MARFA SWAMPS BALMORHEA

Marfa baseballists journeyed to Balmorhea last Sunday and swamped the Ball team of that club with a score of 15 to 2.

The Marfa team got most of its runs in the second inning, when they piled up 9 runs, this was followed with 3 more in the third, and after this they took it easy, only adding 3 more runs during the rest of the game.

The Marfa players had very little trouble in hitting Moore, and there was quite a number of extra base hits. Of these Shannon and Howard each took two, while Kelley and Lovell took one each. Shannon Lovett, and Howard each took a three bagger. Arbon took a circuit of the bases.

Balmorhea used two moundsmen in their effort to check the Marfa players. Howard struck out 12 batters, while Moore only struck out 6.

The score by innings is as follows: Marfa— 093 001 101—15 Balmorhea— 000 200 000—2

Alpine to attend the West T. C. of C. August 11th.

WILL HAVE ANNUAL SCENIC DRIVE ON SAME DAY AND ENTIRE BODY WILL VISIT MARFA CONVENTION.

The date for the annual scenic drive for Sul Ross students and faculty was set at Monday's chamber of commerce luncheon and the event will take place this year on August 11th. Inasmuch as it is desired that a big delegation go from here to Marfa to attend the Big Bend-Davis Mountain district convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce which is to be held in the Presidio capital on the 11th, it was felt that the best plan would be to have the drive on the day of the convention and thus avoid having the students out of school for two days.

Edge Big Delegation.

Both President Morelock and Mrs. Hamilton emphasized the need of Alpine sending a large delegation to the convention. Morelock urging that there be "the best representation at the meeting that has ever gone from Alpine." Hon. Arthur P. Duggan, president of the West Texas chamber of commerce, Homer D. Wade, manager, and E. H. Whitehead, publicity manager, will be present at the convention. Plans are being made to have these men come to Alpine early in the afternoon on the 11th, after the main program is over at Marfa, and spend the remainder of the afternoon inspecting Sul Ross, and remain over that night for a meeting which it is planned to be held at the college auditorium. This is to be in the nature of a "get-together" meeting and the public will be invited to attend. It is hoped that the auditorium will be filled to overflowing on that occasion and give the West Texas chamber of commerce officials a hearty reception inasmuch as they are coming here to make a first hand survey of the school situation and its needs preparatory to making a fight before the legislature for worthy appropriation for the college.

Legislators Invited.

An invitation has been extended to several prominent legislators to visit here on this occasion and some of them will probably be on the program to speak at the meeting. Members of the board of regents have also been invited and that body will in all probability be represented by one or more members that evening.

Plan Scenic Drive.

It has been decided that the scenic drive will be held on the 11th, as already stated, and the party will leave here at 9 a. m. and go to Fort Davis and from there to Marfa, arriving in Marfa in time for dinner, plans for which will be decided on later. It was suggested at the meeting Monday that Alpine go in with Marfa in putting over a big barbecue that day but no decision was reached in the matter. The scenic drive is given each year by Alpine people and everyone has been a huge success so no fear is felt but that this one will be equally as successful as any in the past. Names of committees to make arrangements for the drive and also to line up the delegation to Marfa will be announced later.

The following programs as outlined by the committee was sent in to the Avalanche yesterday is to be carried out:

Students of Sul Ross and others will leave Alpine August 11 at 9 a. m. for Scenic Drive via Fort Davis, arriving in Marfa in time for the parade about 11 a. m.

Program at Marfa, including barbecue, at noon, until 4 p. m.

Leave for Alpine at 4 p. m.

Inspect the college from 5 to 6:30 p. m. Dinner at 7:30 p. m. Program at Sul Ross at 8:00 p. m.

JACK ROCHELLE (Frenchy) KILLED

Last Monday evening about 9:00 o'clock p. m., Jack Rochelle an employee of the Marfa Barber Shop met with an accident from which he died Tuesday evening at 1 o'clock.

It appears that Rochelle and Jack Crawford left Marfa for Alpine where they were joined by two girls with the intention of attending a dance at Fort Davis, as they were crossing the Orient railroad at about 45 miles per hour the driver failed to notice a curve, and plunged off an embankment the car turned over three times. One of the young ladies was reported badly injured, Crawford and the other lady escaping with out injury.

The Alpine Avalanche gives the following account of the accident:

Jack Rochelle, Marfa barber, received fatal injuries Monday night when a car in which he and three others were riding left the road at the curve just before crossing the Orient railroad north of Alpine, Jack Crawford, recently of Marfa, but now employed in the Alpine Meat Market here, was driving the car, a five-passenger Dodge touring. According to Crawford, he was not familiar with the road and was on the curve before he was aware of the fact and was driving at a speed of about 35 miles an hour, he was unable to control the car and it left the road and plunged over an embankment. The car turned almost completely around and then turned over once, throwing all of the occupants but one out of the auto. Rochelle's head evidently struck a stone when he was thrown from the car as a considerable quantity of blood was found near where he was picked up.

Escape With Minor Injuries.

Crawford was practically uninjured and was able to be at work next day. Miss Callie Praytor, of Wharton, was on the rear seat with Rochelle. She was thrown from the car and received a bad cut on the head, but her wounds are not considered serious. Miss Lena

CHOOSING CURTAINS FOR "BETTER HOMES"

Good Curtains of Flowered Cretonne for a Room With Plain Walls.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Choosing curtains for the house brings to mind fabrics of charming color and texture hanging in graceful folds. But it is not always easy to get just the effect the mind first pictured, and cost much be considered. To curtain the windows of even a five-room house, about 60 yards of material is needed, and curtains generally have to be renewed every few years. As a help to homemakers, the United States Department of Agriculture makes suggestions about curtain fabrics and ways of hanging them. Curtains are an excellent means of refurbishing an old house, or are needed as the finishing touch to a new one.

In planning curtains remember that windows are put in houses in order to admit light and air. Make your curtains as simple as effectiveness will permit. Elaborate curtains defeat the purpose of windows and are out of place in the average home.

Shape and Size of Window.

Look carefully at the shape and size of the windows and how they are placed in the walls. Picture the effect of curtains of various styles on those particular windows and how they will appear from the outside as well as the inside of the house. If there are lovely views from the windows, study how to keep them without sacrificing privacy and an attractive interior. An unattractive view may need to be screened by curtains, but beware of shutting out too much light.

Study the general style of your room. Curtains can help to make a room dignified and formal, depending on the kind of material used and how it is hung.

Glass curtains made of thin material and hung on a straight rod inside the casing close to the glass, soften and change the color of the light coming into the room, lend an air of privacy, and are a protection to side draperies. Glass curtains should be just long enough to escape the sill.

Side Draperies Useful. Side draperies give a finished appearance to the window, are useful as shades if arranged to draw, and are a good means of adding color to the room and of modifying poor proportions. In small homes, side draperies that end on a line with the apron of the window are more suitable. If a more formal effect is desired, let them extend to the baseboard or an inch above the floor.

A valance used with or without draperies carries the eye across the top, and has the effect of decreasing the height of room and window. Before buying curtain material, get samples of the kinds that seem most suitable and see how they go with walls, woodwork, floor and furniture, by both day and artificial light. Strong light shining through curtain fabrics often brings out striking effects not suspected until put to this test. Excellent curtain materials can sometimes be found among the dress goods.

Fabrics and colors that will clean well and withstand light, are the best bargain in the end. Examine also for defects in the weave that may show up when the curtains are hung.

With figured wall paper, choose plain-colored curtain material. If the walls and most of the furnishings are plain the curtains may be figured, but preferably with the background the same color or slightly deeper than the walls. With cream walls, for instance, a cretonne with soft tan background and figures that repeat the colors used elsewhere in the room might be suitable for living and dining rooms.

In selecting figured materials give preference to conventional designs that will stand the test of being looked at day after day.

PROPER FOOD FOR YOUNG CHILDREN

Essential Facts About Foods in Popular Discussion.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The time-worn question, "What shall we eat?" has been attacked from a new angle in a government bulletin written for junior homemakers. Miscellaneous Circular 49, "A Guide to Good Meals for the Junior Homemakers," recently published by the United States Department of Agriculture, approaches a group not previously appealed to in the literature of nutrition. The interest of younger children has for some time been attacked by food and health rhymes, by illustrations of animated milk bottles, grinning cereal bowls, and dancing egg cups. Adults have been encouraged through many publications, both popular and technical, to choose the right food for themselves and their offspring. But the adolescents at the pickie-eating, ice-cream-gorging stage have not until now had a government bulletin solely for themselves.

The authors, Ruth Van Deman and Caroline L. Hunt, are specialists in the bureau of home economics. They have presented the essential facts about foods in popular discussion. A novel introductory paragraph suggests that if all kinds of foods in the world were to be assembled in one market where people of all races came to buy, the combinations they chose would have similar food value though made up of very different foods. For instance, the Japanese might select fish, rice, certain legumes, soja sauce, bamboo sprouts, and persimmons, while the American chose meat, eggs, milk, bread, a variety of American fruits and vegetables, but each would have the makings of a well-balanced diet. The youthful readers are introduced to the term "calorie" in such a way that it can no longer hold any mystery for them. They are also advised to keep track of their weight, to drink at least a pint of milk a day, to include an abundance of vitamins and minerals (from the vegetable and fruit group), and to limit the quantity of sweets used.

The circular containing these valuable suggestions to home makers of the future may be had while the supply lasts by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Merits of Soft Custard and Cream Are Outlined

Some people always make a soft custard for pudding sauce instead of using cream. As to the relative merits of soft custard and cream used in this way, the United States Department of Agriculture makes the following explanation: Soft custard, for which the proportions are a pint of milk, the yolks of three eggs, one-quarter cupful sugar, one-eighth teaspoonful salt, and any desired flavoring, is very much like ordinary cream in composition except in the matter of iron. Of that important element a given amount of custard contains three or four times as much iron as the same amount of cream. It is to be recommended, therefore, for those who specially need iron. Children who get most of their protein from milk are likely to be more in need of iron than of calcium. Adults, on the other hand, who get most of their protein from meat are likely to need calcium more than iron. In general, therefore, the soft custard is better for children, and cream just as good or better for grownups. Since cream differs in price very little with the season, the economy involved in using soft custard depends chiefly on the price of eggs.

Do Not Kill Germs

Septic tanks do not kill disease germs. Some of the harmful germs in sewage die during their passage through a tank, but a septic tank has no more power of killing germs than does an ordinary barrel, box, or cistern. A portion of the solids in the sewage decompose or rot, but the escaping liquid is still foul and dangerous.

Serious Fire Risk

Oily cloths used in polishing floors and woodwork are a serious fire risk. Cloths moistened with linseed oil are especially liable to spontaneous combustion, and serious fires have resulted from this cause. They should be either destroyed immediately after use or kept in a tightly-covered fire-proof container.

Preserve Pie Crust

To keep the undercrust of a custard pie from raising up in bubbles prebake it before putting in the custard mixture, and before you put the crust in the oven prick it in several places with a fork. This will let the steam out and prevent the crust from raising up in bubbles.

"We're rare," said Daddy Tasmanian Wolf.
 "We're very rare," said Mother Tasmanian Wolf from her yard next door.
 "It's nice here in the open air," said Daddy Tasmanian Wolf.
 "Yes," said Mother Tasmanian Wolf, "they know we like the good fresh air."
 "I've heard the keeper telling the people that we were rare and that there weren't many of us."
 "In fact, he has been telling all sorts of interesting things about us."
 "What has he been telling?" asked Mother Tasmanian Wolf.
 "He has asked them if they didn't think our dark yellow fur with its black bands across our backs and our hind legs made us look very handsome."

"And he said we looked rather like dogs to him."
 "He also told the people that you had a very big pouch and that you kept the children there when they were young and feeble just as the kangaroo will do."

"He told the people that we came from Australia and that now we could only be found in Tasmania or once in a while in the zoos."

"Yes, he said that we lived where there were mountains and cliffs and rocks and peaks."

"He said we loved to kill sheep, and he was right in that."

"He was right in everything he said," remarked Mother Tasmanian Wolf.

And they both smiled and agreed how nice it was to have people told about them as though they were really worth hearing about.

"It's good that he tells them about us," said Mother Tasmanian Wolf, "for then people will know about Tasmanian wolves when they hear about them, and won't say:

"What queer animals are those?"
 "Sometimes people make such personal speeches!"

Some of the other wolves were talking.

"We're sociable, we're sensible, we're stock lovers," said Mr. Wolf as he licked his paws and looked around at the zoo.

"Yes," said Mrs. Wolf, "we're all of those things."

"What does it mean when you say we're stock lovers?" asked the little wolves.

"The poor little zoo dears don't know and understand," said Mrs. Wolf.

"Daddy will explain to you," said Mr. Wolf. "When we're free we hunt cattle and cattle are called stock. Yes, we go for cattle, we do!"

"Oh, such night hunts as we have, and oh, how successful we have been." And his eyes glistened and shone and looked very bright as he talked.

"We used to go in the tracks of dogs when we could find them so as to lead people off our trail."

"That showed we were sensible. We are sociable with each other. We have always been sociable."

"We used to go off on fine parties, a great many of us. And to be sociable means to be friendly and to like other creatures of our kind."

"That is, they're the creatures we like—our own kind. In fact we have a good many fine points."

"We have, I agree," Mrs. Wolf said, "although I don't suppose the cattle would think so," and her eyes seemed to smile very wickedly.

"They couldn't be expected to think we had," laughed Mr. Wolf.

And then they talked of the days before they came to the zoo when they used to go off on great and glorious hunting parties and when they used to dodge men and guns and escape from great dangers.

WASHABLE DAYTIME FROCKS; MILLINERY FOR LITTLE MISSES

SUMMER has brought a number of washable frocks for general daytime wear, some of them made of new materials, unfamiliar but interesting, and others of familiar cotton cloths woven in new patterns. These frocks do not include house dresses, which are in a class by themselves, but they comprise one and two-piece dresses, made of rayon materials, in plain and fancy weaves, pongee dresses in tailored styles and frocks that employ printed batiste, cotton charmeuse, dotted swiss and voile in pretty and practical styling. So far, voile is the best liked and most widely known of these light summer cottons.

Pongee is made up in tailored fashion with plain skirts, short and platted stylists agree that the story of children's millinery does not begin and end with this A. B. C. headwear. It includes many enticing fairy tales as well—much to the joy of little ladies and of all who see them. Among these fanciful hats there are types to suit little personages of various dispositions—gay, demure or elfish, and in them designers find a chance to be whimsical and amusing, also quite independent of grown-up styles or ingenious in making childish adaptations of them.

The group of hats for little girls shown here includes several popular types and leads off with an original and whimsical little model that suggests an inverted basket worn on a at the sides, and jumpers opening in a "V" shaped neckline.

Long and wide ribbon ties are worn with these jumpers. One pretty model has patch pockets at each side on the hemline.

Frocks of pastel colored voile are usually trimmed with little ruffles of the material edging the collar and cuffs, or bordered with narrow bands of plain white voile. Pearl buttons or a little simple needlework are liked on these dresses and the new models have sleeves that do not quite reach the elbows. But the most interesting of these practical and pretty frocks are those made of rayon and cotton mixtures in fancy weaves. One of roguish head. It is made of chiffon and has an upturned brim with narrow ribbon set in loops about it. Between the loops there are tiny roses. A latticework of narrow straw braid makes the collar about the crown, and ribbon is used for the brim that ends in a little bow with falling end at the right side.

Silk, straw braid and ribbon make the pretty hat below at the left. Its puffed crown is centered with a braid plaque and two ruffles of ribbon are set on the upper brim. Two rows of braid, piped with silk, form the collar about the side crown and it is finished with an ornament placed at the right side made of loops of ribbon and these is shown in the picture. It is a slip-on model with short kimono sleeves and square neck opening, split a little way down on the left side. Very simple embroidery in colored silks appears at the neck and low waistline. These rayon mixtures are woven in colors and in white, and shown in cross-bar and striped patterns. Some of the fancy weaves in white are very effective. In view of the durability of these new materials, the splendid way in which they stand tubbing and their silky luster, there is no telling how far they will go in supplying washable daytime and sports frocks.

The most youthful of fashionable heads are usually clad, as they should be, in very simple hats; but a rosette of braid. At the right a plain milan hat has a collar of narrow ribbon and a simple pattern of embroidery in raffia or other lustrous medium on the crown. Another milan shape, with tall crown, mimics the new tall-crowned hats for grown-ups, but turns up its brim at the front and back in a way that is certainly saucy. Rosettes of ribbon in two colors are placed at the front.

The highest duty of the state is to legislate and minister as to make good homes, for it is only a larger home, and for the same uses that the state exists.—Ellen Richards.

SEASONABLE FOODS

There is probably no meal of the day where dainty service and pretty dishes are more appreciated than at the morning meal. We hear much about starting the day right and it is very important.

A hurried breakfast over an untidy table may be the cause of many of the unhappy experiences of life. Start the day right with a neat table, well-cooked food and a cheerful smile. Fruit is the first dish which appeals to most in the morning. Whenever possible fresh green foliage of the fruit itself is the prettiest garnish. After the fruit comes the morning cereal. As there are already hundreds of them to cook or serve uncooked, variety is always present. The whole wheat as it comes from the granary is an ideal breakfast food for all ages. Wash it well and soak overnight, then cook all day or until every grain is burst and covered with the gelatinous center of the grain. Serve with top milk or cream. A quantity cooked at once will keep for several days if kept in a cold place.

Fried Chicken, Southern Style.—Joint a fat young chicken, dredge with flour, salt and pepper and place on a platter. In a deep frying pan fry out a half-pound of bacon, add one cupful of lard and when smoking hot lay in the chicken; turn when brown, giving the thicker pieces longer time to cook. Place on a hot platter and garnish with water cress.

Breakfast Muffins.—Beat one egg, add one-half cupful of milk, flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder to make a soft batter, then add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and pour into well-greased muffin tins to bake in a moderate oven.

Blueberry Cake.—Cream a tablespoonful of butter, add one cupful of sugar and when well blended add two well-beaten eggs. Beat five minutes, add a teaspoonful of vanilla, a few gratings of nutmeg, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, sifted with two cupfuls of flour; add a pint of well-floured blueberries and bake in a loaf or in muffin pans.

Put thinly sliced cake together with jelly or preserves and serve with a custard sauce or whipped cream for dessert.

Good Food for Company.

We all enjoy giving our friends something unusual and attractive when entertaining them. A dish which may be doubled to serve a large number is:

Chicken Warmers.—Clean and cook a large chicken in plenty of broth, adding one small onion, removing it when the chicken is done. Take out the chicken and cut all meat from the bones, reserving it in a double boiler where it will keep hot. In the broth cook two bunches or more of celery cut into inch pieces; these when tender are removed and noodles added to cook in the broth. Keep all the food hot over water and serve a nest of noodles on a hot plate, then a spoonful or more of the cooked celery and top the dish with chicken. If any of the broth is left it may be prepared with flour and served as gravy. Seasoning is very important in this dish as it is in all food.

Canterbury Chicken.—Cook together three and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter with one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion, add one tablespoonful of cornstarch when the onion is yellow, pour over one and one-half cupfuls of chicken stock. Bring to the boiling point and simmer for ten minutes, add one-half tablespoonful of lemon juice, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of paprika and one and one-half cupfuls of cooked chopped chicken. Serve very hot on toast.

Ham With Cider.—Have a thick center cut of ham at least two inches thick. Lay it in a frying pan and quickly sear on both sides. Add a cupful of sweet cider, one tablespoonful of minced parsley and let it simmer for an hour on the back part of the stove or in the oven. Serve with a sauce poured around the ham and garnish with parsley.

Frozen Boston Pudding.—Grate one-half pound of day-old Boston brown bread, pour over it a pint of cream, boiling hot, let stand until cool. Prepare a rich custard, using a pint of milk, three eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Cook until the custard coats the spoon. Chill and freeze as usual. Serve garnished with grated macaroon crumbs or with the molded pudding on a platter garnished with a border of whole macaroons.

Canned fruits, jellies, jams and relishes of various kinds are usually well provided in most homes. With good milk and a can of asparagus one may have cream of asparagus soup in ten minutes or less. Cream potato soup is another delicious cream soup to serve with a sauce poured around the ham and garnish with parsley.

THOUGHT MALARIA STILL IN SYSTEM

Until Dodson's Liver Tone Drove Out Quarts of Sour Bile and Other Poisons.

There are entire sections where everyone seems to think they have malaria. Others believe they never fully got the malarial poison out of their systems.

Arnold Whiteson says: "For years I took calomel for the aches, biliousness, headache, constipation and the deadly feeling associated with what we believed to be malaria.

"Last year I heard about Dodson's Liver Tone and bought a bottle for a few cents. Man, man, what a Godsend. In the morning it drove out quarts of black, sour bile. I got back my appetite for food, braced right up and haven't had a sick spell since. Whenever I feel a little bilious or the stomach gets sour, one dose of Dodson's Liver Tone is all I need. It is surely a blessing."

Hundreds of others tell the same experience.

Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

The automobile isn't in it with gossip when it comes to running people down.

Women Need a Mild Laxative - Not a "Physic"

Countless girls and women now know how foolish and needless it is to "purge" and "physic" themselves to avoid sick headaches, dizziness, biliousness, sallow skin, colds, or sour, gassy stomach.

They have found that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate girl or woman. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

CONTEST FILED

Lucius Hurley, who on the face of the official returns in the July primary, was defeated by only 6 plurality vote as the Democratic con-didate for Treasurer of Presidio County, has filed a contest. On the face of the returns Sam Wooley was nominated for Treasurer.

MAIL CARRIER HURT

The mail carrier from Marfa to Presidio several days ago on the high hill near Shafter lost control of the truck, which turned over, and resulted in braking the arm of the driver J. H. Henderson, and also injured a child which was a passenger.

STOLEN CHEVROLET RECOVERED

On August 2nd Charlie Norton had his new Chevrolet car stolen. Sherriff Vaughan was notified of the theft.

Thursday evening Sheriff Vaughn returned from San Angelo with the stolen car and two prisoners
Heintz and Frederichs, two soldiers of camp Marfa.

It seems impossible to steal a car at Marfa and get away with it.

BOY LOSES ARM

Wednesday evening about 5:00 o'clock a boy 14 years of age, said to be from Arizona, in trying to catch a westbound freight, fell and had his arm crushed. Dr. Barracott amputated the left arm above the elbow, and the boy was removed to the base hospital, where he is doing nicely.

Mae Scott, of Buena Vista, fourth occupant of the car, was only slightly injured.

Rochelle Dies at Hospital.

The accident occurred about 9:30
Monday night and cars passing picked up the injured and brought them to town. The young ladies were taken to their homes while Rochelle was placed in the Turney hospital where he was attended by Drs. Finis K. Turney and J. E.
Wright. His head was badly crushed and he received internal injuries the latter causing his death, according to the physicians. His injuries were of such a serious nature that physicians realized that there was little they could do for him. He died at 1:15 Tuesday afternoon, remaining conscious up to within a short time before his death.

Rochelle was between 25 and 30 years of age and came to Marfa from Bisbee, Arizona about 11 weeks ago, according to W. R. Ake, his employer. So far as is known he has no living relatives except he stated at one time before his death that he had a brother living in South Africa. His parents are dead, and efforts to locate other relatives or friends by telegraph proved fruitful. He was buried in the Alpine Cemetery Wednesday morning, Rev.
S. F. Marsh of Marfa being in charge of the funeral ceremonies.

J. F. Bennett has been on the sick list this week, suffering from an in-fectd arm.

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES

All our services will be resumed next Sunday morning. Prayer meeting Wednesday night and choir practice Thursday night.

The greater number of our people who attended Paisano were regularly present at the preaching hours. They also took one or more of the study courses. This was very encouraging.

About a dozen people from Marfa and as many from Alpine attended the burial services of Mr. Jack Rachelle at Alpine Tuesday. They brought many flowers. The arrangements were in charge of Mr. Ake. Mr. Rachelle had attended our church several times and we had enjoyed his occasional singing for us. None of his relatives or former acquaintances had been reached at the time of the funeral.

At Sunday school we will sing "I shall not be moved". Everyone will enjoy this little song as it was popular at Paisano.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Miss Emogene Porter of El Paso, who is visiting here with her relatives, was honored with a merry party Tuesday afternoon, her grand mother Mrs. W. A. Kerr, entertaining a number of little folks in celebration of her 10th birthday anniversary. The reception and dining rooms were artistically decorated in Phlox and Shasta Daisies, an ideal setting for the occasion, and here merry and interesting games and contests were enjoyed. Cutting for the symbols in a pretty birthday cake topped with 10 yellow candles sent to the honoree from El Paso, by her mother Mrs. C. E. Porter.

SERVED REFRESHMENTS

Friday evening after the concert at the Park by the First Cavalry band, the Marfa History Club, served the members of the band Sandwiches, assorted cakes and fruit punch. The Marfa History Club is the oldest club in Marfa, and has always been foremost in the interest shown in Civic improvements and the beautifying of our city. Several years ago the fountain at the Park was donated by the History Club.

Great interest is shown in the Park band concerts.

Unlike anything else it is "DUCO" the beautiful enduring finish for every thing in the home.

County Democratic Convention

Minutes of the Meeting of the Presidio County Democratic Primary held in the Court House in Marfa, Texas, July 31, 1926 at 2 o'clock p. m. The meeting was called to order by John Humphris, County chairman.

On motion duly made and carried John Humphris was elected temporary chairman and H. O. Metcalfe temporary secretary.

On motion duly made and seconded the temporary chairman and temporary secretary were elected as permanent officers for said convention.

The following resolution was offered and carried by a unanimous vote of said convention:

Be it resolved by the County Convention of Presidio County, Texas, in meeting assembled this the 31st day of July, 1926, at Marfa, Texas, that Miriam A. Ferguson, Governor of the State of Texas, be called upon to immediately resign from such office, in accord with her agreement made at Sulphur Springs in the opening speech of her campaign for re-election for the office of Governor; and in accord with the acceptance of such challenge or agreement made by the Honorable Dan Moody in his speech at San Antonio Texas. It is the sense of this meeting that said challenge and the acceptance thereof have fairly submitted to a vote of the people, and said challenge having made one of the main issues in the recent primary by the said two candidates, and the voters having by overwhelming majority expressed their choice in said Primary, that Mrs. Ferguson should immediately comply with the agreement and resign from said office. It is further the sense of this meeting that the statement issued by Governor Ferguson in which she proposes to resign after the meeting of the Legislature, is, in no sense in our opinion, a compliance with said agreement.

By motion duly made and carried the following voters of Presidio County, Texas were elected as delegates to the State Convention at San Antonio:

C. R. Sutton, T. C. Crosson, R. R. Smith, John T. Hamie, Mackie Mitchell, C. T. Mitchell, H. H. Lovett, J. B. Davis, Ernest Williams, Jack Knight, Burton Mitchell, John Humphris, J. W. Howell, H. O. Metcalfe, J. H. Fortner, J. C. Fuller, J. R. Love, Clyde McFarland, Jimmie Walker, W. T. Davis (County Judge Elect.), J. D. Bunton (Sheriff Elect.) and T. C. Mitchell, Jr.

By motion duly made, seconded and carried said delegates were instructed to vote as a unit; and to vote on behalf of Dan Moody, and in accord with the suggestion and direction of Dan Moody's floor leader at the State Convention; it was further directed that John Humphris be authorized to cast the ballot of Presidio County at said convention; and in case of absence, H. O. Metcalfe was authorized to cast such ballot; and in the event that each of said named persons be absent from the State Convention, the delegates from Presidio County present should elect one of their number as a voting delegate.

The chairman and secretary of this convention were directed to prepare proper certificates of the election of the above delegates and send same to the proper official of the state Executive Committee for enrollment.

No other business coming before the convention the meeting was adjourned.

Air Mail Makes Rapid Strides

Private Lines Now Connect at Many Points With Government Planes.

Washington.—Recently the first east-bound flight of the latest air mail route, linking New York to Texas, was completed in 26 hours, clipping a full day from the fastest rail service. After connecting at Chicago the route includes Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and finally the terminal at Dallas, Texas. This air mail service has been called the latest; but reports from Hartford, Conn., already announce a still newer effort, this time to link aerially the cities of Boston and Bangor, Maine.

At the rate air mail services are springing up all over the country—and all over several other countries—the honor of being the "latest" is indeed an insecure and impermanent one. Some of these lines spring up so quickly and are so readily accepted by the public that they attract scant attention outside of the immediate locality of their operation. Thus an air mail service has been in full swing for more than two months between Elko, Nev.; Boise, Idaho, and Pasco, Wash.; and another line operates between Miami, Fort Myers, Tampa and Jacksonville.

The Colonial Air Transport operates a postal and express service between Boston and New Jersey, giving Boston the benefit of the New Jersey and New York-Chicago service, just as St. Louis already enjoys it by a branch line through Peoria and Springfield. The government, through the Post Office department, has so far been responsible for the amazing growth of air mail trunk lines throughout the country; but in future it will be the privately owned lines that will take the initiative in building subsidiary branches extending to every part of the country.

Fresh Impetus Last Summer

A great impetus was given to the air mail service last summer when the government let contracts for four feeders to the transcontinental route, including three north-south trunks and over-night service between New York and Chicago. The north-south extensions included routes between New York and Boston, Chicago and St. Louis, Los Angeles and Salt Lake City, Elko and Pasco, Minneapolis-St. Paul and New Orleans via St. Louis and Memphis; Pittsburgh and New Orleans, and Chicago and New Orleans via Indianapolis, Louisville, Nashville and Birmingham.

More and more cities of all sizes are being put on the transcontinental route, New York to San Francisco. These cities connect by plane with some point on the transcontinental route or else forward their letter and parcel post mails by train for connection at some center on the route. Last June Des Moines, Iowa, and Sacramento, Calif., were placed on the route. Both east-bound and west-bound planes stop at these points to take on and leave mail, and these cities in turn become centers for other cities outside the air mail route.

Late last year 17 bids were received by the Post Office department for the operation of eight routes, including the Los Angeles-Seattle route, the Salt Lake City, the New York-Boston route and four others. It was said that the new air service would directly connect 29 important cities by air mail routes with the 16 cities which have been receiving similar service on the transcontinental air mail route for more than a year. In addition to these, it was believed that many other cities would enjoy the advantage of speedy transmission of mails by combining the air routes and the railway mail services. The contracts for the eight new routes called for an extension of the air mail service of 4,662 miles, and require about 390,000 miles of flying yearly on the six round trips per week scheduled for each route.

Following the lead of the government in extending air mail connections on a nation-wide scale several pioneers have already started privately owned mail, passenger and freight lines, and this development is looked forward to with unfeigned enthusiasm by those who have the interest of commercial aviation at heart.

Aviation as an Industry.

Both Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, and Harry S. New, postmaster general, have expressed the opinion that it was the proper function of the government to aid in the development of aviation as an industry. With a view to encouragement of the flying art Secretary Hoover last year recommended the establishment of a bureau of civil aviation in the Department of Commerce, to be charged with the duty of providing services for commercial aviation comparable to those afforded in the field of commercial navigation.

This proposed bureau received warm commendation from Mr. New when he appeared before President Coolidge's air board of inquiry last September. The postmaster general brought out that in the last fiscal year air mail planes had flown more than two and one-half million miles, of which more than half a million miles were night flights. Great as had been the growth in efficiency of the government-operated air mail service, Mr. New contended, however, that the government should not permanently administer the service under its own auspices. He favored assigning the service to private agencies under contract, just as is done in the transportation of the mail by railroads and water carriers.

Already some private concerns have entered the new field outlined by Hoover and New. The Eastern Air Transport, Inc., linking New England with the West by means of the Federal line, was organized late last year. Shortly afterward the Western Air Express, Inc., with main offices in Los Angeles, began operation of an air mail and freight service between Chicago and California.

Besides these, several other lines are contemplated in St. Louis, Boston, Hartford, Des Moines and other points. So far, due to the fact that the amount of freight must be limited, private commercial aviation has not developed at the rate that some of its ardent advocates would like; but this phase of the matter is receiving serious study all over the country, and it is believed that the day is not far off when planes will be able to carry more freight, thus being of greater industrial use.

Early this year Henry Ford entered the ranks of the pioneers in commercial aviation when he started to operate a private line between Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. The first definite adventure of financial men into the field of commercial aviation, with the avowed intention of extending their activities to all parts of the country, was announced in December, 1925, with the formation of the Colonial Air Transport, Inc. This "adventure" was hailed as the first great step toward making commercial aviation practical and profitable on a large scale. It was predicted that, should the first efforts be successful, the backers of the scheme would next attempt to carry passengers on a commercial basis.

Postmaster General New explained recently that it was the intention of the government to turn the air mail over to private interests. "The time is at hand when the government can step out of the air mail business and let private interests gradually take over the service," he said. "I don't think that the handling of mail alone will pay on air lines. The successful lines must be prepared to carry not only mail but high-class express, and eventually passengers. That will come when the American public has been trained to realize that airways have business possibilities."

It is readily granted both here and abroad that in its air mail service the United States ranks first. But, according to a review made recently by the New York Trust company, in passenger and freight service Europe is far ahead of the United States. Aviation lines, most of them privately owned with government subsidies, are an established part of the transportation service on the Continent.

This review further states that in France, now maintaining the strongest military air service with the largest number of planes, the operation of the thirteen commercial lines has been consolidated into five heavily subsidized companies. Punctuality is rated as high as 90 per cent, with the same degree of safety as on the railroads. Efforts are being made to establish connections between Paris and the main capitals of the world, and to organize a Mediterranean aerial system connecting France with the Near East and South America.

The German lines, although not as fully developed, have shown less deficit than the French and are less dependent upon government subsidy, according to the review. Their activity has been concentrated into three great trunk lines, the Europe System being the most powerful. This system controls most of the strategic air routes in middle Europe, comprising airplane service in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Danzig, Latvia, Estonia, Finland and Russia.

In the development of commercial aviation abroad Turkey fills a novel chapter. When, late in 1925, the enthusiasm over aviation became nationwide a committee composed of deputies, army officers and professional men made a house-to-house canvass seeking a contribution from each family according to the income. Balls and fetes were given to swell the fund for the establishment of a passenger, commercial and mail service between Constantinople and Angora.

Thus commercial aviation is progressing all over the world. In England a new organization became effective in April, 1924, when the existing companies were consolidated into the Imperial Air Transport company, Ltd., which has a monopoly of commercial aeronautical operations. In Mexico, the governor of the state of Tabasco last year requested permission to establish a hydroplane service between Villahermosa, capital of the state, and Puerto Mexico and Vera Cruz. Air service between the United States and Cuba, via Key West and Havana, was resumed last year. In Canada commercial aviation, according to reports, is progressing at an amazing rate. Plans to link Europe with South American countries have repeatedly been considered, both in Paris and Berlin.

Down at the other end of the world, in Cape Town, the first South African air mail flight was completed successfully in February, 1925, when airmen flew the 900 miles between Cape Town and Durban in eleven hours.

GHOST CITY, ONCE THRIVING METROPOLIS, TO BE JUNKED

Midco Built Up Around Great Steel Plant in Missouri During the World War.

Kansas City, Mo.—Nestling in the hills of southern Missouri lies Midco, a mushroom town that thrived in the war, but now a "ghost city," with only nineteen families living there with free rent, waiting for the crane, crowbar and sledge hammers of the junk dealer. The thriving metropolis of Carter county eight years ago figured in one of the most unusual transactions in America, growing out of the World war.

The entire city, 350 houses, a great steel plant, water works system, electric light plant, motion picture show, gymnasium and executive building of 28 rooms, streets and all improvements, has been sold to the Sonken & Galamba Iron and Metal company of Kansas City as junk.

The nineteen families that live there by virtue of the free rent are wondering what the Kansas City concern will do with the homes. Many of the buildings, seven and eight-room structures, are strictly modern.

Herman Sonken of the iron company says he is in a quandary as to what to do with the fine homes. It would be a crime to tear them down, he feels. There are more than two hundred houses.

Midco has 294 acres of land in the townsite. The same owners also have a lease on 23,000 acres of timber land. In close proximity to the town are several iron mines which produced metal for military uses in the war, but are idle now.

When the great demand for iron came in the World war the Mid-Continent Iron corporation built a huge iron plant and pig iron plant there and laid out the town.

About $4,000,000 was spent on the plant. Workers hurried in and built the homes and buildings. The hum of the powerful machinery in the great plant was heard night and day during the war and the workers went to the new city in great numbers. As many as 3,000 once occupied the town. After the war, the plant was shut down. The population, jobless, departed, leaving the city in the hills deserted.

Most of the machinery in the big steel plant is intact and will be reclaimed by the iron company.

Big Demand in Britain for U. S. Safety Razors

Washington.—The growing popularity of the American safety razor and its indispensable blade was evidenced in a Commerce department report showing that such blades accounted for approximately two-thirds of this country's $13,000,000 cutlery export trade in 1925, while the old-fashioned "ax" razor made up one-tenth. The little whisker eliminator found more customers in the British isles than in any other country.

PORTO BELLO GOLD

SYNOPSIS

The story opens in New York, about the middle of the eighteenth century. Robert Ormerod, who tells the tale, is talking to Peter Corlaer, chief of fur traders, and man of enormous strength, when Darby McGraw, Irish bonded boy, brings news that a pirate ship is "off the Hook." An old sea captain announces he has been chased by the notorious pirate, Captain Rip-Rap. The older Ormerod tells Robert the pirate is Andrew Murray, his (Robert's) great-uncle, commanding the pirate ship, the Royal James. Murray is an ardent Jacobite. Next day Robert and Darby encounter a one-legged sailor, John Silver whom Darby conducts to a tavern. Robert meets a young woman from a Spanish frigate who is seeking her father, Colonel O'Donnell. He takes her to the place she designates. Murray with a force of sailors visits the Ormerod house. He announces his intention of carrying off Robert, by force, if necessary, promising him a great future. The father is powerless. Peter Corlaer insists upon accompanying Robert. Robert and Peter are taken aboard a brig.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"Pistol that man, if you must," called Murray; "but use your cutlasses, if possible."

"Neen," said Peter again. "We don't fight."

"We might as well be killed now as let them carry off Bob," said my father with a sob in his voice.

"Neen," said Peter a third time. "Dead, you stay dead. Perhaps Bob gets away from them some time. Better he be with Murray than he be dead."

"Intelligently logical," commented Murray. "I commend the sentiment to you, Nephew Robert."

Peter's little eyes glinted toward him.

"I go with Bob," he said.

"No, no," denied Murray quickly. "You were not invited, friend Peter."

"If I don't go, Robert don't go," replied Peter. "And you don't go. Perhaps I don't kill you, but if there is shooting you don't get away. Ja!"

Murray contemplated this speech.

"Your proposition then," he said, "is that you insist upon sharing my nephew's new career or else will endeavor to secure the deaths of all of us, including his and your own?"

"Ja!" answered Peter.

"You may come," decided my great-uncle. "Your muscles should prove useful. John, I fancy we shall require triple bonds on this prisoner."

"Aye, aye, sir," assented Silver. "We ha' plenty o' stout manilla. One o' you lads run back and get those coils I left by the stove. That's the proper spirit, Darby. Always willin'. You'll make a rare hand, you will. And how about makin' fast that gentleman as is goin' to stay behind, captain?"

Murray looked at my father, and from him to me.

"Have you reconciled yourselves to what I may justly style the inevitable?" he inquired suavely.

My father collapsed into his chair with a groan.

"If you will not suffer the boy to be hurt!" he exclaimed.

"My word of honor to that," returned my great-uncle very seriously. "His comfort and safety rank ahead of my own. Ormerod, for I anticipate that he is to achieve all those triumphs which fate denied me. 'Tis true I hope to sample them briefly, but—" and for the first time a shadow clouded his face—"I am, as you doubtless know, in my sixty-fourth year, and a feeble Providence, regarding the divinity of which I am inclined to share the skepticism of the French philosophers, is scarce likely to indulge me in a very prolonged extension of life's span. Nor indeed would I have it otherwise. I feel no inclination for the senility of extreme age. Do you submit?"

My father bent his head.

"Yes—for his sake—you! Robert, no violence. We are in a coil we cannot escape for the present; but rest assured I will do everything I can to secure your release."

My great-uncle motioned Silver forward.

"Make Master Ormerod as comfortable as possible, John," he instructed. "Yes, tie him in his chair. Ormerod, accept my advice, and leave well enough alone. Within a year, possibly—two, at most—the boy will be safe and advanced in fortune beyond your wildest dreams."

"Let me have him back as he is—'tis all I ask," groaned my father.

Murray took snuff.

"A highly correct attitude, sir," he remarked. "Have you more to say? Very well, John; you may affix the gag. No, not that gunnysacking. Here is a silken kerchief will do. And now, friend Peter, we turn to you—and you, Nephew Robert. I would these precautions were unnecessary. Let us trust your inclinations will become more friendly toward me upon closer acquaintance."

CHAPTER IV

An Inkling of the Plot

My poor father's face, with the tears standing in his eyes, was the last object I saw in the wan light of the guttering candles. The next moment my captors logged me into the darkness of the garden and pushed me upon a hand-cart such as was used to fetch up the frailer kinds of merchandise from the docks. Peter's immense body already occupied most of the cart's cramped space, and I was squeezed precariously between him and the near side, the which Silver perceiving he prodded Peter into a more restricted compass and then spread a tarpaulin over both of us.

"Proceed, John," ordered my great-uncle's voice. "You remember the way? The Green lane, 'tis called. Four men should be sufficient to accompany you. I will go on by another street with the rest of our party."

"Don't ye worry yourself, captain," returned Silver.

Footsteps thudded away on the gravel, and I heard the scratching of the one-legged man's crutch as he stumped in front of us and the cart jolted forward. We emerged into the Green lane, heading toward the East river, and a thrill tickled my spine as I heard the chanting tones of old Diggorry Leigh, our ward watchman.

"Ten o'clock of a clear, dark night, and the wind in the nor-west. And all's well!"

"Easy, all!" whispered Silver's voice. "Push on, ye swabs; push on! But hold your gab, I'll do the talking."

The steel piece on the butt of his crutch tinkled on the cobbles as he stumped ahead of the cart.

"Ho there, shipmate," he hailed cordially. "And does you do this the whole, livelong night?"

Diggorry's lantern-stave jingled on the ground.

"I do," he returned in pompous tones. "What keeps you aboard so late? 'Yare seafaring men, I judge."

"Now I call that clever," protested Silver with unconcealed admiration. "You sees us in the dark, and straight off you says, 'seafaring men.' I can see you're a vigilant watchman, shipmate. I'd hate to be a neefarious fellow in your town. Blow my scuttle-butt, I would!"

Diggorry's appreciation of this tribute was mirrored in his voice.

"'Tis essential that our citizens be protected," he answered. "Yet there are those who have accused me of sleeping on watch."

"Skulkers, they be—low-lived skulkers as ever was," Silver assured him. "I know how you feel. Here've been a-workin' since sunup, a-shiftn' cargo and stowin' it aboard, and I'll lay you a piece of eight the captain never so much as serves out a extry noggin' o' rum."

Diggorry's stave jingled again as he sloped it over his shoulder.

"The wisest men are not always those in authority, friend," he said. "Ye might think, from the way some of the corporation talk, 'twas they bar the night-walkers and wasters from the city's streets! Bah!"

And his wailing voice receded into Pearl street.

"What are you night-walkers and wasters a-sniggerin' about?" demanded Silver of his following. "George Merry, I'll lay into you with my crutch. Put some heft behind this here blessed cart. Ain't ye ashamed o' yourselves, a-laughin' at a brave, hard-workin' watchman as keeps wicked pirates from liftin' your goods?"

A few hundred feet farther on we rattled off the cobbles onto the planked surface of a wharf.

"That you, John?" growled a voice.

"Aye, aye, Bill. Where's the captain?"

"Gone off in the jollyboat. That 'ere Spanish Irisher is a-waitin' him aboard."

Silver pulled the tarpaulin from over our heads.

"Here, George Merry, can't you and your mates handle the big fellow? Two to his head and two to his feet—and drop him easy or he'll stove in the boat. Now, my gentlemen—" this to me—"we'll pass you down, too. You must pull a strong oar with the captain for him to be so anxious to get you offshore hale and whole. It'll be place and rank for you, messmate, or a chance to swim wif the sharks."

"Where's the red-headed little Irish-er, Bill?"

"I sent him off with the captain," replied Bones. "Down wif you, John. We'll cast off."

From where I now lay, propped up in the bow with my head resting on Peter's huge stomach, I could see the wharf a few feet above and the vague figures of the pirates and behind them the shadowy outline of the warehouses and an occasional dim light. Silver lowered himself to a seat upon the stringpiece of the wharf, dropped the butt of his crutch to the forward thwart, felt about with his one leg and came to rest in front of Peter and me. The crutch he allowed to slip to the bottom of the boat, and in its place he took an oar. Bill Bones found a seat in the stern sheets.

"All clear," muttered Bill. "Give way."

The oars fended off from the wharf, and the boat crept out into the stream, where it felt the full strength of the tide, just beginning to turn. The bow bounced up as the first wave hit it, and Peter, beneath me, emitted a dismal groan through his gag. Silver, bending diligently to his oar, looked over his shoulder.

"You would come, messmate," he said. "'Tis nobody's fault but your own."

Another groan from Peter, and he lay still.

"Look sharp," called Bones. "The brig's just ahead."

A riding light gleamed high above us in the velvet gloom. I heard the faint slap-slap-slap of water against an anchored hull.

As we rounded under her counter a couple of ropes rattled down to us, and I heard the creaking of tackle and holst.

"Make fast the young 'un first," rasped Bones.

"Aye, aye, Bill," answered Silver, and I became conscious that the one-legged man and another were knotting a loose rope beneath my arm-pits.

"All right, above there?" called Silver presently.

The block began to whine. The rope tautened; the unseen block whined louder; and I rose involuntarily from my position across Peter's belly. My feet were jerked from a thwart, and I kicked the air. The grunts of men hauling in unison floated from the brig's deck, and as I rose faster I commenced to swing like a pendulum. Inside of a minute I was dangling over the bulwarks, feet kicking frantically for standing room. A man caught me by one arm and drew me inboard, shouting the while to "slacken away!" and so I came down again with a bump that was like to crack my knee-caps, deposited as so much cargo upon the plucky deck.

Dazed by treatment I had never sustained before, I stood heedless as the ropes were unfastened beneath my arm-pits, my bonds slipped off and the gag extracted from my aching jaws. I was just beginning to take in the aspect of my surroundings when Corlaer's cask of a body topped the bulwarks, swung with ludicrous mine concern for an instant as I dare say had done, and then lurched in and crashed to the deck. The Dutchman was purple in the face, with white spots dotting the congested area of his cheeks, and gasping for breath. His stomach heaved tumultuously as the gag was removed.

"What ails you, Peter?" I cried.

"Der water," he moaned. "It makes me sick."

And sick he was—violently.

I heard Bones continuing to shout orders; and there was a constant bustle of men running back and forth over the decks, a clattering of ropes and shrieking of falls and blocks. For'ard sounded an ordered tramping of feet and a chorus of rough voices bellowing the wild sea-song I had heard in the Whale's Head tavern:

Fifteen men on the Dead Man's Chest—
Yo-ho-ho, and a bottle of rum!
Drink and the devil had done for the rest—
Yo-ho-ho, and a bottle of rum!

Corlaer, weak as a rag, sank in a heap of buckskin in a dark corner by the bulwarks.

"Neen, neen," he answered when I would have helped him. "Notings, Bob. I get better by and by. Der salt water—it is always so with me."

"I'll get you some rum," I said firmly.

And, rising, I was on the point of seeking the nearest man to ask where a drink might be obtained when footsteps clicked on the deck behind me.

"They are a dangerous company," said a voice with an unmistakable brogue to it.

"What would you?" returned my great-uncle. "We could not employ his majesty's people in such a business. And all things considered, my fellows can handle it far better and more expeditiously."

They passed through the rays of the lantern which swung from the mainyard. Aye, the first speaker was Colonel O'Donnell. The little Irish maid! His daughter. My father had been right in his suspicions.

But what could be the tie of interest between a colonel in the army of the king of Spain and an outlaw who had defied the whole structure of civilization? A Jacobite plot? It seemed preposterous!

"'Tis my daughter I was thinking of," explained O'Donnell as they reached the starboard gangway close by where I stood over Peter's prostrate form. "A woman on a pirate ship!"

"My dear sir, Rule Four of the Code of Articles under which our company is governed—does it surprise you that we have our own laws?—forbids the taking and keeping of women as spoil aboard our ships. We have had experience in the past of the evils which flow in the wake of a struggle for women's favors."

"Shall you not flout your own rule if my daughter comes aboard?" pressed the Irishman.

"She will not come as a prisoner, but as a guest," returned Murray blandly. "After all, colonel, the Royal James is my ship—and in that respect differs from most outlaw craft which are held by the entire crew as a community. No, no; you need not concern yourself."

"I like it not, I say!" persisted O'Donnell. "Why did you bid me bring her? You were hot for her coming so soon as you heard I had a daughter."

"Would you have left her by her lone in a strange country?" answered my great-uncle impatiently. "Tut, man, be sensible. Who would suspect a man who had his daughter with him? 'Tis true this enterprise is fraught with danger, but no maid can go through life without snuffing peril. We will guard her as we shall the treasure."

"I'll hold you to that," rapped O'Donnell as he climbed over the bulwarks and felt for the ladder. "I am not proud of myself when I think of her innocence. Holy saints, what a coil! Well, well, no matter. I must be going, for the night wanes."

"Yes," assented Murray. "And stir your frigate's captain to a swift passage."

The Irishman nodded.

"If necessary we'll pass by the Havana. Luckily Porto Bello is the indentee's chief worry. You'll hover, then, off Mona passage?"

"Aye, from the south tip of Hispaniola to the north of Porto Rico, save it storms, when we'll run for shelter in the bay of Samana, where the old buccaners were wont to lie. Diego can find us. He has done it before. Just give him ample time."

"So soon as the Santissima Trinidad has her orders Diego shall know."

He started to descend and then climbed back.

"She has heavy metal, Murray. Are you certain?"

My great-uncle laughed.

"Be at ease upon that point, cavalier. We could take two Spaniards of the Santissima Trinidad's metal. I fear I must bid you good evening, though. Hark!"

The bell of the Spanish frigate rang out eight times.

"Midnight!" exclaimed O'Donnell. "Can you be gone by dawn?"

"My dear sir," returned my uncle lightly, "this brig will never be seen again—anywhere—by anybody."

O'Donnell shivered.

"Good night," he said abruptly, and his head vanished behind the bulwarks.

I heard the rattle of oars, a low order in Spanish, the steady splash and spatter of rowers as the boat pulled away. My great-uncle watched it for a moment, then turned toward where I stood.

"Well, Nephew Robert, what did you make of us?" he inquired.

I contrived to keep my voice level, for I would not give him the satisfaction of supposing he had startled me.

"That you are engaged in deeper villainy even than my father feared."

"You have a narrow-minded view of life," he remarked. "However, 'tis a defect can be remedied by experience. By the way, do not jump to conclusions from what you overheard. You shall have the whole tale anon, but until you possess a more intimate knowledge of the situation you are better off in ignorance."

"To me you are a singularly bloody pirate, and that is all."

"The injustice of youth!" he commented evenly. "I was the uncle and tender guardian of the mother you never knew, Robert."

"I share my father's feelings upon

Couldn't Really Call Inn Ancient Building

We had paddled through Ghent's complex waterways and were wondering where we could leave our canoe in safety, when some racing shells shot past, a boathouse pennant fluttered, and a cheery voice invited us to utilize the Royal Club Nautique for as long as we wished. So we stored our canoe in the club's "garage," then drove through the town to a quaint inn whose leaded panes looked out upon a row of shops built into the outer walls of a great Gothic church. Melville Charter writes in the National Geographic Magazine.

The sight of people flocking to service, while others slipped drinks, got shaved or bought curls, all under the eaves of a sacred edifice, hinted that we were in an ancient quarter of the town.

"Is this an old inn?" we inquired of our Flemish host. He was a singularly literal man. He replied gravely:

"Not so very. Probably when built in the Thirteenth century it was some wealthy man's home. In the Sixteenth century, about the time Albrecht Durer stopped here, it was the house of the Grocers' guild. Later it was privately owned for a couple or more centuries. No, as an inn I wouldn't call it particularly old."

After that we reverentially used the dormat, and refrained from striking matches on the woodwork.

that point," I cried, and raised my hand in a threatening gesture.

He did not stir.

"Your conversion will be quite as difficult as I had foreseen," he said. "No, you would gain naught by striking me. Impartially I may recommend you to adopt an attitude which will secure you the maximum of liberty and opportunity. Of what avail for you to force yourself into confinement?"

"Sit," I returned, "be convinced of this: The day you attack a defenseless ship I will slay as many of you as I can and contentedly die."

It has a sound of theatricalism now, but I meant it at the time.

"I purpose nothing of that sort for you," answered my great-uncle. "And while I am tempted to argue you out of a position founded upon a false ethical basis, I shall content myself with the observation that you would do well to hold your temper in leash until you find a need for its employment."

He glanced overside.

"I see we are under way. I must ask you to excuse me for the present, Robert. I am constrained to serve as pilot."

He raised his little silver whistle, and its shrill call fetched several of the crew aft.

"Aye, aye, captain." It was Bones. "What's your wish, sir?"

"Have this poor fellow"—Murray gestured toward Corlaer's recumbent form—"carried to one of the state-rooms. Use him gently. Bid the Irish boy—what's his name? Oh, Darby!—bid Darby tend him and fetch him what he requires."

"This gentleman, here"—he indicated me—"is my great-nephew, Master Bones. It may be he will succeed me in command of the Royal James some day, although he is not with us of his own wish as yet. He is to have complete freedom except he undertake to achieve aught to our disadvantage. Pass the word to me men, if you please."

"That's a queer lay," growled Bones. "Is he friend or enemy, captain?"

"An intelligent question," replied my great-uncle. "We may call him an enemy who is to be treated as nearly as possible as a friend."

"Blasted if I see any sense in it," affirmed Bones. "But whatever you says, captain."

"Exactly," said my great-uncle. "Stir your stumps, ye lousy swabs," roared Bones to his men. "Hitch on to this here land-whale. — my lights and gizzard if I ever see such a monstrous heap o' human flesh! We'd ought to take him to the South sea and sell him to the cannibals. That's all he's good for. Come on, young gentleman, you may be the captain's nobby or by-blow or whatever 'twas he called ye, but everybody works on this ship. Lend a hand."

I obeyed him in silence, while he and the others cursed and blasphemed with a fluency defying description. What a company! Except in Murray's presence they owned no discipline, accepted no restraint. Palpably they hated as well as feared him, and I found myself wondering how secure a hold he had upon their passions. Let them once cast off the spell of his magnetism and superior wickedness, and they would become so many irresponsible agents of lust and destruction.

I shuddered and was glad of the hooded cabin-lamp as we stowed Peter's limp body into the restricted space of a bunk; gladder still when they tramped away and left me alone with the Dutchman.

Through a porthole the lights of New York winked farewell to me. I was as frightened as a child by himself for the first time in the dark.

All honor to them! Wise mothers like Mrs. Alice Louthan urge their daughters in their early teens to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Louthan says—"I gave my fifteen-year old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She was out of school for four months. I read the advertisements of the Vegetable Compound, and since she has taken it she has improved and has gone back to school. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be."—Mrs. ALICE LOUTHAN, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

TO THE VOTERS OF PRESIDIO COUNTY

I take this means to thank the voters of this county for their loyal support during my recent campaign for Sheriff. I am indeed thankful that it was possible to go through the campaign without the heat and without the bitterness that sometimes go in elections.

It will be my earnest desire to make a good Sheriff of this County, and if the people will all lend me their support, I believe I can make an officer.

I want to emphasize now that I have no ill will against anyone who voted against me. It is the privilege of every person to vote as he or she may see fit, and I want our people to enjoy that privilege to the limit.

However, I do want to ask every, those who were against me as well as those who were for me to get behind me as soon as I take the office, and help me enforce the law.

Very sincerely
Joe Bunton.

TO THE VOTERS OF PRESIDIO COUNTY

I desire to take this opportunity to express to the voters of Presidio County my sincere appreciation for the support accorded me in my recent race for County assessor and while I was not the successful candidate, I am indeed grateful to all who cast their ballot for me and used their influence in my behalf.

To those who did not support me I entertain no ill will whatsoever and we will continue to be the same good friends and neighbors, working for the best interests of Presidio County.

TEXAS FARM BUREAU COTTON ASSOCIATION WANT TO START OPERATIONS IN THE PRESIDIO DISTRICT

Mr. J. D. Coghlan Supervisor for Western Texas and Mr. O. R. Prouty District Supervisor for the El Paso District were visitors in our valley Monday and after looking over some of the farms said they had not seen any cotton anywhere in Texas as good as this here.

The Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association is a Co-operative Marketing association, they have been in business for four years and are beginning to handle considerable cotton in the four years of its existence it has sold 683,148 bales of cotton for more than $84,000,000.00 they have a very attractive contract to offer cotton growers, and anyone interested would do well to write the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association, Dallas, Texas, for full information, or call at the Office of the Presidio International Press, for a copy of contract. Mr. Prouty will probably return within a week or ten days and look the situation over.

CHAMPION COTTON FIELDS

On the Sparks farm at Presidio and on the Kilpatrick farms at Candelaria are two fields of cotton which if nothing happens to injure the present prospect will produce 2 bales per acre. D. D. Kilpatrick claims that he has one tract of 75 acres which will make an average of 2 bales per acre.
