American tourist killed in Kenya

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Gunmen attacked a group of American tourists viewing wildlife in southern Kenya and killed a woman, wounded a man and robbed others of money, a source said Friday.

The attack Thursday, the second on tourists in Kenya this month, took place as 19 tourists were riding in three vans along the 40-mile road between the Amboseli and Tsavo national parks, the source said.

A woman was killed instantly when shot through the head by two men with AK-47 assault rifles, and a man was shot in the chest, according to the report.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Frances Jones said Marie Esther Ferraro, age unknown, of New Haven, Conn., was shot and killed and another American was slightly wounded. She did not give the wounded person's name.

The gunmen apparently ambushed the tourists along a bad stretch of road that forced them to slow down, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The trip was organized by the Connecticut Audubon Society and had 19 participants — 18 from Connecticut and one from Georgia, said Lauren Brown, a society spokeswoman in Fairfield, Conn. She would not identify the victims but said both were from Connecticut.

The two-week tour began July 17, she said.

Police Commissioner Philip Kilonzo and Richard Leakey, director of wildlife, went to the scene to investigate.

It was the latest in a series of attacks on tourists that began in September when a Dutch tourist was shot in the chest in Meru National Park.

Also in September, the remains of a British woman were found in sprawling Masai Mara Game Reserve in southwestern Kenya. An inquest begins Aug. 7 into her death, which her father says was murder. Police have said she could have fallen prey to wild animals.

In the first week of July, two French tourists were shot to death in Meru National Park, east of Mount Kenya, by poachers. Leakey had called it an isolated incident, and said he did not think the poachers were "looking for tourists to shoot."

In April, three West German tourists were wounded by gunmen who ambushed their vehicles in about the same spot between Tsavo and Amboseli.

Two Americans remain hospitalized after being beaten up last week while on a horseback riding safari in Masai Mara. The U.S. Embassy refused to release any details about the two.

Maintaining the security of Kenya's parks and tourist locations is vital to the East Africa nation, which says it has had nearly 3 million tourists since 1984.

Sharp: Gas tax hike would be bad for Texas

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A federal 50-cent-per-gallon hike in gasoline taxes would be bad for Texas and bad for working people, Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp told a rally of about 300 at the Capitol Friday.

The idea, a component of two bills under consideration by the U.S. House Ways and Means Committee, could very well end up a bargaining chip as federal lawmakers look for ways to ease the federal deficit.

Citing U.S. News and World Report, as his source, Sharp said, "It's coming. It's coming because it's something that's being traded for other things."

The commissioner read the crowd a varied list of organizations that oppose the tax, including the Texas Chamber of Commerce, Texas AFL-CIO, Texas Farm Bureau and Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners.

But the togetherness didn't stop incoming state AFL-CIO President Joe Gunn from aiming a few pot-shots at President Bush.

With a proposed cut in the capital gains tax, Bush is contemplating lowering taxes for the rich while raising them for "you and I" with the gas tax proposal, Gunn claimed.

"Whatever happened to the man who campaigned on 'Read my lips; no new taxes,'" Gunn said.

Another speaker, Texas Highway Commissioner Ray Stoker of Odessa, said the state would pay a disproportionate amount of the tax because Texans drive longer distances.

With the current 9-cent-per-gallon federal tax, Texas pays about $900 million yearly, but only get back about $830 million, he said. The proposed tax would generate about $50 billion yearly, of which Texas would pay about $5 billion, he said.

"The long and short of it is that these people want us to pay twice as much of this tax as the people in New York or Washington, D.C.," he said.

Jury gives woman probation

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 19-year-old Odessa woman was sentenced to 10 years probation and fined $10,000 by a jury Friday, 12 hours after the panel convicted her of indecency with a child. Jurors were unable to reach a verdict on charges of aggravated sexual assault and aggravated assault.

"We are glad the jury felt and believed Sandy was worthy of probation, and that there are things Sandy can do to improve her lot in life," said Chris McCormack, who represented Sandy Pyeatt during the four-day trial in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Court.

Prosecutor Randy Fluke said he would ask Baskin to send Ms. Pyeatt to state prison for "shock probation," a term of at least 60 days and not more than 120 days. Fluke also said he would recommend Ms. Pyeatt undergo psychological counseling at her expense.

Baskin declared a mistrial early Friday after the jury was unable to reach a verdict in two of the counts against Ms. Pyeatt. They deliberated for nearly nine hours before reaching a stalemate.

Fluke declined to criticize the panel.

"It is a tribute to our criminal jury system that they will deliberate and discuss a case for nine hours, and try to reach a decision," he said. "That shows they are considering all of the evidence and looking at every aspect of the case with the seriousness which is called for."

Fluke said he "appreciated" that the jury found Ms. Pyeatt guilty on one count.

The prosecutor declined to say if he would re-try Ms. Pyeatt on the charges the jury failed to agree upon.

Hearst selling Los Angeles newspaper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Hearst Corp. told employees of The Los Angeles Herald Examiner on Friday that it is selling the daily newspaper, an editor at the paper said.

"We got the announcement today," said Andrea Herman, the paper's features editor. "They have put up the paper for sale and will evaluate offers from interested parties."

The reason for the sale was not publicly announced. But a statement issued to newspaper employees said the sale stemmed from "intense pressure" from the paper's competition in the nation's second-largest newspaper market.

Arnold Ochoa buffs a silver-bright propeller blade on the famed DC-3 air transport at Midland International Airport, where the aircraft was given a new paint job and new interior — from wool carpet to ultra-suede headliner.

Local aviators refurbishing DC-3

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The famed Douglas DC-3, one of the world's most revered airplanes, is still taking off into the wild blue yonder just like the old flying work horse was designed to do more than 50 years ago.

It was the twin-engine airplane that gave impetus and profits to commercial airlines in the 1930s and the 1940s. And, as the C-47 Skytrain in World War II military use, the all-metal low-wing monoplane was the airplane that hauled cargo and paratroopers and towed gliders in helping the Allies win the war against the Axis Powers.

Today, one of the old DC-3s still flying around the country has taken on the U.S. Navy's resplendent blue camouflage colors — Stars-and-Stripes blue and sky blue — in the Aircraft Maintenance Inc. (AMI) hangar at Midland International Airport.

"This was the pride of the fleet," Richard Osborn, a Midland aviator and AMI partner, said of the old DC-3, which is powered by two Pratt & Whitney R-1830 radial engines. Each engine turns a three-bladed propeller, develops about 1,200 horsepowers and, at economy cruise, burns about 50 gallons of fuel per hour.

"This is fun flying," he said of the aircraft.

But modern-day jet-powered airliners are more like fast-moving "blow-torches" wherein "You get up here (in the cockpit), punch a button and away you go."

AMI painted the DC-3 in a circa 1939 U.S. Navy color scheme and refurbished the interior for the airplane's owner, Bob Pond. The aircraft, christened "Miss Angela" in deference to Pond's granddaughter, will be flying on the air-show circuit and will be featured at the Planes of Fame Air Museum in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area. It was being readied for flight to the annual Experimental Aircraft Association Fly-In Convention and Sport Aviation Exhibition at Wittman Field in Oshkosh, Wis.

The prototype of the DC-3, which stands for Douglas Commercial, first flew in December 1935 as the Douglas Sleeper Transport (DST) and was the third in a series of Douglas airplanes expressly designed for the airlines.

The DC-3 "made the airline industry," said Bill Jessup, a retired corporation pilot and former DC-3 and U.S. Army Air Corps pilot. "It had enough passenger capacity to make it pay for itself. It was really the first revenue-producing airplane.

"It was a good, well-behaved, forgiving airplane," Jessup said. "And that made it so popular. They made so many of them."

One of the DC-3's competitors was the Boeing Model 247, which came out in 1934 but carried 10 passengers.

Bunton orders hides turned over to taxidermist

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The judge was not pleased over the government's handling of Clayton and Modesta Williams' hides — the hides and horns of two exotic long-horn Argali sheep which they shot in the People's Republic of China in 1988.

The two sets of hides and horns were confiscated last year in San Francisco, Calif., by federal agents who claimed the hides and horns were from an endangered sub-species of the mountainous Argali sheep. The Williams couple and Chinese wildlife scientists disagree with that contention.

Clayton and Modesta Williams, who are Midland-based ranchers, bankers, oil operators, entrepreneurs, big-game hunters and conservationists, had sued the U.S. Department of the Interior for return of the hides and horns after months of pleading for their safe-keeping and return.

Bunton, who heard testimony in the yet-unsettled case in Pecos last week, this week ordered that the hides be turned over to a taxidermist, named by the Williams couple, to determine their conditions.

The Williams couple are concerned that the "partially tanned" hides may be deteriorating.

"In this cause, two hides of indeterminate but probably irreplaceable value may be damaged by the manner in which they are stored," Bunton said in his order. "It is undisputed that no one knows precisely the condition or prognosis for the hides."

Bunton ordered a report on the condition of the hides and "recommendations for (their) preservation."

He did not resolve the case.

And Clayton Williams, who is a candidate for the Texas governorship, and his wife "are delighted with the order," said Midland lawyer Harris Kerr.

On Friday afternoon, Kerr said that "right this minute" the Williams couple were selecting a San Francisco taxidermist to have the hides "reviewed."

"The judge wants an independent expert to look at them and report to the court," Kerr said. And the Williams couple "want this question settled quickly and don't want it dragged out," Kerr said.

"The judge's order made it clear he is going to do something quick," said Kerr, who is counsel for the Midland couple. Essentially, Bunton said, " 'Put it in gear,' and he meant 'put it in gear,' " Kerr said.

Kerr said he wished that "a practical solution to the problem could be settled quickly. I don't know why the government hasn't tried to settle it informally" instead of practically forcing the Williams couple to take the case to court to stake their claim on the hides and horns.

In his order, Bunton "admonished" the parties to the lawsuit that the dispute is "unworthy of the significant portion of the resources of the Federal Courts which it has engaged."

The Williams couple "resorted to the courts only after repeated and unsuccessful attempts to contact the appropriate persons within the Department of the Interior charged with the custody of the hides," Bunton wrote.

The government's conduct "is deplorable and certainly unbecoming of government employees whose positions charge them with custody of property which is subject to claims of private persons."

Additionally, Bunton said "it appears" that certain persons in the U.S. Department of the Interior "have ignored the custodial nature of their possession."

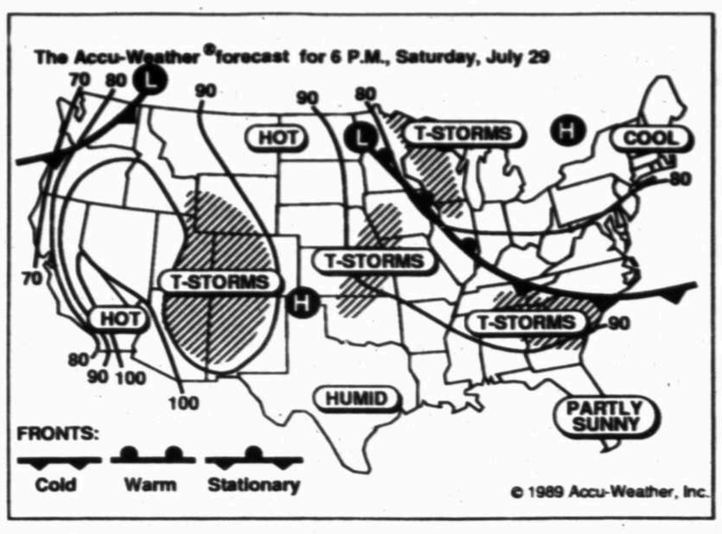
WEATHER SUMMARY



Dry weather to continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

The old saying, "Rain, rain, go away; please come back some other day," certainly wasn't meant for West Texas.

It's dry. It has been dry. And, with the "less than" a 20 percent outlook for rain this weekend, it looks like it will be dry heading into August.

Meanwhile, the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for "fair" weather, partly cloudy skies, and "isolated" late afternoon and evening thunderstorms.

The high temperature today is to be in the mid-90s. And the low temperature tonight is to be in the upper 60s. The high Sunday is to be in the upper 90s.

Winds are to be southerly at 10 to 20 mph today.

The high temperature on Friday was 94 degrees, and the overnight low was 66 degrees. The record high temperature for a July 28 is 106 degrees in 1944, and the record low for a July 29 is 63 degrees in 1988.

STATE

Summer sunshine was in short supply in many areas of southern and western Texas on Friday.

Isolated and scattered thunderstorms were present Friday afternoon in the Panhandle, South Texas, Southeast Texas, Southwest Texas, the Far West and over the Gulf near Brownsville.

Other areas of the state had either partly cloudy or mostly sunny skies.

The clouds were wafting across the state on the strength of 5 to 15 mph winds. Along the eastern edge of the state, the winds were from the north, but easterly winds were common along the coast. In other areas, southern winds prevailed.

Temperatures were mostly in the 90s, but it was a cool 78 at Guadalupe Pass in the Guadalupe Mountains at 3 p.m. The high temperature was a 97 degrees recorded at Waco.

The National Weather Service was forecasting mostly sunny skies on Saturday, with some areas experiencing isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms.

Highs are Saturday were expected to be mostly in the 90s, with temperatures in the upper 80s in the West Texas mountains and along the coast. It could approaach 100 along the Rio Grande.

NATION

A line of heavy thunderstorms crossed New England on Friday, and showers and thunderstorms also were scattered from the Rockies to the Appalachians.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered ahead of a cold front pushing across New England with hail, gusty wind and heavy rain. During the afternoon, the storms extended from Pennsylvania across eastern New York, Massachusetts and southern Vermont into Maine.

Wind caused minor damage to a house near Gorham, Maine, and downed trees in Franklin County, Mass. During the morning, the thunderstorms had produced strong, gusty wind that downed trees south of Cooperstown, N.Y.

Wind gusts over 58 mph were reported at Greenfield, Mass.

A few showers and thunderstorms spread across North Dakota into northwestern Minnesota.

Showers and thunderstorms also developed over the middle Mississippi Valley into the southern Plains and the central Gulf Coast states.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms developed from eastern Wyoming through Colorado into the southern Rockies.

For Saturday, scattered afternoon and evening showers ad thunderstorms were forecast from the upper Mississippi Valley through the middle and lower Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley and the Gulf Coast states to the southern Atlantic Coast. Scattered showers and thunderstorms also were forecast over the northern and central Rockies.

DC-3

As an airliner, the DC-3 allowed for 21 to 28 passenger seats and, as a DST, held 14 sleeping berths.

When World War II came along, Douglas boosted its DC-3 production to about 10,000 airplanes. The Air Corps called it the C-47 Skytrain and the Skytrooper, and the U.S. Navy dubbed it the RD4. The DC-3 also was known as the Douglas Dakota. By 1947 when DC-3 production ceased, more than 10,000 of the aircraft had been built.

"A lot of them are still flying," said Jessup. "They were tough old airplanes. They were simple enough, kind of like a Model T (Ford), to maintain in the field and keep them running."

Maurice "Maury" Rush, another former DC-3 pilot, characterized the DC-3 as a "dependable old airplane, easy to fly, and comfortable."

It was just a nice, good passenger airplane."

"They are still flying all over the world," he said. "It was a good airplane and still is a good airplane."

Jack Edwards, a World War II naval aviator who flew carrier-based fighters, racked up sometime as a RD4 co-pilot.

"It was a terrifically reliable airplane," he said of the DC-3. Performance-wise, the airplane "wasn't any world beater. But we didn't care about performance (in a transport). We wanted reliability. It is just a good old work horse."

"It was the most reliable two-engine transport of its era. It handled well and was good (for making landings) on short, rugged, unimproved fields. It was relatively uncomplicated. It was a comfortable airplane. It was a pilot's airplane."

GAS

Sharp, who is contemplating a run for state comptroller, said the idea could add $800 to a typical family's yearly driving costs "not counting a teen-age son or daughter."

And even a 10-cent-per-gallon hike could cost the country 80,000 jobs, he said.

Among other economic impacts, Texas tax opponents have cited the reduced consumption of petroleum products as a major negative for oil and gas producers in the state.

Sharp told ralliers their best defense is to contact their congressmen and senators in opposition to the idea.

In a lighthearted quote from the cartoon character Popeye, Sharp said ralliers should tell lawmakers, "We've had all we can stands and we can't stands no more."

KENYA

Tourism last year brought in nearly $350 million and has become Kenya's top foreign exchange earner.

After the French couple was killed, the government said it stepped up security to make sure the national parks and game reserves were "peaceful and comfortable havens" for tourists and to ensure the survival of wildlife.

PAPER

"For a number of years, the Herald Examiner has been in an extremely challenging situation," said the statement by Robert J. Danzig, vice president and general manager of Herald Newspapers.

In recent years the Herald Examiner has lost readers to the Los Angeles Times and the Los Angeles Daily News, as well as growing suburban papers.

With a circulation of 238,392 daily and 183,122 on Sunday editions, the Herald Examiner ranks as the 42nd largest newspaper in the country, Ms. Herman said.

Daily circulation peaked at 729,000 in 1967, when the Herald Examiner was the nation's largest afternoon daily. The Newspaper Guild launched a 10-year strike that year from which the newspaper never recovered economically.

"We have weighed these considerations carefully and have reached a conclusion that continuing our ownership of the Herald Examiner is not compatible with the strategic direction of our newspaper company," Danzig said.

Hearst, a privately held company, has acknowledged financial losses at the Herald Examiner but does not disclose specific figures for the newspaper.

HIDES

And Bunton said that if he determines that that the Williams couple were "repeatedly denied" access to information on the hides and horns by government agents, then he will issue "appropriate sanctions."

Government Customs agents seized the horns and hides, videotapes and films of the hunt in April 1988 in San Francisco, Calif., by alleging that the horns and hides were from an endangered sub-species of the Argali sheep.

The government turned the dispute into a "criminal investigation" and sought out American scientists to shore up its contention that the hides and horns were those of endangered sheep, according to the Williams couple.

Clayton and Modesta Williams ascertained that the sheep on the hunt were not an endangered sub-species and that they had secured the blessings of the People's Republic of China, which sanctioned and hosted the hunt, before they took off on the trip.

The Williams couple and the Chinese government hold that the two sets of hides and horns are from the Ovis ammon darwini sub-species of Argali sheep and are not from the endangered Ovis ammon hodgsoni sub-species of Argali sheep that only are found in Tibet along the Sino-Indian borders more than 1,000 miles south of the Chinese Gansu Province where the Williams couple hunted the Argali sheep.

"I am sure those hides mean a great deal to the Williams," Bunton said earlier after he had ordered the government and the Williams' attorneys to settle the dispute out of court.

But "the federal government doesn't want to talk," Kerr has noted.

The government's counsel, Assistant U.S. Attorney John Paniszczyn of San Antonio, so far has declined to talk to Kerr about settling the case before Bunton does so himself in a courtroom setting.

The Williams couple had sought a court order so that they could take possession of the "partially tanned" hides and the horns before the hides deteriorated.

Kerr said that the case is "really important" to the Williams couple, who were invited to Mainland China for the hunt.

Kerr described the hunt as a "once-in-a-lifetime" adventure. "They (Clayton and Modesta Williams) both are avid hunters and 'sportsmen' in the best sense of the word," Kerr said. "They never would consider killing an endangered species."

"The Williams (couple) are absolute supporters of the concept of preservation of wildlife for future generations," Kerr said, and they practice conservation on their ranch land.

A zoologist, a Smithsonian Institution representative who was on the hunt, ascertained that the Argali sheep killed in the hunt were not the endangered sub-species.

And Tian Anshun, director of the Nature Protection and Wildlife Administration of China's Gansu Province Forestry Department, said in a statement that the Williams hunt was "in all respects approved by the Ministry of Forestry" and said that the Argali sheep killed on the hunt were not an endangered sub-species.

"We are committed to protect these (endangered) sheep," Anshun said in a court document, and said he and the Chinese government "strongly object" to the suggestion that the sheep in the hunt were the endangered Ovis ammon hodgsoni sub-species of Argali sheep.

"This is not true," Anshun said, "and our scientists dispute this opinion."

"Since technically these cases are pending, and we desire that she have a fair trial if she is tried on those, I will have no further comment on that," he said.

Ms. Pyeatt had been charged with forcing a 9-year-old boy at gunpoint to have sex with his sister, 11, at the defendant's apartment while she was babysitting. She was also charged with threatening another sister, 8, with the handgun.

According to the children's testimony during the trial, Ms. Pyeatt also performed oral sex on the little boy.

She was convicted only of having "sexual contact" with the boy, which was the indecency charge.

Earlier Friday, McCormack urged the nine-man, three-woman jury not to send Ms. Pyeatt to the state prison system, which he called "Devil's Island." The reference was to the small isle off the South American coast once used as a brutal prison camp for French political prisoners.

The conviction was punishment enough, McCormack said.

"She will forever be different from the rest of the community," the attorney noted. "She will be less than the rest of us. She will always have that mark on her, that Scarlet Letter...there is a basis to save this girl."

Fluke likened probation to posting a sign on the Midland-Ector County line. The sign would guarantee child molesters they could receive a "free ride" following their first conviction.

"What are you going to do to deter this defendant from committing bad acts in the future?" the prosecutor asked. "Can you change someone's character by placing her on probation?"

Fluke also asked jurors to remember the children who testified at the trial. They, like Ms. Pyeatt, also would be marked for life, he said.

These are "events they will carry with them the rest of their lives.

"Someone's character doesn't change overnight," Fluke continued. "Probation is not going to change her character. Character is what someone is when no one is looking."

Jurors then were asked to "send a message" by Fluke.

"Probation is not the answer," he said. "What is going to tell the would-be offenders not to do these types of things? You need to send a message."

Wife's family says Railey files for divorce

ARLINGTON (AP) — Relatives of Margaret "Peggy" Railey, who has been in a vegetative state since her near-strangulation in April 1987, say her husband, Walker L. Railey, is divorcing her.

"That is what we understand," Linda Nicolai of Arlington, Texas, told The Associated Press. But she declined to elaborate, saying her husband, who is Mrs. Railey's brother and serves as the family spokesman, was away at the moment.

According to KDFW-TV of Dallas, Mrs. Railey's relatives said they were notified this week by mail that a divorce petition was being filed by attorneys in Long Beach, Calif. The California courts were closed Friday night and it could not be confirmed whether the petition has been filed.

Mrs. Railey's relatives told the Dallas television station that "irreconcilable differences" were being cited in the divorce petition.

The Dallas television station said the legal guardians of the Raileys' two children, Diane and John Yarrington, also have been notified of the divorce proceedings.

Mrs. Railey is being cared for at a Tyler nursing home and has been diagnosed as being in a vegetative state.

No charges have been filed in the case, but a lawyer who represented Railey said Dallas police have identified the former minister of the First Methodist Church of Dallas as a suspect.

A judge had ruled earlier this week that records detailing a custody agreement involving the Railey children should be opened to the public. KDFW-TV filed a motion last week seeking public access to the records, including details on visitation rights and child support obligation.

Lawyer John McShane, who represents Railey, said he and a lawyer representing the Yarringtons, who have moved for Arkansas, will likely will appeal to keep the records sealed. Koons, anticipating such an appeal, set a date of Aug. 31 for the records to be opened.

McShane could not be reached for comment Friday night by The Associated Press.

Railey, who lives in California, was ordered last December to pay $18 million, after being found financially liable for the attack on his wife.

In a sworn deposition, Railey said he has no assets to pay such a judgment and is making only about $1,000 per month with a California aerospace firm.

Mattox makes pitch before AFL-CIO convention

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — It may be six months until the Texas AFL-CIO considers an endorsement in Democratic primary races, but Palmer Auditorium this week has been the site of politicking by virtually all the Democratic candidates for statewide office.

The labor federation, in its general convention, has allowed only statewide elected officials and congressmen to speak. That has left other candidates to patrol the hallways or set up hospitality rooms at the Hyatt Regency, where many of the 900 delegates are staying.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, who has all but formally announced his campaign for governor, conceded that the constitution of the Texas AFL-CIO forbids it from making an endorsement until January.

But that did not stop him from making a pitch based on his longtime ties to organized labor, any more than it stopped his main rival, state Treasurer Ann Richards, from making the same connection two days earlier.

"This convention is the first battle of 1990, when we fight for the political soul of Texas and the direction of the Democratic party and we fight to determine who's going to redistrict this state," Mattox said.

"My fight is not with Ann Richards," he said. "Ann and Dave (Richards, her ex-husband and Mattox's former executive assistant) have been friends of mine for 25 years...I love them and I love to hear Ann Richards' speeches. My fight is with the Bill Clements clone they're going to put up against us."

But he also played down the value of "cute, folksy rhetoric" and said Texas workers need a tough governor on their side.

"I got Bill Hobby out of the race and I got Henry Cisneros out of the race," he said. "Now I've got one or two others to get out before I get the Democratic nomination, but it's going to happen."

The Teamsters, steelworkers, ironworkers, the United Auto Workers and building trades councils already have recommended his endorsement, he said, adding, "In January I will seek your endorsement."

Mattox criticized calls for neutrality. "The working men and women who withstood the goons, the rangers and strikebreakers to make this labor union — they didn't do it by remaining neutral."

He added, "You've got to decide if you want a ribbon-cutting, speech-giving governor or a tough governor who will make a difference."

Harry Hubbard, retiring president of the federation, which represents approximately 220,000 union members in Texas, said convention organizers asked candidates to tone down the campaign rhetoric. "But of course you can't tell them what to say."

Eldon Soileau of Beaumont, president of the Sabine Area Central Labor Council, said the prohibition against early endorsements saved a bitter floor fight of delegates split between Mattox and Richards in the race for governor and Comptroller Bob Bullock and state Sen. Chet Edwards in the race for lieutenant governor.

While the endorsement, which would require a two-thirds majority, would come only two months before the March primary election, Soileau said, "We'll give the endorsement in January and then we'll get partisan as hell."

Among other speakers Friday, Democratic National Chairman Ron Brown reminded the delegates of the longtime support of the Democratic party for labor unions and assured them that he wanted to be a "pragmatic, common-sense" chairman.

Brown also got cheers when he criticized Michael Dukakis' presidential campaign, which sent its own team to run the Texas general election campaign instead of relying on Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's organization this past fall. "When it comes to running a presidential campaign in Texas, it ought to be run by Texans who know something about the state," Brown said.

U.S. Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, a candidate for attorney general, focused on the growing foreign ownership of American assets and out-of-state control of Texas banks, but he cast no stones at his Democratic rivals as he appealed for support.

Railroad Commissioner John Sharp came in for special praise when he finished his speech Friday afternoon without mentioning his own campaign for comptroller. Hubbard congratulated him for his restraint.

The convention ends today with the anticipated election of Joe Gunn as new president of the federation. Gunn, current secretary-treasurer, is unopposed.

Rocks found in Antarctica thought to be from moon, maybe Mars

WASHINGTON — American scientists are finding rocks from the moon — and perhaps Mars — in the glaciers of Antarctica, and one expert says they may have been slung into orbit by an asteroid collision during ancient times.

"We are certain that these samples are from the moon," said William Cassidy, a University of Pittsburgh geologist.

The rocks, deposited on ancient polar show fields hundreds of thousands of years ago, match chemical characteristics of lunar samples collected by astronauts on the six Apollo lunar missions, he said. Matching the samples create what geologists call "ground truth."

"We don't know from where on the moon they came, but we know they have to (be from places) more widespread than the four percent that we've sampled (by Apollo)," Cassidy said the recent International Geological Congress.

Cassidy said it is believed that the Antarctic moon rocks got to Earth when, in some ancient time, an asteroid smashed into the lunar surface with such great violence that chunks of the moon were slung into orbit. It would take less force to do this from the lunar surface because the moon has only one-sixth of the Earth's gravity.

Once in orbit, the moon rocks could eventually be swept up by the Earth. The lunar material would streak through the atmosphere and then crash into the Earth's surface.

Most such objects hit the oceans, where they are lost, or on land surfaces where they are weathered and eroded beyond recognition.

But in the Antarctic, time is frozen in gigantic sheets of ice that lie virtually unchanged for up to 20 million years. Moon rocks that come to rest there remain untouched and nearly pristine, awaiting collection by Cassidy and his team.

Other types of rocks from space also are found on the frozen polar plains.

Cassidy said two rare samples, called shurgitites, have been found that may have originated from Mars.

"We don't really know if that's the case because we don't have ground truth (matched samples from a known source)," he said. But Cassidy said the fact that moon rocks hit Earth support the idea that other samples could be from Mars.

"The lunar samples...lend credence to the view that you really can hit a planet with an asteroid and knock off a meteoroid and get it into orbit," he said. "This lends credence to the idea that the shurgitites could have come from Mars and are really martian samples."

Final proof, he said, will have to come from a sampling mission to Mars.

Cassidy said that about 12,000 other types of meteorites have been gathered from the ice in Antarctica.

"The meteorites are just lying around on the ice," he said. Most are about the size of a "large olive," but some are as large as grapefruit.

Patrons should walk out on nasty maitre d', professional diner says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nothing — not a soup spill, a burned filet mignon or a cockroach crawling through the salad — turns a restaurant meal into a disaster quite like a nasty headwaiter, says professional diner John Campbell.

His advice: Don't take it sitting down. Complain to the manager. Or simply walk out.

"The degree of humiliation to which a repulsive maitre d' subjects his patrons and their guests can be the most unforgettable part of the dining experience," says Campbell. "Unfortunately, it happens in some of our better restaurants."

Campbell has been rating lodgings and restaurants for the American Automobile Association for the past 15 years. He says restaurants in New York doubtless are the worst for sneering, snarling headwaiters whose unlucky customers forgot to slip them a sawbuck.

The bearded, Australian-born Campbell, 52, says the hapless victims of sadistic headwaiters "can just get up and leave" if they've been seated next to the kitchen door, insulted and forgotten.

"You don't have to eat bad food, and you don't have to be stuck suffering this self-punishment," he said in an interview.

When the atmosphere turns brutish, Campbell takes the offending headwaiter aside and asks, "What seems to be going wrong here? What is my problem and what is your problem?"

If the situation can't be resolved through quiet reasoning, he says, "I would leave." But don't forget to complain to the restaurant's owner or manager.

"He has a desperate interest in the health of his property, and he will listen," Campbell said. "If you tell him you had an unpleasant experience with Monsieur Jacques, he's likely to say, 'Really?' and Monsieur Jacques might not be there next time."

Campbell, who is based in New York, is one of 60 full-time, professionally trained field representatives who are rating restaurants for AAA, the 30-million-member motoring and travel service organization based in suburban Falls Church, Va.

At a news conference Thursday, AAA officials announced they are going nationwide with their "diamond" rating service, which awards five diamonds for the highest-ranked luxury restaurants to a single diamond for informal, family-style eateries serving "good but unpretentious dishes."

No fewer than 72 rating guidelines, developed with the help of Cornell University's School of Hotel Management, will be applied to nearly 7,000 restaurants annually in the United States, Canada, Mexico and the Caribbean for inclusion in AAA's 1990 tour books.

Officials said that means Campbell and his colleagues will eat an average of 10 to 12 meals in different restaurants every week. Each will be scored on everything from parking lots to table flowers, from the taste of the hors d'oeuvres to how discreetly the waiter delivers the bill.

"It is one of the most onerous jobs in the world, dining out for a living," said Thomas R. Crosby, the AAA's managing director for national travel.

Campbell, interviewed over lunch at a five-diamond French restaurant in downtown Washington, agrees that all that eating and drinking can be a health hazard.

Crew shooting magaizne ad overdressed for rodeo

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Photographer Arthur Elgort knew all about high fashion, but a trip to Cheyenne's big rodeo showed the city slicker from New York he had something to learn about cowboy duds.

Elgort came to the 93rd Annual Cheyenne Frontier Days with two models and 10 crew members to shoot a spread for Italian Vogue. But he quickly found out they stuck out like tumbleweeds in Manhattan with their preppie attire.

"We came in with L.L. Bean shoes, Brooks Brothers shirts, little checked chefs pants — I always work in chefs pants," Elgort said.

The entourage was barred from some sections of the rodeo arena because they didn't have proper western wear.

Rodeo organizers are used to the dilemma and have a closet full of plaid, check and fringed shirts along with a stack of straw cowboy hats. But the Vogue crew decided only a shopping spree could solve their problem.

"Everyone in our group must have spent $300... and it will even go over well in New York," Elgort said.

Adviser says Soviets can overcome B-2

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev, a top military adviser to Mikhail Gorbachev, said Friday the Soviet Union will come up with a way to combat the B-2 bomber if the U.S. builds the radar-evading aircraft.

Akhromeyev

Akhromeyev, who capped a visit to the United States by meeting with President Bush in the Oval Office, also told the National Press Club that East European nations are free to "become the kind of nations they wish to become."

Akhromeyev's speech and question-and-answer session was the first by a senior Soviet official at the Press Club since Premier Nikita Krushchev in 1959.

He told an audience that included Adm. William J. Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, that the trip in which he gave historic testimony to Congress had encouraged him that Soviet relations with the United States will continue to improve.

Still, he said although the decrease in tension between NATO and Warsaw Pact countries was "a tremendous accomplishment...the military threat, unfortunately, is still there."

He has traveled this week to Stanford University at the invitation of, former Secretary of State George Shultz, to meetings with private financial leaders in Chicago and New York and to a farm in the Midwest.

The Soviet marshal, wearing his Red Army uniform with 11 rows of ribbons, went from the Press Club speech to a private meeting at the White House with Bush, Vice President Dan Quayle, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

White House press spokesman B. Jay Cooper said in a statement that Bush "reiterated his desire to see early agreement" in the arms control talks. "He was particularly interested to hear the views of Marshal Akhromeyev on the relationship of domestic reform to Soviet security policy," said Cooper.

At the press club, the retired Soviet military chief of staff discounted Bush administration statements that the B-2 stealth bomber will give the U.S. a military edge over the Soviets.

"For every action in life there is a reaction," he said through an interpreter.

"So if the creation, development and deployment of the B-2 is an action, in one way or another there will be some sort of reaction from the Soviet Union," he said.

The House this week voted to suspend production of the B-2 until the Pentagon scales back the high-priced program and said the administration must show the stealth can successfully evade radar detection and penetrate Soviet airspace before production resumes.

Bush and his defense officials have lobbied hard for the bomber as a highly-advanced piece of technology that would far outstrip Soviet radar capabilities.

Akhromeyev repeated earlier statements that U.S.-Soviet negotiations on conventional forces should include naval forces, but did not say the navies should be linked to land-based armies.

The United States has insisted that NATO naval forces not be included in the conventional arms talks in Vienna.

"What we now have is a series of negotiations on the reductions on a number of weapons, but no negotiations have to do with navies," he said. "We believe that's not fair."

"It is our view that there should begin negotiations on their mutual mutual reduction," said Akhromeyev.

Asked whether the Soviet Union would move to squelch democracy movements in Poland and Hungary if those countries move towards independence from the Kremlin, Akhromeyev said Eastern Bloc nations "can be the kind of countries they wish to become."

Attendants tearfully recall Sioux City crash

NATION

"I had my eyes open all the time. When we hit, I saw nothing but grass. I looked around and I saw parts of the aircraft that were slowly coming apart."
— Donna McGrady

CHICAGO (AP) — A flight attendant who survived United Flight 232's fiery crash says she looked out and saw an Iowa field and parts of the jetliner "slowly coming apart."

When the DC-10's tail section where she was seated came to rest, Donna McGrady said she and another flight attendant helped people out of the wreckage and then realized the severity of the crash.

"At that particular time, to come out and to look and to see nothing but debris...," she said, her voice breaking. "I said, 'Oh, God, where is the other part of the aircraft?' "

McGrady and four other United Airlines flight attendants who survived the crash joined three others who helped on the ground at a news conference sponsored by their union, the Association of Flight Attendants.

Seven of the eight working attendants aboard the DC-10 were among the 185 survivors. Rene LeBeau, 23, of Schaumburg, was one of the 111 who died in the July 19 crash landing near Sioux City, Iowa.

Many of the dozens of United employees who attended the news conference dabbed at tears while Ms. McGrady described her joy at seeing survivors emerge from the wreckage.

"I said, 'Thank you, Jesus, for the things that you've done for us because we know there's no other way we could have made it without your presence,' " she said.

"It was so good to see them," said flight attendant Becky Larson, who was not aboard the plane but helped survivors at the crash scene.

"We just hugged them and loved them and kissed them and we were so happy to see them," Ms. Larson said.

Janice Brown, head flight attendant on Flight 232, said she cannot think of anything the flight attendants could have done to save more people, and could not explain how some survived while others did not.

"I'm not going to second-guess God," Ms. Brown said.

Flight attendant Timothy Owens of Baltimore, who was seated in the middle of the plane, said "the tail section of the plane just split apart and I saw a big beam of sunlight just coming through the big opening in the back. And that's when we started to roll over on the right wing."

"I had my eyes open all the time," said McGrady of Detroit. "When we hit, I saw nothing but grass. I looked around and I saw parts of the aircraft that were slowly coming apart."

The flight attendants did not know at first that Ms. LeBeau had been killed, Ms. McGrady said, although they automatically looked for each other.

After the news conference,

Donna McGrady

Chicago-based United held a private memorial service in the same room for her and four nonworking United employees who died in the crash.

Guests hope to get glimpse of dissidents

By KATHY WILHELM

BEIJING (AP) — Dissident Fang Lizhi is the guest who never comes to dinner. He never appears at parties at the U.S. Embassy, where he has lived since early June, but somehow he manages to haunt them.

Guests inevitably peer down halls and around corners in hopes of glimpsing the man whose presence has helped bring U.S.-Chinese relations sink to their lowest level since normalization in 1979.

But even some high-level embassy staff say they have never seen the short, plump astrophysicist or his wife, physics professor Li Shuxian, who is in hiding with him.

The State Department disclosed June 6 that the couple, outspoken critics of China's Communist rulers, had taken shelter in the embassy after the army moved in on pro-democracy protesters in Beijing.

The Chinese government issued arrest warrants for the pair, accusing them of orchestrating the protests.

Embassy officials refuse to say even which of the three walled embassy compounds houses the Fangs.

They may live in comfort in a guest room at Ambassador James Lilleys' home. Then again, perhaps they are hidden from Chinese staff in more secure, but less homey, quarters. Do they use the embassy pool at night when everyone has gone home? Do they watch Cable News Network television, now banned elsewhere in Beijing, off the embassy's satellite dish? Embassy staff only shrug.

Most change the subject or walk away when someone mentions Fang's name.

But now and then someone makes a joke, as when Counselor McKinney Russell turned to a guest at the embassy's Independence Day picnic and asked if he had met Professor Fang. The guest took the bait and asked eagerly to be introduced. Fang, of course, did not attend.

Fang probably would have enjoyed the picnic and the joke. A friendly man with a puckish sense of humor, he often laughs heartily during conversation.

But his calls for the all-powerful Communist Party to allow political debate and even formation of new parties are serious.

"Some people think China doesn't need democracy, but I think human rights are basic. For them to be realized, first of all famous people must take a stand," he said in February, during a relative thaw that preceded the April start of the student movement.

Fang gained fame internationally as China's most articulate human rights spokesman, but his initial renown at home came as China's first physicist to specialize in black hole theory.

He became a hero to many intellectuals in 1987, when the Communist Party ousted him for making pro-democracy speeches it said helped incite student marches. The party distributed copies of the speeches to be criticized during political study sessions, but many readers secretly found themselves in agreement.

Fang was not a frequent visitor at the U.S. Embassy. However, one embassy invitation caused an international stir — to a banquet given by visiting President Bush in February. Chinese police stopped Fang en route and refused to let him attend.

The Chinese government lodged a formal protest with the U.S. Embassy over that invitation, and again when it gave shelter to Fang and Li.

But China mostly vented its ire in newspaper commentaries that branded Fang a traitor and the "scum of the nation," and accused Li of not having "a real Chinese heart."

Newspapers accused the U.S. Embassy of violating international law by sheltering the couple. The embassy was deluged with phone calls from Chinese expressing their indignation.

An ambassador who lives near the main U.S. Embassy compound reportedly complained to the Foreign Ministry that Chinese were standing outside shouting epithets at Fang in the middle of the night.

Chinese police who normally guard foreign embassies have multiplied outside the U.S. facilities since Fang and Li took up residence, and the officers now carry automatic pistols.

Half a dozen uniformed and plainclothes police camp around the clock outside Lilley's residence. They sit on low stools, drinking tea and playing cards, and hang laundry from a small guard booth, giving it the look of a squatter camp.

U.S. security also has tightened. The compound where the ambassador lives used to leave its gates open. Now they are locked and even Americans must show their passports to enter.

The Fangs' options are limited. They can leave the embassy and face arrest, or stay inside as virtual prisoners. The United States has said it would like to reach a compromise with China that would allow the couple to leave for a third country, but China insists they are criminals who must be prosecuted.

Neither side will say if talks are going on.

Meanwhile, one scientific research society has expelled Fang, and a city district people's congress to which Li was elected in 1987 is discussing expelling her.

Staff who answered the telephone at the Beijing Observatory, where Fang works, said his name remains on the list of employees. It is unlikely he will return to work there, however, as long as the current government is in power.

"I am like a soldier who has already crossed the river. There's no way to turn back," Fang said in an interview last year. Never has that been truer.

Chief says Austria told of Bloch contact

WORLD

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Austrian officials said Friday the United States alerted them about a man who visited Vienna often and may have been a Soviet contact for Felix Bloch, the American diplomat suspected of spying for Moscow.

Robert Danzinger, the national police chief, said U.S. officials told Austria on June 23 about the man, who traveled on fake Finnish papers.

"We assume he worked for the KGB," Danzinger said. "We have no information of our own that he is KGB. That information came solely from Washington."

Danziger said the man, whom he did not identify, first visited Vienna in 1979 and often spent weeks or months at a time in the Austrian capital, using papers issued by the Finnish Embassy that were based on a false identity. Bloch began his seven-year tour at the U.S. Embassy in 1980.

The man who "allegedly had contacts with Bloch" left Austria June 11, supposedly for Helsinki, Danzinger said.

Whether Bloch might have met the man in the normal course of diplomatic duties was not known. Bloch, who served four years as deputy chief of mission, had many contacts and regularly attended diplomatic and other parties.

Danzinger said the visitor always registered with police in accordance with Austrian regulations and had not been the object of suspicion until the notice from Washington. Austrian authorities now believe he is the man U.S. authorities suspect of KGB activity, the police chief said.

In Paris, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Friday his country never had any connection with Bloch and "I'm surprised by the fuss over this affair. It's not serious."

At a news conference in Vienna, Danzinger and Interior Minister Franz Loeschnak said Austrian security authorities were told of a possible spy investigation June 23, when the tip arrived about the man with Finnish papers.

Chancellor Franz Vranitzky said earlier this week he learned of the Bloch investigation July 7 from U.S. Ambassador Henry A. Grunwald.

Loeschnak confirmed Friday that Bloch had a "friendship" with an Austrian woman over several years. Danzinger said she was questioned this week after returning from a vacation in Egypt and there was no evidence she had suspicions about Bloch.

The interior minister said the suspect visitor to Vienna also had a relationship with an Austrian woman, and the women apparently were not acquainted. Danzinger said authorities had to assume "neither had any idea of a possible link between Bloch" and the man with Finnish papers.

Bloch, 54, was economics chief in the Vienna embassy in 1980-83, then deputy chief of mission until he returned to Washington in July 1987. He is the highest-ranking U.S. diplomat ever investigated for espionage.

He was put on paid leave June 22 and is under constant surveillance by the FBI, but his travel has not been restricted.

Reports have said he refused to discuss any possible spying activities with the FBI, but The New York Times reported Friday he admitted in a brief interview with the FBI on June 22 to being paid "a lot of money" by the KGB over "many years."

A congressional source in Washington told The Associated Press the FBI believes the KGB recruited Bloch when he was stationed in East Berlin 14 years ago.

Loeschnak said preliminary Austrian investigations of Bloch had been completed and prosecutors received the report Friday. He said they would decide whether further action should be taken.

Suspicions about the diplomat are "the affair of the United States," he said, but "we have to see whether Austrian interests were affected."

"Some things have been established which indicate the activity of a KGB man," Loeschnak said.

Students testing positive for AIDS virus expelled

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Thirteen students and employees were expelled or fired from the state university's medical department here after they tested positive for the AIDS virus, the director of the faculty of medicine was quoted Friday as saying.

Alfredo Pineyro Lopez, faculty head and director of University Hospital, told newspapers here that tests for AIDS were performed on 25,000 students, workers and faculty members at the Autonomous University of Nuevo Leon's medical school, hospital and the technical preparatory school.

Pineyro, interviewed following graduation ceremonies Thursday, was quoted as saying those who tested positive for the AIDS virus were released to avoid transmitting the disease to others.

Pineyro was in meetings Friday and was not available for further comment, said Ingla Guzman of the medical school's public relations staff.

A positive test indicates the presence of AIDS antibodies, meaning the person tested has been exposed to the virus that causes AIDS, but does not mean the person has acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The disease most often is transmitted through sexual contact, although it also can be transmitted by blood transfusions and the sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles by drug abusers.

"We did tests on all teachers, students and workers in this department and 13 cases of AIDS were detected; eight students and five workers," Pineyro was quoted as saying.

Pineyro said he is urging other university departments to do AIDS testing in order to control the spread of the disease.

He said the medical department paid the equivalent of about $9.85 per test, a total of $246,000.

The number of AIDS patients treated at University Hospital has grown from one per month in 1987 to six each month this year, he said, calling the problem "extremely grave."

Many ancient Egyptian treasues undiscovered

By MIMI MANN

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Treasures even greater than those in King Tut's tomb may still be lying under the desert sands of Egypt.

"When I'm asked if there's another Tut's tomb out there, I always answer at least one, maybe more," said Zahi Hawass, director of the Giza pyramids area outside Cairo and the huge ancient cemetery of Sakkara, 11 miles to the south.

"My guess is we've found no more than 30 percent of what's buried. After all, Egypt is 97 percent desert. ... We can't begin to imagine what the sands have hidden."

The tomb of Pharaoh Tutankhamun — King Tut — was found almost intact in 1922 by the British archaeologist Howard Carter.

It took Carter 11 years more to document the hoard of gold, semi-precious stones, furniture and knick-knacks stuffed into the makeshift tomb dug into the hills of southern Egypt's Valley of the Kings.

But Tutankhamun was a lesser king and the discovery of his tomb left archaeologists to wonder what treasures might have accompanied ancient Egypt's great monarchs into the afterlife.

SOME INTRIGUING trophies have eluded both early archaeologists and their modern successors:

■ Mummies and relics of Pharaoh Cheops, whose pyramid on Giza Plateau is among the world's best-known monuments.

■ The tomb of the architect Imhotep at Sakkara, where more than 4,600 years ago he built for Pharaoh Zozer a step pyramid, an architectural feat that quickly evolved into the true pyramid. Generations of later Egyptians worshipped Imhotep as a god.

■ At least seven tombs of royalty and officials from the New Kingdom, the era of Tutankhamun and the Ramses line.

■ The tomb of Alexander the Great, the young Macedonian conqueror who died at the age of 33 in 323 B.C. Records say he wanted to be buried in Egypt's Siwa Oasis, near Libya, but finally was encased in a gold coffin in Alexandria, the Mediterranean city he founded.

■ The 50,000-man army of Persian conqueror Cambyses, which vanished in a sandstorm in 525 B.C. while en route to Siwa to punish the powerful priests of the temple of the Siwan Oracle.

Egyptian officials realize the historical value that any of those finds would entail. But the mammoth job of preserving what is said already to be the world's greatest national storehouse of antiquities has halted treasure hunts.

"I'm trying to keep what's standing, standing," said Sayed Tawfik, chairman of the Egyptian Antiquities Organization. "What I'd like to do is to keep what's buried, buried until we can deal with it. It's usually safer for the pieces not to be exposed to modern pollutants."

AS EGYPT'S population rapidly expands, however, roadways, gas lines and housing projects unearth a vast ancient legacy just beneath the ground. Often, excavations are rescue missions.

Archaeological work in Egypt generally is restricted to the cooler winter months, and last season's work was filled with surprises. Giza director Hawass said the results give a glimpse of what lies ahead when archaeologists begin anew in September.

In January, five magnificent statues that rival the loveliest artwork the ancient Egyptians produced were unearthed in a pit beneath the tourist-trampled courtyard of Luxor Temple. Seventeen more statues, many broken, later were discovered in the cache.

In March, a mummy of a young woman, her Mona Lisa smile frozen in a gypsum mask, was found on Giza Plateau a few feet from a roadway through the pyramids.

Other discoveries ranged from gold to fortresses, some found on sites once impenetrable except by camel or donkey, now accessible by paved roads.

ONE AREA to be surveyed in the fall is Giza Plateau's East Cemetery, a pharaonic burial ground for royalty and officials beside Cheops pyramid.

"I'm sure we're going to find an intact burial of a prince or official, because the area never has been excavated properly," Hawass said.

"In Sakkara, where we know Imhotep is buried, you don't even need to have shovels and picks to find tombs. You can just use your hands, dig in the sand. They're there."

Modern man owes rich finds to the ingenuity of ancient priests, who reburied important pieces to ensure survival during politically troubled times, Hawass said. These caches, which may explain the Luxor Temple statues, give clues to what may still be hidden.

He believes the pyramids area contains at least one major cache from the reign of Old Kingdom Pharaoh Cheops, whose relics include the world's largest pyramid, a full-sized boat and an ivory statue so small it can be held between two fingers.

"I think out there is Cheops' mummy, maybe statues, maybe personal items," Hawass said.

"Four priests were in charge of their safety, but in the next dynasty (after Cheops) his memory soured. There was a revolt. His monuments were damaged, perhaps because he made himself a god."

HAWASS BELIEVES that like the Luxor find the Cheops discovery will be accidental.

"We have magnificent statues of his successors (and) delicate funerary items of Cheops' mother, ... so we know such things did exist," he said.

Empire State Building becomes artist's icon

New York Times News Service

DOVER, N.J. — When Tony Lordi was a little boy in Newark, he could glimpse the Empire State Building from some street corners.

One day when he was 5, his parents took him to see it.

He does not remember the building itself. What he does remember is the little building his parents bought for him, a reproduction plated a funny bronze with a pencil sharpener.

It was a few inches high, and it cost 29 cents. "I was fascinated by it," said Lordi, who is now a gray-bearded 49-year-old art professor at the County College of Morris here.

Today, Lordi makes his own reproductions of the Empire State Building, mostly about six feet high, which is four inches taller than he is.

Instead of bronze, they are covered with all sorts of things like mink, tar and feathers, shells, foam rubber and mirrors.

They sell for up to $10,000 or so, and Lordi is gaining a reputation because of them.

Lordi is represented by the Jack Gallery in the SoHo area of Manhattan, which has shown him twice.

The artist had a show in the spring at Fairleigh-Dickinson University in Madison, and 20 of his Empire State Buildings are on display in, where else, the lobby of the Empire State Building at Fifth Avenue and 34th Street. Thirty-two thousand people a day go through there.

Lordi has another show coming up in November at an alternative space of New York University, Broadway Windows on East 10th Street.

It is heady stuff for an obscure art professor, albeit one who used to be a moderately successful country and popular songwriter who knew Willie Nelson and was recorded by Gene (Be-Bop-a-LuLa) Vincent in the early 70's.

That Lordi flowered again in a brand-new career at an age when most men think daring is a pair of Italian shoes is tribute to his firm decision to go for it.

To "give it my best shot," as Lordi put it, or as in "Rocky V," in which an aging art professor makes it big.

He rented a studio two years ago, made slide brochures shaped like the Empire State Building, and flogged them at major galleries, drafting press releases when he received shows.

It has all come about in the past year or so, in a testament to enormous energy, a talent for do-it-yourself promotion, craft, eye and an artistic vision that is part iconography and part small-boy-in-the-treehouse.

Beyond his earlier fascination with the Empire State Building — or rather his fascination with the 29-cent-pencil-sharpener version, an important distinction — he determined that the building, besides being an arresting work of architecture, was an icon of the age.

"It's probably the most famous building in the world," Lordi said.

Teachers, students get new lessons at shopping center

DALLAS (AP) — Shoppers at the city's newest mall moved from store to store in a spending frenzy, money clutched in their fists and purchases piled up in their arms.

In one establishment, a bag of dirt sold for $1. At the opposite end of the mall, a dollar would buy an original, one-of-a-kind, signed-by-the-artist painting.

So it wasn't exactly The Galleria.

The shopping mall at Callier Center for Communication Disorders was the result of a four-week University of Texas at Dallas summer course in which more than a dozen teachers from around the state taught hearing-impaired students how to work through a project, from start to finish, from brainstorm to achievement.

And the students, who may think they were just having fun, were actually teaching the teachers how to work with hearing-impaired children.

Cognitive Strategies for Hearing-impaired Learners — which is another way of saying, how to teach hearing-impaired students to think — was a collaborative project with UTD, the Callier Center and students of the Dallas Independent School District, said Helen McCaffrey, course instructor.

Teaching students how to think through a problem may not be a priority among teachers of the hearing-impaired, Ms. McCaffrey said.

"Often, cognition gets second place to language goals and curriculum goals set by the state," she said. "There might be a gap between language skills and thinking ability."

Transforming the gymnasium at the Callier Center into a mall became the course project.

It began with some field trips to the mall of all malls: The Galleria. Then the students, from preschool through early elementary grades, brainstormed to design their own stores.

Amy Watts, who teaches fifth-through ninth-grade hearing-impaired students in the Lufkin Independent School District, supervised the conception and creation of A Cookie Store, stocked with slice-and-bake chocolate chip and sugar cookies.

"They knew to slice them and put them on the pan and put them in the oven," Ms. Watts said. "Then we waited nine minutes and opened the oven, and the cookies weren't done. Well, they didn't tell me to turn on the oven. So they learned that you have to think through a sequence of events to get to an outcome."

Before the UTD course, Ms. Watts would have turned on the oven for her students — and given them step-by-step instructions, holding their hands along the way, she said.

"These kids learn so much from their mistakes, and often times we don't let them make mistakes," she said.

The students may have mastered supply and demand and markup — the more popular chocolate chip cookies were $2 while sugar cookies were only $1. But the finer points of retailing — such as not pressuring the customer into a purchase — may have eluded them.

"What do you want, Matthew?" one exasperated clerk asked of a shopper leaning against the store counter.

But Matthew — like any good shopper — quickly put the pushy clerk in his place.

"I'm just browsing," he said, then stomped off.

California woman raises skateboarding pigs

NORCO, Calif. (AP) — Kayla Mull raises petite potbellied pigs that skateboard, squeal and sit up for their supper.

One pig plays "Swine Lake" on the piano; a swimming pig has been known to perform the "swine dive."

"They are new and marginally hip," said Carolyn Gray, a writer for Pet Care Report. "They are friendly, relaxed, and you can housebreak them, which are the big three as far as I'm concerned."

The little swine are selling big in Beverly Hills.

"Yes, it's a trend. If you have your BMW, you have to have a pig now," said an owner of two little pigs who wanted his name withheld because of zoning violations. (The mini-pigs, originally bred in China, can be raised legally only in areas zoned for livestock.)

"They make really darling pets," said Gwenna Blackmore of Rolling Hills Estates. "They are clean, smart, and they are fun."

"They are easier to potty train than a dog," said Micky, Ms. Blackmore's daughter.

Dallas quarterback Scott Secules
...odds on favorite to lose

Cowboys' Secules pauper's potential

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Scott Secules has a big-league arm and unlimited potential.

But his chances of starting at quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys this September wouldn't draw odds in Las Vegas.

Secules is the financial pauper among the millionaire quarterbacks on the team. However, his talent could bring him millions someday down the line.

Secules is even confident he can be a factor when Coach Jimmy Johnson decides on his starter for the Cowboys' NFL opener Sept. 10 against the New Orleans Saints. Johnson won't rule out Secules, who has yet to take a snap in a game although he was with Dallas all of last year.

"Maybe the best surprise out of all of them would be Secules," Johnson said. "He's very intelligent and has a great grasp of the offense. We'll see how he responds."

IN PRACTICE, you can see what Johnson means.

Secules fades back looking to the left then turns and fires an arrow-straight pass to Kelvin Martin streaking down the right sideline.

"Scott Secules, way to go Scott," Johnson shouts.

Secules was a starter for only his senior year at Virginia. The Cowboys drafted him in the sixth round in 1988, but he didn't play a down.

Secules is working on a master's degree in sports psychology. He is learning to use his collegiate training in his major to good advantage.

"I had a frustrating year last season not getting to play but it at least taught me patience," he said. "I'd practice well but never get to play. I just keep telling people my time is coming."

Secules shrugs off all talk of having to compete with Troy Aikman, Steve Walsh and Babe Laufenberg.

"I don't know where I fit in, I'm just trying to make a spot on the team and if I play well enough I hope I'll make starter," Secules said. "I'm not looking just to make the team. The possibility to start is there. It will be decided on the field not on who makes what."

SECULES LAUGHS about his contract which brings him some $100,000 compared to Aikman's $11.037 million deal.

"He's got a point in his and I've got a coma in mine, " Secules said.

Secules had 14 school records at Virginia and was the conference leader in passing efficiency. He led the Cavaliers to their second bowl appearance in 99 years where Virginia beat Brigham Young 22-16 in the All-America Bowl.

Secules learned a lot last year from Danny White, who retired earlier this month.

"Danny was nice the way he helped me out," Secules said. "He taught me a lot. In psychology you study aggression, motivation and enthusiasm. Right now, I'm trying to make all three of those things work for me."

Angels end homestand with victory

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

You want offense? We've got your offense.

You want long balls? Got that, too.

It was excitement at every turn of the base Friday night at Angels Stadium as Midland said so long, farewell and goodbye to East Division teams by downing Shreveport, 10-7.

The technical term for the Angel victory is "a real doozy."

Get a load of these numbers:

■ Four homers, including two straight by Shreveport's Craig Colbert.

■ Seven doubles, four by the Angels.

■ Four lead changes.

■ Except for the Angel half of the fourth, runners reached base safely in every half inning. And for Midland, save for that fourth inning, each lead-off batter reached base safely.

■ And if all this wasn't enough, all the would-be Sinatras in the press box got to sing "Happy Trails" not once, but twice in the bottom of the seventh.

The seventh inning was what finally did-in the Captains, as the Angels added their final three runs of the night to go ahead for good.

Midland first baseman Chris Cron led off the inning with a double which chased Shreveport starter Kevin Meier. Greeting reliever Chris Connolly was pinch hitter Reed Peters, who reached on a single. Peters and Cron both filed past home plate on Connolly's ninth and last pitch, a two-run double by designated hitter Otto Gonzalez. Gonzalez later came in on a sacrifice fly by catcher John Orton.

The Angels, now 20-18 and still in first place in the West, had their second straight four-run second inning to establish an early lead. Cron led things off with a solo homer deep over the left field wall. Steve DeAngelis then walked and, after Gonzalez struck out, Mark Howie lashed a double off the centerfield wall, driving in DeAngelis. After Howie's double, John Orton walked; both came in on a Gary DiSarcina single and a sac fly by Ruben Amaro.

DiSarcina stole second in the inning, but it wasn't without consequence as catcher Steve Decker's throwdown hit the Angel shortstop in the side of the head. DiSarcina fell to the ground, but shook off the pain and stayed in the game.

Midland got another run in the third when Bob Rose doubled and later came in on a wild pitch by Meier.

In the sixth, Howie homered to lead off. Orton, reaching on a single, came in when Amaro grounded out to short.

Howie had most of the offensive spark for Midland, finishing 3-for-4 with a double, homer, two RBIs and two runs scored. Amaro and Gonzalez also had two-RBI nights for Midland.

Colbert, with his two home runs, finished with identical numbers as Howie, 3-for-4, two RBIs, two runs.

Astros want Jays' Bell in lineup

NEW YORK (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays and Houston Astros plan to meet before Monday's trading deadline in a final try to work out a deal for George Bell.

The teams spent the month mulling a possible trade for Bell, the 1987 American League Most Valuable Player, however, talks dropped off this week.

The sides plan to try again before Monday, The Associated Press has learned. After that date, players must clear waivers before they can be traded.

Toronto wants center fielder Gerald Young and also is asking about outfielder Kevin Bass. Along with Bell, the Astros are interested in several young players, including pitcher Todd Stottlemyre and outfielder Rob Ducey.

Several proposals have been made by each club in the last few weeks, and all have been rejected. The Blue Jays have offered veteran infielder Rance Mulliniks as part of a package, but Houston is more anxious to get prospects.

THE BLUE Jays have made just one trade since Aug. 31, 1987, and General Manager Pat Gillick has been nicknamed "Stand Pat" for his reluctance to make moves. On April 30, he sent Jesse Barfield to the New York Yankees for pitcher Al Leiter, who made just one start for Toronto before going on the disabled list with a recurring blister.

Bell is batting .281 with nine home runs and 57 RBIs. But he has feuded with management and Toronto fans, and even some of his friends on the Blue Jays say Bell might need a change of scenery.

The Astros, who consistently rank near the bottom of the major leagues in home runs, have hit just 55 this season. Glenn Davis leads the team with 21 homers and no one else has hit more than eight.

While Bell could supply the power the Astros want, they would be giving up defense if they got him. Bell is a left fielder and has made seven errors this year, along with several other misplays.

Bell, 29, is the final season of a two-year contract worth $4 million. He gets $1.9 million this year and the Blue Jays have an option on him for $2 million in 1990.

If Bell gets traded, his salary increases to $2 million this season and his option year would be worth $2.1 million.

Young, 24, is fast in the field and on the bases but is an unproven hitter. The Blue Jays, having moved from offense-oriented Exhibition Stadium to the defense-dominated SkyDome, want Young for his glove.

Young is batting .230 and has stolen 33 bases. Last year, he hit .257 and stole 65 bases. Bass, 30, is batting .290 and has been injured for most of the season.

Houston Oilers' quarterback Warren Moon (1) works with new "Red Gun" offense during training camp, which promises more bullets for the Houston attack this season.

'Red Gun' loads bullets

Oilers give wide receivers more options

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon will be firing the Red Gun offense with more bullets this season.

In the past, the Oilers four-wide receiver set, nicknamed the Red Gun, has provided "read and react" options only for inside receivers Drew Hill and Ernest Givins.

Now coach Jerry Glanville and new quarterbacks coach Kevin Gilbride are giving outside starters Haywood Jeffires and Curtis Duncan, who ran set routes last season, some options to use depending on what the defenses throw at them.

"We used to just send those guys (outside receivers) down field like decoys," Moon said. "Now they'll get more involved in the routes.

"We've always had a third receiver, but he used to be just a dump-off guy. Now, our third receiver might be one of the wide-outs who's got something going on."

THE OILERS had a lot going on offensively last year. Hill and Givins were the most potent receiver tandem in the NFL.

Hill caught 72 passes for 1,141 yards and 10 touchdowns. Givins caught 60 passes for 976 yards and five touchdowns.

Duncan was a distant third in receiving with 22 catches and Jeffires, injured much of the year, didn't blossom until the playoffs.

But they can expect more opportunities this season, Gilbride says.

"We're going to allow the outside guys to read too, so if you get a double team on the inside, you give him a quick look and go outside," Gilbride said. "That's where the ball should go anyway (if the inside is double-teamed)."

Jeffires, who caught eight passes in two playoff games, expects to continue his late-season success.

"I think it's going to be good, because it'll make our offense even better," Jeffires said. "They won't be able to double up on the slots, and when they do the ball will come outside."

Hill and Givins were frequent double-team victims last season when the Oilers lined up in the Red Gun.

"You wouldn't believe how much pressure this takes off the slots," Jeffires said, "plus how much better it makes Curtis and me feel.

"It's not just that we'll get more balls but that we'll be spreading the offense around."

Moon is working with his fifth quarterbacks coach in six seasons with the Oilers, but the shift from June Jones to Gilbride has been smooth.

Jones, now quarterbacks coach with the Detroit Lions, and Gilbride worked together one season at Ottawa in the Canadian Football League.

"We've changed a few things with the reads and the quarterback's progression," Gilbride said. "We've made subtle changes I think will help."

GILBRIDE IS impressed with Moon, and Moon has been impressed with his new mentor.

"He's the consummate pro, he's always listening to be sure he and I are on the same wavelength," Gilbride said. "When he thinks something needs to be said to reinforce the receivers, he doesn't hesitate to follow up on something I've said.

"That's good. When you're on the field, he's the guy who has to do it."

The lack of drastic changes has helped Moon recover from the loss of Jones, with whom he worked very well for two seasons.

"He's (Gilbride) probably going to improve on what we were doing before and add to that," Moon said. "I think the transition will be easier than, say, the first three years I was here when we were constantly changing everything we were doing."

The Oilers started full workouts at Southwest Texas State in San Marcos Saturday. Their first preseason game is Aug. 12 at Tampa Bay.

Buffalo fears new NFL legislation

Levy, Polian say Plan B rules out player development

FREDONIA, N.Y. (AP) — In two years, Marv Levy and Bill Polian took the Buffalo Bills from 4-12 to 12-4 and within a game of the Super Bowl.

Now they're afraid the rest of the owners are trying to legislate them back to mediocrity.

"You work hard to build a program, then they change the rules to make it harder to keep the players you're trying to develop," says Polian, the Bills general manager and one of the NFL's most outspoken executives.

"They're legislating equality, trying to get even off the field, not on it," says Levy.

TWO THINGS irk Polian and Levy.

— Plan "B", instituted this year by the Management Council to blunt the antitrust suit filed by the union after its unsuccessful strike in 1987. It allowed a team to protect 37 players with the rest becoming unconditional free agents, something the union has been demanding at some point for all players.

— The new restrictive rules on injured reserve, which keeps out for the season any player placed on injured reserve before the final cutdown date. That means that injured starters must be held off the list until after the final cut, forcing teams to release players they would otherwise keep.

"In the past," Polian said. "you got players through the draft, through good scouting. If you had a guy you wanted to develop, you kept him inactive while he learned your system, then you hoped he might become a productive player.

"Now, someone else can come along after you develop him and get the production out of him."

AS HE talked, Polian watched two young wide receivers, Bernard Ford and Don Beebe, streaking by defenders at the Bills' camp at Fredonia State College.

Ford was a fourth-round draft choice last year from Central Florida who developed slowly and spent the season on injured reserve. Beebe, a third-round choice, was Buffalo's first pick this year — in the third round — from Chadron State in Nebraska.

"Both these guys have great potential," Polian said. "But they played at a level in college where they were so much better than everyone they needed only athletic ability. They need a year or two here to develop it."

But will they get the chance?

They may, simply because Levy is planning to play his regulars as little as possible in exhibition games to avoid injury. Other teams are following suit — Cleveland, for example, has less contact in its workouts to minimize injuries.

On the other hand, should it be necessary to hold on to an injured starter until after the final cutdown to 47, a Beebe or Ford might have to be exposed.

In fact, not only has the new system seemed to equalize talent, it has also become expensive.

The more than 200 players who changed teams last year under Plan B cost teams an estimated $10.7 million in signing bonuses that won't be refunded even if the players are cut.

There has also been a lot of recycling.

WHEN THE Bills lost defensive back Martin Mayhew, whom they considered a good prospect, to the Redskins, they grabbed another defensive back, Neal Guggemos, from the Giants. The Giants then signed Greg Cox, a safety from the 49ers.

Polian, who now figures only one or two of the six Plan B free agents he signed has a good chance to make his team. Other teams are faring better — Cleveland has one, defensive end Bubba Baker, currently starting and another, guard Ted Banker, challenging for a starting job.

But Polian maintained that's unusual.

"I remember them getting up at the Management Council meeting and say players would move for the chance to play regularly, not because of money," said Polian.

"Look at the money. And the worst thing about it is all we're doing is changing faces. I don't think it helps anybody except teams like Green Bay or Tampa Bay that can't get players any other way."

STREAKS

Pittsburgh reliever Bill Landrum has pitched 39 consecutive scoreless innings.

STARTERS

Roy Smith, 6-4, is the best-supported starter in the American League. Minnesota averages more than six runs for Smith and is 13-5 when he starts. Smith and the Twins beat Baltimore 10-6 Thursday.

SLUMPS

Cincinnati ended its longest losing streak in 23 years, stopping a 10-game skid Thursday with a 6-1 victory over San Diego.

STOPPERS

Dave Smith failed for only the second time in 23 save chances when he gave up Eddie Murray's three-run, pinch-homer in the ninth inning that sent Los Angeles over Houston 7-5 Thursday.

Giants nip Astros, 3-2

Associated Press

Will Clark helped San Francisco win the first game of its showdown series with Houston, hitting a seventh-inning homer that gave the Giants a 3-2 victory over the Astros Friday night.

The victory extended the Giants' lead to three games over second-place Houston in the National League West.

Jim Clancy, 5-8, got the first two batters out in the seventh inning but Clark hit a 2-1 pitch over the right-field fence to break a 2-2 tie.

It was the 15th homer of the season for Clark, who started the game hitting .206 in eight games of the 14-game road trip.

Don Robinson, 9-7, who had won just once in his last six starts, scattered seven hits for the victory. Robinson struck out seven and didn't walk a batter.

Brett Butler ended a string of 18 hitless at-bats with a single to start the game. He took second on Clancy's throwing error and scored on Clark's groundout to first baseman Glenn Davis.

Craig Biggio and Bill Doran hit consecutive singles off Robinson in the first inning. Biggio was balked to second and scored on Doran's hit.

Doran scored on Terry Puhl's single.

Consecutive doubles by Matt Williams and Terry Kennedy tied the game at 2-2 in the fourth inning.

Cubs 6, Mets 5

Dwight Smith's two-run homer capped a four-run seventh inning, leading the Chicago Cubs over the New York Mets, who suffered their fourth straight defeat.

Vance Law and Shawon Dunston singled to start the seventh off David Cone. Pinch batter Mitch Webster struck out, but Jerome Walton hit a sacrifice fly, driving in Law.

Rick Aguilera, 6-5, relieved and gave up a run-scoring single to Ryne Sandberg before Smith broke an 0-for-17 slump with his fourth homer, making a winner of reliever Calvin Schiraldi, 3-4. Mitch Williams got the last four Mets' outs for his 26th save, tops in the major leagues.

Howard Johnson's three-run homer and Kevin Elster's two-run single in the third inning had given the Mets a 5-2 lead that Cone protected until the seventh.

Cone started the third inning uprising with a single. Dave Magadan doubled and Johnson lined his 26th home run to right field.

Singles by Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds finished starter Scott Sanderson. Gary Carter drew a base-filling walk off Jeff Pico and Elster singled in two runs, extending his hitting streak to 10 games.

The Cubs scored a run in each of the first two innings. Sandberg doubled in the first inning and came all the way home on a wild pitch by Cone.

Damon Berryhill doubled in the second, went to third on an infield out and scored on a bunt single by Dunston, his first of three singles.

Cardinals 2, Expos 0

Ted Power pitched four-hit ball over seven innings as St. Louis beat Montreal and continued their domination of the NL East leaders.

The game marked the end of Vince Coleman's major league record stolen-base streak. The Cardinal outfielder had his record of 50 consecutive steals ended when he was thrown out by Montreal catcher Nelson Santovenia in the fourth inning.

The victory was the Cardinals' ninth in 12 games against Montreal this season, and cut the Expos' lead to 2½ games over the Chicago Cubs.

Power, 3-4, struck out three and walked one batter intentionally. Hard-luck loser Pascual Perez, 5-10, gave up only one unearned run in the seventh. Terry Pendleton's RBI single in the ninth drove in the other Cardinal run.

NL Roundup

Pirates 10, Phillies 5
Phillies 6, Pirates 1

Charlie Hayes' three-run homer keyed a five-run fourth inning as Philadelphia survived the ejection of their starting pitcher, manager and third base coach to beat Pittsburgh and split a doubleheader.

Glenn Wilson and Jose Lind each drove in two runs as the Pirates beat the Phillies 10-5 in the first game for their sixth straight victory, equaling a season high.

The Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning of the second game after Phillies starter Larry McWilliams and manager Nick Leyva were ejected.

Glenn Wilson walked to start the Pittsburgh fourth. Junior Ortiz singled, Wilson stopping at second.

After Jay Bell flied out, Reed walked on four pitches to load the bases.

McWilliams charged home plate umpire Steve Rippley protesting the fourth ball to Reed. Leyva came out to keep his pitcher away from the umpire, but Rippley tossed out McWilliams.

McWilliams stormed into the dugout, kicked his glove about 20 feet, and still was shouting at Rippley as he left.

Leyva continued the argument and finally was thrown out by crew chief Terry Tata.

Reds 4, Braves 2

Ken Griffey hit a two-run single in the 17th inning to lead Cincinnati over Atlanta.

It was Cincinnati's second straight triumph after 10 straight losses.

Atlanta reliever Sergio Valdez, 0-2, got the first two batters in the 17th inning before the Braves' defense collapsed.

Mariano Duncan reached first on an error by third baseman Ed Whited and went to third when shortstop Andres Thomas dropped Todd Benzinger's pop fly in short left field. Benzinger took second and Eric Davis was walked intentionally before Griffey hit a ground single to right.

Norm Charlton, 4-1, picked up the victory. Bob Sebra earned his first save of the year by stopping the Braves in the 17th.

There were 42 players used in the game, 21 by each team. Atlanta used six pitchers, as did Cincinnati.

Rolando Roomes had 12 putouts in right field, a major league record. The previous record was 11 by Tony Armas of Oakland on June 12, 1982.

The Reds had gone ahead 2-1 in the top of the 14th on pinch-hitter Joel Youngblood's RBI double, only to see the Braves tie in the bottom of the inning.

Milwaukee skins Rangers

Jays beat Yankees, but Velarde gets two hits

Associated Press

Robin Yount extended his hitting streak to 18 games with two doubles and Paul Molitor got three hits Friday night as the Milwaukee Brewers routed the Texas Rangers 15-3.

Milwaukee combined 15 hits, four walks and three batters hit by pitches to win for the seventh time in nine games. Greg Brock had a two-run homer for the Brewers.

Yount's hitting streak is the longest in the American League this season. He and Chicago's Ozzie Guillen began the night with 17-game streak.

Molitor tripled and singled during a six-run fifth inning that made it 9-0. Yount contributed a double and Mike Felder hit a two-run single as Milwaukee pounded Mike Jeffcoat, 5-3, and reliever Paul Wilmet for six hits.

Tom Filer, 2-1, gave up five hits over seven innings.

Brock hit his eighth homer in the sixth. He has homered in three of his last four games.

Ruben Sierra hit his 17th home run, a three-run shot, in the Texas sixth. The Rangers had won five of their previous seven games.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 2

George Bell, mentioned this month in trade talks, homered for the first time in nearly six weeks and Toronto Blue Jays beat New York, the Yankees' ninth loss in 10 games.

Former Midland Lee star Randy Velarde, called up before the game from AAA Columbus, had two hits, including a double, and played third base.

Bell hit his 10th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the fifth inning. It was Bell's first home run since June 13, a span of 36 games, and also had an RBI single.

The Blue Jays and Houston have talked recently about a deal for Bell, but have not come close to completing a trade.

John Cerutti, 7-5, gave up seven hits in seven innings. Tom Henke finished with three-hit relief.

Dave LaPoint, 6-9, took the loss as the Yankees fell seven games under .500 for the first time since July 13, 1984.

Toronto took a 3-0 lead in the third inning on Bell's RBI single, a sacrifice fly by Pat Borders and Lloyd Moseby's run-scoring single.

Steve Balboni led off the Yankees' fourth with his 12th home run. Don Mattingly doubled in the sixth and later scored on Balboni's sacrifice fly.

Kelly Gruber doubled in the fifth and Bell homered. The Blue Jays scored in the eighth when Moseby singled, Francisco Cabrera doubled for his first major-league hit and Manny Lee had a sacrifice fly.

Indians 3, Red Sox 2
Indians 2, Red Sox 1

Rod Nichols pitched 8⅓ strong innings in his first start of the season and Brad Komminsk hit a two-run homer as the surging Cleveland Indians swept Boston in a twi-night doubleheader.

The Indians, who began the day trailing first-place Baltimore by four games in the American League East, won for the sixth time in seven tries. They moved into sole possession of second place for the first time this late in a season since August 1976.

Cleveland won the opener as Tom Candiotti pitched a five-hitter and Andy Allanson atoned for an early error by hitting a tie-breaking home run in the seventh in a 3-2 victory.

Boston has lost six of its last seven road games and is 1-15 in one-run games on the road this year.

The nightcap became an unlikely pitching duel between Nichols, 1-1, and Wes Gardner, 2-6.

Nichols was called up from Class AAA Colorado Springs before the game and got his second major-league victory. He entered the game with a 40.50 ERA, having given up three earned runs in two-thirds of an inning against Texas on July 13.

Nichols walked none, struck out a career-high six and did not allow a runner past first base until Danny Heep hit a home run with one out in the ninth. Doug Jones finished for his 24th save.

Gardner, who is 0-5 in his last six starts, held Cleveland scoreless on two hits until the fifth, when rookie Joey Belle led off with a single. Komminsk followed with his fifth home run, giving him 22 RBIs in 22 games since being called up from the minors on June 29.

Tigers 6, Twins 4
Twins 7, Tigers 3

Rookies Mike Dyer of Minnesota and Kevin Ritz of Detroit each got their first major-league victories as the Twins and Tigers split a twi-night doubleheader.

Dyer was the winner in the second game as the Twins beat Detroit 7-3. Ritz outpitched Frank Viola in the opener as the Tigers topped Minnesota 6-4.

Kent Hrbek hit his 14th homer and a two-run double as the Twins salvaged a split. Dyer, 1-2, gave up two earned runs on six hits in six innings.

Jeff Robinson, 1-2, lost in his first start since coming off the disabled list Wednesday. Lou Whitaker hit his 21st home run for the Tigers.

Viola, 8-12, lost in his first start since being mentioned in trade talks with the New York Mets. He gave up five runs on six hits and five walks in five innings.

Ritz, 1-1, allowed two runs on four hits in six innings. He walked six and struck out six and Mike Henneman pitched 1⅔ innings for his third save.

Gary Pettis, close to being traded to the Chicago White Sox for Dave Gallagher, stole three bases and scored twice as Detroit won for just the second time in 10 games. Chet Lemon hit a two-run homer and Tracy Jones also drove in two runs for the Tigers.

Detroit scored three times in the third inning for a 4-2 lead. Jones singled with two outs, stole second and scored on Keith Moreland's single. Lemon followed with his fifth home run of the season.

Pettis drew one of his three walks, stole second and scored on Jones' double in the fifth. Pinch hitter Fred Lynn had an RBI single in the seventh for a 6-2 lead.

The Twins scored twice in the eighth on Randy Bush's run-scoring single and pinch hitter Carmelo Castillo's RBI double.

Marshall, Lenzi win events

U.S. Olympic Festival

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Karyn Marshall thought she could set a world record. She thought about it so much it messed up her performance at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Mark Lenzi knew he could do better on the 4½ somersault dive from a tuck position, and he did.

Marshall still won the heavyweight division in women's weightlifting Friday with a total of 507 pounds. It was not exactly what she sought. The 220-pound Pelham, N.Y., resident had hoped to lift at least 44 more pounds.

"My problem is I think too much," said Marshall, a financial analyst on Wall Street. "I took big jumps today and I didn't give it my full concentration."

Marshall made her first snatch attempt of 100 kilograms (220.25 pounds) and jumped to 110 kilos on her second attempt but was unsuccessful. The crowd cheered the 33-year-old as she attempted the lift a third time, but failed.

The 1987 world champion also missed her clean-and-jerk opener of 130 kilograms (286.5 pounds), but came back with a good lift on her second attempt. She then tried an American record 140 kilos (308.75 pounds) and even was given a fourth try at it, but couldn't lift the weight.

In the 75-kilo class, Arlys Kovach of Tempe, Ariz., equalled her snatch record of 92.5 kilograms (203.75 pounds) and set the first weightlifting record of the festival when she did 115 kilos (253.5) in the clean-and-jerk. That gave her a record total of 457.25 pounds.

Carol Cady of Stanford, Calif., took the gold in the 82.5-kilo class with 407.75 pounds.

Lenzi became the first American to complete the 4½ somersault tuck dive on Thursday, from the 3-meter springboard. But it was shaky, at best.

On Friday, Lenzi, 21, of Fredericksburg, Va., did much better on the dive in the platform preliminaries. He received scores of 6½, 6½, 6, 6 and 7 of a possible 10.

Lopez, King continue torrid LPGA battle

SOMERS POINT, N.J. (AP) — Nancy Lopez and Betsy King, the dominant players on the LPGA Tour this year, continued their battle for supremacy Friday in the opening round of the $225,000 Atlantic City Classic.

Lopez was just a little bit better for the opening 18 holes, shooting a 3-under-par 67 to take a one-stroke lead over King, Elaine Crosby and Chris Johnson. Eight others were two shots back.

The King-Lopez scenario has become familiar this year. King ranks No. 1 on the money list with five victories and a single-season record $503,794 in earnings. Lopez has won once and earned $371,439.

Just two weeks ago, King captured the U.S. Women's Open, beating Lopez by four shots.

"I'd like to pass her on the money earnings list," Lopez said after a round of five birdies and two bogeys on a steamy day. "But my ultimate goal is to win the Vare Trophy."

The trophy is awarded for lowest scoring average during the season and Lopez (70.44 per round) currently leads King (70.76).

Lopez, who has finished in the top 10 in 12 of 14 events this year, birdied three of the first eight holes to go 3-under. She had 10-foot birdies on the third and seventh holes, then added a two-putt birdie from 30 feet on the par-5, 430-yard eighth hole.

Putting got Lopez into trouble at the ninth and 10th holes, where she had three-putt bogeys from 20 and 25 feet. However, a 3-iron to within four feet on the 12th hole got her back to 2-under and a sand wedge to within a foot on the par-5, 535-yard 16th hole gave her one last birdie and the lead.

"This is the best I've played in my career," said the 32-year-old Hall of Famer, who has won 40 times in her career. "I had a great year in 1985 (winning five times), and though I have won once this year, I'm playing the best of my career."

King, 33, is also having a career year, with 14 top-10 finishes in 19 events, highlighted by her Open win, her second major title.

King started on the 10th hole and struggled early on the tight 6,020-yard Sands Country Club, missing the first four greens. She had to sink par-saving putts of 10 feet on the 11th hole and 15 feet on the 12th hole.

"I remember turning to my caddy and saying: 'This is a downer,'" King said comparing this event to her last one, the Open. "Then I got back to business."

King birdied the 18th hole from four feet and made a birdie with an eight-footer on No. 8 despite hitting her second shot in a bunker.

"In a three-day event you don't want to shoot yourself out of it on the first day," King said. "To shoot two-under the way I played, I feel good, especially with no good scores."

Crosby, seeking her first LPGA victory since joining the Tour in 1984, had four birdies and two bogeys.

ANGELS

Colbert's second home run brought Shreveport it's first lead of the night, coming back from a 4-0 deficit to go ahead 6-5 in the fifth. The Angels, though, regained the lead in the sixth.

The Angel win leaves the team with a 14-26 record against the East. Shreveport won the 10 game season series, 7-3. The Caps also won the five game stand at Angel, 3-2.

With a 1-for-4 night at the plate, Rose extended his hitting streak to 13 games; Peters' has hit safely in eight straight; DeAngelis' seven game streak came to and end.

Midland opens a brief five game road trip to San Antonio tonight and will return home next Friday to open a 10 game homestand against El Paso and Wichita.

ANGEL NOTES: John Orton is 13-for-30 in his last nine games for a .433 average over that span ... Otto Gonzales is hitting .462 (12-for-26) in the last nine ... Mark Howie has collected 30 hits in his last 86 at bats for a .349 mark over 24 games ... Chris Graves and Scott Cerny, both riding slumps, sat out again Friday. Graves has just 15 hits in his last 75 trips (.200) and in his last five games is 2-for-21 (.095) ... Cerny, in his last 11, is 5-for-42 (.119) ...The Angel bullpen is 4-6 in the second half of the season ... July has been a bad month for the Haloes, who are 9-15 with just three games left in the month ... Fridays, though, continue to be hot days for the team, as is evidenced with a 13-6 record.

Sutton, Tewell share Buick Open golf lead

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Hal Sutton and Doug Tewell, two players trying to end long dry spells, shared the lead after Friday's second round of the Buick Open.

Tewell shot a second-round 6-under-par 66 and Sutton had a 68 over the 7,014-yard course at Warwick Hills, about 50 miles north of Detroit. They were tied at 9-under 135 after 36 holes.

Tewell, who turns 40 next month, has four Tour victories but none since the 1987 Pensacola Open. He has made the cut in his last nine starts and currently ranks 109th on the money list with $81,815. His best finish this season was a tie for 12th at the Colonial in May.

Sutton, 31, won both the Tournament Players Championship and the PGA title in 1983 but hasn't had a victory since 1986, when he won the Phoenix Open and the Memorial. He's 18th on the money list with $294,172.

First-round leader Leonard Thompson, seeking his first PGA Tour victory in 12 years, was a shot behind the leaders, tied with Australian Wayne Grady, Mark O'Meara and Joel Edwards.

Tewell, starting at 3-under, had two birdies and a bogey on the front nine, then charged the back nine with five birdies.

Tewell has a history of slow starts and trong finishes at the Buick Open. He was runnerup to Ben Crenshaw in 1986 after a 65 in the final round and closed with a 64 last year.

"It's real hard to play catch-up," Tewell said. "I've had good Sunday rounds here but always had to come from two far back in the pack, so I've just got to stay closer.

"I need a good finish. I want to get into the PGA Championship. That was my goal when I came here."

Sutton, playing the back nine first, was at 1-under for the day before he birdied his last three holes.

"I thought the golf course played harder than yesterday," Sutton said, noting that an overnight rain left some water in the fairways and a brisk north wind made some holes play longer. "It was gusty enough to make you do a lot of thinking today.

"I feel pretty good. Nobody's running away with it. I don't think there is any such thing as a leader at this point."

Grady, who seems to have shaken off the disappointment of finishing second in a playoff with Mark Calcavecchia and Greg Norman last week at the British Open, missed a chance to share the lead when he bogeyed his final hole.

Grady, who had been pulling most of his shots left all day, hit his drive on No. 18 behind three trees, nearly out of bounds. His second shot landed in the left greenside bunker and he two-putted for his only bogey of the round.

Hillin involved in four-car NASCAR practice crash

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Ken Schrader has only one NASCAR Winston Cup victory. It came a year ago in the Diehard 500 at Talladega Superspeedway.

Schrader, who will start third in Sunday's 500-mile race on the high-banked 2.66-mile oval, is just one of six drivers who have recorded their only triumph in NASCAR's premier stock car series here, including Midland's Bobby Hillin Jr.

Richard Brickhouse won the inaugural Talladega race in 1969 and, since then, other first-time winners were Lennie Pond, Dick Brooks, Ron Bouchard, Midland's Hillin and Schrader.

Hillin had some more bad news Friday. A four-car crash during a final practice session Friday at Talladega Superspeedway shuffled the lineup. There were no injuries, but the primary cars of Hillin, Larry Pearson, Brett Bodine and Dale Jarrett all were badly damaged in the crash that began when Pearson and Hillin came together on the main straightaway of the 2.66-mile, high-banked oval at more than 190 mph.

Team representatives said all four drivers would go to their backup cars for the 500-mile race and would practice in those cars today.

NASCAR rules automatically move any qualified driver to the rear of the starting lineup if they change to a backup car for any reason.

Hillin, who won this race in 1986, had qualified 14th, but will start 38th.

Pearson, who was 17th, will start 39th, followed by Bodine, who had qualified 20th, and Jarrett, who was 29th.

"I don't believe in jinxes," Schrader said Friday between practice sessions at the steamy speedway. "I believe it's easy to win a race here when you shouldn't have. I would rather have won my first race somewhere else.

"We were running fourth here on the last lap last summer and ended up winning the thing," he said. "That's happened other places to other people, but not as often as it happens at Talladega.

"There's some people here who have won races that are not capable of week in and week out winning a Winston Cup race. They've won because of the characteristics of the track and because of the draft."

Schrader came to Winston Cup racing after establishing himself as one of the nation's best short track racers with more than 400 victories.

"I don't think I'll fall into the group who've only won at Talladega — or at least I hope I won't," he said.

There have been 18 different winners in the 20 summer races at Talladega, with only Earnhardt and Darrell Waltrip winning twice.

Schrader is currently 10th in the season standings, trailing leader Dale Earnhardt by 343 points.

"Realistically, I know my chances aren't as good at winning the title as they were when we left Daytona in February," Schrader said. "But, realistically, our goal is still to win it. We've got a shot, but we're going to have to do everything right.

"We need a bunch of top five finishes and then some of those guys up there need to have some trouble.

Jimmy Means, a Winston Cup veteran who never has won a race, was the fastest second-day qualifier Friday.

Means, who had a fast lap of 185.387 on Thursday, jumped all the way to 188.798 in Friday's session.

That would have been good for the 19th spot on Thursday, when the top 20 positions were set for Sunday's 41-car race.

Phil Barkdoll, who stood on his Thursday lap of 188.556, followed by Derrike Cope, Neil Bonnett, A.J. Foyt and Joe Ruttman, all of whom stood on their first-round laps.

Ricky Rudd, at 187.115, was second among the 11 drivers who made qualifying attempts on Friday.

Practice for the race will continue Saturday, sandwiched around the ARCA 500-kilometer late model stock car race.

Dale Murphy finds homer swing

ATLANTA (AP) — Dale Murphy has found his home run swing, lost for more than a year.

Why it disappeared, nobody knows. Nor can anyone be sure why it suddenly returned, though Murphy certainly has been working hard to regain the stroke.

This much is certain: Murphy capped a nine-game power surge Thursday night by matching two major-league records when he stroked two three-run home runs in one inning. The 10-run sixth inning gave the Atlanta Braves a 10-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The 12-year veteran, who owns two National League Most Valuable Player trophies, also beat the Giants Wednesday night with a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly in a 5-4 triumph that snapped a six-game losing streak.

Murphy, who has hammered 345 home runs in his career, hit only 24 last season and had only six until nine games ago. Since then, he has hit five homers and driven in 14 runs to lift his totals to 11 homers and 54 RBIs for the year.

"What he's done, we haven't witnessed in a year now," Braves manager Russ Nixon said. "Heck, it's great. He probably won't continue that hot, but I'm hoping the consistency starts staying there.

"I know he now feels good about things as far as being able to hit home runs. I know it bothered him and I know he's relieved."

"I was certainly concerned," Murphy said of his lack of home runs this year. "I've been working recently on getting a ... flatter swing. I had too much of an uppercut. So I've been trying to hit the ball on a line.

"It feels better obviously the last couple of night, but it's something I have to work on every day. I only hope it keeps going, but I can't predict what will happen tomorrow," he said.

"I didn't feel it was a matter of age or health. I'm healthy. I just wasn't swinging the bat good," the 33-year-old Murphy said. "I feel like power is the result of taking good swings."

"We woke him up, I'll say that," San Francisco manager Roger Craig said. "Something happened, I don't know what."

Murphy's two home runs in one inning tied a record shared by 19 other players. The last to do it was Andre Dawson of the Montreal Expos on Sept. 24, 1985. The six RBIs in one inning equalled a record shared by nine other players, the last being Dawson in the 1985 game.

Murphy became only the second Brave ever to hit two homers in one inning. The other was Robert Lowe of the Boston Braves in 1894.

"To see Murph hitting the ball like that is certainly a welcome sight," said Tom Glavine, the left-hander who was the beneficiary of Murphy's outburst and improved his record to 9-6.

"He's been swinging the bat a lot more aggressively the last week or so. You can't expect him to hit two home runs and drive in six runs every night, but just the way he swings the bat shows how much better this team is when he's going like that," said Glavine.

Wiggins given reinstatement

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA and the league's players association agreed Friday to grant Michell Wiggins' application for reinstatement. Wiggins was banned from the league on Jan. 13, 1987, after testing positive for drugs.

Wiggins, 29, played one season with the Chicago Bulls and three with the Houston Rockets.

Under the terms of the Anti-Drug agreement between the NBA and the players association, Wiggins was permitted to apply for reinstatement after two years.

"On the basis of our extensive investigation, it appears that Mitchell Wiggins is drug-free," NBA Commissioner David Stern said in a statement. "While there can be no guarantees against a relapse, all evidence is that he is constructively dealing with his addiction. Therefore, I think it is appropriate that his application for reinstatement be granted."

Casper finds putting flair

British Seniors

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — American Billy Casper putted with his old flair to lead Bob Charles of New Zealand by two strokes at the halfway mark of the British Seniors Open golf tournament Friday.

"If I keep playing this way then nobody is going to catch me," Casper said after taming cold and windy conditions.

He shot a 69 for a 4-under-par 136 on the 6,480-yard Ailsa course.

Charles, second on the U.S. money list after four wins, is the only other player under par at 138.

The left-handed New Zealander shot a 68, even though he missed from five feet on the third hole and from even shorter range at the 12th.

Casper, meanwhile, is putting with the consistency that won him the U.S. Open in 1959 and 1966.

"I had 30 putts yesterday and 31 today," he said.

"That is a lot less than my usual average on the U.S. (seniors) circuit this year and it makes a world of difference. If I could average 30 putts a round, I would win most tournaments I play in."

Two other Americans, club professional Larry Mancour, 54, and Bert Yancey, a recent recruit to the senior ranks, also had 68s. Mancour's total is 140 and Yancey has a 143.

Mancour, who is building his own course in Michigan, followed two birdies with an eagle two at the 13th, where he holed a 175-yard three-iron shot.

Yancey, 50, had a remarkable story to tell — and not about the putt of only two feet that he missed on the last green that would have given him the best score of the day.

A formidable golfer in the '60s and early '70s, he was then in and out of hospital 16 times, for periods varying from nine months to a week. He suffered from "a manic depressive illness, almost like epilepsy".

It was only when they put Yancey on different medication in the early 80s that he was able to play again after an absence of 10 years.

Now he is back to his old self, although he is a little disappointed to have won only about $80,000 in the past 11 months.

"I should be winning tournaments again but I expect it is going to take a little more time to get back into the swing," he said.

Strawberry: Mets playing like also-rans

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets, defending National League East champions, are playing like also-rans, Darryl Strawberry says.

And the possible addition of left-hander Frank Viola, the American League's Cy Young Award winner in 1988, won't help, the Mets right fielder said.

"We don't want to win," Strawberry said after the struggling Mets were swept in a three-game series by the Pittsburgh Pirates Thursday at Shea Stadium. "I might as well pack up ... and go home.

"Half the time the guys here don't care. They're just going through the motions. These guys want to sit around and play cards."

Strawberry, hitting only .230 — 36 points below his career average — admitted that he was not having a good season, but he was not letting down, although he has been criticized occasionally by the media for lackadaisical play.

"I went out and played with a broken toe," the Mets' slugger said in a story published Friday in Newsday. "We got guys who don't take care of themselves."

Strawberry said he didn't think a trade for Viola was necessary. The Mets have been talking to the Twins about Viola, and offered pitchers Rick Aguilera, David West and Kevin Tapani. The trading deadline is Monday.

"Our pitching's not the problem," Strawberry said. "The guys got to prove to themselves that they are capable of winning. It's s shame the way our offense has been.

"The main guys are not producing; you don't produce, you don't win. Guys have to care a little more. They can't expect me and Howard (Johnson) to do it every day."

Johnson, who is hitting .299, leads the Mets in home runs and RBIs with 25 and 62, respectively. Strawberry is second in homers with 22 and in RBIs with 52.

Strawberry also was critical of several of his teammates for watching on television the end of the Montreal-Philadelphia game Wednesday.

Redskin quarterback in hospital with back injury

Associated Press

Doug Williams, who quarterbacked the Washington Redskins to a Super Bowl title two years ago, has been admitted to a Virginia hospital Friday for a back injury.

Team officials said Williams will be treated with bed rest and traction for at least one week.

Williams, 33, missed four weeks of playing time after having his appendix removed last season and temporarily lost his starting job to Mark Rypien. He finished the season as the Redskins' starter, but was expected to battle Rypien anew for the starting assignment during training camp.

On Sunday, Williams disclosed he had sustained the back injury about six weeks ago while running on a treadmill. The injury was initially diagnosed as a nerve problem in his right leg.

The quarterback has already missed a week of training camp. Team officials said no decision on Williams' playing status will be determined until the treatment is complete.

In other news around the NFL training camps:

Cleveland Browns

Running back Kevin Mack joined Cleveland's training camp after spending a month in rehabilitation following his arrest on drug trafficking charges.

"I'm a little nervous now with all eyes on me, but it's something I'm going to have to deal with," Mack said. "I don't know if I have the right words to say how badly I feel about what I've done, what I've put my family through or the embarrassment I feel.

"To my teammates, I apologize for causing them so many problems."

Earlier Friday, Mack finished a month-long drug rehabilitation program at the Cleveland Clinic. After the news conference, Mack went with the rest of the team for a scrimmage against Buffalo in Edinboro, Pa. He did not plan to play.

Seattle Seahawks

The Seahawks announced Friday that fullback Chris McLemore, a two-year NFL veteran who was with the Los Angeles Raiders last season, has retired. McLemore, 25, signed with the Seahawks as an unprotected free agent last March.

An 11th-round draft choice of the Raiders in 1987, McLemore was released during the exhibition season. He was picked up by Indianapolis and played two games with the Colts before being waived and re-signed by Los Angeles.

In his 12-game NFL career, he had 17 carries for 58 yards.

NFL Training Camps

Green Bay Packers

Holdouts Tim Harris, Tiger Greene and Kenny Stills were in the Green Bay lockerroom Friday, although none of the three defensive players has signed a contract.

Harris, a linebacker who led the team with 13½ sacks last season, is seeking a two-year contract. The Packers say they have offered a two-year contract worth $1.2 million with base salary and incentives.

Greene, a reserve defensive back, is thought to be close to signing. Stills has been a starter the last 2½ seasons at free safety.

Houston Oilers

Running back Allen Pinkett and wide receiver Curtis Duncan made Friday's deadline for reporting to the Houston camp when they agreed to terms.

The team also agreed to terms with third-round safety Bubba McDowell and fifth-round nose tackle Glenn Montgomery, and re-signed safety Craig Birdsong, who was cut after three games with the Oilers last season.

Pinkett, who is entering his fourth year with the Oilers, finished second in rushing during the 1988 season with 122 carries for 513 yards and scored seven touchdowns while rushing for an average 4.2 yards per carry.

Pittsburgh Steelers

Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll appears to be ready to add the shotgun formation to his offense.

The shotgun formation has been in wide use around the league since the 1970s. Friday's practice showed why it has been missing from Pittsburgh's playbook.

With backup Todd Blackledge at quarterback, Dermonti Dawson snapped the ball 2½ yards, half the distance to Blackledge. During the warmup, center Chuck Lanza snapped the ball high to Blackledge, who let it slip through his hands and bean him.

Starter quarterback Bubby Brister took the first snap from Dawson. It was high and away, but Brister snagged it and threw an eight-yard pass over the middle to halfback Warren Williams.

Detroit Lions

Detroit rookie Rodney Peete may be winning the team's quarterback battle. Peete has been impressive since training camp opened at Oakland University, and coach Wayne Fontes said Friday the former Southern Cal star looks better with every practice.

Peete, the club's sixth-round draft pick, is one of five quarterbacks battling for the starter's job. The others are veterans Chuck Long, Eric Hipple and Rusty Hilger, and free-agent Bob Gagliano.

Another athlete tries two sports

By JOHN F. BONFATTI
AP Sports Writer

FREDONIA, N.Y. — Call him talented. Call him athletic. But don't call him Bo.

"I don't consider myself the next Bo Jackson," said Brian Jordan, who, like Jackson and Deion Sanders, wants to pursue two sporting careers: football and baseball.

For Jordan, baseball season is over for now. After spending 11 games with the St. Louis Cardinals Class A St. Petersburg team this summer, Jordan traded in his red Cardinals cap for a red Buffalo Bills football helmet.

The Bills made the University of Richmond player their seventh-round draft pick in this year's NFL draft and Coach Marv Levy says he is a legitimate candidate to make their roster as a safety this fall.

"I think he wants to play football," said Levy. "I think he's going to be in the big leagues in football right away if he comes through for us."

The baseball Cardinals feel the same way. According to Jordan, St. Louis scouting official Ted Simmons made one last plea with Jordan to stay with St. Petersburg after watching him bat .350 with two home runs, a triple and four doubles in his brief time in Class A ball.

"He told me, 'I think you're making a big mistake (by leaving to join the Bills),'" he said. "He said, 'I think you're going to make the big leagues.' He was doing his best to change my mind. But he can't make decisions for me."

It's almost certain Jordan would have been drafted higher than the seventh-round in football were it not for the uncertainty about his baseball plans and the fact he broke his left ankle during the Senior Bowl last January.

As the Bills training camp opened this week, Jordan's ankle was taped and he acknowleged it was still a little sore.

"When I run, it bothers me," he said. "But I'm a competitor and as long as the doctor says it's going to be sore as long you keep playing, I'm going to do it. I'm not full-speed right now."

Jordan didn't know why more athletes are deciding to try to play two sports professionally. But he did say that he has played both sports all along and he was critical of those athletes he felt are just using their versatility as leverage in contract negotiations.

"Guys like Hart Lee Dykes (the New England Patriots draft choice who recently signed a contract with the Chicago White Sox), he hadn't played baseball in two years and he was using it for barganing power," he said. "That kind of hurt the athletes who have been doing it all along."

Like Jackson and Sanders, Jordan is confident he has the ability to play at the highest levels in both sports.

Astros release Bob Knepper

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros on Friday released pitcher Bob Knepper, the winningest lefthander in club history.

Knepper, who became embroiled in a controversy last season when he said there was no place in the major leagues for a woman umpire, had struggled this season with a 4-10 record and a 5.89 earned run average in 22 appearances. Since winning May 29 at Chicago, he was 1-4 with a 7.36 ERA.

In other moves Friday, the Astros optioned utility player Greg Gross to Tucson. Knepper and Gross were replaced on the roster by minor-leagues Harry Spilman and Eric Anthony.

Knepper had been scheduled to start Astros' game Tuesday against the Los Angeles Dodgers. But hours before game time, he was scratched in favor of Rick Rhoden.

In an appearance last Saturday against Philadelphia, Knepper failed to protect a 2-0 lead when he came on in relief in the sixth inning. A walk and single were followed by Darren Doulton's three-run home run.

Manager Art Howe was cheered when went to the mound to remove Knepper.

Knepper, 35, has a 93-100 career record and was in the club's top 10 in several categories. His 946 strikeouts rank him seventh on the club's career list.

Gross, 36, started his career with the Astros in 1973 and made the club this season after coming to training camp as a non-roster player. He was batting .197 with three RBIs in 50 games.

Anthony and Spilman were scheduled to join the Astros for Friday's game with the San Francisco Giants.

Anthony, an outfielder, was batting .300 for the double-A Columbus Mudcats and was leading all minor-league players with 28 home runs. He has a 17-game hitting streak, during which time he has hit eight homers and driven in 16 runs.

Anthony, 21, has played only 295 games in the minors, but is hitting .281 with 67 homers and 214 RBI. He was a Southern League All-Star this year.

Spilman, 35, a first baseman-outfielder, was invited to the Astros camp without a contract this season.

A caterpillar crawls along a branch. So unsightly and useless is he that, at best, he is scorned, at worst, exterminated.

A grain of sand, one of an infinite number, lodges within an oyster's shell. It is coarse and hard, worthless and unwanted.

And then, there are people. They are restless, a bit lonely sometimes, and apprehensive about the future. They enter churches and speak to God.

From the cocoon, a gaily-colored butterfly emerges. People paint pictures of it; children try to claim it as their own.

From the oyster, a pale, creamy pearl is taken. It is admired, sold for a small fortune, prized.

So, God changes the lowly caterpillar and richly clothes the grain of sand. How much more can He change the lives of those who ask it of Him!

God awaits you. Come meet Him in His house this week.

Graham tackles Eastern Europe

Associated Press

That durable, old American evangelist, Billy Graham, after packing stadiums of Great Britain for a month, flew into Hungary this week, proclaiming its religious life at "a great historical turning point."

He said changes taking place there "are good for the Hungarian people" and "also good for our world."

After his lengthy stay in Britain, preaching to royalty in Windsor Castle and to multitudes in London's tough East End, he moved into communist territory, praising its "new openness" and "spirit of creativity."

"I believe our present visit is another sign of this new spirit of openness and change," he said, noting that for the first time in Eastern Europe he would be preaching in an open-air arena, Budapest's People's Stadium.

His meeting there this Saturday night is being sponsored by the Ecumenical Council of Churches in Hungary and Council of Free Churches in Hungary, in cooperation with Hungary's Roman Catholic Bishops Conference.

Also, for the first time in Eastern Europe, he said an organized system was being set up for follow-up church nurturing of those who make decisions to accept Christ.

Graham, 70, who for 40 years has been setting new evangelistic records in his worldwide crusades, set another new one in Britain, from which his services were carried by national television networks in 30 African countries.

This added a TV audience estimated at 22 million to 30 million, including 8.5 million at 15,000 meetings organized by African churches. It was termed the largest single outreach and biggest simnultaneous audience in Graham's career.

In his 13 meetings in Britain, the last one in a rain-drenched Wembley Stadium, attendance totaled 1.2 million, of which about 80,500 made commitments to Christ.

On his arrival at Budapest airport, Graham, in a statement received in New York, applauded removal of trade barriers, opening to individually owned enterprises, alternate political parties and other efforts at democratization. But he added:

"The issues which face our world are fundamentally moral and spiritual, and they cannot be satisfied by economic or political solutions alone.

"How tragic it would be if Hungary fell into the same trap as many in my own country, and gained the whole world, but lost its soul. Material progress is important, but it can make us forget God and his will for our lives.

"All too often economic progress and expanded freedom have been accompanied by moral and spiritual decay, leading to a host of social ills such as alcoholism, drug abuse, disintegration of families, loneliness, crime and lack of compassion for others."

Graham, who has preached directly to more than 100 million people, more than anyone in history, has several times filled churches and cathedrals in the Soviet orbit, but not before in his familiar stadium setting.

Making his fourth visit to Hungary, he said indications abounded of revitalized church life — new buildings, expanded publications, youth rallies, frequent religious conferences, church-operated schools.

Dream inspires woman to rebuild crumbling Big Bend area church

By HOLDEN LEWIS

SHAFTER, Texas (AP) — Three weeks after her 5-year-old daughter died, Viola Short awoke from a dream that inspired her to turn from tragedy to action.

Mrs. Short dreamed she saw her daughter Yvette on a mountain overlooking Shafter. She was admiring the prettiness of the little town, marred only by the crumbling adobe walls of the old mission church. In the dream the little girl asked, "Why don't you clean it up?"

It took Mrs. Short a decade, but she did just that, and today Mass is again held regularly at the restored 99-year-old Sacred Heart Catholic Church, one of four old missions in the remote Big Bend country.

Now home to about a dozen families, a stop on the lonely road between Presidio and Marfa, Shafter had a population of about 4,000 when Mrs. Short's grandfather moved to the silver-mining boom town during its heyday at the turn of the century.

The old mission church, built by miners, was badly eroded by weather when Mrs. Short dreamed of it in July 1979, shortly after her daughter was killed by a drunken driver.

For a long time Mrs. Short only thought about restoring the church — the project seemed so massive.

"The church there in Shafter was terrible," she said. "You could see the adobe inside and outside."

The two-story church was built between 1888 and 1890 by miners who knew more about blasting holes in the ground and hauling out ore than building houses of worship.

The structure was simple and pretty. Adobe walls almost two feet thick were covered with white plaster. Windows were cut crudely into the walls. A beautiful ceiling made of thin strips of dark wood ran the length of the 120-foot-long building, from the choir loft to the altar.

But the miners didn't install rain gutters. And they didn't install a drainage system around the foundation. Over the years, the infrequent rains took their toll as water ran down the outside walls and seeped under the foundation. The plaster covering the adobe began chipping off from the bottom up.

After almost 100 years, plaster had chipped to chest height in some places. The adobe slowly dissolved with each rainfall. Mrs. Short would think about her dream whenever she drove past the crumbling old church.

"I couldn't see why people couldn't raise enough money to fix it," she said.

"Something else that attracted me to that church is a statue of Jesus — you can move the arms and legs. They have so many beautiful things in there. I said to myself, 'What's going to happen to those statues if the church falls apart?'"

Mrs. Viola Short organized the restoration of the 99-year-old Sacred Heart Church and its grotto to Our Lady of Lourdes in Shafter.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Nonviolence workshop planned at Peace Farm

AMARILLO — The Red River Peace Network and the Peace Farm will sponsor "Deepening the Roots," a Fellowship of Reconciliation (FOR) workshop on active nonviolence, at the Peace Farm Aug. 5 and Aug. 6.

Dan R. Ebener from Omaha, Neb., a past FOR national council member, will lead the workshop. Participants will explore the religious roots of nonviolence, its history and application.

The Peace Farm is located directly across State Highway 60 from the Pantex Plant, the only final assembly point in the U.S. for nuclear weapons. The farm has sponsored educational peace gatherings on the anniversary of the Hiroshima bombing each year since its founding in 1986.

The weekend fee ranges from nothing to $30 and includes food, bedroll or camping space, study materials and the cost of the speaker. Red River and the Peace Farm use a sliding fee scale at all of their events to ensure that no one is excluded because of an inability to pay. Those who pay a higher fee help subsidize those who cannot pay as much.

FOR is an international peace and justice advocacy group, formed by people of faith in 1919, right after World War I. Although its original focus was Christian, it has expanded to include most world faiths.

Red River Peace Network is an affiliate of the FOR and is composed of groups in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, which work for peace and justice.

For more information or to register, contact the Peace Farm at HCR 2, Box 25, Panhandle, Texas, 79068, or call 806-335-1715.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your ability to influence others will be a major plus. Organize your thinking, particularly where long-range financial planning is concerned. Rivals may try to pull the rug out from under you, but you are a born survivor. Your eloquence when you present ideas will boost your financial fortunes later this year. Prominent people seek your views. Do not forget to enlist the help of those behind the scenes.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: auto pioneer Henry Ford, baseball manager Casey Stengel, Rep. Patricia Schroeder, actor Ken Olin, singer Paul Anka, director Peter Bogdanovich, author Emily Bronte, actors Arnold Schwarzenegger and Edd Byrnes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Significant relationship gains are possible. A reconciliation is likely if you make the first move. Romance takes on deeper meaning, especially when you let down an emotional barrier. Be open.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Daydreaming is healthy so long as you not lose touch with reality. Look for new ways to give pleasure to that special person in your life. Romance thrives on consideration.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Success demands time and effort. Ask for mate's understanding. You will both be happier when the financial picture brightens. Plan a special trip for two. Sharing your hopes with loved one brings you closer.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let the day progress naturally. Spontaneous invitations could prove more fun than planned events. New interests come through friends. Both physical and spiritual activities hold special appeal. Find out mate's preference.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Check aggressive reactions in favor of a response that is far more noble. Try to see through the pretensions of a persuasive talker. Romance is more promising than you ever thought possible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Sleeping late and sharing pleasurable pastimes with your family is a sure cure for the blues. Spending time outdoors sends spirits soaring. Dining al fresco will sharpen waning appetites!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Think things over and you will be less likely to jump out of the frying pan into the fire. Loved ones look to you for guidance. Listen attentively without asking too many questions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Guard against sudden changes that could upset the applecart. A neighbor or out-of-town visitor issues a last-minute invitation. If you accept it, dress comfortably but attractively: You should have fun.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Attending church in a different community gives you new insights. Get together with old friends. A former romance can be rekindled if that is what you really want. Relax with the Sunday newspapers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You could be driven by an urge to take risks. Guard your cash and affections. Remain true to your allies and ideals. If hypocrisy upsets you, avoid pretentious people. Others admire your sincerity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New living quarters could be part of the picture. Get family members' reaction before making a down payment. You need to be sensible. Find out how far away the nearest grocery store is.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be supportive of mate's efforts to acquire property. The extras can wait until later. A visit with old friends could remind you of some forgotten obligations. Write to someone eager

Film being shot in Texas town

TAYLOR, Texas (AP) — Two historic bank buildings caught the eye of movie director Dennis Hopper as he scouted locations recently. As a result, much of the action in "Hot Spot" will be centered in downtown Taylor.

"They're both real significant buildings for the downtown and played a real significant part in our history. Now, Don Johnson's going to be robbing one of them," Debra Gore, executive director of the Taylor Chamber of Commerce, said Friday.

Johnson, star of the television series "Miami Vice," will be featured in the movie, along with actress Virginia Madsen. Filming is scheduled to begin in mid-August, and construction crews already are at work on some sets.

The two banks — a three-story sandstone structure and a two-story brick building — date to the late 1880s. They are located on opposite corners at the intersection of 2nd and Main Streets, although neither houses a bank anymore, Ms. Gore said.

Tom Coupland, of the state film office in Austin, said the movie's story is about a small-town used car salesman "who figures out a ruse to rob the local bank." There's also blackmail, a love interest and other subplots, he said.

Ms. Gore said she understands the script calls for one bank to catch fire while the other is robbed, although no real damage is planned for either.

"It's an interesting story," Coupland said, adding that the script had floated around for several years. "It crossed our desk a couple of times before."

Hopper chose Central Texas for the location after having been involved with "Texas Chainsaw Massacre II" a few years ago, Coupland said.

"He knew about the area, and I know he had a good time while he was here in Austin," Coupland said of Hopper, whose acting credits include "Easy Rider" and "Hoosiers."

"He came back last March and did the initial scouting. We went to small towns all over the place. They kind of locked in on Taylor, primarily because they have the terrific looking old bank building," he said.

The film won't be Taylor's first. Some scenes in last year's "Heartbreak Hotel" also were filmed in the town of 10,600. "But this time, they will be shooting primarily in Taylor," Coupland said.

Ms. Gore said the chamber has been helping the filmmakers find suitable locations around town.

"We have a good selection of older homes, many of which have been redone. They'll be using a couple of those," she said.

Shooting is scheduled to last about eight weeks, with 80 percent or more of the film to be shot in Taylor.

Besides the economic impact, the film is having another effect, Ms. Gore said. "I've already had a whole bunch of calls from people wanting to meet Don Johnson," she laughed. "Unfortunately, there's not much I can do about that."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A "Night on the Town with Billy Dee Williams" was no fun for a contest winner who says the star was busy doing deals and signing autographs and then left a nightclub without her.

"I was very humiliated, very upset," Delphine Hamilton, 30, said this week of her recent date.

Hamilton bought a new outfit for the night and borrowed her sister's $80 patent leather bag, which she lost.

"I was excited. Everybody in the neighborhood was happy for me. They couldn't hardly believe it was me," she said.

At the nightclub, Williams signed autographs for 1½ hours, she said.

When Hamilton realized the entourage was leaving without her, she burst into tears, complaining loudly she hadn't gotten the cab fare she was promised.

She said she ran to the limousine and was told to get the fare from radio station WDAS, which ran the contest.

Both E. Steven Collins, WDAS promotion director, and Bill Owens, a spokesman for Williams, denied her account.

Collins, who described Hamilton's behavior as unruly, said he gave her $40 for cab fare.

DETROIT (AP) — Movie toughguy Chuck Norris and former Chicago Bears star Walter Payton lost their bid to upset a world speedboat record held by former President Reagan's son, Michael.

It took the two over 14 hours to make the open-water powerboat trip Thursday from Chicago to Detroit. Reagan's trip in 1983 was made in a little over 12½ hours.

A mechanical malfunction forced the Norris-Payton boat to dock in Mackinaw City to replace a 49-cent part. The repairs took almost two hours.

The boat also lost a propeller, Norris said. Crew chief Ed Morenz did an in-water replacement.

"It was bad," Payton said. "We had 30 to 40 mph winds...and some nine- and 10-foot waves. I'm not sore. But I probably will be tomorrow. I'm more mad than anything else."

Since retiring as the NFL's all-time rushing leader, Payton has done some auto racing. It was his first start in a raceboat.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Pickfair, the fabled mansion where Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks held court for early Hollywood stars, is about to be transformed into a Renaissance-style Venetian palazzo by Pia Zadora and her husband.

The redone mansion will have tile roofs, leaded windows, balconies, verandas and a new, Italian-style front entrance, made up of two tiers of flanking stairs ascending from a driveway.

"The house has been changed through the years a number of times so that it no longer is the original Pickfair," said Paul Selwyn, chairman of the city's Planning Commission, which gave its initial approval to the project Wednesday night.

One thing that won't change is the name.

"Pickfair will be called Pickfair," the actress' husband, multimillionaire businessman Meshulam Riklis, said in a statement.

The couple bought the estate, which sits atop a knoll on three acres, from Los Angeles Lakers' owner Jerry Buss for $6.675 million last year.

SWT to host Texas Special Olympics

SAN MARCOS (AP) — The Texas Special Olympics will return to Southwest Texas State University next year under a two-year contract.

The games attracted 4,000 athletes suffering from mental retardation and 5,000 parents, coaches and volunteers when they were held in San Marcos in May. Many of the visitors praised San Marcos residents and merchants for the town's welcoming attitude.

"The Special Olympics people haven't seen nothing yet," said San Marcos City Council Member Rick Hernandez. "We're just delighted at the news. To be able to experience that warm, loving feeling again, it's going to be wonderful."

The Texas State University System Board of Regents unanimously approved the contract Thursday at their meeting in Huntsville.

Before this year, the games had been held at the University of Texas at Austin for 15 years. They were moved because renovations to UT's Memorial Stadium were scheduled for the same time as the games.

UT officials have said the success of the games in San Marcos prompted them not to submit a bid for next year's games. They said they supported the San Marcos bid to keep the event in the Austin area.

Texas A&M University and Bryan-College Station also submitted a joint bid for the games.

Olympics officials agreed to the terms of a contract for Southwest Texas State's sports facilities, plus transportation, food and dormitory rooms for 3,000 participants, SWT President Jerome Supple said.

Supple said his office had received "scores of letters from parents of participants who were extraordinarily complimentary of the school and San Marcos."

"I think the success we had this year went a whole long way toward Special Olympics being interested in us for next year," Supple said. "I'm personally very happy, and I'm happy for the university and the community."

Next year's event will be May 22-25.

"I thought it was great this year. After the last venture, which we felt was our best show ever, we're really excited as an organization to be going back to San Marcos," said Tom Wancho, Special Olympics spokesman.

University of Texas student Irene Stevenson and her dog Cheka will be moving to Moscow where she will be working for Tass. She is the first American to be hired by the Soviet news agency.

UT student first American to be hired by Soviet news agency

AUSTIN (AP) — The Soviet news agency Tass has hired a 28-year-old University of Texas student to edit English translations of its dispatches.

Irene Stevenson is the first American ever hired to work in the Moscow headquarters of the news agency, which is trying to improve the quality of its English service so more news organizations in the United States and elsewhere will buy it.

Ms. Stevenson said she can't remember the exact salary because she signed the contract more than a year ago.

"They pay you in rubles, which you can't export, so I'll have to spend it all while I'm there," she told the Austin American-Statesman.

Tass has found a three-room apartment for her.

"The apartment costs almost nothing, something like $5 a month, so about all I'll have to buy is food and vodka," she said.

Ms. Stevenson will move to Moscow with her dog Cheka, a 2-year-old borzoi-golden retriever mix, in September after finishing her master's thesis in comparative literature.

But the dog's name may give her Soviet hosts a start, she said.

"It was the name for the KGB (the Soviet intelligence agency) in the first three years after the revolution," she said. "The Tass editor laughed for about 10 minutes when I told him my dog's name."

Ms. Stevenson heard about the job during a study trip to Moscow in 1987, and Tass gave her a tryout period.

The translators she worked with generally handled English better than the average American translator handles Russian, she said. But there are many syntax and vocabulary problems that make Tass officials aware they need a native English-speaker to check the translators' work.

"There are a lot of simple things that are missed," she said. "I was editing a story about the war in Angola, for example. In Russian and many other languages, the word for 'guerrilla fighter' is 'bandit.' A translator used the English word that is spelled the same way, but of course, in English it doesn't mean 'guerrilla fighter.'

Tass hopes to make its English-language wire service more marketable by eliminating the clumsiness of translation that has sometimes plagued its stories, said Igor Makurin, the New York bureau chief for the agency.

"We are trying to show that we are not really the voice of the government," Makurin said. "The government told us, 'You are on your own. You have to earn your living.' We have to find means to be self-sufficient...to pay our bills."

Tass, which has 11 U.S. subscribers, tried in 1987 to market its service to 3,000 U.S. radio stations and again last year to 75 newspapers, but failed, partly because of language problems, Makurin said.

The Tass New York bureau is using U.S. college students as interns for the first time this summer. And while some students have expressed uneasiness about working for an agency often viewed as a propaganda service for the Soviet government, Ms. Stevenson said she doesn't share those worries.

"The function of mass media in any society is propaganda," she said. "I don't see Tass operating any differently from The New York Times. The content is different, but all media select what they want to write about. I don't mean there is a conspiracy, but there is propaganda at work."

In addition to the skills Stevenson offers Tass, the job offers her a change of pace after years of graduate school, as well as a way to pursue firsthand her interest in Russian literature, art and society instead of studying from afar.

Houston officials say person gets AIDS from transfusion

HOUSTON (AP) — For the first time in the city, a person apparently has acquired AIDS from a blood transfusion given after 1985 when blood banks started screening for antibodies to the deadly disease, health officials said.

The donor tested negative at the time of the blood donation but tested positive for antibodies to the AIDS virus during a subsequent visit to a blood bank, according to the city of Houston Health and Human Services Department's AIDS Surveillance Update for July.

There have been only three or four instances in the country in which people have developed AIDS after receiving blood transfusions that had been screened for the AIDS virus antibody, a spokesman for the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said.

In each of those instances, however, the donor was probably infected with the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS at the time of the first donation but had not yet developed antibodies to the virus, the spokesman said. Because there were no antibodies, the test was negative.

Palo Fortes, vice president for clinical services at the Gulf Coast Regional Blood Center, said he thinks the local blood supply is as safe as it can be within the limitations of current testing methods.

AIDS is caused by a virus that is spread through sexual contact, contact with contaminated blood or blood products or from infected mothers to their infants.

San Antonio HUD manager transferred

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Department of Housing and Urban Development has transferred its San Antonio office manager to Fort Worth pending the outcome of an investigation of alleged wrongdoing, officials said.

Deputy Regional HUD Administrator Walter Sevier said Simon Castillo has been reassigned temporarily to the Fort Worth regional office while the department continues its investigation of Castillo and the San Antonio operation.

Sevier said the investigation centers on an employee indicted in connection with the disappearance of funds from union coffers as well as allegations of mismanagement.

U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, earlier this month sent a letter to HUD Secretary Jack Kemp, urging him to launch an investigation into charges that the local office was using inadequate auditing procedures, mismanaging funds, granting patronage contracts and deviating from standard procedures to protect favored employees.

Gonzalez, chairman of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee, also said he was dissatisfied with what he saw as inaction on HUD's part in investigating his charges, and called on the General Accounting Office to look into the allegations.

"The program (investigation) people here have started pulling together records relative to the issues," Sevier said.

He said Castillo was reassigned "to be working on some housing procedures relative to property dispositions." But Sevier added, "The second reason I've called him here is to remove him from San Antonio because of the controversies that have been going on down there.

Ex-officer convicted of kidnapping

HOUSTON (AP) — A former police officer was convicted Friday of kidnapping and raping an intoxicated woman he had arrested outside a bar.

Jurors deliberated nearly three days before handing the down the guilty verdict against James Cebula, 29.

Cebula was accused of taking the 24-year-old woman into custody at a bar where he answered a disturbance call May 2, 1988. The woman testified she passed out in the car, and later awoke to find herself at Memorial Park, not the police station.

She testified during the trial she was sexually assaulted by two men, but she could not identify her attackers. Cebula and private security guard Keith Ferguson later were accused in the attack.

Both sides had focused their arguments on a tape recording secretly made on May 19, 1988, in which Cebula told Ferguson not to admit to investigators what they had done.

Defense attorney Dick DeGuerin contended the tape was made illegally.

The skeletal remains believed to be a World War I British soldier were stolen by a Dutch war veteran who was reportedly offended by the exhibit at a war museum at Schagen, Netherlands.

Dutch veteran spirits away bones exhibited at private war museum

SCHAGEN, Netherlands (AP) — Skeletal remains believed to be those of a British soldier killed in a World War I battle were stolen from a museum by a Dutch veteran who says he's seeking an honorable burial for the man.

Draped in a vintage British military coat and posed in a trench mock-up, the skull and left leg bones formed the centerpiece of the Somme Museum. The private collection of war memorabilia is devoted to the 1916 battle by the same name that killed more than 1 million British, French and German soldiers.

John Bluming, who served in the Dutch contingent in the Korean War, said in a telephone interview Friday that he walked into the museum Tuesday, wrapped the remains in a Union Jack and spirited them away for eventual burial with military honors.

"It isn't right for some imbecile to charge money just so you can see the remains of a dead soldier," said Bluming, who added he had handed the bones over to a former British commando for transfer to British authorities. He refused to identify the commando.

The episode has pitted the French-born owner of the Somme Museum against the British Embassy, the British Commonwealth War Graves Commission and others who thought the exhibit was in just plain bad taste.

Museum owner Sembeau Lecocq said he found the skull and bones in a trench near the village of Thiepval in the Somme district about 25 years ago and decided to take them home for use in the exhibit housed in a castle in this northern Dutch town.

Lecocq said he dubbed the bones "Soldier John" because he had found some British uniform buttons nearby and assumed the remains to be those of a British soldier.

Surrounded by stuffed rats, rusty rifles and dented helmets, "Soldier John" became part of a trench exhibit meant to underline the hardships endured by soldiers in World War I.

Earlier this month, the newspaper De Telegraaf published an article about the museum, including a picture of the bones of "Soldier John."

Bluming said that spurred him to action because the bones "just didn't belong" in the museum.

Bluming said he had taken the law into his own hands as a gesture of gratitude to the British for their part in the liberation of the Netherlands from Nazi occupation in 1945.

But he added, "I'd have done the same thing for a German."

British Embassy spokesman Brian Bennett said the Commonwealth War Graves Commission had been negotiating for permission to bury the remains since 1985 but added an initial deal with Lecocq had fallen through.

The commission, based in the Belgian city of Ypres, looks after the graves of British, Australian, Canadian and other commonwealth soldiers buried in Europe after both world wars.

"It's most unfortunate," Bennett said. "We would like to take possession of the remains and give them an honorable burial" near the northern French site where they were found.

He added such a funeral would require permission from the Dutch government and that the remains had not been handed over to the embassy.

The Netherlands was neutral in World War I, but there are dozens of exhibits like the Somme Museum in Belgium and France. Those include the Verdun Ossuary near that northeastern French city, where hundreds of thousands of bones are on display.

Chinese Communist Party closes two state-owned conglomerates

BEIJING (AP) — The Communist Party on Friday shut down two state-owned conglomerates, including one linked to senior leader Deng Xiaoping's son, and ordered an end to many of the special privileges enjoyed by high officials.

Imported luxury cars, special supplies of food, pleasure trips abroad and rounds of banqueting all must come to an end, by order of the party Politburo, in its most serious attack yet on endemic corruption that has cost the party much popular support.

If carried out, the order would affect officials at the uppermost levels of the party and government, who have been exempt from anti-corruption and austerity drives.

The Politburo's notice was read on television at the end of a two-day closed meeting in Zhongnanhai, the party compound where top leaders maintain homes of relative luxury. Zhongnanhai once was part of the imperial palace, and its red walls have become a symbol of the privileges of those in power.

The order clearly was triggered by the student democracy movement that was crushed in June, which drew hundreds of thousands of supporters with the slogan, "Oppose corruption."

The students also lampooned children of senior officials who enjoy top posts in government and business, including Deng's son, whom they nicknamed "Prince Pufang."

The Politburo ordered two companies directly under the State Council, or cabinet, be shut down, including the Kang Hua Development Corp., which is linked to Deng Pufang.

Kang Hua was formed under the auspices of Deng Pufang's China Welfare Fund for the Handicapped, and it allegedly used the connection to evade taxes while developing into one of China's largest foreign trade companies.

The party also shut down the China Industry and Commerce Economic Development Corp. and ordered two leading investment companies to merge.

It gave the spouses and children of senior government and party officials until Sept. 1 to resign from jobs in "commercial business and trading companies."

The Politburo notice also:

■ Ordered a shake-up of state companies dealing in foreign trade, material supplies and finance. Trade officials already have said they plan to sharply reduce the number of companies authorized to conduct foreign trade.

■ Banned party Politburo, party Secretariat and State Council personnel from driving imported cars and exchanging banquets and gifts paid for with state funds.

■ Said ministers and provincial leaders may travel abroad only on business relevant to their posts, and cannot accept invitations from foreign businessmen. Offers of trips abroad have become popular bribes.

■ Ordered an end to special food supplies for high officials "who shall have the same ration and pay the same price as ordinary citizens."

■ Ordered severe punishment for corruption.

As early as the 1960s, the public image of China's Communist leaders had changed from that of spartan revolutionaries to a pampered elite. But it took the economic decentralization of the past decade to add bribery and black marketeering to the list of official privileges.

Since ending the student protests and purging party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, the party has blamed him for its corruption problem, although he was party chief for only two years.

Libyan official says malfunctioning airport landing system causes crash

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya's civil aviation director said Friday the instrument landing system at Tripoli airport was not working when a Korean Air DC-10 crashed short of the fog-shrouded runway, killing at least 77 people.

The system gives the pilot an automatic indication of the center of the runway, but it had not worked for several months, said the official, Mohamed Abughres.

The DC-10 crashed Thursday at least a half-mile short of the runway. Most of those killed were South Koreans returning from vacation to jobs on engineering or construction projects.

Abughres said the airport radar, radio beacons and other navigation aids all were working perfectly when pilot Kim Ho-jung decided to try landing.

Libya's minister of transport, Mobarak Shamak, said he had named a Libyan-Korean committee to find the causes of the accident.

"We gave the pilot all the information about the fog," he said. "The last report we gave him was that visibility was down to 50 meters (150 feet), but he decided to land anyway. He trusted his own instruments."

Shamak said a Soviet Aeroflot plane and a Libyan plane that approached the airport shortly before the Korean Air crash decided to fly instead to Malta and Benghazi, Libya, he said.

When Shamak visited the pilot in the hospital and presented him with roses, Kim burst into tears. He told the minister he was not at fault. Earlier, another Libyan investigator quoted Kim as saying he may have been wrong to try to land in the fog.

Shamak said he believed the accident was caused by either a technical fault in the DC-10 or a miscalculation by the captain.

Korean Air President Cho Chung-kun defended the pilot and indicated the control tower was at fault.

"In view of the pilot's long, outstanding professional experience and the plane's good maintenance records and condition, it is unlikely that the accident was the result of a human error or mechanical malfunction," he said.

"We, therefore, believe that the pilot suddenly confronted an unexpected situation beyond his control as he attempted to land in a thick fog," he said.

He did not elaborate but airline officials indicated privately that the plane had not received proper guidance from air controllers.

Shamak visited the 84 people who remained hospitalized and presented each with two flowers. All but three were expected to be discharged shortly, said Mohamad Haras, director of Salahadding Hospital.

South Korean officials flew to Tripoli on Friday to supervise care for the injured and the return of the bodies.

House panel OKs permanent smoking ban on short flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee approved legislation Friday to make permanent a smoking ban on short airline flights after rejecting a temporary ban affecting all domestic flights.

The bill is one of several proposals to make permanent the smoking ban on flights of two hours or less. That prohibition expires next April.

Friday's voice vote in the House Public Works and Transportation Committee followed a tie vote on a proposal to extend the temporary smoking ban for two more years and make it cover all domestic flights.

Opponents of the smoking ban raised suggestions that liquor, "cheap cologne" and crying babies could also be banned from flights because they offend some people.

Rep. William Clinger, R-Pa., who opposed proposals that would affect flights over two hours, joked that the committee might vote to "install cheap cologne detectors and put crying babies in the hold."

Rep. James Oberstar, D-Minn., who pushed for a permanent smoking ban, said he believes the committee's 25-25 vote on his proposal to extend the ban temporarily reflects strong lobbying by the tobacco industry. A tie vote defeats an amendment.

Oberstar said a more far-reaching ban would likely pass the House but declined to predict what the Senate would do.

One of the measures to extend the smoking ban is in the form of an amendment to an appropriations bill. The House is expected to take that up next week.

Oberstar described Friday's final, voice vote as a "short-term gain" for the tobacco industry, which at first opposed making the two-hour ban permanent. Several tobacco lobbyists, however, switched strategies as the committee was voting.

In the end, pro-smoking forces supported a permanent ban while anti-smoking committee members voted for a four-year extension of the temporary ban in hopes of ensuring that Congress again would have to consider a total ban.

Anti-smoking groups have said they will continue to fight for a smoking ban on all flights.

"The two-hour ban is far from a perfect piece of legislation and very far form the solution needed to protect all airline passengers and all flight crews from the serious hazards created by tobacco smoke in the airline cabin," said Ahron Leichtman, president of Citizens Against Tobacco Smoke.

Rep. Gus Savage, D-Ill., who said his wife of 34 years died from cancer, said, "On an airplane, you can't open the window when someone else smokes. In midair, you can't transfer planes."

He said smoking in flight is a life-and-death issue.

"Rights are for now, but death is forever," Savage said.

Greenpeace vessels halt Navy's attempt to test Trident missile

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Four anti-nuclear activist vessels sailed into an off-limits danger zone Friday and halted a Navy attempt to test-launch a Trident 2 missile from a submerged submarine, the Navy said.

After the Greenpeace U.S.A. vessels had harassed the submarine USS Tennessee and its support ships for several hours, ignoring warnings to leave, the Navy called off the test launch which had been scheduled in the Atlantic 50 miles offshore from the USS Tennessee.

"A planned Trident test missile launch was terminated today because of intentional interference from foreign flag ships in a designated hazardous operational area," the Navy said in a statement.

The statement said repeated warnings had been ignored by the intruding vessels and that "concern for safety of the interfering ships precluded the launch of the test missile."

"We're happy about it, of course," Greenpeace spokeswoman Shannon Fagan said. "But we would be happier if the Navy cancelled the Trident 2 missile altogether."

Fagan said two large Greenpeace ships and two motorized rafts shadowed the submarine for hours, exercising their right to operate in international waters. Safety regulations require that a countdown he stopped if non-essential boats approach within about three miles of the submarine.

One of the motorized rafts slipped right up to the submerged Tennessee and twice attached "nuclear free seas" banners to the submarine, one to the radio mast and one on the side, Fagan said.

She also reported a Navy whale boat dispatched from a destroyer twice rammed one of the Greenpeace boats, the 60-foot ketch Monticivitano, after warning it and the other intruding vessels that they were in danger because a missile launch was imminent. Damage was minor, she said.

"Our captain radioed back that he did not recognize U.S. Navy jurisdiction there because it was in international waters," said Fagan, in a telephone conversation from the Greenpeace command post in Daytona Beach.

She said she was in radio contact with the M.V. Greenpeace, 190-foot vessel flying the Dutch flag. The Monticivitano sails under Swedish registry.

The Navy had no comment on the Greenpeace reports. It also would not confirm that a Trident 2 launch was scheduled until it issued the postponement statement.

It was to have been the second underwater test firing of the Trident 2, the Navy's newest, most powerful weapon. The first test, on March 21, ended in an explosion when the $23.7 million missile pinwheeled out of control four seconds after it was launched from the Tennessee. Nineteen land launch pad tests, 15 of them successful, preceded the sea trials.

The Navy has said it plans to have the Trident 2 operational and on station next March. The weapon, with 24 to be carried on each Trident 2 sub, has a range of 4,600 miles and each can carry up to 10 nuclear warheads.

Fagan said Greenpeace is committed to ridding the seas of nuclear weapons.

"With superpower relations warming and when they are getting somewhere with arms control talks, this is not the time to be testing missiles like the Trident 2 at sea," she said.

"That's why we're out there today, to call attention to this," Fagan said.

Chinese dissidents say 'Goddess' again will be erected in square

CHICAGO (AP) — Chinese dissident leaders said Friday the fight for democracy in China has just begun and that a "Goddess of Democracy" someday will stand again in Tiananmen Square.

"Some say China has no hope for democracy, but I say the hope is just beginning," Wu'er Kaixi, a leader of the pro-democracy movement in Beijing, said at the opening ceremony of the First Congress of Chinese Students in the United States.

"I believe the Chinese can be united and will erect a Goddess of Democracy in Tiananmen Square one day," Kaixi told about 400 people packed in an auditorium at the Chicago campus of the University of Illinois.

Delegates from 130 universities attended the organization's first conference, traveling from as far as Hong Kong, Japan and Australia. The conference ends Sunday.

Kaixi, 21, who fled China after the military crackdown in June, said the battle must continue for democracy, saying: "We can't rely on begging or wait for a next time. We must try now!"

Behind him, a plaster replica of the Goddess of Democracy erected by Chinese protesters in Beijing overlooked the crowd, which cheered and stamped their feet as Kaixi pelted them with pro-democracy slogans.

The original Goddess, fashioned after the Statue of Liberty, was torn down by the Chinese government after the military crushed dissidents occupying Tiananmen Square.

Kaixi was one of six dissident leaders who attended the congress's opening ceremony. All fled China and later surfaced in Paris, where they have been trying to rally worldwide support for the pro-democracy movement in their homeland.

Kaixi, speaking in Chinese, sharply criticized the Chinese government.

"If the present communist government is so confident that people love them, why should they be scared of elections?" he asked. "Because there is a chance they may end up in history's wastebasket."

Pro-democracy T-shirts were hung on the walls of the University of Illinois building. Some shirts said "You are not alone" and bore a reproduction of a well-known image from the protests: a single man staring down a row of Chinese Army tanks.

Li Da Xing, 28, a history major at Tohoku University in Japan, said he flew to Chicago a few days ago to meet other Chinese student activists interested in establishing an international organization to fight for democracy in China.

Floridian sentenced to electric chair for killing two policemen

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — A judge rejected mental-illness pleas Friday and sentenced a retired librarian to the electric chair for killing two policemen during a 1987 shopping-center rampage in which four other people also died.

William Bryan Cruse also was sentenced to 100 years in prison without parole on the other four killings and lesser prison terms on 26 other convictions of attempted murder, kidnapping and false imprisonment.

Judge John Antoon called the shooting spree in which 10 people were wounded in nearby Palm Bay "perhaps unsurpassed in the state of Florida."

Under mandatory-minimum sentencing regulations, Cruse's total prison sentence would be 103 years in prison unless he is executed for the slayings of the two police officers.

"We are pleased that William Cruse has been finally sentenced to death. We feel it is a just punishment for the war Mr. Cruse declared on Palm Bay two years ago," said State Attorney Norm Wolfinger.

Assistant Public Defender Marlene Alva, Cruse's chief trial lawyer, would not comment on the sentences except to say that "somewhere down the line, someone has to determine competency for execution."

An appeal of the convictions and sentences will be filed soon, she said.

Cruse told investigators after his capture, following a seven-hour siege, that he "got into trouble" because everyone believed he was homosexual. He said he was trying to get even with people who taunted him and that he was "drunk and crazy" during the shootout.

Cruse refused an opportunity to address the court Friday, as he has in the past, but he did appear to wipe away a tear or two while one of the shooting victims recounted his experiences amidst sobs.

"When we entered that battlefield, we did not know whether we would come out alive," said Larry Glynn, 43, as he told the court how he and a friend, drove more than 15 shooting victims to safety in their pickup during the shootout.

"If you really want to punish Mr. Cruse, let him live," Glynn said.

The central issue in the case was Cruse's mental state. The defense pleaded temporary insanity caused by mental illness. Psychiatric specialists on both sides agreed that Cruse was mentally ill.

But the prosecution convinced a jury in April that mental illness was only one factor involved in a finding of criminal insanity under Florida law.

The jury recommended the death penalty on each of the six first-degree murder counts, but the judge did not have to follow that recommendation.

Although rejecting insanity, the judge did accept arguments of "extreme mental disturbance" that lessened the penalties in the slayings of the four civilians.

He imposed life sentences, without possibility of parole for 25 years, in each of those murders.

Antoon imposed life terms on each of 22 counts of attempted first-degree murder and the kidnapping of a store clerk who was held hostage most of the time Cruse was barricaded inside a supermarket.

Antoon also handed down 30-year sentences on each of two counts of attempted second-degree murder and a 15-year term for false imprisonment of a second store employee.

Except for the first-degree-murder sentences, all other prison terms are to run concurrently, and each carries a mandatory-minimum of three years.

Charting world's icebergs

By The Associated Press

SUITLAND, Md. — States the size of Rhode Island and Delaware could easily fit on some of the monstrous icebergs adrift near Antarctica.

"We're currently tracking three bergs in the southern Weddell Sea that measure more than 2,070 square miles," says Franklin E. Kniskern of the Joint Ice Center operated by the Navy and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in this Washington suburb. "None of them currently poses a threat to the research vessels that visit the area."

The icebergs form just a small part of the frosty mosaics that the little-known center produces each week for a wide variety of users, including scientists, fishermen, ship captains and wildlife experts.

The center's main responsibility is to map and monitor the massive blanket of ice — most of it in the polar regions — that covers more than 20 million square miles of water. Ice conditions in the Great Lakes are also monitored.

"Two polar-orbiting satellites send back the images that provide the bulk of our data," Capt. Donald E. Hinsman, the center's director, told National Geographic. "Drifting buoys, ship reports, worldwide meteorological information and aerial reconnaissance flights supplement the satellite information."

The center sends out satellite analyses and other ice information. It goes worldwide by facsimile, telecopier, telex, radio and direct mail.

Aerial reconnaissance flights are especially busy in the arctic each spring, when ships head for the North Slope of Alaska to resupply military installations. "The flights usually operate each spring through June, while the ice is breaking up, and then again in October and November, when the water starts refreezing," says Hinsman.

Trained observers on reconnaissance flights map the locations and concentrations of ice and try to gauge its age and thickness. The information is quickly relayed back to the center.

The information provided by the center is especially helpful to firms such as Ocean Routes, a California company that tries to advise ships' captains on the safest and most economical way to their destinations.

"The seas around Antarctica would be a ghastly blank without the ice center's charts," says George Carlsgaard, Ocean Routes manager of Atlantic and Southern Hemisphere routings. "Without them we would have no idea of the extent of ice boundaries down there."

Fishermen in the Bering Sea between Alaska and the Soviet Union are concerned with ice boundaries, too. "They use our information to get as close to the edge of the sea ice as possible, because that's where the crabs concentrate," Kniskern says.

The ice and snow cover in the arctic also affects birds and, indirectly, hunters. "During June we study the satellite information sent out by the center to determine the extent of the snow and ice covering goose-breeding areas in the high arctic," says Robert J. Blohm, a population assessment expert with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Office of Migratory Bird Management.

A particularly harsh spring that discourages nesting can come home to roost in the fall. "We do a flyby and match those sightings with the broad satellite picture," says Blohm. "Then we let our waterfowl managers know if breeding is likely to suffer so they can establish reasonable quotas in the fall hunting season."

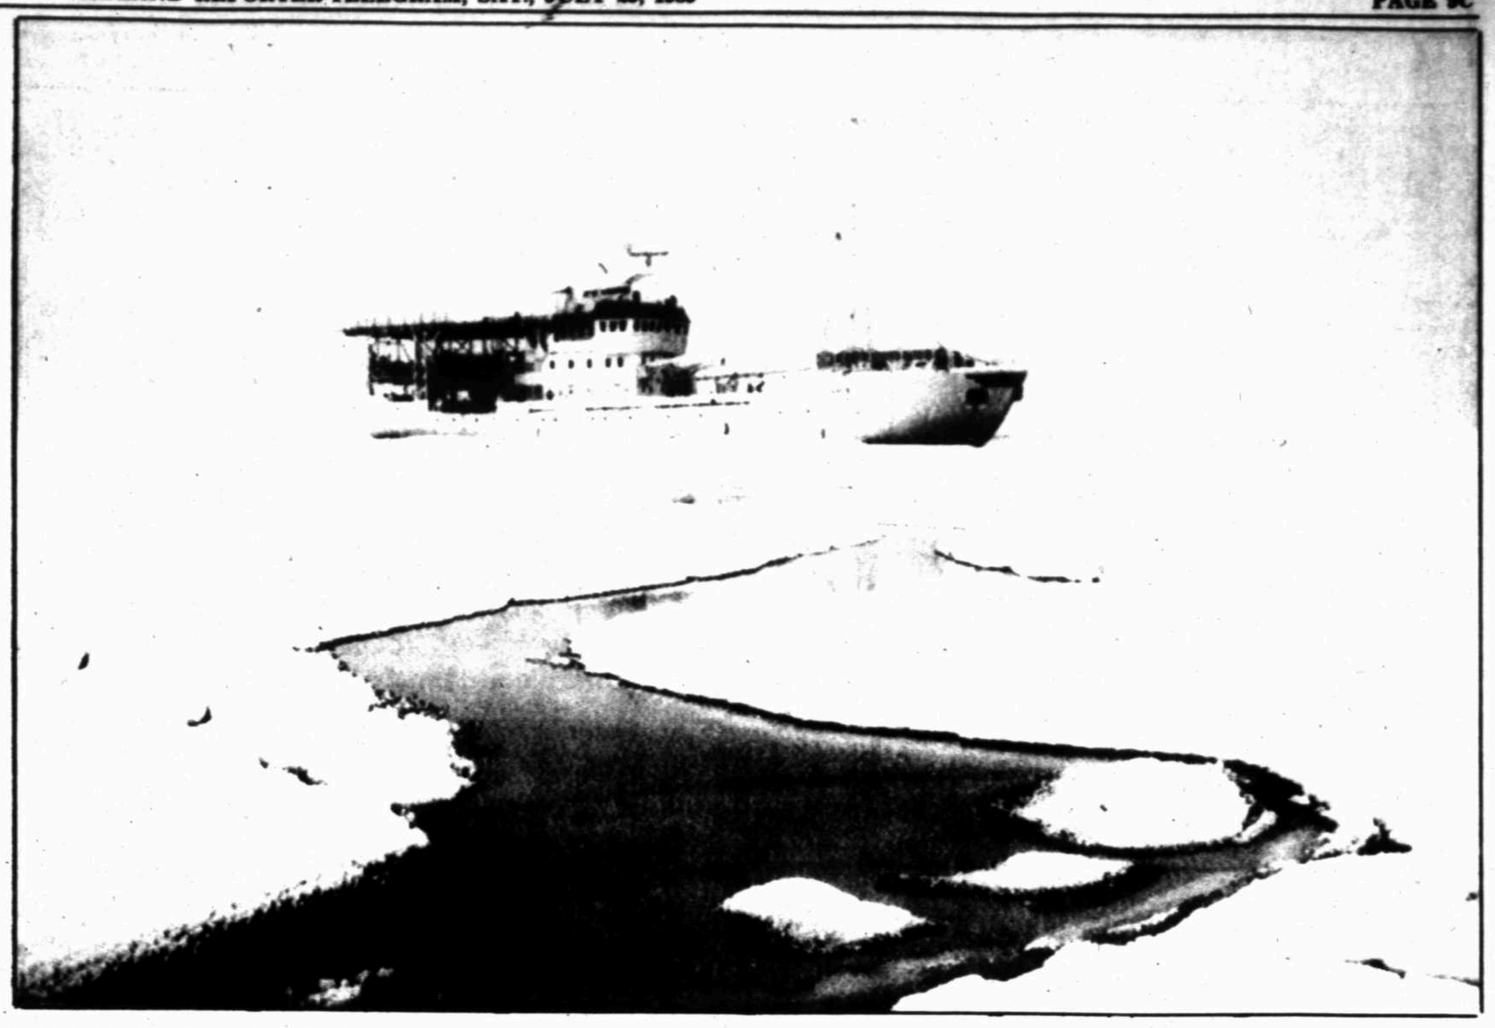
Sea ice also may influence events far above the Earth's surface. Recent studies in the arctic indicate that leads — giant cracks — in the ice allow vast quantities of heat to rise from the ocean into the frigid polar atmosphere. The leads, often spotted by the center, appear when violent windstorms create stress between the ice attached to the land and the sea ice, causing open water to appear.

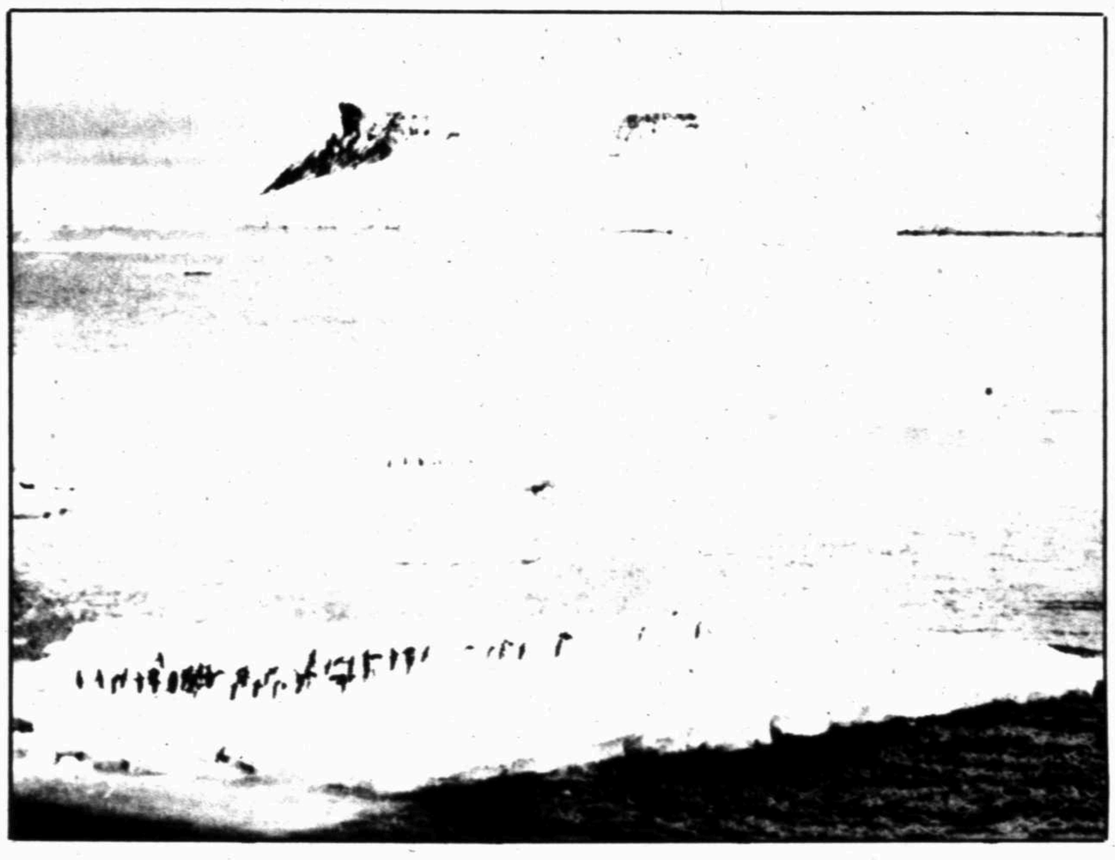
"No studies have been done in Antarctica but we speculate the same thing may be happening there," says Roger Barry, director of the National Snow and Ice Data Center at the University of Colorado.

It has been estimated that areas where leads occur account for as much as 90 percent of the total energy entering the arctic atmosphere. A slightly warmer arctic climate could increase the size and number of leads, and this might further raise temperatures.

"Any process that disturbs the ice and creates more open water would tend to have a warming effect on the atmosphere and could affect climate in lower latitudes," Barry cautions.

To help scientists such as Barry, the ice center hopes soon to relay ice information by computer to key users. The program, known as the Digital Ice Forecasting Analysis System, will give the users complete ice data almost instantly.





A research vessel, above, cautiously navigates through ice floes in the Arctic Ocean, while penguins, left, cavort on an ice floe off the Antarctic coast. Maritime interests worldwide benefit from the information transmitted from the Joint Ice Center at Suitland, Md. The center, manned by the U.S. Navy and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, maps and monitors more than 20 million square miles of sea ice, most of it in the frigid polar regions.

Some people get lost, others don't

By The Associated Press

It happens to all of us. Getting lost, being lost, or, as some prefer to express it, "temporarily misoriented."

Usually it's only a momentary loss of geographic orientation, of simply not knowing where you are in today's tangle of city streets and interstate highways, mammoth, multilevel shopping malls and labyrinthine new buildings.

But sometimes it can be serious. "Angry Paramedics Eject Lost Ambulance Driver," a newspaper headline reported earlier this year. The driver was kicked out of the ambulance after he got lost on the way to the hospital, taking a heart patient on a zigzag path through southeast Washington for about 10 minutes.

Why do some people get hopelessly lost, even in their own hometown, even with the aid of maps, directions and familiar landmarks?

Why do others have little trouble getting around, even in strange towns, and, if dropped in unfamiliar territory, easily find their way home?

Is a sense of direction innate — a sixth sense?

"It's a learned skill. It involves reading environmental cues. It's something everyone can do," says geographer Roger M. Downs of Pennsylvania State University.

But abilities vary. "People who have trouble with wayfinding," Downs told National Geographic, "can't relate three essential elements: self; a map or set of directions or memory of a previous visit; and space, the surroundings in which they actually find themselves."

Those who feel inept, he says, are simply not put in situations often enough to practice this skill and gain confidence.

"Navigation uses so many bits of information that have to be integrated. People who are habitually poor navigators fail in one or more parts of the process," says zoologist R. Robin Baker of the University of Manchester in England, an expert on animal and human navigation.

"They may fail in taking in information, storing it — the brain's map-storage area may be faulty — or in translating it back for use. There's no neat explanation."

"How we think influences how we find our way around," explains Jeremy Crampton, a doctoral student at Penn State, whose research combines cognitive psychology and geography.

"People who get lost haven't managed to develop their spatial metaphors sufficiently," he theorized in a paper presented at this year's meeting of the Association of American Geographers. Spatial metaphors use progress along a path to express progress in personal or career goals, such as "start out to make a fortune" or "midpoint of a career."

Courtesy of National Geographic

"They (poor navigators) may fail in taking in information, storing it — the brain's map-storage area may be faulty — or in translating it back for use. There's no neat explanation."

— Zoologist R. Robin Baker

Comparing experts and novices at wayfinding, Crampton found experts concentrate on choosing correct routes, monitoring their progress, and developing error-prevention strategies. "They have a sense of distance, that they've gone too far or that the terrain doesn't match what it should be," he explains. "If they get lost, they recover by mentally retracing their steps." Novices don't.

"Some people just never pay attention to where they are. Others always want to get their bearings, whether in a new city or a new building," says Robin Shannonhouse, executive director of the U.S. Orienteering Federation. Orienteers make a sport of wayfinding by competing to follow a course, usually through a forest, using only a topographical map and a compass.

"If you can find your way out of the woods alone, you can find your way anywhere," Shannonhouse says. "The most experienced develop a built-in radar. Give orienteers a street map and circle the destination, and you don't have to give them directions."

She says that whenever she goes to a new city, she immediately gets a map to see where the interstate comes in. "I orient myself to it. No matter what part of the city I'm in, I know where I am."

Everyone probably has a favorite homing device. A Denver native says he always references himself to the Rockies — they're west. A resident of Toledo, Ohio, uses Lake Erie — it's north.

A lifelong Washingtonian with a poor sense of direction says, "All I have to do is find the Washington Monument and I can get home. Once I took the wrong bridge home from Virginia and wound up lost. I asked for directions to the monument, even though I knew I would probably be going out of my way."

She and several others who habitually get lost say they have a general lack of awareness of their surroundings. Once turned around, they can't reorient themselves easily. What is automatic for many is an all-consuming effort for them.

Comparing herself to Hansel and Gretel, the Washingtonian sighs: "I always have to make mental bread crumbs about where I've been."

BUICK LeSABRE. THE MOST TROUBLE FREE CAR BUILT IN AMERICA.

Until now, this kind of quality was known to only an elite group, Le Sabre owners.

Great selections of New fully loaded LeSabres in stock now!

Prices starting at $15,295
(List $18,341, Stock#9228)

The latest J.D. Power and Associates Initial Quality Survey* states something Buick LeSabre owners can be proud to know and something all new-car buyers should know. The fact that Buick LeSabre is the most trouble free full-size car sold in America. Import or domestic.

The Initial Quality Survey, which measures things gone wrong with new vehicles during the first 90 days of ownership, marks an improvement in Buick quality for the third year in a row. And today, the Buick nameplate ranks as the most trouble free American brand. Higher than Lincoln. Higher than other prestige cars costing thousands more.

To our way of thinking, it all means that if you're looking for quality, you should just look down the Great American Road for the Buick tri-shield. The new symbol for quality. The sign of your Buick dealer.

*J.D. Power & Associates 1989 Initial Quality Survey covering November and December, 1988. Based upon owner-related problems during the first 90 days of ownership.
