Three Convicts Sentenced To Death For Prison Riot

Three Others Are Found Not Guilty By Auburn Jurors

Killing Of Fellow Inmate In December Pen Mutiny Echoed In Trial Of Six On Murder Charges

Death Mandatory

One Juror Holds Out And Swings Eleven Others To Conviction Of Only Three Prison-Defendants

(By Associated Press)

AUBURN, N. Y., Feb. 15.—A jury convicted Jesse Thomas, William Force and Claude Udwine, convicts of murder, first degree, today for the killing of Henry Sullivan, a fellow inmate during the Auburn prison riot of last December 11, and acquitted Frank Leagan, Albert Cassidy and Leo Lewis, the other prisoner-defendants.

The jury's decision automatically brought to Supreme Court Justice Benjamin B. Cunningham, who presided, the mandatory duty of pronouncing death sentence upon those found guilty, when they are brought before him Wednesday.

Leagan, 20, Cassidy, 23, and Lewis, 29, went back to their cells in the prison to continue serving their unfinished terms which are 25 years, 10 years and life, respectively. Force, 28, Thomas, 20, and Udwine, 28, went back to await sentencing with the knowledge that appeals for each will be made by their attorneys Wednesday.

An expectant hush spread over the court room as the six on trial stood up to hear the verdict which was to mean life or death to them. They were manacled in pairs, as they have been every day except one during the court proceedings.

One juror, it was said, in semi-official circles, held out against the 11 others against convention of all six defendants. He was said to have swung the others to the verdict as returned.

She will be married to Galleazzo Ciano, son of Costano Ciano. He is 27 years old and is secretary of the Italian Embassy at the Holy See. Miss Mussolini, 19 years old, the elder of Il Duce's two daughters and a sportswoman. She also is an excellent linguist, a skilled violinist and pianist and has travelled widely.

County Faced By Problem Of Jail, Courthouse Room

Immediate Need Presented Despite Of New Federal Building And Postoffice Proposal On Square

Election Pending

Petitions To County Dads Ask For Bond Issue For New Structure; Location Of Jail Delays Action

BY AL HILL
Avalanche-Journal Staff.

THE immediate problem of more courthouse room faces the county of Lubbock, whether or not a federal building and postoffice is secured by removal of the jail. This fact is admitted by officials and is occasion for action by the commissioners' court, started Friday, in securing approximate cost of a new courthouse and jail from architects before calling a bond issue election.

Status of the federal building seems to rest with the government bureau at Washington. The Lubbock county commissioners passed a resolution at the Friday meeting, declaring they would get the jail out of the way when the government gets ready to start construction of their building on the southeast corner of the square.

Washington Is Heard From.

Information from Washington is to the effect the county jail stands in the way of the new postoffice.

In considering the petitions presented before them last week, Judge Robert H. Bean and Commissioners J. T. Pinkston, W. L. Brashear, L.

Three Of Parrish Bills Are Passed

All Measures Of Senator From Lubbock Approved In Special Session Deal With Texas Fee System

Three bills by Senator Pink L. Parrish, of Lubbock, which were presented at the present special session of the state legislature, have been passed by both the house of representatives and state senate and will be approved by Governor Dan Moody, information received from Austin Saturday states.

All of the bills pertain to phases of ills of the Texas fee system and follow several month's work on the part of Senator Parrish and the committee appointed to investigate conditions over the state because of this system.

One of the bills makes allowances for commissioners courts to pay 75 per cent of the salaries of commissioners and 25 per cent of the county judges salaries at their option, instead of out of the county's general fund.

Another bill requires trust funds of county officers to be placed in county depositories and to be protected by a bond. Interest from these trust funds will go to the party to whom the fund belongs. Heretofore, many county officers have been placing this money in banks receiving interest thereof and putting it in their own pockets. In some instances, as much as $250,000, in daily balances, receiving four per cent interest, has enriched the pockets of numerous county officers.

The third bill limits the amount commissioners courts can contract to pay for collection of delinquent taxes to not more than 15 per cent. Contracts have been made paying as high as 50 per cent for this kind of service.

Republican Party In Texas Makes Bid For Democratic Bolters To Join Ranks

(By The Associated Press)

DALLAS, Feb. 15.—The republican party in Texas, through its state executive committee, made an official bid today for democrats who had been partially alienated from their party by recent action of the state democratic executive committee.

A resolution was adopted inviting democrats who voted for Herbert Hoover in 1928 to become permanent members in good standing of the republican party. The democratic committee two weeks ago voted to bar as state candidates those democrats, although admitting them as voters.

Would Eliminate Primary.

The committee also voted to request elimination of the primary pledge system in Texas and demanded legislation preventing party executive committees from interferring with "the right of voters to cast their votes according to the dictates of their own conscience." Under present laws, voters in a primary must take a pledge to vote for the nominees of that primary.

While the resolution offered by R. B. Creager of Brownsville, national committeeman, invited "bolters" to become republicans, Orville Bullington of Wichita Falls, state vice-chairman, said that did not mean that the disaffected democrats would be unwelcome as "independent voters."

"We are ready to join with them on any reasonable basis," Bullington said. Creager previously had declared, however, that he thought the two-party system as permanent as the constitution and that a third party would not be successful.

Bullington referred to the "organized attacks that are being made on the constitution, particularly the Eighteenth amendment" and appealed to the patriotism of all factions to repulse those attacks.

Widow Tried For Husband's Death In Murder Trial

Drug Clerk Testifies Of Sale Three Days Before Slaying Of Kingsville Painter By Poisoning

State Rests Case

Intimacy Of Defendant And Fourteen-Year-Old Boy Is Alleged Reason Given For Slaying

(By The Associated Press)

KINGSVILLE, Feb. 15.—A drug clerk's identification of Mrs. Maud Long as the woman who had purchased a bottle of poison from him three days before her husband's death closed the state's direct case tonight in the widow's murder trial.

Since Thursday afternoon the state has been building its hypothesis that Mrs. Long, buxom woman in her thirties, killed Jim Long so that she might carry on an uninterrupted intimacy with a fourteen-year-old boy, Pat Smith—and that to achieve her purpose she mixed a lethal amount of poison in a harmless drug that the painter took.

State Rests Case

Today J. E. Rhodes, who worked in a Corpus Christi pharmacy told the last incident of the story. When he concluded, District Attorney George Westervelt said the state rested.

The judge had to go to Corpus Christi for the afternoon, and counsel for the woman wanted a recess for time to line up the defense so a recess was taken until Monday.

To Rhodes, as he described the sale of the poison and pointed at her as the purchaser, Mrs. Long paid more attention than she had to any other witness. She gazed fixedly at him, scarcely ever turning away, where yesterday her gaze

Dr. McKay Named New President Of Local Lions Club

C. F. Drexel Resigns Post With Lubbock Civic Club In Directors' Session; Other Officers Advance

Following the resignation of C. F. Drexel, as president of the Lubbock Lions club, the board of directors of the organization Saturday afternoon selected Dr. S. S. McKay as hissuccessor.

Mr. Drexel has served the Lions as its head since the club was organized last August and was instrumental in its organization. In tendering his resignation he stated that he expects to be in and out of the city a great deal and expressed the belief he would not have the necessary time to devote to the club as its head.

Other Officers Shifted.

Dr. McKay, as next in line, having been the club's first vice-president, automatically became president, Vaughn E. Wilson, former second vice-president, and Ben F. Condray Jr., former third vice-president, were advanced to first and second vice-presidents, respectively. S. J. McFarland, a former director, was elected as the third vice-president.

C. E. Gough was chosen to succeed McFarland as a director. J. C. Levens, formerly Tall Twister, was made Lion Tamer, and Benjamin Kucera was selected to fill the Tail Twister place. All of the changes take effect immediately.

Naval Conference Ends 4th Week

LONDON, Feb. 15. (AP)—As the fourth week of the five-power naval conference ended tonight, the delegates pointed to date:

1. A prospective five-year battleship holiday.

2. The "humanizing" of submarine warfare assured.

3. The settlement of the global tonnage problem, a controversy of years standing.

As for the things they hope yet to accomplish, they pleaded for patience as the most necessary virtue for the success of the disarmament negotiations.

PASTORS TO MEET

Session Called For Monday Morning By President

Members of the Lubbock Ministers' association will meet in a called session at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning, at the First Methodist church, Rev. H. L. Munger, First Methodist pastor and president of the organization, announced yesterday.

A. J. CAULEY DIES

Resident Of County Forty Years Succumbs Here

A. J. (Uncle Jack) Cauley, 80, a resident of Lubbock county for the past 12 years, died last night at 10 o'clock at his residence near the city, following an illness of several weeks.

The body will lie in state at Bynum Brothers funeral home until 3:30 this afternoon when funeral services will be held at the First Baptist church, Dr. W. H. Knight officiating. Members of the I. O. O. F. lodge will have charge of burial services and are to meet at their hall at 2:30.

He is survived by one son, W. C. Cauley, of Comanche, Texas.

Lubbock Union Is Sued For Damages By Brown, Tillman

Two Slaton Men Seeking To Obtain $15,000 Each From Typographical Union In Suits Filed Here

Declaring that action taken against them was "malicious, willful and without cause," George H. Brown and W. C. Tillman, both of Slaton, Saturday filed suits in the 99th district court for collection of damages amounting to $15,000 each against the Lubbock Typographical Union No. 888.

In their petitions the plaintiffs named H. R. Miller and W. C. Edwards as president and secretary-treasurer of the union, respectively. They state that at the February meeting of the union, action was taken to expell them and a fine of $300 placed against them for an alleged offense of Section 4, Article 6 of the General Laws of the union, for which there is no review or rehearing allowed by the union.

The plaintiffs state that for a long time prior to February 2, time of the meeting, they were members in good standing of the local union and as such had acquired benefits such as a mortuary benefit at the present time of $75 and increasing each year until it reached $500 after 15 years continuous service, and also the right of admission to the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs, Colo. They also state they had the right of employment in any

CHILDREN KILLED

Three Lives Taken In Coal Gas Explosion

RACINE, Wis., Feb. 15. (AP) — A coal gas explosion in a new stove started a fire that claimed the lives of three small children here today. Their parents and one other child were burned severely by the fire.

The dead:

Phyllis Christensen, four, her sister, Bonnie, two, and Edna, 10-months-old.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Christensen, and another daughter, Irene, six, received critical injuries. Doctors said the mother was not expected to live.

MURDER CHARGED

MIDLAND, Feb. 15. (AP)—Charges of murder were filed today against W. H. Wilson, in connection with the shooting of Steve Pritchard, 45, at Andrews yesterday. It was Andrews' first slaying in years.

The town was unprepared having no jail. Wilson was brought to Midland and placed in jail here.

Wilson surrendered to authorities. He said that the only eye witness was Calvin Wooley, and the charges were filed after Wooley had been questioned at length. Wilson's father lives at Corsicana.

The two men had lived together for several years.

No Bill Returned Against Block In Swindling Probe

Suspect Released On Bond Of $500 As Witness In Further Developments Of Athletic Club Promotion

A no bill was returned late yesterday afternoon by the Lubbock county grand jury investigating the charges against A. L. Block and he was released on $500 appearance bond as a witness in further developments expected in the case.

Block had been held in the Lubbock county jail for the last two weeks on a charge of swindling in connection with selling stock in the Lubbock Athletic club. Findings of the grand jury indicated that Block was acting merely as a commissioned salesman and that he had no further knowledge which might implicate him in a swindle.

The United States Fidelity & Guaranty company, through its local agent, J. S. Hemphill, is surety for the bond.

Following a hearing 10 days ago in the court of Justice of Peace G. R. Scott, bonds of $1,500 each were set for Block on two counts. With yesterday's action by the grand jury the man is exonerated of swindling charges, according to an announcement last night from the office of the district attorey.

Lloyd Carter Is Freed of Charge

LUFKIN, Feb. 15.—Lloyd Carter was acquitted by a jury here today of the slaying two years ago of John Laing of Houston.

Testimony in the trial was completed this morning, and the jury received it this afternoon after the completion of arguments. Less than an hour was required for the jurors to reach an agreement.

During the taking of testimony an alleged confession by J. B. Holland, convict, which said Holland and two others killed Laing, was read. The confession was reported to have been made in the presence of Sheriff Holliday of Polk county.

HOOVER ENDS TRIP

President Leaves Florida For Washington

LONG KEY, Fla., Feb. 15. (AP)—Bronzed by long days in the hot sun, President Hoover left here tonight for Washington refreshed and rested by a week's vacation spent 1200 miles from the cares and duties of his high office.

OKEH SULPHUR TAX

House Bill Is Referred To Committee For Action

AUSTIN, Feb. 15. (AP)—After a flurry because of absence of a quorum of the day, the Texas senate got into gear late today only to quit after a two hours' session until Monday. Friends of the proposed tax on Sulphur evidently accomplished their purpose, because the house bill which passed yesterday was read and referred to committee for action.

Other warrants for those absentees had been placed in the hands of Sheriff Coley White of Travis county for service. Senators Julian P. Greer of Athens, Edgar Miller of Weatherford and R. J. Wirts of Seguin drifted in, completing a quorum with two to spare.

TRUETT TO BRAZIL

DALLAS, Feb. 15. (AP)—Dr. George W. Truett, president of the Southern Baptist general convention and pastor of the First Baptist church here, will leave Dallas June 1 for Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, to address the Latin-American Baptist congress, he announced today.

Brady Trial May Remain In Austin

Judge To Retain Venue Of Case Until Inability To Obtain New Jury Has Been Demonstrated

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Feb. 15. — John W. Brady may face another jury of his fellow citizens of Travis county in an effort to win acquittal of the charges of murder brought against him after Miss Lehlia Highsmith, stenographer, had been stabbed to death on the night of November 9, last.

Judge J. D. Moore, who presided at the recent trial of the former civil appeals court judge, announced today he would retain venue of the case in his court until it had been demonstrated another jury could not be obtained to pass on Brady's guilt or innocence.

District Attorney Henry R. Brooks had filed a motion asking that the case be sent to Williamson county.

After Judge Moore decided that the venue would not be changed at this time, Brooks requested an immediate setting. The present term of Judge Moore's court will expire on March 17 and the new term will open on April 1.

In making his decision Judge Moore said he had conducted an investigation, which revealed that the newspapers had widely disseminated stories of the testimony adduced at the trial and that he was of the impression at this time there was no good chance to find 12 men here who had not a fixed opinion or did not have scruples against infliction of the death penalty as in any county.

PATROLMAN FREED

DULUTH, Minn., Feb. 15. —(AP)— Emmett J. White, U. S. customs patrolman, tonight was acquitted by a federal court jury of a charge of murdering Gust Henry Wirkkula, of Big Falls, Minn., while attempting to stop his car to search it for liquor, 25 miles south of the Canadian border, last June 8.

Coolidge Leaves Trail Of Hand Shakes, Autographs

Former President on "Duty Call" Visit To Texas, South

(By The Associated Press)

HOUSTON, Feb. 15.—Leaving a trail of well shaken hands and autographed albums across East Texas Former President Calvin and Mrs. Coolidge, paying a "duty call" to the South and West were on their way to El Paso tonight, loaded with flowers and the best wishes of cities along their route.

Mr. Coolidge's New England conscience made a real duty of his duty tour and he was up and dressed at 5:30 o'clock this morning ready to shake the hands of two little girls, who waited in the darkness of the depot platform at Lake Charles, La. The former president had expected to greet his uncle, P. H. Moor of Welch, La., 22 miles east of Lake Charles. Moor fearing the hour was too early, had taken a seat in the chair car, where he was discovered and brought to the Coolidge drawing room by a brakeman. Moor, a rice planter, farms 18000 acres of land. He chatted with the Coolidges until the train reached Houston.

Although the former executive maintained his usual silence on national and political affairs he showed a keen interest in the section through which he was passing and asked many penetrating questions about grain storage facilities here, cotton shipping and the oil industry.

FILE FOR TAXES

Sixty Delinquent Suits In District Court Here

Sixty suits, involving delinquent city taxes ranging from $25 to $600, were filed Saturday afternoon by J. C. Levens, assistant city attorney, in 99th district court.

The total of delinquent taxes for 1928 and prior years is about $40,000.

"I will be filing from 15 to 20 suits per day within the next week or two," said Mr. Levens. "There are now about 300 delinquent tax payers."

SHOT AND KILLED

VANCOUVER, B. C., Feb. 15.(AP)—Archibald Johnston, 52, former police chief of Medicine Hat, Alberta, was shot and killed by an unidentified assailant in his apartment here today. The assailant escaped.

Local Negro Girl Shot By Accident

Fifteen-Year-Old Black Is Injured In Attempt To Prevent Her Father From Injuring Mother In Row

Explaining that she sought to prevent her father doing serious injury to her mother, a 15-year-old negro girl, Elzora Netter, 1606 1-2 Avenue B, was taken to the Lubbock sanitarium early last night suffering of a bullet wound in her right leg.

According to a statement made by the girl to officers her father and mother were having trouble at the home and the father, Jim Netter, was looking for the gun.

"He could not find it and demanded that mother get it for him," she said. "I beat her to it and ran out of the house to another nearby to hide it. While I stood on the edge of the porch with the pistol in my hand it went off and struck me in the leg."

Physicians at the sanitarium stated that while the girl was painfully hurt the wound was not serious. The bullet entered the right side in the calf and ranged downward to come out just above the ankle. The bone was not broken.

Direct Descendant Of Roman Senator In Time Of Julius Caesar Enrolled As Student Of Tech

BEING a direct descendant of a Roman senator who served during the life and rule of Julius Caesar probably would be cause for considerable elation and added prestige to most persons. But to Mrs. James M. Bloodworth, Tech student, 2406 Third street, it is a more or less trivial matter—one, in fact, of which she remembers few details despite the fact that she has had access to a chronological account of her family tree.

"Oh, of course, I have read the family tree," she explains, "but now I couldn't tell you the name of the Roman senator."

Entitled To Estate.

Probably the only person in Lubbock who can trace her ancestry to some fifty years B. C., Mrs. Bloodworth is a member of this family of Roman descent, the Americanized name of which is Longino. The family still is entitled to an estate in Italy provided that the family lives in that country. "None of us ever plan to reclaim the estate because it would necessitate our living in Italy which we have no desire to do," she says.

"It is a tradition," Mrs. Bloodworth coptinues, "that our family is a direct descendant from a Roman senator and the entire line has been one of nobility but I don't remember who any of them were. One of my immediate ancestors was a count. My great-great grandfather became antagonized against Italian practice of military rule and was opposed to Catholicism. He ran away and came to America."

Like Story Book.

The traditions of her ancestors read like some thrilling story book. To continue with the story of the dissatisfied nobleman: "He cut the gold buttons from his uniform in order to pay his passage to the new world. He settled in Louisiana when that territory belonged to the French. Soon two of his bothers came over. They scattered in order that their fam-

Charges Filed in Officer's Slaying

(By Associated Press)

PALESTINE, Feb. 15.—A charge of murder was filed here today against Wendell Sanders, 18, in the slaying of Floyd C. Cox, 27, deputy constable, in a safe last night.

Another youth was arrested as an accomplice.

Cox died in a hospital shortly after three shots from a shotgun were fired at him through a window of a cafe as he was seated at a table.

Sanders surrendered soon after the shooting. Cox, it was said, arrested the youth Thursday night. He was reported to have struck Sanders over the head with his pistol when he was alleged to have resisted.

Preliminary Work Of Paving Starts

State Engineers Undertake Initial Project On Road Between Slaton And Lynn County Line

Work of making cross sections, running levels, surveying dumps and other outside engineering necessary as preliminaries in paving that portion of Highway number 7 between Slaton and the Lynn county line, was started Saturday morning by Resident Engineer Guy L. Johnston, of the state highway department.

Since February 1 Mr. Johnston and his crew have completed all necessary engineering work on that part of Highway number 7 between the city limits of Lubbock and the north limits of Slaton, a total distance of 14.952 miles.

The stretch of Highway number 7 from the south city limits of Lubbock through Slaton to the Lynn county line, is the original project on which federal approval was given four years ago. This will be the first part of paving to be done in the county and has both state and federal aid available.

Bids have been advertised on the project, from Lubbock to the north limits of Slaton, and will be received and contract probably let by the state highway department at Austin, February 25. Next contract will be the remainder of the south part of Highway number 7.

Second portion of the county's paving will be that part of Highway 9 between Lubbock and the Hale county line.

Growing Interest In Longer Staple Cotton Is Seen

Plains Growers Are Making Many Inquiries About Varieties Best Suited To Short Growing Season

Results Of Experiments Here Reveal A Number Of Cottons Better In Yield Than Short Staples

Various factors have entered into bringing about increased interest in growing longer staple cotton on the South Plains, according to Don L. Jones, superintendent of the State Agricultural Experiment Station here.

"A prolonged drouth in 1929 throughout the entire state, coupled with the fact that there has been a pronounced trend for several years toward growing extremely short staple cottons of uneven length, and consequently smaller returns on their cotton crop," states Mr. Jones, "has finally brought to the attention of the individual cotton planter the inequity of a 'hog-round' market and the necessity for growing a cotton of better spinning qualities."

A large proportion of the total crop in the Plains area, prior to 1925, was made up of medium staple length cottons. Some of these were rather late in maturing.

Tells of Severe Freeze.

"During the latter part of October, 1925," continues Mr. Jones, "a severe freeze caught the the bulk of the cotton in a state of immaturity, because of the early summer drouth and the heavy, continuous rains of late summer and fall.

"As the cottons having short staple make a better sample than do long staple varieties, the man growing the extremely short staple cottons of medium earliness in maturity was able to salvage his crop and receive higher returns than those cotton planters who had the late maturing varieties. As a consequence, the Plain sarea is pretty much on a one-variey cotton basis.

"Where before there was enough quality cotton grown to maintain a reasonable basis and allow the men growing cotton of poor quality to obtain the same price on account of the 'hog-round' sytsem of buying, we have now reached the point where such a large proportion of the cotton is of inferior quality that prices received were considerably lower than basis.

Short Staple On Increase.

"With western Texas and Oklahoma increasing both their acreage devoted to farm crops and cotton, we may expect a normal increase of untenderable cotton, either on account of staple or grade, because of our short growing season which will allow for a certain per cent of immature cotton two to three years out of five.

"Add to this the aforesaid trend in the older cotton-growing regions to the short staple cottons and we can understand why the government reports that in 1928 there was 14.6 per cent of our cotton untenderable, whereas in 1929 21.8 per cent has been untenderable. As a whole, only about 1.4 per cent is untenderable on account of grade, the balance being under seven-eights of an inch in length."

In its effort to arrive at a scientific solution of the above-named cotton problems which are facing the grower on the Plains, the experiment station has conducted a number of timely demonstrations. Results of such effort reveal the fact that there are several varieties of cotton that can be grown in this area—cotton that matures early and possesses a staple length seven-eights of an inch or better, besides yielding more pounds per acre than the half-and-half variety commonly grown.

Gives Figures On Early Cotton

Early cotton is recognized as best. It is also recognized as bringing the best price. Over a four year period during the seasons of 1925, 1926, 1927 and 1928, the following shows the percentage of certain cotton varieties opened after 134 days, and 147 days, from time of planting:

Burnett cotton, the experiment station's records show, had 25.2 per cent of the crop open at 134 days, and 65.7 per cent open at 147 days.

Mebane No. 804, with 15 per cent open at 134 days had 56.4 open at 147 days after planting.

Acala shows 14.4 per cent after 134 days and 40.8 per cent open at 147 days.

Half-And-Half shows 14 per cent at 134 days and 49.8 per cent open at 147 days.

Per Acre Yields Recorded.

Production records of a number of varieties reveal the following averages over the same four-year period:

Westex which is a variety out of Burnett and shows practically the same maturity average, yielded 177 pounds of lint per acre. Acala, with an average of 166 pounds, is next. Mebane, Noo. 406, yields 162 pounds, Half-And-Half's yield was 161.31 pounds. New Boykin yielded 159 pounds. Burnett yields 156 pounds. Kasch shows 152 pounds, Mebane 804, 138 pounds, Sunshine, 129 pounds, New Mebane, 100 pounds.

Staple lengths recorded over an eight-year period show the following:

Mebane 804, New Mebane and Kasch, each 31 thirty-seconds of an inch. Acala averaged one and one-thirty-seconds of an inch. Burnett shows fifteen-sixteenths, as does New Boykin, while Sunshine averages one inch flat. For a six-year period Mebane 406 shows fifteen-sixteenths average.

Drouth Shortens Length

Half-And-Half, over a five year period, averages three-fourths of an inch, while Westex, over the six-year period, averages seven-eights of an inch staple length.

Because of the past two years, staple lengths have been made shorter than ordinary by the drouth and boll worms. It would be unfair to compare the cotton on which a record has been kept only for the past few years, with varieties experimented with over a long period.

"Well-bred cottons produce a staple length that varies but little from year to year," Mr. Jones states. "Poor soil, prolonged drouth and immaturity are some of the factors that influence this inherited characteristic of staple length. It would then seem only reasonable to believe that if one-fifth of the total cotton produced in the United States unitenergble on account of staple, and that staple is an inherited characteristic, it would be well for us to change to some well-bred cotton of a medium staple length."

200 Swisher Cattle Receive T. B. Test

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

TULIA, Feb. 15.—Over 200 head of Jerseys and beef cattle in Swisher county have been T. B. tested this last week in preparation for the dairy and livestock shows this spring.

A large per cent of the Jersey herds in Swisher county are doing accredited herd work. The dairymen of the county are planning to have a number of Jerseys in Plainview Dairy show in April. The 26 4-H club calves were tested so that they could be entered in the Panhandle-Plains Fat Stock show in Amarillo and the Fort Worth Fat Stock Show.

Texas Cow Wins Triple Honors In High Production

With Yield Of 642 Pounds Butterfat And Of 13,803 Pounds Milk In 305 Days, Two Medals Are Won

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

BROWNWOOD, Feb. 15.—Yielding 642.81 lbs. of butterfat and 13,803 lbs. of milk in an official production test of 305 days, Jolly's Benedictine May, purebred Jersey cow owned by N. A. Cropp of Brownwood, Texas, has just won both a gold and a silver medal award from the American Jersey Cattle club and a silver medal award from the American Jersey Cattle club and the Texas state age class championship for junior four-year-old Jersey cows. For eight months of this test Jolly's Benedictine May produced more than 60 lbs. of butterfat per month, and during her best month yielded 68.21 lbs. of butterfat.

In winning the state age class championship Jolly's Benedictine May supersedes Mon Plaisir's May Melrose, tested by Ed. C. Lasater, owner of the world's largest purebred Jersey herd at Falfurrias, Texas. This former champion held the honor with a record of 576.33 lbs. of butterfat and 10,649 lbs. of milk.

Won Silver Medal.

Jolly's Benedictine May, in a previous test made when she was in two-year-old form, won a silver medal for her exceptional record of 627.54 lbs. of butterfat and 12,983 lbs. of milk in 365 days.

During her two tests, one for 10 months, the other for a year, Mr. Cropp's remarkable Jersey cow has yielded a total of 1,270.35 lbs. of butterfat, the equivalent of 1,578 lbs. of butter, and 26,786 lbs., or 12,458 quarts of milk. In addition Jolly's Benedictine May presented her owner with a vigorous calf following each test.

She is the daughter of Benedictine Ruler, a purebred Jersey bull that has been awarded a silver medal for the high production records of his daughters, and through her dam, Jolly's Fernleaf, an untested cow, is the granddaughter of Jolly's Cowslip of P. H., also a silver medal bull.

Long Staple Seed Received In Lynn

Lynn county cotton growers have received 12,000 pounds of Misdell number two cotton seed from Memphis, as the first step towards the ultimate aim of having a single-variety cotton of quick-maturity and long staple for their section of the South Plains, it is announced by County Agent R. E. Shaver, of Tahoka.

The seed is to be distributed among about 25 farmers and will plant about 700 acres. None of the farmers who are cooperating in this movement are to plant more than 20 acres of this variety, the experiment being tried out carefully to arrive at some solution of the problem of improving cotton staple. All growers will keep the seed from this cotton pure and will pool their crops from this variety.

According to records obtained from the state experiment station here, the Misdell cotton is said to mature about 10 days earlier than Half and Half and has a staple of one and one-sixteenths inch.

Master Farmers Of Texas Show An Annual Income Averaging $5,515 Net On Average Of 365 Acres

Can Texas farming be made to pay without sacrificing a good standard of living, modern comforts and conveniences, education, or fertility of the soil? The ten Master Farmers selected for 1929, representing every section of the state, say that it can.

These men, by using modern ideals, and modern equipment, are showing an average net annual income of $5,515 on farms averaging 365 acres and representing an investment of $48,811. Particularly significant is the fact that they have an average of $6,800 invested in livestock. While two of the group are primarily dairymen and own 432 dairy cattle, the eight others have 10 dairy cattle per farm. Each of the ten farms averages 3 brood sows and 132 laying hens; all have ample gardens and orchards.

All Cooperative With Agents

Each of these farmers has closely cooperated with his county agricultural agent. Discoveries made by Texas Experiment Stations and methods advocated by the A. & M. College have played a major role in the success attained.

West Texas boasts four of the Master Farmers selected in 1929. R. E. Echols Dawson County, Paul W. Price, El Paso county; J. F. Ward, Deaf Smith county; and Frank F. Weil of Hale county. East Texas is represented by J. M. Chamblee of Van Zandt county and L. Webb of Rusk county. Central Texas has Carl Reese of Hill county and William Ranly of Falls county. South and Southwest Texas lay claim to C. A. Pepper of Bexar county and H. H. Whipple of Cameron county.

The selection and honoring of Master Farmers, first begun in Illinois, has rapidly spread to more than a score of states. In Texas the Master Farmer movement is sponsored by The Progressive Farmer in cooperation with the extension service of Texas A. & M. college. During the past four years fifty Texas farmers have been awarded gold medals distinguishing them as master farmers. Their achievements and methods have been brought before the public at banquets given in their honor.

Italian Vegetable's Growth Rapid At Laredo

LAREDO, Feb. 15. (AP)—Although broccoli or Italian cauliflower was introduced to the winter garden district only three years ago its production has developed until it ranks second for the season in vegetable shipments.

A 275-acre field three miles north of Laredo is said to be the largest single tract in broccoli in the United States. The total acreage in the Laredo district is estimated at 700 acres and broccoli is considered one of the future major crops of this section. The severe cold in January did little damage to the broccoli crop. A few outer leaves were "burned" but the stem and head of the plant were not materially damaged. Shipments this season are expected to aggregate 900 carloads.

Plans Made for 4-H Club Swine Exhibits in Fair

A tentative special classification for 4-H club swine exhibits, arranged recently by a committee at Brownfield, will be presented for consideration before officials of the Panhandle South Plains Fair association, according to D. F. Eaton, Lubbock county agricultural agent.

Mr. Eaton, Roy S. Davis, Terry county agent, and W. W. Evans, Dawson county agent, compose the committee which suggested the classification at the recent sale and meeting of the Panhandle South Plains Swine Breeders association.

The classification, suggested for the 1930 exposition in this city, is as follows: (1) Junior and senior gilt, breeding class, must be purebred; (2) Junior barrow or gilt, single, fat class; (3) Pen of three barrows or gilts, must be selected from a litter; (4) County car lot exhibit of junior pigs, to be composed of 15, which will be owned by two or three exhibitors.

The first two divisions are classification formerly used, while the latter two would be new classifications.

"Our primary purpose in proposing the third division is to encourage litters," said Mr. Eaton.

Need For Diversified Farming In West Texas Told By Tech Student

BY JOHN WHERRY
Junior In Agronomy, Texas Tech School of Agriculture

Diversified farming is the growing of several types of field crops and farm animals for a profit. Any permanent system of farming should be diversified. Every master farmer has a diversified system of farming. A one-crop system of farming will not furnish a daily income, maintain soil fertility and insure a profit every year.

Most one-crop farmers say that they are specializing, and we are agreed on the fact that this is an age of specialization. Most people believe that they should be insured against loss by fire, tornado, hail or of life, is the one-one crop farmer insured against the loss of a crop failure or low prices? Is he making more profit by specializing? Is his system of farming permanent? Does he utilize all by-products? The answer to all of these questions is "No".

What Is Specialization?

The one-crop farmer says that all other industries specialize and this statement is correct. The meat packing companies are an example of specialization, but their system is permanent as long as livestock is grown. Their income is daily and they utilize everything but the squeal. They have only a small risk because their profit is not dependent upon favorable climatic conditions.

If the farmer diversifies he is specializing as much as is the meat packer, and he has equal opportunities and advantages. A diversified system of farming should include several types of livestock and a rotation of crops.

Rotation Helps Soil

A good rotation of crops improves the physical condition of the soil helps to conserve moisture and vegetable matter in the soil, lessens the damage from insects and diseases, and aids in the control of weeds. The crop yields are increased and the labor required to produce the crop is distributed, which helps to systematize farm operations.

Livestock should be kept on the farm because they consume cheap, unsalable feeds and furnish a better means of marketing the grain crop. Fewer trips are made to market, if the grain is marketed through livestock, and the product does not have to be sold at any certain time of the year.

Labor Aided By Livestock

Livestock help to distribute the labor throughout the year, because they require more time during the winter months. They require little attention during the summer months while crops are being cultivated. They can utilize unfillable land and increase the fertility of the soil, thus reducing the cost of growing grain crops. The manure from one cow per year is considered equal to the value of $34 worth of fertilizer.

If a farmer has dairy cows, poultry and hogs, he is insured a daily income and all of his by-products are utilized to the best advantage. His system of farming is permanent, if he grows the feeds for these animals, because the soil fertility is maintained. The cow is the "Mother of Prosperity," but she can not make a profit by herself. Cotton is "King," but he will soon be dethroned because he can not provide a living.

Horses Offer New Traffic Problem

WILLS POINT, Feb. 15. (AP) Wills Point had a traffic problem all its own on a Saturday after a recent rainy siege in its trade territory.

Farmers left automobiles in their garages, where there was no danger of them getting stuck, and hitched up "Dobbin" for the trip to town. Police had to work overtime finding parking places for the horses, mules, buggies and wagons.

Incidentally merchants reported a flourishing business despite the muddy roads.

Need For Scientific Methods In Prohibition Is Cited

Dr. J. C. Granbery, Dry Crusader, Has Views Of Question

Measure Must Be Given Fair Trial, Tech Professor Declares; Has Spent Years In Foreign Fields

BY MARGARET TURNER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WHILE anti-prohibition forces are having their inning in Washington and while a cosiderable portion of United States' population is airing its views on the question of prohibition, a Lubbock man, who for years has been active in furthering the cause of temperence, sees little hope for an ultimate solution of the problem until scientific methods are resorted to.

Dr. John C. Granbery, head of the department of history at Texas Technological college —a dry crusader who bore the standard of prohibition in Northern Africa and Eastern Europe as an investigator for the World League Against Alcoholism—is the man. To him prohibition and temperance have been interesting studies for half a century, have been goals toward which he has sought. But with the question as it is today, a "political football," as he describes it, he is not satisfied with conditions.

Opposed To Fanaticism

Opposed to fanaticism upon either the dry or the wet side of the question, urging opponents of the measure to give it a fair trial and that scientific investigations be taken up Doctor Granbery has evolved an opinion all his own.

"You ask me how I feel at this time about the eighteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States. The question is not so easy to answer because there are so many aspects and there is so much to be said. I shall confine my remarks to several points," he said.

"Several years ago I made a survey for the World League Against Alcoholism of Northern Africa and Eastern Europe and long before that time I was connected with the temperance movement in several of its phases. Having live through 80 years of the movement both as an interested observer and an active participant, I think that I have some background for my judgments and impressions."

Differs With Many

Dr. Granbery stated that to say the situation at present is satisfactory would be to disqualify himself at the start from making any intelligent observation for "to begin with my own crowd, or those who might be so considered—the prohibitionists —I will say frankly that many of them are not my crow or my kind."

"They know it as well as I do, and they do not think of me as their number, nor invite my cooperation. Our whole point of view and philosophy of life are different. Some of them seem to me to be dogmatic, ignorant, bigoted, unscientific, denunciatory and intolerant, just as I appear to them ultra-liberal, dangerous and subversive. In recent years I have been surprised and keenly disappointed at several addresses by prohibition professionals. Having urged my students to avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing experts and specialists I have been at times ashamed to hear the emotional and dogmatic tirades of some of these spellbinders. Instead of addressing themselves to the immediate situation, which is full of problems and interesting aspects, they give us old stuff —coarse and threadbare jokes and appeal to authority, to the law, to the constitution, the latter may be well enough, but it is hardly new or enlightening."

Knowledge Needed

"Continuing," said the professor, "we might ask what is their program. 'Enforce the law,' they tell us; but what we need is a knowledge of the situation that will show how it is to be most effectively enforced. To take an illustration, let us suppose that a certain law is so severe that it is almost impossible to get a conviction. A friend of good government proposes in the interest of better enforcement that the penalty be made lighter, and he is denounced as a friend of bootleggers ad an enemy of prohibition."

Dr. Granbery believes that just as one cannot group all professed prohibitionists together, neither can one put i one coherent group all of those who are dissatisfied with the eighteenth amendment.

Raps One Group

"I have not one word to say against good, law-abiding citizens who seek by legal and constitutional means to make changes in our laws and constitution," he says. "But for nullificationists who defy the law and the constitution by practice and advise doing everything in their power to bring our laws into contempt, have that aversion that I feel for every enemy of our country."

"The critics of prohibition are now having their inning," he continued, and they seem to be enjoying it. I am in favor of letting them 'holler' until they become hoarse. Give them all the hearing they want. Aside from bunk and tommyrot, what have they to say? I have for years been trying honestly to get their point of view. It is that they have their liquor and want it? I can understand that, for while I have never been a drinking man personally, practically all forms of alcoholic beverage I have ever tasted I have found most agreeable.

Admits Drinking

"People say that there is a vast amount of drinking going on. Unfortunately that is true. Are they contributing to that drinking, or are they by example and influence of every sort trying to check the drinking? They tell us that in many cases the laws are not being enforced. Readily granted, but are they trying to see that the laws are enforced? They tell us that there is much hypocrisy. Of course there is. I am forced to believe that much of the noise they are making is for propaganda and politics."

"Granted then their accusations, what have they to offer? One says he does not want the repeal of the eighteenth amendment but of the Volstead act. Another wants the amendment repealed but does not want the saloon back. The efforts of the opposition seem to be negative with no constructive program on which all can unite. It is easy to criticise, and this constitutes both the strength and weakness of the opposition to the policy of prohibition."

Offers Solution

"You ask me for my program, and here it is. I am a teacher and believe in education and science. I see no hope for a satisfactory solution with the question being made the football of politics. Excitement, feelings, denunciations, personal ambitions and hatreds— these will get us no where. Is one half of one per cent intoxicating? Let scientists determine all such questions. I see in the papers that there is to be a law-enforcement convention in Texas in a few days. Everybody should know that the law ought to be enforced; what we need is a careful, scientific study of facts.

"Who is making the bootleg liquor and what is the technique of its sale? What drugstores, if any, abuse their privilege? What physicians are false to their profession and give prescriptions when not needed as medicine? What are the customs at social clubs and gatherings of one sort or another with respect to drink? To what extent is liquor being served in the homes of people who set themselves up as the 'best people? And so on at length."

For Scientific Methods

"The method of science," says Dr. Granbery, "is first to gather your facts. That is now the need. If the law is not enforced, why is it not? If there is bootleg liquor where does it come from? In a word, let us transfer the question from the region of politics and passion and personal abuse to that of calm, earnest, unbiased, scientific study of facts, and on that basis adopt a constructive policy."

"If you want a concrete suggestion, let's have a real convention in which earnest persons with ideas and experience irrespective of the name prohibitionist or anti-prohibitionist, will calmly and scientifically study the question and recommend constructive policies."

If all the outlying possessions of the United States, exclusive of Alaska, could be combined into a single area, it would be less than that of the State of Montana.

Dr. Clyce Is to Conduct Revival Meeting in City

Dr. Thomas Stone Clyce, president of Austin college, Sherman, is to conduct revival services at the First Presbyterian church here for two weeks, March 2-16, Rev. Jack M. Lewis, pastor, announced yesterday.

Dr. Clyce's services will be a part of the synod-wide evangelist campaign of the church in Texas. He is one of the most prominent church men of the state, having been president of Austin college for the past 30 years.

Services will be held twice daily.

Lubbock Is Church-Going City With Professional Men Leading In Work And Attendance, Pastors Declare

MORE professional men will attend church services this morning in the city of Lubbock than any other type of citizen. Moreover the majority of them will officiate in some such capacity as usher, steward, deacon, elder, Sunday school superintendent or teacher. Not only will they attend church today but they will return next Sunday and be there regularly throughout the year.

All of this is according to local ministers who scan their congregations from pulpits week in and week out and in some instances year after year.

Professional Men Lead

"Professional men are more regular in attendance in our church than any other type," said J. D. Carroll, director of activities at the First Baptist church. "Many church officials are professional men but executives and plain workers are faithful in their attendance also. Travelling men who attend church alternately in Lubbock and cities of the surrounding territory declare that Lubbock is a city of "church-goers."

"I find it something of a fifty-fifty proposition in the First Christian church," said Rev. Walter P. Jennings, pastor, "difficult to differentiate between the professional man, the business executive and the plain worker. This is true, however, in addition to being faithful professional men are generous with their time and money."

Appeals to All Classes

"The church today appeals to all classes as never before. It is coming to realize that its duty is not to prohibit but to give men new incentives, motives and loyalties. Today the church is developing the religious inheritance within every man and has quit trying to legislate them into the kingdom of heaven."

The business man and his attitude toward religion has been a subject of popular controversy throughout America during the past few years. Some writers have advanced the belief that the church does not appeal to the business man and that he had rather spend Sunday morning on the golf links or sleeping than to attend church.

This is not true in Lubbock in the majority of cases. Rev. H. L. Munger, pastor of the First Methodist church, says that the doctors, lawyers and college professors, in that church are very loyal in attendance. Many serve on the board of stewards and miss only due to the greatest necessity such as illness.

"I think that Lubbock rates exceptionally high in church attendance," he says. "In fact it is my opinion that more people go to services in this city than in most cities of this population."

Attendance Is Desired

"The non-professional men attend the Church of Christ, according to the elder, John T. Smith. "Our congregation is realized largely from plain workers," he said, "but one of the creeds that our members are taught from their earliest days is that regular attendance at church is greatly to be desired."

Rev. G. P. McCollom's pastorate, the Asbury Methodist church, is an exception in that there are very few professional men on the church roll.

"Plain workers compose the main membership of my church, said Rev. McCollom and they are very regular in attendance. There are two business executives who never miss a service."

Several Sunday school classes at the First Presbyterian church are taught by professors and teachers and the organization of men-of-the-church is composed largely of business and professional men.

"I have found that they are reliable and a great help to me in my ministry," said Dr. Jack Lewis, pastor, "and men in the business world are sincere in their beliefs."

"Believe It or Not," Here's Another Tale About Raining Fish and Frogs

In those days bait was not used for catching fish.

Two South Plains residents aver that they have seen fish and frogs fall out of the sky during rainfalls.

The most recent to testify to such an observation is E. A. Gale, of Slaton, who writes the editor of the Avalanche-Journal as follows:

"Dear Sir:

"'Believe it or not.' I saw in the morning Avalanche of this date, about it raining frogs and fish. In the year 1872, the latter part of May, between 10 and 11 o'clock, a. m., I saw it rain frogs and fish. I went out in the rain and picked up the fish and took them in the house, one five inches and the other three inches long. This occurred fifteen miles southwest of Corinth, Miss.

Now, Mr. Editor, some people voted in such a way in the last presidential election that it would be almost impossible for them to even spit, they were so dry. Therefore, I do not expect them to believe this. I was about 15 years old at the time it happened."

C. L. Smith, of Abernathy, recently wrote that he saw a "frog rain" in Palo Pinto county in 1886. He wrote further that he picked up a sun perch as big as his hand, which fell on the ground during the rain.

Would Eliminate Traffic Mishaps

DALLAS, Feb. 15. (AP)—Eradication of traffic accidents and teaching of safety in public schools will be sought this year by the Southwestern Safety Conference which last year had a program of eradication of industrial accidents. The conference will meet in Dallas, April 25.

An exhaustive study of the proposed plan to license automobile drivers in Texas will be made. Assistant Attorney General L. V. Sutton has been invited to explain the workings of such a licensing plan, now being worked out for consideration by the legislature by the attorney general's office.

The conference will bring to the city about 750 representatives of industries and public utilities, and services in which safety from accidents is a vital factor. These will meet in sectional conferences prior to the general conference which will close with a banquet.

Picturesque Man Called By Death

PENELOPE, Hill County, Texas, Feb. 15. (AP)—When H. Plunkett of Penelope died recently at Waco Hill county mourned the passing of one of its most picturesque characters.

He was born in Ireland but moved to this country at an early age. Left an orphan at seven, he was placed in an orphanage. At 14 he ran away and, without a penny and with scarcely the rudiments of an education, he commenced a grim struggle to make his own way.

He came to Penelope many years ago, engaged in farming, and died one of Hill county's wealthiest farmers. He was childless and his wife died three years ago. He had no known near living relatives.

The pastor of the Methodist church aided the pastor of the Catholic church in conducting the funeral services here.

DEMONSTRATE TERRACING

COLORADO, Feb. 15. (AP) — Terracing demonstrations have been held on a score or more of Mitchell county farms this spring, according to W. S. Foster, county demonstration agent. Foster said that 10,000 acres already had been terraced and contoured and that he estimated the work would be done on 5,000 more acres.

Saturday's Style Report From Our New York Office

"MATERIALS"

Flat and Canton Crepe Dresses for street and afternoon wear. Lace, chiffon and Crepe Elizabeth, for afternoon wear, continue to be most outstanding . . . Light weight woolens of every type are enjoying more popularity than for many seasons and the indications are that they will continue to do so.

"LENGTHS"

The medium long skirt with even hemline, three to four inches below the knee, and the normal waistline have by now been accepted as a definite style, by women of discriminating taste.

"New TREATMENTS"

Capes, Boleros, Cocktail Jackets and the Jabot treatment are the outstanding features in the new dresses shown at the recent Paris openings.

"COLORS"

Black and black with contrasting trimmings, is still strong, but as we have said before, all the Navy family will be good as the season advances. Beige is a promising color and green has already proved to be more popular. The pastel shades, especially blue and pink will undoubtedly gain in favor with the advent of warm weather.

Come in and see these interesting style changes in our ready-to-wear section; all of the above mentioned style notes you will find here ready for your approval and selection.

Slaton Tigers Capture Lubbock County Cage Title

IN THE REALM OF SPORT
WITH ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche Sports Editor

The well-known curtain will fall this week on Texas Tech's 1930 basketball campaign, bringing to a close a season, which at an earlier stage, promised to be the most successful in the history of the college.

As a final gesture of the year, the Matador cagers take on their sternest rivals of the court—the Canyon Buffaloes at the Teachers' stronghold Thursday and Friday nights. The series will find the Crimson dribblers battling for a double goal—one to gain revenge for the pair of reverses handed them by the Bisons here last week and the other to surmount that number 13 jinx and better their 1929 season's record.

When the McMurry Indians bowled over the Matadors on the second night of Tech's Abilene invasion, the Redskins started something. Up until that time the Paynemen had galloped through 12 hardfloor engagements without a defeat. Since that disasterous Tuesday evening, the Bull Fighters have dropped five straight games, two of which were lost by one-point margins.

Strange as it may seem, the Matador sharpshooters have turned in some first class court performances during their recent losing streak, but the cards have apparently been stacked. Canyon took two in a row from the Tech aggregation here last week in a pair of honest-to-goodness thrillers. On the Buffaloes' floor, the locals are not conceded much more than an outside chance to stop the Stampeding Herd. But if we take the word of the Matador cagers, Burton's crew is in for a tough battle on both nights if they sweep the season's series with Tech.

The Matadors return from Canyon Friday night after the final game with the Buffs and Friday morning the district basketball tournament opens at the college gymnasium. Approximately 16 counties of the Plains section will send their champions here to compete in the two-day tussle.

On the following Monday, Coach Victor Payne will start out in earnest with his Tech track squad. Candidates for the long distance events have been doing individual work for the past several weeks, but Monday at least 35 cinder hopefuls will don the abbreviated togs to inaugurate organized training.

A fast-breaking basketball aggregation captured the Lubbock county cage title yesterday when the Slaton Tigers downed both Acuff and Idalou in the county finals. Coach Paul Wright's pupils not only break fast, but pass the sphere like veterans. The Bengals now face the district cage meet here next week, representing Lubbock county while the Lubbock Westerners will uphold the name of the Hub City in the annual melee.

This lad Brasfield, rangy Slaton center, is the spark plug of the Tigers' scoring attack. Tall and agile, Brasfield has proven himself a terror under the basket, specializing on rebound shots. Ordinarily when he gets one hand on the ball, it means two points for Slaton.

Although practically all county championships have been settled in District Two, reports have not been available from all members and the actual contestants in the district tussle here Friday and Saturday will not be known until Tuesday night. At this time drawings for the two-day meet will be held. E. Y. Freeland, district chairman, insists that all entries must be in his hands by 7:30 Tuesday evening.

Due to the large number of teams entered, preliminaries in the tournament will start about 9 o'clock Friday morning. Games will be played on through the noon hour on both Friday and Saturday, the finals coming off Saturday night.

Down at Austin Uncle Billy Disch has started moulding his 1930 Longhorn baseball nine in the face of a strenuous diamond schedule. As early as March 6, the Steers meet the New York Giants; on March 27, the Baltimore Orioles of the International league are in Austin. April 1 finds the New York Yankees at the state capital to clash with the university team. Several out-of-state college teams are included on the Longhorn card. These include Iowa State and Northwestern university.

SPUR, Feb. 15.—The Spur high school Bulldogs, county champions, returned Saturday from Turkey where they dropped two games to the strong Turkey basketball Monday night, which will be their last game before they go to the district tournament at Lubbock next Friday and Saturday. The Dickens County junior basketball tournament is being held today at Dickens.

Vogue For Naming Fights Forces Scribe To Find Title For Scott-Sharkey Headliner Feb. 27

By WILLIAM BRAUCHER

When John L. Sullivan fought Jim Corbett in New Orleans, a fight didn't have to have a name. The vogue for naming fights was started, we believe, with the struggle between the Lily Man of France and Jack Dempsey in Boyle's Thirty Acres. That was ballyhooed as "the Battle of the Century," and since then a fight must have some sort of a name.

Writers called the last battle in Florida—the Sharkey-Stribbling affair, we mean—the Battle of What-of-It, the Battle of Nothing Much and various other names conveying the spirit if not the scent of Limburger. We have come now to another battle down there among the palms, and for the life of us can't quite make up our minds what to call it.

Let's see. In this affair there are Sharkey, Scott Campolo, Risko, Loughran, Charles, Mahoney, Bouquillon, Cook and Bianchi, and they're all heavyweights. Sharkey is of Lithuanian extraction, Scott, a Britisher; Campolo an Italian from the Argentine; Risko, a Hungarian; Loughran, of Irish descent; Charles, a Belgian; Maloney, a Bostonian (that means Irish); Bouquillon, a Frenchman; Cook, an Australian, and Bianchi, an Italian. What shall we call it—the Battle of Many Nations? No, that hardly gets over our meaning.

Well, these are all heavyweights. All right, let's see what they weigh. Sharkey comes in at about 195, counting the scowl; Scott, at something like 205; Campolo 224; Risko, 194; Loughran, 185; Charles 203; Maloney, 204; Bouquillon, 195; Cook, 190; Bianchi, 213. Add them all up and what does it amount to besides a great deal of flesh? Why, it comes to 2008 pounds.

Quick, now, the almanac! How much is 2008 pounds?

The almanac tells us that 2000 pounds is one ton—one short ton to be exact—though in this case how short it is you'd never guess.

Here we have one short ton of heavyweights, and we are seeking a name for the whole truckload. All these lads are to be tossed into the same ring at Miami, Feb. 27. They will pull and haul and tussle there as only tin-ears can.

Tussle and tin-ears. Now we are started—there is alliteration there. Oh, ho! we have it! Tussle, ton, tin-ears! Eureka!

Let us call this the Tussle of the Tin-Eared Ton.

It is spoken.

The arena in Miami, where a ton of heavyweight fighters will tussle Feb. 27, is shown above, with eight of the boxers who are on the card. The main bout is between Jack Sharkey and Phil Scott, and the semi-windup brings together Johnny Risko and Victorio Campolo.

Bengal Cagers Flash Scoring Power In Defeating Both Idalou And Acuff In Finals Held At Tech Gym Saturday

Travis Brasfield Leads Purple Crew To Second Straight County Championship; Wright Crew To Represent Area In District Meet This Week

By ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Editor

Slaton High school's Tigers won their second straight county basketball championship here Saturday by turning back the threats of Idalou and Acuff in the finals staged at the Texas Tech gymnasium.

By emerging the victor in yesterday's meet, Slaton won the right to represent Lubbock county in the District Two tournament, which opens here Friday under the direction of E. Y. Freeland, district chairman of the Interscholastic league.

Although winning the county crown, the Bengals were given a close call in the deciding game of the day's activities when they managed to eke out a one-point decision over the scrappy Idalou Wildcats. Previously the Slaton five had tumbled Acuff, the Class B finalist, from the picture with a decisive defeat.

Acuff Wins Second

Acuff sprung a surprise in the first game last night in defeating Idalou in an extra-period contest 31 to 25, to win the second place trophy. The ragged contest was tied 25-25 at the end of the regulation game and the Class B lads broke loose in the additional three minutes to put the tilt on ice.

Reid led the scoring assault for the winners with 18 points.

A Close Call

A sensational rally in the last half came within a hair's breadth of snatching victory away from the Slaton quintet in the deciding game of the tournament Saturday afternoon, the Tigers nosing out the Wildcat cagers, 28 to 27.

Idalou came from behind to knot the count in the final stanza but a free toss by Brasfield of Slaton proved the slender margin of triumph for the Purple sharpshooters.

The Wildcats counted 9 points during the closing stanza while holding the Bengals to a single marker.

Slaton's dribblers got their usual lead in the first half, leading 11-9 at the end of the first quarter and 21 to 12 at the rest period.

Weaver Leads Sprte

Weaver led the comeback for the Cats in the last half, accounting for 9 of the 15 points registered by the losers during the last two quarters. Wheeler, a fast-dribbling guard for Idalou, also took a hand in the spree.

For Slaton, Brasfield, Scott and D. Cannon were the shining lights. Brasfield's 16 points were enough to capture high scoring honors for the contest. Weaver came next with 13 counters.

Acuff Falls Victim

Slaton's crew of Purple cagers was off to a flying start Saturday morning, taking the Class B Acuff quintet into camp by the decisive score of 34 to 20.

Exhibiting an impressive passing attack, the Tigers gained the upper hand early in the opening period and were leading 12 to 7 at the end of the first stanza.

Brasfield, enlongated Slaton center, broke loose in the second period with his favorite one-handed shots and the Bengals pulled further away to lead, 19 to 9, at the rest period. Side-court baskets by Scott also featured the first-half assault of the Wright-coached five.

Losers Stage Comeback

Acuff's scrappy crew came back fighting in the closing periods, but the Class B lads were unable to cope with the rangy Tigers. Slaton added 15 points in the final two quarters while the Acuff sharpshooters were scoring 11 more markers.

Brasfield's 15 points carried off scoring honors for the contest while Scott took second honors with 10 counters. Reid was the offensive

Sixteen Counties Expected Here In District Tourney

Drawings For Annual Event To Be Held At Tech Gymnasium Tuesday Night; Freeland In Charge

At least 16 counties will send their basketball champions to Lubbock this week to compete in the annual District Two court tournament in accordance wi the plans of the state Interscholastic League.

Although there are 18 bonafide counties belonging to this district, the entire district membership has never taken part in the struggle for the Plains cage supremacy.

The Texas Tech gymnasium will be the scene of the two-day series of games which starts Friday. E. Y. Freeland, who heads the Tech athletic department, is district chairman.

Drawings Tuesday

Drawings for the tournament will be held in the office of Director Freeland Tuesday night, it has been announced. All entries must be in the hands of the league official by this time. The early meeting is planned to enable the district head to make out the schedule for the two days and distribute these programs throughout the district.

Lubbock county will have two representatives in the meet. The winner of the county finals held Saturday will compete along with Lubbock High school for honors in the tournament. This is the first year that Lubbock High was not forced to compete in the county tournament, having exceeded the enrollment for county competition.

Following are the counties expected to send teams to the tournament:

Andrews, Bailey, Cochran, Yoakum, Gaines, Dawson, Terry, Hockley, Lamb, Hale, Lubbock, Lynn, Garza, Crosby, Dickens, Floyd and Martin.

Sikes to Get Try With Shreveport

SHREVEPORT La. Feb. 15. (AP)—Among the candidates for an outfield berth with the Shreveport Sports this season will be "Slik" Sikes former great athlete at Texas A. & M. College. Last year Sikes hit .346 and did not make an error in the West Texas League.

In addition to receiving all-Southwest Conference honors as an end in 1925, Sikes also lettered in baseball and basketball at Aggieland. He was one of the four Southwest Conference stars who created a stir by their great play in the East-West game on the coast last year. The others were Joel Hunt, Gerald Mann and "Rags" Matthews.

Hill Climbing Contest Planned

A hill-climbing contest will be held at the Johnson ranch east of the city this afternoon with members of the Lubbock and Plainview motorcycle clubs participating. It was announced last night by Wade Anthony, president of the local organization.

The exhibit will start at 1:30.

BANQUET IS PLANNED

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SHALLOWATER, Feb. 15.— The local Parent-Teachers association has started plans to stage a banquet for the Shallowater boys' basketball team. It was announced here Saturday by Mrs. A. C. Wright, president of the organization.

Shallowater took second place in the county class B tournament and won third place in the interstate meet recently held at Morton.

LOCKNEY 18; FLOYDADA 7

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

LOCKNEY, Feb. 15.—The Lockney Longhorns defeated the Floydada High school cagers here Friday night, 18 to 7, in the second game of a championship series under way for the Floyd county basketball title.

TO GIVE CONCERTS

Porker Quint Sweeps Two Game Series With Mustangs; Take Last Tilt By 44-29 Count

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Feb. 15. (AP)—Taking an early lead and rolling up their advantage to the very end, the University of Arkansas six foot cagers swept on toward a Southwest Conference basketball title tonight, defeating the Southern Methodist University five 44 to 29.

It was the last home appearance for the Porkers and the big five played at their best. While Pickren led the attack with 16 points, the brilliant team play of Schoonover made his scoring possible.

Fouls were frequent with every man on each squad committing at least one. The Ponies, while helpless in the open field, made good their gift shots, dropping 15 free throws through the basket.

Bush Takes Over White Sox Reins

CHICAGO, Feb. 15. —(AP)—Donie Bush formally took over the managerial helm of the long tottering White Sox today, leading a small group of players to their spring training camp at San Antonio Texas.

Only five players were in the White Sox vanguard of pitchers and catchers, many of them being in San Antonio already and others en route.

Bears Beat Out Rice Owls, 35-27

WACO, Feb. 15. (AP)—With only five seconds left to play in the game between the Baylor Bears and the Rice Owls here tonight and the Owls leading by one point, Bob Kiersky was fouled. He made the free trial knotting the count at 27-all, as the shot rang out. In the extra period Baylor got away to an early lead due to a field goal by Wells who was fouled as he made it and he also made one of his free pitches and Baylor thereby crawled out of the cellar by taking the game by a score of 35 to 27.

BOUT POSTPONED

Von Porat-Snyder Match Is Called Off

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 15. —(AP)—Cancellation of the 10-round bout scheduled for Tuesday here between Otto Von Porat, Norwegian heavyweight, and Angus Snyder, Kansas fighter, was announced while the state boxing commission considered suspending Von Porat.

The Norwegian boxer refused to go through with the bout, declaring that his right hand, injured in a recent fight with Paulino Uzcudun, still was too sore to permit him fighting such a strong opponent as Snyder.

PIRATES DOWN KANGAROOS

GEORGETOWN, Feb. 5. —(AP)—Southwestern University defeated Austin College cagers here tonight in a loosely played game, 26 to 14. Captain Slim Whittle, Southwestern center, was high scorer of the game with a total of 12 points. Connelly played the best game for the losers.

Tech Quintet Out For Revenge in Canyon Games

Still seeking their thirteen triumph of the season, Tech's Crimson basketeers will invade the stronghold of the Canyon Buffaloes this week to wind up their 1930 court campaign with a two-ply series in Sam Burton's back yard.

Repulsed in their last five games, the Matadors will go to Canyon with a determination to even the year's count with the Teachers and to better the 1929 mark of 12 victories. The two losses suffered at the hands of the Herd here last week gives the Bisons an advantage in the final series, but the Tech scoring trio, composed of Hodges, Maxwell and Fisher are paying no heed to dope.

Payne Eases Up

Coach Vic Payne eased up the daily workouts for the college dribblers during the latter part of the past week in an effort to create a hunger for court action on the part of the squad members. Light practice sessions Friday and Saturday found the Bull Fighters going at top speed.

The Tech mentor expects to take practically his entire squad to Canyon to battle the Buffs in the season finale. Other than the five regulars, Pace and Hart are likely to see service on the Canyon floor.

Americans Sweep Racquet Singles

NEW YORK, Feb. 15. (AP)—Paced by Clarence C. Pell and Stanley Mortimer, the United States today made a clean sweep of the four international racquet singles matches with Great Britain at the racquet and tennis club. The rout of the invaders today gave the United States the series five matches to one, the English having won one doubles contest yesterday.

Pell defeated Lord Aberdare, 15-2, 15-1, 15-3.

Mortimer scored in straight sets over P. W. Kemp-Welch, 15-10, 15-6, 15-3. Dr. H. W. Leatham of Great Britain forced Hewitt Morgan, the change of pace stylist, to five sets before being defeated 17-14, 8-5, 3-15, 18-16. E. I. Edwards' completed the Americans' sweep by turning back Duncan Cambridge 4-15, 15-7, 15-6, 8-15, 15-1.

BOXING TOURNAMENT

Two Hundred Boxers Will Compete In Meet

WICHITA, Kas., Feb. 15. —(AP)—More than 200 boxers are expected by Leslie Showers, the director, to take part in a four-day Southwest A. A. U. boxing tournament which will begin here Monday night.

Contestants have entered from colleges and civil life in Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado, Texas and Arkansas. Heavyweights will feature the opening night card.

ANGELO WINS DISTRICT

1 MINUTE INTERVIEW

WITH SAM DREYFUSS

"You may say for me that the gossip about trading Burleigh Grimes for Hughey Critz is hot air," said Sam Dreyfuss the other day at Pittsburgh, just before the vanguard of the Pirates left for the training base in California. "We are not going to trade Grimes.

"And, oddly enough, we think we have a good second baseman in Grantham. We may be wrong, but we think so anyway."

Sam Dreyfuss

Sam, known in the baseball trade as "Slim Sam," denied rumors that his father, Barney, really was retiring from active participation in baseball affairs.

"I suppose the mistake grew out of the announcement of my election as vice president and my father's departure for Hollywood, Fla. Letters and telegrams poured in when it was printed that my father had retired from baseball. My father's only comment was: 'They are writing my obituary a little early.'

"My father's health is not the best and he will not go to the training camp this spring. I am running the club in his absence. But he will resume active control of the team as soon as his health permits.

"Shortstop is the only position open on the club, except for pitchers and catchers. The candidates for short are Bartell, Clark, Engle and Sankey, and one of these boys may make the grade.

"We think we have a good pitching staff, and I believe we will win the pennant."

Bob Couchman To Join Arbiters This Year

WICHITA FALLS, Feb. 15. (AP)—There may be a time not many seasons distant when every umpire on the Texas League staff will be a man who earned his spurs playing in the circuit and at one time was a hero to the fans of at least one city of the state.

Installation of Ziggy Sears, one of the brightest stars of the six-time champion Fort Worth Cats as a Knight of the Blue last year proved a noble experiment. So popular was the former ball hawk both with fans and players that he was one of the three members of last year's staff retained by President Alvin Gardner.

Couchman Is Added

Bob Couchman, a veteran of 21 years campaigning, the last 11 of which were spent in the Texas league, will get his chance to make good in an arbiter's role this season. He is in the list of 1930 appointees, and it is predicted the veteran pitcher will be one of the most popular ball-and-strike men the league has seen.

Couchman pitched his last season in 1926, when he was a member of the crack staff that propelled a weak-hitting San Antonio team into second place. Other members of the club's big four that year were Jim Lindsey, Frank Watt and Tiny Owens. Couchman, long since his farewell to his fast ball, was forced to depend entirely upon his control and knowledge of batter's weaknesses yet he compiled a notable record.

Pilot One Season

In 1927 the veteran toted his hand as co-manager of the San Antonio club, without marked success, and in 1928 piloted the Coleman club in the West Texas league. In addition to his diamond prowess Couchman has for many years been one of the state's leading trapshooters.

Snyder to Be Host to Invitation Track and Field Meet on March 8

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, Feb. 15.—Thirty Class A and B Schools of West Texas have been invited to participate in the Invitational Track and Field Meet to be held here Saturday, March 8th starting at 10 o'clock.

Lubbock High school has been included in the invitation which includes the following named schools: Lamesa, Post, Tahoka, Ralls, Spur, Colorado, Slaton, Roby, Rotan, Sweetwater, Big Spring, Merkel, Stanton and Anson in the Class A division.

Class B schools invited include: Fluvanna, Hermleigh, Dunn, Ira, Hobbs, Champion, Blackwell, Pyron, Westbrook, Lorsine, Coahoma, Southland, Gail, Clairemont and Trent.

The Tiger Stadium, said to be the most model high school athletic field in the state is already being prepared for the event which is hoped to be the largest gathering of athletic talent ever gathered in West Texas, outside of the larger colleges.

According to General Director W. N. Corry, Interscholastic League rules will be followed with the exception of Article 8, section 13 and 16 applying to eligibility. The Snyder meet welcomes all entrants who are now in school. Entries must be received by March 1, and complete data has been mailed to all schools named. Competent officials will be in charge of all events.

Handsome loving cups, medals and ribbons will be awarded in both Class A and Class B competition. Lunch will be served at the High School cafeteria.

Tahoka Is First To Enter Meet

SNYDER, Feb. 15. — Tahoka High school was the first West Texas school to make entries in the Snyder Invitational Track and Field Meet that will be held here Saturday March 8th. Thirty West Texas Class A and B schools have been invited and all students now in school will be eligible for entry in this meet which is hoped to bring more than 200 entries. Principal W. N. Corry is in charge of the meet and will engage competent out-of-town officials for the track and field events.

Frogs to Boast Fast Relay Team

FORT WORTH, Feb. 15. (AP)—Texas Christian University promises to have a dash relay team this spring that will be hard to match in the Southwest.

In addition to Cy Leland, one of the nation's leading sprinters, the Frog team will include "Red" Oliver, Hubert Dennis, Gordon Copeland and Kee Buckley. The four are only a split second slower than Leland.

Not only that, but all five will be in the Frog backfield when next football season rolls around. Oliver weighs 190 and Dennis 180.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 15. (AP)—Phil Scott, British heavyweight, was informed yesterday by Dr. Frank H. Davis, physician of the Miami Boxing commission, that he was in poor physical condition and would require hard work to fit himself for his fight with Jack Sharkey February 27, agreed with the diagnosis in part today.

"The only objection I have to the doctor's report is his statement that I have no coordination of mind and muscle. I'll prove otherwise on February 27.

"Don't fear, I'll be in condition and I'll win that fight. I'll get there by degrees and there won't be any need of halting in order not to grow stale as in the case with Sharkey."

Columbus Golfer Wins Florida Go

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Feb. 15 (AP)—R. W. Lee, veteran Columbus, O., amateur won the Ormond Beach golf championship here today when he defeated Duane Tower, Niagara Falls, N. Y., 3 and 1, in the 36-hole finals.

Tower who had been favored to win the tournament, got off to a bad start and never overcame it. When they went to lunch Lee was one up. He never was worse than even, reaching the afternoon turn tied. Coming home in three under fours, the 53-year-old Ohioan went to the 17th tee on the final round. Dornie two, and his par five there was good enough for the victory.

EXPORTS SHIP ONE

BEAUMONT Feb. 15. (AP)—The Exporters sold Pitcher Norman Glaser to Wilkesbarre of the New York-Pennsylvania league today. The sale price was not announced. Glaser came to Beaumont from San Antonio in a mid-winter trade which sent Tom Estell to the Indians.

TRINITY 24, ST. EDWARDS 20

AUSTIN, Feb. 15. (AP)—Stalwart sons of Trinity University slapped the slipping St. Edward's University cagers to the tune of 24 to 20 in a slow, loose game here tonight. Jack Fitzgibbons, diminutive Saint forward, scored nine of his team's points to take high point honors.

SAN MARCOS, Feb. 15. (AP)—The North Texas Teachers shoved themselves further down in the percentage column tonight, taking the last of a two-game basketball series 24 to 14.

Schmeling Agrees To Fight For Heavy Title In June

German Slugger Makes Peace With New York Comish

Maxie Ushers Self Back Into Picture In Cable To Muldoon; Championship Bout To Charity

BY EDWARD J. NEIL.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15. (AP)—With a stately gesture of forgiveness toward the New York State Athletic Commission, Max Schmeling announced himself today as ready and willing to furnish one-half of the competition for the world's heavyweight championship in the ring at the Polo Grounds next June.

Hibernating in Germany since his victory over Paulino Uzcudun and the bitter quarrels with the commission that followed the fight here last June, he ushered himself back into the picture in a cablegram to William Muldoon, aged cauliflower king. Max agreed with Muldoon's oft-published statements that the winner of the Jack Sharkey-Phil Scott tussle in Miami should fight him for the crown vacated by Gene Tunney. He said he would meet the designated gladiator June 27.

As matters stand now Schmeling is in dire disrepute with the solemn fathers. His license, along with that of his manager of choice, Joe Jacobs, was revoked by the commission when he refused to have anything more to do with his German pilot Arthur Buelow and repudiated a contract made for a bout with Phil Scott.

While recognizing Schmeling's standing among the heavyweights the commission insisted that the Teuton must fight Scott or else be declared null and void forever within the cauliflower confines of New York state. A match between Schmeling and Sharkey to be promoted by the Garden outside New York State in violation of this command was quickly abandoned when the Garden was threatened with indefinite suspension by the commission. Every edict of the commission regarding Schmeling has indicated that the German must be broken to halter here or remain inactive.

However, the final bout for the title will be staged under the auspices of charity. And the greatest of all influences in boxing circles happens to be charity.

There is peace in Brooklyn, the Robinson-McKeever quarrel having been patched up for at least two years. Now the town can turn seriously to the business of hating the New York Giants.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

By WILLIAM BRAUCHER

SERUM FOR A SICK FIGHT

Shakespeare jotted down a note or two about disease desperate grown by desperate remedies being relieved. This is borne out in modern medical science when serums ordinarily poisonous are injected to counteract infections. Which brings us right down to the subject of the next heavyweight brawl of the season, as the Sharkey-Scott affair in Miami is laughingly called.

Philip Scott went on the air the other night with some brutal words about "that Boston Polack." The speech was of a highly streptococcic nature. The customers may even reach the broad inference, after hearing Phil's harsh words, that this is to be one of those things known to the trade as "grudge" fights. And if that isn't a desperate enough remedy for a poisoned fight, gentle reader, what is?

WHY, SUCH WORDS!

The Swooning Swan suddenly has become a fighting cock. That is, if you believe in words. But there are so many words! Mr. Webster went around picking them up here and there and found one day that he had a great big book full of them. Mr. Roget took Mr. Webster's words and classified them in families, putting the word funny in its place along with comical, laughable, mirth-provoking and a couple of hundred others that carry the same meaning. You can buy a dictionary and a thesaurus at a very reasonable figure and whenever you feel lonesome for such words as terror, terrible, awful, frightful, or cruel, punishing, mean, vicious—just go to your books and there they are. You may even find some better words than the heavyweights use, even though Phil Scott does say "Cheerio."

IT LEAVES US CHILLED

The heat is being applied, but we're becoming cold-blooded. There have been too many discrepancies in the exposition of the manly art of self-defense as conducted by the New York State Boxing commission. Johnny Risko was to have pushed over Victorio Campolo, the Big Horse from the Argentine, early in February at Madison Square Garden. The commission suddenly discovered that Risko was too fragile and small for such big fellows as the Horse.

The fight was banned, and a match for Risko with another heavyweight substituted. Risko and Danny Dunn demurred, asking for Campolo or the next best bet, nothing. After a couple of gales of words had been pushed through this hat and that, it was decided that maybe Risko had grown quite a bit since a month ago when he met Tuffy Griffiths in New York and that maybe after all he was quite a good-sized boy now. The upshot was that Risko and Campolo have been matched as a semi-windup to the Scott-Sharkey thing in Florida, February 27. Risko was too small to meet Campolo in Madison Square Garden. He is not too small to meet him in Miami. It's small beer, if you ask us.

The longest elephant tusks of which there is authentic record are 11 feet 5 inches in length and the pair weigh 292 pounds. They are now in the possession of the New York Zoological Society.

Babe Has No Worries Over Contract Situation With Yankees; Thinks Club Will Treat Him Fair As In The Past

Bambino In Splendid Physical Condition; Plays Daily Round Of Golf On Florida Course

By ALAN J. GOULD.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 15. (AP)—If the highest salaried holdout in baseball is worried about the situation in any respect he did not manifest it in the course of an 18-hole tour of the Jungle Club links with this observer today.

Babe Ruth is more concerned over a tendency to push his wood shots with a new set of clubs he obtained from a Miami Beach professional than he is, apparently over the failure to sign a contract yet with the New York Yankees for 1930.

It is doubtful whether the middle of February, in advance of major league season, has found Babe Ruth in any better physical condition than he is today.

He is tanned to an olive brown at least 18, usually 36 holes of golf daily; his waist line is reduced to no more than a 40, possibly a sylph-like 38; his weight is around 222, three pounds less than it was when he started training at this time in 1928 and eight pounds under the figure that this correspondent's chart shows for the year 1926.

Expects To Be In Line

"When do you expect to be swinging a bat for the first time?" the Babe was asked.

"March third," he replied.

That is the date when the Yanks will romp out for their first workout under the new management of Bob Shawkey.

If there is any doubt that Babe Ruth will be playing baseball as usual, up to the customary standard, it may as well be dissipated at this time. Contract difficulties or no contract difficulties, exhibition or no exhibition games, $75,000 or $85,000, Babe Ruth will be taking his regular turn at bat for the New York club again—and for some years to come.

"I have had my say on the subject," observed the Babe today, regarding his contract. "I don't want to discuss the situation, except to say that I expect to play baseball. You can draw your own conclusions from that. The New York club has always treated me fair and I think we will continue to get along all right."

The expectation is that either Colonel Jacob Ruppert, the club owner, or E. G. Barrow, the secretary and business manager, or both, will come down to St. Petersburg prior to the opening of spring training to settle the salary issue with Ruth.

AN OLD TIMER'S SCRAP BOOK

WHEN GOTCH WRESTLED "PACK-SADDLE" WITH AN INDIAN AT PENDLETON

Remember back in 1909 and early in 1910, when Jeffries, Frank Gotch and a lot of other fight and wrestling notables made their famous barnstorming trip? That did a lot to smoke up interest in the Jeffries-Johnson fight at Reno.

The late Charley Ferguson, one of the prime movers in starting the great Pendleton Roundup, once told me of the show in that thriving eastern Oregon town.

It was the job of the advance men to pick up some local light to meet Jeffries or to wrestle Gotch for the world's championship.

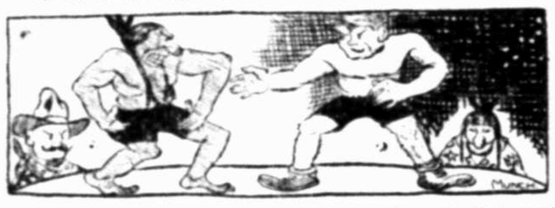

"The Indians out on the Umatilla Reservation do some wrestling, and there's one big guy you might get," the agents were told. The Indian agreed. Pendleton and vicinity were plastered with paper about the championship match.

• • • •

Cowboys, Indians and townspeople crowded the hall. Jeff and the others went through their paces. Gotch was introduced. He flung a couple of wrestling partners around the ring.

The Indian was called to the ring. He demurred.

"Me no wrestle that way—me wrestle pack-saddle," he said.

"I don't know what pack-saddle is—but we'll wrestle that way," said Gotch. The Indian agreed and stripped.

They stepped into the center of the ring. Gotch watched big-eyed, with mouth agape, as the big redskin began chanting some Indian song, slapping his hands on his knees and thighs.

Suddenly he reached out with a lightning-like movement, grabbed the puzzled Gotch and threw him in the air and over his shoulder. Gotch landed on his neck behind the Indian.

The crowd roared—and those laughing the hardest were the members of the barnstorming party. Jeff was doubled up.

Gotch, furious, got to his feet, rushed at the Indian and threw him into the orchestra pit.

"That's enough. I throw you, you throw me," said the Indian as he left with his clothes.

"And he always insisted he was 'half-champion,'" said Ferguson.

Track Feud Between Cy Leland And Jack Elder May Be Resumed On March 15 At Southwestern Exposition Meet

Special Invitation And Challenge To Be Sent By Frog Speedster To Notre Cinder Star

FORT WORTH, Feb. 15. (AP)—The track feud between Cy Leland, Texas Christian University flash and Jack Elder, Notre Dame speedster, may be resumed during the running of the eighth annual Southwestern Exposition track and field meet here, March 15. Leland traveled more than 3,000 miles to New York to play Elder's game on the indoor tracks recently, and now the "Texas Express" may get a chance to match his speed against the Mick star over the 100 yard distance on an outdoor track.

In the Millrose games at Madison Square Garden, February 3, Leland ran for the first time on an indoor track against Elder. He finished third over the sixty-yard distance. Leland, a slow starter, is at a disadvantage over the short routes and he is anxious to get another crack at Elder.

A special invitation and challenge from Leland will be sent to Elder. Should Elder accept the invitation and challenge, it will be the first time this year that the two crack sprinters will meet on an outdoor path. Leland showed his heels to Elder in the National Intercollegiate track meet in 1929, only time that the pair ever competed against each other over 100 yards in an outdoor meet.

Suits For $120,000 Echo Lighted "Smoke"

DALLAS, Feb. 15. (AP)—The presence of a lighted cigarette on a street car here has resulted in the filing of suits for $120,000 damages against the Dallas Railway and Terminal company.

Z. W. Anderson, one of the plaintiffs, said that he and E. C. Gray and George C. Garrett, the other plaintiffs, boarded a street car October 27. Anderson claimed that because of a lighted cigarette he was struck and abused by the operator of the car and he and his companions were arrested and held in jail overnight.

Anderson filed suit for $50,000 and Garrett for $20,000. Gray, who said that he contracted rheumatism because of his stay in jail, brought suit for $50,000.

Scotland has a shortage of teachers.

Kiki, Cubs Agree

Hazen S. (Kiki) Cuyler stopped playing basketball at Pontiac, Mich., long enough to sign a contract which assures that he will roam the Chicago Cub outfield for the next two years.

Barney Brady, Margaret Trigg, Busiest Seniors

"I wouldn't have time for so many activities if the clubs met all the time or if the athletics extended throughout the whole year," said Barney Brady, senior in the School of Engineering, who belongs to six clubs, works on the staff of the La Ventana, school annual, and plays tennis.

Brady, whose home is in Amarillo, is to receive a degree in bachelor of science in architecture this spring. He has attended Tech five years, during which time he has taken all of his work in the School of Engineering. According to records in the La Ventana office, he has more activities other than schoolwork, of any senior in school. He has held offices as vice-president of the Engineering Society, of the Amarillo club and at present is president of the Architectural Society.

A list of his activities includes: Engineering Society, Architectural Society, Los Gauchos, Y. M. C. A., Amarillo Club, Ten Tech Peppers, La Ventana staff and tennis.

Margaret Trigg, Lubbock, has the greatest number of activities among the girls. She is a senior in the School of Liberal Arts and is seeking a bachelor of arts degree in English. She is secretary and treasurer of the Students Council, a member of the Woman's Forum, of the Torcador staff, Y. W. C. A. council and the La Ventana staff.

The files in the office of the La Ventana show that one student considers his school work as an activity for he signed it that way on the questionaire.

Caprock Merchants Association Formed At Gathering Of Representatives From Six Towns

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SPUR, Feb. 15.—At a gathering of representatives from six towns in this section here Friday night, the Caprock Merchants Minute Men association was formed with Geo Springer, of Roaring Springs, as president. S. H. Twaddell, of Spur, was named secretary.

The towns included in the organization were Matador, Roaring Springs, Jayton, Afton, Dickens and Spur.

A membership committee was named by the president to include Geo. S. Link, of Spur; O. L. Hale, of Dickens, and Byron Haney, of Afton. An advertising committee for the association also was named composed of S. H. Twaddell and Geo. S. Link.

Next meeting of the association will be held on February 20 when plans will be perfected.

It was stated at the meeting that main purpose of the organization was the development of the independent merchant by introducing better buying methods and better selling methods in order to meet outside competition.

Wholesalers Will Consider "Chains"

DALLAS, Feb. 15. (AP)—The part played by chain stores in distribution of food served in Texas homes will occupy a large part of the program for the annual convention of the Texas Wholesale Grocers' association which meets here Feb. 19 and 20, Sam Hanna secretary announced.

J. M. Radford, Abilene, will talk on "Chain Stores"; C. Y. Early, Brownwood, will discuss radio educational work; and other Texans on the program are A. F. Sledge, Tyler, who will discuss truck transportation and A. A. Glover of San Angelo, who will talk on "Unearned Discounts."

Representatives of both the United States Department of Commerce and the State Health Department will address the convention when it is opened at the Adolphus hotel on Feb. 19 by A. H. Berry, Mexia.

SANITATION STUDIED

AUSTIN, Feb. 15. (AP)—A Ysunza, sanitary engineer of the city of Vera Cruz, Mexico, has returned to his home after completing a two weeks' study of sanitation work in Texas. He attended the Sanitarian's short course at Abilene. He will return later with a delegation of Mexicans to attend the American Public Health convention in Fort Worth.

Youth Offered Opportunities In All Branches Of Work, Lubbock Business Men Declare; Training Is Necessity

By SUTTON CHRISTIAN
Avalanche-Journal Staff.

TWO or three decades ago America, with the door to opportunity partly open, started pushing forward on the latch and has today succeeded in creating a vast entrance for those equipped to cope with the multitudinous offerings of economic problems, according to Lubbock business who compare their yesteryears with today.

Most of those who hold positions of importance in this city agree with Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, who recently said that youth today has greater opportunities than when he was a young man.

Training Profitable.

"Trained minds have innumerable avenues today for entering into profitable and serviceable professions," says Judge Homer L. Pharr, who presides over 72nd district court. "No longer than a score of years ago very little preparation was necessary for one to enter most of the major professions; consequently, there were few who reached the zenith of success. Today, however, educational facilities have been greatly increased and more time is necessary for professional equipment, with the result that a greater portion of business men succeed."

C. E. Maedgen, president of the Lubbock National Bank, expresses the opinion that the banking industry offers more opportunities for the youth of today who is a student of finance than were evident when he was in his twenties. "The economic structure of the Nation is more complex today," he said. "For that reason thorough business training and application to work are almost essential."

R. J. Murray, prominent realtor and president of the Lubbock Board of City Development, spoke with positive intonation when he said that avenues for success have increased vastly during my lifetime. Opportunities are limitless for the present generation" he continued. "Aviation, radio, automobile, electricity, oil, agriculture are subjects which suggest fields for further development. Aviation, for instance, is but an infant industry. The youth of today must furnish the manpower.

"The basic requirements of education and years of experience are the prerequisites for success."

Colleges Are Factor

"The fact that enrollment in colleges of America has increased tenfold since Mr. Schwab was a young man should prove that opportunities have multiplied," says Dr. Paul W. Horn, president of Texas Technological college. "The young man or the young woman of today who seeks an education finds fewer obstacles as compared with those encountered during the youth of Mr. Schwab."

"The world today is seeking efficiency and intelligence to carry on its business," says O. L. Slaton, president of the First National Bank. "The young man who is adequately prepared will find unlimited outlets for his ability."

"Each time an industry expands and each time a new industry is created there are additional opportunities for young men," says B. Sherrod, former president of the Lubbock Board of City Development. "A casual study of industrial development within recent years should prove conclusively that youth has vast possibilities."

"The engineering profession is especially filled with multiplied opportunities at present," says Guy R. Johnston, who was recently appointed local resident engineer for the State Highway department. "In virtually every business of the world the engineer might be found. Reviewing the past, I am in hearty accord with the feeling that the present generation has more facilities with which to shape its future."

SWING IN LINE WITH 1930

MAKE 1930 A BANNER YEAR

LET'S ALL PULL TOGETHER!

Nineteen-thirty, fresh as the scent of morning dew, virile as the youth just entering manhood, is unfolding before us, day by day.

As each sun dawns, as each new business day is ushered into being, Nineteen-thirty, the NEW year untrammeled by the dogma of tradition, rolls along inviting sons of courage to greater success.

The opening of a new decade in a world of business possibilities never yet equalled, Nineteen-thirty beckons—even challenges—us to greater triumphs. Its opportunities are myriad as its drums and bugles summon recruits to do and dare on the battle fields of commerce, industry and invention.

Nineteen-thirty will be a GOOD year for those who make it good.

It will bring business to those who unceasingly seek it—it will bring financial gain to those who deserve it.

What are YOU going to make of Nineteen-thirty?

Will you meet it with energy, with optimism and with an unquenchable desire to succeed?

Will you meet it with service, with judgment and with effort?

If you do, Nineteen-thirty will bring prosperity. At its close will be found the horn of plenty in the many lines of endeavor toward which man turns his hands and mind.

The year has just begun. Won't YOU join with US in helping make it a banner year in business and in progress?

Let's go!

How Love Affects Your Happiness

Professor Walter B. Pitkin of Columbia has dissected hundreds of romances in a period of 20 years, and the results of his studies throw some interesting light on distinctive classes of women who are unaffected, made miserable, or made happy by their adventures in love

Her poetry tells of reckless love . . . yet Edna St. Vincent Millay leads a conservative, restrained life. . . . What mental processes lie behind this strange contrast?

by

ELEANOR EARLY

Peggy Hopkins and-so-forth Joyce. . . . She has wedded early and often, yet Prof. Pitkin suggests that she may well be comparatively cold. . . . He'd like to understand her mental processes.

Burned out her young life in a white furnace of emotions. . . . That Jeanne Eagels, stage and movie star, was not really attracted to men, but "forced" her emotions, is Prof. Pitkin's theory. She is shown with Reginald Owen in an emotional scene from "The Letter."

"No love affair ever upset her as much as a bad cold." That's the view of somebody admitted by Rita Childe Dorr, feminist. There are many such women, Prof. Pitkin avers.

WALTER B. PITKIN, distinguished professor at Columbia University, would like very much to meet Peggy Hopkins Joyce and Edna St. Vincent Millay.

Peggy, as everybody knows, has a perfect passion for husbands. . . . Miss Millay writes exquisite verse about Reckles. Loving. . . . And the Professor is the man who writes about Happiness.

Now, romantic love has a great deal to do with happiness. And Pitkin wants to get the facts from authoritative and well-known sources.

His steel files are crammed with typed analyses of a thousand romances. The loves of Cleopatra, and Lucretia Borgia. Of Catherine the Great, and Ninon de Lenclos. The famous affinities of history are there—the mistresses of kings—and the adored of poets.

For 20 years, the Professor has been gathering his statistics. From 1910 to 1920 he delved into history, and studied the immortal romances of the ages.

Since 1920, he has devoted himself to contemporary studies. He has analyzed the marriages of his friends. Undergraduate love affairs at Columbia have furnished him with much material. But there is one thing Mr. Pitkin lacks. He would like to augment his studies with facts furnished by famous living romanticists. Peggy Hopkins Joyce, for instance, and Miss Millay.

HE HAS, of course, some contemporary material. Rita Childe Dorr, the great feminist, says that no love affair ever upset her as much as a bad cold. Sister feminists have made similar assertions. But what the Professor wants is the other side of the picture. He wants to understand women to whom love is infinitely more than any other experience in life.

A few months ago, Professor Pitkin published a surprising book called "The Psychology of Happiness."

"For the first time in the career of mankind," declared the Professor, "happiness is coming within the reach of millions of people."

Now, of course, everybody wants to be happy, so Professor Pitkin's work attracted a great deal of attention.

There were, however, a number of people who imagined the Professor had a recipe for joy.

They were, for the most part, people who had been disappointed in love. And, when they read the book, they were surprised to find very little in it about love.

Some of them wrote Professor Pitkin, asking how he happened to overlook so important a subject. And the Professor replied in this fashion:

"My Dear Madam:

"The Love Life and its Effect Upon Happiness is a volume in itself. Not only a volume, Madame. But a great, huge library. It is a subject so vast and so important, that I doubt if it can be ever adequately treated.

"I mean, however, to publish the first attempt at an exposition of the subject. It is something I have had in mind for 20 years. During that time I have dissected hundreds of romances, and made clinical notes of a thousand love cases. . . ."

Among the unfinished clinical reports in the Professor's files are notes on The Life and Loves of Jeanne Eagels, who died while Pitkin was accumulating his facts.

NOW, everybody who knew Miss Eagels believed her to be a passionate woman, given to wild outbursts of love, hatred, and anger. She died tragically at the very height of her great dramatic success. Those who knew her best thought that she was driven to opiates, in order to tranquilize her tempestuous life. To soothe and calm her frenzied nerves.

"As a matter of fact," declares Professor Pitkin, "Miss Eagels had what psychologists call a 'feeble-libido.' Despite apparent evidence to the contrary, she did not care for either men, nor love. And it was always an ordeal for her to simulate an interest in emotional things. Her case is one of the most pitiful I have studied. A study of Jeanne Eagels' love life would be a tragic chapter. But it is a chapter that I shall never write."

As for Peggy Hopkins Joyce, "I wonder," says the Professor, "what love does mean to Peggy? Has she a perfectly enormous capacity for loving? Or is she a charming adventuress, whose head rules her heart completely? I wish she could bring herself to tell me the truth about her love life. It would be a fascinating psychological study."

But the trouble is that women do not want to tell the truth about a subject so extremely personal.

There is, for instance, a woman in New York whose name is known from coast to coast. She is a middle-aged widow, of great personal charm and enormous fortune. She happens to be a friend of Mr. and Mrs. Pitkin, and she volunteered to tell the story of her life, in order to furnish certain material the Professor lacked.

"In order to make clear some peculiarities of her own happiness, I asked a few simple questions in line with her own remarks," declares Pitkin. "And she became highly indignant. Furious, in fact. She was insulted, she said. She would never speak to me again. I was a brute, and a cad. . . . And so the case was lost."

RITA CHILDE DORR, however, is a very frank lady. One, perhaps, in a million.

"We put women of Mrs. Dorr's type in what we call the Neutral class," explains the Professor. "According to her own admission, love means no more to her than a bad cold. Well, happiness, for a woman like that, resolves itself into what you might call a case of sniffles.

"Such women—and there are thousands of them—continue to marry, nevertheless. And that is rather strange. Because, really, marriage means very little to them, one way or the other. I should not say it was acutely repugnant. They are simply indifferent to romantic love.

"Most radical feminists are like Mrs. Dorr. I know several very famous women who are in the Neutral class. But Mrs. Dorr is the only one who admits it.

"Such women are rather lucky. In fact, in a certain sense, I should say they were extremely lucky. They can devote themselves wholeheartedly to 'other pursuits.' And, if you eliminate romance from your life, you have more time of course, for other things.

"The type opposite to Mrs. Dorr's sisterhood is distinctly out of luck. There are thousands of women of a completely opposite nature. They can't help themselves. You can cure sex with legislation. And a woman doesn't lose desire behind the bars.

"SEX is one of those things you can't change. There's no help for the way we feel. You might as well try to change long legs as alter your natural desires. You can control them, of course. But you can't change them.

"People usually change profoundly from the years just before marriage to a two-year period afterward. But it is not a change that can be controlled. For instance, a girl might be warmly loving during the first two years of her marriage. And then, suddenly—without any explicable reason—she may become cold as ice.

"These strange changes are the causes of most divorces. Unfortunately nothing can be done to remedy the situation.

"Some time, of course, we will know more about glands than we do now. Our life love is regulated by our glands. But, until we learn how to control those glands, we are more or less helpless. Divorce is an unfortunate way out. Self-control is the important factor. But any solution that solves the problem will prove to be the right solution.

"Women change more than men. And they have greater difficulty in adjusting a slightly unsatisfactory love condition than men have. If men find love slightly unsatisfactory, they can forget it. But women, being greater romanticists, suffer more keenly. That is an absolute physiological fact. And it does not prove that women are neurotic, or unreasonable. They are like that, and they cannot help it.

A student of life and love. . . . Prof. Walter B. Pitkin of Columbia University . . . wants to add living experiences to his studies of the loves of the dead.

"PEOPLE differ more in sexuality, and their attitude toward love, than in other human traits. Take Rita Childe Dorr again. Her attitude toward love is astonishingly superficial.

"But there is a genuine physiological difference between Mrs. Dorr and a woman like Edna St. Vincent Millay. The physiological difference makes an emotional difference that places them as far apart as the poles.

"Mrs. Dorr, for instance, would be utterly incapable of writing a thing like this:

"'What lips my lips have kissed, and where, and why,
I have forgotten, and what arms have lain
Under my head till morning . . .'

"But Edna Millay, herself impeccably lovely, has written a great deal of verse as reckless.

"Now, Miss Millay is happily married to a most conservative sort of chap, who worships her devoutly. She is, I hear, a rather conventional person. A charming, exquisite girl—dainty and small, like a Dresden doll.

"Her mental processes, if anyone could ever get at them, would be absolutely fascinating. One wonders how—in the life of such a girl—there came the power to write such verse. Now, Rita Childe Dorr could not write similar things for a million dollars. She is utterly incapable of contemplating love in terms of abandon.

"AND now consider Miss Joyce again. Unlike Miss Millay, Peggy cannot express herself in verse. But she goes about, with charming sang froid, fascinating men. And frequently marrying them. Her love life is perfectly obvious, strenuous, and fearless.

"But, of course, nobody knows Peggy's secrets. Is she really capable of happily sustaining her varied amours?

"Or are there times, when she would like never to have to look at a man again? Is she surfeited with love? Or is she one of those women who must always love and be loved?

"There are women like that. Ninon de Lenclos, the celebrated French beauty, had a violent love affair when she was 80. Catherine II, Empress of Russia, had a number of lovers after she was old enough to be a grandmother. Age usually tempers love. But there are frequently people who remain ardently emotional throughout life.

"The only way we can understand the real truth of this Love Business, with all its misery and its ecstacy, is through authentic autobiographical records.

"George Sand was a frank woman, and she had no reticences. Her published love letters reveal her Love Life honestly enough. But the trouble—from a psychologist's point of view—is that these young women, whose confessions are public property, never knew the important things to tell. They tell various aspects of their romances. But they don't seem, ever, to get to the psychological bottom of things.

"Now if I can only persuade a few living women to submit to my questions, I shall be able to write a book on 'Love and Happiness' that will set the whole world talking."

MEANTIME, Professor Pitkin has a few ideas of love and happiness.

"To find happiness," he directs, "you must look upon the art of living as the greatest, noblest, and hardest of all arts.

"Beware of thinking that you can live always on one high level of pleasure. As with everything else, so with happiness. Variety is its spice, and fluctuation a necessity.

"If you find yourself less happy than usual, eat less, sleep more, don't worry. Those simple things usually do the trick."

STUDY THIS AD CAREFULLY

For some reason you can not sell home property in the city. You think your home is worth $7,000 or $8,000 and you try to sell it. You have to take $4,000 or $5,000 or keep it unless location is exceptional. Farm land is cheaper than it will ever be again, and a decent crop at fair prices will send it up $10 per acre. Do you have clear city property? The quickest way to get your value out of it is to trade it to our client for his Hockley county land. It is 12 miles north of Levelland in fine school district, with small debt of $12.78 per acre, long terms, 6 per cent, no blue weeds, not leased, $30 per acre. Your golden opportunity to unload. If you have clear stuff see us. Give you a mighty good trade.

Cotton Reacts; Stocks Take Decline

Reactions Follow Advances On Firm Liverpool Cables

General Market Closes At Net Advances And Barely Steady; Some Commission House Buying Reported

NEW YORK, Feb. 15. (AP)—After advancing in response to the lively firm Liverpool cables, cotton reacted partially today under week-end realizing or liquidation. May sold to 16.16 during the first few minutes, broke to 16.07, or within four points of yesterday's closing quotations, and closed at 16.08. The general market closed barely steady at net advances of 3 to 7 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 7 to 10 points with active months showing net gains of 12 to 14 points during the early trading on covering and trade buying. Some commission house buying was also reported on the firmer showing of Liverpool and reports of a better tone in the cotton goods situation. March sold up to 19 and October to 16.31, while May at 16.16 sold within 2 points of the high price of the week.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 138,061 bales against 159,958 last year.

Cotton Comparatively Quiet On Saturday

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 15. (AP) — Cotton was comparatively quiet today. Price fluctuations were narrow and influenced mainly by evening up for over the week-end, although the start there was a bulge owing to much better Liverpool cables after advancing 7 to 11 points at the start in sympathy with the foreign market, prices eased 5 to 9 points on some week-end realizing and the market closed a shade above the lows at a moderate net gain. May after trading up to 15.90 a gain of 10 points net up for the day. The Liverpool cables came in 4 to 6 points better than due and the trade here showed gains of 6 to 8 points. The market improved mainly on the foreign advices until March traded at 15.65 and July at 15.97 or 7 to 11 points above the previous close.

New High Prices of Season for Hogs Feature Livestock Trade Last Week

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 15. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Livestock trade around the 11-market circuit this week was featured by new high prices for the season on hogs, material advances on most classes of cattle and a jump in values on lambs to the lowest levels in nine years. Cattle receipts 157,650, or 7,000 heavier than last week and the corresponding period a year ago. Fed steers and yearlings unevenly 25 to 75c higher. Fat cows shared in the upturn but at several markets closing trade was slow with a weak undertone prevailing. Country demand for replacement stock widened and prices ruled firm to higher.

Hog offerings 666,500 as compared with 648,126 last week and 706,694 a year ago. Prices 10 to 45c higer than a week ago. St. Louis had a practical late top of 11.40 but on Friday the week's high spot 11.45 was realized. Lighter weight scaling 230 pounds down moved to the best advantage.

The sheep supply approximated 332,936, an increase of 8,500 over last week and 42,000 heavier than the same week a year ago. Fat lambs were tendered a jolt of 50c to $1.00, while matured classes of sheep at some centers were 50c lower.

Closing Price on Wheat Unsettled

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN
Associated Press Market Editor.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15. (AP)—Plenty of wheat for sale here today on all hard spots proved to be more of a weight on values than buyers were prepared for. Export business in wheat from North America was almost at a halt, totalling only 500,000 bushels.

Chicago closing prices on wheat were unsettled at but little above the day's cotton level. 7-8 to 1 1-4c a bushel below yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-2c to 3-4c down, oats 1-4c to 1-2c off, and provisions 1-2c to 3-4c decline to 7c advance.

Transient rallies in Chicago wheat values today came principally through buying on rather numerous standing orders to take wheat offered whenever the market here declined to $1.30 a bushel, May delivery. These orders were more or less associated with the fact that the Federal Farm Board loan basis of $1.18 for No. 2 hard wheat here rendered purchases of May comparatively attractive.

Jail, Court

C. Denton and N. A. Payne were of one mind—that need exists for an increased capacity at both the jail and the courthouse.

To erect a new jail, as a solution of that problem, would not give more room in the courthouse. Recently, when there were more than 40 prisoners in jail, all crowded together, negroes and whites, men and women, two cases of smallpox were reported as prevalent.

Statutes Violated.

State statutes declare that all county jails shall provide separation of whites and blacks, of men and women, of juveniles and of the insane. Lubbock county's bastile has no such divisions.

As to the courthouse, every office and every courtroom is not only crowded, but inadequate to meet present needs. Because of lack of space for the county library, a portion of the City hall has been rented to house most of the books owned by the county. The City hall is over-crowded and demand is being made for the space occupied by the library.

Room Is Needed.

The county home and demonstration agents are officed in one of the corridors on the ground floor of the courthouse. Neither has sufficient room.

The county is compelled to rent office space outside the courthouse for the resident engineer, sent here by the State Highway department to superintend all of the work necessary in paving highways through the county, as a result of the bond election held last December.

There are three courtrooms, while there are as many as four and five courts in session at the same time. The constable and county attorney are officing together. The county auditor and county treasurer are compelled to divide crowded office space.

Clerk's Office Crowded.

The county clerk does not have half enough room, vaults for deed records being crammed to overflowing. One justice of the peace is occupying a side room needed by the sheriff's department. Another justice of the peace is housed in a "hole in the wall."

There is no grand jury room. When both district courts are in session the grand jury is in the way of the district attorney, whose office they utilize. Adequate consultation room is unavailable, for attorneys during trials, they being compelled to use the district clerk's vault and to thus interfere with efficiency of that office.

Judge Minus Office.

When the county court is in session, the judge is minus an office, it being used for a jury room.

The present courthouse was built in 1916-17, the building costing $100,000 and equipment amounting to about $40,000.

A jail could be built which would be adequate to meet present and future needs, but in the course of just a short period, the county would be compelled to build a new courthouse and the ultimate cost would, therefore, be considerably greater.

With the construction of a criminal courts building, as is being considered, a saving would be made. Suggested plan calls for the first story to be half basement, with the county library, justice offices, county and home demonstration agents. The second floor would house the necessary court rooms, offices for the county attorney, district attorney, county and two district judges.

Provisions To Be Made.

The third floor would house criminal courts, sheriff's offices and jail. Provision would be made for the addition of two or more stories, as needed by growth of the county.

State laws, pertaining to county buildings, restrict the tax rate in such a manner than it can not be more than 80 cents. This county's rate last year was 80 cents. This year it has been reduced to 75 cents. The commissioners are faced with the problem of paying off bonds, if such be voted, within the limits of the 80 cent tax rate. The opinion has been expressed that this could easily be done, if the funds necessary are in the neighborhood of the suggested $250,000 bond issue asked for in the petition now on files before the commissioners' court.

Action on the call, as requested by the petition, is being deferred until conferences with architects can reveal what the cost of a building designed to fill the needs of Lubbock county might be.

Declines Follow Maneuvering For Boost Last Week

Price Of Ninety Leading Shares Reduced To Level Of Week Ago; Net Gains Shown By Industrials

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 15. (AP)—The stock market turned emphatically downward today, closing a week of rather laborious maneuvering toward higher levels.

The decline, running from 2 to 6 points in more than a score of leading shares, reduced the price of index of 90 leading stocks to approximately the level of a week ago. The bullish operations of the week have been slightly selective, and several leading utilities and industrials, closed the week with large net gains.

Cheerful Week-End

The downturn was in the face of the most cheerful week-end industrial and trade reviews in several weeks.

Standard of New Jersey appeared to have won its crude oil price cutting war in the Mid-Continent and Texas fields today as more companies fell into line with the lower prices, namely Prairie and Ohio oil. Although this movement has stirred up considerable ill-feeling on the part of the smaller producers, it is obviously designed as a drastic remedy for the over-production problem.

Under Pressure

U. S. Steel, yesterday's leader, was under pressure, closing off more than 3 points.

Railway equipments were bid up in response to increasing orders. Lima locomotive was a strong spot gaining more than 5 points, then slipping back a couple from the top.

Required to Sign

The clerk said Mrs. Long came to the store Sept. 4 "just like any other customer" and said she wanted a bit of poison to kill "an old dog." Rhodes said he brought her the book which purchasers of such poisons are required to sign.

"She didn't put anything on it at first," he said. "I asked her the second time and she wrote 'Mrs. J. D. Moore.'

"Is that her?" an attorney asked.

"Yes, that's the lady."

Henry Kahn, Houston, defense attorney, parried with Rhodes, adducting that the clerk had never seen the woman before that day. Kahn shouted at him: "You still want to identify her positively?"

"She's just the lady who bought it. It's immaterial to me," he replied.

Nine Witnesses Called

Nine witnesses before Rhodes had offered the state's case—the doctor who watched Long's death throes, persons who heard his dying statement, a woman who witnessed Mrs. Long's reaction, the chemist who found poison in Long's viscera, and, finally, Pat Smith, the red-haired freckled face boy who told of an affair with a woman more than twice his age, to which he was held under threat of death.

Lawyers for the defense would not intimate what they would plead. It was reported that an alibi would be offered, but this report could not be substantiated. They said Mrs. Long would be put on the stand.

Plaintiffs deny their alleged guilt and state they have been damaged in the sum of $10,000 actual and $5,000 exemplary.

Action of the union in expelling and fining the two men and the suit, filed by the pair, came as a result of a recent disagreement between the Lubbock Typographical Union No. 888 and The Slaton Slatonite, a weekly newspaper, following which that newspaper was denied further use of the union label. Both Brown and Tillman were employed as typographers on the Slatonite at the time of the disagreement and continue to hold their positions there.

MOODY PLANS TALKS

Prison Centralization To Be Carried To People

AUSTIN, Feb. 15. (AP)—Governor Moody will carry the question of prison centralization and rehabilitation to the people of Texas, he announced tonight.

The governor said he planned a series of radio speeches to begin next week in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio.

His announcement was taken indicative of his decision on his part to veto any plan that does not centralize near Austin.

Governor Moody declined to say definitely that he would call a fifth special session of the legislature to again consider his plan for a centralization near Austin or some other Central Texas point, but the intimation that he would do so was broad.

The present session will expire Tuesday.

Michigan Points Toward Nationwide Adoption of System Of Police-Radio; Every Sheriff In U. S. Will Have Set

By NEA Service

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 15.—Police and radio authorities of every state are eagerly awaiting trial of the first state-wide radio system of crime prevention and detection to be undertaken in the United States.

Michigan is to be the test state. Approval of the state administrative board for an appropriation of $100,000 by the state legislature is the final step toward organization of a state-wide radio-police system, the first in the country.

The program calls for what may be considered an extension of the system that has been so successful in Detroit, where a central low-wave broadcasting station transmits emergency calls to be picked up by the high-powered radio-equipped automobiles that cruise the city day and night. The Detroit system, which has been in operation since 1921, is credited with having brought a 54 per cent decrease in burglaries in that city and a 46 per cent increase in convictions.

It was at the suggestion of William P. Rutledge, Detroit police commissioner, that Governor Fred W. Green considered the advisability of instituting such a system over the state. As a result, last April, a bill was introduced in the legislature calling for a comprehensive state-wide radio-police system. The present law and $100,000 appropriation is the result.

Every Sheriff To Have Set

The provisions of this law call for:

1 — A central radio broadcasting station to be erected at East Lansing from which emergency police calls will be transmitted on a low wave-length.

2 — Distribution of low-wave radio receivers to every sheriff of the state, without cost, and sale of these sets to city police for the purpose of catching the emergency calls from the central station.

3 — Priority of all telephone and telegraph messages to the central broadcasting station, in order to speed up reports of crimes.

4 — A fleet of high-powered armored automobiles, mounted machine guns and carrying other necessary equipment, besides a radio receiver for each car, for use of the state police.

5 — A police training school designed for the co-operation of state and city police systems into an efficient crime fighting unit.

Detroit System Is Model

The success of the Detroit system instigated the movement for a state-wide system for Michigan. With this in operation, a crime detected in any part of the state will almost immediately be known throughout Michigan. All that will be required to make such an act known would be to wire or call direct to the East Lansing station, where the report would be put on the air immediately.

With every radio receiver set permanently for the purpose of listening to this central station only and always in operation, the report would be picked up immediately by every sheriff in the state, every highway police officer in a car that is radio-equipped and such city police that have the same sets.

As a result there would be little chance of a criminal's escape from the scene of his crime, for every means of exit would be watched. At present, it takes from one hour to half a day to notify outlying cities by telegraph and telephone of a criminal's escape, and even then such reports do not cover the territory as fully as would the proposed radio system.

The Detroit system has proven the merit of crime prevention and detection by radio by the swiftness with which violators have been caught. At times the police in a radio cruiser have actually caught men in the act of committing a crime, after having received a report from the central station.

Someone, seeing the men at work would call police headquarters and within three seconds his report would be on the air. A radio squad might be cruising close by the reported crime and so come upon the lawbreakers before they had a chance to escape. The average time for a cruiser to appear on the scene of a crime has been shown to be 80 seconds after the report was made.

Surpasses Former Methods

That compares favorably with the former system of calling police headquarters, having the report relayed to the nearest precinct station from which a squad would then rush out to the scene of the crime, or from which an officer on his beat would be flashed until he answered the call and got the report. This took many valuable minutes.

Other state police authorities therefore are keenly interested in watching Michigan far the next year or so, in order to see what effect its radio system will have on the prevention of crime and the apprehention of criminals. Its success no doubt will be a strong argument for adoption of a similar systems throughout the country.

Powerful radio-equipped automobiles, like that at top, today roam Detroit and may soon be seen on Michigan highways in a state-wide effort to reduce crime. The radio equipment is shown at left below. Back of the Detroit system is Police Commissioner William P. Rutledge, at lower right, while back of the Michigan system is Governor Fred W. Green, upper right.

SILVER TEA

Mrs. Payton Powers and Miss Pearl Laird, teachers of piano, expression and violin in the public schools, gave a silver tea at their studio in the High school building Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Valentine theme was used in decorating the studio and heart shaped programs were handed to the guests. Miss Polly Taylor poured tea throughout the program. The musical program was divided into four parts representing the four seasons of the year; under winter was "The Tea," a reading by May Tom Howell; "The Young Sheik," Pauline Hensley; Violin number "Gavotte," Powers Anderson; Spring musical reading, "Stay In Your Own Back Yard," Edna Mae Dillard; "The Way of Man," Bonnie Lawrence; Piano, "Sun Shine Waltz," trio; Piano "Criss Cross," Jewellene Chambers; Summer, "Aw Pshaw Ma," Cleta Fern Anderson; "I've Got The Mumps," Alma D. Roberson; Piano "Come Dance With Me," Alice Chamles; Autumn, "When I Ain't Got You," Madge Huckabay; Piano "Goblin Dance," Dorothy Abernathy; Violin, "Berceuse," Francis Oldham; Chorus, "The Old Apple Tree," four girls; "School March", the school Rhythmic band.

A large number of patronesses were present to receive the program, and the proceeds will be used to furnish the Fine Arts Studio.

BLUE BONNET CLUB

Mrs. J. E. Hair was hostess to the Blue Bonnet club on Thursday afternoon at her home in west Lorenzo with a prettily appointed forty-two party. Valentine was the favored motif in game appointment, with the suggestion appearing also in the refreshment plates. Mrs. Norval Dillard won high score in the games.

In a business session new officers were elected, Mrs. J. L. Gentry, president; Mrs. Roy Terrell, vice-president; Mrs. Oscar Thornton, secretary-treasurer.

Refreshments were served to Mesdames W. M. Balkemore, S. C. Simon, Floyd Pearson, Oscar Thornton, Y. W. Whitfield, J. L. Gentry, Clive Caddell, Norval Dillard, R. O. O'Rear, A. B. Terrell, Misses Nannie Marie Pearson and Lila Bell Fitzgerald.

REDUCTION IN WATER RATES

The city council in regular session Monday night reduced the minimum charge for water from $1.50 to $1.00 for the first 2,000 gallons used. The water system is in pretty good shape financially and this progressive move on the part of the council will perhaps encourage more people to use more water on their lawns during the summer for beautification purposes, and more people will tie in on the mains and use water at this reduction in minimum charge.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Standlee Bowers and little son, Bobbie, of Coleman, were week end visitors in the T. T. Easter home. They returned to Coleman Sunday accompanied by Miss Aleta Easter, who will visit there for several weeks.

Mrs. A. C. Whitacre and little son, Jerry, of Hale Center, are visitors this week in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harve Wampler.

Mrs. C. H. Oldham and Miss Lois Harkey, of Crosbyton, attended the Silver Tea Thursday afternoon at the Fine Arts Studio. Mrs. Oldham's small daughter, Francis, a pupil of Miss Laird's, appeared on the program.

Mrs. S. C. Ashley, of Clarendon arrived in Lorenzo this week and is a guest in the home of her son Rev. Aubrey Ashley.

Mrs. W. A. Shipley, accompanied by her son, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Shipley, of Floydada, were guests Saturday of her daughter, Mrs. W. P. Fullingim.

PARTY GIVEN BY W. M. S.

Something quite different from the usual party was given Friday evening in the J. E. Hair home in west Lorenzo when the Woman's Missionary society entertained with a benefit "Tacky Party." Big, little old and young came in costumes which brought forth shrieks of laughter as each new arrival made their appearance. Funds were made by fines which were assessed the men for such as wearing pressed pants having on a cravat, or a watch, while fines were assessed the women for having their faces "whitened," wearing finger rings or false curls and various other condition. Tricks by a magician, auctioneering off packages whose contents were unknown, games of rap and sundry other games furnished the evening's diversion and refreshments were served at the close of the entertainment.

Guests for this jolly affair were Messrs. and Mesdames Wm. Greare, J. T. Howell, P. D. Fullingim, F. L. Roy and A. B. Terrell, R. L. Bowman, Jack Agee, Roy Abell, L. N. Stevens, H. F. and H. C. MERRY BIDDERS CLUB POSTPONED

On account of the illness of one of the hostesses the Merry Bidders club meeting of Tuesday evening was postponed indefinitely. The club was to have met with Mesdames Gentry and O'Rear at the O'Rear home and the next meeting date will be announced later.

I-DEAL BRIDGE CLUB

In view of the approaching birthday of George Washington the patriotic theme was emphasized in every detail of house decorations when Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Hendrick graciously entertained members of the I-Deal Bridge club with a three table party at their home on Harrison Avenue Wednesday evening.

Flags, shields and hatchets were in evidence everywhere and the game tables carried out the color scheme of red, white and blue. Partners were matched by small hatchets, in different colors, attached to the tally cards. In the series of four games small prizes, wrapped in the patriotic colors, were given when a player scored game, and when one failed to make the bid he was penalized fifty points unless he performed a given stunt, but if the stunt were carried out as directed the fifty points was added to the score. Mrs. T. T. Howell was prettily favored for scoring game the most, and Mrs. R. L. Bowman for going set the most. Mrs. J. L. Suits, and Payton Powers were high score winners.

Lovely plates of cherry salad, rainbow sandwiches, Martha Washington pudding and coffee, with minature hatchets and flags as favors, were passed to the players, who were: Messrs. and Mesdames J. L. Suits, Roy Abell, J. T. Howell, Payton Powers, R. L. Bowman, T. G. Hendrick and Miss Pearl Laird.

DALLAS, Feb. 15. (AP)—Marvin P. McCoy, Dallas attorney, announced today he would enter the race for state treasurer.

PERMANENT WAVES
$3.00
Same as No. 2

Smart appearance is so easily achieved if only the right treatment in headdress is applied. If your hair looks better long and waved we'll tell you—if it's more becoming bobbed severely, we'll tell you, and we'll guarantee you'll look your best. We have something of the allure of Paris in the permanents we match to our client's personalities. Contour of face is aided immeasurably by coiffeur of head.

The wonderful Beauty Work received at Caroline's has made it necessary for us to equip another shoppe . . . it being impossible to take care of all of the business in the one shoppe.

We are offering to the First Lady in our new shoppe a free permanent wave, and all others following, at the Special Opening Low Price of $3.00 each for one week.

ALL WORK GUARANTEED
STANDARD SUPPLIES

Work that cannot be taken care of at No. 2 will be done at No. 1 at the same price as above quoted.

Many people have exceptional graces, but need individual coiffeurs to bring them out to utmost effectiveness. We have studied the art of headdress that flatter your particular type.

Tech To Sponsor Home Economics Contest March 24

Many Schools Of West Texas Will Compete In City

Sectionwide Contest To Be Entered By Girls Of 20 Schools At Least; Dean Weeks In Charge

TEXAS Technological college will sponsor its first Home Economics contest for high schools of this section on March 24th and plans are already being laid to make occasion an interesting and educational one, Miss Margaret Weeks, dean of the school of home economics at the college, announced yesterday.

"For some time, requests have come into the Tech school of home economics from this section of the state, asking and urging that such a contest be sponsored," Dean Weeks said, "and the program we are scheduling on March 24th comes as a direct response to these requests."

Letter Sent Out

A letter has been sent out to superintendents and home economics teachers in schools throughout this section, explaining the contest and 20 schools have already signified their intentions of entering, Dean Weeks reported. Schools interested thus far include those at Sudan, Rule, Wilson, Ft. Stockton, Amarillo, Ralls, Abernathy, Post, Lockney, Lamesa, Claude, Silverton, O'Donnell, Lubbock, Levelland, Lorenzo, Tulia, Happy, Slaton, Floydada, Dumas and Morton.

Includes Many Phases

The Tech home economics faculty plans to make the contest one which will include all phases of home economics work, Dean Weeks said, and the program will be based upon the course of study for Texas high schools, a bulletin issued by the State Department of Education.

Registration blanks and regulations governing the contest have been sent to school superintendents and home economics teachers.

Retail Merchants Choose Committee To Plan Conclave

Date Of Annual Meeting Is Expected To Be Set For Sometime Next Month; To Select Speaker

A committee to select a speaker, to arrange a program and to set the date for the annual meeting of the Lubbock Retail Merchants association was appointed Saturday following a meeting of the directors of that association late Friday.

Another committee was appointed to supervise an election when five new directors will be selected to serve for two years on the board. Six directors elected last year have another year to serve on the board.

J. D. Hassell Jr., chairman, W. B. Price and A. G. Hunt are members of the committee to make arrangements for the meeting while Joe Baldridge chairman, E. L. Robertson and Paul Sherrod are members of the election committee.

Date To Be Set.

Date of the annual meeting will likely be set for sometime during next month.

A report was made on several meetings of the advertising committee of the association in the past few weeks, at which time the committee turned down "so-called" advertising propositions, because of poor advertising in connected with them. The directors were unanimous in their opinions that the advertising committee had acted wisely in their action on the propositions.

The board was advised of a meeting that is to be held at Shamrock Tuesday, February 18, when secretaries of retail merchants associations over the Panhandle-Plains section will gather to discuss the organization of a Panhandle Plains Retail Merchants association. After discussing the plans and purposes of the meeting as outlined in a letter from Guy Hill, manager of the association at Shamrock, the directors went to record as being opposed to the formation of such an organization should it develop into an organization that would conflict with either the state or national association. It was the concensus of opinion of the directors that such an organization might well be formed to build a better cooperation between the associations of the lains and to work together on any mutual problem, however it was the expressed opinion of the directors present at the meeting that every association on the plains should lend its best cooperation to the state and national associations in carrying out the work they now have in progress.

Directors To Retire

Five directors of the association that will retire from the board at the annual meeting are: J. D. Hassell, W. W. Rix, H. L. Allen, A. G. Hunt and Joe Baldridge.

Six directors who will serve another year on the board are: Tom A. White, president, Paul Sherrod, W. B. Price, Joe Nular, E. L. Robertson and G. P. Kuykendall.

For several years the Lubbock Retail Merchants association has been seeking the state convention of the Retail Merchants association of Texas. This year, indications point strongly in favor of Lubbock being successful in this venture, provided a good delegation of merchants attend the convention in May at New Braunfels. A number of Texas cities have pledged their support to Lubbock including a number of the larger cities of the state, and an effort will be made at the annual banquet to arouse interest in attendance at the state convention.

Kiwanians Preparing for Meeting of Clubs of Division 6, February 22: District Governor Will Be Speaker

Preparations are being made by members of the Lubbock Kiwanis purpose of discussing problems of clubs which will be held here February 22. The meeting is for the purpose of discussing problms of the district and making preliminary plans for the Texas-Oklahoma convention which will be held here early in September.

E. L. Mitchell, district-governor, of Clinton, Oklahoma, is to be here for the meeting and will make the principal address of the day.

Over 100 Expected

According to F. M. Bralley, jr., lieutenant-governor, of Amarillo, who is also to be here, a good attendance is expected. Between 100 and 150 Kiwanians from clubs in Amarillo, Childress, Tulia, Canadian, Wellington, Plainview, Sudan, Tahoka, Big Spring and Vega.

A noon luncheon is to feature the day's events at which Mr. Mitchell will make his address.

Mr. Mitchell is one of the most active Kiwanians of Oklahoma, having been on the Industrial accident board of the state for a number of years, serving in the State Senate for eight years, six of which he was president pro-tem and at one time was in the capacity of Lieutenant Governor of the State of Oklahoma. At present he is a district judge.

Normal Waistline Enhances Silhouette

By JEAN PATOU
Written for NEA Service

PARIS, Feb. 15.—One of the most remarkable features of this season's fashions is that they seem to have grown upon us almost imperceptibly, although really presenting some very brusque changes. What is more, they have been accepted unreservedly by the majority of women.

Take the fact of the normal waistline. It must be generally recognized that it has been struggling for supremacy for some time. I am pleased to know that I was among the first to attempt this change, but always with the knowledge that it had to be achieved very gradually. Although the change was but a question of a few inches every season, it proved a very difficult task to get women to relinquish their old styles.

Sports clothes, on the other hand, have long since abandoned the ridiculous low waist. A more determined regard for anatomical lines prevails in the creation of clothes destined to sport or, if you prefer, these clothes show signs of logic as well as variety.

Women were accustomed so long to the low waistline that now it is almost a novelty to see it returned to is proper place. In reality, this attitude has proved a boon to dress creators as opening up nearly as vast a vista as a really new feature.

The natural waistline also contrives completely to change preconceived ideas of line. It is a theme that has not been exploited for a long time.

The natural waistline, as seen by Jean Patou, is depicted in this autumn suit. It is made of Rodier jersey and the pattern is green and yellow on a red background.

This dinner gown, in Patou's new "light dahlia" color, shows a striking version of the normal waistline. The bolero movement has won wide favor among couturiers.

Here is a back view of Patou's black faille evening dress featuring the normal waistline. The decollete is very modest, but the slit armholes are new and original.

To any couturier it was obvious that with the lengthening of the skirts the waist would resume its proper place. It but serves to enhance the object in view, that of imparting long and flowing lines to the feminine silhouette.

A rather short bust—that is to say, a normal bust—only accentuates the idea of length given by the longer skirt.

This new fashion feature may cause a slight upheaval in another industry, that of corset making. I found myself faced with the fact that my mannequins would have to wear special girdles in order to display my new creations to the best advantage.

Those adopted by women hitherto proving totally inadequate, I mention this merely to refute the statement I am supposed to have made that they would be compelled to return to the stiff, boned corset of yesterday. What I did say was that the well-dressed woman would need a more substantial support than the present narrow girdle, but I would be the last to advise the return to the quasimedieval torture of the corset, and what is more, the idea would never be tolerated by the clothes-free woman of today.

Menus For Children Discussed By Health Supervisor

"Few children living in town now carry their lunches to school," said Mrs. Joe Smith, health supervisor for the public schools of Lubbock. "A hot lunch at school is most desirable for children who cannot go home at noon. Through proper eating, the children are taught food values and are forming valuable habits.

"There are three school cafeterias in Lubbock, one at Central Ward, one at George M. Hunt, and one at Dupre. Those in charge of each cafeteria try to serve balanced meals, including soup, a salad or green vegetable, a dessert, milk, bread and apples or oranges.

"Mothers of children who are not able to take their meals at school should be very careful in preparation of lunches. The lunches should be planned so as to give enough variety to provide all the growing material needed."

Mrs. Smith gives a number of wholesome lunches to be taken to school, as well as balanced meals to be served in the home. Here are her suggestions for the school lunch: (1) one nut, date, and fig sandwich made with whole-wheat bread, one bottle of milk, one bread and butter or bread and jelly sandwich, two ginger cookies; (2) two egg sandwiches made with nut bread, one bottle of milk, one baked apple, and one piece of plain cake; (3) one chopped meat sandwich, one bread and jelly sandwiches, one bottle of milk, one apple; (4) two peanut butter sandwiches, one bottle of milk, one hard boiled egg, one orange, and two cookies.

"Every child," said Mrs. Smith, "should have at least one pint of milk daily and should drink no tea or coffee. He should have plenty of vegetables, bread, and cereals. Fish may be substituted for meat, and eggs may be given four or five times a week."

The following suggestions for breakfast, suitable for children between the ages of 7 and 12 years were offered by Mrs. Smith:

(1) one-half cup of oatmeal with milk, fresh or stewed fruit, two to three slices of bread and butter, one glass of milk; (2) one cup of cornflakes with milk, a soft-cooked egg, two to three slices of brown bread and butter, one glass of milk; (3) one-half cup of hominy with milk, two to three slices of toast and butter, one baked banana, one glass of milk; (4) one-half cup of rice with milk, two to three slices of bread and butter or toast, two or three tablespoons of fresh or stewed fruit, one cup of cocoa made with milk.

Suitable menus for the children's noon-day meal as suggested by Mrs. Smith are as follows: (1) a small portion of lamb stew with vegetables, two to three tablespoons of squash or green beans, two slices of bread and butter, two tablespoons of cornstarch pudding; (2) one slice of bacon, poached egg, two tablespoons of spinach, two to three tablespoons of spaghetti with tomatoes, two cornmeal muffins; (3) one small ball of hamburger steak, boiled or baked potato, two or three tablespoons of beets, two slices of bread and butter, two to four tablespoons of apple sauce; (4) one cup of vegetable soup, three tablespoons of greens, baked potato, two slices of bread and butter, two tablespoons of ice cream or fruit sherbet.

Mrs. Smith made the following recommendations for the evening meal: (1) one cup creamed potatoes, two or three slices of brown bread and butter, four or five stewed prunes, one glass of milk; (2) one to two cups of cornflakes with milk, fruit salad, two slices of bread and butter, one or two ginger cookies; (3) milk toast, one baked potato, one glass of milk, two to three tablespoons of fresh stewed apples; (4) one baked potato, poached egg on toast, two to three tablespoons of stewed peaches (dried), one or two plain cookies, one glass of milk.

ASK DISCONTINUANCE

Claim Run Sometimes Made Without Passenger

WICHITA FALLS, Feb. 15. (AP)—Claiming its passenger trains often made the run from here to Breckenridge without a single passenger, the Wichita Falls and Southern railway has filed a petition with the state railroad commission asking discontinuance of passenger service on the line.

The petition set out that the road lost $8,000 in the last six months in maintaining passenger schedules and stated that the completion of an all paved highway from here to Breckenridge would further detract from the revenues.

New Modes In Dress And Drink For Smart Functions

By NEA Service.

PARIS, Feb. 15.—Tea for two is passe in Paris.

Instead, one serves, "les infusions," if one would be known for the smart absentee American she is.

These infusions are piquant beverages made from herbs or barks that French women prefer to coffee or tea at the end of lunch or even after dinner.

Since French women do not, as a rule, indulge in 5 o'clock tea, it remained for an American woman in Paris to introduce infusions at the fag end of an afternoon and delight her guests.

Incidentally, pajamas are the accepted wearing apparel for the intimate tea hour—gorgeous pajamas, some of them the new "studio pajamas" that feature trailing chiffon drapes over long trousers of silk.

The infusions that one serves at tea hour are made by steeping various well known herbs purchasable at any apothecary shop. Some American women who have adopted infusions into their hospitality plans have begun to raise their own herbs and dry them, thus adding a gracious touch.

They're Brewed Like Tea.

Whole herb leaves are preferable to ground ones in making infusions. If apothecaries do not carry them, they will order them for one. Infusions are brewed precisely as tea is brewed, with emphasis upon the pot's being scalded, the steeping properly timed and the serving done piping hot.

Since they are often slightly greenish in color, one must never serve infusions in blue or green cups. They look their most alluring best in pink, white, orange or yellow cups or pottery of some color combination that enhances their own tone.

One other rule should be noted by the meticulous hostess. Since these infusions have a delicate flavor, very different from most of the flavors that one knows best, care should be taken never to serve contrasting strong foods with them such as caviar, for instance.

Peppermint Infusion.

Use one tablespoonful of dried peppermint leaves to two cups of boiling water. Scald pot and have water freshly boiling. Let steep two to three minutes and serve clear with sugar if one wishes.

Perfect for serving with this infusion are such delicacies as frosted sponge drops, angel food cake cut in thin slices or home-made sugar cookies, very thin and in attractive shapes.

Lemen Verbena Infusion.

Use one and a half tablespoons of lemon verbena leaves to two cups of boiling water and let steep two minutes. Sweeten with one lump of sugar to a cup before serving.

With this canapes are good, made of cream cheese with a drop of calves' foot jelly in the center. So are canapes of pate de fois gras, or chaos of chopped egg and watercress.

Spearmint Infusion.

Use one tablespoon either of dried or powdered spearmint leaves to two cups of boiling water and steep three minutes, clear and sweetened if guests prefer it so. With this rice cakes, white bread and butter sandwiches cut thin and in fancy shapes, lady fingers or other delicacies of similar taste are suitable.

Ginger Infusion.

This must be prepared slightly in advance of serving. The ingredients are one-half pound Canton ginger, five cups cold water, one cup sugar, one-half cup orange juice.

Chop the ginger, add to water and sugar and let boil 15 minutes. Strain and add the orange juice, reheat to the boiling point but do not let boil. Add a thin slice of lemon to each cup.

With this infusion serve diamond-shaped pieces of thin white toast, thin lettuce sandwiches or little fancy shapes of open white bread spread thin with cream cheese.

Sassafras Infusion.

Break up one tablespoonful of sassafras bark and pour over it one cup of boiling water. Drain immediately. Then pour three cups of boiling water onto the bark and let stand five minutes on the back of the stove. In serving, put in each cup a candied cherry through which a clove bud has been stuck. Since this has more tang to it than other infusions, little chopped nut sandwiches are appropriate. Other choices include whole wheat bread and butter sandwiches, ribbon sandwiches made of white, whole wheat and Boston brown bread, and very thin graham bread sandwiches with lettuce and a dash of mayonnaise.

Waxahachie Guest Honored Here At Function In Mrs. Robertson's Home

Miss Beuna Sowell of Waxahachie was named honor guest for a lovely tea given Thursday afternoon in the home of Mrs. E. D. Robertson, 1902 Broadway. Mesdames Robertson, Charles J. Wagner, S. C. Wilson and W. B. Atkins were hostesses for the function, and about 250 guests called during the afternoon.

The living room was elaborately decorated in a variety of pink flowers arranged in baskets and bowls, while in the dining room shades of pink and orchid were featured. The table was laid with a Cluny lace cloth over pink satin and centering the table was a bowl of orchids with lighted pink tapers. The chosen colors were further emphasized in refreshments of hot tea, sandwiches, individual cakes and hard candies.

In House Party.

Mrs. F. R. Friend met the guests and introduced them to the receiving line, which consisted of the four hostesses and Miss Sowell, Miss McGee, and Mesdames Lytton, Roscoe Wilson, Warren Bacon, S. C. Arnett, Jack Lewis and A. W. McKee.

Mrs. H. A. Davidson and Mrs. L. C. Ellis met the guests in the dining room and Mrs. S. L. Lightfoot presided at the guest book.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Lawrence Bacon, Misses Lena Bert Medlin, Lula Mae Cravens, Dorothy Rushing, Frances Ford and Armstrong.

Other members of the house party were Mesdames Gus Ford, J. S. Hemphill, R. D. Mosley, Jed A. Rix, A. B. Davis, C. E. Maedgen and W. B. Rushing.

Miss Anderson Tells Of New Work In College

"Tech college students are a delightful combination of the hospitality of the South and the daring pioneer spirit of the West," according to Miss Lelia Anderson, student worker from St. Margaret's House, Berkeley, California, who spent last week on the campus at Texas Technological college as a guest of the Association of Women Students.

"Never have I seen students more intent on making their college traditions of the best sort and bent on making their campus worthy of the name started by those who were responsible for her founding."

Miss Anderson is a student herself in a comparative new field of religious work—that of a student worker.

"When the average student goes to college," said Miss Anderson, "he finds himself in a maze of difficulties entirely different to any which he has faced before. For the first time in his life he is entirely on his own. Whether he goes to church or stays in his room is left up to him, unless he goes to a school that requires one church attendance a Sunday. In addition to these problems many times courses in the curriculum tend to leave him perplexed.

"That is where the student worker comes in. It is up to him to supply the lack made between the church and the university."

"I think the students of Texas Technological college are extremely fortunate in this regard. The faculty members are sympathetic and work hand in hand with the young people in their religious difficulties."

Miss Anderson has held conferences with many students during the past week at Tech college.

In addition she has spoken before auxiliaries, forums, an all-college convocation, and has held devotional services each afternoon in the tea room of the home economics building on the campus.

Oriental Religion

"Sometimes the students in California will try to interest themselves in an oriental religion or will associate himself with some of the "isms" which are so prevalent there," said Miss Anderson. "None of these problems confront students of this section of the country."

"Student workers want to help the collegians to think of religion as the way of life instead of a way of life," she declared. "They want to give them a spiritual interpretation of life; to show them that the church has a definite place in society, and one way of doing this is to unite with a youth movement such as the Y. M. C. A. or Y. W. C. A. In this way they can have a better conception of the need of religion in a changing world."

REV. HULL TO FILL PULPIT

Rev. O. J. Hull of Gatesville, who was recently extended a call to the pastorate of the Baptist church here, has advised that he will be here next Sunday if the weather permits to fill the pulpit for the day and to further inform himself concerning the prospects for the work here. He will probably advise the church soon after this visit as to whether or not he will accept the call.

Not only are all Baptists urged to be present next Sunday but others are cordially invited.

FRANK DENTON DIED

Frank Denton, well known here and throughout this section, died at the residence of his mother in this city Monday afternoon, after a lingering illness, and the remains were interred in the City Cemetery Tuesday afternoon, Rev. R. T. Breedlove officiating.

Mr. Denton was 57 years of age and had long been a resident of this section of the state. For a number of years he and family resided at Gail in Borden county and for some time he published a newspaper in that little town. He knew much of the history of this section and was an interesting conversationalist on topics relating to West Texas.

Besides his mother, he left surviving him two sons and a daughter, Jack Denton of Amarillo, and Joe and Miss Willie Denton of Midland. All of the children were present at the time of his death and attended the funeral.

CAVENESS VISITING SCHOOLS

County Superintendent H. P. Caveness is taking advantage of the prevailing fine weather to visit the schools of the county. He paid a visit to the school at New Home Tuesday morning.

The New Home school already has seven units of affiliation and application is being made for four others. Work is being done through the tenth grade but the superintendent and faculty hope to be able to add the eleventh grade next year. Mr. Caveness says that splendid high school work is being done there. The faculty consists of the superintendent and five other teachers, as follows: J. C. Turney, superintendent; Miss Hettie Murrell, principal; B. E. White, teacher in high school; G. C. McWhorter, coach; Miss Odie Lee Boyd, primary, and Miss Winnie Altman, intermediate teacher.

EDITH 4-H CLUB

Miss Christine Owens, a third-year club girl of Edith 4-H club, was awarded second place in this district on her complete year work.

Miss Owens' productive project has been poultry through the three years and last year she made more than $350 on her third year work.

This entitles her to compete for a place among the best 25 club girls of the state which will entitle her to become a member of the 4-H Gold Pin club.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Nevels left Monday for a few weeks' visit with guests of his mother, Mrs. A. J. Glasgow.

E. H. Boullioun, Bill Burleson and Robt. H. King attended a meeting of the South Plains Shrine club which was held in Lubbock Tuesday night. This organization has been dormant for a long time. But these gentlemen report that it was revived with prospects of becoming a very active club.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Traylor and little daughter, Virginia Lee, of Lubbock, were visitors here Sunday in the home of Mrs. Traylor's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. English.

Mrs. D. W. Gaignat was called to Tyler Tuesday night by the critical condition of her brother, Sanford McCormack, who has been sick so long. His condition became very serious Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edwards and little daughters, Betty Louise and Jean, of Borger, were the guests in Mr. and Mrs. Harold Edwards' home Wednesday night.

Tech Studes Cast Envious Eye Toward National Greek Letter Organizations

Present Club System Gives Birth To Ambitions

BY FAY FOOTE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WILL THAT spirit of democracy now prevailing over the campus of Texas Tech and so aptly expressed by the slogans printed on the school paper "Every Day Is Howdy Day at Texas Tech" and "Meet Me In the Halls and Say Howdy" be changed to one fraught with social distinctions so that the slogan might well read "What did you pledge?" or "How are you affiliated nationally?"

Perhaps so, for a large portion of the college's student body favors the advent of fraternities and sororities of the social classification. Even those opposed to them agree that the coming of these organizations appears inevitable—despite the fact that the present constitution prohibits them.

Paper Is Written

A sociological treatise, compiled by Warren Huff, an advanced student and which has since been used by the committee on social affairs of the college in a report to President P. W. Horn, implies that the students are asking themselves the question "Will fraternities do away with the individualism for which Tech is noted and will they destroy the democratic spirit of the school?"

In reply many of the students have stated that they do not think that the democratic air would be made away with. Brad Nunnlee, Bonham and a member of College club, social organization for men, said:

Tech Called Democratic

"Tech is one of the most democratic schools in the southwest and I do not think anything will tear down that feeling to any great extent. It possibly would be hurt in a way but national organizations would do the school a lot of good. The chief advantages of Tech having national organizations lies in the fact that houses would be provided which would furnish the members real homes. It would furnish a closer means of contact between the ex-students and the college.

"Tech is too large for the student body to be in a single unified group. We need some strong organizations that will bind the students together. At present there is no means of making close friends. We make acquaintances and that is all. As I see it we are bound to have national organizations on the campus at some time or another.

Opposition Described

Opposition of the administration is keeping the fraternities out of Tech" said Dorothy Rushing, member of La Chaparritas, girls social club. "I can't see the difference between a few strong nationals on the campus and numerous small social clubs. The feeling of fraternizing is prevelant in either case. Fraternities will not destroy the well known spirit of democracy if steps are taken to guide the development along the proper lines."

Warren Huff, president of the Y. M. C. A. declares that Tech is not as democratic a school as formerly.

"For a long time we have heralded Tech as a school that was distinctive but at present the trend is more or less obviously toward a system prevalent on hundreds of other campuses of the nation. Considering that fraternities of the social nature are inevitable on the Tech campus, or at least among the student body, sanctioned or otherwise, it is desirable that they come quickly. The transition from an unorganized state of affairs where democracy prevailed, to a systematized campus made up of more or less exclusive groups is a painful process where many temporary adjustments appear. Consequently it would appear much better to make this transition quickly and with as little controversy as possible. Tech has lost its chance to be distinctive in its social organization. Now let us swing into the new system quickly and with as little loss of our democratic ideals as is necessary.

Snobbishness Seen

In the afore-mentioned sociological treatise it was brought out that there is a feeling of snobbishness resulting from the present social groups but that "it must be said this feeling exists among those not included in the memberships of these organizations." The paper further illustrates this point by saying that a person does not consciously discriminate against certain friends or acquaintances but rather chooses friends because they have like interests.

Some students point out that nothing could be more democratic than the fact that anyone may start a club at any time and it may be of any nature whatsoever, social or honorary. As long as this tradition prevails there can be no question as to the democracy of the institution, in their opinion.

Martha Knight, transfer from C. I. A., Denton, and a member of Las Leales, personality club, states: "I wouldn't say Tech is any more democratic than any other school of Texas. Certainly the two principally known girls' social clubs do not tend to produce democracy. National sororities would stir up a desire for memberships in honorary clubs such as the pep squad and literary organizations, thus broadening the outside activity scope of the various students."

J. W. Timmons, transfer from University of Oklahoma, business manager of the Toreador, school newspaper, and newly elected president of De Que, boys' social club, declares that in his opinion Tech is the most democratic school in this part of the nation "I think that individual clubs tend to produce this feeling and I do not think that national affiliation would destroy it. The chief difference between our various organizations and a national one is the lack of financial banking and influential alumni", he declared.

Kate Boyd, member of Sans Souci, girls social club, thinks clubs, national and local, tend to create interest in other social activities. The school is democratic and it will stay that way if clubs are the only things that affect it."

Mail Service In Dawson Area Good

Improvements This Year To System Gives Section One Of Best On Lower South Plains

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

LAMESA, Feb. 15.—Dawson county and Lamesa are served by one of the most complete mail services of any section of the Lower South Plains. Improvements this year include free delivery of mail in Lamesa and the extension of Route A, south of Lamesa.

Over 450 miles of territory is covered daily by rural mail carriers in the county, according to J. D. Dyer, postmaster. Route A, which is to be extended fifteen miles into the Three Leagues community on February 16, will be the longest route out of Lamesa, it is believed. It will cover a total of 76 miles, Dyer states.

Free delivery of mail in the residence and business sections of Lamesa began February 1. Two deliveries are made each day in the business district. Six corner mail boxes were placed at different intervals over the city as a part of the free delivery program.

According to letters reaching Lamesa from Texas congressmen in Washington this city is assured of a new federal building. Lamesa's portion of Hoover's three to five year federal building program will probably be constructed during the next year.

From The Farewell Address

. . . As avenues to foreign influence in innumerable ways, such attachments are particularly alarming to the truly enlightened and independent patriot. How many opportunities do they afford to tamper with domestic factions, to practice the arts of seduction, to mislead public opinion, to influence or awe the public councils! Such an attachment of a small or weak towards a great and powerful nation dooms the former to be the satellite of the latter.

Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, I conjure you to believe me, fellow-citizens, the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake; since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy, to be useful, must be impartial, else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defense against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation, and excessive dislike of another cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots who may resist the intrigues of the favorite are liable to become suspected and odious, while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people to surrender their interests.

The great rule of conduct for us, in regard to foreign nations, is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop . . .

"I'm Happy In America" Says 'Little Gus', Of The Tech Cafe, Student Here

Youngster Landed In U. S. When He Knew No English

BY HOLLYCE SELLERS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

To be in a strange country and to be surrounded by a people of a strange tongue may be a serious matter for an older person, but it was a glorious experience for Gus Dallis, then a lad of eleven.

This young adventurer now is a sophomore in Texas Technological college, specializing in business administration. He is universally known in Lubbock as "Little Gus of the Tech Cafe" and is a nephew of the owner of that establishment, Gus Kallas.

"The name 'Constantine'" he said, "is all right in Greece but it would never do in America." So coming to this country nine years ago from Tsorota, Greece, a city of 2,000 inhabitants, Constantine A. Dallis immediately became known as "Gus" Dallis.

Father a Realtor

Mr. Dallis is the son of a real estate man of Tsorota. He has two brothers. One is an officer in the Greek army at Athens, and the other, a freshman at the University of Athens, is studying engineering.

While speaking of education, young Dallis compared education in the United States with that in Greece. "College students participate in few social activities in Greece," he said, "and there are few clubs. They do have fraternities, however, although sororities are almost unknown.

When asked if the graduates of a college were better educated than college graduates in America, he said. When they are not they are considered failures. The number of persons obtaining a college education in Greece is much smaller than those taking their degrees in America, but these few become the professional men of the country. There is something about the speech and manner of the graduate that distinguishes him from the ordinary man.

Teachers Are Strict

"Teachers are a great deal more strict in Greece than in the United States, and those who do not progress satisfactorily in their work are not allowed to remain in school. Lectures and examinations are given in all grades. Emphasis in the Greek schools is placed on book learning, and a number of foreigners come to the Greek schools to study the art and architecture of ancient Greece.

"Many Grecian customs differ a great deal from the customs in this country. Take for instance the marriage customs. Men and girls do not have "dates" in Greece and all marriages are arranged and announced by the parents. The young people sometimes are consulted as to whether or not they like a certain prospect, but outside of that they have nothing to do with making the match.

Wedding Is Big Event

"A wedding in Greece is quite an event. The ceremony itself is read in the church and usually takes place early after lunch, lasting two or three hours. Then a feast of mutton is held and dancing is continued until 12 or 1 o'clock or, in some instances, all night. The bride and groom, however, are not required to remain until the dance closes.

"Speaking of dancing, some steps in Greece are the same as those in America, but others are quite different. In one interesting step the dancers form a semi-circle. One termination of the circle is the head of the line and the other is the foot. The one at the head dances most elaborately, while the other steps are more of an accompaniment. At the end of the dance, the one at the head goes foot and another is given his turn. Often the dancers will get tired of the music and will dance to the tune of their songs. Refreshments at these dances consist largely of wine, fruit cake and sweets.

Coffee Houses Popular

"Another form of entertainment is that found at the coffee houses. The men gather at the coffee houses to read the newspapers and to discuss business and politics.

"Now as to the clothes worn in Greece, those in the cities are practically the same as those worn in this country. They are brought from Paris and London, but those worn by people in the villages are more like those worn by their ancestors.

"Food in Greece is prepared very simply. Not more than two or three dishes are served at each meal although different dishes are chosen each day. Wine is the favorite beverage."

Mr. Dallis knew no English when he arrived in the United States. He studied for a time in a private school in Temple, and then went to Georgetown, where he enrolled in the sixth grade. He finished high school in three years and then entered Tech as a student of business administration. He says he intends to visit his parents in Greece when he finishes college but he goes expect to go back to stay. "I am happy in America," he said.

MUCH LAND TERRACED

Approximately 2,358 Acres Are Improved In County

SAN ANGELO, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Approximately 2,358 acres of Tom Green county farm land have been terraced since Jan. 1, according to W. I. Marschall, county agent. This makes a total of about 35,000 acres terraced, he said. The county has 140,000 acres under cultivation.

A map of Alaska with its outlying islands, if placed over a map of the United States on the same scale would reach from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the northern boundary of Minnesota to southern New Mexico.

CHAMBERS LAND SOLD

More Than 7,000 Acres Are Involved In Deals

ANAHUAC, Feb. 15. (AP)—More than 7,000 acres of land in Chambers county were involved in recent trades and assignments, indicating unusual activity in oil circles. Seismograph crews have been busy in the county for several weeks making locations of salt domes.

If all the rain that fell on the earth during the course of a year could be gathered together at one time, it would cover the entire earth to an average depth of 29.13 inches.

Floyd Citizens Seek Highway 53 Route Approval

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

LOCKNEY, February 15.—With seven miles of the right-of-way in Floyd county already secured and cepted by the commissioners court, highway leaders of this section are at work on an extension of state highway 53 from Lubbock to Lockney by way of Idalou and Petersburg. The new proposed highway parallels the Fort Worth and Denver-South Plains railway from Lockney to Lubbock and shortens the distance between the points about 10 miles. Practically all of the right-of-way in Lubbock county is open and now being traveled and the citizens of Petersburg, Hale county have assured the leaders of this movement that the right-of-way in Hale county will be opened when needed. The last link in the new road yet to be opened is a 10-mile stretch in Floyd county.

Believe It Or Not—But Lemon, Orange And Grapefruit Trees Are Doing Nicely, Right Here In Lubbock!

BY WAYNE ATCHESON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

BELIEVE it or not—but oranges, lemons and grapefruit are being grown, right here in Lubbock!

Believe it or not—citrus plants are doing well here, with apologies to the widely advertised Rio Grande Valley.

Believe it or not—a Eucalyptus tree is growing as nicely here as it would in California and Lubbock, far removed from the sunny slopes of Italy, is the possessor of an ornamental fig tree.

Students In Charge

All these, and dozens of other plants, may be found in the greenhouse at Texas Technological college where a horticultural department, under the direction of Prof Charles H. Mahoney is filling its niche in the education of the boys and girls of West Texas' largest educational institution. Students of the college are in charge of the greenhouse, which has been in operation for more than a two year period.

Among the plants that are grown in the greenhouse is a loquat tree, which is one of the citrus plants growing there. The other citrus plants are two orange trees, one lemon, which has five large lemons on it at this time, and a grapefruit tree which is bearing two grapefruit. When the trees are in bloom the atmosphere is ladened with the fragrance of these plants.

There is also an ornamental fig tree and a Eucalyptus tree from leaves of which an essential oil is derived. The Eucalyptus tree is used in California for wind-breaks. The greenhouse contains several rubber plants, beds of pink and white carnations, bulbs, sapdragons, sweet peas, ivy-leaf geraniums and annuals, such as chrysanthemu and calendule. The annuals will be planted out of doors in the near future.

According to C. E. Russell, of the department of horticulture, most of the work is done by students who have laboratory work in the greenhouse. "They learn the art of seed planting, potting, transplanting and rocting cuts and other experiments are held to determine the best results of other phases of horticulture," he declared.

One student, Ike Walker of Olton, is employed to look after the greenhouse and take care of it. He has a room on the campus where he lives.

Cut flowers are sometimes sold to the people who come after them but because the place is so small only a few flowers of the same variety can be grown. Occasionally potted plants are sold and the proceeds of which go to defer the expenses of the greenhouse.

"The greenhouse with the heating plant is valued at approximately $8,000," said Mr. Mahoney. "The value of everything in the greenhouse is probably two or three thousand dollars, and the upkeep is from $50 to $55 per month.'

"We want the people of Lubbock to feel free to come to the greenhouse at all times and we will be glad to show them through the building and explain the work that is being done by the students," Mr. Mahoney said.

Is Quite Different Now, Says Wife Of Coleman Resident

Mrs. Hargett Says Her Husband's Condition Greatly Improved Since Taking Orgatone

"My husband hasn't had a pain since he began taking Orgatone a few weeks ago," says Mrs. Henry Hargett, in telling of her husband's experience with this remarkable medicine. "And he's feeling much better than he has in a long time."

"He had a bad case of indigestion and stomach trouble that had worried him for the past ten years" continued Mrs. Hargett, "and his nerves too were in a mighty bad state. He had no appetite and after eating anything his food would ferment in his stomach and cause gas to rise, and it would swell him up and the pain was awful to bear, something like cramp colic, and he got in a very much run down condition from the trouble he had and studying about his case and he was badly constipated and could hardly take interest in his work or look after it with any satisfaction.

"But it's quite different now. He started on his first bottle of Orgatone about six weeks ago and after finishing the first one, went and got a second bottle without delay. His condition has improved so much he doesn't have the gas and swelling of his stomach like he did before, his nerves are much quieter and the constipation is overcome he has gained in strength and is feeling stronger and more like to look after his work than he has in many a day."

Genuine Orgatone may be obtained in Lubbock at Bowen's Drug Store. Adv.

POPULATION POW-WOW

IN another month and a half a small army of statisticians will begin upon the gigantic task of 'counting noses' in the decennial census of the United States. The question of population, undoubtedly, is of interest to a large majority of this nation's citizenship. To Lubbock and West Texas, however, as representatives of the most rapidly progressing section of the country during the past few years, the subject will be more interesting than to average areas.

Great are the disappointments of a national census—and great are the surprises included therein. Few cities have as large a population as their more optimistic estimates would indicate, after the Federal counters get through. Others show a surprising gain over to conservative guesses.

The Avalanche-Journal would rather see Lubbock pleasantly surprised over its actual population than find the city forced into swallowing its pride over a lesser one. Taking that into consideration, and mulling carefully over all basic figures available, it is this newspaper's deduction that within the city's environs today reside approximately 21,000 persons, exclusive of the 2,200 college students.

The most recent issue of the Texas Almanac offers some food for thought in the far western strip of Texas. The Dallas gentlemen responsible for the book report Amarillo's population as 15,494 in the government's census of 1920, and 45,000 in 1928; they figure Abilene has jumped from 10,274 in 1920 to 30,000 in 1928. San Angelo, they estimate, had a 1928 population of 25,000 as compared with 10,050 in 1920 while Plainview is approximated as 10,000 in 1928 as compared with 3,969 in 1920. Lubbock is listed with a 1920 population of 4,051 in 1920 and with 17,500 in 1928. No later figures are available and while it is only natural to believe there has been a change during the past year and a half, we'll have to base our cogitations on the only information at hand.

While the Avalanche-Journal does not think Amarillo is twice as large as Lubbock, or that Abilene is 3,000 population over San Angelo, as the above figures would indicate to the uninitiated, neither do we feel capable of judging fairly and nearly accurately, the population of the neighboring cities.

These figures, with their accompanying remarks, are merely offered as food for thought. And incidentally, you might stick them away somewhere for future reference when the results are announced.

WORK FOR OLD MEN

It may be true, as the American Management Association, meeting in Cleveland, assures us, that the difficulty of a person over 45 obtaining a job in recent years has been greatly exaggerated. The trouble is that some of the victims have such a dramatic way of drawing attention to themselves.

There was the case of a New York man, for instance, who, after walking Times Square 10 hours a day for four months with a sign reading, "I want work and sufficient pay to live on," at last starved at home and killed himself. That was just a few days ago. Without doubt some philanthropist will see to it that he gets a decent funeral. Just one or two cases like that—and with varying details they are altogether too frequent—have more effect on one's consciousness than columns of statistics. The American Management Association is doubtless correct in its added assertion that age up to about 60 makes little difference in the appointment of an executive. Indubitably society is going to be kinder to elderly men than it has been up to date. Society begins to realize that they had better be working. Otherwise society will have to keep them. They don't all commit suicide.

WOMAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY

A man without a country is a rare bird, but all one has to do to be a woman without a country is to be female born in Great Britain, and to marry an American man. Such a woman, according to British law, takes the citizenship of her husband. But under American law she does not become a citizen of the United States until she has been naturalized.

Not that it matters much. The woman without a country is still taxed wherever she owns property and if she has a large enough income, that, too, is taxed in the country of its origin. Although she cannot get a passport, she can nevertheless travel on an affidavit from an American consul general, visaged by the proper official of the country which she wishes to enter. To be sure, she can't vote; but not being a citizen, why should she want to? And she can't fight; but being a woman, she should not fight anyway.

So, that's the woman without a country?

CENSORING FOREIGN BOOKS

The National Popular Government League, whatever that may be, is sponsoring a petition to congress in support of Senator Cutting, of New Mexico, in opposition to the censorship of books published and brought to this country.

We cannot indorse this petition, because, while it opposes such censorship, it suggests, as an alternative, a commission to supervise the entry of literature for the use of libraries, literature which under the proposed section of the tariff act would be ruled out as dangerous.

We do not believe in government censorship of any kind. The people of America are able to weigh and judge the writings and the thought of other peoples, and quite competent to take care of their own mental, moral and political safety.

The best advertisement for a book or an idea is an official ban. The best way to kill a bad idea is to circulate it. Ridicule will do the work.

Some of us can recall when the headline, "Twelve Flee Flames in Scant Attire," always referred to a night fire.

Dudley Field Malone has been married again, in Paris. We must take time off some day and catch up on this subject.

The trouble with making a speech from the saddle, as Mr. Mussolini almost always is in the weekly reels, is that the gavel tends to start the horse.

On the Firing Line at the Nation's Capital

POLITICIANS TRY TO FIGURE MEANING OF CONGRESSMAN'S RECENT OUTBURST

Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Congressman Franklin W. Fort, of New Jersey, may simply have had a few thoughts he wanted to give utterance to; possibly that was the sum total of the explanation back of the speech he recently made in the house of representatives.

Politicians and correspondents persist in assuming that the Jerseyman was trying to mark an epoch of some sort.

It does not necessarily follow—merely because he talked for an hour.

Plenty of congressmen feel an occasional urge to orate and, if the house managers will let them, get up and fulminate without meaning anything particularly deep-seated.

True, Fort is rather an infrequent speaker.

Still, there are 200 or 300 others who often let a whole session pass in profound silence, so far as they are concerned; and then, all at once, one of them, having evolved an idea, will want all the time he can wheedle out of his floor leader, to cackle about it to his fellow members.

So why attach so much importance to the East Orange (N. J.) representative's address?

The only reason seems to be that Fort startled the lawmakers.

Frank Fort was supposed, about a year ago, to be slated to figure very prominently during the present administration.

He had been in the war-time food administration.

He was one of the earliest pre-convention Hoovervites. In fact, he was the Californian's pre-convention manager.

He is a natural-born boy scout—with that day's kindly action on his mind the minute he gets up in the morning—and performing it one time or another in the course of the day, if it kills someone.

He was boosted into the port of secretary to the G. O. P. national committee.

It was understood that he was to be the administration's spokesman in the house of representatives, and the impression was that a seat in the senate had been picked out for him.

And that was the last that was heard from him—or about him.

He was an administration spokesman with nothing to say.

For quite awhile there was considerable wondering what had become of him. Presently he was forgotten.

Senator Edge was appointed ambassador to Paris—and there was the toga which had been mentioned—unoccupied—until David W. Baird was assisted into it—to keep until Dwight W. Morrow is ready to wear it.

To be sure, the administration does not fill New Jersey senate vacancies.

Nevertheless, if Representative Fort had been given anything to do as administration spokesman it would automatically have made him noticeable enough to have been thought of at least.

For that matter, Morrow can fairly be regarded as the administration's selection.

(Provided he is elected.)

But of Fort—not a whisper.

It was at this point that Representative Fort resigned his secretaryship of the G. O. P. national committee. Came next the announcement of that speech he was going to deliver—and did deliver.

"Fort!" exclaimed everyone, suddenly thinking of him.

And with that thought came simultaneously the thought of the Jersey statesman's administration spokesmanship and the prominent role he was to have played at this session of congress and the senate seat which he was supposed to have been scheduled to occupy—and of the completeness with which none of these things had eventuated.

Does this account for the speed with which so many political observers jumped to the conclusion that Representative Fort's speech would be something out of the ordinary?—and for the steadfastness of their belief, after it was made, that it must have had some mighty profound significance?

In brief, their reasoning was that, had they been in Representative Fort's shoes, they certainly would have had something significant to say.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.
Medical Adviser for Central Press and The Avalanche-Journal.

MILK DIET NOT ALWAYS FATTENING

Milk Drinking

"DEAR DOCTOR: Can a person gain weight by just drinking milk—that is about four quarts a day?" MRS. D."

Four quarts of milk is 2360 calories. Whether one would gain or not on this would depend mostly upon the height and physical activities, Mrs. D.

Usually when the milk diet is given for gaining purposes, more than four quarts are taken and the patient is kept in bed. That decided rest helps very much toward gaining, for not nearly so many calories of food are burned for energy needs.

While speaking of rest, I want to emphasize its value. There are many overwrought, nervous individuals, who would probably recover their poise completely if they would take one day a week of complete rest in bed. Then, of course, there are cases where longer periods than this are indicated. As Clendening puts it: "When a body is sick, when a part is sick, let us not stir it up; let us calm it down."

Milk, again—One can lose as well as gain on the milk diet, and at rest, too. By limiting the calories to a reducing number. (One ounce of whole milk is 20 calories.)

We have a pamphlet on Reducing and Gaining, which you may have, by following column rules.

Mrs. B.—I wouldn't lose hope, if I were you. It seems to me your doctor is doing the right thing: putting your father on a high fruit, vegetable and nut diet (and I presume he has milk, too, and having most of his fruit and vegetables raw.) We have found in recent years that so many degenerative diseases are caused by wrong chemistry of the body due to lack of vitamins and mineral elements, and, of course, on this raw diet these are supplied in full quantity and quality. This does not mean that I think we should go to extremes in this, but there is no doubt the majority of diets will be improved by the inclusion of much more raw fruits and vegetables and milk.

As the circulation in his legs is impaired, daily (or oftener) exercises known as the Buerger exercises, would be valuable:

Buerger describes them as follows:

"The affected limb is elevated with the patient lying in bed, to from 60 degrees or 90 degrees above the horizontal, being allowed to rest upon a support for thiry seconds to three minutes, the period of time being the minimum amount necessary to produce blanching. As soon as blanching is established, the patient allows the foot to hang down over the edge of the bed for from two to five minutes, until the blood flows back, the total period of time being about one minute linger than that necessary to establish a good red color. The limb is then placed in the horizontal position for about three to five minutes, during which time heat (an electric pad or light, or hot water bottle) is applied, care being taken to prevent the occurence of a burg. The placing of the lamb in these three successive positions constitutes a cycle, the duration of which is usually from six to ten minutes. These cycles are repeated over a period of about one hour, which will mean some six to seven cycles."

Maupassant writes an entertaining yarn about a man, whom, though well versed in world affairs and surrounded by many friends, battled a sinister loneliness— a loneliness that made him feel as though some maelstrom of fate was drawing him into external darkness and oblivion, creating a barrier between him and his most intimate friends that he could not span, because of the knowledge that he could not fathom human thought. The more we think of this weird philosophy the more evident our own loneliness becomes, for in truth we are, each of us, eternally alone. We never know for sure just what is going on in the other fellow's mind and perhaps it's for the best that we do not.

You taught me here docility—

Letters to the Editor

Is Hell of Eternal Torture the penalty for Sin?

Does the scripture teach such a doctrine? We have heard from many clergymen and a few bishops and the weight of their conclusions seems to be that the scripture does so teach. When the great Creator placed the first human pair on trial in the Garden of Eden He said: "Of all the trees you may freely eat but of the tree of Knowledge, a certain one pointed out, ye shall not of it for in the day you eat of that tree ye shall surely die."

The Creator gave his children no warning of the kind of place called Hell we have heard so much about recently from the parties mentioned above.

We quite readily agree with the London Bishop that the doctrine of an eternal roasting in Hell, in which the majority of God's creatures will spend eternity, has produced more atheist and infidels than anything else extant in the world today.

God, the Creator, is not the author of such doctrine. This doctrine has been brought over to us from the Dark Ages by those pretending to represent Jehovah and his word of truth, the Bible.

A Glance Back to Eden

When God had given his children, Adam and Eve, warning about obedience there appeared another on the scene and the serpent said unto the woman, "Ye shall not surely die." Who spoke the truth there, God or the Devil? For this obedient act they were cast out of his perfect, beautiful home.

God first pronounced a curse on the serpent, then on the woman and finally on Adam, Gen. 3:17-24. Did they die on the day they sinned or disobeyed? Yes, they died, legally as soon as the disobedient act was committed; but cast out of the garden so they would not have access to the tree of life for the Lord said this must be done, lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life and live forever. Then further the record says Adam lived 930 years and he died according to God's decree. But the serpent said unto the woman, "Ye shall not surely die."

We say briefly all this doctrine of Eternal Torment for the wicked is based on the serpent's statement, "Ye shall not surely die." There never has been any repeal of God's law, death is his penalty for sin. Who has known the mind of the Lord or who has been his Councilor. People have died all down through the centuries according to God's law, given to Adam.

St. Paul, the great apostle to the Gentiles, said: "Sin entered into the world and death by sin so that death passed on all men for all have sinned." And he further said, "As in Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Paul believed God's statement that men actually die and by reason of Christ's death. Giving his life for the life of the world or that of human race may have the right to live again from the death brought on the world by Adam's sin. And Christ is the savior or Ransomer of the race and He paid man's penalty. Then He would have to suffer eternal torture to redeem the race or any member of it.

Christ did go to Hell, Hades, the scriptural Hell, which is the grave or the stole of dead, but not to a Catholic Purgatory, not to an orthodox lake for fire.

Let's hear Christ's own testimony and see if we can believe Him, "I am He that liveth and was dead but behold, I am alive forever more and the keys of death and Hell."

Rash Romance

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JUDITH CAMERON, New York typist, marries ARTHUR KNIGHT, executive of the publishing house in which she is employed. Knight is a widower with a daughter, TONY, 18, in Paris, and a son, JUNIOR, 16, at school. When Tony returned home she denounces Judith as a gold digger.

Tony is secretly continuing a flirtation with MICKEY MORTIMER, wealthy and married. When Junior comes home for the Christmas holidays he also treats Judith coldly.

ANDY CRAIG, whom Knight has helped through college, takes a position with the publishing firm. He has been in love with Tony for a long while. In a fit of anger Tony tries to convince her father that Andy and Judith are carrying on an affair. Knight denies this but Tony tricks the pair into a compromising situation.

Knight becomes seriously ill with pneumonia. After a long period of danger during which Junior is summoned home, Knight begins to recover. Before the boy returns to school he admits to Judith he has misjudged her. Knight's recuperation is slow and Judith is resentful because he seems to prefer Tony's company to hers. A letter for Judith comes to the house and Tony takes it. Later both drive into the city. Tony gets out of the car but follows in a taxicab to see where Judith goes.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVII

The car ahead swerved.

Tony braced herself, clutching at the door of the taxi to keep from slipping as the cab veered crazily after.

"Not—so fast!" she gasped, leaning forward with her face close to the half-open glass partition between driver and passenger. "I don't want to get near!"

"Gotta keep moving in this traffic!" the chauffeur retorted jauntily. "Can't stand still!"

Nevertheless he slackened speed. When the limousine in which Judith was riding stopped to wait for the red signal lights to flash into green the cab halted at a discreet distance.

Tony moved impatiently. She sat at the very edge of her seat, crumpling and recrumpling the gray envelope in her hand. Her eyes were glued on the big maroon car. Seconds seemed hours. Tony's lips were pressed into a cruel line. She was like a cat watching prey.

Suddenly, with an almost instantaneous jolt, both cars sprang forward.

They were on Sixth avenue now, heading southward. Past Forty-fifth street, Forty-fourth street, Forty-third. A turn into the maelstrom of Times Square.

"Can't do it, lady."

Miraculously the traffic lights turned at that instant. Tony's hand had gone to her throat. She had seen her father's car move close to the sidewalk pause long enough for Judith to step out, then pull off and disappear.

Sunk back against the leather upholstery Tony watched her stepmother. Judith seemed to waver uncertainly in the tides of traffic. Then she stepped forward, signaling a cab.

"That's the woman I want to follow. The one in black—see?" Tony told the driver.

"Yeah! I getcha all right."

Now they were off again. Difficulties only whetted Tony Knight's keenness for the chase. In the jugging, dipping whirl of vehicles they might lose track of Judith at any moment. There were dozens of other cabs just like hers. But Tony was warming to the hunt.

The thick-jawed, short-spoken taxi driver manipulated his cab recklessly. He edged in between trucks and spurted at the exact instant to avoid delays. He plunged forward and stopped short. Risks were the day's routine to him. They were even less than that to his passenger.

She was young, he had noted, pretty and expensively dressed. She was very much in earnest. The job looked like Opportunity knocking in the form of a sizeable tip.

They reached West Twelfth street. Now the going was easier. They were away from the uptown hordes. Streets were less congested (though still well filled) and the second cab followed more slowly. It kept a good half block behind its leader.

"There's the place!" Tony whispered to herself.

The first taxi had stopped before a dark brick building. Judith emerged, paid her fare and walked up the steps of the house.

"Want me to stop here?" the chauffeur inquired of Tony.

"Yes."

The brakes of the cab ground together, bringing it to a stop. The girl inside did not step out. With her nose pressed flatly against the glass pane she waited, watching Judith.

"This is the place," Tony was saying to herself. "I'll bet he lives here. Oh—wouldn't I give anything to see him though! What a little, lying sneak she's been!"

The door before which Judith had been waiting opened. Now she was talking, though the person to whom she spoke remained hidden. The door closed and Judith turned about.

A guilty blush mounted in Tony Knight's cheeks. Judith had glanced directly toward the taxicab but of course she could not dream who was inside! An ordinary, orange-hued cab was a common enough sight on any street. That should not excite suspicion. Just the same Tony felt relieved when the other girl calmly shifted her gaze across the street.

"What's she waiting for?" the imps in Tony's consciousness demanded.

"Ah—for what!" other imps answered back, in ghoulish glee.

The question was more definitely answered immediately. From out the shadows of the doorway a figure stepped. Tony Knight was so expited a little gap escaped her lips. The man was slim, built with square shoulders but rather sparse lines. He looked youthful. He was pulling a cap down over his head and he wore a dark top-coat.

Tony saw Judith step back, saw her suddenly clutch at both of the man's hands and raise her head. Swiftly Judith's lips met the stranger's.

Whatever Judith Knight was saying to the man was earnest and intent. The girl who watched, crouched in her hiding place, could not make out the man's expression. Her heart pumping violently, Tony Knight waited.

They were coming down the steps now together. Should they turn, Tony asked herself, would she dare—?

They had turned. They were coming toward the orange-hued taxicab.

Tony Knight jerked at her hat, lowering its brim over her eyes. Fascinated, entirely forgetful of danger, she waited.

Judith was talking, her face upward the man. He was rather good looking, Tony decided. She could not make out his features distinctly but he carried himself well. He was attentive as Judith talked.

Now they were almost beside her!

The couple passed the taxicab. In those fleet seconds Tony Knight took in the appearance of Judith's companion. She assured herself she could identify him anywhere.

Dark eyes. Straight nose. Broad mouth and above it a small, dark mustache. Was he 25 years old? Certainly not older. He was well dressed, almost dapper. And his eyes not for one instant left Judith's face.

They had passed without even a glance at the cab.

"Turn around!" Tony told her driver excitedly. "Drive back up the street."

Turning was not so simple. By the time the taxicab had whirled about and headed back whence it had come the couple had turned a corner. And when Tony's cab reached that corner and prepared to follow the pair were out of sight.

The girl gave instructions to drive slowly up the street. It was no use. She looked to left and to right but her quarry had disappeared.

"Pennsylvania Station," she told the driver shortly.

Arriving at the station she left the cab, paid a $5 taxi bill and added a generous tip. Then she bought a ticket and took the interurban train home.

"The little sneak!" Tony Knight whispered under her breath. "Oh, the sneaking little cheat!"

Tony was nearly bursting with the excitement of her discovery. She knew a little now. She would find out more and piece the whole together.

Instinct cautioned the girl quite suddenly to turn about and scan her neighbors. No, there was no one who knew her in the car.

The torn and twisted bit of paper still lay in her hand. Tony Knight glanced at the envelope, then began to smooth and straighten it out. She drew forth the crumpled page.

"Dear Judy," the letter began. "Sorry to be late in answering your note. There's no word from the Chief though I've been expecting it daily. No news in this case, I guess is good news.

"I know what you're up against—or at any rate I know enough to wish I could help. Can't you get over soon? It's been a long while. Long, that is for me!

"There's more I want to tell you but it will have to wait for a private visit. How about a little dinner next week? You set the night. There's a plan in my head, dear that may mean a lot for both of us. Maybe you can guess part of it.

"If there's anything from the Chief within the next day or two I'll drop it in the mail. This is one of the lonesome nights. Why aren't you here? No use starting that all over again, I suppose. Remember I'm counting on you for next week. Always—Dan."

The signature had been added with a conspicuous flourish. Tony studied this signature carefully.

Now she had seen Don (of course it must have been he!) and the whole letter had acquired added interest. Dan was good-looking and young and in love with Judith. Dan and Judith evidently had secrets. They had been meeting together and evidently plotted further meetings. Both received messages from someone known as the "Chief."

Why—it was an outrageous intrigue!

There was more to this mystery than was apparent. Yes, certainly Tony meant to know it all.

She arrived at the house before Judith did, rushed to her room and 20 minutes later joined Arthur Knight in the living room. It was a cool evening even though it was April. Low flames flickered on the

Traces Of Basket Makers Who Lived In Big Bend County 4,000 Years Ago Believed Found; Specimens Removed

(By The Associated Press)

DEL RIO, Feb. 15.—Traces of the basket makers, a tribe which is believed to have inhabited the Big Bend country 4,000 years ago, have been found according to a report of Claude B. Young, who was sent out by the Witte Memorial Museum and the archaeological department of the University of Texas.

In a cave of the Chisos mountains the explorer said he found over 200 specimens of stone including fire stones and stone axes. There were also metates-stones upon which grain was ground, and manos, the stones with which to grind. One of these, weighing 180 pounds, was placed on the back of a burro and taken out of the mountains to the Rio Grande, then by hydroplane down the rapids of the river and thence to San Antonio, where it was placed in the Witte Museum. The discoveries were the result of several trips into the mountains, undertaken on the basis of Indian legends which mention the caves, it was said.

Young plans to return to the Big Bend in a few weeks and continue his explorations.

Poultry Interest Added In Floyd

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

LOCKNEY, Feb. 15.—Evidences of an increased interest in the poultry industry of Floyd county are manifest by the early activity of poultrymen preparatory to the caring for a large number of birds this year than during 1929, according to local produce dealers.

Realizing the advantage of properly caring for the farm flock, many farmers of this section have built new and larger quarters, modern brooders have been installed, more scientific methods will be followed and fanciers are introducing new blood strains.

Favorable weather conditions during the past two weeks is promoting the early hatching of chicks, local poultrymen say that a large number of chicks have already been incubated and the local hatchery reports a very satisfactory business.

Nine West Texas Counties Have Poll Tax Boost

SAN ANGELO, Feb. 15.—A survey of poll tax payments this year in nine counties of this section shows an increase of about 10 per cent over those of last year. McCulloch, with a drop of 250, was the only county included in the survey which showed a decrease.

Results of the survey follow:

McCulloch, this year 3,323, last year 3,525. Pecos, this year 1,850, last year unobtained. Runnels, this year 3,300, last year 3,064. Sterling, this year 454, last year 406. Sutton, this year 697, last year 489. Mason, this year 1,852, last year 1,702. Nolan, this year 3,630, last year 3,500. Concho, this year 1,360, last year 1,060. Tom Green, this year 7,326, last year 5,723.

Tony pulled a low footstool in front of her father's chair, perched on it and rested her head against his knees.

"Daddy," she said in a wheedling voice, "sometimes I get so lonesome for you!"

"Why, Tony how could you be lonesome."

"But there's such a little bit of time we have together—I mean really together, without anyone else, daddy. I've been wondering if you and I couldn't take a trip somewhere—"

"Trips are out of the question, Tony. Couldn't think of it. Your dad's got to get back on the job!"

"But father!"

Judith Knight had entered the house and stood in the hallway.

"Well, Judith," said her husband rather stiffly, "you're late!"

"I know. And I'm so sorry!"

"Trouble with the car?"

"No—oh, no, it wasn't anything like that. I—my watch stopped. I thought it was an hour earlier. Is dinner waiting?"

They told her that Harriet had announced the meal was ready.

The bouillon was hot and inviting. The rest of the dinner was up to Cora's high standard. Judith tasted the food with relish because she was hungry.

Gradually she became aware that something was wrong. Something was wrong with herself or with Tony or Arthur. What had happened? On the surface everything was just as it had been but the room's atmosphere was quickened. A storm lay ahead.

It was not to come that night, however. The disaster broke next day.

Turn Firemen Locomotive Used To Smother Fire

LOCKNEY, Feb. 15 (Special)—Railroad locomotives are very effedient as fire extinguishers according to Burton Thornton, owner of a grain elevator at Whitely, 20 miles north of here. While making the run from Silverton to Sterley the train crew noticed a fire in the elevator office that adjoined one of the switch track. The engine was immediately detached from the cars, entered the switch and the train crew turned live steam on the burning office, thus extinguishing the flames.

"The Hollywood Revue" Starts At Lindsey Theater Today

Galaxy Of Stars To Be Seen Here In Musical Film

Extravagance Will Have Four-Day Run Here

THE HOLLYWOOD REVUE," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's spectacular all-musical extravaganza, which starts today at the Lindsey theatre with the greatest cast of stars ever assembled for one motion picture, could not have been the tremendous revue achievement it is without an equally powerful driving force behind it—a gigantic studio, throbbing like a great majestic mill, with the world's best in cinema genius to guide it.

No great product is based upon excellence of material alone; no great production is based solely upon a great cast. This revue has an abundance of material to an extent unprecedented upon stage or screen, but the making of this production involved much more than the glamour of the greatest names in "show business." It hails from a formidable background; a background which cannot, if you think of it, linger unsung after the last note of the picture's twenty melodies re-echoes atop a darkening theatre; a background of miles of buildings, great sound stages, countless workmen, a great unit with a heart that beats as truly as your own, to say nothing of the creative genius which guides its motive power into special channels of special effort and special art.

Stupendous Undertaking

It takes more than lilting music, frothy, sparkling comedy, song hits by famous composers, the largest dancing chorus that ever tripped lightly across the screen, to make a "Hollywood Revue."

Let's look at the cast.

All Star Cast

There's Marion Davies, Conrad Nagel, John Gilbert, Norma Shearer, Bessie Love, Anita Page, William Haines, Karl Dane, George K. Arthur, Gwen Lee, Joan Crawford, Polly Moran, Buster Keaton, Marie Dressler, Charles King, Natacha Nattova, "Ukelele Ike" (Cliff Edwards), the Brox Sisters, Gus Edwards, Jack Benny, the Albertina Rasche ballet and many others, to say nothing of a full dancing chorus and dozens of show girls.

That's the material that has been scrambled into a heterogenous revue. Special songs, special dances, lots of "gags," abundant laughs, tuneful melodies and crackling dialogue—and don't forget the girls.

"Exclusive Rights" To Show At Lyric

Screenland Story To Open Here Wednesday

What are the snares and pitfalls to be avoided by the inexperienced seeking after fame and fortune in screenland? If you really want to know it will be well to read what is said on the subject by Lillian Rich, leading lady in J. G. Bachmann's new Preferred Picture, "Exclusive Rights," which will open on Wednesday at the Lyric theater for a run of two days.

Miss Rich came to Hollywood five years ago and since her arrival has mounted steadily up the actress' ladder until she is now generally considered among the most celebrated actresses of the famous film colony. Until a few months ago she was a member of Cecil De Mille's stock company of players, so her opinion is worth something to the young boy or girl who has hopes of trying to find fame in the films.

The wettest spot on earth is said to be in East Bengal, India, having 429 inches of rainfall per year.

"Navy Blues" With William Haines At Palace This Week

Anita Page Will Be Seen In Comedy Offering

Early in 1928 she was a little extra girl going the rounds of the Hollywood studios looking for a chance to play a "bit" in her first picture on the west coast.

That is the amazing story of Anita Page, 18-year-old New York City school girl who is playing the leading feminine role in William Haines' first all-talking picture, "Navy Blues," which will be shown Tuesday at the Palace Theatre.

Why should fate have picked her out for success and passed others by? Clarence Brown, who directed "Navy Blues," gives his idea of the reasons why this 18-year-old should find herself suddenly and mysteriously well along the road to international fame and financial independence.

"To begin with, she is blonde, and young and attractive but not beautiful," said the director. "For some unknown reason, amazingly beautiful women almost never film well. Blondeness was in her favor with me because as a rule the camera photographs blonde hair better than brunette. Her eyes were big and a blue-green that photographs well. Her chief charm of voice, gleaming golden tresses and a personality are exceedingly rare."

Original Tony Sarg Marionettes To Appear At Tech College February 25

AT A CONGRESS recently held in Paris, representing the Marionette theatres of the world the popularity of the puppet art was indicated by representation of nearly all of the countries of the world and the report, brought out the fact that Czecho Slovakia led with 2,700 marionette theatres.

In this country there are now many marionette companies, all organized since Tony Sarg pioneered thirteen years ago, but there is only one company that has an annual season in New York City, with regular theatre prices and a coast to coast tour of the same company.

To Appear Here

The original Tony Sarg Marionettes, the New York company, will appear here for two performances Tuesday, February 25th at Texas Tech college on the Artists Course. Season tickets are good for the evening only.

The play which will amuse the season is a revival of "Rip Van Winkle," done seven years ago by Tony Sarg. The afternoon show is a trip to fairyland with the Bremen Band a German fairy tale and The Stolen Princess a tale of the Orient quite like the Arabian Nights stories.

Operated By Wires

The marionettes are operated by means of wires, requiring a company of eight people. All the actions of human beings are gone through with by the little figures. The human actors behind the scenes talk for them, the general effect being an absorbing and realistic performance. The stage is complete with all furnishings, lighting equipment, and there is music throughout.

There are animals, like a modern Noah's ark, dogs, rabbit, wild creatures of the forest, and there are spooks, the phantom Hendrik Hudson ship, but Rip, Nick Vedder, Judith and the lovable characters of Irving's many told tale needs no introduction here. The matinee on Tuesday will be give, at popular prices, at 3 p. m. Tickets may be purchased at the City Drug stores.

On and off the screen "The Love Swindle" continues wide-spread and unabated.

Mystery Picture Featured Film As Palace Offering

'The Bishop Murder Case' To Open Run Today

Those individuals who enjoyed the two popular mystery-film successes, "Unholy Night" and "The Thirteenth Chair," have a treat in store for them when "The Bishop Murder Case" stars at the Palace theatre today with such prominent featured players as Basil Rathbone, Leila Hyams, Roland Young, Alec B. Francis and a number of others.

The new all-talking murder drama, adapted by Lenore J. Coffee from the S. S. Van Dine best seller, and filmed under the joint direction of Nick Grinde and David Burton is reputed to be by far the best all-around mystery film as yet to come out of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City.

Advance reports indicate that particular care was taken to give the new thriller a number of original twists and sequences which keep the audience on its toes while confusing it as to the identity of the real murderer.

The plot concerns a series of murders done by a person who leaves a black chess bishop beside each victim and sends jeering notes in "Mother Goose" rhymes to his pursuers notably, Philo Vance, the popular detective of the Van Dine tales. The solution of the mystery is completely cloaked until the last 10 feet of film.

George K. Arthur, Karl Dane Coming

"All At Sea" To Start Today At Lyric

Karl Dane and George K. Arthur score a direct laugh triumph in their new comedy of navy life, "All at Sea," which will be at the Lyric Theater

In this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer farce, the famous co-stars run into all sorts of complications. They are cast as a pair of rollicking sailors who both have an eye on the same girl, a pretty photographic studio operator portrayed by Josephine Dunn.

Byron Morgan, who wrote "Bookies," in which they first won comedy laurels, is the author of this yarn and has provided another knockout story for them in the salty tale of gobs who didn't want to leave any lonesome lasses behind. Numberless thrills abound in the plot and a spectacular fire scene brings a gripping climax to the story action.

The fun begins when Dane, a hardboiled bosn's mate, loses Arthur, who first is seen as a small-time vaudeville magician and hypnotist. To get even Arthur places Dane under a hypnotic spell and when he brings him to finds he has an arch-enemy on his hands. To escape Dane's wrath, Arthur dons a sailor uniform and finds himself in the navy with Dane.

Josephine Dunn enters into the situation by falling in love with Arthur while also having Dane as a would-be suitor. There is a navy ball, in which Arthur is seen disguised as a "vamp" who lures Dane into trouble and manages to get himself fired out of service for starting a panic. Arthur proves a nerd in the arsenal fire, wins

Tuning in on the Talkies
by Walthill

At last Shakespeare is getting out of date. He should have written, for these days: "All the world's a screen."

"Viennese Nights" will be filmed during Hollywood days by Warner Bros. with Vitaphone translating the words of Oscar Hammerstein, Jr., and the music of Sigmund Romberg for this original operetta.

Lois Moran

Lois Moran will be Al Jolson's leading woman in "Mammy," his new minstrel show talkie.

She Has a Good Figure

The movies ask "What's a Wife Worth?" and the time is at hand when hubby will find her cash value stated on his income-tax blank.

Please Be Duly Informed

"The Silent House" has been wired for talkies.

"Spoilers of the West" throw refuse out of their motors.

"Oil and Romance" mix well in the prospectus of an oil stock promotion.

"Wise Girls" To Come To Palace

Elliott Nugent To Appear Friday And Saturday

Elliott Nugent, brilliant young star of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer domestic comedy, "Wise Girls," a talking motion picture which comes to the Palace Theatre Friday holds an honorary athletic letter from the University of Ohio. The University granted this unusual honor ordinarily confined to athletes alone because of Nugent's highly accurate personification of a track athlete in "The Poor Nut." "Kempy," the stage play from which "Wise Girls" was adapted and "The Poor Nut" are the two greatest comedy successes from the pen of Elliott Nugent who also stars in their own plays.

"California Mail" Coming To Lyric

"The California Mail," a title that speaks of action, thrills and speed, has been booked for the Lyric Theater to begin on Friday.

Furthermore the star of this picture is Ken Maynard, the screen's greatest rider, so that audiences are assured the ultimate in entertainment with a combination of a great story and a great star.

"The California Mail" is a story of early California when the Golden Bear State was the "feeder" of gold into the coffers of the Union Army during the Civil War. It brings in graphic detail the four stage coach lines operating under government franchise and carrying on their mail, passenger and express transportation business.

"Winter Sonata" Is Harmonic Book, Elusive As A Dream, By Young Girl

"THE next morning he woke up conscious of having dreamed something a little out of the ordinary," writes Dorothy Edwards on page 67 of her "Winter Sonata," in reference to Arnold Nettle, who may be considered the central figure of the story. So it is with the reader, after having devoted a quiet evening to the perusal of "Winter Sonata." The memory of the book lingers—which is test enough, after all, for any book—but it soon becomes something as tenuous and elusive as a dream. A pleasant dream, to be sure, but leaving little substance to think about and less to talk about. It will not be disputed that a dream that leaves pleasant, even though rarefied and fast dimming, memories is an experience worth having.

The parallel carries itself farther. Arnold Nettle, when he awakened under the spell of his dream, tried to bring its details more clearly to mind. "But he found that the effort of doing so was making him lose its enchantment." The attempt to bring something tangible to our contemplation of "Winter Sonata," or to dress with reality the shadowy figures that slip in shy silences through its pages, mars something of the exquisite delicacy of Miss Edwards' work. It is like trying to put into words the effect of soft music on a sensitive soul—and there is literally a series of movements in the harmonic structure of "Winter Sonata" which justifies the title of the story.

The theme is simplicity itself. Arnold Nettle comes to a little English village to serve as telegraph clerk in the post office where his uncle is postmaster. Miss Edwards concerns herself with the happenings in this group—largely the milder emotional experiences and those usually indicated by subtle implications—during the two or three months following the coming of Nettle to the village.

Most important in the group are Olivia and Eleanor Neran, whose aunt and cousin, Mrs. Curle and George Curle, have come to live with them in the white house behind the fir trees on the hill. It is the thought of Olivia, the dark one, and wearing a white woolen dress that makes Arnold Nettle blush after she has passed the post office window on his first day there: and so it is after many evenings in her home, she playing the piano and he the cello. Mrs. Curle, who hates the country, looks a bit like a fat goose. Her son George, also fat, is amiable and given to philosophy. George's friend, David Premiss, is a guest in the Neran-Curle household for several weeks, a clever and somewhat superior young man, who has had more feminine adulation than is good for him. His presence stirs a strange restlessness in Eleanor, the younger of the sisters, which his casual love-making does not wholly allay.

Mr. Premiss has casual love-making also for Pauline Clark, the daughter of Arnold Nettle's landlady—insistent, flighty Pauline who whenever he takes a stroll. Pauline is more vital, or less shadowy, than goes out of her way to meet him the other young people of the story.

"Winter Sonata" is a first novel. It is obviously the work of a young writer, but the serenity that clothes its movement all the way is the result of a deft restraint that more than promises well. Miss Edwards gets her effects of atmosphere and character with an economy of effort which is very impressive and she threads a strain of beauty through her pages with the grace of the born artist.

"Winter Sonata," by Dorothy Edwards. E. P. Dutton Co. Price $2.00.

World His Oyster

Walton Hall Smith, author of Forgive Us Our Happiness, a novel just published by Horace Liveright, is now on his way to Tahiti. This is just a small journey that will take Mr. Smith to Australia, Hong Kong, Singapore, and every place you've wanted to visit, all your life. This young man, born in Kansas City, knows his United States like the palm of his hand. But not content with that, he has spent two years in the Belgian Congo, establishing trading posts for a company of ivory dealers. He has lived in Europe for two years. While his home was Paris, he wrote most of Forgive Us Our Happiness.

Lover Of None

"The case of Amiel," notes Andre Maurois, "is the pathological one of sentimentality through inability to love. The friend of all women, he was the lover of none. But once in all his life did he meet a woman who asked only to be conquered. It is she whom he called Philine: 'I use her to continue gently my studies of feminine psychology.' Thanks to Philine, Amiel, at the age of forty, became acquainted with the other half of friendship and recorded his disappointment as follows: 'In the last analysis I am dumfounded at the relative insignificance of that pleasure of which we hear so much!'" Amiel's "Philine" is soon to be issued by Houghton Mifflin company in a translation by Van Wyck Brooks with an introduction by Edmond Jaloux.

Greedy Young Lady

Marian Spitzer, in her recently published novel A Hungry Young Lady (Horace Liveright), has shown up the type of pretty, grasping young woman of the well-to-do class who wants a career without working for it. You know that girl—a very hungry young lady, the kind who eats her cake and still has it. She has no ability, no inclination to work, but she feels certain that being sweet to dramatic critics, using her charm on actors and producers (and being thoroughly unscrupulous about every one whom she cannot use) will land her face in the rotogravures. This heroine chooses the theater by way of trying to be the darling of America. She is a prime example of the young woman who is intruding in every field of endeavor—a menace to every woman who is seriously concerned about her professional career.

"Gather The Stars" Cleverly Penned

D. Patrick Writes To Formula And To Women

"Gather the Stars", by Diana Patrick, 288 pp. New York; E. P. Dutton & Co., Inc. $2.50.

"GATHER the Stars!" is smoothly and cleverly written to a sure formula and for a group of readers, assuredly feminine, who must exist in increasingly large numbers throughout the length and breadth of this fair land.

With a simple, ancient formula Miss Patrick portrays the lovely, vivacious wife and mother near the border line of encroaching years, the accelerated longing for a ray of romance, a sudden excursion to the Emerald Isle, the advent of a romantic young Irishman, and an indifferent husband and indifferent children to help her along the wandering lane of true love. Miss Patrick delicately traces the emotional excursion of a charming English wife, Laurel Guest, who sows one last delightful and moderately wild oat near the Lakes of Killarney. In a few breathless months, in fact, this remarkably lucky and gifted lady finds the lover of her dreams, the wealth of her desires, the divorce she has craved, and even great expectations of the child who will bless her mellow and declining years. It is all deftly and cleverly told. Wherever there are discontented women, wherever there are women with too much to do or too little to do, they will probably turn to "Gather the Stars!" It is a perennial type of romantic novel, which in matters of style, phrasing and technique, bears evidence of the marked improvements in this type of fiction during the past decade.

Novels About The Soil, Backwoods Continue To Come

Writers Tell Of Realism In New Novels Out

NOVELS of the soil and the backwoods continue undiminished.

Here Rolvaag has a vividly tragic tale of miserhood.

From the meeting of Louis Houghlum and Lizzie Olen at threshing season through their marriage, to their sordid deaths, the couple's whole life together was changed by the idolatry of money, not for what is buys in comfort and richness of life, but money for its own sake.

In tracing the growth of their addiction to hoarding money, which finally is burned without benefiting anybody, Rolvaag says he observes "what might happen and what, in many cases, actually does happen to an individual who has no tradition and no cultural background."

"We have," he adds, "plenty of them in America."

Suffolk, Tennessee

H. W. Freeman's passion for the soil shows itself again in "Down in the Valley" as it did in his widely read "Joseph and His Brethren."

The Suffolk countryside tugs at the heart of a city man until it brings him down into a valley farm community. There, his life is enriched and broadened, his instincts are given a more natural play and he develops a new gauge by which to measure human relations.

Returning to Americana, T. S. Stribling, best known for his stories of the Tennessee backwoods, returns to that locale in "Backwater." It is a tale of Old Bill Jack Murdock, the local bootlegger, his son Jim and Mary Sue Meredith, daughter of aristocratic neighbors.

Jim is banned from the social circles of his home community, although college bred and personally acceptable, because of his father's outlawed occupation. He falls in love with Mary Sue. Old Bill Jack Murdock dislikes the idea of a match between the families as much as the banker father of Mary Sue.

Liberty

Away from these various settings of rural civilization, Blair Niles goes for her novel of exile on the French penal islands.

In the exotic jungles that surrounded the prison camp in her "Condemned to Devil's Island," she has placed the hero of "Free."

Stephen Latour was a libere, a youthful "thrill murderer" who had served his sentence on Devil's Island, but was to remain in exile among others of his kind, eking out a hopeless existence.

Tech Chamber Of Commerce Looks To Benefit Of College By Doing Tasks No Other Organization Undertakes

Service To Students Theme Of Group; Athletics And Other Activities Helped By C. of C. Membership

"ORGANIZED during the fall term of 1928, the Texas Tech chamber of commerce has become one of the foremost organizations on the campus from the standpoint of service to the student body and administration of the school, and in promoting general civic activities on the campus, it is filling a real need," thinks Elmer J. Moore, president of the body.

The chamber of commerce was organized during the fall of 1928 when a need was seen for some organization on the campus to sponsor many worthy student activities which do not come within the scope of any of the other clubs. The initial group consisted of a number of men students who became interested in the project, and now has 25 members from the different schools who are voted into the body.

Record Is Cited

"We have a good record of achievement in the past and have several projects under way," Moore says. "Entertainment features are planned for visitors to the campus, a college song contest is being sponsored and we are trying to stimulate interest in intramural athletics among other activities."

At a luncheon given for visiting high school students at the Simmons football game last year there were 300 people in attendance, 60 of which are now enrolled in the college. Last year the body also presented Percy Walker a specially designed ring in token of Tech's appreciation for his participation in the East-West game New Year's Eve, 1929.

Trophy Is Planned

In promoting general interest in this year's intramural athletics the body has suggested a small fee be charged for the games, which will be staged during the following weeks, and has planned to present a trophy in the form of a bronze bull to the winner. On the side of the bull will be an engraved tablet containing the name of the winning school and probably the names of the players. In order for the trophy to become the permanent property of any school it must be won three consecutive years.

A prize of $25 is being offered to the person submitting a song which shall be selected as the college anthem. About 25 songs have been submitted so far but no definite action has been taken towards selecting the best, if any of the ones now submitted should prove suitable, and the contest is still open indefinitely.

Officers are Prof. B. F. Condray, faculty sponsor, Elmer J. Moore, president and Homer Maxey, secretary-treasurer. Regular meetings are held on second and fourth Wednesdays of each month and a special meeting has been called for Monday night, February 17, in room 219 of the administration building at 7:30 o'clock.

ABERNATHY NEWS

BY MRS. W. A. RICHTER

SURPRISE PARTY

The friends of Mrs. B. F. Struve surprised her with a birthday party at her home in west Abernathy.

She was presented with many pretty and practical gifts. An afternoon of skaat and bridge were enjoyed and at a late hour cake, tea and coffee were served to Mesdames H. E. Richter, F. W. Struve, N. N. Goebel, Fritz Fuchs, jr., W. A. Richter, Henry Struve, jr., R. Schroeter, M. Goebel, Miss Bettie Fuchs and mother, Mrs. Fritz Fuchs, sr.

HERMLEIGH MAN HERE

"LEO" THE LION VISITS HERE

"Leo," a Metro-Goldwyn movie star, was a visitor here Tuesday afternoon. School was dismissed for the occasion and several hundred children were present besides several hundred older people. The Abernathy band under the direction of Mr. Beene welcomed Leo and his trainer to our town. The trainer was introduced by J. P. Nystel, mayor of Abernathy. An interesting talk was given by the trainer and a demonstration of the acts which Leo does on the stage, was given.

ABERNATHY P. T. A.

Tuesday afternoon was regular program afternoon for the members of the Abernathy P. T. A. and was one of the most successful meetings of the season. Miss Nell Ayres county health nurse from Plainview was one of the main speakers of the afternoon. A lovely social hour was enjoyed when the H. E. Club girls were hostesses which they served with an attractive tea in the home economics rooms.

Valentine motifs were used in the refreshments which were served from the luncheon table with Mrs. Lucile Heggie, Minnie Williams, Iva Williams, Pauline Mae Conn and Norma Maud Gerdes on the serving committee and Misses Cecilia Struve and Charlotte Lindsey on the receiving committee. After the social hour the following program was presented in the high school auditorium.

The program Talk on health and nutrition with illustrations by Miss Neil Ayress, county health nurse; plans for the organization of a junior club and an outline of same by Miss Angela Strnad; Talk on preschool education by Mrs. L. P. Shaw; talk on junior work by Mrs. K. C. Sterrett; the club also gave a rising vote of thanks for Miss Ayress coming and giving such a fine talk.

VEGETABLES SHIPPED

Over 600 Carloads Sent Out Of Laredo District

LAREDO, Feb 15. (AP)—More than 600 carloads of vegetables have been shipped from the Laredo district, with spinach and broccoli leading.

While the mature spinach was practically killed by the several freezes of January 17 young spinach has begun to reach the maturity stage and is beginning to move out while broccoli only slightly damaged by the cold is making a heavy crop.

Many of the crops like cabbage, beets, etc., which were badly damaged by the severe cold were reported "coming back."

Amber is not a stone. It is fossil petrified resin from certain trees.

Mesdames Della Justice and Fred Clark returned a few days ago from Dallas, where they have been marketing for Bryant-Link Co.

Among those attending the Zimbalist concert, at Lubbock, last week, were Mesdames Kathryn Robinson, C. L. Pickett, J. W. Parker, O. L. Weakley, Misses Colleen Darden, Peggy Kelly, Rose Jean Rodgers, Messrs. Lowell Robinson and Gaines Parker.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Woman's Missionary Society met Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Clyde Hundley. The devotional was given by Mrs. Graeber. Mrs. J. E. Parker read the minutes for the last meeting. The lesson from our study book was conducted in a most inspiring way by Mrs. Carter Thompson. This was enjoyed very much by all present. Lovely refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served.

BIRTHDAY CLUB

Mrs. Leon Moses was the charming hostess to the Birthday club Tuesday honoring Mrs. Nettie Holly. After a delightful social hour the guests were ushered into the dining room and asked to find their places, marked by quaint little valentines. A lovely two course luncheon was served, after which a huge red valentine filled with beautiful gifts was presented to the honoree. Those enjoying this occasion were Mesdames Lloyd, Hartman Tharp Samson, Morris, Cox, Greaber, Cottlieb, Mother Presson, Miss Gene Samson, and the hostess.

TECH STUDENTS ENTERTAINED

Miss Elizabeth Pickett had as luncheon guests Sunday, a number of her friends from Tech. The valentine motif was featured, and cut flowers added beauty to the occasion. Small valentine place cards with sentimental verses, and comic valentines, as "photos" of each guest caused much merriment. A five course luncheon was served to the following: Misses Voncile Gilkerson, Brilla Mae Willis, Rhoda Lou Clarke, Lavern Yowell, Edith Sanders, Elizabeth O'Connell, Jo Ann Estes, and the hostess; Messrs. James Dallas Roy Taylor, Lonnie Langson, J. D. Waller, Kenneth Hemphill, Bob Taylor, Chuck Williams, and Foster Davis.

MISS PATTON HONORED

Mrs. Ed L. Robertson entertained at her home last Tuesday afternoon with a lovely tea, honoring her sister, Miss Matalie Patton, of Lamesa, a former Post girl, who is to be married February 15 to Mr. Frank Mainer, of Phoenix, Arizona. Red and white cut flowers made the home unusually beautiful. Receiving with the hostess and honoree were Misses Margaret Garland, of Lamesa, and Elizabeth Pickett, of Post. Refreshments were offered in the dining room from a table beautifully laid with a Normandy lace cloth, and centered with a silver basket filled with red carnations around which burned tall red tapers in silver holders. A miniature bride and groom held streamers of red tulle, from the chandelier. Mrs. D. C. Williams and Mrs. Ed Warren presided at the tea table from which were served a delicious course. A tiny heart upon each plate announced the news—"Matalie and Frank, February 15, 1930."

About sixty-five guests registered in the brides book, which was presided over by Miss Margaret Garland.

Out-of-town guests present were: Mesdames W. K. Crawley, W. P. Averett, J. E. Garland, Philip Yonge, and W. E. Gossett, of Lamesa, Mrs. Bill Patton of Colorado, Mrs. Frank Lynn of Roswell, sister of the honoree, Mesdames George Herd, and Joe Penny of Lubbock, Mrs. J. W. McCoach, Snyder, Miss Margaret Garland, Lamesa.

SHOWER FOR BRIDE-ELECT

Miss Matalie Patton, a bride-to-be, was honored Wednesday night when Mesdames R. H. Collier and Guy Speck arranged a miscellaneous shower at the home of the latter. The entertaining rooms were artistically decorated with flowers. In the west end of the living room a beautiful rainbow was placed with colored ribbons which led to the pot of gold in which were the gifts. During the evening the following musical program was enjoyed: piano solo, Mrs. A. W. Bouchier, jr.; reading, Mrs. Tom Gates; violin solo, Mrs. Kathryn Robinson; vocal solo, Mrs. T. L. Jones.

In the dining room was a brides' cake topped by a miniature bride and groom, surrounded by tall tapers tied with tulle. Cake and brick ice cream was served to about 40 guests. The honoree was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

THE NEEDLECRAFTERS

Mrs. Holley was hostess to the Needlecrafters on last Friday afternoon. After a pleasant hour spent on handwork the hostess served baked apples topped with cream, cake and punch, valentine favors were used. Guests were Mesdames Graeber, Moses, Sorgee, Thompson, Durrett, Bowen, Bouchier, Parker, Presson, Morris, Manley Hamilton, Gottlieb. The club will meet with Mrs. Jim Hundley February 21st.

PRISCILLA CLUB

Mrs. Clyde Hundley was hostess to the Priscilla club Friday afternoon. An unusually busy hour was spent in sewing, after which Mrs. Verna Greenfield who is leaving to make her home in Lubbock, was presented with a shower of handkerchiefs as a farewell gift from the club. Little Miss Helen Joe Hundley gave two readings for the guests' entertainment. In an alphabetical contest, Mrs. Ira Greenfield was awarded first prize, while Mrs. Bob Warren won consolation prize. Lovely refreshments were served. Those present were: Mesdames, J. D. Justice, Ivan Stoker, Williams, Stallings, Lewis, Bird, Sims, Watson, Kelley Kitchen, Mathis, Greenfield, Warren, Duckworth, Collier, and Easley. Guests were Miss Hundley Bishop, Maupin and Mrs. J. M. Hundley.

THE P. O. F. CLUB

Misses Doll and Juanita Ramsey entertained the members of the P. O. F. club with a valentine bridge party, at their home, Tuesday evening. Red hearts of all sizes were used to adorn the rooms, and red lighting added to the brilliance of the scene. As the guests assembled a valentine contest was handed out. Miss Vada Satterwhite was awarded a heart shaped box of Pangburn's for the winning prize. At the close of the games Miss Lois Ruth Weakley was given a lovely old gold neck-lace for high score and Mrs. Kathryn Robinson was presented with a lovely prize as consolation. Appropriate refreshments were served. Plate favors were small red baskets filled with nuts. Members present were: Misses Myrtle Holley, Vada Satterwhite, Hazel Evans, Thelma Clark, Gladys Stevens, Geneva Voss, and the hostesses. Guests of the club were: Mrs. Tom Gates, Mrs. Fred Custis, jr., Mrs. Lowell Robinson, Misses Marliee Lowe, Helen Custis, Lois Ruth Weakley.

HAVE YOU SEEN THESE TWO GREAT NEW CARS?

PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

THE NEW OAKLAND 8

GENERAL MOTORS' Lowest-priced Eight—

$1045 AND UP

Three years of actual designing and testing preceded the announcement of the New Oakland Eight. In addition it incorporates General Motors' sixteen years' experience in building fine eight-cylinder automobiles. This mature background accounts for its sound basic design.

Superior Performance

The New Oakland has an 85-horsepower engine. This is the highest power ever employed in a car of Oakland's size and weight, racing cars excepted. Oakland develops one horsepower to 37 pounds of car weight. That's why few cars are as fast. That's why few, if any, can pass it on the hills. That's why it accelerates so rapidly. In fact, that is the reason for its superior performance.

Eight-Cylinder Performance

With its high speed and fast acceleration, the new Oakland combines the smoothness resulting from the overlapping power impulses inherent in eight-cylinder design. This smoothness is intensified by such features as its complete down-draft fuel distribution, its patented laminated spring and rubber engine mountings and a new type of cylinder head which assures uniform combustion.

Only a close inspection and a demonstration will enable you to understand fully the many advantages provided by the New Oakland Eight.

The New Oakland Eight, $1045 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers, rear fender guards and spring covers extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

NEW SERIES PONTIAC BIG 6

A FAMOUS NAME— A Finer Car—

$745 AND UP

Once again Pontiac has improved upon a car already noted for its excellent qualities. To the hundreds of thousands who own Pontiacs, and to everyone interested in low-priced automobiles, this announcement is important. For it introduces the New Series Pontiac Big Six—a new and finer car with a famous name.

New Beauty, Smoothness, Safety

Smart new bodies by Fisher make the New Series Big Six a more beautiful Pontiac. Pontiac's smoothness is increased by a new type of rubber supports for its 60-horsepower engine. Improved non-squeak four-wheel brakes and a new sloping non-glare windshield add to the car's safety.

Time-Tried Performance

When these and other improvements were being made, all of Pontiac's basic big car excellence was retained.

Come in. Let us show you the many advantages of this finer car with a famous name—the New Series Pontiac Big Six.

The New Series Pontiac Big Six, $745 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Shock absorbers standard equipment. Bumpers and spring covers at slight extra cost. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values . . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

"Fate Of The Old Tub" Presents Mystery

What Becomes Of Automobiles? Is Unanswered Query

Many Go To City Dump After Years Of Service; Others Are Sold For Junk While Others 'Just Go'

BY ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche-Journal Staff.

A THREE-ACT tragedy, "The Fate of the Old Tub," was once conceived by an enterprising playwright, who gave up his brain child in sheer remorse.

Since then another writer started a tale of the same sort but laboried his work at the outset — "The Automobile Graveyard." He, too, gave up in dispair as the heart throbs began to overcome his sentimental nature. It's a great story, he mused, but such a work must be handled by a cold-blooded theorist.

What Becomes of 'Em.

"What becomes of the thousands of automobiles we see on the streets and highways in this modern motor age?"

"Where do all these vehicles go after their days of usefulness have passed?"

These and many other questions arise when we think along the lines that the author followed who attempted to manufacture the desertation on "The Automobile Graveyard."

8,000 Registered.

Approximately 8,000 motor cars are registered in Lubbock county with a population of 40,000, giving the area an automobile for every five persons. These figures convince even the most casual observer that the deterioration in this number of cars is enormous.

In an age where speed is the order of the day, the average life of a car is three years. This means automobiles that were put on the road more than three years ago are fast becoming almost worthless wrecks, insofar as the owner is concerned.

This leads us up to the original question — What becomes of these heaps of iron, steel, tin and wood after they will no longer take you there and bring you back?

Trades It In.

Generally speaking, the course of the average old bus after its owner has given up in his attempt to make it run is something like this: Knowing that he will be given more for the tub that was once his pride and joy if he trades in the remains on a new car, Mr. Owner takes what the automobile dealer will give him and the relic passes from his hands. In the majority of instances the old car is so far gone that the dealer doesn't try to re-condition it. And here comes the sad part of our story.

The old bus that transported the family to its various destinations through the snow and sleet of winter time; carried them to the mountain-side 'neath clear summer skies or accompanied a pair of lovers in their search for the peace and quiet of a cool country lane—if it could only talk—this same old bus now heads wearily for the Automobile Graveyard, making its way with the aid of a towing conveyance to its last resting place.

Just An Outcast.

'Tis a sad scene, and our vivid imagination tells us that the family discard is muttering something to itself about "nobody loves a worn-out car . . . no appreciation, etc." The creaks and groans of a road-weary body speak these words, as the old buggy is towed to a lot where other unfortunates have gone before.

Here the "worthless" heap is appraised by a man who specializes in auto parts and a meager sum is offered, ranging from one dollar on up. The dealer gladly accepts any price and the last deal on the old Battle-Ax is closed.

With shattered pride, the remains of the family conveyance takes its place alongside numerous other veterans of the road and waits for further developments, if any. But there are other developments which carry the car back to its formative days.

Its Vitals Removed

The machine is wrecked and all the vitals removed with the intent of saving the parts of any value. Many times these parts become like new again after being treated by skilled mechanics. But the death of the old bus has already come to pass. Here in a stack of springs, there in a pile of wheels and yonder in a mass of old weather-beaten tops — all parts of what was once a purring motor vehicle. Mr. Owner's car has met a death, but it all happens to be a part of the general scheme of things.

Those who invest in worn-out cars have various avenues through which they secure a return on their investment. While the sale of parts is the chief income for this business, there are other sources likewise remunerative. Last summer a local dealer in old cars shipped five carloads of scrap iron to an iron establishment in Colorado. All brass and aluminum is saved and much of the tin can be used. Farmers have been known to buy a supply of old automobile tin to build improvised sheds and in some instances, use the tins for wind breaks.

But there is a certain amount of these auto remains that can be used for nothing. The worst waste

MRS. ALLEN ENTERTAINS

Mrs. L. O. Allen entertained with a four table bridge party Wednesday. The Valentine scheme was carried out in beautiful manner both as to color and design. Chicken sandwiches, in heart design, congealed salad potato chips, potato chips, and cake with hot tea. The plate favors in heart design, all lent a pretty effect to the scene.

Those present on this occasion were Mesdames, Baldwin, Scudder, Tom May, Michie Wingerd, Ike Bailey, A. A. Sawyer, Enderson Dubois, Ralph Carter, Holmes, McGowan, Shelton, Bowers, Lawles.

CIRCLE 1 MEET

Leader, Mrs. Collins. Lesson from Luke 10:3 to 7. Mrs. Bandy led a lesson from Royal Service. Present on this occasion were Mesdames Bandy, Cargill Cruce Collins, Alexander Adams, Auburn Fowler Bond. The hostess served peach ice cream and cake to the assembly.

The Maids and Matrons club met Tuesday at the grade school building, and for the entertainment and instruction of the children, presented the following program: Subject, Birds; leader, Mrs. W. M. Adams; Misses Dumas and Hultz, Texas birds and game; by Mr. Boots Hunter, Florida birds.

MRS. WINGERD HOSTESS

Mrs. Roy Wingerd was hostess to a dinner and theater party Tuesday evening honoring Mr. Wingerd's sister, Miss Belle Boles, of Hoxie, Kansas, who with her mother and father, are visiting here at present. The tale service and candles presentd a very pretty color scheme of green and orange. Those present on this occasion were Misses Marie Bell, Olga Fitzgerald, Addie Hamilton, Violet McBurnett, Louellen Brown and the honor guest.

The scarlet fever scare which seems to be pretty well distributed over the country everywhere, and which caught Brownfield also for a while has passed over, and its residents are getting back to normal. Brownfield only had three cases reported and they are recovering. The condition is being amply controlled by health officer Dr. M. C. Bell.

Young matrons met with Mrs. Carter, and discussed work of Baptist missions in Algeria. After a delightful interesting lesson, the hostess served refreshments to the following members: Mesdames Mary Green Nelson, Roy Dail, Clint Boles, Clyde Locke, Ike Bailey, Jennie Stewart, Otis Draper, Alice Hoot, W. W. Price, D. D. Mayes, J. A. Dickerson, Mesdames Hoot, Price and the hostess.

Circle 2 met with Mrs. Bandy, and had as their subject, "Our Duty to Our Neighbors." Lesson from Luke 10:25 to 37. Mrs. Bandy led a lesson from Royal Service. Present on this occasion were Mesdames Bandy, Cargill Cruce, Collins, Alexander, Adams, Auburn Fowler Bond. The hostess served peach ice cream and cake to the assembly.

Circle 3 met with Mrs. Pounds. Subject, a study of pioneer women, by Una Roberts Laurance, a pioneer missionary who is still living. This study was led by Mrs. E. V. May. Devotional by Mrs. Burnett. Members present on this occasion were: Mesdames Neill, Scudday, Price, Pauline and E. V. Wirtz, McBurnett, McLeod, May.

All circles will meet in the church in general assembly next Monday.

The musicale given by the Troubadours and assisted by the high and grammar school students, under the management of Mrs. W. H. Dallas was a success.

Mrs. Dubois entertains the Luncheon club this week.

Mrs. Roy Wingerd is giving a tea Friday afternoon of this week honoring Mr. Wingerd's parents, who are here from Hoxie, Kansas visiting.

Buick Crankshaft Nears Perfection

QUALITY
beyond all previous standards

In entering the 1930 market, Dodge Brothers were keenly conscious of two fundamental facts: First, that this year more than ever, value will be the basis of sales. Second, that the public is today better qualified than ever to judge value.

Dodge engineers met these conditions by designing two new cars with features that not only satisfy the demands of a thrifty and motor-wise public, but set the standard of values far ahead of any previous conception. Specifically these engineers have achieved:

SENSATIONAL VALUES

A NEW SIX $835 AND UP F.O.B. FACTORY

—the lowest priced Six Dodge Brothers ever have offered.

—the lowest priced closed car of any model Dodge Brothers ever have offered.

—the lowest priced car with internal expanding four wheel hydraulic brakes ever offered.

A NEW EIGHT $1095 AND UP F.O.B. FACTORY

—unmatched at its price for power, speed, comfort and safety.

—unparalleled in its field for quality, distinction and style.

—unequaled in value among popular-priced eight-cylinder cars—with Monobloc Steel Body, Down Draft carburetion, weatherproof four wheel hydraulic brakes, cantilever action hydraulic shock absorbers and many other fine features.

These new cars have been the sensation of the winter's automobile shows. See them at your nearest Dodge Brothers dealer's showroom.

*In the Unisteel type of construction the body and chassis are designed as a unit, eliminating body sills and all other wooden parts. The body is bolted directly to the chassis, so that the two become mutually supporting and mutually flexible.

The new Chrysler-built De Soto Straight Eight, offered at a base price of $965 (f. o. b. Detroit), is proving the dominant value in the field of low-priced cars. Neither America nor Europe ever before produced so fine an eight at so low a price. It was the sensation of the New York Automobile Show. In performance that results from serene, smooth power delivered by a superbly-designed engine—in distinction of design, beauty of appointments and riding comfort—the De Soto Straight Eight, beyond all doubt, possesses an even greater margin of superiority than that which made its triumphant companion car, the De Soto Six, the largest-selling first-year car in the history of the industry.

Designer Deplores Similarity Of Car Body Styles Today

Styles Have Struck Rut, Famed Designer Declares In Address; Predicts New Lines Next Year.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Automobile body styles have struck a rut, at least temporarily, said L. Clayton Hill, vice president and general manager of Dietrich, Inc., famous auto body designers, in an address before the Society of Automotive Engineers here.

"If the exhibits at the automobile show are viewed impartially, one must conclude that automobile body appearance has reached a state bordering standardization, or perhaps we should say stagnation," he remarked.

Give Characteristics

"General proportion, panel contours, roof sweeps, window shapes, belt molding treatments—these and other points which give to a body its distinguishing characteristics—have reached such a state of similarity, in most cases, as to confuse the buying public. There are several notable exceptions, of course, but it is not infrequent experience to hear one of the lay public who try and drive motor cars remark, 'Oh, this is the Whoosis.' I thought it was the Oofty Goofy.'

Mechanical Units Stressed

"This similarity of design has now spread even to the radiator and bonnets. Such a tendency seems particularly regrettable because the radiator is as much a distinguishing feature of a motor car as the face of a human being."

Mechanical Units Stressed

With this similarity of design has come the practice of engineers to devote most of their time to mechanical improvements, Hill said. That is the reason why such mechanical features as the eight and twelve-cylinder cars and the downdraft carburetor made their appearance this year, he added.

But with this similarity of body design will come the desire of manufacturers again to distinguish their product from others with individuality, he predicted. All predicted that this show will see the end of it.

"It will be surprising indeed if a show in January, 1931, does not reveal one or three examples of advanced design in motor car bodies."

Maybe we will pass some of the evident trends abroad such as the deep-sided body with running boards abolished, the rear wheels or the spare tire enclosed, there will exist the opportunity for a designer to produce really attractive body without any sidings whatever.

It would be distinctly unfair to say that 1929 did not produce many forward steps in body construction although the bodies which were shown are greatly refined in line and style. There has been much progress in body materials, in the general appearance of the car, with emphasis rather than the whole. Convertible bodies are becoming large with the American public. Very active and interesting is being given to the design of the interiors of the cars. It is going to be a really beautiful year.

ON AUTO ROW

AUTO SHOW PLANNED

Tentative plans were inaugurated by Lubbock automobile dealers last week for the second annual automobile show for this city and section. Although no definite dates have been set for the exposition, the local association has settled on the month of March for the spring showing of new models. The success of last year's show at the Uptown Dance Palace indicates the same building will be used for the 1930 demonstration.

PURPOSE OUTLINE

Feb. 24 is the date that has been set for definite action on the show. At this time all plans for the event will be completed, according to C. P. Kuykendall, president of the Lubbock Automobile dealers association.

"The real purpose of our automobile show is to show the public the wonderful values that are to be offered motorists in 1930," said Mr. Kuykendall. "I firmly believe that the modernized motor cars are getting more value for their money in the used car field."

BACK FROM CHICAGO

The local Chevrolet manager has just returned from Chicago where he attended a meeting of the National Automobile dealers association. Mr. Kuykendall says that a complete report of this meeting will be given local dealers last week. Several new buck agents have been added to the membership in the national association. This organization, Mr. Kuykendall points out, is one of the wonders of the business world as well as the public. Lubbock is contributed by the organization, its members, officers and affairs on a nice basis.

CAPLAND TO CALIFORNIA

OLDSMOBILE COUPE

including the new 1930 Oldsmobile coupe was en route to Lubbock came under the classification of good news for the Davis Oldsmobile authorities last week. Manager Birch announces that the demand for the Oldsmobile coupe has exceeded any other type of the 1930 General Motors product. Thus far the local Oldsmobile agency has been unable to get one of the new coupes in stock.

ADOPT NEW POLICY

A policy of re-conditioning used cars has been adopted by the Oldsmobile concern here. All used cars are thoroughly reconditioned before they are rolled off the lot. Four used cars were sold by this concern last week.

SELL TWO HUDSONS

Two new Hudsons were delivered by Hub Jones Motor company last week. Russell Mercer of the city took delivery on a Hudson sedan and Mrs. LaMar of Hale Center was sold a Hudson coach.

USED CARS MOVING

Concentrated efforts of the used car sales force at Joe Hutto company is bringing results for the local Chrysler agency. Six used machines were moved from the lot last week in addition to the sale of one new car. Sales Manager Hines says that a complete stock of used cars are on hand and ready for delivery. Two new used car salesmen were added to the Chrysler sales force last week. Those were C. D. Keever of this city and W. B. Logan, formerly of Abilene.

Speed Featured In Willys Six Truck

Speed comparable to that of passenger cars with the extreme power, ruggedness, economy of chassis construction and durability the keynote of modern day commercial transportation, is found in the new 1930 1 1-2 ton truck announced by Willys-Overland. Four speeds forward and 65 horsepower are the features of the factory performance on the road.

Improvement of the Willys-Knight six with a new Willys-Overland six as addition to the 4-cylinder truck line manufactured by Willys-Overland, reveals a new idea in commercial car manufacture which for the first time gives the commercial car buyer as large a range of selection as is offered the buyer of a passenger car.

The lowest natural temperature recorded on the surface of the earth is at Verhoyansk, Siberia, 79 degrees below zero.

Pertinent Facts About Automobiles By Israel Klein, Science Editor For NEA Service

By ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

Compilation of the various suggestions and warnings made from week to week to motorists makes a big list of things for the driver to think about. Fortunately, the thoughtful motorist has made it a habit to keep his car in such good shape that he needn't worry about the things he has to do with his automobile in order to have it running well.

But there are many of us who might have overlooked an important item in the care of the car, especially the winter care, and it is for these that perhaps a list of Don'ts for the motorist might be beneficial. These don'ts are for winter driving only and if looked over carefully may remind the motorist of an item or two which needs attention on his own car.

Let us start with Don'ts regarding the motor:

Don't be in a hurry in winter. Vague as it may sound this is perhaps the most important of all. The maxim leads on to such important warnings as—

Don't race the motor in the morning, and

Don't overprime the motor, and

Don't start off before the motor is sufficiently warmed up. All of which require an extra minute or two for the driver to start his motor, carefully run it considerately and warm it up by easy stages until it idles quietly and there is no danger of a cracked cylinder head or motor block from a frozen cooling system.

Don't idle the motor too long is another winter caution, for the carburetor is set for a heavy mixture at this time of year and an idling motor draws into it a mixture that less air than the motor does when it is running faster. The result is an overdose of gasoline that is unburned in the cylinders and dilution of the crankcase oil.

Don't try racing out of a rut or off a slippery pavement. It's hard on the motor and merely digs the drive wheels further into the rut or slides the car off to the side of the slippery street.

Don't strain the motor in high gear. The low gears are there for a purpose and should be put into use not only for starting, but for climbing when necessary.

These are other don'ts for motor cars but these are outstanding.

There are six lubrication don'ts and ignition don'ts that we ought to remember. For example—

Don't save on oil in winter. Change it more often.

Don't forget the battery solution.

Don't press down on the starter switch or use it too often, or the battery will run down quickly. Use the primer in starting.

Don't burn the bright lights too long. You need all the juice possible for starting.

Don't overlook the instruments on the dash. They tell you how the motor is running.

Don't stop too quickly.

Don't declutch when stopping until safe to do so.

Don't speed on a slippery street.

Don't run the motor in a closed garage.

And, to repeat the initial warning—

Dodge Head Sees Better Business

Four significant events that have taken place within the past few days are interpreted by C. W. Matheson, general sales manager of Dodge Brothers, as tangible evidence that business conditions in thte United States have actually reached the point where the automotive industry may definitely count upon a larger volume of business during the coming year than was transacted during 1929. This applied he says to all branches of the business—passenger cars, trucks and buses.

The four factors upon which Mr. Matheson bases his conclusions are:

1. Assurance from Robert P. Lamont, Secretary of Commerce, that public construction throughout the country during the comyear will reach the record total of approximately $7,000,000,000.

2. The report from the Department of Labor that for the first time since last fall the tide of employment has changed in the right direction.

3. Increases in production schedules announced by Dodge Brothers and other automobile manufacturers, reflecting increasing buying by the public.

4. Optimistic reports of local business conditions accompanied by additional orders from automobile dealers in every section of the country.

COLORADO, Feb. 15.—Mitchell county has received three new tractors equipped with road-grading attachments which will be used in construction of lateral roads.

THE 1930 NASH "400"

Built-in automatic radiator shutters mean SUPERIOR PERFORMANCE!

EVERY Nash "400" model is now equipped with built-in automatic radiator shutters—a feature of superior performance which Nash alone offers in all three Nash price groups. ¶ The opening and closing of Nash radiator shutters is automatic—nothing to push or pull—controlled by a thermostat—accurate and invariable. It keeps Nash motors operating at the most efficient engine temperature in any weather. ¶ And this is only one of many new features of these superior motor cars. ¶ Centralized chassis lubrication in every "400" model is another. ¶ Twin cowl ventilators and adjustable drivers' seats are others. ¶ All Twin-Ignition Eight and Six models have lifetime lubricated springs with flexible steel spring covers. ¶ And all Twin-Ignition Eight models are equipped with Duplate non-shatterable plate glass as standard equipment at no extra cost.

Chevrolet Aids In Program Of Safety

Automobile manufacturers, during the period of self-examination the hazard of motor travel through, is shown by the safety features incorporated in the 1930 Chevrolet.

Notable among the safety features in the car are the Chevrolet designed internal brakes which are in their field. Many a motorist has had the unnerving experience of descending a long mountain grade to find his brakes becoming less effective the further he descends, a failure known technically as "fade-out" and due to heat generated by friction which warps the shoe and lessens the contact of the brake lining with the drum. The hotter the brake drum, the less efficient they become. Tests on the General Motors Proving Ground show that fade-out has been eliminated in the new Chevrolet brake by a method of construction known as the "articulated shoe type," which compensates for heat distortion, and assures uniform braking facilities under all conditions of temperature. The wear on the brake lining also is uniform, which assures far greater service out of a set of linings than the old type brakes.

New Shipping Case Used By Oaklands

Through the application of exclusive engineering knowledge the Oakland Motor Car company has designed a new type of shipping case of such efficient design that national protest is reported under consideration by high executives of the Freight Wreckers International, a unit body of the so-called Baggage Smashers of America.

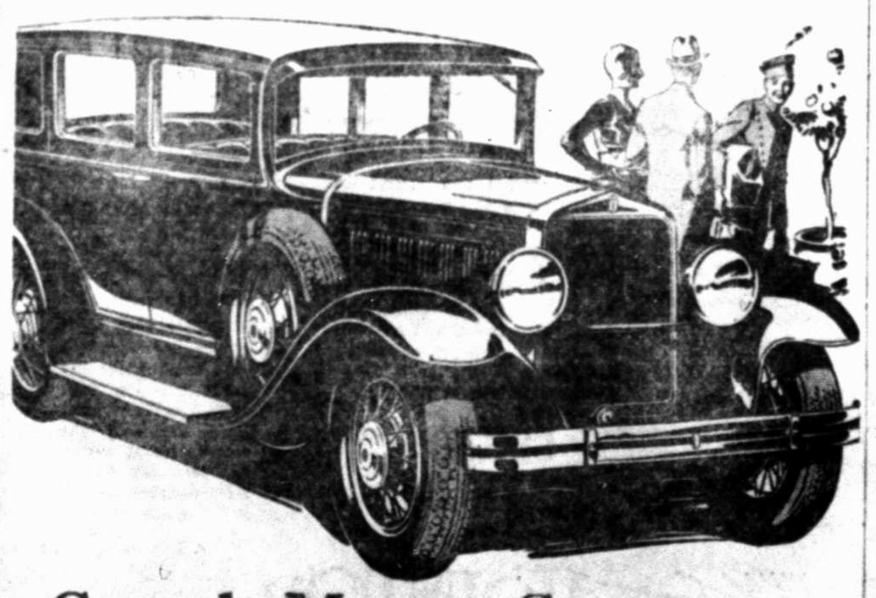

Weighing from 230 to 235 pounds less than the shipping cases previously used for the export of Oaklands and Pontiacs, the new cases are far stronger and also less expensive.

The chief strength, according to Ray Summers, the designer, lies in the fact that they absorb shocks instead of offering solid resistance. Furthermore, the new case eliminates the former method of mounting the car on its axle shafts, a procedure which required 22 pieces of 2x6x18 lumber. Instead the car, with wheels removed, now is cushioned on its own springs which are securely held and slightly compressed by four bolts extending up through the case bottom. Incidentally, the bottom is equipped with four skid planks which keep the car off the floor and increase the ease of handling. Water-proof paper covers the top of the case from the process.

Sweden Holds America In High Regard Charles Lundell, County Farmer, Says

United States Sends Many Exports To Scandinavia

BY SUTTON CHRISTIAN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Sweden has a high regard for American citizens and readily accepts them as interesting and intelligent tourists, according to Charles Lundell, farmer, who lives five miles east of Lubbock, and who visited his birthplace on the Scandinavian peninsula three years ago.

Mr. Lundell, tall and characteristically representative of Swedish nationality, was born in central Sweden.

In Texas 63 Years

When he was but five years old his parents moved to America and settled at Houston in 1867, later moving to Austin.

He returned to Sweden for a visit in 1908. His second trip was made three years ago when his wife and two children, Eugenia, student of Lubbock High school, and Helen student of Texas Technological college, accompanied him.

"One of the most impressive things to me is the beauty of Sweden. Its rivers, lakes and forests, which are seen along any rural drive, are always appealing to the visitor.

Forests Protected

"Sweden's forests are wisely protected by the government. A law forbids a man from destroying a tree unless he plants one to replace it.

"A great portion of Sweden's imports are from the United States. I was greatly surprised to learn that 90 per cent of the automobiles used in that country were made in the United States.

"Due to the great patronage given this country, Swedish people are of the impression that all Americans are rich. Many of them with whom I talked were surprised to know that there is any evidence of poverty in this nation.

"In the Scandinavian peninsula particularly in Sweden, there is very little suffering for want of shelter, food and clothing. Each community has a pauper's fund, which is provided by taxing each resident who earns a salary, and the poor are adequately cared for.

Cities Are Modern

"The chief cities have all modern conveniences, such as transportation facilities, waterworks, sewer connections and electric lights.

"Buildings in the business areas constructed mainly of huge blocks of stone, are as substantial as may be found anywhere.

"Department stores and other firms are operated with thoroughly modern methods.

Banks Are Different

"There is a wide difference in banking operations in Sweden and America. Checks and drafts are unknown in that country. When the depositor wants money he goes to the bank and draws out funds without writing a check. A good bookkeeping system is employed. Each banker is required by law to furnish security for protection of depositors.

"There is very little credit business. Practically all stores operate on cash basis.

"Sweden is essentially an agricultural country. About 50 per cent of the population are engaged in farming of some nature. We could learn a great lesson by studying how they conserve soil. The tillable soil is relatively small, but well kept through fertilizing and rotation of crops."

Mr. Lundell moved to Lubbock 15 years ago. He is now farming 135 acres, but has extensive farm holdings in other sections of the state.

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The Valentines, all afternoon, danced to a merry little tune that Clowny kindly whistled. Then the night began to fall. All of the little frames grew still and ended quite a lovely thrill. "Oh, that was dandy" Scouty cried. "We're for you, one and all."

One Valentine then bowed his head. "You're very kind," he calmly said. "But now we'll have to leave you. We can dance for you no more. We all arrive but once a year to bring all people heaps of cheer. You see our visit's ended 'cause our one big day is o'er."

Each Tiny cheered with all his might. The Valentines then dropped from sight. "Say, they were dandy fellows," shouted Coppy with a grin. "But, since they've left, what shall we do? Wait here until the day peeps through? It's getting pretty dark now, so we may as well turn in."

"A good idea," Coppy cried, and promptly flopped down on his side. The others shortly joined him and the scarecrow dropped down, too. All through the night they slept real sound. Then Scouty jumped up with a bound at dawn and shouted, "Wake up, bunch, Wake up quick, all of you."

Of course the Tinymites obeyed and for about an hour they played around and then they noticed that the wind was blowing strong. "If that keeps up," oe Tiny said "The scarecrow's going to lose his head. It's almost blown off now It seems that something will go wrong."

The Tines then ran to a tree and hid, as safe as safe could be. The scarecrow didn't follow them. but stood right up and cried. "Go on and wreck me, bit by bit. I'm rather tired of walking 'round Don't try to spare my hide."

(The Tinymites lose their bike in the next story.)

SAN ANGELO, Feb. 15. (AP)—A program of addresses on oil and livestock subjects has been announced by W. N. McCullock of Coleman, district chairman, for the convention here February 19 of this district of Texas Bankers Association. "How it Feels to be Robbed at the Point of a Gun," will be the subject of an address by W. F. Roberts, cashier of the Lohn State bank.

Officers will be elected for the next year at the convention.

PLAN TRAINING

R. O. T. C. Graduates To Be Trained In San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 15. (AP)—Approximately 250 college R. O. T. C. cadets the majority from Texas A. and M. college, are scheduled to report to Camp Stanley June 1 for six weeks training under field conditions, according to a program prepared at Eighth corps area headquarters.

On June 3 another group of 40 college men from Baylor university are to report at Fort Sam Houston to take the medical R. O. T. C. training course.

Maj. A. W. Chilton who is on duty at New Mexico A. and M. college, will be in command of the Camp Stanley camp and Maj. H. F. Phillips, medical corps, will supervise training of the medical students.

SCHOOLS MAY BENEFIT

Nacogdoches School Land In Van Oil Area

NACOGDOCHES, Feb. 15. (AP)—Nacogdoches county schools may be enriched by millions of dollars as a result of oil discoveries in the Van field.

The county commissioners' court has contracted with J. L. Duncan, owner of the Van Town Site Company, to survey more than 1,400 acres in the field formerly belonging to the common schools of this county.

The land was sold 30 years ago in small tracts for $3 an acre, but, Duncan contends, the title was never properly transferred. Attorneys have been retained and action to recover title may follow the survey.

The three first gushers in the Van field were on land claimed by Nacogdoches county schools, Duncan said.
