Soviets test new missile, stir debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The test of a new Soviet intercontinental ballistic missile, reported by U.S. intelligence sources, seems likely to kindle debate over whether Moscow is trying to cheat on the unratified SALT II nuclear arms limitation treaty.

The intelligence sources said Tuesday that a small missile, powered by solid fuel and launched Feb. 8 from Plesetsk, appears to be a new weapon with a number of characteristics different from what they described as a Soviet medium-sized solid-fuel missile tested last October.

The medium-sized missile was reported to have failed in the October test.

According to the sources, who spoke on condition they remain anonymous, a preliminary analysis suggests the Feb. 8 launch may have been the first successful test of a second new Soviet ICBM.

"It was a missile we haven't seen before," said one of the sources.

The missile propelled four warheads, the sources said. It was not known how many warheads were aboard the missile that failed in October.

The text of a letter signed by then-Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, submitting the SALT II treaty to President Carter on June 21, 1979, says the treaty "permits each party to flight test and deploy only one new type of ICBM."

Last December, State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said that if the Soviets "begin to test another new type of ICBM, this would conflict with the terms of SALT II."

While there was no formal comment from either the State or Defense departments, officials cautioned against jumping to the conclusion that the Soviets have violated the SALT agreement, to which the Reagan administration has said it will abide so long as the Soviets do likewise.

Speaking privately, State Department officials said they were not "aware of any charges that the Soviets may be preparing to violate the agreement."

Intelligence sources said late last year the United States had evidence that the Soviets were developing four types of advanced land-based missiles.

Two were described as probably improved versions of current Soviet weapons, the powerful and highly-accurate SS-18s and SS-19s.

A third missile mentioned by the intelligence sources at the time was the medium-sized solid-fuel missile tested in October. The fourth missile they discussed was identified as a small solid-fuel weapon, which appears to fit the description of the missile reported tested last week.

The Soviets long have powered their land-based and submarine-launched strategic missiles with liquid fuel while the United States switched to solid fuel about 20 years ago.

Missile specialists say solid fuel is more reliable, less corrosive, safer to handle and requires less maintainance.

Tax-evader may be headed for Texas

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

A tax-evader who is accused in the shooting deaths of two U.S. marshals in North Dakota Sunday night may be heading to Texas bent on killing a Texas Ranger, according to information received by the Midland U.S. Marshal's office.

The Fargo, N.D., U.S. Marshal's office notified Midland's office today that Gordon Kahl, a former resident of Crane who injured three people and killed two others in a shootout Sunday, may be enroute to Texas.

According to Deputy U.S. Marshal John Jousy, the Fargo authorities said Kahl has made it known that "he wasn't going to quit until he killed Texas Ranger Frank Horger."

Horger is with the McAllen office of the Texas Rangers. Jousy said he is not aware of any connection between Horger and Kahl.

Officers in McAllen declined comment on the situation this morning.

Jousy said all area law enforcement agencies are being notified that Kahl may be enroute to Texas. He said pictures of Kahl are being circulated, and both the Marshal's office and the FBI are "working closely" on the case.

North Dakota National Guard troops and law enforcement officials Tuesday rushed a deserted farmhouse which they believed contained Kahl. About 80 weapons were recovered, but Kahl remains at large.

Waitresses 'taxed' by tip ruling

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Barbara Nadobny worked 56.5 hours and took home a $19.41 paycheck. That's about enough to eat one meal in a nice restaurant and maybe leave a tip.

As a person who depends on tips for a living, Ms. Nadobny is upset about enforcement of a provision in the 1982 Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act which became effective this month. While the act has disturbed the city's waiting help and restaurant managers, the Internal Revenue Service is claiming it's nothing new and is only a means to collect the government's fair share.

Ms. Nadobny wasn't aware of the changes until last week when she picked up her paycheck. Expecting a take-home figure near $100 for the two weeks of work, she was shocked at the $19 amount and began checking on the ruling.

"It's about as clear as mud," she said of the 12-page explanation prepared by the restaurant's accounting firm. Sitting in the bar at Montana Mining Company during an afternoon break, the former Michigan resident with a teaching degree was joined in her frustrations by another waitress, Vicky Kelly, and her manager, Jerry Mareschal.

MAKING A BASE pay of $2.01 per hour with another $1.34 to account for tips, Ms. Nadobny's estimated tips for that pay period were placed at $333. Added together, that gave her an income of $441.57. Taxed on that amount, the federal share came to $64.24 and FICA, $29.92. That was subtracted from the base pay of $2.01 for 56.5 hours and it left $19.41.

"In essence, I'm going to be the one most penalized for being a good waitress. I can suggest to people less expensive items to keep my gross sales down."

— Barbara Nadobny

According to Mareschal, the law reads that a waitress or waiter is assumed to make 8 percent of his or her gross food sales in tips. For Ms. Nadobny who had just finished the lunch hour with $441.70 to her credit on food sales, she would be taxed on $34.92 in tips — with the federal government assuming she had received that much.

She sees her ability to sell higher-priced menu items to the public as a disadvantage in which she might wind up owing the government money instead of receiving a paycheck.

"You're not far away," she was told by Mareschal. "And that was a bad two weeks," she said of food sales.

"In essence, I'm going to be the one most penalized for being a good waitress. I can suggest to people less expensive items to keep my gross sales down," she said.

A spokesman with the IRS office in Dallas contended the rules haven't changed. It's just that TEFRA enforces compliance with paying Uncle Sam.

"THIS IS NOT a new tax on tips," said Marlene Gaysek. "Tips have always been taxable. TEFRA addresses some problems uncovered by economists and the IRS, that there's an underground economy."

She pointed out that studies revealed only 16 percent of tip income is reported for tax purposes. The remaining 84 percent is pocketed, and the federal government is unable to take its share.

A "tipped employee" can ask that the 8 percent withholding not be included on his or her paycheck. But a "tipped employee" must keep accurate daily records for the year to show how much they made in tips and how much was paid in taxes, said Ms. Gaysek.

"I know people have been upset to tears about this," she said. "If a waitress has been keeping accurate records, nothing has changed. These tips have always been reportable."

But for various reasons, most waiting help doesn't report every penny. And although the IRS contends it's not new, restaurant managers reply that it's causing them more paperwork.

"It's a lot of added cost as far as my job is concerned," said a spokesman at Denny's Restaurant, who added that employees at "just about every restaurant in town are upset."

Rick Hoskins at El Chico's contends the IRS will be using the paperwork as an indicator of who to audit. "The government is saying everyone is getting 8 percent in tips and if you don't report that much, we'll audit you."

Begin defeats three no-confidence votes

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin's governmment today defeated three parliamentary no-confidence motions over the Beirut massacre inquiry.

The vote was 64 to 56. The 120-member Knesset, or Parliament, was packed for the vote, which followed party lines without exception.

The Israeli Parliament usually handles multiple no-confidence at the same time. The speaker, Menachem Savidor of the governing Likud bloc, decided this procedure would be followed today.

Replying to the motions, Justice Minister Moshe Nissim promised that the government and army would correct the flaws in their decision-making process as demanded by the massacre commission.

But Nissim rejected calls by opposition speakers for the government's resignation over the blunders uncovered by the commission.

Former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin brought the first of the no-confidence motions before Parliament, saying he had "grave worry in my heart" about the Begin government's handling of Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

Rabin, a member of the opposition Labor Party, said he feared that Israel's actions during the Sept. 16-18 massacre of civilian refugees in Beirut were indicative of the government's handling of the entire war with Lebanon.

Two more motions were introduced by the Communists and the centrist Shinui Party. They called for the government to resign because it retained ousted Ariel Sharon as a Cabinet minister without portfolio after his ouster this week as defense minister.

Related stories, Page 12A

The first indication of Sharon's weakened status came today when the committee of ministers guiding the negotiations on Lebanon held a meeting from which Sharon was excluded.

His critics say retaining Sharon in the Cabinet post violated the intent of the commission that probed the massacre. The inquiry findings were released Feb. 8.

The commission ruled Sharon should have known Lebanese Christian militiamen might slaughter Palestinians when he deployed them ino two Beirut refugee camps last Sept. 16-18.

It also outlined mistrust in Begin's Cabinet and found Sharon had ignored the prime minister's authority without restraint.

Rabin said the commission's findings had aroused "grave worry in my heart" about how the Begin government has handled the whole Lebanon invasion, which began last June 6.

"Can we be sure that what happened here, and was investigated and is therefore known to us, did not happen in other stages of our involvement?" he asked.

"Did you know that this is how the war in Lebanon would develop when you took the decision to go in? Were these the results you expected? The length of the war? Its price?"

As Parliament convened, Israeli newspapers reported secret feelers aimed at bringing Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Likud Bloc and the Labor Party together in a "national unity government."

Yedioth Ahronoth said Interior Minister Yosef Burg, whose National Religious Party (NRP) is Begin's senior coalition partner, had initiated the contacts.

The idea reportedly was to give Labor Party leader Shimon Peres the post of deputy prime minister, and Rabin a top portfolio.

Pressure has grown for such a government to heal the nation divided over the commission's recommendations and to present a united front against President Reagan's Middle East peace initiative.

Critics have argued that keeping the pugnacious Sharon, who is anxious to succeed the prime minister, is going to destroy Begin's Cabinet.

Yoel Marcus, a columnist for the daily Haaretz, said Tuesday that Sharon's position is "a time bomb...a destabilizing factor."

"As a minister without portfolio, he will have the time to appear in public a lot and undermine, to leak information, to ignore the restriants required of the government, and in the end he may inspire extremism," Marcus wrote of Sharon.

Rain is forecast through Thursday for the Northwest and Southeast, according to the National Weather Service. Snow is predicted for the northern Plains. Mild weather is expected in the south, cold in the north.

Not much change in Thursday's forecast

It seems like the the National Weather Service has been stamping out its forecasts with a "cookie cutter" of late, and the prediction for tonight and Thursday is no exception.

Tonight should be fair and cold with the low in the upper 30s and southerly winds at 5-10 mph. Thursday should not vary significantly from the general weather trend of late, with partly cloudy skies and a high in the mid-60s. Winds Thursday should be northerly at 10-20 mph.

Tuesday's high of 56 fell easily short of the record 81 set in 1945. The overnight low of 29 compares with a record low for this date of 17 set in 1936.

Sunset tonight is at 6:36; sunrise Thursday comes at 7:29.

Waitresses say law tips scale wrong way

IN HIS VIEW, the fast-food restaurants helped to perpetrate such a law. To make up the difference on the almost non-existent paychecks, restaurants will have to raise their wages and that in turn means raising the menu prices.

And when that happens, more families will turn to the fast-food places, he theorized.

Tipping in Midland isn't good, according to Hoskins. "I doubt if they (waiting help) average 8 percent in tips." And when it comes to a family-style restaurant, tips drop lower, he added.

Like Hoskins, Mareschal complained about spending time filing the new forms, saying it's taking him at least four more hours per week to do his paperwork.

"We tally it up nice and neat for Uncle Sugar and send it off," he said. "My theory is that it's unconstitutional."

Ms. Kelly and Ms. Nadobny pointed out what they feel are inequities in the law.

—"Waitresses have to pay for their own health insurance," said Ms. Kelly, adding they get none of the fringe benefits that employees for major companies receive, such as retirement, sick leave or extended vacation pay.

—"We tip out other people in this restaurant, such as the bus boys, 25 percent and they don't pay taxes on this," said Ms. Nadobny. "We pay taxes on these gratuities we give someone else."

—It's the business people who eat in these restaurants and are getting the meals and tips they pay deducted from their taxes, both women said.

—Waiting help can't be guaranteed a 40-hour work week. For Ms. Nadobny, her 56.5 hours was for two weeks and she is considered a full-time employee.

THERE ALSO ARE the hours waitresses spend filling salt and pepper shakers, cleaning up the restaurant and chopping up fresh vegetables. They receive an hourly wage for this, but no tips, the women said.

To straighten out how the reporting should be done and how much should be taken out, Ms. Nadobny wants to round up enough concerned managers and waitresses and waiters and ask the IRS to send a representative from Austin. "I'm asking for something from the government to let me know my options," she said. "I'm taxed to the teeth for the money I make through my skills."

But the commotion hasn't reached Washington, D.C., where the enforcement originated. In the office of U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, who represents Midland, only one letter on the subject has been received from a Midlander, said a spokesman. And they are not aware of any proposed legislation to repeal it.

Loeffler, who voted against TEFRA last August, has received an "explanation" of the ruling from Dan Rostenkowski and Barber Conable of the House Ways and Means Committee. This letter states that the TEFRA provisions imposed are information reporting requirements only, not withholding, on tips.

"Employees are required under present and prior law to report actual tips received, no more and no less, on their annual income tax returns. The IRS may determine upon audit that a tipped employee received more than the amount reported, even if the amount equals or exceeds 8 percent," the statement adds.

"They've created a paper lion," remarked Mareschal.

Asylum still sought for Rio hijacker

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican authorities today searched for a country to grant asylum to a former Iranian air force pilot who fought off three U.S. soldiers and hijacked a commuter plane from Texas to Nuevo Laredo.

Hussein Shey Kholya, 37, had demanded to be flown to Cuba when he surrendered in the border town of Nuevo Laredo on Tuesday. But there was no immediate indication that Cuban authorities would receive him.

Mexican government officials were consulting with "a number of countries" to see who would give Kholya asylum, a government communique said but did not list the countries. "Meanwhile, he is being held here, at the Federal Security Administration," Interior Department spokesman Sergui Luis Chico said.

The Federal Security Administration is an inter-police task force that handles special government assignments, including hijackings.

Kholya hijacked the commuter plane for five hours, but his manner was so cool the 20 other people aboard remained calm, one of the three soldiers said.

"Everybody was pretty calm because he was pretty calm after a while," said U.S. Army Sgt. Baron Liggins, 24, of Indianapolis, one of those aboard during Tuesday's hijacking.

Liggins and 15 other passengers, two flight attendants and two pilots were freed unharmed about five hours later after the plane had been diverted to the airport at Nuevo Laredo.

Rio Airways' Flight 252 was seized Tuesday morning halfway through a one-hour flight to Dallas from Killeen, a central Texas Army town.

Kholya was flown to Mexico City by Mexican authorities, and the passengers were flown back to Killeen.

Liggins said at a news conference in Killeen Tuesday that when he made his move he was unaware that Kholya had just told flight attendant Katie Springer, "I have a bomb."

But he and two other Army men starting fighting with Kholya after they saw him strike the other attendant, Corina Hallmark, when she turned to move quickly to the rear of the plane.

Kholya fought off all three and pulled out a weapon.

"He knew how to fight with every portion of his body," Ms. Springer said. "He had done his homework."

"I was fearful at first," co-pilot Frank Flores said. "He was pretty riled up, and people were on top of him when I first came out. I didn't know if he was insane."

The hijacker dashed into the cabin and began assembling what appeared to be an automatic weapon. He then kicked the cabin door shut and stayed in the cockpit until the plane arrived in Nuevo Laredo, Liggins said.

Jet's belly-flop 'better than with wheels'

MIAMI (AP) — An emergency belly-flop by a New York-bound Eastern Airlines jet scorched the plane's hull as it slid safely to a stop, but the landing turned out "even better than with wheels," said one of the 74 people aboard.

Eastern Flight 194, carrying 67 passengers and seven crew members from West Palm Beach to New York's Kennedy International Airport and then to Albany, N.Y., was diverted to Miami Tuesday night when the pilot couldn't get the left landing gear to retract fully after takeoff.

Pilot R.R. Curti circled for 2½ hours before bringing the jetliner in wheels up, slow and low, "smack dab in the center of the runway," around 8:30 p.m., Eastern spokesman Tom Myers said.

Curti, two flight officers and four flight attendants were interviewed by Federal Aviation Administration investigators Tuesday night. They would not comment afterward on the emergency landing.

Sparks flew and friction scorched the plane's metal hull, but an Eastern spokesman said the only injuries were scraped hands, elbows and knees of people who fell off the wings trying to get out of the disabled Boeing 727.

"If you flew off carriers in Korea, this was a piece of cake," said a calm William Brokaw, who lives in Palm Beach and New York City. "I've flown through 100 times worse than that in Korea with MiGs chasing us ... The aircraft is built to pancake."

The plane sustained only minor damage and will be returned to service after repairs and investigations are complete, Jim Ashlock, another Eastern spokesman, said today.

Dozens of Metro-Dade police, firefighters and rescue workers stood by, ready to rush any injured passengers to safety, but they had little to do but spray the aircraft with firefighting foam after it skidded to a halt.

In Washington, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board said an investigator from the board's Miami field office was dispatched to determine what went wrong with the plane's left main landing gear.

NTSB spokesman Brad Dunbar said it was not unusual for such a belly landing to be made successfully without severe damage to the plane.

He said the Boeing 727 was the perfect plane for such a landing because the engines are mounted on the tail and it has no fuel lines running along the undercarriage of the fuselage.

Ashlock said he didn't know whether the pilot dumped fuel before landing, but speculated it couldn't have been much, if any, because the plane circled for so long.

"It was a beautiful landing. The whole thing went off just like a drill," said firefighter John Carroll.

"He set it down so smooth, it was even better than with wheels," said Frank Witko of Albany.

Others said the landing wasn't quite that easy; they felt the plane skid and hit several bumps.

"It was pretty much like a regular landing, except it was a lot noisier," said New York City resident Joel Ackerman. "We could see lights from the sparks and the fire engines. As we came down the runway, I could smell the metal burning.""

The runway was not greased with foam before the landing, Myers said.

"There was no foam on the runway at the captain's request," he explained. "Some say it's good and some say it just slides the plane off the runway. You get more friction without it and that slows it down faster."

The passengers, red-faced but smiling, slid down emergency chutes and boarded a trio of airline buses for the ride to the terminal.

All but about a dozen passengers caught a later flight to New York Tuesday night, he said. Some chose to wait until today and seven wanted to go back to West Palm Beach.

"Afterward it was incredible," said passenger Steve Albrecht of Boca Raton. "Everybody on the bus was hugging everybody. When we got off the plane, we went into the field. All you could hear was people on the side streets clapping."

"I was fine until I started talking about it," said Florence Costello, shaking and dropping coins as she tried to call her parents in Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y. Bandages covered both of her scraped palms and she had large holes in the toes of her stockings and the knee of her slacks.

Several passengers credited the crew with helping to keep calm with their matter-of-fact treatment of the incident.

Appeals court upholds Midlander's murder conviction, 99-year sentence

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals today upheld the murder conviction and 99-year sentence assessed Kelly Joe Chambliss by a Midland County court.

The court noted that it earlier had returned the case for consideration at the appeals court level.

The court's opinion notes that Chambliss was arrested for the murder of a Sergeant J.B. England (on July 18, 1979) and was placed in the Midland County jail.

On July 19, 1979, he talked with another inmate, who later testified that Chambliss had told him about the murder.

In his appeal, Chambliss aruged that such testimony should not have been admitted during his trial but the appeals court disagreed.

The court also rejected other arguments by Chambliss that there had been improper communication between one of the jurors and one of the victim's sisters, but the court said there was no showing that the contact involved discussion of the case.

Court rejects obscenity conviction

AUSTIN (AP) — A commercial obscenity conviction against an Odessa man was thrown out today because the policeman who filed the charge watched only parts of "Debbie Does Dallas" and "Deep Throat."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ordered no further prosecution of Joe Mathis, who was convicted on June 20, 1979.

The appeals court said the search warrant authorized in the case by a magistrate was improper because it was based on "very brief descriptions of sexual conduct in a few film scenes and indicates the officer viewed neither film in its entirety."

At a pretrial hearing, the officer said "Debbie Does Dallas" was playing when he entered the theater.

$67,000 expenditure for Washington Park approved

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Trying to get "the most for the money," Midland Parks and Recreation Commission approved Tuesday a list of projects amounting to $67,000 for improving Washington Park on the city's southside.

During a meeting in the Senior Citizens Center, the commission adopted recommendations from the Parks and Recreation staff which also were approved by the Black Advisory Council. They will be brought before the City Council next Tuesday for its stamp of approval. The panel also heard reports on the parks system and a national recreation day.

Jumper Davis, president of the Black Advisory Council, agreed with the four projects: "These recommendations will get the most for the money."

To be paid for with money from the Community Development Block Grant fund, the list includes: additional area lighting for the park, $4,500; adult-sized basketball court, $18,000; an 8-foot wide sidewalk encircling the park, $20,500; and picnic pavilion with barbecue grills and restroom, $24,000.

This list was compiled after two public hearings at the Federation of Black Women's Clubs building in Washington Park. It was taken from 19 items the residents of that neighborhood said were needed.

Area lighting was ranked as second priority on that master list. The basketball court was ranked as sixth and the sidewalk came in seventh. The picnic pavilion will include items 3, 4, 5 and 19, which were a water fountain, restroom and individual sheltered picnic tables.

Suggested and approved to be included in next year's budget were: 10 trash can-holders, $1,500; two poles and fixtures for lighting the pool, $3,500; more landscaping, $2,000; five aluminum park benches, $600; and two bleachers for the tennis and basketball courts, $1,800.

Also to be suggested for the next year's budget as a major maintenance item was $19,700 to refurbish the tennis courts. This had been listed as the top priority by residents at both public hearings.

Gordon Kelley with the Soil Conservation Service in Temple studied the city's parks earlier that day and reported his views. A specialist in parks and outdoor recreation areas, Kelley said the Environmental Learning Center is "developing nicely. At Wadley-Barron Park a few years ago you had a problem with water running down in it. Now you have an excellent way to control it," he said of the man-made lake.

As a natural resource manager, Kelley said most of his work deals with farmers and irrigation. But with 2 million acres of park land in Texas, his job often slides over into these outdoor areas.

Em Carnett, recreation supervisor, listed several activities planned for the June 4 national celebration of "Life. Be In It." Day. Girl Scouts have offered "orienteering," in which participants will have to find their way with a compass, she said.

And Casa de Amigos is planning to cook cabrito and other special foods for sale to people in Hogan Park that evening.

Ms. Carnett is looking for suggestions of other activities, she said.

Arms control nominee Adelman may soon face Senate floor vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. is predicting a key committee will send Kenneth L. Adelman's nomination as arms control director to the Senate floor even though the nominee still faces opposition.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee was tentatively set to vote on Adelman's recommendation today.

Baker, R-Tenn., asked by reporters Tuesday whether he thought the committee would vote to send the nomination to the floor for confirmation, said, "I think it will come out." He did not elaborate.

But Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., chairman of the committee's arms control subcommittee, said, "I will oppose him very reluctantly for a number of reasons that I will give in my statement at the time."

An aide to a Democratic senator, who spoke on condition he not be named, predicted that four or more of the eight Democrats on the 17-member committee would oppose confirmation.

Most Republicans have said they plan to support Adelman, although some have expressed reservations about his experience.

John Edinger, press secretary to Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., told a reporter Mathias has apparently made up his mind, but is "playing his cards very close to his chest." Mathias had previously said he was undecided.

Adelman, 36, deputy U.S. ambassador to the United Nations since 1981, was nominated by President Reagan to head the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency after Eugene V. Rostow resigned at the president's request.

Fifty Democratic members of the House said Tuesday that Adelman "has displayed a shocking ignorance of arms control issues."

In a joint statement released by Rep. Richard L. Ottinger of New York, they said a director of the arms control agency "must possess exceptional stature, knowledge and assertiveness" and be "a recognized advocate of responsible arms control."

"We oppose Mr. Adelman's confirmation because he has not demonstrated any of these qualities," their statement said. "On the contrary, he has displayed a shocking ignorance of arms control issues and a disdain for the efforts of the past five presidents" on arms negotiations.

Meanwhile Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Adelman "will contribute significantly to the extremely important effort in the field of arms reduction."

Shultz' views were solicited by Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., committee chairman, at the end of a hearing on international debt. Percy is expected to vote for Adelman's confirmation.

White quickly fills vacant PUC shoes

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White, delighted that his criticism of the Public Utility Commission helped persuade two members to quit, now wants the lone remaining commissioner to leave.

White took only four hours to find replacements for George Cowden and T.G. Smith, who told the governor Tuesday they will leave PUC March 1.

"There's an old saying about heat and the kitchen and maybe that's what happened," White said of the resignations. His initial reaction was, "I think it's delightful."

The two new PUC members will include one old one and the housewife White promised during his campaign.

Al Erwin, 38, of Houston was an original member of PUC, appointed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe when the commission went to work in 1975. Erwin, a former reporter, quit in 1979 and has written a book and worked in public relations since then. He will replace Cowden, also a Briscoe 1975 appointee.

Smith will be replaced by Peggy Rosson, 47, an El Paso housewife who serves on that city's Public Utility Regulatory Board. Last year, White slammed Gov. Bill Clements for saying there was not a housewife in Texas qualified to serve on the PUC. White promised to find a housewife for the panel.

The governor said he called PUC Chairman Moak Rollins and asked him "if I should wait for the mail or did he have something to tell me."

"I'd like to be batting 3-0 today. That would be fine," White told reporters.

Rollins said he's not ready to go now, but would not talk about his future plans.

Peggy Rosson

Al Erwin

"I don't believe the governor asked me to resign. I did have a conversation with him today and he asked what my intentions were. I responded I didn't think it was necessary for me to make any choices at this time," said Rollins, who has 2½ years remaining on his term.

Asked if he would quit before his term ended, he said, "I won't respond to that question."

The governor blames the commission for Texas' increasing electric, water and telephone rates. In January, he asked lawmakers to change the PUC to an elected commission. He said the appointed commission has become a "captive handmaiden" of utility companies.

"We're going to tighten the reins on these utility companies and let them quit running roughshod over the people of Texas," he said after the resignations.

After announcing his appointments, White would not promise lower rates, but said, "We're going to have honest utility bills."

At Cowden's surprise announcement, made at an Austin Rotary Club luncheon, the commissioner defended his efforts.

"Those who think it's easy to work out these problems, those who froth at the mouth to be appointed to this commission will have that opportunity," said Cowden.

"I can hardly wait for our rates to go down," he cracked.

Cowden later said he was quitting because he is "tired of irresponsible statements of folks saying things they don't know what they're talking about."

"I've decided the best thing to do was let somebody else try to do it for a while," he said. "I guess it's an accumulation of a lot of things. I just have kind of grown tired of it. I decided it was time to go."

Smith, appointed last year by Gov. Bill Clements, said he was leaving because there was no chance the Senate would confirm his nomination.

"Rather than just prolong this thing I thought now would be time to go ahead and leave," he said.

He said dealing with the criticism was "not easy" but "tolerable."

The criticism, led by White, has come from legislators and others. White wanted the PUC to get rid of the fuel adjustment clause, which allows utility companies to automatically pass fuel costs on to consumers. Cowden said he tried to satisfy White, a longtime friend. The commission recently passed a rule aimed at changing the fuel clause, but White said the new rule merely hides the charge.

"I tried diligently to work something out that would be satisfactory with him from the standpoint of the fuel rule," said Cowden.

Missing man's body found along beach

PORT BOLIVAR (AP) — The body of a man reported missing from a pleasure cruise since Jan. 16 was found by a man walking along a beach here.

The dead man was identified Monday as Donald Sneed, 31, of Bridge City.

He and three others, all from Bridge City, left Sabine Pass Jan. 16 on a pleasure cruise aboard a 20-foot boat.

UT official 'sorry' for DWI incident

AUSTIN (AP) — An apologetic E. Don Walker, chancellor of the University of Texas system, began serving a two-year probated sentence today for driving while intoxicated.

Walker, who was arrested Monday night after a minor traffic accident, was also fined $350 by County Court-at-Law Judge Mark Schreiber.

"I made a mistake. I am very sorry it happened. No one regrets it more than I do. I appeared in court this afternoon. The court has announced its decision, and I will abide by it," Walker said in a brief statement distributed by UT spokesman Joe Roddy.

Originally, a hearing was set on the case for next month, but instead of waiting, Walker quietly went to court Tuesday afternoon and pleaded no contest.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Walker, 61, has no previous DWI convictions or any other blemishes on his traffic record.

He was arrested Monday night when an Austin policeman noticed the chancellor's silver Lincoln Continental swerving from lane to lane in downtown traffic. Walker was alone in the car.

Times tough in bourbon business

LORETTO, Ky. (AP) — Good times and bad times have been part of corn-whiskey making since Revolutionary War settlers moved west to farm the rolling central Kentucky hills and fire up their small "pot-and-worm" stills.

Today, the times are more bad than good. With more people drinking wine and beer, Kentucky bourbon makers are fighting a slump.

"The industry in Kentucky has gone up, it's gone down, and it's not had a steady development," said Bill Samuels Jr., whose family has made whiskey for four generations near Bardstown.

State distillers sell about 50 million gallons of bourbon a year, about 75 percent of the nation's total, says Frank Dailey, president of the Kentucky Distillers Association.

But bourbon consumption nationwide has been dropping. According to Impact, a trade newsletter for the wine and liquor industry, the distilled spirits market was down 6.9 percent for the first nine months of 1982. Whiskeys as a group dropped 9.2 percent and bourbon was down 10.4 percent, it said.

THE ECONOMY may be a cause as well as "the growth of the wine market," said Michael Moaba, managing editor of the New York-based publication.

The bourbon industry in Kentucky employs about 5,550 people during peak spring and fall bottling periods, but that drops to about 1,500 during the summer when many companies shut down for maintenance, says Dailey.

Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, citing more distilling space than needed nationwide, recently confirmed plans to close its Louisville plant where it makes Calvert whiskey, Crown Royal vodka and Benchmark bourbon.

"The basic problem that led to our tentative decision in the first place remains — that is, diminishing demand for certain kinds of distilled spirits and the excess production capacity we have among our several plants nationwide," said William E. Wunder, Seagram vice president for production and engineering.

About 400 employees will lose their jobs at the Louisville plant, which plans to close by July.

However, companies such as Louisville's Glenmore Distilleries Co. and Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. have premium bourbon brands that do well.

GLENMORE'S KENTUCKY Tavern bourbon's sales were up 15 percent in the past fiscal year, and Brown-Forman's Jack Daniels whiskey posted a 13 percent gain.

Some distillers change their approach during slack sales periods and "a lot of them are buying wineries," said Dailey.

"The larger companies, recognizing the problem of competition, own Scotch distilleries and wineries and produce vodka and gin because they see where the competition is so they acquire a product in that area," he said.

Others, like Samuels', stick to bourbon. Samuels manages the Maker's Mark distillery at Loretto, whose premium bourbon is one of the state's smallest sellers at about 125,000 cases. But he said, "We sell out of whiskey every year, and you can hardly beat that when everybody's wringing their hands."

Concentrating on bourbon also works for James B. Beam Distilling Co., said marketing director Victor Zast. "We've had record sales for four years back-to-back now, in a period when it's been the toughest sledding for bourbon." Beam's Clermont and Boston, Ky., distilleries make the world's largest-selling bourbon at some four million cases a year.

SAMUELS' FAMILY has been making bourbon since Robert Samuels, a junior officer in the Revolutionary War, moved to Kentucky in 1793. Land was offered to anyone who would settle, raise corn and stay three years.

"This was most attractive to people who knew what to do with the corn... They started making whiskey and that was the first money of the West," Samuels said.

While concerned about changing tastes, distillers have no industrywide plan to combat the switch to wine and other spirits.

"Every time a product takes hold, it's taking away our bourbon customers," Dailey said. "People who drink rum are not going to get bourbon like they should."

But Robert C. Baranaskas, the Schenley Industries distillery in Frankfort, Ky., said his surveys indicate college students are returning to bourbon. Zast predicted a similar trend.

"Six years ago vodka was hot. Then people started drinking rum, which has a little more flavor. The trend is to more taste," Zast said.

MAKING BOURBON is not simple, whether at Beam's big steel buildings or tiny Maker's Mark with its hardwood floors and hewn rafters.

Corn mash bubbles and ferments in huge stainless steel or wood vats, turning into distiller's beer. That is distilled into "new bourbon," a clear liquor with a strong corn flavor and sharp bite. Then it goes into new, charred oak barrels.

The barrels sit four years or more, as the liquor expands and contracts with the seasons, penetrating the charred inner surface. The whiskey turns amber, and loses its bite.

Preppy jail madness has reason

GROSSE POINTE FARMS, Mich. (AP) — The raging pink-and-green color combination that's become the signal flag of the Great American Preppy has found a niche in law enforcement.

"We call it our preppy jail," Grosse Pointe Farms Police Sgt. Joseph Miller says of the new look in the jail of this affluent Detroit suburb. The 33-year police veteran oversaw the renovations of the jail.

The walls and doors — even the cabinet that holds the Breathalyzer — are now pink. Three green Izod-like alligators are stenciled on the interrogation room wall and the inside and outside of the cell door.

But police say there's a purpose to the preppy pink. Studies have shown that the color has a calming effect, and about a dozen jails in California have tried it, according to Corrections magazine.

When Grosse Pointe Farms began its renovations, officials decided to think pink — but the alligators were spray-painted on just 1½ weeks ago by Lt. Ignatius Blackman.

Since the beginning of the month, only 11 prisoners have been incarcerated in the pink clink. And most think the decor is a laugh, police said.

Preppiness aside, the jail improvements include smoke detectors and new monitoring devices. Still to come is a resilient floor.

Search for Kahl continues

HEATON, N.D. (AP) — After a massive but futile assault on a deserted farmhouse, law officials pooled information to plan their next step in the search for Gordon Kahl, an anti-tax militant wanted in the shooting deaths of two U.S. marshals.

"We still believe he (Kahl) is in the central part of the state," said U.S. Attorney Rodney Webb in Fargo.

Webb said the heads of the investigative agencies involved in the massive manhunt — including the FBI, the U.S. Marshal Service and the North Dakota Crime Bureau — met Tuesday night.

The search for Kahl, who used to live in Crane, had centered since Monday on the Heaton farm where he used to live, but fog and darkness forced postponement of a raid on the house. About 100 police officers, using a National Guard armored personnel carrier and firing tear gas, stormed the farmhouse Tuesday but found no one inside.

Richard Blay

"In view of the stories we've heard about him, he is obviously heavily armed and he knows how to use them," said Richard Blay, an FBI agent from Minneapolis. "There is no way we can be overcautious with this type of individual."

WEBB SAID some weapons and ammunition were found in the home but refused to say what types they were. He said the search for Kahl would resume this morning.

Blay would not say whether he thought Kahl had been in the farmhouse since the shootings Sunday. Nor would he answer questions about what had led the FBI to believe Kahl was in the house.

Two U.S. marshals were shot to death Sunday night when they attempted to arrest Kahl on a parole violation charge. Five people who were with Kahl, including his wife and son, have been arrested on federal murder charges.

The 63-year-old Kahl, described as a "fanatic" member of a paramilitary survivalist group called Posse Comitatus, had vowed to friends and acquaintances not to be taken alive.

"I'm not going to let them take me again," Kahl was quoted as saying shortly before he got into a shootout with U.S. marshals who tried to arrest him for violating probation imposed in a 1977 tax evasion case.

Law enforcement officials escort Joan Kahl, 62, into the Cass County Jail after she was charged with four counts, including murder, in the shooting deaths of two U.S. marshals Sunday near Medina, N.D. Her husband, Gordon, 63, is still being sought.

Meanwhile, the Wisconsin branch of the Posse Comitatus has gone on "standby alert," said James P. Wickstrom, who calls himself the "national director of counterinsurgency of the Posses of America."

HE SAID the attack on the empty farmhouse was a "setup" and that Kahl is a scapegoat for other dissatisfied tax evaders.

"I believe the government planned the entire shootout from the beginning," Wickstrom said.

"What we have here is a gentleman who is now being pursued in North Dakota on a setup to shut his mouth because the American people are waking up...realizing that we have been duped by a private central bank," he said.

Funeral services were scheduled today for the marshals, Kenneth Muir, 53, of Fargo and Robert S. Cheshire Jr., 32, of Bismarck.

A third marshal, James Hopson, was wounded critically and two police officers suffered less serious wounds when they tried to arrest Kahl near Medina, about 50 miles south of Heaton. Occupants of a car opened fire with an automatic weapon as the officers approached, authorities said.

Another man suspected in the slayings, Scott Faul, 29, of Harvey, was arrested Monday night in nearby Fessenden, N.D., Webb said.

FAUL WAS charged with murder and aiding and abetting a murder, federal authorities said. Murder charges were filed Monday against Kahl's wife, Joan, 62, his son, Yori, 23; David R. Broer, 53, and Vernon A. Wegner, 25.

Broer and Wegner, both of Streeter, were arrested Monday.

Kahl lived in Crane when he was found guilty of federal income tax evasion. Authorities there said he was active in Posse Comitatus.

Posse: Band of armed survivalists

By The Associated Press

Posse Comitatus, literally Power of the County, is more than a tax revolt group. It is a rural band of armed survivalists who fight all manner of state and federal authority, preaching "power to the people."

Gordon Kahl, 63, who authorities say is a member of the Posse chapter in North Dakota, got into a shootout with U.S. marshals who tried to arrest him Sunday for violating probation imposed in a 1977 tax evasion case. Two marshals died.

Posse membership numbers are not known, but leaders claim to have chapters in every state except Hawaii, with up to 2,000 members in 13 Wisconsin counties.

James P. Wickstrom, about 40, of Tigerton, Wis., calls himself "the national director of counterinsurgency of the Posses of America."

On his answering machine, the Vietnam Veteran urges callers to leave a name and address "so that the Posse may contact and inform you concerning your safety and welfare and the safety of your family."

In an interview with The Associated Press in 1981, Wickstrom said his group was "psychologically blended" with various hate groups. He said the Posse had held joint paramilitary training sessions with the Ku Klux Klan and the Minutemen, a group with a philosophy of racism and right-wing politics.

Posse Comitatus claims legitimacy from English common law that authorized sheriffs to seek assistance from the citizenry. In the American West, the sheriff summoned the posse to chase wrongdoers. Modern Posse members prefer to decide for themselves what is right and wrong.

It takes its name from the law of "posse comitatus," which was passed in 1878 after federal troops had been used to enforce unpopular laws and install Yankee officials in the vanquished South. When Southerners returned to Congress, one of the first things they sought was the law, which banned military enforcement of civil laws.

Wickstrom and other Posse members in Wisconsin have had numerous legal and armed confrontation with authorities. Some confrontations have occurred when Posse members resisted orders to move their illegally parked mobile homes from land not zoned for mobile homes. Land use regulations and hunting laws also have resulted in confrontation.

Author brings Vietnam War's details back alive

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Can this really be the 10th anniversary of the Paris accords which brought the peace that passeth all understanding to Vietnam?

Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho were awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for this disastrous diplomatic document that permitted the Americans to withdraw without honor while the North Vietnamese moved into position for the fall of Saigon two years later.

I spent a fair portion of the previous decade in Vietnam and Cambodia and even now cannot bring myself to watch a movie on Vietnam, except an unconscious comedy like John Wayne and "The Green Berets," which so amused our Marines when it was shown in their rec hall on Monkey Mountain near Da Nang.

Squeamishness does not enter here. It's just that I prefer my memories untinted by the moviemaker's gloss. When to the sessions of sweet and sometimes shuddering silent thought, I am summon up remembrance of things past. I am content to let the scroll of memory roll, edited by the mood of the moment. Sometimes this results in blotting out the bad days and reliving sunnier stories as dead now as some of the characters who peopled them. The betamax of the mind can be a useful toy or unavoidable torture.

LATELY, HOWEVER, like the publishing industry, I have begun to take a chance with books on Vietnam. Several new titles occupied my evenings since Christmas by the fireside or on plane journeys.

Anthony Grey's novel "Saigon," spanning a half century in the life of what is now called Ho Chi Minh City, is an incredible tour de force. It is incredible because Tony Grey, the former Reuters correspondent who spent two years under arrest in Peking at the height of the Cultural Revolution, never set a foot in Saigon. His accomplishment here is akin to that New York reporter who vividly described the San Francisco earthquake, block by block, by using maps and memory without ever visitng the scene of that epic disaster, or like Stephen Crane, who was born six years after the Civil War ended, poignantly re-creating the everyday life of a common soldier in his classic novel "The Red Badge of Courage."

Telling the Saigon story through the eyes of Joseph Sherman, a young American who first arrived in Vietnam in 1925 on a big game hunting expedition with his father, a U.S. senator from Virginia, Grey accurately re-creates the city and its lush surroundings through four generations. He begins with the French rubber planters in the days before Dien Bien Phu and winds up with helicopters lifting off from the roof of the U.S. Embassy in the final ignominious hours.

The details are splendid. He gets it all right. I am transported back again to the terrace bar of the Continental Palace, and John F. Kennedy Square in front of the cathedral. His problem as a novelist is that he has created a real city but populated it with Potemkin characters. His French planters are clones from "Uncle Tom's Cabin," his American grunts are about as real as those seen on the wide screen at Monkey Mountain.

Where the novelist fails in bringing Vietnam back alive from its tragic past, anthropologist Gerald Cannon Hickey succeeds in two remarkable books recently published by the Yale University Press: "Sons of the Mountains" and "Free in the Forest."

I FOUND THEM both sad, fascinating and full of marvelous characters like the King of Fire, the French Baron de Mayrena who founded himself a jungle kingdom in the Vietnam highlands, "Big Grandmother" Dr. Pat Smith who opened a hospital in the boonies for tribal people and dozens of others whom any novelist would gladly kidnap. His "ethnohistories," as they are called, cover almost the same period as Grey's "Saigon," but play back the war through the fortunes and mostly misfortunes of the half million or so tribal peoples — The Bru, the Rhade, the Jarai, Bahnar, Sedang — whom the French called Montagnards, the mountaineers or hillbillies and the Vietnamese called Moi, savages.

Hickey not only set foot in Saigon and stayed in Southeast Asia for 13 years, but was literally blown off his feet when the Special Forces camp at Nam Dong was attacked on July 6, 1964. This is where Capt. Roger Donlon won the war's first Medal of Honor. Hickey almost lost his life again when Ban Mo Thout, where Teddy Roosevelt used to come to hunt tigers, was under siege in the 1968 Tet offensive. These are not the dry memoirs of a dispassionate scientist but the vivid recollections and painstaking research of a concerned American in Vietnam who risked his sanity, his career and his life to save these simple, friendly people caught up in the impossible problem of trying to rescue a primitive life style from the engulfing poisonous waters of progress and war.

"For the highlanders," Hickey writes, "the Vietnam War was the latest phase of the conflicts that had been visited on them since 1945 by the 'civilized' people from beyond the mountains: the Japanese, the French, Vietnamese and now the Americans."

From his experiences as an adviser to the U.S. Embassy, he is able to write knowingly and candidly of the sometimes excessive generosity of American aid and the incredible stupidities like deciding to relocate 10,000 Jarai villagers one month after they had planted their crops. The decision was made in order to create "free fire zones" for U.S. shelling and bombing in a vain attempt to establish a front in a war that had none.

Often, tribal long houses were destroyed by mistake in American air strikes but lest we forget Hickey reminds us there were North Vietnamese deliberate My Lais, too, dozens of them, like the Stieng village, which was assaulted with grenades and flame throwers by the North Viets for failing to provide porters to carry ammo down the Ho Chi Minh trail.

THE MEN, Hickey writes, rallied to the defense with their spears, crossbows and the few rifles that some possessed while the women and children hurried to the bunkers. The Stieng defenders were no match for the communists with their sophisticated Russian weapons. The next day missionaries found over 200 charred bodies "of adults, children and tiny infants in the scorched earth of the bunkers." Another ghastly scene shows the communists holding a "people's court" in a jungle leper colony.

One of the ironies of the Vietnam War is that an anthropologist is better equipped to portray its brutalities and absurdities than a novelist. I knew Gerry Hickey quite well in Vietnam. I know him much better now from these two powerful and painful books. I had to put them down from time to time to keep from being totally sunk in remembered despair.

O'Neill sometimes unclear

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. is not always, well, perfectly clear, in his daily morning news briefings with reporters.

The other day, O'Neill, D-Mass., was asked if House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., should have worded a speech about taxes differently.

"Does my brother eat onions?" was O'Neill's reply. "I don't even have a brother."

"Is that a direct answer?" O'Neill was asked by a reporter seeking clarification. O'Neill suggested moving on to another subject.

Rostenkowski's call for a tax freeze that would permit this year's tax cut to take effect — unless the administration specifically supported changing it — generated some consternation among other House Democratic leaders who, like O'Neill, would prefer to see the tax cut repealed.

The next subject was a question on a planned visit to the speaker by the president's budget director: "Is David Stockman still coming up for a visit?"

"Who?" asked O'Neill.

"David Stockman."

"Oh, Stockman," O'Neill said. He cited reports that Stockman planned to be on his honeymoon.

"He won't be thinking about Tip O'Neill on his honeymoon," O'Neill observed.

Meanwhile, making things perfectly clear was what Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said he planned to do in his luncheon speech announcing he was bowing out of contention for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination. "And I intend to take my time," Udall added.

"I know what all of you are doing here...you pay 14 lousy dollars and expect to get the story written before you digest" the first bite, joked Udall.

Udall proceeded to treat the National Press Club audience to a barrage of one-liners and reminiscences, including a claim that the main course — Cornish game hen — was left over from his unsuccessful 1976 campaign.

He then recalled his stop at a barbershop in New Hampshire, where he walked up to a group of men, extended his hand and said, "Mo Udall — running for president."

"'Yes, we know,'" he said one answered. "'We were just laughing about it.'"

Another time, he said, he arrived in a hotel in Sacramento, Calif., and introduced himself to the desk clerk: "'Hello, I said, 'my name is Mo Udall and I'm running for president.' 'Yes,' said the clerk, 'now if you wouldn't mind, just please take a number and join the rest of the candidates in the lounge.'"

Lawyer goes to battle for 184-year-old building

AP Laserphoto

The Rhodes Tavern in Washington D.C., as seen today, top, a witness to 184 years of history, may be torn down unless funds are raised to save it. The tavern, shown below in a painting by Earl Minderman was built in 1799.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rhodes Tavern, dowdy witness to 184 years of history, may soon be demolished unless someone steps forward with cash to save the oldest commercial structure in downtown Washington.

It was built in 1799, the year George Washington died, and served as the new city's first town hall. Gen. Andrew Jackson helped found a bank there. From the intersection of 15th and F streets, it has seen every inaugural parade from Thomas Jefferson's to Ronald Reagan's.

From a second-story window on the night of Aug. 24, 1814, Adm. George Cockburn of the British navy watched invading troops burn the White House, one block away, while he dined on roast chicken and biscuits by the light of the conflagration.

Half the building was torn down in 1957 to make way for a savings and loan association. Dingy white stucco covered its Federal-period brick facade when it was abandoned four years ago by its last tenants — a souvenir store, a coffee shop and a fruit stand.

It is, nearly every Washingtonian agrees, an eyesore.

But Rhodes Tavern has a tireless champion in Joseph N. Grano Jr., who quit his $20,000-a-year job as a government lawyer three years ago to work full time and virtually alone to try to save the building.

Grano is David to the Goliath of the Oliver T. Carr Co., one of the city's biggest developers. Grano charges that Carr has "played Monopoly with the historical buildings on the block to see how much money he can get out of the city government."

As Grano sees it, Rhodes Tavern is threatened by a combination of corporate greed and indifference by the city's political and cultural establishment to the threatened loss of an historical landmark. Grano has taken his battle as far as the Supreme Court, and lost.

Rhodes Tavern occupies the southwestern corner of a city block where Carr is ready to complete construction of a $100 million "superblock" of office buildings, shops and a glass-enclosed atrium known as Metropolitan Square, typical of several complexes that are changing the face of downtown Washington.

Carr has been legally free since May 1981 to demolish Rhodes Tavern and start the final phase of his project. He has hinted he will make his move by May 1, unless someone makes an offer he can't refuse.

"There are three possibilities: tear it down and save the pieces, tear it down and throw away the pieces, or relocate it," says Philip Carr, senior vice president for company operations.

A three-year effort by a citizens group to move the 400-ton building to another site collapsed recently. One of the group's leaders, Robert B. Gair, said "relocation is no longer an option" and urged Carr to preserve Rhodes Tavern where it is.

Carr's "superblock" project is backed by the District of Columbia City Council, the District of Columbia Superior Court, the U.S. Court of Appeals, The Washington Post and the U.S. Commission on Fine Arts, which must approve architectural plans for construction near federal buildings. The block containing Metropolitan Square is across the street from the Treasury building.

J. Carter Brown, chairman of the fine arts commission and director of the National Gallery of Art, has described Rhodes Tavern as a "poor, beat-up derelict" that is not worth saving. If it remains in Carr's superblock, said Brown, it would be "the missing tooth in the smile of 15th Street."

Rhodes Tavern...a "poor, beat-up derelict" that is not worth saving. If it remains in...superblock, it would be "the missing tooth in the smile of 15th Street...All it needs... is a little tender, loving care."

Carr's architect, David Childs, said "Rhodes Tavern should be put out of its misery."

Even a local preservationist group called "Don't Tear it Down" compromised with Carr and agreed, in effect, to tear it down in exchange for preserving the beaux-arts facades of a neighboring bank building and abandoned movie theater in the same block.

Grano concedes that Carr has "won all the legal battles and overcome all the legal hurdles," and sees no possibility that the federal government would intervene to save Rhodes Tavern. He opposes moving the building elsewhere. "History is where history is made," he says.

But Grano hopes an aroused public can save Rhodes Tavern.

He is collecting signatures for a ballot initiative in the school board election in November that would declare a public policy by the District of Columbia government to support preservation of Rhodes Tavern, where it stands.

Grano believes that beneath the grimy stucco exterior of Rhodes Tavern lies an aesthetic gem. "All it needs," he said, "is a little tender, loving care."

Ojinaga is tough territory

OJINAGA, Mexico (AP) — Ojinaga is the toughest town along the 1,760-mile United States-Mexico border, law enforcement agents say.

Ojinaga's days often are filled with contraband deals, and nights frequently are punctuated by gunshots, observers say. Some believe they're witnessing the revival of the frontier frenzy that consumed past Western towns.

"It's kind of like the movies you see of the Old West. This is a bang-bang town — just listen to the shots each night," Acting Sector Chief Wayne Winn of the U.S. Customs Service in neighboring Presidio, Texas, said.

Ojinaga is a known smuggler's haven where local police have little control over Mexican mobsters who run the profitable narcotics and gunrunning trade, Winn said.

Gene Dickson, criminal intelligence officer for the U.S. Border Patrol in Marfa, agrees: "It's pretty common knowledge you have a lot of people in Ojinaga connected with narcotics. And I'm sure there are Mexican officers who get payoffs."

U.S. law enforcement agents say most residents in this town of 15,000 are so tough, even Mexican federales find it deadly to cross the wrong people.

Drug-related killings in Ojinaga are commonplace, officials say. At least six of the town's killings last year were spin-offs from feuding Mexican mobsters, Winn said.

The Ojinaga Motel is the hottest meeting place in town for drug couriers and their contacts, Winn said. Known marijuana and cocaine dealers often rent out rooms for their transactions, he said.

A motel clerk who declined to identify himself denied the allegation.

Ojinaga police officers wink at certain crimes that occur behind their back, Marfa border patrolman Bob Hecht said.

U.S. officials concede they have too little manpower in too large an area to cut the flow of contraband, gunrunners, and illegal alien and diesel gasoline smugglers who thrive in West Texas' mountains between Van Horn and the Big Bend National Park.

U.S. agents are most preoccupied with cutting down on the daily transactions that occur illegally in the Ojinaga-Presidio area.

Mexican law enforcement in Ojinaga "is usually put out of business, scared out or killed. It's kind of dangerous over there and they don't ask any questions," Winn said.

Agents have uncovered 12 well-traveled Rio Grande crossings around the Ojinaga region where smuggling and contraband trafficking regularly occurs with little fear of apprehension.

More manpower "is one solution," Winn said. But the desolation of the area makes their sector "impossible to defend."

Investigation into death called 'most important'

MIAMI (AP) — The grand jury probe of a fatal police shooting that sparked two days of racial violence in the predominantly black Overtown section is "one of the most important" cases ever considered in Dade County, prosecutor Janet Reno says.

The investigation, which began Tuesday, stems from the shooting death of Nevell Johnson Jr., 21, a black man who was killed Dec. 28 in a video arcade by Officer Luis Alvarez.

Some black community leaders have demanded that Alvarez be indicted in the shooting and that Police Chief Kenneth Harms be fired. The prosecutor refused to discuss evidence in the case.

West Viriginia has most jobless

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Fewer jobs in coal mines and in West Virginia metropolitan areas raised the state unemployment rate to 17.8 percent in December, the highest in the nation, federal authorities say.

Mike Cimini, director of the U.S. Bureau of Labor's state and local unemployment statistics project, said Tuesday that coal miners make up most of the unemployed, but he also noted a drop in employment in all of West Virginia's cities.

The national unemployment average for December was 10.5 percent, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

Youth sentences to three life terms

SUMMERVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A 17-year-old Georgia youth has been sentenced to three consecutive life terms after he pleaded guilty to the murders of two men described by authorities as occultists.

Kenneth Avery Lowrance Brock of Walker County pleaded guilty Tuesday to the Dec. 16 shooting deaths of Charles Scudder, 56, and Joseph Odom, 37, at their home.

In preliminary hearings, officers testified they found two human skulls, "miscellaneous items of witchcraft and cult paraphernalia," a catalog listing cult-type artifacts and numerous items of homosexual literature at the victims' home east of Trion, Ga.

Killer said he should be put to death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man convicted of six grisly sex killings known as the "Sunset Slayer" murders told jurors he should be sentenced to the death penalty, even though he proclaimed his innocence.

Douglas David Clark, 34, told a Superior Court jury Tuesday that "justice cries out for the death penalty in this case."

The jury convicted Clark Tuesday in the slayings of six women and then recommended that he be sentenced to death in the gas chamber.

Judge Ricardo Torres set March 16 for formal sentencing.

Gacy stabbed by death row inmate

CHESTER, Ill. (AP) — A death row inmate stabbed convicted mass-murderer John W. Gacy and another inmate with a piece of wire, but Gacy was not seriously hurt, prison officials say.

EPA officials say subpoenaed documents safe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Environmental Protection Agency officials say documents subpoenaed by Congress are safe and were not fed to the paper shredders that are the focus of an FBI investigation.

EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch, meanwhile, told a Senate panel Tuesday said the attacks on EPA stem in part from "political harassment."

Ann Gorsuch

Mrs. Gorsuch, whose agency is the subject of six congressional investigations, has been cited for contempt of Congress by the House for refusing to turn over EPA documents that President Reagan ordered withheld on grounds of executive privilege.

The paper shredders that were brought into EPA's hazardous waste office were discussed at the House Public Works Committee meeting Tuesday.

The committee was set to hear from Rita M. Lavelle, former head of the hazardous waste program, later today. Ms. Lavelle was fired by President Reagan last week.

Eugene Lucero, chief of enforcement in the hazardous waste section, said even though agency personnel had free access to the shredders, documents sought by Congress were under lock and key.

Lucero also said the machines were acquired by coincidence last month and were not related to congressional investigations into EPA's handling of the $1.6 billion "superfund" program to clean up abandoned chemical waste dumps.

He said no one recognized the significance of putting paper shredders into an office under congressional subpoena and investigation.

John Dailey

"It obviously was a bad decision," Lucero said.

Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, D-Ga., agreed.

"At the very least, it's got to be one of the stupidest actions I've ever heard of," said Levitas, chairman of the investigations subcommittee.

And Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., told EPA officials: "You look like a bunch of insensitive bunglers."

Lucero said the shredders were acquired by a clerk who found them in surplus property. But Levitas showed Lucero an EPA procurement order specifying the machines, and saying they were to be used "to dispose of public sensitive documents."

"I don't recall that we discussed it," Lucero said of the order.

The FBI investigation, which EPA Chief of Staff John Daniel said Mrs. Gorsuch requested, was the latest development in the broadening probe into EPA's handling of the superfund program.

"We, like you, would like to have a complete investigation," Daniel said.

"We want to ensure the integrity of the documents, the integrity of our employees, and the integrity of our program," he said. "I am confident that if the FBI performs a complete investigation, that all the questions will be answered and they will satisfy your committee."

Testifying before the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, Mrs. Gorsuch said some politicians and environmentalists criticize every action she takes in a bid for headlines.

"Nobody can be that wrong all that much all the time," she said. "Personally, I have to finally judge that a great deal of it is political harassment.

"You know the old rules," she said. "You harass, delay, destroy, and finally stop. The only thing that makes me very upset is that this type of harassment probably will impede our progress toward our goal, which is cleaning up America under superfund."

Daniel, meanwhile, said top officials learned of the paper shredders only last week and moved immediately to get them out of the hazardous waste office.

200-pound woman kills son by sitting on him

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A 200-pound woman whose 9-year-old son died after she sat on him for two hours probably was following a noted psychiatrist's behavior control technique, her attorney says.

Betty Mentry, 45, whose trial on a charge of involuntary manslaughter is to begin in Superior Court this week, was punishing her son, Steve, for having stolen 6 cents and for playing with matches, according to police.

The trial was to begin Tuesday, but was delayed because no courtroom was available, and will be rescheduled for later this week.

Police quoted the woman as saying a local counseling service told her to "use your weight" to restrain the child if he had a tantrum.

The defense will argue that the technique was suggested to her by a counselor, said defense attorney Cyril Ash, noting that his client has filed a $1 million lawsuit against a San Jose counseling center in the case.

The punishment resembled a technique developed by the late Dr. Milton Erickson, a noted Phoenix psychiatrist and hypnotist, a counselor for the defense said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Dr. Jeffrey Zeig, director of the Milton Erickson Foundation in Phoenix, said the technique, not intended as a disciplinary measure, was described in a 1962 article by Erickson. If used properly, he said, it is not life-endangering.

According to police, she awakened the boy to punish him by sitting on him. Her 10-year-old daughter called for emergency help after her brother's screams awakened her and she found he had stopped breathing.

The son, Steven, died May 31, his ninth birthday.

"This was not the first time," Ash said of his client's use of the technique. "She had done this on two or three occasions before."

Ash said Mrs. Mentry was advised to use the therapy by the Alum Rock Counseling Center and that a counselor "complimented her" and said it had "helped the boy's behavior."

Clerics urge end to arms race

SEATTLE (AP) — The state congressional delegation has been urged to end the nuclear arms race and change federal budget priorities in a letter signed by 13 Roman Catholic and Protestant church leaders.

"Stated as simply as possible, our position is that these weapons are so vast in their horror that their use even as a deterrent raises profound moral questions," the letter says.

"After a great deal of reflection, we have concluded that continued development and deployment of nuclear weapons can no longer be morally countenanced."

The letter, released Monday, warned that continuation of the nuclear arms race will result in global instability and it could result in "massive and indiscriminate destruction of human life."

Specifically, the letter asks that Congress end the MX missile program, block deployment of Pershing II missiles in Europe and halt funding for the cruise missile.

It also calls for an end to the Trident nuclear submarine program and endorses a "meaningful" nuclear freeze.

Among the signers were Rev. Loren E. Arnett, executive minister of the Washington Association of Churches, the Rev. William B. Cate, president and director of the Church Council of Greater Seattle and Archbishop Raymond G. Hunthausen, head of the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Seattle.

Texas 13's advice

Texas 13, an organization of concerned citizens for tax relief headed by former Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr, is bringing pressure to bear on legislators who increasingly are talking in terms of higher state taxes.

That's not all bad, of course. It's easy to dislike taxation, particularly unfair taxation or taxation without representation. All Americans share a heritage of opposing unjust taxation, just think back to the days of the Boston Tea Party.

Taxes are a necessary evil, though, to finance the operations of government. The real pitfall is that taxation all too often becomes an "easy out" for those in government charged with providing for common good. And, as Americans have seen during the past few years, government spending can easily become a monster raging out of control.

Projections in recent months have indicated Texas may be facing an increase in taxes this legislative session. But not everyone is convinced the picture is as grim as it has been painted. The Texas Research League, for example, says Texas can avoid a state tax increase in 1983 and possibly longer by instituting various changes including a "hold-the-line policy on state retirement benefits.

With the state highway system in need of vast repairs and expansion, and a multitude of other costly items facing legislators, it's good to know a group like Texas 13 is around to keep legislators mindful of the fact taxation is a drain on the economy and should be used judiciously.

Tax increases will be unavoidable in some cases, but as Texas 13 notes, "taxpayers also 'need dollars very badly.'"

Texas 13 is offering a conservative voice for the state on taxation matters. During this time when the urge is to spend our way out of the economic mess, we hope legislators will listen.

ABA sounds retreat

The American Bar Association has sounded a shameful retreat from the legal profession's ethical responsibilities. This week, it rejected guidelines that would have encouraged attorneys to blow the whistle on law-breaking by their clients.

Not only did the ABA House of Delegates refuse to approve the badly needed new guidelines, but shockingly voted to weaken the current ones that permit an attorney to disclose a client's intention to commit a crime.

The inconsistent logic of those trial lawyers who led the successful opposition to the proposed guidelines permits attorneys only to disclose a client's intention to commit a crime involving the possibility of "imminent death, or substantial body harm."

The trial lawyers lose their credibility when they invoke the sanctity of client relationships involving white-collar crime, but are willing to violate a client confidence dealing with a crime of violence.

Is any less candor from a client needed for an attorney to prepare a defense to a murder or assault charge than to defend against a charge of fraud or dealing in narcotics?

The delegates also showed an appalling disregard for the corrupting influence of white-collar crime by rejecting a separate guideline that would have broadened the ethical obligations of corporate attorneys.

This would have provided a necessary incentive for corporate attorneys to inform stockholders and prosecutors when an executive illegally enriches himself at corporate expense.

Inasmuch as the actions of the delegates do not become final until ratified by a future ABA convention, there is still some hope for guidelines to protect the public.

We cannot believe the votes of the ABA delegates represent a consensus of attorneys throughout the country. The nation's attorneys should revolt at the callous ethical indifference displayed by their profession's representatives.

Another View:

Offended innocence

The president says it's very disturbing and frustrating that black leaders are accusing him of insensitivity to civil rights. Don't they know that his father didn't allow him to see the movie, "Birth of a Nation," because it glorified the Ku Klux Klan or that he was in favor of integrating baseball? His administration, he said in a recent interview with television newscasters, has an enviable civil rights record. Maybe, he suggested, it was being distorted by black leaders more interested in perpetuating racial tension — since their jobs depended on it — than in ending it.

The president didn't mention his clumsy attempt to allow segregated schools and colleges to qualify for federal tax exemptions, despite a Treasury Department rule to the contrary that had been in effect for more than a decade with the support of both Democratic and Republican presidents, nor did he mention that he sent his Justice Department to court on the side of those segregated institutions and against the civil rights position the government had taken for many years.

The president didn't mention the report of the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission that under his administration the number of job discrimination suits initiated by the federal government had dropped sharply.

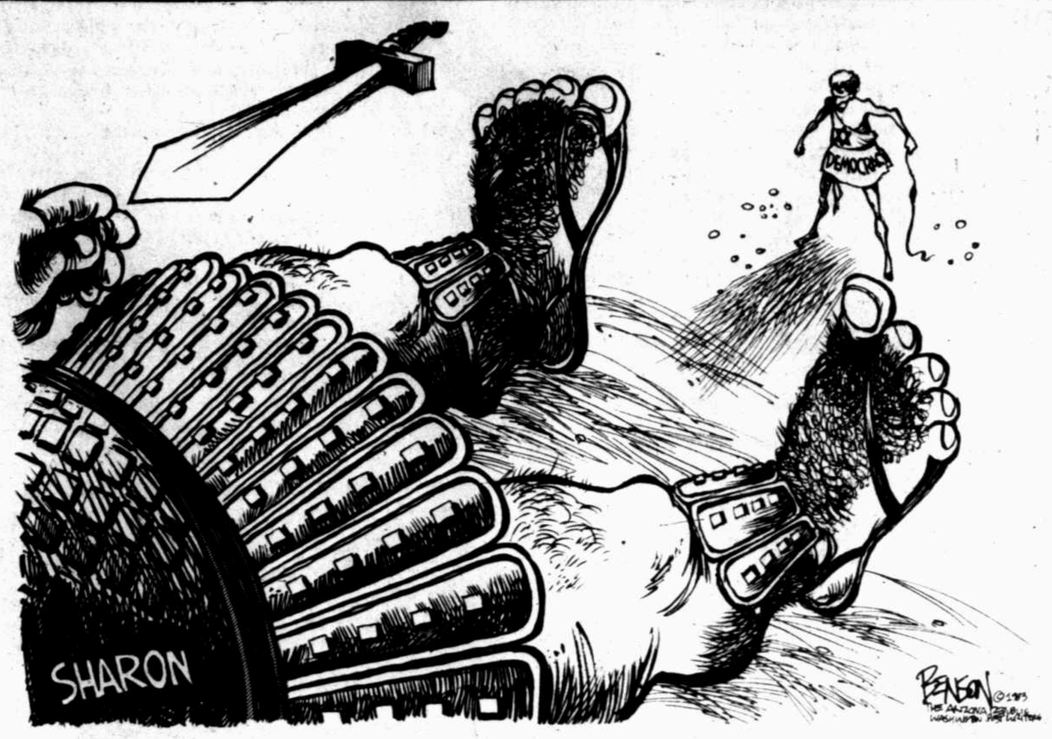

The president didn't mention the finding of the independent Washington Council of Lawyers that while his administration had stepped up enforcement of laws against violence and intimidation directed at blacks, its enforcement of school desegregation and fair housing laws had all but stopped.

The president didn't mention that his administration has attempted sharply to reduce the scope and effectiveness of the federal Votings Rights Act, and that only under severe pressure from fellow Republicans had he finally agreed to sign the measure passed by Congress.

The president didn't mention that nearly every major program cut back by this administration — food stamps, legal services, school lunches and scores of others — has been of particular benefit to racial minorities or that in every respect — not just in the incidental effects of tax cuts, which the president agreed favored the wealthy — the economic policies of his administration impinge most severely on the poor and on minorities.

The president may be able to make good arguments for some of these practices, though it's hard to imagine how he could acknowledge them all without also acknowledging the charge of insensitivity and neglect. But that posture of offended innocence is too much for even the most gullible to swallow.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Explosive' mini-movie shot down

WASHINGTON — Like Soviet historians who rewrite the past every time the Kremlin's political wind shifts, officials of the Interior Department have been trying desperately to eradicate all trace of a documentary film produced during the Carter administration.

Jack Anderson

Fish and Wildlife Service employees were ordered to turn in all copies of the film and sign statements attesting that they had complied with the confiscation decree. An environmental group that had obtained a copy quite legitimately was accused by an Interior Department vigilante of having stolen it.

Why all the uproar? Technically, I guess you could call the documentary film "explosive." It dealt with the kind of shotgun pellets used by the nation's nimrods.

There are two kinds of shot on the market — lead and steel. Some hunters prefer lead shot. They say it goes farther and truer, and doesn't chew up their gun barrels the way steel shot does.

But conservationists — including many hunters — say there's a serious problem with lead shot. It pollutes the environment.

Most of the pellets shot into the air miss the ducks or geese they're aimed at. Unlike Longfellow's arrow, they fall to earth we know just where — in the marshlands where the waterfowl feed. Some are inevitably ingested in the birds' food; if the pellets are lead, the game birds can die of lead poisoning. Thousands reportedly have met this fate.

In hopes of weaning hunters away from lead shot, the Fish and Wildlife Service assigned one of its ballistic experts to make a movie showing that steel shot — which doesn't poison the waterfowl — is just as good as lead shot.

The little movie was produced by an Oregon firm, Dan Biggs Productions, at a cost to the taxpayers of $28,500. But by the time it was completed, G. Ray Arnett, a Reagan appointee, was the Interior Department official who oversees the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Arnett is an enthusiastic hunter. Sources told my associate Vicki Warren he's a traditionalist — a lead-shot man. Arnett himself would not answer questions on the subject.

At any rate, the confiscation order was issued. But the film hunters learned they had missed one copy of the film. The National Wildlife Federation had it.

A Fish and Wildlife minion was dispatched to retrieve the film. He accused the environmental group of stealing it, but the federation produced a bill of sale from the producer.

Meanwhile, the ballistics expert lost his job in a reduction-in-force. He's now pushing steel shot through the Wildlife Federation and other environmental groups.

Footnote: Dan Biggs resents the fact that taxpayers won't be able to see the film they paid for. He's thinking of making another documentary — about the first film and the administration's efforts to shoot it down.

PIE IN THE SKY: The love affair between President Reagan and corporate America is an open secret. Now he wants to turn over the weather to the big corporations.

Specifically, he is considering a plan to deliver the government's land- and weather-satellite systems to commercial firms. The excuse is that this would cut down on the public funds that are now spent putting the information-gathering satellites up into space.

Unfortunately, it's not at all clear whether the government would wind up paying the private satellite operators more for the information it wants than it now spends to run its own satellites. And because the issue hasn't exactly caught fire on Capitol Hill, no definitive cost comparisons have been made.

One of the few members of Congress who has taken an active interest in the scheme is Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y.

"Currently these programs cost the taxpayer less than $200 million per year," he told my reporter Carolyn Farrar. "The only serious proposal for transfer (to the private sector) would cost well over $300 million per year."

Scheuer's uneasiness over the cost question got what might be unintended support from a leading proponent of satellite privatization: COMSAT General Corp., which is practically salivating at the prospect of taking over the weather satellites. COMSAT evidently thinks it will make a bundle on any transfer.

In fact, COMSAT's big worry is the federal procurement law that forbids the award of a government contract on a non-competitive basis unless only one company is qualified to handle the job.

Several other companies have shown an interest in running the satellites. So COMSAT's lawyers wrote the Commerce Department expressing hope that the bothersome regulation could somehow be evaded.

"In developing a ... plan to accomplish these (transfers), it is essential to avoid the inflexibilities which result from excessive reliance on procurement law precedents," the memo said. It described the competitive-bid process as "utterly unworkable, unnecessary and inappropriate in this case."

Critics of the transfer plan have voiced other concerns besides cost. One involves national security. As a congressional aide put it, "Will the military trust private industry enough not to send up duplicate satellites?"

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., has sponsored legislation to require congressional approval before the government turns the satellite business over to private industry. Rep. Scheuer has scheduled hearings for next month.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Liberation theology draws protest

WASHINGTON — The support some Catholic priests give Latin American insurgents bothers many hemisphere governments.

William Glaudoni

Latest governmental outburst against priests who allegedly back extremist groups was heard in Lima, Peru.

There, President Fernando Belaunde Terry's press office issued a report charging that some foreign priests "run the Marxist movement," appropriate food donations from abroad for their own ends, "and have been the principal promoters of disorder."

Cardinal Juan Landazuri, Peru's highest-ranking prelate, objected immediately, and Belaunde responded with assurances that there is no conflict of any sort between church and state in Peru.

Belaunde said that his complaints were directed only against "foreign pseudo-priests," presumably not against Peruvian clergy.

In fact, the government press office report specifically referred to priests it said had fled from Chile after the overthrow of the Marxist regime of President Salvador Allende in 1973. They were said to be Jesuits or Maryknoll fathers from the United States and Europe, who have been among the principal apologists for the "theology of liberation."

Earlier, though, Belaunde had complained that some priests and nuns were instigating violence and were to blame for "violent actions that have cost blood."

The press office said that some of the group of 150 who went to Peru after the Marxists were ousted from power in Chile were expelled three years ago. But another 120 are spread throughout the country, mostly in the southern part, in Arequipa, Cuzco, Puno and Cajamara where they have been involved in political activities with the extreme leftists.

The general area in which they reportedly are laboring is to the south and east of Ayacucho, where the Marxist guerrilla organization, Sendero Luminoso, has been fighting the army and police in recent years.

The area is a desolate, impoverished region where Inca languages are more often spoken than Spanish.

That fact, in itself, suggests that, although Peru was conquered and colonized by the Spanish some 450 years ago, a sizable segment of the population has not yet been incorporated into the modern world, much less the Peruvian national economy.

Peru has had governments of varying ideological hues in the post-World War II period, ranging from ultraconservative to the opposite extreme. During the last period that the Peruvian armed forces ran the country, between the coup that ousted Belaunde in 1968 and the elections that returned him to the presidency in 1980, the generals re-equipped the armed forces with Soviet-built planes, tanks and other armaments. Peru is the only South American nation whose forces so depend on the Soviets.

But neither the military governments, nor any of the others, have done much in favor of Peru's indigenous population.

What obviously concerns the Belaunde government is the possibility that priests who believe in the theology of liberation may encourage the descendants of the Incas to organize a racial war against the government.

That would be in accord with the teachings of liberation theology, which holds that violence can be used against the greater violence represented by the central government's centuries of neglect of the Peruvian masses.

Belaunde's concern about guerrillas in the Andean region is obvious. The end of December he ordered the army to move into Ayacucho to eliminate the threat posed by Sendero Luminoso.

That Marxist-inspired group, though, is said to have alienated many of the Andean people, forcing them to bear arms, burning their crops and other such atrocities. However, Peruvian sources say that at least a good number of Sendero Luminoso guerrillas do speak Quechua, the Inca tongue of the area, and not all the government forces are conversant in it.

If what the Belaunde government suggests is true, and foreign missionaries, preaching the theology of liberation are active in the area, the relatively limited confrontation in the Ayacucho region could spread throughout southern Peru. Without posing a serious threat to Belaunde's stability, it could come to constitute a media event of considerable embarrassment to the Peruvian government and cost the lives of thousands.

Oil bazaar bringing out true colors

You can't believe what disarray the oil-producing nations are in until you visit an open market oil bazaar and see for yourself. I went to one last week to buy a barrel for Valentine's Day.

Art Buchwald

A sheik from Kuwait was singing, "Oil for sale, oil for sale. Sweet crude oil for sale."

"How much is it?" I asked.

"Thirty-four dollars a barrel. But since it's Valentine's Day I'll let you have it for 32."

I was about to taste it, when a man grabbed my arm, and pulled me into his tent. "That man is a thief. Here, try this delicious Libyan oil." He handed me a tin cup.

"Very tasty," I said. "How much for a barrel?"

He smiled. "Thirty dollars. We're having a Khadafy Day Founders' Sale."

"Ill be back," I promised him.

I walked along the dusty streets of the bazaar as Nigerians, Saudi Arabians and oil merchants from Qatar all implored me to buy their products.

A man wearing a sombrero said, "Senor, please, would you like to buy this 1983 vintage which just came out of an offshore well off Venezuela?"

"Is 1983 a good year for oil?" I asked him.

"It's nouveau oil. The weather was just right for pumping it out of the sea. You can refine it today."

"How much is it?" I asked.

"If you promise not to tell anyone I will sell you a barrel for $29," he said.

"That's $5 below the OPEC price."

"I spit on OPEC. They are all double-crossers, and are undercutting me all over the bazaar. I have a family to feed and that is why I am sacrificing my oil at cost."

"I'd like to think about it," I said.

"As I walked farther down a man in a sombrero standing in an alley called to me. "Psst, amigo, are you looking for some fast action?"

"It all depends on what you have to offer."

He showed me a photograph of a barrel of Mexican oil.

"I give you her for $27 and will throw in the transportation for free."

"She's very beautiful," I said. "But how do I know she's the real stuff?"

"He will guarantee that you won't be disappointed." The Mexican pointed to a nervous man wearing a pin-striped suit, a white shirt and a Harvard School of Business tie.

"Tell him, Thomas, how great my oil is."

"She's everything he says she is," pin-stripe assured me.

"Who are you?" I asked.

"I am from the Chase Manhattan Bank, and he's into me for $6 billion. Buy his damned oil and give me a break."

"I really didn't want to spend that much," I said.

"I say, old chap," a fellow in a morning coat who looked like a floorwalker at Harrad's said, "I'd be very careful of those Latin cutthroats. Could I interest you in some very fine British petroleum from the North Sea? It's certified by the Royal Family."

"How much?"

The British never haggle over price when it comes to oil. "Twenty-five dollars — take it or leave it."

"Twenty-three dollars," I said.

"I'll make it $24 and arrange to have your picture taken with Princess Diana's baby."

"I guess I can't do better than that."

"Yes, you can," an Iranian oil merchant said, pulling me into his hut.

"What's your price?"

"Are you an American?"

"Of course," I said.

"Then I will give you this barrel for $20."

"Why so cheap?" I asked.

He put his arm around my shoulder and whispered, "We Iranians and Americans have to stick together."

17-year-old heads radio news department

SAFFORD, Ariz. (AP) — At age 17, Robert Johnson would be only a cub reporter at many newspapers, but he already heads the news department at a radio station — and still finds time to go to high school.

Johnson is the news director and news staff of KFMM, a 50,000-watt FM station in Safford serving a three-county area in eastern Arizona.

His first interview was a 22-minute session with Gov. Bruce Babbitt last spring in Clifton, shortly after the Phelps Dodge Corp. shut down its massive Morenci copper works. "That's something I'll probably remember for some time," he said recently.

Babbitt, he said, good-naturedly asked, "Don't you think you're starting a little young?"

"I said, 'Maybe so, but I don't like waiting for everyone else,'" Johnson said.

Johnson covered the 1982 Arizona election campaign — including congressional and state office candidates. One candidate was "very appalled by the whole idea," Johnson said, adding that he told him, "We'll learn together. Don't worry about my age."

Johnson, who turns 18 later this month, works under a special program for high school seniors, taking four morning courses and working from 2 p.m. until 10 p.m. daily. He's off on weekends but is usually found at the station on Sunday, pre-recording newscasts for Monday, he said. Johnson is also co-editor of the Safford High School newspaper, the Bulldog.

Johnson said he loves the work. Covering the elections put him in touch with "a lot of people no one my age gets a chance to meet." He had taken one journalism course — in eighth grade — and had written for the high school paper.

Johnson worked for nearly two years at rival station KATO shortly after his family moved to Safford from Springfield, Mo. He learned all aspects of radio, though principally the non-news end. His parents didn't object, as long as he did his homework.

Then, in September 1981, he talked to John W. Payne, vice president of Payne Broadcasting Inc., who was about to put KFMM on the air. Payne offered him a job as assistant news director.

"He didn't even listen to an audition tape," said Johnson, who two months later began reading morning headlines and doing two evening newscasts.

Johnson said his parents are "happy for me but they just want me to be home a little more. Overall, they've been supportive of me."

Laura Sherman, right, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Sherman of Route 3, Box 522-K, and Joseph Arliss Williamson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar A. Williamson of No. 6 Suffolk, both seniors at Midland High School, were selected as Youth Merit Award winners by the Downtown Rotary Club. Miss Sherman is involved in student council, National Honor Society, Industrial Arts Club, drama and volleyball. She serves as French Club president and Industrial Arts Sweetheart. Williamson served as captain of the MHS football team and was elected mayor of Boy's State. He enjoys calculus, computers and chemistry.

Chocolate lovers in heaven at display

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Chocolate cigars, chocolate pianos, chocolate tennis racquets and chess sets were among the delicacies sampled by some 350 people during "The Choclate Lovers Weekend."

"Chocolate is definitely coming into vogue," said Leslie Belle, a foods buyer for Overbey's Emporium who attended last weekend's event at a northside motel.

"I feel like a kid on Halloween," said Mike Green of Columbus.

More than 20 national and international chocolatiers displayed and demonstrated their products. Those participating included Ghirardelli, Tobler-Suchard, and Lindt of Switzerland.

Participants, who paid anywhere from $10 each to $150 per couple to attend the event, were invited to write essays entitled "My Wildest Chocolate Fantasy." First place was the winner's weight in chocolate, while second place was a 71-pound, solid chocolate heart.

Meals peppered with chocolate dishes were served. Breakfasts, for example, included chocolate chip muffins, chocolate chip pancakes, chocolate waffles and chocolate quiche.

13-year-old Ahmad Dbouk, a Lebanese war victim, smells roses presented him, eleven other children and two adults also wounded in the war who arrive in Pittsburgh Tuesday. They will receive medical treatment.

Young Lebanese seek treatment

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

JEANNETTE, Pa. — Fourteen Lebanese children and young adults spent their first day in the United States shyly awaiting treatment for war injuries — and dreaming of a very American meal of hamburgers and french fries.

The young people, some limping or in wheelchairs, clutched red roses and gazed with embarrassment at a crowd of well-wishers Tuesday afternoon at a news conference after their arrival at Greater Pittsburgh Airport.

"They are in good spirits, although they're a little tired. They are excited to be here," said Dr. Ghassan Issa, a Lebanese pediatrician who accompanied the youngsters from Beirut to Monsour Medical Center in Jeannette, 30 miles east of Pittsburgh.

An hour after arriving at the airport, the youngsters were bused to Monsour Medical Center, where they had a dinner of veal, turkey, rice and ice cream before going to bed.

"The kids have already said they want hamburgers and french fries tomorrow," nursing director Maureen Kroll said laughingly.

The injured, ranging in age from 3 to 24, were brought here to receive more extensive treatment for a variety of injuries, including amputations, eye injuries and burns dating as far back as 1975. The youngsters were burned, bombed and hit by shrapnel.

The children were chosen according to financial need, Issa said. They were brought to this country because U.S. hospitals can provide specialized treatment for the various injuries that is not available in Lebanon.

"I am happy they brought me here and my children here. I thank everyone for the help to bring me here," Saneih Dbouk said through an interpreter. She accompanied her two sons, aged 11 and 13, who suffered severe burns in the bombings. Two other parents accompanied their children.

"They're incredibly strong young people. I think that's a testimony to the versatility of their youth, regardless of their culture," said John Zogby, national field representative for the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee, which helped bring the children to the United States.

About 60 supporters of Save Lebanon Inc., clapping and cheering, greeted the children with long-stemmed red roses as they made their way through the terminal. Two of the older victims were pushed in wheelchairs. A few of the younger ones limped slowly, leaning on the arm of an adult.

"It's a day we're genuinely proud is happening and that it's being done by us. This project represents the best of what America has to offer," said Zogby's brother, Jim, the committee's executive director.

Doctors said the youngsters were in stable condition.

The children will spend about three or four days at Monsour Medical Center for screening. Some will remain in the Jeannette area as out-patients.

Begin may find loyalty expensive

Loss of confidence could be ultimate cost

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel — To people who know and admire Menachem Begin, the explanation that he kept Ariel Sharon in the Cabinet out of a sense of loyalty is perfectly plausible.

Less charitable observers still are perplexed about the reasons the Israeli prime minister so adamantly refused to fire his pugnacious former defense minister from the government over the findings of the Beirut massacre commission.

They say that with Sharon kept on, all the rancor that has accumulated in the Cabinet over the massacre report is bound to explode sooner or later.

Yoel Marcus, a columnist for the daily Haaretz, said Tuesday that Sharon in the Cabinet, ambitious to succeed Begin as premier, would be "a time bomb ... a destabilizing factor. As a minister without portfolio, he will have the time to appear in public a lot and undermine, to leak information, to ignore the restraints required of the government, and in the end he may inspire extremism."

The commission recommended a week ago that Sharon "draw the appropriate personal conclusions" from its verdict that he blundered in sending the Lebanese Christian militiamen into Beirut refugee camps where they killed hudnreds of civilians last September.

Sharon refused to quit and Begin made it known that he would not fire him. Sharon eventually agreed to relinquish the defense leadership if he could remain the Cabinet without a portfolio.

The opposition Labor Party claimed this violated the intent of the commission. It said the judges must have meant Sharon should be fired, since the report said that by law Begin was entitled to dismiss him if he refused to resign.

In Parliament on Monday, Begin cited legal opinions, including his own attorney general's, that the report did not oblige him to dismiss Sharon. He gave no further indication why he kept him in the Cabinet, but praised Sharon as a man who "withstood all of Israel's wars and in all of them he led our army to victory with bravery and initiative."

The reason given by Begin's supporters is that the Israeli leader felt the report was unduly harsh. They say Begin could not turn against Sharon, the man with whom he went through the tumultuous months of the Lebanon war and who was responsible for the building of almost 100 West Bank settlements, which Begin considers to be one of his government's greatest achievements.

"It was a simple case of loyalty. That's the way Begin is," said one Israeli who knows the 69-year-old premier well. "If Sharon had resigned willingly, Begin wouldn't have twisted his arm to stay. But once Sharon's mind was made up, Begin couldn't do anything about it. Plus, he believes the commission made a mistake."

The Israeli, who asked not to be identified, rejected other explanations advanced by political analysts: that he feared that Sharon, once outside the Cabinet, would put out unflattering reports of Begin's performance, or that he feared that by firing Sharon he would lose votes.

The record of Sharon's stormy 10-year political partnership with Begin contains little apparent justification for such loyalty.

In 1974 Sharon defected from Begin's opposition camp to become an adviser to Yitzhak Rabin — then prime minister.

In the 1977 election campaign, Sharon did not return to the Begin fold, and instead ran as an independent. He fared poorly, but Begin, struggling to form a coalition, wooed him back into the Likud bloc by giving him the Agriculture Ministry and a free hand to build settlements.

In 1980, Sharon launched a bitter personal attack on Begin — who held the defense portfolio — and threatened to resign.Begin coldly faced him down and Sharon backed off.

In 1981, following his re-election, Begin finally gave Sharon the defense post, despite the misgivings of Sharon's Cabinet foes.

It was then theorized that he needed Sharon to supervise Israel's withdrawal from Sinai, and would dump him shortly thereafter. But less than two months after the withdrawal, the Lebanon war was launched.

Some ministers have suggested that without a portfolio or a say in major policymaking, Sharon will wither on the vine and finally resign in frustration.

Industry Minister Gideon Patt was quoted as telling the Jerusalem Post on Monday that Sharon would have no say in security matters.

Patt reportedly scorned the post of minister without portfolio, recalling that he had worked for such a minister once, and "I used to lie awake every night wracking my brains to find something for the minister to do the next day."

China plans big, subtle subsidy reductions

PEKING (AP) — China is planning to slash its enormous subsidies from 30 percent to 20 percent of state spending, officials here say. But the cuts will be gradual and subtle so they won't antagonize workers and spark "Polish-type" unrest.

China's subsidies for 1978 to 1981 added up to about $31.4 billion. That's about $15 for food, clothing, housing, medical care and recreation for each worker.

Officials say the subsidy cuts are planned in an effort to reduce the government's budget deficit, which was about $750 million in 1982.

No major reductions have been reported yet. The cuts, when they come, are expected to be in subsidies for small everyday items, possibly radios and wrist watches. They also are expected in the countryside where peasants are being encouraged to produce more and earn more.

China, however, is providing about $50 million in new subsidies to help some 50 million peasants cope with a 20 percent increase in the price of cotton cloth.

Chinese economists and policymakers say they are keenly aware of the situation in Communist Poland, where workers have struck or rioted over most government-ordered price increases during the past 10 years.

In 1981 China also saw how consumers could grow restless after price hikes. It raised the price on a top-grade bottle of liquor by about $1.12, and on a pack of cigarettes by 15 cents.

Many people then thought those increases were a test to see how consumers would react. There were rumors of 33 percent average increases on certain items. Shoppers went into a frenzy of buying and hoarding.

Anxiety coincided with the Chinese women's volleyball world championship victory, and more than 100,000 people demonstrated for two nights in Tienanmen Square. Although most were celebrating the volleyball victory, some people were protesting price increases.

However, Western economic analysts say the situation in China is different than in Poland, where workers rioted a year ago over subsidy cuts that increased some prices as high as 400 percent.

"What happened in Poland simply cannot happen here," said one Western analyst who asked not to be named. "Something drastic is just not in the cards."

Election-related violence continues in northeast India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A machete-wielding mob killed a candidate and armed tribesmen set three more villages ablaze in election violence wracking the mountainous, northeast state of Assam, reports from the area said.

The reports said at least 10 people were killed and scores of others injured Tuesday in political and ethnic clashes, bringing to 275 the number of fatalities in the last two weeks of arson, bomb attacks and riots.

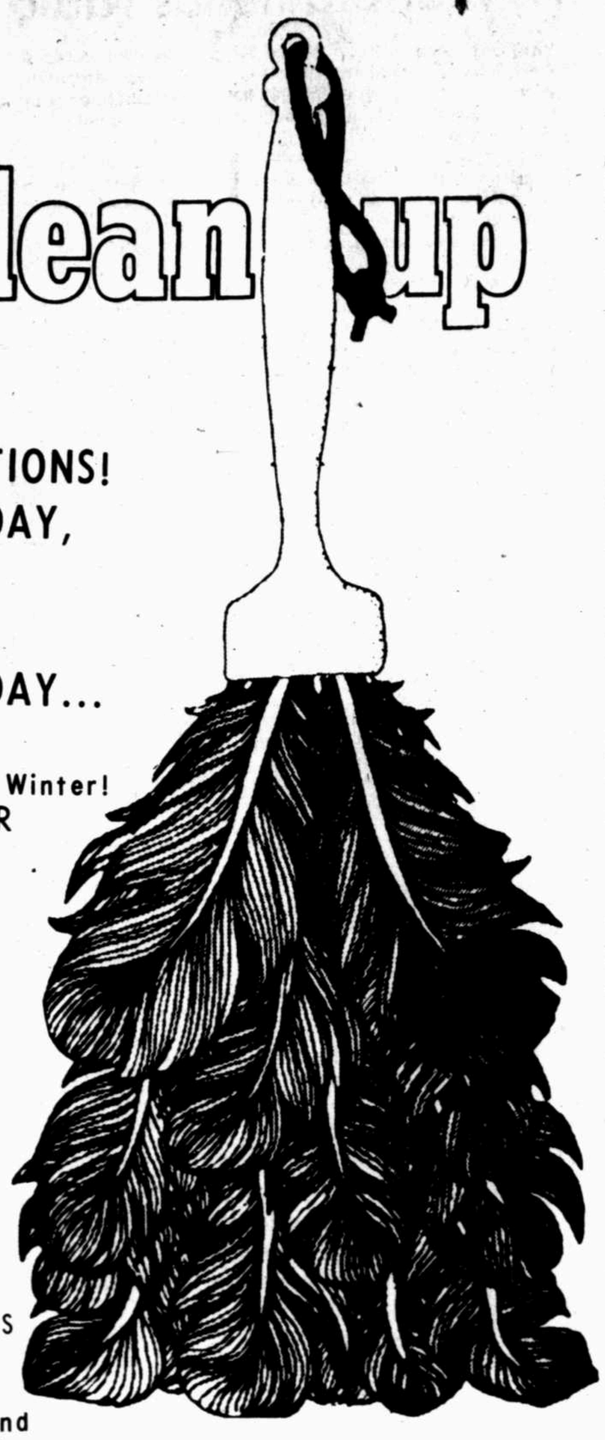

A candidate of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress Party, Satya N. Ram, was killed and several of his supporters wounded when unidentified people bearing spears, machetes and iron bars attacked them as Ram addressed a campaign meeting in the Bishwanath area, authorities reported.

Sam was the first political leader killed in the elections which are being largely boycotted by the Assamese-speaking majority in the state of 21 million people. Agitators are demanding the state disenfranchise and expel about 1 million illegal Moslem immigrants from neighboring Bangladesh.

The unidentified tribespeople, who have attacked dozens of Assamese-populated villages, apparently were provoked by the kidnapping of a candidate of a tribal political party by anti-election agitators, and by the eviction of tribesmen living illegally on government forest lands.

Last weekend, tribesmen raided and burned 25 hamlets in the tea-growing area of Gohpur, killing at least 150 people and leaving 8,000 others homeless, authorities said.

Good or bad? Golden Gloves ready to fight

Once again it's time to make that short trip to Odessa's Ector County Coliseum to watch the world's future boxing title hopefuls display their skills in their quests for State Golden Gloves berths in Fort Worth.

And, once again, it's time to watch football players pound away at each other with all the grace of elephants walking through a china shop. Unfortunately, some of these so-called pugilists are in the Open Division and are also seeking honors at state. Oh well, you take the good with the bad in these regional meets.

There are some memorable moments despite the hard-to-forget from last year's fighting, and some of those are coming from three Midlanders who are returning to the ring again this year, one chasing a second Region GG title.

There was the grace of Joel Abila as he swept through all takers — all taker just doesn't sound right — in the one fight he had before advancing to the state finals. He effectively dodged punches and kept up a steady attack that eventually brought his opponent to the canvas...

There was the one-handed fighting style of Benny Long as he subdued a hapless opponent with his left hand in his second fight while his right played rear guard — he'd injured his right in his first fight and couldn't hit anybody with it. He ended up being knocked out in the Regional title match on the final night of fighting...

There was Felix Munoz, a brawler who threw his attacks at opponents and could take what he gave when he had to until losing a decision in the championship fight.

I was impressed by the skills of these fighters — the skills of others to be sure — and I'm looking forward to seeing each of them return to the ring this week for the 37th annual Regional Golden Gloves Boxing tournament.

Tonight is the first night of fighting in this year's version of the Gloves and action will run through Saturday, miss Sunday and conclude on Monday. Each night is scheduled for a 7:30 start.

THE MIDLAND Boxing Club, winner of the 1982 Gloves team championship, is sending a total of 10 boxers to Odessa this week, five of which are fighting in the Open Division, the only division that sends fighters to the State Golden Gloves. In each weight category there will be three rounds of three minutes each.

Mixed in with the Open fighters there are four other divisions for boxers of lesser abilities or boxers under the 16 year age limit required to fight in Open. These divisions include Junior High Football, High School Football, Regular High School and Junior Olympic. Round lengths for each of these groups vary from 45 seconds to two minutes, depending on age.

For some of the lesser skilled, who seem to spend their brief time in the ring standing toe-to-toe throwing punches in the hopes of getting in more than they take, even a round of 45 seconds could seem like an eternity.

ABILA HASN'T fought since he lost to three-time defending national champion Jesse Benevides at state last year. He'll be taking a 3-1 Open record into this week's bouts and has stepped up from flyweight (112) to bantamweight (119).

Though his skill in the ring was evident in '82, Abila, has had a year to grow, not only physically, but mentally. "I wish I had a whole gym full just like him," said MBC trainer Rick Fleetwood "He's got quick hand and foot speed, he's a smart fighter and he probably has more discipline than anyone else in here (the Boys Club gym)."

Long, a welterweight, suffered an unexpected blow in his first night of boxing last year and it ended up costing him a victory over a fighter he'd beaten a month earlier, Mike Deanda of San Angelo. If the cards fall right this year, he may get a rematch since Deanda is back, seeking his third Regional title.

"If you were going to design a boxer physically, Benny's what you'd design. He has reach, power, speed and he's agile," said Fleetwood. "He's a year older, a year stronger and he knows what it's like.

"Munoz would be comfortable fighting in a phone booth," continued Fleetwood about his third boxer returning to the Golden Gloves this year. "He likes to go toe-to-toe and he's one of the best counter punchers I've seen as an amateur. This should be his year. He's lost in the finals the last two years."

One of the boxers competing for MBC this year is flyweight Emillio Menchaca, a 21-year fighters who has been with the club off-and-on for years. "He was one of the two winners we had our first year in Golden Gloves," said Fleetwood. "He was fighting in the high school division and the team only won five of 30 matches with him winning three of them."

In Menchaca's only Open fight experience to date, he received a bye in the first round of the Five-Star Tournament in Amarillo which put him into the title round. He came away with a victory.

The fifth and final MBC Open boxer is Ruben Tagle and he's posted a 3-1 record in Open fights. For the past three years he's been stepping up in ability, winning the junior high, high school and regular high school. "He's fought his way through the Golden Gloves," said Fleetwood.

OTHERS COMPETING for MBC in the other divisions are: 99-pounder Edward Bara, age 13 with a 30-1 record, in junior olympic; Manual Lozana, 120, 17, in high school football; Danny Arguello, 121, 18; Mark Duran, 142, 18; and Jerry Collazo, 119, 18.

Of the final four listed, only Collazo has ring experience, a 20-10 record. "The other three have never fought before but I hope they can fight like their name-sakes (Arguello and Duran)."

Not likely at this stage Fleetwood, but one never knows where the next champ could come from.

Bulldogs' state destiny in care of four winds

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High threw its state basketball playoff destiny into the four winds at Chaparral Center Tuesday night in a 61-57 loss to Abilene High.

The Bulldogs' hopes are not dead following the defeat, but they need a miracle stronger than Truman beating Dewey. MHS is holding its nose and going down for the third time.

The Purple Pack is now 7-6 in District 4-5A play with one game left to play and San Angelo and Abilene High owning 8-5 marks for second place. Both of those teams will have to lose Friday to force a four-way playoff for second place. The things dreams are made of.

If by chance Midland High should move into a four-way tie for second place, there will be a two-game district playoff to determine the final state playoff berth.

"This loss is like Presbyterian predestination. It just wasn't meant to be," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson after the game. "We're out of the running for the championship, but we still have a shot at second place. But it is asking a lot for Big Spring to defeat San Angelo in San Angelo and Cooper to beat Abilene High. That's a lot of ifs."

ALTHOUGH THE game was tied seven times and there were 12 lead changes, it was a game the Bulldogs had to work at to lose. They led by six, 34-28, at the half and by eight, 48-40, at the end of three periods. The AHS onslaught happened in the fourth quarter when the Eagles outscored the Bulldogs by a 21-9 margin.

Abilene's Les Hines was the man of the hour as he scored 12 of his game high 25 points in the fourth period, hitting five of six from the field and two of two from the charity line.

Most of Hines' points came on inside layups when Midland High had their strength — Johnny Pannell, David McFarland and Doug Hixon — on the bench in foul trouble.

"Foul trouble did play a part in the game because our kids lost their aggressiveness, but I don't want to take anything away from Abilene because they did some good things. You don't deserve to win when you have an eight point lead and hit three of 13 shots and three of eight free throws," Stephenson said.

MIDLAND HIGH hit 16 of 29 shots in the first half and six of 10 in the third quarter to gain a nine-point lead, 44-35, but Hines and crew went to work in the fourth period, hitting eight uncontested points to wipe away the MHS momentum. The Bulldogs never got back into the flow of the game although they never trailed by more than the final three-point margin.

"We had that nine point lead and then I've never seen the basketball bounce so crazy in all my life," Stephenson said.

The Bulldogs held the top two scorers of Abilene High to a mere 14 points with Mike Simmons getting eight and Shannon Daniel six, but Hines proved to be the thorn with his inside moves and an 11 of 17 shooting eye.

"Les had a good game," said AHS coach Dub Pierce. "We hit a cold streak in the third period, but we came out of it when we started getting the ball into Les and he finally quit putting the ball on the floor like we had been telling him. I guess he finally got it through his head."

Doug Hixon led the Bulldogs with 16 points, but had more bench time than usual by getting in foul trouble. Johnny Pannell, who was coming off two straight 17 point games, was held to 10 points and Blake Liberty also canned 10 points.

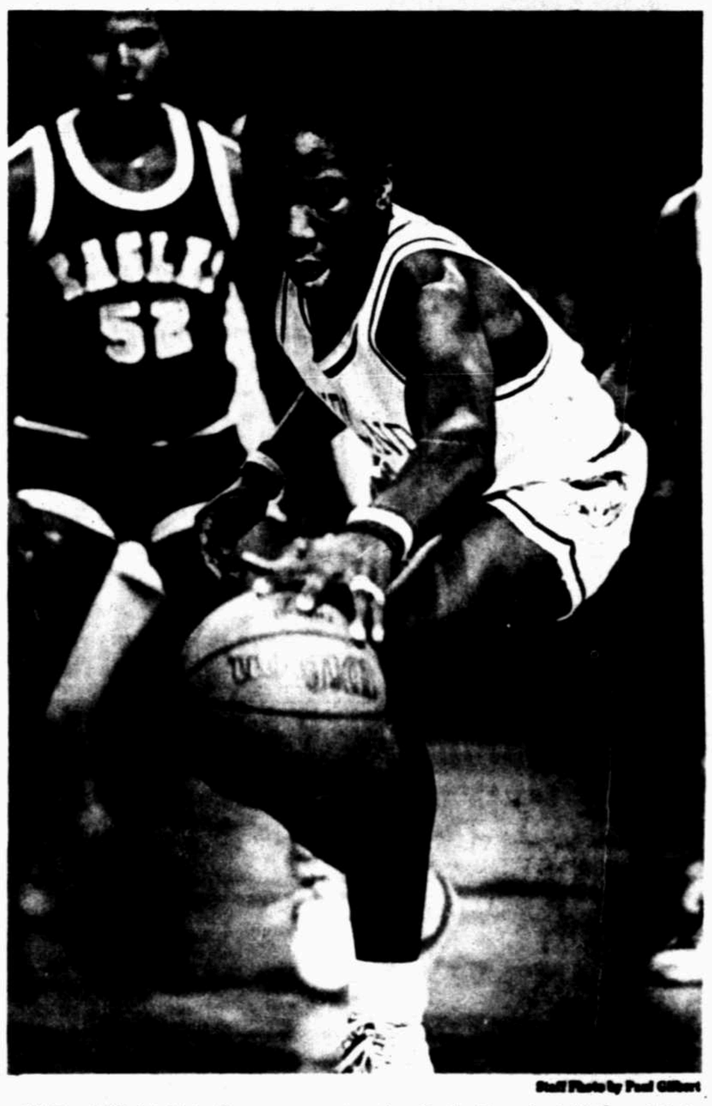

THE BULLDOGS meet Midland Lee at 8 p.m. Friday at the Chap to close out the regular season of play, but their ears may be more in tune with the San Angelo-Big Spring and Abilene High-Abilene Cooper matchups.

Abilene High also won the junior varsity contest, 77-57, as Greg Lowry hit for 13 points and J.C. Smith 12. Mickey Russell and Larry Faulks both had 10. The only Bullpup in double figures was Tim Hickey with 11.

Lee Rebels fail to hang on to lead, fall 39-37

ABILENE — For the fifth time in District 4-5A basketball play, the hard pressed Midland Lee Rebels couldn't hold onto a fourth quarter lead here Tuesday night in a 39-37 loss to Abilene Cooper.

The loss leaves Lee with a 1-12 4-5A league record and a 3-26 season mark. Cooper, also out of the title run, is 6-7 in league play and 12-18 on the year.

Lee held a 32-31 lead with 4:50 left in the game and a three-point play by Tyrone Thurman knotted the score at 35 with 1:59 left, but Lee could not find the winning formula once again.

Cooper's Greg Lowry canned two free throws with 1:36 left to give the Cougars a 37-35 lead and Joe Melson, who led all scorers with 18 points, hit two more free throws with eight seconds left to ice the decision for Cooper.

Again Lee was working to tie the game when Thurman's shot rimmed out with eight seconds left. Melson was fouled on the rebound and he put Lee away.

Lee jumped to a 16-12 halftime lead by hitting 53 percent from the field with an eight of 15 shooting eye. But the Rebels hit only 39 percent in the second half as victory once again eluded Lee. The Rebs once led 28-20 with 2:03 left in the third quarter.

TOD BROWN led Lee with 12 points while Thurman ended up with nine, probably two short of forcing the game into overtime.

Melson's 18 was the big key for Cooper because Lee held the high scoring Bob Estes to a mere two points, his worst district outing this year.

Cooper played some good defense also. Rebel Derek Westbrook, who has had three straight games in double figures and who was coming off a 20-point outing, was held to four points.

Lee will close its season Friday at Chaparral Center when they take on Midland High, a game that may have no bearing on the District 4-5A race.

Lee did win the junior varsity outing over Cooper with a 62-54 victory. Brown had 12 and McDonald 10 for the Rebels while Hadley had 15 for Cooper.

Midland Lee (37): Tod Brown, 5-2-12; Alvin Henry, 3-0-6; Sylvester Johnson, 1-0-2; Bryan White, 2-0-4; Tyrone Thurman, 4-1-9; Derek Westbrook, 2-0-4; Tim Hill, 0-0-0; Eric Griffin, 0-0-0. Totals: 17-3—37.

Abilene Cooper (39): Sam Lowry, 1-2-4; Greg Wilcox, 4-0-8; Bob Estes, 1-0-2; Joe Melson, 7-4-18; Greg Mendenhall, 2-0-4; Al Estrada, 1-1-3. Totals: 16-7—39.

There are two sides to Kuhn's Mays, Mantle action

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

There are two sides to Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's controversial action in forcing two of the game's most celebrated stars, Willie Mays and Mickey Mantle, to sever official baseball connections after taking jobs with Atlantic City casinos.

The critical viewpoint was presented here last week. Briefly stated, the ruling appears naive, short-sighted and hypocritical. If club executives can own race horses and interest in race tracks, what is so evil about players earning a livelihood by serving in a purely promotional capacity with a resort hotel which permits gambling in its lobbies?

Horse racing is a betting sport just as blackjack, craps and slot machines are gambling endeavors. How does one justly a sport more than the other? Doesn't it appear that there is a double standard for owners and players?

"Not at all," insists Bowie Kuhn whose 14-year term as guardian of the game's public image ends in August. "There are two key points. One is the obligation on the commissioner's part to protect baseball not only from unsavory influences but also from the very appearance of wrong doing. The other is a matter of precedent."

This is the second side — the commissioner's.

YOU MAY disagree with him, as we do on some basic points, but you can't fault his honesty, naive as it may appear. Here is a man who has just been voted out of his job and has no reason — outside his personal ethics — to defend what certainly is an unpopular cause.

Yet he refuses to compromise, even at a time when he could make himself extremely popular by telling Willie and Mickey to come on back, that he was wrong — they can have their cake and eat it, too.

But, no, Kuhn is not structured that way.

"No one is more grieved about this than I am," the commissioner said. "I am a great admirer of both Willie and Mickey. I did my best to dissuade both of them. But both told me that the money was too good to pass up.

"Mickey said he needed the money."

The regrettable facet of this scenario is that baseball has a way of discarding its heroes like soiled dishrags. Even Babe Ruth, the sport's all-time premier personality, was bouncing around from pillar to post at the end of his career.

"I am conscious of that," Kuhn said. "It troubles me. In fact, Willie Mays and I have talked about setting up a special bureau within the baseball framework for placement of retired players. It's still in a formative stage."

THE COMMISSIONER acknowledged that he isn't comfortable with the reality that owners such as John Galbreath of the Pittsburgh Pirates and George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees not only own thoroughbred horse farms but have interest in race tracks as well.

"This situation existed when I became commissioner," he said. "I felt it would be a difficult precedent to overthrow. But I drew a line. In 1980, I issued a directive to all club owners that further ownership in horse racing enterprises would not be allowed.

"I stuck with that order in the case of Edward DeBartolo."

DeBartolo, wealthy builder of shopping malls, was turned down on a $20 million offer to buy the Chicago White Sox.

"DeBartolo owned three tracks (in Los Angeles, Cleveland and Chicago)," Kuhn said. "I continue to be uneasy about such associations but I feel people around race tracks are a different breed than those around dice and casinos."

The commissioner, citing his even-handedness, recalled that in 1969 he had forced Charles O. Finley, then owner of the Oakland A's, and some part owners of the Atlanta Braves to sell stock they had in the Parvin-Dohrfmann Corp., operator of two casinos.

In 1978, Kuhn voided a move by Finley to sell three star players — Vida Blue, Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to the Yankees and Red Sox for $3.5 million — a veto upheld by the courts.

Blackledge will know by Friday about pro career

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Todd Blackledge says he will know by Friday if the lure of professional football is enough to draw him away from the university he guided to the national championship.

And Penn State Coach Joe Paterno says he will be happy for Blacklege no matter what road his quarterback chooses.

Blackledge, honored Tuesday night as the 1983 recipient of the Davey O'Brien award as the nation's outstanding quarterback, said he will soon end the suspense on whether he will use his final year of elibibility with the Nittany Lions.

"I can't afford to say anything until then (Friday)," said Blackledge. "It's a back-and-forth thing but I need to clear the air."

Blackledge, hero of Penn State's 27-23 victory over Georgia in the Sugar Bowl, said he believes he will be a first-round pick in the National Football League draft in April.

"There's no question I'll go in the first round because the (1982) season and the Sugar Bowl solidified that for me," he said. "There is no question about that. The question is where do I want to play next year."

Bryant-Denny 'Victory Turf' going on sale

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — For $4.95, John Roberts will sell you a square foot of what he calls "Victory Turf," part of artificial grass that covered the playing field at Bryant-Denny Stadium in Tuscaloosa for nine years.

During those years when the Alabama football team never lost a game on the turf and provided many of the victories for the late Bear Bryant to set a winning record for college coaching.

The turf was pulled from the field and replaced after the 1981 gridiron season when Bryant passed Amos Alonzo Stagg's mark of 314 victories.

Roberts said the university sold the turf to a licensing agency that represents it in sales of official university products. The agency bought 550 5-by-15 foot rolls of turf.

Boston College upsets St. John's, 92-75

Houston crushes Texas in SWC play, 106-63

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

By The Associated Press

Boston College forward Jay Murphy takes his best shots against the St. John's basketball team. At least it seems that way to Lou Carnesecca.

"We seem to be his tonic," said the St. John's coach after Murphy scored 30 points Tuesday night to lead the 18th-ranked Eagles to a 92-75 basketball upset over the sixth-ranked Redmen.

It was the second time this season that Murphy helped the Eagles upset Carnesecca's team. The first time, the Redmen were 14-0 when they were shocked by B.C.

"The last time he hurt us inside," Carnesecca said about Murphy. "Normally, when you see a big guy shooting from the outside like that, you let him have the shot. This guy, you can't. He's a very deceiving player. Now that I think about it, he also hurt us last year."

Murphy, a 6-foot-9, 220-pounder with a 16.6 average coming into the game at St. John's Alumni Hall, hit 11 of his 15 shots from the floor, many of them from long range.

"I wanted to try to play away from the basket," Murphy said. "For the last two years, I've been playing the post. I had a 15-to-17-foot range when I was in high school. Even though I was playing the post, I continuously worked on my jump shot."

The Redmen led by 38-35 at the half, but let the game get away from them in the last 20 minutes.

"Our defense broke down for 4-5 minutes in that second half," Carnesecca said. "We just totally disintegrated. It was just their game — they made us look terrible."

THE GAME involved some pressure for the Eagles, who just entered the Top Twenty for the first time this season and had something to prove.

"But we can't let this win get us cavried away," said Boston College Coach Gary Williams, in his first year at B.C. "We have to stay realistic — keep it in perspective. You can have that tendency to get carried away after a big week like this.

"The one thing this win has probably done for us, it's given us confidence we can win on the road."

Murphy also had a team-high 11 rebounds and John Garris had 20 points, 10 rebounds and four blocked shots as the Eagles improved their record to 18-4 overall and 8-4 in the Big East. The Redmen, 20-3, lost for the third time in 12 Big East games.

IN THE only other game involving a ranked team, No. 4 Houston crushed Texas 106-63 in a Southwest Conference game as Clyde Drexler scored 21 points.It was the Cougars' 20th consecutive conference victory and the 17th straight win at home.

Houston had a 53-26 at the half behind the shooting of Michael Young, Akeem Olajuwon and Reid Gettys.Olajuwon, the Cougars' 7-foot sophomore, also blocked 10 shots to set a season record for the school with 127 blocks. He broke a record set by Dwight Davis with 125 during the 1970-71 season.

The Cougars' victory over the Longhorns had a revenge motive attached to it. They had been asked by some of the university's football players to avenge Houston's humiliating 50-0 football loss to the Longhorns in Austin last season.

"The football players really wanted us to run it up. They wanted us to score 100 points because of what happened to them at Austin," Olajuwon.

"The game meant a lot to the football players. They wanted us to win by 50 and they were sincere about it," added Drexler.

In other action, Mississippi State defeated Georgia 73-64 in a bizarre game that included four Bulldog fouls at the end — three of which were technicals on Coach Hugh Durham.

Mississippi State hit seven times from the free throw line in the final second of the game to turn a two-point lead into nine points in a hurry. Jeff Malone, the SEC's leading scorer, sank five of those free throws.

With 47 seconds left, Malone, the game's top scorer with 30 points, hit a jumper for a 64-62 Missisippi State lead. Kelvin Hildreth then fouled James Banks with 26 seconds left and Banks sank both free throws to tie it at 64.

Malone missed the front end of a 1-1 with 16 seconds left, and Georgia lost the rebound. With four seconds left, Malone hit another jumper to make it 66-64. Georgia called time with two seconds left, and again with one second on the clock.

Georgia's Terry Fair was then called for charging after Hildreth was knocked to the floor. Durham argued with officials, and continued his protests until he was charged with three techincals.

Hildreth shot his 1-1, making them both, and Malone followed with five of his six attempts for the final margin.

TCU-A&M game moved ahead for television

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Christian at Texas A&M basketball game, set for Feb. 26, will be moved to a 3:10 p.m. tipoff and will be televised regionally by NBC-TV, the Southwest Conference said Tuesday.

The game originally was to begin at 7:30 p.m.

The game is the second of four wild-card games telecast on the last three weekends of the season.

TCU currently is in third place in the Southwest Conference with a record of 7-4, 16-6 overall. Texas A&M is tied for fourth in the SWC with a 6-5 record in conference, 12-12 overall.

Too much oil for Biles

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Ed Biles says he slipped on an oil slick and broke his right leg when he stopped for coffee at a convenience store.

Doctors told Biles his leg would be in a cast for about six weeks.

He said X-rays showed a break of the fibula, one of two bones in the lower leg.

"Better me than Earl," Biles said referring to running back Earl Campbell.

Mavericks' Cummings survives allergic reaction to bee sting

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mavericks' center Pat Cummings suffered an allergic reaction to bee pollen that might have proved fatal had a team trainer not rushed him to a hospital, according to a published report.

"It was scary. We thought we had lost him," Dallas Coach Dick Motta told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Cummings spent Monday and Tuesday nights in a Dallas hospital and will not be with the team for its game tonight in Cleveland against the Cavaliers. The Mavericks listed Cummings as questionable for Thursday night's game in Dallas against the Los Angeles Lakers.

The newspaper said the fourth-year pro took some bee pollen, an energy supplement sold by health food stores, Monday afternoon. About 15 minutes later, Cummings said, he began having trouble swallowing, his nose and eyes turned red, and he broke out in hives.

He began itching badly and "it was just tearing me apart," Cummings said.

The Mavericks had a practice scheduled, so Cummings drove to the north Dallas practice location. When he arrived, he said, "I was feeling terrible. I couldn't stand up. I was blacking out and just feeling real bad all over."

Sometimes accidents are unavoidable in auto racing

Allison cracks up second Daytona car in two days, running out of insurance

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Allison says sometimes accidents are unavoidable in auto racing.

The defending Daytona 500 champion has been around NASCAR Grand National racing for 20 years and has won more than his share of races.

But the craggy-faced veteran also has been rudely introduced to many a fence or wall while plying his chosen trade over the years. In fact, Allison has wrecked two cars in the last two days at Daytona International Speedway.

"I'm all right, but I'm kind of disappointed. Now we're definitely behind," Allison said Tuesday about two hours after totaling his backup car, the Buick Regal in which he won both Daytona races a year ago.

Allison also crunched the new Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS that DiGard team co-owner Bill Gardner says took all winter to get ready. That one became junk Monday during the Busch Clash when Allison slid through some oil and ricocheted off two walls.

"The one today (Tuesday) was about the simplest kind of thing that happens at major speedways. It was an unavoidable situation, and it's the kind of thing you just find yourself in the middle of from time to time," Allison said.

"I was right behind (A.J.) Foyt and I was waiting to see where he was going to go before I decided exactly what I was going to do. I guess I was going about 195.

"Up ahead of A.J., I saw the barest wisp of smoke, and I knew somebody was having some trouble, but I couldn't see it. Foyt backed off real quick, and that helped me make up my mind where I was going to go. I had to go inside him.

"That's when I saw the other car spinning up ahead of me. I just aimed the car and tried to thread the needle, but there was no opening. The only other chance I had was to go back up into Foyt."

THE SPINNING car, an Oldsmobile Cutlass driven by Howard Mark, apparently had blown an oil line. Foyt managed to avoid everyone, but Allison hit the other car a hard blow, turning the front end to junk.

Mark suffered a bruised shoulder, but Allison escaped with only a few small scratches on his hands and face from fragments of the glass windshield.

"I'm kind of glum right now, and I am a little sore, more than I was after yesterday (Monday)," Allison said. "We brought that Buick strictly as insurance, and we wore out that insurance now."

Gardner, referring to the cost of the two cars, remarked: "Yesterday, it was $80,000, and today it's $160,000. Last year, we won $120,000 for winning the 500, and that was a record. We can't even break even now."

Gardner and his brother, Jim, immediately made arrangements to have two more Monte Carlos shipped to Daytona from their team shop in Charlotte, N.C. They were expected to arrive in plenty of time for practice and qualifying today.

MEANWHILE, CALE Yarborough and Terry Labonte, who both wrecked cars the previous day, posted solid qualifying runs Tuesday in their backup cars.

Yarborough's Pontiac LeMans was the fastest of the day at 195.839 mph, considerably slower than the 200.503 he posted Monday in his Monte Carlo moments before the car flipped and hit the wall in Daytona's high-banked turn four. The car had to be withdrawn, costing Yarborough the pole position and the official qualifying record for the race.

Labonte's Monte Carlo, in which he had the ninth best qualifying speed Monday, also had to be withdrawn. He managed a 191.555 lap in the Chevrolet backup Tuesday.

Only Monday's top two qualifiers, Ricky Rudd (198.864 mph) and Geoff Bodine (197.920) have guaranteed spots in Sunday's race. The rest must establish a qualifying speed by the end of today's session to gain a spot in Thursday's twin 125-mile qualifying races.

Cowan's jumper puts Odessa High within one victory of 4-5A crown

Boyd Cowan's short jump shot with six seconds left on the clock Tuesday night moved Odessa High to within one victory of the District 4-5A basketball title as the Bronchos won a 57-56 decision over San Angelo.

Both teams entered Tuesday's game in Odessa with 8-4 league records, so the Bronchos now stand alone at the top with a 9-4 reading heading into Friday night's game with cross-town rival Odessa Permian. Friday's action completes regular season play.

San Angelo falls into a second place tie with Abilene High, both with 8-5 marks. San Angelo hosts 7-6 Big Spring Friday while Abilene High takes on 6-7 Abilene Cooper.

Should both San Angelo and Abilene High fall Friday, there could be a four-way tie for second place with Midland High and Big Spring joining the second place playoff race. Should both San Angelo and Abilene High win Friday and Odessa High loses, a three-way playoff would be held. Friday should be an interesting night.

Joe Terry led OHS with 22 points while Howard Harris added 18. Lorand White's 18 paced San Angelo while Jeff Kasner had 12 and Jack Carsner had 10.

Big Spring stayed alive in the hunt for second place with a 61-47 thumping of Odessa Permian Friday. Jerald Wrightsil led the Steers with 22 points whsile Tony Randle had 14. Permian's Rodney Hendrix had 11 points.

Heading into Friday's last of 14 slated district games, only Permian, Cooper and Midland Lee are out of the hunt for a playoff berth. Odessa High has a foot in the door while San Angelo and Abilene High are both in good position. Midland High and Big Spring both need some help.

Blazers spoil Walton's return to Portland

NBA

By The Associated Press

Bill Walton played basketball in Portland for the first time in five years, but this time he came up short.

Calvin Natt scored 21 points to power the Portland Trail Blazers to a 115-106 National Basketball Association victory over the San Diego Clippers Tuesday night, spoiling Walton's first game back in town since he left the Blazers five years ago. His injured foot prevented an earlier return.

Walton, who led Portland to the NBA title in 1977, was greeted by a standing ovation from about two-thirds of the capacity crowd. He scored 15 points, grabbed nine rebounds and had five assists.

"I recognized a lot of old faces and I recognized a lot of old voices," Walton said."I have lots of memories here. It was a lot of fun out there tonight. I just wish we could have won the game."

Elsewhere, the San Antonio Spurs drubbed the Los Angeles Lakers 124-103, the Golden State Warriors whipped the Washington Bullets 111-93, the Indiana Pacers stopped the Chicago Bulls 113-110 and the Atlanta Hawks trimmed the Houston Rockets 101-91.

Walton was asked if he was apprehensive about coming back to Memorial Coliseum.

"I was more apprehensive about my free throw shooting," he said. "I'm having a lot of trouble at the foul line."

Portland Coach Jack Ramsay was not surprised by the reception for his former center. "I would expect that kind of response, especially from our fans," Ramsay said. "The fans have such fond memories of that team."

"We would have liked to have treated this one as just another ball game," said San Diego Coach Paul Silas, "but that was hard to do. Bill was up, and so was the team, I thought, but our execution was not shrp and we had too many defensive breakdowns."

San Diego rookie Terry Cummings led all scorers with 29 points and had 10 rebounds. Jim Paxson and Mychal Thompson scored 17 and 16, respectively, for Portland. Thompson led all rebounders with 16.

Spurs 124, Lakers 103

At Inglewood, Calif., George Gervin scored 40 points to lead San Antonio past Los Angeles.Gervin scored 15 first-quarter points as the Spurs connected on 19 of 26 shots for a 43-24 lead and were never headed, although the Lakers twice closed within eight points.For the Lakers, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 26 points, Earvin "Magic" Johnson 24 and Jamaal Wilkes 21. San Antonio's Artis Gilmore had 21 and Mike Mitchell 18.The loss ended a 13-game Los Angeles home winning streak.

"Tonight you saw Gervin at his best," said Coach Stan Albeck, who called the game "absolutely the San Antonio Spurs' best performance of the season. Our defense has been much maligned all year, but tonight the Spurs played very good defense."

Warriors 111, Bullets 93

Joe Barry Carroll's 26 points helped Golden State snap a three-game losing streak and end Washington's four-game winning streak.Lewis Lloyd had 21 points for the Warriors and Mickey Johnson added 14. Golden State built a 19-point lead early in the fourth quarter.

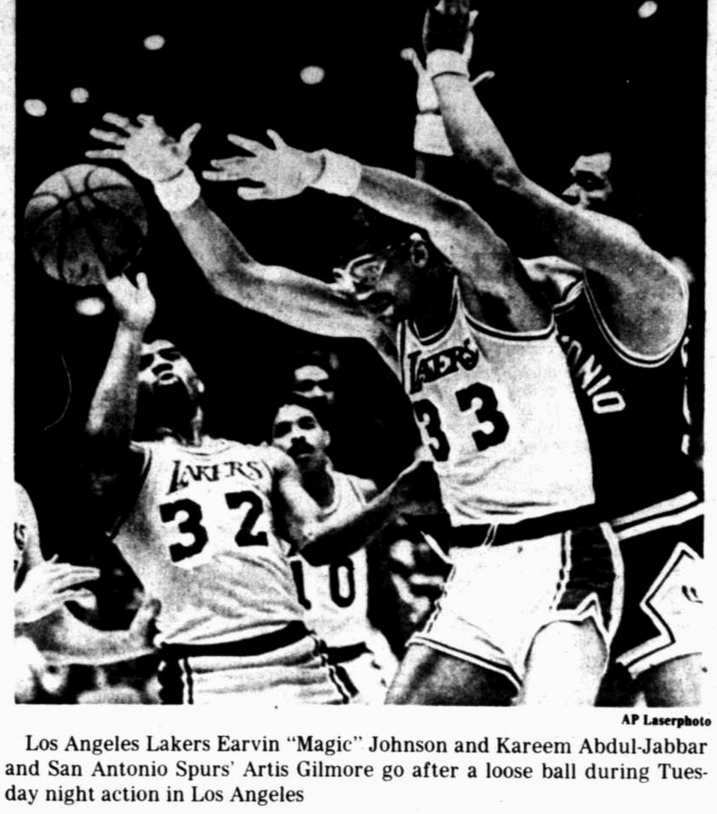

Pacers 113, Bulls 110

At Chicago, Herb Williams scored 22 points as Indiana snapped a five-game losing streak.Clark Kellogg and Jerry Sichting had 17 points each for the Pacers, who shot 83 percent from the floor in the third quarter — 19 of 23, with Williams going 8-for-8 in the second half.

The Bulls led until 5:38 of the third quarter when Kellogg put Indiana on top 69-68.They trailed 101-92 midway through the fourth quarter, but reeled off 10 straight points to go ahead 102-101 before the Pacers pulled it out.

Hawks 101, Rockets 91

At Houston, Mike Glenn and Johnny Davis hit consecutive jumpers to stop a late rally by the Rockets and Atlanta scored nine of the game's final 12 points.The Hawks led 77-60 with 5:15 left in the third period, but the Rockets pulled within 88-86 with 6:45 left before baskets by Glenn and Davis made it 92-86.

Nordiques lose Stastny during win over Islanders

NHL

By The Associated Press

The Quebec Nordiques won the war, but lost a couple of battles...and one key player.

Following a 4-1 National Hockey League victory over the New York Islanders Tuesday night, the Nordiques received a medical report on right wing Marian Stastny, who scored his 35th and 36th goals of the season, one more than he scored a year ago in his rookie campaign.

"He has a separated shoulder, and quite possibly they will have to operate," said Coach Michel Bergeron. "He may be out for as long as two months."

Elsewhere, the Minnesota North Stars nipped the New Jersey Devils 3-2, the Los Angeles Kings trimmed the Hartford Whalers 5-2, the Winnipeg Jets pounded the Vancouver Canucks 7-4 and the Detroit Red Wings whipped the Pittsburgh Penguins 7-3.

Quebec's victory over the Islanders extended the Nordiques' home unbeaten streak to nine games — 7-0-2 — and boosted them into sole possession of second place in the Adams Division, two points ahead of the idle Buffalo Sabres, who have played two fewer games.

North Stars 3, Devils 2

At East Rutherford, N.J., Minnesota's Neal Broten scored the winning goal at 8:07 of the third period. It was his 25th of the season and came after Tom McCarthy's 50-foot shot hit the goalpost. Broten tapped the puck between the outstretched legs of New Jersey goaltender Glenn Resch.New Jersey took a 1-0 lead just 2:30 into the game when Aaron Broten, Neal's younger brother, blasted a 10-foot shot past Minnesota goalie Gilles Meloche.

The North Stars' Craig Hartsburg tied the score and Bobby Smith put Minnesota ahead 2-1. New Jersey's Brent Ashton tied it late in the second period.

Kings 5, Whalers 2

At Hartford, first-period goals by John Paul Kelly, Dave Taylor and Bernie Nicholls ignited the triumph that vaulted Los Angeles into fourth place — the last playoff spot — in the Smythe Division, one point ahead of Vancouver.

Blaine Stoughton scored for Hartford in the second period, but the Kings cemented their second straight road victory with third-period goals by Doug Smith and Terry Ruskowski.

Jets 7, Canucks 4

At Winnipeg, Thomas Steen and Scott Arniel scored less than 2½ minutes apart for a 4-1 lead shortly after the Jets killed off a five-minute penalty. The Jets snapped a 1-1 tie early in the second period when rookie Brian Mullen beat Vancouver goaltender John Garrett on a close-in play. Then, after allowing Vancouver only two shots on goal while Bryan Maxwell was serving a major penalty, the Jets quickly increased their lead to 4-1 on goals by Steen at 12:14 and Arniel at 14:29.Paul MacLean, Moe Mantha, Tim Watters and Dale Hawerchuk scored the other Winnipeg goals.

Red Wings 7, Penguins 3

At Pittsburgh, Reed Larson scored three goals in the second period to lead Detroit over the skidding Penguins, who have lost 18th of their last 20 games. With the score tied 1-1, Larson scored twice in 35 seconds. Doug Shedden scored for the Penguins to make it 3-2, before Detroit came back with goals by Danny Gare, Larson and Dwight Foster in less than six minutes against goalie Nick Ricci, making his second NHL appearance this season.

Connors survives rash of upsets

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors escaped the rash of upsets Tuesday by downing scrappy Tim Wilkison 6-3, 7-5 in the $315,000 U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championships.

Earlier, Chip Hooper used his booming serve to eliminate defending champion Johan Kriek as several seeds were ousted from the 64-draw tournament at the Racquet Club of Memphis.

Kriek, the tournament's No. 6 seed, was joined on the sidelines by 13th-seeded Jimmy Arias and No. 16 Kevin Curren of South Africa.

In other second-round matches, Henri LeConte of France ousted Curren 6-4, 3-6, 6-2; Paul McNamee of Australia easily defeated Arias 6-1, 6-1; 14th-seeded Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia stopped Robert Van't Hof 6-2, 6-1, and No. 12 Sandy Mayer crushed Vijay Amritraj of India 6-0, 6-1.

In first-round action, Sweden's Anders Jarryd defeated Pavel Slozil of Czechoslovakia 6-1, 6-4; Mark Dickson downed Peter Fleming 7-6, 6-3; Fritz Buehning toppled Phil Dent of Australia 6-2, 6-1, and Terry Moor stopped Roscoe Tanner 6-3, 6-2.

Guerrero loses in arbitration with L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers have won the first two of their player salary arbitrations, with a hearing officer ruling that Pedro Guerrero should accept the money offered him.

Don Wallett ruled Tuesday that the club's offer of $600,000 was fair. Guerrero reportedly was asking for $800,000.

Guerrero, a third baseman-outfielder, made $295,000 last season, hit .304, with 32 home runs and 100 runs batted in. He had refused last year to sign a three-year contract with the club.

The favorable ruling was the second given the Dodgers in five days. Catcher Mike Scioscia lost his bid for a reported $215,000 a year, instead getting the $150,000 reportedly offered by the club.

Pitcher Steve Howe was due to go to arbitration Tuesday.

Former TCU coach joins Cowboys staff

DALLAS (AP) — Jim Shofner, former head coach at Texas Christian University and assistant with three National Football League clubs, is the new quarterback coach of the Dallas Cowboys.

Shofner, 47, succeeds John Mackovic, who resigned Feb. 3 to become the head coach of the Kansas City Chiefs.

"We're very fortunate to be able to bring in Jim Shofner, who has had such an extensive background working with quarterbacks," head Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday.

He has been an assistant coach with the San Francisco 49ers, Cleveland Browns and Houston Oilers, where he was offensive coordinator in 1981 and 1982. Shofner had resigned at Houston at the end of last season to go into private business.

A native of Grapevine, Texas, Shofner was an all-Southwest Conference running back for Texas Christian in 1957 and forsook a pro baseball career as a third baseman with the Detroit Tigers to join the Browns, who drafted him on the first round.

Shofner was the TCU coach from 1974 to 1976.

More oil price cuts announced

By The Associated Press

Ashland Oil Co., Marathon Petroleum Co. and Cities Service Inc. say they cut the price they will pay for certain grades of crude oil by $1 a barrel, matching moves made earlier this week by Texaco USA and Phillips Petroleum Co.

The price paid per barrel depends on where the oil is produced. Ashland, for example, said it would now pay $30 a barrel for oil in Louisiana and Mississippi, down from $31.

Each $1 reduction in the price of crude oil generally translates to a 2½-cent drop in the retail price of a gallon of gasoline. However, recent cuts in crude oil prices may not be fully reflected at the pump, because dealers may choose to bolster their profit margins rather than cut prices.

In London, meanwhile, sources said British National Oil Corp. planned to delay a cut in its North Sea crude until Friday. Norway's Statoil, another North Sea producer, said it would match any British cuts.

The British informants who declined to be identified said BNOC's decision was communicated to North Sea oil companies by telex Tuesday, the day price recommendations for 1983 were due to be announced.

Any BNOC changes will be retroactive to Feb. 1, the sources said.

Failed bank in 'excellent shape'

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee's largest bank-holding company has reopened the failed United American Bank of Knoxville after writing off $52 million in credit losses.

But UAB-Knoxville is now in "excellent shape," said Ronald Terry, the chairman of its new owner, First Tennessee National Corp.

UAB-Knoxville, which had been the flagship of World's Fair financier Jake Butcher's five-bank empire, was declared insolvent and closed by authorities Monday in the fourth-largest bank failure in U.S. history.

Tennessee Banking Commissioner Billy Adams said he closed the bank because of "large and unusual" loan losses.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. then approved a $70.5 million acquisition of the bank by First Tennessee Bank of Knoxville, a unit of the $4.1 billion First Tennessee National Corp. holding company of Memphis.

The bank was closed Monday while merger negotiations were under way. But First Tennessee reopened it at 9 a.m. EST Tuesday after a Knox County chancellor approved the takeover.

"We're just trying to run business as usual over there — according to First Tennessee standards," said Carol Coletta, a vice president of the holding company.

Unemployment figures tallied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department says 22 states, up from nine a year earlier, and nearly half of 210 metropolitan areas had double-digit unemployment in December.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, basing its findings on raw labor-force statistics from the 50 states and the District of Columbia, said that joblessness in Alabama, Arizona, Nevada and West Virginia soared by four percentage points or more from December 1981 to December 1982.

Those figures compared with a seasonally unadjusted national unemployment rate that jumped 2.2 percentage points — from 8.3 percent to 10.5 percent — over the same 12 months.

In issuing the monthly national overall unemployment rate based on a Census Bureau survey of 60,000 U.S. households, the government adjusts for such seasonal variations as weather and school closings. The seasonally adjusted overall jobless rate stood at 10.8 percent in December. It fell to 10.4 percent in January for the civilian workforce and 10.2 percent after military personnel were added, which the department did for the first time last month.

The figures released for the 50 states and the nation's capital on Tuesday are based on a more complex and time-consuming information gathering process. Thus, the figures for most states and all of the metropolitan areas are for December instead of January.

Shultz defends giveaway

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz defended a proposed $8.4 billion increase in U.S. contributions to the International Monetary Fund, calling it "an investment in international financial well-being."

But in a Tuesday appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Shultz was pressed by senators from both parties to explain why Congress should vote such a large amount of funds for foreign use when Americans were suffering from recession and cutbacks in domestic social programs.

"We have a stake in keeping other people healthy ... not just ourselves alone," Shultz argued at one point.

He denied suggestions that the funds amounted to a bail-out of private bankers who had made risky loans to Third World nations. But he did acknowledge that "many bad judgments were made" and that the IMF will help poor nations pay off their enormous international debts.

Mitchell budgets $300 million

THE WOODLANDS (SWN) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. reports that its capital budget for the fiscal year ending Jan. 31, 1984, will be $300 million.

Chairman and President George P. Mitchell said the budget provides for $204 million of energy-related additions, $90 million for real estate and $6 million for corporate.

In its energy operations, the company is planning capital outlays of about $155 million by the Exploration and Production Division and $49 million by the Transmission and Processing Division. Major allocations within the divisions include $85 million for oil and gas development and production, $61 million for exploration, $25 million for gas gathering and transmission, and $20 million for gas processing.

The majority of the Real Estate Division's $90 million budget is earmarked for The Woodlands, a 25,000-acre new community the company is developing near Houston.

Mitchell said the new year's budget is about $30 million below last year's actual expenditures, mainly because of reductions related to oil and gas activities. Overall, however, the company's oil and gas activities will be greater this year than last, he stated, because drilling and associated costs have fallen and because the company will act as operator in several partnerships that will provide funding for oil and gas operations.

Good news for Mid-Americans

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Energy-Business Editor

Mid-America Petroleum Inc. stockholders heard nothing but good news during the company's annual meeting in Midland Tuesday.

"We had an awfully good year last year," Jesse Edwards, president of the firm, told the investors. "We worked twice as hard as we did in '81 and it showed up in our bottom line.

"The only negative aspect of our business in the last 12 months is that we're raising a little bit less money from the public to participate in our drilling programs than we did in 1981.

"Believe it our not," Edwards quipped, "Fiscal 1982 was a very difficult year for small, independent oil companys. 1981," he continued, "without a doubt was probably one of the best years small, independent oil companies ever had. In fiscal 82 we far exceded what we did in '81."

Mid-America, Edwards pointed out, experienced this past fiscal year a 91 percent increase in gross reveneues. Net earnings increased 49 percent. Earnings per share increased 25 percent. Working capital from operations increased 94 percent. Total assets increased 64 percent. And total stock holder equity increased 81 percent.

THE FIRST QUARTER of the current fiscal year (ended in Novemeber) was better than last year's first quarter, Edwards said, and the second quarter (ending this month) also looks better than last year's.

"Now the next six months is going to be probably one of the toughest times that this comapny has to go through. But we know right now the next six months is going to be at least comparable to what we were doing last year," Edwards said.

Edwards attributed his company's great success to its toughness as a corportation. "When times get tough, we just get tough with it," He said.

"Tough times never last but tough people do," Edwards added, quoting a TV evangelist he had once seen.

"We take a pretty tough line at Mid-America. We've had to make some tough decisions in the last 18 months that we would have prefered not to make.

"IN JANUARY 1982 we decided 1982 wasn't going to be too good a year for the oil and gas business. We weren't sure how well we really were going to do. So, we made a pretty tough decsion. We decided to close down our exploration office in Denver, which really wasn't making us a profit at that time. And if it wasn't making it during 1981 we didn't think there was a prayer of making any profit out of that office in 1982.

"We also made a decison to reduce the work we were doing up in Oklahoma City. Although we had been making quite a bit of money in Oklahoma City, we thought we could handle our transactions in Oklahoma from our office here in Midland.

"In effect what we did Jan. 1, 1982 we cut our overhead by about $500,000. And, as it turned out, it was probably a pretty smart thing to do."

Recently the decsion was made to make still more cuts Edwards said.

"To keep that bottom line going up we've gotta do two things. One, we've got to get more money. And two, we've got to cut expenses."

EDWARDS SAID many investors, because they are concerned about drops in the price of oil, have shyed away from oil and gas deals. But most fail to realize the cost of drilling has dropped more than oil prices.

"We're still in a better profit position — for those people who know how to find gas and oil — we're still in a better postion to make more money than we did last year.

"The general public really doesn't look at it that way," Edwards explained. "They look at the headlines in the paper and everything is something negative about the oil business.

"I'll tell you what," he said. "We're a lot better off today than we were in 1979. We're a lot better off than we were in 1980. And, quite honestly, if you look at the bottom line, and the way this company has grown, we're a lot better off today than we've ever been."

MARKET CONDITIONS have created opportunities for Mid-America to grow, Edwards remarked.

"In the last two or three weeks we've had several companies talk to us about acquiring them in mergers. As recently as yesterday we had a talk with the president of a comapny that's stationed in California — it's a public company that doesn't have any debt, that has as many reserves as we have, and would like for us to acquire them for stock. That was just the first meeting. I don't know what will come of it.

"There's some excellent opportunites out there for companies to acquire other companies and we are this year going to be looking at some other companies on mergers and acquisitions. How much we're going to get involved in it will depend on what kind of deal we can make. We won't make a deal unless we can see we can make money for our share holders. We don't do business just for the fun of it, we do it for profit!"

Elaborating somewhat on Edwards remarks about investment opportunites, Michael Stilwell, a Mid-America senior vice president, with responsiblity for the marketing of investment programs, briefly outlined for the stock holders a new investment plan being developed by Mid-America.

There exists today, Stilwell told the share holders, a great many opportunites to buy at attractive prices established oil and gas production. Mid-America has a plan to take adavantage of these opprtunites. "We will be preparing and filing a totally new kind of (investment) program to buy producing properties only, as an adjunct to what we're doing in drilling programs."

THE OFFERING will be known as an oil and gas producing property or income fund, Stilwell said.

Of drilling funds, Stilwell said, Mid-America has $6.4 million "already put away" for this fiscal year.

"Plans are to go ahead with marketing of about another $11 million worth of drilling programs between now and August 31."

'Tough times never last, tough people do'

Two programs will be sold. The first is now being registered. The second to come out sometime before the end of the fiscal year.

A third program, Stilwell said, to be brought out during the current calendar year, sometime in the fall, is also planned.

Alvin Smith, Mid-America's exploration vice president, highlighted the company's drilling activity for the share holders. The company's Greensburg field project in St. Helena Parish, La. has been quite sucessful, Smith said.

SINCE THE DISCOVERY well was completed last September (potentialed at 612 barrels daily) it has produced over 210,000 barrels from the Lower Tuscaloosa. Four additional producers on the 6,600-acres held by Mid-America have produced over 500,000 barrels, or $15 million worth of oil.

It is estimated, Smith said, there are over 18 million barrels of reserves in place within the Greensburg field. Recoverable reserves are in the neighborhood of 12 million barrels.

Mid-America's Greensburg discovery yeilded the first oil ever produced in St. Helena Parish.

Smith said Mid-America has acquired additional acerage around the field, and with seismic surveys has identified nine "look-alike" propsects, which are being developed.

Also during the meeting, Edwards and Lewis Chandler, both of Dallas, and Gordon Knox, Midland, were re-elected as the board of directors. Edwards serves as president and chief executive officer; Chandler is secretary; and Knox is chairman of the board.

Mid-America Petroleum is incorporated in Colorado. The companies headquarters are in Dallas. Its exploration offices and most of its employees are in Midland.

Recovery under way in auto industry

DETROIT (AP) — A slow recovery still is under way in the auto industry, despite a 3.2 percent drop in domestic new car sales early this month, industry analysts say.

U.S. automakers said they sold 137,678 cars from Feb. 1-10 compared with 142,215 in year-ago period. The figures released Tuesday reflected the poorest daily selling rate in the period in 22 years, the analysts said.

"It's still poor sales (compared with normal industry times), but it's a heck of a lot better than ... (the low levels of) last June," said Arvid Jouppi, an independent analyst in Detroit.

"The numbers are kind of mediocre," said David Healy, analyst at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York.

The decline ended a string of 10 selling periods in which sales increased year-to-year. The last percentage drop in domestic sales was 0.4 percent in mid-October.

Jouppi interpreted the declines as resulting from rebate-inspired, unusually high sales rates in early February last year.

He estimated the annual selling rate for early February at about 5.9 million, a dip from January's 6 million rate but still in the realm of a recovery.

Mike Schrieber, sales manager at Bill Brown Ford in Livonia, Mich., said many customers now are shopping and will wait until later this month to make a decision. Feb. 28 is the cutoff date at the Big Three for buyers to order new cars and be guaranteed they will receive either 11.9 percent financing or rebates.

The daily sales rate of 15,298 reported Tuesday was the lowest since the 13,187 sold daily in early February 1961.

Of the Big Three, only Chrysler Corp. showed a gain, up 2.8 percent from a year ago. General Motors Corp. was off 5.2 percent and Ford Motor Co. was down 8.6 percent.

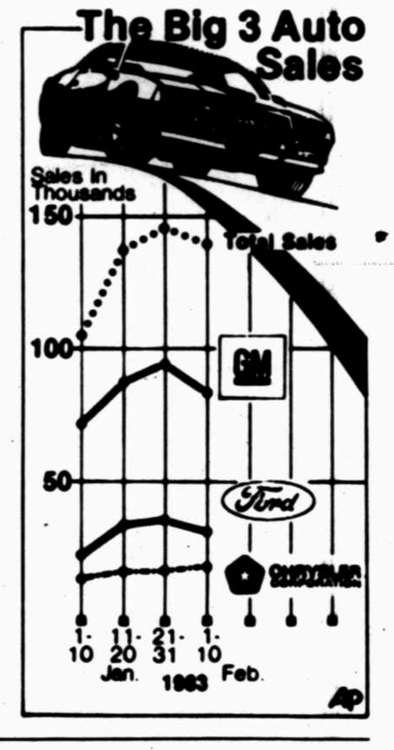

American Motors Corp., which reports only month-end sales, was estimated to be up 114.1 percent, while Volkswagen of America Inc. sales decreased 4.3 percent.

GM said it sold 83,544 cars early this month versus 88,131 last year.

Ford sold 30,925 compared with 33,824. Chrysler was at 16,846, up from 16,384.

AMC was estimated at 4,800 versus 2,242, and VW's count was 1,563 compared with 1,634.

For the year, automakers' sales are up 7.9 percent from 1982, or 550,571 compared with 510,353.

House committee OKs bankruptcy bill

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Democratic-controlled House Judiciary Committee approved a bill Tuesday to create 227 tenured judges for the nation's chaotic bankruptcy court system over a three-year period, but only after defeating efforts to allow President Reagan to appoint all the judges at one time.

On a 24-6 vote, the committee sent the bill to the full House, where spirited debate is expected. The bill, sponsored by committee chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., also would raise all bankruptcy judges' salaries from the current $63,600 to $69,500 and protect them from salary cuts, which are possible under current law.

The legislation became necessary last June 28 when the Supreme Court declared the nation's bankruptcy court system unconstitutional because it gave bankruptcy judges some powers reserved only for federal judges but did not give them tenure. Last Dec. 23, the court refused to grant a third delay on its June ruling to give Congress more time to revise the system, thus throwing it into limbo and leaving all subsequent court rulings subject to challenge.

Before the Supreme Court's ruling, there were 220 full-time judges who handled bankruptcy cases on a part-time basis. The House bill would replace the old system with the new, with some of the former bankruptcy judges possibly being appointed to the new, tenured positions.

With the courts facing more than 700,000 bankruptcy cases and an estimated 10,000 new ones each week, business and financial leaders repeatedly have called for quick action by Congress. Despite such appeals, Congress failed to enact legislation last session.

Before approving the bill Tuesday, the committee defeated an amendment by Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., R-N.Y., that would have allowed the president to appoint the full number of judges as soon as possible instead of staggering the 227 over a three-year period.

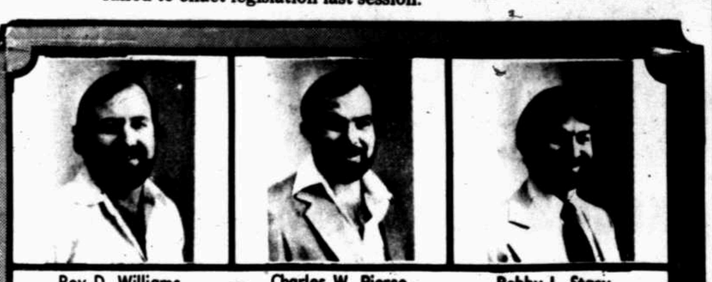

Arguing for the amendment, Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said that leaving the last one-third of the appointments to the winner of the 1984 presidential election would be "absolutely political. There's no other way to explain it."

Dropping crude prices threaten Venezuelan economy

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

CARACAS, Venezuela — Ever since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries failed to relieve a glutted world oil market last month, a formula for economic crisis has hung over this capital like a kind of suspended sentence.

Each day, Venezuela's leadership has watched the world's tottering oil prices with a kind of helpless, almost paralyzed suspense. And with growing urgency, the equation is repeated that could shape the country's upcoming elections, its payment of a huge foreign debt and its future as an OPEC member.

With each $1 that is clipped from the price of a barrel of oil this year, the formula says, Venezuela will lose $500 million — or 2 percent of its total government budget.

And with each decrease of 100,000 barrels from the 1.6 million barrels of oil Venezuela hopes to export per day, $1 billion will be lost from the revenue that funds this nation's social services, backs its industries and alone has raised it from poverty to the richest state in Latin America.

Despite a decade of lavish spending on development projects, Venezuela's economy remains deeply vulnerable to any shift in the price of oil. After four consecutive years of stalled economic growth, a price drop of even a dollar or two per barrel could deal a major shock to the country's industry and sharply curtail incomes and employment.

Few here now believe that Venezuela will survive this year without a painful reshaping of its state-dominated economy — or an equally difficult refinancing of some of the more than $30 billion it now owes foreign banks.

In the skyscrapers of Venezuela's oil industry, meanwhile, a new strategy of world oil marketing is taking shape that could distance the country from the commitments and politics of the oil cartel it helped found more than two decades ago.

Venezuela will not be the first OPEC nation to cut its oil prices, and would be among the last to abandon hopes of rebuilding the fractured organization, officials and diplomats here say. Publicly, officials still express hope that a new OPEC agreement will prevent a drop in oil prices.

But after years of failed lobbying for regular OPEC production quotas and long-term price schedules, Venezuelan officials are talking of a new emphasis on relations with non-OPEC producers and consuming nations — in particular Mexico, a new producer, and the United States, a major client for Latin American oil.

"OPEC can no longer play the role of a slim producer in the oil market," Energy and Mines Minister Humberto Calderon Berti said in an interview. "I think we have to begin talking to the non-OPEC producers and to the consumers."

Following OPEC's failed meeting in Geneva late last month, Calderon Berti already has met with Mexican oil officials and obtained a separate promise that Mexico will hold to its current oil production levels. Further Venezuelan and Mexican talks are planned for next month.

Extortion trial evidence ruled leagally seized

HOUSTON (AP) — A typewriter, envelopes, stamps, long distance telephone receipts and other items taken from a former Amoco Oil Co. pipefitter's apartment were legally seized and may be used at his extortion trial, a federal judge says.

U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald ruled Tuesday the evidence could be admitted at the upcoming trial of Alton S. Edwards.

Edwards is accused of sending 16 threatening letters in November to Amoco and Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union officials and a Houston Chronicle reporter.

The letters said the "People's Worker Reveloutionery (sic) Committee for Worker Justice" would sabotage refinery equipment unless Amoco hired back all workers fired since Jan. 1, 1982.

Edwards was fired from a $2,300-a-month job at Amoco in October. He was arrested a month later and charged in a seven-count indictment.

His attorney has asked that some of the charges against Edwards be consolidated. Ms. McDonald, who has not set a trial date, said she would rule later on that motion.

Nucorp Inc. agrees to cash sale

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bankrupt Nucorp Energy Inc. has agreed in principle to an all-cash sale of the assets in 12 of its oil field supply stores to Trico Industries Inc. of Gardena.

The purchase is subject to approval by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Herbert Katz, Nucorp's new trustee Barry Galt, and creditors of the financially impaired oil and gas company which has operated under Chapter 11 protection since last July.

Nucorp's creditors and lenders are being asked to approve the deal in advance, without knowing beforehand what the final price will be, but so far none has objected.

Gary Crosby: Bing was a cold father

Gary Crosby

NEW YORK (AP) — Bing Crosby was a cold father who made his son Gary feel inferior until a few years before the crooner died, when they talked "like one adult to another."

Gary Crosby, one of Crosby's four sons with his first wife, Dixie Lee, tells his story in a new book, "Going My Own Way."

Gary Crosby said he grew up in the late 1930s and 1940s with "too many restrictions" and a father who badgered him about his weight, staging a weekly weigh-in that ended in a lecture and a spanking if the scales tipped too much.

"He was not the kind of man who puts his arms around his sons and hugs them and kisses them and tells them how he really feels and why he is doing what he does," Gary Crosby wrote in an excerpt appearing in the March issue of Good Housekeeping.

It was only a couple of years before his father died that Gary Crosby "found out he really did love me."

One afternoon, the older Crosby "talked to me like one adult to another" and from then on, Gary Crosby said, "I wasn't afraid of him anymore and I was no longer angry."

The singer died in 1977 at age 74.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Erik Estrada, who stars as Officer Frank "Ponch" Poncherello on NBC's "CHiPs" series, made a romantic — and successful — Valentine's Day marriage proposal to model-actress Kathy Shower.

No date has been set for the wedding, Bill Barron, Estrada's press agent, said Tuesday.

Estrada and the 29-year-old Ms. Shower met last October when she was working on a "CHiPs" episode, Barron said.

"They didn't hit it off right away, but a month later they started dating and, as they say in the industry, they have been inseparable ever since," the publicist said.

Ms. Shower has two daughters from a prior marriage, said Barron, adding that her first husband is deceased.

Erik Estrada

It also will be the second marriage for Estrada, 33.

He secretly wed Joyce Miller, of Beverly Hills, in Las Vegas in November 1979. The two were separated seven months later after a stormy divorce battle that gained nationwide publicity.

Ms. Miller claimed Estrada had forced her to participate in drug abuse and "black magic" rituals, and had committed "life-threatening" acts against her.

Danny Kaye

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Danny Kaye has undergone more tests at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where he has been hospitalized for over a week after complaining of heart and back problems.

The 70-year-old entertainer was listed in good condition Tuesday, but no date has been set for his release, said hospital spokeswoman Virginia Bohannon.

"He's getting along very well," said Sonia Stathes, a spokeswoman for Kaye's publicist. "He's just resting and they are doing more tests on him."

Kaye was moved from an observation unit to a monitored room on Tuesday, Ms. Bohannon said.

Kaye was admitted to the hospital's intensive care unit on Feb. 7, complaining of irregular heart rhythm and back pains. Last week, his physician ruled out any type of surgery.

Kaye won a special Oscar in 1954, and an Emmy in 1964 for his long-running TV series, "The Danny Kaye Show." He starred in such films as "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," "Hans Christian Andersen" and "A Song is Born."

Lana Turner

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Lana Turner, Hollywood's "sweater girl" of the 1930s, says she doesn't go to many movies these days "because they contain so much nudity and obscenity."

The 62-year-old movie star says she didn't even see the 1981 remake of "The Postman Always Rings Twice," a role she originated, because she had heard it contained explicit sex scenes.

"I don't know why they take a classic story and mess it up," she said Monday during a news conference to promote her Columbia appearance in the touring play, "Murder Among Friends."

"I feel sorry for young actresses today," Miss Turner said. "They are called upon to appear nude and to use obscenity, and I think that's just terrible."

"When I was young and appearing in movies we didn't even have to say 'damn,'" she said.

Colorful floats move through a sea of revelers jamming the streets in downtown New Orleans Tuesday for the annual Mardi Gras celebration.

'The world's biggest freak show' ends in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The city slipped back into the real world today after weeks of partying climaxed by the day-long "fantasy" of Mardi Gras, which one reveler called "the world's biggest freak show."

Fat Tuesday came and went, followed by the somber 40-day season of Lent which begins today, Ash Wednesday.

The midnight meeting of Rex, ruler of Carnival, and Comus, Carnival's oldest organization, capped Mardi Gras, a festive day of parades and balls for an estimated 1 million visitors and residents.

Rains forecast for the day finally broke loose shortly before midnight. But the day's final parade, Comus, got started before the rains came.

Authorities reported two deaths in the festivities. A sailor died after being run over by a truck in one of the parades, and a tourist was shot to death during a hold-up.

The day began with "Zulu krewe" parades rolling through the streets just after dawn. Men dressed as "Zulus" threw rubber spears and gold coconuts.

Next came Rex, toasting the festival with pomp and champagne.

"You are what makes it all happen," said Rex, in a toast to the crowd. On any other day, he is businessman John G. Phillips.

"Hail, Rex," said Mayor Dutch Morial, wearing denim pants and a plaid western-style shirt in the reviewing stand. "This is your day. May you reign supremely on this, your day."

The French Quarter was the setting for some of the more bizarre sights, such as a fashion show by the local gay community, strippers on balconies and costumes that defied imagination.

A policeman pleaded with one bikini-clad woman to move from the ledge where she was balancing. "Take off your badge, baby, and I'll show you a good time," she replied.

"It's all fantasy," said a man in a black suit who identified himself only as Elwood. "This is the world's biggest freak show."

Besides the major parades, there were hundreds of flatbed trucks vivid in Mardi Gras ribbons and bows, neighborhood marching clubs in seemingly endless lines.

Burns testifies in Marx estate trial

Comedian speaks on behalf of Fleming

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A spry, wise-cracking George Burns called the companion of Groucho Marx a "charming lady" after testifying for her in a suit brought by the late comedian's estate — keeping the normally somber courtroom laughing.

The 87-year-old Burns spent barely 10 minutes at the trial Tuesday as the first in a series of celebrity witnesses expected to testify on behalf of Erin Fleming, according to her attorney, David Sabih.

Today's program includes a scheduled appearance by actress Sally Kellerman, and Sabih said Walter Matthau probably would testify later in the week.

Burns faced a crush of lights, cameras and reporters as he arrived at the tiny Santa Monica Superior Court room. He strode to the stand, took the oath and appeared startled when the court clerk said, "Please spell your name." He complied.

THEN SABIH asked him how long he had known Marx.

"Maybe between 30 and 50 years," said Burns, recalling the many lunches they shared at the Hillcrest Country Club, where comedians gathered for a legendary "round table" every week.

Burns remembered Miss Fleming as the companion of Marx's last years — "she was always there" — but said he saw her mainly at the crowded parties held frequently at the Marx home.

"Did you see love and affection between them at these parties," asked Sabih.

"There were 150 people there!" exclaimed Burns, drawing laughter in the packed courtroom.

"DID YOU enjoy yourself at these parties?" asked Sabih.

"Yes," said Burns.

Comedian George Burns is sworn in before testifying in a Santa Monica, Calif., court during the estate trial of the late Groucho Marx. The 87-year-old Burns said he knew very little about the relationshiop between Marx and Erin Fleming.

"How about Groucho?" the attorney asked.

"He never stopped singing," Burns said. "He was fine. He sang all night long."

The Bank of America is suing Miss Fleming for return of $400,000 in cash and additional gifts the bank claims Marx gave her under duress. Miss Fleming's attorney is seeking to show that all gifts she received were given willingly and that the comedian was lucid almost until the moment he died.

ATTORNEY J. Brin Schulman, who is representing the bank as executor of the Marx estate, appeared hesitant to question Burns, whose appearance brought smiles of recognition from the jury.

"I've never cross-examined God before," said Schulman. "I'm going to be careful."

Burns, who played the lead in the movie, "Oh, God," and its sequel, "Oh, God, Book II," quipped, "I'm only God when I get paid." Spectators laughed.

Schulman, who has sought to show Marx was senile in his last years and was forced by Miss Fleming to attend parties, asked Burns if he was sure he heard Marx sing at six or seven parties. Burns said he was certain.

"I know he wouldn't let me sing," Burns declared.

"DID HE sing and then go off to bed?" asked the attorney.

"Not that I noticed," said Burns, who recalled that he stayed until after midnight most times. "He sang a lot ... he sang all the songs Groucho loved to sing and played the guitar."

"How many songs did he sing?" asked Schulman.

"Oh, five, 10, 50, I don't know," said Burns. "I didn't sit there and count songs."

Burns, attired in a grey tweed sports jacket, grey slacks and burgundy tie, left the stand and headed for a waiting limousine amid more flashing lights.

ASKED BY A reporter what he thought of the relationship between Marx and Miss Fleming, who was 50 years Marx's junior, Burns said, "I think she was a charming lady and he was one of the great comedians."

"Mr. Burns," a reporter shouted. "Can a man of 80 find happiness with a woman of 30?"

"Not often," Burns shot back. "Only about twice a night."

The balance of Tuesday's session featured a parade of old Marx acquaintances recalling the years before he died in 1977 at the age of 86.

Nat Perrin, who was appointed temporary conservator when the Marx children began their court fight with Miss Fleming in 1977, said there was "an atmosphere of hysteria" between the feuding parties.

Woman waiting on police exam

CLEVELAND (AP) — A year ago, 62-year-old Esther Snyder signed up to take the written police exam — and passed with flying colors. Now she's awaiting the next step — the physical test.

"I'm in that age group that people think are too old to do anything," Ms. Snyder said. "Everything is against me as far as the police department is concerned."

Ms. Snyder scored 99.47 percent on the written test, 194th among the 2,378 applicants who took the test last March.

Although she's not sure whether she could pass the physical exam, Ms. Snyder said she wants to try.

Ms. Snyder said she understands the city has budget limitations, but she believes she was discriminated against because of her age and sex.

"They have desk jobs filled by men with their bellies hanging over their desks," she said.

But she admits it would be a "miracle" if she was hired.

The two-minute test requires an applicant to run 100 yards, climb a 6-foot fence, walk a 12-foot-long balance beam, run another 100 yards, and grip a dynamometer to show 75 pounds of strength in each hand. After a 30-second break, candidates must run 50 feet while dragging a 145-pound dummy, then place it on a 2-foot high platform.

Although a test date hasn't been scheduled, Ms. Snyder said she is preparing by doing calisthenics, squeezing rubber balls and jogging.

"I'm not a crusader," she said. "But I think there's something radically wrong with our society. I'm not trying to run down the Cleveland police department, but I want to strike a blow for all these older people, like myself, who are being wasted."

"I think I could hold my own in any type of situation. I live in the neighborhood with the second-highest crime rate in the city. I walk at all times by myself."

Cleveland has hired no new officers in the last year, according to personnel department records. The department recently laid off 30 cadets because of a city budget deficit.

"I haven't talked to anyone lately because it's plain that no one is being hired," she said. "From everything I've heard, read and seen, if I get on (the force), it will be a miracle."

Ms. Snyder said that after she and her husband were divorced, she raised the couple's four children alone. She has a master's degree in elementary education and taught for 13 years in Cleveland schools.

"I think I could hold my own in any type of situation," Ms. Snyder said. "I live in the neighborhood with the second-highest crime rate in the city. I walk at all times by myself."

Ms. Snyder lives on her savings and $267 a month that she gets from early Social Security benefits. Although she said she would like more money, her sense of self-worth is more important.

"I don't intend to ever get old-timers disease," she said. "I'm frustrated. I can always talk myself out of discouragement."

People ask wrong questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — People often ask the wrong questions when trying to judge their local police department's effectiveness and efficiency, a veteran police chief says.

David C. Couper, chief of police in Madison, Wis., says a low crime rate doesn't necessarily mean the police force is working well. And arrest rates, numbers of officers and how quickly police respond to each citizen's call aren't enough to evaluate them with either, he said.

"Citizens are currently asking the wrong questions about their police agencies," said Couper, a 23-year veteran of police work.

Instead, he said, citizens should focus on the quality of police leadership and department policies and operational arrangements.

"An aggressive tone (from the chief) could translate into physically and verbally abusive officers, insensitive to citizens' rights to due process," he said.

Couper's conclusions are contained in a 32-page pamphlet, "How to Rate Your Local Police."

U.N. secretary says threat of nuclear war increasing

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar says the threat of nuclear war appears to have been heightened but that there also is increasing awareness throughout the world that it would be a "conflict in which there will be no winners."

Hmongs find new life alien to traditional ways

EPHRATA, Pa. (AP) — The journey from a bamboo dwelling in northern Laos to an old stone farmhouse in northeastern Lancaster County can be a long, tiring venture.

No one knows that better than Pastor Xay Xue Yang and his young family.

The Yangs came to this country from Laos, and are part of a group of Southeast Asians known as the Hmong (pronounced mong).

Recently, thousands of Hmong settled in communities across the United States. Nearly 270 of them are living in the Coatesville, Ephrata and Reading areas of Pennsylvania.

Political strife and war forced tens of thousands of Hmong men, women and children beyond the Laotian borders in the mid-1970s.

Relocating in the United States has not been easy, but some things are becoming more familiar to them.

They are getting accustomed to cold winter temperatures and American food — although many still prefer rice to potatoes. Other adjustments have not come as quickly.

Most all of these Southeast Asians speak Hmong and Lao. Very few speak English. That in itself makes the transition to American life a hard one. But most difficult has been the change in culture and lifestyle.

THE SIMPLE, ALMOST primitive, Hmong way of life has little in common with life in modern, industrialized United States.

In Laos, the Hmong enjoyed a quiet, rural lifestyle in the northern mountains. Villages were small, usually consisting of 10 to 20 families. The men farmed, raising chickens and cows, as well as crops of corn, rice, and other vegetables.

As a people, the Hmong place a significant emphasis on maintaining strong family ties and a solid community life.

Children are expected to honor and respect their parents. Elders of the community are a group of people held in high regard by the Hmong.

While parents do not actually choose the child's spouse, the parents will refuse future assistance to the child if he opposes them and marries someone unacceptable.

The groom is required to pay a bride price once a marriage is agreed upon by both families.Most often this takes the form of personal gifts such as silver, jewelry or clothing. Likewise, a dowry is given to the groom.

Unlike the custom in this country, the Hmong bride traditionally keeps her maiden name, with the knowledge that her children will take her husband's family name.

FORMAL EDUCATION, according to Hmong tradition, was a luxury reserved for boys. Pastor Yang explained through Sy Yang, a Hmong interpreter who is no relation to him, that girls did not attend Laotian school since "they were to prepare themselves for lives involving the family."

Cooking, sewing and child rearing were concerns for the girls.

The peaceful Hmong lifestyle underwent drastic changes in the 1960s, and especially in the '70s.

Lactose intolerance victims lack enzyme

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you tell me what is meant by lactose intolerance? I think I have it and it probably won't make me feel any better, but I'd like an explanation of what it is. — Thelma, Greensboro, N.C.

Dear Thelma: Lactose is milk sugar, and people with lactose intolerance are prone to diarrhea, abdominal discomfort, and gas after drinking milk or consuming milk products, because they do not have adequate amounts of the enzyme that breaks down milk sugar.

Dear Dr. Solomon: At first I learned all about sodium. Then when I started taking water pills, I learned all about potassium. Now my doctor says he wants to see me from time to time so he can check my magnesium. I'm beginning to feel like a walking chemistry set. Is there any point to all this? — Benjie, Valparaiso, Ind.

Dear Benjie: As you indicate in your letter, the use of diuretics may result in a low potassium level, and many patients on diuretics are therefore required to take a potassium supplement. Moreover, low magnesium levels may be associated with the low potassium levels.

Dr. James C. Boyd, of the University of Virginia School of Medicine in Charlottesville, reports on a study of 185 patients in whom potassium and magnesium were measured at the same time. Of almost 500 serum samples, about 40 percent of those with low potassium levels also had low magnesium levels.

The bottom line is that low magnesium levels may increase the risk of cardiac arrhythmias, and your physician is acting properly in monitoring your condition.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was in college, one of my classmates had to drop out of school because she had lost a lot of weight. Looking back, I realize that she must have had anorexia. But there were other girls in school who would stuff themselves with food and then vomit it up so that they wouldn't gain any weight. Yet no one seemed to take any notice of them. It would seem to me that they needed help too, and I would like your opinion. — Margaret, White Plains, N.Y.

Dear Margaret: Patients with bulimia (binge eating followed by self-induced vomiting or laxative abuse) have a fear of becoming fat, and they do need help. Yet while severe weight loss can easily be detected, bulimic individuals largely go unnoticed because they generally maintain a normal body weight and appearance. Bulimic patients are also different from anorexics in that they are aware that they have an eating disorder and are worried about their loss of control over how much and what they eat.

It would be difficult for a physician to detect bulimia in a patient if the patient sought to hide the fact, which many do because of guilt and shame over their behavior.

For Charles, Norfolk, Va.: A study by Dr. Johanna T. Dwyer, director of the Frances Stern Nutrition Center, Tufts-New England Medical Center Hospital, indicates that children who adhere to a well-planned vegetarian diet can receive an adequate level of nutrition.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Columbia Pictures chairman decides not to resign, surprising analysts

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Columbia Pictures Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Frank Price has changed his mind: He will not resign his position to become an independent producer, as he announced last week.

His change of heart earlier this week provided the latest jolt in a series of executive-level shake-ups at five of Hollywood's major motion-picture studios, repercussions of which have reverberated throughout the industry in the last eight weeks.

"While I found the idea of independent-producer status to be initially appealing, further analysis led me to conclude that I like my present role too much to leave it," Price explained in a formal announcement Monday.

Last week, he maintained in an interview with the Los Angeles Times that "I've been at Columbia for five years...I intended to do the job for three years...This decision is overdue. I asked myself, 'Why keep going on?' This (heading an independent production company) was the next exciting thing I wanted to do, and it's hard to pick a better time" (Price was referring to the studio's recent successes with "Tootsie" and "Gandhi").

On the other hand, it was precisely the timing of Price's decision that surprised the film community, coming as it did on top of Columbia's hit pictures.

Francis T. Vincent Jr., president and chief executive of Columbia Pictures Industries Inc. expressed pleasure at Price's latest decision.

"I am happy Frank has decided to continue in his present position, where he has been so successful," Vincent stated in Monday's press release. "He and I have worked well together since 1978, and I look forward to our making Columbia even more successful in the future." Vincent also indicated that Columbia president Guy McElwaine, who was to become studio chief in the event Price departed, will remain in his present post.

Vincent said that Price "altered his decision before any negotiations had taken place on possible independent-producer arrangements."

Avoiding child deaths by car safety seat proponents' goal

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

If the Texas Senate gets its way, a new law this fall could help eliminate the leading cause of death for children under 5 years old.

The killer is not a disease; it's a deadly machine — the car. In 1980, 5,418 Texas children were killed or injured while riding in a car, according to State Sen. Carl A. Parker of Port Arthur.

In December 1982, the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) urged 31 governors to include in their 1983 legislative sessions arequirement for use of child safety seats to protect young children. Since that time, Nebraska and New Mexico have passed the legislation.

While 23 states have passed some type of child passenger protection laws, Texas is among those which have not. Parker has introduced Senate Bill 6, requiring drivers to safely secure child passengers in federally approved safety seats. The bill unanimously passed in the Senate. Today, the legislation, under the title House Bill 3, will be introduced to the House through the Transportation Committee. The bill is sponsored by State Rep. Anita Hill.

In January, the NTSB met in Dallas for the first of several regional hearings throughout the country on child passenger safety. Midlander Sharon Kohout was asked to speak. Ms. Kohout co-founded Midland's "Kids 'N' Cars Loan-a-Seat" volunteer program. She was invited to the day-long conference because Midland has the largest volunteer safety seat program in the state.

Akins carries Midland side to other mayors

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

When G. Thane Akins attends the U.S. Conference of Mayors, he sometimes stands as a lone voice while Midland looks like it's marching to a different drummer.

As a member of the Energy and Environmental Committee, Akins tells the other 50 members from across the country the petroleum industry's side of the story amid calls for continued government regulation of the industry.

And despite the Democratic majority of that group, Midland's mayor feels he's making some headway.

About the conference's mid-winter session held at the end of January in Washington, D.C., Akins said, "They've been very tolerant of me. The resolutions that have come out of this committee for the past several years have been much more reasonable, more toward the conservative side, than (those from) other committees."

While Akins explained the need for decontrol of natural gas and continuing "take-or-pay" contracts to producers, other mayors appeared more concerned about the environment and Clean Air Act, he said.

Staff Photo by Cody Bell

"What I heard was a negative fear that decontrol would make prices go up more. I said I'd heard the same thing when they decontrolled oil prices and that gas prices would be over $2 a gallon. Now it's dropped to almost $1."

— Mayor G. Thane Akins

MIDLAND'S CHAIR on the conference's Energy and Environmental Committee first was filled by his predecessor, Ernest Angelo Jr., a petroleum engineer. "When Ernest first got on the Energy Committee, he educated people about the facts. That's why I continue to be interested in it."

This year, committee members — who ranged from mayors of Torrance, Calif., to Cincinnati to White Plains, N.Y. — couldn't understand the industry's push for decontrol.

"What I heard was a negative fear that decontrol would make prices go up more. I said I'd heard the same thing when they decontrolled oil prices and that gas prices would be over $2 a gallon. Now it's dropped to almost $1. The market is the best to determine what prices ought to be."

Members also blamed higher prices and the soft market on "take-or-pay" contracts, but Akins defended it. "If you go out and drill a well and you have no assurance no one will take that gas, there's no reason to drill the well," he said.

Most of the other cities were concerned about the Clean Air Act and the fact this was the deadline for many on cleaning up their environment.

Of the government speakers they heard, Akins was impressed with two from the Environmental Protection Agency. John Hernandez, deputy administrator, "seems to be very knowledgeable about industry concerns." And Kathleen Bennett, who works for Hernandez, "really knew her business. She's one of the most reasonable people I've run into with the EPA. She took a pragmatic view that a balance has to be struck between concerns for clean air and at the same time not stifle industries."

THE CONFERENCE'S first speaker wasn't Akins' favorite, though. "It started with Tip O'Neill and went uphill from there," he joked about the Democratic Speaker of the House.

"He spent the whole time talking about how terrible the national deficit was and why (President) Reagan should be blamed for it," said the mayor. "Why, it's Congress who passes the laws."

In sharing problems with other mayors, Akins said Coleman Young of Detroit was more concerned about jobs. "He wants to do something on an emergency basis for people out of work. But he also wants to see some kind of jobs program to put people back to work."

A majority of mayors weren't optimistic about the economic outlook for 1983. "They want to see the tax cut for this year repealed and the money used for a jobs program," Akins recalled. "And they want to see the Community Development Block Grant program and Revenue Sharing retained. They're also concerned about urban infrastructure and getting more federal grants for rebuilding it."

"Urban infrastructure" refers to the internal workings of a city, such as sewer and water lines and streets.

"SO MANY CITIES over the years have done nothing to maintain these systems. They can't do it with taxes and many don't have the borrowing power. The only way they see is to get the federal government to step in and do it."

Akins objected to that idea and told the mayors "why should the taxpayers in Midland help Albany, N.Y., pay for its sewer system. One of the mayors on the Energy Committee said she'd been trying for years to get a grant to rebuild her city's sewage treatment plant. I asked why she didn't issue revenue bonds and get it done quicker and cheaper. Her answer was that everybody else gets federal money."

In the late 1970s, Midland City Council issued revenue bonds and proceeded with enlarging its sewage treatment plant after engineers estimated the cost for that procedure or for trying to get a portion paid by the federal government. Those figures showed the city would be putting out the same amount of money either route, but trying for a federal grant would mean about 10 years of waiting.

"This idea is in the minority," said Akins of the philosophy to do major projects without federal help.

One presentation that dealt with waste management projects that generate energy caught the mayor's eye.

Already in use at Tuscaloosa, Ala., Akron, Ohio, and Trenton, N.J., Akins said, "We're probably not at that point yet, but it's something I want to keep up with. I think all cities will come to that point of having to do it this way.

"We're out of step with the U.S. Conference of Mayors and the National League of Cities," Akins said of Midland. "We don't operate and think the same way they do."

UTPB status bill surprises Parrish

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A bill "dropped" into the State Legislature by an Odessa representative pertaining to four-year status for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin fell into the laps of surprised presidents of Midland College and UTPB, MC trustees were told during a meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Trustees also heard a report on the increase in student enrollment, toured the new housing facility on campus and approved administrative reappointments during the meeting.

House Bill 598 was introduced by State Representative Jay Gibson Feb. 2. The bill, which would allow the University of Texas System Board of Regents, with the approval of the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board, to establish a four-year undergraduate program at UTPB, was an unwelcome surprise, according to Dr. Jess H. Parrish, MC president.

"Dr. (Donald) Rippey (UTPB acting president) assured me it had been dropped in without their (administrative) knowledge," Parrish said, adding it appeared to be "primarily a Friends of UTPB bill."

Friends of UTPB is a citizens group advocating four-year status for the university, which enrolls only junior, senior and graduate students. In October, regents denied a request for four-year status and instead proposed a Permian Area Cooperative Academic Plan to develop baccalaureate degree programs involving UTPB and the three area community colleges.

Parrish's feathers apparently were ruffled as he dropped a few opinions of his own. "I gave some indications that it was questionable if our participation in PACAP would continue (if the main goal was actually to establish a four-year degree at UTPB)."

The Coordinating Board has "shown vehement opposition" to four-year status and UT regents have "gone out of their way" to improve cooperation between UTPB and the three area community colleges, he said.

Trustees moved to continue with PACAP and to go on record in opposition to four-year status for UTPB based on the harm it could bring to the cooperative effort between the four campuses as well as the enrollments at the community colleges.

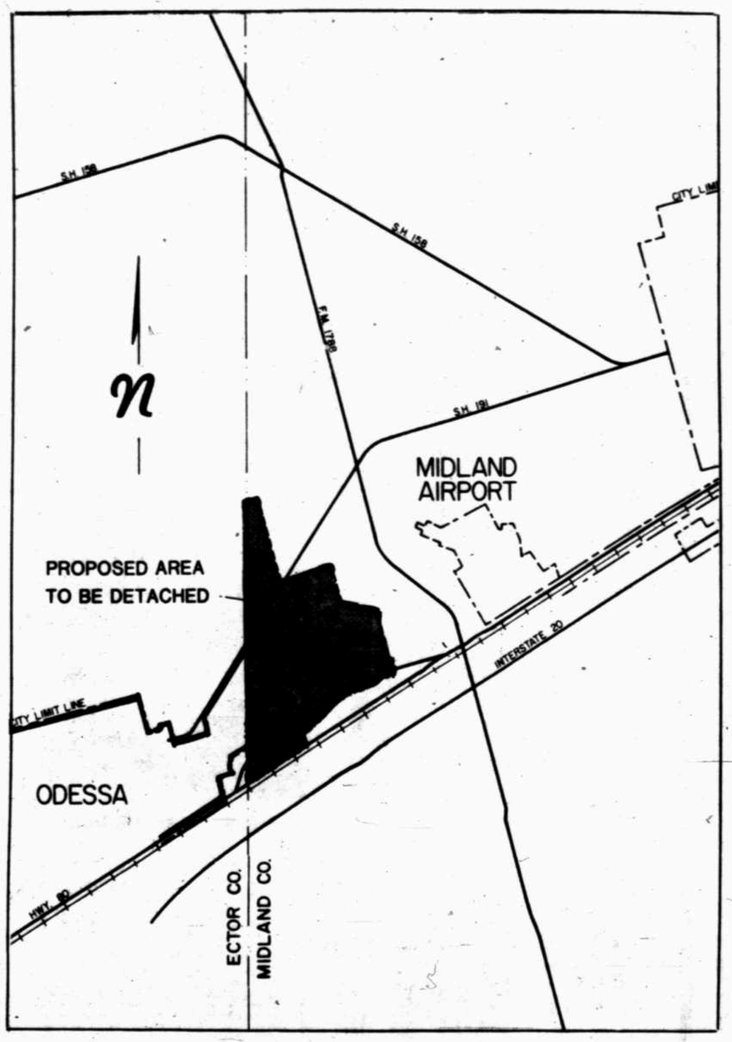

Enrollment at MC, however, has not been jeopardized this spring. Trustees were informed that the 3,240 students who enrolled at the beginning of the semester represented an 18 to 19 percent increase over spring 1982.

Reports indicated contact hours, on which funding is based, were 40 percent higher in vocational-technical areas and 22 percent higher in academic areas, representing an overall increase of 22 percent in contact hours.

In other action, board members toured the newly constructed dormitory for athletic and academic scholarship students. The facility, which will house 40 students, consists of 10 units and an apartment for housing supervisor Reggie Franklin.

The units include four bedrooms, two baths and a joint kitchen and living area. Students are expected to move in March 1.

Residents of an area in Midland County are seeking detachment from the Midland Independent School District. The area is shown above in the red shaded area.

County residents wish school district change

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Residents of an area on the boundary of Midland and Ector counties took the first step across the line by presenting a petition asking for detachment from Midland Independent School District and annexation to Ector County Independent School District during a meeting of the ECISD Board of Trustees Tuesday.

That step could increase the budget for ECISD by more than $100,000 annually, an attorney representing the residents said.

Annual revenues from the addition would be about $130,000 for ECISD, according to Richard Buck, attorney with Shafer, Gilliland, Davis, McCollum & Ashley, Inc., who is representing the residents.

"It's only fair," Buck said. "As they (MISD) lose revenues, they lose a portion of bond indebtedness."

The actual terms of bond indebtedness would be determined through a joint meeting of both boards, Buck suggested.

If the petition, signed by a 67 percent majority of the qualified voters in the area, is approved at the next board meeting, residents plan to approach the Ector County Commissioners Court for a hearing.

The families reside just east of the county line and north of U.S. Highway 80, Buck said. "They are requesting that some steps be taken so they will have some assurance their children will attend Odessa schools.

"The primary issue is the kids involved and where they are going to be educated," he said later in response to a question pertaining to several Midlanders' financial investments in the property. "The whole issue right there is the corporation itself is not going to live out there. It's going to be the families."

Sixty-seven of the 80 identified students in the area are attending Odessa schools although they reside in the Midland school district and Midland County, said Scott Sharp, attorney for HBF Corporation, developers of Mision Estates, one community involved in the petition.

Twelve ECISD employees also reside in the area, according to Nancy Sims, a resident of Ridgewood and an ECISD teacher.

Mision Estates, along with the Ridgewood community, Odessa Country Club and a mobile home community, make up the 6.5 square-mile area seeking annexation into ECISD.

While the area is within Midland County and MISD boundaries, parts of Mision Estates have been annexed into the Odessa city limits.

Residents who addressed the board pointed out they work, shop and have doctors in Odessa. Until April 1982, they also sent their children to schools in Odessa on a transfer basis at no cost.

Last spring, due to the potential growth of ECISD, trustees announced tuition amounting to $1,260 per child would be charged for transferring non-district students into the Odessa public schools, said Jean Berridge, a three-year resident of Ridgewood.

Mrs. Berridge said she approached MISD trustees last summer about contracting the students with ECISD.

Officer, store subject of suit

'Intentional' injury of man charged

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A $1.2 million lawsuit was filed today against the M-System Food Stores and suspended Midland police officer Lonnie Payne in connection with last week's alleged beating of a 20-year-old shoplifting suspect.

The suit charges Payne with "intentionally and knowingly" injuring Odessan George Benavidez by striking, choking and kicking him after Payne handcuffed Benavidez during a shoplifting arrest at the M-System Food Store at A Street and Scharbauer Drive Feb. 8.

The store is named as co-defendant in the suit because "all of said actions were done in the scope of Defendant Lonnie Payne's employment with Defendant M-System Food Stores."

Payne was suspended from the police force late last week pending the outcome of a grand jury investigation into a brutality complaint lodged with Texas Rangers and the Midland County Sheriff's Department, according to Chief of Police Wayne Gideon. The internal affairs division of the police department is also investigating the complaint. The grand jury is expected to hear the case today.

Payne, 32, has been with the police department since July 1980 and also was employed as a part-time security guard for the store.

City Personnel Director David Hunter today said he has been advised by the city's legal department that whether Payne is being paid while under suspension may or may not be a matter of public information.

Hunter also said The Midland Reporter-Telegram would have to "write a letter" to the city requesting an official opinion on that issue. Gideon could not be reached for comment.

Payne, meanhwile, claimed in a "statement of facts" to authorities that during the course of the arrest:

"(Benavidez) hit officer Payne in the face with his fist, causing officer Payne to fall to the ground. A scuffle ensued. (Benavidez) resisted arrest and continued to fight the officer, causing bodily injury to the officer, until the officer successfully subdued (Benavidez)."

Payne did not file resisting arrest or assault on a peace officer charges against Benavidez, however. According to Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, Benavidez instead was charged with robbery and released on a $25,000 personal recognizance bond. The case involves the alleged attempted theft of $32 worth of meat.

Benavidez was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital for head, eye, back and neck injuries the day of his arrest. He was placed in jail and a notation on the booking sheet said he was "to be checked every half-hour." A police photograph shows the upper lid of his right eye swollen to about the size of a golf ball.

The suit, filed this morning in 142nd State District Court by the Midland law firm of Torres and Shackelford, seeks a total of $1,285,000 for "severe and disabling injuries," medical expenses, lost wages, pain, mental anguish and punitive damages.

Payne could not be reached for comment and store officials declined comment because they had not seen a copy of the suit.

Sharp motion opposed

KERMIT (AP) — The state's attempt to strengthen a capital murder case through a re-indictment of Michael Eugene Sharp in the June 11, 1982, stabbing death of a Kermit woman has brought a protest from Sharp's attorney.

Glen Williamson, appointed last month to represent Sharp, filed a motion seeking dismissal of the latest indictment on grounds it violates the state's Speedy Trial Act.

Williamson, an Andrews lawyer, noted that the Winkler County grand jury action last Nov. 24 came more than 120 days after the offense.

District Judge James Clack set a pre-trial hearing on the motion for 9 a.m. Friday.

Sharp, 28, is accused of killing Brenda Kay Broadway after abducting her and her two daughters from a Kermit car wash.

The former toolpusher was convicted in Lubbock on Nov. 17 and sentenced to life in prison for the murder of Christie Elms, 8, Ms. Broadway's daughter. The bodies of the two were found in shallow graves near the Winkler-Ector County line.

Ms. Broadway's other daughter, Selena Kay Elms, 15, testified at Sharp's trial that she freed herself after being bound, but that as she fled she saw Sharp stabbing her mother.

"He grabbed my mother and pulled her down and he stabbed her, from what I saw, two or three times," Miss Elms told the Lubbock jurors.

Aircraft owner files second suit asking plane replacement

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Milton Tankersley Jr., who has rejected an insurance company's offer to pay for repairing his damaged aircraft, which lost power and crash-landed on a northeast Midland street near noon last May 2, has filed a second suit in his effort to get replacement value of the twin-engine aircraft.

Tankersley alleges that the airplane's engines malfunctioned shortly after takeoff from Midland Air Park after an inexperienced refueler at Basin Aviation there had pumped jet fuel — kerosene — rather than 100 octane aviation gasoline into the its fuel tanks. No one was injured in the landing, but the aircraft was heavily damaged.

The first suit, filed in July in Midland's 238th State District Court, has been dismissed. In that suit, Tankersley sought $443,000 to replace the aircraft, a Piper Navajo Chieftain piloted by Fred Michna, and $30,000 to compensate him for loss of the craft's use.

In the latest suit, filed in Midland's 142nd State District Court, Tankersley is alleging deceptive acts by the insurance companies, which are Basin's co-defendants.

He is asking for $527,911 in damages to replace the craft, which an insurance company claims is repairable; $5,615.60 in medical expenses which he incurred, he claims, as a result of a "severe attack of angina pectoris" — chest pains — which was brought about by anxiety over the incident; $100,000 in additional damages and up to $40,000 for his attorneys, Darrell F. Smith and Harris E. Kerr.

Court records indicate that co-defendant United States Fire Insurance Co. of Austin offered Tankersley $164,250 to repair the craft's damaged fuselage, wings, propellers, surface controls and fuel cells and would pay for costs to repair the engines.

In rejecting the settlement, Tankersley says in the suit's petition that "the repaired aircraft would have no value whatsoever, as no person or company would have confidence in the repairs...(and) no person or company would be willing to purchase the aircraft for substantially more than scrap or salvage."

Tankersley says the airplane had only 150 flight hours since he purchased it.

Co-defendants in the suit are Basin, U.S. Fire Insurance Co., the Dallas Love Field-based Aviation Office of America, Associated Aviation Underwriters of Dallas, Gulf States Insurance Agency of Fort Worth and Gulf States agent Ron White, who wrote the policy.

Basin allegedly violated provisions of the Texas Business and Commerce Code by holding "itself out as providing first-class service" but hired an "unskilled" refueler, the petition says. Furthermore, Tankersley's petition says Basin and Associated Aviation Underwriters purportedly reached a settlement but "never intended to abide by the terms" of the agreement.

Tankersley also contends the insurance company claimed the aircraft insurance was not in force at time of the crash due to certain stipulations which Tankersley claims were deceptive. But the company agreed to pay for the aircraft's repair cost, an offer Tankersley rejected.

Safety seats could cut child deaths

"They (NTSB) picked Texas for their first hearing because between 1978 and 1981 Texas had the largest number of child (passenger) fatalities," Ms. Kohout said, adding that these fatalities were among children up to 4 years old.

According to Patricia A. Goldman, vice chairman of the NTSB and coordinator of the Dallas hearing, purpose of the session was to increase public awareness.

"We focused on two areas. First, identification of the problem — needless death and injuries of young children in motor vehicle crashes — and second, actions which can be effective in reducing these deaths and injuries," Ms. Goldman said at the hearing.

Six panels and testimonies from parents whose children died in accidents were on the agenda, as well as addresses by Parker and Ms. Hill.

Ms. Kohout said it "was a moving experience. The testimonies from the parents were emotional."

According to Ms. Kohout, one Texas woman, who testified in Dallas and in Austin, brought her 4-year-old daughter to the hearing.

"The child's hand is now a hook. Her face was disfigured, scarred. She had been riding in the front seat with her parents and brother. There was an accident. She went through the windshield. Her brother was killed. Two car seats were in the back seat."

Ms. Kohout, a mother of three children, hopes the Texas Legislature will pass the car safety seat bill.

According to Parker's bill, "the child passenger safety seat system means an infant or child passenger restraint system that meets the federal standards for crash-tested restraint systems as set by the National Highway Safety Administration."

The law would require Texas residents to secure — in an approved child safety seat system — children in a moving vehicle. Parker proposed a fine of "not less than $25 nor more than $50" be enforced. But, if a person acquires a safety seat within 10 days, the court will dismiss the charge.

According to an NTSB investigation, since Tennessee enacted a safety seat program in 1978, usage of the seats has tripled and fatalities of children in the affected age group have been cut by 50 percent.

"Given the magnitude of the child passenger safety problem and the number of fatalities and injuries that are being incurred by children not protected by child safety seats in crashes, the Safety Board strongly encourages and supports the adoption of public policies and programs which have been demonstrated to be effective in reducing these tragic losses," the NTSB wrote to governors in states without safety seat laws.

Grand jury may study possible fee theft

From Staff and Wire Reports

ODESSA — The Ector County grand jury probably will study the results of a nine-month investigation by the Texas Rangers into the possible embezzlement of thousands of dollars in state motor vehicle registration fees, according to Ector County District Attorney Mike Holmes.

Rangers Charlie Havrda of Midland and Joe Coleman of Pecos conducted the probe, and Havrda said he submitted his final criminal investigation report to Holmes on Monday.

"The criminal aspect of the case is over. We're ready to go to court," Havrda said.

Neither Havrda nor Holmes would say how many people were named in the report, but they said everyone mentioned has worked in the Ector County tax assessor-collector's office.

Holmes said Monday the report could lead to the indictment of one person for second-degree felony theft and more than one third-degree felony indictment. "Several indictments are being considered," Holmes said.

A second-degree felony conviction in Texas carries a prison sentence of two to 20 years and as much as a $10,000 fine. Third-degree felony convictions have sentences of two to 10 years and a maximum $5,000 fine.

Malfunctioning light causes landing problems

A malfunctioning landing gear signal light forced a commercial airliner carrying 89 people to circle Midland Regional Airport and spend fuel for a brief time before landing safely at about 9:15 a.m. today.

Victor White, Midland's aviation director, said the pilot of Muse Air Flight 802, carrying 84 passengers and five crew persons from Dallas Love Field to Midland, "was receiving what they call an unsafe landing gear indication" while making his final approach.

White said airport officials anticipated an emergency landing after the pilot informed the control tower that one of three green signal lights — indicators that the landing gear is down and locked — failed to light.

White said the plane circled to burn off fuel and allow fire trucks and ambulances time to move into position beside the runway.

He said control tower workers used binoculars to inspect the plane's landing gear when it made a low-level pass. He said they informed the pilot that the gear appeared to be down and locked and the plane proceeded to land safely.

Muse Air ground employees inserted pins into the gear on the DC-9 "Super 80" after landing to ensure its wheels would not collapse.

White said air traffic was not disrupted during the incident.

Obituaries today may be found on Page 8A.

ECISD receives district change petition

When it was denied, she requested a year extension on paying the tuition from Ector school trustees so she and others in the affected community could study alternatives.

"The only permanent solution is changing the boundaries," she said.

Under the Texas Education Code, areas meeting specific standards may be annexed into another district without approval of the trustees of the school district from which the land is being taken, Sharp said.

The land must be contiguous to existing school district boundaries, a ratio must be maintained between the size of the districts, a majority of the qualified voters in the area must sign a petition and the area to be annexed must be less than nine square miles in size.

Following cooperation from Odessa Country Club, the common boundary criteria were met.

MISD presently contains 900 square miles including 134 square miles in the Greenwood Independent School District, said Robert Wilson, a Ridgewood resident. ECISD has 906 square miles.

Wild River Canyon break-in reported

Damage estimated at $4,000 was reported at Wild River Canyon after someone scaled a chain link fence and broke into several buildings at the amusement park sometime in the past two weeks.

Twelve video arcade game machines were broken into and seven doors were damaged in the break-in, but the only item apparently taken was a $100 stereo amplifier.

A gold ring and a TV set worth a total of $1,100 were reported taken from the Lurie Williams residence, 606 E. Broadway, sometime in the past four days. There was no sign of forced entry, according to police.

And Jessie Johnson of 1121 E. Estes told officers several guns and $160 in cash were stolen in a burglary at his residence sometime Wednesday. Entry was made through a rear door.

Alabama man sues Seminole company

A Tuscaloosa, Ala., man who claims he was seriously injured in a car-truck accident in Andrews July 31, 1982, has filed a $1.5 million negligence suit in federal court in Midland against Cardinal Oil Well Service Co. of Seminole.

The plaintiff, John Zanthos, alleges he was injured when a Cardinal-owned pickup truck driven by Nolan Austin of Andrews pulled from a private driveway and into the path of a subcompact car in which he was a passenger and which was being operated by Sherman Lollar.

The petition says an award of $1.5 million in damages would "reasonably compensate" Zanthos for his suffering, anguish and loss of earning power.

Representing Zanthos in the suit is Willie Schmerler of the Warren Burnett law firm in Odessa.

'Dipping snuff' increasingly popular with teens

COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Simmons is 15 years old.

He started using snuff when he was in the eighth grade. He says he has a 10-year-old brother "who tried dipping snuff once, but got sick" and hasn't used it since.

An isolated case, you say?

Guess again.

The use of chewing tobacco and snuff by high school and college students has evolved from a fad to a practice that is apparently here to stay.

It would seem that a growing number of young people, from their early teens on up, have taken a definite liking to chewing tobacco and snuff.

Indeed, the Smokeless Tobacco Council, a trade arm of the industry, says sales of smokeless tobacco in the 1970s increased by about 30 percent. Although industry representatives claim their companies market products intended strictly for consumption by those over the age of 18, they admit the youthful chewers have been at least partially responsible for the growth in sales.

So pervasive has chewing tobacco and snuff become, in fact, that there is now shredded bubble gum packaged in chewing tobacco-like pouches and beef nerky cut to fit into snufflike cans — just in case youngsters want to pretend they are gnawing on the real thing.

Chewing tobacco has become increasingly popular among teens as an alternative to smoking cigarettes for health reasons. Some members of the medical profession claim chewing tobacco may cause oral cancer, and may be just as harmful to one's health.

A central reason seems to be that negative publicity about the health hazards involved with smoking convinced people that chewing tobacco is not dangerous.

The American Cancer Society, however, supported by some dental and medical authorities, insists that snuff and chewing tobacco aren't safe, and sometimes lead to oral cancer. The tobacco industry, on the other hand, counters that no conclusive evidence has ever been produced to prove this.

Another possible explanation for the upswing in the popularity of chewing tobacco is that, since the early 1970s, tobacco manufacturers have hired sports heroes with whom many young men identify to advertise the products in TV commercials and print ads.

In the same vein, the theory continues that media coverage of big-league athletes, especially baseball players who are often photographed with huge wads of chewing tobacco stuck in their cheeks, has served to amplify this.

There is also a belief that growing interest in activities like jogging, hiking, camping and fishing, combined with the perception of chewing as a hedge against smoking, has convinced many to use chewing tobacco or snuff while recreating in the great outdoors.

Hand-in-hand with this goes the Western craze — complete with Stetsons, cowboy boots and cowpokes who chew.

And, last but hardly least, is peer pressure — young people using chewing tobacco or snuff because their circle of friends do.

THE BUTCHER

Smoked turkey wings make delicious meal

Add cheese soup for tasty touch

By MERLE ELLIS

Smoked poultry is very big these days and I can understand why. It's delicious! But it can also be a little expensive. One of the markets in my area had quite a variety of smoked birds in the meat case last week. There were smoked chickens at $1.79 a pound; smoked poussin (That's a very small chicken.) at $2.99 a pound; smoked quail, weighing in at a hefty 3 ounces, at $2.99 each; smoked turkeys at $1.59 a pound. They all looked delicious and my mind did a disco with thoughts of what to do with them.

Then I saw them! Turkey wings, "on special" for 29 cents a pound! At that price I had to do something with them. "Give me four of those turkey wings," I said, "I'm going to smoke 'em."

The butcher rolled his eyes, flicked an imaginary cigar – Groucho Marx's style – and said, "These will never fit in your water pipe." We both cringed.

THE FOUR turkey wings weighed six pounds and cost me a total of $1.74. I took them home and smoked them, and we still haven't finished eating all that we made from them. We made smoked turkey wing and cheddar cheese soup, smoked turkey wing, wild rice and walnut salad, and smoked turkey wing fettucine, and we still have enough smoked turkey wing meat and smoked turkey wing broth to make meals for a week. They were one of the best meat buys I've made in a long time and they were absolutely delicious smoked. And you don't need a water pipe!

First, soak the wings for two hours in a brine made of one tablespoon of curing salt to each pint of water. The wings need to be completely covered with the brine.

If you have a "Little Chief" or "Outer" smoker, you're in luck; simply hang the wings on a string in the smoker and smoke them 4 or 6 to 8 hours. If you don't have a smoker, don't panic. You can turn your oven into one for less than a dollar. Simply buy a bottle of liquid hickory smoke.

To smoke turkey wings in your oven, brush the brined wings with liquid smoke and place them on a rack in a roasting pan in a 200 to 250-degree oven. Roast for approximately three hours, turning occasionally and basting with additional liquid smoke.

Let the smoked wings cool so that you can handle them, then remove the meat from the bones. Cut the meat into cubes, put it in a covered dish and refrigerate it.

Put the bones, wing tips and any wonderful brown smoked skin in a stockpot. Cover with water; add an onion stuck with a couple of whole cloves, a carrot, a stalk of celery, a few peppercorns and a bay leaf or two. Cover, bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer for 2 or 3 hours. Strain the broth into a large bowl and refrigerate.

YOU NOW HAVE several pounds of smoked turkey meat and quarts of wonderfully rich smoked turkey broth, all of which (if you were as fortunate as I) cost you under $2.

Curing salt is a mixture of salt, sugar and sodium nitrate in the proper proportions. Two readily available brands are B. Hellers' Complete Cure with Sugar and Morton's Tender Quick.

What does one do with all this smoked turkey wing stuff? Here is the recipe for the soup I mentioned above.

SMOKED TURKEY WING & CHEDDAR CHEESE SOUP

3 tablespoons butter
1 small onion, chopped
1 rib celery, chopped
3 tablespoons flour
1/8 teaspoon nutmeg, grated
3 cups smoked turkey broth
1 quart milk
3 cups cheddar cheese, shredded
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon white pepper

MELT THE butter in a large pot. Add chopped onion and celery and saute until limp but not brown. Sprinkle on flour and nutmeg. Cook, stirring, for 2 or 3 minutes. Gradually stir in turkey broth. Bring the mixture to a boil, reduce heat, cover and simmer for 15 minutes. Remove from heat and strain into a large bowl; discard the vegetables. Return strained broth to the pan and add the milk. bring to a boil over medium-low heat. Gradually add the cheese, stirring to melt each batch before you add more. Bring back to just below a boil and season with salt and pepper. Serves 6 to 8.

DEAR ABBY

Clothes don't make the man

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Since my early childhood I have been going with my parents to a beautiful nudist camp that naters to families.

My problem is that I have met a very nice man who has proposed marriage, but he refuses to join me in going to the nudist camp. I love him very much, as he has many fine qualities. However, I don't think I could live without those wonderful outings in the sun at the camp. I would feel deprived, imprisoned and depressed.

He insists that he is too inhibited to feel comfortable in the presence of unclothed strangers. He's also afraid it might be sexually stimulating.

I want to marry this man, but I need to convince him to join the camp. Can you help me? – M. IN OTTAWA, CANADA

DEAR M: Inhibitions of this kind are difficult to overcome. But if you persuade him to visit the family-type camp just once, he may realize that it's a healthy family experience, and there is nothing sexy about it. And if he really wants to marry you, he may decide to grin and bare it.

DEAR ABBY: For years I have been scolded by my husband for picking my teeth with a toothpick in public. Just how much of a breach of etiquette is that? He says I embarrass him. He is 71 and I'm 69, and we've been married almost 49 years.

We're at a winter resort now. Yesterday we had dinner with friends, and I picked at my teeth at the table. Seeing no place to discard the toothpick, I chewed it up into small slivers and put the remains in my dinner napkin. I did all this very inconspicuously.

When we got home, my husband gave me a scolding. I don't think I did anything so terrible. All my other manners are good. What is the verdict?

Is my husband a nitpicker? Or am I a slob? – VACATIONING

DEAR VACATIONING: Your husband is not a "nitpicker" – neither are you a slob. However, it is considered inelegant to pick one's teeth in public. And chewing up the toothpick is another no-no. You could pick up Dutch elm disease.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this in order to save some other person from the same predicament I found myself in. I'm a high school student, living in a small town. I don't do drugs, I don't drink and my grades are very good.

I had one weakness. I was a compulsive shoplifter. I couldn't go into a store without coming out with at least one stolen object. This went on for quite a while until one day I was caught.

Man, talk about the biggest scare of your life! I was let go and only banned from the store, but that scare did something to me.

I completely reformed myself. I no longer feel the urge to steal anything. I feel much better about myself and I know I'll never take another thing. Actually, I would like to give the person who reported me a great big kiss! – REFORMED STICKY FINGERS

DEAR REFORMED: You were luckier than most. One good scare is sometimes more effective than a hundred sermons. Thanks for writing.

Sausage origins come from countries around the world

By Tom Hoge
AP Wine and Food Writer

During my first visit to Germany some years ago, I happened upon a sausage shop in Bavaria, its windows filled with dozens of wursts of every size and variety.

Some were a little strange for my taste, like bragenwurst, a 10-inch sausage filled with pig's brains, onions and oats.

Of the 200 or more sausages and luncheon meats sold in this country, the most truly American in origin is the country-style pork sausage, sold fresh and smoked in bulk and link form. Seasoned with thyme and sage, these sausages have a delightful aroma. Here's a recipe for sausage-potato pot.

4 cups potatoes, sliced
2 carrots, peeled and sliced
1 cup green pepper, diced
1 pound white onions, peeled
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 can beef bouillon
½ cup water
2 tablespoons soy sauce
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 pound American country sausage meat
Chopped parsley

Cook potatoes and carrots till nearly tender, adding green pepper and onions last 10 minutes. Place in casserole. Melt butter and stir in flour. Slowly add bouillon, water and soy sauce and cook till thickened, stirring constantly. Add pepper and pour over vegetables. Form sausage meat into patties and fry slowly till almost done. Place atop vegetables. Cover and bake in preheated 375-degree oven for 20 minutes, or till vegetables are tender. Sprinkle with parsley. Serves 4.

Chinese New Year's food symbolizes good wishes

HEARST FEATURE SERVICE

SEATTLE – Wondering what to do to celebrate now that the Chinese Year of the Boar is underway?

How about cooking an authentic Chinese dinner just like Mao used to make? According to Judy Lew, cookbook author and director of the Uwajimaya cooking schools here, "There is much symbolism in foods prepared for the New Year. Chicken for prosperity; a whole fish, including the head and tail signifying the beginning and end of cycle, is cooked, but never eaten," says Lew, "because it also symbolizes a surplus. The Chinese word for fish sounds like the word surplus."

Saifun (bean thread noodles) denotes long life and tangerines, piled high in a pyramid, are for good luck and happiness.

"Chinese cooking is quick," says Lew. "It's also versatile, nutritious and economical – if you're careful what you choose to cook. It doesn't always have to be prawns – vegetables and thinly sliced meats are reasonable."

To prove how versatile Chinese cooking can be, Lew says that in her recipe for spicy shrimp and broccoli, thinly sliced flank steak or chicken can substitute for the prawns, while pea pods, cauliflower or eggplant can be used instead of broccoli.

She contends that each year in this country, there's a greater awareness of Chinese cuisine mainly because that method of cooking best preserves nutrients. She adapts traditional Chinese cooking to today's trend toward less fat by cutting down on the amount of oil usually called for.

For her, the wok is internationally adaptable.

"I cook spaghetti sauce and taco filling, stir-fry or steam all vegetables, prepare fish and chips in a wok. Now if I could stir-fry a pizza, I'd really be in business," she says.

She finds the flat-bottomed wok the best to use on an electric element. The shape is still mostly round, while the bottom provides a greater contact with the heat source.

But round or flat-bottomed, a wok should be of heavy-gauge metal and a 14-inch size is most efficient, she advises. "The nice part is that you spend only $9.95 for a good wok."

SPICY SHRIMP with BROCCOLI

1 1/2 pounds broccoli
4 tablespoons oil, divided
8 cups boiling water
1 1/2 pounds shrimp
1 clove garlis, minced
1 teaspoon minced ginger root
2 teaspoons hot soybean paste
1/4 cup catsup
3 tablespoons rice wine
1/2 teaspoon salt

1 tablespoon sugar

1. To blanch broccoli, cut broccoli florets into 2-inch lengths, separating into small clusters and reserving stems for another use. Bring water to boil; add 2 tablespoons oil to bring out bright green color. Cook broccoli 2 minutes; remove and arrange around outside edge of platter.

2. Shell shrimp, devein, rinse and thoroughly dry. Cut butterfly fashion for even cooking.

3. Heat remaining 2 tablespoons oil in a wok. Add shrimp, garlic and ginger root. Stir-fry 1 minute or until shrimp turn pink and white.

4. Add bean paste, catsup, wine and seasonings. Continue cooking 1 minute or until sauce is reduced by half. Arrange prawns in center on platter in center of broccoli. Serve with hot cooked white rice if desired.

Sauce I: Layer 1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger root, 1 tablespoon minced green onion and 1 clove garlic, minced. neason with 1/2 teaspoon salt or 1 tablespoon soy sauce. Heat 2 tablespoons oil and pour over ingredients to cause sizzling.

SAUCE II

Combine 1 tablespoon oyster sauce with 2 tablespoons soy sauce.
2 cups diced winter melon
6 cups seasoned soup stock
1/2 cup sliced fresh mushrooms

Women of Olney, England, win 33rd international pancake race

LIBERAL, Kan. (AP) — The silver skillet representing victory in the International Pancake Race goes to Olney, England, after that town out-flapjacked Liberal in the annual event.

The women of Olney claimed victory Tuesday when 31-year-old Linda Carey mastered a 415-yard course in 66.4 seconds, a performance that beat the winner of a similar race in Liberal by 5.2 seconds.

Twenty-nine women participated in the races, the 33rd time the two towns have competed in the Shrove Tuesday event that began in 1950. Liberal, which emerged victorious in 1982, leads the series 19-14. The 1980 race was a draw.

Animal research groups alerted

LONDON (AP) — Police warned government agencies and all organizations using animals for research to be on the alert after militant animal rights protesters sent letter bombs to five different addresses.

Scotland Yard said Tuesday night it believes the explosives delivered to the Canadian High Commission, the Agriculture Ministry, a surgeon, a furrier and a veterinary college were all the work of the Animal Rights Militia.

The group claimed responsibility last year for a letter bomb sent to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's office.

Soviet dissident has heart pains

MOSCOW (AP) — Anatoly Shcharansky has had terrible heart pains since the imprisoned Jewish dissident ended a 109-day hunger strike a month ago, his mother says.

Ida Milgrom told reporters that she didn't know her son had resumed eating until a 14-page letter from him arrived Tuesday.

The letter was dated Feb. 7. Shcharansky wrote that he broke his fast on Jan. 14, the third anniversary of this father's death. He began the hunger strike after he was forbidden to correspond with relatives.

'One China' Olympic team sought

PEKING (AP) — In its latest reunification bid, Communist China invited Nationalist Taiwan today to train and participate with mainland athletes as one China in the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

The official Chinese news agency Xinhua said Zhong Shitong, president of the Chinese Olympic Committee, extended the "warm invitation" to Taiwan athletes and coaches.

He urged Taiwan's outstanding athletes to join forces with athletes on the mainland "for the full blossoming of Chinese sports at a time when it shows such great promise of revitalization," Xinhua said.

Nazi-hunter says France knew Barbie's location

PARIS (AP) — France knew that Klaus Barbie, the "Butcher of Lyon," was in Bolivia working for the CIA for eight years before asking for the former Gestapo chief's extradition, Nazi-hunter Serge Klarsfeld charged.

Klarsfeld offered documents to back that claim and another that American occupation authorities in Germany thwarted French attempts to get Barbie for five years after World War II.

Barbie was expelled Feb. 5 by the new civilian government in Bolivia, where he reportedly lived since 1951.

"I kept silent until now because I was profoundly wounded to realize that France knew officially where Barbie was from at least 1963," Klarsfeld said in an article published Tuesday in the respected Paris daily Le Monde.

Yet "nothing, strictly nothing, was done by France" until 1972, Klarsfeld said, after he and his wife Beate had embarrassed the government by announcing Barbie's whereabouts.

Klarsfeld, who is president of the Association of Sons and Daughters of Deported French Jews, blamed a "very small group" of French officials for keeping the Barbie case under wraps, but he didn't identify anyone.

Le Monde reprinted what Klarsfeld said was a "secret, confidential" French army document on Barbie's whereabouts dated Nov. 7, 1963.

It said Barbie was protected by U.S. authorities after the German surrender in 1945 and that he was living in La Paz from 1961 or 1962. It said Barbie did cover work arranged by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and the West German intelligence service.

Klarsfeld also quoted a note, dated July 28, 1949, from the secretariat for tracing war criminals in Baden-Baden to the French general commission for German and Austrian affairs.

It said "Barbie enjoys the protection of the American occupation authorities and ... it is possible that these authorities will not facilitiate the necessary enquiry, thus preventing us from constituting the statutory dossier for extradition."

A spokesman for the French Defense Ministry refused to say whether the documents were authentic because Barbie is awaiting trial. Officials of the 1963-1972 period could not immediately be reached.

Barbie is currently being held in the same jail in Lyon where he once interrogated Jews and resistance leaders as Gestapo chief during the Nazi occupation. He earned the nickname "Butcher of Lyon" for allegedly ordering 7,591 Jews to concentration camps and executing 4,000 other French Jews and Nazi opponents.

Barbie's expulsion from Bolivia triggered a retired U.S. counterintelligence officer to recall last week how he protected Barbie from French interrogators who wanted to kill him in spring of 1946.

"They were ready to tear him apart," said John Willms, who said he escorted an arrogant, taunting Barbie during three days of interrogations.

Just why Barbie was valuable to the United States mystified Willms. "The true story concerning Barbie's association with the U.S. military may best be answered by the powers that be at that time."

Willms, like Klarsfeld, was also perplexed by the French failure to press for Barbie's return.

Soviet press claims U.S. blocks Barbie prosecution

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet press today accused the United States of blocking the prosecution of former Gestapo chief Klaus Barbie and of harboring Nazis.

"There are hundreds of Barbie's" in the United States, the trade union newspaper Trud said.

Barbie, nicknamed the "Butcher of Lyon," is accused of ordering the deaths and deportations of thousands of Jews in the central French city during his tenure as Gestapo chief there between 1942 and 1944.

He was expelled Feb. 5 from Bolivia and is awaiting trial in France.

Various reports have said Barbie did intelligence work for the United States.

The Soviet Literary Gazette said in its latest edition that Barbie "worked for the CIA for several years" before settling down in Bolivia. It did not elaborate.

Trud said that "about 300 Nazi criminals who perpetrated grave crimes in occupied Byelorussia during the war, found sanctuary in the United States."

Nazis were recruited for the Pentagon, the State Department and "various research centers," it said.

Many of the war criminals allegedly recruited "are still alive and some even continue to work at such establishments as Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe," the newspaper added.

On Tuesday, Soviet Deputy Prosecutor General Olec Soroka demanded Barbie's prosecution of Barbie, claiming the former Gestapo chief's hands were "also stained with the blood of Soviet civilians."

Soviets won't negotiate until deployment begins

LONDON (AP) — The Soviets won't seriously negotiate nuclear arms reductions until NATO shows it means business by starting to deploy 572 missiles at the end of this year, a top commander of the alliance says.

Otherwise, nothing substantial will come of the U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms negotiations in Geneva, Gen. Bernard W. Rogers told American reporters on Tuesday.

Rogers is the supreme commander for Europe of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

NATO has proposed that unless the Soviets make some significant proposals to reduce nuclear firepower, the deployment of Pershing 2 and cruise missiles will begin.

"I'm just convinced in my mind that the Soviets are not going to negotiate seriously ... until they know they're not going to be able to dictate to us what we do to defend ourselves," said Rogers.

'It won't be until either shortly before or just coincident with the time we deploy that they will then be convinced completely that they're not going to have a veto on what we've put in as weapons systems to deter the weapons systems they have already deployed."

NATO has approved President Reagan's proposal to scrap deployment of the missiles if the Soviets dismantle some 340 SS-20 missiles and two other types. The proposal is known as "zero-option."

The Soviets have rejected that option and offered to cut back their missiles to 162, which is how many the French and British have.

NATO turned down Moscow's initiative, and the Geneva negotiations are apparently deadlocked.

Rogers said that sentiment is increasing among those who want an interim agreement if the "zero-option" plan is not feasible, and that such defection among "zero-option" supporters pleases the Soviets. But, he said, "most continue to agree that the ideal solution is the zero level."

Rogers also said that until President Reagan proposed the "zero-option," Western Europe perceived that the administration "would rather confront" than negotiate.

Air force failure at first

COLUMBUS, N.M. (AP) — Only a splintered maple propeller and a copper replica of a flimsy Curtiss "Jenny" biplane remain now of the nation's first Air Force squadron, which failed in its initial mission.

Eight cloth-coated JN-3s were flown to this southern New Mexico town in 1916, three days after Mexican bandit Pancho Villa sacked Columbus in the last attack on a continental United States community. Villa's raiders razed most of Columbus, looted stores and killed 16 Americans.

Only two planes returned from the failed four-week mission into Mexico to track Villa. The first Aero Squadron pilots were so unhappy with the crafts' performances, they hacked up the surviving planes and burned them, historians say.

The lumbering biplane's mission — the first military use of airplanes by the U.S. — was to track the rebels so 10,000 pursuing troops under U.S. Army Gen. John "Black Jack" Pershing's command could capture Villa. Earlier that year, Villa had slain 15 Americans on a Mexican train.

INFURIATED by both attacks, President Woodrow Wilson ordered the planes flown in from San Antonio, Texas, to hunt the nettlesome Villa.

"Villa embarrassed the United States. We couldn't just stand by and do nothing," said Arthur Kern, caretaker for the Columbus Historial Museum.

The museum houses an odd collection of military memorabilia from Columbus' Camp Furlong and photos of the border town before and after Villa's surprise attack.

But perhaps the most unusual item in the museum is a maple, four-foot propeller, the last piece remaining from the Jenny's undistinguished military start.

The high desert air proved too much for the Jenny's mechanical makeup, Kern said.

"The dry climate raised havoc with wooden propellers," El Paso historian Bill Rakocy said. Maple was thought to be the most durable of materials for airplane propellers.

MOST OF the planes crashed at one time or another, Rakocy said.

The plane's 90-horsepower engine proved too paltry for most takeoffs in Columbus' 5,500-foot altitude. Further, few spare parts were available and the planes had no navigation or radio equipment, he said.

Air technology in 1916 had yet to reach the United States, Kern said.

Mishaps occurred far too often for the pilot's liking.

One pilot flew into a Mexican forest fire at dusk thinking it was a town where he could land. Another had a foot of water accumulate in his open cockpit when he flew through a drenching rainstorm, historians say.

All too often, the planes broke down after landing and the pilots had to hoof it to safety. One pilot hobbled 60 miles with a broken ankle before he was rescued, authorities say.

In one narrow escape, a pilot flew into Chihuahua City where Villa was thought to be hiding. But Villa supporters in the town became so enraged, they chased after the pilot, who was able to take off safely and escape, American West magazine reported in 1976.

ARMY Capt. Benjamin Foulois was one of two pilots able to return to Columbus with his plane. But when he arrived, he "set match to" the two remaining planes, the magazine said.

America's first Air Force went up in flames, Kern said.

"Not a noble start," museum visitor Monte Ent said sarcastically.

To commemorate the first Aero Squadron, the Hacienda Sur Luna private airport near Columbus has a $30,000 copper replica of the Jenny cemented to a pillar overlooking the runway.

Contracts protect spouses

NEW YORK (AP) — The days and weeks before the wedding are perhaps the most romantic time in a couple's life together. Every day is Valentine's. Everything is hearts and flowers, seashells and balloons, sweetness and light.

But now comes Cecile Weich, the lawyer in the white hat, to kick Cupid squarely in the diaper. And to draw up a contract that will spell out the legal and financial rights and responsibilities of both bride and groom while they are married — and if they divorce.

"When there is love in the heart and a smile on the lips, that's the time to disagree," says Ms. Weich, who has been writing prenuptial agreements for two decades.

She says more couples are putting their vows in writing as more women have careers and enter marriage with money or property they want to protect. "Women used to think more with their hearts, while men think more with their heads," she says.

IN ADDITION, she says the increase in divorces — which now total 1 million a year in the United States — has made both men and women more aware that they may need a prenuptial agreement.

Prenuptial agreements — also called "antenuptial" or simply "marriage contracts" — are nothing new. They date back to ancient times, when a wedding might depend on how many camels the bride's family paid the bridegroom's.

In this country, prenuptial agreements have typically been used by the rich. The classic example is the aging tycoon who requires the young chorus girl to waive her claims on his bankroll if they divorce or he dies.

But now, according to Ms. Weich, anyone who has money, stocks, land, jewelry or other property should consider a prenuptial agreement before saying, "I do."

In most states, couples who divorce must share whatever wealth they accumulated during the marriage. But Ms. Weich says a prenuptial agreement can guarantee they will leave the marriage with at least what they brought into it.

MS. WEICH, who dresses in white from her stylish shoes to her wide brim, says her prenuptial contracts range from three to 200 pages. The length usually depends on how complicated the financial arrangements are, but she says many couples include non-monetary clauses, too.

For instance, some couples spell out each other's domestic responsibilities, such as child care duties. One contract specified that the husband and wife take turns cleaning the bathroom. Another required the husband to keep his toothpaste on the left side of the medicine chest and the wife to keep hers on the right side. Yet another said the couple must have sex at least twice a week.

"Personally, I think there's something to be said for spontaneity in some areas," says Ms. Weich, who has been married for half her 48 years. She says she and her husband did not have a contract because neither one of them had any money when they got married.

She will put anything in a contract as long as it's not illegal or unfair. But she cautions people that courts will normally only enforce the financial aspects of prenuptial contracts. "Most judges are loath to get involved in people's personal business," she says.

MS. WEICH says couples entering prenuptial contracts should each retain a lawyer. "Lovers make the best bargains," she says. "Lawyers make the best bargainers."

"A lot of people would rather just take their chances," she says. "But if it's really a good relationship, it's going to survive the making of an agreement."

Fred Mendelson (left), and Rabbi Joseph Kaufman inspect freshly-killed beef at Mendelson Meats in Miami Beach, Fla., recently. Kaufman, 49, is a Polish-born Hebrew scholar who works for the city as a kosher meat inspector.

Rabbi with badge makes sure bakeries, butcher shops kosher

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rabbi Joseph Kaufman carries a badge.

"You know how everybody's always saying things must be kept kosher? I'm making sure they really are," says Kaufman, scrutinizing a side of freshly killed beef hanging in a meat freezer.

The 49-year-old Polish-born Hebrew scholar is paid $24,500 annually to enforce two sections of the Miami Beach city code which make it an offense to advertise or sell food as kosher if it isn't. Kaufman is one of an estimated 500 full-time kosher cops active in the United States, seeing that the Jewish law regulating food preparation and eating is obeyed.

"There are not enough hours in the day for me to do everything I have to do," says Kaufman, who does his sleuthing inside 124 Miami Beach restaurants, bakeries, butcher shops, food wholesalers and grocery stores that claim to hew to Biblical dietary restrictions. "And on the Sabbath, I have to go on foot when I make my rounds."

Kaufman's hunt for the breakers of kosher law takes him from flash freezers of meatpacking plants to gala hotel dining rooms. He keeps a "little jail" in the bowels of Miami Beach City Hall, a locked refrigerator filled with unkosher soup bases, gelatin and ice cream confiscated in kosher kitchens and shops.

What's kosher and what's "trayf," or unfit to eat, is outlined in the Old Testament book of Leviticus, along with Talmudic texts and 3,000 years of rabbinical findings and writings.

But for devout Orthodox Jews like Kaufman, the why of ancient Hebrew dietary laws is as important as their application.

"Here is God up in heaven, who has his chosen people," says Rabbi Tibor Stern, chief kosher inspector for Hebrew National. "He doesn't want me to have bacon and eggs for breakfast. He wants me to have lox and bagels. Now, what is God's interest in little old me?"

The origin of the ancient laws of kashruth, explains the gray-bearded rabbi, "is not health, although kosher is healthy, no question about it. It's a question of holiness. In the eyes of God, I'm his child. For love or selfish reasons, he wants to preserve me. He knows the reason behind the laws."

Poland has established itself as a power in world bridge. In 1978, the Poles won the team event at the World Bridge Olympiad in New Orleans. The depth of the Polish team is evident from the performance of Marcin Lesniewski at the recent World Olympiad in Biarritz.

East and South both showed power with their double and redouble, respectively. West chose to introduce his four-card heart suit for no good reason, and North competed in spades. However, with his trickless hand North was not prepared to sit for three hearts doubled, which would probably have been defeated two tricks. South tried to compensate by going on to game.

East won the opening lead with the king of clubs and shifted to a trump to cut down heart ruffs in dummy. Lesniewski won in hand with the queen, cashed the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart in dummy. He came back to hand with a club ruff, ruffed another heart and then ruffed a second club.

The club suit was now established, but there was no way to get to the table to enjoy it. That didn't bother declarer particularly. He simply cashed his trumps and exited with his last heart. On these tricks, dummy's remaining clubs were discarded.

Everyone was down to nothing but diamonds. East could do no better than cash the ace of diamonds and surrender the rest to declarer. Underleading the ace of diamonds would not have helped, because dummy's Q 10 9 assured declarer of two diamond tricks regardless of the lie of the cards.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, February 17, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: America's foremost contralto, Marian Anderson, actor Alan Bates, Margaret Truman, author Chaim Potok, football great Jim Brown and longtime Dodger sportscaster Red Barber share this birthday with you. Also born on this date: oil billionaire H. L. Hunt, musical genius Andreas Segovia. Business demands more of your time, but the accompanying rise in status and income is hard to resist. Enjoy your new "perks." Travel is favored towards the end of the year. Family members draw closer together. A promising romance gains momentum. You feel more secure at place of employment. Consider going back to school. Special courses could hasten career progress.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your patience and hard work pay off at the bank. A former associate returns with an idea that just might work. Family members make sacrifices to help a partnership succeed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Move swiftly to lay some new foundations. Keep promises made long ago. Your intuition is right on target. Refuse to be alarmed by a change in the economic barometer.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New technology is introduced at place of employment. Self-improvement activities take on special significance. You find a home computer is worth the cost.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A wolf may be lovable, but not when he is trying to fleece you. Postpone a financial decision until you can consult a tax attorney. Extend the olive branch to a friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Specialized knowledge gives you an edge when competing for a job or promotion. A get-rich-quick scheme will not work. A long-time friendship takes on romantic overtones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep a low profile for a while. Those who are seen but not heard gain points with the boss. You are now able to come to grips with an important family decision.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Certain new responsibilities please you. You can expect to enjoy greater prestige and respect. A favorite hobby can provide a healthy outlet for excess energy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tact and conservatism are your keys to success. An opinionated older person could prove surprisingly helpful. Do not rebuff an offer of assistance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Follow your humanitarian instincts and help someone less fortunate. A seemingly far-out hunch brings financial gains. Appearance counts big with romantic partner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Learn to delegate more responsibility. Shoppers will find some excellent bargains today. Do not try to make too many domestic changes at one time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Clear up unfinished business. Work at a steady pace. Be more realistic when setting goals for yourself. Postpone asking an influential person for a favor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Influential people are more accessible now. Do not question an authority figure. A conversation with mate or partner can elicit new ways to reduce spending.

Jefferson asked for break

FERNDALE, Calif. (AP) — President Thomas Jefferson wasn't above asking a creditor to give him a break in a pinch, a newly found letter seems to indicate.

Carlo Benemann, owner of Ferndale Books, believes he has found a letter written by Jefferson when he was president, asking that he be allowed to postpone paying a bill.

Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence, served as the nation's third chief executive from 1801 to 1809.

Tucked in an old book in a slightly faded envelope, Benemann found a letter addressed to Mr. Craven Payton of Stumpsland near Milton, bearing a Washington postmark.

The note read: "Washington. November 27 '03. Dear Sir: If my note for D558.14 payable the 15th of December is still in your hands, I should be very glad if it could be either postponed a while or paid by monthly portions, as I find I shall be very hard pushed, during the next month.

"If, however, it has gone out of your hands, I shall endeaver to make provision for it if possible. Accept my friendly salutations and best wishes, T. H. Jefferson."

The envelope, bearing the return name, "T. Jefferson, President U.S.," had the word "free" marked where a stamp would be, presumably because the chief executive got postal franking privileges.

Benemann, who routinely thumbs through old books he buys because he comes across the "oddest things," hopes to have the letter authenticated by an expert on presidential papers and autographs.

The letter was in a set of books bought from the estate of a Mrs. Easton Adams of San Francisco, whose family tree showed that she was related to both John Adams, who preceded Jefferson as president, and John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

And although it may only be worth up to $3,000, Benemann says the letter has historical value because it's revealing of Jefferson's life.

"He was president and earning $25,000 a year but he had to pay household expenses of the White House and his own big landholdings were heavily mortgaged," Beneman said.

Chilean Cabinet revamped

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet has dismissed his economics and finance minister in an unexpected Cabinet shakeup that involved four other posts held by civilians in Chile's military governmenmt.

Rolf Luders was removed earlier this week from his powerful position as head of both the finance and economy ministries just two days after he returned from an eight-day mission abroad to refinance part of Chile's $17 billion dollar foreign debt.

Pinochet named Carlos Caceres, who accompanied Luders in the negotiations with bankers in Tokyo, London and Frankfurt, to head the Finance Ministry and continue the debt talks.

Manuel Martin Saez, an industrialist and close friend of Gen. Pinochet, was named economy minister. The other jobs involved in the third reshuffle of the 18-member Cabinet in less than a year were the justice and education ministries, the central bank and government secretary.

Day designated

On Jan. 23, 1845, Congress designated the Tuesday following the first Monday in November as election day for all future presidential elections.

Actress fighting back

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — You can tell actress Theresa Saldana is a fighter.

You hear it in the anger in her Brooklyn-accented voice.

You remember that she fought back that March 15 morning in Los Angeles last year, when, in a good mood and about to climb into her car to go to a music lesson, she was attacked and stabbed 10 times by a Scottish "fan" with a history of mental problems who, police said, was in love with her.

While about 30 passersby watched as Saldana screamed, "He's killing me!" the actress, best known for her role in "Raging Bull," fought with her attacker for two minutes, closing her hand around the 5-inch kitchen knife Arthur Richard Jackson was plunging into her chest, thighs and arms.

Her life was saved when Jeff Fenn, a passing Sparkletts Drinking Water Corp. deliveryman, came up behind Jackson, put him in a headlock, took the knife from him and forced him to lie face-down in the street until sheriff's deputies came.

Four operations and a year later, Saldana, 27, is still fighting, this time for the rights of victims who suffer such brutal attacks.

One of the things that most bothered Saldana as she lay in her hospital bed recovering from her wounds — which left her, according to doctors, two minutes from death — was the sense of having been forever set apart from the normal world.

"I just felt completely isolated and alienated," she said in an interview. "I found it hard to take advice from people who hadn't been through it. They could sympathize, but they couldn't empathize. I felt I was now placed in a different category. I had been through something so hideous I could no longer relate to just anyone."

It was for that reason that Saldana formed Victims for Victims, a Los Angeles organization of victims of crime who help each other counteract traumatic memories.

The problem, Saldana said, is that victims "are virtually ignored in the system. The system is set up to protect the constitutional rights of the criminal, which is fine, but we forget about the victim in the process. We spend an enormous amount of money incarcerating, feeding and taking care of the criminal after conviction. But after the attack, we spend the tiniest fraction of that helping the victim.

"This isn't fair. The victims have had their entire lives changed. There's very little help available and it's usually for medical expenses. But there are many other problems. Often you have to move from your home. There are so many expenses."

Saldana tries not to think about her attacker, who in November was sentenced to 12 years in prison for attempted murder. Her acting career is unimpaired.

With psychological therapy and the support of other victims, the memory of Saldana's attack is beginning to fade. "You can't deny you still have a vivid memory of such a horrendous experience," she said. "But with every week that passes, I feel better."

Israel lets workers out of camp

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel has released 15 medical workers of the Palestine Red Crescent from the Ansar prison camp in southern Lebanon, the military command said today.

The workers included five doctors. The others were medics and male nurses.

They were detained at the beginning of the war in Lebanon on suspicion of helping the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Republican Gramm's back in business

Texan gets white carpet treatment, new office

By PAUL SUSSMAN
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — On his first day back in Congress, Rep. Phil Gramm discovered one of the hidden consequences of resigning your seat, changing parties and running in a special election.

They took away his old office. And they gave him a new one that would be hard-pressed to hold any three members of the Aggie defensive line.

The College Station Republican just laughs at the situation that currently forces visitors to wind their way through the packing cartons, potted plants and disengaged computer terminals that litter the reception area.

"I never knew of any office that had any effect on the quality of output," said Gramm.

But while the office is in a state of transition, the congressman hasn't changed a bit. The conservative beliefs, the self-deprecating sense of humor and the khaki pants and blue shirt are still there. Only the party label is different.

"People have asked me all day if I'm going to be any different as a Republican than I was as a Democrat," said Gramm, who is scheduled to be sworn in next Tuesday. "And my response is that I'm going to be the same old, dull congressman I've always been."

It wasn't quite business as usual for Gramm on his first day back — but almost. There were well-wishers and members of the news media to deal with, as well as the ongoing office switch. But there were also the routine staff meetings, conferences with leaders of the budget committee and countless phone calls to return.

"It's been fairly routine, other than I had to dig my car out this morning to get to work," said Gramm, who had to deal with Washington's 17-inch snowfall a weekend later than most of the city's residents. "They rolled out the white carpet to welcome me back."

> "People have asked me all day if I'm going to be any different as a Republican than I was as a Democrat... my response is that I'm going to be the same old, dull congressman I've always been."

Gramm admits that many of his former colleagues in the Democratic Party are not in the greeting line at the end of that carpet.

"The members of Congress who like me, like me a lot. They agree with what I'm trying to do," he said. "The ones who don't like me, they really don't like me. Abraham Lincoln used to say if you have strong views you're going to have strong enemies."

Gramm's vow to keep federal spending down may continue to anger some of his enemies. Already, he opposes the recession-aid program proposed by the president and supported by many members of both parties.

But Gramm likes to think he practices what he preaches. He said a little while back he had the opportunity to move to a nicer office in a newer building.

"I'm not a person who likes to spend money," he said. "I passed up an opportunity to go to the Rayburn building because it cost $1,400 to move the telephones."

Defendant treated some jury members

MONAHANS (AP) — Some of the jurors who must determine if a Cuban-born doctor tried to kill a gunshot victim by injecting air into the patient's veins were themselves treated by the physician.

Attorneys were scheduled to give their opening arguments today to the 12-member jury selected Monday to consider the case against Dr. Juan F. Perez Valladarez, a Havana native who is one of five doctors in this West Texas city. Perez is charged with injecting 22 cubic centimeters of air into the veins of Michael S. Hoffman as Perez was treating him in a hospital emergency room. Hoffman was critically shot in the head Nov. 4, 1981, during an argument in Monahans.

Prosecutors allege Perez knew the patient was mortally wounded and was trying to hasten his death.

Two Ward Memorial Hospital nurses have testified in depositions that they witnessed the popular Monahans doctor take a syringe and squeeze enough air into Hoffman's veins to kill him.

The nurses, Peggy Brown and Brenda Rowan, still work at the hospital and are expected to testify at the trial.

Perez, 55, also is expected to testify at the trial, which is being heard by State District Judge Joe Connally of Odessa.

Nearly all of the pool of 80 prospective jurors admitted Tuesday to Perez' attorney, Warren Burnett, that they had been treated by the bespectacled Perez.

State District Judge Lawrence L. Fuller of Monahans disqualifed himself from the case, because he was a patient of Perez'.

District Attorney Mike Ward also disqualified himself from the case for the same reason.

Dennis Cadra, an Odessa lawyer, was appointed special prosecutor.

The government says Perez intentionally tried to injure and kill Hoffman, but lawyers acknowledge that the 27-year-old victim — who died 40 minutes after the shooting — would have died soon from his injuries.

James Ralph Echols, 29, of El Paso is charged with shooting Hoffman point-blank in the head during an argument at Alice's Bar. Echols fled prosecution, but is being held on a robbery charge in Riverside, Calif.

He has been charged with murder. Perez is charged with felony counts of attempted murder and aggravated assault, and a misdemeanor count of simple assault.

Hoffman's death was attributed to massive brain damage from the gun shot, medical authorities said, but air injected into a patient's veins forms a bubble that can cause a fatal blood clot.

Judge urges Smalley jury to keep trying

DALLAS (AP) — A split jury was ordered to try again today to reach a verdict in the trial of Ian Smalley, a Briton accused of selling 100 tanks to Iran and 8,300 anti-tank missiles to Iraq in violation of the U.S. Neutrality Act.

The judge rejected a motion by lead defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes for a mistrial after jury foreman Thomas Dyre sent out a note late Tuesday afternoon saying, "We are unable to reach a unanimous decision. We are unsure how to proceed."

U.S. District Judge Robert Hill told the jury to "continue in an effort to dispose of this case. This is an important case — expensive in time, effort, and money for both the defense and the government.

"There is no reason to believe that the case can be tried again any better or any more exhaustively," Hill said, saying that the jurors had been both competent and attentive.

Less than an hour later, after the panel's deliberations had reached 14 hours over three days, the jury recessed for the day. Members said they would return at 9 a.m. today.

Conviction carries a maximum penalty of 70 years in prison and fines totaling $61,000.

Hangover remedy marketed

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Sixty million people a week suffer from hangovers and three businessmen see a gold mine in that misery.

"They go out and spend $10 to $20 to get it, and we ask them to spend 50 cents to get relief," said Ron Hall, a founder of Victor Drug Co. of Memphis.

Hall spells relief "Rise'n Shine," the name of a hangover cure he and his partners are ready to test market in Shreveport, La.

The idea for Rise'n Shine began last year when a Memphis resident decided he had just the right conbination of stuff to cure the morning-after miseries.

The backyard chemist took his idea to Hank Broyles who makes his living as a financial advisor.

Broyles is now president and one-third owner of Victor Drug Co. The third partner is Thom Inks, a financial adviser from Chicago.

"The man with the formula came to me for venture capital," Broyles said.

The ingredients in Rise'n Shine are nothing new and can be bought separately in most drugstores or supermarkets.

Hall said his company's marketing research indicates, however, that drinkers want the ingredients already mixed and packaged as a hangover cure.

He acknowledged that it's not really a cure but said the drug can give varying amounts of relief to people who don't feel much like rising or shining.

The basic ingredients are acetaminophen, a non-aspirin pain killer; citric acid and sodium bicarbonate. The latter ingredients help relieve upset stomach, Hall said.

The hangover medicine, which also contains a little sugar to give the sufferer a boost, comes in an orange flavored, effervescent tablets that dissolve in water.

Vitamin C counteracts carcinogens

From Wire Reports

Nobel prize winner Linus Pauling surely caused a stir when he said vitamin C could cure the common cold. Though many swear by the advice, researchers find the hypothesis difficult to prove.

But when Pauling said vitamin C could be used to treat and prevent cancer, eyebrows (and tempers) really began to rise.

Still, says Dr. Walter Mertz, director of the Human Nutrition Research Center at Beltsville, Md., "he is partially right."

It turns out that the vitamin C in certain vegetables may have a protective effect against cancer-causing substances. Many vegetables, such as spinach, contain a great deal of nitrate, a compound that, combined with other compounds in the body, may be carcinogenic. Yet many of the same vegetables that contain nitrates also contain vitamin C, and it appears that the vitamin C prevents the conversion of nitrates into cancer-causing compounds.

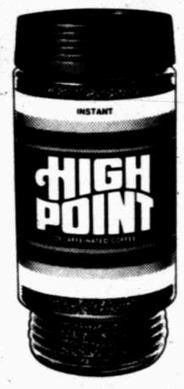

"That's the beauty of good nutrition," Mertz says. "Nature provided a protective factor...There's nothing that's all-good or all-bad."

Lean Machine gets 200 miles to gallon of gas

By PAUL DEAN
By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The Lean Machine is being driven along Los Angeles streets by General Motors engineer Jerry Williams.

LOS ANGELES — The road to corporate ruin, or dead storage at the Smithsonian, is littered with the wreckage of experimental transportation.

The world's first helicopter, actually a 19th-century ornithopter, thrashed itself to death like a spastic pterodactyl.

How many British barns did Thomas Newcomen blow up while developing his 18th-century steam engine which, at its most efficient, produced about one pound of energy from several tons of fuel?

Rocket belts. Spring-heeled boots. Electric airplanes. And now comes the Lean Machine from General Motors, a sawed-off stogie on three wheels that actually leans into turns with the roll rate of a hard-boiled egg.

A mock-up of what was envisioned nine years ago as the freeway wheels of the future is on permanent display in Epcot Center at Walt Disney World in Florid. That could be its kiss of death.

General Motors has put the brakes on further development of its Lean Machine pending discussions on what, if anything, can be translated into a mass production reality.

This one-person pod was recently on exhibition at the Los Angeles Auto Show where it widened eyes, broadened ideas and, during parking lot demonstrations, dumped the uninitiated like well-oiled sailors.

On the other hand, specifically those of Jerry Williams, GM's manager for the project, the Lean Machine is a low-drag dart...the front end of a Lear jet without fuselage and wings...a Go-Kart that goes without cartwheeling... and certainly something that might be ordered for 007.

"It offers safety, agility, economy and better road utilization than other vehicles," Williams enthuses. "In this, you can go around a corner much quicker than a car and much safer than a motorcycle. A motorcycle can't do a 360-degree skid on ice, it can't lock the front wheel safely, it can't stop and remain upright. The Lean Machine can.

"And sometime, I personally predict, there will be millions of these in the world. Sometime. The principle is too good to be wasted."

That principle is basic. To maintain stability, a racehorse, a jogger, a kid on a surfboard, lean into their turns. That allows gravity to balance centrifugal force tugging the mass (horse, man and surfer) outward. And the faster the corner, the heavier the force, ergo the deeper the lean to counteract skidding and tipping.

What Williams and his four-man research and development team have done is sophisticate the leaning process — by constructing a car where the entire passenger-carrying pod rolls around the vehicle's fixed, low, horizontal axis and with the amount of lean (up to 45 degrees on either side) controlled by the driver through foot pedals.

Unlike a conventional, four-wheel automobile (where weight shift is handled by suspension and the outside tires), the Lean Machine is virtually untippable on a flat surface. As opposed to a motorcycle (where lean is achieved by steering and shifting body weight), GM's enclosed tricycle will bruise only dignity, not rasp skin off elbows, knees and ears, should some klutz crank in more lean than speed.

Better yet, Williams and his lean machinists have fulfilled a challenge and a profile set in 1974 by Frank Winchell, General Motors' vice president of engineering.

Concerned by the Middle East oil embargo, Winchell was appalled by motorists driving solo. Also the road space taken up by narrow man in a wide car. Carpools could be one answer — if four people could be found to organize their work lives as one. Motorcycles might be ideal — but are murder in the rain, cold and hard on any clothing that did not once cover a cow.

Winchell, who has since retired from GM, gave the problem to Williams and his men. The result has been all that was called for.

The Lean Machine — powered not by GM but by a 38-horsepower motor from Honda — squeezes 200 miles from one gallon of gas. Its 0-60-mph time is 6.8 seconds, which is faster than any motorcycle of comparable power. It runs at 70 mph in rainproof, windproof comfort, a pair of Lean Machines can drive two abreast in a single traffic lane normally consumed by one car; all of which, states Williams, makes it the perfect transportation bridge between car and motorcycle.

Williams admits, however, that driving the car calls for more than a basic ability to point and add power.

The steering looks like it is pure motorcycle with hand brakes and twist grip. But, instructs Williams, better to steer by leaning the machine. Or if the handlebars are used, start a turn to the left by steering to the right and vice versa.

Foot pedals, fitted just like rudders on an airplane, control the roll. But, Williams continues, a lean to the right is set up by depressing the left stirrup. And vice versa again. Like the tiller on a sailboat. So those rudders act more like an airplane's ailerons. But in reverse and using your feet. And if the lean seems to be getting out of control, press the heavy pedal. Got it? Sure.

• • •

I actually had it for about 100 yards at a blazing 4 mph. Then a camber turn to the right was attempted. Crunch. Scrape. Williams had been right. Left foot for right turn and lean.

Williams, assisted by project technician Darrel Landmesser, hefted and rolled the 400-pound machine upright. Where would they be if you needed them on the freeway? "Try it again," yelled Williams through what looked like a pistol slot in the bubble canopy. "Don't worry. The president of General Motors turned it on its side the first time out. After about 10 yards. Of course, he got the hang of it right after that and went zipping around all over the place."

This time, while dancing the rudders and employing every trick or hand-eye coordination, the machine stayed upright — wobbly and hesitant but at least vertical. Left foot for right lean. The car circled a fireplug in the parking lot. Got it. Right pedal for left turn. The car buzzed a planter. Terrific.

Now a figure eight. At speed. Hitting 7 mph. Whoops. The left pedal suddenly is pushing my foot. OK, counteract by hitting the right pedal. Wrong. Grind. Screech. The Lean Machine takes another dead stop flop.

Parallels start to develop. This is like playing a left-handed pinball machine with your feet. Or holding an armful of frogs. No matter the concentration and effort, old instincts resist retraining.

A final mission was attempted. It did not last long. Oh, the machine stayed upright. But a combination of Southern California warmth and a nervous driver in an Oxford cloth shirt produced a phenomenon previously unknown to test engineers. The Lean Machine's bubble fogged up from the inside.

Williams agreed that driving this prototype is an acquired taste. But once conquered, it is skateboarding and the Malibu Grand Prix with a touch of ultra-light flying to boot. And, should the vehicle ever go into production, all this fun at an estimated cost between that of a motorcycle and a compact car.

Having to learn new driving skills could be a point of sales resistance against the Lean Machine. So could the possibility of air sickness from all that leaning and banking.

Williams, however, says that motion sickness is an absolute impossibility. But supposing a bad case of the queasies are developed during a midnight wriggle along lovers lane? Well, just take two Dramamine and call General Motors in the morning.

High school class becomes mini-Congress

Students assume roles of legislators

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Gavel in hand, U.S. Sen. Nancy Kassenbaum, alias Kristin Hass, calls a committee meeting as part of an unusual government course at Berkeley High School.

BERKELEY, Calif. — Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., was outraged. Fuming, he steamed up to Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho.

"Why did you table my bill?" Pressler demanded.

McClure eyed his colleague coolly.

"It stank."

In this particular legislature, Sen. Orrin Hatch has waist-length black hair, wears jeans and today is barefoot. Sen. Paula Hawkins is black; Sen. Nancy Kassebaum is a ringer for Mariel Hemingway. Sens. Dale Bumpers, Edward M. Kennedy, Gart Hart and John Tower are female. Taking part in a vote on tuition tax credit, Sen. John Heinz (also female) is eating a tangerine.

IN THE HOUSE, Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas is undecided these days whether the name tag he wears on his Rolling Stones T-shirt should read Democrat or Republican. And Sen. Barry Goldwater Sr., scion of a mixed marriage between a "radically liberal" mother and a "real conservative" father, has problems of his own. The demands of the Senate are interfering drastically with his field hockey and cross-country schedules. Gypsy-pirate style, Sen. Goldwater wears a slender gold hoop in his left ear.

Wait a minute. What is going on here?

What is going on, as it has for the last five years, is Berkeley High history teacher Steven Teel's novel approach to the conventional (as in, too often, soporific) U.S. government class. "Politics and Power: The Model Congress," an elective for juniors and seniors, is nothing less than government by immersion: a mini-Congress complete with infighting, outfighting, caucusing, lobbying, influence peddling, vote trading and often passionate exchanges of wildly divergent opinions.

Tip O'Neill is actually an 18-year-old Berkeley High School senior named Demetrios Papanikolas. McClure, a tall and brainy redhead named Jessica Irschick, spent last summer working for the Bechtel Corp. at Three Mile Island, was a manager of the University of California football team at age 14 and currently is pondering college choices and a career in engineering.

In cafeteria caucuses and living room lobbying sessions, there are issues to confront: foreign assistance food production to improve foreign aid; illegal immigration across the Mexican-U.S. border; tariff agreements with Japan; flat-tax legislation and tuition tax credits; federal job training; Social Security; clean air; federal land sales; drunk driving laws; handgun control; prison reform; nuclear waste storage and weapons control; defense spending; national health insurance and federal funding of abortion.

As each student becomes the representative or senator he has patterned himself after, tempers often flare and patience is frequently tested. Personality quirks intervene. Those who do their homework — researching issues and preparing convincing arguments in favor of them — get results. Those who don't — don't.

AS TEEL NOTES, "Just like the real Congress." Indeed, so much so that following a floor session on handgun regulation recently, an ardent Sen. McClure implored her colleagues to study up on floor rules and parliamentary procedure, telling them that "Two-thirds of the U.S. Senate is often confused about what's going on."

For many of his 14 years at Berkeley High, a standing feature in Teel's U.S. government class has been the chance for students to visit Washington under the aegis of CloseUp, a nonprofit, nonpartisan foundation based in Arlington, Va. Sitting in the spectators' gallery of the Senate on such a trip five years ago, Teel was seized with inspiration. Gazing down at the power-brokering and wheeling and dealing on the floor below, he decided, "We could do that, too." Returning to Berkeley, Teel appointed himself president (albeit "a very weak one") and began handing out congressional role-model identities. From that moment on, he said, "the simulation just sort of took off."

For Teel it was an opportunity to make the Congress human, a chance for students to learn that government is a great deal more vital than that tired old chart on how-a-bill-becomes-a-law.

He explains: "There's simply no way you can show in lecture form, or even in discussion or written form, how the human personality and the human institution that is the Congress helps to effect the outcome of how we attempt to solve our problems in this society. The legislative process is a human process, and through the simulation, the students learn how the human side has an imprint, an impact on how we go about resolving some of these problems.

"In other words," Teel goes on, "for them to experience a personality that is obnoxious or unpleasant — for them to learn how you get around it, how you pass a bill or win a committee vote in spite of that conflicting personality, that's something you just can't talk about."

Working through a remarkably convincing model of the labyrinth that is Congress, Teel said, "They learn that congressmen and senators have very full lives, with outside demands, personal problems, family problems, and all that has an impact on what goes on in Congress."

BUT THE MAIN thing is the experience they get in trying to go through this maze of frustration, and learning to cope with it. One thing they have to learn right away is that Congress is no different from any other group of 535 individuals they're going to be a part of. They're going to have a certain number of alcoholics, and there will always be some people you just can't rely on. The trick is to find out which ones you can depend on, the ones who'll get the job done, and to work with them."

Teel's notion is not unique: Role playing made a popular surge in the public schools as early as the mid-'60s. A model United Nations meets nationally each year, a Model Legislature convenes in Sacramento, Calif., and around the state and the country and a handful of instructors have undertaken similar simulations of the U.S. Congress. Said Teel: "It's something that's catching on."

But at least two elements make Teelss distinctive. One is Teel himself, a man who, at 37, has devoted an academic and professional lifetime to the U.S. Congress. Grandson of a labor organizer for the United Mine Workers, Teel grew up discussing politics at the kitchen table. In undergraduate school at the University of California, Berkeley, and in graduate school at San Diego State, Teel studied — what else? — American government. Fresh from graduate school, he co-authored a paper, "Congress and the Presidency, a Necessary Reappraisal," that created a brief furor in the academic world when it appeared in Political Science Quarterly. For Teel it was a high point. As he points out, "You don't get much academic recognition when you're in a high school."

Factor No. 2 is the city of Berkeley, a community known to test the definitions of the words "left," "Liberal" and "tolerant." Berkeley's political tradition might best be termed avant-garde. The liberal bent spills over into Teel's congressional classroom, where, "four semesters in a row, now," student legislators have proposed bills calling for a nuclear moratorium.

As Berkeley High Principal Marlin Foxworth describes it, "Berkeley is a place that not only just tolerates, but demands aggressive intellectual combat." Controversy is so commonplace in Berkeley, Foxworth said, "that things that might seem controversial elsewhere" are not in this place called Berkeley.

So liberal is this university community that in a way, many of the 120,000 residents of Berkeley tend to reside in a kind of political cocoon, believing, as one student put it, that "the whole world is anti-war and anti-nuke." Added another, "See, our definition of 'left' and 'right' is really distorted." Teel concurs, observing, "In Berkeley, you do get a belief that the world is tolerant and liberal." A graduate of Teel's class, 20-year-old Dennis Williams, now studying political science at UC Berkeley, said he had "never even met a Republican" before he role-played one at Berkeley High three years ago.

"ONE OF THE MAIN weaknesses of the simulation," Teel says, "is the lack of pressure from the constituency." For example, in a recent House discussion of unemployment, Teel found himself wanting to remind one congressman that "a Caterpillar plant just closed in your district, Mr. Michel, in case you didn't notice." Agreed Andy Kraetzer, role-playing Sen. Barry Goldwater this semester, "It's one way that we're different from the real Senate. We don't have to think about our constituents that much."

LAT Photo

A pensive House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, alias Demetrios Papanikolas, left, confers with the president, alias teacher Steven Teel, as part of a model Congress.

For the most part, Teel attempts to accommodate those students who come to him with strong ideas of which senator or representative they would like to portray for a semester. For the others, Teel watches them in the early days of class, where they are required to give practice speeches and state their areas of legislative interest, and then tries to assign role models that will best suit each student. In some cases, Teel's choices are inspired to the point of typecasting: Matthew Hendrickson, this semester's Rep. Jack Kemp, not only sounds remarkably like the New York Republican, but shares Kemp's athletic physique as well. Others zealously pattern themselves after the member of Congress they are portraying. By the end of his semester as South Carolina Republican Floyd Spence, alumnus Dennis Williams said he was speaking with a Southern accent.

"What I love about it, " Teel said, "is that they really do address each other as 'Mr. Baker,' or 'Sen. McClure,' or whatever." Standing nearby, Jessica Irschick — "Mr. McClure" to her friends and mock-Senate colleagues — reported seeing "a picture of five senators in Newsweek this week, and I'm in it." Moments later, Sens. Howard Baker (Thomas Naparst) and Charles Mathias (Charles "Cal" Coolidge) were deep in conversation when a photographer approached them. "Keep talking," Mathias counseled Baker, "this is a photo opportunity."

By day, Teel's class is a four-classroom circus. To provide space for committee hearings, Teel borrows classrooms from fellow teachers during their off-hours. Because Berkeley High's main buildings are undergoing earthquake-proofing, Teel's own room has been moved across the street, to the top floor of a grammar school. As a result his students often convene their committees in a cafeteria that happens also to be a thoroughfare to the school bathroom.

Just as often, Teel's students meet off-campus, addressing each other by their role model names long after school is out. "There's a lot of competition for votes and influence in this class," said Sen. Kassebaum (Kristin Hass). "People sort of take it seriously. I call everyone on my committee every night to check up with them."

Out of all this, Teel believes, "most of the people who come out of this course have a great deal of respect for the institution. They realize that there are those people in the U.S. Congress who are literally killing themselves to get the job done."

O'NEILL-PAPANIKOLAS agreed: "I think basically that the people in this room have a lot better understanding of how the Congress works than the average person on the street. It gives us the feeling that we are not powerless, that we know how things work. We know we can't always change things, but we feel we have a chance."

It is a chance the students will see tested when many of them make their annual CloseUp pilgrimage to Washington. To raise the $698-per-student cost of the trip, many students have held car washes, candy sales or taken part-time jobs.

Having watched five years worth of Model Congress students meet many of their congressional role models, Teel takes issue with the myth of the apathetic teen-ager. Rather than producing a generation of teen-agers who don't care, Teel counters, "I think we don't do a really good job of educating young people in the areas of politics and governmment. It seems to me there's been sort of a stale approach for the most part, a sterile here-are-the-three-branches-of-government approach."

And he adds, "I don't know if my course is any solution — I just know my kids say they feel guilty when they don't turn on 'MacNeil-Lehrer.' "

69 Business Property, Office Warehouse Space for Rent

Introducing...

Mission Square Plaza

Retail and Office Condominiums

Owning is better than renting.

If you're presently renting retail or office space, you already know some of the disadvantages-frequent cost-of-living rent increases, leases that give the landlord all the advantages, costly sales overrides on your retail sales. In short, you're not in control.

From a pure economic standpoint, ownership beats renting. Consider these advantages:

* You mortgage payments are fixed and not subject to escalation or overrides to a landlord.
* You receive tax deductions for interest and tax payments.
* You get a tax deduction for depreciation over the next 15 years.
* You have control over your space, and no one can cancel your lease.
* You can buy enough space to meet your future growth plans and lease the expansion area until it's needed.
* All maintenance and upkeep is furnished through the Owner's Association.
* Your real estate investment gains value.

In addition to all this, Mission Square is strategically located in one of the city's fastest growing areas; North Big Spring and Loop 250, just northeast of ClayDesta Plaza.

Mission Square is an ideal location for professionals, service businesses, and a variety of retails stores. Contact our office now, for a full color brochure and further details.
