—By Deskins Wells

No politics and no controversy in this column this week—just children. My grandchildren are coming to town this week end, but the unusual thing is that all four of their great-grandmothers will be in Wellington also. These are: Mrs. Temple Atkins of Cottonwood Falls, Kansas; Mrs. T. W. McDowell of Dodson, and Mrs. S. K. Parsons and Mrs. Lucy B. Wells of Wellington. They also have two great-grandfathers living, but only one will be here.

Dodson Church Slates Revival August 14-21

South Baptist Church in Dodson will begin its revival Sunday, August 14, and continue through Sunday, August 21, the Rev. Harold Hulsey, pastor, has announced.

The Rev. A. W. Patty, of Fort Worth and Ringgold, Ga., will be the evangelist. Joe Lennon, song director of the church, will be in charge of the music. Glenn Ray Hunt will assist. Both are members of the Pride of Dodson quartet.

Rev. Patty is a native Georgian and a third year student at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth. He is a graduate of Mercer University, Macon, Ga., and has held pastorates in both Oklahoma and Georgia.

Services will be at 8:00 p.m. "We invite our fellow Christians of all faiths to come and worship with us during this week," Rev. Hulsey said.

CLASS OF 1910 AND TEACHER

Two of the seven members of Wellington's first graduating class of 1910 were present for the Ex-Student Reunion Friday and Saturday, August 5 and 6. They were Harry Couch of Childress, left, and Mrs. Lanora Stall Greenhaw of Memphis, who was crowned Ex-Student Queen. With them, at right, is R. F. Curry, a teacher in the Wellington system when this class graduated, and later superintendent of schools.

Band Director Named

The Wellington school board, meeting Monday night, August 8, elected three teachers, approved driver education for high school, set the school tax rate and awarded the milk contract for the school lunch room.

R. L. Harper of Weatherford was elected high school principal to succeed Mack Bush, who resigned to become Hedley superintendent, Supt. Bennett Goodloe announced following the meeting.

Tubal Cain of Dalhart was named the new band director, replacing Bill Waits who resigned to accept a similar place with the Canadian school. Martha Simons was elected to teach in Booker T. Washington school.

With 21 years teaching and administrative experience, Mr. Harper was superintendent of the Peaster School, 8 miles north of Weatherford. Before that he was school counselor at White Settlement 3 years and high school principal at Alcedo 10 years.

He is married and has two children, a son who will be a third grader and a daughter in the eighth grade.

Opening date of the Wellington schools will be Labor Day, Monday, September 5, Supt. Bennett Goodloe announced. Enrollment for high school will be September 1 and 2, and a general faculty meeting is scheduled for September 3.

Booker T. Washington school starts Monday, August 15, and classwork will continue until cotton is ready to harvest.

Harper received the bachelor of science degree from Texas Wesleyan College and the masters degree from Texas Christian University, Fort Worth. The family is active in the Baptist Church.

Cain has taught band three years in Dalhart. He has the bachelor of arts degree from West Texas State College and will receive his masters degree from that school this month.

He is married and has four children. Cain is a member of the Presbyterian Church and a Mason. Lubbock is his home town.

Mrs. Simon, who will teach third and fourth grades in Washington school, is the daughter-in-law of Mrs. Henry Simon of Samnorwood. She comes here from Gilmer and

City State Bank Raises Surplus to $75,000

Directors of the City State Bank, in a meeting Tuesday night, August 2, approved an increase in the bank's surplus account from $50,000 to $75,000.

"It is all being done from the earnings of the bank, and we are all very grateful to our fine and loyal customers who have made those earnings possible," James Doneghy, president of the bank, said.

Officers of the institution explained that this move places the bank in a better position to take care of its customers and their needs.

"The bank in the future, as in the past, will continue to show its appreciation to our customers by continuation of those services and those policies that strengthen their own positions and the community as a whole," it was explained.

The decision to increase the bank's surplus came as that institution observed its 50th anniversary.

Directors are Mr. Doneghy, Zook Thomas, Joe Terry, John Nash and Sandown Smith.

Mrs. J. C. Dean, Church, Lodge Worker, Dies

Mrs. J. C. Dean, whose husband was an early-day Wellington merchant, died at her home at 904 Fort Worth st., Saturday, August 6, at 9:15 p.m., after being in failing health for several months. She was 85 years of age and had lived here 53 years.

Former Teacher Here

Project to Honor Miss Mildred Hulsey

Miss Mildred Hulsey, a former Wellington high school teacher, now of Tulia, has announced her retirement, and former students here will present her with a unique gift recalling the years she spent in this system.

The gift will be a bound book of letters of appreciation, to be presented as a surprise, and to which all former Wellington students are invited to contribute.

Supt. and Mrs. W. V. Swinburn of Tulia, themselves former county teachers, outlined the plan while visiting here Friday, August 5.

Since this is to be a bound edition, the following specifications for the written letter should be observed: type or write with ink on good quality paper or your own letterhead on 8½x11 inch paper; leave 1½ inches left hand margin for binding, and one inch margin on all other sides. Write only on one side of the page. Mail in a long envelope by September 1, which is the deadline for binding.

Funny anecdotes or incidents recalled will add sparkle to the letters. Indicate the year of

Float Entries for Fair Parade Urged

All county business houses should begin planning now to have a float or another entry of some type in the big parade that opens the Collingsworth County Free Fair Friday, September 2, Dr. Chas. B. Jones, superintendent, declared this week.

Austin O'Neil is parade chairman and he will name as many to help him as necessary.

Plans are to make this the biggest parade in recent years for the county, Dr. Jones said. "Every business house, every office, can have an entry, and it's not too early to begin work," Dr. Jones said.

The parade is scheduled for Friday morning as the opening event of the fair, and the hour it begins will be announced.

The drive to raise money for the premiums is under way, and a complete report will be given next week, the chairman said.

In addition to the fair itself, there will be a series of other events, including an old settlers reunion on Friday; barbecue beginning at 11:20 a.m. Friday; the Quarter Horse Show at 1:30 Friday; and the rodeo at 8 p.m.

Scheduled for Saturday will be a terrapin race at 1:30 p.m. another rodeo performance at 8; and a square dance on the court house square.

All Fair events will be in the community building and American Legion Hall, with the livestock events at the new show barn and the old settlers reunion at the VFW building.

Safety Council Helps

Driver Education Added in School

Driver education for Wellington high school students was approved by the school board in a meeting Monday night, August 8, under a plan worked out by the board and the Wellington Safety Council.

This is the first major project sponsored by the council since its organization earlier this summer.

Henry Sullivan, president of the Safety Council, met with the board Monday.

The school will provide the teacher for the course and set up the driver education course in the curriculum schedule.

The Safety Council will furnish a car with dual controls. This will be either a new car or a good used car.

Plans for the second annual Collingsworth County Quarter Horse Show, to be held Friday, September 2, during the county fair, were announced this week by Horace Small, chairman.

This show is approved by the American Quarter Horse Association.

There will be both performance and halter classes, although horses shown in one do not have to be entered in the other, Small said.

Grand champion and reserve champion mares, stallions and geldings will be picked, receiving handsome trophies.

Blankets and ribbons will go to first and second place winners in all classes and ribbons to the third through sixth place winners.

The committee serving with Small includes Cliff Campbell, John Holton and Frank Anderson. Ed Heller of Dundee will be the judge.

Halter entry fees and performance entry fees are $5.00 each.

The deadline for entries will be 1 p.m. Friday, September 2, and the show will start at 1:30.

Mack Bush New Head of Hedley School

Mack Bush, principal of Wellington high school, has resigned to become superintendent of the Hedley schools. He was selected last week to succeed Mr. Hines, who is going to the Silverton school.

Experienced in administrative work, Bush was also principal of Wellington junior high five years and prior to that he was principal of an elementary school in Childress, his home town.

"We hate to see him go, but we don't like to stand in the way of anyone's advancing. We like for them to go as far as they can," Supt. Bennett Goodloe said following the announcement of Mr. Bush's selection by the Hedley board.

An active civic worker, Bush is president of the Wellington Kiwanis Club, and has participated in other town affairs. Both he and Mrs. Bush were active in the Church of the Nazarene. She formerly taught in Wellington elementary school and also teaches music. She is an officer in the Wellington Federated Music Club.

The couple has one small son, Frederick.

A replacement for Bush as high school principal has not been selected, Supt. Goodloe said Saturday.

Russia Backs Down Again When U.S. Speaks Sternly

As has been pointed out by this newspaper on numerous occasions, whenever the United States speaks sternly, aggressive communism back down.

This week's incidents are a case in point, a case comparable with Berlin, Greece, Turkey and Iran.

Soviet statements had said that the Communist nations would give military aid to the Congo if asked. The premier of the Congo had said that he would ask Soviet military intervention if the Belgian troops were not withdrawn at once.

The United States then said that it will take whatever action necessary to keep Soviet military forces out of the Congo.

Russia backed down quickly. So did the Congolese premier. The Soviet delegate to the United Nations withdraw his 72-hour ultimatum to Belgium to get its troops out of the Congo. The Security Council by a unanimous vote called upon Belgium to withdraw its troops as soon as feasible but set no deadline.

Russia will get all the propaganda mileage it can out of the unrest in Central Africa, but has shown once again that when the chips are down—when the United States says keep out—it will draw back from the precipice.

Reds Overplay Their Hand

The United States won a triple victory in the United Nations Security Council Tuesday.

First, the council voted down, 9 to 2, the Soviet resolution calling for condemnation of the United States for alleged "spying" by the RB-47 plane the Reds say they shot down in their territorial waters.

The interesting thing is that the neutralist members of the Security Council as well as American allies made it clear they did not believe the Soviet charges and asked for proof of them.

Then the United States won again when by the same vote the Council approved the American proposal for an impartial international investigation of the incident, and an Italian resolution that Red Cross representatives interview the two American survivors of the plane who are in Russian hands.

On both these resolutions, however, the Russian vote was a veto. They were the 88th and 89th vetoes the Russians have applied in the Security Council.

The Reds pushed their luck too far when they tried to make another U-2 incident out of the RB-47 affair. They obviously cannot prove their claim that the plane violated their air space. They lost face with the neutralist countries, which often have voted with them in the past, when they refused to permit international investigation of the facts and when they turned down a simple humanitarian request that the survivors be visited by Red Cross personnel.

Blueprint of Why We Lose Face

Here are a few related items from the news in recent days.*

Congress empowered President Eisenhower to curtail Cuba's sugar allotments.

Raul Castro, brother of the bearded premier of Cuba, was received in state on visits to Czechoslovakia and Soviet Russia.

The premier, Fidel, unleashed new attacks on the United States using the Soviet line about "imperialism."

The United States foreign aid program extends economic aid to Poland in the form of farm surplus grants.

The Polish Communist government announced it is building an industrial plant for Castro's Red-dominated Cuba.

Is it any wonder that the United States appears so absurdly inept in the embroiled world today? Is it any wonder the Soviet, with apparent ease, keeps us constantly on the defensive? What can we expect but to lose face on all sides when we are governed by bumbling, massive bureaucracy which never knows when its right hand is cutting off its left?

CROSSROADS REPORT

Dear Editor:

I see where both of our great political parties have noticed considerable that is wrong with the country, and they are anxious to treat same with their new cure-all platforms.

My bunk-bored neighbor says he guesses we're lucky to have so many expert country fixers wishing to give us the benefit of their out-of-this-world skill.

Says life may be a little dull, with everybody equalized, jobbed, housed, secured and under-thumbed, but likely the government will arrange to tell us when to enjoy ourselves and how much.

I see where it has been brought to public attention that 15 million U.S. families are now tooled up for cooking in the yard.

My house-broken neighbor says that is just about where we started, and the next fad likely will be sleeping in the trees, or writing letters on rocks.

Says, though, science is making primitiveness somewhat less rugged, and cooking out is not so bad, what with the new sauces which make some of the fatter insects very tasty.

I note that both of our political parties this year have recognized the signs of the times and put ex-Navy men out for President.

My pond-sailor neighbor says this shrewd move shows that the politicians are fast on their feet and don't aim to be caught out of step by new developments, such as our current dam rash.

Says it takes a high degree of hep to realize that putting out a landlubber candidate at this time would invite defeat, on account of losing the motor boat vote.

I see where a college sent out surveyors to ask people how come they were not happy, and mostly they said it was because they didn't have enough money.

My ever-short neighbor says he used to think all he needed for total happiness was a good self-working money mine, but here lately some doubts have cropped up.

Says having all the money are home from their honeymoon spent in Colorado.

A cess pool for the court house is being dug this week.

you could spend would take a lot of the anticipation out of life, and leave a man with not much to look forward to except running for President.

I see where the losers didn't like the results of the Korean election, and they have been burning ballots and roughing up the winners and showing their good sportsmanship in other little mannerisms.

My puppyhood expert neighbor says this comes natural with young democracies, dampened youth movements, and three-year-olds in tantrum.

Says it looks like if the youngsters aim to take over the world, we might as well let them have it, and save the expense of elections, riots, conventions, etc.

I note that some free-lance world coaches figure the highway accident problem would be solved if drivers got tested more often.

But my triple-tested neighbor says if we drove all of the time like we do under the glare of a driving test officer, we would have to start shooting people now and then, just to keep the doctors and undertakers in practice.

Says, anyhow, you can't spot

perilous drivers by testing

same, any better than you can watch a man in church on Sunday morning and tell how he acts on Saturday night.

I Saw... by Virginia Robey

The Ex-Students Reunion was a good time for catching up on what your friends are doing. Mildred Henard Taylor and her husband, Dr. Ed Taylor, came from their Los Angeles home by way of the Navajo country to visit the Valley of Monuments, then up to Mesa Verde National Monument, and all these they found most interesting. They teach in UCLA.

And from the opposite side of the country there was Dr. Mabel Jones Coleman, who teaches in the home economics school of Florida State University, Tallahassee. She and her husband, Dale, also farm at Dumas, and Mabel spends her summers keeping house and with spur-of-the-moment trips to Amarillo for machinery parts.

LuDean Perkins, one of the recent graduates, teaches at Corpus Christi, and will leave in two weeks, as there are two weeks of workshops for teachers there before school starts... and Mary Frances Templeton Walker returned to teaching last year after 15 years given over to her family. She teaches world history in Midland high school.

Dr. Dysart Holcomb of El Paso was here for his first reunion. After a career that already has included research in industries, college teaching, a college presidency, he is now heading the research department of one of the largest industries concerned with this country, El Paso Natural Gas Company.

These are just typical of the dozens of interesting stories at the reunion Friday night and Saturday. Next year come and see for yourself.

Kathy Scott Party Honoree

Mrs. Ocie Scott honored her daughter, Kathy Lynn, with a birthday party on her seventh birthday. The entertainment was held Friday morning, July 22, in Ellison Park.

Personality to New Location

Personality Beauty Shop was moved last week to a new location on the south side of the square, in a modern building occupied several years ago by Ward Clothiers.

"This is a larger building and it will be much nicer and more convenient both for our customers and for us," Mrs. Odelle Fenley, the owner, said, as she invited friends, both old and new, to visit the shop in its new location.

There are four operators, Mrs. Fenley, Mrs. Beatrice McKinney, Mrs. Pauline Uselson, and Edith Jackson.

There are no dinosaurs in Texas, but we do have proof that the prehistoric monsters were here at one time. Just travel 20 miles west of Glen Rose and you can see for yourself.

There you will find fossilized dinosaur tracks along the beautiful Paluxy River. They have a fine specimen on exhibit downtown, too.

You'll enjoy staying in Glen Rose, as it is a well-known vacation and health resort, famous for its mineral water.

NEWS LETTER

from Congressman
WALTER ROGERS

BURNT TOAST

Chit-chat at a Moscow breakfast table:

MRS. K.: Good morning, dear. My, you look grumpy as an old bear this morning.

MR. K.: Now you know very well I'm supposed to look like an old bear—what would all those decadent Western cartoonists do if I looked like Cupid?

MRS. K.: Well, you'll feel better when you get to work. I'm sure there'll be plenty of capitalists needing to be buried.

MR. K.: Maybe so, mama, but I don't know. It isn't easy being a menace day in and day out. It takes a little initiative. Coming up with new ways to be nasty all the time can get pretty tough.

MRS. K.: Oh, you'll think of something. That last plane you shot down was a real stroke of genius.

MR. K.: Yeah, but that's getting to be a pretty old dodge. And those Americans made me look kinda silly at the UN, proving the plane was really over international waters and all that. I guess they caught on after the U-2 business.

MRS. K.: Why don't you stir up a riot someplace? That's always fun, and it cheers you up so.

MR. K.: But I've done THAT already—Japan, South America, Turkey, Korea, San Francisco—and that's getting pretty dull lately. Besides, school starts again pretty soon and you can expect those professors to let the students keep cutting classes forever. Incidentally, what would really cheer me up is a little bacon for breakfast that isn't so raw.

MRS. K.: But you always said it makes you more quarrelsome, dear. After all, you might want to raise a big stink about American bases today. I like that speech Malinovsky made about using rockets against the countries that allowed planes to take off from their territory.

MR. K.: That shook 'em up, okay, but they're beginning to wise up and ignore it. What I need is a really good disappointment to throw at them. I'd break up another talk at Geneva, except they're beginning to expect that now after the disarmament talks walk-out. There's always that Cuban business, but even that has its drawbacks. You never know what that fuzzy revolutionist over there is likely to do next. He's beginning to be such an expert at denouncing the United States that it makes me look bad. If that little pipsqueak thinks he's going to put me in the shade just because he's got more hair, he's got another think coming. Things look pretty bleak all the way around.

MRS. K.: What about all those struggling classes that are being exploited in the underdeveloped countries you've been shining up to lately?

MR. K.: I've been working on that. Did you see that attack I had Pravda make against the United Nations in the Congo—the one that accused the United States of being behind the whole thing?

MRS. K.: Yes, but wasn't that kind of far-fetched? After all, the troops were all Africans.

MR. K.: I guess so, but it looked good at home here. Got to keep the folks guessing, you know.

MRS. K.: Yes, but you know what Lenin said: "You can fool all of the people some of the time, some of the people all of the time, and send the rest to Siberia."

MR. K.: You sound like a Stalinist. After all, this African situation offers a great opportunity not just at home. Chaos and confusion are always wonderful for us as long as it's somewhere else. Those people down there are pretty inexperienced, too, so it's not a total loss. The trouble is I don't know whether to be palsywally or a stinker about it. We can try to get the Belgians out of there first. That looks good to the Congolese and will probably paralyze the whole area. Still, it's pretty awful not to have anything new to throw a tantrum about.

MRS. K.: The League of Women Tractor Drivers passed another world peace resolution yesterday. Maybe it would be a good time to spread that around.

MR. K.: Those women ought to keep their noses out of politics. They're always talking about peace when I'm talking about war and talking about peace when I'm talking about peace. They're worse than Eisenhower sometimes. He's always talking about understanding when I'm talking about war and talking about understanding when I'm talking about peace. It's frustrating.

MRS. K.: At least he'll be gone soon.

MR. K.: Yeah, but they'll get somebody just as bad. They'll probably keep right on in Berlin. The truth is that there just doesn't seem to be anything that hasn't been tried out, but I hate to keep doing the same old things.

MRS. K.: If it's worked before it should work again.

MR. K.: I suppose so. I'll just keep plugging away. It's just that I get discouraged with the same old business. Oh, well, another day another ruble. And mama, I wish you'd try not to burn the toast any more.

Hog Profits Depend on Good Management

COLLEGE STATION.—Two important factors point toward higher potential profits for commercial hog producers during the months ahead. They are, according to C. H. Bates, extension farm management specialist, more favorable prices for pork and abundant supplies of grain.

Texas hog raisers reduced their spring pig crop 20% below that for 1959, due to slim profits through last fall and winter. Spring pig output for the nation was down 16%, Bates said.

Breeding intentions of Texas producers reflect a 5% cut in fall farrowing, compared with 1959, while the drop nationally is estimated at near 4%. So, Bates points out, fewer animals will be moving to market through the spring of 1961 if farmers carry out their earlier intentions.

But even with higher prices and ample grain supplies, higher net profits are not assured, Bates says. Important management considerations must be met in pork production as in other livestock operations, and he lists well-planned facilities which minimize labor needs and maximize animal comfort; a careful program of sanitation to control losses from diseases and parasites; the use of breeding stock which will produce the favored lean cuts; and good production records on the operation as among the more important.

Maybe you could sell a Piano

... by carrying it from door to door.

Rather ridiculous isn't it? But it pretty well illustrates how some people try to move merchandise.

Why not let your Newspaper take the "Piano off your back" with some well planned advertising.

It's much easier and surer.

He went over with the board the work of the district, and praised the supervisors for their competent handling of state monies, of district equipment and the Great Plains program, and for the use of outside resources, such as the county's banks and newspapers in the soil conservation program.

Initial plans were laid for a meeting with several adjacent districts, to be held at Quanah, for discussion of mutual problems.

Zook Thomas, member of the board of supervisors, will discuss the use of outside resources and publicity in promoting the district's program. The date of this meeting will be announced.

The motion picture will be of short subject nature, embracing the scenic beauty of Quartz Mountain Park and the Craterview Park, the site for the Altus AFB's first Fall Festival.

The film will be released to all the movie houses within a 100 mile radius of Altus, and will show in Amarillo, Pampa and Borger.

ENGINEER COMPARES OM AND MANGUM DAM SITES

A comparison of the proposed OM damsite with that sought at Mangum, was sent to directors of the Collingsworth county water control and improvement district last week by A. H. Wolverton of Austin, their engineer.

This was based on data in the office of the Bureau of Reclamation at Austin, secured from logs of borings on the two sites, John Coleman, president of the local board, said.

The formations appear to be similar, although there appears to be more sand and gypsum at the Mangum site, Wolverton reported.

The sand in the channel area is about the same depth for both sites (70 feet), although the channel is wider at Mangum.

"From the short study, it appears to me that the OM site is cheaper. However there are other factors, such as the drainage area, peak flood, existing improvements and topography that affect the value of the system," he wrote Coleman.

"For your purpose, of course I believe the OM site is certainly the better. At this time

I cannot say which site is better for the purpose of the Bureau of Reclamation, as that organization has made probably a long study of locations and factors involved, before their selection was made," he added.

Mr. Wolverton said that the Wellington dam site had a contributing drainage area of an estimated 1,013 square miles and the Mangum site 1,357 square miles. The average annual run-off at the Wellington site is 65,370 acre feet on a six year record, and 68,200 acre feet at the Mangum site on a 21 year record.

Mrs. Jack Dyer and children, Don and Kalli, of Perryton, came during the week end to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Scott. They will remain for several weeks, while Mr. and Mrs. Scott are on vacation. Dyer is attending a meeting of vocational agriculture teachers in Corpus Christi.

New York City's Central Park was closed to traffic for two days during the recent Olympic trials held in the nation's largest city.

New Type Windbreak Trees Tested Here

The planting of trees around the farmstead for wind protection to farm buildings, as well as for beautification, has become more popular with co-operators of the Salt Fork Soil Conservation District.

During the early part of 1960, the Salt Fork SCD received a shipment of seedlings from the SCS plant materials center for trial plantings in this district. Included were Rochester arborvitae, red cedar and winter berry.

The Rochester arborvitae is a strain of arborvitae similar to that which has survived and done well near Dalhart for about 20 years without loss.

The winter berry is a shrub which produces a white berry that, it is reported, stays on the plant most of the winter. These seedlings of winter berries, red cedar and Rochester arborvitae, were planted around the homes of W. O. Vaughan and Lynn Carter near Dodson.

They were planted in a clean seed bed, watered at the time of planting and protected from wind by putting shingles or tar paper around each seedling.

Of the 50 winter berries, only 5 died.

Others planting windbreaks this spring are Richard Peters, A. D. Holliman and Frank Fourmentin.

Scout Units Fish, Visit In New Mexico

A group of Explorer Scouts and boys of Troop 31 left Saturday, August 6, for a week at Eagle Nest, Red River and Taos, N.M.

They will fish and work for merit badges. At Taos, they will visit the Indian Pueblo and the state fish hatchery. Returning by way of Raton, they will visit Mount Capulin, an extinct volcano. Motion pictures will be made of the trip.

These units are sponsored by the American Legion.

Cotton Root Rot Damage is Predicted

COLLEGE STATION. — If rains occur during June, July and August, cotton root rot losses will be high. This prediction comes from Dr. Harlan E. Smith, extension plant pathologist. He bases it on the amount of disease carry-over in the soil from last year, and the late cotton crop. The disease occurs in all areas of the state except the Panhandle, High Plains and sandy soils of East Texas.

It is known that the disease fungus is carried over in the form of seed bodies or sclerotia. A minimum of 25 to 30 of these sclerotia per cubic foot of soil are necessary to cause disease. Due to the large amount of root rot the past two years, a high count of sclerotia are present in all infested soils, according to Smith.

When cotton roots grow close to the sclerotia in moist soil, the seed bodies of the fungus germinate and attack the cotton root. Within a few days large patches of dead cotton appear.

The disease is nearly always more damaging on late than on early cotton. Early cotton is more likely to escape some of the damage.

Smith advises growers to start planning preventive measures immediately for the 1961 crop. Deep plowing, 10 to 14 inches deep, with a mold board or disc type plow is recommended. In a few areas, because of the type of sub-soil, this will not be possible. However, deep plowing to as great a depth as possible will be helpful in reducing root rot the following year, he says.

Local county agents can supply copies of the publication MP-361 "Root Rot Losses of Cotton Can Be Reduced," and additional information on practices which will aid in reducing plant disease losses.

INJURY RATE 1.5%
Fifteen of every 100 Texans were injured in traffic accidents during 1959. The 138,846 injury toll is roughly comparable to the population of Amarillo, Beaumont, Lubbock, Waco or Wichita Falls.

Integration of Fruit and Nut Industry Studied

COLLEGE STATION.—Vertical integration in the production and marketing of deciduous fruits and nuts in Texas is limited, but there are several notable exceptions, says Tom Prater, extension farm management specialist, and Dr. R. E. Branson, professor of agricultural economics, Texas A&M College system. East Texas' plum, peach and blackberry industries are vertically integrated, as is the Central Texas pecan industry.

An East Texas plum growers' association has handled the marketing of its members' produce for several years. Many East Texas peach producers operate their own packing sheds and sell directly to retail outlets. One of the area's cooperatives handles most of the blackberry marketing. A Central Texas pecan growers' association handles the grading, packaging and wholesaling of much of the area's production.

The specialists say that no concentrated effort is being made to integrate more of Texas' deciduous fruit and nut industry. This integration may be forced, however, by the requirements of chain stores and other buyers for products that are graded on a strict standardized quality basis.

Prater and Branson discuss the advantages, disadvantages, management practices and future growth of such integration in the publication "Vertical Integration in Texas Agriculture—Deciduous Fruits and Nuts." Copies are available from the Agricultural Information office, College Station, or local county extension agents. Ask for L-487.

According to some estimates the overall production of plastics in the United States will double during the next decade, reaching an annual output of about 11 billion pounds by 1970.

Graham Attends Tech Testing Workshop

Louis Graham, counselor and junior high instructor in the Wellington schools, returned Saturday, August 6 from a two weeks workshop for school and rehabilitation counselors.

Graham attended on a scholarship awarded on the basis of his work here.

Learning about the important psychological aspects of "projective techniques" was the aim of the workshop, directed by Dr. Sylvan Kaplan, Tech psychology department head. The course was limited to 10 students. Five of these were school counselors, and all except Graham were from city school systems.

Use of any of several "projective technique" tests may help a counselor decide if the student needs to be referred to a doctor.

"Through the use of projective techniques, a counselor is able to look at the total person," said Kaplan. "Such tests reveal a person's intellect, emotions and control of his emotions and how he perceives the world."

The ink blot test, involving pictures with no specific shapes, reveals certain aspects of a personality which otherwise might remain unknown to a counselor. The Tech students learned how to score the interpretations revealed in this test and put them into meaningful terms.

"Everything you do, say or don't say, is a manifestation of your personality and you will project it while interpreting ink blots or lines and dots and by drawings," Kaplan said.

Each of the students in the workshop practiced projective techniques on normal persons during the first week. During the last week they administered projective technique tests to persons in the state hospital at Big Spring. All of their work was closely supervised by professional psychologists on the Tech faculty.

Needed for Growth

Magnesium Requirements in Cotton Production Studied

COLLEGE STATION.—Magnesium is one of the essential nutrient elements required by higher plants for normal growth and reproduction. Until recently, very little work had been done in relation to the magnesium requirements of cotton.

The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station has completed a series of studies in an attempt to learn those requirements. The studies were made under controlled conditions and should be very useful as a guide for future field experiments.

Project

Miss Hulsey is now attending the national convention of Delta Kappa Gamma in Miami, Fla., and upon returning she will fly to a meeting of a Presbyterian Church group in Spearfish, South Dakota. As she will be away several weeks it is believed the project can be kept a secret. The presentation will be at the Tulia Homecoming October 28.

Miss Hulsey taught English in Wellington high school from about 1927 to 1942, when she returned to Tulia, her hometown, to be near her mother, the late Mrs. W. C. Hulsey, who was in failing health.

Miss Hulsey is an elder in the First Presbyterian Church of Tulia, is state vice president of Delta Kappa Gamma and is known through that community and elsewhere for her many philanthropies.

"Miss Hulsey represents a type of teacher fast fading from the educational scene," Mr. Swinburn said when she announced her resignation. "She taught primarily for the love of teaching and she remained in Tulia because of her devotion to this community."
