Some of North's charges dropped

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in the Iran-Contra case dismissed major charges against Oliver North on Friday, saying "the court is powerless" to do otherwise. White House lawyers, meanwhile, moved to stop North's effort to force President Reagan and President-elect Bush to testify.

In trying to keep Reagan and Bush from being called as witnesses by North, the administration raised the threat of a constitutional battle "of potentially major dimensions" and said it has been offering to respond in writing since last Sept. 28 to any "reasonable written questions" the former White House aide might ask as part of his defense.

"The spectacle of a former or sitting president being subjected to peremptory judicial process may chill foreign governments in the way they deal with the president now and in the future," the government said in a motion to quash the subpoenas for Reagan and Bush to appear at North's trial.

Twelve criminal charges remain against North, and the issue of dealing with classified information in open court continues to be a problem. Attorneys for both sides met privately in the judge's chambers after Friday's open session to discuss matters relating to the Classified Information Procedures Act.

North's lawyers have subpoenaed Reagan and Bush to testify at the trial, now set for Jan. 31, but no sitting president has ever testified in person in court.

Disclosure of White House willingness to answer questions in writing came in a 27-page brief by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, who said that North "has not identified any of the issues on which he wishes to examine the president or president-elect and has not demonstrated the need for their testimony."

"Until he does so," wrote Thornburgh, "there can be no justification for precipitating constitutional litigation of potentially major dimensions by compelling an in-court appearance by a sitting or former president."

He said Reagan "will consider furnishing appropriate information in writing in response to reasonable written questions, if limited to material subject matter." He said Bush "joins that offer."

North's lawyers, meanwhile, served the Justice Department with subpoenas for Reagan and Bush to turn over various personal papers for use by the defense, said department spokesman Loye Miller.

The administration filed its motion to quash the Reagan and Bush subpoenas after U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell said he had no power to stop abandonment of charges.

Watkins' selection concern to those in energy industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Bush's choice of an energy secretary with nuclear expertise but no experience in other energy fields drew little praise and some concern Friday from industry and environmental groups.

In announcing his selection of Adm. James D. Watkins to head the Energy Department, Bush said Thursday that Watkins would oversee the daunting task of repairing the department's crippled nuclear weapons complex. Safety and other problems recently forced the closing of the country's only facilities producing tritium, a vital ingredient for nuclear warheads.

Watkins was trained in nuclear reactor engineering early in his 41-year Navy career, worked in the Naval nuclear office of the now-defunct Atomic Energy Commission and later commanded a nuclear-power submarine.

But he has no professional experience in the conventional energy areas, such as oil and natural gas, that are more commonly associated with the Energy Department.

"You're touching me on my Achilles' heel," Watkins said in response to a news conference question Thursday about his views on how to shore up domestic oil prices.

This admitted weakness, and Bush's clear interest in focusing on problems in the nuclear weapons complex, has caused some concern about how the new administration will address other energy issues such as the growing U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

"Our initial reaction is definitely one of disappointment," said Tom Haywood, executive vice president of the North Texas Oil & Gas Association, a producers trade group. "We had hoped for someone who could come in knowing the domestic oil business," he said, adding that he expected Watkins to be a "quick study."

Bryan Jacobowski, an energy analyst at the Wall Street firm of Paine Webber Inc., said oil industry executives had figured Bush would pick "somebody who was a bit more of an advocate" for their interests on Capitol Hill.

In part, the selection of a military official to head energy policy reflects a declining emphasis within the Energy Department on civilian energy issues. In the current fiscal year the department is spending 58 percent of its $15 billion budget on defense programs; in 1982 the defense share was 28 percent.

George H. Lawrence, president of the American Gas Association, representing natural gas producers, hailed Watkins' "proven managerial skills" and said his nuclear background will help in solving the nuclear defense problems.

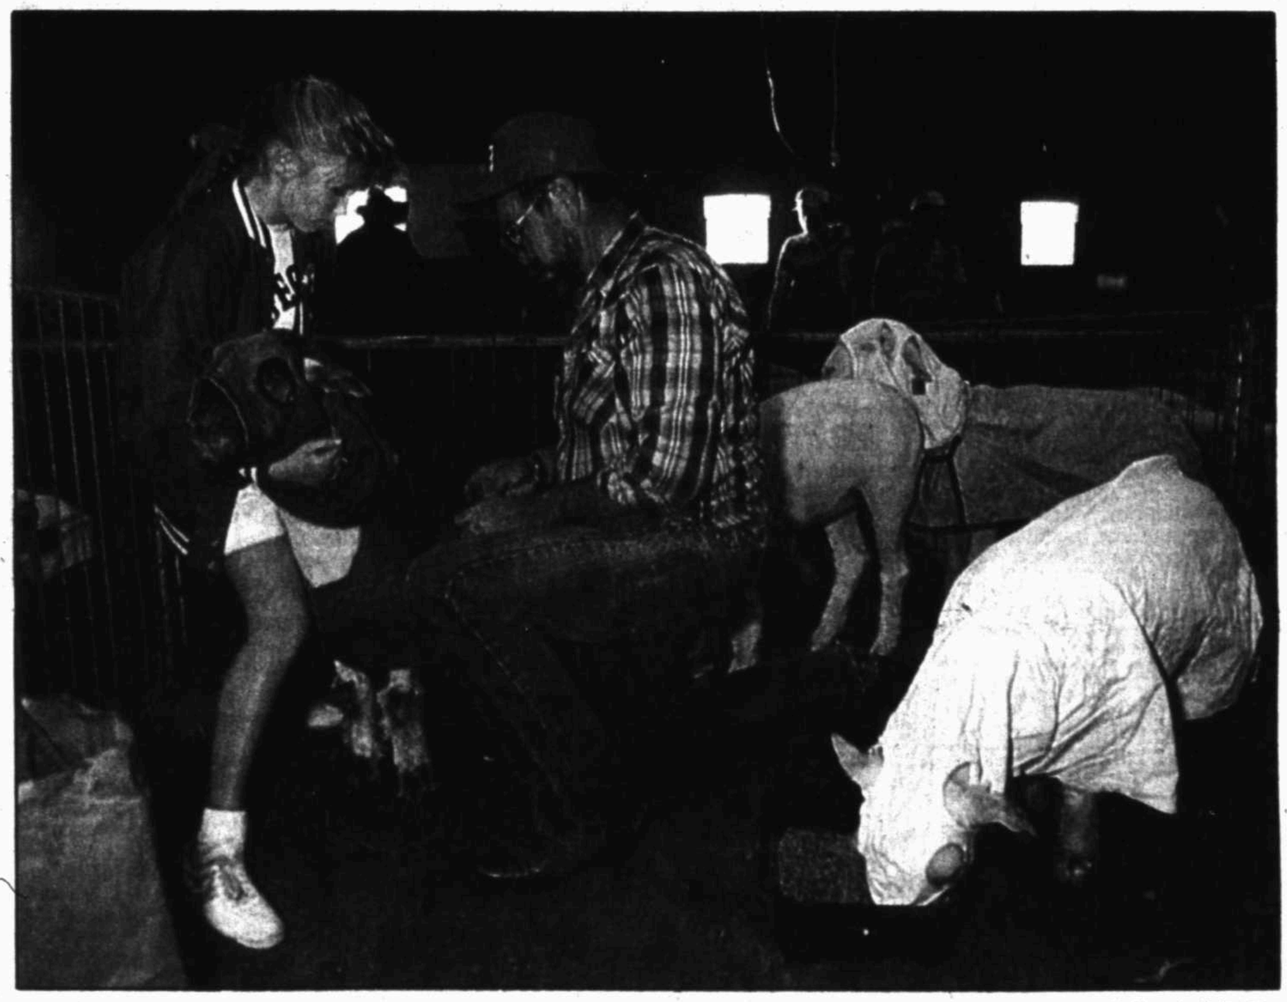

But, he said, "It is especially important that this national security issue be handled skillfully...so it does not become an abiding distraction to other energy issues."

The natural gas industry's main concern about leadership in the Energy Department is that it help win congressional approval to end the remaining price controls on gas.

Bush has pushed aside suggestions that oil executives need worry about his choice.

"They've got a president of the United States that came out of the oil and gas industry, that knows it and knows it well," he said Thursday.

Bunton to decide if Valencia store should be forfeited

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A federal judge will decide if a downtown Midland store suspected as a front for a heroin dealing operation should be forfeited to the government.

An assistant U.S. Attorney in a hearing Friday asked U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton to agree with its position that the now-closed La Morenita Store, 609 N. Dallas St., was used as an outlet for the alleged heroin dealing by the Valencia family of Midland.

The action, which was pursued by investigators from the Midland County Sheriff's Department, is a first for Midland law enforcement authorities, according to Sheriff's Capt. Clayton McKinney. If Bunton orders the store turned over to the government, it will be sold and the proceeds given to area agencies, he said.

The store, which housed a washateria and delicatessen, has been closed since April 12, 1988, when deputy U.S. Marshals closed the store and posted no trespassing signs. Three weeks before the business was closed, 54-year-old Emma Valencia — who operated the store for her son, Oscar — was convicted of possession of heroin in state district court. She was sentenced to 10 years in state prison, and her conviction is on appeal.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Joe Florio called several witnesses during the two-hour hearing Friday, including McKinney, Midland District Attorney Al Schorre and several criminal investigators.

McKinney, who heads operations for the sheriff's department, told Florio that an informant bought heroin from Ms. Valencia at the store three times in December 1987.

Testimony showed Sheriff's Lt. Tim Rogers contacted the Midland office of the Drug Enforcement Administration and inquired about the possibility of a forfeiture. The case was reviewed, and the forfeiture was recommended to Florio by the DEA, according to testimony.

Oscar Valencia was the lone witness called to the stand by his attorney, Tom Hirsch of Odessa. He told the court he obtained the store in 1981 from his parents. Valencia said he pleaded guilty to a 1986 heroin possession charge on the advice of an attorney.

"I spent a lot of money on attorneys fees," Valencia said. "My lawyer said that (guilty plea) was the best way to go."

Valencia, who said he owns a janitorial service and trucking company in Midland, told Hirsch the store is valued at $62,500.

Florio then quizzed the businessman and pressed him about his knowledge of his mother's alleged heroin dealing activities.

"I didn't know if she was selling or not," Valencia said. "We talked...she denied it."

Investigations into possible narcotics dealing by the Valencias have been conducted off and on by various law enforcement agencies for several years, officers have said.

At Emma Valencia's trial nearly a year ago, one officer testified that when he came to work several years ago, the Valencia family was the first name he heard when he asked about narcotics dealing in the Midland area.

During the trial, Hirsch through witnesses implied the "papers" of heroin were planted by Midland sheriff's officers.

Vice chairman of SBE elected

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Carolyn Crawford of Beaumont was elected vice chairman of the State Board of Education Friday, but said she hoped the board would not organize along partisan lines after a move to limit the power of Chairman Monte Hasie.

At the board's organizational meeting Bob Aikin, a former state representative from Commerce, moved to change the board's rules that give the chairman authority to name standing committees and control the agenda.

Hasie, a Republican stockbroker from Lubbock, was Gov. Bill Clements' choice to chair the 15-member elected board that implements education reform. Ten board members ran as Democrats, including Ms. Crawford and Aikin, who served one term in the House.

"To the greatest extent possible, decision making should be done by the group as a whole," Aikin said, but his motion to change the rules was tabled on an 8-7 vote and may be reconsidered at the board's first regular meeting today.

Hasie, whose district includes Ector County, said he tried to place members on the committee of their choice. "I've only been here one day and I've tried to make it clear I want us to work together," he said.

As president of the Lubbock school board, he added, "I never did keep anything off the agenda in seven years."

Later, Aikin said his concerns were not partisan, but philosophical. "My concern is to have equity in school financing and to continue to raise academic standards," he said. Several board members were concerned about other members' commitment to continuing the education reforms.

The rules make for awkward relationships between the board and the chairman, Aikin said.

Ice should melt by afternoon, forecasters say

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Ice left over from Friday night's wintery blast should begin melting around noon today, forecasters predicted.

The system that blanketed Midland with an inch of snow Friday night is heading eastward toward Dallas, National Weather Service specialist Eddie Brite said.

"This whole system is just spitting on us," Brite said late Friday in the wake of the whopping snow flurries that had begun shortly after 7 p.m.

Few traffic accidents were reported in Midland, though there were airplane delays at Midland International Airport, a spokesman said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Snow coats parts of Texas

Associated Press

An upper-level storm system on Friday brought light snow across wide portions of West and North Texas, while sleet began coating bridges and overpasses in other sections of the state, making driving conditions hazardous.

The National Weather Service posted a snow advisory for the South Plains, where accumulations of 1 to 3 inches were possible by early Saturday, along with amounts in the Panhandle.

A winter weather advisory was in effect for the northwest half of North Texas, Concho Valley, parts of the Hill Country and Edwards Plateau through early Saturday. Hazardous driving conditions were possible this weekend.

Light snow continued to fall over parts of the Big Country around Abilene and in the Concho Valley, in and around San Angelo. More snow was falling in the Panhandle, while light rain and freezing rain mixed with sleet and snow covered parts of North Central, Central and East Texas.

The weather service said light rain, drizzle and isolated rainshowers fell in a wide portion of South Central, South and Southeast Texas, along with the mid to upper Gulf coast.

A mixture of rain, sleet and snow should continue in the Edwards Plateau, Hill Country and parts of North Texas through Saturday. Scattered light rain, showers and a few thunderstorms were expected elsewhere in the state east of the mountains.

NATION

Snow, sleet and rain drenched much of Texas on Friday, while a new storm in the Pacific Northwest dumped rain as well as several inches of new snow in the Cascade Mountains.

In Texas, much of the light snow fell over western parts of the state, but was melting as it hit the ground. Freezing rain, sleet and snow hit north central Texas. Northwest Texas expected between 1 and 3 inches of snow.

A snow advisory also was in effect for the south-central mountains and southeast plains of New Mexico. Winter storm watches were posted for southeast Oklahoma and northwest Arkansas.

Heavy snow blanketed areas east of Lake Ontario early Friday. The snow band extended from the east end of Lake Ontario to the western border of Massachusetts. Three inches of snow fell in 90 minutes at Herkimer, N.Y.

A new storm system moving into the Pacific Northwest brought rain along the northern Pacific Coast and snow over the higher elevations. Snowfall in the Cascade Mountain range was expected to accumulate to more than a foot.

In northeast Oregon, Interstate 84 was closed between La Grande and Baker Friday morning because of blowing snow, police said.

Today's forecast called for showers and some thunderstorms from eastern portions of the southern Plains through the lower Mississippi Valley, southern parts of the middle Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the Gulf Coast states and the lower Ohio Valley to the middle and southern Atlantic coast; freezing rain or freezing drizzle and rain from west central Missouri through southern and central Indiana; snow and sleet over northern Indiana and northwest Ohio; snow over the northern Rockies, the northern intermountain region and inland portions of the Pacific Northwest; and scattered showers along the northern Pacific Coast.

Extended forecast

West Texas: Fair temperature is expected Wednesday through Friday. Permian Basin: Highs will be mid 50s to near 60, with lows in the mid to upper 20s. Concho Valley: Highs will be in the mid 50s to around 60, with lows from the upper 20s to lower 30s. Far West: Highs will be in the mid 50s, with lows in the upper 20s. Big Bend: Highs will range from near 50 to the mid 50s mountains, and be in the low to mid 60s in the lowlands. Lows will be in the upper teens to mid 20s in the mountains, and low to mid 30s in the lowlands.

Counties forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Howard, Andrews, Martin, Glasscock, Gaines, Reagan, Borden and Dawson: Saturday, sunny and warmer with a high in the lower 50s. Southwest wind 10 to 15 mph. Saturday night, clear with a low in the lower 50s. Sunday, sunny with a high in the upper 50s.

Border states forecasts

New Mexico: It will be mostly sunny days with fair skies at night through Sunday. It will be warmer in most sections, but cooler in the northeast on Sunday. The highs on Saturday will be in the mid 30s to upper 40s in the mountains and northwest with 40s and 50s elsewhere.

ICE

The lag time was due to the inclement weather in Dallas caused by the same system that had hit Midland earlier, officials believe.

Extra crews were called into the airport to rid runways of ice and snow, Geoff Snow, airport operations supervisor said Friday night.

El Paso was recording clear skies in its western horizon and temperatures throughout West Texas were expected to rise, Brite said.

The system is inching toward Abilene and the Dallas-Fort Worth area Friday night. Winter weather advisories were canceled, Brite said.

Today was supposed to be sunny and warmer with a high in the lower 50s with southwesterly winds at 10-15 mph.

Tonight should be chilly despite the lack of snow, Brite said. Skies will be clear with a low in the lower 20s.

Sunday's high should climb into the upper 50s.

The record high for Friday was set 31 years ago when it reached a balmy 80. Saturday morning's chilly lows didn't break the record of 13 set in 1982.

BOARD

"There's not necessarily a majority viewpoint in favor of what the chairman favors in terms of procedures and more importantly in terms of education policy," he said.

Hasie said there was no problem until Friday, adding that there is no reason to fear his commitment to the education reforms. "I'm a supporter of House Bill 72 (the 1984 education reforms)," he said. "So is everybody in education."

But Hasie is pushing some refinements, such as flexibility in class size. He criticized limits that force financially strapped school districts to build additional classrooms.

Bill Hudson, D-Wichita Falls, who represents many rural districts in north and west Texas, including Midland County, joined Hasie in calling for changes in programs that cost poor school districts more money. "Districts there have taxed their people to the saturation point and they're at the point of bankruptcy," said Hudson, who will chair the finance subcommittee on investment and business.

Ms. Crawford, Hasie's choice to chair the personnel committee, said she hoped the board would remain non-partisan, as she said her campaign was, although she beat a Republican opponent in the general election.

The wife of former Rep. Bo Crawford, she is director of guidance services for the Beaumont Independent School District. Gov. Mark White appointed her to the board in 1984.

"I think once we get down to the issues of education of children, it ought to be non-partisan," she said.

She said some review of the rules was needed, "but I don't anticipate a major retreat on reforms. They're there, and it could be more devastating to go back than to move forward."

Ms. Crawford, whose committee is responsible for teacher appraisals and other personnel matters, said teachers are still unhappy over the appraisals involved in the "career ladder" program, particularly since it has not been fully funded. "If it is fully funded...that will be a great asset. That will make it more palatable for teachers. And if it's the only pay raise going, they'll like it even better."

Hasie also played down remarks by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who has said Thursday he hoped the new board members would "discharge their responsibilities well" despite "unfortunate statements" some of them — including Hasie — made during the campaign.

Hasie said he has a positive working relationship with Hobby, a Democrat, and Hasie felt Hobby was referring to Hasie's response when Hobby endorsed his general election opponent, "We don't need people from outside West Texas telling us how to vote."

Hobby's press aide, Glenn Smith, said Hobby simply hoped campaign statements Hasie and other candidates made about education reforms "didn't translate to poor public policy."

"Lt. Gov. Hobby does not want the reforms watered down, but he's certainly open-minded, and the chairman of the board is welcome to explore the possibilities," Smith said.

In other action, the board elected Mary Helen Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, as its secretary and drew for terms. Ms. Crawford drew a two-year term, as did Aikin, Ms. Berlanga and Robert Cummings, R-Houston; Jane Nelson, R-Lewisville and students committee chairman; and John H. Shields, R-San Antonio.

Drawing four-year terms were Mary Perkins, D-Lufkin; Hasie; Hudson, Ray Alexander, D-Houston; Emmett J. Conrad, D-Dallas; Geraldine Miller, D-Dallas; Rene Nunez, D-El Paso; and Esteban Sosa of San Antonio.

Libya misidentifies pilot's body

WASHINGTON (AP) — The individual whose remains were turned over to the United States on Friday by Libya has been identified as the pilot of an F-111 bomber which took part in the raid over Libya in 1986, Pentagon sources said Friday night.

The officials, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said Libya had been wrong in tentatively identifying the remains as those of Capt. Paul Lorence.

Rather, the sources continued, the remains have now been positively identified as those of Maj. Fernando Ribas-Dominicci, of Utuado, Puerto Rico.

Ribas-Dominicci, who was 33 at the time of his death, was the pilot of the lone F-111 bomber that was lost in the bombing raid on Tripoli. Lorence, 31, of San Francisco was the other U.S. airman in the only plane lost during the April 15, 1986 raid.

At the time he disappeared during the raid, Ribas-Dominicci held the rank of captain. He was posthumously promoted to the rank of major.

"A forensic identification has been performed and reveals that the remains are those of Ribas-Dominicci — and not those of Capt. Lorence," said one Pentagon source.

"We just got the word that it's not the one they had claimed it was. We don't know if they also ever found the remains of Capt. Lorence," said the source.

The official said the Pentagon would not have any other details Friday night on arrangements for Ribas-Dominicci's funeral.

The F-111 was one of 18 F-111s that flew from Great Britain to bomb Libya in retaliation for what President Reagan said was Libya's involvement in the bombing of a West German disco frequented by American service personnel.

Polish immigrant cuts crystal bowl gift for Bush

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jan Lewczenko hasn't mastered English yet, but he reached a pinnacle in the dwindling art of deep-cut crystal glassmaking when he cut the bowl Congress will give George Bush on Inauguration Day.

"It was like a dream come true," the shy Polish immigrant said from his job at the Lenox Crystal Inc. plant in Mount Pleasant, 40 miles southeast of Pittsburgh.

Lewczenko, 39, is one of fewer than 25 master deep cutters in the country and of four on the Lenox staff. His experience cutting difficult designs nominated him for the bowls ordered by the Joint Congressional Committee on the Inauguration, plant superintendent Randy Eshland said Friday.

"He's excited and bashful about all the publicity going on around him. He's not comfortable about it. He's (a) rather quiet man," his wife, Krystyna, 33, said from their home in Mount Pleasant.

"This is like American dream come true, especially...coming to this country with 3-year-old kid, without language and $100 on hand," she said.

"The enthusiasm was just overwhelming. That was part of the excitement in working with him," said Lenox designer Barbara Handyside, 33, from Lenox headquarters in Lawrenceville, N.J.

The first gift Bush receives Jan. 20 and the only one he's scheduled to get at the inaugural luncheon will be Congress's crystal bowl of nearly 20 pounds and nearly 9 inches in diameter, according to Lenox. Vice President Dan Quayle will receive a smaller version of the bowl, which Lwwczenko also cut. Lenox declined to reveal the price of the bowls.

Blossoming cherry trees engraved on the front of each bowl frame a transparent area through which the west face of the Capitol is visible engraved on the far side of the bowl.

The president's bowl rests on a 14-pound, beveled, lead glass plinth, or flat base. It is inscribed with Bush's name and the words "Bicentennial Inauguration, Jan. 20, 1989."

Rendering an architectural scene on a curved surface complicated the cutting, which was accomplished by holding the hefty piece against diamond-and carborundum-tipped cutting tools.

Lewczenko showed an aptitude for skilled work while sculpting clay as a child, his wife said. He studied at a glass-cutting school in Poland then spent 20 years cutting glass there.

He and his wife and son, Matthew, now 10, immigrated to the United States in April 1983, two weeks before huge anti-government protests at the Lenin shipyards.

WATKINS

Some analysts said the Watkins choice appeared to reflect a relaxed attitude by Bush about the possibility of a new oil crisis developing in the 1990s.

"It suggests the (Bush) administration doesn't see a major problem in fossil fuels in the near future," said John Lichtblau, executive director of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, which is supported by oil industry funds. He added that he disagrees with this view and is concerned that if the OPEC cartel falls into disarray again, oil prices could fall low enough to harm U.S. security.

Environmental groups also expressed mild concern about Watkins.

Stephen Schwartz, of the Greenpeace environmental organization, said he hoped the choice of Watkins "does not reflect a decision to place military production needs ahead of safety and the environment."

Dan W. Reicher, an attorney for the environmental group Natural Resources Defense Council, said his group was worried that nuclear defense needs would get too much attention in an Energy Department headed by a career military man.

"We are concerned that the appointment of Adm. Watkins signals that cleaning up the bomb plants and developing a sound national energy policy will continue to be sacrificed in the name of nuclear weapons production," Reicher said.

DEATHS

Hartense Awtry

ODESSA — Services for Hartense Myrtly Awtry, 66, will be held at 10 a.m. today at the Sherwood Church of Christ in Odessa. Burial will be at 3 p.m. in Trinity Memorial Cemetery in Big Spring.

Mrs. Awtry died early Friday at her residence.

She came to Odessa in 1966 from Hobbs, N.M. She was born May 8, 1922 in China Springs, and married Cecil Awtry on Oct. 20, 1945 in Lamesa.

She was a member of the Sherwood Church of Christ.

Survivors include her husband, Cecil Awrey of Odessa; a son, Gordon Awtry of Midland; a daughter, Becky Hix of College Station; a brother, Clarence Ditto of Knott; three sisters, Lula Mae Freeman of Knott, Louise Lloyd of Big Spring and Margaret Blackburn of Waco; and seven grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Hospice or to Midland Christian School.

NORTH

Because of national security concerns, Thornburgh and independent counsel Lawrence Walsh apparently "are unable to prosecute" North on charges of diverting more than $14 million in U.S.-Iran arms sale proceeds to the Nicaraguan rebels, said Gesell.

"The court is powerless to direct a case to proceed," the judge said.

Walsh asked on Jan. 5 that Gesell dismiss the charges of conspiracy and theft of government property, citing North's insistence on introducing classified information in his defense and the refusal by the Reagan administration to release material the judge ruled North must be able to use at trial.

Gesell refused to dismiss the charges until he received an affidavit from Thornburgh outlining the administration's decision to withhold classified data.

Thornburgh stopped short of that, supplying instead a two-page declaration saying that if Walsh had disagreed with the Reagan administration's refusal to declassify material, the attorney general would have filed an affidavit "objecting to disclosure of this classified information." Gesell said Thornburgh's filing met the "minimum standard" under the Classified Information Procedures Act.

The court has "no factual basis for questioning" material that the government has classified or its effect on national security if the material should be disclosed, said Gesell.

The classified material in question includes names of Central American countries and verbatim texts of intelligence reports.

Meanwhile, John Keker, the head of Walsh's prosecution team, said North's defense team is subpoenaing 50 CIA agents in the case, some of whom are now serving overseas and are concerned about having to appear on 48 hours notice at the request of the defense once a trial gets under way.

Barry Simon, one of North's attorneys, said Keker should not "concern himself" with the problem.

Attorneys for both sides held closed-door morning and afternoon sessions with the judge on classified information as it relates to the remaining 12 counts. The attorneys will resume the discussions Tuesday.

Walsh said in a court filing Thursday that the remaining charges can be tried "without opening the door" for North "to use reams of classified information" and that North should be barred from seeking to prove "a host of irrelevant matters for the sole purpose of scuttling the entire case" on national security grounds.

However, defense attorney Brendan Sullivan said last week, "Classified information pervades the remaining charges as well."

Nine of the counts focus on charges that North concealed from Congress and former Attorney General Edwin Meese III his efforts on behalf of the Contras. Four of the nine deal with alleged concealment of a diversion of money to the Cntras from the administration's secret arms sales to Iran.

North also is accused of illegally accepting a $13,800 security system at his home from co-defendant Richard Secord, converting to his own use at least $4,300 in traveler's checks from Contra leader Adolfo Calero and conspiring to defraud the Treasury of tax revenue in connection with charitable contributions supporting the Contras.

Stalin's body removed

In 1961, the Soviet Party Congress unanimously approved a resolution which ordered the removal of Josef Stalin's body from Lenin's tomb in Red Square.

Amelia Earhart's younger sister keeps aviator's spirits flying

MEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — When Amelia Earhart was 7 years old, she recruited her younger sister, Muriel, to help build a wooden roller-coaster in their backyard in Atchison, Kan.

A couple of years later, when Amelia developed a keen interest in hunting rats in their grandparents' barn, Muriel was the future aviator's eager sidekick, armed with BB gun and .22-caliber rifle.

Muriel first went up in a plane soon after her sister bought one at the age of 24.

More than half a century has passed since Amelia Earhart vanished over the Pacific attempting to become the first woman to fly around the world. Muriel Morrissey, now 89 and a retired schoolteacher, still reveres and promotes the memory of her big sister.

The pain of her sister's loss has faded little from the day she learned of the disaster, July 2, 1937.

"Of course it's hard to lose a sister," she said. "And it's renewed every time when they have some of these crazy stories that are bandied about once in a while."

She was referring to occasional speculation that Earhart wasn't lost at sea, but was captured by the Japanese or executed as a spy.

"I guess it's because people just won't accept the natural solution: that she was low on fuel and crashed into the ocean and that's it. It was a tragedy of the sea," she said.

The sisters, born 2½ years apart, were nurtured by parents who anticipated feminism. Their mother, who climbed Pike's Peak in Colorado as a girl, designed trousers for them so they could play unhindered by the long skirts then worn by most young ladies. Their father, a railroad lawyer whose alcoholism complicated the family's uneven fortunes, encouraged their tomboy zeal.

Muriel came to this old Boston suburb in 1925 to teach. She married manufacturing executive, H. Albert Morrissey, who died in 1978, and had two children.

"Most of the time I was not as ambitious and as adventurous," said Mrs. Morrissey, tall and slender like her sister. "Amelia had her planes and I had my children. That was the difference."

The world's lasting fascination with her flying sister, Mrs. Morrissey believes, is largely due to Earhart's straightforward personality. "There was no commercialism. Amelia was herself," she said.

Mrs. Morrissey's home is a kind of shrine to Amelia. Beside the bed is a tiny pink airplane on a key ring. A golden toy plane hangs in a doorway.

Hanging on the walls are paintings and drawings of Amelia flashing her wide smile, an airplane somewhere in the background.

The Earhart sisters settled in the Boston area when Muriel was at Harvard University earning a master's degree in education. Amelia took up social work at a settlement house, teaching English to immigrants, but quit social work to write and lecture about her aviation feats, becoming an early emblem for women wanting the same freedom as men.

In 1928, Earhart became the first woman to fly the Atlantic, taking the 20 hour, 40-minute flight to Britain as a passenger with two male fliers. Afterward she set more than a dozen speed and distance records including flying the Atlantic solo in 1932, becoming the first woman to do so.

Researchers testing substance that could be blood substitute

LUBBOCK (AP) — Production and testing of a possible human blood substitute using cattle hemoglobin will be stepped up in hopes of obtaining permission to begin testing on humans, says the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center researcher who developed the substance.

Dr. Mario Feola, professor of surgery at TTUHSC, said Friday he will be able to increase production of the hemoglobin preparation ten-fold so that other researchers may conduct tests. The expansion of the project is being funded by $500,000 contributed by private investors, said health sciences center officials.

Feola and two associates have developed a chemical process by which hemoglobin is extracted from cattle blood, purified and combined with other chemical compounds to enhance its oxygen-carrying capacity.

The substance has been tested on laboratory animals ranging from mice to monkeys and has shown effectiveness in resuscitating them from hemorrhages while showing no signs of toxicity, Feola said.

"When a process is a laboratory process such as ours is now, production quantities are relatively small and production is extremely precise," said Feola, adding that he will submit a patent application on the process later this month.

"When we move to a larger scale of production, we want to be sure we can maintain the same precision with which it is produced in laboratory quantities."

Feola believes the substance could be used effectively on humans because his studies have shown that the hemoglobin substance does not stimulate the production of antibodies in monkeys.

The research has been presented to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, which requested that additional studies on animals be done. After the additional testing is performed, the results will be submitted later this year in hopes of obtaining permission to begin human trials.

Scientists around the world have been seeking to develop a substance that could serve as a replacement for human blood.

Feola, who has been researching a blood substitute for 15 years, says the potential benefits are many.

"A blood substitute could reduce the chances of diseases such as hepatitis and AIDS from being transmitted by blood transfusions," said Feola, because cattle hemoglobin isn't susceptible to those diseases.

Such a blood substitute also could eliminate the need for blood typing, according to Feola.

"This would certainly have a favorable effect on blood supply availability and could change emergency treatment procedures, whether for accident victims or heart attack patients," he said.

Other potential uses include enabling doctors to keep potential transplant organs functioning longer while a recipient is found and to create a blood bank for animals.

An animal blood bank could allow transfusions to be given to valuable livestock which suffer serious injury, Feola said.

While others researchers around the country have developed blood substitutes, Feola claims his alone maintains blood volume, transports both oxygen and carbon dioxide and stimulates the bone marrow to rapidly reproduce natural blood elements while being free of side effects.

"Our project is different because we use a hemoglobin derived from cattle red blood cells," he said.

Sharing the same structure in all mammals, hemoglobin is the protein within red blood cells which carries oxygen. What results in blood differences among mammals and blood types in humans is additional proteins attached to the hemoglobin, Feola explained.

Although bovine hemoglobin's structure is similar to that of humans, those proteins and other substances must be stripped and purified, he said.

Cattle hemoglobin is used, Feola said, because of its large-scale availability and its capacity for oxygen transportation is greater than human hemoglobin.

(Dr. Mario) Feola and two associates have developed a chemical process by which hemoglobin is extracted from cattle blood, purified and combined with other chemical compounds to enhance its oxygen-carrying capacity.

Driver arrives with food, clothes, leaves with refugees

HOUSTON (AP) — When Kathryn Ortega rented a truck to deliver 4,000 pounds of food and clothing to Brownsville this week for Central American refugees, she didn't expect to haul back a load of Nicaraguans struggling to leave the Rio Grande Valley.

"They were saying, 'Please take us with you,' so we called up Immigration, got them processed and brought them back with us," said Mrs. Ortega, director of a local anti-communist organization called the Freedom Trails.

Refugees, mostly natives of Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala, had been waiting in the Valley area for adjudication of their asylum requests until a federal judge temporarily lifted a travel ban.

Although they now have the court's permission, many of the immigrants have no transportation or funds to leave South Texas to live with relatives, mostly in Miami or Los Angeles.

When Mrs. Ortega's moving truck from Houston pulled up at the Casa Romero halfway house in Brownsville and unloaded the bags of rice, beans and other items, the empty space in the truck beckoned.

Fifty-two women, children and men crowded into the back of the yellow moving truck — filling it to the edge of the open door — and arrived in Houston about 1 a.m. Thursday.

"I was crying when I left because so many more wanted to come and were asking us when we would be coming back," Mrs. Ortega said. "We just didn't have room for everyone."

At each stop they made in towns along the eight-hour trip from Brownsville to Houston, police officials questioned them, she said.

"We had the door wide open so we obviously were not trying to hide anything. But we'd get back on the phone and clear it through immigration again," Mrs. Ortega said.

Most of the passengers were bound for other destinations, but the trip to Houston brought them one step closer, said Marta Lezcano, 26, who was traveling with her 8-year-old son and 28-year-old brother to Los Angeles.

"There's so much repression there (in Nicaragua). It's very dangerous and we didn't want our brother fighting in the war," Ms. Lezcano said.

Roberto Guadamuz, a 37-year-old psychologist who attended the Universidad Nacional Autonomo de Nicaragua in Managua, made the trip with his wife and two young daughters.

"That is a communist government. They are friends of Russia who are involved in the war," he said.

"But it's not a war of the people. It's the government's war," Guadamuz said.

He plans to join friends of the family in Miami and hopes to eventually attend college.

Fewer than 10 of the 52 who came back with Mrs. Ortega to the southwest Houston apartment complex she manages will be staying in this city, she said.

Refugees remaining in Houston, will mostly be staying with relatives, but even those passing through are seeking temporary shelter and legal counsel.

Mark Zwick, director of Casa Juan Diego, said his shelter earlier this week had about 50 immigrants staying there and had room for about 50 more.

But as of Thursday, all the beds were full with Mrs. Ortega's passengers filling up the house, Zwick said.

"But we have mattresses that we can put on the floor and at least they'll have a warm place to stay, and food," he said.

Mrs. Ortega and her husband, Jaime Ortega, a defector from Nicaragua's Sandinista regime, received invitations to attend President-elect George Bush's inauguration because of their work with the Freedom Trails. They plan to attend.

Greyhound defends carrying refugees from Texas to Florida

DALLAS (AP) — A bus company on Friday defended its ridership policy for Central American refugees who are traveling its line from the Rio Grande Valley to Florida, where they are getting a mixed reception from officials there.

Homeless, hungry Central Americans arrived in Miami on Greyhound buses Friday. They were among the first wave of people pouring in from South Texas after a federal judge ruled that the Immigration and Naturalization Service could no longer hold them there.

A Florida lawmaker called the exodus from Texas unfair to his state, which has been overwhelmed by immigrants in recent years.

"If Washington learned anything from (the 1980 Mariel boatlift), it's that America must have an immigration policy based on order and fairness," said Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla.

But Greyhound spokeswoman Liz Hale said many of the aliens boarding buses in Texas are merely paying an $89 winter discount that has been running since Nov. 1.

"We're not really giving special fares," said Ms. Hale, saying the discounts are unrelated to the refugee influx. "The misconception in Miami is that Greyhound is somehow giving special fares for the refugees."

The normal Greyhound fare from Brownsville to Miami is $144, she said. But the fare is reduced to $79 with a 14-day advance purchase, which was waived for refugees if each ticket was purchased by a church.

"If anything, it's been a hindrance for us because we're not making any money," said Ms. Hale, adding that the company has to "deadhead" buses from Houston and San Antonio.

"The bus driver drives empty buses to Brownsville," she said.

Bill would place Bishop College in UT system

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill introduced in the Texas House would place a small, predominantly black Dallas college, which recently closed for lack of money, under the control of the University of Texas System.

Bishop College, founded by a group of ex-slaves in Marshall in 1881 and moved to Dallas in 1961, declared bankruptcy and laid off faculty and staff members last August after trying to reorganize.

The bill was introduced by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston. Aide Eric Glenn said that Wilson is concerned about the fate of the few mostly black colleges in Texas.

"It's an old school and it was performing a function, but it's just unfortunate that it, being a private university, didn't have the funding that many other private institutions have," Glenn said.

Some 300 students were enrolled at Bishop last January as the school began its last semester.

UT system officials, who said they hadn't been informed of the proposal, said such a merger would raise difficult questions.

Gerald Hill, vice chancellor for governmental relations, said the Legislature would have to agree to provide money for the UT system to absorb the college's debts.

Hill said lawmakers also would have to determine whether the Legislature could sufficiently fund the school in the future.

Millionaire buys car dealership

HOUSTON (AP) — Jerry J. Moore, the Houston developer and shopping center owner whose wealth is estimated at more than $600 million, has added a Rolls-Royce dealership to his list of holdings.

The purchase of McGinnis Rolls-Royce includes additional property and will provide enough land for three acres of new and used cars. The purchase price was not disclosed.

The newly acquired dealership will feature Rolls-Royce, Bentley and Sterling cars and is being renamed British Royal Motor Car Ltd.

"I plan to buy more new car dealerships in Houston and Dallas and continue resort and motel development in Texas and New Mexico," Moore said Thursday. "I could go anywhere in the nation but prefer to stay in this area because I have confidence in the returning economy of Texas."

Moore, 61, a self-made multimillionaire born in Houston, owns and operates 162 shopping centers in Houston and elsewhere in Texas. He is one of only seven Houstonians on the "Forbes" magazine list of the 400 richest Americans.

A 1931 Bugatti Royale Berline de Voyage automobile sold to Moore for a record $6.5 million at a Nevada auction in June 1986 was later purchased from him for more than $8.1 million by Thomas Monaghan of Ann Arbor, Mich., who is best known as the founder of Domino Pizza.

"Anybody who could make that deal ought to have a future in the car business," Moore said.

Moore's private car collection, considered by the DuPont Registry as one of the most extensive in the world, includes 30 classic Rolls Royces. The collection totals 600 vehicles, including about 100 that are on display at Moores' Antique Car Museum.

Moore said vintage Rolls Royces will be displayed at the auto dealership from time to time.

Moore plans to develop another auto museum at his Columbia Lakes resort and residential development in West Columbia, south of Houston. Tenneco Inc. sold Columbia Lakes to Moore last year.

Dog attacks on sheep herds have increased

ANTHONY (AP) — Authorities in neighboring New Mexico and Texas counties have agreed to work together in an effort to curb the number of dog attacks on area sheep herds.

During a meeting this week, representatives from Dona Ana County in New Mexico and El Paso County in Texas agreed to increase patrols by animal control officers in the area.

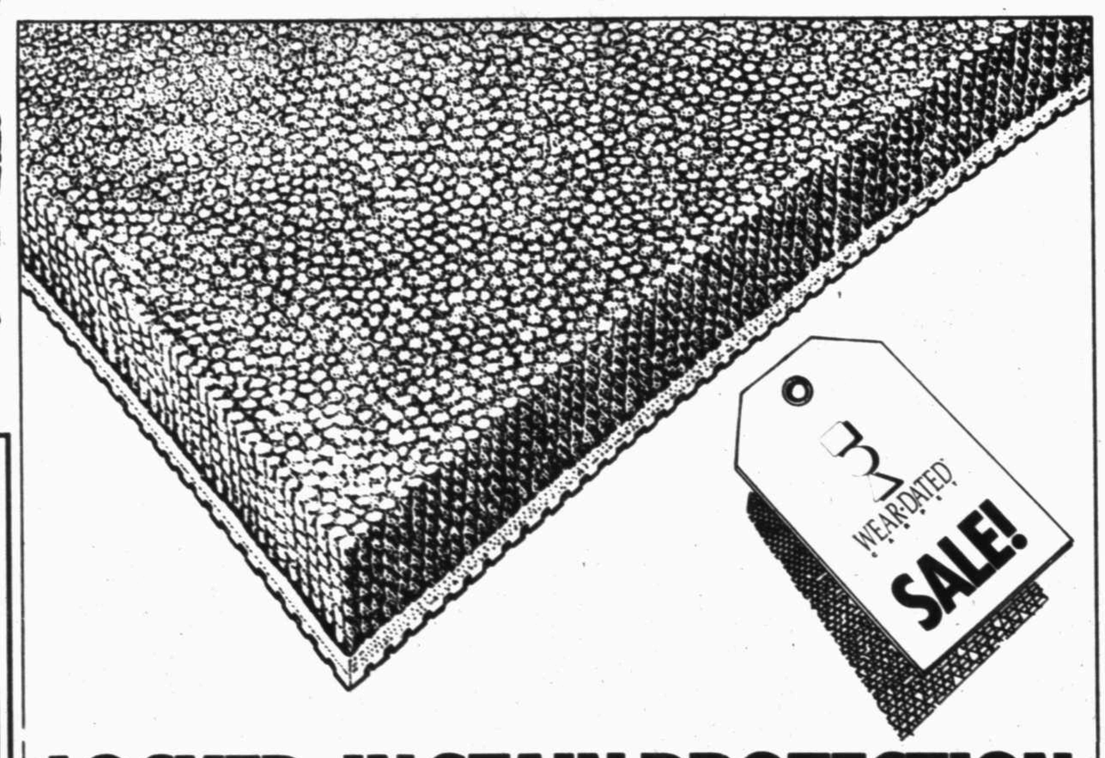

The joint campaign follows the killing by dog packs of more than 100 sheep from an experimental flock near the La Tuna Federal Prison. In the most recent attack on Jan. 3, four dogs killed 39 lambs and four ewes.

Reseachers with the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported this week 141 dogs have been trapped and shot on prison land in recent weeks.

Ministry to homeless losing his home

New York Times News Service

NEWARK, N.J. — The Rev. James W. Parrott raised his eyes to the dingy ceiling, blessed the dozens of homeless people huddled around tables waiting for their only hot meal of the day and prayed for a "miracle on Broad Street."

His Pentecostal church on Broad Street here, which blossomed from a street-corner ministry into a 160-member congregation and daytime refuge for the homeless, must move out of its 136-year-old building by Jan. 15. The imposing but dilapidated stone building was deemed unsafe by the Presbytery of Newark, which owns it.

The Presbytery, in East Orange, allowed Parrott's fledgling ministry to move into the building in 1974 and has been paying for some of its programs and all the upkeep since then.

Now, however, the $2,500 monthly utility bills and the structural repairs necessary to keep the building open are too much for the Presbytery to pay, said its administrator, Carrie Washington. She said the cost of repairs has been estimated at more than $300,000.

"We will continue to work with them, try to do whatever we can," she said. "But we must recognize our limitations." The Presbytery of Newark serves as headquarters for the 52 Presbyterian churches in New Jersey.

Parrott's church, the South Park Lighthouse Temple, provides thousands of the city's homeless and poor people with free hot lunches, medical and spiritual care, job counseling, showers and a wall of free clothing that the minister calls "the mall." The church has a large room with tables and chairs where people can eat and socialize.

Parrott, a burly man with a deep, baritone voice, said his ministry is well known among the city's poor.

"All you have to say is 'the church that feeds the poor,' that's even better than the address," he said.

The Presbytery's decision to shut down the building has caused deep resentment among members of Parrott's congregation. "There is quite a bit of hostility," he said.

And members of New Jersey Presbyterian churches who have donated money to the Newark church over the years "are a little bit hurt" by the reaction, Ms. Washington said.

She said that Presbyterian church members who visited the Newark church "got a little embarrassed," by its the deteriorated condition.

"I think it's a shame that two religious institutions can't get along," Parrott said.

In September, after several warnings and two architectural studies that called the building dangerous and structurally unsound, the Presbytery told Parrott's church to lock its doors, Ms. Washington said.

Parrott said he consulted an architect who said the building was in need of repairs but not in danger of collapsing. He filed suit and won an injunction against the Presbytery, which agreed to let him stay until Jan. 15, while he tried to keep his programs operating.

Now the congregation has no building and little money, Parrott said.

The church served as many as 300 hot lunches per day, four days a week, said Steven F. Parrott, the minister's son and office manager for the church.

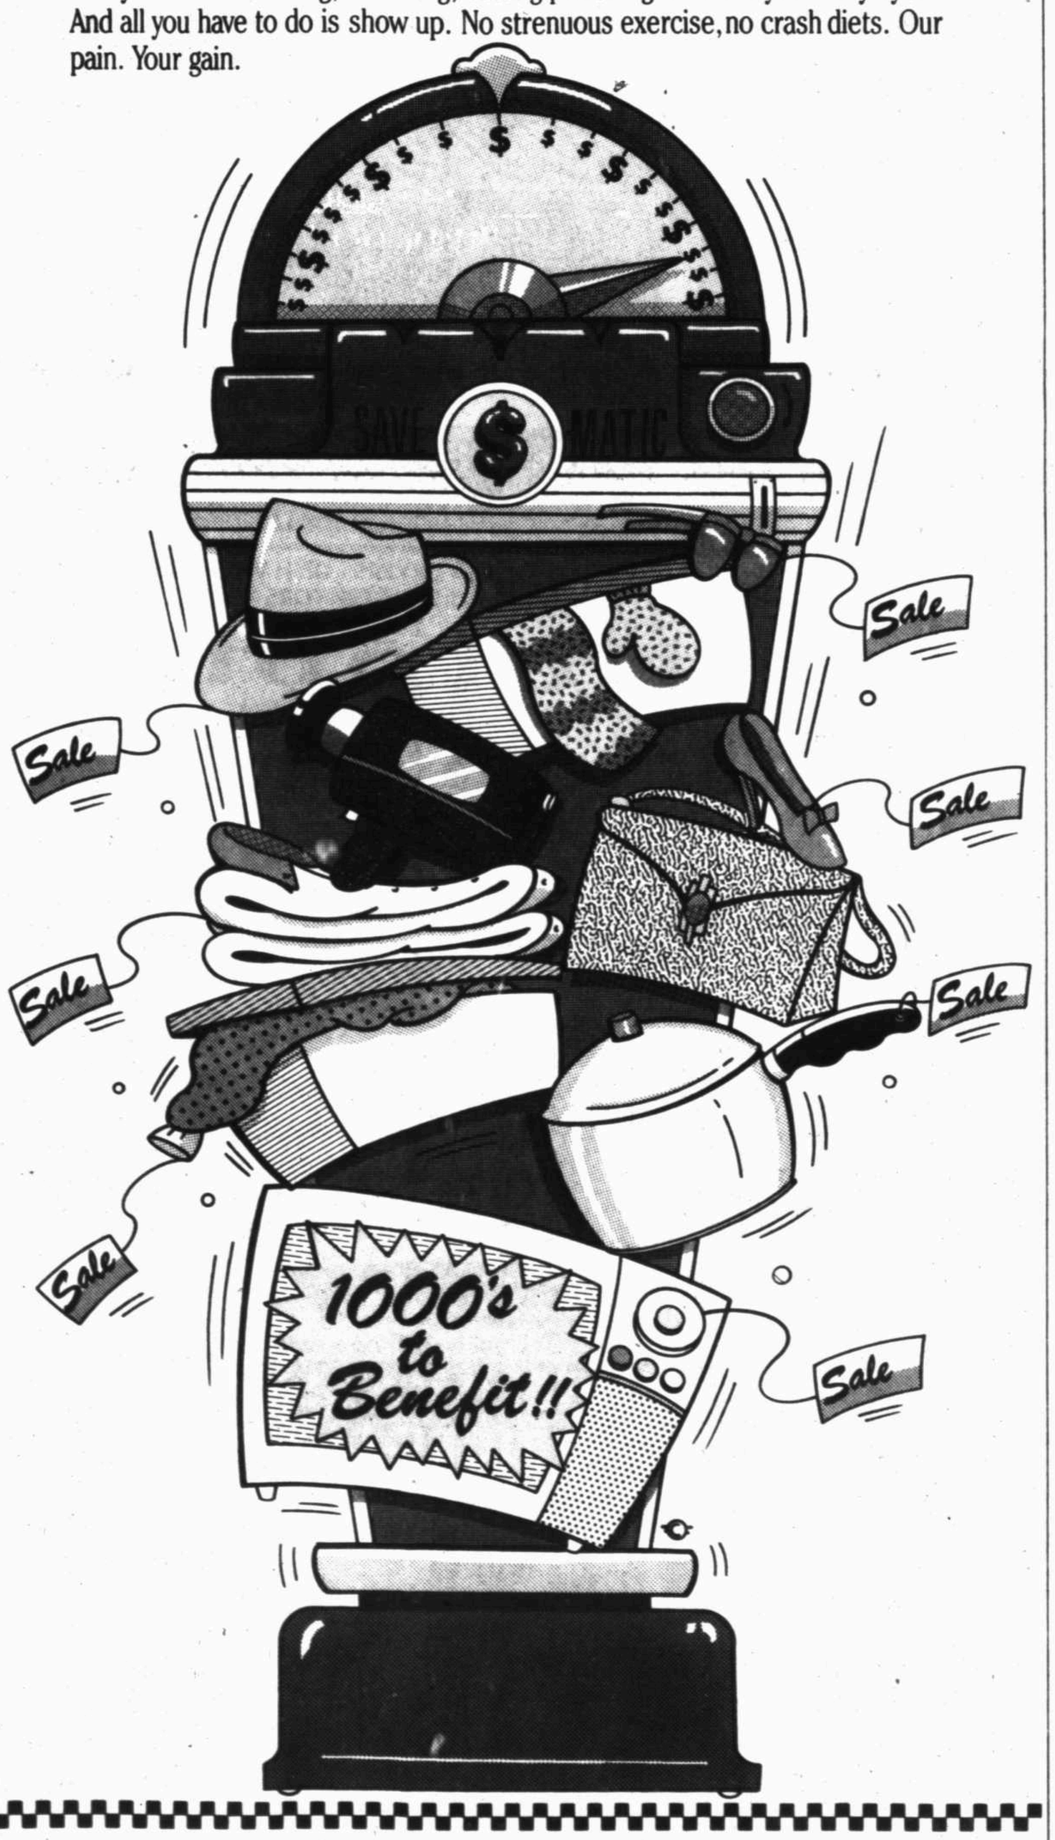

Though the hot-meal program officially ended after Christmas, Parrott said the church's head cook, his sister-in-law Betty E. Martin, "has a heart, and she just couldn't stop."

"People kept coming around," the minister said.

"I like to come here," said Eva Mae Porter, a thin, soft-spoken woman who came to the church for Christmas dinner. "I feel something different" in the building, she said. "It's a religious place."

Incredible post-holiday reducing plan!

We put on a lot of extra pounds over the holidays. And we're out to lose 'em. Sweaters, coats, shoes, scarves, dresses—heavyweight fashions and merchandise throughout the mall. Here's our plan: Every store is slimming, trimming, cutting prices right before your very eyes! And all you have to do is show up. No strenuous exercise, no crash diets. Our pain. Your gain.

Goetz sentenced to one year in jail, fined $5,000

Goetz

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz, who shot four young black men on the subway and was convicted only of illegal gun possession, was sentenced Friday to one year in jail and fined $5,000 after a judge noted he had shown no remorse.

"I do feel this case is really more about the deterioration of society than it is about me," Goetz told the court before the sentence was pronounced. "Society needs to be protected from criminals."

Goetz's lack of remorse "gave me concern he might recidivate in possessing a firearm," said state Supreme Court Justice Stephen Crane in Manhattan. Supreme Court is New York state's trial-level court.

The now-famous defendant, who faced one to seven years, decided to go ahead with his sentencing even though he has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to review his case because he wants to get the jail time over with, said his attorney, Mark Baker.

"He's resigned to the fact that he's going to jail," Baker said. "He's paid his bills for the next few months and gotten his affairs in order. He's tense and apprehensive."

Under a one-year prison sentence, Goetz gets credit for nine days he already served immediately after his arrest, and becomes eligible for parole in 51 days.

Goetz left immediately for Rikers Island city jail, smiling meekly at court officers as he was led away. The Correction Department agreed to a defense request that Goetz be kept in protective custody there, Baker said.

"There is no rhyme, reason or reality to Bernhard Goetz going to jail," Goetz's other attorney, Barry Slotnick, said after the sentencing. He had urged that his client's sentence be limited to the nine days he had already served.

"He has lived in a fishbowl (due to publicity) and he should not go to jail," Slotnick told the judge.

Assistant District Attorney Gregory Waples, calling Goetz "a potential danger to himself and New York society," sought a one-year sentence with supervised parole so that Goetz would be forced to undergo psychiatric treatment.

Goetz shot the teen-agers in December 1984. He fled to New Hampshire, then surrendered, saying he had shot the men because he felt he was about to be robbed. The case became a sensation of the talk-show airwaves and editorial pages, prompting debates on racism, self-defense and vigilantism.

NATION

To many blacks in particular, Goetz was a cold-hearted criminal, a symbol of racially-motivated violence; to many whites, particularly gun owners, he was the "subway vigilante," an ordinary citizen protecting his rights.

Goetz was acquitted in June 1987 of attempted murder, assault and other charges and convicted only of possessing the gun used at the time.

On Oct. 19, 1987, Crane sentenced Goetz to six months in jail, a $5,000 fine, 200 hours community service, five years' probation and psychiatric counseling.

But last year, a mid-level appeals court overturned the sentence, saying the judge should have followed the state gun control law, which mandated a one-year sentence. The case was returned to Crane for resentencing.

Baker said he and Slotnick asked the U.S. Supreme Court on Jan. 6 to review the case because they are challenging the conviction itself.

But because Goetz wants to get the jail time over with, the attorneys did not request that the sentencing be held off until the Supreme Court rules within six to eight weeks, Baker said.

"We all decided to proceed and not delay it any further," Baker said. "If he gets the straight time (of a year in jail), we won't appeal that" either.

If the high court decides to review the case, however, the attorneys would ask that Goetz's sentence be interrupted, Baker said.

Three of the four teen-agers Goetz shot recovered. The fourth was brain-damaged and partially paralyzed. Goetz claimed he shot them in self-defense because he was about to be robbed; the youths claimed they were panhandling.

Goetz's sentence is "an outrage and gives license to bigots and lunatics all over the city of New York to go out and blast people who they hate and fear," said Ron Kuby, a lawyer representing one of the teenagers, Darrell Cabey, in a multi-million-dollar suit against Goetz.

He said he had spoken with Cabey's mother, who expressed disappointment with the verdict. "She was hoping a stiff sentence would prevent other people from going out and doing to black youth what Bernhard Goetz did to Darrell Cabey. Unfortunately, that's not going to happen."

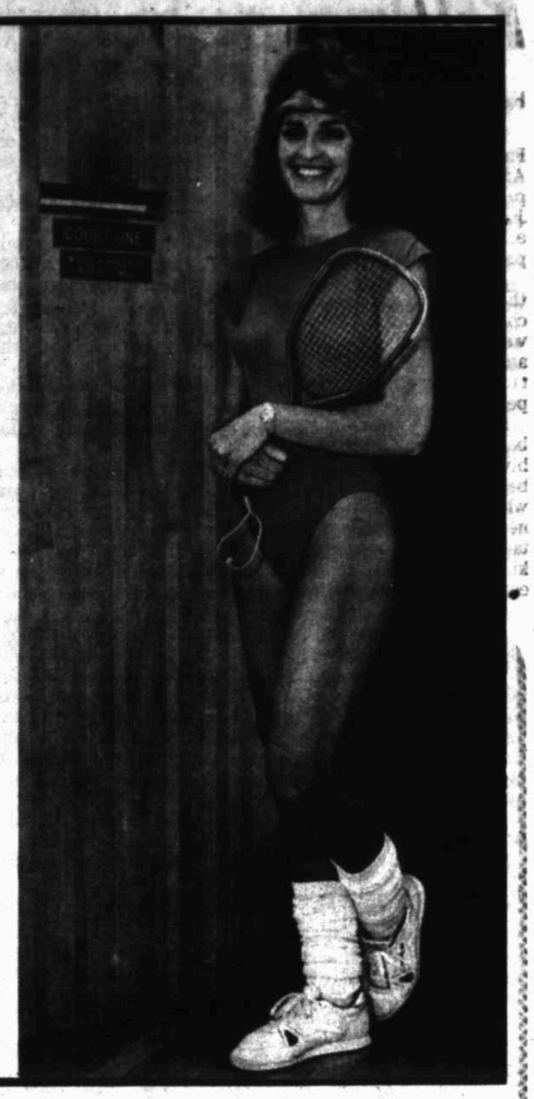

Mayor Edward I. Koch said he thought the sentence was appropriate, saying of those who carry illegal handguns, "Every one of them should serve a year in jail. No exceptions."

Despite all the headlines and public debate that the Goetz case spawned, it is difficult to say if the case changed the lives of anyone not directly involved in the shooting or its prosecution.

In the place it logically would have had the greatest impact — the subways — police say they can see little effect.

"I don't really see any pattern at all that exists based on that particular case," said Sgt. Bob Valentino, a spokesman for the transit police.

Killing hive best defense against bees, Mexico resident says

Hearst News Service

MOTUL, MEXICO — Don Estevan Pinto Poot was not alarmed when African bees first showed up in this provincial Yucatan town early last July. The interlopers were exhausted by their flight from Belize and presented little apparent danger.

A couple of weeks of munching on the abundant local wildflowers changed all that. Thirty-five people were reported attacked that month and the hives of the Yucatan's traditional Italianized bee were penetrated.

In mid-September, Hurricane Gilbert arrived, ripping apart domestic hives and freeing 100,000 African bees from their traps. Soon after, the white-haired old beekeeper and his nephew, Alejo, were viciously attacked; Alejo was covered with the killers from head to toe, like a beaded curtain, and was bedridden for several weeks. After Alejo and Estevan had beaten back the bees, they tossed a smoke bomb into the boxes, exterminating the entire hive.

"It's the only way — you have to kill them all," Estevan said, displaying a plastic bag of bombed bees. "If we don't get them now, they're going to kill a child."

Killer bees have slowly been buzzing northward ever since 26 imported swarms of African bees were released in South America 30 years ago in an ill-fated attempt to improve Brazilian honey production. Expected to cross into the United States in 1990, the escapees have provided material for "Saturday Night Live" skits and grade-B movie directors as they swarm their way toward the United States.

Entomologists on both sides of the U.S.-Mexico border, and local beekeepers in the Yucatan who produce 40 percent of Mexico's honey, are not laughing, however. African bees, though their threat to humans may be exaggerated, sting more readily than the domestic variety and have killed more than 350 people during their northward march. They also threaten to replace the indigenous bees, posing a serious threat to honey production and to crops that depend upon pollination.

As a result, Mexico has become the critical line of defense against the bees reaching the United States — a fact that leaves local beekeepers suspicious.

Having long given up the idea of wiping out the killer bees altogether, U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists are involved in a major effort in Mexico to "manage" their strain — dilute the bee's traits with gentler European genetic stock.

Whereas some U.S. scientists doubt that the $8.7 million "Plan Roadblock" will succeed, several beekeepers here said they suspected the program intended to endanger Mexican honey production in order to save the $20 billion U.S. industry from the threat.

"It's true," said Estevan, a technician employed by the Mexican government's national African bee control program. "Our honey has the best aroma. You can smell it at 60 feet. The gringos' honey is sweet too, but it doesn't have our perfume. That's why they sent the African bees in here."

Dr. Elva Quintero, who administers the joint U.S.-Mexican Control Program for the USDA in Mexico, is stung by the accusations of underhanded motives: "The Africanized bee is a fact of life. We are here to teach Mexicans how to live with the bee."

Report indicates fatalities up with higher speed limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traffic fatalities on rural interstate highways in states that raised the speed limit to 65 miles per hour increased by an average nearly three times as high as in states that kept the limit at 55, the government reported Friday.

But the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, in releasing the first of three annual reports, said some states such as California actually showed fewer deaths on rural interstates after new speeds were posted. The report also said there is not enough evidence to determine the speed limit's long-term impact on highway safety.

Critics of the increase said the increased death toll was enough evidence to return to the 55 mph limit nationwide.

"This report can be summed up in two words: speed kills," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., chairman of the Senate Appropriations transportation subcommittee, who has opposed the increase.

The report, which took nearly a year to compile, compares 1986 with 1987. It showed that the 38 states which raised the speed limit after April 2, 1987, when Congress allowed it, averaged a 19 percent increase in fatalities on rural interstates. The 10 states that did not averaged a 7 percent increase.

Overall, 373 more people died on rural interstates in 1987 than in 1986, the report said. Of those, 352 were in states that raise the speed limit and 21 in states that did not.

The highway safety agency, in its 67-page report, says rural interstate fatalities account for only 5 percent of Americans killed in road accidents and the increase had on a small impact on overall traffic fatalities which total about 46,000 a year.

"This report (by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration) can be summed up in two words: speed kills."
— Sen. Frank Lautenberg D-N.J.

The report notes that 24,000 people are killed each year in crashes where alcohol is involved and 8,000 are pedestrians hit by vehicles.

"NHTSA continues to believe that setting speed limits is a matter for state legislatures to decide based on their review of available fatality and injury data, actual experience and local conditions," the report said.

It noted "substantial variation" among the states, with Arizona and New Mexico experiencing large increases in fatalities after raising the limit to 65 but Connecticut, Georgia, Hawaii, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Virginia also showing increased death tolls with no change in the speed limit.

States that increased the speed limit to 65 and had overall decreases in traffic fatalities included Colorado, Florida, Indiana, Maine, New Hampshire, Montana, Oklahoma and Oregon.

The report said 64 percent of the increase in rural Interstate accidents occurred in six states: Arizona, California, Louisiana, New Mexico, Tennessee and Texas. In California, rural interstate fatalities decreased to 102 for the portion of 1987 in which the limit was increased, from 106 in the same period of 1986, while interstate fatalities on 55 mph highways increased.

In some states, there are so few rural highway fatalitites that annual increases and decreases may be due to normal random fluctuation, the report said.

GM nakes first donation to new memorial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of a planned memorial honoring blacks who served in the Revolutionary War banked their first major corporate contribution Friday and said they hoped to build it in Washington by 1991.

Design and construction of the Black Revolutionary War Patriots' Memorial is expected to cost about $4 million, said Bill Noack, a spokesman for General Motors, which contributed $25,000 to the project.

GM also plans to sponsor a dinner in Washington on May 23 aimed at raising another $250,000, Noack said.

The memorial is intended to honor the 5,000 black soldiers and sailors who fought in the Revolutionary War as well as black slaves who ran away or petitioned for freedom during the era, according to Maurice A. Barboza, president of the Black Revolutionary War Patriots' Foundation.

GM Group Vice President Marina Whitman, who presented the $25,000 check to Barboza at a news conference, said, "We are here today to correct the historical record, if you will. The 5,000 or so black Americans who served in the Revolution and the many who gave their support are not prominent in the pages of history...(yet) they made a meaningful contribution to our freedom as a nation."

Barboza said he hoped other corporations will contribute funds "that will help us memorialize these forgotten Americans."

President Reagan signed a law on March 25, 1988, authorizing construction of the memorial, which is expected to be in the area between the Lincoln Memorial and Washington Monument.

Mattress carries man to safety

CRYSTAL LAKE, Ill. (AP) — A flying mattress carried a 79-year-old man to safety as his suburban home was leveled by a natural gas explosion, authorities and the man said.

The incident occurred Thursday morning as James Steurer was sitting on his bed in this western Chicago suburb, putting on his shoes in preparation for a visit to his daughter-in-law.

Moments later, Steurer recalled afterward, he was still sitting on his mattress — outside on the driveway, blown out a side wall of his home by the force of the gas explosion.

"I landed outside, picked up my mattress and it was on fire, so I tried to put it out," he said. "What could you think at that point?"

The explosion scattered broken glass, threw a side wall of the home against a next-door neighbor's garage, sent pieces of wood onto neighboring rooftops and gave off a blast of heat that melted the siding on a neighboring house.

"Absolutely I'm lucky," said Steurer as firefighters searched through the remains of his $50,000 wood-frame home for clues to the cause of the strange occurrence. He suffered only a few minor scratches.

Steurer had one request for firefighters: "Do you think you could find my car keys and glasses?"

Crystal Lake Fire Chief Richard Nebel said investigators had determined that the incident was a natural gas explosion but have not been able to pinpoint the cause.

SPELLING BEE 1989

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1989 Regional Spelling Bee April 15 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through April 14. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

jär'gen

jargon — (noun) A few years ago a new type of "jargon" called "Valley Talk" originated among California students. Such words as "grotty," "bog," and "like" took on new definitions for this group. "Jargon" can be traced to the Middle French word meaning "twittering." As time passed, however, "jargon," came to mean "meaningless chatter," which probably explains how "jargon" got its present-day meaning of "a special vocabulay fashionable in a particular group or clique." To an outsider, this "jargon," would seem like "meaningless chatter." Do you and your classmates use any "jargon" that drives your parents crazy?

Two Teamsters union officials convicted of payroll padding

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two Teamsters union officials were convicted Friday of federal charges they participated in a $700,000 payroll padding scheme that involved hiring "ghost employees" who were paid but did little or no work.

A U.S. District Court jury found Harold Friedman, 66, a Teamsters international vice president and president of the Ohio Council of Teamsters, guilty on four counts: labor racketeering, conspiracy to commit labor racketeering, embezzlement and filing false reports. He was acquitted of one count of embezzlement and one count of filing false reports.

Teamsters Local 507 Recording Secretary Anthony Hughes, 52, was found guilty of all three charges against him: labor racketeering, conspiracy to commit labor racketeering and embezzlement, which could carry penalties of up to 45 years in prison and a fine up of to $60,000.

Hughes was accused of being a "ghost employee," an employee paid for doing no work.

Friedman faces a maximum sentence of 46 years in prison and fines up to $70,000 on the convictions. No sentencing date has been set.

When the verdict was announced, Hughes looked down and shook his head, but Friedman showed no emotion. A couple of women in a crowd of supporters cried, and another ran out of the courtroom sobbing.

Jackie Presser, Teamsters international president until his death of brain cancer July 9, was indicted with Friedman and Hughes on May 16, 1986, but was never tried. His illness prompted repeated delays in the trial, which started Oct. 24 and heard from 80 witnesses.

Court documents have indicated that Presser, also secretary-treasurer of Local 507, and Hughes were FBI informants. Presser's former attorney, John R. Climaco, has said Presser's defense would have been that he was authorized by the FBI to hire "ghost employees" to enhance and protect his informant status.

The prosecution contended that Presser couldn't have been authorized to hire "ghost employees" because they were on the payroll as early as 1972 and Presser didn't begin informing until 1977. Friedman's attorney said Presser was a government informant in 1963.

Lawyers for Friedman and Hughes asked U.S. District Judge George W. White to release documents about Presser's work as an informant, but the judge declined, preserving the mystery over who Presser informed on and when.

When White declined to release the documents, Friedman and Hughes rested their case without using the defense planned by Presser. Friedman testified that as far as he knew, the alleged "ghost employees" worked for their pay.

The jury deliberated Wednesday afternoon and all day Thursday before returning to court Friday, when they asked White if they would be permitted to deliberate on Monday, Martin Luther King Jr. Day. The judge said no.

Friedman, in addition to being one of 16 Teamsters international vice presidents, is president of Teamsters Joint Council 41 in northeast Ohio and president of both Teamsters Local 507 and Bakery Workers Local 19. The two locals share offices and have a combined membership of about 12,000.

A union officer must relinquish his union positions for 13 years if convicted of certain felonies, including embezzlement, a Labor Department official said.

Among the prosecution witnesses were three alleged "ghost employees" who testified that they were paid by the union and did little or no work.

Helms: Soviets preventing U.S. from inspecting missile containers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Friday the Soviet Union is preventing U.S. inspectors from X-raying containers leaving a Soviet missile assembly plant and is therefore violating the treaty banning medium-range, nuclear-armed missiles.

But the State Department said it expects full Soviet cooperation when the X-ray equipment is ready to be installed and is satisfied that existing procedures will enable the detection of any banned medium-range SS-20 missile attempting to leave the factory.

"The United States is satisfied with the implementation of the...treaty to date," said department spokesman Charles Redmond.

Helms, in a letter to President Reagan, called inspection rights at Votkinsk the "heart and keystone" of the treaty's verification system and said that under the treaty's terms the U.S. inspection team should have been able to X-ray all items leaving the factory by last Dec. 1, six months after the treaty went into effect.

"The package of procedures that the Soviets obligated themselves to allow have not been agreed, in part because the Soviets have made unacceptable demands for other procedures and provisions," Helms said.

"Because of this failure to agree to the U.S. X-ray rights, the U.S. X-ray equipment is still not installed at Votkinsk," he said.

Helms asked Reagan what he intends to do to "prevent the Soviets from continuing to exploit their potential to cheat at Votkinsk" and added:

"Due to Soviet intransigence, the U.S. has been totally unable to monitor effectively or verify whether the Soviets have continued to manufacture or deploy perhaps dozens of banned SS-20 missiles from the Votkinsk factory for the last eight months that the treaty has been in force."

But at the State Department, Redmond said that any problem was a minor one.

"The Soviet Union agrees fully with the right of the United States to install that kind of equipment," Redmond said, adding that the Soviets will have the same X-raying privileges at the U.S. facility at Magna, Utah.

"We are now in the final stage of working out of the details of implementing this right," Redmon said. "The United States is in the final stage of testing the appropriate equipment for this particular verification method."

"When we are fully ready to install our equipment we expect the Soviet Union will cooperate with us fully," he said.

A 30-person U.S. team continuously monitors the Votkinsk facility and has inspected every vehicle leaving it large enough to contain an SS-20, Redmon said.

Additionally. he said the inspection team is "opening randomly selected SS-25 canisters."

"This particular monitoring activity is but one element of a comprehensive set of verification procedures," Redmond said.

12,000-year-old time capsule uncovered at Ohio pig farm

GRANVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Paul Hooge stood in a horseshoe-shaped hollow and recognized what people had thought for nearly 12,000 years: Hills to the north, east and west block winter winds. Open land to the south lets in winter sunshine. There are nut trees and water close by.

It made the little spot a great place to live.

Hooge, executive director of the Licking County Archaeology and Landmarks Society, says two years of excavating by society workers, volunteers and researchers from Ohio State University resulted in discovery of the earliest undisturbed open-air Indian living site in Ohio.

Because farm plows haven't churned the soil, the site offers the potential for a wealth of information about the first Americans, called Paleo-Indians.

"There's an accumulation of cultural debris. It's a perfectly stratified site," Hooge says. "There are 12,000 years of history in one little spot. This is your proverbial time capsule."

Dee Anne Wymer, a senior research archaeologist with the society, plans to examine pottery, flint spear points, plant parts, nut shells, seeds, wood, charcoal and other debris she hopes will show how the continent's first humans lived.

Hooge and Wymer fix the age of the site because in September they found a nearly 12,000-year-old spear or knife point that is of the oldest type of Indian artifact found in Ohio. Archaeologists refer to the type of fluted point found at the site as a Clovis point.

"It may be the oldest Boy Scout knife in the state," Hooge says while leading a tour of the area.

The dig is called the pig site because farmers once raised pigs nearby. The property is owned by local developers Herb and Frank Murphy, who encourage the research.

Clovis points are characterized by a long groove running from the base of the point. That helped Indians jam the point into a bone or wooden shaft to use as a knife or spear, says archaeologist Brad Lepper of the Ohio Historical Society.

Clovis points were common across the continent about 11,000 to 11,500 years ago, he says.

John Thompson
...against Proposal 42

Thompson BC boycott to protest new rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — Georgetown basketball coach John Thompson Friday said he would walk off the court as soon as today's game against Boston College starts to protest the new NCAA rule on scholarships.

"I don't want to threaten anybody. I don't want to give any ultimatums," Thompson said. "But when the ball goes up, I intend on getting up off the bench and walking out."

Thompson said he might boycott more than one game and said assistants Mike Riley and Craig Esherick would coach in his absence.

Thompson is protesting proposal No. 42, approved at the NCAA convention in San Francisco Wednesday, which will prevent high school students who meet only part of the NCAA's entrance criteria from receiving scholarships their first year in college. The minimum criteria are a 2.0 grade-point average in a core curriculum and minimum score on one of two standardized entrance examinations.

Under Proposition 48, which has been in effect three years, a student could gain an athletic scholarship by meeting just part of the standards — either the minimum grade-point average or a passing score on the entrance exams.

The proposal passed by a 163-154 vote.

"With the vote as close as it was," Thompson said, "maybe it should have been tabled and discussed a little more, if it affects someone's outcome of someone's life.

"In moral conscience, I feel it is my responsibility to take a stand on this," said Thompson, who coached the U.S. Olympic basketball team to a bronze medal at the 1988 Summer Games. "I'm beginning to feel that a kid with a low socio-economic background has been invited to dinner, had dessert and is now being asked to leave."

Thompson complained that the minimum standards on college entrance examinations treat low income youths unfairly.

"I'm in support of core curriculum. I'm in support of 2.0," he said. "But I'm not in support of SAT scores which have been proven to be culturally biased."

Thompson stopped short of calling the NCAA racist but said, "I feel it is a discriminatory thing, especially for a kid who is at a low socio-economic level.

"If I jump up and down and holler racism, everyone will lose sight of the issue and focus on the words." But the Hoyas coach conceded, "Certainly, it has an effect on black people. Athletics has been a vehicle and a way out, and in a lot of instances the only hope a young person had. It (Proposal No. 42) is closing a lot of doors. It may not have been intended to do that, but that in fact is what it is going to do."

Boston College coach Jim O'Brien said he thinks Thompson "has a very valid point, and he feels something needs to be done right now. ... This is going to make a lot of noise."

"I agree with John on his feeling that it doesn't have a place in college athletics," O'Brien said. "Boston College is clearly a school that benefits from it, though, because some of the other (Big East) schools will not be able to get some of the players they would have gotten. It doesn't affect our school at all because we've already got tough entrance standards. Still, I don't think it's an appropriate rule."

O'Brien, however, did not think Thompson's action would have an impact on the Boston College-Georgetown meeting.

"I don't think it will effect the game one way or another because his kids will continue to play hard whether he's sitting there or not," he said.

Thompson said he planned to inform his players of his boycott decision later Friday.

The Rev. Timothy Healy, Georgetown's president, supported Thompson's decision.

QB's Marino, Elway hit million mark

BALTIMORE (AP) — Quarterbacks Dan Marino of the Miami Dolphins and John Elway of the Denver Broncos topped a list of 13 NFL players who made $1 million or more during 1988 in a salary survey published Friday.

Marino was the highest-paid player in the league with a $1.45 million salary. He wes in the third year of a six-year deal worth $9 million that he signed in 1986.

Elway, who earned $1.4 in 1988, completed the second year of a six-year contract that averages out to make him the highest-paid player in the league. The deal, signed in 1987, was worth $12.7 million, an average of $2,116,667 annually.

UNLESS some other player's contract is renegotiated, Elway will own the league's most lucrative contract until San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana begins a three-year contract in 1990 that pays him $2.55 million annually.

Howie Long of the Los Angeles Raiders was the league's highest-paid defensive player. The defensive end signed a seven-year, $9.7 million contract in October that will pay him an average of $1,385,714 annually.

Long and linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants topped the league's defensive players with $1 million salaries in 1988.

The salary survey was compiled and copyrighted by the National Football League Players Union and published Friday in The (San Diego) Tribune and the (Baltimore) Morning Sun.

ACCORDING to the NFLPA figures, salaries increased 13 percent in 1988.

The 1988 figures in the report include signing, roster and reporting bonuses, but not incentive clauses.

There were eight quarterbacks who made $1 million or more in 1988. After Marino and Elway came Cincinnati's Boomer Esiason and Buffalo's Jim Kelly, who each earned $1.2 million. Phoenix' Neil Lomax earned $1.15 million, Montana $1.1 million, Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham $1.05 and Washington's Doug Williams $1 million.

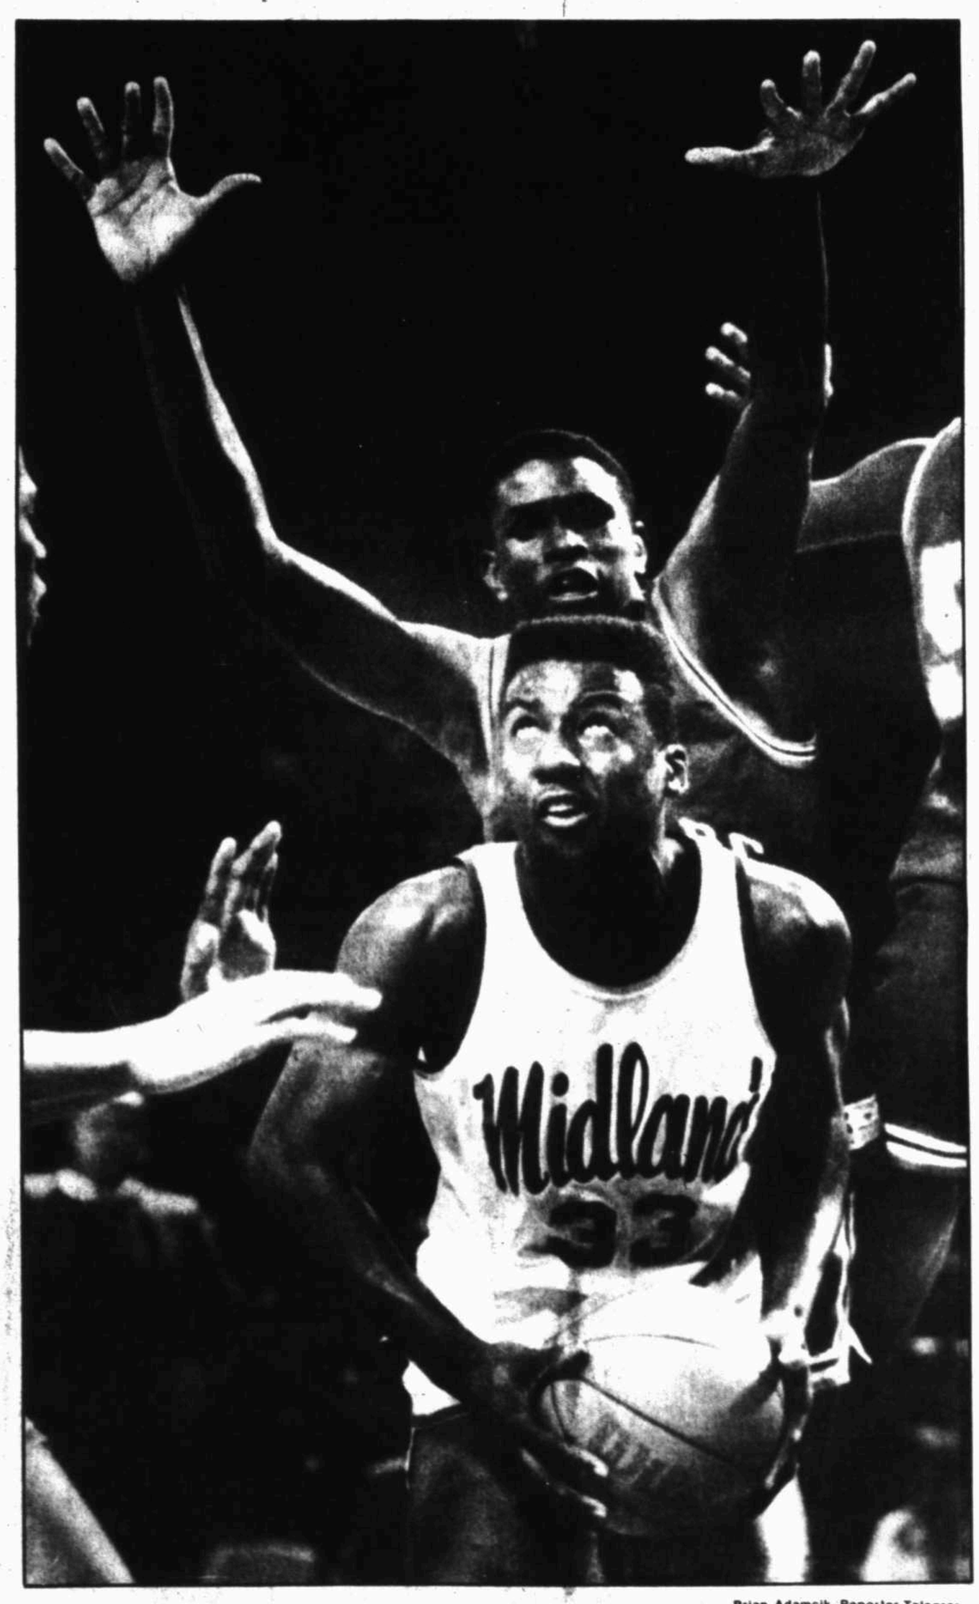

Eric Dickerson of the Indianapolis Colts topped the running backs with a $1.2 million salary. Marcus Allen of the Raiders was the only other seven-figure running back, earning $1 million last year.

Steve Largent of Seattle was the league's only wide receiver to earn $1 million, receiving $1.1 million.

TODD Christenson of the Raiders and Cleveland's Ozzie Newsome topped the league's tight ends with $750,000 salaries. Cincinnati's Anthony Munoz and Chicago's Jimbo Covert were the best-paid offensive linemen, each earning $525,000 in 1988.

The highest-paid kicker was Pittsburgh's Gary Anderson, who earned $350,000, while the top-paid punter was Sean Landeta of the who got $280,000.

Raymond Clayborn of the New England Patriots was the league's highest-paid defensive back in 1988, earning $875,000.

Midland High's Greg Lewis starts on his way up for two points against Abilene Cooper Friday night at Chaparral Center. Lewis scored a game high 23 points to pace a 54-50 MHS victory.

Dogs' rally bakes Cougs

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High's 54-50 victory over Abilene Cooper in a District 4-5A basketball game at Chaparral Center Friday night was a lot like the Microwave Oven Bowl.

No one really knows how a microwave oven really works and no one really knows how this verdict was decided in Midland High's favor. It was as weird as high technology itself.

Consider some facts:

— Abilene Cooper hit three consecutive three-point shots to open the game for a 9-0 lead while the Bulldogs were 0-for-5 during that stretch.

— The Cougars led 26-10, a 16-point margin, with 3:59 still left to play in the second period. Lights out time, right? Wrong.

— Midland High hits nine field goals in a 23-point third period, matching the total first half field goals (9-of-31) while taking 42-32 lead.

— MHS blows the lead as Cooper rallies in the fourth period, but hangs on to win.

SURE enough, it was like popping popcorn in a microwave oven. Hot in an instant and cold in an instant and messy in the process.

"It was a sloppy game. There is no question about that," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "The good thing about basketball tonight is that you have to play four quarters. We played three good quarters of ball against Hobbs Tuesday and lose. We play two fair quarters against Cooper and win. I learned a long time ago that you take the wins no matter how they come because we lost some games this year where we played much better.

"I know it's trite, but it's true. A win is a win is a win."

COOPER started out like a house on fire, hitting just about everything they threw up early while Midland High was just throwing up. But someone must have told the Cougars that it had started snowing outside the Chap and they became as cool as the weather while the Bulldogs were popping themselves into a shark-like frenzy in the third period.

"That lead we had just evaporated," said Cooper coach R.M. Currin. "Midland got hot and we went cold in the second half. If we can't hit the short jump shot, we aren't a very good team and our shots just didn't go down, except early in the game. Also, our post didn't go to the boards like he did in the first part of the game."

Rebel girls rip Abilene, 63-55

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Lady Rebels proved two things Friday night:

1) They are contenders in the District 4-5A girls basketball race, and

2) they are not a one-woman team.

The Lady Rebs were thrown for a mighty scare, but pulled themselves together to defeat Abilene High, 63-55, in district action Friday. With the win, the Rebs take command of second place with a 5-1 record, 16-5 overall; AHS falls to 3-2, 12-5. The Abilene Cooper Lady Cougars remain atop the district race with a perfect 5-0 record after defeating Midland High 70-39.

The most promising note for the Rebs?

Lee utilized more than just standout player Monica Ramirez to defeat the Lady Eagles as Marcia del Llano had 14 points and Kim Davis, who finished with 12, dropped in eight key fourth-quarter points en route to the win.

"A lot of people think we're a one person team," Lee coach Shirley Stephenson said. "But we're not."

That statement was highly evident in the Rebel win as del Llano had the best offensive game of her season, dropping in six first-quarter points before the Lady Eagles could even blink.

Del Llano's effort was a key because it enabled the Lady Rebs to overcome a huge deficit in the early going.

When Abilene High jumped out to a quick, highly impressive 13-2 run in the first quarter, it, quite frankly, looked as if these two teams didn't belong on the same floor together.

But as soon as the snow moved out of Midland Friday night, the Lady Eagles moved out of position to win the important league contest.

Despite that early downfall, the Lee girls took control, outrunning and outscoring AHS 28-13 the remainder of the first half.

"The style of play deteriorated," AHS coach Sam Nichols said. "I wasn't pleased at all with the style of play. We didn't shoot well from the line. We shoot 70 percent from the line, but tonight, we only shot 50 percent."

Nichols also atrributed the LHS victory on his team's over-control of Ramirez.

Steers shock Ponies at wire

BIG SPRING — Joe Downey hit a fallaway six-footer at the buzzer to give Big Spring a 74-73 win over Andrews in District 4-4A boys basketball action here Friday.

The Steers, 12-10 overall and 5-0 in 4-4A, took sole possession of first place in 4-4A with Friday's win. Andrews, 19-3 overall, dropped a game behind the Steers going into a district-wide open date Tuesday.

Big Spring led most of the last four minutes before Andrews' Damon Clay canned a jumper with 10 seconds left. The Steers brought the ball down quickly and Downey drew a foul by Gym Bice with four seconds left.

Or did he?

SEEMS that a referee blew his whistle after Clay's basket, but nobody listened. After an extended discussion with Andrews coach Frank Bice and Big Spring mentor Boyce Paxton, the refs disallowed the foul and gave the Steers possession with eight seconds left.

Tony Lewis dribbled around midcourt for several seconds before finding Downey to the left of the hoop. Downey then turned, leaned back and tossed the ball into the hoop just before the buzzer.

Not bad for a tertiary target, eh?

"We have three guys that we try to get the ball to in that situation, and Joe's the third guy," Paxton said. "We don't have any problem going to him, though. He won a game for us in Wichita Falls at the buzzer, and he was the open man tonight."

DOWNEY said the plan was to get either Abner Shellman or Doug Young open for the last shot. "But they came up too far and left me open.

"I almost missed the pass," the junior post added.

Bengalmania takes over Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (AP) — "Bengalmania" has taken firm hold in and around Cincinnati as it gets closer to the Jan. 22 Super Bowl between the Cincinnati Bengals and San Francisco 49ers.

Bakeries are producing cookies and bagels decorated in orange and black, the Bengals' team colors. A company is offering freshly minted, "limited edition" Bengals' commemorative coins, which a spokesman said are selling for less than $30.

A Cincinnati fast-food restaurant, which has been providing lunches three times a week for 17 years to the Bengals at the team's Spinney Field training site, plans to prepare and send a special lunch to the Bengals via jet to Miami on Jan. 20.

"We don't want them to break their routine," said Ruth Montgomery, who regularly delivers the lunches to the Bengals.

The Bengals leave Sunday by charter jet from Greater Cincinnati International Airport to Miami, where the Super Bowl will be played in Joe Robbie Stadium.

Ted Bushelman, a spokesman for Greater Cincinnati airport, said Friday his office has been deluged by telephone calls from fans wanting to see the Bengals depart. Bushelman said, however, that the team's departure will not be visible to fans because of tight security.

"You will not be able to see the Bengals Sunday morning as they're about to take off, because they're being put right on the plane from the bus," Bushelman said. "That's for security reasons."

STEERS

Downey's shot capped a game that featured 15 lead changes before a ravenous crowd that nearly filled the Big Spring gym.

It was back and forth, back and forth before Andrews ran off nine unanswered points in a 90-second stretch of the third quarter to take the biggest lead of the game — 51-42 with 4:34 left.

Nine points. Coach Bice said the Mustangs were on the verge of busting it open and preserving their unblemished district record.

"I thought that might be the spurt we needed," he said. "We may have been one basket away from running away.

"But we missed a couple, so I guess we weren't ready to pull it away at the time."

They wouldn't get another chance, however. Downey led a eight-point run in the next two minutes that brought the Steers back within one. Andrews led most of the next four minutes before Young tied it at 61-all with 6:26 left on two free throws.

Still, the lead went back and forth until the controversial final seconds.

"IT'S the biggest win for our program," Paxton said. "We've been fighting and struggling this season."

The Steer mentor said improved free throw shooting has been one key to a successful. The Steers shot 83 percent from the line against Andrews, after managing little better than 60 percent in non-district play.

"I think I put too much pressure on the kids to shoot their free throws early in the season," Paxton said.

Another factor was the virtual disappearance of Gym Bice from the Andrews offense in the fourth period, courtesy of Lewis — the catquick Big Spring guard who shut out the Mustang standout from the field in the fourth quarter.

Bice finished with a game-high 26 points, but only two of those were in the final eight minutes — and he only attempted a pair of off-balance three-pointers in that pivotal final period.

Coach Bice said the Mustangs were hurt by Big Spring's post tandem of Downey (16 points) and Thane Russey (nine points).

"Their big guys beat our big guys," he said. "But there will be other nights."

Clay added 22 points for Andrews. Shellman led Big Spring with 19 points, while Young added 18 for the Steers.

Tyson spars nine rounds

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Five missed days of training and a chaotic visit to Canada to see his wife apparently haven't slowed down Mike Tyson inside the ring.

Tyson went a total of nine rounds with three different sparring partners Friday as he resumed training for his Feb. 25 fight against Britain's Frank Bruno.

A Tyson security guard twice shoved a reporter waiting outside the gym for Tyson when he didn't move out of the way fast enough, and two other reporters also got in shouting matches with Tyson's security personnel.

The heavyweight champion, meanwhile, declined comment on his marital situation while speaking briefly to reporters after the two-hour workout.

Tyson cut the impromptu press conference off by getting in his $175,000 Lamborghini and getting ready to drive off.

"Get out of the way, I don't want to run you over," he joked with the handful of reporters gathered behind the gym. "You know I'm not a good driver."

Tyson was sparring for the first time since Saturday, when he went six rounds with two opponents.

In between, he spent two days giving depositions in a suit he has brought against his estranged manager, Bill Cayton, and spent a whirlwind 24 hours visiting wife Robin Givens in Vancouver. During the Vancouver visit, he had a brief sparring session with two pieces of camera equipment photographers aimed at him.

Tyson, 22, is involved in divorce proceedings with Givens, who recently filed a $125 million libel suit against him.

A nurse who examined Tyson during his training session for an insurance policy said he appeared in good shape and weighed 230 pounds, about 15 pounds over his fighting weight. Tyson announced his weight at 228 pounds.

Lightbourn, who sparred with Tyson in preparation for a 1987 fight against Pinklon Thomas, said the champion has improved since then, even though he had not fought since knocking out Michael Spinks in 91 seconds in late June.

"I'm surprised he's so sharp," Lightbourn said. "Most guys when they're away that long are kind of rusty."

Lightbourn said he was getting hit with punches he didn't even see coming from Tyson, and said the champion "roughed up" two other sparring partners.

MIDLAND High's Greg Lewis was the rock this victory was built on. Lewis scored 23 points, including 10 in the torrid third period. The big Cooper lead just didn't seem to bother him.

"I really didn't think much about the lead Cooper had," said Lewis. "When you get down, you have to speed up the tempo and make them play your game. We were shooting awful early, but you have to keep your confidence and not lose your concentration and poise."

The only other Bulldog in double figures was Tracey Bascus with 10, but his six points in the second quarter kept MHS from getting completely blown out of the Chap. Tiny guard Gary Nathan scored only two points, but was a defensive spark the Bulldogs needed off the bench. Stephenson was really pleased with the way Nathan played.

The victory gives the Bulldogs a 10-11 season mark and a 2-1 district record. With the win, MHS moves ahead of Cooper in the standings as the Cougars fell to 2-2 after two consecutive victories. Cooper is 9-13 on the season.

Midland High takes its two-game district winning streak to San Angelo Tuesday while Cooper will host Odessa Permian.

In junior varsity action, Midland High ran to an 80-54 win over Cooper with Keith Gilbreath leading the way with 20 points. Albert Ray had 18, Skeet Bowers 12 and Keith Ratliff 10. In sophomore action, MHS defeated the Permian sophs by a 55-47 margin with Tyler Beard and Eric Johnson each scoring 12 points.

Eagles keep first with win over Lee

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — The War Birds of Abilene High maintained its position at the top of the District 4-5A basketball standings here Friday night with a 90-72 win over the Midland Lee Rebels.

For Lee, it was the Rebels' third consecutive district loss as Lee fell to 1-3 in the loop race.

Abilene High brought out the big guns in this one as post Cory Lockridge had his best outing in district play with 27 points. But he had plenty of help in the 18-point victory as Greg Denman, Donald Hall and Trey Forkerway all bombed in 19 points each.

Lee got a game high 28 points from Torval Crisp and Jared Edwards hit for 18 and Darren Dortch 12. For Crisp, it was his second consecutive game with 28 points and the Rebels lost both games.

In other 4-5A action, San Angelo moved into a second place tie with Midland High after a 60-56 win on the road against Odessa High. The Bobcats put four players in double figures with Tom Englert 15, Dewayne Lofton 14, Cragi Smith 12 and Terry Lewis 11 leading the way.

Odessa High fell to 2-2 with the loss. Patrick Brown had 17 points for the Bronchos while Walter McCoy had 13.

"Even though she wasn't putting in the points," he said, "she was distorting our defense."

Ramirez finished the game with 18 points, and while she was the game's point-leader for the Rebels, her output was five points below her average.

But del Llano and Davis were there to take up the slack.

Davis, who averages 5.8 points per game, went into the fourth quarter with four points, and proceeded to hit four-of-four free throws and two from the field for eight key points. While 12 was not her season high, they couldn't have come at a better time.

"The kids were fine off the bench," Stephenson said. "They did a super job on defense. (The bench) was able to handle them very well.

"I think Marcia snuck in there and snuck through all their holes. She was tough. They were collapsing on Monica."

The Lady Rebs played one of their best games of the season as they were able to handle and even overcome the AHS press. At the same time, the Rebs were able to force and convert AHS turnovers, of which there were 24.

The most impressive aspect of the game, however, was the Lady Rebs' ability to overcome the early 11-point deficit and, at one time, hold an 11 point lead.

"We're hanging in there," was all Stephenson said when asked to synopsize her team's performance as the first half of the season came to an end.

"Check with me on February 10," Nichols said, concerning who is and who isn't a contender in the girl's race. "It's still scrambled eggs."

M-Baptist wins

From Staff Reports

Midland Baptist defeated Odessa's Sherwood Christian 68-51 Friday night to move its record to 5-8.

Midland was paced by Chris McKinney's 18 points, one of four players who were in double figures.

Heath Kuhlmann (16 points), Joshua Brooke (11) and Louis Shanks (6) also contirbuted in the winning effort.

Brian Birney had 28 points for Sherwood in the loss.

Midland Baptist hosts Seminole Tuesday.

Cooper girls romp, 70-39

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — The Abilene Cooper Lady Cougars continued marching toward the District 4-5A girls basketball title here Friday night with an impressive 70-39 victory over Midland High's Lady Bulldogs.

Cooper climbed to a perfect 5-0 as the first half race is almost over. MHS, on the other hand, continued heading in the opposite direction with an 0-5 league mark.

Holly McMillion led the Cougars with 15 points while Paula Scott had 13 points and Branbie Prince 12.

Midland High will host San Angelo Tuesday at the MHS gym while Cooper travels to Odessa Permian to end first half play.

San Angelo got its first district win of the season with a 66-52 win over Odessa High. The Bobcat win left MHS in sole possession of the 4-5A basement since San Angelo climbed to 1-4.

Midland High (39): Kim Jackson 4-4-12, Robin Landreth 0-3-3, Tina O'Neal 3-0-8, Anita Montez 0-0-0, Richelle Beck 0-1-1, Mary Jane Carrasco 1-0-2, Tracy Parker 4-2-10, Effie Freeman 1-0-2, Stephanie Payne 0-1-1. Totals: 13-11-39.

CANADA TAKES SECOND LOOK— Canadian amateur athletic programs are being reassessed on the basis of their results at the Seoul Olympics and funding changes may follow, Sport Canada director Abby Hoffman. "All sports are being re-ranked on the basis of the Seoul results and that will have some influence on their funding," she said. Lyle Makosky, assistant to Sports Minister Jean Charest, said the government wants to protect its financial investment in amateur sport and isn't above using economic pressure to induce action against drug use.

KIMBALL TO CHANGE PLEA— Former Olympic diver Bruce Kimball may be allowed to change his guilty plea in a drunken-driving manslaughter case to safeguard insurance money for victims and their families, his attorney said. The guilty plea Kimball entered could amount to a breach of contract and allow his insurance company to cancel a $1.3 million liability insurance policy, said Frank Quesada, a lawyer for the 1984 silver medalist. So Kimball may seek to change his plea to "no contest" before sentencing Jan. 30.

LSU'S BROWN ANGRY— LSU's basketball coach Dale Brown was an angry man after the NCAA stiffened the requirements of Proposition 48. "Once again, the NCAA has demonstrated that it is without compassion in dealing with human beings." Brown to the decision to eliminate scholarships for partial qualifiers. Starting in 1990 a school may not give a scholarship to any youngster failing to meet all of the criteria. The new proposal carries the loss of a year of eligibility, even if a non-qualifier walks on and pays his own way through his freshman year.

MONTANA FACING SURGERY— 49er QB Joe Montana shrugged off his back surgeon's statement that advancing arthritis makes a career-ending injury increasingly possible. Montana said he believes there's no more risk of being injured while playing than there was when doctors cleared him to return after removing a ruptured disk in September 1986.

He said the surgeon warned him after the operation that another one would be likely at some point in the future. "But there's no specific date — it could be 20 years from now."...

ETC.—Rochester's Ray Tellier became the last remaining candidate for the vacant football coaching at Columbia when Wagner's Walt Hameline was dropped from consideration...

Jan. 14

1943 — Montreal's Alex Smart scored three goals in his first NHL game, leading the Canadiens to a 5-1 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks.

1962 — Margaret Smith won her third straight Australian Open with a 6-0, 6-2 triumph over Jan Lehane.

1968 — After winning their third consecutive NFL championship, the Green Bay Packers won their second straight Super Bowl in a game that drew the first $3 million gate in football history. Bart Starr, the game's most valuable player, completed 13 of 24 passes for 202 yards. The game was the last for Vince Lombardi as Packers' coach, ending nine years at Green Bay, where he won six Western Conference championships, five NFL championships and two Super Bowls.

1973 — The Miami Dolphins, who were 14-0 during the regular season and won two playoff games, beat the Washington Redskins 14-7 in the Super Bowl to become the only udefeated team in NFL history.

1987 — Billy Williams and Jim "Catfish" Hunter were elected to baseball's Hall of Fame.

Dantley paces Piston victory

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Adrian Dantley made 17 of 21 foul shots and finished with 35 points Friday night as the Detroit Pistons beat the Washington Bullets 119-103.

The Pistons scored the game's first 10 points, including eight by John Salley, and never trailed. Washington lost its third straight game.

A pushing incident between Detroit's Dennis Rodman and Bernard King resulted in a double technical in the third quarter.

Rookie Michael Williams, seeing extra playing time at guard because of a broken hand suffered by starter Joe Dumars on Wednesday, added a career-high 11 points and five assists.

A three-point play by Dantley, his 17th point of the half, with 16 seconds left in the second quarter gave Detroit a 66-52 at halftime. Detroit led 95-73 heading into the final quarter and coasted to victory.

Bulls 104, Nuggets 99

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan had 38 points, 12 rebounds and 11 assists for his seventh career triple double, leading the Chicago Bulls.

Jordan scored 15 points in the fourth quarter, including a three-point play with 1:12 left that put Chicago ahead for good at 97-94. Jordan got 13 of Chicago's last 18 points.

The Bulls have won three consecutive games and six of the last eight. Denver has lost six straight on the road.

Bucks 107, Heat 101

MIAMI — Ricky Pierce scored 23 points, including 16 in the pivotal third quarter, and the Milwaukee Bucks handed the Miami Heat its 10th straight loss.

The win was the fifth straight for the Bucks, who are 8-0 against the Western Conference. Expansion Miami, which has lost 11 games by six points or less, fell to 3-31, worst in the NBA.

Milwaukee's Terry Cummings scored 19 points, his first game in the past 10 under 25 points. Jon Sundvold led seven Miami players in double figures with 19 points. Seikaly scored 17 and Grant Long added 15.

76ers 114, Hawks 101

PHILADELPHIA — Charles Barkley had 23 points and 19 rebounds and Hersey Hawkins scored 21 points as Philadelphia won its fourth straight victory.

Philadelphia led 95-90 with 5:58 remaining and used a 12-1 spree to send the Hawks to their fourth loss in five games. Barkley's dunk capped the burst with 2:53 left and made it 10-91.

Ron Anderson scored 18 points and Scott Brooks shot 4-for-6 from 3-point range and finished with 12 points and eight assists for the 76ers.

Rangers beat the Devils, 5-3

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Rob DiMaio, called up from the minors less than a week ago, scored his first NHL goal midway through the third period to give the New York Islanders a 5-3 victory over the New Jersey Devils Friday night.

The victory allowed the Islanders to break a three-game losing streak and was their first in 11 road games this season against Patrick Division foes. New York was 0-9-1 going into the game.

Goalie Kelly Hrudey made the goal stand the rest of the way, making several tough saves, including one in close on Doug Brown with about three minutes to play. Hrudey was spectacular throughout and made 40 saves and Bryan Trottier iced the game with an open-net goal 36 seconds from the end.

Capitals 5, Oilers 3

LANDOVER, Md. — John Druce, Dale Hunter and Mike Millar scored second-period goals as the Washington Capitals extended their unbeaten streak to nine games.

Washington improved its record to 5-0-2 over its last seven games while outshooting the Oilers 36-14. The Capitals are unbeaten in their last 11 home games, going 9-0-2 since Nov. 25.

The victory was Washington's sixth in a row over the Oilers at the Capital Centre.

Illini acts to clean up act

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — The University of Illinois has a new organization to operate its athletic programs, replacing the independent and scandal-prone Athletic Association.

Trustees created a Division of Intercollegiate Athletics, which will be under direct control of the university.

Trustees also approved the appointment of football Coach John Mackovic as athletic director.

He replaces former Athletic Director Neale Stoner, who resigned in July 1988 after allegations of improprieties within the Athletic Association.

A school investigation revealed Stoner and top aides had Athletic Association employees work on their homes and automobiles, and used gifts-in-kind to the organization for their own benefit.

Two other Athletic Association officials also resigned and two were reprimanded following the university's investigation.

Under the plan approved by trustees, the athletic director will report directly to the chancellor.

Memories of lift rides past poor substitute for the real thing

Battles

So 1988 was the year that the Yankees didn't win the pennant, again. It was also the year there was no pre-Christmas ski trip.

With the Yankees it has become a habit. There are no plans for a holiday season without skiing to become habit forming.

Still, the consolation was memories of trips past, revolving mostly around lift rides, which in this case is inevitable.

That's what happens when one is a singles skier. Even the boys grant an early day complimentary run or two and then disappear for the day.

It's inevitable when you ski at a pace with which few can keep up. Few can go that slowly.

YOUR LIFT companion can frequently be interesting, sometimes frustrating and occasionally intimidating.

The pregnant woman at Durango telling her young son that she couldn't race now, "but wait until March, after the baby arrives." Just two months?

The two brothers on the triple at Solitude reviewing the family feuds after a long absence. "Fred (apparently dad) is a bigot, he hates democrats and Tim, who has been with the family for years, still has to drink out of a separate glass.... Mom is mad at your wife for what she said at the wedding."

Response, "But that wedding was 20 years ago." Then, finally near the top of the lift, realizing there was an eavesdropper, "I guess it sounds like the As the World Turns."

"No, it's more like Carol Burnett's version, As the Stomach Turns."....

AT SKI Apache, an angry Ruidoso woman snorted disdainfully at the two men. "I suppose you two are Texans. They come up, ski one day and think they are experts," she began her intimidation.

The other guy gulped and said, "I'm from Albuquerque."

I thought fast, "Er, a, I stopped in Texas on the way here from Stowe, Vt."....

And don't you hate people like this who always trump your best story?

On the lift ride at Taos, describing for the rider the 60 to 100 mile an hour winds and blizzard encountered atop the mountain the year before. The "rival" countered with what it was like in the Mississippi Hurricane a few years before.

I persisted about the terror of Taos. He topped that with the horror of Mt. St. Helen's when it spewed lava and created panic in Washington. "We were there on a fishing trip when the warning came to get out. We were going 90 mph and state police cars passed us like we were standing still."

WHEN I first started skiing, the routine required a couple of warmup runs on the beginners slope. After skiing was over one afternoon, a young blonde from Oklahoma City, who had been taking lessons, approached and declared, "You are our idol," I guess because of my daring and breakneck speed. Her husband showed up and her introduction of the stranger as "my idol" brought a "woman-what's-wrong-with-you" frown.

On the bus out to Purgatory from Durango, the 70-year-old man regaled of tales of skiing in Austria, Switzerland, Vermont, Sun Valley and Snowbird "where I usually go."

Curiosity finally won out "You are 70 now. How long do you expect to be able to ski."

"You know, I wondered the same thing, so I asked my doctor. He said 'When you give up skiing, get yourself a new doctor.'"....

WHEN the guy in Taos ski class said he was from Georgia, the accusation was "You aren't with that bunch that they wrote about in the Albuquerque paper yesterday."

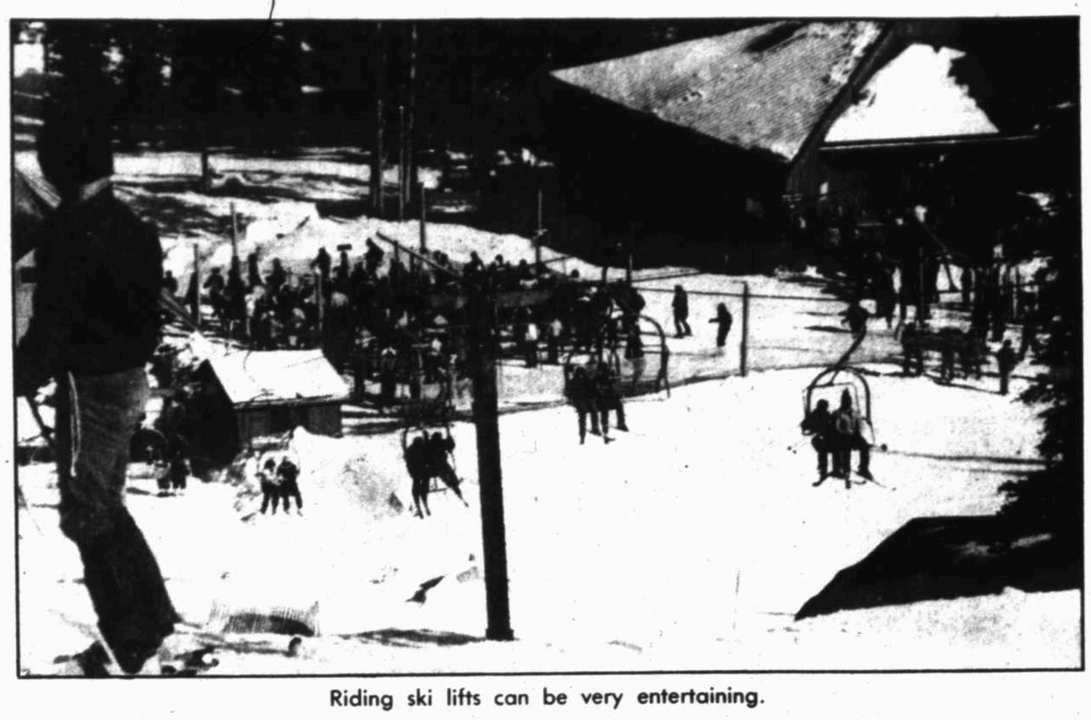

"Yes. I'm Chip and Jimmy and Rosalyn are down below in the beginner's class. This is their first downhill experience."....

One of the most rewarding experiences came after a beginning skier tripped, flew off the lip of a diamond run and landed in a twisted heap far down the slope. They carried him off the mountain and took him to the hospital.

A couple of months later, on the day's first lift ride, the guy next was a 29-year-old from California who was a first timer at Taos.

My duty was to give him a quickie tour of the mountain by riding the second lift to the mountain top and pointing out the trail to the backside Kachina Basin.

Then going down icey White Feather, he was warned that this early in the day, it was icey and dangerous. Then he was warned about the sharp turn in the beginner's trail and the sharp drop down the expert's trail where the beginner had tumbled.

Riding ski lifts can be very entertaining.

We got to the precipice and it was explained "this was the spot."

"Are you going down?"

"Not this early in the day."

"I think I will," which meant, by past experience, my duty was done and he'd be happy to be on his way. I wasn't prepared for the "I'll meet you down at the lift" shock.

SINCE he was willing to put up with me, I showed him the mountain. It was noon at lunch before we got around to exchanging names.

Late afternoon, we headed down one of my favorite front side runs after riding up the main lift over Al's Run, where some skiers seemed to have been struggling all day.

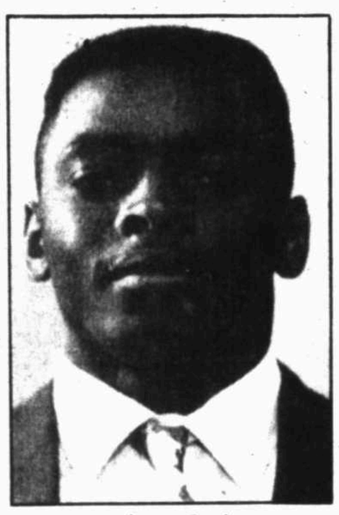

"I think I'll try Al's Run," he said.

I smirked confidently to myself. "This is one time I'll be waiting for him" As I raced down the hill, I think I heard someone say, "Must be one of the Mahre boys."

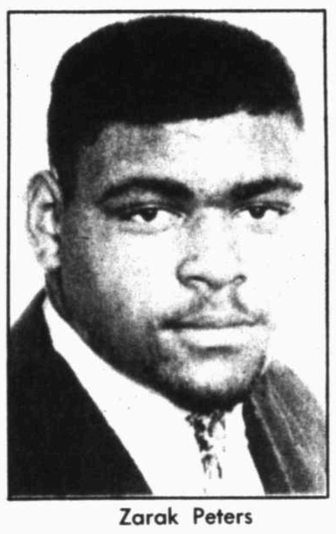

When I got there to the meeting point, I realized how patient he had been all day...he was there, waiting, as usual.

Sooner cornerback charged in shooting

Jerry Parks

Zarak Peters

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Prosecutors charged Oklahoma cornerback Jerry Parks with shooting with intent to injure Friday after a teammate was shot and wounded during an argument in an athletes' dormitory.

University spokeswoman Catherine Bishop said Parks, a starter for the 14th-ranked Sooners last year, and offensive lineman Zarak Peters apparently had argued over possession of a cassette tape before the early morning shooting.

Parks, who was suspended from the football team and the university hours after the shooting, appeared with his attorney, Joe Barr, in Cleveland County District Court Friday afternoon and effectively entered an innocent plea.

Special District Judge Gary Purcell set bond at $10,000 for Parks and agreed to allow Parks to return to his home in Texas with bondsman John Day of Norman responsible for Parks' return to court in Norman.

The judge set a preliminary hearing conference for Feb. 2.

Peters, 20, was in stable condition in the intensive care unit at Norman Regional Hospital with a bullet wound to the left chest. Hospital spokeswoman Paula Bowles said doctors do not now plan to remove the bullet, which is lodged in Peters' fourth left rib.

University officials released a statement saying the shooting reported to campus police at 1:29 a.m. at the Bud Wilkinson House athletic dormitory resulted from an argument between the two players, both graduates of Willowridge High School in the Houston area. The two were teammates at Willowridge.

In the statement released Friday, David Swank, the university's interim president, said Coach Barry Switzer had suspended Parks from the team as soon as he was notified of the shooting, sometime before 4 a.m.

Parks also was suspended from the university for violating the student code regarding possession or use of firearms, officials said.

After Parks and Peters first argued, Parks left the dormitory and got a .22-caliber revolver from a parked car before returning to Peters' room, where the shooting took place, the university statement said.

Parks and Peters were high school teammates in the 1984 and 1985 seasons. Peters graduated in 1986, Parks a year later.

Willowridge football Coach John Pearce called the shooting a tragedy.

He and other Willowridge coaches said there had never been any problem between the two players during their high school years.

Verplank's 65 sets Hope pace

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Scott Verplank took advantage of near-ideal playing conditions with a 7-under-par 65 Friday to take a two-shot lead after three rounds of the $1 million Bob Hope Classic.

"Today was extremely easy compared to the first two days whe we had all that wind. Today was just a beautiful day," Verplank said of the bright sunshine, gentle breezes and mild temperatures.

Verplank, who won the Western Open as an amateur in 1985 and finally scored his first professional triumph last year, did not make a bogey in his round at Eldorado.

He completed three rounds in 203, 13 under par, with two days to go in this 90-hole event that is played on four desert courses.

Tom Kite and Mark Calcavecchia shared second at 205. Kite had a 68 at the Palmer course at PGA West and Calcavecchia shot 67 at Bermuda Dunes.

Calcavecchia, who has yet to play at Indian Wells, the shortest of the four courses used, could be the man to beat.

"Sure, he has the advantage, going to Indian Wells," Kite said of the unusual format which has the pros playing one round on each of the four courses before the field is cut for the final round Sunday at Bermuda Dunes.

Of the four, Indian Wells, at 6,478 yards, is the shortest and the easiest. Calcavecchia goes there Saturday. All the other leaders already have played it.

Scott Verplank
....can't believe missed putt

"Yes, it gives him an edge," said Peter Jacobsen, one of six tied at 206. "With his length, it's a par-68 for him."

Jacobsen was tied with Lanny Wadkins, Masters champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland, Jodie Mudd, West German Bernhard Langer and rookie Ted Schulz.

Jacobsen shot a 69 and Wadkins had a 68, both at PGA West. Schulz and Langer had 68s at Eldorado.

Betsy King's 64 good for 5-stroke edge

SANDY BAY, Jamaica (AP) — Betsy King shot a 7-under-par 64 Friday to take a five stroke lead after the first round of the $500,000 LPGA Jamaica Classic.

There was a four-way tie for second place among Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez, Hollis Stacy, Cathy Morse and Patty Rizzo — all at 69.

King, a 12-year veteran on the LPGA tour, shot a sizzling 31 on the front nine to move into the lead.

A group of nine players shot 70 on the par-71, 6,296-yard Tryall Golf and Beach Club course.

Some of the tour's better players had their problems.

Amy Alcott and Jane Geddes shot a 78 and Val Skinner had an 82.

TSWA picks MacLeod, Singletary as top pros

HOUSTON (AP) — Mike Singletary of the Chicago Bears and John MacLeod of the Dallas Mavericks have been named the top professional athlete and coach from Texas by the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Singletary, defensive leader and all-pro linebacker for the Bears, is a native of Houston and a Baylor graduate. He will play in his sixth consecutive Pro Bowl on Jan. 29 and has been a near-unanimous all-pro selection the last two years.

MacLeod, in his first year with the NBA's Mavericks, guided Dallas to the Western Conference final for the first time in franchise history. The 1987-88 Mavs were 53-29, a game behind Denver in the NBA's Midwest Division, and beat Houston and the Nuggets in the playoffs.

MacLeod is the eighth coach in NBA history to reach the 600-win level.

Singletary finished far in front of Houston Rockets center Akeem Olajuwon in the player of the year balloting. Singletary had 33 first-place votes and 210 total points to 20 and 178 for Olajuwon. Third place went to Roy Tarpley of the Mavericks.

MacLeod beat Jerry Glanville of the Houston Oilers by an eyelash in the coaching category. MacLeod had 28 first-place votes and 142 points to 25 and 140 for Glanville. Third place went to New York Mets Manager Dave Johnson, a Texas A&M graduate.

Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens was TSWA's 1987 athlete of the year and Glanville picked up honors as coach of the year.

NCAA to probe NC State program

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The NCAA will begin an immediate probe into allegations of grade-fixing at North Carolina State contained in a book which reportedly details abuses within the school's basketball program, chancellor Bruce Poulton said Friday.

"They have agreed to this quick investigation because they recognize the importance of these allegations to the integrity of North Carolina State University and it's faculty," Poulton said in a prepared statement.

"We are hopeful that, once they begin, we can persuade them to investigate all the allegations carried in the press in recent days — even though the book might not have yet been published."

Simon & Schuster, the publisher of the book, "Personal Fouls," said Friday said it would further look into charges made by the author, Peter Golenbock.

Shortly before Simon & Schuster responded to the state attorney general's request to delay the book's publication, the president of the University of North Carolina system said N.C. State will investigate the allegations. He warned that the publisher and author will be held responsible if the charges prove to be false.

THE PROBE will be led by Poulton, despite allegations by a former department head that he knew of grade changes and did not act. Poulton had invited the NCAA to the Raleigh campus to conduct an investigation.

Attorney General Lacy Thornburg had written Richard Snyder, chairman and chief executive officer of Simon & Schuster, and the publisher's general counsel, John Bender, asking for a manuscript in order to see the accusations, point out the facts and respond.

Bender, in a letter to the state attorney general, said, "We are continuing to review with care the manuscript and the author's supporting documentation. We are a responsible publisher and take seriously the concerns you have raised."

Bender said it is not the publisher's policy to release manuscripts prior to publication, and thus it cannot comply with that request.

In Thornburg's letter, which was released at the meeting, the state told Snyder and Bender that Golenbock's alleged source was an employee of the school "who was dismissed for misconduct."

THE ATTORNEY general wrote that Golenbock contacted former members of N.C. State's basketball team, but charged that the author told those players that he was writing a story for a national magazine about student-athletes transferring from one school to another.

"In the course of his conversations with these student-athletes, Mr. Golenbock did not address the substance of the allegations against Coach Valvano, NCSU and the Wolfpack Club apparently contained in 'Personal Fouls," the letter said. "On at least two occasions, Mr. (Golenbock) offered players money in exchange for 'dirt' about the basketball program.

"The players had no knowledge of any 'dirt' and declined Mr. Golenbock's unethical offer," the letter said.

The letter also said the Golenbock "pilfered" the files of the Technician, the N.C. State student newspaper.

"In our opinion, these facts form an adequate nucleus of facts to establish a libel claim against Mr. Golenbock, Pocketbooks and Simon & Schuster," the letter said.

Valvano is at the center of the controversy surrounding the book, to be published by Simon and Schuster's Pocketbooks division. The News and Observer of Raleigh obtained a copy of the dust jacket and published details of the allegations last weekend.

THE DUST jacket description charges the Wolfpack program made payments to players, had grades changed and kept secret the results of drug tests. Another allegation said a player "deliberately lost" a 1987 NCAA first-round game because winning would have meant drug testing, that would have lost an opportunity at an NBA career.

As for the source, speculation has centered on John Simonds Jr., a trainer during the 1986-87 season. Simonds told The News and Observer that he had talked with Golenbock. Now a student at Florida State University, Simonds told the newspaper Thursday that he expected to profit from the publication of the book.

Simonds did not say that he supplied the information for the book, but he said Golenbock contacted him about it.

"I'm not sure whether he wanted to come back or not, but he wasn't invited back," Valvano said.

Leg needs no translator

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Guillermo Gonzalez brought a translator with him from Mexico for the festivities preceding Sunday's East-West Shrine Game, but his powerful left leg speaks for itself.

An 82-yard punt, videotaped from one of his games for the National Polytechnic Institute in Mexico City, proves Gonzalez is more than a novel attraction.

The left-footed "pateador," Spanish for punter, is the first Mexican player in the 64-year history of the all-star game for college seniors. But he has not been left on the sidelines in the annual talent hunt by NFL scouts.

"He's been booming them in practice — 60, 65 yards every time," said West coach Larry Smith of Southern California. "He's got a powerful leg, and he's a real athlete. The scouts tell me he has NFL possibilities."

The 6-foot-1, 186-pound Gonzalez, 24, says the main reason he accepted the invitation was to help the children in Shrine hospitals. A look-see from pro scouts has been in the back of his mind, though.

"Yeah, I would have to take an invitation (from the NFL) into consideration," he said. "But that's not why I'm here."

The game is played for the benefit of the Shriners Hospitals for Crippled and Burned Children. More than $10 million has been raised for the cause from past games.

Televised by ABC with a scheduled 11:40 a.m. PST kickoff, the game is being played on a Sunday for the first time and has the nation's football schedule to itself this weekend.

Southern Cal quarterback Rodney Peete, the game's biggest star, has gone home to Los Angeles to have shoulder rehabilitation for an injury he suffered in the Hula Bowl a week ago.

Undernourished animals at Tehran zoo to be transferred

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The Tehran zoo's undernourished animals will be transferred in six months to a new and bigger home at a park on the outskirts of the capital, according to news reports Friday.

The Islamic Republic News Agency said the decision came after newspapers reported that animals were dying of disease and hunger. One report said a boa constrictor had eaten a smaller boa for lack of food.

The Iranian news agency, monitored in Nicosia, said a foundation that recently took over the zoo will spend about $150,000 on improvements.

NORTHWESTERN BAPTIST CHURCH

In the Sleep Hollow Cemetery at Concord, Massachusetts, one will find the grave of Ezra Ripley. Who Ripley was or what he did is unknown.

On Ripley's tombstone the following epitaph is cut: "He came of a long line of Pilgrim ancestors and Concord ministers, and he was worthy of his lineage."

Although the epitaph is brief, it says a lot about Ripley's character.

Learn with us how God can improve our characters.

That Impressionable Age

You have to be so careful what you say to children when they're at that impressionable age.

Our neighbor has a little daughter. And, being something of a skeptic, he's been careful not to let her be exposed to religious teaching, at least not in any direct way.

But the other night she asked, "Who is God?" And, since he wanted to see her grow-up with the highest ideals, he hesitated a moment before he answered her question.

Then he said, "God made the world."

Her wondering eyes and pursed lips tugged at his heart. "Gosh, Daddy," she mused, "He's somebody to know!"

Whether you're a child or an adult, that pretty well sums it up. He Is Somebody To Know! How well do you know Him?

Rahner, Bultmann: 'Event of Christ' seen in here-and-now

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a five-part series on great modern theologians, "God's 20th Century Giants." It is about Karl Rahner and Rudolf Bultmann.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

A reader once sent renowned Catholic scholar Karl Rahner a cartoon depicting him as a brainy "theological atomic physicist" expounding from a top-tier desk.

Below, busy "multipliers" scrutinized and carved up his ideas, handing the pieces down to popularizing "simplifiers." Off to the side, a puzzled Jesus says, "I don't understand."

Smiling about the cartoon during an interview, Rahner said it "captures to a large extent the lot of theologians" in modern times because their work is often regarded as "unintelligible nonsense."

"One should not get up on his high horse and decide that specific questions have been settled for another or for oneself," he says,...especially today in our skeptical and relativistic age."

A modest, unpretentious streak marked this 20th century theological giant who not only probed the intellectual heights of faith but, with a common touch, rendered them in terms of ordinary living.

He says our limited humanity can't imagine the unconditional, illimitable God, but he "is already present in human existence, silent and hidden...It is a knowledge we cannot grasp, but whereby we are grasped."

Rahner is contrastingly described as a "transcendentalist" who stressed the incomprehensiblity of God and an "incarnationalist" or "anthropocentrist" who saw divine promptings in the human grain.

"One needs to clarify that fact within human beings themselves and not attempt to drum into somebody an authoritative doctrine that is external," he says.

CONCEDING THAT the task is hampered by "our stammering and often desperately inadequate words," he says, "We are at sea, but there are always a few planks around to hold on to."

Standing "unabashedly in modern times" and viewing questions in that perspective, Rahner worked to bridge the gap between theological complexities and contemporary thought patterns.

He also wrote gently of the grace-bestowing significance of everyday living, such as working, playing, seeing, sitting, laughing, sleeping.

Life bears a supernatural element which can be suppressed and also "can be realized and experienced existentially from within," he says. To him, that simple, intimate "indefinable 'mysticism' of everyday life" is the essence of Christianity.

He says faith is not an "incalculable number of propositions" and does not add a "new dimension of heavenly realities from outside" or "surmount our mundane ordinariness, with its slight happiness and its many tears."

Instead, "it puts squarely before us the deep roots of this life which we would otherwise overlook or shut out."

He calls Christ the "revealing, self-communication of God," occurring in "concrete historical human experience," the "mystery of God sharing himself with us."

It is a "quiet, unobtrusive process" at work daily, he says, yet it is the "great sign that God himself has directly intervened in the world," the "transcendental innermost cause of the world and its history, its final entelechy" — an actualized ultimate potentiality appearing within humanity still to be completed.

RAHNER ORIGINATED a new religious category, "Anonymous Christianity," saying it embraces Buddhists, various other non-Christians and even athiests who are conscientious, upright and caring.

"Some kind of faith in God is basically there, whether they know it or not," he says. They are a part of a "Christianity that does not call itself Christianity...'pagans' who have received grace, but who are not aware of it."

Rahner tangled often with Vatican authorites, who at times castigated and even silenced him, but it never dissuaded him from his humanizing tack.

"Such difficulties are basically nothing to get excited about," he says, but "ecclesiastical dignitaries" tend to elaborate dogmas "on which modern man is quite incapable of basing his faith."

Despite his conflicts with officialdom, Rahner emerged as an influential adviser at the reforming Second Vatican Council of 1962-65.

His last book, "Unity of the Churches — An Actual Possibility," which he wrote with fellow German Catholic theologian Heinrich Fries, jolted churchdom. It declared that all the main branches of Christianity — Protestant, Eastern Orthodox and Catholic — sufficiently agreed on basic concepts to unite in one manifold church.

Rahner

"Some kind of faith in God is basically there, whether they (non-Christians) know it or not." They are part of a "Christianity that does not call itself Christianity...'pagans' who have received grace, but who are not aware of it."

— Theologian Karl Rahner

RELIGION

"This unity is a matter of life or death for Christiandom at a time when faith in God and Christ are most seriously threatened," they wrote. "All the signs of the time favor it."

They proposed that traditions of each denomination be continued in a unified church, recognizing the pope's leadership but without binding authority, making church-wide decisions in inclusive councils and sharing pulpits and Holy Communion.

CONTINUED DIVISIONS were termed a "scandal which renders the churches themselves — and their message to the world of today — less and less credible."

Rahner, a Jesuit priest, was a friend of another of the century's theological titans, Rudolf Bultmann, a Lutheran and fellow German, a ground-breaking thinker who modified the contours of contemporary theology.

He, like Rahner, sought to link theology and modern thought, but in a more radical way.

"Theology will never be the same because of Bultmann. Never, ever," says American Methodist scholar Shubert M. Ogden.

Bultmann, attacked by some in the United States and abroad as a heretic and the most controversial of the century's theological stars, shook the whole enterprise with his "demythologizing" of the Bible.

Its pre-scientific world-view of a universe with heaven above, hell below and earth in between, traversed by angels and demons, was incredible to modern man, he maintained. He said it should be replaced with an updated world-view that preserved the profound meanings underneath the obsolete framework.

"Let us abandon the mythological concepts to recover the deeper meaning behind them," he says.

Sheer factual scholarship asks what the Bible states. Instead, he says, "We ask, 'What is meant?'" Retain that element and interpret it existentially in the here-and-now, he advises. He says the mythology obscures the "deeper meaning," and it's not honest to ask people to think in those anachronistic terms.

IN HIS "NEW Testament and Mythology," he says stripping away the antiquated external trappings would put the focus on the basic message, "the kerygma," so it could be heard. That message, he says, is the power of "God's word which encounters man in the proclamation of Jesus Christ."

Christ is "God breaking in," Bultmann says.

He regards Jesus as a historical figure and recognizes his crucifixion as factual. However, he says much recorded about Jesus, his miracles, the resurrection and ascent into heaven were mythical ways that early Christians expressed the underlying truth that Jesus was chosen to reconcile humanity to God.

To Bultmann, myths were not fairy tales but covered deep realities. The resurrection, he says, means that "death is not a sinking into nothing, but the same God who is always coming to us also meets us in our death."

God's "promise of redemption" is portrayed in the historical "event of Christ," but its value to humanity is determined "simply by the decision man makes in the here-and-now of his present life," Bultmann says.

An event can be looked back on merely as an isolated occurrence, but its genuine quality is "once-for-all," he says. "The word of God is the word of God only as it happens here and now."

Bultmann died in 1976 at the age of 91, his views spurned by literalists, but powerfully influencing Protestant and Catholic biblical studies, even when unspecified.

His existential approach resembled somewhat that of Rahner, who adhered more thoroughly to classical interpretations, though often rephrasing them in existential terms.

RAHNER ONCE called Bultmann "the one theologian in the 20th century who knew what was going on."

Rahner relates that a letter to him from Bultmann, lamenting the immense diversity of Protestant thought, added that he could sometimes "almost envy me the pope."

However, Rahner himself says "there should be a greater legitimate pluralism" than Rome condones.

Rahner, who died in 1980 just short of his 80th birthday, had two major works: His 20-volume "Theological Investigations" and his masterwork, "Foundations of the Christian Faith."

"My theology makes a certain contribution toward demythologization here and there," he says, but he insists the old imagery still holds meaning, even if not in the literal sense.

Expressing divine reality in any way inevitably requires that it be put in limited word pictures or analogies that are both "like and unlike" the reality, he says.

"We are living in the midst of a transitional period of great scope and depth," Rahner says, that threatens faith and holds eventual promise for it. He says humanity is fashioning an utterly new environnment in which technology replaces nature itself:

While nature once seemed mysterious, it no longer does, he says, for "we no longer live in nature; we transform it...In wide areas we do not face a nature that God has made but one that we have made."

Temporarily, that makes religion more difficult for "God seems to have drawn farther away" in the new technological atmosphere, he says, yet man's responsibility for it has been magnified awesomely.

"It can draw men away from God but also draw them to him," Rahner says.

LIKE NATURE, the planned, man-structured environment still remains "finally uncontrollable" and more dangerous, its "future shrouded in mist," he says. Instead of mystery arising from nature, it now is "welling up out of man himself...

"Now for the first time man was beginning to give tangible proof of his essential being as something outside and beyond nature."

While "religious elements in man" temporarily "have been pushed into the background," Rahner says, "man has only to make himself at home again" in his new environment, as he once was in nature, and his religious awareness will "arise again to a degree and extent hardly imaginable today."

As in such an atmosphere, Bultmann notes that often when first listening to a symphony, you can't make out the melody on which it is built "because you are deafened by the fullness of detail" and a "veritable sea of sounds and impressions that overwhelm us."

But in a while, he says, "As with one magicial stroke, a single unified world emerges from the confused welter of sound," and it becomes clear that the "fundamental tone" was there all the time, unrecognized before.

So it is in discerning the "mighty note of God" in the temporary confusion, Bultmann says. "It is always the same old theme endlessly proceeding in ever new ways...always more tempestuous, always more powerful."

In the maelstrom of modern transitions, God may seem missing and "a man needs the utmost grace-given courage" to have faith, Rahner says, but "it promises the unimaginably noble thing which alone really makes man far more than a clever animal."

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Ladies program starts Monday

First Presbyterian Church will begin its winter session of First Ladies' Fellowship on Monday.

The program will offer various courses from which to chose. Coffee and light refreshments will be served from 9 to 9:30 a.m. A devotional will follow until 9:45 a.m. when all classes begin. Classes will end at 11:15 a.m.

Courses being offered include "Bible Study" on the teachings of John, led by Merideth Ritchel; Ladies Handbell Choir, led by Les Ackerman; "Seasons of a Marriage," cost $7 for the book, a book study led by Dick Braun which focuses on all stages of marital life; and "Craft Potpourri," which will focus the first four weeks on making rag purses and will be led by Susie Anderson and the last four weeks will concentrate on beginning smocking and those attending may elect to attend all eight weeks or chose to do four weeks.

Kiddie Korner will provide 3 to 5 year olds whose mothers are attending the First Ladies' Fellowship creative play, study time with Sue Rose and choir with Linda Snyder. In addition, a nursery will be provided for infants up to 3 years old.

The winter session will run through March 6. The session is not limited to members of the church. For more information or to register call the church office, 684-7821, or Robin Hightower, 684-4680.

'The Gathering' begins

First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., will hold the Winter Session of "The Gathering" beginning Wednesday. The session continues for seven weeks.

"A diverse range of courses that promise to be both challenging and enriching will be offered," says a release from the church.

The four courses being offered for adults include "Life Together: Paul's Vision of Community in the Letter to the Phillipians," led by the Rev. Dick Braun; "The Parables of Jesus in the Gospel of Luke," led by Clay Pollard; "Christ and Crisis," led by Elder Bill Morrow; and "Christian Spirituality," led by the Rev. Bill Borror.

The children's choir program for children 4 years old through those attending the 6th grade will continue. Special programs will be available for children not involved in the choirs and for junior and senior high school students. For youth age 14 and older, the Explorer-Outing Club will offer scuba instructions.

A nursery will be provided for children age 3 and younger.

Dinner will be served from 5:30 to 6:15 p.m. at a reasonable price. All classes and activities will be held from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. The classes are free.

Registration forms are being accepted now. For more information call the church office, 684-7821. "The Gathering" is open to the public.

Eight seminars planned

The counseling, family, and singles ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ has announced its primary growth seminars scheduled for 1989.

In keeping with the philosophy of the church to reach out to the needs of Midland's Christian and non-Christian population, eight seminars and retreats have been planned, says a release from the church.

Additional information will be released nearer to each planned program.

The scheduled seminars will include: Parenting Teens, Feb. 9; Self-Esteem, April 4; Blended Families, June 6; Single-Parent Families' Enrichment Conference, June 18-23; Parenting Skills for Single Parents, Sept. 12; Couples' Retreat, Oct. 6-8; Divorce Recovery Workshop, Oct. 14; and Building Self-Esteem in Children, Nov. 7.

More information can be obtained prior to each session by calling 689-7033.

Church has guest sermons

The Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland, which is currently without ministerial leadership, is hosting guest sermons through January.

Guest speaker Sunday will be the Rev. Dennis Hamilton, minister of the Horizon UU Church of Dallas, who will speak on "A Theology of Liberation."

On Jan. 22, Frank Wood, UU Church of Midland congregational member, will present a sermon concerning the origins and validity of moral and ethical judgments.

Then, on Jan. 29, the sermon will be a report to the congregation by member Ken Carpenter upon his return from a national convention of the Society for Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal.

Adult Forum is held at 10 a.m. Sundays, Worship Service at 11 a.m., Children's Worship at 10:45 a.m. and Children's Religious Education at 11 a.m.

Child care is available.

Bible course offered

"A Look at the Book," a year-long survey of the Bible, is being offered by The North A and W. Tennessee Church of Christ.

The course is being offered through the adult Sunday morning Bible classes and through the Sunday evening sermons.

"Everyone is being encouraged to read the Bible through during the year, and discussion will be over the naterial being read," says a release from the church.

Exodus is the Bible book being studied this week.

A chronological approach is being made to the reading and study of the Bible so the studies will not necessarily be in the same order of appearance as the books of the Bible.

For more information on "A Look at the Book," call 682-8653, or write 505 San Angelo St., Midland, Texas 79701-4272.

Missionary to speak

John and Merlyn Barkman, missionaries to Australia and New Zealand, will speak at the Ranchland Heights Baptist Church Sunday.

Barkman, former pastor of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, will speak at the 11 a.m. service and will show slides at the 7 p.m. service.

The Barkmans left Midland in 1971 and have served 17 years in Australia and New Zealand in a church planting ministry.

A covered-dish luncheon will be served after the morning service. "Those who wish to attend are asked to bring a meat, vegetable, salad or dessert," says a release from the church.

For more information call O.A. Goodman, 682-3393, or Billy Gilbreath, 694-7692.

Church to be dedicated

The Mt. Carmel Baptist Church will hold dedication services for its facilities, land and building at 3 p.m. Sunday at 1308 E. Pecan Ave.

Construction was completed in September, and the building has been furnished since that time.

The Rev. Ben Walker, moderator of the Midland Baptist Association and pastor of Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, will deliver the dedication message.

Among the guests who were instrumental in the completion of Mt. Carmel who will be attending are Bob Hopkins, minister of education at First Baptist Church, and the Rev. Jimmy Law, area missionary for the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

The church's pastor, the Rev. John Mitchell, invites the public to attend.

Parenting seminar set

A "Single Parenting Seminar" will be held at First Baptist Church, Garfield Street and Louisiana Avenue, beginning Friday.

The seminar is sponsored by First Baptist Church's Single Adult Ministry, led by Bob Gardner, minister with single adults.

The seminar will be led by Gene Hilburn, minister of family life and associate pastor at First Baptist.

The first session will be from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Friday, and the second session will be held from 9 a.m. to noon Jan. 21. The $5 registration fee includes a meal Friday evening, a continental breakfast Jan. 21 and seminar materials.

Child care will be available. Call 682-1646 to register and to make arrangements for child care.

Galatians to be studied

Glenn Owen, speaker on the nationally syndicated radio program "Let's Talk," will be presenting an in-depth seminar on the book of Galatians at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ January 22-24.

The seminar, "Galatians — Gospel of Grace," will begin at 9 a.m. Jan. 22 and continue until 1 p.m. with a luncheon break provided by the church. On Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 23 and 24, the church will also provide a supper at 6:15 p.m. prior to Owen's presentation at 7 p.m.

Owen, a resident of Abilene, has spent many years in the mission fields, primarily in Brazil, and presently serves as Director of Foreign programming for the Herald of Truth television outreach.

The public is invited to attend.

Ex-Houston Oiler to speak

ODESSA — Ex-Houston Oiler Darrell Hunt will be the guest speaker at the Youth Spiritual Enlightenment Winter Banquet being held at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 21 at the Odessa Hilton.

Other entertainment will be provided along with dinner. For ticket information, call Linda Bailey, 684-4659, or Wanda McGrew, 699-1607.

Men to minister in India

The North A and Tennessee Church of Christ is sending Paul Cooper and David Fultz on a mission to India and Bangladesh.

"India and the surrounding countires have more than one fifth of the world's population with very few Christians in proportion," says a release from the church.

Cooper, a church elder, and Fultz, a minister, will be visiting native missionaries and others in India. In Bangladesh, they will be joining Charles Scott, a long-time missionary supported by this church.

They will leave Sunday and will return Feb. 17.

Bible study scheduled

Macedonia Baptist Church, 201 S. Carver St., is offering a Bible study this month.

The study will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The church's pastor, the Rev. O.J. Archie, invites the public to attend.

Anti-abortion protesters block entrance to clinic

NEW YORK (AP) — About 1,000 members of an anti-abortion group defied a federal judge's order Friday and twice blocked the entrance to a Planned Parenthood clinic.

A total of 176 protesters were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest, said Detective Jim Coleman, a police spokesman. They were given tickets and released, he said.

Demonstrators from Operation Rescue gathered at about 7:15 a.m. in front of Planned Parenthood's Margaret Sanger Center in Manhattan, snarling morning rush-hour traffic. A few abortion rights demonstrators also showed up.

The clinic was not able to open until 10:15 a.m. because the demonstrators blocked the building's entrance, a Planned Parenthood spokeswoman said.

During the morning protests, police made at least 76 arrests and those who were not cited left the scene. But they returned several hours later and lay down to block the clinic's front door.

"We thought it was all over and so did the police because they were getting ready to leave when suddenly they were back," said Joan Coombs, deputy executive director of Planned Parenthood. "We could see them marching down the street en masse. It was frightening."

Group spokesman Harry Brock said more protests were planned for Saturday.

U.S. District Judge Robert Ward on Tuesday issued a permanent injunction against the Binghamton-based group, forbidding members to obstruct access to health clinics in the area or harass clients trying to get inside. The order calls for a fine of $25,000 a day for violations.

Ward issued a temporary restraining order against the group in May and ordered organizers to tell police where they would be demonstrating so police could place officers at the site. When they failed to do so, the judge fined the group $50,000 for violating his order and $19,000 to pay police overtime.

The group did not inform police of their protest site Friday, so officers in buses followed demonstrators to their destination.

The action against the group was brought by the National Organization for Women and other abortion rights groups.

Sculptor teaches how to use art

QUEEN CITY, Texas (AP) — Gesturing wildly with her arms, Texarkana sculptor Kay Thomas introduces her profession to middle school students.

"I'm Kay Thomas. Call me Kay. I'm an artist," she says. "I'm an artist teaching teachers how to teach art."

State art educators have chosen Queen City Independent School District as the model site to demonstrate art can be effectively used in every course.

Recently, Thomas was in a math class. The students made "metric monsters" with construction paper, glue and scissors that they will later diagram and measure on "creature growth charts."

Sounds too much like fun to be learning? Wrong.

In the brief, funny, sometimes dramatic talk, Thomas introduces students to the different types of art, the elements of art and throws in a few math terms and concepts to boot.

This is the second part of the Texas Commission on the Arts-sponsored Arts Education Initiative (AFI) piloted last year in six schools across the state.

"An art program can be workable and initiated in every classroom," Connie Stockard, AFI state coordinator, says.

Stockard and artists Thomas and Deborah J. Dobbins have fine-tuned a schedule and art program for Queen City schools, which will serve as the model of the state's art program.

Carroll Hall, a consultant with Zia Instructional Assessment in Albuquerque, N.M., is evaluating the local program's effectiveness in the classroom. He serves as a consultant for the state program.

Pleasant Grove and Queen City elementary schools served as pilot program sites last year. Artists were actively involved in classroom instruction with students and taught teachers how to incorporate art in the classroom.

The initiative will aid school districts in complying with the Texas Education Agency's mandate to instruct pre-kindergarten through 12th grade students in the arts.

This year, Queen City has expanded its art program. Stockard said the Queen City students' scores on the Texas Education Assessment of Minimum Skills tests are rising, a fact she partially attributes to the art program.

Teachers from across the state are expected to observe the art program in action at Queen City and implement the program back in their districts.

Texas is the first state to mandate a visual arts program for all public school students.

"We are the first to say that art is as important as math, science or the language arts," Stockard said. "We were the first state to treat art as a basic."

Thomas will be teaching in Queen City two weeks a month. The sculptor will be assisted on occasion by Dobbins, who is a muralist.

Thomas said art may be integrated into math, science and language arts classes and she will provide samples of art lessons and lists of materials and resources needed to implement the program.

All three campuses — elementary, middle school and high school — will incorporate art into the regular classroom. Last year, the program was only initiated on the elementary level at Queen City, with other districts in the state being used as a pilot on the other grade levels.

Texas ranch gives troubled youths a fresh start

LA VERNIA, Texas (AP) — A special ranch nestled among wind-strangled mesquite trees and open fields near La Vernia is cutting the ties that rope mentally retarded youngsters into drugs, vandalism and delinquency.

A log cabin provides the dormitory for the five moderately or mildly mentally retarded boys, ages 10 to 17, who were sent to the ranch by Bexar County Juvenile Judge Tom Rickhoff.

Run by the Bexar County Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center and opened on a shoestring with mostly donated furniture and volunteer repairs, the 13-acre ranch is for some of the youngsters the first real home they have had.

Most of the boys' parents have forgotten them, and few had much to start with.

"All they had when we got them was the clothes on their back," Supervisor James E. Fowler said.

Rich, the most recent arrival, had been sleeping under bridges and living on the streets much of the past few months.

"That's really hard on a 10-year-old boy," Fowler said.

It was rough enough that Rich went to the police, turned in his heroin-addict mother and told officials she was not feeding him or the other seven children in the family.

The difficulties Rich suffers include impaired intelligence and a lack of coordination.

"Usually when they come here, they don't have good hand and eye coordination, so we try to work on that," Fowler said.

During a quick football game, Rich had mastered enough skill to grab the ball from the air and securely clutch it in his arms.

"He couldn't have done that just two weeks ago," the ranch supervisor said.

A big factor in the successful adjustment of the youngsters to the ranch has been the favorable acceptance they have received in the La Vernia School District.

"I feel like going now. It's a good school," said Randy, 13, a chronic shoplifter who seldom attended classes when he lived with his seven brothers and one sister in an East Side housing project last year.

Randy, who said he plans one day to be a policeman, is not stealing anymore.

"Out here, they just become regular little boys," Fowler said.

"These are basically the kids who in the system fall through the cracks," psychologist James Sherman said.

An official at the Bexar County Juvenile Detention Center, Sherman explained the youngsters are not mentally retarded enough to be placed in a school for the developmentally disabled, but because of their sometimes delinquent behavior they hardly are welcome in a public school's special education classes.

Within the next few months, the MHMR boys ranch, which officially opened in October, is expected to grow to its full capacity of 13.

Cautious Massachusetts town votes against Dukakis

BARNSTABLE, Mass. (AP) — They were lukewarm about the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. They opposed the War of 1812. And in presidential elections they voted against their neighbor, John Kennedy, and their governor, Michael Dukakis.

The people of this Cape Cod community have never gone with the flow and they show no signs of changing as they celebrate Barnstable's 350th anniversary this year.

"I hate to use the cliche Yankee independence, but I suspect there is an aspect of that," said Patricia Duffy, who has been helping compile a lengthy history of the town for use in the school curriculum. "We are cautious. We don't jump on any bandwagons."

Barnstable lives in the shadow of its neighbors Hyannis and Hyannisport, made famous by the Kennedy clan.

But Hyannis and Hyannisport are not officially incorporated as towns; they are merely two of seven villages in the town of Barnstable, which occupies the midsection of the cape.

Barnstable is the principal municipality of Barnstable County, which encompasses all of Cape Cod. It's the state's third largest community geographically and has a year-round population of about 35,000 that doubles during summer.

But few outside New England know its name, although residents hope to change that with a 12-month celebration that promises much variety, if little peace and quiet.

Festivities include a summer rowing regatta, a colonial costume day, a publishing party for the Cape Cod Almanac, and a Boston Pops concert on the Hyannis town green.

The big celebration comes in early September, the actual anniversary month, and includes a visit by a delegation from Barnstable's namesake, Barnstable, England.

The events the town will commemorate began in September 1639, when Barnstable was incorporated under a land grant from the Plimoth Colony.

The town history describes reaction to the American Revolution as mixed, with wealthy Tories quarreling with patriots over British domination. John Crocker, whose ancestors were among the town's first 45 inhabitants, puts it in physical terms: "In the Crocker Tavern (still standing) there is a gouge out of one of the beams where a couple of fellows had a sword fight over the issue."

The town neither endorsed nor opposed the Declaration of Independence. A town meeting initially voted against the U.S. Constitution because it lacked a bill of rights.

Juneau official accused of resume fraud

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — When Carl Keyser Jr. applied for the city administrator's job in the small Alaska town of Kake, officials jumped at the chance to hire him after reviewing his impressive, four-page resume.

Months later, they learned Kake was just the latest and most remote stop in Keyser's cross-country government career, a career officials say was based on phony resumes and bogus reference calls.

Kake is a fishing and timber town of 665 residents, mostly Tlingit Indians, about 75 miles south of Juneau on the northern tip of Kupreanof Island. It is about as far as Keyser could have gone from his last job, a six-day stint as city manager of Pikeville, Ky., and remain in North America.

Keyser left the Kentucky post in August after the news media uncovered discrepancies in his resume. Kake officials hired him in October, unaware he was wanted on a fugitive warrant from Pikeville.

They also did not know Keyser had pleaded guilty last January to a misdemeanor perjury charge for lying in sworn statements he made while applying for police chief in Oak Hill, Fla.

Keyser, a Huntington, W.Va., native, is being held under $10,000 bail at the jail in Petersburg, south of Kake, where last week officials filed a first-degree theft charge.

Keyser, 34, declined a request for an interview made through a jailer last week. However, in a tearful interview two weeks ago with radio station KFSK, he maintained his innocence and suggested he was a victim of a conspiracy in Pikeville.

"It's a situation where the press and some of the officials there want to make some type of example of me," he said. "It doesn't make any sense."

Pikeville charged Keyser with theft by deception for failure to reimburse the city for $697 in travel expenses. He said he would have returned the money had officials asked.

"But, no, they go and do something like this and look all over the country to try to find me to see what they can do to hurt me and my family," he said.

Keyser's wife, Sheila, and their four young daughters are staying in an apartment provided by the Salvation Army.

The Alaska charge alleges that Keyser falsified his resume and obtained about $28,000 in salary and expenses from the city.

"Nearly every aspect of his resume was not true," District Attorney Mark Ells said.

Keyser listed master's and bachelor's degrees in public administration from La Salle University in Philadelphia. He also listed experience as a consultant to the International City Managers Association and the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Officials say there is no record that Keyser attended the university or worked for the associations. In October, the city managers' group issued a warning about Keyser, urging members to investigate applicant's resumes.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 15, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Salary increases and a new leadership role await those who play their cards right. Good health is more important than a fit appearance. Exercise under the direction of your family doctor. Long-distance travel brings unique educational experiences. Make major career decisions when you are not under pressure. Frustration will subside when loved ones make a greater effort to understand you and your goals.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., actor Lloyd Bridges, drummer Gene Krupa, playwright Jean Moliere.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can reach a new understanding with the object of your affection. Make allowances for unsettled conditions at home. Spiritual matters exert a strong influence today. Do not give your values short shrift.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make an effort to organize your day and evening. Otherwise, time will slip away. Stay in good humor at a social event. Listen attentively to the advice of those more experienced.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your social life could reach new heights today. Attend a function where influential people will be present. You can gain access to important new business contacts. Romance holds great promise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Reading newspapers or catching up on household tasks proves rewarding. The emphasis is on pleasant domestic activities. Fulfill your obligations to relatives good-naturedly. Call loved ones at a distance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An excellent day to get chores out of the way. Loved one could come up with helpful suggestions. Entertain at home to save money. Being with good friends puts you in a nostalgic mood.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A chance remark by a stranger could trigger creativity. Keep your ideas under wraps until you have something on paper. Devote more time to a young person. Mate offers an interesting suggestion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow up on an idea you get while daydreaming. A long-held wish can come true if you move ahead without demanding immediate rewards. A relationship is puzzling.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A message from someone in another state or country will gladden your afternoon. A casual friendship could be the start of a long-lasting relationship. Family affairs need more attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day to ask a favor of an influential friend or associate. Map out a plan to build savings. Small changes in your routine could make the day more rewarding. Romance blossoms.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Teamwork hastens work at home. Expect some good news or a thoughtful gift. Involvement with a community project or church brings a new sense of fulfillment. You are interested in spiritual growth.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A telephone call may be disturbing. You handle the situation with style. Someone prominent you meet in a social setting could help your career. Follow up with a cordial note. Mention specifics.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A suggestion you follow today could bring excellent results. Be flexible at home. Guard your reputation by being more discreet. Loved one fulfills a promise.

Candice Bergen and family lead bi-continental lifestyle

Bergen

NEW YORK (AP) — Candice Bergen, star of the successful new CBS series "Murphy Brown," has a lifestyle that is not just bi-coastal, it's bi-continental.

While filming the show, Bergen lives in Los Angeles with her 3-year-old daughter, Chloe.

But the rest of the time, she and her husband, film director Louis Malle, live in New York and Malle's estate in the south of France.

"It's the kind of place where the most exciting thing is to watch the tomatoes grow," Bergen said in the February issue of Vanity Fair, referring to a stay in France last summer during the writers' strike.

"But it was such an important summer for us because of how much that house now means in terms of a refuge."

Bergen, the daughter of the late ventriloquist Edgar Bergen, said, "I come from this tiny, shrinking family, but when we get together with Louis' family there are so many cousins and even great-grandchildren. There are 30 of us and it's wonderful."

"I can't imagine what I would do without Louis. If you don't know us well we both come across as formal, reserved and well-mannered. But he's so funny. This marriage is a cornerstone for both of us."

• • •

Downey

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Confrontational television talk show host Morton Downey Jr. wants to buy a New Jersey casino to make it "the casino capital of the blue-collar crowd."

"I love Atlantic City," he said Wednesday. "And I'd like to see blue-collar America have its own castle."

Downey insists that he and his investment group are financially capable of making the deal for Del Webb's Claridge Casino Hotel. Downey declined to say how much he has bid or to identify other members of his investment group.

Downey said if he is selected as buyer, he would move to the 24th floor of the hotel with his bride-to-be, Lori Krebs, and would tape many of his syndicated talk shows in the hotel.

Claridge President Roger Wagner said the Del Webb board of directors "has requested that I don't discuss any negotiations or bids for the purchase of the Claridge."

• • •

Ullman

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — British actress Tracey Ullman will play a woman who repeatedly tries to kill her husband in a black comedy based on an Allentown case, according to the movie's production company.

The starring role in "I Love You To Death" will be the first for Ullman, a versatile actress who had a supporting role in the movie "Plenty." She now has a weekly half-hour comedy show on the Fox Network.

The casting was confirmed Tuesday by Chestnut Hill Productions, which plans to begin shooting the film in April in North Carolina, Oregon and Washington state.

Directed by Lawrence Kasdan, the film also will star Kevin Kline.

Kline and Ullman will play Tony and Frances Toto.

Mrs. Toto repeatedly tried to kill her husband by having him shot in the head, and, when he survived, the heart. After each attempt, she fed him homemade chicken soup laced with barbiturates.

Toto immediately forgave his wife, but the authorities did not. The couple was reunited in February after she served a four-year prison term.

• • •

Travis

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Randy Travis, a former short-order cook, is putting out a book containing his favorite recipes, his spokeswoman says.

"He does cook a lot and there are certain things he does well," publicist Evelyn Shriver said. "He likes to barbecue a lot and he likes to make spaghetti."

Travis was cooking at a Nashville nightclub 3½ years ago when he was discovered and signed a recording contract. Since then, he has sold 6 million records, including "Forever and Ever, Amen" and his current "Deeper Than the Holler."

The recipes are being compiled, but no release date for the cookbook has been set, Ms. Shriver said.

• • •

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Former Olympic diver Bruce Kimball may be allowed to change his guilty plea in a drunken-driving manslaughter case to safeguard insurance money for victims and their families, his attorney said.

The guilty plea Kimball entered Wednesday could amount to a breach of contract and allow his insurance company to cancel a $1.3 million liability insurance policy, said Frank Quesada, a lawyer for the 1984 silver medalist.

So Kimball may seek to change his plea to "no contest" before sentencing Jan. 30, Quesada said.

"The company could cut Kimball loose," he said. "It has nothing to do with the way Bruce feels... A change (in pleas) would be all for the victims."

Hillsborough Circuit Judge Harry Lee Coe III said he would accept a no-contest plea if it's proven his policy would be canceled.

Kimball pleaded guilty after listening to only a few minutes of testimony about the Aug. 1 crash, which killed two teen-agers and injured four others. He said he wanted to spare the families the grief of hearing descriptions about how his car plowed into the youths on a dead-end road in suburban Brandon.

Kimball, 25, is being held in Hillsborough County Jail awaiting sentencing on two counts of drunken-driving manslaughter and three counts of causing great bodily injury while driving under the influence of alcohol. He faces between seven and 22 years in prison under state sentencing guidelines.

There are four civil lawsuits pending against Kimball stemming from the accident, a month before the 1988 Olympic diving trials in which he participated but failed to make the team.

If the victims' lawsuits are successful, money from Kimball's liability insurance policy could pay for damages.

Forest Whitaker takes flight in 'Bird' role

BY HILLEL ITALIE

NEW YORK (AP) — For Forest Whitaker, playing Charlie Parker didn't just mean looking or sounding like the great jazzman. It meant making sure everything fit.

"I was nervous. I was scared," admitted Whitaker, who stars in "Bird," Clint Eastwood's critically acclaimed film biography of the late jazz saxophonist.

"I was going into areas I hadn't really dealt with. It was a most challenging role. As a person, I felt really honored to bring the character to life. It was so fortunate that it happened."

Parker, who died in 1955 when he was just 34, moved into musical areas that few touched. With such musicians as Dizzy Gillespie, he revolutionized jazz in the 1940s, helping create the style called be-bop. A brilliant and troubled man, he was no less overwhelming as a person.

"I think he embraced life," Whitaker said. "He took whatever pleasure he could find in it. He wasn't afraid to do that. It held a lot of bad consequences for him, but he did that and that's where he hurt himself."

Where Parker primarily hurt himself was by a heroin addiction that plagued him for much of his life.

"He was trapped and he started very young," Whitaker said. "I think it has to do with his particular way of life. He was very sensitive about a lot of things. I think he knew it was destroying him. He didn't want other people using it."

Whitaker, awarded 1988's prize for best actor at the Cannes Film Festival, gives a performance that should get Academy notice.

He was born in Longview, Texas, and grew up in Los Angeles. He attended the University of Southern California and originally studied opera. But he became interested in acting and began appearing in local equity productions. His involvement with movies came later.

"I was probably going to go to New York and work on stage and that was it," Whitaker said in an interview. "It just so happens I was working on a play and it turned into an opportunity to do a film."

Whitaker beat Paul Newman at pool in "The Color of Money," and played Robin Williams' protege in "Good Morning, Vietnam." He has been directed by Martin Scorcese, Oliver Stone and Eastwood.

"They all have a very keen sense of focus, although their focuses are different. Some go out in a circle and encompass everything. Some just focus on this little tiny thing."

Whitaker had not even met Eastwood when he was given the part.

"I didn't know he had any interest in jazz whatsoever. I didn't have any preconceived ideas about him. I never expected to see Dirty Harry walk into that meeting. He turned out to be a real jazz aficionado and really easy to work for."

Whitaker is something of a rarity in Hollywood, a successful black actor. He had always been aware of the difficulties in getting good parts, but was not deterred from going into films.

"I'm fortunate because I never wanted to do film. I'm real fortunate that I never really thought about it. That fear wasn't there because there wasn't a great need at first," he said. "A lot of the roles I've played have not been written for black actors."

As part of his research for "Bird," Whitaker talked to those who knew Parker, including the jazzman's wife, Chan. He discovered that no one really "knew" Parker.

"It seemed they didn't know what was going on with him. That helped me immensely to understand where he was coming from," Whitaker said.

"What did he really say to them? What did they really know about his fears, how he felt about this? When they told me what they knew, it was more important what they didn't know. Someone would say he had no fear and that would tell me how much they knew."

Parker was true to the spirit of his music, spontaneous and emotional, given to extreme highs and lows. Understandably, Whitaker was drained by the effort to sustain those feelings.

"There are scenes in the latter part of his life when he's closer to death, when he's lost almost everything. He's walking around like a lost soul, the only thing that's moving him around is a little pilot light," the actor said.

"That was difficult to understand, trying to find that place where you're still alive but you have nothing left."

But how well could anyone really understand Parker? "Bird has disintegrated into pure sound," a musician once said. Was Parker beyond words?

"He was pushing towards sound," Whitaker said. "The sound was totally coming from emotion. More than words can express. I think that was something he felt, understood and put in his music."

But Whitaker believes he shares an important philosophical goal with Parker.

"I think he had a quest for understanding, openness. I believe I have that, trying to figure that stuff out, being open to all kinds of different things.

'Black and Blue' showcases recording star from the '50s

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK — Ruth Brown is getting ahead by going backward.

She became a recording star singing rhythm 'n' blues in the 1950s. Now she's on Broadway singing jazz and blues dating from the three decades before that.

And it works. She's teamed with Linda Hopkins and Carrie Smith in the revue "Black and Blue," a celebration of songs from the '20s, '30s and '40s. There's not just the three singers, but tap dancers and well-known jazz musicians in the band.

It was scheduled to open on Broadway Sunday, at the Minskoff Theater, but has been postponed because of Miss Brown's illness. She suffered an angina attack complicated by pneumonia Jan. 6 and has been out of the show since then. The revue now is scheduled to open either Jan. 22 or 26.

When "Black and Blue" opened in Paris in 1985, it ran for eight months and Vogue magazine called it, "The coolest thing in Paris...a red-hot revival of black American music."

In the 1950s, Miss Brown was Atlantic Records' most-recorded performer. She pumped out some 87 rhythm 'n' blues releases and some called Atlantic "the House that Ruth Built."

She admits that, at her "Black and Blue" audition, "I was a little hesitant, to tell the truth. I'd been singing rhythm 'n' blues. I had not experienced that whole Cotton Club scene; that's what the general idea was based on.

"We went to Paris shortly after the movie 'The Cotton Club' had been a good hit in Paris."

BUT NOW, harkening back to some of the fine old hits of an earlier golden age of cabarets and Broadway revues, she is not only comfortable, she promises new success.

If "Black and Blue's" three singers are patterned after anybody, she says, it is the Peters Sisters, a trio of American sisters who became a hit in Europe. "The last one, Virginia Peters, is living in Paris. She saw the show and said she was pleased. It was reminiscent of her good times."

Miss Brown had three solos in Paris and she still does, but "Mood Indigo" has been replaced by "Body and Soul." Singing those songs she says, "was really like going back to my beginning."

She was born Ruth Weston on Jan. 12, 1928, in Portsmouth, Va., the oldest of seven children whose father was a Methodist choir director.

At 16, she joined Lucky Millinder's band.

Traveling with Millinder, she says, "I was keeping company with one of the fellows in the band. Unless I wanted to be buried when I got home, I thought I better get married. That's how I got Brown."

By the time she got to Washington, she and trumpeter Jimmy Brown were separated and Millinder fired her for fetching drinks for the musicians.

She had left home against her father's wishes and found herself without the price of a bus ticket home, "standing on a street corner by the Howard Theater with my suitcase in my hand, 225 miles from home.

"A YOUNG MAN walked up I recognized; he was a singer with Horace Heidt. He took me to the Crystal Caverns and introduced me to Blanche Calloway. She gave me a chance to sing for her audience. They received me in such a way she said she'd put me to work for a week.

"Blanche was Cab Calloway's sister. She was one of the first female band leaders and one of the most gorgeous women ever to grace the stage. This show would have been her cup of tea."

Blanche Calloway became her manager. Miss Brown says, "She called the son of the Turkish ambassador who was starting a record company and suggested he get down and listen to this girl." Ahmet Ertegun listened and Ruth Brown was signed to the fledgling Atlantic Records in 1949.

Miss Brown's first recording at Atlantic Records was a ballad, "So Long." Then staff writer Rudy Toombs brought in a fast song, "Teardrops from My Eyes," which she also recorded for Atlantic.

"It took," she says. "It was the first thing I'd done with a back beat. It was really danceable. It went into the charts at 3 or 4, moved into No. 1 and stayed about 27 weeks."

She says that the song of hers people remember best is "Mama, He Treats Your Daughter Mean."

"No matter where I go, 35 years later they ask for that song."

Other big records were "5-10-15 Hours (of Your Love)," "Oh What a Dream," "Mambo Baby" and "Lucky Lips," which moved from the rhythm 'n' blues best-selling charts to the pop charts, unusual in those days.

It wasn't always sunshine. She has had to get 9-to-5 jobs from time to time and dropped out of show business to raise her children.

RECORD ROYALTIES stopped until, in 1985, attorney Howell Begle, a rhythm 'n' blues fan, began to look into her case, and others.

Now she gets monthly statements and has received one lump sum payment going back to 1970. "I'm satisfied," she says. "A lot of people have been helped, even at this late stage of the game. Ahmet made the decision to let us go ahead amicably. He could have caused us to stay in court a long time and most of us didn't have the money to do that."

Last season Miss Brown was off-Broadway in the musical, "Staggerlee." A casting director saw that and invited her to read for Motormouth Mabel in the film "Hairspray." She got the part. In December she was featured in a PBS documentary, "That Rhythm, Those Blues."

She has been married four times. "I have two fine sons. They're actors in California, waiting for the big moment they're going to get their star on the sidewalk." Her grandson recently appeared in a McDonald's commercial as a future Olympics long-distance runner.

"I've been more active in the last year and a half than ever," she says. "I've been back doing nightclubs and I went to a jazz festival in Japan. I've really got the bug for acting. Fantasy Records put out 'Have a Good Time,' cut live in Los Angeles. I've got the feeling, as the old folks say, I'm on a roll."

ENTERTAINMENT

Nashville luring musicians union

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The local chapter of the American Federation of Musicians and city officials are trying to lure the union's international headquarters to relocate from New York City to "Music City USA."

The AFM, the world's largest entertainment union, wants to move to a more convenient and economical site, officials said.

The union, representing instrumentalists and some vocalists, has 200,000 members in the United States and Canada.

The Nashville local has 3,500 members.

Jay Collins, president of the local, said Nashville is one of 10 cities that will make a presentation to the union's international executive board next week in Las Vegas.

The AFM local, the Nashville Area Chamber of Commerce and the mayor's office are working together to try to entice the union to the country music capital.

The other cities are Denver, Dallas-Fort Worth, St. Paul-Minneapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, northern New Jersey, Las Vegas, Cincinnati and Greater Washington D.C.

'Midnight Crossing': Bad film full of good questions

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

"Midnight Crossing" (MCA Home Entertainment. VHS-Beta, $89.98. Rated R)

Flashback: Castro is coming out of the Cuban highlands and Batista's casino operators are moving their cash out of the country. Somehow a bunch of U.S. Navy men get hold of $2 million of it and stash it on this island, see?

Cut to the present: Daniel J. Travanti was one of the sailors. The other one who knew where the treasure is has died, so Travanti wants to go back and get it. (Why did they wait 20 years? Good question.)

Travanti's wife, played by Faye Dunaway, is blind, sort of. ("I specialized in eye diseases. So how did I get glaucoma?" Good question.)

He charters the yacht of his suspiciously deceased shipmate's son (John Laughlin), whose perky, pouty wife (Kim Cattrall) works in Capt. Frank Furillo's insurance agency. (Why? Good question.)

By this point you've sunk 45 minutes in this sucker and nothing's happening.

Wait a second!...Hey, isn't this the perfect bunch to erupt in jealousy, lust, murderous intrigue and pistols and spearguns and all kinds of neato, bloodiness played out beneath a cruel, cruel Caribbean sun? Good question!

Travanti sleepwalks through his role. Dunaway is at her most brittle, shrewish and shrill. The juve leads are bland as custard. Phony tension, childish intrigue, unbelievably stupid plot tricks. Worse, the venerable Ned Beatty is written into the plot — and just as quickly written out.

Party ready to legalize Solidarity

WORLD

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist Party leaders are ready to make Solidarity legal again if the trade union will help back their political and economic reforms, a government source said Friday.

The source — a party member informed about preparations for a key meeting of the party Central Committee on Monday and Tuesday — characterized the decision as "a gamble" and "revolutionary" for Poland.

If it is accepted by the opposition, it will mark the end of an era of political impasse in Poland and represent an admission that authorities' efforts through most of the 1980s to destroy the East bloc's only independent union movement have failed.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was not available for comment Friday evening.

Union national spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz said he had not been expecting such a dramatic action from the Central Committee meeting, "but if it happened, it would be very good" and could "open the road" to talks between the opposition and the government.

Members of the ruling Politburo, led by Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, visited factories Friday to inform party units about the plenum, the state-run PAP news service reported.

The source, who demanded anonymity, said Solidarity could be legalized in a few months if it agrees to certain conditions, which he said might be expected to include a promise to obey a 1982 union law that spells out arbitration procedures in collective bargaining disputes and bans wildcat strikes.

Solidarity, banned seven years ago, has said it would accept legalization within the framework of that law.

Solidarity would also be expected to begin talks immediately with the authorities, the source said. It would be asked to agree with authorities on the form and aims of a new election law that could result in a "substantial presence" of the opposition in parliament — but leave the party in a coalition majority with the allied Peasant and Democratic parties, the source said.

The arrangement would mean the communists would have diminished power in the parliament, because they now have an absolute majority and do not need the coalition parties to rule, the source said.

Parliamentary elections are scheduled this year and Jaruzelski has stressed that more opposition voices should be heard in parliament. However, the party wants to allocate seats to various constituencies rather than have Western-style competition among opposing parties, as the opposition prefers.

Other topics for discussion would be on the formation of a second chamber of parliament and on a permanent Council of National Reconciliation, a committee that would represent a broad political spectrum of views and seek consensus on major issues.

Compromise with the opposition is possible in part because of the changing international situation, including the reforms being carried out by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and the easing of U.S.-Soviet tensions, the source said.

Authorities expect the West to support Polish reforms and encourage the opposition "in a positive sense," but not to back "adventures, revolt and civil war," he said, arguing that only peaceful change, not confrontation, will bring results.

Poland also expects the decision to recognize Solidarity to lead Western governments to look more favorably on the country's requests for credits in such forums as the Paris Club, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, the source said.

The country already has hints that Western governments will look on the action favorably, he said.

"We hope that this decision will facilitate financial relations with the West and Western participation in the Polish reform," said the source.

"We count on the opposition being loyal, so we can have this year a legal opposition in Poland," the source said.

He said the compromise as he described it was "possible but not 100 percent sure. There are people against agreement."

There are party members who oppose the compromise, especially within the official trade union movement OPZZ, but Jaruzelski and Prime Minister Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski favor the agreement and have sufficient backing to produce a declaration at the party meeting, the source said.

The source estimated that no more than one-third of Central Committee members will be opposed or hesitate before approving the decision.

The source said Walesa must decide if he prefers "legalization and some divisions" in his ranks "or unity and continuation of the situation.

"According to our knowledge, Walesa and those around him are for the agreement," he said.

Solidarity was suspended and then banned after a Dec. 13, 1981, military crackdown when authorities said the union had been taken over by radicals intent on toppling Poland's communist system.

The union had a 16-month legal existence after August 1980, and continued to be active after the imposition of martial law, first as an underground organization and more openly since a 1986 political amnesty.

American held on weapon, drug charges

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — John Hull, an American linked to an illegal arms-supply network aiding the Nicaraguan rebels, was being held Friday as part of a drug and weapons investigation, a source said.

The source in the Office of Judicial Investigations said on condition of anonymity that authorities have not decided whether to release Hull or send him to the prison in San Sebastian pending the outcome of the investigation.

He said Hull was taken into custody Thursday for investigation into charges of drug and weapons trafficking and spying for the U.S.-backed Contras fighting the Nicaraguan government.

The Office of Judicial Investigations acted after residents near his farm on the Nicaraguan border denounced activities by Hull that were seen as possibly endangering relations between Nicaragua and Costa Rica, said the source.

The office is Costa Rica's federal police investigations department.

Marcos Valverde of the U.S. Embassy press office refused to confirm or deny the arrest, and referred all calls to Costa Rican authorities.

But a U.S. embassy official speaking on condition of anonymity said an American consular official was seeking permission from Costa Rica on Friday to visit Hull. A similar attempt Thursday night was unsuccessful, said the official.

The official brushed aside suggestions that the arrest was politically motivated, contending that the Office of Judicial Investigations has an honorable reputation.

According to the official, no charges had been filed against Hull and that Costa Rican authorities had nine days in which to release him or charge him.

All the embassy can do, the official said, is to ensure Hull has access to a lawyer and that he is treated the same as a Costa Rican citizen.

Hull, a former Indiana resident who is about 69 years old, has lived in Costa Rica for 20 years and has said he is a Costa Rican citizen. He has acknowledged he supported the Contras and has said that in the past he let them use his property in Los Chiles, 81 miles northwest of San Jose.

F. Andy Messing, who heads the conservative National Defense Foundation in Washington, said he and Rep. David Dreier, R-Calif., met with Hull during a fact-finding trip to Central America last month.

He said Hull assured them he stopped assisting the Contras when the Iran-Contra case broke. In the case, Reagan administration officials sent arms to Iran for money to be sent to the Contras.

Hull said during interviews in 1986 that authorities twice had raided his home looking for evidence of rumored gun running and drug smuggling. The searches turned up nothing, he said.

Hull's wife, Mariella, of Patoka, Ind., confirmed that her husband was being held, the Evansville (Ind.) Courier reported on Friday.

Mrs. Hull would not reveal details about the case, but said she was informed by telephone that her husband was arrested.

Something down there will scare the hell out of you.

Yugoslavian republic government resigns

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Eight leaders of Montenegro's government resigned Friday, two days after the central republic's Communist Party leaders were forced out by growing unrest over the region's faltering economy.

It was the first time the entire government and party leaderships of one of Yugoslavia's six constituent republics had stepped down.

The Montenegrin Parliament on Friday accepted the resignations of the six-man state presidency but voted to keep it in a caretaker capacity until new elections were held.

It also accepted resignations of the republic's representative in the collective nine-man federal presidency and of its speaker, Velisav Vuksanovic.

The state news agency Tanjug reported later that the Parliament also decided to call early elections in Montenegro. A final decision on that matter will be made Jan. 26, Tanjug said.

On Wednesday, the party's central committee formally accepted the resignation of its ruling Politburo and named a interim leadership to prepare for an extraordinary party congress.

Yugoslavia's federal government, six republic governments and two autonomous provinces each are run by a party presidium, a state presidency and a government. The presidencies, headed by chairmen, mostly have formal functions subordinate to the party.

Montenegro's government, in charge of implementing economic policies, already resigned after mass protests last October.

The ouster of the entire Montenegrin ruling elite came after more than 120,000 people demonstrated earlier this week in Titograd, the region's capital, demanding the leadership step down because of the disastrous state of the region's economy.

The ouster of the entire Montenegrin ruling elite came after more than 120,000 people demonstrated...demanding the leadership step down ...

"The current mass dissatisfaction among the workers, students and young people is due to a large extent to the difficulties faced by the country as a whole," said Bozidar Tadic, vice-president of the Montenegrin Parliament, in his keynote speech which was broadcast live on national television.

Montenegro's representative on the federal presidency, Veselin Djuranovic, said his decision to step down "was motivated by a sense of responsibility for the economic situation...and in the expectation that it will help alleviate the crisis."

Montenegro, Yugoslavia's smallest republic and one of its poorest, has been particularly hard hit by the protracted national economic crisis, characterized by a 250 percent inflation rate, a $21 billion foreign debt and 12 percent drop in living standards in 1988 alone.

The average monthly salary in the republic amounts to the equivalent of $80, and unemployment has soared after the closing of several unprofitable enterprises previously subsidized through federal funds.

Four-week medication calendar helpful

When your doctor prescribes medicine for you to control high blood pressure, heart problems or other chronic conditions that you may have, it's essential that you take that medication regularly and in the proper way.

Many people who are taking more than one medicine find it helpful to use a medication calendar.

The calendar allows them to list their medicines and include key information about taking them properly – whether they should be taken with food, other drugs not to take at the same time, etc.

If you are taking more than one medicine, you may find this four-week medication calendar useful. You may want to ask your doctor or nurse to help you fill it out the first week, or when your medication changes.

After you've filled out the medication information, post the chart where you can mark on it conveniently every day. Each time you take your medicine, put a check in the correct box.

Following are seven key questions that you should ask your doctor or pharmacist about medicines that are prescribed for you.

1. The name of the drug (trade and generic names) and its strength.

2. Why the drug is being prescribed.

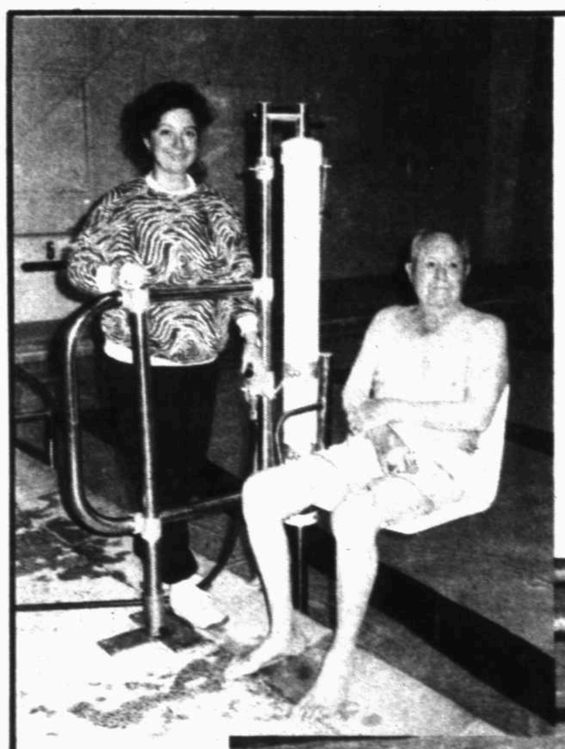

3. Will the drug react with other medications you may be taking, including over-the-counter drugs and vitamins, or with any foods.

4. When and how is the drug to be taken – with meals, on an empty stomach, with water, etc.

5. Are there any side effects to watch for and report to your doctor.

6. Are there any activities, such as driving a car or operating machinery, to avoid when taking the drug.

7. How long should you take the drug.

Shortwave enthusiasts thrive on open channels to the world

By SCOTT WRIGHT

DALLAS (AP) — The world is at their fingertips.

So are the buttons, dials and knobs on the shortwave radios that bring it to them.

A growing number of Americans are listening to international radio programs broadcast from Albania to Yugoslavia, eavesdropping on the world with shortwave radios that easily can snatch signals out of the sky despite long distances.

"If I could have one in my car, I would," says David Coursey, a 29-year-old writer from Dallas. "I love it. I'm used to hearing about events in parts of the world that most Americans don't even know exist. The world suddenly becomes a much smaller place."

Sony, the leading manufacturer of shortwave radios sold in the United States, recorded slight increases in sales during the early '80s. But the company predicts a 28 percent jump in the number of radios sold between 1987 and 1989.

"It's a small, sophisticated market," says Tad Oki, Sony's shortwave-radio product manager. While they probably never will capture a big chunk of the consumer electronics market as Walkman radios have, Oki says, shortwave radios fill an elite niche that continues to grow.

One reason is that recent technological advances have fine-tuned the radios' capabilities, making them easier for consumers to use, he says. Some receivers are the size of a pack of cigarettes, and prices range from less than $100 to several thousand dollars.

Trying to locate a specific station used to be akin to playing "Wheel of Fortune," says Stewart Mackenzie, who heads the 550-member strong American Shortwave Listeners Club, from his home in Huntington Beach, Calif.

"Twenty to 30 years ago, you had to just spin the dial on the radio, and you never really knew exactly where you were at, or what frequency you were listening to," Mackenzie says. "Now most of them are digital, so the stations are easier to find."

The radios' digital readout allows listeners to punch in the exact frequency of the station they want to hear. The strength of the receiver and the size of the antenna largely determine the number of stations that can be picked up.

"They're push-button easy," says Coursey, who began listening to shortwave radio at age 12. "On any given evening, you can expect to hear, without much trouble, a couple dozen countries broadcasting in English."

It's a smorgasbord of stations out there, with programs from the British Broadcasting Corp., Voice of America and Radio Moscow leading the airwave menu.

"Passport to World Band Radio," a kind of TV Guide for shortwave enthusiasts, provides a rich list of schedules and frequencies for nearly 160 countries, including some obscure stations such as Radio Ghana in Africa and Voice of Vietnam in Southeast Asia.

"There's a little bit of something for everybody," says Mike Moody, general manager for Electronic Center, which sells shortwave radios in Dallas. "Radio holds a certain fascination for many people, especially older ones, who grew up listening to radios instead of watching TV."

Sales of shortwave radios also have picked up locally in the past couple years, says Moody, who listens to the BBC "just about every night" on a set in his home.

"Of course we always sell quite a few after any large disasters," he says, such as last month's devastating earthquake in Soviet Armenia. "People see something on TV about an amateur radio operator picking up this or that and they rush out to buy a shortwave for themselves so they can do the same."

Other buyers include a sophisticated segment of the public — looking for a fresh perspective on worldwide current events from foreign broadcasts — and foreign-born Americans searching for hard-to-find news from their homelands, Moody says.

Avid shortwave listeners, like Coursey, prefer to use the term "world band radio" or simply "world radio" because shortwave "reminds you of that whiny, squealing noise that characterized shortwave radios," he says.

These radio hobbyists comprise the remaining segment of the buying public. Their passion is not so much listening to foreign programs as it is locating them; they "collect" broadcasts like other people do coins.

Jerry Jeff Walker seeks 'Viva Terlingua' success in Gruene

By DAVID SEDENO

GRUENE, Texas (AP) — Jerry Jeff Walker walked onto the small stage at Gruene Hall, slung the exotic reptile skin strap of his Martin guitar over his shoulder and signaled to the band he was ready to start.

To the resounding applause of 600 people at the rustic, wood-floor honky-tonk, he picked and crooned one country tune after another, talking to the crowd in between instrumental solos as if he were talking to old friends.

At the chorus of one tune, the 46-year-old Walker reminded his audience he had matured just a bit: He was once regarded as a hard drinking, cussing rebel both on and off the stage who couldn't care less for the business end of his career.

"We're just here to play a little music, not watch me throw up...I've already done that...before," he said to ear-piercing hoots and hollers in the 110-year-old dance hall where burlap sacks hung from the rafters and newspaper ads adorned the walls.

The recent performance was another success. It also was an inspiration for Walker, who recorded his first album in three years and his first live one in 10 years at the hall.

"I've been playing here for years and we've had fun here," Walker said in an interview. "I usually record live anyway in the studio and I got some songs that I wanted some people to sing along on and I wanted to get the audience to join in.

"We're living in a very high-tech era with mechanical drums and other things. I thought it would be fun to make a live album with just regular ol' musicians playing music."

During his two decades in the music business, Walker has played to thousands at concert halls and to a few fans and friends at dimly lighted bars in the middle of nowhere.

Gruene — pronounced Green — is about a third of the way to Austin, where Walker lives with his wife and two children.

Walker, who recorded the live "Viva Terlingua" album in the once-unknown Hill Country hamlet of Luckenbach, believes Gruene's small-town flavor was just right for him and his fans for the new album.

"It's more of a treat for people to come here. They can put on their Levi's, come out in their pickup truck, bring along some beer and come out and be heard," he said.

The Oneonta, N.Y., native wrote such songs as "Drifting Way of Life," "Gypsy Songman," "Hill Country Rain" and "Cadillac Cowboy."

But he is best known for "Mr. Bojangles," a song about a raggedy old man who danced a soft shoe for money. Walker wrote the tune during his wild days in 1968 but it remains popular and has been recorded by such artists as Nina Simone.

"I still think it's part of everything," Walker said. "I think people in show business have identified with that song and that's what's kept it around."

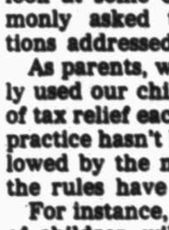

Time and a family have changed Walker some, but the rebel is still within him. He has shed his reputation as a boozer who played drunk at recordings and concerts. He has an occasional beer or two, but he spends most of his time writing songs, jogging and playing golf.

Gone, too, from Walker's life are the entourages that followed him around the country. He's a solo act now, but in Austin he knows he easily can get together a few musicians to play anytime he wants, as was the case with the live album. But the independent soul within him refuses to let others dictate how he should write, play or market his music.

He's using his own money for the album and it will be released on his Tried and True label. Susan Walker, 40, his wife of 14 years who also serves as his business manager and president of an official fan club, is working out a distribution deal.

Tumbleweeds and blowing sand: The tax season approaches!

Van M. Pearcy

March and April are rapidly approaching, and West Texans will once again face rolling tumbleweeds, red blowing sand and the torrential "winds" of the 1986 Tax Reform Act. It is something we are not looking forward to but it is something we must deal with.

A good tool to help understand these relatively new tax laws and how they will affect each of us can be found in the Price Waterhouse "Personal Tax Advisor." This publication is an excellent source of tax information and is written in a language anyone can understand.

The following article takes a look at some of the most commonly asked tax-related questions addressed by this book.

As parents, we have historically used our children as a source of tax relief each April 15th. This practice hasn't been totally disallowed by the new tax laws, but the rules have been changed.

For instance, a record number of children will be required to file tax returns again this year. Anyone with an unearned income greater than $500 or with gross income greater than their standard deduction must file a return. (The standard deduction for a child is $500 or the amount of the child's earned income, whichever is greater. The limit is $3,000 for 1988.)

This means if a child's unearned income exceeds $500 or if a child's earned income and unearned income totals more than $500, he or she must file a return.

Two additional law changes work in the government's favor. First, children claimed as dependents by their parents will no longer be allowed to claim themselves as personal exemptions on their own tax returns. Second, any unearned income totaling more than $1,000 of children under the age 14 will now be taxed to the child at the parent's tax rate.

Under the new tax law, you can still give any number of people up to $10,000 each without incurring gift taxes. Non-charitable gifts do not generate a deduction for the donor nor do they create income for the recipient.

In 1986, taxpayers selling for a gain had the option of selecting when a trade would be taxed if the trade date fell in one year land the settlement date another. This is no longer true. Now, all sales of securities, whether losses or gains, will be governed by trade dates. Therefore if a transaction has a trade date of December 31, 1988 or earlier, it's taxable in 1988.

If you sell a security at a loss, neither you nor any member of your family can repurchase the same security in a 61-day period beginning 30 days before the date of sale and ending 30 day after the sale. If you do repurchase the security within this period, your loss is disallowed.

Commissions paid by a buyer are not tax deductible. Commissions are added to the cost basis of the security and will reduce any gain on sale of the security of increase any loss.

Losses have also been affected by the 1986 Tax Reform. In 1988 all capital losses are offset against all capital gains, long or short term, If losses exceed gains, up to $3,000 (using a joint return) of the loss may be used to offset ordinary income dollar for dollar. If net losses total more than $3,000, the excess is carried over to future years.

With April 15th rapidly approaching, many taxpayers will be forced to take a close look at the new tax laws and how they forced to take a close look at the new tax laws and how they apply to them.

If you're having trouble understanding the new tax laws and how they will affect you, seek the advice of a professional financial advisor or a Certified Public Accountant. The trip may save you a great deal of confusion and frustration.

All aboard the Silver Wings Travel Club

By JANICE FORD
Advertising Feature Writer

Looking for a new adventure or two this year? One group of Midland seniors has already received its itinerary for a variety of travel excursions, and they are encouraging fellow travelers to join them in the fun.

The Silver Wings Travel Club, sponsored by the YMCA, provides two functions for its members. Not only is it a means of travel, but Silver Wings is a social opportunity to meet other people who share a common interest.

The club meets monthly for pot luck meals and travel programs at the Northeast YMCA, 2301 Butternut.

"Silver Wings is a fun, safe, escorted travel service with friends," said Betty Childs, program director. "We make short, local trips as well as longer trips, such as our Hawaiian cruise in May."

All YMCA members ages 55 and older are automatically eligible for membership in Silver Wings; however, any Permian Basin senior citizen is encouraged to attend the monthly meetings and to participate in the excursions.

In addition to the May trip to Hawaii, other adventures planned in coming months include a trip to Las Vegas and an Alaskan cruise.

"We strive for some type of out-of-town activity every four to six weeks," said Ms. Childs. Group excursions vary in size from nine to 20 people, on average.

George Wolf Reporter-Telegram

The YMCA's Silver Wings Travel Club is composed of a group of dedicated travel enthusiasts. From left are Edna Banks, Patsy Yeager and program coordinator Betty Childs.

Participants are responsible for paying for their trips. The YMCA underwrites the van transportation for area day and overnight trips.

Ms. Childs coordinates each trip, working with a number of sources in order to provide the best trips at the most affordable price for the travelers.

A travel committee composed of Silver Wings members makes recommendations for trips, which are based on suggestions submitted by the group.

The next Silver Wings Travel Club meeting will be Thursday, March 2, at the Northeast YMCA. Plans will be made for the trip to Hawaii. For more information, call Betty Childs at 682-8469.

Saddle Club

Chris-

Just wanted to drop you a line to let you know I'm all settled into my new spot at Saddle Club Apartments. And it's just fantastic! This place has everything I need and even more! I never imagined that apartment living could be like this, or I would have moved here months ago. Spacious and affordable. Private, but the people are really friendly. And the amenities are out of this world!

Give me a call soon. Or drop by sometime-I'm sure you'll enjoy it. Life at Saddle Club Apartments is simply...GREAT!
