CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 8.—Economic disaster will prevail in the south unless conditions are altered materially before the end of the cotton harvest, in the opinion of C. Singleton Green, secretary of the southern yarn spinners' association.

He believes that the movement to withhold cotton from the market is "neither feasible nor possible."

"Even if it were feasible or possible to hold a vast amount of cotton from the market I can not see that it would have a permanent effect on the price. All cotton traders would know of its existence and that it could be dumped on them at any time the holders chose."

COOLIDGE APPEALED TO WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Government financial aid to meet the situation in the south caused by the slump in cotton prices was urged upon President Coolidge today by Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas.

Although the agency through which this money could be put forward was not mentioned specifically by the senator, he indicated a belief it should be done through banks, perhaps the Federal Reserve System on a commercial basis. The reaction of the president to the proposal, he interpreted as favorable.

Mr. Robinson also told the president of charges in the south that the drop in cotton prices from 20 to 13 cents was in large measure due to the estimates of the department of agriculture on the crop which, he added, were too high. Disatisfaction with the reports, he asserted, was nothing new and he predicted that a move made in congress this winter to have the system radically revised or abolished entirely.

COTTON DROPS $4 AFTER REPORT

Three Negroes Lynched By South Carolina Mob

TRIO ON TRIAL FOR MURDER OF AIKEN SHERIFF

INSTRUCTED VERDICT BY JUDGE OF NOT GUILTY INCITES VIOLENCE

(By the Associated Press)
AIKEN, S. C., Oct. 8.—A mob early today stormed the Aiken jail, seized three negroes, one of them a woman, and shot them to death in a pine thicket just beyond the city limits.

The negroes lynched were Clarence and Demmond Lowman and the latter's sister, Bertha Lowman. They were on trial a second time for murder in connection with the death of Sheriff H. H. Howard of Aiken county who was shot to death April 25, 1925, when, accompanied by several deputies, he went to raid the home of Sam Lowman, father of Demmond and Bertha Lowman and uncle of Clarence Lowman. On their first trial the negroes were convicted but a new trial was granted by the state supreme court. This trial began early this week.

Not Guilty Verdict Asked
Yesterday special Judge S. T. Latham, presiding, directed a verdict of "not" guilty for Demmond Lowman, in the charge of conspiracy to murder.

The mob broke into the jail about 3 o'clock this morning, overpowered Deputy Taylor, Jailer, and Sheriff Nettie Robinson, and spirited the negroes away in an automobile. Their bodies were found several hours later in the thicket about a quarter of a mile from town. Each had been shot several times.

The jailer said all electric light wires to the jail were cut and he was called to the door by the men. A demand was made for the prisoners. He refused to accede and had Sheriff Robinson called by telephone. The sheriff arrived while the mob surrounded the jail and was overpowered, the officer said.

Enter Through Window
Meantime, some members of the mob entered the jail through a window in a part of the building used as the jailer's residence and succeeded in obtaining the prisoners.

Sheriff Robinson said he followed the mob but was outdistanced because he was driving a small automobile.

NORRIS CASE IS BEING PREPARED

Defense Says Declaration Of Youth Favors Defendant In Slaying Of Chipp

(By the Associated Press)
FORT WORTH, Texas, Oct. 7.—Declarations of the defense in the case of Rev. Dr. J. Frank Norris, charged with murder, that it had obtained a new and more favorable statement from Carl Glaze, 12, so-called "mystery witness," were discounted today by Sam Sayers of the firm of special prosecutors. The boy's mother, Mrs. L. E. Glaze, also was firm in her contention that he would stick to his original story at the trial.

Names of 200 witnesses were drawn in the case today by Judge George E. Hoseny in the presence of defense counsel and the prospective jurors will be summoned within the next few days.

Defense Call 23 Witnesses
The defense today presented a list of 23 witnesses and asked that they be summoned in the trial.

A second statement from Glaze was taken in the presence of five witnesses Thursday and could be considered favorable to the pastor, it was announced by Chester Collins, Lufkin attorney, who is a member of the defense counsel. Sayers declared that this statement, if differing materially from the first statement, would not stand up.

Youth Went to Study
Young Glaze went to the pastor's study to deliver a letter and accidentally happened on the shooting of D. E. Chipp. Subsequently he disappeared and his presence at the scene was first made known by friends of the defense, who were seeking to establish the existence of a "conspiracy" against the pastor.

Sayers, hearing talk of the matter from neighbors of the boy, obtained the statement, which he intimated was unfavorable to the accused pastor.

Since that time, he explained, he had been expecting that a move would be made to obtain a different statement from the boy.

The district attorney's office said today that the statement was obtained by men who claimed to be officers. No officer was present with the knowledge of the authorities, it was declared.

MA TO ACCEPT RESIGNATIONS
AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 8.—When the legislature adjourns at 3 o'clock Friday, Governor Miriam A. Ferguson will announce acceptance of the resignations of John Bickett, Sr., and Hal Moseley, members of the highway commission, and will appoint Eugene T. Smith, secretary to the commission, as chairman of the commission, and George Robertson of Meridian, as successor to Bickett. This was announced at the governor's office.

The plan is, it was said, to accept the resignation of John C. Case, third member of the commission, on Monday and appoint Scott Woodward of Fort Worth as his successor. This would carry out the governor's plans, as made public in a letter to Case, Moseley and Bickett to vacate their offices immediately upon adjournment of the legislature, because the senate failed to confirm the appointments.

The senate postponed action until the 40th legislature and the governor interpreted the constitution's dictum pertaining to lack of confirmed appointments.

John Bickett, Sr., of San Antonio, resigned last week because of poor health. The resignation of Hal Moseley had been in the executive office for several days, and Case's is available, it was explained.

Adjourn at 3 o'clock
AUSTIN, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The 39th legislature, here in special session, Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock will adjourn sine die. A concurrent resolution calling for adjournment at that time was adopted by both houses. As little business remains to be done, it is said both houses will be able to adjourn without turning back the clock.

In the final rush the senate rushed through a large volume of legislation, extended the investigation into the University of Texas until the 40th legislature and continued several hundred notaries public.

Where Col. Williams Died

Here is the scene of the final tragic episode in the career of Colonel Alexander Williams, U. S. marines, who was court-martialed by Smedley Butler last spring for serving Butler with cocktails. Following the dotted line sketched in the picture, Williams' auto swerved from the embankment on San Francisco, went through an unguarded opening between two piers, and sank in 30 feet of water, drowning the officer. It happened at night, as Colonel Williams was returning to his home from a party.

Many Trampled To Death And Thousands Starving In Wuchang As Rescue Boats Continue Efforts To Remove Refugees

(By the Associated Press)
PEKING, Oct. 8.—Foreign dispatches from Hankow say that at least fifty persons were among those trampled to death in the rush of the crowds through the gate of the city of Wuchang since the siege of that city by taking refugees to Hankow, across the Yangtze river.

Chinese estimates, unconfirmed, say that 10,000 persons have died in Wuchang since the siege of that city by the Red Cantonese army began some five weeks ago. Most of these are said to have died of starvation. Advice say that twenty to thirty thousand civilians have been evacuated from the city since the rescue work started, under Red Cross auspices. Hankow dispatches state that 500 coffins have been shipped to Wuchang to bury refugees trampled or drowned in the rush for boats.

Mrs. Elizabeth Goggan of the Cova hotel, received word yesterday from her sister at Corpus Christi, stating that Mrs. Goggan's son, Wayland Sanders, a traveling salesman, had been high jacked near Houston. The message stated that the fact that the young man was wearing a heavy hat possibly saved his life. Mrs. Goggan had received no word from her son in regard to the accident and is making inquiry from the head office at Houston as to the extent of the injuries. The letter from Mrs. Goggan's sister was asking for detailed information, thinking Mrs. Goggan had been notified of the hold up.

Hut And Abductors Of Aimee Reported Found On Ranch; Keyes Scoffs Report
(By the Associated Press)
LOS ANGELES, Calif., Oct. 8.—More desert lore was in store today for those recording the details of the Aimee Temple McPherson kidnapping story as revealed in the preliminary hearing here of the Angelus Temple evangelist, and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, on conspiracy charges.

Interest in the evangelist's story of having escaped from a kidnaper's hut has been increased by reports that a ranch house resembling the hut described by her as the one in which she was held captive part of the 30 days she was missing has been located near Wellton, Ariz.

Two Fit Descriptions
Two persons fitting into Mrs. McPherson's story as "Rose" and "Steve" her alleged abductors, are said to have been found on the Wellton ranch. The discovery was reported in press dispatches last night from Yuma, Ariz., and credited to Jack Chris, an investigator for District Attorney Asa Keyes. The Wellton ranch adjoins that of H. A. Hollbeck, a friend of Mrs. McPherson whose name frequently has appeared in the investigation. Hollbeck, formerly a building inspector for Angelus Temple.

Keyes Scoffs At Report
Keyes scoffed at the report. He said Chris had been sent to Gila Bend to investigate a telegram filed there, by a woman, who according to the operator resembled Mrs. McPherson. The message was sent June 15, eight days before the evangelist's reappearance at Douglas, Ariz. Keyes suggested the investigator as "kidding someone."

The Times says documentary evidence showing Mrs. McPherson and Kenneth G. Ormiston, her former radio operator, registered at a hotel here two nights shortly before the Angelus Temple pastor disappeared May 18, has been uncovered by District Attorney Keyes' investigators. They were assigned to separate rooms.

IN SOCIETY

C. E. Social Thursday Is One Of Most Pleasant

One of the most successful and pleasant parties ever attended by members of the Junior Christian Endeavor of the First Christian church was held at the church last evening. There was an excellent attendance and the party lasted from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock with Mesdames W. F. Jennings and N. L. Benson assisting. A number of contests were held, the most interesting being a balloon race. Chocolate and sandwiches were served.

Training School Will Close This Evening

The B. Y. P. U. training school, which has been conducted at the First Baptist church this week, is closing this evening and the two state secretaries who have been at the head of the school are leaving for Dallas. It is thought that about 100 will take the examinations.

The program will open this evening at 8:30 o'clock with a social to be followed by a short period of class work. The examinations will be given later in the evening. Diplomats will be sent out from Dallas to those passing the course and will be presented later, according to Rev. W. A. Bowen, pastor of the church. Miss Ethel Hodson and T. C. Gardner are the secretaries who are conducting the course.

Large Crowd Hear Dr. Trigg Thomas Speak

A large crowd, including a special delegation of high school students, heard Dr. Trigg Thomas preach on "The Fall and Rise of a Great Man" Thursday evening at the First Presbyterian church. He is to give a sermon-lecture on "Life Among the Soldiers" this evening and members of the American Legion and other service men are invited to attend.

There are to be no Saturday services but there will be three on Sunday. The evangelist is to talk to all of the Sunday school, except the primary department, on "The A. B. C. of Religion" at 10 o'clock. He will give a doctrinal sermon on "Justification by Faith" at 11 o'clock and will preach on "The Preeminence of Christ" in the evening at 7:30 o'clock.

In the evening at 7:30 o'clock, Simon Peter was the man referred to by Rev. Thomas Wednesday evening in his sermon on the rise and fall of a great man. He used Bible excerpts showing the various stages in the life of Peter. Christ's prediction that he would make of Peter a "rock" Peter's denial of Christ and subsequent restoration in the sight of God through prayer, conviction, repentance, and a meeting with Christ after his resurrection.

THOROUGHbred

We like it rather well if someone calls us a thoroughbred. We do not know exactly what is implied in the compliment, but we take it for granted that there is not much left to be desired.

A horse is a thoroughbred if he is bred from a long line of ancestors trained for a certain thing. A draft horse or a heavy coach horse may be as thoroughly bred as the finest track horse. He is trained to do a certain thing and that is the thing you may be absolutely sure he will do—100 per cent—and he never breaks over.

A human thoroughbred is the person who knows how to play the game and may be depended upon not to break over. He is true blue. It is a big order to live up to. How many of us are entitled to wear the blue ribbon?

A thoroughbred is a loyal friend. If he goes back on a friendship once, he breaks his record and he is not a thoroughbred. A trifling jealousy, a little matter of personal inconvenience and he forgets friendship for the matter of a day—he must hand in his ribbon. His title has gone.

The thoroughbred does not use his friends for stepping stones. He does not try to reach a goal over his head by stepping on the heads of others. He does not cash in on friendship. If he chooses only friends who have position or wealth or something he may use, he is a bounder—out of class altogether.

He does not knock a man with one hand and pat him with the other. He must be fundamentally honest. He does not accept favors that he never repays. If he keeps on absorbing favors without compensation he is a sponge.

He does not gossip. A thoroughbred fights in the open. One break and he sacrifices his title forever.

SAYS VALIDITY OF BONDS ARE NOT ATTACKED

VALIDITY DOESN'T MATTER BUCKNER TELLS JURY IN DAUGHERTY PROBE

(By the Associated Press) NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Validity of the 7,000,000 claims involved in the Daugherty-Miller trial has nothing at all to do with the case, United States Attorney Emory H. Buckner said today in his summation to the jury.

Much of the evidence in the trial of Harry M. Daugherty, former Attorney General and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, who are charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, centered on the question of validity of the two claims Richard Merton, German metal magnate, presented in 1921 for the Société Salses Pour Valeurs de Metaux.

Say Claims False

The government adduced much testimony to show the claims were false, and that Merton paid John King, late republican national committee man from Connecticut, $441,000 to rush them through the offices of the attorney general and the alien property custodian.

Testimony also was adduced to show that $50,000 of the bribe was traced to Miller and some to Harry M. Daugherty.

The attorneys for Miller and for Daugherty have spent much time in their summations the last two days showing you these claims were valid. I want to tell you right now that the government does not care a straw whether these claims were true or false. It would be all the same to us, too, if the claims had been paid in 1914 instead of 1921.

Not Charged Invalid

The indictment does not charge the claims were invalid. That is a point outside the case, and the only reason so much time was spent on it by the government was that we wanted to show you the claims were so full of holes that even the most incompetent of subordinate to these two men would never have passed them without consulting their bosses. Unless they had been told before that the bosses wanted those claims passed, it was simply an additional proof that the claims would not have been passed if Daugherty and Miller had not wanted them to pass.

Divorce Petitions Show Increase Here

While the number of marriage licenses issued has shown a decided increase in Lubbock this year as compared with last the number of divorces requested has also shown a gain. A survey of the books indicates at the office of District Clerk Louis F. Moore.

Ninety-four divorces have been requested in Lubbock county thus far this year as compared with 55 over the same length of time in 1925. Three divorces have been requested by disillusioned parties this month.

The ranch is owned by C. S. Edwards and part of it is already under the plow. While in Lynn county Mr. Sanders will also lay out an addition to the city of Tahoka.

Divorce Is Asked By Wife Of Former U. S. Ambassador

PARIS, Oct. 8. (AP)—Mrs. Richard Washburn Child has instituted divorce proceedings against her husband, who was former United States Ambassador to Italy.

Grounds for the action were not disclosed, and Mrs. Child declined today to make any comment.

The former ambassador and his wife have been estranged for more than a year, their friends ascribing their difficulties largely to differences in temperament.

Mrs. Child has been in Paris for the greater part of the last 12 months. It was reported in May that she was seeking a separation, here, but this proved incorrect. So then went to America.

Meanwhile, the former ambassador applied for a divorce in Pennsylvania, alleging "mental cruelty." His suit was withdrawn late in September and partial reconciliation was arranged but without satisfaction for them to continue together. The wife was given considerably of property and custody of their two little daughters.

Mrs. Child was formerly Miss Maude Parker. They were married in August, 1916. Mr. Child was assistant to Frank A. Vanderlip in the war financing work of the United States treasury in 1917-18, was editor of Collier's Weekly in 1919 and was appointed ambassador to Italy in May, 1921, serving until February, 1924.

Wool Frocks Have Softer Colors' Easier Lines, New Distinction

By HENRI BENDEL For NEA Service

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—With a tang in the air, the first faintly yellow leaves and the assurance that autumn is about to begin her yearly procession comes the desire for the wool frock.

After a season of silks and flimsy materials, there is something very gratifying and substantial about the wool topcoat or frock.

Elegant wools have a richness that always gives them distinction, but particularly this year when all wool fabrics have been softened and made more supple, and colors have attained a subtlety never before achieved.

The more feminine styles, the more graceful cuts, and more easy swing to skirts and coats, add a new charm to the wool outfit—if indeed any such aid is necessary.

Tweed for Sports

Large and small checks, vivid in color and bold in pattern, or broken in design and shadowed in color are to be seen, and embroidered and shaded wools in all the new fall colors are in evidence.

For sport wear, tweed and hom-

an important feature, it being reversible. The goat fur side may be worn to the front instead of the tweed, whenever the wearer desires. On the right side of the coat, hidden, also from view, is a tier of three small pockets, with buttons of antique silver.

More Sophisticated

Less obviously designed for sport, and equally appropriate for town or country is the third model of golden brown kasha cloth embroidered in gold thread and trimmed with brown bone buttons.

Rich material, perfect lines, and a beautiful color combination make any attempt at trimming quite unnecessary and undesirable, but the wide brown suede belt, worn just below the natural waistline, accentuating the slim hips of the wearer is a forgivable evidence of feminine vanity.

While these three costumes are simple in line and detail, they have that indefinable something about them that suggests the thoroughbred and the patrician. And to the knowing eye, they are far more sophisticated and more subtle than they seem.

spun materials reign supreme. One of the smartest developments in tweed may be seen in the three-piece model photographed which includes a long coat, luxuriously colored with wolverine fur, a blouse and tiered skirt.

The color is particularly appropriate, being the soft warm brown of autumn leaves, in plain color, for the skirt and blouse, and in fine brown and black checks for the skirt. The low narrow belt of brown leather, casually worn, and the buttons of the material are both style features worthy of consideration.

While essentially an outfit for the country, and for sport wear, this outfit would not be at all out of the picture on Fifth avenue

DEFENSE PLAYS EMPHASIZED IN AGGIE WORKOUT

AERIAL ATTACK OF TIGERS FROM SEWANEES FEARED BY COACHES

COLLEGE STATION, Oct. 8.—Going into their last scrimmage before the first big game of the season Saturday at Dallas with Sewanee, the Aggies were in tip-top condition for the feature card of "Aggie Day" at the state fair, and anxious to impress their North Texas supporters with the fact that for all its green character, Bible has a decidedly capable conference entry in the field.

In the final workout special stress was laid on back field defensive play, and so far as possible, the Aggie seconds were run through the dazzling formations for the pass that Sewanee used in 1925. Sewanee has not been scouted by an Aggie coach. The farmers are going in sight unseen.

Fear Aerial Attack
The possibility of the Tigers' aerial are frankly feared by the coaching staff, for the simple reason that in the two preliminary games, the Aggies have had little test against this style of play. They know the line will do everything asked of it—but they do not know what the recruit back field can do. Only Hunt is a real veteran of previous experience with Sewanee.

The Aggies will reach Dallas Friday and may get a late afternoon workout at Fair Park stadium before the contest. However, ground conditions are not feared. The Aggies are more used to the field than Sewanee and to Texas weather.

Starting Line-Ups
From present indications, the starting line-ups will be: Aggies ends, Sikes and Deffenbach; tackles, Dietrich (c) and Holmes; guards, Wylie and Reisterick; center, Watts; quarter, Hunt; backs, Colvin and Woodman; full, Simmons. Sewanee: ends, Small and Schofield; tackles, Helvey and Kimbrough; guards, Finley and Ancon; center, Davis; quarter, Todd (c); backs, Rice and Young; fullback, Johnson.

The seat sale for the game is in progress at the Adolphus drug store in Dallas and will be held there until 1 o'clock Saturday, after that at the stadium.

Hitting Sports Highspots With James R. Dow

How about that blanket for the Westerners? They deserve as much credit and attention as the Matadors—for they are our home boys—and since the Herald-Public's, has furnished blankets for the Matadors it seems like the Lubbock people should come across—mail that check today for $2.00—they will appreciate it.

If you are interested in the T. C. U. Avalanche-Journal Special train, let us know by coming in and telling us you are ready to go. It will be the greatest game the Matadors will have this season—a Southwestern Conference club on their home ground.

The scene of the World's series has again shifted to the Yankee Stadium—play will be resumed tomorrow. Should the Yanks win—it is New York's pennant. Should St. Louis win the play-off will be played on Sunday. A fair sized crowd will throng for that contest.

Well, St. Louis got to see a world series game—three of them—but they only won one of them.

Before Babe Ruth left St. Louis he made the Card fans like him. In his first days appearance a vast army of fans greeted him with jeers and boos—but after the second game he came up with an uproar of cheers. The three home runs he gathered in at St. Louis—made the fans like him.

The St. Ed's college and the Tech Matadors will meet this afternoon for the first game on the new Tech gridiron. This is the Catholics first trip to the Plains and they are well pleased with the country. Let's make 'em like it.

Don't ever think that those Catholics haven't got a good eleven. Jack Meagher is known all over Texas as one of those kind of fellows that puts out a winning combination.

A entirely new brand of football will be presented the fans of Lubbock and the South Plains this afternoon when the "bullfighting aggregation" get in the arena with the Catholics.

It is likely that Freeland and Higginbotham will send in a new backfield for the starting line-up with Walker and Cappelman the new ones being tried.

Al Jennings' running mate Mr. Nighttower arrived here yesterday to apply for berth on the Matador club. If he is what reports of him indicate—he will be on there.

Howard Payne Meets San Marcos Today
BROWNWOOD, Texas, Oct. 8. (AP)—The Howard Payne Yellow Jackets with Coach Amis left Thursday night for San Marcos. They clash with the San Marcos Bob Cats today. The Howard Payne team is in bad shape following their trip to Arkansas last week. Fivearsity men were left at home.

E. F. Wiggins is here today from Amarillo on business.

He's Injured

TAYLOR DOUTHITT

Taylor Douthitt, hard hitting lead-off man of the St. Louis Cardinals, who was out of the game yesterday due to an injury received in Wednesday's tilt, when he collided with his running mate, Chick Hafey, while going after a fly ball. He may return to the line-up again tomorrow.

MATADORS MEET ST. ED'S TODAY

The Texas Tech Matadors clash with the St. Edwards college of Austin today in the Tech's new gridiron which is located on the campus of the college. The contest today will mark the dedication of the new gridiron. The game was called for 3 p. m. St. Edwards arrived here yesterday afternoon on the northbound Santa Fe and immediately rushed to the Tech practice grounds where they went through a short and snappy workout. In looking the lads over and sizing them up it might be said they have a uniform club, fleetly of foot, and handle the ball remarkably well.

Coaches Freeland and Higginbotham rushed their club through a short session this afternoon. The probable lineup of the Matadors will be: Jennings and White, ends; Carpenter and Westerfelt, tackles; Corley, center; Reed and Smith, guards; Lassiter, quarter; Walker and Cappelman, halfbacks; Hill, full.

This is the first time that the Matadors have ever met with Jack Meagher's Catholic eleven. It is expected that the game this afternoon will be a classic of the season.

Cardinals Chances For World Series Rest With Alexander As Teams Move Eastward To Resume Play Saturday

(BY BRIAN BELLS)

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8. (AP)—Chances of the St. Louis Cardinals for continued participation in the 1926 world's series today rested on the broad but seasoned shoulders of the 39 year old Grover Cleveland Alexander. Only the veteran pitcher stands between the Red Birds and the losers share of the gold at the end of the world's series rainbow.

As both teams moved out of the west today, the series stood three games to two in favor of the New York Yankees with the American League entry needing but a single game to insure its election as a world baseball champion. The Cardinals, as a result of defeat in the fifth game of the series, are in a position where they can not afford to lose another game.

Traveling Today
A fly today was needed for traveling to get the contenders back to the Yankee Stadium for the sixth game Saturday. If the Cardinals win tomorrow a seventh game will be necessary in New York Sunday. Victory for the Yankees ends the annual league test for baseball supremacy.

The outcome of the fifth game was a shock to St. Louis supporters, who established a new city record with 39,552 paid admissions. The Yankees had to come from behind to win, 3 to 2, in ten innings. A battle of left handers, Pennock and Sherdel, was a repetition of world series history, the same pair of south paws clashed in the classic in New York last Saturday. Pennock then won a one-run decision, the score being 2 to 1.

Offered Much Excitement
Yesterday's game offered more excitement than was developed in the opening tilt. Both teams were able to take advantage of frequent errors of judgment by the opposition. A sun, which refused to shine in the early innings, came out late in the game to disquiet Cardinal fielders. Two of the three hits used to manufacture the run tied the score for the Yankees in the ninth inning were pop flies. The other hit of the inning was a safe hit. Finding that home runs were not absolutely necessary to win baseball games the Yankees proceeded to economize further with their regular safeties and tucked the game away with the need-run in the tenth through the medium of a pop fly, two bases on balls and a sacrifice fly.

The Yankees came to life in the ninth after playing "possum" for eight innings. A run was scored in the sixth, but it came after the Cardinals had had a chance to retire the side and on the whole was not impressive.

Cardinals Score First

Three scoreless periods were recorded before the Cardinals broke thru to score the first run. Bottomley hit into left and made two bases when the ball eluded Ruth, attempting a shoe string catch. Lester Bell singled to center and Bottomley ran home. Babe Ruth demonstrated in addition to his offensive power must be rated a defensive factor as well. The big fellow dashed across the left field foul line to make the feature catch of the series by dragging Hafey's foul with one hand from the front of the stands.

Pennock won a battle of wits with Sherdel in the sixth and started a drive resulting in a deadlock score. The Cardinals pitcher tried to sneak a strike over the Yankee south paw when was not looking, but the ball did not go where he expected and it was ruled a "ball." Pennock then hit a long fly to left. Hafey started after it, but it bounced in the wrong direction. He tried to make a quick turn. He fell sprawling and Pennock ran to second. Combs walked and Koenig drove Pennock home with a single.

Bambino Strikes Out

The 40,000 persons present, counting

the cash customers and those who dropped in informally, were recompensed in a measure, for the shock of seeing the score tied when Babe Ruth struck out, Sherdel giving him a slow curve to end his time at bat. Meusel and Lazzeri ended the inning with tremendous flies, with a base on balls to Gehrig in between, hitting drives to Southworth, which could not have gone farther and remained in the park.

The Cardinals made it the "lucky seventh" by forging ahead in that inning. Bell, whose batting eye returned after being misplaced, smashed a double to left and rode home on O'Farrell's single, the catcher's third safety of the game.

Therewas Misses Fly Ball

Gehrig started the ninth with a fly that it seemed Therewas, Card short would gobble up without any great effort. The ball, however, fell in front of left field and Gehrig dashed to second. Lazzeri bunted and easily beat Bell's throw to first. Huggins then summoned the reserves in the southern garage owner. Paschal has a habit of driving out long flies and a blow at this stage would score Gehrig with the winning run.

Paschal did the unexpected by hitting a short instead of a long fly. It went to center and with the Cardinal players well back. Expecting a long drive, fell safe. Severeid bunted, but a fast play by O'Farrell retired Lazzeri. Paschal, then, claiming a place in the sun with a play so sensational that it was second only to Ruth's great catch, Pennock drove a ball directly over second base. It seemed that it would go into center field for a hit to score the fleet runner. However, Koenig knocked the ball down, picked it up and tossed it to Hornsby, forcing Severeid. This changed the method, but not the result of the game and gave the customers an extra inning for their money.

Sacrifice Fly Wins

The end came in the tenth. Koenig singled cleanly to start it. He ran to second on a wild pitch and Ruth was passed to first. Meusel sacrificed with neatness and dispatch and Manager Hornsby elected to use strategy. He ordered Gehrig passed in spite of the fact that the Yankee second baseman is a left handed batter. Gehrig, a left hand pitcher, to fill the bases and give a play at every base. With the bases full a double play was made the more likely and the necessity for touching a runner at the plate was removed. The plan failed because Lazzeri did not hit the ball on the ground. He drove a long fly to Hafey. Gehrig scoring under wraps and making it an all-Pacific performance.

A. L. WRIGHT IS HERE TODAY from Littlefield on business.

MRS. CLEO PENNY, of LAMESA, is visiting in Lubbock today.

WESTERNERS GO TO LAMESA TODAY

The Westerners left this morning at 9 o'clock to meet the Lamesa high school Tornadoes this afternoon. The contest is expected to be one of the most "difficult" games of the season. Lamesa has been training hard under the direction of Bill Stevens, formerly of the Wildcats.

Captain Brothers and his ten playing mates will like use a different tactic than the one they used in the last week end clash. Nothing but straight football was used. But in the game this afternoon it is expected that the new plays which Coaches Von Tangel and Frnka have given them will be used.

Eighteen men were taken on the trip today. Two back fields and extra line-men were taken. The probable lineup for the Westerners will be: Bryan and Barton, ends; Allen, center; McCullum and Cummins, tackles; Dickenson and Hill, guards; Powell, quarter; Brothers, full, and Dollahite and Leland, half.

Pitching Big Factor

In turning out a major league pennant winner the value of pitching cannot be underestimated. In the spring when I looked over the St. Louis Cardinals at San Antonio, Texas, Manager Roger Hornsby commented thusly to me as to his chances of winning the National league pennant.

"There are five National league clubs I feel sure we will beat out 1 for only New York and Pittsburgh."

"My club has the batting power, the proper spirit and the will to win. If the Cardinals get good pitching it is going to be a mighty trouble-some team. However, I have some doubts as to my pitching."

When I visited the New York Giants at Sarasota, Fla., Manager

John McGraw was positive that he would get much improved pitching, just enough better than 1925 to enable him to win.

Hornsby got better pitching than he expected while McGraw's staff fell short, which explains the difference in the standing of the two clubs.

Nationals Did Well

While Manager Stanley Harris of the Washington club failed to win three pennants in a row as he had hoped, the youthful leader of the Senators turned in what might be considered a very good season.

Infield experiments that failed to turn out as expected and a temporary failure of his pitching staff to properly function, upset the dope early in the year and proved too great a handicap to overcome in the quest for a third flag.

There are many experts who still believe the Washington club—pitching excepted, is the best team in the American League.

If Manager Harris can overcome the shortcomings of his pitching staff, and he is making every effort to do so, Washington is certain to be a strong pennant factor in 1927.

Pirates Biggest Upset

The failure of the Pittsburgh club to repeat its success of 1925, in winning not only the National League pennant but the world series as well, was perhaps the biggest upset of the season.

Pittsburgh was conceded to be the class of the major leagues. A great club in the making for several years, it appeared to have arrived last season. Being a fairly young team, it seemed it was destined to show the way for at least another campaign, possibly two.

Unlike most clubs, the Pirates after winning didn't stand pat on the championship lineup. With the winning of the world series came the announcement that the management had purchased Rhyme and Waner, the two outstanding stars of the Pacific Coast League.

These two players did much to keep the Pirates in the 1926 race, the work of Waner being particularly impressive as a first year regular.

However, there must have been reasons other than the playing end of the game that kept the Pirates from repeating.

There apparently was a lack of harmony as shown by the mid-season flareup that resulted in the passing of Carey, Adams and Blache.

One from the Pittsburgh Pirates

should have repeated in the National league and world series.

Many Changes Likely

I am told that there will be a wholesale change in managers in the two major leagues before the opening of next season.

Perhaps a half dozen clubs have disappointed this year. When a team fails to deliver, the manager at once becomes the alibi for the poor showing.

No doubt in some cases lack of managerial tact has hurt but in others no manager in the world could have done any better than the men in charge.

On several clubs there has been a woeful lack of big league material. There has been a decided dearth of pitchers. No manager, however, capable, can strike out opposing batters and produce timely base hits. That is up to the players.

In most cases in which managerial changes have been rumored I am inclined to think the owners realize that a new face in the role of leader will make for greater interest and enthusiasm.

NEW ORLEANS TRADING

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 8. (AP)—The cotton market opened easy with first trades showing losses of 7 to 8 points. Continued good weather in the belt and easier cables were contributing causes to the weakness. December trading at 12.56c, January at 12.12c and March at 12.25c before issuance of the government report. NEW YORK TRADING

NEW YORK, Oct. 8. (AP)—The cotton market was fairly active in today's early trading, but business was attributed chiefly to further southern hedging and evening up on accounts in preparation for the government report.

The tone was braced steady at the start with prices unchanged to 8 points lower. While there was a good deal of covering, the market worked off to 12.00c for December and 12.32c for March by the end of the first hour of about 12 to 16 points lower.

The government report exceeded expectations and was followed by a severe break under heavy general selling. All active positions sold below the 12 cent level making new low prices for the season. December broke to 12.26c and March to 12.50c or 85 to 88 points below yesterday's close. Covering and trade buying checked the decline at these figures, and prices were 15 to 20 points above the lowest at midday.

The rally extended to 12.50c for December in the early afternoon, about forty points from the low level touched after publication of the government report. Prices eased off again after under renewed liquidation and outside selling. At 2 o'clock December was selling at 12.40c, the general market showing net losses of about 65 to 69 points.

LABOR RESENTS REMARKS MADE BY Y.M.C.A. MAN

COURSE OF REPUTATION OF HIS SENTIMENTS IS SOUGHT

(By the Associated Press)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 8.—The American Federation of Labor convention faced a new dilemma today in a swirling tide of sentiment favoring action disavowing the address of a convention guest, publicity charged by a number of delegates with having violated the courtesy of the floor.

Members of the executive council of the federation deliberated upon a possible course of action repudiating the remarks of Sherwood Eddy, who was introduced at yesterday's session by President William Green as secretary for Asia of the International Y. M. C. A.

Resents Statements

Mr. Eddy was cordially greeted by the delegates as he took the platform, but soon after adjournment labor officers publicly expressed astonishment at the nature and tone of his remarks and last night blocs of delegates gathered informally to outline a program looking to emphatic denial that the address in any manner reflected the sentiments of the convention.

President Green was in conference with members of his executive council until late last night, after having responded briefly to Mr. Eddy's remarks immediately preceding adjournment.

Mr. Eddy approached convention officers for the privilege of the floor a few hours after President Green had been informed an invitation to him to address a Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday had been withdrawn.

Presented to Mr. Green as an officer of the international "Y" organization, of the privilege he sought.

"Applause Withheld

When he launched into a report of a survey of Europe, the convention withheld the generous applause it had extended upon his introduction. Concluding he challenged the policies of the federation on international labor relations and expressed vigorous disagreement with the repeatedly defined attitude of the federation toward Russia.

Officers stated publicly they were disinclined to embarrass a guest of the convention, but were equally outspoken in their declarations that they could not permit Mr. Eddy's remarks to go unchallenged if it to do so might be construed as an expression of concurrence with the views expressed.

Troops Hampered By Floods in Mexico

NOGALES, Ariz., Oct. 8 (AP).—Floods in the state of Sonora, Mexico, have hampered the operations of federal troops against the revolting Yaqui Indians by tying up rail transportation. This makes problematical the length of the war which was originally estimated at three months.

General Alvaro Obregon, placed in charge of the Yaqui campaign by President Calles, has sent an urgent appeal to the central government for reinforcements and Guymas dispatches today quoted General Obregon as saying if all troops now available were used in the drive against the Indians, the interior towns would be left unprotected.

Between ten and twelve thousand federal soldiers and their families are now in the war area and they are reported to be suffering from want of food.

Men Dislike 'Neat' Woman, Students Told

BOSTON, Oct. 8 (AP).—Brides should be orderly but not neat—men dislike the "neat" woman, said students at the opening of Boston University's new course for prospective brides last night.

"Neatness has broken up many a home," Mrs. Elizabeth MacDonald, authority on home making, said. She advised girls to allow their husbands to enjoy their homes even to the extent of dropping ashes on the rug.

"Be such a clever home maker that your husband will never suspect your house takes a lot of time and care. Just do the work so efficiently that when he is around you will have sufficient leisure to look charming."

Probe Of Police Department Opens

CHICAGO, Oct. 8 (AP).—Federal operatives under A. P. Madden, head of the special intelligence unit, today started a government investigation into liquor charges involving members of the Chicago police department.

St. Louis Goes Wild as Team Wins National League Pennant

The riotous celebration of Armistice Day paled in insignificance in St. Louis when news came that the Cardinals had won the National League pennant—the city's first pennant since the early 1880s. Business stopped and the whole city turned out to make a noise. This shows one of the downtown streets.

Business Men Declare War On Cold Checkers; Two Warrants Issued Here

Cold Checkers, beware! Local business men are after you, and they are not going to give up until they collect what you owe them.

At least that is the way two Lubbock businessmen talked this morning and they were not bluffing. Fast is both of them were in the county attorney's office swearing out warrants for arrest when the Journal man met them. Cold checkers are numerous in this city and people are getting tired of them.

One of the victims has two checks on one man. He has tried time and again to get the guilty party to take them up, but he insists on more time and refuses. He will be asked by the sheriff to pay them off and to pay a fine as well.

Another man brought in a $17 check given by a woman who resides in a nearby city. He has sent the check through the bank on two occasions and has written the woman a letter. She has ignored his requests to take up the check, and the man feels that he should not lose the amount. He has sworn out a warrant for her arrest.

The cold check law is a good one, though few dealers want to give customers trouble where they show any inclination to do what is right. But when they refuse to make payment and ignore all requests to do so they have a perfect right to ask aid of the law.

While the lynchings were in faster cars. He turned back near the city limits.

Although Demmond Lowman was acquitted on the conspiracy charge, he was rearrested yesterday on a warrant charging assault and battery with the intent to kill and was being held on that warrant.

The two men were sentenced to death at their first trial and the woman was given a life sentence.

Estimates of the number of men in the mob varied widely.

Sheriff Robinson was one of the officers who as a deputy accompanied Sheriff Howard on the liquor raid on the Lowman home. One of the confessions of the defendants at the first trial was that they were not aware that the raiders were officers. Annie Lowman, mother of Demmond and Bertha, was shot and killed by one of the officers. Clarence was alleged to have fired the shot that killed Sheriff Howard. Bertha was shot through the body during the raid.

Governor Seeks Details. COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 8 (AP)—Governor McLeod was notified today of the lynching of the three Lowman negroes near Aiken. He immediately called upon State Constable Hart, who is in Aiken, for a full report of the affair.

The Texarkana post of the legion will serve coffee and doughnuts to the delegates at the union terminal.

DEPENDABLE MERCHANDISE

MANY TRAMPLED TO DEATH IN WAR AT WUCHANG

birth of Christ—is being emptied of its civilian population or that portion of it which it is humanly possible to transport across placid Yangtze. There have been only a few days in which the rescuers could work, few boats being available for the purpose and yet this theater of death is the abode of more than a quarter of a million souls.

The Red Cross and other agencies of mercy as yet have been able to bring across the river only approximately forty thousand persons.

Under Siege Five Weeks

For five weeks the ancient city across the river, which, under one name or another has held a place in the commerce and politics of the Orient as far back as history is recorded, has been a sealed tomb of dead and dying; its streets strewn with corpses; its populace slowly starving to death.

The stubborn fury of its northern defenders to grant any terms of surrender. In the war language of the East this probably means annihilation when hunger or shells have sufficient sapped the strength of the gallant garrison.

Bombardment Set For Oct. 10

Announcements of the intention of the Cantonese to bombard Wuchang came after the blockaded army had consented to permit some of the thousands of non-combatants to depart. October 10 was the date set for the opening of this new phase of the epochal struggle for possession of the historical city. Seemingly only one thing can avert the slaughter that must inevitably ensue otherwise. This would be the success of General Sun Chuan-fang's efforts to cut the line of communications of the southern army, thereby forcing that portion of it around Wuchang to retire southward as a matter of self preservation.

The desperate nature of the attempt to assist the blockaded garrison put forth by General Sun seemingly is evidenced by reports, as yet unconfirmed, that there have been twenty thousand casualties in the fighting around Kiukiang and Foyang Lake. Sun is the principal overlord of the five eastern provinces and city of Wu-Pei-Fu, who, with Chang Tso-Lin, rules Northern China.

Texas State Board of Health

School Health Programs

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 8.—The attention of public health nurses of the state board of health was, during the month of September, directed largely to the inauguration of school health programs, according to Dr. H. N. Barnett, director of the bureau of child hygiene. "These health programs included physical examination of school children with the co-operation of local physicians, regular weighing with the view of bringing the undernourished child up to standard weight, teaching of personal hygiene with stress on the formation of health habits, health poster contests, health plays and the organization of Junior Health Clubs. After the institution of health programs, their continuation is left largely in the hands of the local teacher, as the major part of the public health nurse's time is necessarily given to maternity and infancy work," Dr. Barnett stated.

Many Physical Defects

The percentage of physical defects found in children of school age has been found by nurses to be large. Those of the most frequent occurrence are diseased tonsils, defective vision, adenoids, and ear trouble. Nearly all these defects are easily corrected during the earlier years of childhood, and their correction often means the difference between a healthy, useful citizen and one who is not. Where physical defects are found, follow-up work is done by the nurses in the children's homes in order to secure corrections, and in most instances, parents appreciate the nurse's efforts, and are eager to see their children in good physical condition.

Junior Health Clubs

Junior Health Clubs have proven very popular with school children, and have both boys and girls as members. These clubs elect their own officers, keep official records of their meetings, and have a well planned program of study. Meetings are held weekly or semi-monthly, and the nurse and local health officer co-operates with the teacher in arranging practical health demonstrations.

Report On Tourist Camps

According to the report made to the state board of health by R. J. McLean, state supervisor of tourist camps and swimming pools, 225 camps and 27 swimming pools located in 73 different counties, have been inspected by him during the summer months. Inspection was also made of 15 private and organization camps. Of the tourist camps inspected, 127 were issued approval certificates, and of the 15 private camps, only one was not approved. In a few tourist camps, sanitary conditions were found to be so bad that request was made to local health officials to close them unless conditions were immediately improved. Approval was given only to those camps complying with state "Board of health regulations, which are: constant and adequate supervision by a full time caretaker, a safe and protected water supply, approved method of sewage disposal, and a safe and adequate method of garbage disposal.

Free Tourist Camps Decreasing

"A noticeable feature," stated McLean, "is the diminution of free tourist camps in the state. Most municipalities have awakened to the fact that the free camp attracts elements not wanted, and the number of these camps is gradually decreasing. However the number of private tourist camps operated for profit are rapidly increasing. These camps have for rent furnished cottages equipped with modern conveniences. In nearly every instance camps of this character are kept in a good, sanitary condition as the owners are desirous of gaining state approval as a means of increasing their patronage.

"Insanitary tourist camps are a health menace of no minor magnitude. New York and a few other states have made additions to their sanitary codes which give their state boards of health effectual jurisdiction over all swimming pools and tourist camps within their respective states. Such an addition to the Texas sanitary code would be very helpful."

Electricity To Have Big Part In Oil Field

ABILENE, Oct. 8.—With the development of the Noodle creek oil pool, 22 miles west of Abilene, electricity may play an important part. The West Texas Electric company, with a 400-horsepower plant here, furnishing forty odd towns in central west Texas with light and power, including power for operation of shallow wells in the Moran district, is prepared to put "juice" into the new field on a moment's notice. The high power transmission line of the company runs within three miles of the new Phillips Water No. 1 discovery well. It is claimed that economical drilling can be done by the new power.

Trent Is Planning For Big Development

ABILENE, Oct. 8.—Trent, three miles from the Phillips Petroleum company's Winter No. 1, discovery well of the Noodle creek pool, already selling animation, is going ahead with building. Four new business enterprises will enter just as soon as large new frame building now under construction is completed. Those erecting the new structure are Tom and Alex Williamson and C. T. and Hubert Beckham. The new enterprises will include a drug store, a meat market and a dry good store.

Farmers Resuming Picking In County

D. F. Eaton, county agent, visited several farms yesterday making a partial check-up and reports farmers generally resuming picking and the loss in some places not as great as first thought to be. Some of the farmers are gathering their feed while waiting for the cotton to dry and bleech out before they begin picking. It find quite a number of farmers needing pickers and while the need has not yet been filled, there are quite a number coming into this section daily and it is hoped that there will be enough to gather this crop as soon as it opens, said Mr. Eaton.

Two Fines Collected In Corporation Court

Only two fines were collected in corporation court today and both of them were old accounts. Speeders, reckless drivers and drivers who have been unable to see stop signals in the past are beginning to take notice to the recent edict of Chief May and the city attorney.

Texas Jersey Going After First Laurels

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 8 (P).—The Jersey cow of Texas is going after the laurels now held by her sister from Ohio. Ohio has the largest number of registered Jersey cattle in the country and Texas is second, but the Texas Jersey Cattle club wants to make this state first.

For this purpose a meeting of the club is to be held in Dallas October 14-15. A large exhibit of Jerseys is to be shown at the Texas state fair here. Following the exhibit, a banquet will be given by the club at the Baker hotel. The following day there will be a sale of Jerseys the animals to be selected from the best herds of the state by experts of the club.

Texas, though second in registered Jerseys, has the greatest number of Jersey cattle, including registered and unregistered, of any state. The world's largest herd of these cattle is at California. It numbers 1,200 head and is owned by Ed C. Lassater. Jersey cattle are said to have made Fairbury the dairy center of the state.

Company Increases Leases In Haskell

ABILENE, Oct. 8.—The Weart-York company, drilling at around 2,500 feet on the Colbert ranch in south Haskell county, has obtained an additional extension on its leases and will continue to drill, it was stated here today. The Bunkley well, in southeast Haskell, which had reached the contract depth of 2,500 feet, will be carried an additional 1,000 feet following conclusion of arrangements for financing. Both of these wells are in the territory where other wells are pounding away.

POSTMASTER CHARGED
HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 8 (P).—A. M. Harvey Emanuel, postmaster at Ave. Polk county, was indicted by the federal grand jury Wednesday on a charge of making false returns on a number of stamps cancelled at his office.

Shhh! There Comes Aimee!

These two people, snapped in a secretive pose in a Los Angeles courtroom are among the many witnesses whom Los Angeles authorities are using to combat the "kidnaping" story of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist. They are Harry Melosh, salesman, and Mrs. Babe Daniels of Chicago. Melosh says it was arranged for Mrs. Daniels to be the mysterious "Miss X" of the "carmel cottage" fair.

Hogs Profitable To Lubbock Co. Farmer

There are not half as many hogs on the South Plains as there should be, is the opinion of farmers, but there are still many hogs. Last week one hog breeder sold the McDonald Packing company 270 shoats, and the check he received for them would make the average cotton raiser take notice.

Lamb county, it seems, leads other

South Plains counties in the production of pork, but with the big feed crop it is thought farmers in all sections will go in for hogs next year as there is more money in feeding hogs than in selling feed.

A DIRECT SLAP

TEXAS, from Texarkana to El Paso
and from Corpus Christi to Amarillo,
has received a "slap in the face."

Liberty magazine, one of the largest
weekly publications in the country,
with a feature article, "Texas Bares
the Monkey," has hurled the "Great American Razzberry" to the Lone Star
state in no uncertain terms. From the opening sentence of the illustrated
article down to the line "The End," it has "poured it on" Texas until in the language of the poets, "The world
looks level."

Liberty's article, of course, is based upon the anti-evolution teaching laws
of Texas. Jim and Ma, S. M. N.
Marrs, the Baptist church and the Klan all come in for their share of the spotlight, which, with unerring brilliancy, plays upon the law as the editor
of Liberty sees it.

Evolution is a touchy subject—
touchy because many people know
nothing at all concerning its principles yet insist on either fighting it or boasting it. It is doubtful if there are two people in Lubbock—including the faculty members of the Texas Technological college and of the city school system—who know enough about the theory of evolution to write an intelligent ten word essay on it. All of which, of course, has no bearing on Liberty's article.

It is suffice to say that Texas has been held up for ridicule—an occurrence
which is certainly distasteful to Texans.

BUT THEY NEVER TELL

How ordinary and human the great
people of the land must be, under the skin, is best demonstrated by the fact that they take to prevent the world
from finding out the best thing about how they look and behave off their parade.

There died in Washington recently
an old negro, Arthur Brooks, who had been valet to four presidents—William Howard Taft, Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding and the present, Bare Hoover. Calvin Coolidge, I'm
doubtfully he knew more intimate details of the personal lives in the executive mansion of these four men
than any person in the world outside their own respective families.

Such information may seem trifling.
Perhaps it is, but it's interesting.
There were many more important things in the life of Napoleon than the meal he ate on the eve of Waterloo.
But it disagreed with him, his common sense was upset, so he lost the battle.
This was a trifling detail which Napoleon's chief unquestionably did his utmost to hush up but it saved a flood of light on Napoleon. He was ready.
Indeed, it isn't a trifling detail. It reveals his whole character.

Arthur Brooks probably held the key to many riddles of the Taft, Wilson and Harding administrations. It wouldn't do to refer to the administration of President Coolidge for he's contemporary. But Brooks' key was buried with him.

Brooks was a talkative old chap—
in all companies but as a presidential valet. He could tell a good story. He had a sense of humor and a nose for the news, but what he knew, as a valet, was as sacred to him as a physician's knowledge of his patient.
He didn't tell his closest friend, or his wife, or his children.

Brooks wasn't unique. Who ever heard of a presidential private secretary who made any indiscreet disclosures? Or a chief clerk of the executive office? Or a White House
chief usher? Or a doorkeeper. Or a second service attendant? Or anybody,
connected with the White House.

That's why we know so little about
our presidents—even our present one.

The modern home today is supplied with everything except the family.—Buffalo Post.

Fascism is a success, declares Premier Mussolini. And as for as efficiency is concerned, so is influencia.—Louisville Courier.

Hal Cochran's
Daily Poem

"BATHING"

RUB-A-DUB-DUB, there's a
trot in the tub, and he's only a regular child. His actions are dashing, so water is splashing.
He's driving his poor mother wild.
There comes a loud howl, "Hey,
I can't find the towel." In a moment the little one cries, "Then
mother runs in, he's to quickly
begin taking soap and water out of his eyes."

No wonder, mom's sore. There's a stream on the floor, and some
water spots all over the wall.
The tot's having fun. When the "bathing" is done, all the bath-room's a wreck. That's not all:
The bath was a mess. You can readily guess that he hasn't done
things that he oughter. He's wet,
to be sure, but the scrub job was poor, and his ears never came near the water.

Well, nevertheless, he has had fun, I guess, so, when mother
comes in on the scene, she lends
him a hand. You can all understand that a tot never gets himself clean.

IN NEW YORK
SEE-SAWING UP
and down BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Tin-Pan-Alley
works feverishly at this season.

The winter supply of fox trots,
valencias, ballads and mammy songs
has been ground out, and already the overworked piano keys begin to hang out moonlight-and-roses stuff for the following spring and summer.

Songs are written for seasonal demands, just as clothes are made for hats or underwear. Sometimes a hit will overlap a season and be orchestrated on roof gardens and steam-heated dance pavilions alike. But there are any number written to meet
seasonal demands and changes in styles and manners.

No one keeps their ears closer to the ground to catch the slightest hint of changing public taste than the snappy young men of Tin-Pan-Alley, which, as all the world should know, is a series of upstairs offices
from whence comes the music that all America will "sing and dance to."
These places range in appearance
from a dingy lighted fire-trap to a handsomely equipped suite.

At any time of the mid-morning or afternoon a scattered assortment of young men and women may be seen
lounging in the hallways, the waiting room or the lobby.

Ask any of them an you'll hear—
"I've got a real hit this time. Sure fire! Knock 'em over."

Listen and you'll hear all the "hard luck stories in the world. You'll hear of the hit that just missed for the song that would have "made a million" if every publisher hadn't turned it down, you'll hear the strange tale
of the brilliant "ham" and fabulous claims such as would turn even
an old stock salesman to route.

You will see the professional song
pluggers, the musicians looking for a "big beat," the worried composer
whose song is being tried out, the considerable salesman.

Inside the fenced gates and behind
the doors pessimism may breed like mosses in a Jersey swamp, but outside the "saloon" is piled thick.
Don't be surprised if the author of the "sure fire" song tries to beg a dime for coffee. That's all part of the game. No one can tell for sure whose bluffing and who's really landed until it's all over. Although there are certain time-honored bluffers
known to all and sundry.

Fame or failure—they go on season after season.
The plagues hang out their jazzi-
time and heart throbs whether wealth
or failure be in the result.

The author of a success of bygone
days comes up and borrows lunch
money from the author of today's hit.
Times change, tastes change, times
change. One fills in and one fills out.
It's up and down in Tin-Pan-Alley
where they're sowing the seeds of sympathy for another season.

A Big Load

Stewart's
WASHINGTON
LETTER

GABBERS ARE COMING

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Campaign
orators are in unusual demand this year. There are more calls for them,
the two big parties' speakers' bureaus
report, than in the average presidential fight.

In this matter of speakers the party
in power is at something of an advantage because its men are in all the higher executive positions, and
on the stump their titles give them prestige. The Democrats have to be contented with m/e senators and representatives. The Republicans have a batch of cabinet members to draw
on and, in an emergency, the president himself.

There is no announcement, indeed,
that President Coolidge will do any stumping, though he may have something to say by radio.

Cabinet Men to Speak

Several members of the cabinet,
however, will be personally in the field before the end of October. Postmaster General Nease, Secretary of War Davis, Secretary of Labor Davis,
Secretary of the Interior Work, and Secretary of Commerce Hoover already have promised their services,
as well as Assistant Attorney General Donovan and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Robinson.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon,
Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, Secretary of State Kellogg and Attorney General Sargent are not mentioned as prospective orators.

Secretary Mellon is well known to shrink from direct political contacts.
His speech in behalf of Senator Penney just before the Pennsylvania primary is said to have been the first
he ever made and his obvious sufferings then undoubtedly were such as to preclude any probability that he ever will repeat the experience.

Fear Wilbur's Words
Secretary Wilbur is no backward
orator, but there are hints that party
managers are a little afraid of a tendency he has toward expressing himself with a sometimes embarrassing
degree of candor.

Secretaries Kellogg and Jardine
and Attorney General Sargent are too busy.
The Republicans' heaviest guns
will be concentrated on Massachusetts.
There are other states which mean more votes in Congress but none, the Bay State being the president's own, which means quite so much to the administration. And victory there for Senator Butler, the Coolidge candidate par excellence, is recognized as far from certain.

New York, Ohio, Missouri and Colorado are also regarded as highly critical.
Assistant Secretary of the Navy
Robinson and Assistant Attorney General Donovan, both New Yorkers,
will do most of their campaigning in
the Empire State. Secretary of War Davis will devote himself mostly to his home state of Missouri and Secretary of the Interior Work, who hails
from Colorado, will put in the major part of his time in that quarter.

Two for Ohio

Ohio happens not to be represented
in the cabinet, but Secretary of Labor Davis and Postmaster General Nease, who are from the adjoining
states of Pennsylvania and Indiana,
and Secretary of Commerce Hoover
are understood to be scheduled to help Senator Willis in his fight against Alfred Pomerene.

So many appeals for aid have been received and there are so many doubtful contests that there is considerable prospect of difficulty in making the supply of speakers go around.

QUEER
QUIRKS OF NATURE

Pocket Gopher.

A BURROWER FOR LIFE

By ARTHUR N. PACK
President, the American Nature
Association

The pocket gopher, a typically American mammal, is found in some form over most of the country from the Mississippi to the Pacific, and also in our Gulf states. Its most outstanding peculiarities are its habit of spending practically its entire life underground, and its possession of external
cheek pouches, both characteristics
found in other groups, but in no other combined.

One of the early western explorations recorded seeing thousands of
the burrows of some animal, but were unable, during months of travel in its territory, to get a single sight of the creature itself. For some time after specimens of the animal were obtained, little was known of its habits, but since the settlement of the west the farmers have become only too well acquainted with it.

It throws up its hills in their alfalfa

patches, it eats the roots of their fruit trees and their potatoes, in short it is altogether a pest wherever man lives
with it.

Yet this was not always so, for scientists who have studied its actions have calculated that much of the fertility of the west is due to the continual activity of the gopher during the past ages.

For many centuries these animals
have been working over and over the hills and valleys of the west, sinking
their galleries and bringing up to the surface the subsoil.

Over and over in all probability, the soil has been plowed and burrowed
by these natural cultivators, working unconsciously, but, untiringly, for man's benefit. So potent has been their work that thoughtful investigators have recommended that these animals, though so destructive under certain conditions, be allowed to remain undisturbed in localities where they are not actively detrimental, that they may continue their good offices
for the benefit of future generations.

Helpful Health Hints

VITAMIN A IS VITAL

By DR. MORRIS FISHBKIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association, and Editor of Hygeia
the Health Magazine.

The scientists who have studied the efforts on white rats and other lower animals of diets deficient in various
food factors have repeatedly observed
that those whose diet contains too
small an amount of Vitamin A—the fat soluble vitamin present in butter
and cod-liver oil—are likely to develop infections of the nose and throat,
accompanied by snuffles, nasal discharge, loss of appetite and failure to gain in weight.

If the diet continues to be deficient in this factor the animal dies.
When the body is examined after death the secretions are found to be free of infectious material such as is found also in human beings with infections of the nose and throat.

Aiding in Recovery

Dr. Amy L. Daniels of the University of Iowa told the American Academy
of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology
at its recent meeting in Colorado Springs that the regular feeding of Vitamin A to these animals undertaken immediately after the onset of the infections mentioned, aided in bringing about recovery.

If on the other hand, the feeding of
the vitamin was insufficient, swollen
joints, lameness and general weakness
were likely to follow.

In Denmark, Hvegaard found that the occurrence of a certain inflammation
of the eyes was directly related to the amount of butter fat consumed in the diet.

An investigation in this country revealed the fact that the lowest per capita average of butter fat consumption is that of Lewiston, Idaho, the highest that of Missoula, Montana.
Dr. Daniels investigated the amount taken by various families in Iowa.

Low Resistance
She found that most people consume insufficient amounts of Vitamin A
and she is inclined to relate that deficiency in the diet to the low resistance of the individual to the common cold.

Breast fed babies are less likely to catch cold than those artificially fed.
This also, it is believed, depends on the absorption of the important fat
soluble vitamin.

With Our Contemporaries

THE SECRET

And these habitual, perennial long-fers are those who use the sidewalks,
walls of buildings and floors for cus-
pidors, think evil thoughts about women and girls as they pass along the curbs, perch on brick piled along the curbs, curse the government, and tell
the honest toiler how much better
they could do his work than he is doing it. Many, very many of the bits of idle conversation indulged in by
these opponents of muscular exertion
begin with these words, "There ought to be a law, etc."—Slalom Slalomite.

Power it on 'em! Every town has too many leaders of the type discussed by the editor of the Slalomite and while the Journal is not optimistic enough
to believe that any city can ever get rid of them it does think that we can make some of them feel uncomfortable.

FIGHTERS

One hundred and thirty thousand people crowded into the stadium at the Sesqui-centennial last Thursday

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
CHERRY LANE, a conscienceless flirt, is playing the game, with a dozen admirers, including BOB HATHAWAY, a young architect; ALBERT ETTLESON, a married salesman; and CHRIS WILEY, a man of bad reputation.

FAITH LANE, unselfish and womanly, is in love with Hathaway, who adores Cherry.

GEORGE PRUITT, rich amateur artist, proposes to Faith on a Sunday outing, but she refuses him. That evening Faith finds that Cherry has disappeared, taking most of her clothes with her.

Before Faith can decide what to do, Mrs. Albert Ettleson appears, and tells the Lane family that Cherry and Ettleson are eloping to New York. Mrs. Lane suffers a severe heart attack. Faith and Bob Hathaway break all speed laws driving to Darrow, where they find that Cherry and Ettleson have boarded the limited for New York, due to leave in five minutes.

At Hathaway's demand, Ettleson opens the door, but confronts him with drawn automatic. Faith, afraid, takes the gun from him. Ettleson pours abuse upon Cherry, charging her with promising everything, taking everything and giving nothing.

On the drive back to the Lane home town, Bob shows clearly that he despises Cherry, who appears very little worried, now that she is safely out of the scrape. Faith, to save her mother pain, lies about Cherry's adventure, but Bob shows her heartbreak, asking him what is to become of Cherry. He retorts that she had better marry one of the men she is engaged to—and he is one of them.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XX

"You want to marry Cherry—in spite of everything—in spite of today?" Faith managed to speak at last, wetting her dry lips and using a weary hand over her wind-ravaged brown hair.

"I don't think I said anything about wanting to," Hathaway took her arm with gentle courtesy and led her toward the door. "But you have shown me today the beauty of unselfishness. We can't let her—" he motioned toward the bedroom where Mrs. Lane lay stricken—"worry herself into the grave."

"Cherry would be safe with you," Faith said slowly, and wondered why he could not hear the heavy, grief-laden plunging of her heart.

They went straight to Mrs. Ettleson's room in the second-rate hotel, and found her sitting, a forlorn, red-eyed, hopeless huddle on the edge of her bed. Faith had agreed—Faith and Bob—that it would be better to lie to her, better to save what they could for her out of the wreckage of her life.

"Cherry had merely gone to Darrow for a day with your husband, Mrs. Ettleson," Faith told her steadily, her kind eyes filled with pity. "They had been planning for your husband to help her go on the stage, but there was nothing but a silly flirtation between them. He told us so, and Cherry was amazed that you could have misinterpreted her letters."

"He'll hate me for interfering," Mrs. Ettleson said dully, tears splashing down the gray pallor of her cheeks.

"No, he won't. A man likes to be fought over," Faith forced herself to smile, with gay reassurance. "Go home and wait for him. He's just gone on his regular trip to New York. Believe me, Mrs. Ettleson, Cherry is not in love with your husband. She's in love with Mr. Hathaway—engaged to be married to him." She smiled again, but her lips were twisted with pain. "Tell her, Bob."

"That's right, Mrs. Ettleson," Bob Hathaway answered. "Cherry simply wanted to have her fling before we were married, wanted one season in a musical comedy, so she could brag about it to her children for the rest of her life. I suppose she's a nice kid, really, even if she is a little vain over her good looks. Try to believe, Mrs. Ettleson, that you have nothing to fear from Cherry Lane. Now—have you had your dinner? Made your reservation back to Indianapolis?"

"No," the woman rose, uncertainly, began to waver about the room, in a futile attempt to pack her few belongings. "I'm not hungry. It doesn't matter about the reservation. I can always get an upper. What was Albert awfully mad at me?" she asked pitifully, her reddened eyes fixed in humble appeal upon Faith's calm, serene face.

"Tell you, Mrs. Ettleson," Faith answered briskly, taking over the packing of the bag herself. "If I were you, I'd never mention the matter to Mr. Ettleson. He'll probably come home, expecting you to nag him to death about it, and if you meet him cheerfully, all dressed up in some new clothes, which I'd buy right away if I were you, why, he'll probably be so glad to find you acting sensibly that he'll spend most of his time thinking up nice ways to make it up to you. Men are such fools, even the best of them, aren't they?"

"I guess I'm crazy about Albert," the tears gushed again. "He used to be awfully sweet to me, when we were first married, and I was kinda pretty." Mrs. Ettleson flushed. "I think I'll go back to work, doll myself up a little, take time to get a few facials and a manicure every week. It makes him jealous for me to work in an office, but I guess that won't do him any harm."

After Bob Hathaway had obtained a lower berth for her, and had ordered a light, delicious dinner—which he paid for—sent up to her room, and Faith had shyly but warmly kissed her goodbye, they went down to his car in silence, the monstrous fact of his engagement to Cherry—whom he no longer loved, whom he despised—stalking like an evil ghost between them, holding them apart.

All her life, Faith thought bitterly, she had been shielding Cherry and Junior, acting as a buffer between them and punishment at the hands of their parents. She had tried, for her, shielded her away from the consequences of her foolish escapades.

And now she was called upon to give up her one chance at happiness. For she knew, by a dozen signs, that Bob Hathaway's heart, bruised and betrayed by Cherry, had turned to her during this last week, that if she said the word he would repudiate his quixotic sacrifice, and find everlasting peace in the bligness of her love for him.

And yet she knew too that she could not say the word; she knew that once again she would do as she had always done—give up to Cherry the thing she wanted most in the world. There was some comfort in knowing that Bob Hathaway had learned self-sacrifice from her, that they both knew he was doing it for her sake—for Faith's sake, not for Cherry's.

They had not spoken a word to each other—Faith and Bob—when his car stopped before the shabby, sprawling little house on Myrtle Street.

"Are you coming in?" Faith avoided his eyes, but she saw that his lean, tanned jaws were clamped together so that little ridges of muscles stood out.

"I guess I'd better speak to—Cherry," he answered in a flat, dead voice.

"Look! Lane flung the screen door wide and advanced upon the narrow gravelled path. "Hey, Sam! There's the devil to pay!"

"Not so loud, Junior," Faith cautioned him, as she stepped upon the porch. Bob Hathaway close behind her. "How's Mother?"

"Asleep," he answered sullenly, but his voice was offensively lowered. "Say, what d'you think? Cherry ran off with my bus! Yes, sir, Fay, and I found it a block from the station, with the pullock pried off the doors, and her suitcase missing. What the devil's she been up to, I'd like to know? It's a good thing for her nothing was stolen. A cop—friend o' mine—recognized the bus and stood guard on it, till I come along. Can you beat it, Sam? Honest, that little devil—"

"Where is Cherry, Junior?" Faith brushed past him into the living room.

"Gosh, I don't know! I just come in. Nobody in the house, but Mom, and she looks awful. Sick again?"

Before Faith, bewildered, stricken with new terror, could answer, there came the clatter of a banging kitchen door, the sound of small feet flying through the dining room. Joy, in a trailing nightgown, her round face paper white, her sharp gray eyes staring from her head with terror, catapulted herself against Faith.

"Faith, Dad's going to whip Cherry! He's got his razor strap! He says he's going to skin her alive! They woke me up!"

AMERICANS MAY LOSE TITLE TO MEXICO LANDS

STATEMENT OF OWNERSHIP MUST BE FILED BEFORE JANUARY, 1927

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 8 (AP).—Americans who own land in Mexico are perilously close to coming into conflict with that country's alien land laws and may lose title to their property unless they file a declaration of ownership before next January.

Ernest L. Tutt, manager of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in Houston, made the announcement to the Associated Press.

All Americans owning land in Mexico, he said, should make a declaration setting forth the time acquiring ownership. It should be filed before January, 1927, with the minister of foreign relations in Mexico City or in the office of the mayor in towns outside the capital of the republic.

The Mexican alien land law, it appears, was promulgated January 21, 1924. According to Mr. Tutt, it provides that "aliens possessed of any of the rights within the purview of this law, acquired prior to its taking effect, must file a declaration with the secretary of the department of foreign relations, within the year immediately following the promulgation of this law with the understanding that if this is not done it shall be held that the acquisition was made subsequently to the promulgation of this law."

Mr. Tutt said this is cited in connection with a recent interpretation of the constitution to the effect that aliens are not permitted to own land in Mexico under the constitution of 1917.

But in January, 1926, shortly after the new interpretation of the constitution became known, Mr. Tutt told the Associated Press, "the alien land law was passed providing that aliens could file a declaration prior to January 1927, showing the date of acquiring ownership and thereby continue to own the land without becoming a citizen of Mexico."

To make it legal in Mexico, the declaration or manifesto must be sworn to before a notary, the notary's signature must be attested by the clerk of the country in which the land is located, and the county clerk's signature must be attested by a local Mexican consul.

Mr. Tutt fears that persons in small towns in Texas who may be vitally interested in the new Mexican land law may never hear of it until it is too late. He said he would furnish copies of the form of the declaration to interested persons.

Saint And Sinner

"Where are they?" Quick, Joy! Where are they? Don't scatter like a little idiot. She shook the child ruthlessly.

"Out in the shed?" Joy pointed, and holy joy at this tremendous excitement shooting like darts of lightning through the very real terror in her eyes. "He drug her out of the house. And he's got his razor strap. Faith! He did the job in five minutes, and told me he'd give me a licking too. If I didn't go in the house and stay there, he'd have drug her out and stay there. He looks awful, Faith! Seen as Mom was asleep, he jerked her up out of her chair and drug her—"

"That'll do, Joy!" Faith flung off her sister's clinging hands, and ran to the kitchen, her face as white as Joy's.

"Guess we'd better go along, Faith—away! Long Lane said cruelly. "That's a peaceful citizen mostly, but when his hands are back inside to do something he'll regret."

For the second time that day Faith

flung herself upon a locked door, behind which Cherry Lane was screaming for help. Long, red welts upon the tender flesh of her little sister! The skin of her own body crawled at the thought.

"Dad! It's Faith! Let me in, Dad!" "Here, I'll attend to this," Long's voice was suddenly that of a grown man. He hurled his tall body against the filthy double doors of the shed, which gave almost immediately.

"Cherry lay on the dusty floor of the shed, once used as a stable by previous tenants, and now serving as a coal and wood house. In the flickering light of a lantern swinging from a rafter they could plainly see the print of a man's hand on one delicate, apricot-tinted cheek, and across her bare forehead lay a long, angry welt, left there by the vicious lash of the razor strap which Jim Lane held aloft in a trembling hand.

"Get up off that floor and take your beating," Jim Lane was saying when the doors were burst open. "Get out of here, Junior, or I'll give you a dose of the same medicine! Get out, Faith! he ordered thunderously, as his oldest daughter stumbled into the shed and flung herself to the floor, to gather her shuddering, sobbing sister into her arms.

"That'll be enough, Dad!" Junior strode to his father and snatched the uplifted strap from his hand. "Cherry's not a kid any more. A licking or two when she was a kid might have helped, but it won't do any good now. You'll be ashamed of yourself for this, Dad."

"Cherry, Cherry!" Faith had her sister in her arms, was kissing the cruel welt on her arm, the livid print of her father's hand on her face.

Jim Lane glared wildly about him, then staggered, brushing his eyes, as if to dispel the red mists of rage. Then he looked with bewilderment at the hand which had been raised against his daughter. He began to shudder as if with a chill.

"Something come over me," he muttered. "Something came over me—out of a sudden. Her mother's spoiled her. Oughta been spanked more when she was a child. Never made to mind. Something come over me."

Again he brushed a rough knuckle hand over his eyes, then seemed to realize for the first time that Bob Hathaway was standing near, the awkward down of the shed. "That you, Hathaway?" Jim asked, his face set in a grimace. "I came over this, I guess. But when I saw what she'd done to her mother, almost killed her, running away with a married man, like that—then coming home as perks as ever, lying and grinning and not a bit sorry—well, sir, something come over me. But she needed a licking."

"I don't know," he mumbled, "I don't know, but I've been a bad man, and it's too late to begin now. Mr. Lane, Bob Hathaway, a me forward slowly, his blue eyes filled with sympathy for the bewildered, ashamed father. "I came over this, I guess. But when I saw what she'd done to her mother, almost killed her, running away with a married man, like that—then coming home as perks as ever, lying and grinning and not a bit sorry—well, sir, something come over me. But she needed a licking."

"I guess I've got something to say about it," her voice rose shrilly, breaking on a sob. "You treated me like a dog today, coming home from the school. I wouldn't worry you if you knew the last man on earth, Bob Hathaway. Trying to play the table Sir, wouldn't you? Well, I've made my plans and they don't include any more beatings, either."

DELINQUENT TAXES GROW STEADILY

Lubbock county property owners are either broke or think very little of their property, it seems, else they would be more prompt in making tax payments.

It is impossible to say just how much delinquent property there is in Lubbock county, but there is a considerable amount. During the past 30 days District Clerk Louie Moore has issued 377 citations for delinquent tax suits, and the work has just begun.

In some instances the suits are for small amounts—just a few dollars, while in other cases property owners owe hundreds of dollars back taxes. A majority of the people being sued still reside in Lubbock county, though some of them have disappeared without leaving any trace whatever. A few are dead and it will be necessary to locate heirs before final disposition is made. But the county wants its money and if the property is worth the amount it will get it.

The King Of The Air Loses

When a champion goes out of his class he usually loses. And eagles are no exception. A huge golden eagle attacked the airplane of Joe Skidmore, Laguna Beach (Calif.) aviator, and after Skidmore had dodged the bird for several minutes through a rapid succession of nose dives and tail spins, the eagle broke its neck against a strut. Skidmore (at the left) is shown with his two passengers exhibiting the luckless bird.
