HUNTED TEXAS BANDIT SLAIN IN GANG BATTLE

$50,000 Loss When Fire Wrecks Half Dozen Shops In Business District

4-HOUR BLAZE CAUSES HEAVY DAMAGE HERE

Mack Thomas Building Gutted by Fire Early Sunday

FLAMES STUBBORN

City Department Saves Adjacent Buildings In Hard Battle

Fire which gutted a half dozen business establishments in the Mack Thomas building, 812-14 Scott avenue, caused a loss estimated at approximately $50,000 early Sunday morning in the first serious downtown blaze here in several months. The fire was discovered shortly after 2 o'clock Sunday morning and gave firemen a stubborn four-hour battle before it was brought under control.

The New York Sandwich shop, owned by A. H. Fell and George Stath; a cigar and domino parlor, owned by Marshal Franklin, and the Sandwich shop, operated by Miss Gerda Olson, all on the first floor of the building, were wrecked in the blaze, with a loss of approximately $11,500.

Building Loss $35,000

The Union Auto Service station in the rear of the building was also heavily damaged, and several machines destroyed.

On the second floor, the offices of Joseph F. Hesse, chiropractor; the H and H Oil company and Cline's commercial college were gutted by the flames. Buchanan's Stationery company, at 816 Scott avenue, was damaged approximately $3,000 by the torrents of water turned onto the building to save it

Customs Officer Out On Bond in Slaying

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn., June 23. (UP)—Emmett J. White, youthful customs patrolman, charged with second degree murder in the slaying of Henry Virkula, Big Falls confectioner, was released from the county jail here today on $5,000 bond.

White, who has been confined since June 9, the day after Virkula was slain when he failed to halt his automobile for a liquor search on the international highway near here left the jail quickly and was joined by his young bride and drove out of town, presumably for their home in Duluth.

Hearings on Tariff To Continue Today

WASHINGTON, June 23. (AP)—Another Democratic and Republican independent assault was directed at the White House tariff bill today as four senate finance sub-committees planned to continue hearings tomorrow on the measure.

Senator Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, who will help lead the drive of the Republican-Independent group to incorporate the export debenture plan in the bill after the latter comes before the senate Aug. 19, declared that an analysis of the measure disclosed little hope of the farmer obtaining relief through the tariff.

Chicago Labor Starts Move for 5-Day Week

CHICAGO, June 23. (US)—Labor's dream of a five-day week loomed in the Chicago building worker's field today. The building trades council would establish such a week. The movement is heralded widely as the forerunner of similar efforts all over the country.

Fearing not only the precedent that the institution of a five-day week would establish, but its immediate effect on building costs in the Chicago territory, employing contractors have joined in a movement to protest against the proposal of the trades council.

Bellevue Auto Accident Claims Victim; Pal Held

Special to The Record News

HENRIETTA, Texas, June 23.—A man whom police believe they identified as Bill Davis, about 77, thought to be of Corsicana, was fatally injured 18 miles south of here near Bellevue late tonight when the car in which he was driving with a companion crashed into a ditch.

Davis died as he was being rushed to a Wichita Falls hospital by L. P. Hodge, Bellevue city marshal. The body was taken in charge by the Burris Funeral home.

Davis' companion, who police say gave the name of Tom Ireland, about 47, was taken in custody after the accident and placed in the Clay county jail at Henrietta. He is thought by officers to be a relative of Alvin Ireland, now serving a penitentiary sentence in connection with the robbery some months ago of the First State bank at Dundee.

Sheriff J. M. Donnell at Henrietta said that the man in custody said a car which passed him from the rear crowded him off the highway. No charge had been filed against the man tonight. Ireland told Sheriff Donnell he lived in Wichita Falls and had volunteered to drive Davis to Corsicana.

Warren Belcher, Wichita county deputy sheriff, informed Sunday night of the death of a man said to be Bill Davis, said a person by that name had been indicted on a liquor charge here about a year ago, and that the man indicted here had police records in several cities in the United States.

Billy Dixon's Body to Be Returned To Noted Adobe Walls Battlefield

Texan Whose 'Long Shot' Struck Fear in Hearts of Indians Is to Rest on Scene of Struggle

Special to The Record News

BORGER, Texas, June 23.—Billy Dixon, one of the Southwest's most famous scouts and plainsmen, is to be brought home on Thursday, June 27, exactly 54 years after the day on which his famous 1,200-yard shot concluded a three-day's battle between 28 white men and 700 Indian braves on the Adobe walls battlefield, where his remains are to laid to rest.

When Billy Dixon died in Cimarron county, Oklahoma, in the spring of 1913, he urgently requested that he be buried beneath Texas soil, and in accordance with his wishes, he was buried at Texline, the nearest Texas settlement. Some months ago Mrs. Dixon, now a newspaper woman living near Miami, expressed a desire that the body of the famous Indian fighter might be returned to the ranch in Hutchinson county on which they lived for many years. The land was that on which the historic battle was fought, and on which years later Dixon "proved up."

Double Officiate

Arrangements for the transfer of the remains, and for ceremonies incident to re-interment on the old Dixon ranch, were consigned to the Adobe Walls Boy Scout council, with J. D. Miller, scoutmaster of troop No. 2 in this city, in charge. The body will be brought by Mr. Miller and an escort of Boy Scouts from Texline Wednesday, and the burial services near the original Adobe wall site will be held Thursday afternoon. A. J. Fogaley of Borger will officiate.

Prominent Masons from all over the Panhandle, many of whom assisted in Masonic burial rites for Dixon 16 years ago, will be present at the ceremonies Thursday. Many

YOUNG WOMAN FACES CHARGE

Girl Held in Firing Of Mystery Shots

Charges of aggravated assault were filed Sunday morning against Evelyn Daugherty, 21, who told George Anderson, assistant district attorney, that she accidentally fired the shot which Thursday afternoon went through the walls of two houses and wounded Mrs. J. W. Williamson, a guest in the home of G. A. Caldwell, 1602 Taylor.

Shooting Accidental

Mrs. Williamson was struck by one of four bullets discharged from a revolver in the house at 1600 Taylor. Mrs. Williamson was sitting with her 4-year-old son at a table in the Caldwell home when the shots were fired. Investigation found the neighboring house empty of occupants, but police discovered the pistol with four chambers empty.

The young woman said Sunday afternoon that she had been alone in the room at the time the gun was discharged. Later, she said, one of the two men who were in the house had so alarmed her that she had fled.

"I was afraid of him," she declared.

"I'm glad I came back, though, because now it will be all cleared up. I am innocent," she declared.

The young woman told officials that she had stopped by the house for a discussion with her husband from whom she was separated. She found the gun as she searched for stamps, and as she examined the weapon, it began firing, according to the story she told Mr. Anderson.

Glad She Came Back

"I was so scared and excited that I must have kept pulling the trigger," she explained. "The man I was afraid of came in and told me I was getting the whole bunch into trouble. Without thinking I ran away, mostly because I was afraid of what he might do to me. I just kept on walking for a long time, finally I decided I'd better go on back and get my things. I'm glad I went."

Mrs. Williamson, who is under treatment at the Wichita Falls Clinic hospital, is reported to be recovering rapidly.

Poincare Unveils Monument at Verdun

VERDUN, France, June 23. (AP)—The battle of Verdun influenced the United States to side with France in the world war, Premier Raymond Poincare said today at the unveiling ceremonies of a monument erected to commemorate the final battle that ended assault on the fortress by the Germans.

Veteran Houston Cop Killed in Gun Battle

HOUSTON, Texas, June 23. (UP)—Going with another officer to arrest a negro who had been reported as threatening to kill anyone who came near him, Oscar Hope, veteran vice squad raider, was instantly killed Saturday night. The negro died a few minutes later in a gun battle with Ira Nix, who had gone with Hope to make the arrest.

Hope was shot throught the head as he approached the door of the house where the negro was hiding. Nix, who had gone to the back door forced his way into the room and emptied his gun into the body of the killer.

Prohibition Arguments Yield Plenty Moisture

WASHINGTON, June 23. (UP)—There was considerable moisture in the prohibition debates during the closing sessions of the house recently, it was revealed tonight.

The house has a cooling system and the air sent into the legislative chamber is cleaned and redistributed. During the last few days when spirited arguments raged on fatal prohibition shootings, five quarts of water a minute were being removed from the air taken from the house.

VICTIM RECOVERS

FREDERICK, Okla., June 23.—Hershel Kincade, 22, of Tipton, who accidentally shot himself with a .22 calibre rifle a couple of weeks ago, and who has since been treated at the Frederick hospital, was taken to his home Wednesday. In order to remove the bullet from the optic it was necessary to remove that organ.

Love Notes to Be Read Today In Olkahoma Divorcee's Balm Suit

CHICAGO, June 23.—Burning epistles of love will be read in court here tomorrow, telling of the attentions which Frank S. Hardings, millionaire oil burner manufacturer showered upon Ann Livingston, Oklahoma divorcee.

She has brought a $250,000 breach of promise suit against the elderly manufacturer, which has attracted widespread attention.

Late last week an entire court session was devoted to the introduction of earlier billets-doux in the romance of the Tulsa, Okla. divorcee and the Chicago widower.

Attorneys on both sides insist that the other was the aggressive party in a courtship that led to an ante-nuptial contract which provided $100,000 for a marriage settlement for the bride. The agreement in fact stopped just short of the altar, the records show. It stopped so short in fact, that the wedding supper was left untasted and the bridegroom left hastily on a brideless honeymoon to the West Indies.

Miss Livingston was calmly confident as to the outcome of the suit tonight. In her hotel suite here she said that she is nervous about going on the stand, it being only her second experience in a divorce suit. The first one, she said, she did not have to testify in, for she was then represented by an attorney. That divorce was granted to her husband, Robert J. Puderbaugh, an Oklahoma attorney.

"I wasn't really out of high school when I married him," she said, "It was war time and all the girls in my crowd were getting married to army men and I guess I got the fever, too."

DEVOUTS HAIL SETTLEMENT OF CHURCH STRIFE

Mexican Pilgrims Maintain Steady March to Pay Virgin Homage

EXILES TO RETURN

Scores to Leave Texas Now That Oppression Has Been Lifted

By G. F. FINE

MEXICO CITY, June 23. (UP)—The flower-banked shrine of the Virgin of Guadalupe, on the outskirts of the capital was visited by an almost endless stream of persons again today as the nation gave thanks for the restoration of peace between the state and the church.

Approximately 100,000 persons placed flowers at the shrine yesterday and countless numbers made the pilgrimage there today, starting at dawn and continuing through the day. Perfect order was maintained. Police were needed only to direct heavy traffic.

Formal Opening

The first religious ceremony formally re-instituting public church services probably will be conducted at Santa Maria church, Guadalupe, a week from today. A majority of the bishops who are now returning from exile or hiding, will participate in special mass.

The ceremony will signal the gradual re-opening of 5,000 other churches which had been closed since the opening break between the Catholic priests and the government in 1926. It was said that transfer of the churches from the hands of local committees to priests probably would be accomplished in a week.

EXILES IN TEXAS ON WAY HOME

SAN ANTONIO, June 23. (UP)—After a three-year exile from their native land, Catholic priests and laymen from churches along the border were gathering in San Antonio tonight, preparing to return to the land from which they were banished for violation of the religious laws.

Special farewell services in all Catholic churches along the border were held today, with exiled priests conducting masses and bidding goodbye to the churches which have been their hosts for the three years of the religious controversy in Mexico.

Word of the settlement reached by President Portes Gil and Archbishop Ruiz y Flores was received with almost tearful joy by the churchmen who will be reassigned to their old parishes within a few weeks.

BISHOP RE-OPENS LAREDO SERVICES

LAREDO, Texas, June 23. (US)—The Rt. Rev. Serafin Armora, bishop of Tamaulipes, said mass today in the Roman Catholic church in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, just across the Rio Grande river from here. The mass was the first service conducted by a robed priest in Nuevo Laredo church in three years.

Bishop Armora arrived at the border early this morning from San Antonio and entered Mexico immediately the international bridge was opened. At six o'clock he said his first mass and hourly thereafter. Bishop Armora conducted services for the thousands of Mexican Catholics who flocked to the church from miles around.

Bishop Armora was one of the first clergymen to leave Mexico. He went to San Antonio, where he found a peaceful haven at the Claretian college, with four other Mexican bishops.

NEEDS SUPPORT

McBride Calls for Rally Of Churches Behind Prohibition

WASHINGTON, June 23. (US)—Declaring that "so long as prohibition laws are under special attack they must be given special defense," F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the anti-saloon league, today urged general observance of next Sunday as "support the president day."

On that day various utterances of President Hoover with regard to law enforcement are to be read from the pulpits of such churches as join in the movement.

PROBERS DOUBT SNOOK'S MOTIVE

New Autopsy on Co-Ed's Body Ordered

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 23. (US)—As Dr. James H. Snook, self-confessed slayer of his Ohio State university sweetheart sat dejectedly in his stuffy cell at the county jail today, the authorities were actively at work trying to fathom the real motive back of his crime.

For although Snook, deposed faculty member of the university, has complacently confessed he killed Theora K. Hix, a pretty co-ed, because she rebelled against breaking up their love entanglement, County Prosecutor John J. Chester believes there was a deeper, more sinister motive.

New Autopsy Called

Unknown to Snook, the county prosecutor has ordered another autopsy performed on the mutilated body of Snook's victim, whom he struck down with a hammer and then gashed her throat, as she sank in the throes of death.

The prosecution told the Universal Service correspondent today that this new autopsy on Miss Hix is to be made for evidence of what he considers to be the hidden motive. He wants to ascertain, for one thing, if the university co-ed, as Snook has hinted, took drugs.

For another thing, the prosecutor wants to determine if Theora Hix, mistress of Snook for three years, was an expectant mother.

Prosecutor Chester expects a report from the physicians conducting the autopsy tomorrow. At the same time, Snook, now a cowered man, haunted by the vision of the girl he murdered on the rifle range on the fringe of the city, will be arraigned to plead not guilty and go to trial. They intimated he would repudiate the confession wrung from him after 20 hours of grilling by the county prosecutor. Snook they maintain, was unstrung, confused and on the point of collapse when he signed the confession.

He Doesn't Care

For himself, Snook today betrayed no anxiety over his predicament. To a keeper he said:

"I don't care a rap what they do with me. I keep seeing Theora's face all the time. If they put me away I won't see it any more."

Slayer of Two Shot By California Officers

LONG BEACH, Calif., June 23. (AP)—John Keller, 45, yesterday shot and killed his estranged wife, Ruth Keller, 25, and seriously wounded her alleged suitor and a policeman, on returning to his home early today, was probably fatally wounded by officers.

Shortly before daylight the man returned to the house, in which officers Holt and Claussen had been secreted. He climbed through a window into the room in which the policemen were waiting. They ordered him to surrender, and, when he attempted—they claimed—to reach his pistol, shot him.

Beaumont Man Dies Of Shot Fired at Woman

BEAUMONT, Texas, June 23. (AP)—T. J. Benefield, 29, formerly of Tallapoosa, Ala., died today from pistol wounds inflicted last night by A. D. Covin, 33, who fired on Benefield and Covin's ex-wife as the latter were leaving a theater. Mrs. Covin received a bullet intended for Benefield. Covin is held. The Covins had been divorced for some time and have two children.

Body of Man Found In Gainesville Field

GAINESVILLE, Texas, June 23. (AP)—The body of an unidentified man about 25, apparently a laborer, was found in a field near the railroad track here today. A verdict was withheld by the coroner. There were no marks of identification. Death was believed due to natural causes.

Kansan 'Run Over' By Swooping Airplanes

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., June 23. (UP)—Charles Round, 57, today was suffering the distinction of being run over by an airplane. Round was mowing the air field turf here when the craft ran him down. He was not seriously injured.

MORROW MUST REST

WASHINGTON, June 23. (US)—Ambassador Morrow is going to have an immediate vacation and a complete rest upon orders from President Hoover and Secretary Stimson, unless Mr. Morrow takes the initiative in that direction himself.

BLIND DESTINY DEALS ROUGHLY WITH AVIATORS

Complete Mystery Shrouds Whereabouts of Spain's Flying Quartet

SHOENHAIR CRASHES

Attempt at Transcontinental Record Flops; Flier Injured

PARIS, June 23. (AP)—A Havas dispatch from Madrid tonight said that Premier Primo de Rivera had informed the semi-official newspaper Noticiero del Lunes that for the moment "the aviators must unhappily be considered lost."

He declared the previous report, supposed to have been from Major Ramon Franco who commanded the crew of four, of their safe arrival at the Azores and plans to resume their air voyage was "inexact."

LONDON, June 23. (AP)—The whereabouts of the airplane in which four Spanish fliers set out on Friday from Cartagena, Spain, for New York was a mystery tonight.

Premier Primo de Rivera yesterday authorized official announcement of their safe arrival in the Azores, although the exact island was not specified. Later the text of a message said to have been signed by Major Ramon Franco was made public. It said: "We arrived at 8 a. m., and intend to resume our flight at 5 p. m. tomorrow, Sunday."

Uneasiness is Felt

Still later Madrid reported word that the plane early today would proceed to Horta, capital of the Azores, to refuel for the next long stage of the flight.

Nothing was obtained from any other source to supplement these reports. The plane had not arrived at Horta today up to noon and that town was without any direct word from it since it left Spain. It was supposed there that the plane had descended on one of the small islands of the Azores group with which communication would be possible only by boat.

Some uneasiness was felt here and at Horta for the safety of Major Franco and his three companions.

Radio is Silent

The other aviators are Commandant Eduardo Gonzales Gallarza, Capt. Julio Ruiz de Aldoa and Mechanic Perdo Madarraga. Their monoplane has two motors and was regarded as exceptionally seaworthy. The radio of the plane frequently was heard by Spanish stations in the early stages of the flight but presumably could not be operated except when the machine was in flight. The call letters are EDR16 and the sending wave length is 900 meters.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., June 23. (US)—Lee Shoenhair, on the second leg of his hop to Roosevelt field in his interrupted transcontinental flight, cracked up at Du Bois, Pa., one hundred miles north of Pittsburgh at 2 o'clock this afternoon. He was slightly injured and

Two Men Arrested In Petrolia Liquor Raids

Special to The Record News.

PETROLIA, Texas, June 23.—Two men were arrested and a large amount of whiskey was confiscated today, follwing two raids in Charlie, Texas, near here. The first raid was made by Barney McGee, constable of Petrolia and the second was made by J. M. Donnell, sheriff and Bill Young, deputy, both of Henrietta. The two men who were arrested were placed in the county jail and will be turned over to federal authorities.

Death Claims Former Texan in California

SANTA MONICA, Calif., June 23. (AP)—J. Dabney Day, 56, banker and former Texan, died suddenly of heart disease here yesterday.

Day, son of Col. Samuel Day, was born at Ladonia, Texas Nov. 19, 1872. He married Miss Nancy Adams Hayden of Dallas in 1902. Later he moved to California where he became prominent in the banking world.

Directing the state's effort to solve the hammer slaying of Theora Hix, university student, at Columbus, Ohio, is John J. Chester Jr., prosecutor of Franklin county.

DEATH HALTS SLAYER'S TRIAL

El Paso Killer's Death Was Probably Suicide

EL PASO, June 23. (AP)—Death today closed the case of the state versus Jose M. Marin, 64, native of of Spain, scheduled to have gone to trial here tomorrow on charges of murdering Frank J. Lyons and H. D. Oppenheimer, El Paso attorneys.

The lawyers were shot to death by Marin in their offices here May 31 after several years business association and final disagreements over Mexican mining deals.

Suicide Theory Held

Physicians said Marin's death probably resulted from natural causes although a post mortem was to be held to consider a suicide theory. Jail attaches say poison could not have been smuggled to Marin. The result of a chemical analysis of the stomach will be announced tomorrow.

Marin, once a rich man but recently in reduced circumstances, was an exile from Mexico, his adopted land. He once owned vast mining properties in Chihuahua, but was unable to develop them as he wished because of lack of money.

At that point he and the two El Paso attorneys agreed on a promotion project for the development. Later, Marin lost his mines. He sued Lyons and Oppenheimer but lost. Later, he besought the district attorney to bring criminal charges against them, but as the acts he charged allegedly were committed in Mexico, the district attorney told him United States courts were without judisdiction.

Both Men Killed

On the last day of May, Marin went to the lawyers' offices and shot both of them to death. Oppenheimer apparently had too short a warning to save his life for he was discovered slumped in his chair with his hand extended over a half open desk drawer in which was his pistol. Lyons was shot in the neck.

Marin went across the hallway after the shooting and gave his gun to the occupant of another office, asking that the officers be called.

Wilbur Assures Early Work on Boulder Dam

LAS VEGAS, Nev., June 23. (AP)—Secretary Wilbur, weary from two days of intensive inspection in the Boulder Canyon dam vicinity, left here today for San Francisco after promising the citizens of this city that work on the big dam in the Colorado river would begin as soon as final plans could be drawn and certain legal questions settled.

Iowa World War Vet Is Cited for Bravery

WASHINGTON, June 23. (US)—A citation for gallantry in action has been posthumously awarded to Sergeant John Burke, of Des Moines, Iowa, for heroism at the battle of Verdun, the war department announced today. Burke's next of kin is his father, P. F. Burke of Des Moines.

TWO SHOT DEAD IN AFFRAY AT KANSAS CITY

Galveston Robbery Suspect And Pal Succumb To Wounds

WANTED AS SLAYER

Texas Sojourner Was Also Wanted for Murder At Los Angeles

KANSAS CITY, June 23. (AP)—Two alleged gangsters were dead and a third today was in a serious condition after a gun battle last night in front of the La Salle hotel here. Five men were involved in the shooting. Although friends, each suspected the others movements, a disagreement resulted in a quarrel and revolvers came into action. After the shooting, two of the men escaped.

Wanted in Texas

Ben Barretti, alias Fred Roberts, was shot to death. Police said Barretti was wanted in Los Angeles for the murder of Max Silverstein, March 20, 1929 in a holdup and that he was wanted in Chicago on three murder charges. They said he jumped a $50,000 bond in Chicago and his police record also showed that he was wanted in Galveston for shooting of a policeman during a payroll holdup in which $6,000 was obtained recently and that he was wanted in Dallas and other cities for robbery.

Shots exchanged in the gun battle today cost the life of Arthur Hartman. He died this afternoon. Police said he was out on an appeal bond on a St. Louis murder conviction.

Kerns Humphrey, who police said was wanted for three murders in various parts of the country, was shot in the back and seriously wounded.

Shots End Quarrel

The men were standing in front of the hotel when suddenly they quarrelled and whipped out their revolvers and began shooting.

Police had not learned the names of the two men who escaped after the shooting.

Humphrey told officers that Barretti, known under several aliases,

Woman Hunted As Slayer of Three Persons

AFTON, Okla., June 23. (UP)—Officers today sought Mrs. Phil Green, 40, Miami, Okla., rooming house proprietor, for the triple shooting of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Williams of Armstrong and her husband, Phil Green, 45, garage owner here.

Mrs. Green found the Williams couple at a fishing camp, and wounded the man and his wife slightly, declaring afterward she had gone to kill William's daughter who, she charged, had been friendly with her husband. Green was critically wounded, one of three bullets fired at him taking effect in his head.

Electra Police Capture Fleeing Booze Suspect

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, June 23.—A raid conducted about four miles northwest of here late Saturday night resulted in the arrest of one man and the confiscation of beer valued at $150. Officers Roy Hart, Walter Suttle and O. E. Whisnant of the Electra police made the raid after swearing out a search warrant.

When the officers arrived at the house, a man was just leaving in an automobile. The police gave chase and succeeded in puncturing the gas tank on the car. The pursuit continued until the gasoline was exhausted.

Two Drown in Effort To Rescue Okla. Girl

ALVA, Okla., June 23. (UP)—Maude Curran, 14, was rescued by her brother Orville, when she slipped into a deep hole in a pond near here, while her sister Hallie, 20, and Gurney Barber, harvest hand of Alton, Kan., went to their death in a futile effort to save the girl. Hallie and Barber plunged into the deep water together and sank beneath the surface while Maude managed to keep herself partly afloat by flaying with her arms.

Girl, 15, Held Here After Riding Bicycle From Paris to Gainesville

It was at noon last Thursday that Maxine, a tow-headed youngster now in the juvenile ward at the Wichita county jail, decided that she just couldn't stand things any longer, mounted her trusty bicycle and peddled away from Paris, Texas, en route to see the world.

Maxine is 15 but she doesn't look it. Last Thursday she was adventurous, but today she is weary of the dust of the road. And her bicycle is parked at a filling station just outside of Gainesville. She is waiting, her large, brown eyes full of tears, for her mother to send for her.

"I wanted to be 'traveling out,'" the child explained. "And my mother and I don't get along. She won't let me have a good time like the rest of the children. I have to stay at home and do the housekeeping and take care of the baby. I guess she isn't really mean to me, but she won't let me do the things the others do."

Maxine said Sunday that she grasped her opportunity last Thursday when her mother sent her for some groceries. She pumped up the tires of her bicycle, oiled the chain and took the road westward, stopping only long enough to borrow $1.79 from a friend. She is a little girl for her age, with thick blond hair, unusually large brown eyes, and a childish face burned by the wind and sun. Her traveling dress was a little brown two-piece gar-

JUST THE

Baer Facts

By Bugs Baer

NEW YORK, June 23.—Our special Washington interloper instructs us that President Hoover is looking forward to 1932.

When we look that far forward all we see are three income tax returns through one pair of opera glasses.

Which is a sight that would make strong men faint and stronger women reach for their lipsticks.

The Democrats are not looking forward to 1932 or any other future book.

Democracy has reached that stage where, instead of looking forward three years, it wishes it could reach back 17.

Democracy made the world safe and them forgot the combination.

There must be a reason why politicians look so far into the future. By 1932 we should have a diplomat who can prevent Europe from changing the subject.

By that time, if the debentures keep pace with the postponements, a farm will be a dot on the map and a farmer's bank account will be a dot in a book.

By 1932, there will be millions of young people who will be casting their first votes for prosperity, or its alternative, reform.

When a statesman kisses a baby, he does so because he realizes that some day that baby will vote.

So he kisses it before it is old enough to resent it.

The average man, who only goes out for partisan target practice on the first Tuesday after the usual Monday in November, does not realize the intricate windings and twistings of political skiddings and that all power is not registered on meters.

The leaders of the nation must look forward because most of them are scared to look sideways.

Besides, a politician photographs better when he is looking forward.

Ability to read the future is as scarce as the strings on a Chinese fiddle. But all politicians believe in taking a close look at a far date.

Anything can happen in three years and the war maps are all ready for the pins which will be stolen from the other fellows' shirts.

Of course, the Democrats could beat Mr. Hoover's time by looking Gerward to 1962.

They could then claim your November allegiance by showing their uncanny ability to look forward more than 30 years past the Republicans.

The reason for all this forward squinting toward future elections must be that it is only a short ogle back toward some election promises.

Secretary Wilbur Takes Look at Black Canyon

LAS VEGAS, Nev., June 23. (AP)—Secretary Wilbur today inspected Black Canyon on the Colorado river, where Boulder Canyon dam will be built, and afterward declared that if possible the government intended to sell "falling waters in terms of actual power units rather than to sell power."

The secretary's statement was the first outlined of what he said should be "a new policy of the federal government in dealing with great building projects." He said however, that if power companies were not interested in leasing power rights at the dam the government would make the power and sell it, either at the site, or at the end of power lines.

The Interior department head accompanied by Commissioners Mead, of the bureau of reclamation; Senators Codie and Pittman of Nevada, and Governor Balzar of Nevada, braved the waters of the Colorado in a small boat in order to view the site where shortly the government will begin construction of the great dam.

"My Wife Was Told She Would Have to Be Operated On, But Since Taking Orgatone She Is Able to Do Own Housework," Says Burkburnett Man.

"I am happy to think how perfectly my wife's health has been restored that I want to make this statement for my wife," said S. C. Denham of Burkburnett, while talking with the druggist regarding the benefits his wife had derived.

"Her troubles first began after she had the 'flu,' and she suffered just terribly. She had to go to bed, and nothing we did for her seemed to do her any good. Her appetite was very poor, and often she would not eat anything for days. She was very nervous and didn't get a good night's sleep. She had terrible headaches, and her limbs swelled up with rheumatism and she ached all over, so bad she could hardly stand it. The doctors advised that she should go to a sanatorium, which she did. She came home without being benefitted, and was then told she would have to be operated on for appendicitis.

"She was beginning to get discouraged and didn't think any kind of medicine would do her any good, but we read Fire Chief McClure's statement in the papers, and decided to get a bottle of Orgatone. Her wonderful improvement, on three bottles of Orgatone, has surprised lots of people and she is now one of the happiest women in this town. She can eat anything now and isn't bothered with rheumatism at all now. In fact, she is well and strong and is doing her own housework. I am glad to give this statement, for I know anyone will be benefitted if they will give Orgatone a fair trial."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy, but a new scientific preparation and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison's Drug Store, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.—Adv.

BODY OF SCOUT TO BE MOVED

Billy Dixon to Rest on Noted Battlefield

old time friends and associates, who credit Dixon with having saved the Southwest for the white men, are expected to pay tribute to his memory. A detachment of soldiers have been promised by the war department, Mr. Miller said, to fire a salute over the remains of the former scout.

Spot Near Borger

The site of the Adobe Walls battle is now known as the W. T. Coble's turkey track ranch, and was deeded several years ago by Mr. Coble to the Panhandle Plains Historical society. It is about 25 miles from Borger. Dixon built a house on his tract in the early 80's, and lived there for many years. In 1893 he was married to Miss Olive King. They continued to live on the Adobe Walls ranch for more than 10 years, when they sold the ranch and moved to Plemons, county seat of Hutchinson county, where Dixon became the first sheriff. Several years later the family took up a claim in Cimarron county, Oklahoma, where the former scout's death occurred, March 9, 1913.

Seven children, most of whom were born on the Adobe Walls ranch, are living. They are Mrs. Emmett Cable, Clayton, N. M.; Mrs. Glenn McKee, Amarillo; W. D. Dixon, Panhandle; Mrs. Walter Irwin, Amarillo; Archie K. Dixon, Miami; Miss Olive Dixon, Amarillo, and Hugh Dixon, Miami.

The committe appointed by the Adobe Walls council to supervice preparations for the removal of the old plainsman's remains included J. D. Miller, chairman; H. E. Hoover of Canadian, pioneer jurist and personal friends of Billy Dixon; T. D. Hobart, Pampa, reacher, also a friend of the scout; Rev. Douglas Carver, White Deer; J. F. Weatherly, Panhandle. Dixon's personal friend; Joe Coffee, Panhandle, and J. C. Alexander of the Phillips camp.

KELL TELLS OF DIXON'S DEED

Details of the thrilling three-day battle of Adobe Walls in which Billy Dixon was "the leading spirit among the victors" were recalled here Sunday afternoon by Frank Kell, who is an enthusiastic student of the history of the Southwest.

Dixon was one of 28 buffalo hunters whose presence along the Canadian river had become known to members of the Comanche, Kiowa, and Cheyenne tribes. Chief Quanah Parker, commanding the first named tribe, Chief White Shield of the Cheyennes, and Black Horse of the Kiowas massed about 700 warriors with the intention of exterminating the white invaders and capturing their valuable outlay of horses.

Dixon and his associates, including the wife of one of the hunters, took up their defense behind the Adobe walls from which the battle took its name. According to information later given by Chief Quanah Parker and others, Ishati, leading medicine man unleashed the best of his bag of tricks, invoked the spirits, and pronounced a charm upon the Indians which surrounded their bodies with an Achillean immunity to white men's bullets. Brave in such armor, the braves made almost 30 charges on the little force of whites during the first day's fighting, with results which gave Ishati's charm faint appearances of fallibility. On the second day, about a dozen separate charges were made, with further losses again raising serious doubts as to the Indians' immunity to bullets from the white men's guns. On the third day, Ishati's pronouncements having been renewed and somewhat altered, one of the attacking band, stood in clear view upon the cap rock, surveying the land below in which the defenders still held their post. It was at that moment that Billy Dixon drew bead at 1,200 yards, as the incident has been recorded, and dropped the courageous Indian on the cap rock. Lurking doubts quickly resolved into definite fear, and the Indians rapidly withdrew, removing a considerable menace to hundreds of white settlers in Western Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas.

Referring later to the event, Quanah Parker stated that upon the medicine man's next reference to immunity to the white man's bullets, he said to Ishati: "White man's bullet kill Indian two days after he get home."

$50,000 Loss In Huge Blaze Here

from the fire. Damage to the building was placed at $25,000 by Mack Thomas, owner.

The blaze started in the New York sandwich shop shortly after 2 o'clock Sunday morning, but fire department officials Sunday night had been unable to determine the exact cause of the fire. Companies one, three, four, five and six of the city department laid more than 4,000 feet of hose in fighting the flames.

Other Buildings Threatened

Firemen were on the roof of the building occupied by the stationery company and were directing streams of water into the Thomas building when tongues of flame began shooting from the skights on the roof. For a time it appeared this building also would be destroyed, but firemen discovered that the flames were issuing from an aperture in the wall of the Thomas building which had been torn out by a joist when the roof fell in.

Two srteams of water directed at the small break quickly extinguished the fire at that point, and prevented the flames from spreading to the store of the Sherwin-Williams Paint company. Only slight water damage was reported in the paint store.

Claude Gold, fireman, cut a gash in his hand when he fell on broken glass. He was given first aid and returned to duty.

HOME DAMAGED $500 IN SUNDAY BLAZE

A fire in the home of H. A. Penrod, 1507 McGregor street, about 1:45 p. m. Sunday caused damage estimated at $500, according to officials of the fire department. The flames were extinguished in less than half an hour by companies three, five and one. Several rooms and a large amount of furniture were damaged by the fire. Mr. Penrod is a salesman for the Langford Motor company.

Red Radiance Rose Takes Long Lead in Flower Vote

Red Radiance Rose	515
Larspur	452
Gladiolus	208
Shasta Daisy	52
Zinnia	28
Sun Flower	12
Sweet Pea	11
Poppy	8
Petunia	7
Columbine Vine	2
Cactus Rose	2
Forget-me-not	1
Yellow Daisy	1
Genary Vine	1
Gilxiardia	1
Fleur-de-lis	1
Redbud	1

First complete compilation of votes cast in the contest sponsored by The Record News and the Garden club to select the official flower of Wichita Falls showed the red radiance rose again in the lead as the city's most popular flower.

The rose had some 63 more votes Sunday than did the larkspur, which held first place in the voting during the first few days of the contest. The gladiolus, with 208 votes, seemed firmly entrenched in third place. A total of 515 votes have been cast for the rose, while 452 have been chalked up for larkspur. The Shasta daisy stands fourth in the list, with a hundred votes scattered over a dozen or more nominations in the flower list.

Only two more ballots in the contest will be printed in The Record News, and no votes will be counted which are received after 6 o'clock Wednesday night. The final ballot will appear in The Record News Wednesday morning.

Heavy voting over the week-end placed the radiance rose in the lead again, after it had lost first place Friday to the larkspur. A good majority of the votes received Saturday and Sunday morning went into the totals for the rose. Ballots in the contest should be addressed to Flower Contest Editor, care The Record News. The signed votes may be either brought or mailed to The Record News office. Only one vote may be cast by each person, but each member of a family may register his or her opinion.

Runaway Girl Rides Bicycle

ment of gingham, and she wore no stockings.

The sun was at its hottest during the noon hour, but Maxine, "traveling out," didn't mind—for a while. She rode on and on through the afternoon and evening until, at 11 o'clock Thursday night, she stopped at a hotel in Whitesboro.

"They didn't ask me any questions there," she declared. "The girl just told me good-night and in the morning I got up and rode away. I bought all I wanted to eat along the road."

Near Gainesville, a driver on his way to Burkburnett, offered the child a lift but said he couldn't take her bicycle. She abandoned the wheel at a filling station, glad to be rid of the endless labor along the dusty roads in the hot sun. As she rode she planned her future. Vernon, she decided would be her destination. She has friends there. She would get a job. She would write her mother that she was safe and she would send for her bicycle. It was all very clear.

But the driver of the car had other thoughts for the little runaway. He took her first to his own home and wife in Wichita Falls where she spent the second night of her travels. Then Saturday morning he took her to a welfare agency here and her journeys were at and end.

James A. McDonald, juvenile officer, allowed the child to stay in his home on Saturday night after she had spent Saturday in the juvenile ward. And Sunday night she was under the care of Mrs. D. B. Graham, matron at the courthouse. Meanwhile officials here are awaiting word from her parents.

"I guess I'll go on back and behave myself," Maxine has decided. "I'll wait until I'm 18 to be going. I don't like to stay in here, and I guess I'm sorry I ever started."

33 Join Church In Revival Here

Thirty-three persons were added to the First Church of Christ, 28 of them by confession and baptism, during the two-weeks' evangelistic meeting which closed Sunday night when Evangelist G. A. Dunn Sr. of Dallas, preached before more than 700 persons including many out of town delegations.

Sunday was marked by three preaching services, a meeting at 3:30 in the afternoon being held in addition to the usual morning and evening appointments. The crowd Sunday night was the largest of the entire two weeks, according to Rev. L. S. White, pastor. Visitors from as far south and east as Hillsboro, from Childress on the west, and a group of 75 members of the Church of Christ at Holliday were present. Other towns represented were Iowa Park, Vernon, Burburnett, Charlie and Petrolia. The congregation of the Buchanan Street Church of Christ of this city also attended the closing evangelistic service.

Evangelst Dunn left Sunday night for his home in Dallas. He will open a revival campaign in Bonham Monday night. Rev. Tillett Tedlie, song leader, will return to Belton Monday, where he is pastor of the Church of Christ.

Aged Brownwood Woman Fatally Hurt, Wreck

ABILENE, Texas, June 23. (AP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Sanders, 76, of Brownwood, died here today from injuries received in an automobile accident earlier in the day. Her daughter, Mrs. Ida McGaughey, who was driving, was not injured. The accident occurred when the car went into a ditch near Clyde. Mrs. Sanders and Mrs. McGaughey were en route to Lubbock to visit Mrs. Sanders' daughter, Mrs. Ewing Freeland, wife of a professor at Texas Tech.

Wichitan Leaves For Plumbing Convention

George Winburne Jr., of the Winburne Plumbing company, left Wichita Falls Sunday for Buffalo, N. Y., where he will attend the national convention of Master Plumbers of America, to be held from June 25 to 27. Mr. Winburne was selected as one of the five delegates from Texas. He will be gone about a week.

Quanah Doctor to Speak Before American Medical Association

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, June 25.—Being selected as one of seven in the United States to prepare an exhibit and address the American Medical association at its meeting in Portland, Ore., in July, on phases of radiology is the signal honor bestowed upon Dr. J. M. George of Quanah.

The subject assigned Dr. George is: "Progressive Bone Changes in Osteomyelitis. Exhibit of Roentgenographic Observation with Accompaning Interpretations; Roentgenograms Illustrating Progressive Bone Changes in Osteomyelitis; Causes of Error in Interpretation; and Evaluation of Roentgenographic Studies."

Dr. George has specialized in X-ray during practically all his medical career, and has long been recognized as one of the leaders in this phase of surgery and diagnosis. This invitation from the national organization is an evidence that his ability is not merely local in scope, and is fitting tribute to his years of study and application in his line.

Dr. and Mrs. George will leave for Portland the latter part of June, combining a pleasure trip with business.

Wichita Engineer Hurt When He Falls From Engine at Water Tower

William Delaney, 905 Tyler street, engineer on the Fort Worth and Denver railway, was injured about 11 o'clock Sunday morning at Dundee when he fell from the top of his engine while taking on water at a water tower.

The injured man was brought to Wichita Falls on the train and was taken to the Wichita General hospital. X-ray photographs of his injuries revealed no broken bones, according to Dr. Bailey R. Collins, attending physician. He suffered severe bruises on the hip and body but no cuts, it was said. He will remain in the hospital for several days.

BOY HURT WHEN AUTO AND TRUCK COLLIDE

Barnell Belew, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Belew, who operate the Lake Road filling station, suffered cuts and bruises when the truck which he was riding and an automobile collided at the corner of Ninth street and Brook avenue at 9:40 o'clock Sunday morning.

Minnie Sawyer of Holliday, who was riding in the automobile, received minor cuts on the forehead. Eliza R. Sawyer, driver of the automobile, and E. S. Belew, driver of the truck, escaped with minor bruises.

The boy was taken to the Wichita General hospital for treatment. He was injured when he was thrown from the truck by the impact of the collision, it was reported.

Raley's $18,000 Suit May Go to Trial Today

Attorneys on both sides Sunday afternoon expressed the belief that Guy C. Raley's $18,000 suit against the county, asking for delinquent tax commissions, would go to trial for the second time in the 78th district court Monday morning. The case was reset last week when conflicting business made the absence of attorneys necessary.

Mr. Raley is seeking a refund of commissions he claims to have turned into the county during the years 1923-1925. A former trial resulted in a hung jury.

Police Arrest Negro After Liquor Raid

A raid on a Bonner street house late Saturday afternoon resulted in the seizure of four half-gallon jars of whisky and the arrest of one negro man, it was reported at police headquarters.

Officers F. E. Summers and A. L. Stubblefield swore out search warrants following investigations made in the last few days. The negro arrested Saturday will be turned over to federal authorities.

Theater's Yo-Yo Contest to Test Skill of Experts

Artistic manipulation will be the basis for judging the yo-yo contest which opens at the Olympic theater Tuesday night at 9:30 o'clock, according to the management.

Contests with the whirring and whirling yo-yo have been held frequently of late with endurance of sustained motion as the chief objective. The little gew-gaw has been made to travel to the end of its string and back many thousands of times without cessation. The contest to be staged at the Olympic, however, will not be won simply by endurance in sustained flight.

The two winners to be selected by the judges each night beginning Tuesday will be chosen because of the ingenuous tricks in which they may have schooled their pet yo-yoes the grace with which they are put through their paces, and general excellence in the art of yo-yo-ry.

A large number of registrations already have been received, it was said. Boys under 16 years of age will compete on Tuesday and Wednesday nights; ladies on Thursday and Friday nights, and men on Saturday and Sunday nights. The 12 finalists chosen during the week will meet on Monday night to compete for a first prize of $10 in gold, $5 for second prize, $2.50 for third, and theater tickets to the remaining nine competitors.

DEATHS

MRS. W. J. LINDSEY

Mrs. W. J. Lindsey, 55, of Arlington, Texas, died in a local hospital at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The body was taken in charge by the Hines mortuary, pending the arrival of Mr. Lindsey Monday, when it will be forwarded to Arlington for interment.

W. M. CARTER

W. M. Carter, 67, pioneer resident of Wichita county, died at his home on the Seymour road about six miles out of town at 7 o'clock Saturday night. Funeral services will be held from the home at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. Arrangements are under the direction of the Hines mortuary. Interment will be in Rosemont Burial park.

Mr. Carter had been a farmer in this district for many years, having lived on the Woodall farm for several years before moving to the residence on the Seymour road. He is survived by one son, J. W. Carter, also living on the Seymour road.

NICHOLS TRIAL OPENS TODAY

Wichitan Faces Jury Third Time in Holdup

The third trial of R. B. Nichols charged with the robbery of the Spoonts Drug store at Ninth and Van Buren last Christmas night, will be called in the 89th district court Monday morning, Sam Spence, district attorney, announced Sunday night that the state would be ready and would insist on a trial. The case was postponed several weeks ago when the defendant personally appealed to the court for a continuance because of his illness. Judge Martin reset the case for June 24 after a physician had pronounced Nichols too ill to attend the trial.

Nichols, with Fred Hostler and Joe Ireland, was indicted after two men held up the Spoonts drug store about 9:30 o'clock on Christmas night, forcing the occupants of the store to lie down on their faces, and rifling the cash register. Hostler, after two trials, one resulting in a hung jury and the second in an acquittal, was convicted on a second indictment several weeks ago and sentenced to the penitentiary for five years. Ireland is one of the principal witnesses for the state.

Both the former trials of Nichols resulted in hung juries.

BARRETTI WANTED IN GALVESTON ROBBERY

GALVESTON, Texas, June 23. (AP)—Ben Barretti, slain in a gang fight in Kansas City, was wanted here in connection with the $6,400 Galveston Dry Dock and Construction company pay roll robbery of May 4, 1929, in which Police Officer T. T. Hawkins, 67, was shot twice and Hugh D. Pike, messenger, was slugged. Three hijackers escaped untouched by fire from Hawkins' gun. The officer recovered.

Daniel J. Dennehy, held in Dallas and wanted in the holdup here, also is wanted with Barretti in connection with a slaying at Los Angeles.

VICTIM'S COMPANION IN DALLAS JAIL

DALLAS, June 23. (AP)—Dallas police today said they had been seeking a man they believed to be Ben J. Barrett, killed in a Kansas City gangland fight last night.

Barrett, known in Kansas City as Fred Roberts and Ben Baretti, was said by Dallas officers to have been a partner of Daniel J. Dennehey, now in jail here. Dennehey was arrested here two weeks ago in connection with a bootleg hijacking.

TEXAN SLAIN IN CUTTING AFFRAY

PALESTINE, Texas, June 23. (UP)—Allegedly because he made slurring remarks about the daughter of another man, W. H. "Doc" Crouch was killed today in a fight on the Miller plantation, north of here. J. O. Lockett, 48, was held in the Anderson county jail tonight in connection with the killing.

Crouch died almost instantly from knife wounds in the neck and chest.

In a statement to the United Press Lockett claimed that Crouch visited his home twice today. On the second visit Crouch made slurring remarks about Lockett's daughter, the latter said.

According to his statement Lockett hit Crouch with his fist and when the latter started to draw a gun he slashed him across the chest with a long bladed pocket knife.

Sheriff W. G. Rogers, who arrested Lockett and brought him to Palestine, said a pistol was found under Crouch's hat near the body when officers arrived.

Justice W. H. Black was conducting an inquest tonight.

The new air service connecting Panama, Nicaragua, Honduras, British Honduras and Cuba is said to be a success, and will be extended to Trinidad and San Juan.

Daniel Pays Tribute to Psalmist In Address to Kay Bible Class

Rotarians Praised for Installation of Radio Receiving Sets In General Hospital Here

Addressing the Kay Bible class at the First Methodist church Sunday, Roy J. Daniel spoke of song and of thanksgiving. He took the 103rd Paslm as the theme for an address which traced the meaning of song and of praise through its influence on human life. The address is quoted below:

"The Rotarians are noted the world over for doing splendid and worth while things. This past week the Rotary club of Wichita Falls, through a committe of which Mr. Robbins in chairman, installed in the General hospital some 40 odd radio receiving sets for the patients there. I hope that some of the patients are listening in to our program this morning. Many men and women on beds of pain and suffering have met God and the Savior face to face. I hope that you met Him today, and that you take His hand and that He takes yours and that you give yourselves to His service mind, body and soul. He is the Great Physician who never fails. He is the one who takes away all the pains of mind, body and soul when our earthly friends and doctors have done their level best for us. Out in El Paso there lives a man whose shattered body is literally held together with many pounds of braces. His cannot sit down without assistance. Yet he says, "there ain't nothin' tough," and smiling all the time, he lives a life of unselfish service to folks worse off than he is. Whenever you think you've got a tough break just look around you and you will find somebody in a worse shape than you are in, and whom you can help.

Fighting Songs

"What is a psalmist? A psalmist is a song writer. Through history is has become known that a singing soldier is a fighting soldier. It is known that a singing army is a fighting, winning army. Thus it was that the southern Frenchmen from Marseilles could not be stopped when they marched northward, singing the "Marseillea"—that stirring martial air they gave to France and the world. King Charles and his gay Cavaliers in England could not stop Cromwell and his Roundheads when the Roundheads rode into battle singing their religious hymns. The strain of "Dixie" still stirs the blood of the Southern people and makes them rise to their feet cheering whenever it is played. And in the world war the American soldiers were given a singing lesson each day to make them a singing army and a victorious army. If you are happy it will be natural for you to want to try to sing at times whether you can or not. It has been said, "If a bird can sing and won't sing, then it ought to be made to sing." Our lesson is the 103 Psalm—A Psalm of praise, or a song of praise.

"Song is beautiful and an inspiring thing. The other morning I got up pretty early—earlier than usual—to help do some house work, but I was happily rewarded by seeing perched upon the topmost branch of a tree in the yard a mocking bird pouring out his little soul in joyous song. He would fly up a little way from his perch and then fly back again, singing with all his might a beautiful greeting to the big round red orb of the sun as it rose in the east. And I thought "why is it a bird can be so happy and man, made in God's image, can be at time so unhappy". Here is the answer: A mocking bird knows not what sin is but man does know. Get rid of sin and you can sing as happily as the mocking bird. The most beautiful passage in literature about a mocking bird that I have ever read, was written by Theordore Roosevelt when he was a cowboy out West.

"This 103rd psalm is a song of thankfulness. The author's soul sings thanks to God and all within him blesses the name of Jehovah. He expresses thanks that his soul forgets not the benefits of God, the God who forgives all our sins and heals all of our diseases. How does God redeem your life from destruction? He does it by the gift of His Son, whom you can accept and follow and obey. The acceptance of Him and His program crowns you with circlets of love and kindness and tender mercy. Your youth will be renewed like the eagle's. Here is how the eagle the monarch of the air, renews his youth: He soars directly toward the sun for hours, then he plunges headon into the water or into land. In old age he strikes the growth upon his beak against the rocks, and then he is able to eat again and live. Let us renew our youth by letting our souls fly toward the Son of Righteousness, and then plunge into the sea of humanity and labor there among our fellow creatures. Each summer, if possible, take a little time off from your work, fly by automobile or train or airplane toward the sun or the mountains, and then return and plunge yourself into the sea of unselfish service. The eagle is fittingly one of our national emblems.

Joy of Song

"Are you oppressed? This Lord of ours will judge. Did he not make known His ways to Moses? He makes known His ways to you whether you accept them or not. Yours is the decision. This God is slow to get angry and is most merciful. Will the time ever come when He will cease to reprove us? Not until we go within His fold is my belief.

"Does He prosecute us for our sins like we ought to be prosecuted? In the Lord we see both the prosecutor and defense counsel at the same time. As a judge He tempers justice with mercy and does not sentence us according to our offenses and our deservings.

"Do you know how far heaven is above earth? No man can tell. Just so great is the Lord's mercy toward all who love Him and follow Him.

"Can you tell how far the east is from the west? The poet has said, "East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet"—that is the situation regarding our sins when they have been removed from us.

"Has your father ever pitied you? Mine has me. On my return from the world war, weary and restless yet a youth, my father it was who opened wide his door to me and poured out upon my crying soul the pity of a proud father as I sought day after day, week after week and month after month for work that would feed and clothe my body. He saw me through gloried with me as I won my fight in civil life. This great God of ours is like a father who pities his child, and He too, all powerful one, will see us through to victory.

"Vergil in his "Aeneid" sang of arms and heroes, and of Aeneas who bore upon his back his aged father Anchises from the destruction of Troy to Italy. The merchant prince sings of his ships of commerce upon the seas. The American people sing of liberty and freedom. Columbus sang of a westward route to the Indies. The Caesars and the Musselinis sing of power. The youth in the springtime sings to his maiden of love. The bird sings to his mate of the nest of grass and twigs in the tree. The mother sings her songs of love and lullaby to her babe in her arms. Let us all today sing the happy songs of thankfulness to God for His many gifts and mercies to us—and the matchless gift of His Son."

his plane was put temporarily out of commission.

The flyer was forced to land his Lockheed-Vega in a field on the outskirts of Du Bois, Pa., which is near Lake Erie, because of bad weather conditions.

Takeoff Attempt Fails

After landing in the field Shoenhair attempted to takeoff, but his plane was in too bad a condition to leave the ground. He then abandoned it and limped to a nearby grocery store where he telephoned J. D. Tew, president of the B. F. Goodrich Tire and Rubber company here who was anxiously awaiting him.

Shoenhair had taken off from Cleveland at 12:26 p. m. today in a fog. He was apprised of bad weather conditions between Cleveland and points in eastern Pennsylvania and he had left his course in order to circle the thunderstorm area.

He was forced down in Cleveland Saturday night when only three hours from Roosevelt field which he hoped to make in a non-stop flight from Los Angeles in an attempt to set a new transcontinental record.

County Officials To Hear Dairy Applicants

Several applicants for the position of dairy expert for Wichita county are expected to appear before the commissioners court at its regular meeting Monday, John P. Marrs, county judge, announced Sunday afternoon. No definite action from the court is to be expected this week, the judge declared, although further plans for establishing the new work will be discussed.

The court has agreed to employ an expert to help the development of the dairying industry within the county at the instance of a committee of bankers and farmers who are backing the movement.

Raley Returns Fees To Auto Owners Here

Half a dozen automobile owners who have paid license fees since June 1 Saturday received refunds amounting to from $2 to $4, and almost 300 more cars are expected to call for the money early this week, Guy C. Raley, county tax collector, announced Sunday. Purchasers of licenses since June 1, paid three-fourths of the full license fee instead of the seven-eights required under the terms of a newly enacted law, the collector explained. The difference is to be returned to the buyers.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Social activity in town—with the exception of the multitudinous weddings—is at a standstill.

Every one with even the slightest claim to social fame is steeled in the countryside awaiting the signal to continue the hot weather pilgrimage to palaces, villages, cottages, bungalows, hotels and boarding houses at Newport, Southampton, Bar Harbor, Narragansett Pier, Watch Hill, the Adirondacks, etc., and from now until the end of next September social frivolities will center about the above mentioned watering places.

Truth to tell, the Newport season has been a bit slow in getting under way, due, I imagine, to the absence of many Newporters, who decided, at the last minute, to spend the late spring and early summer abroad.

Each incoming ocean greyhound, however, brings its quota of Newporters and Southamptonites back to these shores, and a fortnight hence the mightiest members of both sets will take up in the reins along Bellevue avenue and out on the south shore of Long Island.

More and more it is becoming the fad to eschew the continental spas during the mid-summer season, when the tourists and college boys are abroad in great numbers. The increasing importance, in the eyes of American society, of the Grand National Steeplechase race at Liverpool in the spring has much to do with the early migration of the social notables from this side of the Atlantic, and our acclaimed bontons now use the Grand National as an excuse to embark for the old world immediately after the close of the Palm Beach season.

This new order of things has had a marked effect—for the better—on American resorts. When the world war came to an end and the various European watering places made a sensational bid for American patronage, those notables who had been barred from enjoying the social life abroad for five years rused pell-mell to England, France, Switzerland, Italy and Spain. Villas at Newport and Southampton were barred up—and forgotten, as a result the social life at the various resorts declined to a point that alarmed the stay-at-homes.

Rents Climbing

Houses at Newport, Southampton, Bar Harbor, etc., were rented for a song and the clubs at those spas were forced to retrench, due to the absence abroad, throughout the entire summer, of the more celebrated and wealthy members of the colony.

Two years ago the Newporters and Southamptonites began to weary of the continental life, the gambling casinos, the "cures," etc. Slowly but surely their places at Deauville, Trouville, along the Riviera, at the Lido and other old world haunts were taken by the tourists. Then came the intense interest in the Grand National—and the excuse to make springtime excursions to the other side.

Now milady goes abroad in March, shops in Paris for her summer wardrobe in April and spends May and June in London, takin part in the social activities of the British mayfair.

Late June finds her homeward bound to spend July, August and September in her own villa at an American resort.

This return to the fold of the foremost social lights has caused rents to soar at the seaside playgrounds. Houses in Newport that rented for $2,000 per season two or three years ago now bring $5,000. And the same condition holds good at Southampton, Bar Harbor, Narragansett and the other torrid season haunts of the elegantes.

So great is the demand for houses this year that even the most modest "estates" have been grabbed up by men and women whose names are listed in the social register and the American directory of society, and by the time Independence day is fittingly celebrated the greatest summer social season the eastern coast has known since the days before the war will be under way

Society Leader Works

This is, I hear, a very excellent reason for Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's decision not to pass the heated months at her Newport villa.

The Bellevue avenue colony rather hoped Harry and Gertrude would occupy their old-fashioned villa on the cliffs this season, for Mrs. Whitney adds an important sartorial note to any gatherings, and as for the jovial Harry, he always can be counted on to stir up some social excitement for his friends.

Mrs. Whitney's devotion to her art work, however, has cheated the Newport set out of a series of Whitney dinners. For, while it is not generally known—in fact, Gertrude believes she is keeping the tidings a deep, dark secret—Mrs Whitney has already received, or is about to receive, a highly important art commission.

With statues in France, Spain and New York City to her credit, the elder of the dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt's daughters is highly elated over being in a position to do "bigger and better" things, and during the weeks to come, when her intimates are burning social red fire at Newport, Gertrude will be toiling away at her art in the classical marbel "studio" which she erected several years ago on the Whitney estate at Old Westbury.

'Tis an ill wind, however, that does not blow some good and the desertion of the Whitneys has made it possible for Mrs. Whitney's sister ,the Countess Laszlo Szechenyi, to again occupy the Whitney villa.

If Arthur Von Brieson Menken has his way he will hop the Atlantic in his new specially built Wright motored biplane the coming summer. I, for one, do not believe tales current that the affable and daring Arthur is encountering paternal objection to his proposed flight, via Greenland. Knowing Arthur's charming mother, Mrs. S. Stanwood Kenken, and being cognizant of that lady's love of aerial navigation, I would not be surprised to hear that she will accompany Arthur, provided his proposed flight goes through. In a quiet way Mrs. Menken has been a trailblazer for years. She is a woman of courage and conviction and has made many flights with her son. Only recently they hopped down to Washington for a wedding and returned to New York in time for a dinner and theater engagement. My advice to society is to keep a watchful optic on Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken this summer. She may do something sensational—and historic.

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

The Modern Young Woman

The charge is too frequently made these days that the modern young woman is entirely too frivolous and altogether lacking in a serious outlook upon life.

This, of course, is pure nonsense and comes usually from mildewminded folk who believe in living not only their own lives but the lives of young people as well.

Young people today have understanding, courage and, also the capacity to resign themselves to things, people and conditions over which they have no control. Wherefore, in the presence of their elders' narrow tyrannies, selfishness and possessiveness they remain amiably indifferent.

Of course, what is meant by the term "modern young woman" is a matured girl who thinks and acts herself and has a broader outlook and deeper understanding than the average or old-fashioned girl.

In all truth it should be admitted that the modern young woman—so-called—is in the minority. Even grown women are not entirely emancipated as yet. Traditions and old customs still shackle them and narrow the orbits of their lives.

There came quietly to New York some time ago the daughter of Sir Herbert Samuel, a British magnate. She went to work in a department store. I get my information secondhand but what I have heard about her confirms what I have always maintained about the modern young woman, that, instead of being frivolous, she has a magnificent, blended ability to enjoy life while adjusting herself with fine self-discipline, to it.

Miss Nancy Samuel, I a minformed, was just such a young woman. She knew life in the upper classes in England and had bothered to find out, at first-hand, about the middle and lower classes. And she brought more than a mere academic curiosity to her research. There was not even the suggestion of professional sociology in her curiosity and manner. There was humanism—and the desire to understand life and people and to better the general lot.

In that spirit this modern young woman came to New York to work—not as the pampered daughter of a wealthy English nobleman but as a sensitive, sympathetic, understanding and thinking human being—and in pursuit of that purpose she worked as all the other girls in that store worked.

She was just a modern young woman—and if she danced, and played bridge, and read the latest books, and went to the theater and occasionally made a little whoopee—what of it? Are not working girls human beings, too?

Betty Brainerd will be glad to help her readers with their problems. Send a self-addressed stamped envelope to her in care of this paper.

MEN FALL FOR CLEVER WOMEN

Dix Tells How to Win Your Husband's Love

With the Initial Advantages of Being His Wife and Being Always Present, Any Clever Woman Can Make Her Husband Fall in Love With Her by Catering to His Tastes.

A woman asks this question: "If I marry a man who likes and admires me but who is not romantically and passionately in love with me, what chance have I of winning his love?"

Every chance, if you are a clever woman and know how to play the game. Not a chance if you are a Dumb Dora. It all depends upon your technique.

It is the popular belief that husbands are more than likely to fall out of love with their wives, but that they never fall in love with them. This is a mistake. Many a wife has fanned a feeble and flickering flame of affection in a fickle husband's heart into a steady fire of devotion and multitudes of men will tell you that they care more for their wives every day they live with them and that their wives are more necessary to their happiness, and that they love them better on their silver wedding day than they did on the day they were married.

Of course, the woman who has a husband who has married on the sensible-match platform has no magic that can change him into a thrilling and impassioned lover, but not all men are born Romeos any more than they are born with tenor voices. There are plenty of men whose feet are so firmly planted on the ground that it is impossible for them ever to soar off among the clouds. No emotion will ever quicken their heartbeats dangerously. No woman will ever drive them to suicide.

Nevertheless these sane and safe and stolid men, who have not a palpitation in their entire systems, are capable of a deep and abiding affection that will last long after the poetry-quoting philanderers have taken their wares to another shrine, and are singing their songs at another woman's feet, and so while a woman cannot turn the man she has married into a sheik, she can turn him into Friend Husband.

The wife who wishes to win her husband's love has four big factors in her favor. To begin with, she has propinquity, which is universally acknowledged to be the greatest matchmaker in the world. Throw any two young people of average attractiveness together day after day and they are pretty sure to fall in love, or to think that they do. Look how many men marry their landladies' daughters. Or the girl next door. Or the girls they work with. Or the girls who were at a house party.

So the wife who wishes to vamp her husband starts off with the initial advantage of being Sally-on-the-spot. Other women have to ply their arts at long distance. She can work hers at close range where she can make every stroke tell. Of course, marriage is supposed to disillusion a man with a woman. If it does, that is her fault. She can be far more agreeable and entertaining and charming and seductive as a wife than she was as a sweetheart. She can make him come to depend on her for his comfort, his pleasure, for the spice of life, so that everything is flat, stale and unprofitable without her.

The next advantage that the wife who wishes to win her husband's love has, is '..at she has his number to the last figure, and so knows how to plan her campaign. She knows his taste, his habits, his likes and dislikes, his faults and his foibles, his weaknesses and his strength. She knows whether to appeal to his heart or his head.

She knows whether to attack his stomach with good dinners, or whether to bring up her shock troops and capture his eyes with knee-length skirts and see-more backs. She knows his individual taste in women and whether he prefers clinging vines and morons, or good sports and high-brows. And above all, she has the priceless knowledge of where the sore spots in his vanity are, and where a woman may with most profit to herself, apply the healing ointment of her flatteries.

Still another advantage that the wife has who wishes to win her husband's love is that she is his wife. Many women hold that this is a disadvantage, and that the chief reason that men tire of their wives is simply and solely because they are tied to those particular women, but this is a mistake. The mere fact that a woman is a man's wife and that he picked her out and that she represents his taste and judgment and is part of his possessions gives her a fictitious value in his eyes.

The same halo is about her that surrounds his automobile, his radio, the tailor he goes to, the clubs he belongs to. Every man you meet has the best car in the world and that particular make has advantages that no other car has. Every man's radio has some peculiar excellence. Every man's tailor can build a better coat than any other and every man's club is the only one just because it is his.

And that is his attitude about his wife. He doesn't criticise her as he does other women. She doesn't look as homely to him as she would if she was another man's wife. He isn't as much bored with her as he would be with Mrs. Somebody Else. His self-love throws its mantle of indulgence over her and hides her blemishes, and so the husband's egotism becomes the wife's ally.

Finally, the wife who wishes to win her husband's love has the enormous advantage of a common interest, which is one of the strongest ties that can bind two human beings together. The woman of whom a man knows nothing and with whom he must make polite conversation bores him to tears, no matter how brilliant she is, but he can talk on forever to the woman to whom he can say, "Do you remember," and who has done the things that he has done and knows the people that he knows.

Therefore, no woman can make herself such a fascinating companion as the wife to whom a man can talk endless shop and who will hang enthralled upon his words because his hopes and plans and aspirations are hers. And no woman can make herself so dear to a man as the woman who has fought side by side with him, who has wept with him and laughed with him and played with him and who is comrade, lover and wife all in one.

Oh, yes, a wife can win her husband's love.

WAISTLINES GO UP IN PARIS

But the Skirts Still Hover Above the Knee

By PRINCESS ALI FAZIL

PARIS, June 23. (UP)—The high waistlines, reigning fashion of the stately Napoleonic era has been revived by dress designers to lend a distinctive touch to the breezy modern short skirts.

While but a few short years ago the waistline hung as close to the knee as anatomically possible the present trend is to the opposite extreme. The higher the waistline the higher the price right now and Paris dressmakers rarely do things by halves.

The line climbed two inches between Easter and Whitsun, and between Whitsun and the opening of the smart racing season the line rose inches more. The waist is now so high that dresses look longer although the knees are still in full view.

Paul Poiret is responsible for the rebirth of the high waist but most of the famous dressmaking houses have fallen in line.

Longer skirts may be an actuality before winter. It was a hard fight but the dressmakers appear to have conquered. As a compromise dresses will stay short this summer but the chill blasts probably will find skirts wipping about the nether calves.

The dressmakers have started on the evening dresses. The new gowns are long ad short at the same time. This effect is gained by making a short dress as usual, two and a half giner's width below the kneecap, and then tacking on flounces around the back.

From the front the wearer appears to be dressed knee length but graceful and the tail almost trailing on the floor is reminiscent of other days.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, June 23. (US)—She was a little woman, with a world weary look. She followed a very black porter to a very good train. She was going to a good place, according to her friends and the folders. It was her vacation.

The poor woman had read so many folders that she had to get new reading glasses. She sewed evenings when she came home from work, to make clothes like the Wagstaffs and the Vanderbilts wore in the society pictures.

She spent all she could dig up to get smart luggage. To an unmarried woman there always lurks, in a vacation, the possibility of a man, a fall wedding and no more work! She got a new permanent wave, a meager bathing suit and three new very savage looking necklaces If that wasn't going to be a vacation she didn't know one—which was probably very near the truth.

She arrived at the lake resort full of plans.

On the beach were any number of fat, rich women. The girls were all pretty and smart—all but one, a snub-nosed little something with very white teeth and a gra—nd laugh! She was tiny and wore commonplace clothes.

The first three days of our lady's vacation she was ill from sheer tired, brought on by all that getting ready. The next three she sat in the sun to get a tan to take home with her. She didn't get brown, she burned. The next three days she nursed her blistered arms and she wasn't pretty to look upon. Then when she got ready for the onslaught, if the snub nosed nobody with the dowdy clothes and the grand disposition hadn't cornered all the men.

Pug nose went fishing with them—she was the party. When she turned in at night the party was over. The man who got up earliest went with her for her morning walk, and there were never so few as one.

So the vacation lady went home and pouted about the place, the kind of men and the messy little pug nose.

Someone should explain to her about vacations.

It's something that is no good to a grouch or a pouter, because if nothing is right at home you can bet it's going to be worse away from home.

Nothing is any fun for a woman who can't do anything or go anywhere until the scenery is set and elaborate costuming provided. The people who can enjoy life and make others enjoy it are the ones who can throw a tooth brush and a change of linen into any old bag and run for a train.

A Denver woman who has traveled extensively, taking her nieces around the world as they graduated from college, says that she has at last come to the conclusion that the interesting people are the ones who stay at home and work.

If there is some place you are longing to go think that over. It's some consolation.

PROSPERITY has just added another brace to the business structure. The sterling silversmiths of America, following fast in the successful wake of furniture, automobile, radio and sewing machine, have decided that much more of their merchandise may be sold if the purchaser is permitted to make time payments.

A nation-wide credit will serve both dealer and consumer—thus freeing the jewelry trade from the sympathetic declines that formerly kept periodic company with unemployment and depression.

The installment plan is no longer a Cinderella in the house of commerce.

Finance, checking books, is satisfied that consumption is always steadier and more continuous where goods are procurable with a little money down and generous arrangements to liquidate the rest of the indebtedness.

Wage-earners and small-income folk assay as much honesty to the thousand as mercantile concerns and big industrial borrowers. The soundest security on earth is character. The late J. P. Morgan discovered that fact decades ago, and expanded his operations accordingly.

Deadbeats are few and far between. Laborers and immigrants seem just as worthy of open accounts as bond-clippers and property-holders. Otherwise neighborhood shops would daily go bankrupt by the score, and the second-hand market be flooded with reclaimed cars and household equipment.

BANKING interests are killing two birds with one stone when a former franchise of wealth is made a common carrier and every mass and class alike is enabled to possess qualities which cash prices once kept indefinitely out of common use.

Generalized credit is the surest means to uninterrupted production and stabilized outlet.

Wall Street is reducing dividend irregularity wherever it supplies corporations with the resources to lower retail resistance and enlarge distribution areas.

Electric washers and ironers, refrigerators and vacuum cleaners owe their widespread adoption solely to the ease with which they can be obtained.

The automobile saturation point would have been passed 10 years ago if long-drawn credit hadn't left a car at every door.

Omar Khayyam was a better poet than business advisor when he sang: "Take the cash and let the credit go."

Nowadays, even the federal government extends the installment privilege.

And yet, so recently as 1916, Printers' Ink published a series of conclusions from Detroit's best minds, in which the cock-eyed world was emphatically assured that installment selling could never become an automotive practice. And what's more, the town's leading opinionnaires proved their case, book and chapter.

Nor must we forget how lately all the prize economists convinced logic and statistics that the country was rushing to the "demnition bow-wows" if the reserve bank and associated fiscal banks didn't halt the grab for luxuries too suddenly made available to millions theretofore beyond their selling range.

Put not thy faith in figures.

A New Epoch in History

WHEN Ambassador Dawes and Prime Minister MacDonald sat down together in Scotland the other day to discuss reduction of the British and American navies, they brought to an end a long epoch in world history.

It is early, of course, to say just what the upshot of the new British-American naval negotiations will be. But it is fairly safe to assume that some sort of plan will be devised by which the two fleets will be removed from the plane of competition. And that, all things considered, will be something new in the world.

To understand the significance of it, you must go back into history.

Since the time of Drake and Frobisher, the British empire has staked its whole national existence on its fleet. Years before Roosevelt was born, it acted on his famous maxim, "Tread softly, but carry a big stick." In good times and in bad, the empire insisted on maintaining a navy strong enough to whip any possible combination of enemies.

This tradition was something no Englishman ever questioned. Sometimes the national treasury was badly strained to keep the navy going. Sometimes very questionable expedients had to be resorted to, as when the press-gangs waylaid peaceable citizens and compelled them to serve on the warships. Sometimes the foreign policy that grew out of this tradition was cruel and unjust, as it was during the Napoleonic wars when England twice formed a war on Denmark.

But, through all the years, it had one great virtue. It worked. The great British navy, with squadrons sailing in all parts of the world, made possible the mighty development of the British empire.

Now, after more than three centuries, this tradition is being abandoned.

The mere fact that a British prime minister was willing to sit down with the ambassador from a foreign power and discuss naval reduction shows that the old policy of maintaining naval superiority at all costs has been abandoned. No longer is England determined to be ready to force her will on the rest of the world with the guns of her warships. The old epoch is ended, and a new one is beginning.

What the new one may be will depend on the wisdom and foresight of the statesmen of Europe and America. If they are selfish and blind it can result in a tragic failure. But if they are big enough, it can bring a tremendous amount of good.

It might, conceivably, mean the passing of force as a means of settling international differences. That is what it actually can and will mean, if the plain people of this and other nations resolve that it must, and give their resolve a voice. There is more hope for world peace today than at any time in the past.

The tradition of war is a strong one. But if the old British naval tradition can be given up, the whole war tradition is in peril.

Directors W. T. C of C. Act Wisely

THE RECORD NEWS believes the directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce have acted wisely in selecting A. M. Bourland, president of that organization, to act as its general manager until the next annual convention to be held in the fall at El Paso.

The problem before the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is to conserve its organization until its membership has had time to consider what its policies and plan of operation are to be. For some time it has been apparent that if the organization was to continue as a representative organization of its section, changes in its makeup and operation would be necessary. At present there is no unanimity of opinion as to what these changes ought to be. In the next few months there will be a good deal of thinking throughout West Texas on this subject and by the time of the El Paso meeting there ought to be fairly well defined plans ready for the action of the membership.

Mr. Bourland has the confidence of the membership. The staff of the chamber is well organized for its routine work. There are not likely to be any problems arise to which he cannot give the necessary time, and there seems to be no reason why the organization should not continue to function under his management until a new plan of operation can be agreed upon.

Certainly it is better to go slowly and surely and with personnel familiar with the work than to attempt at this time to employ a new manager and to adopt new policies before hearing from the membership.

Lake Wichita Traffic

BOTH SAFETY and convenience would be increased on the Lake Wichita roads if official steps were taken to provide more efficient handling of the traffic that pours out to the Lakeside park since the inauguration of Wichita Falls' new $250,000 resort. Sooner or later, it seems, the problem of handling the Lakeside traffic must force itself into the knowledge of the proper officials, if it has not already done so.

Wichita Falls residents have expended a considerable sum of money in the building of the park. The city's official organizations have urged and invited residents of this area to take advantage of the facilities, with a justifiable pride in the fine plant that has been provided for the amusement and entertainment of hundreds of visitors as well as home folks. This county owes to these people the right to go to their destination with the minimum of inconvenience and hazard. Private enterprise built Lakeside park, it is true, but it is the duty of local government to provide protection to its citizens in their legitimate search for entertainment.

At least two motorsycle officers are needed to handle the Lake Wichita traffic, it seems to The Records News. Their appointment should not be delayed at the possible cost of other lives, and at the risk of having our new park known as a fine place to go, but a "tough" place to reach.

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, June 23.—They've discovered the biggest money making night club in America. It is the Embassy club in New York, operating on a membership club plan with 1,500 enrolled at $150 a year. It will net $200,000 this season, they say. The capacity of the room is 400.

Under the Embassy membership there is no couvert charge except $2 for guests of members—which may explain the club's popularity. The club's what you might call "very exclusiv," catering chiefly to the Park avenue set.

North of Washington Square

Park avenue has sprung up. Fifth avenue has passed from the status of a residential thoroughfare to a high class business street and all New York has undergone terrific development.

But there is one street on which only three full transfers of property have been made in the present century. It is Washington Square North. The fine row of fashionable old homes in that street stand with their old owners or descendants of owners. Fifteen years ago four houses changed hands, and 10 years ago Mr. George E. Chisholm bought Nos. 26, 27 and 28. Since then the old line has remained impregnable.

No. 1 North Washington belongs to W. A. Stewart, and at No. 2 is David Rumsey, both wealthy society men of New York.

The houses are given great care and on the first floor window sills of a number of them are still displayed the original thermometers putout years ago when it was the fashion to display them. One of the residents, Miss Alice Delano Weeks, alone maintains the once general custom of going for a drive in her brougham behind a pair of horses daily at a set hour.

An Optimist Returns

Charles Hopkins, the producer of few but successful plays, returned from London the other day. With all the talk of a bad season in the air, it was bad taste for Mr. Hopkins, perhaps, to return with a smile.

The season, for him, has been a successful one, his "The Perfect Alibi" still running with no sign that it will close for some time. He has a new Milne play he intends to put on the boards next season. While in England he spent a few days in A. A. Milne's country home in Sussex.

A Future Citizen

And another gentleman who arrived happy and optimistic the other day was Maj. A. Hamilton Gibbs, novelist, who came here to receive his final citizenship papers.

The success of Gibbs as a writer is indicated by this statement he made: "Marry a lawyer, as I did." His wife, formerly Miss Jeanette Phillips, of Boston, has aided Gibbs in connection with copyrights and contracts and, according to Gibbs himself, has saved him five or six thousand dollars since he married here in 1919.

An Artist Comes Home

In a front apartment in one of those large old houses between Ninth and Tenth avenues on Twenty-first street, where high ceilings and big windows make a light, airy place for a painter, Mrs. Frieda Das has settled herself and her easel, her canvases and colors. She wants to paint America.

She returned to the United States recently after nine years' absence in India and other out-of-the-way places.

Adventurous Calls

Many well known explorers in New York are on the verge of going forth to discover and to chart new places on the map of the world. Harold Noice, ethnologist, plans to sail around North America and gather data on meteors and such. Captain Robert Bartlett, Perry's skipper, will sail soon for a four months' trip to the arctic. He's even thinking of taking "talking pictures" of the Esquimaux.

Gene Lamb will try to climb the hitherto unclimbed Mr. Everest. William J. Morden has his eyes on North Asia, where he will travel for the museum of natural history. The Himalayas are the goal of Capt. John Noel and Walter Wood. Donald A. Cadzow pierces the Canadian northwest (not for the movies, but for the British museum), and Ernest Schoedsack, who photographed "Grass" and "Chang," is trying to find some other inaccessible place to visit.

The Once Over

The Farm Relief Bill Explained

Sir:

I am a farmer and the way I need relief is nobody's business. I could use some at once, but I don't quite understand how it works. Would you mind helping me?—Puzzled.

PHILLIPS

Ans. — 1: The bill creates a Federal Board of nine members and gives eight of them a salary of $12,000 a year, rain or shine. This will relieve the average farmer by assuring him there is that much money in the world.

2: This board is authorized to make loans from a revolving fund of $500,000,000. This fund revolves at the rate of 26,000 revolutions per minute and the farmer's job is to get aboard while it is in motion without getting his ears torn off in the mechanism.

3: This money is to be passed out through Stablization Corporations (or Fairy Godmothers) when, as and if. The stablizers are authorized to buy, sell or exchange surplus wheat, sweet corn, cabbages, onions, tomatoes, cucumbers and other vegetables (except spinach and cauliflower.)

4: This is how the plan works. When a farmer is in a jam with his crops and needs relief he proceeds to the nearest stablization corporation. Stablization corporations will be stationed about the country at convenient points and will be distinguished by squeaky shoes.

5: Upon visiting the stablization tent the farmer will be told to go home and write a letter. He will write the letter and send it in. A stenographer will open it and destroy it.

6: The farmer will send a second letter. The board will reply by sending him a set of blanks to be filled out. The blanks will contain 168 questions, all a little more involved than those found in income tax blanks.

7: At this point the farmer calls in his lawyer and has the thing interpreted.

8: He sends the blank back to the stablising board, which promptly returns it to him within a stinging rebuke for not printing his name instead of writing it and for answering the question, "How long since you have had varicose veins?" on the wrong line.

9: The farmer corrects the blank and returns it with a plea for immediate assistance. He sends along a liquid tomato to indicate what is happening to the crop.

10: The board sets a date for a hearing.

11: The farmer reports for the hearing after a drive of 656 miles and discovers that it has been adjourned as two of the board members had to attend a fly-casting tournament.

12: The curtain is lowered one year to denote a lapse of time.

13: The farmer sees a few political bosses and gets an audience the following November. He states his case and is turned over for cross-examination. He became confused answering questions such as, "Where were you on the evening of June 3, 1928?" and decides to plead guilty.

14: He pleads that he was in a daze when he asked farm relief and didn't know what he was doing.

15: The board, taking into consideration his age and the fact it is his first offense, suspends judgment and lets him go home on a promise he will never bother it again.

16: The farmer abandons farming and opens a gasoline station and hot-dog stand.

The GREEN SHADOW - By Herman Landon

(Copyright by Public Ledger)

"You are a rascal, Axelson, and in league with rascals"

While Captain Summers is meditating on the escapades of "The Pleasoon," whom he is convinced is really his friend, Martin Dale, Mr. Alexander Ferryman calls and requests that strange happenings at 262 Bank street, the house next to the one in which he lives, be investigated. Axelson, a watchman employed by Ferryman to guard the house in which he lived before he moved next door after his wife had deserted him, has heard footsteps and seen an eerie green light.

Just as Ferryman is showing the captain a picture of his wife, the telephone rings and a voice tells of finding a woman's body at 262 Bank street. Summers and Ferryman hurry there. The dead woman is Ferryman's wife. Summers finds only one clue, a piece of a green lens.

"The Pleasoon," who preys upon the rich and then offers the return of his loot on the payment of 10 per cent of its value to charity, has written a note to Adele Castle, requesting a meeting in Central Park. Adele has had a terrifying experience. She was taken by a mysterious Miss Conway to a strange light, she could glimpse only the outline of a man calling himself Dr. Moffett, who tells her he holds evidence which would convict her father of being connected with a crooked financial deal and send him to prison. Mr. Castle tells Adele Dr. Moffett demands blackmail of $100,000.

Summers continues his investigations and finds a band from a Verona, the special sort of cigar Martin Dale smokes. The captain and Dale meet in a restaurant and save that Dale seems to know something about a green light and admits that there are few Veronas in the country. Summers learns nothing.

Adele and Dale meet. He tells her he was present during her strange interview with Dr. Moffett, which took place at 262 Bank street, and promises to help her.

She smiled vaguely. "I think I understand. And I—I think you are just splendid!"

"Well, opinions differ. Today I was lunching with a man who wants to put me in jail. He may succeed some day, but first I want to accomplish a number of things. You can help me by permitting me to help you! Will you?"

"Oh, gladly!"

He fixed her with a lingering, faintly smiling glance. "Great! If Doctor Moffett could see you now he would shake in his boots. We'll put a crimp in his dirty game. But where to begin? I had an idea this morning.

"Now—if the woman who was murdered last night is the same person you knew as Miss Conway, that complicates the situation. I must mull over it a while. I may make a call or two this evening. You may hear from me tomorrow morning. In the meantime, remember the caterpillar."

"I shan't forget," she promised. She smiled brightly again. Impulsively she reached out her hand, and their alliance was sealed with a clasp.

Dale remained seated on the bench as she walked away, watching the eager, graceful motions of her fresh young limbs. A little sigh escaped him.

"Steady, old boy!" he told himself. "The Picaroon mustn't look too deeply into eyes like those."

Dale Makes Inquiries

At 7 o'clock that evening, Dale made his second appearance within two days at No. 262 Bank street. His former visit had been in a strange guise and in an unceremonious fashion, and his mode of entry had been somewhat suspicious in character.

He had learned many things, and he hoped to learn more this evening. On the present occasion, however, he appeared in Martin Dale's customary fastidious garb, and there was nothing doubtful about his manner of approach. Carrying himself like a man with a clear purpose and a mind that harbored no questionable designs, he ascended the steps and rang the bell.

A wait followed. Not a sound came from the interior. The windows looking out upon the street were darkened. An air of gloom and mystery hung over the old-fashioned house. Possibly the police had finished their investigation by this time. It was probable the body had been removed, that the house would soon resume its humdrum and colorless existence. But in the next house, Dale knew, there sat a grieving old man whose faith had been cruelly shattered.

He rang again. Then he leaned over the stoop and looked at the windows of the adjoining house. Through a shade on the second floor shone a faint glimmer. The rest of the house was as dark as the one before which he was standing. Doubeless it was behind the one lighted window that Ferryman was spending the darkest hours of his life, grieving over a memory that had ended in stark tragedy.

"Poor fellow," Dale thought.

Then his reflections broke off. Footfalls sounded within the door. A light shone through the fanlight above. The door was opened cautiously and a gray head appeared in the opening.

"Good evening, Axelson," said Dale pleasantly.

The old caretaker gave a startled mutter, as if surprised that a stranger should know his name. In a casual way Dale inserted a foot in the narrow opening. With no apparent exertion of force he widedend the opening and stepped inside, then closed the door behind him.

"What do you want?" Axelson demanded ungraciously. A gray, mottled pallor hung over his lean face, but his eyes were sharp and penetrating.

"I am looking for Dr. Moffett," Dale announced, coming forward a little. "He lives here, doesn't he?"

"Dr. Moffett?" Axelson spoke the name as if he had never heard it until now. He shook his bent, grizzled head. "No, you're mistaken. No one by that name lives here."

"This is No. 262 Bank street, isn't it?"

"In This Very Room"

"Yes, but there's no Dr. Moffett here. If you're looking for a doctor, you will find one a few doors down the block."

"I am looking for Dr. Moffett," said Dale, his voice pleasant but firm, "and I know he lives here. At any rate, he was living here yesterday. A certain young lady called on him."

The old caretakers' head jerked back a little. For an instant his eyelids drew together over a look of trepidation. It vanished quickly, but Dale's alert senses had registered it.

"You're mistaken," said Axelson curtly. "No Dr. Moffett has ever lived here, and no young lady has set foot within this house in years."

"The mistake is yours, Axelson," Dale declared amiably. "Don't take offense, please. Everybody's memory slips a cog now and then. The young lady in question called here yesterday morning. Unless I am mistaken"—and Dale moved forward briskly as he spoke—"Dr. Moffett interviewed her in this very room."

With a hoarse cry of indignation, the old servant sprang after him, but he was a moment too late. Dale in a few seconds he had found the was already inside the library, and switch that flashed a clear, white light over the room. It shone in the servant's furrowed face, grayishly pale with frustration and anger, and caused him to blink his sunken eyes as he glared at Dale.

"This is an outrage, sir!" he declared. "What do you mean?"

"Please close the door," said Dale gently, and Axelson did so with habitual obedience. "I wish to ask you a few questions."

"I won't have it, sir." The old caretaker drew himself up. There was a certain dignity about him as he squared his shoulders within the frayed and faded frock coat he wore, a dignity suggestive of a well-trained butler. "Unless you leave this room instantly I shall call the police."

"Do, by all means," said Dale suavely. He was moving leisurely about the room, examining various objects, and giving particularly attention to the lighting fixtures. "The police will be interested to know how you attend to your duties."

"What do you mean?" There was a trace of surly defiance in the servant's voice.

"I mean that you are a rascal, Axelson, and that you are in league with rascals. Doctor Moffett is one of them. Contrary to your master's wishes, and unbeknown to him, you are giving Doctor Moffett the use of the house for his crooked game. I know all about it. Suppose I tell the police?"

Axelson shrugged. "Tell them! You can't prove anything."

Dale, pausing in his movements about the room, gave him a level look. He asked himself again, as he had many times during the afternoon, how certain recent activities within the house could have been possible without the caretaker's connivance.

Yet he was not blind to the circumstance, pointed out by Summers during luncheon, that it was Axelson himself who had reported some of these mysterious developments to his master. He might have done so, of course, to throw dust in Mr. Ferryman's eyes and make a show of innocence and faithful service. Dale decided to try another chance shot.

"You may be right, Axelson. Some things are hard to prove. But there is one little matter the police would be greatly interested to hear about, and that concerns Miss Conway."

Who Is Miss Conway?

Dale watched him with keen eyes as he spoke. The effect of his words exceeded his most extravagant expectations. Axelson recoiled as from a physical blow. A mask seemed to drop from his face, revealing a countenance hideously scarred by an evil conscience. He pulled himself together with a readiness that excited Dale's admiration, but the latter had seen enough.

"Conway—Miss Conway?" Axelson was searching his memory. "I don't believe I've ever heard the name."

"You're a liar, Axelson," said Dale suavely. "Miss Conway is the woman who was murdered in this house last night."

"Oh, you mean Mrs. Ferryman!" His dissimulation was so perfect that again Dale's admiration was aroused.

"Yes, Mrs. Ferryman, alias Miss Conway. The two were one, and you know it."

"That's ridiculous, sir!"

"It's the truth. Don't lie, Axelson. Miss Conway or Mrs. Ferryman, was in cahoots with Doctor Moffett, and you served them both, betraying your master.

"It would serve you jolly well right if I should step over in the next house and report your treachery to Mr. Ferryman."

Axelson's face sagged. The defiance was gone from it in an instant. "I wouldn't do that, sir. Poor Mr. Ferryman has suffered enough. If you go to him with talk like that, it will just about kill him. It isn't true, of course, and there never was any Doctor Moffett as far as I know, but it would give Mr. Ferryman a shock just the same, and in his present condition he can't stand it.

"You see, he has never believed that his wife was a bad woman—just frivolous and a bit foolish. Why not let him go on thinking that way? His memory of her is all that he has left, and you might leave him that, instead of making ugly and false insinuations."

Dale marveled. He was firmly convinced now that Axelson was a scoundrel, but this plea seemed to reveal another side of his character, a sense of devotion and loyalty to the man he had deceived. It was either that, or else Axelson was playing a very subtle and crafty game and he was playing it to perfection!

Dale pretended acquiescence. "Very well, I shan't go to Mr. Ferryman just now. I don't relish the idea of destroying the poor devil's illusions. For the present he may go on thinking that his wife was a good woman and that you are a trustworthy servant. In return I expect a few candid and truthful answers from you."

"Yes, sir," said Axelson humbly.

"Who is Doctor Moffett?"

"I never heard of him, sir. I swear it. It's the honest truth."

"You know there has been a great deal of trespassing in this house, don't you?"

"I've noticed something of that sort, but nothing definite. Things have disappeared from time to time, and I've heard footsteps and doors closing and opening in the night, just as I told Mr. Ferryman, but that's absolutely all."

"You're forgetting the green light."

"Yes, sir, that's right. Only the other night, when I opened the door to see what was going on, a green light was turned on me. It sort of dazzled me. And that same thing has happened several times."

"You have no idea where it comes from?"

"None at all, sir. It's the queerest thing!"

"You know nothing about a certain individual who appears to possess the faculty of rendering himself invisible?"

"Invisible?" Axelson's lips dangled open. "You are joking now, sir."

Axelson Explains

Dale dropped the subject. "Well, let's hear what you know about Miss Conway. Don't tell me you didn't know that Miss Conway and Mrs. Ferryman were the same person, because when I first mentioned her name you were so startled I could have knocked you down with a feather."

Axelson appeared acutely distressed. He fidgeted, shifted his weight from one foot to the other, and mopped the perspiration from his forehead. Gradually he grew calmer. A semblance of his former dignity came back.

"You did surprise me, sir," he confessed. "I thought I was the only man alive who knew about that. The police haven't got an inkling of the fact. Mr. Ferryman hasn't either. I don't see how you got hold of the secret."

"Never mind that. How long had Miss Conway, or Mrs. Ferryman, been back in town?"

"Only a few months, sir."

"How did it happen Mr. Ferryman never saw her during those months?"

"Because she kept out of his sight. You see, there were reasons——"

"Well, go on."

Axelson swallowed hard. Again he straightened his bent figure and fixed his interlocutor with a look of feeble defiance. "I've said enough—too much, maybe. I've nothing more to tell. I've sunk pretty low, I guess, but there's a limit. I've got a few shreds of honor left, and I am hanging on to them. You can do your damnedest, sir, but I won't say any more."

Dale viewed him with amazement. Again the question came back—was Axelson a man with a dual nature, a blend of good and wickedness, or a consummate scoundrel?

"You mean you can't say more without violating a confidence?"

"It's worse than that, sir."

"And you still insist there is no such person as Doctor Moffett?"

"If there is, I've never heard of him or seen him."

Dale was at a loss how to proceed. All he had gained was confirmation of the theory suggested by Miss Castle, that Miss Conway and Mrs. Ferryman had been one and the same person. The mystery of her return and the events that led up to her death appeared securely locked up within Axelson's grizzly head. He knew no more about Doctor Moffett than he had known before. His search for the explanation of the green light had been fruitless.

His forehead puckered in thought. Absently he glanced along the wood paneling at one side of the room. Suddenly his roving eyes paused and contracted. Was there a flaw in the woodwork or could it mean—

The opening of the door scattered his thoughts. He turned quickly away from the object of his contemplation. In the doorway stood a tall, white-faced man with a stricken look in his eyes. His dignified garb hung loosely about a figure that appeared to have suddenly lost all its elasticity. For a little he stood there, gazing about him in a weary and somewhat near-sighted manner, and then his eyes fixed on Dale with a more or less questioning expression.

"Who is this gentleman?" he inquired of Axelson.

"I don't know, Mr. Ferryman. He hasn't told me his name. He has been inquiring about a Doctor Moffett."

"Doctor Moffett?" The name fell in slack and lifeless tones from Mr. Ferryman's lips. He shook his head. "You may go, Axelson. I'll attend to the gentleman."

Axelson departed, but at the door he paused for a moment, and his eyes signaled a message to Dale. A slight nod was the response.

With a dragging step Mr. Ferryman came forward and surveyed the visitor with lusterless eyes. The inspection seemed to satisfy him.

"Axelson told me you were inquiring for some one," he said courteously, but in a flat and tired voice.

Enjoying Your Beach Vacation

The annual family quarrel of whether the vacation should be at the mountains or at the beach is now in full swing in many parts of the land. Whether you finally select the mountains or the seashore, you should live so as to obtain the greatest possible benefit from your vacation. You can return full of health and vitality from either place, or you can return a frazzled bundle of nerves.

Vacations are usually planned with only one object, and that is to have a good time. One often finds that it takes weeks to recover from a vacation which was not planned from a health standpoint. Often one is worse off in health and spirits. A change of scenery and of habits during the vacation should be productive of marked benefit, but this is often not true.

It is a good plan to resolve that this year you will not make the same mistakes of previous years. Should you decide to live at the beach, it is good to select your living quarters as close to the seashore as possible, and have your bed close to the window so that you can obtain the fresh breeze of sea air during the eight hours of sleep you should take each night. The first thing in the morning, put on your bathing suit and take your morning calisthenics on the sand. If you have not been exercising much, do not overdo at first, but gradually increase the exercise each day as the strength of your muscles permits. After a few of these exercises, take a walk or a run for at least a mile along the beach. Rest on the sand every few minutes. Then slowly enter the water and enjoy your morning swim in the breakers. A five or ten minute swim is enough to get the best results. After emerging from the water, return to your room at once and dress for breakfast. You will probably have a good appetite, but it is best not to overeat, and a simple breakfast of eggs, toast and stewed fruit will be more beneficial to you than overloading on hot cakes, sausages and waffles.

Following breakfast, relax for an hour, perhaps reading the morning papers or a good book. It is well to take another walk and a rest before lunch, which should consist of some light meal, such as fruit or perhaps a salad and cooked vegetables. After lunch, you can don your bathing suit again and lie on the sand, but be careful not to expose the body to the point of inducing sunburn. Fifteen minutes of exposure is enough for the first day and you can add four or five minutes daily as your skin becomes tanned. The rest of the time it is well to wear some covering to protect your skin.

No matter how good the ocean dip or the sunshine feels, it is best not to overdo at first. Choose your evening meal as carefully as you would at home, and after the meal take in a good picture show, or a long walk on the beach.

Try to go to bed early so that you can secure at least eight hours' sleep and be ready for another day of constructive vacationing.

In tomorrow's article I will tell you how to obtain the greatest benefit from your stay in the mountains.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Enlarged Tonsils

Question. — John M. writes: "Please tell me the proper cure for enlarged tonsils, or should they be removed?"

Answer.—The cure of diseased tonsils, or the reduction of enlarged tonsils is simply a matter of dietetics. I have prepared a five-hundred-word article on this subject which will tell you exactly what to do. Send a large self-addressed envelope and ask for the article called, "Save the Tonsils."

Dates

Question.—Bertha W. J. asks: "Are dates healthful, and if so, how should they be used—in what combination with other foods?"

Answer.—Dates may be used with buttermilk. In this way they make an excellent combination which creates a beneficial chemical condition in the intestines.

Question.—Mrs. H. G. F. writes: "I am going to Europe very soon, but I am a very poor sailor. Do you think I could get over my tendency to seasickness if I eat only certain kinds of foods?"

Answer.—It is probably true that a vast amount of seasickness is caused simply by biliousness. Yet there are many people in good health who become nauseated whenever they sit in a swing or are subjected to any regular motion, such as they get when on a ship. This may be due to defects of vision, which can be cured by properly fitted glasses; or, it may be caused by an improper amount of the balancing fluid in the inner ear. In the latter case, one may be unable to overcome the trouble except by staying in bed and lying in a horizontal position. This will generally overcome seasickness, no matter what the cause. This would be a good time for you to try a fruit fast, using only one kind of fruit on any one day.

SMITH CHECKS CUBS, 8-4 AFTER SPUDDERS LOSE OPENER, 4-3

STEEN BESTED BY DUMOVITCH

Turgeon and Stapleton Lead Attack; Hermann Reports

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

The Spudders can't win them all. It was inevitable that a let-down in their heads-up and brilliant play of recent weeks should occur, but it was tough for Milt Steengrafe that his comrades had their off-game while he was pitching.

The slump of the Spudders, brief though it was, gave the Waco Cubs the opener of the double-header out at the lot yesterday, but Jim Galloway's men rallied to cop the nightcap.

The scores were 4 to 3 and 8 to 4, the second game going seven innings by agreement.

Lapses in running bases in the fourth inning, when the Spudders walked into a double play, and a couple of errors by the usually reliable and speedy Red Bennett in the fourth round let Waco win. Cagy and courageous hurling by Nick Dumovitch is not to be discounted, however, as the veteran lefthander held the mighty-hitting Galloways to eight scattered hits.

Cheeves Batted Off Hill

Cy Smith was in fine fettle in the final pastime, and except for the last round when a brace of doubles and a triple netted three runs the big fellow was master of the situation at all stages. He gave up seven hits. The Spudders pounded Virgil Cheeves off the hill and to show to what straits he is reduced for pitchers, Papa Del Pratt sent in Bill Harris, who was hammered for that 20-hit, 18-5 win Friday, as replacement. It was just a breeze for Galloway's gallopers against such chucking.

Al Hermann, new Spudder third baseman acquired from Bridgeport, Conn., of the Eastern league in the trade for Ed Taber and Wally Swenson, reported yesterday. He got into the first game as a pinch hitter, but played no more following his long journey here.

Bill Warwick, who has been shunted around the Texas loop in recent years, and who now is doing all the catching for Waco, smacked a home run over the left-field wall in the eighth inning of the opener. It eventually proved to be the winning knock.

Bud and Pete Hit Hard

Bud Stapleton hammered a mighty drive over the barrier in the nightcap.

Pete Turgeon had a whale of a day at bat, with four hits in seven times up, including two doubles. He got three hits in the first game and was the only clouter who could hit Dumovitch with any great success.

Bud Stapleton also maced three hits in the second game.

Some fast fielding compensated for some slovenly defensive work of both clubs. More than 3,000 saw the game.

The split let the Steers increase their lead to two full games and brought the Sports to within a game and a half of the Spudders.

Cubs Start Scoring

Turgeon doubled in the first inning of the opener, but was left on third and the Cubs scored the first run in the second. Vigare led off with a hit to left but was forced by Battle. Warwick lifted to Turgeon. Windle doubled to left, scoring Battle.

The Spudders took the lead in the third with a brace of tallies after two were out. Turgeon smashed his second hit, a sharp single to center. Fitzgerald whaled a long smash to center for two bases, and Turgeon scored. Windle's relay from the outfield bounced over Warwick and Fitz ambled to third. Bennett singled to left, scoring Fitzgerald.

Waco regained the lead in the fourth with a pair of markers. Battle singled to center. Warwick hit to left and Battle went to third on Bennett's fumble. Andrews came in fast on Windle's roller and threw out Wayne, Warwick advancing to second. Stapleton retired Dumovitch, unassisted on a bounder for no advance. Mellano singled to left, scoring Battle and Warwick, and Mellano went to second when Red booted the ball. Andrews ran down Mellano on Sanguinet's grounder.

Double Play Halts Spuds

The Spudders ran into a double play in their fourth that prevented scoring. Lapan walked and was advanced to third on Sullivan's single to center. Pete was run down on Andrews tap to Windle, Warwick and Vigare completing the play, and Sullivan was trapped, Windle to Mellano, when Andrews ran him off second.

Hits by Johnson and Vigare and a pass to Warwick filled the bases in the fifth but Windle lifted to Bennett for the third out.

Warwick's homer over the left field wall in the eighth gave the Cubs a 4 to 2 margin.

Wichita Falls Rallies

Wichita Falls rallied and filled the bases in the eighth and scored one run. Turgeon led off with his third hit, a single to center. Dumovitch fumbled Fitzgerald's tap. Bennett strolled, filling the bases. Stapleton hit into a double play, Windle to Battle, Turgeon scoring and Fitzgerald going to third. Skipper Pratt and his hirelings held a conference and decided to pitch to Lapan. It proved to be a lucky guess in this instance, for Pete, who usually delivers in the pinch, was thrown out by Windle.

Galloway threw three pinch-hitters into the breach in the ninth, and though the Spudders got two runners on bases, it was unavailing. Crouch batted for Sullivan and popped to Windle. Eldred, batting for Andrews, singled to left. Al Hermann made his Spudder debut by hitting for Steengrafe. Dumovitch worked slow and carefully, and so did Hermann. After both had taken their time, Al finally was thrown out by Vigare, Eldred going to second. Benton walked. Turgeon wasn't due this time, however, and he forced Benton, Windle to Mellano.

Spuds Get Early Lead

Wichita Falls scored a tally in the first round of the nightcap. Benton and Turgeon walked and advanced on a wild pitch. Fitzgerald struck out. Bennet grounded to Windle. Benton scoring, and Turgeon going to third. Stapleton was out on a close decision on a roller to Vigare.

The Galloways added three more in the second. Crouch was hit by a pitched ball and Sullivan walked; and both scored on Andrews' double down the right field line, Ray going to third on Blackerby's error. Smith strolled. Harris replaced Cheeves. Benton singled to left, scoring Andrews.

Warwick started the third with a hit, after the Cubs had been turned back in order by Smith in preceding innings. Windle fanned. Benton dropped Turgeon's throw on Harris' grounder, but Rabbit, Pete and Stapleton completed a double play on Mellano's grounder to Benton.

Stapleton singled to center in the third and scored when Windle pegged the ball into right field trying for a fast force on Sullivan's hit.

Cy Twists Ankle

The Cubs tallied in the fourth. Blackerby singled to center. Johnson hit past Benton, Blackerby going to third. Cy Smith tripped and twisted his ankle while backing up third on that play, but resumed the hill, and forced Johnson on Vigare's grounder, Blackerby scoring.

Stapleton hammered his circuit drive over the left-center wall in the fifth to make the count 6-1.

Benton beat out a hit to Vigare and continued on to second on a wild throw and scored on Turgeon's double to left in the sixth. Battle and Harris made a fast play on Fitz's grounder, Turgeon going to third. Bennett singled to center, scoring Turgeon.

Vigare started the seventh by pounding the center field board for two bases and went to third while Stapleton and Smith were retiring Battle on another fast play. Warwick doubled to left-center, scoring Vigare. Windle tripled to left and tallied when Pratt, batting for Harris, grounded to Turgeon. Benton ended the rally by tossing out Mellano.

L. B. Slaughter of Electra Takes Feature Boat Race at Lakeside Park

Driving "Nita," Boyd Martin Bullet boat with Johnson 16 racer motor over choppy waves in a high wind, L. B. Slaughter of Electra took first prize of $150 in the class B event of the outboard motor races staged Sunday afternoon on Lake Wichita at Lakeside Park. G. R. Bates of Oklahoma City, in "G. F. Hunter," also a Boyd Martin Bulliet with Johnson 16 racer, won second money of $50 in the same event.

C. D. Martin of Dallas in "Bar None," powered by Evinrude 20, took first award of $50 in the free-for-all event, and H. C. Ferguson boat, "Hi-Ball," also of Dallas, equipped with Evinrude racer, placed second in this event, winning $25.

Sunday afternoon's races, the first staged here in a number of years, were attended by 3,000 Wichitans and out-of-town spectators who lined the board walk, piers and pavilion. Unusually high winds and rough water delayed the races from 2:30 until 5 o'clock, due to the fact that judges deemed it impossible for the boats to maintain a race speed over the choppy waves that prevailed during the early afternoon. By 5 o'clock, the wind had somewhat abated, but drivers of the competing boats literally became "rough riders" as their boats skimmed and skipped the waves over the 24-mile course.

Ten boats were entered in the class B event, but only nine ran.

Slaughter, winner of the afternoon's first money, finished first in the first and second heats, and third in the final. He maintained a full one-half lap ahead of every other contestant in each of the two heats in which he finished in first place. A. L. Jarvis of Dallas in "An How," finished second in the first heat. A. F. Hopp of Dallas, in "We Step," was third, W. T. Waggoner Jr., of Electra, in "Miss Jean II," had fourth place, Ralph Harvey Jr., of Wichita Falls in "E-Z Mon," had fifth place, and H. S. Stewart in "Flashlike," of Electra, finished sixth. All other entrants failed to finish the first heat.

G. R. Bates, entering the second heat in "B. F. Hunter," won second place in the second stretch, Waggoner, third, Hopp, fourth and Stewart, fifth. Bates also won first place in the third heat, with Stewart, Slaughter and Hopp following respectively.

The free-for-all event was a closely run race, "Hi-Ball" keeping a tight lead with "Bar None."

Following is a complete list of racers and boats in Sunday's races:

Class B event: L. B. Slaughter, Electra, "Nita;" Boyd Martin Bullet, Johnson 16 racer; G. R. Bates, Oklahoma City, "B. F. Hunter," BoydMartin Bullet, Johnson 16 racer, Jeff Lynn, Oklahoma City, "Puddle Jumper," Johnson 16 racer, A. F. Hopp, Dallas, "We Step," Caille 36; Ralph Harvey Jr., Wichita Falls, "E-Z Mon," Caille 36, A. L. Jarvis, Dallas, "An How," Caille 36; W. T. Waggoner Jr., Electra, "Jean II," Lockwood Chief; H. S. Stewart, Electra, "Flashlike," Boyd Martin Bullet, Lockwood Chief; "Question Mark," H. Sordelet, Dallas, Caille 36; "Scott Store Sport," Elto Speedster.

Free-for-all event: C. D. Martin, Dallas, "Bar None," Evinrude 20; W. T. Waggoner Jr., Electra, "Gooda Bye John," Boyd Martin Sr., Johnson 32; H. C. Ferguson, Dallas, "Hi-Ball," Evinrude 20; G. R. Bates, "B. F. Hunter," Boyd Martin Bullet, Johnson 16, Oklahoma City.

Judges for the races were R. H. Hughes of Wichita Falls, R. E. Scheurer of Electra, B. F. Miller of Electra; W. C. Stewart of Electra was pace setter. The prizes of $275 were awarded by Noble-Little Hardware company, L. L. Taylor Wheel and Body works, and Scott's store.

Connally Bests Stiely In Pitchers' Battle

DALLAS, June 23. (AP)—For the second consecutive day, fortune smiled on the Dallas Steers giving them a ninth inning break to defeat the Beaumont Exporters 2 to 1. A ground ball from George Bischoff's bat took a bad hop, hit Paul Easterling's arm and jumped into the stands for a home run under ground rules.

BRAVES TAKE PAIR

BOSTON, June 23. (AP)—The Braves won a double-header from the Phillies here today, 5-1, and 7-5, before a crowd of 20,000. A heavy batting attack in the sixth inning of the second game gave Boston seven runs before a man was retired.

Phil Collins, Philadelphia pitcher, hit a home run with the bases full in the second inning of the second game. Score, first game:

The Dizzy Program

Monday, June 24—The Poughkeepsie regatta, California and Columbia favored.

Thursday, June 27—Paulina and Schmeling. Not much choice.

Thursday, June 27—Start of U. S. open golf championship—Jones, the Smiths, Hagen, Armour, Diegel, Farrell, Sarazen, Turnesa, Cruickshank, Mehlhorn, Cooper, Von Elm, etc.—take your pick.

No other single week of the year will have so much swift and varied action crowded into its sporting calendar as the one you are now facing. The Poughkeepsie regatta should be one of the best races ever held with California and Columbia showing unusual strength, and with Cornell close at hand.

Paulino and Schmeling have a chance together to establish strong claim to the heavyweight title Tunney chucked through the window, provided either decides to wade in and fight.

The open golf championship at Winged Foot carries the strongest cast in sport. No other competition can show as many stars in action, with 150 survivors who can put on at least thirty stars.

News and comment of these three events will be followed and read by more than 50,000,000 persons in the United States alone.

The result of the Paulino-Schmeling fight will carry tremendous interest through Europe—through Germany and Spain especially.

It has been a long time since Europe had as open a shot at the heavyweight title, since Europe found the American entry list so vulnerable.

Either Paulino or Schmeling has a shining chance, if one of them can show any outstanding aggressiveness or skill. Neither is a Dempsey or a Tunney, but there are no young Dempseys or Tunneys left to set up a blockade and bar the road. No two heavyweights ever had a better chance to scramble into the middle of a million dollars later on.

The Killing Pace

In 1906 the Cubs won 116 games and dropped only 36. That pace set a record no other club has ever reached.

The Cubs clicked suddenly, for the Giants had won the pennant and the world series of 1905, with something to spare in each event.

Up through the middle of June the Athletics had set the same pace employed by the Cub machine of 23 years ago. They gave themselves full leeway for a later slump, largely through a combination of heavy hitting and high-grade pitching. No other club could show such a run-making combination as Foxx, Cochrane and Simmons. And no other club could show such a pitching staff as Grove, Rommel, Walberg, Earnshaw, Quinn and others.

Their main barrier was the old Yankee hoodoo, the lone backspin to their progress, the one weakness they had to cure. It was Yankee poison that upset them a year ago.

The Return of Tolley

Cyril James Hasting Tolley, who ran a tank through the German lines and kept going until he struck a German staff dugout far back of the lines around 1917, is planning to start in the U. S. amateur championship at Pebble Beach.

Tolley won the first championship he ever played in when he beat Bob Gardner in 1920. After batling for nine years, he is back with the old crown, just at a time when his game seemed to be slipping away. Too much had been written and spoken about Tolley's terrific hitting. For several years his main idea of a golf round was to hit the ball as far as he could lash it and then let nature take its course. And he could hit a golf ball. He was always a great competitor, always giving it all he had, even when he seemed to be hopelessly beaten.

Tolley will be a big addition at Pebble Beach—in more ways than one, since his displacement is well over 200 pounds.

He will find Pebble Beach to his liking, since he has played most of his golf over seaside links.

ATHLETICS COP SERIES, 7 TO 4

Macks Clout Three Homers To Lou's One and Win

NEW YORK, June 23. (AP)—The Athletics finally increased their lead over the world champion New York Yankees to eight and one-half games by winning the last of the season's first crucial series, 7 to 4, today.

The winners outhit the losers by a bare margin of one but the A's blows were far more robust than those of the Yankees. The visitors' nine hits were good for 23 bases while the home club's eight ran a total of only 13.

Simmons, Foxx and Haas hit home runs for Connie Mack while Lou Gehrig drove one into the right field stands for the Yanks, making his season's total a score. The attendance was about 55,000, more than 10,000 less than either of the past two days.

Manager Miller Huggins for the third time in the series started a lefthander and for the third time saw him driven to cover. Ed Wells was the victim today, retiring for a pinch hitter in the seventh.

Manager Mack, too, had to wave frantically to the faraway left-field bull pen in the eighth to summon George Earnshaw to come to the rescue of Howard Ehmke, who until next to the last inning had baffled the Yankee sharpshooters.

The Athletics set out with stern determination to win the odd game of the series. The leaders and runnersup went into play with two victories each to their credit. Score:

INDIANS OPEN SERIES TODAY

Wiltse Huls Opener; Two Games Tomorrow

Pat Newman's fighting San Antonio Indians open a three-day stand today at Athletic park. A double-header will be played tomorrow.

Hal Wiltse, the blonde lefthander, probably will be Jim's hurler.

Sullivan went to the fence to pull down Blackerby's smash in the first game and Fitzgerald came in fast for Mellano's short lift in the eighth.

The Spudder keystone pair turned in a brace of double plays to help Cy in the nightcap.

Pete handled 16 chances in the two games without a bobble. Rabbit booted a pair, rare for him, but snared 11 other chances.

Mellano and Windle also flashed some fast work around the keystone. Mellano accepted 17 chances flawlessly and Windle 14 with two errors.

Bud Stapleton flashed some more great first-basing. Bud can get a job in the winter as an acrobat and contortionist, judging from the way he snares high, low and wide throws.

Phone Your Classified Ads to 4391

Our courteous ad taker will receive your Classified Ad and help you to word it, then our collector will call the next day. These accounts are "accommodation accounts" for the convenience of our patrons in transacting business over the telephone.

Classified Ad patrons desiring to have ads charged must have a telephone listed in their own name. No book record is made by the publishers on account of the great number of transactions, hence the necessity of collecting promptly.

Correction of errors in Classified Ads must be made before the second insertion. No allowance will be made for more than one incorrect insertion.

Cancellations and adjustments regarding errors should be telephoned to the Classified Ad department between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m.

Ads accepted for afternoon papers up until 11 a. m. same day.

Morning paper up to 6 p. m. for the following morning.

Sunday paper up to 7 p. m. Saturday night.

Same copy in both papers.

THE CLASSIFIED DEPARTMENT IS OPEN ON SUNDAYS from 6 to 6 p. m. And telephone orders for classified ads to be inserted or to be discontinued will be accepted.

Exceptions: Want ads will be accepted over the telephone for all excepting the following classifications: Situations Wanted and Wanted to Rent. Ads for these classifications are each with the order and will not be accepted over the telephone.

The Times reserves the right to classify all Classified Ads under the appropriate headlines and to revise or to withhold from publication any ads deemed objectionable.

BURKBURNETT, Texas, June 23.—The Oscar Frye post of the American Legion at Burkburnett held their regular meeting Friday night, with Commander C. E. Dace, presiding. There were 50 members in attendance. A report of the Vernon convention was made by D. J. Carey.

Carey announced that the local post will stage a play, "Who Won the War," with H. O. Rupnow of Chicago, Ill., as the director. To date the rehearsals have been going along nicely and the very best of local talent has been secured. The play will be presented in the high school auditorium July. 11 and 12.

Some of the members who have important roles in the play are J. J. Jordan, E. V. Dial, C. E. Marshall, E. H. Bullock, J. N. Hall and A. R. Waddell. The play includes two feminine characters and these parts will be taken by Misses Louise Wood and Vida Ballard.

A letter from Ross Coles, complimenting the post was read by the adjutant, and was appreciated by the membership. The post membership of 200 members is expected to be reached some time in July and the post is to stage a big celebration when that mark is attained.

Frederick Cotton Crop Shows Fast Growth

Special to The Record News

FREDERICK, Okla., June 23.—Practically all the cotton in the county has now been planted or replanted and following the recent rains and warm weather this plant has been making record time in growth. Fields which were planted a couple of weeks ago are now several inches high. Heavy winds which blew several days ago did some damage to the tender plants.

INGRATE HELD 'MEANEST MAN'

Thankfulness Urged By Martin in Address

In an address before the men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning, Judge P. A. Martin took the 103rd psalm for his text in a plea for the "habit of thankfulness" in men. He described the "meanest man in the world" as being first an ingrate, to be shunned by his fellows "like a pestilence." The full address follows:

Glorifies Creator

"My first impression of today's lesson was one of disappointment. It seemed to me at first though that the 103rd psalm, while it may be and indeed is one of the greatest poems written by David, the poet-king of Israel, yet its study seemed a distinct 'let down' from the great lessons we have heretofore studied during the current year; but when I read and re-read this wonderful psalm and begun to apply its might truths to myself and my fellowmen, I saw at once the wisdom of our editors, who thought it about time to pause in our consideration of God's dealing with his chose people, Israel, and take stock of His dealings with ourselves and the human race in general.

"It is said that the wild swine will gather and eat the acorns and chestnuts that fall from the trees, with satisfied grunts, never knowing, or realizing what a debt of gratitude he owes to the giant trees that bear his favorite meals; the cattle graze upon the green grasses of the prairie and grow fat, without realizing the debt of gratitude they owe to the soil, the rain and the sunshine and the Master of it all. It is only mankind, we are told, in all God's creation, who is possessed of the intelligence to know and the faculty to exercise real gratitude to the Creator of all things. I sometimes like to think, however, that we have mistaken ideas about these things. I like to believe that all creation in some way praises and glorifies its Creator.

"As I sat in my study and prepared this lesson, a Texas mocking bird was almost bursting his little throat with song in a tree near my window; he and his mate have been my near neighbors for some weeks now; they have a nest nearby and by this time they probably have a family nearly ready for flight; it may be that he is singing a psalm of praise to the same God you and I believe in; I don't know, not understanding his language, but it is sweet to know that his Creator understands him whether I do or not. The great harmonies of nature that we see and hear all around us, from the whisper ing winds to the thunderstorm and from the mountain brook to mighty Niagara or old ocean itself may be, for ought we know, the manner and the language in which mother nature itself praises God. In the Book of Job there is a time mentioned when, 'the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy.'

"I do not understand such things; my finite mind is incapable of grasping their meaning, but years ago, in the lonely camp of a shepherd I have gazed up at the star-decked Texas skies and asked myself the question, 'are they not, each in their own way, praising the God who made them and set them in their courses?' I like to think that the Maker gets glory and satisfaction out of all His creation.

Ingrate Scored

"We have heard of the meanest man in the world and we all have our individual ideas of the various traits of character it takes to make up the composite of this meanest man in the world. I will tell you one trait which he has regardless of all others he may possess; he is an ingrate first, last and all the time. He does not appreciate home, country, friends or kindred; he will strike the hand that feeds him and curse the country that protects and shelters him, he will hate the man who does him a kindness and dodge the man who has loaned him money. From the human standpoint he is truly a hateful individual shunned by his fellows like a pestilence.

"How about the man who is an ingrate in the sight of God—the man who forgets all his benefits.' Such men are all about us, in the church and out of it; men who never think of thanking God for the blessings they enjoy, men who have been blessed with health and wealth, with friends, with fine homes and fine families; men who never offer a prayer of thankfulness to the giver of all these good gifts. We are all inclined to take the blessings of God as a matter of course, like the hog picks up the chestnuts and acorns and fattens on them and it is to turn our thought away from self and toward the Creator that this great poem is chosen as our lesson today. And the word 'habit' is well chosen in the title of our lesson; the 'habit of thankfulness.' Man is a creature of habit. Most of you men are here this morning because you make a habit of attending class; more men would be here if they only had the habit of coming.

"Whatever may be the teaching of theology about original sin, I have never subscribed to the belief that the great heart of humanity is rotten and bad. I think most of our sins and shortcomings arise from thoughtlessness. If a man can be persuaded to stop and think he will not just naturally choose to be an ingrate. If he will think at all, he will readily see that all he is and all he has and all he ever hopes to be and have must come from above and his awakened consciousness, will at once voice the words of the psalmist:

'Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless His holy name.

Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits.'

Mercy of God

"This psalm catalogs just a few of the temporal blessings we have received; its most important message is the message of mercy it bears to the sin-sick troubled-weary soul of man; the restless soul of this restless century, if you please. In all nature the shepherd-poet could find no words capable of fitly describing the measureless mercy of God except the vastness of the universe above us, so he says:

"'For as heaven is high above the earth,

So great is his mercy toward them that fear him.'

"His forgiveness is so complete; he so completely erases the pages of dark deeds we have written, so entirely blots out the remembrance of our misdeeds that he says:

"'As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us.'

"We travel east as long as we like and then like boys in a relay race, future generations may take up the race and travel on till time breaks into eternity and still our posterity will not reach the end of the way east. And this far the Father has removed our transgressions from us for:

"'Like as a father pitieth his children so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him.'

"With such a God as this watching over us, guarding and guiding our destiny, should we not cultivate the habit of thankfulness and thoughtfulness until like the sons of God of olden times, we lift up our voices and shout for joy in unison with the 'morning stars' of patriarchal days.

"Surely this class can join this morning in the words of the golden text:

"'Bless the Lord, O my soul.'"

Several scores of names already could be listed of persons who probably have made no more than one or two visits to motion picture theaters in the last year, but who, having hurried to hear "The Desert Song" at the Majestic during the three days of its showing, are freely declaring the excellence of the performance, and the highly pleasing reproduction attained by the vitaphone.

"The Desert Song" probably represents the best results of sound-recording in connection with motion pictures that have been offered in Wichita Falls. Little could have been gained from the standpoint of stage action and vocal effects, had the performing cast been present in person. The sound-movies, even with the visual element of depth introduced, as it will be soon, will never have the complete appeal exerted by a master singer or an histronic artist, whose very breath and flesh impart feeling to the role. But "The Desert Song" brings a metropolitan production to Wichita Falls with a pleasing and convincing performance.

Those who attend anticipating a musical operetta will be gratified with the excellence of solo and choral singing; and a delightful nonsensical humor, strongly suggestive of W. S. Gilbert's famous librettos. Should anyone anticipate a picture in which a closely woven plot and subtle character delineation motivates the action, he may raise his eyebrows. "The Desert Song is to be seen for the music, and it's full of it.

Hereford Breeders Agree At Sweetwater

SWEETWATER, Texas, June 23.—Differences between the Texas Hereford association and the American Hereford Cattle Breeders association which had been brewing for months and which threatened to disrupt the parents organization were ironed out in Sweetwater Thursday when a meeting, called as a war dance and ending as a lovefeast, brought the two associations to terms and ended, for a time at least, the proposal that Texans set up their own registering body.

Some 75 Texans breeders were here for the conference, called by President John M. Gist of Odessa. They came, most of them, with more fuel to add to the branding iron fire of dissatisfaction that was boiling in the Texas association, and they left with the pot of trouble set aside to cool.

R. J. Kinzer, secretary of the American association, Kansas City, and Albert K. Mitchell, president of the National body, were the oil on troubled waters. They agreed, without protest to request of the Texas breeders that this state be furnished a full-time field man at no expense to local breeders, and the meeting ended.

A resolution, adopted by the Texas association, was read at the afternoon meeting. It asked that the American association furnish Texas a field man, to be selected by Texas breeders. Mr. Kinzer immediately announced that he favored the plan and would be glad to recommend it to his board of directors.

At the morning session, President Gist appointed the resolution committee composed of Ed Brasford, Sweetwater; R. L. Mitchell, Marfa; D. L. McDonald, Amarillo; W. T. Lewis, Gainesville, and T. B. Ellison of Fort Worth.

Plainview Storm Aid Fund Is Available

Special to The Record News.

PLAINVIEW, Texas, June 23.—Five hundred dollars is available for relief work in the recent storm-struck area around Plainview at the American Red Cross, according to a statement received from Miss Charlotte Murray, Red Cross field worker, who was sent here immediately after the disaster.

The sum is in addition to all monies raised locally, coming from southwestern headquarters at St. Louis, and is to be used to buy household supplies, clothing, and such farming equipment and poultry as is necessary in repairing the damage wrought by the storm. Some $1,300 was raised locally for relief work also.

The distribution of the funds and supplies will go under the direction of the local chairman and secretary in cooperation with the chamber of commerce and other agencies.

PLAINS DAIRY SHOW PLANNED

Directors Start Work On 1930 Event

Special to The Record News.

PLAINVIEW, Texas, June 23.—The third annual Texas Panhandle-Plains dairy show will be held in Plainview on April 7, 8, 9 and 10, 1930, according to a decision reached at the first meeting of the directors of the association, held at Plainview Thursday afternoon.

The dates are one week later than those of the two former shows, and the change is made in order to get away from the first of the month rush usually encountered by business men over this section, and for the convenience of a number of the regular exhibitors, who asked for the change.

Executive Committee

The executive committee elected is as follows: O. L. Stansell, Floydada; S. J. Payne, Tulia; Maury Hopkins, Plainview; D. F. Eaton, Lubbock; Howard A. Ferguson, Amarillo; Jeff Greer, Wellington; W. L. Stangel, Lubbock; and S. J. Underwood, Hale Center. Maury Hopkins was re-elected manager of the show. Hopkins will announce the names of the department superintendents later.

W. L. Stangel, R. M. Milhollin, Maury Hopkins, and R. B. Davis were re-appointed members of the catalog committee to prepare the catalogue for the 1930 show. It is planned by the committee to have the catalog off the press by the time the fall fairs begin over the Southwest.

An effort to enlarge the territory of the show to include Eastern New Mexico was tabled to receive further consideration at a future meeting. Eastern New Mexico counties are displaying considerable interest in the activities of the organization, and it is possible they will be invited to participate, Stansell said.

Grade Cows Banned

Grade cows will not be exhibited at the 1930 show. The directors decided that there was not sufficient interest in grade cows to justify the department. The grades will be free to enter the production contest.

The directors went on record favoring the work of the United States bureau of biological survey, a part of the department of agriculture in rodent control and the destruction of predatory animals.

Stricter rules governing the annual auction sale of the show will be made this year, and the commission for handling the stock increased.

In attendance at the meeting were: O. L. Stansell, president, Floydada; S. J. Payne, vice president, Tulia; Maury Hopkins, secretary, Plainview; directors: S. J. Underwood, Hale Center; H. B. Hales, Amarillo; C. C. Stewart, Amarillo; E. W. Hester, Lamesa; P. C. Bennett, Amarillo; Jeff Greer, Wellington; Chas. Franz, Turkey; J. B. Potts, Lockney; W. L. Stangel, Lubbock; W. W. Evans, Lamesa; H. A. Ferguson, Amarillo; C. E. Merrell, Lubbock; R. B. Davis, Brownfield; S. B. Pierson, Ropesville; W. H. Upchurch, Canyon; and Fred Pittner, Hereford. Others in attendance besides directors and officials were R. M. Millhollin of Plainview, Henry Ansley of Amarillo and Joe Sellgrove of Lamesa.

Quanah Girl's Prize Winning Essay Highly Praised by Texas Senators

AUSTIN, June 23.—Upon the personal invitation of Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller, and the senators heartily agreeing, Miss Katherine Marshall, of Quanah, fourth place winner in the national oratorical contest at Washington, and winner of a trip through South America, delivered her prize winning oration before the senate, Tuesday. Many of the senators expressed the opinion that it is the best oration upon the constitution that has been delivered in recent years.

The composition was written by the 17-year-old Quanah Miss, who has gained national fame with it. She is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. J. C. Marhall of Quanah, and Mrs. Marshall is entitled to accompany Miss Marshall on the tour. She represented all of Texas at Washington. Miss Marshall and her mother will sail in July.

The text of her oration follows:

Story of Constitution

"The story of our constitution is the history of the political development of our country under a governmental system that has stood the test of nearly 150 years of national growth and expansion, a system under which the nation rapidly rose from a condition of bankruptcy, confusion, and threatened anarchy, to a position of power and influence in the family of nations. Within five years after the adoption of the constitution we had credit around the world. The nation had passed through her crisis and emerged triumphant over every obstacle that had threatened the life and domestic tranquility of the new government.

"A clear understanding of the process by which the constitution began its existence as the supreme law of the land is necessary to a full conception of its present significance:

"In 1787, after the Articles of Confederation had been tried and found inadequate as an instrument of self-government, a convention composed of 55 vision-inspired men assembled in the city of Philadelphia, in that same red brick state house already made sacred by the Declaration of Independence, and began the work of forming a more perfect union for the nation they had brought into being.

"After four long months of arduous labor the task was completed. On the same sure fundation that had made the Declaration of Independence the greatest document of its kind ever penned by the hand of man, they erected a constitutional government for the United States of America. The powers of government were assumed by the people of the new republic and they became the sole source of governmental authority.

It's Significance

"The constitution has been for a 142 years the greatest document ever written into the record of mankind's struggle for popular government. We marvel at the wisdom of the fathers in fashioning a government so perfect in its functioning yet so elastic in its application that it has met the changing needs and growth of the nation, without change other than 19 amendments. We marvel at the sublime conception of a governmental system in which every citizen lives under two complete and well-founded systems of laws—the state and the federal laws—and in which local self-government is to perfectly blended with national authority.

"The men of 1787 meant to form a more perfect union and they succeeded, for the document they formulated has become an indestructible bond of union for 48 sovereign states. 'No crisis has been too great for its powers, no evolution too rapid for its adaptation, and no expansion beyond its easy grasp and administration.' Moreover, under its beneficent authority it has taken the struggling and oppressed people from every land and nationality—no matter from what background of traditions, customs, conditions, and languages—imbued them with its spirit of individual responsibility, admitted them to the citizenship, and won their abiding loyalty and love.

Grows in Strength

Today the constitution is immeasurably stronger than it was at the beginning. In its first years the union was too young to be held sacred. The states were jealous of their powers. Patriotism was state patriotism, state loyalty too strong to permit entire devotion to a new and untried system of government. But with the years the wisdom of the framers of the constitution was reflected in the smoothness of its operation. As it gathered dignity and force it won the people's respect and admiration. To respect and admiration, the next generation added veneration and love. Gradually the constitution became a rallying center about which crystallized the political creeds and national sentiments of the great political parties. Thus the constitutional government of 1787 grew with the growth of national history and national sentiment. We have become in the fullest organic sense a nation—the most perfect union the world has ever known. Patriotism is national patriotism; state law and federal law are complementary parts of one great whole.

"The political experience of 150 years has demonstrated the perfection of the provisions of our government 'for defense against foreign foes, for self-preservation against domestic differences, for limitless expansion in population and material development, and for steady growth in intellectual freedom and force. Its future can only be measured by the capacity of man to cultivate and enjoy the boundless opportunities of liberty and law.'

Danger of Peace

"And yet there are dangers that threaten the constitution today—the dangers of peace—that may become greater than the dangers of war. The gravest danger, perhaps, comes from the very liberty the people enjoy. Ten years ago when the world war closed, patriotism was a passion. The world had been made safe for democracy. The flag of our country had become the flag of humanity. How it thrilled our hearts when we saw that flag at the head of a marching column of returned soldiers! In its folds we read all the glorious history of our country; in its stars we saw preservation of the union, through the heartbreaking tragedy of the civil war; its bright colors had flashed a message of hope and promise to humanity on the battlefields of France; for it was the emblem of a people dedicated to the realization of a glorious ideal.

"But 10 short years later we are told that America is the greatest law violating nation on earth; that 'in less than five years, in point of lives sacrificed, we have waged a new world war;' that property losses are equally striking; that we have developed a changed attitude toward law and order. Again, we are told that crime has become an organized business, in which a vast army is engaged, because its profits far outweight the risks involved. Moreover, the indictment against us states that we have become a nation of materialists; that we place wealth and worldly success above every other consideration of life. What a challenge to our generation!

Task of Youth

"My countrymen, shall we permit these accusations to stand? If crime has become an organized business, shall we fail to organize against crime? Let us again mobilize the citizenship of our country for her defense against the forces that threaten the very foundations of our government. Let us begin anew the task of training the youth of America—this time for service as citizens—to combat the foes within her gates. Only by training for law observance today can we hope to banish the criminal class of tomorrow. Let us teach the duties and responsibilities of citizenship for the next 10 years; teach the significance of the constitution in the school, in the home, from the platform, draft the leaders of national righteousness for frequent speeches over the radio, teach the law observance through every channel of communication, and thus awaken the people in millions of American homes to a new sense of their obligations as citizens, to a new conception of the sacredness of their rights and duties under the constitution. And within the next 10 years we shall see the dawn of that happy day in our country's history when our nation, rich in her resources, resistless in her energies, and released from her shackles of materialism and selfishness, shall enter upon the golden age of her national history. An age in which, under the initiation, we shall see all the nations of the earth steadily moving forward in mutual understanding and confidence toward universal and everlasting peace—

"When the war drums throb no longer,
And the battleflags are furled,
In the parliament of man—
The federation of the world."

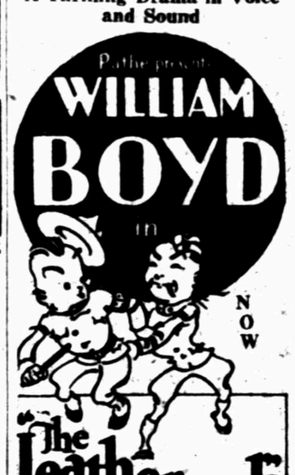

Growth of department store chains in Germany has been phenomenal in the last few years, some having several stores in large cities and single places of business in smaller communities.
