Congress, White House abandon privileges

President is 'king of perks,' Foley says

By Vic Ostrowidzki
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, under attack by Republicans and even some Democrats for his handling of the House bank scandal, counterpunched Friday by calling President Bush the "king of perks," and Vice President Dan Quayle the "crown prince of perks."

Foley, who has been criticized by incumbents who fear the scandal over free overdraft protection for thousands of bad checks has harmed their re-election chances, said Bush ought to take a look at his own administration before finding fault with Congress.

"The last person who should raise the question of perks is the president, who is the king of perks, and the vice president, who is the crown prince of perks," Foley

WASHINGTON — With zeal worthy of an inquisition, Congress and the Bush administration tried Friday to outdo each other in abandoning the perquisites of power, burning up privileges enjoyed for decades by government officials.

The administration announced that Secretary of State James A. Baker III, shocked at the cost of his personal travel on military aircraft, would take commercial flights for private trips whenever possible.

The Milwaukee Journal reported this week that the cost to taxpayers for 11 such trips on military planes was more than $370,000.

The new policy went into effect immediately, as Baker and his entourage took a commercial flight for a long-scheduled private trip to San Antonio. It was not clear how much taxpayers' money was saved because the State Department said little about the flight, except to note that Baker seemed to enjoy the experience.

Air-crash trial reaches end of testimony

■ Jury to hear closing arguments Monday.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The pilot's failure to take necessary action and not the airplane's inability to fly safely in icy conditions caused the crash of a Mitsubishi MU-2 turboprop that killed all five passengers, according to defense witnesses on the last day of testimony Friday in a lawsuit against Mitsubishi.

Williams Aviation contends the Feb. 14, 1990, crash near Putnam was the result of an inadequate de-icer system and the airplane's inability to fly in known icy conditions.

A seven-member jury, one an alternate, listened to five days of testimony from expert witnesses supporting both theories.

On Monday, jurors in Judge Lucius Bunton's U.S. District Court will hear closing arguments before deciding whether the pilot or the manufacturer

Rains alleviate Airpark project dust problems

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

After recent rains and with some grass already growing, Midland Airpark officials are leaving the dust problem to Mother Nature.

Airpark was cited last month by the Texas Air Control Board for generating dust air pollution after a construction project. A March 18 inspection said Airpark's dust was a nuisance for downwind residents — a violation of the Texas Clean Air Act.

But by Friday, the situation seemed to be under control, a TACB official said.

"We looked at the facility and saw recent rains have been to their benefit," said Charley Sims, regional TACB director. He met Friday with Airports Direc-

'Blink of a speck' Wink is down, not out

By Christopher Evans
N.Y. Times News Service

As other West Texas towns fade into sandblasted retirement enclaves, Wink rides out the downturn.

WINK — The marquee is gone from the old Rig Theater, and what's left of the building is empty and exposed. But Curley Wilson's Grocery, which closed in the mid-'60s, looks like it might swing to life in a wildcatter's second.

It won't, even though Curly and his wife Frances still live in the back.

Across the street, a less than life-size cutout of home boy singer Roy Orbison leans against a wall outside a museum. The Orbison Museum, too, is closed this Monday. Next to a derelict Wacker's store, a window carries the message "Vote for Edith A. Jones, Mayor, Wink, Texas, I've been there, but I'll stay here."

On the surface, Wink — with one restaurant, a bank, a city hall, a post office, two convenience stores, a beer joint but nary a doctor or video store — seems little more than a has-been oil town.

A place that once supported six newspapers and had upwards of 20,000 people, today boasts no paper, no impending oil gushers and about 1,200 people.

But hang a left onto North Roy Orbison Drive and there's a sight for sore oilfield eyes — a pump jack at work right next to a satellite dish in the front yard of a mobile home.

Or head a few blocks north to the Wink schools, a blend of immaculately maintained old and new buildings that serve 400-odd schoolchildren from Wink and sparsely populated Loving County. The eye-catcher is the Frank Barton Recreation Center, a state-of-the-art pool,

Report: Charity's ex-chief, aides misspent huge sums

By Felecity Barringer
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The ousted president of the United Way of America and two close aides transferred more than a million dollars a year to other organizations they controlled and spent hundreds of thousands more on their travel, pensions and insurance plans, the new management of the charity said in a report released Friday.

In contrast to the charity's soothing assurances a month ago that any financial irregularities stemmed from "sloppy record-keeping" and "inattention to detail," the report revealed, in damning detail, a pattern of financial manipulation over a five-year period far more extensive than any the organization had previously disclosed.

This included the payment of hundreds of thousands of dollars in consulting fees to the two aides, Stephen J. Paulachak and Thomas J. Merlo.

It also included the spending of more than $100,000 of the charity's money by the former president, William Aramony, for limousines, flights on the supersonic Concorde and personal items like golf equip-

U.S. jobless rate sticks at 7.3, highest in 7 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate held at 7.3 percent in March, the worst in nearly seven years, the government said Friday, underscoring the halting pace of the economic recovery.

The number of unemployed people stood at 9.2 million, also unchanged from February. That's 2.5 million more than when the economic downturn began in July 1990.

The job market has failed to rebound so far despite signs of life elsewhere in the economy, including increases in retail sales, factory orders and housing construction.

"What we're seeing is a relatively flat economy. It's certainly not continuing to fall, but we're not seeing any substantial improvement either," said economist Robert LaLonde of the University of Chicago. "We're not like the Titanic going down in the storm. It's more like our engines have shut down and we're stranded on the ocean."

The new seasonally adjusted rate is the same as February's, the highest since July 1985 and 1.9 percentage points above

Jury renders guilty verdict in murder trial of Midland man

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Midland resident Willie Lane Jr. was convicted of murder Friday following 5½ hours of deliberation by a nine-woman, three-man jury.

142nd Court Judge Pat Baskin called a recess in the penalty phase of the trial following the testimony of two character witnesses.

Lane, 58, was charged with the April 1991 shooting death of Melvin Burton Jr., 61, of 1315 E. Chestnut St., who was gunned down at the New Dew #4 — a southeast Midland night spot

"I'm satisfied with the verdict of the jury, but since the punishment phase of the trial has yet to come, it would probably be inappropriate to comment any further," said Assistant District Attorney John Westbrook.

On Monday, the jury will hear other evidence from the state and the defense as to the character of the defendant in regards to the punishment.

Not surprisingly, Lane's attorney, H.W. "Woody" Leverett Jr. said he was less than pleased with the outcome.

"Well, of course we're very disappointed in the verdict. I can say I am very proud to represent Willie Lane ... I've never been more proud to represent anyone in my legal career."

On Monday, jury will hear other evidence from the state, defense

Leverett said he planned to pursue arguments Monday.

Earlier in the day, Westbrook continued to raise questions about Lane's self-defense argument, noting that witnesses repeatedly had testified that Burton never actually came around a pool table with a knife in his hand.

Lane had testified that he and Burton had an exchange of words and Burton had threatened to kill him. Minutes later, Lane left the club, went to his car, and retrieved a .38-caliber gun.

The defendant had claimed he had no intent of killing Burton, but when he returned to the club, Burton had stood up at a pool table and reached into his pocket for what Lane believed was a knife.

"He (Lane) walked in with the intent to kill" Burton, Westbrook told the jury.

Westbrook also questioned the testimony of a defense witness in the trial. He said the story of Carolyn Wilson, an acquaintance of Lane's, greatly differed from what others at the club saw and heard.

"Wilson was also the only one who never talked with the police," said Westbrook, who suggested to the jury that what took place was cold-blooded murder.

But Leverett disputed that, telling jurors the prosecution's so-called "assassination theory" was full of holes, adding that Burton was a master of his own fate, having pulled a knife on more than one occasion.

"I think this is just a case of a prosecutor who wants to win too bad ... you can color a story to fit your version."

Leverett said Ms. Wilson's testimony was a case where the district attorney's office didn't dig far enough down for the truth.

"He'd (Westbrook) have you believe that Willie Lane was a cold-blooded killer, but I submit, he (Lane) would have waited in the dark for him (Burton) or somewhere else where there were no witnesses," if that were the case.

Westbrook, however, said the killing was more over one man's pride being bruised.

Energy futures stage strong gain in trading

NEW YORK — Energy futures prices staged a strong advance in hectic trading Friday, spurred by word that OPEC trimmed its output in March. West Texas Intermediate for delivery in May, which slipped 4 cents on Thursday, jumped 49 cents to settle at $20.29 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Other contract months posted similar gains.

Posted prices paid by local crude purchasers were also sharply higher. Navajo Refining, Texaco Trading and Transportation, Marathon and Scurlock Permian Corp. each raised their posted price 50 cents to $19. Phillips raised its price to $19.55, an increase of 45 cents.

Among refined petroleum products, home heating oil for May delivery gained 1.40 cents to settle at 55.68 cents a gallon. The contract for unleaded regular gasoline for May delivery rose .93 cent to settle at 62.65 cents a gallon on the Merc. Both contracts posted minor losses in the previous session.

Analysts said the market was poised for a technical upswing when trading began, and the OPEC news intensified trading.

Market participants were pleased by a much-anticipated report that showed the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries reduced its crude oil output by about 900,000 barrels a day in March. That would put daily output at an average 23.5 million barrels.

Although the 13-nation cartel fell short of its production-cutting goal of 22.98 million barrels daily, the report, issued in Belgium by the International Energy Agency, was still favorably received by traders.

"Everybody knew output would be lower, but they didn't know how much lower," said James Steel, an analyst at Refco Inc. He noted that although much of the reduction was attributed to cuts by Saudi Arabia, the biggest producer, "the rest was fairly evenly distributed among the other nations, which means OPEC is serious about cutting back."

OPEC has been seeking lower output this spring to avoid a price collapse as worldwide demand for crude oil drops off for seasonal reasons.

Analysts said trading was very active. Contracts for refined products were lifted by the runup in crude prices, since there was no fresh fundamental news to influence trading in either home heating oil or gasoline.

Natural gas prices posted minor declines also. The May natural gas contract settled at $1.319 per 1,000 cubic feet compared to $1.352 on Thursday.

In London, North Sea Brent Blend crude oil for May delivery settled at $18.76 per barrel at the International Petroleum Exchange, up 43 cents from Thursday's settlement.

At the Merc, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in May gained 45 cents to settle at $17.70 a barrel.

Howard deputies charge suspect

BIG SPRING — With a suspect in custody, Howard County Sheriff's deputies are continuing their investigation of a Wednesday night murder.

Reports said Harold Edward Wilson, 36, was in custody Friday, charged with murder in the shooting death of another local man. John Bruce Armstrong, 22, age and address unavailable, was shot in the neck at a mobile home in the Shady Lane Trailer Park Wednesday shortly before midnight, deputies reported.

Armstrong was pronounced dead within minutes at the home; which lies just outside the city limits. Authorities then arrested Wilson, whose address was unavailable, at the scene.

gym and fitness complex. The Barton Center alone is ample evidence that this is one of the wealthiest school districts in Texas.

Or step inside Peggy Sue's Cafe, where the talk might range from who got christened at the Methodist Church to how the Wink Wildcats will fare in football next fall.

If you stick around long enough, you will learn that Wink, in its own way, is thriving.

You will also learn that in Wink, what seems to be quiet often isn't.

As other elfin West Texas towns fade away into sandblasted retirement enclaves, Wink — where the late Orbison grew up, where sportscaster Frank Gifford attended junior high, whose prep football teams of the '30s and '40s wrought fear and trembling, whose cast of characters included hookers and gamblers and a two-gun-toting gendarme, where the unpretentious millionaires even today are hard to tell from the commoners — is riding out the latest economic downturn like it has the others.

At worst, Wink is holding its own better than most places. At best, the once proclaimed "biggest city ever built in two years" is doing what locals say Wink has always done — strengthening a bond that people here have always had with each other.

Step back now to a time and a town that can never be the same again, to late 1925, when there was no inkling of a Wink, no Peggy Sue's restaurant, no "Our Boy Roy," no Rig Theater, no urban renewal, no beer joints, no football championships, no ladies of the night, no Wink Sink and no legend.

That there ever would be a Wink was a matter of considerable doubt, doubt that vanished in a cosmic instant in 1926 when a 2,525-foot hole on Thomas G. Hendrick's ranch filled with oil.

According to the 1984 book "A History of Winkler County: 1887-1984," when Hendrick No. 1 came in July 17, 1926, it opened a rich field 9 miles long and in time transformed the tiny county seat of Kermit, population 85, into a small city.

TO THE SOUTHWEST 8-odd miles, it created Wink, a blink of a speck in the desert that in the next 25 years would become famous for fisticuffs, football, gambling, prostitution and a collection of fiercely loyal people.

That Wink sprang to life with all the ragamuffin combustion that characterized other oil boom towns of the period cannot be denied. Named in an oddly abbreviated way for county namesake and Confederate Col. Clinton McKamy Winkler, Wink very well might have become a joke instead of a legend.

But according to "A History of Winkler County, 1887-1984," the pre-eminent county history book, Wink's glory days were so wild that it was no laughing matter.

By 1928, almost 15,000 people were here, causing civic titans to hail Wink as "the largest city ever built in two years" and historians to say that an ample percentage of the 15,000 were hookers, bootleggers, gamblers and other ragged oilfield flotsam.

"I didn't get here until 1936, but even then, it was all hell, all these thousands of people coming here, half-built houses by the hundreds and mule yards all around the town, men shooting each other, gamblin', whorin', the whole bit," recalls Lewis Gray, who owns Wink's only package store, New Deal Liquor, and leases the building that's Wink's lone tavern, The Blue Room, today.

"Wink," Gray said, "was twice as big as Kermit. I just got stuck here but I've made a quarter every day I've lived here, mainly foolin' with these ol' beer joints but before that working as a roughneck and on those pullin' units."

To be sure, some people associated with Wink today went elsewhere and got famous. Orbison became the most popular. Broadcaster and one-time football star Frank Gifford lived in a Line Oil Co. camp and played football at Wink Junior High. Former Texas Attorney General John L. Hill Jr. started school at Wink in 1929.

JUST AS FASCINATING, sometimes outside the social register of Winklore, are a whole cast's worth of odd, legendary or otherwise noteworthy characters.

There was one-man police force Ellis Summers, who, according to former Wink High football star Beekman "Beekie" Ezell, "wore two pistols and growled when he walked and really tamed that town down when he came there in about 1932."

Others remember Wink rounders such as C.L. "Heavy" Brackeen, Stickhorse Fielder, Corn Jones and J.A. "Marbie" Scogin, who mixed such activities as politics, drinking and gambling with free enterprise and football.

If Winkites have a tendency to stretch the truth, the local prep gridiron minions and the stories built around their '30s-through-'50s heyday probably are to blame.

Ezell, for instance, refused to wear a helmet while playing at Wink, a fact that is verifiable via a photograph of him in the 1939 Wink yearbook fleeing hatless toward pay dirt with a pigskin tucked 'neath his armpit.

However, stories that his twin brothers, Dee and Don, played shoeless at Wink are not true, although Beekie notes that during the same period Pecos High running back Joe Bob Kelton made headlines — and "Ripley's Believe It Or Not" — by playing barefooted.

The Wildcat football legend overall, however, needs no embellishment. And although Wink won only one state title (1952), many believe some of the 10 powerhouse regional championship teams of the '30s and '40s were easily the best in any class in Texas, even though there were no playoffs past regional.

OLD-TIME WINK residents refer to what in Wink in the early 1960s only wincingly was known as "that Urban Renewal deal."

Though outsiders later said it was a stretch to call Wink "urban," the city applied for and got about $1 million in Federal Urban Renewal Agency loan and grant funds to demolish, move or sell scores of structures, including many of the Sheetrock-on-frame hovels left from the boom.

What happened next turned the locals, who as a group detested entitlement and welfare moochers, into a defensive lot.

A big-city daily, then the wire services, reported on the dole to Wink as if the town were passing itself off as a real city — and somehow taking money it wasn't due.

SCARS FROM "that Urban Renewal deal," suffice to say, did not heal overnight.

When the wire service wags looked at Wink again in mid-summer 1980, the circumstances were less testy — but came with a bizarre twist.

What became known as the Wink Sink, then later the Kermit Crater after residents of the county seat claimed it as theirs, was a briefly unexplained but huge hole in the ground just north of Wink. It was discovered by a pipeline employee and just kept getting bigger.

After a few days the Wink Sink had grown to 400 feet across and begun filling with water.

Treated as a certified cataclysmic event by geologists, seismologists and the like, the huge crater — which later became known as the Guacamole Holey because it filled with scum-coated green water — finally was determined to have something to do with salt domes that collapsed due to the taking of oil.

The wire service reporters left town.

Lane Newbert, who arrived in Wink in 1928 to work as a roughneck, remembers vividly not only the bawdy houses and beer joints but also what seemed like miles and miles of horse and mule teaming camps that surrounded the town.

AND IF STORIES of gunfights and brawls paint early Wink as rough and tumble, Newbert, a former Winkler county commissioner, says it "was even more so" than the tales indicate.

"That was Prohibition and there were 15,000 or 20,000 people here, counting the families that lived in the camps," he says. "It was tough."

SCORES OF WINKITES have moved away only to return, a phenomenon that continues to this day — and largely because of a school district that remains one of the best-financed in the state.

If the world of rock 'n' roll mourned the 1988 loss of reluctant star Roy Orbison, the people of Wink still do. One glance at Orbison's photo in the Wink High yearbook is enough to put a lump in one's throat. The picture is displayed alongside the singer's ambition — "To lead a Western band/Is his after school wish/And of course to marry/A beautiful dish."

On the first Saturday of June, Orbison fans will flock to the Wink High Football Stadium for the fourth annual Roy Orbison Day and Pretty Woman Pageant.

Wink townfolk today are an easy blend of school and government employees, what has to be a high ratio of millionaires and the working stiffs who seem to make a living off what oil production is still here.

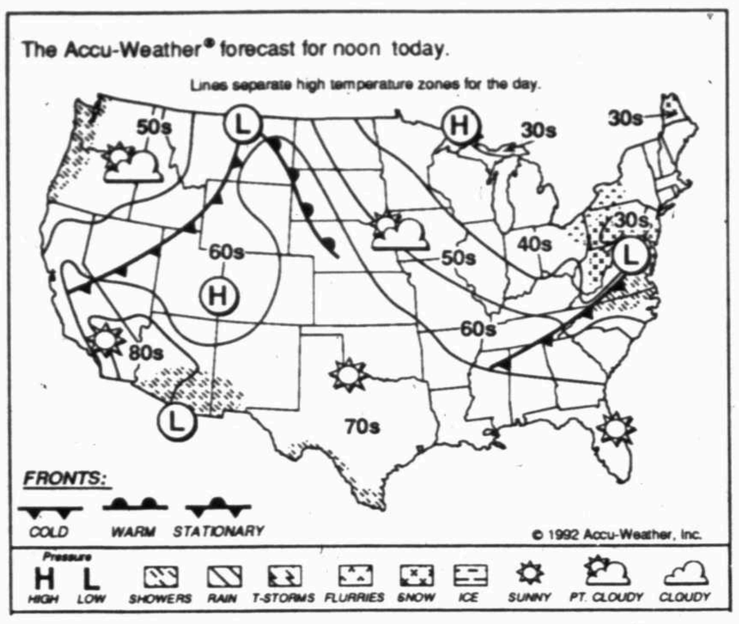
WEATHER SUMMARY



A sunny, 70s Saturday on tap

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the upper 70s, according to the National Weather Service of Midland.

Winds should be from the southwest at 10-15 mph today. Tonight, clouds are expected to increase with a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms after midnight. The low temperature tonight should be in the upper 40s.

Sunday, expect cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms and a high temperature in the mid-70s.

Friday's high was 67 degrees, compared with the record high of 94 degrees set in 1946. The low was 34, compared with the record low of 28 degrees set in 1945.

STATE

Sunshine returned Friday to most of Texas as dry air associated with high pressure dominated the state. However, a few clouds lingered in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Temperatures were mild with highs in the 60s.

Winds were from the southwest at 5 to 15 miles an hour.

The North Texas forecast was for continued sunshine today with highs of 76 to 82 degrees. Increasing cloudiness from the south was likely tonight with a slight chance of showers in southwest and south-central portions. Lows were to be 52 to 57. It should be mostly cloudy Sunday with a chance of thunderstorms. Highs were to be 73 to 77.

West Texas was expected to be mostly sunny today but with increasing cloudiness this afternoon in the Far West spreading across the area tonight. Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected in the Far West tonight. The highs today were to be in the 70s except for the 60s in the mountains and near 80 in the Big Bend valleys.

NATION

Unseasonable frost and freezing temperatures swept the South on Friday, and a heat wave pushed temperatures into the 70s in the northern Great Plains.

The cold wave reached from parts of Oklahoma through the Carolinas. Low temperature records included 25 degrees in Chattanooga, Tenn., 26 in Athens, Ga., and 28 in Columbia, S.C.

Record lows and sub-freezing temperatures also were recorded in Alabama, Arkansas, Kentucky, North Carolina, and Ohio, where it was 23 in Cincinnati and 20 in Dayton.

But the upper Missouri Valley remained warm.

Minor flooding was predicted as unseasonably high temperatures began melting snow in Colorado. At least 10 roads near Alamosa, Colo., had been closed Friday by flooding.

Snowshowers were scattered over northern Maine and the upper Ohio Valley. Rain was scattered from northern Illinois across northeast and eastern Missouri. Rainshowers extended over much of the Florida peninsula and across southern Texas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

RHETORIC: Bush campaigns against Congress

(From 1A)

At the same time, leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives announced that they were casting off perquisites believed likely to anger voters in this election year.

"Gift items, mementos and souvenir items" will no longer be offered for sale at a discount by the House and Senate stationery supply stores, the leaders said. Members of Congress will have to pay $400 a year to use their gymnasium or other exercise equipment; in the past there was no charge.

Members of Congress also will have to pay $520 a year if they wish to continue receiving medical care previously provided at no charge by doctors and nurses assigned to the Capitol.

Lawmakers can no longer get prescription drugs in the Capitol, but must buy such medications "at fair market value" from commercial pharmacies. The Senate dining room will cut back its hours of operation to save money. And, as previously announced, the House sergeant-at-arms will no longer fix parking tickets for House members.

In the current political atmosphere, no custom is too venerable, no official too lofty, to escape the assault on perquisites. Officials are less interested in the reality of government perks than in the voters' perception of such privileges, because for politicans the voters' fury is political reality.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., and Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., illustrate the current mood. They have introduced bills that would outlaw discounts for members of Congress on health care, meals, flowers, plants, pictures, haircuts or other items.

"To counter the claims that we are a privileged class," all such perks must be abolished, Packwood said recently on the Senate floor.

The House bank, the House post office, the franking privilege, the subway that connects the Capitol with congressional office buildings, the patronage plums, the special restaurants, barber shops, beauty parlors, parking privileges and medical care for members of Congress — all have come under intense scrutiny in the last few weeks.

Republican strategists, in the White House and at President Bush's re-election campaign, had hoped to thrash Democrats with evidence of scandal at the House post office and the House bank. But Democrats replied this week with a barrage of their own.

Rep. Vic Fazio of California, who is chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, said of the Republicans: "They can take this as a threat or view this as a warning. We will match every ethical impropriety, perk and privilege they level at Congress with the same and more at the White House or this administration."

Paul R. Lucas, a professor of history at Indiana University in Bloomington, said: "This argument over the perks of Congress goes to the heart of a very old debate about what a republic should be like.

"In the 18th century, colonists and the Founding Fathers believed that the rulers of the new nation must avoid an exorbitant lifestyle and must not behave like decadent European aristocrats."

PERKS: House Speaker Foley counterpunches

told reporters.

Foley insisted there was nothing vindictive about examining perks in the entire government, including the Republican-controlled executive branch, which he said enjoys the same perks as Congress.

In addition, he said, "The Reagan and the Bush administrations have seen a proliferation of government offices beyond anything that went before. Currently, there are many times more subcabinet officers than ever existed in the prior administrations."

Foley insisted he has no problem with the president having "everything he needs." But Congress "has the right to ask the question whether all the executive departments are totally free of excessive perk activities."

"I'm not on any crusade," Foley said. "But a reasonable examination seems to be in order."

Foley said he had asked appropriations committee chairmen to examine such perks as chauffeur service, low-or no-cost gymnasiums, special dining services, use of military or departmental airplanes and privileged use of national park facilities.

However, the White House on Tuesday boycotted a Capitol Hill hearing on the subject.

A White House spokesman said the hearing by the House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee was an attempt to shift public attention from congressional "abuse and mismanagement."

Foley also criticized the news media, political candidates and radio talk show hosts for painting an erroneous picture of Congress that creates "a vortex of dissatisfaction."

Foley said the three groups are on a crusade, "steaming people up, calling into question everybody's private and public ethical standards, creating a vortex of dissatisfaction."

"The public is told that their institutions are corrupt, that their officials are not interested in public values, that there is cynicism about power and position, that people are living gilded and separate lives in some kind strange departure from previous standards," Foley declared.

"This story is untrue," Foley said. "It doesn't have any relation to the life I see in Washington and yet it is disseminated and distributed and evoked all over the country and then we wonder why people are cynical."

Foley said that the "overwhelming number of people in Congress are hard working and principled people."

CHARITY: Report reveals pattern of manipulation

(From 1A)

ment, jewelry and flowers.

While the authors of the report and Kenneth W. Dam, the interim president of the United Way of America, were careful to avoid any accusations of criminal activity, the Justice Department, the IRS and the congressional General Accounting Office have all requested copies of the report.

Dam, who released the report at a news conference Friday morning, said: "These conclusions are disturbing, and will certainly outrage people who have given their hard-earned money week by week to help the United Way help those in need. They will, and should, feel betrayed."

Aramony denied any breach of trust but did not respond to the specific accusations of the report, which was prepared by the law firm Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand, and the Investigative Group, Inc.

The details of the report were being relayed to local United Way affiliates Friday, and Dam said he hoped that the willingness to disclose the painful details would begin to restore the trust of the 2,100 affiliates and the donors, who gave $3.1 billion to support 40,000 charities in 1991.

Most executives of non-profit institutions interviewed Friday said they hoped the report's frankness would persuade donors that the organization was serious about controlling any possible abuses, but some wondered if the news would destroy the already frayed public trust.

"I'm astounded," said Kenneth L. Albrecht, president of the National Charities Information Bureau, a organization based in New York that sets national standards for non-profit institutions.

"This kind of stuff leaves you grief-stricken. It doesn't just affect the United Way of America, it affects local United Ways, it could affect local senior citizen and day-care centers. It affects every single one of us who are involved in the charitable field in this country. We are all diminished, and the public trust has been diminished."

Aramony resigned under fire Feb. 27 and was dropped from the payroll March 17. His lawyer, Thomas H. Boggs Jr., released copies of two letters sent this week to John F. Akers, former chairman of United Way of America's board of governors, accusing him of convening "a modern-day Salem witch trial-by-press-release."

"I reject categorically any suggestion of misappropriation or breach of trust during my tenure at United Way of America," Aramony wrote. "The Board of Governors at all times was fully informed about the management of the United Way of America as well as the so-called spinoffs."

Although the board met and discussed the report Thursday, neither Akers, who is also chairman of IBM, nor the incoming United Way board chairman, W.R. Howell, who is chairman and chief executive officer of JCPenney Co., Inc., appeared at the news conference or returned phone calls Friday.

JOBLESS: Nation's rate holds at 7.3 percent

(From 1A)

the rate at the start of the recession in July 1990, the Labor Department said.

Analysts said it is not unusual for employment increases to lag behind an economic rebound. Businesses often delay hiring workers in the early stages of a recovery, relying instead on overtime until they are confident the turnaround can be sustained.

Most economists expect the unemployment rate will begin to improve by summer, but few anticipate it will be much below 7 percent by the end of the year.

"This is not good news from George Bush's point of view. ... Economists may say the recession has bottomed out but that won't get many votes. ... People have to see more than this," said economist Robert G. Dederick of Northern Trust Co. of Chicago.

In other economic developments Friday:

■ The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.96 percent this week, down from 8.98 percent last week. It was the second straight small decrease since rates hit 9.03 percent during the week ending March 20.

■ Top policy-makers at the Federal Reserve voted in February against moves to lower interest rates in general, according to minutes of the meeting. The Federal Open Market Committee met again this week, and analysts believe the sentiment at those closed-door discussions was the same.

Of 11 large states reporting March unemployment figures, New York, which is holding a primary election Tuesday, registered the largest drop — from 8.9 percent to 8 percent, still well above the national average.

The rates for most demographic groups showed little change, but for adult black men it jumped almost a full percentage point, from 13.4 percent in February to 14.3 percent in March.

"There's no improvement in our economy and for some, particularly adult black men, things have worsened substantially," said economist Rudy Oswald of the AFL-CIO.

Meanwhile, employers reported only a weak seasonally adjusted gain of 19,000 jobs in March. Job growth in February, earlier estimated at a vigorous 164,000 jobs, was revised down to 107,000.

Retail trade showed the largest job losses of any sector, 24,000, but that followed a gain of 124,000 in February. Auto industry employment was up by 6,000, but manufacturing overall edged down 3,000.

Construction posted a job gain of 10,000. Analysts said it would have been larger if not for unusually harsh weather across much of the country.

Employment by local governments jumped 36,000, but the Labor Department said much of that likely was accounted for by hiring temporary workers for primary elections.

TRIAL: Jury to hear closing arguments Monday

(From 1A)

was at fault.

On Friday, Richard Kemper, a aviation consultant from Georgia, reaffirmed previous testimony on behalf of Mitsubishi.

"The cause of the accident: the pilot failed to maintain control of his airplane," said Kemper, who specializes in accident reconstructions.

Mitsubishi's expert witnesses concluded from their investigations that the airplane accumulated ice and the pilot neglected the hazard until it was too late.

Defense witnesses said the pilot, 51-year-old Kenneth Mardis, probably turned on the anti-icer that caused ice near the right engine air inlet to be ingested by that engine. That resulted in a "flame out," or the engine slowing down to about 30 percent.

An anti-icer, which employs heat, should be activated before entering icy conditions to prevent such mishaps, testimony indicated.

Combined with turbulence and the aircraft on auto-pilot, the airplane stalled out about 7:50 a.m. and went into a spin plunging 13,000 feet to the ground, experts for the defense said.

Kemper estimated that the pilot was 95 percent at fault. The pilot accepted incomplete weather briefings before take-off, failed to maintain a safe air speed, and did not use anti-ice and de-icer equipment properly, he said.

In addition to conclusions about what caused the wreck, Mitsubishi presented one witness who spoke of his confidence in the airplanes.

Former astronaut Frank Borman, a long-time pilot and former head of Eastern Airlines, testified he had flown an MU-2 in icy conditions more than 20 times.

"I think the Mitsubishi is as good in ice as any aircraft I've flown. I have confidence in it," said Borman, who added that all the planes he's piloted act similar in icy weather.

The plaintiff maintains that although the MU-2 manual states the airplane can fly in known icy conditions, it can't safely.

Reconstruction of the accident by plaintiff's experts had the plane quickly overcome by ice that could not be shed by de-icer equipment.

The de-icer system consists of pneumatic de-icer boots affixed to the airplane including the front edges of the wings and tail. When activated — manually or automatically — after more than a one-quarter inch ice build-up, the rubber-like boots inflate and break the accumulated ice.

Robert Mullins, an Arlington aerospace engineer, testified on Wednesday that, based on wind tunnel experiments, the boot design and airfoil on the MU-2 contributed to the crash.

Plaintiff's experts said the aircraft was slowed down by ice and the pilot probably activated the de-icer and ridges of ice not broken away also adversely affected flight.

Ice, like any obstruction on the wings or tail, can cause drag, which in turn can lead to a stall then the plane spinning out.

Attorney's for both sides also argued about whether the pilot may have been drinking before the flight. Bloody fluids from Mardis indicated a .05 gram-percent alcohol level.

Defense witnesses testified that most of the alcohol probably was the result of drinking the night before.

Plaintiff's witnesses said Mardis did not imbibe the night before. Others testified the alcohol may have been entirely produced from decomposition.

The plaintiff also questioned whether the bloody fluid sample taken was even that of Mardis.

Throughout the trial, attorneys for both sides — during cross examinations — suggested the opponent's expert witnesses were selective in data used and presented to the court.

A probable-cause report released by the National Transportation Safety Board in September 1991 indicated the crash resulted from the "improper planning/decision making by the pilot."

The NTSB report was not admissible in the trial although the findings of the board were substantiated by defense testimony.

Plaintiff's testimony indicated Mardis was a highly experienced pilot with more than 11,000 hours of flight time although only about 40 hours with the MU-2.

DUST: Rains ease problem

(From 1A)

tor Ken Day and a representative of the Federal Aviation Administration.

"If they don't have further problems, that's fine. But if they have problems, we'll have to go further with this," Sims said. If the dust blows again, the agency could assess fines.

"There's nothing wrong with it (relying on nature), as long as it works out the way you want it to," Sims said.

Day could not be reached for comment Friday. He said earlier the construction had been funded with an FAA grant, a fact the TACB might take into account.

Meanwhile, one local citizen who was bothered by dust — one of two complaints that sparked the TACB inspection — now says he has a solution to offer.

Don Book, a resident of Saddle Club South neighborhood, wants the city to invest in a soil stabilizer manufactured by the Fina Oil and Chemical Co. refinery in Big Spring. Called MS-1, the biodegradable product would be mixed with water and applied to Airpark dirt with a watering truck, Book said.

After researching the idea with a Fina engineer, Book said using MS-1 on 100 acres — the amount of land plowed in the construction project — with a 10-to-1 dilution in water would cost less than $1,000.

Area groups land state study grant

■ $474,000 grant to be used to start technical-skills training programs, coordinating board says.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A 17-county Permian Basin consortium will receive about $474,000 for two years in a grant to prepare high school students for advanced technology careers, a state education agency recently announced.

The grant, part of $3.8 million from the federal government awarded to 18 groups in Texas, will be used to start programs that will give students the technical skills needed for jobs in the growing international economy, according to the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

School districts, colleges and local businesses and industry form the groups that compete for the awards. Midland College will act as the fiscal agent for the 17-county West Texas group. The various interests elect members to an executive committee to run the program.

The money is provided by the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act of 1990.

Midland College initially received a $49,800 from the Perkins program to start up the program.

"We received $49,800 from the original planning grant," said Deana Lusk, MC associate dean of instruction. "Then $200,000 was ammended to that."

The THECB has projected that the college will receive at least $225,000 of the four-year grant next year. The grant is renewable year-to-year provided the college meets specific criteria.

The programs, known as "tech-prep," allow 11th and 12th grade students to begin taking technical classes to prepare for enrollment in community college programs leading to associate degrees in advanced technology. Students can continue their education by earning B.A. degrees at senior-level universities.

Businesses and industry, through private industry councils, work with consortium members to develop needed educational programs. Targeted fields include nursing, electronic engineering, telecommunications, child development, microcomputer applications and agricultural technology.

"The cooperation and creativity that went into the development of these consortia are vital to our state's ability to produce highly skilled, creative workers who can attract better-paying jobs to Texas," said Kenneth H. Ashworth, commissioner of higher education.

Texas awarded $1 million to 20 groups for tech-prep programs earlier this federal fiscal year, and is expected to receive another $6.9 million in the 1992-'93 fiscal year.

Noriega drug case in jury's hands

MIAMI (AP) — Manuel Noriega's drug case went to the jury Friday, more than six months after his trial began and two years after he surrendered to U.S. invasion troops in Panama.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler told the jurors they should view the testimony of witnesses given plea bargains and other compensation more cautiously than the statements of other witnesses.

He also warned against weighing the deposed Panamanian leader's decision against taking the stand in his own defense on drug and racketeering charges.

The judge alluded once in his discussion with jurors to the 1989 invasion.

"Mention has been made ... as to the manner in which the defendant was brought here," the judge said. "That is not an issue in this case, and it is not for you to consider."

He also told them that Noriega's "leadership role in his country in no way affects the jurisdiction of this court to try the case."

Jurors got the case just before 5:30 p.m. after two hours of instruction, but won't deliberate until Saturday morning.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys were still arguing Friday over a final version of the indictment to be submitted to the jurors.

Prosecutors sought to eliminate many accusations that were either never mentioned or were contradicted by other evidence in the trial, while the defense wants the jury to see the apparent errors.

In his final rebuttal earlier Friday, lead prosecutor Michael Sullivan attacked defense attorney Frank Rubino's emphasis on reduced sentences, payments and other deals given to a parade of convicted drug dealers who took the stand against Noriega.

Judge orders exhumation of body examined by Lubbock pathologist

CANYON (AP) — A state judge Friday ordered the remains of a beating victim be re-examined as an exhumation hearing dominated by testimony about an embattled Lubbock pathologist came to an abrupt halt.

District Judge Patrick A. Pirtle ordered the body of Hilton Merriman exhumed by the end of April after Randall County District Attorney Randy Sherrod conceded to defense attorneys.

Merriman, 72, was found in a pool of blood in his home near Canyon in May 1990. Six men have been indicted on capital murder charges in connection to the case. One man has been convicted and sentenced to die for the slaying.

Sherrod met with Merriman's relatives before the hearing was to reconvene Friday and decided to allow defense attorneys for Douglas Nathan Palmer to exhume the body.

Merriman family members refused to comment, but Sherrod said they have been through "a living hell" because of media accounts and the conduct of the hearing. "They wanted an end to this circus," Sherrod said.

Thursday, Palmer's attorneys Steven Losch and Millard Farmer called pathologist Ralph Erdmann to testify about his autopsy of Merriman.

Erdmann, who was indicted by a Hockley County Grand Jury in February for falsifying an autopsy in another case, pleaded the Fifth Amendment.

"We got an important piece of relief today," said Losch, an attorney for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund-Capital Punishment Project. "But we have much more to do. Dr. Erdmann has left a trail that must be followed."

Losch and Farmer quickly made Erdmann the focus of the hearing. The attorneys claimed the Lubbock doctor purposely overlooked Merriman's heart condition as a cause of death.

The attorneys acknowledge the victim was beaten but contend Merriman's heart disease may have complicated his death. Palmer did not intend to kill Merriman, defense attorneys said.

Losch said Erdmann has routinely filed autopsy reports intended to help the state build its cases.

About three weeks after his indictment, Erdmann resigned a $140,000-a-year position performing autopsies for Lubbock County, saying he was overworked.

"Erdmann's work in every case is bad, it's just a matter of whether the autopsy he performed is material to a case," Losch said. "If Erdmann has not destroyed the evidence then we can overturn the capital murder cases he is involved in."

Losch said Friday he will look into at least 23 cases involving Erdmann, and he accused Sherrod and Lubbock County District Attorney Travis Ware of covering up for the doctor.

"We will seek prosecutorial misconduct against Mr. Sherrod," Losch said. "It's clear he was withholding evidence about Dr. Erdmann."

Losch's statements relate to the state's announcement Thursday that Erdmann had misrepresented tissue samples from Merriman.

Sherrod said Erdmann had changed the case number and date on tissue slides Erdmann claimed to be taken from Merriman.

"We had a pathologist check the slides and they appear to be from a man much younger than Merriman," Sherrod said. "We don't know who the hell they're from."

Sherrod denied a coverup and said he is considering an indictment against Erdmann if the doctor indeed falsified the slides.

"Dr. Erdmann is kind of strange in some of his work habits," Sherrod said. "But I have never seen a case where he intentionally tried to violate the law. The slides may be that case."

Sherrod said he has had concerns about Erdmann for years.

"He does things like fail to recall his right from his left. He brings his 13-year-old child to a autopsy," Sherrod said. "But he has not tried to put innocent people in jail."

Losch sought a subpoena to recover all of Erdmann's medical slides because "as we sit here, he may be destroying evidence in this case and other cases." Pirtle granted the subpoena.

Dallas women file lawsuits against television evangelist

DALLAS (AP) — The legal woes of television evangelist Robert Tilton continued Friday as two Dallas women filed lawsuits against the minister and his World of Faith World Outreach Center.

Mary Elizabeth Turk, 67, and Hendrina DeGraaf, 60, filed suit in district court alleging fraud and intentional infliction of emotional stress.

The lawsuits seek close to $70 million each in actual and punitive damages, said attorney, Gary Richardson of Tulsa, Okla., who also represents two Tulsa women who filed similar lawsuits earlier against Tilton.

The church's Tulsa, Okla., attorney, J.C. Joyce, did not immediately return a phone call to The Associated Press on Friday.

Neither Ms. Turk nor Ms. DeGraaf attended a news conference Friday led by their attorney. But Ms. Turk's daughter, Vicki Crenshaw, told reporters of the suffering her mother endured by not seeking early treatment for rectal cancer, believing instead that she would be healed through Tilton's so-called "prayer requests."

"My mother is a fundamentalist Christian, and Mr. Tilton says that he will provide a miracle of healing and my mother believes in miraculous healing because it is mentioned in the scriptures," Ms. Crenshaw said.

Ms. Turk began watching Tilton's television broadcasts and giving money, including a $1,000 bank draft, after receiving letters from the ministry soliciting donations, Ms. Crenshaw said.

The letters indicated that if Ms. Turk offered money, she would be healed and prosper financially, the lawsuit said.

After ignoring requests by the family that she seek treatment for severe pain, Ms. Turk finally went to the hospital and was diagnosed as terminally ill with an advanced stage of rectal cancer. The woman was too ill to attend Friday's news conference, Richardson said.

Medical officials told the woman that the cancer could have been successfully treated had it been identified earlier, the lawsuit said.

Ms. DeGraaf, who was living in Richmond, Va., sold her belongings and moved to Dallas after seeing the ministry's television broadcasts so that she could attend the Word of Faith Church.

She lived in a motel room across from the Farmers Branch church in suburban Dallas and regularly donated to the ministry — including a $250 initial contribution — until she ran out of funds, Richardson said.

When Ms. DeGraaf later asked the church for help, a church employee replied: "We are here to preach the Gospel and not to help you," according to the lawsuit.

Ms. DeGraaf donated money believing that through Tilton's prayer requests God would offer her prosperity, Richardson said.

Ms. DeGraaf "was placed in a situation of having no place to live and no means of helping herself," according to the lawsuit. Ms. DeGraaf now works as a nurse in Dallas, her attorney said.

Richardson said he expects more people to file lawsuits against the ministry, adding that a class action lawsuit could develop from the litigation.

"I think that Robert Tilton needs to be stopped and people need to quit believing in him and being hurt by him," Ms. Crenshaw said, adding that she did not wish to see Tilton go to jail. "Tilton should share his wealth with those people that need it desperately."

Meanwhile, the Texas attorney general's office, which has been trying to gain access to financial records of the ministry for an investigation, Thursday announced a new criminal investigation.

Texas doctor breaks silence, claims Kennedy was wounded from front

By Barry Shlachter
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Charles Crenshaw, a Fort Worth physician, has ventured into the shadowy world of Kennedy assassination conspiracies and found himself ensnarled by controversy even before his 203-page paperback was officially put on sale Friday.

In "JFK: Conspiracy of Silence," the semiretired head of surgery at John Peter Smith Hospital writes that "bullets" hit President John F. Kennedy's head from the front, not one in the back of the head as the Warren Commission found.

Crenshaw broke a public silence he says he has been pressured to maintain by hitting the talk show circuit this week, starting with an interview on Geraldo Rivera's "Now It Can Be Told," then ABC's "20/20," "Good Morning America," "Donahue," CNN's "Larry King Live" and so on.

But the man described on the cover as "the surgeon who tried to save JFK" actually played no role in Kennedy's care at the Parkland Hospital emergency room in Dallas, said Malcolm Perry, 62, the physician depicted in Crenshaw's book as the one who worked hardest to resuscitate the mortally wounded president. Perry is the chief of vascular surgery at Texas Tech University Medical School in Lubbock.

"I have not read the book," said Perry, who on Nov. 22, 1963, was Parkland chief of vascular surgery. "But Dr. Crenshaw was not involved in the efforts to save the president, and there was only one bullet.

"He was a junior resident," Perry said. "He didn't assist or help, and I don't even remember him being there. It's entirely possible he might have looked in during the 20 minutes we attempted to save President Kennedy's life. A lot of people stuck in their heads and were asked to leave. But he had nothing to do with the procedures."

Crenshaw failed to respond to three messages left at his Fort Worth home. "He's pretty much gone into seclusion," said Brenda Hyde, an employee of John Peter Smith Hospital.

His co-author, Jens Hansen of neighboring Arlington, said the 59-year-old Crenshaw is unable to comment because of contractual obligations to his publisher. But he quoted him as saying that Perry apparently was confused because Crenshaw was not among those doctors who testified before the Warren Commission.

"I was afraid to go to the Warren Commission because I would have said what I am saying now," Hansen quoted him as saying.

But there are nine references to Crenshaw in the commission's report, said Hansen, who also said Crenshaw inserted a catheter in Kennedy's leg and "worked on the head area."

"And he was the last doctor to see President Kennedy placed in the casket," Hansen said.

Moreover, it was Crenshaw who put his arm around Jacquelyn Kennedy when another doctor, Charles Baxter, told her the president was dead, the Arlington writer said. "Dr. Crenshaw's involvement is well-established in documentation."

In the $4.99 Signet book, Crenshaw says a mixture of "fraternal doctrine, naivete, fear and career-mindedness" led to the conspiracy of silence by Parkland doctors. He quotes Baxter, a ranking Parkland physician, as warning staff that anyone attempting to make a dime off the assassination would have their medical careers ruined.

Baxter, according to a "20/20" interview transcript made available to the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, confirmed he issued the warning, adding that he felt it needed to be said.

In commenting this week, Perry said he is breaking a longstanding promise to himself not to be interviewed on the Kennedy assassination. Most of the Parkland doctors involved similarly have been publicity-shy but not, he said, because of any outside pressure.

"It's a painful experience most of us don't want to relive," explained Perry.

Crenshaw's book maintains that there were entry wounds on the front of Kennedy's head and that they must have been caused by a second gunman on the grassy knoll at Dallas' Dealey Plaza.

These statements have been welcomed by assassination writers like Jim Marrs of Springtown, author of "Crossfire," which formed part of the basis for the Oliver Stone film "JFK."

"Well, he's just finally telling the truth," Marrs said. "The Dallas doctors have never lied, they just have kept silent. And the rumors have been because they were ordered to do so by Washington."

But Perry, one of those Dallas doctors, disputes he was ever silenced and continues to believe there was just one bullet. "There were no wounds at the front of the head at all," he said.

Baxter told "20/20's" Tom Jarriel that it was impossible to determine the direction of the bullet from the wounds.

Support groups hope to expand reach with onslaught of lottery

AUSTIN (AP) — Groups that try to help compulsive gamblers kick the habit say they hope to expand their services in time for the beginning of the Texas lottery.

Scratch-off lottery tickets are expected to be on sale in May, with the computerized games ready in July.

The Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse is spending $167,687 on a survey of 6,000 adults and 1,000 adolescents to gauge the gambling problem in the state, a newspaper reported Friday.

The commission also is negotiating a contract with the non-profit Texas Council on Problem and Compulsive Gambling to develop a public education program.

In addition, a toll-free 800 number will be printed on lottery tickets that people can call to get help for a gambling problem. Officials say the hot line expects to receive 1,000 calls a month.

"We will always try to put them in contact with Gamblers' Anonymous or the family support group, Gam-Anon," said Sue Cox, executive director of the Dallas-based compulsive gambling council.

Concerns about gambling addictions coincide with the lottery and the emergence of other forms of legalized gambling in Texas, such as dog and horse racing, bingo and offshore casino cruise ships.

Currently, Gamblers' Anonymous has four chapter meetings per week in Houston, two in Dallas, and one each in Austin, San Antonio, and El Paso. The council hopes to increase this number of meetings, and to identify counselors and other experts who can provide treatment.

Tom, an active member of Gamblers' Anonymous who refused to give his last name, said that approximately 3 percent of the adult population is vulnerable to "pathological gambling."

He said gambling addicts get less sympathy than alcoholics.

HL&P to lay off nearly 1,000

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Lighting & Power Co. is laying off nearly 10 percent of its 11,000-member workforce as part the company's efforts to cope with weak increases in electricity usage, officials said.

The anticipated layoffs began Thursday and will continue for several days, said HL&P spokesman Graham Painter.

"We have begun reducing our staff," Painter said. "The ultimate result will be that 1,100 positions will be eliminated out of 11,000."

Since some of the positions to be cut currently are not filled, Painter said the actual layoffs will be slightly less than 1,000.

The layoffs "will represent all different levels within the company and all kinds of different skills and positions, it's not just one area of the company that's affected," he said.

"This is not being done because of a financial crisis for the company, but it is in fact being done because of a changed business environment."

Painter said the company has experienced slow growth in the use of electricity in the area.

"Houston has been such a boom town for so very long, that to be back to what is normal for other cities is abnormal for Houston," he said.

NCAA survivors gear up

Duke doesn't own title yet

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Rewind the tape one year to the 1991 Final Four.

UNLV had been No. 1 the entire season and hadn't lost a game. The national title was theirs except for the small matter of 80 minutes of basketball. The Runnin' Rebels only played 40 and the perfect season was over at the hands of Duke, the eventual champions.

At this year's edition of the national semifinals, Duke has run the season as the top-ranked team with only two losses along the way. Every expert and know-nothing conceded the Blue Devils are the best team by far, yet no one has awarded them the title like last year.

Could it be the college basketball world has become savvy? Doubtful.

It's more likely that Duke's opponent on Saturday, Indiana, has a lot to do with that doubt especially when it's coupled with the fact the Blue Devils have shown they are human during the early rounds of the NCAA tournament — committing turnovers, falling victim to prolonged runs, forcing shots; all very un-Dukeish things.

"We've looked at tapes of how they've played all year, we just didn't watch the last few games," Indiana senior Eric Anderson said. "We just feel like we have to come out and play like we've been playing."

There's the second, and maybe larger piece to the puzzle: Indiana has been playing great as of late.

The Hoosiers came into the tournament off a devastating loss at Purdue, one which cost them a Big Ten title and a No. 1 seeding. Placed as the second seed in the West, the Hoosiers (27-6) have turned things around from a season-ending funk, especially on the offensive end where six players average between 20.3 and 9.0 points per game.

The statistics for the four tournament games dwarf the regular-season numbers. Shooting is up almost 10 percentage points, scoring is at 93 per game and the rebounding margin has jumped from a plus-4 to a plus-7.

"All year we struggled with our mental attitude," junior forward Calbert Cheaney said. "We thought we were better than every team we played and that wasn't the case."

Indiana's wins haven't been over a cakewalk bracket. The Hoosiers had to Cincinnati guard Herb Jones prepares for today's meeting with Michigan, when the Final Four will be halved.

Fab Five meets Faceless Five

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — And on the undercard we have ... the Fab Five versus the Faceless Five, Michigan's unfazed freshman with marquee names against Cincinnati's mature, obscure Bearcats.

Nothing bothers these guys, not even being relegated to prelim status Saturday before The Big Game between Duke and Indiana, the one so many folks think will produce the NCAA champion.

Nervous?

"There are too many other things in life to be nervous about," Michigan's giant guard Jalen Rosen says with disdain.

"We're not concentrating on shocking the world," adds Wolyerine center Chris Webber. "We want to win. If that shocks the world, then fine."

There are plenty of reasons to believe that the winner of Michigan-Cincinnati may be more than mere fodder in the final in a tournament replete with upsets this year and throughout its history.

Just recall the scene a year ago when UNLV was deemed unbeatable and on a plane with the best of the UCLA teams. That notion lasted until the semifinals against Duke, which went on to the championship.

Michigan-Cincinnati, The Little Game in this year's semifinals, could provide just such a surprise Monday night.

First, though, there is the small matter of getting to the final by overcoming some flaws that each team has shown.

For Michigan, it's been a problem of turnovers by players whose soaring style sometimes gets out of control. One report had it that Cincinnati players derided the Wolverine freshman the "Fumbling Fab Five," but the Bearcats denied such a putdown.

"We have steadily gotten better with our ability to handle the ball, and maybe have regard for the basketball," Michigan coach Steve Fisher said Friday in acknowleging the problem.

Bo Schembechler, Michigan's former football coach and athletic director and now president of the Detroit Tigers, spoke to the team about ball control before the Wolverines came here.

"You know how he coached," said Fisher, who was hired by Schembechler just before winning the NCAA championship in 1989 "He never liked to have turnovers, so they didn't throw the ball very much. He said to the kids, 'I didn't

Rice search

HOUSTON (AP) — A Rice University committee looking for a new head basketball coach has interviewed Cornell's Jan van Breda Kolff.

Van Breda Kolff is the fourth person to interview for the job left vacant March 23 when Scott Thompson resigned to take over as coach at Wichita State.

Rice's search committee met with Van Breda Kolff for two hours Thursday. Van Breda Kolff is the son of former Los Angeles Lakers coach Butch van Breda Kolff.

The others who have interviewed with Rice are John Olive, longtime assistant at Villanova; Grey Giovanine, Thompson's top assistant for the last five years; and Rice graduate Willis Wilson, a former Thompson assistant who played for the Owls in the late 1970s.

All three were interviewed earlier this week.

The search committee is expected to submit its recommendation on Thompson's successor to athletic director Bobby May no later than Tuesday.

MC women overcome rocky start

Now that the tennis program has been shown the door at Midland College, inspiration and motivation appear to be a bit harder to come by these days.

The MC women's tennis team opened play in the ITCA Western Team Championships Friday afternoon with a decisive, yet not altogether spectacular win over Temple.

MC head coach Joe Williams in part blames his women's slight let down against Temple on the fact that MC will have no more tennis after this season. With only this tournament, the Region V event later this month and the national tournament in May left on MC's tennis schedule, it can be a bit difficult, Williams feels, for his players to keep focused.

"Our girls' minds are probably more on where they're going to school and what's going to happen next year than on the tennis court," Williams said. "Some of them got the job done, though.

"We are playing to our level of competition, but that's the way you can get upset."

And indeed, MC's No. 1 singles player Myriam Berthe almost did get upset. Al-

'Dogs look for 3rd win of the week

■ MHS hosts Abilene Cooper while Lee visits Abilene High in 4-5A baseball today.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Midland High can put an exclamation point on the end of an already successful week when the baseball Bulldogs host District 4-5A leader Abilene Cooper in a 2 p.m. game at Angels Stadium today.

In other 4-5A games, Midland Lee travels to Abilene High while San Angelo hosts Odessa Permian. Odessa High is idle.

For MHS, a win today would give it three this week after taking victories over San Angelo Monday in a rainout make-up and Tuesday at Permian. The Bulldogs' 2-1 defeat of Permian was the first league loss for the Panthers, and MHS would be more than happy to do the same for fifth-ranked Cooper.

Foyt, John Andretti in separate Phoenix crashes

Associated Press

PHOENIX — A.J. Foyt was injured and Hall-VDS driver John Andretti suffered bruises in separate crashes Friday at Phoenix International Raceway on a day when Penske Racing teammates Emerson Fittipaldi and Rick Mears turned some sizzling laps.

The 57-year-old Foyt crashed his 1991 Lola-Chevrolet-A after sliding through some fluid on the one-mile oval during the opening practice session for Sunday's Valvoline 200. He sustained a hairline fracture to the scapula bone in his right shoulder.

Andretti, whose new Lola-Chevrolet-A crashed early in the morning practice, forcing a 30-minute delay while track workers repaired the Turn 2 wall, came away with scrapes and bruises and was on the track in his backup car later in the day.

Officials said Foyt will likely be out of action 4-6 weeks, meaning that the four-time Indianapolis 500 winner and Indycar career victory leader (67) may not be able to race at Indy next month. If not, it would end his record string of 34 straight starts at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

When told by a nurse that he might be unable to drive for that long, Foyt, who has changed his mind about his announced 1991 retirement, reportedly said, "Nah, Texans heal faster."

Foyt had crashed three times previously this year — once in a NASCAR Southwest Tour stock car race at Phoenix and twice in preparation for the Daytona 500 stock car race, all in

Laettner voted Player of Year

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Christian Laettner's dream of being the best has materialized.

"I've wanted to be dominant at a college level. I wanted my team to always be excellent," Laettner said Friday, after being named winner of the Adolph Rupp Award as The Associated Press college basketball player of the year.

"And, we've been that. So what that means is that all my dreams have come true."

Laettner, the player of the year in the Atlantic Coast Conference, finished ahead of the 1991 AP player of the year Shaquille O'Neal of Louisiana State. Voting was conducted before the NCAA tournament.

After finishing seventh last year, Laettner collected 53 first-place votes, 21 second-place votes and 8 thirds for a total of 336 points. O'Neal was next with 248 points, receiving 33 votes for first, 22 for second and 17 for third.

Third was Ohio State's Jim Jackson with 172 points, followed by Southern California's Harold Miner with 131 points.

When he leaves Minneapolis, Laettner will become the third athlete in NCAA history, all from Duke, to have played in four Final Fours, and the first ever to start in as many. He also is the leading scorer in NCAA tournament history with 380 points. At Durham, his number 32 hangs from the rafters at Cameron Indoor Stadium as the sixth number to be retired in school history.

"What it means is that there's been a lot of hard work, a lot of listening, a lot of sacrifices," Laettner said. "Beyond that, there's been a lot of excitement and celebration, just a lot of very good things have happened."

The excitement continued last Saturday when Laettner hit the game-winning basket against Kentucky to win the East Regional and propel Duke into its fifth straight Final Four and sixth in the past seven years.

Laettner had kept that dominance going in 1990, hitting a shot at the buzzer and leading the Blue Devils past Connecticut. He said none of it would have happened without the help of his teammates.

"I feel very privileged to have the right people around me ... to come from a great high school and a great high school coach so all these things could happen," he said.

Coach Mike Krzyzewski saw it coming when Laettner chose Duke over rival North Carolina. However, there were other attributes that came as a surprise.

"I never knew he was as good a competitor as he was," Krzyzewski said, "and that he loved the game. He's smart. He understands the game."

Krzyzewski understands that while people have criticized Laettner for his on-court demeanor, there has been little question about his play.

"If you're going to be really good, one of the best at what you do, you'd better be competitive," Krzyzewski said. "And that's what Christian is."

LSU's O'Neal makes it official: NBA is next stop

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — All-American center Shaquille O'Neal, saying he had as much fun as he could in college basketball, announced Friday he was leaving Louisiana State to enter the NBA draft.

With his family at his side, O'Neal, 20, said he would forgo his senior year of eligibility at LSU.

"I feel that in my heart it's time for a change and it's time for me to move on," O'Neal said. "I think the experience was very much needed, but now I'm ready to take what I have learned on with me to the NBA."

He said he would leave LSU next week, but intends to pursue his business administration degree during his off-seasons.

O'Neal revealed his plans in a news conference at Fort Sam Houston, the Army post where his father is stationed. He said he made the decision Sunday after talking it over with his family and LSU coach Dale Brown.

A few weeks ago, Brown reportedly advised O'Neal to turn pro because of what Brown perceived as the undue pounding O'Neal received from opposing teams, which often triple-teamed him. But Brown said he remained neutral during Sunday's meeting with O'Neal.

O'Neal said triple- and quadruple-teaming often prevented him from showing all his basketball talents, but he said that wasn't the main reason for his decision to turn pro.

"I'm not making this decision out of anger or frustration, but everyone who saw the SEC tournament, they know that an injustice was done," O'Neal said. "The main factor was if I go back to school next year, will I have fun? And this year, I didn't have that much fun.

"My Dad told me at a young age, if you're not having fun at what you're doing, it's time to do something else. And I made my decision."

During his junior season, O'Neal averaged 24.1 points, 14 rebounds and 5.2 blocked shots for the Tigers, who lost in the second round of the NCAA tournament to Indiana.

The 7-foot-1 O'Neal could be the first rookie to earn $5 million in his first season.

"I don't think about it," O'Neal said. "I'm just going to wait and see what happens."

He will disclose his agent's name next week.

O'Neal has high expectations for his NBA career, although at first he expects it to be a learning experience.

"If I don't dominate my first year, in my latter part of the NBA I will be a force to be reckoned with," he said. "I'm just going to go in and take things slow ... "

O'Neal said he also would leave open other basketball possibilities, including playing for a foreign team.

In the next couple of months, he said, he plans to attend a "big man's" basketball camp on the West Coast in addition to working out on his own.

O'Neal stressed his plan to complete his education at LSU.

beat Louisiana State, Florida State and UCLA, three very different style teams, on the way to coach Bob Knight's fifth Final Four, the last three all ending with national championships.

Now they get to face All-American Christian Laettner, the national player of the year who could present some matchup problems as a 6-foot-11 player who is comfortable inside and even as far as the 3-point line.

"They have faced some outstanding players during the season and in the tournament and have used the team concept of man-to-man defense to limit that player," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "They want to limit that player as the game progresses and we have to see how we adjust accordingly."

Laettner has become the center of attention this tournament for his late heroics and his familiar face. This is his fourth Final Four in as many years and he will become the first player to start in that many. As hot as Indiana has been so has Laettner.

He is shooting 63 percent from the field in the tournament, 50 percent from 3-point range. He is averaging 22 points and 7.5 rebounds and leads the team with 12 steals.

"Laettner is a bigger version of a player in our own conference, Jim Jackson," Knight said referring to the Ohio State All-American. "He is not as quick as Jackson, but he has the ability to pass, shoot and create for his team."

There's a lot to overshadow this game: Duke (32-2) trying to become the first team to defend its title since UCLA in 1973; Duke's fifth straight Final Four appearance and sixth in seven years; the meeting of Knight and Krzyzewski, teacher and student (although Krzyzewski has certainly earned his tenure as a basketball professor).

Whatever, it still comes down to Duke and Indiana, two teams which run the motion offense and rely almost solely on man-to-man defense.

FIVE: Winner cound turn out to be mere fodder like you guys early. You had no regard for the basketball.'

"In our first game we had 34 turnovers. He said, 'I like you now, because you prize that ball on each possession.' We're better at it. We're better at our decision-making as to how we handle pressure. We still turn it over some. Sometimes you wonder, how or why, but I think a lot of that is created by the defense we're going against.

"We've got smart kids. This is as smart a team as I've been associated with, in spite of the youthfulness on it."

For Cincinnati, which runs a perpetual-motion offense and exhausting trapping defense, the problem on occasion has been to keep up the intensity from start to finish. But the Bearcats seem to learn from their mistakes.

"We gave Michigan State 90 points the first time. We didn't give them 90 points the second time," Cincinnati coach Bob Huggins said, enjoying the memory of a 77-65 romp over the Spartans two weeks ago. In the second half of that game, Michigan State shot only 28 percent.

"We're much more solid defensively," Huggins said. "In the Indiana game (an 81-60 loss early in the season) we just didn't do a very good job on our half-court offense. Hopefully, our half-court offense has improved.

"If we don't have five guys out there playing hard and busting their tails all the time, we're not going to be very good defensively. We have to make too many rotations and we scramble too much for one guy to be out there not doing what he's supposed to do. On the offensive end, playing five-man open post, where everybody's going to get their hands on the ball a lot, you can't have selfish people."

The Bearcats have learned not to be selfish. The Wolverines have learned to control their exhuberance. Either one could be ready to grab the championship.

AP coach award goes to Williams of Kansas

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — When Kansas found itself without a head coach following its national championship season in 1988, athletic director Bob Frederick went after a high profile alumnus.

"I called Dean Smith and offered him the job," Frederick said Friday.

Smith had played under Phog Allen at Kansas. Maybe he'd like to return to Lawrence. Frederick took a shot.

"I knew he'd turn it down," Frederick said. "He said it would be hard for him to leave North Carolina after they named the arena for him."

So Smith stayed in the Dean Dome, suggesting instead another candidate for his Alma Mater. Roy Williams had been his assistant at North Carolina for 10 years. In each of the last four, there had been head coaching offers from places like Mississippi State and George Mason. He was ready.

"I always felt when the right job came along, it would have my name all over it," Williams said.

Kansas was the right job and Williams proved thet when he was named Associated Press Coach of the Year Friday in the closest balloting ever. Williams totaled 129 points, beating retiring UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian, who had 117. Duke's Mike Krzyzewski was third with 116.

Williams took Kansas to the national championship game last season and then, after losing three starters from that team, led the Jayhawks to the Big Eight championship with a 27-5 record, finishing No. 2 in the final regular season AP poll.

"The biggest thing about Roy is that he's highly organized and he works hard," Frederick said. "And he has a tremendous appreciation for the tradition of Kansas basketball."

Williams did not arrive at Lawrence at the very best time. "It didn't bother me that I had to replace Larry Brown, but more that I had to play without Danny Manning," he said.

Coach Brown and All-American Manning were both moving to the NBA, leaving behind a program that had come under NCAA scrutiny.

"I knew about the investigation," Williams said. "They showed me the paperwork. They felt the penalties would be minor and I agreed. It was bad calculation."

The Jayhawks went through a two-year probation. In the third year, Kansas was playing for the NCAA title. In four seasons, his teams have gone 103-30, making Williams the second head coach in history to win that many games that quickly. Only Everett Case got there faster.

"He's extremely organized, works unbelievably hard and is a student of the game," Frederick said. "He's driven to be successful."

It's too early to tell about NCAA women

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — They should call this Breakfast at the Final Four.

That's what it will feel like Saturday morning at the Los Angeles Sports Arena.

If the men's national championship in Mineapolis this weekend is college basketball's main course, then the women's tournament semifinals here must be a morning snack.

The first game, matching Southwest Missouri State (31-2) and Western Kentucky (26-7) is scheduled to begin at 9:32 a.m. Pacific time, 12:32 p.m. in the East, primarily to accommodate national television. The second game, between top-seeded Virginia (32-1) and Stanford (28-3), could begin before noon.

Even if the rest of the country will be awake, the players and the coaches might not be.

"I can't remember the last time I played that early in the morning," Renee Westmoreland, the Western Kentucky guard, said Friday. "Our coaches have been doing a good job getting us up earlier every day so that we're prepared. I'm usually a little groggy, but it's getting easier."

The starting times are clearly an issue, as well as the fact that Sunday's championship game does not allow teams a day to recover or prepare for the next opponent, a luxury the men receive. But the two issues are apparently not debatable.

CBS is televising the women's games as part of an agreement with the National Collegiate Athletic Association. The lucrative men's tournament is the drawing card; the women's games are just part of the package.

But although the women accept the fact that they must bow to televison's wishes if they hope for national exposure, they don't have to like it.

"It's way too early to play," Virginia Coach Debbie Ryan said. "From a coach's perspective, we can adjust. From a player's perspective, the early time doesn't give them the opportunity to put their best game on the court. We need to address that, and it needs to be done immediately."

The coaches are making adjustments, though. Some are rousing their players early each day they're here, some are following a schedule that keeps players on the time zone back home.

MC: Chaparral men open with Collin County at 8 a.m. today though it's doubtful she would've lost the match, Berthe stumbled her way through the first seven games of the opening set. Ranked atop the current JUCO singles standings, Berthe fell behind 5-2 before snapping out of it and winning the final five games of the first set, and sweeping the second set.

(From 1B)

Despite the shaky opening, Berthe managed to walk away with a 7-5, 6-0 win over Harriett Cotton, Temple's No. 1 player.

Boba Tzvetkova, MC's No. 3 singles player, also faltered a bit before putting away Temple's only sophomore player, Caroline Dunn, 6-0, 6-4.

The remaining Lady Chaps defeated their Temple counterparts in short order, with only one other Temple player winning as many as two games in a set.

The format the tournament is using calls for the end of a match after one team wins five matches. Tzvetkova's match was the final one completed after MC had already assured itself a win.

Williams said he would not tolerate it if the lapses in concentration from his players continued.

"I get nasty real quick," Williams said. "There'll be no falling off on my end until this sucker's over, I tell ya.

"Their attitude is that 'We won easy, it's no big deal,' ... the thing is you've got to be mentally prepared. You've got to show you're in it from beginning to end, not just when things get tough."

Temple coach Pam Lee said she felt lack of motivation at MC's No. 1 and No. 3 spots wasn't a factor.

"You wouldn't think so," she said. "Not in the first day of the tournament. There's nothing they can do about it (MC losing its tennis program). They still have a lot to prove out there."

Temple's program is not immune from the dwindling numbers in JUCO tennis. Lee said budgetary constraints have forced Temple to the Division II level next season.

MC's men drew a bye in the first round and will open play today at 8 a.m. against Collin County. A victory this morning would match the MC men against the winner of the McLennan-College of the Desert/New Mexico Military Institute today at 2 p.m.

The Lady Chaps continue play today at 8 a.m. against Tyler.

All MC matches will be held on the MC courts today.

INDY: Penske team sizzles

(From 1B)

February.

Fittipaldi, the former Indy-car and Formula One champion who began the season by winning on the street circuit at Australia's Surfers Paradise, easily was the fastest driver Friday with a lap of 169.436 mph in the second of the two practice sessions.

Mears, who finished second in Australia in another of the new Penske-Chevrolet-B race cars, was close behind at 168.824 — leading the morning practice — and 168.757 in the heat of the afternoon.

Those laps were well above the track record of 168.334, set last year by Mears, although records can be set only in qualifying and the race. Time trials for Sunday's 200-lap event are scheduled Saturday, with temperatures expected to be slightly higher than Friday's low 80s.

"Our straight-line speeds are better than last year's," Mears said. "And these (new) cars are more efficient. We aren't as quick as we were in (winter) testing, but the track doesn't have as much grip as in testing."

Fittipaldi's quick laps was clocked at 21.239 seconds.

Mears, who swept the pole positions in all five Indy-car oval events in 1991, said, "We ran some laps in the high 20s in testing and that shows the potential of the cars if we get ideal track conditions. But if the weather is as hot (Saturday) as it was today, we're probably going to see speeds that are pretty close to what we did today."

Fittipaldi said, "We changed the car a little bit and improved the balance after the morning, and we went out on new tires. The car just responded to the new balance.

"I'm very pleased to do that fast lap in the hot time of the day. It was really great."

The competitive Mears, grinning, countered, "No, it wasn't."

Longhorns get by Horned Frogs, 4-1

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas pitcher Jay Vaught scattered four hits and pitcher John Dickens gave up three to put Texas into high gear in a 4-1 victory over Texas Christian Friday night at Austin's Disch-Falk Field.

The Longhorns' Calvin Murray scored two runs and stole two bases to lead Texas to its 15th victory against four losses in Southwest Conference play. Texas' overall record improves to 28-8.

Texas pushed across two runs in the bottom of the third inning on a walk to Murray and a single by Charles Abernathy. Murray and Abernathy then executed a double steal, and Murray came home on a throwing error by Hornfrog catcher John Cardenas.

On the next pitch Abernathy stole third and came home on another Cardenas throwing error.

Texas Christian scored their lone run in the fifth inning on a Rick Hinojosa home run off of Vaught.

Losing pitcher Jon Mock gave up all four of the runs in seven innings.

Texas Christian falls to 16-18 overall and 7-12 in conference play.

Baylor 8, Rice 0

HOUSTON — Baylor's Brian Carpenter struck out seven and walked four, shutting out Rice on two hits.

Carpenter, now 6-2 for the season, allowed only two singles in the game. The Bears improved to 23-13 overall and 12-10 in the SWC, while Rice fell to 21-17 and 9-13.

Baylor was scheduled for a doubleheader with Rice at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The Bears scored first on Jahn Finke's single, Brian Black's sacrifice and Kevin Ellis' single to center. Baylor added seven runs in the ninth, three on Finke's second home run of the season.

James Madrid, 4-3, was saddled with the loss. He struck out eight and walked three before he was knocked out in the ninth.

Payne breaks Olson's Texas Relays vault mark

AUSTIN (AP) — Bill Payne, relishing the cool temperatures and light wind, broke Billy Olson's Texas Relays pole vault record Friday with an effort of 18 feet, 9½ inches.

Olson's record of 18-8¼ was established nine years ago.

Payne, a former star at Baylor, failed in three attempts at 19 feet. Payne went 19-2¾ last year in the Southwest Conference meet at Houston to set an American college record.

Texas Christian's "Flyin' Frogs," hoping to earn a second-consecutive most valuable team trophy, won the 800-meter relay on a strong third leg by Raymond Redmon and a stout anchor by Horatio Porter. The Frogs won in 1:21.76.

Florida won the distance medley relay with a clocking of 9:37.77 to 9:40.49 for Arizona and 9:40.76 for third-place Texas.

Louisiana State's Dawn Bowles set a Texas Relays and Memorial Stadium record in the collegiate women 100-meter hurdles qualifying with the fastest clocking in the world this year.

Bowles, a senior from Neptune, N.J., was timed in 12.92 in beating the Texas Relays record of 13.11 by Lynda Tolbert of Arizona State in 1988. It also eclipsed the Memorial Stadium record of 13.06 established by Benita Brown, also in 1988.

Bowles is ranked second in the United States behind Gail Devers-Roberts, who ran for UCLA. She holds the American record of 12.48 and the collegiate record of 12.61.

Bowles won the NCAA outdoor last year in 12.70.

Blinn set a national junior college record in the 3,200-meter relay, the team of Jimmy Pierre-Louis, Jean Destine, Cliff Beckford and Savieri Ngidhi tripping the timer in 7:19.24 to break a 10-year record of 7:22.62 posted by Mount San Antonio College.

It also beat the Texas Relays junior college record of 7:25.04 set in 1991 by South Plains.

John Nichols won his third Texas Relays discus title at 201 feet to beat teammate Simon Williams, who posted a 191-5.

Tyrone Scott of Texas earned his third relays triple jump crown with a leap of 54 feet, 4½ inches.

Renate Beunder of Texas-El Paso won the collegiate women's javelin with an effort of 170 feet, 8 inches. Valeri Tullock of Rice was second with 167 feet and Heather Berlin of Kansas took third with a throw of 166-1.

TCU also easily qualified in the 400-meter relay in a time of 39.63. The Horned Frogs have run a 39.41 this season.

Baylor, one of the top relays teams in the nation, was a qualifier in both the 800-meter and mile relays. Baylor ran a 1:22.56 in the former, 3:05.11 in the latter.

Baylor has won 65 of the last 68 mile relays it has entered.

Baylor ran without coach Clyde Hart, who left for Little Rock because of the death of his sister-in-law.

Deion Sanders has hairline fracture

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Outfielder Deion Sanders has a hairline fracture in his left foot, X-rays showed Friday.

Sanders was flown back to Atlanta, Dr. Joe Chandler, orthopedic surgeon for the Atlanta Braves, said. He also said Sanders should be able to play with the injury if he can stand the pain.

Sanders, who also plays for the NFL's Atlanta Falcons, was hurt on Wednesday against the New York Mets in Port St. Lucie. He jumped off the top step of the dugout and slipped, coming down hard on his left foot.

X-rays showed a hairline fracture in the fifth metatarsal, the bone that sits below the little toe.

"Deion feels he can play and that is not surprising with him," Braves general manager John Schuerholz said. "So nothing changes."

Chandler said Sanders told him he had played with worse pain.

Chi Chi passes Golden Bear at Tradition

Chi Chi Rodriguez does a little dance after making a birdie putt on the 17th hole of the Desert Mountain golf course Friday during the second round of The Tradition Senior PGA golf tournament.

By Mel Reisner
AP Sports Writer

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — If there's a runaway at The Tradition, it will have to come in the last two rounds.

Jack Nicklaus, who has won the $800,000 Senior PGA Tour tournament two straight years by coming from behind, shot a 7-under-par 65 in the first round and seemed poised for a stroll.

In Friday's second round, however, Chi Chi Rodriguez scored a 66 and took a one-shot lead with a 36-hole total of 9-under-par 135.

He started four shots behind Nicklaus and wound up one shot in front of Lee Trevino and two strokes ahead of the first-day leader, who had an even-par 72.

Homero Blancas, who matched Rodriguez's 66 for the best round of the day, and J.C. Snead were grouped with Nicklaus at 7-under 137.

Jim Albus, Dick Stockton and Mike Hill were on the next tier at 138, while Jim Ferree, Mike Joyce and Ben Smith were clustered at 139.

Ferree, 60, leads the Grand Tradition, a tournament within a tournament for senior players 60 and older. The $140,000 event, computed on the first three rounds of The Tradition, offers a $22,000 first prize which does not count in prize money of the main tournament.

There is no cut in The Tradition, which has an 81-player limit and a $120,000 purse for first place.

Rodriguez had eight birdies and two bogeys. He made four birdies and one bogey on each side of the 6,684-yard Cochise Course at Desert Mountain.

"The key was I hit my irons awfully good today, and I putted pretty good," said the 56-year-old Rodriguez, who ranks third on the money list with $156,131.

Trevino said the course, which Nicklaus designed and which fits Nicklaus' game of towering iron shots and long, accurate drives, was soft from days of frequently heavy rain.

"I always play wet golf courses good," he said. "We'll probably have a tougher time the next couple of days if it dries out more. But I like wet golf courses. I won my four major championships in the mud."

Trevino, who won the U.S. Open in 1966 and 1971, the British Open in 1971 and 1972, and the PGA in 1974 and 1984 among his 27 regular-tour titles, set a record for pro golf in 1990 when he won $1,190,518 on the senior tour, with seven titles.

His earnings slipped to $723,163 last year, but he leads the current money list with $177,229.

He struggled throughout the day, missing putts of 6 and 15 feet for par on the first two holes to go 3-under. Trevino got his first birdie on No. 5 when he hit a pitching wedge within 18 feet and sank the putt, then finished the front nine par-bogey-birdie-par.

Trevino birdied the first three holes after the turn and two-putted the last hole for birdie after reaching the fringe with a 5-wood.

Nicklaus said his putting touch left him after his sensational opening round, but added he was satisfied with the rest of his game.

"I was just surprised it didn't continue," Nicklaus said. "I was putting very well in practice, and I thought it would carry over."

NHL strike headed into second week

Associated Press

TORONTO — The NHL strike went into its third day on Friday, leaving little hope of salvaging the remaining 19 games in the regular season.

With no bargaining sessions planned, and the league's board of governors scheduled to meet in New York on Monday, it appeared the strike would continue into next week.

Another meeting was scheduled for Friday night in Toronto between NHL president John Ziegler and Bob Goodenow, executive director of the NHL Players Association. An NHLPA spokesman said the union would present a new proposal at that time for Ziegler to take to the board of governors meeting.

Counting Friday night's two scheduled games, 11 games had been called off since the start of the players' strike on Wednesday.

There were nine games scheduled Saturday night and 10 more for Sunday, when the regular season is scheduled to end.

The Stanley Cup playoffs are scheduled to start on Wednesday, two days after the board meets in New York.

Earlier in the day, an NHLPA spokesman said that Goodenow had received a consensus agreement on the new proposal from the player representatives during a conference call.

"The players are pretty excited about it," NHLPA spokesman Nigel Miller said. "They think it's got to fly."

Ziegler and Goodenow met for much of Thursday at a midtown Toronto hotel.

It still wasn't clear at what point the playoffs will be in jeopardy. Four teams are still in contention for two playoff spots, and the final standings will also determine home-ice advantage for the playoffs as well as positions in the June entry draft.

Monday's board of governors' meeting was seen as the next key in the strike.

The owners can either accept the players' latest proposals, or decide to return to the bargaining table with a new offer.

The owners are dealing in a matter of financial urgency. They have no strike insurance and a loss of playoff money would deal a staggering blow to some teams.

Beck snaps record en route to sizable advantage

PGA

NEW ORLEANS — Chip Beck set a two-round tournament record and grabbed a four-shot lead by shooting a 65 Friday in the second round of the $1 million Freeport McMoRan Golf Classic.

Beck's 36-hole total was 132 and broke the record of 135 set in 1989 by Dan Forsman and Tim Simpson. His 65 was one off the course record of 64 set by Joel Edwards last year.

Brad Bryant, who shot a 69 Friday, was at 136, and Jeff Maggert was at 137 after rounds of 68 and 69 over the 7,116-yard course at English Turn.

Beck said a miserable round in The Players Championship last week helped him to his outstanding performance at English Turn.

"I shot 81 last Saturday," he said. "That taught me a lot. It was tough on me. It seasoned me.

"Because I shot it last week, it will help me be stronger. I can accept whatever happens tomorrow."

Beck has been among the top 20 money winners on the tour since 1987, and his best year was in 1988, when he finished second in earnings and won at New Orleans and at Los Angeles.

His best finishes this year were second at the Buick Invitational and ninth at Pebble Beach in February. Last October, Beck shot at 59 in the Las Vegas Inviational, only the second sub-60 round in tour history.

Ian Woosnam, defending champion at New Orleans and the Masters, was at 143, in an 18-way tie, including Nick Faldo and Phil Blackmar.

Seve Ballesteros, tied with Beck and Bryant after Thursday, shot 73 on Friday and fell into a tie with Tom Kite and five others at 140. Jay Haas, another first-round leader, shot 72 and wound up in an eight-way tie at 139.

Greg Norman was tied with three others at 138.

Norman lost a stroke to par over his first nine holes, then shot five birdies over his second nine for a 68. Norman predicted his winless streak, extending back almost two years, won't last long.

"I feel pretty good about it. I'm happy about the way my game is coming around," he said.

He said he is having no trouble from knee surgery five weeks ago. "I wanted to get back in shape, and if you want it bad enough, it will come around," he said.

He spent three hours practicing after his round Friday.

"If you want to stay on top, you have to work hard at it — be willing to stay out here another three hours," he said.

Bryant, who has never won a tournament in 14 years on the tour, went Norman a step further. He has never been on top and wants to get there.

"I've worked really hard the last eight days. Lots and lots of practice balls, just the basics of making a good weight transfer," he said.

"The past couple of weeks, I've played like a dog. Yesterday and today, I've played well."

Two tied for Vegas lead

LPGA

LAS VEGAS — Florence Descampe of Belgium and Michelle McGann took advantage of calm conditions and greens softened by several days of rain to shoot 5-under-par 67s Friday and share the first-round lead in the Las Vegas LPGA International.

Trailing by a shot was Chris Johnson at 68, followed by Nancy Lopez, Beth Daniel, Jane Geddes, Judy Dickinson and Jill Briles-Hinton at 69.

Descampe, who had a limited amateur career prior to turning professional last October, eagled the 15th hole after putting a 3-iron approach 30 feet from the flagstick. The eagle came just after a bogey at 14 when she hit her tee shot under a tree in the left rough.

"This course is tough. You need to do everything well because if you miss your drive, it costs you," Descampe said. "I missed only one drive and it cost me a bogey, but this is a very good course. It's not easy because the fairways are tight, but when you're driving straight and hitting it 250 yards it makes it easier."

Descampe, 22, started on the back nine and birdied her first two holes with 10-foot putts before the bogey and eagle at 14 and 15. She also birdied the first two holes after the turn with a sand save and 30-foot putt.

"I'm happy that this is my first tournament with a good first round," she said. "I've been shooting 73 in the first round."

McGann matched Descampe's 5-under effort with six birdies against a lone bogey, that a three-putt on the third hole.

Pats face lawsuit

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Another sexual harassment charge involving the New England Patriots was filed Friday in a $6 million lawsuit brought by a former employee of the NFL team.

Carolyn Palla, 28, of Providence, alleges she was harassed by Patriots vice president of administration Patrick Forte and the Patriots didn't do anything about it. Her claims were made in the lawsuit in U.S. District Court.

During the 1990 season, Boston Herald sports writer Lisa Olson filed a lawsuit charging that she was sexually harassed by several players while attempting to do interviews in the locker room.

Blyleven leads Angels

MESA, Ariz. — Former major league pitcher Bert Blyleven, who hasn't pitched in the minor leagues since 1970, led the Midland Angels to a 10-2 defeat of Charlotte Thursday at Gene Autry Park in Mesa, Ariz.

Blyleven, who is attempting a return to the major leagues after surgery last year to repair a torn rotator cuff, threw a three-hitter and allowed no runs in five innings for the win.

Angel prospect Jeff Kipila went 3-for-4 with a double, home run and three runs batted in, and John Jackson, who doubles as an NFL Phoenix Cardinal, was 3-for-5.

The Angels, who return to Midland on April 9 for a "Meet The Team Barbeque," are now 11-4-1 in the Cactus League.

Charlotte is the Chicago Cubs' Class AA affiliate.

MHS linksters hang tight in second place

ABILENE — Midland High continued to cling to strong hopes of overtaking the top of the leader board Friday after a strong second round showing at the Abilene stop of the District 4-5A boys golf tournament Friday.

MHS shot a 304 Friday and after the second round, trail district front-running Abilene High by two strokes. AHS is in with a 621 midway through the tour; MHS has a 623 with the third round of the tournament coming to Midland Country Club next Friday.

MHS was led by Josh Ham, whose 82-73—155 has him tied for fifth medalist at the halfway point. Abilene High's Jody Crowe is atop the individual race with a two-round total 146. Second-medalist Chad Wellhousen, of San Angelo, recovered from an opening week 83 on his home course to shoot a 69 at Abilene Country Club.

San Angelo, the leader after Week I, dropped to third after shooting a second-round 309 for a two-round total of 625, just one stroke shy of MHS.

Midland Lee continued to struggle, shooting a second-round 315 for a 651 team total. The Rebels are in sixth place, but only 30 strokes off the pace of leading AHS.

Bullets bomb Pistons; Bucks woeful on road

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

LANDOVER, Md. — Ledell Eackles scored 29 points and Michael Adams had 21 as Washington posted its most lopsided victory of the season, a 119-85 over Detroit on Friday night.

Harvey Grant added 22 for the Bullets, who played their third straight game without Pervis Ellison, the team's leading scoring and rebounding. Ellison is sidelined with a groin injury.

The Bullets, whose biggest victory margin had been 16 points, jumped to a 15-4 lead in the first quarter. All their points during the spurt came from Grant, Adams and Eackles.

The Pistons closed to 23-17, but the Bullets finished the first quarter with a 10-2 run that included a pair of 3-pointers by Adams, who finished the period with 17 points.

Eackles took over the scoring load in the second period. He scored 13 points in the quarter as Washington opened up a 60-39 halftime lead.

Detroit shot only 33 percent in the first half, with starting guards Isiah Thomas and Joe Dumars making only 3 of 16 from the field.

Washington shot 63 percent in the first half. Eackles was 9 for 12, while Adams, who sat out the entire second quarter, was 6 for 10.

Grant, who had eight points at halftime, got 14 in the third period as the Bullets increased their lead to 32 points.

Dennis Rodman led the Pistons with 13 points and 10 rebounds.

Nets 122, Bucks 103

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Drazen Petrovic scored 26 points and the New Jersey Nets used a third-period surge to hand the Milwaukee Bucks their 22nd straight road loss.

The victory was the third straight and seventh in 11 games for the Nets. More importantly, it them a game ahead of Miami — which lost to Cleveland 103-100 — in the battle for the eighth and final playoff berth in the Eastern Conference.

The win also allowed New Jersey to sweep the four-game season-series from the Bucks, who have lost a season-high seven in a row and seen their playoff hopes all but disappear.

Mookie Blaylock added 21 points and 10 assists for the Nets, who outscored the Bucks 36-12 in the third quarter. Alvin Robertson topped Milwaukee with 23 points, 15 in the first quarter.

Cavaliers 103, Heat 100

MIAMI — Cleveland survived a flurry of 3-point tries by the Miami Heat in the final 20 seconds.

On Miami's final possession, Glen Rice missed three 3-point attempts, Grant Long missed an inside shot, and each time the Heat grabbed the rebound. Steve Smith finally scored from 3-point range, but that shot came after the buzzer.

Mark Price led Cleveland with 21 points and 11 assists, but the NBA's leading free-throw shooter (95 percent) missed one of two free throws with 23.6 seconds left to set up the frantic finish.

Miami lost its third game in a row and fell one game behind New Jersey in the race for the eighth and final playoff berth in the Eastern Conference. The Nets beat Milwaukee 122-103.

Cleveland, which has the second-best record in the East, has won 13 of its past 15 games.

The Cavaliers led by as many as 15 points in the second half, but three 3-point baskets by Smith helped Miami climb back into contention.

Knicks 115, Hawks 94

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing scored 19 of his 29 points in the first quarter and New York subdued Atlanta with nine first-half three-point plays and 3-point goals.

Ewing had three three-point plays and made eight of 11 shots in the first period as the Knicks overcame a 9-0 run by the Hawks to lead 35-27.

New York, which won for the ninth time in 10 games, extended the margin to 68-48 at halftime. John Starks hit three 3-pointers and scored 11 points in the first six minutes of the second period. The Knicks had five three-point plays and four 3-point goals in the first half.

Alexander Volkov scored 21 points and Rumeal Robinson 17 for the Hawks. Anthony Mason finished with 17 and Greg Anthony 14 for New York.

Magic 113, Spurs 106 OT

SAN ANTONIO — Anthony Bowie scored 24 points and Orlando made nine of 10 free throws in overtime as the Magic beat San Antonio.

Antoine Carr led the Spurs with 30 points, 10 rebounds and five blocks, while Terry Cummings added 24 points and 24 rebounds.

Scott Skiles had 22 points and 12 assists for the Magic.

Brian Williams and Bowie each hit two free throws to give Orlando a 106-100 lead with 1:13 left in overtime. After a basket by Carr, Orlando scored the next five points from the foul line to put the Magic ahead 111-102.

Orlando led 95-91 with 1:29 left in regulation after a three-point play by Skiles. Following a Cummings' jumper, Skiles made a 3-pointer to give the Magic a five-point lead with 1:01 left.

Timberwolves 104, Mavs 95

DALLAS — Pooh Richardson scored 22 points, including two key free throws with 23.7 seconds to play, giving Minnesota a victory over Dallas.

Thurl Bailey added 19 points as the Timberwolves registered their sixth road victory of the season.

Dallas, which had a two-game winning streak and was seeking to match its longest of the season, was paced by Herb Williams' 26 points and Derek Harper's 22.

The Mavericks had dropped 15 straight before the two-game win streak.

Dallas came back from a 10-point, third-quarter deficit, pulling even at 93-93 on Doug Smith's two free throws with 3:28 to play.

Gerald Glass converted a free throw and Doug West hit a basket with 2:35 to play to give the Timberwolves the lead for good.

Dallas had turnovers on consecutive possessions and Sam Mitchell hit two free throws with 1:50 to play to expand Minnesota's lead to 98-93.

The Mavericks pulled to within 98-95 on two Williams free throws and had an opportunity to move to within two but Dallas missed four shots on its next possession and Richardson converted a pair of free throws on the other end with 23.7 seconds left to decide it.

Pacers 101, Celtics 97

INDIANAPOLIS — Detlef Schrempf had 22 points and 18 rebounds, and the Indiana Pacers held off a late Boston rally to snap the Celtics' seven-game winning streak.

It was Indiana's sixth consecutive victory over Boston at Market Square Arena. Reggie Lewis led Boston with 22 points.

Indiana led 93-77 with 7:39 left, but Boston went on an 18-1 run to take a 95-94 lead with 55 seconds remaining. Schrempf answered with Indiana's first field goal in nearly 7 minutes, a 12-foot jumper with 40 seconds left, and added a pair of free throws with 21 seconds to go.

Boston's Dee Brown was then called for a traveling violation and Indiana's Micheal Williams made two free throws with 18.2 seconds remaining.

Bulls 114, Clippers 103

CHICAGO — Scottie Pippen scored 24 points as Chicago tied a franchise victory record.

The Bulls have a 61-13 record, tying the record for most victories in a season which they set last year. Chicago has eight games remaining.

It was Chicago's fifth consecutive victory and 13th in 14 games.

Chicago put the game away in the fourth quarter when B.J. Armstrong, who had 20 points, scored nine in a row midway through the period to give Chicago a 102-87 lead. Armstrong had 12 points in the fourth quarter.

Los Angeles got no closer than eight points after that.

Bulls coach Phil Jackson substituted freely throughout the contest.

Michael Jordan, who leads the league in scoring at 30 points a game, had 15 and Bill Cartwright added 14.

Spurs' owner puts team up as collateral

DALLAS (AP) — San Antonio Spurs owner Red McCombs is using his basketball team as collateral to try to secure a $48 million loan from a Dallas businessman, according to published reports.

The Dallas Morning News and San Antonio Express-News have reported McCombs is negotiating for the loan with Perry E. "Bill" Esping, president and chief executive officer of Business Records Corp.

Spurs president Gary Woods said the loan has been approved by the NBA but has not been finished. It would involve refinancing existing debt, he said.

"But really, it's better not to comment at all because it hasn't been completed. You can get approval at one stage, but, until it's signed, it's nothing," Woods told the Express-News in Friday's editions.

The deal has been discussed for several weeks and could be completed next week, Woods said.

It is not unusual for an NBA owner to use a club as collateral, and the vast majority of NBA owners use their franchises to acquire loans and to finance other interests.

An NBA official did not immediately return telephone calls Friday from The Associated Press.

The loan reportedly would be a five-year note.

McCombs became full owner of the Spurs in May 1988. The $48 million figure is based on a $100 million franchise valuation, the Express-News reported.

Sources told the Express-News that Esping would have the right of first refusal to buy the Spurs should McCombs decide to sell the team.

Esping reportedly would be allowed to acquire 2 percent interest in the Spurs each year of the five-year note.

MORE "WOMENS LIB" IN THE BIBLE!

THE MAIDEN WHO KILLED A GENERAL....

ALTHOUGH WOMEN, IN BIBLICAL TIMES, WERE TREATED AS CHATTELS OF THEIR HUSBANDS—OWNED OUTRIGHT JUST LIKE SHEEP, CAMELS, AND OTHER PROPERTY—MANY TIMES THEY ACTED INDEPENDENTLY, LIKE DEBORAH, QUEEN ESTHER, AND MOSES' SISTER, MIRIAM. SUCH A ONE, ALSO, WAS JUDITH, HEROINE OF THE BOOK OF JUDITH, ONE OF THE APOCRYPHAL BOOKS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

THE ASSYRIAN GENERAL, HOLOFERNES, ATTACKED THE JEWS, BESIEGING THE TOWN OF BETHULIA, WHERE THE PEOPLE DESPAIRED OF EVER BEING SAVED. JUDITH TOOK IT UPON HERSELF TO VISIT HOLOFERNES IN HIS CAMP, WHERE HE WAS IMMEDIATELY SMITTEN WITH HER BEAUTY! AFTER ENTERTAINING HIM FOR THREE DAYS AND NIGHTS IN HIS TENT, JUDITH, AT THE FIRST OPPORTUNITY, CUT OFF THE GENERAL'S HEAD AS HE SLEPT!

AS A RESULT, THE ASSYRIANS FLED—CUSTOMARY IN THOSE DAYS, WHEN AN ARMY LOST ITS LEADER—AND JUDITH WAS PROCLAIMED, FROM THAT DAY ON, THE FINEST EXAMPLE OF A PATRIOT BY THE ENTIRE JEWISH NATION.

NEXT WEEK: WHEN THE BIBLE HELPED WIN A MODERN WAR CAMPAIGN!

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Methodist women meet

United Methodist women from across Texas are to gather in Dallas next week to study ways to help needy people in their communities.

The Texans are to join nearly 800 women from seven other states at a quadrennial assembly for representatives of local United Methodist missions auxilaries. The meeting runs April 3-5 at the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas.

Anne Todd of Dallas is United Methodist Women president for the North Texas Annual Conference. The North Texas women are hosts for the meeting.

For more information please contact (214) 630-6495.

■ Singers visit Sea World

SAN ANTONIO — Two of today's hottest Christian music stars, the group Petra and vocalist Curtis Chapman, will appear in concert at Sea World of Texas Saturday, April 4, during the San Antonio marine life park's "Christian Family Day" celebration.

Chapman

Chapman will perform for Sea World guests at 3 p.m., followed by Petra at 4:30 p.m. Both shows will take place at Sea World's spacious outdoor concert area, the acre-large U.S. Map.

All Sea World concerts are included in the regular price of admission to the park along with more than 25 shows, exhibits and attractions. However, seating is limited and offered in a first-come, first-served basis. Sea World is open weekends and some holidays in the spring (through May) and daily in the summer beginning May 1.

For information on advanced ticket sales call J.J. Ministries at (512) 490-5996.

■ Church plans study

Calvary Baptist Church cordially invites the public to attend a special informal study that will begin Wednesday, April 8 at 12:00 noon. The subject covered will be "How to make peace with your past." The church is located at 1001 South Main Street.

■ Prison program planned

Friday at 7 p.m. Liberty Prison Ministry will present a program at Cottonflat Baptist Church (4.5 miles South of Midland on Rankin Hwy.). The group is from Tulsa, Okla., and will share their stories and music. The ministry is sponsored by Carman Ministries.

Evelyn Cascone began the ministry years ago after she was a crime victim. She realized there was a special need for this type of ministry.

Everyone is welcome and admission is free. If you have any questions call 683-0008.

■ Rev. Hamp to speak

The Rev. Gary Hamp will be the final speaker in the Lenten Soup Supper series of talks on April 8 at St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church, 2900 Princeton.

Hamp

Hamp will talk on "Maintaining the Life of the Body through Prayer,"

The soup supper starts at 6 p.m.; the presentation will be at 6:30 p.m. Cost of the supper is $1 per person.

The public is invited. A nursery and study hall are provided.

■ Church sets child class

"Raising Image Bearers" - A Biblical view of child training, a four part child training seminar beginning April 5 at 5 p.m. The final three sessions will be April 12, 26, and May 3rd, all at 5 p.m. at Mid-Cities Community Church.

■ Lent concert scheduled

The Lunch Hour Music for Lent concerts will continue this Wed., April 8, at First Presbyterian Church. This concert week features Music for Handbells and Organ. The Agape Ringers Handbell Choir from First Presbyterian Church will be performing. Lester Ackerman is director and Rebecca Sawyer, organist.

The program will include: "Jubilee Concertante" by Karen Buckwalter, "Crown Him with Many Crowns" arr. by Linda McKechnie, "Way Out West" by Margaret Tucker, "Meditation on Morecambe" by Phyllis Treby Hentz, and "Hymn to Joy" arr. by Michael Keller.

The concert will begin at 12:05 and will be a half-hour in duration. Lunch is available for a nominal cost one half-hour before and after the concert. The church is located in downtown Midland at "A" Street and Texas Avenue. Ample parking is provided and child care is available. Call 683-9589 for the nursery coordinator.

The concert is free and open to the public.

■ Parenting course slated

The Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland will present a course for parents entitled "How to Talk so Kids Will Listen and Listen so Kids Will Talk."

Leading the course is Marion Kimberly, licensed professional counselor.

The four week course will take place on four successive Mondays, beginnings April 6, 7:00-8:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Universalist Church located on the corner of Midkiff and Neely Streets.

Registration for this course is through the church office at 694-4308. The public is invited to attend. Child care will be provided.

■ Charity program set

Sunday at 9:45 a.m., the Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland will present a program entitled: "The Golden Ladder of Charity." Writings by Moses ben Maimon (Maimonides) (1135-1204) will be utilized to explore the meaning of charity in our world today. This will be an interactive program structured around small discussion groups.

The public is invited to attend.

■ Students plan service

Students from McMurry University in Abilene will lead theworship at First United Methodist Church, with an appearnce by the McMurry Chanters Sunday at 8:30 a.m. and 10:35 a.m. The chanters are the direction of Dr. John Peed.

The McMurry Chanters, because of their travel schedule, will be singing only at the 10:35 service. The community is cordially invited to attend. The church is located at the corner of Main and Ohio in Downtown Midland.

■ Artist to lead worship

Chalk artist, evangelist and singer Janet Pontious will be at Living Way Church on Wednesday, April 8 at 7 p.m. Ms. Pontious holds degrees from Art Institution, Inc. in Minneapolis, Minn.; Southern California College is Costa Mesa, Calif.,; and L.I.F.E. Bible College in Los Angeles.

Pontious

Missions expert leaves Southern Baptist board

NEW YORK (AP) — A top American expert on Christian missions overseas, the Rev. R. Keith Parks, is quitting as president of the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board, blaming pressures on him for tighter doctrinal control of work abroad.

"It will greatly hamper our mission work, as I see it," he said.

He said it's important in mission work to allow indigenous peoples to "express convictions in their own way, culture and language," but board trustees wanted "more rigid control of theology and the way it is expressed."

Parks, who oversees a worldwide corps of 3,900 missionaries — doctors, nurses, farming specialists, technicians, ministers and teachers — said March 20 he was stepping down, citing "philosophical differences" with trustees.

They're aligned with a fundamentalist wing that has gained control of the 15 million-member denomination, the country's largest Protestant body.

"The main thing they find wrong with me is that I have not joined their political group that has taken over our convention," he said in a telephone interview from the board's Richmond, Va., headquarters.

"They wanted me to adapt to the new order," he added.

He said "many of us are equally conservative in theology, but do not support the political takeover and control being exerted in the denomination" by which "people who don't agree are excluded ... from key roles."

The widely respected Parks is among the most prominent of several heads of denominational agencies, and numerous professors, who have left their posts or been ousted as reins were tightened on biblical interpretation.

Biblical fundamentalists or "inerrantists," hold that the Bible is without error historically, scientifically and religiously. They also prescribe new "parameters of belief," such as that Adam and Eve were real persons, that named authors of biblical books wrote them and that all recounted miracles were factual happenings.

Parks, a veteran of 38 years of missions work, has for 12 years headed the denomination's vast missionary network spread in 122 countries, one of the world's largest, with an annual budget of $185 million.

His decision to resign, as of next October, came after two days of closed-door meetings with trustees, and both sides said he had not been pressured to leave.

Japan fumes over U.S. announcement of aid to Russia

N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — Showing some irritation toward Washington, Japanese officials said Friday that it was "inappropriate" and "premature" for President Bush to announce a $24 billion aid package for Russia without having worked out details with Japan.

Several officials who insisted on anonymity said they assumed that Bush had rushed into the announcement this week because of pressure from critics, including former President Richard M. Nixon and Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, the frontrunner for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa and other officials said Japan is prepared to join international efforts to stabilize Russia's currency and help it meet its balance-of-payments deficit.

But in a careful qualification, officials also said Japan is not yet prepared to do more.

"As far as our government knows, there has been no agreement on this package," said a policy-maker involved in aid to Russia, referring to the package announced by Bush and by German Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Wednesday.

"These figures are extremely new to us," he added. "It was inappropriate to announce them."

Miyazawa told reporters that Japan "will of course cooperate" with the effort to stabilize the ruble carried out by the International Monetary Fund, an effort estimated as representing $6 billion of the package. Press reports in Tokyo say Japan's portion of this may be about $1 billion.

But there was confusion in Tokyo on exactly what else Bush's package entailed, mirroring what appeared to be confusion and contradictions in Washington.

Officials said they did not know what in the announcement was new, and what was a restatement of previous commitments of aid.

An official also said that there was concern about too much being announced on rescheduling Russian debts before Moscow had a chance to show it was prepared for austerity programs.

It was also not clear whether the Bush-Kohl package includes the $2.5 billion in export credits and insurance announced by Tokyo last year — none of which has been disbursed because arrangements are still being negotiated.

In any case, officials said Tokyo cannot consider increasing that $2.5 billion until there is greater progress on resolving a territorial dispute with Moscow.

Among the major industrialized nations, Japan has always been the most cautious in its attitude toward aid to Russia because of the longstanding dispute over a group of islands in the Kurile chain north of the Japanese archipelago seized by the Soviet Union at the end of World War II.

The dispute has long obstructed conclusion of a peace treaty with the Soviet Union after World War II, and it is holding up a peace treaty with Russia at present.

Indeed, many Japanese officials fear that Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin and other Russian leaders may be even less flexible about turning over the islands than their predecessors.

Yeltsin is scheduled to visit Japan in September, and talks in preparation for his visit have not resulted in any progress on the dispute.

According to reports in Washington, the $24 billion figure announced by Bush and Kohl included perhaps $11 billion in new cash outlays, which Japanese officials reject if the plan involves aid going directly from Japan to Russia, rather than passing through a multilateral agency.

A senior official said Japan would take a "two-track approach," supporting the IMF and other balance-of-payment efforts, but not promising assistance directly from Japan.

China's Congress warns against 'leftism' trends

N.Y. Times News Service

BEIJING — The National People's Congress concluded its annual session Friday with a call to guard against the "leftism" of hard-liners, in another sign that Deng Xiaoping and his allies are gaining ground in their drive to step up the pace of economic change.

The rubber-stamp legislature, in an implicit reproach of Prime Minister Li Peng, amended the Government Work Report he delivered two weeks ago. The amendments strengthened the calls for rapid economic growth and added a warning about the "leftism" that is widely associated with hard-liners like Li.

"To accelerate the reform and opening to the outside, it is crucial for cadres at all levels to further enhance their consciousness of implementing the party's basic line and guard against 'leftist deviations' while watching out for 'rightist deviations,'" the amendment said.

Leftism is a code word for neo-Maoist efforts to emphasize ideology, central planning and traditional communism, while rightism refers to leanings toward democracy and capitalism.

Since January, Deng, who at age 87 holds no formal position but remains China's most powerful leader, has masterminded a major campaign for bolder steps to increase economic growth. He and his allies have used the Congress and the official press to spread their message and isolate the hard-liners.

But many young Chinese still seem delighted that the hard-liners are in trouble, and they hope that a result will be a series of moves that could make a real difference: fewer political indoctrination sessions, a diminished role for Communist Party cadres in factories and offices, newspapers and television programs that are less doctrinal and more entertaining, encouragement for political exiles to return to China, and a relaxation of restrictions on contacts with foreigners.

The changes in the work report suggested some of the aims that Deng may have in mind. The amendments praised stock markets and the private sector, said that markets could be used in socialism as well as capitalism, and hinted that the economy could grow more quickly than the 6 percent annual rate that Li had proposed for this year.

Lenin statue moved

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A statue of Soviet founder Vladimir Lenin, the object of countless protests in the southern steel-making community of Nowa Huta, was loaded Friday onto a truck for Sweden, the PAP news agency reported.

The 5-ton monument will be retired to a private museum, whose owner hopes the statue and a fragment of the Berlin Wall will become tourist attractions.

The Krakow city council sold the statue for about $16,000. Proceeds are to be used to erect a new monument to the defense of Polish freedom.

The statue was once dynamited and partly destroyed by an anti-Communist protester. It was taken down in December 1989 and had been in storage.

Yeltsin continues cabinet shuffle for critics

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — President Boris N. Yeltsin dropped another top adviser from a key government post Friday, continuing a Cabinet shuffle intended to mollify critics at next week's session of the Russian Congress of People's Deputies.

Gennadi Burbulis, a close aide who managed Yeltsin's presidential campaign a year ago, will leave his post as first deputy premier as of April 14, but will keep his other job as state secretary in the Yeltsin administration, according to a presidential decree issued Friday.

Burbulis is certain to remain a powerful voice in the government, with a job that virtually oversees the administration of executive power in foreign affairs, internal security and other key areas.

In an interview with the newspaper Rabochaya Tribuna on Friday morning, Aleksei Ulyukayev, a top government aide, anticipated Burbulis' dismissal as first deputy premier.

He saw it as a "formal compromise" by the president to fend off those critics who have been quick to attack his top aides, but are reluctant to challenge Yeltsin, still a popular politician who is acting as his own Prime Minister.

Like the dismissal Thursday of Deputy Premier Yegor T. Gaidar from his second job as minister of finance, the move was widely seen as a tactical maneuver made in anticipation of attacks on the government's economic policies from delegates to the Congress, the country's highest legislative body.

But observers Friday concluded that Yeltsin has no intention of backing away from the course of economic reform set by Gaidar and his team of young economic advisers.

While preparations continue for the nine-day session of the Congress, Yeltsin warned that Russia would move to take jurisdiction of the disputed Black Sea Fleet if any attempts were made to change its current status as the property of the Commonwealth of Independent States.

Yeltsin's statement was viewed in large part as a demonstration of Russian patriotism before the critical Congress. But it also signaled a toughening of Moscow's stance in the quickening feud with Ukraine over the future of the Black Sea Fleet.

Earlier this week, President Leonid M. Kravchuk insisted that any division of the fleet, the smallest of the former Soviet navy's four principal fleets, would be decided in the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, and not by "what the admirals deem necessary to allocate."

Friday, a spokesman for Kravchuk dismissed Yeltsin's threat as a manifestation of "archaic imperialist thinking."

In the meantime, the Russian vice president, Aleksandr V. Rutskoi, an air force general, Friday flew to Sevastopol, a navy town on the Crimean peninsula where the fleet is based, saying to reporters as he left that he wants to find out for himself how Ukraine plans to "privatize" the Black Sea Fleet.

A fleet spokesman said Friday that the latest confrontation — one in a series that have erupted since the break-up of the Soviet Union — may set the stage for another round of negotiations.

Kravchuk's top military adviser, Lt. Gen. Boris I. Sharikov, is now in Sevastopol, as is Adm. Vladimir N. Chernavin, head of the Commonwealth navy, according to a spokesman for the fleet's press center.

"Probably there will be negotiations again, but on what level, we don't know," said Vladimir A. Kosheyev. "There should be negotiations on the level of the presidents themselves."

Yeltsin, in his statement, said Friday that Russia's move to take over the fleet would be temporary.

Fresh fighting in Moldova leaves five people dead

KISHINEV, Moldova (AP) — Five people were killed Friday in a fresh wave of violence between Moldovan police and Slav separatists in the breakaway Trans-Dniester region of eastern Moldova, officials said.

Thursday, Moldovan leaders and Slavic separatists forged a cease-fire and started peace talks after more than a month of fighting in the region. About 50 people have died in the last month.

The self-proclaimed Trans-Dniester Republic is populated mainly by ethnic Russians and Ukrainians. They fear Moldova will unite with Romania, which controlled all of the republic except Trans-Dniester until World War II.

Friday, Moldovan deputy premier Konstantin Oborok told a news conference that four Moldovan policemen and one civilian were killed when separatist Slavs opened fire on a Moldovan police car.

Oborok said the incident occurred in a suburb of the factory town of Bendery, 32 miles from the Moldovan capital of Kishinev.

Also Friday, President Mircea Snegur announced that he has blocked Commonwealth TV broadcasts into his republic because of what he called "misinformation" about the ethnic fighting, the Interfax news agency said.

It did not say how Snegur was blocking the broadcasts.

Also, four-nation peace talks — scheduled for Friday — between foreign ministers from Russia, Ukraine, Moldova and Romania were postponed until Monday with no explanation.

In Moscow, the Russian parliament adopted a resolution endorsing a peaceful solution. It said the conflict must be settled in accordance with the United Nations charter and international human rights agreements.

Environmental summit negotiations collapse over costs

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — More than two years of negotiations on a U.N. summit to address the world environmental crisis collapsed Friday over the issue of who would pay for cleanup work, the chief U.S. negotiator said.

"We've lost a great opportunity," said Assistant Secretary of State Curtis Bohlen in an interview. He said the summit would be held in Rio de Janeiro in June as planned, but negotiators now would arrive without the preliminary agreements they had sought.

"It's a great disappointment to many of us that we could not agree on finances," he said.

U.N. officials have estimated that developing countries will need $125 billion from wealthy countries to begin cleaning up their environment and instituting more environmentally sensitive development programs.

Maurice Strong, who will be secretary-general of the summit, offered a more optimistic assessment than Bohlen's.

"Governments don't like to take their final positions until they are in the final stages of negotiations," he told a news conference.

Negotiators continued meeting Friday night to see if any agreements could be salvaged.

Bohlen said that delegates abandoned a draft statement of principles for the conservation and management of the world's forests after Malaysia blocked all compromises. "Here we took a giant step backward," he said.

Earlier this week, environmentalists criticized Malaysia for arresting more than 400 forest dwellers who were trying to blockade logging trucks in a Malaysian forest undergoing the fastest rate of deforestation in the world.

The Earth Summit, otherwise known as the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, or UNCED, was conceived in 1989 to mark a new global commitment to environmental management and sustainable use of the Earth's resources.

Some 60 heads of state are expected to attend. President Bush has not yet said whether he will go.

Delegates had hoped to produce several documents for adoption at the Rio conference. One was an agreement to forestall global warming. A second was something called Agenda 21, which Bohlen described as a program of specific actions that need to be taken during the next 20 years to encourage environmentally responsible development.

A third was an Earth Charter, a simple, clear statement of environmental goals.

Environmentalists participating in the negotiations have blamed the United States for the failure to adopt a global warming agreement. The United States refused to agree to limits on emissions of carbon dioxide, the principal contributor to the greenhouse effect.

Researchers say that because of the greenhouse effect global temperatures could rise by several degrees in the next century, melting polar icecaps, flooding coastal cities and producing unpredictable shifts in climate.

Considerable progress has been made on Agenda 21, Bohlen said, "more than anybody thought was possible." The negotiators agreed to measures to protect marine ecosystems, for example, and to preserve endangered species, he said.

Still, much of Agenda 21's text had not been accepted by at least some negotiators.

The effort to draw up an Earth Charter was abandoned, he said. Negotiators could not agree on a statement of principles, he said.

Mark Valentine of the U.S. Citizens' Network on UNCED, a coalition of environmental groups, said, "I would have to say things look pretty gloomy."

Thursday the environmental participants vowed to take charge of the process and negotiate their own agreements if governments failed to act.

Inspectors believe Iraq is hiding Scud missiles

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. weapons inspectors are worried that Iraq may still be hiding Scud missiles and are waiting for Baghdad to prove it is living up to the year-old Gulf War cease-fire accords, a top official said Friday.

Under the cease-fire adopted by the Security Council on April 3, 1990, Iraq is bound to cooperate in dismantling its nuclear, biological and chemical weapons programs and its Scud-type missiles with a range greater than about 90 miles.

Rolf Ekeus, who heads the U.N. Special Commission that is dismantling Iraq's terror weapons, told reporters that Iraq's current stance is "non-obstruction;" he would not characterize it as cooperation.

After briefing the Security Council in private on Friday, Ekeus said the ambassadors had expressed dismay about the "continued concealment" of missiles.

"We are still concerned that there is still a missile force out there," Ekeus said.

On March 27, CIA Director Robert Gates told Congress that Iraq still has several hundred Scud missiles, covert nuclear equipment and the means to make chemical and biological weapons.

The International Atomic Energy Agency is sending experts to Iraq next week to begin destroying some of the buildings at the al-Athir nuclear weapons design site. The IAEA believes about 12 of the 100 buildings were devoted to weapons design and construction.

Last week, a Special Commission team left Iraq after verifying Baghdad's latest claim that last summer it destroyed scores of Scud missiles that it had not previously reported.

Ekeus said Iraq had declared that 92 Scuds were demolished.

"The information about 92 new missiles not accounted for before is very disturbing, because it demonstrates that Iraq has been systematically concealing those," Ekeus said.

Afghan peace plan abruptly gains support

NEW DELHI (NYT) — A peace plan for Afghanistan has suddenly gained momentum, with U.N. officials predicting that President Najibullah could relinquish his office within the next two weeks.

With food supplies in Kabul, the Afghan capital, all but exhausted, restlessness increasing among dissident government militia leaders, and the patience of neighboring countries wearing thin, the U.N. official charged with finding a route to peace says he expects a cease-fire and a new interim government in Kabul by the end of the month.

"We believe peace is at hand," Benon Sevan, the personal representative of U.N. Secretary General Boutros Ghali, said in Pakistan on Thursday. "We're on the right track and moving fast, faster than expected. With help, we shall be able to resolve the Afghan conflict now — this month, not next."

Last month, Naijbullah announced that he was willing to step down as president, meeting a key demand of the Muslim fundamentalist guerrilla factions that have been fighting Afghanistan's Marxist government for 13 years.

Although Najibullah left the timing of his resignation vague, the concession opened the way for Sevan to outline plans for a peaceful transition to free elections.

The U.N. plan called for convening a series of meetings of representatives from across Afghanistan's political and ethnic spectrum, with the notable exception of "prominent personalities" like Najibullah and the mujahedeen leaders.

The goal of the meetings was to create an interim government by June that would organize national elections.

But a rebellion by Tajik ethnic militia forces in the north and critical food shortages in Kabul have prompted Sevan to speed up his original timetable, U.N. officials in Islamabad, the Pakistani capital, said Friday.

"Nobody wants a collapse in Kabul," a U.N. official familiar with Sevan's discussions said. "Everybody realizes that Kabul is up to its eyeballs in difficulties."

The 13-year war between the government and the fundamentalist guerrillas known as the mujahedeen has left at least two million Afghans dead and another six million in refugee camps in Pakistan and Iran.

Always a poor country, Afghanistan has reached the point where its economy no longer functions. With the countryside littered with millions of mines, even rudimentary agriculture is a risky business.

Three years have passed since the departure of Soviet forces, which intervened in late 1979.

The United States, which had armed and supported the mujahedeen, reached an agreement with the Soviet Union last September to cut off military supplies to both sides by the end of the year.

But the turning point came in January, when Pakistan reversed its position after 13 years of supplying the mujahedeen with weapons and military advice and declared its support for Sevan's peace proposals.

Suddenly, deprived of their principal backer, the mujahedeen were compelled to take the U.N. peace proposals seriously.

Soviet radioactive material up for sale on black market

BERLIN (AP) — Small amounts of uranium and plutonium of suspected Soviet origin have cropped up on the black market in at least four European countries in recent months, investigators say.

In these cases, the sellers tried to pass off virtually useless radioactive material as weapons-grade goods at astronomical prices.

Some experts say the cases are black-market scams by hustlers capitalizing on what they believe is a booming market for former Soviet nuclear technology.

But other European officials fear they represent the first tiny cracks in the former Soviet Union's nuclear security, the greatest danger posed by the superpower's breakup.

"We don't like it. There seems to be a somewhat higher frequency," said Wilhelm Gmelin, director of safeguards for Euratom, the European Community's nuclear watchdog treaty agency. "We are concerned that with the situation in the former Soviet Union, this situation may get worse."

On March 5, German police arrested two former Soviet emigres who tried to sell about 2 pounds of slightly enriched uranium pellets for $1.16 million in the Bavarian city of Augsburg.

The uranium was found in a lead-lined container in the trunk of a Mercedes, capping an undercover sting operation.

Bus blast kills 55

HONG KONG (AP) — An explosion aboard a bus in central China killed 55 people and seriously injured 11, a semi-official Chinese news agency reported Friday.

In a dispatch from Changsha in Hunan province, the Hong Kong China News Agency quoted the Hunan Daily as saying the bus was carrying about 80 people when it exploded Wednesday morning as it neared the town of Yiyang.

It was the second serious accident in Hunan in less than two weeks.

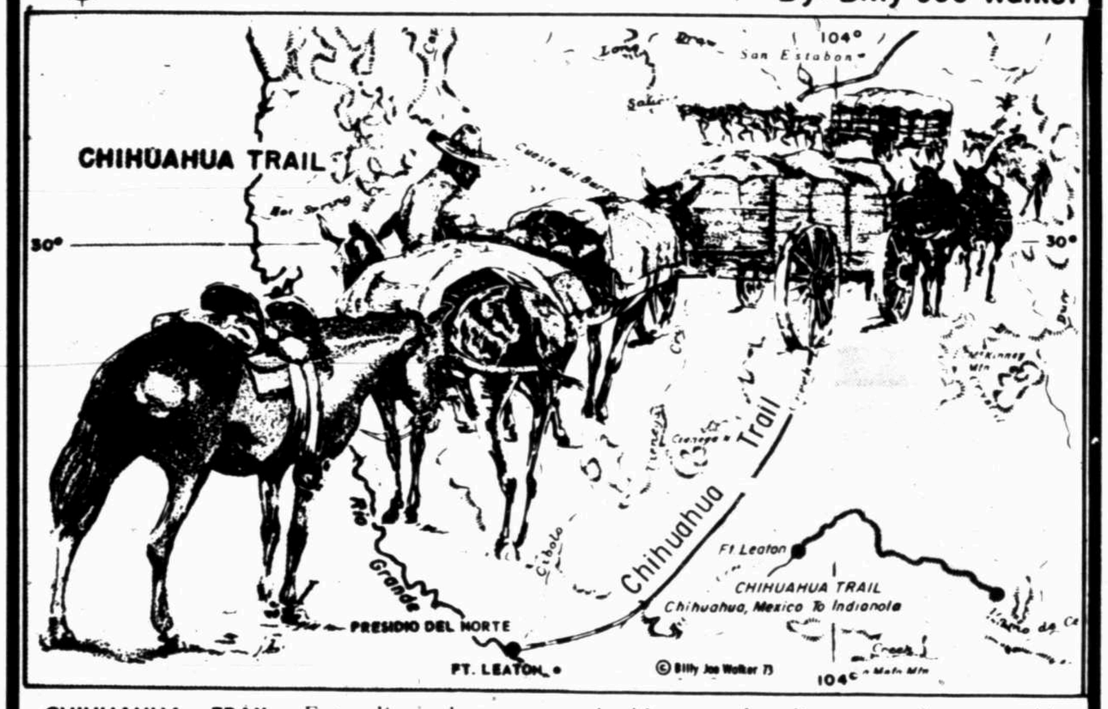
FOCUSING ON THE PAST — By: Billy Joe Walker



CHIHUAHUA TRAIL. Extending between Chihuahua Mexico and Indianola on Natagorda Bay via Rio Conchos, Presidio, Fort Davis, Fort Stockton, Fort Lancaster and San Antonio.

Many legends of buried treasure are associated with this famous trail, since huge shipments of bullion and other valuable merchandise passed over this trail. August Santleben a pioneer freighter in 1876 transported $350,000 in silver bullion and 40,000 pounds of copper consigned to Heick Brothers of Indianola. Santlebens commission on this trip was $17,500.

New York's frenzied media ease attacks on Clinton

By Jerry Roberts
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Phil Donahue's producer was killing time with an overly long warm-up, as the audience and crew awaited Jerry Brown's late arrival on the set of the TV tabloid show.

"What kind of shows do you like?" producer Patricia McMillan chirped to the crowd. "Do you still like male strippers?"

"Yessss!!!" the audience bellowed back.

"Do you like politics?"

"Noooo!!!" the crowd roared.

The fiercely negative response to the mere mention of the word "politics" from the 200 people who showed up to see Brown on "Donahue" Thursday belied the high energy and entertainment value of the show, which was outpaced for exciting live TV only by Clinton's appearance on the set the day before.

Since New York's 1992 presidential primary campaign was staged almost entirely within the Big Apples' frenzied, three-news-cycles-a-day media maelstrom, it seemed only natural that two of the more telling events of the Democratic contest were hosted by Donahue, NBC's soft-core equivalent of Geraldo.

"Media Minded Jerry," blared a mid-week headline in the Daily News, above a story detailing Brown's nonstop grubbing for cheap news coverage ("often at the expense of interacting with voters," the article said), a strategy that Clinton pursued in nearly equal measure.

Friday morning, in a scene that spoke volumes about campaigning in New York, Brown drew a buzzing mob of 12 TV cameras and operators — plus 45 other reporters and still photographers — to a hugely important midtown news event.

It was the announcement of his endorsement by Rolling Stone magazine.

For Brown, one casualty of being in New York's white-hot media glare has been the loss of the free-form caravan style that reflected the innocence of his campaign in earlier primary states.

Former Brown administration players Tom Quinn and Lew Werner showed up from California this week to instill some grown-up discipline on the traveling party.

Brown is decked out in expensive, double-breasted suits now, and no longer stalks the aisle of the press bus or picks cheap restaurant food off the plates of reporters.

Brown refutes $100-plus donation reports

NEW YORK (AP) — An angry Jerry Brown denounced as a "complete canard" a report Friday that an operator at his 1-800 number had instructed a caller on how to circumvent his self-imposed $100 campaign contribution limit.

The former California governor suggested that if such an incident did occur, it may have been the work of an insider planted by the presidential campaign of his Democratic rival, Bill Clinton.

"I don't know if there is some kind of a Clinton plant that would actually come to work for us and create those kind of dirty tricks," a visibly agitated Brown said at a news conference. "That's the kind of stuff that is quite possible."

Richard Martin, Clinton's deputy press secretary, called Brown's suggestion "completely ridiculous" and said there was "absolutely not" anyone from the Clinton campaign working on the Brown phone bank.

Brown said the 1-800 number is sometimes staffed by as many as 80 people.

In an appearance later Friday in Syracuse, he continued to challenge Clinton's electability and to question his reliance on big campaign contributions.

"I see a Humpty-Dumpty candidate that has fallen down and broken into lots of little pieces," Brown said. "And all the king's men, and all the lobbyists, and all the $1,000 donors and all the powerful people who have invented Clinton, can't put back together again."

CNN reported that one of its staffers called Brown's 1-800 number Thursday night. When the network caller asked about the $100 limit, CNN said, the operator replied: "There's ways around it."

"I mean like, if you have like family members, I'm not supposed to tell you that, but, you know, and each of them gives or something, but like $100 per person," CNN quoted the operator as saying. The network reported that Brown has hired an organization called Comp-U-Call to handle the 1-800 number.

Through March 31, Brown had reported raising about $2.3 million in contributions of $100 or less — averaging about $60 per donation. He has been approved for an additional $850,000 in federal campaign matching funds and has submitted a request for another $1.2 million in matching funds.

The former California governor has made his $100 contribution limit a central theme in his campaign as he rails against the corrupting influence of money on politics. He has inserted his toll-free number into speeches so often that supporters know it by heart.

GSA loses count of federally owned planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The agency that manages federal aircraft has lost track of how many civilian planes the government has and what they're used for, investigators at the agency have discovered.

The inspector general's office of the General Services Administration unearthed 237 federal aircraft unknown to the GSA by checking Federal Aviation Administration records, according to the report, which was obtained by The Associated Press.

In addition, the auditors located 31 aircraft registered to four agencies that never told the GSA that they owned any aircraft.

The inspectors also discovered FAA records showing 152 aircraft owned by state and local governments that the GSA believes belong to federal agencies.

"GSA's aircraft inventory is not current, accurate or complete," said the interim report, dated March 26. It had been requested in November by Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn.

He made the study available at a time when Congress and the Bush administration are engaged in an election-year duel over which branch has more excessive taxpayer-financed perquisites and privileges.

In a letter to GSA Inspector General William Barton on Thursday, Sasser wrote, "Needless to say, GSA cannot ensure the efficient use of aircraft that, according to its own records, do not even exist."

The auditors tacitly agreed with Sasser, writing that because of the GSA's incomplete inventory of its fleet, "any management decisions ... based on this information could be flawed."

The investigators also said that data is so scattered they do not know when the audit can be completed.

"Every effort will be made to keep this period to a minimum," Barton wrote Sasser on March 31.

The report said that according to the GSA's most recent figures — which are 18 months old and tentative — the government has 1,315 nonmilitary aircraft.

Twelve agencies own aircraft, which include helicopters, fire fighting and weather-research planes, and jet fighters used by NASA for astronaut training. Some of the craft were bought in 1945.

The report also found that:

■ Because federal aircraft are not subject to most FAA standards, there are no requirements that pilots be licensed or medically fit to fly, or that aircraft be well-maintained, inspected and operated within their physical limits.

■ 99 of the aircraft "appeared to be underutilized" in 1989 because each was used for less than 100 hours that year.

■ An estimated 10 percent of the aircraft are suitable for "comfortable passenger travel." But the auditors added, "Whether aircraft are used for other than the stated mission is unknown at this time."

Others were 'out of control,' defendant says

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (NYT) — A defendant in the Rodney G. King beating case gave the most dramatic testimony of the trial, and the most damaging to his three co-defendants, when he testified Friday that the clubbing King received had been unjustified.

The witness, Officer Theodore J. Briseno, who is accused of kicking King once, repeatedly described two co-defendants, Officer Laurence M. Powell and former Officer Timothy E. Wind, as having been "out of control," and placed much of the blame on the remaining defendant, Sgt. Stacey C. Koon.

The beating was so wild, Briseno asserted, that several times his fellow officers nearly struck him by accident.

John D. Barnett, Briseno's lawyer, had indicated since before the assault trial began a month ago that he would break ranks with his co-defendants. Friday, he did.

As Wind and Powell struck King more than 50 times with metal batons, Briseno testified, he searched in vain for a weapon or a threatening move by King that would explain their actions.

"I didn't know what they saw," he said. "I just couldn't understand why they were continuing. I thought the whole thing was out of control."

Briseno testified that any motion by King, no matter how innocent, had drawn another series of blows. He said he had feared that the other officers might either beat the man to death or shoot him.

Midway through the 81-second beating, Briseno said, he approached Koon, the highest-ranking officer at the scene, and asked him the reason for the repeated blows. He said the sergeant had ignored the question.

The beating occurred on March 3, 1991, after King, a black motorist who had been speeding, led police on a 15-minute chase.

Omaha opens jungle

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A man-made jungle billed as the world's largest opened Friday with a vine-cutting ceremony.

The 80-foot-high, 1.5-acre Lied Jungle is located at the Henry Doorly Zoo in Omaha, thousands of miles from the tropics.

It's intended to give people as close a look to the sights, smells and sounds of a real jungle as possible said zoo director Lee Simmons.

The jungle, an eight-story building with a clear fiberglass roof, has more than 125 species of endangered animals and about 2,000 species of exotic plants and trees. It cost $15 million.

SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Developing new personal projects will give you more choice in career and financial matters. Beginning in May, you call the shots! A business boom keeps you busy in July. Say "goodbye" to old-fashioned methods in September. You find fresh outlets for your managerial talents after talking with influential people. Be willing to take risks. Your family or domestic responsibilities could increase early in 1993.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Maya Angelou, dance king Arthur Murray, composer Elmer Bernstein, biographer Kitty Kelley.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Cupid's arrow could hit the mark today. A friendly conversation leaves you feeling warm all over. Partner's needs could outweigh your own. Request assistance with large projects.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A web of misunderstanding could entangle you. State your case firmly. Inviting a friend to lunch will leave you both in good spirits. Dress up if going out this evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A day of relaxation could be just what you need. Both talks and travel can be wearying. Spend some time alone before getting together with family or close friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Boldly pursue a strong desire, even if it means journeying far away or venturing into new territory. You might find a perfect match — someone with your future in mind!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Discussing your plans with a prospective partner could spark lucrative results. Your come-hither look attracts a new admirer. The financial outlook is much improved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Local happenings may seem dull in comparison with events at a distance. Do not waste time. Go to where the fun is! An unexpected phone call gives you food for thought.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Influential people may demand a lot now. New problems create new opportunities — jump right in. Puzzles, riddles and mystery stories hold special appeal this weekend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The road ahead could be rough if you overload your schedule. Avoid becoming part of a wild goose chase. Be a messenger of joy and good will to friends and family this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your nearest and dearest may be eager to discuss a future project or trip. There is plenty of time. Ponder key financial decisions. Learn to trust your intuitive promptings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Any critical comments you make today could be held against you. Be diplomatic. Taking an imaginative approach will help you solve a complex problem.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You need to work out a specific plan of action before approaching potential allies. Any mistakes in your presentation could impede success. Get the latest facts and figures.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your concerns regarding joint funds or possessions appear to be well-founded. Let no one claim otherwise. Nostalgia makes a comeback tonight. Bring out the photos and reminisce.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are charming, excitable and eager to stay ahead of the crowd. They want to be the first to try the latest trend or fashion. Affectionate but somewhat fickle, these Aries will probably have many casual romances before settling down. They want to finish school and start a career before taking on serious domestic responsibilities. The ideal job will allow these creative Aries to stretch their imaginations. They are happiest when devising new ways to do things.

Whites stay home to watch his movies, Spike Lee says

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Filmmaker Spike Lee said many whites who said they liked his film "Do the Right Thing" were too timid to see the movie at a theater, where they feared violence from black moviegoers.

Lee

"White viewers stayed home to watch it in the comfort and safety of their living rooms, rather than be confronted with an angry, black, raging mob," he told 4,200 students at the University of Michigan on Thursday.

Lee, wrapping up production of "Malcolm X," also repeated earlier criticisms of black men who favor black women with "white" features such as long hair and light complexions.

"Malcolm X" is due out in November.

MARIETTA, Ga. — Geraldo Rivera may be called to testify in the kidnapping trial of a woman whose underground network for abused children was the topic of a 1988 segment of his television talk show.

Superior Court Judge Michael Stoddard ruled Rivera is a witness in the trial of Faye Yager, who claims her Children's Underground Network has taken hundreds of abused children and mothers on the run.

Rivera interviewed several children Mrs. Yager claims to have assisted. She is accused of kidnapping the son of a Florida woman. The trial begins April 20.

"Geraldo is a journalist, not an arm of law enforcement. But don't take that to mean he wouldn't (come to the trial), either," Rivera's spokesman, Jeff Erdel, said Thursday.

PHILADELPHIA — Former hostage Joseph Cicippio gave President Bush a good review Friday after listening to him address the Federalist Society.

"It wasn't a political speech," said Cicippio of nearby Norristown. "I think he was just begging the nation that what we need is a whole new change, new blood and new ideas in Washington."

Cicippio was in Congress Hall, where Congress sat while Philadelphia was the nation's capital from 1790 to 1800, to hear Bush.

The former hostage added some perspective on a day the government reported the nation's unemployment rate stayed at a 6½-year high of 7.3 percent in March.

"In Lebanon, where I was held, there is today 40 percent unemployment. Can you imagine that here? We'd be really in deep trouble," Cicippio said, pausing to add, "Peace."

NORFOLK, Neb. — Regina Krueger, who played a tough, Irish cop on television's "The Father Dowling Mysteries" said she enjoyed her role — and one line in particular.

At the end of episodes, Ms. Krueger as Sgt. Clancy said, "Cuff 'em and read 'em their rights."

"It was kind of hokey, but to get paid to play cops and robbers is the best," the 33-year-old Ms. Krueger said.

Ms. Krueger, who lives in Los Angeles, was in her native Norfolk this week visiting her grandparents.

The "Father Dowling Mysteries" concluded filming a year ago in March after three years on ABC. It's now in syndication.

LAKE ORION, Mich. — Speedy Pizza workers tossed as fast as they could but came up 9,900 pies short on an order by lead singer Bono of the Irish rock band U2.

Bono ordered 10,000 pizzas March 27 for his mid-concert pizza party at the Palace of Auburn Hills. Three Speedy employees delivered 100 hot pies to the stage.

"It was my most unforgettable delivery of all time," said Tim Wieczerza. "They cleared a place on the stage for the pizzas and shined a spotlight on us and people started screaming 'Pi-zza, Pi-zza.'"

Wieczerza obliged, tossing boxes like Frisbees into the crowd.

Each delivery man received a $50 tip.

MIAMI — Rock 'n' roll impresario Dick Clark says the 1980s didn't measure up musically to the '50s — when he got his start on "American Bandstand" — or even the '60s.

"Everybody remembers Bill Haley and Chuck Berry, even the people who aren't old enough to remember," said Clark, 62, in town Wednesday for a 40th anniversary party of the program. He joined it as host in 1956.

"There is no real trademark of the '80s," he added. "There is Madonna, Michael Jackson and Bruce Springsteen, but I can't imagine what else you would remember the '80s for."

• • •

DETROIT — Rock guitarist Eddie Van Halen says he'll delay his concert Saturday if Michigan's NCAA basketball semifinal game isn't over.

"We're big sports fans, too. We did not want to cause our Detroit fans to miss such an important local game," Van Halen said.

The band is playing at The Palace in Auburn Hills, outside Detroit. Jumbo television screens will broadcast the late afternoon matchup between the Wolverines and the Cincinnati Bearcats.

PURPOSE

The purpose of the Midland YMCA 1992 Corporate Cup Challenge is to "Promote health, physical fitness and a sense of community through the spirit of friendly competition." Toward this end, measures are being taken to assure fair and equitable competition for all participants. Specific rules have been developed for each of the events: these rules will be enclosed in your team packet. Eligibility requirements governing the competition are provided below.

ELIGIBILITY

1. Team members must be at least 18 years of age.
2. Team members must be employed by the sponsoring company or agency at the time of the competition or, if laid off, must still be covered under the company's health insurance plan. In addition, contract labor that is on site full time at a facility where they are supplying a required service of that company, may also participate for that company. A written request to the Registration Committee listing these participants must be made.
3. In general assignment of teams to divisions based on the number of employees will be as follows:

Division I	300 and up
Division I	100 - 299
Division III	1 - 99

However, the Corporate Cup Registration Committee will reserve the right to realign the divisions based on the number of teams entered in each.

4. Up to five companies/businesses of the same or similar professions having 25 or less than 25 employees may combine to enter a team. They must make a written request to the Registration Committee in order to be officially entered.
5. In the division categories, spouse participation will be allowed based on the number of company employees. This scale is listed below:

of Employees	# of Spouses
99 - 75	9
74 - 50	14
49 - 25	19
24 - lower	24

In order to insure participation in the Cup by Division I and II, these teams will be individually evaluated when lacking enough participants of one sex to competitively participate. Rulings allowing additional spouses for these companies and businesses will be made by the Registration Committee and each case treated accordingly upon a written request.

6. Team members must be employed within Midland or one of its reporting district offices.
7. Team members must sign the Midland YMCA Corporate Cup waiver prior to competition; this must be submitted with the team roster.
8. Individuals not employed by a corporation, company or agency may enter the competition provided they form teams as representatives of their professional group(s). Examples are as follows: Midland Medical Society, Midland Bar Association, etc. Groups needing special assistance, may submit a written request.
9. The Midland YMCA Corporate Cup Registration Commitee reserves the right to review all team entries relative to eligibility.

TEAM COMPOSITION

1. A team shall consists of no more than 30 members and no less than 20 members; each team must have identifying uniforms consisting of, at the minimum, matching T-shirts. A 1992 Corporate Cup Challenge t-shirt will be provided to team members prior to the event with the intention that teams will have the backs of these shirts screened with their own logos.
2. Team rosters are due by April 3, 1992. It is assumed that each team's roster is final as of that date. Rosters must be typed and all information included. Failure to do so may result in ineligibility for those events.
3. Each team member may participate in up to five events. The Banner and Spirit events will not be counted as part of these five events as we would like everyone to partcipate in these two.
4. Corporations that enter more than one team may not share or cross-enter members between teams. Each team scores its own points. No points will be shared or split.
5. Protests affecting the eligibility of any team member to compete or represent any agency, company or corporation in any event shall be made in writing to the Corporate Cup Registration Committee before the event is held.

Americans drawn to post-communist Czechoslovakia

By Teddie Weyr
Associated Press writer

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Adventurous, disillusioned or merely taking a break after college, thousands of young Americans are seeking alternative lifestyles in Czechoslovakia, newly freed from the Soviet yoke.

They are drawn by the drama of anti-communist revolution, Vaclav Havel's fairytale ascent from dissident to president, the magic of Prague's untouched historic center, and the hope of learning a new culture.

In the ensuing cultural exchange, Czechs and Slovaks are modifying their perception — born of decades of harsh Soviet domination — of America.

Wenceslas Square, a broad boulevard sloping from the National Museum toward the medieval Old Town, was a symbol of resistance to communist oppression after Czechoslovaks spilled into the streets in 1968 to defy Warsaw Pact tanks crushing democratic reforms.

It was the forerunner to the 1989 "Velvet Revolution" that finally ended communist rule.

Now, instead of reverberating with freedom cries, the square is a babble of foreign tongues — English above all.

THOUSANDS OF Americans have found work as English teachers as Czechoslovaks — from environmentalist to army officer and parliamentarian — realize English is vital for contacts abroad.

Historically wary of Germany because of the Nazi occupation in World War II, many Czechoslovaks have made America an ideal.

Some Americans here find opportunities that recession has made rare at home. Others are rediscovering values they feel have gone astray in hectic, success- and consumer-oriented America.

Still others, such as Randall Lyman, 31, are fascinated by the spirit of freedom that has replaced communist autocracy.

Lyman lived in Germany in 1989-1990, amid the euphoria of the anti-communist revolutions sweeping Eastern Europe.

Oct. 23, 1989 found him in Budapest, reveling with 100,000 Hungarians as communist rule effectively ended with the proclamation of a new republic on the 33rd anniversary of the 1956 uprising against Stalinism.

His travels took him to Prague and Bucharest just before communism fell there, too.

Broke, he had to return home in February 1990. Fifteen months later, he was back in Prague.

A THEATER critic and publicist in San Francisco, Lyman had a job within two weeks as culture writer at Prognosis, Prague's first English-language publication.

Founded by young Americans, Prognosis recently went from a monthly to a biweekly.

"In some ways it's a labor of love rather than money," says Lyman, who makes $100 a month at Prognosis, about $33 less than the average wage.

He solved one of the young Americans' biggest problems — accommodation — by sharing with a Czech friend before finding a two-room apartment on the outskirts of the city with another Prognosis staffer for $36 a month.

"The most valuable thing I've been learning is about what democracy means for people who've never had it," Lyman says. "In a sense they are stronger defenders of it than we are."

"Today's students have gone back a little to the ideals of the 1960s, but on a more pragmatic level," says Joseph Brinker, 22, of Cincinnati, director of the Prague office of Students for Czechoslovakia.

Michael Anderson, 23, of Chicago, says he was disenchanted with the West.

"I like that it's not so materialistic as compared to the States, not so fast-paced," says Anderson, who has been in Prague since August. "People seem really friendly, not so gung-ho about striving for superiority."

THAT WILL likely change.

The drive to catch up with the West is strong. People frequently ogle at window displays of Western goods, though many items are still too expensive for the locals.

Anderson works 20 hours a week at the American Hospitality Center, a private snack bar just off the Old Town Square, which serves up Chicago pizza. It has the homey feel of a favorite hamburger joint. The center also has a gift shop and information for Americans and Czechs.

"A lot of Americans are dissatisfied with the United States," says Jane Bausman, 23, of Greenwich, Conn. In December she got a job with a French fashion designer setting up in Prague.

"I think those people feel Czechoslovakia is starting anew, and it's a chance to try and avoid the mistakes the United States made," she says.

A student of modern European history, Bausman focused on Czechoslovakia in college. She arrived last September with no specific plans.

"Life here took some getting used to," she says. "It was very difficult to find an apartment, which made me a little nervous." Bausman now shares a flat with a Czech.

THE SENSE of lawlessness that followed the oppressive rule of communism and rising crime, which gave Czechoslovakia its nickname of the "Wild, Wild, East," initially unnerved Bausman.

"What kept me going was that I met a lot of Czechs I liked," she says. "The Czechoslovaks have cultivated a culture of their own. There are fantastic art exhibits, fantastic musicians. The people here are very liberal."

But she and others complain of the pollution which sometimes engulfs Prague's majestic buildings in a smelly, gray fog.

Other aspects of everyday life require adjustment. Washing machines are scarce. Fresh vegetables or low-fat foods are often in short supply.

Outside Prague, life is tougher. In the Slovak capital of Bratislava, for instance, Western amenities available in Prague at high prices are rare.

Christine Irwin, 30, of Toronto, teaching English for an environmental group in Bratislava, says flexibility is a must to overcome cultural differences and misunderstandings.

Irwin has temporarily abandoned her vegetarian lifestyle. She is touched by hosts who promise a vegetarian meal, proudly serve up a meatless soup, only to bring out steaming sausage afterward.

MANY AMERICANS have taken advantage of the pioneer state of Czechoslovakia's transition to a market economy.

Recent college graduates, fed on the American maxim that anything is possible, are finding Prague a petri dish for innovative ideas.

Lisa Frankenberg and Kent Hawryluk, both 23, founded an English-language weekly, the Prague Post, late last year. It has a circulation of about 10,000 after only four months.

The broadsheet is a source of information about Czechoslovakia for the foreign community and a way for Czechoslovaks to see how outsiders perceive them.

Since the idea for the paper was born, Frankenberg and Hawryluk have moved from a one-room office equipped with one computer and "and a lot of good will" to a six-room office near Wenceslas Square with four computers.

Formerly with Prognosis, they now have 45 people on the payroll, including 20 full-time staffers, part-time help, free-lancers and stringers.

Hawryluk, of Indianapolis, arrived in January 1991, drawn by Slovak ancestry and the zest he'd experienced on a post-college trip to Prague, and began teaching English.

"We saw the potential for a weekly with strong business content," says Frankenberg, a Champagne, Ill., resident who came in November 1990 with a backpack and stayed.

THE TWO hired someone to do market research "which confirmed our instinct," Frankenberg says.

She and Hawryluk began working on a business plan. They found a third partner in a Texas businessman who provided most of the financing and formed the Lion's Share Group, Ltd.

In addition to the Post, the group plans to publish investment guides and develop English curriculae for local students.

Alan Levy, 60, a veteran correspondent, signed on as editor in chief, a job he feels he has studied for all his life.

In 1971, Levy was expelled from Prague, where he moved with his family in 1967 from New York. He returned after the Velvet Revolution, drawn by the never-forgotten enchantment of Prague, now appealing to a younger generation.

Unlike most central European cities, Prague escaped damage in World War II. Its center offers some of the best-preserved medieval and Baroque architecture on the Continent.

"It's the most beautiful city on earth. It's a wonderful, magical place," Frankenberg says.

THERE APPEARS to be little local animosity toward the American "invasion" of Czechoslovakia.

"We don't mind them at all," says Jakub Spata, 26.

WHAT! NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your 'day job.' Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 95% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $400-$800 monthly AFTER expenses, some even more!

The catch? You've gotta be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING, or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

Call 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!

WANTED: Experienced oil field chemical person with technical background. Must have own transportation. Call 366-4694.
