The ceremony is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. on the base flightline.

In addition to the three principals involved, marching troops representing each of Reese's squadrons, the 539th U.S. Air Force "Band of the West" from Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Texas, a 50-state flag marching unit of Reese personnel and the Reese Honor - Color Guard will participate.

In the event of inclement weather, the ceremony will be held inside Hangar 82 at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Colonel Sams is the 23rd officer to command Reese since its activation as an Air Force Base in August 1949. He received his silver pilot wings at Reese as a member of Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 69-2 which graduated Oct. 5, 1968.

Since then, Colonel Sams has had a distinguished career, with most of his assignments having been with the Military Airlift Command at U.S. bases in Hawaii, Illinois, Washington state and overseas in Thailand. He has also served at the Pentagon and at the U.S. Air Force Academy from which he graduated in 1967.

Colonel Sams is married to the former Lisa Arriaga of Twin Falls, Idaho. They have two children, Catherine (Trina), a sophomore at Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff, Ariz., and Robert, a high school sophomore who will be transferring to a school in the Reese area.

Colonel Lillard has been at Reese since January 1987. He took command of the 64th Flying Training Wing on July 9, 1987. He and his family will depart Reese for Brussels, Belgium immediately following the Change of Command ceremony. Col. Mark H. Lillard III
Wing Commander

December 14, 1988

To the men and women of Reese

Commanding a wing is the single most enjoyable and rewarding experience anyone could hope for. Leading the 64th is the fulfillment of a dream! Nothing before, or after will ever equal it. My lasting impressions will be the PRIDE, PROFESSIONALISM and ATTITUDE that you, the Reese Team exhibit so well. You are truly the best that this great nation has to offer.

Marie-Jacques and I leave filled with very special memories of our Reese "family" and the Lubbock community. We pray for a bright and successful future for each and every one of you.

Sincerely,
Col. Mark Lillard
RESE 01

Have a good time, but do it safely

Air Training Command has experienced two fatalities within a 10-day period. If this is any indication of what's to come, we will have some very tragic months ahead.

To get our people through the Christmas and New Year's period, we need another super effort from all of you. Our command is the youngest command, when you consider the age of our people. Commanders and supervisors have to continually emphasize the importance of using protective equipment and of individual responsibility for using good judgment and common sense. Most important, show a genuine concern for your people. It may just change a negative attitude.

The streets and highways continue to be the greatest threat confronting our people. In one of our two most recent accidents, an airman who was a passenger in a car was killed Nov. 19 in a head-on collision. A vehicle traveling the wrong way struck the car the airman was riding in. In the other accident, an airman first class was killed Nov. 29 when he was ejected from the car he was driving. The vehicle entered a curve at an estimated 85 mph, left the road and rolled five times. He was not wearing a safety belt.

Last year during the holiday period, ATC lost three individuals in private automobile accidents. An airman first class was killed when, for unknown reasons, his car left the road, struck a culvert and burst into flames. Two second lieutenant student pilots were killed when their vehicle was struck head-on by a drunk who entered a four-lane divided highway by way of an exit.

Most of these fatal accidents happened between 11 p.m. and 3 a.m., involved excessive speed, alcohol (but not necessarily by the military person), and the non-use of seatbelts. And these are the areas we should concentrate our efforts.

Ensure that you make your travelers aware of these key areas, particularly the fact that consuming alcoholic beverages and driving is extremely dangerous. We all need to remember that the use of seatbelts continues to be your best defense against the possibility of severe injury in an automobile mishap.

Also, special care and caution should be used when participating in sports and recreational activities. The mind may be willing, but the body may say no!

Finally, training, common sense and good judgment should be used for first-time participation in recreational activities such as skydiving, hang-gliding, hunting and cold weather camping.

The bottom line — we want you to have a good time, but do it safely. Good luck and happy holidays. (ATCNS)

Lt. Gen. Robert C. Oaks
Commander, Air Training Command

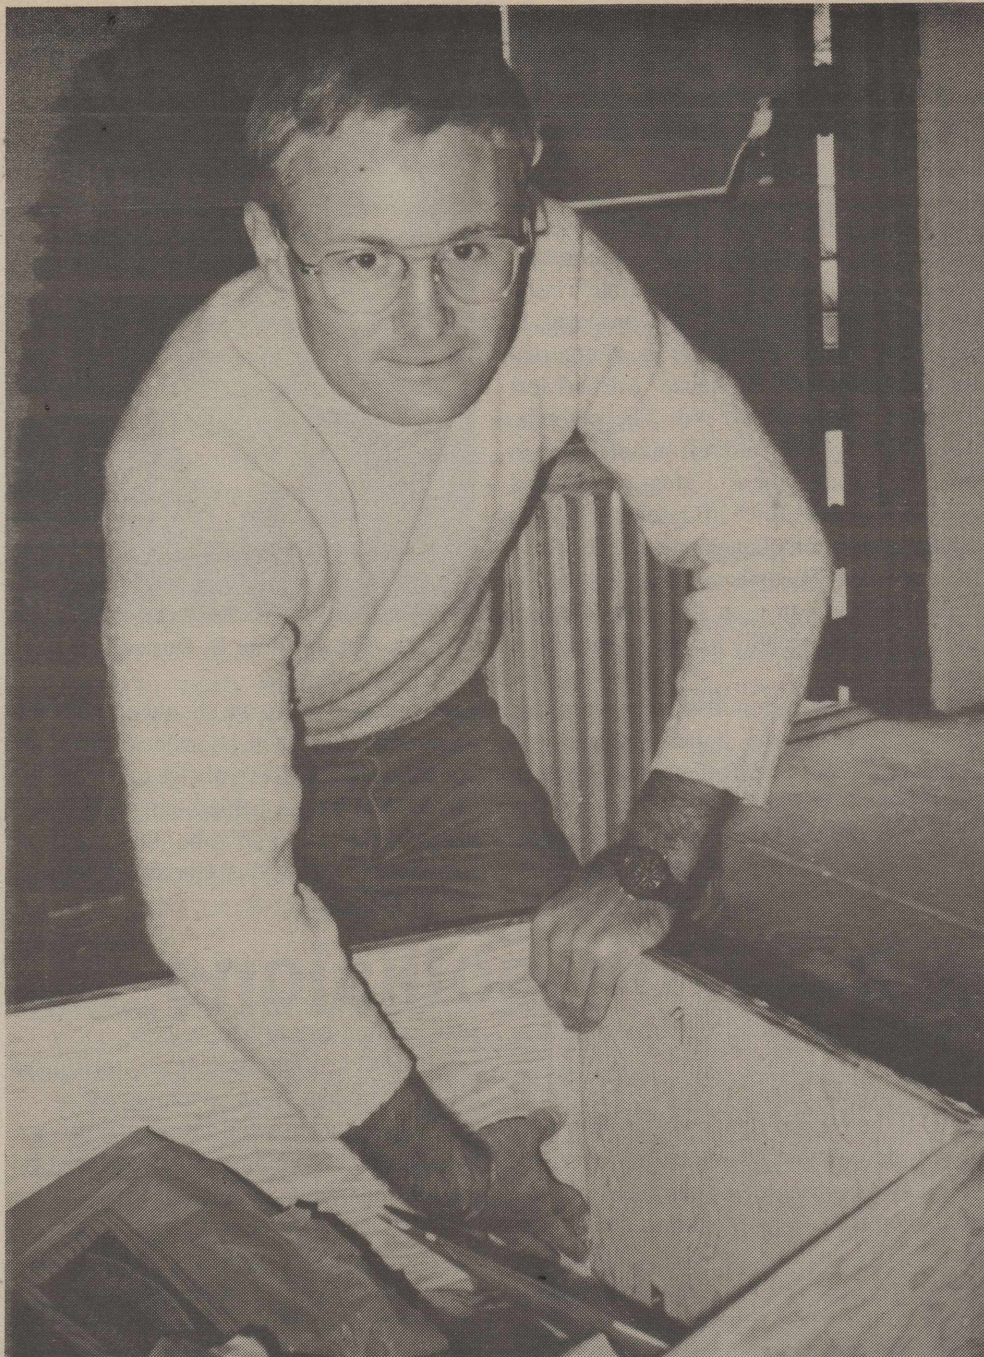

ATC Commander sends holiday greetings

Dec. 17, 1903, Wilbur and Orville Wright sent the following telegram from Kitty Hawk: "Success. Four flights Thursday morning. Started from level with engine power alone. Average speed through air 31 miles. Longest 59 seconds. Inform press. Home Christmas."

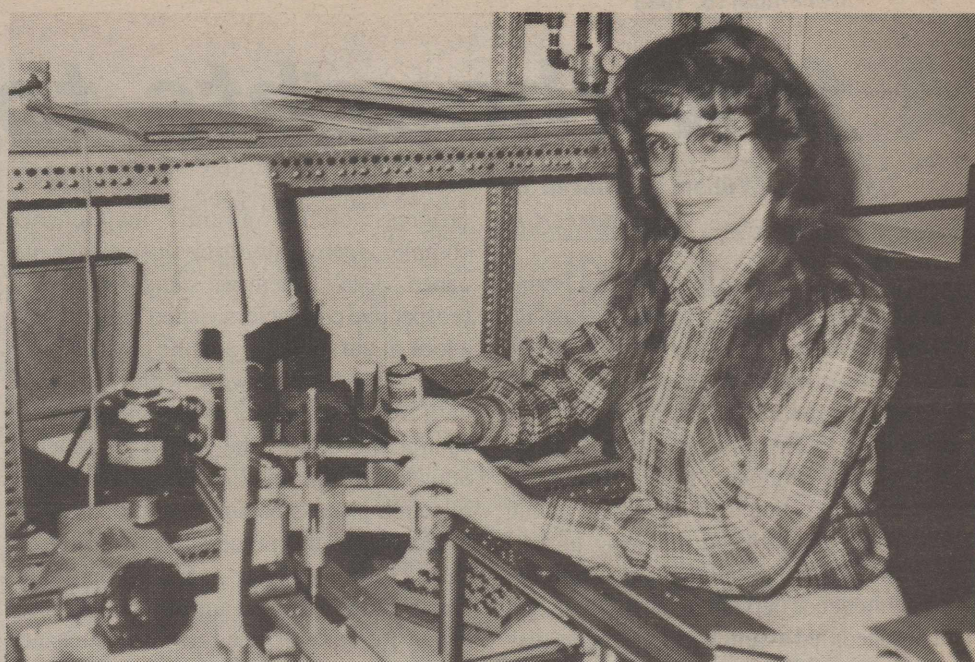

"Home Christmas." Over the years, American air power has come a long way from the dunes of Kitty Hawk. We've developed a mighty Air Force with a proud tradition of accomplishment and contributions to world peace. But, despite the passing years, the hope and promise of "Home Christmas" have remained unchanged.

One reason we Americans remain free to enjoy Christmas in peace and prosperity is the commitment of the men and women of the United States Air Force who work in the spirit of Wilbur and Orville Wright. Our readiness, vigilance and sacrifice continue to protect the values and freedoms Americans cherish.

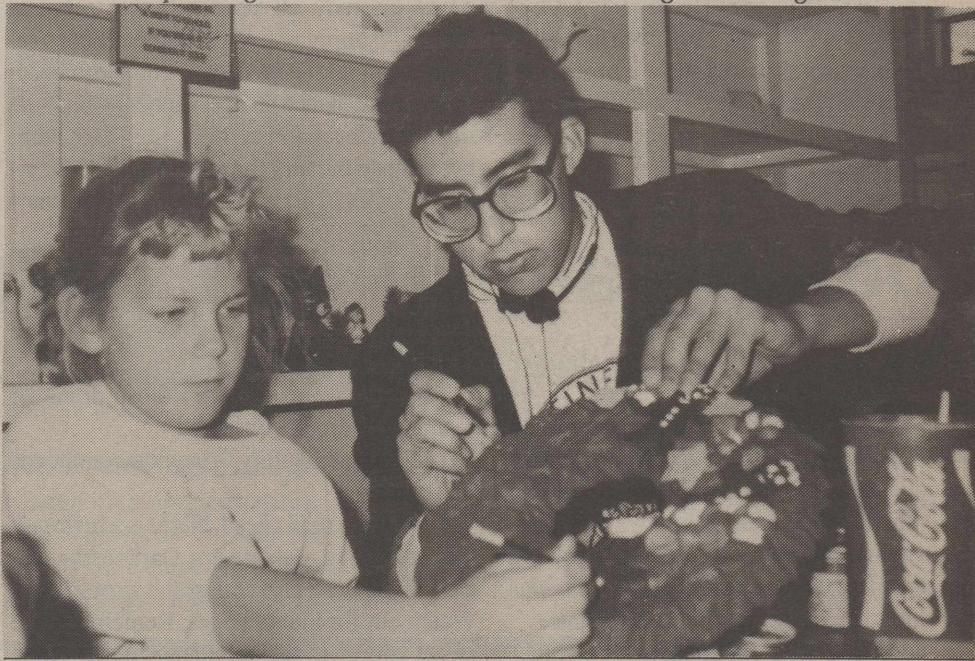

Whether you are at home with family and friends this Christmas or on duty, I wish each member of Air Training Command a happy Christmas and prosperous New Year. And I thank you for helping to defend the hope of "Home Christmas" for every American.

Running short of money this Christmas? The Arts and Crafts Hobby Shop has some exciting programs you may want to take advantage of. You'll save an average of one-half to two-thirds the cost of comparable gifts from downtown.

Plus, the hobby shop promises hassle-free parking, the quickest check out lines anywhere and a guaranteed good time.

Why not impress your friends with uniquely personal gifts this year and discover a new hobby at the same time?

You can use the equipment and supplies available or join a class. Some of the activities offered include; beginner's ceramics, T-shirt making, oil and T-shirt painting, flowermaking, wood crafts, laminating and glass etching and engraving.

Over 1,000 different logos for T-shirts and 800 different ceramic molds are available. Some of the molds include Christmas trees, nativity sets, book ends or sculptures.

There are also lamp kits for you to assemble at half the cost of retail. For a mere $4.85 and four minutes of your time, the hobby shop staff can create a personalized coffee mug with logos, pictures or sayings on both sides of the mug.

With over 17 type styles to choose from, it's a great gift idea. Bumper stickers can be made for $1. Additional colors cost only 60 cents each. Personalized license plates can also be made: car plates for $5 and motorcycle plates for $4. Have something you want framed? Anne Hall can do it for you or teach you how. As you can see, your base Arts and Crafts Hobby shop has lots to offer.

In addition to classes, supplies and a friendly staff, the hobby shop also runs a retail store. Staff-made crafts are usually available for sale as well as unfinished solid-wood furniture.

On sale at 30 - 75 percent savings, are items like ceramic Christmas trees with lights, beer steins, coffee cups, planters and a punch bowl set. As you can see, the base Arts and Crafts Hobby Shop has lots to offer. In the words of Col. McCullough, "You can't beat 'em!"

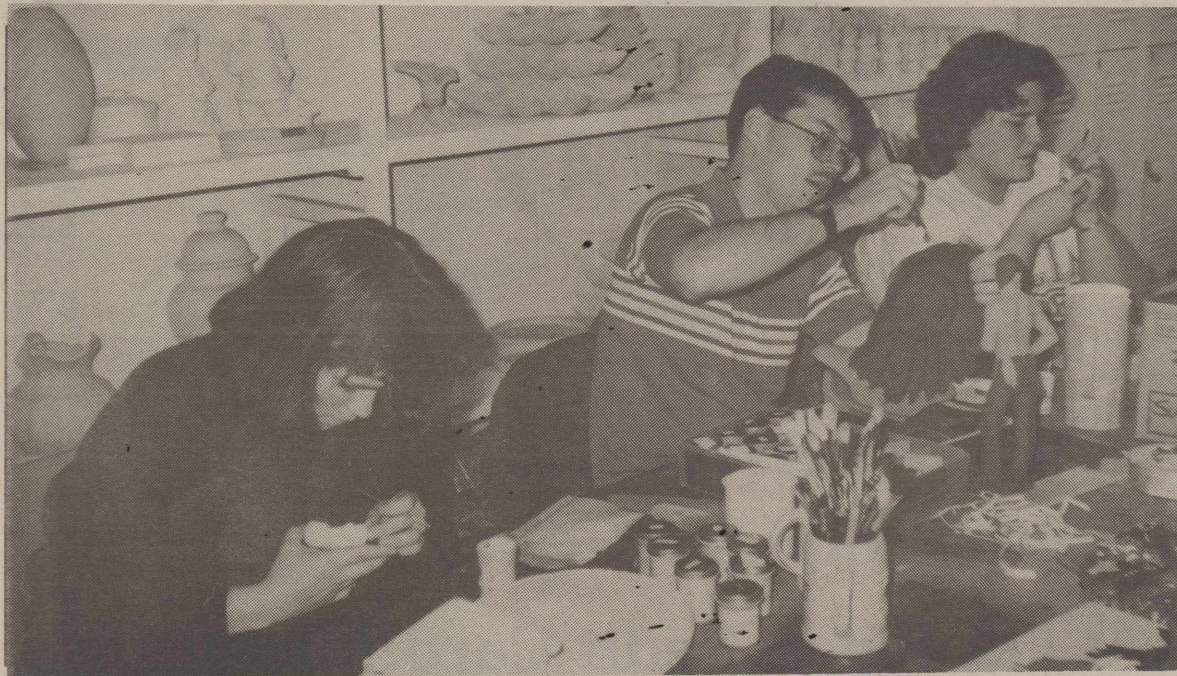

The Hobby Shop is closed for the holidays from Dec. 23 to Jan. 2. Director Chris Raynor insists, "there is still time to make last-minute gifts for those extra people on your list." For more information, contact Chris Raynor or Christy Gardner at the hobby shop, 3241.

A few thoughts to ponder

By Lt. Col. William D. Duncan Jr.
Assistant DCM

As we dug out from the snow last Friday to get back to flying, I was once again reminded that the mission only gets done when the entire base is part of the action.

Many of you recall that last year it took several days to dig out from the snow. This year the Civil Engineers worked the snow plows from the moment snow started falling and their efforts allowed the wing to start flying once the temperature got above freezing. Maintenance personnel, meanwhile, got a lot of scheduled maintenance out of the way — necessary work that ensures the continued quality and reliability of Reese jets. A lot of their efforts also went into clearing snow from hangar access routes and out from under the aircraft so that when the weather finally improved we were ready to get back to the flying game.

Many of you have been tracking the progress of the aircraft maintenance complex's conversion to civilianized maintenance. Here's where we stand. On Nov. 3, prospective contractors visited Reese to take a look at our facilities and the physical plant they would have to work with. They have until Dec. 22 to submit their proposals to the contracting office (the 3303d Contracting Squadron in San Antonio, Texas). The source selection process begins once proposals are in. For Reese, this process is scheduled from Dec. 23 through June — from proposal review through selection and public announcement. Reese will send two maintenance members as part of ATC's technical review panel to study all proposals for technical merit — simply put, to determine if the contractor can do the mission — not with minimum maintenance and personnel — but with quality and reliability built in. Their work takes place January through March. Concurrently, other experts in the command review all proposals for cost. It's important to point out that the technical review panel doesn't see the cost data — they concentrate wholly on the technical merits of each proposal. In late April, ATC compares the "best" contractor against Reese's "in-house" MEO (Most Efficient Organization) bid. The outcome determines whether aircraft maintenance is done by a contractor or a greatly expanded civil service work force in October 1989. No matter which direction maintenance takes, there are a lot of people working very hard to make sure the transition goes smoothly for the wing and especially for our maintenance workforce.

Another transition also takes place this time of year as the holiday season approaches. Flying tapers off and many people take leave to be with family and friends. The Christmas Season brings joy and happiness and we should be thankful for the many blessings that we enjoy as Americans and Air Force members. But we should also be conscious that there will be sadness for many families this year. Let's pledge to be safe and sober when we get behind the wheel. Let's pledge that we won't be the cause of someone's sorrow this Christmas Season. Happy Holidays.

Looking ahead eliminates head-on collisions

By Sheila Shulmeyer
Wing Safety

The thought of head-on collisions should strike terror in the heart of any driver. Unfortunately, head-on collisions are becoming more prevalent on today's highways. Reese, just last January, suffered the loss of two of its members to a civilian drunk driver who was traveling the wrong way on an interstate.

In addition, ATC experienced three other fatalities due to drunk drivers traveling the wrong way on our nation's highways. Five fatalities in 1988—more than enough to tell us that as drivers, we need to sharpen our defensive driving skills; especially during the holidays when many of us are traveling to see family and friends and drinking more during celebrations and parties.

There are ways to avoid those drunk or disoriented drivers out there.

The National Safety Council recommends these tips:

* Read the road ahead. Night is a high-risk time for wrong-way drivers. Darkness makes it easier for drivers to choose the wrong ramp. Watch out for interchanges. Remember, the closer you are to an interchange, the less time someone getting on the roadway the wrong way will have to realize it. Approach off-ramps with caution. Also, characteristics of some highways can create illusions. Cars on curves or traveling parallel to the highway can momentarily appear to be in your path.

Pay close attention until you're sure that they are not.

* Ride to the right. The rule of the road in the U.S. is to keep right. Most wrong-way drivers don't know what they're doing, but you may pass each other harmlessly if you both keep right. If your path to the right is blocked by another vehicle, a culvert or something equally firm, you might have to dodge to the left. Keep your options open. Most wrong-way drivers are drunk. This could work in your favor since the drunk can usually focus on only one thing at a time and will tend to react more slowly.

* Reduce speed. Give yourself more time to act at the first hint of trouble. It's always wise to drive slower in high-risk situations such as after dark or bad weather.

* Ride right off the road. It's better to drive off the road than hit an oncoming car.

It is important to avoid wrong-way drivers, but avoiding becoming a wrong-way driver is equally important.

* If strange roads become just too confusing, stop and read your map. Don't make hasty decisions about which way to go.

* If other cars blink their lights or honk at you, or you see the backs of road signs, you can safely assume you're going the wrong way.

The best defense in all your driving, whether you're on a trip or just going to the store—wear your seat belt and don't drive drunk!

Twice the Joy.

We'd like to share a special Christmas story that Gary Middlebrooks and his wife Kelly are twice as grateful for this holiday season.

MIRACLES OF MEDICINE

Last October, Kelly was admitted into Lubbock General's Maternal-Fetal Intensive Care Unit at 28 weeks because she was experiencing premature labor. Kelly and her doctor were prepared during this pregnancy. Two years ago, she had lost a baby at 26 weeks.

Lubbock General's Maternal-Fetal Intensive Care Unit is one of a few units of its kind in the country that provides specialized medical care for mothers who are diagnosed with "high risk" pregnancies.

After spending six weeks in the Maternal-Fetal Intensive Care Unit under the watchful and caring attention of her physicians and nurses, Kelly gave birth to healthy twin boys.

WE'RE YOUR HOSPITAL

Because of your commitment and generosity to the hospital district, Lubbock General is able to provide the specialty care of our Maternal-Fetal Intensive Care Unit. This Unit is making a dramatic difference in the lives of families like the Middlebrooks. During the holiday season, we want to thank each of you for supporting your hospital —
Lubbock General.

Parking areas closed Dec. 20 for ceremony

Due to the 64th Flying Training Wing change of command ceremony Dec. 20, various parking areas near the flightline will be closed off to traffic. If you park in one of these areas, you will be required to find an alternate parking area for the day.

The parking areas between Base Operations, the fire department, the 35th Flying Training Squadron and Bldg. 75 (OSI/DP), will be closed. The parking lot east of Hangar 70 (across from Windmill Lanes) is also closed for the day, according to MSgt. Thomas Madigan, 64th Security Police Squadron change of command coordinator.

Alternate parking areas are: the area north of Data Automation; the parking lot across from Simler Theater; up and down Hangarline Road and Main Street; and the area between the water tower and the 1958th Communications Squadron.

For members working swing-shift the day of the ceremony, the barriers should be removed by 4 p.m. In addition, members attending the ceremony are asked to walk to the flightline from their duty stations to avoid further congestion. Likewise, persons coming to the ceremony from Reese Village are also asked to walk.

Maintenance gears down so aircraft won't gear-up

By SrA. Kimberly Nelson
Roundup Staff Writer

Just when things are running smoothly, a message from Headquarters Air Training Command comes down to change something. A new Time Compliance Technical Order (TCTO) was recently established for the T-38s. The new TCTO 691 came about as the result of an inspection into a T-38 malfunction. A T-38 from Laughlin AFB, Texas, was required to belly flop a landing due to a missing side brace pivot pin in the main landing gear of the aircraft. The pin secures the side braces to the main fuselage, allowing the landing gear to raise and lower. Without this pin, the gear was unable to lower and lock in place allowing for a smooth landing, therefore, causing the pilot to land gear-up.

Throughout the investigation, 172 maintenance discrepancies were found and over 400 man-hours were required within a month's time working on the uplock roller malfunction.

Immediately after receipt of ATC's message, a local initiative was established requiring disassembling the landing gear, discarding the old bolt (used to hold in the pivot pin) and replacing with a newly modified bolt and self-locking shafted nut. Once this was completed, the T-38s were then returned to service. SSgt. Al Lizotte, SSgt. Edward Marko, SrA. Anthony Griffin and SrA. Jason Bell, from the 64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron, formed a four-member team that worked for four days at 10 hours per day to complete a fleet of 99 aircraft. "Although it involved hard work and long hours for the team, it was necessary to have a small number involved to keep integrity up and have constant control of the job at hand," said CMSgt. Arthur Lowery, chief, T-38 branch.

Maintainers from both the 64th Organizational and Field Maintenance Squadrons are still hard at work reconstructing the gear to prevent future malfunctions. During daily inspections the landing gear is thoroughly checked to ensure proper functioning of the aircraft. The new TCTO also requires that during all major inspections, the pivot pin and connecting nut and bolt be replaced, requiring approximately two-hours of work from beginning to end.

RIVET Workforce combines maintenance specialties

More than 80,000 maintenance people Air Force wide are affected by the change in RIVET Workforce reflected in Air Force Regulation 39-1, Airman Classification.

RIVET Workforce combines similar maintenance specialty codes to produce a more flexible, mobile and survivable workforce.

During the past 20 years, the Air Force has made technological advancements in weapon systems and maintenance concepts. RIVET Workforce updates the specialty classification structure to match these advances.

RIVET Workforce has been in development since the spring of 1984 and is now being implemented. The first specialty code conversions began in April 1987 and will continue through October 1989.

RIVET Workforce affects not only job skills, but assignments and promotions as well. When completed, nearly all maintenance specialties will be renumbered to a 45XXX, the manned aerospace career field.

This also helps project assignments. Assignment opportunities will be more consistent because individuals will work at different bases within a command that have the same weapon systems. Knowing where specialties are used can help a maintainer plan assignments.

Because RIVET Workforce combines similar career fields, the process will broaden the worker's and supervisor's experiences and responsibilities.

Training courses and career development courses will be updated and, if necessary, there will be a one-year specialty knowledge test exemption for particular specialties until new tests are developed and the career development courses are in the field.

Individuals will compete for stripes against their contemporaries who are also working with a command or similar system. Hands-on experience will be more directly related to the promotion process.

RIVET Workforce is designed to create a more flexible and mobile work force to support both wartime deployment and training missions with fewer specialties and people.

The maintainer will be more familiar with the job and more knowledgeable of the mission.

Unit supervisors and the Consolidated Base Personnel Office have more information on the RIVET Workforce. (AFNS)

Crime Line

By Sgt. Kevin Dye
Base Crime Prevention Monitor

There's no doubt that military personnel and their families rely on the Security Police to protect them from crime. Are you aware that there is a great deal that you as a military member can do to protect yourself?

The Air Force, concerned with the rising crime rate, has developed a program called Operation Identification. Air Force members and their families simply mark items with their social security number and the pro-letters AF, using an engraver. Proper marking of such items as televisions, stereos, and other attractive pilferable items will help deter thieves from stealing them.

A list of all items marked is placed on an AF Form 1670. This form is kept by the individual for safekeeping, then if marked property is stolen it can be properly identified and returned once it is recovered.

Checks of the local pawn shops are made on a regular basis by the Security Police for stolen property belonging to Air Force members. If your property is retrieved from a pawn shop or by any local police agency, and is properly marked, your property is sent to you free of charge.

To mark items, simply contact your unit crime prevention representative and obtain an operation identification package, or stop by the Security Police Squadron. Engravers are available 24 hours a day at the law enforcement desk for your use. For more information on how you can mark your property call Sgt. Kevin Dye at 3615.

Amn. Kelly Berg, from the 64th Security Police Squadron, practices using the engraver on an office radio. (USAF photo by SrA. Greg Spraggins)

Maximum deduction. You can deduct IRA contributions up to the amount of the deduction (full or partial) you can take, or 100% of your taxable compensation, whichever is less.

$200 floor. The partial deduction has a $200 floor. For example, if your deduction would have been reduced to less than $200 (but not zero), you can deduct IRA contributions up to $200 or 100% of your taxable compensation, whichever is less. If the deduction is completely phased out (reduced to zero), no deduction is allowed.

The IRA deduction: do you qualify?

By Capt. Mark Garrard
Base Legal Office

Prior to 1987, all contributions made to your IRA (Individual Retirement Arrangement/Account) were tax deductible up to $2,000.

Tax reform last year created new rules that may reduce or eliminate your IRA deduction if you have moderate to high income and are covered by a retirement plan at work. DOD employees, active duty and civilian members, are covered by retirement plans and therefore must consider the income limitations set forth above.

If you fall in the "partial deduction" range, the legal office can help you calculate your maximum partial deduction.

Retired folks who are receiving benefits from a previous employer's plan, such as retired military members are considered not covered by that plan. Therefore, unless you have taken a second job which provides a separate retirement plan, you may take the full IRA deduction.

To be deductible this year, your IRA contribution must be made before April 17, 1989. The deadline is generally April 15, but this year the 15th falls on Saturday and the code provides the taxpayer until the next business day to file his/her return. What if the taxpayer wishes to file in January, has not yet made the 1988 contribution, but intends to before April 17? No problem. The taxpayer may indicate the contribution intended and take the deduction on the Form 1040A or 1040. But don't forget to make your contribution before the due date or the IRS will come a-calling.

The following methods of investing IRA funds are permitted under the code:

- The money can be put into a domestic trust or custodial account, often managed by a bank, credit union, investment firm or similar organization. The trustee, in turn, may invest in a wide variety of assets often pursuant to your direction.

- The money can be invested directly in individual annuity contracts issued by insurance companies that provide for flexible premium payments.

- IRA assets used to acquire collectibles, such as art works, rugs, antiques, or gems, will be treated as improper taxable distributions. The taxpayer may, however, properly invest in gold or silver coins of the United States. This provision was extended last month by Congress and the President in the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988. That Act contained a clause which permits gold and silver coins issued by any state to be used as IRA vehicles provided the coins are held by a person independent of the IRA owner. Once the IRS can draft the necessary regulations we'll hopefully see a wider variety of investment opportunities in this area for the IRA investor.

The Drunk Driver's Twelfth Day

By Richard Hamblen
64th Civil Engineering Squadron

*On the Twelfth Day of Christmas
My true love took from me:*

*Twelve keys a-jingling;
Eleven car doors swinging;
Ten tires a-peeling;
Nine fam'lies squealing;
Eight D. W. I.'s;*

*Seven honking horns;
Six Blue Nuns;
Five mad cops.*

*Four others' lives;
Three little wrecks;
Two six-packs...*

And a tire track between my eyes.

Eat, enjoy, and make it a merry Christmas

The holiday season is a time of family gathering and friendly get-togethers.

It's also a time when people drink too much.

If you're a host or hostess for a holiday party, take a responsible approach to serving alcoholic beverages. Here are some guidelines on how to be a good host or hostess or a guest.

Mix it up

Almost everyone who arrives at a holiday party is immediately invited to go "get a drink." This year, take the new arrivals around the room and give them a chance to get acquainted before sending them off to the bar. It will give more warmth to your party.

At the bar, have a wide selection of all types of beverages, including soft drinks for those who either do not want to drink alcohol or who want to "ride for a while."

Pace it

If you, as host or hostess, are mixing the drinks, make them on the light side.

If you hire a bartender for the occasion, take the time to brief the individual before the party to pace the drinks, not push them.

Have plenty of snacks — forget the calories just for the holiday season — at the bar and around the room. And make certain that as many of these snacks as possible are not heavily salted.

A piece of cheese on an unsalted cracker gives your guests something to nibble on while at the same time does not make them thirsty. Singles only

Some guests find themselves drinking more than they normally would at parties.

Make certain that your guests are served "single shots," not doubles.

And whatever you do, don't push the drinks. It's not embarrassing for you as a host or hostess to have a guest standing talking without a drink in hand.

What is embarrassing is the guest who drinks too much because of doubles or pushed drinks.

Eat early

If your holiday party includes dinner, serve it early.

If wine is to be served with the meal, take that amount of alcohol into consideration when figuring how much drinking should go on at your party.

At the end of your dinner, make certain that coffee is served.

This isn't going to sober someone who has had too much to drink, but it can be the "one for the road" instead of another glass of alcohol.

If it happens

If a guest does have too much to drink at your holiday party, make certain the individual does not drive.

With a spare bedroom in the house, your problem can be solved easily.

If that is not possible, call a cab, and tell the individual that you will personally see that his or her car is delivered the following morning.

The secret to not having a drunk guest is being a responsible and caring host or hostess. (AFPS)

Class history

89-03...the party is not over

By 1st Lt. Rick Hermansen

Twenty-eight young men — some not so young — arrived at Reese AFB, Dec. 11, 1987. We were eager to start training, learning and flying. Of course we were also anxious to get out of our polyester blues and into the coveted nomex flight suit. All of this would have to wait, for as soon as we arrived we had to take two weeks off for the holidays. For most of us, those two weeks seemed like two years, as we impatiently looked forward to flying.

Phase I of our training was full of academics — "Lieutenant Booker, how important is the engine-driven fuel pump?"; full of physicals — "Lieutenant, turn your head and cough!"; and physiological training, including the altitude chamber and parasailing — "No slugs!", "Nice bunt!", "What's a PLF?"

Phase II began at the end of January when we arrived on the flightline. There we were greeted by the biggest, meanest and ugliest IP's in the 35th. First came the stand-up EP's: "Lieutenant Hermansen, your hair is on fire and your brains are in the map case, what do you do?" "Handgrips — Waise, Squiggers — Tweeze." "SIT DOWN!" Then we finally started flying and the learning curve really skyrocketed. Remember the day Lieutenant Blue learned who his buddy was? "Who's your buddy, Lieutenant?" "Why yayayou are SasaSir!" "Wrong, I'm your IDO. TRIM'S your buddy!" We all began building up the spin time in the Tweet, but Greg had more 'spin time' than anyone else; he became an expert at the merry-go-round. Formation came pretty quickly, but not quick enough for Ward, who joined up on a two-ship in the pattern "Stage 13, initial, breaking out!" We finally got to go cross country and, if we planned really well and didn't waste any fuel, we could make it out of Texas. Phase II came to a close and Lieutenant Jutte let everyone know it when he said, "Colt 22, gear down, Tweet complete!" We had mastered the T-37 and we thought we were Sierra Hotel, as we headed down the street to take on the White Rocket in the final phase of our training.

The 54th IP's differed from the 35th. They treated us like we knew something, almost like we were pilots. Boy, did we prove them wrong. Going from the T-37 to the T-38 was like going from a VW Bug to a Formula 1 racecar. The day we caught up with the jet, they soloed us in that supersonic bird. The day after that, it seemed, we took our first check ride in the Talon.

Once that ordeal was over we moved fast and furious into formation: "...the meat of the program." Some of us liked it rare, some of us liked it well-done, some of us had our fill and some of us hungered for more. Hurling through the air at hundreds of miles an hour, only three feet away from another jet, piloted by some knucklehead, is not everyone's forte. Cross country in the Talon was great. We had to decide between California and Florida, and anywhere in between as our destinations. No matter which destination, everyone's view was the same under 'the bag.'

We all did "brain dead" things in the T-38, but some of us were unfortunate enough to have witnesses. Remember Ben's famous PIREP to the SOF: "Trailboss, Trailboss, Bugle 13, PIREP — ah@#@#! Never mind." Then there was Weber flying solo at night and yielding three consecutive times for Tweets who were landing on a completely different runway! The RSU couldn't take it anymore and had to inform him of his goof before he was min fuel.

Class 89-03 will be remembered as a hard working, hard driving group. Fifty percent of us were FAR'ed and a record twenty-five percent of us became academic aces. We left the base a better place with the long hours and hard work we put into fixing up the "Smokin' Hole," making it the favorite watering hole on Friday nights. In addition to these accomplishments, two of our classmates got married this year and another one and his wife had a baby boy.

This has been one of the greatest years of our lives. It was the culmination of having dared to dream, having aspired to a goal and subsequently having had the guts and determination to go for it! A few of us did not make it, but they had the courage to chase a dream and we respect them for it. Now that this one goal has been met and we have our wings, the way is open for us to set and achieve a multitude of new goals as we move on in our careers. Maybe, just maybe, the party is not over.

General Delligatti transferred to the Directorate of Operations and Readiness, Headquarters U.S. Air Force, Washington, D.C., in August 1975. In 1977 he became assistant director for joint matters, programs and budget review. In April 1981 General Delligatti was assigned as chief of strategic programs, Directorate of Programs and Evaluation, Deputy Chief of Staff, Programs and Resources. He became chief of staff, Air Force Academy, in March 1982. From August 1983 to August 1984 General Delligatti served as deputy director of forces, Directorate of Programs and Evaluation, Air Force headquarters.

He was then assigned as deputy director for international programs, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff, Programs and Resources. In February 1985 he became the director of international programs.

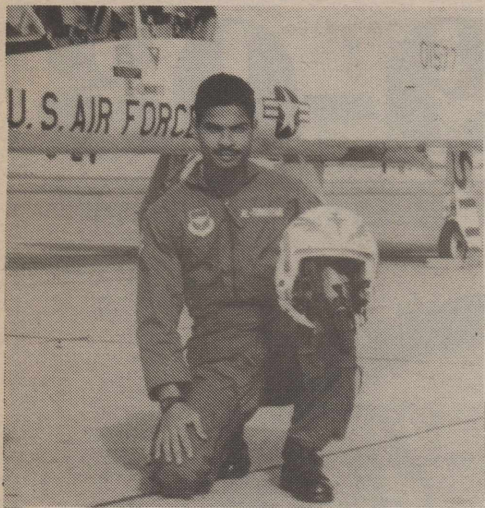

He served as deputy chief of staff for plans and requirements, Headquarters Air Training Command, from March 1987 to Oct. 1988, when he assumed his present duties.

He was promoted to major general Oct. 1, 1988, with same date of rank.

High Flight

Oh, I have slipped the surly bonds of earth
And danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings;
Sunward I've climbed, and joined the tumbling mirth
Of sun-split clouds—and done a hundred things
You have not dreamed of—wheeled and soared and swung

High in the sunlit silence. Hov'ring there,
I've chased the shouting wind along, and flung
My eager craft through footless halls of air.

Up, up the long, delirious, burning blue
I've topped the windswept heights with easy grace
Where never lark, or even eagle flew.

And while with silent, lifting mind I've trod
The high untrespassed sanctity of space,
Put out my hand, and touched the face of God.

Icebusters

Keeping Reese defrosted

By SrA. Greg Spraggins
Editor, Roundup

Remember the old saying, "There's got to be an easier way?" Reese has found an easier way and is implementing it, and possibly setting the standard for the rest of the Air Force.

The easier way consisted of converting a MA-1A Gas Turbine Compressor (designed to start aircraft engines), to blow hot air through a tapered nozzle. It takes approximately 15 minutes to deice the entire aircraft.

The old procedure involves applying deicing fluid and wiping dry with a special absorbing cloth, which is also quite expensive. Also, heaters are used to melt the snow and ice. But the volume of air from the heater does not blow the water off and if refreezes shortly afterwards, then the procedure must then be repeated. This is very costly and has created delays and aborts in the flying mission.

The Aerospace Ground Equipment (AGE) branch's first attempt at the idea using a bell shaped nozzle was tedious, time consuming and required the use of many special tools to achieve the necessary temperature, sometimes taking one and one-half hours to properly adjust. Even then the air was 165-210 degrees, too hot for use on the aircraft canopy.

After three weeks MSgt. Leslie Wallace, TSgt. Cecil Smith, Charles Daugherty, Charles Butler and Adam Huerta of the AGE branch came up with a nozzle that reduced the heat to 120 degrees, and other variations that allow the compressor to be converted in only 15 minutes.

The MA-1A Deicing Unit was incorporated into a Technical Order for T-37s after ATC approved it Oct. 29, 1987. The system has been in use at Reese for almost two years, but other bases are still using the older method. Until other bases use the system, Reese will be one step ahead.

The REPAIR program designed to increase readiness

By SMSgt. Albert Fowler
NCOIC, Deficiency Analysis

The Repair Evaluation Proposal and Identification of Repairability (REPAIR) program was designed to increase unit repair cycle self-sufficiency, to decrease cost and pipeline time needed to repair parts and to increase readiness.

The goal is to identify every aircraft that we have the capability to repair but not the authorization, then obtain the required authorization for repair of the item.

There are many items which can be repaired at the organization or intermediate level but are being repaired only at depot level. In addition, some repairable items have been improperly coded as expendable and are being thrown away rather than repaired. Units should check XB3 and SD ERRC (expendability, repairability, recoverability category) coded items to determine if the item can be repaired locally. Any "throw-away" parts or "depot-repaired" parts you think can be repaired locally are prospects for the REPAIR program.

Each unit must establish a REPAIR program/SMR code training program (reference ATCR 66-8). Don't wait until the last minute to get your program set up. It's sure to be a "high interest" item during the unit effectiveness inspection.

For more information about the REPAIR program call 3291 or 3710.

Christmas Time:

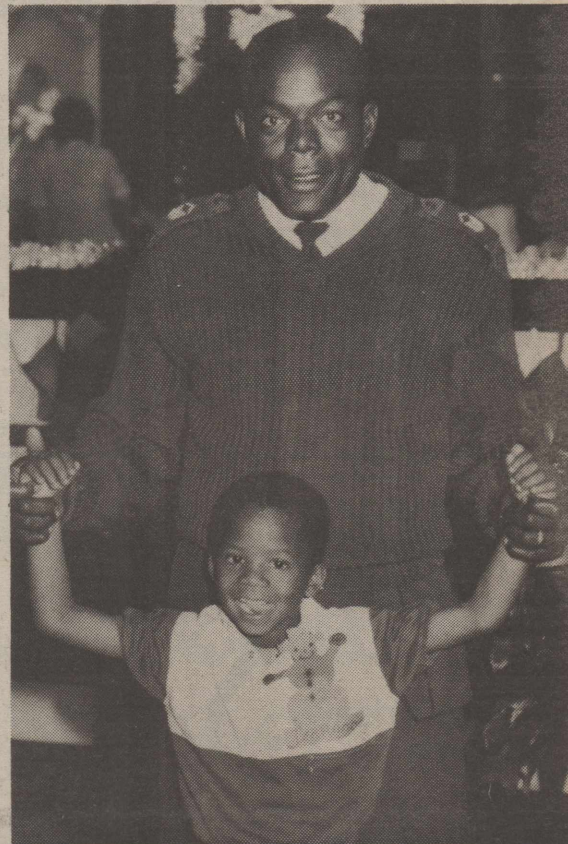

a time for giving and sharing

The 3500 Mission Support Squadron sponsored the third Annual Children's Christmas Party, Dec. 2 at the Enlisted Open Mess. For this special occasion, a bus full of children from the downtown Lubbock area came to join in on Reese's holiday festivities.

The day was filled with playing games, eating goodies, a pinata breaking contest and lots of smiling faces. "Putting on the party not only gave us satisfaction for participating in the community functions, but joy in seeing all the Christmas cheer in the children, said SSgt. Ada Jimenez, project officer. As a special surprise for the children, Santa dropped in for a special visit. He listened to the children's Christmas lists and then gave each one a Christmas stocking and special pre-Christmas gift before saying "Good-bye."

"The party really took a lot of support from some very dedicated Unit Advisory Council members," said Sergenat Jimenez.

First sergeants and commanders encourage squadron members participation in the Unit Advisory Councils. For more information, call your squadron orderly room.

Credit is your responsibility

By Capt. Russell A. Roberts
Chief, Accounting, Finance Branch

Christmas is a time when people tend to create large amounts of debt through the use of credit cards. When you use credit, remember that you have the following responsibilities:

- To pay back the amount of money you borrow or the cost of what you are buying, plus an additional charge for the use of the money (finance charge) and the time you take to repay it. (If you repay all of what you owe within 30 days you may not have to pay any additional charges.)

- To pay all of the money you owe, regardless of personal crises or unexpected situations.

- To make your payments on time. If you are late with a payment, you may be asked to pay all the money you owe immediately.

- To not sell items you are buying until all payments are made. You can use the item, but it belongs to the creditor.

- To give back what you are buying if you cannot finish paying for it. You will lose the money you have already paid. You may even have to pay more money if the creditor is not able to sell the item for the amount you still owe on it.

- To be responsible for any damage done to what you have bought on credit if you must return it.

Before using credit, you should be sure you can meet these responsibilities. Sensible moderation is a key to using credit.

Ask yourself these questions

when considering the use of credit:

- Is the item worth the added cost?

- Is this a necessity?

- Should/could I save now to pay cash for future items?

- What is the difference between the cash price and the credit price? Or what is the dollar cost of credit?

- Could I pay less by choosing another form of credit?

- Could I make a larger down payment without upsetting the family spending plan?

- Can I meet this payment plus all other monthly expenses?

Financial responsibility includes making sound financial decisions. Consider the cost before committing yourself. The Personal Financial Management Program (PFMP) can provide you with sound financial advice. For more information call Capt. Roberts at 3432.

Seven new episodes of 'Great Planes' to premiere in February

Seven new episodes of Great Planes, the 13-part series chronicling the history and development of warplanes, will premiere on The Discovery Channel beginning on Wednesday, Feb. 1, at 8 p.m. The Grumman F-14 Tom Cat (pictured above) has rendered our aircraft carriers impervious to foreign attack.

Volunteers needed for Senior Santa Program

Lubbock Parks and Recreation still needs many more volunteers to help with this year's Lubbock Senior Santa Program. This event provides a personal visit and a special gift to homebound elderly residents in Lubbock.

Funded totally by donations, this program has been recognized by the Texas Recreation and Parks Society as the best new program in Texas. Last year, approximately 1,400 seniors were served, and at least that many are expected this year. We still need many volunteers to make these visits.

The program started Dec. 12 and runs through Christmas.

If you or your organization would like to donate a brief amount of your time for this very special program, please contact: Newt Wheeler at 762-6411 ext. 2675.

Seven new episodes of Great Planes, the 13-part series of one-hour programs chronicling the history and development of U.S. warplanes, will premiere on The Discovery Channel (TDC) beginning on Wednesday, Feb. 1, at 8 p.m. The original six hours, which aired in July 1988, will air in addition to the seven new episodes. Great Planes airs on Wednesdays at 8 p.m., Fridays at 3 p.m. and Saturday nights at midnight through April.

Great Planes takes viewers to Miramar Naval Air Base in San Diego, Calif., the site of the famous "Top Gun" school. There the incredible capabilities of the F-14 Tom Cat are examined as pilots test their flying skills against potential Soviet fighters. Specially equipped with long-range weapons, the F-14 Tom Cat has proven to be formidable in the defense of our naval aircraft carriers.

Each episode highlights a particular aircraft including the Grumman F-14 Tom Cat, the Boeing B-52 Stratofortress, the Lockheed P-38 Lightning and the General Dynamics F-111. The aircraft are examined in terms of their capabilities and constraints. Emphasis is placed on the planning and the actual assembly of the planes, as well as on the personnel who design, build and fly them.

Previously classified footage of test flights are revealed as the series traces the production of military aircraft from drawing board to prototype to the final flight-ready model.

The series also presents commentary from officers, crew members and strategists on their flying experiences. Featured are comments from the Enola Gay crew about their 1945 Atomic bomb mission over Hiroshima and an account of the 1986 bombing of Libyan military sites by American forces.

Reflecting the pride of people who helped develop warplanes, this series is a comprehensive report which pays tribute to both the glamorous spotlight as well as the tremendous financial and emotional price expended over the last 50 years of designing, building and flying warplanes.

The Discovery Channel offers documentary entertainment 18 hours a day in the areas of history, science and technology, human adventure, world exploration and nature. TDC telecasts daily from 8 a.m. to 2 a.m. and currently reaches 36.6 million households in the United States. (Source: A. C. Nielsen Company, October 1988)

from Texas Tech University

Texas artists who are exhibited at the Texas Tech Museum and live in Lubbock include Terry Allen, Paul Milosevich, and Sara Waters-Watkins.

The Peter Rogers mural at the Museum of Texas Tech University premiered on Oct. 17, 1974. The mural, 17 by 40 feet, depicts the use of water in arid and semi-arid lands. The artist is the son-in-law of Peter Hurd, who painted the rotunda mural in the original museum building, now Holden Hall. Peter Hurd is the son-in-law of great American artist N.C. Wyeth.

Fitness and health

By SSgt. Randy Pratt
Fitness Center Instructor

During the past few weeks it seems to me that the gym is either closed down or certain portions of the gym are restricted. What's the problem?

Good question! You're right. We have closed certain parts of the gym and for some good and exciting reasons.

- Starting in October and finishing just last week we've had a contractor installing air conditioning. Until now we've had no air conditioning, making it quite miserable in the summer, as you may remember.

- Our men's showers are being renovated with new plumbing and eventually new tiling.

- The basketball court floor gets a new finish every year and last week was the time for that.

- Quarterly, all carpets are cleaned and monthly all the tiled floors are stripped and waxed. This has required a half day closure each time. But, starting in January this will be done after hours.

- The second week in December was scheduled for the annual Christmas Classic basketball tournament, thus restricting use of the basketball court and men's locker room for three days.

- Finally, in the very near future we will have an all new weight room. The 64th Civil Engineering Squadron is installing a lowered ceiling with more lighting. Mirrors are being hung along three walls. More than $70,000 of new weight equipment is ready for installation once the ceiling is finished. Soon to be available are: dumbbells, barbells, weight machines, benches, a 17-station nautilus circuit, computerized bikes and treadmills and much more. Once finished, Reese's weight room will rival all other weight rooms in the Lubbock area.

Questions about exercise, fitness or sports, may be written down and sent to the Reese Physical Fitness Center, 64 ABG/SSRS, or called in to 6020. An answer will be given in writing and some of the select ones will be published in the Roundup.

MWR to present 'I Ought to be in Pictures'

Get your tickets early! Tickets are now on sale for Neil Simon's, "I Ought to Be in Pictures," being presented at the Simler Theater Jan. 25 at 7 p.m.

This heart warming and funny comedy hit, by one of America's favorite playwrights, is being performed by The Repertory Theater of America/Alpha-Omega Players, a nationally acclaimed touring company. During their 21 year existence, The Repertory Theater has performed on stage over 10,000 times.

"I Ought to Be in Pictures," is the story of Herb, a fading Hollywood scriptwriter who abandoned his family 16 years earlier, and of Libby, Herb's 19 year old tomboy daughter, who one day appears on his doorstep. Libby pretends to be a young aspiring actress, making her way to California and — hopefully — into her father's heart. John Talmadge-Wright plays Herb with Heidi Schwarzenbart appearing as Libby.

Don't miss this spectacular event presented by the Morale,

Welfare and Recreation Division.

Doors open at 6 p.m. and tickets, if purchased then are $5. Advance tickets can be purchased for $3.50 from the Mathis Recreation Center, Base Library and Windmill Lanes during their normal operating hours.
