Reagan optimistic about '83 outlook

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who incorrectly predicted an economic recovery this year, now says he is convinced 1983 will bring "a definite upturn" even though there may not be a major improvement in unemployment.

Reagan made his assessment Thursday in a year-end meeting with reporters where he also hailed final congressional passage of a nickel-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax. The president promised to sign the measure soon.

With the bill on the way to the White House, the Senate adjourned, ending the 97th Congress and sending its members scrambling home for the Christmas holidays. The House had adjourned two days earlier.

The bill would provide $5.5 billion a year for a program of highway and mass transit improvements, and sponsors said 170,000 construction jobs would be created. The gasoline tax increase, which also applies to diesel fuel, takes effect April 1.

Reagan passed up several opportunities to criticize conservative lawmakers, including North Carolina Republican Sens. Jesse Helms and John East, whose delaying tactics tied up an increasingly angry Senate for two weeks over the tax measure.

In his 10-minute session with reporters, the president also called his Middle East peace proposal "our greatest accomplishment" of 1982 and said he remains hopeful it will succeed despite its rejection by Israel.

Asked about the economy and what he could tell the nation's 12 million unemployed, Reagan said, "I am convinced that this coming year, 1983, is going to see a definite upturn.

"I wish that I could promise that unemployment would instantly respond," he said, adding that previous experience shows that unemployment "is the slowest thing in a recovery."

The president said he was not frustrated by the failure of his program to produce the results he promised in 1982. "I think that we have put in place a sound program...that is going to lead to a sound recovery."

He called on each of the nation's employers to hire at least one jobless person to ease unemployment.

"There must be some that can't, I know, because of their own troubles, but there must be others that could probably take even more than one," Reagan said.

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III said later the hiring program was one begun by the Rev. Leon Sullivan, founder of a nationally recognized job training program called Opportunities Industrialization Center headquartered in Philadelphia.

Appraising other accomplishement of his two-year-old administration, Reagan said, "The Soviet Union has not advanced further in its expansionism than it had two years ago; it has not gone into any additional countries.

"I think we have made great, great progress with regard to our relationship with our allies in Europe and Japan and, more recently...with our neighbors here in the Western Hemisphere."

Reagan's repeated forecasts of economic improvement in 1982 failed to materialize.

For example, last May, when about 10 million Americans were out of work, Reagan said the outlook for the jobless "will improve, I think in the latter half of this year."

Dissident applauds U.S., hopes to return to Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Korean dissident leader Kim Dae-jung, crediting President Reagan and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for his release from prison, says he hopes to return to his homeland soon to resume his political career.

Kim arrived here Thursday night to a tumultuous welcome from dozens of local Korean residents after being set free by Korean authorities to seek treatment of arthritis and other ailments.

Flanked by his wife and two of his children, the 57-year-old dissident said he hopes to accept a long-standing invitation from Harvard University to be a visiting fellow once his health permits.

But, he added, "What I want most is to return to my homeland in the near future and dedicate my life to the Korean people."

Looking surprisingly fit despite his imprisonment and his long flight from Seoul, Kim, read a three-page hand-written statement, which was then translated by an interpreter.

Kim, South Korea's leading dissident, expressed gratitude for his release and added: "I strongly demand that all democratic patriots still in prison be released as soon as possible."

It was not clear whether Kim was aware of the Korean government's decision announced earlier Thursday to release 1,200 prisoners in a pre-Christmas amnesty. Among them were 47 other dissidents involved in anti-government protests, including all seven of Kim's co-defendants.

In Korea, various human rights groups said that some 300 people were in prison or in custody for political dissent. The Seoul government disputes this, saying that all other prisoners are being held for violating Korean law.

The U.S. State Department welcomed the prisoner release.

Rabid skunk brings information concern

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A door-to-door campaign will get under way next week to alert people to potential rabies danger, according to Animal Control Center Director Dalton Byerly, who said tests on a skunk picked up Tuesday in the 3300 block of West Ohio Avenue came back positive — the second case this month of a rabid skunk being found inside city limits.

Byerly said the skunk picked up Tuesday "had been harassing dogs" in the neighborhood and that a skunk picked up Dec. 6 on Pratt Street, about two blocks south of Florida Avenue, had also "been involved with a dog."

Starting Monday, city personnel will be going door-to-door in the area of Midkiff, Michigan and Ohio streets, reminding people to keep their pets confined and the animals' vaccinations up to date.

"We need a 75 percent vaccination rate in any given metropolitan area to prevent an epidemic of rabies in domestic animals," said Byerly. "I can't be sure, but I'd say only 40 percent are vaccinated in the Midland area."

In addition to the door-to-door campaign, skunk traps will be set in both neighborhoods where the rabid animals were found.

Reagan quietly accepts cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unpublicized concession, President Reagan has accepted $6 billion in new cuts in his 1983 defense budget as part of the spending bill Congress sent him this week.

The reductions in the Pentagon's budget are in addition to the elimination of $988 million to produce MX nuclear missiles, a cut approved over bitter presidential opposition.

But Reagan accepted the other cuts without a word of protest Tuesday when he signed the catch-all spending bill, passed in the chaotic, final hours of the 97th Congress.

Overall, Congress trimmed $7 billion from the military spending ceiling Congress set last summer when it adopted a budget resolution already calling for less military spending than Reagan initially wanted.

The latest defense budget is $18.7 billion — or 8 percent — below what Reagan first requested last February.

Even with the latest reduction, the Pentagon's appropriations for 1983 will run about 13 percent above the approximate $212 billion appropriated in 1982.

His quiet acquiescence this week contrasted with frequent public vows in the past that he would fight cuts in his massive military build-up program, which calls for spending a record $1.6 trillion over five years.

"He had no alternative but to sign the bill," an administration budget official said Thursday after the Pentagon cuts came to light. "Had he vetoed it, chances are he'd not get any more (money)," added the official, who did not want his name used.

"There are a lot of things (in the bill) the president didn't like," the official added. "But it's the best we could do."

The Pentagon budget includes money that does not actually have to be spent in the fiscal year so long as it is committed in that year, such as for a ship, which is paid for over several years. So, part of the latest cut will reduce spending this year and part will reduce spending in later years.

Officials at the Pentagon declined public comment on the new cut. Privately, however, they said they were pleased that Congress did not cut deeper. They described the cuts as reasonable and about what they expected without doing much harm to their military build-up plans.

According to congressional and administration budget officials, Congress voted to appropriate $239 billion to the Pentagon for fiscal 1983, which began Oct. 1. That compares with the $257.7 billion Reagan originally requested.

Short-cut driving may end in a ticket

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midlanders are strong believers that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line. And those who are trying to carve out their straight line are ending it in a face-to-face confrontation with a police officer.

The largest number of straight-line believers are being discovered in north Midland along Loop 250 and it is these people who have been ticketed in the past two to three weeks by Midland police. The problem stems from motorists cutting across the median of Loop 250 rather than driving down to the paved interchanges.

"We're jealous of our time out here," said Charles Muery with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation in the Odessa office. "We don't like to be inconvenienced."

Muery explained that Loop 250 and State Highway 191 between Midland and Odessa are designed eventually to be a "full freeway type of facility. It's an interstate type of construction" with main lanes in the center and service roads running alongside. It's those service roads which have been constructed for Loop 250 and are being built for Highway 191.

Noting that the State Highway Department doesn't have enough money to proceed immediately into the main lane construction, Muery said, "Because of financing we can't build the main lanes at this time." That step may not come for 20 years, he noted.

However, interchanges at main intersections have been determined with crossovers limited to those points on the service roads. When the main lanes are constructed, it will be impossible for a vehicle to cross at any point other than the interchanges, according to the highway department spokesman.

Until that freeway-type of road is put in, the center area between the service roads will remain open pasture. Motorists not accustomed to heading down to an interchange to get on the other side of the Loop have been bumping, vibrating and jolting across the lumps, holes and ditches in the dirt median.

That, said Muery, is illegal. And that, said a police officer in the traffic division, is why officers began issuing tickets about two weeks ago to motorists caught red-handed in the median.

To keep straight-minded motorists out of the median, the State Highway Department has erected a chain fence in the middle between the service roads from U.S. Highway 80 up to Andrews Highway. From that point along the Loop to where it connects with Lamesa Highway, the state workers are digging a ditch. In addition, signs warning motorists not to cross in the medians have been set up.

"If we allow crossovers where all the streets intersect into the Loop, we would develop a type of temporary access" which would be eliminated

The National Weather Service forecasts rain Saturday in a band from Louisiana and Missouri to the Great Lakes and from Missouri and Iowa to the Northeast. Rain is also predicted for parts of Washington and Oregon. Snow is expected in a band from Colorado to Wisconsin and for parts of the Northeast.

Cold, cloudy Christmas day expected

It wasn't snow, but today's 20 percent chance of rain was about as close to a white Christmas as Midlanders will get. However, Santa's visit to the Tall City will be a cold, cloudy and windy one. And Midlanders will have ample opportunities to light cheery blazes beneath their stuffed stockings.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it will continue to be partly cloudy and colder through the Christmas holiday weekend. Lows tonight will drop to near 30 with the highs Christmas Day only expected to reach into the middle 40s.

Wintery winds will blow from the west at 15-20 mph tonight, shifting to gusty and northerly at 15-25 mph Saturday.

Thursday's high of 69 stopped 13 degrees short of the record high of 82, set for that date in 1955. The pleasant overnight low of 45 was almost 40 degrees above 1953's frigid eight degrees.

Midlanders trying to create their own straight line from one Loop 250 service road to another are violating the law, according to the State Highway Department. A fence or ditch in the middle between the service roads and a sign warn motorists. If that doesn't stop them, a police officer will.

when the main lanes are constructed, according to Muery. And these temporary crossovers can be detrimental to abutting properties.

In addition to being illegal, these at-will crossovers by motorists are dangerous to vehicles in the other lanes and damage the pavement, said Muery.

"It's more dangerous with their cutting into this traffic," he added.

Looking at access by emergency vehicles, Muery pointed to large cities with major freeway systems. "They have to go around, too."

The interstate system, he said, is the safest highway network in the country with half the accidents reported on it than on other roads.

"With time, people hopefully will become more educated and they'll get adjusted to the crossovers," he said. "The safety far outweighs the inconviences."

Legislators go home, some tired, some mad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lame-duck 97th Congress has gone, leaving behind a nickel increase in the federal gasoline tax and a residue of bad feeling among senators forced to work until the day before Christmas Eve.

"In the name of God, let us vote and go," pleaded Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, as the Senate quashed one more conservative-led filibuster on an 81-5 vote Thursday and then voted 54-33 to send President Reagan the 5-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax increase he supported.

The administration's interest in the measure was evident.

Vice President George Bush presided over the Senate as it voted, and the White House had offered military planes to fly some senators back to Washington for the vote. The Department of Transportation assisted others by making reservations for them on commercial flights.

Reagan has promised to sign the measure soon.

There was also an obvious lack of Christmas cheer among senators still at work two days after the House had adjourned.

There was almost unanimous agreement that the president should never have summoned the Congress back into a post-election session which accomplished little and stirred personal animosities in place of holiday spirit.

"We have no reason for pride as we tuck our tails and slink out of this city," said Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark. "Shame, disgust and ridicule have been visited upon this body."

There also were personal attacks on conservative North Carolina Republican Sens. Jesse Helms and John East, as well as a few others who tried tenaciously to block the tax legislation.

"The country burns, while Congress fiddles," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., calling for a reform of "arcane rules" which he said "invite a tiny minority of the Senate to defy their colleagues by tying chamber into a Gordian Knot."

Criticism even came from Republican ranks.

"We have got to stop catering to single issues, stop catering to idealogues," said Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn.

Helms replied saying many senators had privately told him the attacks were "a lot of garbage. They said, 'We're with you. Hang in there.' "

The legislation passed Thursday raises the gasoline tax from 5 cents to 9 cents, effective April 1, to provide $5.5 billion a year for a program of highway, bridge and mass transit improvements. Supporters said 170,000 construction jobs would be created, as well as 150,000 more in related industries.

Strong winter storm making its way East

By The Associated Press

A "life-threatening" storm packing heavy snow and high winds menaced Christmas travelers as it crossed the Continental Divide today and took aim at the Midwest, while tornadoes spun across the lower Mississippi Valley, injuring at least three dozen people.

The storm dumped up to 13 inches of snow on the foothills near Boulder, Colo., and winds gusted to 50 mph as it moved into Wyoming.

"It looks like the snow will spread over much of the central Plains region by late today," said National Weather Service Forecaster Hugh Crowther in Kansas City. "It should be a white Christmas from western Kansas and eastern Colorado to Minnesota."

The winter storm, which pushed east Thursday into the Rockies from the Pacific Coast, has already caused 14 weather-related deaths and briefly blacked out hundreds of thousands of homes in California, Arizona and Nevada.

Crews at Denver's Stapleton International Airport struggled to keep one runaay clear of the snow, but United Airlines, which estimated today's passenger load at 15,000 people, suspended all flights until at least midafternoon. Northbound traffic on Interstate 5, the main Pacific Coast highway between Mexico and Canada, was halted late Thursday at the California-Oregon border because of traffic accidents caused by snow, authorities said.

"Winds will be getting strong, wind chill factors low," Jim Schultz, a Weather Service forecaster in Denver, said today. "It will be fairly dangerous for travel...If people get stranded, it's a life-threatening storm" with wind-chill factors of 15 to 30 degrees below zero.

The Colorado State Patrol reported most highways were snow-packed or icy in upper elevations, with chains required on most mountain passes.

Elsewhere, tornadoes accompanying a system of thunderstorms injured at least three dozen people Thursday in seven Arkansas cities from Texarkana northeast to Bepton. Some livestock were killed and structures also damaged in south ceptral Missouri, authorities said.

Five homes and four shops were destroyed and at least 34 homes were damaged in Texarkana.

In Malvern, Ark., three people were hospitalized and 14 others required emergency treatment for minor injuries from a twister that sliced through at about 5 p.m., said Mike Henze, administrator of the Hot Spring County Memorial Hospital.

Looting was reported in the downtown business district, and Mayor Bill Scrtmshire asked for National Guard help with traffic contgestion and cleanup work. He set a 9 p.m. curfew, saying sightseers and traffic were hindering rescue efforts.

The Weather Service said said damage in the Texarkana area was estimated at up to $5 million.

"We've got damage to buildings. We've got trees down because of flooding. We've got streets closed," said Kathy Owens, a dispatcher for the Texarkana Public Safety Dept. "We've got a lot of major damage."

Jack DuBose of the Arkansas Of0ice of Emeygency Services said 11 people were treated for minor injuries when a tornado roared through Benton, damaging 15 homes and destroying two grocery stores.

Jerol Garrison of Arkansas Power & Light Co. said 5,000 of the utility's 8,000 customers in Malvern were without power, and may not have power restored until late Saturday.

Several thousand northern California residents prepared for Christmas Eve by candlelight as residents cleared fallen branches and trees left in thz wake of the storm.

Hostage says she was treated well

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The Honduran president's daughter, freed by kidnappers after Mexican and Central American newspapers printed their anti-U.S. manifesto, says she was "treated well" during nine days of captivity.

Dr. Judith Xiomara Suazo Estrada, 33, a radiologist, was released Thursday night in downtown Guatemala City, near the site where kidnappers seized her Dec. 14 as she left the hospital she works in.

Her captors were a previously unknown group calling themselves the Pedro Diaz Command of the Revolutionary Movment of the Ixim, a Mayan word for food. Publication of the statement had been the only announced condition for the release of the daughter of Honduran President Roberto Suazo Cordova. The abductors had threatened to kill her if their demand was not met.

Newspapers published the statement Wednesday as an advertisement paid for by the victim's family. Her abductors had said they would free her within 48 hours after their communique was published in newspapers they specified.

"They treated me well," she told reporters at the Honduran Embassy where she was taken for security reasons after her release.

The tall, slender woman, wearing pants and a brown jacket, said she was in good health and prayed during her captivity. She did not appear tired.

She gave no further details of her captivity or release. A relative who asked not to be identified said she was freed shortly before 8 p.m. (CST) and first went to an aunt's home.

Miss Suazo Estrada, a Guatemalan citizen who has lived here for 20 years, said she did not know yet if she would go to Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital, to visit her father.

The kidnappers' statement criticized the United States, Honduras and Guatemala, blaming what it called "yankee imperialism," oligarchs and their military dictatorships for Latin America's problems.

It called Honduras the "imperialist headquarters for the invasion of Nicaragua," and claimed Honduras was a base for smashing revolutions in Central America and the Caribbean.

The Honduran president was described in the communique as "the buffoon of the imperialist plans."

One of the newspapers that published the statement, La Prensa, the largest in Honduras, also printed a front page editorial Wednesday headlined "criminal extortion" and denouncing the guerrilla statement as "poisoned, full of hate." The same day, the newspaper office was damaged by a bomb. There were no injuries and no group claimed responsibility.

Both the Guatemalan and Honduran governments said they refused to negotiate with the kidnappers, though Guatemala granted the family's request to publish the communique for "humanitarian reasons" after kidnappers said her life was in danger. The guerrillas had set at least two earlier deadlines for meeting their demand.

Government authorization for the family to publish the statement was necessary because of a state of siege proclaimed in July by Gen. Efrain Rios Montt, the military president.

Kidnapping has been a common tactic used by both leftist guerrillas and rightist paramilitary gangs in Guatemala.

In their communique the guerrillas claimed responsibility for the 1981 abduction of Dr. Roquelino Recinos, then health minister. Kidnapped in August, he was released in December after the government permitted publication of a leftist statement. At the time, the kidnappers did not identify themselves.

Luminarios line the sidewalks around the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Martinez, 3328 Neely Ave. Many homes and some churches will be outlined by the traditional candle-lit paper sacks this evening.

As part of the Mexican tradition, the luminario is lit at dusk, decorating the yard for Christmas. Juan Martinez, 6, whose family follows the tradition, carefully lights a luminario.

Perhaps, as some will say, the "feast of lights and fire" is a custom which originally sprang from the notion that the Christ child might be guided through the darkness to the house.

In Mexico, light and fire have a major role in the traditional Los Posada, a Spanish word for "place of lodging" or "inn." The celebration originated in the Biblical story of the nine-day journey of Joseph and Mary from Nazareth to Bethlehem, seeking lodging from inn to inn.

Many Mexican families looked forward to Los Posada, where luminarios — small fires placed outside their houses — were lit to guide the way for Mary and Joseph.

Literally translated, luminario means to illuminate with fire, which in general terms translates to lights of whatever kind placed in windows, towers and rooftops, or along the streets during festive occasions.

In time, the Latin American tradition crept into the U.S., where lighted candles fixed in small, sand-filled paper bags adorned the roofs and curbs of Mexican-American homes. They are called farolito, meaning little lantern, to distinguish them from the bonfire luminarios.

But today, any candle-lit yard, and even some outlined in electrical lights, are called luminarios.

"Displaying the luminarios has gotten to be more than a Mexican-American tradition," said Corina Martinez, whose Spanish-style house at 3328 W. Neely Ave., is illuminated by the candles.

"Many people line their yards with luminarios," she added. "It's part of the Posados," John Martinez, said, explaining that the luminarios are "traditionally placed during the nine days before Christmas Eve to mark the houses on the trail of the Los Posados procession."

"As you went down the trail you wouldn't stop at every house," he said. "The luminarios let you know where to stop to seek lodging."

Although the luminarios are usually lit only from Dec. 16 to 24, Ms. Martinez said "once you get away from the ritual, you can light them anytime."

The Martinez family, including sons Javier, 6, and Juan Antony, 12, crafted more than 20 luminarios to place along their front yard.

Martinez said the family placed three-inch candles in brown lunch sacks filled with soil.

"They're simple to make," Mrs. Martinez said.

Luminarios also can be made by cutting milk cartons in half and filling the bottom with wax, or filling coffee cans with sand, and then decorating the tin.

"We even used kitty litter one year instead of dirt, so they would be more sturdy," Mrs. Martinez said, noting that it is important "to place them about four feet apart so they will be pretty when they're lit."

Juan Antony Martinez, 12, left, and his 6-year-old brother, Javier, have all the ingredients — soil, paper sacks and candles — to prepare luminarios.

Test-tube conception clinics spring up

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Conceived under laboratory lights and born in the glare of national publicity, Elizabeth Jordan Carr was a scientific first in the United States.

Less than a year later, the brown-haired toddler from Westminster, Mass., is only one of 13 test-tube babies growing up in the United States. And clinics are springing up nationwide to duplicate the process pioneered in this country by Eastern Virginia Medical School researchers at Norfolk General Hospital.

"I have been surprised at the number of institutions who are anxious to embark on such a program," said Dr. Howard W. Jones Jr., who runs the EVMS clinic with his wife, Georgeanna.

"I am concerned that some institutions that do not have adequate resources and personnel may find that they are involved in a program they are not able to see through to a successful conclusion," Jones said of at least 15 clinics either opened or planned in eight states.

"The program has not yet reached the cookbook stage, shall we say, where you can read the directions and have it turn out reasonably well."

Jones said most of the clinics are in university-affiliated hospitals, but doctors also are setting up private clinics.

So far, the Norfolk clinic has been the most successful, recording nine more births since the first on Dec. 28, 1981, and 21 pregnancies in progress.

The clinics that have achieved pregnancies report a success rate that ranges up to 20 percent, compared to about 25 percent for normal intercourse.

About 140 women were treated in the clinic's first two years of operation, and the program is slowly expanding toward its goal of 200 women a year, Jones said.

Under the process known as in vitro fertilization, mature eggs are removed from a woman's ovary and fertilized with her husband's sperm in a glass laboratory dish. The eggs then are transferred to the woman's uterus, where a normal pregnancy takes place.

The process, developed in England in the 1970s, has been used primarily on women with blocked or missing Fallopian tubes that prevented pregnancy. Doctors have estimated that the process could help 2.5 million infertile women in this country.

A clinic at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles has reported three births since opening in September 1981.

Dr. Richard Marrs, the clinic director, said 50 fertilized eggs were implanted, resulting in nine pregnancies. Two women expect babies in the spring and the rest miscarried, he said.

No other clinics have reported births.

At least four pregnancies have occurred at a clinic affiliated with the University of Texas Medical School in Houston, said spokeswoman Ina Fried. The clinic, which opened in July 1981, treats about 15 women a month.

A clinic will open next month at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio, where doctors already have attempted IVF on a few women. The clinic will be able to treat 50 to 100 women in its first year, said spokeswoman Annette Richardson.

Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., has reported three pregnancies in its year in operation, and the Yale-New Haven Medical Center clinic in New Haven, Conn., also has achieved pregnancies, but director Dr. Alan Decherney declined to say how many.

"We're not interested in publicity," he said.

The only other clinic in the Northeast, at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, has not achieved any pregnancies since opening last fall, according to spokeswoman Adele Manno.

Clinics are scheduled to open next year at Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., and North Carolina Memorial Hospital, the teaching hospital of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine.

Doctors are known to have opened or are planning private clinics in Chapel Hill, N.C.; Sacramento, Calif.; Los Angeles and Dallas, and there may be others.

"A lot of them are opening and not saying anything," said Vern Jones, a spokesman for the Eastern Virginia Medical Center.

Demand for the service offered by the clinics is high. Nearly all report waiting lists, even with treatment costing between $3,000 and $4,000.

There has been little opposition to the new clinics from right-to-life activists who criticized the opening of the Norfolk facility. Some anti-abortion groups were concerned that fertilized eggs might be discarded, but doctors say that doesn't happen.

Bankruptcy judge quits over new rulings

DALLAS (AP) — When Congress adjourned this week without taking care of muddled questions concerning the nation's bankruptcy courts, one federal bankruptcy judge decided he'd had enough, a Dallas newspaper has reported.

In a copyright story in today's editions, the Dallas Morning News said U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Dean M. Gandy announced Thursday he's giving up his $58,500-a-year job after 12 years of service to the Northern District of Texas.

The newspaper said Gandy plans to return to private legal practice, where he specialized in oil and gas law before accepting the federal judgeship in 1970.

Gandy, 56, said recent rulings by the U.S. Supreme Court, labeling the present bankruptcy system unconstitutional, have occurred at a time when bankruptcy cases are nearing an all-time high. As much as $100 billion in property could be tied up in bankruptcy litigation, he estimated.

Gandy, who served this year as president of the National Conference of Banruptcy Judges, said he will step down next April.

His decision is final, Gandy said, even if Congress makes the bankruptcy problem one of its top priorities when the 98th Session opens next month, as Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker have promised.

"I don't think it would be fair to my successor," Gandy said. "Someone would have to be selected soon to take over when I leave."

Last June, the U.S. Supreme Court threw out a 1978 law that broadened the powers of bankruptcy judges. Prior to the law, the judges had served as referees under the supervision of U.S. district court judges.

The high court ruled the law unconstitutional because it did not give the bankruptcy judges lifetime tenure and protection from salary cuts, but agreed to extend the deadline for its ruling until Dec. 24 to give Congress time to change the status of bankruptcy judges to lifetime tenure.

But Congress did not act, and the high court refused Thursday a request from the Reagan administration to grant Congress more time to settle the issue.

Gandy said the legal limbo left by the lame duck Congress will make many federal bankruptcy judges hesitant to rule on any cases until the jurisdictional questions are resolved.

It is vital that the increased power of bankruptcy judges be protected because of the complexity of bankruptcy cases today, he said.

Gandy made known his resignation intentions in a letter written Wednesday, after Congress had adjourned without addressing the issue.

Gandy said he believes the issue became a political football in Congress because President Reagan would have been given the right to make 227 new judicial appointments to the bankruptcy courts when they were elevated in status.

"In effect, the bankruptcy judges are asking for something that could cost them their jobs," he said. "Many do not expect to receive the presidential appointments that this solution would require."

U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon of Fort Worth said an emergency order has been issued that will allow bankruptcy judges to continue operating despite the legal muddle.

U.S. District Judge Hal Woodward, who serves as chief judge of the 100-county Northern District of Texas, signed an order Thursday that delegates authority of the district judges to the bankruptcy courts, Mahon said.

"We authorize bankruptcy judges to continue to hear matters as they have in the past," Mahon said. "But we reserve the right to withdraw matters from bankruptcy courts if the need should arise."

Grandparents arrange to bury girl whose parents left behind

DALLAS (AP) — The body of a 3-year-old girl, killed in a camper fire and left behind by her parents for a pauper's burial, has been flown to Illinois for a funeral arranged by her grandparents she never knew.

Michelle Stuart's parents left Texas on Sunday, a few hours before she died of burns suffered at a flea market in suburban Grand Prairie, police said.

Her body had remained unclaimed in the Dallas County morgue after her mother, Susan Stuart, called authorities and said the family "was too busy" with their junk business to attend to a funeral.

"I don't know what has taken place or anything, but there's something wrong someplace," said Freeman Gunter, the child's grandfather. "I don't know how to explain it."

Michelle's grandparents arranged Thursday to have her body buried in a family plot at the Mulkeytown Cemetery in Mulkeytown, Ill. The funeral will be at 10 a.m. Monday.

Violet Gunter, the child's grandmother, said she and her husband were not sure how they would pay for the funeral.

"She'll have a place to go," Mrs. Gunter said. "If we have any money left over, we'll get a rock (a tombstone)."

More than a dozen people in the Dallas area volunteered to pay for a funeral after hearing of the girl's plight, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

Meanwhile, Grand Prairie police have issued arrest warrants for Mrs. Stuart and her husband, Lloyd. Investigators said they want to know how the fire started and if the girl, underweight at 25 pounds, had been abused.

Tarrant County child welfare authorities also want to check out the couple's 7-year-old son, police said.

In a telephone interview from her home in Mt. Vernon, Ind., Mrs. Gunter told the Times Herald that she spoke by phone Wednesday night to her daughter, who called Michelle's death "just an accident."

Mrs. Gunter said she asked Mrs. Stuart why she did not accompany the child to a hospital and refused to claim the body.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Cities and counties seeing interstate highways springing up through their environs no longer have to come up with 100 percent of the money for buying rights of way.

The State Department of Highways and Public Transporation has announced a major policy change which will take the monetary burden off the local governments and put it back on the state.

Currently, under state law the highway department will reimburse the city and county for 90 percent for the rights of way needed for an interstate road. Charles Muery with the State Highway Department's Odessa office said the city or county had to do the negotiating, buy the property and furnish title to the state. Then the state would reimburse the local government for its 90 percent share.

"The cities and counties were having trouble putting up the front money," he said.

Under the change, local governments will put their 10 percent share in an escrow account. "We'll do the negotiating with the property owner and then we'll draw on the escrow account," said Muery.

"Few counties and cities are staffed to handle negotiations," and hiring the necessary persons often was an added expense. "If they exercise the new procedure, we pick up the tab of people doing the negotiating. These negotiations can be handled by the State Highway Department staff. We have trained negotiators around the state. They know all the red tape and state and federal regulations."

This policy is optional, said Muery, and the local governments can continue to use their personnel and their money under the old rule.

"Economically, it would be to their (city and county governments) advantage for us to do it," said Muery. "I think the taxpayer and the landowner would benefit."

Commission Chairman Robert Dedman added that the new procedure should speed up projects by allowing a more orderly effort in acquiring needed right of way.

School board OKs energy system

LAMESA — An energy management system for Lamesa Middle School was approved this week by Lamesa School Board.

The system will allow centralized monitoring and controlling of energy use in the facility. The low bid of $16,588 from Oliver Energy Master System was accepted.

Due to current construction at the high school, the board decided to hold off on providing the upper level facility with a similar system.

. The board also accepted the appointment of Art Bizzell as 1982-1983 auditor, OK'd the schools' 1981-1982 audit report, and approved the budget for use of federal funds during 1982-1983.

Man dies from accidental shooting

A man found dead in his northside apartment late Thursday afternoon was the victim of an apparent accidental shooting on his 61st birthday, according to police.

The man was identified as Charles O. Leidgen of the Quail Run Apartments, 3101 N. Midland Drive, Apt. 201. He had been dead 18 to 24 hours, police estimated, and was found in a chair with a .44-magnum on the floor between his feet and gun cleaning equipment nearby.

He had been shot once in the forehead and apparently had been cleaning the weapon when it discharged. Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry pronounced him dead at the scene and his body was taken to the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home. Services are pending.

Fire damages bedroom

Fire believed caused by a child playing with a candle heavily damaged a bedroom of the Veronica Martinez residence at 2207 E. Front St. shortly before 8 p.m. Thursday.

Five fire department units responded the call and spent more than an hour at the scene. In addition to fire damage, the upstairs portion of the two-story wood frame house sustained heavy heat and smoke damage. No injuries were reported.

Tiny Chaminade topples No. 1 Virginia, 77-72

It was Randolph's first win against Sampson

By The Associated Press

Tiny Chaminade of Hawaii fired the shot heard throughout the college basketball world Thursday night, upending No.1 Virginia 77-72 in an upset that likely will live on in cage lore.

Tony Randolph scored 19 points and Jim Dunham 17 for the Silverswords, No.4 in the NAIA rankings. Virginia's 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson, the college basketball player of the year the last two seasons, played the entire game and was held to 12 points.

It was a night for upsets, with the two other previously unbeaten powers, UCLA and Missouri, suffering losses on the road.

Maryland scored an 80-79 double overtime victory over No. 3 UCLA and Washington downed No. 6 Missouri 55-48.

No. 4 Memphis State, the only other Top Twenty team in action, rolled over visiting Southern Mississippi 81-60 in a Metro Conference game.

RANDOLPH, A 6-foot-8 center, had faced Sampson five times in his high school career, as well as many times on the playgrounds of their hometowns.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

"I grew up with Ralph Sampson and knew him well," said the sophomore. "They were our arch rivals in high school. I was worried that he might have changed, but he didn't — except that he was a little more physical."

However, in their previous meetings, Sampson and his Harrisonburg, Va., High School teammates emerged victorious over Randolph and his Robert E. Lee High School teammates from Staunton, Va..

"I knew I couldn't handle him inside," said Randolph. "So I took him outside. He was letting me have that 19-foot jumper."

Chaminade Coach Merv Lopes, called Randolph the key to the "biggest upset in college basketball history. Not too many people get to beat the No.1 team in the nation. It's really amazing what human beings can do. What we did tonight was simply amazing. Randolph was the key, he started it all up for us with his outside shooting."

VIRGINIA COACH Terry Holland blamed the Cavaliers' inability to hit the outside shot as the key to what he called an upset that "ranks up there with the biggest."

"They packed the lanes tight on us," Holland said of the Silverswords' matchup zone defense. "They made us take perimeter shots and we missed a lot of easy shots and just couldn't put the ball in the hole. When you're not playing well on offense, your defense has to come through for you and we just didn't do well enough to stop them."

It was free throws that beat the Cavaliers, 8-1, as Chaminade, 11-1, converted 21 of 33. Virginia was 14 of 24 from the free throw line.

Chaminade, with only 900 students, now has two consecutive upsets of NCAA Division I teams to its credit. The Silverswords beat crosstown rival Hawaii 56-47 last Friday. Virginia and Hawaii are the only Division I teams Chaminade will face this season.

UCLA, WHICH had won 15 of its last 16 games last season for a 21-6 record and returned all but one starter this season, dropped its first game in seven starts this season.

Ben Coleman, a transfer from Minnesota, scored 27 points and Adrian Branch 26 for Maryland, 5-2, which recorded its first victory in four meetings with the Bruins. Mark Fothergill played a key role the Terrapins, scoring seven of his 14 points in the first three minutes of the second overtime.

Maryland led 72-67 with 2:27 remaining in the second session, but UCLA rallied to close it to 79-77 with 20 seconds left. Herman Veal's free throw with 11 seconds left proved to be the margin of victory as UCLA's Rod Foster hit a layup just before the buzzer.

Larry Farmer, UCLA coach, said, "You can't take any team lightly. You can throw out the records and rankings. If you're kot mentally prepared, it's going to be a long night."

WASHINGTON, 9-3, made Missouri, 8-1, its sixth straight victim behind 17 points and 13 rebounds by Greg Cavener, a 6-9 sophomore. Steve Stipanovich, Missouri's 6-11 center, was held to nine points.

Key free throws down the stretch by Alvin Vaughn and Brad Watson helped the Huskies to victory. Darrell Tanner's 13 points led well-balanced Washington attack, while Missouri got 17 points and 13 rebounds from sophomore Greg Cavener.

"With all due respect to the Huskies, we had more to do with our undoing than anybody," said Missouri Coach Norm Stewart. "This was our first game away from Missouri this year and we didn't handle it well."

Keith Lee, Memphis State's 6-9 sophomore, poured in 30 points against Southern Mississippi. He broke the game open with seven minutes during a seven-minute spree that pulled the 8-0 Tigers from 58-48 to a 69-52 advantage.

Bobby Parks added 16 points and grabbed nine rebounds for Memphis State, while Curtis Green's 18 points led Southern Mississippi, 6-3.

Shula hires son as assistant coach for Dolphin receivers

MIAMI (AP) — In four months, he's gone from National Football League player to law student to the NFL's youngest assistant coach.

David Shula, son of Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula, still isn't sure where he wants the future to carry him. But the 23-year-old former Dartmouth star believes an interim stint as receivers coach for the Dolphins will tell him a great deal about his abilities in that area.

"This will give me a chance to see if I have the aptitude," young Shula said this week after accepting an offer to fill a vacancy created by the departure of Wally English. "It certainly presents me with some very nice options."

The job, offered Monday after English accepted the head coaching job at Tulane, is his until at least Jan. 10, when Shula will have to make a decision on whether to return to law school at the University of Baltimore.

"He's familiar with our system, our personnel and he's also familiar with the personnel of the teams we're going to be playing," the elder Shula said, explaining his choice. "It seemed more logical to bring him in than to try to bring in someone from outside the system."

Young Shula's professional experience consists of only one year as a punt returner for the Baltimore Colts and six weekends of scouting for the Dolphins during this strike-shortened season. As a teen-ager, he also stood on the sidelines with his father, charting plays for the Dolphins.

His duties as interim receivers coach will be primarily to analyze films and assist in preparation of game plans. On game days, he will sit in the press box, anaylze defenses and relay information to the sidelines.

He said he has no intentions of trying to tell veteran receivers like Nat Moore, Duriel Harris and Jimmy Cefalo how to run pass routes.

"Those guys are all great receivers and have been very successful," said Shula, who is younger than all but two of Miami's receivers. "Hopefully I'll be able to help some of the young receivers, though."

A record-breaking receiver during his collegiate career at Dartmouth, Shula was passed over in the NFL draft. He defied the odds by earning a spot with the Colts as a free agent, but was cut during training camp this season.

He recently turned down an offer to play with the Washington franchise of the new United States Football League, and last month completed his first semester of law school.

Shula admits that he feels some pressure to prove himself in his new job, but says he won't let comparisons to his father bother him.

"I've dealt with it all my life. This isn't the first time that I've experienced the feeling that I'm trying to live up to somebody who's a legend in his own time," he said. "Taking all the criticism — 'You'll never be as good as your dad' — is nothing new to me."

Midland's Linne member of national championship team

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Just about the time the Texas Longhorns were packing their bags to leave for the Sun Bowl, one former gridiron tea-sipper was unpacking his after returning with a national championship trophy.

Larry Linne, a former Midland Lee football standout, went to the University of Texas where he made the team as a walk-on in 1980.

"I was the only-walk on to make the team that year," he said. "And that was the year we went to the Cotton Bowl."

Texas beat Alabama 14-12 in a come-from behind victory.

"I consider going up against a 'Bear' Bryant coached team a real privilege," he said.

Linne played on the taxi squad last year. But this year decided not to play college football and instead joined the Midland Allega Travel flag football team.

LINNE'S APPEARANCE in the Cotton Bowl was not the first one for a family member. His grandfather, Aubrey Herman, played in the first Cotton Bowl in 1937. Aubrey was a member of the TCU horned Frogs, a team that beat Marquette 16-6. It was a team that included the incomparable Sammy Baugh.

Twenty-two years later Larry's father, Aubrey Arthur, made his appearance in the Cotton Bowl. Like father, like son, this Aubrey also was a Horned Frog. Linne, an end, was on an offensive line that included the great Bob Lilly.

TCU and Air Force played to a scoreless tie in 1959.

AS A split end and defensive back, Linne helped to lead the Allega squad to a city title in the 21-team league.

Playing split end was nothing new to Linne, who has played the position since his days as a Rebel under Gil Bartosh. In his senior year Linne was selected to the all-district team at that position.

Linne was also the kicking specialist for Lee during the 1979 and '80 seasons when the Rebels finished second in district play.

Winning the city title enabled the Allegra team to advance to the regional playoffs in Abilene. There the Allegra team also finished first.

The next step was the Texas State playoffs in Dallas where Allega finished a respectable eighth. The San Angelo Wellers won the state title with Abilene finishing second.

The top two teams were allowed to add three players to their roster from the state playoff teams before moving on to the nationals. The San Angelo squad chose Linne and a teammate, Steve Waldrin.

WALDRIN, WHO played fullback at Lee, was an all-regional selection in high school and was named Who's Who in Texas high school football.

Linne was honored to be selected by the Wellers and joined the team in Edmond, Okla. for the national championships Dec. 11-12.

There were 16 teams from 13 states vying for the national championship of the National Flag Football League.

The trip was a worthy enterprise as San Angelo won the title in the double elimination tournament.

But it was no easy task for the Weelers as they lost their first round game. They fought their way through the losers bracket and faced Abilene in the finals.

Since Abilene had not lost a game the Wellers had to beat them twice to take home the title.

In simarly played games San Angelo did just that, 28-14, 28-19.

LINNE HAD four interceptions in the final game and caught one touchdown pass.

"They pass the ball a lot in this game," he said. "That's about all they do."

Linne had an outstanding tournament intercepting 12 passes and scoring four touchdowns in six games. For his efforts Linne was named runner-up to the all-national defensive squad.

Linne's Christmas will include a couple of hours of television, just enough to take in the Sun Bowl game between Texas and North Carolina.

"You bet I'll be watching," he said. "I wanted to go to the game but I just couldn't make the arragements."

Tar Heels' Bryant ends career Saturday against Longhorns

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Kelvin Bryant came out of the blocks so fast in 1981 he seemed likely to make mere mortals of such runners as Herschel Walker and Marcus Allen.

Bryant's accomplishments since that incredible start a year ago in which he rushed for 520 yards and scored 15 touchdowns in North Carolina's first three games haven't been exactly shabby, but almost anything would pale by comparison.

First came a knee injury in the first quarter of the fourth contest that sidelined him for four games and limited him to 13 carries in his return. But Bryant closed out the 1981 regular season with games of 171 and a career-high 247 — 1,015 for the year — and reeled off 148 more in the Gator Bowl against Arkansas.

This year, the 6-foot-2, 195-pound senior rushed for 1,064 yards and became the third player in Atlantic Coast Conference history to record three 1,000-yard seasons — he had 1,039 while splitting time with Famous Amos Lawrence in 1980 — despite being hampered by a sore ankle that he sprained before the season and reinjured in the first quarter of the second game.

Bryant will be one of North Carolina's prime offensive weapons when the Tar Heels, 7-4, meet eighth-ranked Texas, 9-2, in the Sun Bowl here Saturday.

THE GAME, nationally televised by CBS starting at 3 p.m. EST, is one of three college football games on Saturday. In the others, No. 9 Washington will meet No. 16 Maryland in the first Aloha Bowl in Honolulu and top players from around the country will meet in the annual Blue-Gray game in Montgomery, Ala.

After sitting out one contest and carrying only 14 times for 55 yards when he came back, Bryant reeled off six outings of 107 yards or more in Carolina's final seven games, accumulating 924 yards in that stretch. His per-game average of 106.4 was 11th in the nation.

But just like a year ago, Bryant had to take a back seat to Walker, et al.

"I guess I wasn't 100 percent until about the fifth game of the year," says Bryant, who ends his career Saturday. That was enough to eliminate him as one of the favorites in the Heisman Trophy race.

"The Heisman was always in the back of my mind," Bryant concedes. "But if I worried too much about that, I wouldn't do the things I have to do to help the team.

"My getting my ankle hurt might have been the best thing that happened. That way I didn't have to worry about the Heisman."

Bryant and his teammates have Texas Coach Fred Akers plenty worried, Heisman or no.

"I noticed earlier in the year when we had the balloting for the Outland Trophy, two of those nominees were linemen who played for North Carolina," says Akers. "One of the top Heisman Trophy candidates going into the season was Kelvin Bryant — he's still there, too. They've got a lot of talent and they are going to require the attention of anybody that plays them."

THE ALOHA Bowl features the nation's highest-profile kicker in Washington's Chuck Nelson, who booted an NCAA-record 30 consecutive field goals this year.

The 7 p.m. EST game, televised nationally on the ESPN cable network, pits two offenses that averaged more than 30 points a game this year, and defenses ranked in the nation's top 20. Each team picked up more than 4,000 yards in total offense this year.

After losing its first two games, Maryland rallied to win eight of its last nine games. The only setback in that string was a 24-22 loss to defending national champion Clemson.

Sophomore tailback Jacque Robinson, a first team All Pacific-10 conference selection this year, heads the attack for Washington, 9-2. Robinson, who won the most valuable player award in last year's Rose Bowl, didn't start until the sixth game of the season this year, but still accumulated 926 yards.

Despite the expected offensive show, the outcome of the game could likely rest with the place kickers, according to Ross and Husky Coach Don James.

"I'd like to get the chance to win the game," said Atkinson, who booted 16 of 22 field goal attempts and 39 straight extra points this year. "It's a challenge to be matched up against the best kicker in the nation. I like that."

AT MONTGOMERY, Reggie Collier, a quarterback from Southern Mississippi, and Steve Clarkson, San Jose State's prolific passer, will lead the opposing teams in the Blue-Gray game before an audience including professional football scouts.

"I've had quite a bit of contact from all the teams (in the National Football League)," said Clarkson, the field leader for the Blue team. "I've had letters and talked to scouts, but it's time to show them what I can do."

Collier, the only quarterback in NCAA history to pass and rush for more than 1,000 yards in one season, also is aware that a good performance for the Gray team could help his pro football aspirations.

"Some scouts have seen me in practice and they've seen me play," he said. "I hope they get a good impression of me here."

'Gunderman's Travels' lead to Caracas

WASHINGTON (AP) — How did Maryland defensive back Bob Gunderman wind up in Caracas on the way to the Aloha Bowl in Honolulu?

Well, says Pan Am, "Things like this happen, particularly this time of year." Especially since the one-stop check-in works so well.

Gunderman broke his finger Monday and missed the team's charter flight to Honolulu. He was then given a Washington-New York-Los Angeles-Honolulu ticket.

In New York, it seems, he got off and asked the sewtardess where to go. "Gate 12," she said.

He went, got on the plane without a passport check, and a couple of hours later — according to his account for a Washington Post sportswriter in Honolulu — noticed that everybody was speaking "Venezuelan," which is Spanish.

Penniless, passportless, watched by the cops, Gunderman was given $5 by a good samaritan. He bought two soft drinks and a sandwhich, remembering "I knew not to drink the water, or is that Mexico?" and was put on a plane for Los Angeles after 10 hours.

In Los Angeles, they figured his story was so strange that he had to be a drug courier, and he had to show his bowl tickets to get into the country. When he got to the training table, he got a standing ovation — rare for a second-stringer — for what is now know as "Gunderman's travels."

Jim Arey, Pan Am's spokesman in New York, noted Thursday that "if you board in Washington destined for an international point, everything is done there; all documents are checked" and you aren't bothered if you have to change planes.

Arey said the gate agent in New York clearly erred when he checked tickets, but "really, part of the burden these days ... is on the passenger, to make sure he's on the right airplane."

San Francisco players down but still have 'pride to play for'

If Chiefs win Sunday's game, 49ers could be eliminated from NFL playoffs

By The Associated Press

It's fourth and long for the San Francisco 49ers.

"Our guys are down," says 49er quarterback Joe Montana. "It's a hard feeling — realizing we're almost out of it. We'll show up for the last two games, though. We still have our pride to play for."

The 49ers have made a dramatic turnabout since winning last year's Super Bowl and finishing with a 13-3 record. The 49ers have won only two of their seven games so far in this strike-shortened National Football League season. And Sunday, they could be mathematically eliminated if they lose to the Kansas City Chiefs.

"As lousy as we're playing, if we backed into the playoffs by some miracle, we would only embarrass ourselves," says Keith Fahnhorst, the 49ers' offensive tackle.

The slide has been tough on the 49ers, who last year stunned the football world and made their coach, Bill Walsh, a household word by bouncing out of nowhere to win the Super his team's downfall in 1982.

"We're all working hard and paying attention, but it's that 10 to 15 per cent edge that we haven't had," Walsh said. "A lot of it is related to our age. We're so darn young. It took a supreme effort last year, and we just haven't been getting that effort."

Walsh said the complacency has not been limited to the players.

"I'd have to say it's affected the coaches somewhat, too," he said. "It permeates the entire organization."

San Francisco's losses have been mostly close ones this year, until the Atlanta Falcons whipped them 17-7 a week ago.The Chiefs, also 2-5, won last Sunday for the first time since the season resumed, using several big plays on defense to blast the Denver Broncos 37-16.

"A year ago, we were first or second on defense statistically," Walsh said. "I would say the defense has certainly not played up to the same level."

IN OTHER NFL games Sunday, it will be: New England, 4-3, at Pittsburgh, 4-3; the New York Jets, 5-2, at Minnesota, 4-3; Green Bay, 4-2-1, at Atlanta, 5-2; San Francisco, 2-5, at Kansas City, 2-5; Cleveland, 3-4, at Houston, 1-6; Washington, 6-1, at New Orleans, 3-4; Philadelphia, 2-5, at Dallas, 6-1; Denver, 2-5, at the Los Angeles Raiders, 6-1; Chicago, 2-5, at the Los Angeles Rams, 1-6; Detroit, 3-4, at Tampa Bay, 3-4; the New York Giants, 3-4, at St. Louis, 4-3; Baltimore, 0-6-1, at San Diego, 5-2; and Seattle, 3-4, at Cincinnati, 5-2.

With only two weeks remaining in the abbreviated regular season and the playoff format expanded from 10 to 16 teams — eight from both the National and American Conferences — only four clubs have clinched berths in the postseason competition. They are the Raiders in the AFC, and Dallas, Washington and Atlanta in the NFC.

The 11 teams in the NFC that have not qualified for the playoffs all are mathematically alive, while only Denver, Houston and Baltimore have been eliminated in the AFC. Although Denver has the same record as Kansas City in the AFC, the Broncos cannot make the playoffs because of a tie-breaking procedure.

The Patriots, meanwhile, are playing like a team possessed.New England, which "earned" the NFL's No.1 draft choice last year after posting a 2-14 record, are in strong contention for a playoff berth in the American Conference.

In their past two games, the Patriots have blanked Miami 3-0 and Seattle 16-0, and have a chance to pull off their third straight shutout Sunday at Pittsburgh.Ironically, the last NFL team to register three straight shutouts was Pittsburgh, in 1976.

The Patriots' performances this season have been surprising in view of their problems on the field last year and their off-the-field difficulties this season.

"Half the players want to get out of here," said one Patriots' player, who asked not to be identified.

The players' discontent has been directed at Ron Meyer, in his first year as head coach. They have expressed unhappiness with recent fines, the coaching staff's alleged lack of interest in their strategy suggestions and strict rules. In the past two weeks, Meyer has fined veteran fullback Sam Cunningham, running back Vagas Ferguson and an unidentified rookie.

"I don't go around looking to play gestapo at all," said Meyer. "I'm here to coach football."

THE JETS, seeking to clinch an AFC playoff berth for the second year in a row, can do it by winning one of their two remaining games. Their first shot will be Sunday at Minnesota, where the Vikings are unbeaten in five games — two exhibitions and three regular-season — this year.

Green Bay also needs a victory in one of its two remaining games — against Atlanta Sunday or in its finale at Detroit — to insure its first playoff appearance since 1972. The Falcons, winners of four of their last five games, stopped Montana's NFL record streak of five straight 300-yard passing games last weekend.

The Lions, nosed out 34-31 by Minnesota last Sunday, have lost four of their last five games while the Bucs, 24-23 winners over Buffalo, have won three of the last four.

"We had three do-or-dies and now there is one down and two to go," Tampa Bay Coach John McKay said, looking ahead to the Detroit game and the season finale against the Chicago Bears. "We aren't out of the woods yet.

"Detroit will be extremely difficult for us to defeat. We have never made a tremendous amount of yardage against them," McKay said. "I know some people said they were affected adversely by the strike. Then they went out and beat the heck out of a very good Green Bay team in Green Bay. They're a very solid football team. And if our players don't understand that, there will be a lot of people asking what happened in the locker room after the game."

Caps now 1-18-1 in Nassau Coliseum

Win extends Washington's record unbeaten streak to 14

By The Associated Press

In eight years of National Hockey League life, the Washington Capitals have been a model of futility. They have never made the playoffs. They've rarely been competitive.

But, in their ninth year, the Capitals are moving up. Thursday night, they showed how far they've come this season by winning for the first time at Nassau Coliseum, thoroughly throttling the three-time Stanley Cup champion New York Islanders 5-1.

The victory extended Washington's club-record unbeaten string to 14 games (9-0-5) and snapped a 13-game losing string on the Islanders' ice. The Caps were 0-18-1 in the Isles' den.

"We realized how important this game was to our development," said Mike Gartner, whose two goals and an assist led the Capitals into a tie for second in the Patrick Division with Philadelphia — two points behind the Islanders, who have played five more games than Washington. "We had never won here and we were really psyched. This is the team we have to catch.

"We've proven ourselves over the last 14 games to the rest of the league."

"You can understand why they've gone 14 games without a loss," said Arbour, whose team is 7-12-7 since Nov. 1, a span in which Washington is 13-3-8. "They outplayed us, outworked us, beat us to the puck, beat us in every department. They made us look like a last-place hockey team. We played stupidly. We should be ashamed."

The Capitals, of course, have nothing to be ashamed of now that they are erasing much of their dismal past with their current play.

THE NHL

"We're the workaholic Caps," said Dennis Maruk, who had a goal and assist. "A game like this shows we're looking ahead ... and up."

Elsewhere, it was Edmonton 6, Los Angeles 2; Calgary 6, Vancouver 3; Boston 5, Hartford 1; Quebec 6, Montreal 3; St. Louis 7, Toronto 3, and Detroit 6, Pittsburgh 4.

Oilers 6, Kings 2

The line of Glenn Anderson, Mark Messier and Marc Habscheid continued its hot scoring. Anderson had two goals and an assist, giving him five goals and two assists in the last two games; Messier set up two goals and Habscheid had a goal and an assist. Wayne Gretzky added a goal for the Oilers and Andy Moog starred in goal with 43 saves.

"The goaltending of Andy Moog was the difference," said Gretzky. "Andy played exceptionally well."

"I felt good tonight," said Moog. "I was prepared for a lot of shots."

Flames 6, Canucks 3

Mel Bridgman scored twice and Guy Chouinard set up three goals for the Flames. Paul Reinhart added a goal and two assists. Calgary had only 18 shots on Vancouver netminder Richard Brodeur, who had one of his worst nights of the season.

Bruins 5, Whalers 1

Boston's hot line of Barry Pederson, Rick Middleton and Mike Kruhselnyski combined for three goals and six assists — one goal and two setups apiece — and Pete Peeters, the NHL's leading goalie with a 2.44 goals-against average, stopped 21 shots. Boston has surrendered only two goals in its last three games.

"I never thought he (Peeters) would show as well as he has for us," Milbury said. "He seldom gives a team a cheap goal, and he's the best stickhandler we've had in goal since Cheesy (Boston Coach Gerry Cheevers)."

Nordiques 6, Canadiens 3

Quebec won for the first time in four tries this season against its archrival with Michel Goulet's goal and two assists leading the way. Daniel Bouchard made 40 saves for the Nordiques. Montreal lost goalie Rick Wamsley to a groin injury and forward Mark Hunter, who hurt his knee when he collided with his brother, Nordiques' center Dale Hunter.

"I just checked him," said Dale. "I didn't even know it was him. I think he got hurt when I fell on top of him."

Blues 7, Maple Leafs 3

Toronto's winless streak on the road is now at 27 (0-23-4), including 0-12-3 this season, thanks to Bernie Federko's two goals and an assist and Blair Chapman's goal and two assists for St. Louis. The Blues are unbeaten in their last four games.

Detroit 6, Pittsburgh 4

The improving Red Wings have lost only once in their last nine games after snapping out of a 14-game winless slide. They withstood Rick Kehoe's hat trick as Reed Larson had a goal and two assists.

"In the third period, we hit the goal post twice and missed twice with the goaltender out of the net," said Pittsburgh Coach Ed Johnston. "We're extremely frustrated. We play very well in spots, but we can't get the big goal."

Jones, Martin back in 'thunder, lightning' form

IRVING, Texas (AP) — They called Dallas Cowboy defensive linemen Ed "Too Tall" Jones and Harvey Martin "Thunder and Lightning" in the Dallas Cowboys' Super Bowl Year of 1977.

But somewhere along the way the "lightning" dwindled in kilowats.

The final straw was this year when Martin had to file for bankruptcy because of some soured business investments.

"It cleared my mind of some of my problems," said the 10-year veteran from East Texas State. "I'm concentrating 100 per cent on football now."

Martin has been drawing the notice of Dallas Coach Tom Landry as the 6-1 Cowboys prepare for a visit from the Philadelphia Eagles in Texas Stadium Sunday.

"Harvey has been having a good year," said Landry. "His mind is cleared of a lot of things that have been disruptive in he past. He has worked at football more than in the past."

Landry added, "When you get over 30 in our game you have to re-do it every year ... the older you get the more you have to work ... you have to hit those weights ... Harvey and (wide receiver) Drew Pearson have worked hard ... that's why they are doing so well."

Martin was one of the hardest workers Landry had in the team's training camp at Thousand Oaks and it has carried over despite the 57-day strike by members of the National Football League's Player Association.

"I feel good," said Martin. "We're going to be in the playoffs and everything is going good."

Martin said there should be no let down by the Cowboys against the Eagles and in Dallas' final regular season game Jan. 3 in Minnesota.

"Championship teams don't have letdowns this time of year," said Martin.

The meeting with the 2-5 Eagles will feature Martin and an Eagle who leads the league in sacks.

Philadelphia defensive end Dennis Harrison has a career high nine and one-half sacks going into the 3 p.m. game which is soldout and will be televised locally.

Dallas has 28 traps and 11 interceptions as they make life miserable for opposing quarterbacks.

The Cowboys were 10-point favorites to beat Philadelpia for the 11th time in 12 games in Texas Stadium between the two teams.

Lobos gain 78-74 OT win

Colson stays with stall despite boos

"I heard the boos, and I assumed they were for me, but I still think it was the way to win this game," said Colson Thursday night after New Mexico had edged rival New Mexico State 78-74 in double overtime.

The source of the boos from the capacity crowd of nearly 18,000 fans was Colson's decision to have his team stall through the final 12 minutes of regulation and most of the two overtime periods.

"We wanted to force New Mexico State out of their zone (defense) and we felt our offense would win out if we were patient."

THE WIN before the partisan but often critical hometown crowd was keyed by guard Phil Smith's 25-point effort.

Smith scored six points in the second overtime, including an insurance basket with a driving layup in the final seconds. The Smith layup came off a New Mexico State turnover as the Aggies tried to forge one more tie.

Two turnovers, a pair of missed free throws by New Mexico State star guard Ernest Patterson and a missed layup by reserve Elton Jones hurt the Aggies' bid in the final minute of the second overtime.

Patterson, who had riddled New Mexico for 42 points in the Aggies' 101-86 win over New Mexico earlier this month in Las Cruces, had sent the game into overtime by hitting two free throws with four seconds left in regulation.

Patterson finished with 20 points and teamed with swift and smooth Steve Colter to carry the brunt of New Mexico State's offense. Colter added 18 but fouled out in the waning seconds of regulation, when the two teams deadlocked at 70-70.

New Mexico State Coach Weldon Drew said the loss of Colter hurt the Aggies in overtime.

"Our two guards are our strong points,," said Drew. "With Colter, we could have done so much more offensively."

IN CONTRAST to the second half waiting game employed by New Mexico, the two teams traded baskets and the lead throughout the first half, with the Aggies ahead at 46-45 at halftime.

With 12:25 left in the second half, Smith had a three-point play that gave New Mexico a 61-58 lead and it was then Colson decided to go into a delay game.

Five minutes and two shots later, New Mexico had opened up a 65-58 lead. But New Mexico State refused to fold and with Patterson and Colter hitting clutch shots, battled back.

Smith missed a free throw with eight seconds left that would have clinched the win in regulation and seconds later Patterson was fouled as he drove towards the basket. Patterson converted on both free shots and Smith missed a 30-foot jumper at the buzzer.

New Mexico State missed its only shot in the first overtime and New Mexico then ran down the clock until guard Tim Fullmer missed a 20-footer with two seconds left.

In the second overtime, Tim Garrett and Smith scored to give a New Mexico a 74-70 lead before a basket by Patterson and two free throws from center Derek Sailors tied it a final time. After Smith hit a pair of free throws, Patterson missed two free throws with 1:13 left.

Forwards Don Brkovich and Garrett added 15 and 14 points while center George Scott chipped in 14 points and had 13 rebounds for New Mexico.

Forward Lindsay McElmell was the only other NMSU player in double figures with 15, with 11 of them in the first half.

With the two teams splitting their series this year, they are both now 5-2 for the season.

Oilers' Tullis will get needed experience

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler cornerback Willie Tullis will be a better player when he realizes pro football is a team sport, says assistant Coach Bob Gambold.

"Willie gets a little excited," Gambold said. "He thinks he's the only guy on the field sometimes. That's inexperience for you."

Tullis will get more experience Sunday when the Oilers try to break their five-game losing streak against the Browns, who are 3-4 and face virtual elimination from the National Football League playoffs if they lose in the noon kickoff in the Astrodome.

Tullis, who replaces injured J.C. Wilson, thought he had to do it all last week against the Philadelphia Eagles when he yielded a touchdown catch that gave the Eagles a 21-0 lead shortly before halftime.

"All he could think about was making the interception," Gambold said. "If he'd gone up with two hands and batted the ball down, they'd have been third and long. But that's the way it's been going for us all season."

Tullis is among a group of younger players fighting their way into the Oiler lineup as Coach Ed Biles tries to reverse a two-season tailspin.

Free agent offensive guard Ralph Williams is another player getting his chance because of a series of injuries that sidelined first round draft choice Mike Munchak and then his replacement, George Reihner.

Williams' first start was against the Dallas Cowboys where he found himself across the line from premier defensive tackle Randy White.

But Williams did surprisingly well against the All-Pro White and will get another test against the Browns.

Although the Cowboys ditched the Oilers 37-7, Williams won a small victory in his personal war against White.

"He didn't say anything to me and I didn't say anything to him," Williams said. "He stared at me and I stared at him. It was all business. I'm pretty pleased with the way I played. I wanted to make a good impression. All I'd been looking for was the chance. I didn't want to waste it."

The Browns are coming off of an important 10-9 victory over Pittsburgh which they won with third year quarterback Paul McDonald, who replaced the benched Brian Sipe.

Archie Manning will start at quarterback for the Oilers and hope for better protection than he got against the Eagles a week ago when he was sacked seven times and intercepted twice.

English leads Denver to 135-127 victory

By The Associated Press

The Denver Nuggets are back on the ball, according to Alex English. And, actually, he's the one who put them there.

"Tonight, we played our game. When you play like we did tonight, we're hard to beat," English said after his 43 points led the Nuggets to a 135-127 National Basketball Association victory over the Detroit Pistons Thursday night.

The Nuggets are trying to repeat last year's appearance in the NBA playoffs, but have been struggling this year with an 11-16 record. Thursday night's victory snapped a two-game losing streak.

"Last night, we were just flat," English said of Denver's 146-102 loss to Kansas City the previous night. "When you play 82 games in a season, that's going to happen."

NBA ROUNDUP

Denver Coach Doug Moe substituted freely in an effort to keep Detroit's defense off-balance.

"We played very well tonight," Moe noted. "We shot well. We were very agressive. Hopefully this is the start of a repeat of last year and we'll get hot.

"I changed the way I had been subsituting players and I moved them in and out of the game because of the way we had been struggling. When I do that, they don't realize they are playing as a bench."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was: New Jersey 97, Washington 90; Milwaukee 101, Atlanta 90; Phoenix 125, Dallas 106; Los Angeles 120, San Diego 115; Portland 88, Houston 82 and Seattle 120, Golden State 95.

The Nuggets had lost four of their previous five games. Against the Pistons, however, the Nuggets broke away from a 27-27 tie to take a 42-37 lead at the end of the first quarter and led the rest of the way — although the Pistons made a strong run in the fourth quarter. Denver led 77-68 at the half and 107-98 after three quarters.

With 7:30 remaining in the game, Denver led 121-110, but Detroit ran off 10 straight points — including six by Isiah Thomas, who finished with 28 points — and the Pistons trailed only 121-120 with 5:14 remaining.

However, Denver outscored Detroit 8-3 over the next three minutes and the Pistons never got closer than two points the rest of the way.

Nets 97, Bullets 90

Albert King broke out of a scoring slump with 24 points and Clarence "Foots" Walker tallied seven points in the final two minutes to lead New Jersey over Washington.

King, who had hit on only 19 of 60 field goals in the last four games, also tied a career-high with 14 rebounds, added five assists and had three blocked shots.

"Albert took it upon himself to get his game back on track," said Buck Williams, New Jersey's other starting forward.

King said he didn't get discouraged during his scoring slump because he wasn't struggling in other areas.

"Of course, if you're an offensive player and don't score it's more obvious," he said. "When you score, other parts of your game are forgotten, no matter what."

Bucks 101, Hawks 90

Sidney Moncrief scored 31 points and Milwaukee held off an Atlanta rally to beat the Hawks. Moncrief scored 16 points in the first quarter for the Bucks, who scored seven points in a row during one stretch and led 38-28 at the end of the period.

Two baskets, a blocked shot and a steal by Roundfield pulled the Hawks to within 82-80 with 10 minutes to play, and the Hawks were within three points with 5:17 left, but field goals by Dave Cowens, Junior Bridgeman and Marques Johnson gave the Bucks room at 97-88 with 2½ minutes to go.

Suns 125, Mavericks 106

Maurice Lucas scored 13 of his season-high 33 points in a pivotal third period as Phoenix beat Dallas.

Lucas' three-point play broke a 67-67 tie four minutes into the second half to give Phoenix the lead for good. He added six more points in the next 5:55 as the Suns went ahead 91-84 by period's end.

Lakers 120, Clippers 115

Earvin "Magic" Johnson hit a layup with 38 seconds remaining to snap a 115-115 tie, triggering Los Angeles over San Diego.

The Lakers never trailed in the game and led by as much as 20 points in the first half, but the Clippers rallied from a 15-point deficit at the start of the fourth quarter to tie the contest at 115 on a dunk by Tom Chambers with 1:09 left. Johnson snapped the game's only tie 31 seconds later.

Trail Blazers 88, Rockets 82

Portland scored only 38 points in a sluggish second half but still managed to beat hapless Houston behind Jim Paxson's 24 points.

The Blazers led by as many as 18 points in the first half, settling on a 50-37 halftime lead. But the Rockets, now 4-22 in the Midwest Division, rallied in the third period behind Major Jones and Joe Bryant and took the lead on two occasions, at 64-63 and later at 76-74.

SuperSonics 120, Warriors 95

Lonnie Shelton scored eight points and added five rebounds in the decisive second quarter as Seattle beat Golden State for its fifth straight victory.

Shelton, who scored 14 of his 16 points in the first half, also contributed two steals in the second quarter when Seattle turned an eight-point advantage into a 17-point lead.

The Sonics, who played exceptional defense throughout the game, forced the Warriors to shoot 37 percent through the game's first three quarters. Gus Williams led Seattle's balanced attack with 22 points.

Federal National Mortgage Association

FNMA offers new loan options

By CLYDE V. SMITH
Copley News Service

Fannie Mae to the rescue again!

The Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA or Fannie Mae), which owns more than 2 million home loan mortgages nationwide or about one in every 20, has announced new options which will lower interest rates significantly, thus making housing finance more affordable.

It is significant because for every percentage point the interest rates drop, 2 million more American families can qualify financially for the purchase of a home, according to accepted estimates.

FNMA's calls its new program, announced at a press conference at the November convention of the National Association of Realtors, "The Fannie Mae Mortgage Solution," which provides a "blended rate" of interest below the prevailing open market rate on new conventional mortgages but almost assuredly higher than the old rate on the mortgage in FNMA's loan portfolio.

Actually, this is an extension of FNMA's resale and refinance mortgage plan introduced in early 1981, which provided 30-year, fixed-rate loans at an interest rate higher than the existing mortgage but lower than in the open market. Under that plan, FNMA had committed to provide nearly $3 billion in financing to more than 45,000 home owners and buyers. That was before the new program was unveiled.

The new "solution" adds more options to the resale/refinance program, each of which provides an initial lowering of the interest payment cost. That's the main thrust of the new plan — to permit lower-income families to qualify for loans.

The new instruments, announced by Stuart A. McFarland, FNMA executive vice president, include an adjustable rate mortgage, known in the trade as ARMs, and a graduated payment adjustable rate mortgage, which FNMA tabs with the acronym of GPARMs.

How do they work? Let's explain with examples supplied by FNMA.

Joan and Henry Williams want to sell their house. The real esate broker listing the property checks with their current mortgage lender and determines their loan is owned by FNMA. He finds their home qualifies for a "Fannie Mae Mortgage Solution" loan, and works up these examples for prospective buyers, illustrating the dollar-and-cents advantages provided FNMA's mortgage solution:

The outstanding balance of their FNMA-owned mortgage is $35,000 which carries an existing interest rate of 9.5 percent. Sale price of the home is $67,000, requiring a $7,000 down payment and a $60,000 new mortgage.

If the buyers went to the open market, the interest rate would be 13.5 percent, requiring monthly payments of $687 for interest and principal and an annual income of $29,450 to qualify.

But with FNMA's Solution 1, the 30-year fixed-rate mortgage, of interest rate would be 12.6 percent, requiring a monthly payment of $645 and an income of $27,650 to qualify. That's the plan that has been available since early 1981.

But with FNMA Solution 2, the adjustable rate mortgage or ARM plan, interest would be reduced to 11.1 percent with monthly payments dropping to $576 and an income of $24,700 to qualify.

FNMA's Solution 3 drops payments even lower. This graduate payment adjustable rate mortgage would drop the initial interest rate to 8.5 percent, with monthly payments of only $460. An annual income of only $19,700 would be needed to qualify for Solution 3.

But don't be misled. This is no giveaway deal. There are no free lunches. The buyer or owner sooner or later has to make up for the difference.

With Solution 2, for example, the adjustable rate mortgage for $60,000, the interest rate will be subject to change each five years, and the open market then will govern the new rate. However, the borrower can be assured that the adjusted rate will rise no more than 2½ percentage points each five years. If open-market mortgage rates continue to decline, the adjusted rate might even go lower than the 11.1 percent at the beginning of the loan.

Atari executives sold stock before it plummeted

By AL DELUGACH
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post
News Service

Warner Communications Inc. disclosed late Thursday that the chairman and executive vice president of its Atari video game subsidiary sold large amounts of Warner stock just before a company announcement Dec. 8 sent its stock prices into a tailspin.

In the announcement Thursday, Warner Chairman Steven J. Ross said company representatives, at his direction, had met with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington, D.C., and disclosed the information. Warner said the two officials have defended the transactions. Ross said that he also directed independent auditors to review the transactions and report to the SEC.

Word of the executives' trading in Warner stock was disclosed at the company's headquarters in New York after the close of trading on the New York Stock Exchange and just before a three-day market holiday for Christmas.

Warner's stock has lost more than 45 percent of its market value since its Dec. 8 announcement that its fourth-quarter earnings would be sharply lower than projected because of a surprise slump in sales of Atari games.

ATARI® HOME COMPUTERS
A Warner Communications Company

Atari Chairman Raymond E. Kassar sold 5,000 Warner shares on Dec. 8 and Dennis D. Groth, executive vice president, sold 6,376 Warner shares Dec. 1, "in addition to some earlier transactions," Warner said. At market prices prevailing at the time, the sales by the executives totaled more than $800,000.

Ross said Warner also has been told that "some other Atari employees sold some of their holdings" in Warner securities.

The stock has fallen to below $30 a share from $53 since the announcement was made. On Thursday, before the latest Warner announcement, the stock closed on the New York Stock Exchange at $29.50, down 25 cents for the day.

A spokeswoman at Atari headquarters in Sunnyvale, Calif., said Thursday that both Kassar and Groth were out of town for the Christmas holiday and unavailable for comment.

However, Atari quoted Kassar as saying that his Dec. 8 sale of 5,000 Warner shares was made as part of his year-end tax planning and has been the subject of discussions with his broker and tax adviser. He said the discussions took place substantially before the Dec. 8 Warner announcement.

Utilities Commission Approves Merger

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has approved a merger that purportedly would create the largest publicly owned electric utility in Texas.

The plan approved Wednesday would allow Texas Electric Service Co. and sister companies Dallas Power & Light Co. and Texas Power & Light Co. to become divisions of the new Texas Utilities Electric Co. on Jan. 1, 1984.

The commission, however, instructed the companies to file testimony showing cost savings or additional expenses that might result from the merger.

The commission said requests for rate increases filed after Jan. 1, 1984, would be part of a single case with uniform rates for all three divisions.

T. Louis Austin of Dallas, board chairman of the parent company, said the union would result in more efficient operations, although savings resulting from the merger probably would not be evident in customers' bills.

He said no one would be fired as a result of the merger. "We'll let attrition take care of that," Austin said. "We've already started doing that by not filling jobs when people retire or leave."

The three companies are subsidiaries of Dallas-based Texas Utilities Co. DP&L mainly serves the City of Dallas, TP&L is based in Northeast and Central Texas, while Fort Worth-based TESCO has separate rate cases for its own service area.

Austin said the merger plan still must be approved by stockholders and board directors next spring. Customers would continue to pay bills to their present companies since all three would retain their names and service areas.

Austin said the new Texas Utilities Electric Co. would have about 14,000 employees and assets of up to $7 billion, surpassing Houston Light & Power Co. as the state's largest electric utility.

The companies opposed the commission's order for a single rate case after 1983.

The companies' plan called for a paper reorganization of the operating companies, power generating divisions and accounting, construction and mining functions.

Commissioners said at a hearing last month that state law would require a single rate case if the firms became divisions of a single company.

The companies "felt that for a few years, it might change the rates too much in some towns," Austin told The Dallas Morning News. "Some would go up and some would go down, and customers would be upset."

Current rates for the three companies are similar, commissioners noted.

"It is apparent that a change to a single rate structure could be made with minimum customer impact," the commission ruled.

Jobless claims drop to five-month low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans filing first-time claims for unemployment benefits dropped to 533,000 in the week ending Dec. 11, hitting the lowest level since last July, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

It was the third straight weekly decline for initial compensation claims and an encouraging sign that the national unemployment rate might soon level off.

Today's report also said that in the week ending Dec. 4 about 4.52 million Americans claimed unemployment benefits under regular state programs. That was a decline from 4.71 million the previous week and put the total at the lowest level since September.

The insured unemployment rate — the proportion of the labor force drawing jobless benefits — dropped to 5.2 percent for the week ending Dec. 4 from 5.4 percent the previous week.

Many economists use the 600,000 initial-claims level as a benchmark for the national unemployment rate, saying that when claims are above that level the rate will probably rise and when claims are below 600,000 per week the jobless rate should stop rising or even decline slightly before very long.

However, most analysts, including some in the Reagan administration, also have been saying the overall rate will probably rise above November's 10.8 percent before declining next year. The 10.8 percent level is already the highest in 42 years.

The jobless claims figure is adjusted by Labor Department economists to discount for changes due only to normal seasonal variations such as weather or holidays. Before such adjustment, the new report said, initial claims at state unemployment offices totaled 638,172 for the week ending Dec. 11, down from over 709,000 the previous week.

The new seasonally adjusted initial-claims level is the lowest since the 518,000 for the week ending last July 31. Claims hit a recession high of 703,000 in the week ending Sept. 18 and were above 600,000 through most of August, September and October.

However, after reaching 654,000 the week ending Nov. 20 — the week before Thanksgiving week — they have declined to 598,000, then to 591,000 and now to the new 533,000 level.

Administration officials have noted the recent decline with approval. But they — as well as private analysts — have been reluctant to declare that a longterm downward trend has begun until more evidence is in.

Most economists say that with the economy remaining relatively weak the national unemployment rate probably won't fall below 10 percent next year.

DA&S finances Manor Park library

Permian Basin-based DA&S Oil Well Servicing, Inc., recently presented a gift to Midland's Manor Park retirement community "in the name of customers and friends" to finance the center's own library. According to company president Dean A. "Beach" Snyder, "DA&S believes in enhancing the quality of life in the area where we do our business."

Manor Park, to be located in northwest Midland, is affiliated with Trinity Tower retirement complex located on West Illinois, in Midland. The library will be contained in the Core Building, scheduled for completion in 1984 as part of a $40 million development project on a 40-acre site.

Headquartered in Hobbs, operating more than 50 well servicing units in West Texas and southeastern New Mexico, DA&S is one of the nation's largest independent well servicing companies.

Previous contributions of a similar nature have been made by DA&S to the College of the Southwest in Hobbs, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and the Allison Cancer Treatment Center in Midland.

Grandy's to open restaurant

Grandy's Country Cookin', a family-style restaurant specializing in southern fried chicken and country fried steak dinners, is in its final stages of construction and is scheduled to open its doors Monday, January 17. The restaurant is located at 3211 Andrews Highway.

While many restaurants choose to name themselves after their owners, Grandy's is named after the person who best represents the old-fashioned, homestyle cooking that Grandy's serves — everyone's grandmother.

Grandy's serves real meals on a plate, concentrating on three things which hungry folks like: home-style meals made from scratch, reasonable prices (dinners are priced from $2.49 to $3.69), and fast service that puts the emphasis on pleasing each customer.

Each dinner comes with a choice of vegetables that include baked beans, cole slaw, and mashed potatoes with creamy skillet gravy.

Arkansas man to be regulator

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Little Rock insurance company official who was finance chairman of Gov. Frank White's re-election campaign has been named a director of the Federal Home Loan Bank at Little Rock.

B.W. Chaffin, 55, a senior vice president of First Pyramid Life Insurance Co., replaces William L. Ferren of Pine Bluff, president of BBF Oil Co., in the public-interest slot on the 15-member board of directors.

The bank serves and regulates 615 savings and loan associations in Arkansas, New Mexico, Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Chaffin, who will serve a four-year term, was notified Wednesday his appointment had been confirmed by President Reagan.

Conversational computers soon

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Toymakers at Milton Bradley Co. and computer engineers at Texas Instruments have developed a device that will allow people to conduct limited conversations with home computer.

Milton Bradley Vice President Charles M. Perrottet said the device, which will sell for less than $100, can be used with Texas Instrument's 994-A home computer.

The unit will be able to recognize 10 to 12 words programmed into a game cartridge and will be able to answer in synthesized speech. Users of the device will be able to give commands to the home computer by saying each word of the command twice.

The unit also comes with a joystick and keypad for game playing.

Texas Instruments, of Lubbock, Texas, will have exclusive rights to the device for six months, Perrottet said.

"Six months from now we can produce this unit for any other computer company," Perrottet said.

The Texas Instruments home computer sells for $299, with a $100 rebate through April 1983, Perrottet said.

Perrottet said Milton Bradley views the agreement as a way for it to enter the home computer field with education and game cartridges without producing an entire computer system.

"This is basically a cartridge deal. We are professional game and educational material producers," Perrottet said.

Midland building slows, Albertson's, apartment project in preconstruction

Unless builders and developers seek a higher number of building permits in December than usual, the final tallies for the number of permits issued and their dollar valuation for 1982 will not surpass those of 1981.

Through the end of October, Midland's Department of Permits and Inspections had issued 2,659 building permits, or 71 more than for the same period in 1981, a record-setting year.

In November, however, the pace slowed to the point that the cumulative total of permits issued, 2,815, was less than the 2,888 issued through the end of November, 1981.

Still, the amount of building activity in 1982 kept up with that of last year for 10 months, and is now just 73 permits off that hectic pace.

In November, the city issued permits for $12.5 million worth of commercial and residential construction, bringing the 1982 total to date to $253,055,287. At the end of the first 11 months of 1981, the city had issued permits for construction valued at $286,716,874.

Topping the list of November projects was a permit granted to a Houston construction firm for a 192 unit, two-story apartment complex valued at $3.4 million and located at 5216 Tremont. Also permitted during the month was a new Albertson's grocery store. Ground work has already begun at the site of the $1.86 million supermarket on the northwest corner of Midland Drive and Wadley Avenue.

The Woodmont Corporation, Fort Worth, was issued a permit to begin work on its project, a $1.93 million shopping center at the corner of Midkiff Drive and Loop 250, diagonally across the intersection from Midland Park Mall. The project, known as the Courtyard at Midland Park, will include four buildings, one of which will be two stories.

During November, the city issued permits for 34 new single family residences, estimated to have a total construction value of $1.85 million. This was the lowest number of single family home permits issued in a single month in 1982, and is lower than the number issued in any single month in 1981.

In 1981, the city issued 1,552 permits for new residences through the edn of November; that figure this year is down slightly, to 1,258. A similar change has taken place for permits for commercial construction. In the first 11 months of 1981, the city issued 225 permits; the figure this year in the same period was 203.

Commercial and residential alteration and repairs have increased, however, from 912 permits issued in the first 11 months of 1981 to 1,163 so far this year. In November alone, the city granted permits for alterations valued at $2.4 million, or $600,000 more than the amount of valuation for all the new homes permitted during the same period.

Overall, building activity in Midland is still high, as evidenced by the number of inspections made on site by city inspectors. In the first 11 months of 1981, there had been 25,966 inspections made. The comparable figure for 1982 is 31,264.

Church permit tops December list

The city of Midland issued 36 building permits the week of Dec. 6-10, and 28 in the week Dec. 13-17, for construction valued at $2,084,332. This brings the total for December to $3.8 million, and for 1982 to date, to $256,884,969.

Topping the list of new buildings planned was a permit granted to J. T. Cartrite for the construction of Northwestern Baptist Church at 3915 Mockingbird Lane, for $275,000.

Other commercial or commercial alteration permits went to: Benton Parton, 2400 FM 715, Big Three Tire Company, $92,000; Dan Fender, 1302 W. Dakota, alteration, $4,000; Rankin & Co., 2306 W. Michigan, alteration, $20,800; Enrique Aguirre, 1906 W. Illinois, alteration for doctor's office, $4,000; Timber King Inc., repair fire damage at 2438 Whitmire, $5,000; Apartment Development Corp., Building of the Southwest, restaurant/bar, $25,000; DeJager Construction, Midland Park Mall, shoe store, $30,810.

Within the two-week period, the city issued permits for 30 new single family residences and 24 residential alterations.

Pan Am unions scared, company may turn profit

By CHRISTOPHER LINDSAY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An agreement by three major unions to extend 2-year-old wage concessions at Pan American World Airways could help the company return to profitability next year, an executive says.

Pan Am Chairman C. Edward Acker had threatened last week to shut down the airline Jan. 8 unless the agreement was reached, although his comments were characterized by company spokesman James Arey as merely "labor relations ... saber rattling."

Pan Am was bargaining with the Transport Workers Union, Teamsters Union and the flight attendants union. It already had reached agreement with its pilots and flight engineers.

The new two-year contracts, which still must be ratified, call for more flexible work rules and freeze pay at the level of two years ago, when the unions accepted a 10 percent pay cut to help the troubled airline.

The settlement was announced jointly Wednesday by Acker and Paul Chorbajian, chairman of the airline's labor council.

"The actions of our five labor groups, taken independently, reaffirm our commitment to support our company and the loyal traveling public," Chorbajian said. "As Pan Am's largest shareholders, we are all dedicated to returning Pan Am to profitability in 1983, and we will succeed."

Pan Am, one of the world's oldest and biggest airlines, lost $212 million in the first nine months of 1982 — the third year of an industry-wide slump.

In May, Braniff International became the first modern airline to collapse, in part because its financial problems and widely circulated questions about its ability to survive kept passengers away.

Braniff grounded its fleet May 12 and filed for protection from its creditors under federal bankruptcy law the following day and laid off almost all of its 10,000 employees.

Jeffrey Kriendler, a Pan Am vice president, said Acker's threat to shut down the airline was issued "in the context of labor negotiations."

"He's wielding a heavy stick to get these people to come to reason," Kriendler said.

The Transport Workers and Teamsters perform various airport ground support services, including maintenance and ticketing.

The contract will be submitted to the rank and file of the Teamsters and Transport Workers and to the executive board of the flight attendants' union after New Year's, Pan Am spokeswoman Pamela Hanlon said.

Many of the world's major airlines have reported losses in the last three years, attributable to two recessions, fare wars and escalating fuel prices.

Analysts are projecting that U.S. airlines will have an overall loss of up to $1 billion this year, following losses of $500 million in 1981 and nearly $250 million in 1980.

Forecasting savings deposits is tough, vital to economy

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

'Tis sane to save, says the U.S. government, giving people all manner of structural inducements — a savings-oriented tax cut, IRA and money market accounts and Keogh plans.

Behaving rationally, the people respond: The personal saving rate is now up to 7 percent from the 5 percent bottom of the late 1970s — although it's still a long way from the 8 percent to 9 percent range of the early 1970s.

So what does the government do? Panicked about low consumption and excessive saving, it takes the one move that discourages savings more than anything else: It drives down interest rates.

Schizophrenic? Yes. Inconsistent? Lord, yes. Surprising? Hell, no.

It's little wonder then that economists are going crazy trying to figure out whether the consumer will save during this decade. To make a forecast about consumer behavior, you must make an assumption about government behavior — and that's like predicting the exact minute that a monkey, left in a room for eternity with a typewriter, will one day type out T.S. Eliot's "Wasteland."

Attempting to predict future consumer saving rates is not just an idle exercise: Retailers desperately need to know families' future propensity to consume, and Wall Street, savings institutions and capital goods producers want to know households' disposition to save.

Interest income has become increasingly important in the general scheme of things. As George Cruikshank of New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust pointed out, in the 1950s, interest income represented only 1.8 percent of national income. In the 1960s, it rose to 3.6 percent — then to 6.2 in the 1970s and to 11 percent this year.

When interest rates were sky-high, the main beneficiaries were individuals, noted Cruikshank. At year-end 1981, American people had $1.4 trillion in time and savings deposits and $300 billion in money market funds, Treasury bills and such. Over the past four years, interest income rose almost $200 billion, or more than 20 percent per year.

In trying to predict future saving rates, one must understand some past — it's important to emphasize past — behavior patterns. Historically, people in the upper income brackets (above $47,800 in 1980 dollars) save a whopping 32.6 percent of their incomes, according to Wall Street economics firm A. Gary Shilling & Co. Those in the upper-middle income groups ($22,900 to $47,800) save 14.4 percent and those in the lower-middle ($11,500 to $22,900) save just 1.4 percent. Below $11,500, folks go into the hole.

Unfortunately, the people in the higher income group constitute just 6 percent of U.S. households, and the upper-middle 31 percent. However, these two groups will get 82 percent of the tax reduction program passed in 1981, and that's going to boost savings. (Of course, most of the personal tax cut has either been repealed or replaced by other taxes — thus diluting those savings. And more increases are coming fast.)

There is an important factor boding ill for savings: age distribution. According to Shilling data, people 55 to 64 are the biggest savers, salting away 12 percent of their incomes, while the people 45 to 54 are the second biggest at 10 percent. But the folks young adults 25 to 34 and 35 to 44 historically — and I emphasize historically — have saved just 4 percent of their incomes, and those over 65 just 6 percent. Those under 25 go into the red.

"Policy incentives to increase saving will be fighting an uphill battle as the postwar babies swell the low-saving/high-spending 35- to 44-year-old age group," said Barbara J. Muller of the Shilling firm. The 35 to 44 qroup, combined with the 25 to 34 set, will be 45 percent of U.S. households in 1990, up from 37 percent in 1970. Also, the 65-and-over group will be increasing in numbers, and as economists say in their singular patois, retirement age people "dissave" or start spending their accumulated savings.

"Younger households not only tend to save less, thus restraining the flow of funds to the capital markets, but they also borrow more to buy homes and furnishings, thereby putting additional demands on the supply of available funds," said Muller, who predicts that the saving rate will not rise significantly in this decade, but should surge in the 1990s as the babyboomers mature.

But A. Gary Shilling, owner of the firm bearing his name, is more bullish than Muller. He expects the saving rate to increase in 1983 "and maybe to remain at high levels even beyond." If money in the underground economy could be measured, the rate would be even higher, "because unreported income probably exceeds undisclosed spending."

Shilling agrees with Muller that people's past behavior patterns suggest that the saving rate won't rise significantly. But it's a new ball game, said Shilling: "The economy is in a transition from a high inflationary economy and all the speculation and distortion that went with it, to a non-inflationary world that will be quite different. It's my guess that the consumer is not going to behave in the normal way — that he'll probably not go on a spending spree and is much more likely to continue his zeal for saving a substantially larger part of his income."

But if inflation returns — as the Social Security, international lending and federal budget deficit crises suggest it will — then it would surprise no one if consumers borrowed to their eyeballs again, sold off their stocks and bonds, slashed savings and bought all the tangible goods they could get their hands on — just as they did in the inflationary 1970s.

Smoothing Reagan's feathers:

Japanese government will reduce tariffs on 68 imported products

TOKYO (AP) — The government announced a new package of tariff cuts today, but last-minute objections from farm-area representatives in Parliament forced deletion of three key items — tobacco, chocolate and biscuits.

The package will be submitted to Parliament for approval sometime before the April 1 date when the tariff cuts are scheduled to take effect. Meanwhile, negotiators will try to resolve differences over the outstanding items.

The Finance Ministry's Tariff Ratio Council approved tariff cuts on 47 agricultural items and 28 industrial products, but did not consider tobacco, chocolate and biscuits because of strong resistance from the ruling Liberal Democratic Party's farm caucus.

The government's proposal, endorsed by the Cabinet early today, called for slicing or eliminating tariffs on 78 items, including a reduction of tobacco tariffs from 35 percent to 20 percent, a spokesman for the prime minister's office said. Tariffs on chocolate and biscuits were to be reduced about 10 percentage points to 20 percent.

Opponents objected to what they called the proposal's lack of concrete measures to ease the impact of the tariff cuts on domestic confectionary and tobacco industries, officials said.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda said the government will not seek final approval of the tariff cuts on the three items until consensus is reached within the LDP, which depends heavily on rural constituencies.

The decision to push through new tariff cuts was seen here as an effort to reduce trade tensions before Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone visits Washington in mid-January for talks with President Reagan. Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe is scheduled to visit Europe in January.

"This decision illustrates the government's strong commitment to accelerating the liberalization of the Japanese market," Abe told reporters after today's Cabinet meeting.

"These measures are the result of the utmost effort by Japan, and can be expected to bring many domestic sacrifices and difficulties," he said.

An official in the Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Ministry said he expected the controversy over tobacco, chocolate and biscuits to be settled by the end of the year.

One problem, he said, was the absence of provisions in the plan to reduce the domestic Sugar Consumption Tax. The current tax would make it impossible for domestic producers to compete with imported products if tariffs on chocolate and biscuits are cut, he said.

Once approved by the LDP-controlled Parliament, the new tariff cuts would go into effect on April 1, 1983, together with cuts on 240 other items announced May 28.

Officials said the 47 agricultural items proposed for tariff cuts or reductions include papaya, raisins, mixed vegetable juices, grapes, avacados and cocoa powder. The 28 industrial items include paper products, machinery and calculator parts.

Beef and oranges, which along with tobacco have been the subject of intense lobbying by U.S. trade officials, were not included in the list of trade concessions announced today.

Chocolate and biscuits were among items in the May package, but European Economic Community officials have pushed for further reductions.

By Washington Post-
L.A. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Customs Service has come up with an unorthodox way to cut its printing budget that its originator says could "revolutionize" the way the federal government does business.

The idea is to get entrepreneurs to begin reproducing government forms for a profit, a notion that has raised some eyebrows since it came off the drawing boards.

Stephen A. Jacobs, a special assistant to the commissioner of the Customs Service, came up with the idea this summer after he boarded a plane and was handed a packet jammed with discount coupons, travel tips and advertising.

The packet, Jacobs decided, was just what Customs needed for "Operation First Impression," the agency's campaign to make a tourist's arrival in this country easier and more pleasant.

What better way to greet travelers, Jacobs mused, than with an informational packet that contained greetings from President Reagan and Customs Commissioner William C. von Raab, a declaration form and instructions for filling it out, and tidbits about what may and may not be brought into the country?

Jacobs called Richard M. Shalowitz, president of Custom Advertising of Elk Grove Village, Ill., which had printed the airline packet, and asked him how much it would cost to print 30 million declaration packets for Customs. Shalowitz estimated that it would take $1.2 million to produce and print a slick 4 1-2-by-8 1-2-inch booklet with a full-color photograph of Miss Liberty on its cover.

But other Customs officials balked. In fiscal 1982 the agency had budgeted only $300,000 for printing the declaration forms.

That's when Jacobs and Shalowitz started talking about advertising, six full pages of it in each packet. Shalowitz said he could charge $50,000 per page for a month, which would generate about $3.6 million. That would be enough to give Customs a 15 percent cut and make a profit for his company, he said.

Everyone at Customs liked the idea, Jacobs said, except the agency's legal staff. It warned von Raab that it is illegal for a federal agency to sell advertising in a government document unless Congress has granted a special waiver.

The project seemed doomed until Jacobs and Shalowitz had another brainstorm. They asked if Shalowitz could copy the official declaration form and include it in his packet. Customs decided he could and it agreed to accept his forms at entry points. Officially, Customs has no connection with Shalowitz' project and will not receive any profits from it, agency spokesman Dennis Murphy said. But Customs will make Shalowitz' packets available.

New York lawyers strike

NEW YORK (AP) — A 64-day strike by Legal Aid Society lawyers has created a logjam in New York City's courts and may be keeping indigent defendants in jail unnecessarily as they await trial, officials say.

The private, non-profit agency usually handles 70 percent of New York's criminal cases under contract with the city. Until the strike is settled, private lawyers are appointed by the courts to represent the poor.

But some of these lawyers are said to be so inexperienced they are used only for arraignments.

George Spanakos, administrator for a pool of court-appointed lawyers in the boroughs of Brooklyn, Queens and Staten Island, acknowledged that such problems exist, but added: "What are we going to do? We don't have enough bodies. We don't have enough lawyers."

A spokesman for the Association of Legal Aid Attorneys said that despite immediate hardships for defendants, the strike will help them in the long run by seeking higher salaries that will attract more experienced laywers.

"Management is the party that's responsible," union spokesman Gary Sloman said, adding that 416 inmates have signed a petition supporting the striking lawyers.

The union said it is seeking a 7.79 percent raise on wages that now range from $21,000 for first-year lawyers to $39,500 for those with at least 13 years seniority with the society. Management's latest offer was a 5.3 percent raise, with fringe benefits bringing the total package to 10.4 percent.

No one in the criminal justice system could say how many people may be unnecessarily jailed pending trial because of the strike, but the Correction Department has received permission from a federal judge to hold up to 341 more people in its jails than before the walkout.

State Justice James J. Leff said he believed some detainees might be out of jail with the help of Legal Aid lawyers, who had a staff of investigators.

Ballerina Valentine Kozlova, who defected from the Soviet Union in 1979, poses recently with 100 pairs of ballet shoes made specially for her by the Capezio shoe factory in New York City. They are copies of the shoes she wore with the Bolshoi Ballet Company, from which she and her husband defected while on tour in this country. Ms. Kozlova will wear a pair of the shoes a day for her starring role in the revival of the Rodgers and Hart musical, "On Your Toes," soon to open in Washington, D.C.

NEW YORK (AP) — ESPN, the 24-hour sports cable network, is getting into the sportswear business.

By next month, ESPN hopes to have its own line of products from jogging suits and gym shorts to bats and balls. "If they can sell clothing with 'Gloria Vanderbilt' on it, why not 'ESPN'?" asked Fred Schwartzfarb, manager of ESPN's direct-response advertising.

The ESPN Fashion Line is a logical extension of the successful direct-response commercials, a staple of the advertiser-supported cable networks, of which ESPN and Cable News Network are the two most popular.

Since these networks reach significantly fewer households than ABC, CBS and NBC, new commercial sources had to be found, particularly for programs with small, select audiences. ESPN viewers know they'll be innundated by direct-response advertising during horseshow jumping, rodeos and motorcycle racing.

Direct-response advertising sells products on TV that are not available in the stores. These products, ranging from Ginsu knives, oriental steamers, special records, magazines and paintings, used to be the exclusive province of late-night local TV stations.

Now, they're all over the cable dial, reaching a wealthier, better educated viewer. According to the Simmons Research Bureau, viewers in 12.2 percent of ESPN's households make more than $30,000 and 20.8 percent have professional or technical jobs.

On ESPN, however, you won't see a knife slicing a tin can, nor will you hear such spiels as "Order now and every country-and-western hit ever written will be yours!"

"We had a Mickey Gilley record offer and it just died," Schwartzfarb said. "The meter didn't jump at all, even though we put it on during rodeos and what I call redneck racing. Our public doesn't want cheap records. Those things don't even have jackets. They come in paper."

ESPN, which now has a potential reach of 22.5 million households, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., used to be less selective about ts direct-response commercials.

"Sometimes, it looked like we were hawking on the Boardwalk in Atlantic City," Schwartzfarb said. "My charge was to weed out the commercials that had a bad look. We didn't want Anheuser-Busch and our other top sponsors sharing time with cheapos."

Gone are the liquid eraser, inexpensive watches and "the hot one," an illegal golf ball that traveled twice as far. "In good conscience, we couldn't carry golf events and be an all-sports network, while promoting some phony ball," Schwartzfarb said.

Generally, ESPN stays away from women's products, except for direct-mail Christmas gifts. "We runs those as a service for men guilty about watching 24 hours of sports," Schwartzfarb said.

Sally Field says goodbye to past

Copley News Service

NEW YORK — The past?

No, thanks, said Sally Field. Goodbye, Gidget. Goodbye, Flying Nun. Goodbye, Burt Reynolds, "Smokey and the Bandit," "Hooper" and "Norma Rae."

"I would have clung to everything," Field continued. "I would have loved to have hung on, but after a while you know you can't. It's boring, lonely and isolating."

The present?

There's a new image and a new life for the 37-year-old Field, playing a sophisticated New York widow who becomes engaged to a Metropolitan Museum of Art Egyptologist in a new movie, "Kiss Me Goodbye."

But, this isn't the real Sally Field now, either, the actress insisted.

Granted, she continued again, "I've undergone some changes since working and being with Burt and even since 'Norma Rae.' But the primary change after 'Norma Rae' didn't come from winning an Academy Award.

"Instead, the attitude about me in the industry changed and my responsibility changed because I felt I began to have power. The choice was to take that power and try to use it, put it in the closet or drop out of movies and do Broadway plays. I chose to do what I'm doing."

Primarily, this means continuing to make movies, raising two sons by a former marriage to Steve Craig, operating her own production company (Fogwood Films Ltd., founded in 1981) and becoming involved in anti-nuclear activity.

"Kiss Me Goodbye" unites Field with James Caan and Jeff Bridges in a romantic and comic menage a trois produced and directed by Robert Mulligan from a screenplay by Charlie Peters. She plays Kay Villano, a bright young woman about to embark on her second marriage when the ghost of her first husband, a dashing Broadway choreographer (played by Caan), makes an appearance.

"It's something different for me and the audience, too," said Field. "Bob worked the whole movie almost like a play, keeping some scenes very, very long. The problem of the film was that it might get too farcical. We wanted to keep it grounded on reality.

"The woman I play is suffering from the loss of her husband three years ago and her approaching new marriage brings on a real anxiety attack. But this dialogue and the situations with her first husband's ghost reappearing are basically funny stuff. But there are 18 colors in it because the woman is almost having a nervous breakdown."

Field said she had no particular reservations about tackling a Hollywood yarn featuring such familiar themes as jolly, wiseacre ghosts returning in their human personas.

"We talked about the 'Toppers' and 'Blithe Spirits' and realized that there are certain huge pitfalls," she continued. "In the movies, somebody is always waking up in the middle of the night with his dead mother sitting on the bed. So we decided in our heads to never truly indicate if my husband was truly there as a ghost or if Kay was just imagining it as part of a nervous breakdown."

"Kiss Me Goodbye" is the second film in which Field has had a starring role with Bridges who portrays her soon-to-be second husband, Rupert. She appeared in the Bob Rafaelson film, "Stay Hungry," with Bridges in 1976 which, like "Goodbye," also involved a semi-nude love scene.

"Jeff is the dearest person that ever walked the earth," said Field, "but nude scenes are something that I never got used to. Everytime I'm asked to do one I want to run away to Guam for months. I always ask, 'Isn't there some way to do this scene differently?' I was brought up a Southern woman and it's hard to get rid of that kind of morality."

Field, however, has seldom been less than adventurous in selecting roles after breaking out of her television molds of "Gidget" and "The Flying Nun." Besides her textile mill worker in "Norma Rae" and numerous comedic performances with Reynolds, Field recently took on the part of an ambitious newspaper reporter in "Absence of Malice" opposite Paul Newman and starred with William Hurt in a live telecast drama, "All the Way Home," on NBC. But she's hardly an actress to admit her career has been perfect.

Recalling "All the Way Home," she said, "I think the performances stunk and I certainly wouldn't do anything like this for live television again. It was like going through World War III backward. As actors we were trying to play both to the audience and the camera and both sides lost."

ENTERTAINMENT

'M*A*S*H' promotes life in wartime setting

NEW YORK (AP) — For a show that deals in war, degradation and death, "M-A-S-H" always manages to promote life. Executive producer Burt Metcalfe, who made a great show even greater, makes sure of that.

He's been putting his sensitive signature on the show since taking charge in 1977, after producers Larry Gelbart and Gene Reynolds had left for other projects.

"I'm an unabashed sentimentalist, so my shows tend to be more poignant, with a special kind of compassion and humanity," Metcalfe said.

"M-A-S-H" has been described as anti-war, but it goes deeper than that.

"We're not really an anti-military show," said Jamie Farr, who plays Cpl. Max Klinger, the soldier who wore women's hats and dresses to try to earn a psychiatric discharge. "We're anti-stupidity, anti-authority, particularly when it's senseless. The doctors are placed in a situation where they're in opposition to everything going on around them. They're there to save lives."

This is the last season of "M-A-S-H." There are only six remaining original episodes, leading to the climactic two-hour movie Feb. 28, when the Korean War finally ends after 11 television seasons.

There were no doves at CBS clamoring to end the war; "M-A-S-H" is currently the season's third-rated program. But the network couldn't stop Alan Alda and Co. from defecting to other projects or convince Metcalfe there were enough significant stories to maintain the show's high quality.

The program's standards also worked against continuing "M-A-S-H." "We're very scrupulous in our history," Metcalfe said. "There were some wonderful stories we had to pass up because they happened after the war. We wanted to do a brainwashing show, but that didn't come up until 1954. The same thing with the Marilyn Monroe visit.

"Drugs weren't that big, then, either, except for guys getting hooked on morphine. There was no cocaine, marijuana or heroin."

Metcalfe nixed other story ideas because the era was wrong. "We were pitched shows about abortion, rape and breast cancer 100 times," he said. "But those are 1980s causes of the week."

Metcalfe has been with "M-A-S-H" since the beginning, 1972, when he was associate producer, Reynolds was producer and Gelbart was executive story consultant. In 1976, Gelbart left because he thought the story well had run dry. Reynolds left the next year to start "Lou Grant."

Gelbart worked on Sid Caesar's "Show of Shows" in the 1950s and co-wrote the screenplay for the new Dustin Hoffman movie, "Tootsie," and in the early days, "M-A-S-H" reflected his broad funny bone.

"It was no point trying to copy Larry," said Metcalfe. "We had to expand the characters and get into interpersonal relationships, some of which weren't connected with the war. You have to go with your best pitch."

During the Metcalfe reign, Maj. Margaret Houlihan (Loretta Swit) loosened up and became a person, the pompous Frank Burns (Larry Linville) left the show and Klinger got out of drag and became the company clerk.

"I was insecure. The dress was my meal ticket," Farr said. "But I did want to show I was an actor. I didn't argue against it."

'Eye on the Media' lively hour of TV

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News turns 14 talking heads into a remarkably lively hour of television in "Eye on the Media: Business and the Press," a panel free-for-all of ideas and opinions.

CBS, the network, however, seems to have little faith in this forum, having scheduled "Eye on the Media" for 10 p.m. EST Saturday of this holiday weekend, when many Americans are thinking more of Christmas, the Caribbean, or grandma's pumpkin pie than they are of television.

The network has hidden this program in an off-peak period because "Eye on the Media" is devoid of car crashes, bedroom scenes or goofy comedy situations. All it will do is enlighten viewers with articulate advocates of different points of view and perspectives.

All of them get to be themselves in some hypothetical role-playing, through which the mutual distrust between the press and business is examined. The panel discussion, held last month and since edited in sequence by CBS News, was co-sponsored by CBS News and Columbia University.

CBS correspondents Dan Rather and Mike Wallace are cast in the roles of accusatory newsmen. Told that kerosene space heaters might be dangerous, Wallace says eagerly, "Of course, we're interested in telling the story."

A Review

The moderator, Harvard Law Professor Charles Nesson, suggests that Wallace might illustrate the issue by approaching a gas station attendant who doesn't read the labels and sells the wrong grade of kerosene. He goes further, suggesting that Wallace might have "that fellow squirming a bit."

"You're not really concerned about whether he is going to squirm or not squirm," Wallace responds, explaining he is seeking information for the public good because people "conceivably can die, if they're buying the wrong kind of kerosene."

Rather, too, is on the trail. Nesson asks him if he would pursue the ignorant gas station attendant as he once did a government meat inspector on "60 Minutes." The inspector eventually fled from Rather and hid among the carcasses.

"I don't get people. I get stories," Rather says. "That man got himself. I didn't get him."

But, with the same side asking the questions and editing the film, would you, Mr. Businessman, let Rather and Wallace into your office?

The head of the mythical company making the heaters is William Agee, chairman of the Bendix Corp., who says that if Rather called, he would speak to him.

Rather doubts that. More likely, he would have to go through Agee's buffer, someone like Herb Schmertz, a panelist on the program who is vice president of public affairs for Mobil Corp. Schmertz says his advice would be for Agee to talk to Rather without cameras and microphones.

Another panelist, Howard Allen, president of Southern California Edison, says businessmen who won't answer questions are "fools then, because I think you're going to butcher them worse."

It's all a revealing, fly-on-the-wall look at the journalistic process and some of the obstacles it encounters. Along the way, other issues are raised, such as checkbook journalism, and whether "60 Minutes" is good journalism or show business.

Much of this might have been too parochial for the layman, except for Nesson. As moderator, he provokes the panelists but never loses sight of the developing story that needs to be comprehensible to the public. He performed the same role for ABC's "Viewpoint" last fall.

Dramatically, humorously and effectively, Nesson probes, prods and cajoles the panelists, whose words make for an action-packed hour of television — only it's for the mind, not the eyes.

Cheesemaker admits 'the smell is awful'

VAN WERT, Ohio (AP) — It was discovered by mistake for people who crave an acrid aroma and a lingering taste.

And nowhere on earth but here, in a spotless and sealed room, is Liederkrantz cheese made. And it stinks.

"I admit the smell is awful," says Gordon Learish, plant manager for Fisher Cheese Co. "If this stuff stays in your refrigerator for six weeks, you can plan on buying a new refrigerator."

And yet, Learish says, "people just get hooked on it. At first, the taste doesn't appeal to you. But it grows on you. When people like this cheese, they really like it."

Mexican lottery prospers despite weak economy

Copley News Service

TIJUANA, Mexico — Fermin Ruben Calleros Galvez, an unemployed butcher with 16 children, pulled a series of losing lottery tickets from his pocket and wondered when Lady Luck would call his number.

Every week for the past five years, Calleros has played the Mexican National Lottery. He has yet to win.

"I play out of necessity," he said, adding that his family survives on the meager earnings of his two eldest children. "It's my only chance. If I win, I could start my own butcher shop, buy a car, build a new house..."

Not even the poor — suffering from rising unemployment and an annual inflation rate that could top 110 percent in Tijuana — have abandoned the government-operated game of chance.

"The harder the times, the more tickets they're going to sell," said Jose Pablo Angulo Solano, a 38-year-old unemployed father of five who journeyed from his native Sinaloa to Tijuana to hunt for a job. "We know it's the only way we could ever escape our poverty."

WHAT LURES THEM into playing the lottery is the big money awarded during the random drawings in Mexico City every Tuesday and Friday and on Christmas and other holidays. A typical first prize is 8 million pesos, the equivalent when this was written of about $114,000 at the official exchange rate. There is a second prize of 800,000 pesos, a third prize of 400,000 pesos and many smaller awards.

By law, 65 percent of all ticket proceeds must go for prize money, which Mexican officials boast is one of the world's highest rates for a lottery return.

Even so, the odds are stacked against Tijuanans. About 60 percent of all tickets are sold in Mexico City, with the rest of the sales scattered around the country.

Each winner, however, fuels the hopes of the losers. Lottery fans talk about the Tijuana lottery ticket salesman who walked away with a 5 million peso award in September. It was his second big win.

Nor are they discouraged by recent publicity surrounding the misfortunes of a Mexicali ex-fireman who won more than a million pesos in the lottery six months ago.

THE BODY OF Oscar Rocha Martinez, shot three times in the head, was found on a lonely stretch of the Tijuana-Mexicali Highway Oct. 22. Several days later, his wife confessed that she and her lover had murdered him.

She told police he had withdrawn part of his prize money for a spending spree that weekend. She said she got her husband drunk, drove him to the scene of the crime and after the murder, gave part of Rocha's remaining prize money to her lover.

Though the number of lottery tickets sold in Tijuana is relatively small, currently 4,601 a week, sales have not dropped in 1982 and revenues are about 50 percent higher than last year, said Arturo Alvarez, the accountant in charge of Tijuana's national lottery operations.

Soft-drink leaders push new products

Copley News Service

The soft drink industry is going the way of the beer industry: The leaders (Coke and Pepsi) are coming out with heavily promoted new products, forcing the smaller companies to defend themselves without the capital to do so.

Worse, it's happening at a time when the industry's growth is slowing sharply and prices are soft: From 1975 to 1980, soft drink volume grew by 6 percent to 7 percent annually; in coming years, 3 percent to 5 percent will be more like it, said analyst George Thompson of Wall Street's Prudential-Bache.

If market segmentation strategy (the proliferation of new brands and products) is not successful, annual growth will likely be 3 percent — but probably 5 percent if the new products take hold with the public, said Thompson.

Ironically enough, one of the little guys in soft drinks is a big guy in beer: Philip Morris. When the company bought Seven-Up several years ago, observers thought it would turn the industry upside-down, as it had when it bought Miller Brewing — launching a vicious spending battle that wound up with Anheuser-Busch and Philip Morris' Miller elbowing less affluent competitors to the brink of extinction.

BUT THE REVERSE happened: As soon as Philip Morris bought Seven-Up, Coca-Cola came out with a directly competitive product, Sprite, and started pushing it heavily.

Recently, Seven-Up retaliated with its aggressively advertised caffeine-free cola, Like — and Pepsi followed right up with Pepsi Free, its own caffeine-free cola. "Coke and Pepsi both appear intent on keeping Philip Moris' Seven-Up subsidiary from becoming the kind of powerhouse in the soft drink industry that Miller has become in the brewing industry," said Emanuel "Manny" Goldman of Wall Street's Sanford C. Bernstein & Co.

Goodness knows, Coke and Pepsi have the muscle to push the little fellows around. Goldman estimates that with all its brands, Coca-Cola has 37.2 percent of the domestic market, while Pepsi has 26.4. Dr Pepper has just 9.2 percent, Seven-Up 6.3 and Royal Crown 4.4. Four years from now, Goldman estimates, Coke will have 38.4 and Pepsi 27.7, with Dr Pepper 9.2, Seven-Up 6.9 and Royal Crown 3.8. Just as in beer, the losers will be the smaller, regional companies.

HERE'S WHAT it's like to be small: Royal Crown had a successful diet caffeine-free cola, Sugar-Free RC100, when Seven-Up came out with Like and Pepsi followed with Pepsi Free — both pumping big cash into advertising.

Now, "Royal Crown's earnings are being squeezed by its attempts to defend the market position of its major products, especially Sugar-Free RC100," said Goldman. "The company appears to lack the funds and/or the unique market niche that would allow it to compete effectively with the larger powers over the longer term."

Similarly, Sugar-Free Dr Pepper (a long-established brand accounting for 20 percent of the company's brand gallonage) is now under the gun: "For Dr Pepper, the competitive environment has become increasingly difficult, and no letup is in sight. The proliferation of new products from competitors will make shelf space dearer," noted Goldman. Worse, Pepsi is invading Texas with both guns blazing — and Texas accounts for 20 percent of Dr Pepper's earnings.

In the future, the product segmentation race will escalate, intensifying the pressure on the small companies: "The focus on the diet segment is likely to intensify further, with the increasing availability of other non-caloric sweeteners — including aspartame and possibly cyclamates — a development that should permit a variety of improved diet soft drink taste alternatives," said Goldman.

MOREOVER, ALL this is happening while prices are being shaved, noted Thompson: He sees soft prices for three to five years.

However, all is not lost. The big boys have made their errors — largely in diversification efforts. Goldman predicts — "conservatively," he admits — that Coca-Cola's acquisition of Columbia Pictures will nick earnings by 4 percent or 5 percent in the near term. Pepsi has been hurt overseas (particularly Mexico) and growth is slowing at its snack food superstar, Frito-Lay. Pepsi's Lee Way Motor Freight acquisition "has proven to be a mistake," said Goldman, and will probably be sold.

Goldman feels Pepsi's growth will slow sharply in the near future, but over the longer term, earnings should rise 15 percent per year.

Classified is the solution...

...Now, what's the problem?

Mike and Natalie are young, in love, and newlyweds. Among other things, that means they've given up their two small apartments and moved into a larger place.

But, it really hasn't been a problem, because Mike and Natalie are wise for their years. They knew classified was the right place to find their first home together.

Before you could say "I do," they located an apartment through classified with enough room for the waterbed, the stereo, two 10-speed bikes, six philodendrons, and the new shelf unit. And at a price two newlyweds could find very affordable indeed.

Whether you're newly wed, single, or an experienced spouse, classified can come to your aid. Tell classified your problem with a simple phone call.

Dial the number below and a helpful Ad-Visor will answer. Explain your problem . . . too much crowded into storage areas, a car you no longer want, a litter of pets to place, a house to rent or sell, an employment opening, or an article you'd like to locate. Whatever the problem, an Ad-Visor will soon be helping you write a fast-acting solution ad.

All systems go for Santa's journey

At midnight on Dec. 25, Kris Kringle, a.k.a Santa Claus, will fly through the sky, aided by a shiny red sleigh and a team of nine reindeer, and deliver gifts to good girls and boys around the world.

In full cooperation with old St. Nick's annual operation, the Civil Aeronautics Board has granted Santa complete clearance and special exemption to carry cargo through the U.S. and beyond.

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a leftover session of Congress, and its major production was a stopgap. Some gap.

It came to about $379 billion, over the next 10 months. That made the measure the granddaddy of continuing resolutions, the device through which Congress covers most of the government's spending much of the time.

In theory, Congress fixes targets, appropriations committees fashion bills to fit them, and spending is voted in 13 categories, for budget years beginning on Oct. 1. In fact, it doesn't work.

An Analysis

President Reagan has complained about that, and did again as he signed on Tuesday the giant continuing resolution that will keep Washington going through the end of September 1983.

There were complaints in Congress, too, about the unmanageable process of managing spending legislation. But its likely, almost certain, that come next September, there will be more resolutions to tide over the agencies and programs that haven't received their appropriations.

This year's resolution was a 300-page measure, covering spending for six areas of government that never did — or will — get their appropriations. It won't be necessary, since the resolution lasts for the rest of the fiscal year.

The Office of Management and Budget estimated that the spending it covers will come to $379 billion, and Reagan said that it was at least in line with his effort to curb federal outlays. The measure includes about $232 billion in defense spending. He had wanted at least that program handled in a separate appropriations bill, but couldn't get it.

In signing the measure, three days after the Pentagon and assorted other agencies theoretically ran out of funds, Reagan said he was "deeply troubled by the budget-making process in our government." But at least this time, for the first time in three years, Congress did complete action covering the full budget year before adjourning.

The stopgaps usually are approved for shorter periods, meaning that they need renewal at intervals, meaning that there is a handy vehicle for debate that can lead to stalemate on all sorts of issues.

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., cast a protest vote against adoption of the continuing resolution, calling it "a monument to non-deliberation."

"This hectic, frantic, helter-skelter way of doing the nation's business is unacceptable," he said. "To rush through, on a last-minute basis, the bill which funds 78 percent of appropriated money makes a mockery of the Senate tradition as the world's greatest deliberative parlimentary body."

He will, undoubtedly, be able to make the same speech, with minor editing, again next year.

By SUZANNE CHONEY
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — The pictures of starving children from around the world aren't very pretty, but Tom Pettipiece thrusts them at you anyway.

Who is this guy? He has some nerve, trying to stir up our consciences when all we're trying to do is prepare for the holidays ahead.

Well, maybe it doesn't much matter. The non-profit organization he formed four years ago, the Yes World Center, to help educate the public about world hunger, is broke.

In October, Pettipiece spent $6,000 of the center's money for entertainment, stage hands and rental of Starlight Bowl for World Food Day, an international event initiated by the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization.

Only 100 people showed up.

"Hunger," sighed Pettipiece, "is the wrong issue." It's not the kind of cause celebre that makes headlines or draws folks away from their television sets, despite the fact that one of every five persons in the world suffers from malnutrition or hunger, according to the FAO.

"If we'd had a rally and had just gotten all of our friends together, everyone who's concerned about the issue, we could have had a couple thousand people and we would have all had a real nice picnic together and gone home," said Pettipiece.

"BUT WHAT GOOD would it have done? It would have given us more energy, but we wanted to get the word out to more people and to raise some more money. It just didn't work.

"That's the way it always is because people are afraid," he said. "They don't want to hear about ugliness. They don't want to hear about poverty. They don't want to feel guilty. And I don't blame them. I don't like it either. So people stay away."

But Pettipiece doesn't stay away. At 38, an ordained minister, and the pastor of the recently formed Scripps Mesa United Methodist Church, Pettipiece has dedicated the past 12 years of his life to this battle and says he will continue to do so.

> "My purpose in being here on the planet is to practice peace. I would put it in terms of sharing God's love...
>
> "(People) don't have the opportunity to fulfill their potential because of hunger. Something's wrong about that. It's morally unacceptable, regardless of your religious faith. So I've dedicated my life to working on this."

It's an unusual passion for a man from a middle-class Redondo Beach, Calif., family. Pettipiece edges around his seat a little bit when this is mentioned. Asked if he has experienced hunger, he bluntly says, "No."

"The closest I came to understanding poverty on an experiential level was being unemployed four years ago," he said. "I was unemployed for 13 months. I had to borrow money from relatives, friends; I borrowed on my life insurance. I never actually went hungry. I've had days when I didn't have that much to eat.

"THE POINT IS, if someone like me can understand this and have compassion and understanding for people who don't have, I think it's possible for anybody. You don't have to have experience firsthand, yourself, to know that."

Pettipiece graduated from the University of California at Los Angeles with a degree in economics and received his doctorate in international development studies at the School of Theology at Claremont, Calif. He became interested in the subject of hunger at a 1969 conference on population in Anaheim, Calif.

"I realized the hunger and (food) development issue encompassed the future of the planet," he said. "My purpose in being here on the planet is to practice peace. I would put it in terms of sharing God's love, in the sense that every person on this planet has been put here to fulfill their potential — until you look around and begin to understand the realistic way that most people live on this planet.

"They don't have the opportunity to fulfill their potential because of hunger. Something's wrong about that. It's morally unacceptable, regardless of your religious faith. So I've dedicated my life to working on this."

GIVING MONEY TO hunger relief organizations is one common way Americans deal with hunger, but it's not enough, Pettipiece said.

"That takes care of the immediate need, but in the long run it only perpetuates the problem because it builds dependency in people upon handouts. It robs them of their basic dignity and it does not teach them or give them an opportunity to be self-sufficient," Pettipiece said.

"It's like the old saying that if you give a man a fish, you feed him for a day. If you teach him how to fish you feed him for a lifetime. So the second half of the response to hunger is development," he said.

"That takes the form of empowering people to raise their own standard of living. That means educating them. Literacy is one of the key elements of poverty. A woman who is literate can understand the concept of family spacing. Americans are always complaining that there are too many babies born in the Third World; let's ship all this birth control over. But if people can't read and understand, it doesn't do any good."

Pettipiece's work has focused on political and educational awareness. He formed the Yes World Center in San Diego four years ago as a vehicle to do so, and has devoted much of his time to writing educational pamphlets and speaking to community groups. He said he does not receive "a dime" from the center, a one-room office in suburban Mira Mesa.

Diuretics not alternative to dieting

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would taking a water pill help a person lose weight? If it would, it sounds like a simple solution for people who are unable to stick to a diet. Is it to simple? — Jenny, Augusta, Maine

Dear Jennie: Yes, it's too simple. Water pills (diuretics) occasionally are prescribed for people who have excess fluid along with their fat. However, all the individual will lose are the few pounds resulting from the excess body fluids.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son had an undescended testicle for which he was treated. I am now pregnant again. Since one of my children had this problem, is it possible that my unborn child, if it is a boy, will have the same problem? — Mrs. J. DiS., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Dear Mrs. DiS.: It is of course possible for two children in the family to have a common problem even if there are no hereditary factors involved. However, there is some evidence that heredity may play a role in the development of cryptorchidism (undescended testicle).

Researchers at the University Hospital of Wales studied about 50 families of boys treated for this condition, and they found that about 12 percent of their brothers were also affected. This suggests, but does not prove, a hereditary factor. There is no reason for undue concern on your part, but the pediatrician who takes care of your child, if it is a boy, should be aware of the family history.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband is one of a pair of twins, and his brother recently had a heart attack. They were both smokers, but my brother-in-law stopped after he got out of the hospital. My husband knows all this but he continues to smoke. Does someone have to have a heart attack before they get the message? — Mrs. M.F., Peoria, Ill.

Dear Mrs. F.: Many people have stopped smoking as the evidence of an association between smoking and a variety of diseases continues to mount. Other people also realize that smoking is a threat to health but find the habit too hard to break; and still others continue to deny that smoking is a threat despite the evidence that has accumulated.

Your brother-in-law's experience is not too unusual. The results of a study by Dr. Nancy A. Rigotti, of Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, show that a number of people stop smoking when they find themselves in a coronary care unit, and finally realize that they have to make what in every sense is a life-or-death decision. Possibly your brother-in-law's experience will convince your husband — especially since he is one of a pair of twins — not to wait — until he find himself a patient in a coronary care unit — to kick the habit.

For Margaret, Cleveland, Ohio: Most patients who undergo heart transplant operations are able to function normally after they recuperate. And most people who survive for an extended period of time enjoy a good quality of life.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Luminarios line the sidewalks around the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Martinez, 3328 Neely Ave. Many homes and some churches will be outlined by the traditional candle-lit paper sacks this evening.

luminario

Perhaps, as some will say, the "feast of lights and fire" is a custom which originally sprang from the notion that the Christ child might be guided through the darkness to the house.

In Mexico, light and fire have a major role in the traditional Los Posada, a Spanish word for "place of lodging" or "inn." The celebration originated in the Biblical story of the nine-day journey of Joseph and Mary from Nazareth to Bethlehem, seeking lodging from inn to inn.

Many Mexican families looked forward to Los Posada, where luminarios — small fires placed outside their houses — were lit to guide the way for Mary and Joseph.

Literally translated, luminario means to illuminate with fire, which in general terms translates to lights of whatever kind placed in windows, towers and rooftops, or along the streets during festive occasions.

In time, the Latin American tradition crept into the U.S., where lighted candles fixed in small, sand-filled paper bags adorned the roofs and curbs of Mexican-American homes. They are called farolito, meaning little lantern, to distinguish them from the bonfire luminarios.

But today, any candle-lit yard, and even some outlined in electrical lights, are called luminarios.

"Displaying the luminarios has gotten to be more than a Mexican-American tradition," said Corina Martinez, whose Spanish-style house at 3328 W. Neely Ave., is illuminated by the candles.

"Many people line their yards with luminarios," she added. "It's part of the Posados," John Martinez, said, explaining that the luminarios are "traditionally placed during the nine days before Christmas Eve to mark the houses on the trail of the Los Posados procession."

"As you went down the trail you wouldn't stop at every house," he said. "The luminarios let you know where to stop to seek lodging."

Although the luminarios are usually lit only from Dec. 16 to 24, Ms. Martinez said "once you get away from the ritual, you can light them anytime."

The Martinez family, including sons Javier, 6, and Juan Antony, 12, crafted more than 20 luminarios to place along their front yard.

Martinez said the family placed three-inch candles in brown lunch sacks filled with soil.

"They're simple to make," Mrs. Martinez said.

Luminarios also can be made by cutting milk cartons in half and filling the bottom with wax, or filling coffee cans with sand, and then decorating the tin.

"We even used kitty litter one year instead of dirt, so they would be more sturdy," Mrs. Martinez said, noting that it is important "to place them about four feet apart so they will be pretty when they're lit."

Test-tube conception clinics spring up

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Conceived under laboratory lights and born in the glare of national publicity, Elizabeth Jordan Carr was a scientific first in the United States.

Less than a year later, the brown-haired toddler from Westminster, Mass., is only one of 13 test-tube babies growing up in the United States. And clinics are springing up nationwide to duplicate the process pioneered in this country by Eastern Virginia Medical School researchers at Norfolk General Hospital.

"I have been surprised at the number of institutions who are anxious to embark on such a program," said Dr. Howard W. Jones Jr., who runs the EVMS clinic with his wife, Georgeanna.

"I am concerned that some institutions that do not have adequate resources and personnel may find that they are involved in a program they are not able to see through to a successful conclusion," Jones said of at least 15 clinics either opened or planned in eight states.

"The program has not yet reached the cookbook stage, shall we say, where you can read the directions and have it turn out reasonably well."

Jones said most of the clinics are in university-affiliated hospitals, but doctors also are setting up private clinics.

So far, the Norfolk clinic has been the most successful, recording nine more births since the first on Dec. 28, 1981, and 21 pregnancies in progress.

The clinics that have achieved pregnancies report a success rate that ranges up to 20 percent, compared to about 25 percent for normal intercourse.

About 140 women were treated in the clinic's first two years of operation, and the program is slowly expanding toward its goal of 200 women a year, Jones said.

Under the process known as in vitro fertilization, mature eggs are removed from a woman's ovary and fertilized with her husband's sperm in a glass laboratory dish. The eggs then are transferred to the woman's uterus, where a normal pregnancy takes place.

The process, developed in England in the 1970s, has been used primarily on women with blocked or missing Fallopian tubes that prevented pregnancy. Doctors have estimated that the process could help 2.5 million infertile women in this country.

A clinic at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles has reported three births since opening in September 1981.

Dr. Richard Marrs, the clinic director, said 50 fertilized eggs were implanted, resulting in nine pregnancies. Two women expect babies in the spring and the rest miscarried, he said.

No other clinics have reported births.

At least four pregnancies have occurred at a clinic affiliated with the University of Texas Medical School in Houston, said spokeswoman Ina Fried. The clinic, which opened in July 1981, treats about 15 women a month.

A clinic will open next month at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio, where doctors already have attempted IVF on a few women. The clinic will be able to treat 50 to 100 women in its first year, said spokeswoman Annette Richardson.

Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., has reported three pregnancies in its year in operation, and the Yale-New Haven Medical Center clinic in New Haven, Conn., also has achieved pregnancies, but director Dr. Alan Decherney declined to say how many.

"We're not interested in publicity," he said.

The only other clinic in the Northeast, at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, has not achieved any pregnancies since opening last fall, according to spokeswoman Adele Manno.

Clinics are scheduled to open next year at Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., and North Carolina Memorial Hospital, the teaching hospital of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine.

Doctors are known to have opened or are planning private clinics in Chapel Hill, N.C.; Sacramento, Calif.; Los Angeles and Dallas, and there may be others.

"A lot of them are opening and not saying anything," said Vern Jones, a spokesman for the Eastern Virginia Medical Center.

Demand for the service offered by the clinics is high. Nearly all report waiting lists, even with treatment costing between $3,000 and $4,000.

There has been little opposition to the new clinics from right-to-life activists who criticized the opening of the Norfolk facility. Some anti-abortion groups were concerned that fertilized eggs might be discarded, but doctors say that doesn't happen.

Bankruptcy judge quits over recent rulings

DALLAS (AP) — When Congress adjourned this week without taking care of muddled questions concerning the nation's bankruptcy courts, one federal bankruptcy judge decided he'd had enough, a Dallas newspaper has reported.

In a copyright story in today's editions, the Dallas Morning News said U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Dean M. Gandy announced Thursday he's giving up his $58,500-a-year job after 12 years of service to the Northern District of Texas.

The newspaper said Gandy plans to return to private legal practice, where he specialized in oil and gas law before accepting the federal judgeship in 1970.

Gandy, 56, said recent rulings by the U.S. Supreme Court, labeling the present bankruptcy system unconstitutional, have occurred at a time when bankruptcy cases are nearing an all-time high. As much as $100 billion in property could be tied up in bankruptcy litigation, he estimated.

Gandy, who served this year as president of the National Conference of Banruptcy Judges, said he will step down next April.

His decision is final, Gandy said, even if Congress makes the bankruptcy problem one of its top priorities when the 98th Session opens next month, as Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker have promised.

"I don't think it would be fair to my successor," Gandy said. "Someone would have to be selected soon to take over when I leave."

Last June, the U.S. Supreme Court threw out a 1978 law that broadened the powers of bankruptcy judges. Prior to the law, the judges had served as referees under the supervision of U.S. district court judges.

The high court ruled the law unconstitutional because it did not give the bankruptcy judges lifetime tenure and protection from salary cuts, but agreed to extend the deadline for its ruling until Dec. 24 to give Congress time to change the status of bankruptcy judges to lifetime tenure.

But Congress did not act, and the high court refused Thursday a request from the Reagan administration to grant Congress more time to settle the issue.

Gandy said the legal limbo left by the lame duck Congress will make many federal bankruptcy judges hesitant to rule on any cases until the jurisdictional questions are resolved.

There will be plenty of gasoline for holidays

Gasoline is in abundance this holiday and the price for fuel will be an average of 7 cents less per gallon than it was during Christmas 1980. However, motorists should be aware of the shortage of open service stations Christmas Day.

In a survey of 278 Texas service stations, the American Automobile Association found that 70 percent of area stations will be closed on all or part of Christmas Day.

Many stations may close early today and motorists are advised to fill up and only drive on the top half of the gasoline tank during the holiday weekend.

Since the last AAA survey, made at Thanksgiving, prices have dropped an average of 2.1 cents per gallon of gasoline.

The AAA's report indicated that motorists should find about 40 percent of those stations surveyed closed all or part of New Year's Day. Thirty-eight percent were closed Thanksgiving.

Current average full-service prices, followed by Thanksgiving prices, are as follows: Regular, 129.1, 130.1 cents; unleaded, 135.1, 136.4 cents; premium unleaded, 141.4, 144.2 cents; and diesel, 125.5, 120.0 cents.

Average self service prices, followed by Thanksgiving prices, are as follows: Regular, 109.7, 113.3 cents; unleaded, 118.9, 119.2 cents; premium unleaded, 125.5, 128.3 cents; diesel, 113.0, 109.4 cents.

Midland average prices for full service regular gas will be 131.9 cents; for unleaded, 135.4 cents; for premium unleaded, 135.0 cents; and for diesel, 143.0 cents. Midland self service prices for regular will average 111.1 cents; for unleaded, 117.2 cents; for premium unleaded, 125.9 cents; and for diesel, 111.9 cents.

Odessa woman dies in accident

ODESSA — A spectacular traffic accident late Thursday night claimed the life of a young Odessa woman and injured two passengers in the pickup truck she was driving.

Shawn Michell Kimbrow, 17, of 3800 E. 37th St., was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital shortly after midnight. Police said she was driving a 1978 Ford pickup at an apparent high rate of speed when she lost control of the vehicle on a curve in the 2700 block of Rocky Lane about 11:30 p.m.

The southbound truck left the street, skidded through the front yards of two residences and became airborne before overturning and hitting a house near the intersection of Rocky Lane and Deering Street.

She was thrown from the vehicle. Two passengers suffered minor injuries, according to police, who identified them as Darin Lee Garmon, no age available, of 4309 Grandview Ave., and Douglas D. Eggleston, no age or address available.

Police said Eggleston and Garmon were released following emergency treatment at MCH. Services for the Kimbrow woman are pending at Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Three Odessa armed robberies reported

ODESSA — Three holdups here Thursday brought the city's armed robbery toll to 25 this month and the toll so far this year to 145.

Thursday's first robbery occurred about 5:20 p.m. when an invalid was hit over the head by a man he had let into his house at 901 N. Texas to get a drink of water.

Police said the victim, Alton Morgan, no age available, told them the man came to his door trying to locate a neighbor who wasn't home. The man then asked for a drink of water.

Morgan, who is confined to a wheelchair, showed the man to the kitchen and had his back turned momentarily when he was struck from behind by a blunt object.

The man fled with Morgan's bifocals, cane and billfold. No description of the thief was available.

Three hours later, a black man in his late 20s entered the Payless Shoe Source store at 1001 E. 8th St. He pulled a small automatic pistol and forced two clerks to turn over an undisclosed amount of money from both the safe and the cash register before firing a shot into the air and fleeing on foot.

The suspect was further described as having a medium-length Afro haircut and wearing a blue denim coat. No injuries were reported.

Fifteen minutes after the shoe store robbery, police said a Mexican in his mid-20s and armed with an automatic pistol took an undisclosed amount of money from the 10th Street Liquor Store.

Fire believed caused by a child playing with a candle heavily damaged a bedroom of the Veronica Martinez residence at 2207 E. Front St. shortly before 8 p.m. Thursday.

Five fire department units responded to the call and spent more than an hour at the scene. In addition to fire damage, the upstairs portion of the two-story wood frame house sustained heavy heat and smoke damage. No injuries were reported.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Cities and counties seeing interstate highways springing up through their environs no longer have to come up with 100 percent of the money for buying rights of way.

The State Department of Highways and Public Transporation has announced a major policy change which will take the monetary burden off the local governments and put it back on the state.

Currently, under state law the highway department will reimburse the city and county for 90 percent for the rights of way needed for an interstate road. Charles Muery with the State Highway Department's Odessa office said the city or county had to do the negotiating, buy the property and furnish title to the state. Then the state would reimburse the local government for its 90 percent share.

"The cities and counties were having trouble putting up the front money," he said.

Under the change, local governments will put their 10 percent share in an escrow account. "We'll do the negotiating with the property owner and then we'll draw on the escrow account," said Muery.

"Few counties and cities are staffed to handle negotiations," and hiring the necessary persons often was an added expense. "If they exercise the new procedure, we pick up the tab of people doing the negotiating. These negotiations can be handled by the State Highway Department staff. We have trained negotiators around the state. They know all the red tape and state and federal regulations."

This policy is optional, said Muery, and the local governments can continue to use their personnel and their money under the old rule.

"Economically, it would be to their (city and county governments) advantage for us to do it," said Muery. "I think the taxpayer and the landowner would benefit."

Commission Chairman Robert Dedman added that the new procedure should speed up projects by allowing a more orderly effort in acquiring needed right of way.

School board OKs energy system

LAMESA — An energy management system for Lamesa Middle School was approved this week by Lamesa School Board.

The system will allow centralized monitoring and controlling of energy use in the facility. The low bid of $16,588 from Oliver Energy Master System was accepted.

Due to current construction at the high school, the board decided to hold off on providing the upper level facility with a similar system.

The board also accepted the appointment of Art Bizzell as 1982-1983 auditor, OK'd the schools' 1981-1982 audit report, and approved the budget for use of federal funds during 1982-1983.

A man found dead in his northside apartment late Thursday afternoon was the victim of an apparent accidental shooting on his 61st birthday, according to police.

The man was identified as Charles O. Leidgen of the Quail Run Apartments, 3101 N. Midland Drive, Apt. 201. He had been dead 18 to 24 hours, police estimated, and was found in a chair with a .44-magnum on the floor between his feet and gun cleaning equipment nearby.

He had been shot once in the forehead and apparently had been cleaning the weapon when it discharged. Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry pronounced him dead at the scene and his body was taken to the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home. Services are pending.

Non-support widespread crimewave

By NANCY DOOLEY
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The most widespread crimewave in California is skipping out on child support payments.

At a time when large numbers of people can't make their mortgage payments or pay their bills, record numbers of parents aren't meeting their obligations for child support.

Throughout California, authorities are struggling to collect over $2 billion in more than 900,000 active cases. Last year the state collected $208 million.

More than three years ago, a San Francisco man divorcing his wife was ordered by the court to pay $200 a month in child support payments for his two youngsters.

He will. Two weeks ago a judge ordered him to spend 55 days in the county jail as part of a civil contempt sentence.

The case demonstrates the difficulty of extracting child support payments from those who cannot or refuse to make such payments.

It is "the most widespread crime in the state of California," said Edwina Peters, administrator of the Bureau of Family Support in the Los Angeles County district attorney's office.

Robert Barton, chief of the Child Support Branch of the state Department of Social Services, said, "We will probably never collect 40 or 50 percent of the payments" if current trends continue.

"I think it's one of the biggest crimes because it's so widespread," San Francisco Family Support Bureau director Myer Jue said. "A lot of people don't see it as a crime. They rationalize that they don't have to make their payments because they have their own families or they have car payments. . . ."

The bulk of the 20,000 active cases handled by the bureau fall into two categories: families receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children and non-welfare families.

The poor state of the economy is clearly making traditional collection problem more difficult. A list of offenders with Social Security numbers provided to Peters in Los Angeles showed that half of them earning money in 1982 were no longer with the same employer. Peters believes most of those people no longer have jobs.

"We're not dealing with people who are making big money," she said. "And now, there's a terrible unemployment problem. Times are bad, and it's difficult for more and more people to come up with child support payments."

In many instances, however, the father does have the ability to pay.

"We've got doctors, lawyers, sports figures. It runs the gamut," Jue said, adding that whether or not payments are made frequently depends on how acrimonious the divorce is.

The majority of absent parents, says Jue, are fathers. And one key impediment to finding them when they don't pay is the state of the economy.

Jue said many people are part of what he called an "underground economy," in which services are bartered or performed on a job-by-job basis. State tax returns and Social Security numbers are virtually useless as tools in tracking down these people.

For a mother not receiving her monthly payments, the result can be tragic. Many are forced to go on welfare, and Jue estimates his office interviews some 500 new applicants each month. All of them invariably end up on welfare, he said.

Besides tax returns and Social Security numbers, investigators have access to federal income tax returns, Department of Motor Vehicle records, the police information network that lists both suspects and victims of crimes, and a variety of state criminal records.Employment records also are accessible.

Peters seeks jail time only as a last resort, to punish those who "have the earnings, but who choose not to pay. The true thing we're after is money, and we would do anything we could to collect money before trying to impose a sentence," she said.

Stains unwelcome holiday occurrence

By IRENE GARDNER KEENEY
Hearst Feature Service

When the holiday entertaining season comes, can stains be far behind? There will be lipstick on the napkins, gravy on the tablecloth, and someone is sure to spill a glass of wine.

The first step to remove them is to gather together some quick first aid for those wet spills. You can use cornstarch, talcum powder, baking soda, sponges, salt, absorbent cloths and paper towels to wipe up the excess liquid in most stains, making the eventual removal that much easier. As soon as the spill occurs, pour one of the dry products over the stain and let it remain until the stain dries, or place towels or absorbent cloths under and over the stain. Later, when guests have gone, it's time to wash those stains right out of your life.

There are several different kinds of stains. Oily stains include gravy, butter, margarine, chocolate, salad dressing and lipstick; protein stains include egg, milk and meat juices. And don't forget wine, coffee, tea, mustard, fruit and berry stains. All are different and all take different removal techniques. Remember, what might remove one stain may set another. So keep them straight and use the proper technique.

Treat all oily stains first with a pre-wash laundry stain and soil remover. Then wash in detergent with chlorine or an all-fabric bleach and the warmest water recommended for the fabric. If the stain does not disappear, soak in a mixture of warm water, all-fabric bleach and a detergent for at least a half-hour — preferably overnight — then rinse and wash again.

Presoak all protein stains in a dry all-fabric bleach, detergent and cool water. Dissolve the dry bleach in hot water and add to the cool water first. Use one tablespoon dry bleach to each gallon of water and soak at least 30 minutes, again preferably overnight. Then machine wash with detergent and dry bleach in the warmest water recommended for the fabric.

Mustard, wine, coffee and tea stains can be removed with bleach and detergent. If the fabric is bleach-safe, presoak for five minutes in cool, sudsy water with detergent and one-half cup of liquid bleach per gallon of water. Rinse and wash normally in the hottest water the fabric can tolerate.

Soak fresh fruit and berry stains in cold water. If stains have aged, use hot water, then launder with bleach and detergent, following instructions for the fabric.

If the stain is on a non-washable fabric, such as clothing, take them to the dry cleaner as soon as possible and be sure you tell the cleaner what kind of stain it is.

Clothing, too, seems to need more care in winter, and with so many different fabrics on the market, knowing how to care for your clothes is not always an easy task. The following tips may help.

WOOL: Most wool garments should be dry-cleaned, but when the label says "hand-wash," use cool to lukewarm water and mild soap or detergent. If you are afraid hand-washing may ruin your favorite wool sweater or destroy its shape, here's a tip: Before washing, trace the sweater's outline on brown paper. Then you can shape the sweater back to the size of the outline while it's still wet.

Woolens that are designed for machine-washing should be laundered on the gentlest cycle at a cold or warm setting. Use a mild detergent. It's a good idea to add a few towels to the washer to buffer the garments from the full agitator action. Tumble dry only if the label permits.

CORDUROY: Because corduroy readily picks up lint, turn garments inside out when laundering. Never wash corduroys with terry cloth or piles. Cotton/polyester blends shouldn't need any ironing, but cotton corduroy might. When ironing, place a damp towel over the fabric or turn it inside out to prevent "splotching." For stubborn wrinkles — especially on cotton — irons with a built-in spray system or push-button surge of steam are helpful.

THERMALS: Don't use very hot settings when washing or drying wool or cotton thermals. They tend to shrink more than synthetics.

THE PRODUCT — A method called wallprinting as an alternative to wallpapering.

Manufacturer's claim — That wallprinting is done with a hand-held device that resembles a small printing press ... that the trays are filled with one, two or three colors of paint, depending on the design chosen ... that the roller is pressed against the wall and rolled downward ... that each roll down the wall imprints a 6-inch-wide strip of design ... that three rubber rollers in the machine feed paint from the trays to an indented design roller to make a continuous imprint on the wall ... that an 18-foot wall, 8 feet in height, can be done in less than 30 minutes ... that about 80 different designs are available ... and that the cost of wallprinting is approximately one-half, if done by a trained workman, of the cost of wallpapering.

Manufacturer's claim — That this solid state microchip reduces electricity consumption by 8 percent or more ... that the chip is installed with its self-adhesive side on the end of a one-way light bulb ... that the life of the light bulb will be extended up to 100 times its normal life expectancy ... and that it also will reduce the amount of glare from a harsh bright spot to a uniform golden glow.

Manufacturer's claim — That this pump can be used anywhere for an unlimited number of applications because of its light weight of 10 pounds and its rugged two-cycle engine ... that it is ideal for pumping water from a swimming pool or flooded basement or house, for transferring water from a stream or lake to irrigate a lawn or spray wash a boat or as a protection against fire, floods or other storm damage ... that is powered by a 1.6 cubic-inch engine ... and that it has an automatic rewind starter and a single chamber muffler for quiet operating.

Manufacturer's claim — That this film provides energy saving benefits without sacrificing clarity and giving the windows a darkened look ... that the film consists of multilayered coatings, bonded to plastic, which enable it to reflect back up to 37 percent of internal heat normally lost through windows during cold weather ... that it also works during hot weather to cut solar heat gain by up to 68 percent ... and that it transmits normal light levels while minimizing the glare that causes discomfort.

To children, Christmas is lots of 'antsy'pation

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Lifestyle Writer

Everyone knows what Christmas is, right? Or do they? It's more than being with family. More than a vacation or a brightly decorated tree with presents underneath. It's more than a season, it's a spirit — a time of giving, sharing, closeness and love. A time to stop and think about friends and family and how much they mean to you. And let's not forget what Christmas was originally intended to be — a celebration of the birth of Jesus Christ.

But what is Christmas viewed through the eyes of a child? A time of anticipation, excitement and wonder. Thinking The Day will never arrive. Thinking you'll bust if you can't open that big package from Grama and Grampa right now.

What is Christmas? It is what each individual perceives it to be. And to the children at Community Day Nursery, 815 Carver, it's ...

"I think Christmas is a lot of toys," said Leslie, 6-year-old daughter of Sylvia Cevallos. Other answers were "It's a fun time," "Eating a lot of candy," and "Vacation from school."

Only one of the dozens of children questioned, 9-year-old Maurice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Lewis, remembered how the holiday originated. "It's the day Christ was born," he said. Maurice, the only child who professed a disbelief in Santa Claus, wanted a 12-speed bicycle for Christmas.

And of course Christmas means carols. One 5-year-old proudly started singing "Here Comes Santa Claus," and soon the entire class joined in, each singing a slightly different version.

Christmas just wouldn't be the same without presents, and each of the children knew exactly what he or she wanted. Strawberry Shortcake toys were a popular item, as were the old standbys of dolls and cars (especially red ones with a Confederate flag on the roof). In the room for 5-year-olds, swimming pools seemed to be in demand. Bicycles were a common request and that wouldn't be considered unusual, except when the person asking is 3-year-old Erica, daughter of Rachel Acosta.

Most of the 3-year-old girls wanted Barbie dolls. So did Gabriel Harris, 3, son of Terry Anderson. "You're a boy. You can't have a Barbie doll," classmate Holly Cevallos said. "You get trucks."

What is Christmas? Who knows?

HARTFORD, Conn. — It happens every year in homes just like yours. Beautiful holiday decorations turn a home into a blazing deathtrap.

The tragedy is it doesn't have to happen at all.

By using a little common sense and following some simple tips, you can avoid holiday season fires this year.

- Cut off the bottom of the tree trunk diagonally at least an inch above the original cut. Make sure the tree is placed in a sturdy container and check the water level frequently.
- Use pine oil emulsion to make your live tree fire retardant. Spray your tree with the solution from time to time and fill the cup in the tree stand with it.
- Don't use electric lights on a metal Christmas tree.
- If you choose a plastic tree, be certain it has a fire-retardant label.
- Other decorations should be kept as fire-safe as the tree. Curtains should be pulled back at least six inches from electric lights displayed in windows.
- Whenever possible, purchase decorations made of non-combustible materials. Things such as manger scenes covered with untreated cotton "snow" or hay-filled mangers should not be used.
- Use only electric lights labeled by a recognized testing laboratory. Check all light strings to make sure they are in top notch condition, with no frayed cords.
- Dont leave lights on when no one is home and unplug them before retiring for the night.
- Never use candles or other open flames around a Christmas tree or any other combustible materials. A Christmas tree can quickly become a torch. A dry tree can burn comletely in about 12 secnds.

And here's another thought — Smoke detectors can be life savers at Christmas and at any time. How about that for a thoughtful gift to someone who doesn't have one?

'Bandit' collector comes out of hiding

By KEVIN NOBLET
AP Writer

METAIRIE, La. (AP) — He was a middle-age, respectable businessman, who drove nervously down Louisiana highways at night, his illegal booty tucked away in the trunk of his car.

It wasn't drugs or stolen goods Sam Woods Jr. carried. It was squat, old machines with the improbable names of "Jewel Bell Bonus," "Bluebird of Happiness" or "Cherry Burst."

Woods is, or rather was, a collector of antique slot machines.

He's now selling them all — more than 100 of the carnival-colored, cast iron and hardwood devices that enticed nickels and pennies by the millions in their heyday.

"I know what a bootlegger must feel, how he must feel hauling his load of moonshine down country roads," Woods says.

"It was illegal to even possess a slot machine," he said. "The state police had the right to come in and smash it or confiscate it. Usually, they'd smash it right there on the spot."

Woods, who started collecting about 18 years ago, didn't really like being a scofflaw. So he pushed for legislation to legalize possession of antique slot machines in Louisiana. It finally passed in 1981.

Maybe that was the problem.

"It's not a thrill any more," he said, explaining why he decided to sell the one-armed bandits.

Still, there was excitement in finally taking the slot machines out of hiding.

The day they became legal, be began building display cases in one of the eight lighting fixture stores he owns. The machines were taken out of the old plastic garbage bags he stored them in.

"It was like Christmas," he recalled.

The slot machines are selling for up to $4,200 each. Some have polished wooden facades and others are cast iron. Cherries and other fruit, flying birds and bells pop up when the lever is pulled.

He won't say exactly where he kept them hidden during his 16-odd years as a collector. But for the past year, they've been on display as a sort of slot machine museum, attracting hundreds of people.

Woods' first machine was a 1938 Jewel Bell Bonus.

The machines represent more than Woods' own travels across the South in search of old machines, some just a jumble of parts in a box, that could be restored. He found one such dissected machine in an old gasoline station in Texas. He paid $500 for the parts, restored the machine and is now selling it for $2,000.

"It evokes the past, the days when cowhands came in to shove their last nickel in the slot and take a chance," Woods said. "I'm not a gambler, and I don't like breaking the law, but I'm proud of having saved them for posterity."

Woods said he is closing down his stores and moving to a 40-acre ranch near Folsom. He plans to dabble in horses — maybe in a little real estate.

"People ask me if it's hard to give up all these things, to watch people walking out the door with the stuff I collected for years," he said. "It isn't.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's sense of direction leads her down the aisle

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This may not seem like much of a problem, but at the moment it's monumental.

I am engaged to marry a wonderful young man I met four months ago. We have everything in common (interests, ethnic backgrounds, religion, etc.), and more important, we really love each other.

We met when I came to this town and was looking for a building. I was told it was two blocks south of Third Street. My sense of direction is not very reliable, so I approached a nice-looking young man who was walking in my direction, and I politely asked him which way was south.

He smiled pleasantly, said that he was walking south too, and offered to walk me to my destination. In less than 10 minutes we realized we liked each other enough to strike up an acquaintance. And you know the rest.

The problem: When people ask me how I met my fiance, what do I say? — BLUSHING IN FLUSHING

DEAR BLUSHING: Tell them you picked him up on a street corner. They'll never believe you.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to appeal to all your teen-age readers: I am a 19-year-old housewife. I have been married for 10 months and have an 8-month-old baby.

I got pregnant when I was 18 and had to get married before I was really ready for all the responsibilities that went with it.

I love my husband and baby, but it's not easy. The responsibilities are unreal. I never appreciated my parents more than I do now. I never realized how good I had it before I became a wife and mother.

So, listen to me, all you teen-agers. Don't try to grow up too fast. Listen to your parents. They have only your best interests at heart. — IMPATIENT, FOOLISH AND SORRY

DEAR IMPATIENT: Thanks for a very important message.

DEAR ABBY: Have you any words of wisdom to help promote reading in young people? — LIBRARIAN, WINTER PARK, FLA.

DEAR LIBRARIAN: If I could give young people one piece of advice, it would be, READ, READ, READ!

In reading, you will open up new worlds, real and imagined. Read for information, read for pleasure. Our libraries are filled with knowledge and joy, and it's all there — free for the taking. The person who does not read is no better off than the person who CANNOT read.

Making art for masses

By WILLIAM GALLO
Associated Press

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — He is Colonel Sanders with a chisel — a man who wants to create a Kentucky Fried Chicken empire in the art world.

Michael Garman's name isn't found in art history textbooks. Instead, the sculptor is listed in the Yellow Pages between listings for "Screws" and "Seals-Notary & Corp."

And though his work may not appear in any museum or gallery, it's on display in about 400,000 homes.

"That's where I get my ego strokes — from knowing how many thousands of people have bought my stuff," says the raw-boned, fast-talking native of Texas.

In the last 13 years, Garman has turned out a million sculptures from perhaps 50 designs, ranging from his 3-inch "Saddle Tramp" bust for $4.95 to a cast "Riverboat Pilot" for $50.

The Saddle Tramp, also available coated in bronze for $150, is by far his most popular item. About 100,000 are made each year.

Garman envisions a time when he will head up a franchised, nationwide system of 20 Michael Garman galleries that will sell his statues by the thousands to art-starved masses from Florida to California.

"It will be beautiful," he says. "I'm not interested in this 'I'll be famous when I'm dead' business. I want it now and I'm getting it.

"I may not be a very good sculptor, but I'm smart..."

Garman's enterprise has four full-time employees in marketing, a public relations specialist and an assembly line of 30 workers to assemble vast armies of plastic cowpokes and to cast cement winos, which later wind up in gift shops and drugstores in 50 states and 17 foreign countries.

He pointedly calls it "art for the people." As Garman sees it, most artists don't understand how the world works.

"Painters and sculptors haven't lived up to their age," he says. "They've failed to use the technological and marketing methods we have available to us.

"Look, you can read John Steinbeck for $2.50, and you can see 'Star Wars' for $3.50. But you can't buy your favorite sculptor for under $10,000. I've changed that."

Though his methods aren't always popular with other artists, Paul Piazza, director of the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center, says Garman's work fills a need.

"It's a popularization, it's very sentimental and the price is very low," Piazza says. "He's been successful, obviously, and he's not trying to pull the wool over anyone's eyes."

Collectors can forget about buying a "limited edition" Garman as an investment. He doesn't believe in the notion.

"Art is not meant to be in museums, but people's homes," he says. "All I care about is getting into the guy's living room."

Fragrances for the home popular in many countries

By BETTY OMMERMAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The time is fast approaching when the most memorable thing about your home will be the way it smells.

This isn't meant in any derogatory way. The smells in this case aren't dog or cat odors, food or stale smoke aromas or even the choked-up feeling of too much dust in the air. What we're dealing with here is f-r-a-g-r-a-n-c-e.

Fragrance for the home dates back to pre-biblical times. Frankincense and myrrh from North Africa and the East were aromatic air fresheners during those times, along with pine cones found in more northerly climes. Colonial settlers in this country found fragrant herbs and hung them from the rafters in their homes.

The Japanese custom of Kob-Do, the burning of incenses (there's a choice of about 500 different fragrances), said to bring harmony into the home, expand the mind and serve as a religious experience, was introduced into that country from India in the sixth century and is still popular today.

There's even a school in Tokyo that teaches you to "listen" to the different aromas. Some of these experts, during a recent visit to the Nippon Club in Manhattan, showed how hours could be spent in "entertainment," distinguishing the different fragrances and conjuring up harmonious images. It's played as a line game with up to 28 different incense sticks being passed around, and lines drawn to represent the scents and their effects on the mind.

IN MANY TURKISH homes today another ancient custom is followed: that of using a pungent plant to greet guests at the door. Once inside, the guests and homeowner sit around a table, and each person breaks a leaf and inhales the fragrance to insure a harmonious relationship.

In this country fragrance for the home has ploddingly followed the time-honored custom of burning incense sticks and using potpurrri. Since the former was often too potent and the latter too weak, fragrant candles got into the act. These were — and mainly still are — in the same fragrance family as the body scents, sachets and drawer liners.

That means if you liked a certain scent in a friend's home, then everything was fine. If you didn't, you could either be stoic about it, tell the person you hated it or make up excuses for not visiting.

But this is changing. Fragrance for the home is becoming an art, with different scents being assigned to different areas of the house — and to the furnishings themselves. Already available here and abroad are scented throw pillows, oil-burning lamp rings and fabric petals in sculptured frosted bowls for the living room; dolls and notepaper for the kitchen, pictures for the hallway and lampshades and toys for a child's room.

"Some scents, such as roses and jasmine, are psycho-scents," said Amelia Basin of Basinova, during a recent Fragrance Foundation seminar in Manhattan. "They grigger an emotional response. Some are exhilarating. Some are relaxing. You have to find the right fragrance for the right room and even the right color."

Basin's Manhattan company, along with those of the other seminar speakers, creates the essences for the individualized fragrances for perfume, home and industrial firms. She suggests scents of licorice, peppermint and strawberry for a child's room; popcorn for a fireplace area; animal amber for a bedroom, and herbal for a room with leather furnishings. The color of a room and the season of the year can also be complemented by a specific fragrance. She suggests geraniums and carnations for a red room; grapefruit and pineapple for a yellow room; wild flowers for spring; greens for summer; hay, spices, tart apples for fall, and balsam and spruce for winter.

"THE EARLY '70s found us in the midst of a fragrance revolution," said Jim Dellas of Florasym. "Now, it's an environmental revolution. It's important we get away from the (connotation of) room refresher. We want to create an ambience, a mood. But keep in mind that the fragrance, to be appealing, should not be sexual. That means neither extremely feminine nor masuline."

According to Frank Renshaw of Wheaton Industries, the need for more fragrance in the home "sort of crept up on us." It started, he believes, with laundry detergents and lemony dishwashing liquids. "There were no real home fragrances 40 years ago," he said. "Now people spend more time in the home, and they're finding that fragrance makes for a better home environment."

"In some homes you know something is missing, but you don't know what," said Sivon Reznikoff, professor of interior architecture at Arizona State University at Tempe, whose book, "Erotic Interiors," will be published by the Whitney Library of Design in the fall of 1983. "What's missing could be odor," she said.

Reznikoff believes a person relates to a fragrance wheel. Since a bedroom is eroticized and highly seductive, she said, fragrance has to be sensuous. A kitchen brings forth a homey eroticism, so it should have a light, fruity smell.

That light, fruity smell already is available in a spice-scented fabric doll and note pad by Avon. "I think it creates a pleasant feeling for the mind," said Avon Spokeswoman Teddi San. "If offers a sort of security; like when a child and mother are baking an apple pie."

Floral-scented throw pillows and fabric petals in a frosted glass bowl for the living room are the creation of Diane Love for Prestige Place, a division of Celebrity, a Manhattan-based firm best known for its toiletry and lingerie bags. "Home fragrance is the finishing touch that completes a personal statement and should appeal to the senses" (of smell, sight and touch), she said.

MANY SMALL COMPANIES offer scented accessories for the home. Marva of Woods of Windsor, in Roslyn Heights, N.Y., is offering a lamplight ring of anodized aluminum tht can be filled with a few drops of English potpourri-fragrance. Rigaud has ceramic containters containing oil wicks that are lighted, then extinguished and covered, and the fragrance, mainly a cypress scent, continues to permeate the room. Chella Enterprises catered to the Christmas shopper with wicker sleighs filled with sachets, pine cones and potpourri, scented wreathes, and straw baskets either spilling over with dried herbs or filled with pomanders.

Children's toys include scented dolls by Kenner called Strawberry Shortcake, Blueberry Muffin, Lemon Meringue, Orange Blossom and Huckleberry Pie. Amtoy uses a "baby-fresh scent" on its Baby Soft Touch infant dolls and tutti-frutti fragrances for its Cotton Candy dolls. A peppermint aroma has been added to the Hula Hoop from Wham-O, and there's a new bear in town from Ideal Toy, the Hershey Bear, which sould appeal to any child — young or old — who flips over the smell of chocolate.

As for the future, how about using aromas for therapy? Sarah Friend of International Fragrance, a Manhattan essence firm, believes people could be trained to create their own moods through fragrance.

Recession slows Christmas spending

By CAROL McGRAW
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Linda Olivieri, an unemployed waitress, came to Los Angeles from New York a year ago looking for work and a better life. But unable to find employment, she has spent the last nine months living in a tent in county parks.

The divorced 24 year old says that she has made only one trip to a department store this holiday season so that her 3-year-old daughter, Leah, could visit Santa.

Olivieri's Christmas purchases consist of a child's blue wool coat, which cost 50 cents in a thrift store, a turkey purchased with government food stamps, a "Hello Kitty" coloring book, and an extra box of long-burning candles to light her campsite.

The poor and jobless have always had a tough time coming up with holiday gifts for their loved ones, of course. But in 1982, amid the worst recession in 40 years, there are more poor and jobless than before.

Moreover, even some of the employed and the well-to-do appear more restrained with their buying than in recent years, when rampant inflation sparked a buy-it-now-before-it-goes-up-in-price psychology that led many people to keep their Christmas stockings filled, even if they had to run up big debts to so.

THIS YEAR, IN homes and stores across the country, it is proving to be a cautious Christmas, a survey by Los Angeles Times reporters has found.

To be sure, big spenders still exist. At Amen Wardy's, a Newport Beach, Calif., specialty store less than 30 miles from Olivieri's campsite in Featherly Park, $2,500 fur sweaters and one-of-a-kind jewelry are selling briskly. And with a few days remaining before Christmas, some retailers, many of whom count on the season for a third to a half of the year's profits, are still hoping for a last-minute surge as workers get their final paychecks of the year.

That does not seem to be happening, however. It appears that there will be only relatively mild sales gains for retailers. Walter Loeb, who follows retail stocks for Morgan Stanley & Co. in New York City, predicts the gains will be only about 3 percent over last year, a figure that tracks with what many store operators are saying.

While such a gain is respectable, it is hardly the kind of cash-register music that makes shopkeepers dance in the aisles. And it is certainly not the sort of buying surge that some economists were hoping could finally produce the spark to end the recession.

"We had expected a stronger month than appears to be developing," J. Janvier Wetzelan, executive vice president at the Broadway department store chain in Los Angeles, said. "There seems to be an unwillingness on the part of the consumers that have spendable income to purchase Christmas gifts to the extent of prior years."

Total consumer buying power is rising at an annual rate of 2 percent, but with the unemployment rate at 10.8 percent, consumers are socking away money into savings accounts, trimming down their gift lists, buying fewer but better quality items, paying cash and reducing their use of credit cards.

HOLIDAY SHOPPERS ALSO say they are entertaining less this year, shopping discount stores and swap meets, and making their gifts when in previous years they would have purchased them.

When gifts do end up under Christmas trees this year they are getting there only after nervous consumers have endured a gantlet of store hopping, bargain hunting, nail biting and soul searching.

For instance, Richard Fullerton, 31, a Houston real estate broker, this year spent as much as he usually spends at Christmas, including purchasing an expensive watch from Cartier that he charged on his American Express card.

But "I worried about it more. I wasn't sure I'd have a job next year to pay for it," said Fullerton, who sells million-dollar homes, which he says are not moving.

In Salt Lake City (an area that is economically dependent on the now-depressed copper industry), Barbara Smith has spent the last several weeks shopping for her 31 grandchildren who are all under the age of 16. Like many consumers this Christmas, she chose "practical" items: shoes, warm sweaters, school dresses. Most of the purchases were made at factory outlets, where prices are well below those charged at major department stores.

THE SHOPPING EXCURSION, however, was preceded by a family conference, at which she and her husband, Douglas, who heads Beneficial Life Insurance Co., sat down with their seven married children and their spouses, to talk over "how to make this a Christmas we all could afford."

Smith, who is also world president of the Relief Society of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said that the state of the economy has been such a concern to members of the group that the 1 million women members have for several months attended weekly meetings, where they learned how to "have an elegant Christmas without the elegant price; a holiday of love, not cost."

Among the craft projects the women initiated were quilts made of jeans pockets, fried funnel cakes, stuffed toys made of old socks, children's pajamas sewn from men's shirts and holiday placemats fashioned from cardboard and wrapping paper.

But 2,500 miles away, shoppers at trendy Georgetown Park Mall in one of Washington, D.C.'s most fashionable neighborhoods are cutting few corners.

"Frankly, if I had to economize, I wouldn't be here," said attorney Craig Seibert, referring to the 120 expensive shops that have names like "La Vogue" and "Modigliani."

Seibert was shopping for toys for his children at F.A.O. Schwartz, a store whose prices sometimes run 30 percent higher than those in discount houses. Seibert was not disturbed by that fact.

"I'M LOOKING FOR that special, high-qualilty toy." he explained.

Many of the Georgetown shoppers added that while the country may be experiencing hard times, they would not restrict their holiday season enjoyment. And more than a few were lining up to spend as much as $5.50 a package just to have their gifts professionally wrapped.

The free-spending attitude of some of the upper-middle class professionals who shop the mall was confirmed by store managers. Diane Booth, the perfume saleswoman at Garfinckel's, said her two best Christmas sellers were Oscar de la Renta and Opium. They retail at $150 an ounce.

Phil Matthews of Christian Bernard custom jewelers in Washington said that in recent days more than a dozen customers had spent at least $1,000 each — usually in less than an hour.

"People see something they like. They say, 'That's pretty.' 'How much is it ?' and 'Wrap it up.' "

Matthews has noticed, however, that other customers come in with pads and pencils, copy down prices and comparison shop other stores. "They're looking for a sale."

Nearby at a Hecht's Department Store, which caters to a predominantly blue-collar clientele living around the nation's capital, shoppers say they are being unusually frugal this Christmas.

JACALYN COX, WHO runs an exercise and dance studio, rummaged through her gift-laden shopping bag and said, "There's not a gift in here that wasn't on sale." The high price tags on clothing and jewelry have forced her to buy less personal gifts.

Last year she bought her sister a blouse that cost $25. But this year Cox's sister will receive a $15 flight bag, which was on sale for $7.

Abdul Karim, a cab driver, said he's buying gifts for only the closest persons in his life. "For the others, I will just send a card with a nice message."

Dorothy Willis, who is wheelchair-bound because of a childhood bout with poliomyelitis, lives in Seattle in World War II barracks that were converted into apartments. A former secretary who lives on Social Security checks, she said that Christmas cards went out the window this year along with her annual gift to her brother-in-law.

The weather is worse than usual this year — a sharp easterly wind off nearby Puget Sound and the rain beat incessantly against her leaded-glass windows. Because the heat bill is taking a $70 bite out of her $310 government check each month, Willis has had to economize even more than usual.

SHE WAITED FOR A "20 percent off" sale at J.C. Penney's at nearby South Center Mall, then paid cash for clothes for her daughter Mary and three grandchildren. "It was all useful things, nothing foolish," Willis said.

Also buying clothing this year was Paul McCarron, a Minnesota state representative who lives in Anoka County, an area where the farmers are ailing financially, where the nearby iron mining communities are suffering from 24 percent unemployment, and where the state Legislature is wrestling with a $400 million deficit.

In addition, at McCarron's own company, which makes agricultural canvas products, sales are down 35 percent.

Adeste Fideles
O come ye faithful, joyful and triumphant O come ye O come ye to Beth-le-hem! Come and

ONE OF THE FAITHFUL?

Joe and I were passing the record shop the day before Christmas. An amplifier was blaring, "O Come, All Ye Faithful."

"That leaves me out, " said Joe, cynically. "I'm not one of the faithful, so I'm not supposed to come."

Now, I'm a Christian; and I can't let a remark like that go unanswered.

"Ever stop to think, Joe, that the faithful are not only the folks who have been faithful, but also the folks who are going to become faithful . . . like you, Joe?"

To make a long story short, Joe went with me to Church the next day. And we both heard the Pastor say that the purpose of Christmas is to reveal God's love to a world that does not understand . . .

Nowadays, when I see Joe singing in the choir, I remember the record shop and Adeste Fideles—God's call to worship for the faithful of yesterday, today and tomorrow!

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Santa Claus, that jolly, bewhiskered old philanthropist to the young, says he's disgusted with all the commercialism that clutters up Christmas, but that he can't stop it.

"It makes my temperature go to about 120," he said in a fancied interview in his workshop home at the North Pole before making his world-girdling rounds Friday night.

Puffing on his pipe, he sighed sadly about the flood of pictures of him used to whomp up advertising pitches and the "phony guys that dress up like me to hawk their stuff on the tube. It's repulsive."

"But I'm not responsible for how much they corrupt my image," he said in conjectured comments to U. S. Catholic, a monthly magazine published in Chicago by the Claretian Fathers and Brothers.

"Don't try to pin the materialism of your nation on me," he said. "Fortunately there are still millions — kids mostly — who keep my image clean."

He said they "know I stand for giving selflessly" and "think of me as a person who gives bounteously and without asking for anything in return except affection."

Ask if that impression wasn't a bit god-like, he stroked the side of his red nose, grinning. "Exactly. Precisely. Think about kids. They need something to hang on to, a face, a body, a someone.

"They can't grasp abstractions and vague notions of God. So they look to me. Many of them think of God as looking like Santa — benevolent, giving, trustworthy... and loving without exception."

Santa noted that all his many names have religious implications, that Santa Claus derives from a slurring of St. Nicholas, that Father Christmas has priestly connotations, that Kris Kringle stems from a German expression meaning Christ-child.

"Whatever people call me, it's a compliment," he laughed, shaking like jelly.

Magazine staffer James Brieg says he asked if it wasn't dangerous for children to "think of God as being like you" because when they found out about him, they might think "of God as a phony."

Patting his ample girth, Santa said it was up to parents to "replace me with something more" as children get older. But "some parents like to get off easy," he added.

"They like to use me and my friend, the Easter Bunny, to get out of talking about religion and God with their youngsters. And when they stop using us, they leave a vacuum...But if parents step in, that vacuum can be filled with...a new idea of God, one that suits the kids' age."

Asked if he didn't tend to overshadow the Christ child, the good-natured old fellow chuckled and replied:

"Not at all...The child in the manger is the center of Christmas. All else is secondary. Think of it. The Christ child is God's gift to the world, freely given. Like something in your stocking you didn't expect, something which turns out to be worth more than anything else you got.

"What Jesus was — God made human — I am in only a very vague way. I am a dim echo of that moment in history when God took upon himself the form of a slave. That's what I stand for. I am God's unending goodness incarnated in man.

"A rather strange man at that. I am overweight and old. That's important. God doesn't demand that we be perfect tens to love one another."

A final question: How do you fit into those chimneys?

"I've never told before, but I'll tell you...There's one magic word that makes me able to do all that I do — to fly around the world in one night, to bring gifts to every child, to navigate a sleigh pulled by reindeer, and to squeeze down those chimneys.

"The magic word is 'belief'. The kids believe I can do it, and so I do it."

Baptists persecuted, agency says

ELKHART, Ind. (AP) — An agency that keeps tabs on the Soviet religious scene says reports indicate persecution of unregistered Baptists continues under the regime of the new Communist Party chief, Yuri Andropov.

The assessment was made by the International Representation for evangelical Baptists in the Soviet Union, headed by the Rev.Georgi Vins, once imprisoned there himself. The agency summarized several recent cases of pastors being sentenced to prison.

Caring for about a dozen homeless men and women each night at the combined parish of Calvary-St. George's is part of a burgeoning religious operation both in New York and at many communitties across the nation.

The Newspaper BIBLE

IT'S A BOY! AND HIS NAME IS J-O-H-N!

Mary stayed with Elizabeth about three months and then went back to her own home.

By now Elizabeth's waiting was over, for the time had come for the baby to be born--and it was a boy.

The word spread quickly to the neighbors and relatives of how kind the Lord had been to her, and everyone rejoiced.

When the baby was eight days old, all the relatives and friends came for the circumcision ceremony. They all assumed the baby's name would be Zacharias, after his father.

But Elizabeth said, "No! He must be named John!"

"What?" they exclaimed. "There is no one in all your family by that name."

So they asked the baby's father, talking to him by gestures.

He motioned for a piece of paper and to everyone's surprise wrote, "His name is JOHN!"

Instantly Zacharias could speak again, and he began praising God.

Wonder fell upon the whole neighborhood, and the news of what had happened spread through the Judean hills.

And everyone who heard about it thought long thoughts and asked, "I wonder what this child will turn out to be? For the hand of the Lord is surely upon him in some special way."

'Legion of Decency' standards change with times

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

It was once known as the Legion of Decency, and it wielded such power that timorous movie makers would call in its officials to find out what scenes might offend them. The offensive scenes ended up on the cutting-room floor.

And no wonder. The nation's Catholics were required to take a pledge at mass once a year to avoid films the legion "condemned." The legion's "Thou Shall Nots" were clear. Bad guys couldn't win. Sin had to be followed by pangs of remorse. There could be no nudity or "suggestive costuming," no explicit violence, no drugs, no naughty language.

"The Moon Is Blue," a light 1953 comedy that would hardly bring a blush to the cheek of today's prime-time TV viewer, received a "condemned" rating because there was talk about someone's being a virgin. The producers of the sober "To Kill a Mockingbird" changed the ending slightly after the legion decided the original justified the sin of lying and was unsuitable for teenagers.

But over the years the legion, created in 1934, has been transformed. Its name was dropped in 1965, it was slimmed down into a department within the U.S. Catholic Conference, and its standards have changed with the times.

HE REGARDS himself as a film critic, feels nudity and violence can serve an artistic purpose and emphasizes that the film classifications are advisory — to help Catholic families "make up their minds in a very complex area."

To emphasize that advisory role, the "condemned" category was dropped in December and replaced with a "morally offensive" classification. "Condemned," Gallagher feels, suggests a "signed, sealed and delivered" judgment that smacks of censorship, something he doesn't wants to do. The Catholic system of A-1 (general patronage), A-2 (adolescents and adults), A-3 (adults), A-4 (adults, but with reservations) and O (morally offensive) seems no more severe than the Motion Picture Association of America's G, PG, R and X ratings. Indeed, there are PG-rated movies like "My Brilliant Career" that have been given A-1 ratings by the Catholics.

"We're saying what we think but we don't want to preclude freedom," Gallagher explains. "We feel movies affect people. Movies are important. And therefore we feel the church has to say something about it...Catholics want guidance on movies just as they want guidance on nuclear weapons."

In the case of movies, he says, moral judgments "are inextricably bound up with aesthetic judgments." The legion, he feels, failed to appreciate that point and found itself in debilitating quandaries over serious films like "The Pawnbroker," in which a prostitute desperate for money disrobes for an embittered concentration camp survivor, and 'Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?,' which was salted with rough dialogue in its portrayal of a tortured marriage.

WHEN HE SEES a movie, Gallagher says, he asks: "Is it exploitative or does it advance the theme?" "Saturday Night Fever" had some torrid backseat sex and street-corner language, but Gallagher gave it an A-4 rating. "We thought it was a serious film dealing with alienated Catholic youth. It was shocking, but it had sufficient integrity."

"Atlantic City" had sultry scenes of Susan Sarandon squeezing lemons and washing her body in their juice, but the movie made the Catholic Conference's 10 Best List. Gallagher feels the nudity was restrained, and that the movie itself showed "a relation between two people who are kind of lost and think they're going to get something from each other. The sex is presented in such a way that it's not going to blur the moral outlook of a mature person."

He acknowledges that he brings an orthodox Catholic sensibility to his job, one that would be uneasy with sex and violence as mere entertainment. "It's not my morality. I got it from the Catholic Church. We believe fornication is wrong, premarital sex is wrong, promiscuity wrong. If we see a film and a man and woman go to bed together, what they're doing objectively is committing a sin. But because it's a sin do we automatically give it an O (morally offensive)?...If it is an objective sin, then we'd say okay for adults. If the outlook is too benign, if it's seen as a great thing to do, free of consequences, than we'd give it an O. We consider ourselves coming from God. Real love would preclude an abuse of sex. Still, we're not keeping anyone out of the theater."

To underscore his point, Gallagher compares two movies: Brian de Palma's "Dressed to Kill," a Hitchcock-style thriller about a crazed psychiatrist who goes around slashing women, and the 1980 Australian film "The Chant of Jimmy Blacksmith," a portrait of an oppressed aborigine whose rage explodes at his employer's wife and children.

IN BOTH MOVIES, Gallagher says, there are scenes of nudity and graphic violence, but in "Jimmy Blacksmith" the scenes strengthen the theme of oppression and the vengeance it inspires, while in 'Dressed to Kill," the nude shots of the Angie Dickinson character in the shower are simply there for the sensation of it. The razor that is the murder weapon, he points out, glitters "like no other razor" to heighten the shock.

"What is 'Dressed to Kill' about? It's about nudity, eroticism and violence directed toward women. It has no other reason for being," Gallagher said.

The film made over $30 million, and its distributors say the Catholics' rating hurt them not one bit. "It had no effect," said Dick Delson, publicity director of Filmways. "It was a very sophisticated marketing campaign...And one of the things that helped us immensely was that people kenw they were going to see Angie Dickinson in the shower. You can be religious, but as a human being your curiosity is aroused. If there's the possibility of seeing something as lovely as Angie Dickinson naked, you're going to see it, whether your Jewish, Catholic or what." (Actually, viewers didn't see Dickinson naked; a double, a Penthouse Pet, did those scenes.)

Gallagher concedes that his office's impact is limited. His film reviews and the ratings, which Gallagher decides with input from a group of consultants and occasionally other conference officials, are disseminated through the National Catholic News Service and used by the newspapers of the 170 Catholic dioceses. Some use Gallagher's full review of a film, some just the rating.

"I DON'T KNOW what percentage read those papers," Gallagher says. "There are Catholics who depend on the ratings, but we'd be kidding ourselves that we really had a profound impact."

Grace Presbyterian soon to begin new sanctuary

Construction will begin in March on a new sanctuary for Grace Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield St., it was announced by Cliff Sherrod, chairman of the Building Campaign Committee.

A successful fund-raising campaign, called "Grow With Grace," helped finance the capital expansion cost. The fund drive was completed Dec. 5 with pledges from members of the church exceeding the goal of 50 percent of the estimated cost of the project.

Sherrod credited the success of the effort to his hard-working staff, the diligence and enthusiasm of the calling stewards and the commitment of the congregation.

Grace Presbyterian, a union of two separate Presbyterian congregations, the former Christ and Covenant Churches, was commissioned Oct. 14, 1979, by the Presbyterian Church in the United States and the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. According to a press release from the church, it is the first union church established in Midland. Pastor is the Rev. Patrick Willson.

Since its establishment, the congregation has been using an informal, large meeting room for its worship, fellowship, dinners, choir rehearsals and all gatherings of any size. With the addition of the new sanctuary and other facilities, the capacity of the church will increase from 175 to 400.

Due to the constant growth of the congregation, and its projected increase in the future, the present facilities are not adequate and the new nave and chancel will offer a more appropriate setting for worship services, weddings, funerals and other church-related activities, Sherrod explained.

Church protests invasion

NEW YORK (AP) — Pleading "let this madness stop," leaders of the Episcopal Church have protested an invasion by an armed group on a church-supported cooperative farm in El Salvador where seven persons were killed execution style.

"The assassinations left behind widows, 24 orphans, a community in shock and fear and another chapter in the decimation of civilization in El Salvador," said a statement by Episcopal Presiding Bishop John M. Allin and others. About 520 people fled the village, some taking refuge in Episcopal offices in San Salvador.

State court rules nuns may sue their bishop

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Four nuns have the right to sue their bishop for a public hearing on the church's decision to dismiss them as parochial school teachers, the state Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

A Superior Court decision had said the nuns could not sue the bishop and diocese superintendent of schools because of the separation of church and state.

The nuns say their contracts with the Sacred Heart elementary school in Hampton requires a hearing to allow the public to comment on whether their contracts should be renewed.

Church historians have said it apparently is the first time nuns have sued a bishop in the United States.

"Religious entities...are not totally immune from responsibility under the civil law," the high court ruling said. "In religious controversies involving property or contractural rights outside the doctrinal realm, a court may accept jurisdiction and render a decision without violating the First Amendment."

The state Superior Court in April ruled that separation of church and state prohibited the nuns from suing Bishop Odore Gendron and the school superintendent of the Diocese of Manchester.

The nuns appealed.

The ruling remands the case to the lower court for a fuller hearing on the nuns' rights under their contracts, which the diocese had claimed were an internal church matter.

The nuns' suit defied traditional church authority and incited emotions among parishioners in Hampton and across the state. The church in September told one of the nuns she no longer was a good enough Catholic to retain her church teaching certificate.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, Dec. 25, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: MERRY CHRISTMAS! Those born on this most special and blessed day face wonderful and awesome challenges throughout their lives. Brave and charismatic, they impress others with their calm but relentless determination. Red Cross founder Clara Barton, the late Egyptian leader Anwar Sadat and the legendary Humphrey Bogart were born on Christmas Day, as were music maker Cab Calloway, Academy Award winner Sissy Spacek and Washington lawyer Clark Clifford. Success is certain for those who work with both young people and senior citizens in the years ahead. Romance becomes more satisfying as you learn to read mate's signals. An unconventional approach reveals the quickest route to the top.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): MERRY CHRISTMAS! This is a day for both joy and reflection. Love falls right in your lap. A family reunion helps erase some sad memories and hurt feelings. Confide in mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An old flame reappears and tries to get included in your Christmas plan. Be tactful, but act decisively to put family needs first. Your loyalty is richly rewarded.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Happy romance contributes to the joy of Christmas. Lend a hand in the kitchen so that everyone has a chance to relax. Include the whole family in your social plans.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Little children play a key role in the success of the day. You enjoy playing Santa Claus! Share everything you have with your loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): MERRY CHRISTMAS! You adore what your loved ones give you. A special surprise has you walking on air. Call those family members who could not come home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An ideal time for romance. Be generous with your time. Do not forget those family members who cannot get out. Even a short visit will mean a great deal to them today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Consider the desires of the majority when planning today's family dinner. A romantic interlude contributes to a very special evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone who has taken you for granted recently now makes amends. Sit down and catch up with those you have not seen for a while. You discover new delights.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It's a wonderful day for reconcilations and commitments. You have some unbelievable good luck in romance. Be understanding with a loved one who has been feeling out of sorts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A new love gives you a special glow. Count on family members to notice! A child's Christmas stocking and the presents under the tree reflect your generosity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A coincidental meeting at a social event turns into a romantic opportunity. Others give in if you want to make changes in today's schedule. Be gracious when accepting compliments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The money you receive from a relative makes this an even happier Christmas. Children develop a very special appreciation of their heritage as they get to know their grandparents better.

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 NT	2 ♠
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

The bridge expert can't do the impossible. All he can do is to make the most of his chances.

We are not sure that we approve of South's decision to respond one no trump in preference to raising clubs. However, the end result left little to be desired. North had a problem with his rebid after West overcalled one spade. He had originally intended making a reverse bid of two diamonds, but he opted instead to upgrade the value of the king of spades and make a practical jump to three no trump.

West led the top of his interior sequence in spades. Declarer played the king from dummy and East made the fine play of unblocking the jack. Declarer's problem was not hard to see. He had to develop the club suit without allowing East to gain the lead, for a lead through his queen of spades was bound to be fatal. In addition, he had to find a ninth trick somewhere.

Cashing the ace of clubs would not do. That would simply allow West to unblock the king, and thus permit East to win the second round of clubs.

Leading a diamond to the jack was equally futile. If East had the queen of diamonds, he could rise with it and revert to spades. After careful study, declarer found the one line of play that would allow him to make his contract — he led a diamond and finessed his nine.

Prospects brightened considerably when West won this trick with the queen. West exited safely with a diamond. Declarer won in hand and led the jack of clubs. Whether West covered or not, the contract was safe. If he played the king, he would be allowed to hold the trick. If he followed low, declarer would rise with dummy's ace and continue the suit. Either way, the contract was home.

NASA hopes to announce shuttle launch date soon

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space agency officials say they hope to announce a date for the shuttle Challenger's maiden voyage early next month, about two weeks later than planned because of problems that arose during a test.

NASA had hoped to announce a firm launch date on Thursday, but "there was some concern about a higher-than-expected content of hydrogen (fuel) in the aft compartment of the orbiter following the flight readiness firing last week," spokesman Dick Young said.

"That condition and the causes for it are not fully understood. They're investigating further, and hopefully they'll be able to make an announcement of a firm launch date the first week in January."

Officials earlier set a target date of Jan. 27 for the sixth shuttle mission, the first by the Columbia's sister spacecraft. "It was never a firm date," Young said.

Astronauts Paul Weitz and Karol Bobko will head the crew for the Challenger's five-day flight. They will be here the second week of January for a launch countdown rehearsal.

Four of the five crew members for the second Challenger mission, tentatively set for April, were at Kennedy Space Center on Thursday for a launch and landing simulation.

That crew will be commanded by Robert Crippen, a Columbia veteran.

Crippen was asked if the shuttle flights are becoming routine.

"The intent of the space shuttle program is to give us access to space" on a routine basis, Crippen said. "But to those of us who fly, it will never be routine."

Joining him here were pilot Frederick H. Hauck and mission specialists Sally Ride and John M. Fabian. Ms. Ride, the nation's first woman astronaut, and Fabian will be responsible for deploying two satellites and working the spacecraft's mechanical arm during the six-day mission.

Not participating in Thursday's test was Dr. Norman Thagard, a physician recently assigned to conduct medical tests and collect data on the astronauts' physical changes which bring on space sickness.

Many of the shuttle astronauts have experienced nausea and vomiting, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is trying to find a solution.

Christmas marks not just feast day, but important events through history

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — As a day in history, as well as being the most famous religious feastday, Christmas hangs in there unique on the calendar.

On Christmas Day, 1492, Christopher Columbus ran the Santa Maria aground on a reef off Haiti and thought he had discovered Japan. The confused admiral addressed these notes in the ship's log to King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of of Spain. "Your Highnesses may believe that in all the world there cannot be a people better or more gentle. Your Highnesses should feel great joy, because they will presently become Christians, and will be educated in the good customs of your realms."

The Pilgrims arriving on the Mayflower in 1620 did not celebrate Christmas, regarding it as a "human invention" and "another Roman corruption surviving from heathen times." They spent the day choosing the site and laying the foundation for their Common House, all able-bodied men going ashore on Christmas morning "some to fell timber, some to saw, some to rive and some to carry. So no man rested all that day."

Mulligan's Stew

John Evelyn, the acid-penned British diarist, vividly recorded the Puritan hatred of the "popery" of Christmas in this Dec. 25 entry in his diary at the height of Oliver Cromwell's rule: "I went to London with my wife to celebrate Christmas-day. Mr. Gunning preaching...as he was giving us ye Holy Sacrament the chappell was surrounded with souldiers, and all the communicants and assembly supriz'd and kept prisoners by them, some in the house others carried away. It fell to my share to be confin'd to a roome in the house...In the afternoone came Col. Waley, Goffe, and others, from White-hall to rexamine us one by one... When I came beforee them they tooke my name and abode, examin'd me why contrary to an ordinance made that none should any longer observe ye superstitious time of the Nativity (so esteem'd by them) I durst offend, and particularly be at Common Prayers, which they told me was but ye masse in English, and particularly pray for Charles Steuart...I told them we did not pray for Cha. Steuart, but for all Christian Kings, Princes and Governors. They replied in so doing we praied for the K. of Spaine too, who was their enemie and a papist, with other frivolous and insnaring questions and much threatening; and finding no color to detaine me, they dismissw'd me with much pitty of my ignorance. They were men of high flight and above ordinances, and spake spiteful things of Our Lord's Nativity. As we went up to receive the Sacament the miscreants held the muskets against us as if they would have shot us..."

A DEVOUT AND festive Christmas was legal and back in style by the time Samuel Pepys sat down to write in his diary on Dec. 25, 1666, the year of the great London fire: "Lay pretty long in bed, and then rose, leaving my wife desirous to sleep, having sat up until four this morning seeing her mayds make mince pies. I to church, where our Parson Mills made a good sermon. Then home, and dined on some good ribs of beef roasted and and mince pies; only my wife, brother and Barker, and plenty of good wine of my owne, and my heart full of true joy; and thanks to God Almighty for the goodness of my condition at this day."

Christmas, 1776: Soft in the bitter cold night, boats move out into the ice-choked Deleware River at McKonkey's Ferry, oars muffled, lamps out. A snow-laden northwest wind, howling down from Bowman's Hill, molds the great tunic around the shoulders of Gen. George Washington, still looking for his first victory after taking command of the battered Continental Army. "The game is almost up," Washington had dejectedly written his half-brother Lawrence a few days before. But soon the last boat reaches the New Jersey side of the river and Lt. James Monroe, later to become fifth president of the new United States, is taking the lead company of the 320th Virginia Regiment down King Street in Trenton. The Hessian garrison falls without a shot being fired.

Christmas at the White House, 1861. Drawn and gaunt, Abraham Lincoln paces the uncarpeted corridor outside the Green Room, where a congressional committee on the conduct of the war is debating whether his wife, the tormented Mary Todd Lincoln, is a security risk. A Kentuckian, she has a brother and three half brothers in Rebel Gray. A favorite sister is married to a Confederate general. In an upstairs bedroom, 10-year-old Willie Lincoln, the grave bookish little boy "too much loved" by his parents, is dying of fever. Great blotches of snow streaming by the windows all but blot out the tents of the Army of the Potomac, still licking its wounds after the disaster at Bull Run. Commander Gen. George McClellan sticks to his tent, stricken with typhoid. Seventy miles west in a farmhouse at Winchester, Va., Gen. Thomas Jonathan Jackson, whose 1st Virginia Brigade stood like a stone wall at Manassas, begins a Christmas letter to his wife. "The war continues apace..."

CHRISTMAS DAY in Belgium, 1944: For the first time in a week, the skies clear over the snow-blanketed village of Bastogne, and the Luftwaffe is able to drop some lethal Christmas presents on the besieged paratroopers of the 101st Airborne Division. Holding out against 45,000 crack German troops equipped with the latest Tiger tanks, "The Battered Bastards of Bastogne" have frustrated Field Marshal Ferd Von Rundstedt's plan to hurl 30 divisions through the Ardennes forest and break through to the port of Antwerp. Surrender? "Nuts," replied Brig. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe three days before, and now they are paying the price of his impertinence. But already George Patton's tanks are clanking to the rescue over icy roads and the Bulge will go down in history as a monument to American doggedness, over the frozen bodies of 8,600 GIs lying in the snow.

Christmas in Korea, 1950: A Navy recon pilot from the carrier Princeton, looking down on the long line of ships inching out into the Sea of Japan from the smoldering port city of Hungnam, messages "Merry Christmas" to the final U.S. destroyer going in for the last bombardment of the abandoned city. Half a world away, President Harry Truman acknowledges "the finest Christmas present I have ever received." The U.S. 7th Fleet has pulled off one of the greatest rescue missions in history, evacuating 105,000 U.N. troops and 91,000 refugees from the path of the advancing Red Chinese army. The 1st U.S. Marine Div. fighting out of a trap in the Chosin Reservoir in weather as bleak as any since Valley Forge, had made the rescue possible.

Christmas in Vietnam 1967 — Another uneasy truce, a bombing halt promising peace, the Bob Hope show arrives and then, just around the corner, the terrible fury of Tet.

And now, another Christmas, 1982. U.S. Marines are in Lebanon, near where Christmas began two millenia ago, on patrol in the shattered streets of Beirut, trying to keep peace on earth at a time and in a country where there is little good will toward men.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, Dec. 26, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: It is "Junkanoo" time in the Bahamas, where revelers in colorful costumes parade through the streets playing homemade musical instruments. Celebrities sharing your birthday include actor Richard Widmark, first "Tonight Show" host Steve Allen, Chicago White Sox catcher Carlton Fisk and Atlanta Braves first baseman Chris Chambliss. The money you lay out for expert advice is well spent. A consultant could point out many angles you have overlooked. Guard your business secrets and privacy. Someone with a grudge could try to make you look bad. You are on the brink of a discovery that will bring you big money!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A splendid time for romance. You enjoy resting after a busy Christmas Day. New associations bring you good luck. Protect your money and valuables.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Affectionate gestures help extend the joys of yesterday. Unexplainable personality traits can be difficult to deal with at times. Your sense of humor makes you very popular.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep your private life out of the spotlight. A gift employing new technology holds your attention. Spend more time with a young relative who wants to talk.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A whirlwind romance gains impetus from the holiday spirit that still surrounds you. Avoid doing anything that will disrupt family harmony.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are driving other family members crazy with your constant activity. Slow down and enjoy the company of someone who has been away for a long time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put aside your work and spend time with your family and friends. You may feel a lack of direction where your career is concerned. An older relative offers valuable advice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be feeling a bit letdown after yesterday's festivities. Listen to a hint from a relative. You will feel a lot better if you get some fresh air and exercise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You worry too much about what other people say. Their comments are not worthy of a response. Family ties become even stronger now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep your options open. Entertaining brings old friends together. You make a long-overdue decision and enjoy a new peace of mind. Music holds special appeal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Surprise meetings bring back happy memories. Get some much-needed rest this afternoon. A relative may be overdramatizing his or her plight. Withhold help until you have all the facts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pursue romance. You cannot afford to shut out someone you care for. Resist the temptation to play games and you end the year on a terrific note.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make a commitment and success is guaranteed. The time is right to end a nonproductive romance. Delays undermine your determination.

Fewer faithful enter Bethlehem Square

BETHLEHEM, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Pilgrims trickled into Manger Square in bright sunshine under the eyes of dozens of heavily armed Israeli troops today to celebrate the 16th Christmas Eve in Bethlehem under Israeli occupation.

The recession and the Lebanon war prompted a 40 percent drop in pilgrim traffic, with 25,000 expected in the Holy Land this year.

The first pilgrims congregated in the square outside the Church of the Nativity, traditional site of Christ's birth, to await the arrival of the Latin Patriarch, Msgr. Giacomo Giuseppe Beltritti, from Jerusalem.

The Israeli army laid on its usual heavy security to prevent Palestinian guerrilla attacks or demonstrations against the Israeli occupation of the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Bethlehem Mayor Elias Freij said that instead of his customary Christmas message, he was issuing a verbal plea for an end to what he called "Israeli colonization of the West Bank."

He said he was using the Christmas spotlight to send "an SOS to the world. The Israelis are taking our land, pushing us Arabs into ghettos and building settlements."

A large-scale Israeli settlement drive is under way, intended to almost double the present West Bank Jewish population of 25,000 in the next year.

Freij, a Palestinian Christian, also urged Israel to release 5,000 Palestinians it captured since the beginning of its Lebanese invasion June 6. They are held as guerrilla suspects in an internment camp in southern Lebanon.

"These boys should be home with their families," he said. "This is a very sad Christmas."

This year marked the second consecutive large drop in pilgrimages to the Holy Land. The 1981 figure was 35 percent lower than in 1980.

Israeli officials attribute the decline mainly to the recession in the West which has put overseas Christmas holidays beyond reach of many vacationers.

The Lebanon war has given Israel an image of being tense and dangerous, further cutting the tourist traffic, though the now sporadic fighting is in Lebanon, 120 miles to the north, and is not felt in Bethlehem.

Christmas festivities climax with a midnight Mass in the Church of the Nativity for 1,400 ticket-holding worshipers. The overflow audience can watch it on a king-size closed-circuit television screen in the square. The ceremony also is broadcast live by satellite to foreign countries.

Kids ask Santa for jobs for their fathers, money

By The Associated Press

Some kids want a job for daddy this Christmas. Others would settle for just a daddy.

"I want things to be better for Mommy. I want Mommy to be married," a 2-year-old told Santa Claus Sherman Hardge in Detroit.

Jobs for Daddy, said two children to Santa Jeff Swale in Seattle.

"The key to good magic — a magic so great that the needy and sick will become unsick and unneedy," said little Andrea of Chicopee, Mass., whose letter to Santa was read by Chicopee postmaster John Steele.

Santa Claus, who listens to the dreams of children, says many kids understand that this Christmas will be different. They seem to know the visions dancing in their heads may not make their way to a spot under the Christmas tree, and they have tapered their wish-lists.

"Some of them will come in here, and you know their folks are out of work because they'll say, 'I can't get but one thing,' " said Santa Keith Thomas at Rich's Department Store in Atlanta. "And they usually ask for something small, like an umbrella.

"I've had a kid ask for a new house for his mom and dad. And I had one kid ask for a ham for Christmas. I just told him Santa would do the best he he could. You can't make them too many promises."

In Portland, Ore., a Santa at the Meier & Frank department store said he finds children sensitive to their family finances.

"Some kids say, 'I don't want any toys. Can you just bring me some money?' " said the Santa, who won't reveal his real name to anyone, including store employees. "My heart goes out for 'em. I tell them the only thing we have at the North Pole is Monopoly money."

Santa Claus himself may be particularly sensitive to family hardship this year for in many parts of America, he, too, has been unemployed.

"I just want to work," said Ken MacDonald of West Springfield, Mass., who found a Santa job several weeks ago when he was laid off at a small print shop.

Santa Ted Toliver, who entertains children at a suburban Detroit department store, is an unemployed steelworker. He said many children want dolls and toys, but some are asking for houses.

"I couldn't believe it," said Toliver, 26. "I never though about asking for that when I was a kid."

Earlier this month, a national survey of Santa Clauses by Sears, Roebuck and Co. found that many children have been asking for money and jobs for their parents instead of toys for themselves.

A boy from Lake Grove, N.Y., asked Santa for a chain saw so his dad could cut wood to keep the house warm, Sears reported.

Clinic gives gift of care

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Doctors at a private clinic treated residents of this southwest Missouri city to an early, and healthy, Christmas present by offering some free medical care.

About 350 people took advantage of the one-day offer Thursday, said Dr. Donald Patterson, co-owner of the clinic.

"We had a real good year, and I just wondered what I could do for the community," said Patterson, a 55-year-old general practitioner who has worked in Joplin for 27 years.

"Things are a little tough down here in Joplin right now. I couldn't give away any food, and I couldn't give away any toys, but I could give away my knowledge," he said.

Patterson estimated each person received services worth $35 to $50.

BUILDING THE PETROPLEX

The 1st year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8 3/8% loan to value interest will be charged at a rate of 12 3/8% for the 1st 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payment 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in payment will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 12.875%. *Principle and Interest only is calculated in monthly payument.
