Father, son are victims of small plane crash

■ Single-engine aircraft is registered to JMC Ranches LLC

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

The victims of Thursday's plane crash at Midland International Air & Space Port have been identified as a 39-year-old Midland man and his 16-year-old son.

The crash of the Cirrus SR22 airplane killed pilot John Mark Cooper, and his son, Gavyn Cooper, who was the only passenger, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The plane — a fixed-wing, single-engine craft manufactured in 2007 — held a "valid" status, according to the Federal Aviation Administration, and the expiration of its certificate was set for January 2021. The plane is registered to JMC Ranches LLC. A John Cooper of Midland is registered as the business' owner, according to state comptroller records.

According to the FAA, a John Mark Cooper was issued a student pilot certificate on April 1, 2013. Pilots with student pilot certificates are prohibited from carrying passengers.

The Reporter-Telegram could not confirm if the deceased John Mark Cooper is the same Cooper in the FAA's record because the pilot's address was withheld. However, there is only one John Mark Cooper in the FFA's airmen database. DPS confirmed the pilot's full name.

Robert Katz, a Dallas-based flight instructor and plane crash expert, said student pilots cannot take a plane anywhere without a flight instructor's endorsement in the student's logbook. "Even if he owns his own airplane, he can't legally take it out whenever he wants," Katz said Friday in a phone interview.

The record also indicates that a third-class medical certificate was issued in April 2013. If the pilot were under 40 years old, he would not have been allowed to fly an aircraft because the medical certificate would have expired 60 months after it was issued — April 30, 2018 — according to the federal government's Electronic Code of Federal Regulations concerning pilot certification.

With 35 years of experience as a pilot, Katz said keeping medical certificates current are critical. "Knowing your medical expiration date is tantamount to knowing your birthday," he said.

The plane crashed at about 7:30 p.m. Thursday shortly after taking off, according to a DPS press release.

"The aircraft departed from Runway 16 and was preparing to exit the traffic pattern when it crashed near the approach end of

Dropout prevention coordinator finds inspiration from graduates

■ Former English teacher 'goes the extra mile' to help students receive their diploma

By Simone Jasper
sjasper@mrt.com

In her pursuit to keep students on a course toward graduation, Mary Janousek has knocked on doors, met with families and attended tutoring sessions. At the end of the school year, she finds inspiration in the students who receive diplomas with her help.

"I take every single one — whether they reach their goal or not — to heart," Janousek said. "It's very difficult to try and sum that up in a word or a feeling. It's almost indescribable."

As dropout prevention and intervention coordinator for Midland ISD, Janousek examines data to identify students who aren't on track to graduate. She also determines where students land after they withdraw.

Of all her job duties, Janousek said the highlight is interacting with students and families.

By the numbers

Midland ISD graduation rates by class year

2016:	88.5 percent
2015:	85.3 percent
2014:	82.4 percent
2013:	81.2 percent
2012:	83.9 percent

Midland ISD's goal is to raise the four-year graduation rate to 95 percent for the Class of 2020.

About Janousek

- lived in various states before moving to Midland
- rescues and volunteers with animals
- is pursuing a PhD in educational psychology

She made an impression on Catrina Costilla, who had passed her standardized tests and courses but couldn't graduate high school because of the number of absences. Costilla said the district administrator was available to support her academic needs.

"She's always really upbeat, and she always wants to get everything done," Costilla said. "She doesn't want anybody to quit."

Permian Basin loses one rig for total of 477

■ Midland County is unchanged at 46; Reeves is down 1

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

The Permian Basin rig count retracted slightly after five weeks of growth.

The nation's most active basin tallied 477 rigs, a decrease of one, according to Baker Hughes data. Reeves County remained the hottest spot for rig activity with 69 in operation, down one from a week ago. Midland County held at 46, and Lea County, New Mexico, fell by two to 44.

Other counties with double-digit rig counts were Eddy, New Mexico (44); Loving (35); Martin (33); Ward (29); Howard (25); Reagan (21); Culberson (18); Andrews (17); Glasscock (17); Pecos (15); Upton (14); and Winkler (14).

Railroad Commission District 8, which includes most of the basin's active counties, fell by one rig to 323. For other areas with activity in the Permian, District 7B held at four rigs, District 7C rose by one to 41, District 8A was unchanged at 20 and New Mexico dropped by one to 89.

The Permian had 364 rigs a year ago.

TEXAS & NEW MEXICO

Texas added one rig to its statewide total of 535. Of that tally, 388 were in the Permian.

The Eagle Ford in South Texas gained two rigs, bumping its count to 80. The Barnett in North Texas was unchanged at four. Twenty of the Haynesville's 54 rigs were in East Texas. Six of the Granite Wash's 14 rigs were in the Panhandle.

Texas had one rig offshore.

New Mexico's count fell by one to 90. Its lone non-Permian rig was in San Juan County in the northwestern part of the state.

At this time last year, there were 463 rigs in Texas and 55 in New Mexico.

US & CANADA

The U.S. rig count edged one higher to 1,060, comprised of 861 oil rigs, up two; 197 natural gas rigs, down one; and two miscellaneous rigs, unchanged. Eighteen of the 19 offshore rigs were in the Gulf of Mexico. Rigs in inland water fell by half to two.

By drilling trajectory, there were 929 horizontal rigs, up three; 66 vertical rigs, unchanged; and 65 directional rigs, down two.

Basins with the top rig counts were the Permian, the Eagle Ford, the Cana Woodford (76), the Marcellus (56) and the Williston (56). States with the most activity were Texas, Oklahoma (142), New Mexico, Louisiana (58) and North Dakota (55).

The U.S. had 916 rigs a year ago.

Andrea Menchaca Sandate

I want to tell you a story about a life well lived and tremendously loved. It's a story about a woman who has left an unforgettable imprint on the hearts and minds of hundreds of people throughout west Texas. Her name is Andrea Menchaca Sandate, and she lived 83 full and miracle filled years in the temporary vessel God gave her to inhabit in this life.

When she passed away on Wednesday, May 30, 2018, she was surrounded by dozens of family members who soaked up the blessing of her presence up until her very last breath. God had a very specific and unique plan for this good and faithful servant when he brought her into this world in Midland, TX on November 30, 1934. She eventually married Antonio Hernandez Sandate and together they were blessed with seven beautiful children. She was a dedicated servant to the Catholic faith and enjoyed praying her rosary daily as she lived a life truly led by God. She loved Christmas time, never met a stranger and could be found carrying on a conversation with anyone she met as if they were long time friends.

Those who were blessed to know and love Andrea would tell you she always had a smile on her face and loved to talk. What she may have been best known for, however, was her supernatural gift of healing. Andrea would tell you God gave her this gift long ago as a way to help people and more importantly, pray for people. She made many friends through this gift and even more believers as she put bones and muscles back into place as if she had years of therapeutic education and experience. This incredible, healing, woman of God is survived by her children Yolanda Sanchez (Mario) , Shelia Madrid (Charlie), Oscar Sandate (Alicia), Maria Madrid (Louis), Antonio Sandate, Alicia Gonzales (Henry), Theresa Martinez (Virgilio), and her sisters Catarina Ybarra & Elvira Armendarez. She is also survived by 28 grandchildren, 70 great grandchildren and 25 great great grandchildren.

How's that for a legacy! She is proceeded in death by her husband Antonio Hernandez Sandate, parents Ricardo & Ramona Menchaca, brothers Anselmo Menchaca, Vicente Menchaca, Ricardo Menchaca Jr, Patricio Menchaca, her grandson Mark Anthony Varela, and great great grandson Ricardo John Mendoza. Although Andrea's story here on earth may be over, the legacy she has left behind in the many lives she touched and healed will carry on through time, until we all reunite again in our heavenlyhome.

A rosary and memorial was held for Andrea on Friday June 1, 2018 at Heavenly Gate Funeral home. The family would like to express their extreme gratitude for all the prayers, condolences, visits, and even the assistance provided by so many in caring for Andrea in her last days with us on earth.

They are especially grateful for the care and attention given by Hospice of Midland during her final days. Their respectful and loving service will always be remembered and appreciated. Her family has truly been blessed by so many extended family and friends and cannot thank everyone enough. Soar high Andrea! "But those who trust in the Lord will find new strength. They will soar high on wings like eagles. They will run and not grow weary. They will walk and not faint". Isaiah 40:31 "The master was full of praise. 'Well done, my good and faithful servant. You have been faithful in handling this small amount, so now I will give you many more responsibilities. Let's celebrate together!' Price of oil falls 3 percent this week

■ WTI closes at $65.81 a barrel

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

It was a tough week for the price of oil. Oil output is rising, and concerns linger whether OPEC and Russia will raise their production caps, putting more oil on the market.

West Texas Intermediate futures contracts for July delivery settled Friday at $65.81 per barrel, down $1.23 (1.83 percent) on the day and down $2.07 (3.05 percent) for the week. This year, a barrel of WTI has an average price of $65.09.

The Energy Information Administration reported this week that domestic crude oil production rose by 44,000 barrels per day (bbl/d) to 10.8 bbl/d. Imports fell by 354,000 bbl/d to 7.6 million bbl/d. Exports rose by 431,000 bbl/d to 2.2 million bbl/d.

The amount of commercial crude in storage fell by 3.6 million barrels to 434.5 million barrels. Refinery inputs averaged about 17.2 million bbl/d during the week ending May 25, and refineries operated at 93.8 percent capacity. Gasoline production averaged more than 10.4 million bbl/d, and distillates production increased to an average of about 5.3 million bbl/d.

The spread between Plains Marketing WTI and West Texas sour posted prices widened even more Friday.

Sour was priced at $50.55 per barrel, down $5.45 (9.73 percent) on the day; WTI was down $1.25 (1.97 percent) to $62.25. This widened the spread from $7.50 to $11.70. The spread had been as narrow as $2 this year.

The average price for WTI posted is $61.58; it's $57.55 for sour.

In other futures trading Friday, August contracts fell by $1.14 to $65.77 per barrel, September was down $1.01 to $65.53 and October dropped 88 cents to $65.23.

Farmers' market officials apologize for ex-employee's social media attack on oil industry

From staff reports

The Midland Downtown Farmers' Market had to deal with social media gone wrong this week as it reported a "former executive director" posted a message to its Facebook page that was critical of those in the oil industry in Midland.

A screen shot shows a post split into two parts. At the top is a picture of wind turbines; over the picture is stated: "There are alternatives to oil and gas." At the bottom is a picture of water pouring out of a pipe; over the picture is stated: "There is no alternative to water."

Below the pictures are the words, "More Trees" and "Less holes." Instead of using the letter "A" the post features a pumpjack. Also at the bottom of the post is the term "#frackoff."

The Midland Downtown Farmers' Market is a nonprofit that presents a market Saturdays at the Museum of the Southwest. Board member Elaine Blount told the Reporter-Telegram the farmers' market is community-oriented and is welcoming to all residents of Midland County. The organization's leadership has a good relationship with the oil and gas industry and certainly has nothing negative to say about the industry, she said.

She said the person responsible was an employee who violated the trust of the organization and was dealt with immediately.

"The farmers intertwine with oil and gas," Blount said, "It all works together."

Based on the screen shot, the post was up at least three hours, and many people had reacted to and commented on the item. The Midland Downtown Farmers' Market took the item off its Facebook page and offered the following statement from its board of directors:

"Dear Patrons, Vendors and our wonderful Community — On Behalf of the Midland Downtown Farmers' Market Board we would like to express our dismay at the post that was posted to our Facebook page this morning by our former Executive Director. We have deleted the post and state in no uncertain terms that such views are not the views of the Board of Directors of MDFM. The post expressed the personal view of one person who we have severed ties with and do not reflect the founding ideals that MDFM was built upon. Such posts are extremely harmful to the public discourse, offensive to this community and repugnant to our values. We are greatly saddened by the hurt and damage this has caused to our patrons and the community. From our Board, we offer a sincere apology and hope we may re-earn your trust and patronage."

Meatpacker recalls 9 tons of smoked sausage

Associated Press

YOAKUM — A Texas meatpacker is recalling several tons of smoked sausage over possible contamination by soft plastic, marking the company's second recall in a month.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture announced the latest recall by Eddy Packing Co. on Thursday. It includes 9 tons of smoked sausage that were produced for Texas businesses.

On May 4, the company recalled nearly 25 tons of smoked sausage nationwide because of to possible plastic contamination.

The latest recall involves 10-pound cases of Carl's Pork and Beef Smoked Sausage on a Stick. The items have a lot code 8073, case code PS9319, a sell-by date of March 14, 2019. The USDA marker is "EST 4900."

Eddy Packing received a customer complaint about soft, green plastic material in a product. Officials they've received no reports of anyone getting sick.

Pools open again today

The city of Midland aquatic centers – Doug Russell and Washington – open for the summer today.

The entry fee for both pools is $3 per person. Children under 2 are free. There are punch cards available for those who plan on using the pool often this summer and want a discount.

The Doug Russell Aquatic Center, 900 N. Midland Drive, is open noon to 7 p.m. Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. On Sunday Doug Russell is open 1-7 p.m. Family swim will take place from 7-9 p.m. Thursday. The center is closed Tuesday.

Washington Aquatic Center, 1601 E. Indiana Ave., is open noon to 7 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and from 1-7 p.m. Sunday. Family swim is scheduled for 7-9 p.m. Tuesday. The center is closed Monday.

Today in History

Today is Saturday, June 2, the 153rd day of 2018. There are 212 days left in the year.

Today's highlight:

On June 2, 1953, the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II took place in London's Westminster Abbey, 16 months after the death of her father, King George VI.

On this date:

In 1886, President Grover Cleveland, 49, married Frances Folsom, 21, in the Blue Room of the White House. (To date, Cleveland is the only president to marry in the executive mansion.)

In 1924, Congress passed, and President Calvin Coolidge signed, a measure guaranteeing full American citizenship for all Native Americans born within U.S. territorial limits.

In 1997, Timothy McVeigh was convicted of murder and conspiracy in the 1995 bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City that killed 168 people. (McVeigh was executed in June 2001.)

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

Note: Bigar's Stars is based on the degree of your sun at birth. The sign name is simply a label astrologers put on a set of degrees for convenience. For best results, readers should refer to the dates following each sign.*

A baby born today has a Sun in Gemini and a Moon in Aquarius.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 2, 2018: This year you open up to new ideas and often feel as if you are nearly unstoppable. You break patterns that have been a problem for you. You are willing to make a dream a reality. If you are single, you could meet someone special sometime after summer. Expect some intensity with this bond. If you are attached, the two of you open up to many different experiences. As a result, you both become less judgmental of others. AQUARIUS encourages you to greet the unexpected positively.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You could feel pressured to handle certain matters involving an older relative. Your mind might be focused on other matters, like perhaps a fun dinner with a loved one or time spent with a special person. The unexpected colors the day. Tonight: Don't go overboard with spending.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Ask questions, especially if you are deciding where you want to go and with whom. A close friend could be overly serious right now. You might find this person to be good-natured but difficult to relate to. Tap into your creativity for answers. Tonight: Bring friends together.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You might make a friend or loved one uncomfortable by asking too many questions. Perhaps the better solution would be to observe what is happening around you. You also might take yourself too seriously as you look for an alternative. Tonight: Try a new experience.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Others seem to be making lots of demands of you. Know that you can say "no." If you're feeling moody and vulnerable, consider canceling some of your plans. You might be happiest at home with a loved one. You don't always have to be out and about. Tonight: Dinner for two.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Defer to others, and you'll feel much more relaxed. You tend to push yourself a lot harder than need be, usually because you often find yourself in the role of host or hostess. Let someone else call the shots this weekend. Tonight: Make sure you put on your dancing shoes!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You put extra effort into a project or get-together. Spend more time with a child, and your playfulness will emerge. Listen to your sixth sense when making plans for later in the day. You might enjoy spending some time at home with a family member. Tonight: Enjoy a quiet evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Your creativity emerges no matter which way you go or what you decide to do. Your imagination runs wild with just the thought that it is Saturday. Let go a little and get into this weekend. You have the potential of meeting someone new. Tonight: Go for the good life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You will be a stronger force right now than you had anticipated. If anyone has a big responsibility to handle, you will feel the need to step in. A family member creates uproar out of the blue. You might want to take the path of least resistance. Tonight: Enjoy being outside.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You could feel pushed beyond what you can tolerate. How you direct others on what to do reflects your self-confidence and your willingness to support yourself. Your daily schedule could be impossible to follow right now. You might need a nap later in the day. Tonight: Very playful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Friends admire your stamina and ability to bring others together. Honor a fast change of pace. You like what is happening. Don't be surprised if a close friend or loved one suddenly decides to change plans. Make it OK to do your own thing. Tonight: Friends surround you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Reach out to someone you care about. You might not know why a discussion on a certain topic has come up, but you would be wise to listen well. Take your time going over recent events. Once you finish your to-do list, you can join in on the celebrations. Tonight: Out late.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ A loved one points you in the direction toward success, and it makes you feel important. You might enjoy yourself, but do not forget who is in charge. Let others choose where, who and when. Follow someone else's lead for now. Tonight: Let the good times rock and roll.

DROPOUT

take one math exam before finishing high school, she turned to the 1 TO 1 Focused Learning tutoring program. After passing the exam, she felt as if the weight of earning her diploma had been lifted.

"Now that I actually have it, my whole family's proud of me," she said.

Laurie Boldrick, founder of 1 TO 1, said it's gratifying to know students can graduate with help from volunteer tutors. She said Janousek has consistently accompanied students at tutoring sessions and engaged with them.

"She doesn't want anybody to fall through the cracks," Boldrick said. "She wants to try to do everything she possibly can and use every resource she has to help them succeed."

The tutoring program partners with local churches to offer assistance for MISD students at Lee and Midland high schools as well as Abell and San Jacinto junior high schools.

For Janousek, 1 TO 1 is essential to her work. She said students may want individualized attention and that the MHS tutoring site at First Presbyterian Church is unique.

"I actually have some students that maybe dropped out and are — maybe (they're) ashamed or maybe embarrassed — to go back to the classroom or go back to the campus," she said.

Before taking on her role in 2016, Janousek was an English teacher at Lee Freshman High School. She has since gained knowledge that students from all walks of life can face obstacles.

"The picture that most people have in their head of what a high school dropout looks like is probably the furthest from the truth that it could be," she said.

Janousek works with students from kindergarten through 12th grade. She has also researched the impacts of a high school diploma and values working with students as they move toward that milestone.

"Really, the spotlight I feel like should be on them and all of their hard work," she said. "I know that it's not always a smooth road, and not every student takes the same path to reach graduation."

Janousek goes above and beyond in her efforts to work with students, according to Boldrick, who started 1 TO 1 to combat dropout rates.

"She's a shining star at MISD that a lot of people — because of her behind-the-scenes work — they wouldn't even know what she's doing," Boldrick said. "But countless kids have a diploma because of her going that extra mile."

CRASH

From 1A

Runway 10, starting a fire," FAA spokesman Lynn Lunsford said in a statement Thursday night.

The National Transportation Safety Board is investigating, and the FAA will provide assistance. The NTSB usually posts a preliminary report within a week to 10 days after a crash and it typically takes up to a year or more to complete an investigation, he said.

John and Gavyn Cooper initially were identified by Sarah Green, director of marketing and communications for Trinity School. John Cooper's wife and Gavyn's mother, Chassity Cooper, is a kindergarten aide at the school, Green said in an email. The victims' daughter and sister, Callie, attends Trinity, and Gavyn previously attended the private school and was attending Midland High.

Midland High football coach Tim Anuszkiewicz said Gavyn Cooper was a quarterback on the junior varsity team last year and that he was going to be a junior next fall.

"Gavyn was a true Midland Bulldog," Anuszkiewicz said. "He was a team player. He had a great attitude and was a really happy kid. I think that is what we are going to miss the most about not having him around, that he just brought a really good spirit to the program."

John Cooper was a trainer at Ruidoso Downs in New Mexico, according to a press release from Ruidoso Downs.

"John M. Cooper was having the best year of his young training career after being successful in the energy business," the release said. "Last Saturday, the Cooper-trained Pj Splash Of Joy qualified for the Grade 1, $1 million Ruidoso Futurity. Last Sunday, the Cooper trained Flight Force gained top preference to race in the $100,000 Mr Jess Perry Stakes at Ruidoso Downs. Cooper had entered Mojo Perry in the $100,000 Junos Request Stakes at Remington Park to run on Saturday night. Mojo Perry is coming off a third-place run in the Decketta Stakes."

A request made Friday to the director of airports seeking more information about the incident was not returned. The NTSB does not comment during investigations, and the FAA refers all requests for information to the NTSB.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

MCKINNEY

Police: Student fatally shoots self at school

Authorities in Texas say a high school was locked down after a student died from a self-inflicted gunshot.

The McKinney Independent School District said Friday that McKinney North High School was placed in lockdown after reports of a gunshot. Police and school officials responded and learned the student was dead. They didn't release any information about the student, including the student's name, age and sex.

The district, located north of Dallas, said no other students were harmed and police secured the location.

Officials say students who drove to school could leave campus and others will be taken to another campus where they can be picked up.

The shooting in McKinney comes two weeks after a gunman fatally shot eight students and two teachers at Santa Fe High School near Houston. A 17-year-old student identified as the shooter is being held on capital murder charges.

SANTA FE

Security added for graduates of school where 10 killed

Heightened security measures will be in place for the graduation ceremony at a Texas high school where a gunman fatally shot eight students and two teachers just two weeks ago.

The Santa Fe Independent School District hasn't elaborated on the added security for Friday's graduation at Santa Fe High School. Officials say media won't be allowed on district grounds during the ceremony at the school's football stadium, but that the event will be livestreamed online.

The ceremony comes a day after President Donald Trump met privately with families of the victims and others near Houston.

Students on Tuesday returned to the Houston-area school for the first time since the May 18 attack. A 17-year-old student identified as the shooter is being held on capital murder charges.

LAREDO

Year-old child killed in drive-by shooting

A 1-year-old child in South Texas has died after being shot in the head during a drive-by shooting as he sat in his stroller.

Laredo police spokesman Joe Baeza said Friday that Oliver Villarreal was with a 2-year-old sibling and their father when the shooting occurred early Thursday morning outside an apartment complex.

Baeza says shots came from a passing vehicle and it's not clear who the gunman was targeting. No arrests have been made.

Oliver was rushed to a hospital where he died.

Baeza says the father had taken the children to the complex to visit someone there, and it's not clear why he would take them at such a late hour.

He says the boy's death is the fourth homicide in the city this year.

Wildfire burns empty Boy Scouts' buildings

Associated Press

CIMARRON, N.M. — A wildfire raced across a swath of tinder-dry forest in northeastern New Mexico on Friday, sending up a thick plume of smoke that forced residents to flee their homes as heat and wind threatened to drive the flames.

The blaze destroyed about a dozen empty buildings on the Boy Scouts' storied Philmont Ranch and threatened nearly 300 homes, officials say. The flames were first reported Thursday and ballooned quickly in a part of New Mexico hardest hit by a severe drought gripping the American Southwest.

More than 60 percent of the U.S. West is experiencing some level of drought, the latest federal drought maps show, forcing national forests and other public lands to close because of escalating fire danger. The area where Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and Colorado meet is at the center of a large patch of exceptional drought.

Dry, windy and warm weather was expected to make conditions worse as the New Mexico fire burned on state and private land, including part of the Boy Scouts' ranch, state forestry spokeswoman Wendy Mason said. Estimates put the blaze at more than 25 square miles. Its cause isn't known.

Officials say no scouts were at the ranch and all staff members were accounted for. Employees who live in the nearby community of Cimarron were allowed to leave to care for their families.

Authorities ordered residents in Cimarron and surrounding areas to evacuate Friday as the smoke drifted east. At the historic St. James Hotel in Cimarron, the phone went unanswered after the popular tourist destination had emptied out along with the rest of the town.

The U.S. Postal Service also evacuated post offices in Cimarron and the smaller community of Ute Park, telling residents they would have to travel about 25 miles away to get their mail.

Officials were concerned about air quality. Evacuation centers were set up in nearby towns as residents shared information on social media about where to take refuge and where animals and livestock could be left.

Forecasters said the towering plume of smoke had reached about 20,000 feet.

A top-tier incident management team was being assigned to the Ute Park Fire, which had crossed a highway and forced its closure. Other roads also were closed.

Crews used several air tankers and a few helicopters to fight the flames from above.

In western New Mexico, gusty winds fanned a wildfire that has burned 38 square miles of forest, blowing embers past containment lines and starting spot fires.

Officials said about one-third of the fire was contained as of Friday, but firefighters faced the challenge of having to both stop the growth of the main fire while patrolling for spot fires. That human-caused fire started May 22 and is east of Reserve on the Gila National Forest.

Mystifying mood swings happen without warning

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I read your letters every chance I get. They remind me that I'm not the only one with problems, but sometimes I just feel so empty.

I have random bouts where anything can send me into a crying jag and all I want to do is hide and go to sleep. I can be watching a funny TV show and out of nowhere feel like I need to run away and cry. It scares me that my moods can swing so drastically. I can also become angry every now and then when it's unprovoked.

I don't know what to do. My boyfriend tries to help, but he's at a loss as well. My medical insurance doesn't cover psychological help. Can you give me any advice? — CRYING MYSELF TO SLEEP

DEAR CRYING: Check again with your insurance carrier, because your primary care provider may be able to order psychological services for you. If, however, that's not possible, your county department of mental health may be able to help you find counseling on a sliding financial scale. Or, contact a university with a medical school, if one is close by. Ask to speak to the Department of Psychiatry and inquire if someone on the staff deals with the problems you're experiencing.

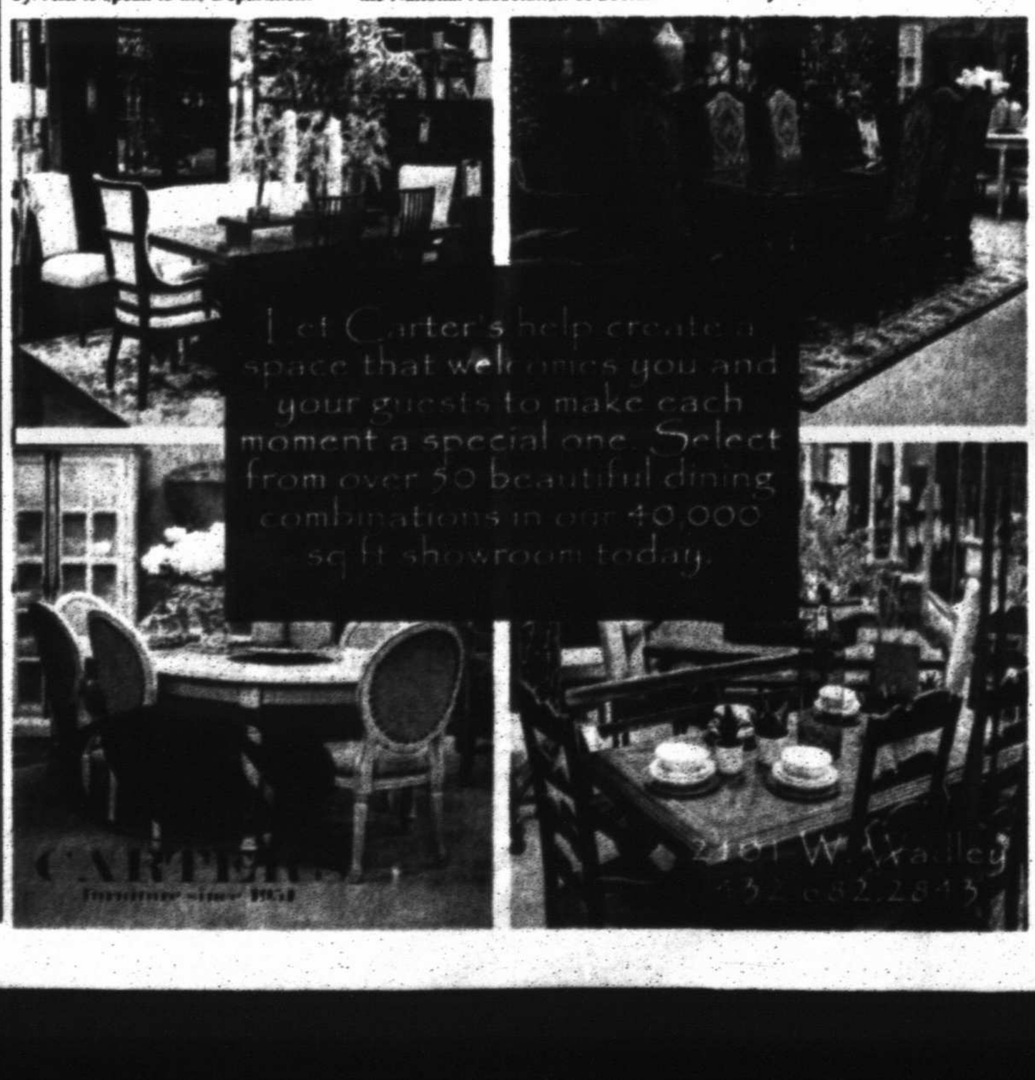
If you live in a town with a college, find out if it has a psychology department and a graduate school. If so, does that graduate school have a psychology program and clinic that charges on a sliding scale and is the clinic staffed with graduate students? If not, inquire if someone on the staff of the department sees people privately and get the phone number.

Individuals can also get referrals from mental health organizations. The largest credentialed ones are the American Psychological Association, the American Psychiatric Association, the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy and the National Association of Social Workers. All of these organizations have professional standards and are legitimate resources.

I know this is a longer response than you may have expected, but I hope it helps you find what you need because it's time to enlist professional help in understanding your mood swings.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had a disagreement about a recent birthday party we gave for our daughter. I was making party favors and putting the date of the party on them instead of our daughter's birthday on them. He said it should be the date of her birthday instead of the date of the party. What is the correct way it should be done — put the date of the party, which is on a different date than her birthday, or put her birthdate on them? — BELINDA IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR BELINDA: The date of the party should go on the invitations. The age the child has attained should go on the party favors, table decorations and, of course, the birthday cake.



Ex-cheerleaders sue Texans, allege intimidation, low pay

By Juan A. Lozano

Attorney Gloria Allred stands among former Houston Texans cheerleaders, from left, Ashley Rodriguez, Morgan Wiederhold, Kelly Neuner, Hannah Turnbow, and Ainsley Parish, right, while holding up a shirt printed with $7.25, the amount she says the former cheerleaders where paid per hour, as she speaks during a press conference Friday in Humble announcing a lawsuit on behalf of the five the former cheerleaders at the law offices of Kimberley Spurlock. The five former cheerleaders are suing the NFL franchise, alleging the team failed to fully compensate them as required by law and subjected them to hostile work environment in which they were harassed, intimidated and forced to live in fear.

HOUSTON — Five former NFL cheerleaders sued the Houston Texans on Friday, alleging the team failed to fully compensate them as required by law and subjected them to a hostile work environment in which they were harassed, intimidated and forced to live in fear.

The lawsuit, filed in Houston federal court, accuses the franchise of paying the women less than the $7.25 per hour they were promised, not compensating them for making public appearances or performing other tasks related to their jobs and creating a workplace where the women were threatened with being fired for voicing any complaints.

"I and my fellow cheerleaders were treated as the lowest of the low," Hannah Turnbow said at a news conference. "The Houston Texans were paid thousands of dollars to have us show up at appearances at locations all over Texas with no security, no transportation and where our safety was not guaranteed."

Turnbow said that after she was left with abrasions on her shoulder when she was attacked by a fan at one game, the team told her "to just suck it up."

"We were harassed, bullied and body shamed for $7.25 an hour," said ex-cheerleader Ainsley Parish.

Texans spokeswoman Amy Palcic said the team is constantly evaluating its cheerleader program and makes changes "as needed to make the program enjoyable for everyone."

"We are proud of the cheerleader program and have had hundreds of women participate and enjoy their experience while making a positive impact in the local community," Palcic said in a brief statement.

Prominent women's rights attorney Gloria Allred, who's representing the cheerleaders, alleged the women were paid "so little or not paid at all" for much of the work they did because of their gender.

"Surely (Texans owner Bob) McNair and the Houston Texans can find it in their budget of hundreds of millions of dollars to pay these women a fair wage, not minimum wage," Allred said. "I say, stop penny pinching. Pay these women what they deserve and make sure you pay them for every minute that they work."

The lawsuit is seeking unspecified damages.

This is the second such lawsuit filed against the Texans.

Last month, three ex-cheerleaders also filed suit in Houston federal court, accusing the Texans of not paying them minimum wage, not paying overtime wages and accusing a cheerleading supervisor of body shaming them.

These lawsuits are part of a series of recent complaints that have been made by cheerleaders against NFL teams across the country.

The New York Times reported last month that on a trip to Costa Rica for a photo shoot in 2013, Washington Redskins cheerleaders had their passports collected, were forced to be topless for a calendar photo shoot that included male spectators and were asked to be escorts for sponsors at a nightclub.

Former cheerleaders with the Miami Dolphins and the New Orleans Saints also have filed recent discriminatory complaints and lawsuits against their ex-teams.

Last year, a federal judge in California dismissed a lawsuit that had been filed by a former San Francisco 49ers cheerleader who had accused the NFL and team owners of conspiring to suppress wages for cheerleaders.

Allred said she planned next week to present a letter to NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell asking him to review the complaints being made by her clients and other cheerleaders about their working conditions.

US unemployment falls to nearly 1969 levels; hiring solid

By Christopher Rugaber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Another month of strong hiring drove the nation's unemployment rate down to 3.8 percent — tantalizingly close to the level last seen in 1969, when Detroit still dominated the auto industry and the Vietnam War was raging.

Employers added 233,000 jobs in May, up from 159,000 in April, the Labor Department reported Friday. And unemployment fell to an 18-year low.

The report shows that the nearly 9-year-old economic expansion — the second-longest on record — remains on track and may even be gaining steam. Employers appear to be shrugging off recent concerns about global trade disputes.

"The May jobs report revealed impressive strength and breadth in U.S. job creation that blew away most economists' expectations," said Scott Anderson, chief economist at Bank of the West.

With the unemployment rate so low, businesses have complained for months that they are struggling to find enough qualified workers. But Friday's jobs report suggests that they are taking chances with pockets of the unemployed and underemployed whom they had previously ignored.

Roughly an hour before the employment data was released, President Donald Trump appeared to hint on Twitter that a strong jobs report was coming. "Looking forward to seeing the employment numbers at 8:30 this morning," he tweeted.

The president is normally briefed on the monthly jobs report the day before it is released, and he and other administration officials are not supposed to comment on it beforehand.

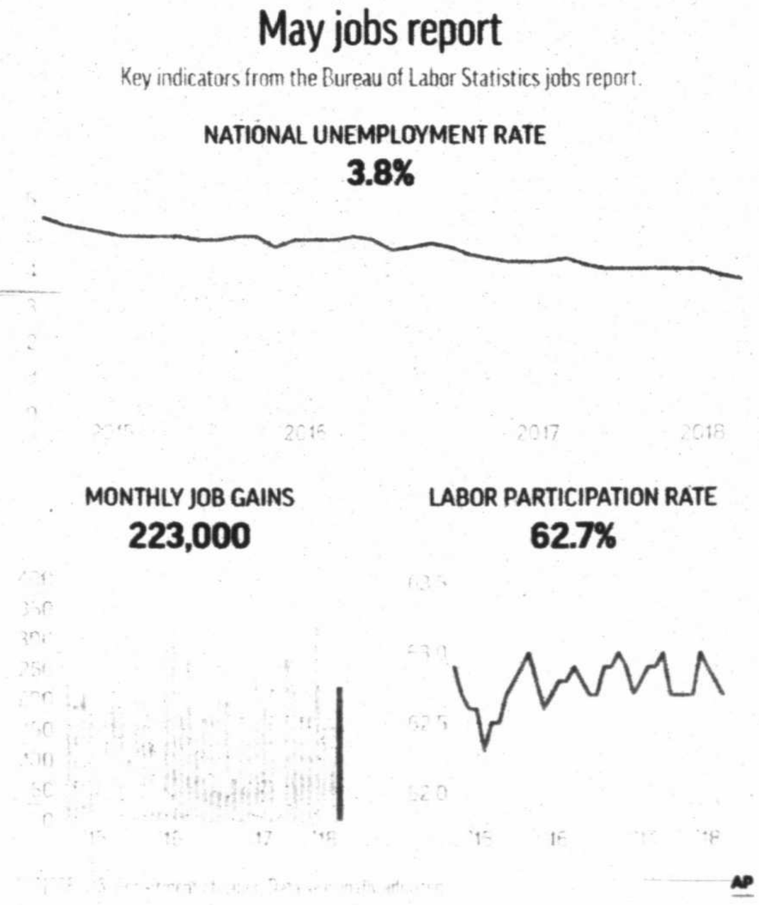
Larry Kudlow, the president's top economic adviser, downplayed Trump's tweet.

"He didn't give any numbers," Kudlow said. "No one revealed the numbers to the public."

Investors welcomed the report. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 219 points Friday, or 0.9 percent. Other indexes also moved higher.

The healthy jobs data makes it more likely that the Federal Reserve will keep raising interest rates this year — two and possibly three more times, after doing so in March.

Unemployment dropped from 3.9 percent in April. When rounded to one decimal, as the Labor Department typically does, the official jobless rate is now the lowest since April 2000.



But the unrounded figure is 3.75 percent, the lowest since December 1969. Unemployment remained below 4 percent for nearly four straight years in the late 1960s, but it rose to 6.1 percent during a mild recession in 1970. It didn't fall below 4 percent again until the dot-com-fueled boom of the late 1990s.

Businesses desperate to hire are reaching deep into pools of the unemployed to find workers. Unemployment among high school graduates fell sharply to 3.9 percent, a 17-year low. For black Americans, it hit a record low of 5.9 percent. The unemployment rate for women dropped to 3.6 percent, the lowest since 1953.

And the number of part-time workers who would prefer full-time jobs is down 6 percent from a year ago. That means businesses are converting some part-timers to full-time work.

Companies are also hiring the long-term unemployed — those who have been out of work for six months or longer. Their ranks have fallen by nearly one-third in the past year.

That's important because economists worry that people who are out of work for long periods can see their skills erode.

Those trends suggest that companies, for all their complaints, are still able to hire without significantly boosting wages. Average hourly pay rose 2.7 percent in May from a year earlier, below the 3.5 percent to 4 percent pace that occurred the last time unemployment was this low.

The number of involuntary part-time workers is still higher than it was before the 2008-09 recession.

Martha Gimbel, director of economic research at Indeed, the job-listing site, said some of the fastest-growing search terms on the site this year are "full-time" and "9-to-5 jobs," evidence that many people want more work hours.

"That suggests there is still this pool of workers that employers can tap without raising wages," Gimbel said.

Debbie Thomas, owner of Thomas Hill Organics, a restaurant in Paso Robles, California, said that finding qualified people to hire is her biggest challenge. She has raised pay by about a dollar an hour in the past year for cooks and dishwashers but is reluctant to go much higher.

"You don't want to price yourself out of the market," Thomas said.

The job gains in May were broad-based: Professional and business services, which include higher-paying fields such as accounting and engineering, added 31,000 jobs. Health care, a consistent job engine, gained nearly 32,000.

Manufacturing, which is benefiting from increased business investment in machinery and other equipment, added 18,000 jobs, and construction 25,000.

Some economists remain concerned that the Trump administration's aggressive actions on trade could hamper growth. The administration on Thursday imposed tariffs on steel and aluminum imports from key allies in Europe, Canada and Mexico. Earlier in the week, it threatened to hit China with tariffs on $50 billion of its goods.

Still, consumer spending rose in April at its fastest pace in five months. And companies are also stepping up spending, buying more industrial machinery, computers and software — signs that they're optimistic enough to expand. A measure of business investment rose in the first quarter by the most in 3 1/2 years.

Macroeconomic Advisers, a forecasting firm, said it now foresees the economy expanding at a robust 4.1 percent annual pace in the April-June quarter, which would be the fastest in nearly four years. The economy expanded just 2.2 percent in the first quarter.

Facebook kills 'trending' topics, tests breaking news label

By Barbara Ortutay
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Facebook is shutting down its ill-fated "trending" news section after four years, a company executive told The Associated Press.

The company claims the tool is outdated and wasn't popular. But the trending section also proved problematic in ways that would presage Facebook's later problems with fake news, political balance and the limitations of artificial intelligence in managing the messy human world.

When Facebook launched "trending" in 2014 as a list of headlines to the side of the main news feed, it was a straightforward move to steal users from Twitter by giving them a quick look at the most popular news of the moment. It fit nicely into CEO Mark Zuckerberg's pledge just a year earlier to make Facebook its users' "personal newspaper."

But that was then. "Fake news" wasn't yet a popular term, and no foreign country had been accused of trying to influence the U.S. elections through social media, as Russia later would be. Trending news that year included the death of Robin Williams, Ebola and the World Cup.

Facebook is now testing new features, including a "breaking news" label that publishers can add to stories to distinguish them from other chatter. Facebook also wants to make local news more prominent.

"It's very good to get rid of 'trending,'" said Frank Pasquale, a law professor at the University of Maryland and expert on algorithms and society. He said algorithms are good for very narrow, well-defined tasks. By contrast, he said, deciding what news stories should go in "trending" requires broad thinking, quick judgments about context and decisions about whether someone is trying to game the system.

In an interview ahead of Friday's announcement, Facebook's head of news products, Alex Hardiman, said the company is still committed to breaking and real-time news. But instead of having Facebook's moderators, human or otherwise, make editorial decisions, there's been a subtle shift to let news organizations do so.

According to the Pew Research Center, 44 percent of U.S. adults get some or all of their news through Facebook.

Troubles with the trending section began to emerge in 2016, when the company was accused of bias against conservatives, based on the words of an anonymous former contractor who said Facebook downplayed conservative issues in that feature and promoted liberal causes. Zuckerberg met with prominent right-wing leaders at the company's headquarters in an attempt at damage control. Yet two years later, Facebook still hasn't been able to shake the notion of bias.

In late 2016, Facebook fired the human editors who worked on the trending topics and replaced them with software that was supposed to be free of political bias. Instead, the software algorithm began to pick out posts that were getting the most attention, even if the information in them was bogus. In early 2017, Facebook made another attempt to fix the trending section, this time by including only topics covered by several news publishers. The thinking was that coverage by just one outlet could be a sign that the news is fake.

The troubles underscore the difficulty of relying on computers, even artificial intelligence, to make sense of the messy human world without committing obvious, sometimes embarrassing and occasionally disastrous errors.

Ultimately, Facebook appears to conclude that trying to fix the headaches around trending wasn't worth the meager benefit the company, users and news publishers saw in it.

"There are other ways for us to better invest our resources," Hardiman said.

Pasquale said Facebook's new efforts represent "very slow steps" toward an acknowledgement that the company is making editorial judgments when it decides what news should be shown to users — and that it needs to empower journalists and editors to do so.

But what needs to happen now, he added, is a broad shift in the company's corporate culture, recognizing the expertise involved in journalistic judgment. The changes and features Facebook is putting out, he said, are being treated as "bug fixes" — addressing single problems the way engineers do.

"What they are not doing is giving an overall account of their mission on how these fixes fit together," Pasquale said.

The "breaking news" label that Facebook is testing with 80 news publishers around the world will let outlets such as The Washington Post add a red label to indicate that a story is breaking news, highlighting it for users who want accurate information as things are happening.

"Breaking news has to look different than a recipe," Hardiman said.

Another feature, called "Today In," shows people breaking news in their area from local publishers, officials and organizations. It's being tested out in 30 markets in the U.S. Hardiman says the goal is to help "elevate great local journalism." The company is also funding news videos, created exclusively for Facebook by outside publishers it would not yet name. It plans to launch this feature in the next few months.

Facebook says the trending section wasn't a popular feature to begin with. It was available only in five countries and accounted for less than 1.5 percent of clicks to the websites of news publishers, according to the company.

While Facebook got outsized attention for the problems the trending section had — perhaps because it seemed popular with journalists and editors — neither its existence nor its removal makes much of a difference when it comes with Facebook's broader problems with news.

Hardiman said ending the trending section feels like letting a child go. But she said Facebook's focus now is prioritizing trustworthy, informative news that people find useful.

Unlikely visitor, Rev. Graham campaigns in liberal Berkeley

By Paul Elias
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The Rev. Franklin Graham says he is coming to Berkeley in peace and in a longshot attempt to sway voters to support evangelical Christian candidates.

The outspoken supporter of President Donald Trump is in the middle of a 10-stop campaign-style tour of California that is designed to get out the evangelical Christian vote in the June 5 primary election and defeat progressive politicians and insert more religion into government.

Berkeley, though, as one of the most liberal cities in the country, seems an unlikely stop.

Graham insists he means no mischief when he gives his message Friday night, though he concedes he may be the first evangelical preacher in recent memory to take on the Berkeley electorate. He said he's confident he will be received well in a city that experienced violent and chaotic political protests over other politically conservative events in recent months.

"I'm not going there to judge Berkeley or fuss at it," Graham said in an interview with The Associated Press. "I want them to know that God loves them."

The 65-year-old preacher is the son of the Rev. Billy Graham, the famed spiritual adviser to 16 presidents who died in March. Unlike his father, the son is taking on a more political role that aims generally to get more evangelical Christian candidates elected to office.

He said he doesn't endorse individual candidates and said he couldn't name any California officeholders when asked if any state politician fit his mold.

"I want to see people come to faith in God and his son Jesus Christ and the church to get involved in the political world," Graham said. "I want them to vote and I want Christians to run for political office at every level."

Graham has already held rallies in some of the state's biggest conservative strongholds in California's Central Valley, urging evangelical Christians to vote.

But the Rev. David Vasquez-Levy, president of Berkeley's Pacific School of Religion, said Graham "missed an opportunity" to grow his movement by failing to target Latinos during his Central Valley rallies. Vasquez-Levy said the rallies appeared to be attended overwhelmingly by white crowds in a region with a large Latino population.

"His perspective is to reclaim the evangelic America of the 1950s," said Vasquez-Levy, noting that it ironic Graham will hold his rally Friday in Berkeley's Cesar Chavez Park.

Graham finishes his tour in the politically conservative far north of the state next week, holding a rally in Redding on election day.

In Berkeley, a small protest is planned in the city on Friday evening, organized on Facebook by a group called Refuse Fascism. During a rally to protest San Francisco Police shootings of minority suspects last week, the Rev. Amos Brown, an influential San Francisco preacher, called for demonstrators to turn up in Berkeley on Friday night.

"Graham is one of the leading evangelical preachers who has supported Trump and who is rallying his flock around politics that is extremely dangerous," Refuse Fascism spokesman Barry Thornton said. "We are not trying to stop him. We are voicing our political opinion."

Erin Steffen, a spokeswoman for the city of Berkeley, said police and other officials expect Graham's event to remain uneventful, though more officers will be on duty Friday night. Unlike several other rallies that devolved into riots, Graham's event has received a city permit and his organization is working with police on security and traffic issues, she said.

On Friday, he will deliver his sermon and hold his rally in downtown Berkeley. He concedes with a chuckle that he can't name the last evangelical Christian preacher to appear in Berkeley. But he insists he will be well received in the birthplace of the free speech movement.

Police: Uber driver said rider was shot during attack try

DENVER — An Uber driver arrested in the fatal shooting of a passenger told a witness that he opened fire after his customer tried to attack him, police said Friday.

However, a partially redacted police report says driver Michael Andre Hancock, 29, declined to talk to investigators without a lawyer present about the shooting on Interstate 25 just before 3 a.m.

Police said the man killed, Hyun Kim, 45, was found lying on the floor board of the car's front passenger seat.

The witness called 911 and passed the phone to Hancock, who identified himself to the dispatcher, the report said.

Police said Hancock had trouble breathing after officers arrived, placed him in handcuffs and removed a semi-automatic pistol from his waistband.

He was taken to a hospital for treatment and later arrested for investigation of first-degree murder.

Uber said in a statement that it has removed Hancock's access to its app and will work closely with police.

"We are deeply troubled by the events in Denver today. Our thoughts are with the families of those involved," the company said.

Uber policy bars riders and drivers from carrying firearms except in states that expressly prohibit companies from banning guns.

Colorado allows drivers to carry firearms to protect themselves and their property. However, Uber spokesman Andrew Hasbun said the company's policy applies in the state.

Police said Kim was shot numerous times and 10 spent cartridges were found on the shoulder of the interstate, across the lanes of traffic from the wall of an onramp where Hancock's silver sedan crashed head on.

Hancock is being held in Denver's jail and it's not clear if he has a lawyer yet. It will be up to prosecutors to decide whether to charge him with murder or any other crime.

Trump pardons favor celebrity backed, conservative causes

By Jill Colvin and Darlene Superville
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump on Thursday pardoned a conservative commentator he claims "was treated very unfairly by our government!" and announced he's thinking about clemency for Martha Stewart and former Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich, among "lots" of other people.

"What they did to him was horrible," Trump told reporters, speaking of his decision to clear the name of Dinesh D'Souza, who had pleaded guilty to campaign finance fraud.

It was the latest example of Trump trying to right a perceived wrong with his presidential pardon power, and a move that makes ever clearer that, in the Trump administration, the odds of a pardon have heavily favored those with a celebrity backer, those who have become a cause celebre among conservatives and those with a reality TV connection.

Trump has been particularly drawn to cases where he believes there was a political motivation to the prosecutions — a situation that may remind him of his own predicament at the center of special counsel Robert Mueller's investigation into Russian election meddling, which he insists is nothing but a "witch hunt."

On Thursday, Trump said he was seriously considering commuting the sentence of Blagojevich, the Democratic former governor serving a 14-year prison sentence on numerous counts of corruption, including trying to sell the U.S. Senate seat that was vacated by Barack Obama. The president also said he was considering a pardon for Stewart, the celebrity lifestyle guru who served a stint in federal prison after being convicted of charges related to a stock sale.

Both had connections to Trump's "Celebrity Apprentice" reality television show: Blagojevich was a contestant in 2010 and Stewart hosted the 2005 spinoff series, "The Apprentice: Martha Stewart."

Hours earlier, Trump said on Twitter he would pardon D'Souza. An outspoken critic of Obama, D'Souza claimed his prosecution by the Obama Justice Department was politically motivated.

Trump has issued five pardons as president: The first went to former Arizona sheriff Joe Arpaio, a top Trump supporter during the 2016 campaign, who was spared the prospect of serving jail time after a conviction stemming from his use of racially targeted immigration patrols. Next came Navy sailor Kristian Saucier, who had taken photos of classified portions of a submarine. Trump often mentioned Saucier's case on the campaign trail as he criticized his former Democratic rival, Hillary Clinton, for her use of a private email server. Saucier had claimed his prosecution was driven by sensitivity about classified information driven by Clinton's case.

Next came former White House aide I. Lewis "Scooter" Libby. A former top aide to Vice President Dick Cheney, Libby was convicted of lying to investigators and obstruction of justice following the 2003 leak of the covert identity of a CIA officer. The Libby case was taken up by conservatives who argued he was the victim of an overly zealous and politically motivated prosecution by a special counsel.

That pardon, especially, was seen as a sign that Trump might be willing to pardon former aides caught up in the Mueller inquiry.

Trump has also been moved by cases championed by celebrities. Last week, he pardoned Jack Johnson, boxing's first black heavyweight champion, whose case had been brought to his attention by actor Sylvester Stallone. And on Wednesday, he met with reality TV star Kim Kardashian, who urged him to pardon Alice Marie Johnson, a woman serving a life sentence for drug offenses.

Trump's predecessors largely relied on a formal, Department of Justice process to identify those deserving of clemency.

None of the clemencies that Trump has granted have come through the front door of the Justice Department's Office of the Pardon Attorney, which typically assists the president in exercising his pardon power. Instead they've been brought to the president by White House lawyers, advisers and outside confidants and celebrities, according to a senior White House official, who said there are dozens of pardons currently under consideration by White House attorneys and the president.

The official said Trump has prioritized actions that have personally affected him — noting he's been particularly drawn to cases where he believes there was political motivation to the prosecutions.

In its latter years, the Obama administration searched for candidates like nonviolent drug offenders and those affected by mandatory minimum sentencing policies, viewing clemency as a tool to promote policy goals. There is no such systematic review by the Trump White House.

But White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders said it was unfair to suggest the only people winning pardons under Trump are those connected to him or with a celebrity backer.

"Certainly, something has to be brought to his attention and if somebody has the ability to do that it would help, but the president is making decisions based on the merits of the individual cases and what he thinks is the right thing to do," she said. "There's a process, but ultimately the president has the power and the authority to make a decision and he does."

Since the beginning of his presidency through May 7, Trump received 570 requests for pardons and about 2,306 requests for commutation of sentences. But because there were pending requests at the end of the Obama administration, the total number of requests for pardons pending before Trump is 2,271 and 8,932 for commutation.

Trump has denied dozens of pardon and commutation requests, while thousands of petitions have been closed without presidential action.

Kevin Ring, president of Families Against Mandatory Minimums, which worked with the Justice Department during the Obama administration to help identify candidates for clemency, said that many are torn over Trump's decision-making process, which appears to be more haphazard than in the past.

"Nobody wants to criticize displays of mercy because we think they're so sorely lacking, but most of these wouldn't be on anyone's 'Top 10' list of people who have been mistreated by the system," Ring said.

Others were more critical. "The President's ad hoc use of the pardon power is concerning enough. But the possibility that he may also be sending a message to witnesses in a criminal investigation into his campaign is extremely dangerous," tweeted Sen. Mark Warner, D-Va.

Trump told reporters Thursday that no one asked him to pardon D'Souza. But D'Souza told the conservative Daily Caller that Republican Sen. Ted Cruz of Texas played a key role.

D'Souza said that during a dinner about a month ago, Cruz said he would push for a pardon in conversations with Trump. D'Souza said Cruz called him recently to tell him Trump was receptive to the idea and action could be imminent.

D'Souza, whose case had become a cause in conservative circles, was sentenced to five years' probation in 2014 after pleading guilty to violating federal election law by making illegal contributions to a U.S. Senate campaign in the names of others.

Watchdog groups criticized D'Souza's pardon, saying it signaled contempt for the rule of law.

"Donald Trump has sent a message to his friends and cronies that if you break laws to protect him or attack our democracy, he's got your back," said David Donnelly, president and CEO of Every Voice.

Trump is not the only president to draw flak for his pardon decisions. Former President Bill Clinton ignited a major controversy with a last-minute pardon for fugitive financier Marc Rich, the ex-husband of a major Democratic fundraiser. And Gerald Ford pardoned Richard Nixon for his involvement in the Watergate scandal just days after taking over from his predecessor.

Indepth look

President Donald Trump announced via tweet that he would be giving a full presidential pardon to conservative media commentator Dinesh D'Souza, declaring he was "treated very unfairly by our government!"

Here's a look at Trump's other pardons and commutations so far:

Joe Arpaio

In his first use of his presidential pardon power, Trump spared former Arizona sheriff Joe Arpaio the prospect of serving jail time after a conviction stemming from his use of immigration patrols that focused on Latinos.

The White House said 85-year-old Arpaio, a top Trump supporter during the 2016 campaign, was a "worthy candidate" for the pardon, citing his "life's work of protecting the public from the scourges of crime and illegal immigration."

The pardon in August 2017 came less than a month after a judge found Arpaio guilty of a misdemeanor contempt-of-court charge in a trial that was prosecuted by the president's own Justice Department.

Arpaio had defied court orders that he stop the patrols so that he could promote his immigration enforcement efforts in a bid to boost his successful 2012 re-election campaign.

Sholom Rubashkin

In late 2017, Trump commuted the sentence of an Iowa kosher meatpacking executive who had been sentenced to 27 years in prison for money laundering.

Sholom Rubashkin was convicted in 2009 of submitting fake invoices to a bank that made his family business's finances appear healthier than they were so they could borrow more. The 57-year-old father of 10 had served more than eight years of his sentence at the time.

The decision to intervene on Rubashkin's behalf came at the urging of numerous members of Congress and a long list of high-ranking law enforcement officials, who argued the sentence was too harsh for a first-time, nonviolent offender.

The action did not vacate Rubashkin's conviction.

Kristian Saucier

Trump in March pardoned Kristian Saucier, a U.S. Navy sailor, who served a year in federal prison after taking photos of classified portions of a submarine.

Trump often mentioned Saucier on the campaign trail as he criticized his Democratic rival, Hillary Clinton, for her use of a private email server. In a January tweet, he criticized the federal judicial system for going after a sailor instead of a top Clinton aide.

Saucier pleaded guilty in 2016 of taking photos inside the USS Alexandria while it was stationed in Groton, Connecticut, in 2009. He said he only wanted service mementos, but federal prosecutors argued he was a disgruntled sailor who had put national security at risk by taking photos showing the submarine's propulsion system and reactor compartment and then obstructed justice by destroying a laptop and camera.

Saucier also claimed his prosecution was driven by sensitivity about classified information amid the scandal involving Clinton's emails.

Lewis "Scooter" Libby

Trump issued a full pardon in April to I. Lewis "Scooter" Libby, a former top aide to Vice President Dick Cheney who was convicted of lying to investigators and obstruction of justice following the 2003 leak of the covert identity of CIA officer Valerie Plame.

President George W. Bush later commuted Libby's 30-month prison sentence, but declined to issue a pardon despite intense pressure from Cheney. No one was ever charged for the leak.

Trump said he didn't know Libby, but "for years I have heard that he has been treated unfairly. Hopefully, this full pardon will help rectify a very sad portion of his life."

The Libby case was criticized by conservatives, who argued he was the victim of an overly zealous and politically motivated prosecution by a special counsel.

Jack Johnson

Trump in May granted a rare, posthumous pardon to boxing's first black heavyweight champion, clearing Jack Johnson's name more than 100 years after what many saw as his racially charged conviction.

Trump said as he announced his decision that he wanted "to correct a wrong that occurred in our history and to honor a truly legendary boxing champion."

Johnson was convicted in 1913 by an all-white jury of violating the Mann Act for traveling with his white girlfriend. That law made it illegal to transport women across state lines for "immoral" purposes.

The case had been championed by actor Sylvester Stallone, and Trump credited the Rocky star for bringing Johnson's story to his attention.

Stallone, WBC heavyweight champion Deontay Wilder and retired heavyweight titleholder Lennox Lewis all joined Trump in an Oval Office ceremony.

Dinesh D'souza

Trump announced via tweet on Thursday that he planned to pardon conservative commentator Dinesh D'Souza, who pleaded guilty to campaign finance fraud.

"Will be giving a Full Pardon to Dinesh D'Souza today," Trump wrote. "He was treated very unfairly by our government!"

D'Souza was sentenced to five years of probation in 2014 after pleading guilty to violating federal election law by making illegal contributions to a U.S. Senate campaign in the names of others.

The summit's back on: Trump, North Korea's Kim to meet after all

By Zeke Miller, Josh Lederman and Jonathan Lemire
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After a week of hard-nosed negotiation, diplomatic gamesmanship and no shortage of theatrics, President Donald Trump announced Friday that the historic nuclear-weapons summit he had canceled with North Korea's Kim Jong Un is back on.

The June 12 meeting in Singapore, the first between heads of the technically still-warring nations, is meant to begin the process of ending North Korea's nuclear program, and Trump said he believes Kim is committed to that goal. The announcement puts back on track a high-risk summit that could be a legacy-defining moment for the American leader, who has matched his unconventional deal-making style with the mercurial Kim government.

Despite recently envisioning Nobel laurels, Trump worked on Friday to lower expectations for a quick breakthrough.

"We're going to deal, and we're going to really start a process," Trump said. He spoke from the South Lawn of the White House after seeing off a senior Kim deputy who spent more than an hour with him in the Oval Office. Much had been made of a letter his visitor was bringing from the North Korean leader, but Trump's comments left it unclear when he had even managed to take a look at it.

The president said it was likely that more than a single meeting would be necessary to bring about his goal of denuclearizing the Korean Peninsula. He said, "I think you're going to have a very positive result in the end, not from one meeting."

In the latest sign of hostility cooling down but hopes kept in check, Trump said he had unilaterally put a hold on hundreds of new sanctions against the North, without Kim's government even asking. "I'm not going to put them on until such time as the talks break down," he said.

"I don't even want to use the term 'maximum pressure' anymore," Trump added, referencing his preferred term for the punishing U.S. economic sanctions imposed on North Korea in response to its nuclear and ballistic missile tests. But he said he would not remove current sanctions until the North took steps to denuclearize.

Trump warmly greeted Kim Yong Chol, the vice chairman of the North Korean ruling party's central committee, in the Oval Office, where a brief encounter meant for the hand delivery of a personal letter from Kim Jong Un became a longer discussion of areas of disagreement between the two countries.

After the meeting, Trump posed for photos with Kim Yong Chol outside the Oval Office, and they talked amiably at Kim's black SUV before he was driven away.

Trump told reporters he hadn't yet read the letter from the North Korean leader and added with a smile, "I may be in for a big surprise, folks." But minutes earlier, he had described the note as "a very interesting letter," and teased journalists about revealing its contents.

Later Friday, deputy White House press secretary Hogan Gidley confirmed that Trump had read the letter, but he did not reveal its contents.

Plans for the meeting in Singapore had been cast into doubt after Trump suddenly announced his withdrawal last week, only to announce a day later that it could still get back on track. White House officials cast the roller-coaster public statements as reflective of efforts by each leader to test the resolve of the other.

Trump cited increasingly bellicose statements from the North — and ignored messages about summit logistics — when he announced he was backing out of the summit in a strongly worded letter. He cited "tremendous anger and open hostility" by Pyongyang but also urged Kim Jong Un to call him. By the next day, he was signaling the event could be back on after a conciliatory response from North Korea.

AP source: No suspension for Love leaving bench

By Josh Dubow
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — J.R. Smith's blunder, a disputed replay overturn and a key missed free throw dealt the Cleveland Cavaliers an emotionally crushing loss in an opener of the NBA Finals that was ripe to be taken away from the defending champion Golden State Warriors.

The Cavs spent the off day Friday trying to recover from one of the oddest and possibly debilitating defeats in the finals, and awaiting word from the NBA on the status of two key big men for Game 2 on Sunday night.

Kevin Love will not be suspended for leaving the bench and being on the court during an altercation in the closing seconds of Cleveland's 124-114 overtime loss Thursday night. A person familiar with the decision said the league ruled Love left the bench to argue a flagrant foul against teammate Tristan Thompson and not to join the altercation. He then retreated to the bench area immediately, so he did not deserve punishment. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the league has not announced a ruling.

There has been no ruling yet on possible discipline for Thompson, who was ejected for a flagrant 2 foul against Shaun Livingston and then shoved a ball into Draymond Green's face before leaving the court.

Cavs guard George Hill said it would be "petty" if it warranted a suspension. The Warriors weren't concerned about how the league would rule.

"I thought it was unnecessary when he shoved the ball in Draymond's face," guard Klay Thompson said. "That was very uncalled for, especially if two guys are just talking. That's not the way to play. But honestly, I don't care if he plays or not."

Everyone is still trying to figure out what went on in the final minute of regulation in Game 1. It started after LeBron James converted a three-point play to give Cleveland a 104-102 lead with 50 seconds left.

James appeared to draw a charge on Durant. But officials went to the replay to see if James was in the

Midland's Luzardo bounces back from injury

By Will Korn
wkorn@mrt.com

It's March of 2016.

Hard-throwing left-handed pitcher Jesus Luzardo was in the middle of the fifth start of his senior season for Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida.

Then in the fourth inning, he heard a pop in his left elbow. As a gruesome belated gift for his 18th birthday just days before, he received the diagnosis of a torn ulnar collateral ligament in the elbow, requiring Tommy John Surgery.

It was a harsh reality for the phenom, who had first-round aspirations in the upcoming Major League Baseball draft. But he took the injury in stride, fell to the third round and was drafted by the Washington Nationals, who saw enough potential in his once-special left arm.

"The first week (after the injury) was pretty tough just figuring it all out, seeing what I was going to do," said the now 20-year-old Luzardo. "But I kind of got into my faith a little bit more and after a week, I just decided to move forward from it."

Luzardo said his selection drove him to battle through rehab and back to full health in the Nationals' organization.

"It was definitely a confidence booster, and I'm thankful for the Nationals for picking me, giving me an opportunity to get into pro ball so early. It gave me confidence in myself, motivated me more to get back quicker."

He made three starts in the Nationals' lower levels before a July 2017 trade with the Oakland Athletics that sent A's relievers Sean Doolittle and Ryan Madson east. Luzardo joined the Oakland organization and quickly shot up the franchise's prospect rankings.

Now, less than a year after making his professional debut, the Midland Rockhounds' newest budding star is making his mark in the Texas League as Oakland's No. 2-ranked prospect according to MLB.com.

Midland manager Scott Steinmann said Luzardo's recovery encapsulates his determination. Through his first seven starts with Midland since his promotion from Single-A Stockton on April 24, Luzardo has posted a 38:11 strikeout-to-walk ratio in a 32 2/3 innings.

"It speaks a lot on the type of person he is, his integrity, his work ethic, his inner drive – those intangibles that it takes to be a long time major leaguer," Steinmann said. "We're excited to see that unfold before our eyes. Any time there is a crucial situation or if a couple guys get on, he has the ability to step up his game."

Though he breezed through his first year as a professional player, adversity is bound to become more common in his Luzardo's life on the diamond. He allowed two runs or less in his first three starts with Midland, before finally enduring a hiccup in a May 13 loss to the Corpus Christi Hooks.

In his most recent start Thursday against the Arkansas Travelers, Luzardo was touched up again as he allowed a career-high five runs in 3 2/3 frames.

As one of the youngest players in Double-A, he said he is learning the importance of handling his emotions from

Texas Tech wins NCAA regional opener

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Zach Rheams homered in the first inning, Michael Davis drove in three runs and Texas Tech opened NCAA regional play with a 9-2 win over New Mexico State on Friday.

The Red Raiders (40-17) went ahead to stay with a three-run first, when Midland Christian grad Grant Little had an RBI double before Rheams hit his 14th homer of the season. Rheams had also homered in his previous at-bat against New Mexico State, a game-ending solo shot in a 2-1 win two months ago.

Michael Davis had a sacrifice fly, then added a two-run double in a four-run seventh for Tech.

Joey Ortiz homered for WAC tournament champion New Mexico State (40-21).

Ryan Shetter (5-0) struck out five and allowed one run in five innings. Aggies starter Jonathan Groff (11-3) also had five strikeouts, but allowed eight hits and five runs over four innings.

AUSTIN

Doxakis' 12 Ks lead Texas A&M in 10-3 NCAA win over Indiana

John Doxakis had a career-high 12 strikeouts while allowing only one hit over six innings as Texas A&M won its 10th consecutive NCAA regional game, beating Indiana 10-3 in the opener of the Austin Regional on Friday.

Doxakis (8-5) struck out the first five batters he faced. The sophomore lefty, who had 10 strikeouts against Auburn in the SEC Tournament last week, walked two and gave up one unearned run.

Zach DeLoach and Logan Foster each had three hits for the Aggies (40-20), who are the No. 3 seed in Austin.

Luke Miller homered twice — solo shots in the seventh and ninth innings to give him 13 for the season — for second-seeded Indiana (38-18).

Foster's two-out RBI single in the fourth started a seven-run outburst that DeLoach capped with a three-run double to chase Indiana starter Jonathan Stiever (5-6). Foster added an RBI triple an inning later.

CALIFORNIA

CS Fullerton defeats Baylor 6-2 to open Stanford Regional

STANFORD — Brett Borgogno hit a two-run double in the second inning and Cal State Fullerton went on to beat Baylor 6-2 to open the NCAA Stanford Regional on Friday.

The third-seeded Titan (33-23) will go on to face the winner of Friday's late game between top-seed Stanford and No. 4 Wright State.

Fullerton, which has won four national titles, is making its 27th straight appearance in the postseason.

Colton Eastman (10-3) went seven innings, allowing two runs on four hits with eight strikeouts for the win. Blake Workman allowed just one hit through the final two innings for his fifth save.

Cody Bradford (7-6) allowed both runs on eight hits over six innings for second-seeded Baylor (36-20), which was coming off its first Big 12 title in school history.

T.J. Raguse dropped a two-out fly ball to left that allowed two runs to score in Fullerton's three-run ninth to seal it.

Chilean teenager shares lead with Tiger at Memorial

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ohio — Joaquin Niemann could figure out where Tiger Woods was on the golf course from the mass of people following him a few groups ahead, and he had a pretty good idea what he was doing from all the noise, at least before Woods put a putter in his hands.

"There was so many people," Niemann said.

The few that stuck behind for the 19-year-old Chilean saw another good show.

In his fifth start as a pro, Niemann finished with two birdies over his last three holes for a 4-under 68 and a share of the lead with Kyle Stanley, who had a 66. He finished with an 8-foot birdie on the 18th hole.

Woods made Muirfield Village sound like a rock concert until storms arrived. He holed out with a sand wedge from 97 yards for eagle on the par-5 11th hole, and then his tee shot on the par-3 12th struck the flag waving in the wind and settled 6 feet behind the hole.

And then he sat out a weather delay that lasted just under 90 minutes, and he missed four putts under 7 feet the rest of the way.

"It could have been easily a nice little 62 or 63," Woods said. "I turned it into a 67."

And he was six shots behind with nearly two dozen players in front of him.

Stanley, who won the Quicken Loans National last summer, was atop the leaderboard for much of the day and was starting to pull away until a poor tee shot at No. 6 led to bogey. He finished with a par save from just off the ninth green and reached 11-under 133.

MCS grad Little, Jung represent Texas Tech on All-American team

From staff reports

LUBBOCK — Midland Christian grad Grant Little and Josh Jung, both sophomores on the Texas Tech baseball team, have been named second team All-Americans by Baseball America, the publication announced Thursday.

It was the first time since 1998 that a Red Raider duo was recognized by the outlet and third time Texas Tech has had two players on the list in the same year.

Shane Wright and Josh Bard were the last duo to appear on the same list, as third team members, while Jason Gooding, Joe Dillon and Keith Ginter all made the second team squad in 1997.

Jung and Little's distinctions also make it the third-straight year the Red Raiders have been represented by the publication, as Eric Gutierrez (first team) and Steven Gingery (first team) were recognized in 2016 and 2017, respectively. Overall, Texas Tech has had 15 All-America honorees from Baseball America.

Little

Little, an outfielder, had 79 hits, 67 RBI and 58 runs to go with a team-high 20 doubles and 12 homers prior to the start of Friday's NCAA Tournament.

Little also made history this year, throwing down the team's only nine-RBI performance of the year and third in school history.

He rattled off two homers, including a grand slam along with two other base hits, to become the first Red Raider since 1984 with nine RBI in a game. He also had the first five-hit game of the year at Louisville on March 13 and launched two dingers again at Oklahoma State on May 18.

Jung, the third baseman from San Antonio, leads the team in several offensive categories heading into postseason play, topping the squad in batting average.

He also paces the Red Raiders in hits (86), RBI (73) and runs scored (63). He also leads the conference in each of those categories, while ranking fifth in the country in RBI.

Earlier this season, Jung recorded the program's first cycle in a decade, making him the sixth Red Raider to do so. His was the first to come with a 5-for-5 day at the plate, with two homers, along with eight RBI.

Coahoma, Stanton well represented on All-District 5-3A team

From staff reports

Nine Coahoma and Stanton baseball players earned superlative or first team recognition on the All-District 5-3A baseball team released Friday.

Coahoma senior Logan Franklin was named the district's Co-Pitcher of the Year along with Tuscola Jim Ned freshman Cagan Evans. This season Franklin posted a 2.22 earned run average on the mound, helping the Bulldogs to reach the bi-district round of the Class 3A playoffs.

Franklin

Stanton freshman Evan Cox was named to the first-team pitching staff, while Coahoma senior Zach Holmes, Stanton sophomore Garrett Vanderdeen and Stanton junior Noe Ureste were named to the first-team infield.

Stanton senior Andrew Wheeler earned a bid to the first-team outfield; Coahoma senior Braden Pearson was named as a first-team utility player, along with Stanton sophomore David Ochoa.

Coahoma sophomore Gaige Hill was honored as a first-team catcher.

Oklahoma's Parker among greatest college softball pitchers

By Cliff Brunt
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — Oklahoma's Paige Parker is closing out one of the great college softball pitching careers.

As a sophomore in 2016, she was the Most Outstanding Player of the Women's College World Series as she helped the Sooners win the national title. Last season, she was a key figure as the Sooners repeated. Now, she's trying to help Oklahoma join UCLA as the only schools to win three straight national titles.

"She's been the face of our program since she stepped on it," Oklahoma coach Patty Gasso said. "She kind of grabbed the torch from Keilani (Ricketts) and said, 'I'll take it from her,' and she's done a great job."

After eight career WCWS wins, she finally took a loss Thursday against Washington . That means Saturday's elimination game against Arizona State could be the last time she takes the circle for the Sooners.

"It's just about just making a change mentally and just being ready to go out on the field and give it your all and leave nothing out there," she said.

Parker was one of four finalists for the USA Softball Collegiate Player of the Year and was selected by the USSSA Pride in the first round of the National Pro Fastpitch League draft. She is one of 34 players to be chosen to one of the three National Fastpitch Coaches Association All-America teams all four years of her college career.

"It's truly a blessing to be a four-time All-American," she said. "This is something that you only dream about. Very, very blessed and just can't thank my family enough for always being there for me, and my coaches and teammates."

Parker went 28-7 as a freshman and matched a Division I record with four perfect games. She went 38-3 as a sophomore, collected five wins at the World Series and led the nation in victories. She went 26-5 as a junior and won three more World Series games. She's 29-3 as a senior and posted by far the best earned run average of her career. She entered the Women's College World Series with an ERA of 0.86, second in the nation.

"I think just taking a mindset coming into this year, knowing it was my last year, it was just to go out and give it my all and pitch fearlessly," she said.

Springer dash, drive send Cole, Astros over Sale, Bosox 7-3

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

HOUSTON — George Springer dashed home from second base on a wild pitch by Chris Sale, then homered off the Boston ace to send the Houston Astros over the Red Sox 7-3 Friday night in a matchup of AL division leaders.

Springer finished with three hits, and Carlos Correa and Evan Gattis homered late to boost the Astros.

Mitch Moreland and J.D. Martinez hit back-to-back homers off Gerrit Cole (6-1) to start the fourth inning and get within 4-3. Moreland's homer was a towering shot to straightaway center field that hit the "H" in the Astros' logo on the wall, while Martinez hit his major league-leading 19th homer.

Springer's sprint put the Astros ahead in the first inning. With runners at first and second and one out, Sale threw a hard slider that Correa swinging for strike three. But the ball bounced off catcher Sandy Leon's glove and caromed toward the first base dugout, and Springer hustled home on the wild pitch.

Springer hit his 12th home run in the third as Houston built a 4-1 lead.

Cole won his fourth straight decision, giving up three runs and five hits in seven innings. He struck out seven, raising his AL-leading total to 116.

Sale (5-3) lost his second in a row, allowing four runs in six innings. He struck out six, giving him 110 this season.

Houston Astros' George Springer (4) celebrates with Evan Gattis (11) after scoring against the Boston Red Sox during the first inning Friday in Houston.

Correa, who entered Thursday's game in an 0-for-10 slump, homered for the second straight game against Boston when he hit a solo drive in the eighth off Joe Kelly. It was just the second run Kelly had allowed in his last 24 outings and he'd retired 24 straight batters before the homer.

Kelly then walked Yuli Gurriel, and Gattis homered to left-center.

The Red Sox, who have baseball's best record at 39-19, lost their second straight game on a night where they were missing major league batting leader Mookie Betts, who was placed on the disabled list before the game. Boston had hoped that Betts was nearing a return after missing the last six games, but instead put him on the disabled list just before the game because of an abdominal strain.

Boston second baseman Dustin Pedroia, who has played just three games this season, sat out for the second straight game because of soreness in his surgically repaired left knee.

Trainer's room

Red Sox: Manager Alex Cora isn't sure how long Pedroia will be out. "He's a big part of what we're trying to accomplish," Cora said. "We know what he brings to the table so we'll make sure he's healthy."

Astros: OF Josh Reddick, who is on the disabled list with an infection in his left knee, took early batting practice for the second straight day, but isn't expected to return during this series. But manager A.J. Hinch said he's improving and could begin a rehabilitation assignment soon.

Up next

Houston's Justin Verlander, who leads the majors with a 1.11 ERA, opposes David Price (5-4, 4.04) when the series continues on Saturday night. Verlander has won three straight and allowed just two runs combined in those games.

LUZARDO

outing to outing.

"If you have a tough start, you have to learn how to bounce back," said Luzardo, the first Peruvian-born player to be drafted since 1990. "A couple starts ago, I had a rough one and you just have to bounce back from it, stay on your routine and make adjustments as you go on."

Luzardo certainly had to make a major emotional adjustment earlier this year.

On Feb. 14, two days before reporting to the A's spring training facility in Arizona, he heard shattering news that his alma mater Douglas High School had been the site of a tragic shooting that left 17 of his former schoolmates dead and 17 others injured.

Luzardo had moved to Parkland from Peru at the age of 1. There is a special place in his heart for the community and the school, where he first honed his skills as a hurler.

He said the grieving process was difficult, as he knew many of the victims and their friends and families. But as it was two years before with his recovery from surgery, it was the joy of baseball that helped him turn the page.

"It was tough," he said of learning of the tragedy. "You have to soak it in a little bit and grieve – but getting away from it and getting to baseball every day was good for me. It motivated me."

Now, Luzardo is on a mission to reach "The Show" but also to make all those back home proud. On the mound, he competes with a fire that he gleaned from watching Venezuelan legends Johan Santana and Felix Hernandez over the years.

"I was raised there and I want to make a good name for Parkland," he said. "I want people to remember Parkland for the great school, great people and great baseball players."

NCAA

CHAPEL HILL — Lael Lockhart Jr. homered, Joe Davis drove in two runs and Houston beat Purdue 9-1 on Friday night in the NCAA Tournament.

Lockhart's three-run homer in the ninth helped the third-seeded Cougars (37-23) advance to face North Carolina, the tournament's No. 6 overall seed, on Saturday night after the second-seeded Boilermakers (37-20) face North Carolina A&T in an elimination game.

Houston scored the game's final nine runs, all in the final five innings, and had 15 hits. Tyler Bielamowicz gave the Cougars a 2-1 lead with his run-scoring sacrifice fly in the fifth, and Davis hit two-run double an inning later.

Aaron Fletcher (7-3) went the distance, allowing four hits and no earned runs. Tanner Andrews (7-5) gave up four runs on seven hits in five innings for Purdue.

Harry Shipley drove in Purdue's run with an infield hit in the third.

Holtby's playoff dominance goes beyond 'the save'

By Stephen Whyno
Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Va. — Alex Ovechkin covered his eyes with his gloved hands in disbelief. Barry Trotz hid his disbelief inside.

Chandler Stephenson had the perfect view and didn't like the odds. The net was wide open and Braden Holtby reached his stick across and stopped Alex Tuch's shot in the final minutes to save the game.

"I thought, 'Oh, no, no, no,'" Stephenson said. "And then his paddle was there and he made the save and I just couldn't believe it."

Holtby's unbelievable move might go down as one of the most important moments in Stanley Cup history. It allowed the Washington Capitals to even the final against the Vegas Golden Knights and served as further evidence of Holtby's dominant playoff run.

Most of the buzz going into the Cup Final surrounded Vegas goaltender Marc-Andre Fleury, a deserved Conn Smythe favorite who already has two championship rings. But Holtby stole the show in making 37 saves in Game 2 and returned to his career-long playoff dominance after allowing five goals on 33 shots in a Game 1 that was far from goalie-friendly. It's the kind of play his Capitals teammates have come to expect this time of year.

"The guy's just a machine," defenseman Matt Niskanen said. "Boy, has he been good. Making the saves that he's supposed to make look really routine and he's made some game changers — none better than the one with a couple minutes left in Game 2."

Holtby is not impressed.

Trotz has watched "the save" a handful of times, and Holtby has analyzed it but believes "there's a lot more saves that I've made even these two games that I like a lot more than that one." The laser-focused 2016 Vezina Trophy winner is far more worried about how to not need to make that desperate of a stop in Game 3 Saturday night and beyond.

"You hope that next time you get more of your body behind it and give it less chance of going in," Holtby said Friday. "You try and find little areas where you can limit the chance of the puck going in instead of just hoping it doesn't."

The 28-year-old doesn't make saves on hope. Since he made his NHL playoff debut as a rookie in 2012, Holtby has a 2.04 goals-against average and .929 save percentage — fourth- and second-best all-time among goalies with at least 50 games of experience.

In other words, Holtby is no one-save pony. In these playoffs, he's 13-7 with a 2.19 GAA and .921 save percentage since replacing Philipp Grubauer in Game 2 of the first round.

"Thank God he's our goalie," Ovechkin said. "He's over there when we need him."

Holtby wasn't where he needed to be in February, when he had a stretch of 11 games in which he allowed 41 goals and took some time off to "reset." He worked with goaltending coach Scott Murray on some technical adjustments, got his mind right and has felt a noticeable change since.

"It was more a mental thing," Holtby said. "Every year's different, every situation, and I was just getting to a point where I was seeing the play one step ahead of it instead of waiting for it to come, and just being a little bit more patient and expecting the unexpected."

It doesn't get more unexpected than the weird bounce late in Game 2 that preceded his save on Tuch. Maybe that puck goes in 99 times out of 100, but Holtby has shown the ability to make the unpredictable save that stuns friends and foes alike.

"Saves like the one in the third period definitely make him a tough goaltender to beat," former Capitals and current Golden Knights defenseman Nate Schmidt said. "He's never out of a save. He's a guy that can recover well, he's got quick feet and he's just very athletic."

From the other end of the rink, Fleury — who has allowed seven goals in the series and not been nearly as unbeatable as he was in the first three rounds — can admire Holtby's play even if he doesn't like it.

"I think it's an awesome save," Fleury said. "I don't appreciate it, though. I'd rather it be a goal."

Holtby has done a spectacular job of not only limiting goals but making almost every save on shots he has been able to see. Even if teammates are watching through their fingers on the bench, they appreciate that and are uplifted by it.

"He steps up in the big moments," defenseman Christian Djoos said. "The saves he makes, in playoffs you need it."

NOTES: Capitals C Evgeny Kuznetsov took part in an optional practice after leaving Game 2 Wednesday clutching his left arm and not returning. Trotz said Kuznetsov had not been cleared, considers him day to day, and expects Washington's leading scorer to be a game-time decision. ... Capitals D Brooks Orpik, who took a slash from Erik Haula late in Game 2, had his left pinkie wrapped but expects to be able to continue playing. Orpik did not skate Friday. ... Vegas coach Gerard Gallant said F William Carrier is getting close and should "be available in the near future."

Player with PhD hitting aces in Paris

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

PARIS — After acing her studies enough to earn a Ph.D., Mihaela Buzarnescu is back to acing opponents — all the way into the fourth round of the French Open.

The 30-year-old Romanian was a promising junior before a shoulder injury slowed her progress in tennis. Later, two operations on her left knee interrupted a professional career, so she went to school in Bucharest for a degree in sports science. Now she's healthy, traded back in her backpack for a racket bag, has climbed more than 300 ranking spots in the last year and, on Friday, produced the biggest upset of the women's draw at Roland Garros so far.

Playing an aggressive style that produced a 31-11 edge in winners, Buzarnescu stunningly won 6-3, 7-5 against Elina Svitolina, who not only was seeded No. 4 — with a chance to get to No. 1 by tournament's end — but also was considered among a handful of serious title contenders.

"She was better," Svitolina said, "and that's why she got a win today."

Simple enough.

Buzarnescu described her success against Svitolina, who won the clay-court title in Rome two weeks ago and twice has been a French Open quarterfinalist, this way: "I only wanted to be aggressive and wait for the good shots and just go for it."

Next up for Buzarnescu will be a match Sunday against 13th-seeded Madison Keys, last year's U.S. Open runner-up, for a berth in the quarterfinals.

Other women advancing with victories Friday: No. 2 Caroline Wozniacki, No. 14 Daria Kasatkina, No. 26 Barbora Strycova and unseeded Yulia Putintseva. Matches involving two-time Wimbledon champion Petra Kvitova and reigning U.S. Open champ Sloane Stephens were postponed because of rain.

If it seems as if Buzarnescu arrived out of nowhere — "I don't know how to pronounce her last name," Keys said — it's because she basically did.

Knowing she would be sidelined for quite a while after her second knee surgery, Buzarnescu decided that if she was going to miss a total of about 2½ years on tour, she might as well devise a backup career plan.

So she went back to school and worked toward a doctorate degree.

"I said, 'Well, if I'm not going to play tennis,'" Buzarnescu recalled Friday, "'maybe it would help me on my resume to have a job somewhere in Romania or abroad.'"

Eventually, she felt fine, though, and returned to her sport.

About a year ago at this time, the left-hander was ranked 377th. After winning more than 75 matches in that span, most in lower-tier tournaments, she has climbed up to 33rd and is seeded 31st in Paris.

Romania's Mihaela Buzarnescu returns the ball to Ukraine's Elina Svitolina during their third round match of the French Open tennis tournament at the Roland Garros stadium Friday in Paris.

Until this week, she never had won so much as one Grand Slam main-draw match, going 0-2, with both losses against Wozniacki.

Turns out they were juniors together about a decade and a half ago.

"She was always a great player. She got a lot of injuries then. You know, had to fight her way back. I always knew that she had the level," Wozniacki said. "I knew that it's just a matter of time before her ranking goes up and she's seeded in these events."

Just as Wozniacki envisioned, Buzarnescu is now schooling opponents.

restricted area, which would make it a block. While James was clearly outside the restricted area, officials also had the chance to review whether James was in legal guarding position and changed the call to a block because they determined he turned his body and moved into Durant.

Then the game really went off the rails when Hill got fouled with 4.6 seconds left and the Cavs trailing by one. He made the first free throw to tie it, missed the second.

Smith grabbed the offensive rebound, but instead of putting it back up or passing to an open James up top, he dribbled toward half court and threw a pass, running out the clock.

Coach Tyronn Lue said after the game that Smith though the Cavs were ahead, although Smith said he knew the game was tied and was waiting for a timeout to be called. Lue said he talked to Smith about what happened, but wouldn't give an explanation.

Lue expects a big bounce-back performance in Game 2.

"J.R. can shake off anything, and when everybody tends to count J.R. out, that's when he comes through," Lue said. "So he's definitely going to start again. He's a big part of what we do. That last play is over, it's behind us, and now we've got to move on."

Hill said he couldn't sleep last night, reliving the missed free throw.

"I felt like the team did a great job. Put ourselves in a (position) to win the game. Me not hitting the free throw, I feel like cost our team the win. And I dealt with that last night," he said. "We're moving on as a team. We blew our chance, blew our opportunity. But we've got to focus on Game 2 now. It being one of the worst losses, got to kind of put it behind you now."

The Warriors had some questions of their own in terms of availability for Game 2. Thompson, who briefly left the series opener after Smith slid into his left leg, said he is still sore but feeling much better, and he doesn't expect any issues for Sunday.

Andre Iguodala remains doubtful as he tries to recover from a bone bruise in his left knee that has sidelined him for the past five games. Coach Steve Kerr said Iguodala is improving each day but still not expected to be healthy enough for Game 2.

Kerr's bigger concern is figuring out a way to make things tougher on James after he scored 51 points on 19-for-32 shooting in the opener, when he was able to repeatedly drive to the basket.

"I didn't think we were very good against him last night," Kerr said. "I thought he was spectacular, but I didn't think we made it that difficult for him. That's always the challenge when you play a great player. There is this balance between accepting that he's going to get his numbers, but making it difficult. I never felt like we got him out of any sort of comfort zone last night."

Team Penske flying high after another Indy 500 victory

By Noah Trister
Associated Press

DETROIT — Roger Penske rolls into this weekend's IndyCar races at Belle Isle on the heels of another Indianapolis 500 win.

He's not expecting the Detroit Grand Prix to be any sort of ceremonial victory lap.

"You win an Indy 500, you go to the next race, you're kind of the king of the hill for a while," Penske said. "But you get put down pretty quickly, because you're back, you're racing the same guys again. It's a new venue."

This next venue in Detroit means a lot to Team Penske, and although other drivers may be motivated to spoil the party, Penske's cars have been tough to beat so far in the IndyCar Series. Will Power's Indy 500 victory last weekend gave Penske's team its fourth win in six races this season.

"They treat us like family. They give us everything that we need to compete at a high level, and there's never a no when it comes to performance," said Simon Pagenaud, who won the IndyCar title for Penske in 2016. "We always try to improve. There's also good team spirit."

Pagenaud doesn't have an IndyCar victory this season, but teammate Josef Newgarden — last year's series champion — has two. Power has also won twice, including last weekend when he delivered Penske's team a 17th Indy 500 victory.

Carlos Osorio/Associated Press

Team Penske drivers Will Power, right, and Simon Pagenaud talk with Chevrolet engineers after a practice session Friday for the IndyCar Detroit Grand Prix auto racing doubleheader on Belle Isle in Detroit this weekend.

Those drivers nearly swept the top three spots in Indy 500 qualifying. Ed Carpenter prevented that by winning the pole. Newgarden and Pagenaud finished 1-2 in the points standings last year, and Pagenaud, Power and Helio Castroneves went 1-2-3 for Penske the previous season. Power tops the 2018 standings coming into this weekend's pair of races at Belle Isle, the first of which is Saturday.

"The Indy 500 is a big deal to everyone in the field, but Detroit is a huge deal to Team Penske as well," Newgarden said.

Penske and his wife live in the Detroit area, and his race promotions group operates this weekend's Grand Prix. The races are on Belle Isle's 2.35-mile street course, and Penske doesn't anticipate any major differences with the track this year.

"I think the track's the same," he said. "We don't want this thing to be the smoothest place in the world. We want it to be tough for these guys."

Team Penske leads all IndyCar teams with seven victories at the Detroit Grand Prix. Power and Castroneves gave Penske a sweep of the two races in 2014, but since then, the team has won only one of six IndyCar races at Belle Isle — Power's victory in 2016.

Newgarden had the fourth-fastest time in Friday's second practice session. Pagenaud was seventh and Power was 12th. Those three should have plenty of support throughout the weekend.

"This will be a great weekend for us," Penske said. "We use this, kind of our home track. We bring a lot of our people that work for us here for the weekend, both Saturday and Sunday. Overall, it's going to be terrific."

NOTES: Ryan Hunter-Reay was fastest in practice, followed by Scott Dixon. "Penske has put on a great show here," said Hunter-Reay, who drives for Andretti Autosport. "They've really brought this track a long way from where it was even four years ago, massive amounts. The braking zones are all really nice, and the passing opportunities are there. It's about everything you can ask for in a street course." ... James Hinchcliffe was third in practice. He missed the Indy 500 after being bumped from the field in qualifying.

Big 12 reports $365M revenue, increases for 12th year in row

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

IRVING — The Big 12 Conference had another record revenue year, and the money is expected to keep increasing in the near future.

In wrapping up its spring meetings Friday, the league announced revenue of nearly $365 million for the 2017-18 academic year. That is the 12th consecutive increase for the league.

"We take a look projecting out in the future, we have a very healthy revenue picture, but more importantly we have very healthy institutions working very hard to be together," said West Virginia President Gordon Gee, chairman of the league's board of directors.

For each of the league's 10 schools, that is an average of about $36.5 million for 2017-18. Commissioner Bob Bowlsby said there are some variances — a gap of about $2.5 million between the top and bottom of the league based on member participation subsidies.

That average is an increase from last year when the league generated about $348 million, or about $34.8 million per school. And it could increase into the range of $40 million per school next year.

"We're very competitive and we're 10 teams," Gee said. "I think the advantage of the Big 12 teams is we're only 10 teams. We're agile. Sometimes it's difficult to get 14 teams or 12 teams or people with different views. I know when I was the chairman of the Southeastern Conference, which I was for several years when I was at Vanderbilt, we would all agree on something and then as soon as we left, we'd disagree.

"I think there's a sense of a solidity about where we are right now, which is what I like the most."

The 14-team SEC still leads the way with an average distribution of about $41 million per school, with the Big Ten reportedly at $38.5 million per school. But the Big 12 is ahead of the Pac-12, with distributable revenue of about $31 million per school, and the ACC, whose 14 football schools got between $25.3 million and $30.7 million.

Revenue generated from eight Big 12 football teams going to bowl games, including Oklahoma making the College Football Playoff, and the return of the Big 12 football championship game help offset the loss of about $40 million revenue without a Sugar Bowl appearance. The Big 12 and SEC are matched up in the Sugar Bowl when that game isn't a national semifinal game like it was last season.

Bowlsby said the league's first football championship game in seven years, played at AT&T Stadium in Arlington, Texas, was worth about $30 million.

The Big 12 also had seven men's basketball teams make the NCAA Tournament, with Kansas going to the Final Four.

Third-tier broadcast rights, like what Texas gets from ESPN for the Longhorn Network, aren't included in the Big 12 revenue numbers, which Bowlsby said is different from the figures from the other Power Five Conferences.

"In the case of the University of Texas, as an example, I don't believe there's anybody in college athletics that's deriving more from their media ventures than Texas is, and that includes all of the other leagues," Bowlsby said. "That varies greatly in our conference from $1 million or so at some places to something approaching $20 million at UT."

The Big 12 is still withholding 25 percent of Baylor's revenue in escrow as the league verifies that the university is fully implementing 105 recommendations for reforming its Title IX process after a campus sexual assault scandal broke two years ago. That could be about $9 million this year.

"This wasn't about punishment, it was about all of us together working on a progress for one institution that will be helpful to all of us," Gee said. "They have been very cooperative, and obviously we feel very strongly that Baylor is a very fine and committed member of our conference and they have done a great deal in terms of governance and structure."

Smith stages another 67 at US Women's Open

By John Zenor
Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Sarah Jane Smith outpaced the thunderstorms and the rest of the field at the U.S. Women's Open.

The Australian extended her lead to four strokes after a second straight 5-under 67 Friday at Shoal Creek. Smith got her round in before a 2-hour, 49-minute delay caused by thunderstorms, weather that ultimately forced play to be halted with a little daylight left.

Now, she enters the weekend leading a major championship, unfamiliar territory, but also with 36 holes down. Other contenders like Thailand's Ariya Jutanugarn still must finish Round 2, which will be completed on Saturday with the low 60 scorers plus ties making the cut. Half the field didn't finish the round.

Smith is at 10-under 134 heading into the weekend after failing to make the cut in five of her previous six U.S. Women's Open tries.

"I haven't been in the position before, I but I hope to show up like it's another day," Smith said. "I'm happy with the way I'm playing. I feel comfortable on the greens which has been something that has been a little bit off lately. So it's nice to be able to feel like I'm seeing the greens really well and seeing some putts go in. Hopefully that keeps going."

Smith has staged a strong comeback after having missed the cut in five straight LPGA Tour events this year, even switching back to an old set of clubs.

She opened the day in a three-way tie atop the leaderboard with Jutanugarn and Korean Jeongeun6 Lee.

Jutanugarn had an opening birdie to move to 6 under through eight holes. Lee fell back to 2 under with a second-day 75. Korean-born Su-Hyun Oh shot 68 and is also 6 under.

Smith has played 5-under on the back nine holes each of the first two days and settled for par on the front. She had a 29-hole bogey-free streak end with a three-putt on No. 8 — she started on the 10th tee — a rare mistake for her at the midway point.

Duane Smith, his wife's caddie since qualifying school, could only compare her current play with a clutch Futures Tour performance to earn her Tour card a decade ago.

"She's playing so good," Duane Smith said. "Maybe years ago when she won the last event on the Futures Tour to get a card at the end of 2008. She had to win to get her card and she did and she opened up that nine holes, I think, 7-under on the front nine and then led the whole way. She played great that whole week but this is something totally different."

Oh, who was born in Korea but moved to Australia at age 8, had an eagle on the par-4 15th hole. She is still chasing Smith, along with everyone else.

was Niemann, the No. 1 amateur in the world and Latin American Amateur champion who wanted to play the Masters before turning pro. He looks his age when his braces shine every time he smiles. He plays beyond his years.

Already with a pair of top 10s on the PGA Tour, Niemann now finds himself in the last group going into the weekend at the tournament Jack Nicklaus built, and he doesn't appear to be the least bit nervous about being there.

"It feels really nice to be on top of the leaderboard," he said. "It does feel really nice for tomorrow."

Byeong Hun An had a 67 and was two shots behind.

Among those three off the lead were Hideki Matsuyama (71), who earned his first PGA Tour title at the Memorial three years ago, and Jason Day, a former world No. 1 who is a member at Muirfield Village and has never come close to winning. Perhaps this is the year. Day had never been within five shots of the lead going into the weekend at the Memorial, and he's not sure why.

"I think I just (stunk) on it for a long time," Day said. "I don't think there was anything, any reason why. I just didn't really play well. But I'm hopeful I can change that because I feel different this year.

"I want to play well in front of my family," he said. "Family and friends come out and I want them to be yelling in the crowd when I'm in contention."

Henrik Stenson and Justin Rose each had a 66 and were in the group at 7-under 137, while Dustin Johnson was among those at 138, even though he has played the par 5s in just 1 under for the week.

Johnson and Rose each have a chance to get to No. 1 in the world. Justin Thomas, in his debut at No. 1, overcame a pair of early bogeys for a 69 and was at 3 under.

Woods was another shot behind, and it looked as though he was about to post his lowest score of the year. He made the turn in 33 with a 15-foot birdie putt on No. 9, and then he made a solid escape from the rough and trees on No. 11 before holing out for eagle.

He missed birdie chances of 6 feet, 4 feet and 7 feet, and then missed from 3 feet for par on the 17th that left him exasperated.

And hopeful.

"I missed a lot of short putts, which is something I don't normally do, which is just frustrating," he said. "I've got to clean that up come this weekend and hopefully, I can get it going. Hopefully I can play well like this on the weekend and I've got a great chance of winning this tournament."

At least he has a chance.

Rory McIlroy made bogeys on both par 5s on the front nine as he tried to finish strong. He had to settle for a 70 and made the cut on the number. That was still better than Jordan Spieth, who finished bogey-bogey for a 72 and missed the cut by three shots.

Since his closing 64 at the Masters, Spieth has finished at least 12 shots behind the winner in his three tournaments and missed the cut in his final event before heading to Shinnecock Hills for the U.S. Open.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the PIONEER NATURAL RES. USA, INC., [RRC Operator No. 665748] has made application for a spacing exception permit under the provisions of Railroad Commission Statewide Rule 37 (16 Tex. Admin. Code section 3.37). Applicant seeks exception to the LEASE LINE requirement for the NEW DRILL permit in Sec. 37, Blk. 38 , T&P RR CO Survey, A-105, SPRABERRY (TREND AREA) Field, MIDLAND County, being 16.5 miles SE direction from MIDLAND, Texas.

PURSUANT TO THE TERMS of Railroad Commission rules and regulations, this application may be granted WITHOUT A HEARING if no protest to the application is received within the deadline. An affected person is entitled to protest this application. Affected persons include owners of record and the operator or lessees of record of adjacent tracts and tracts nearer to the proposed well than the minimum lease line spacing distance. If a hearing is called, the applicant has the burden to prove the need for an exception. A Protestant should be prepared to establish standing as an affected person, and to appear at the hearing either in person or by qualified representative and protest the application with cross-examination or presentation of a direct case. The rules of evidence are applicable in the hearing. If you have any questions regarding the hearing procedure, please contact the Commission's Docket Services Department at (512)463-6848. If you have questions which are specific to the Application or the information set forth in this Notice, please contact the Commission's Drilling Permit Unit at rule 37 (512)463-6791.

IF YOU WISH TO REQUEST A HEARING ON THIS APPLICATION, AN INTENT TO APPEAR IN PROTEST MUST BE RECEIVED IN THE RAILROAD COMMISSION'S AUSTIN OFFICE AT THE ADDRESS, FAX NUMBER, OR E-MAIL ADDRESS SET OUT ABOVE BY Jun 20, 2017 at 5:00 p.m. IF NO PROTEST IS RECEIVED WITHIN SUCH TIME, YOU WILL LOSE YOUR RIGHT TO PROTEST AND THE REQUESTED PERMIT MAY BE GRANTED ADMINISTRATIVELY.

THIS NOTICE OF APPLICATION REQUIRES PUBLICATION
