SIX FLIERS FEARED LOST AT SEA

Sunday Returns Make Little Change In Primary Results

TOM CONNALLY HOLDS LEAD OF 55,000 VOTES

Less Than 100 Counties Reported Complete Late Sunday

MARRS HOLDING LEAD

Early Returns Lead To Prediction of 602,000 Votes

DALLAS, Aug. 26.—Sunday's returns failed to change the results of Saturday's primary as announced by the Texas Election bureau at 1 o'clock Sunday morning. Sunday's tabulations showed the following totals:

Returns to the Texas Election bureau at 5:30 p. m. from 215 out of 253 counties in the state, including 75 complete:

Senator: Connally 290,549, Mayfield 235,276.

Superintendent of Public Instruction: Garner 215,540, Marrs 288,660.

Land Commissioner: Robison 314,767, Terrell 177,812.

Civil Appeals, District 11: Funderburk 23,990, Patterson 20,541.

Congress, District 17: Callaway 20,690, Lee 25,518.

Twenty-one counties where elections are supposed to have been held have sent no returns. These counties in July cast a grand total of 17,471 votes. While less than 100 reported counties are listed as complete, it is evident that nearly as many more are practically complete.

A comparison of returns from representative counties reported completed with returns from the same counties in July shows these counties cast but 82 per cent of their July totals. Should this average be maintained the total vote will run to 602,700.

Counties reported are: Castro, Chambers, Crane, Edwards, Gaines, Garza, Grimes, Hardeman, Hudspeth, Kenedy King, Live Oak, McMullen, Ochiltree, Refugio, Sabine, San Jacinto, Sherman, Sutton and Waller.

COUNTY RACES ALL SETTLED

Fruechte-Spence Vote Unchanged in Count

With all Wichita county offices definitely determined by the complete returns late Saturday night, the district attorney's office was the only one incomplete.

Word received Sunday from W. E. Forgey, Archer county Democratic chairman, and Graham Steward, Young county chairman, indicated that there were not enough votes out in their counties to alter the results evident Saturday night.

No new totals were available, but the lead gained by Sam Spence for district attorney was such that it was considered impossible to change it materially.

In Archer county there were six boxes containing 80 votes from which no results were received, Chairman Forgey said. One of these boxes containing 12 votes was reported Sunday. In Archer county, Spence received 653 votes and Fruechte 506 in the votes counted.

Chairman Stewart of Young county said there was no counting in his county Sunday and that about 400 votes remained uncounted. Spence received 983 in Young county and Fruechte received 625. In Wichita county, Spence received 4304 and Fruechte received 3366. Spence's grand total was 5890 and Fruechte's was 4520, or a difference of 1370 votes.

NOTED FIGURES IN PARIS FOR PEACE PARLEY

Representatives of Fifteen Nations Sign Pact Today

KELLOGG FETED

U. S. Secretary's Dream Of Peace Plan Nears Realization

PARIS, Aug. 26. (UP)—A decade after the greatest military conflict in history rolled across the French frontier, representatives of 15 powers gathered here for the signing Monday of a solemn declaration renouncing war as an instrument of national policy.

The most important gathering of world political figures since the Versailles treaty signing invaded the flag-draped streets of Paris tonight to bind their nations to a document conceived by one of France's greatest statesmen and cherished and developed by an American who rose to international prominence from the obscurity of a Minnesota farming town.

M. Briand, the forceful, shrewd French minister of foreign affairs, brought into being the long-conceived idea of a pact which would banish military conflict. Through his office, France offered such a treaty to bind her people and the United States.

Kellogg Extends Pact

Secretary Kellogg saw the possibility of extending the pact to other powers and through his offices the 15 powers participating in the Locarno treaty eventually were invited to be original signatories of a document which will be extended for consideration of every nation in the world.

At last, after years of militarism, after centuries of antagonism and secrecy, most of Europe is ready for an open declaration which will make illegal the execution of any participating nation's policies by armed force; a treaty which may make possible a drastic reduction of armaments and which may bring about mankind's age-long aspirations for universal peace.

Not Peace Guarantee

No source accepts the treaty as an absolute guarantee against war. Nearly every capital of the world accepts it as the greatest step ever taken toward the peaceful settlement of international disputes.

Paris has made every effort to raise public sentiment to the height of the treaty's purpose. The flags of 15 powers—many of which have been century-old enemies—are waving together from the roof of the Quai d'Orsay tonight. For the first time since the Franco-Prussian war, 51 years ago, a German foreign minister has paid an official visit to Paris and has been received with cheers.

Although it has been pointed out that American public sentiment was largely responsible for the creation of the treaty, the French have not been unduly excited. German natives of Paris shouted a greeting to Foreign Minister Stresemann upon his arrival from Berlin and Secretary Kellogg has received a wonderful welcome, but there has not been as great a spontaneous reception as that for Woodrow Wilson when he brought to Paris his conception of a world peace plan.

Kellogg Given Dinner

The American embassy was ablaze tonight as guests arrived for a state dinner offered Secretary Kellogg and 48 guests of the protocolary list. Bright dresses of many women guests, the impressive black and white of distinguished international representatives, flashing and brilliant uniforms mingled at the door of the embassy.

In the streets a curious throng moved slowly, watched eagerly for faces familiar throughout the world, lingered in hope of hearing a word caught in the color and whirl of the affair.

American tourists, resenting their failure to secure admission for Monday's signing; reporters and photographers representing every important newspaper in the world; Germans, Belgians, Italians, Eng-

BOY SLAIN IN ATTEMPT TO DISARM ROAD BANDIT

California Youth and Sweetheart Victims of Holdup Trio Who Escape After Shooting

SANTA ANA, Calif., Aug. 26. (US)—Deputy sheriffs swept through Orange county today in search of a bandit who shot to death Delmar Kline, 21, of Long Beach, early this morning. Young Kline and his sweetheart, Miss Lavada Peterson, were seated in a machine on a country road here. A car, containing three men, stopped beside them. One man, wearing overalls and his face concealed by a red handkerchief stepped on the running board and, flourishing a pistol, ordered Kline to "stick 'em up".

Instead of obeying, the youth attempted to disarm the bandit. The gunman sent three shots into his body and Kline slumped over the steering wheel dead. The robber and his companions fled.

TWO OTHER DEATHS IN "MYSTERY HOUSE" PROBED

UNION, Mo., Aug. 26. (UP)—Two deaths in the "house of mystery," in which five persons died after being treated by Mrs. Bertha Gifford, 50-year-old "good samaritan," were unexplained tonight although the mystery concerning three deaths was solved with the confession of Mrs. Gifford.

The farmer's wife confessed to authorities late Saturday that she had caused the death of three of the persons as a result of her penchant for placing arsenic in medicine because "the patients were suffering stomach pains and I put the arsenic in the medicine to quiet the pains."

Mrs. Gifford, confined here in a cell of the Franklin county jail, was reticient about discussing the case today. The only thing she added to her statement was that her husband, Eugene B. Gifford, had nothing to do with the deaths. An exoneration of her husband was obtained by Sheriff Arthur Gorg.

Doctors Baffled

Between 1925 and 1927, five mysterious deaths occurred on the Gifford farm near Catawissa, Mo. In each case, physicians who treated them reported the cause of death undetermined. Soon the house became known as "the house of mystery."

But officials suspected poisoning and started an investigation. Two indictments were returned by the Franklin county grand jury and Mrs. Gifford was arrested Saturday charged with the murders of Edward Brinley, 48, and Elmer Schamel, 7.

In addition to confessing to the poisoning of Brinley and Elmer Schamel, she also admitted the poisoning of Lloyd Schamel, 9, a brother. Two other mysterious deaths in her home, those of Sherman Pounds, a relative of Gifford, and his granddaughter, Beulah Pounds, have not been explained.

All those who died in the home were relatives or friends of the

Prowler Near Al's Room at Hotel Held for Quiz

SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 26. (UP)—A young man who gave his name as Thomas Conahan, Wayne Junction, Pa., was held tonight for observation because of two visits to the Monmouth hotel here, at which Gov. Alfred E. Smith is stopping.

He first appeared at the hotel about 6 p. m. Saturday and said he wanted to see the governor. He explained, according to Joseph E. Smith, Jr., manager of the hotel, that he wanted to see "what kind of a man Smith was" in order to determine whether he should vote for him.

The hotel manager was surprised at his appearance again at 1:15 a. m. today, long after the governor had retired.

He was held on $1000 bail.

WRECK DEATH LIST GAINS

Girl, 19, Dies of Injuries In Subway Crash

NEW YORK, Aug. 26. (AP)—The death of Elizabeth Siebold, 19, of Rockaway, N. Y., in Bellevue hospital today brought to 17 the death list of the Times Square subway wreck of Friday when a heavily loaded car in a southbound interborough rapid transit express train was derailed at a switch as it was leaving the station.

Of the injured, 21 were still in hospitals today, 14 of them reported to be in serious condition.

The bodies of two victims still were unclaimed at the morgue, one, that of Mrs. Ann Quigley, 40, of Brooklyn, and the other the unidentified body of a young woman.

Victims Buried

A detail of police was required to handle the crowd of 5,000 which gathered at the first funeral of wreck victims when services were held for Mrs. Marion Zips, 29, and her 6-year-old son, Herbert, who died together when the subway car tore itself in two against the tube structure.

Although full service was restored 13 hours after the crash which occurred at the peak of the evening rush hour, subway repairmen working in shifts were still engaged in replacing the steel pillars and concrete wall wrecked by the impact of the derailed car.

"Man failure" was given as the cause of the accident by the transit commission. William Baldwin, I. R. T. maintenance man, who had been repairing the switch, was held in $10,000 bail on a charge of homicide by negligence.

Presidential Campaign May Bring Both Robinson and Sheppard Here

Joe T. Robinson, vice presidential nominee on the Democratic ticket, and Senator Morris Sheppard will probably speak here during the present presidential campaign, but the exact dates are not yet known.

Charles I. Francis said Sunday night that he has been in communication with both the men and also with the national speakers' bureau.

"I invited Mr. Robinson to speak here immediately after his speaking date at Cisco," Mr. Francis said. "He told me, however, that he was speaking subject to the orders of the speakers' bureau.

"Taking the matter up with the speakers' bureau, we were told that after his speaking dates now arranged in Texas, that Mr. Robinson would go to Tennessee and Mississippi, but that they would see to it that a date was arranged in Wichita Falls on a return trip to Texas, after September.

"Mr. Sheppard had been invited to open his speaking campaign here, and he had written to me saying that he would like to do so. He explained that he and all the speakers were subject to the orders of the speakers' bureau but agreed to suggest such an arrangement.

"It seems entirely likely that Wichitans will have the opportunity of hearing both of these noted men. When the final decision is reached and the dates are arranged, we will announce them at the earliest possible date."

To Greet Robinson

DALLAS, Aug. 26. (AP)—All members of the central Democratic campaign committee, with senatorial, district, county and precinct chairmen and co-chairmen, have been called to meet here September 3 to greet Senator Joe T. Robinson, vice presidential nominee, and to perfect plans for the state wide campaign. About 600 are expected to attend. Senator Robinson speaks here at Fair park on that date.

State Chairman James D. Young, Kaufman, and W. A. Thomas, state campaign manager, issued the call tonight for the meeting.

Chicago Gangsters Bomb Newspaper Office

CHICAGO, Aug. 26. (UP)—The Chicago Heights Star, a suburban newspaper which has been conducting a crusade against alcohol and beer runners in the "bad lands" south of the city, was bombed today.

The entire front of its two-story building was demolished by the blast. Windows within a radius of two blocks were shattered.

King Williams, editor of the paper, was convinced that gangsters hired by the bootleg syndicates which the Star was fighting were responsible for the bombing.

(AP)—Six persons were severely injured and 12 others badly bruised when the Kansas City, Clinton and Springfield passenger train was wrecked early this morning five miles south of Vista, Mo. REPUBLICANS STARTED DRY RAIDS, CLAIM

Senator Charges Dry Raids Directed by National Committee

GRAFT REVEALED

Other Departments Used To Aid G. O. P. Candidate In Election

CHARLES S. HAYDEN
Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The spectacular drive by federal prohibition agencies to "dry up" the night clubs of New York is declared by Democratic leaders to have been staged at the direction of the Republican national committee for its possible effect on the approaching presidential election.

Senator Bruce of Maryland, who sponsors this assertion, is convinced that Republican leaders thought that by wholesale raids they might uncover some connection between Tammany and the night clubs. Instead of that the only hint of scandal revealed was the claim of one celebrated hostess that she was paying protection to federal prohibition enforcement officers. These are appointees of the Coolidge administration and if the claim is true it is confirmatory of the charge made by Governor Smith in his speech of acceptance that the federal enforcement agencies are honey-combed with graft and corruption.

'Campaign' War

Significance is placed by Senator Bruce on the fact that this drive was directed only against New York city, although it is generally known that the "wettest" cities in the country today are Detroit, Chicago and Washington, all either under Republican rule or domination. The Democrats claim that the drive on New York is a tacit admission by the Republicans that they have little chance to carry the Empire state in the election this fall. It is argued that they did feel, however, that the affect on the country would be to focus the eyes of the nation on New York and provide the keynotes for Republican orators, particularly in the rural sections.

This use of government departments to aid the favored candidates of the administration, however, is not confined to the prohibition enforcement unit. The department of commerce, as might be expected, is working over-time issuing glowing statements showing vast increases in foreign trade, all of which is naively attributed to policies inaugurated by Secretary Hoover.

It has remained for the departments of agriculture and labor, however, to steal a march on the statisticians who might wish to figure on the value of the farmer's dollar or the increase in the cost of living. Heretofore, throughout the seven years the Republicans have been in power, all statistics of this character issued by either of these departments have been based on a pre-war standard. This either has been the prices prevailing in 1913 or on a five-year average ending with the outbreak of hostilities in Europe. This has been deemed the basic 100 per cent. It has naturally followed that all commodity prices have shown large increases while the buying power of the dollar has shrunk.

Prices Drop

In new statistics just issued by these departments, however, the pre-war basic prices have dropped. In their stead the statisticians are now using a post-war basis, generally the figures prevailing in 1920, the last year of the Wilson administration. By comparison with these figures it is no trick at all for the man of figures to show a steady decline in the cost of living and a corresponding increase in the value of the dollar. No explanation as to why this change was made on the eve of a presidential election but it must be admitted it will make the figures look a lot better for the Republicans. It remains to be seen whether in its report on wages paid the department of labor will use those of 1913 or 1920.

ILLNESS FATAL FOR OFFICIAL

T. M. Campbell, Jr., Dies At Austin

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 26. (AP)—T. Mitchell Campbell Jr., 40, state fire insurance commissioner, son of the late Gov. T. M. Campbell of Texas, died here early today after three days affliction with acute stomach trouble, complicated later by heart attacks and pneumonia.

Rushing here in an automobile driven day and night from Taos, N. M., where she was on a vacation trip, Mrs. Campbell arrived at 8 o'clock this morning, some five hours after her husband succumbed. Four physicians aiding his valiant fight to stave off death until her arrival, had given up hope for him Saturday morning, not expecting him to live through the day.

Mrs. Campbell and friends were located at Taos Friday evening at 6 o'clock. Starting a hurried return by automobile, they were unable to get railroad connections calculated to get them here quicker than by motor.

Physicians believed that the results of "passings" received by Campbell in overseas service during the world war contributed to his death.

He had been fire insurance commissioner for about 18 months under appointment of Gov. Dan Moody.

VAIN SEARCH IS MADE FOR LOST PLANE

Ship Believed to Have Crashed in Puget Sound

AMERICANS ABOARD

Poor Visibility Believed Responsible For Tragedy

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 26. (UP) Twenty-four hours after its mysterious disappearance while on a flight from Victoria, B. C., to Seattle, the fate of a 10-passenger Ford monoplane of th eBritish Columbia airways was still a mystery late today.

The plane, carrying two pilots and four passengers, including one woman, took off from Victoria early Saturday on its daily flight to Seattle. It was sighted a short time later over Dungeness, 20 minutes out on its one-hour flight. As it passed over the Dungeness lighthouse, flying low, the engine of the plane was heard to stop, then start again.

Heading out into the Straits of Juan de Fuca, the plane apparently ran into a dense fog for its was unreported at Port Townsend, across the bay.

Search was instituted by the harbor patrol when the airliner failed to arrive here. The only clue as to possible fate of the plane was the discovery of several oil spotches on the water.

Hope that the plane may have landed in the dense woods on the peninsula was expressed and searching parties were scouring the underbrush today.

Meanwhile, harbor patrol boats continued to search for possible bits of wreckage in the strait in the belief that the giant monoplane crashed after passing the Dungeness lighthouse.

Those missing are: Thomas E. Lake, Los Angeles; Dr. Holden, Victoria; Mr. and Mrs. Scott, British tourists, and the two pilots, Herold Walker and J. Carson.

Inland Crash Feared

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash. Aug 26. (US)—The missing Victoria-Seattle passenger plane may have passed Port Townsend by an inland short cut, had fuel pipe trouble south of here and headed in desperation for the clearings and fields that dot the forest of the Chimacum valley, crashing there in a forced landing.

This was the startling possibility tonight based on the stories of two boys at Port Padlock, eight miles south of here. The lads say they saw a plane at 11 a. m., Saturday, passing them, heading for Oak Harbor.

Lieut. Commander L. L. Bennett of the coast guard is hurrying to Port Padlock tonight to check up the story and searching parties are ready to strike inland.

Texas Contributes $47,332,528 In Federal Internal Taxes During 1928

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Texas contributed $47,332,528 to the federal government in internal taxes during the fiscal year 1928, ending June 30, according to tentative figures announced by the bureau of internal revenue. The bulk of this was derived from income taxes, amounting to $46,659,715, while the miscellaneous taxes paid on theater admissions, stock transfers, automobiles, tobacco, cigars and the like, amounted to $1,673,412. On the income taxes this represented an increase of 6 per cent whereas collection for the nation at large, amounting to $2,174,673,102, showed a loss of 2 per cent. Out of the total collections for income taxes in Texas $29,770,480 was paid by corporations of the state and $16,883,-035 on individual returns. The big gain was in North Texas, the Dallas office showing collections of $24,019,022 compared with $19,868,-252 in 1927, or a gain for that district of 21 per cent. The South Texas division, with headquarters at Austin, showed collections of $23,313,505, compared with $23,090,-905 in 1927, or a loss of 7 per cent.

The total collections for Oklahoma were $20,814,887 of which only $326,819 came from miscellaneous sources. Of the income taxes paid in that state $9,732,965 came from corporations and $10,455,102 on individual returns.

The report shows that for the nation at large $80,067,233 was collected on inheritances which was a reduction of $40,000,000 on collections of the preceding years.

Machinery Ready for Balloting On City's $250,000 Bond Issue Tuesday

The count of votes at five boxes Tuesday evening will determine whether Wichita Falls will be empowered by the people to issue $250,000 in 4½ per cent municipal bonds for debt and warrant debts now drawing six per cent interest, or whether the city will face suits for debts that have been threatened in the past few months.

The $250,000 issue is purely an economic measure, according to civic leaders and the city councilmen who have explained that the bonds will draw a lower interest and save several thousand dollars a year. They have also pointed out that the bonds will spread payment over a long period of years and greatly lessen the heavy strain now on the city government in meeting the higher interest rates which the warrants call for and in the large sums of the debt.

Some of the debt which the bonds, if passed, will retire, dates back to 1922. Some of it is as recent as last year. Some is for the completion of the auditorium as no provision has ever been made for the final work on the building.

The issue was recommended by City Manager George Fairtrace, soon after he accepted the position of city manager here, as one of the first steps to aid in putting the city on a firm financial basis and in restoring to a strong position the credit of the city. It is explained by Mr. Fairtrace as a financing measure which will put a great deal of the city finances in good order

TRIBUTE PAID LOST BIRDMEN

Rockford Prays for Safe Return of Hassell

ROCKFORD, Ill., Aug. 26. (US)—Rockford today joined in prayer for the safety of Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, pilots of the transatlantic plane Greater Rockford which, just a week ago, was lost on the ice-ribbed coast of Greenland. Pastors throughout the city at the morning hour of worship, paid tribute to the courageous birdmen and asked Divine guidance for them if they live and are now fighting their way back to civilization.

Tonight adherents of Protestant churches of the city met in two union meetings at which speakers implored Providence to bring Hassell back to his mother, his wife and his three small children, and Parker Cramer back to his aged mother.

"The power of prayer and unswerving faith will bring them back," one pastor told his congregation tonight.

"God alone can help them now."

At the conclusion of the service the audience joined in singing the hymn:

"We're Praying for You."

The mother and wife of Hassell, near the breaking point after their long week of futile waiting, remain in seclusion today.

Mrs. Fannie Cramer, mother of the Greater Rockford navigator, and his brother, Bill Cramer, are more confident.

"Let's wait a year," he said, "and if they are not heard from then let's give up hope and think of them as dead."

From Newark, Ohio, today, came a message to the Rockford-to-Stockholm flight committee purporting to be from a medium who had communicated with the spirit world. The medium asserted that he had correctly predicted that the Bremen flyers would be found and that Amelia Earhart's flight would be successful. The message said the Greater Rockford had landed on the coast of Greenland near a small fishing village not far inland. The plane was badly damaged and both men are sadly discouraged, the medium said.

Stage Set For City Election

and will result in considerable saving to all taxpayers.

Fire equipment accounts for $6,802.73 of the issue. Other debts included in the total are: park and cemetery, $37,383.06; auditorium completion debt, $125,219.72, and street improvement and equipment, $80,594.49.

The ballots that will be used are simple in the extreme. They carry a brief explanation and two lines. One line shows that the voter favors the bonds and the other that he opposes it. All that has to be done is to strike out the one the voter does not want.

Due to the simplicity of the ballots and the fact that all the voting is to be in the city, it is expected that the counting will be completed almost as soon as the polls close and the result known soon afterwards.

The Alamo school, court house, police station, South Side Baptist church annex and the Buchanan fire station are the five polling places.

Territorial boundaries of these boxes follow:

All voters living east of Lamar street, south of the Wichita river, east of Mill street and north of Chester street, shall vote at the central police station box.

All voters living south of the Wichita river, west of Lamar between Lamar and Brook avenue, west of Mill street and north of the Wichita Valley railway and Chester street and north of Wichita river shall vote at the Wichita county courthouse box.

All voters living south of the Wichita river, west of the center of Fillmore street to the city limits of the south and west, shall vote at the Buchanan street fire station box.

All voters living west of Brook avenue from the Wichita Valley railway tracks on the south to the Wichita river on the north and those living west of Harrison street from the city limits on the south and Wichita river on the north and Fillmore street on the west, shall vote at Alamo school box.

All voters living south of the Wichita Valley railway and Chester street and east of Harrison street to the city limits, shall vote at the South Side Baptist church annex box, at 2206 Holliday street.

Mystery House Deaths Probed

Gifffords, who took them into their home when they were ill and the "good samaritan" treated them.

In her confession Mrs. Gifford said she and her husband were living on the Nicholson place near Catawissa on Aug. 8, 1925, when George Schamel, a neighbor, and his two young sons came to their house to live.

Lloyd Schamel was ill. In administering his medicine, the confession said, Mrs. Gifford said she first mixed some arsenic with it and Lloyd died Aug. 11, 1925.

"On Sept. 18 of the same year," the confession reads, "Elmer became ill and Dr. Hampker was summoned again. He left some more medicine and I again put some arsenic in it before giving it to the sick boy, and he died four days later.

"On May 15, 1927, Edward P. Brinley, about 48 years old, drove to our house in an old Ford. He was drunk. He came in and sat down for a while before he left. As he left he fell on the concrete sidewalk and my husband went out and brought him back into the house, and I fixed a bed for him in the front room. His mother came over and insisted that a doctor be called so I summoned Dr. Hampker. He left some medicine for Brinley and I put some arsenic in that before administering it to him. He died May 16, 1927."

Mrs. Gifford will be held in the county jail until her trial in November.

World's Opinion of Peace Plan Is Mixture of Hope and Skepticism

By WILLIAM R. KUHNS,
Cable Editor, The Associated Press.

After 10 sobering years the world is ready to sign the pledge. The Kellogg-Briand pact is a promise not to commit suicide and like all good resolutions is brief.

A slice of the world's opinion toward the treaty would show layers of froth, hope, skepticism, indifference and antagonism. The same variety of viewpoints can be found among the agents who are in Paris today to sign the pact for their respective governments.

All signatories have apparently agreed without formal discussion that, while they firmly resolve not to fight any more, it would be better to keep a little armament on hand for emergencies. The war habit is an old one.

Enthusiasm Chilled

The off-stage developments of the week have tended to chill the enthusiasm of ardent pacifists. The Angelo-French naval agreement has slowly taken shape of an alliance. The undertone of scoffing which greeted the first appearance of the Kellogg treaty has become a loud chorus of disapproval in Germany and Italy where supposed motives underlying the Anglo-French agreement aroused most resentment.

Dispatches dealing with the presidential campaign in the United States have been widely published in Europe and Asia. They have not strengthened public or official confidence in the treaty. Europeans have been bewildered by a statement in the acceptance speech of Governor Smith that he would seek a "real" method of outlawing war and his warning that the treaty must be ratified by the United States senate.

These declarations have been given the interpretation that the defeat of Secretary Kellogg's party would result in the Kellogg-Briand idea being thrown out and a new start undertaken. President Wilson's part in the League of Nations and the treaty of Versailles taught European statesmen a lesson in American politics which they will not forget.

Rhine Occupation

French public opinion continues to find ground for anxiety in agitation north of the Rhine for union with Austria. Back on the Anglo-French agreement, France's reluctance to withdraw from occupied territory and the general tightening of her attitude toward Germany is seen a recurrance of her old fears and a desire for security.

The complaint that Russia, Spain and other important nations should have been invited to sign the treaty today along with the 15 original signatories, has become an echo. Apparently those excluded from the first ceremony are resigned and will accept an invitation to participate later.

New Dynasty

Albania's shaky political structure may serve as the foundation for a new dynasty. President Ahmed Sogu is willing to accept a crown and assume the ancient name of Scanderberg III.

The change from the republic to monarchy aroused wide resentment in Jugoslavia where public opinion holds that King Scanderberg will be a puppet in the hands of Premier Mussolini. The unofficial but accepted view in Belgrade is that the development is one more step in Italy's plan to make the Adriatic an Italian sea.

Rome has accepted the Jugoslavian government's explanations of the anti-Italian demonstrations in Bebenico and Spalato.

After several hectic minutes of scrambling the combined efforts of officers Ellis Summers, W. P. Belcher and Elmer Thornton confined the scrapper to jail.

Admission to U. S. Sought in Behalf Wichitan's Mother

The United States consular service has been appealed to in the case of Mrs. Melany Miglovets, mother of Mrs. Sam Ham of Wichita Falls, it was learned Sunday from Miss Myrle Neely, secretary of the Wichita Falls community chest, on her return from her vacation.

The appeal was made, Miss Neely said, that immediate steps may be taken to get Mrs. Miglovets' name on the quota list from Siberia, of which both she and her daughter are natives, that mother and daughter may be reunited here.

A short time ago, Harry Hull, commissioner general of the immigration service, advised that Mrs. Ham's petition for the issuance of an immigration visa had been granted in her mother's favor.

Mrs. Ham is hopeful that her mother will be able to join her in America soon, and also that her little sister and brother, who seem to be excluded at present from this country by peculiar immigration laws which break up families, will in some miraculous way also be admitted.

Mrs. Ham was formerly Miss Mary Miglovets of Verkhne-Michailoffsky, Siberia. During the war she met Sam Ham of the 27th U. S. infantry who was stationed nearby at the Spasskoe garrison. In 1920 they were married. He was employed by the American Express company. Through her husband, Mrs. Ham is an American citizen, and therefore is entitled to bring her mother to this country to live with her.

"Tunney is sensible to abandon boxing now that he intends to marry. All I know about Tunney's literary taste is that he disapproved my early book 'Cashel Byron's Profession.' So do I. It shows he has some taste and also that we have something in common."

DRY AGENTS TO PADLOCK HOMES

Bootleggers of St. Paul Face New Threat

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 26. (AP)—Bootleggers in the Twin Cities today faced a new threat—the padlocking by the federal government of homes where the liquor law is violated.

Because padlocking activities of the United States district attorney's office and the prohibition department have closed several hundred soft drink bars and driven bootleggers to ..nes and apartments to vend liquor, an abatement drive against the residences has been instituted in the Twin Cities.

Applications for injunctions to close 26 homes in St. Paul and Minneapolis for a period of a year on file in federal courts in the Twin Cities by J. H. S. Gifford, assistant United States district attorney. Of this number 10 are in St Paul and 16 in Minneapolis.

Government officials took this drastic action when they found that bootleggers had turned to the use of private homes as a "blind" for their illicit liquor vending, Mr. Gifford said.

"The procedure against the homes is not new," Mr. Gifford said, "but the drive has been made necessary by the hiatus of bootleggers from soft drink bars, stores and like places to houses and apartments.

"The home gives the added advantage to the liquor vending business because of the presence of women and children. The offenders hide behind them and attempt to cloud the issue and obtain leniency.

Noted Figures At Peace Parley

lishmen, all passed along the streets of Paris; all more or less interested and involved in the proceeding.

Ambassador Herrick, Poincaire and Briand were named on every tongue. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt talked with President Cosgrave of Ireland as the dinner guests arrived. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Olds and the wives and daughters of a number of the plenipotentiaries, ambassadors and ministers of signing countries were present.

Herr Stresemann could not attend because his doctor forbade him to go out in the night air but Ambassador Von Hoesch was present.

The dinner menu failed to reveal wines but it was noticed that the tables were especially brilliant with crystals and fine glass ware. Inquiries met with the reply that there might have been a few bottles reserved for eminent diplomats who do not believe in Volsteadism.

U. S. WORRIED OVER FRENCH-BRITISH PACT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The United States fears the Franco-British agreement to limit naval armaments is a secret understanding between the nations to unite their military and naval forces in the event of war, it was learned in a high official quarter today.

Regardless of the verbiage of any pact between them, America recognizes in the much discussed agreement a military alliance greater in effect than the entente cordiale of 1914, and of a nature not trusted to writing but held sacred in the hearts and minds of the respective foreign offices, it was learned.

It is the impression among authorities that the two nations have actually pooled their spheres of influence on the seas as well as on the land for mutual defense.

While the document received at the state department informing the United States of the understanding has never been made public for diplomatic reasons, it is known that it does not go into details of the understanding itself, nor does it make known its real scope or meaning.

That the secret military alliance formulated on the eve of the signing of the Kellogg treaty was designed to prejudice the peace agreement was scouted. Belief was entertained that it was forced by the condition of affairs in Europe. Experts have advanced the idea that protection from Russia and Italy are aimed at in the understanding.

The United States is concerned over it, however, and Secretary Kellogg will undoubtedly return next month with a comprehensive report of the agreement to be submitted to President Coolidge, who has taken an unusual interest in the question of national defense. This was evidenced when he summoned Admiral Hughes to the summer White House for an expert view of the French-British agreement.

Britain Puzzled

LONDON, Aug. 26. (UP)—Reports printed in America concerning the existence of an alleged sensational letter from Sir Austen Chamberlain to M. Briand relative to the Anglo-French naval agreement, are puzzling well-informed sources here.

The reports credited the letter with revealing an agreement amounting to a naval alliance between France and Great Britain. Both French and British foreign office officials denied knowledge of the existence of such a letter.

Coupled with this denial was the fact that neither Chamberlain nor Briand had commented on the report, increasing the confusion.

Official reaction to the latest developments in the case were unavailable Sunday but the Sunday Times diplomatic correspondents said "in official London and official Paris the idea of any anti-American orientation is regarded as unthinkable. Any naval compromise in Europe aimed against the United States would be folly of the first water."

No Letters Exchanged

PARIS, Aug. 26. (UP)—The Quai D'Orsay told the United Press tonight that no letters had been exchanged between M. Briand and Sir Austen Chamberlain. Negotiations preliminary to the reopening of the Geneva disarmament conference had been engaged in, it was pointed out, calling for the exchange of numerous letters through ambassadors.

World's Largest Building To Be Built in Chicago for $45,000,000

CHICAGO, Aug. 26. (US)—Plans were announced today for the world's largest building, construction of which will be started about Feb. 1, 1929.

The structure will be erected on Wacker drive, just east of Michigan avenue, and was designed by Walter W. Ahlschlager, famous architect. It will be called the Chicago tower.

It will be 880 feet high, and will exceed by fifteen floors or 88 feet the Woolworth building, now the highest in the world. The floor area of approximately 3,639,094 square feet will be five times as large as that of the 120 Broadway building, which is now the most spacious building in the world.

The building will have sixteen entrances on the street levels. It will be equipped with sixty high speed elevators. The normal business day population of the building will be 18,000 persons.

The building is to be constructed over the tracks of the Illinois Central railroad. A 100 year lease has been signed with that company for the air rights. It is estimated that the building will cost about $45,000,000.

Although the building will be one unit, it will house three distinctly separate business institutions. It will have 805,540 square feet devoted to offices. The Chicago Apparel mart will take up 1,818,168 square feet of space, and the remainder of the building—the top floors of the 75 stories—will be devoted to a hotel. There will be 440 rooms facing Lake Michigan.

Bohmfalk Stresses Church's Need For Religious Teaching

The necessity for religious education in the churches and the need of a revival in the First Methodist church of Wichita Falls were stressed by E. F. Bohmfalk, director of religious education of the First Methodist church, in a talk given in lieu of the usual sermon at the morning services at the church Sunday.

"I do not think the church has realized and recognized the place of religious education in its program," the speaker said. We have a trained ministry which generally is without training in religious education.

"The churches have been built more for adults than the children. Rooms will be found here and there, more or less an afterthought, after the needs of the adults have been met.

"It can be seen by the distribution of funds, that the church has not taken religious education seriously. For the most part the Sunday school is supported with the pennies of the children who attend, while Sunday schools are poorly equipped with reference to books, teaching supplies, professional libraries for teachers and the like because the church can't afford it."

The effect on the after lives of Sunday school pupils as a result of their Sunday school work was considered, as was the necessity for revivals in general, a local revival, the message of religious education today, the things that must be done to make an adequate program of religious education in the community, the training of officers and teachers by the church, a training program for the First Methodist church here and many similar subjects were considered.

That there must be a purposeful and helpful attitude toward the younger generation, also was also was stressed by the speaker.

Mrs. Welty Takes Shot at Tammany In Her Platform

Affirming a dry stand to the fullest entent of the word, exposing Tammany hall by a dare to the public to read thoroughly the discussion of Tammany society in Encyclopedia Americana, the New International Encyclopedia and similar world accepted works, and announcing a platform of solid support to Herbert Hoover, his ideas and ideals, Mrs. P. A. Welty of Wichita Falls, Republican nominee to congress opposing Guinn Williams of Decatur, Sunday announced the brief program on which her platform and campaign will be made. Mrs. Welty was named Saturday.

"In accepting the Republican nomination to congress for the 13th congressional district, I wish to thank the Republicans of the district for my nomination, to reaffirm my Republicanism and to stress, in particular, four definite points.

Stresses Dry Law

"The dry laws and constitution of the nation should be upheld and enforced. I am dry and I will support the dry stand of Herbert Hoover, the greatest living American, and I will support the prohibition plank of the Republican party.

"A clean nation is necessary. Therefore, I call attention to the discussions in Encyclopedia Americana, the New International Encyclopedia and similar works on Tammany society from 1870 to the present day. I ask the voters to consider well the fact that the presidential nominee of the Democratic party admits his Tammanyship.

"Farmers of the United States have less debt and are more generally in good financial circumstances than they ever have been. I favor retention of each and every advantage the farmers now have, and also the supporting of the farm relief views and aim of Herbert Hoover and the farm plank of the Republican party. In this respect, I call attention to the fact that Herbert Hoover was a farm boy, born on a farm, raised on a farm and today a farm owner. His opponent was born in the "East Side" of New York city and has dealt more directly with the problems of New York and Tammany.

"Finally, I pledge my wholehearted support to Herbert Hoover, the Republican party and to the Republican party platform as adopted at Kansas City."

PASTOR SMITES SMITH AGAIN

Straton Repeats His Ode On 'Morality'

NEW YORK, Aug. 26. (AP)—The Rev. John Roach Straton, in a sermon at Calvary Baptist church, tonight repeated his assertion that Gov. Alfred E. Smith is "the bitterest foe in America today of the forces of moral progress and true political wisdom."

Governer Smith challenged the statement when it was first made by Dr. Straton from his pulpit three weeks ago and requested he be permitted to reply in Calvary church. Dr. Straton replied that he was willing to meet the governor, but later insisted that the meeting could not to take place in Calvary Baptist church.

"Not since the days of the revolution and the Civil war," Dr. Straton said tonight, "has this country faced so perilous and important a political, moral and religious crisis as that of the present hour.

"Smith's wilful kicking over of his party's liquor plank and his institution of his own nullification program prove that he is politically a lawless spirit.

"In the light of his own record on moral issues, and the proved economic unwisdom for the legalized liquor traffic, with its inevitable camp followers—gambling, prostitution and crime—I declare here that because of his prominent position now as a presidential candidate, Alfred E. Smith is the bitterest foe in America today of the forces of moral progress and true political wisdom."

Woman's Sacrifice in Marriage Greater Than Man's, Says Dorothy

The Personal Liberty That a Man Gives Up in Marriage Is as Nothing Compared to the Woman's Sacrifice of Her Identity, Her Freedom to Follow Her Chosen Occupation, Her Time and Her Independence.

A man writing recently in a magazine says that no matter how much a man loves a woman, he dreads getting married because he hates to give up his freedom, and that the reason men dislike big weddings is because they loathe the thought of being made a spectacle of as they are being led as a sacrifice to the altar.

This writer thinks that women give up nothing when they marry, that matrimony is all gain for them, and they will therefore naturally wish to celebrate their success in having secured a husband by doiling themselves up in glad raiment, and beating upon the cymbals.

Women will read this statement with loud cries of derision, for well they know that every wife is 10 times as much married to her husband as he is to her, and that she is a hundred times more bound than he is.

Of course, both men and women sacrifice their personal liberty when they get married. The marriage bond is no mere figure of speech. It is a reality. Those who pass into the holy estate leave freedom behind. They have taken upon themselves duties and obligations to another. They are not free to come and go as they please, or to follow their own sweet wills, or to indulge their every taste and whim.

The married man has not the privilege of being a philanderer and chasing every fluttering skirt. He may not spend his evenings at his club, or sit up until 3 o'clock in the morning playing poker with the boys without having to furnish some sort of alibi. He cannot spend his money upon his own pleasures and amusements. It has to go to the butcher and baker and pay for the baby's milk. He cannot come and go without being put through a questionnaire.

Certainly when a man gets married he gives up much of his individual liberty; but a woman gives up practically all of hers when she marries. The husband's sacrifice of freedom is as nothing compared to he wife's. Consider:

To begin with, when a girl gets married she gives up her name. She is no longer Mary Smith, but Mrs. John Jones, and her identity is so completely merged in her husband that so far as the public goes she has no individuality whatever. She is just an appendage to him, the tail of his kite, and her position in society, her prosperity and her comfort depend upon his success or failure.

Again, when a girl gets married she gives up her liberty of action as no man ever does. If a man is unlucky enough to get a bossy wife, he may not dare to call his soul his own when he is at home, but there are avenues of escape open to him. His prison doors are unlocked every morning at 8 o'clock and he is a ticket-of-leave man until they close again upon him at 6 o'clock. He can go off on a long business trip. He has hours in which he can disport himself in freedom.

But unless a married woman is rich and able to hire servants, there is no freedom for her. She is a slave to her house and her family. There is no minute in which she can loaf and invite her soul, no leisure in which she can follow some whim. There are always meals to be cooked, dishes to be washed, babies to be nursed, children coming home from school crying for m-o-t-h-e-r.

A man complains because after marriage he is not free to put on his hat after dinner and go out to seek an evening's amusement. But his wife is not only not free to dike herself up and go out in the evening to dance, she can't even go out to do the marketing without having to roll the baby in the perambulator and have another toddler hanging on to her skirts. I heard the mother of a large family say once that for 20 years she never was without a baby in her arms, with another one just learning to walk, and that during that entire time she was scarcely out of her own home, and never knew what it was to have a night's unbroken sleep.

Husbands do not have to ask their wives' permission to do things, but virtually every wife has to ask her husband's consent to what she does. A man doesn't say: "Mary may I buy a new hat? This old one is positively shabby." Or: "Mary, may I go to see mother a few days? She hasn't been very well." No. He is free to do as his best judgment dictates, but there are very few wives who have the liberty of doing as they see fit. They have to first get their husband's O. K. on their plans.

When a man marries he is free to go on with the part of his life that is outside of domesticity. He merely annexes a wife. He doesn't give up his career for her. The question of whether he shall give up the business in which he is making a success, or the profession that is as the very light of his eyes to him, never even comes up.

But is it the sacrifice of her freedom of choice that thousands of women are called upon to make when they marry. Nowadays there are untold numbers of women who are keen and successful business women, women whose tastes and talents are commercial instead of domestic, women who prefer desks to cook stoves.

There are multitudes of women who have spent years and years of time and thousands of dollars acquiring some profession for which they have an especial talent, but very seldom after they marry are they free to follow their chosen occupations. Their husbands demand that they give up what they had expected to be their life work and retire to the kitchen.

Nothing is so absolutely necessary to one's self-respect as financial independence, but it is the woman alone is called upon to sacrifice this when she gets married. The girl who has earned her own money before marriage is seldom free to continue to earn it afterward, both because of her husband's unwillingness for her to follow a gainful occupation and because when the babies come her hands are full with her domestic duties.

That women may be willing and glad to give up their personal freedom for love and that they may kiss their fetters, is beside the question. The fact remains that when they marry they give up their personal liberty far more completely than their husbands do.

OH, THESE WOMEN !!

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 26. (US)—The University of Wisconsin took a little of the joy out of life last week by announcing that you shouldn't kiss her, because lip sticks are poisonous.

If a girl starts wiping off the lip rouge, you will know what she is thinking about.

Benito Mussolini announces: "Women have no wills of their own. They are mirrors to men and reflect what the men desire them to represent."

Many a spirited and romantically successful American woman would now like to get her fling at the dictator. Victory is a habit with American women, not one of whom would consider Mussolini a Waterloo.

A California wife says her husband threatened her with a fish gaff, and she pushed him off the pier into the Pacific ocean. She weighs 725 pounds to her husband's 125. The court said that if she couldn't stand the gaff, she did right.

Poor little fellow.

Mussolini says women never create anything.
But they do. Children and havoc.

If women ate what they liked and as much of it as they wanted, about half the doctors would take in their shingles.

California has discovered "medical certificate alimony." But it is not new. Chicago has had it for 15 years, and hardly a day but the wives come in court with papers to show that they are unable to work Some of them are rosy cheeked and fat, but the family doctor is always accomodating.

New York has a woman who went to court to get alimony from a fourth husband, who told the judge she was already collecting alimony from three previous husbands. She didn't get it.
But that's a pretty good average. One bad bet out of four.

Then Chicago has a women who is gunning for her fifth husband. The fourth says he will give her a divorce as soon as she finds the fifth.

These things are mentioned for the benefit of women who hound one when they might land somebody who wants them and could make them happy.

CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions

The weather is unreasonable enough to be always a little behind the fashionable season and that is why you see Cherie wearing this sleeveless flowered print frock. It may fashionably be autumn, but temperaturely it is still summer. This dress, too, is one that may be worn until the last rose has fallen—a print of navy blue, beige and lighter blue with the diagonal ruffles on the skirt and bodice and the slanting cape that are seen on new Fall dresses as well as late summer ones. Dina is wearing one of those white figured Chinese damask frocks that are so popular. There's news in the letter—a friend has sent Cherie a present that is the newest fad in all Paris.

This is the present? A turtle, gilded and set with jewels and very much alive. A truly glittering mascot which is supposed to cuddle coyly down one's neck or be held in the hand as though one really enjoyed it—a rich looking object, although it was only a poor garden turtle once. If you can tear your eyes from Ambrose (that's the animal) for a moment we should like to mention that Dina is wearing a sleeveless dress of striped silk shirting. Cherie's frock is white crepe de chine with a sunburst of faggotting on the blouse and a skirt that swirls. Emily's dress is printed handkerchief linen—white, with a pattern of vines and tiny flowers in blue and red.

Butler Blamed for 'Railroading' Mill Striker; Crisis May Enter Campaign

By CHAS. S. HAYDEN
Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The strike of the textile workers in the New Bedford area of Massachusetts is causing the Republican national committee more uneasiness than any other element in the east. This is due to the fact that William M. Butler, one-time senator from Massachusetts and former chairman of the national committee, who is heavily interested in these New Bedford mills, is taking the lead in the efforts to break the strike and the repressive measures of the authorities has aroused resentment which, it is feared, will be carried over into the election.

Although the textile industry has been the favored child in all Republican tariff legislation it has been in an unhealthy condition since early in the Harding administration. During the war of course the mills enjoyed a complete monopoly and were run at full blast. It was an era of high wages and big profits but with the armistice the importation of foreign textiles was resumed. Tariff protection under the Fordney-McCumber law gave the textile industries increases of from 50 to even 100 per cent increases but even this did not suffice to maintain the big profits.

Cuts Accepted

Several wage cuts of 10 to 15 per cent each were accepted by the employes although there was considerable grumbling but it was not until about two years ago, when a wage reduction of 25 per cent was announced, that the strike was precipitated. It has since been conducted with varying success for while the mills have been operated on new wage schedules the savings have been eaten up by the swarm of guards it was necessary to employ.

As in all such industrial wars efforts of the employes to organise have been suppressed. One instance has aroused particular resentment among the workers, who charge that one of their workers, known to them as John Porter, has been "railroaded" to the military prison at Fort Leavenworth as a deserter from the army.

Porter, or John Waleryniak, which the army claims is his real name, was organizing a Young Workers' league at New Bedford and the local police authorities claimed it was communistic in principle. He was arrested and the discovery then made that he was a deserter. Porter or Waleryniak claimed he was not guilty and had not deserted from the army but he was carried before the authorities of the first corps area and tried before a court martial by which he was convicted and sentenced to two years and a dishonorable discharge, carrying with it the loss of citizenship.

Butler Responsible

Friends of Porter, as they knew him, rallied to his defense but were powerless to aid him. They now charge that his conviction was engineered through influence exerted by former Senator Butler and others among the mill owners, through the powers that be in Washington. In support of their claim that Porter was not considered as an ordinary deserter they point to the fact that instead of being sent to Fort Jay to serve his sentence he was sent to Fort Leavenworth. There he is doing time under the watchful eyes of the "shotgun squad," where, should he make a break for liberty, he will be killed.

The War Department's explanation for this is that Porter or Waleryniak is a "red" but his friends insist he is merely a martyr and because of former Senator Butler's interest they link his conviction with the activities of the Republican party.

Relative of Daniel Boone Boosted As Chaplain of American Legion

TEXARKANA, Texas, Aug. 26. (UP)—Rev. A. L. Boone, a relative of Frontiersman Daniel Boone, is being boosted as a candidate for state chaplain of the American Legion, which opened its department convention here today for a three-day session.

The candidate is pastor of the First Methodist church at Raymondville, Texas. Rio Grande valley posts, which have large and enthusiastic delegations here, are backing him for the chaplaincy and hope to see his election to the state office only a stepping stone to the national chaplaincy.

Arkansas Legionnaires who are meeting here with the Texas Legionnaires are reported to be willing to join in support of the Texan for national office. Mississippi and Alabama are said also to favor the fighting parson from the border who was severely wounded while in France.

The approaching national convention in San Antonio has resulted in more than usual interest in the departmental meeting. Drum corps and bands from many parts of the state that have been training for the national gathering are here and will be in the line of tomorrow's convention parade.

Among those being urged for state commander is Ben J. Dean of Breckenridge. With six candidates already announced, the contest is expected to be lively.

Bankers Aid Farmers In War On Boll Weevils

STAMFORD, Texas, Aug. 26. (UP)—Manager Homer D. Wade of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce reports that local chambers and bankers are cooperating with the farmers in their localities in fighting the boll weevil moth which has made its appearance in several communities.

Various methods are being used to keep the moth from developing. Arsenic and paris green are the poisons effective in the fight. A lighted lantern to attract the moths at night, placed above kerosene, has also been used.

CHILD'S DRESS IS IMPORTANT

Chic Features Essential For Kiddies

By CORINNE RICH

NEW YORK, Aug. 26. (US)—We can't talk exclusively about grown-ups in this style letter, because aren't the children, after all, of just as much importance to the world in general and the world of fashion in particular as their mothers?

By her children shall ye know how much milady cares to be in the mode. And tiny boys and girls may really have quite as distinctive a way of wearing their clothes as any adult.

Dress two little girls in the same costume and see the result. One has on just a dress and hat. The other has on a dress and hat plus. It's that something we call "style" that makes child No. 2 wear her hat at a chic angle or her frock in a certain engaging manner.

One Fifth Avenue house insists that little sisters and brothers should, to be really smart, be dressed in "companion pieces." A cute idea, isn't it?

For instance, sister frocks and brother suits in imported handsmocked dimity, the suits made with linen shorts. Or prints and solid-color frocks and suits in broadcloth, gingham, and percale, in green, orchid, maize, blue and rose.

Baby's Ensemble

Baby has her own place in the window display of another store. Like her mother, the little lady must match up in the pieces of her wardrobe. I saw a fetching four-piece ensemble for the tiny Miss, composed of dress, jacket, cap and long coat, all in pink crepe de chine with fine handwork in the form of fagoting, tucking, net footing and box pleats.

Baby's dress is always an intriguing matter to a young mother; but as summer wanes, the school girl's frocks for the coming season can cause a lot of deep thinking on the part of the lady responsible for her well-being.

The stores here are doing their best, even at this early date, to help mother make her selections. The windows are full of girlish costumes, just come in from the manufacturer or importer.

There are woolens, velveteens, velvets, wool jerseys, wool crepes, flat crepes, bordered tweeds, and a host of other lovely and durable materials.

Large plaids are prominently displayed among these new frocks, either in the complete dresses or as combinations with other designs or plain fabrics.

Many Styles

In one window there is this week a dress in a large red and blue pattern, featuring pleated skirt and a row of large wooden buttons at a side fastening. Another in the same red and blue material has a belero front over white linen with linen collar and cuffs.

Many bordered tweeds and reversible tweeds are being shown, some using the reversible material in alternate sections showing first one side and then the other. One particularly pretty dress was in two-tone wool crepe, geometric bands in copenhagen and navy blue being employed, along with a monogram in red.

I saw a number of combination frocks with velveteen jacket or belero coupled with plaid skirt—just the sort of dresses that any girl in her teens or before would love to wear to school. Challis dresses in bright small-patterned prints and smocked jerseys are also much in vogue; nor are they very expensive.

For dressy occasions, the young girl will wear this autumn printed velveteen and crepe or velvet and silk combinations with the lighter fabric making the skirt. For instance, a frock with a velvet top has a skirt of pleated silk tiers and trimmings.

CAN'T MIX 'EM

El Paso Hospital Takes Footprints Of Babies

EL PASO, Texas, Aug. 26. (UP)—You can be sure you have your own baby if it is born at any of El Paso's hospitals. Each has a system of identifying the babies so they will not be mixed.

At the Masonic hospital, footprints of each baby are taken; another puts an identification strap of adhesive tape about the infant's wrist. Another uses bead necklaces.

Taking of footprints is still somewhat of an experiment. It is thoroughly successful to prevent mixing of babies but whether the footmarks change during growth so that the prints no longer identify, time alone will tell.

W. C. T. U. Leader Quits Hoover for Smith

MONROE, Neb., Aug. 26. (UP)—Despite the fact that Mrs. Lizzie Jenkinson, former publicity director of the W. C. T. U. in Nebraska, does not believe in the prohibition views of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, she will support him for president, she announced. "I am willing to resubmit prohibition to the people for I believe it will stand on its merits," she said, but Hoover failed to show sincerity in the farm question to win her support.

Constant Effort Is a Vital Part of Electric Service

DAY in and day out, your electric service continues unfaultering, yet how often do you consider the constant effort that must be made to keep this service up to the high ideal set by this company? You know that electricity is always available at the snap of a switch, but do you know that engineers work in shifts twenty-four hours a day to keep the huge generators operating, that patrolmen are making regular inspections of high voltage transmission lines to find any possible defect that will affect your service and that linemen are ready at an instant's notice to restore the flow of electricity should anything interrupt the service that you have learned to depend upon?

You may not have an opportunity to observe this constant effort, but remember that it is only a part of our many-sided work in providing electric service to you.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—While Jack Dempsey was inspecting the preliminary preparations of Tom Heeney for the recent fight with Tunney, some pickpockets in the crowd got busy and ran the vaccum cleaner over Charley Harvey, the Hard Rock's manager, talking about $400.00. One pretended to be an enthusiastic admirer of Dempsey's, and while he shook the hand of the former champion, a confederate tried to nail the Dempsey stick pin. The effort was unsuccessful, but I call those two boys game guys.

This story should be credited to Mr. Martin Egan who is a former newspaperman now connected with the House of Morgan. During the war, he went to France as a special representative of President Wilson's to give him a private line on what was going on from the standpoint of a real newspaperman. Mr. Egan say there was a doughboy who was sitting huddled down in a trench while the Germans threw all sorts of high explosives around him up to what seemed to this soldier to be two story brick houses. The shells kept bursting nearer and nearer, and he kept trying to occupy smaller space. When the bombardment was at its peak, he turned to a discouraged friend with this ironic remark:

"And to think they ran me out of town once with a thirty two caliber revolver."

Irvin Cobb says that the trouble with golf is that all the courses are built by our Scotch Presbyterians who like to make trouble for a man. He is in favor of some links constructed by light hearted Despoilans who like to make trouble for do their work, and every cup is at the bottom of a declivity where it is impossible to miss the putt.

Unfortunately, Mr. Cobb happened to be in a bunker the other day and he flung his niblick wildly so that the sand spurted up, and he was seen spitting it from his mouth.

"If I had anything to say about laying out these courses," he declared, "I would fill the bunkers with granulated sugar. It tastes better."

Mr. Cobb is not always in a gay mood. Underneath, he has a great streak of sentiment, and some of his most famous stories have leaned toward tragedy such as "Words and Music" and "The Belled Buzzard." A man named Charles Chapin, for years the city editor of the New York Evening World, killed his wife a decade ago and got a life sentence in Sing Sing prison. Mr. Chapin was nearly sixty when he did this, and no one knows how he could so far lose his head. When Mr. Cobb first started in newspaper work in New York, he was a reporter on the Evening World, and Chapin was his boss. City Editor Chapin had the reputation of being hard boiled, and it was about him that Cobb pulled a line which has since become famous. As the author entered the World building one morning, to go to work some one said:

"Did you know Chapin was sick?"

"Is that so?" replied Cobb."

"Well, I hope it is nothing trivial."

But only recently some man who had taken an interest in Chapin and thought he had paid and suffered sufficiently for his crime wrote to Mr Chapin and expressed the opinion if the latter would go to Governor Smith, Chapin might be paroled. Mr. Cobb replied he would do it if Chapin approved so he went to Sing Sing to see his old boss and told him what he had in mind.

Chapin pointed to a blooming prison flower garden which he had built of what had once been a dump heap. Then he looked over he cold grey walls.

"No," he said, "Don't do it. I've a job to do here. These gardens I have laid out and built with the other prisoners. If I left here, I wouldn't have any friends or anything to do. I have a job to do here, and I'll stay here until I die."

So Governor Smith was never approached.

Farmers Leave Sept. 1 On California Trip

ABILENE, Texas, Aug. 26. (UP) Fifteen counties of West Texas will be represented by farmers who will leave here September 1, on a California farm study trip being sponsored by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

The purpose of the trip is to study the successful methods of poultry raising and farming of the California farmer in such a comprehensive way as to incorporate those plans with home methods with resultant profit to the Texas farmer.

The trip is similar to the one sponsored by J. A. Kemp of Wichita Falls last year and will cover some of the same territory.

Vote to Give City Manager a Chance

WE believe the new city administration under the city manager form of government is making progress toward placing the affairs of the city on a more orderly and efficient basis.

But as the city government goes along it will find itself hedged and handicapped at almost every turn by a large floating indebtedness unless on Tuesday the taxpaying voters do what they would do in their own private business, and vote for the $250,000 bond issue to be used for the liquidation of these debts. In this election is the opportunity to consolidate these debts, get them upon a basis where they can be paid in regular payments over a period that will not make these payments too burdensome.

If this is not done this floating debt will have to be paid through current revenues during the next two or three years. This will mean increased taxes either through higher valuations or an increased tax rate, or both.

Remember this: The bond issue does not increase the city's indebtedness one cent.

Let's vote the bonds and give the city manager plan a fair chance to work out the many problems with which the city is confronted.

Finding the Rainbow

IT was just at home-going time that the storm began. The big drops of rain spattered the walks as the five o'clock whistles blew, and from the doors of commerce and industry poured forth rich man, poor man, doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief.

Office and factory girls raced down the street to get cars before the storm broke. Some of them spread papers, umbrellawise, over their heads and sped like little Dianas down the choked street.

Papers and fruit peelings and broken egg shells and dust whirled through the air, and drivers honked fierce-sounding horns as they attempted to beat the storm home.

But the racing crowd had to slow up for one man, calmly walking on as if the sky were blue as sapphire. He was a little man, meek and mild looking, and he seemed looking for something.

This and that way he looked above the heads of the frenzied crowd, up and beyond the tall buildings and steeple.

Finally he stopped and beamed, and the crowd turned with him.

"There it is," he said, pointing out the rainbow that glowed like a huge Easter egg behind the rain-darkened buildings. "I knew it would be around here somewhere. The signs were just right. Rain with just a little mite of sun left. You always find it when you look for it."

I tell the story not to moralize about "every cloud having its silver lining"; not to point out the obvious "moral" that "somewhere the rainbow is always shining if one but knows where to look."

I only want to hand a little laurel leaf to the man with such resources for joy within himself; a man who not only knew that the rainbow was there, but who knew it because he desired it, sought it, joyed in its finding—felt it more important to see that bow of promise silhouetted against a city sky than to race the storm home.

Not so many evenings ago a rather dowdy, commonplace, middle-aged woman sat with me in the car at home-going time. But ordinary as her person seemed, there was an appealing smile on her face as she looked out the car window that made one smile back.

"My, I can hardly wait until after supper!" she said during one of these exchanged smiles. "There'll be such a wonderful sunset tonight. There always is when the sun comes out again after a rainy day. The big clouds give the sun something to color, I guess."

She told me that her whole family "doted" on rainy day sunsets; that she always had supper early so they could all go out in the back yard and "not waste a minute of it."

"Isn't it nice to have a family that likes the same things you do?" she asked, to my amusement, as it never seemed to occur to her what a lucky family she had to own a mother like herself who could pass her enthusiasm on to them.

I know an office girl who puzzles her friends because, as they put it, she's "so crazy to get home nights."

The secret is that she has some beautiful beds of flowers.

PRACTIVE VS. THEORY

Every so often one reads where a graduate of a state-supported professional school is employed as an instructor in the school before acquiring any practical knowledge. The Record believes that it is a mistake for any person to be employed as an instructor in a professional school before that person has had a few years of practical experience.

There is a great difference in reading about how a thing is done, and actually doing it. Knowledge gained first hand can be transmitted with a definiteness lacking in theoretical dissertations.

Business today is welcoming the professional school graduates, but heads of business firms are often heard to complain of the lack of practical knowledge displayed by professional school graduates. Lack of experienced teachers is responsible for this to a great extent.

KNOCKING A CONFESSION

Any town is a good town to the man who is making a lot of money there. Any community is a good community to the man whose neighbors respect and like him.

The knocker's knock is a confession. When he knocks his town, he confesses failure in it; when he knocks his neighbors he confesses his unpopularity.

Every small town contains citizens, thoroughly discredited and generally despised, who make it a practice to slander their town or its citizens when they travel abroad. They deserve no credence.

For the man who stands well at home is proud of his town. The very fact that it likes him seems proof of its good sense and decency. The greater he can make him home town seem, the greater he will seem. Even Paul boasted of his home town.

The man who slanders his town or his neighbors before strangers is saying, in effect: "They despise me and therefore I hate and revile them. If I must suffer shame, I'll see that they do, also."

Give no heed to the slanderer. To slander one's own is against nature and proof of lying.

Any club is a rotten club to the man who has been kicked out. All neighbors seem vile to the man who squirms under their scorn.

TOONERVILLE FOLKS — Fontaine Fox

The FORBIDDEN DOOR — by Herman Landon

Whose Face?

Morning came, but the tempest showed no sign of letting up. John Breck, looking up at Old Blighty's cloud-bandaged brow from the porch of Valhalla Notch, guessed shrewdly that the region was in for another of those three or four day rains that were not infrequent in this part of the New Hampshire hills. If anything, the gale and the downpour were worse than the night before. Well, John would have to go to town this morning, rain or shine. There was no getting out of it.

For the third time since getting up he went to Miss Lane's room on the second floor. John was worried about the girl. He had certain suspicious regarding Viola Lane, and he doubted strongly whether it was accident alone that had brought her to the gates of Valhalla Notch, but that had nothing to do with the fact that she appeared very ill. So he tiptoed to her bed and looked down at her with anxiety. She was in a strange state, neither awake nor asleep. Now she mumbled something and John had to bend low to catch the words:

"That awful face! Oh——!"A few incoherent mumblings. "Oh—that was almost a collision! The letter . . . ." An interval of silence. "Close the door! I don't want to see that face!"

John nodded gravely. She had seen the face, too. She was still seeing it in her ravings; it was still haunting her. It could not have been all imagination on John's part, then. He almost wished that it had been. Feeling utterly helpless he walked downstairs and entered the library. Then he opened the door leading into the little hall door. He could hear the clock ticking, although it was so dusky in there he could hardly see the dial. With a shudder he recalled the face. He had caught only the faintest glimpse of that face. He doubted whether he had ever seen it before, or if he should recognize it upon seeing it again. Did it belong to the prowler who had left the mud prints on the floor? Or to the mysterious being for whom he periodically left a basket of provisions outside the door? Or was it——?

But it was useless to speculate, for he had no idea what the face looked like. If anybody should ask him, he would be utterly at a loss to describe it. He could not even say whether it was an old face or a young one. It had passed out of sight so quickly that it had left only a vague and yet very disturbing impression on his mind.

He went to his room and consulted a typewritten document consisting of several pages and containing instructions for his conduct in every conceivable emergency. Putting on a pair of steel-rimmed spectacles, he soon found the paragraph he was looking for. It had to do with the iron door. If anything of whatsoever nature happened to it, he was to dispatch a telegram immediately to Mr. Curry of the United Bankers Trust company. The telegram was to consist of but a single word—"Door."

With a stolid air John put the document away. He had ceased to wonder about the peculiar instructions that governed his duties at Valhalla Notch. He had a good job at two hundred a month, so why worry? Yet he did feel a little worried this morning. After what had happened during the night, he did not feel quite right about going away from Valhalla Notch. It was only eight miles to Dixville, but it was a hard road to travel in the flivver, especially in a downpour. But rules were rules. Besides, Miss Lane had to have a doctor, and there was not telephone in the house.

He put on his raincoat and locked the front door carefully as he stepped out. Then he went to the garage, large enough to contain a number of vehicles, where the flivver stood beside the yellow roadster in which Miss Lane had arrived. He regarded the larger car with a speculative eye. It would make faster time, and it would be safer on a slippery road, but he was not sure of his ability to handle the gearshift mechanism. In the end he climbed into the humbler car and stepped on a starter. It slipped out of the garage, swerved unsteadily on the wet asphalt outside, glided down the curving driveway toward the gate, and then John heard something that made him instantly bear down on the brake.

A motor's horn blared shrilly. He stared in surprise through the wet windshield.

Once more the raucous summons came, John looked dazedly out toward the tall iron gate. Surprises had been coming a little too fast for him lately. Out there in the swirling rain were two large cars. He climbed deliberately from the seat and approached the gate, his mind phrasing a terse speech to the effect that visitors were not desired at Valhalla Notch.

That speech was never uttered, however. John, looking out between the stout iron bars, saw a short man seated beside the driver of the first car. Instantly he recognized Mr. Curry.

He swung the gates open, then stood aside to watch the two cars drive up to the house. There was nothing strange about Mr. Curry's visit, for he was in the habit of coming to Valhalla Notch two or three times a year to look things over, but what were all these other people doing here?

John, following slowly on foot, saw at least twelve of them step out of the two cars and scurry inside the house. When he came up to the porch, Mr. Curry was standing there alone, a wooden cigar clamped between his teeth.

"Hello, John. Surprised you, didn't we? I've brought quite a party with me, but don't worry about the housekeeping arrangements. Mrs. Martenet took some of her servants along. We shall probably remain here two or three days. Everything all right?"

"Not—not quite, sir?" John fidgeted uneasily. "I was just starting out for Dixville to get a doctor."

"What's the matter, John?" Mr. Curry wiped the rain from his spectacles. "Aren't you feeling well?"

"There's nothing wrong with me, sir, but——" John told about the visitor who had arrived in the night, but kept his suspicions to himself. After all, he had no actual facts with which to dispute Miss Lane's statement that she had got lost.

"H'm," said Mr. Curry, replacing the spectacles. "Very curious. The young lady was taken ill, you say?"

"She got a bad shock. I'll tell you about it later. I think I had better go for the doctor now. By the way, sir, the doctor wasn't all I was going for. I meant to send you a telegram at the same time."

"A telegram, John?"

"A telegram of just one little word, sir," John looked about him, saw that the porch was deserted, and whispered close to Mr. Curry's ear: "Door."

Mr. Curry started. He started for a long moment at the caretaker. Then he said in a peculiarly restrained voice:

"All right, John. Better run for the doctor. We can talk later."

John went back to the flivver. For a few moments longer Mr. Curry remained standing on the porch, looked narrowly down at his wooden cigar.

"It never rains but it pours," he mumbled to himself. "Hannan disappears. A mysterious young lady visitor comes up to Valhalla Notch. The door——"

He stuck the wooden cigar back in his mouth and entered the house. He instructed Mrs. Martenet's chauffeur to put the two cars in the garage. Another servant was ordered to build fires in the guest rooms, for there was no central heating system at Valhalla Notch.

Mr. Curry went to the room he usually occupied on his visits to Valhalla Notch and changed into dry clothing. At length, avoiding the other visitors, he went to the library, scowling a little as he found another man there before him.

"Hello," he said shortly. "Don't you want to go up to your room and change?"

"Thanks, but I am fairly comfortable." The other man, as short as Mr. Curry, but with features that seemed curiously ill-assorted, was smoking a cigarette contentedly. "That is, of course, unless you want me to clear out. Curry, I have a feeling you don't like me. It grieves me—it really does, Curry. As the great Horace once remarked, 'Ostendum pervat magis.' The ancients had a way of expressing their thoughts with beautiful simplicity. But I perceive I am in the way. I'll toddle along. Bye."

Mr. Horace Peters toddled along. Left alone, Mr. Curry glanced about the big room with its long bookshelves, its antiquated furniture and its miscellaneous collections. For a moment his glance lingered on the oil portrait of Winthrop Gaston Martenet. The austere lips and the dreamy eyes formed a contradiction that fascinated him. They symbolized Old Winthrop's spirit, and that spirit seemed to dominate the room even now. By accident or design the picture had been hung in such a manner that the face seemed to be watching the door in the rear. It was almost as if the grim, taut lips had whispered, "Beware!"

Mr. Curry turned away and stepped into the little communicating hall between the library and Old Winthrop's laboratory. At once his eyes went to the clock above the iron door. Several times, on his infrequent visits to Valhalla Notch, he had stood watching it for minutes, gripped by the weird precision of its movement and wondering at the nature of the hidden mechanism that kept it running. Old Winthrop had never told the secret even to him, his best friend. Mr. Curry knew nothing beyond the definite instructions he had received.

He looked at the clock with a trace of awe in his eyes. Even a man of sound business sense could not contemplate such things without a sense of weirdness. Then he looked down at the iron door. What was the secret hidden behind it, the secret Old Winthrop was guarding so jealously even in death? What would happen should any one undertake to open the door in defiance of his wishes? Well, Mr. Curry certainly had no intention of violating his trust. Moreover, it was not for him to wonder or speculate. His duties were clear and ironbound, even though the underlying motives were inscrutable.

He turned away. He stuck the wooden cigar back in his mouth and walked out of the hall, deciding he would question John in detail before he took any action.

The lower rooms were deserted, for the company had gone to their rooms to rest. They had spent the night in Portland, and the downpour had begun soon after they started out in the morning, growing constantly worse as they drew deeper and deeper into the mountains.

Mr. Curry had counseled a stopover along the way, but to this Mrs. Martenet had objected, and he had not pressed his advice. He had viewed the entire project of the trip with disfavor, but Mrs. Martenet had insisted that he come along and advise her concerning an investment that had been suggested to her by certain individuals who were contemplating building a summer hotel in the vicinity of Valhalla Notch.

John returned shortly after luncheon, which was prepared by Mrs. Martenet's servants from a stock of provisions carried in the baggage compartments of the two cars. He brought with him one Dr. Speck, a tall, lank, youngish individual with startling red hair and a mouth full of gold teeth. As soon as the physician had gone to Miss Lane's room, Mr. Curry summoned John to the library.

"Now tell me all about it," he directed when they were seated behind closed doors.

John began at the point where he had discovered the footprints on the floor. Then he told of Miss Lane's arrival and related in detail his conversation with the young lady. Gradually he warmed up to his climax, and he was a little incoherent from excitement when he reached the scene in the hall leading to the iron door. Mr. Curry cross-examined him thoroughly, but the result was unsatisfactory.

"Now think hard, John," he urged. "Can't you tell me a little more about that face?"

John shook his head. "Sorry, sir, but there's nothing more to tell. It was gone so quick I didn't get a look at it."

"Was it a man or a woman?"

"It seems like it was a man. I ain't sure, though. You see, I had the skeesicks on the brain more or less and——"

"The who?"

"The skeesicks—the feller who left those footprints. I'd been thinking about him, and I guess he was in my mind when I saw that face. It might's been him, and again it might'n't."

Mr. Curry's teeth clamped down harder on his wooden cigar.

"What about Miss Lane? How did she conduct herself?"

"She fainted dead away, sir."

"Does she impress you as a woman who is subject to fainting spells?"

"No, sir," said the caretaker thoughtfully. "She's smallish and looks sorta childish, but I wouldn't say she was the fainting kind."

Mr. Curry smiled thinly. "Did she faint before or after the face appeared?"

"It was afterward. First she let out a scream, then pointed at the face. It was after that she fainted."

Mr. Curry nodded absently. "Well, I suppose the sight was creepy enough to make any woman faint. Yet you say she isn't the fainting kind. It may be significant that she didn't faint until the face appeared. On the other hand, it may mean nothing at all. But just suppose, John——" He paused.

John shook himself.

"Yes, sir, I've been supposing a bit along that line myself. Maybe——" He swallowed hard. "Maybe she'd seen the face afore. Maybe she recognized it."

September Money Test Between Bull Leaders and After-Election Goal

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—"After election" is the goal of the bull leaders at the moment. Whether they will reach it with their bullish activities is likely to be indicated when they meet the first part of the September money test toward the close of this week. As of Saturday the banks have to pay out approximately $500,000,000 in interest and dividends as well as to handle other month-end commercial payments.

Just how much the recent calling of loans by out-of-town institutions has prepared them for these disbursements is doubtful. The local banks, however, have increased loans to the stock market recently, so that they undoubtedly will have to call in funds as the week progresses. Immediately after the month-end turnover comes the preparations for the government's mid-September operations which seem bound to cause rather wild flurries in money rates. If the bulls are able to fight off the effect of these money developments they may reach their goal but it's a mighty big "if."

Bulls Stand Pat

It seems quite evident that those responsible for the new outbreak of speculative fever are not going to be stopped until they are forced to.

Federal reserve banks notified member institutions during the week to prepare for treasury financing as of September 15. Terms of the offering should be made public this week and the banks will start taking subscriptions. Whatever the interest, the banks will oversubscribe the offering. It is likely to total about $750,000,000 and with the surplus of the treasury and income tax payments be used to pay off the $1,000,000,000 third Liberty 4¼'s maturing Sept. 15. Payments on the new issue will be due as of the date payment is made on the Liberties and for taxes. In the fortnight intervening the banks must prepare and such preparations comprise the sternest money test for the stock market.

"Easy money" also is an expression of the liquidating pool manager successful in selling a stock yielding 4 per cent or less to one who pays 7 per cent and more for the money to buy.

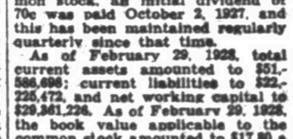

Brokers' Loans

The most interesting developments of the past week was that $22,000,000 decline in brokers' loans was made possible by a $45,000,000 reduction in the advances of out-of-town banks while accommodations of local banks rose $25,000,000. It was the funds from out-of-town banks that caused the wild flurries in the call rate for the last fortnight and it would seem that these institutions now are ready to cause another momentary drop in the call rate by suddenly flooding the market with funds prior to their Sept. 1 needs. Such manipulation is responsible in good part for the defiance of the federal reserve's policy and undoubtedly has been instrumental in the decision of powerful market operators to continue such defiance.

It is remembered that the reserve bank has a habit of raising the rediscount rate when a treasury offering is oversubscribed and just before payment is due thereon.

It has been popular to criticize the reserve on the theory that it caused tight money and threatens to disrupt business. The one fault of the reserve, according to bankers, was that it permitted too much money to get into the stock market toward the close of 1927. Then international requirements necessitated gold shipments and the reserve found itself in a position of facing a runaway stock market with indications of growing demands for credit from commercial quarters and ultimately from the farmers. The reserve officials know that it takes months to check a speculative wave without doing considerable damage. Just as it took seven or eight months for easy money to influence a bull market in stocks four years ago so it takes considerable time for the increasing expense of carrying speculative stocks to check the hysterical enthusiasm of bull leaders who have reaped huge fortunes in the Coolidge bull market.

Coppers and rails in the order named are enjoying the best improvement from a fundamental viewpoint but are practically ignored marketwise. This is because their technical position makes it difficult to bring about wide price fluctuations such as attract a "public following." On the basis of current earnings and outlook these two groups appear more attractive than many recently favored industrials.

THE GREAT WESTERN SUGAR CO.

Five-Year Record

The Great Western Sugar company is one of the leading producers of beet sugar in the United States. It operates 20 factories in Colorado, Nebraska, Wyoming and Montana, with a total slicing capacity of 33,000 tons of beets per day, or about 10,820,000 100-lb. bags of beet sugar per year. The company also controls railroads, limestone deposits, water and land holdings. It has four main subsidiaries.

Earnings have tended to decrease since the fiscal year, which ended Feb. 28, 1924. There was a small February 28, 1924. There was a increase reported for the 1928 fiscal year, which showed a net income of $3,530,568, or the equivalent of $23.54 on each share of preferred stock, and $1.38 on each share of common. In the fiscal year of 1927 net income was $3,365,713. In the fiscal year of 1928, the company produced the largest amount of sugar in any year since the war but prices were low. The acreage planted this year is about 17 per cent less than that of the previous year but price indications showed slightly better in the first three months of 1928.

There is funded debt. Capital stock outstanding consists of $15,000,000 in preferred shares of $100 par, and 1,800,000 shares of no par common. In 1923 and 1924, the holdings of American Sugar Refining company in Great Western Sugar stock were sold out. The preferred stock is not redeemable or convertible, and one share of preferred has equal voting power with 12 shares of common.

Dividends have been paid regularly on the preferred stock at the regular rate of 7 per cent from 1905 to date. On the new no par common stock, an initial dividend of 70c was paid October 2, 1927, and this has been maintained regularly quarterly since that time.

As of February 29, 1928, total current assets amounted to $51,588,698; current liabilities to $22,225,472, and net working capital to $29,361,226. As of February 29, 1928, the book value applicable to the common stock amounted to $17.80 a share.

Stephenson Planning Appeal to Coolidge

GARY, Ind., Aug. 26. (U8)—D. C. Stephenson, former Ku Klux dragon and invisible empire official, is planning a special appeal to President Coolidge for a 90-day parole from a life sentence which he is now serving in the Indiana state prison for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer.

According to announcement of the former dragon's six attorneys, here today the plea will be made to the president within a few days.

MORNING A LA MODE

Morning comes; it lunges through;
Daylight sparkles on the dew.
Birds awake, and start to sing;
New life comes to everything.
Morning! Morning! Hail to morn!
God's will done; the day is born.

(Morning comes; my clock growls out:
Day has come, without a doubt.
Gosh, I'd give my worldly store
Just to sleep one hour more.
Darn those birds, why do they cling
On my window sill to sing?
Morning! Morning! Feeling blue!
But this boy has work to do!)

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

Starchy Combinations

When you use starches, only one kind should be used at a meal, and this starch should be combined only with the cooked and raw non-starchy vegetables. No fruits of any kind—not even tomatoes—should be used with this meal.

The reason for this is that starch digestion begins in the mouth as chewing mixes the saliva with the starch. If acids are used at the same time, the alkalinity of the saliva is spoiled and cannot properly convert the starch into sugar.

If starch, tomatoes and meat are mixed and pass into the stomach, both the meat and tomatoes will stimulate the flow of the gastric juice, which has no digestive element in it that can in any way convert the starch. On the other hand, an excess of gastric juice only sours the starch and makes it unfit for digestion in the intestines where the principal change of starch takes place.

The simple way then to use starch is to use only one starchy food at a time, and to use it in combination with the different non-starchy vegetables, both in the cooked and raw forms. The following specimen meals will give you some idea of how starch may be used in proper combination with other foods:

1. Wholewheat muffins, cooked carrots and string beans.

2. Baked potato, cooked cucumbers, salad of grated carrots and lettuce.

3. Boiled whole rice, cooked asparagus and carrots, raw spinach.

There are really no vegetables which do not contain a small amount of starch, but the following list contains less than 5 per cent: celery, spinach, string beans, asparagus, summer squash cucumbers, eggplant, beet tops, turnip tops, lettuce, okra, chayotes, oyster plant, mallow, kale, zucchini, and even small beets, carrots, parsnips and turnips. The larger and more mature beets, carrots, parsnips, and turnips contain as much as 8 to 12 per cent of starch, but may usually be taken as non-starchy vegetables.

I will briefly explain to you just how food is digested in the stomach, and also in the intestines.

The digestion of food begins in the mouth, but only one kind of food is really digested by the saliva. That one food is starch. Meats, greens, fruit and other foods (except starches) are not in any way digested in the mouth except that mastication breaks these foods up into smaller particles. The ptyalin, or digestive ferment in the saliva, acts upon the starch, and partially converts it into sugar.

When a mixture of meat, bread and greens is taken into the stomach, the chemical action of the gastric juice changes the meat from protein into simpler forms so that it can be absorbed. The digestive juice of the stomach has no effect whatsoever upon the bread and greens except to make them sour because of the one-half of 1 per cent hydrochloric acid contained in the juice.

The digestion of starch does not take place in the stomach, as there is no part of the gastric juice which has the property to act upon the starch. As the food passes into the intestines, the bile, which is alkaline, is mixed with the combination of bread, meat and greens, and if this mixture is already too acid the bile is capable of converting it into a liquid alkaline, most of which can then be acted upon by the amylopsin, steapsin, trypsin and intestinal renin. These ferments chemically digest the different food elements, and can handle almost any mixture if enough bile has been combined with it.

The chief difficulty seems to be in getting bad mixtures through the stomach and into the intestines without setting up a conflict between the digestive juices of the stomach and those of the intestines.

(My next article is on protein combinations.)

Questions and Answers:

Question: B. C. writes: "At one time my pulse will register 60, at another time 80, for no apparent reason. Has this change in pulse any significance for a well man of 60?"

Answer: Your pulse will be much lower when you are resting, and much faster after exercising. This is perfectly normal, but such a variation as you note should not occur while you are quiet. If so, it is because of a varying amount of gas pressure against your heart. This is due to improper food, eating too hastily, overeating and gassy food combinations.

Question: Reader asks: "Does buttermilk tend to produce acidosis on account of the lactic acid it contains?"

Answer: A buttermilk diet, or the use of buttermilk in place of a meal has a tendency to cure acidosis rather than to cause it. The lactic acid of the buttermilk has a beneficial effect upon the intestinal flora, or vegetable growths in the intestines.

Question: L. D. P. asks: "Will you kindly give me some information about yellow jaundice, its cause and cure, and how long it lasts if taken care of immediately?"

Answer: Jaundice may be caused by a serious disease of the liver, such as cancer or cirrhosis, but when it first appears it usually is caused by catarrhal inflammation of the bile ducts or by the bile being stopped through the obstruction caused by gall stones. The treatment which I would suggest would, of course, depend upon the cause found through an examination; but on general principles, a fruit fast would be effective in stimulating the flow of bile and removing the jaundice, at least, temporarily.

Tech Geology Students To Hear Lecture Series

LUBBOCK, Texas, Aug. 26.—A series of lectures for geology students in Texas Technological college is being arranged through the cooperation of the Panhandle Geological society, according to Dr. L. T. Patton, head of the department. The lectures will be given the second and fourth Thursday nights in each month by the chief geologists of various oil companies and by consulting geologists on questions relating to oil geology. One of the first lectures will be given by John L. Ferguson, president of the Panhandle Geological society.

Chicago Civic Opera Planning Most Brilliant Season of Old Auditorium

CHICAGO, Aug. 26. (UE)—In preparation for the coming opera season which will be the last in the historic Auditorium theater, the Chicago Civic Opera company has prepared three new and lavish settings.

The new settings when completed will make the properties of the Chicago company the greatest in the world. Already an eight-room warehouse is devoted exclusively to the stage settings, costumes and other properties incident to the opera.

The new settings are being prepared for the revival of three famous operas which have not been included in the repertoire of the civic opera for several seasons.

Herbert M. Johnson, general manager of the opera, said that he wished to do everything possible to make the last season in the auditorium the most lavish, and the best in history.

The new opera building, erected along the Chicago river, directly opposite from Hearst square, will be one of the finest structures in Chicago when completed. It will be ready for the opening of the 1929-30 season.

The new settings are for Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," in four acts, which was last given here in 1911-12; for "Norma," last given here in 1919-20. Julian Dove, the scenic artist for the opera, has outdone himself in painting the scenes for this opera. However, he feels that the scenes are required because the opera here in Claudia Muzio and Rosa Raisa, has the two greatest "Normas" in the world; and the third group of new settings is for "Tales of Hoffman," last given here in 1924-25.

Another revival during the coming season will be "Don Pasquale," produced for the first and only time in Chicago during the 1919-20 season.

The repertoire this year includes 38 operas, of which 26 will be sung in Italian, 11 in French, two in English and two in German.

RATE DECISION TO HURT GULF

Grain Men Regard Ruling As Most Disturbing

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 26. (AP)—The Kansas City Star said Sunday that future use of the gulf ports of New Orleans, Galveston, Houston and Fort Arthur as natural outlets for grain accumulated in Kansas City from the Kansas wheat belt may be eliminated through a ruling handed down by the Interstate Commerce Commission last week.

Characterized by grain men here as the most disturbing freight rate decision made by the commission in many years, the order discontinues the transit privilege on grain moving to or through the Kansas City market on shipment to the gulf originating south of the main line of the Santa Fe railroad, on a line through Newton, Hutchinson, Dodge City and Garden City.

This complication of the freight rate situation of the southwest, it is said, is causing concern among farmers and grainmen in this territory for the principal reason that it deprives growers of an export market, which is most important in balancing prices.

Hall County Paving Nearing Completion

MEMPHIS, Texas, Aug. 26.—Hall county has completed its part of paving highway No. 5 through the county with the exception of about a quarter of a mile on either side of Red river, which will be done when a new bridge is constructed across the river.

According to County Judge A. C. Hoffman, a report has been received on core drills that were taken from the concrete road, which were tested for strength, testing an average of 690 pounds to the square inch. This stretch of 13½ miles through Hall county is said to be the best piece of paving in the state of Texas.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE (383) Our Presidents

After Madison's second term, James Munroe, another Virginian and Revolution soldier, became president in 1817. Like Madison and Jefferson he was a Republican, the name being changed to Democratic party during John Quincy Adams' term. Up to this time Indians and Negroes had been held in slavery throughout the eighteen states of the Union. 8-27

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge. Copyright, 1923-28.

Slavery in the north, however, began to die out. Action to limit the number of states holding slaves was begun in 1818.

Missouri asked for admission to the Union as a slave state. Many people objected. Then Maine asked admittance as a free state. 8-27

The result was the Missouri Compromise. Missouri was admitted as a slave state, Maine as a free state and it was agreed that in the future slavery should not be allowed in any part of the Louisiana Purchase north of the southern boundary of Missouri. It was not a good bargain for the slave states, since it allowed much more room for free states to form. 8-27

FAVORITE JOKES OF FAMOUS FOLK

As Told by Them to FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By JACK MULHALL

Jack Mulhall strutted his stuff in musical comedy before he invaded Hollywood. He has played for nearly every large producing company.

He owns a mountain home overlooking Hollywood and employs a gardener, chef, butler, valet, chauffeur and housekeeper—he's all the same Filipino boy.

JACK MULHALL

"I've an old southern darkey," as Jack says it, "who acts as my dresser at the studio. His name is Albert.

"Now Albert is particularly fond of fishing, and so was overjoyed recently when he learned that a portion of my current picture would have to be filmed in the country, near Arrowhead lake.

He realized that this would afford his many pleasant hours at his favorite sport.

"The day we reached location, Albert baited his hook, threw it into the water, and sat down on a convenient rock.

"Suddenly there was a terrific tug at his line. He had hooked a huge bass.

"The bass put up a valiant fight—and so did Albert. One minute Albert would have the fish almost on the bank and the next minute the fish would have Albert floundering about at the edge of the water. After several minutes of this—back and forth—Albert crawled from the water spitting mud but clinging to the bass.

"He laid the fish there on the bank, and, regarding it sternly, said:

"'Here is what Ah wants to know: Is dis nigger fishing—or is dis fish niggering?'"

SPUDDERS WIN DOUBLE-HEADER FROM EXPORTERS, 11-8; 9-7

CHAMPS GAIN ON BUFFALOES

Galloways Increase Lead To Seven Games

BEAUMONT, Texas, Aug. 26. (AP)—Wichita Falls made a sweep of the four-game Exporter series this afternoon by copping a double-header, winning the opening scrap, 11 to 8 and the second abbreviated tilt, 9 to 7.

By winning two while Houston was taking one the Spudders increased their lead over the Buffs to seven games.

Hanson allowed the visitors only eight hits in the opener while his mates were collecting 15, but five errors by the locals proved his undoing. Payne, Estell and Cvengros were the Spudder hurlers in the starter while Kiefer and Cobb worked the nightcap.

Beaumont started Johnson in the aftermath and then trotted out Wilson and Beasley, two rookies, and finally Pettit in order.

Pete Turgeon socked a homer over right field fence in the first of the opener with one aboard. Then Fitzgerald doubled over the fence, went to third on Lamb's sacrifice and scored when Marshall muffed Jenkins' grounder.

Exporters Tie Score

That gave the Spuds two, but the Exporters immediately tied it on Odom's single against the fence, Turgeon's error on Petrie's grounder and Bagwell's double over the fence. Swanson's infield put scored Petrie from third.

In the fourth the Spuds chased around five after Swenson had led off with a double to left. He went to third on Stanton's infield out. Smith walked and then Payne put on the squeeze, the play catching Burt off guard and all hands being safe, Swenson scoring. Benton walked to fill the bases and Turgeon sent a sacrifice fly to Petrie which scored Smith. Then Fitzgerald popped a homer over right field fence and Payne and Benton scored ahead of him.

But the locals still made a contest of it by tying it up in the home half. Swanson opened with a homer over right field fence and Marshall followed with a single to center which in turn was followed by Burt's homer over the right field wall, his second in two days. Campbell flew out but Hanson singled to left and went to second when Benton muffed Bailey's grounder, Bailey being safe at first. Odom scratched a hit past Turgeon that scored Hanson and sent Bailey to third, whence he scored on Petrie's infield out.

Spudders Win in Eighth

In the fifth Wichita Falls broke the tie with one run which started when Burt missed Bailey's assist on Jenkins' grounder, Tom going to second. He went to third on Swenson's infield out, and scored on Stanton's sacrifice fly.

Bagwell's double over the fence and Swanson's single to right again tied it in the seventh but in the eighth the opposition put around three to ice the game.

Smith singled to right and Roetz wet into run for him. Cvengros flew out to right but Benton walked and Turgeon was safe at first when Bailey dropped Odom's assist when Pete hit into what appeared to be a certain double play. Fitzgerald flew out to Petrie, Roetz scoring after the catch and the other runners moving up on the throw home. Lamb's single to left then scored Benton and Turgeon.

Spuds Win Second Early

The Spuds wasted no time in the nightcap, Benton getting a walk in the first and going to third on Turgeon's single to right. Fitzgerald doubled over the fence to score Benton and sending Turgeon to third. Lamb's sacrifice fly to center scored Turgeon and after Jenkins had grounded out, Swenson's single to center scored Fitzgerald.

Singles by Turgeon, Fitzgerald and Lamb and Stanton's double to right gave the Spuds three more in the third. Walks to Benton and Turgeon followed by singles by Fitzgerald and Lamb gave them another, pair in the fourth. Their final and deciding markers came in the sixth on Fitzgerald's triple that got by Swanson, a sacrifice by Lamb which squeezed Howard in and Swenson's single to right which scored Jenkins who had gone to first on an error and to second on a passed ball.

In the third, Eddie Marshall scored from third on Robertson's single after Eddie had made three stations on Kiefer's wild throw to first on his bunt.

To this the locals added six in the third and momentarily took the lead. Petrie and Broiles got singles to start it and after Swanson hoisted to Benton, Marshall sent a single into center to score Petrie. Burt fouled out but Rbertson singled to left to fill the bases. Campbell batting for Wilson drew a pass, forcing in Broiles. Bailey shot a grounder at Kiefer which bounced back from his glove into foul territory and Marshall scored. This was enough for Kiefer and Odom greeted Cobb with a double against the fence, all three runners scoring. Petrie batting for the second time, flew out.

Managers of Heavy Fighters Wail Over Runyon's Prices in Betting

Damon Says More Good Words About Babe Hunt and Opines Dempsey Will Emerge From 'Steenth Retirement

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Low piteous cries assail my shell-like ears of late as I stroll along the Rue Daffadilly, where the attaches of the sour science park their overheated bunions.

It seems that the lads are complaining about the prices in my future book on the Beezarks' sweepstakes, otherwise the impending struggle for the vacated heavyweight championship chair.

"You made my great gladiator, Benny Touchdown—I mean Touchstone—250 to 1 in your book," said Mr. Hymie Cantor to me, querulously. "I can get 850½ off Pete the Goat."

"I'll lay it to you just for old time's sakes," I answered, obligingly, noting on my cuff, "H. Cantor, $850¼ to $1, Benny Tombstone."

"Touchstone," corrected Mr. Cantor, inspecting my cuff. "Can't you give me a point better than that?"

You may recall that my future book quoted the odds that should be laid against the chances of the various beezarks winning the big title. I anticipated some little beefing from the friends and admirers of the sour scientists, and I wasn't disappointed. I am a little hurt, however, that Mr. Pete the Goat should go around trying to steal my trade.

Most of the managers seem to accept a long price against their beezark as a reflection on the beezark's ability. I tried to explain that such was not my intent, but what's the use of trying to explain to a manager? If you could explain to him he wouldn't be a manager.

Some Added Starters

I have a number of added starters since the publication of the opening prices in my future book, and some changes in those prices. I opened William Harrison Dempsey, the Manassa man mauler, at even money, and I now offer him at 1 to 2, which is what I think of the stories that he won't try it again.

The injury to the terrible Sharkey man lengthens out his price to 100 to 1. I believe I overlooked Thomas Heeney and M. Ovila Chapdelaine, otherwise Jack Delaney, the other day. You can have them at 500 to 1 each. You must bear in mind, of course, that this is a mythical book, so don't be crowding up to the window.

Here are my added starters, and their prices:

Ernie Owens, 500 to 1.
Jake Warren, 500 to 1.
Szaymka Zabuil, 1,000 to 1.
Con O'Kelly, 500 to 1.
Battling Levinsky, 1,500 to 1.

Ernie Owens is "Dutch" Meyers' heavyweight from Los Angeles who is fighting well around Chicago. Zabuil is a Minnesota prospect, managed by Jack Hurley, who brought out Billy Petrolle, and Russ Leroy. Con O'Kelly is an Irishman who is being imported by Tom O'Rourke, and, of course, you know Battling Levinsky.

I put him in because Al Lippe keeps insisting that the old battler is in his second pugilistic childhood, and will eventually win the heavyweight title, though it strikes me that by that time Bat will be too venerable to enjoy it. So will Al.

Dougherty Contender

Mr. Three Fingered Jack Dougherty writes me on a very fancy letterhead that his man, Jake Warren, who is slightly colored, has now attained a total poundage of 185, and is ready and willing to accept the heavyweight championship.

I note that Mr. Three Fingered Jack's stationery says office phone, and residence phone, with no number given in either case, and I am wondering if he is trying to hide from me in the event I wish to see him for personal confirmation of his statements about Jake Warren.

Mr. Three-digits Dougherty says he has defied George Godfrey, the black shadow of Leiperville several times, and George has failed to take cognizance of same. I am of the opinion that failure on the part of the shadow to notice another defi will constitute a default and Mr. Dougherty can claim a decision over him. Still, the old shadow can't read much, and perhaps he thought the defi was merely another notice from the income tax fellow.

By the way, Godfrey's manager is also named Dougherty, and I believe he is Mr. Three Fingered Jack's grandson, though I wouldn't vouch for the statement. In any event, Jake Warren's hat is in the ring, size 5⅞. He has had 50 fights, and 50 victories, according to Mr. Three Fingered Jack's figures, and he has gone over them with great care several times, and can find no error.

I beg to the reader not to smile at some of the names that appear in my future book, such as Zabuil, and Babe Hunt, and Frank Montagna, and Buck Walters. Not many years ago the name of William Harrison Dempsey was just as unfamiliar as these are today. And ten years ago no one had heard of Mister Gene Tunney, except a few soldiers of the A. E. F.

Griffiths Is Promising

I say the new champion will not be determined for about two years, and then he may not be one of the hundred or more beezarks that I have mentioned in my future book, though I am inclined to think that I have named the winner.

There is a chap out in Chicago called Tuffy Griffiths, who has grown from a middleweight into a light heavy within a few months, and who may be a heavyweight in a year. He is a great young fighter, and just belted out Tony Marullo of New Orleans in one heat, though Charley Ballenger, a Canadian light heavy, also bowled over Marullo recently.

But Griffiths is the type of youngster who may come on and up in such sensational fashion as to one day be the man accounted successor to the retired champion, and of such flourish as to also be the man to lure the ex-champion out of retirement for that last inevitable try.

Frank Montagna, a young Italian of New Jersey, is also that type. He is a sensational fighter, but lacks experience, and the redoubtable young Mr. Jersey Jones keeps telling me about one Binghamton Joe Zink, who is growing from a middle into a heavy almost overnight, and who has remarkable promise, according to Jersey.

It takes about four or five years to make a fighter, however, so the chances would seem to favor one of the more experienced men at the moment. But you never can tell. That's the one sure thing about the sour science—you never can tell.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26. (AP)—If we can plaster any diluted faith in the present campaign the farmer is finally having his day in the sun.

But he had better not remove his sunbonnet.

August is the month when the national politician leaps from stump to platform, and from rostrum to dais, telling the patient clover-kicker how he is going to relieve the suffering agriculturrist.

And he does relieve the farmer. Of everything.

We will believe that the nimble orator is the friend of the weed-grabbers when he drops that gavel and picks up a rake.

The prosperity of all nations rests upon the mortgaged landscape. Everything springs from the soil except whiskers.

We admit that those speeches sound god over the radio. But try and plant them.

You can get a load of congressional help and still have an empty wagon.

The only time a farmer is certain of a pal is when he waddles out into the cornfield and shakes hands with his scarecrow.

In a way the present situation is the weed-bender's own fault. They spent the last 50 years working for blue ribbons at state fairs.

Naturally when a politician heard that a farmer could be paid off in purple ribbons he went right into the dry goods business.

And that prize pumpkin stuff didn't help any. Especially when the rural free citizens started electing their prize pumpkins to the senate.

Of course the farmer has been helped a lot in the last few years. We have built a new wing on the Metropolitan Museum, bought three original Rembrandts, won the Antwerp Olympics and discovered lily cups.

He has tuned in on the acceptance speeches, has learned that the Woolworth is the tallest building in the world and is happy that Byrd is going to discover the south pole.

Knowledge is power. You can make him forget the tariff, an economical marketing system and cheaper transprotation by allowing him to trim you one game of cribbage.

When the delegation of indignant hay-binders come east to protest to Washington, what do they do?

They forget what they arrived for and rush down to Atlantic City to see the gals in those one-piece bathing suits.

After the banks have clamped down on the farmer and he has lost his farm via the waiver route, his congressman comes to his aid and helps him start life all over again with a package of free pansy seeds.

So shed a tear for the poor old potato miner. He is knee deep in weeds and promises. He casts his vote once every four years but forgets to hang around and see if they count it.

Spudder-Buffalo Playoff Details To Be Settled at Meeting Today

DALLAS, Aug. 26. (AP)—Details of the playoff which appears necessary between the Houston Buffs and Wichita Falls Spudders to decide the 1928 Texas league championship will be arranged at a meeting between Doak Roberts, president of the league, and officials of the two clubs here Monday morning.

The Spudders had a lead over the first half winners of seven games after copping today's double header with the Exporters.

Closing date for the Texas league is September 9 and play in the short series will begin about September 11, Roberts said tonight. Whether a seven or nine-hit series shall be played is one of the details to be worked out at tomorrow's conference.

Should a play-off be necessary in the Southern association, whose champion meets the Texas league winner in the Dixie series, it is likely the Buff-Spudder series would go nine games, in order to reduce the layoff for Texas league winners before the opening of the southern classic.

The Southern association season ends September 16, a week later than the Texas, and a week's idleness awaits the Buff-Spudder series winner in case of a Southern playoff. Birmingham, winner of the first half, however, has a good chance to capture the last honors.

CARDINAL BATS POUND VICTORY

Red Birds Trounce Phillies And Increase Lead

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 26. (AP)—Continuing the process of regaining their National league lead recently lost, the St. Louis Cardinals won another contest from the Phillies today, this time by a 6 to 1 margin. With the Giants still in a losing slump, the Red Birds increased their advantage in the circuit to three and one-half games

The victory showed among other things that the Cards are again hitting while the hurlers seem to have regained their cunning on the mound. Sherdel won his 16th victory, while his teammates collected 10 safeties off three Philadelphia hurlers.

Sunny Jim Bottomley celebrated his return to the lineup after an illness by getting two hits, one a triple. Orsatti, replaced by Bottomley at first, went to the outfield and continued his hitting with a double. Score:

GIANTS LOSE IN TENTH

BROOKLYN, Aug. 26. (AP)—Del Bissonette's twentieth home run, knocked over the right field fence with two out and none on in the tenth gave Brooklyn a 4 to 3 decision over the Giants here today.

If Carl Hubbell had been able to retire Bissonette, the game would doubtless have gone into the records as a tie because the day was murky and darkness was falling rapidly. Jess Petty opposed Hubbell for the first nine innings, but gave way to a pinch batsman in the ninth as the Robins tied the score. Score:

KILOWATS LOSE DOUBLE HEADER

Fort Worth Team Captures Amateur Honors

FORT WORTH, Aug. 26.—Staging a sensational comeback, the Texas Pacific Coal and Oil company team of Fort Worth defeated the Texas Electric Service company aggregation of Wichita Falls in both games of a double header at Panther park Sunday to cop the northwestern amateur baseball crown in the state race.

The local nine won the opening contest, 4 to 1, and the second conflict by a 5 to 3 score.

The visitors triumphed in the first match of the series Saturday and a win in either of today's frays would have ended the series in their favor. Scores; first game:

REFRIGERATION HEALTH NEED

Food Protection Prevents Sickness

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26. (AP)—The intimate relationship between health and food has aroused widespread interest in recent years.

Much attention has been devoted to the constituents of various kinds of food, with particular stress on the importance of the different vitamines they contain and on computations and estimates of the number of calories each can provide in the daily diet.

That situation may be ascribed in large part to the importance of these body building and heat producing elements and partly, perhaps, to the interesting complexity of the problems involved. The more commonplace question of food preservation and refrigeration, while engaging the attention of a number of investigators, in the opinion of public health service observers, appears to have aroused relatively less general and scientific interest than it merits.

Protect Raw Food

The refrigeration problem, they feel, is especially emphasized in summer owing to the importance of protecting all raw food against undue heat. This is particularly true of milk and other dairy products, meat and fish, which should always be kept at a low temperature until cooked.

During very hot weather, health investigators have learned, many cases of intestinal disorder among infants, children and, to a lesser extent, adults can be traced either to improper or unwise habits of eating or to failure to keep food products properly cool and covered. Many persons, they have found, fail to realize that if meat, fish and milk are not placed in a refrigerator until several hours after they are purchased their qualities are likely to be greatly impaired. Even when that error is avoided considerable spoilage results from failure to return unused portions of the foods to the refrigerator as quickly as possible after removing them in the course of preparing a meal.

Risk of Illness

All foods, the health authorities explain, contain bacteria, which, if allowed to become numerous, will cause fermentation in the stomach and intestines, resulting in various kinds of illness. The digestive juices of the organs involved are adequate, however, to overcome their harmful activity if their multiplication is retarded and held within reasonable means by refrigeration.

Youth Disappears From Auto Mysteriously

LAPORTE, Ind., Aug. 26. (INS)—Another mysterious happening in the vicinity of Angola, Ind., was reported here today when it was learned that Harold Taylor, 20, of Knox, Ind., a garage man, disappeared early today between Coldwater, Mich., and South Bend, Ind., while driving from Detroit to Knox.

The youth's father, Ed Taylor, driving another car, missed him when he reached South Bend and was unable to find him on his way back to Coldwater. The father fears the son was held up by hijackers.

Loyola Dean Named University President

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 26. (INS)—William H. Agnew, S. J., Dean of Loyola university at Chicago has been made president of Creighton university here to succeed W. J. Grace, S. J., it was announced here.

The Rev. Grace will be transferred to Marquette university, Milwaukee, Wis., where he will be dean of the Arts and Science college. Father Grace has been president of Creighton for the past five years.

GOSPEL OF SELF RESPECT IS TOPIC AT UNION CHURCH SERVICES

MORELAND IS PARK SPEAKER

Pleads for Adherence To Christ's Doctrine

"Christ preached the gospel of self respect and the tyrant has been toppled from his bloody throne by men who would be free. The men of every nation have dreamed, toiled and died for, liberty. Jesus has altered the boundaries of nations and the fairness and honesty innate in Christianity has established or is relentlessly establishing the ballot box of the freedman," the Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, pastor of the Grant Street Methodist church, South, said in addressing a large crowd at Bellevue park Sunday night, at the fifth union church service held this summer.

Rev. Mr. Moreland's subject was: "Personal Liberty and the Gospel of Self Respect."

The text of his sermon follows:

Jesus taught the infinite worth of the individual in a day when women were sold at auction in the market place; when men were fed to famished lions to furnish holiday entertainment; when the soldier was an automaton existing for the whim of the latest tyrant.

A dark and terrible moral decay had arrived. The Roman institution of the home had decayed into a condition of immorality unimaginable. The blight of moral leprosy, drunken debauchery and social degradation touched all classes of society.

When Pompeii recently was dug from under the ashes of 19 centuries, a picture of the condition then existant was revealed. Statues in the streets portrayed lust unleashed. The frescoes upon buildings facing the streets were unspeakably vile. Purity had given way to impurity, morality to immorality, virtue to lust, honor to dishonor. The worth of the individual, his eternal soul, and infinite potentialites, had been forgotten. A drunken Rome reeled upon an unclean throne. The night of despair had settled upon the oppressed, subjected peoples of the known world.

Jesus revealed God to human hearts. A God of the slave and free. A Father who cared, who heard the anguished prayer. Who saw the sparrows fall. Who loved sacredly and tenderly.

A Magdalene became Mary, a flame of purity, a white robed angel of mercy and love. And tens of thousands of womankind broken by awful sin, have found Him as Mary did and have been redeemed by His Redemption. They have praised Him and have raised broken lives for His healing touch.

Touched Many Lives

A grafting Jewish traitor Matthew, collecting taxes on a commission basis, a renegade, despised and despising, felt the fire of self respect burn away the leprosy of his soul, and went, a flaming evangel, among his people pointing them to God.

A bitterly intolerant Paul flamed up and down the highways of the world, breathlessly calling men to a Savior. A marvel of consecrated energy empowered by a burning devotion. His hurrying feet and impelling message changed the history of the world, altered the boundary lines of every nation, and is shanging them today.

As a clear spring that flows from a moss covered mountain stone, grows into a torrent, enlarges into a vast river, moves irresistibly toward the sea, so has Christ's living tide swept, increasing and inlarging, across the centuries, sweeping aside kingdoms, altering the social conditions of every day, bringing civil liberty to mankind, lifting the intellectual level, freeing the slave, emancipating and ennobling woman, outlawing liquor and dope, recognizing the rights of the child, and raising the shining sword of peace against the red blade of insane war.

Self-Respect Gospel

Christ preached the gospel of self-respect and the tyrant has been toppled from his bloody throne by men who would be free. The men of every nation have dreamed and toiled and died for liberty. Jesus has altered the boundaries of the nations and the fairness and honesty innate in Christianity has established, or is relentlessly establishing the ballot box of the freedman.

Jesus has given us the school. His followers have founded the schools, preserved the growth and gain of knowledge, sacrificed to teach the young, established the colleges, and endowed them. And no more sacrificing group of great hearted men and women exist today than those who teach our children.

His gospel of self-respect has freed the slave. The shackles have been broken. How tremendous the act! How changed is history because of Him. I am southern born. My grand father felt the march of Sherman to the sea, but I am glad that the negro has found freedom.

Lifted Womankind

Jesus has lifted womankind from a prey to brutal lust, a chattel bought and sold, divorced by a whim, a degraded daughter of toil. Woman should feel an inexpressable debt to Him. He has lifted her. He is her friend.

Fifty thousand girls disappear annually in the country, swallowed up by dens of vice, wrecked by whiskey and drugs, a haunted batallion sacrificed upon the altars of lust. Only the kindly gospel of the Son of God, only His flaming wrath shall change this terrible stain upon the social fabric.

"Three men went out one summer night,
Nor care had they nor aim.
'Ere we get back, they said, we'll have a game.
Three girls began that summer night
A life of endless shame,
And went through sin, disease and death,
As swift as racing flame.
Honored, respected the men,
Defiled, degraded they,
But when comes God's judgment day,
What then? What then? What then?"

"But whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which believe in Me, it were better for him that a mill stone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depths of the sea." Matt. 18:6.

The gospel of self-respect that Jesus taught is an uncompromising foe to booze, with the damnable, destroying, ruinious traffic of dope and prostitution that thrives with it. Whiskey and the prostitute, liquor and cocaine are cancerous growths upon society. Whiskey and social disease blind ten thousand children, twist and main and destroy. The serpent hiss of alcohol is heard in the plausible sophistries of the politician. The church of God shall not retreat. The ministry of Jesus Christ shall not fail in combatting these evils.

The Church Militant

For a hundred years the evangelical churches of America, have fought the soul destroying traffic of liquor. It shall fight it a thousand years if necessary. The politician may mouth expediency—the Christian people of this land will look at the broken bodies, and ruined souls of degraded women; at the insane, whiskey drugged murderer and criminal, at broken homes, and hungry children and shall ruthlessly stamp out the life of the fanged liquor traffic, and its companions of dope, and vice.

There shall be no return. There shall be no retreat.

I stood on a busy street not long ago and saw a drunken automobile driver, his brain and body dazed by the effect of poisonous whiskey, strike a little child with his heavy car, crushing out an innocent little life in a blood stained smear upon the pavement, breaking the little body, disfiguring the little face, closing the little eyes eternally. Multiply that death car driven by a drunken exponent of personal liberty by twenty-four million automobiles driven upon our streets, bring back and legalize the liquor traffic, amend our constitution, modify the Volstead act, put whiskey into the home as you have been advised by the leaders of a great party, and watch for the carnival of death that shall ensue. The gospel of Christ stands today opposing the triune curses of society, booze, dope and prostitution and by the grace of Almighty God, there shall be no retreat.

Rights of Child

Jesus recognized the rights of the child. "And He took them up in His arms and blessed them."

The child cannot choose its father, but it has the inalienable right to a father whose body is free from disease, whose character is worthy, whose mind is clean. The child deserves a mother who has not stained her soul with sin. The child deserves an environment that is clean. Every child born to woman is a mute appeal for purity of womanhood and manhood, and for the elimination of the bootlegger and speakeasy and social disease.

We have discovered the child, we spend millions upon his secular education. Our churches build great plants for his religious training. We no longer neglect him but the church of Jesus Christ has awakened to the rights and possibilities of the child. The modern young woman at the altars of matrimony demands a health certificate for the protection of unborn children. The church demands a health certificate from the community environment.

The changing, sifting, dynamic gospel of Jesus Christ brings the gospel of peace to the war weary world. Honor must be observed among nations. The missionary is a silent ambassador of brotherhood and peace.

Insanity of War

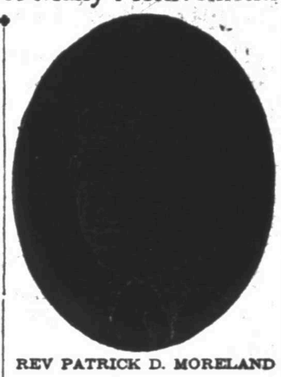

War is insanity. It lets loose a host of social evils. It is inhuman and unchristian. It is unthinkable. Too long have the politicians plunged us into war. Too long has the cry of prejudice and the itching lust for gain slain their thousands.

The speaker of this evening bears in every nerve fiber of his being the shock and stress of war. These hands have adjusted the bomb racks of airplanes laden with destruction that struck silently from night skies. This speaker has lifted the body of a brother that bore the crushing marks of war. These lips shall proclaim the gospel of peace, the gospel of Christ, the gospel of self-respect that has changed the tenets and standards and nations of mankind and is changing standards and nations and peoples this day.

"Right forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne,
But beyond the vast unknown,
Standeth God within the shadows,

Moreland Is Record Church Builder

Church Building One of Many Achivements

REV PATRICK D. MORELAND

The Rev. Patrick D. Moreland was born in Claremore, Okla., and is not a comedian, but he does take his clergical duties with many smiles and offers a brand of genuine friendliness to those he meets.

Besides writing harmless poetry, curing imaginary ills with peppy words and a grin he has built seven churches in the last six years, not a bad record for a young man just making a beginning. But he is somewhat reticent about the poetry, for another young man from the same town has achieved prominence in that line, and the preacher is a little fearful.

Besides the above accomplishments, his achievements may be summed up something like this—a wife, red-haired but amiable, two sons, a degree from the Southern Methodist university at Dallas, received in 1924—the pep and vigor to drive 150 miles any Saturday to see a good football game, a few well filled years as pastor of churches in the Dallas district, and a new pastorate at the Grant Street Methodist church here, are about all that should be told about Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, who delivered the fourth union sermon of the Wichita Falls Ministrial alliance, Sunday evening at Bellevue park.

Data On Falling Star Sought by Astronomer

FORT WORTH, Texas, Aug. 26. (UP)—P. O. E. Monnig, president of the Fort Worth Physical and Astronomical society, has sent out an appeal for information concerning a meteor observed in the southwestern sky shortly after dark last Wednesday. He calculates that unless the meteor burned itself out it would have landed about 35 miles west of Waco, which territory is calculated from observation of the position and direction of flight.

Samples Shown

In this booth there will be shown samples of the various kinds of cotton shipped to the association during the past season. Some one will be present at all hours to explain the various spinnable values, and the advantages to the farmer if he prepares his cotton carefully before marketing.

A similar exhibit will be shown at the county fairs at Holis, Elk City, Cordell, Clinton, Lawton, Chickasha, Hobart, Duncan, Anadarko, Chandler, Okfuskee, Okmulgee, Stillwater, Waurika, McAlester, Sallisaw, Poteau, Bristow and Holdenville, and also at the three-state fairs at Oklahoma City, Tulsa and Muskogee.

Dallas Case May Win 'Endurance' Contest

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 26. (UP)—More than 1,000,000 words of testimony have been transcribed by court reporters working in shifts in the seven weeks during which litigation between the Dallas Development company and C. V. Compton has been going on in 44th district court here. Judge Towne Young ordered a temporary halt when one of the lawyers was overcome with exhaustion.

The case may yet reach the record for long trials which was made in 53rd district court at Austin when nine weeks of testimony was taken in the state's suit to evict oil companies from Harris county oil lands. More than a week of argument followed the nine weeks' testimony.

Monday night, each woman entering the Olympic theater will receive, free of charge, a handsome 9 inch dinner plate. This is the first of 50 pieces. A brother prosecutes his own brother for murder in "Wheel of Chance" at the Majestic. Fannie Hurst wrote the story. It is another one of those melodramatic plays with a lot of action in it. Pay your money and take your choice.

"Moon of Israel", at the Olympic theater, shows some 50,000 people in the cast. This is just about a record for any motion picture in the number of people actually photographed.

The brilliant event of the year is the first all talking motion picture the world has ever known, "The Lights of New York," now at the Strand. From the point of view of achievement, it seems that the producers have done good work for there is a world of difference between the talkies of the past two months and this newest development. Just as anyone today who had the opportunity to see the first airplane or automobile undoubtedly took advantage of it and today is glad that he did, so everyone in he city has the chance to view the world's first all talking movie. From an artistic point of view, it is possible that everyone will not be completely pleased as the first show of this kind undoubtedly leaves much room for improvement. Everyone should see this film, and be glad of the chance to see it.

Birthday Letter From Judd Gray Given Daughter

NORWALK, Conn., Aug. 26. (US)—A message from the dead was today handed little Jane Gray on her twelfth birthday. The first of several letters written by her father, Judd Gray, while he was in the death house at Sing Sing prison, awaiting execution for the slaying of Albert Snyder, was handed to the child by Samuel L. Miller, Gray's attorney, whom Gray had charged with the strange trust.

Miller went to the home of Frank T. Brundage, brother of Mrs. Gray, where the little girl and her mother are living, and delivered the letter into the girl's own hands, carrying out the instructions given to him by Gray.

What was in the first letter the world will probbaly never know, for Jane opened it, read it silently, reread it twice, and said nothing. She carefully folded it and put it among her personal belongings.

TRIES TO OPEN HALDANE CRYPT

Man Near Grave Thinks Author 'Alive'

LONDON, Aug. 26. (UP)—An attempt to open the coffin of Lord Haldane, statesman and author, who died last Sunday, was reported today by the Evening Standard.

The newspaper said the attempt occurred last night at Glen Eagles cemetery in Scotland, where Lord Haldane was buried yesterday. A man whose name was not disclosed was found asleep nearby. When questioned, he said he believed Haldane was "not dead." The same man interrupted the funeral procession yesterday, making the same statement, the newspaper said. The man was said to be a believer in spiritualism.

Texans Plan Marathon Run for Legion Meet

RANGER, Texas, Aug. 26. (UP)—Kenneth Campbell, last Texan to drop out of C. C. Pyle's recent "bunion derby" between Los Angeles and New York, has written state officers of the American Legion trying to arrange an Austin-San Antonio run during the national convention of the American Legion.

Campbell is confident that he can lower the time for the 86-mile run, which was set by Indian runners brought from Mexico two years ago. That record is 16 hours and 23 minutes. Campbell offers to run against it or to run in competition with other racers.

As regards Pyle's proposed westward run from New York to Los Angeles, Campbell is "not interested." His feet have had enough of such trips.

Oil Man Plans Two-Year Cruise

BEAUMONT, Texas, Aug. 26. (UP)—S. W. Parrish's yacht Esperanza will carry the pennant of the Beaumont Yacht club into scores of foreign ports in a two-year semi-scientific cruise for which the wealthy Beaumont and Tulsa oil operator is having the craft refitted.

Besides the crew and officers, Parrish plans to take with him on the cruise a small party of zoologists, botanists, anthropologists and archaeologists. Lee Parrish, his son, will go along as geologist and first mate.

The first stage of the cruise will be down the Florida coast and to the West Indies. South America will next be visited and then Central America, where the scientists will be put ashore to make investigations in the ruins of Mayan civilization. Going through the Panama canal the Esperanza will then run up the Pacific coast to San Francisco for refitting before continuing her cruise. It is possible the trip may be extended to Australia, but that has not been determined.

The Esperanza is an 80-foot double ended ketch with 200 horse power engines. Her masts have just been removed at Chicago where she now is, in order that she may be passed through the Erie canal on her way to New York to start the trip.
