Dems, moderates work on details of new crime bill, prepare to vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats and moderate Republicans talked into the wee hours of today to nail down the details of a new $30 billion crime bill while an alternative that would strip out all crime-prevention funds and the ban on assault-style firearms had supporters of the compromise running scared.

House and Senate conferees were meeting at midnight to hammer out the final package — hours later than they had been expected — and votes were not expected until hours later on the House floor.

There was talk of delaying floor action until this afternoon.

Reagan aide seeks probe

Book claims ex-president sacrificed oil industry

■ Administration waged secret war to hasten fall of Soviet Union, author writes.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Don Hodel, former energy secretary under President Reagan, has called for a congressional investigation into alleged manipulation of oil prices during the Reagan years.

Hodel's request comes following publication of the book "Victory," in which author Peter Schweizer claims that the Reagan Administration executed a secret economic war to hasten the fall of the Soviet Union, and that part of the plan called for lower oil prices designed to cripple the economy of the Soviet Union and bring about its downfall.

"I laud the goals of the policy, but I wish we had been able to structure a way to keep it from killing the domestic energy industry. Let's face it, oil got clobbered," Hodel told the Reporter-Telegram Friday.

According to the book, the key players in the strategy were Reagan, CIA Director William Casey, Casper Weinberger, George Schultz, John Poindexter, Robert McFarland, William Clark and a handful of other national security types. All but Casey, now deceased, were interviewed by Schweizer.

However, there is little mention of Hodel or then-Vice President George Bush in Schweizer's book, giving weight to claims that they were "out of the loop."

While many foreign policy experts say the secret strategy probably played a major role in the eventual demise of communism, others contend it also devastated the U.S. oil industry. Economists have estimated that the oil price crashes of 1982 and 1986 resulted in the loss of as many as 500,000 jobs, as hundreds of independent oil companies were forced to declare bankruptcy and major oil companies downsized. The economies of Texas and other oil producing states, were crippled, and this helped trigger the failure of hundreds of banks and brought about the national banking crisis of the 1980s.

"If the domestic oil industry was made to walk the plank in the interest of bringing down the Soviet Union," Hodel said, "it should be investigated by Congress and become part of the public record. This is a group of people who were sacrificed in a global cause for freedom and their story, until now, has never been told."

Hodel, now co-chairman of People for an Energy Policy, a Houston-based energy group, said he also thought "support reparations" were in order for the oil industry, perhaps in the form of tax incentives and a loosening of "overstringent environmental regulations."

For more than a decade rumors, speculation and innuendos persisted in the oil industry and in certain government circles that Reagan had indeed engineered the low oil prices that pre-

Rash of vandalism hits area, marring homes, vehicles

Staff Report

Midland police officers investigated a rash of vandalism early Saturday morning.

Numerous Midland residences, fences, walls and cars fell victim to spray painters.

Shortly before 4 a.m., officers responded to a call on criminal mischief and auto burglary in the 4700 block of Elma Drive. They found several vehicles in the blocks of Elma Drive and Mark Lane had been spray painted with obscenities. Some residences and fences had also been spray painted.

Blue spray paint marred a yellow garage door at 3110 Elma. Graffiti was painted on the sidewalk in front of the residence and on the yield sign at the intersection of Elma and Aspen.

A large white Isuzu trailer truck parked on Aspen was covered with blue and black paint. "It's a shame people have to destroy other people's property to have fun," said Ignacio Suarez, a Midland painter who was looking for work to repaint houses in the Wydewood area. "This is a nice neighborhood. People take pride in their homes."

Five vandalism incidents occurred on Mark Lane, four on Elma, some on Aspen, Fannin and Wydewood streets.

Police had no suspects Saturday night. One police officer noted reports of similar vandalism were still coming in Saturday evening.

Deadly force: Police department's guidelines 'leave no stone unturned'

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Before an officer may discharge his firearm — as was the case Tuesday when a Midland man was fatally shot — he must exhaust all other physical alternatives to restrain a suspect or defuse a situation.

And, if deadly force is used, the officer's actions are placed under investigation by the Police Department and a grand jury to decide if the actions were justified.

"We have set up guidelines that leave no stone unturned," said Lt. Jerry Compton, who sits on the department's Administrative Review Board. "We have to prove if the officer is justified, beyond doubt, in taking someone's life."

Compton said the Midland Police Department has a "model policy" involving use of force and follow-up investigation.

Principals crack down with harsh punishments for violent behavior

Associated Press

With the opening of a new school year, Texas parents are finding some educators have adopted a policy of zero-tolerance toward violent behavior.

In Dallas, two kindergartners were suspended for a fist fight.

In suburban Houston, a 13-year-old was expelled for scratching a classmate with a house key.

The parents of the students involved call the punishment excessive. But educators say it's necessary to prove that rules aren't made to be broken.

Ronald Rife, principal of Charles A. Gill Elementary School in Dallas, makes no apologies for suspending for three days two kindergartners who got into a fist fight while their teacher escorted another student to the nurse's office.

"Basically what we we're trying to do is stop the violence at the lowest level possible. If you coddle them early you're never going to stop it," he said.

But Lisa Pedford, mother of suspended 5-year-old Christopher Willis, says the punishment was too extreme.

"I just didn't feel it was right," she said "When we were kids, we had to stay in from recess or something. I feel they should have handled it another way."

Miss Pedford said she explained the rules, but her son's too young to understand the punishment.

"Christopher got up this morning and he cried because he couldn't go to school. ... He just keeps asking me why he can't go to school."

Dallas Independent School District Superintendent Chad Woolery said Rife acted within policy when he suspended the boys.

Rife said the school this year decided to adopt a "zero-tolerance" policy on violence and has the backing of the school's PTA president.

Clear Creek school district officials have taken a similar stance.

Karen Hancock says her 13-year-old son was expelled from the fall semester for scratching a classmate with a house key two weeks before the last school year ended. Jonathan Hancock also has been stripped of the credits he earned last spring while a seventh-grader at Creekside Intermediate School in League City.

"I'm not saying my child should not have been punished," Ms. Hancock said. "I do think he should. I believe children need to face the consequences for their actions. His behavior was inappropriate, but you don't take away a year of their life — and especially their educational life."

Ms. Hancock said she and her ex-husband, Karl Hancock, appeared before the school board to ask trustees to instead make their son perform community service or attend Saturday detention classes.

"We offered for him to go to the school and clean the bathrooms, paint, anything, just don't take away his education," she said. "They said no."

District spokeswoman Elaine Stoermer said she could not discuss Jonathan's expulsion because of privacy rules and because he is a minor.

UT Law School officials claim victory

N.Y. Times News Service

Officials at the University of Texas Law School were claiming a near complete victory Saturday, after a federal judge ruled on Friday that, although the school's affirmative action policies were technically unconstitutional, the school did not have to admit the four students who had challenged those policies.

The case could have a far-reaching impact because law schools and other professional institutions across the country have adopted similar policies.

Judge Sam Sparks of Federal District Court in Austin ruled that the university had technically violated the constitutional rights of four whites who applied for admission to the law school in 1992 and later sued the university claiming they were victims of reverse discrimination.

Sparks said the law school had been wrong to use separate admissions committees to evaluate minority and non-minority applicants.

Affirmative action, he said, "does not imply that the individual rights of non-minorities should fall by the wayside or be ignored."

But, despite what they saw as a rather technical reprimand, university officials were clearly pleased that the ruling did not require them to admit the plaintiffs.

In interviews Saturday, they said the decision would have the effect of strengthening the legal foundations for the affirmative action policies followed nationally, including the common practice of applying lower standards to minority candidates than are applied to white applicants.

"It's a real victory for affirmative action policies in universities, because it concludes that they are necessary, that they are constitutionally required, and that they are proper," Robert Berdahl, the president of the University of Texas, said in a telephone interview. "We are very, very happy."

The case was seen as the most substantial challenge to affirmative action since 1978 when the U.S. Supreme Court issued a landmark decision in the case that has been come to be known as Bakke.

In that case, the Supreme Court, by a 5-to-4 decision, found that Allan P. Bakke had suffered reverse discrimination when he was denied admission to the medical school of the University of California at Davis. At the same time, however, the Court upheld the legality of affirmative action, saying it was permissible to take race into account in admissions so long as race was not the sole or primary factor.

Saddam bans alcohol in many public places

BAGHDAD, Iraq (NYT) — With little food available after four years of sanctions, eating out in Baghdad is not much fun these days. But President Saddam Hussein made it even gloomier recently by abruptly banning the sale of alcohol in hotels, bars, clubs and restaurants.

Drinking at home is still permitted. But in the future only members of the minority Christian population and other non-Muslims will be allowed to stock alcohol in stores, which must be at least 200 yards from any mosque.

As usual in this secretive country, Saddam offered no explanation for a move that runs contrary to the secular principles his governing Baath Party has always espoused in the past.

But the decision infuriated his eldest son, Udai, who publicly criticized it in his newspaper Babil, saying banning alcohol encourages Islamic fundamentalism and would wreck Baghdad's reputation as a comfortable, easygoing city.

In the view of many diplomats and Iraqis, the banning of alcohol is another sign of Saddam's growing frustration with economic sanctions as they grind away at Iraqi living standards. It also reflects a new tendency to involve himself personally in trying to improve living conditions, an effort that so has had meager results.

Before the Persian Gulf war in 1991, Johnny Walker Black was almost the national drink, but only the very rich can afford to drink Scotch these days. And at least part of Saddam's purpose in banning the public consumption of alcohol, many Iraqis believe, is to appease an impoverished middle class resentful of the speculators and professional criminals who alone have the money to drink Johnny Walker in Baghdad's nightclubs, restaurants and bars.

Another, more cynical explanation circulating among diplomats is that Udai Hussein, who is believed to have a monopoly on Scotch imports into Iraq, plans to use the new licensing system to tighten his control over the trade.

Of course, the ban on alcohol also appeals to the religious.

SACRIFICE: Book claims Reagan damaged domestic oil

vailed during his administration, and that they were somehow part of larger and more secret agenda. Reagan insiders, however, persistently denied that this was official policy.

Now Schweizer's book, which leans heavily upon interviews with many of those allegedly involved in the so-called secret agenda, seems to confirm the suspicions.

Hodel was Under Secretary of Interior from 1981-1982, and became Secretary of Energy in 1982. In 1985, he moved back to the Interior Department as Secretary. Yet, he says the Reagan economic war to bring about the collapse of communism was so secret that not even he knew about it.

Now, with the publication of "Victory," including the numerous interviews with Reagan insiders, there has been considerable speculation as to why those officials are now so willing to talk.

Larry Strahan, president of People for an Energy Policy, told the Reporter-Telegram that the group's co-chairman, Robert O. Anderson, has a theory.

He said Anderson, founder of ARCO, has suggested that the downfall of communism has become one of the most significant events in modern history, and that all the participants want to make certain they are not left out of the history books.

After a review of the book, which has already sold out several times in oil towns like Houston and Midland, Hodel noted: "It helps to explain now, why so many of my ideas didn't have a lot of lift and couldn't get off the ground." Hodel said he remembers how he "went to the wall" for an oil import fee to help stabilize oil prices and got shot down.

Still he doesn't feel betrayed: "I was not a part of security. There was no need for them to tell me. But, I wish I had known. I like to think that maybe I could have saved the oil industry some pain, had I known."

According to Schweizer, a best-selling author who completed the book as a media fellow at the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, the economic war plan to capitalize upon Soviet weaknesses was hatched by Reagan insiders as soon as he took office in 1981.

The plan to drop oil prices was devised by Reagan and Casey, after a vulnerability study showed the USSR dependent on oil exports for more than 60 percent of its hard cash — cash it needed desperately to carry on its programs, the book states.

That study further noted that each time the price of oil increased a dollar it meant $1 billion a year to Moscow to finance Soviet expansion, and every time it dropped a dollar it cost $1 billion.

Casey shared that information with the members of the royal family of Saudi Arabia, devout anti-communists, in an effort to gain an ally that could control oil prices and dry up Soviet revenues, according to Schweizer.

That plan along with an unwritten promise (the Saudis did not want a formal written treaty) that

"If it is true that Reagan secretly sold America's energy industry down the river as part of a global strategy to defeat the Soviet Union, the oil industry should be given reparations in the form of support . . . removing harsh and unnecessary regulations and taxes, and by an energy policy that endorses a sustainable energy future and prevents OPEC from manipulating oil prices.'

— Larry Strahan
president of People for an Energy Policy

the U.S. would provide military protection and that the Reagan administration would be a Saudi advocate in Congress was apparently enough to convince the Saudis to become a willing participant in the economic war against the USSR, the book states.

Only the Saudis could bring oil prices down to a level that could cripple the Soviets. But it also damaged the U.S. domestic oil industry. And, according to the book's author, that apparently was a tradeoff the Reagan team found acceptable. In none of the Saudi discussions is it indicated that Casey made mention of the consequences to the U.S. oil industry.

Schweizer's vivid account of how Reagan used CIA Chief Casey to engineer the collapse of oil prices has left many in the industry outraged.

"If it is true that Reagan secretly sold America's energy industry down the river as part of a global strategy to defeat the Soviet Union — and it appears to be very true — the oil industry should be given reparations in the form of support. The support would include: removing harsh and unnecessary regulations and taxes, and by an energy policy that endorses a sustainable energy future and prevents OPEC from manipulating oil prices," Strahan told the Reporter-Telegram Friday.

He said that while the defeat of communism was a laudable goal, it was unconscionable that it was achieved at the expense of men and women in the energy industry.

"All of us in the oil industry wondered why Reagan wasn't doing anything about the collapse of oil prices. Now we know," said Ed Thompson, who was executive director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association during the Reagan years. "We sent several letters to Reagan, pleading with him to do something to save the oil industry, but all we got back were form letters. We helped elect him to office twice and he betrayed us. Communism would have fallen anyway."

Thompson said there was always a suspicion among most in the oil industry that they were being made to walk the plank for some reason. "But we didn't think it was about Russia." Most, he said, thought it was about keeping oil prices low to build the economy.

Some even thought Reagan's perceived inattention to the oil industry was all about the administration's conservative principals of "not interfering with free markets."

Said Hodel: "They always told me they didn't want to interfere with free markets, but I guess I didn't know how much of a free market that it wasn't."

Hodel said he might have been disinclined to believe much of the accounts in "Victory," had it not been for an article in the August issue of Forbes Magazine, in which Caspar Weinberger praised the book and called it "accurate and well researched."

"He did not say it was 'roughly' accurate. If anyone was in a position to know if the book was accurate it would have been Weinberger."

The Reporter-Telegram was unable to contact Weinberger for this article.

Schweizer is not the only person to report the "secret economic war" and subsequent 60 percent drop in oil prices. Russian historian Sergei Sefchuk, at a recent seminar in Paris, said Russian archives, available for the first time, confirm that the 1985-86 collapse of oil prices was deliberate and began the process that led to the Soviet Union's sudden downfall. Sefchuk called the Reagan strategy "totally successful."

According to news reports, the historian said that, according to Soviet intelligence reports in the Russian archives, U.S. officials promised that the Saudi royal family would not suffer the same fate as the shah of Iran and that was all the incentive the Saudis needed.

The Russian specialist estimated the cost to the Soviet economy at more than $12 billion over the next four years — at the very moment that the then new Soviet leader, Mikhail Gorbachev, was counting on a boost in hard currency income to modernize the country's obsolete industries.

That marked the start of a "relentless downward spiral leading to the Soviet Union's doom" in 1991, according to Sefchuk.

Hodel did tell the Reporter-Telegram that Schweizer's book should give America a new shot at reviving the discussion on oil and energy, and provide a reason for "developing a long-term sustainable energy policy."

He said America should be developing natural gas, natural gas vehicles, and all forms of energy in order to back out of the economic impact and influence of foreign oil. "Some will tell you that it doesn't matter where you buy your oil, because it all comes back in the form of investments and jobs. That's a lie."

Hodel said America is better off paying itself $50 a barrel for oil than paying a foreign country $15 a barrel, noting that the cost of maintaining troops, ships and planes to send half way around the world to protect foreign oil is not factored into the cost of gasoline. "Gasoline is a heavily subsidized product," he said.

WEATHER WATCH

Today to be cloudy, low 90s

Today's forecast is mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thundershowers, winds northeast 5-15 mph, becoming east in the afternoon, and a high in the low 90s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is expected to be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 60s, the NWS said.

Monday's forecast is partly cloudy with a high in the lower 90s.

Yesterday's high was 96, compared to the record high of 105, set in 1986. The record low for today's date is 54, set in 1947.

STATE

Scattered thunderstorms fell across parts of Texas on Saturday, some dumping heavy rains and downing power lines and trees.

In North Texas, several severe thunderstorm warnings were issued as a line of storms moved through the area. Trees and power lines were reported down in Denton, Grayson, Parker and Titus counties, while 4 inches of rain was recorded in Wise County.

Today should be mostly sunny in the west and north parts of North Texas and mostly cloudy in the south and east with showers and thunderstorms likely. Highs are expected in the 80s and 90s with lows in the 60s and 70s.

Areas of widely scattered showers and a cold front were located over West Texas on Saturday. Cloudy conditions prevailed generally east of the mountains, while sunny skies were reported in the far west. Afternoon temperatures ranged from 66 at Amarillo to 100 at San Angelo and Sanderson.

NATION

A cold front affected temperatures in the Northeast on Saturday, while the Southwest sweltered under high temperatures. Thunderstorms rumbled across much of the nation.

A string of thunderstorms stretched from New York into Tennessee along the southern edge of a cold front, while storms and heavy rain hit the southern Plains at the western edge of the front.

Torrential rains fell in parts of Virginia and heavy rain was expected overnight, prompting a flash flood watch for southwest Virginia and much of West Virginia.

In Missouri, 1.93 inches of rain fell in Springfield, breaking the daily record of 1.91 inches set in 1926, the National Weather Service reported.

In Ohio, high winds toppled two large trees onto a trailer in Enon, Ohio. No serious injuries were reported, the town's fire chief said.

SHOOT: Police department has 'model policy'

er departments," he said. "We researched a lot of other departments' policies and took what we thought were the best parts of those policies.

"This policy covers us in every way. Because, you can pretty well bet that, with a shooting, even if the officer is cleared by the department, there will be a civil suit. We have to be able to justify a shooting or death in every situation."

According to the Midland department's guidelines, officers must exhaust every reasonable means of employing the least amount of force, including — from least to most severe — physical strength and skill, chemical spray, department-issued baton, carotid restraint, police canine and then an approved firearm and ammunition.

Deadly force may be used only when the officer reasonably believes that the action is in defense of human life, including the officer's own life, or in defense of any person in immediate danger of serious bodily injury.

Situations where an officer can use deadly force are: to prevent the imminent commission of aggravated kidnapping, murder, sexual assault, aggravated sexual assault, robbery or aggravated robbery; when the suspect is intent on immediately endangering human life or immediately inflicting serious bodily injury unless apprehended without delay; or when the suspect, above and beyond being a fleeing felon or attempting to escape, places the officer or another in immediate danger of death or imminent serious bodily injury.

Immediately following an officer's involvement in an incident involving serious injury or death, the officer is automatically placed on administrative duty or leave pending a review by the chief of police the next day. Unless the status is changed to suspension, the officer remains on administrative duty or leave, which is non-disciplinary with no loss of pay or benefits.

When deadly force is used, whether it results in a death or not, the department's Shooting/Injury Investigation Team is called to investigate the case. The team is made up of a commander, two investigators from the Special Investigations Division, an identification technician, a supervisor from the involved officer's chain of command and any other investigator that the commander deems necessary.

The team conducts an investigation of the incident. After the investigation is complete, the team gives a report to the chief of police and department's Administrative Review Board.

The chief and the board — made up of a chairman and five board members — review the incident to ensure that the officer's action was justified.

In addition to the department's investigation, the incident is also reported to the district attorney's office by the Shooting/Injury Team commander for review and presentation to a grand jury. The grand jury will also review the incident to determine if the officer's actions were justified.

FAX: Newspaper's Cityline adds new services

$2.50.

Over the next several weeks, numerous directories will appear in the Reporter-Telegram listing the hundreds of documents and articles Faxline Library offers.

Some of the documents offered come from such respected publications as Consumer Reports, Inc. on Demand, The Wall Street Journal, National Business Employment Weekly and Kiplinger's.

Other documents that can be ordered include the New York Times Daily Crossword Puzzle, horoscopes, menus, health and nutrition articles, legal articles and fantasy sports columns.

Several metropolitan newspapers subscribe to a fax-on-demand service similar to the Reporter-Telegram's. Those papers include The Wall Street Journal, the Los Angeles Times, the Indianapolis Star, the Albany Times Union and the Richmond (Va.) Times Dispatch.

In addition to the Reporter-Telegram's Faxline Library service, the newspaper's Cityline system has announced several changes that have either already been instituted or will be shortly

■ Cityline now offers the local temperature at the beginning of every call to the service.

■ More than 750 teachers in Midland's eight secondary schools have now been trained on how to use Homework Hotline. Each teacher also has been given a personal category number so that students and parents can call should a student miss an assignment. Beginning in early September, and coinciding with the end of each six-weeks grading period through the school year, directories listing each teacher's name and category number will run in the Reporter-Telegram to help make the dissemination of the teacher's information easier for both student and parent.

■ Cityline has expanded to 19 available lines for incoming calls making the service easier for more callers to access.

■ Cityline is also in the process of upgrading Stock Quote Hotline. At the completion of the upgrade within the next few days, callers can access added stock markets, mutual funds, money markets and market indices.

■ And beginning Monday morning, the "gateway message," or the message callers hear at the beginning of their call to Cityline, will feature brief details of the latest news, sports and weather headlines three times a day.

CRIME: Two sides hammer out details of bill

(From 1A)

"The devil's in the details" was the quote heard from several involved in the negotiations. And the stumbling blocks, according to sources, were the details of the wording of the firearms ban and a provision letting evidence of prior sexual attacks be used in rape prosecutions.

Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., the Democrats' deputy whip, said late Saturday that he was three votes short of getting the new package to the House floor — a defeat would be a repeat of the procedural move that shelved the original $33 billion anti-crime package Aug. 11.

Added to that, out of nowhere an alternative crime bill offered Saturday by Rep. Bill Brewster, D-Okla., and Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., both gun-ban opponents, was fast gaining supporters. It would eliminate the gun ban, all crime-prevention programs and death penalties while pouring money into prisons, police and the border patrol.

To Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., one of the GOP moderates who supported the firearms ban and were trying to negotiate a compromise bill with the Democrats, said the Brewster-Hunter alternative reveals "what we've been saying from the very beginning it all comes down to: the assault weapons ban."

Elite Mexican security personnel search people and cars with metal detectors Saturday at the Federal Electoral Institute in Mexico City. The institute, or IFE, is responsible for running today's national elections and has been drastically changed since the 1988 elections.

Mexicans vote in historic election

■ Major focus of 1st Mexican election to be overseen by independent observers is southern state of Chiapas where rebel uprising occurred.

Associated Press

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico — Thousands of Maya-descended Indians and others living inside rebel-held territory in the southern state of Chiapas will be voting for the first time in their lives today.

The presidential vote will be a key test of the outgoing administration's economic and political reforms. Many of the latter were enacted after a Jan. 12 cease-fire with the rebels ended fighting that killed at least 145 people.

The New Year's Day rebellion gained much sympathy nationwide with its call for more democracy, clean elections and other rights. In an election that has gained worldwide attention, the focus is on the voting in Chiapas.

Nearly 2,000 observers — of a total of 12,000 poll-watchers from Mexico, the United States and Europe — were fanning out Saturday in Chiapas to watch the polling. Mexico has never previously allowed outsiders to watch its elections, which have often been marred by fraud.

One independent national group alone, the Civic Alliance, has 950 observers in Chiapas, where the rebels have promised to allow a peaceful vote while holding out the possibility of future violence if it is not free and fair.

After talks between the government and Subcomandante Marcos, a rebel leader, civilian volunteers have been bringing ballot boxes and other voting materials to villages controlled by the Zapatista National Liberation Army.

The volunteers have also given the Indians — some of whom cannot read or write — quick training on how to vote freely and secretly on their own.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, whose election in 1988 was tainted with accusations of heavy-handed fraud, has promised to make today's vote the cleanest in Mexican history. Hopes are high that this will be the case.

Besides allowing foreign observers, the government also spun off the Federal Electoral Institute, which is running the vote nationwide, and created a board of six leading citizens from contending parties to make decisions.

"At this moment . . . we Mexicans are living the end of an epoch, the close of a political regime," said Lorenzo Meyer, a political scientist.

In the presidential race, frontrunner Ernesto Zedillo of the PRI faces tough challenges from Diego Fernandez de Cevallos of the conservative National Action Party and Cuauhtemoc Cardenas of the leftist Democratic Revolution Party. There are six other minor candidates.

About 45.7 million people are registered to vote. Federal legislators for the 500-seat Chamber of Deputies and 96 of the 128 Senate seats will also be filled, and in Chiapas, a governor, state legislators and other local authorities will be chosen.

Cuba: Guantanamo is concentration camp

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Havana on Saturday condemned the use of the Guantanamo Bay naval base for housing refugees, saying Washington was trying to turn its base in southeastern Cuba into a "concentration camp of Cuban citizens."

Cuba has long protested the existence of the U.S. base, as well as its use for housing Haitian refugees.

President Clinton announced Friday that Washington was breaking its 28-year open-arms policy toward Cuban refugees, accusing President Fidel Castro of provoking a rising tide of people fleeing the island nation.

Cubans picked up at sea are now to be taken to the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay. Cuban refugees who reach Florida will be detained indefinitely.

"The government of Cuba declares the firmest rejection by the Cuban people of this new decision of the White House and repeats, one more time, its energetic rejection of the illegal military presence of the United States in its territory," said a Foreign Ministry statement broadcast by the state news agency Prensa Latina.

Clinton also said Cuban-Americans will no longer be able to send money to relatives in Cuba and flights between the two countries will be limited.

The mood was calm in the Cuban capital Saturday, with no unusually large military or police presence.

Nearly 15,000 Haitians who fled grinding poverty and military terror in their country now are housed in tent camps at the Guantanamo Bay base, something Cuba has strongly protested.

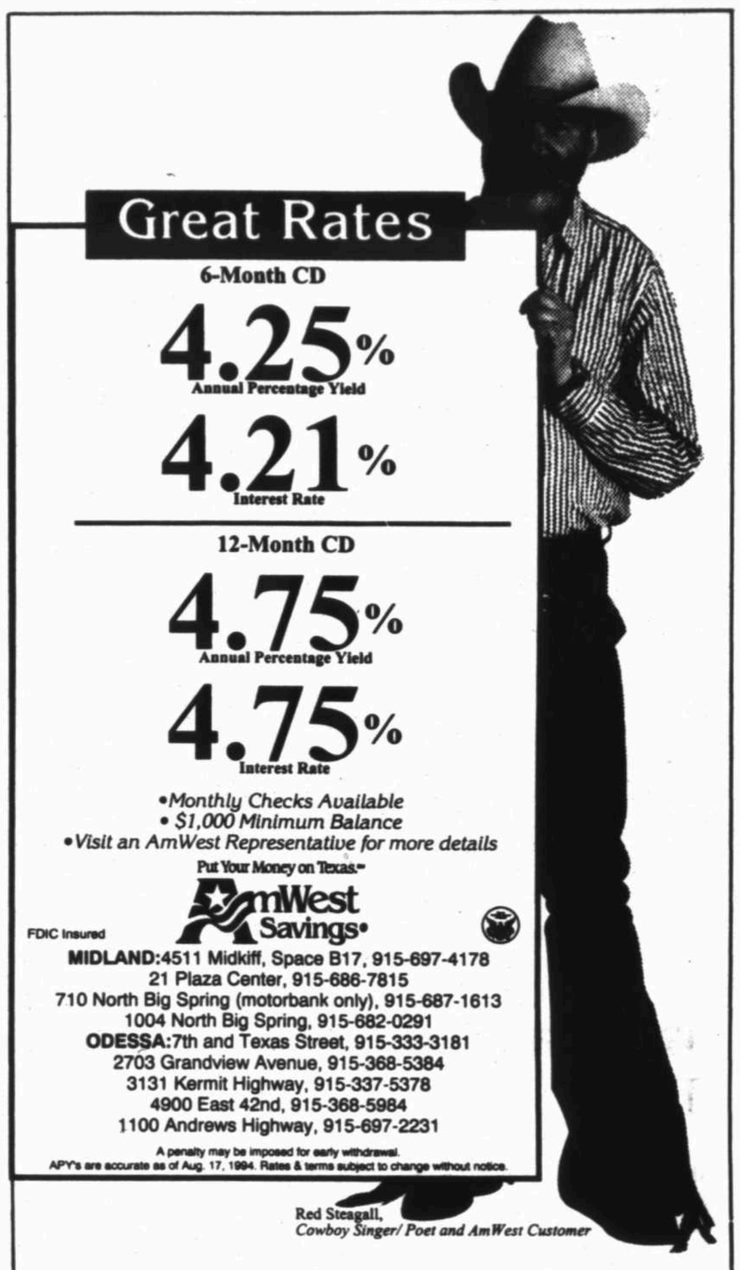

The base has long provoked the ire of Castro, who says it is illegal because it was established early this century when Cuba was under U.S. occupation.

Prensa Latina said the U.S. planned to make the naval base a "concentration camp of Cuban citizens."

Castro charges that Washington is responsible for the refugee problem, since it encourages illegal immigration by guaranteeing asylum for any Cubans who reach U.S. shores while limiting visas for legal, conventional immigration.

Havana also blames the U.S. trade embargo for much of the economic problems faced by Cuba, whose economy nosedived following the breakup of the Soviet Union.

"The U.S. government in no way tackles the essence of the problem, which is the fact that there is a policy deliberately aimed at making life unbearable in Cuba."

Zaire closes border with Rwanda; refugees become stranded

■ French troop pullout scheduled for Monday, coupled with border closure, will leave Hutus more vulnerable to possible Tutsi retribution.

Associated Press

BUKAVU, Zaire — Zaire closed its border with Rwanda on Saturday, barricading a bridge leading to the refugee-choked town of Bukavu and stranding tens of thousands of frightened Rwandan refugees on the other side.

At least 15,000 refugees from Rwanda's civil war fled across the border bridge Saturday before Zairian soldiers closed it, U.N. officials said. Thousands more continued to trudge steadily toward Zaire after the closing, a Red Cross spokeswoman said.

Aid workers said about 25,000 refugees crossed into Bukavu on Friday. Refugees were fleeing as Monday's deadline approached for French soldiers to withdraw from a safe haven they set up in southwestern Rwanda in June.

In Paris, French Defense Minister Francois Leotard told the Liberation newspaper France would withdraw Monday but leave behind 500 soldiers to help medical teams at an air base in Goma, Zaire.

"It is a very scary situation," Nina Winquist, spokeswoman for the International Committee of the Red Cross, said after she drove along the Rwandan side of a nearly unbroken line of refugees stretching about 45 miles.

"They were stopping the car and saying, 'This is the end for us,'" Winquist said. The refugees were crowded so thick they almost blocked the road, which runs from Gikongoro, Rwanda, to Bukavu.

The refugees are mostly ethnic Hutus who fled Rwanda, fearing Tutsi revenge for massacres in Rwanda's 14-week civil war. Up to 500,000 people were slaughtered, mostly minority Tutsis killed by Hutu soldiers and militiamen.

The exodus has led to fears of a repeat of the crisis in Goma, where nearly 1 million Rwandans poured across the border in three days last month. Some 43,000 died of malnutrition, cholera, dysentery and other diseases.

Zaire's government ordered the border closed Friday, and troops on Saturday barricaded their end of the border bridge. French soldiers on the other side immediately began turning refugees back toward Rwanda.

"Obviously with the huge flow into town, somebody just panicked and decided to close it," said Peter Romanovsky, head of the U.N. High Commission for Refugees office in Bukavu.

A few refugees jumped into Lake Kivi near the bridge and swam to the Zairian shore. Others tried to cross in about a dozen canoes.

Zairian paratroopers along the shoreline tried to turn back the boats or catch the refugees. But most appeared to elude the soldiers and scamper up the steep hills to squatter camps along the border road.

Several thousand refugees waited on the Rwandan side, kept away from the bridge by French troops and Ethiopian U.N. peacekeepers.

Some wonder about China's future after Deng

By Charlene L. Fu
Associated Press

Deng Xiaoping turns 90 Monday. Rumors of his death often arise, wreak havoc on stock markets.

BEIJING — As Deng Xiaoping turns 90, attention focuses less on his decisions than on his death — when it will come and what will happen to China afterward.

Since Deng took over in the late 1970s, after decades of upheaval, China has enjoyed relative tranquility and prosperity.

The authorities seem determined to make sure the stability survives Deng's departure, but China's tumultuous political history suggests anything could happen.

Rumors of Deng's actual or imminent death arise regularly and wreak havoc on Asian stock markets, but a Western diplomat said last week: "I've consulted our highest authorities and they think he'll make it through his birthday" on Monday.

While the birthday is unlikely to be marked in an official way, there have been signs of its approach.

Stores are selling Deng medallions with an inscription translated into English as "Our general designer. Comrade Xiaoping Deng." A two-volume biography, "Deng Xiaoping's Life: A Great Man and His Century," arrived at bookstores this month.

Official media are filled with reports of the masses earnestly studying Deng's theories, which in 15 years have transformed China from an inward-looking, impoverished nation to a major power.

About Deng's activities, however, there is virtually no information. Government officials will not divulge anything, they say, because he is just a private citizen who holds no office.

His children occasionally offer the standard line that their father is in good health, but nothing more.

The only national publication known to have mentioned the impending birthday was the China Aged Daily, which printed a front-page photograph and short profile of Deng on Wednesday.

It quoted him as saying, "I can swim. That shows that my health is still good. I play bridge, which shows that my mind is still clear."

Analysts: Bomb doesn't require much plutonium

■ Nuclear bomb takes so much less plutonium or uranium than generally believed that new safeguards must be adopted, experts say.

By William J. Broad
N.Y. Times News Service

Building a nuclear bomb takes so much less plutonium or uranium than generally believed that new safeguards must be adopted as part of a global tightening of defenses against the criminal diversion of atomic materials, private experts argue in a new proposal.

FOR PLUTONIUM, the experts say the official threshold of danger should be lowered from 8 kilograms to 1 kilogram, or from 17.6 pounds to 2.2 pounds. They also propose eightfold reductions for uranium, the other main fuel of atomic bombs.

The experts, from the Natural Resources Defense Council, a private group known for its nuclear expertise, wrote the federal government and the United Nations last week to urge such downward revisions.

At a news conference Monday in Washington, the group is to make those letters public along with a report arguing for the proposed changes.

If adopted, the plan would result in more stringent safeguards meant to curb the spread of bombs.

The new proposals cast a harsh light on the recent seizures in Germany of atomic materials that are believed to have been smuggled out of Russia, making the amounts look quite serious. One deal broken up by German authorities was reportedly to have ultimately involved four kilograms of weapon-usable plutonium in exchange for $250 million. A kilogram is about 2.2 pounds.

Dr. Thomas B. Cochran, a senior scientist at the Natural Resources Defense Council and a co-author of the report, said, "The criteria now in use are out of date, technically erroneous and clearly dangerous in light of the recent seizures."

Resistance to the proposals is likely, however, because enhanced safeguards could be costly to enforce and might hamper or cripple some use of plutonium for the production of nuclear power overseas.

The plan is also controversial because the minimal amounts of material needed to make a bomb have long been classified top-secret.

Even so, arms experts said they welcomed the airing of the issue by the council, which favors strict limits on nuclear arms and materials. Many experts said the old rules were dangerously out of date, even if the new proposals were perhaps too restrictive.

"IT'S IMPORTANT TO HAVE THIS debate," Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary said in an interview. "Any number of people have the impression that the smaller the size under control, the better we are in the long term." Her agency oversees the nation's nuclear arsenal and plays a central role in limiting the spread of bombs.

Richard L. Garwin, a physicist who has long advised the federal government on nuclear-arms matters, suggested that revisions should fall somewhere between the old rules and the new proposals. "Clearly," he said, "the significant quantity of plutonium should be lowered, at least to four kilograms and perhaps somewhat less, if it is to represent the amount that is hazardous."

William J. Quirk, a nuclear-weapon expert at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California, said that for the moment the exact figure was less important than a public discussion.

"Whether the right number is four or one or two kilograms, it probably makes sense to lower the current number if it's feasible economically," he said. "I think it's the right thing to start the debate and then people can decide what they want to do."

Building a nuclear bomb is well known to get progressively difficult as smaller amounts of fissionable material are used, the smallest requiring great expertise and special gear thought to belong only to advanced nuclear states. In addition, the size of the resulting blast decreases.

Nevertheless, 50 years of experimentation have allowed the United States and other nuclear nations to put powerful bombs in remarkably small packages.

IN THE EARLY 1960s the United States stockpiled a bazooka-type weapon known as the Davy Crockett whose miniature atomic warhead weighed 51 pounds and had an explosive force equal to 22 tons of high explosive. At its core, the plutonium probably weighed several pounds.

In the 1950s and 1960s, amid a push for nuclear power and peaceful atomic industries, the United States championed an international system whereby safeguards would be applied to the handling and shipment of all kinds of nuclear materials to guard against diversions.

The safeguards were enforced by an arm of the United Nations known as the International Atomic Energy Agency, or IAEA, based in Vienna.

These safeguards in retrospect seem weak. Weapon experts say the rules were probably skewed by disinformation aimed at convincing aspiring nuclear states and terrorists that bomb-building was difficult, and by a desire to keep international controls loose enough to allow the rise of a robust nuclear industry.

THE IAEA SAYS THE APPROXIMATE AMOUNTS of fissionable material needed for a single nuclear weapon are 8 kilograms of plutonium, 8 kilograms of uranium 233, or 25 kilograms for uranium highly enriched in the 235 isotope.

These figures, known as threshold amounts or significant quantities, are used to establish a wide range of industrial safeguards meant to deter and detect the diversion of materials from peaceful purposes to the making of nuclear warheads.

Thus the Natural Resources Defense Council is proposing the eightfold reduction in these categories. For instance, the threshold amount of plutonium would drop from eight kilograms to one kilogram.

Thursday, the council wrote Hans Blix, the IAEA's director general, and to Mrs. O'Leary to call for the reductions.

Cochran, who is a physicist, said in an interview that his organization's proposed revision of the traditional figures was based on his personal calculations, a close reading of government documents and statements, and discussions with weapon experts, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Based on his research and calculations, Cochran said, one kilogram of plutonium can be fashioned by a skilled designer into a bomb with a blast equal to 1,000 tons of high explosive.

"DETONATED IN OR ABOVE A CITY center, one such 'small' weapon would be sufficient to cause severe blast damage over roughly a 40-block area, and many thousands moore would likely die from the ensuing fire and radiation effects," said Christopher E. Paine, a co-author of the council's report.

In comparison, the bomb that the United States dropped on Hiroshima in 1945 had a blast equal to about 15,000 tons of high explosive.

The council's report says that even a primitive bomb design like the implosion-type device pioneered by the United States in the mid-1940s would require only three kilograms of plutonium to create a blast equal to 1,000 tons of high explosive.

"The technical community has known for more than 40 years that it is possible to make an atomic bomb with very little material," said Mr. Paine. "If we are going to honestly deal with the problem of proliferation, which the Clinton administration rightly claims is at the top of its security agenda, then we should deal with the facts as they are, not as the advocates of 'peaceful' plutonium use might wish them to be."

Japan, Russia and several European countries, though not the United States, have recently made heavy investments in using plutonium for the production of nuclear power. In this approach, the plutonium from nuclear-reactor wastes, instead of being buried, is separated out and recycled through a reactor to produce more power.

Leaders of that industry argue that the council's new proposals are meant less to strengthen safeguards than to attack the civilian uses of plutonium, which they say are crucial for nations less richly endowed with energy resources than the United States.

"THE HIDDEN AGENDA is to shut down the reprocessing industry," said Marilyn Meigs, a senior official of BNFL Inc., in Washington, an American subsidiary of British Nuclear Fuels Limited, referring to companies that extract plutonium from nuclear waste.

Ms. Meigs said that the new proposals, if adopted, would force companies to install all kinds of new instrumentation in factories, trucks, planes and trains. "It would drive the economics haywire," she said. "We'd have to retrofit all the facilities to measure smaller quantities any place and time. It would be so expensive that nobody would do it."

No diversion has ever taken place from a safeguarded site, Ms. Meigs said. She added that the new international agenda ought to be getting renegade nations to adopt the current safeguards.

Cochran contends that the industry has an obligation to confront the nuclear truth.

"The world would be a better place if it were not using nuclear weapons-usable materials in commerce," he said. "To the extent we cannot convince the rest of the world of this wisdom, we should have safeguards that can adequately protect these materials and the public."

"The safeguards," he added, "must be based on hard facts, not myths."

Bosnian troops rout forces of breakaway Muslim leader

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Government soldiers routed remnants of forces loyal to a breakaway Muslim leader on Saturday as they pushed to end months of fighting in northwestern Bosnia.

An end to warfare in the Muslim enclave of Bihac would allow the Bosnian government to divert more troops to confront its main enemy, the Serbs.

U.N. spokesmen said Muslim-led government forces were less than a mile from Velika Kladusa, the stronghold of rebel Muslim leader Fikret Abdic.

About 12 miles south of Velika Kladusa, the village Skokovi was hit by shells fired from a Serb-held region in nearby Croatia. Five children were killed and seven wounded, said a spokesman for French peacekeepers in Bihac, Maj. Jean Francois Philippe. Serbs have been supporting Abdic.

Clinton tightens economic noose around Cuba's fragile neck

■ President severely limits money relatives in. U.S. can send back to Cuba, cuts U.S.-Cuba charter flights, plans to seek punitive U.N. action against Cuba, 'beefed-up' anti-Castro radio broadcasts.

Associated Press

MIAMI — John Perez has been sending $300 every three months to his extended family in Cuba, the maximum permitted under U.S. law.

"It's absolutely all that they live on," he says.

That support from the Cuban-American community in the United States, more than $400 million a year, was cut off Saturday as President Clinton moved to put pressure on Fidel Castro. He said gifts to relatives would be limited to medicine, food and humanitarian items.

Perez says he'll play by the new rules only if the United States follows through with the tough talk about ending Castro's 35-year communist rule.

Others charge that the change in U.S. policy is cruel, considering Cuba's existing economic crisis.

"My mother will die," said Bertran Perez, a florist at Pepito Flowers. He sends his sick mother hundreds of dollars a month to pay for medicine. "In Cuba there's nothing," he said. "Dollars are what they need."

Perez said he would keep sending money "any way I can. There's always a way."

Clinton broke a 28-year open-arms policy Friday, charging that Castro was provoking a rising tide of new refugees. From now on, Cubans picked up at sea are to be taken to the U.S. Navy's Guantanamo Bay base on Cuba's southeastern tip. Cuban refugees who reach Florida will be detained indefinitely.

On Saturday, Clinton announced the end to the cash lifeline, cuts in charter flights linking the two countries, plans to seek punitive U.N. action against Cuba and "beefed-up" U.S. radio broadcasts to Cuba.

"These are all designed to make Castro pay the price," U.S. Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., said Saturday after touring a day-old tent city set up for newly arrived Cubans at an immigration detention center.

The Coast Guard had intercepted 468 Cubans at sea by Saturday afternoon, bringing the total so far this month to nearly 3,800.

A leaking boat with 30 to 40 Cubans aboard was spotted a quarter-mile from shore Saturday near the Gulf coast community Naples, about 125 miles north of Key West, said Collier County sheriff's spokesman Damian Housman.

A total of 336 Cubans were being detained Saturday at the Krome detention center west of Miami.

But even after the U.S. policy changes, Cubans lined sections of Cuba's north coast to watch more and more people launch makeshift rafts for the perilous 90-mile crossing.

Cuba's foreign ministry on Saturday condemned the use of Guantanamo to house refugees, saying it will make the base a "concentration camp of Cuban citizens." Cuba has long protested the existence of the base.

Poll: Most have little faith in leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a bleak assessment of their government, 91 percent of people responding to a new poll said they had little or no confidence in Washington to solve problems. Republicans got more blame for gridlock than President Clinton.

The Time magazine-CNN poll, released Saturday, found that 64 percent view gridlock between Congress and the president as a major problem. Asked who was to blame, 48 percent said congressional Republicans, 32 percent said Clinton and 12 percent said Clinton and the GOP were equally at fault. The poll did not give respondents the choice of blaming congressional Democrats.

As in other recent polls, the results showed a gap between Americans' desire for change and their faith that Washington can deliver it. Ninety percent said they wanted a government that promotes change, while just 6 percent said the government should keep things as they are.

But only 7 percent said they had a great deal of confidence that Clinton and Congress could deal with the country's problems. Nearly three-fourths, 73 percent, said they had only a little confidence, and 18 percent said they had none.

That mood would suggest tough going for incumbents this fall regardless of political party. Reinforcing that view, 27 percent said they would vote for an independent candidate for Congress this November if they had the chance. Twenty-nine percent said they would support a Democrat and 23 percent a Republican. The others were undecided or cited a specific third-party affiliation.

48 percent blame congressional Republicans, 32 percent fault Clinton, 12 percent blame GOP and Clinton.

For Clinton, there was some troubling news when respondents were asked about their presidential preference, although a survey more than two years before the next presidential election may not be a reliable barometer.

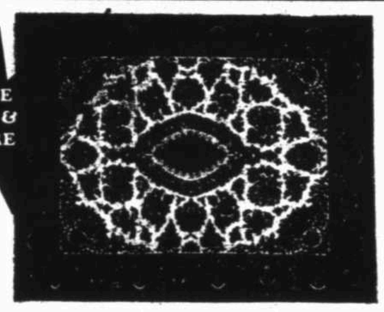

When asked if they were inclined to vote for Clinton, only 40 percent said they were likely or somewhat likely to do so. Fifty-five percent said they were somewhat unlikely or very unlikely, while 5 percent weren't sure.

In three hypothetical matchups, Clinton comfortably outpolled former Vice President Dan Quayle,

NAACP board fires leader due to perceived mishandling of funds

■ Benjamin Chavis Jr.'s freewheeling style of managing NAACP money in wake of sexual disrimination scandal lead to board's decision.

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Benjamin Chavis Jr. was fired as head of the NAACP on Saturday by a board of directors concerned that his handling of money damaged the organization, according to Rodney Orange, president of the Baltimore NAACP chapter.

There was no immediate formal statement from the NAACP board, which met in private.

However, several other Chavis supporters also said Chavis had been fired and that they received their information from a board member.

Word of Chavis' ouster came about six hours after the meeting started and it was not certain whether the session had concluded or when the board would issue an official report of its deliberations.

The session was closed to reporters. They also were barred from the grounds immediately surrounding the NAACP building.

Orange was not in the meeting, which was limited to board members, but he was among those who heard a board member, who he did not identify, pass the word of Chavis' dismissal to a crowd of about 200 people outside the NAACP building where they were meeting.

It was Chavis freewheeling style of managing the NAACP's money that got him into the fight of his activist life with the civil rights group he was hired to revitalize.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's debate behind closed doors came in the wake of disclosure of a $332,400 out-of-court settlement that critics said reflected Chavis' habit of making costly decisions behind the board's back.

Chavis himself had emerged from the meeting shortly before 5 p.m. to touch base with supporters, but gave no hint of what was to come.

The status of Chavis, notwithstanding, the NAACP is left with a budget deficit of about $3 million and a taint that has alienated financial supporters and, according to some NAACP chapters, new members.

This is a far cry from the NAACP Chavis inherited, which faced serious questions about its perceived ineffectiveness and irrelevance to younger, angrier black Americans — but had an intact budget.

"I don't know how on God's green earth we got into this situation," lamented Benjamin Hooks, Chavis' predecessor.

Chavis has refused to resign for settling unspecified claims of sexual discrimination by former employee Mary E. Stansel. Stansel has sued Chavis and the NAACP for the $245,000 she contends she is still owed under that settlement because they failed to find her an $80,000-a-year job.

Many board members also want a resignation from Chairman William Gibson who, while considered Chavis' staunchest defender, has said he would not be able to protect Chavis if other board members move to oust him.

Barbara Powell, president of the Hempstead, N.Y., chapter, said the situation is becoming too expensive and distracting.

"I was feeling a little bad for Dr. Chavis but now I'm getting tired of him," she said before the board meeting. "It's always something popping up. We can't keep fighting for Ben."

According to copy of the meeting agenda, three items were to be discussed: the Stansel lawsuit, any other lawsuits pending or threatened, and "the past performance of the officers and staff of the association with respect to any such lawsuits or threats of lawsuits and disclosure to the board of directors."

Contending he has done nothing wrong, Chavis said he wouldn't resist if the board moved Saturday to take away his ability to make personnel, financial and other day-to-day decisions.

And he launched a last-minute defense, saying he has documented a conspiracy to oust him. On Friday, he appeared with Susan Tisdale, a former employee.

Dr. Mike Doyle examines a patient in his Neptune, N.J. office. Doyle says new antidepressant drugs enable primary-care physicians, like him, to treat depression directly without extra psychotherapy or special counseling.

Family doctors treat blues with pills

■ More general practitioners now prescribe easy-to-take antidepressants like Paxil, Zoloft and Prozac rather than sending patient to psychotherapy or counseling.

By Arlene Levinson
Associated Press

NEPTUNE, N.J. — The closest thing to a couch in Dr. Mike Doyle's barn-red clinic is his padded waiting room bench. There's no psychiatric text in sight, just the usual doctor's gear: examining table, stethoscope, scale.

Yet for many patients who are "down in the dumps" — the 62-year-old healer's term for depression — this is their first and last stop for relief.

They turn to Dr. Doyle and his handy prescription pad. This family doctor is not reluctant to prescribe easy-to-take antidepressants like Paxil, Zoloft and, the pioneer, Prozac.

No fuss, no therapy — just pills.

Doctors like Doyle say the new drugs enable them to treat depression — the most common mental illness — and many times without sending the patient for extra counseling or psychotherapy.

"It is becoming the norm for family physicians to make the decision, 'Do you need intensive therapy? Or therapy that can be given by the family physician: encouragement and support?'" said Dr. William H. Coleman, president of the American Academy of Family Physicians, who practices in largely rural Scottsboro, Ala., where therapists are thin on the ground.

Especially when a patient's chronic despair has no apparent reason, Coleman sees no need for therapy that examines the past. "I don't see this backtracking through all that," he said.

Could this trend augur a dusty end for the therapist's couch? A detour from the talking cure, that arduous, expensive and time-consuming journey toward self-understanding and change? Mental health in a bottle?

"It's an American solution," Ellen McGrath, a psychologist in Laguna Beach, Calif., said of doctors who dispense mind medicines and give therapy a back seat. "It's temporary. A quick fix."

"There's no question that it helps and it works better, but it's only part of the solution," she said.

While many therapists welcome the doctors' increased interest in recognizing and alleviating depression, they warn against relying on pills as the main remedy. While that may be the right treatment sometimes, ideally, they say, the depressed patient should be evaluated to find out if they need talk plus medication, or no pills at all.

Depression often recurs. Taking an antidepressant for four to six months or more, they say, will not deal with underlying problems.

"We are very glad that primary care physicians are interested and are looking to identify signs and symptoms of depression and mood disorders," said Vivian Jackson, who handles clinical social work issues at the National Assocation of Social Workers. "That is a plus."

But, said Ms. Jackson, mood disorders are a mix of biological, psychological and social factors. Doctors should think of referring afflicted patients to a psychotherapist as readily as they will consult a specialist for surgery, she said.

Family doctors and internists interviewed around the country said they do keep therapy in mind when treating patients. But they're also mindful of the need to keep costs down, and of many patients' aversion to the label "mental illness" implicit in sending them to psychotherapy.

Besides, many times the improvement they see in patients on the new antidepressants seems to make counseling unnecessary, if not irrelevant.

"If you tell them 'You're depressed,' they'll tell you, 'But I'm not crazy," said Dr. Marjorie Bowman, who practices in Winston-Salem, N.C., and chairs the department of family and community medicine in Wake Forest's medical school. "There is just a major stigma to labeling somebody depressed."

The stigma is felt not only by the patient, she said.: "It can have major problems with insurance, so there has been a fair amount of reluctance on the part of physicians to put down depression on their billing form."

How much Bowman prods the depressed patient to seek therapy varies. If their family has a history of depression, she won't push as hard as she does someone struggling, say, with a child custody fight or big-time work problems.

"Get them feeling better ... that's what it's about," she said.

Doctors in general practice have always been on the depression frontlines. Generally, it's the family doctor or internist or gynecologist who first encounters the patient who comes with physical complaints that the astute physician recognizes as signs of depression.

But in the not-distant past, a doctor may have overlooked or even shied away from a diagnosis of depression. That would leave the patient to struggle along on their own, maybe find their way to a psychiatrist, or sink until they wound up hospitalized in a psychiatric ward, or, in extreme cases, suicide.

Antidepressant medicines have dramatically changed this, as has increased understanding of depression.

Like knowledge of the brain's exquisite machinery, drugs to treat mental illness are relatively recent in medicine, dating back only to the 1960s.

And until Prozac's debut six years ago, the favored drugs for treating depression were known as tricyclics, which go by brand names such as Elavil, Sinequan, Tofranil. They work fine, except that some patients find their side effects unbearable: dry mouth, dry skin, blurred vision, constipation, weight gain, dizziness, a drugged feeling.

Depressed patients don't need to be masochists, too; people won't take a drug that makes them feel worse. The tricyclics also need close monitoring and sometimes day-by-day adjustment. Overdoses can kill.

AMA backs anti-smoking campaign in 19 states

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The American Medical Association and a major health foundation have announced that they will begin a $10 million anti-smoking campaign in 19 states.

The plans of the AMA and the co-sponsor, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, make the 19 selected states targets in a new effort to spread California's successful program of using tobacco taxes to support anti-tobacco education.

The foundation, the nation's largest philanthropic organization dealing with health issues, will provide the money for the campaign, and the medical association will manage distribution of that money in grants to existing anti-tobacco lobbying organizations.

There are not many public policy battles on which anti-tobacco groups have a better record than the tobacco industry's lobbyists, said Michael P. Beachler, a program grant officer for the foundation. "But there is one area where the score is Health 3, Tobacco 0," he said, "and that is the California model."

Thus, the foundation and the AMA have decided to encourage the spread of the California model to other states.

In a 1988 referendum, California voters approved a 25-cent increase in the state tax on a pack of cigarettes; proceeds were designated to finance anti-smoking advertising and school education and to provide grants to cities to develop anti-smoking policies.

The program has been hugely successful. Tobacco use is down 30 percent in California since approval of the initiative, compared with a 10 percent drop in most other states, according to studies by the University of California at San Diego. Further, the smoking rate among teen-agers is leveling off in California, while it continues to rise in most other states.

Two other states have already followed California's lead: Massachusetts in 1992 and Michigan this year, with each enacting new taxes and large anti-tobacco education programs.

The AMA and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation call their new campaign Smoke Less States. Its grants will help anti-tobacco groups in the 19 selected states, which were chosen from competing grant proposals by anti-smoking groups, to push for California-like programs there.

INTRODUCING SPILLBLOCK
The Greatest Carpet Breakthrough Since DuPont Stainmaster:

DUPONT SPILLBLOCK CARPET BACKING SYSTEM

With conventional carpets, spills can easily soak through the backing and get trapped underneath. This can lead to foul odors. And the reappearance of stains. But new DuPont SpillBlock helps solve these problems. Now available on Mohawk Carpets, this all-new carpet backing system helps prevent spills from soaking through.

So cleanup is easier. There's less chance of odors from trapped liquid—including pet accidents. And stains are less likely to reappear by seeping back up into the carpet. That's SpillBlock. Now available on selected DuPont approved carpet brands from Mohawk. Stop in today.

State expands hunt when bears make big comeback

NOTTINGHAM, N.H. (AP) — Some people see them as cute, fuzzy, roly-poly clowns, real-life teddy bears. Florence Chamberlain knows what New Hampshire's bears are really like.

"They're nothing but pigs with fur," the beekeeper growled.

One bear toppled two of Chamberlain's beehives, ripping them apart to get at the honey inside.

"They get stung, but . . . they figure it's worth the price," she complained.

New Hampshire's Fish and Game Department is getting increasing complaints about bears tearing apart bird-feeders, knocking over trash cans and, in some cases, dragging off livestock.

What is unusual is many of the reports are from southern counties, where bears haven't been seen for 150 years.

"It surprised me they have increased this rapidly this far south," said state wildlife biologist Eric Orff.

In response, the state has expanded its annual two-month bear hunt into 64 new communities this fall, including rural areas outside the cities of Concord and Manchester.

"People want bear until it's knocking over their bird-feeder, lugging off their pig or knocking over their barbecue grill," Orff said. "We're seeking to essentially slow the growth and hopefully eliminate some of the nuisance problems."

Unrestricted hunting eliminated bears from southern New Hampshire in the early 1800s as settlers tamed the land for farming.

By 1985, the state confined the annual hunt to the state's three northernmost counties to stem a drastic decline in the bear population. Bears multiplied and began spreading downstate.

Unfortunately for residents, bears are resourceful and will take whatever food they can find — even if that means someone's garbage.

"It's a real frustration," said Chris Tower, whose campground trash containers in Waterville Valley are magnets for bears. "If anything is in there, they strew it everywhere. They love to have a picnic."

Tower thought spraying pepper gas on the garbage or taping the container lids down might discourage the bears.

It didn't work. "They ate right through the pepper gas," she said.

Ann Bennett of Conway knows just how far out of hand a bear can be. For the past two springs, bears have hauled sheep off her field, in spite of electric fences.

The bear hunt begins Sept. 1. It runs until Nov. 27 in northern counties and to Oct. 14 in some southern counties. There still is no bear hunting in counties along the Massachusetts border.

Hunters kill about 300 bear each year. Orff said he doesn't believe the numbers will change with the expanded hunt, but he said the expansion will allow people to hunt bears that have become nuisances.

Chamberlain believes expanding the hunt is a humane way to control the bear population.

"I don't believe in a mass slaughter," she said.

Frequent-flier miles buy non-travel goods

By Adam Bryant
N.Y. Times News Service

Some trade frequent-flier miles for hotel rooms, meals, pinball machines, exercise equipment.

Call them the Green Stamps of the 1990s.

Frequent-flier miles, created by the airlines 13 years ago to win the loyalty of business passengers, are increasingly being redeemed for things other than free flights.

American Express recently signed up five big hotel chains that accept miles earned by card holders. At the Marriott Marquis in Manhattan, for example, 13,000 miles buys a night's stay. American Airlines will start a similar hotel program next month.

Since last year, Diners Club has allowed its card holders to cash in their miles for savings bonds, restaurant meals and merchandise from a variety of catalogues, from a pinball machine from the Sharper Image to a chocolate-chip bundt cake from the Dessert of the Month Club.

Spending $2,000 with the card, for instance, can earn enough miles to buy a $50 savings bond or a Mickey Mouse watch.

With British Airways, miles can be redeemed for cruises; a $500 certificate for Cunard cruise travel can be had for 50,000 miles. And for the philanthropic, members of many frequent-flier clubs can contribute their certificates for free travel to a number of charities.

The introduction of new ways to spend frequent-flier miles has been accompanied by new ways to earn them. After airlines began offering miles, credit-card companies and telephone companies, eager for more business, began paying the airlines for the privilege of offering miles to their customers.

Now other businesses are striking deals with the airlines, too: buy a Berlitz language course and get 1,000 miles on American Airlines.

American also disclosed last week that it had signed up 2,000 restaurants nationwide, including the Russian Tea Room in New York, for a new dining-for-miles promotion that it will begin testing in the New York metropolitan area next month.

Sometimes frequent-flier miles are neither earned nor spent on anything remotely connected with airline travel. Miles earned by eating a rich meal at a restaurant can be cashed in toward an exercise machine to work off the meal.

"Frequent-flier miles, in many ways, have become an alternative currency," said David Reibstein, a professor of marketing at the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania.

Members of frequent-flier programs now earn an average of about 40 percent of their miles without flying, and redeem about 10 percent of their miles for things other than free trips, according to Inside Flyer, a magazine based in Colorado Springs that offers tips to frequent fliers.

Industry experts say these percentages will undoubtedly grow because airlines are expected to announce in coming months new ways to both earn and trade in miles.

Indeed, frequent-flier miles are beginning to resemble Green Stamps, a promotion that flourished in the 1950s and 1960s when businesses from supermarkets to gas stations awarded the stamps to their customers, who pasted the stamps into books and redeemed them for catalogue merchandise.

Green Stamps are still awarded by several thousand merchants in states like Texas, Pennsylvania and Michigan.

More kinds of businesses now offer frequent-flier miles because they increase sales enough to more than offset the costs. Typically, these businesses pay the airlines 2 cents for each mile they award to customers.

Congress slowly whittles away at health care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The longer Congress talks about health reform, the less there is to talk about.

In the beginning came President Clinton's grand scheme. In the middle there was Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell's less sweeping vision.

In the end, it appears, there's a budget-conscious alternative that's light years away from the guaranteed universal insurance coverage the president once set as his bottom line.

The new bottom line is a whole lot more basic: keeping some type of health reform alive in the face of insistent conservative demands to put it off until next month, next year, perhaps forever.

The new heroes are the Democratic and Republican senators who locked themselves in a room last week and drew up a modest "mainstream" plan many believe is the last if not best hope to achieve reform this year.

Universal coverage takes a back seat to deficit reduction in this latest phase of health reform. Even some liberals are prepared to consider the bipartisan plan, though it strongly resembles a market-oriented, managed competition plan they once spurned.

The debate "is becoming more and more about less and less," said an anxious Ron Pollack, executive director of Families USA, a consumer group allied with Clinton. "It's really become an exercise in minimalism."

The Clintons started their health-reform odyssey with a 1,300-page bill and a six-word mantra: security, simplicity, choice, savings, quality and responsibility. Eventually they distilled their pitch to one non-negotiable demand: universal coverage, also described as guaranteed private insurance and "health care that's always there."

With 15 percent of Americans uninsured, Clinton pledged to veto any bill that did not cover them all. But as political complications mounted, so did the president's flexibility. He began talking of a bill that "puts us on the road" to universal coverage — and not necessarily his way, which was to require employers to provide worker insurance.

When Mitchell set a goal of 95 percent coverage through subsidies to low-income families, with stronger measures required to kick in if this doesn't work, Clinton swallowed hard and insisted this too was universal coverage.

The "mainstream" blueprint doesn't even go that far. It proposes subsidies to expand coverage, but it isn't clear yet how many people would benefit. Furthermore, the subsidies would be curbed if deficit reduction was at risk, and there's no fallback employer requirement if millions still fall between the cracks.

Nobel laureate Linus Pauling dies at 93

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two-time Nobel laureate Linus Pauling charted the chemical underpinnings of life itself, worked for nuclear peace and helped start America's health craze by touting the benefits of vitamin C.

This 20th century Renaissance man in a floppy beret was also "the greatest of teachers ... a fantastic showman," one colleague fondly recalled Saturday.

Pauling died late Friday at the age of 93 at his home in Big Sur, 110 miles south of San Francisco. A son and daughter were with him, said Stephen Lawson of the Linus Pauling Institute of Science and Medicine at Palo Alto.

An advocate of vitamin C as a life-extender, Pauling had maintained a vigorous schedule until recent months when the prostate cancer diagnosed in 1991 began to take a toll, said Dorothy Munro, a spokeswoman for the Pauling Institute.

"It may be that my vitamin C put the cancer off by 20 years," he once said. He took 18,000 milligrams of vitamin C a day; the federally recommended daily allowance for adults is 60 milligrams.

Pauling, an outgoing man with bright blue eyes, often wore a floppy beret on his white hair and displayed a wry wit. He said once that the government's recommended daily allowance of vitamin C "only keeps you from dying of scurvy."

Pauling made contributions to all areas of chemistry, had opinions about everything and was often way ahead of his time, said Dr. James Collman, professor of chemistry at Stanford University.

"Any one of those things a great scientist would be pleased to have as his or her accomplishment during their lifetimes, and he had many. There's just no one quite like him."

Pauling was a child of 11 or 12 when he first sought to understand the universe. "Life has always been something of a puzzle, which I'm always trying to figure out," he told The Associated Press in a 1991 interview.

He won his first Nobel Prize in 1954 for his research on the nature of the chemical bond that holds molecules together and its use in understanding the structure of complex compounds.

"I consider him to be certainly the most influential chemists of this century, but he really belongs among the most extraordinary scientists of all time," said Dr. Henry Taube, professor emeritus of chemistry at Stanford.

Crews battle forest fire with bulldozers, picks

LOYALTON, Calif. (AP) — Crews used bulldozers, picks and shovels on Saturday to claw a protective path between a 38,500-acre forest fire and this tiny Sierra Nevada lumber town.

More than 2,000 firefighters — nearly twice Loyalton's population — battled the fire that had threatened the community since Wednesday.

"I'm tired of it. Tired of the smoke, tired of leaving, tired of the whole fire," said resident Mary Anderson.

Many residents have taken to wearing bandanas around their faces to filter out smoke, which is visible 60 miles east in Carson City, Nev.

Crews have managed to stop the flames' advance around only 20 percent of its circumference, according to Stacey Giomi of the Sierra Front Wildfire Cooperators.

No structures have been lost and only minor injuries have been reported since the fire began Tuesday at the Cottonwood Campground south of Sierraville. Officials said it was set, but the cause remained under investigation.

Thirty-one bulldozers worked Saturday digging a wide firebreak around the south edge of town. More than 200 fire trucks were parked in neighborhoods to protect buildings from wind-borne embers. Airplanes and helicopters dropped water and fire retardant.

A sign on the Assembly of God Hall read: "Way to 'Kick Butt' on that fire."

Throughout the West, 28 major fires remained out of control Saturday. They had burned across nearly 400,000 acres in Idaho, Montana, Utah, Oregon, Washington and California, the National Interagency Fire Center said.

Only seven of the major fires were outside Idaho and western Montana. Idaho had 10 fires that had covered 157,745 acres and Montana fire crews battled 11 major blazes that had burned 24,965 acres.

Near Idaho City, a fast-moving forest fire doubled in size overnight to 7,000 acres but a threat to nearly 30 houses eased Saturday. An evacution alert remained in effect for the subdivision.

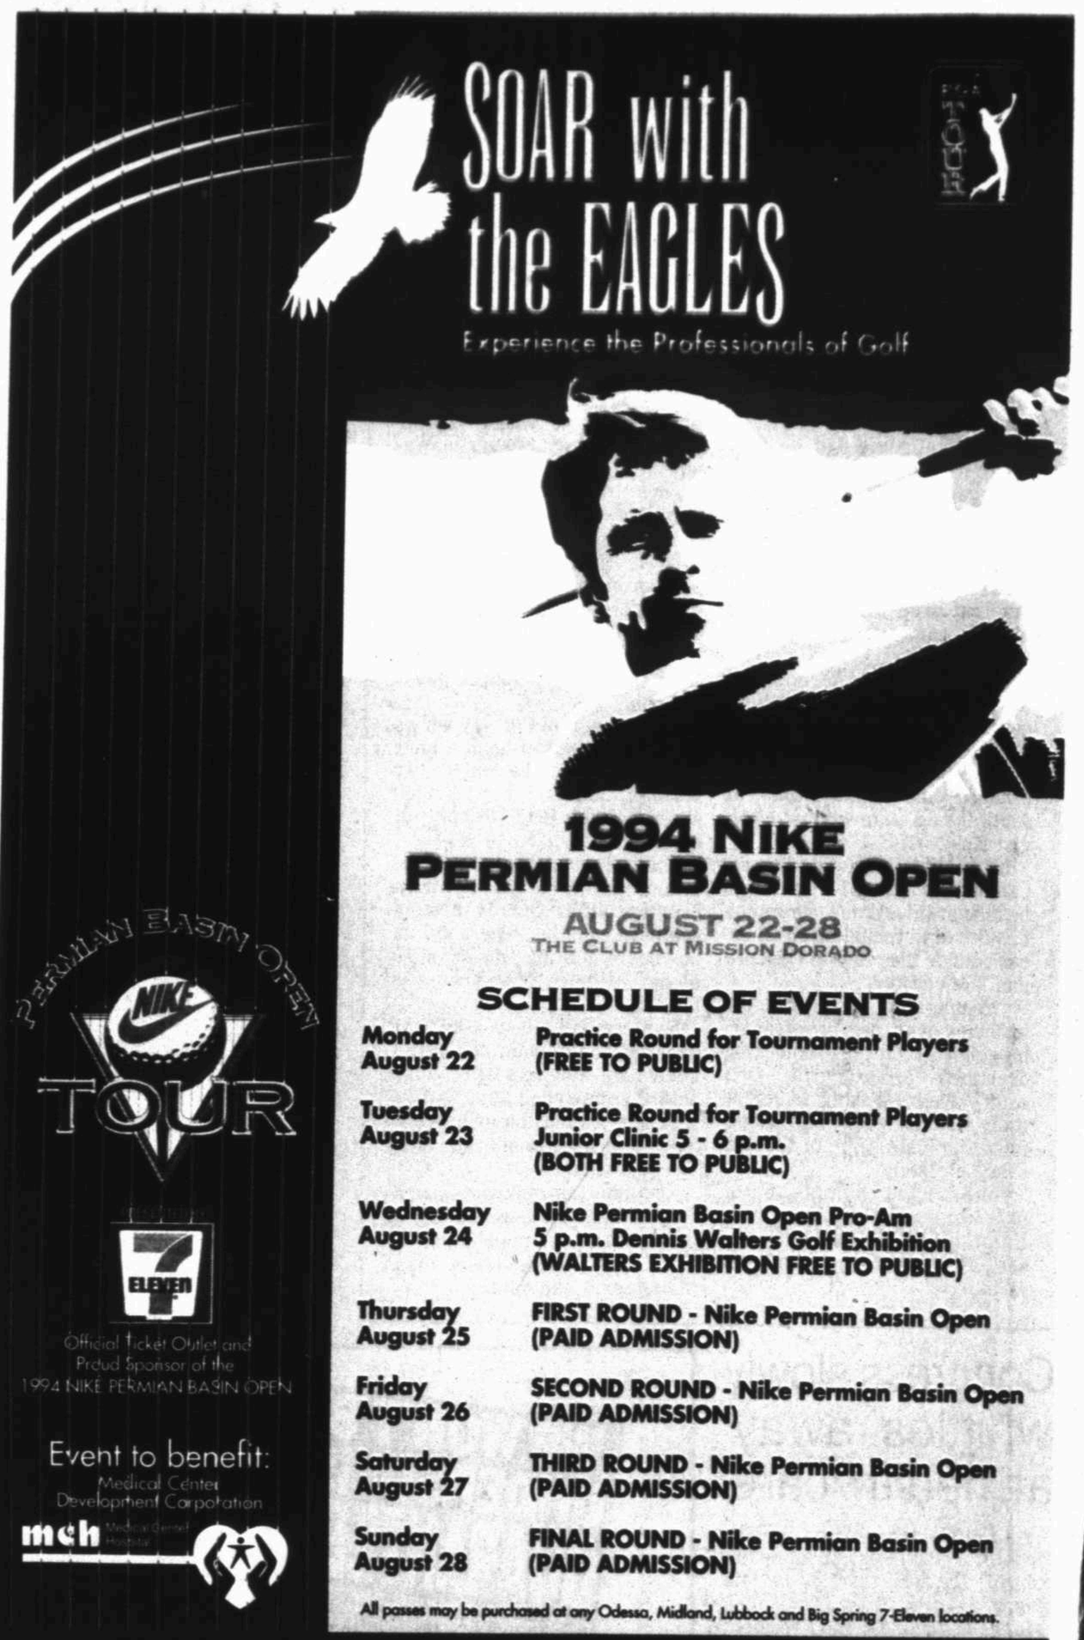

Montana also had scores of smaller fires and some 6,000 firefighters were stretched to the limit. More than 400 new firefighters completed emergency training Saturday and 680 soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., were due to arrive today for similar training.

Restitution center's counselors, residents work to improve trust

Trust.

More than a word, trust is a concept that the Midland Community Restitution Center is striving to instill in its resident probationers and staff counselors to more efficiently carry out the center's mission.

Essentially, that mission is to bring forth positive attitude adjustments in behavior and habits that will "carry them (the probationers) the rest of their lives in a successful way," free of crime, according to Roy Jones, director of the center.

"We operate under the philosophy that the individuals here made mistakes of the mind (and) not of the heart," Jones said.

The premise is that their lives can be changed, that they are rehabilitative, that they are not incorrigible and that they can lead law-abiding and productive lives.

In the main, they are non-violent offenders,

Hospital offers back-to-school health checks

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

After just a few days of school, some Midland parents may notice their children are having problems with paying attention and keeping out of trouble in class.

For parents concerned that they are seeing signs of hyperactivity, depression or Attention-Deficit Disorder in their youngsters, Glenwood Hospital is offering a free back-to-school emotional health check.

Since the 20-minute assessment is free, parents can't lose, according to Sheila McCright, Glenwood director of referral services.

"We will offer free assessment, for youth of any age, through October," Ms. McCright said.

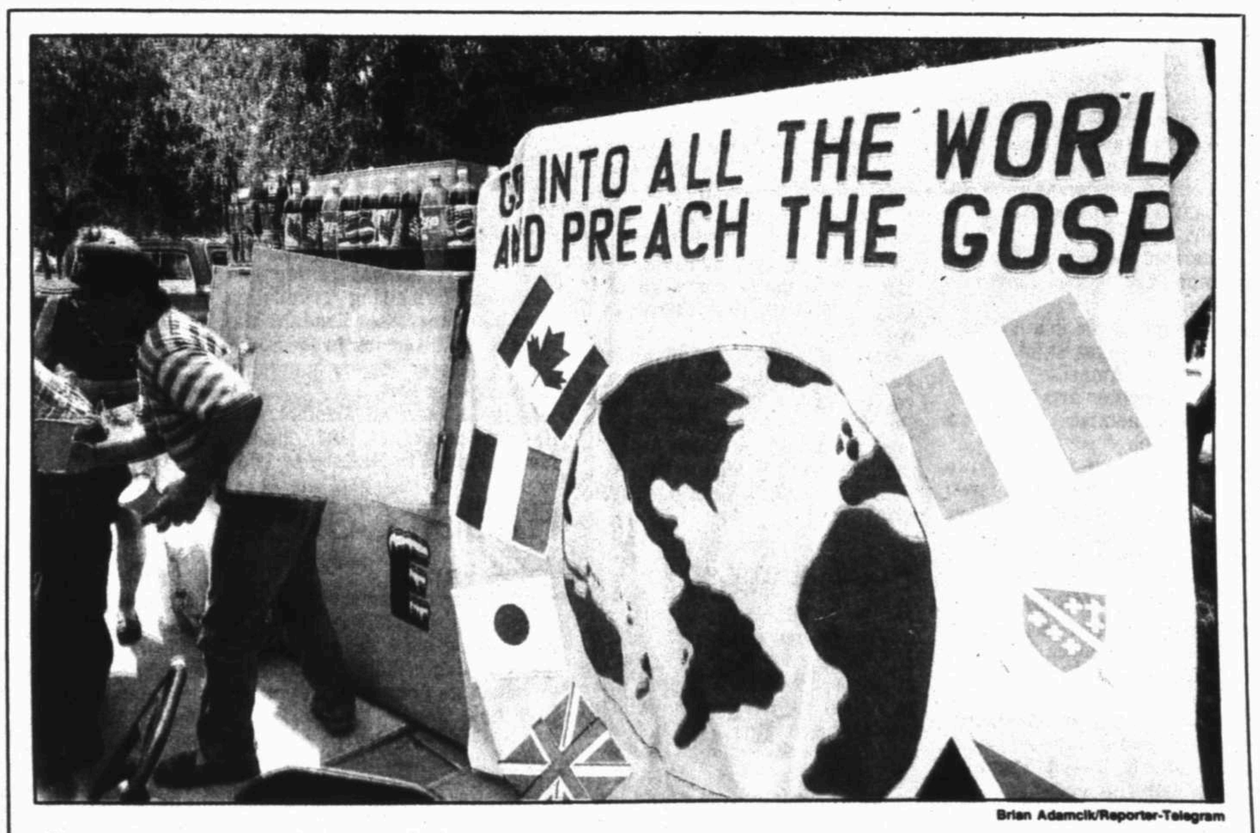

However, before jumping to conclusions, parents should be aware that many students typically experience frustration and confusion the first week of school, according to Alex Rose, Insight counselor for Midland Independent School District.

"Some confusion is pretty normal for the first few days of school. The time to worry is when adolescents have experienced some things over a long period of time," Ms. Rose said, noting that parents should be concerned if their children are still as frustrated three weeks later as they were the first day of school.

Experts say stress can take it's toll with teen-agers, resulting in depression. And it may start with small problems such as arguing with a friend or feeling ahead of peers intellectually but behind socially, or vice versa.

No matter what the problem, Ms. Rose said students are welcomed to make appointments with school counselors to talk about their problems. She said some good indicators of stress, listed in the book, "Adolescent Stress," include:

Odessa College fiscal officer files personal bankruptcy

DALLAS (AP) — The fiscal officer blamed for Odessa College's financial woes has filed for personal bankruptcy, apparently because of risky investments similar to those he made for the troubled school.

Roger A. Coomer, whose resignation from his $84,400-a-year job as vice president for fiscal affairs is scheduled to take effect Monday, filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy liquidation on Friday in federal court in Midland.

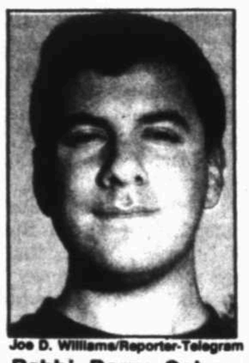

The two-page petition said only that Coomer had assets worth at least $100,000 and liabilities of at least $100,000, The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

Odessa College President Philip Speegle last month said Coomer had told colleagues he suffered personal losses from investing in the same kinds of high-risk, mortgage-backed derivatives that led to the two-year school's current fiscal crisis.

Reports indicate the junior college lost $6.6 million from trading in derivatives in the past year and has an additional $22 million in derivatives investments that it can't afford to sell.

Speegle and others said the investments were Coomer's responsibility and that they were unaware until earlier this year the extent of the investments or their extreme volatility and high risk.

Interest rate increases combined with a downturn in the bond market have sent the college's portfolio spiraling downward.

Congregation welcomes new rabbi to Odessa synagogue

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Temple Beth El Synagogue, which serves all of the Permian Basin and much of West Texas, welcomes new Rabbi Barry Cohen, who will be conducting services twice a month for the next year.

A recent rabbinical school graduate from the University of Michigan, Cohen has spent a year in Jerusalem and another in Cincinnati as part of his master's training.

Cohen intends to work with the West Texas congregation, which consists of about 65 families, said Roy Elsner, president of the Odessa synagogue. Worshipers come from as far away as Fort Stockton, since the next nearest synagogue is in Lubbock.

Temple Beth El has enjoyed a close association with the rabbinical school, which has sent rabbis for several years now.

"They only send us their very best students," Elsner said. "They keep us in touch with the rest of the world," he said.

Cohen is a native of Memphis, Tenn., and classifies himself as reformed Jewish rather than conservative or orthodox. This is a reluctant classification because Cohen maintains much of the traditional practice of Judaism.

This dovetails nicely with the Odessa congregation, since many members are on the liberal side of conservative, or on the conservative side of reformed, Elsner said. Some West Texans defy all attempts at classification — they just know they are Jewish, Elsner explained.

Cohen is coming to the temple following the departure of Rabbi Roberto Feldman, who conducted services there for the last

Daytime TV offers abundant selection of 'naughty' viewing

One of the fun things about having a day off in the middle of the week is that you get to watch daytime television, which of course means you will be afforded the unique opportunity to see naughty bedroom scenes on soap operas, hear naughty sex topics discussed on talk shows and investigate naughty drug happenings on the tabloid programs, such as "Hard Copy" and "Current Affair."

Ott

And you thought the only way you could have naughty smut delivered directly to your home was via pay-per-view late at night. Silly you. If you want to be titillated, all you have to do is call in sick and then tune in to your favorite daytime program. The rest will take care of itself.

Allow me to explain.

Because of a scheduling conflict here at the office the other day, I found myself off on a Wednesday. What could I do?

A quick 18 holes of golf got me through the morning portion of the day, but by 1:30 that afternoon, I found myself back at the house with nothing to do.

So I did what all Americans do when faced with such a dilemma. I turned on the television set. And the sex, drugs and crime stories spewed forth in rapid fashion.

The first thing I witnessed was a soap opera, featuring a man and a woman — without the benefit of clothes, at least as far as I could tell — frolicking about on a half-made bed. They appeared to be having a delightful time, but after watching them roll around for three or four minutes, I became insanely jealous and, thus, had no choice but to switch the channel to something a bit more intellectually stimulating . . . namely, one of those Geraldo-type talk shows that routinely examines — with great care and sensitivity — some of the monumental issues facing the world as we know it.

In this particular case, the "monumental issue" being explored was why some overweight women insist on dressing in provocative outfits and why that behavior disturbs their equally overweight daughters.

It was, as you can well imagine, a terribly important subject, and one that I followed with great interest for, oh, a good 30 seconds or so.

Then it was on to other things . . . in this case, "Hard Copy," whose cover story was an in-depth interview with a handsome young man who was labeled — and I quote — "the drug dealer of the Hollywood stars."

All right! Keep that naughty smut coming!

OK, I will. It seems, according to "Hard Copy" investigators, that this young man spent a couple of years in prison before deciding to — surprise! — write a tell-all book about drug usage among the stars. And, what's more, he is naming names. Jack Nicholson, for example, is called "a heavy cocaine user."

Eddie Murphy, on the other hand, is said to be squeaky clean. He likes to host big parties with lots of beautiful women at his home but insists that no one brings drugs.

Very interesting, indeed.

Still, after a few more minutes of exciting revelations, I began to feel just a tinge of guilt. Why was I watching this stuff? Shouldn't I be concerned about more weighty issues, things that could determine the future of world peace?

Of course I should. So I switched to CNN where a very dignified woman was discussing whether or not the United States should invade Haiti and what ramifications such action would have on the Clinton foreign policy.

I immediately fell asleep and dreamed of overweight women in provocative clothes.

Mrs. Harris died Friday at an Odessa hospital following a brief illness.

She was born Jan. 31, 1920, in Celeste. She married Charlie Harris on May 21, 1938, in Kilgore. He died Dec. 14, 1990.

Mrs. Harris moved to Odessa in 1958 from Midland. She was a homemaker and a member of the Baptist church.

Survivors include one daughter, Barbara Elaine Harris of Odessa.

Matthew Molinar

Graveside services for Matthew Flores Molinar, infant son of Oscar and Melissa Molinar of Midland, were held Saturday at Fairview Cemetery with Israel Patino, minister of Spanish Loma Vista Church of Christ, officiating. Thomas Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

He died Friday at a Midland hospital.

Survivors include his parents; his grandparents, Frank and Cecilia Lozano of Midland and Irma Ruiz of Midland; and his great-grandparents, Alfredo and Ramona Patino of Midland and Manuela Arredondo of Midland.

James Abbe

BIG SPRING — Services for James Abbe, 65, of Big Spring, are set for 10 a.m. Monday at the Nalley-Pickle & Welch Rosewood Chapel with Dr. Kenneth Patrick, pastor of First Baptist Church in Big Spring, officiating. Burial will follow at Mt. Olive Memorial Park with Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Abbe died Friday in a Big Spring hospital.

He was born Feb. 23, 1929, in Howard County. He married Zelda Franklin on July 3, 1948, in Big Spring.

A lifelong resident of Big Spring, Abbe graduated from Big Spring High School and Howard County College. He went to work for the U.S. Postal Service and was employed in the finance office from 1952-70 in Big Spring. He later was transferred to Midland and was the director of finance until retiring in September of 1989.

He coached Little League baseball for 17 years and served one term as commissioner. He also worked as a volunteer and was active in R.S.V.P. in Big Spring. In addition, he was involved in the VITA tax assistance program.

He was preceded in death by five brothers and two sisters.

Survivors include his wife; two daughters, Judy Martin of Austin and Jamie Denise Donnelly of Dallas; one son, Bruce Abbe of Pampa; three sisters, Billie Merle Parker of New Mexico, Velma Bearden of Abilene and Lillie Dell Myers of Leander; four grandchildren; and numerous nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Cancer Society, c/o Lucy Bonner, P.O. Box 2121, Big Spring, 79721-2121; or to the American Heart Association, Howard County Division, P.O. Box 1223, Big Spring, 79721-1223.

Laughlin died Thursday at a local hospital.

He was born June 24, 1925, in Rule, where he was reared and educated. Following graduation from high school, he joined the Marines in 1942, serving in the South Pacific Theater. He was honorably discharged in 1945.

Laughlin married Thelma Ruth Edwards on Oct. 24, 1947, and the family moved to Midland in 1953. Laughlin worked for Teledyne until his retirement. While working for Teledyne, he was project supervisor of the widening of the Panama Canal. Following his retirement, he was an active volunteer for Meals on Wheels of Midland. He was a member of St. Paul's United Methodist Church.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Mike Laughlin of Midland and Russell Laughlin of Dallas; two daughters, Dell Garrett and Patty Murphy, both of Midland; one brother, James Russell Laughlin of Lake Charles, La.; seven grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; four nieces and three nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to Meals on Wheels, 3301x Sinclair Ave., Midland, Texas, 79707.

Troy Gifford Sr.

ABILENE — Services for Troy Amos Gifford Sr., 88, of Abilene, were held at 11:30 a.m. Saturday at Elliot-Hamel Chapel of Memories. The Rev. H.B. Terry officiated. Burial followed in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Gifford died Friday in an Abilene hospital.

He was born in Tolar. He attended Hastings School, north of Lueders. He was a farmer and a rancher. He owned the Goodyear Store in Big Spring from 1929-49 when he moved to his ranch north of Clyde. He married the former Ruedell A. Kennedy in 1929 in Abilene. His wife preceded him in death. Gifford moved to Abilene in 1957 and later sold his ranch and retired in 1986. He was a member of First Baptist Church.

Survivors include his son, Troy Amos Gifford Jr. of Midland; his sisters, Erlene Davis of Abilene and Mrs. Clyde Latimer of Baird; and a grandson.

Lewis Schaefer

ODESSA — Services for Lewis F. Schaefer, 68, of Odessa are set for 2 p.m. Monday at St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Catholic Church in Odessa with the Rev. James Bridges officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens with Frank W. Wilson Funeral Directors in charge of arrangements.

Schaefer died Friday in an Odessa hospital.

He was born Nov. 8, 1925, in Tazewell, Ill., and he married Phyllis Horton on May 22, 1947, in Pekin, Ill.

He moved to Odessa in July of 1959 from Pekin. He was a member of Odessa Country Club and the American Petroleum Institute. In addition, he had been a past director of the Oil Man's Golf Tournament. He served as an usher at St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Catholic Church.

Schaefer served in the U.S. Army from January 1944 to May 1946. As a member of Patton's 3rd Army, he participated in the Saar Palatinate Triangle Campaign, the battle for Aueromacker and the attack on the Seigfried Line 2, where his unit suffered 35 percent casualities.

Schaefer was awarded the Bronze Star. Other decorations included the Unit Citation with oak leaf cluster, Combat Infantryman's Badge, European Theater Ribbon with three battle stars and the American Theater Ribbon.

He was again called to active duty during the Korean Conflict.

He was preceded in death by a son, Steven Scott Schaefer in 1955.

Survivors include his wife; one daughter, Michelle Stoehr of Odessa; one sister, Helen Gray of Pekin; two brothers, Raymond W. Schaefer and James A. Schaefer, both of Pekin; and two grandchildren.

Clara Turner

Graveside services for Clara Hann Phinizy Butcher Turner, a 30-year resident of Midland, will be held at 3 p.m. today at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Stockton Williams of Trinity Episcopal Church officiating.

Mrs. Turner died Thursday in Phoenix, Ariz.

The family requests that memorials be made to a favorite charity in Mrs. Turner's name.

Grace Clark

ABILENE — Services for Grace Clark, 93, have been set for 3 p.m. Monday at the Wylie Baptist Church. The Rev. Oscar Fanning and the Rev. Mike Patterson will officiate. Burial will follow in Elmwood Memorial Park under the direction of Elliot-Hamil Funeral Home.

Ms. Clark died Saturday.

She was born in Buffalo Gap, Taylor County. She attended Bethel School and graduated from Abilene High School. She received her teaching certificate from Simmons College, now Hardin-Simmons University. She taught school at Cedar Creek for two years before she married William E. Clark Sept. 14, 1922, in Abilene. She was a member of Wylie Baptist Church and had been a member of Potosi Baptist Church. She was a Sunday school teacher and a member of the Women's Missionary Union.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1980, four sisters and three brothers.

Survivors include her son, William Travis Clark of Dallas; and her daughters, Nellivee Clark and Betty Grace Clark, both of Midland.

The family requests memorials be directed to the building fund of Wylie Baptist Church.

RABBI: Cohen comes to Odessa synagogue year. "We're really grateful for these young men," Elsner said.

The timing of Cohen's arrival is fortuitous as Jews prepare for the High Holy Days.

The High Holy Days begin Sept. 5 with Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year. During the next 10 days, those of the Jewish faith seek forgiveness for any wrongs committed against God or man.

The High Holy Days end Sept. 14 with Yom Kippur.

The intervening time period is set aside for self-examination. "It's a time to take stock — to decide where you are as a person and as a community," Elsner explained.

As a member of the reform movement, Cohen's aims are to help people live and practice Judaism in a modern society. People need to make informed decisions about their lives and the practice of their religion so as "... to make your decisions and know why you made your decision," he said.

"What the reform movement is not, is, it is not dogma," Cohen said.

In addition to his regular services, Cohen will work individually and with groups of synagogue members and will work with parents, an important part of a rabbi's duties.

Services at the temple, 1501 N. Grandview, are every Friday at 8 p.m.

When the rabbi is not handling the service, lay members serve in that capacity.

HOSPITAL: Glenwood offers health checks

(From 1B)

■ Difficulty in thinking rationally and seeing all aspects of a problem.

■ Rigidity of views, prejudices.

■ Out-of-place aggression and irritability.

■ Withdrawal from relationships.

The authors of "Adolescent Stress" also note that not all stress is caused by negative events. For example, winning a competition can be just as stressful as losing one.

Ms. Rose said just talking about problems can be helpful. When that doesn't work, parents can consider getting the emotional health check for their children.

Before getting an assessment, parents should answer the following questions:

■ Does your child have trouble with friends?

■ Does your child have trouble with school work?

■ Is your child difficult to discipline?

■ Does your child misuse free time, get into mischief or become easily bored?

■ Does your child frequently complain of physical problems for which no cause is found?

■ Does your child often look unhappy, frightened or angry ... for no apparent reason?

"Any combination of these behaviors can be your child's call for help," Ms. McCright said. She noted that Glenwood assessments are confidential. For more information or to make an appointment for an assessment, call 563-1200.

Man that grand jury indicted in boating deaths posts bond

ATHENS (AP) — A Henderson County grand jury has indicted a 28-year-old man in the June boating deaths of two girls at Lake Athens.

Walter Nicholas Brigham Friday surrendered on involuntary manslaughter charges. He was released after posting $10,000 bond.

The indictments allege Brigham was intoxicated while operating a boat on June 18 and "unlawfully and recklessly" caused the deaths of two girls, Cara Shotwell, 13, and Amanda Nicole Trantham, 4, in another boat.

This weekend, Joseph William and Quentina Brininstool are celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary with a dinner at Ranchland Hills Country Club in their honor. The dinner was hosted by the couples children and guests included friends, family, and relatives, with music provided by Bill Ervin.

On August 28, 1954, Joe married the former Quentina Steinke at the cathedral of Our Lady of Perpetual Help in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Joe grew up in Jal, New Mexico, while Quentina was born and raised in Oklahoma City. The couple has six children - Joe of Carlsbad, NM, Sandra Houser of Boerne, Theresa McQueen of San Angelo, Kathy Carter of Round Rock, and Elizabeth and Brooks of Midland. They also have three grandchildren, who are celebrating the occasion with them.

The Brininstools moved to Midland eleven years ago after twenty-five years in Houston. Joe retired two years ago following thirty-seven years of working at Exxon; he now spends his leisure time playing golf and is an active member of the Permian Basin Crude Oil Marketers Association. Quentina is active in the community, including Hospice and St. Stephen's Catholic Church. They are both members of the Exxon Annuitant Club and Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Former employee wants state to pay whistle-blower judgment

HOUSTON (AP) — A former state employee has asked the Texas Supreme Court to force the state to pay a $13.7 million whistle-blower judgment that the high court upheld six months ago.

The state has refused to pay the award to George Green, a former state Department of Human Services architect, because the Legislature didn't make a specific appropriation for it in a $70 billion state budget.

With interest growing at the rate of $4,500 a day, the award now totals about $18 million.

Green, who is now unemployed, won the judgment in 1991 from a Travis County jury, which determined he was fired for reporting questionable dealings between agency employees and contractors.

His case was the first major test of the whistle-blower law, designed to protect public employees who report alleged wrongdoing.

Green on Friday filed a petition for a writ of mandamus asking the Supreme Court to force Comptroller John Sharp to make payment after Sharp rejected a demand letter from Green's attorneys.

Sharp said he was sympathetic to Green but had been advised by the attorney general's office and his own legal staff that he lacked the authority to issue a payment warrant.

Green blamed the delay on Attorney General Dan Morales, who spent three years fighting the judgment in the appellate courts.

The Supreme Court upheld the judgment on Feb. 2. It became final a few weeks later after Morales declined to ask for a rehearing.

Morales spokesman Ward Tisdale said the 3rd Court of Appeals, in affirming Green's judgment last year, said it would take a legislative appropriation to be paid.

"Mr. Green has to go to the Legislature to get an appropriation. The attorney general is not in any way prohibiting him from receiving his judgment," Tisdale said.

But Green said in his petition the state budget "clearly provides that the Texas Department of Human Services may transfer from other appropriated funds" the money for the judgment.

TRUST: Counselors, residents attend ROPES program such as burglars, "hot" check writers, forgers, embezzlers and schemers, who were routed by judges to the center rather than to prison in hopes that their lives can be rehabilitated in a structured environment and that they would make monetary restitution to the people whom they had harmed.

Among Midland County's approximately 3,000 felony and misdemeanor probationers, there are 48 probationers assigned to the center for up to two years. They are supervised through Midland Judicial District's Community Supervision and Corrections Department.

"We try to develop attitudes and habits and behaviors that will assist them from now on — give them the tools to continue in life and society without stubbing their toe again," Jones said.

In that pursuit, the center is sending its residents and staffers to the ROPES (Reality Oriented Physical Experiential Systems) program at Glenwood, a psychiatric hospital in Midland.

Through a series of group-dependent exercises and adventures, such as scaling walls, walking logs, falling backward and swinging to a landing, the participants are taught to trust one another in solving problems through group assistance.

In one exercise, a person voluntarily falls backward in the faith that a group of people behind that person will catch him or her a moment before the person would have slammed onto the ground.

"That's trust," Jones said.

In another trust-building exercise, participants, one at a time, scale a 13-foot wall with the aid of people hoisting them from the ground and others tugging at them from a platform near the top of the wall.

The exercise, too, is designed to impress upon people that they can accomplish seemingly impossible goals if only they utilize the proper tools and resources and persist in solving problems.

"You really have to trust completely (in overcoming the wall)," said Donna King, a drug-alcohol counselor at the center. "You let go, and you trust completely" even though doing so initially may be "tough."

The exercise is testimony to the premise that "Faith is action — not a word," Ms. King said.

The probationers and staff members who completed a recent ROPES course succinctly described what they had gotten out of the course with such words as "friendship," "motivation," "sweat," "energy," "nothing," "patience," "trust," "help" and "confidence."

One probationer said the ROPES experience was "more like supporting each other. In other words, 'scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours.'"

He said he felt "good about everybody" completing the course. Eight residents of the center and several staff members finished the recent ROPES series.

Robert Williams, the restitution center's program coordinator, noted that the course is similar to a military "obstacle course."

"A whole lot of decision making is taking place here," Williams said. Since one person cannot accomplish any of the tasks alone, teamwork, communications and listening are involved in completing goals.

The net results are the beginning steps in building "trust, confidence and self-esteem."

Williams, who went through an earlier ROPES course, said he learned to be "more at ease" with the probationers.

The course is to help build mutual trust among probationers and staffers.

"You can fall and make mistakes just like they can," Williams said. "You get back up and kind of dust yourself off" and keep going. "I've fallen down, too. We've all gotten dirty."

After probationers and staffers completed the course, Williams noted that they began "talking more to each other rather than one feeling he or she may be more superior.

"They are talking and communicating. Their attitude has just gotten so much better in the sense that 'I can do it. I know I can do it.'"

James "Jim" Bakke, a residential supervisor at the center, said that many of the probationers had "lived very negative lives," either endured a "bad parental environment or no parental environment" at all, suffered abuses of various sorts and often knew only "the negative side of things."

As a result, they fell into trouble with the law.

"So, through patience on our part, we try to get them out of this 'comfort zone' that they seemed to have grown up in" and to retrain and reeducate them through a structured environment that encourages honesty, hard work, responsibility and accountability, Bakke said.

The process, however, is often "very slow" and comes in "small building blocks," Bakke said.

Other than reducing the incident of crime and ensuring a safer community, the upshot of the overall restitution-center program, Jones said, is to help the probationers to "learn to think" and in their decision making to "weigh the consequences" of all of their actions.

NOTED DOCTOR 'PSYCHS' PEOPLE SLIM & SMOKE-FREE

NEW WEIGHT LOSS-STOP SMOKING METHOD HAILED AS BREAKTHROUGH-SUCCESS RATES TOP 95%

MIDLAND-ODESSA Betty Powell was an 'expert' on weight loss. "You name it, and I've tried it", she said, "... diets, shots, pills, Nutrisystems, Jenny Craig, Slim Fast, etc. Oh sure, I'd manage to lose a few pounds, but I always regained them, with a few extra to spare. I'd almost given up hope, when some of my friends told me how they each had not only lost weight but kept it off through a group hypnotherapy session conducted by Dr. Kaloski. Three and a half months after attending the seminar I had lost 43 lbs., reaching my goal weight of 115. It's been a year now and I haven't gained back a single pound! Best of all, I did it without dieting."

Frank Lopez was a 3 pack-a-day, 31 year smoker who had tried "the Patch", nicotine gum, white-knuckle willpower and even other hypnosis programs. "Five wall-climbing days was the longest I ever made it", he said, "Dr. Kaloski helped me quit smoking with absolutely no withdrawal. It's been 2 years and I've never felt better."

These people, and thousands more like them, are now being helped through the highly innovative and often remarkably successful techniques pioneered by Dr. B. E. Kaloski. Holder of Doctorate Degrees in both Counseling Psychology and Clinical Hypnotherapy, Kaloski founded the nation's largest chain of private hypnosis clinics, is a Fellow of the National Board for Hypnotic Anaesthesiology, past president of the American Board of Hypnotherapy and author of "Psych Yourself Slim" and "The No Nonsense Guide to Smoking Cessation." With over 100,000 patient hours in group and private practice, he is one of the nation's most experienced hypnotherapists.

"Success rates have just skyrocketed with this method," said Kaloski, referring to his Multiphasic Motivational Programming, so revolutionary that it is part of the prestigious American Institute of Hypnotherapy's training program for Doctoral degree students. "All habits are the result of both conscious and subconscious processing. Both are equally vital and important and each must be addressed. MMP is the only program that has been designed to provide dynamic intervention on both levels. Results may at times seem truly miraculous but these techniques are based on sound, proven, time-tested principles."

" Contrary to popular belief, everyone can be hypnotized. A hypnotized person is not asleep; they're just fully relaxed, intensely focused, aware and always in control."

According to Dr. A.M. Krasner, noted author, educator and researcher in hypnosis, Kaloski's made a major breakthrough in weight and smoking control. "By merging hypnosis with other therapeutic techniques, he's created a unique and innovative program that, more than anyone's, produces remarkable results. I highly recommend his seminar, especially to those who've had little or no success with other programs."

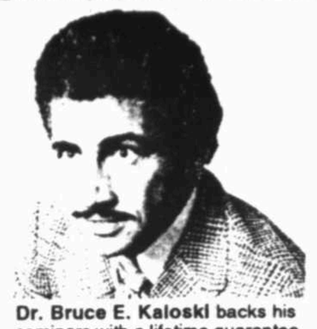

In recent interviews on NBC and CBS, Kaloski listed the major obstacles faced in losing weight and quitting smoking and explained how a person overcomes them with his method. " First, most people rely on willpower - a very unreliable method. Willpower means you have to deprive yourself of something you want. With my method, willpower is unnecessary since you can't feel deprived of something you don't want. We redirect a person's priorities so that the desire for the fattening foods or cigarettes is replaced by a stronger desire for a slim, trim figure, vibrant health, longevity and abundant vitality. After our seminar a person eats less because they actually want less. They don't smoke because they actually don't want a cigarette. That's important."

" Second, they concentrate on changing the action but not the attitude... a big mistake. Before the weight can come off and stay off the body, it must come off from between the ears. The same principle applies to smoking. The only way to permanently lose weight or stop smoking is to change one's attitude toward food and cigarettes. That's exactly what this program accomplishes."

" Third, they often find a great void in their life without the food or cigarettes that have been their friends for years. This often causes a relapse. I've solved that problem by programming everyone, while in hypnosis, with three positive replacements to fill that void. Smokers also benefit by not gaining weight after quitting."

" The first hour is the same for everyone. That's when we lay the crucial groundwork for success. After a short break, I conduct the weight loss session, which takes about 30 minutes - sending the smokers off to puff to their heart's content since it'll be the last cigarettes they'll ever have. I then conduct the stop smoking session."

At his seminar, he also shows people how to improve other areas of their life as well, such as exercise motivation, stress, memory & concentration, self-esteem & confidence, financial success, procrastination, alcohol, insomnia, pain relief, depression, fears & phobias, to name a few.

Dr. Bruce E. Kaloski backs his seminars with a lifetime guarantee

"I feel strongly committed to those who take my programs and offer a lifetime guarantee-free attendence at future seminars ."

" While my private session fee is $295, I can offer these seminars for just $39.95 for either program or $59.95 for both, thus putting them within the reach of almost everyone. I also offer a discount for groups of 3 or more."

Dr. Kaloski will personally conduct his highly acclaimed seminars in Odessa on Wed., Aug. 24 at the Odessa Raddisson (formerly the Hilton), 5200 E. University (at Loop 338); and in Midland on Thurs., Aug. 25 at the Holiday Inn, 4300 W. Highway 80. All seminars start at 7:30 pm. Registration is at the door beginning at 7:00 pm. Cash, Check, MC/VISA are accepted.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Abell Junior High School has been selected as a Mentor School in the Texas Middle School Network, a program of schools that use one another as resources to implement concepts and practices.

Mentor Schools will be recognized as leaders and will be asked to take an active role in developing a communications network among educators and sponsor a staff development program for network schools they serve during each year of the initiative.

Abell Junior High will share information about the middle-school concept of team teaching, in which educators in the same grade level are divided into teams composed of mathematics, English, social studies, and science. In addition, Abell uses block scheduling, which provides classes that are 105 minutes long in order to expand the curriculum, better prepare students for the TAAS test and develop students' critical-thinking skills.

Spy agency's action demands review now

How far will the CIA go to keep information it wants out of "enemy" hands? Pretty far, apparently.

And no longer is the "enemy" the Soviet Union. Congress and the American people are the enemy now, it seems.

The nation's spymasters are on the carpet because they've spent $350 million in taxpayer money constructing a spanking-new complex for the National Reconnaissance Office in Northern Virginia not far from the capital. And despite the fact that the collapse of the Soviet Union has removed the main opponent that the CIA was expected to keep tabs on, the real rub in this deal is the fact that the CIA actually hid the construction of the NRO complex from congressional overseers by listing it as a Rockwell International office complex.

The CIA buried the costs in the greater intelligence budget to make it more difficult for the congressional oversight committee to see the expenditures and question them.

That smacks of bureaucratic manhandling of both Congress and the American taxpayers. If such construction projects aren't subject to congressional scrutiny, the costs involved in them cannot be controlled and waste can proliferate unchecked.

And exactly who is the NRO planning to spy on since the Soviet Union is no more? The Middle East? Haiti? The American public? That question does need to be answered.

However, the even greater issue in this incident is the high-handed attitude of the CIA in having such a complex constructed "on the sly." That indicates a mindset in the spy agency that whatever it does is alright because it — not the Congress, and certainly not the American people — knows best.

That is a dangerous mentality that must be fully explored by the Congress and corrected before it proceeds further.

Granberry sentence reveals public mood

Former Lubbock mayor Jim Granberry is a good man who went wrong and knows it. He is getting off with a light sentence in a case involving alleged improprieties in the state parole system — and he probably knows that, too.

Granberry served on the parole board from 1989 until his resignation in May 1991. Last week he blamed himself for the mess he got into in lying about the extent of his parole consulting business during a federal hearing in 1992. . . .

Granberry's sentence was a slap on the wrist — six months in a halfway house at Tyler, and five years' probation.

Cries of foul quickly have been heard from groups that speak out for the rights of crime victims, and they have a point. The state cannot countenance the slightest bit of hanky-panky in the process of considering paroles for criminals.

Granberry poses no threat to society. If that were the only factor, the sentence he got would not cause a stir: spending nights and weekends in a rehabilitation center but being able to leave the facility during the day.

It is the principle of the thing, however. Public trust in government matters is at stake. So protests go up, and Granberry is likely to hear them for some time.

That should not surprise Granberry. He, as much as anyone, should know the surly mood of people toward our revolving-door system of justice.

Mitchell should play ball to save health-care system

We'd like to second an idea put forth in a recent Wall Street Journal editorial. . . .

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine — Major League baseball's commissioner-in-waiting and author of the latest Rube Goldberg contraption known as health-care reform — would do a great patriotic service if he immediately resigned his current post and took the new one.

Two crises are upon us — "the baseball strike . . . and the possible destruction of our health-care system," says The Journal.

"Most Americans would agree that the latter prospect is a more crucial concern — and it is. That's why we think they'll want to join us in urging . . . Mitchell to answer his country's call and put his managerial skills to work at once, as commissioner of baseball. In public life, as in war, those serving the nation go where they are needed, and baseball needs Senator Mitchell now — before he ruins the American health-care system." . . .

If Mitchell doesn't take this good advice, we bet he will soon wish he had.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Aug. 21, the 233rd day of 1994. There are 132 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on Aug. 21, 1944, the United States, Britain, the Soviet Union and China opened talks at Dumbarton Oaks in Washington that helped pave the way for establishment of the United Nations.

On this date:

In 1680, Pueblo Indians took possession of Santa Fe, N.M., after driving out the Spanish.

In 1831, former slave Nat Turner led a violent insurrection in Virginia. He was later executed.

Clinton invents fake health-care crisis

WASHINGTON — Government, like other situation comedies, is in summer reruns.

On April 30, 1970, President Nixon, addressing the nation about the U.S. "incursion" into Cambodia, warned that the United States dare not be perceived as "a pitiful, helpless giant." Recently, as Congress writhed in its crime bill agonies, Speaker Tom Foley exclaimed, "Let us not be a helpless giant!"

Will

The federal government is an increasingly helpless giant, which is a good thing, given that the alternative is for the giant to get its way, which would not be good for a free society. As the health-care debate rages, remember the last time a problem partly caused by government (price and supply controls) was misdescribed as a "crisis" by politicians eager to expand government's supervision of society.

Two months into the single term of the last Democratic president before the current one, that president addressed the nation twice in three days, proclaiming an energy "crisis." He blamed greed of the oil companies and the guile of its lobbyists for Congress' failure to pass an intricate program commensurate with the supposed scale of the crisis. There were two problems with President Carter's message.

His clear implication was that Congress, then in the 23rd consecutive year of Democratic control of both houses, was controlled by corrupt and cowardly toadies. This did not put Congress in a cooperative mood.

The oil companies' alleged greed was, Carter said, gouging the public with high prices. This thought, although impeccably populist, was discordant with his puritan program, the premise of which was that prices should be higher to discourage America's profligate use of energy.

The energy "crisis" faded partly because the next president, a deregulator, stopped some government measures that were making matters worse and allowed the market to make matters better. Sen. Phil Gramm's health-care bill would provide a rerun of this, regarding today's supposed crisis.

Today's president promises to deal with the health-care "crisis" (which at first was called a crisis of costs, but now is called a crisis of access) by increasing the demand for health care, while controlling the supply of it and simultaneously lowering costs. (Costs allegedly reflect the greed of insurance companies, pharmaceutical manufacturers and others). One result of Clinton's campaign for this implausible plan is Clinton's current political anemia. This anemia is being mischaracterized as a "crisis" of the presidency. It really is the resurgence of the American norm, the natural constitutional condition called congressional supremacy.

When asked what the president wanted in the crime bill, Rep. Newt Gingrich said acerbicly: "The president wants many things. He doesn't have the votes. The fact is, a free society is not about placating the senior elected official."

Clinton, sagging even below his 43 percent beginning, cannot revive the heroic presidency to energize a government now broadly distrusted. He may wish the American mood were what it was in the mid-1960s, or mid-1930s, but it is more like what is was in the mid-1920s, when Oliver Wendell Holmes said of President Coolidge, "While I don't expect anything very astonishing from him, I don't want anything very astonishing."

Senator hurls bricks from glass house

WASHINGTON — Senate Banking Committee Chairman Donald Riegle, D-Mich., who once invoked a memory "disability" before the Senate Ethics Committee, can now brag about sacking someone accused of a graceful dodge.

Anderson

Deputy Treasury Secretary Roger C. Altman's resignation last week was the price he paid for misleading Congress about contacts between Treasury and the White House regarding the government's investigation of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan. Treasury aide Joshua Steiner memorialized the moment in his diary last February by describing how Altman had "gracefully ducked" committee questions about the contacts.

During the grueling Senate hearings on Whitewater, Riegle afforded Altman little mercy. Haranguing and hollering at times for the live television audience, Riegle exhorted: "We can't have a situation in the future where anybody in the executive branches comes before this committee, or any committee of the Congress, and gives an evasive answer, an incomplete answer, a less-than-the-full-truth answer."

Riegle ultimately spearheaded the dump-Altman movement. But he carried it off with all the moral authority of a defrocked priest. A review of Riegle's recent history tells the story:

Back in 1991, Riegle and four colleagues were hauled in front of the Senate Ethics Committee on charges of exerting improper influence on behalf of now-jailed savings and loan tycoon Charles Keating. Keating had been doling out campaign contributions to politicians who were willing to run interference with the federal regulators targeting his high-flying thrift.

Between January and April 1987, Riegle collected more than $77,000 in legal campaign contributions from Keating and his associates. Later on, Riegle had only faint recollections of those months milking the Keating connection. A spate of meetings with Keating, his lobbyist, his accountant and other senators were conveniently forgotten.

Riegle had been resolutely clear that if "anybody ever tries to juxtapose fund-raising help with any request to do some specific action for them, I would view that as improper." But Keating Five prosecutor Robert S. Bennett unearthed piles of evidence strongly disputing that claim.

Donald Riegle met Charles Keating on Jan. 28, 1987. Notes of the meeting taken by a Riegle aide show that Keating — who knew Riegle was in line to be the next chairman of the Senate Banking Committee — offered to raise up to $150,000 for Riegle's re-election campaign.

On March 6, 1987, Riegle met with Edwin Gray, then the government's top thrift regulator, where he began planning key meetings between federal regulators and a group of senators. Shortly after the meeting, Riegle flew to Phoenix, where his meetings with Keating included a helicopter tour of his real estate empire, golf courses and hotels. Bennett later maintained that "the evidence is simply overwhelming" that Riegle visited Keating's Phoenix headquarters for fund-raising purposes.

In defending Riegle before the Ethics Committee, Riegle's attorney appealed to senators to take pity on his client's poor memory: "Perhaps it is unfortunate but. . . Sen. Riegle does not have a detailed recollection of his conversation with Keating or others," Thomas Green told the committee.

Bennett wasn't biting. After a 17-month investigation, Bennett strongly suggested that Riegle had perjured himself. If there was no linkage between Keating's contributions and Riegle's favors, Bennett argued, "why is there so much substantial evidence that Sen. Riegle was making an effort to obscure his role?"

Despite Bennett's efforts, Riegle walked away with a wrist-slap from his fellow senators.

Prison would have been Nixon's salvation

A prison term would surely have been the salvation of Richard Nixon. The truth became apparent as that rich assortment of aging ex-jailbirds marched through the parlor this week in the TV documentary history titled "Watergate."

These were the men who did the time because in different ways they had done the crime for the president.

Yet now, a generation later, they seemed not just at peace with themselves about what had once been painful humiliation, but actually pleased with the celebrity status conferred by association with such a famous moment in history.

They exuded the sleek contentment one sees in Rembrandt's Dutch burghers and the comfortable, amused, man-of-the-world style one sees in book editors' expense-account lunching with desperate authors at pricey Manhattan restaurants.

Long ago these old gentlemen had been youthful White House staffers, political factotums and officially licensed intelligence rogues. In two words, not much.

Washington is always full of such officious chaff. They come and go with each passing president, enjoying a moment of reflected glory before disappearing back into the human race or turning into hired guns in the lobbying racket.

Watergate, however, had given the old Nixon crowd an enduring claim on fame. They had been on the front line of history. When Fred Emery, who made this remarkable film, asked them to appear in the fullness of their age to recall the follies of their youth, they turned out en masse.

There was once-boyish John Dean, one of political scoundreldom's all-time, champion whistle-blowers, now as stately and plump as Buck Mulligan and as dull as a lecturer in mechanical physics. John Ehrlichman passed through and even H.R. "Bob" Haldeman sat for the camera, though he must have been fatally ill when he did it.

How to explain to the backward-baseball-cap crowd what giants these two once were? They were arrogance personified. Yet both took the fall for Nixon, even poor Ehrlichman who had slavishly followed the Nixon line in telling a Senate committee that the president's inherent right to violate the law extended all the way to murder.

Ultra-loyal Gordon Liddy appeared looking hardly a year older than the day he offered to stand on a street corner so he could be shot by drive-by assassins to atone for botching a piece of the job.

Howard Hunt of the CIA's famously ill-fitting red wig was there. So was James McCord, who burgled for his country, not always legally, wisely or too well. And Chuck Colson: bold, brash, colorful-talking Chuck Colson famous for telling people he'd run over his own grandmother to serve Richard Nixon.

They all took the fall too, along with John Mitchell, Nixon's close friend and once attorney general, now long dead and unavailable for Emery's camera.

If you remembered this crowd in its youth, you were apt to marvel at how age and a little prison can improve a man. Perhaps there's something to the old idea that paying your debt to society is good for the soul.

Their interviews were liberally intercut with scenes of Nixon being interviewed by David Frost. The contrast was startling.

Nixon, the one member of the group who had been denied jail's enrichment, was obviously neither detached nor distant about Watergate. The Frost interview showed him still emotionally bent under the tonnage of it. He could speak critically of his Watergate involvement, but the body language spoke, to the contrary, of a man in deep denial.

On camera his fellow conspirators seem to have put old sins behind them and gone on with their lives, as people put behind them the deaths of loved ones in order to keep living. Perhaps only prison could have granted Nixon the same release.

Courts require dispute resolution alternatives

On Sunday, July 31, the Reporter-Telegram printed a letter from Carole B. Burrow, in which Ms. Burrow made a plea for dispute resolution prior to trial.

Ms. Burrow may have been unaware that alternative dispute resolution has long been required and encouraged by our courts. Judge John Hyde, who presided over the trial to which Ms. Burrow refers, ordered the matter referred to mediation several weeks prior to the trial. Unfortunately, mediation was unsuccessful, and a trial was necessary.

In 1987, the Texas Legislature enacted Chapter 154 of the Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code and officially sanctioned court-ordered alternative dispute resolution (ADR). In 1989, the District and County Courts-at-Law of Midland County adopted local rules requiring mediation of all family law disputes involving custody or visitation. In recent months, the District Courts have been requiring alternative dispute resolution of selected civil suits.

Mediation is by far the procedure of choice. It is a structured settlement conference conducted in a confidential setting in which a neutral, disinterested person assists the parties, evaluating their dispute and considering their options for resolution. The mediator does not act as a judge, master or arbitrator. Mediators may be selected by agreement of the parties or appointed by the court.

A mediated resolution has advantage over a court- or jury-imposed resolution because 1) the parties are empowered to formulate their own outcome, allowing flexibility in structuring the settlement; 2) a case settled in mediation terminates the dispute, eliminating the possibility of appeal. The cost of mediation will vary depending on the complexity of the dispute. In most cases, it is far less costly than the future legal fees and costs associated with protracted litigation.

Locally, informal statistics have shown that almost 90 percent of the cases referred to mediation have resulted in a full settlement. Even in those cases that are not fully settled, participants often report that mediation had a positive impact on their cases.

In summary, ADR is an effective enhancement to the trial process. It allows litigants to be active participants in the decision-making process and usually results in significant savings of time and expense. It is a process that is fully endorsed by the judiciary of Midland County.

Our judicial system makes jurors slaves

I thought that slavery went out with the Emancipation Proclamation about 150 years ago. Apparently our judicial system forgot. Summons were sent to about 400 area residents, and being mostly hard-working people, many did not respond — angering Tyler district Judge Nathan White. Well, pardon us Your Highness. Then you cost the Midland taxpayer more money, trouble and effort by instructing your "subordinates" to file writs of attachment against fellow citizens of Midland. Webster's definition of a dictator, No 2: "a ruler with absolute power and authority"; No. 3, "a person whose word must be obeyed." This is quite different from the definition of being a judge.

The way I see it is the 400 summonses constitute a substantial part of Midland's voting population. Estimated to be about 1 percent of the eligible voters consisting of housewives, mothers and fathers with children, workers, employers and employees, all having to stop whatever they are doing to be incarcerated (confined) for indefinite periods of time by non-Midlanders and to do so for virtually no compensation. It's one thing to do your duty as a juror for Midland's judicial needs, but it's another thing to be intimidated or burdened by outside sources in addition to Midland's needs. It also appears that everyone else makes big bucks, the judge about $100,000 per year, $8,300 per month or almost $400 per day; the lawyers, hundreds of thousands of dollars per year or about $1,000 per day. Now what do the citizens get? Summonses? Writ of attachments? Without the jury, the show can't go on. Now consider the jury's rights. What rights? Incarcerated, long hours — days, weeks and sometimes months of one's time, forced into courtroom dramas and situations with guilt over their duties and decisions. Never being allowed to ask a question or raise an objection, all with virtually no compensation. Webster's definition of slavery, No. 2: "a person who is completely dominated by some influence . . ."

I'm really not as radical as I sound but after reading of the recent summonses' response and the judicial response, I have a problem with accepting the whole situation and feel that they couldn't interview 400 people in one day or 300 or 200 . . . Where in the courtroom will everyone stand? How many days will all this take? Will the citizens be compensated for their time? Will their employers be understanding? Will employers be compensated for their loss of productivity? During these difficult economic times, does Midland really need this? Isn't there a better, more compassionate way to handle this? Or do we even care?

Laws don't protect our children enough

As the mother of four children, I continue to be appalled at the way Texas laws do not adequately protect our children. My attention and efforts of recent have been devoted to changing one of those laws. I am referring to the law that allows children to ride in the cargo section of a pickup. On July 3, eight children were killed, and three others critically injured, in an accident in Scurry County. All of these children were riding in the back of a pickup. I originally thought this was against the law . . . until I began to do a little research.

Since then, I have taken this on as a personal crusade, if you will, to strengthen that law. The law regarding this states: "A person commits an offense if the person, at a speed that exceeds 35 miles per hour, operates an open bed pickup truck or an open flatbed truck or tows an open flatbed trailer on a public street or highway when a child younger than 12 years of age is occupying the bed of the truck or trailer." What happens if someone is obeying the law by driving 35 mph and gets hit by someone driving 55 to 65 miles per hour? If my 9-year-old son is riding with me in the cab of a pickup, he, by law, is to be wearing a seat belt. But I can throw him in the back and be legal. I have even been told by some local law-enforcement officers that this law provides a loophole in the child safety-seat laws, depending on who pulls you over and what kind of lawyer you can afford, where you could put a child under the age of four in the back of a pickup rather than in a child safety seat.

Granted, we as parents should be able to make safety choices for our children. However, there are evidently numerous parents who are senseless enough to put their children in the back of a pickup. It only takes once! Wake up Texas! Please help me do something about this! I am spending most of my time writing PTA leaders statewide, contacting any media that will cover my story and contacting local organizations of any kind that will listen. I realize I am just one person, but my hope is that after the public becomes aware of this law, their concern will prompt them to write their legislators.

We can't wait to pass health-care reform

Many members of Congress are telling us that we cannot afford to really reform our health-care system. I am an older American and I believe that we can't afford not to reform the system.

While we have Medicare now, we must remember that Congress has already cut more than $200 billion from the Medicare budget. Prescription drug prices are astronomical, and we all know that those go up as we get older. Bring in the need for long-term care and we can forget about financial security. In order to get any real help, we have to spend almost all our money.

We cannot afford to wait any longer for Congress to pass true health-care reform.

Salaries for deputy sheriffs have dropped

The salaries of deputy sheriffs in Midland County have dipped dangerously low in the last 10 years. In 1984, the salary of a Midland County deputy sheriff was the highest in the state. In 1994, El Paso County deputy sheriffs are the highest paid, earning 27 percent more than Midland deputies.

Since 1984, the cost of living in Midland has increased 29 percent while a deputy sheriff's salary has increased only 5 percent. That makes Midland deputies earn 21 percent less than Odessa police officers, 16 percent less than Odessa deputies, 13 percent less than Midland police officers and 3 percent less than the dispatchers who send them on calls (the dispatchers being non-commissioned, civilian personnel).

In a 1994 salary survey of 340 cities with a population of 50,000 or more, Midland deputies rank 337. To keep high quality law enforcement in Midland County, our commissioners should consider adequate salary increases this year.

Oil firms find personal cars are costly perks

The recent articles concerned with how businesslike and necessary it is to have personal-use cars for some Midland Independent School District (MISD) and city employees have been interesting. This brings back memories of the "good old days" when major oil companies justified personal-use automobiles in much the same way.

The majors eventually found that where shift workers were assigned cars, this required three times the number of vehicles, and car pools seldom decreased with personal assignments to individuals. The end result was the realization a number of years ago that personally assigned cars were mostly expensive perks and were not necessary to attract or retain quality employees; the practice was phased out almost completely.

As times got economically tough, the majors took away personally assigned cars, went initially to large car pools, then to small car pools and relocation and downsizing of offices. Most cars that were taken away were done so without compensation to the employee, but some employees were compensated with a one-time nominal payment. To my knowledge, none of their salaries increased as a result of losing a personally assigned car.

Some folks think that the current movement in the majors is to expand and move highly paid employees to Midland. Some folks think we need a new airport terminal. Some think we need to adjust to the current economics of the area.

Isn't being a taxpayer exciting?

America should do something in Haiti

America is always tested with new conflicts that affect us and different countries in their fight for survival in the world. I think America is labeled the policeman of the world. There is nothing wrong with this. But it does come with great responsibility.

People might think of me as a warmonger or a hawk, but I think the U.S. should do something in Haiti and also get involved in the Serbian war. With Haiti, the time is now to invade, not just to protect our interest but to restore democracy to that country! With the Serbian war, it's getting too late. How long are we going to let this bloodshed go on? If we don't take a stand, who will? Democracy always comes with a price. I understand that. War is ugly but, at times, necessary when talk and rhetoric break down. If America doesn't try to end the war in Serbia, it will probably spill into other countries. In Haiti, if we invade, we need to help a new government chosen by the people to be more democratic to its people.

When, America, will you do something about these atrocities?

Some people get high marks in insensitivity

Odis M. Holiman of Midkiff (Letters, Aug. 14) uses the fanatical and outrageously silly "government mandates" examples to justify inhumane poisoning of pigeons. "The bird lovers and animal lovers and the environmental activists are destroying our nation"?

Because we bird/animal lovers object to poisoning of birds in the manner that is being done, and with our own tax money, and with our sometimes becoming inescapable witnesses to their agony, people like Holiman would like to profess intellectual superiority over those of us who are muddleheaded creature lovers.

I am not an ecological nut, but neither am I void of sensitivity to agonizing suffering in living things, especially when man deliberately causes it. Some people get A-plus in insensitivity.

Resident maintains neighborhood beauty

Bob Hind is an excellent example of an individual working to "Keep Midland Beautiful."

For the fourth summer, Hind has mowed all the vacant lots in his area from Big Spring to A Street and from Cuthbert to Louisiana Avenue. He has maintained the yards of vacant houses next door and across the street from his home.

For three years, he used his walking lawn mower, but this year he bought himself a small riding mower. This is the red-headed gentleman you have seen mowing in the 100 degree-plus weather evenings and weekends.

It has not been because he has needed something to do, because at his regular job he works a lot of overtime.

All of this he has done at his own expense and has received no compensation. He does this because he takes pride in his neighborhood. People tend not to pay attention to freshly mowed lots, but only notice those with badly overgrown weeds and grass, and trash.

Wouldn't it be great if more people would follow his example? When I drive past this area, I appreciate how nice it looks.

I'm sure many others join me in saying publicly, "Thank you, Bob Hind."

Nomination of judge displays leftist policy

A little reported but critical indicator of the philosophy of a presidency is the selection of federal judges. "Watch what they do, not what they say" is sage advice for this president. The latest demonstration of radical leftist policy is the Clinton nomination of Judge H. Lee Sarokin to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the 3rd District (New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware). When we consider that there are currently 95 vacancies to be filled in the federal courts and at least one is vacant in every jurisdiction (including our own), it is clear that we mainstream Americans should inform our senators that we adamantly oppose this nomination and any others like it.

This history of Judge Sarokin is revealing:

- Publicly opposes any pre-trial detention and will not voluntarily jail an individual for any offense until a conviction is obtained. This philosophy would allow intimidation of witnesses, and even a Jeffrey Dahmer would walk the streets until convicted.
- Demonstrated bias toward criminal-case dismissal based on exclusion of evidence technicalities no matter how serious the offense.
- The Appeals Court to which he is nominated removed him from a case over which he had presided for nine years due to a clear bias against business.
- Has been overturned on appeal more times than any judge in the history of the 3rd circuit.
- The National Fraternal Order of Police (250,000 members) strongly opposes the confirmation of Judge Sarokin.

This individual is clearly a radical judicial activist who uses his position to legislate rather than judge the case before him. If approved as an appeals court judge, he will be in a position to direct all federal judges under his jurisdiction, overturn convictions and remove judges who disagree with his ideas from cases before them or from the bench entirely. The Senate will respond when the public takes notice of unpublicized nominations such as this, but they also will routinely approve them without input. Call our senators or we will be next to suffer his version of "justice".

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.
- We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

DAVE BARRY

Most people can use occasional lesson in language

It's time now for Mister Language Person, the expert who answers frequently asked questions about grammar and syntax despite having no idea what "syntax" means.

Barry

Today's first frequently asked question comes from Mick Philip of Raleigh, N.C., who writes:

"I recently bought a microphone from the Shure Microphone Co. The brochure says that it is 'often called the unsurpassed choice of professional performers,' as in: 'Bob, pass me the unsurpassed choice of professional performers.' My question is, should I avoid deodorants that contain alcohol?"

A. Well, you should probably stop DRINKING them.

Q. Speaking of what things are called, I have noticed that when media people refer to the rock musician who changed his name from "Prince" to an unpronounceable symbol, they call him "the artist formerly known as Prince." My question is, what do his friends call him in casual settings? Do they say, "Hey, The Artist Formerly Known As Prince, is there any more bean dip?"

A. No, in casual settings they shorten it, as follows: "Hey, Twit."

Q. Please explain the grammatical difference between "you're" and "your."

A. Certainly. "You're" is a perennial invective that is used in declamative sentences involving property damage.

EXAMPLE: "You're stupid dog ate our wading pool."

Whereas "your" is a disparative rejunction that is used in writing to cable-TV companies.

EXAMPLE: "Your going to fry in hell."

Q. In a game of Hide and Seek, what phrase should the person who is "it" yell to let the other players know that they may safely return to home base?

A. When he was little Mister Language Boy, Mister Language Person yelled, "Ollie Ollie in come free." However, various professional journalists who were asked about this claimed that they yelled, among other things, "Ollie Ollie outs in free," "Ollie Ollie Olsen free," "Ollie Ollie oxen free" and "Red Rover." Ultimately, it will be up to the Supreme Court to decide.

Q. Who is "Ollie"?

A. He is the artist formerly known as "Wayne Newton."

Q. I am writing an operating manual for a nuclear power plant in a major urban area, and I wish to know which is the correct term: "Whoops-a-daisy" or "Whoopsy-daisy."

A. The Association of Associated Atomic Nuclear Plant Engineers recommends: "UH-oh."

Q. According to a transcript published in the Feb. 4, 1994, issue of the Newnan (Ga.) Times Herald (sent in by Will Davis), what exchange took place between a police emergency operator and a man named Bill Eidson, who called 911 when his wife started having sharp abdominal pains?

A. The exchange was as follows:

EIDSON: Uh, ma'am, there is something coming out! There is a baby coming out!

911 OPERATOR: OK, she was pregnant.

Q. Those operators are trained to recognize certain key symptoms.

A. Thank goodness.

Q. Has former Miami Dolphin football player Joe Rose, who is now a sports-talk person on radio station WQAM in Miami, made any good statements on the air?

A. Yes. Speaking about Indianapolis Colts quarterback Jeff George, Joe said: "He's the kind of guy who doesn't like it when anything out of the abnormal happens." Also, referring to baseball star Barry Bonds, Joe asked: "Does he think he walks on water differently than anybody else?"

Q. In the Jan. 30, 1994, issue of the Amsterdam (N.Y.) Sunday Recorder, which was sent in by Erik Schnackenberg, what is the headline on the column called "Green Thumb Journal," which recommends planting small trees around a house as a protective barrier?

A. The headline is: Row of Shrubs Breaks Wind.

Q. That item is in poor taste.

A. Wait until you read the next one.

Q. Did you receive an October 1991, issue of a newsletter published in Maryland for people, mostly women, who have a certain bladder disease, and if so, what is this newsletter called?

A. Yes. It is called "The Bladderette."

Q. Does that issue of "The Bladderette" offer a powerful incentive for attending a future meeting of the Takoma Park Support Group?

A. Yes. It says: "To get in the holiday spirit, a special door prize will be given to the best Jell-O dessert molded in the shape of a bladder."

Q. Are you making that up?

A. No.

Q. It's a good thing it's not a hemorrhoids support group.

A. Yes.

Petroleum Museum to open new exhibit

Staff Report

The Petroleum Museum is planning the public opening of the new permanent environmental exhibit, "Taking Care of our World," from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

The museum is located at 1500 Interstate 20 West.

All visitors who bring a can of food Saturday will be admitted to the museum at half price. The cans of food will be given to the Permian Basin Food Bank.

The exhibit, encased in a globe kiosk designed by John Etheridge, "features a touch-screen computer program that allows the visitor to learn about the many ways the oil industry cares for the environment on land, in air, water and with wildlife," museum officials said.

The exhibit was funded by ARCO, Parker & Parsley, CSI, Frank Yates Jr., Myco Industries Inc., Santa Fe Resources and the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

"This is the beginning of showing the oil industry's environmental story," said Ed Rowland, executive director of the museum.

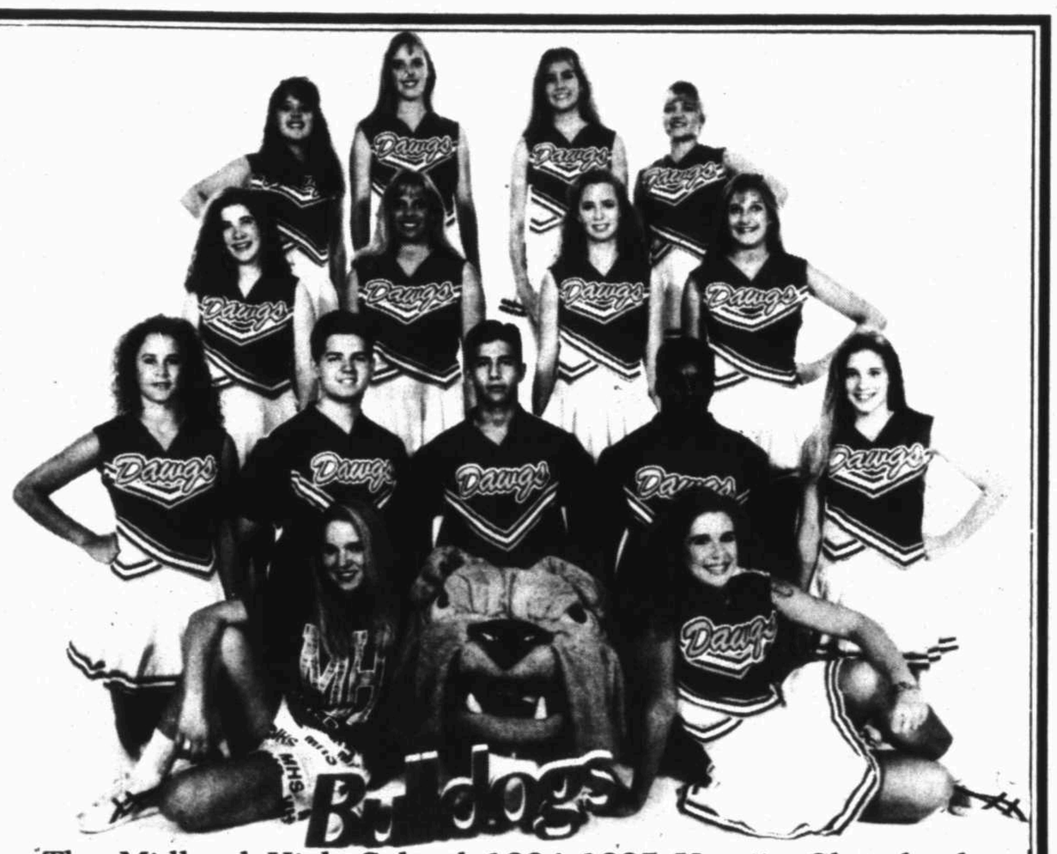

"The public needs to be aware of the regulations, the work and the cooperation the oil industry places on its environmental responsibilities. What better place to do this than at the Petroleum Museum where the industry's story comes alive."

The Petroleum Museum is the largest museum in the world dedicated to telling the story of the oil and gas industry. Through exhibits, programs, classes and the extensive archives and library, tens of thousands of visitors a year are educated about the petroleum industry.

Regular admission to the museum is $4 for adults and $2 for children ages 6-11. Preschoolers are admitted free.

For additional information, call 683-4403.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Fall semester begins for Midland College faculty with annual breakfast

By Elise Coombes

The fall semester begins Monday for Midland College faculty with the annual President's Breakfast at 8 a.m. in the Roadrunner Room. A general faculty meeting follows from 9 a.m. to noon.

Coombes

Wednesday is the day set aside for freshman registration. Registration is open to new students who obtained permits to register when they attended a freshman orientation session in July. Registration sessions are from 9 a.m. to noon and from 2-4 p.m in the Student Center.

General registration continues 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 4-8 p.m. Thursday for students with time permits. Open registration for students who did not obtain time permits is 5:30-7:30 p.m.

Faculty and counselors can help students with schedules, course information and information about testing and career counseling. Financial aid personnel will be on hand to answer questions.

For registration information, call 685-4501. Time permits for Thursday's general registration will be issued through Monday in the Student Services area of the Student Center.

Included in today's Reporter-Telegram is the Continuing Education Schedule. The bulletin has more than 100 courses that serve a variety of purposes. Although many are for fun and enrichment, other courses provide retraining and new job information for area business people and health professionals.

For instance, students interested in getting a real estate license can take all the courses needed for licensing through Continuing Education classes. Health-care workers can upgrade skills with courses such as Medical Manager Software.

General interest courses include everything from Calligraphy to Wills, Probate and Estate Planning.

The goal of the Continuing Education program is to match intructors with students interested in a certain subject area. In fact, Midland College will custom design a class for your company either on-campus or on-site.

Some of the new courses offered this fall are Word Perfect 6.0 for Windows, Typing for Beginners, Looking for a Job in the 90s, Inside Sales/Telecommunications and Electronic Media Production.

Four other valuable programs fall under the Continuing Education umbrella. The Business and Economic Development Center offers the Small Business Seminar Series with classes to help the small business owner. Defensive Driving is offered Monday and Tuesday evenings and Saturdays every week the college is open; a $2-off coupon is included on the back of the schedule. College Classics is a popular program for students age 50 and over. Kids' College is the summer program for students in grades one through six.

Information about the Adult Learning Skills Program, which includes citizenship classes, G.E.D. preparation and English as A Second Language classes, also is included in the schedule.

Extra schedules may be picked up at Albertsons, the Midland County Library (downtown and mall) or the Midland College Library and Continuing Education office.

Students can register for Continuing Education classes at the MC Administration building; by calling 685-4518; by faxing in registration information to 685-6412; or by mailing in registration information to 3600 N. Garfield, Midland, 79705.

Registration may be paid for by credit card. Persons interested in the class are encouraged to register early. Many classes fill quicky, so don't wait for the day of the class to register.

The Midland College Automotive Technology program received National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE) Master certification — the highest level of excellence recognized by the institute. Only a small number of the educational institutions who apply for certification achieve it. Instructors Tony Smith and Kurt Shedeck have upgraded the lab with new computer diagnostic equipment and have added instruction that helps students understand the business of car repair.

An exhibit by the Taos Society of Watercolorists, the first show of the semester for the college's McCormick Gallery, opens Saturday and runs through Sept. 21. The show features the work of seven New Mexico watercolorists, including former Midlanders Charles Stewart, a retired Midland College Fine Arts Division chair, and his wife Nancy L. Stewart.

Other artists included in the show are Gayle Fulwyler Smith, Lynne Gilliatt, Robert Fletcher, Charlene Miller Randall and Patricia Sanford. The works cover a wide spectrum of styles, techniques and subject matter ranging from pure abstraction, symbolism, orientalism and traditional realism. The show is a cross section of 20th century watercolor painting.

McCormick Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday 8 a.m.-9 p.m.; Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.; Saturday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.; and Sunday 1-5 p.m.

Elise Coombes is public relations director for Midland College.

Golden Girls

The Midland High School Golden Girls Dance Team qualified for the 1995 National Dance Team Championship competition at a recent contest at Angelo State University. The national competition will be held at Sea World in Orlando, Fla. The Golden Girls also received a superior trophy, a second place overall home routine trophy and the UDA spirit stick. The team is under the direction of Melba Linda Ramirez.

Null and void

NEW YORK — First Horace Grant and A.C. Green. Now Toni Kukoc.

Kukoc joined Grant and Green on Friday as another player to have his renegotiated contract voided by the NBA because the league believes it violates salary cap rules.

Two weeks ago, the NBA took similar action on contracts between the Phoenix Suns and Green and the Orlando Magic and Grant. Green and the Suns have sued the NBA to have the contract ruled valid.

Like the others, Kukoc exercised the "opt-out" clause in which a player takes a lower first-year salary with the understanding he will become a free agent after one year and then re-sign for much more money.

Irvan in critical condition

Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Ernie Irvan, one of the brightest stars in NASCAR's elite Winston Cup stock car series, was in criticial condition and on life support Saturday following a devastating crash at Michigan International Speedway.

The 35-year-old Irvan, a native of Salinas, Calif., hit the wall nearly head-on at the exit to turn two on the 2-mile, high-banked oval during practice for Sunday's GM Goodwrench Dealers 400. Witnesses said the incident apparently was caused by a cut tire on the right-front of the Ford Thunderbird.

He had been running laps at about 176 mph.

Irvan, who now makes his home in Rockwell, N.C., sustained multiple injuries, the most severe a fractured skull and collapsed lungs, and remained on life support systems at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ypsilanti, about 50 miles away. He was transported by helicopter to the hospital minutes after the early morning crash.

Dr. Errol Erlandson, a vascular surgeon who was the trauma surgeon on duty at the hospital when Irvan arrived, said during a mid-afternoon news conference, "His injuries at this time seem to be confined to the greatest severity to two areas, the first, a rather severe brain or head injury.

"He has sustained injury to the head including a fracture of the skull which has resulted ... in swelling of the brain throughout all areas of the brain including the brain stem.

"Second, his severest injuries seem to involve the lungs. Although he has very little evidence of external injury to the chest or chest wall, his lungs have been severely bruised (and) are accumulating a lot of fluid. He is requiring full respiratory support

Revamped Rankin quick to compare

■ Eight seniors have departed, but the winning tradition remains as the Red Devils enter a new district and new season.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

There's simply no comparison between the Rankin Red Devils of 1993 and this year's team.

The '93 group had eight senior starters on both sides of the ball. This year, juniors and sophomores easily outnumber the seniors.

Last season Rankin began the year ranked No. 2 and climbed to No. 1. This year, they're not even in the top ten.

No comparison. Except for one thing. The Red Devils are again picked to win their district, and probably will.

And beyond that?

"Our goal is to make the state playoffs and if we do — yea," coach Raul Sanchez said, "I think there will be a chance to win a playoff game and maybe even two."

That could help Rankin's position as the sixth winningest Class 1A team in the state over the last ten seasons (80-35).

Last year marked the first time since '86 Rankin didn't win district. So they went to the Region I final in-

Lee starters shut out in scrimmage

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

VAN HORN — Well, Midland Lee's first — and only — pre-season football scrimmage here Saturday afternoon against El Paso Eastwood gave up some bad news and then some bad news. Which would you like first?

OK, the bad news. The Rebels, who slaughtered Eastwood by a 10-1 touchdown margin here on this same field a year ago, tied the Troopers in touchdowns, 4-4.

Now, the bad news. When the first teams were on the field, the Troopers scored a 4-0 victory. It wasn't exactly what Lee coach Earl Miller had in mind.

"That's about as terrible as it gets with the talent we have," Miller said. "Either that, or we have no talent.

"Eastwood has an experienced team back from last year, but I'm extremely disappointed that we didn't show much fight out there. I really thought we would do better than that.

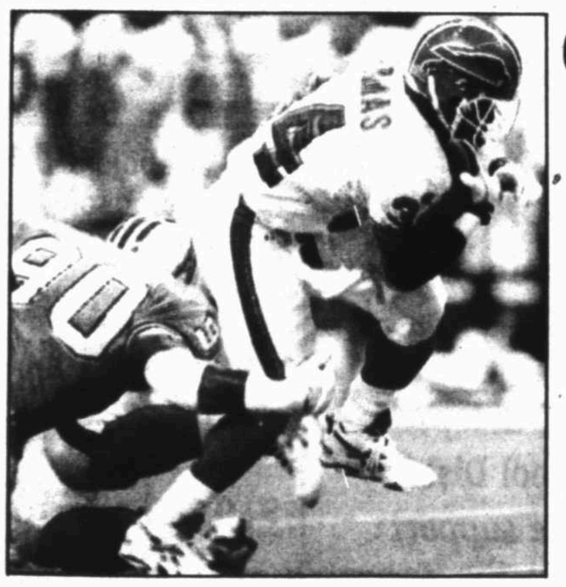

"People haven't believed me up to this point, but this team has a long way to go before we play a football game."

Naturally, there were a few prominent smiles coming from Trooper head coach Todd Ware.

"We were embarrassed by Lee last year," Ware said. "They were in shape when they came in here and we weren't. We said all along that we were going to at least show up in shape and I'm extremely happy with the way our kids have worked for us in the pre-season."

The Troopers shocked Lee right off the bat with a signal that this scrimmage was not last year's joke. Eastwood's No. 1 offense struck for a touchdown in the first three plays, the last being a 19-yard TD strike from returning quarterback Roy Torres to Paul Gage. Torres then came back to drive the Troopers 65 yards for another score on an 8-yard pass from Torres to Velton Locklear.

Christie, Bills do in Houston again

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Steve Christie did it to the Houston Oilers again.

Christie, who capped Buffalo's dramatic comeback victory over Houston in the 1992 playoffs, kicked a 48-yard field goal with eight seconds left Saturday night to give the Bills an 18-16 victory in yet another wild finish.

Rick Strom, the fourth quarterback Buffalo used, led the Bills on a 57-yard drive to Houston's 30-yard line. On third down, Christie came in and nailed his fourth field goal of the game to thwart a comeback by the Oilers.

"I got a little nervous when I saw (Steve) Tasker holding for me," said Christie, who normally works with backup quarterback Frank Reich. "I'm just glad it went through."

Houston overcame a 15-3 second-quarter deficit and went ahead 16-15 with 8:51 to play on Al Del Greco's third field goal of the night.

His 45-yarder followed earlier kicks of 18 and 41 yards, giving him 10 straight this preseason.

The Bills (2-1) snapped a five-game exhibition losing streak to the Oilers dating to 1966. Buffalo has dominated meaningful meetings, embarrassing Houston 41-38 in the 1992 playoffs and 35-7 last regular season.

"Winning is always more fun. It was fun to pull it off at the end," Bills coach Marv Levy said. "But we try to keep it in perspective. If you get the turnovers, your chances of winning go up tremendously."

Buffalo jumped to a 15-3 lead early in the Angels manufacture win

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

Midland Angels Chris Pritchett and Dom Johnson may have an argument, but give this win to the fans as the Midland Angels rallied behind the raucous crowd for a come-from-behind 3-2 win at Christensen Stadium in front of the year's largest crowd of 5,275.

"No question the crowd was big tonight," said Pritchett, who played third base for the second straight night for Chris Smith. "It took our minds away from thinking so much and we just played."

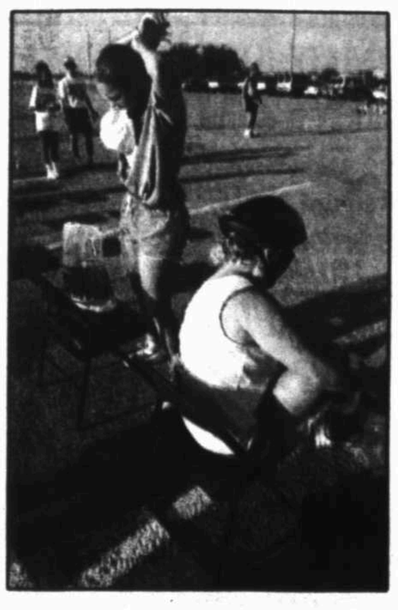

Johnson turned in his best outing of the year, a five-hitter over eight innings. He fended off two San Antonio threats in the fourth and five innings, keeping the Angels close for a late-inning surge.

"I felt like I had good control and had a good sinker ball tonight," said Johnson, who struck out five and walked none. "I just made up my mind that I was going to make them hit the ball. Anytime I needed to come up with a big pitch, I did tonight."

In the fourth, San Antonio put runners at first and second

Permian Basin Open festivities kick off Monday

By Bill Petitt

Ladies, if your husbands are hard to find this week look only as far as Mission Dorado Country Club where the week-long festivities of the 1994 Nike Permian Basin Open begins Monday with the qualifiers tournament.

While the tournament name is the same, the event, now in its third year, has under gone a facelift of sorts. The tournament boosted its prize purse from $150,000 to $175,000, the tournament has been expanded from three round to four days and the addition of stead losing to eventual state champion Sudan by 12 points. Their 10-3 season was the sixth straight of at least that many wins.

This year, Rankin will have to maintain its impressive history with only three starters returning on both offense and defense.

"In my three years here this is the biggest rebuilding job we've undertaken as a staff," Sanchez said. "(But) we can build on 3-3 (starters). If we sit and sulk and feel sorry for ourselves, obviously we can't have (a good season.) But this team won't do that.

"I don't know if that's going to translate into a 6-4 season or translate into a 5-5 season or translate into a 3-7 season. That's up to these kids."

Rankin will probably start only four seniors on offense and three on defense. As usual, they'll be small and depend on quickness. A key will be just how good a season junior Jo'El Armendarez has. He moves to quarterback from receiver and will play linebacker on defense.

Armendarez made first-team all-district at both receiver (24.2 yards per catch) and linebacker last season. He'll also handle punting and place kicking.

"He's the leader of the team on both sides and the one who has the most experience on both sides of the football," Sanchez said.

Armendarez, at 5-foot-10, 150 pounds, can grow into as good a quarterback as Rankin has had, Sanchez said. That includes All-West Texas selections Jo Jo Guerra and Kirk Kennedy. Kennedy currently holds all-conference QB honors at McMurry University.

"He's got good speed, a real strong arm and he's a heck of a competitor," Sanchez said of Armendarez.

The junior makes up one-third of the Red Devils up-the-middle strength on offense.

"We have to be strong up the middle and we have our best lineman and our best athletes right there," Sanchez said.

Senior Cody Wilson brings all-district honors to his position as center. And senior Juan Bautista comes back at tailback.

"(Wilson) is a super smart lineman. He'll make all our line calls," Sanchez said.

Junior tight end Jamie Wooten gained honorable mention all-district honors in '93 and will add some weight to the offensive line at 185. So will 200-pound tackle Manuel Gamboa.

"We average 161 pounds in the backfield and 158 on the line of scrimmage," Sanchez said. "Our offense is predicated on quickness. It's deception football."

Sophomore Jerry Lewis (6-2, 190) will start at fullback. Senior Joe Ramos will catch 20 passes as a starting end, Sanchez said.

Defense is where the Red Devils could take their toughest shot from graduation. Rankin shut out 14 teams in the last two years, and allowed one touchdown pass last year.

"We're not going to be defensively as consistent," Sanchez said.

Two second-team all-district backs lead the secondary, Bautista and Ramos. Sanchez calls Ramos the best hitter in the defensive backfield he's seen at Rankin in five years.

A big sophomore — 6-2, 220-pound Roger Haire — will take a tackle spot.

Rankin's success will depend on how well the underclassmen come around.

"We didn't have a lot of time to work our young Red Devils in (last year) because we were 8-8 (senior starters)," Sanchez said. "We've got to have our younger players really make improvements week by week to afford ourselves an opportunity to win."

"Those first and third games will decide who (makes the playoffs)," Sanchez said.

Most will be betting Rankin again reaches the postseason.

The best competition in the Red Devils' all-new District 8-1A will come from Menard and Eden, who Rankin plays at home in their first and third games of the district schedule.

LEE: Second squad forces scrimmage tie

(From 1C)

"Our first team offense did pretty well," Ware said. "We had some execution and were able to throw against an experienced secondary. I was pleased with that."

The bright spot for the Rebels came when the No. 2 offense, directed by quarterback John Thurman scored three times for a 3-2 lead. Thurman scored on runs of 13 and four yards while New Mexico move-in fullback Jeremy Meason scored on a 23-yard run.

"If we had a bright spot, it was our second unit," Miller said. "They did a decent job, but we're going to have to play with that other 11 too."

Ware countered, "We don't have much depth, and that showed. We had to leave a few bodies at home and we aren't too deep."

Eastwood's No. 1 unit came back to tie the score at 3-3 on another Torres strike, this one a 35-yard stinger to Eddie Dominquez. The Lee first team tried to counter, but stalled at the Eastwood five and then got stung by the Trooper defense when Locklear picked off a Thurman pass for a 45-yard interception return for a TD and a 4-3 lead.

Lee got the tying TD from third string quarterback John Sosa, who scored on a five-yard run late in the scrimmage.

The Lee passing game did appear to be ahead of schedule at this time of year. Senior quarterback Dedrick Adams completed six of eight passes for 102 yards. Junior quarterback Thurman completed five of 12 passes for 97 yards and had two interceptions. However, Thurman also had 92 yards rushing to lead all Rebel running backs. Senior wide receiver Jerry Stanford caught five passes for 96 yards.

Meason, the newcomer, had 45 yards rushing while Sosa had 48 yards in his only series on the field. Lee's first team running backs didn't fare well. Fullback Stephen Hunter had 17 yards, halfback Melvin Dunson 15 and halfback Theo Macklin 14.

Sophomore Antwan Alexander, a defensive back, came up with an interception and a couple of good hits.

"It doesn't look good when a sophomore is the best thing you've got on the field," Miller said of Alexander.

Miller announced to his coaching staff after the scrimmage that he wanted a meeting today and warned them not to be late. It could be a long two weeks in season's starting stretch run.

'If we had a bright spot, it was our second unit. They did a decent job, but we're going to have to play with that other 11 too.'

SWC scrimmages reveal strong quarterbacks

Associated Press

If Saturday's scrimmages across the Southwest Conference are any indication, this could be a great year for quarterbacks.

Starters looked sharp and most backups were impressive in fighting for the second-string job at nearly every school that held a competitive workout.

One of the most interesting results came from the annual Bearfest scrimmage, which looked like a high school all-star game as Baylor recruits Jeff Watson of A&M Consolidated and Jerod Douglas of Converse Judson shined.

Douglas, who led Judson to the last two Class 5A Division I titles and became the all-time 5A career rusher, ran for 38 yards and a touchdown on nine carries and caught a 64-yard pass for another score.

Watson completed 7-of-8 passes for 126 yards and two TDs. His top competition for the starting job, sophomore Lamont Moore, went 3-for-7 for 50 yards and two TDs.

There's no question that Shea Morenz will be the starting quarterback at Texas, the preseason conference favorite.

Morenz appeared ready for his sophomore season, completing 12 of 16 passes for 148 yards with three TDs in Texas' workout.

At Houston, starting quarterback Chuck Clements led the Cougars to a touchdown on his first drive, then let the back-ups run the offense.

CRASH: Irvan in critical condition

with a ventilator. He is being ventilated through a small tracheoscopy in the neck."

Dr. Erlandson added, "In addition, he has severe injuries of the soft tissues of the face and the head and neck. There has been some contusion, some areas of bleeding. Our assessment at this time of his abdomen, pelvis region and all four extremities is that there is no penetrating injury and no obvious injury that effects those areas of the body.

"At the present time he is being evaluated and treated by a full team, including a neurosurgical specialist, a pulmonary specialist. He is receiving minute-to-minute monitoring of his blood pressure, of the filling pressures of his heart, of his intra cranial pressure and of the fluid in the ventricular areas of the brain. He is not alert at this time."

Asked to assess Irvan's chances of survival, Dr. Erlandson said, "He has received some severe injuries to two major systems, either one of which in their severity as assessed at this time could be fatal. In this business, I believe the prognosis cannot be stated. ... We trust with minute-to-minute ... support, the best outcome will occur. I cannot predict."

Irvan was followed to the hospital by wife Kim, car-owner Robert Yates and crew chief Larry McReynolds, all of whom were at the track when the accident occured.

Brian Vandercook, spokesman for the Robert Yates Racing team, said, "Like the doctor explained, we don't know what's going to happen right now, but we do know several things: Ernie is a fighter and that he always has a good attitude when the odds are tough. And we believe that will put him in good hands in the days and weeks to come."

Irvan joined Robert Yates Racing last September as the full-time replacement for Davey Allison, who was killed in July 1993 in a helicopter accident. That was the second major blow of last season for NASCAR, which also lost 1992 Winston Cup champion Alan Kulwicki in the crash of a private plane in April.

The 1994 season then got off to a tragic start in February at Daytona with the deaths of veteran Neil Bonnett and rookie Rodney Orr in separate crashes during practice for the Daytona 500.

But, in the ensuing 20 events this season, there had been no other serious injuries until Irvan's crash on Saturday on the 2-mile, high-banked Michigan oval.

The last bad accident at MIS was in August 1992 when Clifford Allison, Davey's younger brother, was fatally injured in a crash during practice for a Busch Grand National race. He is the only racing fatality at Michigan since the track opened in October 1968.

Since buying out the remaining year and a half of his contract with Morgan-McClure Racing for a reported $400,000 in order to move to Yates' potent black No. 28, Irvan has won five of 29 starts and has 21 top-10 finishes.

He has been among the most consistent competitors this season, finishing in the top 10 in 15 of 20 races and in the top five 14 times. Coming into the weekend, Irvan trailed Winston Cup points leader Dale Earnhardt by just 27 points.

Irvan has led the points for 13 of the 20 race weeks this season, most recently losing the lead to Earnhardt after a 17th-place finish three weeks ago in the Brickyard 400 at Indianapolis. In that race, Irvan was battling eventual winner Jeff Gordon for the lead when he had a tire deflate with just five laps remaining.

Last week, Irvan finished second to Mark Martin at Watkins Glen. On Friday, he qualified 19th for Sunday's race. The Yates team was expected to withdraw from Sunday's event.

Irvan began his Winston Cup career with five starts for D.K. Ulrich in 1987. He continued driving for Ulrich the next two season, then, after three races with Junie Donlavey at the start of the 1990 season, joined Morgan-McClure.

Auto racing can be callous business

■ Goodwrench Dealers 400 to run today despite critical accident involving Winston Cup star.

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Auto Racing is a sport that can also be a callous business.

With NASCAR Winston Cup star Ernie Irvan in critical condition in a Ypsilianti hospital from injuries sustained on Saturday in a crash during practice at Michigan International Speedway, the show will go on in today's GM Goodwrench Dealers 400.

"That's the way racing is and the way it has to be," said Kyle Petty, who is among the 41 drivers who will take the green flag for the 400-mile race on Michigan's 2-mile, high-banked oval.

"You have to understand going in that this is a dangerous sport," Petty said. "As drivers, we accept that. And we also accept that if something happens to one of us, people will pay their respects to your family, say some prayers for you and the show will go on."

With Irvan out indefinitely, the points race that was grabbing so much attention, may be all but over.

Dale Earnhardt, the six-time and defending Winston Cup champion, now seems almost assured of equaling Richard Petty's record of seven season titles.

Earnhardt came into the weekend leading Irvan, who never has won a season title, by just 27 points in one of the best championship battles ever. One of those two drivers has led the points all year, with Earnhardt regaining the top spot three weeks ago at Indianapolis.

With just 11 of 31 races remaining, including Sunday's, Rusty Wallace is a distant third, trailing Earnhardt by 326 points, with Mark Martin just three behind the 1989 series champion.

None of the trio wanted to comment on the points race Saturday, with Irvan's life still in jeopardy, but Wallace said, "We're all just praying for Ernie and his family and doing what we need to be doing to get ready for the race."

Earnhardt will start 11th Sunday, with Wallace two rows ahead of him in seventh and Martin, the defending race winner and coming off a victory — his first of the season — last week at Watkins Glen, N.Y., a row behind in 13th.

Geoff Bodine and NASCAR rookie John Andretti will be at the front for the start, with Bodine looking for his second victory from the pole this season and Andretti, whose best finish in 18 Winston Cup starts is 19th, just hoping for a solid run in his debut as Richard Petty's driver.

Wallace won in June at MIS, a race that was marred by the patched track surface breaking up badly in turn three. With temperatures in the 90s and a glaring sun compounding the problems, seven caution flags slowed the event for 52 of the 200 laps.

Steve Brown, a spokesman for the track, said the patched section in turn three was milled down another 1½ inches and then repaved following the June race.

The weather forecast for Sunday did call for highs only reaching about 80, but it also included showers.

Labonte rallies for Detroit Gasket 200 win

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Bobby Labonte went from third to first late in Saturday's rain-delayed Detroit Gasket 200, then pulled away to his first Busch Grand National stock car victory since November of 1992.

Labonte, the younger brother of former Winston Cup champion Terry Labonte and now a regular himself in NASCAR's top series, took advantage of a battle between leader Mark Martin and runner-up Chad Little to slip into second place seven laps from the end.

He then zoomed past the fading Martin, who apparently succumbed to tire wear after leading 78 of the 100 laps on Michigan International Speedway's 2-mile, high-banked oval.

Labonte, the 1991 series champion and 1992 runner-up, led only the last six laps on the way to his sixth Grand National victory and first since Nov. 8, 1992 at Hickory, N.C. He beat Little to the finish line by 0.50-seconds.

Fittipaldi takes Slick 50 pole

LOUDON, N.H. (AP) — Emerson Fittipaldi, continuing the domination of the Penske team, grabbed the pole position Saturday for the Slick 50 200 IndyCar race in a track lap record 175.091 mph.

It will be Fittipaldi's 16th career pole start, but his first this year and first on a short oval.

Fittipaldi's power surge provided the seventh pole of the year for the Penske team, which won eight of the 11 previous races. Fittipaldi has one of those victories.

Raul Boesel, who aborted two separate trips around the one-mile New Hampshire International Raceway oval, dramatically qualified on his third appearance with only minutes left, posting the day's second-fastest time, 173.856. But his third trip out raised questions by a number of teams, causing the official qualifying results to be held up while IndyCar officials reviewed the rules.

Boesel said he felt his car was not capable of competing for the pole on the first run, so "I decided to abort."

Boesel's time bumped last year's winner, Nigel Mansell, to the second row with a time of 173.845.

OILERS: Kicker sends Houston to 18-16 loss

second quarter on Christie's field goals of 35, 21, and 42 yards.

Rookie linebacker Sam Rogers returned an interception 62 yards for a second-quarter touchdown. His first pickoff as a college or pro player came when he stepped in front of a pass by Cody Carlson intended for tight end Pat Carter.

The pass for Buffalo's 2-point conversion failed.

Houston's scoring began when Del Greco, who missed only his first attempt of the preseason, booted an 18-yard field goal on the game's first drive. The Oilers had to settle for the kick after having reached Buffalo's 1-yard line.

After being burned by Rogers, Carlson took the Oilers to their first touchdown with 13:39 elapsed in the second quarter, completing a 71-yard drive with a 19-yard touchdown pass to Haywood Jeffires.

Buffalo's comeback was nothing new. The Bills defeated the Oilers 41-38 on Jan. 3, 1992 and got into the NFL record book for pulling off the biggest comeback in NFL playoff history, erasing a 32-point third-quarter deficit.

The Oilers were embarassed again by the Bills on Oct. 13, 1993, with a 35-7 loss that included seven Oilers turnovers, four interceptions and three fumbles.

Houston appeared to his this one in hand until a holding penalty on fourth and 27 gave the Bills another chance at midfield. After tight end Vince Marrow caught a 20-yard pass to the 30, Christie nailed the winner.

"I certainly hope we can be smart enough not to hold on 4th and 27," Oilers coach Jack Pardee said. "We got caught scrambling around there and gave them a first down and that really hurt."

Gary Brown, the Oilers' leading rusher, sat out the game, protecting a sprained ankle he injured on the soggy turf in Mexico City's Aztec Stadium on Monday night.

Buffalo's backfield tandem of Jim Kelly and Thurman Thomas played only two series. Kelly completed 3 of 6 passes for 55 yards and Thomas got 29 yards on six carries.

Carlson, getting his most extensive playing time of the preseason, hit 18 of 30 passes for 241 yards. He played through the first series of the third quarter before yielding to Bucky Richardson.

There were a few scattered boos after Carlson, who grew up in San Antonio, threw a second-quarter interception, but he didn't seem too upset.

"I never thought I'd hear anything like that in San Antonio," Carlson said laughing. "I told Mom and Dad not to do that but they get so excited.

"Actually, I didn't hear it."

The Oilers defense extended its streak to 12 quarters without allowing an offensive touchdown.

But, once again, the Bills got the victory.

"We enjoy playing each other," Kelly said. "It always seems to come down to a wild ending doesn't it.

Smith to debut against Broncos

■ Emmitt Smith finally tests shoulder after sustaining injury during 1993 playoffs.

IRVING (AP) — Barring a five-inch rain at kickoff, Emmitt Smith, the NFL's three-time defending rushing champion, makes his 1994 debut with the Dallas Cowboys today in a preseason game against the Denver Broncos in Texas Stadium.

"Emmitt needs to be hit, tackled, and make those cuts that are instinctive to him," said Dallas coach Barry Switzer. "We would have played him in Mexico City but the field was too messy."

A torrential rain before the Houston Oilers and Cowboys played Monday night effectively postponed plans to play Smith for several series of downs.

"I saw players slipping and I went to Emmitt and asked him 'Do you want to play in this?'" Switzer said. "He said 'no.'"

Smith has yet to take a hit on his right shoulder, which he separated in the NFC East title game against the New York Giants. He went through the playoffs and the Super Bowl with the shoulder bandaged.

"It feels good but it will never be totally 100 percent again," Smith said. "I'm anxious to get out there and take some hits. I'll probably play one or two quarters. I need the work, although I've had a good training camp. I'm ready."

Switzer has held Smith out of all the Cowboys scrimmages and Smith is fit and trim. He missed all of training camp and the first two games of the season last year before forcing owner Jerry Jones' hand in a contract dispute. Despite the late start, he still earned the rushing title.

Smith was expected to be joined in the starting lineup by wide receivers Michael Irvin and Alvin Harper, who also have been nursing shoulder injuries.

"It's time we got the real Cowboys together out on the field," said quarterback Troy Aikman. "Maybe we can scale back in the final preseason game (Aug. 25) at New Orleans. But this week it's time."

Switzer said the Cowboys, who are 1-2 in the preseason, will have a game plan for the Broncos.

"We haven't done that for the other games. But the season is getting closer and we need to pick things up a little," Switzer said. "The New Orleans game we will approach more like an open date and back off a bit."

The Broncos also are 1-2 with a 20-3 loss to San Francisco last week.

"We looked like we were playing an exhibition game and the 49ers were playing the regular season," said coach Wade Phillips. "We play them in the regular season and didn't want to show anything. Well, we didn't show them anything."

Denver quarterback John Elway said, "We need to crank things up a notch. We've got wrinkles to iron out."

Dallas holds a 3-2 preseason lead over Denver. In their last preseason meeting in 1992, Dallas prevailed 17-3. The last regular season meeting was also in 1992, when Dallas won 31-27 at Mile High Stadium.

Colts remain perfect; 'Hawks nip Vikes

Associated Press

The Detroit Lions may finally have found something to complement their "Run, Barry, Run" offense. It might end up being called the Twin Towers.

With Barry Sanders watching, 6-foot-6 quarterback Scott Mitchell and 6-3 wide receiver Herman Moore combined twice for scoring passes Friday night in Detroit's 24-16 NFL exhibition victory against the Arizona Cardinals.

■ NFL Roundup

Jets 13, Giants 10

Stevie Anderson had an 80-yard touchdown and four other receptions, sparking a Jets victory over the local rival Giants.

Nick Lowery made a 38-yard field goal with 16 seconds to go.

Colts 17, Steelers 14

Don Majkowski's 64-yard completion to Aaron Bailey set up Dean Biasucci's game-winning 34-yard field goal with 2:04 remaining for the Colts.

Majkowski, expected to play only the second half, was on the field for most of three quarters and all 17 Indianapolis (3-0) points.

Eagles 17, Bengals 7

Randall Cunningham threw his first two touchdown passes of the preseason and the Eagles defense got five sacks.

Cunningham, who completed 14 of 24 passes for 111 yards, also threw an interception that Leonard Wheeler returned 42 yards for the Bengals (0-3) lone score.

Buccaneers 29, Dolphins 14

Tampa Bay won a game in Miami marred by numerous penalties and fights.

Craig Erickson went 17-for-24 for 181 yards and a touchdown, and kicker Michael Husted hit a 34-yard field goal in the first quarter and a 44-yarder in the second to give the Bucs a 12-7 halftime lead.

Seahawks 30, Vikings 19

Dan McGwire threw two second-half touchdowns as the Seahawks spoiled Warren Moon's return to Husky Stadium.

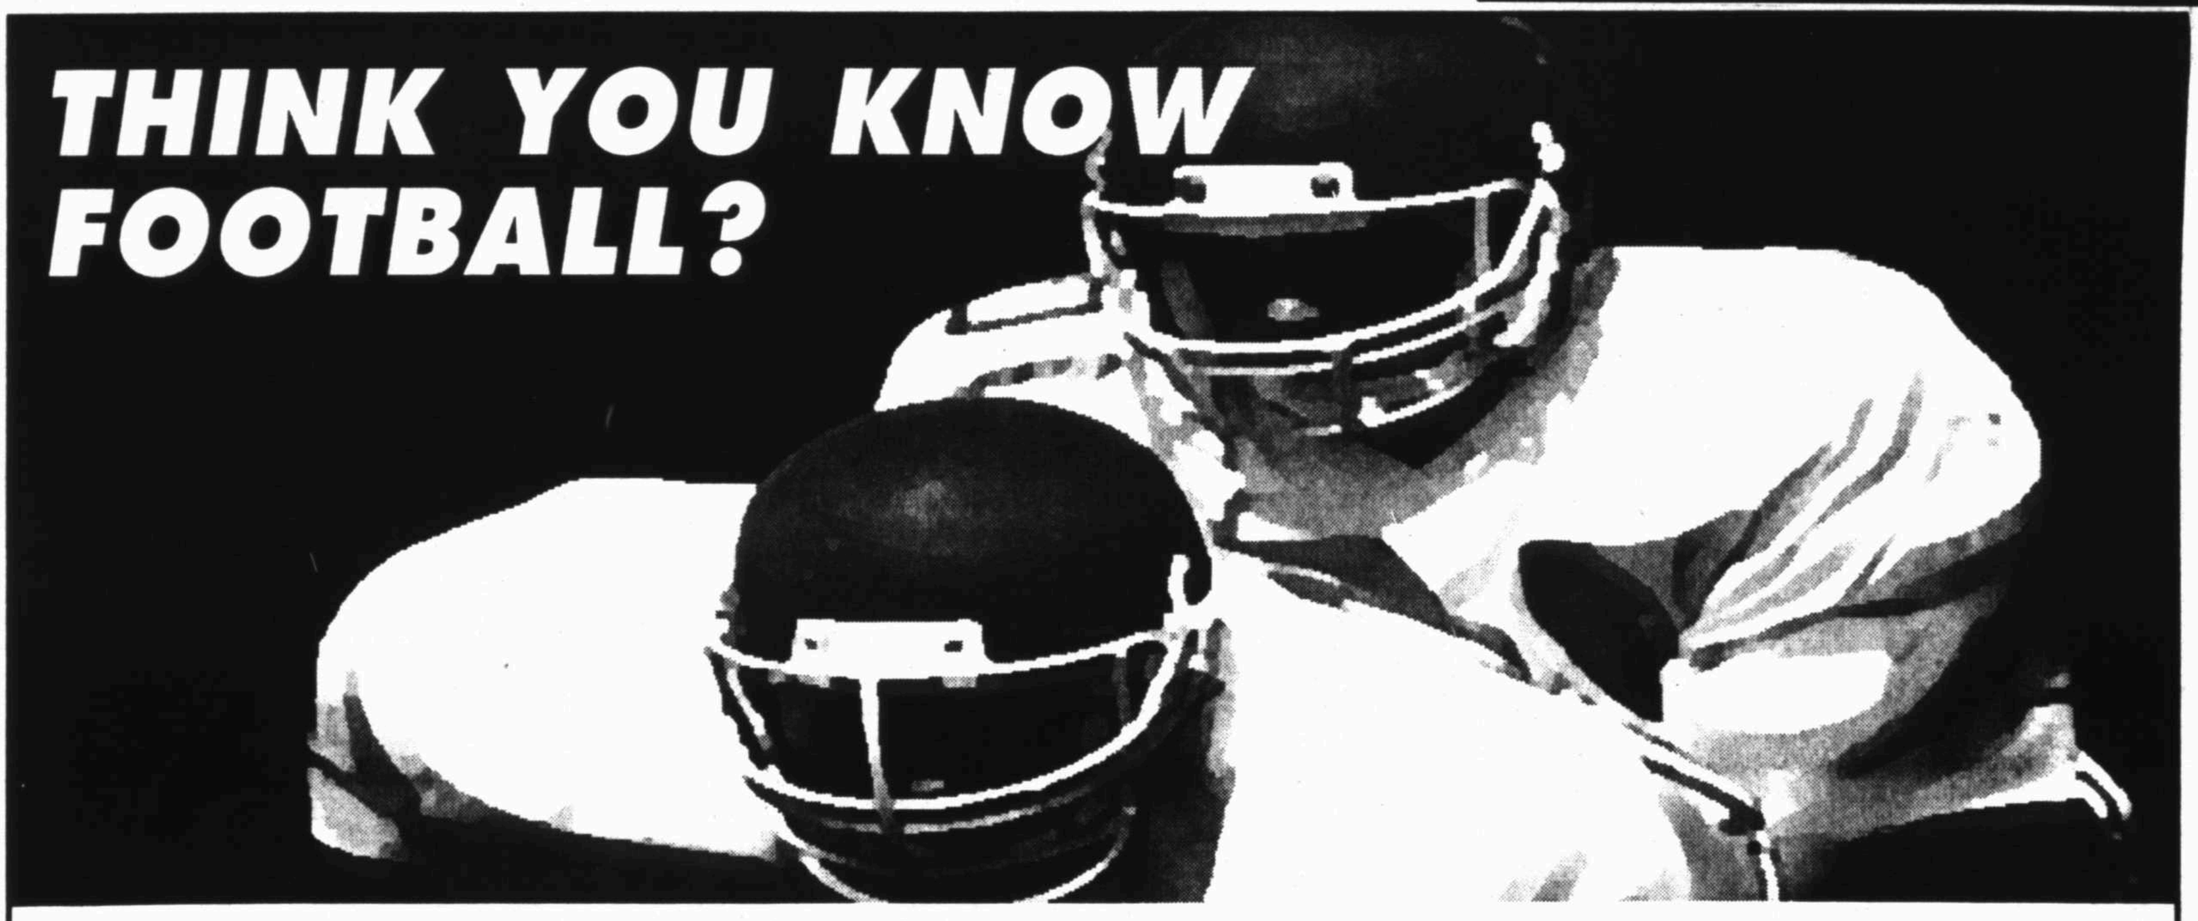

Seattle had to play its second straight exhibition game at the University of Washington because the Kingdome has been closed since July 19 due to ceiling problems.

Becker's cool head prevails over Stich

■ Tennis

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Boris Becker had the cooler head and better hands in the latest showdown between the two best German tennis players in the world.

Becker, seeded third, staged an impressive second-set comeback to upset top-seeded Michael Stich 6-2, 7-5 in the semifinals of the Volvo International on Saturday.

Becker will meet No. 7 seed Marc Rosset, who beat sixth-seeded Yevgeny Kafelnikov 7-6 (7-5), 6-3 in a night match. Kafelnikov had advanced to the semifinal earlier Saturday when he completed quarterfinal suspended by rain during the third set Friday night.

RCA Championships

INDIANAPOLIS — Wayne Ferreira, the only seeded player to survive a week of upsets, beat Alex Corretja 6-1, 6-2 on after a rain delay of more than seven hours in the semifinals.

Bernd Karbacher of Germany played Olivier Delaitre of France in the second semifinal for a spot against Ferreira in today's championship.

Ferreira led 5-1 in the first set before a rainstorm halted play. When the match resumed 7 hours, 17 minutes later, he needed only 33 minutes to finish that set and the next against a worn Corretja, who did not score a point the final two games.

Matinee International

MONTREAL — Top-seeded Steffi Graf took care of two pieces of business at the Matinee International women's tennis tournament Saturday.

Graf moved into today's final at the $1 million tournament by beating fourth-seeded Mary Pierce 6-3, 6-4. She also avenged a straight-set loss against Pierce at the French Open early in June.

Graf will face second-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in the title match. Sanchez Vicario advanced by defeating third-seeded Kimiko Date of Japan 2-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Clearwater leads International

■ Golf Roundup

Associated Press

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — Keith Clearwater was a disappointed leader after the third round of the International.

Clearwater held a 1-point lead over U.S. Open champion Ernie Els after Saturday's round, but all he could think about was how many points he let get away.

"I'm really bummed out," Clearwater said. "I let myself down quite a bit coming in. I had short putts on (Nos.) 15, 17 and 18, and I didn't make any of them. I left 7 points out there in the last four holes, and you can't do that under this format."

Clearwater lipped out an 8-foot birdie putt at No. 15, then lipped out an 8-footer for eagle at the par-5 17th. He settled for a birdie — worth 2 points — but failed to get the 5-point eagle. At the 18th, he missed a 10-foot birdie putt.

Clearwater's 11-point round gave him a total of 30 points. Els had the day's best round — a plus-17 that included a tournament record-tying 10 birdies — for 29 points.

Tom Kite and second-round leader Steve Lowery were tied for third at 26, Mike Reid and Dave Stockton Jr. stood at 25, Rick Fehr had 24 and Bruce Lietzke 23. Lee Janzen, Jay Haas and Tom Lehman were at 22.

Eleven golfers were within eight points of the lead.

Under the modified Stableford scoring system used here, a golfer receives 8 points for a double eagle, 5 for eagle, 2 for birdie, zero for par, minus-1 for bogey and minus-3 for double bogey or worse.

Points are cumulative over all four rounds. The 144-player field, which was reduced to 72 for the third round, was cut again to 24 for the final round.

The tournament, sponsored by Sprint, carries a purse of $1.4 million and pays the winner $252,000.

Defending champion Phil Mickelson advanced to the final day with 20 points.

Burnet Senior Classic

COON RAPIDS, Minn. — All Dave Stockton wants is one more windy day at Bunker Hills Golf Course.

Stockton, dubbed the best "wind player" on the Senior PGA Tour by rival Jim Albus, took advantage a steady breeze and gusts as high as 25 mph Saturday to shoot a 6-under-par 66 in the Burnet Senior Classic. He has a one-stroke lead over Albus heading into the final round.

"It was testy," said Albus, who also shot a 66. "I play in Florida and you have to be able to control the wind there. I think I'm a good wind player. But Dave Stockton is not exactly the guy you want to be going up against if it's windy."

George Archer goes into today in third place, two strokes behind Stockton. Walt Zembriski matched the 66 scores of Stockton and Albus and is five back. Defending champion Chi Chi Rodriguez, Ben Smith and Jim Dent are six back.

First-round leader Dick Rhyan double-bogeyed the first hole and quickly fell off the board. He finished with a 77.

Aside from the charges of Stockton and Albus, Saturday's biggest moves were made by Zembriski and Rodriguez. Both were 1-over par in the opening round.

LPGA Chicago Challenge

NAPERVILLE, Ill. — Jane Geddes broke out of the pack with three birdies in a five-hole stretch on the back nine to take a three-stroke lead after the third round of the LPGA Chicago Challenge on Saturday.

Geddes, who began the round in a six-way tie for the lead, rebounded from a bogey on No. 9 with birdies on Nos. 11, 12 and 15. She finished at 4-under-par 68 for an 11-under total of 205 on the 6,256-yard White Eagle Golf Club course.

Margaret Platt, who shot a 69, joined Janice Gibson and Dale Eggeling at 208. Gibson and Eggeling, who began the round tied with Geddes, Kathryn Marshall, Michelle Estill and Katie Peterson-Parker at 7-under, shot 71s.

Brandie Burton, who had the day's best round with a 66, was four back along with Becky Iverson (67) and Missie McGeorge (69). Kristi Albers (69), Cathy Forbes-Johnston (71) and Robin Walton (68) were five back at 210.

Holy Bull handles pressure, distance for Travers win

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — There were doubts Holy Bull could win at 1 1-4 miles.

It was said he couldn't handle pressure.

Bull!

The grey colt handled pressure early and late Saturday and won the Travers by a neck over Concern.

Tabasco Cat, the Preakness and Belmont Stakes winner, was never a factor and finished a distant third, 17 lengths farther back in the five-horse field.

He was followed by his stablemate, Commanche Trail, entered as a rabbit, and Unaccounted For, who upset Tabasco Cat in the Jim Dandy on July 31.

Holy Bull, the first winning favorite of the Travers since Easy Goer in 1989, carried scale weight of 126 pounds over a fast track in 2:02 as he barely held off Concern for the victory, worth a mutuel payoff of $3.60 and $3.

Concern, losing for the fifth straight time since his victory in the Arkansas Derby on April 23, paid $3.40. There was no show betting.

Bonds has child-support payments reduced

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Barry Bonds, pleading financial hardship from the baseball strike, had his $15,000-per-month child and spousal support payments cut in half by a judge who then asked for Bonds' autograph.

Lawrence Stotter, lawyer for Bonds' wife, Sun, said Domestic Relations Commissioner George Taylor's autograph request "really wiped out my client."

"To have the courts look upon him as a superhero made her feel like she was not playing on a level playing field," Stotter said.

A message left on Taylor's office answering machine seeking comment on Saturday was not answered.

Taylor's decision was reported Saturday by the San Francisco Chronicle.

Sun Bonds was getting the higher payment as part of a temporary arrangement in a divorce proceeding that began in May.

Although the payment was reduced to $7,500 per month, she continues to have access to a credit card account, according to court records and lawyers for both sides.

Bonds also must continue to pay the mortgage, taxes and insurance on the couples' estate.

Florida player Terry Dean (12) celebrates on the sidelines after a 1993 victory for the Gators.

Gators top Florida and nation

■ After a decade of being the No. 3 team in their own state, the Florida Gators top the preseason poll.

Associated Press

The Florida Gators, No. 3 in their own state for the past decade, are now No. 1 in the nation.

Long overshadowed by Florida State and Miami, the Gators are the preseason pick as college football's top team in The Associated Press poll.

"We're certainly honored," coach Steve Spurrier said. "Being No. 1 is very special to me, my players and all Gator fans."

Florida edged Notre Dame by two points, the narrowest margin since the preseason poll began in 1950. The Gators received 15 first-place votes and 1,416 points from a nationwide media panel, while the Irish got 13 first-place votes and 1,414 points.

Spurrier, whose team won a school-record 11 games last season, said he's not worried about the pressure that comes with being No. 1.

"I'm glad I'm No. 1 sometime in my life," said Spurrier, a Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback at Florida in 1966. "It's better than never being No. 1."

Although Florida is the largest university in the state, Florida State and Miami have been more prominent in football.

Miami has won four national championships since 1983 and compiled the best record in the country over that span. Florida State has finished in the top four for seven straight years, culminating with its first national title last season.

Now, Florida is ranked ahead of both teams. Florida State is No. 3 in the preseason poll, and Miami is No. 6.

"I can assure our Gator fans that we will do everything possible to hold this ranking as long as we can," said defensive end Kevin Carter. "I can't wait to play our opening game (against New Mexico State) on Sept. 3 and hear our 84,000 fans screaming 'We're No. 1.'"

It's only the second time Florida has been ranked No. 1. The Gators topped the poll for one week in 1985 before losing to Georgia 24-3.

However, it's the fifth consecutive year that a team from the Sunshine State has been No. 1 in the preseason poll. Miami got the nod in 1990 and '92, while Florida State was the pick in '91 and '93.

Twelve starters return from last year's Florida team, which pounded previously unbeaten West Virginia 41-7 in the Sugar Bowl.

The Gators must replace career rushing leader Errict Rhett, but quarterbacks Terry Dean and Danny Wuerffel are back to direct the explosive "Fun 'N Gun" offense. The most important newcomer on defense may be coordinator Bob Pruett, brought in to shake up a pass defense that finished last in the Southeastern Conference.

"What we were doing wasn't working, so we had to try something different," Spurrier said.

Notre Dame, which finished No. 2 last season, is starting in the same spot this season. That's one place ahead of Florida State, which won the 1993 national title even though the Seminoles lost to the Irish and both teams finished with one loss.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz thought his team was ranked too low at the end of last season. Now he thinks they're ranked too high.

"People have as much business picking us No. 2 in the preseason this year as they did picking us No. 2 at the end of last year. Neither one of them makes sense to me," he said.

Nebraska, which finished third last season after losing to Florida State 18-16 in the Orange Bowl, is fourth in the preseason poll despite getting more first-place votes (18) than any other team.

Michigan is fifth, followed by Miami, Arizona, Colorado, Penn State and Wisconsin.

Rounding out the Top 25 are Auburn, Aiabama, Tennessee, UCLA, Texas A&M, Oklahoma, Southern Cal, Texas, North Carolina, Ohio State, Illinois, Virginia Tech, Washington, West Virginia and Clemson.

Police say Texas receivers making trouble

AUSTIN (AP) — Police say Texas' leading receivers, Lovell Pinkney and Mike Adams, have been involved in fights, taunt officers and been seen with a former Longhorn who was arrested last week on robbery charges, a newspaper reported Saturday.

Coach John Mackovic said the article in the Austin American-Statesman was unfair. Pinkney and Adams denied they were associated with Lorenzo Lewis, who police say is a suspect in several robberies.

In addition, Pinkney, who regained his academic eligibility last week, denounced his critics. He told reporters people don't care "about you unless you're playing football."

Pinkney, 22, said he has come to expect public scrutiny of his actions. "That comes with being a player on Texas and being a young black male," he said.

Players and coaches met with sportswriters during their annual tour of Southwest Conference schools.

Coach Mackovic said the Longhorns, who have been picked by many to win the conference, could be a "terrific team" this season. He said despite early injuries and off-the-field problems, the team hasn't been distracted.

"Our team is probably as comfortable with each other and has probably worked as well as any group I could imagine. They've really kind of marched and gone on with their business," he said.

Mackovic said the Longhorns are stronger, quicker and more experienced than last year. Quarterback Shea Morenz, Mackovic said, "is the top returning sophomore quarterback in the country."

Mackovic, in his third year, said he doesn't feel any additional pressure after 6-5 and 5-5-1 seasons. "There's pressure on every down," he said.

Mackovic said he spoke with Pinkney about the American-Statesman article, which said police had seen Pinkney and Adams with Lewis.

Lewis, 26, who was on the Texas roster from 1989-91, was arrested Wednesday and charged with aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon.

While under surveillance, police said they have seen Lewis in the company of Adams and Pinkney numerous times in Sixth Street nightclubs, the newspaper said.

"The story ties them together in a way that I think was unfair," to Adams and Pinkney, Mackovic said.

Tracy Dodds, sports editor of the American-Statesman, defended the report. "We put that story together very carefully. If they can show us anything that is incorrect, we'll run a correction," she said.

On Saturday, Pinkney said, "I've met him (Lewis) once, shook hands, kept moving. I don't know the guy."

Adams, 20, told the newspaper that maybe the police connected them because Lewis was arrested with Adams in June during an altercation on Sixth Street. Police allege Adams shoved an officer who was attempting to settle a dispute involving Adams and his ex-girlfriend. Adams has maintained he is innocent of the charge.

Following the incident, Adams took a 60-day leave of absence from the team. Mackovic said coaches will evaluate Adams' football status when the leave of absence expires Aug. 28.

In April, Adams was cut with a knife by former Longhorn basketball player Al Segova in a fight at a UT dormitory. No charges were filed.

According to two other police incident reports, Adams and Pinkney were involved in fights on consecutive days in October. Police were called both times, but no arrests were made.

During the 1993 season, Adams was an All-Southwest Conference selection with 52 catches for 908 years and seven touchdowns. Pinkney, who was suspended for one game in 1993 for disciplinary reasons, caught 47 passes for 686 yards and five touchdowns.

Feds issue subpoena for documents involving Baylor

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal authorities investigating the Baylor basketball program have issued a subpoena for Southwest Conference documents and convened a grand jury that has heard testimony from at least one former Baylor recruit, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The probe, which first focused on the circumstances by which former Bears star Jerome Lambert turned in a term paper at a junior college that was the work of someone else, has widened in recent weeks, the Houston Chronicle reported.

Investigators are examining correspondence-course credits obtained by four junior college players who transferred to Baylor, the newspaper said.

A source familiar with the case told the Chronicle that federal investigators are trying to determine if any activities related to the correspondence-course credits violated federal wire fraud statutes.

Last week, the U.S. attorney's office in Waco subpoenaed SWC documents pertaining to correspondence-course credits obtained by Shannon Brantley, Marcus Thompson, Tyrone Davis and Jason Ervin from Southeastern College of the Assemblies of God in Lakeland, Fla.

The four players were withheld from competition at Baylor last season after they attempted to use credits from the Bible college to become eligible.

Issues such as whether the players did the course work themselves and whether they used their own money to pay for tuition and course materials were key elements of an SWC investigation initiated last fall.

That inquiry resulted in a 544-page report accusing Baylor of NCAA rules violations in 28 areas.

ANGELS: Midland rallies for 3-2 victory with two outs on an error by Pritchett and a single by Jay Kirkpatrick. But Johnson got designated hitter Kash Beauchamp to strike out on a 3-2 pitch to end the inning.

(From 1C)

San Antonio cracked the scoreboard in this pitcher's duel with a run in the fifth. James Martin led off the inning with a single and Henry Blanco followed with a gapper to left-center scoring Martin with no out out.

But Johnson made Missions catcher Noe Munoz to ground out to Pritchett, struck out leadoff hitter Garey Ingram and Cliff Anderson ended the inning by grounding to first.

Midland's bats came alive in the seventh inning. the Angel took advantage of tiring starter David Pyc (4-11) who walked Boykin to start the inning, walked Larry Gonzales and then committed an error covering first to load the bases with none out.

Two outs later, Marquis Riley hit a line drive single off the leg of San Antonio reliever John DeSilva that scooted past shortstop Juan Castro and into shallow left field, scoring Wolf and Gonzales to tie the game at 2-2.

In the eighth inning Boykin reached first on an error by Cliff Anderson, who had moved to shortstop from center field that inning. Pritchett then followed with a made-for-television, hit-and-run single to right to put runner at first and third with none out.

"I was trying to hit the ball hard, just keep it on the ground," said Pritchett, who went 3-for-4 to raise his .300 batting average.

Wolff followed with a sacrifice fly to right, scoring Boykin for the Angels 3-2 lead.

Bill Simas came on in relief for his third save by striking out two of the three he faced.

ANGEL NOTES: With the win, Midland takes a respite from the 'Dog Days' of the Texas League season. Prior to Saturday's game, Midland had gone 4-16 over its 20 games and had fallen from nine games to 19 games behind second-half champion El Paso... Midland will start John Fritz (2-6, 5.58) while San Antonio will counter with Felix Rodriguez (6-7, 3.73).

Deion meets with Dolphins

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) — Free agent Deion Sanders met with the Miami Dolphins on Saturday and outlined what the team needed to do to sign him.

Foremost, he said, was that the Dolphins need to convince him they are out to win a championship this season.

"Winning the Super Bowl is number one," said the former Atlanta Falcons defensive back who also plays center field for the Cincinnati Reds. "I'm tired of personal accomplishments. I've had enough of them to enjoy the rest of my life.

Asked if he was considering playing for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Sanders said: "No definitely not. That's what I mean by being realistic."

He said he also wants to meet the Miami players to determine if there will be envy or resentment of his salary and flamboyant style.

"I don't want to be anywhere there will be any animosity," Sanders said.

Sanders opened his news conference with at the Dolphins' training camp with a one-liner.

"First I'd like to announce that I've come to terms with, uh ... the Miami Hooters," said the two-sport star, flashing his trademark grin as the room full of reporters broke up in laughter.

The versatile defensive back and kick returner got a tour of camp, met with coach Don Shula and quarterback Dan Marino. He also was going to the Dolphins' game with Tampa Bay on Saturday night.

The former Florida State star said he got a good feeling from meeting with Shula earlier this week.

"They want to win the Super Bowl," he said. "They are a playoff-caliber team with or without me."

Shula said earlier this week he admires Sanders' talent and might want to offer a multi-year contract, depending on Sanders plans and interest in Miami. After the Dolphins 29-14 loss to Tampa Bay Shula said: "It's too early to be optimistic. But he's interested in us and we're interested in him."

Sanders said a decision is down the road — literally.

He stops in Kansas City on Monday, followed by Atlanta and New Orleans next week. More visits are planned the following week.

Sanders wants to hear how teams think they will perform this year. Some teams like Miami and San Francisco, where Sanders visited last week, would have to let people go to fit him under the salary cap.

Sanders said he wants to play both defense and offense as well as returning kicks.

"I don't want to come off the field," he said. "I want to earn every penny I make."

MHS girls fall in consolation final

MONAHANS — Odessa High defeated Midland High, 15-11, 15-6, to win the consolation championship of the Monahans Invitational Volleyball Tournament here Saturday.

The Midland Lee girls split two games Saturday in the consolation bracket. Lee polished off District 4-5A foe San Angelo, 11-15, 15-7, 15-10, before falling to 4-5A's Odessa High, 15-12, 7-15, 15-12 to send the Lady Bronchos up against MHS. Lee is now 1-1 on the season.

The Lady Bulldogs defeated Crane, 15-12, 15-8, and then beat Big Spring, 15-12, 15-9, to move into the consolation finals against OHS. The loss gives MHS a 2-1 season mark thus far.

Both MHS and Lee played in pool play Friday to move into the consolation bracket, but those were not full games and do not count on season standings.

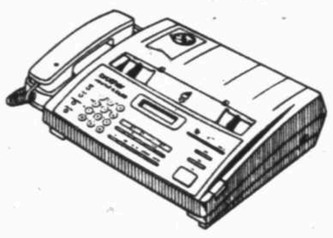

MHS will host Snyder and Lakeview at 5 and 7 p.m. Tuesday in the MHS gym. Lee will travel to Andrews to face both Andrews and Seminole at the same times Tuesday.

Scoggin aces GTCC hole

Larry Scoggin hit a hole-in-one during the Green Tree Gusher golf tournament Saturday. Scoggin, playing the 94-yard, No. 6 on the west course, hit a pitching wedge for the feat. Don, Jim and Shane Whitehead witnessed the shot.

Design Flexibility

Large, interesting and suitable for a big family: these are all words and phrases that could be used to describe this unusual house in Saddle Club South.

Situated at 1303 Castleford, in a quiet part of town away from the noise and bustle of Loop 250, this is a four bedroom home which has great potential and room for expansion.

Because there is a second family room, which could be turned into a fifth bedroom, or a study (it has large closets and nice views over the grassy front yard), there is a certain amount of flexibility in the layout of the home.

Recently updated, with new carpeting, air-conditioning system and decor, the house looks very new even though it was built just over 10-years ago.

High ceilings that have interesting treatments are common throughout the property: particularly unusual is the ceiling in the breakfast room.

Designed in the shape of a cone, the ceiling of this room gives a great deal of height, and is particularly attractive because of the exposed wood beams.

The wood motif is continued throughout the kitchen and other informal areas of the house by using matching paneling around the trim.

The master suite is another spacious series of rooms which seems even larger due to the large mirrors which help to make the room brighter and bigger in appearance. A nice brick fireplace with mantle adds to the overall high level of decor.

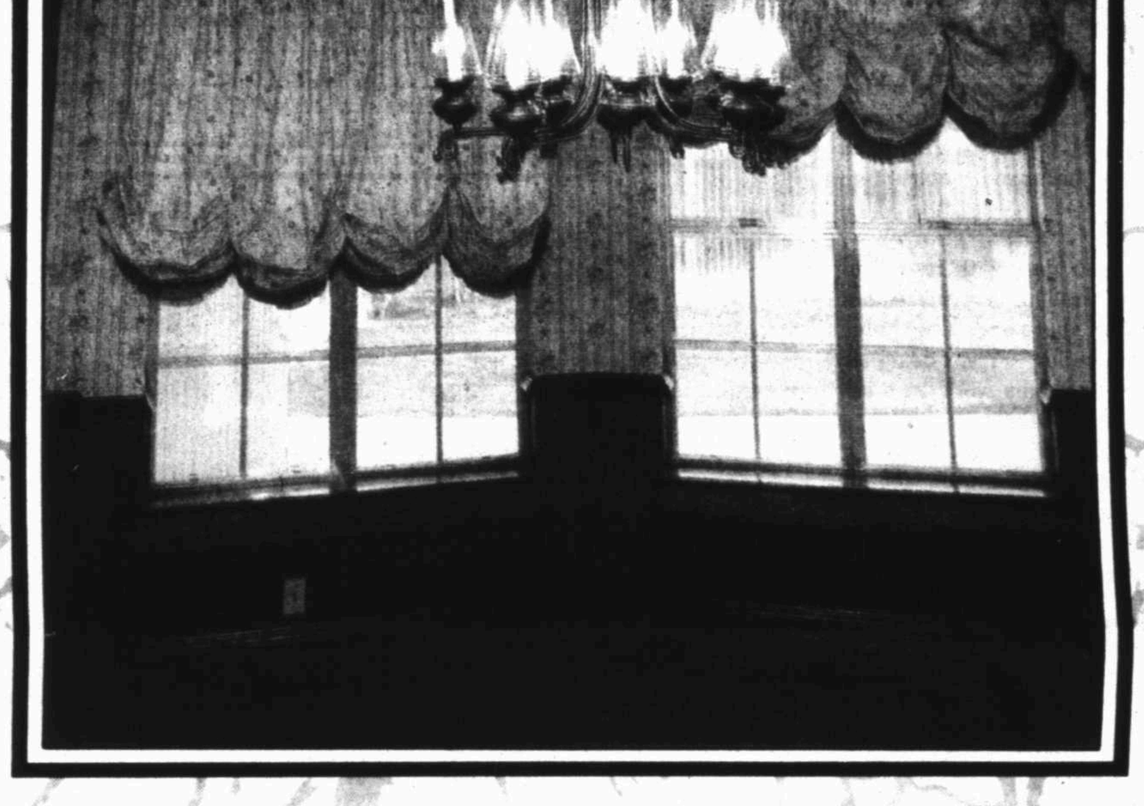

The master bathroom suite is certainly unusual. The sunken tub reaches out into the center of the room and is covered by an elegant (four-poster style) fabric canopy.

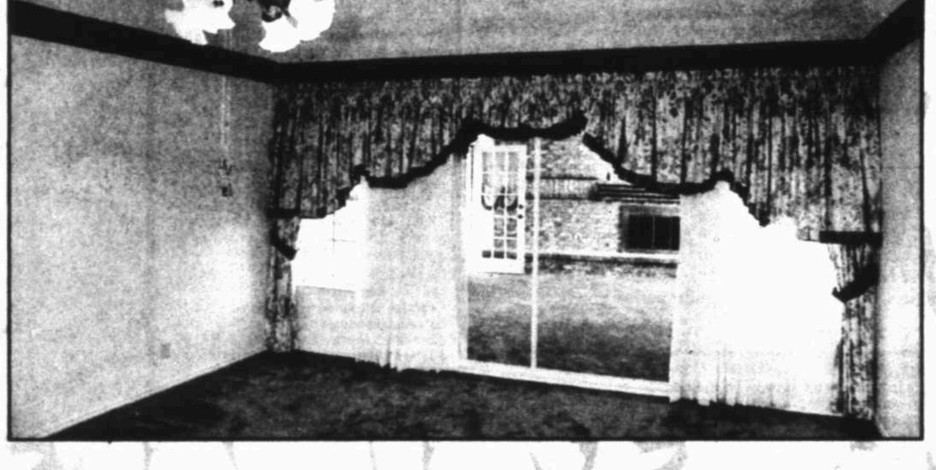

With large closets that feature built in shoe racks and shelves, a separate tiled shower stall, his 'n' hers vanities and a large skylight, this is a bright, elegant space in which to unwind and relax.

This house is currently being listed for $144,000, but the owners are open to reasonable offers.

Amy Johnson of the Langston Realtors is the listing agent and a private appointment to view can be arranged by calling her office at 685-0400.

Decor provides comfort, beauty and economy

Pat Orseth
President Midland
Association of Realtors

For prospective buyers, the interior design of a house is important. However, the Midland Association of REALTORS says that the location, price and layout of the home counts more, as the interior can always be redone to suit one's personal taste.

Redecorating a home can be exciting, but also frustrating. You may consider whether you should hire a professional interior designer or do it yourself.

The professional has a trained eye and may be better able to transform your well-loved and well-used furniture into a balanced, attractive scheme.

If you decide to invest in the services of a professional designer, there are a few things to remember. First, designer fees vary - some work on a set rate basis, others work for a percentage of total decorating budget. A homeowner should ask a designer what basis on which he or she charges.

When seeking a designer, ask for recommendations from friends who have used one and have been satisfied with results. Also, if a designer uses the initials ASID after his name, he or she is a member of the American Society of Interior Designers, an organization of approximately 10,000 members nationwide. This society has strict membership requirements. To join, a person must have had extensive education and experience in the interior design field, in addition to passing a two-day examination.

There are plenty of helpful hints for homeowners who decide to do the work themselves. First, do your homework. That is, visit furniture showrooms, look through decorating magazines, or pay attention to friends' and relatives' homes. Jot down ideas and compile a list of what you like and dislike in color combinations, arrangements and furniture.

Another work of advice is to take your time. Successful decoration develops from a carefully considered long-range plan. Many homeowners wisely wait one or two years after they move in before beginning a major redesigning venture. This gives them plenty of time to get an idea of what they want and to shop around for furnishing that will give lasting satisfaction.

Keep in mind that rooms in your home must serve your living habits and those of your family. The design should satisfy your family's ideas of comfort, beauty, economy and ease of maintenance. Choose colors you like, not necessarily colors of current fashion. Collect color samples that you intend to use in a room and study the combination carefully. If you still like it after a day or two, include the combination in your plan.

Cut out cardboard shapes in scale with your furniture and room size. Experiment with different arrangements. This is much easier than moving the furniture itself around. Remember that some bare spots in a room are desirable-simplicity enhances beauty.

Above all, do not shy away from an interior design merely because it is unusual. If something works well for your lifestyle, you will have the satisfaction of having your home the way you want it.

The Midland Association is one of more than 1,800 boards nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association and the voice for real estate.

Re/Max owners achieve coveted ABR Designation

Anita Noles
ReMax of Midland

Marilyn Jo Smith, Sales Associate, Co-Owner, and Anita Noles, Broker, Co-Owner of RE/MAX of Midland have been awarded the ACCREDITED BUYER REPRESENTATION, (ABR) Designation by the Real Estate Buyer's Designation Council REBAC0 a national organization addressing all aspects of consumer representation in real estate transactions.

Smith and Noles completed the educational requirements for the national designation at an intensive two-day seminar recently held in Dallas, Texas. Designees must also complete specified practical requirements and submit evidence of buyer's representative before being accepted in the designation program.

"Until very recently, the vast majority of real estate agents worked as exclusive agents of the seller," explains REBAC president, Charles M. Dahlheimer, "and most buyers were unrepresented in the purchase of a home. Today, there is a definite trend toward buyer representation, spurred on in part by the strong efforts of consumer advocates such as Ralph Nadar and organizations such as the Consumer Federation of America and AARP. It is our purpose to provide a nationwide registry of agents who not only call themselves buyer representatives but who have had the training and experience to deliver the service ethically and professionally. That is the purpose of the designation program."

Smith and Noles are affiliated with RE/MAX of Midland and are Co-owners. Smith has also achieved the Certified Residential Specialist Award and Noles has achieved the Graduate Realtor Institute and the Certified Residential Specialist Award. REBAC was founded in 1988 and currently has over 2,500 members in all fifty states and Canada. Approximately two hundred REBAC members have achieved the Accredited Buyer Representative Designation.

KENT KWIK

CONVENIENCE STORES

Why Join TEAM KENT?

What turns you oh about your job? For most people, these thoughts focus on several different areas. How does your current job stack up against TEAM KENT?

SALARY

Our minimum starting salary is $5/hour, Manager trainees can start at $300 a week or more (depending on experience). We also give you a SIGNING BONUS ($200 for full-timers and $100 for part-timers) at the completion of your first week!

SECURITY

Our company offers stable employment year-round. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) at your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to tailor-make a schedule that meets your needs!

FLEXIBILITY

Our stores are open 7 days a week, with many open 24 hours a day. We have some hours available for all shifts. Full-timers work a five day week!

BENEFITS

We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We also have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement, and a profit sharing and retirement plan. In addition, all Team Members are covered by a $100,000 accidental death life insurance policy!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

95% of our Managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. We offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you come into one of our Kent Kwiks or Avis Lubes!

SO HOW DO WE MEASURE UP?

Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With Kent, the chances are very high that you could be running one of our locations, making in the mid to upper $20's, plus bonuses! If all of this interests you, the first step is to pick up an application at any one of our Kent Kwiks, complete it, and bring it to our Midland area office (3314 N. Loop 250) between 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. Monday-Friday. If you live in Odessa, we take applications at 809 S. Crane Hwy. on Tuesdays only at 9 A.M. You will then take a battery of tests and questionnaires which give us the information we need to determine if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and a drug test is required. For answers to specific questions regarding employment with our company, please call Andy Salcedo at 520-4000.

OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, August 21, 1994 — SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING

Checking line pressure. Oil prices retreated this week due to market pressures.

Prices slump

News from the Nigerian oil strike continued to roil the oil market, as it has done for the last six weeks.

News that the strike could possibly be peacefully settled soon sent prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange to 12-week lows early in the week.

Prices then rebounded at midweek amid reports that tensions were escalating between the ruling military and the oil unions.

Late in the week, prices fell again with September contracts closing at $17.72 a barrel. The posted price was $16.50.

Taking a turn at the tongs. Fewer tongs were in use this week as the rig count fell.

Activity falls

Drilling activity continued to decline during the week ended August 12, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count fell six to 104 during the week. A year ago the count was 120.

Eddy County, N.M. was the most active in the Basin with 13 rigs. Midland County had eight rigs.

Nationwide, the rig county plunged 18 to 753, well below the year-ago count of 786.

Among major producing states, Texas showed the sharpest drop, 13 rigs. The biggest gain was seen by Kansas and Ohio, two rigs each.

Nova expansion

Nova Mud Inc. of Hobbs says continuing expansion into West Texas is expected to add 10-20 new jobs in engineering and operations. The company recently named Ken Goldsmith, of Midland, to the position of account representative. Prior to joining Nova, Goldsmith owned Gel-Tec Drilling Fluids Inc. in Snyder and was a consultant to Baroid Drilling Fluids. Goldsmith said the company is looking to greatly expand its market share in West Texas, through the use of new fluid technology now being created.

Texas connection

The close Texas-New Mexico connection becomes very clear when one considers the source of the $260 million in revenues taken in each year by the New Mexico Land Office.

According to Ron Miles, Republican candidate for New Mexico Land Commissioner, 82 percent of the revenues going into the permanent fund come from from the oil and gas industry and of those revenues 67 percent are paid out of Texas.

Jim Goodwin, chief appraiser in Ector County, poses in his office in Odessa. This spring a new law standardized the way Texas appraisal districts set mineral valuations.

New oil valuations have telling effect

■ Tax jurisdictions begin to feel efficiency of new mineral evaluation law

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press Writer

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Figuring oil and gas values used to be something of an art in Texas. Until this spring, that is, when a new law standardized the way Texas appraisal districts set mineral valuations.

Those used to the more creative practice are giving the measure mixed reviews. And in some cases taxing entities left without their creative tax formulas are coming up short in the revenue department. Odessa College, because of tax revenue loss and bad investments found itself short this year.

"It's like cooking a pot roast: Everybody did it a little differently," said Jim Goodwin, chief appraiser in Ector County. "Now everybody has to follow the recipe to the last grain of salt."

The statute lays out a formula incorporating the previous year's average prices — rather than future forecasts, or the prices as of Jan. 1 — to calculate fair-market value.

Supporters trumpet the law's muting effect on volatile fluctuations in oil prices. Taxpayers benefit because appraisals are based on less guesswork, they say.

But others complain that the mandated approach uses outdated information and restricts an appraiser's best judgment.

Whatever their opinion, observers of the new law agree that no one yet knows the impact of standardizing mineral valuations.

State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, said he sponsored the measure last year "to bring pricing in line with reality."

Craddick said he intends to propose some corrections to work out the law's unforeseen quirks. Industry response was positive, he said.

"I have heard that a couple of groups have said it's cost their county money," he said. "If it's costing you money, you were unfairly taxing."

The new law, which amends the tax code, debuts in a year when mineral

Exhaust gas has EOR potential

By Ellen Hopkins

A Kansas inert gas project could offer potential for some smaller Permian Basin fields.

Enhanced oil recovery featuring CO_2 has become increasingly popular in the Permian Basin, especially since CO_2 supplies are readily available via pipeline. However, CO_2 is not an economic option for some remote locations or single well reservoirs.

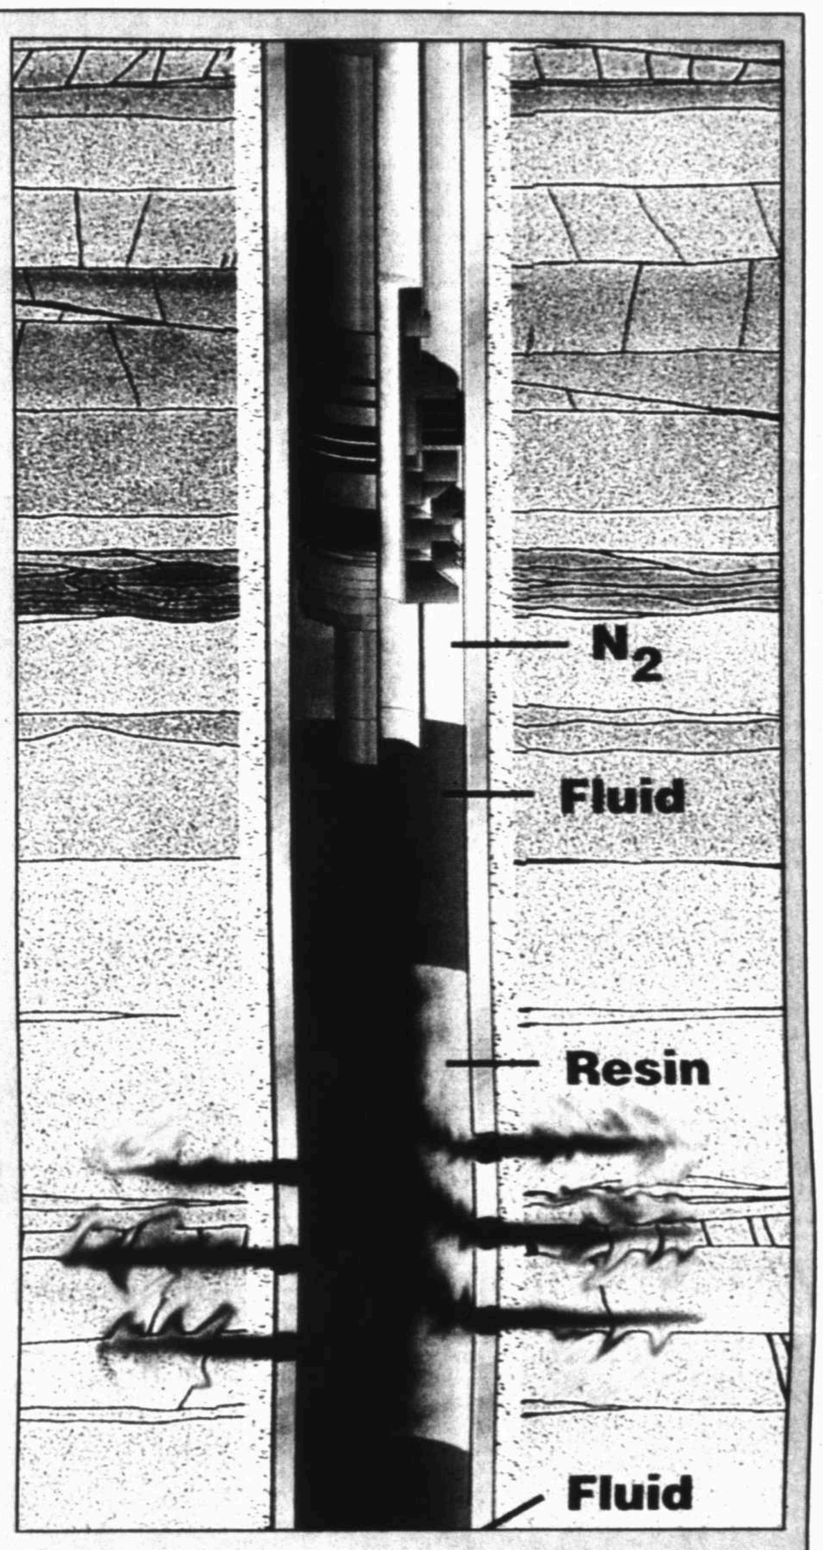

But onn site inert gas generation is a cyclic EOR alternative that may be worth consideration, says a petroleum consultant.

On site engine combustion delivers a mixture of 80 to 87 percent N_2 and 13 to 19 percent CO_2 at rates and an injection pressure compatible with the reservoir. The resulting mixture is less corrosive than pure CO_2 and reduces oil viscosity by 30 percent at 1500 psi. The gas is not toxic and causes no disposal problems.

Two- to seventeen-fold production increases are reported at costs of less than $4 per barrel. Generating inert gas at the well site costs about one-third the expense of trucked in gas.

George Stoeppelwerth, petroleum consultant in Wichita, Kansas, said to his knowledge inert gas has increased production every time it's been used. Stoeppelwerth received a bachelor's degree in geological engineering from the University of Kansas in 1955. He worked with Standard Oil of Texas until 1964, and served in the early 80s at Nebraska's representative to the Interstate Oil Compact Commission (IOCC).

The PerfCom system perforates and treats for sand in one operation by sending a surge of resin into wellbore at the time of perforation.

Sand blaster technology

■ Halliburton process offers help for sand problems

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A new one-step process for perforating and sand consolidation introduced by Halliburton and headed toward the Permian Basin could be a major factor in reducing sand production problems.

Introduced only four-months ago, the PerfCon technique which is a spin-off of Halliburton's PerfStim, is said to provide oil and gas operators with significant cost savings on completions, increased production and less down-time related to sand production.

The single operation allows for treatment of longer zones (up to 170 feet) while eliminating the need for a workover rig and takes less time to perform than conventional sand control treatments.

In a single operation completion in which the well is perforated under over balanced conditions, a high-energy resin surge and catalyst flow into the under balanced formation at the exact moment the well is perforated. The resin sets up and consolidates sand in and around the near wellbore to reduce sand production problems. Within 48 hours the well is ready for production.

Will the real Mark Chupka stand up?

Pitts

Deep in the bowels of the Department of Energy a low profile economist works feverishly at drafting national policy of the highest order.

Those who have visited him there say one must go past special security and metal detectors before they are able to see Mark Chupka.

Who is Mark Chupka? What is he doing at DOE? And, why should the oil and gas business care?

Chupka is not exactly a household name in the oil industry yet, but by the time the oil and gas pipeline gets to pumping out information about the new man at DOE, it is a name that is as likely to be known in energy circles as O'Leary. And when his background and mission is known, it could put DOE in line for more suspicion and heat from the oil and gas industry. Sadly, the heat will come at a time when things were just beginning to cool down from some of Secretary Hazel O'Leary's unfortunate comments about the industry.

Sources say Mr. Chupka is an economist and former aide to Al Gore on loan from the White House to the Department of Energy to ride herd over the coordination and drafting of a new U.S. Energy Policy. Observers say it is rare that White House staffers are called upon to help draft energy policy.

That fact, coupled with the fact that Chupka has been Al Gore's point man on greenhouse gases and solar energy, has caused some to fear that any future energy policy will have a distinctive Al Gore spin — a spin so green it could strangle the remaining economic life from a feeble domestic oil and gas industry.

John Northington, DOE assistant secretary for Fossil Energy discounts that fear: "Chupka is a nice guy. He is no left wing environmentalist, and he clearly admits his lack of knowledge in the oil and gas industry."

Nevertheless, comments supposedly made by Chupka and even his presence at DOE have caused some to come away with great concern. "I think the oil industry ought to be bothered that an economist for Al Gore is at DOE, writing energy policy," said Larry Strahan, president of the Houston-based People for an Energy Policy — an organization that sports such energy notables as Robert O. Anderson, founder and former chairman of ARCO as Chairman, and Donald Hodel, former Secretary of Energy under Reagan ,as Vice Chairman.

Strahan says he is "alarmed" at remarks made by Chupka: "Chupka told me that he sees no energy problem in America, that he feels there is plenty of energy and that it's cheap, and that when his draft of the energy policy is written it will reflect that sentiment. That tells me that the Clinton administration is committed to cheap foreign oil no matter what happens to the domestic oil and gas industry."

This is strong talk coming from an individual who was an ardent Clinton backer, so we called Chupka, a Yale graduate, to learn his side of the controversy.

Abraxas Petroleum posts 21 percent revenue rise

SAN ANTONIO — Abraxas Petroleum Corp. announced results for the second quarter of 1994.

The company reported revenues of $2,431,016, an increase of 21 percent over the comparable 1993 quarter, primarily due to the continued development of company-owned oil and gas properties.

Cash flow before working capital changes climbed to a record $975,859, an increase of 82 percent compared to the $535,501 level experienced during the second quarter of 1993. Excluding non-recurring items, net results for the 1994 second quarter improved to a profit of $252,849 versus $130,201 in the same quarter for 1993.

On a reporting basis, the company posted a net loss applicable to common stock of $1,228,306 or 29 cents per share, compared with a net loss of $145,074 or 9 cents per share for the second quarter of 1993. Results for the second quarter of 1994 include a non-recurring non-cash charge of $1,347,874 which represents the entire remaining balance of deferred financing fees, which were written off in conjunction with the refinancing of all indebtedness owed to the company's previous long-term lender. This charge-off eliminates all of the deferred financing costs associated with the company's former secured lender and establishes significantly lower financing costs going forward.

Crude oil production for the second quarter of 1994 averaged 900 barrels per day, a 19 percent increase over production levels of 756 barrels per day in the second quarter of 1993. Natural gas liquids averaged 278 barrels per day versus 100 barrels per day in the comparable 1993 quarter, an increase of 178 percent. Natural gas sales averaged 4.3 million cubic feet per day in the second quarter, a 38 percent increase above the 3.1 million cubic feet per day levels of the 1993 second quarter. These increases are all attributable to the Sinton acquisition made by the company, effective April 1, 1993.

EXHAUST: Research finds inert gas may be useful in EOR projects

(From 1E)

"Whether it's always economical is hard to say," said Stoeppelwerth. "But at a minimum, three-fourths of the time it is economical. And it always provides important reservoir data."

He said its use is applicable in a multitude of cases. His test cases have all been in the Kansas/Nebraska area, but he can see applicability for exhaust gas in the Permian Basin due to the number of marginal wells, remote locations and current EOR projects.

For example, when reserves are not sufficient to justify the capital expenditure necessary for a CO_2 flood, or when flood water is either unavailable or the formation is sensitive to water, inert gas is a workable option.

It has been used to "Huff-n-Puff" a single well, it can provide gas for flooding or re-pressuring, and it is suitable for mature waterfloods that need a source of foam or water-alternating-gas (WAG).

It can also be economically used to field test a potential injection project before a pipeline is laid, or for near wellbore cleanup.

Inert gas can determine reservoir characteristics prior to a flood. And it can be employed for fluid depression MITs (Mechanical Integrity Tests) periodically required for underground injection control.

Stoeppelwerth explained that the process involves a portable, either skid- or trailer-mounted engine that is fueled by propane or natural gas driving a compressor which raises the engine exhaust gas to injection pressure.

Essential engine components include catalytic converters, coolers, scrubbers, and chemical treatment which produce clean gas with a Ph of 6 or higher and a dew point near 0 degrees Farenheit. Water content is 0.0078 gas/Mscf.

In a resulting mixture of 85 percent N2 and 14 percent CO_2, which Stoeppelwerth cited as an example, the undesired gases (NOXs) are either converted to benign compounds or dissolved in the water removed by the scrubbers. Although CO_2 in water is corrosive, there is little water and a low volume of carbon dioxide so the corrosion rate is below 1 mil per year.

However, the low CO_2 concentration still provides much of the viscosity reduction of pure CO_2.

Two benefits of using on site exhaust gas are cost savings and the fact that the on site machine allows the operator to select the rate of injection which best optimizes the treatment, rather than being forced to inject the whole batch within the time limits dictated by service company hourly charges.

As a price comparison with using pure CO_2, Stoeppelwerth said CO_2 trucked 100 miles costs between $3.50 and $4.00 per Mcf plus injection. He described a Kansas well that cost between $7.66 and $9.19/Mscf for hauled in CO_2 and injection costs.

This compares favorably with injection costs of inert gas varying from $2.00 to $3.50/Mscf. The on-site construction costs range from $60,000 for a 140 Mscfd unit to $40,000 for a 40 Mscfd unit.

He added that one ton of propane fuel yields three tons of CO_2 in over 15 tons of injected gas. Propane costs about 60 cents per gallon.

A prime example of the economics is illustrated by a northwest Kansas lease which produced over $65,000 worth of oil for $18,000 worth of propane.

In another case, a single well reservoir with prior production of 7,000 barrels recovered over 1,000 barrels above the extrapolated decline curve with cyclic gas injection. The cost of recovering the oil was less than $5/barrel. This well, producing from the Lansing-Kansas City formation and operated by CO_2 Operations Co. in McCook, Nebraska, had been scheduled for abandonment.

Explaining the process further, Stoeppelwerth said that increased recovery of oil under immiscible conditions results from increased reservoir energy and a reduction of oil viscosity. Even the small percentage of CO_2 will reduce oil viscosity by about 30 percent at 1500 psi reservoir pressure.

In the reservoir, the nitrogen supplies reservoir energy and occupies pore space. He said the relative permeabilities will depend on the reservoir's saturation history and rock characteristics.

"The relative permeability to gas normally increases with gas saturation as the reservoir is being produced or re-pressured with gas," wrote Stoeppelwerth in a summary of exhaust gas use in cyclic EOR.

"When the re-pressured reservoir is produced again, the relative permeability to gas goes to zero at a higher than original gas saturation. Retained gas saturation as high as 60 percent has been reported.

"Therefore the residual oil saturation could be as low as 20 percent in a rock with an irreducible water saturation of 20 percent."

In Huff-n-Puff applications for single wells near the economic limit, exhaust gas injection may be the only way to increase reservoir energy. In multiple well reservoirs, intended Huff-n-Puff may give some flood effects, he said.

Another important use of inert gas involves testing proposed waterflood injection wells. Stoepplewerth said the inert gas will provide warning of directional permeability differences and potential channeling.

"It is likely that the increased production during the test period will more than pay for the testing."

And in fields where the economic viability of using inert gas is questionable, the resulting reservoir information has been valuable in indicating how to drill infill wells.

VALUATIONS: Reception mixed

values dropped anyway.

For instance: Gaines County has lost 23 percent of its mineral value since '93 — from just under $3 million, to $2.3 million, said chief appraiser Betty Caudle. She blames part of the loss on under-valuation caused by the new law.

"It certainly hurt Gaines County," Mrs. Caudle said. "The market hurt more, but the two of them together was a real blow."

In Odessa, Goodwin sent out about 20,000 notices to Ector County mineral-rights owners around the first of May. He expects the new mandated method to muffle the extreme price variations that can skew an appraisal.

"The law did not change our quest for the true market value. It was just a matter of the vehicle to get to that market value," Goodwin said.

Appraising minerals is tricky by nature.

If oil prices plunge drastically, a company could face taxes on a product worth less than its appraised value. But if prices soar, the company enjoys tax bills smaller than they could have been.

The new law intends to smooth such peaks and valleys by requiring appraisers to use each lease's average oil price from last year.

Previously, county appraisal districts across Texas used different methods to calculate valuations. Some looked at the price of oil Jan. 1; others estimated how the price was likely to fluctuate.

"What's concerned some appraisers is that rather than being able to base (the valuation) on the most recent information, they have to base it on last year," said Tim Wooten, executive assistant in the property tax division of the State Comptroller's Office.

"Some appraisers think it might keep them from getting to the market value of the property," Wooten said.

Oil prices dwindled last fall and early this year but are higher now — above $18.

Amoco Production Co., Ector County's largest taxpayer, received a valuation based on its average $17.72 oil price last year, said company tax representative Tom Clifton. Its price Jan. 1 was $13.25.

The new law "takes the pressure off" the appraiser, he said.

"There has often been some mistrust between the oil companies and the taxing jurisdictions that what the appraisal firms were doing was either beneficial to the oil companies, or was unrealistic or was politically driven," Clifton said. "This does a lot to eliminate the politics."

Bill Goodman, deputy superintendent of business affairs for the Ector County Independent School District, has seen oil prices from $15 to $21 throw curves at budget makers over the years. The law will add stability, he said.

"I'm not going to like it on the lag that it shows when oil values are moving up, and I'm going to like it a whole lot when oil values are going down," Goodman said. "We've got a little bittersweet in there."

BLASTER: Treats sand problems

(From 1E)

The technology is very specific to given reservoir conditions, according to Halliburton engineers and for producing wells with sand production problems the technique is applied using a pump out plug at the bottom of the tubing. When pressure in the tubing reaches a specified level, the plug releases a surge of resin and catalyst into the perforations.

"Strangely, the resin does not interfer with permeability, tests show that it has minimal to no effect on permeability," said John Jameson, marketing coordinator for Halliburton Energy Services, who noted that the technique is especially adaptable to permeable unconsolidated formations.

Halliburton gives one incident in which a Gulf of Mexico well was producing sand and 150 barrels of oil from a 20 ft. perforated interval below 10,900 feet that normally produces 450 bopd. After the formation was washed using coiled tubing, the PerfCon service was performed and the well was shut-in for 12 hours. As a result, sand production has stopped and the well is now making 420 bopd.

So far all testing has been done in the Gulf Coast area, where it is estimated that 50 percent of the offshore wells have sand problems, but Jameson says the technique could find wide application in the Permian Basin. He said as many as 10 percent of the wells in the Permian Basin might have sand problems that result in costly production.

"Formation sand can reek all kinds of havoc on production equipment, and on the well itself. Sometimes a well may be down for days to resolve sand problems."

Along with gravel packs and screens, Jameson said the PerfCon technology, which was developed by Oryx and licensed to Halliburton, should prove to be a very cost effective means of reducing sanding problems in highly permeable wells with sand.

Rigging reefs

Workers prepare to lower a 40-foot oil rig to the ocean floor as part of the artificial reef program. The two rigs were dropped about seven miles off the South Padre Island shore. The rigs were sunk in 70 feet of water on their sides, allowing a 40-foot clearance to the water surface. The reef programs hopes to attract new marine life to enhance the fishing and diving in the Gulf. The program has been met with differing views from environmentalists who call the program ocean dumping.

Clayton Williams Energy posts profit

Clayton Williams Energy Inc. announced the results for the second quarter of 1994. the company posted a profit for the quarter although lower oil prices led to negative year-to-year comparisons.

The company reported net income of $329,000 or 6 cents per share, on revenues of $12.6 million. This compares to net income of $1.1 million or 28 cents per share on revenues of $15.4 million for the second quarter of 1993.

"I am pleased about our return to profitability i the second quarter," said Clayton W. Williams Jr., chief executive officer. "Oil prices for the second quarter were up 19 percent compared to the first quarter and our costs and operating expenses were down 16 percent."

For the first six months of 1994, the company experienced a net loss of $1.5 million or 27 cent per share on revenues of $25.8 million. This compares with net income of $2.1 million or 50 cents per share on revenues of $30.4 million for the same period of 1993. Revenues were off 15 percent due mainly to lower oil and gas prices.

Lower realized oil and gas prices combined with decreased production impacted the company's results for the quarter compared to the second quarter of 1993. The average oil price was down 11 percent for the quarter at $16.22 per barrel versus $18.13 per barrel for second quarter 1993. The average gas price, down 18 percent, was $2.06 per Mcf compared to $2.50 per Mcf a year ago.

Oil and gas production averaged 8.5 MBOE per day for the second quarter, down 11 percent from 9.5 MBOE per day a year ago. The decrease in production is due to the company's curtailment of its drilling program during the first six months of 1994 in the Cretaceous Trend of South Texas in response to depressed oil prices.

"Now that oil prices have rebounded, we have resumed a two-rig drilling program in South Texas using slim hole technology," said Williams. "We also increased our capital budget approximately 45 percent for the year to $33.3 million. The company plans to add a third rig to this program in September. We are waiting for winter weather to clear in Argentina so that we may complete two wells and, depending on their results, plan to drill four more beginning in September. I expect the company to have a strong finish in the last half of 1994."

Companies added to on-line system offered by Williams Energy Ventures

TULSA — Williams Energy Ventures continues to boost natural gas liquids activity through Chalkboard, the on-line, real-time brokering system for petroleum liquids, with the recent addition of 53 companies to the system. This addition brings the number of companies committed to the Chalkboard system to more than 140.

Chalkboard provides cash-market traders a forum in which to negotiate and complete transactions in domestic natural gas liquids, crude oils, and refined products in a real-time environment. Through Chalkboard, positions can be traded at virtually any delivery point in the United States.

"Chalkboard recently celebrated its one-year anniversary of live transactions in the U.S. market," says David Gregorio, managing director. "Over the past year, the Chalkboard network has grown exponentially both in trading companies and completed volumes."

The Williams Energy Ventures Inc. family of computer-based information products also includes Streamline, an electronic natural gas transaction system, and capacity Central, the firm capacity brokering system for natural gas pipeline users. Williams Energy Ventures is a unit of The Williams Companies Inc., an energy and telecommunications corporation based in Tulsa.

Fina refinery sets safety marks

BIG SPRING — The 260 employees of Fina Oil & Chemical Co.'s Big Spring Refinery have worked one million hours without a lost-time injury and 600,000 hours without a recordable injury, according to Jeff Morris, refinery manager.

A lost-time injury is defined as any employee jury occurring at the work place that requires the employee to take time off to recover. A recordable injury is defined as any significant injury requiring medical attention, such as a cut or burn, including one which does not require an employee to take tie off for recovery. The last lost-time injury occurred in November of 1992 and the last recordable injury occurred in August of 1993.

Since record keeping began, only five other United States refineries have posted recordable injury records better than Fina's Big Spring refinery, according to the National Petroleum Refiner's Association.

"The main reason these records are so significant is that they represent the quality of work of our employees, which causes these wonderful results," said Morris.

"This event says a lot of good things about the Big Spring refinery because the safety performance of a plant reflects aspects of its overall performance. The refinery is not only setting safety records, but is also setting production and environmental performance records."

Fina President and Chief Executive Officer Ron W. Haddock said, "The safety milestones are accomplishments of which everyone at the refinery should be proud and are indicative of the continuing trend of improving operations. I'm sure all members of the Southwestern Business Unit team share the pride of these extraordinary achievements."

Burlington Environmental opens Midland office

Burlington Environmental Inc. has announced the opening of a new office in Midland.

The new location will provide local and regional support to the clients traditionally served by Burlington's Houston and Farmington, N.M. offices.

Sharon Hall has been appointed to the position of operations manager. She will manage the Midland office and serve as both project manager and program manager. Before joining Burlington, she spent 13 years with Exxon Co. U.S.A., including 3.5 years in the Midland Environmental and Regulatory Affairs Group.

Also joining the Midland office is J.D. McNamara. He becomes remediation project manager and will be responsible for project estimating and supervision. He brings with him a strong environmental remediation, oil and gas, chemical and agricultural background.

Burlington provides consulting, engineering, remediation, drilling waste recycling and treatment and disposal services. In December 1993, the company was acquired by Philip Environmental of Ontario, Canada. Philip Environmental is the fourth largest waste management company in North America and provides solid waste, chemical waste, resource recovery and environmental services from over 60 offices throughout North America.

Tenneco chosen to participate in South American pipeline

HOUSTON (AP) — Tenneco Gas has been selected to participate in the development of a $2 billion pipeline stretching 2,000 miles from Bolivia to southern and southeastern Brazil.

Petrobras, Brazil's state-owned oil and gas company, has selected Houston-based Tenneco Gas as part of a consortium called BTB Group, whose other members are BHP of Australia and British Gas.

"This is a very significant project to us as far as overall scope and furthering our work in international markets," said Barney Phillips, vice president at Tenneco Gas International.

The Brazilian-Bolivian pipeline project is part of a $5 billion proposed venture designed to tap Bolivian natural gas reserves and transport them to developing markets in Brazil.

In April Tenneco Gas announced its participation with British Gas in a $1.5 billion project linking Chilean gas markets with Argentine supplies. The company also is building and will operate the $600 million trans-Andean pipeline.

The BTB consortium will work with Petrobras to perform advanced feasibility work on the pipeline project. Construction is expected to begin in 1995 and gas is to begin flowing by 1997.

Under the terms of the agreement, the consortium could have as much as a 49 percent equity stake in the Brazilian portion of the pipeline project, with Petrobras holding the majority 51 percent.

Canyon gas drilling continues in Sutton

Staff Report

Canyon gas development continues in Sutton County.

MERIDIAN OIL INC. finaled an Upper Canyon gas well in the Sonora field, 4.8 miles north of Sonora.

The No. 28 Meckel was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 4589 Mcfd from perforations 5,274 to 5,776 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,300 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFEHCL acid and fractured with 963,000 gallons of gel and 428,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Total depth was 6,015 ft. and the well was plugged back to 5,900 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,990 ft.

The well topped the Base Cretaceous at 735 ft. and Canyon Sand from 5,250 to 5,786 ft. on ground elevation of 2,226 ft.

Location is 300 ft. from south and 2,600 ft. from west lines of Section 13, GC&SF survey, Abst. 145.

Conoco stakes Terrell wildcat

CONOCO INC. has staked a 14,000 ft. wildcat in Terrell County, 20 miles southwest of Sheffield.

The No. 1 Horsehead "4" is located 1,320 ft. from north and west lines of Section 4, Alexander Mitchell Survey, Abst. 2480.

Union Pacific stakes 11 wells in Crockett

UNION PACIFIC RESOURCES has staked 11 wells in Crockett County, one each in the Davidson Ranch (Pennsylvanian 7890), Ozona Southwest (Strawn) and Hunt-Baggett West (Strawn) fields and eight in the Ozona (Canyon Sandstone) field.

The No. 7 Couch, set for the Ozona Southwest (Strawn) field, will be drilled 10 miles southwest of Ozona at a depth of 10,200 ft. Location is 2,047 ft. from south and 2,716 ft. from west lines of Section 25, Block ST, HE&WT survey.

The No. 8 Davidson "17" is set for the Davidson Ranch field, scheduled to 8,600 ft. and is located 1,735 ft. from south and 2,511 ft. from east lines of Section 17, Block KL, GC&SF survey.

In the Hunt-Baggett West field, the No. 3 Helbing "18" will be drilled to 10,500 ft. Location is 2,450 ft. from south and 660 ft. from east lines of G.M. Couch survey, Abst. 5066.

Three of Union Pacific's Ozona (Canyon) wells are located on the Elmer Hoover Hatton Estate lease, 28.7 miles southwest of Ozona. Proposed depth is 7,800 ft.

Two are staked on the Moody Minerals "A" lease 28 miles southwest of Ozona with a proposed depth of 7,900 ft.

One is staked to a proposed depth of 7,400 ft. on the Frank White lease, 28.9 miles southwest of Ozona.

One is on the Montgomery "A" lease, 16.9 miles southwest of Ozona. Proposed depth is 7,800 ft.

The eighth is located on the S. Millspaugh leae, 19.3 miles southwest of Ozona with a planned depth of 7,400 ft.

U.S. firms to explore China bay

BEIJING (AP) — Two U.S. energy companies, Kerr-McGee Corp. and Murphy Oil Corp., have signed a contract with the China National Offshore Oil Corp. to explore and develop oil in the Bohai Bay, China announced.

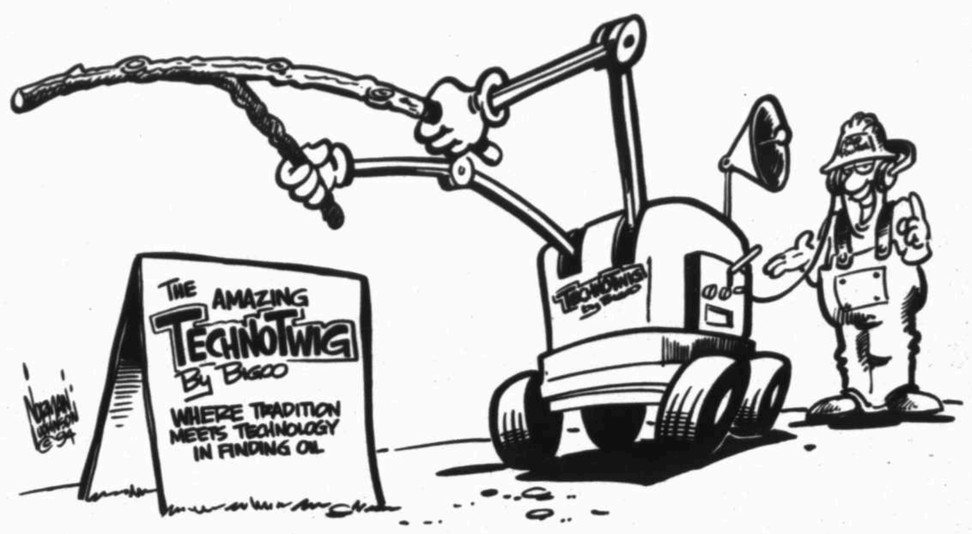

The two firms obtained the rights to explore a 912 square mile area 12 miles to 50 miles off the coast of Tanggu and Tianjin, the official Xinhua News Agency reported.

The terms of the contract were not available. But the report said Kerr-McGee, based in Oklahoma City, would handle exploratory work including seismic surveying and drilling wildcat wells during the seven-year contract period. Murphy Oil is based in El Dorado, Ariz.

China is expected to produce more than 6 million tons of crude oil this year from its 11 offshore oil fields, up from 4.6 million tons in 1993.

Nabors Industries to buy Sundowner Offshore

HOUSTON (AP) — Nabors Industries has signed a deal to purchase Sundowner Offshore Services, in an estimated $84 million stock swap.

Industry analysts applauded the deal, but noted the transaction raises some intriguing questions about Nabors' intentions toward a Sundowner competitor, Pool Energy Services.

Earlier this year, Houston-based Nabors bought a 6.4 percent stake in Pool, in what was seen as the start of the first unfriendly takeover attempt seen in the oilfield service business in a decade.

Houston-based Sundowner is a $16-million-a year well service and workover company that does remedial work on offshore oil and gas wells primarily in the Gulf of Mexico.

Nabors is the world's largest, publicly-traded land drilling company with revenues of nearly $120 million during fiscal 1993.

Under the terms of the deal announced Monday, Nabors has agreed to swap Sundowner shareholders 2.8 shares of its stock for each share of Sundowner stock.

Since Nabors is offering 13.16 million shares for the 4.7 million shares of Sundowner stock, the deal is worth $85.5 million, based on Monday closing prices.

The parties hope to complete the transaction in November. Jerry Shanklin will stay on as chairman and chief executive officer of Sundowner.

Nabors operates 250 land rigs, as well as 10 platform rigs, one jackup rig and four barge rigs.

What remains uncertain is what the Sundowner purchase will mean for Pool. Pool is, like Sundowner, a well service and workover company.

And several analyst said they could see the advantages of a combination of the two companies.

Pool officials, however, discounted any advantages and responded by adopting a common anti-takeover device, known as a poison pill.

"I never said that," Chupka said. "I think Larry may have misunderstood. I told him that energy policy was not as high profile right now as other policy issues because energy was relatively cheap, and for many their interest is directly proportional to the price at the gas pump."

Chupka also denied that he is a plant at DOE to make sure Al Gore gets his version of an energy policy. He says he only came over to DOE to coordinate the formulation of national energy policy because he was asked to.

However, he did not fully answer our question about what made him better qualified to pull together an energy policy than anyone already on board at DOE.

"Is he there to make sure we don't get energy policy?" Strahan commented. "Bill White knows more about energy than Chupka will ever know. Why is he needed?"

Chupka says he only came over to DOE, because he had "worked with some of the people there." He also said he was not "on loan" from the White House, but was a paid employee at DOE.

Strahan said Chupka further predicts that when the Department of Commerce comes back with its findings on imported crude oil, it will conclude that imported crude oil poses no threat to national security.

"I did not comment directly on that. It did not come from me. I think it came from someone else in his party."

Strahan also said the Gore staffer told him that DOE needed to help Texas find a new industry so they can get out of the oil and gas industry.

Chupka responded: "That's completely inaccurate. I was talking about diversity in general, not getting out of the energy business. We recognize that fossil energy accounts for 85 percent of our energy needs and will for some time to come."

The 36-year-old economist, who in addition to his Gore duties, has worked on energy policy for the Congressional Budget Office and ICF Inc., an environmental consulting firm, was asked point blank: "Are you aware of the great fear the oil industry has for environmental extremism? Will you attempt to write an energy policy to make the oil industry greener?"

He noted that he was aware of the pain the oil industry had suffered and had no desire to see the pain continue. "I have no ax to grind with the oil industry, and we will be assessing the impact of regulation on domestic production. We will be anxious to hear what the industry has to say."

Mark Chupka may be a nice guy. He may not have an ax to grind. He may be open-minded and not a left-wing environmentalist, but from all appearances his appearance at DOE was probably a bad choice.

His environmental duties for Vice President Al Gore will not lend him much credibility in the oil and gas industry. And one will be hard pressed to believe that his move to DOE was coincidental.

John Paul Pitts is business/oil editor of the Reporter Telegram.

"MEET OUR ELITE"

Amanda Saum (center) is congratulated by Patricia de Little, President of Temporary Resources and Vickey Banks, Manager.

Amanda Saum has achieved "Elite Temp" status by receiving a Superior rating from a long term assignment she recently completed. Amanda, who is a graduate of Texas A&M University, has extraordinary word processing abilities as well as excellent communication skills. She is very versatile and speaks Spanish fluently.

When not on the job, Amanda enjoys reading, writing, working with Desktop Publishing and baking. She states that she enjoys working for Temporary Resources because of the flexibility in hours and the opportunity it gives her to meet "so many wonderful people and work in the different businesses in Midland."

For a day or a career, Temporary Resources can provide your company with an employee who can meet all your staffing needs.

Texas Permits to Drill
Monthly Totals, 1993-94

Texas Well Completions
Monthly, 1993-94

Texas oil activity

The Railroad Commission issued a total of 1,050 drilling permits in July, compared with 1,172 in July 1993. The July total included 613 permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 42 to re-enter existing well bores, 66 to deepen existing holes, 142 to plugback existing holes and 61 for other wells. There were 63 permits for new oil and gas holes issued in the Midland district, District 8. Total drilling permits issued in 1994 year-to-date is 7,183, unchanged from the same period of 1993. Operators reported 251 gas, 282 oil and 15 service completions in July, compared to 222 gas, 400 oil and 44 service completions in the same period last year. The Midland district reported 64 oil and 17 gas completions. The total well completions recorded for 1994 year-to-date is 4,516, an 8 percent decrease from 4,921 in the same period of 1993.

Nugent urges DOE to use Texas as model for energy incentives

AUSTIN — "The federal government has repeatedly proven its principal strength is indecisiveness. That must change."

That was the message Railroad Commission Chairman James E. "Jim" Nugent brought to Deputy Secretary of Energy William H. White and other federal energy officials meeting here to discuss energy issues.

Nugent said Texas has been an "experimental laboratory" which has proven that common sense incentive programs can spur additional oil and gas production and additional economic benefits to both industry and government at no net cost. He said the commission is planning to announce an even more ambitious incentive plan next month, and suggested federal officials should be doing the same.

The commissioner said state incentive programs designed to encourage enhanced oil recovery projects and bring inactive oil and gas wells back on line have been resounding successes, boosting oil production by millions of barrels and the state economy by millions of dollars. Nugent said the Department of Energy should press for implementation of such incentives at the federal level.

"We estimate the 743 enhanced oil recovery projects we have encouraged through our severance tax incentive will produce over 945 million additional barrels of oil, one and a half times the size of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, at far lest cost to the taxpayers," Nugent said.

Texas' incentive program to return inactive wells to production is another success story that could be repeated across the country.

"In 1992, only 368 inactive oil and gas wells were returned to production," Nugent said. "Since our incentive took effect last September, 2,243 inactive Texas wells have been returned to production, a six-fold increase."

Nugent said the wellhead value of the oil and gas produced from these wells should top $306 million, with the total economic value of that production exceeding $890 million. While the state gives up a small portion of its severance tax revenues on new production, overall revenues increase from indirect taxes on the sale of refined products, he said.

The federal government has looked the other way over the past decade as a healthy energy industry has plummeted to critical condition, according to the commissioner. Signs of the decline are everywhere: Texas oil production is at the lowest level since World War II. Imports are at dangerously high levels. American lives have been risked and lost to protect our energy pipeline from the Middle East. Good paying energy jobs have disappeared at a rate of 41,000 a month. Over 500,000 Americans working in the energy industry have been handed pink slips — more than the jobs lost in the auto and steel industries combined.

"The time to act is now," Nugent said. "We can talk these issues to death. But the real challenge is creating the political will to pass meaningful legislation that will secure a future for this industry, and more importantly, benefit the American economy."

IPAA finds drilling costs rose in 1993

Drilling costs on a per-well basis rose nearly 14 percent in 1993, mainly because of increased payments to drilling contractors, according to a survey released by the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

The IPAA Petroleum Cost Committee report shows increases in all segments of the drilling index. The composite index rose 8 percent on a per-foot basis compared to 1992.

The committee attributes the rise to the following:

- For the first time last year, gas well completions out-paced oil completions 9,846 to 8,787, with wells which tend to be deeper.
- Used drill strings and salvaged equipment are becoming scarce in some regions, while new efficient equipment which reduces drilling time is available at higher rates.

"In order for the trend to continue, crude oil and natural gas prices must remain stable or else independent producers will be unable to further increase their drilling activity," said IPAA Chair man George Alcorn.

Payments to drilling contractors rose significantly, by 14 percent, to 117.4 (index according to 1989 base). The committee credits the increase to a tight supply of drill strings rather than the availability of rigs.

Bridge Oil suffers net loss in first half

DALLAS — Bridge Oil (U.S.A.) Inc. announced that it incurred a net loss for the first six months of 1994 of $833,000 on revenues of $34 million. This compares to net income of $1.5 million on revenue of $33.2 million during the same period of 1993.

Second quarter net loss was $947,000 on revenues of $18.2 million compared to net income of $415,000 on revenue of $16 million during the second quarter of 1993.

The second quarter and six month results include an $800,000 charge due to the company's decision not to proceed with a planned initial public offering of its common stock.

Mitchell declares quarterly dividend

THE WOODLANDS — Directors of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. have declared regular quarterly cash dividends of 12 cents per share on the company's Class A common stock and 13.25 cents per share on its Class B common stock. The dividends are payable October 4 to stockholders of record at the close of business September 8.

Grant Geophysical reports income

Grant Geophysical Co. has reported net income from continuing operations for the second quarter of 1994, compared to a loss in the same quarter of 1993.

Grant reported income of $114,000 or 1 cent per share, compared to a loss of $3,743,000 or 31 cents per share in 1993.

Revenues were $16,588,000, up from $16,019,000 in the same quarter last year. Operating income rose to 289,000 from a loss of $2,993,000 in 1993.

Coastal board declares dividends

HOUSTON — The board of directors of The Coastal Corp. has declared quarterly cash dividends on the company's outstanding common stock, Class A common stock and publicly held preferred stock and set August 31 as the record date for determining holders entitled to receive the payments on these issues.

The dividend for common stock is 10 cents per share and for Class A common stock is 9 cents per share, both payable October 1.

For the $1.19 Series A Convertible Preferred, the dividend is 29.75 cents per share. For $1.83 Series B Convertible Preferred, dividend is 45.75 cents per share. For the $2.125 Series H Preferred, dividend is 53.125 cents per share. All are payable September 15.

Peabody to buy two mines from Exxon

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Hanson PLC subsidiary Peabody Holding Co. Inc. has agreed to buy the assets of an Exxon mining affiliate for an undisclosed price, the companies said.

St. Louis-based Peabody has signed a tentative agreement with Exxon Coal USA Inc. to buy the assets of Exxon's Carter Mining Co. Affiliate.

The deal includes two low-sulfur coal mines near Gillette, Wyo., in the Powder River Basin. Together, the Rawhide and Caballo mines produced some 25 million short tons of coal last year.

Exxon and Peabody said they will negotiate a definitive agreement soon, and expect the deal to close during the fourth quarter.

"Our goal is to develop a portfolio of ultra-efficient mines producing the highest quality coals," Irl Engelhardt, chairman of Peabody Holding, said in a news release. "With some additional investments in equipment, the Rawhide and Caballo mines will become excellent additions to our portfolio."

Robert Larkins, president of Exxon Coal and Minerals, said the sale doesn't mean Exxon will leave the coal and minerals business.

Noble sets dividend on common shares

ARDMORE, Okla. — The board of directors of Noble Affiliates Inc. declared a quarterly cash dividend of 4 cents per common share, payable August 22 to shareholders of record August 8.

Plains Resources to pay cash dividend

HOUSTON — Plains Resources announced a cash dividend of 325 cents per share on its outstanding $1.30 Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock for the period June 1 through August 31. The dividend will be payable on August 31 to shareholders of record August 15.

Noble Affiliates earnings increase

ARDMORE, Okla. — Noble Affiliates Inc. reported increased earnings and revenues for the second quarter compared with the same period a year ago.

For the 1994 second quarter, Noble had net income of $4,377,000 or 9 cents per share, an increase of 9 percent over net income of $4,002,000 or 8 cents per share, in the comparable quarter of 1993. Revenues for the 1994 second quarter were $92,032,000, up almost 39 percent from $66,327,000 in last year's second quarter. The revenues for the 1994 second quarter included $8,483,000 of sales from the company's new marketing subsidiary.

Robert Kelley, Noble's chairman, president and chief executive officer, said the improved 1994 results stemmed primarily from substantially higher oil and gas production, which was the result of major reserve acquisitions made i the second half of 1993.

Kelley noted that the company's oil and gas exploration expenses rose to $13.6 million in the 1994 second quarter, compared with $8.3 million in the same period of 1993, because of increased activity in the Gulf of Mexico.

Daily gas production averaged 253.9 million cubic feet in the second quarter. Gas prices received by Noble averaged $2.04 per Mcf, up slightly from $2.02 per Mcf for the same period last year.

Oil production in the 1994 second quarter averaged 22,923 barrels per day, 23 percent more than the 18,703 barrels per day averaged in the same quarter of 1993. During the 1994 second quarter, Noble received an average price of $15.67 per barrel, 11 percent below the average price of $17.55 per barrel received in the same period of 1993.

Coastal plans to produce paraxylene

The Coastal Corp. announces that a subsidiary, Coastal Canada Petroleum Inc., has signed agreements under which the company will restart production of paraxylene at the former Kemtec Petrochemical facility in Montreal East, Quebec. Coastal Canada will operate in Quebec Province under the name "Petrochimie Coastal du Canada."

Other aromatics production units at the Montreal East plant could be restarted later, depending on economics, the company said. Some 100 jobs will be created by the reopening.

The Montreal East facility will have the capability of producing up to 400 million pounds per year of paraxylene.

Kemtec Petrochemical suspended operations in August 1991 and later filed for bankruptcy. Kemtec had acquired the site in 1986 and built the paraxylene plant.

Coastal Canada has acquired the processing equipment and entered into a long-term lease for the plant site. As part of its obligation, Coastal Canada greed to make certain payments to an environmental trust fund which will be used for site remediation.

The company said the paraxylene units could be back in operation as early as the fourth quarter this year and estimated that 250 workers will be needed to refurbish those facilities.

Another Coastal subsidiary's 115,000 barrel per day refinery at Eagle Point N.J. will ship high-quality aromatics feedstocks produced at the refinery to Montreal East,. with finished paraxylene made in Montreal East exported to customers worldwide.

Four staff members have been added to the Permian Basin division of Ref-Chem Corp.

Phillips to expand Puerto Rico plant

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Phillips Petroleum Co. announces the approval of funding for project development work to further increase paraxylene capacity at its Puerto Rico Core petrochemical facility, located in Guayama.

Paraxylene is used to make polyester fibers and plastic soft drink botles.

The project would increase paraxylene capacity by late 1995 from 675 million pounds a year to 818 million pounds a year, mainly through replacement of the adsorbent in one of two paraxylene production units. Adsorbent is used to extract paraxylene from the process stream.

Earlier this year, the company approved plans to increase paraxylene capacity from 525 million pounds a year to 675 million pounds a year, mainly through replacement of the adsorbent in one of the paraxylene production units.

This will be completed in the fourth quarter while Puerto Rico Core is shut down for installation of the previously announced Chevron Aromax catalytic reforming technology.

In addition, the company will convert Core's existing hydrodealkylation unit to a toluene disproportionation unit. The conversion will reduce Core's outside purchase requirements for mixed xylenes by 3,000 barrels a day.

Phillips has selected Fluor Daniels Williams Brothers as the engineering contractor.

Museum schedules luncheon

The Petroleum Museum, 1500 I-20 West, will host a Brown Bag Luncheon program Wednesday at 11:30 a.m.

Consulting geologist Jack Elam will speak on "Plate Tectonic Evolution of the Permian Basin."

Thermal deformation plays an important role in making the Permian Basin the fifth largest producing basin in the world. Rifted structures present an ideal set of conditions for maturing, migrating, entrapping and preserving hydrocarbons. Elam presents the updated information on tectonics and its relationship to the exploration for oil and gas in the Permian Basin.

Refiners plan environmental conference

The National Petroleum Refiners Association is sponsoring its second annual environmental conference September 18-20 at the Westin Galleria Hotel in Houston.

Keynote speaker will be Robert W. Upchurch, vice president, refining, Exxon Company. Luncheon speakers will include Congressional representatives or their staff members discussing current and upcoming legislation and the "Unholy Trinity" of risk assessment, unfunded mandates and property rights.

Conference programs include question and answer sessions on air, enforcement, waste and water issues such as reformulated gasoline, Title V operating permits, enhanced monitoring, criminal liability, self-audits, citizen suits, waste minimization, federal and state pollution prevention programs, NPDES limits and permits, zero toxicity, Great Lakes and Gulf of Mexico initiatives.

Technical paper sessions will cover topics such as Refinery MACT, LDAR programs, permitting strategies, emissions inventories, pollution prevention and remediation strategies, waste minimization and treatment, categorical standard revisions, remediation projects, freed and waste water treatments.

PBGC CONTINUING EDUCATION

ACTUALISTIC CARBONATE SEQUENCE STRATIGRAPHY: This seminar will focus on established principles of carbonate sedimentology (facies, diagenesis, stratigraphic cyclicity, play type attributes) that are the prerequisites for successfully applying actualistic sequence stratigraphy to exploration and develoment geology. The seminar ends by reviewing two well-documented case studies which utilized this approach, and the economic benefits which resulted. Such an approach bodes well for mature basins like those in west Texs. Throughout this discussion, numerous petroleum case studies will be discussed. Fee $275; Jeffrey J. Davis, instructor; Aug. 29-30, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

MEETINGS

Congressman Bonilla to speak to PBPA

Bonilla

The Hon. Henry Bonilla, U.S. Representative of the 23rd District, will be the featured speaker at the general membership meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. The meeting will be Wednesday at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

He has been active in oil and gas matters and was one of several House and Senate members who met with President Clinton to discuss domestic energy issues back in June. He will share his thoughts and offer his projections with the PBPA membership regarding this and other efforts to enhance the domestic oil and gas industry.

His district is the largest in Texas, accounting for 22.3 percent of the total square miles in the state, including approximately half of Midland's downtown business area.

A native of San Antonio, most of Bonilla's professional career has been in the television news business, beginning as a reporter in San Antonio.

The luncheon is open to the public. Cost is $15 and reservations are required and can be made by calling 684-6345.

Magazine ranks Midland Resources

Midland Resources has been ranked 14th nationally among publicly traded, small cap oil and gas companies in the 12th annual survey published by Oil and Gas Investor magazine in October.

The analysis encompasses approximately 150 companies and is prepared with the assistance of Kirkpatrick Energy Associates Inc. of Denver. The survey assesses such areas as improved cash flow per share, increased reserves, improved net income, improved shareholder equity and several other factors.

Deas H. Warley, president of Midland Resources, commented, "We are unquestionably elated to make Oil and Gas Investor's prestigious top 20 and we are determined to improve that ranking for next year. Our focus on applied advanced technology is already paying dividends as readily seen in our improved cash flow, profitability and reserves. We will continue to work closely with universities and the DOE national laboratories in our never-ending search for the proverbial better mousetrap."

Midland Resources also announced plans to participate with Texaco in a 3-D seismic survey of the 3300-acre 220 well Johnsonville Unit in Wayne County, Ill. The results of the survey will be integrated with production history and digitized log data into a 3-D reservoir characterization and simulation model. The resulting model will then be used to optimize waterflood management and locate bypassed reserves.

The company, in a continuing effort to improve its unique 3-D reservoir modeling capacity, also announced a preliminary agreement with the University of Houston's Institute for Improved Reservoir Management to begin a joint study on the company's five-square-mile Cope Waterflood Unit. The study will enhance the accuracy of selecting infill drilling locations, optimize injection patterns, and test the feasibility of a CO_2 tertiary recovery program.

The company also completed an acquisition of 27 wells in Howard and Coke counties of West Texas for approximately $1.8 million. The purchase will initially add approximately 1.2 Bcf of proved gas reserves and 250,000 barrels of oil reserves. The long life properties, typical of the Permian Basin, will increase the company's gas and oil reserves by approximately 8 percent.

Midland Resources uses advanced technology to explore, develop and produce natural gas and oil. The company owns interests in the Permian Basin and Gulf Coast of Texas and in North Dakota, Colorado, Illinois and Oklahoma.

Matters of the Heart

Text by Linda Anderson

Buck and Charliene Main are now settling into their lives as newlyweds; however, their history together includes being junior high school friends, growing up and apart, marrying other people and becoming single again, getting re-aquainted and planning to marry. But when Buck had his heart attack, the couple decided to marry at the hospital.

Every couple wants to plan a memorable wedding, but sometimes outside events step in and make a wedding more memorable than most.

Charliene and Buck Main of Midland were married Feb. 11 this year. But instead of being wed in a church, chapel or garden, they tied the knot in the Intensive Care Unit of Big Spring's Veterans' Administration Hospital.

"I had a heart attack one morning, and they put me in Big Spring (VA Hospital)," Main said. "The next day they airlifted me to Albuquerque (to the VA Hospital there)."

The couple, who had already planned to be married, decided to go ahead and have the ceremony while Main was in the hospital.

"We were going to be married in St. Paul's Episcopal Church," Mrs. Main said. "Then we went ahead and got married."

When Main was admitted to the hospital in Big Spring, "we already had the license, and I talked to the chaplain (at the hospital)" he said. "She (Mrs. Main) came over the next morning with her dad ... The chaplain married us in the VA."

Main said he and his wife made the decision to be married while he was in the hospital because "I didn't want to die single."

"I didn't want him to die, period!" said Mrs. Main. "We had to many people praying for him, so I was sure he wasn't (going to die)."

Although they are newlyweds, the Mains' history together began when they were both in junior high school.

"We used to know each other," Main said. "I'm from Roy (New Mexico) and she's from Las Vegas (New Mexico). We met in 4-H."

"His dad was ranching at Roy; my dad ranched at Las Vegas," his wife added. "We both were really strong in 4-H and raised fat animals."

"Mine was better," Main quipped, and Mrs. Main laughed.

Eventually, however, they grew up and apart. Their lives separated and both married others. Then, after many years and half a lifetime's worth of experiences — and after both had become single again — "we got re-acquainted last year," Main said.

Romance bloomed and marriage plans were made, but Main, a Vietnam veteran who served in the 82nd Airborne Division, had a heart attack and was admitted to the VA hospital in Big Spring.

"I thought I was going to die," he said. "When you have the experience of going into one hospital and then have the air ambulance flying you to another hospital ..."

THE AIR AMBULANCE flight wasn't the only unusual aspect of his illness.

"I went through a (near) death experience. It's the second one I've been through in life. It's like you're floating and seeing everything, then light (at the end of) a tunnel, and you can either leave or come back." Main said.

"I wasn't ready to leave just yet."

"I was determined for him to come back, I can tell you!" Mrs. Main said.

"I felt like we had too much life ahead of us for him to die at that point."

And come back he did, even after spending "four or five days on the life support system" in the VA hospital in Albuquerque, Main said.

Mrs. Main also traveled to Albuquerque after her husband was flown there by air ambulance. "He went by himself, and I went up and spent (about) 10 days.

"He was there for three weeks."

A heart attack is an extremely serious illness and requires a long recovery time, but Main is healthy now and enjoying life with his new bride.

And because his illness made their wedding become so unconventional, to say the least, the couple decided to have a more traditional ceremony to celebrate their wedding, now that Main has regained his health.

July 15 they had their wedding vows and wedding bands

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Midland's past is celebrated

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

A part of Midland's heritage was showcased last Sunday when the Midland County Historical Society and Midland County Historical Commission hosted what members termed an "Ice Cream Crank Off."

McKnight-Harrison

The annual event marked the anniversary of Midland County's first county commissioners court meeting on Aug. 10, 1885, and was held at the Brown-Dorsey Historical Medallion Home located at 213 N. Weatherford St.

Nancy Rankin McKinley, president of the Historical Society, as well as chairman of the Historical Commission, greeted arrivals at the front gate to the property. She was dressed appropriately for the commemorative occasion in a red bandana print blouse and floor-length skirt and navy blue western straw hat with a yellow kerchief hatband.

Those attending enjoyed a variety of delicious homemade ice cream and entertainment by Susie Hitchcock's South Forty Dancers.

Guests toured the turn-of-the-century house and learned of its history from local author Mary Frances Beverly.

The original owner of the house was Taylor Brown, who brought his family to Texas from Illinois. The Browns moved into the house, which is believed to be the oldest in Midland, in January of 1900. Their daughter, Sarah, was married to Hugh Dorsey and continued to make her home there until her death in 1968.

In 1969, the Midland County Historical Society purchased the house and began its restoration. Mrs. McKinley and Evelyn Scarborough Linebery were the primary movers behind the project.

The house has many interesting and unusual features, including three fireplaces, which share a common chimney; ornate exterior oak trim, a stained glass window in the form of a Gothic arch, a large mulberry tree in the front yard, which was originally a hitching post, a wine cellar and a grape arbor.

Several of the original pieces of furniture remain, and great attention has been made in selecting replacement pieces to reflect the time and station in life of the family.

Among those seen enjoying the event were Judy and Jim Devenport, Gene and Phil Jones, Betty and Julian Simpson, Al Schorre, Mae and Ken Dawson, Virginia and Henry Goulet, and Frances and Larry Stapp with their guests, Heather and Chris Kirk of Bristol, England. Chris is currently serving as an intern minister at First United Methodist Church.

OUR BEST WISHES to Mickie Morgan and Chuck Dozier, who were united in marriage at five o'clock Saturday afternoon at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. The bride's parents, Judy and Dave Morgan of Moscow, Iowa, hosted the reception at Midland Country Club afterwards.

After a honeymoon to Belize, the couple will be at home in Las Vegas, Nev. Mickie is employed with Genetrix Lab, and Chuck is working toward his master's degree at the University of Nevada's Las Vegas campus.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents, Jackie and Felix Dozier of Midland, Friday evening in La Bodega Restaurant's Patio Room.

A wedding day brunch for the out-of-town guests and wedding party was held at the home of Chris and Fred Newman. Also hosting were Blake and Steve Newman.

The bride also was honored with a shower in Las Vegas.

A POEM by Midlander Beverly Holmes has been selected to appear in the book of poetry, entitled "Memories."

The book will be distributed to major public and university libraries across the United States for inclusion in their poetry sections.

THE MIDLAND A&M Mothers Club (a.k.a. Aggie Moms) hosted its annual ice cream social recently for incoming freshmen and transfer students at the home of Sharon and Wilson Heidelberg. Current students assisted in welcoming the guests.

Homemade ice cream, cookies and lemonade were served to over 80 persons.

Among those spotted at the gathering were Jean Garay, Sheryl Kaufman, Robert Younger, Jennifer Silverman, Christine Gentry, Jennifer Sowders, Lyle Mashburn and Scott Satterwhite.

According to president Allene (Mrs. James) Mashburn, the club will have its first meeting of the fall season of Sept. 12 at the First Baptist Church Activities Building. All Aggie Moms are invited to attend.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Horticulture questions answered

By Deborah A. Benge

Many pears, apples and grapes are ripe and ready for picking at this time of year. With this harvest time comes some questions and sometimes a few problems. These are just a few of the questions that make their way to the county extension office:

Benge

Question: I have a pear tree that I lose the majority of fruit on every year. When the pears get soft enough to pick, it seems they're already rotting, or if they aren't rotting they turn to mush soon after picking. Is this caused by a bug, disease or what's the problem?

Answer: Unlike most other fruit, pears need to be picked before they are fully ripe. Waiting until pears are soft enough to eat will result in rotted fruit or fruit with a short shelf life, just as you described. Pick fruit they they've reached a mature size and when you see subtle changes: background color that changes from green to yellow, slight softening of firmness and easy separation of fruit stem from tree branch with an upward twist.

Once fruit is harvested it should be allowed to complete ripening in a cool location. Once fruit has finished ripening, fruit can be stored at cooler temperatures to preserve quality and freshness.

Q.: There are some huge green beetles in my peach tree and they are destroying my crop. What are these and what can be done about them?

A.: The pest is a green metallic June beetle. They are easy to recognize — they look like green and brown flying Volkswagon bugs and they have very shiny, jewel green bellies. They love and are attracted to ripe and fermenting fruit and vegetables or anything else sweet.

Control is difficult at best. Since they love overripe, fermenting fruits and vegetables used as a bait might help reduce numbers. Ripe watermelon rinds, other melon rinds or overripe peaches can be sprinkled with carbaryl (Sevin) dust. Keep these baits out of the reach of children or pets and place in or near the fruit tree or vine that needs some protection.

Q.: The leaves on my grape vines have turned crispy brown and I cannot see any reason for it. Do you know what causes this and what can I do?

A.: There are a couple of pests that could be causing this. The grape leaf hopper is a very small, light colored insect with two small brownish spots on its back. Leaf hoppers feed on the lower side of the leaves so they are not readily apparent, but if vines are disturbed, a cloud of small, white fly-like insects fly up.

Another insect, the Western grape skeletonizer, is much easier to see. These small black and yellow striped caterpillars feed on the lower side of the leaf, many times several side by side. They eat the good green part of the leaf, leaving behind the "skin" of the leaf.

Both pests are easy to control with organic or very safe insecticides such as Bt for the caterpillar or carbaryl (Sevin) for both pests.

Make sure the brown leaves are not the result of the June heat blast. A heavy fruit load and less than adequate water has caused many a vine to brown out.

Q.: I have a peach tree loaded with fruit and now the limbs are breaking. Yesterday I discovered a large limb split. Is there anything I can do about the limb?

A.: If the split is discovered within a few hours and hasn't dried out, it can sometimes be pulled up, clamped or bolted back. If the tissue hasn't dried out it is possible for the tissues to reunite. Removal of fruit from that limb will help this process.

Of course the real way to handle this problem is early season fruit thinning. A medium-size peach or nectarine tree can set 1,500 to 3,000 fruit, but only 200 to 300 fruits should be left. Unthinned results in small, poor quality fruit, limb breakage, weakening and even death of a tree. Early maturing varieties specially need to be pruned heavily and thinned.

Q.: Birds are beating me to my fruit. They peck holes in the fruit, ruining it. What can I do?

A.: This is a hard one. A physical barrier is best, meaning bird netting. Netting will do the job, but it can be difficult to handle and extra hands make this chore go much smoother.

Scare tactics are somewhat helpful, but they must begin as soon as the birds show up and they need to be changed and moved frequently. Some of the scare items include plastic hawks, owls and snakes; scare eyes; noisemakers and scarecrows.

Some naturalists say birds are after the moisture more than the fruit. If this is the case, by providing water you might reduce fruit damage. Try this theory out by keeping your birdbaths full and other water sources filled.

Q.: Wasps and cicada killer wasps are ruining my grapes. What can I do?

A.: Entomologists say wasps do not sting, pierce or tear the skin of ripe fruit, they only visit fruit that has already had the skin damaged. If this is true, there may be some other pest or factor that has damaged the skin and wasps are then attracted to the sweet juices.

What to do? Good question. There are traps designed to reduce this problem. You might also try placing pans of soapy (or put some oil) water under trees or vines. Wasps are attracted to the water and are likely to get pulled in.

For answers to other horticulture questions, contact the local county extension office. The Texas Agricultural Extension Services has a series of publications on Home Fruit Production.

Themes can make parties huge successes

Associated Press

"Who, what, when, where, and why" may be the basic questions in journalism, but they're equally important for planning a party, says Traditional Home magazine.

"Why" is a great place to begin. Once you've decided this, the rest falls gracefully into place. Parties honoring those you love are the easiest because you need look no further than what makes them happy — favorite foods, colors, music, flowers, and, of course, people — to make your festivity come together beautifully.

A theme can jump-start the process. And since it's the season to be outdoors, a theme might suggest itself right in your own backyard.

Show off a ravishing garden with a Secret Garden tea, or a painter's picnic in Provence. Give your pool and patio a workout with a West Indies beachside barbecue or an all-ages Treasure Island party, complete with sand, pirate gear, and hidden treasure. Hold a Jungle Book theme celebrating the 100th anniversary of this classic with everyone coming as animals.

Croquet, badminton, volleyball, horseshoes, softball, and other competitions make for fun parties, as do the various summer holidays, but don't stop there.

San Francisco party planner Robin Collins suggests thumbing through old-fashioned calendars as well as international calendars for unusual holiday themes. She also believes in taking creative license. "The object, especially during summer, is to have fun." Collins says. "Why not have a romantic Valentine's Day engagement party in July? It's something that will give everyone a good laugh."

Organization is the key to any successful party. Staying organized is easier when you begin with a party planning journal.

Robin Collins sets up a three-ring binder with six labeled sections: elements to consider; sources; menu; cooking; daily "to do" sheets; and a party day schedule. The first pages list number of guests, time of party, budgets, plus critical phone numbers, contact names, and addresses.

Collins faithfully works her "to do" lists. "Anything not finished on a particular day is carried over to the next day," she explains. "It's so satisfying to cross things off and it really keeps me organized."

Make your guest list early. You'll need it to determine your budget; it'll be essential information for negotiating catering, liquor, furniture rentals, and other services.

To avoid overlooking friends and family, comb your address book carefully after making your list, then have someone close to you review the list again.

Outdoor entertaining is typically relaxed. But if you're contemplating a formal party consider: What is the reason for the party? What style best fits the theme? What is your budget? How much time do you have to plan?

Avoid taking on too much. Take a good hard look at what you'll need to do and when you'll need it done and delegate accordingly. Ask family members to help cook, pay local kids to set up and clean up, or use a party planner to contract with caterers, waiters, musicians, and bartender.

Maybe you can do it all, but at what cost? Chuck Williams, founder of the Williams Sonoma stores and co-author of a new outdoor entertaining book, sums it up: "If the host is tired, harried, or stressed out, guests feel it and it's going to affect everyone's ability to have a good time."

A solid party resource list is essential. Ask those whose taste and opinions you highly regard for their recommendations. Be sure to shop around, though. You'll find that prices, attitudes, products, and time frames vary dramatically.

HEART: Vows are blessed

blessed in their church, and had a reception for about 40 relatives and friends.

"We were going to wait for our anniversary, but Buck's brother was here from Australia, so we hurried it up instead of waiting until February," Mrs. Main said.

"We had a lot of people there — his brother and nephew, some relatives and close friends, my daughter and her family."

"We had a nice reception and cake," her husband added.

Now that Main's heart attack is behind them, and their marriage has been celebrated twice, the couple are settling into their new life together.

When asked about his plans, Main laughed, "I'm going to win the Lotto and retire!"

What he really wants to do, he said, is just enjoy life with his wife. "We really enjoy each other's company and are real compatible" and comfortable together.

"We're just going to build a house out here, travel around and enjoy life," said Mrs. Main.

"And not get upset about anything," her husband added.

DEAR ABBY

Grandma's remarriage upsets grandchildren

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from the early 1970s.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you about a family problem. My grandmother just got married again. Grandpa died 12 years ago, and Grandma has lived with us ever since. (Grandma owns the house, but my dad did all the remodeling, keeps it up, so it's really more like ours.) Anyway, all those years, Grandma said she didn't need a man; but all of a sudden, she found this guy and everything changed. She's happy and just like a kid again.

Van Buren

Her new husband moved into our house and is sharing Grandma's room. He claims he has heart trouble, so all he does is eat, sleep and watch TV. Meanwhile, Grandma waits on him like he's a king. He loves her desserts, so now Grandma spends her time cooking and baking, which is the only good part because the rest of the family is getting lots of good eats now. She used to mend and iron our clothes and even clean our rooms, but not anymore!

Both my mom and dad work, so we kids are left with the housework to do after school. I am sorry Grandma ever found this lazy old fool. Why don't old people who are nearly 60 settle down to being alone instead of wanting to be young again? — DOWNHEARTED AND OVERWORKED

DEAR D. AND O.: You are overlooking one small detail. It's GRANDMA'S house! And as I see it, Grandma has been the live-in cook, housekeeper and baby sitter for the last 12 years. Sixty is not old, honey. And the older you get, the better you will understand it. Cheer up, and thank God for Grandma's newfound joy. It should happen to everybody.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single, mature young woman who met a middle-aged bachelor. Within a month, he proposed marriage. I thought we should know each other better, so I suggested we wait a while before making any commitments.

He kept telling me he couldn't live without me and had to have my answer, so I told him I wanted to go away for a week to think things over. (I went to my sister's 300 miles away for a vacation.) I told him there should be no letters or phone calls because I wanted to really think clearly about it.

Well, you've heard the old saying, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder." It must have worked, because I really missed him and, when I got home, I told him I had decided to marry him.

Then he told me he wanted a week to think it over. He didn't leave town but suggested we not see each other or talk on the phone. After the week was up, he asked for another week. I was hurt but gave him another week. Now he tells me he is still not sure and wants a little more time to make up his mind!

Do you think he is pulling my leg or trying to get even with me? I want to marry him, but how do I get him to ask me now? — PUT OFF

DEAR PUT OFF: I'm afraid you blew it when you left him for a week. You know that old saying, "Out of sight, out of mind"? Well, that's what happened. Your friend doesn't sound like he's ready for marriage yet. At least, not to you.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in total disagreement about my father-in-law's upcoming marriage. My wife is mad at her father for personal reasons that I will not go into, and she refuses to attend the wedding. She says that I should stay home, too. I have no ill feelings against my father-in-law; as a matter of fact, I am very fond of him.

I want to attend the wedding. My wife says no. Can you settle this right away? — PUZZLED HUSBAND

DEAR PUZZLED HUSBAND: Your wife can stay home if she wants to, but she has no right to insist that you stay home, too.

Be honest. If you want to go because you are fond of your father-in-law — go. But don't go just to bug your wife.

Protect eyes from injuries

ATLANTA (AP) — Children actively involved in athletics should wear safety eye wear, especially those children who play ball sports, according to an assistant professor of opthalmology at Emory University School of Medicine.

An estimated 30 percent of ocular (eye) injuries in children under 16 years of age are sports-related and usually occur when children are not wearing protective eye wear, says Dr. Arlene Drack.

Drack says lightweight, shatterproof, polycarbonate safety glasses, goggles or shields should be worn by any child participating in high-risk sports, including baseball, basketball and football.

Baseball is the most frequent cause of sports-related eye injuries in children under the age of 15, she said. Blowout fractures may occur when the bones forming the orbit the eye sits in are fractured upon impact by a baseball or softball. A cracked skeletal orbit can also affect the eye muscle and cause eye misalignment.

Basketball and football are the leading causes of sports-related injuries in the 15- to 24-year-old age group, she said. Elbow injuries to the eye are not uncommon in basketball, nor are deep abrasions (from fingernails) to the cornea, the eye's clear, outer layer. Corneal cuts may also occur during mountain biking or cross-country running, when tree branches slash the eyeball.

Racquetball, paddle ball, tennis and other racquet sports put the eyes at risk for retinal detachment, a serious threat to eyesight in which the retina, the camera filmlike structure on the back wall of the eye, is damaged.

Drack conducted a study of safety eyewear compliance among children who were blind in one eye and sighted in the other. (Respondents had been struck in the face by a swing, a firecracker, a ball during dodgeball and a rock, among other items.) Polycarbonate safety glasses saved two of the children from blindness.

In the study, the majority of boys and almost half of the girls participated in sports, Drack said. "Compliance with safety eye protection wear was good and no injuries have been reported during sports."

Nearly half of the children surveyed reported having "at least one potentially serious accident in which the safety glasses had protected the good eye." The study was published in the July-August 1993 issue of the "Journal of Pediatric Opthamology and Strabismus."

Since January of this year, that's how many calls have flooded into the Reporter-Telegram's interactive telecommunications service.
CITYLINE.
We're dependable. We're up to the minute. We're fast. And we're fun. But best of all -- we're free. Which is why so many of you have relied upon CITYLINE for news, sports, weather and stock updates 24 hours a day.
Want more numbers? How about these ...
✔ During a three-week period in June, more than 5,700 calls were taken by CITYLINE as people kept abreast of the unfolding O.J. Simpson story. In one day, 1,735 callers jammed the phone lines as Simpson and a friend led law officers down a California freeway in a low-speed chase.
✔ More than 2,400 people called for the latest on the Lorena Bobbitt trial during a 10-day period last spring.
✔ Week in and week out, more than 9,000 people call for stock quote updates. More than 9,000 every week. That's a lot of ringing phones. But more importantly, that's a lot of reliability, accuracy and timeliness.
So thanks West Texas for keeping in touch with your 24-hour information source -- CITYLINE and the Midland Reporter-Telegram. And keep watching for more features to debut soon.

Some couples share love, labor

By Dai Huynh
Associated Press

Does a marriage exist where he does the laundry, she does the dishes and both do the cooking and caring for the children? Is it even possible?

Yes and yes, answers Pepper Schwartz, University of Washington sociologist.

Such marriages are not common but they do exist, she says.

"When I talk about peer marriage, and I talk about what they are, people kind of glaze over and they say, 'Well, which three did you find? Or did you find three in the world?'" says Schwartz.

"That was intriguing to me, in the sense of how deeply the stereotype of what marriage can be, or the limits of what marriage can be, has penetrated both the commercial world, what we see in the magazines, and people's psyche," says the 49-year-old researcher.

She actually found 57 marriages where husbands and wives share equal responsibility and followed them for three years in researching her new book, "Peer Marriages" (The Free Press, $19.95). The idea for the book sprang from research for the 1983 best seller "American Couples: Money, Work, and Sex," a study of 12,000 couples that she co-authored with Philip Blumstein.

Among their subjects were peer couples, who collaborated in love and labor to produce intimacy and mutual respect, she says.

Even though they are a minority, Schwartz wanted to probe deeper to see what makes these marriages tick. And, more importantly, she wanted to show people that peer marriages do exist.

For three years, Schwartz studied 100 couples, 57 of whom were in nontraditional, egalitarian relationships — which she labeled peer marriages.

These couples often share four major characteristics — an intense relationship, a deep knowledge of each other's personality, a tendency to negotiate and converse more than other couples, and no visible yearning for affection or attention.

Schwartz stresses she's not talking about a 50/50 marriage.

"What it's about is generosity, and really wanting to help the other person out. Being a friend, a partner," Schwartz says.

To be categorized as having a peer relationship, the couple must also meet four criteria: Both partners wield equal power in decision-making. Both have control and access to discretionary funds even though one might earn less than the other. They split housekeeping chores. They share child-raising duties.

One of Schwartz's subjects, an attorney who asked that his name not be used, says a peer marriage also consists of shared interests, respect and frequent conversations.

"There's nothing I wouldn't tell her," he says. "For advice, I would go to my wife before anybody else."

Like many peer husbands, he shares child-care and household responsibilities with his wife.

Another peer husband, Richard Dickinson, says traditional marriages — in which each partner has gender-defined roles — are things of the past.

"My wife and I both do the laundry, but she does the cooking because I hate to cook. However, I do clean up afterwards," says the Seattle resident.

As for money, they both have jobs that pay about the same. "We maintain some individual control over our money, so it hasn't been a problem," Dickinson says.

Schwartz says the people she interviewed fell into three types of marriages: traditional relationships, near-peer relationships and peer relationships.

Most American marriages fall into the traditional and near-peer categories, she says.

Traditional couples have divided male and female roles. Husband brings home the bacon, wife cooks, cleans and is responsible for child-rearing.

Near-peer couples believe in an equal relationship between a man and woman, but can't manage to have one. Both work, but the woman tends to handle more child care, and the man has the "ultimate veto power" in decision-making.

Although both types of marriages can succeed, Schwartz believes they tend to breed seeds of discontent.

"The traditionals, they are pretty secure with the bargain they made. They might be angry women, but the bargain they made was the bargain they looked for.

"But the near-peers have this vision of the way they should be as a love affair, and it's frustrating to them to not be in that slot."

But peer marriages also have their problems.

Schwartz found peers tend to make less money because they place their marriage over their careers. Friends and family often look at peer husbands as being emasculated.

However, the deep intimacy and respect between these couples tend to override the drawbacks, Schwartz says.

KLAPPRODT-MOORE

Amie Janine Klapprodt of Dallas and Timothy Gerard Moore of Longview are planning a 3 p.m. Sept. 17 wedding at St. Rita Catholic Church in Dallas. Parents of the bride-elect are Barbara S. Klapprodt of Dallas and Warner A. Klapprodt of San Carlos Island, Fla. The future bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Eugene Moore Jr. of Midland.

Miss Klapprodt is a graduate of Southern Methodist University in Dallas. She is employed with Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group. Her fiance graduated from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and Texas Tech University School of Law. He is employed with Merriman, Patterson and Allison.

Preserve photos for posterity

Hearst News Service

Time, temperature and other environmental elements can have a negative effect on your photographs.

Photos are just pieces of paper with a thin chemical coating, Christiane N. Brown wrote in an article in the current issue of Good Housekeeping, and they can be easily damaged by the environment, improper storage and rough handling.

Here are the steps you can take, and the things to avoid, in order to preserve them for posterity:

■ Avoid direct sunlight, extreme heat and humidity, whether your photos are kept in an album, in frames or loose. Any of these elements can change a photo's chemistry, causing fading, discoloration and warping.

■ Store photos in rooms where you feel most comfortable, suggests Grant Romer, director of education at the International Museum of Photography at the George Eastman House in Rochester, N.Y. That would rule out hot attics or humid basements, where photos are likely to grow mold or become brittle and flake.

■ Never store photos or albums above a radiator, Romer adds.

■ Light can turn a normal photo into a faded and discolored image in just 10 years. Keep photos away from areas that receive direct sunlight and away from lamps and overhead lights.

■ Handle photos as little as possible. If there are special photos that you want to display or pass among relatives, have extra copies made and carefully preserve the originals. Fingerprints, which contain oils and amino acids, also damage photos.

■ Store all valued photos in acid-free file folders, envelopes and boxes.

■ The album is an important aspect of photo survival. Today's most popular photo albums — those with sticky backings and sheets of plastic that cover the snapshots — are actually the most damaging. Over time, the sticky backing becomes more tenacious, making it difficult to remove photos without destroying them. The clear plastic sheets that cover the pictures can pull the emulsion off photos.

■ Pasting photos into scrapbooks also will damage prints.

■ Acid-free archival albums and mounting corners, which don't require the use of glue on the photos, are a better choice. This method allows for easy removal of photos whenever you want. Archival albums, however, can cost twice as much as regular albums. To keep expenses down, sort through your photo collection and select only the most important ones for your album.

■ Albums, like loose photos, should be stored in a relatively cool, dark, dry, dust-free environment.

■ When framing photos, use acid-free matte board and airtight frames. It is important to keep the image away from the glass — if humidity gets in between the photo and the glass, the emulsion from the photo will come off on the glass when the photo is removed from the frame.

■ Insert acid-free paper behind the photo If the photo touches cardboard or wood, it can absorb damaging resins and acids from its backing and matte.

Miles and aisles to go before I sleep

EDITORS NOTE: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. This column appeared originally in July 1991.

By Erma Bombeck

Do I "have it all" yet? I hope so. I'm half-dead.

We're only two years into what I call our Paula Zahn decade, where women are balancing home/husband/children/physical fitness/social conscience — not to mention a cello between our knees — and if I become any more fulfilled, I'm going to have to sleep on fast-forward.

Bombeck

It sounded so great when I heard there wasn't anything I, as a woman, couldn't do. "All" sounded so all-encompassing. It's turned out to be the "all" of one-size-fits-all. All of what?

I'm from a generation that remembers what it was like to be bored, shallow, depressed and unfulfilled. After we put our kids on the yellow school bus, we went back to our kitchens, drank coffee and knitted until lunch. Then we'd take a plate of cholesterol and park ourselves in front of the TV and watch "As the World Turns" until 2:30. We'd watch Ralph Nader on "Donahue," so we'd have something meaningful to talk about at dinner. We had an hour to whip through the house, put two cookies on a plate and meet the school bus.

I don't know how I got to be Robo-wife, but it probably started with the peanut-butter commercials that told me I was responsible for the well-being of my children, and the laundry detergent manufacturers who dumped on me, saying my husband would never make it in the corporate world unless his shirts were sparkling white. It was up to me.

And if that didn't put me on guilt overload, I began hearing about what a source of untapped energy and talent I was and that I should volunteer it for the community. I did that. Then someone suggested that I should be paid for all this expertise and get a job. I did that. The slick magazines came along and said, "Why work for someone else? You should be running the company." Running for Congress. Running for your health. Running for the bus. Running ... running ... running.

I've been doing it ever since. I iron while I watch TV, shop for groceries at midnight and, if I have something to worry about, I have to do it during my good-time period. There's no quiet time for me anymore, which is the price I pay for "having it all."

I wondered the other day if I could go home again. Was it possible, for just one day, to recapture the suburban slowdown of two decades ago? While I was having coffee, three calls arrived from the East. I picked up a rug I'm needlepointing and was interrupted by flashes of guilt for things I'd have to do tomorrow if I didn't do them today. Donahue had on tranvestites who had been their own prom dates.

It wasn't the same.

Four-day workweek is popular idea

By Lesli Hicks
Hearst News Service

The idea of a four-day workweek isn't new. In the 1930s, when unemployment hovered in the 20-percent range, unions suggested the concept as a way to spread around work. Making less money was preferable to having associates who earned none, union leaders reasoned.

SAN ANTONIO — Like most Americans, Carol Tkacz works 40 hours a week and expects to continue that until she reaches retirement age. And, although she's hardly a woman of leisure, she considers herself "spoiled."

The reason: Her workweek is four days, rather than the traditional five.

Tkacz says that has made her happier and more efficient on the job, allows her to save money on gasoline, and gives her more time with her 10-year-old daughter after a 20-mile commute.

"I'm spoiled," said Tkacz, 39, an executive secretary at USAA, a diversified financial services company that serves both active duty and retired military officers and their families.

About 7,400 of USAA's 10,700 San Antonio employees now work four 10-hour days a week — a schedule that is finding adherents nationally.

USAA isn't the only Alamo City company with a four-day workweek, which it initiated in 1972.

Columbia Industries Inc., a bowling-ball manufacturer, has had a four-day workweek for about 20 years.

And Datapoint Corp., a computer manufacturer, shortened its workweek on Aug. 1.

EACH COMPANY cited the abridged week's advantages, such as improved employee morale and reduced job turnover, less overtime pay, less sick leave, and savings on electricity and other costs associated with daily operations.

Some employees with children save the expense of a day of child care.

"It has been very successful for us and we think it could work for other San Antonio employers," said Paul Schattenberg, a USAA spokesman. "Seventy-seven percent of our work force is on this schedule."

Implementing the change is relatively simple for personnel departments, if the staff is fully briefed on the change, he said.

Not all four-day work weeks are identical. At USAA, for example, those who work Monday through Thursday get Monday holidays off, but must work the following Friday for a four-day total.

Workers on Columbia Industries' manufacturing line start at about 7 a.m. and leave by about 5:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

Datapoint's workweek has been reduced from a five-day, 40-hour week to 36 hours — from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Although workers are paid for fewer hours, they still accrue vacation and sick leave.

Mike Allbritton, president of privately held Columbia Industries, said the schedule not only boosts morale, but also production. "They (line workers) don't have to start and stop as often as they would with a five-day week."

IT'S HARD to find people who dislike the four-day workweek.

Audrie Freedman, an economist and management consultant in New York, said a four-day workweek is one way for employers to attract "qualified candidates who care about quality of life."

The idea of a four-day workweek isn't new. In the 1930s, when unemployment hovered in the 20-percent range, unions suggested the concept as a way to spread around work. Making less money was preferable to having associates who earned none, union leaders reasoned.

Back then, however, a six-day workweek was the norm. Even the New York Stock Exchange didn't shut down until after lunch on Saturday, said Robert Sobel, a business historian at Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y.

Efforts to change the U.S. workweek began again two decades ago, he said. "Many parts of the country that have experienced transportation problems — the train system in New York is overloaded for a couple of hours every afternoon — began going to the staggered workweek," Sobel said.

THE FOUR-DAY workweek won't won't be the last change in the traditional work schedule, he said.

Like "virtual reality" the technology that helps people experience sensations such as weightlessness or racing a car, "virtual corporations" could be the wave of the future, Sobel said.

"The virtual corporation is not really a corporation at all. It's a group of people who get together for a job, but leave when it's finished," he said.

It would be analogous to what motion-picture producers do: They hire directors, set designers, casting agents and actors to make a movie. Once the film is edited and on the market, the association is disbanded.

In short, future work arrangements will consist of pay for the job, rather than pay by the hour.

EVEREST QUARTET

JEANNE ROSE

BRANT TAYLOR

The musical intimacy a string quartet offers appeals to Everest Quartet cellist Brant Austin Taylor.

"A string quartet has been often described as four people having dinner conversation," Taylor said during a recent interview.

Looking at the other quartet members he said, "These three people sitting here are very interesting people to have dinner conversation with."

"Also, being in a quartet you're also sort of controlling your own destiny," said the quartet's second violinist, Jeanne Preucil Rose, who received her bachelor of music degree from The Cleveland Institute of Music in 1991 and her master of music in performance and literature this year from The Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y.

"It's up to you how hard you want to work to achieve what you want to achieve.

"In an orchestra, it's a lot of other things, especially today with a lot of orchestras running out of money. In a quartet, you take responsibility for everything you do so there's no one to blame if it doesn't go real well," Mrs. Rose said. "Yet, if you work hard, it's because of yourself."

"My interest was always in orchestra," said violist Joan DerHovsepian, who is completing a master of music in viola performance at The Eastman School of Music, where she received her bachelor of music degree in viola performance in 1991.

"I always thought I would be a violist in one of the big orchestras in the U.S. I'd played chamber music before, but when we read, it just really clicked with the four of us. It was something really special."

"For me, it's kind of incredible how 50-50 split I was, or still am, about how much I enjoy playing in an orchestra and playing in a string quartet," said the quartet's first violinist, Stephen Rose, who received

Symphony & Chorale plans to offer each MasterWorks concert once

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale's 33rd season has been streamlined in keeping with financial considerations in the 1990s.

In the 1994-95 season each MasterWorks Series concert will be offered once, not twice as has been the practice in the past.

"It will save the symphony approximately $35,000 to $40,000 for the season not to repeat the concerts," said Frank Bell, general manager. "That decision was one that was discussed at length. The decision was made based on financial considerations, as well as attendance considerations."

MOSC used to hold its classical music concerts on Tuesdays in Midland and on Thursdays in Odessa, with the exception of one season when it tried weekend nights. Now that the concert is being offered once, all MasterWorks performances will be Saturday nights.

"A major factor was to give an opportunity for children to attend on Saturday night as opposed to a school night," Bell said.

"We've had very little objection to Saturday night concerts. I've had a few people make the comment they will have to take each concert individually and determine if they will be in town on that Saturday night because they do go out of town a great deal on weekends. As a result, there may be times they will be out of town."

In the past, subscribers have opposed the idea of only offering concerts in Midland or Odessa because of transportation considerations. This season, the symphony is offering a solution to that dilemma.

Bell has arranged charter bus service from the location the concert was held in the past. For example, if a concert is scheduled for Odessa, a bus would leave Lee High School at 7 p.m. For concerts held in Midland, the bus would leave Bonham Junior High at 7 p.m. Reservations are required; round-trip tickets are $6 a person.

The single concert also affects the Pops Series. Bus service is not planned for those Pops concerts being offered once.

"I think people tend to make a party more out of the Pops concerts, and they tend to get together and go together to those concerts," Bell said. "I think there would be less acceptance of bus service to a Pops concert."

Only the Outdoor Pops on Saturday and Aug. 28, which are free and serve as the season's opening performances, and the Christmas Pops Dec. 1 and 4 are being offered in both communities.

"It's been our tradition over the years to do the opening free outdoor Pops in both cities," Bell said. "We want to be able to open the season in both cities, not just one city.

"The Christmas Holiday Pops has become so popular that there's not a facility that we can use in either city with a cabaret setting that we could accommodate all the people that want to attend that concert."

This year, the Midland Outdoor Pops is set for Saturday at Midland College's Beall Plaza. The Odessa Pops will be Aug. 28 in the patio area of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Both concerts are at 8 p.m.

Dress is casual and those attending may bring a picnic dinner, blankets or lawn chairs. For those who do not bring their own food, food will be sold.

The concerts are co-sponsored

MUSIC: Quartet's members enjo y well-rounded experience

his bachelor of music in performance from The Cleveland Institute of Music in 1992 and his master of music in performance and literature this year from The Eastman School of Music.

"There's nothing like walking out on a stage and playing a string quartet," Rose said.

"And there's nothing quite like going out on stage and playing . . . with 100 people," Ms. DerHovsepian said.

"They are both different experiences in many ways, but in many ways they are the same," Rose said.

"Playing one helps you do the other better," Taylor said.

Nods of agreement passed among the quartet members, who radiated youthful enthusiasm when they talked about performing as members of the quartet and as orchestra players.

The Everest Quartet was introduced to Midland-Odessa audiences this spring when the members performed the final concert in the Thouvenel String Quartet's 1993-94 season.

The musicians have been performing as a quartet since 1992. The Everest will replace the Thouvenel String Quartet as the resident string quartet of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Inc.

Three members of the Everest Quartet grew up in families where music was a way of life.

"Everyone was a musician," said Mrs. Rose, who also will serve as concertmaster of the MOSC.

"There were four children in the family and my two parents. All musicians. I'm the youngest. So by the time I was in high school, all my siblings had gone into professional careers in music.

"My oldest brother — who actually is first violinist of the Cleveland Quartet — started out his career as concertmaster of various orchestras, which eventually led to concertmaster of the Atlanta Symphony.

"He was at that time, the youngest concertmaster in the U.S.," Mrs. Rose said. "And he is 12 years older than me, so I grew up idolizing him and everything he did. I wanted to be a concertmaster like he was."

"My mom was my elementary orchestra director," recalled Ms. DerHovsepian. "And my sisters both played instruments. Once I began the viola, I knew it was the only thing I wanted to do for my career. I chose the viola because it was the closest instrument to the human voice, or to my human voice, and it's a way that I found to express myself and communicate."

"Both of my parents are musicians," Rose said. "Both of my dad's parents were musicians and both of my younger sisters play. I guess I don't remember not playing the violin. I didn't admit to myself until late high school that that was what I was going to do, but I think I always knew that.

"I'm kind of like Jeanne. My home life was filled with music, and that's just what I knew."

"Besides basketball," interjected Mrs. Rose. "He played basketball in high school and he had to decide between basketball and violin."

Turning to Rose, she said, "So, you'd better explain that. I'm not answering the questions for you."

They all laughed, including Mrs. Rose, because she had already completed several of his sentences during the interview.

"Just direct all my questions to her," said Rose, pointing to his wife.

He laughed, then his voice taking on a more serious note, he said, "I had to decide. If I was going to really devote myself to music, I had to sacrifice a few things. One was leaving high school early because of where I lived. I didn't have regular lessons with my teacher, and that was becoming a problem.

"If I was really going to put everything I had into it, I had to leave high school, which meant giving up playing serious basketball. And that was a hard thing to do, but I know it was the right thing to do. And I'm glad I did it. That's important, too," Rose said, then quipped, "I'm too short."

"He's 6-4 though," Mrs. Rose said.

Shrugging his shoulders, Rose said, "To have a career — too short and a little too slow."

A brief discussion of basketball followed, and all agreed it was a rough sport.

Then the attention turned to Taylor, whose story is different than the others.

"I came from a completely non-musical family," said Taylor, who graduated from San Antonio's Churchill High School in 1989. He received his bachelor of music degree and performer's certificate from The Eastman School of Music in 1993 and is pursuing his master of music degree at Indiana University.

"I started in the public school system. And I always thought of music as something that I enjoyed very much, and the idea came into my head that you could make a living doing something that you enjoyed. The fact that you couldn't make as much money wasn't really an issue. Music is one of the professions that I can think of where you get paid to do something that you enjoy so much."

Although she had not spent her young life dreaming of playing in a string quartet, the idea to form a quartet began with Ms. DerHovsepian. She approached Mrs. Rose at The Eastman School of Music.

"I signed up for a chamber music class," Mrs. Rose said, recalling when she first met Ms. DerHovsepian.

"At the placement exam, Joan walked up to me and said, 'Do you want to be in a quartet?' And I didn't know anyone so I said, 'Oh, sure. We need a cellist.' Joan was shocked because I was eagerly agreeing to play with someone I had never heard play."

"I could have been a terrible player," Ms. DerHovsepian said.

"She sounded nice enough to me and so I said 'sure,' answering for my husband again without his say so."

"I was there for the ride," Rose interjected.

"We were looking for a cellist and called a cellist in Cleveland, and he recommended Brant," Mrs. Rose said.

"And I knew Brant," Rose said.

"Joan actually knew Brant from before, too," Mrs. Rose said.

"We decided to read together just for fun and see how it worked out, and we enjoyed it," Mrs. Rose said.

"This quartet was like the best quartet I had ever played with and the people were the best — like personal relationships and getting along so well. And I started thinking, 'I could probably do it with these people,'" she said.

For Mrs. Rose, the Midland-Odessa position is ideal.

"What's ideal about this job for me is I can do both — play with these people and be concertmaster."

CORRECTION

The Museum of the Southwest and Midland Reporter-Telegram apologize to The Pulsations, their fans, and the Summer Concerts audience for a misunderstanding about a concert on August 14. The Museum had hoped to reschedule The Pulsations for August 14 after their original concert date was cancelled due to the death of Max Christensen, father of two of the band members. Unfortunately, the advertisement was not pulled when there was a scheduling conflict. We regret any inconvenience.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, AUGUST 21, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New career opportunities are on the horizon. Financial considerations will determine a major choice you make in late fall. A business delay could prove to be a blessing in disguise. Remain patient. Influential people will make good on their promises. A romantic winter vacation could lead to a public announcement. A change of residence is likely by late spring of 1995.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: legendary bandman Count Basie, basketball superstar Wilt Chamberlain, actor Melvin Van Peebles, quarterback Jim McMahon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The proximity of loved ones can make all the difference in the world. You no longer feel alone! Get outdoors. Communing with the elements boosts your spirits. Let Mother Nature reveal her wonderful secrets.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your words have a spellbinding effect when you give free rein to your imagination. Self-expression is an art. Balance hard work with recreational fun to avoid exhaustion or burnout.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Overcome worry or reluctance and go straight to your goal. Your chances of obtaining what you want are excellent! You have enormous healing power in your hands. Offer an ailing loved one a massage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will soon feel ready to take direct action. Meanwhile, make sure a plan is flawless. Postpone intellectual pursuits that keep you isolated from your loved ones. Family fun deserves top priority.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A restless mood could find you exploring a new neighborhood or phoning friends at a distance. Make plans for next weekend. Home may be the best place for you tonight. Read a good book.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Robust health is the best contributor to excellent workmanship. If you have any doubts about a course of treatment, discuss it with qualified experts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep cash and valuables out of sight. A so-called "coincidence" may be nothing of the sort. An important matter comes up this afternoon. Call a family conference if the welfare of a parent is involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A social event gives you a golden opportunity to make valuable contacts. An attractive member of the opposite sex asks leading questions. Maintain your poise and dignity. You can always refuse to answer!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Old differences of opinion could lead to new battles. A fresh approach is needed on both sides. Creative and intellectual endeavors prove especially rewarding.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Family should come first today. Take time out to tend to your offspring's needs. A candid conversation can help you overcome someone's fears or opposition. Take the initiative; former foes can become good friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Join friends and fellow club members at a local event. Interesting discussions contribute to your store of information. Hosting a lively party is not as difficult as some people think. Invite easygoing guests.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A sermon proves right on target. Conserve your energy by no longer rushing headlong into every project that presents itself. A family powwow resolves a longtime problem. Travel for business or pleasure this coming week.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: A ♡

In some ways, good defense at the bridge table is like being back in grade school. The secret to winning could be as simple as "Show and Tell."

North's hand is a classic raise to four spades—five trumps, a singleton and not strong enough to open the bidding. South had nothing further to add.

West elected to lead the ace of hearts at trick one, and East contributed the three. Afraid that a club loser was going to go away on the king of hearts, West shifted to that suit. Declarer won in hand, drew trumps and conceded two diamond tricks to land the game.

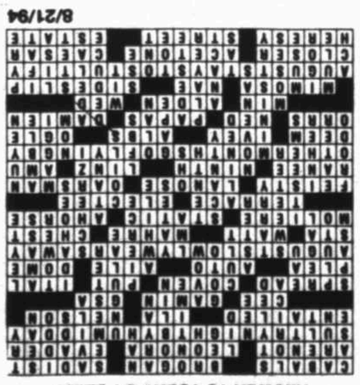

East missed a chance to direct the defense. Since there was no way the defenders could get a trick in clubs even if West held the king, East should have seized the opportunity presented by the singleton heart on the table to steer West to the winning line.

Under the ace of hearts East should have jettisoned the queen, asking for the higher of the remaining side suits. Similarly, a low heart should ask for the lower suit and a middling heart shows no preference. West would have shifted to ace of diamonds and another and, after winning the king of diamonds, a third round of the suit would have promoted the setting trick in trumps whether declarer ruffed high or low.

Note that the only opportunity for this suit-preference signal occurs when dummy has a singleton in the suit led. At any other time, a high card in the suit partner leads simply says, "I like your suit." A low card is discouraging.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Play presented

Rick Hamby's "Maggie's Dance," the 1994 winner of the McLaren Comedy Playwriting Competition, will be presented in a reader's theater format by Midland Community Theatre Thursday through Saturday.

Tickets are $3. Reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

Hamby, Howard County district attorney, will be honored at a public reception from 7 to 8 p.m. Thursday in the lobby. This is the second straight year that Hamby has won the national competition.

"Maggie's Dance" is the story of a woman's struggles, the most imminent of which is the loss of her home and business to a highway construction project. Alone since her husband abandoned her 10 years earlier, she must raise a teen-age daughter and earn a living.

The competition draws entries from across the United States. Previous winners have been from New York, California and Texas. The competition was established as a memorial to Mike McLaren, a long-time Midland Community Theatre volunteer who died in 1989.

This year more than 130 entries were received from all 50 states. Hamby's play was selected from 10 finalists.

■ Auditions set

ODESSA — The Globe of the Great Southwest, 2308 Shakespeare Road, is scheduling auditions for "The Diary of Anne Frank" for 2 p.m. Aug. 28 and 7 p.m. Aug. 29 and 30.

Roles are available for four men ages late 30s through 50s, two women ages late 30s through 40s, a woman in her early 20s, two girls ages 18 and 13 and a boy aged 16.

The production will run Nov. 11-13 and 18-20. For more information call the Globe, 1-332-1586.

■ Paintings displayed

ODESSA — Paintings by Lahib Jaddo are on display at the Art Institute for the Permian basin through Sept. 4.

An American citizen, Ms. Jaddo was born in Baghdad, Iraq, and has lived in Beirut. After moving to the United States, she first earned a master's degree in architecture before earning a master's degree in art.

Her oil creations on canvas deal with struggles and challenges facing women.

"My paintings are cultural memories that seek to recreate and preserve those moments of serenity and beauty that seem to defy the nature of life," said the artist, who lives in Lubbock. "Moments when flowers seem to sprout from rock, when peace can only be found in the dream of a floating carpet, and when the thread of life is woven into family. To this end, I paint a refuge in nature."

For more information call the Art Institute, 550-3811. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

■ Deadline set

AUSTIN — Deadline for entries in the Violet Crown Book Awards Competition is Aug. 31.

The Austin Writers' League and the University Co-op will present three $1,000 awards for best books published in fiction, nonfiction and literary categories. Awards will be announced and presented in December.

For guidelines and information concerning the program call 1-512-499-8914.

Also, the Austin Writers' League is sponsoring a weekend seminar on buying and selling screenplays Sept. 17-18 at St. Edward's University, Austin. Kathie Fong Yondea — script development consultant who has worked with the major Hollywood studios — and Madeline DiMaggio, author of "How to Write for Television," will be featured presenters for "Screenwriting Behind the Scenes: The Buyer's and Seller's Perspectives."

■ Exhibition set

Midland Arts Association's 17th annual Fall Juried Art Exhibition is set for Midland College's McCormick Gallery Sept. 24-Oct. 22.

Entries will be accepted from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sept. 24.

MAA members receive one free entry. All other entries are $7.50 an entry. The show is partially funded by the Texas Commission on the Arts and the Arts Assembly of Midland.

For more information call Herb Cooper, 683-2295.

■ Artist to perform

BIG SPRING — Recording artist Susie Luchsinger will be performing at the Amphitheatre at Comanche Trail Park at 6 p.m. Sept. 5.

Luchsinger

The event is sponsored by Big Spring Outreach Aglow.

Mrs. Luchsinger is best known for her work in the Christian country and contemporary fields. She has recently broadened her music into country, with the release of her album, "Real Love." The first single, "For Pete's Sake," has just been released to country stations.

Mrs. Luchsinger began singing as a child with her brother and sister, Pake McEntire and Reba McEntire.

■ Photos featured

A collection of recent photographs by Shawna Lloyd is being featured at Pages & Prints Bookstore, Wadley Avenue at Garfield Street.

Ms. Lloyd is presenting black-and-white and color photographs that explore the juxtaposition of light and shadow. She uses simple subjects such as a chair leg, old silver and willow trees over a river to show her audience the "little things that intrigue" her.

For more information call the bookstore at 570-5173.

■ Comedian to perform

Comedian and author Rich Hall brings his brand of humor to the Midland Hilton, Wall at Loraine streets, Friday and Saturday.

This stop on Hall's tour coincides with the release of the book, "Self-Help for the Bleak." He is the author of the series of humor books "Sniglets."

He has made appearances on "The Tonight Show," HBO's "Not Necessarily the News" and "Saturday Night Live."

■ Auditions set

ODESSA — Auditions for the Globe Theatre's production of "Shenandoah" continue from 3 to 5 p.m. today at the theater, 2308 Shakespeare Road.

The musical drama is based on the original screenplay by Barrett, Udell and Geld, and tells the story of a family's struggles during the Civil War.

Roles are available for 20 males ages 13 to 55 and boys between the ages of 9 and 13. A role is available for an African American male between the ages of 9 and 13. Roles are available for females between the ages of 16 and 25 who sing in the alto range.

Scripts are available at the Globe office, 1-332-1586.

Production dates are Oct. 6-8, 14, 16 and 17.

Stripper to housewife: Author samples Americans' worklife

By Judie Glave
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Lynn Snowden had quite a year in 1992. It was explosive, enriching, embarrassing, enraging, exhausting, emancipating, ennobling.

But after holding nine vastly different jobs — from stripper to schoolteacher and rape counselor to rock 'n roll roadie — it was, above all else the author says, eye opening.

"What I learned was that I definitely felt different about myself in different jobs. It's amazing how easily you can adapt and change," she said.

Going into the roadie job for the heavy metal band Skid Row, Snowden thought the all-male crew was scary. After a month of packing pyrotechnics for an explosive stage show, "I was exactly like everyone on the crew. Grubby-looking. Aloof from the crowd. Secure in my place in the battalion."

Snowden, a free-lance journalist whose credits include articles in Esquire, Harper's Bazar, Glamour and Premier magazines, chronicles her yearlong odyssey in "Nine Lives."

The premise of Snowden's droll and highly entertaining book is that the workplace establishes a person's identity.

"I firmly believe that what you do determines who you are as a person," Snowden says. "It determines how you dress, what your hours are going to be, who your friends are, really almost everything about you."

Her research included white- and blue-collar fields, professions that demanded physical strength and male-dominated jobs.

In order, Snowden became: a pyrotechnic roadie for Skid Row; an advertising executive in Manhattan; a substitute teacher in Virginia; a Las Vegas cocktail waitress; a Beverly Hills celebrity publicist; a Connecticut housewife; a New Orleans stripper; a rape-crisis counselor in Texas; and a New England factory worker.

Though personal stereotypes were shattered, Snowden's initial belief that people treat you according to your job status, proved true.

As a factory worker in New England churning out chocolate candy dinosaurs, college kids in summer jobs treated her like a loser. The low-pay and repetitive tasks made her feel like one. "I really wanted to quit that job. The month I was there seemed endless."

But not as endless as the 2½ weeks she spent as a Connecticut housewife, taking care of a husband, three boys and a hard-of-hearing mother-in-law.

The married but childless Snowden says everyone always told her the most satisfying thing about being a housewife is "the kids. It's the kids."

Must be, Snowden surmises. "Nature has to do something to your brain when you have a child. ... Otherwise, I'm convinced there would be nothing but abandoned, dead children around."

In each job at least one person, "usually someone very high up," knew she was writing a book but her co-workers did not. (For the record: Yes, she kept the tips. No, she did not have to sleep with the husband.)

Working as a stripper and factory worker, her cover story was that she was an out-of-work schoolteacher.

Men, she learned, swallowed the line whole in the strip club where she dressed (and undressed) in a leather G-string and metal-studded, bra.

"Strippers tell guys what they want to hear. 'Yes, I'm working my way through medical school.' 'Yes, I find it sexually exciting.' ... And they say women are gullible, give me a break."

Abandoning all modesty to become a stripper was surprisingly easy. It's little things, such as an interviewer asking her age, Snowden finds hard.

"I know it's weird, I'll take my clothes off in front of strange men but do you really have to know that? Just say I'm in my 30s."

If she had to chose one career to do the rest of her life, she would people in this country are paid what they're worth."

become a schoolteacher. Although the pay is abominable ($40 a day), "I found it immensely rewarding to be an influence in kids' lives."

Cocktail waitressing was by far the worst of the jobs: "Terrible work clothes — high heels, demeaning outfits — silly work procedures. ... You never get to sit down, and boy are people CHEAP!"

The factory job, although equally as demeaning, at least allows workers to wear comfortable clothes and sit down.

She found her work as housewife and rape counselor emotionally draining, although in different ways, and was glad when both ended.

As a suburban mom, she says, "I never wanted a drink so bad in my life. ... It's like desperately running as fast as you can and staying in place." And two years after offering solace to rape victims, she says, "I'm still haunted by cases I worked on."

Her high-glamour, white-collar jobs — publicist and ad executive — were equally educational.

"The key to working in an ad agency is spending the whole day looking like you're busy," she said.

"As a journalist, I deal with publicists all the time and always viewed them as highly annoying, loathsome and unnecessary. When I became one, I realized how annoying and loathsome journalists are."

Some ancillary lessons Snowden learned were: Anyone can be trained to do anything; people will hire you if you agree to work for nothing — as she did in six of her nine jobs: and "With the possible exception of Bruce Willis, I think
