TEXAS MUNICIPAL ASSOCIATION COMPLETES ORGANIZATION

ALL CITIES WEST TEXAS ARE ASKED

Telegrams Asking for Support Sent to State House

By CHAS. C. WATSON
Avalanche Staff Writer

LUBBOCK, Feb. 25. (Special).—At a meeting of representatives from approximately 20 cities of this section of Texas, permanent organization of the West Texas Municipal association was perfected here Tuesday with Mayor Leon Goodman, of Midland, as president. Tuesday's meeting got underway at noon in a luncheon session at Hotel Lubbock. Other officers named include Mayor J. J. Clements, Lubbock, first vice president; Mayor J. B. Cardwell, Plainview, second vice president; Mayor E. D. Ireland, Hereford, third vice president. A secretary-treasurer will be appointed by President Goodman.

INVESTIGATION ASKED

AUSTIN, Feb. 25. (AP).—Senator Parrish of Lubbock, by resolution, stated that citizens of all parts of Texas were protesting public utility rates and asked appointment of a joint house and senate committee to investigate charges. It also charged companies with not bearing their burden of taxation.

Every city within the boundaries commonly known as West Texas will be invited to become a member of the organization and officers will mail invitations to all such cities within the near future. The by-laws provide that an initial fee of $25 shall be paid by each city, this amount must be in the hands of the president by April 1.

The existing controversy between West Texas cities and gas companies regarding excessive rates held a major share of the association's attention at Tuesday's session. A meeting will be requested with officials of the West Texas gas company at once, when officials of the association will demand a reduction in gas rates and ask permission to have a public accountant audit the gas company books. Attitude of the company at this meeting probably will determine the future course of action.

A number of resolutions were adopted regarding the gas situation. All resolutions were referred to the executive committee for final action.

One of the principal resolutions proposed and approved was efforts on the part of West Texas cities in securing competition in the distribution and sale of natural gas. "The cities should band together and grant franchises to individuals, or a group of individuals assuring them of support and cooperation," the resolution read, "also through this means to encourage the construction of a competitive pipe line to bring gas to the respective cities."

"In the event the cities are not successful in securing competition, they should band together in the construction of a pipe line to transport the gas. In the event private interests will not construct such lines then each city immediately shall take steps toward municipal ownership of the distribution system, either by exercising franchise or charter rights in the purchase of the existing system or by the construction of another system."

The meeting had hardly been called yesterday before telegrams were speeding over the wires to Austin. These telegrams, bearing the association's signature, urged the support of Governor Ross Sterling, senators and representatives of this district and members of the house committee on state affairs in pass-

MIDLAND MEN AT RESOURCE TAXES RALLY IN PECOS

Members of the Midland county commissioners court and representatives of the City of Midland and Midland chamber of commerce left this morning for Pecos to attend an anti-natural-resource-tax rally.

Mayor Leon Goodman represented the city and Secretary Paul T. Vickers, Clarence Scharbauer and James S. Noland, the chamber of commerce.

West Texans were asked to meet at the Pecos court house in telegrams filed by J. C. Hunter, W. W. McCutcheon, L. W. Anderson, W. E. Bell, E. L. Parker, Charlie Boyd and Francis Popham. They said that imposition of legislation on resources taxes would be "vicious" and would make insecure the future exploitation of minerals—gas, oil, potash and sulphur.

Old Court House in Ripley's Drawings

Ripley's "Believe it or Not" cartoon Sunday had a drawing of the old Midland county court house, with the startling information that it was "sold for one dollar to Earnest Woods."

Mayor Leon Goodman received a letter from Ripley, the famous cartoonist, about a year ago asking for the facts concerning sale of the court house for a dollar and asked for a picture of the building.

Sale of the building for one dollar was to make legal a contract wherein W. E. Woods, Midland contractor, would remove the structure from the court house grounds, receiving his payment in the material removed. He built a garage building 75 by 140 feet and two residences from the old sand stone, and had other materials left over.

ALLOCATION FOR FEDERAL BLDG. HERE EXPECTED

Probability that allocation will be made for a federal building for Midland in the present session of congress was expressed in a telegram received late Tuesday by Homer W. Rowe from Congressman Tom Connally.

Connally expressed the belief that with this allocation the appropriation for such a building would be made in the next session of congress.

Midland had been on the deferred list of towns having applications in for federal buildings but had recently been placed on the active list. This new information concerning immediate possibilities of advancing another step came as a surprise to local citizens working on the case.

Midland recently got a new post-office through a contract between the government and Dr. John B. Thomas, he erected a spacious building and hospital here. The new postoffice was occupied late in November.

Internal Revenue Man Coming Here

For the convenience of those who are required by law to file federal income tax returns, a deputy collector of internal revenue will be at the Midland National bank, on March 3 and 4, to assist taxpayers in filing their returns. No charge will be made for this service. The matter of filing income tax returns should be given immediate attention in order to avoid penalty and interest.

Income tax returns for the calendar year 1930 shall be filed not later than March 15, 1931, with the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer resides or has his principal place of business.

JURY CHARGE GIVEN AT 3 O'CLOCK; ARGUMENT TO START SOON THEREAFTER

Insanity Predicate Worked at by Defense And Steadily Hammered at by State As Doctors Are Questioned

The jury of the Jones murder trial was expected to get the case late this afternoon.

The state and defense had closed at 11:35 this morning and District Judge Charles L. Klapproth adjourned court until 3 o'clock this afternoon, at which time he was to read his charge to the jury. Arguments were to begin immediately thereafter.

Sharp questioning and cross questioning of witnesses this morning restored drama to the case which had grown somewhat tiresome to court room spectators Tuesday afternoon in the droning of defense counsel as seven long depositions were read from the witness stand.

It could not be learned whether District Judge Charles L. Klapproth would limit time spent by sides in argument.

Court Is Crowded. Spectators were entering the court room at 8 o'clock this morning, and by 9, when court opened, all seats were taken and the entire length of the east side of the room was filled with persons standing.

Dr. W. G. Whitehouse, Midland physician, was introduced as the first defense witness. Questioned by Sam K. Wasaff, defense attorney, Whitehouse testified that he had examined the defendant, C. B. Jones, and for the benefit of the jury, laid his thumb in a scar running across Jones' head as he described the remains of a former wound.

Dr. Whitehouse Questioned. Dr. Whitehouse testified that he had studied insanity only generally but said he felt that he could form a definite opinion from an examination of a patient with the aid of history of the case furnished him. He testified as to the meaning of illudinal trend, hallucinatory ideas, general euphoria, ideas of grandeur, exuberant fantasies and hypochondriacal illusion, when questioned by Wasaff.

Wasaff advanced an assumption, bringing in points of defense testimony concerning a fracture to Jones' skull when he was 11 years of age, of later hospital and family doctor observation and treatment, of his striking brothers and sisters, suffering head aches and "brain storms," of his later contraction of syphilis, its treatment, a review of the euphoria and evidences of symptoms of insanity, of the actual killing of Russell, regardless of the person killing him, asking finally, "Now Doctor, I'll ask you to state if in your opinion the man is sane or insane."

Believes Jones Insane. "My opinion is that he has been insane for years, made worse recently through syphilis and the treatment of it," Whitehouse said, substantially. He expressed the opinion that Jones was insane on January 24, 1931, at the time of killing of Russell, that Jones could not have known the difference between right and wrong, that he did not know the quality of an act if he committed it, that he could have easily killed without provocation, and that a cranial injury could have caused such an attack, aided by syphilitic infection, and that he had seen such attacks on men as young as 19 years. He testified that a family physician was the best to judge a case of insanity.

The doctor testified that an insane person would respond to suggestion and the will of another such as in the case of Cox saying, "Let's get out of here, Buck," before they fled from the scene of the crime, going to Stanton.

"Could Be in Doubt." Dr. Whitehouse, in his final testimony, said that the type of insanity he believed Jones to have had.

PSYCHIATRIST IS UNABLE TO FIND JONES IS INSANE

Introductions of depositions by the defense as it further built up a predicate of insanity and the taking of the stand by a psychiatrist took up most of the Tuesday afternoon session of the Jones murder trial.

Dr. A. M. Gantt took the stand later in the afternoon. Seven depositions were read, five of them answers to interrogatories to members of Jones' family and one of the others from the family physician. Most of these depositions were introduced to show that Jones, who faces trial on charges of shooting Weldon L. Russell fatally on the morning of Feb. 25 at a party given in Midland, was erratic mentally from the effects of a head injury suffered in 1907, when he was 12 years old, when a defective trolley pole fell on his head and that he could not have been responsible for any action he might have committed from the day of the accident to the day of the Russell shooting.

Jones, whose real name was given by his relatives as Charles Milton Haslett, was said in the depositions to have begun acting peculiarly soon after the accident, to have beaten his younger sister and to have run his mother out of her house. Furthermore, the depositions read, he mistreated his doctor, ran away from home, and was finally placed in a reform school. Later he was said to have joined a circus, in the work of which he did things that showed him devoid of fear. It was said, for instance, he would let riders rope him from horses and drag him through the arena. "He began a wandering existence. The (See PSYCHIATRIST page 8)

A "SCIENTIFIC" RELIGION

For Dr. Charles Francis Potter, the prominent New York "humanist" minister, one is bound to feel a good deal of respect; but when he says—as he did, recently—that religion cannot really develop until it becomes scientific, one is entitled to wonder just what the gentleman thinks religion is.

The miracles of science draw our admiration, and by and large the earthly future of the race is pretty well dependent on the achievements of the scientists. Yet while our lives will more and more be conditioned by science as the years go by, religion remains in a field apart, and it always will. To speak of a "scientific religion" is to speak of something that is quite incomprehensible.

Science rests on proofs, experiments, painstaking winnowings of truth from the material gathered by innumerable researchers. Religion is different. It does not depend on proofs; it never can, in the very nature of things. It grows out of faith, which is often highly illogical and which can never be reduced to a simple equation.

The scientist believes what he believes because the facts have convinced his intellect; the man who nourishes a religious belief believes in it because he has to—because there is an imperative need within him that will not be satisfied with anything else.

What is religious faith, anyway? Is it not a compound of various things, born of a sense of loneliness and helplessness? It is what a mother believes when she looks down at a child that she has just tucked away in its bed. It is what makes some very old people serene and unafraid as they slowly go down the last hill and watch their shadows lengthen in front of them. It is what the music and the colored lights of a great cathedral can persuade one of, sometimes. It is the sudden, unreasonable belief in mankind's divinity that comes to a man, now and then, when he sees the beauty that his fellows can create, or marvels at the unselfishness and heroism of which they are capable.

Now all of that does not depend on science. It cannot. Study the sciences until you are gray-haired, and coordinate all that you have learned into a unified and comprehensive set of probabilities; you may create a very fine philosophy, but you will not create a religion.

A distinguished American writer recently defined the religious man as the man who feels constantly "the need of God, a longing for God, and the sense of another world than this." That sums it up very well. Can you improve such a faith by an injection of, say, the Einstein theory?

THE EXPENSE OF WAR

If the added drain on the federal treasury imposed by the pending soldiers' loan bill looks rather onerous—And if it makes you uneasy to reflect that another soldiers' compensation bill, extremely expensive, will probably be necessary in another decade or so—

You might console yourself by the reflection that all of this, after all, is just part of the price we pay for the privilege of going to war.

Whether the current bill is a raid on the treasury or a matter of simple justice, it is a war expenditure; the kind of expenditure that any war makes inevitable. That would be a good thing to keep in mind the next time this nation ponders the advisability of getting into an armed conflict with some other nation. It is a costly business.

A SOURCE OF CORRUPTION

The revelations currently made concerning corruption in New York's police vice squad carry a note of warning for the police of other cities.

In the main, the corruption disclosed in New York centers about abuse of the "stool pigeon," or paid informer. These gentry, originally pressed into service as unofficial assistants to the police, became the focal points of a network of graft and crookedness that is appalling to contemplate.

What makes this a useful object lesson for other cities is the fact that this development is inherent in the "stool pigeon" system. Every police department uses in-

SENATOR MORRISON OF NORTH CAROLINA LEADS FIGHT AGAINST PROPOSAL THAT DEMOCRATS BECOME WET PARTY IN 1932

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The dries picked up a valuable new champion when former Governor Cameron Morrison of North Carolina was appointed to the Senate to succeed the late Lee Overman.

Morrison is the only senator on the Democratic National Committee which meets here early in March, and he appears to have assumed leadership of the heretofore rather feeble opposition among politicians to the proposal that the Democrats become the wet party in 1932.

He is an able fighter, although explosive and impulsive. And he is very sincerely dry. He has been a teetotaler all his life and always an advocate of prohibition, state and national. He even contends that prohibition is reasonably well enforced all over the United States, except in some of the largest cities.

It takes no political courage to be dry in such a politically dry state as North Carolina, but the point is that Morrison is not merely one of those southern politicians who drink and who don't care a hoot about prohibition except as an issue on which votes may be gained or lost.

He's a Convincing Orator. While a half dozen other new senators—including such strong wets as Morrow of New Jersey and Bulkeley of Ohio—have remained silent, Morrison, who has been here more briefly than any of them, has been positively noisy in defying the wets to take over his party. Already he threatens to become one of the Senate's more interesting figures and is likely to become one of the most important in the southern Democratic group. He is a fiery, eloquent orator and knows how to convince "the people" that he really loves them.

Morrison is 61 years old now. He was born a poor country boy, the son of a Republican and studied law in an office at Greensboro.

He is a kind-hearted and charitable man, despite his impetuosity, and they say he would travel across North Carolina to help someone in distress. He is rather good-looking, gray-haired, of medium height and build and always wears a black English cutaway coat with a wing collar and black cravat. People call him "Cam."

Made Good His Pledges. Governor O. Max Gardner of North Carolina, who appointed Morrison to the Senate, was one of the men Morrison defeated when he himself was elected in 1925. Morrison had gone into Democratic politics and had finally become one of the chief cogs in the famous Simmons machine. He campaigned on a platform that called for good hard-surface roads and a large building program for state educational and charitable institutions.

After being nominated and elect-formers. Generally it works fairly well. But it is always open to abuses. It is always apt to develop corruption and extortion. The best police department is the one that uses the "stool pigeon" as little as possible.

THE LEAST THAT COULD BE DONE

It is hard to quarrel very much with the University of Michigan's decision to "padlock" temporarily at least, the five fraternity houses in which considerable quantities of liquor were seized by police in recent raids.

Students who go to colleges and universities are more or less entrusted by their parents to the care of the school authorities. It is up to these authorities to see to it that the young people are given wholesome surroundings and a proper environment during their leisure hours.

Parents could hardly be blamed for feeling that the authorities were falling down on their jobs if student fraternity houses were permitted to keep large stores of liquor on hand. We do not see how the University of Michigan officials could have done other than they did.

The Town Quack

Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.

Some zeb takes occasion to mail in the treatise on the cow which is printed at the end of this column. I assume no responsibility for the prices of meat which he has quoted. I have seen cows sell for as cheap as a cent and a quarter and as high as 11 or 12 cents. I don't know what the packer gets, but I have paid as low as 20 cents a pound and as high as 40 at the markets within the past few months. I have bought steaks in good restaurants for as little as 50 cents and as high as $2.

The person who mailed in this humorous essay on the cow does not claim to be the author. Wouldn't do him any good because all of us have read it any way. The only feature I disagree with is where he says a cow has an alto voice. I always thought a cow had a sotto voice.

Here's what he says about the cow: The cow is a female ANIMALAX Bovinus Cattleus quadruped with an alto voice and a simple minded innocent countenance. She is engaged—inconjunction with the pump and hydrant—in the occupation of producing milk. She also provided one of the ingredients of hash, and in the end, is skinned by those she has benefitted and helped, just as ordinary mortals are.

The young cow is called a calf; however, if the calf's mother dies and its father leaves with another cow, it is called a doggy. Calf is used in the manufacture of chicken salad.

The cow's tail is mounted aft and has a universal joint. The cow's tail serves several purposes. It is used by the cow to disturb marauding flies—used by the owner of the cow to wrap around his neck in lifting up a sick or poor cow to her feet. This frequently produces a dark brown shade on the back of the man's neck for obvious reasons. The cow uses her tail also for wrapping around the neck of milkers. This process increases the vocabulary of the milker, providing words of peculiar and impressive meaning.

The cow has two stomachs. The one on the ground floor is used for a warehouse only. It has no other purpose. When this one is filled she retires to a secluded place where her ill manners will occasion no unfavorable comment and devotes herself to belching. The raw material thus conveyed the second time to the interior of her face is ground up and delivered to the auxiliary

Bishop Manning Has Been In Many Church Troubles

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Writer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Bishop William Thomas Manning, of the New York Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, is on the verge of becoming embroiled in another controversy, and if the militant champion of orthodoxy fails to take up his ecclesiastical cudgel against the mild little minister who has dared to challenge him, his friends and enemies alike will be very much surprised.

For clashes with Low Churchmen and liberals have been in the regular order of things for Bishop Manning ever since his consecration here in 1921. In matters of theology, social problems, politics and morals he has drawn the mixed praise and denunciation of other denominations. As a defender of the faith and extirpator of heresy, he has become to many the "First Churchman of America."

But while some leaders of his faith have mentioned him as the man who would become the first "Archbishop of the American Episcopal Church" if that office were to be created within his life-time, others, comprising a group of liberals, who met in Philadelphia the other day, planned to demand the right of electoral recall of bishops by the same priests and laymen who chose them.

Minister Demands Trial

Bishop Manning's immediate problem, however, is what to do about the defiance of the Rev. Elliot White who, by reason of a sermon of the Bishop's, declares he now stands charged with advocating "free love," of considering the Seventh Commandment debatable, and of furthering "crass immorality." Under these charges, Dr. White demands an ecclesiastical trial, since the latter has been outlying of a number of subjects which are abhorrent to the Bishop.

It all started last December, when Dr. White, chairman of a speaker's committee, defied the flat orders of Bishop Manning and invited Judge Ben B. Lindsey to address the New York Churchman's Association. It reached a climax when Judge Lindsey was thrown out of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine during a Sunday service. And White added fuel to the flames when he announced that he approved the "companionate marriage" of his own daughter.

Statements contained in Bishop Manning's sermon regarding companionate marriage are responsible for Dr. White's demand for a church trial, since the latter has been ousted from his post at Grace church trial. But the fighting Bishop seems undisturbed. He has met such situations before.

Demonstrated Statesmanship

Dr. Manning began his stormy career when, after five years as a vicar of Trinity Parish, he became its rector in 1908 and found himself facing public scandal. Trinity, one of the wealthiest of all parishes, owned considerable property in New York, and on some of it were tenements which newspapers and welfare agencies declared were not fit for habitation. Manning showed his first flare for church statesmanship when he brought the problem into the open and cleaned it up to everybody's satisfaction.

He became the leader of the Anglo-Catholic party which wanted to change the Protestant Episcopal Church, but thus made so many enemies that in 1919, following the death of Bishop Greer, he was defeated for the prominent post. In less than two years, however, his successful opponent died and Manning was elected.

Born in England, and pro-British and pro-Ally from the beginning of the war, Bishop Manning served in this country as a volunteer chaplain.

Supported Prohibition

On prohibition he has been the despair of wets and dries alike, contending that moderate drinking is not a sin, but that the law should be obeyed as long as it remained a law. Yet in 1916, at a temperance convention, he had forced through a pledge of total abstinence for the clergy.

Divorce he detests. In fact he holds with the Catholic idea that there is no such thing, and has urged all churches to unite in opposing it. In 1920 he engaged in a controversy which held the attention of the nation after the late Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, pacifist, stomach and converted into cow, buttons, combs, fiddle bows, glue, knife handles, etc.

The cow has no upper plate. All of her teeth are parked in the lower part of her face. This arrangement is perfected by an efficiency expert to prevent her gumming things up. For this very reason she is compelled to bite UP and gum DOWN.

The male cow is called BULL and is lassoed along the Colorado, fought South of the Rio Grande and shot by Mayors and Newspaper men. Clergymen are frequently fond of this sport.

A slice of cow is worth 8c in the cow, 18c in the hands of the packer, 28c at any local market and the local cafes that specialize in warm atmosphere charge you about $1.80 per pound with fixings extra.

radical, Low Churchman—everything that Manning opposed—preached a sermon on divorce. Manning replied, calling Dr. Grant's approval of divorce not better than the advocating of free love.

A year later, when Dr. Grant's engagement was announced to a woman who had two ex-husbands living, Bishop Manning was able to forbid the clergy to perform the ceremony. After years of waiting, during which the Bishop was unrelenting, the engagement was broken.

Meanwhile, however, Grant in a sermon seemed to cast doubt on the divinity of Christ. While liberals rallied around him to oppose Bishop Manning's "dogmatic intolerance" the Bishop himself ordered him to recant, design or be tried for heresy. Dr. Grant submitted an obscurely phrased letter, and subsequently resigned on a plea of ill health.

Then came the widely publicized encounter with Dr. William Norman Guthrie, rector of St. Mark's-in-the-Bowery. A radical and a showman, who was determined to build up his meager congregation, Dr. Guthrie invited preachers of other sects, even Hindus, Chinese, and Persians, to perform their rituals in his church. But when he instituted ritual dances and allowed six amply clad young women to dance there barefooted, Bishop Manning called the exercises "pagan" and cut off St. Mark's from episcopal visitation. The feud has never ended.

The first completely successful challenge to Bishop Manning's rule came when Dr. Leighton Parks, another of his traditional enemies, declared from his pulpit that bishops could not arbitrarily fix fundamentalist dogmas—and that there was some Scriptural justification for denial of the Virgin Birth. Dr. Parks, whose parish was a large and wealthy one, never was tried for heresy. Bishop Manning was busy himself with plans for the building of his great Cathedral of St. John the Divine, which by now has risen into the skies of Morningside Heights.

There again the fighting Bishop encountered criticism. He spoke at mass meetings of "a house of prayer for all people," solicited, and received, contributions from every sect. Elihu Root, a Presbyterian, headed the general committee. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a Baptist, gave $500,000. But when a new board of trustees was elected, all its members were Episcopalians.

Politics has engaged his attention more than once. In 1926 he came to grips with Senator Borah by denouncing the Lausanne treaty as a "base surrender of American honor and American rights." As a guardian of the public morals he has striven for the suppression of certain literature, announced himself in favor of censorship of the stage.

Bishop Manning has declared a one-man war against the "blasphemous and wicked deeds of the Soviets," thus inviting the derision of liberals who want to know when he became a champion of tolerance or a lover of liberty.

Lately, along with his disputes arising from the Judge Lindsey incidents, the Bishop has stirred a nation-wide storm of protest among Episcopal laymen and pastors with the statement that "the faith and orders of the Episcopal Church as judged by the standards" of the early, undivided church are fundamentally and definitely Catholic. Thirteen prominent clergymen, some of whom had resigned after disputes with Bishop Manning, circulated a printed protest and denial.

Daily Health Talk

By DR. MORRIS FISHBIEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

PROMPT TREATMENT IS VITAL IN CONTROL OF EAR INFECTION

The current epidemic of influenza has carried with it a vast amount of secondary infection of the ear, a condition which is invariably frequent when there are epidemics of colds, sore throat, and of acute infectious diseases.

In the vast majority of cases when cultures are made of the infectious matter taken from such ears, a germ of the streptococcus group is found. The amount of infection in the ear varies greatly in individual cases.

Thus, the infection may be limited entirely to the ear and after the rupture of the ear drum spontaneously or through opening by a physician, the infectious material will discharge, the temperature drop and the patient recover. In other cases, the infection may spread into the bony cells adjacent to the ear so that the patient develops a secondary infection of the mastoid. In such cases it may be necessary to chisel into the mastoid region so as to release the infection there active.

Sometimes the infection attacks the blood vessels and is spread from the ear throughout the body. In these cases the germs may be found in the urine, there may be secondary meningitis, there may be inflammation of the appendix or of the intestinal tract.

Dr. I. Friesner points out that these infections occur more frequently in children than they do in adults, and that when the joints are concerned as secondary manifestations due to infection in the ear, the hip joint is the one usually involved.

Obviously the important step in the treatment of any of these conditions is the release of the infection so that it will not burrow away from the ear into the adjacent tissues or so that it will not gain entrance into the blood stream and thus be spread throughout the body.

Here is particularly one of the medical conditions in which early attention and careful watching throughout the entire progress of the situation is perhaps the most important step in control of the dangerous aspects of the condition.

Pretty Colonial Affair Is for Edelweiss Club

Attractive in the colorful colonial appointments was the afternoon party given by Mrs. Roy Parks for members of the Edelweiss club and several guests at her home Tuesday.

Colonial prints predominated in the party arrangements, including table covers which were apple green with tiny prints painted in each corner, and the prizes. Pencils at the tables were fashioned in pretty colonial puffs at the tops and cards, tallies and score books harmonized.

Mrs. Hayden Miles, winning high member score, was presented with a steel etching; Mrs. O. B. Holt Jr., high guest, received an Italian pottery urn; Mrs. E. H. Ellison, high cut, was given a black Venetian vase and Miss Leona McCormick, low cut, received harmonizing cards.

The cuisine favored the national colors and colonial motif.

Guests calling for bridge were Meses. Clarence Scharbauer, Ellis Cowden, Elliott Cowden, O. B. Holt Jr., Edd Cowden, Hayden Miles, A. S. Legg, Fay Proctor, J. M. Speed, Tom Nance, John Dublin, Harvey Sloan, A. B. Cooksey, W. O. Pelphrey, E. H. Ellison, J. M. Shipley, Homer Rowe, Misses Lois Patterson, Leona McCormick, and Thelma White.

Plate favors were a small red hatchet and a national flag. The birthday cake was attractively decorated in the national colors with the name "Jane" written in blue on the top and adorned with red candles. Tiny flags and red paper were fashioned about the cake and formed the center of the table.

Homes Without Kitchens

In this day of modern kitchens, when architects are giving as much thought to the kitchen as any other part of the house, comes the home without a kitchen. The tower apartments in the new $40,000,000 Waldorf-Astoria, New York City, citadel of the gracious art of modern living, are without kitchens.

Every conceivable convenience for human comfort and enjoyment are incorporated into these magnificent suites for discriminating families who prefer the pleasures of a private home without its disadvantages. All meals will be served from the many kitchens in the hotel below, where they will be prepared under direction of Oscar Tschirky—"Oscar of the Waldorf". One piece of kitchen equipment—a gleaming white porcelain-on-steel Frigidaire—will be on duty in each apartment to keep sandwiches, drinks, desserts and salads and to freeze ice cubes.

These most luxurious of American apartments occupy two lofty towers in this 47 story hotel. High above the roar of the city, they offer the quiet seclusion of a country home.

The hotel below has accommodations for 3000 guests, facilities for parties of 20 or 4000 persons, 8610 diners, or 11630 dancers.

Choice Cooks' Corner

"No homemaker need apologize at any time or to anybody for a well-made stew," says Inez S. Willson, home economist. Lamb is especially good in stew as a trial of the recipes given below will prove.

Irish Stew
3 pounds lamb, forequarter
1 cup carrots, cut in cubes
1 cup turnips, cut in cubes
3 cups potatoes, cut in cubes
1 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
1 onion, sliced

Wipe meat with a clean, damp cloth, and cut in 2-inch square pieces. Put in a kettle, cover with boiling water and cook slowly for one and one-half hours or until tender. Add carrots, turnips, onion, salt, pepper and cook for thirty minutes. Add potatoes and cook fifteen minutes longer. Thicken with a little flour mixed to a paste with cold water.

Lamb Stew With Sour Cream
3 pounds shoulder of lamb
2 small onions
2 cups tomato pulp
2 tablespoons fat
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 cup thick sour cream
Salt
Paprika

Heat the fat, add the onions, cut fine, and the meat rubbed with salt and paprika. Brown the meat and the onions, then add the tomato pulp and parsley. Cook the meat slowly for two hours, adding water only if necessary. Just before serving, add the sour cream and blend it well with the sauce.

NOW THE GOLF WIDOWER MAKES FILM DEBUT

Practically everyone is familiar with the golf widower, that sadly neglected victim of the man whose days are spent on the links and his nights in endless recountings of the birdies, eagles, and holes-in-one he almost made.

But golf widows were sadly neglected until Fox Movietone produced "Part Time Wife," which exposes the ills of a wife trying to manage the marital bark and at the same time compete in amateur golf tournaments.

Edmund Lowe is the golf widower in this attraction now at the Ritz theatre. Business worries just about drive him frantic, and he forgets to observe their wedding anniversary. They quarrel, with golf the main cause.

Her pride stung to the quick, Lella Hyams, threatens to leave. In his foolish anger, Lowe makes no attempt to stop her, so there begins one of those useless separations seen every day in real life.

How Lowe's business worries increase and his health grows worse until he is ordered to take up the mated game of golf, and how a lovable Irish caddy and his mutt dog effect a reconciliation between the lovers makes up the rest of this hilarious film.

Evening Party Is Pretty Affair For Club

Red Japanese quince lent a pretty touch of spring to the bridge party given by Mrs. Alredge Estes for the Entre Nous club at her home Tuesday evening.

At tea time salads were served to Mrs. W. C. Tatum, Mrs. Bud Estes, Mrs. Ethel Hancock, Misses Cordelia Taylor, Lotta Williams, Thelma White and Fannie Bess Taylor.

Cottons and Linens Are Among Those Present at Smart Weddings

By JOAN SAVOY
NEA Service Writer

If you are debating just what type of bridesmaids' frocks to have for an Easter wedding, or just what to wear to a smart wedding reception, or some kind of romantic party in the net-too-distant future, the de luxe cotton and linen party frocks are probably the answer to the question.

Cottons and linens, incidentally, have scaled the heights of fashion and are right in the social register, so to speak. You will make no mistake about casting your eye on them.

Nothing on earth could be daintier, prettier or more quaintly modern and utterly beguiling than some of these new creations. They have a romantic quality all their own, usually touched with color against white, in the form of flowers, or embroidery or sashes—than which nothing on earth ever was more romantic!

There are two types of costumes that would more than fill the bill at the fussiest function your spring social calendar holds. One is the new organdie frock. The other is the eyelet linen.

If it is a spectator wedding gown you are looking for, for what promises to be a beautiful spring wedding, there is a white organdie frock, with ravishing embroidery in red and a red velvet sash. This has a fitted waist and skirt yoke and a circular skirt below it that sweeps the floor. There are tight sleeves to the elbow with flaring circular flounces below. Just enough color to be spring-like. And white, which is the most bewitching color any woman can wear.

A type of gown perfect for the bridesmaid is an eyelet embroidered linen frock with quaint tight bodice, puff short sleeves, a full long skirt and a lace velvet sash with a cute little nosegay at the waistline. A hat matches, with flared back front brim and long, trailing back brim. The square neckline is just the perfect touch. In white this is adorable. In pastel colors, delectable.

Mrs. Glenn Allen of Odessa was a shopper in Midland yesterday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Fisher and Mrs. Waldon of Andrews were business visitors here the first of the week.

O. P. Jones of Amarillo is in Midland this week looking over his cattle interests.

FIRST METHODISTS DOWN FIRST CHRISTIANS FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Rogers Hornsby Says New Pitching Power Will Take Cubs to Pinnacle

PIERCE KEEPS CHRISTIAN BOYS ON EVEN FOOTING DURING FIRST HALF BUT CALHOUN BOYS GET A MARGIN

A game that was dispirited in spots gave the First Methodist church the Inter-Church league championship last night in the Scharbauer gym—and ended organized basketball in Midland for this season.

The big maroon and white club was playing for the ascendancy of the second half and, in winning it, automatically took the season, as it had formerly won the first half of the split season with sacrificing a game.

The first half was played with a laxity that attested both to the slow checking of the M's and the canny goal shooting of Pierce, who kept the Christians up without undue effort.

At the half the M's led by only one point and had memories of having seen the score board chalked up with Christian leads several times. The game resolved itself into a spirited scoring duel for several minutes thereafter, however, and ended five points to the good for the maroon and white.

Pierce for the Christians was hot all night, leading the individual scorers of both clubs with 16 points. Lane Whitmire, A. Pope and Lonzo Mills played good games for the Methodists. Whitmire scoring 13 points at the basket.

The win gives the Methodists the championship of the first church loop ever organized in Midland, a loop that was put over as a result of the organization work of the Rev. Edwin C. Calhoun, pastor of the church. The minister has sponsored church teams each year since leaving the university and has put winning clubs into the field on each occasion.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS

BASEBALL'S BIGGEST BONERS

NOBODY ever played baseball harder than Charley Schmidt, old-time Detroit catcher. But his very intensity once caused him to pull a boner that cost a ball game. Detroit was leading St. Louis 2 to 1, when in an attempt to prevent a theft of home, Schmidt pushed the batter out of his way, caught the ball and apparently kept the tying run from scoring. Under the rules, Schmidt's act created an interference, also a balk on the pitcher. The runner who seemed out was allowed to score on the balk, and the batter was sent to first base on account of the interference. An error and a base hit scored another run and won the game for St. Louis.

1930 FAULTS ARE REMEDIED HE GIVES OUT

By ROGERS HORNBY, Manager Chicago Cubs (Copyright, 1931, NEA Service, Inc.)

Success for the Cubs in 1931 depends almost entirely upon the pitching. That is the way things look to me now.

The Cubs last year was a strong slugging outfit and I feel that the offensive strength will be there again this year. We didn't win the pennant in 1930 because our pitching staff wasn't strong enough to carry on for the entire season. Since the close of last year we have added pitching strength to the team and that additional defensive power, I figure, will put us in the pennant race in 1931.

I was glad to get Bob Smith from the Boston club to join our pitching staff. Bob is a veteran and a great ball player along with being a great pitcher. There were many times a year ago when he could have stepped in and saved a game for us besides taking a turn on the rubber.

Besides Smith, we have added Jake May, veteran left-hander of the Reds, and Sweetland, young southpaw of the Phillies, to the Cubs' staff. Last year we needed more left-handed pitching. We developed a most promising youngster in Teachout and I am looking forward to great things from him this year. We got some help from the veteran Jess Petty whom we got late in the season, but most of the time we suffered because of the lack of southpaws.

With pitchers who are established like Root, Malone, Bush and Blake and with the help of Bob Smith, Young Teachout, Jake May and Sweetland, I think we will have just about the best staff in the league, and with a great pitching staff I don't see how the Cubs can be a failure with hitters on the club like Hack Wilson, Kiki Cuyler, Gabby Hartnett and Riggs Stephenson. And these fellows will hit any kind of a ball, lively or dead.

I am hoping to be able to get in there at second base myself and full-right expect to do so, but I will say right now that if I don't think I can do as well as "Foots" Blair, he'll be at second base instead of Hornsby.

It was with the idea of getting into condition as soon as possible that I started early for the training camp to work out.

Just one thing more—we have a young outfielder in Johnny Moore who is sure to be a live one. He was with Los Angeles last year and was hitting over .350 when he injured his hand late in the season. He's O. K. now and we are sure to be using him a lot. Danny Taylor, who was with the club last year, is another outfielder with speed and punch.

Some people think we will be weak at third base, but I don't. Right now I am banking on Lester Bell. He was great in the closing weeks of last season. In Woody English we have the greatest young infielder in the league and he can play either third or short better than anybody in the league and along with it has developed into one of the great hitters.

I know it's going to be another tough pennant race because we are sure to have five strong clubs in the fight in St. Louis, New York, Brooklyn, Pittsburgh and Chicago, but I feel that in the end the Cubs will be on top.

Camel Cigarettes Offer New Contest

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Feb. 25.

During the next eight days the country will forget its cross word puzzles, back-gammon and bridge and turn its attention to the more interesting and lucrative pastime of finding the best answers to the question: "What significant change has recently been made in the wrapping of the Camel cigarette containing twenty cigarettes and what are its advantages to the smoker?"

For the best answer to the foregoing question, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company will distribute fifty thousand dollars in cash. The first prize will be twenty five thousand dollars in cash. The second, ten thousand, third, five thousand dollars, and numerous other cash awards from one to five hundred dollars each.

The prize contest marks the beginning of an intensive nation-wide advertising campaign to acquaint the public with the advantages of the new tight-sealed moist-proof cellophane wrapper in which the Camel package is now enclosed. While the new method of wrapping adds considerably to the cost of the manufacture, the consumer will not be required to pay more than the usual price for his Camels.

According to the announcement of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, practically every daily, county seat weekly, financial and college newspaper in the country will be included in its new advertising campaign, as well as a coast to coast hook-up and other forms of advertising media.

The first announcement of the $50,000.00 prize contest appears in full page advertisements in today's newspapers in which full details of the contest are given.

The contest will close at midnight, Wednesday March fourth. The judges selected to pick the winning answers are Charles Dana Gibson, international famous artist and publisher of Life magazine, Roy Howard, Chairman of the Board of the Scripps-Howard newspapers and Ray Long, President of International Magazine Company and Editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine. Winners will be announced as soon after the closing of the contest as practical.

According to the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratories, in cigarettes wrapped in moisture-proof cellophane and sealed under the Reynolds new tight-sealed method, the moisture loss is only a fraction of that of cigarettes wrapped with ordinary cellophane or the glassine paper now in general use. The new Humidor Camel package, it is claimed, preserves the freshness and flavor of the tobacco for a long period of time and delivers the cigarette to the smoker in prime condition.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL HONORS TO BE DECIDED MARCH 12-14 IN MEET TO BE HELD IN PLAINVIEW; MANY GO

PLAINVIEW, Tex., Feb. 25. (AP)—

The champion girls' basketball team among high schools of the state will be determined in the Texas Amateur Athletic Union Girls' Basketball tournament at Plainview March 12, 13 and 14.

Invitations have been sent out to 298 high schools to send a competing team to the tournament. Early entrants total more than three dozen teams, and include the Athens sextet that won the state championship last year.

Dimmitt, Castro county, will be joint-host to the tournament, having been runners-up in the 1930 meet. Since Dimmitt was too small to accommodate the hundreds who will attend, Dimmitt citizens invited the annual tournament to Plainview.

The tournament will be open to all registered high school teams in the state. Interscholastic League and A.A.U. rules will govern play.

As awards to the winners, the Plainview chamber of commerce is offering six loving cups, four of them going for first, second, third and fourth places in the championship class, and the others for first and second places in the consolation, runners-up, and 15 to the second-all-state team.

Two gold basketballs will be awarded the most valuable players, one the prettiest blonde, and one the prettiest brunette.

The Panhandle-Plains region will have the best representation ever sent to a state tournament. Dallas,

FORD COMFORT

Every new Ford is equipped with four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers

ONE of the fine things about driving the new Ford is the way it takes you over the miles without strain or fatigue. No matter how long the trip, you know it will bring you safely, quickly, comfortably to the journey's end.

The seats are generously wide, deeply cushioned and carefully designed to conform to the curves of the body. Every new Ford has specially designed springs and four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers. These work both ways — up and down. They absorb the force of road shocks and also provide a cushion against the rebound of the springs.

Other features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, extensive use of fine steel forgings, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, Rustless Steel and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

In addition, you save many dollars because of the low first cost of the new Ford, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

Jones Trial--

District Attorney W. R. Smith, in his cross examination, drew from the witness a statement that he had never seen the relatives or physician from whose depositions the family history of Jones had been secured, and that he merely assumed them to be true; that the facts were based on hearsay, in so far as Dr. Whitehouse was concerned; that he had taken the Wasserman test and the spinal fluid test of Jones to ascertain whether or not he had syphilis, that these tests were generally regarded as the most accurate, and that both tests were negative in their results; and that his conclusions that Jones had syphilis were based on tests other than the two regarded as most accurate, and finally that he "could be in doubt" as to the diagnosis.

Smith asked Whitehouse if his conclusions were not based on "hearsay, coupled with secondary observations," to which Whitehouse did not reply directly but made some statement of a 30 minute examination of the defendant, "going over his reflexes," which didn't show his condition, and "talking with him."

Trouble "General Paresis"

Whitehouse testified that Jones talked of big money propositions, such as the Jack Hoxie stock deal, and admitted that he did not know these deals to be untrue. He admitted that a sane man might get rid of his pistol after a killing and throw away his cartridges, and that it was "hard to determine how a crazy man's mind will work."

He finally gave his classification of Jones' insanity as general paresis in its beginning stages, and that it was hard to "draw the line" as to where it would affect one's knowledge of right and wrong. Dr. Whitehouse said he did not know of his own knowledge that Jones had "delusional trend" and "hallucinatory ideas" from thirty minutes talk with the defendant.

"He impressed me as a man walking on air," Whitehouse said in saying he believed the defendant to have general euphoria, or a sense of well being. The witness said he found no definite knowledge of exuberant fantasies, and finally admitted that Jones "could have been rational when he shot Russell," although he "would believe he had insanity from the blow on his head."

Fast Cross Fire

He said it would be "hard to say" from his own knowledge that Jones "was insane at the time of the crime," making some explanation which was interrupted when Judge Charles L. Klapproth called a five minute recess. Just prior to this, Whitehouse had testified, in answer to Smith's direct and pressing questioning, that it usually took 10 years or more for syphilis to result in general paresis, although he believed that this was one of the exceptions. Smith added, "from your thirty minute observation?"

To Wasaff's question of whether Jones was sane or insane at the time of the killing, Whitehouse answered, "I believe the man was insane."

The state next called Dr. J. K. Woods, Odessa physician.

Jones Sane—Dr. Woods

Dr. Woods testified that on February 20 he thoroughly examined the defendant physically and mentally. This examination lasted for an hour and 15 minutes and was conducted by himself.

Questions that required judgment were propounded by Woods and the doctor testified that the defendant displayed excellent judgment in his answers. The defendant's reflexes were examined at the time and were adjudged to be normal.

The state's witness testified that

RABBI NAMES FIVE GREATEST IN CHRISTIANITY

CHICAGO, Feb. 24 (UP).—The five greatest Christians in history were Paul of Tarsus, Augustine of Hippo, Francis of Assisi, Pope Gregory VII and Martin Luther, according to Rabbi Solomon Freehof, leader of K.A.M. Temple, Chicago.

Rabbi Freehof does not include Jesus of Nazareth in his list of great Christians because, he says, "he was more than a man and is not to be classified among men, however great they may be. From the Jewish point of view, Jesus was not a Christian. He was born a Jew, trained a Jew."

Paul of Tarsus was the greatest of all Christians, Rabbi Freehof said, because he found the religion a small Judean sect, gave it a world wide scope and left it a universal faith.

But while Paul gave Christianity a world sweep, Dr. Freehof believes it was Augustine who gave intellectual depth to the religion.

Pope Gregory VII

Under the leadership of Pope Gregory VII, Dr. Freehof said, "Christianity grew into a government. It dominated states and asserted that the church, instituted by God, is higher than governments created by men. Gregory gave the church its medieval superdominant power. He fought with kings and humbled emperors. He rescued bishops from the evils of the feudal system and cleansed Christendom."

Francis of Assisi was listed for his intense devotion and self-sacrifice.

It remained for Martin Luther, the rabbi believes, to demonstrate that the church had the power of adjusting itself to the changing conditions of human history. This he did by his reform of the church in Germany and northern Europe.

Religious Geniuses

Rabbi Freehof's list of five greatest religious geniuses all came from the orient. They were two Jews, an Arab and two Aryans. He listed them as follows: "Moses, who made religion ethical; Jesus, who made ethics beautiful; Zoroaster, who made social progress religious; Buddha, who made pessimism altruistic; Mohammed, who made religion democratic."

The five greatest Jews of all time, Rabbi Freehof listed as, Moses, Isaiah, Hillel, Maimonides and Mendelssohn.

Psychiatrist--

only time his family heard from him was when he wired for money, one deposition said.

Dr. George H. Snyder of Columbus, Ohio, said by deposition he treated the defendant for five years, for convulsions, and found him violent and unconscious, and that he regarded the defendant at that time dangerous. The defendant was boastful and irrational, suffering from "delusional trend, hallucinatory ideas, general neuropathy, exuberant fantasy, ideas of grandeur, hypochondriacal delusions" and other symptoms that he felt certain resulted from a compound fracture of the skull.

He said he had operated upon the boy, removing a piece of the skull that pressed on the brain, and said the brain now is depressed and in an elliptical shape. The doctor said, furthermore, that the patient was likely insane on the night of the Russell shooting, suffering that form of insanity known as paresis. He said such a condition of insanity would not necessarily be noticed externally.

The doctor's deposition, summed up, contributed four points to the insanity predicament: (a) he said Jones was insane when treated by him; (b) Jones must have been insane on the night of the Russell shooting; (c) Jones would not have been able to discern right from wrong; (d) Jones was in that mental condition which might have interpreted itself in a killing at any time without just cause or provocation.

On the cross interrogatory by Dr. Smith asked how long it had been since the doctor had examined the defendant, and the answer was 15 years. He also elicited the answer that the physician is not a specialist of the human brain.

Jones' brother took the stand for the defense. He said his brother, the defendant, was not treated for his injuries by a brother who is a physician because the "two didn't get along well." And, he said, the defendant was seldom in a place long enough for his family to know where he was.

Dr. Grady Shytle of Abilene, psychiatrist with the state epileptic hospital there, and who was to have been used by the state as a rebuttal witness following the placing of Dr. A. M. Gantt and Dr. W. G. Whitehouse on the stand, was introduced to the stand by the state when the defense allowed it as a courtesy, since the Abilene physician had to return to his hospital as soon as possible. He said he is a surgeon and diagnostician and is classified as an alienist. When questioned closely by the state, he said general paresis symptoms seldom are noticeable for two or three years, generally it takes 10 to 15 years. Sometimes the patient knows right from wrong at the very peak of the disease.

MEMBERS OF "STINGY BLOCK" WOULD STOP STATE SCHOOLS IN THE WARM SUMMERTIME; SPIRITED HOWL HEARD

AUSTIN, Tex., Feb. 24 (AP)—The "economy block" is more than a mere name in the Texas legislature this session and the block has sent out to become the legislative watchdog of the Texas treasury. When the economy block says "economy" that is just what is meant.

Representative Abriton of Yorktown is chairman of the economy group, which has pledged itself to the jealous spending of the people's money.

Whenever a measure is up before the house, usually Abriton or some other member of the economy committee will demand the particulars of its cost to the state and how much money the state will be required to spend. And they not only want to know how much is going to be spent, but where the money is coming from and how it is going to be raised.

Abriton recently took the floor of the house on personal privilege to take exception to some statements about the economy block. It had been referred to as the "stingy block of the house."

In no uncertain language the veteran Yorktown member told the house it was not the stingy block but a group which had dedicated itself to trying to keep appropriations and expenditures within the revenue of the state, and, if possible, relieve the over-burdened taxpayers.

Appropriations of all kinds and for all purposes are in for a tough time this session if incidents during the first few weeks can be taken as an indication. The first major economy move came when Representative Gilbert of Cisco offered a resolution to suspend operation of the 1931 summer schools of the state university and state teachers' colleges. Although it met with considerable support, action on it was postponed until the legislature could ascertain how much money it would have to appropriate.

Opponents of the resolution argued it would prove a serious detriment to the state educational system to abandon the summer schools during 1931. They held to the contention that summer schools were the only way a majority of the teachers in the public schools could improve themselves and thus become better instructors.

Gilbert and the others pointed out that summer schools were used mostly by teachers who had already received a pretty fair education and contended the state should concentrate on seeing that education in the case, he said, and certainly knows the difference under ordinary stages of the malady.

Asked if the flight of Jones from Midland to Stanton following the Russell shooting indicated sanity or insanity, Dr. Shytle replied it showed fear, not insanity. The evidence would tend to point to his sanity, he said. He said he had given Jones a "superficial" examination Tuesday, but that he had made no observations necessary to answer more than hypothetical questions. He did say, however, the defendant showed no symptoms of insanity.

Asked about paranoia, Dr. Shytle said the disease "is the same as monomania," and that it runs through three stages if allowed to run its course. He was asked by the state if the disease would likely he has no understanding of the nature and quality of wrong, yet who feels prompted to take flight after commission of such crime. The alienist said this was not likely, that flight after an act of crime was not natural to a paranoiac. If he did not know right from wrong the man would probably stay at the place where the crime was committed, he said.

The psychiatrist said that such a blow as that received by the defendant would have reflected itself in traumatic insanity soon after the blow, in his opinion, had it ever occurred. He said he didn't believe the defendant was suffering traumatic insanity now.

A note of humor was injected into the cross-questioning when Defense Attorney Sam K. Wasaff asked how many years the witness had been making monkeys of attorneys in the courts. The witness explained he did not usually give his appearances on the witness stand that description.

"But you have learned to sidestep attorneys, haven't you?" Wasaff asked.

"I've learned how to protect myself," the alienist said.

When asked his opinion about being able to venture an opinion on the sanity of the defendant after only a "superficial" examination, an opinion that was counter to the findings of a physician who had treated the defendant for five years, he said he was better qualified to give such an opinion, since he had studied that problem as a specialist, than a general practitioner. He admitted he could answer questions only hypothetically, as observation of several months would be required to give definite answers.

On redirect examination of the state the alienist said the symptoms of the defendant when he had examined him did not appear to him those of insanity. He was allowed to leave the stand.

Dr. A. M. Gantt, witness for the defense, told of having met Jones at his own home, of "calling Jones' hand" when he said he was "Buck Jones, the motion picture actor." The doctor said he had seen many of Buck Jones' pictures and was reasonably certain the defendant was not that character. He said he talked with Jones for several hours on two evenings and one afternoon he was at the Gantt home, and that Jones told extraordinary tales that he, Gantt, knew were impossible. He said he told his daughters he believed the man was mentally erratic. He said, however, by way of explanation he had not assumed the man dangerous, even though he had seen the gun carried. He asked his daughters, he said, to break off with Jones as soon as could be done so conveniently. He said he had examined the scar on Jones' head and that he believed the place of sufficient depth to cause insanity through the skull impinging on the brain. When asked for another reason why he believed Jones insane, Dr. Gantt said the man in flight went only to Stanton. The natural thing would have been to go farther, if the defendant was actuated by fear, the doctor said.

On cross examination by the state, District Attorney Smith asked Dr. Gantt how he knew Jones believed his own stories. Was Jones' trouble delusions or "hot air"? The witness said he had no way of knowing whether Jones believed his own stories, but believed he did. The witness said he did not decide the man was dangerous until after the shooting.

"Did not the Stanton trip demonstrate sanity of the defendant, when he refused to stop at the request of Leonard Cox and see the sheriff on the way through town, when he unloaded his gun and tossed the shells away while en route to Stanton, and when he sent word he wanted his baggage brought to him at Stanton rather than stop at this hotel in Midland and get it?"

The witness said Jones might have done this in a sane moment.

"Don't you suppose, doctor," the state asked, "that he might have been sane at the moment he pulled the trigger of the gun that fatally wounded Weldon Russell?"

There was no direct answer to this question.

On re-cross-examination the jury was asked to retire when Wasaff objected to District Attorney Smith asking the witness if he, the witness, had not reproached W. L. Floyd for making a statement to the district attorney following the shooting. Dr. Gantt replied he had no memory of such a reproach. The jury filed back to its place and the objection was sustained.

Wasaff took the witness and asked him to read a memorandum on the symptoms of paranoia. The state objected to the reading of these. The defense contended the witness had the right to refresh his memory, but the state was adamant, saying the witness might read the memorandum only in case he could not give the symptoms without reference to the memorandum. The state's objection was sustained.

The witness gave the symptoms without the memorandum.

When the state took the witness the district attorney asked if the witness had not been reading a lot on insanity lately. The witness said he had been "brushing up" a bit. He was asked what he had been reading and replied "Bedside Diagnosis." He said the book had been issued by the publishers within the past two years and that it was an authoritative "as other medical volumes are." He did not remember the author. Dr. Gantt said he did not give a physical examination to the defendant.

age of house bill No. 306, providing for the establishment of a public utilities commission.

"This section of Texas has never been given proper consideration in legislation," President Goodman declared before the body. "To get this proper representation and consideration is a real job and this association will work to that end. The officers and executive committee must study the problems carefully because they represent a huge empire. As president of this body, you have but to call upon me and I'll go to Austin, to Washington or anywhere in an effort to forward the interests of West Texas."

Tuesday's session, the second one to be held in Lubbock, the first having been held on February 13 when a temporary organization was set up was opened with Mayor Clements in the chair. He, however, relinquished it upon election of Mayor Goodman as president. A brief address of welcome was made by A. B. Davis, manager of the Lubbock chamber of commerce, who, in short but cordial words, extended this city's welcome to all visiting officials. "We of Lubbock are glad to have you here," Davis stated. "The greatest asset of this large empire is cooperation, harmony and unity on the part of its citizenship. Working together we will accomplish the things which are needs for the section as a whole."

Paul T. Vickers, secretary of the Midland chamber of commerce, responded, declaring that "Lubbock has established a Texas-wide reputation for its hospitality. Some assemblies have even designated Lubbock as a permanent meeting place and, speaking for all visitors, we are glad indeed to avail ourselves of this splendid courtesy. The people of this great western empire will have a greater feeling of interest and sentiment will be solidified as this organization is perfected here today."

Preliminary matters were quickly relegated and those of more pertinent nature called for action.

Mayor Goodman, as chairman of a committee appointed at the first meeting to draw up a constitution and by-laws for the association, was the first to report. The recommendations, as prepared by his committee, were adopted without change.

Name of the organization was decided as the West Texas Municipal Association, predicated in the theory that no private interest shall come before or in conflict with the rights of the people.

Purpose of the organization, as outlined in Article 1, shall be to act as a unit in opposing unfair legislation, unfair utility rates and to seek needed legislation and other wise function to preserve, protect and forward the best, rightful interests in the citizens of the municipal members. It shall not be political, and shall have no paid officers.

Any mayor, city manager, city councilman or alderman may be a member of the association whose municipality is one of the cooperating group composing this organization. The unit of membership shall be the city, and each city shall have but one vote. In the event extra monies are required above the $25 initial fee, assessments are to be made on member towns, proportionate to population, on condition that such cities agree to such assessments, either through the medium of a general meeting or upon written statement.

Regular annual meetings shall be held the second Tuesday in May at a place set by the executive committee.

The executive committee of the association shall act in all minor matters, and all matters of mere detail when the calling of a general meeting, or mail balloting is unwarranted but in no case shall the executive committee have the power to act for the body in any matter which may entail additional taxation, or involve the association in any extraordinary expenditures. In any case where extraordinary expenditures are involved, or where legislation may be sought requiring additional taxes upon the people, either a general meeting or a mail ballot must be conducted to pledge to action or result in action by this association. A two-thirds majority of all cities voting shall be necessary to any action.

Other recommendations approved by the organization in addition to that pertaining to securing competition to the gas companies include the following:

"1. That all cities in this section require the gas company serving the pipe line company serving the cities in this district. These will probably have to be secured from the Railroad commission at Austin. It would be better if they could be secured from the office of the pipe line company. This information should be placed in the hands of the committee also.

"3. All cities should send copies of their franchises to the committee at the earliest possible date.

"4. It has been found that pipe line companies are paying an average of one to six cents per thousand cubic feet for gas at the wells and are receiving as high as forty cents at the city gate. Consequently it is suggested that negotiations be entered into through this organization with gas pipe line company officials, that a wholesale rate at the city gate be made not to exceed 20 cents per thousand cubic feet as the cost of transporting gas to the various cities in this area has been found should not exceed six cents to 15 cents.

"5. In view of the fact that the legislature is now in session and legislation is being considered as to the problems now being considered by this organization and since such legislation shall probably be disposed of within the next sixty days, it is suggested that no court action be taken by the cities until final disposition of such legislation.

"6. It is also suggested that this body support the bill amending corporation laws so that gas pipe line companies cannot own gas producing properties."
