LIQUOR RULING GIVEN

Drunk Man On Search Premises Has Chances To Prove Innocence

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 2.—If the state in a liquor trial allowed to prove that a drunk man was found on premises searched for evidence of unlawful possession of liquor, the defendant should not be denied an attempt to explain the intoxication, the court of criminal appeals ruled Wednesday.

On the strength of this and the absence of a search warrant, the court, in an opinion by Justice A. H. Martin, newly appointed commissioner member from Plainview, suggested and remanded to Tom Green county for a new trial.

TOURISTS STRANDED

Snow Drifts Clog Traffic Routes To And From Wyoming Town At Top Continental Divide

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 2.—The Town of Medicine Bow, Wyo., on the summit of the continental divide, is flooded with stranded motorists and has passengers, Jack Rawlins, driver of one of the stranded buses reported into the Salt Lake office of the Bluffway line by telephone tonight.

A three day blizzard which seems to have centered about Medicine Bow has drifted the roads so deep with snow that passage is impossible. Rawlins reported. Rawlins was driver of the bus which was stranded when it hit a high tension wire. He reported that none of his passengers were injured and said that one from his bus was lost as reported in earlier dispatches from Ogden.

'Talk' Of Young Juror Brings Mistrial Order In Sinclair Oil Case

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Another startling chapter in the dramatic story of the naval oil leases was closed today with the declaration of a mistrial in the hearing of criminal conspiracy charges on two of the foremost actors in the long drama—Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair.

A grand jury will write new history in its investigation of charges of jury tampering before the former interior secretary and the multimillionaire oil operator and sportsman come to the bar of justice again for a new trial, probably in January.

Meantime these principals in a celebrated case have been crowded completely out of the spotlight by a hitherto obscure young leather stocker, who probably never has seen his name in a newspaper.

Justice Frederick L. Siddons singled him out to inform him that certain affidavits touching his conduct as a juror had been presented to the court and that he could read them. That was all from the court for the time being and if Justice Siddons contemplates any contempt procedure he has given no indication of that intention.

Kidwell, described in reports of detectives of the Burns agency who for days and nights tracked him and slighted other men and the two women of the jury as a "wild young man who had settled down some," left the jury box with the others as Justice Siddons adjourned court, but his fellows snubbed him.

LIMIT FIXED ON SEMINOLE POOL MAY BE RAISED

PRODUCTION DROPS TO BELOW 400,000 BARRELS MARK

POOL WAS PROBLEM

OIL MEN ATTRIBUTED TO AREA DECLINE IN CRUDE PRICES

(By Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 2.—The Seminole oil field where prodigious production in the last several months caused restrictions to be placed upon it, is now in the position of a worn out motor car trying to make the maximum speed limit, it was said tonight by W. J. Armstrong, chief conservation officer for the Oklahoma corporation commission.

Armstrong, who has been in charge of restriction work, and Fred Capshaw, chairman of the corporation commission, said it probably would not be necessary to renew the order holding production of the Seminole area to 400,000 barrels per day when the order expires November 5.

The Seminole area yesterday fell to a production of less than 400,000 barrels a day for the first time since early last summer. The figures for the period ended at 7 a. m. Tuesday showed a production of 393,573 barrels.

In its heyday the area produced as much as 527,287 barrels a day, which was found "wisely" by the board meeting date and prescribed its procedure. He said the law removes the "tax rate from the uncertainty of political campaigns," curbing promises of reductions.

In asking the opinion, Governor Moody said that the law governing the board did not allow it to anticipate the $2,000,000 treasury surplus and increased prison farm revenues developing later. Because of these developments, he suggested cutting the 25-cent ad valorem rate set in July to about 20 cents, saving taxpayers "millions of dollars."

The governor said Wednesday that a need is shown for an amendment to the tax board law.

STUDENT DECLARES MAN IDENTIFIED WAS NOT ACCUSED SLAYER

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Nov. 2.—Blake N. Lancaster of Lockhart, 21-year-old Texas university student, tonight signed an affidavit which counsel for A. V. Millikin, found same by a Caldwell jury Tuesday, and scheduled for electrocution Friday, for the murder of Mrs. Virginia Petty of San Antonio, destroys at least one link in the circumstantial evidence chain which convicted Millikin.

Lancaster, who is "working his way through the university, swears that a man he saw in a New Braunfels cafe, allegedly having been identified as Millikin in the murder trial, early on the morning of May 22, 1926, was not Millikin. He reached that conclusion, he said, after seeing Millikin at the murder trial last year. Mrs. Petty was killed near New Braunfels on May 22.

Alfred Schulte, employe of the restaurant, testified that the man he saw there was Millikin, the trial transcript revealed tonight. Lancaster said in his affidavit that he was with Schulte when the man apparently in question "came in."

Mrs. Petty was killed near New Braunfels. Lawrence Gist, Houston, and W. C. Hawkins, Breckinridge, the same attorneys, said they will take the affidavit to Governor Moody as grounds for clemency. They said it probably would be of no avail because of technicalities, as basis for a new trial motion.

Both indicated they may take the case to the United States supreme court on the refusal of Judge M. C. Jeffrey to appoint a jury commission to select the jury which tried the sanity issue.

Meanwhile, Ginn and Hawkins tonight requested the court to grant a writ of habeas corpus to the District Attorney Fred Blundell Sheriff W. M. Ellison and Constable Gus England all of Caldwell county, because the officers, before and during Millikin's sanity trial, took Millikin to Austin over protest, to be examined.

Officers of the bank would not make any statement in reference to the complaints made at West Texas meetings recently, stating that they wish to avoid causing the bank to be brought into any controversy and feel that the matter is entirely in the hands of the directors. While the special committee has no part in the actual direction of the bank, it acts in an ex-officio capacity, and would be the proper body to hear the complaints, they said.

Officers Baffled Over Identity Of Texan's Assailant

(By The Associated Press)

TEMPLE, Tex., Nov. 2.—The body of James A. Wilson, 55, who had been missing from his home near Florence, Williamson county, since Friday, was taken from Little River near the Temple-Holland highway Wednesday afternoon bearing what officers said was evidence of foul play.

Hands and feet of Wilson had been bound and a heavy weight tied to the neck which apparently had been broken. The body was nude and apparently an attempt had been made to weight it down.

Elmer Wilson, a son, and Constable Nick Bailes, brother-in-law of the dead man, identified the body at a morgue here early Wednesday night.

Wilson was last seen alive Friday and officers said they were without a clue to the identity of his possible assailants. He was not known to have had any enemies. He worked as a carpenter here and at Belton.

The body was found by two Temple school boys who were hunting on the river. It was badly decomposed.

MATADORS PUT THROUGH STIFF SCRIMMAGE

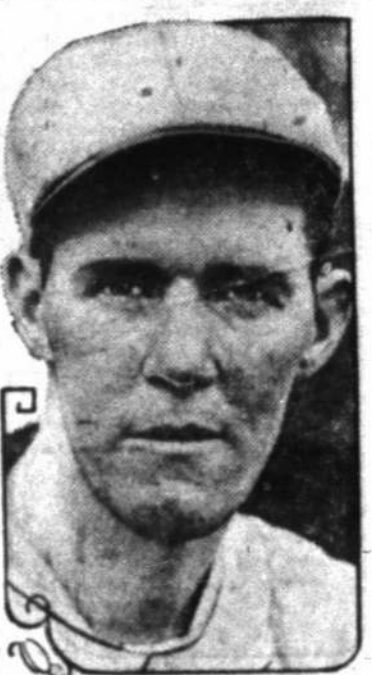

HILL BILLIES ARE DUE TO REACH CITY TODAY

Coch Ewing Y. Freeland isn't going to take any chances with the Daniel Baker game here Saturday for he is going to have plenty of drive in store for the Goats. Yesterday afternoon he rubbed his Matador recruits through a stiff scrimmage—a scrimmage that tasted of real blood and when the Tornado clash with the Brownwood collegiates here on the Tech Athletic field the "big fellow" intends to have a fighting combination in the contest. For one hour the recruits of the Dan Baker machine worked under pressure. It was a matter of fact a game—the variety club versus the reserves.

Some very efficient graders came through in the scrimmage and it is likely they will check in several quarters of play before the season is concluded.

Brothers, who worked at hulk in the scrimmage, toted the ball for good gains and proved worthy of good defense action. "Chub" Taylor, former member of the John Tarleton Plovers, too, ranned the line and worked a good defensive game in the skirmish at fullback. Charley Woodruff, brother of the Floyd, flashy backfield man of the Matadors, for his quota of tackles while in the scrimmage.

Gaston Traded By St. Louis Browns

MILTON GASTON

In an effort to strengthen his pitching staff for next year, Buck Harris, Washington manager, recently traded Outfielder Earl McNeely and Pitcher Dick Coffman to the St. Louis Browns for Milton Gaston. McNeely saw little service this year, while Coffman is a rookie hurler. Gaston has shown promise of greatness.

SLATTERY MADE MANAGER OF BRAVES

(By Associated Press) BOSTON, Nov. 2.—John T. Slattery, Boston college baseball coach, Braves scout and former Harvard baseball coach, has been appointed manager of the Boston Braves, succeeding Dave Bancroft, resigned. Fred E. Fuchs, of the Braves, announced tonight. Slattery's contract is for one year and no salary was mentioned in the announcement of his appointment. Slattery, who began as a catcher for the Red Sox in 1902, is now under contract to Boston college as baseball coach there. He is expected, however, to give his full time to the Braves in whose harness he has worked for the last five years as scout, while holding coaching berths at Harvard and Boston college. He is 45 years old.

Dave Bancroft, for four years manager of the Braves was unconditionally released to Brooklyn on October 14. Details of the transactions were somewhat hazy at the time, but Judge Fuchs intimated that there was no cash involved in the transaction and that Bancroft's own desire to turn in his uniform with the Braves and transfer to a New York club prompted the change.

ARMOUR, HAGEN REACH THIRD BRACKET

(By Associated Press) CEDAR CREST COUNTRY CLUB, DALAS, Texas, Nov. 2.—America's two reigning golf champions, Walter Hagen and Tommy Armour, had little difficulty in stroking their way into the third round of the Professional Golfers Association tournament here today, but other stars who gained the quarter finals found rough going and one outstanding favorite was eliminated.

Al Espinosa of Chicago, Mortie Dutra, of Tacoma, Wash., Gene Sarazen, of New York, Joe Turnesa, of New York, Francis Gallet of Watonsau, Wis., and John Golden, of Patterson, N. J., entered the charmed circle with Hagen and Armour. Harry Cooper of Los Angeles, a former Dallas boy and a heavy favorite, fell 5 to 4 before the veteran Espinosa. Hagen had a walk-away beating Anthony Manera, of New York, 11 and 10, and Armour defeated Tom Harmon, of Yonkers, New York, 7 to 6. Dutra, however, was carried to the last green to down Charles Crest of Hollywood, 2 up, and Joe Turnesa trailed all day to win one up on the 46th hole from Willie Klein, of East Williston, N. Y. Gallet beat Ralph Beach, Bethesda, Maryland, 2 up, on the last green and Golden was carried to the 47th green to down Harold Long, of Raleigh, N. C.

Sarazen led most of the way to eliminate Ed Dudley, Van Nuys, Calif., 4 and 3.

One of the two big champions competing must drop out tomorrow as the draw pits against Armour in what should prove the best match of the tournament to date. Other favorites also will fall tomorrow. Dutra must stroke his way through Willy Espinosa if he is to reach the semi-finals and Sarazen and Turnesa will fight it out in another match. Golden and Gallet are matched in the final bracket.

NAME BARNARD TO SUCCEED JOHNSON

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Ernest S. Barnard, of Cleveland, today was elected president of the American League, filling the office Ban Johnson vacated, when the former "czar" of organized baseball resigned after serving the league he organized for 27 years.

The American League club owners, unanimously chose Barnard, former president of the Cleveland Indians, for a term of three years. Although the salary figure was not made public, it is believed to be approximately $40,000 a year, the same as Johnson was receiving when he decided to retire. Barnard also was made treasurer of the league.

William Merridge, who for five years, acted as private secretary to Johnson, was elected secretary of the league, a newly created position. Merridge's term also is for three years. Previously Johnson held all three positions.

No Policy Change

The new American League head, who started his career in sports as a 16 year old football coach, decided to continue the high ideals of baseball management created by Johnson. He said he always had been in thorough accord with Mr. Johnson's principles and so long as he remains president of the American League, there will be no change in this general policy.

The headquarters of the league will be maintained in Chicago with President Barnard taking up the duties immediately. Up to the time the club owners went into session today, Barnard was the president of the Cleveland club, a position he held since 1922, when the death of James C. Dunn, at that time chief stockholder, Barnard resigned this office to become president of the league.

Today's meeting of the American League Club Owners was harmonious, except when it came to the adoption of a resolution expressing recognition and appreciation of the long and valuable service rendered by Mr. Johnson as president of the league. All the club owners, with the exception of Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, signed the resolution.

The NUT CRACKER by Joe Williams

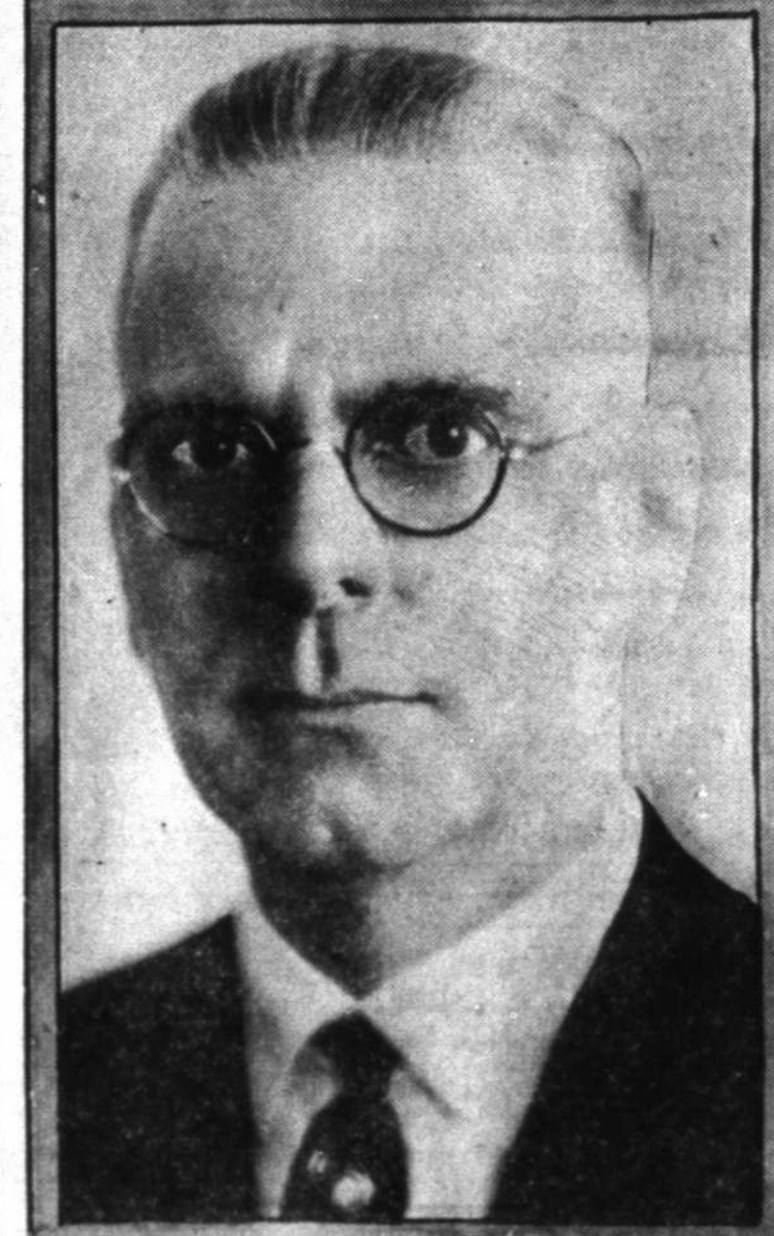

"Speaker to the Brave," says a headline, which is just what he'll have to be if he takes the Boston management.

Anyway, he'll have plenty of competition from Bill Carrigan, Red Sox pilot, who has proved he can be as brave as the next guy.

Mrs. Laque, in her divorce suit against the Cuban pitcher, claims he best her every time he lost a ball game. Mrs. Laque reports the senior was never stung with the blows.

Mr. O'Grady, who reads only the headlines, figures this guy Ruth ought to be satisfied with 60 home runs and not go in for any ocean flying business.

Ernest S. Barnard Succeeds Johnson Cleveland Man American League Head

After having been connected in various capacities with the Cleveland American League club since 1901, Ernest S. Barnard is the newly-elected president of the American League, succeeding Ban Johnson, resigned.

Barnard was born in West Columbia, W. Va., in 1874. He graduated from Otterbein College in 1895 and later coached the Otterbein football team, gaining a brilliant victory over the Ohio State eleven while there.

Darkness Cannot Stop Grid Games

BY E. J. O'BRIEN Famous Football Referee.

It is not generally known among football fans that a football game cannot be called because of darkness.

The true, the umpire of a baseball game may call a game because of the interference of the elements, but the referee of a football game has no such power.

The length of periods are agreed upon before the start of the game and as a rule they are played through to a finish.

The referee has this power, however, that if he feels there is any likelihood of the game being interfered with by darkness, he shall, before the game begins, arbitrarily shorten the four periods to such length as will insure four equal periods being completed.

He has the same power at the beginning of the second half, but only with the consent of the two captains.

If a fourth quarter is unexpectedly drawn out he has no authority at present to call the game, no matter how dark it may be.

TY COBB SEVERES WITH MACKMEN FOR 1927

(By Associated Press) PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—Ty Cobb will not be with the Philadelphia Athletics next year. As soon as waivers are received on him from all American League clubs, he will be free to negotiate with any baseball club whose offer for his services next year looks tempting. Fresh from a hunting trip in the West Cobb called on Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics and conferred for an hour today on Ty's status with him. When it was over, Mack announced that baseball's colorful outfielder would not be with the Philadelphia Americans any longer.

"Cobb came to us last season under a very heavy contract," said Mack, "and we feel that we are unable to continue the big salary next year. I am very sorry that we will lose him. He is a great player. We like him on a hunting trip in the West Cobb called on Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics and conferred for an hour today on Ty's status with him. When it was over, Mack announced that baseball's colorful outfielder would not be with the Philadelphia Americans any longer."

It was said that Cobb's contract last season called for $200,000 and a bonus.

Mack further said that the Athletics would ask all the other clubs for waivers and when they are received Cobb will be given his unconditional release. Cobb would make no definite statement about retiring from baseball. He remarked, as he has said before, that he has been in the game 23 years and is thinking of the time when he would retire.

DIVERSIFICATION

A warning that diversification is not in itself a remedy for farm ills is sounded in the inaugural number of the Agricultural News Letter issued by the Agricultural Service of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to the 1,500 business organizations constituting its membership. "There is much need for a clear understanding of conditions which bring about a lack of diversification," its advice runs, "just as there is need for the exercise of the most careful judgment before springing at conclusions based upon such conditions. Diversification often is interpreted as calling for a general upheaval in the production program of a one-crop region. So often is it conceived that such a region which has suffered acutely as a result of low price levels, brought about by over-production of a single crop, has only to turn its back upon that crop and devote its energies to other production in order to gain the economic stability which it lacks. That is not diversification. It is plunging. And there may be just as much danger to a section from radically changing its cropping system as from too intensive production of the long established commodity. Commercial organizations laboring to improve the status of their trade-area agriculture proceeds with great care before advocating diversification in such a way as to stampede a community into wholesale production of some commodity which might very easily run into stiff competition from other regions where the production and marketing problems long since have been solved."

All of which is true: Along with diversification must go adequate marketing facilities. This newspaper has urged co-operative marketing of farm products as probably the best solution of the farmer's problem. In Waco business interests have set in operation an association that is just now of inestimable value to agricultural interests alike. Styled the Agricultural Development Association, the organization operates toward that end, and none other as it furthers the aims of a simply-stated program. (1) Standardization of a balanced farm program and (2) provision of adequate competitive markets. The A. D. A. is less than one year old, yet students of agricultural and commercial activities are already delving into the possibilities that this association, accepted as a success, might be extended into all the state. The fame of the organization has spread because there is accomplishment already recorded, most out-standing of which perhaps is the fact that cream export from the county was increased from nothing in 1926 to 139,770 pounds in the first five months of the Association's life. That item alone supplied a lot of ready cash for the farmers, cash which they had not before known, and it was distributed in "weekly pay checks" as the flow of dollars reversed itself and emptied into this fertile country. The egg problem was a simple matter. Experts operated among the locks to create a standard egg that now brings six cents per dozen more than any other product on the market. But those two instances do not represent all the Association has accomplished since its inception in February of this year.

A NEW PRESIDENT

It is only about a year now until the people of the United States will select a new President, who will guide the affairs of the nation, and in the White House for four years. We say a new President because it seems certain now that President Coolidge means what he says and will not be a candidate for the nomination and will not likely be nominated. It would seem that there is an inclination to elect a Western man if possible. Sentiment for Charles E. Hughes has dwindled because of his defeat in 1916, his residence East, and his declaration last spring (before Coolidge withdrew) that he was "too old to run." There are now three distinct groups actively seeking to name the Republican nominee. The elements closest to Mr. Coolidge seemingly prefer Secretary of Commerce

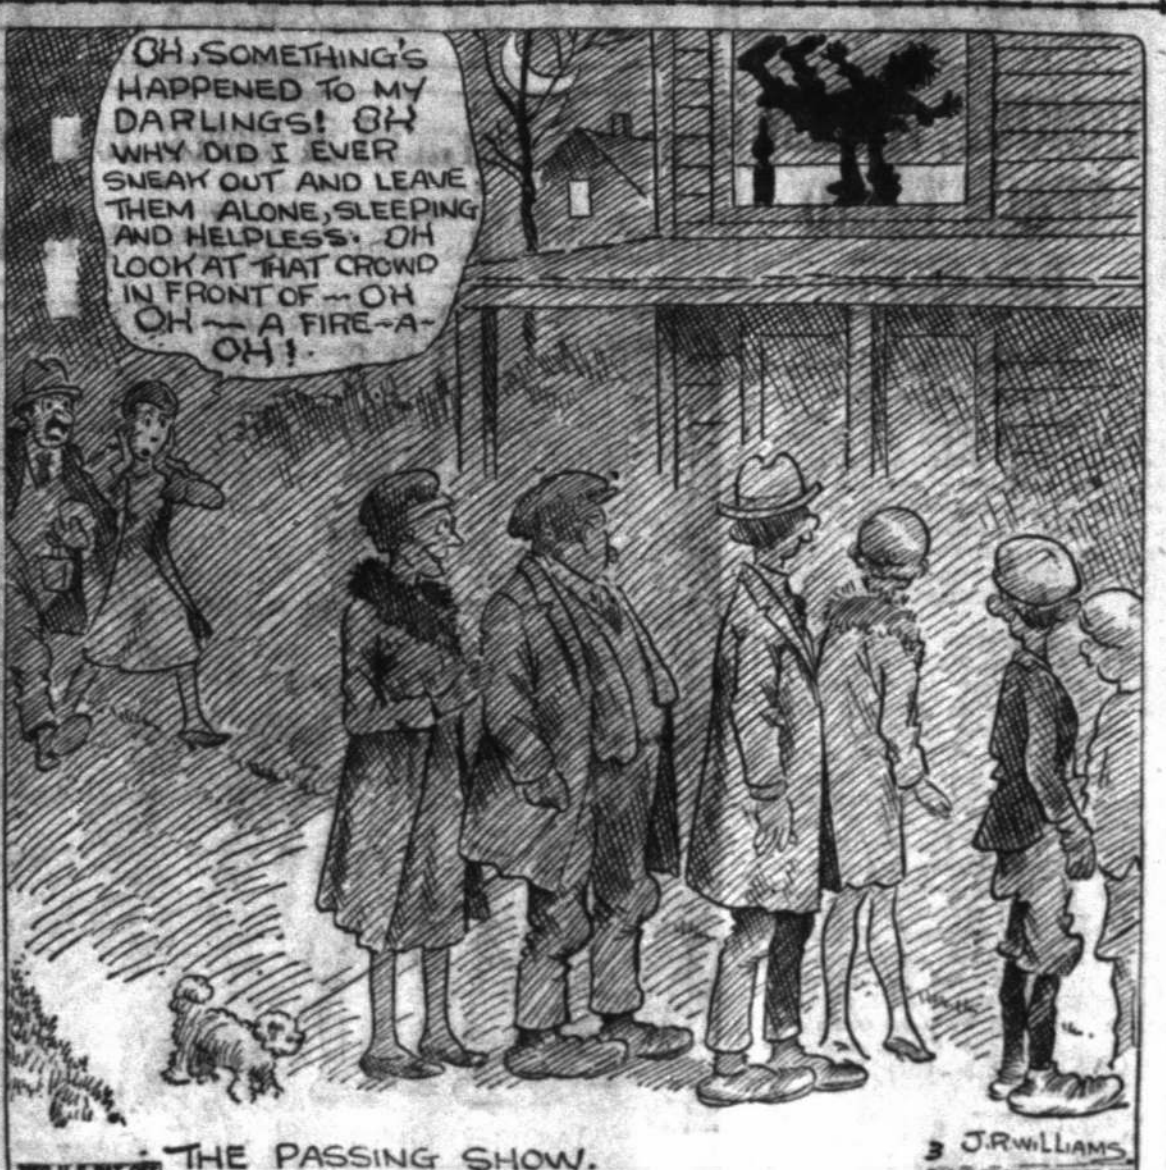

Herbert Hoover. Hoover qualifies as a Westerner although in political sympathies especially acceptable to the industrial East. He has been particularly hostile to farm relief legislation of the McNary-Haugen type, and many Western farmers also charge that his policies as Food Administrator during the World War were unfair. A man of wide experience in business, displaying real genius in his War work in Belgium, and with a vast fund of technical information relating to commerce and industry, his aim would be to give us a business administration. He is rather cold and reserved and has the mental habit of an investigator rather than a partisan. A second powerful group, particularly strong in the West, is supporting Hon. Frank O. Lowden, the able and popular ex-Governor of Illinois. Having large farming interests himself, he has been especially active in arousing the country to the necessity for doing something to carry out his party's platform pledge as to agriculture in 1924. The Republican platform of that year, it will be remembered, pledged the party to "the development and enactment of measures which will place the agricultural interests of America on a basis of economic equality with other industries." As one plan for carrying out this pledge, Governor Lowden supported the McNary-Haugen bill, for which Eastern industrial interests will not forgive him. Still a third group led by Senator Borah and other progressive Western Senators, insists on a candidate more progressive or radical than Governor Lowden has yet declared himself to be, Senator George W. Norris being the present choice of this faction.

In the opinion of many observers, all these things are working to the advantage of Vice-President Charles G. Dawes as a compromise candidate. He is a man of Rooseveltian energy, outspoken, and aggressive. He is a Westerner. He was for the McNary-Haugen bill but not conspicuous in the fight. He is a banker and is popular with great banking and industrial interests. While the various contenders for the republican nomination are working energetically, they are working without bitterness. On the other hand, the contest for the Democratic nomination has already called forth an intensity of feeling probably unparalleled in the history of the party. The voluntary withdrawal of Wm. G. McAdoo from the Presidential race has left dry Democrats without one conspicuous contender for the nomination, and followers of Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York are already claiming that their hero is sure to be named. He has had a spectacular rise from bitter poverty to high eminence—a career not unlike Lincoln's in this respect. He is a man of great personal magnetism, and even his enemies generally admit his honesty and ability as Governor of New York. But he is a Tammany man, a city-minded man, wet, and a Catholic. Concerning his religion, he has made a statement of loyalty to American institutions which has satisfied many former critics. Concerning the liquor question, however, while he has declared that he does not want a return to saloons, he has not indicated whether he would step much short of that.

Nor has Governor Smith spoken with clearness about other national issues. He is vitally concerned about international co-operation to end war, we have not heard of it. If he realizes that there is a farm problem or has definite plans for insuring "economic equality for agriculture," farmers have not found it out. Possessors of "swollen fortunes" in America are maintaining powerful lobbies and carrying on persistent campaign to abolish inheritance taxes—taxes on unearned wealth—and thereby throw more of the tax burden on labor; who knows whether Governor Smith is concerned about it? Our tariff law robs some groups of many millions, and pours uncounted millions into the laps of other groups, but Governor Smith at the recent New York Convention refused to discuss national issues. He even lets his friends debate as to whether he would or would not favor really enforcing the Volstead Act while it is on the statute books.

It is high time for friends of Governor Smith to insist that he speak out about these matters and high time to quit declaring that the South is against him only because of his religion. Plenty of Southerners who are against Governor Smith would be glad to vote for Senator Walsh, who is a Catholic but has let America know where he stands on law enforcement and progressive legislation. The problem of a tariff policy for the United States is mainly a question of American and European relations. It is from Europe mainly that our manufactured imports come. It is to Europe mainly that our agricultural exports go. Consequently there has been much concern in political and industrial America over some new developments in European tariff attitudes. Seeing that the United States largely shuts out European goods by its high-tariff barriers, France has been working on a reciprocity plan with Germany. The plan in brief is that France will give especially low tariff rates to any country that will give her especially low rates. It is indeed predicted that if America continues its present tariff policies, European nations may virtually establish an offensive and defensive tariff alliance for self-protection—giving low tariff rates to one another but maintaining high tariff rates against the United States. Twenty-six years ago this fall William McKinley, a lifelong advocate of protection, made the last speech of his life, declaring that this country had outgrown its traditional tariff policy and should then inaugurate a new era of reciprocity and good will in international trade.

OUT OUR WAY

THE PASSING SHOW. BY J. R. WILLIAMS, DIRECTOR OF SEA SERVICE, INC.

SO THINK WE

We think that if the politicians keep on commenting about Cal not choosing to run in 1928 the President is likely to cross them up and make this announcement.

We think that the man who saves money in this time and day should not be considered as a miser but a wizard.

We think that the rising generation will likely patronize the aviation schools.

We think that now since the cotton is coming in on the South Plains there will be plenty of grafters floating around to pick up the fall money and pass on. Residents of this section should not patronize these fellows but buy from the merchants of the city who have carried them through the dull periods of the year.

We think that prosperity is the period when people run up bills that worry them during a business depression.

We think that the season of real home cured hams, home raised yams, and home can products is nearing.

We think that the statesman who declared that the tariff is a local issue should return and look at us at the present time.

We think that one Lubbock fellow said that there is not much to be learned to the young man who marries a girl he knows accepts cigarettes from other young men.

We think that America is a place where a man can get along pretty well in the oil business if he is patriotic enough.

We think that about the only real thing that will stop falling hair is the floor.

We think that a confirmed traveler is the fellow who has to look through his towels to tell what hotels he has stopped at.

We think that a lot of folks have houses in which to live but so few have real homes to rule over.

OPINIONS

THE TURKEY CROP Those who are raising turkeys in Texas this year will realize on their crop between six and eight millions of dollars.

That's a neat little sum. But the heartening thing about it is the fact of a strong tendency to get away from the all-cotton practice.

Our people should not for one moment forget that cotton is a cruel master.

If only we can, good people, make cotton the surplus crop—what we call relief—we shall be on the road to permanent prosperity.

IT IS REPORTED

It is reported that it is pretty certain that Henry Ford's new product will have four wheels.

It is reported that it is predicted that a combination of television and telephony will come into general use, but we do not anticipate that it will be greatly employed by husbands who are detained late at the office.

It is reported that the most-often girl would possibly make a fair hand at cooking should she be able to find a kitchen with a steering wheel.

It is reported that home has been defined by one of Texas Tech's freshmen as a place where you don't have to make reservations in advance.

It is reported that seats on the New York Stock Exchange, are selling for upward of a quarter of a million dollars. This news is probably breaking Tex Rickard's heart.

It is reported the new airplane that functions like a bird will be a great success, provided the bird is a duck.

It is reported that it has frosted in Amarillo so it won't be long now until old Jack Frost will make his annual visit to Lubbock. The old fellow has been very kind and considerate in making his call late this year and it has certainly been appreciated by the South Plains farmers and merchants.

It is reported that Texas Tech's football club is working hard for the game with the Hill Billies here Saturday. If any of Lubbock's fans have not seen the Matadors wear this season they had better attend this game for it is the next to the last game the boys will play at home.

It is reported that the county tax collector has issued a warning to pay your poll tax before the first of the year, 1928 is the year the voting takes place.

LAUGHS

Pat was talking Professor Jones down the river in rowboat. "Pat," said the professor, "have you ever studied zoology?" "No," said Pat, "I don't know nothing about it."

"Why, you've missed half your life," was the reply. Then, a little later, "Do you know anything about biology?" "Nope," granted Pat.

"Well, you've missed half your life," replied the professor. Just then the boat hit a snag and upset.

"Help," spluttered the professor. "Hey, Professor," yelled Pat, "do you know anything about swimming?" "No," gasped the professor.

"Then in a few moments you're gonna miss your whole life," cried Pat, as he struck out for the shore.—Denison Flamingo.

"Why did your wife drive her car so suddenly into that truckload of hay?" "It's the way; I was showing her how to drive in traffic and a spider fell into the car, and I remarked, 'Step on it!'"

A WISE PLAN

Fort Worth is making an industrial survey for the purpose of securing data to permit the city to seek industries that can be successfully operated in that city. The work has been outlined by A. B. Spencer, secretary of the chamber of commerce. Mr. Spencer is a former citizen of Childress and was known as a successful merchant and business man before taking up chamber of commerce work.

Mr. Spencer is not employing any high power organization to make the survey. He is not employing any special workers. The work is being done by members of the organization who have at heart the industrial growth of Fort Worth.

That plan used to secure the data is the most valuable of all. It is putting some members into work that will create in them a greater interest for their city. They will learn things that will be of value to them in a business way. Chances are that the workers will meet many business men in Fort Worth when they do not know and lasting friendships will be made.

The friendship shown will be worth the time and trouble of the workers. Fort Worth will prosper from the survey because each of the workers will become a better booster for a greater Fort Worth. They will tell others what they learned. These talking advertisements are very essential in city building.

A city that is talked about is sure to grow. A city that is on every man's lips is bound to be a good city. Fort Worth is going to find out the industries they possess, and seek those that are needed.

Secretary Spencer is using some good old-fashioned practical means of getting down to facts. He is doing it in a way that will be of lasting benefit. He is doing it in a way so the men who help pay his salary will get some information that will be of value to them.—Childress Index.

AUSTIN, Nov. 2 (AP)—Mrs. Claude De Van Watts, Austin, was re-elected president and Mrs. J. B. Ammerman, Fort Worth, vice president at large, at the state convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union here Wednesday.

Mrs. W. D. Twibell, Austin, was elected corresponding secretary; Mrs. Fred Lawson, Ennis, recording secretary, and Mrs. Frances Dean, Dallas, treasurer.

Selection of next year's convention city was expected at the afternoon session.

RAISES BIG TURNIPS

W. S. Jacobs, a farmer who resides 7 miles northwest of the city has additional proof that turnips in large quantities and enormous sizes can be raised in this county.

Mr. Jacobs brought two turnips, one weighing about 5 pounds and another about 3 1/2 pounds, into the Avalanche office yesterday afternoon. Several other men have also brought in particularly large turnips.

It is reported that it has frosted in Amarillo so it won't be long now until old Jack Frost will make his annual visit to Lubbock. The old fellow has been very kind and considerate in making his call late this year and it has certainly been appreciated by the South Plains farmers and merchants.

It is reported that Texas Tech's football club is working hard for the game with the Hill Billies here Saturday. If any of Lubbock's fans have not seen the Matadors wear this season they had better attend this game for it is the next to the last game the boys will play at home.

LAUGHS

Pat was talking Professor Jones down the river in rowboat. "Pat," said the professor, "have you ever studied zoology?" "No," said Pat, "I don't know nothing about it."

"Why, you've missed half your life," was the reply. Then, a little later, "Do you know anything about biology?" "Nope," granted Pat.

"Well, you've missed half your life," replied the professor. Just then the boat hit a snag and upset.

"Help," spluttered the professor. "Hey, Professor," yelled Pat, "do you know anything about swimming?" "No," gasped the professor.

"Then in a few moments you're gonna miss your whole life," cried Pat, as he struck out for the shore.—Denison Flamingo.

Mother—What made you stay out so late? Have a flat tire? Daughter, dreamily—No, Mother. I hardly call him that!

"That chap Witherpoon is great on being prepared." "I should say so! Yesterday he saw a woman-driven automobile coming toward him, and instantly seized his fountain pen and took down its number, in case it knocked him unconscious."

"Why did your wife drive her car so suddenly into that truckload of hay?" "It's the way; I was showing her how to drive in traffic and a spider fell into the car, and I remarked, 'Step on it!'"

A POOR EXCUSE

When visitors in Russia comment on the poverty and general wretchedness of conditions in that country, they are told that "you should have seen Russia under the czar."

That's the kind of excuse many of us are prone to make for ourselves whenever we are in error. We seek for comfort in the fact that we are better than somebody else or that the conditions which we have brought about are not as bad as they might be. That's a lazy excuse. It shows no ambition and no heart for a better day.

We ought always to be comparing our work with what it might be with the ideal. The acceptance of the second best because it is not so bad as something else, is a poor week gesture.—Amarillo Sun.

GRIEF OF PARTING

After three months of advertising, the North Dakota State Industrial Commission has failed to sell the State-owned mill at Drake. This small mill was taken over by the State as an experiment, looking for the projected greater mill at Grand Forks, at a cost of $25,000.

It has since cost the state $100,000 in operating deficit, and cannot be disposed of except at a cost which the Industrial Commission dare not accept. To accept a bid of $2,000 for a property that cost $25,000 would be political suicide for the members of the board who voted for the sale. The mill has not been running of late years and has been used as a job-station for the big mill, with the cost of maintenance yearly adding to the loss it inflicts upon the state. In the business world such a plant would be scrapped and the transaction regarded as a step toward further expansion.

But in the political world, the sale of business is foolery. The mill represents a political principle and not a business enterprise. The principle must be maintained regardless of the financial loss, and those who maintain the faith of the state in business are most of the grief that North Dakota is suffering in parting with its experimental mill.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

DRIVING HINTS

Don't Cut Corners on Left Turns—There is a great tendency among drivers who are careful in the city to cut corners when making left turns in the country. It seems as if almost anyone would know better than this, but tremendous number of accidents have been caused lately by carelessness in this respect.

When driving in the country, cars are generally traveling at much higher speeds than in the city. What would be a minor collision in the city may turn out to be a real disaster when the car gets into the country. Always leave room, and plenty of it, for the car that may be coming down the road and turning right into the road that you are leaving in making the left turn.

France Publishes First Testament Since The Reformation

For the first time since the Reformation, one of the largest secular French publishing houses has undertaken to publish a New Testament to the public. The publisher, Bernard Grasset, Paris, expects to have copies ready for the Christmas trade.

According to the Bible society of France, it is felt that an edition of the New Testament presented in the form of this secular French book and handled by the books concerns not specializing in religious works, will attract many new readers and give new impetus to the propagation of the Gospel in France. It is almost impossible to find the Bible on sale in France, except in special book stores.

The new edition, to be called the Library edition of the New Testament, will have about 544 pages and be bound in ordinary paper covers with a wood engraving on the outside. The text will be that of the Synod's Version, which was recently revised. The price of the book in ordinary binding will be fifteen francs. A special limited, de luxe edition of the Testament will be printed on Japanese or Holland paper.

Numerous letters are already coming to the president of the Bible Society of France asking if it is really true that a great publisher of Paris is planning to publish a New Testament in the form of an ordinary library book.

While France will have but this one commercial publishing house printing the Scriptures, in the United States, England, there are, in addition to the Bible Society, nearly a dozen commercial houses publishing the Bible.

Many of the university professors in Paris and elsewhere, recognizing the value of Bible study to the younger generation, have written the Society of the interest with which they await the new publication. It is hoped that, apart from any religious view, this New Testament will serve to introduce courses of Bible study in the programs of the universities and colleges for the coming school year.

It is also expected that in those countries where French culture is eagerly welcomed, the Balkans, Turkey, Egypt, etc., an edition of the Testament presented in the new formation will attract many readers.

UNCHANGED My old home town is greatly changed Since I have been away; I hardly knew the village when I saw it yesterday.

The hitching racks around the square Have given place to lines Of farmers' livery tightly jammed Beside "No Parking" signs.

The dear old livery stable's gone; The depot tracks have vanished. The watering trough "For man and beast," I noticed, has been banished.

Where stood the village blacksmith shop I found a change surprising; The signs now read: "Expert Repairs" And "Tires and Vulcanizing."

Is there one dear old thing unchanged? I cried and searched full well. I found it too—the salubrious In the mass old hotel, I found it.—Dudley Glass.

THE FRESHMAN IDEAL From year to year the Freshman cheer, Will ring through halls of fame. The Sophomore cheers that love so dear, Can never more boast that name.

Not on stone will we carve our name, Or on marble white. But in the hearts of man and fame, Our motto we will write.

We'll carve it deep where blood runs red, Deep in the heart of a friend, And there it will stay though time rolls on, And we'll bear it again in the end.

Lubbock-Crosby Medical Societies Meet And Issues Advice To Parents Who Are Interested In Safeguarding Children

At the meeting of the Lubbock-Crosby Medical Society Tuesday night the situation arising from the death of one child from diphtheria and the exposure of several others because medical care and advice were not sought was revealed by the physicians assembled.

The society, believing that the physicians of the community are duty bound to warn the public against the threat of any communicable disease and meet it as promptly as it attacks young children. It is, however, a preventable disease and it is a reflection both upon the medical profession and upon the citizenship of a community for such a disease to make headway and become an epidemic. Not only is it a preventable disease but it is amenable to treatment through anti-toxin once it has started in a given case. The death rate from diphtheria has been reduced 85 per cent by the use of anti-toxin and the mortality to-day is largely the result of waiting too long before anti-toxin is administered. Diphtheria at the beginning resembles a case of sore throat and often the physician is not summoned until the disease has made three or four days headway. There is no excuse for the occurrence of an epidemic of diphtheria if the community will work hand in hand with the physicians support the work of the City Health Officer and quarantine all active cases, and guarantee all exposed cases.

The society recommends the following precautions at this time:

1. Medical inspection of all cases of sore throat or of persistent nasal discharge. There may or may not be fever, in fact diphtheria at first runs less temperature than simple tonsillitis. Medical inspection and laboratory tests are needed to establish an early diagnosis.
2. Immunization of all exposed cases. There is no necessity for an exposed case to develop diphtheria since we have at hand a certain preventive in the form of anti-toxin. Anti-toxin renders a child safe during an epidemic.
3. Testing of all children to determine whether they are naturally immune or not. Not all children need anti-toxin because the blood of some of them can resist the diphtheria germ successfully and they do not contract the disease.

By means of the Schick test, which is a skin test about as painful as a scratch on the skin, those who are not naturally immune can be discovered and freed from the necessity of taking anti-toxin. Those who are not naturally immune can then take toxin-antitoxin, a preparation that will immunize them for a period of four years or more. This is the ideal manner of coping with the disease and highly successful in keeping diphtheria out of the scholastic population.

"As members of the medical profession we pledge our support to the City Health Officer in his efforts to stamp out disease. When death is the penalty for carelessness and neglect, we feel that half-way measures will not do, and we emphatically insist that no innocent child be allowed to suffer and die from a preventable disease."

"By the President of the United States of America.

"CALVIN COOLIDGE, President.

"FRANK B. KELLOOG, Secretary of State."

Cold Wave Moving East From Rockies

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 2 (AP)—A cold wave originating in the Rocky Mountain states, moved eastward today after breaking up several waves of unusually warm weather in the northwest and southwest.

Thermometers in Kansas and western Missouri stood in the upper thirties this morning, a drop of more than 30 degrees from yesterday's maximum. Snow flurries and rain were reported from the Dakotas to northern Oklahoma.

The drop in temperature which interrupted growth of second crops of fruit at many southwest points, caused a delayed southward migration.

about gambling in Democratic club houses, and the police raids that uncovered it.

"That is true," he said. "The raids were directed by a police commissioner, who was appointed from my cabinet, by the mayor of the city. I did not hear you say anything about the raids that were made on a Republican club house for open gambling and, lest you have no knowledge of it, let me say that in one Republican club house that was raided, police were met with armed resistance and it is a matter of record in police headquarters that the police records were in the employ of this Republican club to protect the game.

"Bear in mind, Colonel, that I am just as much opposed to gambling as you are—but while we are talking about it, let's be truthful. The governor made a statement, a statement of Col. Roosevelt that he had investigated Republican counties and had failed to investigate Democratic ones. He held no power, the governor said, to investigate any counties; all he could do was to order investigation of county officers against whom charges had been made, and this had been his procedure in every case.

Still visibly agitated, the young juror finally broke away from the interview only to run into the deputy marshal, who served upon him a subpoena to appear before the grand jury. He was taken back to the courthouse and placed in the office of Neil Burkinshaw, young assistant district attorney, conducting the grand jury inquiry.

"There he sat for a time, twirling his hat in his hands and staring strangely at all those who opened the door. Finally his name was called and he was told by Burkinshaw that he could appear before the grand jury voluntarily or be subpoenaed. He chose the latter unless he desired, as all the information he gave must be used against him at some future time.

"Grilled by Grand Jury.

"The juror gave no reply but walked steadily down the corridor to the severe and more of men composing the inquisitorial body. As he neared the swinging screens, he hastened his steps as though anxious to have done with this feature of his case.

"The juror and six minutes he remained closeted with the grand jury. Upon emerging at noon, he staggered down an opposite corridor from that in which the newspaper correspondents and a crowd of curious were waiting. When the reporters overtook him he first refused to talk, but said later that he had "told the truth" to the grand jury and he again denied that he had discussed the Fall-Sinclair case with anyone.

Less than two hours later, his comparison somewhat better, the juror returned to the inquisition, remaining in the grand jury room for nearly an hour. He promised Burkinshaw that he would return to court early tomorrow and was released to go to his home.

Special Official Proceeded.

Immediately after Edwell emerged from the grand jury room, A. Mason Day, vice-president of the Sinclair Exportation company, went in for a third time. He was out in about 15 minutes and told inquiries that he had refused to testify further on the stand that his constitutional immunity to return to court tomorrow.

Day, the government charges, received reports from Burns detectives about the jurors on behalf of Sinclair and at the house of Donald Woodward, wealthy Washington merchant and prominent in social circles.

While these stirring events were developing at the District of Columbia supreme court room, Albert B. Fall issued a statement from his apartment at the Marlborough hotel, saying that he was ready for a retrial immediately and expressing regret that the government found this impossible.

Fall Expresses Regrets.

"I was prepared to completely refute the charges against me and I entertained no doubt whatever but that a verdict of acquittal would be rendered," said Fall.

This brought a statement from Owen J. Roberts, of special oil counsel, that the government also has ready for a new trial, but that since all of the witnesses had been excused and would have to be again summoned on new subpoenas, a retrial would be impossible before January as it would take from six of their effort to help him escape the chair.

Clarence J. Ginn, Houston, and Judge W. E. Hawkins, Breckenridge, Millikin's counsel, were here but took no action that could be learned. They expected to see Governor Moody and ask further clemency, but late today had not done so. Both Hawkins and Ginn said they know of no obligatory course open to them. The supreme court and court of criminal appeals already have denied relief.

District Attorney Fred Hundell, of Lockhart, who prosecuted Millikin for the slaying and subsequent kidnapping, was here today, called at the governor's office in the afternoon.

"I can explain, your Honor," sputtered the speaker, "just give me time."

"Surely, surely," said the judge. "Will 20 days be enough?"

SEMINOLE POOL

of the Bearlight pool, a part of the Seminole area, which might present a new overproduction threat if many fresh wells were brought in. A well has been brought in in this district by the Gypsy Oil Company.

Effects to boost declining production with permission to about 165 wells granted by the umpire, Ray M. Collins, who has regulated production under a restriction agreement last week, failed. New wells brought in in the Seminole field were not of sufficient calibre to promise substantial increases.

Salt Water Mowses.

Oil men have watched with concern the creeping of salt water into the Bearlight field, a part of the Seminole pool. The Bearlight-borough region fell off heavily last week. This had produced as much as 142,000 barrels. The Little River pool has held up a steady production level. The Seminole City pool has shown increases, however.

The greater Seminole pool has been the largest producing area in the United States, and to it has been attributed Oklahoma's supremacy in oil production which poured into the channels of trade has caused oil men no little concern because of its effect on prices.

Concern was deepened when last March 12 average crude oil price slumped to $1.31, from the $2.49 level established November 2.

Mr. Collins, in approaching the corporation commission to seek means of increasing the flow said at one time last summer that pool might reach 700,000 barrels of production.

NORFLEET

The Manhunter's Own True Story

As told to Gordon Hines

WHAT HAS BEEN TOLD:

Frank Norfleet, a Texas rancher, winded out of $45,000 by a ring led by Joe Furey and W. B. Spencer resolves to destroy the ring. After considerable effort he lands two men in California and follows a clue that leads him to Florida where he experiences considerable difficulty in getting honest cooperation from many of the officers who seem to stand in with the swindlers. Pursing as a sucker, Norfleet has a narrow escape from the "Club House" where the old racing wire-tapping game is worked. Later in Key West, he finds Joe Furey and he searches the building where the man hides all night and then rushes to the sheriff for assistance in searching the place. After two hours two pseudo-officers are sent and they help Furey to escape in a motor boat. Chartering a hydroplane Norfleet flies over all the keys and to Cuba hoping to find the fugitives in the boat. Failing he returns to Miami where his efforts are fruitless. Going on to Daytona Beach he accidentally becomes acquainted with a young daughter of a real estate operator, whose father has just been swindled by a W. B. Spenser whose signature is like that of W. B. Spenser. Here, considerably discouraged Norfleet receives a wire from the Sheriff at Fort Worth saying that Reno Hamlin had been arrested and is in jail. Things have been going badly for him and Norfleet resolves to go back to the ranch to adjust his own affairs. Property and livestock are being sacrificed to finance his pursuit. A year before Norfleet had encountered a vague clue in San Antonio which indicated that Joe Furey had bought a stolen car from a little shop there, in that city. He resolves to go to San Antonio and investigate more thoroughly.

Chapter Twenty-two

I stopped at Fort Worth and arranged with Jesse Brown, an attorney, that he should accompany me to San Antonio. I felt a peculiar hesitancy of spirit which was justified in fact. Premonitions and hunches and rather wild hopes were probably responsible for the perseverance of my whole undertaking. Many times I felt encouraged over almost nothing and I'm glad that I was able to see rays of hope where others declared was only darkness and gloom. The search was so optimistic that I felt justified in taking Brown along to help me avoid legal tangles in case I found my man. That will amuse the reader who believes he is a conservative, sound-thinking politician. So naive it is, I'm not sure.

We arrived in San Antonio and immediately called on the Chief of Police Al Mussey. The three of us went to the St. Anthony Hotel to have a look at the register and the signature of "J. Harvason." From there, we went to the express office and searched the records of the same dates which the hotel register had indicated as the duration of Furey's visit. When Ward and Gerber were captured in San Bernardino, Furey's suit case and personal belongings had been seized before he could make away with them and he had no car with him there. As he had gone directly to San Bernardino from San Antonio, I concluded that he must have shipped the coat to some one.

The express records revealed nothing which would indicate that Harvason had made a shipment. The next move was to get the Federal Post records. When the facts were made known to the Federal authorities, we were given full access to their files.

This search, seemed fruitless, too. We thumbed the dusty records and found no trace of Harvason's name as the sender of a package. As we were about to give up the search, we ran across an item which roused our curiosity. On one of the three days Furey had been in San Antonio, a package had been mailed through the post office which carried neither the name of the sender nor of the person to whom it was mailed. It was addressed to Number 506 Sanford Court Apartments, San Francisco, California. Evidently some one had mailed something with which he did not care to connect a name. It was a package of several pounds in weight and it might easily have been a fur coat.

The post office inspector thought it rather unusual that the package, should have been mailed in such a way and, considering that it was mailed while Furey was in San Antonio and that he had soon followed in the same direction, we concluded that it might be a clue worth following.

Brown and I left for California that night.

On the way, I suggested that we drop off and give a hello to my old friend, Sheriff Shay, at San Bernardino. Possibly he might have gathered some new information since I had last seen him.

Shay was very glad to see us, but he heard no more of the swindling ring since Sheriff Clark had taken Ward and Gerber back to Fort Worth. We decided to leave for San Francisco next morning.

In the meantime, I took another look at the records of the Stewart Hotel, searching for possible telegrams from Furey to others while he was stopping there.

I had learned a great deal in the last year just past. If I had known the same well enough to have made this examination properly when Ward and Gerber were captured, this story might have had a much earlier ending.

The telephone files of the hotel furnished the information that Mr. Furey's name at that time had held long distance communication with "Glendale 651-J." Los Angeles.

"This looked like a direct lead and my impatience would not let me wait until morning to follow it. Brown was being entertained by Shay and I knew he would not return until late that night, so I left him a hurried note and decided to tell Brown why I had left so early. I was so excited that I even forgot to tell Brown why I had left so suddenly, but I asked him to meet me next day in Los Angeles.

I reached the City of Angels and registered at the Alhambra Hotel. My first act, when I was alone in the room, was to pick up the telephone.

"Glendale 651-J," I said to the operator.

"It was late in the evening, but I could not wait until next day to learn what the number might lead to. I waited restlessly as the ringing buzzed in my ears.

"Hello," said a pleasant feminine voice. My heart was pounding.

"Who is speaking?" I asked.

"This is Mrs. Furey," answered the voice—she called Furey. "To whom did you wish to speak?" the voice continued.

"Excuse me, I believe I have the wrong number," I exclaimed, excitedly, as I fumbled for the receiver hook.

"Not zigzag! I let out a yell that brought a ring from the manager's office and an admonition to go easy on the booze. I paced the floor in a frenzy of joyous excitement, then grabbed my hat and hiked for the street. I wanted to slap the pedestrians' backs and urge them to walk up to whatever we might have found that resembled a bar and name their pizen!

My wife had often wished that we might locate the families of the men we wanted. We knew that sooner or later their trails would lead home-ward and now, after many weary months, here was the stroke of luck.

I walked until past midnight, then stumbled to bed to be awake until dawn when I dressed hastily and started to Glendale. It is a beautiful suburban town, about an hour from Los Angeles. Its wide, even streets, velvety lawns, bright-green shrubbery and pretty homes make it a spot of exceptional beauty and brightness.

I had looked up the address I wanted in the telephone directory; it was Number 477 Piedmont Park. I walked down the shaded street and was not surprised to find that Joe

107, He Sticks to the Job

Furey's home was as fine as he had declared it to be when he had mentioned the mortgage he wished to pay off.

It was a handsome, aristocratic-looking residence with massive pillars, shade trees and a blooming garden. I did not wonder that Furey could support such a home. He had so many suckers working for him.

It was still early and not a soul was stirring about the place. The sun was beginning to draw off that delicious, nectarean haze which hovers over mountainous communities in the dark hours. The dawn was so entrancing that I was sorry to see the day come.

I watched the upstairs windows for a sign of life. They were open wide, the shades were drawn half way and, behind them, soft white curtains fluttered in the breeze, gently brushing ruffled edges across the sills. Probably Mrs. Furey was still asleep. Perhaps Mr. Furey was there with her. I wondered if he dreamed in his sleep—and what he dreamed. I wished I might look behind those walls to see whom they sheltered. Some day, I felt that this home would be the scene of an important event in my quest.

Would I like Samson, pull down the stone pillars of that temple of hypocrisy? Would I destroy myself in punishing the real hypocrites?

Across the street, opposite the Furey home, a large hospital was being built. It occurred to me that I might seem to be engaged on some part of the work while I carefully sized up the Furey place and its occupants. The workmen had begun to arrive and I decided to pose as a landscape gardener. A torn piece of blue print, scuttled past me in the breeze and I picked it up, pretending to study it as I strolled the lay of the land on the other side of the street.

I walked back where I could see the rear of the Furey place and I carefully noted its exits. One door opened on a small orange grove and another on the vineyard. A third door, on the side, led to the garden which joined one side of the vineyard. Still no one stirred about the place but I held to my vigil.

For two days I pattered about pretending to study the soil, the lay of the land, the trees and everything else that I thought could possibly interest a landscape gardener. At the same time carefully watching the house across the street. I spoke to no one and no one spoke to me, although there were several men working constantly on the place. Occasionally one of the foremen or a passer-by would give me a curious glance but I went about my pseudo-occupation as if I belonged where I was. Once, as I stopped and stood furtively watching the Furey home, I noticed a policeman eyeing me suspiciously and I busied myself again with my landscape planning.

The third day my attention was claimed by a little boy who bound-

John (Daddy) Quick, of Vancouver, B. C., has just celebrated his 107th birthday, and he still keeps busy at a man's job. He is shown here making patterns for women's dresses, while Mrs. Aubrey A. Naef of Seattle, looks on. Mr. Quick was born in 1820 in England, 150 miles from London. He formerly was a carriage maker. In 1862 he walked from New York to Cleveland.

ed down the steps of the home, following a bouncing ball. This was the first bit of activity I had seen about the place since the first day when, in the afternoon, a well-dressed woman had driven off in a sedan and returned after a short time. I was certain she was Mrs. Furey.

Now, as I watched the child, wondering if the fair-haired, lively chap could belong to a man I was trying to put in prison, I hoped that the child was not Furey's.

The child was playing with a large rubber ball, bouncing it up and down on the sidewalk. I walked across the street toward him and as I drew near the ball bounced in my direction and he came shouting after it, kicking it playfully toward me as if inviting me to join in the game. I gave it a kick and sent it flying back to him. He dashed after it in time to throw himself upon it, pinning it to the ground and challenging me to get it.

He was a cute little fellow and watching him in his innocent play made me sorry that he seemed to belong to Joe Furey. I disliked the idea of placing a stigma upon the child—of sending his father to prison, where he might spend the remainder of his earthy days separated from this rosy-cheeked boy. Then I remembered the countless victims of the Furey gang and the children who, like my little daughter, had been deprived of the good things of life because of the thievery which provided luxury for the little fellow I was watching.

New French Tariff Note Is Approved

PARIS, Nov. 2 (AP)—The French cabinet today approved a new note to the United States in which the French understanding of the basis for tariff negotiations will be outlined. The note will be handed to American Charge d'Affairs, Sheldon Whitehouse, probably today.

The new note, it is understood, contains no intensions of any kind but is occupied simply with an exposition of the agreement on procedure which already has been reached.

WATER PAGEANT PLANNED AT MEET

WILL FEATURE CONVENTION OF SOUTH TEXAS C. OF C. AT BROWNSVILLE

BROWNSVILLE, Nov. 2.—Every mode of transportation which has ever been known to man will be depicted in a spectacular water pageant to be staged on the remaca—a natural lagoon—at Fort Brown here as part of the celebrations in connection with the South Texas Chamber of Commerce first annual convention and the formal inauguration of Southern Pacific Railway service to the border, November 14 and 15.

Good Lighting Effects
The water pageant will be staged on the night of the 14th, with brilliant lighting effects, following the celebration that same afternoon of the entry of the Southern Pacific trains. The Southern Pacific celebration will be held in Washington Park and will be carried out with a program of speaking and music and demonstrations of the latest methods of track laying. A display of the latest in railroad equipment "a crack train" will be run into the city for the celebration. Several other special trains will arrive.

Committee to take care of the pageant was appointed Wednesday afternoon by Ray Leeman, general manager and G. C. Richardson, secretary of the Brownsville Chamber of Commerce, and in charge of the entertainment arrangements. Frank La'ham was appointed general chairman of the fiesta committee, with John Fanning and Frank Gay, E. P. Buchanan was appointed to take charge of the lighting and electrical effects.

Tentative plans for the pageant call for a fleet of canoes—hundreds of the boats—in a procession about the lake and four Egyptian ships, and a Valley ship. Floats depicting the stage coach, boat, row boat, steamboat, railroad train, and airplane are being planned for the gigantic pageant.

In addition to the floats there is being arranged a program of dancing and theatricals under the direction of Mrs. Frank Gay, which will be presented on a specially constructed stage on the edge of the remaca.

The pageant is part of an elab-

NEW HOWARD WELL

HIGH SPRING, Nov. 2.—Texon Settles well in the southwest quarter of Section 134, Block 23, Waco and northwestern survey, Howard county, struck pay sand at 1,340 feet. Oil rose 750 feet in eight hours. The well is estimated to be good for 250 barrels, but the oil fraternity are of the opinion that there is deeper pay and the well will be drilled to a second sand. This well is one-half mile north of Settles number two, which has not been completed but which enabled 600 barrels. This well extended the Settles proven field one-half mile north.

HOSPITAL FUNDS URGED ON CITIES

IMMEDIATE ESTABLISHMENT OF INSTITUTIONS APPROVED BY STATE IS ASKED

(By Associated Press) DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 2.—The problem of mental diseases must be solved in the community and the establishment of a psychopathic hospital in the city is an important part of any program of attack on the problem, that has for its aim the reduction of the enormous burden now shouldered by the state in custodial care of the chronically insane. This is the substance of an interview given today by Dr. Martin M. Carrick, Director of Health of Dallas, in which he urged the early appropriation of funds to construct the two psychopathic hospitals authorized by the last legislature, one in Dallas and the other in Galveston.

Proved Successful "Such hospitals," Dr. Carrick said, "have been in operation for many years in Ann Arbor, Michigan, Baltimore, Maryland, Boston, Massachusetts more recently Denver, Colorado, and Iowa City, Iowa, and the experience of these institutions is demonstrating more convincingly every year their peculiar value to the general community, as distinguished from the state hospital for mental diseases.

The psychopathic hospital has been devised to care especially for acute, curable and fatal cases of mental disorder, and to study more intensively than the state hospitals have ever been able to do various types of mental diseases that have baffled psychiatrists for many years. For this reason it limits its intake of patients to a number making possible greater individual care and concentrates its attention on the more hopeful cases and those calculated to yield new knowledge as to the nature and causes of mental disturbances. Besides giving better results in treatment, therefore, it is also a research center, psychological and psychiatric study of each patient.

On General Level "The psychopathic hospital stands on the same level as the general hospital, and serves to emphasize in the public mind the essential medical nature of the problem in legal terms, in terms of shame and disgrace, in terms of merely social protection, in terms of pessimism and fatalism, and look upon it as a health problem, calling for study, diagnosis and treatment, the same as any other medical problem primarily in the interests of the mental sufferer and his family. The psychopathic hospital is intended as an institution to which persons with mental difficulties and disorders of ill sorts may come as easily and as freely as those suffering from tuberculosis, or cancer, or any other physical condition.

"Insanity is but the final stage in a pathologic process and the larger number of those who are mentally sick and in need of expert medical attention are NOT insane. Over half of the patients admitted to the psychopathic hospital experience shows, come voluntarily, and need not be committed by the courts. Moreover their stay in the hospital is much shorter, on the average, than that of the inmates of state hospitals for the insane. At the Michigan Psychopathic Hospital, for example, of those who recovered under treatment in a recent year 84 per cent recovered within three months.

Better Results Explained "Why these better results compared with those of the average state institution for the insane? Largely because the patient in the psychopathic hospitals are treated in time. That is the secret of most of the success this type of institution has been having and it is the basis of the most effective program we can have for dealing with the huge problem of mental diseases, a program of prevention. We must begin to take a long view of the insanity problem and tackle it nearer its source—at home, in the community—where it is in the making in the individual lives of our neighbors, our families and friends. We must have done with the shortsighted temporizing that has so long characterized our policy of state care, and resulted in so much unnecessary suffering, injustice and neglect to thousands of our mentally disabled fellow citizens who now could be living happy, social and useful lives had we taken advantage of the knowledge psychology and medicine have made available during the past twenty years. Civic duty, humanity, economy and common sense call for the immediate provisions of such facilities as the psychopathic hospital affords for the relief of many hundreds of cases of curable mental suffering. The prevention of thousands of potential mental breakdowns, and the reduction of the intolerable load of chronic mental patients now filling our state hospitals."

No Picketing Seen In Colorado Mines

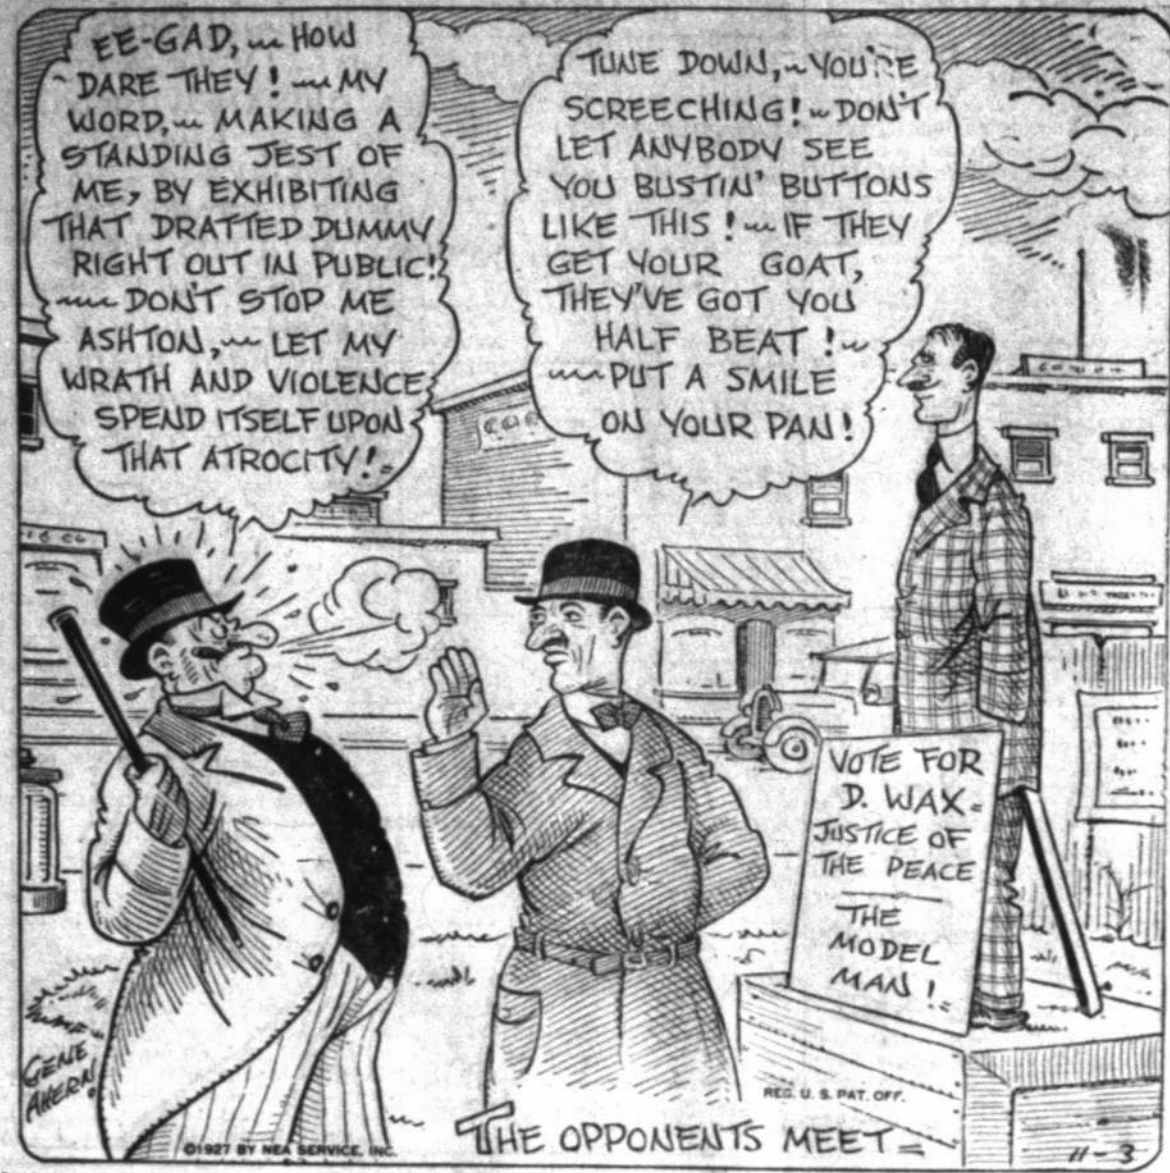

WARRENBURG, Colo., Nov. 2 (AP) Although striking coal miners voted here last night to resume picketing at the mines in southern Colorado, no picketing had been reported today. The strikers met early today and reaffirmed their decision, but a check of all mines in the Animas and Huerfano counties revealed no picketing.

Eighteen automobile loads of strikers left the I. W. W. headquarters shortly after 3 a. m., but efforts to locate them have been fruitless.

Mines in both counties, where the strike activity has been concentrated, were working this morning with increased forces of men.

SUCH smartness of color... such tastefulness of appointment... such individuality! And so easy to drive! No wonder her friends complimented her for selecting this beautiful car.

In the selection of such an intimate possession as her own motor car, she used women's inherent ability to shop. First comparing... then choosing.

In large purchases and in small buying... comparison is always very helpful. This is true in buying coffee.

Folger's Coffee is a revelation in its rich, unmatched flavor. So tempting, so delicious... it is truly a treat to the appetite. It makes the whole meal more interesting. You will enjoy its famous flavor because Folger's is the supreme of the world's coffees. Compare Folger's by making the famous Folger Coffee Test.

The Folger Coffee Test: Drink Folger's Coffee tomorrow morning; the next morning drink the coffee you have been using; the third morning drink Folger's again. You will decidedly favor one brand or the other. The Best Coffee Wins. That's fair, isn't it?
