Reactor fire extinguished, agency says

KIEV, U.S.S.R. (AP) — An International Atomic Energy Agency official said today that the fire at the Chernobyl nuclear reactor has been put out. The mayor of Kiev said a quarter-million children will leave school early this year because of the devastating accident.

The agency official, Morris Rosen, told a news conference in Moscow that an adjacent reactor at the Ukrainian facility was not damaged by the fire and was not in danger of releasing radiation.

Kiev Mayor Valentin Sgursky said schools attended by a quarter-million of the city's children will close May 15, several weeks early, because of the power plant accident. He said the move was not an emergency measure.

"We are simply advancing the normal school holiday a little bit," Sgursky told a group of foreign reporters.

Ukrainian Health Minister Anatoly Romanenko was quoted earlier as saying on Kiev radio that school children would be moved out of the area as a precaution. Kiev, the nation's third-largest city, is 80 miles south of the nuclear plant.

Ukrainian Premier Alexander Lyashko told reporters Thursday that authorities did not order the major part of the evacuation until six days after the accident, and waited for two days to inform Moscow of the full scope of the worst disaster in the history of nuclear power.

At the Moscow news conference, Rosen said workers were trying to seal off the No. 4 reactor at the Chernobyl facility where a chemical explosion occurred April 26, setting off a fire and spewing a radioactive cloud over Europe.

"The aim is to encase the whole fourth unit in concrete and work has begun to place a concrete foundation under the reactor," he said.

Lyashko had said Thursday that crews still were trying to put out the reactor fire. The director of the U.N.-affiliated International Atomic Energy Agency, Hans Blix, flew over the reactor Thursday and said on Soviet television that smoke was coming from it.

But Rosen said today, "The fire is out."

He said the smoke seen Thursday was light gray and appeared to come from smoldering sand, lead, boron and dolomite thrown over the reactor to smother the fire. He said smoke was thicker and darker when the fire was burning.

Rosen also said Soviet officials reported the reactor core temperature had fallen to a degree that indicated the fire was out.

Lyashko had said Thursday that the reactor temperature had fallen to 300 degrees Celsius, 572 degrees Fahrenheit. "This means that the burning has practically stopped," he said.

Rosen said a meltdown never occurred, but a statement by his agency said the reactor core was extensively damaged. Rosen said workers were trying to build a concrete shield under the reactor in case a nuclear reaction should resume, sending radioactivity into the earth.

Western scientists have said they believe a meltdown did occur.

And Blix said at today's news conference, "It is clear the radioactive consequences of this accident are far more serious than in any acident so far."

He said the Soviets have agreed to release daily radiation levels beginning today from a monitoring station 37½ miles from the reactor and from six other stations along the country's western border.

Blix also said the Soviets never shut down their 11 other Chernobyl-type nuclear reactors, as some reports indicated earlier.

Rosen said most of the 204 people injured in the accident were firefighters and that all had been sent to Moscow for treatment.

Need for state income tax 'clear'

By RUTH RENDON

HOUSTON (AP) — Another voice has been added to the increasingly insistent chorus that Texans will one day soon have to swallow their pride and submit to an income tax.

"There will have to be a redistribution away from oil and gas," Jared F. Hazleton, president of the Texas Research League, said Thursday at a symposium his group sponsored on the state's economic outlook.

"There are only two real long-term options — a corporate and a personal income tax," he added. "It is clear to me that the tax system Texas has had is going to have to change. It's something we should prepare for."

Texas is one of only six states that have no corporate income tax, and one of four with neither a corporate nor personal income tax. Many legislators have insisted they will not even consider adopting those taxes, but economists at the symposium said that attitude may have to be discarded.

Hazleton said that if the price of oil stabilizes at $18 a barrel, Texas economy won't be too disastrous, but the state could face a recession if the price continues at or under $15.

He said he expects the price of oil to peak at $18 by the end of the year, and remain stagnant for two years.

"If you assume oil prices stabilize at $18 a barrel, you get not disaster in Texas, but a fairly moderate growth. If you assume $15 a barrel you get a real problem with the Texas economy continuing for a couple of years," he said. "If you assume prices lower than $15 you will see a very significant recession."

Texas is in for a period of sluggish growth, both in its economy and population, Hazleton said. And along with the stunted growth, the state is being affected by inflation, interest rates and the falling value of the dollar.

"This year, inflation is going to be as low as 1 percent because the buying factors are not as strong as they used to be during the height of the oil boom," he said.

Hazleton said the lower value of the dollar is supposed to promote exports, but it hasn't. Yet he remains confident exports will pick up and stengthen the dollar.

He said many thought Texas was growing as a diversified state during the early 1980s when it actually was just becoming more dependent on oil.

Growth and income for the state was at its height at 14 percent during 1982. In the third quarter of 1984, the rate was 12 percent and has declined since then to less than 4 percent, he said.

Pentagon admits bombs hit civilian area

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon for the first time acknowledged that some U.S. bombs hit civilian areas during last month's air raid on Libya, and added that it is seeking details on the Arab country's claim it has recovered the body of an American flier killed in the attack.

The Defense Department said Thursday that three bombs dropped by an F-111 bomber missed their targets, "and it seems likely they impacted in the vicinity of the French Embassy," a building in Tripoli that was damaged during the April 15 raid.

In addition, two other bombs aimed at a terrorist barracks compound in Benghazi were errant, the Pentagon said.

The Defense Department has never provided a detailed breakdown on the number of bombs dropped during the night-time raid. Pentagon sources disclosed, however, that more than 225 bombs of various types — 500 pound, 750 pound and 2,000 pound — were used, totaling 100 tons worth of ordnance.

That would mean that about 2 percent of the bombs known to have been dropped during the raid hit civilian areas.

"Any other damage claimed by the Libyans, if actually true, most likely resulted from Libyan ordnance falling back to earth," the Pentagon said in a written assessment of the assault.

The Pentagon has insisted that dozens of anti-aircraft missiles fired by the Libyans at the American planes missed their targets and fell back to earth.

One top defense official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the F-111 that dropped three errant bombs is the plane that did not return from the raid.

Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims also said Thursday that the United States, working through the Belgian government, had requested more information from Libya on its claim that it found the body of one of the two airmen missing from the raid.

Sims said no reply had been received as yet. But he said the United States was prepared to request the return of the body on "humanitarian grounds."

"We would expect, if it proves to be the remains of one of our crew members, we would expect those to be returned," the spokesman said.

White praises 'grade A' TECAT performance as 96.7 percent pass

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite concerns over a high failing rate for blacks, Texas' leaders Thursday praised the unexpectedly large percentage of teachers who passed the March 10 TECAT test.

"The TECAT results are official, 96.7 percent of Texas teachers passed the test, and that's an 'A' in anyone's book," Gov. Mark White said in a written statement. "I think the public can be reassured that we have quality educators in our classrooms."

Teachers upset over the exam angrily greeted White on primary campaign stops around the state this spring. White won election in 1982 with the overwhelming support of Texas teachers, and observers say he will need their help again this year to defeat former Gov. Bill Clements in the November elections.

"The time for criticism is over and the time for confidence should begin," said Education Commissioner William Kirby.

Pilot tests at first indicated that as many as 10 percent of the 202,084 teachers who took the exam would fail. After the board revised the passing standards, Kirby predicted that 95 percent would pass either the first administration or the June 28 makeup. Final results show 6,579 — or 3.3 percent — did not pass one or both portions of the reading-and-writing exam.

State Board of Education Chairman Jon Brumley attributed the high passing rate to the intense studying teachers undertook before the test and the pressure of knowing they needed to pass the exam to keep their jobs.

As part of the education reforms of 1984, the Legislature ordered all teachers and administrators to pass the test by June 30 or lose their certificates. However school districts that "can demonstrate an emergency need" may request a one-year extension and re-hire some of those teachers who fail TECAT twice. District-by-district results will not be available until July or August.

The Iowa firm that graded the tests began mailing results to teachers Monday and put the last batch in the mails at noon Thursday. Teachers who do not receive their results by May 20 should call 1-800-233-5120.

Fewer than 100 of the 1,400 teachers who complained that they did not have enough time to complete the test failed. They will re-take the exam May 17.

While 98.9 percent of the white teachers who took the TECAT passed, only 94 percent of the Hispanics and 81.6 percent of the blacks passed. Brumley said those figures "illustrate the problem we have in this country of educating minorities" but also provide an opportunity to change that.

Minority teachers tend to teach in schools with predominantly minority students. By eliminating teachers who lack basic skills or by helping them learn those skills, Brumley said, the state can help break the cycle.

U.S. may embargo products of Libyan crude

WASHINGTON (AP) — In another jab at Libya's economy, the Reagan administration is working on a plan to embargo petroleum products made with Libyan crude oil in Europe and other lands, State Department officials said.

Because of difficult technical questions, including how such a ban would be enforced, a final decision on the embargo has not been made, the officials said Thursday, speaking only on condition they not be identified.

But Robert B. Oakley, head of the State Department's counterterrorism office, said in open testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Wednesday that the refined products ban is one of several new sanctions to be taken against Libya "before long."

The officials said increased efforts to get European countries to reduce their relations with the Libyan state airline also were being weighed.

"We're in the process of trying to figure out how it would be done," one official said of the oil products ban, which would be aimed at putting pressure on European refining concerns to limit their purchases of Libyan crude oil.

The official said a cutoff in finished products was considered several months ago, but was shelved because of the implementaion difficulties.

"We have always had under consideration additional economic measures, and they are continuing under active consideration," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, noting a pledge by the seven leaders at the recent Tokyo summit to do more against terrorism.

Pizza parlor delivery man accused of adding illegal drugs to menu

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A 28-year-old pizza delivery man accused of adding illegal drugs to the menu was being held in county jail this morning in lieu of a $50,000 bond after being charged Thursday with possession of methamphetamine.

Samuel Otto Hogan, 2505 Elizabeth, was arrested by Midland sheriff's investigators about midnight Thursday as he was entering a car to make a delivery, according to a Sheriff's Office spokesman.

Also being held in county jail this morning in lieu of $50,000 bonds were Karen Renee Green, 21, and 27-year-old Paul Anthony Cook, both of 2505 Elizabeth.

They were arrested at that address at about the same time Hogan was being stopped as he left the Domino's Pizza restaurant at 3302 W. Illinois, the spokesman said.

"I was very surprised," said Carol Rogers, the restaurant manager. "I thought he was being robbed."

Universal flouridation goal unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty years after the first U.S. community fluoridated its water supply, only 61 percent of the population drinks fluoridated water and America is unlikely to meet its goal for nearly universal treatment of water with the chemical, a government researcher says.

Dr. Harald Loe of the National Institutes of Health said anti-fluoridation campaigns have persuaded local government agencies and voters in many areas, particularly the West, to reject fluoridation.

The drive to fluoridate water supplies also suffers from a shortage of public funds for the effort and from the fact that most unfluoridated water supplies serve small communities, with fewer than 1,000 people, making them more costly on a per capita basis.

As a result, Loe said, more than 70 million Americans live in communities without fluoridated central water. And the nation is unlikely to meet the Public Health Service goal of fluoridated water for at least 95 percent of the population by the year 1990.

Senate focuses on IRAs in tax debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Individual Retirement Accounts, that newfound but widely used tax shelter for middle America, are becoming the focus of Senate debate on a plan for overhauling the income-tax system.

A full month before Senate floor action on the bill is likely, two Republican members have introduced a resolution that would put the lawmakers on record in favor of keeping fully deductible IRAs for everybody who can afford them.

It is no secret that President Reagan and Treasury Department officials are concerned about a provision in the overhaul bill that would allow the full IRA tax break only for workers who are not eligible for company pension plans.

Reagan telephoned Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chief author of the bill, on Thursday to congratulate him on the effort and said he is generally satisfied with the plan, White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters. Packwood chairs the Senate Finance Committee.

However, Speakes declined to say whether Reagan supports the anti-IRA part of the bill or another sensitive provision, which would repeal the preferential tax treatment of individual capital gains.

"I'm not going to dissect the various sections" of the bill, Speakes said, repeating that Reagan's "general satisfaction applies to the bill."

Reagan's own tax-overhaul plan would retain a fully deductible $2,000-a-year IRA for all workers and allow the same set-aside for spouses who earn no wages. Non-working spouses now are limited to a tax-deferred contribution of $250 a year.

And rather than repealing the tax break for capital gains, the president proposed to expand it so that inflation-caused increases in the value of stocks and other assets would not be taxed.

Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California attacked the Finance Committee bill Thursday on both issues and several others as well, as did Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont. Their complaints and the effort by Sens. Bill Roth, R-Del., and Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., to keep fully deductible IRAs marked a departure from what has been strong congressional support for the bill since it was approved by the committee on Wednesday.

"IRAs are absolutely essential for working middle-income families," D'Amato told colleagues. "They have made it possible for families of modest means to plan for the future."

"IRAs are just beginning to accomplish their goals," Roth said. "They have only been in place effectively since 1982. But worse than the absurdity of repealing a provision so early is the signal it sends to middle-class savers.

"If we were to implement savings incentives in the future," Roth said, "who would believe us?"

IRAs for all workers, including those eligible for company pension plans, were enacted in 1981.

Ex relief chief denies charges

NEW YORK — Former Ethiopian relief chief Dawit Wolde Giorgis on Thursday denied charges by Ethiopia that he had absconded with hundreds of thousands of dollars when he fled to the United States last year.

Major Dawit, who headed the Ethiopian Relief and Rehabilitation Commission, said from his home in the New York area that the Addis Ababa government, which is also called the was trying to smear him.

He said he had been forced to flee because of political infighting.

Suspect jailed without bail for murder, arson

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A man charged with setting apartment fires that killed eight people was suspected of calling in several recent false alarms, and his picture had been circulated to police and fire stations, authorities said.

Frank A. Jordan, 20, was being held without bail today on eight counts of murder and nine of arson in connection with Thursday's early morning fires at the Latonia Apartments, where he sometimes lived with his mother.

Jordan used a cigarette lighter to ignite material in storage lockers in the basements of the two buildings in the 55-unit garden apartment complex, said Roger Ulshafer, deputy chief fire marshal.

At least 14 people were injured, one critically. The death toll was the highest due to arson in the city's history, said Fire Commissioner William Richmond.

Police had seen Jordan about two hours before the fires, near the scene of a small house fire about four blocks away, said Chief Inspector Frank Scafidi, head of the homicide division.

He was arrested Thursday at a hospital where he had gone complaining of injuring his back while helping people escape the fire, Scafidi said.

He had been suspected of causing numerous false alarms in the area in recent weeks, and his picture had been circulated at police and fire stations, Ulshafer said.

Residents said a small fire had broken out at the complex two weeks ago, and threats were later painted on a washing machine in a utility room.

The word "death" was painted on the lid of one machine and "You are dead" was written on its side, said Arthur Tizer, 25, who escaped the fire with his wife and their 8-month-old daughter.

Police did not say if they suspected Jordan of writing the words.

The flames moved quickly from the basement, "creating a lot of smoke and felling a lot of people," said Richmond. Heat caused an explosion in one building.

Residents described groping through apartments and hallways filled with acrid smoke, or breaking windows and pushing wives and children to safety.

"It was like being embraced by death, is what it was," said Jerry Anthony, 38, a free-lance writer who jumped from his second-story window into a tree to escape.

Anthony said he took a minute to put on his socks while his wife and daughter ran out of their apartment.

"All of a sudden, with the door open, smoke started filling up the apartment," he said. "I would say, within 20 seconds, 90 percent of my air was gone. ... The oxygen felt like it was being ripped from my throat."

Bodies of the victims were found in stairwells and hallways, apparently where they fell trying to escape, said Ulshafer.

One man was found dead in a hall with a flashlight in his hand, fire officials said.

Homeless residents were taken to a nearby school cafeteria, and the Red Cross reported 42 people had sought help in finding shelter.

Ulshafer said four bodies were found in each building. The complex is U-shaped, and the fires were in the two three-story parallel wings.

Jordan also was charged with nine counts of risking a catastrophe, nine counts of recklessly endangering another person, and one count each of aggravated assault and simple assault. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Wednesday.

One woman was in critical condition Thursday at Frankford Hospital-Torresdale Division with heart problems, a spokeswoman said. Three other people were hospitalized with various injuries, officials said. At least 10 others were treated and released.

TECAT

Senate Education Committee Chairman Carl Parker of Port Arthur, who opposed using the test to weed out illiterate teachers, said the state has "a moral obligation" to help those teachers pass the exam in June, particularly those who were graduated from state colleges. Parker, an attorney, said it is "a dead cinch" that some minority educators who fail the test will file a civil rights lawsuit challenging the exam.

Board member Carolyn Crawford, pointing to a special committee that reviewed and discarded any possibly biased test questions, said she does not expect a legal fight. "We made all the efforts we could to remove racial bias," Ms. Crawford said.

Charles Beard, president of the 96,000-member Texas State Teachers Association, said the TECAT wasted $4.7 million in state tax dollars and put teachers and administrators "through a demeaning emotional wringer." A TSTA challenge to the constitutionality of the exam is pending in an Austin appeals court.

"The fact is that if there are incompetent teachers in the classroom, we want to get them out of there," Beard said. "But we know that not all educators who failed TECAT in this first round are incompetent and not all who passed are excellent teachers."

The TSTA, which has opposed teacher testing from the outset, maintains that only "sensible, fair and comprehensive" classroom evaluations can identify incompetent teachers. A new statewide teacher appraisal system begins this fall.

When asked if the TECAT was worth the cost and emotional damage, House Public Education Committee Chairman Bill Haley of Center — a former teacher — said, "It's kind of like hitting yourself over the head with a hammer because it feels so good when you quit."

Teachers who failed the exam will receive an analysis of their strong and weak points and a study guide specifically geared to help them pass the June 28 test. The state's 20 regional service centers will hold free workshops and training sessions to help those teachers improve their skills.

Teachers who failed only one portion of the test have to retake only that portion, not the entire exam.

Kirby said he expects all qualified teachers will pass the makeup exam. "Those who simply do not have the skills will not pass and will not be in the classroom this next year," he said.

The TECAT consisted of 55 multiple-choice reading questions, 30 multiple-choice writing questions and a 150-word essay. To pass the reading section, teachers had to correctly answer 42 questions. To pass the writing exam, they had to produce a "clearly acceptable essay" or write a "marginally acceptable essay" and correctly answer 23 of the multiple-choice reading questions.

Teams still searching tornado site

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — About 100 National Guardsmen and trained dogs rummaged through rubble today to look for possible victims and downed power lines after a tornado ripped through a neighborhood, destroying dozens of homes and injuring 12 people.

"I don't know how we kept from being killed, but we did," said Frances Forehand, 74, who suffered cuts and bruises when the tornado tore through the home of her granddaughter Vicki Taylor on Thursday night. "It looked like a big ball of fire went through the house."

Forty-five homes were destroyed, 35 had major damage, and 63 had minor damage, said police spokesman Lt. Mike Wooldridge, whose home was one of those damaged in southwestern Edmond.

Twelve people were treated at a hospital for minor injuries, he said.

Although there were no reports of fatalities, Fire Marshal Ron Williamson said he could not be certain that everyone was accounted for.

Lt. Gov. Spencer Bernard arrived at the community of 35,000, just north of Oklahoma City, late Thursday and said he had asked Gov. George Nigh to put the National Guard on alert. The Guardsmen were on the scene at daybreak checking for downed power lines and gas leaks, assisted by a canine unit to look for people possibly trapped beneath the debris.

Police reported isolated cases of looting in damaged parts of both cities, and the areas were closed except to residents with identification.

A firefighter searches an Edmond, Okla., home damaged by a tornado.

Nigh was to tour the area today by helicopter and car, according to aide John Reid. "We have not at this time requested any federal assistance. First we have to determine how much uninsured damage there is," Reid said.

Authorities would make house-to-house checks to see that everyone got out safely, Williamson said. He said all state agencies, including the Civil Defense and state Department of Human Services, will be available to help.

The Oklahoma City Fire Department estimated there was $1 million worth of damage there, but officials in Edmond, where the bulk of the damage occurred, said this morning they still had no estimate.

Mrs. Forehand, sitting in a hospital robe at a Red Cross shelter at Edmond High School, said she was watching television with her granddaughter and two great-grandsons when the tornado shattered a pair of sliding glass windows.

"I started to say we better turn the TV off and it just blew in on us," she said. "There were sticks, pieces of metal, glass flying around ... but it didn't even break my glasses."

Mrs. Taylor said as the twister tore through her home, she grabbed her 8-month-old son and placed him in a bedroom closet.

"I tried to get back to get my grandmother and 4-year-old son, but the bedroom was already completely demolished," she said. "The storm had already gone through."

Mrs. Forehand said she and her grandson, who received stitches on his forehead, were buried by debris.

"We had to dig ourselves out," she said. Rescue workers later helped the four from the home.

"They didn't let us take anything with us, not our purses or anything," said Mrs. Taylor. "I don't even know if I could find them anyway."

The tornado touched down about 7:30 p.m. and hopscotched through the 7-year-old subdivision. The twister flattened four or five of the medium-sized brick homes in a row before lifting off the ground. It then touched down again, damaging or destroying the others homes.

The storm, accompanied by heavy rain and hail, left streets cluttered with wood and shingles from homes.

RAID

The analysis of the raid is based largely on reconnaissance photos taken after the strike.

"We have been saying that we met our objectives," Sims said. "We now have an analysis that says we met our objectives."

Those objectives, according to the document, were "to conduct simultaneous night strikes against five selected targets with surprise and saturation of enemy defenses, while minimizing collateral damage and combat losses."

"The results of the strike met the established objectives. While complete destruction of each of the five targeted installations was never envisioned, all targets were hit and all targets received very appreciable damage.

"At the same time, collateral damage was held to a minimum. Only 1 to 2 percent of the bombs impacted in civilian areas."

The two bombs that missed their targets in the Benghazi barracks were called "near misses" in the report, which said they fell 700 yards away and damaged two civilian houses and some adjacent walls.

The assessment said "some additional damage" was inflicted on Libyan air-defense missile batteries by using anti-radar missiles fired by Navy jets flying off the Libyan coastline. The statement did not elaborate.

The Defense Department has said five of the 18 F-111s dispatched on the raid and two of the 14 Navy A-6 attack jets did not drop any bombs, either for "technical" or "other" reasons.

The Pentagon said at least one of seven planes that held back did so because of "stringent" ground rules designed to avoid civilian casualties.

OIL

"We have since January been discussing with other nations a variety of economic and other peaceful actions to be taken against countries like Libya, who support international terrorism," Speakes said.

After Libya was blamed for supporting the terrorists who attacked the Rome and Vienna airports last December, President Reagan ordered a stop to all U.S. commercial relations with Libya.

American oil companies, for example, were told to dispose of their millions of dollars in assets in Col. Moammar Khadafy's country. That hasn't happened, although administration officials say the companies have been given until June 30 to terminate their operations in Libya.

Reagan also used Libyan involvement in the airport attacks to justify the April 15 air strikes against Libya.

The European allies have continued importing goods from Libya — a trade worth $6.4 billion to Khadafy's country in 1984 — despite administration pleas. Most of the importation is Libyan crude oil.

Some advocates of tougher sanctions have called the U.S. purchase of refined products from Libyan crude a major loophole in the sanctions, but even they acknowledge the difficulty of shutting down such trade because it would be difficult to tell what products contained Libyan crude.

Oil expert Henry M. Schuler of the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies says the flow of Libyan-based finished products to the United States is low.

NRC had sought permission to tour Soviet nuclear plants

By JILL LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff recently proposed a 10-day trip to the Soviet Union to tour reactors and discuss nuclear safety, and was awaiting a reply from the Soviets when the Chernobyl disaster occurred.

James R. Shea, director of international programs for the NRC, said Thursday he is still hopes the visit may come off.

"I would hope that once the emergency problems are dealt with and the accident is better understood that the Soviets would accept our proposal," Shea told the Senate Government Affairs subcommittee on energy, nuclear proliferation and government processes.

But reports in the Soviet Union on Thursday said changing winds had carried higher levels of radiation from the burning reactor to Kiev, the Ukrainian capital of 2.4 million people 80 miles south of the Chernobyl plant.

Health precautions were imposed in the city and thousands of people were reported fleeing.

Ukrainian Premier Alexander Lyashko told a visiting group of Western reporters, the first allowed into the Ukraine since the accident, that the reactor fire was "practically stopped" and radiation was "stable with a tendency downward."

Officially the death toll is two, but the official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said in a dispatch from Moscow that a third person died in a Kiev hospital.

According to Shea, the NRC staff was developing a draft agreement on nuclear safety cooperation with the Soviet Union in 1978. But he said all work came to a stop in 1979 as part of the U.S. government protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The effort lay dormant until the NRC staff asked to visit the Soviet Union, he said.

Word of the proposed visit came as federal officials said they had detected minute levels of airborne radioactivity from Chernobyl for the first time in the United States. The readings were made in three Western U.S. cities.

Monitoring stations this week detected levels of about 0.01 picocuries per cubic meter of various radioactive substances — or less — at Denver, Cheyenne, Wyo., and Richland, Wash., federal officials said. The Environmental Protection Agency said the readings did not represent a threat to area residents.

The reactor core meltdown at Chernobyl spewed a cloud of invisible radioactivity over Europe, but the Soviet Union did not report it until high levels of radiation were reported in Scandinavia two days after the April 26 accident.

There are no international requirements regarding the reporting of nuclear accidents, nor provisions for mutual emergency assistance among nations. Neither are there requirements for preventive measures such as reactor inspections and information-sharing.

There are two nuclear accident reporting systems. But neither carries legal obligations and neither is geared to emergencies.

The Soviet Union and Soviet bloc countries do not belong to one network, the 23-member Nuclear Energy Agency, a Paris-based division of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. All nations with nuclear plants are part of another reporting system started recently by the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna.

Shea said the two agencies were designed to determine lessons learned from accidents, and generally issue findings three to four months later.

The IAEA conducts nuclear plant inspections if a country requests them and provides its evaluations on a confidential basis, Shea said. Under questioning by subcommittee members interested in preventive measures, he said many countries probably would resist mandatory safety inspections.

"There would have to be negotiation. There could well be concerns about sovereignty and costs," Shea said. "Many may feel their safety is quite adequate and there is no need to upgrade their systems."

The United States led a campaign for an international nuclear safety agreement in 1981, but ran into opposition from other countries. Guidelines on reporting events, information exchanges and mutual assistance were adopted instead. Shea and others said some countries may reconsider their opposition in light of Chernobyl.

"How do you take sovereign nations who jealously guard their sovereign prerogatives and impose upon them international obligations that are legally binding?" asked Allan Mendelowitz, author of a General Accounting Office study of international nuclear safety, commenting on the difficulties encountered in 1981.

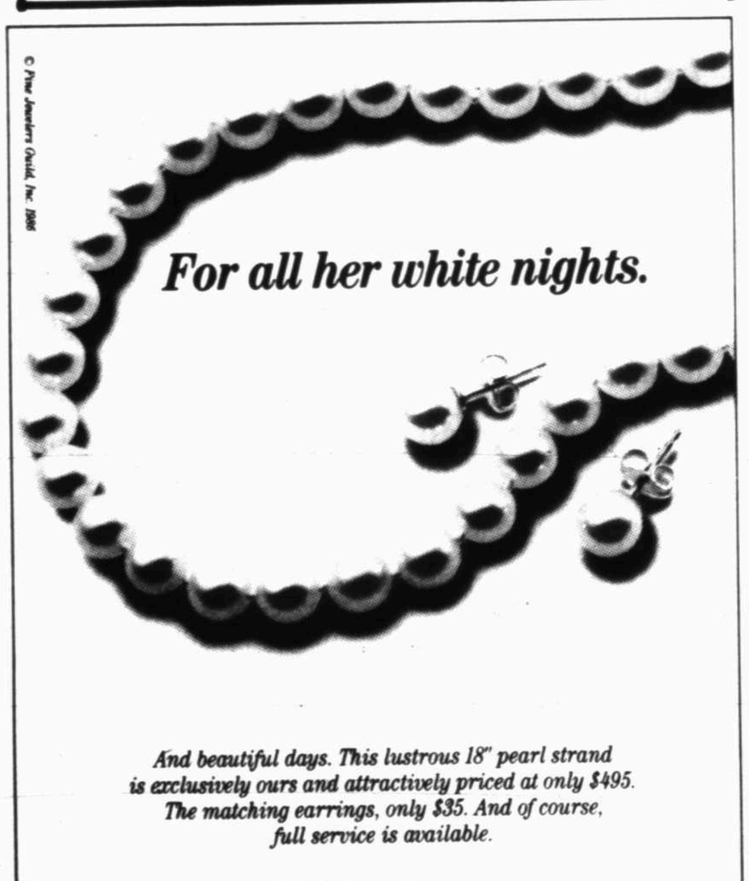

"Such a convention can and will be successful if the major nuclear powers determine that it is in everyone's mutual interest to do this," Mendelowitz said. "We can only hope that the Chernobyl accident will serve as the impetus for that assessment."

On Capitol Hill, Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, called for an international convention to "make the international response an automatic and coordinated one." He said the International Atomic Energy Agency is a likely center for such a response system.

In a letter to Secretary of State George Shultz, Fascell said an international convention would obligate all parties to notify neighoring states of nuclear accidents where health risks are involved, to share information and to coordinate emergency technical aid.

Supertanker leaking crude oil off coast of Puerta Vallarta, Mexico

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A supertanker loaded with 860,000 gallons of crude oil was taking on water and sinking off the coast of Puerta Vallarta, Mexico, today, the Coast Guard said.

The 869-foot Prince William Sound, an American ship, had a crew of 27 on board, said Coast Guard Petty Officer James MacPherson. He didn't know the vessel's home port.

"They are flooding through the engine compartment and have no dewatering capabilities," MacPherson said.

The Coast Guard was notified at 1:30 a.m. today by the supertanker, which has two lifeboats on board. The ship, about 90 miles from the Mexican coast, lost communications almost immediately, he said.

Another ship, the Sonya M., was expected to reach the sinking ship around 5:30 a.m.

PIZZA

A total of six papers of suspected methamphetamine — speed — were found on Hogan's person and in the house, according to the Sheriff's Office spokesman.

Hogan had been under investigation for about six weeks, he said.

"There was a particular code that was used" by customers who wanted something more potent than anchovies with their pizzas, the spokesman said.

"This normally does not go on," Ms. Rogers said Thursday. "It's the first time I've heard of it."

But the Sheriff's Office spokesman said it's not unknown for delivery jobs to be used as a cover for illicit activities.

"It's unusual, but probably not as uncommon as people think," he said.

Bonds were set by Justice of the Peace Judy Massingill.

Atmosphere 'tense' at nuclear talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The atmosphere at the first day of the renewed nuclear arms talks was more tense than usual, with Soviet and American negotiators clashing over the U.S. air raid on Libya, the chief U.S. representative said today.

Max Kampelman, in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said he was reserving judgment on the talks, the fifth round since last November.

But he said the sessions started off on the wrong note Tuesday, when the Soviet Union's chief negotiator, Victor Karpov, read a statement at the airport in Geneva criticizing the American attack.

"I sense in the last couple of days more tension than I would have liked," Kampelman said, adding that he "deeply resented" Karpov's statement.

"Here the Soviet Union is financing, supporting, encouraging, says that Libya is their great friend and yet the Libyans are the ones who are threatening to kill every American wherever they can find them on the streets," Kampelman said.

"And to have the nerve to say to the United States that our ability to defend ourselves against that undeclared war by (Libyan leader Moammar) Khadafy is something they disapprove of is something I have to take issue with. And that produced a confrontation," Kampelman said.

But, he added, he and Karpov met for lunch Wednesday, and it went well.

"It was a pleasant lunch, maybe because there were no cameras or reporters present," Kampelman said.

The negotiators, who met for two hours Thursday, face the same stumbling blocks that plagued them in the last round, which ended nine weeks ago, including Soviet mobile missiles based in Asia, the British and French national nuclear forces and U.S. Star Wars research into a space-based missile defense system.

In the last round, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev called for an end to all nuclear weapons by the year 2000, beginning with a 50-percent cut in both sides' nuclear arsenals and an interim agreement on medium-range nuclear weapons.

The United States has said the Soviet proposal contains some positive elements but overall is unacceptable. The United States countered with a proposal to eliminate medium-range weapons by the end of the decade.

Asked if he thought the Soviets were acting with any urgency in the latest round of the talks, Kampelman said he didn't believe so.

"I think the Soviets are acting on the assumption that the summit won't take place until the end of the year and that we will have a sixth round before then. And I do expect a greater sense of urgency then."

Reagan administration officials had originally believed that the president and Gorbachev would meet in the United States sometime this summer to follow up on their first summit last November. But it now appears the second summit will be held late this year.

Panel OKs fiscal budget, tax increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Budget Committee approved a fiscal 1987 budget that endorses a tax increase but, unlike the Senate, puts most of that money toward deficit cutting instead of Pentagon programs.

Democrats on Thursday pushed through a $994.2 billion spending plan over Republican complaints that it would cripple the military and that Democrats would spend any new tax dollars.

Only a single Republican, Rep. Vin Weber of Minnesota, joined Democrats in the 21-11 final vote to send the package to the floor.

Full House action could come next week.

The budget, proposed by committee Chairman William H. Gray III, D-Pa., would increase taxes by $7.3 billion over President Reagan's budget plan — the same increase passed by the Senate last week. There also were similarities in domestic spending priorities for the year beginning Oct. 1.

But while the Senate's bipartisan plan boosted military spending to cover inflation, the House plan would freeze the military buildup.

The deficit in the House plan would be $137 billion, $7 billion below the statutory limit which the Senate's budget just met.

"They pumped all their dollars into military spending," Gray said of the Senate proposal, while his committee budget "would result in a lower deficit than the Senate plan, and achieves this by spreading the cuts more equitably. Spending cuts are divided almost equally between defense and domestic programs."

Republicans said they couldn't go along with the military cuts or new taxes.

"The Defense Department can't live with that budget," said Rep. Delbert L. Latta of Ohio, senior Republican on the committee. Latta proposed more cuts in domestic programs to bring military spending up to the Senate's level, but was defeated as Democrats muscled their plan through.

Democrats also defeated a Republican amendment to eliminate the tax boost.

"We were getting rolled all day" by the Democrats, Latta complained. He predicted some Pentagon spending would be restored later in conference with the Senate.

All for a buck

Washington once attracted the best and the brightest. It's now the magnet for the richest and greediest.

Public service is out. Butler service is in.

Big government is reviled. Big business is beloved.

The bright side of the Reagan revolution is a resurgence of private enterprise, the image of a City on the Hill. The dark side is the ethic of "Get what you can and to hell with the other guy." That notion is substantiated by a number of events, not the least of them being Michael Deaver's problem with selling his access to the Oval Office and David Stockman's revelations of Washington's powerful people in a recently-published and highly touted book.

Deaver has become the symbol of the new creed — the Babbit of government access. But Deaver is only the reflection of what is abroad in the land.

There are eager Deaver lookalikes all around the nation, trying to make a buck selling access to every statehouse and city hall. You can tell them by their limousines with the phones in the back seat and the address books filled with unlisted numbers. They are, in a word, one of the worst forms of government "servants" — the kind that villify the term.

Then there are the Stockmans. They kiss and tell. They play the game with the high and mighty, only to leave the limelight and attack those they formerly stood with in good stead. They are the untrustworthy, the Judases of our time, guided only by their selfish interests and the intoxicating lure of wealth and power.

Where has the ethic of public service gone? Are there no more Harry Trumans who will serve out of a desire only to help improve society and to leave to posterity something better?

There was a day when there was no need to have a legally-written description of the ethics needed by those in government service. That was the time at which there still were individuals who could be termed "public servants" — individuals who were in it not for themselves but for the benefit of others. Those were the days when a man's solemn promise of loyalty to another individual or cause was the strongest possible insurance policy.

Oh, for those days once again.

Don't 'cripple' schools

My family will be moving to Houston this summer and will not be affected in any way by the proposed high school boundary changes. However, these changes are so unfair to Lee High School, "skimming the cream from the top," that I feel compelled to speak out.

"Socio-economics" is at the heart of this inequity. MISD acknowledged its importance in the '70s when the schools were integrated into the present clusters. The terms "high-achieving areas" and "high socio-economic areas" were used interchangeably when the clusters were established, as efforts were made to ensure that each cluster got its fair share. Assuming we still believe that socio-economic areas tend to produce high-achieving students, I ask you to consider this: MHS currently has within its boundaries a preponderance of homes over $100,000 in "old Midland," Saddle Club North and South, Racquet Club, Crescent Place, Polo Park, Vista West, Plantation Hills, Emerson North, Meadow Park and Skyline Terrace. Lee has homes in that range in Greentree, Trinity Estates, Crestgate, Emerson South, and the Fannin strip (Mamar area).

These proposed changes would put Skyline students at Lee but would place all Crestgate, Emerson South, and Fannin strip students at MHS. Put another way, that would leave Lee with approximately 1,000 homes of that value and Midland High with over four times that many — 4,200. Is this fair?

A glaring result of this inequity would be in the numbers of students enrolled in honors courses at each high school. According to an MISD study of Feb. 20, 1986, a section dealing with upper income areas showed the following: LHS currently has 137 such students compared to 324 at MHS. If those current boundary changes are approved, 57 would be left at Lee and 404 would be at Midland. How can anyone say this is equitable?

The board says it wants the changes because there is a greater number of rural and minority students at Midland and because they feel Lee's growth will outstrip Midland's (although is is hard to imagine an MHS problem with all its northern growth areas). However, if changes need to be made, make them. Just do it fairly.

Some 600-700 persons attended a recent public hearing on the changes and the audience and speakers were overwhelmingly against the changes. Speaker after speaker told of the devastating losses the school would suffer academically and in extra-curricular activities. I kept wondering if anyone would speak in defense of the plan and, if so, what they could possibly say. Six or seven finally did speak up for the changes, but not one could say why this plan should be adopted. One said the neighborhood concept of schools was finished and we should be Midlanders above all. Another said the League of Women Voters supports racially balanced schools. Who is arguing with these statements? We'll go along with that. Let's just be fair about it. Three speakers patronizingly suggested that the board (which has 6-1 representation in favor of MHS) knew what was best for us. We strongly disagree.

If the board concurs with the generally accepted formula that every person, letter, call, etc., received represents another 10 or 12 others with similar views who did not bother to respond, then, conservatively, over half the city finds serious problems with this particular plan. Would it not be prudent to study the facts and come up with a plan agreeable to all? If changes need to be made, make them. But don't cripple a great high school in the process. How can a school feel pride in being the best if it has no competition?

Nancy Ginzel
Midland

Signs of commitment

The responsibilities of a school board member are difficult. The work and commitment of the board members to our community are appreciated. Therefore, their decision to change the school boundaries at this time is a necessary action and serious duty for each member.

They should not let the unfair comments of a few make them feel their action is not fair and not directed toward equal high schools.

Riots may mark Khomeini's downfall

WASHINGTON — Will next Tuesday mark the beginning of the end for the Ayatollah Khomeini's Moslem fundamentalist regime? State Department intelligence analysts believe there's at least a chance that widespread riots throughout Iran on May 13 could shake the foundation of Khomeini's power and eventually lead to his fall.

Jack Anderson

What's so special about the date is that it is just 40 days after the agonizing death from cancer of Khomeini's revered rival, the 85-year-old Grand Ayatollah Shariatmadari. Shiite Moslem tradition dictates that 40 days after a loved one dies, the death be commemorated with suitable displays of grief.

In Shariatmadari's case, there is a special reason for honoring him on the 40th day: Khomeini not only ensured his rival's death by refusing to let him seek cancer treatment abroad, but would not grant permission for a funeral of proper dignity. Next Tuesday would be a suitable occasion for Shariatmadari's thousands of followers to express their outrage about both the death and the dishonor perpetrated by Khomeini.

Whether the dead ayatollah's followers can pull off the demonstrations they are planning is, of course, a question U.S. experts can't answer. When Shariatmadari died on April 3, thousands of Moslem clergymen and other Iranians swarmed into the streets of the holy city of Qom and elsewhere.

Khomeini responded to this "mutiny" by the supposed backbone of his Islamic revolution with the same ferocity he has shown toward less exalted opposition groups. Police arrested the mullahs by the dozen, and it is believed that as many as 600 clerics are now behind bars in various Iranian cities.

It's not clear whether these arrests deprived Khomeini's opponents of potential leaders to rally around, as he obviously hoped, or will, on the contrary, add the incitement of martyrdom to the widespread public outrage over Shariatmadari.

The day after the old ayatollah died, another group — potentially as dangerous as the clergy — demonstrated their grief and anger. Roughly half the bazaars in Tehran shut down in protest.

A combined opposition of mullahs and merchants could be a powerful engine of destruction — as Khomeini has every reason to know. It was precisely this alliance that brought down the shah and opened the way for Khomeini to seize power.

Another crucial question for Foggy Bottom's Iran-watchers is whether Shariatmadari, beloved as he apparently was, can become the kind of martyr who will galvanize both the fanatic Shiites and other discontented elements of the Iranian populace.

State Department sources told our associate Lucette Lagnado it has never been all that clear that Khomeini had a firm grip on the clergy's loyalty. Many of them, like Shariatmadari, believe that exercise of temporal power by a holy man violates Moslem teachings.

But like others in Iran — the Bahais and "Westernized" women — the clerics were afraid to make public their misgivings about Khomeini's fundamentalist revolution, even though they considered Khomeini himself a flaming hypocrite, using religion to serve his own worldly ambitions.

When he was alive, Shariatmadari courageously spoke out against Khomeini — only to be implicated by the regime in a coup attempt and forced to make a humiliating apology on television. It may well be expecting too much for a dead hero to succeed where he failed in life. But stranger things have happened in the land of "The Thousand and One Nights."

WATCH ON WASTE: Operating on a modern version of Davey Farragut's order — "Damn the taxpayers! Use it or lose it!" — the Coast Guard and the Maritime Administration spent money like the proverbial drunken sailor during the last quarter of fiscal 1984. According to Transportation Department auditors, the two agencies spent $592,913 on personal computers and furniture in that three-month period, or more than half the amount spent in the entire year for these "high waste vulnerability items." The Coast Guard, fearful of having to forfeit unspent funds, even bought $10,258 worth of telephones for delivery seven months later.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Investigators for the President's Commission on Organized Crime drew an interesting parallel between mobsters and corporations in their study of the Mafia. Instead of a president and vice presidents, a crime family is headed by a boss, an underboss and lieutenants in charge of the soldiers. Instead of cars or washing machines, the mob sells women, heroin and stolen property. And a mob "executive" makes about $250,000 a year — about the same as a bank president.

Chernobyl flub reflects different Gorbachev

WASHINGTON — The unfrocking of Mikhail Gorbachev as run-of-the-mill Soviet Communist Party leader instead of miracle worker was brutally evident when the British ambassador in Moscow dressed down a Soviet Foreign Ministry official for totally ignoring the internationally-accepted code on handling nuclear accidents.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The emissary of Great Britain, a country where U.S. nuclear arms policy is routinely vilified by anti-nuclear pacifists, minced no words last weekend. While other European states raised discreet concerns with Gorbachev's see-no-evil officials, the Soviets got it straight and cold from the British: They had "flagrantly" ignored the results of months of arduous negotiations on what should be done, starting with a world alert.

That illustrates a major effect of nearly three days of Soviet denial of the Chernobyl nuclear power plant tragedy. It flashes a brilliant light of discovery on claims by the U.S. that the Soviets are in major violation of nuclear and other treaties with the West. At a crucial time, that tends to endow the U.S. with truth, just as it does the Kremlin with blatant dissembling. The dissembling has been apparent the past week even to the most ardent anti-nuclear protestors in the West.

Gorbachev came to power amid yearnings both inside his country and in the West for changing old Soviet ways. He seemed to encourage reform speculation. But the decision for silence over Chernobyl made by a government personally shaped by him over the past 15 months showed no visible change.

Indeed, Reagan administration insiders doubt that even the horrified world reaction to those long days of Soviet prevarication — which apparently still goes on inside the country's own borders — will have much if any effect on the standard Soviet way of doing its business.

If true, that should put President Reagan in strong position to cash in on the new round of nuclear arms talks that began Thursday in Geneva. Arms control officials believe the Soviets will do a spasmodic, automatic turnaround at the talks in an effort to restore some of their lost stature in the propaganda war: a new proposal, for example, covering intermediate-range missiles that the U.S. and the Western Europeans might find attractive.

Likewise, Soviet specialists here believe that Gorbachev dares not risk the loss of a 1986 summit with Reagan that might be blamed on him. In view of widespread opinion everywhere in the world that the Soviet leader, in the words of a U.S. offficial, "blew his credibility" by trying to conceal the unconcealable, he may not wish to risk another maneuver the world could interpret as anti-peace.

That should give Reagan a stronger hand in the political manipulations leading up to a late-November or early-December summit here.

But it is the president's difficult position on charges of Soviet arms control violations that now figures to be changed in his favor more than any other U.S.-Soviet problem. That is because, as the British ambassador charged, the Soviet Chernobyl performance was so "flagrant." Fully two days after the accident, the Swedish Embassy in Mocow was given assurances by the Soviet Atomic Power Inspection Board that there had been no nuclear accident anywhere in the Soviet Union.

The evidence to the contrary gives Reagan's charges against the Soviets of wholesale SALT treaty violations a ring of truth many critics had not noticed before. Yet SALT treaties deal with even more profound factors of human fear and safety than radiation leaked from nuclear power plants. Reagan administration charges and Soviet denials that Moscow may be closer than realized to a nationwide anti-nuclear defense system, for example, look far more serious in the afterglow of Chernobyl.

The problems of treaty compliance, always more salient than the problems of treaty verification, now become more so. The Swedish National Radiological Protection Board had irrefutably verified Chernobyl's deadly radiation long before the Kremlin made any move to "comply" with that evidence — that is, admit what had happened and start applying the corrective measures demanded by the exasperated British ambassador in Moscow.

CHARLEY REESE

America needs to pull back 'welcome mat'

Before you fall into a swoon over the sentimentality that will surround the celebration of the Statue of Liberty, you'd better remind yourself that 1986 is not 1900.

Charley Reese

The pressing problem today is to regain control of our borders, stop illegal immigration, and greatly reduce legal immigration. The demographic threat to the United States is a lot more likely to be felt than the threat posed by the Soviet Union's nuclear arsenal.

We are 240 million people today, with roughly 8 million more or less permanently unemployed. God knows how many are underemployed. Yet we have to contend with a steadily rising flood of immigrants who are too concerned with staying alive to worry much about such abstract notions as liberty and democratic government.

There are 25 million people in Central America and nearly 90 million in Mexico and the economic prospects for nearly half of them range from doubtful to none. Like every other people faced with no future, they will migrate to where they think there is opportunity and that is the United States.

The Border Patrol intercepts about a million illegals a year but misses a much larger number. Legal immigration allows about 360,000 people a year — that's a new major city a year. Both groups necessarily compete with Americans for jobs and since illegals are in no position to bargain, they are almost always exploited and used to bid down the price of labor.

It's true we have some Americans who would rather draw their welfare checks than work. It's also true that weak-minded politicians and bad court decisions are forcing American local governments to provide welfare and other social services to illegal immigrants. Thus immigrants not only compete in the job market but add to the strain on public resources.

Still, the Congress continues to dilly-daily rather than pass even the mild immigration reform bill that is before it. Maybe they are waiting for a crisis. If so, they may not have long to wait.

Things could happen either north or south of the U.S.— Mexican border that could spill the soup in a hurry. Mexico is in a desperate economic mess that will worsen. The ruling elite is counting on a porous U.S. border to act as a safety valve, but that may not continue to work. Either way — migration to avoid revolution and migration to flee revolution — the numbers of illegal immigrants will soon cause a political firestorm.

Our own economy, built on a staggering amount of public and private debt, is fragile and if there is a sharp recession, then liberal politicians will discover the truth of what I've been arguing for years.

Give-away liberalism flourished, not because the American people were philosophically so inclined, but because postwar prosperity created such a huge pie that the pieces the politicians gave away weren't missed. People tolerated the liberal-welfare state because it didn't seem to be costing them very much.

That era is gone. More and more Americans now realize that the politician's generosity is at the expense of their standard of living and the future of their children. The cost of profligate government and an internationalist foreign policy is now visible.

Consequently, Americans will act like anybody else — when it's a choice between their families and somebody else's, they're going to look out for their families first. You can call it selfish. I call it rational.

Americans now understand that we must begin to take care of ourselves — our own unemployed and underemployed, our own people who cannot afford housing, our own farmers who are being foreclosed, and our own economy which is bled by imports and factories moving overseas.

NATION IN BRIEF

Two hurt in charity stunt

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — A motorcyclist was thrown from his vehicle and critically injured when a board shattered as he rode over a man lying on a bed of nails in a charity fund-raising stunt. The other man was also injured, less seriously.

James Jarman, 22, of Charlottesville, suffered a possible spinal injury after being thrown from the motorcycle Wednesday in front of a motorcycle shop owned by his family.

Katherine Johnson, a spokeswoman for the University of Virginia Hospital, said Jarman was in critical condition.

The accident also injured James Wooten, 38, of Lynn, Maine, who bills himself as the world's strongest man. He was in fair condition, Ms. Johnson said.

As the stunt was planned, Wooten was lying on a bed of 800 nails when Jarman ran over him with the motorcycle. But a board placed on Wooten for the bike to run on shattered, causing the accident, said Carlton Johnson, an Albemarle County police officer.

The stunt was sponsored by the shop to raise money for cancer research.

Stunt lawsuit a mistrial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury's deadlock resulted in a mistrial Thursday in the $42.5 million lawsuit filed by a stuntwoman left paralyzed after a crash on the set of "Cannonball Run" in 1982.

Superior Court Judge Howard Thelin declared the mistrial after jurors, in their fifth day of deliberations, said they were unable to reach a verdict. A new trial was scheduled for May 21.

Heidi Von Beltz's lawsuit against "Cannonball Run" director Hal Needham charged that a director's responsibility on the set is absolute.

Miss Von Beltz, 28, blamed Needham for putting her in a 1961 Astin Martin stunt car not equipped with seat belts, claiming he was in a rush to complete the stunt segments of the movie. She was left a quadriplegic in the ensuing crash.

The June 25, 1980 accident outside Las Vegas, Nev., on the desert set of "Cannonball Run" involved a stunt car segment where Miss Von Beltz, standing in for actress Farrah Fawcett, and stuntman Jimmy Nickerson, standing in for Burt Reynolds, snaked through a line of oncoming cars.

Books no longer boring

KINGSTON, Mass. (AP) — "Tom Sawyer" is boring no longer. "A Tale of Two Cities" isn't dull any more. Officially.

School board members have put those classics back on a summer reading list for students after an earlier vote to ban "boring" books drew the glare of national publicity and the anger of local book lovers.

"It was blown out of proportion," said Samuel Erbe, chairman of the Silver Lake Regional High School Committee.

The controversy arose after the board voted April 28 to put the summer reading program on hold until teachers could figure out how to expand it to all students, not just bright ones.

Parents had complained that some books were too easy for their children and others too hard. One mother, JoAnne DeClercq, of Pembroke, described some books on the list as "boring" during the April 28 debate.

The earlier vote to put the program on hold unleashed a storm of publicity.

NASA postpones test

WALLOPS ISLAND, Va. (AP) — Rough seas prompted NASA officials to postpone a rocket test that had been scheduled for this morning and was to have produced colorful predawn skies along much of the East Coast.

The test, an experiment on the origins of the solar system, was put off until Saturday morning, said Joyce Milliner, a spokeswoman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Wallops Flight Facility.

NASA plans to launch two rockets about 16 minutes apart from the Virginia Eastern Shore base. The first will release barium clouds that will appear greenish or violet for about 15 minutes.

The second will release strontium, which will appear as a deep blue ball and will be visible for about the same amount of time.

Revco stops magazine sales

CLEVELAND (AP) — Revco D.S. Inc., the nation's largest drugstore chain, has stopped selling adult magazines, a decision the company says was based on economics, not pressure.

Within the last few weeks, Revco has ordered managers of its 2,010 stores in 29 states to stop selling magazines like Playboy, Forum and Penthouse, said Lee Goldman, a spokeswoman for the company, based in suburban Twinsburg.

The action was taken because of poor sales and not because of pressure from outside interests, she said Thursday.

Nationwide, the 7-Eleven stores, the county's largest convenience chain, has stopped the sale of the magazines. Two weeks ago, Rite Aid Discount Pharmacies, the nation's third-largest discount drugstore, did the same.

Tax overhaul may bring delayed cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're expecting a tax cut under the tax-overhaul plan awaiting action in the Senate, don't look for the whole thing next year. You might even have a one-time tax increase.

It's all because of the record federal deficit. Congress seems intent on cutting taxes but not in a way that would worsen the deficit.

The solution is to have most of the bad things happen early and the good things late.

Under the bill approved Wednesday by the Senate Finance Committee, most changes that would increase the government's tax take — reducing or eliminating deductions — would go into effect next Jan. 1. The personal exemptions would be raised to $1,900 at the same time; a $2,000 exemption would take effect a year later.

The big tax-cutting device, reductions in individual tax rates would become effective on July 1, 1987. And on Jan. 1, 1988, the last big part of the package affecting individuals, a boost in the standard deduction, would take effect.

Because the change in tax rates would come in the middle of 1987, what you earn in the first half of 1987 would be subject to one tax rate and your last-half earnings subject to another. So how do you figure out what you owe when you file your 1987 return early in 1988?

The IRS will have to come up with a third set of tax rates — a blended rate, they call it — that is halfway between those in present law and those in the new system. That means, for example, that the real maximum individual tax rate for 1987 probably would be 38½ percent, rather than the 50 percent under present law or 27 percent under the bill.

Fiery crash kills Louisiana tax officials

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The Caddo Parish tax assessor and his five assistants joked about needing a new jet moments before they boarded a twin-engine plane that crashed shortly after takeoff, killing all six aboard.

The Cessna 411 plummeted to the ground and burst into fire Thursday afternoon after taking off from Shreveport's Downtown Airport, police said. Caddo Parish Tax Assessor Charles Henington was piloting his own plane en route to Baton Rouge for a state meeting today of assessors, his office said.

"He has been an outstanding assessor. It is a real tragedy," said Shreveport Mayor John Hussey, one of several officials who praised Henington as a well-respected public servant. Henington had been hailed as an influential lobbyist in the state Legislature on tax issues.

One of the last to talk to Henington, John Johnston, a line supervisor with Southern Aviation Corp., had helped the assessor take the plane from a hangar and joked with him while air was added to the aircraft's tires.

One of the deputy assessors pointed to a jet near the terminal and told Henington, "That's what we need," Johnston recalled. According to Johnston, Henington replied good-naturedly, "Yeah, if we could afford it."

Johnston said he watched minutes later as the plane took off, when it appeared to stall in a turn — several puffs of smoke coming off the right engine — and plunged to the ground in a fireball.

The plane went down inside the Bossier City Limits, not far from the city dump.

"It sounded like it lost all power and went into a spin. You could hear whining when it started dropping," said Thomas Peters, who lives less than a mile from the crash site. "It hit the ground and blew up. And a second after the first explosion there was another explosion. It shook the ground so hard it threw us up off the chair."

"By the time they got the fire out all you could see was a wing and part of the tail, and that's it. The rest is just burned up, and that's all that was left," said Sara Reisz Dunn, a reporter with radio station KWKH.

In addition to Henington, 50, the assessor's office said others aboard the plane were Maurice Bowman, Ed Keenum, Eva Kline, Gary Teer and Kathy Lee, whose ages were not available. A forensic pathologist said dental records were to be used today to positively identify the remains.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Conditions forecast for 8 PM Friday

Fair skies forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies and warm temperatures are in the forecast for Saturday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Forecasters at the NWS are calling for a high of near 90.

Tonight, under mostly fair skies, the low should dip once again into the lower 50s with southerly winds at five to 15 mph. Winds on Saturday will be out of the south-southwest at 10-20 mph.

Thursday's high of 84 was 19 degrees below the record high set in 1947. The 42-degree low set for this date in 1969 was 9 degrees cooler than this morning's low.

STATES

Heavy thunderstorms rumbled across North and West Texas this morning, prompting a tornado, high winds and a rash of flash-flood warnings but causing no major damage, authorities said.

A early morning flash-flood warning was still posted for Schleicher County in West Texas, where some underpasses were reported under water. But a warning expired in mid-morning for East Texas' Henderson County, the National Weather Service reported.

Sheriff's departments in both counties said the water had caused no injuries or damage.

A tornado that touched down in a field 15 miles northwest of Comanche felled trees and blew the roof off a building Thursday night, but no injuries were reported, authorities said.

Winds up to 40 mph were clocked in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, the weather service said.

Other thunderstorms occurred over East Texas and the upper coast. Low clouds blanketed South and East Texas, including the Concho Valley, while higher clouds dotted the rest of North Texas.

A flash-flood watch in North and East Texas was still posted at mid-morning, but no major flooding or damage reported and the severe weather was beginning to subside, officials said.

NATION

Snow piled up in sections of Montana today and prompted travelers' warnings in Wyoming while rain and thunderstorms ranged from the West into the nation's midsection.

A flash flood watch was posted in central and northeast Texas. Thunderstorms overnight extended from southwest Texas into northeast Texas after spawning a tornado in Edmund, Okla., on Thursday that damaged houses and caused injuries.

Rockets, Lakers head for showdown

Associated Press

Having disposed of their respective second-round opponents, the Los Angeles Lakers and Houston Rockets are heading for a summit meeting in the NBA's Western Conference playoffs.

"I think Houston has a great chance of beating Los Angeles if they don't tighten up during the close games," Denver Coach Doug Moe said after his team was knocked out of the NBA playoffs by a 126-122 double-overtime loss to the Rockets Thursday night. "I really think they'll win. They don't have the experience L.A. has, but if they can relax and stay calm, they've got a chance."

The Rockets earned a berth in the Western final against the Lakers, who also wrapped up their second-round series in six games with a 120-107 victory over the Dallas Mavericks Thursday night.

The results were according to form. The Lakers, defending NBA champions, had won the Pacific Division in a breeze and the Rockets had won the Midwest with the second-best record in the Western Conference.

Tonight, Milwaukee will host Philadelphia in their Eastern Conference semifinal with the Bucks leading the 76ers 3-2. The winner will advance to the Eastern Conference final against the Boston Celtics, who won their second-round series against Atlanta.

The Lakers, aroused by pre-game comment from Dallas management they considered derogatory, charged into the conference finals behind Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 27 points and Earvin Johnson's clutch fourth-quarter play.

NBA Playoffs

The Lakers built a 73-53 lead over the fiesty and talkative Mavs early in the third period, then had to beat back a Dallas rally that narrowed the defict to 91-89 early in the fourth period.

Mark Aguirre, who injured an ankle and missed most of the fourth period, had 14 of his 28 points in the third period.

Dallas' Rolando Blackman scored 12 straight points at the start of the fourth period but James Worthy and Johnson got the Laker offense into gear. Blackman finished with 23.

Worthy had 21 points and Johnson added 23, including 13 in the fourth period. Johnson made nine free throws in the quarter.

The Lakers were called "clowns" by Dallas General Manager Norm Sonju before the game, but the intense defending champions took control from the start.

"Dallas is history now and we didn't have to boast to do it," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "That's one of the strengths of this team."

Riley said, "We were geared up and ready to play. We had been through some adverse situations."

Dallas Coach Dick Motta had bragged the Mavs should have led 3-1 in the series.

Rockets 126, Nuggets 122

Lewis Lloyd and Rodney McCray hit key jumpers in the final 1:45 of a second overtime period as Houston, despite losing three starters to fouls, outlasted Denver.

Lloyd's 18-footer, just beating the 24-second shot clock with 1:45 left, gave Houston a 124-121 lead. McCray sank a 17-footer along the baseline with 55 seconds remaining, and Denver couldn't counter.

The Rockets were without Akeem Olajuwon (two technicals), Ralph Sampson and point guard Robert Reid (fouled out) at the end.

Houston, trailing by as many as 12 points, sent the game into overtime on the play of Olajuwon and Jim Petersen. The game was tied at 108 at the end of regulation time and 114 at the end of the first overtime.

Olajuwon finished with 28 points to pace Houston. Lloyd had 25 and McCray 20. Alex English had 42 points for Denver, followed by Calvin Natt's 23.

"We just couldn't put the ball in the hoop," Moe said. "Our effort was sensational, though."

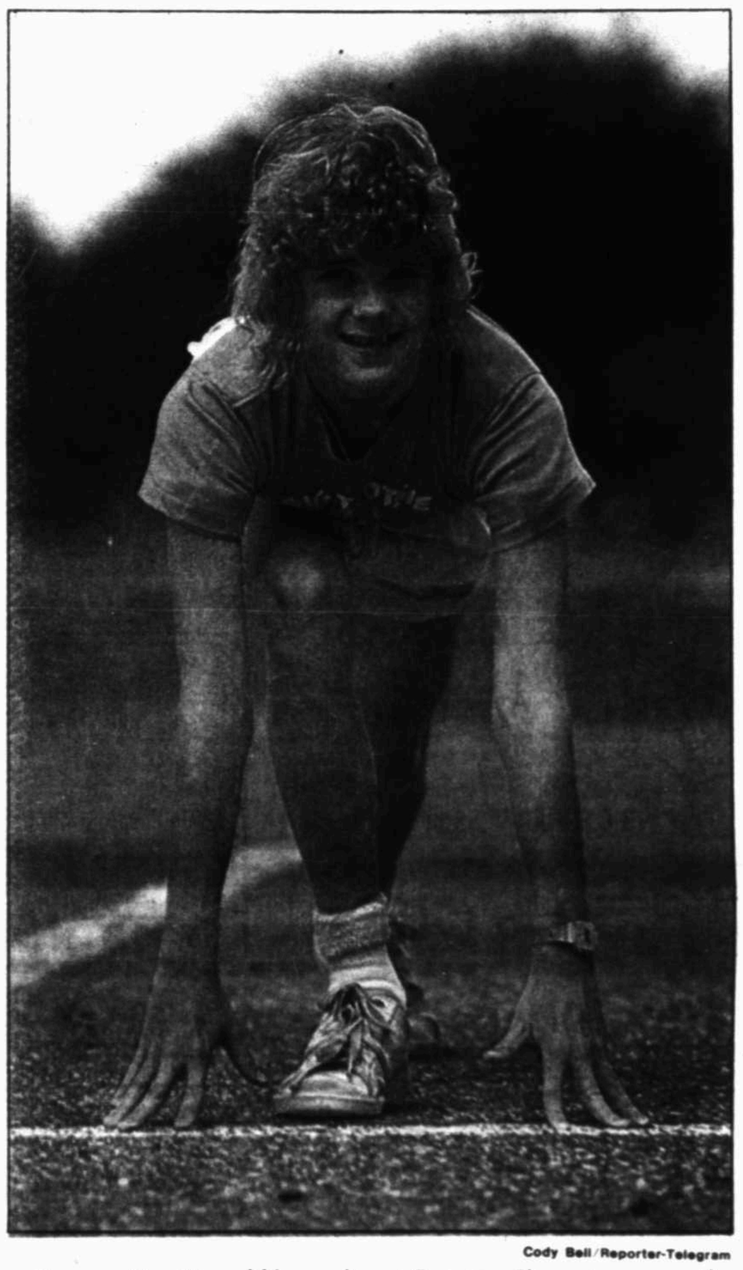

Houston Coach Bill Fitch credited the Nuggets for "playing their hearts out all season. But we also proved we have a lot of character and heart. I'm especially proud we won the game with the Twin Towers (Olajuwon and Sampson) out. We had a lot of guys who wanted to win very badly."

NCAA to revamp College Series

Coaches fight baseball playoff changes

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi State Coach Ron Polk, president of the American Baseball Coaches Association, says the organization will try and persuade the NCAA to keep the College World Series playoff format.

"I'm against it, and (the ABCA) is against it," Polk said in discussing the NCAA decision to change the playoff system. "We have gone on record to the NCAA that we are definitely ... against it. We see no merit in it, other than to make a little money for the NCAA. And that's not what we're in business for."

For more than 30 years, the NCAA baseball playoffs have had eight regional playoff winners participating in a double-elimination national tournament at Omaha, Neb.

The three major television networks have shied away from the playoffs because of the format. ESPN has televised the event since 1981, but NCAA officials would prefer to showcase the tournament on a major network.

Citing the opportunity to increase TV revenues, the NCAA adopted a plan Tuesday that would call for a single-elimination series matchingr four regional champions beginning in 1988 at a site yet to be determined — perhaps Yankee Stadium.

Polk said the coaches association would work to get the NCAA to reconsider.

"What's happened is the NCAA wants to make a little money and they're doing it at the expense of college baseball, without any input from the baseball coaches," Polk said. "They can make a million dollars, and who cares? It doesn't go to baseball. It goes to the NCAA treasury.

"The NCAA is a dictatorial group of people who sometimes make decisions that they think are in the best interest of something, when they actually have no idea what they're doing."

Polk said he planned to talk with NCAA officials at the College World Series next month.

"I think I'll just save my artillery until then," he said. "I'm hot about it, but I'm not the only one. Coaches all across the country are hot. They've been calling me all day.

"We made our recommendation to keep it the way it was, but apparently it fell on deaf ears. Let 'em go to Yankee Stadium with it for all we care."

He said the new format would have "a detrimental effect on college baseball, a major detrimental effect on Omaha, where the good people have worked so hard to develop the College World Series as it presently stands."

Polk cited two arguments against the new plan:

— The loss of ESPN, which has given college baseball national exposure in recent years by televising a game each week during the regular season, plus regional tournament games and the CWS.

— With single-elimination play under the new format, the best team may not win the championship.

"Officials at ESPN have told me that if this goes through, we can just about forget being broadcast on a weekly basis," Polk said. "They broadcast only for the opportunity to build up to the College World Series."

"Baseball isn't a single-elimination sport ..." he added. "There have been many surveys done at the CWS, and many times the team that wins the tournament goes through the losers' bracket."

Gustafson opposes single elimination format

AUSTIN (AP) — The coach with the best winning percentage in college baseball, Cliff Gustafson of Texas, says the NCAA's decision to change the College World Series could destroy the unique quality of the sport.

The NCAA announced it will switch to a single-elimination Final Four playoff in 1988 instead of the current eight-team double elimination tournament used for the baseball championship.

"I don't like it at all," Gustafson said Wednesday. "The majority of the coaches are opposed to it. I thought we had something unique and special, and I hate to see that destroyed. I'm sure money was the only reason."

Gustafson, who has 967 career victories and a winning percentage of 83 percent, joined Arizona State Coach Jim Brock in criticizing the NCAA decision.

"Anytime you make a decision to compromise the integrity of your championship event, you have definitely taken a step backward. And I definitely think this is a step backward," Brock told the Austin American-Statesman in a telephone interview.

Because the Final Four would be a two-day event, Brock said, "There's absolutely no chance of ever having any of the top pitchers like a Greg Swindell (of Texas) or a Brad Brink (of Southern California) pitch in the finals. A championship game is almost always assured of having the No. 2 pitcher pitching for the national championship. That is amazing."

Although NCAA officials said the site for the finals would be decided later, both Gustafson and Brock feel it will be moved from Omaha, Neb., where it has been played since 1950.

"I think Omaha deserves to keep it," Gustafson said. "But I think they'll wind up moving it around to big league parks where they can seat more and try to sell them out. I think they're making a move that can be a step backward."

Brock said he does not think the NCAA "has any intention of keeping it in Omaha. In their lack of knowledge, I think they plan to go to Yankee Stadium and some of the domed stadiums, sell it out for 25 bucks a night and do it for two nights. They might draw 5,000."

Dick Williams replaces Chuck Cottier as Seattle pilot

By JIM COUR

SEATTLE (AP) — It was a polite goodbye, but it was still goodbye. Chuck Cottier, the Seattle Mariners' manager since 1984, had been fired, and is being replaced by Dick Williams.

"This is the toughest baseball decision I have ever had to make," club President Chuck Armstrong said in announcing the firing Thursday. "I have a great deal of respect for Chuck as a manager and a person. Every time he put on his uniform, he gave us his best effort and we thank him for his contribution to the development of this organization.

"Unfortunately, the club's current standing in the American League West is far below our expectations," Armstrong said. "This fact has moved us to seek a new direction."

However, the team would not confirm Williams' hiring.

A source who spoke on condition he not be identified told The Associated Press earlier Thursday that Cottier called a Mariner's clubhouse attendant and told him to clean out his locker because he had been dismissed and was being replaced by Williams.

Cottier refused to take telephone calls Thursday night.

But his wife, Laurie, finally put a message on his answering machine: "You have reached the Dick Williams answering service..."

Williams, who also was not available for comment, quit earlier this year as manager of the San Diego Padres of the National League.

The Mariners said a decision on a new manager would be made in the next few days.

Coach Marty Martinez was to serve as manager for the interim, watching the Mariners lose 4-2 Thursday night to Boston.

Armstrong said third base coach Jim Mahoney was also fired, but would not elaborate.

Asked when a new manager would be named, Mariners spokesman Bob Porter replied: "I have no idea when that's going to happen. Obviously, we're having discussions with a number of people."

Asked if he was denying Williams had been hired, Porter said, "As far as I know, we haven't hired him."

Armstrong said, "When we have completed everything we have to do, we will make the announcement."

Asked if the Mariners needed a hard-nosed manager, a change from Cottier's easy-going style, Armstrong said, "I think you look for that as a prerequisite for any manager you hire."

Armstrong said he would not speculate on Billy Martin's candidacy for the job.

"We're not ready to tip our hand," he said.

He did not rule out any further coaching changes.

"That will be up to (GM) Dick Balderson and the new field manager, whoever that may be," he said.

Martin was known to be a favorite of Seattle owner Bill Argyros, but sources told the New York Daily News the Mariners' front office was against Martin's hiring.

Cottier served as skipper of the Mariners for the final month of the 1984, replacing Del Crandall. He was given a one-year contract for the 1985 season and it was renewed for this year.

Cottier, 50, earned his crack at managing the Mariners by directing them to a 15-12 record in September 1984 after Crandall was dismissed by Armstrong and then-General Manager Hal Keller.

He joined the Mariners as a coach under Rene Lachemann in 1982. Lachemann preceded Crandall as Mariners manager. Cottier remained as a coach after Lachemann was fired and Crandall became the club's manager during the 1983 season.

When Crandall was axed on Sept. 1, 1984, Cottier became Seattle's interim skipper.

Cottier was the fifth manager in the Mariners' 10-year history.

He had a 98-119 career record with the Mariners after their 11-5 loss Wednesday night loss to the Boston Red Sox in which Cottier was ejected from the game after disputing interference in a double-play call.

Going into Wednesday night's game, the Mariners had lost 16 of their last 20 starts and were hitting a paltry .207 and had an earned run average of 4.32 after 27 games. Cottier, batting coach Deron Johnson and pitching coach Phil Regan all have been strongly criticized for the performance.

But Armstrong acknowledged that Cottier had "tried everything from cajoling the players and getting tough. For whatever reasons, and I don't know what they are, it didn't work."

TED BATTLES

There's one every season

There's one of these flukes every year. A confirmed loser gets hot and stirs the fans into a frenzy for a few weeks before settling to the subterranean depths of its division, there to be forgotten.

The Cleveland Indians are this year's phenoms. The Tribe has staged a winning streak and suddenly finds itself atop the American League East. That's pretty fast company. The AL East is adjuged by many astute observers as the toughest division in baseball.

Some feel that it's a crime that both AL representatives don't come from the East. They have a point. Unlike the National League, where teams play more games against opponents from their own division than the other, every team in the American League plays the same number of games against every other team.

The AL doesn't even bother to disguise what has been the West Division's second class status. Still, the current world champion is Kansas City.

THE CLEVELAND success story is a refreshing interlude while it lasts. You've got to pull for a team that has been down for so long. One writer has referred to Cleveland as "Bagdad on the swamp." Those less kind call Cleveland another Detroit, but without the bright lights.

I remember many years ago flying from New York to Texas, for some reason with a stop in Cleveland. Over Syracuse or Rochester, I think, one could see this ugly brown cloud off in the distance. It turned out to be Cleveland.

If Detroit can enjoy a pennant, why not the Indians?

Imagine the boost a pennant would give to the long-suffering folks of Cleveland. With Joe Carter and Mel Hall part of the Tribe's success story, Midlanders have to have a special interest in the team. Both played here as Texas Leaguers.

Of course, the Cleveland success is a mirage that isn't really there...or is it?

SOMETIMES these Cinderella stories survive midnight.

Remember the Atlanta Braves of a few years back. And everybody knew that the Chicago Cubs and San Diego Padres couldn't keep it up a couple of years ago, but they did and met for the National League championship.

Some of us can remember when Cleveland wasn't regarded with derision. It hasn't won too many pennants over the years. But there was a time when Cleveland and Boston were the Designated, although usually futile, Pursuers of the the regal New York Yankees of old.

Once in a while one of them would sneak in ahead of the pinstripes.

In 1948, Cleveland beat out New York in The Year of Gene Bearden and went on to win the series over the Boston Braves, four games to one. The only game the Braves won was the opener against Bob Feller, no less. If memory serves it was a 1-0 or 2-1 game and the controversial nature of the win is still a source of irritation to old time Cleveland fans.

The Indians' put together the best season record ever in 1954 to win the pennant with a pitching staff of Bob Lemon, Mike Garcia, Bob Feller and Early Wynn. With a staff like that who needed relief pitchers.

Paraplegic golfer scores an ace

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Paraplegic golfer John Wall has to hang on to the golf cart while he swings a club one-handed, but that didn't stop him from recording a hole in one.

Wall used a 5-wood for his ace, which occurred Tuesday on the par-3, 125-yard second hole at the Wilson Road golf course.

"I took a nice, easy swing and hit it straight down the middle," said Wall, 44, of suburban Westerville. "It hit the green and broke going uphill to the right. At first I didn't believe it. I thought it disappeared in a gully."

Wall was playing with three friends in a new golf league for physically or visually impaired persons, which he helped found.

He was paralyzed from midchest down in an industrial accident four years ago and took up golf for the first time three years ago. Because he has little control of his trunk, he has to hold on to his golf cart's steering wheel with one hand while he swings with the other.

Jeanna Johnson of Ohio State University's recreation and intramural sports department said Wall had suggested the golf league for impaired players several weeks ago.

Pirates' 4-hitter subdues Giants

Associated Press

Mike Bielecki and Jim Winn combined on a four-hitter and Sid Bream and Jim Morrison drove in three runs apiece Thursday night, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates past the San Franciso Giants 8-2.

Bielecki, 3-0, gave up four hits over seven-plus innings. He lost his 15-inning scoreless streak when Joel Youngblood led off the eighth with a pinch-hit home run. Winn got the final six outs.

The loss knocked the visiting Giants out of first place in the National League West. San Francisco slipped 14 percentage points behind Houston.

Bream hit a two-run double in the third inning that made it 3-0 against Scott Garrelts, 3-3, and delivered an RBI single in the sixth. Jim Morrison added a three-run triple later in the sixth, putting the Pirates ahead 8-0.

Youngblood hit his first home run of the season and Will Clark hit his fifth homer later in the eighth inning.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Cardinals 13, Padres 3

Tim Conroy checked San Diego on five hits and stroked a two-run double and a two-run single, keying a 20-hit barrage that carried St. Louis.

The Cardinals, in winning consecutive games for the first time since April 19, broke loose for their biggest offensive display since getting 22 hits July 1, 1983, against Pittsburgh.

St. Louis, batting .209 at game time after hitting .264 last season, scored more than three runs in a nine-inning game for the first time in 17 games. Their postgame average was .223.

Conroy, 2-1, hit a two-run double in a five-run seventh and added a two-run single in a three-run eighth. The Padres lost for the fifth time in six games.

The Cardinals took the lead for good in the sixth inning against Dave Dravecky, 2-3, when Ozzie Smith squeezed home Jose Oquendo from third base, breaking a 3-3 tie. Willie McGee followed with an RBI triple. McGee had four hits and Oquendo three.

Braves 10, Reds 5

Atlanta's Dale Murphy hit two home runs and drove in five runs as the Braves sent Cincinnati to its 10th loss in 11 games. Murphy's three-run, first-inning homer, followed by Bob Horner's fifth home run, came off John Denny, 1-4. Murphy's second homer, and seventh of the season, broke it open in the eighth.

Cubs 6, Dodgers 5

A leadoff homer by Shawon Dunston started a four-run Chicago rally in the fifth inning. With the Cubs trailing 4-2, Dunston hit his fifth homer. Two wild pitches and run-scoring hits by Gary Matthews and Ron Cey capped the inning. Greg Brock hit a three-run homer in a four-run Los Angeles first.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

A's 2, Brewers 1

Run-scoring singles by Oakland's Dave Kingman and Tony Phillips in the eighth inning broke up a scoreless pitching duel. Ted Higuera, 4-2, who had blanked Oakland on four hits with eight strikeouts in seven innings, lost for Milwaukee. Chris Codiroli, 3-3, allowed eight hits in pitching shutout ball for eight innings for Oakland.

Red Sox 4, Mariners 2

Marty Barrett's two-run triple capped a four-run rally in the seventh inning and led Boston over Seattle, which dismissed Manager Chuck Cottier before the game.

The Mariners, playing under coach Marty Martinez, lost their fifth straight game and has dropped 17 of their last 21. Seattle said a permanent successor to Cottier will be named within a few days.

Run-scoring singles by Jim Rice and Don Baylor lifted the Red Sox into a 2-2 tie before Barrett tripled off Karl Best.

Blue Jays 7, Angels 6

Buck Martinez hit a two-run double, breaking a seventh-inning tie and paving Toronto past California.

The Angels, backed by rookie Wally Joyner's grand slam homer, led 5-1 entering the seventh before Toronto tied it when Lloyd Moseby was hit by a pitch, took third on a pinch-single by Garth Iorg and scored as he beat first baseman Joyner's throw to the plate on Willie Upshaw's grounder.

The Majors

This Day In Baseball

1901 Earl Moore of the Cleveland Indians pitched nine hitless innings against the Chicago White Sox before giving up two hits in the 10th to lose 4-2.

1916 In his major league pitching debut Bruno Haas of the Philadelphia A's walked 16 Detroit Tigers in a game marred by a record 30 bases on balls.

1929 New York Giant Carl Hubbell pitched a no-hitter against the Pittsburgh Pirates, the first by a left-hander in the majors in 13 seasons.

1957 Ernie Lombardi of the Cincinnati Reds goes 6-for-6 in a 21-10 rout of the Philadelphia Phillies in Philadelphia.

1984 The Chicago White Sox and the Milwaukee Brewers batted for 8 hours and six minutes in the longest game ever. After playing 17 innings the previous day, the teams met again before playing a regularly scheduled game, thus making the total 34 innings for two days. Harold Baines homered off of Chuck Porter with one out in the bottom of the 25th for a 7-6 victory. Tom Seaver won both games for the White Sox.

Blues square series

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rick Meagher scored two goals, the second while his team was shorthanded, to help the St. Louis Blues to a 5-2 victory over the Calgary Flames Thursday night and even their Stanley Cup semifinal series at two victories each.

The fifth game of the best-of-7 Campbell Conference final will be Saturday in Calgary. Game 6 will be here next Monday.

Lanny McDonald scored both Calgary goals, each on a power play. McDonald's second goal, in the opening minute of the final period, followed Meagher's second by 26 seconds. But it was not enough to overcome the lead St. Louis had built.

Meagher and Mark Hunter connected for Blues goals four minutes apart in the opening period. St. Louis made it 3-0 on Gino Cavallini's rebound at 16:03 of the second session, then outlasted a Calgary surge which stemmed from defenseman Rob Ramage's six minutes in penalties late in the second period. Ramage was called for a double minor for roughing and a two-minute penalty for hooking.

Bernie Federko, who ended the game's scoring with an empty-net goal with six seconds to play, won a faceoff in the Flames' zone to set up Hunter's opening goal, a slapshot that sailed past Calgary goalie Mike Vernon at 7:33 of the first period. Rookie Herb Raglan helped St. Louis make it 2-0 at 11:37 when he sent a pass from the right corner onto the stick of Meagher, who had Vernon at his mercy at the goalmouth.

Cavallini, a former Flame, scoring his fourth goal of the playoffs, beat Vernon on a rebound of Lee Norwood's blocked shot, sending home a 10-foot drive after Calgary's Paul Reinhart failed to clear the puck.

The Flames then began to stir. McDonald capitalized on the penalties assessed Ramage by referee Bob Myers with a 20-foot blast past Blues goaltender Rick Wamsley with 54 seconds left in the period.

The World Series was something else. Willie Mays made that amazing catch on Vic Wertz in the deepest reaches of center field in the Polo Grounds and pinch hitter Dusty Rhodes hit a homer every time the Giants sent him to the plate, or so it seemed, and New York beat Cleveland four straight.

In 1940, Cleveland and Detroit met in the season's final game for the pennant. It was Feller, at the height of his career, against Floyd Geibel, a pitcher Detroit had just called up from the minors. Geibel astounded the sports world by beating Feller 1-0. It was Geibel's greatest win in the majors....well, come to think of it, it was his only victory in the majors.

Ridley turtles, an endangered breed of turtle, have been spotted in Corpus Christi Bay, causing some problems with possible landmass project plans. This young ridley is trying to make it to the surf on Padre Island during an experimental "imprinting" exercise.

West Texas Outdoors

Midlander sets Spence mark

Midlander Henry Brown was the big fishing news in West Texas when he reeled in a 52 pound yellow catfish off his trotline. That set a record for Lake E.V. Spence, which usually sets its records in the striped bass category.

Brown also took 16 channel catfish to eight pounds in his string while Gene McQueen, also Midland, took eight stripers to 20 pounds along with several catfish. Richard Moore, Midland, reeled in a 5-5 black bass.

The week's big striper was a 13½-pounder by by Joe Alpalp of Lubbock.

At Lake Thomas, crappie were providing most of the action with one Snyder angler reporting a string of 70 from ¼ to 1½ pounds....

MORE THAN 1,500 endangered Kemp's ridley turtles are being released into Texas coastal waters by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and National Marine Fisheries Service as part of an international cooperative program with the Mexican government.

About 560 were liberated in the western portion of Copano Bay and 960 more will be turned loose in the Gulf six to eight miles off shore.

In recent decades, the number of Kemp's ridleys has dwindled and with the last remaining nesting colony along Mexico's eastern beaches, their future remains uncertain.

TPWD biologists hope a system called imprinting will influence immature turtles reared in captivity to return to Texas beaches to lay their eggs and establish new colonies. Turtle eggs from Mexico were incubated at the NMFS Galveston lab in boxes containing sand taken from Padre Island beaches.

This procedure, combined with releasing the young turtles in Texas waters, it is hoped, will cause them to return at maturity.

NMFS scientists report the 1985 class of ridleys is the fastest growing and healthiest of any group reared at the facility to date.

Efforts to save the ridleys, however, do nothing to solve the plight of the abused Midland backyard turtle. One Midlander's cocker spaniel finds the helpless local species, carries them out into the middle of the yard, sometimes the den, and flips the turtle over on its back.

Satisfied the turtle can't cause any further mischief, the cocker loses interest. Even when the turtle is hidden in high vinca, the cocker sniffs him out and retrieves the hard-shelled crustecean.

The cocker has been verbally reprimanded in the harshest terms repeatedly and threatened with physical punishment which she instinctively knows will never come to pass, but it doesn't seem to help. Any suggestions?...

THE TEXAS record for bluecatfish lasted less than three months. Sammy Roberson of Cold Springs landed a 71-pound blue March 15 at Lake Livingston Dam. It topped the 70-4 blue caught at Lake Texoma Jan. 9. Roberson used a 25-pound test line. The catch was 48 inches long and 37 1/2 inches in girth...

Colorado City lakes welcome sight to West Texans

LAKE COLORADO CITY (AP) — The mesquite trees look the same as elsewhere in West Texas, but that's where the similarity ends.

There are small rolling hills and a "large" body of water that borders two sides of Lake Colorado City State Recreation Area. Those differences must be welcome sights to Permian Basin residents. They visit the park in droves.

"Ninety percent (of the park users) come from Odessa and Midland," park superintendent Bill Griffin said. Griffin has been superintendent of the 500-acre park for nine years and with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department 14 years.

Admission to the park is $2 per day per vehicle. An annual use permit, good only for Lake Colorado City State Recreation Area, is $13.

Water sports and camping are the primary attractions of the park. Other features include a prairie dog town, dirt bike track and a large dining hall for clubs and family reunions at $50 per day.

For anglers, there are two T-piers available and a lighted and covered fishing barge is under construction. A deep rocky cove provides an area for bank fishing. Just outside the entrance to the park is a small general store and bait shop.

A four-lane boat launching ramp and a mile of swimming beaches are also a part of the park's water sports attractions.

Overnight visitors can use one of the park's 132 campsites, according to Griffin. Of these sites, 79 are dubbed "multi-use" and have electrical hookups available. They rent for $9 per night.

The other sites have water only and are $6 per night. Each site is equipped with a covered picnic table and stone cooker. Day users have a choice of 52 picnic sites.

Surprise, Dodgers' farm majors' top producer

By MURRAY CHASS
N.Y. Times News Service

When the Los Angeles Dodgers not long ago had their players named National League rookies of the year for four consecutive seasons, it was unusual but not surprising. The Dodgers, after all, are noted for the productivity of their minor league system. So fertile is the system that the Dodgers have produced more 1986 major league players than any other organization.

Including 16 members of the current team, 47 players who signed their first professional contracts with the Los Angeles organization have played in the majors this season or are on a major league team's disabled list. The next most productive organizations have been the Cincinnati Reds with 44 players, the Philadelphia Phillies with 42, the New York Yankees with 35 and the Boston Red Sox with 34.

THE LEAST productive organization has been the Toronto Blue Jays, who have only nine players they originally signed in the majors. Their status is somewhat surprising because the Blue Jays have been a team that has prided itself on building with young players.

"The Blue Jays' strength, though, is their pro scouting, not their amateur scouting," said a club executive familiar with amateur and professional personnel.

The Blue Jays, who were created in 1977, have established a beneficial practice of drafting other clubs' minor leaguers, from the Class A level, for example, and developing them into major leaguers. They have followed that pattern with Willie Upshaw and George Bell, two of their everyday players, and Jim Acker, one of their starting pitchers.

The only player who signed with the Blue Jays and who plays for another team is Geno Petralli, a reserve catcher with the Texas Rangers.

THE DODGERS, on the other hand, have dispatched their products far and wide. These are former Dodgers or Dodger minor leaguers who populate other teams:

Reds — John Franco, Ted Power, Max Venable; Giants — Jeff Leonard, Candy Maldonado, Brad Gulden; Pirates — Rick Rhoden, R.J. Reynolds, Sid Bream; Cubs — Rick Sutcliffe, Ron Cey, Davey Lopes; Padres — Steve Garvey, Jerry Royster; Expos — Mitch Webster, Dann Bilardello; Mets — Sid Fernandez; Phillies — Dave Stewart; Astros — Rafael Montalvo; Rangers — Charlie Hough, Tom Paciorek, Ricky Wright; Red Sox — Bill Buckner, Dave Sax; Angels — Don Sutton; Royals — Rudy Law; Blue Jays — Doyle Alexander; Orioles — Lee Lacy; White Sox — Ron Kittle; Twins — Mickey Hatcher; Mariners — Steve Yeager.

The Reds have the most players, 17, whom they signed as amateurs and who have reached the majors with them. Among original Cincinnati minor leaguers who are elsewhere in the majors this year are Ray Knight and Bruce Berenyi with the Mets, Ken Griffey with the Yankees, Hal McRae and Charlie Leibrandt with the Royals, Joaquin Andujar and Jay Howell with the A's and Danny Tartabull with the Mariners. The former Red minor leaguers are divided very evenly, 13 in the National League, 14 in the American.

THE PHILLIES have 13 in the National League, and 16 in the American League, but there's nothing even about the division of their former players in the National. Six are with the Cubs, whose general manager, Dallas Green, spent many years in various jobs in the Phillies' organization. They are Ryne Sandberg, Bob Dernier, Keith Moreland, Dick Ruthven, Manny Trillo and Jay Baller.

The Cubs, meanwhile, have the fewest products of their own system with them in the majors. Lee Smith and Shawon Dunston are the entire contingent. Next in line are Cleveland, with four, and the Chicago White Sox, with five.

WHEN KIRBY Puckett was a college baseball player, some scouts turned in reports on him that said he could run well and was aggressive but had no power and a below-average-to-average throwing arm. Puckett also was short even by baseball standards, 5 feet 8 inches.

Puckett is still 5-8, but don't turn in a scouting report that says he has no power and, at best, an average arm.

The Minnesota center fielder showed off the arm first, leading American League outfielders with 16 assists as a rookie in 1984, then recording 19 assists last season. The power has come more recently.

In fact, he hit no home runs in 557 times at bat as a rookie, then slugged four in 691 times up. Puckett had 10 home runs in 101 times at bat this season. The 5-8 no-power player leads the league in home runs. He also leads the league in slugging percentage (.782), total bases (79), hits (40) and runs scored (26). His batting average is .396.

"I'm just putting a good swing on the ball," Puckett said. "I've been hitting pitchers' mistakes — hanging curveballs, hanging sliders. I'm not trying to hit home runs. My job is to get on base." He is, after all, the Twins' leadoff batter. "All I'm trying to do is hit the ball hard to all fields, he said."

Puckett also acknowledged that Tony Oliva, the team's hitting coach, had given him greater confidence in his hitting and had convinced him to be more patient at the plate. Ray Miller, the Twins' manager, further explained that Puckett had undergone a subtle transformation in his approach to hitting.

"This spring," Miller said, "we talked to him about count situations, looking for a pitch to pull in certain game situations. He used to hit a lot to right field and they were stacking him on the right side. He got tired of hitting rockets and having them caught. He was smoking the ball and the whole team was standing there."

Relatives, friends mourn death of popular teen

HAWKINS (AP) — Still shocked and grieving, more than 800 Hawkins residents gathered to mourn the death of one of the city's brightest young people.

Suzanne Denise Harrison, an 18-year-old Hawkins senior, had been slain and two of her companions, Gena Turner and Bryan Boone, are still missing.

Somber relatives, classmates and friends filed quietly into Hawkins High School Auditorium Thursday afternoon to pay respects to Miss Harrison, a young woman whose bright smile left its mark on all who knew her.

"Even those who didn't really know Suzanne remembered her as the smiling girl at the drugstore or the smiling cheerleader on crutches," said the Rev. Bob Layman, pastor of Hawkins First Baptist Church. "They always identified Suzanne by her smile."

As mourners held hands and wept, Layman and the Rev. Dan Nuzum of Big Sandy's New Hope Baptist Church recalled Miss Harrison as a young woman who led by Christian example, and in doing so, touched the lives of those around her.

Opening Miss Harrison's Bible, Layman read underlined verses from Ephesians 4:31-32 that he said typified her life: "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

"As I read those verses," Layman said, "I knew how they had been pressed upon her heart."

Though Miss Harrison's life ended at a young age, "it was 18 full and packed years," he said. "She was that kind of person. It was a good one, the sermon this precious one preached. But it was a short one. Now she has passed it on to you to finish."

Nuzum told those gathered to take solace in the Scriptures and look to the Lord for guidance in times of tragedy.

Comforting the bereaved, Nuzum said, "He wouldn't think of taking her home until He had readied her a place. And may I say this to you, Mom and Dad, don't ever forget the memories that you have (of Suzanne)."

Most importantly, Miss Harrison was prepared to meet her Savior because of the exemplary life she led, said Layman, who baptized her.

"She's with her Father, the one she designed her life after," he said.

The victim's mother, Mary Ann Harrison, was overcome with grief and wept openly with others during the memorial service.

The reactions of Miss Harrison's fellow students were particularly telling, with many weeping at the loss of their friend.

Classes at Hawkins schools were dismissed at 1 p.m. Thursday so the students could attend the service.

Several downtown businesses were closed in mourning.

Authorities continued searching Thursday for the two companions of the cheerleader and model student who was killed after going to Lake Hawkins.

Wood County Sheriff Frank White said virtually every law enforcement officer in his East Texas county has been involved in the search for Bryan Boone and Gena Lee Turner, both 20, who were with Miss Harrison on Sunday.

A 38-year-old who remained jailed on an unrelated charge of attempted armed robbery was questioned about the teen-ager's death, but authorities stopped the interrogations Wednesday after the man's lawyer objected.

Candidate runs on his initials, not his record

SEVEN POINTS (AP) — M.D. Anderson Jr., who reaped more than 47 percent of the Republican land commissioner vote without spending a cent on his primary campaign, credits his success to "word of mouth."

Anderson's opponents contend he is capitalizing on the good name of the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, and question why he used his initials on the ballot since he is known as Dudley in Seven Points, a town of about 650 people 50 miles southeast of Dallas.

But Anderson denied any ulterior motive Thursday, saying he felt he had to run either under his full name or his initials.

"It's not unusual for people to run on their initials," he said. "I don't think Marion Dudley Anderson Jr...there's hardly enough room on most of the ballots."

Anderson's showing in last Saturday's primary came as a surprise to state GOP Party Chairman George Strake.

"I wish I could tell you more that I know about him, but I just don't know," Strake said Wednesday. "I intend to find out."

Strake called The Associated Press on Thursday, however, to say he had made several calls and felt "a lot better about this fellow."

M.D. Anderson

Anderson, a former Seven Points City Council member who is a construction contractor and operates the Cedar Creek Plowboys Club with his wife, took 47.3 percent of the vote in the primary and will face Grady Yarbrough, a Tyler schoolteacher who won 27.2 percent, in a June 7 runoff.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says he's not worried about running against a Republican opponent, but does worry about "running against a famous hospital."

"I have considered changing my name to Gary Indiana," Mauro, a Democrat, said jokingly.

Anderson paid the $3,000 filing fee but reported no expenses, according to campaign records filed with the secretary of state's office in Austin. He listed only $450 in contributions, including $100 from former Houston Mayor Louie Welch.

Anderson and his campaign manager, Ronald Hinds of Dallas, say they used GOP contacts throughout the state and made frequent visits to Republican women's clubs to publicize his candidacy.

Anderson said he was asked to run by Hinds and Tom Pauken, an unsuccessful congressional candidate in 1978 and 1980 against Democrat Jim Mattox, now Texas attorney general.

Hinds said he and Pauken touted Anderson's candidacy in their day-to-day business calls and urged Republican contacts to make calls on Anderson's behalf.

"You aren't going to find any yard signs, any posters, anything that cost any money," Hinds said.

Anderson, who received 179,039 votes, said he plans to use the same low-key strategy for the runoff and, if successful, for November's election.

"I was absolutely astounded at how many good Republicans that Ron Hinds and Tom Pauken know over the state," he said.

Strake said Wednesday the problem of candidates winning on the strength of their names is part of the political nature of a state as big as Texas, where reaching the electorate can be an expensive business.

In 1976, Texans elected Don Yarbrough, a Democrat whose name resembled former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough's, to the Texas Supreme Court. Less than a year later, Yarbrough was indicted for perjury. He resigned in 1977.

Strake called McKinney surveyor George Collis, who finished third in Saturday's primary with 25.5 percent, "the experienced candidate."

"Obviously, a lot went on names," said Strake, who would not endorse a candidate in the runoff.

Collis said he considered Anderson a mystery candidate.

'Texas Wine Country Guide' a real corker, Hightower says

AUSTIN (AP) — The state agriculture department suggests that Texans "fill up the car, grab the map and head out to Texas wineries."

Out in the Texas countryside among the cotton, cows and cactus is something "new and exciting" — wine grapes, says State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

In recognition of the growing wine industry in Texas, the agriculture department on Thursday released "Texas Wine Country Guide," a free booklet which describes 16 Texas wineries.

"An increasing number of small, premium wineries are beginning to produce the next big thing from Texas: superb wines!" Hightower said.

"These are not novelty bottlings of 'Chateau Bubba,' but fine vintages from the hands of a new breed of Texas winemakers who are intent on achieving the highest world standards of wine production."

In 1975, Hightower said, there was only one winery in Texas. A decade later there were 16, "and others have entered into production just this year since our 'Wine Country Guide' was printed. When it's fully 'uncorked,' the Texas wine industry will mean $3 billion-a-year to our state's economy."

The department guide says wine-making in Texas was probably introduced in the state by Spanish missionaries in 1662, or 100 years before California got grapes. There were 25 Texas wineries by 1900, "then along came Prohibition." By the time it was repealed, only the Val Verde Winery at Del Rio remained, "and it stood pretty much alone until the early 1970s," according to the guide.

A total of 50,000 gallons of Texas wine were bottled in 1982, 160,000 in 1983, 340,000 in 1984 and approximately 500,000 in 1985.

Borger residents to decide future of embattled council

BORGER (AP) — Residents in this Panhandle city of 15,000 will return to the polls Saturday for a special recall election to decide the political future of three City Council members because of a $1.5 lawsuit judgment against the city.

Voters could unseat the popular Mayor Frank Selfridge, Mayor Pro-Tem Judy Flanders and councilman Bill Slaybaugh. The three have been re-elected to the council a total of eight times in the past.

The special vote was brought about by three long-time Borger women who feel the three council members have cost the taxpayers the city over a million dollars by mishandling an offer to settle a controversial suit involving city police officers.

In the past two months, the town has not only witnessed an attempt to unseat three of five council members, but also a suit by the city against their attorneys, the alleged shutting down of a local radio station's news division, charges of incompetence, a case being appealed to the Supreme Court not to mention the one million dollars the city stands to lose.

The saga began on lonely road in Hutchinson County in August 1981. A team of area law enforcement officers were in hot pursuit of a fugitive who was tracked to an area near the home of 6666 Ranch Foreman James Grandstaff.

In the heat of the chase, officers accidentally shot and killed Grandstaff when he appeared to investigate. The family of Grandstaff took the city of Borger to court and was awarded $1.4 million in damages from U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson in Amarillo.

Currently, lawyers for the city of Borger and the North River Insurance Co. which wrote the city's $500,000 liability policy, have appealed the case to the Supreme Court.

After the trial, all was quiet until February 1986 when local news broke the news of a letter sent by Haynes Fullenweider of Houston, which represents the family of Grandstaff, offering to settle with city for $499,950, $50 less than the city's insurance coverage at the time.

The offer, had it been accepted, could have saved the city more than $1 million.

But City Council members — including Selfridge, Flanders and Slaybaugh — all deny ever hearing about the offer to settle.

Copies of registered mail receipts show that secretaries for the Gasaway, Gurley, Sheets and Mitchell Law Firm of Borger, which had represented the city for 13 years prior to that time, signed to receive the settlement offer on July 1, 1983. Similar copies also show secretaries for Wayne Sturdivant, a lawyer representing North River Insurance Company of Amarillo, also received copies.

Dale Bettis of Cypress Valley Winery at Round Mountain in Central Texas said he thinks the Texas wine industry is about where the California industry was 10 years ago.

Hightower said in a statement, "Already, Texas vintages are receiving laurels and awards from connoisseurs and competitions throughout the world.

White says budget cuts will show up

AUSTIN (AP) — Downplaying double-digit increases in state agency spending the past two months, Gov. Mark White remains confident his budget-cutting plans will trim the deficit.

"This plan is working, and I think it will work," White said Thursday.

The governor responded to reports from Comptroller Bob Bullock which showed spending by agencies during April was up nearly 20 percent over their average for the first six months of the budget year.

White — who two months ago asked some 200 state agencies to trim spending 13 percent by Aug. 31, 1987 — said it will take a little time for his spending reduction effort to show results.

"I think the overall savings goal we've set is still on course. We still feel we're going to achieve those numbers," he said.

The governor's spending cut request was contained in an executive order issued in mid-February. While he lacks the constitutional power to require reductions, White urged agencies to freeze hiring, not fill many job vacancies, reduce travel and save money through other economies.

The executive order was issued after Bullock predicted that state revenue would fall $1.3 billion below the 1986-87 state budgets because of plunging oil prices and oil tax revenue.

But Bullock on Wednesday issued a second monthly report showing that agency spending has risen since White's executive order took effect March 1.

Bullock said April spending from all funds ran 19.9 percent above the average for the first six months of the fiscal year, while March spending had been up 15 percent.

White said the cuts will show up — in time.

"Basically, the attrition of state employees will not be reflected immediately. That's going to be an accruing of savings over the biennium," White told his weekly news conference.

"There's some other one-time expenditures (which) I think tend to discount the accuracy of those reports," he said.

The governor said some offices, such as the Texas Education Agency and the highway department, had to make payments this spring that won't be repeated.

Standard & Poors Corp. recently lowered its bond rating on Texas state bonds from AAA to AA-plus, saying a tax increase would be needed to bring the rating back up. Again, sharply falling oil prices were to blame.

But White reiterated Thursday that he won't follow the financial analysis company's advice.

"They have stated specifically that just cutting spending will not change their attitude about credit ratings," White said.

"The only way we could change their attitude about credit ratings is to increase taxes. I told them specifically and directly that I am not going to raise taxes," White said.

Research stopped at nuclear waste repository

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — Poor record-keeping in geological studies has led to research being stopped at proposed sites for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste repository in Washington state and Nevada, spokesmen say.

The U.S. Department of Energy stop work orders are not expected to affect recommendations due later this month that the sites be studied further for suitability as the nation's first high-level nuclear waste dump, spokeswoman Ginger King said Thursday.

"A recent quality assurance survey showed that some of the documentation needed to be improved" at waste isolation projects on the Hanford nuclear reservation and Yucca Mountain in Nevada, Ms. King said.

"The documentation wasn't in the best order, so we said, 'Go back and get it in order,'" she said in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C.

Some work on the Basalt Waste Isolation Project at Hanford, near Richland, Wash., will be "redirected" while record-keeping and management controls are tightened, Barry Moravek, a spokesman for Hanford Rockwell Operations, said Thursday.

Hanford Rockwell, a division of Rockwell International that is prime contractor on the BWIP project, is expected to announce Monday its plans for improving record-keeping and what research will be stopped pending quality assurance reviews, Moravek said.

A similar work stoppage is in effect at the Yucca Mountain site in Nevada, 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

A third site in Deaf Smith County in the Texas Panhandle also is expected to be recommended for additional study.

Preliminary research at both the Hanford and Yucca Mountain sites has been going on for nearly 10 years. Should they be nominated, as much as $1 billion would be spent at each site on five-year "characterization" work.

Congress has mandated that the Energy Department recommend a site for the first repository by 1990 and have that site operational by 1998.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission must issue a license before the dump begins accepting nuclear waste.

Should Hanford be selected as a finalist, the department wants the basalt program to be ready for NRC licensing requirements, said Energy Department spokesman Mike Talbot in Richland.

"We didn't feel that enough progress was being made toward developing procedures for documentation, training, or management controls, to meet the needs of NRC licensing," Talbot said.

Moravek described the action as "a switch from a purely research mode to a site characterization mode."

The stop work order went into effect at Hanford on Wednesday after discussions between the Energy Department and Hanford Rockwell, Talbot said.

The record-keeping and document-tracking problem was first noticed at the Yucca Mountain site by the U.S. Geological Survey, Ms. King said. The Energy Department then issued its stop work order, she said.

A number of activities at Hanford are exempt from the stop work order, including "those things necessary to achieve adequate implementation of the BWIP quality assurance program," Talbot said.

He called the work stoppage a "redirection of efforts."

"Nobody is being laid off, no funds are being cut," he said.

Neither Talbot nor Moravek could say which projects would be "redirected" at Hanford.

The Nevada work stoppage will be in effect for as long as four months, said Ms. King.

It was not immediately known how long the Hanford work stoppage would be in effect.

The actions will not affect the schedule for work on a repository at either site, Ms. King said.

Hanford's BWIP program proposes drilling two large-bore holes nearly 4,000 feet down, then mining basalt flows to test the volcanic mineral's ability to trap radiation.

The project includes the Near Surface Test Facility inside Gable Mountain on the 570-square-mile reservation, where the effects of heat and stress on basalt are simulated.

R.A. Duncan, a Denton County rancher, is in the rough these days, because part of the back nine of a golf course is in his back woods.

Rancher says city's offer not up to par

CARROLLTON (AP) — A Denton County rancher is in the rough these days because part of the back nine of a golf course is in his back woods.

And, like the golfers, he's looking for the green.

R.A. Duncan, 64, is trying to get the city to pay him for 11 acres that were mistakenly included in a 412-acre parcel used in constructing the Indian Creek Municipal Golf Course.

Last month, District Judge John Narsutis ruled that the suburb north of Dallas had built the entire 13th hole and parts of the 11th, 12th and 14th holes on 11 acres owned by Duncan next to the Trinity River.

In addition to establishing Duncan's ownership, the judge awarded the rancher $32,000 to cover legal fees, lost rents and tree damage on the property.

Roaming the course in a weather-stained cowboy hat, boots, a denim shirt and blue jeans, Duncan looked out of place among the golfers as he pointed out flourescent orange states that mark his property line.

"I want to sell the land to the city," he said. "But I want a fair market price for my land and I haven't got one yet."

Golfers currently play the four holes on Duncan's land unaware of any controversy. But that may change, Duncan said.

"I went to the city offices on Tuesday and applied for a permit to build a fence on my land," he said. "The permit man was going to give me one until I told him who I was."

The application for the wire hazard is pending, Duncan said.

City officials acknowledged that someone made a mistake when Duncan's land was included in the $824,000 purchase of the golf course land from Bill Donald in 1979.

"There's little doubt that he owned the land or had title to a portion of it," City Manager Mike Eastland said. "But he originally claimed 19.5 acres, which was reduced to 11. We think his part is smaller than that, but that's for the court to decide."

City officials have joined with Chicago Title Co., which handled the sale, to appeal Narsutis' ruling, Eastland said.

After an initial ruling against the city last October, the city offered to buy the disputed 11 acres from Duncan for $80,000, the city manager said. The city, the title company and the parcel seller were going to split the cost of the settlement, but Duncan rejected the payment.

"Their offer is a lot less than what the property to the north and south is worth," Duncan said.

Investors taxed by prospect of losing IRAs

DALLAS (AP) — Many private investors and economists expressed shock at the proposed new tax reform bill that would restrict individual retirement accounts, and lawmakers braced for the angry reaction.

"It will have a catastrophic effect. It would essentially finish the IRA program," said Bruce Reznick, account executive for the Austin office of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc., a stockbroker.

He said the tax deduction that would be limited by the bill is the main reason that "95 percent of the people come to us to open an IRA."

Of the 21 constituents who phoned Republican Rep. Steve Bartlett's Dallas office on Wednesday, 18 said they opposed the IRA provision.

"It's quite a popular program," said William Gibson, chief economist for RepublicBank of Dallas.

He said the committee's proposal would reduce the national savings rate by discouraging investment in IRAs.

The plan by the Senate Finance Committee led by Bob Packwood, R-Ore., would prohibit the deduction for individuals eligible for private pension programs.

"It will remove the immediate tangible carrot for long-term savings," said Pete Foster, executive vice president and manager of the trust banking and investments divisions of MBank in Austin.

"In some respects it's a heck of a blow," said Rich Matza, senior tax manager for the Austin office of the accounting firm Ernst & Whinney. "I personally think they may reinstate the IRA deduction — it's too popular a deduction. But they will have to come up with the dollars to make up for it."

"It's going to take some grassroots groundswell of opposition," said Foster.

"I find it hard to believe they will kill a program that has been as successful as this one has been," said Reznick.

"Most, including ourselves, are watching with interest but aren't jumping to any conclusions," said Steve Chipman, executive vice president of MBank Houston.

MBank has seen its IRA deposits grow from just a few million dollars in 1982, when the account provisions were broadened, to more than $100 million.

Rivers keeps claws sharpened

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joan Rivers fans may have feared that the comedian would retract her claws when she became a late-night TV host.

Not to worry.

"Me mellow? Forget it!" she says. "Sure, I lose a few targets like Liz Taylor, but new ones are coming along all the time. Now I've got 'Fergie' Ferguson — you know, Prince Andrew's fiancee. And Sean Penn and Madonna — marvelous! Christie Brinkley — ideal!

"Liz Taylor is out. Too thin. Jackie Onassis is out. She's changed. But think of all the new ones I can have fun with."

The list doesn't include Moammar Khadafy.

"I tried him," she said. "I used a line that he looked like Jackie Onassis without the makeup. Nothing! The audience was silent. You see, not enough people know what Khadafy looks like. If they don't have a picture in their minds, they can't respond. I had to take out my Cyndi Lauper jokes because people can't remember what she looks like. Madonna has taken over."

A major loss to the Rivers joke file was Elizabeth Taylor ("She pierced her ears and gravy came out"; "She stands in front of a microwave oven and yells, 'Hurry!'). Not only did she have the audacity to lose all that weight, she also became friends with Joan Rivers.

However, there will always be an England to provide victims for the Rivers' arsenal — especially Queen Elizabeth: "I put a doily under the Kitty Litter. She was impressed. She took it home for a hat."

Comedienne Joan Rivers and Barry Diller, chairman of Fox Inc., arrive for a news conference in Los Angeles earlier this week to announce she will host a live talk show on Fox Broadcasting Co. that will compete with late-night king Johnny Carson.

Other favorites include Nancy Reagan, Prince, Michael Jackson, Sophia Loren and — Joan Rivers: "On my wedding night, Edgar said, 'Let me undo your buttons.' I was naked at the time."

A different view of Joan Rivers is offered in her aptly titled autobiography, "Enter Talking" (Delacorte Press, $17.95), written with Richard Meryman. In extraordinary detail she recalls her youth as a fat girl — the total rejection as a would-be comic in the Catskills; her near-starvation while trying to make it in Manhattan.

"Enter Talking" also tells of Rivers' lifelong struggle to win acceptance from her mother and father. He was a prosperous doctor and did not support her career.

When she burst into stardom on the "The Tonight Show" on Feb. 17, 1965, all her father could say was, "Nice. ... Nice."

The appearance with Johnny Carson climaxes the book. She rocked the audience with such self-deprecating cracks as, "When I'd get an obscene phone call, I'd say, 'Hold on a minute, let me get a cigarette."

Carson remarked on-camera: "God, you're funny. You're going to be a star."

Twenty years later Joan Rivers was Carson's guest-host during his vacations, a spot she held for three years. This fall, she'll be host of her own talk show for the Fox Broadcasting Corp., challenging Carson as king of late-night TV.

"If Johnny hadn't made the choice to put me on his show, I might still be in Greenwich Village as the oldest living undiscovered female comic," the 52-year-old comedian muses. "I would have had to wait for David Letterman to discover me.

"In those years, there were two places where you could literally become a star overnight: the Ed Sullivan Show and the Johnny Carson Show. It doesn't happen any more, even on Johnny's show. You have to be on 10 times before you really make it.

"Why has it changed? I don't know. Maybe it's because there are so many other sources of entertainment today," she said.

On the veranda of her sprawling hillside home, Rivers spoke on a wide range of matters, mostly serious.

Why she wrote the book: "It was a fabulous era in show business, when people like Barbra Streisand, Woody Allen, Richard Pryor, Mama Cass and Dick Cavett were breaking in. It was a creative period, both in comedy and music. Rock was just starting then, and one night I heard the first performance of amplified music in a Greenwich Village night club."

Opryland draws dreamers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — This year hundreds of young performers will be in Opryland USA with dreams of making it to Broadway and Hollywood.

The 120-acre park, home of the Grand Ole Opry House, has 13 musical productions involving 380 college-age performers singing everything from country music to light opera.

Over the years the park has developed a reputation for grooming young talent.

Cynthia Rhodes, who performed at Opryland for four seasons in the 1970s, starred opposite John Travolta in the movie, "Stayin' Alive." She also appeared in "Flashdance," "Xanadu" and Francis Ford Coppola's "One From the Heart."

Mary Mastrantonio appeared in "Scarface" with Al Pacino after leaving Opryland.

Actress-singer Denise Direnzo worked at Opryland in 1976 and 1977, then performed in both the national and international companies of "A Chorus Line." She also has been in the Broadway productions of "Cats," "Sophisticated Ladies" and "42nd Street."

Other former Opryland entertainers have appeared on television specials with such stars as Barbara Mandrell, Dolly Parton, Carol Burnett, Bob Hope, George Burns, Lucille Ball and Ann-Margret.

"We give these young performers a lifetime of experience in one season," said Bob Whittaker, director of entertainment at Opryland. "It's an opportunity for them to be exposed to all facets of the entertainment industry. To my knowledge, no other park in the world does as much as we do. Many do some of these things, but none does all.

"By going on that stage and performing for 2.5 to 3 million people (a year), and working alongside the top talent in the country, they learn and grow together," Whittaker said.

"Before the year is over, they have learned the tricks of the trade that are going to make them a much better professional," he said. "It's an incredible experience for these young people."

This year Opryland officials held auditions in 29 cities.

Dollar recovers

LONDON (AP) — The dollar recovered against European currencies in quiet trading today after plunging to its seventh record low against the Japanese yen in 13 days. Gold was mixed.

The dollar was down from opening levels in Europe but still stronger than on Thursday. Dealers said trading was quiet following Thursday's public holiday in most of Europe, with many dealers taking today off for a long weekend.

A Frankfurt dealer said nothing was likely to move the dollar significantly except statements from senior U.S. economic officials on where they want the currency to go.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar closed at a new post-World War II low of 162.85 yen from Thursday's 164.30. Later, in London, slipped further, to 162.35 yen.

The British pound fell to $1.5397 from $1.5490.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Thursday:

-2.1795 West German marks, up from 2.1775

-1.8170 Swiss francs, up from 1.8117

-6.9425 French francs, up from 6.9300

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $344.00 a troy ounce, compared with late Thursday's $344.10. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $344.25.

In Zurich, the bid price was $344.00, up from $342.50 late Wednesday. The market was closed Thursday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 78 cents to close at a bid $343.61.

Business leaders say economy is in upbeat mode

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The country's top business leaders, saying the economy is in an upbeat mode, today predicted that over the next two years, Americans will benefit by stable interest rates, low inflation and higher income.

Despite the business executives' glowing forecast, they also expressed "a sense of uneasiness" because of weakness in business investment, and hard times in the agriculture and oilpatch areas of the nation.

The forecast came during the spring meeting of the Business Council, made up of 200 executives from the country's largest corporations.

The executives generally gave a nod of approval to the tax package adopted this week by the Senate Finance Committee. They did not see the added tax burden on corporations as detrimental to business, but expressed a skeptical wait-and-see attitude on any final version emerging from a conference with the Democratic-controlled House.

"If it passes its shakedown cruise ... and there are no potholes ... I would be supportive," said council vice chairman James D. Robinson, who is also chairman of the American Express Co.

In its semiannual report on the economy, the council said it foresees a strengthening of the U.S. economy for the rest of the year, "as the economy moves out of the lethargy that has prevailed since the middle of 1984."

The council said the "outlook is more upbeat than previously, in part reflecting the expected effects of lower interest rates, a lower dollar, and lower oil and energy prices."

The council forecast economic growth of 2.7 percent — as measured by the gross national product — for 1986, "a distinct improvement over the 2.2 percent" recorded in 1985.

Th economists said their predictions were based on the assumptions that there would be no tax overhaul bill this year, that no oil import fee would be passed and that imports would not be restricted.

Another key assumption is that the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction timetable would be repealed or declared unconstitutional, but there still would be some budget cuts made by Congress.

"The picture depicted for the next two years is a relatively pleasant one," the report said. It portrayed a healthy economy with these factors:

—Better growth.
—Extraordinarily low inflation.
—Strong rises in income and business profits.
—Improving labor markets.
—Relatively stable interest rates.

The report, written by 20 chief economists of major companies in the business council, said much of the renewed strength in the economy stemmed from big improvements in residential construction and exports, as well as increased inventory investments.

Consumption spending is expected to keep rising, although well below the pace of last year, the report said.

"Inflation rates should be even lower than last year, principally from lower oil and energy costs but also because of modest rises in labor costs," the report predicted.

Its forecast for 1987 was very rosy, with the GNP up 3.2 percent on an annual basis.

The economists said U.S. exports will increase in 1987 and consumption spending will also prop up the expansion of the U.S. economy.

"Inflation rates are expected to move higher as the oil price deflation shock wears off, but still should remain in a moderate range," said the report. Although interest rates will not be as low as this year, they "will likely stay on a lower plateau" than previous years, the report said.

George M. Keller, chairman of Chevron Corp., said in a statement accompanying the report that there is "no question" that gasoline prices will rise 10 cents to 15 cents a gallon in the summer.

Corporation earnings should be much stronger this year, the report said. Key elements leading to the improved profits performance were said to be "extensive layoffs, cutbacks and cost control."

A strong increase in real purchasing power fueled by oil and energy price decreases, rising employment, improved confidence, higher wealth from the improved stock market, and the windfall gains from loan refinancing all point to support the expansion by the consumer," the report said.

First City coping with oil economy

HOUSTON (AP) — First City Bancorporation of Texas officials vow they will turn their company around from its recent $232.4 million loss, but they also maintain the bank holding company is in sound shape.

The company also will no longer loan a high percentage of its money to the energy industry, bank officials said at their annual stockholders meeting Thursday.

As announced earlier, the Houston-based holding company of 63 Texas banks and one South Dakota bank, lost $232.4 million, or $7.27 per share, in net income in the first quarter, compared with earnings of $8.9 million, or 13 cents a share, a year earlier.

The company lost $58.1 million in energy loan write-offs in the first quarter, which company officials called "substantial."

But much of the first quarter's loss was accounted for by First City moving $275 million into a reserve for potential loan defaults, said Daniel Arnold, board chairman and president. The company now has $375 million in reserves, or 3.5 percent of all loans, which is "far above the average of the banking industry," Arnold said.

Arnold and J.A. Elkins Jr., senior chairman of the board, pledged a better future at the Thursday meeting although the two officers did not give a timetable.

Both officers also said First City is in sound shape and Elkins denied reports "of a so-called plan by regulators to arrange an acquisition of First City by another bank."

Local P-9 president Jim Guyette, left, of Austin, Minn., reacts to news that the Washington D.C.-based United Food and Commercial Workers international had taken over and ousted Local P-9 officers. Strike strategist Ray Rogers is seated next to Guyette.

Parent union takes over maverick local

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Leaders of the meatpackers on strike against Hormel's flagship plant are vowing to continue their fight despite their parent union's decision to seize control of the maverick local.

"We certainly are fighting for our jobs, fighting to get a fair and decent contract," Local P-9 President Jim Guyette said Thursday. "We intend to fight legally and by every other means to achieve that contract."

Officials of the United Food and Commercial Workers international union said Thursday they were taking control of Local P-9 and removing the local's leaders, who have refused an order to end the sometimes-violent 8-month-old strike.

"We met on the 7th and voted to put them in trusteeship," Al Zack, a spokesman for the national union, said Thursday from his Washington office. He said the vote by the international's five-member board was unanimous.

Joe Hansen, the international's regional director, will act as trustee and supervise the local's daily activities, Zack said.

The international union filed suit in federal court in St. Paul seeking a court order barring strikers from harassing or threatening Hansen or removing records from the union hall. A hearing on that suit was scheduled today.

But Guyette said he planned to ask a federal judge in Washington today to issue a temporary restraining order against the international and to consolidate all legal proceedings in Washington.

If representatives of the international union try to oust any officers or enter the union hall, they "will be shown they are not welcome on our premises," Guyette said.

State official intervenes in Yates lawsuit

FORT STOCKTON, Texas (AP) — The state intervened Thursday in a lawsuit to recover millions of dollars it claims is owed to the Permanent School Fund from a lease in the oil-rich Yates Field in Pecos County.

Summit Energy Inc., Dallas, purchased the lease from Iraan Producers but "discovered problems," according to the General Land Office, and brought their concerns to the land office.

"The land office is going to the courthouse because one of its lessees (Summit) had learned that the state's Relinquishment Act partner had refused to share royalties equally with the Permanent School Fund," said Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

Not only did this surface owner fail to share its 12/16 royalty with the state, but additional minerals that belonged only to the Permanent School Fund were taken from the state.

Summit is asking the court to cancel Iraan's 12/16 royalty or let the companies write a new lease.

The state attorney general's office intervened in Summit's suit on behalf of the land office and Permanent School Fund. The state suit asked the court to invalidate the 24.41-acre lease or return the state's share of the 12/16 royalty to the school fund. It also asked for the state's portion of the 1/16 mineral interest.

According to land office figures, the state is owed in excess of $41 million.

Mike Connolly of the land office said the judge in the case had granted a temporary restraining order freezing royalties and set a hearing on a temporary injunction for May 19.

Analysts see oil prices rise, OPEC in control

SEATTLE (AP) — The United States may be benefiting from lower oil prices now, but industry analysts expect prices to rise and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to stay in the driver's seat in setting prices.

The analysts at the annual meeting of the Western Interstate Energy Board here Thursday said that oil probably will approach $20 a barrel by the end of the year, and slowly rise to between $25 and $32 per barrel in 1995.

The turmoil of the past six months saw prices drop to less than $10 a barrel then come back to about $15, setting big changes into motion, a three-member panel agreed.

"The world will be considerably different 10 years from now, because of this past year's events," said Ted Eck, chief economist for Amoco.

Ron Smith, with the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico and a former CIA analyst, said there would be a redistribution of players among countries as well as companies.

Already, Mexico and China, he said, have both reduced drilling activity, and North American companies are curtailing exploration for new oil and gas fields. Exploration and drilling in Africa could also expect to suffer major cutbacks, panelists said.

There is a golden lining for U.S. consumers, said the third panelist, David Montgomery of the federal Energy Information Administration.

"For the country as a whole, it's great news," he said.

The three spoke to officials from the member states of the energy board, which include Alaska, Washington, Oregon, California, Montana, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming and Hawaii.

Smith said oil-producing countries that don't belong to OPEC — particulary Great Britain — may give conflicting signals, but are better off cooperating with Saudi Arabia in setting a price and production scheme to control the oil market.

"It seems to me that they should be nearly ready to cut a deal," he said. He expects an agreement by midsummer.

Otherwise, Smith said, Saudi Arabia might send oil prices tumbling to achieve a long-term, lower price structure.

TMBR considering Sharp acquisition

From Staff Reports

TMBR Drilling Co., Midland, a subsidiary of Tom Brown Inc., has entered negotiations to purchase Midland-based Sharp Drilling Co., from its parent company Pioneer Corp., Amarillo.

Joe Roper, chairman of the board of TMBR, confirms that negotiations are underway, but declined comment on particulars surrounding the possible purchase of the company and its 25-rig fleet. "There is nothing concrete about a possible deal yet, and any decisions are at least a week off," Roper said.

Pioneer announced its intention to get out of the contract drilling business late last year. Earlier this week the company said that negotiations with one or more unidentified potential buyers were ongoing and that its intentions are to have the sale transaction completed by the end of May, according to Wayne Cogdill, a Pioneer spokesman in Amarillo.

Pioneer decided to divest itself subsidiary operations not consistent with its recent involvement with Mesa Limited Partnership, which Sharp Drilling was determined to be, Cogdill said.

He noted that Pioneer might have stayed in the drilling business for the long run, despite the bleak short-term outlook for the contract drilling industry, if the corporation were not involved with its move into the Mesa partnership.

Donoghue's Money Fund Averages (tm)

(Averages for all 268 taxable funds)		43	6.30	6.50
30-day	average	yield		6.49

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 268 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 increased $788.1 million to $212.7 billion during the week ended May 6, 1986. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 6.30 percent from 6.38 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 6.49 percent from 6.61 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity shortened by 3 days to 43 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "The trend of taxable money fund yields is still down. This week's 7-Day Average Yield of 6.30 percent is the lowest since May 24, 1978. A three-day drop in the average maturity of taxable money funds this week is the largest decline in five months. Meanwhile, it is advantageous for many investors to be in tax-free funds. Anyone in a 29 percent or higher tax bracket should consider tax-free funds."

Yield columns represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven days and 7-day compounded (effective) rates of return. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. (r) -- restricted availability.

Tenneco reports first quarter net income

HOUSTON — Tenneco, Inc. has reported net income of $124 million for the first quarter of 1986, compared with a net loss of $54 million for the same period of 1985. Earnings per share were 73 cents compared to a loss of 46 cents in the year earlier period. Before the change in accounting, net income for the first quarter of 1985 was $63 million and earnings per share were 34 cents.

Entex reports $7 million net loss for quarter

HOUSTON (SWN) Entex Energy Development, Ltd. announced a net loss of $7.0 million ($.89 per Unit) for the three months ended March 31, 1986 vs. net income of $200,000 ($.02 per Unit) for the comparable period of the prior year. The loss for 1986 includes $6.3 million attributable to a reduction in the capitalized cost of its oil and gas properties as a result of continuing declines in the prices of crude oil and natural gas. This writedown was calculated using estimated average prices received during April, 1986 of approximately $12.00 per barrel and $2.40 per Mcf.

Diamond Shamrock subsidiary makes gas find

DALLAS (SWN) Diamond Shamrock Exploration Co., a subsidiary of Diamond Shamrock Corp. has completed a natural gas discovery on an offshore Louisiana state lease.

The Main Pass Block 31 No. 1 well flowed 5.8 million cubic feet of gas and 281 barrels of 42-degree gravity condensate per day during production testing on a 15/64-inch choke with 5,658 pounds per square inch of flowing tubing pressure. Drilled to a total depth of 14,915 feet, the well was perforated for testing of a Miocene sand between 11,603 feet and 11,611 and 11,626 and 11,630 feet.

Steven G. Crowell, vice president, offshore exploration and production, said a delineation well is planned for second quarter 1986 to further determine reserve potential and evaluate a shallower oil zone which was encountered in the well, but not tested.

Diamond Shamrock owns 50 percent interest in the block and is operator with Pogo Producing Co. owning the remaining 50 percent interest. The block is located approximately 50 miles southeast of New Orleans. The well was drilled in 12 feet of water.

Coke's new look

COPING

The holding company, the country's 30th largest commercial banking organization with $15.2 billion in assets, has trimmed costs, sold unneeded assets and changed policies to reflect the changing Texas economy, Elkins said.

First City will never again "allow its loan portfolio to become heavily concentrated in one industry," as it once had in energy, he said, promising a broad-based diversification that will result in a "stronger future."

Already, the company has significantly reduced its energy and Houston real estate loans because of the area's recession caused by plummeting oil prices, Arnold said.

By the end of March, energy loans accounted for 17.8 percent of all loans compared with a high of 26 percent three years ago, Arnold said.

First City also has redueed its Houston share of real estate loans to 30 percent, Arnold said. He did not give a comparison of previous years' percentages. But other company officials gave an example of the company's largest lender, a Houston bank, as reducing its percentage of Houston real estate loans from 95 percent in 1981 to 55 percent now.

To cut costs, the company has trimmed its workforce from 9,000 to 8,120 in the last two years, Arnold said. The company also has restructured its loan department in the last two years to anticipate problem loans in the energy sector, he said.

In the last year, First City also has started several successful programs, such as a holding a sweeptakes to increase IRA accounts and offering exotic promotions to attract large deposits, Arnold said. The latter brought in $281 million, he added.

Agreement reached on Alaska oil exploration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some oil companies and environmental organizations have reached agreement under the sponsorship of actor Robert Redford on what areas of the Bering Sea should be offered for oil and gas exploration, the Interior Department said today.

Interior spokesman Robert Walker said parties to the agreement would present it to Secretary Donald P. Hodel on Thursday, the final day for comment on the first draft of a new five-year leasing plan the department expects to adopt in early 1987.

"Even if he thought it was the greatest thing since sliced bread," Hodel could not comment yet because he has not seen the details and must consider the agreement as comment on an overall plan for offshore drilling, Walker said.

But Walker added, 'This obviously is the kind of effort he has encouraged ever since he became secretary."

Hodel's own efforts at agreement among opposing parties for drilling off California so far have not borne fruit. A tentative accord last summer between the secretary and the California congressional delegation collapsed, and the secretary and the delegation are trying again.

Redford, through his Institute for Resource Management in Salt Lake City, last summer brought together oil companies and environmental groups for discussions about California, and the Alaska agreement is an outgrowth of those sessions, said one source who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

To avoid antitrust problems, industry hired a third party to collect data from the companies on what areas they considered promising. Those submissions were used to draw a composite map of promising areas for environmentalists to consider in the negotiations, the source said.

Robert Redford

Conoco, Texaco, Chevron and Standard Oil were among oil companies joining the environmental groups, the source said, and participants hoped other companies would join. Another source said Exxon and Shell were not part of the agreement. Conoco, Standard Oil, the Natural Resources Defense Council and the Conservation Law Foundation of New England were listed as participants in a news conference scheduled to follow the meeting with Hodel on Thursday.

Mesa reports quarterly loss

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Mesa Limited Partnership's $169 million first-quarter loss reported Thursday was the first of what probably will be a string of oil companies forced to restate their earnings because of a Securities and Exchange Commission ruling.

Mesa, the company headed by oil takeover artist T. Boone Pickens, restated its quarterly earnings because of Tuesday's decision by the SEC that oil companies cannot delay oil property write-downs to another quarter.

Mesa said its new figures, which now include a $200 million reduction in the value of its oil and gas properties, give the company a loss of $169 million, or $2.52 per share. That compares with previously reported earnings of $31 million.

Previously reported operating income of $58 million has been restated to a loss of $142 million, the company said in a written statement. Revenues of $112 million were not affected.

The SEC rejected a plan to allow hundreds of independent oil and gas companies to delay huge write-downs required by the drop in oil prices.

In arguing against the proposal, which was supported by the oil industry and the SEC's chief accountant, the commission's chief economist said such a plan made sense only if the oil price drop was a temporary condition.

An SEC survey of 146 companies showed 109 would be forced to take write-downs in their first quarters instead of delaying them to another quarter.

Oil analysts and accountants said at the time of the ruling that it could trigger defaults on bank loans by some companies.

Mexican officials, area businessmen meet

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Mexican trade representatives Thursday held a seminar with members of the Permian Basin International Trade Forum and area business people at the Holiday Inn Centre to discuss trade opportunities emerging in the State of Chihuahua.

Luis Fernando Mesta, an attorney, explained that the Maquila program, under which raw materials are exported from the U.S. to be finished in Mexico, was initiated in 1966 to alleviate unemployment in his country. Through the ensuing years, he said, the Maquiladora program has grown to encompass some 800 companies with some 250,000 employees.

According to Mesta, the program, while helping Mexico develop its industrial base, has also helped U.S. manufacturers become more competitive with foreign manufacturers by taking advantage of less expensive labor available in Mexico.

Mesta said that, next to the Mexican oil industry, the Maquiladora program is the greatest producer of national income for Mexico.

Francisco Villaverde, general director of Promotora de la Industria Chihuahuense, who is responsible for developing and promoting six industries in the State of Chihuahua, indicated that there is perhaps a misunderstanding of the Maquila program. He said the need of Mexico, immediately at least, is not to import finished goods, but to build factories, under the Maquiladora program that are labor intensive.

Bill Masterson, first president of the trade forum, told those attending the luncheon following the seminar that over the years he had helped establish trade relationships that have benefited both areas. In conjunction with consulting work he has done, he said, he had been queried by some companies concerning product lines that could be manufactured in Mexico, product lines that were not being manufactured in this area.

Masterson noted that companies particularly interested in the Maquila program were those whose manufacturing costs were escalated by government regulation, especially those regulations promulgated by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. He was most emphatic in the contention that companies participating in the Maquila program do not deprive this area of jobs or business.

Mayor Don Carter said that, through the efforts of the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce Economic Development Department and the Permian Basin Trade Forum, "We are attempting to bring greater attention to international trade opportunities available for local businesses. With the opening of the new international trade bridge between Presidio and Ojinaga," he said, "it has become more important that we work together to make these opportunities into reality, realities that will result in new jobs, income and increasing economic prosperity on both sides of the border."

Carter noted that arrangements are currently being made for a reciprocal visit by Odessa area business people to Chihuahua some time this summer.

"I think this is a great idea," Carter said. "And, let me assure you that, as mayor, I will do all that I can to continue the relationship that we have begun here today."

Midland center proves its worth as good neighbor

'Service to poor..greatest need Midland has'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Midland Neighborhood Center's outreach program has more than quadrupled its services from two years ago, when its cheese-and-butter program for poverty-level families was launched here.

"We've got about 1,200 households in the program now — 3,000 individuals," said Alice Aguirre, the center's director. "And that's a lot of cheese and butter."

When Judy Bolten, the center's director in 1984, launched the program two years ago, 283 Midlanders signed up for the free surplus dairy products — compliments of the federal government.

"Service to the poor, the elderly, and the handicapped is the greatest need Midland has," Ms. Bolten said in 1984.

The food is distributed monthly — on the second Wednesday — at the Texas National Guard Armory at 3900 N. Lamesa Road. Calling time is 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. "A lot of senior citizens ride MidTran" to get to the distribution center, Ms. Aguirre said. "A lot of the others just show up." Food also is distributed at Hillcrest Manor, a home for the elderly and handicapped.

"We're still certifying (taking applications for the food)," Ms. Aguirre said. "We're doing it year-round."

The federal program is funded through the Texas Department of Community Affair's Economic Opportunity Division. Neighbor centers in the Midland area are coordinated through the West Texas Opportunities Inc. — a community-action agency.

"We're still certifying (taking applications for the food)...
"We had a lot of unemployed people come in here lately — people who have been laid off because of the oil-industry (slowdown)."
— Alice Aguirre, director of Midland Neighborhood Center

CURRENTLY, the program's rules allow for one pound of butter and one five-pound package of cheese per household per month. For households of seven members or more, the cheese ration is doubled. In addition to cheese and butter, the households are distributed rice, honey, low-fat dried milk, flour and cornmeal. "This month," she said, "we are going to have everything but the cornmeal."

"They thank us," Ms. Aguirre said. "A lot of them say they couldn't do without it — particularly senior citizens who are on fixed incomes."

Lately, men and women from the ranks of the unemployed are being attracted to the program.

"We had a lot of unemployed people come in here lately — people who have been laid off because of the oil-industry (slowdown)."

On the eve of each distribution session in the Midland area, a truck from the warehouse in Lubbock transports the food to neighborhood centers at Midland, Odessa, Lamesa, Stanton, McCamey, Rankin, Andrews and Big Spring. This month, the Midland program has funds to pay for trucking the food in. But there are no funds in the budget for bringing in the food in June. In the meantime, Ms. Aguirre is banking on an agency, firm or individual to volunteer to bring in the food for June or to donate funds to pay for the transportation. Ms. Aguirre may be contacted at the Midland Neighborhood Center 111 N. C Ave. or by calling 684-7997 weekdays.

OF THE FOOD recipients, some "are young. Some are old. They are all different ages," she said.

One thing which they have in common is their relative poverty. To qualify for the food program, applicants must meet poverty-level incomes, which are computed at $5,360 for a family of one, $7,240 for a family of two, $9,120 for a family of three, $11,000 for a family of four, $12,880 for a family of five, $14,760 for a family of six, $16,640 for a family of seven, and $18,520 for a family of eight.

Those who already are on food stamps, Medicaid, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, and Supplemental Security Income are "automatically eligible" for the program.

In addition to the food program, the Neighborhood Center operates a weatherization program for weatherproofing houses for the poor; a utility program, called Energy Crisis Intervention, which pays electric and gas utility bills for the poor; and the Child Protective Service, which investigates complaints of neglected or abused children "to make sure the children are well taken care of, clothed and fed." The service is operated by Jene Nance.

Alice Aguirre is director of the Midland Neighborhood Center, which distributes food to Midland's needy people, operates a weatherization program, pays some utility bills of the poor and operates a child protective service. She looks over cheese bound for Midland's poor.

"Just a couple of weeks ago," Ms. Aguirre said, "we ran out of utility money. Through those funds, we helped out 54 households — 230 different individuals. This year, we could go up to the maximum of the bill." The $6,119 budget for the service was consumed in three months.

Ms. Aguirre noted that the Neighborhood Center functions to "help people" who, because of unfortunate circumstances, "can't help themselves."

"There are a lot of people out there who can't help themselves."

MMH may be getting new medical library

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital may be getting a badly needed medical library should a $75,000 proposal be approved at today's general membership meeting of the Midland Memorial Auxiliary.

"It was approved at the executive meeting on Monday and if it is approved at the general membership meeting, we'll give MMH $75,000," said Auxiliary President Nancy Stafford.

Ms. Stafford said the volunteer group, which routinely purchases hospital equipment and donates hundreds of volunteer hours, wanted a more permanent gift for the hospital.

"We wanted something the auxiliary could build on," she said. "Equipment is something that is sometimes not used and has to be replaced in a few years. We were hoping, with the recent expansion of the hospital, to do something that would be lasting."

The money came from a fund originally targeted for equipment for the intensive care area, said Ms. Stafford, a project that wound up being funded by a local donor.

"There was $60,000 that was not being used from that," she said. The rest of the money came from typical auxiliary sources such as the hospital coffee/gift shop.

The library was singled out as a project partly "because we felt education played a big part in medicine," she added.

The proposal for the Midland Memorial Hospital Health Sciences Library was developed by Director of Nursing Education Maudie Rains.

According to Ms. Rains, the hospital's current library, a small room in the basement and a nurse's library at Allison Cancer Center, are outdated and ill-equipped.

"The holdings are obsolete and inadequate in scope and depth; they are therefore under-utilized," she said in the proposal. "There is not an attendant to organize and maintain the holdings...and...cataloging of the holdings is incomplete. Some inventory was lost before being cataloged."

"The nursing holdings, located in the Allison Conference Room, are markedly limited, consisting mostly of a few outdated, bound periodicals and old, donated volumes," she continued. "The Allison Permian Basin Cancer Center Library also is mostly outdated, with no system for managing incoming periodicals."

Applications increasing at local job training program

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

More adults and more dropouts are expected to flood an area job training program for low income youth within the next year, say program officials.

Applications are increasing because more students are dropping out when they can't meet the educational requirements of the state's school reform plan, said Donna Harrison, assistant director with the Private Industry Council's Job Training Program. Also, after being laid off more adults are applying for the program that serves 18 to 21-year-olds, Ms. Harrison said.

"In the past they were able to get oil field jobs if they were over 18 with few skills. And more kids are being put out in the labor market with fewer skills with House Bill 72 cuts. It's going to be much more difficult," she said.

Also the Basin's poor economy will make it especially hard for teens to find jobs this summer, says Bob Cunningham, a planner with the program.

"There are not that many summer jobs available for youth. A lot of jobs are being filled by dislocated workers that would usually be filled by the youth in the summer," he said.

This summer the program will train and employ 513 teens from low income families in a 17-county area around the Permian Basin. Seventy-two teens in Midland and 135 teens in Odessa will participate in the program that runs from June 2 until mid-August.

Despite an increase in applications this year, the program will be helping 43 fewer teens this summer due to budget cuts within the U.S. Department of Labor, which funds the program. The program's summer budget was cut from $776,042 in 1985 to $735,449 this year.

The Permian Basin program is attempting to educate the teens while they work. Dropouts or potential dropouts have been targeted for one program that will send 40 area

Construction firm weathering storm

By SHEILA ALLEE

H.B. Zachry

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — In the 1920s, H.B. "Pat" Zachry saved half his paycheck for two years and parlayed his nest egg into a multi-million dollar construction company that today is one of the largest in Texas.

The H.B. Zachry Co., the second-largest privately held construction company in Texas and the 44th largest in the nation, now employs about 1,000 people in San Antonio and about 8,000 worldwide.

But there are a few rough spots.

A Dallas County grand jury recently issued two sets of indictments against the firm and one of its officials, Paul Hinson, for alleged tampering with government documents. The indictments were returned in the wake of an investigation into construction projects at the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport in Grapevine.

The charges, denied by the company, are the first blemish on the complexion of the 62-year-old firm.

Begun in Laredo by Zachry in 1924, it started out building homes, small buildings and concrete structures. It prospered on government contracts for many years but now is busily engaged in more private sector projects. The company is considered a strong economic force in San Antonio.

Before he died in September 1984, Zachry told an Associated Press reporter how he started out.

After graduating from Texas A&M, he worked two years as engineer for Webb County. "I made $200 a month for two years and saved $100 a month and went into business for myself," he said

The firm grew rapidly in the 1930s, convincing Zachry to move to San Antonio. In the next decade, the company completed about $50 million in defense installations.

A favorite story in the Zachry history is of the company's construction of an air base in Hondo in 90 days.

Zachry engineered the rush job, and others like it, for the nation's World War II defense buildup, by pulling work crews off highway and building work and reassigning them to military projects.

The company also built bases in Laredo, El Paso, Harlingen and Brownsville.

After the war effort, Zachry expanded into highways and bridges, airfields, dams, railroads, power plants, switchyards, industrial plants, chemical plants, pipelines, missile and anti-missile facilities and large buildings.

The company launched numerous overseas projects, including work in Saudi Arabia, Chile, Puerto Rico, Spain and Peru.

In 1968, Zachry was chairman and chief executive officer for San Antonio's HemisFair world's fair. As part of his economic contribution to the city at the time, he built a 500-room, 21-story prefabricated Hilton hotel in nine months.

The unique hotel was constructed, building-block style, out of individual hotel rooms precast in modules at another location and assembled on-site off the San Antonio Riverwalk.

Bruce Cloud, executive vice president of the firm, said Zachry was proudest of the Hilton project.

But the founder also recalled fondly the $57.3 million paving project for runways when DFW Airport was built in the 1970s.

More government work has been bid in the past few years, said company spokeswoman Cathy Obriotti Green, because industrial construction has dwindled in the Southwest. She said since the company is privately held, she could not reveal the public-private split of the firm's contracts.

But news reports indicated, when Zachry died, the company had $1 billion in construction contracts with about 25 percent of that in government projects.

The firm currently lists as subsidiaries the Francitas Gas Co., Capitol Aggregates and Capitol Cement, and the Hilton hotel.

The success of the business propelled Zachry into a position of power in San Antonio and in Texas. He offered his political and financial support to many candidates, most of them conservatives.

The indictments have not hurt business drastically for Zachry. The state highway commission last week let $40 million in roadwork contracts to the firm.

At that meeting, Bartell Zachry, son of the founder and the company's president since 1964, staunchly denied any wrongdoing at DFW.

In addition to the indictments, records subpoenaed by the Dallas grand jury indicated several state highway commission workers accepted from the H.B. Zachry Co. free hunting trips to a ranch in South Texas.

Study: Women, blacks excluded

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Women and blacks — groups thought to generally oppose the death penalty — have less of a chance of serving on capital murder juries even though an appeals court ruled minority groups must be fairly represented on such panels, a university study shows.

"It appears clear that the two groups most opposed to the death penalty are also those most often excluded from serving on juries," said Frank P. Williams III, a Sam Houston State University criminologist.

The school released the study examining the death penalty Thursday in the wake of a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling that may expedite executions in Texas.

The high court ruled Monday that the exclusion of death-penalty opponents from juries does not create juries prone to sentence defendants to death.

The study shows that minority groups are usually kept off of juries because they generally oppose the death penalty. Capital punishment juries, therefore, tend to be composed of whites and males.

youth, including nine from Midland and 10 from Odessa, to Texas Tech University in Lubbock this summer to work on academic skills. Whether they are in the classroom or working, the teens earn $3.35 per hour.

The students usually use their earnings to supplement the family's income, Cunningham said.

"They definitely are in need of the money. A lot of times the money goes to buy food for the family or provide supplies they need during the next school year," he said.

Family income and family size qualify students for the program. In general, a student from a family of four making less than $10,000 per year would qualify, Cunningham said.

One hundred percent of the students in the academic skills program have remained in school or re-enrolled. Fifty percent have made As and Bs and 40 percent have made Bs and Cs.

Another summer job training program will be sending teens, who could otherwise not afford the $105 per course per semester cost, to summer school. Students may take up to two four-hour courses during the summer each semester. The summer program has two semesters, beginning June 9 to July 8 and July 9 to August 7.

Other job training programs for youth this summer will include a career program that pairs each participant with a successful businessman to serve as a counselor and mentor. Other students will participate in a retail sales program where they learn how to use cash registers and work on customer/clerk relations. One group of students will be working with the Christmas in April program continuing to repair the homes for the elderly and handicapped during the summer while they learn carpentry skills.

She added that although Allison recently hosted the Second Annual West Texas Cancer Conference, the library holdings were "less than exemplary."

Neglect also was evident in the upkeep of media equipment and the organization of teleconferences — another area the auxiliary hopes to aid.

"Various types of equipment were found to be scattered throughout the building," she said. No plan exists for managing, securing and maintaining these items of equipment, nor for centralizing them in an organized fashion."

And on the teleconferences:

"Once attracting large turnouts, the teleconferences for medical and nursing staff are sometimes not attended at all, resulting in a poor return for cost. Additionally, the format of the present teleconference system (usually audio only) is not conducive to attracting good turnouts nor to good interaction with those attending and is generally unappealing."

While the $75,000 being donated by the auxiliary will not cover the expense of the teleconferencing capability, Ms. Stafford indicated plans for that were being made.

"The next $25,000 to $30,000 will be for a satellite system, so the hospital can tie in with different medical libraries such as M.D. Anderson in Houston or Texas Tech in Lubbock," she said.

Ms. Rains also saw the need for better patient education.

"No current education programs exist, with the exception of ostomy instruction and cardiac teaching, but needs exist in many areas (diabetes mellitus, orthopedic, postpartal, newborn, updated cardiac, nutrition and diet therapy)."

The new library will be set up with the assistance of Dr. Weldon Horton, Director of the Murry Fasken Learning Resources Center at Midland College.

Included in the plans are the development of a small media center, with capabilities for video, slide, film and filmstrip viewing; the institution of an in-house patient instruction system utilizing the hospital's existing television circuitry and replacing the existing teleconference format with a satellite system capable of providing physicians and staff with an extensive offering of video education programs.

To be purchased for the health science library are 500 start-up books, periodicals, microfiche reader, micro computer with data base for inventory control, two book carts, one 24-hour book drop unit, furniture and microfiche journals.

Cynthia Brust, public relations director for MMH, said the hospital "is delighted over the new library."

The hours for the library which will be staffed by two people, will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Predicting massive mental health layoffs 'irresponsible'

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Predictions that the state will have to lay off as many as 2,000 mental health workers are "irresponsible" and unlikely to come true, a spokesman in Gov. Mark White's office says.

Texas Public Employees Association Executive Director Gary Hughes said Wednesday he had information indicating community placement of clients in state institutions for the mentally ill and retarded would force layoffs of between 1,040 and 2,000 state employees by Sept. 1.

But Hershel Meriwether, associate deputy for programs in the governor's office, told the San Angelo Standard-Times Thursday that Hughes' information is wrong.

"It is irresponsible of Mr. Hughes to be alarming state employees unnecessarily, especially when these employees are working so hard to serve clients," he said.

"I think Mr. Hughes, if he thinks about it, will understand that the state is trying to do everything we can to see that state employees are not affected adversely," Meriwether said.

Community placement is required by U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders' order that all state schools reduce their populations and place clients in "the least restrictive environment."

Hughes said budget cuts by the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation resulting from community placements would be about $1 million for the Kerrville State Hospital and about $1.6 million for the San Angelo State School.

Hughes, who has been an outspoken critic of White and has led opposition to his re-election, said that because the governor appointed the members of the MHMR board, he is responsible for the acceleration of community placements.

About 700 clients have been placed in community settings in the past seven months.

But Meriwether said there "has been no direct intervention by Gov. White on this matter with respect to encouraging or discouraging this particular set of circumstances."

He added that "we are not talking about layoffs at all. We're talking about a reduction in force that would occur as a result of attrition.

"There is a fairly high turnover rate of employees at MHMR facilities...and people leaving voluntarily will be the primary mechanism resulting in the total number of employees being reduced — not firings or layoffs or anything like that," Meriwether said.

Layoffs, he said, "would be made only as a last resort, and we really do not expect that to be the case."

Couple offers mustangs for just $150 each

DANBURY, Texas (AP) — Wanna buy a mustang for $150?

Step right up and get 'em at Mark and Tammy Wendel's Bureau of Land Management sale. They'll have burros for $80, mustangs for $150 and mustang mares with foals for $180.

The Wendels, of Danbury, adopted a burro named Jinny and two mustangs, Solo and Nevada, last November from the BLM. Danbury is a town of about 1,500 about 40 miles south of Houston.

Mrs. Wendel said the mustangs are more sure-footed than most horses, and that burros make great pets.

"We had our burro just two days before she started walking up to us instead of us walking up to her," she said. "It was a month before we could walk up to the mustangs and pet them. It just takes time and it depends on how much time you have to spend on them."

Because of their success with the burros and mustangs, the Wendels decided to hold the sale for the BLM at 8 a.m. Saturday in their pasture.

The Wendels expect 25 jennies (female burros) and 30 jacks (male burros), as well as four mares, two with foal.

"They came in all sizes and colors," Mrs. Wendel said. "There are times when you get a mare and she will be pregnant and not know it. You'll get two in one package for the same price. If you're lucky, you can get a (pregnant) mare with a foal on her side and you can three in one package."

The burros are coming from California, while the mustangs will be shipped from Nevada.

Sales are on a first-come, first-serve basis. Buyers put their name on a list. The buyers' names will be called when it's their turn to choose the animals.

For one year after the purchase date, the mustangs and burros belong to the BLM, which keeps tabs on the animals to make sure they are not abused in that year.

Many people all over America are surprised when they hear what U.S. Savings Bonds have to offer.

For starters, Savings Bonds give you market-based interest rates—like the money markets—plus the security of a guaranteed return. This means you can earn a lot more than the guaranteed minimum rate of 7½%, but never less! To earn the higher rates, just hold your Bonds for five years or longer.

Here's more surprising news—the interest you earn from Savings Bonds is free from state and local income taxes. And you don't have to pay federal taxes on the interest earned until you cash in your Bonds.

Savings Bonds are easy to buy, too. They cost as little as $25 and can be purchased at most banks and savings and loans. Or through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

All of these advantages are making Savings Bonds an increasingly popular investment. Last year, sales of U.S. Savings Bonds were up nearly 30%!

With all that Savings Bonds have to offer, it's no surprise they're one of the best investments in America. For the current rate, just call toll-free 1-800-US-BONDS.

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS Paying Better Than Ever

Market-based rates apply to Bonds purchased on and after 11/1/82 and held at least five years. Bonds purchased before 11/1/82 earn market-based rates when held beyond 10/31/87. Bonds held less than five years earn lower rates.

Shultz assures Aquino of U.S. support

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

MANILA, Philippines — Secretary of State George P. Shultz met with President Corazon Aquino today to assure her of U.S. support for her government but rule out increases in aid beyond $150 million already pledged.

Shultz made no comments to reporters after his 40-minute meeting with Mrs. Aquino at a guest house next to the presidential palace. However, he earlier said the Filipino government should concentrate on rearranging the economy rather than asking for more U.S. assistance.

The secretary of state also met with former supporters of deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos who said they appreciated U.S. interest in Philippine stability, and that they mentioned Marcos "only in passing."

Shultz scheduled a news conference later today before departing for the United States. He planned to take a weekend holiday in Honolulu before returning to Washington.

As when he arrived Thursday, Shultz was greeted by about 200 leftists chanting "Reagan terrorist" when he arrived at the gates of Malacanang Palace for the meeting with Mrs. Aquino.

The protesters, who held signs saying "Marcos Mad Dog Made in U.S.A." and "Reagan the Great Terrorist," dispersed peacefully soon after Shultz left for a series of meetings with other officials, including Vice President Salvador Laurel and Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile.

Earlier, police held back more than 200 Marcos loyalists who shouted "we want Marcos back" as Shultz stopped to lay a wreath at the foot of a monument to the Philippine's national hero, Jose Rizal, on his way to Malacanang.

Shultz met with former Labor Minister Blas Ople and seven other members of Marcos' New Society Movement after a breakfast meeting with Mrs. Aquino's economic ministers.

Ople, who broke with Marcos' party after the February revolution that ended the strongman's 20-year rule, indicated Shultz asked the opposition to avoid actions that could destabilize Mrs. Aquino's government as it tries to solve the economic and social problems it inherited from Marcos.

Since fleeing the country, Marcos has been urging his followers to hold demonstrations against Mrs. Aquino, saying he plans to return.

President Reagan has asked the Aquino government to renew Marcos' revoked passport so he can live in some other country, but Philippine officials say they do not want Marcos to leave the United States because it would improve his chances of destabilizing the government.

Laurel, after meeting with Reagan last week in Bali, Indonesia, said "cobwebs of doubts" existed over American support for the new government.

The assertion, and a request by Laurel for additional U.S. assistance, appeared to irritate Shultz — especially because Reagan told the vice president in an exceptionally personal statement that the two countries "are as one in times of adversity," administration sources said.

Still, Reagan did not pledge aid above the $150 million promised in late April as part of a package that would also include accelerating the delivery of $200 million already pledged and converting another $124 million in loans to outright gifts.

Annual interest on the Philippines debt is $2.2 billion.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Latin leaders end talks

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Ten Latin American leaders ended a meeting here without producing a statement on peace in Central America, dashing the hopes of Costa Rica's new president that his inauguration would launch a new drive toward a regional peace treaty.

The inauguration did, however, produce a statement by the Contadora nations and their support group calling for the Central American nations to sign a peace treaty without delay.

The meeting Thursday night, arranged by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez after his inauguration, was aimed at reviving peace talks that have been stalled for nearly seven months.

The meeting was attended by the presidents or foreign ministers of Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela, which began the Contadora peace process; and of Argentina, Brazil, Peru and Uruguay, which joined the effort last year.

Also at the meeting were Presidents Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador and Jose Azcona Hoyo of Honduras, two key U.S. allies in Central America. Duarte and Azcona have both echoed U.S. concerns about whether Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government would comply with a regional peace treaty.

Syria denies allegation

LONDON (AP) — Syria denied Thursday that it was involved in an attempt to blow up an El Al airliner in London and said Syria had become the target of an "international smear campaign."

The Syrian Embassy in London issued a statement on the El Al case as Nezar Hindawi, 31, a Palestinian, was ordered held for another week on charges he attempted to blow up the El Al airliner at Heathrow airport April 17.

British authorities have indicated they want to question a member of the Syrian Embassy in connection with the El Al bomb attempt, which was foiled when an El Al guard found explosives in the hand luggage of Hindawai's Irish girlfriend before the plane took off.

End of Chile raids urged

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church has urged the army and police to halt raids on politically active slums in search of terrorists, weapons, and common criminals.

The security operations around Santiago's perimeter have occurred almost daily since April 29 following increased activity by foes of President Augusto Pinochet's military government.

They are the most extensive since the early days of a seven-month state of siege that Pinochet lifted under U.S. pressure last June.

Santiago's slums contain most of the city's 4.5 million people, and are strongholds of leftist parties that have led the most combatative protests against Pinochet since a deep 1982-83 recession.

Chin era palaces found

PEKING (AP) — Archeologists have discovered 2,600-year-old ruins of the palaces of the Chin kingdom, the official Xinhua News Agency said today.

Archeologists who have been excavating Shaanxi's Fengxiang County for 10 years determined the area was the capital of the Chin kingdom during the Spring and Autumn Period (770-476 B.C.) of the Chou Dynasty.

The Chin rulers were ancestors of Chin Shi Huang (259-210 B.C.), the emperor who united China.

Archeologists said they found a group of palaces covering 24,000 square yards and having five courtyards.

The discovery settled a dispute among archeologists as to whether the palaces of ancient rulers had three or five gates.

The chain shows the ambitious dukes of Chin flouted protocol of the times, which decreed that only emperors' palaces could have five gates, Xinhua said.

Peres denies attack plan

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said today Israel has no intention of attacking Syria.

He blamed Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat for stirring up a war scare in the past two weeks by sending reports to Arab countries claiming Israel was planning such an attack.

"I can't see immediate indications of a Syrian attack upon us and the Israeli position is clear: We have no intentions to attack the Syrians," Peres said on Israel radio.

The Israeli prime minister denied reports he also attributed to Arafat that the Soviet Union had intervened to persuade Israel not to launch a pre-emptive strike against Syria.

Whites split on Mandela

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Urban whites are almost evenly split on whether the government eventually will have to release jailed black leader Nelson Mandela, according to a poll released Thursday.

Police reported that patrols shot dead a black man in an illegal gathering in the eastern Cape province and said there were three gasoline bomb attacks around Johannesburg, two of them in white suburbs. The firebombings caused no injuries.

The respected polling company Omnicheck said its researchers asked 1,306 whites the question: "Do you accept the proposition that the government will sooner or later have to release Nelson Mandela?" It said 40 percent answered yes, 43 percent no and the rest had no opinion.

Wage change rejected

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Representatives of the nation's businesses have rejected again demands by labor leaders for a 35-percent increase in the minimum wage.

As a result, the two sides postponed for 10 working days additional negotiations on a salary increase for millions of Mexico's unskilled workers.

Javier Bonilla Garcia, president of the National Minimum Wage Commission, said the talks were suspended so representatives of each side could consider fresh solutions to the wage problem. They last met Wednesday night.

Dollar accounts OK'd

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Treasury Department authorized, effective Thursday, the opening of dollar accounts in cities along the border between Mexico and the United States.

WORLD

Conservatives don't fare well

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives suffered a series of crushing electoral defeats, losing control of more than two dozen local councils and a former parliamentary stronghold.

From prosperous southern England through industrial wastelands of the north and into parts of Scotland, the Conservatives were mauled in Thursday's balloting, mainly by the socialist Labor Party.

The elections constituted the biggest test of opinion before the next general election which Mrs. Thatcher, now in her second five-year term, must call by June 1988.

The dismal showing seemed likely to provoke arguments within the Tories' normally well-disciplined ranks, which have been faced with persistent high unemployment, a tough challenge from a more moderate Labor Party, and evidence that voters may be getting tired of Mrs. Thatcher.

Her tight money policies, which have curbed inflation, are widely blamed for what most voters see as deteriorating public services, from hospitals to rural buses.

A tally early today by the domestic news agency Press Association indicated that with results from 192 of 209 local councils tabulated, the Conservatives had lost control of 29.

Keep tags on cattle's resistance to flies

By EARNEST KIKER

During the past two years, horn flies have developed some resistance to pyrethroid insecticides applied with insecticide-impregnated ear tags. Resistance levels developed have depended on the intensity of selection pressure placed on developing fly population. Practical control of horn fly populations is lost when resistance exceeds three-to-fivefold as compared to a susceptible population.

Cattlemen using insecticide ear tags on their herds need to keep a close check on control, once the horn fly season starts, to determine whether or not the tags are effective. If pyrethroid resistance is confirmed, special management strategies need to be implemented.

The management strategies also may be used to reduce the development of horn fly resistance to pyrethroids:

— Do not apply insecticide-treated ear tags to animals before economically damaging populations of horn flies develop. Populations which do not exceed an estimated 200-250 flies per animal will not cause economic loss.

— Horn fly resistance to pyrethroid insecticides can be suspected if new tags have not satisfactorily reduced fly number within 10 to 12 days.

— Use insecticides with an alternative type of action in normal treatment schedules before pyrethroid resistance becomes evident. Use dust bags, oilers and other self-treatment devices to reduce and delay the pyrethroid resistance problem.

— Spray, "pour-on," "spot-on," or dust treatments with phosphate compounds — coumaphos (Co-Ral®), crotoxyphos (Ciodrin®), dichlorovos (Vapona®), dioxathion (Delnav®) or malathion — provide a different mode of killing action and can be used to reduce pyrethroid resistance and to control horn fly populations.

— Do not use whole body sprays of pyrethroid insecticides to control resistant flies which can not be controlled with ear tags. These sprays will provide significantly higher selection levels of already resistant flies.

— Pyrethroid ear tags can be used successfully where the spinose ear tick and Gulf Coast tick are the target pest.

— Remove insecticide-impregnated ear tags from animals as soon as they have lost their effectiveness in killing target pests. Tags emitting a sublethal dose to the animal appear to add to the resistance problem by killing or weakening susceptible flies in the population.

— Pyrethroid tags can be successfully used to manage horn flies where resistance has not developed. In general, western and southern areas of Texas have not experienced a resistance problem. However, tagging entire herds year after year with pyrethroid ear tags can develop serious resistance.

— Some producers are enjoying satisfactory management of horn flies by a system commonly termed, "tagging only the calf." Insecticide tags are applied to calves in the herd once fly populations require control. Fly movement within the herd is sufficient to achieve pesticide control in this manner. Self-treatment devised with phosphate-type insecticides can be easily integrated into the management system if pyrethroid resistance is developed or suspected.

Suggestions for managing the horn fly resistance problem must be considered on a herd-to-herd basis. Previous herd treatments must be considered, as well as possible cases of resistance already confirmed.

New insecticide ear tags are being offered for sale for the first time in 1986 which disperse a pyrethroid-phosphate combination of insecticides to combat the pyrethroid resistance problem. These tags have demonstrated some limited success in other areas which are also experiencing significant insecticide resistance problems.

NASS by any other name would still count in agriculture agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has come up with a new name for one of its agencies, the Statistical Reporting Service.

It's no longer SRS, it's NASS. That stands for National Agricultural Statistics Service.

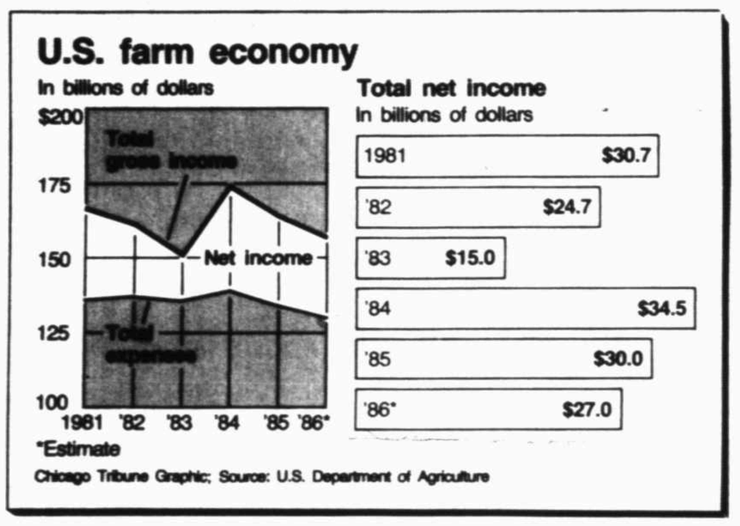

And the Crop Reporting Board is now called the Agricultural Statistics Board "to better describe the scope of its output," according to the agency.

Iran suffers from food shortages due to war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran's war with Iraq, its hatred of the United States and an erratic behavior in the world's diplomatic arena have meant food shortages that are likely to continue, according to an Agriculture Department analyst.

The Iranian economy rebounded last year as some industries reopened in war areas previously occupied by Iraq, and agricultural production recovered from the severe drought of 1984, says John B. Parker, a Middle East expert in the department's Economic Research Service.

But lower prices for oil have hurt, contributing to a 3 percent decline in Iran's total exports last year to $12.3 billion. The war and a dwindling foreign exchange reserve caused the open market rate for Iranian currency, the rial, to fall to one-tenth of its 1980 value of 70 to one U.S. dollar.

"Eroding currency value and shortages resulted in an inflation rate estimated at over 80 percent," Parker said. "This places Iran in a precarious situation; curtailing food imports because of lower petroleum revenues can lead to serious political problems. One result has been greater use of countertrade — oil for food."

Iran's imports of merchandise declined 25 percent last year to $13.3 billion. The country's trade relations also suffered from a policy of avoiding imports from the United States, France, Israel, South Africa and Egypt.

The boycott of U.S. grain has continued since 1982, with Iran turning more to Australia, Canada, Argentina and others, Parker said in a new outlook report.

"In 1985, Argentina also incurred Iran's wrath because of its sales of military equipment to Iraq, and Argentine corn exports to Iran dwindled," he said. "Purchases of wheat became more diversified, with relatively small amounts coming from Austria, Sweden, Spain and Pakistan."

Iran's aversion to buying U.S. food has led at various times to domestic shortages, Parker said. At the same time, Iran sought to increase oil exports to any country, including the United States.

"Efforts to expand other exports to the United States included a 31 percent cut in the average price for pistachios," he said.

The pistachio price cuts resulted in complaints by American pistachio growers and a decision in March by the Commerce Department to impose countervailing duties on imports of nuts from Iran.

Iran has promoted countertrade, a kind of barter, even among previously alienated customers, Parker said. Nearly half of Iran's oil exports now move through some form of countertrade, which means that a greater quantity is being exported to assure scheduled imports.

Turkey has been a major beneficiary of Iranian countertrade in oil. Last year, Iran exported more than $1.2 billion worth of oil to Turkey and imported about $900 million worth of goods, including more food, textiles, cement and trucks.

Ethiopia still hanging on brink of famine

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — Although last year brought some relief from drought and crop failure, Ethiopia is still on the brink of food disaster and depends heavily on outside relief, including U.S. grain, an Agriculture Department analyst said.

Even to maintain its poor nutrition standards, Ethiopia will require about 1.5 million metric tons of additional food this year to hold per capita consumption at the 1982-85 average, USDA economist Stephen Haykin said Wednesday in a new outlook report.

"These levels of food consumption are actually nutritionally inadequate. Ethiopia's nutritional status has been extremely poor" and has fallen below the minimum levels recommended by the United Nations, he said.

Haykin added, "In order for Ethiopians to get two-thirds of their total calorie requirements from cereals in 1986, 3.2 million tons of imported cereals would be needed."

In the early 1980s, Ethiopia and other drought-ravaged African countries raised the face of starvation and despair to the world. Huge outpourings of food aid, including grain and other commodities from the United States, were directed to the stricken areas.

Last year's Ethiopian grain harvest has recently been revised downward to 5.2 million tons — only 10 percent larger than "the disastrous output of 1984," Haykin said.

Farmers and traders are subject to mandatory purchases by the government's marketing corporation, and all private trade is regulated. Civil turmoil also continues to cut into food supplies, and Ethiopia's resettlement policies are another disruption.

Haykin said the government intends to resettle 1.5 million people, about 3 percent of the population, from poorer areas in the north of Ethiopia to virgin agricultural lands in the southest.

"This controversial policy has diverted resources from famine relief and uprooted some farmers in the middle of their harvest," he said. "The United States has objected to this program on humanitarian grounds."

Haykin said the United States has pledged to supply more than 300,000 tons of food aid this year and that new pledges from other countries exceed 600,000 tons. As of April 1, one-third of the pledged food had been delivered, and stocks at the ports serving Ethiopia totaled 175,000 tons.

However, internal transportation to needy areas in the lean months before next fall's harvest could become a problem, Haykin said. This situation is being watched closely by relief agencies.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two U.S. wheat organizations have reacted bitterly to last month's announcement by the World Bank that a $350 million loan has been arranged to help Argentina boost its export earnings.

Leaders of the two commodity groups said in letters to Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng and Treasury Secretary James Baker that the World Bank loans will help undercut grain markets of American producers.

The groups said Wednesday that the United States, through its sizable involvement in the World Bank, "is supporting the expansion of wheat exports of one of our principal competitors in the world market."

According to Carl Schwensen, executive vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, and Winston Wilson, president of U.S. Wheat Associates, the $350 million loan is part of a larger package the World Bank estimates "will help Argentina earn an additional $1 billion a year in foreign exchange by 1989."

"We can be certain that a potentially large portion of those increased Argentine exports will come at the expense of U.S. farmers," Schwensen and Wilson said.

The wheat leaders said they recognized the concern about Argentina's foreign debt and the country's ability to service that debt. But American wheat farmers believe it is not appropriate for the United States to participate in the loan when U.S. agriculture is going through a painful period of readjustment.

Termites unwelcome signs of spring for homeowners

By RICHARD MINZENMAYER

Spring is the time when many homeowners discover they have termites because winged forms appear and swarm.

Winged termites outdoors are a natural occurrence, so usually there is no problem. But if they are found indoors, usually on a window sill, chances are good that an infestation has established itself in your home.

Termites can cause extensive damage to wooden parts of your home, so take some precautions.

Quite often termites and certain ants swarm at the same time and it's important to be able to tell the difference between these two insects. Carpenter ants swarm in the springtime and can cause some structural damage to wood. However, termites are much more destructive and require different control measures.

Termites have a broad waist while ants have a narrow, constricted waist; termite wings are the same size and shape while winged ants have a front and back pair of wings of different lengths and shape; termites have straight antennae (feelers on their heads) while ants have elbowed antennae.

Termites may be attracted to your house by dead tree limbs, stumps, old lumber and other sources of termite food. These should be removed. If soil is above the point where wood or brick meets the foundation, termites have easy access to your home. Anywhere that wood meets soil (siding, wooden steps) is a potential spot for termite entry into the home.

Termites also have the ability to build mud tunnels over non-wooden structures to reach a food source. These tunnels (about ¼-inch wide) may extend several feet up concrete surfaces. On a slab home, these may be seen on foundation concrete between soil and brick. On homes built above the ground, these tunnels can be found on piers or pipes that go from soil to structure. The bath trap in homes built on a slab is another source of entry. Plumbing in this situation has contact with soil under the slab, and termite tunnels may be found in this area.

Although a thorough inspection is best done by a professional, a homeowner can make a quick check for termite infestations. If termites or damage is found, contact a local pest control company. This is one insect pest that should not be handled by a "do-it-yourselfer." Commercial pest control companies have the necessary equipment and experience to effectively rid a home of termites.

Soviet Union buys more U.S. corn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union has bought an additional 100,000 metric tons of U.S. corn — about 3.94 million bushels — for delivery through Sept. 30.

Two weeks ago, the Soviets resumed buying U.S. grain on a significant scale after a three-month absence from the market, although soybeans were ordered during that period. Historically, Moscow has bought grain in spurts, sometimes every day or so for a while before staying out of the market for two or three months.

Despite exile, Imelda holds her own in Honolulu

HONOLULU – In spite of an occasional burst of tears and ongoing abuse from talk-show comedians around the world, the former first lady of the Philippines has slipped with apparent ease into the print mumus and household chores of exile in Hawaii.

Imelda Marcos

As she did for 20 years, she greets an unending string of guests to her home, dishes out plates of food at the dinner table and sings publicly in her native dialect. And she still speaks forcefully, although now it is of her tragedy, rather than her triumphs.

"I have never felt a more unbearable pain or homesickness," Imelda Marcos said in an interview with the San Francisco Examiner at her rented Honolulu home. "If I'd known we were being taken out of the country" by U.S. military personnel last February, "I would have jumped out of the helicopter, parachute or not. We have lost everything, our good name. But worst of all, we have been deprived of our country and citizenship. It is overwhelming."

Removed from power, "we are just surviving here day to day," she said. Although supporters bring more food than they can eat, she said "I worry about whether there will be enough rice on the table, enough milk for my grandchildren. Real basics. All the little details. Where do we buy a rake?"

Because their house is so close to one of Honolulu's main highways, "we are being continuously shouted at like we are some kind of intruder. It's very embarrassing."

The press, which often has lined up on the beach separated by a hedge from her back yard, has kept her from enjoying a walk by the ocean, she said.

"I tried going down one day, but the photographers were already peeking and I rushed back in. My family is being terrorized, too, by all the legal cases filed against them. My daughter, Imee, is even accused of torturing and killing some people."

In an earlier phone conversation, her voice, unusually subdued, broke into sobs over and over, the words barely distinguishable over the line from Honolulu to San Francisco.

But throughout a nine-hour visit with her on Wednesday, she appeared much more upbeat and provided evidence that Imelda Marcos has at least adapted to her drastically more modest surroundings in the almost two months since her husband was deposed. She performs her dual role as American housewife and exiled ruler with few outward signs of rejection.

Separation from her homeland has not dimmed her enthusiasm for long, chatty dinners or social gossip, her taste for politics and its intrigues, her barbed remarks about her enemies, her aggressive personality, her ethereal philosophies, her charm and her compelling sense of drama.

"If they want to get me, they can get me," she said of the opponents of her husband's regime who have lined up hundreds of legal cases against the Marcoses.

"If they want to arrest me, arrest me. Kill me, kill me. It's OK with me. Let's be done with it. I won't resist. It's come to that point. If they want to do it, it's useless to fight city hall."

She is optimistic that she will return to the Philippines – "I cannot imagine living anywhere else" – although she said "we're not supposed to go back to our own country and we're welcome in no other."

Even with a sense that "we may not be vindicated, even in our lifetime," she is confident that "in the end, history will judge her "not by what they write or say, but what you have done."

Although she insisted that she is not bitter about the circumstances of her situation, her resentment is obvious over what she believes was the abandonment and condescension of the United States and attacks by the foreign press.

"How can you fight the media? How can you fight a major power? No way. You're a little nothing from a third-class country. A little brownie. How dare you stand up straight?"

Retelling the circumstances of her departure from the Philippines, she said that the CIA station chief in Manila warned her to leave the palace for safety reasons on her family's last day in the country and that U.S. officials lied when they refused Ferdinand Marcos' request to be taken to his home province of Ilocos Norte.

"They said we would not be safe in Ilocos either and that Clark Air Base," where the family was kept overnight before being taken to Guam, "was under attack by the (communist rebel) New People's Army.

"So where do they take us? Geeewaaaam" she said, drawling out the word Guam with exquisite sarcasm.

Then she repeated a joke: "Of course you know we told them we'd even go to Panay (a central Philippines island, pronounced 'Pan-eye.') They thought we said Hawaii."

When a helicopter flew over the Hawaii house, she pointed and cringed. The experience of evacuation from the palace by helicopter, as well as an attack on the palace by rebel helicopters "made our grandchildren to wake up at night shaking," she said. "They shout, 'Helicopter bad' "

But "I still believe in the fairness and justice of the U.S. in spite of everything that has happened. They are pragmatic and know what's good for them. They know the Philippines needs a strong leader."

Marcos feels the government of President Corazon Aquino will not last.

"We'll just wait here until the storm is over," she said. "The Filipinos won't accept mediocrity. All we have to do is wait."

And even if Aquino succeeds in passing a new constitution, "Cory will have to call a new election." In the face of persistent political and economic problems, "the way things are going, it will be a landslide for Marcos for sure."

She has also not given up the notion of her own "primordial role as mother, as first lady to the Filipino people" even as her citizens continue to giggle about the drawers full of her underwear draped on statues at her presidential palace.

Opening lead: Two of ♣

Even if for no other reason than partnership trust, it is usually correct to return partner's suit. However, if you can see that doing so will hand declarer his contract, feel free to branch out.

North-South reached a fair contract of four spades. Note that South's rebid of two hearts, a new suit by responder, was forcing for one round.

It was obvious to one and all that West's lead of the club deuce was a singleton. A careless East would win the ace and hasten to give his partner a ruff. The defenders would now be sure of three tricks, but that is all they would get. With the clubs established and trump entries to dummy, declarer would need no more than a modicum of care to make the rest of the tricks.

Fortunately for the defense, East could not only count but also was awake. If the defenders were to get a fourth trick, it would have to come from the diamond suit. On the auction, it was likely that West had three trumps. Since he held the king of spades behind the ace, East realized there was no hurry to give his partner a club ruff.

Instead, he shifted to a diamond at trick two. Declarer rose with the ace (as the cards lie, it would not have helped to duck and later take a club discard on the queen of diamonds), and tried the ace of spades and another. In with the king, East shifted to a club and West's ruff was the setting trick.

East's defense is worth studying. There are many occasions where you can see that persevering with a suit immediately holds no future. In that case, cast around for greener pastures.

Fewer Americans at Cannes

WASHINGTON (LAT) — The fears of terrorist attacks were evident Thursday at the opening of the 39th Cannes Festival of Film, which started with a showing of "Pirates," director Roman Polanski's first film in eight years. Most of the American stars stayed away.

There are six American films among the 25 official entries, with four of them in competition for the Golden Palm grand prize.

Among the big American stars expected who did not show up were Walter Matthau; actor-producer Sylvester Stallone; Whoopie Goldberg, one of the stars of the entry "The Color Purple," and its director Steven Spielberg; and director Martin Scoreese and actress Ali McGraw.

One festival official said American cancellations were running as high as 50 percent. Motion Picture Association of America president Jack Valenti was one American scheduled to be there.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Bill Cosby says he may film some of his hit television show in Mississippi next fall, in part because it's "an unlikely choice," and officials are ready to roll out the red carpet.

Such a show, filmed in October, also would make a statement about the importance of the black colleges scatttered through the South and the help they are giving to black students, Cosby, 48, said in an interview with Chicago Tribune columnist Marilyn Beck, published Thursday.

There are no black colleges at Tupelo, but Tougaloo College director of development Renae Brantley said "The Cosby Show" had asked for information on the school about a month ago. Cosby has arranged for $50,000 in student scholarships to Tougaloo through his corporate sponsorships.

College president J. Herman Blake said Tougaloo has not been told when to expect a firm answer. Blake said the grandmother of Malcolm-Jamal Warner, a member of the NBC show's cast, had attended Tougaloo.

"I picked Mississippi because it was such an unlikely choice," Cosby said. "Mention Mississippi and you think of people in dirty pickup trucks."

Tupelo Mayor Jack Marshall said he was ready to welcome the Cosby crew and that "We would get all of our pickup trucks cleaned and really roll out the red carpet."

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Computer pioneer Steven Wozniak is graduating from the University of California, 15 years after first enrolling.

The designer of Apple Computer Inc.'s first computer said graduating from college was a goal since childhood. Another boyhood aspiration, he said, is to become an elementary school teacher.

Wozniak, 35, will graduate from UC Berkeley with a bachelor of arts degree in electrical engineering and computer sciences. His diploma will be issued in the name of Rocky Clark, the name he used during his 1981-82 academic year at Berkeley and this spring semester.

"I lived a whole year as Rocky, and a lot of people knew me by that name," Wozniak said. "That was the last time I could go to school and not be recognized by everybody."

• • •

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra cannot claim third-party pressure forced it to cancel an appearance by actress Vanessa Redgrave, state Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti told the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

Bellotti filed a friend-of-the-court brief on Miss Redgrave's behalf with the court, which on Wednesday heard arguments. U.S. District Court Judge Robert E. Keeton in 1984 set aside a $100,000 award to the actress, a vocal supporter of the Palestine Liberation Organization whose narration of Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex" was canceled amid protests.

The jury determined that the symphony had breached Miss Redgrave's $31,000 contract, but Keeton said Miss Redgrave did not prove that the orchestra had violated the state civil rights act and canceled the performance for fear of disruption and not because of Miss Redgrave's political beliefs.

Bellotti argued that defendants cannot excuse their actions because of third-party pressure or because they had no personal motive.

Orchestra attorney Robert Sullivan said, "The orchestra had its own First Amendment rights to put on the performance it wanted without disruption."

• • •

WASHINGTON (AP) — There was a cake, congratulations and even a chorus of "Happy Birthday," when two Republican senators organized a surprise party for Kansas City Royals pitcher Dennis Leonard's 35th birthday.

"Even when he pitches against the Yankees, I root for Dennis," said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato of New York, who organized the party Thursday with Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas.

Leonard, who once lived in New York state near the D'Amato family, "has gone on to greater things," Dole said. "He lives in the Midwest."

• • •

WASHINGTON (LAT) — Thursday was a big day for 12-year-old Amy Nelson. In town with a group of 15 elementary-school children from Kansas and nine adults, the St. Mary's school 6th-grader from Calina was visiting Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole's office in the Capitol when a call from Camp David came in.

President Reagan had called to thank Dole for his work on the budget and tax reform when the majority leader asked if Reagan would like to speak to a young visitor from Kansas.

Dole then passed the phone to Amy, who told the president about her trip. It wasn't until several moments after she said goodbye to the president that Amy realized just what had happened, and she began to cry.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Lucile Atcherson Curtis, the first woman to serve in the U.S. Foreign Service, died Thursday. She was 91.

During World War I, Mrs. Curtis and Anne Morgan, daughter of financier J.P. Morgan, helped establish the Society for Devastated France. She did relief work in France throughout the war and President Harding appointed her to the Foreign Service in 1922. Mrs. Curtis served in France, Switzerland, Haiti and Panama and resigned in 1927.

With the clubs established and trump entries to dummy, declarer would need no more than a modicum of care to make the rest of the tricks.

Fortunately for the defense, East could not only count but also was awake. If the defenders were to get a fourth trick, it would have to come from the diamond suit. On the auction, it was likely that West had three trumps. Since he held the king of spades behind the ace, East realized there was no hurry to give his partner a club ruff.

Instead, he shifted to a diamond at trick two. Declarer rose with the ace (as the cards lie, it would not have helped to duck and later take a club discard on the queen of diamonds), and tried the ace of spades and another. In with the king, East shifted to a club and West's ruff was the setting trick.

East's defense is worth studying. There are many occasions where you can see that persevering with a suit immediately holds no future. In that case, cast around for greener pastures.

WATCHES

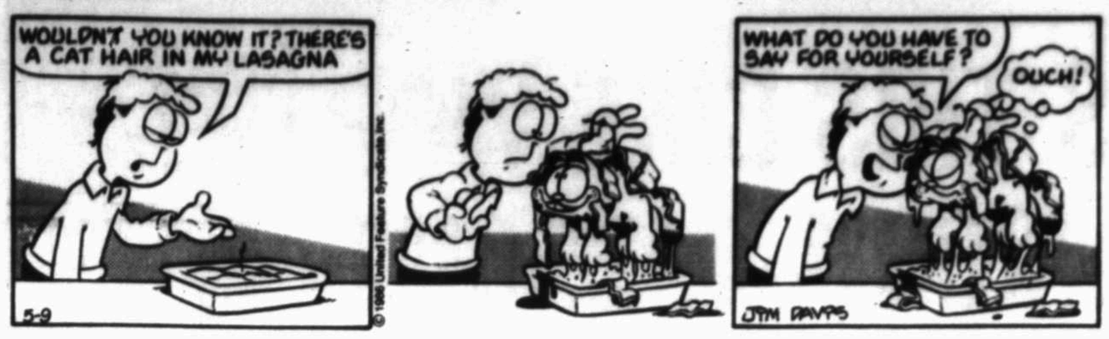

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Fewer Americans at Cannes

WASHINGTON (LAT) — The fears of terrorist attacks were evident Thursday at the opening of the 39th Cannes Festival of Film, which started with a showing of "Pirates," director Roman Polanski's first film in eight years. Most of the American stars stayed away.

There are six American films among the 25 official entries, with four of them in competition for the Golden Palm grand prize.

Among the big American stars expected who did not show up were Walter Matthau; actor-producer Sylvester Stallone; Whoopie Goldberg, one of the stars of the entry "The Color Purple,' and its director Steven Spielberg; and director Martin Scoreese and actress Ali McGraw.

One festival official said American cancellations were running as high as 50 percent. Motion Picture Association of America president Jack Valenti was one American scheduled to be there.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Bill Cosby says he may film some of his hit television show in Mississippi next fall, in part because it's "an unlikely choice," and officials are ready to roll out the red carpet.

Such a show, filmed in October, also would make a statement about the importance of the black colleges scatttered through the South and the help they are giving to black students, Cosby, 48, said in an interview with Chicago Tribune columnist Marilyn Beck, published Thursday.

There are no black colleges at Tupelo, but Tougaloo College director of development Renae Brantley said "The Cosby Show" had asked for information on the school about a month ago. Cosby has arranged for $50,000 in student scholarships to Tougaloo through his corporate sponsorships.

College president J. Herman Blake said Tougaloo has not been told when to expect a firm answer. Blake said the grandmother of Malcolm-Jamal Warner, a member of the NBC show's cast, had attended Tougaloo.

"I picked Mississippi because it was such an unlikely choice," Cosby said. "Mention Mississippi and you think of people in dirty pickup trucks."

Tupelo Mayor Jack Marshall said he was ready to welcome the Cosby crew and that "We would get all of our pickup trucks cleaned and really roll out the red carpet."

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Computer pioneer Steven Wozniak is graduating from the University of California, 15 years after first enrolling.

The designer of Apple Computer Inc.'s first computer said graduating from college was a goal since childhood. Another boyhood aspiration, he said, is to become an elementary school teacher.

Wozniak, 35, will graduate from UC Berkeley with a bachelor of arts degree in electrical engineering and computer sciences. His diploma will be issued in the name of Rocky Clark, the name he used during his 1981-82 academic year at Berkeley and this spring semester.

"I lived a whole year as Rocky, and a lot of people knew me by that name," Wozniak said. "That was the last time I could go to school and not be recognized by everybody."

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra cannot claim third-party pressure forced it to cancel an appearance by actress Vanessa Redgrave, state Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti told the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

Bellotti filed a friend-of-the-court brief on Miss Redgrave's behalf with the court, which on Wednesday heard arguments. U.S. District Court Judge Robert E. Keeton in 1984 set aside a $100,000 award to the actress, a vocal supporter of the Palestine Liberation Organization whose narration of Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex" was canceled amid protests.

The jury determined that the symphony had breached Miss Redgrave's $31,000 contract, but Keeton said Miss Redgrave did not prove that the orchestra had violated the state civil rights act and canceled the performance for fear of disruption and not because of Miss Redgrave's political beliefs.

Bellotti argued that defendants cannot excuse their actions because of third-party pressure or because they had no personal motive.

Orchestra attorney Robert Sullivan said, "The orchestra had its own First Amendment rights to put on the performance it wanted without disruption."

WASHINGTON (AP) — There was a cake, congratulations and even a chorus of "Happy Birthday," when two Republican senators organized a surprise party for Kansas City Royals pitcher Dennis Leonard's 35th birthday.

"Even when he pitches against the Yankees, I root for Dennis," said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato of New York, who organized the party Thursday with Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas.

Leonard, who once lived in New York state near the D'Amato family, "has gone on to greater things," Dole said. "He lives in the Midwest."

WASHINGTON (LAT) — Thursday was a big day for 12-year-old Amy Nelson. In town with a group of 15 elementary-school children from Kansas and nine adults, the St. Mary's school 6th-grader from Calina was visiting Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole's office in the Capitol when a call from Camp David came in.

President Reagan had called to thank Dole for his work on the budget and tax reform when the majority leader asked if Reagan would like to speak to a young visitor from Kansas.

Dole then passed the phone to Amy, who told the president about her trip. It wasn't until several moments after she said goodbye to the president that Amy realized just what had happened, and she began to cry.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Lucile Atcherson Curtis, the first woman to serve in the U.S. Foreign Service, died Thursday. She was 91.

During World War I, Mrs. Curtis and Anne Morgan, daughter of financier J.P. Morgan, helped establish the Society for Devastated France. She did relief work in France throughout the war and President Harding appointed her to the Foreign Service in 1922. Mrs. Curtis served in France, Switzerland, Haiti and Panama and resigned in 1927.

Fallout, food: Agricultural consequences of crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Almost two weeks after the Soviet nuclear plant disaster, analysts believe the impact on agriculture in the Soviet Union and nearby countries will not be great, but say consequences must be monitored over time.

The impact is "nowhere near as bad as we first thought," said one government analyst who asked not to be identified. Dairy cows and milk, as well as water supplies for crops, animals and humans, pose the the most immediate problems.

There was general agreement among nuclear and agricultural experts that radiation damage to crops and animals would be dramatic only in the area immediately surrounding the plant at Chernobyl. That area is unimportant agriculturally.

The plant is located on the northwest corner of the Soviet Union's major breadbasket. Weather patterns at the time of the initial accident and in the days immediately thereafter carried air-borne radiation only across edges of fall-planted grains now growing and summer grain areas, where about one-fourth of the crop has been planted.

Experts said it also is too early to tell what the impact will be on European nations exposed to fallout, but they believe it will be limited. Polish authorities have ordered anti-radiation measures including dumping of milk.

Government analysts were reluctant to talk publicly, especially in view of Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng's directives. "I think it would be wrong to suggest various possibilities because it would be pure speculation," Lyng told a congressional committee.

Only Norton Strommen, the Agriculture Department's chief meterologist, who constantly monitored weather throughout the week after the disaster, spoke on the record.

He said that "we still leave most of the (Soviet) winter grain belt completely unexposed to contamination."

John Schnittker, a consultant and No. 2 Agriculture Department official during the Kennedy-Johnson administrations, said, "Damage to food supplies, especially grains, is probably rather limited."

In the immediate aftermath of the accident, world grain prices jumped upward.

Schnittker said, "I think it's time for the markets to calm down, and the markets have been obeying."

He said the world has enough grain to supply any possible Soviet needs "without any dramatic effect on prices."

Experts rate vulnerability of produce

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Here is a speculative look at the relative vulnerability of crops and livestock to fallout from the Soviet nuclear power plant accident, according to several experts:

Greatest vulnerability

— Dairy cows, especially grass-fed, and their milk. Byelorussia is a secondary milk-producing area of the Soviet Union, roughly comparable to the importance of Vermont in the United States.

— First cutting of hay

Medium vulnerability

— Sunflowers, potatoes and sugar beets, which are major crops in path of radioactivity.

— Beef cattle, with grass-fed more vulnerable

— Grain seeds (crops now growing may mature with normal appearance, but produce mutant seeds)

— Chickens and hogs, which are generally fed stored grain.

— Major crop grains (most of Soviet crop not in direct path of major fallout)

Experts said milk supplies were most vulnerable because cattle graze on grasses immediately exposed to fallout. Soviets, Eastern Europeans and Scandinavians all sent cows indoors.

"The immediate damage would seem to come from grass-fed cows that produce milk and maybe later on grass-fed cows that produce beef," Schnittker said.

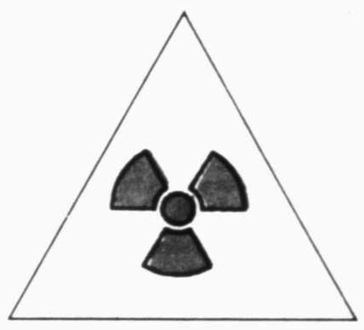

Another analyst said, "I think the most serious thing we've got to watch is the water supply." Water supplies for humans, livestock and crop irrigation could be contaminated.

The analyst said the Dnieper River near the plant could be a continuing problem because it flows through agricultural areas on its way to the Black Sea. Cows cannot produce milk without water.

An analyst said delay in reacting to the accident meant Soviet livestock grazed longer than they should have, but they have now been taken inside. Soviet farmers in the exposed region will probably have to forego the first cutting of hay this year.

"We won't know the effects for a long time," said one expert.

Psychological fallout considered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Russian people, who are more sensitive to nuclear dangers than Americans, may experience severe stress reactions for years to come as a result of the Chernobyl accident, say U.S. experts on crisis psychology.

Such reactions, including insomnia, hypertension and deep depression, "have effects on the body that could make radiation's impact more intense" by altering "the immune system ... and the functioning of the liver and kidneys," said Dr. Andrew Baum. He is a psychiatrist who has studied residents of the area around Three Mile Island, where America's worst nuclear accident occurred.

The psychological impact might be alleviated if the Soviet government provided crisis counseling services to residents of affected areas as quickly as possible, Baum reported.

But Soviet stoicism rules out the possibility of such counseling, said Dr. Walter Reich of the Woodrow Wilson International Center in Washington, even though state-run "neuropsychiatric dispensaries" can dispatch mental health workers where and when they are needed most.

Russians may panic even more because their leaders have in the past intentionally inflamed fears about nuclear dangers, said Reich, an authority on Soviet psychiatry.

The state-run news media have repeatedly publicized the threat of nuclear catastrophe from America, he said, and as a result, "Russians are more aware than we are of nuclear dangers in general ....

"There was one public campaign in 1982 that was so successful that it was stopped," the psychiatrist recalled, "because secret government polls revealed that the population was becoming too worried."

Baum, who continues to monitor the psychological aftermath of the Three Mile Island nuclear accident in Pennsylvania, says that the threat of radiation carries a special trauma because "you cannot see it or detect its presence, and (its) consequences include some of our most feared diseases."

Said Reich, "In this situation, lethality is invisible and insidious. With radioactivity, things you don't understand and can't see can kill you sooner or later."

The short-term effects can range from radiation sickness involving vomiting and diarrhea to slow and painful death. The long-term effects include a variety of cancers that might not show up for decades.

Faced with the threat of prolonged and suffering, residents in the vicinity of a nuclear accident are prey to a syndrome called "post-traumatic distress," says Baum, which is marked by elevated pulse and heart rates, chronic depression, insomnia and hypertension.

Research has shown that stress impairs the immune system and the metabolic capacity of the liver and the kidneys. This reduces the body's ability to ward off disease and, said Baum, could affect natural defenses against radiation poisoning.

POST-TRAUMATIC distress still afflicts residents near Three Mile Island, he said. "Some of the people we've been studying are still experiencing these effects ... and that's 7 years later.

"The last time I visited Three Mile Island, 30 percent to 40 percent of our subjects were still showing elevated levels of stress, including biological patterns that could produce illness."

Those residents may have to cope with a renewed sense of crisis, he added, as the Chernobyl disaster reminds of them of what they went through."

Shortly after the Three Mile Island accident, local community mental health centers began offering emergency services to residents. The Federal Emergency Management Agency routinely incorporates crisis counseling in programs for handling disasters.

If the Soviet government did decide to provide similar counseling, said Reich, the Soviet network of "neuropsychiatric dispensaries," which operate like U.S. mental health centers, is "in some ways better equipped to handle crisis counseling.

"There's no private practice," he reports. "Everything is run by the government, and mental health workers can be sent where they're most needed. Theoretically, it should be more effective."

But theory has been of little use to the people of Kiev and nearby. Reich alluded to the statement by the director of the Chernobyl nuclear plant that the chances of an accident at the reactor were one in 10,000.

"Well," said the psychiatrist, "We're in the year 10,000."

Caviar, vodka importers assess radioactive disaster

By JOHN DeMERS
UPI Food Editor

The Petrossians, caviar kings of Paris and New York, insist their product will not be affected by the Soviet nuclear disaster, but the only U.S. importer of Russian vodka is gearing up for stringent product testing.

Christian Petrossian, whose firm is only one with rights to choose caviar firsthand from fisheries on the Caspian Sea, said the spring catch of sturgeon was on ice weeks before the accident at Chernobyl.

In addition, he said the fish destined for future catches were swimming too deep to be contaminated — even if radiactivity from the site near Kiev headed their way.

"I don't think it's at all related," Petrossian said from his restaurant in New York, which serves a Royal Gourmet sampler of beluga, osetra and sevruga for $73. "It's not something people are really afraid of. Russia is really quite big."

PETROSSIAN, WHOSE forefathers worked out their deal with the Soviets immediately after the revolution, said most of the 40 tons of caviar brought into the United States each year from the Caspian comes from the mouths of the Volga and Ural rivers.

These sources are even farther from Chernobyl than Scandinavian countries that registered alarming but still non-injurious amounts of radiation after the disaster last weekend, he said.

According to Petrossian, there has been neither a run on Russian caviar nor a reluctance to buy the product. Currently, 100 grams (3.5 ounces) of beluga sells for $90, with osetra going for $60 and sevruga for $49.

OFFICIALS INVOLVED in importing Stolichnaya, the only Soviet vodka brought into the United States, said there was no word yet of the impact on wheat used to produce the spirit.

Stolichnaya is distilled in Leningrad, but the wheat comes from different parts of the Soviet Union.

A spokesperson for Stolichnaya said all bottles currently in the United States were distilled months before the accident, with the latest shipment arriving at the end of March.

Even so, importer Monsieur Henri of White Plains, N.Y., is preparing to add special radioactivity tests to those already conducted on all its imported wines and spirits.

Spokesperson Della Snider said there was no evidence drinkers were turning away from Stolichnaya because of any perceived nuclear threat.

"If any situation like that were to become evident, the first thing we'd do is assure consumers the vodka they're seeing is 100 percent safe," she said. "The second thing would be to communicate as best we can the quality control measures we're taking."

DEAR ABBY

Teen-aged virgin wonders how far is too far

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old college student, and even though I've dated quite a bit, I'm rather naive about sex. I am still a virgin and hope to remain one until I marry. Don't get me wrong, I'm no "Goody Two Shoes," but I don't want to risk an unwanted pregnancy.

I'm dating a guy right now who has been around. He knows how I feel about sex before marriage, so he's never pressured me to go all the way, but I've come closer with him than I have with any other guy. I'm ashamed to tell you how far we've gone, but I'm still a virgin (I think).

A long time ago you explained how a virgin could get pregnant. I'm sorry I didn't save it, but I never dreamed I'd need it.

Well, last night I was with this guy and things really got out of hand. Everything happened so fast. Please run that piece again about how a virgin can get pregnant. I'm worried. — B., ST. PAUL

DEAR B.: The piece is from my booklet, "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know." Many junior and senior high school teachers wrote to say that they had read it aloud to their students:

HOW TO GET PREGNANT

One of the questions I have been asked often by teens is: "How far can I go without getting pregnant?"

That is not a dumb question. It's a very intelligent one. A lot of kids get aroused by just lying close to each other while kissing. Then they just naturally proceed to the next step, which is petting.

Sometimes they remove some of their clothing because it's "in the way," or they burrow underneath it to explore each other's bodies with their hands. This is known as heavy petting, or "doing everything else but."

The technical (and legal) definition of sexual intercourse is "penetration." (The male's sex organ must penetrate the female's.) However, as impossible as it may sound, in the medical literature can be found cases where there has been no penetration — the girl remained a virgin, but after engaging in heavy petting, she found herself pregnant.

How can that be? Simple.

The boy and girl were lying very close to each other (unclothed), doing "everything but," when a small amount of sperm leaked out ... near (not inside, but very close to) the girl's vagina. The sperm got into the moisture around the vagina and found its way up into it, and fertilized the egg!

DEAR ABBY: Seven years ago I had an abortion. At the time it was the only way out of a very bad situation. (It was either that, or suicide.) I am a baptized Catholic, so I know that I was automatically excommunicated from the Catholic Church when I had the abortion. I haven't been to church since.

I want so much to confess and receive some kind of absolution, but I can't face going to the confessional. I'm afraid the priest will throw me out and ask me not to return.

Will you please ask one of your priest friends if there is some way to return to the church after excommunication? I am sure there are other Catholics who would like to know. — TORMENTED SOUL

DEAR TORMENTED: Go to confession. The priest will not throw you out. A Catholic is forgiven the sin when he or she truly repents. If you lack the courage to face your own parish priest, go to another parish.

DEAR ABBY: This is to express my appreciation for printing that excellent poem, "Slow Me Down, Lord." At 91 years old, I am memorizing it to use in some of my meetings with older persons. Gratefully, THE REV. H.T. MILLER, ANDERSON, IND.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Chernobyl cloud casts shadow over travel

United Press International

"Last week we were saying, 'If you don't want to go to Europe, go to Russia.' Let me tell you, Hawaii is looking better all the time." — Dan Bohan, vice president, Omega World Travel.

First it was terrorism. Now, Russia's nuclear cloud. Fear of foreign disasters has triggered an urge to see America, and tourism experts predict that 1986 could be the biggest year yet in domestic travel.

"Since the Libya situation, we're down between 50 to 60 percent on North Atlantic air trips to Europe," said Willard Brown, vice-president of travel agency services for the American Automobile Association. "To the Mediterranean basin, it's down a good 75 to 80 percent."

One major charter company also reported a "drastic" reduction in European bookings — this after a record summer when 6 million people flew to the Continent.

"Last year we took about 30,000 passengers (to Europe) — this year we expect maybe 8,000," said a spokesman for Charter Travel Corp. in Chicago.

Travel agents predict the Chernobyl nuclear plant explosion will decrease tourism to the Soviet Union, Scandinavian countries and Eastern Europe, despite Russia's effort to communicate "all's well".

A letter sent to travel agents from the Intourist office in New York, the Soviet agency that controls all tours to Russia, stated there were no restrictions on travel to the Soviet Union in the aftermath of the explosion. It stressed that even Kiev would be "perfectly safe".

"Intourist is saying, 'It's business as usual,'" said a spokeswoman for American Express Travel Related Services. "It makes me so angry. Basically, we're at their mercy.

"We do feel tourism to Russia will be affected," she said. "We had a few cancellations on a tour going to Russia this week, and I would think over the next few days, we would get more."

"We thought it would be a banner year for Russia, because tourists consider it safe from terrorism," said Dan Bohan, vice president of Omega World Travel, a Virginia firm with 32 branches.

AAA executive Brown added that travel to Russia is "looking pretty flat."

With new flights to the Soviet Union, Pan American World Airways claimed it has yet to feel the crunch. "We certainly haven't seen any adverse effect yet," said Merle Richman, a spokesman for the airline. "People who have reservations for this summer will wait and see what happens."

However, "I would certainly not be picnicking in a park in Kiev today," said Leigh Kimball, a vice president of Ask Mr. Foster, a company of 400 American offices.

AT WIT'S END

Traveling with tour group can be 'trip' itself

By ERMA BOMBECK

As we approach the prime time of vacations, many of you are wrestling with the pros and cons of joining a tour group or going off by yourself.

We have done both, and I'm here to tell you keeping up with a tour is not for sissies. Everyone thinks it's a free ride because your luggage is taken care of, your rooms are reserved, your menus are preplanned and you don't even have to carry your own airline tickets. Many things, however, are your responsibilities.

■ "Remember your bus number." On a typical three-week tour, you will average 35 buses each from a different country with a different driver. If you are in Germany, the bus driver will be Asian. If you are in Spain, the driver will be Russian. If you have matched up a French driver to a French bus, you are on the wrong bus.

■ "Remember your guide." That too will vary. Every guide, since the beginning of tourism, has tried to have some distinguishing form of identification. That is why in the Tower of London you will have 35 English guides with unopened umbrellas hoisted in the air beckoning you to follow. On a clear day at a Greek ruin, there are so many white handkerchiefs being waved, you'd think the entire country was surrendering.

■ "Remember to put your luggage outside the door by 6 a.m." This is harder than it sounds. As a person who is intimidated by rules, I cannot tell you the times I have lugged a suitcase into a hallway only to discover my husband's arm still in it grappling for clean underwear.

■ "Remember what country you are in." When you are whipping in and out of buses, on and off planes, boats and hydrofoils, it's often a challenge to know where you are. You cannot wish someone back home was "here" if you don't know where you are.

A tour carries with it certain social responsibilities. You are not an island. There are the mental aerobics each morning that you exchange with other members of the tour. This includes (a) keeping track of who has irregularities and what they are doing about it, (b) who has lost luggage and where it is today, (c) who got the "broom closet" room in the last city and how did they fare in the one last night, (d) whose camera stopped functioning and did the one that stopped functioning yesterday get fixed, (e) sundry gossip about the man who refuses to get into a single line when he is told, the woman who hangs her laundry from the balcony of a luxurious hotel, and the man who carries extra booze in hollow binoculars around his neck.

Add to all this the fact that a tour travels on its continental breakfast and it's lucky there aren't more mutinies aboard tour buses than there are. I would not be surprised if one day there is all-out war in some little European village where travelers turn on a tour company guide and assault him with hard rolls and canned orange juice.

Having said all of this ... Bon Appetrip!

Fear of fallout felt around world

United Press International

No one knows how much radiation Soviets near the nuclear power plant in Chernobyl have been exposed to, but the impact of the accident has been felt around the world.

In Poland and Romania, iodine tablets were issued to protect children against airborne radioactive iodine from the disaster. The U.S. State Department warned against travel to Poland, and Austria warned children not to play in sandboxes.

Meteorologists said countries threatened by fallout also included Italy, Switzerland, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Greece and Albania, West Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Radiation reached the south coast of Britain, but posed no hazard, officials said.

Dr. Frank Young, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, said radiation would have reached lethal levels within two to three miles of the plant immediately after the explosion and fire last week.

Slightly weaker levels of radiation high enough to cause serious health problems would have been present up to seven miles from the giant reactor, Young told a news conference.

Experts said dangerous levels of radiation should not be detected in the United States, but people were concerned nevertheless.

"Most of the worries are because of ignorance," said Dr. Oscar Hunter, a professor of clinical pathology at Georgetown University Medical Center.

"We just feel there is no radiation hazard" to Americans, said Dr. Darrell McIndoe, director of nuclear medicine at St. Joseph Hospital in Towson, Md.

Some 'background' radioactivity inescapable

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Radiation is silent, invisible, odorless — and everywhere.

Every person on earth is being constantly bombarded with low levels of natural radiation from cosmic rays and tiny amounts of radioactive elements in soil, water, rock, food and the human body itself. But the level of this "background" radiation — about 100 millirems — is so low that its effect on human health cannot be measured.

At very high doses, such as apparently occurred last week at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant in the Soviet Union, radiation can be lethal. But at low doses, such as from background sources or the expected fallout in the United States from the Chernobyl accident, radiation is much less harmful.

All radiation has some effect on the body. An expert panel of the National Academy of Sciences concluded in 1980 that there is no threshhold below which radiation has no adverse effect on human health. But the exact nature and extent of the effect of low-level radiation is still unknown.

"The main thing for the public to understand is that with radiation, it's not all or nothing," said Dr. Niel Wald, chairman of the department of radiation health at the University of Pittsburgh School of Public Health. "Many people think (wrongly) that if it's radiation, you're harmed; and if it's not, you're not."

Normal background radiation comes from three basic sources:

■ Cosmic rays and other high-energy radiation from the sun and outer space. A five-hour transcontinental flight at 39,000 feet, above the protective layer of the earth's atmosphere, exposes a passenger to about 2.5 millirems of cosmic radiation.

■ Terrestrial radiation from naturally occurring radioactive elements, including radium and uranium in soil and rocks. Granite, for example, gives off minute but measurable amounts of radiation.

■ Natural radioactive substances in all living things, including food and human tissues. These "internal emitters," such as potassium-40, carbon-14 and radium-226, "have been around for millions of years," said Neal Nelson, a radiobiologist in the Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Radiation Programs. "They're in everything — trees, frogs, everything."

Radiation measured in rads, rems

Washington Post News Service

Radiation is commonly measured in units called roentgens, rads and rems:

■ A roentgen, named for the German physicist who discovered X-rays, is a somewhat obsolete measure of the energy in X-rays or gamma rays. It is slightly less than a rad.

■ A rad (radiation absorbed dose) is a measure of the energy deposited by ionizing radiation when it is absorbed by an object.

■ A rem (an acronym for *R*oentgen *E*quivalent in *M*an) is a measure of the biological effect of ionizing radiation. Different types of radiation cause different amounts of damage.

The rem measurement includes a correction factor for this difference. With X-rays, for example, rads and rems are equivalent. But for high-energy alpha particles, the effect due to one rad reaches 10 rems.

One rad or one rem is a substantial dose of radiation. Smaller doses are measured in millirads (thousandths of a rad) or millirems (thousandths of rem).

SHELBY'S CORNER

Caroll Shelby created the Shelby Cobras that became sports car legends. Before that he was named U.S. "Sports Car Driver Of The Year" three times. Tody, he specializes in hot chili, Texas style and hot cars as director of the Chrysler Shelby California Development Center. He welcomes your questions about cars and performance.

SPONSOR FOR A RACE CAR? ANTI-LOCK BRAKES FOR EVERYONE?

CURE FOR STUTTERS? ENGINE SWAP OK?

Q. How do I get a sponsor for my race car?

-- Mary H., Tulsa, Okla.

A. You'd be surprised how many big-name drivers ask that same question every year, Mary. Many sponsors will give you their product or a reduced price if you put their decal on your car. But, if you are talking serious money, then you've got to look at things the way sponsors do. What are they going to get back -- publicity, advertising or promotion opportunities? They'll get publicity because you're a woman in what is still mostly a man's field. But, that can backfire if you don't win. Chrysler was one of the few sponsors dragracer Shirley Muldowney had until she won the first of her three world championships. That's true of advertising and promotion too. Sponsors prefer to advertise a winner or bring their customers to watch a winner. You don't have to win every race but you need to have the potential. If you're really after major help you'd be smart to get a motorsports marketing agent. He or she will help you put together your case and take it to the most likely sponsors.

Q. Are anti-lock brakes just for enthusiasts?

-- Warren P., Atlanta, G.

A. They're probably for everyone, Warren. There are a few situations where an expert drive might not want them, for example on a gravel road the traction is needed from a wheel that can dig in. Otherwise, its probably an advantage to have a reliable sensor that keeps your wheels from locking and sending you car into an uncontrolled skid. That's pretty handy on ice or wet pavements or when something causes you to hit the brakes hard. ABS braking will become more and more common as the price comes down.

Q. My used 4-speed GMC pickup has only 34,000 miles but it stutters bad in first and not in higher gears. What's the problem?

-- Steve M., Charlotte, N.C.

A. After we eliminate driver error, Steve, the fellows in the Shelby Center garages guess that it could be oil leaking on the clutch, a burned out clutch lining or broken motor mounts. A good mechanic should be able to diagnose the problem.

Q. If I swap a 289 Ford Motor for the 350 in my '79 Pontiac Ventura, will I have problems with the gear ratio and emissions?

-- Merle H., Glendora, Calif.

A. You shouldn't have any problems with the gear ratio if you really want to go to all the work you mentioned in your letter, Merle. As far as emissions are concerned, you'll have to pass the standards for the engine for the body whichever is newer.

QUESTION FOR CARROLL SHELBY?

Today, the Audi 5000S becomes even easier to handle. $298 a month*.

The Audi 5000S sedan's ability to negotiate roadways crisply and efficiently is certainly one reason to admire it. That you can negotiate a lease of just $298 a month on this fine European luxury sedan is all the more reason to acquire it.

Performance aside, this 1986 Audi 5000S sedan comes with many standard features that increase comfort without altering the lease price. Electronic climate control, cruise control, power windows and door locks, AM/FM stereo cassette, and automatic transmission make this limited time offer a tempting invitation to unlimited driving pleasure.

A closer look will prove what words cannot. Come in for a test drive and complete lease details. Program ends May 31, 1986. And drive away in an Audi 5000S sedan at a lease price that is, well, easy to handle.

*This offer is available only from a participating Audi Leasing dealer through May 31, 1986 as a 60-month, closed-end lease. No purchase option. No down payment is required. First month $298 payment and $300 security deposit are required in advance. Monthly payments are based on manufacturer's suggested retail price and special lease terms exteded by VCI Leasing. Total lease payments $17,880.00 plus 10¢ per mile over 75,000. Registration, local fees, tax, options additional.
