Amin alters plan, summons Britons

By BRIAN JEFFRIES

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin is apparently summoning Britons as well as Americans to a meeting with him Wednesday at Entebbe airport, reports reaching Nairobi said today.

British diplomats in both Kampala, the Ugandan capital, and Nairobi said they were checking reports that members of the 200-strong British community were ordered to be there together with the 240 Americans.

Britain severed relations with Amin's regime in August 1976, but two British diplomats still handle British interests out of the French embassy in Kampala.

Amin earlier moved his projected meeting with the Americans from a conference hall to Entebbe airport, delayed it from today until Wednesday and warned the United States not to emulate its Israeli allies with an attempted commando rescue.

In a telephone call to an American newsman in Nairobi, Amin repeated assurances that the Americans were in no danger.

In Washington, President Carter said the U.S. government was watching the situation "closely, trying not to upset President Amin, and trying to take advantage of his good wishes that he has expressed."

The Soviet news agency Tass said in Moscow that the United States was "threatening Uganda" and accused Washington of a policy of trying to intimidate "progressive African states."

Radio Uganda reported on Sunday that Amin postponed the meeting from 11 a.m. Monday until 8 a.m. Wednesday at the request of the Americans in his East African country, who are estimated by the State Department to number about 240. Most of them are missionaries.

Amin said no Americans would be allowed to leave the country and ordered the meeting Friday, two days after he claimed the United States, Britain and Israel were involved in a plot to overthrow him.

Sunday's broadcast said the location of the meeting had been changed from the International Conference Center in Kampala, the capital, because the main lounge at Entebbe was the only facility in the country large enough to accomodate the 3,000 persons who were to attend. However, there was no indication who would be present beside the Americans and Amin.

The official radio also warned Ugandans to be alert for signs of an invasion. It said after the Israeli raid on Entebbe last July, the presence of U.S. naval vessels off the Kenyan coast "must be taken seriously."

Quoting a "military spokesman," believed to be Amin himself, the broadcast said: "In the event of an invasion, the invading force will be disintegrated by the Ugandan armed forces."

The United States said the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise and its escorts were cruising in the Indian Ocean off East Africa following a good-will visit to Kenya last week.

Radio Uganda said Amin at the meeting Wednesday would discuss with the Americans a memorandum being prepared on their activities since the U.S. Embassy in Kampala was closed in 1973. The broadcast said Amin wanted to thank them for their work and planned to award medals to a few of them.

The State Department said it received an invitation from the Ugandan government to send representatives to the meeting. A spokesman said there had been no U.S. response and he did not know if there would be. Ugandan officials also said some foreign corresponents might be allowed to attend.

Efforts founder on ending OPEC split

The Los Angeles Times

MANAMA, Bahrain — Efforts to end the price split in the world's oil exporting cartel are still foundering on the rocks of Saudi Arabian intransigence.

Saudi determination to hold the price line in opposition to the majority within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) was reemphasized earlier this week by Saudi oil minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani. "We on our part have no intention whatsoever to increase the price of our oil," Yamani said in Abu Dhabi.

Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi broke with the 11 other members of OPEC at their price fixing meeting in Qatar in December, and said they would increase prices by only 5 per cent in 1977. The OPEC majority, led by Iran, voted to raise prices 10 per cent as of Jan. 1 and another 5 per cent next July 1.

Since then, various OPEC states, led by Qatar, have been trying to reach a compromise and prevent a threatened breakup of the cartel, which produces 85 per cent of the world's oil in international commerce. OPEC seized control of oil pricing, which had been in the hands of international oil companies in 1973 and since then the price of crude oil has quintupled.

Qatar proposed that the two blocks split the difference in their price positions. Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi should raise their prices by 5 per cent, it said, and the other 11 should forego the second stage, a 5 per cent increase scheduled for July 1.

Yamani, whose country is the world's third biggest producer after the United States and the Soviet Union, flatly rejected this. He also appeared to turn down suggestions that OPEC should hold an emergency meeting before its next regular session, scheduled for July 12 in Stockholm, to try and resolve the pricing dispute.

Instead, both Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi appear set to boost their production to the maximum as a means of enforcing their own prices upon the others. Saudi Arabia, while piously declaring it did not intend to flood the world market, has ordered the Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco) to go full speed ahead in boosting production facilities.

Abu Dhabi, which said earlier it would only increase its production marginally from last year's average of 1.6 million barrels per day, is now reportedly considering boosting its output by another 1 million barrels a day.

The Saudis, in justifying their price moderation, expressed fears that high oil price increases could increase the risk of a Communist takeover in weaker European industrial countries like Italy and even France.

The major producers who opted for the higher price increases have all suffered some production drops this year, with Iran the most outspoken among them. Iran twice postponed its new budget because of the uncertainty, but after threatening companies which were showing reluctance to fulfill contracts, the shah's government reported that some of them were coming back into the fold.

Kuwait reported its production down by one-third since the new price split went into operation. Iraq, which treats oil production figures as state secrets, revealed nothing, but Bagdad did announce a 58 per cent increase in its investment programming this year.

This could only mean, according to oil experts here, that Iraq is planning to continue its under-the-table price cutting which Yamani accused it of in recent years.

With the Saudis apparently unyielding, the prospects seemed increasingly likely for a gradual and perhaps quiet slide down in oil prices by all OPEC producers towards the lower figures dictated by Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi. But the picture seems likely to remain unclear for at least a few more weeks, until lowered stocks of oil force the international oil majors to start buying in quantity once again.

Saudi crown prince reaffirms country won't boost oil prices

The Washington Post

CAIRO — Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia has reaffirmed his country's determination to hold the line on oil prices, apparently quashing any remaining prospect for an early compromise to end the price war in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The prince, who is the kingdom's chief administrative officer and is running the country while King Khaled recuperates from surgery in London, said the Saudi position was based on the "full conviction" that oil prices must be used as a tool for "fighting international inflation."

He said that "we absolutely do not like to have any split in the ranks" of OPEC and that the Saudis have "done all we can to narrow differences of opinion" in the producers' cartel. But he added that "maintaining world economic stability" is one of the kingdom's principal policy objectives and offered no indication that the Saudis would heed the pleas of other OPEC states for a price compromise.

The crown prince's remarks were made in written responses to questions submitted earlier this month by The Washington Post. They are consistent with statements over the past two weeks by the Saudi oil minister, Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani but have additional import, because Yamani takes his orders from Fahd.

The oil-price split developed at the OPEC conference in Qatar in December. There Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates decided to raise their oil prices for 1977 by 5 per cent over last year. All 11 other members of OPEC raised prices by 10 per cent Jan. 1 and are committed to a further rise of 5 per cent in July.

Yamani predicted that the split would not last long. He said the Saudis would increase their production to undercut the increased prices of the other producers, and countries that need the cash would be forced back to the Saudi price, because they could not sustain a cut in production of their buyers shifted to lower-priced Saudi crude.

Oil economists and oil industry officials predicted that the so-called two-tier system would be short-lived, because it was difficult to administer.

But more than two months have passed since the Qatar meeting, and if anything, positions seem to be hardening.

Amin after more U.S. teachers?

The Los Angeles Times

NAIROBI, Kenya — While Ugandan President Idi Amin laid plans Sunday to meet 240 Americans before a crowd of thousands in a carnival-like atmosphere, one of his principal aides says Amin wants to recruit more Americans to work in Uganda.

The president's top civilian adviser, Bob Astles, told The Los Angeles Times that Amin had only one complaint with the Americans — that there weren't enough of them in Uganda. Astles said Amin was thinking of ways he could recruit new Americans to come to Uganda as teachers and village technicians.

House to decide on tax cut split

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives will decide this week how to split up a $19.5 billion individual tax cut proposed by President Carter in an effort to prime the sluggish economy.

Carter wants to spend the money on a one-shot $50-per-person tax rebate and to permanently increase the standard deduction, which generally helps taxpayers on the lower end of the income scale.

Most Republicans and some Democrats prefer a permanent across-the-board tax cut for virtually all taxpayers.

Despite the political appeal of a universal tax cut, there is every indication the House will accept the Carter plan as the only sure way to pump more than $10 billion into the economy within a few weeks.

The two-year tax cut is scheduled for House debate on Thursday, one of the few pieces of legislation to be considered by Congress this week.

Another important bill, to be debated in the House on Tuesday, would extend for one year the government's authority to control interest rates on savings accounts. It also would broaden the powers of credit unions, giving them authority to lend money for home mortgages.

House action is expected Tuesday on a new code of ethics for representatives, which is considered virtually certain to pass because it was made a condition of allowing a 29 per cent pay hike for lawmakers to go into effect. The congressmen got their raises of nearly $13,000 a week ago.

The ethics code is likely to call for extensive financial disclosure, a limit on outside earnings and for other protections against conflict of interest.

The Senate is expected to consider on Thursday the nomination of Paul Warnke to be chairman of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and chief U.S. negotiator at the U.S.-Soviet arms-limitation talks. The nomination has been the most controversial made by Carter.

A compromise budget amendment to accommodate any emergency economic stimulus is slated for work today during the first major Senate-House conference of the new Congress. The House and Senate have passed slightly different amendments that assume — but do not ensure — acceptance of Carter's tax-cut and job-creation plans.

Carter's plan to mail a $50 check to virtually all Americans this spring has been under attack by many in Congress since he first spelled it out. Opponents contend the rebate is an expensive and uncertain way to create jobs counted on to help pull the economy out of recession.

Carter's economic stimulus proposal would cost about $32 billion between now and Sept. 30, 1978. In addition to the rebate and a bigger standard deduction for taxpayers who do not itemize, the measure calls for a business tax break and increased federal spending to create jobs.

Vance doubts China pledge by Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department officials say they are skeptical of a report that the Nixon administration made a secret commitment to end relations with Taiwan in order to normalize relations with mainland China.

Nonetheless, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Sunday the State Department is checking all documents pertaining to American policy toward China to determine whether any such commitments were made by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Kissinger was not available for comment, nor was the only other official known to have taken part in all consultations with Chinese leaders, Winston Lord, the former director of the State Department's Policy Planning Office.

State Department officials said they knew of no commitments beyond those of the Shanghai Communique, which was signed five years ago today and which began a new era in Chinese-American relations.

Columnist Joseph Kraft said Sunday that Kissinger promised in talks with Mao Tse-Tung that the United States would sever its diplomatic and security ties with Taiwan "in a couple of years."

The alleged Kissinger promise, according to Kraft, was raised on Feb. 8 by the head of the Chinese mission in Washington, Huang Chen, in a meeting with President Carter.

Kraft said Carter ordered an investigation to determine if there was any documentation.

On CBS' "Face the Nation," Vance expressed doubt that Kissinger would have made a secret commitment to the People's Republic of China without tipping off the new administration. He said he received "the fullest cooperation" from Kissinger during the transition period.

It was all OK except for the oily water...

ODESSA — Here you are on your first-ever sit-in at a dinner theater. You dress casually, more casually than the others, simply because the billing said that was okay and mostly because you didn't have time to change into something more urbane between work and showtime.

So you hitch a ride from Midland to The Mansion Dinner Theatre with some friends.

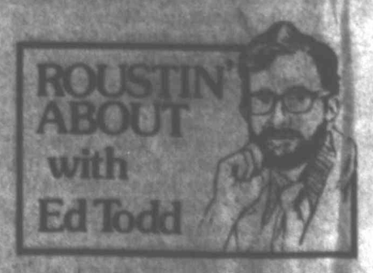
You walk into the new theater, and this fellow, decked in a tuxedo, extends his hand and greetingly says, "I'm Bob Welborn. Welcome to The Mansion."

So you instantly feel not so much out of place in your new Rugby sweater, blue jeans and outdoorish shirt-jacket.

He tells you his name, so you tell him yours. No response. It's obvious that he doesn't know you from the falling sun or rising sunset. And he means nothing, outside of a friendly handgrasp, to you.

Later, at the supper table, you find out that Bob Welborn is the theater's emcee and after-the-show singer. He's the one you listen to, as you sip (or gulp) cocktail after cocktail or guzzle beer after beer in the midnight hours.

You sit down at the balcony table with the five folks in your party. Then you unhurriedly walk on down to the two self-serving lines. You pick one, line up, and dip into the trays.



Plates filled, you and rest of the party head back to your balcony table to eat and drink and talk.

The food was good, the conversation was many times better, but the water was . . .

People are always saying unsavory things about the water that flows into Midland and Odessa from Lake Thomas and Lake Spence to east.

Out of curiosity and thirst, you try a couple of swallows.

Emcee Welborn, in his table-to-table chore, stops by.

"Is everything all right?" he asks. You assure him, as he expects, that, yes, everything is hunky-dory. (Except the water. And if you told him that, he, logically, would figure that you were a newcomer and were naturally unappreciative of the peculiar taste of the lake water.)

You forget the water, drink other

Police dissipate protesters

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Heavily armed police backed up by armored personnel carriers early today cleared about 6,000 anti-government demonstrators from the downtown square they had occupied since Tuesday to protest the outcome of the presidential election.

At least three demonstrators were reported wounded by police gunfire.

Defeated presidential candidate Ernesto Claramount Rozeville and about half the demonstrators took refuge in a church on Liberty Plaza, scene of six days of demonstrations, speeches and allegations of vote fraud. Many women and children were among them.

The rest of the crowd apparently escaped down side streets.

Police climbed to the roof of the church, broke windows and lobbed tear gas grenades into the crowd inside. There was panic until the gas dissipated.

The demonstrators were mustered by the center-left National Opposition Union, which claimed that the ruling National Coalition party stole votes wholesale in the presidential election Feb. 20 to win the presidency for another five years.

Col. Claramount Rozeville began leading nightly demonstrations in the plaza last Tuesday and vowed to occupy it until the election was reversed. Crowds of 50,000 turned out for the rallies, and after the national election board announced that Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero, the government candidate, defeated Claramount Rozeville 812,281 votes to 394,661, a strike on Friday reduced bus service and shut down schools, factories and construction sites. But the crowds dwindled during the weekend.

Permit bill introduced

Legislation that would provide for faster processing of temporary water permits by the Water Rights Commission was introduced recently by Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland.

House Bill 1245 would allow the Water Rights Commission to approve and issue temporary permits without notice and hearing if it appears that there is sufficient water available at the point of diversion to satisfy the requirements of the temporary permit as well as all existing water rights.

Any such temporary permit issued would not be for more than 10 acre-feet of water or for a term in excess of one year.

Craddick said that the "bill is especially needed for oil and gas drilling operations and for highway construction uses that require very small quantities of water for short periods of time.

"Present law results in great delay in processing a temporary water permit. Expediting the process would be both economically sound and in the public interest," Craddick said.

IT MAY NOT BE SPRING, but scores of Midland's fruit trees apparently don't know it. Despite this year's harsh winter, the pastel-hued blossoms already are showing themselves en masse — an almost sure sign some of them will be lost to frost.

Permian Basin temperatures dip into wintery marks in mid-20s

Frost adorned many Midland windows this morning after an overnight low of 25. It could have been worse, the weatherman said, for the record low for today is 14.

Nevertheless, Tuesday should be fair and warmer, with a predicted high in the mid-60s. The low tonight should be near 30, said a National Weather Service spokesman at the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Warming southwesterly winds of 10 to 15 mph today should become light and variable tonight.

Midland area cities reported generally mild but somewhat cooler weather conditions this morning.

Andrews was clear and still with about 21 degrees about 8 a.m. Lamesa, Crane and Stanton all reported clear, calm and cool conditions this morning.

Big Lake had an overnight low of 23 with frost early this morning. Conditions in Big Lake were still and clear later this morning.

Odessa and Rankin both reported cool and calm conditions this morning.

A weekend cold snap brought Texans in other parts of the state another taste of freezing weather this morning, the Associated Press said.

Official forecasts promised sunny and warming weather, however, in all sections.

Thermometers tumbled to the teens again in the West Texas mountains. Points nipped by a lighter freeze included Dalhart 20 degrees, Wink 21, Amarillo and Lubbock 25, Abilene 28, San Angelo 29, Wichita Falls 30, Childress and El Paso 31 and Houston 32. Readings elsewhere at the same hour ranged up to 50 at Tyler.

Top marks Sunday afternoon went as high as 72 at El Paso.

Extended forecasts looked ahead to showers starting the middle or latter part of the week in most sections.

Thieves take appliances

Burglars stole an estimated $4,500 in color television sets and electric ranges from a Tresco Inc. of Texas warehouse sometime between 1:30 a.m. and 5:45 a.m. Sunday, Midland County Sheriff's Department said.

Entry to the warehouse, located at 5000 W. Industrial Ave., was gained by removing some siding. The sheriff's department said a pickup truck or van was driven into the warehouse and the items loaded on it.

THEFT OF SERVICES

George Coleman, employe of Coat of Arms Motel, told Midland police a motel guest left without paying a $308 lodging bill. Coleman said he telephoned the lodger noon Sunday and told him to come to the office to pay the bill. The lodger promised to, but left without paying, Coleman said.

School election nets challenger

Leroy Ledford, a 42-year-old Midland fireman, so far is the only challenger in the April 1 election to seat three members on the Greenwood School Board of Trustees.

The filing deadline is 5 p.m. Wednesday at Supt. Mel Williams' office.

Ledford is opposing the Place 1 incumbent, Bob Evans, 45, a farmer.

Unchallenged in their bids for re-election are Chris King, 44, Place 2, and James Brooks, 38, Place 3. Both are farmers.

The candidates are seeking three-year terms on the seven-member board.

The board meets at 1:30 p.m. in Midland City Hall.

Smith will tell the board whether he would like a temporary six-month variance or some similar plan that will give him enough time to bring his workshop up to legal requirements.

On the other matter, Robert Todd Jr., 3103 Humble Ave; Paul C. Porter, 3101 Lockheed Drive; H. J. Rucker, First National Bank Building, and James Pierce, 2204 Country Club Drive, all have requested variances to use Mexican brick on structures they are building.

Margaret Purvis, Planning Division Chairman, organized the groups into five task forces.

Three get scholarships

AUSTIN — Three Midlanders have received engineering scholarships for this academic year at The University of Texas at Austin.

David James Hartman of 2819 Cimmaron St. received a scholarship from Schluberger, Randall Houston Hulme of 100 N. Glenwood St. received one from Exxon and Randall C. McClesky of 1600 Shell Ave. received one from Union Oil Co.

things, partake of the good food, and talk and listen.

Welborn suddenly steals the attention. He's down where the stage soon will slowly descend on the center floor. He wants you to relax, feel comfortable in your late evening setting, and to spend some of that money.

He throws out some place names like Kermit, Fort Stockton, Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, Colorado City, Houston, Monahans and Big Spring. You hear some clapping, some yeahs, and not much more.

Before that, he asked who was having their wedding anniversaries on this fair evening. Hands and whole beings came up. The years: 37, 4, 35, 24, 51, 25. Next came birthdays, but no one volunteers years.

The stage descends and the play, "Never Too Late," is on. Making the rounds at intermission was the theater's producer, Enid Holm.

Someone mentioned just how delightful the lighthearted comedy was.

"Good cast," she said, without a noticeable glimmer of appreciation. She smiled not. Perhaps she was preoccupied.

During intermission, the waitresses were at their bar-hoppingest best. They jotted down the orders, delivered the drinks and made out the tickets.

The play resumed. And, just as Welborn had politely instructed, no one smoked or took photographs during the performance. The union, the Actors' Equity Association, forbids that. Drinking's okay, though.

The last intermission fades in and lingers all too long.

The play's finally over. The applause is reserved, certainly not resounding, and the lights come on.

Most everyone has forgotten the water, oily taste and all, and said how nice the play was.

And the subdued recorded music that had played during the intermissions returned: swing, country and western, and light rock 'n' roll.

Goodnight, Bob Welborn . . . until you greet again.

More than 300 expected for seminar at college

BIG SPRING — More than 300 students from 70 area high schools are expected to visit Howard College to learn first-hand about the college and its academic and vocational-technical offerings in a Career Awareness Seminar Tuesday.

The students will visit with administrators, business and professional people and instructors.

The seminar will begin at 8:30 a.m. with registration and the serving of coffee and doughnuts. From 9 to 10:15 a.m., there will be browsing and visitation by students to the 22 booths that will be set up on the campus.

At 10:15 a.m., the students may attend sectional meeting in individual interest areas. Enough time has been provided for students to choose three meetings.

Lunch will be provided at 11:45 for the students and their sponsors. Harlen Thornton of the college music department will provide dinner music.

After lunch, the students will see a performance of "Butterflies Are Free," staged by the Hawk Players of the college.

The day will end with a period for games, dancing to the music of Mike Deardorf and additional browsing and teacher visitation.

Student and faculty tour guides will be available during the day to show the visiting graduating seniors the campus facilities.

Hedgpeth talk at UTPB set

ODESSA — Don Hedgpeth, director of the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library in Midland, will speak at a seminar class at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin at 5 p.m. today.

Hedgpeth will give an overview of literature on the range cattle industry at the Western American history class.

His work at the library includes the acquisition and administration of the most extensive collection in the United States of material relating to the cattle industry.

The class is open to the public and meets in CR 374.

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who used to be one himself, has promised the nation's governors a groundfloor role in shaping federal programs, and they're giving it a try today.

Even California's skeptical Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., who never bothered to come before, said the governors may have more clout with Carter in the White House.

"Given the fact that we have a former governor as President, this may make the National Governors' Conference a more effective vehicle for national public policy," Brown said.

"We want to develop a continuing partnership that will bring about the fullest possible participation of state government in the federal decisionmaking process," said Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida, the conference chairman.

That's what Carter promised. Not in 32 years, since the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt, has a former governor held the White House, and Carter said he would not forget the lessons of his four years as governor of Georgia.

He scheduled two hours of a White House work session with the governors today, with Vice President Walter Mondale and the Cabinet also on hand. The governors will go back Tuesday night for a black-tie dinner with Carter.

The social visit is customary. The working session is not. In addition to that, at least eight members of the Cabinet are to meet with governors in separate committee sessions during their two-day conference.

The governors, from 48 states, with Missouri and Wyoming to be represented by other officials, assembled on Sunday, concentrating first on the problems presented by the severe winter weather and the drought confronting the West.

Governors from 17 western states conferred on Sunday and agreed to ask Carter for special, regional efforts to deal with the drought and the hardships it is creating. They want disaster relief loans, livestock feed assistance and increased farm price supports.

Gov. J. James Exon of Nebraska said he thinks the wheat price level should be raised from $2.25 a bushel, the current guarantee, to $2.85 or $3 to help farmers afflicted by the drought and to prevent a possible food shortage later.

Sudan may join command

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Sudan is expected to join Egypt and Syria in their two-month-old unified political command at a summit conference of the three nations' chiefs of state now being held in Khartoum.

President Anwar Sadat, arriving Sunday for the three-day meeting with Presidents Hafez Assad of Syria and Jaafar Numaira of Sudan, said their meeting would result in historic decisions beneficial to the whole Arab world.

Egyptian officials said political unification may lead to a federation of the three countries.

Elsewhere in the Middle East:

—King Hussein of Jordan admitted getting money from the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency but denied he used it personally.

—Sadat said Arab-Israeli peace could come within a month if the United States assumed responsibility for arranging a settlement.

—The Israeli army evicted militant Jewish nationalists who tried to establish a settlement Sunday on the occupied West Bank.

—The International Monetary Fund agreed to extend $600 million in credit to Egypt over the next four years, Cairo Radio reported.

The Khartoum summit conference is the outgrowth of an announcement by Egypt and Syria two months ago that they were making new plans to merge. This was interpreted as a display of unity in preparation for peace negotiations with Israel.

Both Sadat and Numairi also are at odds with the Libyan strongman, Col. Moammar Khadaffy, and have accused him of supporting enemies of their regimes.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance defended secrecy in such payments to foreign leaders, saying "these kinds of things cannot be done in the glare of public publicity."

Vance told CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" that such payments are legal and "are in the interests of the country involved as well as the United States."

Sadat, in an interview taped last week for ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers," said the United States remains a key factor in Arab-Israeli peace because it "is a party trusted by me and the Arab world and it should be trusted by Israel."

Parking meter revenues up

Parking meter revenues came to $5,127 last month, compared to only $2,127 a year ago, City of Midland's traffic engineering division reported.

From October 1976 through January 1977, $21,850 has been collected, which is more than twice as much as the same four months a year ago.

The city said there were 273 accidents last month, compared to 182 in January 1976.

The division said 18 miles of center lines and 10.5 miles of lane lines were painted last month.

Carbon tet spill creating markets for bottled water

CINCINNATI (AP) — The second spill of carbon tetrachloride into the Ohio River system in a week has turned off many Cincinnati-area residents to tap water — to the extent that some people won't bathe in it.

Restaurants claim diners are substituting coffee and tea for water with meals, while grocery stores report an increase of sales in soft drinks.

Some supermarkets reported a weekend run on bottled water.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Dave Wenger, an IGA store manager in Ft. Thomas, Ky. "One man ordered enough water to fill a bathtub. He said he refuses to take a bath in tap water."

The run on bottled water peaked over the weekend as Cincinnati, Ohio's third largest city with 450,000 residents, closed intake valves for 31 hours to its drinking water supply.

The rarely ordered move came after 6,000 pounds of carbon tetrachloride was spilled accidentally Friday into the Kanawha River at the FMC Corp. near Charleston, W.Va.

The chemical, used in fire extinguishers and as a cleaning agent, can cause liver damage and is believed to be a cancer-causing substance.

Last week, a 70-ton slug of the chemical passed Cincinnati undetected, polluting the river where the city draws its water supply.

Because of the spills, uneasy residents began looking for supplies of pure water.

"We've had a tremendous volume of new customers, maybe over 50 per cent," said Charles Braun, a distributor for Mountain Springs, a bottler of water. "My wife just received 87 calls at home in a 24-hour period.

Davis ruling awaited

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A ruling was awaited today in the murder trial of millionaire Cullen Davis on whether defense lawyers may mention the age of Andrea Wilborn, 12, the stepdaughter he is accused of killing.

Efforts proceeded meanwhile to seat the first juror for the case, toward which questioning began a week ago before Dist. Court Judge Tom Cave.

Defense counsel requested the jurist Saturday to let them refer to the age of Miss Wilborn in asking prospective jurors about weighing the question of probation in event they should convict Davis on the lesser charge of murder. Judge Cave promised to study the matter over the weekend.

Presently Davis is charged with capital murder in the fatal shootings at the Davis mansion Aug. 3, 1976, of his stepdaughter and former Texas Christian University basketball player Stan Farr, who was living at the place with Davis' estranged wife Priscilla.

Teenagers learn about parenthood in course

WASHINGTON (AP) — It might look strange to see 17 husky members of the North High School football team in Fremont, Calif., playing blocks with nursery school tots or helping them resolve a quarrel over who is "next" on the playground swings.

But these boys, like thousands of other high school boys and girls, are participating in a new "Exploring Childhood" course, developed under a grant by HEW'S Office of Child Development.

Teenagers in more than 1,200 public, private and parochial schools across the country are learning about early childhood in class, through booklets, films and group discussions.

Then they put what they have learned to work by interacting with youngsters in day care centers, Head Start centers and kindergartens. Later, the teenagers meet again with their high school teachers to discuss their experiences and observations.

In the process of learning the difficulties and responsibilities of parenthood, they are becoming better equipped to be parents themselves, says Frank Ferro, associate chief of the Children's Bureau.

As more and more mothers work and families become smaller, many teenage boys and girls miss the opportunity to learn about "parenting" at home, Ferro points out. Thirty per cent of the teens who participated in "Exploring Childhood" field tests had no younger siblings and no child care responsibilities in the family.

Teenage boys and girls find that in the course they establish a special rapport with preschool children, Ferro notes.

A high school student here said that he "learned from the kids and they learned from me. They made me feel I was very important to them."

A woman on the staff of a nursery in Lowell, Mass., watched students working with the children and remarked, "Some of the teenage girls are so involved in the field work that they stay at the nursery school until late in the afternoon."

HEW'S Office of Child Development has provided more than $4 million in funds over the past five years for developing and testing this multimedia one-year course in junior and senior high schools across the nation, Ferro says.

A special effort has been made to enroll boys in the classes and many boys have shown a keen interest in the course and in activities with children, he reports.

The course provides a broad range of materials for students — booklets, records, films, filmstrips and posters — as well as comprehensive guides for teachers, school administrators and parents. At least 20 hours of workshop discussions are provided for each teacher, and seminars are also held for parents of the teenagers and young children involved in the program.

A second phase of the Education for Parenthood program is being developed by the seven national voluntary youth organizations that have received grants to design parenting projects outside the school setting: Boys' Clubs of America, Boy Scouts of America, National 4-H Club Foundation of America, Girl Scouts of the U.S.A., National Federation of Settlements and Neighborhood Centers, the Salvation Army and Save The Children Federation (Appalachian Program).

These organizations are testing different approaches to parenthood education, and refining materials and techniques developed in their original 29 pilot projects.

Retired serviceman likes placid Vienna

VIENNA (AP) — Some American youngsters say Vienna lacks action, but it seems a great place to retire to. At least, that's what former U.S. army sergeant Daniel Stanko, 52, thinks.

Stanko says he likes the slow pace of life here. He added that the safe Viennese streets made the Austrian capital a paradise.

"I can walk any street at night time, I can sit in any park, and I don't have to be afraid of getting hit over the head or mugged or something," he said.

Stanko is one of about 5,000 American residents in Austria, many of whom live in Vienna. They work in many fields, including the arts. Some come here to retire.

Stanko has lived in Vienna since his 1969 discharge from the army. He first lived here while he was a military policeman during the U.S. occupation.

Several American youngsters complain that Vienna is dull and full of old people. Stanko says he hasn't noticed that, but he does admit it is a quiet city. "The kids keep to themselves and stay pretty much in at night, and don't go around roaming the streets or driving their cars as they do in the United States," he says.

Vienna, the capital of the Austro-Hungarian Empire until it collapsed at the end of World War I, has shrunk from its 1918 population of more than two million to its present population of just over a million and a half.

Its growth was stunted during the 1945-1955 Big Four occupation, when it was completely surrounded by the Russian zone. This made it lag behind the rest of the country as big industry developed in such places as Linz, the capital of upper Austria.

Stanko says he likes the quiet life. "My wife Adele and I do everything we do in the United States. We go bowling, we go to the movies, to the opera." He says he especially likes the coffeehouses where one can linger for hours over a glass of beer or wine.

He makes it clear that he does not consider himself an expatriate. He goes back to El Paso, Texas, as often as he can. He also votes there. Stanko was born in Chicago and moved to El Paso during his military service. When he retired he came to Vienna.

He says that although he was never mugged or robbed in the United States, he feels that the crime problem in American cities is growing and may get worse before it gets better.

In Vienna there were 20 slayings in 1976. Of these, 10 were murders. The others were labeled manslaughter. All except four have been cleared up.

Police said that the number of drug cases was up slightly in the last year — to 622. There was also an increase in the number of burglaries.

Stanko says he enjoys the slow Viennese life style, but complains that Austrian television has only two channels. "What I miss the most is American television, the great choice of programs on American TV," he says.

OSHA looks at cotton

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has come up with another ridiculous proposal which would place such strict dust standards on the cotton industry that it would kill it and at the same time cripple the nation.

Cotton producers, ginners and other residents of neighboring Dawson County and its county seat city of Lamesa are well aware of the multiple hazards involved in the proposal, and they are taking the lead in doing something about it.

With the Lamesa Area Chamber of Commerce coordinating the effort, the Dawson County residents have formed a special OSHA - Cotton Task Force, which has asked residents throughout this area to help in compiling an environmental impact study on the effect of passage of the proposed cotton dust regulations.

Ginners have been asked to fill out survey forms, and businessmen and community leaders directly and indirectly involved in the cotton industry are requested to write letters outlining what this proposal would do to their business and the community.

One can imagine just how bleak would be the future of Lamesa and Dawson County should the proposal be enacted as law.

And with Dawson County being the leading cotton producer in the state, and consequently a leader in the nation, it is perfectly fitting that it and its residents should take the lead in this particular endeavor.

At the same time, however, this does not relieve residents of other area cotton-producing counties of their responsibility in voicing strong opposition to the proposed regulation. All should give full support to the Dawson County effort, along with a vote of thanks for taking the lead in the project which is so important to all of us in this section of West Texas. Citizen response can and certainly will be effective in area efforts to derail the outlandish proposition.

The forms and letters received by the Lamesa Chamber of Commerce through this weekend will be included in a formal presentation representing the views of area residents opposing the OSHA proposal.

Informed sources say that the proposal, if passed, would affect all aspects of the cotton industry with the exception of harvesting. It appears that the greatest impact would be on the textile mills and cotton gins, although cotton oil mills, warehouses, delinting plants and related cotton facilities also would be affected.

The proposal restricts the amount of dust allowed in cotton processing plants to a level practically impossible to attain with existing equipment and techniques.

It is evident that any law or regulation which hurts any link in the cotton industry would harm the entire chain, including the grower and the consumer.

The OSHA proposal would be disastrous for the overall cotton industry. Thanks and good luck to Lamesa and Dawson County citizens who are taking the lead in opposing it.

A likely story

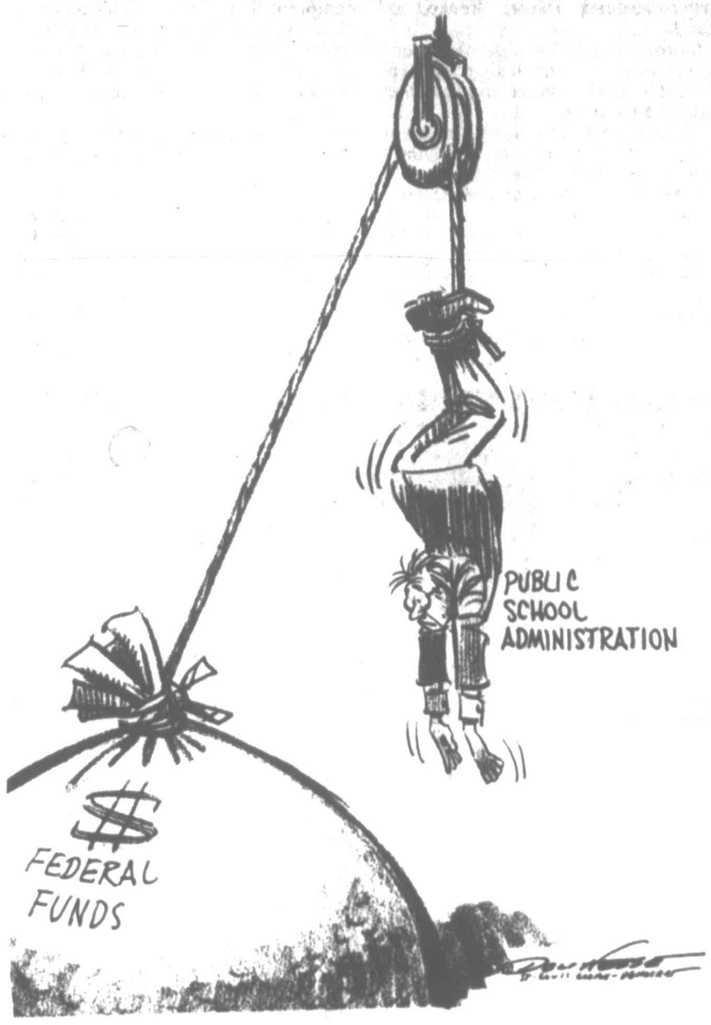
During January Thailand was shocked when a force of Cambodian soldiers crossed its border and killed 30 persons — men, women and children — in three Thai villages.

Finally an explanation has come from Phnom Penh. It's all a misunderstanding. The Thai villages actually are in Cambodian territory, says the message, and the Cambodian government was simply "arranging its internal affairs."

Ever since the Khmer Rouge Communists gained control of Cambodia in 1975 there have been reports reaching the outside world about massive brutalities.

One source says 10 per cent of the population has been executed or died of starvation and disease.

This, too, we assume, is a misunderstanding. The Khmer Rouge government is simply managing its internal affairs. Hohum.



KNOW YOUR HEMISPHERE:

Shoemakers in U.S. feel Brazil's pinch

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

Contrary to the impression you get from colorfully illustrated Brazilian tourist brochures, shoes, not tiny bathing suits, are one of Brazil's important exports.

Fashionable, sometimes inexpensive, leather shoes run far ahead of swim wear in the race for the export dollar.

Brazilian shoes have made considerable impact in the United States, whereas swim suits from that South American country have not gotten much exposure in the northern hemisphere.

Leather footwear is quite important to Brazilian industrial growth. Brazil is a major cattle growing nation.

Nearly one-fourth of the cattle in the world, some 90 million head, are to be found in Brazil. Only the United States and the Soviet Union have larger herds.

So it was natural that, as Brazil expanded, it should put its supplies of leather to good use and develop a shoemaking industry. Encouraged years back by the U.S. economic advisors, Brazil established modern shoe factories that concentrate on the manufacture of footwear in the styles and sizes favored by the United States.

Other countries did too. In Latin America, for example, Mexico, Columbia and Argentina are important shoemakers. From Europe, Italy and Spain long have been exporting shoes to the United States. Taiwan and South Korea, too.

In fact, U.S. shoe industry sources estimate that foreign made shoes account for almost half of all footwear sold in the United States. The shoe workers union and the footwear industries trade association, feeling the pinch, are seeking to restrict sale of imported shoes in the United States.

The campaign has been going on some time now.

In 1976, President Ford rejected a Tariff Commission recommendation that tariffs be hiked on foreign shoes. Now the International Trade Commission (ITC), successor to the Tariff Commission, has suggested to President Carter that the United States impose tariff quotas on imported footwear because the domestic industry has been hurt by competition from abroad.

The tariff quota would limit imports to 265 million pairs of shoes under the present 10 per cent tariff charge, and would impose a 40 per cent tariff on imports above that figure. The ITC estimate is that the total of 380 million pairs of shoes that were brought into the United States in 1976 would have cost the U.S. consumer an additional $170 million under the proposal.

Shoe importers insist the ITC estimate is far too low. "The real cost to American consumers would be around $1.5 billion in the first year alone."

Brazil would be the Latin American country to suffer most were Mr. Carter to accept the ITC recommendation. Tariff quotas on shoes further would worsen Brazil's trade deficit with the United States.

Through November, 1976, Brazil bought almost $2.6 billion worth of goods from the United States and managed to sell only $1.5 billion to the United States. That is to say the balance in merchandise trade alone was more than a billion dollars in favor of the United States.

Brazilian and other foreign trade specialists say that the 1974 foreign trade law does offer President Carter a way out in the form of "adjustment assistance" for workers who might be displaced by import competition. That assistance includes payments of up to $180 a week for as long as a year, relocation allowances and other help.

As the New York Times commented editorially, it would be "foolish to ask American consumers to pay an added $170 million annually for imported shoes to save 10,000 jobs in the domestic shoe industry. That amounts to $17,000 per job, more than the ordinary shoe worker earns."

Mr. Carter has until April to make his decision.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Babes in bureaucratic toyland

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Tens of thousands of American children, wards of the bureaucracy, have been consigned to a dreary purgatory, without love or hope. Many are also living in worse poverty than the government rescued them from.

It has become the American way for the bureaucracy to take custody of children who have been abandoned or abused by their parents. Sometimes the separation is voluntary, a breathing spell while families extricate themselves from the vicissitudes of modern living.

But once children fall into the clutches of the bureaucracy, they often become lost in the paperwork. They become charges of magistrates and clerks who are detached, methodical, guided by regulations which they follow to the letter.

In place of a parent, the abandoned child has a government clerk seated in his cubicle pondering the latest form and deciding that it runs afoul of regulations and must be disallowed.

Of the 350,000 children entrusted to the government's foster care program, according to congressional testimony, "between 100,000 and 200,000 ... are adrift in foster care and will likely remain in foster care for long and indefinite periods ... Foster care has become a vast and a hidden dumping ground for children."

It has taken Congress two years to put together the sordid story of the plethora of social programs which make up foster care. The investigation was started in 1975 by then-Sen. Walter Mondale, D.-Minn., and Rep. George Miller, D.-Calif.

Miller called upon the resources of the General Accounting Office and the Library of Congress. The Health, Education and Welfare Department also conducted an investigation of its own foster care efforts. The final results haven't been made public, but we can reveal the shameful findings:

— Foster care costs the taxpayers almost $700 million a year, with the money shuffled into a bureaucratic maze where administrators fight over the dollars. Much of the money never reaches the children but is siphoned off by the administrators. There is also a wide disparity in foster care costs, ranging from $156 to $1,320 a month. According to the GAO study, the government is often billed for costs which "we believe would be unallowable under any reasonable interpretation of federal regulations."

— Over $600,000 of unallowable federal payments were made, for example, to two counties in California. The counties placed foster children in private institutions that made a profit off children's misery at public expense. The GAO found evidence of similar unlawful placements in New Jersey and New York.

— The GAO inspected foster care institutions which were no more than children warehouses, with broken plumbing, missing window screens, dilapidated furniture, broken windows and inoperable refrigerators containing rotting fruits and vegetables. Other children's homes had walls and doors with holes, mattresses without bedsprings and "barracks-like" settings. "Serious deficiencies" were discovered in seven of 18 institutions the GAO visited.

— At one-third of the institutions inspected, some children did not receive annual physical exams. Almost half of the institutions had "inadequate controls over medications" — that is, unsafe storage of medicines within easy access of children.

— HEW found the local foster care programs ensnaried in red tape. A child, for example, must run a maze of as many as six different eligibility standards to receive foster care. The programs were also plagued, according to HEW, by "lack of adequate planning, goal setting, review and follow-up."

— The purpose of foster care is to provide children with temporary refuge. An attempt is supposed to be made to help the family solve its problems and then return the child to his own parents. This seldom happens. In Iowa, 65 per cent of the mothers with children in foster care hadn't been seen by a social worker for more than six months. In Massachusetts, the figure was 60 per cent. In California and Massachusetts, more than 30 percent of the parents acknowledged that they had no contact with their children after placement.

It might be better for the children if Americans stopped handing their problems and their consciences over to the bureaucracy.

PARTY POOPER: At this writing, the delicate negotiations over the Panama Canal have bogged down. Panama's military dictator, Omar Torrijos, blamed the stalemate privately upon the distinguished U.S. negotiator, Ellsworth Bunker.

"The trouble," confided Torrijos, "is that Bunker is too old; he's half deaf; and he wears a tie."

The Panamanian president is an earthy man who enjoys a good binge. Bunker simply is too dignified and aloof to suit him. Torrijos hinted heartily that he might be willing to make a deal with a negotiator who would take off his tie and spend a night on the town with him.

INSIDE REPORT:

The Republican party said 'taking a fresh look'

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — On Feb. 11, businessmen of Galesburg, Ill., heard their eminently orthodox Republican Congressman reveal the growing conviction within the party that its prospects for survival as the labor-baiting political instrument of Main Street are slim.

Rep. Bob Michel, chatting over coffee with that downstate Illinois community's businessmen, delivered no such ringing declaration. All he said was that Republicans ought to take "a fresh look" this year about voting against organized labor's forthcoming attempt to repeal Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act, which permits state "right to work" laws prohibiting compulsory unionism.

Although Michel's words generated little attention, he was in fact reflecting revolutionary attitudes by conservative Republicans of his mold. Their incipient revolt is inspired by two realizations: first, business has been a weak, inconstant and unfaithful ally for Republicans; second, there is no possibility of inroads into organized labor without substantial Republican concessions.

And what better possible concession than giving up the doomed fight for "right to work"? AFL-CIO officials in visiting the White House Feb. 14 informed the President's men they were trying again — the first time since 1966 — to repeal 14(b). Any major Republican defections would make repeal a certainty.

Michel's potential defection is extraordinary. He is not only House Republican whip and immensely popular in the Republican cloakroom but is a symbol of regularity and loyalty, qualities highly valued in that party. The Congressman from Peoria was rated 5 per cent liberal last year by the Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) and has scored zero in many past sessions.

Why, then, would Bob Michel even consider such apostasy as switching on 14(b)? The reason is pragmatic, not doctrinal: the Grand Old Party has bloodied itself on "right to work" for a generation with nothing to show for it.

Michel knows all too well the failed 1958 national "right to work" campaign contributed to heavy Republican losses in Congress that never have been made up. The party has never regained its former strength in Ohio and California, where "right to work" referenda were voted down 18 years ago after bitter struggles.

Indeed, there is no slight chance of any Northern industrial state adopting an anti-union shop law. So, the Michels are finding themselves in this politically untenable position: they battle labor to save 14(b), whose authorization is taken advantage of only in Sunbelt states extending from Arizona to Florida, which then attract businesses from the Northern union-shop states. These conservative Congressmen discover themselves unwittingly enhancing a system economically injurious to their own voters.

What makes this even more bitter for Northern Republican Congressmen is the ingratitude of Southern states, where the pulse of Republicanism is feeble and where Jimmy Carter found the necessary electoral votes. Mr. Carter's agnosticism on 14(b) (he would not seek but would not veto repeal) generated no concerted business effort against his campaign in the Sunbelt.

This, in turn, is part of the larger Republican complaint that businessmen would rather play both sides of the street politically than stand up for their GOP supporters. Since organized labor is splitting into clear right and left factions, why cannot Republicans find new political allies among labor leaders of like mind on national security and social questions?

Because national security and social policy are not enough. Republicans must take some pro-union positions, even at the cost of a scruple or two. Coming up in the current Congress are two emotion-laden opportunities: the common situs picketing bill (legalizing secondary boycotts in the construction industry) and the repeal of 14(b).

Whether Republicans will really burn their bridges on such questions is doubtful. In Illinois, for example, Michel is faced with the memory of the late Everett McKinley Dirksen, who a decade ago led the Senate filibuster which killed 14(b) repeal, and the presence of Rep. Philip Crane, the intense conservative from the Chicago suburbs who crusades nationally for "right to work."

But even if Michel's "fresh look" does not actually end his support for 14(b), the exercise indicates a new clarity of perception in the House Republican cloakroom. Some conservatives there now see themselves representing a party lacking a constituency, a strategy and a future. Those who have dared to at least consider changing sides on a self-defeating issue reveal a desire to escape from that trap.

Exiled former Uganda president grimly listening

By TONY AVIRGAN
The Manchester Guardian

DAR-ES-SALAAM — Former Ugandan President Milton Obote, Uganda's most eminent exile, spends much of his time grimly listening to Radio Uganda.

Dr. Obote is one listener who never smiles at the antics of Uganda's mercurial dictator, Field Marshal Idi Amin.

Obote and the small group of exiles clustered around him have become masters at reading between the lines of Radio Uganda broadcasts. They are of the firm belief that an increase in clowning by Amin almost always coincides with an increase in the slaughter of Ugandans.

The Ugandan exiles in Tanzania are certain that the on again-off again crisis currently raging around American residents in Uganda is a carefully calculated program aimed at diverting world attention from the slaughter of Acholi and Langi tribespeople.

The exiles listen to the radio and warn that the United States is in danger of allowing itself to be used in a cover up of continuing massacres.

When Radio Uganda announced Sunday that the meeting between Amin and the American residents had been postponed from Monday to Wednesday and the site changed from Kampalas International Conference Center to the airport at Entebbe, the exiles listened carefully and began their analysis.

Their conclusions, based on nothing more than an intimate knowledge of the way Amin operates, were that Amin, and not the American residents as stated by the radio, probably asked for the postponement and that the Entebbe airport site was probably chosen because Amin is worried about being attacked by aircraft from the U.S.S. Enterprise which is currently sitting off the Kenyan coast.

The exiles reason that Amin must have arranged the postponement "in order to keep this thing going as long as he can."

Exiles who had worked with Amin in Obote's government and under him after the 1971 coup, all agreed that Amin "must be worried" by the presence of the Enterprise. "He'll be nice to the Americans as long as that ship is in the area," predicted a prominent exile. "But once it leaves he'll begin his get tough-get nice game just like he did in the past with the British."

The exiles, some of whom had served in Amin's government until a week ago, said that the Uganda president has been "very worried" about being attacked ever since the Israeli raid on Entebbe airport last July.

Following the Israeli raid, the exiles said, Amin had large numbers of anti-aircraft guns placed around the Entebbe airport. The exiles speculated that fear of an American commando raid aimed at getting the American residents out during Wednesday's meeting was the motivating factor behind the change in site.

The Ugandan exile community in Tanzania have often been accurate in predicting what Amin's next move will be. Often the exiles are aided by documents smuggled out of Uganda on a regular basis.

Obote is the most devoted of these distant chroniclers of events in Uganda. But the information he gathers rarely gets beyond the gates of his heavily guarded house.

Young woman's body found, adds to Fort Worth pattern

FORT WORTH (AP)—Discovery of the nude body of a young woman, apparently strangled and then sliced in half, at a West Fort Worth dump provided investigators still another mystery today.

The unidentified victim, estimated between 17 and 21 years old, was the fifth woman found brutally murdered here during the month of February in the past decade. All the slayings remain unsolved.

These details were reported in a copyrighted news story by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram:

Two White Settlement men hunting auto parts discovered the latest victim inside a 30-inch-square box about 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

The Tarrant County medical examiner, Dr. Feliks Gwodz, said the woman had been dead no longer than 24 hours and apparently was strangled before her body was severed.

"Whoever did it has to be nuts," county medical investigator R. O. Medford said.

Clifford Fowler, 23, and Dale Sustaire, 22, told White Settlement police they drove to the dump grounds in Sustaire's foreign car.

After finding the hinged box, sealed with new nails, they took the trunk lid from the car, loaded the heavy crate inside and drove to Sustaire's home, Fort Worth Patrolman G. R. Shaw said.

The men said they drove away with the box because they thought it might contain auto parts. They left the crate outside the house while one got a screwdriver and hammer to pry it open.

"A hand came up when they raised the lid," Medford said.

The men summoned police. Officers raised the box lid again, revealing the body of a slim woman with long, dark blonde hair. There were light bruises on the right side of the neck.

Investigators said the two sections of the body had been arranged carefully, and there was little blood inside the box, which was lined at the bottom with tinfoil.

"It looks like the box was built for that purpose," said White Settlement policeman L. W. Terry.

The body was taken to All Saints Morgue and X-rays of the teeth were taken in an effort to establish identity.

Detectives searching the dump ground found several feet of blood-stained nylon cord tangled in a rope.

"She apparently was killed somewhere else and stuffed in the box," an investigator said. "This is similar to the June Ward slaying. Both were naked and both possibly strangled."

The battered body of Mrs. Ward was discovered Feb. 18 on a curb in far South Fort Worth, nude except for a gold necklace and a bassiere strap tied around the neck. Police said she had been bludgeoned with an ax or hatchet.

On Feb. 3, 1967, the nude and strangled body of Mildred May was found along a bank of the Trinty River. She had left a disabled automobile on a Fort Worth freeway.

The nude body of Becky Martin was discovered near White Settlement seven weeks after she had disappeared Feb. 7, 1973, from the Tarrant County Junior College south campus. It was in a culvert on a county road.

Little-known fund may be put under regular control

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When Anthony Solomon, undersecretary of treasury-designate for monetary affairs, recently invited a group in for lunch to discuss international financial problems, he asked how the meal was to be paid for.

"Don't worry about it," a treasury administrative aide responded, "we'll charge it to the Exchange Stabilization Fund (ESF)."

According to a source, an indignant Solomon retorted: "The hell you will!" Solomon says he can't remember the exact words he used but acknowledges he clearly expressed his disapproval of tapping the ESF.

Virtually unknown in a city with hundreds of alphabetized agencies, the ESF is a $4 billion, almost totally unaudited fund whose purpose is to aid in the stabilization of the U.S. dollar.

Since it was set up in 1934 with an original stake of $2 billion derived from the profits arising from a revaluation of the gold price, it has been totally under the control of the secretaries of the treasury.

Carter Administration officials believe that it is urgent to bring the administrative expenses of the ESF — which now run some $30 million annually — under regular budget control.

At the moment, like other "off-budget" federal agencies that derive their capital funds outside of the normal appropriation process, the ESF escapes the scrutiny of Congress, and its expenditures do not count in the congressionally set budget ceiling.

"What they've got there," says a Capitol Hill budget expert, "is a slush fund. The secretary of treasury can spend whatever he wants to out of it, and there's no control."

Rumors of numerous blatant abuses in the expenditure of ESF funds have circulated in Washington over the years. One Treasury official says flatly that "there is no doubt there have been widespread abuses in the past."

But there is no proof of such charges, and Solomon, more cautiously, says only that he thinks "there is a large grey area." Quite apart from the luncheon incident, he says he came to "the independent conclusion" soon after arriving at Treasury that "some type of ESF reform consistent with President Carter's objective of openness and cooperation is necessary.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The U.S. State Department has authorized a "humanitarian" shipment of $12,000 worth of anti-malaria medicines to Cambodia, the Bank of America's Indochina Spotlight news letter reported today.

The one-ton shipment is being handled by the American Friendship Service Committee, the news letter said.

Security will be extremely tight today when the second-degree murder trial of Ronald, left, and Wanda Gibson, right, begins in Athens, Tenn. The two are charged in the death of their four-year-old daughter, Melisha, center.

Parents go on trial today in Tennessee abuse case

ATHENS, Tenn. (AP) — A special sound-equipped room was readied at McMinn County Courthouse today to hold the overflow crowd expected at the trial of Ronald and Wanda Gibson Maddux, charged with the beating death of Mrs. Maddux's 4-year-old daughter, Melisha.

The child's nude body was found on a bare mattress in the unheated living room of the Maddux's home in Cleveland, Tenn., last Oct 13 — just five months after the state returned Melisha to the couple.

The Madduxes had been convicted of abusing Melisha when she was 11 months old and were jailed for six months. The state Human Services Department returned the child to them last May.

Reporters and some 150 prospective jurors were expected to fill the 200-seat courtroom. A basement room with loudspeakers to relay the proceedings was prepared for the overflow.

Criminal Court Judge James Witt said attorneys and witnesses in the second-degree murder trial would use a side door of the courthouse to keep them away from reporters and the public.

"There will be stringent security at the courthouse," said Sheriff Larry Wallace. "And there will be extra tight security measures taken at the jail while the Madduxes are here."

Judge Witt moved the widely publicized trial to Athens last year because he said heavy publicity made it impossible for the Madduxes to receive a fair trial in the Cleveland area.

Last week, he rejected a motion to suppress statements the Madduxes made to sheriff's deputies the day the body was found.

Mrs. Maddux was alleged to have said her husband resented Melisha because the child was fathered by another man. Maddux reportedly told deputies that he began disciplining Melisha after she wet her pants.

Maddux is alleged to have said he beat Melisha with a stick to keep her walking, and allegedly made the following statement: "I made her keep walking back and forth all day to try and tire her out so that she would sleep that night.

"I kept giving her the hot sauce a tablespoon at a time. She asked me for a drink of water. I got a glass of water and told her if she would take the tablespoon of hot sauce, I would give her a drink.

"She swallowed the hot sauce and I drank the glass of water."

Maddux told officers he gave Melisha a shower and sent her to bed alone, naked on the bare mattress in the cold living room. An autopsy concluded she died the following morning of shock and exposure.

If convicted, the Madduxes could be sentenced to 10 years to life in prison.

Brooks ready to open hearings on Carter's reorganization plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before he starts his battle with President Carter over government reorganization, Rep. Jack Brooks would like the world to know that, despite some reports, he is not a curmudgeon.

Curmudgeons are not prone to puckish self-assessments like, "I don't go around wearing brass knuckles — just my old university ring. I really think of myself as sweetness and light."

Nonetheless, the Democrat from Beaumont, Texas, serving his 12th term in Congress, is opposing Carter's plans to fulfill his oft-repeated promise to streamline the federal government. The House Government Operations Committee, chaired by Brooks, opens hearings Tuesday on the issue.

Carter wants authority to send Congress reorganization plans that would automatically take effect unless the House or Senate vetoes them. Brooks says Congress should have to vote favorably on each item of reorganization.

Part of Brooks' image problem may stem from the fact that he looks like the stereotype of the flinty, reactionary House committee chairman. At 55, his short frame is topped by a bald head fringed with gray. He has watery blue eyes and a pinched, narrow face.

"Surely you can tell by looking at me that I'm not mean and cantankerous," he says, puffing sternly on a stogie and then laughing.

Brooks says he has no desire to fight with Carter. "I like Jimmy Carter. I worked for his election ... I'm sympathetic to presidents. I think they need help," he smiles.

The conflict is all in the minds of the press, he said, "Y'all are just always looking for a fight, saying 'Let's you and him fight.' It's nice to sit back and watch."

Brooks would prefer to be seen as standing for a principle than standing against the newly elected leader of his own party.

"The Constitution says that all legislative power is vested in the Congress. It makes sense to just about anyone who can read over the age of 10. Now the administration's bill would vest in the President the power to submit a bill and have it become law without the Congress doing anything," he said.

Brooks also quickly notes that his bill has many of the safeguards requested by the President. It would prohibit congressmen from amending the President's proposal, guaranteeing that it could not be bottled up in a committee.

But the Carter forces feel that having to round up a majority vote for each segment of reorganization would make a difficult legislative task practically impossible.

They would prefer to have the onus for initiating a vote and rounding up a majority rest with the opposition. If the Brooks plan passed, "We'd be dead in the water," said Frank Moore, Carter's congressional liaison.

After it became clear that Brooks was adamant, Carter turned to an old ally, Rep. Elliott Levitas of Georgia, to introduce his plan. Levitas, a junior member of Brooks' committee, was a floor leader for Carter's Georgia reorganization plan when he served in the state legislature five years ago.

Levitas put together a group of fellow Democrats — not including Brooks — to go to the White House to meet Carter. He says 17 of the Government Operations Committee's 24 Democrats have signed the administration bill. House Minority Leader John Rhodes of Arizona is also a co-sponsor.

Brooks says he has not yet begun asking people to vote for his bill and will not until the hearings are concluded.

But thus far, he has few notable allies. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill has promised to help Carter. Minority Leader John Rhodes is a cosponsor of the administration bill. So is Brooks' counterpart in the Senate, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn.

Patrolman helps stork

GARLAND, Tex. (AP)—In his two-year career, police patrolman Billie Phillips, 27, has delivered six babies.

"No matter how many babies you deliver, you never really get to be a pro at it," Phillips said.

All his experience has apparently had little effect on his own wife, however. "I offered to deliver our baby but she told me no deal," the patrolman said.

Blues singer dead at 89

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Bukka White, the gravelly voiced bluesman whose career spanned nearly half a century, will be buried Thursday in the city where he sang what he called his "sky songs."

One of the last of the W.C. Handy-era bluesmen, he died early Saturday at the age of 89.

White called his music "sky songs" because, he said, he just reached up and plucked them from the sky. He was one of the most lyrical writers to come out of the Delta blues tradition.

A native of Houston, Miss., Booker T. Washington White was known for his train-like rhythms on his steel-bodied guitar. His voice was primitive, yet uncommonly strong, causing his songs to have a startling authority about them.

His father, John White, a Mississippi railroad man and musician, gave him his first guitar before he was 9 years old. White spent most of his life on the road, playing in speakeasies and clubs in St. Louis, Cleveland and Chicago.

Don't be brilliant with wrong partner

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It's very unlucky to be born too soon. My uncle Throckmorton was drummed out of his regiment just forty years ago for failing to return his colonel's lead. If it happened today the Colonel would shake his head.

South won the first trick with the king of spades and returned the nine of clubs for a finesse.

Uncle Throckmorton won with the queen of clubs and pondered. Clearly, his partner had the ace of clubs. Just as clearly, South had the queen of spades; so there wasn't much future in spades.

At length, my uncle returned the deuce of diamonds. This gave declarer a diamond trick but made it possible for my uncle and the Colonel to defeat the contract. When the Colonel took his ace of clubs he should return a diamond, and three diamond tricks would put South down one.

STUBBORN PARTNER

Unfortunately for Uncle Throckmorton, he had a stubborn partner. The Colonel stared at the deuce of diamonds and rasped: "No spades, young man?"

When the Colonel got in with the ace of clubs he led another spade instead of pushing a diamond through dummy's king. Naturally South made the contract; and my uncle returned to civilian life.

Today's colonels are a more flexible breed. They would see the brilliance of the switch to diamonds, and they would keep a fine tactician in the army.

License collectors earnest lot

By KENNETH TURAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — It was on John Garst's honeymoon, in theory at least a romantic, south-of-the-border affair, that his wife found out the truth. "Much to her despair," Garst remembers, a bit uncomfortable, "we stopped off at a Mexican junkyard. She looked at me and said, 'I thought you were going to give all that up.' "

"All that" is the hobby of license plate collecting, a seemingly quiet pastime that drives seemingly normal men to all sorts of extremes. Kenneth Lackie, for instance, has faced down giant black-and-yellow Hawaiian spiders that "scare the hell out of you" and their four-foot webs, stuck his hand into yellow jacket nests, and even caused a friend to fall into a swamp in Guam, all in pursuit of plates.

Garst, assistant director of the National Geographic Society's art division, Lackie, an oceanographer, and Charles Gauthier, with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, are Washington's most determined license plate seekers, members of the 1100-strong, 22-year-old Automobile License Plate Collectors Association, and owners of collections that number in the thousands.

License plates may all look alike, but collectors know enough lore to make the head spin. They'll talk about how a shortage of metal during World War II led to Illinois and Utah plates made from soybeans, plates that goats took to eating right off the cars. Or that Massachusetts never had single letter plates until John Volpe became governor and handed them out to family and friends, even giving the state chaplain the "X." Speaking of "X," the ex-governor of Mississippi gets a plate labeled X-1. And so on.

The acknowledged dean of license plate collectors — "I guess I'm guilty," he admits slyly — is Don Merrill, a car dealer from Waverley, New York, who has over 60,000 specimens, mainly displayed on a series of one hundred and ten four-foot-by-eight-foot boards. So overwhelming is his passion that when his wife heard on the radio someone had paid $3,500 for Adolf Hitler's gold-plated plate, her first reaction was "to look at me hard and say, 'You didn't!' " (He didn't.) But Merrill remains unabashed. "It's no crazier than smoking cigarettes or drinking booze," he says; "and I've got something left to show for my money."

This love-me, love-my-plates attitude is shared by the trio of Washington collectors. They keep their hoards in basements and garages — "If you have a nice home, you wouldn't want license plates in every room," says Gauthier — and they have wives who understand. Says Joanne Lackie: "I tell friends who say 'Don't you think your husband is a little strange' that it keeps him home, in the basement, and out of bars."

For Lackie and Gauthier, plate collecting was a natural outgrowth of a lifetime of tinkering with cars like 1937 LaSalles and 1954 Studebaker pickup trucks. For John Garst, however, growing up in Argentina was the key. "The plates there were all rather dull," he remembers. "When I came back to the United States when I was ten, I was fascinated by the variety here. Do you know that the Idaho plate used to have a potato with a stick of butter, the Georgia had a peach, Louisiana a pelican on a stump." By contrast, current plates are more subdued, in addition to being all the same size, and plate collectors like to remember the old days, when a license plate was a genuine expression of American individuality and spunk.

While to the great unwashed, plate collecting might look rather cut and dried, in reality endless options exist. Most people, like Kenneth Lackie, simply try and get one plate from each year from every issuing state: a grand total starting with New York's metal disc of 1901 would run something like 3600, with the 1921 Alaska plate considered the toughest to come by. Some favor low number plates, some plates that famous people owned, while others get more specialized still Charles Gauthier, for instance, likes to collect plates the District of Columbia issued between 1962 and 1973 for the Cherry Blossom Parade, valid only on the actual day of the event. He also specializes in Inaugural license plates, issued every four years from 1933 on except for 1945, when World War II put a damper on celebrations.

John Garst, the doyen of Washington collectors, also has quirky specialties, and an equally quirky way of going about finding them. He collects plates with the number "1" on them — these generally, but not always, go on the governor's car — and his office in the National Geographic has thirty-six such plates mounted on a four-foot-by-eight foot map of the United States. He also tries to collect entire alphabets from states which issue A through Z plates. These are not the kinds of things one finds by poking through junkyards or talking to old farmers, so John Garst has a better idea. He writes letters.

Every night, generally while watching Walter Cronkite, John Garst puts his fountain pen to some pieces of high-quality letterhead paper and he writes. He writes 700 to 1000 letters a year, letters to state motor vehicle departments for lists of people with low number or single letter plates, then letters to the plate holders themselves. He offers to pay postage for the plate as well as send the owner a photograph of it in place in the overall collection, and more often than not, he succeeds.

Not, however, always. His attempts to get a complete alphabet for Ohio were frustrated by a man who has had "L" in that state every year since 1936 and who turned the tables on Garst by sending him a photograph of his collection. He heard from a mutual friend that a low-number-holding man in Connecticut "wishes that Garst man would stop bothering me." And Dr. Fred Tudor of Milton, Massachusetts, holder of plate "1" (the governor has S-1), has never even replied to one of his many letters. "He must be so badgered," Garst figures, "he just throws his plates in the waste basket."

It seems an amiable enough hobby, license plate collecting, one where the basic material is far from expensive — for a plate to cost a collector as much as $100 is extremely rare — and the people are happy in their work. Sometimes, however, collectors do get carried away. Kenneth Lackie, for instance, almost as a lark bid $20 for 6000 surplus D.C. plates and found himself the semi-surprised owner of all one-and-a-quarter tons of them, now reposing quietly at his home, waiting for possible trading use. His only regret: "I probably could have bid lower and still gotten them."

DENVER Water Board personnel Bob Fletcher, left, and Mike Couts check moisture content of snow at Winter Park, a ski area near Denver, during storm. A depth of 24.9 inches was recorded, which yielded very little moisture content. Despite two recent storms, the mountain areas still have less than 28 per cent of their normal snowfall, which will seriously affect Colorado water supplies this summer.

Eastern snow can't solve Western drought

SACRAMENTO (AP) — If you think snow from the East might solve the California drought — well, forget it.

In case you were wondering — and apparently lot of you are — it would take 182 million carloads of water or tightly packed snow to make up for droughtstricken California's water shortage, which now stands at a staggering 2.3 trillion gallons.

If that 182 million-car train were linked together and if it were traveling 50 miles per hour, it would take the train nearly four years to pass any single spot on the rail line.

That's the word from the state Department of Water Resources, which has been receiving numerous phone calls and letters suggesting snow from outside the state could solve the drought problem.

Don Engdahl, a department planner, says that the number of railroad cars needed to move the snow is only part of the problem. Here are a few other obstacles he mentions:

—If the snow were being hauled 2,000 miles, for example, it would require 77 billion gallons of fuel oil to move the cars to California.

—The tab for train transportation would be $437 billion, based on average railroad costs, and truck transportation would cost about four times that much.

—If all the existing tank and open train cars in the country were put to the job of moving this snow, it would mean each of them would have to make 500 roundtrips to deliver the water.

Engdahl added: "In the right circumstances, involving short distances and crucial needs, this kind of transportation might be feasible. But given the magnitude of the California problems and the distance involved, it would be a staggering problem."

So even though there are plenty of people in Buffalo, N.Y., who would gladly give away some of their white stuff — it's snow use.

The Los Angeles Times

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — The defendant is Sister Maureen Murphy, 37, a Roman Catholic nun. The charge, as set forth by the Monroe County Grand Jury: On or about April 27, 1976, Sister Maureen "with intent to cause the death of another person, to wit, a male infant known as Baby Boy Murphy, did cause the death of such person under circumstances which do not constitute murder because the defendant was acting under the influence of extreme emotional disturbance..."

That is the language of the bill of indictment handed down by Monroe County Dist. Atty. Lawrence P. Kurlander. It has been translated in print, on the air and in many people's imaginations succinctly and sensationally as "Nun Kills Her Baby" — and it is that word picture that has given rise to widespread comment ranging from the morbid and prurient to the profound.

The state's public accusation against Sister Maureen has had great impact on the general public, particularly in the Catholic community, and has raised pressing questions and concerns. What were the circumstances of the nun's pregnancy and of the birth and death of the baby?

—There are feminist concerns about the women's intellectual and emotional awareness of the alternatives of birth control, abortion, adoption and of access to professional psychological, medical and spiritual help.

—For some, there is moral outrage that a nun became pregnant, allegedly killed a baby, decidedly caused a scandal. For others, there is moral outrage at the apparent ignorance of the nuns who lived with her about Sister Maureen's ordeal and at the church itself for having fostered an environment in which such a tragedy could occur. There have arisen within the Catholic community disturbing, anguished questions: What are the implications for the church, for the nuns who serve it?

Most Catholic clergy will not talk about any of this to the press and not, several people have told The Los Angeles Times, to lay people. Either they say they have orders not to discuss the case or they ignore the questions and change the subject. Beyond the obvious necessities or those involved to refrain from discussing the facts of the case during the trial, which began Feb. 16, there is a refusal to engage in philosophical dialogue.

Sister Mary John, who handles public relations for the Congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph (Sister Maureen's order), said of the Congregation, "We do not want to contribute to any of the publicity. We know there will be stories written. We wish there weren't going to be any...There's no way in which the community is not supporting Maurren — financially, morally, medically — and that will continue."

For some, Sister Maureen's tragedy is a bizarre story dissociated from her Catholicism and the fact she is a nun, focused rather on her psychological and moral makeup. To others it is symbolic of the turbulence within the church, dating from the broad liberalization policies of the 1960s.

The distinction may be of little significance to Sister Maureen. She alone is on trial in the courtroom.

She is no more than 5 feet, with full figure, cropped brown hair with bangs, no makeup, delicate coloring, pretty. She wears softly tailored dresses and a cross. A sweet face. Not saccarhine or naive — but with a look of compassion.

At 37 she has been a nun for 18 years, teaching most of that time. In recent years she taught at Trinity Montessori School in Pittsford, a suburb of Rochester, and last April had almost completed her first year as the school's director.

She has been out on bail, her address unknown, since her release from the hospital soon after the birth. She arrived at court the first morning in the company of three nuns who helped her pass through the television cameras' glaring lights in the hallway. Since, she has entered the courtroom from a locked hallway where the judges' chambers are located.

Her family occupies a row in the courtroom — her widowed mother, a sister and brother, other relatives. About 10 Sisters of St. Joseph, including the order's superior general, Sister Jamesine Riley, are always present.

When she smiles in recognition or chats lightly with someone she looks girlish and shows something of the animation people say has always characterized her. Usually, however, she is grave and strained, staring straight ahead.

At times she reacts to the proceeding by flushing, blinking rapidly, biting her lips and swallowing. That happened as the prosecutor, Joseph Valention, an assistant district attorney, delivered his opening statement to Judge Hyman Maas. It is the only time, so far, that Valentino, a polite, low-keyed lawyer, has come down hard.

Valentino reminded Maas of "his awesome responsibility" and outlined for him the theory of the people's case.

According to Valention's opening statement, on the morning of April 27, 1976, Sister Maureen arose at Our Lady of Lourdes Convent in Brighton, a suburb of Rochester, and explained to Sister Kathleen Carroll, the coordinator of the house, that she had severe stomach problems and would be unable to go to school. The other nuns (there were 12 living there) left the convent, he said, and the baby was born "probably just before noon, full term." Around noon one nun returned to the convent for supplies, said Valentino, and Sister Maurren saw her from her room, probably heard her come in.

"After nine months of pregnancy, after nine months of continually hiding that pregnancy and dodging questions about her condition, after lying to other nuns about going to a doctor, now seeing the baby alive before her, and now hearing the baby beginning to cry.

Officials of the Paraho oil shale test project say this test plant has demonstrated the commercial feasability of producing oil from the vast shale beds under the Rocky Mountains. But it will not happen, they say, without help from the federal government, reduced environmental standards and higher crude oil prices.

Plant operators say government aid, new rules could unlock oil

By TERRY RYAN

DENVER (AP) — There are an estimated 600 billion barrels of oil trapped in oil shale rocks beneath the Rocky Mountain West—enough by itself, to supply the nation's entire oil needs for 10 years at present consumption rates.

And it will stay there, say the operators of a three-year, $10 million oil shale test projects, unless environmental regulations are relaxed, unless the federal government steps in with multimillion-dollar aid, unless domestic oil price controls are lifted and crude oil prices rise still further.

Hailed just a few years ago as a potential solution to the nation's energy crisis, oil shale remains today just that — a potential solution.

It is feasible and it is marketable, officials of the Paraho oil shale demonstration project reported here Wednesday. But a spokesman for Standard Oil of Ohio (SOHIO), leader of the 17 energy companies that backed the test project, said not one of those companies is ready now to commit money to the next step, construction of a full-size commercial processing facility.

"I don't think any of the companies will commit until they get some idea of what government attitudes will be both on the state and federal level," the SOHIO spokesman said.

Paraho has operated two test plants at Anvils Point near Rifle in western Colorado. The heart of the operation is the machinery — a retort — where 900-degree heat is used to leech oil from shale rock. The next step, the full-size commercial retort, would cost $69 million.

That money will have to come jointly from government and private industry said Harry Profzheimer, director of the Paraho project. Oil companies will not put up all the money because commercial production has not yet been demonstrated, he said, and government is the key to getting it started.

Profzheimer was in Washington this week to talk with officials of the Energy Research and Development Administration. "Interested," he said, but there in now no money now actually allocated in federal budget proposals through 1978 for such a project.

Profzheimer reported Wednesday that the test project of Anvil Point had successfully demonstrated the feasability of commercial oil production from the shale beds under portions of Colorado, Wyoming and Utah.

For $1.6 billion dollars, he said, a plant could be built that would produce 100,000 barrels of oil a day at $11.50 a barrel, two to three dollars less than the present price of imported oil.

That oil, however, would have a high nitrogen content requiring either expensive modification of equipment at most refineries or building of a special refinery at the oil shale site.

Those operations would reduce outpoint and increase the price of shale oil to 7.50 a barrel, Profzheimer said, adding that "further shortages and price increases" would make shale-produced oil competitive in the 1980s, the earliest it could be produced in commercial quantities.

But there are further problems. Just as development of the West's vast coal fields is being delayed by environmental regulations and threats of lawsuits.

In Colorado, at least, Profzheimer said, oil shale simply cannot be developed under existing state air polution regulations. And while some local officials are petitioning to relax those standards, the Colorado Department of Health is preparing to ask the state legislature to make then even more stringent.

Arco breakup possible if price controls lifted

By DAN FISHER
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Atlantic Richfield Co. Chairman Robert O. Anderson says he might be willing to break Arco up into smaller, independent companies if the government would remove price controls from the oil industry.

Arco President Thornton F. Bradshaw isn't so hot on the notion of breaking up oil companies, but he does say that the government needs to set oil prices.

It's unusual enough that those position put the top officers of one of the nation's largest corporations on seemingly opposite sides of two of the hottest debates raging around their industry.

But to top it off, either position is enough to make executives at most other petroleum firms blanch. For an oil man to make a statement even mildly supportive of divestiture or government-set oil prices is like a newspaper publisher coming out in favor of limitations on freedom of the press.

For Anderson and Bradshaw, however, taking controversial stands and doing the unexpected have become trademarks.

—In 1973, the two men launched a campaign to eliminate the oil depletion allowance which had given producers a big tax break ever since the 1920s.

—A year later, Bradshaw not only endorsed a reduction in the number of gasoline-consuming automobiles on Los Angeles freeways, but he headed a citizens group working to promote mass transit.

—Early last year, Bradshaw said he favored "some kind of national economic planning."

—And just two months ago, Anderson negotiated the purchase by Arco of London's famed liberal newspaper, the Observer.

It sometimes appears as though Arco does the unusual just to be controversial, but Bradshaw said in an interview that that's just not so. "I try not to take stands that are foolishly controversial," the Arco president told The Los Angeles Times, "because that's just a play. We're not playing at all. We have some very real objectives."

Bradshaw said that his company first wants "to somehow or other jolt Congress into some realization that we simply have got to get at this matter of energy. That's number one of what we're trying to do...Whatever appears to us to accomplish that objective we pursue — regardless of what people think."

The company's second objective is to "do everything we possibly can to provide some credibility for this company and, hopefully, for this industry," Bradshaw added. "I don't care what the bottom line shows; I don't care how much money this industry makes or this company makes — we just aren't going to stay in business if people don't want us to."

Bradshaw noted that a recent survey indicated that only about 12 per cent of Americans think well of the oil companies. "Well," he said, "if 10 years from now only 11 per cent of the people think highly of the management of oil companies we aren't going to be permitted to stay in business."

Arco bought the Observer because it is "one of the great newspapers" and both he and Anderson feel that despite its current economic troubles, the publication can be brought back into the black, Bradshaw said.

But perhaps more important, "this is...perhaps a misplaced effort to deal with credibility," the Arco president mused. An oil company couldn't get away with buying a newspaper in this country, Bradshaw conceded. There would be ahue and cry that the firm's objective would be to spread its "Neanderthal views," he said.

There's not the same attitude in England, however. And the purchase of the Observer gives Arco a chance to develop "a track record" — an opportunity to show clearly that it can take over the paper without interfering with its admittedly liberal editorial policies, Bradshaw explained.

If Arco's top executives are unconventional in their approach to the oil industry and its problems, it is perhaps because their backgrounds are unlike those of many of their peers.

Anderson has spent all of his working career in the oil business. But he is a liberal arts graduate of the University of Chicago and he still devotes an inordinate amount of time to outside intellectual and cultural pursuits. Most notably, he has been involved since 1953 with the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies — a group dedicated to a continuing exchange of ideas among leaders in government, industry and the arts.

An avid outdoorsman, Anderson owns an enormous ranch in New Mexico on which he spends far more time than he does in either his New York office or the one at Arco's Los Angeles headquarters. His standard headgear, whether on his ranch or on Wall Street, is a Stetson.

Bradshaw was a professor at Harvard Business School before he joined Arco. He had also been a partner in a management consulting firm. He holds three degrees from Harvard — BA, MBA, and Doctor of Commercial Science.

Anderson and Bradshaw have been running Arco since June 9, 1964, and over the 13 years since then they have developed a mostly unspoken understanding about who does what. The relationship "can't be reduced to paper," Bradshaw said.

On paper, Anderson — as chief executive officer and the largest single shareholder with an excess of $30 million worth of stock — is in charge at Arco. In practice, the relationship is much more subtle, says insiders.

Mexico ships crude surplus to neighbor

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

Mexico now is producing over a million barrels of petroleum a day and is shipping most of its surplus crude and some natural gas to the United States.

Petroleos Mexicanos (PEMEX), the government oil monopoly, reported that it cracked the million-barrel barrier when it made 1,000,522 barrels of crude and associated liquids Feb. 11.

The event was marked with mixed emotions in the Mexican oil industry, though. It was also the day that Sen. Antonio J. Bermudez, the highly respected onetime director general of PEMEX, who ran the monopoly for an unprecedented 12 years from 1947 to 1958, was buried.

Bermudez, 84 at the time of his death, was the man generally credited with turning PEMEX around at a time when it had become a drag on the Mexican economy.

PEMEX has had control of the petroleum industry in Mexico since 1938, when then President Lazaro Cardenas nationalized most of the foreign oil companies that had been working the oil fields along the gulf coast since the early 1900s.

Most of PEMEX's production now is coming from the "Zona Sur" region in Chiapas and Tabasco states in southeastern Mexico.

Initial development of that general area occurred during the time Bermudez was heading the company. Some of the work then was done by U.S. and other private drilling companies that he employed under what are now known as "service contracts."

But in the late 1940s and 1950s drilling techniques U were not so far advanced as now, and the wells put down then tapped only deposits at relatively shallow levels. With newer methods, wells now are being drilled two or three times as deep and it was at the greater depths that PEMEX penetrated the cretaceous level in 1972 and started bringing in the wells that now supply Mexico with some 60 per cent of its daily production.

PEMEX's announcement that it now is producing over a million barrels a day did not go into detail on the subject. But the company did say that Mexico's crude oil reserves are now estimated at 11 billion barrels and that they are sufficient to cover the nation's needs for 22 years.

Jorge Diaz Serrano, the engineer who became head of the company when President Jose Lopez Portillo took office Dec. 1, 1976, earlier disclosed that PEMEX plans an active drilling program during the next few years. The company expects to put down 3,476 wells by 1982, with 1,324 to be exploratory and 2,152 development wells in existing fields.

The hope is that PEMEX production may be increased to the point where Mexico will have up to a million barrels a day of crude, or the equivalent in refined products, available for export.

Exports now run about 150,000 barrels a day.

Palm Springs wants to be Solar City No. 1

By ROBERT BETTS
Copley News Service

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — "Golf Capital of the World," "Swimming Pool Capital of the World," "Major Tennis Capital" — what more does this favored oasis want?

It wants to be known as "Solar City No. 1."

And why not? If any city can rely solely on solar power for all its energy supplies, it ought to be this sun-saturated spot.

"We have a lot going for us," boasted the fashionable Palm Springs Life magazine.

"With continuous and reliable sunshine and with a worldwide reputation as a desert resort, why not have Palm Springs set an example of what can and should be done with solar energy?"

The residents agree, or 88 per cent of them. That was the proportion of voters who answered yes to a poll asking if they would be interested in seeing solar energy developed locally.

The Chamber of Commerce sponsored a detailed report on how Palm Springs could be made a model for the future so far as using the sun's energy is concerned. It also organized a Solar Energy Development Institute (SEDI) as a nonprofit corporation.

Enthusiasts mounted a drive to establish a solar energy research department at College of the Desert in neighboring Palm Desert.

Students attending solar energy classes learn to make their own solar collectors and take courses in solar law, solar architecture and solar engineering.

The Desert Water Agency, largest consumer of electricity in the Coachella Valley in which Palm Springs is situated, budgeted $50,000 to finance its own solar energy program, and is seeking federal and state backing to install a solar-powered water pump. A model of the pump was constructed for display at the Palm Springs Desert Museum.

An increasing number of Palm Spring's firms are supplying solar heating equipment for swimming pools and homes, and more new homes are having built-in solar heating and cooling equipment.

Palm Springs architect Charles Martin, an innovator in this field, said, "This valley has everything so far as solar energy is concerned. It has sun, money and knowledge. It should prove what it can do by itself, as well as ask for outside help."

Palm Springs has taken a further step to establish itself as a leader in the field by organizing an international solar energy conference and exhibit next April-May, called the "Helioscience Institute ('helio'—sun)."

Initiated by SEDI, it will be a gathering of technical experts and leaders in energy science, industry, government and education to develop recommendations for a national energy policy.

"In addition to various workshops, panel discussions, presentations of technical papers and exhibits will help solve the energy crisis by increasing awareness and applications of alternate technology," according to the advance notice put out by SEDI.

Cosponsors include the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the Pollution Control Institute and the Southern California Energy Association. Another cosponsor is Northrop University of Inglewood, a private nonprofit school which plans to originate a campus near the Palm Springs Airport in what could become the nation's first Solar Institute of Technology.

Reading schedule studied

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — The University of Illinois has established a new center for the study of reading comprehension that will examine how children acquire their reading skills.

"When we think of reading comprehension, we think of the books in our sociology or literature courses," says Professor Richard C. Anderson, who will direct the project. "But, a lot of tasks require following directions or looking things up in an index or a catalog."

The ability to use reference materials is crucial to people in many fields, Anderson explains. "A cook or mechanic must be able to read with good comprehension to perform adequately on the job."

Anderson says that children are not equipped with good reading skills, but must develop them.

Researchers at the center will look at how children acquire these skills, and how they move from translating symbols into speech to reading for comprehension. Most of the children to be studied will be from grades three through eight.

Amin alters plan, summons Britons

By BRIAN JEFFRIES

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin is apparently summoning Britons as well as Americans to a meeting with him Wednesday at Entebbe airport, reports reaching Nairobi said today.

British diplomats in both Kampala, the Ugandan capital, and Nairobi said they were checking reports that members of the 200-strong British community were ordered to be there together with the 240 Americans.

Britain severed relations with Amin's regime in August 1976, but two British diplomats still handle British interests out of the French embassy in Kampala.

Amin earlier moved his projected meeting with the Americans from a conference hall to Entebbe airport, delayed it from today until Wednesday and warned the United States not to emulate its Israeli allies with an attempted commando rescue.

In Washington, President Carter said the U.S. government was watching the situation "closely, trying not to upset President Amin, and trying to take advantage of his good wishes that he has expressed."

Radio Uganda reported on Sunday that Amin postponed the meeting from 11 a.m. Monday until 8 a.m. Wednesday at the request of the Americans in his East African country, who are estimated by the State Department to number about 240. Most of them are missionaries.

Amin said no Americans would be allowed to leave the country and ordered the meeting Friday, two days after he claimed the United States, Britain and Israel were involved in a plot to overthrow him.

Sunday's broadcast said the location of the meeting had been changed from the International Conference Center in Kampala, the capital, because the main lounge at Entebbe was the only facility in the country large enough to accomodate the 3,000 persons who were to attend. However, there was no indication who would be present beside the Americans and Amin.

The official radio also warned Ugandans to be alert for signs of an invasion. It said after the Israeli raid on Entebbe last July, the presence of U.S. naval vessels off the Kenyan coast "must be taken seriously."

Related story 7A

Quoting a "military spokesman," believed to be Amin himself, the broadcast said: "In the event of an invasion, the invading force will be disintegrated by the Ugandan armed forces."

The United States said the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise and its escorts were cruising in the Indian Ocean off East Africa following a good-will visit to Kenya last week.

Radio Uganda said Amin at the meeting Wednesday would discuss with the Americans a memorandum being prepared on their activities since the U.S. Embassy in Kampala was closed in 1973. The broadcast said Amin wanted to thank them for their work and planned to award medals to a few of them.

The State Department said it received an invitation from the Ugandan government to send representatives to the meeting. A spokesman said there had been no U.S. response and he did not know if there would be. Ugandan officials also said some foreign corresponents might be allowed to attend.

STEP TOGETHER, WAVE TOGETHER seems to be the Carter credo as the President and Mrs. Carter, along with daughter Amy, wave as they arrive at Bethesda Naval Hospital in Bethesda, Md., Sunday afternoon. Efforts founder on ending OPEC split

MANAMA, Bahrain — Efforts to end the price split in the world's oil exporting cartel are still foundering on the rocks of Saudi Arabian intransigence.

Saudi determination to hold the price line in opposition to the majority within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) was re-emphasized earlier this week by Saudi oil minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani. "We on our part have no intention whatsoever to increase the price of our oil," Yamani said in Abu Dhabi.

Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi broke with the 11 other members of OPEC at their price fixing meeting in Qatar in December, and said they would increase prices by only 5 per cent in 1977. The OPEC majority, led by Iran, voted to raise prices 10 per cent as of Jan. 1 and another 5 per cent next July 1.

Since then, various OPEC states, led by Qatar, have been trying to reach a compromise and prevent a threatened breakup of the cartel, which produces 85 per cent of the world's oil in international commerce. OPEC seized control of oil pricing, which had been in the hands of international oil companies in 1973 and since then the price of crude oil has quintupled.

Qatar proposed that the two blocks split the difference in their price positions. Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi should raise their prices by 5 per cent, it said, and the other 11 should forego the second stage, a 5 per cent increase scheduled for July 1.

Yamani, whose country is the world's third biggest producer after the United States and the Soviet Union, flatly rejected this. He also appeared to turn down suggestions that OPEC should hold an emergency meeting before its next regular session, scheduled for July 12 in Stockholm, to try and resolve the pricing dispute.

Instead, both Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi appear set to boost their production to the maximum as a means of enforcing their own prices upon the others. Saudi Arabia, while piously declaring it did not intend to flood the world market, has ordered the Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco) to go full speed ahead in boosting production facilities.

Abu Dhabi, which said earlier it would only increase its production marginally from last year's average of 1.6 million barrels per day, is now reportedly considering boosting its output by another 1 million barrels a day.

The Saudis, in justifying their price moderation, expressed fears that high oil price increases could increase the risk of a Communist takeover in weaker European industrial countries like Italy and even France.

The major producers who opted for the higher price increases have all suffered some production drops this year, with Iran the most outspoken among them. Iran twice postponed its new budget because of the uncertainty, but after threatening companies which were showing reluctance to fulfill contracts, the shah's government reported that some of them were coming back into the fold.

Kuwait reported its production down by one-third since the new price split went into operation. Iraq, which treats oil production figures as state secrets, revealed nothing, but Bagdad did announce a 58 per cent increase in its investment programming this year.

This could only mean, according to oil experts here, that Iraq is planning to continue its under-the-table price cutting which Yamani accused it of in recent years.

With the Saudis apparently unyielding, the prospects seemed increasingly likely for a gradual and perhaps quiet slide down in oil prices by all OPEC producers towards the lower figures dictated by Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi. But the picture seems likely to remain unclear for at least a few more weeks, until lowered stocks of oil force the international oil majors to start buying in quantity once again.

Saudi crown prince reaffirms country won't boost oil prices

The Washington Post

CAIRO — Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia has reaffirmed his country's determination to hold the line on oil prices, apparently quashing any remaining prospect for an early compromise to end the price war in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The prince, who is the kingdom's chief administrative officer and is running the country while King Khaled recuperates from surgery in London, said the Saudi position was based on the "full conviction" that oil prices must be used as a tool for "fighting international inflation."

He said that "we absolutely do not like to have any split in the ranks" of OPEC and that the Saudis have "done all we can to narrow differences of opinion" in the producers' cartel. But he added that "maintaining world economic stability" is one of the kingdom's principal policy objectives and offered no indication that the Saudis would heed the pleas of other OPEC states for a price compromise.

The crown prince's remarks were made in written responses to questions submitted earlier this month by The Washington Post. They are consistent with statements over the past two weeks by the Saudi oil minister, Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani but have additional import, because Yamani takes his orders from Fahd.

The oil-price split developed at the OPEC conference in Qatar in December. There Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates decided to raise their oil prices for 1977 by 5 per cent over last year. All 11 other members of OPEC raised prices by 10 per cent Jan. 1 and are committed to a further rise of 5 per cent in July.

Yamani predicted that the split would not last long. He said the Saudis would increase their production to undercut the increased prices of the other producers, and countries that need the cash would be forced back to the Saudi price, because they could not sustain a cut in production of their buyers shifted to lower-priced Saudi crude.

Oil economists and oil industry officials predicted that the so-called two-tier system would be short-lived, because it was difficult to administer.

But more than two months have passed since the Qatar meeting, and if anything, positions seem to be hardening.

Amin after more U.S. teachers?

The Los Angeles Times

NAIROBI, Kenya — While Ugandan President Idi Amin laid plans Sunday to meet 240 Americans before a crowd of thousands in a carnival-like atmosphere, one of his principal aides says Amin wants to recruit more Americans to work in Uganda.

The president's top civilian adviser, Bob Astles, told The Los Angeles Times that Amin had only one complaint with the Americans — that there weren't enough of them in Uganda. Astles said Amin was thinking of ways he could recruit new Americans to come to Uganda as teachers and village technicians.

Astles also said Amin had sent a message to the Carter administration Sunday, saying he would welcome official U.S. representation at the Wednesday meeting with the 240 Americans at Entebbe Airport. "The Uganda government's attitude," Astles said, "is that the Americans should be here to see for themselves."

House to decide on tax cut split

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives will decide this week how to split up a $19.5 billion individual tax cut proposed by President Carter in an effort to prime the sluggish economy.

Carter wants to spend the money on a one-shot $50-per-person tax rebate and to permanently increase the standard deduction, which generally helps taxpayers on the lower end of the income scale.

Most Republicans and some Democrats prefer a permanent across-the-board tax cut for virtually all taxpayers.

Despite the political appeal of a universal tax cut, there is every indication the House will accept the Carter plan as the only sure way to pump more than $10 billion into the economy within a few weeks.

The two-year tax cut is scheduled for House debate on Thursday, one of the few pieces of legislation to be considered by Congress this week.

Another important bill, to be debated in the House on Tuesday, would extend for one year the government's authority to control interest rates on savings accounts. It also would broaden the powers of credit unions, giving them authority to lend money for home mortgages.

House action is expected Tuesday on a new code of ethics for representatives, which is considered virtually certain to pass because it was made a condition of allowing a 29 per cent pay hike for lawmakers to go into effect. The congressmen got their raises of nearly $13,000 a week ago.

The ethics code is likely to call for extensive financial disclosure, a limit on outside earnings and for other protections against conflict of interest.

The Senate is expected to consider on Thursday the nomination of Paul Warnke to be chairman of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and chief U.S. negotiator at the U.S.-Soviet arms-limitation talks. The nomination has been the most controversial made by Carter.

A compromise budget amendment to accommodate any emergency economic stimulus is slated for work today during the first major Senate-House conference of the new Congress. The House and Senate have passed slightly different amendments that assume — but do not ensure — acceptance of Carter's tax-cut and job-creation plans.

Carter's plan to mail a $50 check to virtually all Americans this spring has been under attack by many in Congress since he first spelled it out. Opponents contend the rebate is an expensive and uncertain way to create jobs counted on to help pull the economy out of recession.

Carter's economic stimulus proposal would cost about $32 billion between now and Sept. 30, 1978. In addition to the rebate and a bigger standard deduction for taxpayers who do not itemize, the measure calls for a business tax break and increased federal spending to create jobs.

Vance doubts China pledge by Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department officials say they are skeptical of a report that the Nixon administration made a secret commitment to end relations with Taiwan in order to normalize relations with mainland China.

Nonetheless, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Sunday the State Department is checking all documents pertaining to American policy toward China to determine whether any such commitments were made by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Kissinger was not available for comment, nor was the only other official known to have taken part in all consultations with Chinese leaders, Winston Lord, the former director of the State Department's Policy Planning Office.

State Department officials said they knew of no commitments beyond those of the Shanghai Communique, which was signed five years ago today and which began a new era in Chinese-American relations.

Columnist Joseph Kraft said Sunday that Kissinger promised in talks with Mao Tse-Tung that the United States would sever its diplomatic and security ties with Taiwan "in a couple of years."

The alleged Kissinger promise, according to Kraft, was raised on Feb. 8 by the head of the Chinese mission in Washington, Huang Chen, in a meeting with President Carter.

Kraft said Carter ordered an investigation to determine if there was any documentation.

On CBS' "Face the Nation," Vance expressed doubt that Kissinger would have made a secret commitment to the People's Republic of China without tipping off the new administration. He said he received "the fullest cooperation" from Kissinger during the transition period.

It was all OK except for the oily water...

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

ODESSA — Here you are on your first-ever sit-in at a dinner theater. You dress casually, more casually than the others, simply because the billing said that was okay and mostly because you didn't have time to change into something more urbane between work and showtime.

So you hitch a ride from Midland to The Mansion Dinner Theatre with some friends.

You walk into the new theater, and this fellow, decked in a tuxedo, extends his hand and greetingly says, "I'm Bob Welborn. Welcome to The Mansion."

So you instantly feel not so much out of place in your new Rugby sweater, blue jeans and outdoorish shirt-jacket.

He tells you his name, so you tell him yours. No response. It's obvious that he doesn't know you from the falling sun or rising sunset. And he means nothing, outside of a friendly handgrasp, to you.

Later, at the supper table, you find out that Bob Welborn is the theater's emcee and after-the-show singer. He's the one you listen to, as you sip (or gulp) cocktail after cocktail or guzzle beer after beer in the midnight hours.

You sit down at the balcony table with the five folks in your party. Then you unhurriedly walk on down to the two self-serving lines. You pick one, line up, and dip into the trays.

Plates filled, you and rest of the party head back to your balcony table to eat and drink and talk.

The food was good, the conversation was many times better, but the water was . . . .

People are always saying unsavory things about the water that flows into Midland and Odessa from Lake Thomas and Lake Spence to east.

Out of curiosity and thirst, you try a couple of swallows.

Emcee Welborn, in his table-to-table chore, stops by.

"Is everything all right?" he asks. You assure him, as he expects, that, yes, everything is hunky-dory. (Except the water. And if you told him that, he, logically, would figure that you were a newcomer and were naturally unappreciative of the peculiar taste of the lake water.)

You forget the water, drink other

Police dissipate protesters

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Heavily armed police backed up by armored personnel carriers early today cleared about 6,000 anti-government demonstrators from the downtown square they had occupied since Tuesday to protest the outcome of the presidential election.

At least three demonstrators were reported wounded by police gunfire.

Defeated presidential candidate Ernesto Claramount Rozeville and about half the demonstrators took refuge in a church on Liberty Plaza, scene of six days of demonstrations, speeches and allegations of vote fraud. Many women and children were among them.

The rest of the crowd apparently escaped down side streets.

Police climbed to the roof of the church, broke windows and lobbed tear gas grenades into the crowd inside. There was panic until the gas dissipated.

The demonstrators were mustered by the center-left National Opposition Union, which claimed that the ruling National Coalition party stole votes wholesale in the presidential election Feb. 20 to win the presidency for another five years.

Col. Claramount Rozeville began leading nightly demonstrations in the plaza last Tuesday and vowed to occupy it until the election was reversed. Crowds of 50,000 turned out for the rallies, and after the national election board announced that Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero, the government candidate, defeated Claramount Rozeville 812,281 votes to 394,661, a strike on Friday reduced bus service and shut down schools, factories and construction sites. But the crowds dwindled during the weekend.

IT MAY NOT BE SPRING, but scores of Midland's fruit trees apparently don't know it. Despite this year's harsh winter, the pastel-hued blossoms already are showing themselves en masse — an almost sure sign some of them will be lost to frost.

Permian Basin temperatures dip into wintery marks in mid-20s

Frost adorned many Midland windows this morning after an overnight low of 25. It could have been worse, the weatherman said, for the record low for today is 14.

Nevertheless, Tuesday should be fair and warmer, with a predicted high in the mid-60s. The low tonight should be near 30, said a National Weather Service spokesman at the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Warming southwesterly winds of 10 to 15 mph today should become light and variable tonight.

Midland area cities reported generally mild but somewhat cooler weather conditions this morning.

Andrews was clear and still with about 21 degrees about 8 a.m. Lamesa, Crane and Stanton all reported clear, calm and cool conditions this morning.

Big Lake had an overnight low of 23 with frost early this morning. Conditions in Big Lake were still and clear later this morning.

Odessa and Rankin both reported cool and calm conditions this morning.

A weekend cold snap brought Texans in other parts of the state another taste of freezing weather this morning, the Associated Press said.

Official forecasts promised sunny and warming weather, however, in all sections.

Thermometers tumbled to the teens again in the West Texas mountains. Points nipped by a lighter freeze included Dalhart 20 degrees, Wink 21, Amarillo and Lubbock 25, Abilene 28, San Angelo 28, Wichita Falls 30, Childress and El Paso 31 and Houston 32. Readings elsewhere at the same hour ranged up to 50 at Tyler.

Top marks Sunday afternoon went as high as 72 at El Paso.

Extended forecasts looked ahead to showers starting the middle or latter part of the week in most sections.

Thieves take appliances

Burglars stole an estimated $4,500 in color television sets and electric ranges from a Tresco Inc. of Texas warehouse sometime between 1:30 a.m. and 5:45 a.m. Sunday, Midland County Sheriff's Department said.

Entry to the warehouse, located at 5000 W. Industrial Ave., was gained by removing some siding. The sheriff's department said a pickup truck or van was driven into the warehouse and the items loaded on it.

THEFT OF SERVICES

George Coleman, employe of Coat of Arms Motel, told Midland police a motel guest left without paying a $308 lodging bill. Coleman said he telephoned the lodger noon Sunday and told him to come to the office to pay the bill. The lodger promised to, but left without paying, Coleman said.

Plainview man in Lamesa jail

LAMESA — A 21-year-old Plainview man remained in Lamesa city jail this morning after he was arrested at about 4:15 a.m. Sunday in a Lamesa drug store.

Burglary charges are pending against the man.

Police answered an alarm at the drug store and arrived to observe the man in the store. When the store owner arrived to open the store, police disarmed and arrested the man, Chief Lee Bartlett said.

School election nets challenger

Leroy Ledford, a 42-year-old Midland fireman, so far is the only challenger in the April 1 election to seat three members on the Greenwood School Board of Trustees.

The filing deadline is 5 p.m. Wednesday at Supt. Mel Williams' office.

Ledford is opposing the Place 1 incumbent, Bob Evans, 45, a farmer.

Unchallenged in their bids for re-election are Chris King, 44, Place 2, and James Brooks, 38, Place 3. Both are farmers.

The candidates are seeking three-year terms on the seven-member board.

Water permits bill introduced

Legislation that would provide for faster processing of temporary water permits by the Water Rights Commission was introduced recently by Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland.

House Bill 1245 would allow the Water Rights Commission to approve and issue temporary permits without notice and hearing if it appears that there is sufficient water available at the point of diversion to satisfy the requirements of the temporary permit as well as all existing water rights.

Any such temporary permit issued would not be for more than 10 acre-feet of water or for a term in excess of one year.

Craddick said that the "bill is especially needed for oil and gas drilling operations and for highway construction uses that require very small quantities of water for short periods of time.

"Present law results in great delay in processing a temporary water permit. Expediting the process would be both economically sound and in the public interest," Craddick said.

United Way personnel meet

Forty-five board members and community resource people of the 1977 United Way program met recently to discuss objectives and plans relating to the forthcoming campaign, public awareness, leadership development and other important tasks.

A new concept of involving and training young people in the community for prospective leadership roles was presented by Jim Allison, chairman of the Leadership Development Task Force.

Margaret Purvis, Planning Division Chairman, organized the groups into five task forces.

things, partake of the good food, and talk and listen.

Welborn suddenly steals the attention. He's down where the stage soon will slowly descend on the center floor. He wants you to relax, feel comfortable in your late evening setting, and to spend some of that money.

He throws out some place names like Kermit, Fort Stockton, Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, Colorado City, Houston, Monahans and Big Spring. You hear some clapping, some yeahs, and not much more.

Before that, he asked who was having their wedding anniversaries on this fair evening. Hands and whole beings came up. The years: 37, 4, 35, 24, 51, 25. Next came birthdays, but no one volunteers years.

The stage descends and the play, "Never Too Late," is on. Making the rounds at intermission was the theater's producer, Enid Holm.

Someone mentioned just how delightful the lighthearted comedy was.

"Good cast," she said, without a noticeable glimmer of appreciation. She smiled not. Perhaps she was preoccupied.

During intermission, the waitresses were at their bar-hoppingest best. They jotted down the orders, delivered the drinks and made out the tickets.

The play resumed. And, just as Welborn had politely instructed, no one smoked or took photographs during the performance. The union, the Actors' Equity Association, forbids that. Drinking's okay, though.

The last intermission fades in and lingers all too long.

The play's finally over. The applause is reserved, certainly not resounding, and the lights come on.

Most everyone has forgotten the water, oily taste and all, and said how nice the play was.

And the subdued recorded music that had played during the intermissions returned: swing, country and western, and light rock 'n' roll.

Goodnight, Bob Welborn . . . until you greet again.

Emotions Anonymous offers way to climb out of emotional low

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Emotional problems can occur to anyone at any time, and the only resort people have had is a psychiatrist or a clinic for counseling.

But, many people do not have to money to pay a psychiatrist and several people, especially if they work in public, do not want to be seen going into a mental health center for counseling.

An organization has been established nationally and locally to help people with emotional problems and to give them an alternative besides a psychiatrist or counseling center.

Emotions Anonymous operates on the basis of Alcoholics Anonymous. The local chapter will meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. A St.

The class has been meeting several times and came about as a result of a course one of the members taught at Midland College that involved women and their problems. The women realized the emotional problems they were having were the same as everyone else's, but they needed a program to follow to help them work out their problems and get back on the road to emotional recovery, said the instructor, who preferred to remain anonymous.

The Rev. Elmer Burrall, pastor of the church where the group meets, heard about Emotions Anonymous, sent for the literature, and the local group decided to affiliate with the national organization.

Everyone's identity is kept anonymous, he stressed.

"Everyone has an 'ism,'" he said. "It may not be alcoholism. It could be work or worry."

The program involves a set of 12 steps a person follows to get out of the emotional bottom he or she has reached and to find emotional health.

An emotional chart designed by the national organization shows the steps a person goes through on his way down to an emotional bottom. This starts with having the blues and experiencing minor difficulties with the family, having disagreements with family and friends, down to a point where depression becomes chronic, then finally at the bottom where suicide is considered and a person is in complete despair.

In Emotions Anonymous a person following the 12 steps can go up the ladder from an emotional bottom to having a desire to get well, up to attending EA meetings regularly, to having the ability to accept reality and finally reaching serenity and having peace of mind.

A couple of the 12 steps read, "Just for today I will try to live through this day only, not tackling my whole life problems at once; Just for today I will take care of my physical health, I will exercise my mind, I will read something spiritual."

"Only you can help yourself," Burrell said, explaining that when working in Alcoholics Anonymous, several people claimed they were going to find out how to help someone else with the problem.

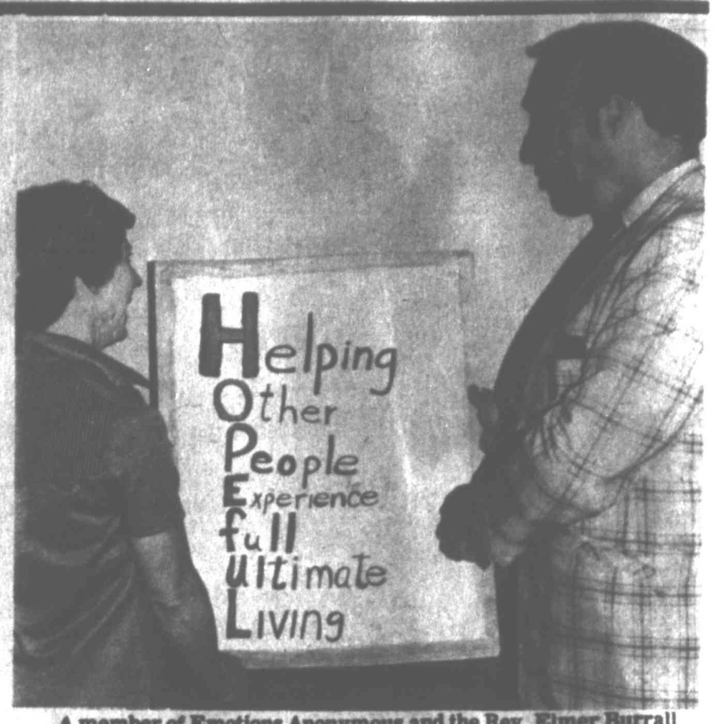
"You may be able to help someone indirectly, but you have to work on your own problem."

Through the steps a person learns his weaknesses and strengths and how to deal with them. The program also emphasizes turning a person's life over to a higher power as that person understands it, the pastor added.

The national organization was started in 1973 and is spreading. The local chapter is called the Hopefuls.

According to a release by EA, "Anyone who faithfully follows the Emotions Anonymous program and has the capacity to be honest, gets well."

Further information can be obtained by telephoning Burrell, 683-1936.



A member of Emotions Anonymous and the Rev. Elmer Burrall hang a sign outlining the purpose of the Hopefuls, a local chapter of EA.

Maltese nurses newborn kittens

INDEPENDENCE, Kan. (AP) — Mrs. Marjorie Lewis found three newborn kittens starving in her barn, took them to her home and kept them in a box.

Sassy, a 4-year-old Maltese female belonging to Mrs. Lewis' daughter, picked up the scent of the kittens, hopped into the box with them and started washing them. In no time she was nursing the kittens as if they were her own.

"I've been with animals all my life and this is the first time I've ever seen it," said Mrs. Lewis, a registered dog handler.

Women unbench men

OILTON, Okla. (AP)—A group of elderly men whose favorite pastime was to sit on an old wooden bench and watch the traffic pass by are extremely upset. The bench mysteriously disappeared overnight. There are suspects. Before the incident, several elderly women had been heard complaining that the men "just sit there, spitting their tobacco and looking at our legs."

Police chief Fred Stewart was told by one of the elderly men that the bench had already been used for firewood.

Men turn practical

A recent clothing survey found that the average male college student likes clothes that have a function and are practical and is not interested in novel looks or wardrobe variety, reports Mrs. Becky Culp with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

A TIME TO DREAM

A TIME TO DREAM is one of 25 paintings Dan Brown will exhibit March 4, and 5 at Frame Factory, No. 13 A Imperial Shopping Center, Midkiff at Wadley. The Fort Worth artist will be at the gallery during the show.

A native Texan, Brown admits to a life-long love affair with the Texas landscape. The paintings included in the show will acquaint the viewer with several areas of the Lone Star State.
The watercolor realist says almost any forgotton object offers him an invitation to capture a vanishing moment with brush and paint.
His paintings are in private collections in many Texas cities and in nine other states.
In 1976 his drybrush watercolor painting, "The Texas I Know", was published as a full-color limited edition collector print. Copies of that painting will be available at the Midland Show as will four black and white prints by the artist.

Research could prompt drinking habit change

By ROSE DOSTI
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — A new study analyzing the caffeine concentrations in commonly used brands of coffees, teas, carbonated beverages and cocoas may prompt you to reconsider the virtues of your and your child's drinking habits.

The caffeine study by a team of California State University at Los Angeles scientists showed that the level of caffeine in comparative amounts of cola beverages, tea, coffee and cocoa could have a pharmacological effect on a child. The study also concluded that the length in brewing time in tea and the coffeemaker used to make coffee affects the caffeine levels in these beverages.

"We did the study not only to clear up confusion over caffeine and update previous data, but also because of our concern that caffeine may have pharmacological effects that are of clinical importance to us," said Dr. Margaret McWilliams, a nutritionist and chairman of the department of home economics at Cal State L.A. She conducted the study with the laboratory assistance of Mrs. Mary Louise Bunkers, a graduate student.

Caffeine has been associated with a number of pathological conditions, including elevated blood glucose levels, symptoms of heartburn and increased gastric secretions as well as constricted cranial blood vessels. A possible correlation between coffee drinking and heart disease also has been noted. Caffeine's association with restlessness and insomnia is also well known.

The researchers analyzed brand name coffees, including instant, freeze dried, decaffeinated and roasted varieties. They also used three types of coffeemakers and tested the caffeine extracted in coffees prepared in each for prescribed periods of time. Also tested were three brands of black and green tea in bags, bulk form, instant mixes and canned teas. Nine soft drinks were tested as were both Dutch process cocoa and mix brands. The study showed that while there was little significant difference in caffeine content among different types of coffees, the brewing method drastically affected caffeine levels.

The researchers found that coffee made by dripolator and percolator methods contained 200 per cent more caffeine than coffee made by any other method, with the dripolator method producing higher caffeine levels. Comparing the caffeine content of coffee made by percolator (90 to 125 milligrams) or dripolator (135 to 145 milligrams) with that of instant coffee, the instant coffee's caffeine was considerably lower, 58 to 78 milligrams per cup. Decaffeinated coffee contained only 3 to 8 milligrams caffeine per cup, the lowest of any beverage tested.

Brewing time affected the caffeine content of teas the study showed. Of all the brands tested, Japanese green bag tea was significantly less in caffeine than any other bag tea tested, and lower than American green bag tea. Lengthier brewing did, however, increase caffeine content in all teas. For instance, black tea brewed for 1 minute contained 28 milligrams per 4.55 ounces (140 milliliters) while the same tea brewed for 3 minutes contained 44 milligrams per 4.55 ounces.

Retail brands of black tea tested were consistently higher in caffeine content that institutional brand equivalents.

The caffeine content in iced tea mixes ran from 19 to 55 milligrams per 8 ounces (240 milliliters). Unflavored, canned instant iced tea showed higher levels of caffeine than those flavored with lemon and sugar.

The difference in caffeine content in loose tea related to the difference in weight of a teaspoon of leaf tea. All released the same amounts of caffeine per gram of leaf tea when brewed 5 minutes. In fact, there was very little difference in caffeine content of teas brewed 3 to 5 minutes. The drastic differences occurred within the 1 to 3-minute brewing time.

Cocoa-flavored milk beverages contained less caffeine per milliliter than any other beverage tested (except for decaffeinated coffee). However since caffeine dosage is often related to the measure of body weight, the greater the body weight of an individual the less will be the effect of the drug. Children will be far more affected by a dose of caffeine than will an adult consuming a comparable dosage. The researchers, therefore, concluded 1 cup of chocolate drink can have a pharmacological effect on (characterized by irritability) a child, as can a bottle of cola or a cup of strong tea.

In the 9 brands of carbonated beverages tested, caffeine content ranged from 29 to 65 milligrams per 12 ounces (360 milliliters), falling within a slightly higher range than tea.

The more widely advertised brands of cola had higher caffeine contents. The study showed an increase in the caffeine content in popular cola beverages over the reported studies in 1971 and earlier. However, the range is within that permitted by government standards.

DEAR ABBY

Wife stops speaking over funeral

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My Irish wife isn't speaking to me. Here's what happened: Her father, who lived to a ripe old age, was buried last week. I was a pallbearer. It was pouring down rain when we got to the cemetery, and we were all ankle-deep in mud.

There was some kind of mixup on the hole they had dug, so after half the services were said at the wrong hole, we were advised of the mistake, and the funeral party had to walk a very long way to the right hole. What a mess! All the pallbearers took turns slipping and falling in the mud as we carried the casket, and the priest fell twice.

I held an umbrella over the priest's head as he started the prayers again, and I leaned over and whispered, "Father, let's have the short version."

My wife heard me and claims I was very disrespectful to her father. Also she thinks that because of me the priest left out a lot, and her father didn't have a proper funeral. How can I get my wife to start talking to me?—SORRY IN BOSTON

DEAR SORRY: Send her some flowers. They're the best bloomin' silence-breaker known to man.

DEAR ABBY: CAROLINA CONTROVERSY says she is constantly being complimented on her clothes, which she makes herself, but her husband tells her she's foolish for telling people her clothes are "homemade."

How ridiculous! The well dressed man of today who can afford to have his clothes custom-tailored isn't ashamed to tell people that HIS suits are handmade. In fact he's proud of it. So why shouldn't a woman be proud to say that HER clothes are "handmade"?—MY TWO CENTS

DEAR MY: She SHOULD be. But "homemade" and "handmade" have an entirely different ring—on the cash register, that is. It's funny how most people want their clothes to look expensive, but don't like to spend a lot for them.

Hot wine for colds

CHICAGO (AP) — Paul Kovi, restaurateur and wine authority, says that wine has long been thought to have medicinal value.

Kovi, writing in Sphere magazine, recalls his grandfather's remedy for the common cold, which he called "The Cure of the Two Hats."

Whenever he felt a cold coming on, he took to his bed, covering himself with warm quilts, but leaving one foot stuck out. That foot was covered with a hat.

27 pounds later, I'm proud of myself and my size 6 clothes.

Hazel Taylor's True Story

In my fat days, 27 pounds ago, all I did with my time was sit at home, watch television—and eat.

One day, I went shopping for a new dress, and the store had only one size that would fit me—a 16! You can't imagine how upset I was. I walked out of there and into the Pat Walker's salon next door. That very day, I joined the Pat Walker's program and began treatments on the passive exercise unit.

The treatments are really enjoyable—not work at all. You don't take off your clothes. No one disturbs you. And when you're finished, you feel so relaxed.

Buying new clothes began to be fun again. I could actually wear a blouse tucked in, instead of hanging out to hide my fat places.

The most exciting part of it all was that losing weight encouraged me to get a job in a dress shop. The woman I work for likes her employees to look slim and fashionable, and she says I fill the bill!

Now I weigh just 113 pounds. I've lost 41¾ inches, and I can wear size 6's. Imagine how you would feel if you'd been carrying around a 27-pound sack of potatoes for years, and finally put it down . . . that's how good I feel!

Call for your free figure analysis and sample treatment. I've recommended Pat Walker's to so many of my friends that I know you'll like it, too.

Six years ago, I hid my weight under an overblouse.

Pat Walker invites you to come in for a free trial treatment and figure analysis. You'll be pleased to know there is no disrobing; you'll reduce in complete privacy with our exclusive program that has benefited millions over the last 25 years. City golf fees record decline

Midland Parks and Recreation Department reported collecting $3,512 last month at the municipal golf course, which was a decline of $640 from January 1976.

The number of rounds played was up however, from 2,784 rounds last month, compared to 2,649 rounds a year ago.

Bob Thomson, parks and recreation director, said the smaller revenues collected last month resulted largely from an increase in annual fee players. These players boosted the attendance, but because they pay a flat yearly fee, did not increase revenues for last month.

Building permit totals increase

Midland Inspections Department reported an increase of nearly $200,000 more in building valuations on building permits issued last month, compared to January 1976.

The office said the value amounted to $2,537,375 last month. The leading value was for single-family home construction, $1,526,595, and commercial alterations were second with $200,920. Retail store construction was third, with $178,000.

On the other hand, issuances of electrical and plumbing permits were down a little last month from January 1976. The department also made 1,353 inspections last month, which was 120 fewer than a year ago.

Law forces mortgage money disclosure by banks

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Anyone who has ever been denied a mortgage loan — from the city dweller to the farmer — has a powerful new way to check whether the bank turned the loan down unfairly.

For years banks have been accused of redlining — denying mortgages in declining neighborhoods, thus hastening the area's decay.

Under the federal Home Loan Mortgage Disclosure Act, banks are compelled to disclose where their mortgage money is going.

The first disclosure reports had to be made public last Sept. 30. Local activist groups that fought for the law now report some successes but also some problems in using the new data.

The New Jersey Citizen Action Alliance, for instance, is gathering information from 100 banks in Newark, Jersey City, Paterson and Elizabeth. The group believes it will be able to document how much money is being invested by local banks outside the areas where their depositors live.

The National Center for Urban Ethnic Affairs in Washington and the Chicago-based National Training and Information Center are assisting scores of neighborhood groups across the country in deciphering the information and taking organized action.

The Chicago group estimates that at least 50 groups in cities, suburbs and a few rural areas are trying to use the new lending data.

In Cleveland, the Buckeye-Woodlawn Community Congress is using the lending data to press banks to advertise their willingness to make loans in declining parts of the city. The State Savings and Loan Association has already agreed to do so.

The federal disclosure law is helping neighborhoods in Philadelphia persuade banks to rehabilitate housing. In Salt Lake City, local groups are using the new information to press for an antiredlining ordinance.

Using the mortgage data, local groups in Waterloo, Iowa, won a $3 million mortgage pool from local banks, as well as a mortgage review board that hears cases of persons who feel they were unfairly denied mortgage loans.

"What the law did in effect was to give groups the tool to prevent banks from saying, 'No, we don't do that (redline),'" says Gale Cincotta of the National Training and Information Center.

But local groups complain it can take considerable expertise to understand the lending data. For instance, a typical bank disclosure will only show gross totals of how many mortgages were made in a geographic area, their combined dollar value, and what type of mortgage was granted. Since no street addresses are given, it is up to the local group trying to document redlining to figure out where loans were made and where they were denied.

The biggest complaint voiced by neighborhood action groups is that the reports are made by ZIP code rather than census tracts which are smaller. Banks, which opposed the federal law, said it would be easier to compile the data by census tract.

But beginning with the next disclosures due in March, banks will have to report by census tract where their loan money is going. This will show more clearly which neighborhoods are getting mortgage money from an individual bank.

Banking officials, meanwhile, say their biggest gripe with the new lending law is the provision forcing them to report lending activity by census tract. Dallas Bennewitz, the mortgage expert for the U.S. League of Savings and Loan Associations in Chicago, says census maps drawn in 1970 are much more difficult for banks to work with compared with simply reporting the ZIP code in which a loan was made.

Local groups don't believe that simple disclosure of mortgage lending patterns is a cureall for the redlining problem.

"The potential of disclosure will take at least a few years to realize. It will take the help of city governments to make it meaningful," says Jim Vitarello, head of Washington, D.C.'s Commission on Neighborhood Reinvestment.

Officials of the Paraho oil shale test project say this test plant has demonstrated the commercial feasability of producing oil from the vast shale beds under the Rocky Mountains. But it will not happen, they say, without help from the federal government, reduced environmental standards and higher crude oil prices.

Arco breakup possible

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Atlantic Richfield Co. Chairman Robert O. Anderson says he might be willing to break Arco up into smaller, independent companies if the government would remove price controls from the oil industry.

Arco President Thornton F. Bradshaw isn't so hot on the notion of breaking up oil companies, but he does say that the government needs to set oil prices.

It's unusual enough that those position put the top officers of one of the nation's largest corporations on seemingly opposite sides of two of the hottest debates raging around their industry.

But to top it off, either position is enough to make executives at most other petroleum firms blanch. For an oil man to make a statement even mildly supportive of divestiture or government-set oil prices is like a newspaper publisher coming out in favor of limitations on freedom of the press.

For Anderson and Bradshaw, however, taking controversial stands and doing the unexpected have become trademarks.

—In 1973, the two men launched a campaign to eliminate the oil depletion allowance which had given producers a big tax break ever since the 1920s.

—A year later, Bradshaw not only endorsed a reduction in the number of gasoline-consuming automobiles on Los Angeles freeways, but he headed a citizens group working to promote mass transit.

—Early last year, Bradshaw said he favored "some kind of national economic planning."

—And just two months ago, Anderson negotiated the purchase by Arco of London's famed liberal newspaper, the Observer.

It sometimes appears as though Arco does the unusual just to be controversial, but Bradshaw said in an interview that that's just not so. "I try not to take stands that are foolishly controversial," the Arco president told The Los Angeles Times, "because that's just a play. We're not playing at all. We have some very real objectives."

Bradshaw said that his company first wants "to somehow or other jolt Congress into some realization that we simply have got to get at this matter of energy. That's number one of what we're trying to do...Whatever appears to us to accomplish that objective we pursue — regardless of what people think."

New projects slated; extenders take finals

Exploratory tests have been planned for Pecos and Crane areas, and extenders finaled in Crane and Sterling fields.

Monsanto Co., operating from Midland, filed application for No. 4-A Bernice, an 11,000-foot project, 11 miles west of Sheffield.

Operator intends to test as a wildcat at depths above 8,300 feet. It also is scheduled as a 1⅛-mile southeast outpost to Ellenburger oil, three-mile southeast outpost to the Connell oil opener and lone producer, 3½-mile southeast outpost to Pennsylvanian detrital gas and 1⅞-mile southeast outpost to Strawn oil production in the Yucca Butte, West field.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and 330 feet from west lines of section 35, block A-2, TCRR survey.

CRANE ACTIVITY

Double H & Co., Midland, filed permit application for No. 1 J. B. McPherson, as a 1,300-foot venture in Crane, ¾ mile northeast of the one-well New Frontier (Clear Fork) oil field.

Drillsite is 8S9 feet from northwest and southwaest lines of section 14, block 35, H&TC survey, 4½ miles north of Girvin.

Mabee Petroleum Corp., Midland, No. 3 McPherson, former dual oiler in the Roberdeau, South field, has been reclassified as a gas producer from the lower Clear Fork zone for a calculated, absolute open flow of 47,500 cubic feet of dry gas per day.

The well produces from that zone through perforations at 3,248-3,300 feet. Pay section had been treated with 750 gallons of acid.

Location is 660 feet from southwest and 467 feet from southeast lines of section 16, block 35, H&TC survey, 20 miles south of Crane townsite.

Also, Atlantic Richfield Co. completed its No. 2 Atlantic-University as a sixth Atoka well and location east extension to that pay in a southeast extension area of the Block 31 field of Crane.

The 24-hour potential test gauge was 55 barrels of 43.2-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio measuring 12,006-1, through a 20-64-inch choke and perforations at 8,023-8,031 feet. The section had been acidized with 1,000 gallons.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 37, block 31, ULS, 4½ miles northwest of Crane.

STERLING EXTENDER

Stoltz, Wagner & Brown, Midland, completed a 1¼-mile southwest extension to Canyon production in the Big Salute field of Sterling.

It is No. 1-I-38 Glass, which had a daily potential of 60 barrels of 49-gravity oil, plus one barrel of water, and gas-oil ratio measuring 1,933-1.

Completion was through perforations at 7,858-8,247 feet, after fracturing with 80,000 gallons and 80,000 pounds.

Location is 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 38, block 32, T-5-S, T&P survey, 19 miles southwest of Sterling City.

Midlanders present concepts to cure nation's energy crisis

"It seems that 'energy policy' to date is designed to insure economic disaster for the United States," Charles D. Fraser of Midland, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, told James Schlesinger Saturday.

Schlesinger, President Jimmy Carter's energy adviser, then was handed a list of fundamental concepts the PBGS membership believes must "be the basis for national energy policy if our nation is to remain strong and viable."

The concepts were given to Schlesinger during a one-hour meeting in Washington attended by Fraser, Tom Brown of Midland, Charles Perry of Odessa and Dr. John McKetta of the University of Texas-Austin.

The concepts as proposed by the PBGS are:

—The seriousness of our energy shortage must be spelled out in terms no less forceful than those used to announce a declaration of war or other such national disaster.

—The President must advise the American people of his faith in the integrity of those of us who constitute the oil and gas industry and of his faith in our willingness to perform to our utmost abilities in a cooperative effort to solve the energy crisis which confronts us all.

—A firm policy must be established so that all facets of industry can proceed without fear of politically motivated, punitive legislation.

—The unworkable system of multi-tier price controls on crude oil and natural gas must be junked immediately and the market place must be permitted to establish the true cost and value of all forms of energy.

—All possible means of conservation must be depicted for the American people and enforced by legislation where necessary.

—Federal tax laws must be liberalized to encourage capital formation for the mammoth investments which are needed to bring all forms of domestically secure energy into the market place as quickly as possible; conversely, the punitive, poorly constructed and ill-advised tax provisions enacted in anger over the past several years must be cleaned up and are eliminated.

—The furor for environmental constraints must be tempered with economic reality and relaxed immediately so that coal or fuel oil can replace natural gas where possible, a natural gas pipeline can be built to Arctic Alaska, construction of atomic power plans can be accelerated, offshore oil and gas leases can be drilled promptly, and other steps can be taken.

Stock prices slipping

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices slipped a bit in slow trading today, continuing last week's sluggish decline.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down .50 at 932.93, after a 6.81point loss last week.

Losers held a 6-5 edge on gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Many investors seemed to be standing pat awaiting the report, scheduled to be issued by the government today, on the index of leading economic indicators for January.

The index, which is designed to point up future economic trends, was expected to show the negative impact of the month's bad weather.

British Petroleum led the active list, unchanged at 15⅝ in trading that included a 145,000share block at that price.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks gave up .06 to 54.03. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .06 at 110.52.

Volume on the Big Board reached only 6.85 million shares over the first two hours, down from 7.39 million in the comparable period on Friday.

Koehring fell 2⅞ to 14¾ and Fruehauf gained 1⅛ to 29⅞. Over the weekend the two companies called off merger plans.

Brush Wellman added ½ to 25½. The company voted a 5for-4 stock split.

Measure defended

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Sen. Don Adams insisted today ttat his lending bill — criticized by a colleague as fulfilling the "dreams of every loan shark in Texas" — actually would prevent excessive profits.

Adams, D-Jasper, said the bill also would "insure continuous credit to the consumer" and "stabilize the (loan) industry."

His first witness, Dewey Presley, president of International Bancshares, Inc., said the bill proposes a formula permitting a "floating rate."

Such a rate, he said, is "tied to money costs. It is sensitive. It will react."

He said it puts the "profit risk on the lender."

The state and the "borrowing public would benefit from it," he said.

Sen. Bill Patman, D-Ganado, countered with Mark Leymaster of the National Consumer Law Center in Boston, who said that testimony by Dial Finance officers in Boston showed that Texas is the 11th most profitable state among 35 in which it does business.

Radio club sets meeting

James Lunney, chief meteorologist at the National Weather Service here, will speak on ominous weather signs at today's 7:30 p.m. meeting of the Midland Amateur Radio Club.

The "hams" will be meeting in the Midland Room of The Midland National Bank, George Parker, club president said.

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It's very unlucky to be born too soon. My uncle Throckmorton was drummed out of his regiment just forty years ago for failing to return his colonel's lead. If it happened today the Colonel would shake his head.

South won the first trick with the king of spades and returned the nine of clubs for a finesse.

Uncle Throckmorton won with the queen of clubs and pondered. Clearly, his partner had the ace of clubs. Just as clearly, South had the queen of spades; so there wasn't much future in spades.

At length, my uncle returned the deuce of diamonds. This gave declarer a diamond trick but made it possible for my uncle and the Colonel to defeat the contract. When the Colonel took his ace of clubs he should return a diamond, and three diamond tricks would put South down one.

STUBBORN PARTNER

Unfortunately for Uncle Throckmorton, he had a stubborn partner. The Colonel stared at the deuce of diamonds and rasped: "No spades, young man?"

When the Colonel got in with the ace of clubs he led another spade instead of pushing a diamond through dummy's king. Naturally South made the contract; and my uncle returned to civilian life.

Today's colonels are a more flexible breed. They would see the brilliance of the switch to diamonds, and they would keep a fine tactician in the army.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer, at your right, bids one club. You hold: S-A62; H-Q10; D-K76; C-KJ1054. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. Your best suit has been bid by an opponent. If you step into the auction you will get yourself in trouble and bail the opponents out.

Eastern snow can't solve Western drought

SACRAMENTO (AP) — If you think snow from the East might solve the California drought — well, forget it.

In case you were wondering — and apparently lot of you are — it would take 182 million carloads of water or tightly packed snow to make up for droughtstricken California's water shortage, which now stands at a staggering 2.3 trillion gallons.

If that 182 million-car train were linked together and if it were traveling 50 miles per hour, it would take the train nearly four years to pass any single spot on the rail line.

That's the word from the state Department of Water Resources, which has been receiving numerous phone calls and letters suggesting snow from outside the state could solve the drought problem.

Don Engdahl, a department planner, says that the number of railroad cars needed to move the snow is only part of the problem. Here are a few other obstacles he mentions:

—If the snow were being hauled 2,000 miles, for example, it would require 77 billion gallons of fuel oil to move the cars to California.

—The tab for train transportation would be $437 billion, based on average railroad costs, and truck transportation would cost about four times that much.

The Los Angeles Times

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — The defendant is Sister Maureen Murphy, 37, a Roman Catholic nun. The charge, as set forth by the Monroe County Grand Jury: On or about April 27, 1976, Sister Maureen "with intent to cause the death of another person, to wit, a male infant known as Baby Boy Murphy, did cause the death of such person under circumstances which do not constitute murder because the defendant was acting under the influence of extreme emotional disturbance..."

That is the language of the bill of indictment handed down by Monroe County Dist. Atty. Lawrence P. Kurlander. It has been translated in print, on the air and in many people's imaginations succinctly and sensationally as "Nun Kills Her Baby" — and it is that word picture that has given rise to widespread comment ranging from the morbid and prurient to the profound.

The state's public accusation against Sister Maureen has had great impact on the general public, particularly in the Catholic community, and has raised pressing questions and concerns. What were the circumstances of the nun's pregnancy and of the birth and death of the baby?

—There are feminist concerns about the women's intellectual and emotional awareness of the alternatives of birth control, abortion, adoption and of access to professional psychological, medical and spiritual help.

—For some, there is moral outrage that a nun became pregnant, allegedly killed a baby, decidedly caused a scandal. For others, there is moral outrage at the apparent ignorance of the nuns who lived with her about Sister Maureen's ordeal and at the church itself for having fostered an environment in which such a tragedy could occur. There have arisen within the Catholic community disturbing, anguished questions: What are the implications for the church, for the nuns who serve it?

Most Catholic clergy will not talk about any of this to the press and not, several people have told The Los Angeles Times, to lay people. Either they say they have orders not to discuss the case or they ignore the questions and change the subject. Beyond the obvious necessities or those involved to refrain from discussing the facts of the case during the trial, which began Feb. 16, there is a refusal to engage in philosophical dialogue.

Sister Mary John, who handles public relations for the Congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph (Sister Maureen's order), said of the Congregation, "We do not want to contribute to any of the publicity. We know there will be stories written. We wish there weren't going to be any...There's no way in which the community is not supporting Maurren — financially, morally, medically — and that will continue."

For some, Sister Maureen's tragedy is a bizarre story dissociated from her Catholicism and the fact she is a nun, focused rather on her psychological and moral makeup. To others it is symbolic of the turbulence within the church, dating from the broad liberalization policies of the 1960s.

The distinction may be of little significance to Sister Maureen. She alone is on trial in the courtroom.

She is no more than 5 feet, with full figure, cropped brown hair with bangs, no makeup, delicate coloring, pretty. She wears softly tailored dresses and a cross. A sweet face. Not saccarhine or naive — but with a look of compassion.

At 37 she has been a nun for 18 years, teaching most of that time. In recent years she taught at Trinity Montessori School in Pittsford, a suburb of Rochester, and last April had almost completed her first year as the school's director.

She has been out on bail, her address unknown, since her release from the hospital soon after the birth. She arrived at court the first morning in the company of three nuns who helped her pass through the television cameras' glaring lights in the hallway. Since, she has entered the courtroom from a locked hallway where the judges' chambers are located.

Her family occupies a row in the courtroom — her widowed mother, a sister and brother, other relatives. About 10 Sisters of St. Joseph, including the order's superior general, Sister Jamesine Riley, are always present.

When she smiles in recognition or chats lightly with someone she looks girlish and shows something of the animation people say has always characterized her. Usually, however, she is grave and strained, staring straight ahead.

At times she reacts to the proceeding by flushing, blinking rapidly, biting her lips and swallowing. That happened as the prosecutor, Joseph Valention, an assistant district attorney, delivered his opening statement to Judge Hyman Maas. It is the only time, so far, that Valentino, a polite, low-keyed lawyer, has come down hard.

Valentino reminded Maas of "his awesome responsibility" and outlined for him the theory of the people's case.

He asked Judge Maas to "shed the cloak of sympathy and treat this case like any other."

Counsel for the defense, Charles Crimi, who is being assisted by Anthony Palermo, countered the opening statement and admonished Judge Maas to "abide by the rules" and presume Sister Maurren innocent until proof beyond a reasonable doubt of guilt.

The indictment was for manslaughter, not murder, and Sister Maureen pleads innocent to manslaughter, Crimi said. "Admittedly this is an ordeal for her in her position, but she wants to demonstrate her innocence," he said, emphasizing that there is no direct evidence of any harmful act by her.

"Our proof will show at relevant times the accused suffered an acute blood loss and other physiological difficulties," Crimi said. In effect, he said, these factors "deprived her of any cognitive faculties."

is no longer against Race, Color or Creed, Flesh or Blood; but is against Spiritual wickedness in high places. Our God is a patient God and he is in control. A house divided by itself will fall, whether it is good or whether it is bad. Make your decision now which side you want---Good or Bad. It is later than you think; the new cycle has already begun. Yesterdays words again today---"Excess brutality, whether mental or physical, creates excess love---and excess love is idolatry".

Peaceful Palace # 1, Phil Minear, Manager

QUALITY OR QUANTITY?

SEX: Quality is temperance, patience and understanding to the one you expect to be married to the rest of your life. Quantity is abuse of natures flesh through lack of self control; loose you, you lose.
Peaceful Palace #1, Phil Minear, Mgr.

Judy captures 2nd tour win

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — "I had it in my mind that if I shot a 63 and then didn't win, I'd be a turkey of some kind," Judy Rankin says of her four-stroke victory in the $100,000 Bent Tree golf classic.

Mrs. Rankin, 32 and from Midland, Tex., shot a careerbest 63 in the opening round, but followed it with a 77 before carding a 69 Sunday to win the Ladies Professional Golf Association event and earn $15,000.

Clifford Ann Creed of Sulphur, La., was second at 213, also with a Sunday round of 69. She won $10,000.

Mrs. Rankin shot five birdies in a nine-hole stretch Sunday to rebound from a two-stroke deficit early in the day for her second victory in three tour events this year. The all-time LPGA money-winner lost a playoff in the season opener in Miami, then won last week in St. Petersburg.

Pam Higgins of Palm Springs, Calif., who had a final 73 for a 214 and won $7,200, was the only other player under par for the 54 holes on the 6,124-yard Bent Bree Golf Club course.

Beth Stone of Miami, co-leader with Mrs. Rankin after 36 holes, stumbled to a 77 and finished in a three-way tie for fourth with Jane Blalock of Highland Beach, Fla., and Sandra Palmer of Palm Springs, Calif. Each won $4,400.

Palmer, who led the tournament at one point, had three bogeys and one double-bogey on the back nine for a 76. Blalock shot a 71.

"I never thought you could shoot a 63 and a tournament could be so hard," sighed Mrs. Rankin, who won $150,000 on the tour last year. "Don't let anyone tell you this is an easy game."

The 108-pound Texan bogeyed three straight holes on the front nine to fall two strokes behind Miss Palmer and Miss Higgins. But she began her birdie binge with a 13-footer on No. 8, moved back into a tie for the lead with an 18-footer on No. 10 and swept past her faltering foes with birdie putts of two, five, five and six feet.

"I made three bogeys early, but I tried not to get depressed," she said. "It was such a tough, windy day that I knew everyone else would have troubles somewhere along the line."

Defending champion Kathy Whitworth of Richardson, Tex., had a final-round 72 for a 221.

Tar Heels rip Cards

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Having clinched the Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season title, a relaxed University of North Carolina team beat Louisville 96-89 in a nationally televised college basketball game Sunday.

The ninth-ranked Tar Heels almost relaxed too much. They led by 19 points at the half, but a second-half comeback by Louisville nearly cost them the game.

"It looked like we wore out," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith after the Cardinals' rally. "But it's hard to be ahead by 20 against such a good team as Louisville."

A sellout crowd of 11,666 attended the game in the Charlotte Coliseum. The victory increased North Carolina's record to 22-4, including an 8471 victory over Duke Saturday that clinched the ACC title. The loss dropped the 10th-ranked Cardinals to 21-5.

Sewells capture foursome tourney

Ken and Wanda Sewell combined for a net 64 Sunday to win the Midland Country Club's Mixed Foursome golf tournament.

Clem and Marge Ware tied Homer Adams and Betty Sappington for second with a net 67.

Jack Nicklaus blasts out of a sand trap Sunday on his way to the Inverrary golf title. It was one of the few times during the day that Jack was in trouble.

Jack Nicklaus steams field

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — "I sort of steamrolled ahead," was the way Jack Nicklaus explained his 61st PGA tournament title, in the $250,000 Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic.

The game's 37-year-old master fell one shot behind playing partner Gary Player on the eighth hole Sunday, then outshot Player by seven shots on the next nine holes and finished five shots ahead of the South African to claim $50,000.

"I really don't think I'm a great frontrunner," said Nicklaus, who entered the day a shot ahead of Gil Morgan and two up on Player.

"Once I got one shot behind (with consecutive bogeys on Nos. 7 and 8), I just made up my mind and played more aggressive. I played better being behind at that point," said Nicklaus, who had a closing two-under 70.

Where Nicklaus really won the tournament was on the 532-yard 15th hole. He got an eagle three with a 30-foot putt to move four shots ahead and said, "I figured I could just walk home from there.

"I played the hole with two eagles, a birdie and one lousy par," said Nicklaus, who finished at 13-under 275 for 72 holes at Inverrary Golf and Country Club.

The five strokes he picked up on 15 was the margin of victory over Player, who ended at eight-under 280 to claim $28,500.

Nicklaus credits rotund comedian Gleason with his success on 15—he had two eagles and two birdies on the hole last year when he won the Tournament Players Championship here by three strokes.

He said Gleason reminded him before the TCP that his downfall in four previous events had been failure to score well on 15. Nicklaus said he had approached the hole with added determination ever since.

Nicklaus, now tied with Ben Hogan for second on the alltime victory list behind Sam Snead's 84 triumphs, will skip this week's Florida Citrus Open at Orlando but play the next three tournaments to prepare for the April 7-10 Masters.

He is the first established veteran to win this year. Previous winners on the West Coast were Bruce Lietzke twice, Tom Watson twice, Jerry Pate and Tom Purtzer.

"It seems to be a solid pattern every year," said Nicklaus, who played in only two previous tournaments and made $4,600. "The young guys come out in January ready to play."

He said the older players don't gear their games up as quick and added, especially of the young players who don't win and face weekly qualifying sessions, "After seven, eight or nine events, they get stale and tired of golf, they sort of eliminated themselves.

Age of super college teams may be over

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The super college football team may be extinct.

Awesome, unbeatable squads like Notre Dame in 1966, Nebraska in '71 and Oklahoma in '74, teams that were three-deep at each position with an abundance of first-round pro draft choices may soon take their place alongside the bones of dinosaurs and the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Yet, the game itself has never been in better shape. Attendance and television revenue increase every year and future projections indicate more of the same.

A contradiction? Present developments, lamented by many college football people, can be explained in four words:

Money and competitive balance.

Faced with constantly soaring expenses, the membership of the National Collegiate Athletic Association has been busy legislating cost-saving measures.

Schools like Oklahoma and Nebraska that once signed 45 or more high school prospects to scholarships each year are now limited to 30. And they can have no more than 95 athletes under scholarship at one time.

Schools that once employed 12 or 13 assistant coaches to give close individual attention to players—and to the all-important high school prospects—now can employ only eight.

HA! HA! HA!

Rebs, 'Dogs open season

The 1977 high school baseball season opens Tuesday with the Midland High Bulldogs entertaining the Monahans Loboes and the Robert E. Lee Rebels hitting the road for a game with the Hobbs, N.M. Eagles.

Midland High has a new coach in Larry Peel, who will be making his debut against the AAA Loboes while Ernie Johnson, the veteran 5-4A coach at Lee, is starting his 17th season in the Tall City.

Peel has seven lettermen back off last year's team while Johnson only has two returning lettermen back to form the this year's version.

Kevin Widner will start on the mound for the Purple Pack while Johnson is still undecided on who to start on the mound in Hobbs.

Johnson's team will have 11 underclass-men with 10 juniors and a sophomore while Midland is a senior outfit.

Lee plays a return match with Hobbs on the Lee diamond Friday while Midland entertains always-strong Lubbock Montery on the Memorial Stadium diamond Friday.

Then on Saturday both Lee and Midland will be in Lubbock to face Coronado and Lubbock High in a pair of doubleheaders.

Brian Gottfried pulls upset

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. held his serve only once in the first set, but came back and won the singles title at the $225,000 Tennis Games, upsetting Argentina's Guillermo Vilas 2-6, 6-1, 6-3.

The 25-year-old Gottfried earned $35,200 Sunday while Vilas received $17,600.

"I couldn't get my first serve in and Vilas slapped back my second serve to win the points (in the first set)," Gottfried said. "I tried to stay back and play a baseline game with him, but he killed me. The only way I beat him was to serve and volley and make good approach shots. I did this in the second and third set. He couldn't get his strong ground game together, and that made the difference."

Gottfried broke Vilas' service three times in the second set and held his serve three times. Vilas won only one game in the second set, when Gottfried netted the ball twice on low volleys.

At the end of the second set, a frustrated Vilas did not try for a low volley. Afterwards, he angrily stomped to the sidelines.

In the doubles, Frew McMillan and Bob Hewitt of South Africa defeated Americans Marty Riessen and Roscoe Tanner 7-6, 7-6, winning both tie-breakers 7-5.

The tournament was sponsored by American Airlines.

Texas Electric helps sponsor the Discovery '76 House at the University of Texas in Arlington. The sun's heat is used to run special heating/cooling equipment.

If this house can be heated and cooled by the sun, why can't yours?

This solar energy research house is heated, air conditioned and supplied with hot water by the sun's rays.

Rooftop solar collectors trap the heat from the sun, which is then transferred into the house.

Texas Electric helps sponsor this solar research facility. And we participate in a national solar energy development program.

Someday, houses like this one may be common. But right now, it's an experimental system that's simply not affordable for widespread home use.

Meanwhile, you need electricity to heat and cool your home today. And we have to make that electricity with fuels that are available.

That's why we're building power plants that run on lignite coal and nuclear fuel. These new plants are expensive, which means electricity will have to cost more.

But it also means we'll be able to continue supplying the electricity you need.

Texas Leaguer lifts eyebrows in Angel camp

By The Associated Press

Say, hey, who is that in a California Angels' uniform?

Why, it is Willie Mays. Willie Mays Aikens, that is.

The Angels' rookie not only is a sound-alike for the former great outfielder who played for the San Francisco Giants and New York Mets, but is a lookalike—judging from the way he hit Sunday.

Aikens, a first baseman who won the 1976 Texas League home run championship at El Paso, hit a towering homer as the Angels held a full-scale workout at their Holtville, Calif. camp.

The blast highlighted a successful hitting drill, according to California Manager Norm Sherry.

"This is our fifth day in camp," said Sherry, "and I'm very pleased with the attitude and performance of all our players in both the fundamental and hitting drills. Our sole purpose in starting camp at a relatively early date is to get the team in the best physical condition possible for the start of the season.

"I guess you could say the only real difference between this camp and previous Angels' camps is perhaps a more relaxed atmosphere and a whole lot more hitting."

Outfielder Joe Rudi, a celebrated free-agent acquisition in the off-season, made his spring training camp debut as Sherry welcomed 46 players to the workout.

Other spring training camps also were in full swing.

The world champion Cincinnati Reds, joined by a disatisfied Pete Rose, held their first workouts over the weekend. Rose, who has threatened to play out the option year of his contract, joined 29 pitchers and catchers. The only absentee at Tampa, Fla. was relief pitcher Pedro Borbon, who was granted permission to arrive late due to a family illness.

In St. Petersburg, Fla., outfielder Dave Kingman arrived at the New York Mets' camp just as Sunday's workout was ending. Kingman, the Mets' lone unsigned regular, refused to talk to anyone, including General Manager Joe McDonald or reporters.

Second baseman Phil Garner, embroiled in a contract dispute with Oakland owner Charles O. Finley, was the only prominent no-show at the A's camp in Mesa, Ariz.

Relief pitchers Jim Willoughby and Rick Kreuger checked into Boston's camp at Winter Haven, Fla., leaving pitcher Luis Tiant the only absentee for the Red Sox' second practice session. Tiant, reportedly vacationing with his family, has refused to report until the Red Sox renegotiate his contract.

The Seattle Mariners signed utility infielder Kurt Bevacqua and right-hander Dave Johnson, bringing to 34 the number under contract. The Mariners still have to sign six more players.

Aggies, 'Horns, Owls earn sweep

By The Associated Press

Texas A&M, Texas and Rice each swept a three-game series over the weekend to get a quick jump in the 61st Southwest Conference baseball race.

All three teams had a one-run game with their opponents, but they survived to post 3-0 records.

A&M downed Arkansas 4-3 and 4-0, Rice outhit Southern Methodist 13-11 and 8-7 and Texas beat Texas Tech 6-5 and 11-0. Texas Christian edged Baylor 2-1 and 3-2 after being embarrassed 20-3 on Friday and Houston edged Nicholls State of Louisiana 3-2 in a nonconference game.

The Longhorns trailed 5-3 going into the final inning of the first game against Texas Tech but they scored three runs, with a double by Chris Raper, a two-out single by Jerry Jones and a bases-loaded walk the big heartbreakers for the Red Raiders.

In the second game, Texas won easily behind the two-hit pitching of Bob Hueck.

TCU found its pitching touch Saturday after Baylor's 20-run explosion Friday, with Ken Benedict and Randy Owens pitching four-hitters for the Horned Frogs.

Mike Hurdle got a key threerun homer in A&M's tight first game triumph over Arkansas and then Jim McWilliams blanked the Razorbacks on three hits, with 10 strikeouts.

The pitching performance of the weekend belonged to Rice's Allen Ramirez, who struck out 15 SMU Mustangs Friday. Jeff Hays and Bob Burnell homered for the Owls in the doubleheader sweep Saturday as SMU dropped its 27th straight SWC game.

Four live past SWC first round

By The Associated Press

The four winners in the first round of the Southwest Conference postseason basketball tournament have the common goal of meeting Arkansas next Saturday night in the Houston Summit.

But no one seems to be mentioning the sixth-ranked Razorbacks. Players and coaches are either following the old adage about "taking them one at a time" or they are trying not to think about how they can beat a team that won 16 games without a loss in conference games.

HOUSTON, the favorite to survive the elimination rounds and meet Arkansas, rode Otis Birdsong's 36 points to a 111-67 swamping Saturday night of Texas Christian, which lost its 21st straight game. Other first round games saw Texas Tech mash Rice 93-74, Texas A&M out tough Southern Methodist 89- 79 and upstart Baylor beat Texas 72-70.

Thursday pairings include Houston against A&M and Texas Tech versus Baylor. The Thursday winners at the Summit meet Friday and that survivor takes on a rested Arkansas Saturday night.

RATHER THAN talk about Arkansas, Texas A&M senior Steve Jones, who scored 24 points against SMU to go along with Wally Swanson's 26, reserved his praise for Houston.

"If we're going all the way, we might as well play the best first," he said.

Texas Tech took a 12-point lead at intermission over Rice despite hitting 35 per cent in the first half. Then the Red Raiders shot at a 61 per cent clip in the second half to blow the eighth-place Owls away behind Mike Russell's 20 points.

Tech Coach Gerald Myers might have been tempted to talk about the possibility of meeting Houston or Arkansas later in the tournament since Baylor, his next opponent, is only 11-15 for the season. But Myers won't fall in that trap.

"BAYLOR IS playing well," he said. "They seem better prepared than they were earlier in the year."

Baylor won only five of 16 conference games but has played well of late under new Coach Jim Haller.

Texas got 24 points from Jim Krivacs and 22 from Ron Baxter but no points in the last 2:57 as Baylor fought back from a 70-66 deficit to score the final six points in the game. Sherman Patton swished a jumper with two seconds remaining to win it.

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't looking forward to playing Texas Tech in the tournament," said Haller. "It'll be a neutral court and we could have beaten them in Lubbock last week."

TEXAS COACH Abe Lemons and Haller also paid a parting blast to the officiating of Billy Cowan and Tommy Taylor in the game.

"I couldn't believe some of the things that happened tonight," Lemons said. "I don't know how their consciences keep from bothering them."

"Baylor University had blackballed Billy Cowan and I graded Tommy Taylor lower than any official we had this year. I don't see how they can assign those guys to a game like this," Haller said.

Cale continues streak

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Is bad luck the only thing that can beat Cale Yarborough?

His opposition must be beginning to wonder.

Bad luck in the season opener is the only thing between Yarborough and a perfect season in Grand National stock car racing.

The defending national champion spun out on debris left on the track by another car and finished second at Riverside, Calif.

But then he won a 125-mile qualifying race for the Daytona 500, and the prestigious 500 itself, with a victory in the International Race of Champions finale squeezed in between.

And Sunday he added the rain-shortened, Richmond 400 to his list of triumphs—four victories in 1½ weeks.

"Not a bad season, so far," Yarborough conceded.

Actually he already has had a better season than all but one or two of his fellow competitors are likely to have the rest of the year, and 27 races remain on the Grand National calendar.

"We lost the one, but won all the rest of 'em. Things are looking good. We might make a little money this year," noted Yarborough, whose 1977 winnings already exceed $125,000.

About Sunday's race, Yarborough said it was not that close, even though Darrell Waltrip was only a car-length behind when a thunderstorm hit the .542-mile Fairgrounds Speedway.

"It was a cakewalk," said Yarborough, who already has a bulging lead in Winston Cup point standings. "I wasn't worried about Darrell. I knew I could beat him. I could have stretched it out if I wanted. But I saw the rain coming and didn't take any chances."

An eight-car pileup that occured when rain came once earlier in the race had everyone a little more safety conscious.

Buddy Baker, who was running in the top five, spun with Junior Miller and both cars came to rest blocking the track. A line of cars behind them piled in. Only Dick Brooks, another top five driver, was damaged too seriously to continue.

Navratilova wins crown

DETROIT (AP) — Martina Navratilova is $25,000 richer following the Women's Professional Tennis Tournament at Cobo Arena.

Miss Navratilova, the tournament's top seed, won the singles title, beating second-seeded Sue Barker of England 6-4, 6-4 Sunday. Then she teamed with Betty Stove of The Netherlands in winning the doubles final, against JoAnne Russell of Naples, Fla. and Janet Newberry of La Jolla, Calif. 6-3, 6-4.

Miss Navratilova became the first member of the women's tour this season to reach the $100,000 mark in earnings. She received $20,000 for her singles triumph, and $5,000 for the doubles victory.

Arena roof collapses during hockey game

ST. BASILE, N.B. (AP) — Thirty-seven people were taken to hospital at nearby Edmundston, N.B., for treatment of injuries suffered when a portion of the roof of the arena here collapsed Sunday during a hockey game.

A hospital spokesman said early Monday that 10 of the 37 were being kept in hospital, one was under further observation, eight had been released and the remainder were awaiting examination or X-rays.

He said none of the injuries appeared to be critical although several persons were suffering from broken bones.

Roger Auffrey of St. Basile, an off-duty Royal Canadian Mounted Police constable who attended the hockey game with his wife, said about a quarter of the arena was covered with debris when the roof collapsed between periods of the game.

About 800 people were in the 2,000-seat arena.

"I was standing right there— about five feet away—when it went down ...but my seat was right under where it fell," Auffrey said.

He said he and many others had left their seats during the intermission, leaving about 100 people in the area.

DEAR ABBY

Readers object to charity gifts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When someone makes a donation to a charity in the name of a friend as a Christmas gift, who gets the tax deduction?

Don't pass this off so hastily. If A sends B a card saying that he has given $100 to the American Red Cross in B's name, A has either made a gift to B, which is NOT tax deductible (B being an individual, not a charity), or he has made no gift to B.

If A has made a gift to the ARC for B, then B should claim and get the tax deduction. If A has made no gift to B, but rather a gift to the ARC, why should he brag to B about it? I object to those "gifts."—DBL IN BERKELEY

DEAR DBL: The person who lays out the money for a tax-deductible gift gets the deduction, not the person in whose name the donation was made.

Read on for a letter from another reader who objects to the "gift-in-your-name" gift for yet another reason:

DEAR ABBY: I give to those causes in which I believe, and I do not want anyone to make a donation in MY name to any charity without my permission. I would prefer NO gift to one that identifies me (even indirectly) with some of those "worthy" causes that are not of my choosing.—WASHINGTON STAR READER

DEAR ABBY: You recently wrote that if a person receives an obscene telephone call, he can tie up the caller's line by simply not hanging up. That's not true! It's the other way around. The caller can tie up the line of the callee by not hanging up.

The callee cannot disconnect himself from the caller unless the caller hangs up!

You've probably had a thousand letters on this, but one more won't hurt.—EX-PHONE OPERATOR

DEAR EX: You're right—I called it wrong! Thank you (and the other 999 who wrote to straighten me out).

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for six months and have put up with about as much nagging from my husband as I am going to.

Here is the problem: My 27-year-old "baby" wants me to wash his back. He claims his mother washed it for him every day when he was home. We have gotten into several fights over this. I don't need anybody to wash MY back, and I don't see why he needs somebody to wash his.

What should I do?—MARY LOU

DEAR MARY LOU: Give him "the brush"—the kind with a nice long handle on it. And don't forget the soap. (Soft.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO SHUNNED AND HEARTBROKEN IN SEATTLE: Herepes is NOT a venereal disease, and those who say it is do not know what they're talking about. It is a virus, and one of the most difficult to get rid of, but a venereal disease it is NOT!

Relationships often doomed when based on romantic love

By DARLA WELLES
Copley News Service

Ah, romantic love. The stuff of poets and playwrights. The fodder for Tin Pan Alley tunes and operatic arias.

The storybook image of the relationship between man and woman — the candlelit world of champagne and roses in which prince and princess live happily ever after.

What ever happened to all that?

It's fading out. Or at least changing form.

And that, according to Dr. Mary Lindenstein Walshok, is something to thank your star-crossed lovers for.

Walshok, a sociologist and assistant dean for academic affairs at the University of California at San Diego Extension, is not a curmudgeon opposed to the concept of romance. She just feels that when its importance is overplayed or its significance misunderstood, relationships suffer.

"Look at the great classical romances — Romeo and Juliet, Tristan and Isolde — think how they came out," she said. "Classically, romantic love is seeking after a lover who is unavailable or forbidden. And when the lovers do finally get together, something dreadful always happens. Like they die."

And it's not so different with contemporary relationships, she said, when they're based solely on romantic love rather than more enduring qualities.

By definition, she explained in an interview, romantic love is desperate, exciting, passionate and mysterious. And in order to maintain that feeling there must be some aura of mystery about the person, some air of intrigue about the relationship.

Marriage and other long-term relationships eventually fall into a routine.

"And routinization," said Walshok, "is antithetical to romantic love. The two simply do not exist together in a steady pattern of things without the element of adventure. You can't be married to somebody or living with somebody and maintain that sense of high melodrama."

But that's not all bad, according to the sociologist who feels that the time has come when people should be — and often are — placing less emphasis on romantic love as a basis for relationships.

Much of romantic love, she said, can be attributed to each partner's idealized image of what a perfect lover should be. And when the partner fails to live up to that image — just as in classical tales of romance — something tragic happens. Disappointment, resentment and bitterness set in and stifle the relationship.

And part of the problem arises from reluctance to relinquish the romanticized ideas of what a mate and a relationship should be. Instead of reexamining those ideals, people are quick to say there's something wrong with their mates, to terminate the relationship and go in search of another mate who will, in their optimistic viewpoint, conform to their standards.

That means, according to Wolshok, that when romantic love is the core and essential reason for a relationship, it's almost certainly doomed to failure.

But that doesn't mean romantic love doesn't have value or shouldn't be a part of a love relationship. It certainly adds a bit of zip and dash to life in her estimation. But she considers it a poor basis for selecting a life partner.

Dandy Lions plan cookbook

The Dandy Lions, auxiliary of the Southside Lions Club, met in the home of Mrs. T. L. Bond, 1600 Gulf St., with Mrs. Charles Welch as co-hostess.

Mrs. Bill Anderson reported that $25 had been donated to the rehabilitation center and a contribution had been made to the Texas Lions League for Crippled Children in Kerrville. The contribution was made in memory of Bobbie Joe Whittle, son of J. B. Whittle, who was killed in an automobile accident in California.

Plans were finalized for publication of a favorite recipe cookbook, the club's project. A committee was appointed to investigate possible recipients of the Midland College scholarship.

Mrs. A. J. Green gave a reading, "Dressing Up Elmer."

Refreshments were served to 14 members and three guests; Josie Messersmith of North Platte, Neb.; Mrs. Jack Hightower and Mrs. Green.

Paris summer collections reveal nothing new

Newsday

The world-famed, high-priced fashion designers of Paris held the always eagerly awaited, always glittering annual showings of their made-to-order summer collections. So what's new? Not much.

It almost seemed, in fact, like a mere rerun of last October's annual displays of the lower-priced, ready-to-wear clothes for the same season. There were some exceptions but, for the most part, the great and daring innovations usually anticipated in the high-priced area were absent. The minis, the peasant and the gypsy styles that had held center stage in October were all there again and it looked as though the rich may be dressing much like the middle class next July.

Of course, if the general idea was the same, at least it was pushed to a few new extremes. There were, after all, higher-priced fabrics of silk, organza and chiffons, with touches of embroidery and hand-painting. There was also a return to some "nudity" with see-through dresses by Philippe Venet and Yves Saint Laurent. But in showings marked by very little innovation, it was the minis that displayed the most (in more ways than one) and drew the most interest.

The minis by Pierre Cardin were the most original of all, with asymmetrical hemlines that bared the thigh at one side and dipped to midcalf at the other. There were also some barely there tunics; a few had mid-calf side panels. Marc Bohan of Dior wasn't quite so daring. His minis just grazed the top of the knee.

And the end, in addition to raising hemlines, the designers raised a question in the minds of fashion experts: Why are some of the Paris styles shaping up shorter just when most women, in America at least, are getting used to the longer lengths? Cardin replied that the reason wes simple: "We've had the same long proportion (in Paris) for four or five years. If fashion and couture are going to survive, couture must go younger."

But Ira Neimark, the president of Bergdorf Goodman, wasn't so sure that the shorter fashions will be considered all that appropriate to this country's life-style. "They're good for the beach and for resorts," he said in a Paris interview with Women's Wear Daily, the fashion industry trade paper. "But for us, the elegance and excitement for now is in the normal (below-the-knee to mid-calf) lengths." Even Nan Kempner of Manhattan, a jet-setter who enjoys being among the first to wear a new style, was hesitant. "It's nice to see knees again," she said, "but I don't know whether I would dare wear them."

But not all the designers were emphasizing the resurgence of the high hem. Courreges, who had helped make the mini a fashion byword in the '60s, would now like to see women like maypoles: minimal tops and skin-tight long skirts, encircled with organdy ruffles for a spiral effect.

The peasant and gypsy styles were also still an important part of the warm-season offerings. But there was dissent there, too. Saint Laurent, who started the trend last year, is now content to leave them to others. He has, instead, "rediscovered" the pantsuit, but has given it more feminine airs with more room around the hipline and released pleats at the waistline. He also has shifted his folkloric interest to 19th Century garden dresses with ruffled skirts and lace-trimmed blouses.

A new designer on the Paris scene, Roy Gonzales of the Philippines, is still with the gypsy fashions — but at least has a more novel approach. Some of his styles use native embroidery on leather boleros with lots of fringe.

Snowmobiles, boats, mules, horses carry mail

By KENDAL WEAVER
Associated Press Writer

Out there in the American hinterlands, far from the zipcode impersonality of the U.S. mails, the spirit of the pony express still rides.

It rides by horseback to West Virginia hill folk, by Rogue River excursion boat to the wilds of Oregon, and by an inventive nautical bucket brigade — a kind of Rube Goldberg on the high seas — carrying the mail to a fleet of Great Lakes seamen.

It also rides by snowmobile, by mule, by puttering runabout and, in a one-time-only, sentimental journey late in 1976, even by sternwheeler down the mighty Mississippi.

The mailmen who make these runs are a dwindling army of postal irregulars. They not only carry mail in offbeat ways to lone American outposts; they also carry a fast-vanishing frontier tradition with them as they go.

Lloyd Parsons may be the last of his kind. Alone in the West Virginia backwoods, he carries the mail on horseback.

Three days a week, he climbs onto his horse at Advent and rides along a four-hour trail that cars can't travel, to the isolated community of Cicerone, where he drops off letters to 31 families.

The name of his horse: Trigger.

Along with Lloyd Parsons and Trigger, the rollcall of postal pioneers stretches to the Rogue River in Oregon and beyond:

—In a 32-mile run from Gold Beach to Agness, the Rogue River swirls and curves through scenic Northwestern wilderness. A wide, flat excursion boat carries about 20 sightseers on the route. It also carries the U.S. mails.

Only a few years ago, on pretty summer days, the mail breezed down the river by sailboat.

—Mail is delivered, literally, in the middle of the Detroit River. A 40-foot mail launch chugs out into the river seven days a week and, without slowing down, skillfully passes the mail into buckets lowered by bigger ships, some perhaps 700 feet long.

—In the backwaters of South Alabama, mail is delivered by weatherbeaten boat to 105 families along the sleepy, hiddenaway Magnolia River. The mail boxes are posted at the end of family piers.

Kenneth "Bud" Snyder makes the deliveries in his 16-foot runabout, and apparently makes history, too. Postal officials could find no other such route in which mail is delivered dock-to-dock, year-round, solely by boat.

—Mail goes by mule train to the Havasupai Indians who live at the bottom of the Grand Canyon below the Hualapai Hilltop point in Arizona. The 300-member tribe that dates back a thousand years still has a hard-scrabble existence and the mule train delivers to them not only letters but lifestuffs — milk, fresh food, provisions.

A snow storm hit the canyon a few years ago and the mule train was stabled. But the mail and food were delivered — by helicopter.

—Animals have given way totally to modern invention in Alaska. About 10 years ago some mail was carried by dogsled. Today isolated Eskimo villages rely in winter on snowmobiles.

The ski-strapped motor vehicles move the mail from airfields to postal outlets along three Alaskan routes. In summer, when snow melts to water, the snowmobiles are replaced by boats.

In winter, for a letter to reach one of the villages, Nunatitchuk, a predominantly Eskimo settlement of about 300, it will go by plane from Anchorage to Bethel to Kasigluk, with the final seven-mile leg by snowmobile.

The folks on the Magnolia River in Alabama had an alternative to the boat which has delivered their mail year-round for 64 years, but they didn't want it. The idea of mail being delivered to them by car was — well, un-American.

So Bud Snyder, like Lloyd Parsons, the Havasupai, the Eskimos and the other irregulars, carries mail on a "Star" route. That means it is contracted outside the civil service. It also means the job is not necessarily a fulltime affair and Snyder, a husky, balding man, divides his time as a school bus driver, a member of the sheriff's flotilla and a delivery man for Sears.

Wine maker turns hobby into business

MANCHESTER, Ohio (AP) — Ken Moyer used to be a ceramics engineer but he chucked that job for a life along the river — growing grapes and making wine.

He is a licensed vintner, one of Ohio's growing number of small, commercial wine makers.

"Ohio back in the 1800s was the largest wine-producing state in the country until a blight came along and wiped out all the vines," he said. "Now, more and more people are trying to establish grapes as a commercial crop in this area."

A short, white-haired man with the weathered, tanned face of an outdoorsman, Moyer and his family were living in Mexico City just four years ago.

"We formerly lived in Ohio, where my husband managed ceramic tile plants," recalled Mary Moyer. "We had been in Mexico City for about two and a half years when we learned we were going to be transferred to Morocco. That did it."

Moyer, who had long grown grapes and made wine as a hobby, decided to have a crack at it, fulltime.

"We traveled through seven states before winding up back in Ohio," said Mrs. Moyer, seated on her patio overlooking the river. "We found our spot in 1972. It included this place — which had been a truckstop — and 65 acres of land, including a half-mile stretch along the river."

Moyer purchased a wine press, some storage tanks and 5,000 French hybrid grapevines. Then he went back to work.

"It was three years before we got a grape," he said, gesturing toward the neat rows of plants parallel to the river. "It will be six years before we get a full crop. Right now, I purchase more than half my grapes but in the next couple of years, I hope to grow at least 60 per cent of what I need."

Last fall Moyer harvested 12½ tons of grapes. At present he presses some 10,000 gallons of grape juice. From this, and the additional purchased grapes he makes six wines and a champagne.

"I use the true French method of aging the wine in the bottle," he said. "This location is just perfect for grapes. Last spring's frost wiped out most growers but being on the river here saved us. We were the only ones I know who didn't get wiped out."

Moyer easily sells all the wine he makes. Department stores in Dayton and Cincinnati handle his product. Most of it is sold here at the Moyers' restaurant, sandwiched between the river and U.S. 52.

"The restaurant just happened," said Mrs. Moyer. "We had no intention of opening a restaurant but this place had a dining room so we started out with just a few cheeses and some soup, something to go along with the wine.

"Well, we gradually grew as people pressed us to add to the menu. Now, I find myself supervising a fullblown restaurant."

The combined restaurant and winery has become a popular stop for both road and river travelers.

"We have lots of people who drive the 70 miles up from Cincinnati and the 50 miles down from Portsmouth," says Mrs. Moyer. "And in the summer, many people bring their boats. They dock them right out there."

She pointed down to the riverbank. Beyond the bank, patio diners are greeted with a panoramic expanse of sparkling blue river, free from smokestacks and urban pollution. Cattle graze on the far shore, among the rolling Kentucky foothills.

Moyer smiled as he surveyed the scene.

"You know," he said. "I dug the holes and planted those vines. I work harder than I ever did before but I don't mind it now.

"It's different."

Food packaged in plastic safe?

Dear Dr. Solomon: So much of the food we buy these days comes in plastic containers—all kinds of bottles, dishes, boxes, and bags—and I worry that the chemicals in the plastic are going to get into the food. I am sure I have read somewhere that plastics can cause cancer. Have these containers our food comes in been adequately tested? Are they really safe?—Suzanne M.

Dear Suzanne: The kinds of tests you ask about are being done by the food and container companies and also by the Food and Drug Administration. In fact, the FDA has set up what is called the Indirect Additives Laboratory, in order to check on the small amounts of substances that may get into food from packaging materials or processing equipment. There is no way to prevent this completely. Indirect additives are, therefore, allowed if they do not affect the food or harm the consumer—and if the containers themselves are useful.

When you mention cancer, you are probably referring to the vinyl chloride problem. Not long ago, it was found that workers inhaling vinyl chloride gas in factories where the plastic was made had a very high level of liver cancer. And it was already known that hard and semi-hard plastics made from vinyl chloride let off tiny amounts of the substance. So the FDA proposed a ban on using these plastics in food containers. The issue has not yet been finally settled. Of course, the amount of vinyl chloride you might get from containers is virtually nothing compared to what a factory worker gets from the gases.

Meanwhile, the FDA is taking a closer look at other plastics. One of these is acrylonitrile, which is used in bottles for carbonated beverages and some food containers.

The problem about plastics is that they are made from small molecules called monomers, which are linked together to form polymers. Monomers that don't get linked usually escape into the atmosphere, but some occasionally get trapped in the plastic—and it is these that are apt to pass from the plastic to the food inside.

The FDA laboratory checks container materials submitted by manufacturers for approval. It is also rechecking materials now in use—the various kinds of bottles, boxes, wraps, coatings on paper and cardboard for cartons you mention. Rechecks are liable to occur whenever better testing methods are developed—to make sure something harmful was not missed in earlier, less thorough screening. And they are naturally ordered if important new information comes in about a possible danger.

With taro plant, it's the water

The Los Angeles Times

HANALEI, Hawaii — With its waterfalls, streams and fern-covered mountainsides, Kauai is known as the Garden Isle of the Hawaiian chain. And while these special conditions attract thousands of tourists each year, they are also the functional secret of David Kaona's modest success.

Kaona, 69, is one of several dozen small taro farmers in the beautiful Hanalei Valley on Kauai's northern shore. Crushed to make poi, the bulbous root of the taro plant is grown commercially only here and on the big island of Hawaii.

The reason is the water. Like rice, taro must be grown with its roots submerged and its stalks in the warm sunshine. But the water cannot be allowed to stagnate — it must gently be replenished by a continual flow. Only on Kauai and Hawaii is this steady supply available.

"Water from the mountains is everything," says Kaona, pointing up to a 2,000-foot waterfall that divides the green peaks behind his fields. "The water must always be running, or else the taro becomes rotten."

Hanalei's favorable conditions were not discovered by modern science; far from it. Kaona was born on this farm while his father worked the same muddy taro patches. Kaona's grandfather worked them before the turn of the century.

"In those days, my grandfather did not sell the taro as I do," says Kaona. "His family ate it as their main source of food. And it was a good life, too. They made enough poi to last them a few days, then moved down to the beach and went fishing. When the poi ran out, they would come back up to the fields and make more."

Kaona's four acres of taro require constant attention. In all, Kaona has 16 different patches, each in a different stage of growth. One patch is always ready to be harvested and one is always ready for planting.

But he still finds time to fish, sometimes in the evening or sometimes in the middle of the day. There is no one to tell him what to do, so he often works a few hours in the morning and again in the late afternoon.

It is not as leisurely an existence as one might imagine, however, for almost all of Kaona's workday is spent knee-deep in mud and water, bent at the waist.

"Hawaiians get used to the backache," says Kaona with a smile. "Haoles never do." Haole (pronounced how-lee) is the Hawaiian term for caucasian.

Kaona also has a small garden to help supplement his family's diet. In a small patch by his workshed, he grows bananas, sugar cane, papayas, lettuce and string beans.

Kaona's only source of income, however, comes from the taro. A large poi manufacturing company in Honolulu (there are only two in the islands) regularly sends its empty sacks for Kaona to fill. The poi company pays all transportation costs.

For the last several years, Kaona has been receiving $8.80 per 80-pound sack. He says he averages about 100 bags per patch. Because a patch takes anywhere from 14 to 16 months to reach maturity ("You can tell because the leaves start turning yellow," he says). Kaona grosses less than $14,000 a year.

"I'm not rich, but I'm happy," he says.

Despite his advancing years, Kaona does almost all of the work himself. Recently, however, his daughter and son-in-law have been helping.

"All the children born here used to go away to find better jobs," says Kaona. "In the last few years, though, more young people are staying. Some are even coming back. Maybe they see what a nice life we really have here."

And although Kaona says he soon plans to turn over much of his taro land to his daughter and son-in-law, the weathered Hawaiian has no plans for ultimate retirement. "I've worked in the taro all my life, why quit? I'll probably keep doing it until I can't get out of bed."

Chances are good that Kaona's land will go on producing taro for poi long after his death. The demand — chiefly from Hawaiian tourists — has outstripped supply for several years.

Moreover, Kaona's land near Hanalei is some of the richest on the two islands that grow taro. Patches in the small river valley here produced about 60 per cent of the state's total output last year (7.6 million pounds), although the land accounts for only about 40 per cent of Hawaii's total taro acreage.

It's the water.

Salesman does well, not well

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Insurance salesman Robert Greer fell 20 feet into a dry well while he was trying to sell an accident insurance policy to a farmer.

Greer, 27, of Durham, just added the fall to his sales pitch, which he continued from the bottom of the well while he waited for rescuers to pull him out.

"This is a good example of why you need this accident policy," Greer reportedly told farmer Roy Bass from the bottom of the well. "This could have happened to you instead of me."

While Greer talked, Bass lowered a ladder, which promptly came apart. Greer was finally yanked out by a rope thrown down by Garner Rescue Squad members. He suffered a skinned leg.

When it was all over, Bass told Greer he didn't need any insurance today, thank you.

FEA consultant awaits presidential invitation

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — At the offices of the Federal Energy Administration, Douglas G. Robinson spends a lot of time these days waiting for a call from the White House. At the moment, it seems the call may be some time in coming if it comes.

Robinson, a 33-year-old FEA consultant, has been sweating out a hoped-for offer of a top job in the Carter Administration's energy program.

Until recently it seemed likely he would get it. He was a highranking legal officer with the FEA under President Ford and one of the most experienced government energy lawyers in town. And last August he joined Carter's campaign staff as an adviser on energy policy, thereby earning a shot at an administration position.

But last week, a controversy growing out of the 1973 oil crisis re-emerged to haunt him and, apparently, to sever his connection with the White House switchboard.

Robinson's name surfaced at President Carter's news conference Tuesday when a reporter said information about his "transgressions" had been furnished by Rep. John E. Moss (D-Calif.), chairman of a House Commerce subcommittee. Carter said he did not know anything about the matte but would check.

The alleged "transgressions" were summarized in documents Moss sent to Carter's transition team on Dec. 8. Moss, in an accompanying letter, said he had not come to "any conclusions" about Robinson but wanted to alert the transition officials about him. Robinson had, Moss wrote, "vigorously" opposed grand jury proceedings to investigate petroleum price overcharges to the city of Jacksonville, Fla., in 1974.

The complex case began in 1973 when Jacksonville claimed it was overcharged many millions of dollars for fuel oil by Ven-Fuel, Inc., during the Arab oil embargo. The U.S. attorney in Jacksonville and U.S. Customs officials set out to prosecute the company.

The allegation against Robinson is that he sought to head off the cirminal prosecution and tried to influence the government into dropping the grand jury's probe.

The Moss subcommittee staff prepared a document listing examples of Robinson's "opposition to criminal action and his desire to halt the grand jury proceedings." It refers to an October, 1974, meeting in which Robinson, according to one account, said there was "no violation of FEA regulations and very likely no violation of law."

Robinson, in an interview, said his judgment as a lawyer was that there was no cirminal violation of FEA regulations that could be successfully pressed in court. It would have required proving "willful" criminal intent by the corporation's officers and he doubted that could be done. Instead, he had favored pressing a civil action, which might obtain compensation for the city of Jacksonville.

"The implication (of the Moss documents) is that I'm soft on oil companies and not that this was just a lawyerly debate," Robinson said. "I don't know how its possible to get that from the Ven-Fuel case."

The subcommittee staff refused to discuss the case on the record, as did, with one exception, John Briggs, the U.S. attorney in Jacksonville who had differed with Robinson about criminal prosecutions.

Last month, the grand jury returned an indictment charging Ven-Fuel with conspiring to bring fuel oil into the U.S. under false entry papers and using a fradulently obtained import license. Ven-Fuel is jointly owned by a Texas company and an agency of the Venezuelan government.

Briggs said he could not make a case under FEA regulations because FEA officials, including Robinson, would not testify that those regulations were applicable to Ven-Fuel's acts in the Jacksonville case. Robinson agreed he would not have interpreted FEA regulations in such a manner because he did not consider them applicable.

Another section of the Moss staff summary against Robinson implies that FEA attempted to make a deal with Ven-Fuel in connection with intended civil charges. It recounts a meeting on Oct. 16, 1974, with Robinson present, at which, "...FEA as much as assured Ven-Fuel that in return for their cooperation, there would be no criminal charges sought (by FEA) ...The idea was to keep the entire investigation civil rather than criminal."

That version was supplied to Moss's subcommittee by Peter Daring, formerly assistant U.S. aprosecutor in Jacksonville who had favored prosecuting on criminal charges. His source, according to the summary, was Allen Hausman, then an attorney in the Justice Department's civil division.

Daring said last week he recalled hearing such an account in a telephone call from Hausman, who had been at the meeting held in Washington.

However, Hausman said last week: "I don't have any recollection of a conversation of that type taking place. It is unlikely that it took place."

Asked about the suggestion he had promised Ven-Fuel help in escaping criminal charges, Robinson said, "There is nothing to that. I never promised anyone anything."

The White House said that it is investigating Robinson's case and will make public its findings.

An earlier investigation was made for Carter's transition team by Leslie Goldman, counsel to a Senate subcommittee on oil and natural gas. Goldman characterized the dispute as one in which "reasonable men and reasonable prosecutors could differ" and concluded that Robinson's behavior was not improper.

"Rather than concluding that Mr. Robinson is soft on oil companies, my reading of the available public record in this matter leads me to the conclusion that Mr. Robinson tends to be a careful and thorough lawyer," Goldman wrote in a memo to the Carter transition team lasth December.

Budget office believes we can't have it all

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The United States can't have cheap fuel, a clean environment and protection from foreign petroleum imports all at the same time, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

The goals are desirable, but directly contradictory, and Congress faces the hard task of choosing among them, the office said Saturday in a study of energy policy alternatives.

"The low-priced abundant supply of energy is no longer available, nor is it ever likely to be again," said Alice Rivlin, director of the agency. "The problem is more fundamental than the temporary cold weather."

A nonpartisan adviser of Congress, the Budget office provides the lawmakers with background papers and studies, but never submits recommendations. Thus, its 83-page survey of energy policy pointed to the various dilemmas facing the current Congress, which must decide on:

—Changes in auto emission standards.

—Possible de-regulation of natural gas prices. Such prices are now fixed by the Federal Power Commission for gas moving across state lines.

—The rate of increase for domestic oil prices, now controlled by federal law.

—The size of petroleum storage facilities.

—Possible approval of guarantees or subsidies for synthetic fuels.

Production of oil from shale rock and conversion of coal into gas are complicated, costly activities. Since the prices will likely be higher than current charges for oil and gas, advocates of the new fuels may require financial aid for the production facilities, or firm commitments from the government to buy their products.

—The allocation of research funds among nuclear power, solar energy, or conservation programs.

The CBO study pointed out irreconcilable conflicts:

"People do not want to pay more than they have to for energy," Ms. Revlin said. They do not want to import more than they need to. They also want to protect the environment."

To measure the interaction of desires, the CBO calculated the impact of five different energy packages. They were continuing current policies, emphasizing environmental protection, stressing a reduction in imports, keeping costs to consumers as low as possible, and relying on the free market, with all price controls removed.

Here is how the study summed up the effects of each package:

A package aimed at the lowest possible consumer costs for fuels would produce the highest levels of demand by 1986 and the biggest volume of imports. Because prices would be held low by government efforts, consumers would be encouraged to use more oil and natural gas. Yet producers would have little incentive to expand their output. The nation would use a dwindling resource more rapidly, and would be more vulnerable to foreign embargoes.

An environmental protection package would cut demand as well as domestic production. The air and water would be cleaner, but oil imports would rise, increasing the danger of foreign cutoffs of oil shipments.

A free-market policy would lift price controls on oil, halt government regulation of natural gas prices and relax conservation standards. Higher prices "would take the place of conservation standards in discouraging uneconomic uses of energy," according to the report. Domestic energy production would increase by 1986. This approach would have the worst impact on the national economy in terms of spurring inflation and unemployment, the study said.

A package of policies to cut back oil imports would raise prices and thus lead to a lesser demand for oil. Tariffs would make imports much more costly, de-control and de-regulation would stimulate domestic production, with U.S. oil and gas replacing imported products. The nation would be using less of the valuable resource, producers would be finding more, but consumers would pay more.

Students lend hand in newspaper strike

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fledgling journalists at the University of Pennsylvania and Temple University are cutting class to turn out special city editions of their newspapers to try to fill a void left by a strike that's crippled Philadelphia's three papers.

The Temple News, normally published four days a week, put out its first special edition last Friday. Penn's Daily Pennsylvanian lined up extra advertising to pay for the 12,000 extra copies to be distributed in the city today.

"We're skipping classes now. It's out the window. We feel this is much more important," Dave Mueller, editorial assistant for the Temple News, said Sunday.

About 800 editorial and advertising members of the Newspaper Guild struck the jointly owned Philadelphia Inquirer and Daily News last Tuesday over wages and benefits, halting publication.

Picketing began at the Evening Bulletin last Thursday when the Wednesday edition of that paper carried a logotype combining the names of all three papers. The Guild said it considered the Bulletin the same paper as the ones being struck because it carried the combination logo. The Bulletin has continued to sell abbreviated editions from its lobby.

Mueller said the News would resume publishing 13,000 eightpage papers for city distribution Tuesday. It also will distribute 12,000 copies on campus.

"It's all so new to us. We're just getting our feet wet," Mueller said. "We're searching for a way to do it without missing all our classes...."

Daily Pennsylvanian editor Carol Hutchinson said Sunday night the paper would publish a special four-page city edition, along with its regular eightpage campus edition. The newspaper was planning to circulate 12,000 copies on campus and 12,000 in the city.

Miss Hutchinson said the city edition would contain international, national and city news obtained from its wire service.

In a front-page statement in today's edition, the Daily Pennsylvanian said it was not taking sides in the strike. "Rather, we feel we are in a position to make a significant contribution to the city in an unusual situation."

Miss Hutchinson said the newspaper, which normally publishes 12,000 six-page editions five days a week, has not decided if it will publish special city editions beyond today.

"It's very difficult to put out two newspapers and go to school," Miss Hutchinson said. "It's hard enough to put out one."

Doctors' lack of investment knowledge proving disastrous

By DOUGLAS B. FEAVER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — "So I said to him," recalled a suburban Washington podiatrist, Arthur Coster, " 'How do I know this investment is going to be good?' And he said, 'If it weren't good, would we go into it?' "

That was all the assurance Dr. Coster needed at the end of a long day. It was a pleasant conversation in his living room with an investment salesman who had long been on a first-name basis with Dr. Coster, his wife and children.

Without asking any more questions, Dr. Coster sat down, wrote a check for $8,500 and handed it to the salesman from General Financial Services (GFS), a local company with a number of subsidiaries that specialized in pension-planning and investments for physicians.

The money put up by Dr. Coster and 18 other investors, most of them doctors, totaled $272,000 and bought them each a little piece of an office building in nearby Virginia. Instead of producing profits, which the doctors say they expected, the building developed a voracious appetite for more of their money — in some cases eating up three times their initial investment with no return as yet.

"What we have here," said one attorney familiar with the tangled case of GFS "is another classic example of doctors making stupid investments."

Altogether, tens of thousands of dollars — it is impossible to be more precise — have been lost by many of the 325 investors who purchased $3 million in interests in real estate-owning partnerships organized by GFS, its subsidiaries and related companies.

At least four of the 20 GFS real estate projects in Washington and Baltimore have gone bankrupt. Others are running big losses. Responding to complaints of Dr. Coster and others, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), won a court order last summer stopping certain GFS sales practices.

An intensive Washington Post inquiry — based on the SEC investigation, other documents and interviews — has produced an unusually detailed look inside the world of investment amateurs playing the professional's game of high-stakes risk-taking, with silver-tongued promoters offering tax breaks and big profits, without underlining the dangers.

Attorneys for the SEC say such promotions are a major problem anywhere there is a lot of money and particularly where there are hundreds of doctors, dentists and other professionals with big incomes who make attractive targets for assorted schemes.

One scheme collected between $20 million and $40 million from doctors and others — who invested in his nonexistent wine importing business. And there was the suburban Maryland man who sold doctors, lawyers and others shares in an equally nonexistent new town near the Atlantic Ocean, as well as rights in a nonexistent cable TV franchise that would serve the nonexistent new town.

As for Dr. Coster, he not only wrote the $8,500 check, but later signed a partnership agreement that eventually cost him thousands of dollars — more, he claims, than he ever intended or originally invested. He neither read the agreement before he signed it, nor asked an attorney to review it for him, he testified in a deposition.

"You signed a document without reading it?" the lawyer for one of the promoters asked incredulously.

"Exactly," Dr. Coster replied.

When a newspaper reporter asked him why, the doctor said, "Because I trusted him (the promoter)."

Many doctors cited a lack of business knowledge as a reason they invested in GFS offerings. "We go to medical school, spend years learning a specialty, then suddenly find ourselves making a lot of money and we just don't know how to handle it," one doctor said.

"The medical schools don't teach anything about it; it takes a lot of time to learn to be a wise investor, and with all our professional obligations we just don't take the time."

Some doctors who bought into GFS projects have seen an initial investment of $10,000 balloon to 10 times that amount as they continue pouring money into failing buildings to keep them afloat and protect themselves from enormous liabilities they claim were not explained when they invested.

Some investors were steered to the promoters by their own accountants or pension consultants, some of whom accepted undisclosed finders' fees. In one case, a doctor himself recruited a number of colleagues to purchase a medical building in Suitland. When that began to fall along with several other of the doctor's business endeavors, he hanged himself.

Many doctors own shares in more than one GFS investment. Some, even after discovering that one GFS investment was not going well, bought another.

The officers of GFS insist the investment opportunities financially were sound and fully explained. The failures, they say, can be attributed to a sag in the area office rental market brought on by the 1974 recession.

The SEC, in a complaint filed in U.S. district court, charged among other things that GFS did not disclose its profit in the ventures that it comingled the funds of the various partnership accounts and that it misrepresented many of the risks of real estate investment.

Some months after Dr. Coster and his fellow investors beagn to realize that their building — and their pocketbooks — were threatened, they held a series of meetings. Dr. Coster was asked about this in a deposition:

"Q. What did you do?

"A. We sought advice from counsel ... in an attempt to straighten out the total fiasco ...

"Q. What was the result ... ?

"A. Tremendous bills."

The doctors and others who had invested thousands of dollars in buildings, apartments and stocks offered by GFS salesmen began to get clues of trouble late in 1974 when their dividend checks were late or their inquiring phone calls to GFS went unreturned.

Confirmation of big trouble came for Dr. Coster and others when they got a threatening letter from a mortgage-holder who demanded to be paid.

"They were talking about lawsuits for thousands of dollars," Dr. Coster said. "I couldn't believe it. The way it was set up I could have been wiped out."

What Dr. Coster did not knew was that for months the promoters themselves had been holding frantic weekly meetings in the GFS offices to decide, as one promoter later said, which "squeaking wheel" would get the grease — which investor would get a dividend check or his money back.

Next: Suicide, financial ruin.

Be more selective with your queens

Do you know the difference between one queen and another? It doesn't matter except to a king, you think. But on St. Valentine's Day you must be more selective with your queens—and I can prove it with a bridge hand.

Opening lead — ♠ K

You take dummy's ace of clubs and return a red card form dummy, finessing with a red queen from your hand. But which red queen?

Lead hearts. When the queen wins, you can eventually lead a spade to dummy to repeat the finesse. But first you draw trumps, giving up one trick in the process. This is all you lose, and your slam is safe.

You go down if you rely on the queen of diamonds at the second trick. After two successful diamond finesses you must still lose a diamond; you have done all your work for nothing. What's more, you can then reach dummy for only one heart finesse, and you lose a trick to each red king.

TWO REASONS

There are two reasons for preferring the heart finesse:

If the heart finesse works, the slam is safe. If the trump finesse works, the trumps must also divide favorably.

Second, West might hold off with the king of diamonds (if he had it) to lure South into repeating that finesse. But West would not dare hold off with the king of hearts for fear of losing that king.

Consultants can make, or break, local newscast

By JOHN CARMODY
The Washington Post

Ralph Renick, the longtime news director and anchorman at WTVJ in Miami, is something of a hero among the nation's 1,200 news directors.

A few years ago, responding to a growing trend in television news, WTVJ's management brought in the nation's largest TV consultants, Frank Magid Associates, to analyze its news operation — despite the fact that Renick's show had been No. 1 in the rating in Miami for about 20 consecutive years.

Among Magid's recommendations was that the name of the 6 p.m. news show be changed from "Ralph Renick Reports" to something catchy like "Action News."

Renick, who is also a vice president of the station and holds stock in Wometco, its parent company, blew his top, went to his bosses and had the decision rescinded, although other Magid recommendations were accepted.

That story warms the hearts of more than a few news people. To them it's a rare victory by a broadcast journalist over the gimmicks that many news people resent — and the hiring and firing that sometimes follows a consultant's arrival on the scene.

With its intense competition and big-money stakes, TV news is a high-strung profession, given to eternal tinkering, with packaging and with its people (average tenure for a news director: 2.8 years) in the search for a winning formula that will make a station's newscasts No. 1.

Since mistakes can be costly and take years to overcome in this impatient industry, station executives (many with backgrounds in sales or marketing) are willing, even eager, to pay well for outside help.

Enter the consultant, by now a fixture of the high-risk world of TV talent, a placebo for worried managements, an expert adviser who can help fine-tune a winning newscast or become an indispensable crutch for a faltering or inept news department.

A consultant can, in fact, have considerable impact on how the news is presented. Sample recommendations:

New hairstyles, slicker studio sets, a "charm school" for promising talent, how to hold a pencil during newscasts, analysis of viewers' preferences (or biases), shorter story lengths, faster pacing, creation or sharpening of a show's "identity," introduction of packaged health or consumer features, even a critique of the between-story banter on the set that is considerably more studied than viewers may suspect.

Opponents of the consultants' methods, led by CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite and correspondent Charles Kuralt, have become increasingly critical of such intrusion and the "cosmetic" results of their recommendations.

Others inside TV journalism think the impact of consultants is overrated. But good guy or bad, a consultant affects what viewers see on their screens when they tune in the local news. And none is bigger in the business than Frank Magid Associates.

Magid himself is amused by the Renick antecdote, which he has heard many times, and he smiles a millionaire's smile when he is told that even Renick considers him to be a "charmer" and the "best damned salesman" he's ever met.

At 45, Magid has the handsome deeply tanned looks of someone who skis frequently at Jackson Hole, sails the Gulf of Mexico and yachts with wealthy clients in the Caribbean.

He was born in Chicago, majored in social psychology statistics at the University of Iowa and taught sociology there for three years. He also taught statistics and anthropology at Coe College for two years. All of which served him when, in 1957 he started a research firm in Marion, Iowa, a business he later expanded to include TV consultancy.

In 20 years, he has become a businessman of wealth and some power, a financial winner in TV, one of America's greatest growth industries of all time. However controversial, he is sought after by local stations that themselves have been described as a failure.

He operates from his headquarters in Marion, has 105 employes and about 100 client stations. It is a clientele bigger, he says, than that of his five major rivals combined, although he refused to reveal his customers. (McHugh-Hoffman, Inc., of McLean, Va., with 10 employes, is the second largest.)

And his influence is felt among television people.

"Jees," says the news director of one of the country's 10 largest stations as he refuses to be quoted by name on the subject of Magid, "any one of those consultant firms can put the black mark on you and you're through in this business."

"Consultants do influence trends in television," says another. "I know stations that hire Magid just so no one else in their market can have him and that's a kind of power right there."

It's money talking, among other things. Magid's fees range from $10,000 to $65,000 annually for what Cronkite dismisses as "a fad" and "balderdash."

Still, Magid hears his critics talking. There is irritation and perhaps a hint of contempt in his voice when he replies to some of the charges against him.

He becomes testy when it is suggested that his viewer research amounts merely to giving the public what it wants.

"People don't know what they want," he says. "It is a very, very complex process. Audiences are different from city to city."

And of journalists who say that Magid imposes a rigid formula for story-lengths in the news: "They've heard each other tell the stories so often they've begun to believe them. I understand it, but it irks me just the same."

But he saves his real sarcasm for his biggest critic, Cronkite:

"I feel sorry for Walter because he doesn't take time to check the facts," he says. "It's interesting that TV newsmen are so gullible."

•

A television consultant is part traveling salesman with a trunk full of samples, part "show doctor," like a theater director brought in to save an ailing production. And like both, he is never anxious to reveal the tricks of his trade.

"There're five guys out there who'd love to know what we do," says Magid protectively.

Because his clients are spread across the country, though, Magid is in effect a clearing house for production ideas and available talent. That in itself is a saleable service.

When the polling is finished, printed reports analyzing the research findings are submitted to the station.

And if the station wishes, there will be specific recommendations for hiring and firing — the aspect of consultancy that gives broadcast journalists sleepless nights.

Even without firings, individual anchormen or reporters may be taken aside for private consultations and told how the station's viewers react to his or her on-air delivery, clothing or, looks, an exercise in massive approval or rejection that many, understandably, do not look forward to or appreciate.

Cities in Dixie developing ghettos, economist says

By JEFF PRUGH
The Los Angeles Times

AUSTIN, Tex. — Despite their Sun Belt image of population growth and economic prosperity, Southern cities, like many in the North, are becoming "dumping grounds" for blacks and other poor people, an Atlanta economics expert says.

And unless education is upgraded and inner-city tax bases are strengthened, adds Lamond Godwin, Southeast regional director of the National Rural Center, the problem will worsen.

"What we see now are racial and economic ghettos like those of cities in the North and West," Godwin told journalists at a recent University of Texas seminar entitled "Rising Economy of the South."

"In each of these cities," he said, "there is a white suburban noose strangling the black central city."

He named three cities as examples of "total decline" and which he said had gone through an experience like Detroit's: Birmingham, Ala.; Chattanooga, Tenn., and Augusta, Ga.

To a lesser degree, Godwin said, cities such as Atlanta and New Orleans are similarly troubled, as are Mobile, Ala.; Norfolk, Va.; Roanoke, Va.; Savannah, Ga.; Greenville, S.C., and Spartanburg, S.C.

These trends, he charged, are rooted in what he called "Southern traditions of human exploitation and social irresponsibility."

Although the South is more diversified economically because it no longer relies almost solely on agriculture, the influx of industry has not reduced poverty in the region, Godwin said.

Where are the jobs increasing? In suburban areas, or those with the smallest black population. You're now getting a mismatch of where blacks are — and where the opportunities are."

Not all urban authorities, however, agree that Southern cities are becoming ghettoized like those in the North.

A spokesman for Atlanta's black mayor, Maynard Jackson, said, "Atlanta is not evolving like Northern cities because of its uniqueness — the strength of its black middle class and large black university complex."

He added that Jackson was encouraged by a return of middle-class residents — white and black — to rehabilitated neighborhoods where once-elegant homes have been purchased cheaply and restored.

In Birmingham, a heavy-industry city unlike Atlanta, Arthur D. O. Shores, a black city councilman, admitted that so-called "white flight" to suburban areas had contributed to a decline in inner city residential areas.

But the city, Shores said, is providing low-interest loans as high as $5,000 for low-income housing and has balanced its $60 million budget. "You certainly can't say we're another New York or Cleveland or Detroit," he said, "not by a long shot."

An Augusta, Ga., civic official insisted his city had "no such thing as a ghetto."

Bernon Williams, director of the city's Department of Community Development, said Augusta was undergoing urban renewal and is relocating low-income families at taxpayers' expense.

"We do have some dilapidated homes and slums, yes," he said, "but we're doing something about it."

Those views were echoed in Chattanooga by Roy Noel, the city's black Equal Opportunity director, who conceded that Godwin's remarks "have a lot of validity."

Noel said Chattanooga's leaders were beginning to take a look at downtown blight and had discussed tentative plans to redevelop businesses and homes. "It's costing a lot of money taxwise, and we know the problem exists," he said, "but we're certainly not looking the other way."

Godwin, 34, who is black, was a $3-an-hour longshoreman as a teen-ager in Mobile before earning degrees at Atlanta's Clark College and the University of Illinois. After studying at Harvard, Godwin also taught labor studies at the State University of New Jersey, then moved last year to the National Rural Center, formerly headed by F. Ray Marshall, the new U.S. secretary of labor.

His report on the plight of Sun Belt blacks, he said, was drawn largely from statistics compiled by the nonprofit Southern Regional Council in Atlanta and by the federally funded National Commission for Manpower study.

White House callers get busy signal

Newsday

WASHINGTON — To the ears of thousands of Americans these days, the signals from the White House are all busy.

In the time of Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon and Lyndon Johnson it was so easy. Dial the White House and the switchboard would not even ring twice. A single sound and then the courteous, slightly forbidding, words: "White House." Now, there is the busy signal.

"I'm surprised you could get through," chief operator Mary Burns told a reporter when he finally did. "We had one lady from the South who was calling for half an hour. She just couldn't get in. I've been here 28 years and this is the busiest of any transition period."

Last week, the machines attached to the 25 telephone lines into the White House told the operators that they were answering 80,000 telephone calls a day. This week, the total has tapered off — to more than 70,000 calls a day. In recent years, the average number of calls to the White House has been 18,000 a day. The record was 102,000, when Nixon resigned.

A White House spokesman has one explanation for all the calls that are coming in: "It's been happening ever since the President started making statements that this is a new and open White House." The spokesman theorized that the people are now trying to test those words with their calls.

To deal with the callers, the White House has set up a special "Comment Office." There, a small staff struggles with the volume of queries and complaints and provides a count of how sentiment is running on various issues.

Not all the callers want to talk about the great questions of the day. "They call about jobs," Mrs. Burns said. "They want to talk to the President."

Sometimes, they want to set up meetings with the President.

Real estate profits depend on supply, demand

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — If everything goes well, there are substantial tax advantages for high-income individuals who are partners in owning a building.

Washington tax lawyers explained that in the early years of a classic real estate limited partnership, if everything is properly organized and the project is efficiently operated:

—An investor risks nothing but the money he puts in.

—The project will produce more money (rent) than the building will cost to operate. In other words, it will produce "cash flow."

—Tax deductions — primarily in the form of allowances for deterioration of the building (depreciation) and for interest on the mortgages — will total more than the amount of cash produced by the building.

Thus the building's owners have the money from the building and do not have to pay taxes on all of it. There is a bonus: If there are excess tax deductions — the total of depreciation and interest allowances that exceed the project's income — they can be passed through the partnership to lower the tax bills of individual partners on income they earn from other sources.

Real estate, despite what has been said, is inherently risky, several experts agreed. The fact that it is so risky is one of the reasons it was the only classic tax shelter to survive the so-called Tax Reform Act of 1976 virtually intact, according to congressional sources. Without tax incentives, the real estate lobby suggested, it would be very difficult to raise venture income for an already depressed industry.

The primary risk is the simple law of supply and demand. There may be a need for a building when it is planned, but by the time land is acquired, financing arranged, permits obtained and construction completed, months have passed and the need might have disappeared.

In exchange for taking that risk, the greatest tax advantage in real estate is normally gained during the construction period. But basic advantages — depreciation and interest — apply to the owners of an existing building, particularly if they can buy it with little money down. The higher the mortgage, the more the interest, the bigger the tax shelter.

However, there is a mathematically determinable point where the building ceases to be a shelter and starts to become a liability because the rate of depreciation has declined and the mortgage payment consists of more principal than interest. The building still produces money in the form of rent, and that money is still taxable, but the deductions are gone.

It may be difficult to sell a share of a partnership that owns such a building. Further, the moment the building is sold there can be a huge tax liability on the profits of the sale. In such situations, the clever investor can control the timing of the sale as well as finding another shelter to cover his taxes. The new owner has the same tax advantages — depreciation and interest — that the seller did.

If the building goes to bankruptcy, the investor may have taxable gains, but no control over the timing of the sale and no cash.

"The bottom line advice we give when we are asked to review a deal for an investor," one tax adviser said, "is to ask the question: Is this a good economic investment over the long haul without regard to tax benefits?"

Lillian Carter visiting India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — President Carter's mother, Lillian, planned to fly to Bombay tonight for a visit to the clinic where she was a Peace Corps nurse 10 years ago. The trip follows a cordial visit with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, whom she blasted four months ago.

Now 78, Mrs. Carter served in India from 1966 to 1968. At 67, she was the Peace Corps' oldest volunteer.

She and the president's 26year-old son Chip represented the United States at the funeral Sunday of India's President Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed. Afterward, they met for about 45 minutes with Mrs. Gandhi and her family.

"I am deeply touched that Mrs. Carter should have come to India and brought her grandson," Mrs. Gandhi told reporters. "We are very happy Mr. Carter was elected president. An American woman had written me a letter prophesying he would win and so I was forewarned."

Mrs. Carter described the visit as a "very lovely social meeting." But in an interview in the October issue of Ms. magazine she said Mrs. Gandhi was "just a politician" who "cares nothing for the poor."

"The things we send them never get to the poor," she added. "They're divided among the big shots in the government."

Mrs. Carter and Chip Carter arrived at 4 a.m. Sunday after a 22-hour flight. They placed a wreath on Ahmed's body in the morning, called on Foreign Minister Y. B. Chavan and attended the burial in the afternoon.

Mrs. Gandhi said she thought relations with the Carter administration "are good, and we hope they will get better."

Asked if she had been invited to visit the United States, she noted the parliamentary elections next month and said, "This is hardly the time I could go. But Mrs. Carter said she would like to see me in the States, and I replied we would like to see Mr. Carter in India."

Israeli officials may revive exchange idea

JERUSALEM (AP) — When U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance visits here this week, Israeli officials may revive their proposal to exchange some of the occupied territories for individual no-war agreements with their Arab foes, informed sources report.

The Israelis shelved the proposal when the Arabs began pushing last year for resumption of the Geneva peace talks to write an overall Arab-Israeli settlement.

Publicly the Israelis have stressed their readiness to return to Geneva as long as the Palestine Liberation Organization is not present as a separate, full-fledged participant. But with the Arabs insisting on PLO participation, the Israelis say privately that talk of resuming the conference now is unrealistic.

Israeli spokesmen have said their government would prefer that the United States mediate "far-reaching interim agreements" providing for withdrawal from some of the occupied Arab lands in exchange for firm Arab commitments ending the state of war.

How far Israel would withdraw would depend on negotiations and the concessions made by the Arabs, senior officials say.

Vance, who arrives Tuesday, has said that during his trip he plansto investigate a reported shift toward moderation by the PLO. But the Israelis are skeptical.

PLO leader Yasir Arafat "may play tactics with any Western leader, but he can't fool us," Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said during the visit last week of U.N. SecretaryGeneral Kurt Waldheim.

Arafat reportedly told Waldheim that the Palestinians would agree to establishment of a Palestinian state made up of the West Bank of the Jordan river and the Gaza Strip but still would neither recognize Israel nor make peace with it.

The Israelis intend to remind Vance of the commitment President Ford made to Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in September 1975 that the United States will not recognize the PLO until the guerrilla organization recognizes Israel's right to exist and agrees to U.N. resolutions calling for negotiations.

VA to demand refunds when vet quits class

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veterans going to school under the GI bill have a new incentive to complete their course work. If they don't, Uncle Sam will demand full refunds from them.

In the past, if a veteran dropped courses and ended up carrying too few hours to qualify for his payments, the Veterans Administration paid for the courses up until the date he dropped them.

But under new legislation, the VA is seeking retroactive refunds from any student who drops courses and takes fewer classroom hours than required for his VA payment. The amounts vary for full-time, three-quarter-time and halftime students.

Congress passed the legislation last year to reduce overpayments to veterans who dropped out of school or canceled courses without telling the VA. Those overpayments totaled more than $2 billion since 1971, but the VA says it has managed to get about 70 per cent of the money back. The biggest overpayments were $883 million in the year ending last July 1.

The retroactive refund provision went into effect on Dec. 1. The rule also applies in cases where a course is completed but the grade is ignored by the school for graduation purposes.

The penalty does not apply when the situation was caused by circumstances beyond the student's control.

Andrew H. Thornton, chief of the VA's education benefits, said in an interview "it's too early" to guess how many students will have to make refunds for the school term that ended recently.

However, "some schools have expressed concern about the effect (the rule) will have" on the veterans, he said.

No repayments for the past term can be collected for VA payments made before Dec. 1. But for the current and future terms, the retroactive repayments can be assessed back to the start of the term.

The VA is urging veterans to confer with their schools' veterans affairs office to see what effect dropping courses will have on them. They also are urged to consult with their schools to explain the reason for dropping courses when reporting the change to the VA.

Exner 'fears for life'

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Judith Campbell Exner, who says she simultaneously was a girl friend of President John F. Kennedy and Chicago underworld boss Sam Giancana, reportedly is in seclusion, fearing for her life as she completes her autobiography.

"She's in fear. Sam Giancana and (his associate) John Roselli both have been assassinated," said her lawyer, Richard C. Leonard of Beverly Hills. "She doesn't know whether it's related to her. Another fear is that a Kennedy fan might think she somehow harmed him."

Mrs. Exner came to nationwide attention in late 1975 because of a Senate Select Committee on Intelligence probe into alleged CIA employment of Mafia leaders to recruit Cubans willing to kill Premier Fidel Castro.

The committee disclosed that President Kennedy had a "close friend" who at the same time was a "close friend" of Giancana and Roselli, both named in the alleged CIA plot. Giancana was shot to death shortly before he was to appear before the committee. Roselli, who did testify, was killed last year gangland-style.

"She kept silent about all of it for 16 years. It was the Senate committee which created problems for her which have been very traumatic," said Leonard. "She is a very private person."

Leonard denied published reports that Mrs. Exner, in her early 40s, is living in Newport Beach with her present husband, golfer Dan Exner, whom she married in early 1975.

A major ground floor opportunity limited only by desire and effort is available for selected individuals or corporations.

Doctors and medical researchers say, "The basic cause of heart attacks and strokes, America's No. 1 killer, is chlorine and chlorine can be removed at the tap along with all cancer causing impurities.

Major media across America have awakened every person to the tragic conditions of our outdated water systems and the need for pure water.

Some in western Canada talking independence

By NORMA RAMAGE
Canadian Press Writer

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Douglas Christie says he doesn't like the word separatism — heard more and more these days when Canadians talk about French-speaking Quebec. When he talks about the organization he heads Christie prefers the word independence.

Christie, a lawyer from Victoria, British Columbia, is regarded as the driving force behind the 1,600-member Committee for Western Independence. It was organized just over a year ago to promote awareness of western Canada's identity and to consider whether the west should leave the 110-year-old Canadian Confederation.

A similar organization, the 600-member Independent Alberta Association, was formed in late 1974 to collect information to determine whether oil wealthy Alberta would be better off on its own as an independent nation.

John Rudolph, an oil man who heads the association, said in a recent interview that studies by economists and political scientists indicate Alberta would be better off both economically and politically either on its own or linked with other western provinces as a separate nation.

But Douglas Christie maintained in a recent interview that the word separatism has hostile and harmful connotations and was conjured up by the federal government in Ottawa to frighten people away from groups such as his.

"But it definitely means a situation where the western provinces have control of their resources and are able to influence the federal government," he added.

"I do not believe it is possible to have this kind of situation in Confederation as it now stands."

Under the existing political system, the west is disfranchised, Christie claimed, adding that the four western provinces have 68 seats compared with Ontario's 88 in Parliament in Ottawa and the votes of western Canadians have no real impact on the selection of a federal government.

The west suffers economically within the Confederation, he says.

Christie lists some of the familiar and deep-rooted complaints of western Canada: shipment of western resources to central Canada where they are processed and returned as finished products which are more expensive in the west than in the east; discriminatory freight rates; unprofitable industries in central Canada which are protected by high tariffs, making many articles much more expensive in Canada than in the United States, and the current struggle over who should control provincial resources.

He contends that the existing situation is intolerable.

RICKEY GREEN, Michigan, and Indiana's Wayne Radford (22) tangle in midair during and Radford gets tagged for a foul. However, Hoosiers surprised the Wolverines in the Big 10 tilt Sunday.

Rik turns Hope into Hopeless

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Rik Massengale so completely dominated the rest of the field that it was almost dull.

"I feel no sense of frustration," badly-beaten runner-up Bruce Lietzke said Sunday. "The way Rik was playing, it's an honor to finish second. He played one of the finest weeks of golf that I've ever heard of."

It was such a runaway that the only excitement was generated in Massengale's challenge to Arnold Palmer's 17-year-old scoring record in the prestigious Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic. And he got that, the only goal he could set for himself, with a dramatic, 30-foot birdie putt on the 90th hole of this, golf's longest tournament.

The outcome, the winner, was never in doubt. Massengale had it all the way, scoring the third victory of his career, and third in as many years, by a ho-hum, comfortable margin of six strokes.

"It was just a race for second place," said Lietzke, who eventually claimed that position with a five-under-par 67 that extended to 26 the number of consecutive rounds in which he's been at par or better.

And the triumph prompted Massengale to make a change in plans. He was set to skip this week's Los Angeles Open, the last event on the Winter segment of the schedule. His triumph put him in position to gain a spot in the rich World Series of Golf off the Winter point standings and he decided to enter Los Angeles to protect his position.

Just as he'd done in earlier victories at Tallahassee and Hartford, Massengale led at the end of every round. He started six strokes in front in the final round of the 90-hole, five-day Hope, stayed in front and finished in front.

Only his quest for Palmer's scoring record lent any suspense, any drama to the proceedings that tailed off in spectator interest after former President Gerald Ford and the other celebrity amateurs had completed their four days of play Saturday.

"I thought about the record a lot," he said. "I didn't want to go out with that big lead and play cautious, maybe shoot par and just squeeze in. I didn't want to back in. I decided to go for the record."

The softly-drawling, handsome Texan got it with the bold putt on the final hole. It capped off a five-under-par 67 last round and gave him a 337 total, 23 under par and one shot better than Palmer's old mark for the four desert courses used in this unique event.

Playoff ghost haunts our Judy

MIAMI (AP) — Pam Higgins is a long way from the top rung in the Ladies Professional Golf Association, but she proved she was not awed by the tour's stars by winning the $7,500 top money in a $50,000 tournament.

The 31-year-old native of Groveport, Ohio, beat 1976 Player of the Year Judy Rankin with a par four on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff Sunday.

And Miss Higgins did not get rattled, and apparently thrived the first two days when she was paired with Kathy Whitworth, who shot a 68, and then with Silvia Bertolaccini, who had a 69.

"The first two days I had 72 and 71 and I played very well," said Miss Higgins, who has averaged only $12,000 in earnings during her eight years on the tour. "So I was very confident, very aggressive today.

"AS I walked down on the 15th fairway, I felt I could birdie the last four holes."

She birdied 15, 16 and 17 for a three-under-69 on the 6,250-yard Kendale Lakes Country Club course for a 54-hole total of 212.

She said she did not realize she was leading until walking off the course. "I never look at the board. I was just trying to play one shot at a time," she said.

Miss Higgins, whose only other victory came in 1971, watched Mrs. Rankin finish minutes later and two-putt from 50 feet for a tie.

"I didn't think Judy would make that putt (a six-footer for par) on 18. But she's a good long putter," she said. "I didn't want to think win. I didn't want to think anything. I was trying to think about how I was going to hit the shot on 13 (the first playoff hole)."

MISS HIGGINS drove straight down the fairway of the 345-yard 13th and easily made a par four, ending the match. Mrs. Rankin, considered by Miss Higgins as "the best female player in the world," hit a spectator with her drive and the ball buried behind a tree.

Mrs. Rankin, the 1976 champion, hit a low second shot which soared 15 yards beyond the green. Her chip shot back still was two feet off the green, and she had to try a 20-foot chip on her fourth shot.

"You don't play a hole like 13 ever expecting to miss the green. It's a birdie hole," said Mrs. Rankin, 31, from Midland, Tex., who won six tour-

BATTLE SCENE

Chip off old block, but dad or ol' grandad?

BY TED BATTLES

Andy MacPhail must take after his dad, which should, whether they know it or not, let the mayors of Odessa, El Paso, Amarillo and maybe even the governor rest easy.

The young, blond-headed graduate of Dickinson College in Pennsylvania is the son of Lee MacPhail, sedate, respected and, most of all, reasonably uncontroversial president of the American League.

Andy has been in Midland three weeks now as assistant to Bill Rigney, Jr., the general manager of the Midland Cubs without incident.

If he took after his grandfather, probably everybody in West Texas would be talking about him by now, although there is no guarantee that it would be more pro than con.

LELAND STANFORD MacPhail, better known as Larry when someone wasn't cussing him or be someone else, was that kind of person.

Robert Creamer, writing the introduction to Red Barber's Rhubarb in the Catbird Seat, noted, "He was the shrewdest executive in the history of the game...It is startling to realize that he accomplished all that he did in only 11 seasons, three with Cincinnati, five with Brooklyn and three with the Yankees."

Barber, the longtime Dodgers' radio voice, describes MacPhail during his days with Brooklyn: "Larry was not only dynamic and forceful and hot-tempered, but he was also a beautiful working, practicing diplomat."

TYPICAL OF MacPhail's flair for the dramatic was night baseball. He didn't just introduce arclight baseball to the majors at Cincinnati's Crosley Field on May 24, 1935, he arranged for President Franklin Roosevelt to throw the switch for the lights from the White House in Washington.

So, a game between the Phillies and Reds, which might have attracted 2,000 that afternoon, drew 20,000 that night, the most significant event in baseball since Babe Ruth traded his toe plate for a bat.

Joining down-trodden Brooklyn, the National League's standing joke, three years later, MacPhail's genius turned things around in a hurry and as Burleigh Grimes put it, "You could say MacPhail was the father of today's Dodgers. He was a real doer. He put in lights, started the radio announcing, and got money from the bank. Remember, the franchise was in real trouble then —no money— and MacPhail turned it around."

MACPHAIL was a shrewd judge of talent. When he brought in Leo Durocher to manage the Dodgers in what proved to be a stormy marriage of geniuses, MacPhail declared, "I'm convinced that he will be just as good a manager as we can make him."

After Brooklyn clinched its first pennant in more than two decades in 1941 at Boston, the train home was supposed to stop at 125th Street to pick up MacPhail for the triumphal arrival at Grand Central Station.

Leo, not knowing of the arrangement, waved the train past 125th Street as a flabbergasted MacPhail stood on the platform waving his arms frantically.

Of course, Leo was fired on the spot when the tempestutous MacPhail caught up with him...and was hired back the next day.

WITH THE Yankees in 1945, MacPhail, watching from the press box when 10-game winner Hank Borowy lost a game, ordered him traded immediately, if not sooner.

Borowy was grabbed by Chicago, won 10 more games and the pennant for the Cubs, and almost the World Series as well.

When grandson Andy joined the Midland Cubs, it was assumed that he would be a walking volume of MacPhail stories, but he has led a sheltered life.

"Really, the only ones I know are the ones I hear others telling about him," Andy alibied.

"But my favorite had nothing to do with baseball," he adds.

"THEY TELL about the time in World War I when he cooked up the idea of ending the war by kidnapping Kaiser Wilhelm," MacPhail grins. "And they almost pulled it off." The Kaiser was in Holland and they got into the reception room and requested to see the Kaiser.

"While they were waiting, it suddenly dawned on my grandfather that they (the Germans) knew what they (the MacPhail group) were thinking and he figured he ought to get some kind of a souvenir out of the expedition. So, he pocketed an ash tray and excused the group, just before they were about to be nabbed.

"Once out of the palace, they split up and got safely back to the Allies side," MacPhail concludes.

And for any worried mayors or governors, remember, Andy takes after his dad, not Larry.

Chaps host Clarendon

Coach Delnor Poss isn't fussy. He'll settle for another two-point victory over Clarendon College when his Midland College Chaparrals face the Bulldogs at 7:30 p.m. today at the Midland College gym.

Losers in three of their last four, the Chaps need this one to keep the baying wolves from the door.

The Tall City team is tied with Amarillo College for third place in the Western Junior College Conference standings, both with 8-6 records, one game behind second place Howard College, 9-5, the last six in a row.

Clarendon is 5-9 in WJCC and 9-15 on the season. One of the victories, however, came at the expense of first place Western Texas College, 12-2.

THE CHAPS have just finished a rough five-game run, winning a big one over Amarillo College, but losing to Odessa and Howard on the road and then seeing a nine-game home-court victory string severed by WTC last Thursday. The Chaps also managed a two-point win over Frank Phillips in that stretch.

In the course of the action, MC slipped from second to third, but can't afford any more missteps with Odessa, South Plains and New Mexico Military Institute just two games back.

The Chaps hung on by their finger tips to win the first meeting of the teams at Clarendon, 65-63, and expect another rugged night this time.

It's the first of two important home tilts for MC, which also hosts South Plains Thursday, this week.

It will be YMCA Basketball Night and all Y players will be admitted to the game free by wearing their Y basketball shirts.

TOMMY PARKS carries an 18.7 WJCC scoring average into the game while Jackson Pace is hitting at a 14.4 clip and Ricky Hudgins is the other Chap in double figures at 11.1.

Clarendon has four players averaging in double figures with Bart Wilson's 17.8 average showing the way.

Starting with Parks, Hudgins and Pace will be Ron Jones and either Jeff Jackson or Clifford Taylor.

Texas leaves state in quarterback hunt

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas is recruiting an out-of-state black quarterback to offset the impact of losing Darrell Shepard of Odessa, who changed his mind at the last minute and signed with Houston.

Coach Fred Akers went out of state after Texas signed 21 of a possible 30 prospects last Tuesday.

The national signing day — that binds a player to a school — is Wednesday.

"With some of our few remaining prospects it may be a nip-and-tuck thing, because we're competing with teams like Notre Dame, Florida, Michigan and Ohio State," says Akers.

He did not name any of the prospects.

Asked why Texas lost Shepard, the No. 1 prospect in the state, to Houston, Akers said, "Man, I don't have any idea. The night before he told me that he would sign with us."

Shepard called Akers at 1 a.m. at Akers' Odessa motel room, however, and said he would not sign as planned at 8 a.m. Akers went to Shepard's house and "stayed for about an hour, but I had to get moving. He (Shepard) 'wasn't sure' was all he told me. He was waiting to see the Houston coaches, who were supposed to be there around noon."

Although Texas missed out on Shepard, it signed Sam Ansley of Cypress-Fairbanks. Assistant Coach David McWilliams claims Ansley — along with Shepard and Mike Mosley of Humble, who went to Texas A&M — are all outstanding quarterback prospects.

"We thought Ansley was a really fine option quarterback," says McWilliams, who recruited him.

West outscrambles East

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The matchups involved the most awesome assemblage of offensive talent in basketball, but the 1977 National Basketball Association All-Star Game was won on defense.

There was Golden State's Rick Barry, diving to the floor to tear away the loose ball from two scrambling Eastern Conference players. Sprawling on his side, Barry flipped the ball to Denver's Bobby Jones, who fed Phoenix' Paul Westphal for the layup that produced the decisive point in the West's 125-124 victory over the East Sunday.

WESTPHAL'S basket gave the West a 125-122 lead with 38 seconds to play. Then, after two free throws by Bob McAdoo of the New York Knicks had brought the East to within 125-124 five seconds later, along came Westphal to strip the ball from Atlanta's Pete Maravich, who was set to launch a potential winning shot for the East with seven seconds left.

Effective defense requires intensive play, and the 10,938 fans at Milwaukee's packed Arena and a national television audience saw more of that than many had expected in this annual exhibition, traditionally a one-on-one shootout.

"It was more competitive than usual," said Philadelphia's Julius Erving, named Most Valuable Player in the defunct American Basketball Association the previous three years and an overwhelming choice as MVP in this game.

"THE INTENSITY was magnified because of the closeness of the game," Erving said. "It was very good for the fans to watch a one-point game. Because it was close, everybody wanted to play to win. In a 15 or 20-point game, you tend to get a lot of fallaway jumpers, not as much intensity."

"The players never lost interest, that's for sure," said West Coach Larry Brown of Denver. "It was really neat to see guys diving after balls at the end. I never thought I'd see Rick Barry go on the floor."

Barry said the intensity existed because 10 of the 24 All-Star players—he being one of the 10—once had played in the ABA. Brown both played and coached in it.
