He who prays as he ought will endeavor to live as he prays.—Owen.

In the magazine "Texas School Business" in an article about Travis Hanes, formerly superintendent of Tahoka schools, and now head of the Irving schools where there was so much "stink" recently.

The school board there was looking for a man that would straighten out their mess, and found one in "Trap." The magazine states that Hanes has the situation under control and that the Irving schools have been removed from probation and restored to full accreditation by the State Commissioner. It further says that Hanes has made progress in planning and work is underway in the instructional program. The stability of the school will be seen this spring if the board accepts the superintendent's recommendations for election of faculty rather than the citizen's, the article said.

Personnel Director: "What previous experience have you had and what work have you done?"

Applicant: "I was a secretary. All I had to do was look like a girl, think like a man, act like a lady, and work like a dog."

Audie Norman and Abbie Whorton are really going in big lately for these contests. Jingles, puzzles, anything at all, you give it, and they'll try.

All has not been in vain, however. Recently the two entered a leading baking powder contest with two jingles. Abbie won a toast-master and Audie won a salad master.

Right now, they're trying for a car.

We heard that the basketball boys here were so enthused following the State tournament that they are already inviting fans to Austin to see them play next year. We hope so—

First National Established Fifty Years Ago Saturday, March 16

The First National Bank of Tahoka will be fifty years old this Saturday, March 16, having been chartered on March 16, 1907, by the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States.

Actually, the bank is the successor to the First State Bank, which the First National bought out and succeeded, and the First State was started about a year previous, in the spring of 1906.

This year also marks the 50th anniversary of W. B. Slaton's association with the bank. Actually, he too had worked briefly with the bank before this, but as almost a youth he became assistant cashier of the new First National on March 16, 1907.

About a year ago, Mr. Slaton suffered a stroke and was forced to retire from active work, but he is gradually improving and may again return to activity some day. Modest and unassuming, he would not admit it, but Walter Slaton has been the backbone of the First National Bank most of its 50 years.

The First National throughout its career has been recognized in banking circles as one of the strongest small town banks in Texas. In fact, during the banking holiday of the "Depression" days, when banks were ordered to close, the First National did close its front door but citizens were never denied the right to do business, even to withdrawal of funds, and the back door was kept open.

Grassland Annexed To Tahoka District

First Baptist S. S. Wins High Honor

For the second time in two years, the Sunday School of the First Baptist Church has reached the requirements of the Advanced Standard Sunday School.

Last year Tahoka was the second church in the Southern Baptist Convention to meet these requirements and the first in Texas. One other church in Texas finally reached their requirements before the year was over. So far as is known, Tahoka is the first in Texas to reach it this year. Robert Edwards and other representatives from the Sunday School will receive recognition at the Sunday School Convention at the First Church, Dallas, the first of April.

The first five and one-half months of this Sunday School year, the total average attendance of the Sunday School has been 432. Last year the average for the first five and one-half months was 414, or an increase of 28 per Sunday. The Sunday School of the First Baptist Church has 123 elected officers and teachers, not counting the class officers. Of this number, 79 officers and teachers hold the Workers Diploma showing that they have completed a prescribed course of study in Sunday School work.

Reaching the Advanced Standard rating, states Pastor Clifford Harris, in no way indicates that a Sunday School is doing the best work possible, but it does mean that the workers have an unusual spirit of cooperation in making a real effort to do the work that a teacher and officer should do in making a Sunday School not only the teaching agency of the church, but also the enlisting agency.

Grassland school district was annexed to Tahoka school district effective July 1, 1957 on order of the Lynn County Board of Trustees at its regular meeting here Tuesday morning.

The Grassland and Tahoka boards were present at the meeting called for the purpose of trying to work out a suitable plan for the Grassland school for the 1957-58 term and thereafter.

Following is quoted from the minutes of the meeting: "The situation of the Grassland district was brought to the attention of the County Board because it is this board's duty to classify the school of the county. On the basis of ADA (average daily attendance), the Grassland school has failed to qualify for certification, as it has previously. It seemed feasible to make plans and preparations in time to enable officials to meet the needs of the children in the planning for the next term of school."

"The Grassland situation was discussed, with but few suggestions coming from either of the visiting Boards of Education. Two methods of procedure were mentioned: that of a contract for one year, or the possible annexation of the two districts by the County Board of Education. No definite conclusions were reached in the joint session."

"Following the joint session, the County Board took the following action, after consideration of existing problems of both Boards of Education involved: Voting unanimously to combine the two districts, with the following recommendations being made to the Tahoka Board of Education: 1. The building and equipment needed or wanted be left for the Grassland community to use as a Community Center, if they so desire."

"2. That the teachers be left intact until September 1, 1957, or until further agreement by Grassland and Tahoka. 3. That, if it is practical and possible, the Grassland pupils be given a bus service that will not require long hours between home and school."

Members of the County Board: Mrs. Ruth Jolly, secretary; B. M. Haynes of O'Donnell, Graham Hensley of Draw, and H. B. Crosby of Wilson.

Grassland district covers a little more than 24 sections and has a valuation of $375,774.00. Tahoka district covers 24 sections and has a total valuation of $6,731,000.00. Farm land valuations per acre are virtually the same in the two districts, each averaging about $21.00 per acre.

These friends and neighbors brought the birthday cake, coffee and punch: Mmes. Doyle Keely, M. C. Daugherty, Curtis Stevens, J. H. Knight, Roy Hefner, Maggie Stigler, O. J. Jackson, G. W. Small, A. L. Solsbery, E. J. Cooper, Ella Eason, Reasonover, Marvin Woods, Gainer, Lawrence Harvick, Tom Gill, and John Daniel.

Today's MEDITATION from The World's Most Widely Used Devotional Guide

The Upper Room

Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out. (John 6:37.)

When I was a child, a photographer took my picture. He had put out a captivating advertisement, "Come as you please." So my mother took me just as I was. I still have the photograph. There were no frills or fancy garments, no dressing up for that photograph. It was I, just as I was.

There is something to be said for looking one's best in a photograph. People used to say the camera could not lie; but the camera can be used to prove almost anything.

How we appear to other people depends on the people. There is a cheap view of human life that never sees much in us. There is also the danger of a too optimistic view of human nature. But Jesus knew what was in man—the best as well as the worst.

"Come as you please," said the photographer. "Come unto me," said Jesus. That means, come—just as we are.

PRAYER

Unworthy though we are, O God, we come to Thee; for we have faith that just as we are, Thou wilt receive. Cleanse us of sin, fill us with the Holy Spirit, and use us for Thy glory; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

God will receive me just as I am.—T. Henry Holloway (Northern Ireland.)

Fifty Years of Service!

March 16, 1907 . . .

On this date the Comptroller of the Currency in Washington, D. C., chartered the First National Bank of Tahoka, Texas.

Immediately following, the officers and directors of this new bank met and took over the loans and accounts of the First State Bank. First officers of the First National Bank were: O. L. Slaton, president; W. D. Nevels, cashier; and W. B. Slaton, assistant cashier; with W. S. Posey, E. D. Skinner, Jack Alley, G. W. Coughran and G. K. Reed serving as directors along with Mr. O. L. Slaton and Mr. Nevels.

March 16, 1957 . . .

Fifty years later . . . and with considerable change and growth through the years . . . most of the original officers and directors have passed on to "happier lands."

Mr. Posey remains active in the First National Bank in Lubbock, while, as head of this bank now, after fifty years service himself, is the person who signed the minute book of these earlier Board meetings as "Secretary to the Board"—WALTER B. SLATON, one of West Texas' outstanding bankers of this and past decades, who last year was made President of this institution.

The First National Bank of Tahoka is proud to have served you, the Lynn County and South Plains residents during these FIFTY YEARS. The Officers and Directors and Employees pledge to you continued SERVICE in the years ahead!

Miss Sylvia Edwards Writes On "Youth's Stake In Soil Conservation"

(Following is the third place essay, written by Miss Sylvia Edwards of New Home, in the Lynn County Soil Conservation District contest for high school students.)

Youth's Stake In Soil Conservation

The youth of America is often considered unconcerned and uninformed in regard to the problem of soil conservation. This is especially true concerning the young women. These statements are unfounded and if the adults of modern America will face the truth, American youth has had much influence in furthering conservation of the soil.

Are the farmers of tomorrow going to be ignorant to the ways of fighting soil deterioration, an enemy facing our country? No, thanks to the work of the United States Department of Agriculture and those men connected with this department. Today, young people are receiving valuable training in this field through FFA and 4-H, and through current magazines. These young people are not letting their knowledge go to waste as has happened in so many other cases, but this foe of the soil and of America has found a quick response in the hearts of the youth of today and this response shall continue because, the youth love their home, community, and most of all, their country.

What can we do to further conservation of the soil? We can take home the knowledge of conservation and stress its importance to our parents and to our neighbors, we can enter into the fight for conservation by making public speeches. We must never lose courage in this fight because we never know just how very much we may be doing although the visual progress may seem slow.

If the youth does not keep his keen insight for conservation, this land of ours shall truly be ready to be "given back to the Indians"—however, chances are, the Indians would not even have it. We must accept this challenge because the youth of America will save America's soil.

Mrs. Willingham Dies Recently

Mrs. R. E. (Beulah) Willingham, 72, long a resident of Lynn county, died in Galveston on February 24. The News has been informed by a daughter Mrs. T. C. Bartley of Oroville, Calif. She had entered a Galveston hospital on January 8.

Born at Hubbard City in 1884, the deceased was married there August 15, 1900. She had lived in Oklahoma, Texas, and California since, and resided in the New Lynn, Tahoka, and Redwine communities of Lynn county for many years.

Survivors include the husband, R. E. Willingham of San Saba; nine sons, Richard B. of Sacramento, Paul J. of Modesto, Dean G. of Janesville, Ralph of Chico, Jess R. and Neal of Oroville, Myrl of Herlong, all in California, Mart W. of Manitou Springs, Colo.; and Ted of San Angelo, Texas; three daughters, Mrs. Edith Bartley of Oroville, Mrs. Zealand Lindley of Janesville, and Mrs. Zelma Van Kirk of Redding, all in California; 40 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren; two brothers, W. M. (Bill) Thompson of Tahoka and J. C. (Jess) Shelton of Morton; two sisters, Mrs. Maude Jones of Tahoka and Mrs. Ethel Norris of Fort Worth.

Of the 75 people in the immediate family, her's was the first death, except for that of a 24-hour-old grandson.

Spears Talks On School Problems

Supt. Otis Spears was the speaker at Tahoka Rotary Club Thursday of last week in observance of Public School Week.

Quoting from an article on "The Crisis in Education" by Admiral Hyman Rickover of the Atomic Energy Commission, Mr. Spears brought out some interesting thoughts on our educational system.

Only one percent of the people are responsible for moving the world forward. Only 15 to 20 percent of the children in school have the capability of becoming a member of this upper one percent. Somewhere along the line, under our present educational system, we are losers, as from this group we get less than one percent of the brains of our country.

Under our present educational system, classroom standards are set low enough for 80 percent of the students to pass the work, although 95 percent can pass the standard. Therefore, the top 15 percent, with a high IQ, are held back, are not required to extend themselves in their studies, and frequently become bored and lag-gard.

In educating the masses at the minimum cost, U. S. schools can not push the brilliant students because of crowded classes, and our nation is losing a lot of top brains as a result.

He declared Russia is spending 8 to 10 percent on education where we are spending 3 to 4 percent.

Under the European plan of selective education, a student may advance as rapidly as his capabilities allow. Top students proceed through the colleges and universities, and specially adapted students are allowed to advance to technical schools.

Under our system, some students try to go to college who do not have the background and equipment to do college work, while some of our best brains never go to college. As an example, he cited a local youth with an IQ of 145, away above normal, who had an ambition to be a truck driver.

Mr. Spears also touched on the cost of education. He said the school tax on an average half section of land in the Tahoka district, without improvements, is $100.00. This is less than the cost of a package of cigarettes a day, less than the cost of driving a car for pleasure purposes 2,000

ODds AND Ends

(By E. I. The Elder)

Some weeks I wonder what I am going to find interesting and instructive or both for this column the next week. During the last 30 years, I have written about nearly everything under the sun. Not having traveled but a little when I started this Column, I knew very little about the geography or physical features of any country, not even of Texas. Having been born and reared in central Texas, and having recently moved to the Sweetwater-Roscoe region in West Texas, and some fifteen years later to Lynn County, I knew precious little about the South Plains when I began publishing the Lynn County News. But I was charmed with the new forms of beauty that I found out here and soon began a Column in which I began telling about the lakes—dry for the most part—the beautiful sunsets, for which this area was already famous; the lovely prairie flowers, and especially the patches and fields of the Tahoka daisies; the snatches of history that were already familiar to every ranchman, every cow-boy, and even to almost every housewife in Lynn and adjoining counties. I visited and wrote about history of Tahoka Lake, about Guthrie Lake, about Double Lakes, and finally about nearly every lake in Lynn county, and some in neighboring counties. I wrote something about the most powerful and most glamorous animals that ever roamed these plains, the American buffalo; and something about the fleet-footed and most graceful but the shyest of all the animals that roamed these plains, the antelope.

And then I wrote something about the buffalo hunters, who slew these noble beasts by the thousands. I wrote something about the cattle trails that led from Texas northward across the Red River to Fort Dodge and other points of destination in Kansas and other Middle Western States. I wrote a little about battles between the cattle-men and attacking Comanche, Kiowa and other Indian tribes as these cattle were being driven up the trails to the north.

Since then I have made several sight-seeing trips out into New Mexico and Colorado and one to the world-famous Yellowstone National Park, right up to the head of the marvelous Missouri River. Those trips furnished me with a wealth of material to weave into a glomorous story of the great North-west.

THE AMERICAN WAY

I also visited the Davis Mountains and the scenic wonders in the Big Bend of the Rio Grande River, which is attracting more and more visitors every year from all parts of the United States, and seems destined to become lined with a dense population on both banks from El Paso to the Gulf, and particularly on the Texas side of the River.

Then I had the opportunity to visit Mexico and spent two and a half months in that marvelous country, most of the time in the great city of some three million people. It is a city and country of both natural and man-made scenic wonders; and I used fifteen weeks in filling this Column with nothing but "Mexico."

So striking were some of the beliefs and practices of the Aztecs and some twenty other tribes of Indians found by Hernando Cortez when he landed on the shores of Mexico where the city of Vera Cruz now stands and fought his way into the Indian city of Tenochtitlan—so similar were their beliefs and worship of the people among whom Abraham lived in ancient Ur of the land of Chaldees, that one is almost compelled to conclude that these beliefs held by the Chaldeans in Ur in the Far East, and by the Aztecs and Toltecs many centuries later in the country of Mexico on the Western continent must have had a common origin.

After my Mexico sojourn, I became intensely interested in the Sun-god and the Moon-god of the ancient people of Ur, and naturally of the people of Abraham's descendants also, the peoples of all Palestine and neighboring countries. I found in my little library the book written some fifteen years ago by Emma-Jewell Ross entitled "Living Where Jesus Lived," and I found it so full of interesting information, that with her consent I began to quote from that book, and now I have used practically everything in it in my Column; and now I must turn to other sources for material to use in this Column.

For the past several weeks I have been busy gathering material and writing a Church history. I have gathered most of the material from the files of the Lynn County News. That has involved the inspection of a nearly every paper issued here for full forty years. The perusal of these papers has proved to be intensely interesting, for naturally we have taken time out to read much of the general local news that has been published in the News files for more than forty years. So, I believe I have a wealth of material yet with which to fill this Column. But now, Good Night.

FORMER CITIZEN SENDS REGARDS TO FRIENDS
 Mrs. T. C. (Edith) Bartley of route 5, box 5099, Oroville, Calif., in writing The News about the recent death of her mother, sends her best regards to the family's many friends over Lynn county. She says they have been having a lot of rain recently, and have had high water up to flood stage on the Feather River. She says they certainly enjoy receiving The Lynn County News.

There is nothing wrong with the younger generation, except that we don't belong to it anymore.

Bill In Congress Affects Plains

Washington, March 14 — Rep. George Mahon of the 19th District announced from Washington this week that hearings were in progress before the House Committee on Agriculture on a bill which would vitally affect West Texas cotton producers.

The bill, authored by Rep. Bob Poage of Waco in his capacity as vice chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, directly affects the old controversy on cotton allotments between West Texas and Central and East Texas.

Mahon said the bill would abolish in Texas, but not in other states, the provision of the existing law in regard to trends in cotton acreage, and that it would fix county cotton allotments in Texas on the basis of the past three years rather than five years as is now the law.

West Texas lost heavily to East Texas on cotton acreage allotments for the 1956 crop year as a result of the action of the State ASC Committee. Cotton allotments for 1957 are regarded as much more equitable. The pending bill would affect allotments for 1958 and future years.

The poage bill among other provisions calls for a modification in the present law with respect to new grower allotments and farm consolidations.

Mahon said that he had sent copies of the bill to all county offices of the ASC and to all the farm organizations in West Texas requesting comment and asking that a representative of West Texas cotton producers who knows the prevailing views of West Texas growers on the pending bill come to Washington and join him in testifying before the House Agriculture Committee.

One of the major provisions of the new bill would require the Department of Agriculture to provide a special loan on light spot cotton. Mahon said that he did not regard this issue as controversial in West Texas as all Texas farmers insofar as he knew felt that recognition of light spot cotton by a proper loan was long overdue.

Mahon pointed out that the Secretary of Agriculture could provide this loan without special legislation and that he had joined West Texans earlier this year in personally urging Secretary Ezra Taft Benson and the Department to announce such a loan. Mahon expressed hope that this end would be achieved either by voluntary action on the part of the Department or through legislation.

Lynn County Soil Conservation District News

ROY L. WILLIAMS ELLIS BARNES

FLMER BLANKENSHIP

Blue Panic grass seedlings that germinated from the moisture in February do not appear to have been killed by the twenty-four degree temperature on the night of March 6. These seedlings are from seed scattered over the soil with last year's combining. The old established blue panic grass plots had some leaves several inches long and these are killed back to the base. Re-growth will start with warmer weather.

Indian grass on Jack Caveness farm east of Tahoka has some shoots beginning to grow that do not seem to have suffered from the cold weather. Some seedlings can be found at this time from seed scattered on the ground from last year's seed crop.

Soil conservation Service personnel assigned to the District assisted B. O. Bingham in assembling a soil and water conservation plan on his farm east of Tahoka. Part of this farm is irrigated and in addition to his regular cropping, Mr. Bingham plans to grow soil improving legumes and some acres to sorghum alnum. Contour lines were run for Harold Payne, west of Wells by Soil conservation Service engineers of the Tahoka work unit.

The Veteran Training Class at O'Donnell, under the direction of Cleve Littlepage, visited a planting of Sorghum Alnum on the farm of Jack Buchanan in the Howard Soil Conservation District, as suggested by the work unit conservation of Tahoka. The sorghum Alnum was reported to have new growth of some four to six inches long. This growth compares with the growth on blue panic grass during the first week of March.

It is not too late to plant Madrid or Huban Clover as a legume for soil improvements this season. Madrid is a biennial and Huban is an annual. These legumes can be planted before the planting dates of cotton and grain sorghum so there will be no interference with other plantings. Seeding rates are six to eight pounds per acre in forty inch rows and ten to twenty pounds drilled with a grain drill. Covering depth is from a half inch to one inch.

Mrs. J. E. Mayberry returned home recently from a visit to Newport, Maine, and Boston, Mass. Her daughter, Clara Gene Porter, has been wrestling in the Boston area and has been doing pretty well, she reports.

Ever wonder how grandmother could endure those antique chairs? Well, the answer is she was tired when she sat down.

Irrigation Farmers Urged To Study Particular Problems Of Projects

By Lee Williamson, SCS
Big Spring

Irrigation wells are being started up and systems put into operation to apply a preplanting application of water to cropland. Have you made a plan to guide you in applying this and any future application? Do you know how much water to apply without waste or leaching? Do you know how to estimate the moisture in your soil? Do you know whether or not your irrigation system is operating as it should to put out the most water with the least pumping cost?

If your answer to the above is "no" or "I am not sure," then the chances are that you will not realize as much profit from your irrigated acres as you should. In many instances a negative answer to one of the above questions could contribute to a loss from farming operations.

You should have a plan to use a guide in applying irrigation water. The plan should be based on your soil, topography of the land, amount of water available, crops to be grown, and the type of irrigation system to be used. You should include in your irrigation plan when you expect to irrigate and approximately how much water you expect to apply at each irrigation.

It should indicate what course will be taken in case of a pumping plant failure or a substantial decrease in the capacity of your water supply. If your plan or irrigation includes crops that require different amounts of water, it should guide you in when and how much to apply to each.

These and many items should be pretty well worked out and written down before the irrigation season is too far along. The plan should be definite, but it must be flexible enough to allow revisions necessitated by weather, insects, unforeseen conditions of crop growth, tillage operations, and other factors that might influence farming, including market conditions.

More than likely you are getting along with a preplanting irrigation. Are you applying the proper or desired amount of water or are you making too heavy an application? Too much water will penetrate below a point where it can be recovered by plants. As water goes into the ground it dissolves and carries downward a lot of plant nutrients. These nutrients may be carried out of reach of plant roots if too much water is applied. At the same time too little water applied at this time may be insufficient to prevent plants going into stress from lack of moisture before the next planned irrigation is made. Enough water should be applied at this time to bring the soil profile for the plant water extraction zone up to field capacity. What depth does this zone reach? Take a look at your plan to see what crops will be planted on each acre and how deep the roots are expected to go. The water holding capacity of the soil is also an important factor in determining how much water to apply. Future applications will be controlled largely by, among other things, what yield is expected from the crop and the fertility level of your soil.

There are several mechanical and electrical instruments on the market that will help determine soil moisture. Most of these are expensive and require variable amounts and expense for maintenance. A reliable method of estimating soil moisture is the "feel" or ball method. Details of this method of estimating soil moisture are available at the office of your local Soil Conservation District or from Soil Conservation Service technicians assisting the district.

During a recent trip I saw many irrigation systems that were operating very inefficiently. Some of the sprinkler systems were barely discharging water with enough velocity to cause the heads to rotate. Many had leaks at joints. Some were overpowered and using more fuel than necessary. Quite a few were operating at extremely high pressures or were getting very bad distribution of water on the land. We even found several fields with dry spots. This was especially true where excessive moves of main lines and sprinkler lines of excessive length accounted for much of the inefficiency operation. Loss due to friction in long lines can become very expensive.

If you have any questions or are wanting the latest information on irrigation and irrigation farming, contact the Soil Conservation Service personnel assisting your Soil Conservation District. They have a lot of valuable information and will be glad to assist you to develop an irrigation plan, determine the proper rate and amount of irrigation water to apply. They can train you in estimating soil moisture and will help you to evaluate the operation of your irrigation system, work out changes, additions to, or plan a new system.

Cotton Meeting At O'Donnell

The total market for U. S. cotton can dwindle to eight million bales or grow to 16 million bales in four or five years.

Facts supporting this statement will be discussed at a special meeting of cotton industry members at O'Donnell school cafeteria on Thursday, March 21, 8:00 p. m. This meeting is one of a series being held in the major cotton growing counties of West Texas. It follows a recent meeting at O'Donnell, where a representative group of Lynn county cotton farmers, ginners, and other industry members listened to basic information on cotton's problem, program, and potential presented by staff members of the National Cotton Council. It was recommended by the group at O'Donnell that the information be taken to a wider cross-section of the cotton industry through a series of similar, county meetings.

Speakers at the meeting will include Carl Sears, Dale Anderson, and John Gregg.

Young men aren't the only ones whose thoughts turn. As we look about us, we see people all over whose thoughts have turned to Spring.
