Pontiff, Walesa meet

KRAKOW, Poland (AP) — In a dramatic end to his Polish pilgrimage, Pope John Paul II met with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa at a remote mountain resort today, and then headed back to Rome, leaving behind a message of hope and support for his troubled homeland.

A spokesman for Walesa, leader of the banned Solidarity union, said the labor chief had returned to his home in the northern seaport of Gdansk after the audience with John Paul and would speak with reporters later.

Hours earlier, the Polish-born pontiff held unscheduled talks with Poland's military ruler, Communist Party chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, in a two-hour meeting at Krakow's Wawel Castle.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban told a news conference their talks marked "deepening of cooperation between the state and the church" and "will contribute to peace in Poland and the world."

Asked to evaluate the impact of the papal visit, Urban said, "I foresee a favorable political evolution stemming from our policy. I hope that the pope's visit ... will speed up thws process."

During his eight-day visit, the pontiff had repeatedly expressed support for the Solidarity labor movement and criticized Jaruzelski's imposition of martial law Dec. 13, 1981.

During his homecoming Wednesday to Krakow, his former diocese, tens of thousands of Solidarity supporters marched in the streets.

On the last day of his visit, the pope left Krakow in a helicopter at mid-morning. About 25 minutes later, reporters saw three helicopters, including one with the papal seal, land in a valley near the mountain resort of Zakopane on the Polish-Czechoslovakian border.

The pope used to ski at Zakopane, in the Tatra mountains about 55 miles south of Krakow, when he was a prelate in the southern Polish city.

Roadblocks stopped reporters from reaching the Chocholowska Valley during the pope's meeting there with Walesa.

After four hours, the papal helicopter flew John Paul back to Krakow's Balice Airport, where he was honored in a departure ceremony attended by officials of the Communist government, some of whom knelt and kissed the papal ring. The flight back to Rome, aboard his Alitalia jetliner, takes two hours.

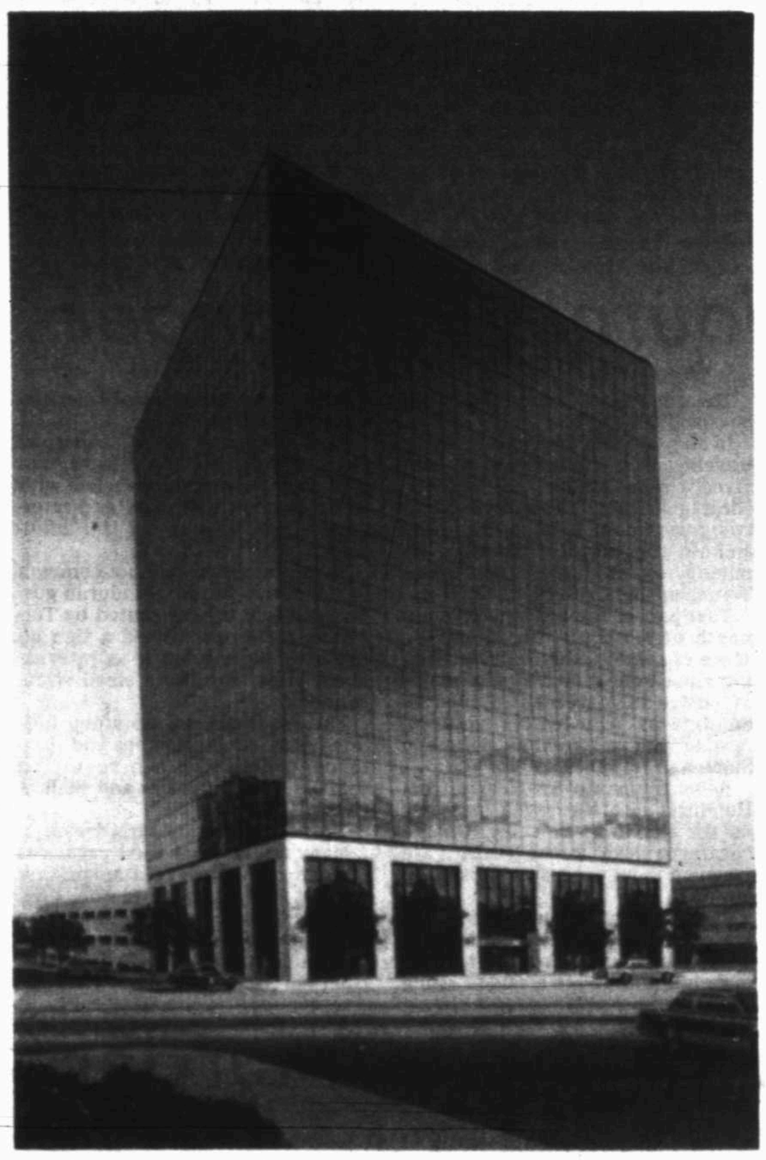

Walesa spent the night in the Krakow area before going to Zakopane, said the labor leader's parish priest, the Rev. Henryk Jankowski.

The leader of the now-outlawed Solidarity union last saw the pontiff during a Vatican audience in January 1981, when his union was in its heyday.

The helicopter carrying John Paul to the resort carried four other clerics, Panciroli said. They were Cardinal Franciszek Macharski, the pontiff's successor as Archbishop of Krakow, the pope's Polish secretary, Stanislaw Dziwisz, and two old friends, the Rev. Stanislaw Nagy, professor at Lublin Catholic University, and the Rev. Adam Kubis, from Krakow's theological academy.

Polish church officials on Wednesday had refused to say where the pope would receive Walesa, who arrived in Krakow after a trip from his home in the northern port city of Gdansk.

Jaruzelski flew unannounced to this ancient city of kings in southern Poland to meet John Paul, who has sharply criticized Poland's Communist leaders and their imposition of martial law in a bid to crush Solidarity.

A new Forum

The Forum, to be completed in late 1984, is under construction at West Illinois and Marienfeld Avenues. Jack D. Hightower is the developer of this $16.5 million (total) mixed-use project, with parking, retail, and office space. Financing will be provided by Midland's First National Bank. Architect is Byron Martin.

Developer 'ready' for office project

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Al Baze, with Midland's Department of Inspections and Permits, has nearly finished checking over plans for a 15½ story, $16.5 million office project — The Forum — yet another tall building to add to Midland's growing skyline. Many structures of similar size are being built throughout the city.

"They are ready to go as soon as we're through with the plans," Baze said, referring to Jack D. Hightower, developer of the structure. The Forum will rise from a site at West Illinois and Marienfeld Avenues. A total $12.5 million should be spent on construction of the building and its garage.

Hightower is the developer of the Hightower Building, a 98 percent leased structure he started to build just for his oil company and one other firm. The project grew to 10 floors as Hightower gambled — in mid-1981 — that ARCO and other companies might lease space in it.

In an interview with the Reporter-Telegram, Hightower said he believes the oversupply of Midland office space can be absorbed within the next two years, and another boom-time is coming for oil businesses.

The Forum will contain roughly 194,600 square feet of office and retail space. Attached to its north face will be a 119,000 square foot parking area to accomodate 360 cars.

The tower will consist of 12 office floors above 4½ levels of parking — two of these levels incorporated into the building's core — and a 1½-story lobby. This unique design, developers said, will allow quick access from parking to offices through a set of central-core elevators.

NASA plans Florida landing

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The shuttle Challenger will attempt NASA's first Florida landing on Friday, redirecting to California in the event of bad weather, agency officials said today. Equipment trouble aboard the spaceship ruled out an extension of the mission.

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, NASA's shuttle director, said plans to have Challenger stay up an additional day had given way to an improved weather outlook and a potential fuel problem with one of three Auxiliary Power Units.

Earlier, Abrahamson had said a postponement to Saturday was certain.

He had egg on his face when he flipflopped at midmorning: "We think it's proper to go ahead with the landing plan and preparations for a landing at Kennedy Space Center tomorrow."

He added: "Now that doesn't mean there's going to be a landing" at the Cape. If the weather isn't adequate, the shuttle will head for Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

There are three landing opportunities — at 6:53 a.m. EDT and 8:28 a.m. here, and at 9:57 a.m. EDT in California.

The crew — Robert Crippen, Rick Hauck, John Fabian, Sally K. Ride and Dr. Norman Thagard — finished up their flight duties today and began stowing gear and cleaning up the cabin for return to Earth.

As the astronauts completed their last flight tests, Abrahamson described the seventh shuttle mission as "nearly a perfect mission." It was at about that time that engineers noticed the No. 3 APU was not receiving enough fuel.

After some troubleshooting, the astronauts restarted the unit and it worked fine. Even so, flight director Tommy Holloway said it would be prudent to come home Friday because "we don't fully understand the reason for the early problem."

The Auxiliary Power Units control the shuttle's hydraulic systems on ascent and descent. The ship can fly with one good APU and there was no immediate danger to the astronauts, But to lessen the chances of another unit going out, mission rules call for an early return when an APU goes bad.

A previous shuttle flight — number two of seven — was delayed when an APU overheated. The unit was replaced and flew without trouble.

The shuttle has landed five times out of six at Edwards Air Force Base, but NASA officials hoped for a Florida-to-Florida mission that would reduce preparation time for mission eight in August. The ship is to routinely land here and its first landing will demonstrate its ability to take on local crosswinds.

Demonstrating use of the galley she has developed for future shuttle projects is Rita Rapp, NASA's food systems coordinator, based at Johnson Space Center in Houston.

'...The barbecue is great!'

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — If his space flight is extended into the weekend, says Bob Crippen, not to worry. "I think Rita packed enough food for us to stay up six, eight, ten days," he told Mission Control this morning.

Rita M. Rapp has spent two decades turning a dietary nightmare into a gourmet delight for America's space travelers. During a midweek dinner, one of the Challenger astronauts dished up compliments to the chef, asking the ground communicator to "tell Rita the barbecue is great!"

Challenger's crew has dined from a menu that has 20 beverages and 75 foods, including steak, shrimp cocktail, Italian vegetables, smoked turkey and cauliflower with cheese. They can follow a standard menu for six days without repeating an entree.

There is food aboard for several extra days, should bad weather force a postponement to the shuttle's scheduled Friday return.

Space eating was different when Miss Rapp first became the chef.

"In the Mercury program, the food was in metal tubes, like toothpaste, and the astronauts squeezed it into their mouths," she recalled.

That was thought to be the only way people could ever eat in space because of weightlessness. Food will not stay on the plate, as on Earth, and engineers worried that droplets of food floating around the cockpit would contaminate equipment.

But Miss Rapp helped develop cubes to replace the tubes. The food was partially dried and compressed into bite-sized cubes, which were coated with gelatin to reduce crumbs. It was terrific engineering, but lousy dining, she said.

"They didn't have the correct texture or feel," she said. "What we sent up, we usually got back."

Miss Rapp kept searching for a better way, and scored her "big breakthrough" in preparing for Apollo 8, when three humans, for the first time, would orbit the moon.

Their arrival was timed for Christmas Eve 1968. To mark the occasion, Miss Rapp sent along a new idea — pouches of rehydratable food. The astronauts could add hot water, cut open the pouch and eat the food with a spoon.

"It was determined that surface tension (of the liquid) held the food on the spoon," said Miss Rapp. "If you very carefully aimed, you could get it to your mouth. If you hit your arm, though, it goes bouncing all over."

The Apollo 8 astronauts dined on turkey and dressing while orbiting the moon on Christmas.

Today's astronauts, in addition to an expanded menu, have condiments — liquid salt and pepper, hot sauce and ketchup — and snack items, such as real nuts and cookies.

Negotiations take Shultz to Asian countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — During a 12-day trip to four Asian countries, Secretary of State George P. Shultz will seek progress toward ending the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and work for restoration of Cambodia's independence.

So far, intensive negotiations on both fronts have not produced noticeable results, but Shultz left today hoping to make some headway in the interest of improving overall U.S. relations with the Soviet Union.

He will meet in Bangkok, Thailand, next week with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher to coordinate views on East-West relations before Chancellor Helmut Kohl's July 4 visit with Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov in Moscow.

Kohl intends to establish regular talks with Andropov, and U.S. officials want to strengthen Western solidarity on plans for deploying new nuclear missiles in Western Europe in advance of the session.

At a news conference Wednesday, Shultz said he would like to see an improvement in U.S.-Soviet talks to control nuclear weapons and on other issues. "We are prepared with reasonable positions," he said.

But so far, Shultz said, "I can't point to results that somehow we are making genuine progress."

Specifically on Afghanistan, which the Soviets invaded 42 months ago, Shultz said "there is a lot of effort going on, but it is hard to identify progress."

The negotiations are being conducted largely through United Nations Undersecretary General Diego Cordovez, with a leading role played by Pakistan, the last stop on Shultz' Asian trip.

The first stop is Manila, where Shultz will meet with President Ferdinand Marcos, whose 18 years of rule were bolstered last month by a new agreement with the United States on American military bases. It provided the Philippines with $900 million and more control over the facilities.

Marcos was accused by his country's Roman Catholic hierarchy in February of repression and economic mismanagement. A senior U.S. official, briefing reporters on condition he not be named, said Shultz would "touch on" the human rights situation during his stay in Manila.

Habib sets another withdrawal mission to Syria

WASHINGTON (AP) — Philip C. Habib, President Reagan's chief Mideast envoy, plans another try at getting Syrian forces to join Israel in a troop withdrawal from Lebanon.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz disclosed the new Habib mission at a news conference Wednesday. He said Habib and Morris Draper, another U.S. envoy, will leave for the region Friday.

Shultz said the Syrians have informed Washington through diplomatic channels that "they are ready for and want to see a dialogue with us."

Habib and Draper will visit Israel and Lebanon, beginning Saturday.

But Shultz said someone other than Habib will go to Damascus because Syria has said it won't receive him. Another senior official said Draper or Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam might meet with the Syrians.

Describing Habib's mission, the official said "it initiates a new round to see where we go from here and what kind of push can be given ... Is there some other combination of factors that might turn the trick?"

"It is clear the Syrians are in a strong position and aren't going to be easily persuaded," added the official, who insisted on anonymity. He said Washington recognizes "our leverage is limited" and is hoping the Saudis will step up their pressure on Damascus.

While Habib isn't welcome in Damascus, the official said he remains as the president's chief Mideast envoy, despite reports that he was about to step down. Habib conferred twice with Reagan on U.S.-Mideast policy this week.

'Not-so-hot' weather forecast

Another very dry but not-so-hot day again is to visit Midlanders this Friday.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has forecast partly cloudy skies and a high in the low 90s for Friday. Winds are to be southeasterly at 5 to 15 mph.

For tonight, the forecaster has predicted fair and mild weather and a low in the mid-60s. Winds are to be southeasterly at 5 to 10 mph.

Wednesday's peak temperature of 97 degrees was 10 marks below the record high of 107 degrees for the date in 1951. The overnight low was 70 degrees, while the record low for a June 23 is 61 degrees set in 1957.

Fair skies forecast

By The Associated Press

Skies were fair to partly cloudy over most of Texas today as forecasters saw nothing but warm afternoon temperatures in store for most of the state.

Some scattered showers and thunderstorms dotted the upper coast before dawn.

Pre-dawn temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 64 at Amarillo to 79 at Laredo.

The forecast called for partly cloudy skies and warm afternoon temperatures in the 80s and 90s through Friday. Scattered showers and thunderstorms were possible over isolated areas, mostly in the afternoon and evening hours.

Honduras, Nicaragua trade blame

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — While the bodies of two American journalists were returned home, Honduras and Nicaragua blamed each other for the artillery shelling which killed the men as they drove an isolated border road.

Honduras' military chief threatened to take action soon against the leftists Sandinistas who rule Nicaragua.

"The situation with Nicaragua is extremely serious. The Sandinistas are attacking us constantly without any justification. Because of that, we are going to take actions rapidly," said Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez said at a ceremony at an air base here Wednesday.

He did not specify what he would do to stop what he claimed was continual harrassment of Honduran border villages and roads by Nicaraguan forces.

An air force helicopter brought the bodies of Dial Torgerson and Richard Cross to the air base. Then the remains were flown to the United States.

Torgenson was in charge of Central American coverage for the Los Angeles Times bureau. Richard Cross, a free-lance photographer, went to Honduras last weekend on assignment for U.S. News & World Report to photograph rebels who are trying to overthrow the Sandinista junta from their base in Honduras.

The men were killed when their rented car exploded after it was shelled as they drove along an isolated road in Honduras, a few yards from the border with Nicaragua. An official Honduran statement said the car was hit by "projectile," then by a "high-power grenade and also machine-gunned."

Nicaragua has denied Honduras' accusation that its forces shelled the journalists' car and implied instead that the CIA or U.S.-supported Nicaraguan rebels based in Honduras killed the reporters.

Officials in Tegucigalpa, who asked not to be identified, said the attack on the journalists has seriously aggravated tense relations between Honduras' conservative government and the Sandinistas.

Honduran Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Barnica claimed Sandinista troops from the Nicaraguan side of the border fired on the journalists' car.

Nicaragua responded with a note claiming that "at no time has there been an attack against Honduras." Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto called the accusation "the most reprehensible cynicism," and said: "I hold the governments of the United States and Honduras responsible for the death of the journalists."

Soldiers and civilian volunteers place the body of American journalist Dial Torgerson in an ambulance Wednesday at Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

"The false accusation made by the government of Honduras lies in the plans for escalation made by the Central Intelligence Agency of the United States, which has as its objective justifying greater aggression against Nicaragua," the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry statement said.

The Sandinistas accuse Honduras and the Reagan administration of arming and training the Honduras-based rebels to mount crossborder raids.

Most of the rebels, who call themselves the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, were part of the late President Anastasio Somoza's national guard.

President Reagan has called the rebels "freedom fighters."

Honduras along with Costa Rica, Guatemala and El Salvador accuse the Sandinistas of endangering security in Central America by helping leftist rebels in the area and being linked militarily with Cuba and the Soviet Union.

This month, 120 U.S. Army Green Berets arrived in Honduras to train 2,400 Salvadoran soldiers to fight a 3½-year-old leftist insurrection in their homeland.

The Reagan administration claims the Sandinistas are smuggling weapons to the leftist rebels in El Salvador.

The Sandinistas overthrew Somoza, a pro-American rightist strongman whose family had ruled Nicaragua for 42 years, in 1979 after a civil war in which 50,000 people were killed.

Border road often journey of danger

EDITOR'S NOTE: Associated Press Central American Correspondent Joseph B. Frazier has traveled both sides of the dangerous Nicaragua-Honduras border since rebels launched a major offensive in March to topple the leftist Sandinista government. In this report he describes the dangers posed to travelers of the area's mountainous roads.

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — The twisting, unpaved mountain roads paralleling both sides of the tense Nicaragua-Honduras border can be calm one minute and battlefields the next.

Despite their surface tranquility, violence and death often wait around the next curve or over the next hill on either side of the frontier.

American journalists Dial Torgerson of the Los Angeles Times and Richard Cross, a free-lance photographer, were killed on such a road on the Honduran side Tuesday when their white Toyota was split in half by shell fire.

Honduras accused Sandinista troops of firing on the journalists' car, but Nicaragua's leftist government denied the charge.

The attack came on an isolated stretch of dirt road between villages of Cifuentes and Las Trojas, about 75 miles east of Tegucigalpa but 215 miles by car because the route snakes around and over mountains.

The Honduran government said the car was only 15 feet from the border when it was hit by gunfire. A government communique said it had just passed a lumber truck and was climbing a hill when it was struck by a projectile and hurled into the air.

"The automobile was then hit by a high-powered grenade and was also machine-gunned. All the shooting was done from Nicaraguan territory by Sandinista troops," it said.

The other side of the border can be equally dangerous.

In May, a dozen foreign journalists traveling in a military convoy survived a rebel ambush in northern Nicaragua that left 11 guerrillas and two government soldeirs dead. The ambush was north of Jalapa — 15 miles across the border from where Torgerson and Cross died.

That part of the border, 180 miles north of Managua, has been the scene of some of the fierciest fighting since rebels launched a major offensive in March to topple the Sandinistas, who led a revolution ousting rightist President Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

Rebel troops flow regularly from Honduras into Nicaragua, peasants on the Honduran side say. On the Nicaraguan side pitched battles are frequent as Nicaraguan troops try to cut them off.

"We don't sleep much at night living so close. It's quiet here now but we are still afraid. We are afraid for ourselves and we are afraid of losing what little we have," a store clerk in Cifuentes said recently.

In El Salvador today, and four years ago during the Nicaraguan civil war, journalists traveled with white flags on their cars and international press signs on the windshields.

Such precautions are not common in Honduras, but the Honduran government said the car rented by Torgerson and Cross carried a sign on the back identifying it as international press and also a small white banner.

The roads zig-zag up steep hillsides, pass along ridgetops and drop through gullies, often requiring vehicles to ford streams and shallow rivers.

They are a bushwacker's dream.

Many drivers honk their car horns at each curve to avoid surprising nervous soldiers on either side.

A recent two-day trip along the border found it calm, although peasants said they often heard gunfire from the Nicaraguan side.

Jail sketches lead to probe of murders

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) -- A former mental patient's jail cell sketches and "bits and pieces" he has volunteered have triggered a serious investigation into his claim of killing 100 women in at least 16 states over the past eight years, authorities said.

Henry Lee Lucas, 46, convicted of stabbing his mother to death 23 years ago in Michigan, is a "prime suspect" in unsolved murders of women in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, California, Oregon, South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, West Virginia, Florida, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Missouri, Texas Ranger Phil Ryan said Wednesday.

Lucas "has been all over the country, in and out of Texas" several times since 1975, Ryan said.

He is being held without bond in Montague, 50 miles southeast of Wichita Falls, on a murder charge and on $25,000 bond on a weapons charge.

Lucas was charged Wednesday with the murder of a hitchhiker near Plainview, whose body was found in Hale County Feb. 16, 1982. Her head was discovered in Arizona about six weeks later. Authorities have been unable to identify the woman.

Hale County Sheriff Charles Tue said Lucas told him of killing the young woman hitchhiker whom he picked up near Abilene in December 1981.

Lucas said he raped the woman both before and after her death and decapitated her with a knife before dumping her body in Hale County and her head near Scottsdale, Ariz., according to Tue.

Lucas was arrested June 11 on the weapons charge at the rooms he rented in a church campground at Stoneburg, 10 miles west of Montague. When officers arrived, he had a suitcase packed with clothes, other items, and a 2-foot-long dagger, authorities said.

Five days later, Lucas took officers back to his residence and directed them to a wood-burning stove, where they found the bones of Kate Rich, an 80-year-old woman from nearby Ringgold, investigators said.

Mrs. Rich had been missing for more than nine months.

The same day, Lucas led investigators to a ditch alongside Interstate 35 at Denton, 35 miles northwest of Dallas, where officers unearthed the body of a teen-age girl, who disappeared last summer, according to authorities.

Officials said the girl was believed to be a runaway from Jacksonville, Fla., who had been traveling with Lucas for several years.

Multi-use office project begins

They said the insulated, double-pane gray glass of the structure will provide energy-efficiency, and massive blocked entrances of Italian gray marble will add beauty. Marble and granite will be used in the lobby and elevator entrances, and landscaping plans for the building were called "luxurious."

Hightower is on the Resources Advisory Board of the financing bank for his project-— The First National Bank of Midland. He said FNB is trying to bolster consumer confidence in itself — after national publicity of its problems with energy loans.

"The bank (FNB) has provided continued support and major financing on this project," Hightower said. "It wants to demonstrate that it is still a viable source of funds for Midland business growth."

Of The Forum, Hightower said: "What I want to do as developer is build a facility that will be 95 percent occupied within two years' time. We hope even to reach that goal and have it fully-leased by the time construction is completed, in August 1984."

He seems well on the way to that goal. Signed, binding lease eommitments for the Forum from various companies total $18 million in aggregate value. Enstar Exploration and Superior Oil have signed on as major tenants in the new structure.

Superior will consolidate Midland Division exploration and production departments into the Forum during August '84. Superior, a Houston-based oil company, has room for a large staff in the 75,000 square foot space — from 175 to 350 employees during its lease decade.

Enstar Exploration, another Houston company, will lease 14,500 square feet starting in October '84. It has the option to expand during its lease period.

The size of the new building was scaled down after Midland's office space situation changed to a surplus. A more massive structure had been planned at first. But the 15½ story structure is still fairly large because the property was purchased at high prices, according to Hightower.

Purchase of properties belonging to Walter Davis and to Tipperary Oil had to be accomplished to build The Forum. Three small office structures were torn down.

Claude Martin and Sons Inc., of Lubbock, will be general contractor for the Forum. Architect Byron Martin — also from Lubbock — drew the plans. This same team completed the Hightower Building.

"We've owned this property for a year now, so this building has been planned for some time," said Hightower agent, Scooter Brown. "The site is leveled now," he noted. "We're laying things out to begin construction."

Chamber estimates availability of multi-tenant office space

The Midland Chamber of Commerce has completed its annual office study. Determining the office space coming in new construction and the amount already available, the chamber estimates 6.65 million square feet of net office space will be available for multi-tenant use here by 1984.

Almost one-third of that total for 1984 office space had been added during 1982, a boom year for office buildings: more than 1.9 million square feet came online.

Less than half as much office space will be added through 1983 — .74 million square feet. And so far, the chamber expects 1984 will add only .675 million square feet to make the 6.65 million total.

By comparison, in 1974 Midland had less than 2.1 million square feet of offices.

Growth rates by percentage tell the Tall City story: 1979 saw 16 percent more offices, 1980 was eight percent growth, 1981 was 17 percent, and 1982 had a massive increase of 61 percent more office space.

Projections for 1983 and 1984 are for much slower growth: '83 office space should increase 14 percent, and 1984 is expected to see an 11 percent rise.

Polish workers view papal visit with awe, resignation

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst European Bureau

KRACOW — As John Paul II celebrated the final mass of his visit to his homeland, a Polish worker wedged among two million other Poles watched the spectacle with feelings of both awe and resignation.

The pontiff's weeklong journey, he said, "will lift our spirits — but nothing else." His fists clenched and his voice quivering, the outspoken Pole looked ahead a few hours to the pope's departure, saying sadly, "There will be no new Solidarity and he can't take us with him."

He was one of the few Poles who dared bare his emotions about the pope's visit and the communist dictatorship that runs Poland. Most are wary of talking to westerners in anything other than platitudes.

The outspoken worker, for instance, spoke bitterly of a "conspiracy" which had thrust Poland, a deeply religious country, into the communist camp. He said he felt it was "a disgrace that the west didn't help Hungarians in 1955 or the Czechs in 1968" to throw off Soviet represion. Then, his voice trailing off, he muttered, "you know what I mean" and walked away."

In the bright sunshine of Blonie Park, where the pope celebrated his farewell mass, two priests warned reporters moving through the crowd that they were being watched. Almost in unison, the priests termed the pope's visit "the greatest thing...a happy thing...a trip that will lift the nation's spirit."

"The pope is lifting up our souls which had stopped laughing," said the younger of the two priests, "we've stopped laughing." The older priest said the government's attacks against the pope for his outspokeness were unjustified.

"He must speak of things here," he said. "he can't just ignore them. If he did, the people would lose total confidence in him as they have lost it in those who govern us."

A 61-year-old survivor of the Auschwitz death camp in World War II didn't think the pope's visit would change anything or "improve the common man's lot." A 20-year-old boy scout said he was "pessimistic."

A panhandler felt the pope's visit would result in the lifting of martial law. Many people expressed hope the visit would bring "peace" to Poland.

As dusk settled on Kracow and the pope was finally safely ensconced in the primate's palace, two policemen guarding an interchange expressed hope there will be rapprochment with the people.

"We're tired of fighting our own," one said.

Asked why she was marching 50 or more miles to honor the pontiff, a girl scout said, "you know he left this country with a toothbrush five years ago to return as the pope. He has come back as our one hope or better life. The way things are I am afraid he will not be able to ever return."

Houston police officer charged with rape, suspended from force

HOUSTON (AP) — A probationary Houston police officer has been charged with aggravated rape in an assault on a woman he met in a bar.

Glenn A. Whorton, 23, was charged Tuesday with aggravated rape and jailed in lieu of $10,000 bond. He also has been suspended from the police force.

Court records said Whorton pulled his pistol and forced the woman to have sex after picking up her and a friend.

The Houston Chronicle reported the city's homicide division is looking into the case because a witness in the investigation, a young woman, was found dead beside a road in Temple this week. She had wounds to the head of undetermined origin.

EPA files complaint against A&M

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The federal Environmental Protection Agency, accusing Texas A&M University of violating toxic substance regulations, has proposed civil penalties totaling $26,500 against the school.

An EPA complaint charged A&M's utility section with improper storage of the toxic substances and that the university failed to mark three PCB capacitors with a required label, and to affix a storage date on a PCB transformer.

A&M spokesman Jeffrey Alford said the university knows "we've got this problem, and it's our intention to get it cleared up as quickly as possible."

Officers cleared of brutality

HOUSTON (AP) — Four LaPorte police officers have been cleared of brutality allegations in a case that was the focus of blacks' complaints of police harassment in that city.

A Harris County grand jury Tuesday declined to indict officers Samuel Jacobs, T.L. Bird, J.E. Williamson and Gordon Rogers in the May 18 arrest of Stanley Ray Green, 22.

Green was charged with assault stemming from the officers' struggle with him during attempts to question him about a shooting in his neighborhood.

$48 million spent on rail proposal

HOUSTON (AP) — Metropolitan Transit Authority officials estimate they spent $48 million over 4½ years on the Houston rail proposal defeated by voters earlier this month.

Louise Ware, a member of the nine-person Metro board, said Tuesday the board must consider the commitment already made against the cost of beginning an entirely new plan.

The largest expense, nearly $33.5 million, was for planning and prelminary engineering for the rail system. Some $1.04 million was spent in the last eight months on wages for 52 people in the rail department.

Court upholds DWI conviction

AUSTIN (AP) — The 3rd Court of Appeals on Wednesday affirmed the drunken driving conviction of a man who, when officers stopped him and asked what he had been doing, replied that he and "I.W. Harper" had been duck hunting. I.W. Harper is a brand of bourbon.

Wallace Spencer was convicted in Bell County of driving while intoxicated and assessed a $350 fine and 90 days in county jail, which was probated by the judge.

Spencer argued that the evidence was insufficient to support the jury finding of guilt. Testifying in his own defense, Spencer said he had had two drinks of I.W. Harper while duck hunting early in the morning and that he may have spilled a little whiskey on his clothes.

Congress to vote on tax cut limit

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Texas congressmen have given much thought to how to vote today on the House Democratic leadership's proposal to put a limit on how much people with high incomes could receive from the President's tax cut.

Known as the "cap" on tax breaks, Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, one of the few who gives any hint as to how he will vote, said he expects to vote for it. Hance is on the House Ways and Means committee, which writes tax bills.

This would put Hance at counter point to the man he may try to oppose in the senate race in Texas, next year. Incumbent Reopublican Sen. John Tower is against the "cap".

Testimony to start in Skelton case

ODESSA (AP) — Testimony is scheduled to begin Monday in the capital murder trial of an Odessa man accused of killing a former business associate by rigging a bomb to the victim's pickup truck.

Attorneys on Wednesday completed the process of seating a dozen jurors and two alternates to hear the case against John C. Skelton.

Session may be extended if topics agreed upon

AUSTIN (AP) — A special session now under way in the Capitol could be extended to other topics, but only if there is a general agreement on the proposals beforehand, Gov. Mark White says.

Only topics submitted by the governor can be considered during a special session, and so far White has limited the called session to three items: a brucellosis-control bill, continuing the Texas Employment Commission and appropriating $15 million for a new gym and library at Texas Southern University.

He said Wednesday at his regular weekly news conference that he had been asked to extend the session to a "broad list" of other topics, including car safety seats for children, nursing home regulation reform, crop insurance, welfare payments and school financing.

"If there are other matters that they'd like to attend to now and that are on general consensus, then I think we should take into account those measures and try to get them accomplished," White said.

He said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis would have to agree before he would broaden the session to other topics.

White also said there was a "very good" chance that he would call another special session later in an effort to hike teachers' salaries after a committee studying public education finishes its report.

White said whether a special session on teachers' pay would be called this summer depends on how fast the Select Committee on Education does its work.

In Dallas, computer tycoon Ross Perot, the chairman of the education committee, said it was "premature" to say whether his panel could have some recommendations ready in time for the start of school.

"This is not some sort of sleight of hand show to ram a teachers pay program through the Legislature," Perot said. "It's part of it, but that's not why the committee was put together."

The governor said lawmakers were "a lot closer today" on agreeing on a brucellosis bill, which failed by one vote in the Senate during the regular session last month.

"They're not as adamant as they once were,, and there's been some moving toward the middle on the part of both sides," White said.

White said negotiations to solve the deadlock on continuing the Texas Employment Commission were still under way. A bill continuing the 4,200-worker agency, required by the state's "Sunset" law, failed in the final days of the regular session.

White said he favored the creation of a such a department, which would have become part of the TEC in an amendment offered by Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin. But objections to Doggett's amendment sank the entire bill.

White said such a department would give the state a chance to deal with a federal requirement "at the state level with state people, and deal with our problems here and not have to turn to Washington or let Washington be the site of that debate."

Man kills terminally ill wife, shoots himself

IRVING (AP) — Charles J. Pilgrim decided to end the suffering of his wife of almost 50 years, walked three miles to her hospital bed, shot her once in the head and then lay down on the floor beside her and took his own life.

Police said Pilgrim, 73, wrote in a seven-page note dated June 18 that there was "no hope for Vivian and that she had suffered enough pain and it was time...to go to make room for someone else."

Irving Community Hospital Administrator Bill Fowler said Vivian Pilgrim, 72, and her husband, Charles, were dead when their bodies were discovered by nurses who heard two gun shots in the room Wednesday morning.

Dallas County Medical Examiner Don Kirby said Wednesday afternoon that Mrs. Pilgrim's death was ruled a homicide and Pilgrim's a suicide.

Both were killed by a single gunshot to the head.

"It's unfortunate that the events occurred the way they did," the couple's son, Charles Pilgrim, 44, of Linthicum Heights, Md., told the Dallas Morning News. "My father chose that step on his own. She was ill and he felt sorry for her."

Police said Mrs. Pilgrim entered the hospital June 8, suffering from pneumonia, diabetes and terminal cancer.

A lab techician had been in the fourth-floor room less than 15 minutes before the shootings to take a blood sample, said police Sgt. T.L. Van Doren. He said at the time Mrs. Pilgrim was awake and her husband was not in the room.

"The nursing staff said he was not there a few minutes before (the shooting)," Fowler said. "The best we can summarize is he came in and went directly to her room."

Irving police Sgt. J.W. Wicker said Mrs. Pilgrim was lying in her bed. Her husband's body was on the floor. A .38-caliber automatic pistol was lying on the floor next to his body, Kirby said.

Van Doren said Pilgrim put the pistol to his wife's right temple, pulled the trigger, then put a rubber sheet on the floor beside her bed, lay down and shot himself.

Pilgrim's note said the couple's bills had been paid and told where their wills could be found.

Surgery to be done for Olympic donation

DALLAS (AP) — Surgeons who will rebuild the face of a 6-year-old boy whose head is deformed because of a congenital bone defect will perform the operation in return for a donation to the U.S. Olympic team.

Kevin Leyva of Pecos suffers from a defect that caused the bones in his skull to fuse too early, and already has had several operations to allow his brain to grow.

"The surgery changes the whole face, his whole personality," plastic surgeon Dr. Kenneth Salyer told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "We are literally rebuilding his entire face. We are changing him physically, but more importantly, we are changing his outlook."

The operation is possible because of a $22,500 donation by Fort Worth-based Tarrant County Coors beer distributors.

The family's health insurance will not cover all the costs of the surgery, Salyer said.

John McMillan, head of the distributors group, said Salyer and the other surgeons will donate the money to the U.S. Olympic team.

"Dr. Salyer and his group of physicians said they would do the work if someone would contribute," McMillan said. "They donated their services and gave the money to the Olympics. It was a double shot as far as I was concerned — helping this little boy and helping the Olympics."

Sue Leyva, Kevin's mother, said her son's first operation was performed when he was three weeks old. She said Kevin has had so many operations since then that she has lost count.

Texas company to customize sheik's jet

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A San Antonio company has been awarded a "large" contract to customize a Boeing 747's interior, but officials refuse to release any information about the Mideast sheik who hired them.

The sheik's contract specifies that most details of the project, especially his identity, be kept secret, according to Jerry Brilliant, personnel director for Dee Howard Co.

The company, which modifies aircraft, has two facilities in San Antonio.

Up to 300 people ranging from air-frame mechanics to engineers will be hired for the special project beginning in August, Brilliant said.

The customizing should take about 15 months, he said.

Next month, the company will start building a special hangar for the Boeing 747 "Stretch Upper Deck," which will be flown in from the Boeing Commercial Airplane Co. factory in Seattle, Wash., he said.

The length of the jet is 231 feet and the wingspan is 195 feet, about the size of a basketball court.

A privately ordered Boeing shell can cost a customer between $90 million to $100 million, accordng to Boeing public relations director John Wheeler.

Judge upholds death sentence

AUSTIN (AP) — The capital murder conviction against Walter Key Williams, sentenced to death for the 1981 holdup slaying of a convenience store clerk in San Antonio, has been upheld by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The judges affirmed the conviction and death sentence in an 8-1 ruling.

Williams had objected to the jury's finding that he would be a continuing threat to society, a determination necessary in death sentence cases. But the appeals court said the jurors were justified in basing their finding in part on Williams' statement to police about the killing: "I pulled out my mother's gun and shot (the victim, Daniel A. Liepold) one time, why I do not know...I then thought about it for a while and I decided to tell the complete truth. The reason for this is because I have never killed anybody and it bothered me," he confessed.

An unidentified coal miner keeps watch outside Clinchfield Coal Company's No. 1 mine in Dickenson County early Wednesday morning after an underground explosion killed seven miners and injured three others.

Methane gas may have caused fatal explosion

McCLURE, Va. (AP) — An explosion that killed seven miners and injured three others at an Appalachian mine shaft probably was caused by methane gas, said United Mine Workers President Rich Trumka.

The bodies of the seven miners, including a woman and a foreman three days from retirement, were removed from Clinchfield Coal Co.'s McClure No. 1 mine Wednesday after the Tuesday night blast.

Three other miners injured in the blast remained hospitalized, one in serious condition. Another 74 miners escaped injury, said Clinchfield spokeswoman Susan Copeland.

"All we know right now is that seven people were killed in a methane explosion," said Trumka, who arrived at the site late Wednesday. Five of the victims were UMW members.

"I'm not going to speculate on what could have been or what might have been," Trumka said. "We're in 1983. We ought to be able to prevent a methane explosion."

Ms. Copeland also speculated that the disaster was caused by methane gas, but said, "We don't know why it exploded."

"It was a gassy mine. It let out a lot of methane, but they kept a good check on it," said miner Jerry Jenkins, who was working in another section of the shaft during the explosion.

"We didn't hear no boom or anything like that," said Jenkins, a miner for 11 years. "It was a change in air pressure. Our ears popped and hurt and we felt a big rush of air. It was like a big wind, and then there was a lot of dust."

The 4-year-old mine consists of a 460-foot-deep vertical shaft and six horizontal tunnels branching off at different depths.

Ms. Copeland identified the dead as F.C. Riner, 58, a section foreman, of Dante; Ernest A. Hall, 30, a foreman, from Castlewood; J. Covey French, 45, of Clintwood; Luther McCoy, 37, of Nora; Dale Stamper Jr., 56, of Lebanon; Eugene W. Meade, 26, of Coeburn, and Mary K. Counts, 51, of Nora.

John Kennedy, president of District 28 of the UMW, said 11 miners have been killed at the McClure No. 1 site. He said Ms. Counts was believed to be the first woman miner killed in Virginia.

Riner had only three days before he was to retire, said his daughter, Connie.

The injured were identified as Emmery Howard, 30, of Cleveland; Harold J. Boyd, 25, of Dante, and Miles W. Sutherland, 51, of Castlewood.

Victim one of Virginia's first women coal miners

McCLURE, Va. — A sharp-tongued grandmother who battled sexual harassment but let people know she loved her job as a coal miner became the state's first female mining casualty in an explosion that claimed six other lives.

Mary Kathleen "Cat" Counts, 51, outlived two husbands and divorced a third before she went to the mines five years ago to give her five children a better life.

She died Tuesday night, when an explosion ripped through Clinchfield Coal Co.'s McClure No. 1 mine, Virginia's worst mine accident in 25 years.

"It was a job she just loved," said her friend, Tena Willemsma. "I think it was the first job she ever had that satisfied her."

Friends remembered the toughness that earned Ms. Counts respect in a profession dominated by men, as well as a gentleness that led her to adopt stray animals.

"The only things she ever talked about were the mines, her grandchildren and animals," said Don Prange, pastor of The Church of The People, a small nondenominational church that Ms. Counts attended and helped to found.

She was born in Nora, about five miles south of McClure, and rarely left the row of small towns that hug the mountains along State Highway 63. She lived with her youngest child, a 16-year-old daughter, and another miner, in a house trailer in Nora. Before she went to the mines, she worked at the Dickinson County Food Co-op, a grocery owned by most of McClure's 500 residents.

Prange said Ms. Counts became a miner in 1978 to give a better life for three daughters and two sons, who now range in age from 16 to 30.

"When she first went in there, the men really gave her a hard time. There was sexual harassment, but she dished it right back," Prange said.

"She really had a sense of humor; you never knew what was going to come out of Cat Counts' mouth," said Joyce Amburgey, the Food Co-op's assistant manager. "All the women here knew her. She was always joking, saying she was going to take their husbands."

House Democratic leaders testing Reagan's programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders are aiming a double-barreled blast at President Reagan's economic program with the House voting on a budget plan that reverses Reagan's spending priorities and a separate measure limiting next month's personal income tax cut.

"We have the votes for both bills," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said of the action scheduled today on the House floor. The Democrats' 99-seat majority in the House was expected to assure passage of both measures.

The president, meanwhile, is giving no ground, declaring he is "prepared to veto their budget-busting bills again, and again and again."

First, the House was voting on the compromise $859 billion 1984 budget that congressional negotiators approved earlier this week. That plan includes $73 billion in tax increases over the next three years, at least $15 billion more for domestic spending than Reagan has recommended and half the military spending boost the president asked for.

The budget plan is a guide for Congress as it drafts spending and tax bills and does not go to the president for his signature.

Next up today was the Democratic plan to limit the July 1, 10 percent personal income tax rate cut to about $720 per couple and a little less than $700 for single people.

House Republicans have indicated they would be virtually unanimous in their opposition to both measures.

Democrats have portrayed the so-called tax cap measure as a move to restore fairness to Reagan's tax policies, which Democrats argue favor the rich.

On Wednesday, Reagan said, "Capping the the third year of the tax cut won't soak the rich, but it will drown millions of taxpayers in the middle class."

He said the Democratic plan would mean the tax rate for a married couple with a combined taxable income of $35,000 would go from 33 percent to 37 percent.

O'Neill replied that Reagan is merely "playing with the numbers" and it is time for the "rich to bear the burden as well as the benefits of Reaganomics."

O'Neill said "90 percent of the money raised by the cap will come from those making $50,000 and above."

Democrats also have attacked the tax cuts as removing too much money from government coffers at a time the administration is pressing increases in defense spending. That, Democrats say, is fueling record budget deficits.

Americans living in 'minefield of risks'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans live in a "minefield of risks" from chemicals in the environment and can no longer assume the government is protecting them, the new head of the Environmental Protection Agency says.

William Ruckelshaus, in his first major policy speech as EPA administrator, said Wednesday a major new effort is needed to coordinate health protection efforts of the various government agencies.

Speaking to some 150 scientists at the National Academy of Sciences, Ruckelshaus said it would take something close to a miracle to get the country back on the right track because of the emotionalism that now surrounds the environmental debate.

Part of the fear stems from the proliferation of chemical substances which many scientists believe are harmful even at very small concentrations, he said.

"Since these substances are widespread in the environment, and since we can detect them down to very low levels, we must assume that life now takes place in a minefield of risks from hundreds, perhaps thousands, of substances," Ruckelshaus said.

"No more can we tell the public: you are home free with an adequate margin of safety," he said.

Ruckelshaus said he has been looking for ways to provide better coordination between different government agencies on the way each assesses and manages health risks.

He said instead of the current hodgepodge of standards written into the law there should be one uniform method for assessing the risk of cancer and other health problems.

"The public interest is not served by two federal agencies taking diametrically opposed positions on a given toxic substance and then arguing about it in the press," Ruckelshaus said.

He said that all of the government regulatory agencies charged with protecting the public health and the environment should be given a common legislative formula for accomplishing their task.

Ruckelshaus said the government-wide risk formula that he was talking about "may well weigh public health very heavily in the equation." But he said it should also take into account the many uncertainties that exist in current scientific knowledge.

Psychiatrist charged with sex crime

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (AP) — A former president of the Wisconsin Psychiatric Association has been charged with having sexual contact with adolescent boys in an Eau Claire hospital.

Jack D. Edson, 54, was freed on $5,000 bond Wednesday after a Circuit Court judge scheduled a hearing July 19 concerning the 18-count complaint.

William Lamb of the Eau Claire County district attorney's office said Edson is accused of indecently touching patients aged 12-17 between 1979 and May 1983, sometimes telling them the activity was therapeutic.

He completed a two-year term as president of the association in February. The complaint stems from a one month investigation, police said.

Luther Hospital, where the alleged incidents occurred, said Edson resigned from its staff June 8.

Rocks could redefine Antactica history

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new look at some old rocks has produced a surprising cache of small fossils that scientists say could redefine the glacial history of Antarctica.

The wide variety of ancient marine fossils were discovered in rock samples from throughout the longest mountain range in Antarctica and scientists said Wednesday that the find may change current thinking about ice movement on that continent.

The microscopic fossils, which range in age from 2 million years to 70 million years old, were in sediments gathered along 1,000 miles of the 1,900-mile-long Transantarctic Mountain range, the National Science Foundation announced.

Researchers from Ohio State University told the foundation, which sponsors the research, that the fossils show that glacial movement on the continent has been more frequent than previously believed.

Dr. Peter N. Webb said the fossils apparently were carried up the mountains by advancing ice sheets and left there when the ice receded. The fossils mostly represent the remains of single-cell plants such as diatoms and tiny animals known as plankton.

The microfossils were found in areas between 7,000 and 9,000 feet above sea level long the mountain range, which divides the frozen continent into East and West Antarctica.

The sediment samples in which the fossils were found were brought back from Antarctica in 1964 by Dr. John H. Mercer of Ohio State. But the samples were studied for geological purposes and the small fossils were not noticed until a recent re-examination, Webb said in a telephone interview.

"We've had the samples for 20 years, I'm embarrassed to say," he continued, "but we only recently looked at them for microfossils and were amazed by what we found."

"The presence of these microfossils suggest that over many millions of years, large areas of the vast East Antarctic Ice Sheet expanded across the East Antarctic land mass, overlapped major mountain chains and extended across the continental shelves," Webb said.

During periods of glacial recession, he said, shallow seas apparently were formed across large areas of the continent.

Webb said most of the fossils probably were carried up the mountains in the bottom few hundred feet of glaciers thousands of feet thick. These fossils probably were scooped up from faraway interior basins as the ice sheets passed by.

Scientists were able to date the mishmash of fossils by the types of samples found, since certain classes of organisms lived only during specific time periods.

While the youngest fossils could have been alive when the deposits were formed, he said, the oldest ones were already fossilized when they were picked up.

Webb said the newest fossils — those dated between 2 million and 4 million years — also are interesting because they indicate more recent ice advances than scientists previously believed.

"Before this discovery, most people thought the ice dynamics had been stationary for the last 20 million years," he said.

Cranston proposes compensation for Japanese-Americans interned in WWII

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and 25 House members joined Tuesday in introducing legislation to "recognize and redress the injustice and violations of civil liberties" of 120,000 Japanese-Americans who were forcibly removed from their West Coast homes and held in detention camps during World War II.

Although Cranston's bill does not set a specific amount for the compensation, the House bill, introduced by Rep. Michael Lowry, D-Wash., calls for payment of $20,000 to each of the estimated 60,000 surviving victims of the internment. That would mean a cost of $1.2 billion.

"These Americans of Japanese descent were clearly mistreated and their basic civil liberties violated" by a government that acted without individual review or due process and "without regard for individuals who had demonstrated loyalty to the United States," Cranston said.

ALTHOUGH THERE WERE NO documented acts of espionage or sabotage by the Japanese-Americans at the outbreak of the war, Cranston said, "Their lives were disrupted, fortunes lost and loyal citizens and legal residents incarcerated.

"This episode in American history should never have happened and it is the government's responsiblity to set the record straight and to try, at least, to recognize and partially compensate for past injustices," the Democratic presidential candidate told a news conference.

Lowry said that by ordering the relocation of all the Japanese-Americans from the West Coast without any proof of wrongdoing, the United States government "violated our own Bill of Rights."

"If that can be condoned, the rights of no person in this country are safe," he said.

Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., R-N.Y., the only Republican co-sponsoring either bill, said: "I don't think the United States can ever preach to other countries about human rights and liberty if it does not own up to its own past wrongdoings and act to make amends."

LOWRY'S BILL IS CO-SPONSORED by 24 members, including nine from California, where most of the Japanese-Americans were living at the beginning of 1942.

Among the co-authors are Reps. Julian Dixon, D-Los Angeles; Mervyn Dymally, D-Compton; and Mel Levine, D-Santa Monica. The two Japanese-American California congressmen, Robert Matsui, D-Sacramento, and Norman Mineta, D-San Jose, are not co-sponsors.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., does not support general compensation for the interned Japanese-Americans although he believes the internment was wrong, a spokesman for Wilson said.

"Pete believes those people deserve an apology for the mistake made," press aide Otto Bos said. And he would support repayment for proven property loss or damages on a case-by-case basis, but not "across-the-board compensation, particularly in light of the budget situation," Bos said.

The introduction of the bills comes a week after the presidential Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians released its report on the financial loss suffered by the Japanese-Americans forced from their West Coast homes and the small number of Alaskan-Aleuts who were evacuated from the Aleutian Islands following the Japanese invasion there.

THE COMMISSION, ESTABLISHED in 1980, issued its first report Feb. 24 in which it said the order to relocate the Japanese-Americans was unnecessary from a national security standpoint and was caused by "race prejudice, war hysteria and a failure of political leadership."

The second report estimated the financial losses suffered by the interned Japanese-Americans at between $149 million and $370 million in 1945 dollars. Those losses, adjusted to 1983 inflated dollars, would go as high as $2 billion, the commission said.

The commission noted that 26,568 claims were filed after the war seeking compensation for $148 million in losses, but only $37 million was paid by the government.

Bush beginning two-week tour of Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush was leaving today for a two-week tour of Europe, where he will attempt to persuade allies the Reagan administration is trying to promote democracy in Central America, "imperfect as some of the systems are."

Bush flies first to London, where he will meet with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on Friday, and will go on to West Germany, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Denmark, Ireland and Iceland.

Bush told foreign journalists before his departure that he looks on the eight-nation journey as a followup to his visit to the NATO countries in January. But he said this time he doesn't expect to have to work as hard to convince the allies of President Reagan's sincerity in seeking a nuclear arms accord with the Soviets.

He noted that elections in Britain and West Germany have affirmed the allies' resolve to deploy intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe by the end of the year if the Soviets don't agree to reduce their own weapons positioned within range of West European capitals.

Three persons to face trial

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — Three people face trial Aug. 22 on charges of harboring fugitive tax protester Gordon Kahl, who died in a shootout at an ammunition-filled bunker.

Kahl, 63, a member of the militant anti-tax group Posse Comitatus, was killed June 3 after exchanging gunfire with authorities. Sheriff Gene Matthews was also killed.

The trial date was set Wednesday for Arthur Russell, 74, of Mountain Home; Ed Udey, 70, and his 61-year-old wife, Irene, both of Cotter.

Two others also indicted on charges of harboring Kahl — Leonard Ginter and his wife Norma, 58, of Smithville — will be arraigned June 29, U.S. Attorney Asa Hutchinson said Wednesday.

Klansman jailed on complaint

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A Ku Klux Klansman jailed on a federal civil rights complaint in the beating death of a black youth found hanging from a tree now faces a state murder charge in the same case.

Henry Francis Hays, an admitted member of the United Klans of America, was indicted Wednesday by a special grand jury. The 28-year-old had been charged last week with the civil rights violation in the 1981 slaying of Michael Donald, 19, of Mobile.

He is being held on $1 million bond on the civil rights complaint, which was filed by the FBI.

Protestors refuse arraignments

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — About 1,000 jailed anti-nuclear demonstrators have refused arraignments to give their lawyers time to negotiate with the district attorney, a protest organizer says.

The protesters, including 33 arrested Wednesday, demonstrated for the last three days at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, a government weapons research center.

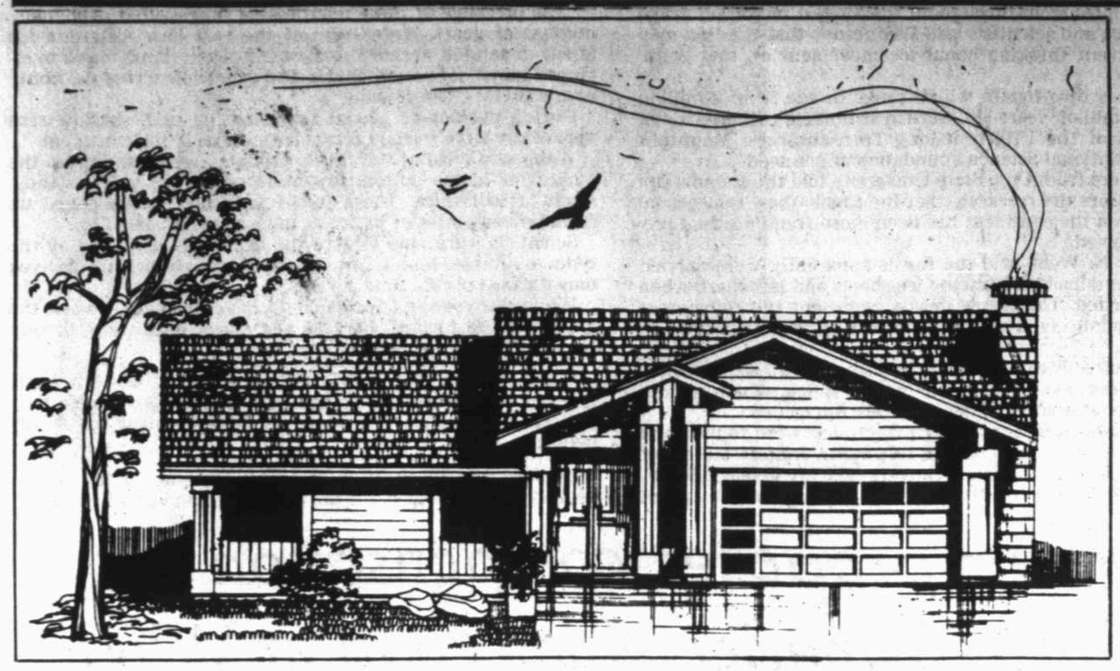

Tamara Thompson of the Livermore Action Group said only 64 of the 1,067 inmates have been arraigned on misdemeanor charges of obstructing traffic or resisting arrest, which carry penalties of up to six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Hired killer shows no emotion

NEW YORK (AP) — A hired killer convicted of murdering a federal witness and three CBS technicians showed no emotion as a judge imposed maximum penalties for the crimes — up to life in prison.

Justice Clifford A. Scott sentenced Donald Nash, 47, of Keansburg, N.J., to four consecutive terms of 25 years to life for the April 12, 1982, slayings of Margaret Barbera and the three CBS employees who had tried to come to her aid at a lonely pier in Manhattan.

"It was both a murder for hire and a wanton multiple homicide," Scott said in imposing sentence Wednesday. Prosecutors said Nash had been hired to kill Miss Barbera to keep her from testifying in a multimillion-dollar fraud case involving her former employer.

Luxurious features of the Angelica include accessability to spacious rooms.

Angelica achieves comfort, livability

By JAMES McALEXANDER
Copley News Service

The dramatic entrance and luxurious features of the Angelica cannot disguise the genuine comfort and livability it achieves.

From the front hall, you can choose to step down either to the family room on the right, or to the large living room at the rear of the home.

A formal dining room opens to the living room as well as a sunny deck, and is convenient to a kitchen that also serves the family room.

Informal meals may be eaten in the bay-window breakfast nook, or snacks carried to the family room to be enjoyed in front of the fireplace.

The bedrooms are separate from the activity areas. Two bedrooms share a full bath and linen storage. The master suite entrance repeats the use of double doors for a dramatic effect, and delivers what it promises with a full, double vanity bath, extra closet space and a sunken bedroom with large windows to take advantage of a view.

The utility is easily accessible from the inside entry to the garage.

For more information on the Angelica (108-41), send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Designer Homes, Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2832 CN, Eugene, OR 97402. Designers, architects and readers with plans they would like to see featured also are invited to contact Landmark.

Monthly weight gain is normal

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered
Dietitian
Copley News Service

DEAR SHIRLEY: I have been trying to lose weight and I do pretty well until I get my period and then I gain it all back. It is so depressing that I feel like going on a chocolate binge every month. So far, I have only done it twice, but I am worried that I will forget my diet and gain a lot more weight.

Does my menstrual time have an effect on my metabolism or something? Can you give me any suggestions to help me? Do other women have the same problem?

I am 26 years old and my husband hates my excess poundage. I hope you will answer my letter, because I need help. — E.M.

DEAR E.M.: Many women suffer from the same problem because the menstrual cycle really does affect weight gain-loss and water retention of your body.

The basic metabolic rate varies significantly during the menstrual cycle. It goes down at menstruation and reaches its lowest level about a week before ovulation, then rises again until the beginning of the next cycle. These are considered to be only short-term changes connected with the normal menstrual periods, and do not produce the major changes in body weight.

Many women find it helpful to reduce their salt intake during this time, to reduce the amount of water retention. If you understand what is happening to you for a few days each month, you will be less likely to become so depressed that you want to binge. Instead, accept the anticipated fluctuation in your weight and realize that it is only temporary.

Stay with your weight reduction program to get rid of the actual fat accumulation on your body, because the closer you are to your normal weight, the less weight you will tend to gain during a period.

DEAR SHIRLEY: My daughter just had her first baby and I am wondering if it would be a good idea to start a baby boy out on a low-cholesterol and low-fat diet? I have been reading about preventing heart attacks and clogged arteries in later life, by putting children on a diet like that.

Both of the new baby's grandfathers have had a heart attack. Does that mean that the baby could develop a heart problem later? What is the best diet for a baby by today's standards?

Please put your answer in the paper, because my daughter always reads your column. I don't want her to think I am interfering, but I think she will listen to you. — Mrs. A.W.C.

DEAR MRS. A.W.C.: The best diet for a baby by today's standards, as it always has been, is breast feeding. Mothers continue to supply the ideal food for their babies.

Excessive fat restriction is generally not indicated in infancy and most feeding regimens based on formulas are low in cholesterol. The major concern now is that the baby not become severely overweight.

Bottle-fed babies tend to be fatter and the introduction of other foods too early (age 2 to 3 months) often causes unnecessary and undesirable excessive weight gains.

The fact that your grandchild's grandfathers have both had heart attacks may provide some predisposition toward cardiovascular problems later in life, but a healthy, active normal weight child has little to fear.

DEAR SHIRLEY: My husband has been put on a low-sodium diet by his doctor, and he was given a list of foods to follow but there was no mention of other things to avoid.

Does it matter if a person on that kind of diet takes over-the-counter products? My husband has taken Alka-Seltzer for years for headaches. Sometimes he also takes a Bromo-Seltzer because he thinks it helps his stomach. He didn't tell the doctor that he takes these things because he says they can't hurt him and they have been on the market for years.

I am worried that they contain something my husband shouldn't have now. Am I right or am I worried for nothing? — Mrs. J.F.

DEAR MRS. J.F.: You are absolutely right. The products your husband takes are quite high in sodium and should not be used by anyone on a sodium-restricted diet.

Bromo-Seltzer contains 717 mg. of sodium per dose and blue package Alka-Seltzer contains 551 mg. of sodium per dose. Gold package Alka-Seltzer contains less at 276 mg. per dose, but it is still too much sodium.

Most antacids contain sodium, but I would discuss it with the doctor for a safe recommendation. Don't take anything without reading the label first, and remember that the ingredients that arelisted first are the largest in quantity.

Naturalness, simplicity are charms of French ambassador's wife

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Long evening gowns "are the blue jeans of the profession," running an embassy in Washington "is just like running a house in France," and she has never heard of low-calorie wines.

Denise Silet-Pathe Vernier-Palliez, the French ambassador's wife, settled into the gold-and-white sofa in the presidential suite of the Westgate Hotel here and smoothed her tiered skirt bought off the rack at the Chacock shop in Paris.

As a "diplomat" from France in this country, currently accompanying her husband on a quick trip to California and Arizona, she exuded that famous Gallic charm with every smile.

Charm is her way of listening raptly and paying attention only to the speaker. It's the naturalness, simplicity and good humor of her answers. And it's the way she thinks of herself — as a woman lucky to be living this fresh new experience of being an ambassador's wife after years as a French businessman's wife.

She is married to Bernard Vernier-Palliez, who trained for the diplomatic corps before World War II, then became a French resistance fighter and later president of Renault. He retired from that post and was named ambassador to the United States in January 1982. She is the daughter of Charles Pathe, founder of French silent films and producer of the 1927 classic "Napoleon," which is now being shown in this country.

She saw the film at the age of 8 when it came out in France, then viewed it again last year in Washington, D.C. But she points out that her father, "rather old when I was born," retired in 1930 and that she therefore has little knowledge of the transition of the film industry from small- to mega-business.

What she does like to discuss is the sharp change in her lifestyle from French businessman's wife — "wives don't share in the business world there" to becoming the representative of French women in this country.

"It's wonderful to change your life completely when you are my age," said the woman who is in her 60s. "I like changes, new experiences. I have enthusiasm. You must put enthusiasm into what you do."

Victoria's beauty principle: Dress with dignity

By COLETTE BOUCHEZ
Copley News Service

A very famous celebrity designer once said, "There's a fine line between a sexy lady and a tootsie ... and all it takes is one painted toenail over the line and your appearance can go from high-class sex appeal to torrid tacky."

When it comes to the bevy of prime-time beauties seen each night on TV, there are those who fall into both categories. But for high-class sex appeal, the lady who leads them all is Victoria Principal.

As the bewitching Pamela Ewing on super sudser "Dallas," Victoria is indeed a super classy beauty and her secret, she claims, is to always dress with dignity.

"If you select clothes that are low-keyed," says Victoria, "and classic in design, you can't go wrong.

"Also I think it's important that whatever you wear should fit well. I know this sounds elementary, but there's a fashion misconception that says if clothes are tight they look sexy ... but I find this is not so. Things that are too tight just look simply too tight and not all that appealing."

Even though Victoria is a tiny size 3, she has a curvy figure and she gives those curves prime consideration when choosing her wardrobe both onstage and off.

"I do have a large bust, even though I am small," she says, "and I try NOT to bring attention to that. I don't wear any tight tops or extremely low necklines. ... I don't think they look very attractive on me.

"I would rather see my shape moving UNDER things," she continues, "rather than all punched up and out.

"I also think that fabric plays a large part in how sexy you look. A dress can be a very simple design, with a high neck and long sleeves, but if it's in a soft, fluid fabric that drapes over your figure, it can really be very appealing."

When choosing her clothes for the show as well as for her personal life, neither "Pamela" nor Victoria is label-conscious. She purchases items based on how well they look on her.

"I don't often buy designer clothes," says this super beauty, "and if I do, it's because I like the cut and the way it fits. But then, I'll wear it for 10 years; I don't mind wearing clothes again, because I don't like to waste money"

Several years ago Victoria was honored by HARPER'S BAZAAR, as one of the world's 10 most beautiful women and she has grown even more beautiful since. One of her most admired features has always been her flawless complexion, which she credits to collagen, the popular bovine protein extract now found in many creams and lotions.

"I first found collagen when I was in Europe," reports Victoria, "long before it was available in the United States. The Europeans have always heralded it as the 'fountain of youth,' and I really believe it. When I returned home to America and found it wasn't available here, I purchased it mail-order from a company in Germany. ... I just couldn't give it up!

"I've been using it now for over 10 years and if anything has helped my skin to look good, it has been that.

"I think it's importtant to look your best," she concludes, "mostly because it helps you to feel good about yourself ... and when you can feel good about yourself, you've taken the first and most important step toward looking good to all who see you."

SUPER BEAUTY HINT

Try these super beauty cosmetic tips for glamour that is hassle-free:

1. If you have long fingernails you probably already know that applying lip gloss (or any creamy substance) from a pot can be a hassle. You end up with more product under your nails than on your figertips.

If this is your problem, reach into the pot or jar with the back of your finger, using the top side of your nail as a tiny scoop. Then use the tip of your finger from the other hand to remove the product from the top of the nail and presto: the undersides of your nails are clean!

2. If you line the inside rim of your lower lid with an eye pencil, you may find that tearing is a problem. However, if you line only as far as your tear duct (the tiny gland on the very innermost corner of your eye) and not over it, it will most likely result in fewer tears and longer-lasting color.

3. More smears and tears can occur when you try to coat your lower lashes with mascara. If this is the case, hold the wand perpendicular to your eye using only the tip to stroke and coat your lower lashes.

Basket lids add color

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Redecorating: You start with painting the walls, then you decide you need new curtains, then rugs look out of place and so on.

You can add a lovely touch of new color to any room you are working on with baskets. Give your baskets new color and appeal by making pretty lids for them.

Cut a piece of heavy cardboard the size and shape of the top of your basket, cutting out for handles where necessary.

Cut two pieces of fabric the shape of the cardboard lid but ½ inch larger all around. Glue one piece of fabric to one side of the lid, allowing it to extend ½ inch all around. This will be the underside of the lid.

On top side of lid, pad lightly with polyester fiber filling, using a drop or two of glue to hold it in place. Over the padding stretch the other piece of fabric, gluing it securely all around the ½-inch extension.

Trim this ½-inch extension to ¼ inch with pinking shears.

For trim, select bias tape or fold-over braid as your base. Add one, two or three layers of ruffling, lace, etc., graduating the widths.

Open bias tape or braid, insert top edges of trim. Hand-sew all layers together.

AT WIT'S END

Rats lose one

By ERMA BOMBECK

The "basement experience" in Filene's Department Store in Boston is a lot like the "basement experience" in department stores everywhere.

With the possible exception that everything is computerized. Every transaction is a beep, a squeak, a dot-dot-dot, a red light, a green light, a printout or a bell.

The machines do everything. They discount, make five copies, add the tax, describe the item ordered, keep track of inventory and order you to have a good day.

To those of us who, in a previous life, dealt with humans, it's an awesome experience. Sorta like what I would imagine it would be like if someone shoved you out of a space shuttle on a two-inch leash.

And then there was that morning on Saturday, April 16 . . . a day that will live in infamy for shoppers everywhere . . . the day the computers broke down.

I was in a line at the register clutching two pairs of sale shoes in my hand. The woman in front of me had two pairs of pantyhose and the one behind me had a half slip.

The woman in front of two pairs of pantyhose had just handed the salesperson a lavender sweater when everything stopped!

"What happened?" she asked.

The salesperson stood like a robot without expression or explanation, staring at the machine. Lavender sweater panicked and rushed to another register.

After about ten minutes, half slip caved in and said, "Who needs this aggravation?"

Two pairs of pantyhose and I just stood there for a long time observing what was going on around us. The place was pandemonium. Can you imagine a basement full of women who had merchandise and credit cards and couldn't buy a single thing? One woman pleaded with an expressionless salesperson, "I'll pay cash. Don't you understand? Money. American money!"

She was told the computer had to record the sale.

Finally, two pairs of pantyhose sighed and said tiredly, "Look at 'em. Helpless without computers. I knew it would come to this. A whole industry brought to its knees probably because of a little fuse."

I nodded. "That's why I never had electric garage doors."

She knew she had an ally. "I'm glad this happened. Maybe now those fancy-schmancy people upstairs will realize that everything needs a human element to survive."

Then she leaned over the computer and cupping her hand yelled at the computer, "I told you so!"

And on that day in April, history was made. A person said something to a computer and the computer couldn't say anything back. If you're keeping score, the rats lost one.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Special potting soil required for orchids

By ELVIN MCDONALD

It seems to me by all counts more people are growing orchids then ever before. Last week they made the New York Times, I saw them in a spectacular show at the New York Botanical Garden, and tuned into "The Prime of Your Life" as Arlene Francis interviewed a couple who have found health, happiness and friends through orchids.

It is widely held that those who seriously pursue growing orchids live longer and better. Who can explain it? Perhaps it is enough to consider there are 400-800 distinct genera of orchid, 30,000 or so species and hundreds of thousands of hybrids.

Despite the proliferating numbers, orchid culture is becoming easier, more accessible. There are not only orchids for all window exposures and light gardens, miniatures abound. Orchid flowers are unusually long-lasting, often devastatingly fragrant and many appear twice, three times or more in a year.

Mary Noble, who grows superb orchids and writes how to do it so that anyone can understand, says it's not that orchids are difficult but different. There is always yet another challenge, an orchid to befriend and make comfortable in what may be a completely alien environment.

One major difference about orchids is that they don't grow in just any old potting soil you might pick up at the five-and-dime, which is not to say you won't find there what you need. My Woolworth's regularly stocks osmunda fiber, the time-honored medium for growing orchids, and also fir bark. Tree-fern is also widely used, not to mention charcoal chips, slabs of cork bark, and mixtures using coarse peat, redwood bark or fiber, perlite, turkey grit and decayed oak leaves.

An excellent way to get acquainted with orchid growing mediums is to order them in small quantities from a specialty grower — until you find what produces the desired results. One such supplier is Orchids by Hausermann, Inc., Box 363, Elmhurst, Ill. 60126 (color catalog $1.25).

At the very heartbeat of today's passion for orchids is the American Orchid Society, one of the largest such organizations in the world. Annual dues of $20 (84 Sherman St., Cambridge, Mass. 02140) include a monthly "Bulletin" packed with grow-how, plants, developments and dates for orchid shows.

Biggest orchid date in the near future is the first week of March '84 when 7,000 fanciers will meet in Miami for the 11th World Orchid Conference. At a press preview held this winter I felt it was as welcoming and stimulating to a non-specialist like me as to the growers and breeders, some of whom were showing plants valued at $10,000. For details about attending, write Sue Skeoch, 11th W.O.C., Inc., Box 59-5150, Miami, Fla. 33159.

Good beginner orchids in high light are cattleya and allied laelia, brassavola and sophronitis; in medium light phalaenopsis; and in low light the mottleleaf paphiopedilums and jewel orchids such as haemaria or ludisia. Established, flowering-size plants of ordinary varieties are about $10.

A fluorescent-light garden with four 40-watt tubes burned 16 hours daily can satisfy a variety of orchids: cattleya, laelia and equitant oncidium at the center, where the light is strongest; mottleleaf paphiopedilums toward the ends, where it is weakest; and phalaenopsis in between.

My notebook sheets on basic orchid culture are in preparation. For yours send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Orchids" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305; in Canada, 4141 Glenayr Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont. L2E 6K1.

Q — Why doesn't my string-of-pearls grow strong and pretty green beads?

A — It needs more sun and warmth.

Q — Can pine needles be used to mulch strawberries and fruit trees?

A — I use them all over my garden in Connecticut. As pine needles decompose, however, they make the soil more acid. Offset this by applying dolomitic limestone.

Quick Take: No words are wasted in a new leaflet from All-American Rose Selections, Box 218 Shenandoah, Iowa 51601. Send them a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope.

DEAR ABBY

Missing books may be censor act

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 50-year-old woman who has been married and on my own for 30 years.

After my mother visited me recently, I noticed that several of my books on sex were missing from my bookcase. No one else could have taken them, and since she is from the "old school" (sex is dirty), I'm sure she took them to throw in the trash. On previous occasions, when Mother has looked through my library, she's commented on how "disgusting" some of my books were, and said I should be ashamed to have them in my house.

I feel violated, and I am furious. All my life I've held my tongue to keep the peace and avoid arguments with her.

Should I confront her, or let it go? – GEMINI

DEAR GEMINI: That you should sk, "Should I confront her, or let it go," tells me that you are either unwilling or unable to handle the confrontation and are looking to me for permission to let it go.

You are appropriately outraged that your mother would confiscate your property and treat you as a child, but until you are willing to confront her and demand your rights to be treated as an adult, nothing will change. You, and only you, can make that decision.

DEAR ABBY: For the last six months I have worked in a movie theater in San Francisco, and I feel that I do a very good job.

Last week I changed my hair color from brown to red. It looks very natural – not punk or new wave. Just red.

Anyway, here's the problem. My manager thinks it is awful and I should change it back immediately. I think he is overstepping his bounds as manager to even suggest such a thing.

Do you think I should bow to his wishes, or do what I want with my hair? I'm a male, if that makes a difference. – RED AND FUMING

DEAR RED: Male or female, it's your right to change the color of your hair. And if, as you say, it looks "natural" and not "punk or new wave," your manager is indeed overstepping his bounds in suggesting that you change it back immediately.

DEAR ABBY: I love my husband, but his snoring is driving me out of my mind. Separate beds won't help. We need separate bedrooms! We've been married for 43 years and he's always snored, but lately his snoring has become intolerable.

I was told there is a new operation that actually cures snoring. Will you please look into it and let me know what it is called, where it is performed and how much it costs? Hurry your answer before I have a nervous breakdown. – AGNES IN ROANOKE, VA.

DEAR AGNES: The operation is called a "palatopharyngoplasty," and among other places it has been successfully performed at Stanford University Medical Center by Dr. F. Blair Simmons.

A few days in the hospital are required, and it's cheaper than a nervous breakdown.

More information can be obtained from sleep disorder centers, usually located at major university medical centers.

'Bounty' sails again in Tahitian waters

ENTERTAINMENT

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — How sails the "Bounty" in Tahitian waters?

Splendidly, reports Anthony Hopkins, latest of the Captain Bligh. He spoke by telephone from Tahiti, where "The Bounty" is midway through location filming. The $25-million Orion Pictures release completed interior shooting in London and is now under sail in the Southern Hempisphere.

"We've finished four weeks of locations and we're right on schedule," said Hopkins. "That's rather an accomplishment, considering the difficulty of working at sea. It's tough maneuvering the boat into the right position, and also we have a short day. It's winter here, and we have to quit shooting about four, otherwise the camera shows glints of light from the setting sun."

He added that the director, Australian-born Roger Donaldson, seemed to have the situation in hand, surprising because his previous films have been made in New Zealand on shoestring budgets.

It was a different story 22 years ago in Tahiti. When MGM's second "Mutiny on the Bounty" was filmed there, the budget ballooned to $25 million ($50 million in today's money).

The Bounty saga has had a long history in films, dating back to an early 1930s Australian version that starred Errol Flynn. Clark Gable and Charles Laughton appeared in the 1935 "Mutiny on the Bounty," winner of the Oscar as best picture; it was filmed at Catalina Island, 25 miles from the Pacific Coast. The later movie starred Marlon Brando and Trevor Howard and was less well received.

Dino Di Laurentiis wanted to retell the story, and David Lean ("Lawrence of Arabia") prepared an epic version. Too epic, since it would have required two complete movies. Meanwhile De Laurentiis had spent $4 million on a brand-new seaworthy HMS Bounty. Finally the production jelled, with Anthony Hopkins as Bligh and Mel Gibson as Fletcher Christian.

"We're not trying to steal a march on the other two films," said Hopkins. "The story is so great that it's worth retelling, and I think we will be a bit more accurate about the actual events.

"Bligh was not a sadist, not a monster. He was a compassionate man, who generally treated his crew in a humane manner. His main problem was that he couldn't communicate with his crew, and especially with Fletcher Christian. When they had a misunderstanding, Bligh lost grip of his command, and the mutiny resulted.

"It was a small mutiny and probably would have gone unnoticed except for Bligh's remarkable feat of sailing 4,000 miles in an open boat. He was a great navigator."

Hopkins remembers seeing the 1935 version as a lad in England during the 1950s, "and it made a tremendous impression on me — Charles Laughton was terrific." His memory of the Brando film is dimmer, which may be fortunate.

A major problem with the 1962 "Bounty" was the ship itself, a faithful reproduction that sometimes took half a day to maneuver into filming position.

"Our Bounty has diesel engines, so it's relatively easy to move," said Hopkins. "But it's still a 90-foot ship and by the time you get 25 actors, crew and equipment on board, it's a pretty tight situation."

If director Donaldson can maintain the schedule, the third (fourth?) "Bounty" will sail to completion on the island of Gisborne on Aug. 5.

'Superman III' defeats challengers in race for summer box office dollars

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Superman III" defeated all challengers last weekend in the race for summer box office dollars, topping even "Return of the Jedi," but not by enough to cause any gray hair for "Jedi" creator George Lucas.

"Superman III," again starring Christopher Reeve in what the actor claims will be his last appearance as the redoubtable "Man of Steel," grabbed $13,352,357 at 1,759 screens in the United States and Canada Friday through Monday in its first three days of release, Warner Bros. said.

But that was down from the record-breaking pace of its predecessor, "Superman II," which in its first three days in June 1981 scored $14.1 million on 1,395 screens.

"Superman III" also lagged behind the spectacular opening performance in late May of "Jedi," the final chapter in Lucas' "Star Wars" trilogy. "Jedi" had garnered an astounding $30 million for its initial three-day weekend, May 27-29.

Last weekend "Jedi" earned $11,217,546 on 1,002 screens for an amazing 26-day total of $112,898,121, 20th Century-Fox said.

Reeve said in an interview published earlier this week that he's "flown, become evil, loved, stopped and turned the world backward. I've faced my peers, I've befriended children and small animals, and I've rescued cats from trees. What else is there left for Superman to do that hasn't already been done?"

With "Superman III" looking to be only distant competition for "Jedi" this summer, the remaining movies quickly fall into the also-ran category.

Paramount's "Trading Places," starring Eddie Murphy and Dan Aykroyd in a "Prince and the Pauper"-type comedy, had $7,006,620 on 1,389 screens for the weekend, for a regal $20,107,968 in 12 days, the studio said.

"Octopussy," the 13th episode in the very successful James Bond series, took in a modest $6,817,381 at 1,322 screens for a 10-day total of $20,960,394, MGM-UA said.

MGM-UA's other summer entry, "WarGames," continued strong with a weekend gross of $5,355,801 at 973 screens.

Rivers, Murphy to host Emmys

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Joan Rivers and Eddie Murphy will be co-hosts of the 35th annual prime time Emmy Awards telecast.

The theme for the Emmy show, to be shown Sunday, Sept. 25, on NBC, will be "fun and comedy."

Miss Rivers, famous for her "Can we talk?" trademark, makes frequent television and Las Vegas appearances and has a new best-selling comedy album.

Weekend concerts set for Round Top

ROUND TOP — Concerts scheduled for Friday-Sunday at Festival Hill in Round Top include performances by violinists Mark Kaplan, Isidor Saslav and Gebhard Long; cellist Peter Rejto; pianists Patricia Zander, James Dick and Eugene Rowley; bassoonist Lynette Diers-Cohen; clarinetist Frank Cohen; and members of the Texas Festival Chamber Orchestra.

Selections to be played include Friday at 8:15 p.m. Beethoven's Sonata in A Major for Cello and Piano, the Brahms Trio in A Minor and the "Petite" Symphony of Gounod; Saturday at 3 p.m. the Moszkowski Duo for Two Violins, the Saint-Saens Sonata for Bassoon and Piano, the Partita for Winds by American composer Irving Fine, the Brahms Quintet in B Minor and the "Petite" Symphony of Gounod; Saturday at 8:15 p.m. an all Mozart performance including the Concerto in G Major, K. 453, Serenade for Winds in C Minor and Symphony in D Major ("Prague"); and Sunday at 3 p.m. the Interlude Recital Series featuring faculty and outstanding students.

In July, Antonia Lavanne, singer and teacher at the Mannes School of Music in New York, will return to Round Top to conduct master classes in voice. Pianist Jeannette Haien, a frequent performer at Festival Hill, will appear in several programs as well as conduct her own master classes in piano.

Admission is $6 for adults and $3 for children under 12. Reservations are necessary for the indoor afternoon concerts only and may be made by telephoning 1-409-249-3129. Box office opens at 2 p.m. for afternoon performances and 6:30 p.m. for evening concerts.

A calendar of events for all programs at Festival Hill may be obtained by writing the Festival-Institute, P.O. Drawer 89, Round Top, Texas, 78954.

NPR deficit to grow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The budget deficit at National Public Radio, estimated at $2.8 million just four months ago, will swell to $9.1 million by the end of the current fiscal year, the organization has been told.

Ronald C. Bornstein, the acting chief executive of NPR, said Wednesday a new, independent auditor's report shows the organization has still not stemmed the flow of red ink despite significant cost-cutting efforts.

Last week, the NPR board was informed the organization's deficit totaled $6.5 million after the first seven months of the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. The auditors were then asked to project what the total deficit would be by the end of the year, producing Wednesday's bad news.

In a related development, Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., sent a letter to NPR Wednesday endorsed by 110 of his colleagues expressing "our strong commitment to NPR" and holding open the possibility of increased federal financing.

Twiggy grows up to be mother, Broadway star

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Twiggy needs no last name. Those who remember the '60s will immediately associate the name with an English beauty's face and non-figure that launched a generation of dieters. Twiggy in 1966 was as much a description as a name.

Today's Twiggy is a grown-up. She's been married, is the doting mum of a 4-year-old daughter, Carly, and is the star of the Broadway hit musical, "My One and Only." And she's still twig-thin.

In her dressing room at the St. James Theater, Twiggy is amused that American audiences are amazed that she can dance and sing — that she's more than just a pretty face.

"I've been singing and dancing in England for years," she says, around bites of her pre-show dinner of a toasted cheese-and-tomato and a bag of "potato crisps." She continues in her own version of the Queen's English. "Had me own show — a TV variety series for 12 years. Learned a lot there, too. Sang with the singers, danced with the dancers. Fact is, I've always learned everything as I went along."

Although you'd never mistake anyone with that accent for a Californian, Twiggy is decidedly laid-back. She fairly exudes an unflappable calm. Her credo seems to be to take life as it comes, not get too worked up about whatever happens, and to enjoy every minute of her daughter's growing up.

Would she ever model again? "Never!" she blurts. Then, perhaps to soften the edge a bit, she giggles, "I'm gettin' a bit old, y'know." She continues: "I loved modeling while I was doing it, too."

What happened? "I met Ken Russell and did 'The Boy Friend.' And that was it. I really love theater."

Her proudest theatrical achievement was the Yorkshire Television production of "Pygmalion" in which she starred as Eliza Doolittle. It played to great critical success in England and was sold to CBS Cable TV here. Since the demise of CBS cable, the show is in limbo.

Twiggy gets emotional about that — at least as emotional as she's likely to get about anything. "Now is the time for it to air," she says, raising her voice ever so slightly. "Now, while 'My One and Only' is hot! Besides, American audiences know only 'My Fair Lady,' not the straight version." She sits back, relaxes and adds, "I bring this up at every interview. I really want that show to be seen."

Of "My One and Only," in which she stars with Tommy Tune, Twiggy says, "This show is so much fun to do. It's very light-hearted. The music is gorgeous (it's Gershwin), it's happy, it's up, it's a romantic, silly story. And everybody loves it. I have ladies who come backstage crying — it's so sweet! It has a sad-happy ending. We get married, and I throw the bouquet into the audience. It's marvelous — like reading a romance novel."

Stamford Art Foundation to host preview of western art June 30

ABILENE — The Stamford Art Foundation's annual showing and sale of western art will begin with a 6:30 p.m. preview party June 30 at the John Selmon Gallery on the Texas Cowboy Reunion grounds at Stamford.

The works of 43 artists will be on display and those attending the preview party will have first opportunity to purchase the paintings and sculpture. Preview party tickets, priced at $30 which include meal, may be purchased at the door. Reservations may be made by calling 1-773-2743.

Of special interest is the Stamford Art Foundation Super Select Art and Horse Sale which begins at 9 p.m. The five art selections are by the following artists: Wayne Blaize, Scott Myers, H.C. Zachry, Bill Shaddix and Bill Chappell.

Horse consigners for the sale are: W.T. Waggoner Estate, Vernon; Pitchfork Land and Cattle Company, Guthrie; Johnnie Burson, Silverton; Stan Johnson, Sweetwater; Eddie Wilson, Stamford; Bill Reed, Abilene; Mackie McAlpine, Toyah; and J.E. Red Flow, Stamford.

The auction will be conducted by Burns & Hutson Auctioneers of Sweetwater.

Proceeds from both sales go to benefit the West Texas Rehabilitation Center's program for the handicapped on its campuses in Abilene and San Angelo.

entertainment in brief

Snyder's Palette Club to hold show

SNYDER — Snyder's Palette Club is holding its 5th annual July 4th show. All artists in Scurry County and the surrounding area are eligible to enter their works.

Entries need to be not over two years old and not previously exhibited in this show. All entries must be framed and wired for hanging. Sawtooth nails are not acceptable.

Divisions include professional-teachers, amateur and students through high school. Categories are landscape, still life, portraits and contemporary work.

The exhibit will be open July 3 from 1 to 5 p.m. and July 4 from 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. during the 21st annual July 4th Celebration at Scurry County Barn in Towle Park.

Entry fee is $3 per adult per entry and $1.50 per student per entry. Artists may price their work with 10 percent of the sale going to the Snyder Palette club. Form more information call Ethel Sturdivant, 1-573-2315, or Lois Burney, 1-573-6594.

Country stars come to Six Flags

ARLINGTON — Six country music entertainers have been scheduled for appearances at Six Flags Over Texas during the taping of a new television series.

Segments of the new "Country Crossroads" show will be taped in the theme park's Music Mill amphitheater through Friday. "Crossroads," premiering next year on the new American Christian Television System cable network, will be hosted by comedian Jerry Clower and disc jockey Bill Mack.

To date this week George Hamilton IV, Roy Drusky, Susan Raye, Box Car Willie and Helen Cornelius have performed. Friday Jeannie C. Riley will perform at 8:30, 10 and 11 p.m.

Seating is on a first-come-first-serve basis. There is no extra charge for the show, which includes a question and answer session with Miss Riley.

Ernst exhibit opens in Roswell

ROSWELL, N.M. — An opening reception for an exhibit featuring the graphics and books of surrealist artist Max Ernst will be held from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Roswell Museum and Art Center.

A 3 p.m. public lecture on Ernst will be given by Patricia Mathews, professor of art history at the University of New Mexico.

Born in 1891 in Germany, Ernst's youth and early adulthood spanned two world wars and the total disruption of traditional art values. The 187 original graphics and books in this exhibit reflect the diversity of his life experiences in Europe and in America, where he lived from 1941-53.

The exhibit continues through Aug. 21.

Kerrville to host music festival

KERRVILLE — The 3rd annual Kerrville Summer Music Festival of classical music produced by Rod Kennedy for the Kerrville Music Foundation will be held Friday through Sunday at Quiet Valley Ranch.

Three evening concerts are scheduled for Quiet Valley Ranch at the outdoor theater and six daytime events scheduled in Kerrville. The daytime events include three free "pops" concerts Friday.

A three-day general admission ticket to all events is $24.95. Tickets for those under 19 are priced at $12.50. Reserved section "Silver Tickets" for all events are $45. For more information call 1-512-896-3800.

Bryson to perform at Chap Center

Peabo Bryson will perform at Chaparral Center July 3. Appearing with Bryson will be comedian Franklin Agaye.

General admission tickets, priced at $12.50, may be purchased at Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa, Milton's Records and Chaparral Center for the 8 p.m. concert. The performers are being brought to town by Midland's In Full Bloom Productions.

The Call to perform at Rocky's

ODESSA — The rock group The Call will perform at Rocky's in Odessa July 1.

Lead singer and lyricist, Michael Been says of the group's music, "We're concerned with the breakdown of certain human values. There's a loss of love today, and we tried to reflect this in our music (second album cut "Modern Romans").

For more information call Rocky's.

Art show continues at museum

The 17th annual Southwestern Area Art Show is currently on display at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through Aug. 14.

The show includes 59 works by 32 artists, jurored by Laurence Miller of the Gloria Art Museum in Austin.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Saturday and 2-5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged.

"I don't think I can stay on my diet. I just ate a whole box of mint dental floss!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, June 24, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: John the Baptist, American clergyman Henry Ward Beecher and the great boxer Jack Dempsey were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Saturday Review columnist Norman Cousins, bandleader Phil Harris, journalist Pete Hamill, director Georg Stanford Brown and actress Michelle Lee ("Knots Landing"). Find ways to combat the anxiety your occupation brings and your career will take off like a rocket! There is no reason to hide your feelings.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be firm but gentle when dealing with tiny tots. Travel could bring splendid results. Member of opposite sex reveals his or her true feelings. You may not be ready to make a commitment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not abuse a privilege. Use common sense when faced with a financial dilemma. A relative may offer to loan money without charging interest. Accept the offer, but promise repayment in writing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Try to reassure an overanxious mate. A social gathering will provide loved one with amusing friends who share his or her interest. Stay in the background when doing business with strangers.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An excellent day to tackle financial or business problems. Seek advice from experts. A co-worker shows great interest in your personal affairs. Be cagey—avoid confiding too much.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The financial picture is confusing. Pamper yourself by reserving more time for self-improvement projects. A personal relationship is put to a test. You may not like the outcome.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Intellectual pursuits bring excellent results. Do not experiment too much. Try implementing some old ideas instead of charging after every new one. Group activities are favored this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep all dealing with government officials strictly aboveboard. Do not carry a lot of cash on you. A chat with mate or partner will relieve tension. Tackle house repairs that are long overdue.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An attractive stranger will try to distract you from work. Do not veer too far off the beaten path. Your leadership abilities come into play. Share good news with loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A tricky personal or financial discussion demands great discretion. You must be original to get the results you want. An unusual encounter arouses your curiosity about an attractive stranger.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seek professional advice before signing documents or contracts. This is not the time to get involved in other people's disputes. Scheduling appointments could prove frustrating. Wait another day. Romance is grand.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friends may not take kindly to your suggestions. Stick to your own affairs. Original ideas receive a warm reception from higher-ups. A nice bonus is possible. Host a small celebration this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take inventory before making plans for next week. The ability to speak a second language is a big plus. Get in touch with a former colleague. He/she has important news to share.

-Series debut Sunday

By FRED ROTHENBERG

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Moyers sits on a nuclear-bomb casing pondering the unthinkable. Charles Kuralt drives into another sleepy hamlet and swigs a 10-megaton ginger ale.

Both men are doing what they do best — finding interesting stories and communicating them as purely as possible. And, happily, both will be doing this back-to-back in weekly, prime-time series this summer, beginning Sunday.

ABC and NBC also are forsaking all-repeat summer programming to meet the cable TV challenge. But all their new series are entertainment programs providing varying degrees of entertainment. CBS has taken the higher road with Kuralt and Moyers.

Kuralt's show, "On the Road," travels the backroads looking for stories Made in America. Essentially, he finds plain folk who possess more than their share of guts, nobility and flakiness. These reports will regale regulars at the corner bar, making them smile.

Moyers' show, "Our Times," travels different routes for issue stories dealing with life's dilemmas, demons and dreams. These reports will divide patrons at the corner bar, making them think.

After Sunday night's episodes, the 30-minute programs will be broadcast on Tuesday nights through Aug. 23.

Then, in all likelihood, prime time will turn back into a pumpkin, and the news shows and documentaries that the networks offer in the low-viewing summer months, will give way to the fall season's munchkin fare.

"The history of summertime news programs is that they're summertime news programs, and that's it," says Kuralt.

"It's a popular medium, not a specialized one," says Moyers. "I think something like this belongs on network TV. I don't think I'll be renewed after August."

In Sunday's episode, Moyers visits Los Alamos, N.M., to examine how scientists wrestle with the ethical and moral conflicts of making bombs for peace. It's a sobering broadcast.

Future installments look at divorce, unemployment, rehabilitative medicine and Arthur Miller directing "Death of a Salesman" in China. "Our Times" is serious, thoughtful and passionate. Even the music is good.

"If there's any common denominator in the series," says Moyers, "it's that I go where something is happening, put myself in it, and bring back its essence."

Kuralt goes wherever the fork in the road takes an unconventional turn.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

Entries are precious. Before selecting a line of play, make sure you have enough entries for the purpose.

We approve of South's one spade response—it is a sound principle to show a five-card major in response to partner's minor-suit opening bid, even if you are a point or so short. But North's jump to four spades is a gross overbid, especially since his long suit is so ratty.

West led the king of hearts and declarer made the technically correct play of holding up. Declarer won the heart continuation, drew two rounds of trumps and led a club to the king and East's ace. East forced dummy with a heart, and declarer wound up an entry short of being able to set up and run his clubs, and he came to only eight tricks.

Declarer might need four entries to dummy to set up and run clubs, so he cannot afford to squander any. Instead of drawing trumps, declarer should lead a club from dummy at trick three. Now, the contract will come home if clubs are 4-2 and trumps 2-2, or if the ace of clubs is guarded no more than twice and trumps are no worse than 4-2.

Assume West wins the club and shifts to a trump. Declarer wins in dummy and ruffs a club. He returns to dummy with a high trump and ruffs another club. Now declarer concedes a diamond. He uses two ruffs on the board to set up and cash the clubs. He loses only one trick in each side suit.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Harvesting help

An official at Midland Farmers Co-op says dry conditions currently plaguing this area match those of the infamous drought of the 1950s. There's only one exception; this drought hasn't lasted as long — yet.

Farmers and stockmen have been hard hit by the current drought, though, and that fact led Gov. Mark White to send a telegram Wednesday to U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block asking him to open the emergency feed grain program to farmers and ranchers in a 27-county region which includes Midland County to help with the expense of feeding cattle. Block would be wise to listen because the futures of a number of this area's agribusinessmen will ride on his decision.

It's next to impossible to overstate the urgency of the situation. So far this year, Midland County has only received 2.20 inches of rain. National Weather Service officials at Midland Regional Airport say that in a normal year the county could have received 5.84 inches of rain by the end of June.

Lack of rain already has taken its toll on the county cotton crop, noted Hoot Leonard with Midland Farmers Co-op. While it's true that cotton production would have been below normal because of restrictions in the federal government's PIK (payment-in-kind) program, cotton is only being grown on 1,700 acres of Midland County land this year, compared to the normal 20,000 acres. And the drought is a large part of the reason.

Furthermore, adds Leonard, while Midland County missed out on cotton this year, farmers could grow milo if suitable rains would fall to prepare the soil for planting. That hasn't happened, but what has been happening in the 27-county area is that soil conditions have been growing more desperate with each passing week.

As dry as the situation is in Midland County — and it definitely should be included in any federal drought relief — there are other counties much worse in the affected region. In Upton County, rancher Dewayne Lindsey recently was quoted as saying he used a bulldozer to dig a hole to buy oil field refuse. "It's just as dry at 12 feet as it is at two inches," he said.

The emergency feed grain program isn't designed to give farmers a living as some might assume. It's only intended to tide them over until conditions improve. It's for emergencies. Anyone who doesn't believe this situation qualifies hasn't tried to make a living farming lately.

Rain woes in Mexico

Mexico City depends on seasonal rains to flush pollutants out of the air and cleanse its teeming streets. But this year the rains have been delayed, perhaps because of the alteration in the El Nino current in the Pacific Ocean.

Smog is worse than ever. There has been an increase in typhoid fever and respiratory and intestinal ailments in the Mexican capital.

Diseases are breeding rapidly at a time when government austerity measures have forced cutbacks in the health care system. An ambitious plan to bring health care to the poor foundered after the peso collapsed. Mexico's secretary of health and welfare estimates that about 15 million Mexicans, out of a population of 71 million, are not receiving any medical care. Doctors privately warn that as many as 20 million Mexicans are without medical care.

The irony is that there is a surplus of doctors in Mexico. The National Union of Doctors says there are 18,000 unemployed physicians in the country.

The doctors who are practicing complain of shortages of medicines to prescribe to their patients. Pharmaceutical inventories have dropped 40 percent in the past few months, a government study reveals. Many drugs are purchased outside of Mexico.

Only a shift in the world economy can help Mexico overcome its economic situation. In the meantime, the United States and the World Health Organization should try to get Mexico some of the medical supplies it needs. And it wouldn't hurt to pray for rain.

Another View: Aborting an issue

Since 1973 when the U.S. Supreme Court ended state-by-state disagreements and legalized the right to obtain safe abortions, the encroachments have grown. Those who opposed the ruling got busy — and successful — in sympathetic city councils and state legislatures.

They managed to attach all sorts of conditions to the constitutional right of a woman to end a pregnancy without interference by the state. In Akron, Ohio, an ordinance required doctors to recite a list of abortion "facts" and to warn women that abortion is a "major surgical procedure." It required that unmarried minors obtain parental consent for abortions, that a 24-hour waiting period for abortions be imposed, and that abortions after the third month be done in a hospital instead of an outpatient clinic.

Similar laws were enacted elsewhere. But last week the Supreme Court put its foot down. It struck down the Akron ordinance (while upholding parts of Missouri and Virginia laws), saying that it was not designed to protect a woman's health or safety, but to place arbitrary obstacles in her path to getting a legal abortion.

"It is fair to say," wrote Associate Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., "that much of the information required is designed not to inform the woman's consent but rather to persuade her to withhold it altogether." The American Medical Association had called the Akron provisions "intolerable."

Were such local encroachments made on other constitutional rights — on the right to vote without hassle, for instance, or the right to unencumbered dissent — there would be little difficulty understanding the court's logic. But anti-abortion groups do not see it that way.

Thus while the Akron ordinance has been struck down — and rightly so — the debate over the ethics of abortion itself and an unborn baby's right to life will continue with great force.

The movement to outlaw abortion by constitutional amendment will now pick up steam. To the extent that such a movement would restrict a woman's right to choose whether to deliver a child, it is wrong. But as wrong as it is, it is preferable to and more easily confronted than the piecemeal sniping that the court put an end to last week.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

FBI insisting Mrs. King pay

WASHINGTON — Adding insult to injury, the FBI is insisting that Coretta Scott King pay to see the files the G-men compiled on her during more than two years of secret surveillance. The widow of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. refuses to knuckle under to the bureau's petty demand.

Jack Anderson

The amount is trivial: $237. But Mrs. King stands on principle: The Freedom of Information Act allows government files to be released free of charge in cases "primarily benefitting the public." By paying the $237, Mrs. King would be put in the position of acknowleding that she is just idly curious about the FBI's files on her.

In fact, Mrs. King intends to place her surveillance files with her late husband's papers in the Martin Luther King Center for Nonviolent Social Change in Atlanta. They would be historically valuable evidence of the almost paranoid suspicion with which the Kings were regarded by the FBI under its late director, J. Edgar Hoover.

Paying the fee would also be an admission that her work in the civil rights movement — and by inference that of her husband — is of little public interest. The FBI's picayune insistence on payment seems to be one more attempt by the bureau to belittle the man its late director hated and feared with such passion.

Mrs. King appealed the FBI's decision. The Justice Department has been sitting on her appeal for more than a year.

Ten months ago, Mrs. King raised the subject personally with Attorney General William French Smith, whom she was visiting on another matter. The meeting was cordial but produced no action on her appeal to waive the fee. Like many private citizens, journalists and historians in the past two years, Mrs. King has been stonewalled by the Reagan administration's policy of making government documents difficult if not impossible to obtain.

Louise Cook, archivist at the King Center, told my associate John Dillon that several historians have written in support of Mrs. King's view that release of her records would be of significant public benefit.

Edith P. Mayo, an associate curator of the Smithsonian Institution, wrote that Mrs. King's FBI files would provide "invaluable perspective" on the civil rights movement because of her "unique position as the wife and co-worker of Martin Luther King Jr."

Denial of the fee waiver is "a tragic mistake in judgment on the part of Bureau officials," wrote Marvin Y. Whiting, archivist and curator of the Birmingham Public Library. The FBI, he wrote, should help historians "gather as definitive a body of documents as possible on a person of such historic significance as Martin Luther King Jr."

Actually, the FBI file on Mrs. King reveals less about her than it does about the bureau and its disgraceful gossip gathering. I know, because several years ago I obtained from an FBI source the bureau's dossiers on various civil rights leaders, including Mrs. King.

In a transparent attempt to make the trivial seem important, the FBI labeled the surveillance reports on Mrs. King "secret" or "confidential," and gave them such ominous headings as "racial" or "extremist matters."

But there's little meat in them — certainly nothing to justify the vast amount of money and effort that went into the surveillance.

For example, the G-men examined Mrs. King's passport, apparently to make sure she hadn't sneaked off somewhere that the press hadn't reported. Her colleagues were routinely referred to as "agitators," but those who tattled to the FBI on Mrs. King's whereabouts were dignified as "confidential informants."

Footnote: Laura Einstein, the Justice Department lawyer assigned to the case, said the FBI will give her copies of the King files, which she will examine to determine if they are eligible for a fee waiver.

WHITE HOUSE PIPELINE: The Private Sector Initiatives Program was designed to put into practice the Reagan administration's philosophy that the government shouldn't be expected to do everything for everybody. The program is staffed by eight federal employees, who travel around the country encouraging business firms, individuals and private institutions to provide needed social services and relieve Uncle Sam of the burden. But, as often happens in Washington, the bureaucrats' slogan seems to be, "Do as we say, not as we do." The office recently was alloted $100,000 from the president's "unanticipated needs" fund to pay for all that traveling and other expenses.

GEORGE F. WILL

Social attitudes biggest handicap

WASHINGTON — In the contemporary spirit of ruthless full disclosure, I herewith disclose that I am sleeping with a government official. The Senate having done its clear and pleasant duty, Madeleine Will has been confirmed as assistant secretary of education for special education and rehabilitation.

George F. Will

Without dwelling indelicately on the erotic life of Washington, let me say that I now know what it is to sleep with the Federal Register. Madame Secretary, a veteran of service with the Maryland Association of Retarded Citizens, falls asleep talking, and wakes up talking, acronyms and numbers. Remember how approvingly Keats spoke about the Grecian urn? That is how Ms. Will speaks about P.L. 94-142 and Section 504.

P.L. 94-142, the Education for All Handicapped Children Act, is to parents of handicapped children what Social Security is to the elderly: their Magna Carta. It establishes a right to an "appropriate" education in the "least restrictive environment." Section 504 (of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, requiring that programs receiving federal assistance be accessible to disabled persons) means nothing to most Americans but everything to millions of citizens. They are citizens who have been excluded from fair social participation not because of their handicaps but because of handicapping social attitudes.

Writing in Scientific American about architectural barriers, Gerben DeJong and Raymond Lifchez argue that Section 504 regulations are government power in the service of conservative values — the escape from dependency, the achievement of self-reliance. The most pervasive barriers are attitudinal, and the worst is the belief that disabled persons are helpless and inevitably are drains on public resources.

A conservative research institution here (the Heritage Foundation) has just published the factually preposterous and morally repulsive thought that a "key reason" why academic achievement standards have fallen is that the federal government has "dismantled an academically demanding curriculum" by catering to "special-interest groups" such as the handicapped, and has "favored the disadvantaged pupils at the expense of those who have the highest potential to contribute positively to society."

Leave aside the philistine social analysis: the idea that profound changes in society's educational expectations and achievements are the result of recent Washington decisions rather than of complex and autonomous cultural processes. But note this dangerous doctrine: Handicapped persons are among those getting too much public assistance because, by some cost-benefit criterion, they do not have the capacity to make a sufficiently "positive" contribution to society. Note the nasty premise: An individual's enjoyment of rights is conditioned by the individual's social utility.

It is almost demeaning to assure such analysts that equity is economical. Institutionalization of the retarded is almost never necessary and almost always an expensive incarceration of potential taxpayers. And physically handicapped persons are seeking removal of barriers to self-help.

Handicapped citizens are as fully citizens as those of us who are mentally non-handicapped or temporarily able-bodied. They are just beginning to have access to social benefits that other citizens take for granted. When P.L. 94-142 was passed in 1975, 25 percent of all handicapped children were underserved and another 25 percent had no educational programs at all; they were more excluded from society's basic benefits than black children were in 1954. Now, just eight years later, we are invited to believe that federal largess toward disadvantaged pupils is a threat to America's meritocracy.

The Reagan administration's most serious self-inflicted wound has been its failure to practice creative exceptionalism. It has failed to find an area for action that is an exception to its domestic austerity and deregulation — action that would announce:

Although we conservatives believe government has been irrationally intrusive, we nevertheless know there are persons who cannot help themselves until government helps them. And we know there are conservative values that are not vivified until the federal government affirms them with strong regulations.

Instead, acting in part from unconservative fidelity to ideological abstractions, the Reagan administration aroused the anxiety of an enormous constituency — the handicapped and their friends. It did so with some contemplated "deregulations" involving P.L. 94-142 and Section 504, changes that Congress would never permit.

Even just a generation from now we will, I hope, be mortified by the memory of our complacent acceptance of the social segregation of the handicapped — as mortified as we are today by the memory of racial segregation. We are barely at the beginning of the last great inclusion in American life, the inclusion of the handicapped, and especially the mentally handicapped. This should have been, and still could be, the field where the Reagan administration confounds its critics and shows a subtlety in its conservatism.

ART BUCHWALD

Finding job hard work for jobless!

William F. Buckley, in a column the other day, quoted a middle management unemployed worker named Hank as saying, "The easiest way to get a job is to have one." Hank said when he had a job, he was approached by rival corporations about joining their firms, and when he made several pitches at other companies, they never once demanded references. As soon as he lost his job however, everyone looked on Hank with suspicion, because Americans tend to believe if you're out of work, you're out of gas.

Art Buchwald

Mr. Buckley didn't have a solution for Hank's problem, but I do.

Hank should never admit to any prospective employer that he is unemployed.

The way I would choreograph Hank's job-searching problem is as follows: The first thing I would do is have a pal drop the word that he heard Hank Smith is very unhappy at "MPPI," (a fictitious company) and might be persuaded to go somewhere else, if the price was right.

This would start the gossip mill rolling in the particular industry that Hank is trying to get into. Not only DKB, but LMP, ITT and Digital Research would hear about it.

Then I would have Hank write personal letters from his home address to the chief executive officers of at least 12 of the "Fortune 500" firms. The text would read, "Contrary to rumors all over town, I am not unhappy at MPPI, and have no intention of leaving the firm at this time, particularly when sales are climbing, and profits projected for 1984 will reach an all-time high. I would appreciate it if your search people refrain from calling me at the office, as it will only give credence to the rumor and have a negative effect on the price of MPPI's stock."

This should whet the appetites of the CEO's, who will go to extraordinary lengths to steal a management employee away from another company, but will refuse to nod at anyone who is out of work.

In a few days, if my scenario works, Hank will get a call at his home, probably late at night, from one of the vice presidents of a firm he wrote to.

Hank must whisper, "I can't talk to you from my home. I'll call you from a public booth. MPPI may have my phone tapped."

Hank then waits ten minutes and calls the person back.

The executive invites him to lunch.

Hank says, "It's a waste of time, but let's meet where no one can see us."

The executive suggests an inn 50 miles away, and the lunch is set up.

When they meet Hank lays down the ground rules. Under no condition is the DKB company to make contact with MPPI concerning Hank's position there. If it leaks out that DKB is trying to recruit Hank, the DKB CEO personally must deny it.

The executive agrees to the conditions and the luncheon proceeds. Hank lets the DKB executive do all the talking.

The executive makes a big pitch to Hank to come over to DKB from MPPI, pointing out the pension plan, the employee profit sharing advantages, and the freedom he would have to pursue his management expertise.

Hank plays the reluctant suitor? and says it's a big decision in his life and he has to talk it over with his family. The executive from DKB believes he has Hank on the hook and tells him he'll call him in the morning.

When he does, Hank's wife picks up the phone and says Hank is out having breakfast with the LMP people.

Hank waits until late afternoon and then places the call to DKB. He says, "You sold me. I decided to come on board."

"You won't regret it, Hank," the executive says joyously. "Someday you're going to thank me for giving MPPI the air."

This sounds like a complicated plan. But if the unemployed executive follows it to the letter, it should work. At least it means a lot of free lunches until you can land a job.

Cannon immortalized with star, gold-laced negligee

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actress Dyan Cannon got a gold-laced negligee with the traditional star along Hollywood Boulevard when she appeared for her "Walk of Fame" ceremony.

Dyan Cannon

Ms. Cannon, the 1,754th celebrity to become immortalized with a star in the famed sidewalk, got the negligee and a purple orchid Wednesday from Frederick Mellinger, owner of the Frederick's of Hollywood lingerie shop.

Ms. Cannon's star was located between those for Will Rogers and Margaret O'Brien and directly in front of Frederick's, noted for its sexy undergarments and sleepwear.

"It may sound a bit corny or old-fashioned," the 46-year-old actress said at the ceremony, "but I think this is indicative of the glamour of Hollywood."

Ms. Cannon is best known for her performances in such films as "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice," the 1978 remake of "Heaven Can Wait" and "Honeysuckle Rose."

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Soul singer Sly Stone was arrested at an airport motel after apparently overdosing on cocaine, police say.

Stone, leader of the rock group Sly and the Family Stone, was taken into custody Wednesday afternoon after refusing to go to a hospital, said Lee County Sgt. George D. Bostick Jr. The 39-year-old singer remained in jail Wednesday night, held in lieu of $5,225 bond.

Bostick said Stone was in Fort Myers for a Tuesday night concert. A clerk at the Ramada Airport Hotel called the sheriff's department about 9 a.m. Wednesday when Stone could not be roused from sleep, he said.

When deputies arrived, they found Stone and a female companion barely conscious and speaking incoherently, according to Bostick. He said deputies found what appeared to be a "free-basing" kit used to smoke cocaine.

Stone was charged with possession of cocaine, possession of paraphernalia and refusal to pay a $90 restaurant-bar bill.

The female companion, Melissa Atalito, 24, of Fort Lauderdale, was in stable condition at Fort Myers Community Hospital Wednesday night.

Jean Harris

BEDFORD HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Jean Harris, the former school headmistress imprisoned for murdering Scarsdale Diet author Dr. Herman Tarnower, may do a series of radio interviews on prison education.

"She is a leading education expert in the country," WMCA radio station president Ellen Straus said Wednesday in a telephone interview from her Manhattan office.

Mrs. Harris, 60, was headmistress at Virginia's exclusive Madeira School before the March 10, 1980, slaying of Tarnower, her lover. Since her conviction, Mrs. Harris has been active in the education program at the Bedford Hills Correctional Facility.

Mrs. Harris would not be paid for the interviews, Mrs. Straus said.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Severe nausea doesn't suggest complications

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am pregnant for the first time so naturally everything that is happening is new to me. I had heard of morning sickness and I expected that I would have some trouble around this, but what I have is much more than morning sickness. My obstetrician tells me that I have nothing to worry about and that everything is going well. What I would like to know is why someone like myself, who has always been healthy, gets so nauseous when other women don't? Why am I the exception? — Terry, Boston

Dear Terry: You may not be the exception you apparently think you are. The results of a Swedish study suggest that nausea during pregnancy is more widespread, more disabling and of greater duration than is generally believed. In fact, of about 250 pregnant women who participated in the study, 70 percent had pregnancies that were complicated by nausea.

Moreover, the nausea was not only a factor in the morning. While one-half the women studied did report that the discomfort they experienced was at its height during the morning hours, more than one-third reported that the nausea persisted throughout the day. The severity of the nausea was not related to any complications of the pregnancy.

I do not mean to minimize the discomfort you are experiencing, but you should be reassured that the nausea does not suggest a problem with the pregnancy. The important thing as your obstetrician says, is that the pregnancy is going well.

Lebanese hijackers surrender

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Two teen-age Lebanese hijackers surrendered today and released 32 hostages held for 21 hours on a Libyan-chartered airliner seized over Greece and taken on a zig-zag flight over the Mediterranean.

A bomb "ready to explode at any minute" was found hidden inside a camera in the suitcase of one of the hijackers after they gave up, police said. The men also had a pistol, but no shots were fired and no one was hurt.

The passengers said the men hijacked the plane for the cause of Imam Mousa Sadr, Lebanon's Shiite Moslem leader who disappeared on a visit to Libya in 1978.

The surrender came after three hours of negotiations between fthe hijackers and the Cypriot minister of communications, Christos fMavrellis, who persuaded the two men to give themselves up while ftalking to them through an Arab interpreter from the airport control ftower.

Mavrellis said the passports carried by the hijackers identified them both as Lebanese citizens: Raja Aref Ahmed, 19, and Hassan Mehdi Saadun Haj, 17.

Panda cub born prematurely

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A baby panda, one of the few bred in captivity by natural means outside China, was born prematurely in the Mexico City zoo, according to zoo administrator Maria Elena de Hoyos.

She said the new panda was born Wednesday evening to Ying Ying "and both mother and baby are doing very well."

Ying Ying and Pe-Pe, the father, had their first offspring — Tohui — on July 21, 1981. Tohui now weighs 231 pounds. The panda couple was donated by the Chinese government to the Mexican capital's zoo in 1976.

Central American talks urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez says the time is ripe for peace negotiations in Central Americ~ and that once they start, "nobody should get up from the table until the shooting stops."

Shortly before leaving Washington Wednesday for a brief private visit to New York City, Gonzalez called in a speech here for "an enormous and immediate effort for peace" in Central America.

He said the efforts to bring about a negotiated solution on the part of Latin America's Contadora group of nations — Columbia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela — represent "the best chance for peace" in the region.

Soviet tank production down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production of some Soviet tanks and other armored vehicles declined between 1977 and 1981 while more sophisticated weaponry was being made, according to Defense Intelligency Agency officials.

According to a transcript of the closed hearing released Wednesday. Sen. William Proximire, D-Wis., said Pentagon analysts estimated that Soviet tank production fell from 2,500 in 1980 to 1,400 in 1981. The number of armored vehilcles dropped from 4,800 to 4,000, Proximire said during the closed hearing June 29, 1982 of a congressional Joint Economic subcommittee.

Bombs damage airline offices

PARIS (AP) — Bombs exploding almost simultaneously early today damaged ftwo Air France offices in Paris and destroyed a monument to a French colonial explorer. There were no injuries.

The bombings were claimed in a statement sent to the French news agency by the "Carribean Revolutionary Alliance."

The organization was first heard of after 16 bombs exploded simultaneously early May 29 in the French Carribean posssions of Guadaloupe, Martinique and Guyana, and in Paris.

Castro's Cuba says it with slogans

By CLAUDE E. ERBSEN
Associated Press Writer

HAVANA — Slogans have become a way of life in Fidel Castro's Cuba.

They are printed on billboards and in newspapers, they flash from rooftops, decorate classroom walls and students' T-shirts, and are shouted in unison at school assemblies.

Some slogans exhort greater production or increased vigilance against enemies of the revolution, while others urge common courtesy or advance the immortality of the Communist Party.

The six-mile highway leading into the city from Jose Marti airport provides a good cross section of billboard slogans. "Men die, but the party is immortal," reads one sign, while another proclaims, "Two basic tasks: Production and Defense."

Although most of the slogans are political, they seem to lack some of the strident anti-Americanism seen during visits by this reporter to Cuba in 1977 and 1979.

There are still "Cuba Si, Yanqui No" T-shirts to be seen, often on youngsters, but they are not nearly as common as in the past. In fact, the only overtly anti-American billboard seen during a recent three-day visit to Cuba was one facing the building once used as the American Embassy, and now housing the U.S. interests section. Formally, the section is part of the Swiss embassy.

The billboard facing the embassy building's entrance features a rifle-carrying Cuban peasant standing up to a growling Uncle Sam, and proclaims, "Imperialists: We have absolutely no fear of you."

Somewhat less overtly anti-American is a new billboard paying tribute to Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, Americans who were convicted of providing atomic secrets to the Soviet Union and executed in 1953. The billboard commemorates the 30th anniversary of their death, and features their portrait and the quotation "For Peace, Bread and Roses we shall face the executioner."

The Cuban government's recurrent fear of invasion from the United States is reflected in several billboards stressing military preparedness.

"In readiness to smash any aggression," reads one sign showing a soldier squinting through the sights of an automatic rifle.

A somewhat more topical sign, outside the Ministry of Communications, pledges, "In war as in peace we shall maintain communications." Near the downtown district, an illuminated moving sign shows a bus passenger yielding his seat to an elderly person and proclaims the Cubans as "Standardbearers of proletarian courtesy."

Chilean leaders fight strike effort

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The government reinforced police patrols and ordered a news blackout as a group of labor leaders tried to orchestrate a nationwide work stoppage today in a bid to hasten an end to military rule.

Strike leaders said they expected relatively few of Chile's 3 million workers, about a third of whom are in unions, to join what would be the first general strike in nearly a decade since President Augusto Pinochet took power.

Under Chilean law, strikes are illegal unless related to collective bargaining and people instigating them can be imprisoned or exiled for up to three years.

"We are not ready for total war," said an organizer who declined to be named. "The first effects might not be very visible, but we expect the thing to grow. If we can shut down 20 percent of the country, we can put the government on a state of alert. If we fail, though, it won't mean the end of the war."

A strike newsletter and stickers urging "strike the 23rd, Pinochet get out" circulated Wednesday in Santiago.

"Our strategy was to call one symbolic protest every month until the time was ripe for a work stoppage," said the strike organizer. "But we were pressured by events in such a way that we had to improvise. I think we are improvising well."

The government reinforced police patrols in Santiago and other cities, filed criminal charges against six strike leaders and instructed Chilean news media not to report the call for the strike.

Working by telephone on 48 hours notice, five union federations tried to reach the 200,000 workers they claim to represent in scattered industries to ask them to stay home from work and bang on pots each evening, at least until the government drops charges against 17 jailed leaders of a copper industry strike.

Edmondson upsets eighth-rated Gerulaitis

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Mark Edmondson of Australia upset eighth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis 7-6 (7-3), 7-5, 7-5 Thursday and reached the third round of the Wimbledon tennis championships.

That brought the original 16 seeds in the men's singles down to 10, with the second round only half completed.

Seeds beaten in the first round were Steve Denton, Guillermo Vilas and Jose Luis Clerc. Two more, Jimmy Arias and Gene Mayer, pulled out of the tournament with injuries before it started.

Two seeded players, Ivan Lendl (No.3) and Mats Wilander (No. 5), moved into the third round with straight sets victories.

Lendl whipped Trey Waltke 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

Wilander defeated Tian Viljoen of South Africa 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

Martina Navratilova, defending women's champion, saved two set points in the first set and went on to beat Sherry Acker 7-6 (7-5), 6-3.

HANA MANDLIKOVA of Czechoslovakia, the No. 8 seed, needed only 50 minutes to eliminate Rene Mentz of South Africa 6-2, 6-3.

In another early match, Louise Allen, an All-American from Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas, last year, moved into the third round with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Catherine Suire of France.

Mandlikova, who lost in the final here two years ago, raced out to 5-1 leads in each set as she dominated Mentz in every phase of the game. The Czech right-hander lost her serve only twice, in the fourth game of the first set and the eighth game of the second.

Ranked 10th in the world on the Women's Tennis Association computer, Mandlikova has had a history of inconsistency on the court, sometimes brilliant, sometimes playing abominably. She has won two Grand Slam tournaments, taking the French Open in 1981 and the Australian Open in 1980. And twice, in 1980 and 1982, she reached the final of the U.S. Open, only to fall.

"To win Wimbledon you need a steady climb upwards while trying to avoid the valleys," said Jimmy Connors, the defending champion of the All-England Lawn Tennis Championships and a two-time winner here.

Or listen to 10th-seeded Billie Jean King, who has won a record 20 Wimbledon titles.

"Did I think I was going to lose? No, I just thought it was another challenge," King said after collecting her 215th victory on the grass courts of Wimbledon, defeating Beth Herr 6-7, 6-2, 8-6 Wednesday.

Connors advanced to the third round by stopping Australian Wally Masur 6-4, 7-6, 6-0.

TODAY, JOHN McEnroe, who won here in 1981 and is seeded second this year behind Connors, and Martina Navratilova, the women's top seed and defending champion, were hoping to follow Connors' advice and "avoid the valleys" in their second-round matches. McEnroe was to meet Florin Segarceanu of Romania, while Navratilova was to take on Sherry Acker.

In another second-round battle, third-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia was pitted against Trey Waltke, the man who revived the 1930's look at Wimbledon this year, delighting the crowds by wearing long white pants and a white shirt instead of the current tennis outfit of shorts and a short-sleeved jersey.

No member of the media here could remember the last time long pants had been worn on Center Court, the site of the Lendl-Waltke clash.

Other seeded women who won Wednesday were No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd, No. 3 Andrea Jaeger, No. 7 Wendy Turnbull of Australia, No. 11 Barbara Potter, No. 14 Andrea Temesvari of Hungary and No. 15 Kathy Rinaldi.

The men's seeds advancing into the third round along with Connors were No. 12 Kevin Curren of South Africa, No. 13 Brian Gottfried and No. 16 Tim Mayotte.

Fifth-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden completed his darkness-delayed first-round match Wednesday by outlasting Australian John Fitzgerald 6-4, 6-1, 4-6, 6-7, 6-4.

"My first and second round jitters, if any, have gone," Connors said. "Once you turn me loose, then I am on the way, playing the best tennis possible."

That was good enough to stop Masur, whom had never faced the left-handed American before.

"I don't think Connors has any so-called weaknesses," Masur said. "He never gives you a moment to breathe. He's very aggressive and never makes a dumb shot. He's tenacious, like a terrier dog."

Masur played Connors evenly through the first two sets, trading service breaks with the defending champion in the fifth and sixth games of the first set before Connors broke him again in the seventh. That was enough to give Connors the opening set.

Connors jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the second set before Masur ripped off the next three games. When Connors broke Masur in the ninth game to take a 5-4 advantage, the Australian broke right back. The two then held serve to send the set into a tiebreaker, which Connors won 8-6 after Masur twice was at set point.

"When I got set point, I was surprised and began to think I could do it (win), but it didn't happen that way," Masur said. "I thought I played well in the first two sets and even thought I could take the second."

But when he didn't, Connors rolled in the final set, taking only 22 minutes to wrap up the match.

"I am happy I had the chance to play Connors because it gave me some experience and has shown me what it takes to beat the top players," Masur said. "I found out he is not unbeatable."

Like Connors, Lloyd and the other seeded women captured their matches in straight sets.

Lloyd defeated Marcella Mesker of the Netherlands 6-4, 6-2; Jaeger, showing no signs of an injured right wrist she suffered in her first-round match, defeated Pam Casale 6-3, 6-2; Turnbull stopped Anne White 6-3, 6-3; Potter rolled over Michelle Torres 6-1, 6-4; Temesvari downed Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria 7-5, 6-4 and Rinaldi ousted Sweden's Lena Sandin 6-4, 6-3.

In the men's draw, Curren eliminated Sergio Casal of Spain 7-6, 6-4, 6-3; Gottfried struggled before downing Matt Doyle, a member of Ireland's Davis Cup team, 7-5, 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, and Mayotte topped Andy Andrews 6-1, 6-2, 6-2.

Cubs tag Ricci in eighth, take 4-1 win from Gators

BEAUMONT — The Midland Cubs got to reliever Frank Ricci in the eighth inning Wednesday night to break a 1-1 deadlock and went on to post a 4-1 Texas League victory over the Beaumont Gators here.

Ricci, who relieved Ray Hayward in the sixth, pitched two scoreless innings before being tagged with the loss to drop his record to 4-2.

Bill Hatcher opened the Cubs game-winning attack in the eighth with the game's only extra base hit, a double to left-center field. Tom Lombarski received an intentional walk to put the force on any base but the plan was spoiled by Mike Anicich and a throwing error.

Anicich singled to right to bring home Hatcher and, in an attempt to get Lombarski at third, right fielder Mark Gillaspie threw the ball wide and into the Cubs' dugout. Lombarski scored on the throw and Anicich ended up with three bases. He came home when Randy LaVigne laid down a perfect bunt on a suicide squeeze.

BEAUMONT OPENED the scoring in the bottom of the first inning when Midland starter Darryl Banks suffered a momentary loss of control.

Steve Garcia drew a walk and went to second on a stolen base. Banks put him on third with a wild pitch and Gillaspie's single up the middle brought home Garcia to give the Gators a 1-0 advantage.

The Cubs tied the game in the fifth inning, the last for starter Hayward who is the San Diego Padres' No. 1 draft pick. He wasn't pulled because he was pitching bad, but because it was all he was scheduled to throw.

After striking out the first two in the inning, Hayward lost Cub A.J. Hill on an infield hit. Jay Loviglio moved Hill to second with a single to right and Rick Baker brought Him home with Midland's third straight one-bagger.

IN ONLY his second start for Beaumont since the recent draft — he was allowed only 60 pitches on Saturday — Hayward managed to compile some impressive statistics. He gave up only four hits and three walks while striking out nine. San Diego picked him 10th overall in the college draft and, from his college honors, he looks like a pitcher that will fit in well in the National League. Especially with no designated hitter. At Oklahoma University, Hayward was an All-Big 8 pitcher and designated hitter.

Banks was equally impressive. In going the distance he allowed only five hits and two walks with nine strike outs to his credit.

Over the last five innings, Banks allowed just one hit — a single by Jeff Ronk with two out in the seventh. He retired the final seven men he faced to close out the win to improve his record to 8-4 on the year.

Loviglio led the Cubs at the plate with a pair of singles in two attempts while all but one Midland player collected at least one hit in the nine-hit attack.

The victory gives Midland a 2-1 record in the second half of the season and a share of first place in the West Division with El Paso. Beaumont, the first half winner, is tied with San Antonio for last at 1-2.

Tonight, the Cubs and Gators play game four of the six-game series at 7:30. Doug Welenc, 1-6, is scheduled to start for Midland with Jim Leopold, 4-6, on the mound for Beaumont.

Telegram for Nelson: Play in British Open?

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Larry Nelson was filling out a form — an entry blank for the British Open — a few weeks ago and ran into a little problem.

"I kept looking over the categories for exemptions (from qualifying) and I couldn't find anything that applied to me," Nelson said before teeing off today in the first round of the $400,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

"I looked and looked and I couldn't find anything. So I just wrote them and told them I wouldn't be coming."

Nothing was heard from the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, which sponsors the British Open, until after Nelson had secured the U.S. Open crown last Monday, beating Tom Watson in a day-late windup to the American national championship.

"I got a telegram from them asking me to play," Nelson said. "I sent a telegram back saying I probably would.

"I hadn't planned on it, but I guess I will play," said Nelson, who also has some other schedule adjustments to make.

"I'm in the World Series (of Golf) now, and I'll play in that.

"But I won't be playing all that much the rest of the year," Nelson said. That light schedule, however, is not a result of his Open victory, he said. "I just hadn't planned to play much the rest of the year. This doesn't change it," Nelson said.

IN ADDITION to the British Open, three weeks away in England, he's also playing next week in the Western Open in Oak Brook, Ill., and the PGA national championship in Los Angeles.

Both of those have a bearing on a goal that was not secured by Nelson's U.S. Open triumph. A key member of the last two winning U.S. Ryder Cup teams, Nelson does not yet have a spot on the 12-man squad that will play the best Europe golfers this fall in Florida.

He now ranks 19th on the point list from which 12 players will be chosen.

The qualifying period ends next week in the Western, with one spot reserved for the winner of the PGA.

"I need to win this week or next week, or win the PGA to make it," Nelson said.

Although a letdown from the long, difficult week of the Open would not be unusual, Nelson ranked as one of the prime favorites for the $72,000 first prize here.

CBS will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds of the Memphis tournament Saturday and Sunday.

USFL has made first down

There are a lot of yards to go

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

In terms of the game, the United States Football League has made a first down. But there still are an awful lot of yards to go.

Nobody realizes that more than Chet Simmons, the ex-television executive who serves as commissioner of the new league. But Simmons is confident that after a somewhat tentative beginning, the USFL has made a decent start and is moving in the right direction.

"We have a mountain to climb. You can't expect to climb it in one year," said Simmons as his league heads into the home stretch of its inaugural season. "I feel very good on a couple of counts. What I think most important is what we've accomplished playing at a competitive level. With two weeks to go in the season, only one of four playoff berths is set."

Just as importantly, the teams have started playing more entertaining football. Simmons is the first to admit that the product at the start of the season left something to be desired.

"I thought it was dull and tentative," said Simmons. "But it's changed. I think we've got a good league now."

PART OF the early problem was the fact that USFL teams went straight from five-week training camps into regular season games without any exhibition time for coaches to sort out their rosters. It is a mistake Simmons says will not be repeated next year.

"We had 200 or 250 players who had never met each other in the camps. New players, new coaches, new teams. It took four weeeks (into the season) before continuity developed. I'm sure we'll have exhibitions next year so that teams will have a better opportunity to evaluate personnel."

Another factor was the edge defenses had on offenses. The last time a new football league came down the pike, it was complete with razzle, dazzle scoring fireworks that made every Sunday seem like the Fourth of July. Simmons thinks that part of his league's early problems might have been the track record of the old American Football League.

"I thought we'd have AFL-type big scoring games," he said. "We didn't and that hurt. There was too much expectation. A lot of hype goes into the start of a new league. We had some good names, top college players like Herschel Walker and Kelvin Bryant and Anthony Carter and Trumaine Johnson. But there was no way to meet that level of expectation in our first year."

THE WALKER signing delivered college football's most glamorous name to the USFL, albeit under clouded circumstances because of the Heisman Trophy winner's undergraduate status.

"I still feel about Herschel that we were in a no-win situation," said Simmons. "(Our lawyers said) We couldn't deny his desire and the desire of his representatives for the kid to play pro football. He had us between a rock and a hard place."

Simmons has asked the college football community for help in this area.

"It is not our intention to rape college football programs," he said. "But some modifications must be looked at about draft eligibility. Maybe there's a review procedure appropriate for a kid with maturity who says, 'I want to go out and earn my living.' Have a committee to screen kids. If the committee says a kid is not ready, at least there is something we can deal with."

Next year's Walker could be Marcus Dupree, the flashy University of Oklahoma running back who will be a sophomore in the fall. Would the USFL sign him, the way it signed Walker?

"We won't entice a kid to do it," he said. "But if I face the same challenge again, how do I defend it?"

Are you listening, Marcus?

Dreams will disappear but there's always a game

If it wasn't for the vicarious thrill of sports, the games that people play wouldn't hold the sway and magic people feel in watching those games.

I'm past the age of dreaming about scoring the winning run, hitting the winning basket or stepping across the goal with the only touchdown, but it wasn't always that way.

The truth of the matter is that I was never a great athlete. Oh, I was a starting guard for my high school football team. I played Little League and Pony League baseball and even had some Boys Club basketball. There are no real press clippings to show for any of them.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Some of the greatest moments, however, came in Jerry Beard's backyard where we took a thousand shots a day at a goal that was once 10-feet high, but more like 12-feet after the yard had settled under the pounding of high school hoofs day in and day out.

It was there where you could score the winning basket and every shot was of NBA caliber. It was there where you could be a star.

There were the Sunday afternoon track meets by the non-tracksters at the high school stadium where every time was Olympic records. There were Saturday morning tag football games on any lawn in town where you could catch the football and score the winning touchdown.

DURING THE summer, there were races on any day of the week at the local pool and there were 50-yard Indy 500 races from any stop light in town.

Most of us have experienced these feats of glory. Now that is real sport.

But I used to carry things even further. I could see myself catching a mid-air fumble and racing for the endzone, leading the Snyder Tigers to victory. I could hit homerun for my Little League Cardinals. Of course the dream came on Thursday and the game on Friday. Isn't that the way it is with most of us?

I was never a pitcher in "real" baseball, but had this little mound in the front yard where I used to strike out Stan Musial and Mickey Mantle with little effort.

One day I remember striking out Mantle 41 times with just 187 pitches. He never touched a ball. I had the hot hand that day.

But just like the dream on Thursday and the game on Friday reality has a way of catching up with you. Even the feat against Mickey Mantle lost its edge with time.

I got to interview Mantle a few years back and couldn't help but tell him the story of how great I was against him.

"I saw you play on TV in a game Dizzy Dean described two of your homers and I went out to the front yard and struck you out 41 times on 187 pitches. I thought that was the best pitching performance anyone ever did," I told Mantle.

Mantle with his own style quickly put the dream to rest by saying, "There is really nothing unusual about that. There are probably 100 Major League pitchers who equaled that performance. Striking out — now that's something I was great at."

The dreams disappear with time, but that's not bad. There's always a game tomorrow.

Brewers fall into last place

By The Associated Press

How the mighty have fallen.

That thud you may have heard Wednesday night was the Milwaukee Brewers, American League champions just one year ago, plummeting into last place in the AL East.

The fence-busting crew popularly known last year as Harvey's Wallbangers lately have looked more like Harvey the invisible rabbit of stage and screen fame. The Brewers got a first-inning home run from Robin Yount but didn't manage another hit until they put together three meaningless singles in the ninth and dropped a 6-2 decision to the Tigers in Detroit, their 11th setback in the last 15 games.

That pushed them one percentage point behind the Cleveland Indians, who whipped the Boston Red Sox 9-4.

One night earlier, when Milwaukee whipped Detroit 10-3, Kuenn had called the Brewers "the team you were expecting to see all year." Wednesday night, he was singing a different tune.

American League

"It's going to take some good hitting and great pitching to get back in it, just like we had last night," he said. "It's a thing we haven't been doing this year and it's something we have to do. Any loss tears you down and that's why we're so far down now (eight games out). We've just got to get out of this somehow."

Indians 9, Red Sox 4

At Boston, Pat Tabler, Julio Franco and Alan Bannister each drove in two runs for the Indians, who grabbed a 5-0 lead before the Red Sox came to back, chasing Bobby Ojeda after one-third of an inning. Boston cut the lead to 5-3 on run-scoring singles by Tony Armas and Carl Yastrzemski in the first and Armas' 14th homer of the season in the third, but the Red Sox went scoreless after that until Armas homered again in the ninth.

Yankees 5, Orioles 2

Jerry Mumphrey and Roy Smalley hit home runs on consecutive pitches off Scott McGregor to produce three runs in the third inning and Ron Guidry scattered eight hits.

Guidry's 10th triumph enabled the Yankees to end a 10-game losing streak in Baltimore, where they had lost 15 of their last 16 games, including all seven last year. Rookie Don Mattingly drove in the other runs with a sacrifice fly in the seventh and a bases-loaded grounder in the ninth.

Twins 4, Blue Jays 3

At Toronto, John Castino singled home two runs in a three-run seventh inning and Tom Brunansky hit a solo home run as Minnesota prevented Toronto's Dave Stieb from notching his 11th victory. Stieb carried a 2-1 lead into the seventh when Gary Gaetti doubled and scored on a single by Ron Washington. After Washington was caught stealing, Scott Ulliger and Rusty Kuntz singled and Castino hit a sinking liner to left that bounced away from Dave Collins when he tried to short-hop the ball, allowing both runners to score.

Rangers 9, Angels 1

At Arlington, Rick Honeycutt, 5-17 a year ago, earned his 10th victory with a five-hitter. The victory, Honeycutt's fifth in a row, lowered his major league-leading earned run average to 1.37 and moved the Rangers within one-half game of first-place California in the AL West. Honeycutt walked two and struck out two while inducing 18 outs on ground balls.

Texas scored two runs in the first inning on a single by Wayne Tolleson, a walk to Buddy Bell, an error and two wild pitches by loser Bill Travers. Tolleson added an RBI single in the second, while Bill Stein homered for Texas and Billy Sample had a two-run single.

Royals 7, A's 6

At Kansas City, rookie Pat Sheridan drilled a single through a drawn-in infield with the bases loaded in the 12th inning to drive in the winning run. Sheridan connected off Jeff Jones, who had relieved loser Ben Callahan, who entered the game in the 11th inning in his major league debut. Frank White singled with one out in the 12th and, after John Wathan singled, they executed a double steal. Amos Otis was walked intentionally to load the bases, bringing on Jones.

The A's tied it with two runs in the eighth on RBI triples by Tony Phillips and Davey Lopes. White, one night after setting a club record by driving in a run for the 10th game in a row, gave Kansas City a 6-4 lead with a two-run double in the seventh. Willie Aikens hit a two-run homer in the Kansas City sixth.

White Sox 6, Mariners 3

At Chicago, Greg Walker's two-run single keyed a three-run fifth-inning rally that erased a 3-1 Seattle lead and Carlton Fisk and Ron Kittle added solo homers to boost the White Sox to their fourth consecutive victory and hand the Mariners their sixth straight setback.

Home runs power Mid City past Tower, into championship game

A solo home run by Dorey Thompson in the fourth inning and a two-run blast by Russell Page in the top of the eighth Wednesday lifted the Mid City Angels to a 4-1 victory over the Tower Diablos and into Friday's American Little League Championship game.

Tower scored its lone run in the bottom of the first inning and for awhile it looked like it would be enough until Thompson's homer in the fourth tied the game. Two errors, which cost Tower one run, gave Page his chance at heroics in the eighth. The two miscues, both on bunt attempts, prolonged the inning long enough for his blast over the center field fence.

Tower got a rally started in the bottom of the inning when Mid City reliever Clark Crawford found trouble getting the last out in the inning. With Zane Ledbetter starting the inning with a walk, Crawford got the next two batters and then walked Bryan Henson. When he threw the next pitch to Omar Hilburn, Jason Brassard came in to relieve.

With the pitching change, the Diablo coach elected to change batters and sent in tiny Shannon Cumba who walked to load the bases bringing Tower to the top of its order. Greg Garrett hit a grounder back to the mound and Brassard threw to first to clinch the victory.

Little League Playoffs

Crawfore was credited with the pitching win and Brassard received a save. Diablo Todd Overend suffered the loss.

IN THE other playoff game Wednesday, Eastern Optomist scored five runs in the bottom of the fourth inning to break open a tie ball game and went on to post an 11-7 victory which eliminted Western Orange Crush from the playoffs.

Tower, with a solo home run by James Madrid, picked up a 4-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning only to lose it in the second. Western tied the game at 4-4.

The five runs in the fourth plus two more in the sixth were more than Western could overcome.

Juan Dominguez was the winning pitcher for Eastern while Kevin Irish suffered the loss. Madrid's home run was the only extra base hit of the ball game.

Tonight Eastern, with a 1-1 playoff record, will face 1-1 tower in an elimination game. The winner of that game will advance to the finals against the 3-0 Mid City Angels. All games are scheduled for 6 p.m.

In the double elimination tournament, Mid City can clinch the championship Friday by winning one game. Should the winner of the Eastern-Tower game win the first championship matchup, a second title game on Saturday will be required.

Deer's home run leads Captains to third victory

By The Associated Press

Rob Deer hit a three-run homer to lead Shreveport to a 6-5 win over Tulsa, the Captains' third straight win of the Texas League's second season.

El Paso's Joe Henderson hit three homers, including a grand-slammer, as the Diablos won a far West Texas slugfest over San Antonio, 17-12.

In other TL games Wednesday night, Midland defeated Beaumont 4-1 and Arkansas beat Jackson 4-2.

Deer's shot, his 18th of the year, came in the seventh inning. Tulsa's Mike Rubel hit his 22nd homer of the year, a solo shot, in the eighth.

Randy Weibel, pitching his first game for Shreveport, nabbed the win. John Violette was credited with a save. Glen Cook, 2-1, took the loss for Tulsa.

Henderson hit his grand slam in the fourth and added two solo shots for his first three homers of the season. Mike Felder drove in three more runs for El Paso in the sixth with a triple and the Diablos' Juan Castillo hit a solo homer in the fourth.

San Antonio's Stu Pederson hit a two-run homer and Cecil Espy added four hits for the Dodgers.

Rene Quinones, 5-1, picked up the win for El Paso, while Bob Schroeck came on in relief for the save. Steve Martin, 5-5, was the losing pitcher for San Antonio.

Arkansas' Bob Helsom socked his first homer of the year and added a run in the sixth.

Jackson opened scoring in the second when Jim Woodward scored on a single by LaSchelle Tarver. The Mets' only other run came in the bottom of the fifth when Woodward scored on a single by Tarver.

Sixers not happy with new playoff format

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers aren't happy with the new National Basketball Association playoff format.

The new playoff system voted by league owners at a meeting in New York Tuesday expands the number of playoff teams from 12 to 16, lengthens the opening series from best of three to five games, and eliminates first-round byes for division winners.

"It's going to be a long season," said Billy Cunningham, coach of the champion 76ers.

Cunningham said he preferred the incentive to get time off for winning a division. He said the new format would change the way many teams approach to the playoffs, which could last as long as 28 games and extend the season a week to June 18.

"Where you previously could use an eight or nine-man rotation, you're going to have to go deeper now," Cunningham said.

Sixers' owner Harold Katz said he voted for the change but didn't like it.

"I think you should get time off if you win the division," Katz said.

Katz said he didn't feel the team which won the division should play in the first round.

"But you have to be thinking in the best interest of the league," said Katz, taking into consideration gate revenues which could increase as high as $4 million.

Ayala picks county jail over fed

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — Tony Ayala Jr., a former top-ranked boxer, has decided he wants to serve his sentence for a sexual assault conviction at the overcrowded Passaic County Jail rather than be transferred to a state prison, officials say.

Ayala, ordered to spend a minimum of 15 years behind bars, was given the choice because he has been a "model prisoner," Passaic County Sheriff Edwin J. Englehardt said Wednesday.

"I've got 600 prisoners and I wish they all were like him," said Englehardt, adding that Ayala could be transferred in the future.

Ayala, 20, has been held at the county jail since he was convicted April 13 of charges of sexually assaulting a woman who lived in his West Paterson apartment complex and threatening her roommate with a knife.

On Wednesday, Superior Court Judge Amos C. Saunders sentenced Ayala to a 35 years in prison with a 15-year minimum before he would be eligible for parole.

Business jumping on East Walker

By EARL GUSTKEY
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

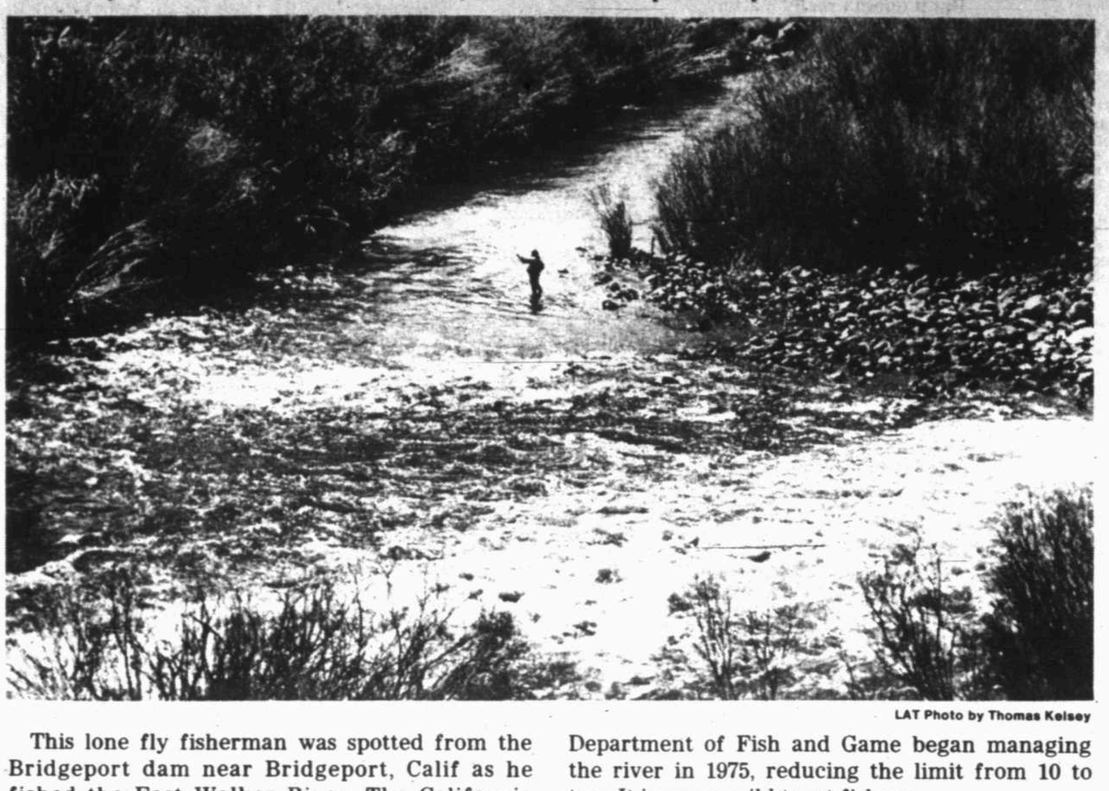

BRIDGEPORT, Calif. — This is about attitudes, fish, money and a river.

There are primarily two types of trout fishermen. Type A is not happy unless he has caught a limit of hatchery-raised fish, taken them home (or to a campfire) and eaten them. Type B is primarily interested in outsmarting a stream-raised fish, preferably a large one, has no urge to eat his catch and releases unharmed almost every trout he catches.

In California, Type A's greatly outnumber Type B's. Therefore, fishable waters near resort businesses are likely to have a lot of planted trout for the meat fishermen, right?

Not necessarily.

Take the East Walker River, near Bridgeport. It begins at the outlet pipe of Bridgeport Reservoir and winds eight miles through a juniper-sage canyon to the Nevada line, then flows 60 miles to Nevada's Walker Lake. In California, it has been managed as a wild trout fishery for nine years.

This lone fly fisherman was spotted from the Bridgeport dam near Bridgeport, Calif as he fished the East Walker River. The California Department of Fish and Game began managing the river in 1975, reducing the limit from 10 to two. It is now a wild trout fishery.

The East Walker had been known as a reliable trout stream for bait, lure and fly fishermen for decades. Then, in 1975, the Department of Fish and Game reduced the limit from 10 to 2. The little river has not been the same since.

In the beginning, when the restrictions were announced, some anglers complained.

"Most of them were locals," Rick Rockel, who owns Ken's Sporting Goods in Bridgeport, said. "I wasn't too keen on the idea, either. We sold a lot of tackle to East Walker fishermen, and no one here was sure what it would mean for business.

"Well, it's been great for business. I sell enough flies to East Walker fly fishermen to take several expensive fishing trips. I'll bet I sold a thousand dozen big streamer flies last year.

"More people fish the East Walker than ever. If someone from the DFG came to Bridgeport and tried to change the East Walker back to the way it was, he'd get lynched.

"Another important economic point about the way the river is managed now is that fly fishermen are generally spenders. They eat in restaurants and stay in motels, not in campgrounds. They don't litter and they don't get drunk and cause problems."

SO ATTITUDES change. Once, the East Walker was an impediment for Mono County residents traveling to Nevada. In 1880, Henry Hayes built a bridge over the river and collected tolls for 35 years. When he raised the rates to 25 cents for horses and 75 cents for autos in 1915, an outraged Mono County Board of Supervisors bought the bridge from him.

Finance director plans changes

Accounting procedures to be modified

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Troy Gifford casts a different eye on numbers.

Where some people see a "2 plus 2 equals 4" he looks closer to determine where those numbers came from and what they mean in terms of service to the public.

Gifford became the city's finance director in late April, following the resignation of Grant Walton over failing to report sales tax rebate figures. By the time the City Council and city administration discovered it, the city was in the hole by $1 million.

To rectify the problem of declining revenues, the council cut $1.8 million from the budget.

With experience in military, college and private business accounting procedures, Gifford saw the opportunity to round out his experience by adding municipal government. He had moved to Midland in June 1978 and was working for the Elcor-Ortloff Corporation family.

"There are some similarities between the private and public sectors," he said, explaining budgets are set up in "fund accounts."

"They're similar in that you have income and expense items. The differences come in how you summarize and how you report the figures," Gifford, 41, said.

Troy Gifford

"IN THE PRIVATE sector you're working for a profit motive. In the public you operate to give service to the citizens. Accounting information is summarized and reported differently.

"Citizens are more interested in how much was spent on parks and recreation, for example, than on employees' salaries. The public is interested in how much is spent on areas they can see," he said.

In his office only two months, Gifford arrived in time to figure out what was happening to the sales tax rebates, devise a system of reporting these figures on a routine basis to the council and city manager and sort through budget preparations for the 1984 fiscal year. On Tuesday, he was looking at how much debt service payments the city will have to pay next year.

His plans for change include

"CLOSER TO THE end you get,the more clearly you can see what's happening out there," he said with a laugh.

With the rapid boom-bust cycle, "it has not been easy for the city manager or council to see what was going to happen," he added.

Exactly where the largest amount of sales are and the biggest drop has piqued Gifford's curiosity. But he ran into a stumbling block here, unable to get the information from the State Comptroller's Office.

"Sales tax receipts are made up of a complex group of transactions," he said.

They reflect not only those sales made when someone goes to a retail store, "but also from businesses spending money." Oilfield equipment fabricators and dealers also pay sales tax. "So the sales tax reflects all business transactions, and the sales when outside businesses come into Midland and make purchases. All of this is related to activity in the petroleum industry."

With the sharp drop in the petroleum industry business, Gifford feels this is what caused the decline in sales tax figures and not so much a reduction of personal sales.

"modernization of accounting methodology and service to management, which means accurate, concise and timely reporting to the city manager and council."

All departments of the city will see modifications in how they report their separate budgets, and that includes the purchasing, warehouse, customer service and accounting divisions.

AND HE IS focusing on that sales tax receipts figure. By June, he could see the city had fallen even farther below what had been projected for this year — about 25 percent. Last summer, the council marked $11 million into the budget from these rebates. By June, the number was $5.7 million.

Gifford has graphed these sales tax-rebate figures on a quarterly basis to see in black and white the ups and downs. "It peaked about March-April 1982," he said. "It started falling right after that." And the downward trend has continued.

He uses a quarterly average, explaining figures for the first two months are low while the third month is high. Some businesses don't report the sales tax until that third month, Gifford explained, thus pushing up the third month.

Gifford also has charted Midland's figures in relation to Odessa and can see that while the neighboring city at one time received more than Midland, it has fallen below the Tall City.

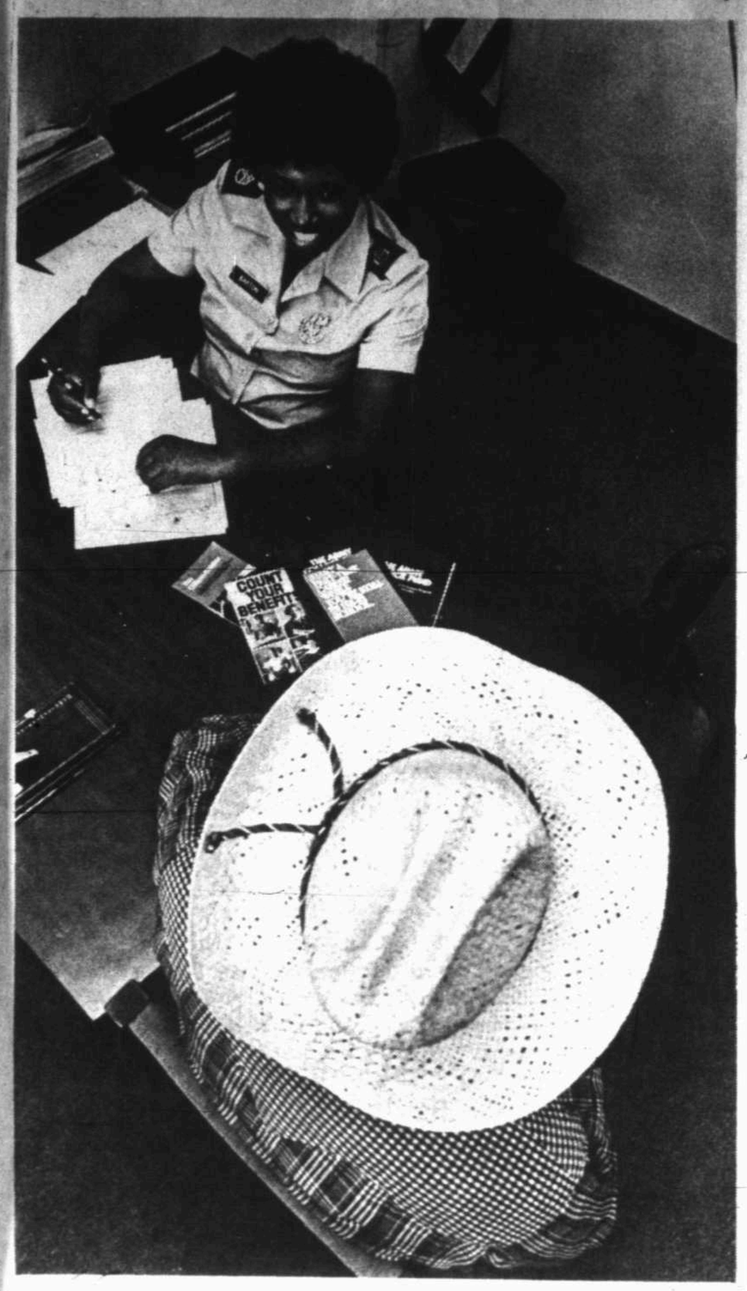

He has been revising the end-of-the-year projection and has pegged it at $7.4-7.5 million, down from $8 million he had hoped for a month ago.

HE SENSES, though, a return to optimism by the public.

"It's my feeling there's not as much pessimism in our local economy now as there was six months ago. I'm generally optimistic about our economy and our petroleum industry," Gifford said.

And he's reflecting that conservative optimism in the projection for sales tax figures next year. Gifford is expecting a 3-5 percent growth during fiscal year 1984 over what is received this year.

In reality, he said, that's almost the same as what Midland will be receiving this year.

Staff Sgt. Sheila Barton, Midland's Army field recruiter, discusses Army opportunities with applicant Kenny White.

Local recruiters say enlistment increased

By FRANK CLARK
Summer Intern

Does Uncle Sam want you?

As little as two years years ago, the U.S. Armed Forces were scrambling for able-bodied men and women to join the ranks of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines.

Today, with rigid entrance exams, strict drug policy and a thorough records check of all applicants, many potenial recruits are being screened out.

The reason behind the tougher entrance requirements is simple.

"We're getting quality people down here every day asking about our opportunities," said Navy Recruiter Chief Charles Coakley. "Many have a very serious interest in joining. Training camp is being filled a year in advance."

Staff Sgt. Sheila Barton, of the Midland Army Recruiting Station, agrees.

"This station has placed 65 recruits into the Army so far this year and all but six were high school graduates. A number had college experiance and all qualified on the written and physical tests. In terms of enlistments, this area is above the 100 percent quota."

Some may wonder what the sudden interest in military life is, but to hopeful recruits it's very simple.

"We can offer a steady job in 350 different technical areas, with promise of promotion and increased pay," said Ms. Barton. "Also, the Delayed Entry Program we offer gives new recruits a guarantee on his skill training and on his first duty station. Very few places can give a guarantee as good as that to a new employee."

Coakley believes the reasons go beyond economic ones.

"It's true that a lot of people need jobs today, but I think the changes people see in the military are also a big factor. We've tightened the acceptance requirements and in the Navy's case, a high school diploma and a passing score on the military entrance test are required. This rise in standards has increased pride and morale in the Navy, making it a more positive place to work. People see this and want to be a part of it."

In the last two years, there has also been a widespread crackdown on illegal drugs and drug users in the military. Both the Army and the Navy have instituted a new policy which calls for the expulsion of first time drug offenders. Coakley sees this hardening of policy as both positive and necessary.

"In the military, we deal with equipment and people. A small mistake by a signalman on an aircraft carrier could kill 50 men. There is no room for error. Drugs could cause that error."

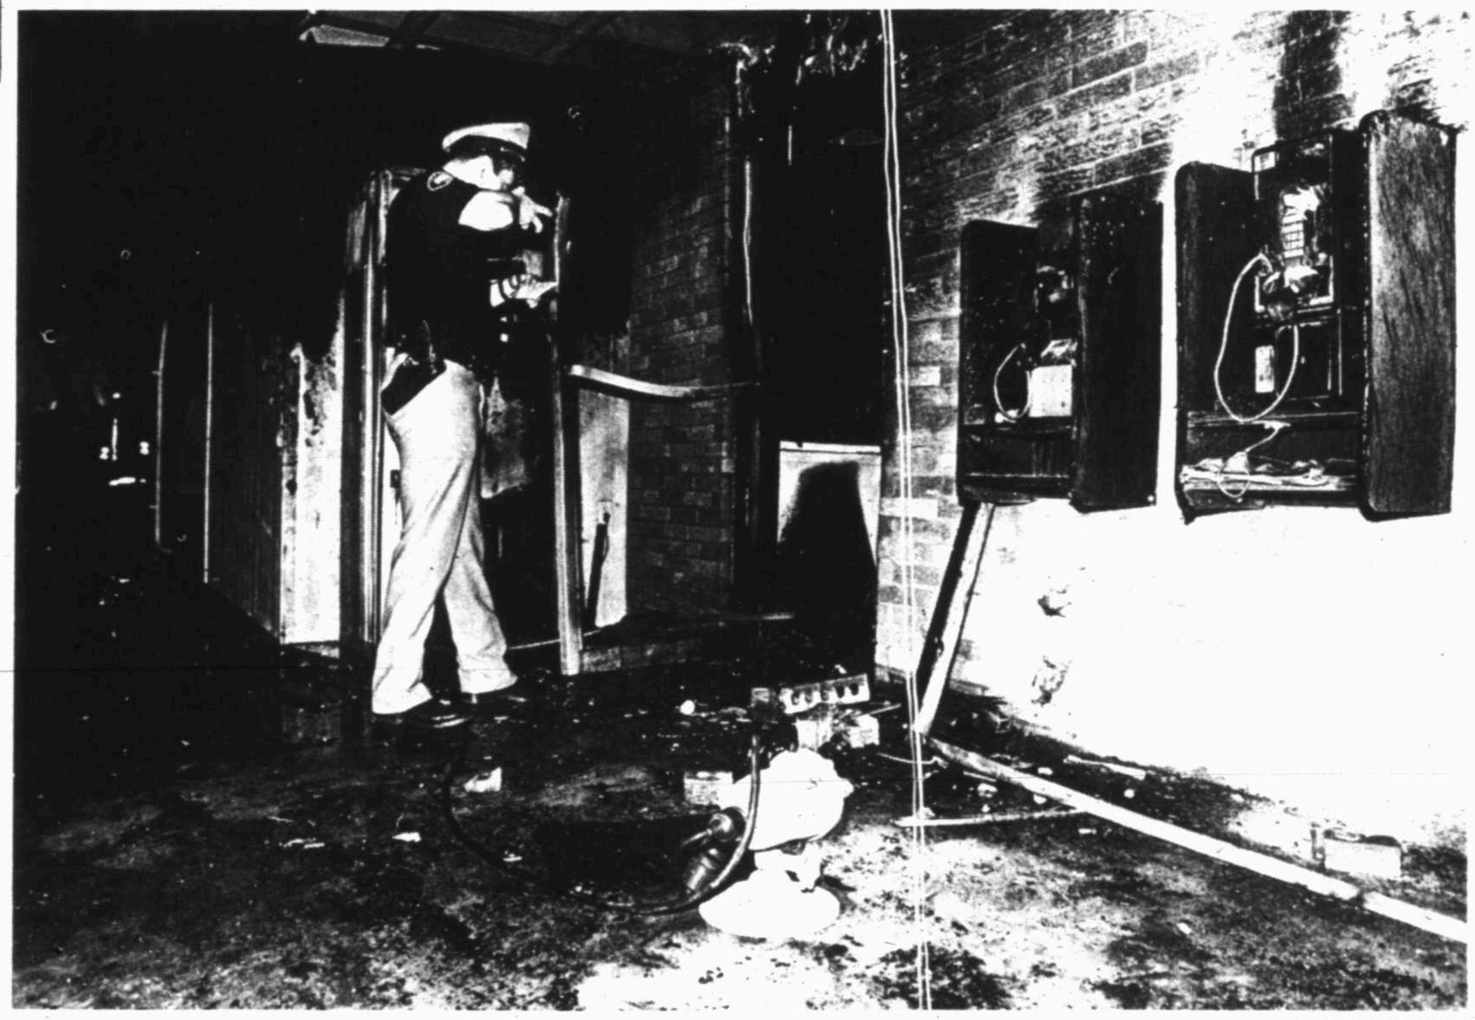

He noted that this stricter policy hasn't stopped people from seeking entrance into the miltary.

"Because of the crackdown on drugs, we have created a tighter, sharper organization. I think people see this in the way we operate, in the way we carry ourselves, and it makes them want to be a part. It hasn't made recruiting any harder for me or for the Navy," he added. "In fact, we have to recruit less because of the smaller dropout rate in boot camp. We're getting quality recruits who take their military service seriously. The drunken sailor image is finally dying."

But with all the changes in today's military and in recruiting, many things are still the same and will never change.

"A young guy came in a few days ago and wanted to know what our branch of the military was all about," said Coakley, "and I noticed he couldn't keep his eyes off of some old World War II uniforms we had on display in the back of our office. Then he looked around the room very suspiously. When I asked him what he was doing, he peered at me with wide eyes and said he was looking for the guy who was going to hit him over the head, throw him into uniform and send him off to sea."

"We don't do that anymore," laughed Coakley from behind his crowded recruiting desk, "We don't need to."

An unidentified city police officer investigates the scene of a fire that damaged a laundry room and two apartments at the Lexington Motor Inn, 1003 S. Midkiff Road, shortly before 3 a.m. today. Occupants of rooms in the immediate area of the blaze were evacuated and no injuries were reported. Cause of the fire is under investigation by the fire marshal's office.

Lexington Motel resident loses everything in fire

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Dennis Simms' curiosity may have saved his life.

He was awakened early this morning by what he thought was a domestic disturbance.

Simms, a Midland motel resident, said he heard a noise sometime after 2 a.m. today and got dressed to take a peek outside his room. He saw flames.

The blaze — which broke out shortly before 3 a.m. today at the Lexington Motel, 1003 S. Midkiff Road — was extinguished by Midland firemen. There were no injuries.

According to reports, the fire started in the laundry room, which was 15 to 20 feet across from Simms' room. The fire spread, damaging the laundry room and at least two other apartments — including Simms' room. The fire is under investigation by the fire marshal's office.

"The smoke and flames were pretty thick," Simms said in an interview with The Reporter-Telegram today.

The 38-year-old Simms discovered that the "disturbance" was the motel employees waking other occupants.

"If they had not gotten me up, I would have had some real problems," he said. "There was no panic. Everything went very smoothly. It's fortunate that nobody was injured or killed."

Simms said he quickly called the front desk and then assisted in waking other residents.

"The flames were spreading quickly," he said, explaining that he started back to his room to get his belongings, "but it would have been foolhardy to go back.

"If the fire department had arrived five minutes later, a major portion of the motel would have been lost," he said, adding that the police department did a good job keeping bystanders away.

Simms, of Houston, works for Anaconda-Ericsson — a computer firm at Midland Regional Air Terminal — and has lived at the Lexington since February. He said he lost everything, but a pair of pants and underwear, in the fire.

Recalling the incident, Simms said this morning: "It's nice to here today."

Three Midlanders to be tried for shooting game

Three Midlanders charged with shooting game from a helicopter are to be tried by a jury in federal court in Midland at 9 a.m. next Thursday.

Frankie Keller, 30, and Steve Dudley Quain, 40, were indicted last month for shooting two bears in June 1981 in Mexico while airborne and then smuggling the bearskins across the Rio Grande.

The third person, Wesley Michael Nickell, 22, was indicted for violating the federal Airborne Hunting Act by shooting a Barbado sheep and mule deer in January 1982 while flying in a helicopter piloted by James Clyde Short Jr. of Midland.

In arranging the hunts in the Fort Stockton area, Nickell is accused of conspiring with Short and Midland farmer Lee Milton Bell. Bell and Short were named as co-conspirators in the indictment but not as co-defendants.

The federal government is alleging that Nickell paid Short $600 to fly him on the hunts.

Allegations of airborne hunting of game have been under investigation in West Texas since at least last year by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the federal grand jury.

Federal law provides a one-year prison term and/or a $1,000 fine for violating the Airborne Hunting Act. Penalty for smuggling the bearskins across the U.S.-Mexico border in violation of the U.S. Customs Act could range up to a five-year prison term and the imposition of a $10,000 fine.

Odessa gunsmith's sentence to be reduced

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An Odessa gunsmith who confessed the "error" which got him in prison and whose attorney contended he would be a "more productive member of society" outside of prison than inside has been granted a reduction of sentence — from five to three years — by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

The inmate, John James Donnelly, 36, was sentenced to five years in prison last February after he pleaded guilty to selling an illegal .223-caliber Colt AR-15 rifle, converted to fire automatically, and silencer and a silencer-rigged Ruger .22-caliber Mark I pistol to a federal undercover agent. The transaction allegedly took place in an Odessa motel Aug. 26 for $1,950. His girl friend, Judy Ann Grimmett, in her late 20s, was placed on five-year probation for failure to pay a tax on making a firearm.

Donnelly, who is serving time at the Boron Federal Prison Camp in California, dispatched a letter to Bunton earlier this month when he found out that the parole commission would require him to serve 40 months of his five-year sentence rather than the 10 to 12 months he had supposed.

However, a federal agent on Wednesday said the three-year sentence ordered by the judge likely would convert to about 30 months of prison time even though the parole commission has the authority to release Donnelly at any time.

In his motion for reduction of sentence, Donnelly said he has maintained a "perfect record" at Boron FPC, that the crime he committed was "a one-time error on my part," that he would "never commit such an error" again, and that he would be "of more use to society in my role as an engineer and technical writer" than he would as an inmate.

"I should also better provide for my family," he penned. "Judy and I are anxious to be married and settle down." Donnelly noted that "I certainly do require some assistance in helping myself back to a normal life."

His attorney, Stephen Brannan of Odessa, said in a motion for reduction of sentence that Donnelly previously had been "found fit to have a federal firearms license" and would have a better chance of being rehabilitated if he were placed on probation rather than kept in prison. In addition, Brannan noted that at the time his client was sentenced, "it was the expectation of the parties involved that only one year would be served." Brannan allowed that the parole commission last January "changed guidelines concerning parole standards" for the firearms offense. The previous prison time to be served for the offense was 10 to 12 months. The newly-adopted guidelines lengthened the time to 40 to 52 months.

Property misappropriation probed

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON —Demanding to know "who's running the store," Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Texas, grilled five high-level Pentagon officials Wednesday afternoon concerning the misappropriation of over $55 million worth of Defense Department property by a unit at Ft. Sam Houston in San Antonio.

"The person who let that situation in San Antonio develop the way it did ought to pay," Hightower said in a hearing by the House Appropriations defense subcommittee. "If that person wears a star, he ought to lose it. And if there is evidence of criminal culpability, it ought to go to a grand jury."

Calling recent revelations "very damaging" and complaining that "the bureaucratic right hand obviously doesn't know what the left hand is up to," Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., the subcommittee chairman, zeroed in on the Army's Military Affiliated Radio System at Ft. Sam Houston.

Complaining there is "a complete breakdown of control over the disposal of excess military property," Addabbo repeated charges he made in a recent letter to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger that the MARS unit over the past 18 months obtained 11,612 line items of property for which it is not authorized with an estimated value of $55.7 million.

"WHEN OUR investigative staff asked about inventory control and potential pilferage," Addabbo told a deputy under secretary of defense, a rear admiral and three high-level Pentagon civilians, "the (MARS) director admitted that (because) there are no inventory records, no one would ever know if something is stolen.

"Therefore, (the director) concluded, he didn't worry much about people stealing from his operation," Addabbo said.

The MARS unit, which with other MARS units uses private ham-radio volunteers to help soldiers call home from around the world, obtained from Defense Property Disposal Offices around the country thousands of items of equipment which is is not authorized to have, Addabbo said.

These items included but were not limited to, he said, televisions, wrist watches, teletype machines, sunglasses, cameras, night vision devices, auto parts, hand tools, diesel engines, surgical instruments, guns and associated spare parts, parachutes and guided missile components.

The Defense Department maintains scores of DPDO outlets around the country to handle equipment turned in by the various military services as surplus, unusable or unneeded. The DPDO's function supposedly is to store and catalog the items and reroute them back into the defense system where they are needed. Agencies such as the Red Cross and state entities then get to pick through unwanted property before it goes up for auction to surplus dealers and other private citizens.

BUT THE NEW York Democrat cited one case in which a private citizen in no way associated with the military managed to have his name listed in the DPDO computer system as a Defense Department activity to receive excess property, with a standing request for helicopter airframes and related components.

"He had been on the distribution list for over a year," Addabbo said. "I just hope the Inspector General doesn't find that this fellow has a military helicopter sitting in his backyard somewhere."

Much of the improperly obtained government property, he said, was given away to civilians in "goody boxes" and items such as tools were used as door prizes at state conventions.

Hightower said it is hard for members of the subcommittee, which must approve the military's annual spending bill, to justify to their contions. And he ought to be telling others that they're going to see a grand jury."

TESTIFYING TO the subcommittee Wednesday were the Pentagon's policy-makers for procurement policies and practices: Ms. Mary Ann Gilleece, Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition Management; Rear Adm. J.S. Sansone, Deputy Chief of Naval Material for Contracts and Business Management; Dr. Henry J. Dubicki, the Army's Deputy for Procurement Policies; Ronald A. Davidson, the Defense Department's Deputy Director for Procurement; and Ira L. Kemp, the Air Force Associate Director of Contracting and Manufacturing Policy.

The five Pentagon policy-makers were summoned to testify following testimony from high-level officials in charge of acquisition who said the problems revealed through the subcommittee's investigation were rooted in policy. Without exception, all five of Wednesday's witnesses said the questions addressed to them would have to be answered by people in aquisition.

With his voice getting testy, Hightower summed up the frustration expressed by other subcommittee members, saying, "The acquisition people say it's the policy people and the policy people say it's the acquisition people. What we want to know is who is running the store? Somebody somewhere is stealing us all blind."

Ms. Gilleece, with the aid of a chart and a 25-page typed statement, testified that 13 of 32 initiatives to stop misappropriation of property and help keep track of it have been implemented into an "improvement program...We don't deal with what you buy; we deal with how you buy it. We develop (purchasing) strategies...

"I AM not in any way suggesting that we do not coordinate," she said. "Because of the focus of attention, there's no question in my mind that the system will improve. We're aware of the problem."

If there is coordination, asked Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., another subcommittee member, why then did one Army agency sell 8,200 brand new hand tools when another part of the Army was busy purchasing 3,200 of the same tools at about the same time?

Odessa biker bears it all

ODESSA — While hot weather brings out seasonal activities such as pool parties with frozen drinks, at least one sport, streaking, has been resurrected from the 1960s and early '70s.

And Permian Basin residents should be aware that Odessa police, wearing uniformed attire, won't put up with citizens who shuck theirs.

A 34-year-old Odessa man found that out when officers got him off the streets of downtown Odessa and into some coveralls at the city jail.

According to Lt. Rusty Baker, the man was spotted riding a bike at the intersection of Fifth Street and Alleghaney — nude.

Following a brief chase, he was arrested for disorderly conduct and attempting to elude officers.

Man remains in jail following drug raid

ODESSA — Two Odessa men remain in jail today following unrelated incidents involving a Tuesday night raid on a suspected drug laboratory and an arrest Wednesday for possession of heroin.

James Thomas Perkins, 24, is being held on charges of "tampering with the identification on a handgun," after police detectives raided his home Tuesday night to confiscate a makeshift laboratory believed to be used to manufacture narcotics.

Other charges are pending results of a Department of Public Safety laboratory examination.

Two Odessa police officers, who received information on the possible drug lab, went to Room 235 of the Wall Apartments, 222 N. Dixie, where reports indicated the officers could smell chemicals, according to Lt. Rusty Baker. The officers, working undercover, said laboratory glassware was visible when Perkins opened the door.

A search warrant was obtained from Justice of Peace Jimmy Harris and they returned to the apartment at 11:15 p.m. with two Odessa police detectives and two DPS narcotics agents.

According to Baker, police seized a "makeshift laboratory consisting of a large amount of laboratory glassware and chemicals used to make narcotics."

Perkins was charged with tampering with the identification on a handgun, a Class A misdemeanor, and bond was set at $1,000, Baker said.

In other action, Milton Arthur Oben, 21, was charged with possession of heroin, theft and possession of narcotics paraphernalia following an incident at Odessa Medical Center Wednesday.

According to Baker, two officers saw Oben carrying a portable radio in the lobby of the hospital. The officers, who recognized the radio as belonging to a nurse in the emergency room, apprehended Oben and took him to the nurse, who identified the radio.

While searching Oben, the officers said they discovered two foil packets of a brown substance believed to be heroin, a syringe and other paraphernalia wrapped in a handkerchief in his pocket, Baker said.

Bond was set at $7,500 for the possession of heroin charge, $1,000 for the theft of the radio and $200 for possession of paraphernalia.

Mall auction to benefit retarded

The "Auction Extravaganza" of the Midland Park Mall will be held today at 7 p.m. in the Mall center court area.

Sponsored by Midland Mall merchants as a benefit for the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, items up for auction will include jewelry, fashion clothes, kitchen equipement, a leased car and much more.

Auction money can be received by turning in sales reciepts at the redemption booth at the Mall between 10 a.m. and 9 p.m. today. Reciepts will be redeemed dollar for dollar for any purchase made in the Mall since May 23.

Items may be "bid up" during the auction by shoppers using auction money or with cash. All cash received will go directly to the MARC fund.

GISD phone system approved

Installation of a gas line and a phone system for the new Greenwood High School, expected to be ready for occupation for the 1983-84 school year, were approved during a regular meeting of the Greenwood Independent School District Board of Trustees Tuesday.

Solid Systems Telecommunications received the contract for a new phone system while Energas received a contract to install a line from the main meter to the new school meter at a cost of $24,750.

In other action, trustees accepted the resignation of junior high school coach Joey Light and approved the appointment of seven additional teachers, subject to assignment.

Trustees also voted to continue the depository contract with First City National Bank and the appointment of Stephen L. Stallings Inc., of Stanton, as auditor for the 1982-83 school year.

Clinic to operate twice weekly

The Clinic of the Children's Community Ministry opened Tuesday and will be operating two days a week.

The clinic, at 307½ N. Weatherford Ave., provides minor medical care for children up to 12 years of age. Services are for children from low-income families who cannot afford to pay a physician for an office visit. The fee will be $3 per child per visit.

The hours will be from 8:30 a.m. to noon on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Patients needing medical care at other times should go to an emergency room facility.

The clinic is for sick babies. It will not provide any well-baby checks.

Accident victims in serious condition

LUBBOCK — A Midland man and his 13-year-old nephew remain in serious condition today in Lubbock Methodist Hospital following a head-on collision with a police officer near Dimmitt early Monday morning.

Robert Young Jr., 47, of Midland, and his nephew Michael Stephenson of Clayton, N.M., were changed from critical to serious condition Tuesday, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Young's wife, Jane, 45, the girls basketball coach at Midland High School, was treated for minor injuries and released.

The three were injured when a police officer collided head on with them.

The officer, Vaughn Allan Maddox, 30, was trying to kill himself when he drove into the oncoming vehicle, according to Department of Public Safety officials. Mattox later died when he shot himself through the heart with a .38 caliber pistol.

FDIC born in depression, turns 50 in recession

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, an independent U.S. agency that doesn't operate on tax dollars, turned 50 years old in late June only to find it had lost over $1 billion in 1982 and $1/2 billion in 1981. And it is losing more money this year.

The FDIC began in June, 1933, when America's money system was in uproar. During the Great Depression, bank customers lost everything in a period of economic collapse and widespread bank failures. The government sought to lure consumers back to banking after the failures by introducing the novel idea of bank-account insurance in 1933.

A local bank employee said "The FDIC is really an insurance company, to which banks pay premiums."

In the Thirties, bank accounts were insured up to $5,000. Now, all accounts are insured up to a $100,000 ceiling.

Bank liquidations, administered by the FDIC when a bank goes belly-up, shot up to 42 during 1982. That figure is at its highest level since 1941, and banks are failing at a rapid rate again this year.

FDIC has $13.8 billion in its insurance fund and it insures $1.45 trillion of deposits. That's $1.22 for every $100 in deposits — certainly not enough to cover deposits in a massive series of bank failures. But banks — pressed for capital through deregulation of interest they pay and falling prime loan rates for business — have not been failing that fast.

FDIC has an emergency $3 billion line-of-credit with the U.S. Treasury.

The agency insures deposits in 1,597 Texas banks through its Dallas regional office. William Isaac, who chairs the FDIC, told a business journal recently that bank difficulties will increase in the months ahead — even if there is an economic recovery.

Isaac said there are 345 "problem" banks among FDIC-insured institutions. That figure rose from 220 at 1983's outset. Its peak was in 1976, when 385 banks were troubled following the 1974-75 recession.

Bank failures seem to be on a time-lag. Failures begin to multiply just as the economy turns around and things look rosy.

Isaac thinks the FDIC is well-equipped to handle the banks' problems. And the Comptroller of the Currency has been stepping up bank examinations — along with FDIC — in order to insure against debacles like Penn Square, the Oklahoma City bank that "went on a binge of imprudent lending" — then failed in July 1982 — after being rated three (weak but in no danger of folding) on the one-to-five national bank scale.

Last fall, 15 national banks were rated five (unsafe, in danger of failing) and 4,103 banks (92 percent) were rated one or two (sound).

The FDIC tries to find a healthy bank to take over a bank that has failed. Depositors at the old bank automatically have accounts in the new bank. But if a buyer can't be found, the FDIC closes the bank and pays depositors up to $100,000 — their accounts' insured limit.

The FDIC proudly states that no depositor has lost a cent of his insured monies at any of the 650 banks that failed in the last 50 years.

General creditors, those with loan relationships, and people with over-$100,000 accounts in a failed, closed bank must wait and take a share of any proceeds from FDIC's sale of the bank's assets.

Last month several banks in Tennessee almost failed, victims of a domino effect after United American Bank of Knoxville failed. United American left behind $160 million in losses and reneged on several loan participation agreements. It was found later that 40 percent of loans made by the bank — out of $475 million total — were made to eight people; bank officials or friends of the bank's officers.

This was the third largest bank failure in U.S. history. The federal government is worried that more banks will fail due to the financial climate and operating techniques that do not allow for large loan defaults.

The FDIC has to pick up roughly $92 million of the tab for United American's failure, and First Tennessee National Corp., Memphis, which bought United American at an FDIC auction, will have to pay the remainder.

Where would people keep their savings if deposits were not insured up to $100,000? That is a question consumers may soon have to ask.

If the FDIC and its counterpart, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. (FSLIC) go bust or change their insurance procedure, due to bank and savings and loan failures, those who use these institutions must ask about financial stability of that bank or S&L.

There is talk in Washington of making bank dealings more like stock transactions: An investor could find himself shopping around for a bank and looking at balance sheets (if he can decipher them).

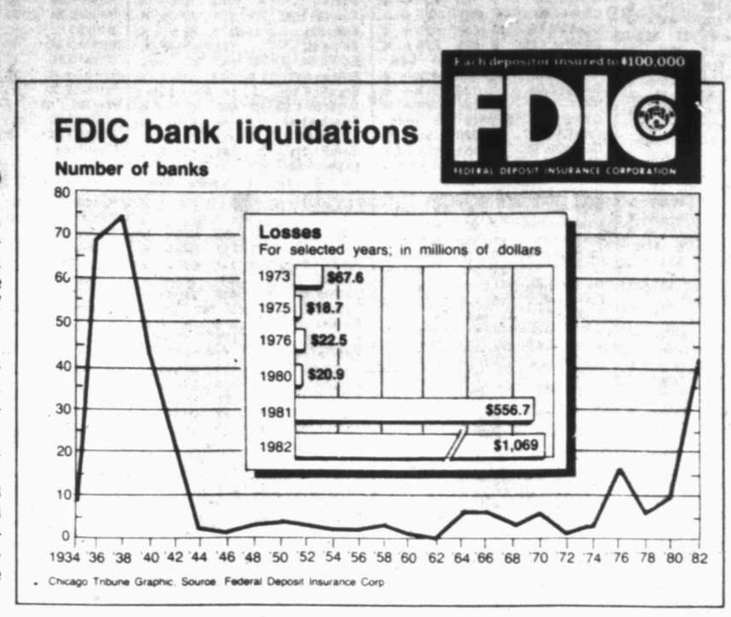

Small, conservative banks, according to news reports, bristle at having to pay the same insurance premium on their accounts as their giant, more adventurous competition. Banks never have as much cash-on-hand as they have in deposits.

Federal laws governing the banking system require certain cash reserves at banks so that enough money for normal operations will be on hand. But many other restrictions — like what the banks can do with monies belonging to investors — have been gradually lifted.

For example, savings and loans no longer have to put all their money into home loans. And money-market funds, brokerage accounts, and other para-banking has been an incredible growth field in the last few years. Sears and other corporate giants are merging businesses into themselves — a real estate company, a brokerage, an insurance firm — and making full financial services available.

The FDIC and FSLIC seem to be of little importance to consumers who trust the new "financial supermarkets" to handle their funds. The insurance is probably ignored by many people the same way they might ignore air travel insurance.

Depositors with non-FDIC/FSLIC accounts must simply trust the integrity and rely on the financial strength of the company they deal with — much like an airline passenger relies on the safety and solvency of the air carrier.

Chiles predicts recovery for oil industry, advocates revolution

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Business-Energy Editor

Oil and water may not mix, but petroleum and politics do. One of the nation's best known blenders of hydrocarbons and hot air, H.E. "Eddie" Chiles, Chairman of the Board, The Western Company of North America, was in Midland Wednesday evening stirring up a new batch.

Chiles, a pioneer Permian Basin oilman, is known to mainstream America as the voice in the "I'm mad" radio commercials, through which he has shared his views with the nation. He spoke to an audience of Western Company customers during a reception at the Petroleum Club.

Chiles said the oil business is going to be well and healthy again. He based this optimism on the fact he has seen it go up and down throughout his career.

"Forty-four years ago this month I was right here in Midland, staying at the old Scharbauer Hotel, driving back-and-forth to Seagraves, in the process ... of building the offices and facilities we had to have to start our business."

IN AUGUST, 1939, Chiles had to borrow money against his wife's new car to pay his the company's employees their first wages.

"So," Chiles said, "things in the oil business today are not quite as bad as they were then as far as I'm concerned. Western Company can meet its payroll. We're not having to borrow money on our cars to do that."

The petroleum industry has seen many ups and downs, Chiles said. During the World War II years the oilfields had a rough go. In the late 1940s through the late 1950s the business was booming, and it hit the doldrums again in the '60s, when then cheap, imported oil forced U.S. crude out of the market.

AT ONE TIME, Chiles said, the proration was so heavy, the State of Texas only permitted wells to produce eight days a month, and maximum production was 20 barrels a day — at about $2.50 a barrel.

"We've had some hard times in this industry. I'm not bragging about 'em, but I'm just trying to illustrate that the condition we have today is nothing new.

"But the main thing I want to illustrate is that this industry has always survived. This industry will be bigger and better in the future than it's ever been in the past — I'll promise you that," Chiles said.

"There's not anything else on the horizon anywhere, that can take the place of oil and gas to supply the energy needs of this nation within the foreseeable future.

CHILES ENCOURAGED young people to stay with the oil business.

"You that are young, you don't need to start looking for a job in some other industry," he advised. "You don't need to get into the computer business, the software business or anything else, because there's going to be plenty of good jobs for you in the petroleum business."

The petroleum industry is capable of meeting the country's energy needs in the foreseeable future, according to Chiles, if the government would reduce regulation.

"I say to those people in Washington, if the energy industry were freed of all the government rules and regulations, it would supply the needs well into the 21st, maybe the 22nd century.

"The free enterprise system, the free market system, free people can do that job and should be left alone to do it."

CHILES TOOK A POKE at the federal government's — particularly Congress' — seeming over willingness to tax and spend.

"I know to a lot of you it sounds kind of silly for an old man like me to get out around the country, gettin' on the radio, and sayin' what I'm mad about ... but I am mad! I really am. I'm mad at the federal government. I guess I like to talk about it.

"I had the opportunity," Chiles said, "to grow up when the free enterprise system was really flourishing. I was there when we started off without very much, with a few odd dollars and an ambition ... the opportunity to start off poor and get rich is an opportunity that was a heritage of this nation. That's what made this country great."

Chiles said he wondered if future generations will be able to start their own businesses from scratch as he did under the free enterprise system.

"They won't if we don't stop some of thse burdensome government restrictions. If we don't stop the flow of all the money ... from going into the government to be spent on foolish programs. That makes me mad when they do that. I don't like it."

Chiles said he is especially mad about the federal budget deficit. The deficit he said, can now only be reduced in two ways: by printing more money, which would drive up inflation; or by government borrowing of private funds, which drives up interest rates and reduces the amount of capital available for investment in private business.

"THAT'S NOT FAIR — not in this nation or any other nation — and we've got to put a stop to it," Chiles said.

"We've got the public segment of the economy and the private segment of the economy competing for all the money that's available in this country. And right now the public segment is getting far more than its share."

Chiles predicted there will come a time when there won't be enough money for both.

"There's going to have to be somebody take charge of the distribution of that money, distribution of the profits, and who is that going to be? The Federal government ... and you've got socialism."

"We've got stop it by fighting the second American revolution. But next year we've got to fight it with ballots instead of bullets."

Chiles said he wants the federal government to do just four things, "but I want them do them well: I want them to guard our shores and guard them well; deliver the mail on time; balance the budget; then leave me alone."

Energy, water bill moved to conference committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $14.2 billion appropriations bill for energy and water projects throughout the nation is going to a House-Senate conference committee to determine the fate of two disputed water development projects.

The bill was approved 91-6 by the Senate on Wednesday, but with significant differences from a bill on the same subject passed earlier by the House.

Despite the differences, they are alike in one historic area. For the first time in years, both houses agreed to cut off funding for the Clinch River Breeder Reactor in Tennessee unless private investors agree to pay more of its cost.

Two of the differences between the bills involve disputed water development projects in North Dakota and West Virginia.

The Senate voted Wednesday to spend $22 million for construction of part of the Garrison Diversion irrigation project in North Dakota. The House voted no money for the project.

The Senate also agreed to spend $26 million for construction of the Stonewall Jackson Dam in West Virginia, a flood-control project supported by Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va. The House voted to kill the project, at the urging of Rep. Robert E. Wise Jr., D-W.Va., who represents the district.

The decision to cut off money this Oct. 1 for Clinch River marks a turning point for the breeder reactor, designed as an energy source that "breeds" more fuel than it burns.

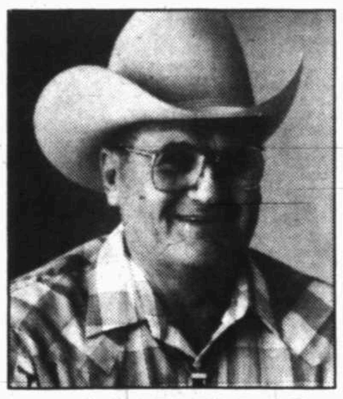

Congress has been voting money for the project since the early 1970s, although the votes have gotten closer in recent years as more and more lawmakers questioned its value.

State high technology programs reviewed

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In the past 20 years, several regions of the U.S. have developed strong local economies based on fast-growing, technology-based industries. Encouraged by the success of "high-technology" industries in California's Silicon Valley, many other states have launched government programs to promote similar industrial development of their own.

What are these states doing to attract firms which the Congress's Office of Technology Assessment (OTA) claims are a major source of new jobs in the manufacturing sector and an important factor in U.S. international competitiveness and balance of trade?

The OTA's preliminary study of existing state and local government programs to stimulate, attract or retain high-technology industrial development identified 150 programs with at least some features directed toward high-technology development, most of them launched in the past three years.

OTA found that in most cases, state officials view their initiatives as a natural extension of their efforts to promote economic growth and create new jobs.

In general, the OTA found that the programs provide technical assistance, such as access to facilities and equipment; manpower assistance, including access to scientific and technical personnel; business assistance, including help with licensing or subsidies for sites and facilities, and financial assistance, particularly access to risk capital through investments, grants or loans.

RESEARCH DATA AVAILABLE

The Commerce Department's National Bureau of Standards (NBS) has set up a "standard reference data" bank to store more than a million scientific papers which are published each year and scientific studies conducted in laboratories throughout the world. Some 39 of the 50 largest U.S. companies use data that have been reviewed by the bureau. In the chemistry area alone, the bureau estimates that scientists and chemical engineers save $150 million each year because they do not have to divert research funds to develop information that is already available from NBS.

FED PROGRAMS RANKED LOW

Managers of employee training in the private sector see federally-operated programs as the least desirable form of tax-supported job training, according to a new survey by the American Society for Training and Development. Only 8 percent of those surveyed thought the CETA programs, now being phased out, were useful and, despite assertions from Washington that the new Job Training Partnership Act is a private sector program, only 25 percent thought it will succeed. The most favored form of federal aid for job training in the survey were tax incentives directly for employers, which won the support of 76 percent of those queried. Direct grants to employers for job training won the plaudits of 63 percent of those polled. Although most federal job training programs are administered by the Labor Department, the private sector people thought the Department of Commerce could do a better job.

SUMMER REMINDERS ON YOUTH HIRING

Rules on youth employment under the federal Wage and Hour Act provide that youths 16 and 17 may work in any job except those declared hazardous by the Labor Department while teenagers 14 or 15 may be employed in most jobs that do not involve manufacturing, mining or processing. When schools are not in session, a 14 or 15 year-old may work as many as eight hours a day or 40 hours per week, but all work must be performed between 7 a.m. and 9 p.m. Further information can be obtained by contacting the Wage and Hour Division, Employment Standards Administration, Department of Labor.

CANADIAN LUMBER

The Commerce Department's ruling that the Canadian government is not significantly subsidizing its softwood lumber industry, to the detriment of the U.S. lumber industry, has come under fire from Sen. Bill Cohen, Maine Republican. The department ruled recently that although some subsidies were found on 1982 imports of about $1.7 billion worth of Canadian lumber, shakes, shingles, and fencing, they were considered minimal. The decision means that countervailing duties on the imported lumber, which had been sought by a coalition of U.S. lawmakers and the lumber industry, will not be imposed. Cohen especially objected to the department's decision that the Canadian government's practice of "stumpage" was not a subsidy. "Stumpage" refers to the practice by Canadian provinces of selling timber-cutting rights at much lower prices than the U.S. or state governments do.

FEDERAL AIRLINE TRAVEL

The General Service Administration has awarded contracts to 10 airlines to provide passenger service for federal employees traveling on government business between 31 cities. The standard coach air fare for travel between San Francisco and Washington is $419. Under the new contract awarded to Continental Airlines, the fare for government travelers between these points is $108, a savings of $311. The awards boost to 24 the number of airlines providing services. The discount fare program is expected to save the government $60 million in fiscal 1983 alone.

OVERSEAS MILITARY CONTRACTS

A preliminary Treasury Department report claims that 26 of the largest American electronics and aerospace companies were "forced" to provide foreign governments with $9.5 billion in subcontracts and other economic compensation in return for overseas military and civilian contracts over the last five years. The companies reported $15.2 billion in foreign contracts and $9.5 billion in subcontracts to offset the purchase price to foreign governments for goods ranging from weapons systems to airlines. The companies were not named. The report also shows that the highest percentage of offset benefits went to Canada and Japan, which received $4.6 billion and $1.1 billion, respectively.

AROUND AND ABOUT

The National Transportation Safety Board wants California to survey its highway tunnels to determine what improvements are needed in traffic controls, communications, towing capabilities and fire-fighting equipment...Federal aid to states and localities has declined for the first time since World War II, according to the Tax Foundation...Last year's decision by the Environmental Protection Agency to close the government's only facility capable of conducting biological tests on pesticides and disinfectants has come under fire from Sen. Paul S. Sarbanes, D.-Md.. He has sponsored a bill to require the EPA to maintain an in-house facility for conducting biological tests on pesticides and hospital disinfectants...Mandatory safety belt use in all federally-owned vehicles is being urged by the Highway Users Federation...The Senate Finance Committee has cleared for floor action the administration's proposed Enterprise Zone Employment and Development Act. Under the proposal, the Department of Housing and Urban Development would administer the program and select up to 75 zones on a competitive basis. But quick action on the legislation is not expected. House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski refused to schedule hearings on the bill last year and is considered just as unlikely to hold hearings in the near future.

Decontrol bill progress slow, solid

By TOD ROBBERSON
and LORRAINE GENGO
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee made slow but solid progress Tuesday and Wednesday in its attempt to hammer out a natural gas deregulation proposal that would have at least a fighting chance on the Senate floor.

Committee chairman James McClure (R-Idaho) and Sen. J. Bennett Johnston (D-La.), the committee's ranking minority member, spent the last two days explaining the technicalities of substitute provisions compiled in a package offered by Johnston, but a significant amount of confusion still seemed to dominate both sessions.

Committee members are expected to begin a new round of voting Thursday on the more controversial aspects of Johnston's proposal, which was offered after the committee all but rejected the original gas deregulation bill sponsored by McClure on behalf of the Reagan administration.

The Johnston substitute, which is based on McClure's original bill, is a compilation of amendments and counterproposals designed to appease committee members and to avoid what could have been months of debate on McClure's bill.

Of the 24 major provisions in the Johnston substitute, 13 have enough backing to pass the committee, McClure said Wednesday, but the fate of the remaining provisions likely will not be known until an official vote is taken.

McClure attempted to call a committee vote last week on some of the provisions, but the committee lacked a quorum for the votes to be official. Ignoring repeated opposition from Sen. Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio), who walked out on the session, McClure held an informal vote on Thursday in which seven of the less-controversial provisions were approved.

On Tuesday, Metzenbaum made a one-minute statement at the outset of the meeting, smiling as he called McClure's actions "an excercise in masochism."

Recent committee discussions and revisions to the Johnston substitute appear to have centered around two main objectives:

One is to write the bill in such a way as to avoid a multitude of court cases challenging specific deregulation provisions and state versus federal jurisdiction over the various parties involved in natural gas production, transportation and marketing. The other is to avoid having consumers bear potential skyrocketing costs as gas prices are decontrolled — an essential ingredient for gaining adequate support for decontrol to pass both the House and Senate.

Because of the technicalities involved, most of the committee sessions have been dominated by explanations of provisions using buzz words like ramp-up, market-out, phase-down and take-or-pay. In layman's terms, the provisions deal mainly with such issues as the continuation or renegotiation of contracts among gas producers, pipelines and marketers after deregulation takes effect; future price controls on gas discovered before 1977; and ways in which contracting parties can get out of contracts signed during periods of more substantial federal control.

Wednesday's meeting gave a good example of the legal technicalities involved in the committee sessions: members spent the bulk of the 90-minute meeting discussing one sentence.

The final outcome, after 45 minutes of debate, was to change the word "and" to "or" in a paragraph dealing with producer-pipeline contracts.

Reagan got ovation; Sen. Bentsen didn't

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Political observers here contrasted the way President Reagan was received when he spoke to the National Federation of Independent Business with the way Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D., Texas was treated when he spoke earlier in the week.

Bentsen was the only speaker noted who did not get a standing ovation.

Bentsen as chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign committee hit Reagan for the fact his tax program helped small businss men only a little over 2 percent but helped rich people mainly. Bentsen who is on the Senate Finance committee and Economic Committee, said the President was "doing nothing" to bring down deficits.

The President declared that the country is "rising from a decade of neglect" and that the business men were "messengers of courage". He thanked the small business men for taking their cuts first.

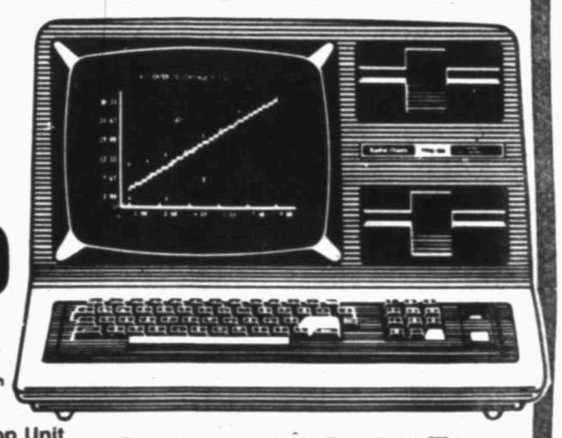

The President said "capping the tax cut" which Democrats in the House propose to keep tax cuts from helping more rich people as they allege than poor people "would also raise taxes for 2.4 million small businsses, including 350,000 family farms."

De Lorean dreamed big

DETROIT (AP) — John Z. De Lorean hoped to build an auto empire out of Chrysler or parts of American Motors long before his sports car business failed and he was arrested on drug charges, according to court depositions.

"There was discussion of Chrysler being up for grabs, that it needed money desperately, that De Lorean had the hope" he could arrange financing to get control of the No. 3 domestic automaker, Eric Javits, an attorney and former De Lorean Motor Co. board member, said in depositions obtained by The Associated Press.

"It was mostly in De Lorean's mind," Javits said.

Attorneys for De Lorean, 58, who faces an August trial in Los Angeles on charges of conspiracy to distribute cocaine, argued unsuccessfully in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Detroit last week for sealing of the depositions.

The AP obtained transcripts of the material Wednesday.

Javits called the idea of buying American Motors Corp.'s Jeep and AM General divisions "sort of a gleam in Mr. De Lorean's eye." De Lorean also hoped to form an alliance with the Ford Motor Co., Javits said.

Javits also revealed that De Lorean, a former General Motors Corp. executive, had ambitions to lease ships, transport Mexican oil, build cars in Mexico for sale in Central and South America and assemble a De Lorean-designed bus.

Javits and an associate and attorney, Stuart Sieger, gave the depositions last month to unsecured creditors of the defunct De Lorean Motor Co.

The company filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy code in October after De Lorean's arrest. De Lorean's Northern Ireland car factory went into receivership.

ROLLS-ROYCE MOTORS has always been dedicated to the driver who believes the distance between any two points should be traveled in absolute luxury.

The purchase of a Rolls-Royce, however, has always done more than satisfy one's desire for luxury. For over the years its considerable financial appreciation has resulted in its owners sitting quite pretty, as well.

And this year, we are pleased to confirm that will be more true than ever. In point of fact, with today's economy and the strength of the U.S. dollar, there has never been a better time to invest in the precious metal of a Rolls-Royce motor car.

And there's no better Rolls-Royce to invest in than the Silver Spirit. Eight years to create and develop, the Silver Spirit is our first new four door sedan in fifteen years.

Each Silver Spirit takes three months to build. It is fitted with an advanced self-leveling suspension system so sensitive it can adjust to the weight of a set of golf clubs in the luggage compartment.

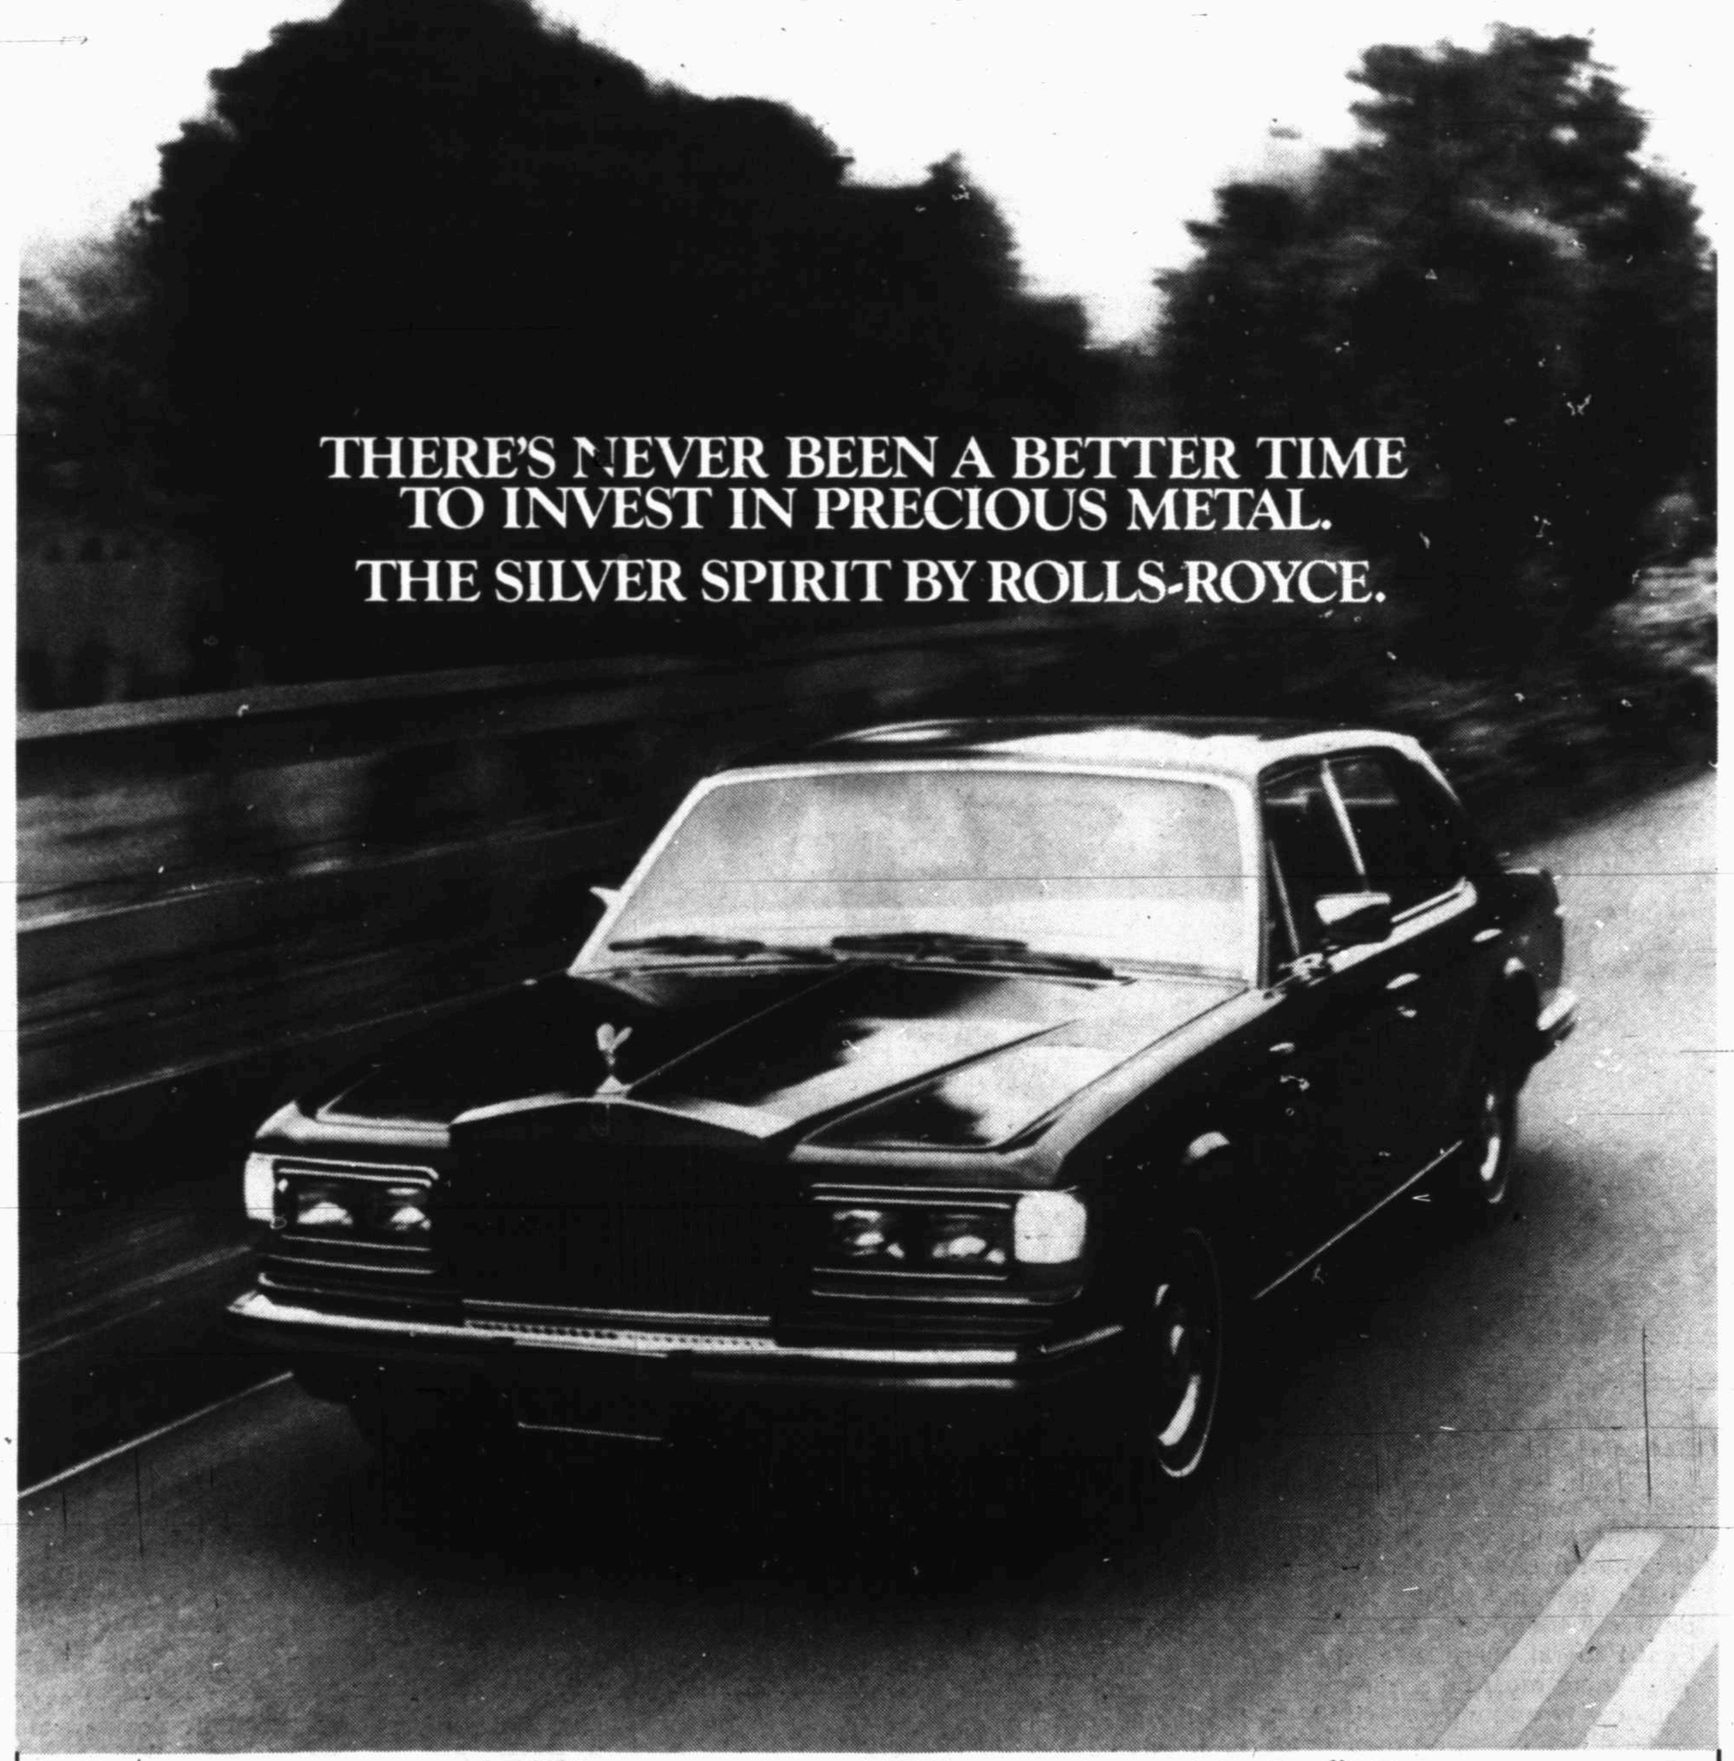

There is, of course, the unique Rolls-Royce dual level air-conditioning. This allows for two levels of climate in the car which means the Rolls-Royce driver and passengers can enjoy warm toes and a cool head.

In addition, the famous Rolls-Royce V-8 engine is now quieter than ever. Hand-built of aluminum alloy, it delivers effortless acceleration up to the speed limit in but a few seconds. The odometer which records the car's journeys up to one million miles is a quiet statement of Rolls-Royce confidence in the durability of that engine.

Ultimately, the reward for the driver of a Silver Spirit is a motor car so oblivious to crosswinds, vibrations and sounds that it seems to glide as it grips the road.

In short, if you're looking for the best motor car value on the road today, then do look at the Rolls-Royce Silver Spirit. It's a sterling idea!

Nigeria struggles to feed itself

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — In the days before crude oil prices exploded and brought a new kind of prosperity, Nigeria was a country that on the whole could feed itself.

Agricultural products accounted for 80 percent of the export earnings of Africa's most populous country. While it ranks still as one of black Africa's richest nations, Nigeria nowadays spends more than $2 billion a year to bring in needed food. Imported U.S. rice is cheaper than the homegrown.

Nigeria, with its economy now almost exclusively at the mercy of the unpredictable international oil markets, has become an example of what happens when an exceeding reliance is put on a single commodity.

"They let the quick cash from oil pretty much undercut the agricultural sector," said a Western economics analyst in Lagos, the capital. "For all intents and purposes, Nigeria's now a one-crop economy — and that crop isn't selling, or isn't selling as well as it should. The country as a whole is hurting."

When the 1981-85 development plan was drafted, oil revenues for 1983 were projected at $30 billion. Independent observers say that sales from crude oil this year may earn Nigeria only about $8.5 billion.

Falling crude oil revenues have had sweeping ramifications.

The declining economy no doubt contributed heavily to the government's controversial decision in January to expel about 2 million foreigners working in Nigeria without authorization — a move that came under severe criticism abroad.

The weakened economy, moreover, threatens to become an issue in this summer's general elections, in which President Shehu Shagari is seeking another four-year term.

One of Shagari's keenest rivals, Dr. Nnamdi (Zik) Azikiwe, is pledging to restore Nigeria's "agricultural glory" if elected. He said he deplored that, with the discovery and exploitation of crude oil, "all our agricultural and other ... resources were abandoned."

Even at the start of the oil-price boom in the early 1970s, Nigerian authorities recognized the necessity to diversify the economy, and to encourage food production. It is still said in Nigeria that "a nation that cannot feed itself has no solid foundation for its security and independence."

Yet, the efforts to promote agriculture and stimulate domestic food production have been no better than uneven.

The first official undertaking was called the National Accelerated Food Production Program. Then came Operation Feed the Nation. The most recent initiative is the Green Revolution.

The first programs, according to contemporary government statements, "failed to include farmers from the grass roots" and suffered from "half-hearted involvement and the ineffective mobilization of the masses."

The "biggest impediment," said one Nigerian agricultural expert, "is that no one wants to work on the farms." The riches of oil led to numerous construction projects in Nigerian cities and, the expert said, "farmers found they couldn't compete with what the construction companies were paying."

Cities swelled as a consequence. Lagos, with its fetid open drains and muddy streets, has a population of more than 5.6 million, up from about 600,000 people 20 years ago.

The Green Revolution, the most recent official program to bolster agricultural production, was inaugurated in April, 1980 — with the goal of food self-sufficiency for Nigeria by 1985.

More than half-way to that deadline, the objective seems exceedingly unrealistic. The increases in food production just barely keep pace with the growth in population, Western analysts say.

And some Nigerian journalists refer scornfully to the program as "the Red Revolution — it's in danger."

Many Nigerians, said one journalist specializing in economic isues, "are skeptical: They cannot see the evidence to support the government's claims of an increase in food production from the Green Revolution."

On the balance, government officials are inclined to rate the Green Revolution a qualified success.

President Shagari has said the program's features of offering fertilizers, seeds, insecticides and farming equipment "are making the desired impact on specific programs for boosting the production of rice, maize ... (and) guinea corn."

Other components of the program include developing river-basin authorities, to bring uncultivated land into productive use, and extending credit to farmers on attractive terms.

Even the Green Revolution's severe critics acknowledge there have been successes, in some river-basin development projects. But generally, these critics say, little of the intended assistance is getting to the farmers.

"The government spends so much (on this program) and so little of it gets to the farmers," said the Nigerian agricultural expert, who asked anonymity.

He said the distribution system tends to be so chaotic and disorganized that fertilizers are sometimes left to rot, unused; that some river basins cleared for cultivation have been left barren, and that inefficiency and the suspicion of corruption have plaqued the loan programs.

Other analysts are more sympathetic.

"You can't place all the blame on corruption and ineffiency," said a Western agricultral specialist, who also asked to remain anonymous. "Back when the (Green Revolution) started, Nigeria had considerable oil revenues. Now with oil prices down, it's not possible to get new money for new projects."

Nevertheless, 16.5 percent of the Nigerian federal budget in fiscal 1983 is devoted to agriculture, and some officials are confident the country ultimately will regain the ability to feed itself.

"The priority," said one of Nigeria's senior diplomats, "is Green Revolution ... food ... feed ourselves."

Officials try to straighten confusion

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Hillsborough County Road Department officials are trying to straighten out a metal muddle caused by a purchasing error. It gives them 56 miles of aluminum — 20 times more than they need and enough to last 20 years.

"It was an error, a mistake that just got past everyone," Ed Melchen, a civil engineer with the department, said recently. "We wanted 15,000 linear feet. The mistake was in not noticing that the 15,000 units was not feet but 20-foot lengths that was on the bid list."

When the first of three tractor-trailer loads of the structural aluminum arrived, "We realized something was wrong," Melchen said.

The price — which would have been less than $20,000 on a proper order — was more than $237,000 for 300,000 square feet of the metal.

To make matters worse, the supplier, Dave Smith & Co. of Fort Lauderdale, had to work out a special credit deal to provide the order and as a result is unable to accept a return.

Divers, body surfers should be careful

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Hot weather pastimes such as diving and body surfing can be risky, but there are ways to prevent the number of accidents from rising along with the mercury level.

Most diving accidents occur when someone mistakenly dives into shallow water or into the shallow end of a swimming pool, says Dr. Colin McKenzie at the University of Maryland in Baltimore.

Body surfers should also be careful, because if a wave breaks over a surfer's back while he is close to shore, his head could be driven into the sand, damaging the neck and spinal cord, says Richard Ortiz, director of New York's Roberto Clemente State Park.

Doctor wants guidelines eased for liver transplants

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Restrictions on liver transplants reduce the chance of survival for some victims of liver disease, but more knowledge is needed before the limitations can be lifted, a top transplant surgeon says.

The survival rate for liver transplant patients could increase dramatically if they reached the operating room sooner, says Dr. James Williams, who heads the liver transplant team at the University of Tennessee's Center for the Health Sciences.

"Physicians ought to look at this surgery as something other than a last-ditch hope," he says.

Williams' team, like those at the nation's two other liver transplant centers, will not consider patients unless doctors are sure they have less than one year to live. That restriction, he said, reduces the chances of survival for some patients.

But he said he is not ready to change the criteria until he and his colleagues have a chance to study data from at least another year of transplant experience.

The success rate for the UT transplant team is similar to that of the liver transplant centers at the University of Pittsburgh and the University of Minnesota — seven of 13 patients in the past 13 months are still alive.

Last week, Williams had five of his seven surviving patients in for post-operative checkups at the same time, and he took the occasion to discuss the operation and its future.

"If we get the patient before his other organs have begun to fail, we're going to have a better chance of success," he said. "If the disease has progressed to the point that the kidneys are in bad shape, if the heart is in bad shape, the chances for survival aren't going to be as good."

One of Williams' patients had arrived at UT's William F. Bowld Hospital in a coma. She died within hours of the transplant.

Yet Williams said that because the course of liver disease is so hard to predict, he is not in a hurry to change the criteria to allow transplants earlier in a patient's illness.

Will dog chip take the place of dog tags?

Copley News Service

U.S. soldiers soon may have plastic computer microchips dangling from their necks instead of traditional steel dog tags.

The Army is testing data tags, slightly smaller than dog tags, that can store the equivalent of an entire military service record — medical data, security clearances, pay records, amount of leave available, next-of-kin references and more.

Soldiers headed to combat would have their cards purged of all information except what the Geneva Convention authorizes: name, service branch, Social Security number, blood type and religious preference.

"It's a matter of the soldier plugging his tag into a field computer about the size of a briefcase to transfer his personal data into divisional, regimental or battalion memory banks," said Capt. Allan Havrilla, a spokesman for the Army's 9th Light Infantry Division, based at Fort Lewis, Wash.

A reverse plug-in procedure after troops are out of a combat zone would put the erased data back into the tags.

"If, for example, a soldier wants to go on rest and recreation after combat," Havrilla said, "all he has to do is plug his card into the computer, show a printout of his pay record and then draw the money he's entitled to."

Havrilla said soldiers tested 3,000 of the tags last month during war games in the Yakima area in eastern Washington state.

"They were subjected to sand, rain and hard simulated combat activity," Havrilla said. "Only a few showed wear around the edges, and that didn't harm information-storage capability."

The microchip dog tags were developed for military use from existing civilian technology by the Army's Soldier Support Center at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Chris Occhialini, chief of the Soldiers Data Tag Task Force, said the tags should make the Army of the future more mobile and should cut down the number of support personnel in a combat unit.

Video might be good 'eye' deal

Hearst Feature Service

Today's video game joystick and trackball may be replaced tomorrow by the human eyeball.

International Resource Development Inc., a Norwalk, Conn., market research company, predicts that "eye tracking" may become commonplace in the fourth or fifth generation of arcade games.

The innards of the arcade game will project an infrared light against the player's cornea and then determine the line of sight by the angle at which the infrared light is reflected.

Television changes Italian elections

ROME (AP) — Italian politicians have taken their battle for votes from the nation's picturesque town squares and to its television screens.

Prime-time TV these days is filled with broadcasts by politicians and parties in search of votes for a new government in elections this coming Sunday and Monday.

"The old way of campaigning is dying right now," says Giuseppe Zaccaria, a political writer for the newspaper La Stampa in Turin. "With just one telecast, you can reach 10 times more voters than in any town square speech." Elvezio Bocci, mayor of the town of Riano just north of Rome, says: "We will have no more than two or the street rallies for these elections.

"People no longer crowd the squares to listen to what we have to say. They prefer radio or television commercials or newspaper interviews. In the past we used to have a rally almost every evening in our main square."

The leaders of Italy's two major political parties have debated on television, in the style of U.S. presidential campaigns.

Ciriaco De Mita, head of the front-running Christian Democrats, and Communist Party chief Enrico Berlinguer taped a 75-minute debate shown over one of the country's major private television networks.

The general elections will lead to the formation of the Italy's 44th government since World War II. The party winning a majority of seats in Parliament will form the government and select the premier.

For weeks the nation's television stations — both the privately run stations and networks and the three state-run channels — have been filled with debates and question-and-answer sessions.

The private channels also accept paid advertisements — and they must be paid for in advance, in cash.

For the first time, political parties are making widespread use of professional image-makers to heighten their appeal.

The Rome-based Film Media consultants, for example, are advising the Communist Party to take a harder line in the campaign.

"The experts of Film Media have sharpened our ideas. They helped us come up with individualized language more suited to capture the various groups of voters," the weekly newsmagazine Panorama quoted Fabio Mussi, head of the mass communications for the Communists, as saying.

One TV ad for the Communists ticks off Italy's current problems: economy, unemployment, the Mafia and threats to peace.

"The Christian Democrats have failed," the commercial says. "There is an alternative. Vote for the Italian Communist Party."

The Christian Democrats have countered with a softer approach. One of their commercials shows a gentle hand that symbolically rescues a child about to fall and hurt itself.

The Christian Democrats "protect your security," it says.

Even candidates for local offices are appearing with greater frequency on tiny city and regional stations.

Airtime on the country's three major private television networks is astronomically expensive by Italian campaign standards.

The popular Channel 5 charges candidates 19.8 million lire ($13,600) for every 30 seconds of prime time, while the cost for a 30-second spot during the ultra-popular American import series "Dallas" costs 34 million lire ($23,450).

Panorama estimates that the political parties will spend 31 billion lire ($21.3 million) on the campaign, with nearly half of that going to television advertising.

The parties also receive free airtime on the state-run RAI television.

Presley agreement equals $2.2 million

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Col. Tom Parker, Elvis Presley's former manager, will get more than $2.2 million under an agreement to end legal squabbles that followed the singer's death.

But the agreement, filed in Shelby County Probate Court, also requires Parker to discontinue business dealings in Presley's name.

The agreement says RCA Corp. will pay Parker $2 million for master recordings of Presley's songs as well as rights to the singer's recording contracts.

The Probate Court still must approve the plan for it to take effect.

The agreement was drawn up by Parker, RCA, executors of Presley's estate and Blanchard Tual, a lawyer appointed to protect the rights of Presley's 15-year-old daughter, Lisa Marie.

She is his sole heir and takes over the estate at age 25.

Basically, the agreement leaves the estate with control over the singer's name and likeness, while RCA can sell his recordings.

The money will be paid to Parker in installments of $40,000 to $60,000 a month.

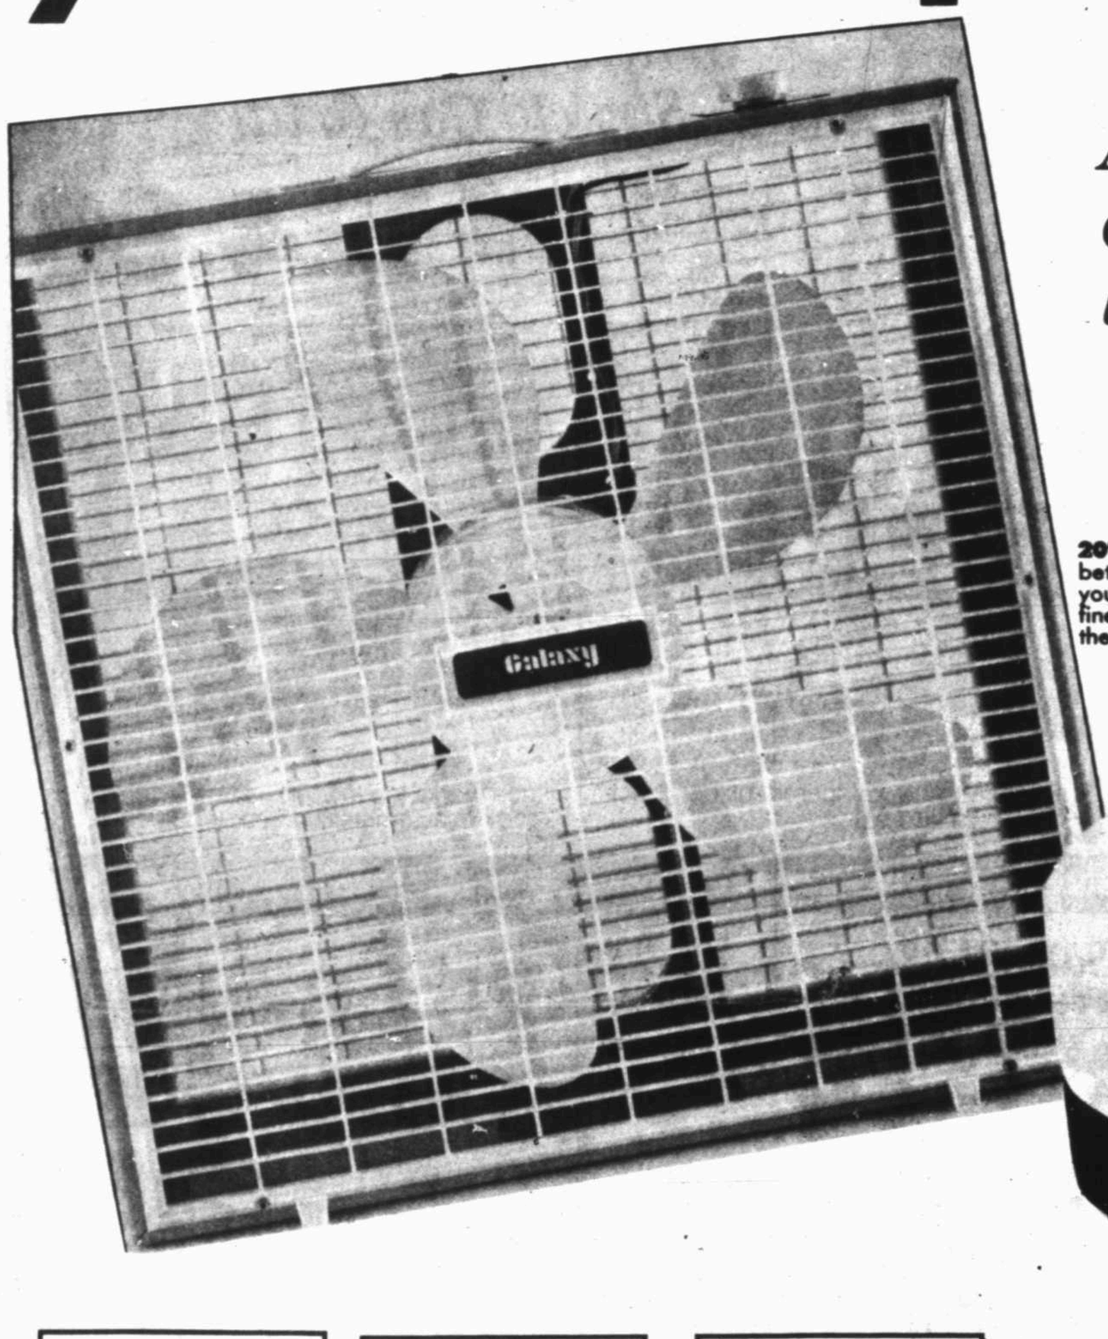

RCA also is to pay the Presley estate $1.1 million, in 10 payments of $110,000.

Parker also will get $15,629 from unpaid commissions, and a like amount will go to the estate.

Graceland Enterprises, formed last year by executors of Presley's estate, will take over Boxcar Enterprises, a company Parker set up to market Elvis souvenirs.

Ford enters hospital

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford entered Eisenhower Medical Center on Wednesday for elective urologic surgery, which was described by an aide as routine.

Ford, 69, will remain at the facility for four to five days of recuperation, said Penny Circle, his staff assistant. "Thereafter he will be traveling to Vail-Beaver Creek, Colo. for the duration of the summer," she said Wednesday afternoon.

The surgery, planned for Thursday morning, was to be performed by Ford's physician, Dr. Don Wasserman, she said.

"It's just routine, it's no problem really," Ms. Circle said when asked to elaborate on the former president's condition.

She declined to give more details about the surgery or what precipitated it.

She said Ford's wife Betty was with him.

The former president, who makes his home in Rancho Mirage, near Palm Springs about 120 miles east of Los Angeles, has been touring the country on the speaking circuit and recently returned from the East Coast, she said.

Senator loses law license

DENVER (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart apparently has been paying more attention to his fledgling presidential campaign than to the $10 he should have sent in to keep his law license in Colorado.

The Colorado Supreme Court has suspended the Colorado Democrat's law license because he failed to pay the registration fee.

Cheryl Taylor, a clerk with the court's grievance committee, said Tuesday that Hart's annual registration statement and fee were due Feb. 28 — 11 days after he announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for president.

A certified letter telling Hart he was late in paying was mailed to his Washington office on April 18, Ms. Taylor said. When Hart failed to respond, his license was suspended June 9, she said.

Tom Gleason, a spokesman for Hart, said the senator was aware of his suspension and "is taking steps to correct it." Suspensions are not unusual for attorneys who don't actively practice law, Gleason said.

This is the first year Colorado attorneys registered as inactive have been required to pay fees and the first time the court has taken action against the delinquent lawyers, Ms. Taylor said.

To revive his law license, Hart will have to petition the court and pay a $50 fee, she said, adding: "I don't think he'll have any trouble getting reinstated."

Owner gets suspect

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — A man "acting purely on instinct" and wearing only undershorts ran after his stolen car, smashed its windshield and applied a headlock to the suspect until police arrived.

According to police, Sue Macken looked out the window of her Rochester home Friday night to see the family car being pushed down the driveway by one person with another behind the wheel.

Her husband, Tim, 28, ran out, "dived onto the hood and smashed his right fist through the windshield, then opened the car door and removed the driver."

3705 West Wall — 684-7101; 563-1543

We believe in practicing what we preach.

You've probably seen or heard our advertising on television or radio. We don't talk very much about cars; instead we talk about our dealership and our people.

We also stress service, selection, and fair prices the year around.

But most important, we believe in practicing what we preach. That means we want to treat you, the way we want to be treated, when we spend our money.

Nothing complicated about it, but it's one of the important reasons why we've been pleasing customers for so many years now.

For example, here are some outstanding values that we are now offering:

1979 CHEVROLET CAMARO — V8, automatic, factory air, buckets, console. Stock No. 8023A. WAS $6895 — $5757
