By H. N. F.

Republican congressional leaders appear to be determined to put over the anti-lynching bill sponsered by Congressman Dyer of Missouri. Its author is a Republican and its backers are Republicans. Congressman Hatton W. Sumners of Texas led a Democratic filibuster against the measure, but his efforts were not successful. This bill penalizes the people of a county wherein a lynching occurs and the sum of $20,000 goes to the relatives of the victim. Judge Lynch is responsible for the anti-lynching bill. He is responsible for the agitation on the part of those who wish to create sympathy for the bill. He is responsible for the men everywhere who put the written law aside and trample it in the dust. Sixty-three persons were lynched in this country in 1921. Sixty-five were lynched in 1920. Four were publicly burned alive. Five were burned after death. Two of the victims were women—one in Georgia and the other in Mississippi. Six victims of the mob were white men. Georgia and Mississippi reported 13 lynchings each. Texas and Arkansas had six each to their credit. Florida and Louisiana and South Carolina had five each. North Carolina had four. Alabama came up smiling with two. Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia had one each to their credit. Murder was assigned as the cause for 18 of the lynchings; 19 were attributed to alleged assaults or attempted assaults on women. Not one of these victims would have escaped conviction in a Southern state if the written law had been applied. There would have been no burnings to disgrace the civilization of the South and its people. There were hundreds of whitecappings during the year 1921. There were hundreds of floggings by mobs. There were many cold-blooded assassinations the South over. There were many redhanded murderers acquitted by jurors and these murderers were white men and the jurors were white men. It is not often that a Mexican or a negro accused of a crime escapes the penalty provided by the statutes for wrong doing, either for capital crimes or misdemeanors. They go the road, either to the penitentiary or the gallows high. This is not an argument for the anti-lynching bill. This is not a defense of the anti-lynching bill. A commonwealth should punish its own criminals as the law of the commonwealth provides. Judge Lynch and his followers, who kick aside the written law of the commonwealth, are responsible. It is certain to pass the house. If it is taken up and passed by the senate, President Harding will approve it. Some day Judge Lynch will be throttled by those who believe in the written law. Some day mobs will be taught a lesson by officers of the law who have the courage to stand for the law and the oath of office which they have taken.

Boise Penrose has been condemned as a boss. He was a boss, perhaps the ablest and the most successful that American politics has ever known. He made no concealment of it. He was neither a Uriah Heep coward or a smug or ranting hypocrit. It is admitted by his political enemies that he was a erudite scholar, a splendidly equipped law-maker and in time of war patriotic to the core. Boise Penrose was a follower of

EUROPEAN NATIONS CALL ECONOMIC CONFERENCE TO BE HELD EARLY IN MARCH

United States to Receive Formal Invitation to Attend; Russia Invited and Turkey Entirely Ignored.

Acton of Allied Council in Including Russia Interpreted by Statesmen as Recognition of Soviets.

By Associated Press.

CANNES, Jan. 6.—The allied supreme council in session here this afternoon unanimously decided to hold a European economic conference during the first two weeks of March at Cenoa. The United States will receive a formal invitation to participate and it is expected that country will be represented by several unofficial observers.

Immediately afterward, the premiers and foreign ministers met and adopted conditions under which Russia, Germany, Bulgaria, Austria, Hungary and other European powers will be invited to participate. Turkey was not mentioned in the list.

LLOYD GEORGE SPEAKS

By Associated Press.

CANNES, France, Jan. 6.—Prime Minister Lloyd George of Great Britain, addressing the opening session of the allied supreme council today, warned the allied powers that they could not look to any other but themselves to work out the economic rehabilitation of Europe. He appealed to the allies to set aside prejudices and work together to this end. In his only brief reference to the United States during his address today before the allied supreme council he declared:

"I was sincerely hopeful that the great republic of the west might have joined hands with us. I will not presume to express any opinion upon the attitude of that country. It has its own reasons."

Mr. Lloyd George declared the allies had reached a point where they must act decisively and broadly if the economic structure of Europe was to be saved. Asking permission to speak frankly on the subject of German reparations, Mr. Lloyd George said.

"This is impossible unless it can be by general agreement of the allies. Failing this, the fruits of peace will rot ungathered."

Allow For Opinions.

"The allies," he continued, "must make allowances for each others' opinions. Too much has been heard of individual claims and interests. All the allies have just claims. All the sacrifices are not recorded in evi-

DOCTOR GOES TO PRISON ON OWN VOLITION

Member of Prominent Family Reports to Officials on Learning Sentence Is Affirmed by High Court.

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Texas, Jan. 6.—Dr. E. H. Boaz of Dallas, against whom a verdict of guilty on a charge of murder was recently approved by the court of criminal appeals, has given himself up to the authorities at Huntsville penitentiary and is being held in confinement there.

According to the warden of the prison, Dr. Boaz as soon as he heard of the verdict of the appeals court, came to Huntsville to surrender himself, but as no commitment papers had been received from Dallas, the prison officials declined to confine him. The man lived at a hotel for two days and on the receipt of the commitment papers this morning by the prison authorities he was confined in the penitentiary.

Boaz was sentenced to five years imprisonment for the killing of Henry Watson McDowell, proprietor of a Dallas barber shop, in an alley adjoining the Oriental hotel, in Dallas, on March 6, 1919. He was tried in Dallas the following month and since his conviction, has been at liberty on bond.

McDowell in Dallas three years ago, is a member of one of Tarrant county's oldest families. He was arrested here for violating the traffic laws early in December, taken to the court house to give bond and was recognized there as the fugitive on the Dallas charge. But before action was taken he left the room and escaped.

SUB WARFARE PACT REACHED BY BIG FIVE

"Age Old Penalties" to Be Punishment for Commanders Who Violate Accepted Laws.

Move to End Gas Warfare Has Support of France, Italy and U. S.; Naval Treaty Near Finished.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—A five power contract to impose the age old penalties for piracy against naval commanders who violate accepted laws of naval warfare was approved today by the armament committee of the Washington conference. It completed the Root formula for suppression of U-boat terrorism at sea, and the committee then moved forward toward a proscription of gas warfare on sea or land.

Again Mr. Root drew the resolution too on the prohibition. Again an immediate five power contract to abandon gas or other similar chemical weapons as beyond the pale of humane tolerance is proposed, to be worked out later by world agree-

BABSON TELLS BUSINESS MEN TO ADVERTISE

He Says Future Business Is Now on Bargain Counter and Outlines "The First Opportunity."

(Authentic Statement by Roger W. Babson to be quoted only by Wichita Falls Record News.)

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass. Jan 6.—In discussing his recent trip about the country, Roger W. Babson, statistician and business authority, outlines the first opportunity of the coming period of prosperity as follows:

"On this recent trip which took me into practically every large industrial center in the United States, I talked to business men, large and small, about their business, and we discussed both the present situation and future plans.

"It is very apparent that the executives of America have been busy since January, 1920, even if the businesses themselves have not.

"In fact, American business men have probably done more real thinking since the depression set in than they did in the whole period of prosperity which preceded it. Almost every man I talked with has a plan for a new building, a new product, or the development of a new sales field. The project is on paper, the details have been worked out, and he is just waiting for conditions to get settled. All of these plans mean potential business for next year or the year after—actual orders will be placed just as soon as prices and markets reach stable levels.

"This situation apparent as we reach the bottom of the present area of depression in 1922, offers the first real chance of the coming period of improvement. Future business is now on the production counter. You can buy it cheaper now than you will be able to buy it at any time during the next four or five years.

"It takes no little courage to go counter to the popular current and spend money for advertising when immediate returns are smaller than usual but I am convinced that the man who has that foresight and courage will gain an advantage—a running start—that will carry him through the coming periods of improvement and prosperity.

"Nineteen twenty-two is the year to use the reserve set aside during the fat years. Cut production costs as much as possible, but don't skimp your selling appropriation during 1022. Defer expansion of plant until next year, but this year—increase your advertising.

"Take the aggressive course! There will be considerable business this summer, more the coming fall and winter, more still next year. But the man who goes after it now—is the man who will get it.

"In general business the slight seasonal reaction which I forecast three weeks ago for January is already apparent. The Babsonchart Index shows business running 17 per cent below normal—four per cent lower than last week.

COMRADES OF SLAIN TAXI DRIVER HELD

One Witness at Examining Trial at Austin Claims They Started Fatal Shooting Near Klan Hall.

Statement Is Contradicted by Woman Witness; Justice Objects to Mention of K. K. K.

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Jan. 6.—Barney Blunt and Olney (Chicken) Childress, charged with assault to murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Peeler Clayton, taxicab driver on the night of December 15 near the "Ku Klux Klan Hall," stood examinging trial before Justice M. M. Johnson today and were ordered bound over to the grand jury, which convenes February 6.

Justice Johnson set the defendant's bond at $500 each and gave them until tomorrow morning to meet it. If at that time they have not made the bond, they will be turned over to the authorities, their attorney, John E. Shelton said after the trial today.

Eight witnesses were examined during the trial. The bulk of the testimony was adduced from M. A. Hudler, automobile mechanic, and Mrs. Ben Walker, who lives across the street from the "klan hall." Both admitted that they saw the shooting when Clayton was killed.

Little time was consumed in examining the other witnesses.

The Ku Klux Klan was mentioned frequently and at one time Justice Johnson objected to mention of the klan, saying that it was not on trial. But he assented when County Attorney Hornsby claimed that since "they have started this business I insist we go through with it."

The testimony of Hudler and Mrs. Walker was in direct contradiction. Hudler declared that he saw the automobile in which Childress, Blunt and Clayton were riding at the time they came down the alley and that the first shots were fired from the automobile. He said three shots fired by Childress directly at E. L. Young, police detective, started the firing. The car was so close to him when the shots were fired that his face was powder burned, Hudler declared.

Mrs. Walker said she witnessed the shooting from the door of her residence across the street and that no shots were fired from the car, about eight being fired by the men in the alley. These men were identified by Hudler as Mr. Young, W. E. Mayberry, constodian at Camp Mabry; J. L. McNeil, patrolman, and Basset Miles, federal agent. He also said he heard shots fired after Childress had fired and presumed they were fired by these men.

A. W. Von Struve, local newspaper reporter, testified that Mrs. Walker had told him two days after the shooting that she had not witnessed the shooting.

Tobias Cloud, patrolman, testified that he answered a call to that vicinity on the night of the shooting and found Clayon had been shot. Blunt and Childress were with him, he said, and when he asked who shot Clayton, Childress replied that "the——Ku Klux shot him." Asked by Attorney Hornsby if the men were intoxicated he replied emphatically "they were."

Both attorneys for the defense and prosecution announced after the testimony that they had concluded taking testimony but it was agreed between them that further hearing would be continued until tomorrow at 10 o'clock in order to give the defendants time to make the bond required to bind them over to await action of the grand jury. Tomorrow's session will be a mere formality.

NO FEDERAL BUILDINGS EXPECTED DURING THIS SESSION OF CONGRESS

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS
Record News Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—There will be no public buildings authorized by congress at this session, it was apparently settled today. Speaker Gillett wrote to the Chamber of Commerce at Springfield, Mass., his home town, saying that while he realized the necessity for a new building at Springfield, he did not believe congress would pass a bill. Speaker Gillett wrote the letter after a careful inquiry into the sentiment of leaders.

Other members after hearing of the Gillett letter practically abandoned hope of getting bills through for buildings which are very much needed buildings. They admitted that, if the speaker of the House could not get through a bill for his home town where the need is great, it would be useless for them to hope for buildings. Among the Texas cities whose hopes for a new federal building are nipped for the present are Dallas, Fort Worth, Wichita Falls, Beaumont and Orange.

John Wanamaker Laughs at News Of His Death

By Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 6.—John Wanamaker today laughed away the report from the south that he was dead. Sitting in his office on the seventh floor of a store building engaged in a conference when he was apprised of the report, the former postmaster general said:

"I am as well as you are. There is nothing wrong with me but a slight cold. I received a letter today making an engagement for 1924."

Mr. Wanamaker, who is in his 84th year, was curious to know where the report came from.

"If the report of my death is to be sent from Florida, I will stay away from there," he said.

By Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 6.—Whitney Wesley Wannamaker, a South Carolina planter, died at a local hotel hotel here yesterday and this morning the undertaker in charge of his body announced the death of John Wanamaker, the merchant and former postmaster general.

VALERA QUITS AS PRESIDENT OF IRISH STATE

Offering Resignation of His Cabinet Irish Leader Tells Dail Eiareann He Will Stand for Re-Election.

Dail to Vote on Ratification Thursday; Resignation of De Valera May Be Effective After Vote.

By Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Jan. 6.—Eamonn de Valera resigned the presidency of the Irish republic today, presenting also to the Dail Eireann, the resignation of the cabinet. He told the Dail he would offer himself for re-election standing on the principles of 1916.

Mr. De Valera said he must have a cabinet which thought with him and he would demand that all resources be given him to defend the republic.

After announcing in the Dail Eireann his resignation as president of the Irish republic, Valera declared that he was sick at heart and that whatever happened he intended to retire to private life. He spoke with great feeling, with tears in his eyes when he protested he had never been a party to any political trickery.

DAIL TO VOTE ON RATIFICATION TODAY

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Dail Eireann, in Dublin, has decided to vote tomorrow on the ratification of the Anglo-Irish treaty, says a Central News dispatch from Dublin this afternoon.

The question was raised in the lobby by the newspaper correspondents as to whether Mr. De Valera by tendering his resignation actually had yielded his office as president. Desmond Fitzgerald, minister of propaganda, said it was his understanding that Mr. De Valera when the motion to suspend the order of the day was withdrawn, said he would let the question of his resignation go over until a vote had been taken on the treaty. There was considerable difference of opinion this afternoon on that point.

Later it was declared in other quarters that President De Valera had said he would withdraw his resignation on the agreement that a vote on the treaty would be taken tomorrow.

Debate on ratification of the treaty was resumed in the Dail after the motion which had been pending to suspend consideration of the motion accepting the treaty had been withdrawn. It was suggested that the debate be continued until 10 o'clock tonight and a decision taken tomorrow and the understanding this afternoon was that the vote to decide the issue would be taken as suggested.

HARDIN COUNTY MAN CHAINED ON STREET CORNER

Severe Flogging Also Administered Alleged Moonshiner by Group of Men in South Texas.

By Associated Press.

BEAUMONT, Texas, Jan. 6.—D. L. Mathews, 50 years old, a farmer living in Hardin county, was severely beaten and then tarred and feathered by a group of men who met him in the road as he was returning to his home about 10:30 o'clock last night. Mathews was then placed in a car and taken to Kountze, the county seat, where he was chained to a telephone pole on a downtown corner.

Padlocks fastened the chains and it was with difficulty that he was finally released. Mathews, who was in Beaumont today, declared the men told him they would administer the same treatment to a number of other Hardin county citizens in the near future. They gave the names of prospective victims, Mathews said. While he says he recognized four members of the party, one being an officer, Mathews refused to divulge their names declaring that it was now a personal matter and not one for the law to handle.

Mathews says he was beaten with a heavy strap until the blood flowed. Once while the flogging was in process, he fainted, he says, but was soon revived and the beating continued.

Mathews, who was driving to his home, bogged down in the road with his car and it was while attempting to get his machine out of the mire that the men approached him. He made an effort to reach his gun, he says, but the men grabbed him before he could swing it into action.

CHINO-JAPANESE DISCUSSIONS ARE CLOSED ABRUPTLY

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6—The Shantung conversations between the Japanese and Chinese delegates were adjourned sine die late today when the Chinese declined to accept a Japanese counter proposal for payment for the Kiao-Chow-Tsinan-Fu railway by a fifteen year loan redeemable by China in five years upon six months notice.

Japanese delegates found unacceptable the two Chinese alternative proposals "in their present form" providing for a single immediate cash payment, or installments covering twelve years with an option to take up remaining notes within a shorter period. The Chinese offer included the appointment of a Japanese chief engineer.

The Japanese offer was Japan's "final suggestion" for a settlement of the vexious question of control of the disputed railway, declared to be the crux of the entire Shantung controversy. Masanao Hanihara, one of the Japanese delegates told newspaper correspondents after the meeting. He added that the Chinese had declined this offer, but said that there might be another meeting tomorrow or Monday.

The Japanese, he said, had no intention at the present time of asking intervention by Arthur J. Balfour and Secretary Hughes, although he said the Chinese might consult with the heads of the British and American delegations, under whose "good offices" the conversations were begun several weeks ago, in an attempt to settle the dispute "outside the arms conference."

Dr. Wellington Koo of the Chinese delegation was less communicative immediately after the meeting.

"The situation is quite critical," Dr. Koo said, "and I do not want to say anything hastily. We may however, decide to make a statement later tonight."

The Japanese proposal which the Chinese declined was based on direct instructions from Tokio. The proposal, Mr. Hanihara said, provided for the restoration to China of the Kiao-Chow-Tsinan-Fu line by means of the fifteen year loan through Japanese capitalists. China, he said, would have full title to the road, but would agree to designate a Japanese traffic manager and chief accountant, and if the loan was redeemed, the obligation to retain Japanese experts would cease.

"Unfortunately we were unable to reach an agreement today," he continued, "but we may meet tomorrow or Monday. We feel that our position is entirely clear, but China says that our latest proposition is not acceptable. The Chinese delegates proposed an immediate cash payment for the deferred payments but we do not desire to sell to China the railroad property.

"The original proposition of the Japanese government was to make the railroad a joint Chino-Japanese enterprise. You must remember that this railroad is now Japanese property but as China expressed the wish to have a share in it we expressed our accord and said we would let the Chinese in on a 50 per cent basis but this was not acceptable to them. They wanted to take over all the railroad. So we went still further. We are ready to give the title of the railroad entirely to China but we could not give up all our interest in the property.

"So we planned to make the transfer in the form of a railway loan, the terms of which should be no different from other similar railway loan agreements which China has entered into with the nationals of other powers. Under such a disposition of the question Japan would have the right to furnish the traffic manager and chief accountant with the understanding that they were to be appointed by China."

Mr. Hanihara said that Japan was not vitally concerned over the value of the railroad but pointed out that the reparations commission had placed the value at the time the Germans left the railroad at 13,000,000 gold dollars.

NEWBERRY TO SPEAK BEFORE SENATE SOON

Michigan Senator Scheduled to Answer Ouster Charges When He Takes Floor During Monday.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Definite announcement that Senator Truman H. Newberry, of Michigan, would address the senate Monday, to answer charges that he should be ousted, was made late today by Chairman Spencer of the elections committee.

While the senate debate was proceeding it was said at the White House that President Harding, although holding Mr. Newberry in very high esteem, was not taking any hand in the contest. The president, it was said, does not consider that it is his function to pass upon decisions which are before congress.

Senator Spencer made the statement during a colloquy with Senator Williams, democrat, Mississippi, who demanded to know at what hour "the so-called junior senator from Michigan will appear" in the senate.

"I do not know the precise hour that he will be here to speak for himself" said Senator Spencer.

When Senator Spencer had said that Senator Newberry would speak in his own defense Senator Williams said: "Then let me say that I shall make it a point to be here for I am particularly anxious to hear the so-called senator speak."

And after Senator Spencer had asserted that "there would be nothing so-called about it," when the resolution to seat Senator Newberry was put to a vote, Senator Williams shouted: "Oh, I know you have the votes and that you will cast them to keep him here. But let me say as to the expected appearance of the so-called senator from Michigan that he will be peculiarly welcome if he can show me one reason in one hundred why he should be allowed to sit here as a member of this body."

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 6.—Governor Neff received early today a letter declaring that his life would be in danger if George McKinley Grace, negro convicted of assaulting a white woman in San Antonio and who was sentenced to death, paid the penalty assessed by the court. Grace was hanged in San Antonio this morning.

The letter was signed with the initials "B. O. C." It was written in a scrawling hand and on plain paper. The postmark dated San Antonio, January 5. The letter was received before Grace was hanged but was not made public until late today.

The text of the letter follows:

"I will make it brief. That if Grace is hung, your life will be in danger. Our organization now is 3,500 complete. Take notice. We mean business. The woman will also pay."

The governor had no comment to make about the letter.

Weevil Menace To Be Probed By Government

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Fear that many weevils will hibernate in the weevil infested territory in Texas and reappear in large numbers in the spring has been expressed in reports to the department of agriculture and it was said that the national agricultural conference which is to meet in Washington January 23 will give serious consideration to this subject. Reports of weevil activities during the past season throughout the cotton belt will be available for the conference which it is expected will name a committee of cotton growers and experts to go over the whole situation and consider the advisability of recommending a new line of campaign to exterminate the pests.

Cotton men here said today they were watching the efforts of producers in those sections of the belt that are infested by the boll weevil to substitute grain and other crops. Reports of the success which some farmers have met with in introducing livestock are also said to have encouraged planters throughout the weevil infested areas and some agricultural department authorities look to a rapid expansion of the livestock industry throughout the south.

ment into the fabric of international law. And again it seemed certain that under American initiative, war in future would be stripped of other horrors, German ingenuity let loose upon the world.

Italy gave prompt adhesion to the anti-gas project as "a real step in the path of progress and civilization."

Adjournment of the committee prevented the views of other delegations from being presented, but all were said to favor the ban on gas warfare.

As the naval experts shaping technical questions in the naval limitations sections of the forthcoming treaty still were angling over definitions to make clear the agreements they have already reached, the armament committee adjourned on call. The navy men toiled all day in the hope of concluding tonight, but without success. They will complete their work tomorrow, however, and the full committee will be in a position to resume Monday with the way cleared for quick framing of the naval limitation treaty and its omnibus burden of allied pacts, understandings and declarations.

It was not definitely decided tonight whether the anti-gas declaration was to be incorporated in the voluminous treaty that will be required to cover the naval understandings. It may be put forth as a separate product of the conference. If final approval is given the Root prohibitory resolution.

It seemed more likely, however, that it would go into the general treaty, soon to be laid before the armament committee for final action.

There was a rearrangement today of the Root formula for curbing submarine operations against merchant craft. As the proposals came from the armament committee, it was divided into four separate articles.

The first re-stated in brief language the accepted rules of naval warfare applying to merchant ships, and specifically applied these rules to submarines. The second asked adherence of all nations to this reaffirmation of international law. The third proposed a new principle of international law prohibiting use of submarines as commerce destroyers, coupled with an agreement among the five powers to adopt this rule as among themselves immediately. The fourth was that approved today, invoking the rule of piracy against naval commanders violating the declared laws of war.

GIFT OF FRANCE UNVEILED WITH BRIEF CEREMONY

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Described as "evidence of the friendship between the two republics," a statue of Joan of Arc was unveiled here today in the presence of President and Mrs. Harding, Ambassador Jusserand of France, and prominent American officials. The statue was dedicated "to the women of America" and was a gift of the women of France.

Secretary Weeks accepting the gift said it would "stand as a monument to the highest attainments in human life—faith in God, devotion to country and character without blemish."

NEW YORK SUGAR

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The raw sugar market was firmer and prices were established on the basis of 3.48 for centrifugal for both Porto Rico and Cubas. There were sales of 24,000 bags of Cubas to a local refiner at 1 7-8c for cost and freight, 15,000 bags to a Canadian refiner at the same price and 5,00 bags of Porto Ricos to an operator at 3.48 for centrifugal.

There was a firmer feeling in raw sugar futures during the early operations on covering prompted by the higher ruling of the spot market and the increased business in refined sugar for export, but after showing gains prices reacted under realizing, closing unchanged to 2 points net lower. March closed at 2.16; May 2.32; July 2.44; September 2.61. The feature in the refined market was the announcement of the formation of a sugar export corporation under the Webb act to promote export trade in refined sugar. Recently business for export account has been rather large both through the corporation and refiners not affiliated with the company, although no improvement was noted in the domestic demand. Refined futures were without transactions, closing unchanged. March closed at 5.00; May 5.26; July 5.30.

dences of devastation. Although formidable, this is the least part of the havoc and devastation wrought by the war."

Great Britain Suffered.

"I ask leave to speak for my own country," Mr. Lloyd George continued. "It has been assumed that she did not suffer from the war. This is grossly untrue. We are paying 110,000,000 pounds sterling annually in pensions alone and 100,000,000 pounds sterling to the unemployed. These are but two results of our participation. It has been assumed that Great Britain suffered less because she balanced her budget. Her taxes are the highest in the world."

The British premier said he had always been placed in the dangerous position.

"German Capacity to Pay."

"I am not a pro-German apologist" he declared. "When Great Britain advised against rushing Germany into bankruptcy she did not have the interest of Germany in mind, although Germany always had been England's best customer. The worst thing the allies could have done would have been to rush Germany into the same position as Russia is now in.

Germany's capacity to pay depends upon her foreign trade. Statements as to her international internal wealth are misleading and inconclusive. Her export trade must revive if she must pay what she owes. It is now only 25 per cent of the pre-war figures. The restoration of eastern and southeastern Europe is vital to the health of the world. If the allies do not do it, who will?"

"Blood Stained Hands."

Mr. Lloyd George referred to the prejudices against dealing with a nation whose hands were stained with blood and added, evidently referring to the recent agreement between France and the Turkish nationalists at Angora:

"I know of a government which quite recently willingly took the hand of an assassin in one part of the east."

At this point Premier Briand is said to have remarked with a smile that he made the acquaintance of the Turkish nationalist envoys in London.

"Hope will follow the policy M. Millerand enunciated at the Lympne conference in 1920," continued Mr. Lloyd George, "when he declared France was ready to take up relations with Russia the day she proclaimed solemnly that she would respect the obligations of every kind taken by her predecessors with foreign governments. If Russia wants recognition, she must recognize her honorable obligations and agree not to attack her neighbors. And we must insist that her neighbors do not attack Russia.

"But Europe certainly can not afford to ignore these conditions," continued the British premier, "and inasmuch as responsibility for Europe must be with the victors in the late war, we ought to assume that responsibility. And if we do not take it boldly and courageously, we need not wait for history to condemn us. We should be condemned by the voice of our own countrymen and that very soon."

BELIEVE ACTION RECOGNIZES SOVIET

By Associated Press.

CANNES, Jan. 6.—What is regarded by the majority of the delegates here as amounting to recognition of the soviet government of Russia was decided upon by the allied supreme council today when the British proposal for an international financial and economic conference with the participation of Russia and Germany was approved unanimously.

The condition attached to Russian participation are that Soviet Russia cease bolshevik propaganda abroad, that she undertake not to attack her neighbors and that she recognize all honorable obligations entered into by preceding Russian governments. On the other hand, the neighbors of Russia must undertake not to attack the soviet.

PARIS CHAUFFEURS AND WAITERS OVERCHARGE

(By International News Service)

PARIS, Jan. 7.—Overcharging of Americans by taxicab drivers, waiters, etc., has been brought to the attention of M. Leviller, perfect of police, who has promised to take drastic action to curb the practice, which has incurred the displeasure of American transients and resulted in unfavorable opinions of France among tourists who have been mulcted by these profiteers.

The matter was brought to a head when J. H. Nivart-Chatelain, an American newspaperman of French birth, refused to pay an extortionate taxicab fare and had the chauffeur arrested. He brought his complaint direct to the perfect and the chauffeur was given a stiff jail sentence. Nivart-Chatelain then decided to publish a guide book for American tourists here, which will effectually circumvent attempts at extortion. American Ambassador Herrick and the French government have approved the plan and are co-operating with the author of the guide book.

IMPROVEMENT IN EUROPE IS TO BE SOUGHT

Allied Supreme Council Approves Calling of Conference Looking to Economic Betterment.

By Associated Press.

CANNES, Jan. 6.—Definite action looking to the rehabilitation of Europe from an economic standpoint, was taken at the first session of the allied supreme council here today when unanimous approval was given for the calling of an international financial and economic conference in which Germany and Russia are to have a part. Sometime early in March has been set for the momentous gathering. Genoa, Italy, has been designated as the place.

An invitation to the United States to participate has been extended through Ambassador George Harvey, who is here as official observer for his government.

Russia's participation in the Genoa conference is on condition that she cease bolshevik propaganda abroad, that she undertake not to attack her neighbors and that she recognize all the honorable obligations entered into preceding Russian governments.

Prime Minister Lloyd George took the most prominent part in the deliberation speaking for an hour. He declared that the public opinion of the world demanded that the allies take wider responsibilities to revive Europe and sounded a warning that the allies themselves must solve the problem of the rehabilitating of Europe economically. He appealed to them to forget their prejudices and co-operate to this end.

After the decision to call the economic conference was made the question arose as to its seat. The Italians strongly urged their country. Prague was the only other suggestion but all the delegates approved Genoa.

At the afternoon session conditions were adopted under which Russia, Germany, Bulgaria, Austria, Hungary and all the other European powers are to be invited to the conference, but no mention was made of Turkey.

Women May Be Dare-Devil Flyers

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—Will women furnish the daring fliers of the world in the near future and perhaps achieve the coveted title of "ace" in some future war?

This is regarded as something more than a possibility by airmen of experience.

They base their observations on experiences in flight with women passengers. It is fast becoming generally known that flying seems to appeal more widely to women than to men. "They dote on it!" according to some pilots. One pointed out that where the average man will decline a chance to go up the average woman will jump at it.

One cynic blamed this tendency on the alleged lack of responsibility of some women, or perhaps a lack of realization of anything more than the sensation of the flight. It was related by a flier, however, that in taking a group of women up one by one, after all had made him promise not to perform "stunts" while they were passengers, all but one fair aviatrix made him break his promise, then wanted to go up again.

It is a fact that abroad, where travel by air is more common than in America, women are the most enthusiastic patrons of these air conveyances. And some of the most daring stunt performers in the history of aviation have been women fliers. Some of them lost their lives, but the veterans of their sex are still seeking new feats to try in the air.

Observers also point to the large number of women who engage in balloon jumps as county fairs and other gala celebrations, and also to the number of women who are professional "high divers" and aerial performers with circuses.

As for the part women fliers could play in war, it was shown that any woman capable of piloting a plane and being a good shot could hold her own with any flier of the enemy, regardless of sex. The consensus of opinion is that women make good aviators, and the view is expressed by veteran fliers that their ranks will grow.

AMERICAN WOMAN CHEMIST FIGHTS EASTERN FAMINE

(By International News Service)

SHANGHAI, China, Dec. 29.—Miss Hartley Embrey, a chemist of the Rockefeller Foundation in Peking and a graduate of the University of Chicago, who has just completed her work of devising a satisfactory diet for famine sufferers in China, has been invited to go to the Philippines to study Philippine foodstuffs and make out a number of balanced diets at the lowest possible cost.

The following is the communication of Dr. Victor G. Heiser, former director of health in the Philippines and at present connected with the Rockefeller foundation, to Director Merrill, of the Philippine Bureau of Science:

"While in Peking during the month of September it was brought to the attention of General Wood and the undersigned the work in food analysis which was being done at the Peking Union Medical College by Miss Hartley Embrey. Her work has already had practical application in that she was able to devise a satisfactory diet for subsisting famine sufferers at the rate of four cents a day.

"Miss Embrey is an American girl and is reported by competent authorities to be an accomplished chemist and has received her training at the University of Chicago. In view of the great importance which proper diets have in relation to disease, it seems most desirable that further knowledge in this respect in the Philippines should become available. In discussing this matter with General Wood it was his opinion, as well as my own, that this is an unusual opportunity for the Philippine government."

BEXAR COUNTY NEGRO HANGED FRIDAY MORN

By Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 6.—George McKinley Grace, negro, was hanged in the Bexar county jail at 11:25 a.m., today for criminal assault upon a white woman. The negro was executed after certain white women had made a determined attempt to have the governor commute his sentence.

The negro maintained he was innocent as he stepped on the death trap, his last words being: "I am innocent. I am ready to die." He had previously made two confessions, one in writing, prior to his trial and one orally after his conviction.

Thousands of people crowded the streets surrounding the jail, blocking traffic in a vain attempt to witness the execution. It was carried out on a steel trap built in the jail. About 150 persons, among them some women saw the actual execution. Grace died twelve minutes after the trap sprung.

WORK HARD TO CHECK GOTHAM CRIMINAL WAVE

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Wheels of justice in New York were speeded up today by judges and grand juries, in an effort to check the wave of murders, assaults, hold-ups and robberies, that have gripped the greater city. Indictments charging Luther Boddy a negro and an old offender with the murders of Detectives Francis Buckley and Wm. Miller, were returned this afternoon—less than 20 hours after the detectives had been laid low in Harlem and bench warrants were issued for Boddy's arrest.

Judges of the court of special sessions started a campaign for the roundup and imprisonment of alleged criminals out on bail awaiting trial. To this end, Judge McIntyre called more than 500 cases for trial—some of them more than two years old, and defendants who wanted further postponements, it was agreed, would be required to furnish the maximum bail permitted for the offenses with which they are charged, or else await trial behind the bars. Newly arrested prisoners also felt the effects of the higher bail decision, several going to jail in default of bonds, while convicted prisoners, coming up for sentence, faced judges who were prepared to give them the limit in the way of fines and imprisonment.

"THE TARIFF IS THE THING" SAYS OIL MAN

Charleston A. Kleinmann, of Southern Tariff Association, Goes to Washington by Invitation.

Accepts Invitation to Appear Before Senate Finance Committee: Favors Protection on Products.

Charleston A. Kleinman, chairman of the North Texas division of the Southern Tariff association, accepted an invitation to appear before the senate finance comittee at the hearing of oil producers and left for Washington, D. C., Friday night. Senator Harreld of Oklahoma is leading the fight for independent producers who are demanding a tariff on oil importations. Speaking of the tariff issue Mr. Kleinman said:

"The cowmen need a tariff on hides and imported frozen meats, Americans engaged in the sugar industry should be protected by a tariff on importations of sugar. Really the South must get a better price for its products. We have failed distressfully competing with cheap foreign labor. The South must and will eventually change to a protective tariff. Why not now? We need it badly.

"Unquestionably conditions are bad all over the country at the present time, but conditions in the oil business are absolutely panicky in so far as the independent producers are concerned. It is a fight for their very existence right now. There is no use sugar-coating the pill, minimizing the danger or sitting still and waiting for chance or the Goddess of Fortune to pull us through, for this will not happen. The time has come to fight—fight with concerted action and according to intelligent plans, for it will take all of that to win.

"Labor in the United States and Northern and Eastern manufacturers have always been protected against cheap European labor and working conditions by placing a heavy tariff on competitive articles. The independent oil producers and refiners, and the American public generally, have an even greater inherent right to protection; because, unlike the manufacturers, where the competition comes from virtually one source; and when the independent producers are forced out, this centralization of the industry will unquestionably prove a menace to the county.

"The cry of conservation is simply a blind and is unjustifiable. Why make Mexico rich, leaving our industries to suffer and ruin? American producers in Mexico do not have to pay any taxes to our government, while producers in the United States have every conceivable tax to pay. In addition the cost of uplift is greatly in favor of the Mexican producers. They have approximately 200 wells, with an average production of 2,500 barrels; whereas, we have approximately 250,000 wells, with an average daily production of approximately four barrels each. From this it will be noted that the cost of production in Mexico is perhaps less than one-tenth of the cost of uplift in the United States.

"Again, the cry of over-production in the United States is erroneous. From statistics published in February, 1921, we find that the United States produced during that month 35,000,000 barrels of oil and consumed 35,000,000, and imported over 11,000,000 barrels from Mexico. From this it will be seen that we have sufficient production to meet our demands, and any surplus is approximately that amount imported.

"As is the case with wheat, corn, cotton or any other of our products, the amount of surplus is what controls the market. We do not need this surplus of imported oil, but we do need the necessary protection from an unlimited supply of cheaply produced crude from Mexico and South American countries. The Northern and Eastern manufacturers combined and fought for a protective tariff and got it; California fruit growers have a tariff on lemons, etc., but they had to fight for it. We should start now. Let the independent producers and refiners get together, let them put their shoulders to the wheel, let them fight with intelligence, with concerted action, with an object to win and a plan of operation, and victory will be theirs."

Dream of Girl From "No Man's Land" To Better Surroundings Revealed in Office of the County Juvenile Officer

The dream of a sixteen-year-old girl who ran away from her shack home in "No Man's Land" on the north side several months ago, in order to get away from sordid surroundings to a life of more happiness and greater opportunity for self-improvement ended temporarily at least, at the office of Juvenile Oficer Yates Friday morning.

The girl was arrested Wednesday at Fort Worth by juvenile officers of that city at the instigation of Officer Yates after the girl's father had come to the local office and made serious charges against a Burkburnett man in connection with the departure of his daughter from his home. Following her arrest, she came here unescorted on a train from Fort Worth and reported to juvenile officials.

Friday morning after a night in the juvenile jail, she told the story of impossible home conditions which she said resulted in her decision to leave. She said that she was first compelled to pick cotton until late in the season and later secured employment with a family in Burkburnett. Still later, according to her story she secured other employment at Fort Worth, where she was when apprehended through the efforts of her father. She emphatically denied the accusation of her father regarding the man in the case who she said had known as a friend who had aided her at Burkburnett.

Certain features of the girl's story including her statement as to the conditions existing at her father's home here have been verified by officers. She is being cared for by the Salvation Army pending further investigation.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

Alexander Hamilton. He believed in a strong centralized government. He did not believe that all power came from the people—from below. Really he did not believe the people capable of self-government. He was a fellower of Henry Clay, who believed in the highest protection of American industry. He was close to the industrial and the banking forces of American life. He stood for BIG BUSINESS and insisted that when BIG BUSINESS was successful, the country was prosperous. He was the spokesman of organized business and consolidated capital in the senate of the United States and organized business included the gigantic steel and oil companies or combinations of this country. He made no concealment of this. He never broke his word. He never evaded an issue. He was the most ultra of partisans as a politician and the most genial and companionable of men in social life. H. N. F. is a Democrat, a Democrat to the core, but he plays no favorites when it comes to preparing a statement of facts. If Penrose was a boss, the people of Pennsylvania made him a boss. If Penrose believed in the rule of big business, then the people of Pennsylvania believed in the same rule, as they sent him to the senate five times. If he was the spokesman of commerce and finance, then the people of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania are either not capable of self-government or they believed in the rule of the boss as well as the rule of commerce and finance. They were the masters. They had the ballot. They cast their ballots for Boise Penrose. He believed that the masses were not capable of self-government and should be led by the successful or the wise, and that the laws of the country should be made by the successful and the wise. Pennsylvania ranks second in population and wealth in the sisterhood of states. Pennsylvanians kept Penrose in office almost forty years either in State or Nation. If he misrepresented them it was their own fault. They had an opportunity many times to cast him aside. Now that he is dead a swarm of little bosses will battle for his mantle but there is no Boise Penrose, or man of his mould, to step into the shoes of the dead boss, powerful leader and able statesman.

And now the German flag has reappeared among those of other nations which fly from the tall buildings of New York financial and shipping districts and marks the location of the re-establishment of the consular office of the new German republic. In the year 1913 the debt of the world was 40 billions. Now it has a debt of 340 billions, to say nothing of the millions who were slain, the millions who were maimed, the millions who were made widows and orphans, the millions who died from hunger or disease or the hundreds of millions who were ruined by the war of the sword. And Uncle Sam is invited to join in a cancellation of war debts as a cure for the financial sickness of the world. History is in the making.

Boise Penrose is to have a successor. Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania is to resign and take an appointment to the senate at the hands of the present lieutenant-governor of that state. What has become of that winning slogan "Let the people rule?" Was it slain in war time?

Judge Richard I. Monroe of the Fifty-fourth district court in a charge to his grand jury said: "Every mob that takes the law into its own hand and lynches a person ,whether that party be guilty or not, is guilty of murder." This McLennan county jurist is a stickler for the written law, the constitution and the bill of rights. There is no higher law; there can be no higher law. All good men bow to the law and champion law enforcement. It is the safe and the sane road to travel. Any other road leads to anarchy.

NIGHT AND DAY BANK CLOSES; CASHIER GONE

By Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 6.—The Night and Day bank with deposits of $3,000,000 did not open today. Bank Commissioner J. G. Hughes said his examiners had been auditing the books of the institution for several days and found an apparent shortage of more than $100,000. A. O. Meininger, cashier, has not appeared at the bank since Wednesday, it was said.

Officials of the bank in an announcement later today said the shortage may reach $250,000. The capital stock of the institution is $150.000 and its capital, surplus and undivided profits, according to its last statement, was $259,000. A large crowd gathered in front of the institution and many women wept when they read the statement on the door that the bank was in the hands of the state bank commissioner. The institution had 15,000 depositors.

The bank was organized in 1910 and was open until 9 p. m. every business day. H. H. Hohenschild is president and former Governor Elliot W. Major is a member of the board of directors.

Rippling Rhymes

SYMPATHY.

The cold winds roar against the door, and sleet and snow are flying, and my Aunt Kate remarks, "Some skate is doubtless freezing, dying. Some homeless wight is out tonight in all this blowsy blizzard; the dawn will find him dead and blind, or I'm a tinhorn wizard." The room is warm and my fat form on cushions soft is resting, and I would spend the evening's end in singing and in jesting. For comfort's mine, I sleep and dine, conditions all are pleasing; why should I care how others fare outdoors, where things are freezing? But my Aunt Kate, as sad as fate, is murmuring and sighing; "It is a sin to sit within, when poor lost boobs are dying. Ah, hear that cry! Some luckless guy for succor now is yelling, so let us go across the snow and bring him to our dwelling." So winter nights to me are frights, they keep my wet tears falling; for my Aunt Kate is simply great at hearing phantoms calling. My good Aunt Kate, she sits up late, and leaves her tea untasted; she makes me sore, for it's a bore when sympathy is wasted. I'll gladly aid the gent decayed or any one who suffers; but it's a shame for man or dame to take up luckless duffers.

The Daily Story

The Apology

Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner

Any child would show more interest in choosing from a shelf of glass-eyed dolls than Mrs. Peters did as she glanced over the pale array of orphans presented for her inspection.

"I do not care to study their physiognomy or know anything about their temperaments," she informed the matron, decisively. "I can take any boy here and mold his character to my desire, for I believe in early training—if it is firm. I merely wish to be sure of one with a good physique, as I intend him for a strenuous career."

It would be useless to describe Mrs. Peters, for no one would believe that the twentieth century could produce such a woman. The mid-Victorian novelists first pictured her. Not one of the urchins before her but had secretely prayed for a mother and a real home, yet now that they were facing this prospect not one but averted his eyes.

"I am ready to sign adoption papers," went on the applicant, "and have brought proofs and references to show my ability to give the child a good home and proper care. Which is your most perfect child, physically?"

The matron scanned the group before her. "Bud Hanson, come forward, please," she ordered.

"Bud has been here since he was a baby, and except for the measles and whooping cough has never been sick. He is a good, obedient boy—"

Mrs. Peters raised a deprecating hand. "Never mind that. My adopted son will be good and obedient," she said. "I will take the child, but shall never call him by that outlandish name. Next Sunday he shall be christened John Wesley Peters. But even before that time he shall be made acquainted with the career of the brilliant man whose name he is to bear and with the life which I have arranged for him."

It was well that Bud was sturdy, and of stout heart, else what he found out in the days prior to that Sunday would have overwhelmed him.

His new mother, the relict of Professor John Wesley Peters, polaeontologist, had raised an anaemic son, John Wesley Peters II., to take up his father's interrupted work. John Wesley Peters II. was making ready to begin his research in the fossiliferous strata when bronchial trouble cut off his projected career.

Therefore, as a sacred duty, the bereaved mother picked out this orphan and brought him home to pursue the forecordained work of the lost John Wesley Peters II.

Bud, of sturdy Scandinavian ancestry, had been the victim of a system in the home, but it was spread out over many. Now he found himself the sole victim of a system which was much more intricate and rigid.

"Now, remember, John Wesley," his mother-by-law admonished, "for I do not wish to repeat, when the alarm rings, arise immediately, turn back the bed covers and draw the water in your tub. Take your cold plunge, rub off briskly, and go through your arm and chest exercises by your open window for five minutes. Then dress and be downstairs by 6:30. Bible study and prayer will be followed by breakfast at 7."

By the time this strenuous beginning was ironed into the boy's mind, following a probationary week, full of do's and don't's, came the introduction to the American public school system.

"Miss Granby, this is my foster son, John Wesley," announced Mrs. Peters. "He is to follow in the footsteps of my brilliant husband and son. You will find him obedient and amenable to discipline."

Miss Granby surveyed the round-eyed youth before her and perceived that under circumstances the face might twinkle with mischief. Mrs. Peter's faith in her system of moulding the male youth was rooted in the success of her method with her tractable son. Miss Cranby's pessimism concerning small boys was the growth of years of experience with many, and no two alike. Her thin lips broke into a smile. "I dare say that we shall get on very well, Mrs. Peters. John Wesley, take the third seat from the front on the right," she admonished.

The head of John Wesley Peters III. spun like a top in the days that followed, what with rules at home and at school. His teaching had been primitive and he found himself in a modern schoolroom full of strange charts and appliances intended to simplify learning and to charm the student, but unalterably confusing to him.

His morning nap had always been interrupted by a "Git up!" which he understood perfectly, but he had to struggle with the command to "arise immediately upon the stroke of 6." In truth, about half of his orders were Greek and his work in carrying them out was after the blind fashion of the dog which is striving after the meaning of its trainer. On the whole, he got on fairly well, by trying hard, and by ingenious guesses.

To Mrs. Peters he was an example of what training will do; to Miss Cranby he was a volcano, sleeping, but not dead, and she watched for the eruption which she felt sure would come. Left to himself he would not have fallen. The same might be said of Adam. John Wesley's Eve came to him in the form of Alice Rebecca, who, by virtue of having the bluest eyes, the largest hairbows—also blue—the prettiest clothes, and the richest father of any girl in the room, was queen of the May every school day, and on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays as well.

Partly because of the everlasting and not wholly feminine desire to extend her sway, partly because she was tender-hearted, she helped John Wesley to translate Miss Cranby. It began when they were directed to give "A Concise and Clear Account of the Discovery of America." Through the fog which hid the world from him, Alice Rebecca loomed, her blue eyes two heaven-sent beacons. "That means to tell it short and easy, so's any one could understand it," she whispered under cover of her geography.

For several days Alice Rebecca translated and it began to look to John Wesley as though some day he would understand what Miss Cranby meant when she spoke, and his tension relaxed a trifle.

Then the eternal triangle, which has all ages for its own, was formed by Milton Ray, who had been the favorite at Alice Rebecca's court and who did not intend to be superseded. Milton was wily beyond his years and hid his resentment, while with artless friendliness he sought John Wesley's confidence. Then he struck.

Now in Miss Cranby's room there was one forbidden sin. Each year it was committed in some form or other and each year by drastic methods it was stamped out—that was, changing Cranby to cranberry. Any one can realize the temptation offered youth. This yearly riot had been quelled before John Wesley came.

"I notice that you always say Miss Cranby, John Wesley," remarked Milton Ray one evening as he walked chumily beside the boy. "Don't you know that her name's Cranberry?"

"N-no," stammered John Wesley abashed. "I thought e. one said Cranby.

"Well, us kids are awful careless in our talk," confessed the wily one, "but teacher likes to have us speak up loud and plain. I thought I'd tell you."

And if a bomb had burst in the quiet of the schoolroom the next day it would have been no more startling than when John Wesley Peters, rising to answer a question, plainly addressed his teacher as "Miss Cranberry."

The ruler came down sharply on the desk. Miss Cranby's face darkened. "John Wesley Peters, what do you mean by calling me that?"

The boy quailed, blanched, but held his ground. "Why, ain't it your name?" he asked innocently.

Again the ruler crashed. "So you add impertinence to insubordination, do you? Take your seat and remain after school. I shall attend to your case then!"

Beyond noticing that Milton Ray walked down the hall, past the open door, with Alice Rebecca, John Wesley heeded nothing until the last struggle was gone. He was wallowing in a slough of not understanding. "Impertinence" and "insubordination" seemed terrible words. What did they mean? On the whole, he would have preferred a whipping to the lecture that Miss Cranby delivered. He did not understand it, but by the big words in it he knew himself to be a desperate character, so he sat mute before her, unable to open his mouth in explanation.

"There are two courses open to you, John Wesley," she concluded. "Apology or expulsion. You have your choice."

The boy did not reply. "Apology," "expulsion." He raised mystified eyes to Miss Cranby.

"You may have two days in which to decide what you will do. You may go."

John Wesley failed to eat his supper and repeated the offense at breakfast. Copious doses from a bottle of medicine inherited from the other John Wesley did not restore his appetite. Two days he sat in his place in school, pale and downcast, ignored by his teacher and the object of round-eyed curiosity on the part of his mates. Then Miss Cranby apparently aware of his presence for the first time called him to her desk. "John Wesley"—her manner, was magisterial—"you have had two days in which to decide between apology or expulsion. Which will you do, apologize or take your books and go home?"

Mrs. Peters had brought Wesley to school to stay; so he dared not go home. Apology must be pretty bad, but he was going to dig skeletons among savages, who might kill him, anyway. This could not be worse than that.

"Well, which will you do?" rasped Miss Cranby.

There was a lessening of the breathless tension in the room. John Wesley braced himself.

"Very well," answered Miss Cranby promptly, with something of relief in her tones. "Your apology is accepted. Let this be the last I hear of it. Go to your seat and study your lessons!"

So that was all! The dreadful "apologize" was nothing but a word!

Dumb with bewilderment, he stumbled down the aisle and sank weakly into his seat. John Wesley Peters III.—late Bud Hanson of the home—gazed round-eyed into space and wondered.

Little Stories for Bedtime

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

(Copyright by J. G. Lloyd.)

Where Mrs. Grouse Was.

Sammy Jay had spread a false report all through the snow-covered Green Forest and over the glistening Green Meadows. He had told every one he met that Farmer Brown's boy had killed poor Mrs. Grouse and taken her home for his dinner. Now, it was true that he had taken her home, but it wasn't true that he had killed her. You see, he had found her very weak and helpless under the hard, icy crust that Jack Frost had made while she was asleep down under the snow, and which she couldn't break. Sammy Jay and Peter Rabbit had both seen her carried away and both knew that she hadn't been killed. But it made a bigger story, a more dreadful story, to say that she had been killed, and Sammy Jay dearly loves to tell bad news. Besides, he is always ready to think evil of others.

"If he didn't kill her, then he will kill her when he gets her home," said Sammy to himself, "and so it's all right to say that he has killed her." So he flew about spreading that dreadful false story and actually enjoyed telling the dreadful news.

Of course, all of the friends of Mrs. Grouse felt terribly. Some of them Peter Rabbit saw and he told them Sammy Jay's story was not true—that Mrs. Grouse had not been killed. But he had to admit that she had been carried away by Farmer Brown's boy and quite willing to to believe the very worst of him. So they all mourned for poor Mrs. Grouse and said how dreadful and how sad it was and how they should miss her and how they hoped that some day something dreadful would happen to Farmer Brown's boy.

But Mrs. Grouse didn't know anything about this. At first she had been terribly frightened when she had been picked up and knew that Farmer's Brown's boy held her a prisoner. But after a while his hands felt very warm, for she was shivering with cold, and they seemed very gentle. And then, she didn't know why, she wasn't afraid any more. She just cuddled right down and felt sure that nothing dreadful was going to happen.

And nothing dreadful did happen. Oh, my, no! She was taken up to Farmer Brown's house and right inside, where it was as warm as in summer and where Farmer Brown's boy's mother stroked her with such gentle hands and said, "You poor, poor little bird." And then when she was warm she was taken out to the henhouse and put in a box with plenty of nice warm hay and there she was left with all the corn and oats and barley that she could eat. This was what she needed most, for you know it was because she had had nothing to eat for so long, while she was a prisoner under that dreadful icy crust, that she was too weak to fly when the crust was broken.

So she ate and ate until she could eat no more and then nestled down in the soft, warm hay to sleep, for she was tired, so very, very tired. And as she closed her eyes it seemed to her that she couldn't remember when she had been so comfortable—certainly not for days and days. And she could sleep without fear of Reddy Fox or Hooty the Owl or any other danger. To be sure she was a prisoner, but somehow she didn't mind. Not then, anyway. And—and—well, Farmer Brown's boy wasn't dreadful at all; he was rather nice.

Open Doors In Business

Professional Housecleaners.

New time and new conditions bring new business opportunities. Among these is the business of Professional Housecleaning. It is done by cleaners who visit their patrons regularly and go over their house at so much per hour. They come with their own tools and vacuum cleaners, wash windows, wipe up the floors, clean the rugs and do all that is necessary to leave the house neat and clean. They will visit weekly or whenever called and have regular patrons.

This business will probably increase as more women take part in business and are less at home to do their own housework. Domestic help, too, grows more scarce and, as all other occupations are being specialized, so with the weekly housecleaning. In cities, offices and apartment buildings are daily cleaned by professionals.

The income from this work depends on the skill of the workers, the class of people they serve, and the outfit required to do their work well. It ranges from forty cents per hour per "hand" to seventy-five cents. The work is sometimes contracted for by a manager who brings her own help and pays them at terms arranged between themselves. In such cases the manager makes something for the work of her helpers, besides her own labor.

For the energetic and businesslike woman who is able to do such work there is a better income in this occupation than in almost any other kind of housework. It may be enlarged until quite a business is built up.

FINICK APPETITIES

Parents who, as children, had hearty appetites, cannot understand why children of today sit listlessly at table and don't like this, or won't eat that, and ask "Do we HAVE to eat breakfast?"

Perhaps the main cause of their food revolt is that we supply our tables too lavishly and with too much variety so that nothing is a treat any more. Persons who work in a bakery or at candy or ice-cream counters seldom taste the dainties they serve. We overstock our tables with rich and fancy foods until our children are thus surfeited and disgusted with the business of eating.

Then, too, they never have a chance to get really hungry. They run at all hours to the corner grocery, the ice-cream parlors and the cafeteria.

In the old-time home, the attitude was entirely different. Mother continually marvelled at the bottomless pit which was our appetite and wondered anxiously if her jam could be made to stretch over another meal. Food was more scarce and this added to the piquancy of it. In the modern home the mother constantly urges more food upon her children and pleads, "It's so good for you." This, of itself, condemns her to disappointment for people never like what is "good for them."

But we adults tackle bravely the proposition of getting away with the food we have provided and the result is stuffing and indigestion.

A friend told me recently of being at a party of society women where the most delicious refreshments were served—heavy salads with whipped cream and rich cakes and confections. Every one of those women was overheavy to begin with but they ate the whole menu and afterward some of them actually panted.

I visited once a wealthy home where the scientific mother had consulted a child specialist about the food needs of her children and lived scrupulously by his directions. She fed her four rosy little ones at a table by themselves and the meal I saw them eat consisted solely of creamed peas on toast. They rollicked all the meal through and there was no coaxing and no complaint. The plan seemed to me a bit stern and unsociable on the part of the parents, but the sturdy children were proof of the wisdom of it.

Long enough abstinence between meals will make the simplest food delectable. I had vainly tried to get my youngest child to eat lettuce on account of the vitamines therein, but she would have none of it, until once, after missing two meals with a slight illness, a dish of merely salted head-lettuce was brought to her with the caution to eat it slowly as that was all there was of it. Never had food seemed more choice to her and now she asks for a generous serving whenever it appears on the table. I, myself, have the pleasant recollections of delicious potato soup or mush-and-milk on chilly nights camping in the northwoods.

What would happen in our households if we served simpler meals, mostly fruit, until our families got back to hearty appetites; and then kept the menu very frugal and wholesome after that? Wouldn't it save a lot of time, and money, and diabetes and gout?

CHAPTER XLIII.

Ruth Browning was fortunate in that she had received experienced guidance when her department was first opened. Robert Turnbull had given her plan the utmost service of which he was capable—which was very much indeed, as he was a shrewd, keen, if rather hard-headed business man.

At first it was the new business department that interested him, and that only. But gradually there crept into his work a wish that the woman should succeed. He realized that ability, real ability, is rare in either men or women and that when this rare trait was discovered it should be given an outlet commensurate with what is promised.

Ruth had adventured into a branch of business life little occupied by women, barely known in fact save to a few. A business that required tact, constant battling with competitors, and a business that once secured required wisdom to keep.

Ruth was singular in one respect, singular in that she was different. Every idea that came to her demanded an outlet in action. Naturally there were times, many of them, when the first crude idea was replaced by other counteracting ideas. She had the important mental habit, or trick if one may so express it, of absolute concentration upon the matter in hand.

It was in part these unusual traits which had caused Robert Turnbull to closely observe Ruth, to throw his influence her way when he first talked with Mr. Carr about a woman's bond department managed solely by a woman—after they had made sure she was the right woman for the place.

Ruth Browning was not only intelligent. She was in a way very intellectual, a clear thinker. This ability to think clearly is a tremendous force if rightly directed.

We often tire of hearing of temperament, personality. Yet people lacking these traits more often than not are mere "cumberers of the earth." The world could very well get along without them. Indeed they would scarcely be missed.

The man of woman with vision is the one who succeeds.

And whoever heard of a man or woman without temperament, without personality, who had vision

To be pelted with flowers in the Elysian Fields of social success is an entrancing experience to many women. To grasp the honors of the business world is to others a more luxurious pastime. Ruth Browning belonged to the latter class.

Almost from childhood she had planned a business career. College had been her goal long before she left grammar school. But not college as many girls dream of it—as an educational idea only, or to have a good time. It was preparatory to the work she had planned for herself when in pinafores and pigtails.

Not that Ruth at that time, and indeed not until in her second year at college, had any idea just what form her business aspirations would take. Night after night had she lain awake for hours after her roommate slept considering and dismissing idea after idea that promised success after she left college.

She had agreed with her father to pay him back if he would allow her to go to college—an unnecessary thing for a girl, in his mind. He was earning a large salary, was his idea, and she'd better remain at home and marry some nice young fellow.

But Ruth only laughed and insisted that she wanted to go to college. In the end she had her way.

Somewhere in the back of her mind there had always lurked a suspicion of her father's business ability. He was honest and faithful as she well knew. But he was a shirker. And while she was too young to place her finger on the pulse of his incompetency she felt it was there.

Then like a bolt from the azure came his dismissal as "driftwood" a month after she had been graduated.

"Thank God, I insisted upon going to college!" she had said over and over to herself since the day he came home to tell his family he was not appreciated, that he had been thrown out to make room for some young whippersnapper.

Then came his refusal to accept what he called a "come down" in the business world. His ego, monstrous in a family man with no means—no assets save a mortgaged house and a young girl's wages—would not allow him to take a step down in the world of efficient men, men who like himself had been receiving remuneration far beyond their deserts because of the unusual conditions, but who were in reality only "driftwood."

Many times over had Ruth now paid for the money her father gave her for her college education. Her father had put up money on her untrained ability. It had developed into a remarkable ability now that it had been moulded and polished by experience.

He was receiving what financiers would have called "a dangeerous interest on his investment."

As Robert Turnbull watched Ruth's complete absorption in her work, her devotion to the firm's interests, he said to the president:

"She's the best investment we ever made," and Mr. Carr, who had had his second talk with Ruth, agreed with him.

CHAPTER XLIV.

Ruth Browning perhaps had peculiar ideas in one direction. They related to service. Rather as to who did the service.

In speaking of the letters she had sent out, Mr. Turnbull asked:

"Have you embodied any sort of 'thank you' for past business in the letters you are sending?"

"No, why should I? Why thank a person for whom you have done or expect to do a great service. I feel that we give them far more in both money and thought than they give us. When they thank me—as most of them do—I reply that we are glad to have been of service. I take their thanks as a matter of course, as our due."

"Another of your original ways of looking at things."

"I don't know—psychology again. Women are not as accustomed to business, to making investments, as men. Some of them are very suspicious. They have heard that people are always in wait to take their money from them—especially widows and single women with large incomes. They figure that if they are getting what we say they are, they owe us thanks. It is a favor to them. If we humbly thanked them they would invariably be on the lookout for a 'nigger in the woodpile.' In other words, being asolutely unfamiliar with the bond business, they wonder how much of their money sticks to our fingers because we are so servile."

"By George, I believe you are right!"

"I know I am."

Her brown hair was brushed straight back from her broad, low forehead. Deep gray eyes looked out at him, intelligence in their depths. He wondered why he had not before noticed how very pretty she was. He liked the way she wore her hair, he liked to see the pretty shell-like ears. It was a relief after the nests of hair affected by the generality of young women to conceal them. He admired her straight slenderness. How graceful she was! But more than all, he admired her for her faith in herself. There was no doubt, no hesitation in that "I know I am" of hers.

Women as he had known them were often vacillating, uncertain of themselves, even of their own desires. Here was a woman who knew herself and knew others. A woman who knew just what she wanted to do and went ahead and did it.

An anomaly!—perhaps.

An unusual, a fascinating personality—yes.

Was it any wonder that in the jargon of slang Robert Turnbull should "sit up and take notice"

What was rather remarkable was that Ruth was absolutely unaware that he considered her in any light save that of one of the wheels in a successful business, a wheel that functioned perfectly, or a bit better than some of the other wheels, but still only one of the component parts of a big machine.

Robert Browning's ego had not been inherited by his daughter. In her own person, as detached from business, she was modest and retiring to an extreme. Then, although she would not have acknowledged it, perhaps scarcely realized it, she had been bruised because of the ready defection of Hunter Worden.

At times a passionate curiosity blazed up in Ruth's consciousness understand just why Hunter, a quiet business-like fellow, had so quickly succumbed to Betty. It did not seem possible that a man who had virtually told her he cared for her, had said he had a vital question he wanted to ask her when they were alone, could suddenly, all because of a beautiful face, have lost all feeling for her.

"The fault is in me," she told herself. "I am not the sort of a woman men love."

One day she overheard a conversation between two of her girls, young stenographers. It was during the noon hour. A terrific rain storm had come up just before the girls were to go out for their luncheon, and the office boy had braved the rain to bring sandwiches to Ruth and the other women in the office.

"I tell you, men don't like a business girl—not if she is real business," one nineteen-year-old girl declared, with all the wisdom of a grand-mother.

"You're right, Jennie!" the other said. "It's the silly, fluffy ruffles sort of girls men like, not girls who are serious. I guess it's because when they leave their offices they want to be amused. And brains ain't very amusing, I guess. It makes me tired to see how the men pass up a nice girl for some silly, giggling flapper who hasn't an idea in her head only how much paint her face will carry. And the men marry lots of such girls, while we poor slaves have to write 'Miss' on our calling cards. And 'Miss' will be engraved on our tombstones."

"Perhaps," returned the little wiseacre, "that is the reason there are so many divorces. One would think to read the papers that getting married and divorced was a game at which each one tried to outdo the other. O, well, have patience, Nell. Perhaps some day a man will make a mistake and ask you or some other girl with brains to marry him. Grab him quick if he does, for if he sees one of the other sort before you've hitched him to your star he's lost to you for ever."

It was all nonsense, girl's nonsense. Yet Ruth felt that there was a sort of truth in it. Betty was what one would call a fluffy ruffles sort of a girl, while she, Ruth, was serious. A business girl.

HIGH FIVE BEATS IOWA PARK 13-11

By "HANK" HAYES

The Wichita Hi basketball quintet took the first game of the interscholastic schedule yesterday afternoon from Iowa Park cagers to the tune of 13 to 11 on the Iowa Park boys grounds. The game was played on an outdoor court that was rather rough and boasted of "four by four" goals, and as the Wichita five have been playing on an indoor court their ability was lessened somewhat. What few features the game developed were more pertaining to football and poor teamwork although the goal tossing of Captain "Cherry" Johnson of the Wichita five, who scored eight of the teams thirteen tallies, was good to look at.

The Iowa Park five played rather mediocre considering the fact that they have been going since the opening of the school term, but the defeat of Electra Hi by the Park boys 40 to 10 is not to be sneezed at. Approximately two hundred fans were assembled around the court to witness the tussle in spite of rather chilly weather.

SPORTIVELY SPEAKING

Dallas Fans Getting Sore.

Dallas fans are reported up in arms regarding the uncertainty of the status of ownership of the baseball club. The Hassell-Patterson faction and the Morris-Sablosky bunch are waging war in the courts. Meanwhile the future of the team in the 1922 pennant chase is believed to be hurt because of the uncertainty. One thing is sure until the matter is straightened out there will not be very many players either bought or sold. For the sake of Texas league baseball and for the reason that a "blow-up" of the Dallas team would have a bad effect on the remaining teams we hope that there is some kind of a settlement real soon.

Hi Starts Season Right.

The local high school basketball has won her first game of the season by a 13 to 11 score against the five from Iowa Park. The boys from the park were supposed to have a fair team, from reports and from the fact that they beat Burkburnett Hi in a practice game. While the showing of the locals was not extraordinary it serves to remind us that the teamwork has undoubtedly improved

There is some good material on the high school team. Carroll Johnson, rangy center, is fast and should develop into a star. Shaw, Howle, Deems, Anderson, Herrod and Back are capable of becoming high school players as good as you could find anywhere. What they need is earnest practice and sound coaching to play toward a perfect system of teamwork.

Interest Picking Up.

Intreset is picking up in basketball here. The teams of the city league which are entered officially are practicing regularly and should be in trim for the opening date of the schedule January 11, when the American Legion ties up with the K. C. and the Elks and Gaines meet. The court at the American Legion hall is being worked over and will be in place for the first games. We believe that the games of the league will be well worth the nominal price of 15 cents admission charged and that the league will receive full support of the public.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Dear J. L. M.:

"I have heard so much talk about Centre college commercializing football. Is Centre a business college?"

No, not in the ordinary use of the term, which refers to schools that teach, or allege to teach, typewritting, shorthand, stenography and bookkeeping. It is more of a booking agency for football games on the national lyceum circuit.

BET AMARILLO IS THE ONE THAT'LL GET THROWN HERE

By Associated Press.

ARAMILLO, Texas, Jan. 6.—Bert Willoughby, local middleweight wrestler, last night won the right to meet Bull Montana here on January 19, by defeating Harry "Bull" Dementral of Marlin, Texas, in their finish match, best two falls out of three. Montana had challenged the winner. Dementral got the first fall in 28 minutes with a cradle lock. Willoughby took the second in 14 minutes with a double Japanese toe hold and the third in 9 minutes with a toe hold.

PUT AND TAKE, OR WHAT THE SPUDDERS NEED

BY J. L. M.

You may talk o' "Put" and "Take,"
And what a purty sight they'd make,
A playin' fer Walt Salm, that slick go-getter,
Understand I aint denyin',
That those birds is always trying,
But I'll spill a little idear that is better.
It's some twirlers, slim or fat,
That'll knock the sluggers flat,
And will surely stand agin the tide.
That will pile up vic-to-rees,
'Till hoarse fans reach th' high "C's"
And'll say "Let our cartwheels ride."
Th' old gang is all the same,
And will stand in any game,
But the push we need to win,
Must be there when we begin,
Lest our pennant chances show up lame.

Ev'ry year the team's backbone,
Like a shaft that's made of stone,
Is the veterans of other seasons.
They's the bullies that has played,
In the sun and in the shade,
For the jack and other reasons.
Are they done? I never said it,
And you never could o' read it,
Cause there's nothin' 'd grieve me more,
Than to ride an age scarred hero,
Who once played first base for Nero,
A-fore he started fiddling and got sore.
But I will say, pal o' mine,
That in framing up our nine,
We need young uns full o' pep,
Them that with the best can step.
Aint I right, now, Mayor Cline?

In our Spudder aggregation,
One thing must have concentration,
That a winning team we've got to get.
That's the main idear we're pullin'
Though perhaps you think we're bullin,
An' doin' all this riming on a bet.
But to get the bunch to do it,
We all must stick right to it,
And sign some nifty players, good and fair.
Both the stars of other years,
Who give poise and calm our fears,
When the young 'uns rise into the air.
And the kids who rear to step,
And are boilin' o'er with pep,
Track the Panther to his lair,
And we'll lick 'em all for fair,
Gaining both the rag and lots o' rep.

BABE AND ROGERS WILL TANGLE IN BATTING CONTEST

By Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 6.—Two of the greatest stars in baseball are to engage in a contest for batting honors at New Orleans March 18 and 19 when Babe Ruth, home-run king of the New York Yankees and Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Nationals, champion batter of the major leagues last year, meet in a two-game spring exhibition series between the two teams.

WHY GIRLS LEAVE

"HOME." KNICKERBOCKER'S SUBJECT SUNDAY NIGHT.

"The biggest problem of today," said Rev. H. D. Knickerbocker, pastor of the First Methodist church, south, corner of Tenth and Lamar, to a Record News reporter, "is not the man problem nor the boy problem. It is the girl problem. 'Why Girls Leave Home' is a theme treated at the Empress theater the last week. I went to see it and am going to preach Sunday night on the same subject, only I differ somewhat from the writer of the scenario. However, there were several fine suggestions in the picture story. One of the main questions that I will ask will be 'What is the difference between a 'flapper,' a 'chicken,' a 'squab,' and a 'gentlewoman?' Vividly dramatic portraits of the four kinds of girls in the above question will be drawn by the preacher. Some strong testimonies of dancing masters, musicians, editors and others will be used in the attempt to arouse intense interest in the solution of a problem that if not solved will end in the deluge. Last Sunday night we used 178 chairs in an attempt to seat the great congregation. We have made some alterations in the auditorium which will give us from fifty to a hundred more seats. This will be good news to many who desire to attend and have not been able to find comfortable seats.

"At the morning service my subject will be 'Is the New Woman New?' This will be a sermon preached especially to women in honor of the Woman's Missionary society. While it will be primarily a sermon to women, the men will be perhaps more intensely interested in it than they would be in a general subject. The Woman's Missionary society of the church will attend in a body and we have offered Golden Honors to the circle that enrolls the largest percent of attendance. The morning service now begins at 10:50 and the Sunday school is not dismissed but is expected to stay in a body through the preaching service. A part of the hour is a ten-minute Bible study brought down to date, told by Dr. Knickerbocker, especially for the young people. The subject of that story Sunday will be 'The Man That Set the Water on Fire.' There will be special music at all the services."

BRADSTREET'S WEEKLY REVIEW

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Bradstreets tomorrow will say:

Post holiday quiet features trade and industry as a whole, but the influence of counter currents in retail trade and in some of the big industries relieves the situation of some of the usual early-in-year inactivity. Thus, while results of inventories or preparations for sending salesmen on the road occupy wholesalers, there is some life seen in cotton goods at large primary markets. Wool is active and advancing, though the goods market is quiet and raw silk is strong, with December consumption 18 per cent off from November but over double last years.

In retail trade, after holiday, coupled with colder weather in some areas, helps distribution, heavy wearing apparel, shoes and rubbers being permanent in the latter. In the south quiet is more marked than at the north, and in Texas high temperatures and drought, being more prominent in the latter hurts the grain crops, and limits buying. Weekly bank clearings, $6,716,150,000.

THE JUNIOR LIGHTWEIGHT CLASS —By Ripley

By ROBERT L. RIPLEY.

Tex Rickard, who has been giving belts away during the past year, included among his offerings a belt emblematic of the Junior Lightweight Championship—a 130-pound title.

Johnnie Dundee won the belt, which serves to call attention to a great class of ringmen who have suffered because their weight placed them awkwardly between the featherweights and lightweights—a little too big for one, and a little too small for the other, necessitating that they train down too fine in one case, or labor under a weight handicap in the other.

Dundee is worthy and deserving of the new title. He usually has fought lightweights, although he never weighs over 130 pounds himself. He fought Champion Ritchie twice and Champion Benny Leonard six or seven times, gave away from eight to ten pounds on each occasion, and did well.

The 130-pound class is not a very large one at present, but there are some very good boys in it. George Chaney, the knockout king from Baltimore, is probably Dundee's closest rival. He was giving the bounding Italian a great battle recently until he unfortunately lost on a foul. Benny Valgar is a good one. So is Charley O'Connell of Cleveland and Mike Paulson of Minneapolis and Johnny Murray and Hughie Hutchinson of New York.

In the old days the class scintillated with stars. Young Corbett was a wonderful fighter at the weight, and so were Oscar Gardiner, Aurelio Herrera, Spike Robson, Bobby Dobbs and Eddie Hanlon of Frisco. Ad Wolgast was a lightweight champion, although he was no larger than Dundee, and what a wildcat he was! Owen Moran was a great little man—the best junior that England ever sent out.

And what a junior lightweight Champion Terry McGovern would have made!

JESS HASSELL GETS 2-YEAR JAIL TERM

Stockholder of Dallas Baseball Team Draws Two Years and Stiff Fine for Motor Collision.

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Jan. 6.—Jess Hassell, one of the stockholders in the Dallas baseball club, was found guilty in criminal district court here today of charges of aggravated assault with a motor vehicle and fined $1,000 and sentenced to two years in prison. Defense counsel gave notice of appeal.

The charges grew out of an automobile collision on the Oak Cliff viaduct several weeks ago in which four persons were injured.

Hassell is under similar charges in county court, where Judge Young recently issued an injunction on petition of the district attorney, restraining Hassell from driving a motor car in Dallas county. The order was issued on the grounds that the baseball magnate was a public menace, due to a large number of automobile accidents in which it was charged he figured.

MULE RAISER IS FACING CHARGES RESULT OF KILLING

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 6.—One charge of murder and two charges of assault with intent to kill were filed here today against Frank Thompson, wealthy Olathe, Kansas mule raiser, who shot and instantly killed Harry Bruener of Des Moines, Iowa, in the crowded lobby of the livestock exchange here yesterday. Two of the six shots fired by Thompson struck W. B. Hall, Kansas City and Adolph Drahos, Cedar Rapids, Iowa railroad livestock agent, who were bystanders. Hall was seriously wounded.

Thompson was arraigned in justice court this afternoon and held without bond on the murder charge. In the assault case, bond was fixed at $3,000 and $1,000. Pleas of "not guilty" to the three charges were entered by Thompson's counsel and he was sent back to jail to await preliminary hearing January 21.

FARM BUREAU IS PRAISED BY OUSLEY

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Jan. 6.—The farm bureau movement, an organization of co-operative marketing associations have been the cause of the perpetuation of the war finance board and is the greatest undertaking in the history of the United States, Clarence Ousley, Texas agricultural expert and candidate for the United States senate, told delegates at the morning session of the second annual Texas farm bureau convention here.

The report of the committee on constitution and by-laws was read recommending that it be made a permanent committee, that negroees be allowed membership in the federation with no voting power, that the position of treasurer be made appointive instead of elective and that the membership dues be changed so that new members pay a five dollar initiation fee, and that regular dues be $10 a year, divided equally between the state and county organization. The report will be discussed at the afternoon session.

J. H. Hill, Jr., secretary of the Farm Bureau Cotton association, explained the work done by that body since it began its operations September 1, 1921.

The association has sold 38,000 bales of cotton at an average of 19 cents a pound, middling basis, Mr. Hill said. He explained the workings of the association headquarters and rendered a financial standing as of December 15.

It showed cash on hand and deposited in banks $304,671; notes receivable $20,000; accounts receivable $58,348; concentration claims $13,288; concentration paid $168,459.93; advances $3,131,301.94 and operating expenses $141,000.

The distribution of proceeds will take place later on in the season. At least 50 per cent of the cotton received by the association must be sold before the funds can be distributed, Mr. Hill said, and this ought to be sold within the next thirty days.

DALLAS FANS MAKING TIME AT PRESENT

Baseball Situation in "Melluva Hess" With Two Sets of Owners Claiming the Floor; Schedule Worries.

Special to the Record News

DALLAS, Jan. 6.—Although the Texas league has recognized Ike Sablosky and Walter Morris as the legal owners of the Dallas franchise in the league, and these gentlemen will be on hand to represent Dallas at the annual meeting and schedule fixing on January 14 and 15 in Houston, it doesn't keep the local baseball situation from being in a "melluva hess."

Jess Hassell and Ham Patterson, who claim the other baseball magnates are trying to kick them out of baseball without any legal authority and claim the sale of the Dallas club was not legal, are still raising an awful racket.

What Dallas fans want to know is: "How soon will all this bunk last and when will the lawful owners of the club start in to get a few players and build up a winning team?" They say that Dallas, by reason of being the biggest town in the circuit should be the best paying team and should have the best aggregation of players.

The adoption of a 1922 schedule is another matter that is causing the fans here a good deal of speculation. They claim that Dallas got the raw deal in the framing of games in 1921 and want to see this years card arranged a little more to their order. Last year Dallas opened and closed the season on the road, the first games being with Wichita Falls and the last at Shreveport. They want to see Dallas open at home this year and also would like a look in at the final games as they figure they are not out of the running before the season starts.

Just think what luck Ike and Walter will have in getting Doak Roberts, who is said to be spending his idle moments rigging up a few tentative schedules, to come around to their viewpoint is not known at this writing, but local fans are hoping.

The second floor in early days was used for law offices and was the common meeting place of many men who made history in this section.

Jordan and Dittmar, Two Other University Stars to Be Picked by Mentor, Died in Army Service.

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 6.—George H. McCullough, premier Longhorn athletic and football star during the past season, is the third University of Texas man to receive mention for All-American honors from Walter Camp, national football critic and writer. HIGH FIVE BEATS IOWA PARK 13-11

By "HANK" HAYES

The Wichita Hi basketball quintet took the first game of the interscholastic schedule yesterday afternoon from Iowa Park cagers to the tune of 13 to 11 on the Iowa Park boys grounds. The game was played on an outdoor court that was rather rough and boasted of "four by four" goals, and as the Wichita five have been playing on an indoor court their ability was lessened somewhat. What few features the game developed were more pertaining to football and poor teamwork although the goal tossing of Captain "Cherry" Johnson of the Wichita five, who scored eight of the teams thirteen tallies, was good to look at.

The Iowa Park five played rather mediocre considering the fact that they have been going since the opening of the school term, but the defeat of Electra Hi by the Park boys 40 to 10 is not to be sneezed at. Approximately two hundred fans were assembled around the court to witness the tussle in spite of rather chilly weather.

Dallas Fans Getting Sore.

Dallas fans are reported up in arms regarding the uncertainty of the status of ownership of the baseball club. The Hassell-Patterson faction and the Morris-Sablosky bunch are waging war in the courts. Meanwhile the future of the team in the 1922 pennant chase is believed to be hurt because of the uncertainty. One thing is sure until the matter is straightened out there will not be very many players either bought or sold. For the sake of Texas league baseball and for the reason that a "blow-up" of the Dallas team would have a bad effect on the remaining teams we hope that there is some kind of a settlement real soon.

Hi Starts Season Right.

The local high school basketball has won her first game of the season by a 13 to 11 score against the five from Iowa Park. The boys from the park were supposed to have a fair team, from reports and from the fact that they beat Burkburnett Hi in a practice game. While the showing of the locals was not extraordinary it serves to remind us that the teamwork has undoubtedly improved.

There is some good material on the high school team. Carroll Johnson, rangy center, is fast and should develop into a star. Shaw, Howle, Deems, Anderson, Herrod and Back are capable of becoming high school players as good as you could find anywhere. What they need is earnest practice and sound coaching to play toward a perfect system of teamwork.

Interest Picking Up.

Intreset is picking up in basketball here. The teams of the city league which are entered officially are practicing regularly and should be in trim for the opening date of the schedule January 11, when the American Legion ties up with the K. C. and the Elks and Gaines meet. The court in the American Legion hall is being worked over and will be in place for the first games. We believe that the games of the league will be well worth the nominal price of 15 cents admission charged and that the league will receive full support of the public.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Dear J. L. M.:

"I have heard so much talk about Centre college commercializing football. Is Centre a business college?"

No, not in the ordinary use of the term, which refers to schools that teach, or allege to teach, typewritting, shorthand, stenography and bookkeeping. It is more of a booking agency for football games on the national lyceum circuit.

BET AMARILLO IS THE ONE THAT'LL GET THROWN HERE

By Associated Press.

ARAMILLO, Texas, Jan. 6.—Bert Willoughby, local middleweight wrestler, last night won the right to meet Bull Montana here on January 19, by defeating Harry "Bull" Dementral of Marlin, Texas, in their finish match, best two falls out of three. Montana had challenged the winner. Dementral got the first fall in 28 minutes with a cradle lock. Willoughby took the second in 14 minutes with a double Japanese toe hold and the third in 9 minutes with a toe hold.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The stock market today continued its recent irregular or reactionary course. Dealings diminished visibly, however, and there were only occasional traces of involuntary liquidation.

Advices from out of town sources including Chicago were most reassuring although the suspension of a small bank in St. Louis directed further attention to financial conditions in that section of the country.

Such strength as was shown by the stock list resulted mainly from easier money rates. Call loans fell from 4 1-2 to 3 1-2 per cent at midday, the latter figure represented the lowest quotation in almost six months.

Time money rates also realized, 30 to 60 day loans being liberally made on mixed collateral at [illegible] 3-4 per cent.

Oils, shippings and motors rebounded one to almost three points from yesterday's final prices, but fell back for the most part in the pressure directed against General Asphalt and various specialties before the close. American and Baldwin locomotives, Mercantile marine preferred, American International and Mexican Petroleum were among the few conspicuously strong issues. Rails were a negligible factor, moving within fractional limits. Total sales amounted to 600,000 shares.

Substantial improvement accompanied the moderate dealings in foreign exchanges. The better tone was ascribed to latest developments at the arms confrence in Washington and cables announcing that Germany and Russia are to participate in an international economic conference called by the allied supreme council.

Liberty bonds added to their recent recovery and first mortgage rails strengthened on a substantial investment in[qu]iry but industrial issues eased and foreign offerings showed no definite trend.

Total sales, par value, aggregated $17,275,000.

NEW YORK COFFEE.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The market for coffee futures was steadier today. Recent declines of about 75 points from the high records of last month seemed to hold the technical position firmer. At any rate offerings were light and prices were higher on comparatively small buying orders. The opening was unchanged to 3 points higher and active months sold 17 to 19 points net higher in the late trading when there were unconfirmed rumors of an advance in oceean freight rates from Bazil. May sold at 8.48 or 21 points above the low level of yesterday and closed at 8.47. The general market closed at a net advance of 16 to 17 points. Sales were estimated at about 21,000 bags. January 8.54; March 8.64; May 8.47; July, September, October and December 8.39.

The spot market was quiet and nominally unchanged at 9 1-8 for Rio 7's and 12 to 12 1-2 for Santos 4's.

Cotton

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The cotton market was very nervous and unsettled again today but a sharp early break was followed by partial recoveries, with the close very steady at a net decline of to 19 points. March contracts sold off to 17.98 or 32 points net lower and 122 points below the high prices of last Tuesday morning. That delivery closed at 18.17 compared with 18.30 at the close of the previous day.

The market opened at an advance of three points on March but generally one to four points lower, a better response relatively firm Liverpool cables being prevented by heavy New Orleans selling. Inquiries were received in the trade here from New Orleans asking whether there was any basis for rumors of troubles in the goods trade and Liverpool weakened right after the local opening, suggesting that similar rumors had reached the English market.

These rumors were without any confirmation and nothing definite developed in connection with them, but they had a very unsettling effect on sentiment and the selling movement continued until the market was 23 to 45 points net lower with January selling at 18.00 and May at 17.50; offerings then became less active, while there appeared to be some trade buying on the basis of 18 cents for March and the market showed a steadier tone during the afternoon.

The reported failure of two small investment houses caused renewed irregularity early in the last hour, after which there was some Wall Street selling, but there was covering and trade buying which gave the market a very steady tone at the close. Liverpool was better here on the forenoon break, but except for the heavy New Orleans selling, local brokers reported very few selling orders from the south, and much of the pressure attributed to Wall street and local operators.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

By Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 6.—Rumors of financial troubles yet to be met kept the cotton market depressed today. On the opening call, March was seven points up for a very short time, but the later months were off and the declines persisted all day, the market at its lowest being 34 to 42 points down with March trading at 16.93. Around mid-session and in the afternoon the tone was steadier on the favorable showing of the weekly statistical statement and upturns of a dollar a bale or so resulted but the close was still at net losses on the session of 15 to 17 points, March closing at 17.18.

A Liverpool cablegram said that reports of financial troubles in Europe were greatly exaggerated but more or less anxiety was felt over the Italian stock exchange settlement said to be due tomorrow in cabled reports which reached this market. The report of a bank failure at St. Louis caused a little selling but the talk of more trouble to come caused a great deal of selling.

The steadiest period of the day followed the posting of the weekly statistics for mill takings by the world were put by Hester at 310,000 bales against 274,000 last week and 297,000 this week last year, much being much larger than expected, much was made of the bullish variation in the visible supply of American cotton, a decrease of 74,759 bales against an increase this week last year of 15,862. Buyers however, were held in restraint.

LIVERPOOL SPOTS.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 6.—Cotton spot in limited demand; prices steady. Good middling 11.79; fully middling 11.39; middling 11.04; low middling 9.89; good ordinary 8.34; ordinary 7.59. Sales 4,000 bales, including 2,900 American.

NEW ORLEANS SPOTS.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 6.—Spot cotton steady and unchanged. Sales on the spot 548 bales; to arrive, 1,081. Low middling 15.50; middling 17.25; good middling 1.25. Receipts 2,686; stock 331,273.

COTTON SEED OIL.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Cotton seed oil was higher on buying by the west and shorts covering on the former showing in lard and light offerings of crude. Closing bids were 2 to 9 points net higher. Sales 11,000 barrels. Tender 1,000 barrels. Prime crude 6.85@7.00; prime summer yellow spot 8.25@8.50; March 8.57; May 8.85 and July 9.06, all bid.

NEW YORK DRY GOODS.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Denims were advanced half cent a yard to a basis of 17c for 2.20's. Other cotton goods were barely steady. Yarns were firmer in both cotton and worsted lines. Mens wear were firm but quiet. Dress goods were steady. Raw silk was unchanged and burlaps easier.

Grain

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Moderate setbacks in the price of wheat took place today owing largely to absence of signs of any immediate big lessening of accumulations at visible supply points.

The market closed weak 1-2 to 1 net lower, with May 1.11 to 1.11 1-4 and July 1.00 5-8 to 1.00 3-4. Corn finished unchanged to 1-8 higher, oats a shade off to 1-8 advance, and provisions up 2 to 7 cents. Much of the selling in the wheat trade especially during the last part of the day was in the nature of liquidation, confidence on the part of longs having been given a special jolt by word that seaboard exporters had cancelled the purchase of six loads, 48,000 bushels. Another bearish factor was new that Argentine wheat was offered for January-February shipment to Europe at equal to cents under United States hard winter wheat by way of the Gulf of Mexico. But this failed to make any lasting headway with reports of a better milling demand or with advices and dry cold weather southwest had caught the crop without adequate snow protection.

Corn and oats were steadied by a brisk report inquiry for corn, and by some export call too for oats.

Higher quotations on hogs gave firmness to provisions, although business was light.

TRIAL OVER OIL PROPERTY WITH JUDGE

The taking of evidence in the $50,000 damage suit of Frank P. Bewyer, C. A. Steelsmith and others against the Ironland Oil company was completed Friday before Judge Napier of the 78th District court. Following arguments by attorneys for the plaintiffs and the defendant company, Judge Napier took the case under consideration.

The suit is centered around holdings of the litigants located in the Sunshine Hill pool. It is alleged by the plaintiffs that the defendant company damaged them by connecting pumping rods to their wells in the Sunshine Hill oil pool. The pumping rods according to evidence crossed the property of the defendant company.

MAYOR ELECTED ON "WET" TICKET WILL ENFORCE "DRY" LAW

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Frank X. Schwab, former brewer, elected mayor of Buffalo on a beer and wine platform, is carrying out pre-election pledges with a speed that is causing "dry" advocates to wonder how he will proceed with respect to the violation question of prohibition. Mayor Schwab has announced that all "dry" laws will be enforced and has asked the corporation counsel to draft an ordinance that will enable him to reduce the number of licensed soft drink places from six thousand to one thousand.

In the first week of his administration Mayor Schwab retired the prohibition enforcement and vice squads of the police department, installed a police chief of his own choice whose first move was a general shake-up of subordinates; scrapped the police reserves, an unpaid civilian organization formed during the war, and called together an advisory committee of one person from each of the city wards.

FRAUD CHARGES FILED IN CONNECTION WITH COMPANIES FORMED HERE

Charge General Electric Holds Price Control

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Consumers prices of electric light bulbs in homes, offices and automobiles throughout the United States are fixed by a combination of manufacturers, it was testified today before the Lockwood legislative committee. This combination, it was charged, is controlled by the General Electric company.

Despite a federal court decision at Toledo, in 1911 which ordered the combine to disband, it is stronger than ever, the committee was told by W. F. Harper, president of the miniature incandescent lamp company of Newark, N. J., his concern and other independents had been forced out of business by actual and threatened patent litigation of the General Electric, Harper said.

Afterward his company was reorganized.

The committee dipped into the practices of the General Electric immediately after its counsel, Samuel Untermyer, charged that through the alleged monopoly the company exacted yearly 'an extortionate tribute of $100,000,000" from American consumers.

NO GAS FOR THREE HOURS HERE FRIDAY

Through a reported break in a gas main Wichita Falls was without gas for about three hours Friday. Another report, unconfirmed, had it that an employe of one of the companies who was to turn off one main and turn on another, made a mistake with the result that both were shut off.

MEDIATORS WOULD END STRIKE OF HARBOR BOATMEN

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The state labor bureau, through its mediators, M. J. Reagan and John J. Beal, took steps today to end the strike of employes on harbor tugboats, called by organizations affiliated with the United Association of Masters, Mates and Pilots.

Union officials claim more than 62 boats were affected by the strike, while officials of the two boat exchanges said less than 150 out of 2,000 men employed answered the call.

Only deck officers and some of the deck hands were called out, the Marine Engineers Beneficial association refusing to sanction the strike which was called as a protest against reductions in wages. It was claimed, however, by Captain William A. Maher, general manager of the Masters, Mates and Pilots, that many of the engineers were quitting despite the decision of their union.

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 6.—For the first time in the history of the Austin corporation court a defendant today demanded that he be tried after the city had moved that the charges against him be dismissed. The defendant was Dr. J. E. Howze charged with assault and battery on Frederick Von Rosenberg, local attorney.

Charges against Dr. Howze were filed by city authorities. When he came to trial today the city attorney moved that the charge be dismissed. Dr. Howze personally demanded that he be tried. The jury of six men acquitted him.

Dr. Howze is one of the eighteen Austin citizens now facing charges of murder in connection with the murder of Peeler Clayton, taxicab driver who was shot and killed on the night of December 15th, last.

By Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 6.—Harvey Thorp of Kansas City and Warnie Smith of Bartlesville, Oklahoma, fought ten rounds to a draw here tonight, according to the referees decision. The men weighed in at 148 pounds. Smith was the aggressor in almost every round, Thorp being repeatedly hissed by the crowd for failing to meet his man halfway and for his clinching. RELICS OF LIFE OF ROOSEVELT ARE DISPLAYED

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Mementos tracing the life of Theodore Roosevelt from childhood to his last days as ex-president of the United States went on display at the public library, today, the third anniversary of his death.

The collection, the largest yet made, was assembled by the Roosevelt memorial association. It included photographs, letters, articles by and about Roosevelt, his books, public documents, objects intimately associated with his life—the gun he used and the chaps he wore in his western cowman days, the spectacle case that saved him from an assassin's bullet and the black thorn single stick with which he used to pummel Major General Leonard Wood in their friendly but often bloody tiffs in the White House attic.

"FAMOUS" KNICKERBOCKER IS TO BE PRINCIPAL SPEAKER AT METHODIST MEN'S MEETING

Rev. H. W. Knickerbocke — the "famous one" as his brother, Rev. Hubert D. Knickerbocker, identified him, and known throughout the country for his funeral oration over the body of Riley Granham, the gambler, at Rawhide, Nevada, will be the principal speaker at the organization dinner of the Men's club of the First M. E. Church South.

The author of this oration, of which it is estimated a million copies have been printed, is an older brother of the local pastor, and had a unique career prior to going into the ministry, including a number of years as a member of the gold seekers horde which made history in Nevada and neighboring states.

An interesting anecdote of his brother's early experiences in Goldfield, Nevada, which he was the fifteenth man to reach, is told by the local pastor.

"He was a great Shakesperian reader," he said. "He hit Goldfield broke. He gave a reading the first night to the other 14 there. There were 1,500 there the second night, and his readings attracted. He cleaned up $1,750 in these readings in a short time. With this he bought a claim, which he soon after sold for several thousands of dollars. He kept on until he was practically a millionaire."

"What went with his money," Dr. Knickerbocker was asked.

"It went like he got it, and then we prayed it away for him —my other brother and I."

Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker is now Methodist pastor at Marlin. Other speakers at the banquet will be Mayor Cline and Hubert Harrison, manager of the Chamber of Commerce. The board of stewards and the Men's Bible class are expected to be a nucleus for the formation of the new organization from the men of the church.

ORR ELECTED HEAD OF TEXAS FARM BUREAU

Farris, vice president of the Texas Farm Bureau Federation Cotton association, was elected vice president to succeed J. E. Boog-Scott, chairman of the state livestock sanitary commission.

Seven members of the board of directors elected last year to serve for twelve months were up for election. Five were re-elected. Harry Williams of Dallas was elected to succeed W. D. Farris for the Fifth congressional district embracing Dallas and Ellis counties and George Eder, succeeded J. H. Gibson in the fourth district embracing Grayson, Fannin, Collin and Hunt counties. Those re-elected were G. F. Oliver of Shelby county for the second district; John M. A. Ackerman of Navasota for the Seventh district; Leslie Elliot of Temple for the Eleventh district; J. A. Hill for the Fifteenth district and E. P. Frist of El Paso for the Sixteenth district.

By amendment of the constitution the office of treasury was removed from the elective list and made an appointive one with a salary. This change was recommended in the report of the constitution and by-laws committee. Two sections of the report amending the constitution so as to admit negroes for membership and deny them voting privileges failed of passage. Another section which was adopted fixed the yearly dues at $10 and provided for an organization fee of $10 from each new member.

HOPE MUNICIPAL OIL WELL WILL LOWER TAX RATE

By Associated Press.

LONG BEACH, Calif., Jan. 6.—A municipal-owned oil well, heralded as a possible tax eradicator, started the flow of finances into the city treasury today when a contract was made by Long Beach with a California oil company for sale of 15,000 barrels of oil, the city's initial allotment of the production. The contract price was $1.21 a barrel. The well is producing between 300 and 500 barrels a day, having been drilled by a private corporation on city ground by agreement under which the city gets forty per cent of the oil produced and the operators sixty per cent.

GULF COMPANY SEEKS PAY FOR USE OF SHIPS

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Hearing of the suit brought by the Gulf Refining company to recover more than $8,700,000 from the government for use of its ships during the war ended today in the United States court of claims. The company claimed $11,480,000 gross for use of and damage to its ships, but conceded that the government was entitled to a credit of about $2,725,000 which the company had collected in excess of cost of operation.

Among the vessels involved is the tanker Gulf Light, the torpedoing of which generally is included among the contributory causes to the entering of the United States in the war.

POLL TAX DRIVE PLAN OF LOCAL LABOR UNIONS

Plans to secure a maximum union-labor vote in the coming city and state elections were inaugurated at a meeting of the Wichita Falls Trades and Labor Council Friday night at the Labor temple. The meeting, the first of the new year, was declared by those in attendance, to have been one of the most enthusiastic that has been held by that body in several months.

In connection with the plan to have every union member obtain a poll tax receipt, a mass meeting of local organized labor will be called at the Labor temple within the next week or ten days according to an announcement. It is also planned to have each of the several unions affiliated with the organization make special effort to have all members pay their poll tax at once.

Local organized labor as an organization will not place any candidates in the race for mayor and council members according to a decision made Friday night. Only those candidates who are friendly to organized labor will secure the support and vote of the union men, it was said.

A general program for the year was also outlined at the meeting. No announcements were made in connection with the program agreed upon. Jack Barnes of the plumbers union was elected vice-president of the Trades and Labor Council succeeding J. M. Reynolds, resigned.

W. R. Ferguson Decision to Be Announced Soon

W. R. Ferguson, president of the Wichita State Bank & Trust Co., who has in the past few days been urged by representatives of all factions in the past taking part in municipal elections, as a candidate for mayor, expects to make a definite decision in the matter right away, probably the early part of the coming week.

Told that the heretofore prominent factions would all unite in his support, and were desirous of seeing him announce as a candidate for mayor, Mr. Ferguson said he appreciated it as a compliment, both from the fact that he was considered as qualified for the mayor's position, which he said he considers an extremely important one, but that the various parties could reach agreement on him. At the same time he said he was considering the demands of his private business and the demands which would be made by the duties of the mayor's office. The matter was being given serious consideration, he indicated, something which he would not have done for a moment except for the insistence of the friends who have called on him in this connection in the past two days.
