public Works and Transportation investigations subcommittee into the questions surrounding the way the Federal Aviation Administration deals with near-collision reports and other safety matters.

Neighbors fly flags to show sympathy

Associated Press

On the Cincinnati street where Gary Weber lived until he donned a uniform, neighbors flew U.S. flags in patriotic sympathy for the young Marine corporal shot to death with five other Americans at an outdoor cafe in El Salvador.

"This is a very patriotic street," neighbor Loretta Schlosser said Monday. "And this is a way to bring the neighborhood together in sympathy."

Jean Kromme, who remembers driving Weber to high school with her sons, unfurled the American flag she received when her husband died.

"This was the first time I ever unfolded it," she said. "It really had an effect on me in more than one way, but I think it was a good thing to do."

The bodies of Weber, 22, and three other Marine guards at the U.S. Embassy in San Salvador were returned to their homes Monday.

They died Wednesday along with two American businessmen and seven Salvadorans as gunmen dressed as Salvadoran soldiers sprayed the cafe with bullets. The Marines were in civilian clothes.

The funeral for Sgt. Billy Joe Dickson, 27, was scheduled today at Sunset Funeral Chapel in the Tuscaloosa, Ala., suburb of Northport, where he lived. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Park Cemetery.

For Weber, a funeral Mass is scheduled Wednesday at St. Antoninus Roman Catholic Church in Cincinnati, with burial to follow in St. Joseph Cemetery.

Pallbearers carry the coffin of George Viney from a church in Miami Monday following funeral services for the slain businessman. Viney was one of six Americans, including four U.S. Marines, gunned down last week at an outdoor cafe in El Salvador.

In the Dayton, Ohio, suburb of Beavercreek, the family of Sgt. Thomas T. Handwork, 24, prepared for his funeral Wednesday, with visitation scheduled for tonight at Tobias Funeral Home. Burial will be at Mount Zion Shoup Cemetery.

The funeral of the fourth Marine, Cpl. Patrick Robert Kwiatkowski, who would have been 21 last Friday, is also scheduled for Wednesday, at St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, in Wausau, Wis., where he was an altar boy. Burial is planned at Restlawn Memorial Park.

At weekend ceremonies at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, President Reagan tried to console the families of the four Marines.

Thomas and Trudy Handwork said the ceremonies and condolences of dignitaries such as Reagan, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Secretary of State George Shultz helped ease the pain.

"It made you feel good that you know people care. It helps a lot," said Mrs. Handwork, whose son had been a Marine for six years. "We're grieving now, but he died doing something he loved."

John Handwork said he told Reagan Saturday how much his son respected the president.

In Wausau, meanwhile, Kwiatowski's sister, Bobette Ambriz, gave birth Monday to a 7-pound, 4-ounce boy she named after her brother.

Mrs. Ambriz, 29, had been hoping her baby would be born on her brother's birthday. "He was going to call us on his birthday to see if the baby had been born," she said.

In Miami, the family of George Viney, 48, one of the American businessmen killed in the San Salvador attack, held a funeral Mass for him Monday at St. Louis Roman Catholic Church, with a eulogy read by his only son, George Jr.

A naturalized American born in Venezuela, Viney was in El Salvador for his employer, Wang Laboratories, teaching a local distributor about new computer software. His body was flown to Miami last Thursday. Burial will be in Venezuela, family members said.

A service for Robert Alvidrez, 47, who also worked for Wang, was tentatively scheduled for today at Rose Hills Memorial Park in Whittier, Calif. The body was returned to Southern California on Sunday.

A longtime resident of Burbank, Calif., Alvidrez and his wife, Sherrie, had lived for several years in Lexington, Mass., near Wang headquarters.

Team analyzes chemicals as 7,500 evacuated

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Toxic fumes wafting from a burning agricultural warehouse kept about 9,000 people from their homes today while a special Coast Guard strike team analyzed chemicals they said could form explosive mixtures.

At least 10 people were treated and released and a firefighter was hospitalized in stable condition after inhaling fumes from the fire that began late Saturday and continued smoldering today.

Shifting winds spread fumes across Anaheim and into the adjacent cities of Placentia and Fullerton on Monday, forcing the evacuation of about 7,500 more residents. About 1,500 people had fled their homes over the weekend.

There was no estimate of when they might be able to return home, but officials planned a morning meeting on the matter, said Orange County spokesman John Bushman. The cause of the fire and damage estimates were undetermined.

"The situation is unstable. Things could start burning at any moment in time," said Robert Merryman, county director of environmental health. "The products are smoldering, and one of the problems is that we don't know all of the chemicals that are in there."

The blaze was "more under control" today than Monday, said Orange County fire Capt. Gary Stenberg.

A three-mile stretch of State Route 57 was reopened Monday night after the wind changed, decreasing the hazard to motorists.

Stenberg said that potentially explosive ammonium nitrate had been removed from the Larry Fricker Co. pesticide and fertilizer warehouse.

But many of the stored chemicals that remained, including 60 pressurized containers of methyl bromide gas, which is used to fumigate farm soil, are highly toxic, Anaheim Fire Department Investigator Mike Doty said.

Concentrated methyl bromide can harm the central nervous system, said Eric Etzold, who manages the company with his parents, Paul and Mary Etzold.

The warehouse also stored organophosphates and carbamates, poisons that can burn skin and eyes and be fatal if enough were swallowed, inhaled or absorbed through the skin, authorities said.

The Coast Guard Pacific Strike Team, which Anaheim spokeswoman Carol Johnson described as one of the top three squads in the country specializing in toxic chemicals, was working inside the warehouse late Monday.

Doctor refuses promotion

FORT DIX, N.J. (AP) — An Army doctor protesting inaction on child abuse charges at a West Point day care center refused a promotion to major, but an official at the military academy termed "nonsense" claims of a cover-up.

Capt. Walter Grote said his 3-year-old daughter was among the victims of alleged sexual abuse at the day care center and called his protest Monday a "fight for the human rights of all children."

When it came time for Grote, a 33-year-old internist, to step forward in the routine ceremony, he advised Col. Edward Burkhalter, acting head of Walson Army Community Hospital, that he would like to say a few words.

Reading his seven-paragraph statement, Grote said he could not accept promotion in "a system that at first refused to acknowledge and now refuses to deal with the victims of extensive child abuse."

Milk not processed fully

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The closed Jalisco Mexican Products plant, whose Mexican-style cheese has been linked to 44 deaths from a rare bacteria since March, processed more raw milk than its equipment could pasteurize, records indicate.

"We know approximately how many gallons per hour (the pasteurizing unit) could run based on our tests and the amount of milk they received," Richard L. Tate, the state's chief of milk and dairy foods control, said Monday.

"Preliminary indications are they received more milk than went through the pasteurizing unit," he said. Records could indicate that unpasteurized milk went into the final cheese products. Pasteurization would have killed the bacteria responsible for the outbreak.

Jalisco cheese has been linked to listeriosis, caused by Listeria monocytogenes bacteria. The death toll from the outbreak as of Monday stood at 44 with 5 unconfirmed cases.

NASA to interview teachers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fate of the 114 teachers competing for a berth on an upcoming space shuttle flight rests on how they perform in two separate interviews with individual judges.

But for the teachers, who outshone more than 10,000 colleagues to get to this stage of NASA's teacher-in-space contest, the 15-minute interviews on Wednesday may seem "like an eternity," James B. Rowley, one of Ohio's two entrants, said Monday.

"The press has helped us with that because we've learned about 30-second and 60-second feeds" during a month of intense media coverage, Rowley said.

Navy wants more leeway to use polygraph tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the wake of the Walker family spy case, the Navy is supporting efforts in Congress to make it easier to conduct lie detector tests to curb espionage by people with access to military secrets.

"We need the ability to use polygraphs," Navy Secretary John Lehman told the House Armed Services seapower subcommittee Monday.

The Pentagon is now limited to 3,500 polygraph tests for its 3.1 million employees, but the Walker case has led to widespread calls on Capitol Hill to expand that power.

Later this week, the House will vote on a proposal by Rep. Bill Young, R-Fla., that would permit random use of polygraph tests for all people holding clearances and require the examinations for those with "special access," the highest level of clearance.

Young's proposal is expected to come up for a vote Wednesday or Thursday as the House works its way through a bill authorizing Pentagon spending for fiscal 1986.

Lehman said increased use of polygraphs is one of the weapons the Navy wants in its renewed effort to fight espionage attempts. The service also needs to cut down on the number of people with access to classified material and wants to increase the penalities for espionage, he said.

Lehman promised lie detector tests would be "strictly limited to national security tests" and would not get into questions about an individual's personal life.

Ex-WSJ reporter bullish on appeal

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Wall Street Journal reporter R. Foster Winans believes an appeals court will find he committed no crime by using his insider status to pass on stock tips, and will overturn his conspiracy and fraud conviction, his attorney says.

"While we are obviously bearish for the short term, we remain bullish over the long haul," defense lawyer Don Buchwald said after U.S. District Judge Charles E. Stewart Jr. ruled that Winans and ex-stockbroker Kenneth P. Felish broke the law in their efforts to make a quick profit in the stock market.

After deliberating for weeks on the evidence he heard in a 20-day non-jury trial, Stewart ruled Monday that Winans and Felis were guilty of conspiracy, securities fraud and wire and mail fraud for "misappropriating" information belonging to the Journal and using it for personal gain.

Stewart also found Winans' longtime roommate, David Carpenter, guilty on the fraud counts but innocent of the conspiracy charge.

The charges each carry up to a five-year penalty. No sentencing was set.

U.S. Labor Secretary William Brock addresses the 76th annual NAACP convention in Dallas Monday. Brock defended his department's efforts to put black teen-agers to work.

Brock defends Reagan at NAACP convention

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. Labor Secretary William Brock, defending his department's record on minority employment, denied charges that the Reagan administration has eroded civil rights and ignored minority concerns.

"I don't believe there's anyone who believes Ronald Reagan doesn't want the maximum opportunity for everyone in the country," Brock said Monday at the 76th annual meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Calling the double-digit minority youth unemployment rate a "national tragedy," Brock said the administration was trying to put black teen-agers to work by proposing a subminimum wage and job training programs.

When asked later at a news conference if he agreed with the administration's handling of civil rights issues, he said, "The president appointed me. I share his views."

Earlier, he said, "I think there have been missed opportunities for communication" between the NAACP and the administration.

In the keynote address Sunday night, NAACP Executive Director Benjamin L. Hooks accused the administration of "open hostility to equal rights."

During a news conference Monday in which Brock and Hooks shared the podium, the atmosphere was tense as reporters repeated the NAACP chief's criticism and asked for a response from the labor secretary.

But Brock sidestepped the controversy, saying he wouldn't get into a "debate with the Justice Department" or any other department at odds with the NAACP.

Brock, whom Hooks praised as an official whose door is always open to minorities, focused instead on the Labor Department's efforts to solve the problem of out-of-work youth.

"They are in this horrible Catch-22," Brock said. "They don't have a job because they don't have experience. They can't get experience because they can't get a job.

"The numbers have risen without relief. That is a personal tragedy for all of them and a national tragedy for all of us."

During a speech greeted by polite applause at the Dallas Convention Center ballroom, Brock said teenage joblessness has climbed as high as 50 percent among blacks and steadily increased over the past 30 years.

The new Job Training Partnership Act, the federal jobs-training program for youth, has doubled the number of job placements after training, Brock said.

Geter returns to town where nightmare began

Lenell Geter

GREENVILLE (AP) — Lenell Geter lives a quiet life now, dividing his time between civil rights activities and making peace with this small, predominantly white town where his legal nightmare began.

More than a year has passed since his conviction for an armed robbery he didn't commit was overturned, and the national attention focused on his battle has waned.

But Geter hasn't forgotten the organization that intiated his legal campaign. This week, the young aerospace engineer plans to attend several events at the 76th annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Dallas.

Geter, 27, talks with reverence about the NAACP and the role its attorney, George Hairston, played in his case. His participation in civil rights activities continues.

Last week, Geter founded the Geter Justice For All Foundation to offer referral services for inmates needing assistance. He is a regular speaker before alumni associations and church groups and has sold the film rights to his story to a Los Angeles production company.

In 1982, Geter was convicted of robbing a fast-food restaurant in the Dallas suburb of Balch Springs despite insistence from co-workers that he was working when the robbery occurred.

Geter spent 16 months in a Texas prison before he was released and then cleared of the charge after another man was identifed as the robber.

Although prosecutors called the conviction a case of mistaken identity, Geter has said it resulted from racism, shoddy police work and overzealous prosecutors.

Geter said there was a time when he did not want to go back to Greenville. But he has returned to the Northeast Texas city, where he lives with his wife, Marcia, and works for E-Systems as an engineer on aerospace projects.

"Everytime I go somewhere, someone sees me and talks about it," Geter said. "I don't want to sound like I'm not honored. It's just a new thing for me."

But Geter said he has experienced nothing but friendliness from residents since his return. He frequently is cornered by people who just want to talk to him or shake his hand.

And even some police officers are friendly to him, he said.

"There's maybe one or two who wave at me as we pass," he said. "They know me now. I think that's a nice gesture."

Woman's death linked to contaminated cheese

DALLAS (AP) — The death of an elderly Fort Worth woman has been positively linked to bacteria-tainted cheese, according to health officials.

Nationwide, contaminated cheese made by Jalisco Mexican Products in California and also sold under the Jimenez brand in Texas has been associated with at least 44 deaths, federal authorities said.

The deaths of three Texans, including the 83-year-old woman, an elderly man and a baby stillborn at seven months to a 28-year-old Houston woman, have been related to the contaminated cheese in one way or another.

Luz Romero, 83, died last Wednesday at a Fort Worth hospital of bacterial meningitis-listeria, according to the Tarrant County medical examiners' office.

She was diagnosed as having listeriosis several days after eating some Jimenez brand cheese, Dr. Nancy Bowen, assistant health director for the Tarrant County-Fort Worth Health Department, said Monday.

"We confirmed that the Listeria monocytongenes organism is present in the cheese we got from the woman's refrigerator," said Ginger Gipson, a microbiologist for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in Dallas.

Health officials will not be able to determine exactly how the cheese was contaminated because it came from an open package, she said.

"Probably, the contamination was in the cheese to start with," Ms. Gipson said. "But we don't know where it was contaminated."

Milton put to death after appeal fails

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Charles Milton, convicted of murdering a liquor store owner during a robbery, was executed by injection today after last-minute appeals to Gov. Mark White and the U.S. Supreme Court failed.

Milton, 34, of Fort Worth, who converted to Islam while in prison, used his final statement while strapped to a Texas Department of Corrections gurney to pray to Allah and to urge his "brothers and sisters to be strong."

He was sentenced to death for the slaying eight years and one day ago of Fort Worth liquor store owner Menaree Denton, who was shot in the heart while she and her husband, Leonard, struggled with Milton during an aborted robbery.

Defense attorneys contended the shooting was an accident.

The legal scramble through the state and federal courts climaxed at 1 a.m. with word that the Supreme Court had refused to act. White, as has been his custom, then rejected the petition for a reprieve.

Milton, with needles inserted into his arms to carry the lethal drugs, had little reaction and died peacefully. His only deliberate movement as the drugs entered his system was to nod to his brother-in-law, Joseph Smith, one of five personal witnesses he selected.

He was pronounced dead at 1:33 a.m., becoming the fourth Texas prison inmate this year and eighth overall to be executed since the state resumed the death penalty in 1982.

In a two-page typewritten statement released late Monday, Milton said he suffered many sleepless nights for the crime.

"I am sorry Mrs. Denton was killed in the struggle over the gun, but I didn't even know Mrs. Denton was dead until several days later," he wrote. He said her husband was as much to blame because of the struggle for the weapon.

Milton's written statement asked Allah for forgiveness. But he also criticized his attorneys for the handling of his case, saying he learned more about it through newspapers or the radio than from them.

"My final words are to my mother," the statement said. "I have lived my last years as a Muslim. I die as a Muslim and I would like to be buried as a Muslim. I have no hard feeling to anyone in this world."

He signed his statement as "Hakeem Saboor Rahim a.k.a. Charles Milton."

Earlier Monday he met with two sisters, his ex-wife and four children.

"He would have been all right if he hadn't got involved with dope," said Helen Milton, his former wife, who said he had a $600-a-day drug addiction. "He did the best he could, and two weeks before the incident he was talking about how he was clean and going to move back in."

Today's death date was Milton's third. Two earlier dates had been stayed. He had been on Death Row more than six years.

Helen Milton, holding daughter Erica, left, and Joyce Smith, ex-wife and sister respectively of condemned Death Row inmate Charles Milton, wait at the security desk inside the Walls unit which houses the death chamber, for a last visit with Milton before he was put to death by lethal injection early today.

Buildings searched for bombs

WORLD

LONDON (AP) — Police say they are searching for time bombs in hotels or other buildings in 12 English seaside resorts today after uncovering an alleged IRA plot to unleash a bombing blitz at the mid-July height of the tourist season.

Twelve people were being held for questioning in connection with a five pound bomb with a 48-day timing mechanism found hidden Sunday in a second floor room of a crowded hotel near Buckingham Palace, the London residence of Queen Elizabeth II.

News reports claimed that at least one of the suspects had been linked to an Irish Republican Army attempt to assassinate Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her Cabinet in a hotel bombing at the resort of Brighton last Oct. 12. Police declined to comment on the reports.

Mrs. Thatcher escaped unharmed, but five other people were killed in that explosion, believed caused by a bomb planted perhaps weeks before it detonated.

The almost exclusively Roman Catholic IRA has been waging a bloody campaign to end British rule in mostly Protestant Northern Ireland and unite the province with the overwhelmingly Catholic Republic of Ireland to the south.

Commander Simon Crawshaw, the head of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist unit, told a news conference Monday he believed the bomb at London's Rubens Hotel was the only one actually put in place, but did not rule the possibility that other delayed timing devices had been set to explode within weeks.

"The general public have no need to fear as we believe that the only bomb which was actually positioned was that defused in the Rubens Hotel.

"Nevertheless, we must take account of the slight possibility that a bomb might have been placed in any of these towns."

Eight different police forces today were involved in checking for long-delay time bombs at hotels, boarding houses and public buildings in the 12 coastal towns that Scotland Yard claimed were possible targets for an IRA summer bombing campaign, authorities said.

Crawshaw said police discovered the plan in papers found when three men and two women were arrested Saturday after being tracked from London to Glasgow, Scotland.

The plan allegedly targeted 10 southern England resorts as well as Blackpool in northwestern England and Great yarmouth on the east coast.

Another seven people were arrested Monday under the Prevention of Terrorism Act, which allows persons to be detained without charge for up to seven days.

Two were arrested in London, two in the Glasgow area and three in Sussex, the southern England county in which Brighton is located.

Crawshaw refused to comment on unattributed news reports that one of the detainees in Glasgow is a prime suspect in the bombing of Brighton's Grand Hotel during the annual conference of Mrs. Thatcher's ruling Conservative Party last year. But he said Sussex police will travel to Scotland this week along with anti-terrorist squad officers to question suspects there.

In Great Yarmouth, Norfolk county's assistant police chief, Peter Howse, ordered a massive search for a time bomb he believes is planted in the town, timed to go off within two weeks.

"We believe we have a device at Great Yarmouth," Howse told Independent Television News. Crawshaw refused to comment on Howse's claim.

El Salvador guerrillas place names of officials on 'combat targets' list

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — In an apparent escalation of their plans to bring warfare to the nation's cities, El Salvador's leftist guerrillas Monday placed officials of the ruling Christian Democratic party on a list of combat targets.

It is the first time that top Christian Democrats have been publicly singled out by the guerrillas, although they had kidnapped Christian Democratic mayors in several small towns and routinely referred to the government as the enemy. Right-wing politicians and military officers have long been targets of assassination.

The threat came in a communique that listed other potential victims: U.S. military advisers, Salvadoran military officers, air force pilots, the rich and rightist Nicaraguan rebels who live in El Salvador.

Although the rebel leaders said that they were not threatening the life of President Jose Napoleon Duarte, they said that as commander in chief of the army, Duarte, as well as other top commanders, "must assume responsibility for their role in the this war."

The warnings came in a communique broadcast on rebel Radio Venceremos in the name of the five military leaders of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the rebels' umbrella group.

"We are resolved to carry the war to wherever necessary, with the resources necessary in order to end the peace of military commanders, Yankee advisers, the oligarchy, murderous pilots, Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries and Christian Democratic functionaries."

The communique offered a detailed justification for last week's sidewalk cafe shootings of four U.S. Marines by urban guerrillas. The Marines were guards at the U.S. Embassy. Nine bystanders also were killed.

Calling the killings a "just action in legitimate defense of our people and our sovereignty," the statement added that "we are not disposed to continue tolerating and permitting our principle enemy (the United States) to make war on us without receiving a response."

Whales swim up on beach

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Hundreds of volunteers worked frantically today to save about 60 whales that swam up onto beaches north of Sydney. Many of the whales were cut up on rocks, and about 30 died.

Schoolchildren poured water over the whales as they lay dying on the shore. Wildlife experts performed autopsies in an attempt to find out why the whales beached themselves.

"We want to find out what...happened," said Michael Duffy of the National Parks and Wildlife Service. "We have no idea why they were intent on destruction."

Duffy said he also doesn't know why the 2-ton Tasmanian whales apparently stopped beaching today, one day after they began throwing themselves ashore at Crowdy Heads Beach, 217 miles north of Sydney.

Rescue work was hampered because many creatures kept returning to the same spot.

Workers loaded the whales onto trucks and transported them to a nearby harbor that was ringed with nets so the whales would not escape and return to the site of the beachings.

Most of the surviving whales were weakened after thrashing in the surf and on rocks, Duffy said. They will be released in the morning, he said.

Duffy said injured whales could die in a few hours out of water, but if kept wet might last "two days at the outside."

Duffy recalled a similar beaching in Florida in 1976.

"They discovered that one whale was injured so other whales came to its rescue," he said. "When it died three days later they all left. Perhaps something like that happened here."

Resume talks

Naval incidents at sea endanger people living on land. That's been proven time and time again and that is exactly why, in 1972, the U.S. and Soviet governments agreed to hold annual navy-to-navy talks, to reduce the chance that incidents at sea would trigger war.

The talks have survived 13 years of superpower confrontations, including the reprehensible Soviet shooting down of a Korean airliner. Overall, the meetings have helped reduce the number of dangerous incidents to one or two a year, Navy Secretary John Lehman says.

In fact, when a Soviet submarine surfaced beneath a U.S. aircraft carrier last year, the two navies knew how to deal with the incident without coming to blows.

But the talks have fallen casualty to an incident on land. A Soviet soldier in East Germany shot an American officer near a military installation. The guard then left the American to bleed to death, without helping him. The Soviets never apologized for the incident. In protest, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger curtailed social engagements which accompany the formal navy-to-navy talks, and Moscow then canceled the scheduled meeting. The cancellation puts both navies at risk. It brings the world a step closer to the brink of accidental war.

The talks should be resumed — with it made plain to the Soviets that their ruthless kind of conduct is endangering the future of improved relations between the two nations. The shooting in East Germany and the Korean airline massacre show that Soviets shoot first and ask questions later. This kind of conduct is precisely why Navy officers need to talk directly with their Soviet counterparts. Our protest will not prevent the Soviets from being a ruthless regime. But the talks can help prevent such incidents at sea from provoking the catastrophe of World War III.

That, of course, is in the entire world's interest.

Another View:

Residence freedom

The patience of mainland China's Marxist rulers goes only so far, even when they're riding a modest wave of success created by Deng Xiaoping's program of economic incentives.

Recently, a group of former Chinese city dwellers plopped on the steps of Peking City Hall to protest their forced removal as teenagers to a rural area at the height of the Chairman Mao's Cultural Revolution in 1969. Surely, Chairman Deng would see the light and grant their demand for urban residency permits.

Alas, it was not to be. City bosses put up with the protest for about a week, then requested (ahem) the recycled city dwellers to recycle themselves back to the countryside whence they had come. Instinctively sensing what was best for their collective health, according to the report, they promptly complied.

There is a certain instructive truth to be drawn from this. In the Never-neverland of the Worker's Paradise, it must always be remembered that a nation's Marxist rulers know best where the people should live. As we all know, Premier Stalin also decided where people shouldn't live. When recalcitrant Ukrainian peasants refused to come to heel in the Soviet Union of the '30s, Comrade Stalin simply starved them to death. When the Lithuanians spurned the benefits offered by the advancing Red Army in the '40s and '50s, Stalin shipped them to Siberian gulags.

Other Marxists have developed new methods of "assisting" native populations. When thousands of Vietnamese persisted in their pro-American attitudes after the fall of Saigon, their saviors from Hanoi helped to resettle them into what were euphemistically called "re-education" camps. The recalcitrant Eritreans and Tigreans in Ethiopia rebelled against the new Marxist lifestyle that had come to that country in the late '70s. When a famine suddenly developed in the early '80s, Comrade Mengitsu soon offered to resettle his hungry hordes into much more fertile areas of Ethiopia's southern provinces ... for their own good, of course.

Now the Nicaraguan Sandinistas are forcing thousands of Nicaraguan campesinos to leave the contra-infested northern provinces so they can be "resettled" in supposedly more comfortable quarters in the south, much like they once resettled the Miskito Indians from their ancient homeland in northeastern Nicaragua to a "safer" part of the country. Somehow, we have a hard time believing the Marxists in Managua are merely protecting the natives from the machinations of the wicked old CIA and the imperialist designs of an alien and hostile government in Washington.

There is, you see, a pattern to the totalitarian resettlement efforts of the communists, no matter where they take place in the world.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, June 25, the 176th day of 1985. There are 189 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 25, 1876, Lt. Col. George A. Custer and his Seventh Cavalry were wiped out by Sioux and Cheyenne Indians in the Battle of Little Big Horn in Montana.

On this date:

In 1788, the state of Virginia ratified the U.S. Constitution.

In 1906, in New York, architect Stanford White was shot to death atop the original Madison Square Garden – which he had designed – by Harry Thaw, the jealous husband of Evelyn Nesbit.

In 1942, the British air force staged a thousand-bomb raid on Bremen, Germany, during World War II.

In 1950, war broke out as North Korea invaded South Korea. The United Nations Security Council, meeting in emergency session, called for a cease-fire. The call went unheeded.

In 1962, the Supreme Court ruled that the use of an unofficial, nondenominational prayer in New York State public schools was unconstitutional.

In 1973, former White House Counsel John Dean began testifying before the Senate Watergate Committee.

Ten years ago: During a news conference, President Gerald R. Ford warned the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries against raising oil prices in the fall.

Five years ago: President Jimmy Carter continued his eight-day European tour with a stopover in Spain, where he urged the Madrid government to join NATO.

One year ago: The Senate voted almost unanimously to drop additional military aid to Nicaraguan rebels from an emergency domestic spending bill.

Family dentist may solve case

WASHINGTON — The key to the mystery of Josef Mengele, the Auschwitz "Angel of Death," may lie in the memory of a 78-year-old dentist living in seclusion in a hilltop house deep within the Black Forest.

Jack Anderson

He was the Mengele family's dentist for over 30 years, and he clearly remembers treating "Bebbo," as Josef Mengele was nicknamed by his family and friends. The young man who was to become the notorious death-camp doctor and perform hideous medical experiments on helpless victims, the dentist recalled with a wry smile, was an extremely nervous patient.

Though government investigators and private Nazi hunters from all over the world are trying to solve the Mengele mystery, not one had located the old dentist. Yet his firsthand knowledge of Josef Mengele's teeth could be decisive in establishing whether the skeletal remains exhumed in Brazil are indeed those of the world's most hunted Nazi war criminal.

Forensic experts have said the seven teeth found in the grave near Sao Paulo are crucial evidence. Yet all they have to compare them with is Mengele's SS dental records. These don't include X-rays, which were not then as widely used in routine dental procedures as they are today.

So the testimony of the only living persons known to have worked on Mengele's teeth is of extreme importance in determining whether the remains found in Brazil are Mengele's. Or if someone else is buried there in an elaborate attempt to deflect Nazi hunters from Mengele's actual whereabouts.

It remained for our associate Lucette Lagnado to track down Mengele's dentist — the only journalist, official investigator or private Nazi hunter to do so. She had to promise not to publish either the old man's name or his village. U.S. authorities were also interested in the dentist. When they agreed to honor this commitment and respect his anonymity, we provided the name and address of the dentist.

The dentist told our associate that he had treated the three Mengele brothers, Karl, Alois and Josef, but was particularly close to Josef who was close to his age. (In fact, Mengele was four years younger than the dentist.)

"Bebbo" was a regular patient during his last years in high school until he went away to the university at about age 20. But the dentist continued to treat Mengele when he returned to his home town of Gunzburg during his university years.

The old dentist described Mengele as "very nice ... friendly ... charming ... thoroughly likeable." He said Mengele showed no interest in politics or the Nazi party, which during those years was growing from a little-regarded fringe group to the dominant political force in Weimar Germany.

Instead, the dentist said, Mengele preferred the role of social butterfly, attending parties and dances. He was popular with the girls — because of his good looks, polished manners and family wealth. Mengele had his pick of the local belles but was always a gentleman, the dentist said.

Otherwise, "he was like everybody else," the old man recalled, "an average young man."

Footnote: Our associate is currently working, with co-author Sheila Dekel, on a biography of Mengele.

MAN OF THE HOUR: Nabih Berri, the Shiite Moslem leader involved in the TWA hijacking-hostage situation, was well known to U.S. officials long before the crisis. He was one of several men identified as members of a "Libyan Hit Squad" that was supposed to be on its way to assassinate U.S. leaders in November 1981. For a year, Berri was listed in confidential Customs Service cables as a "suspected terrorist," and upon entering the country would have been subjected to "100 percent exam of hand-carried and checked baggage ... 100 percent exam of contents of pockets ... (and) 100 percent exam of documents to determine if any articles are being shipped to the U.S."

MINI—EDITORIAL: Better late than never, we say. The Merit Systems Protection Board deserves a rousing vote of thanks for its bold decision to fire three Pentagon officials who made life miserable for a brave auditor who blew the whistle on $1 million in grossly improper entertainment expenses claimed by a defense contractor. The auditor, George Spanton, is now retired, but his vindication is no less important. Maybe now that the board has rattled the cages of the backbiting bureaucrats, more whistle blowers will be encouraged to expose wrongdoing and waste.

U.S.-Israeli relations in flux

WASHINGTON — No sooner did White House spokesman Larry Speakes say last Tuesday that the U.S. "had called for" Israel's release of some 700 Shiites than a senior Israeli official telephoned from Jerusalem to ask whether that constituted a formal request to let the prisoners go. Clearly hoping the answer was "yes," he was disappointed to learn the contrary.

Rowland Evans

The call from Jerusalem represented one side of what White House insiders consider a split within the Israeli government over whether to take a hard or soft line toward Washington. That deepens distress of U.S. policymakers, especially senior military officers, who grumble that our Israeli allies did not forthwith release the Shiites without demanding a request.

Robert Novak

This Israeli subplot is overshadowed in Washington by frustration in dealing with international terrorism and how it undercuts U.S. credibility. But hopes for quick release of American hostages play against a background of conflicting viewpoints in Jerusalem that compound American problems.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres and other pragmatists in the Labor Party have been urged toward a conciliatory course by world Jewry. When the call from Jerusalem came Tuesday, Peres was hoping President Reagan finally had met Israel's condition that the U.S. request release of the Shiites, thus clearing the way to free the TWA hostages.

One day later, the other side of Israel's political split came into public view. On Ted Koppel's "Nightline" (ABC), Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin hammered home that Israel would only "consider" a U.S. request to free the Shiites, at least implying the request might not be honored. Much wider than this Peres-Rabin split within the Labor Party is the gap between Labor and its partner in Israel's grand coalition, the Likud Party.

To Labor's right on security issues, the Likud is dominated by an extremist faction led by Ariel Sharon. The architect of the 1982 Lebanon invasion that cost Israel so dearly and ultimately led to the illegal transportation of the Shiites, Sharon is believed by administration officials to favor a much tougher bargaining position with the U.S. These officials fear that hard-line Israeli factions want new political concessions or economic aid from the U.S. before letting the Shiites go.

The American Jewish Congress (AJC) is sending private warnings to leaders in Israel not to take "too hard a line." For Reagan and the AJC, the unyielding political realities inside Israel create an American dilemma much like the one faced when Israel invaded Lebanon.

U.S. advice not to invade never went public, and the private pressure was shrugged off by the Israelis. Now, the president cannot even consider going public against Israel because it would make him appear to be bargaining with terrorists.

"Israel made it impossible for Reagan to work any clandestine arrangement the moment they linked release of the Shiites to a formal U.S. request," one administration insider told us. "That put the president over the barrel."

When Speakes told reporters that the U.S. "had called for" release of the Shiites, he was referring to an official State Department statement April 4 which demanded their return on grounds their removal violated the Geneva Convention. Hundreds of Shiite youth were rounded up and carted off to give Israel a bargaining counter to persuade Nabih Berri's Amal militia to protect the border against Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) forces, bitter enemies of the Amal.

With the advent of the hostage crisis, however, the Shiite prisoners have gained enriched status as a bargaining chip, to be used not with Nabih Berri but Ronald Reagan. Peres is mindful that that Israel may overplay its hand in extracting maximum concessions from the U.S., the one country that always sustains it. Americans praying for the release of their hostages might resent delays that could be charged to the Israeli account.

That explains the rush telephone call to Washington to check what Speakes meant. The moderates want to avoid deterioration into a U.S.-Israeli split. But Rabin worries about political gains by Likud's extremists. With prevailing opinion in his country moving right, he wants to dispel notions that the Labor Party is soft on Arabs, soft on terror or soft on the U.S.

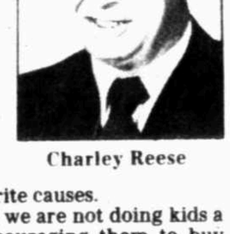

Israel's decision could materially affect relations between the two countries. While overshadowed by the terrorist dilemma, the hostage crisis also poses disquieting questions for the U.S.-Israeli alliance. Newly entangled in bilateral relations are American lives, suggesting the crisis could cast a long shadow on U.S. policy in the Mideast.

CHARLEY REESE

Saving lives of young worth cost

It's not a bad idea to raise the legal drinking age to 21 as the federal government is doing by threatening to cut off federal highway funds if errant states refuse.

Charley Reese

I am opposed in principle to using federal funds as a form of blackmail, but apparently nobody else minds — especially if the blackmail technique is used in one of their favorite causes.

That aside, we are not doing kids a favor by encouraging them to buy an overpriced pop of poison at their local bistro. Nor is this an issue of human rights and liberty as some silly sophists try to claim. We are talking about the liquor industry's market and social policy; that's all.

I am not a teetotaler. I have a drink or two now and again and in former days spent a great deal of time in bars, all of which I have to admit was wasted. I have bent the elbow many a time on three continents and have yet to meet a single worthwhile individual in a bar unless it was an owner or an employee. The only solace of this youthful folly is the knowledge that my peculiar bio-genetic makeup makes me immune to addiction to booze, if not to tobacco.

Booze, plainly put, is one of the most overpriced products in the American marketplace. It costs almost nothing to make and it sells dear. Some years ago an executive with Brown Forman Distillers told me you could make a fifth of good bourbon and sell it profitably for 50 cents were it not for all the taxes government puts on it.

A person who drinks moderately and is not prone to addiction has little to fear, but moderation is not a normal characteristic of youth. Youth is full of impulse and energy, and empty of experience.

That truth is witnessed by the cruel fact that the three leading causes of death among youths of both sexes and all races are accidents, homicides and suicides. Alcohol plays a key role in all three, not to mention divorce, child abuse, and job loss. Therefore anything which discourages youth from drinking is probably a benefit — to them and to society.

Raising the drinking age to 21 will not, of course, eliminate underage drinking just as laws against theft and homicide do not and cannot eliminate theft and murder. Law is only a guidepost to the kind of behavior a society desires; it is not a preventive, as many moderns seem to think it is.

A 21-law can, however, dissuade some younger boys and girls from drinking too soon and it may give others a reason to resist peer pressure. The main responsibility for teaching responsible use of alcohol, if it's to be used at all, remains with parents and the main teaching tool is their own example.

It's no boon to society to encourage youngsters to think that idling away their hours in a bar is a good use of time or that ingesting a depressant a sign of maturity. Nor is the howl of the liquor lobby worried about loss of revenue any reason to balk at a life-saving measure.

The old argument that a boy old enough to soldier is old enough to drink is specious. The very reason 18-year-olds make such good soldiers is that they have more energy than judgment, not to mention youth's irrational belief that nothing can happen to them.

The move to raise the drinking age is part of the growing revulsion against the slaughter by drunk drivers and that ought to be encouraged. It's nothing less than stupid to kill and maim as many people as we do in motor vehicle accidents.

As an issue, it's not an earth-shaker so let the pendulum swing. If just one 16-year-old makes it to 21 as a result, it's worth the shot in the pocket to the booze business. I've never yet heard of a booze-peddler filing for bankruptcy.

Ideal sunglasses provide protection

Copley News Service

Sunglasses aren't just fashion accessories made famous by movie stars and gangsters. Properly treated, they can cut the amount of ultraviolet light entering the eyes and help prevent a number of eye problems including "nuclear cataracts."

Not all sunglasses on the market block ultraviolet light. If you don't know whether your sunglasses have this property or not, get them checked by an optometrist who has metering equipment that can check a lens' ultraviolet light-blocking properties.

"Ultraviolet light, or UV, has always been there, but our understanding of what it can do to the eye has been known only the last few years," said Dr. Randall Conrad, president of the San Diego County Optometric Society. "Sunglass manufacturers have picked up on this and now they're offering sunglasses which can absorb harmful UV rays."

Optometrist Dr. Martin Gellman of the University of California at San Diego Eye Center said that nuclear cataracts — a cataract is an eye disease in which the lens becomes opaque, causing partial or total blindness — can be caused by a lifetime accumulation of ultraviolet light entering the eye.

"LIGHT GOES INTO the eye and first hits the cornea, or the front of the eye," he said. "Thirty percent of all ultraviolet or infrared rays are absorbed there. But 40 to 50 percent of the ultraviolet light gets through and continues to hit the lens behind the pupil.

"The lens in time starts to lose clarity, and you have a cataract."

Other eye conditions such as macular degeneration, retinitis pigmentosa and night blindness also can be caused by exposure to the ultraviolet and infrared rays hidden in the visible light of the sun, the optometrists said. People with light-colored eyes have less pigment in the eyes to absorb the light coming in, so they may be more susceptible to cataracts.

"This means they get a sort of double dose from bright light and glare," Conrad said.

Over-the-counter sunglasses generally do not have ultraviolet light-blocking properties — check for accompanying tags by manufacturers. All glass and plastic lenses as well as contact lenses filter out a little of the ultraviolet light entering the eye, said Conrad, but even prescription sunglasses do not filter out enough harmful UV rays to prevent problems.

In fact, wearing non-ultraviolet-treated sunglasses "can become a negative factor in that the dark lenses cause the pupil to open even further, allowing even a higher exposure to ultraviolet light," Gellman said.

TO GET ultraviolet protection, sunglasses are coated with a chemical that blocks off this portion of the light. This can be done to either prescription or non-prescription lenses.

"UV protection is a coating just like any kind of color coating, and it's slightly yellow," Conrad said. "The yellowness bends the rays differently, and you can put any kind of a color on top of that."

Not all cataracts are caused by overexposure to ultraviolet light. Another kind, called "cortical cataract" occurs with time and age, Conrad said, and is more prevalent in people under 65 than is nuclear cataract. After 65, both cataracts occur at about the same rate.

Particularly at risk for nuclear cataracts are those who take medications for high blood pressure or heart disease, because those medicines cause a higher sensitivity to ultraviolet light. Also in the high-risk category is anyone who has had a cataract operation, in which the lens of the eye is removed and and replaced with a plastic replica.

THE BEST WAY to find out about ultraviolet protection, says Lori Sparks, owner of Sunglass City, a shop in San Diego that sells only sunglasses, is to "trust the company you're buying them from. There is no marking to look for in the glasses themselves, no way to tell if they have protection. But most inexpensive pairs of sunglasses do not."

AP Wirephoto

Sunglasses can come in fun frames — such as these designed by Oliver Goldsmith — and still protect the eyes from ultraviolet light.

Sunglasses may be stylish but safety is key feature

Copley News Service

Wraparound sunglasses with frames like miniature windshields, '50s-style horn rims and two-tone color combinations are some of the best-selling sunglasses today, according to importers and sunglass sellers.

"Hot neon colors in the 'Wayfarer' shape, the kind worn by John Belushi in the movie 'Blues Brothers,' are the most popular," said Carl Dustin of Solar Fashions, a wholesale sunglass distributing company.

"But the kids wear all kind of lenses: blue lenses; blue mirror; little, tiny round ones. Anybody over 30 wants conservative, well-fitting, good-quality sunglasses."

John Bueno, president of New Vision Eyewear Products, a wholesale company that imports sunglasses from throughout the world, agrees that the teenage set is going for the Wayfarer look.

Wayfarer is a trademark registered to Bausch and Lomb, which designed the sunglass 30 years ago. Ray-Ban Wayfarers were worn by Jack Nicholson in "Terms of Endearment" and Tom Cruise in "Risky Business," as well as showing up in many other films. Today Wayfarers come in basic black, red, white, mock tortoiseshell and three new wood hues resembling the "Woodie" station wagons California surfers used to drive.

Most inexpensive sunglasses are made in France, Italy, Japan, Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong, said Dustin. A price range of $7 to about $12 is the "hottest range in drugstore sales." He said that sunglasses from the Orient are likely to be of better quality now than they were even five or six years ago.

"France developed the plastic business, followed by Italy and the Orient," he said. "But with labor costs higher in France and Italy than the Orient, the Orient is copying those styles in sunglasses, just like dresses."

The sunglass season runs from about late January or early February through the end of September, Dustin said.

Sunglasses often can mark a decade, such as the rose-tinted hippie glasses and the plastic wraparounds with slit lenses of the 1960s to round "Annie Hall" glasses of the 1970s.

At Sunglass City in San Diego, a shop devoted entirely to sunglasses, owner Lori Sparks said that her customers are buying higher-quality sunglasses now. These cost more, but also fit better and often offer protection against ultraviolet light.

"We're getting into more sophisticated styling now," she said. "The younger generation is going for more of a traditional look. Wayfarers are one of our best sellers. You can buy a good lens, but not at a swap meet. An $8 sunglass may look good, but you don't get the ultraviolet protection."

DEAR ABBY

Girl wants boyfriend's bar buddy to go hopping alone

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Jimmy" and I have been living together for two years, and we get along great. My problem is Jimmy's buddy (I'll call him Leo), who is threatening my relationship with Jimmy.

Jimmy and Leo used to go out and make the bars before Jimmy and I started to live together. Then Leo moved out of town, and I was relieved.

Now Leo is in the picture again. He comes to town nearly every weekend and encourages Jimmy to make the bars with him. Leo has no steady girl — he's a womanizer, and when he and Jimmy go out together, they stay out practically all night. Jimmy never goes near a bar until Leo comes in town. I've tried to explain to Jimmy that we are a couple, and I don't want to be left sitting at home while he's out bar-hopping with Leo.

Jimmy says he and Leo were best buddies before he even knew me, and besides, we aren't married, we're just living together. Well, I consider him my husband, and I feel like I'm his wife. Leo is causing a big rift between us.

Leo knows how I feel, but he continues to encourage Jimmy to go with him. What should I do about Leo? — FEELING THREATENED

DEAR FEELING: Your problem isn't Leo, it's Jimmy. He's doing what he wants to do; no one is forcing him. Don't blame Leo — thank him. He's showing you a side of Jimmy that you might not have seen until it was too late.

DEAR ABBY: Recently a friend of mine (whom I'll call John) bought four theater tickets — one for himself, one as a birthday gift for me, and two for friends of his. It was my understanding that John's friends were going to pay him for their own tickets.

About two hours before the performance, John called and asked if I knew anyone who would like to come along because one of his friends had canceled at the last moment.

I found a friend who was glad to go, and we all enjoyed the evening. Afterward, I was astonished to learn that John expected payment for the ticket! It was my impression that the ticket would have gone to waste if it hadn't been used.

Who should pay for the ticket? John? The friend who canceled? Or my friend who came along at the last moment? — STICKY SITUATION

DEAR STICKY: If John's two friends agreed to pay him for the tickets, then the friend who canceled at the last moment should have paid John whether he used it or not.

When John called and asked if you knew of anyone who wanted to "come along," you had every right to assume that John was offering the ticket at no charge, since there was no mention of money.

DEAR ABBY: Two weeks ago, I received a chain letter in the mail informing me that if I didn't make 15 copies and send them to 15 people, I would suffer dire consequences — even death!

I tossed it in the garbage.

Since then, my TV set broke down and now my refrigerator is on the blink, and I had a big fight with my husband. All this happened right after I threw that chain letter away, which has me worried.

I usually laugh at such coincidences, but now I am wondering if maybe my throwing that chain letter away has something to do with all this bad luck I've been having. — SCARED IN NEW YORK

DEAR SCARED: Chain letters are just so much rubbish, but they can be damaging if a person becomes frightened by them. Chain letters that threaten "dire consequences — even death" are against postal regulations. Should you receive another, send it to your postmaster.

CONFIDENTIAL TO B.B. IN BANGOR, MAINE: Psychiatry is not an atheistic concept. The greatest textbook ever written on human behavior is the Bible, in which the principle of psychoanalysis was set forth 3,000 years ago: "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (New Testament, John 8:32)

Not until one knows the truth about himself, complete with all the grim hostilities, insecurities and unresolved conflicts, is he truly "free."

It is the role of the psychotherapist to remove the camouflage, self-deception and rationalizations, and to bring the unconscious conflicts into the conscious mind where reason can deal with them.

Once reason is gained, the cure begins. Because the truth does indeed make one free.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Jewelry sets style of fashion

Copley News Service

More than ever, jewelry sets the style and mood for apparel, giving different fashion looks to basic suits and dresses and dressing up basic wardrobes.

With fashion emphasis on feminine-look apparel, jewelry also takes on a feminine flair, said Kae McCulloch, fashion director of the Jewelry Industry Council in New York.

Necklaces ride high on the neckline, giving multi-strand fill-in whether it be pearls, beads, stones or chains. With new hairstyles that expose the ear, earrings hug the earlobe and outer curve of the ear for daytime wear. Drops still are "in" for evening.

Biggest news, however, is the strong emphasis on color in new jewelry, she said. The black-and-white look in jewelry is a continuing trend. There is increasing interest in black pearls that range from gray-black to charcoal. Also, onyx beads are worn with white or cream-colored pearls, as are black pearls.

However, fashion color schemes are not limited to black and white. Pearls of pink, gold, blue and cream colors are popular, whether the color is natural or from a permanent dye. These pearls mix and match with gemstones for monochromatic or contrasting color schemes.

Pearls with detachable gemstone clasps, eclipsed since grandmother's time, are making the fashion scene again with the ornate clasp worn in front. Designers are taking inspiration from the irregular shape of large Oriental pearls and using them in unique one-of-a-kind pendants or rings, often edging them with tiny diamonds. Seed, rice — every type of pearl is seen in new jewelry, going around the clock for jewelry accent. Pearls pair with onyx or obsidian to lend a black-and-white tailored look to daytime suits. Sprinkled with diamonds, pearls glow for evening wear.

Among real stones and fashion simulations, rubies, emeralds and sapphires are favorites in pendants, pins and necklaces.

Rain storms forecast for tonight

From Staff and Wire Reports

Heavy thunderstorm activity is in the forecast for tonight with a local flash flood watch in effect, according to a National Weather Service spokesman at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

A 30 percent chance of thunderstorms is predicted along with the watch which is in effect for tonight only.

Wednesday also calls for a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms with highs near 90 degrees and winds from the south at 10 to 15 mph.

The record high temperature for this date was 104 degrees, recorded in 1980. The lowest temperature recorded was 57 degrees in 1940.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms hit the southern portions of West Texas early today, causing minor flooding throughout the usually drought-stricken region.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood watch for 25 counties in the southern portion of West Texas — both sides of a line from San Angelo to El Paso. The Midland-Odessa area was at the northern edge of the area for which the flood watch was issued.

The weather service blamed the turbulence on a clash of tropical moisture with a "very unstable" atmosphere over West Texas.

Light showers were reported over portions of South Central Texas and the South Plains. Cloudy skies were the rule over the state this morning, with North Texas and the Panhandle about the only exceptions.

Overnight temperatures were generally in the 70s. Winds were generally at 5 to 15 mph from the south to southeast.

The weather service said scattered thunderstorms are likely across the state today, with some intense activity possible in southern portions of West Texas.

NATION

A cold front dusted some Western mountain passes with snow today as thunderstorms rolled across broad sections of the nation.

Showers and thunderstorms spread across the Dakotas, northern Nebraska and northwest Minnesota, and thunderstorms were scattered across Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and western Texas.

The cold front through the western Dakotas sent light snow onto high passes in Yellowstone Park and churned gusty winds along with thunderstorms.

Showers were widespread across southern Montana and Wyoming.

Gamblers 'empty' after losing to Invaders

HOUSTON (AP) — Although Houston Gamblers running back Sam Harrell scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter and his team is headed for the playoffs, he had an "empty feeling" after the game — and not only because of the 31-21 loss to the Oakland Invaders.

Because of dwindling attendance, the game probably was the last ever for the franchise in Houston. Team officials have admitted considering a move to another city for the 1986 United States Football League season. The attendance was 15,797 Monday night.

"A lot of guys felt an empty feeling at the end of the game, going out and losing. We had 15,000 fans out who still support us. That meant a lot to our guys going into the playoffs," Harrell said.

"I don't think it affected the way we played, but we wanted to go out with a bang," added Houston wide receiver Gerald McNeil. "The fans that stuck with us deserved a better effort. I'm from Texas and I like to play in Texas, but they've got footballs in every state."

McNeil played collegiate football at Baylor.

Gamblers Coach Jack Pardee said "our guys knew it wasn't do or die because we had the playoffs made. But we wanted to play well in our last game here."

BUT OAKLAND capitalized on three first-half Houston turnovers to build a 24-0 lead. The Invaders raised their record to 13-4-1, the best in the USFL, having now won all 13 times this season when they scored first.

Since the fourth or fifth game of this season, rumors have been circulating about an impending move. The speculation now centers on Charlotte, N.C., or Chicago as a new site for the team.

"The support here has been intense but not deep and enthusiastic and not broad," said USFL Commissioner Harry Usher, who attended the game.

"This is a fine, exciting team. But its questionable as to whether a city like Houston can support two football teams.

"And the same situation happens in Denver and Los Angeles. Charlotte and Chicago are definitely still in the ballpark as prospective home cities."

The average Gambler home crowd declined from 24,000 in the team's inaugural 1984 season to 19,000 this year, with the all-time low of 11,780 showing up last Monday against San Antonio.

THE GAMBLERS, who were 13-5 in 1984 while winning the Central Division, finished the regular season at 10-8, with five losses in their last seven games.

Houston will play at Birmingham Saturday in the first round of the USFL playoffs, while Oakland visits Tampa Bay on Sunday.

"I love playing in the Astrodome and I didn't give it (the speculation about a move) a thought before the game," Houston quarterback Todd Dillon added. "But I'd like to have gone out as a winner. Pro players are gypsies. You're here today and gone tomorrow. It's too bad we're not staying. But life goes on."

One of Oakland's first-half touchdowns came on a blocked punt by Randy McClanahan, who recovered it in the end zone for a touchdown.

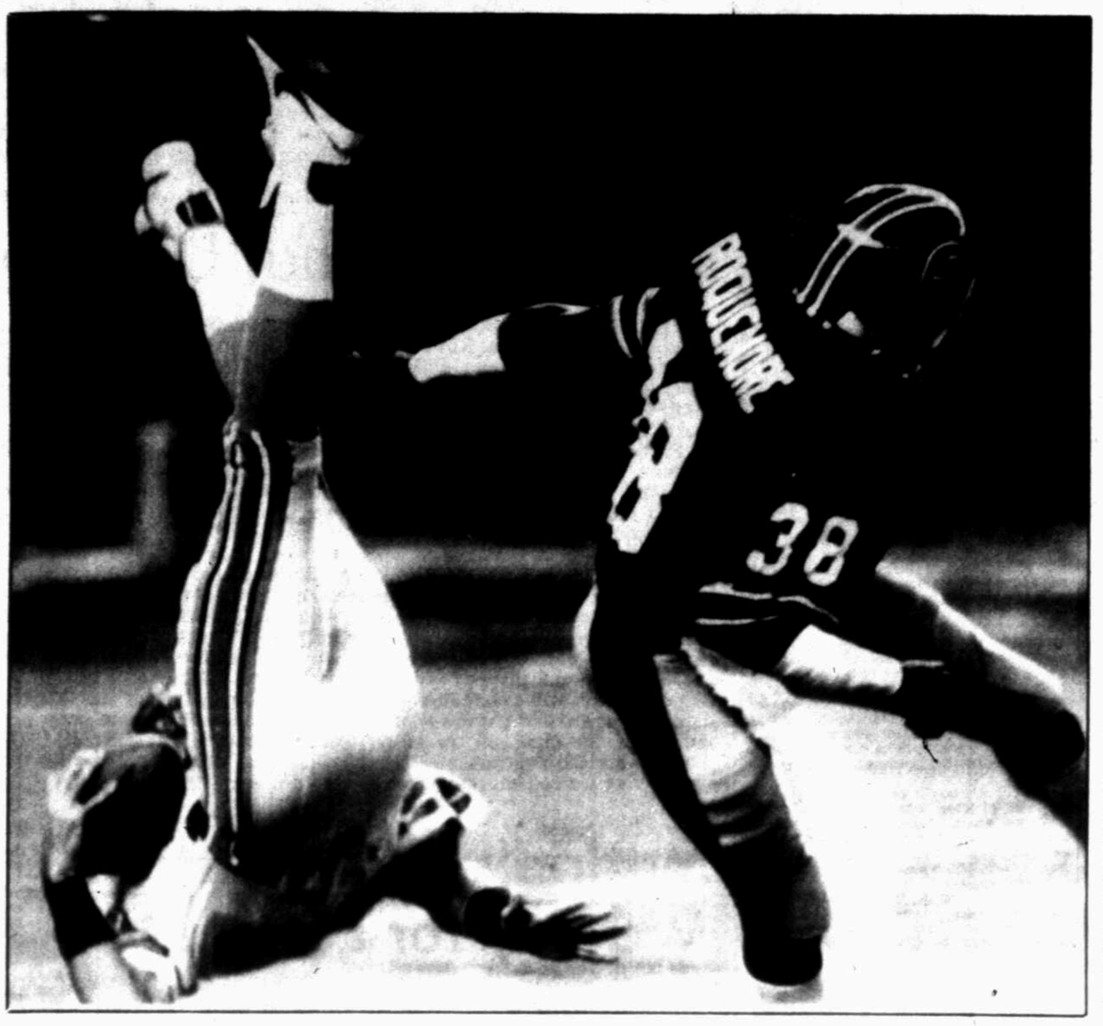

"It totally changes a game plan when you take a lead," McClanahan said. "Linemen can take more chances and can tee off. After we got a 17-point lead we put the pressure on them."

The Invaders converted a pair of Houston turnovers into 10 points during a 57-second span of the first period.

Oliver Davis set up the first score when he intercepted a Dillon pass and returned it 41 yards to the Oakland 49. Five plays later, Novo Bojovic kicked a 44-yard field goal with 8:12 left in the quarter.

On Houston's next possession, the Gamblers attempted a punt from their own 24. McClanahan broke through to block the punt and recovered in the end zone to give the Invaders a 10-0 lead after Bojovic's conversion with 7:15 left.

The Invaders scored again on their next possession when Hebert passed 64 yards to Derek Holloway to give Oakland a 17-0 lead with 4:03 remaining in the quarter.

Oakland wide receiver Mike Shumann holds onto the pass from quarterback Bobby Hebert after being flipped by Houston safety Durwood Roquemore (38) Monday night at the Astrodome.

HOUSTON CUT the Oakland lead to 24-7 at the half on a 47-yard TD pass from Dillon to Todd Fowler.

Oakland added a third-quarter TD on a 44-yard run by John Williams, while Houston scored twice in the fourth quarter on runs of 3 yards and 1 yard by Harrell.

The game was the last USFL regular-season match for at least 14 months. The league is next scheduled to surface in the fall of 1986. Teams will cut their rosters to 35 players by Aug. 1 to last over the league's hiatus.

In the other two games of the league's first round of playoffs, Denver will play at Memphis Sunday and Baltimore will visit New Jersey on Monday.

Denver absorbed a 42-6 loss to Jacksonville Sunday, the worst loss this year for the Gold, which dropped to 11-7 with the loss.

The Bulls got four touchdown runs from Mike Rozier, the last they will get from him. The 1983 Heisman Trophy winner bought out his contract with Jacksonville Monday and signed with the National Football League's Houston Oilers. His new contract, over four years, is worth an estimated $2 million.

The Gold will meet a Memphis team that has outscored its last three opponents 110-45. The Showboats beat the Arizona Outlaws 38-28 Saturday to raise their record to 11-7.

THE LAST time the two teams met was in Denver two months ago and the Showboats dominated that encounter 33-17.

"I feel good about playing Memphis, and they pretty much hammered us," said Denver Coach Mouse Davis. "Truly, when you get to the playoffs, it doesn't mean anything, who beat whom, during the season."

Sunday's game should have been played in Denver since the Gold is the fourth seed among the eight playoff teams and the Showboats are fifth. The league shifted the action to Memphis because of the Gold's dismal attendance this season.

The defending champion Stars have won five of their last six games to finish the regular season at 10-7-1. They drubbed Tampa Bay 38-10 Sunday.

"Earlier in the season, I was worried about making the playoffs," said Baltimore Coach Jim Mora. "The fact that we started so slowly made every game a pressure game. But we seem to be scoring now and are healthier on offense than we've been all season."

New Jersey's 14-6 loss to Birmingham Sunday dropped the Generals to 11-7.

The Generals had won 13 straight at home. One of the victories was against the Stars, by a score of 10-3.

Niekro finds stuff for 198th victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If Joe Niekro, the Houston Astros' veteran knuckleball pitcher, had been throwing punches instead of pitches, he never would have made it past the second round.

It would have been stopped. He would have been finished.

But the 40-year-old Niekro survived, and once he harnessed his darting knuckler, he had everything in order.

Niekro hurled the Astros to an 8-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers in the lone National League game Monday night, his 198th career victory, as Glenn Davis and Kevin Bass belted timely home runs.

The win broke the Dodgers' dominance over the Astros. Los Angeles had defeated Houston seven times in a row, including the first three games of the series after sweeping a three-game series last weekend in Houston. Los Angeles leads the series, 11-3.

"We had to have this one," said Houston Manager Bob Lillis. "We had a lot of breaks go our way for a change and we made the plays. This looked like our game."

Not at the start.

NIEKRO WAS wild, very wild, early in the game, yet he survived, leaving the bases loaded the first two innings and again in the fourth.

In all, he gave up only five hits — including Pedro Guerrero's 17th homer — walked six, threw three wild pitches and hit three batters.

"I had a good knuckler," Niekro explained, "but it was all over the place.

"Those first two innings I started to wonder. But I found myself in time. The Dodgers hit the ball, but they hit it at people."

Lillis said he was close to removing Niekro in the early going.

"He was a pitch away from coming out a couple of times," admitted Lillis. "But from the fifth inning on, you can't pitch better than he did. It was like two games."

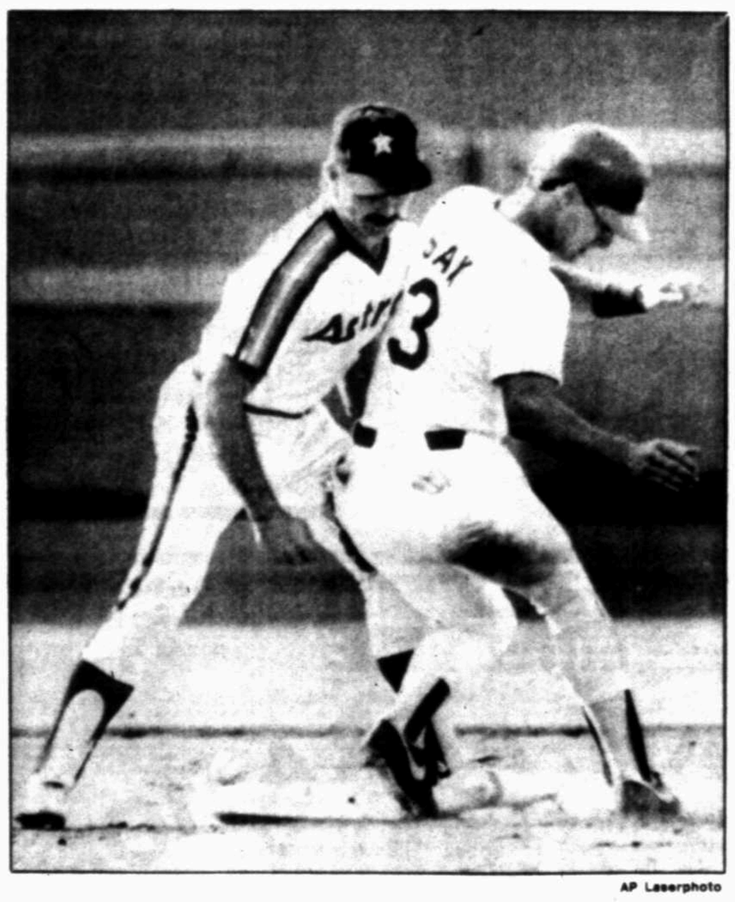

Niekro allowed just two hits after the second inning. He retired Mike Scioscia — whom he had hit his first two times up — on a hard liner to end the fourth, leaving three runners on. That started a string of 15 outs in a row, although when Dave Anderson fanned in the eighth inning he reached first safely when the pitch got away from Houston catcher Alan Ashby.

Niekro, 5-7, did set a Houston club record for most career walks, 772, to pass J.R. Richard's previous mark of 770.

"Well," said Niekro, "you have to pitch a lot to get a record like that."

The Dodgers managed to open a 3-1 lead after two innings because of Niekro's wildness. But Davis hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning, his first of the season, to tie the score. And Bass smacked a three-run blast in the fifth, his seventh, off loser Jerry Reuss, 5-6.

Los Angeles Dodger Steve Sax (3) steals second base as Houston shortstop Dickie Thon drops the ball Monday night.

Angels let another one get away, 5-4

From Staff Reports

BEAUMONT — The Beaumont Golden Gators made it four-in-a-row over the Midland Angels Monday night, claiming a 5-4 Texas League decision.

The victory gives the Gators a 4-1 start in the second half of the Texas League season, matching the opening pace set by first half champion El Paso. The Diablos were 8-2 winners over San Antonio, a team that shares the TL West cellar with Midland at 1-4.

The Angels took a 4-3 lead in the top of the sixth inning on Reggie Montgomery's 10th home run of the year, a shot hit to deep center field, only to give the game back to the Gators in the eighth.

Still down by one, the Gators took advantage of three Angel errors to punch across their final two runs. Ricky Coleman led off the attack by reaching first when his grounder went through the legs of first baseman James Randall.

Coleman went on to steal second and went to third when John Tutt's fly to right field was dropped by Tito Nanni for the second error. Angel relief pitcher Todd Fischer committed the third error on a one-hopper by Tom Brassil. Fischer fielded the grounder but his throw to second base to force Tutt went through to center field to score Coleman.

Tutt, who went to third on the error, scored the winning run on Gary Green's perfectly laid down suicide squeeze bunt.

Fischer, who came into the game in relief of starter Scott Suehr, was tagged with the loss, dropping his previously unblemished record to 5-1. Beaumont's Joe Bitker, 2-0, took the win in eight innings of duty while Jeff Childres picked up his first save.

The Angels mounted a rally in the ninth inning only to have it snuffed out when pinch runner Devon White was thrown out trying to steal third base to end the game with two on and two out.

TED BATTLES

A victory Whiteside can cherish

They say a picture is worth a thousand words, but even Channel 2's tape, the only chronicle of the event, Sunday night, couldn't convey the full impact. You'd have to have witnessed what went on before and what was to come for the full impact.

Still, the shot of Steve Whiteside, perched precariously on 4x4 pilings, tottering a few feet away from a late afternoon dip, was a story in itself. Whiteside had assumed an absurd tableau in a useless attempt at survival on the 22nd hole of the Men's West Texas Amateur Sunday at Ranchland Hills.

He swayed in the wind, trying to make a shot that everyone knew he couldn't possibly make. Believe me, I've tried the same type shot many times.

The ball was lodged tight against the piling, the only thing that kept it from dropping back into the water. There was no reasonable way to get at the ball, let alone control it. But Whiteside chopped down with a putter, although still 10 yards from the green, and awkwardly lifted the ball to and across the green. A nasty downhill putt was still to be made if he was to stay alive with young Bob Estes, golf's answer to Charlie Gehringer.

TWO PRESSURE shots on the same hole, but for Whiteside, everything from the 14th hole on was pressure. First, for preserving his all-even status with Estes, who led through 14 holes, and second, because he was playing his tee-to-green game like he was one of the contenders in the U.S. Open a few weeks ago.

Whiteside always seemed to be peering around a tree, up from the bottom of a trap, over a row of trees at the green from the wrong fairway or at a putt that had more length than a boa and more coils than a rattler poised to strike.

"Pressure? I really didn't have time to notice," Steve replied to the inevitable question as though he'd never thought of it until now. "I was too occupied with trying to figure out how I was going to make the next shot."

ESTES, MEANWHILE, clicked off monotonous par-after-par, 24 of 'em, and it finally caught up with him when Whiteside sank that over hill and dale 40-footer on No. 24.

I think you have to look beyond the Men's WT for a more suspenseful match, even though the tournament stretches 57 years into the past. And, frankly, a match that maintained the hole-after-hole intensity of this one doesn't come to mind right away.

This was made for Sunday afternoon TV showcasing, and how the tour would love to have one like it. It could do wonders for the game's popularity, which, to be blunt, has waned as a spectator sport since Arnie's Army, the Golden Bear and the Merry Mexican have assumed elder statesman status.

THIS WAS the kind of sports drama you don't see too often any more. One-on-one with skill, stamina and gut-sucking determination blended into one athlete. No help or relief was coming in from the sidelines or from the dugout to ease the tension.

This was Dean-Hubbell of old-...Koufax-Gibson....Ali-Frazier...Borg-McEnroe at Wimbledon. Perhaps the names are more famous, but Whiteside-Estes possesed all the ingredients that make a memorable classic sports contest.

Steve finally got the WT Men's he had pursued intermittently since 1974. And he'll go after another next year. But golf is no longer his game. At 30, his future is with Permian Corp. and the oil-related world of business.

Estes? He plans to make golf a career. Maybe he'll someday join the Payne Stewarts, Andy Norths, Steve Pates and Larry Mizes on the tour and perhaps some day contest for a Masters or Open. If he did, it would make looking back just so much more enjoyable for Steve.

He could watch Estes sink a winning putt on TV to win something special and justifiably preen just a bit, "Hey, I beat that guy once. Let me tell you about it." Lend an ear, his tale is worth listening to.

Paul trying to fight way out of lightweight shadows

Associated Press

Jimmy Paul isn't upset about not being the best-known lightweight in the world. After all, he's overshadowed in his own gym — the Kronk in Detroit.

To most people Kronk means Thomas "Hit Man" Hearns, the World Boxing Council super welterweight champion, who failed to become a triple champion when he was beaten by undisputed middleweight king Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

And it means Milton "The Iceman" McCrory, the WBC welterweight champion, or Emanuel Steward, the man who runs the Kronk and its fighters.

"I'm not necessarily upset by it," the 25-year-old Paul said of his role as an overshadowed star of the Kronk. "I'm used to it."

He has the same attitude about his status as a lightweight, which is that of a champion (International Boxing Federation), who is relatively unknown compared to Ray "Boom Boom," Mancini, former World Boxing Association champion, and Hector "Macho" Camacho, who is scheduled to challenge Jose Luis Ramirez for the World Boxing Council title in August.

Camacho works hard at getting attention. He's even managed to get a lot of it in the last year or so by pulling out of fights.

Robin Blake vs. Jimmy Paul

But while Paul might be used to being overshadowed, he says, "Sooner or later I'll be known."

Patience. It's a mark of Jimmy Paul's fighting style and lifestyle.

When an interviewer asked Paul if he was married, he replied, "I'm patient about everything."

In the ring, Paul combines patience with power.

"I like to know where my punches are going, I like to conserve my energy. If you're going 15 rounds, you have to have energy," said Paul, who has a 22-1 record, with 18 knockouts.

He gave a graphic demonstration of his fighting philosophy April 6 when he knocked down previouly unbeaten Harry Arroyo three times and won a unanimous 15-round decision for the IBF title. He will defend it Sunday in a nationally televised match at Las Vegas, Nev. against Robin Blake, who lost a 10-round decision to Arroyo Jan. 14, 1984.

The loss to Arroyo was the second straight for Blake, who had won his 22 pro fights, 15 by knockouts, but the 5-foot-11 left-hander from Fort Worth, Texas has won his last five bouts, two by knockout, to get back into the title picture.

In fact, it was Blake who was supposed to challenge Arroyo on April 6. But he hurt a hand, and Paul substituted.

Paul also is on a five-fight winning streak, although he feels it just as easily could be a 23-fight winning streak.

On June 12, 1983, Paul knocked out Andy Ganigan in the sixth round and won the United States Boxing Association title. Then Paul's patience was tested.

"I had trouble getting fights, so I stopped training," said Paul, who had had nine fights in 1982. "Then suddenly they come up with a fight and I took it on five days notice."

On Oct. 11, 1983, at Atlantic City, N.J., Paul fought Daryl Tyson, who won 17 of 18 fights in 1983-84.

"I have him winning the third round and maybe two more," Paul said. "They gave him the fight."

Paul shrugged off the loss, and five fights later become a champion by beating a man that some boxing people were calling the best lightweight in the world.

"I think I am," Paul said. "I've got to prove it to the people, but I feel I am."

Rozier buys out USFL pact to play for Oilers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier has bought out his contract with the Jacksonville Bulls of the United States Football League and will play for the Houston Oilers of the National Football League this fall, his agent says.

Rozier this week is expected to sign a four-year contract worth an estimated $2 million, his agent, Philadelphia lawyer Art Wilkinson, said Monday.

National Football League spokesman Dick Maxwell said Rozier's case has been reviewed and that "he is free of any contract obligation."

Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzeg said Rozier will come to Houston later this week for a physical, and if he passes, the club will try to get him to sign the contract.

"I'm very pleased because Mike's a talented player who is coming off a great season with Jacksonville, but I'm going to be cautious until his signature is on a contract," Herzeg said. "We've made what I feel is a very, very fair contract proposal."

Rozier, who set rushing records and won the 1983 Heisman Trophy while at the University of Nebraska, was staying with his parents in New Jersey, but did not return calls there.

Rozier gained 1,361 yards this year in the United States Football League with Jacksonville, which tried to keep Rozier with an offer that included $1 million in real estate, according to Wilkinson.

"The down payment was $400,000 to $500,000. The issue was not enough cash," Wilkinson said. He said it was decided to go with the "safe money" from Houston.

Houston obtained the NFL rights to the former All-American in a supplemental draft in June 1984 of USFL players. Rozier was chosen second, after Steve Young of the Los Angeles Express.

The Oilers and Rozier have been awaiting NFL clearance to sign.

Wilkinson said Rozier "felt glad about the opportunity to play in the USFL this year and prove he could play. He did that. He feels like he can come in and be every bit as good a running back as Earl Campbell was at Houston and he was at Nebraska."

Madrid's no-hitter stops Mid City for Eastern, 4-0

From Staff Reports

James Madrid opened the American Little League playoffs in spectacular fashion Monday at Lancaster Park. Madrid hurled Eastern Optimists to a 4-0 no-hit victory over the Mid City Indians a first round game in the double elimination tournament.

But that's only part of it. Madrid retired 18 of 19 batters faced, struck out 16 and the lone base runner reached first as a result of a walk.

Eastern backed up the brilliant pitching effort with an eight-hit attack.

Madrid helped his own cause with a double, the game's only extra base hit.

Oscar Molinar and Mario Rodriquez each collected two hits while Sean McIntyre, J.J. Johnson and Robert James all chipped in with singles.

Action resumes today at 6 p.m. with Eastern coming back to play Tower Little League. Tower drew a bye in the opening round of play.

Lendl claims rain should have won opening match

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Ivan Lendl, No. 2 seed at the Wimbledon tennis championships, slipped and slid his way to an opening round victory over American Mel Purcell and then said the match should not have been played.

Lendl's 6-4, 7-6 (7-2), 7-6 (7-2) victory was the only match completed on the first day of the championships because of rain and bad light.

Purcell tumbled six times on the damp grass during the two-hour, 13-minute match, while Lendl was on the ground at least three times.

"I'm glad that I won and that I'm not hurt," said Lendl afterwards.

"I thought it was too dangerous to play."

When told that John McEnroe and Peter McNamara had asked the umpire if they could stop their Center Court match because of the conditions, Lendl said he did not think he had the power to make a similar request.

"If I knew it was dangerous, so should the umpire, if he sees us falling all over the place and sliding."

Wimbledon

Lendl said he was glad he got the match over with, but would have preferred to play Tuesday on a less dangerous surface.

"I wonder what they (the officials) would have done if one of us had fallen and torn some ligaments and have been out for a year," he said.

Throughout the match Lendl puzzled observers by continually thumping the soles of his shoes with the rim of his racquet.

He explained later: "Every time I ran I was slipping and tearing grass, which was sticking to my shoes.

"I had to dig it out, otherwise I wouldn't have been able to take any more steps."

Oakland's Dusty Baker (12) loses his balance on third base after hitting a triple while Chicago's Hulett stares at the ball in his glove.

Royals swat five out in 12-6 win

Associated Press

The Kansas City Royals don't have to utilize their speed or take advantage of the springy artificial turf in the Minneapolis Metrodome. They can hit the ball into the inviting seats and simply trot around the bases.

The Royals did that five times Monday night, matching a club record by socking five home runs and trouncing the Minnesota Twins 12-6. Hal McRae drove in five runs with a pair of homers and Lonnie Smith, Jim Sundberg and Darryl Motley also connected in the Metrodome, where the ball carries well.

"I think the park has something to do with it," said Kansas City Manager Dick Howser. "It's only 375 down the power alleys (actually 385 in left-center, 367 in right-center). That's not good enough in Royals Stadium (385 in each alley). We have more power on the road just because of the dimensions."

AL Roundup

Mariners 2, Rangers 0

Frank Wills and Ed Nunez combined on a five-hitter for Seattle's fourth straight victory. Wills, 3-1, allowed four hits, walked six and struck out four in seven innings. He surrendered two walks and two hits in the first inning, but some poor baserunning prevented the Rangers from scoring.

First, Oddibe McDowell was thrown out trying to steal third. With two out, Gary Ward singled, which appeared to score Wayne Tolleson. But Seattle catcher Bob Kearney went into the Rangers' dugout to record the final out of the innning by tagging Tolleson, who had missed home plate.

Red Sox 9, Tigers 2

Marty Barrett, Bill Buckner and Glenn Hoffman had two-run hits and Jim Rice also drove in two runs with a triple and homer. Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd allowed six hits and walked eight but struggled to his 10th complete game, tops in the AL.

Rice started the Boston fourth with an infield hit. With two out, Dwight Evans hit a grounder off the end of the bat for a double down the right-field line, sending Rice to third. After Rich Gedman was walked intentionally, Barrett singled for a 2-0 lead. In the fifth, Wade Boggs singled and scored on Rice's triple.

Indians 2, Angels 1

Joe Carter's leadoff home run in the eighth inning off Jim Slaton snapped a 1-1 tie and gave Bert Blyleven his 202nd career triumph with a 10-strikeout, four-hit effort. The Angels, whose lead in the AL West was sliced to 1½ games over Chicago, had tied the score with a disputed run in the seventh.

Rod Carew was on first with a leadoff single when Juan Beniquez slashed a double into the right-field corner. When a fan touched the ball, first base umpire Tim Welke signaled a ground-rule double, which would have held Carew at third. But the Angels argued that Carew would have scored anyway and third base umpire Jim McKean agreed and let the run count.

White Sox 7, A's 1

Harold Baines drove in three runs, two with his sixth homer, and Dan Spillner hurled 5 1-3 innings of scoreless relief as Chicago snapped a four-game losing streak. Baines started the scoring with a sacrifice fly off loser Tim Birtsas in the first inning and finished it with a two-run homer off Bill Krueger in the fifth. Tom Paciorek had an RBI single for Chicago while Greg Walker doubled two runs home and Ron Kittle hit a sacrifice fly.

Yankees 5, Orioles 4

Don Baylor drove home the tying run with a sacrifice fly and Willie Randolph singled through Baltimore's drawn-in infield to cap a two-run rally in the eighth inning. Dave Winfield led off with a single and took third when Ron Hassey doubled off loser Dennis Martinez, who has never won in eight career starts at Yankee Stadium.

Baylor greeted reliever Don Aase with a sacrifice fly, with Omar Moreno, running for Hassey, barely beating the throw to third. Randolph then singled up the middle.

Winner Joe Cowley, 6-3, pitched eight innings and allowed six hits, two of them home runs by Jim Dwyer, who drove in all four Baltimore runs. The Yankees have won all four meetings with Baltimore this season, outscoring the Orioles 31-8.

TREASURY BILLS

Yields rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities, after dropping last week to their lowest level in five years, rose in Monday's auctions.

The Treasury Department sold $7 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.06 percent, up from 6.73 percent last week. Another $7 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.24 percent, up from 6.90 percent last week.

The increases still left rates below their levels of two weeks ago. On June 10, three-month bills brought 7.21 percent while six-month bills were auctioned at 7.35 percent.

The new Treasury bill discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 7.29 percent for three-month bills and 7.62 percent for six-month bills.

MONEY

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell slightly against major hard currencies early today in uncertain trading on European currency markets inspired by dollar sell-offs in New York. Gold was up.

The market was waiting for a reading of U.S. economic performance from figures on durable goods orders in May, expected to be up 1.2 percent after a 0.2-percent drop in April.

"The market is so uncertain, so confused right now that it is hard to see any firm trend developing," said a Frankfurt dealer, adding:

"People sold the dollar early here after they saw that New York dealers had been selling dollars for two straight sessions. Then, as it has been for the past week or so when the dollar falls a little, it bounced back up."

The dollar had begun slipping on Friday against most currencies after sharp gains earlier last week.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 248.70 yen from Monday's 249.06, after rising for three days. Later, in London, it was quoted at 248.80 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

—3.0630 West German marks, down from 3.0670.

—2.5605 Swiss francs, down from 2.5607.

—9.3305 French francs, down from 9.3635.

—3.4550 Dutch guilders, down from 3.4630.

—1,951.50 Italian lire, down from 1,961.50.

—1.3588 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3665.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.2875, unchanged from Monday.

Gold trading was quiet, with dealers waiting to see how the dollar would perform during the day.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $316.10 an ounce, compared with late Monday's $315. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $315.90.

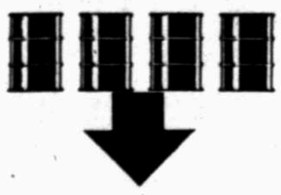

In Zurich, the bid price was $316.15, up from $315.50 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose 0.53 to close at a bid $316.41.

In New York Monday, gold rose $1.40 to close at $315.60.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.140 an ounce, up from Monday's $6.125

Governors ask Reagan to revise tax plan

Group wants to eliminate tax breaks for rich

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Gov. Bruce Babbit, chairman of the Democratic Governors' Association, urged President Reagan Monday to restructure his massive tax overhaul plan by eliminating what Babbit called "unconscionable" tax breaks for the rich.

Babbit, D-Ariz., also warned that Reagan would face opposition from most Democratic governors to his proposal to repeal the federal deduction for state and local sales, income and property taxes.

Meeting at the White House with nine governors, Reagan, however, won support for the proposal to stop allowing taxpayers to deduct their local tax payments from the six Republican governors present. They included Lamar Alexander of Tennessee, vice chairman of the National Governors' Association and Dick Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Governors' Association.

Alexander insisted that less than 50 percent of people benefit from the deductability proposal, which he said "takes money away from the poor and gives it to the rich."

But Babbit argued that although most Democratic governors "believe in your stated objective of fairness and equity" they are unwilling to back the President's "generosity toward the rich. This is not a fair and equitable plan."

"The Democratic governors will be taking a hard line on this issue," Babbit said. "We are not frozen in concrete. We're willing to meet the president half way."

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, the principal opponent of the deductability elimination, who did not attend the session, said the loss of deductability for millions of middle income households "would virtually wipe out the tax savings from other provisions of tax reform."

In a statement issued by his office, Cuomo insisted that nearly two-thirds of households with incomes between $20,000 and $40,000 utilize the deduction.

"Judged by the number of people in this nation who avail themeleves of it and the obvious requirements of fairness, the preservation of deductability of the property tax and other state and local taxes would have to come before any other deductions were considered," Cuomo added.

Cuomo rejected Governor Alexander's statement as "simplistic characterization" and recalled that the Tennessee governor's views were "soundly rejected by the National Governors Association in February."

"Special tax provisions for oil and gas interests, capital gains and dividends contained in the President's plan suggest that Governor Alexander must be reading the President's plan upside down," Cuomo added.

The state and local tax issue is shaping up as the central fight of the tax revision plan. Governors from high-tax states like New York, Massachusetts and Michigan, who happen to be Democrats, have been making the most hay by opposing Reagan on this controversial proposal.

The critics, led by New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, contend that ending the deduction would put high-tax states under tremendous pressure to cut taxes and trim social services.

In 1982, for example, taxpayers in New York who itemized their deductions got an average tax savings of $1,292 from the local tax deduction, while the average itemizer in Wyoming got a $257 savings. The Reagan administration argues that this disparity is unfair because taxpayers from low-tax states are subsidizing those in areas with higher rates.

Privately, however, administration officials have made it clear that its principal reason for targeting the deduction is the need for the $34 billion the Treasury loses each year.

Among plans aimed at softening the impact of the proposed change currently being studied on Capitol Hill are measures to phase out the deduction over several years, changing it to a partial tax credit, or allowing deductions of state taxes that exceed 1 percent of income.

Flag-Redfern gas record oil, gas production

From Staff Reports

Flag-Redfern Oil Co., a closed Midland corporation, has reported record levels of oil and gas production and record earnings for the firm's 1984 fiscal year, according to Glenn Brant, president.

At the firm's recent general meeting the oil company reported average daily production of 2,225 barrels per day and 12,756 Mcfpd, with total sales of $39,761,000, resulting in a net earnings of $10,179,890 or $510 per share.

At the same time net reserves increased by 14 percent. Estimated reserves for Flag-Redfern now stand at: 6,225,365 barrels of oil and condensate and 32,359,201 Mcf of natural gas as of January 1, 1985.

Unadited results also reported for the first quarter 1985 reported a continuation of high earnings for the firm.

For the first quarter the firm reported and increase in average daily production of 2,671 barrels and an improvement also of natural gas production with 14,015 Mcfd of gas.

Sales for the period were $9,863,618, resulting in a net income of $2,650,182 or $133 per share. Significant discoveries in the Permian Basin and Powder River Basin of Wyoming were also reported at the meeting, and aggregate investment in producing oil and gas properties in 1985 was approximately $2.2 million, with the major portion going for the May 1, purchase of Glorieta Oil Co., Inc. and several property interests from R.S. Anderson & Associates.

Japanese government announces tariff cuts on over 1,860 products

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese government today announced tariff reductions on more than 1,860 products, most taking effect next year, and said it is willing to discuss abolishing tariffs on all manufactured goods.

The offer came in a mid-term report on an "action program" of market-opening measures to quell foreign criticism of Japan's huge trade surpluses.

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone in April announced the program and pledged to come up with tariff cuts by late June and other market opening measures in July. Japan last year had a trade surplus of $45 billion, including $36.8 billion with the United States.

The tariff cuts may be suspended if they cause "considerable" damage to local industry, the government said.

The package includes case-by-case reductions of at least 20 percent on import duties for boneless chicken, palm oil, bananas and 33 other agricultural products that have caused concern among foreign countries, mainly in Southeast Asia.

It also includes an across-the-board 20-percent cut in tariffs for 160 other agricultural products and 1,600 manufactured and mining goods, to take effect early next year.

Tariffs on 34 other manufactures items will be unilaterally abolished and 30 items with tariffs of less than 2 percent will be exempted from 1987 duties.

Tariffs on five categories of wine and other liquor also will be cut 20 percent.

The affected items do not include agricultural staples, such as rice and other grains; products with quotas, such as beef and oranges; goods supported by government subsidies, such as sugar; and crude oil and coal.

The aim of the cuts is "to contribute ... to the early initiation of the New Round" of multilateral trade talks and "contribute to the maintenance and strengthening of the free trade system," a government statement said.

The government said it was ready to discuss abolishing tariffs altogether on all manufactured goods "along with other advanced industrialized nations."

"It will actively promote such tariff negotiations in the forthcoming New Round (of trade negotiations)," the announcement said.

As a first step, Japan will promote negotiations with its trading partners to abolish tariffs on 50 high-technology items, it said.

The government also said Japan will introduce improvements in the Generalized System of Preferences, which gives quota and tariff advantages to developing countries.

It pledged Japan will work to rectify what is often called the "escalation in tariffs," in which duties increase proportionate to the degree of processing of a product.

The 18-percent tariff on boneless chicken, a major Thai export item, will be reduced to 14 percent.

Los Angeles port, bureau complete pipeline report

LONG BEACH, CA — The Port of Los Angeles and the Bureau of Land Management, Riverside office, have completed distribution of the Draft Environmental Impact Report/Environmental Statement for the Pacific Texas Pipeline Project, a crude oil transportation line from Los Angeles Harbor to Midland, Texas.

The Port of Los Angeles and the Bureau of Land Management acted as co-lead agencies for the project under California Environmental Quality Act and National Environmental Policy Act.

This project will entail the granting of over 800 permits on the Federal, State, and local levels. The Port of Los Angeles acts as lead agency due to the large amount of work required on Port of Los Angeles lands. The Bureau of Land Management acts as lead agency as the pipeline crosses approximately 400 miles of land under control of the Federal agency. The pipeline is proposed for operation in 1987 at an approximate cost of $1.6 billion.

The Draft Environmental Impact Report/Environmental Impact Statement details the possible impacts on the environment due to the project. Major project components include: 1) a 115 acre landfill island that includes a tank farm and a 75 foot deep dredged channel in the Port of Los Angeles for receiving of the oil; 2) approximately 1030 miles of buried pipeline; 3) eleven pump stations; and 4) a 100 acre tank farm in Midland, Texas.

In addition to the proposed project, three alternatives were considered. Based on the issues and concerns identified during the scoping process the DEIR/EIS focuses on the impacts of air quality, system safety, employment, need for the project, port alternatives, national security, oil spills, and restoration of areas affected during construction.

Out of the significant adverse impacts which were identified, 22 of these were able to be mitigated, so that the projected impact was negligible or no longer significant. Included in this list of successfully mitigated impacts were air quality, certain impacts to terrestrial biology, cultural resources, paleontology, and certain impacts to oceanography and marine biology.

The Pacific Texas Project was able to successfully mitigate the air quality impacts by: 1) agreeing to certain air quality mitigation measures during construction; 2) the use of innovative technology to scrub tanker emissions while berthed in the Harbor; and 3) the purchase of reactive organic gas offsets. Due to these offsets, the DEIR/EIS reports a "net emission reduction in the Los Angeles Basin," when the project is implemented.

The public review period for the document is 45 days, through August 5, 1985. Public hearings will be held along the route.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Shop for CD with highest interest

By BILL DOYLE

Q. You know what has been happening to interest rates lately. They keep going down. I have a number of certificates of deposit. One which paid high interest matured recently and I had to renew it at much lower interest. When my other CDs come due, the same thing will happen.

I depend on my CD interest to supplement my pension and Social Security. Where can I get higher interest, with safety? I don't want to take any risk, whatsoever. I won't put my money any place that doesn't have federal deposit insurance. Should I consider long-term CDs? I'm sure I'm not the only reader of your column with this problem.

Doyle

A. Indeed, you're not. The mailbag has been bulging with letters similar to yours for months. As interest rates have headed lower, people with maturing CDs have had to accept lower rates on new CDs.

Lower interest is good for the nation's economy. But it does hurt individuals such as you who depend on interest income. Unfortunately, there's no easy solution to your problem.

Since you are adamant about having your money covered by federal deposit insurance, you'll have to take whatever interest is available at the time you put money into CDs. Shop around to learn what different banks and S&Ls are paying.

You can get higher interest on long-term CDs than on short-term CDs. The longer the maturity of any fixed-income investment, the higher the interest.

However, I would caution against going into CDs with really long maturities. If you buy, say, a 10-year CD at current interest rates, and interest rates move up again, you'll be stuck.

No one can accurately predict where interest rates are headed in the future. But, to avoid holding relatively low interest rate CDs in a period of rising rates, you should buy CDs with maturities of no more than three years.

Q. My bank has been taken over by another bank and I am not satisfied with the way it now operates. I have $6,000 in certificates of deposit and $3,000 in a money market deposit account there.

Interest on the MMDA has been drastically reduced and my monthly statements for that account are always late. I would like to move my money to a different bank or savings and loan association. What do you suggest?

A. You can withdraw any or all of the $3,000 in the MMDA at any time you like. But, if you cash in a CD before its maturity date, you'll be hit with an early withdrawal penalty.

Redeeming a CD before it matures, because you're unhappy with that bank, would be a classic case of biting your nose to spite your face.

Sure, move your MMDA, assuming you can get higher interest elsewhere. First check the interest available at other banks and S&Ls. MMDA interest rates have come way down and, as I write this, aren't averaging much more than 7 percent.

Also, before closing out your present MMDA, find out when interest is credited to that account. If it's credited on a certain day of each month, move your money after the interest is added to your account that day — so you don't lose any interest.

Q. A savings and loan association is offering "real estate earnings-based certificates of deposit," which have a guaranteed rate of interest, plus additional interest that might make the total rate 18 percent or higher. Is this possible?

A. Almost anything is "possible" in the world of finance. In this case, you should be more concerned about what is "probable."

The literature you sent along shows that the S&L will use the money depositors put into those particular CDs to invest in real estate ventures. If the ventures are profitable, that profit will be shared by the S&L and CD holders, with interest on those CDs being increased through a rather complicated formula.

Because that S&L is a member of the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp., there's no worry about the safety of the CDs for each depositor who has $100,000 or less in the S&L.

The S&L is obligated to pay the guaranteed rate of interest on the CDs. That much is safe.

Beyond that, it's impossible to say if the CD interest will rise above the guaranteed rate. That all depends on how well, or how badly, the real estate investments work out.

Ex-Scout leader faces another indecency charge

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A former Boy Scout leader convicted in February of indecency with a child is free on a $50,000 bond today after being arrested Friday for a June 10 incident involving a 10-year-old boy, according to police.

Joseph Gallagher, 37, was free on bond while appealing his conviction for indecencies allegedly committed with an 11-year-old boy at a Scout ranch last July. According to police, on June 10 he persuaded the parents of two boys who lived near his home at 610 W. Cowden to let them spend the night at his house.

"The parents were not aware" of Gallagher's arrest or conviction, said Police Lt. Earl Luckey this morning. The 10-year-old boy "belatedly told his parents what happened." After the boy identified Gallagher from photographs, the former Scout master, ex-school teacher and one-time participant in Big Brothers/Big Sisters was arrested Friday and charged with indecency with a child.

The other boy involved is out of town with his parents, and police will contact him when the family returns from vacation.

"He obviously didn't tell his parents" what happened, said Luckey.

Gallagher received a 13-year sentence Feb. 28 from a 142nd District Court jury after testifying that an incident where he obtained a sample of his sperm to show a young boy was "purely academic."

"At that time, I did not think I was doing anything immoral," Gallagher told the jury. He said he would "never" abuse a child, "because they are valuable and the good Lord made them."

Gallagher has been a substitute physical education teacher at Trinity School, a teacher for emotionally disturbed classes at Lee Freshman School, and a participant in Big Brothers/Big Sisters, but has never been accused of any abuses stemming from these activities.

His appeal of the February conviction is still pending.

ECISD trustees hear protests on evaluations, career advancement

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County school district trustees, meeting in special session for more than four-and-a-half hours Monday night, granted a measure of relief to five of 11 teachers appearing to protest evaluations that have denied them pay increases.

Board members voted to allow two teachers to update their personnel files with additional educational requirements and have their evaluations and career ladder placements reconsidered in the light of new information.

Three other teachers, represented by attorneys, won the right to evaluation reconsideration on the basis of one school year rather than the average of three, which could result in advancement on the career ladder and pay increases also.

But, board members refused to "go behind" the evaluations of six teachers who contended career ladder advancement had been denied them because of arbitrary or capricious evaluations by evaluators for one reason or another.

Odessa attorney Phillip Godwin, representing W.D. Noel Elementary reading teacher Nina Lee Smith, whose appeal for evaluation review was rejected, said an appeal to the Texas Education commissioner will be made within 30 days.

Following discussion of Ms. Smith's appeal behind closed doors, Godwin said she specifically protested her 1983-84 evaluation, done when she was teaching in Goldsmith, which dramatically contrasted with evaluations made by other principals in the 1981-82, 1982-83 and 1984-85 school years.

ACCORDING TO Godwin, the years in which Ms. Smith was rated extremely competent she worked under principals who had been principals 20, 22 and 30 years respectively, while the Goldsmith principal was in her first year in that position. Ms. Smith indicated her belief a personality conflict was responsible for the poor evaluation that resulted in denial of career ladder advancement.

Three special education teachers won their bids to have evaluations reconsidered because, attorneys representing them argued, their evaluations were erroneously based on three school years rather than a single year.

Austin attorney Richard Arnett, representing Raynelle Mitchell and Barbara Gilbert, contended evaluators had established an average based on the three school years, 1981 through 1984. Mitchell and Gilbert were not evaluated in the years 1981 through 1983, Arnett said, which made the evaluations on which they were denied career ladder advancement tantamount to "comparing apples to oranges."

The two teachers, along with Sandra Lee Berry, who was represented by Odessa attorney Kevin Bartley, will have their evaluations reconsidered on the basis of the 1983-84 and 1984-85 school years and will be granted career ladder advancements and $1,500 annual pay increases if their new evaluations produce the minimum required 30.5 points.

MRS. MITCHELL, now based at Lamar Elementary as special education teacher, and Mrs. Gilbert, a special education teacher based at Burleson, both noted they have no quarrel with evaluations for this year and last year, saying they have been extremely fair, that the bad evaluations had occurred while they were at other schools.

Genealogists find surprising roots

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A southern gentleman left his family to head down the Mississippi River with a load of cotton to New Orleans. The family never heard from him again.

Not until much later that is, when a Midland descendant found out what happened to the wayward breadwinner as she researched her family's roots.

"He had married the steamboat captain's daughter and settled in San Antonio," chuckled Marilyn Friday about the curious exploits of her great-grandfather LeDuke. "It turns out that he had been divorced from his wife."

Ms. Friday is president of the Midland Genealogical Society, a group of more than 100 family researchers who meet monthly in hopes of picking up tips on how to better research their past.

The findings, as in Ms. Friday's case, are sometimes surprising.

"WE DON'T care if they're pirates or princes," said reporter/historian Jake Williams, "as long as we know who they were. Besides, it's lots of fun."

Williams and Ms. Friday have been involved with the Midland group since it separated from the Permian Basin Genealogical Society in Odessa in 1972.

Ms. Friday got started in genealogical studies in high school.

"Actually, I've been interested since I was a little girl," she said. "When I was in a career/guidance class in high school, the teacher asked us to write a paper on our family history.

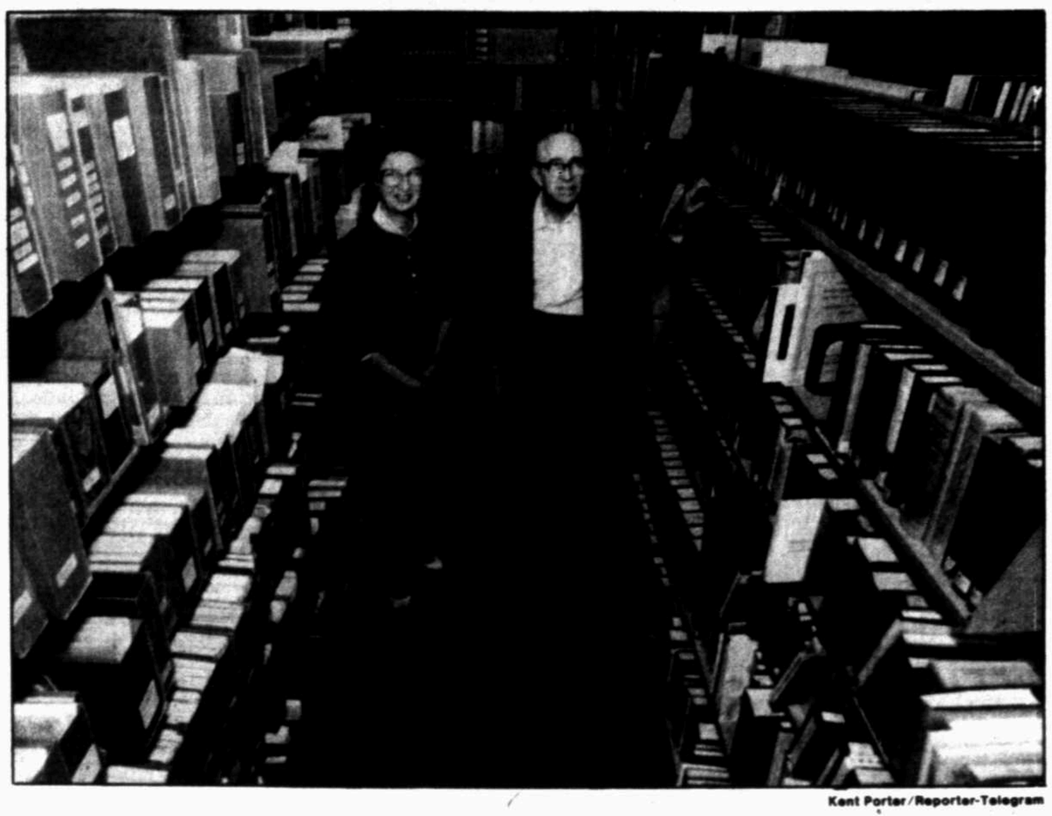

"I went to my great aunt's house and she had all sorts of material," she said. That spark of interest remained over the years, she added.

After teaching school for eight years in Midland and Arkansas, she began to write relatives.

"I was trying out of the blue to find some sort of clue and wound up acquiring quite a bit of information," she said.

"Later, I read an article that told how to order books on the subject and later still, I heard about the PBGS in Odessa and joined them."

Ms. Friday found out in a surprising manner just how "teaming up" can bring results. She was researching her mother's side of the family, the LeDukes, when she came up against a wall at one point. She discovered that two other descendants of the LeDuke family, one in California and another in Austin, were also researching their roots.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Surrounded by volumes of information about long-gone ancestors are Marilyn Friday, president of the Midland Genealogical Society, and Jake Williams, reporter/historian. Both have been members since the society was formed 13 years ago.

THE RESULT was a book on the LeDukes.

"All three of us got together and a book was published," said Ms. Friday.

Williams, a former geologist with Conoco Inc., began his own digging by limiting the scope of research.

"When I really got serious about it, I decided to restrict it to the eight great-grandparents. I started with the latest and went backwards from there."

Both Williams and Ms. Friday incorporate techniques worthy of a professional sleuth when searching for long-lost kin.

"One good way is to go to the U.S. Census Reports," said Williams. "The reports go all the way back to 1790 but they release them to the general public after 'most of the people involved are dead.'"

"The 1910 Census is the latest to be made available," said Ms. Friday.

Still another source is people.

"Living people are one of the main sources," said Williams. "And people usually love to help you. They like talking about the family."

Some of the research is just plain hard work. Digging through libraries, sending off hundreds of letters, pouring over courthouse and church records and plenty of typing over of hand-written accounts, are accepted duties for the genealogist.

"Most of the research is done by writing," said Williams. "I like it best because after I write I wind up with a carbon copy and a document in my hand when they reply."

The two rely on a number of potential sources.

"WILLS, inventories of estates, marriage records and courthouse and church records are all good places to look," said Ms. Friday. "Another one is deed records. They often describe the land and tell who the land goes to in case of death."

Libraries remain, however, an invaluable source for the persistent researcher. And the very best, according to both Williams and Ms. Friday, belongs to the Latter Day Saints in Salt Lake City.

"They have the best library in the world," said Ms. Friday of the Society of Genealogists of Latter Day Saints. "There are branches all over the country, including one in Odessa."

Ms. Friday said microfilm not available at the Odessa branch could be ordered from the Salt Lake City facility. Of great help to West Texans is the genealogical section of the Midland County Library.

"We have a lot of microfilm in a room behind the front desk at the library," said Williams.

More than 8,000 books are in the genealogical section, said Ms. Friday.

Arrests might break up burglary ring

From Staff Reports

A burglary interrupted by security guards Monday led to the arrest of three Midland men and the recovery of stolen property which might break up a major burglary ring, according to Sheriff's Investigator Jim Newsom.

The three men were allegedly burglarizing storage units at the Midland Flea Market on County Road 114 when they were scared off by security guards about 3:49 p.m., Newsom said. Sheriff's deputies stopped their 1977 Monte Carlo shortly afterwards and found the stolen property.

"We expect more arrests" said Newsom, who added that the three men were apparently members of a major burglary ring which "may have been committing 10 burglaries a day."

The ages of the three men were given as 18, 20, and "late 30s." Their arrest could solve "anywhere from 10 to 40 burglaries," Newsom said.

A 33-year-old Midland man accused of fatally shooting a security guard June 16 at a racetrack southeast of town was transferred from Midland Memorial Hospital to Midland County Jail Monday, according to the Sheriff's Office.

Ruben Bujanda, 1105 W. Kentucky, is under a $100,000 bond for allegedly killing 25-year-old James Belis of Odessa. Bujanda was shot five times himself in the incident, and had been hospitalized for a week before being moved to the jail.

He was arrested Wednesday and arraigned at bedside by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry. Charlie Coleman Jr., another security guard who was stabbed five times in the incident, has been released from the hospital, an MMH spokeswoman said this morning.

Milton Glosson was upgraded from critical to serious condition, the spokeswoman said. Glosson, 49, of rural Midland, was shot Thursday with a .410-gauge shotgun, reports said. His 41-year-old wife, Rose Anna Glosson, has been charged with attempted murder in the incident.

Two Midland boys injured in separate accidents last week remained hospitalized, the spokeswoman said. Michael Corbin, 13, was still in critical condition with head injuries suffered when he fell out of a moving pickup truck Tuesday, and 5-year-old John Levi Squyres, who was hit Monday by a pickup while riding his bicycle, was listed in satisfactory condition.

In other reports, Kurt Goetz, 306 Tanglewood, reported the theft of his $19,000 1982 Chevy pickup. He had left the pickup at the side of the road on State Highway 158 about six miles west of Midland Sunday after a tire went flat, reports said. When he returned hours later, the pickup was gone.

Sally Castleberry reported a burglary at her home at county roads 1192 South and 114 West. Taken Monday were a $300 stereo and a $250 radio set, reports said.

Connie Madrid reported the loss of a $250 stereo during a Monday burglary of her home at 304 E. Parker, reports said.

Snow tires and used radial tires worth a total of $350 were reported taken Monday from a storage building at 3013 West Industrial by Adam Praisnar. The lock had been cut, reports said.

A $150 set of speakers and $300 worth of cassette tapes were taken from a 1966 Ford pickup belonging to Todd Stanaford, 3209 Princeton, reports said. The burglary occurred sometime between June 16 and Monday.

Allison Valentine, 1203 Pecos, reported a Sunday night burglary of her home. Missing were a $200 stereo, a $150 television and a $30 clock-radio, reports said.

Otis Higginbotham, 2900 W. Illinois, told police he woke up Saturday and found his wallet, with $310 in currency, missing. He said he had been out drinking Friday night and had passed out, and didn't remember how he got home or where he might have lost the wallet, reports said.

Circus lures 'that daring young man' in all of us

Ah, the circus!

I can smell the popcorn already, its buttery aroma luring me into the world of the Big Top. With a firm grasp on my cotton candy, a large soda in my lap and the sound of the calliope and barking barkers, I'll be there to watch the show.

What is it about a circus that charms even the most cynical?

I mean, when you get right down to it, they're pretty stupid.

A barrel-chested Ukranian in a Tarzan outfit makes a bunch of geriatric stand-ins for "Born Free" leap around on drums; an entire family in white tights plays on the monkey bars and swings; grown men dress up as Ronald McDonald and run around in size 25 shoes, pulling each other's pants down while a mother of three stands on top of a horse.

Ridiculous.

I wouldn't miss it.

And I'm pretty sure that quite a few others wouldn't miss it either. There's something about a circus that the most serious-minded lawyer, stuffiest banker or cynical newsman wouldn't dream of skipping.

Maybe the circus has the same magnetic draw as a sports event — the envy of a crowd for those adults who "play" for a living.

They're the Peter Pans we wish we could be at times.

I remember my first circus.

I was only 9, but that show made an indelible mark on me. I wanted to be a trapeze artist. Those graceful, muscular bodies swooping, rolling and connecting in midair sent chills through me.

Unfortunately, I was deathly scared of heights and even today I work in a ground-floor office.

But later you can bet that I'll be sitting on the edge of my seat when they announce the trapeze artists, and following every move with my eyes, forgetting all else for a few minutes.

For a brief moment, I'll leave my computer terminal, pen and notebook back in the first-floor newsroom and soar through the air.

With a net, of course.

The circus fulfills a need, I think, that many of us have to do the unexpected, the daring, the dangerous.

I'm hardly an overly adventurous sort, so don't get me wrong.

I'm the kind of guy who always buckles my seatbelts — even at drive-in movies.

I use the emergency brake when parking — in Midland!

I always know what's under my bed because I look there regularly.

I keep a fire extinguisher in the shower, only use butter knives and I lock the front door between each trip with a grocery bag from the car.

Hardly a death-defying spirit, rest assured.

Well, maybe I'm a little more cautious than the next guy, but chances are he/she doesn't step on many sidewalk cracks.

Let's face it, most of us don't live extremely adventurous lives.

My mother's idea of a wild time is making perfect meringue.

I have a friend who takes turns trying out new delicatessens in town "just for the thrill of it."

And, alas, even I have been known to spend a few Sunday afternoons wandering around Wal-Mart's.

When the most blood-chilling event in your daily life is to NOT stop before the crosswalk, you're definitely circus-audience material.

But you'll never make it as a circus performer.

Take a little test.

D. When you're filling the car up at the corner gas station, do you:

1.) Look around for someone smoking nearby? (0 points)

2.) Stand there oblivious to all and pump away? (1 point)

3.) Light up yourself (2 points)?

4.) Offer lights to others? (3 points)

B. A stranger knocks on the door. Do you:

1.) Stack furniture against the door? (0 points)

2.) Ignore the knock? (1 point)

3.) Open the door and ask him what he wants? (2 points)

4.) Sic your Doberman on him? (3 points)

C. You're awakened at night by a noise. Do you:

1.) Curl up in a ball and twist the covers around your head? (0 points)

2.) Call out — who's there? (1 point)

3.) Get up and investigate? (2 points)

4.) Go over to someone else's house and wake them up with a noise? (3 points)

D. You're walking down the street and a rather rabid and ferocious dog is heading straight toward you. Do you:

1.) Faint on the spot? (0 points)

2.) Gradually, but confidently cross the street to the other side, looking for a large stick? (1 point)

3.) Walk toward the dog, unafraid. (2 points)

4.) Foam at your mouth and bare your teeth at the mutt? (3 points)

So, you think you're circus material, heh?

Add your points and see how you measure up.

0 points — You're a pathetic excuse for a human being and don't deserve to live, much less be in a circus.

1 to 3 points — You may be able to tear tickets at the entrance, but you'll never be a real part of the circus.

4 to 6 points — Possibly you could be more in the mainstream of the circus, but probably sweeping up after elephants will be your biggest adventure.

7 to 9 points — Circus material. You could do just about anything in the daredevil world if you set your mind to it.

10 to 12 points — You're an animal and should locked away for the safety of yourself and others.

Among the resources at the library are the Swim's Index — a listing of articles found in several genealogical publications, including the William and Mary Quarterly and Virginia Genealogists — and a 30-volume set of The War of the Rebellion.

Still another source at the library is a book that lists every major newspaper in the country.

"One of the best sources are newspapers," said Williams.

THE MIDLAND library also exchanges material with other libraries around the country, including those in New York and the Library of Congress.

Perhaps the most important element in researching, however, remains the company of others who are searching for lost ancestors.

"The whole point in joining the Genealogical Society is so you can talk with others who have come up against similar problems and solved them," said Williams.

The group, which meets monthly and publishes a newsletter, regularly features guest speakers.

"We try to have a program that will be beneficial to everyone," said Ms. Friday. "The last speaker was an authority on Southern families who fled to Brazil after the Civil War."

The organization, which holds periodic seminars and workshops, requires a $12 membership fee ($15 for a couple) and also produces a publication found in the library called "The Thorny Trail," which gives general advice, and lists data from cemeteries and courthouse records.

The society provides a place for researchers to band together in acquiring information, Williams indicated.

"It's the search for our ancestry," he said. "We were all looking individually and we figured together we could do better."

ECISD

Arnett, formerly general counsel for the Texas Education Agency, now in private practice in Austin and retained by the Association of Texas Professional Educators to represent members, said he understood the ECISD board's reluctance to "go behind" evaluations and explore this often subjective area. He expressed the belief board members were merely following advice from the state school board association.

The problems may be resolved, he said, when statewide evaluation standards being developed by the TEA are put into effect

ECISD board president Sam Gipson opened the special meeting shortly after 7 p.m. Monday saying the board would hear appeals only until 11 p.m., but the meeting did not adjourn until nearly 11:30 p.m. when the last appeal was heard.

Gipson observed that the board would uphold denial of career ladder placements unless it was shown such denials were "arbitrary or capricious."

The first appeal reviewed was that of Patricia Rogers, who complained comments were added to her evaluation after she had signed it and that the evaluation was invalid because the complete procedure had not been followed.

ECISD personnel director Gordon Madison, a member of the career ladder placement committee, said the committee believed proper procedures had been followed, that Ms. Rogers was denied career ladder advancement because her evaluation gave her only 27.16 points, rather than the 30.5 required.

Board member Jim Nelson, an attorney, said there appeared to be no evidence the committee acted in an arbitrary or capricious manner, though he admitted the evaluation was not done very well. However, he did not believe the board should overturn the evaluation. Nelson, questioning how evaluations can be made using inadequate information, said he found it very frustrating. Board member Mickey Jones, also an attorney, concurred.

Board member Vickie Gomez moved to have Ms. Rogers' 1981-82 evaluation not considered drew no second. Gipson expressed the belief that if the board opened up the question of going behind evaluations it could open the questions for many years back.

On a motion from board member John Quisenberry, board members voted to deny Ms. Rogers' appeal, with board members Bob Clark and Ms. Gomez opposing the action.

The next appeal for evaluation review came from Catherine Voncile Strait, a 4th grade Austin teacher, who stated she represented some 20 Austin teachers. She stated she had a masters degree plus 39 additional hours of schooling and 14 years of success in ECISD, during which she had always had outstanding evaluations until recently.

JUNE 19, during the regular ECISD board meeting, Ms. Strait, in attempting to explain the inequity of evaluations, said the Austin evaluator was once asked during a faculty meeting what teachers had to do to achieve an excellent evaluation that would allow them to advance on the career ladder.

She quoted the evaluator as replying the teachers should "learn to walk on water."

Ms. Strait relinquished the rest of her time before the board to Alma Marshall, a representative of the Texas State Teachers Association.

Ms. Marshall stated that the Career Ladder Committee's decision on placements were arbitrary and capricious because the evaluations were arbitrary and capricious and made in bad faith. She indicated that if the ECISD board failed to resolve the problems the matter would be taken to the TEA commissioner and from there to the courts if necessary.

Board members denied Ms. Strait's appeal.

William Davis, a teacher at Crockett, charged the school district may be in violation of federal and state law regarding his applications for other positions. Every time he has applied for another position, he said, his evaluation has gone down. He also stated that six minority teachers at Crockett have been denied career ladder advancement.

Personnel director Madison noted that the Career Ladder Committee merely utilized scores provided to determine career ladder placements, that the committee did not attempt to determine minority impact. It was later pointed out that evaluation scores turned over to Career Ladder Committee members were identified only by Social Security numbers.

Midland oilmen to host rally for Loeffler Thursday

From Staff Reports

Midland oilmen Clayton W. Williams Jr. and Deane Stoltz will be hosting a rally for U.S. Congressman Tom Loeffler from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. Thursday in the atrium of ClayDesta National Bank Building.

The public is invited to the rally.

Loeffler represents Midland in his 21st Congressional District and has been a congressman since 1978. A Republican, he is considering entering the gubernatorial race in 1986 against Democratic incumbent Mark White. However, Loeffler has said he won't announce a decision until the end of the summer.

Loeffler is a member of the House Budget and Appropriations committees and serves as chief deputy whip. Last summer he served as a delegate to the Republican National Convention and at that point talked of staying in the House. But in April he decided to check out his chances in the gubernatorial race after several Texans suggested he enter the race

Kent Hance, a former Democratic congressman who represented Midland from 1978 until redistricting in 1980, also has announced he is considering the gubernatorial race. Hance switched to the Republican Party in May.

Ector County Commissioners OK plan to move library

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners Monday tentatively approved a plan to move the county law library from its present basement location back to the third floor of the courthouse.

The only problem, according to County Judge Jan Fisher, is where the funds to cover the estimated $6,000 cost of the move will come from.

Attorney Kathleen M. McCulloch, a member of the Ector County Bar Association Library Committee, suggested bar association members would be asked to help with the actual move and that perhaps jail trustees, who were used to move the library initially, could be used again, which would help reduce the cost.

Plans call for the library, with certain modifications, to occupy virtually the same third floor location it was in before.

Commissioner Bryan Henderson questioned why it couldn't remain in the basement. District Judge Tryon Lewis, who was not on the 161st District Court bench at the time the library was moved, said the library in its present location and state of repair is virtually useless, not only because of the location, but because there are no tables for attorneys to do research work and a number of books are simply stacked on the floor for lack of room.

District Attorney Eric Augesen Monday told Commissioners Court members attorneys in his office use the law library extensively, especially in writing appeals and so it is important the facility be on the third floor, accessible to his office as well as the district courts.

The space where the library will be relocated is presently occupied by a portion of the district attorney's office and the jury lounge. Additional space will be gained by extending the library into an area presently occupied by 70th District Judge Gene Ater's court reporter. A portion of the third floor area will be divided and utilized for office space for the court coordinator.

Highway department to take bids

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation will accept bids until 9 a.m. July 9 on an estimated $38,331 worth of fence work along a portion of Interstate 20 in Midland county.

The project, which involves work at I-20 and Cotton Flat Road in Midland and at I-20 and Lamesa Road in the city, is expected to take 20 working days to complete, according to the Highway Department.

Project engineer is Lynn Passmore of Midland.

YCT gives Craddick high marks for conservatism

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, received the highest rating of Midland area lawmakers by the Young Conservatives of Texas, which released its ranking of the members of the 69th Legislature on Monday.

YCT, a 1,250-member statewide group composed of high school and college students, gave Craddick a score of 97 based on a 100-point scale. Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, received a score of 81 from the group.

YCT spokesman Richard Munisteri said at a Capitol new conference Monday that a rating in the 60s or above indicated the legislator voted in a conservative manner.

Munisteri said YCT's goals for the session included repeal of the Blue Law, increases in tuition for state colleges and universities, passage of a crime package, reform of trucking regulation and abolishment of the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

"Although much remains to be improved in future Legislatures," said Munisteri, "YCT's ratings for this session reveal that conservatives are making sizable gains towards being more numerous, more influential and better organized — at least in the House."

Rep. Kelly Godwin, R-Odessa, received a ranking of 88 per cent from YCT.

At new location, Harris Acoustics offers experience and quality

Harris Acoustics is now in a beautiful new facility at 2011 Trade Drive. President J.E. "Slim" Mason announces that since January they have added a dry wall division. Bill Shonkwiler is the head of this new division and chief estimator.

Harris Acoustics has been a sub-contractor for commercial acoustical ceiling and floor covering for 18 years in Midland. Slim feels that the reason for their success is quality materials and workmanship combined with a thorough knowledge of the construction industry.

With that experience, Harris Acoustics has added a new dimension to their company. They are a supply warehouse and sell a complete line of sheetrock, metal studs, and acoustical ceiling materials, along with all the necessary accessories. All of their materials are available to contractors and do-it-yourselfers.

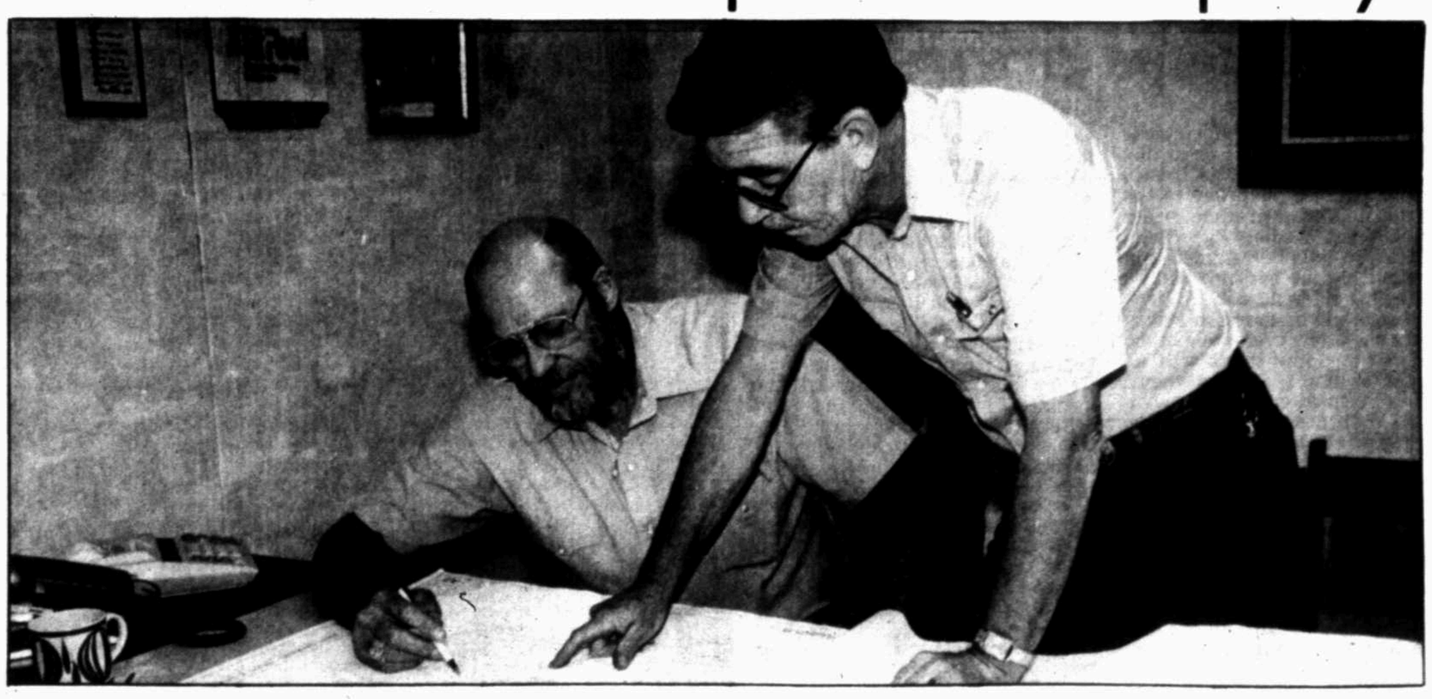

Harris Acoustics and Supply is proud of the fact that they have the largest inventory in the Permian Basin. This is a major benefit to the contractor, because it eliminates time lost on the job waiting for materials to arrive.

Whether you purchase supplies for commercial or residential use, quality products are essential. As a newly named distributor for Gold Bond Building Products, Harris Acoustics and Supply carries a wide range of sheetrock and metal studs in various sizes. Harris Acoustics also carries installation accessories such as adhesives and screws. They have a complete selection of ceiling tile such as Armstrong, Owens Corning, and Conwed. They carry a wide range of ceiling grid in a number of finishes, plus fiberglass insulation for both ceilings and walls.

In additin to their drywall and ceiling materials, they also carry vinyl base and commercial vinyl floor covering. Harris Acoustics and Supply is the dealer for Azrock and Armstrong floor coverings.

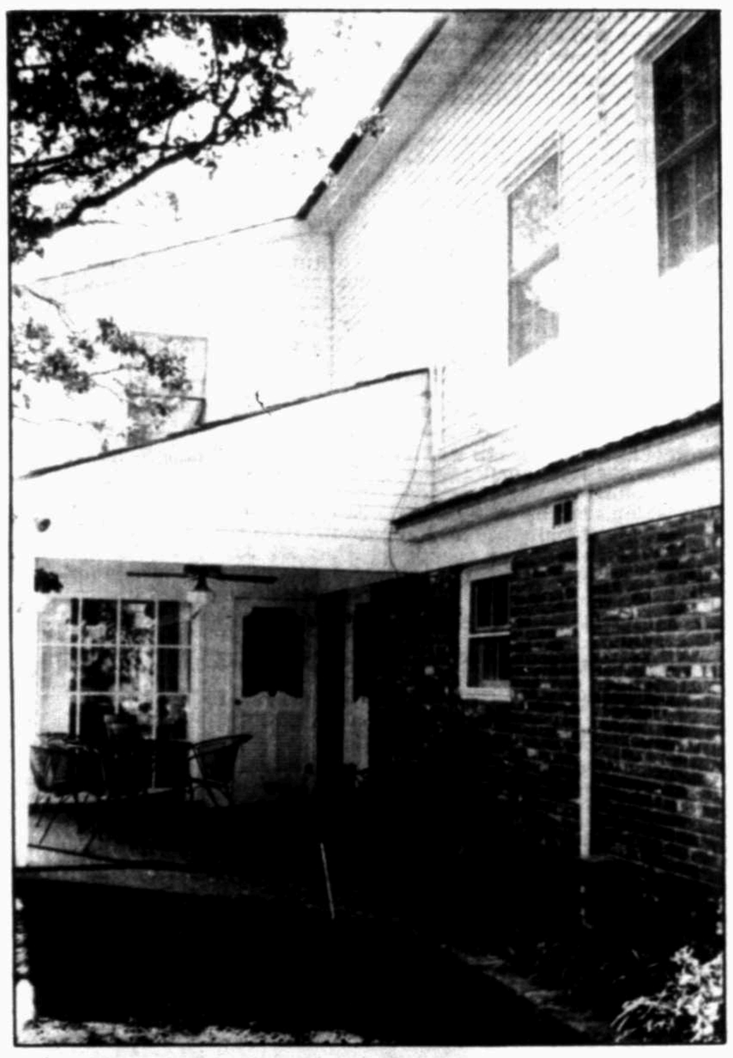

Just as you would expect, the prices at Harris Acoustics and Supply are very competitive. Truckload pricing is available upon request.

If you would like more information call Slim Mason, Manager David Stickney, or Bill Shonwiler at 699-7018 or stop by their new facility at 2011 Trade Drive.

Slim Mason and Bill Shonkwiler, head of Harris' Dry Wall Division, review some plans for a recent project. These experts are ready to help you with your building material needs. Bill's 25 years of construction and dry wall experience can benefit you when you select your materials at Harris Acoustics' warehouse.

Lewellen Construction urges homeowners to investigate those unbelievable siding deals before signing a contract

A home is probably one of the most important investments that most Americans will ever make. That's why many homeowners anxiously invest in home improvements, such as maintenance-free siding. Lewellen Construction, a LOCAL siding and home improvement firm, warns Midlanders that it is important to check out those siding deals that sound too good to be true.

Often a dishonest siding company will lure homeowners into buying siding "for next to nothing." An ad may arrive in the mail or a salesman may call your home suggesting that your home may be selected as a "model home." The offer may be for a discount or for commissions on resulting sales. Unfortunately, the commissions rarely materialize and any discount that is given is based on an already inflated price.

Some companies "bait" homeowners with incredibly low priced siding in advertisements. When the salesman arrives, however, the customer is told that the advertised product is of inferior quality. The salesman then suggests a much more expensive product, which he says he will offer at a tremendous discount. Once again the price has been excessively inflated.

Another tactic for some siding companies is to offer factory seconds. Although the consumer is led to believe that a warranty applies, when service is needed the customer finds out that there is no warranty. And where is that out-of-town company? Out of business? Too busy to help?

Bill Lewellen, owner of Lewellen Construction, gives a local example of these unfair trade practices. Recently, a homeowner called Bill and asked for a quote. Bill checked the job out and quoted his price at $2500 (no discounts or special purchases-just regular price). The homeowner then told Bill that a high pressure out-of-town company had given an estimate on the very same job. The company's estimate was $6500-and that was at a tremendous discount according to the salesman. Bill says that these unethical companies consistently tend to over price jobs by approximately $5,000 even after their "tremendous" discounts of up to 50 percent.

To avoid being cheated out of your hard earned dollars be sure to investigate any company that offers you a bargain that is just too good to be true. Also, get a bid on a name brand product from a reputable local contractor, such as Lewellen Construction. Before you sign a contract, take time to think about it, ask about a warranty both on workmanship and materials, and read the contract carefully. Then, be sure to thoroughly inspect the work before you sign a completion release.

Maintenance-free siding IS a tremendous investment IF you have the right firm do the job. Why not let Lewellen Construction and Home Improvement Center give you a bid? Bill and Joan Lewellen have their home and business in Midland. They don't make unbelievable claims or use high pressure sales tactics, they just do a quality job at a fair price. They've done work for hundreds of people in the Midland area and will gladly give you a number of references. Because they are a local firm you can count on them for service for years to come.

For a FAIR price and more information on steel siding, storm windows/doors, replacement windows/doors, patio/carport covers, room enclosures, soffit and fascia call 686-8007 or go by Lewellen's showroom at 1811 W. Industrial.

Adventure Travel handles group travel plans, makes trip care-free

Adventure Travel, located at 16 Oak Ridge Square, is ready to plan trips for groups, just about anywhere.

Owner Patsy Welmaker points out that group travel has a number of advantages. It offers travelers an opportunity for companionship, guides, and generally better prices. Best of all, the details like transportation arrangements, lodging reservations, tipping, tickets and baggage are handled by someone else. Travelers are free to enjoy the trip!

Ms. Welmaker was recently the tour escourt for a Midland group which toured the Holy Land and Rome. The group first saw the sites of ancient and modern Rome- Capitoline Hill, the Roman Forum, the Colosseum, The Basiclica of St. Paul, and other famous sites. (April 20-22, 1985)

Next, (April 23-24) they began their travel through the Holy Land. A drive to Mount of Olives and the place of Ascension provided a most wonderful view of Jerusalem. The group of 21 got to visit the Pater Noster Church and see the Palm Sunday road on wbich Jesus made His triumphal entry into Jerusalem. A visit to Gethsemane to the Garden where Jesus was betrayed was deeply meaningful to the travelers. So many places that the travelers had known only as names from the Bible became a personal reality as they saw them-the Kidron Valley, the Spring of Gihon with Hezekiah's tunnel, the Pool of Siloam, Mt. Ophel, Valley of Gehenna, the location of the palace of the High Priest Caiaphas, Bethlehem, the plains of Boaz, the Garden Tomb.

Ms. Welmaker expressed her experience this way, "Although I had been taught that Christ was a human being, now he had become on (to me)."

A tour of Jerusalem (April 25) began with a drive to Mt. Zion for a visit of the tradiontal Tomb of King David, the Room of the Last Supper and the Church of Dormition. They passed the Knesset and saw the model of ancient Jerusalem before going on to Ein Karem, home of Elizabeth and birthplace of John the Baptist. The Dead Sea Scrolls were viewed and a visit was made to the Wailing Wall. Entering the Temple Area, the Midland group saw the Al-Aksa Mosque and the Dome of the Rock built over the traditional rock of Abraham's sacrifice. The Golden Gate, the Church of St. Anne, and the Pool of Bethesda were all viewed before the travelers left the Old City through St. Stephen's Gate.

April 26 the Midland group toured Bethany, Jericho, Qumran, and Masada with their Christian guide, Emilio. As they saw the Tomb of Lazarus, Elisha's Spring, the Mount of Temptation, Mt. Nebo, and Masada, the travelers recalled events they had studied at church.

A drive north, past Nob, Gibeah and Ramah on to Beeroth, through the plain of Lebonnah and the plains of Shechem started April 27 off just right. By the end of the day the travelers had visited Jacob's Well in Shechem, the first capital of the Northern Kingdom, the Valley of Jezreel, the Site of the Transfiguration, an ancient synagogue, and the scene of the Miracle of the Loaves and Fishes.

A day of leisure was enjoyed then the travelers were ready to see Nazareth, one of Solomon's chariot cities, Mt. Carmel, and Caesarea on April 29.

By May 1 the group was sightseeing in Corinth. Two more days of sightseeing and leisure were enjoyed before the travelers returned home on May 4.

Adventure Travel experts know that group travel like this results in wonderful memories for years to come. Ms. Welmaker says a similar trip is being planned for April, 1986, yet other places can also be enjoyed when traveling in a group. Even regularly scheduled conferences and conventions can be more carefree when Adventure Travel makes the group arrangements in advance.

At least six months in advance, call Adventure Travel at 683-4211 and let them make your next trip all that it should be.

Patsy Welmaker, owner of Adventure Travel, was recently the tour escourt for a group of 21 Midlanders who toured the Holy Land and Rome. Call Adventure Travel at 683-4211 to find out how group travel can make traveling more fun, meaningful, and care-free.

Stovall's Dive Shop and Scuba School, a PADI Five Star Training Facility, sells fun! And safety is the primary object in their training, says Master Diver Instructor Richard Stovall.

Stovall's Dive Shop, located at 1308 S. Midkiff, is billed as the finest training school between the Gulf Coast and the Pacific Coast. That kind of reputation is not easy to come by, yet Stovall's continues to do everything it takes to stay right at the top of the list.

Stovall's Dive Shop and Scuba School has been awarded the designation as a PADI 5 Star Training Facility, because they meet PADI's strict qualifications.

1) Stovall's offers a pure air program. This fine dive shop is the only one in the area that has its air certified by the state once every three months.

2) Stovall's Scuba school has demonstrated a commitment to provide the finest diving instruction available anywhere. Richard Stovall is the only master diving instructor in West Texas. The school also has two master diver trainers, Bob and Sara Porter. These PADI instructors are ready to provide scuba instruction on all levels, in ten different specialties, any time of year.

Classes begin daily with courses being offered on a individual basis. The self pace classroom portion is offered at the store Monday-Friday 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Audio visual programs have really brought excitement to the classroom sessions. Diving is a sport and is to be enjoyed, even during the training period.

Stovall's Scuba School also has its own training pool built to size and depth for the purpose of teaching scuba.

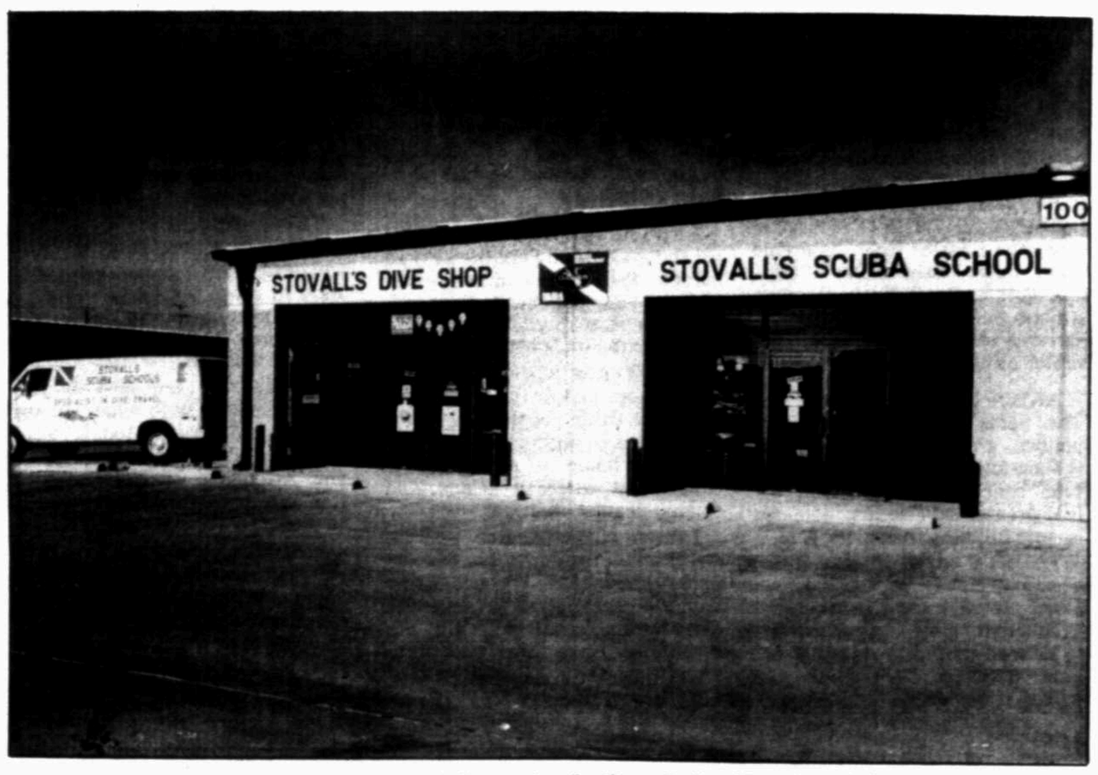

3) Stovall's Dive Shop continues to provide divers with the equipment, training and SERVICE that they need to really enjoy the sport. Richard Stovall says they carry top of the line gear by Dacor, Toshiba, Imperial, Akalite, and more. They also have repair parts for everything that they sell.

4) Stovall's strives to serve the community by publishing newsletters which promote diving education and activities, by supporting Diving Ventures International, and by sponsoring at least one public diving event each year.

5) Stovall's abides by the PADI Training Facility Code of Ethics, thus providing customers with well-maintained, state-of-the-art rental and instructional equipment and ensuring their staff members' ability to provide honest, in-depth advice on the equipment they sell.

People from surrounding cities come to this family-oriented, Five Star Training Facility for training and equipment. Perhaps, that is because divers trained at Stovall's are eligible for the PADI Gold Card. Or, it could be because Stovall's arranges fun-filled scuba trips for groups of 1-50.

Call Stovall's now at 687-4494 and find out about their introductory course or one of their specialty courses (such as deep dive, hunter, rescue, night diving). Then you'll be ready for one of their upcoming dive trips. The shop, located in the Midkiff Business Center, is open 9 a.m. -7 p.m. Monday-Friday and 9 a.m. -4 p.m. on Saturday for your convenience.

Stovall's Dive Shop and Scuba School, located at 1308 S. Midkiff, is a PADI Five Star Training Facility. Call 687-4494 to find out about their exciting, safe scuba instruction.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, June 26, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Be cautious when making financial choices. Money could slip through your fingers if you are not careful. Be alert to undercurrents when meeting competitor or higher-up head-to-head. Someone could have a hidden agenda you know nothing about. Take more interest in a child's education or a parent's health. You may be called upon to make a major family decision. Romance soars to new heights. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Virginia Governor Charles Robb, Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, author Pearl Buck, Olympic athlete-golfer Babe Didrikson Zaharias, Peter Lorre, baseball inventor Abner Doubleday.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The fields of entertainment and politics are glamorous but also require long hours. Give work your total concentration and you will find greater satisfaction. Romance is more fulfilling than in the past.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A slow but steady pace makes you easier to live and work with. Productivity rises. Curb a tendency to take on too many things at one time. Romance lives up to your wildest expectations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Offbeat, original ideas can be successfully introduced at work. You find a co-worker very attractive. Be careful. Mixing business with pleasure could cause problems. Look elsewhere for romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An excellent day to buy or sell property. Fine profits are featured. A new partner or group stimulates your creativity. Welcome a chance to display your special talents at a social gathering.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Creativity and good timing are the keys to success. Profits grow larger -- and so does your paycheck. Your enthusiasm is so high that you are able to do the work of two people!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Personal effort makes the big difference now. Other people show a new willingness to cooperate. Your position at home is strengthened. Give credit where it is due, and communication improves.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be direct when introducing a revolutionary, new idea. You could find yourself entangled in someone else's problems if you are not careful. A new romance gets off to an exciting start.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be moderate in everything you do now. A wild lifestyle will turn off those people you most want to impress. Develop a better plan for attaining your goals. Romance looks promising.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are able to combine business with pleasure today. Someone's reaction to loved one plays a major role in a decision. An intelligent compromise helps romance along. Be sensitive to partner's concerns.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Act confident, not superior. You will need your co-workers' cooperation to reach your goals. A good day to negotiate agreements and sign contracts. Be kind to someone who needs solace.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be very careful with what you say or put into writing today. Your words could come back to haunt you. Attending a party is a must. Romance beckons across a crowded room.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If you fail to convince someone of the value of a business idea, try other avenues. Your high standards could lead you to be overly critical. Offer more encouragement and support.

ONE BID TOO MANY

Neither vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ A J ♡ 8 6 3 ◇ A K 2 ♣ A J 10 6 4
WEST ♠ 6 4 3 ♡ A Q 10 9 5 2 ◇ J 8 3 ♣ Q		EAST ♠ 8 2 ♡ K J 7 4 ◇ Q 10 9 7 6 5 4 ♣ Void
	SOUTH ♠ K Q 10 9 7 5 ♡ Void ◇ Void ♣ K 9 8 7 5 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	1 ♡	2 ♡	4 ♠
4 ♠	5 ♡	7 ♠	7 ◇
7 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ?

There is such a thing as bidding too much. Even experts are prone to be too talkative. As an example, this hand is from the final rounds of the Dutch team championship.

No one knows how to bid freak hands—if someone tells you otherwise, be skeptical. Many experts would pass with the South cards and try to get in a two-suited bid later in the auction should the opponents open the bidding. Be that as it may, no one can blame North for liking his hand once his partner opened his long suit. He cue-bid the enemy suit after West's overcall, and East took advantage at his turn to make a lead-directing jump to four clubs.

South competed to the four-level in an effort to complete the description of his hand and North took a shot at a grand slam in clubs. All would have been well had East chosen to take a sacrifice bid of seven hearts, for when the opponents now bid seven spades, West should have had no difficulty in finding the club lead to defeat the grand slam. Unfortunately for West, East tried to offer his partner a choice of sacrifices by bidding seven diamonds. When the opponents went on to seven spades, East doubled.

Think of West's predicament. He was pretty sure that his side could cash a fast trick, either with an ace or via a ruff. But in which suit did his partner have the trick? Had East not bid seven diamonds, there would have been no problem. But now West agonized over which minor suit to lead.

When you make life difficult for partner, odds are that he will go wrong. West decided that his partner was showing the ace of diamonds, led a diamond and that was that. Declarer won the king in dummy, drew trumps in three rounds and claimed his grand slam.

Disney characters' video will teach children to avoid strangers

NEW YORK (AP) — Winnie the Pooh and other animated characters use song, dance and real-life reenactments on a new home video to teach children how to avoid dangerous strangers.

The videotape, titled "Too Smart for Strangers" and aimed at children aged 3 to 10, was put into distribution Monday by Walt Disney Home Video.

The cartoon characters teach children to be suspicious of all strangers and to keep an arm's length away from them, to avoid unsafe and lonely places, and to say "no" if touched in a way that feels wrong and then tell a parent.

In animation and live-action sequences, children are taught a three-fold strategy toward strangers who approach them on the street or call at the door when no one else is home: "Say no, run away, tell somebody."

In one scene, a girl is home alone when someone calls at the door and asks if her mother is there. The girl tells the stranger her mother is busy and to come another time, then calls a neighbor to report the stranger's appearance.

"Adults prey on children. They do these horrible things to children," said John Walsh, father of Adam Walsh, a 6-year-old who was abducted and slain in Florida in 1981.

NEW YORK (AP) — Joie Gallo, 23, actress daughter of slain underworld figure Joseph "Crazy Joe" Gallo, has been named co-host of a syndicated rock video show called "TV 2000."

Gallo

Miss Gallo, who attended New York University School of the Arts, had a small role in Woody Allen's movie "Broadway Danny Rose" and also performed in the off-Broadway musical "Surf City."

She was 12 when her father was shot to death in New York in April 1972 in factional warfare with the Colombo crime family.

"I don't hide that I am his daughter," she said recently. "But I want to be myself and be known for what I do.

"Whatever he did, he paid for with his life."

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Bill Cosby's top-rated "The Cosby Show" is the best comedy of the season and Patty Duke's "Hail to the Chief" is the most offensive new series, according to the editors of TV Guide magazine.

Meanwile, in the annual "The Best and Worst We Saw," in the June 29 issue, the editors dubbed "Cagney and Lacey" the most believable series and its stars, Sharon Gless and Tyne Daly "easily the Best Actresses around."

TV Guide listed "Miami Vice" as the best-looking new series and said James Garner gave the best male performance of the network TV-movie season in "Heartsounds."

"'Hail to the Chief'...had something against everyone — Jews, blacks, gays, women, even WASPs — and we winced as often as we laughed," it said.

The best prime-time soap opera was "Knot's Landing," the editors said, with "the grimmest plots but the strongest cast, headed by the incomparable Joan Van Ark."

• • •

ATLANTA (AP) — Former state Labor Commissioner Sam Caldwell turned songwriter while serving a 30-month sentence for fraud at the federal penitentiary here and he hopes Johnny Cash hears about it.

Caldwell says in a letter to a friend that he thinks Cash — who had a hit with "Folsom Prison Blues" — "will probably go crazy" over a song he wrote about life in the big house called "Steel-Toed Shoes."

A verse from Caldwell's song:

"Prison life will keep you on your toes,

"And that's one thing that every inmate knows.

"Some rules are loud and spoken, others may be broken,

"But the warden says to wear those steel-toed shoes."

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — The 1986 William Allen White Foundation award for journalistic merit will be given to veteran White House reporter Helen Thomas, University of Kansas officials have announced.

The award goes annually to a journalist who mirrors the late Emporia Gazette editor in "service to profession and country," said foundation president Robert B. Wellington, editor and publisher of the Ottawa (Kan.) Herald.

Miss Thomas, White House bureau chief for United Press International, will receive her award and give the annual William Allen White Day address on Feb. 10, 1986.

GENEVA, Svitzerland (AP) — Jan Tumlir, chief economist at the United Nations secretariat of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, died Saturday of heart failure. He was 58.

Tumlir was an assistant economics professor at Yale University from 1960-64. He joined the Tariffs and Trade secretariat in 1964 as an economic counselor. Tumlir retired in February as the director of economic research and analysis for the Tariffs and Trade office — known as GATT — a post he had held since 1967.

LONDON (AP) — Keith Castle, Britain's longest surviving heart-transplant patient, has died, his family announced. He was 58.

The cause of Castle's death at his London home Monday night was not immediately known, but he had undergone an artery bypass operation to free the blood flow to his leg earlier this year. Castle received the heart of a 21-year-old in August 3979 at Papworth Hospital near Cambridge and campaigned to raise funds for heart research.

Qualified Printers announces the addition of another Heidelberg press. David willis operates the new Heidelbert "T" offset press which is designed to handle smaller printing jobs. This is the third press Qualified has added since October.

Qualified Printers adds third new press since October

Adding to its pressroom capability again, Qualified Printers announces the addition of another Heidelberg press to go along with its new two-color Heidelberg GTO installed in November, 1984.

The smaller "T" offset is designed for the smaller printing jobs. It is a revolutionary design for small offset presses. The German built press combines sophisticated Heidelberg precision mechanics with state-of-the-art electronics. From start to finish of the preset run, the individual steps of the printing process are program-controlled by a microprocessor. Its program capability plus its Heidelberg engineering and construction guarantee this press will be a real producer for many years to come.

The two new Heidelberg presses and the new two-color Ryobi have all been added since October as Qualified Printers has continued its commitment to offer the very finest in quality and service at reasonable prices.

The 34 employees of Qualified Printers take pride in their work and the reputation they have built. See these professionals at 2801 N. Big Spring Street or call 683-4676. They will be gald to help you with all your printing needs.

Temporary Resources is local commitment to temporary staffing

Temporary Resources is a local company which proudly serves both local and national companies in Midland and Odessa. This company with local commitment has qualified temporaries who can ease the stress of vacation season.

Owner Patricia de Little says that being locally controlled and totally dedicated to temporary services allows Temporary Resources to offer things that other companies can't give.

Patricia started her career in this field as a temporary for a national company. Later, she became a branch manager for one of the national companies.

Recognizing that Permian Basin businesses could greatly benefit from a local company, Patricia started her own company, Temporary Resources.

Temporary Resources has grown and they now have offices in both Midland and Odessa. Patricia credits the growth to outstanding service which is possible "because decisions are made locally not off in New York, Detroit, or Switzerland." People who understand Midland businesses make the decisions at Temporary Resources.

One important decision that has long been settled at this local office is that temporaries perform better and enjoy their assignments more when they get personal attention. That's why Office Manager Barbara Smith and Associate Manager Fran Hawke dedicate much time to each interview. Finding out whether the applicant is qualified as a word processor, secretary, clerk, receptionist, or marketing temporary is only part of the task. Getting to know the individual's personality is equally important.

Once a temporary starts accepting assignments, the professionals at Temporary Resources still maintain contact with that temporary at least twice a week.

"We don't just send out warm bodies; we send qualified people," says Patricia. That's why Temporary Resources is confident enough to offer a 100 percent guarantee.

Temporary Resources also offers customers two to four hours of free training time. This is a real plus.

Patricia emphasizes that temporary employment is their specialty, not a side line to permanent placement. Companies that depend on a Temporary Resources temporary sometimes want to make that individual a permanent employee. Patricia says, "All that we ask is that they try the temporary out for eight weeks. Then they are free to hire them." No extra fees are charged.

Patricia announces that Temporary Resources is now able to offer a payrolling service at a low, low mark up. This service allows companies to add an employee without having to put that individual on their payroll.

To find out how Temporary Resources can serve your company call Account Representative Tausha Day at 684-0527. Cross training makes it possible for anyone in this office to take orders and dispatch the temporary needed. Temporary Resource customers don't have to worry about office personnel competing for a commission.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Vice President George Bush, on a seven-city European tour, was granted a private audience with Pope John Paul II while in Rome.

Bush, West Germany's Kohl discuss combating terrorism

BONN, West Germany (AP) — U.S. Vice President George Bush, on the second stop of his West European tour, met with Chancellor Helmut Kohl today for talks centered on ways of combatting terrorism.

Armed guards stood on the roofs of nearby buildings and police patrolled the chancellory grounds in a tight show of security as Bush arrived in a limousine.

The Bush visit comes one week after a powerful bomb blast ripped through a busy Frankfurt airport terminal, killing three people and injuring 42 others. Frankfurt police on Tuesday said they still had no firm leads in the case.

Earlier, Bush met with Bavarian Governor Franz Josef Strauss, the chairman of West Gemany's conservative Christian Social Union. The party is an influential part of Kohl's ruling coalition.

Bush arrived in the West German capital late Monday from Rome, on the second day of his seven-nation tour, where he had a private audience with Pope John Paul II. Bush also plans to visit the Netherlands, Brussels, Geneva, Paris and London.

Brazilian air force plane crashes

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A Brazilian air force transport plane slammed into a hillside while attempting a forced landing in southern Brazil, killing all seven people aboard, military officials said.

The Hercules C-130 was on a routine mission between Rio de Janeiro and Santa Maria, about 1,100 miles to the south, when it crashed Monday a mile before reaching the air base, an air force statement said.

The cause of the accident of the U.S.-made four-engine turboprop was not immediately known, the statement said.

Vietnamese urged to get degrees

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam's prime minister has urged youths to ignore fads and spurn the "erroneous concept" that only a university degree can ensure a bright future, the Vietnam News Agency reported today.

The agency, monitored in Bangkok, said Prime Minister Phan Van Dong told a recent meeting of youth:

"Our young people should not be captives of ludicrous fads, should not blindly imitate others."

He also said Vietnam had given little stress to vocational training in its recent history, and "this led to an erroneous concept among the youngsters that the only way to a bright future is to have a university degree.

Koreans reportedly die in storms

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Home Ministry reported today that at least 14 people were killed or missing in heavy rainfalls that lashed southern Korea in the past three days.

Up to 22 inches of rain drenched three southern provinces, causing landslides and flash floods, according to police and news reports.

Nine people, including a family of four, died when a house collapsed in a landslide Monday in South Cholla province, police said.

Gorbachev to visit Ukraine

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev left Moscow for the Ukrainian capital of Kiev today for his second trip to a Soviet city outside the capital in as many months.

In mid-May, Gorbachev spent three days touring factories, an institute and the streets in Leningrad and gave a speech to party workers that was later broadcast and published in an apparent effort to underline his drive for more discipline and some economic reform.

The brief report by the official news agency Tass on Gorbachev's departure for Kiev said only that he was seen off in Moscow by fellow Politburo members. It gave no details of his itinerary.

Chinese party gets 1 million new members

PEKING (AP) — One million young people joined the Chinese Communist Party last year in response to a call to enlist more youthful members, the official Xinhua news agency said today.

All of them were younger than 35 and included 600,000 members of the Communist Youth League under the age of 28, Xinhua said.

That accounted for a 99.5 percent increase among Communist Youth League members, the report said.

China has pledged to retire aging party and government officials in order to promote younger, better-educated people to responsible posts.

Press reports frequently describe how universities, factories and other organizations have recruited young people to join the Chinese Communist Party.
