Spokesman Says Emperor Back In Command Of Whole Kingdom

(By The Associated Press)

A large scale offensive against Sasa Beneh, Ethiopian city forming one of the outer fortifications of Harar, got under way today under the personal direction of General Graziani, Italy's southern commander. It was considered a crucial struggle in the effort to capture Harar.

An Ethiopian government spokesman today said that Emperor Haile Selassie was again in control of all Ethiopian territories outside the Italian lines. He denied reports of mutiny, and said Ethiopia was prepared to defend Addis Ababa to the last man.

The spokesman claimed large-scale guerilla warfare would start if the capital is taken by the fascists.

The Italians were in full drive toward the capital, according to a communique from the northern front. Airplanes continued to bomb Ethiopian defenses around Harar, the second largest city of the empire.

In the European affair, France through British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was preparing to demand to know if Germany intends retaking the colonies lost in the war to effect "German equality." Observers believed Hitler's next major move would be to demand restoration of the former German colonies.

Reports from Bombay said 82 persons were injured in rioting between Hindus and Moslems. Guards armed with machine guns were posted to protect the famed Bombay temples.

Foul Play Theory Advanced, But Police Skeptical

FORT WORTH, April 24 (AP)—Mrs. Charles Engle, wife of the shortstop on the Fort Worth baseball team, was fatally burned in a mysterious fire in her apartment today. She died five hours after her almost nude body was found.

Neighbors advanced the theory that she met with violence, but police were skeptical. Blood and strands of hair were found on an inside wall of the apartment.

Followed By Car

Mrs. Engle and the wife of another Fort Worth ball player, en route home after visiting a mutual friend, noticed another car following them, it was learned. Mrs. Engle took her friend home, then drove to her own apartment alone.

Shortly afterward, a passerby discovered the house ablaze. Neighbors heard a muffled explosion.

Engle, in Tulsa, Okla., with the team for a series, rushed homeward.

School Vote Is Postponed

Uncertainty Over Boundaries Delays Consolidation Move

The consolidation election scheduled for the Soash and Knott consolidated district (Knott and Highway) scheduled for Saturday has been postponed indefinitely.

Reason for the delay was given as the change of the county line through the Soash district. An opinion from the state department of education held that the district would have to redeclare its metes and boundaries and to ascertain whether Martin or Howard county trustees would have jurisdiction over the school.

When Soash is re-established as a county line district, the election may be legally held, according to the opinion.

Forsan and Chalk are to vote on a consolidation proposal May 9 Highway and Knott, first in the county to approve consolidation, voted to merge on March 14.

Some States Get More For Work Relief

27 Percent Of Total Goes To New York; Texas Gets Big Boost

(Copyright, 1936, by United Press)

WASHINGTON, April 24 (UP)—Treasury officials disclosed that New York state had received $88,777,996 or 27 per cent of all work relief allotments made since January 1 in a sweeping shift in allocations throughout the United States.

The relief administration, now the center of the hottest political wrangling of the 1936 presidential campaign, previously had given New York an average of approximately 10 per cent of all allocations. The state had an unexpended relief balance of some $201,000,000 at the end of last month.

Four Decreased

Changes in allocations to every state, including decreases in four were shown by the treasury.

Allocations represent funds allotted by the president for unemployed relief, but do not necessarily tally with the amount of money finally approved for expenditures under the $4,880,000,000 relief program.

President Roosevelt and WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins have approved more projects than actually will be started in order to give state directors leeway in local administration. However, in the case of New York, the authorized

Detective's Son Is Named Plotter Of Wendel Abduction

Ellis Parker, Jr., Four Others Indicted In Alleged Kidnaping And Torture

BROOKLYN, April 24. (AP)—Ellis Parker, Jr., son of the Burlington, N. J., detective chief, was characterized today as the "real conspirator" in the kidnaping and torture of Paul Wendel, by District Attorney William Geoghan.

Parker was indicted with four others yesterday. He remained at large today, although it was rumored he was en route to New Jersey to surrender.

Geoghan said "he concocted the whole plot."

The indictments returned against Parker and four others charged them with kidnaping and second degree assault.

The indictments came after Wendel twice had told the jury he was abducted in New York, held prisoner in a Brooklyn house, tortured to make him "confess" to kidnaping the infant son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, and then taken to New Jersey.

Wendel repudiated the "confession" after it caused a delay of three days in the execution of Hauptmann for the Lindbergh kidnap crime.

The others indicted were Martin Schlossman and Harry Bleefeld, both now in custody, and Harry Weiss and Murry Bleefeld, whom police are seeking.

Schlossman, son-in-law of Harry Bleefeld, waived immunity and testified before the grand jury.

Parker In Case

Parker is the son of the chief of detectives of Burlington county, N. J. The elder Parker played a prominent part in an attempt to investigate angles of the Lindbergh case after Hauptmann lost his appeal in the courts.

Immediately after the indictments were handed up to Justice George W. Martin, District Attorney Geoghan said:

"This does not end our investigation. It is within the realm of probability that even further indictments may be secured before this case is finished."

Fix Dates For Judge's Meet

County Officials To Convene In City On Sept. 11-12

Dates for the autumn meeting of the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners association convention to be held here have been announced as September 11-12 by H. M. LaFont, Plainview, president of the association.

In a letter to J. S. Garlington, county judge, LaFont said that registration would start the afternoon of September 10 and that sessions would get underway the following day.

Big Spring won the right to entertain the association, defeating Abilene for the honor at the spring meeting in Wichita Falls.

SWEETWATER GIRL BURNED IN FIRE AFTER GAS BLAST

SWEETWATER, April 24.—Miss Evelyn Fowler, 18, was critically scalded and burned yesterday when a gas water heater exploded in the home of Leland Glass, in northeast Sweetwater. She was removed to a hospital where doctors said her condition was very serious.

The explosion occurred at 10 o'clock. Miss Fowler, who is employed in the Glass home, was alone there with one-year-old Frank Glass, who was lying in his crib in a front room and was not injured. Mrs. Glass was not at home.

Floyd Jackson and William Schueter, who were working on the municipal hospital three blocks away, heard the explosion and dashed to the Glass home. They found the bathroom door locked and broke it open. Miss Fowler, fully dressed, was lying on the floor. A defective gas burner was believed to have caused the explosion.

Fire followed the explosion, but was soon controlled. The home, however, was wrecked.

Miss Anne Martin, county superintendent, was in Lamesa Friday serving as a judge in some school contests. Mrs. J. E. Brigham and son, Don Arlen, accompanied Miss Martin to Lamesa.

WPA Again Is Assailed

Reported Attack On Program By Johnson Is Demanded

WASHINGTON, April 24. (UP)—The congressional attack on the new deal work relief administration gathered speed today with demand for dispatch to congress of an allegedly suppressed report by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson bitterly criticizing the WPA.

Charging that WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins had "suppressed" a copy of a report from the former NRA administrator, Rep. Clarence McLeod, R., Mich., announced introduction of a resolution for the report to be sent to congress.

McLeod said the report dealt at length with use of relief funds.

"It has been a matter of common knowledge all along," McLeod said in a statement, "that the entire relief system's foundation was flimsily constructed on the taunted fetid corruption of the spoils system.

"Through the press we have learned of facts and scandals which show some basic causes for the honest criticism the new deal is so desperately trying to suppress.

"Hiding facts will not correct mistakes. Neither will it prevent further waste of the people's money."

The Johnson report presumably was the one revealed recently as assailing the WPA for red tape and lack of worthwhile projects. Johnson wrote it after he had been administrator for WPA in New York City, but it was never released by Hopkins' office.

Recently, when it was disclosed, Hopkins' office said there had been no attempt to suppress it.

Applications may be filed with she or Jay in the county court room.

Levies Would Kill Business Is Argument

Others Claim That Administration Bill Is Drastic, Coercive

WASHINGTON, April 24. (AP)—Rep. Lameneck (D-O) today opened the democratic opposition to the administration's huge tax bill, declaring it would destroy the nation's business.

He said: "This bill would destroy absolutely thousands of business concerns in this country." He added the power to collect "drastic taxes" included in the bill is not vested in the constitution.

Rep. Reed (R-NY) claimed the bill was "drastic and coercive."

"Monstrosity"

Other republicans battered the bill with charges that the $803,000,000 measure is a "monstrosity" which would retard business recovery.

A vigorous defense of the measure, designed to revise the corporate tax structure, by Rep. Robert L. Doughton, D., N. C., opened the tax bill debate.

Rep. Allen Treadway, R., Mass., ranking party member on the house ways and means committee, charged that opposition witnesses at tax hearings were "browbeaten," that the committee democrats had acted "as rubber stamps" and that the measure is a revenue gamble.

Suggests Delay

Treadway bitingly referred to the house ways and means committee majority report which admitted that the measure failed to meet the president's budget revenue requirements and suggested that it would be better to consider the lag next session.

"I think there can be no question but that the next congress will act more intelligently than the present one," said Treadway, "and possibly the majority have in mind that they will not be in control then.

"They expect the republican side to be in control, and we certainly will act more intelligently than the present majority have done in offering this monstrosity of a bill."

On the floor, Doughton charged that republicans were opposing every effort to raise revenue for payment of the bonus, the farm program and the balancing of the budget.

He praised the new deal's farm program but admitted that minority members of the committee had been excluded from drafting the final form of the bill.

No Apology

"In proposing and supporting the pending bill, I do so with the full realization of the fact that it is never popular to impose taxes," Doughton roared. "I make no apology for the part I am taking in offering the bill that is now before you."

Doughton explained that minority memoers were present when the decision was made to pass the job of drafting the bill to a subcommittee for hearings and that "everybody" was given an opportunity to testify.

Answering minority criticism that the committee had been whipped into acceptance of the proposals against their better judgment," Doughton said that the charge was "ridiculous and untruthful," and must have been inspired by the republicans' "new brain trust."

Doughton asserted that the gross farm income dropped from $13,500,000,000 in 1920 to $5,200,000,000 in 1932, under Hoover, while farm cash income rose from $4,300,000,000 in 1932 to $6,700,000,000 in 1935.

Cowan, Case Represent Tech At Drake Relays

LUBBOCK, April 24.—Maurice Cowan, Lubbock, and John Case Petersburg, 99 per cent of Texas Tech's track team, left Wednesday morning with Coach Berl Huffman to enter the Drake Relays in Des Moines, Ia., April 25. Accompanying the Tech squad was Alton Terry, sensational Hardin-Simmons university javelin thrower from Brady, who will also enter the Drake meet.

Case, Raider two-miler, bettered his own mark early this week when he circled the Matador track eight times in 10 minutes and 6 seconds, 22 seconds less than the standing Border conference record. Coach Huffman, however, expects the Drake 3,000-meter event to be run under 10 minutes.

Cowan will have plenty of competition in the pole vault. The Tech vaulter's highest successful attempt has been a little more than 13 feet. Terry is expected to place first or near the top at the Relays. In a practice toss last week, the Cowboy star tossed the spear 214 feet.

Lone Wolf On Cougar Trail After Killing 17 Last Winter

LEWISTOWN, Idaho, April 24. (AP)—The lone wolf of the Clearwater has taken to the trail again to add to his laurels as the champion cougar killer of the Idaho timber lands.

George Lowe, the state's veteran predator hunter, is credited with bagging 117 of the big cats during his 11 years on the trail. Out of the wilds for a "breathing spell," he reported killing 17 during the past winter. One of them, a mighty "Tom" measuring nine feet from tip to tip and weighing 230 pounds, was the biggest he ever killed.

Lowe says there is plenty of reason for wanting to skin as many cougars as he can get his knife on.

"An ordinary cougar will kill an average of two deer a week," said the grizzled old woodsman. "A cat will eat only one meal after a kill. He will down the deer, gorge himself on meat and then crawl up a rocky ledge to doze for a couple of days.

"Then he'll come back, walk around the cold carcass, several times and go out after another. A cougar won't eat cold meat. He leaves the carcass for coyotes, or to rot."

Lowe travels the trail alone on snowshoes, but it is always "we" and "us." That takes in his three hounds.

"They're my pals," he explains, "and we've stuck together in a lot of tight places."

Lowe feeds his dogs in the wilds by "boning out a shank of venison" from some frozen carcass left by a cougar. He mixes the meat with cereal.

Heading back to the tall timber, the veteran hunter predicted he would add a few more pelts to that 117 record before he and the snow leave the woods.

OILERS PLAY 1ST HOME GAME OF SEASON SUNDAY

Meet Coahoma Club For The Third Game

Cosden Oilers will play their first home baseball game of the season Sunday against the Coahoma Bulldogs.

The game will be played on the East Third St. diamond, according to Manager Spike Henninger, who stated that a twenty-five cent admission fee would be levied. Henninger is selling signs in an effort to fence the park. He reported Thursday afternoon that eleven had been sold.

The game here Sunday will be the third of the season with the veteran Coahoma outfit. The Oilers won one and lost one.

OKLA. TEAMS CHALK UP WINS

DALLAS, April 24.—The Oklahoma teams in the Texas league, the Tulsa Oilers and the Oklahoma City Indians, continued to show Dallas and Fort Worth the way Thursday by defeating the Texas pair again.

Dallas was defeated, 10-4, by Oklahoma City, while Fort Worth lost by 10-7. The Oiler-Cat clash was enlivened by a free-for-all starting when Leland Turhune brushed Babe Howell off with a fast ball and the Tulsan thought he did it on purpose.

Galveston defeated Beaumont 5-4 by scoring four times in the two innings, but three Houston pitchers succeeded in stopping San Antonio and the Buffs won, 8-7.

SETTLES, SHELL PLAY TONIGHT

By HANK HART

The Settles Coffee Shop softball players, who won their first start at the expense of the Lee's Store Pirates Tuesday night, will go into action again at 7:30 tonight against the Shell Pipeliners, newcomers to the American loop.

The Shell aggregation replaced the Petroleum Pilots, who dropped out without playing a game.

The Settles Roadrunners showed plenty of power at the plate in outslugging the Bucs Tuesday but needed a bit of polish in the field. In all, they committed ten errors.

They pounded out 16 base hits in defeating the oil field team, including eight extra base blows, and at the present time shape up as the team to beat in the American loop.

The Pipeliner team is of unknown quality and can only be judged by practice appearances. In two games with the Pirates, they have won one.

Howard Thomas, manager of the Settles team, will start the same lineup that began the game against Lee's Store, with Leonard Morgan behind the plate, Ray McMahen in the box, Hank Hart at first, Jimmy Ford at right short, Ben McGhee at second, Fred Savage at left short, Weldon Bryant at third, Clarence Redding in left field, Joe Pickle in center, and J. W. Joiner in right.

The Cosden Lab - Electrician game, scheduled for 8:30, has been postponed with the agreement of both team managers.

The game will be played next week.

Matador Golfers Clash With Texas Christian

LUBBOCK, April 24.—After receiving their first setback of the season at the hands of the Clovis N. M., All-Stars April 19, Texas Tech's golf team tangles with the Texas Christian university linksters today and tomorrow in Fort Worth.

Although the Matador golfers shot sub-par golf at Clovis, the all-star aggregation, led by Shorty Hornbuckle, ranking New Mexico amateur, nudged the Tech team 7 to 3 in a 36-hole team and individual tourney.

J. W. Jackson, faculty manager, expected to take six members of the Tech team to Fort Worth. Manson Allen, Lubbock, and Panny Farmer, Knox City, are to play the top-seeded TCU golfers. Hollis Blackwell, Goldthwaite; Bob Hale, Lubbock; Bobby Bourland, Carlsbad, N. M., and Al Ray Cooper, Ralls, will also make the trip, Jackson said.

The Tech team holds an 8 to 0 victory over Abilene Christian college.

Terry's Very Gifted Man

But William's Tongue Has Been Wagging Too Much

By HENRY McLEMORE
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, April 24.—William Harold Terry, boss of the New York Giants, is a very gifted man. He has talents to spare. He can play a mean first base. He can hit a baseball far and often. He can handle, at a single chewing more tobacco than any other man in the major leagues. And down Memphis way they say he is such a red-hot gas and oil salesman that many of his best customers are fellows whose only means of locomotion is a horse and buggy.

But to me William's greatest talent is not one of these, but rather the ability to utter phrases which have backspin on them. He is the one man in the world I know of who can consistently put reverse English on English. He is always saying things which, innocent enough at the time, come raging back after a while to hit him squarely in the face. His words behave after the manner of homing pigeons. Released, they circle a few times and fly off for all to see (in the papers) and hear, and then come back to nest. And in his hair, too!

William's crack about Ercoklyn's still being in the league was one of them. He had forgotten all about these words when back they came to pester him. Another was his remark, when the baseball writers were riding him, about $25 a week reporters trying to run his business. This statement, uttered in a moment of pique, caused him much misery and many headaches.

Bill Pops Off Again

Now William has come along with another one. Questioned recently as to the Giants' chances of winning the National league gonfalon, as we call the bunting in our set, he was quoted as replying:

"If we don't win the pennant this year, I'll sign up with the House of David nine!"

Now that is strictly another one of those homing pigeon utterances. Reading it, you can almost see the wings, pin feathers and beak on each word. If the day comes when the Giants are mathematically barred from winning the pennant that utterance will circle overhead three times and flutter down on William's long-suffering noggin.

Of course, William can kill the "pigeons" by bringing those Giants home in front, and right now everything is very lovely, indeed, up in Harlem under the lee of Coogan's bluff. The Giants are out in front by two and a half games, and can't lose for winning. But this mad dash by the young men of Manhattan isn't quite as dashing as it would seem, for since the season opened they haven't played anything more competent than an assorted selection of Bees, Butterflies, Phillies and Robins. You're supposed to lick that sort of opposition. When a Bee or a Robin bites you, that's news.

Can't Play Set-Ups Always

Unfortunately for the Giants they can't play around with Flora and Fauna forever. The time is coming when they will have to play a couple of baseball teams. I mean, of course, the Cards and the Cubs, with their Hermans and Galans, Hartnetts and Warnekes, Deans and Medwicks, Collinses Demarees. The Giants will find these gents a bit different from the talent which goes through the motions for the combined Bee, Philly and Robin circus.

Of course, the Giants may fool me, and tame the tough 'uns this year, too. Nevertheless, I have a note in my future engagements book to call on William on the afternoon of Sept. 13 (the Cards open here that day) and see how his beard is coming along. They won't let you on that House of David outfit unless you have a beard, you know.—(Copyright, 1936, by United Press.)

Tex Rickard's Old Memento Is Discovered

'Dink' Was Once Top Cowhand Near Archer City

ARCHER CITY, April 24. (AP)—Old cowhands hereabouts are reliving the days when Tex (Dink) Rickard, the late impresario of Fistiana, was a top cowboy in this section.

The memories of the old-timers were freshened by the discovery, on the T. A. Matthews ranch, of a 26-inch sandstone bearing the crude inscription:

"Dink Rickard, Sept., 1891."

Rickard, who left the Matthews ranch near here and drifted to Alaska and Central America before winding up in New York, was one of 40 cowboys under Foreman John H. Turbeville.

Rickard apparently carved his name on the stone and tossed it away. Unearthed recently, it will be sent to Madison Square Garden, where Rickard rose to fame as a promoter, to be added to a collection of Rickard's memoirs.

One of Rickard's pistols, used when he was city marshal of Henrietta, was found last year by a street grader. It was sent to the Garden.

A Michigan Trackster Is 'Smartest' Athlete

ANN ARBOR, Mich., April 24. (AP)—For the fourth time in six years a track man has been named Michigan's most outstanding student athlete.

The 1936 choice is Harvey W Patton, 440-yard dash star and relay runner on the track team, whose scholastic record for the first three and a half years shows 73 hours of "A" grade; 12 of "B" and only three of "C."

Along with the designation of Patton for the honor goes the Western conference medal, given every year at each member school to the senior excelling in athletics and classroom work.

Ivan Williamson, football captain in 1933, is the only grid player to win the honor. Jim Cristy, swimming captain, was the recipient two years ago. All the rest were track men.

The Track-Less Wonders—

By the Associated Press

The University of Kentucky has a track team, but no track. This year the thin-clads at Lexington are doing all their practice work on sod. Lack of a track has slowed the runners considerably—and made time trials impossible. All meets will be held away from home.

Men From Maine—

Where do the Fightin' Irish come from? Two who went to South Bend from almost as far away as Ireland are George Wentworth and Capt. Frankie Gaul, of the baseball team. They are the only two monogram winners in the history of Notre Dame athletics to come from Maine.

The SPORTSMAN

By LARRY BAUER

There are innumerable little streams and lakes not accessible by motor road or by the beaten path that afford good sport for the fisherman who seeks them out.

Unheralded in print and neglected by the crowd, some of these may be in the district where you live. Perhaps you know of such a stream or pond, but have said: "Oh, there are no worthwhile fish in that."

A pleasant surprise often awaits the angler who tries "fished-out" or "no-fish-there" water. We know a chap whose hobby, if you want to call it that, is taking fish from places with a reputation of being barren.

With development of the motor-car and the coming of good roads, many creeks, brooks and little lakes have been neglected by fishermen who like to drive afar for their sport. The grass in the other pasture always looks greener, etc.

Good streams have been ruined by overfishing when paved highways reached them. Several miles of legwork from where you leave the car will pay dividends in thrills in an out-of-the-way spot. There are still plenty such spots left.

North Carolina Bass

George G. Myrover, managing editor of the Fayetteville, N. C. Observer, sends us this hearty piece from his paper:

When it comes to catching prize bass the fishermen of Cumberland county are second to none. In fact, Cooper Hall of Fayetteville and Maj. George A. O'Conneil of Fort Bragg top the list in the entire south of catches of prize large and small mouth bass, while C. L. Mozingo, of Cumberland county, is the winner of a prize for the second largest big mouth bass. Broadus M. McKee, also a North Carolinian, caught the third largest in the waters of Lake Adger.

Fisherman Hall relieved the waters of Big Cross creek of his prize winner. It weighed 11 pounds, 12 ounces. The second prize winner was hauled from the waters of Rockfish creek by Fisherman Mozingo. It tipped the scales at 10 pounds, 14 ounces. Maj. O'Connell's smallmouth prize winner was caught in McKellar's pond at Fort Bragg and weighed 8 1-4 pounds.

The prizes are awarded annually by a sportsman's magazine.

War On Predators

Montana paid $28,842 in bounties for 14,321 coyotes killed in April, May and June last year. The state fish and game department said irreparable loss to wild life was prevented by the coyote kill and ranchers were saved thousands of dollars' worth of livestock.

* * *

The bureau of biological survey reports an old age record for banded wild birds in this country set by a pintail duck, which lived 13 years, has been broken by an osprey, or fish hawk. Records show the osprey—banded when a fledgling—lived 21 years.

Golf Analyzed

With the ball imbedded in very thick, though not particularly long grass near the green, Ray Mangrum used a cut shot. It was only a chip shot and a short one, but the ball was sharply cut. This lifted it out of the grass quickly, but when it struck the green its roll stopped before going far.

To play the shot he took an open stance, a bit more behind the ball than usual. He took his hands back away from the body and then hit a descending, glancing blow from outside the direction line toward the inside. However, he pointed the direction line toward the left of the cup, allowing for a right-to-left break of the ball.

Finally, in playing the shot he did not use a normal address, but laid the face of his club back more than usual. This helped in penetrating the thick grass and in driving the ball up and not forward. He played firmly. Most high handicap players muff this shot through not hitting hard enough. They should practice it persistently.

Greater Speed On Salt Beds Lures Drivers

Briton To Race Two Cars In Attack On All Distance Marks

SALT LAKE CITY, April 24 (UP)—A summer of speed racing, with streamlined automobiles of revolutionary design streaking across the Bonneville Salt Flats to attack world records, is in prospect here.

Capt. George E. T. Eyston, England's 39-year-old speed driver and Ab Jenkins, American automobile ace, will be the participants.

Eyston will attack all existing records above 100 miles an hour with his mysterious new Diesel-powered car, The Flying Spray. He will attempt to regain all records up to 100 miles an hour with his Speed of the Winds, a 12-cylinder 450-horsepower "petrol" powered car.

German Holds Record

Eyston held all records up to 100 miles an hour, established on the salt flats here, until a German Von Stuck, averaged 166 miles an hour a few weeks ago, to shatter his records.

The English driver, who arrived in America on April 14, will seek his 181st automobile racing record. He piloted his queer-looking Speed of the Winds at 167.0998 miles an hour to shatter the world's speed record for 10 miles last September. Eleven days later, he broke the 12-hour record at 139.847 miles an hour and the 24-hour run at 140.522 miles.

Single Sleeve Valves Used

The Flying Spray is powered with a 12-cylinder Ricardo Aviation Diesel engine with a 17-liter piston capacity. This should give it up to 900 horsepower. It has single sleeve valves.

His Speed of the Winds, a 12-cylinder 450-horsepower car, has been overhauled and streamlined since the speed attacks last fall. It will use special British Ethyl spirit gasoline sent from London.

Jenkins recently announced plans to attack Sir Malcolm Campbell's 301-mile-an-hour world's speed record and recapture the 24-hour speed crown.

He expects to have a new 700-horsepower car ready for the 24-hour grind by June 1. Equipped with an airplane motor, the car will be more than twice as powerful as the 325 horsepower machine he drove at a world's record speed of 130 miles an hour for 24 hours last year.

Rated at 350 M.P.H.

The speedster in which he plans to attack Campbell's record is expected to be capable of a speed of 350 miles an hour, he said. Two airplane motors, capable of developing 1,500 to 1,800 horsepower each, will power it. Campbell's Bluebird generated 2,400 horsepower. Jenkins expects his new juggernaut to develop from 3,200 to 3,600 horsepower.

The new car, costing approximately $50,000, is being built at the Lycoming plant at Williamsport, Pa., and will be completed this fall or early next spring.

The salt flats, said to be the fastest racing grounds in the world, were used by Campbell to establish his world's record. They are expected to be dry enough for the speed trials by July.

BIDS FOR PLACE IN OLYMPICS

FORT COLLINS, Colo., April 24. (AP) — Glenn (Flash) Morris, southpaw polevaulter — right-handed otherwise—and hurdling ace, may be the man to beat for the No. 1 position on the U.S. decathlon delegation going to the Olympic Games in Berlin next August.

The husky all-around athletic alumnus of Colorado State college sprang to the forefront of the parade of "super-men" by bettering the Olympic decathlon mark set up by Kansas' Jim Bausch at Los Angeles in 1932.

Morris made his leap from comparative obscurity in the first formal test of his abilities at the Kansas relays this spring—the same locale where Bausch demonstrated his superiority before going on to his Olympic triumph.

A Long Campaign

Behind Morris' first try at the 10-event program lay months of preparation, dating back to last June.

College athletic officials who held the watch and measuring tape on his efforts before the Kansas relays figured his average accomplishments would give him a score only 12 points short of the total registered by Bausch in winning the Olympic crown.

Although handicapped by a pulled leg tendon in the last nine events, Morris surpassed the expectations of his partisans by amassing 7,576 points under the new decathlon scoring system now in vogue. He placed first in five of the 10 tests.

Morris, a six-footer who scales between 180 and 190, thrives on competition. He was a football hero and track star in college. He sells motor cars now and lends a hand with the football coaching at Colorado state.

In setting the Kansas relays decathlon mark, Morris failed to equal his best performances in half of the events. He bettered his "normal," however, in some and was particularly proud of his 11-foot-2 leap in the pole vault, for it was the first time he'd picked up a pole in competition since he was a high school freshman.

Morris is 23 years old and hails from Simla, Colo.

The lesson-sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Life is the origin and ultimate of man, never attainable through death, but gained by walking in the pathway of Truth both before and after that which is called death" (page 487).

GOVT. AUTHORIZES RADIO STATIONS FOR TRANSOCEAN PLANES

WASHINGTON, April 24 (UP)—In the first definite step toward inauguration of trans-atlantic airmail and passenger service, the federal communications commission today authorized the Pan-American Airways company to erect two radio stations on the north Atlantic coast.

One of the stations will be built at Fort Washington, N. Y., and the other "somewhere between Southampton and Amagansett, L. I.," the commission said. Both stations will have authority to operate for airplane and airlahe point-to-point navigation service.

Recently British and other foreign groups have conferred here regarding trans-atlantic service which is expected eventually to hook up with round-the-world air service in connection with the present installation of a trans-pacific route.

Officials said that experimental work was expected to get underway this summer.

Revival Will Open Sunday

Hulen L. Jackson To Conduct Services At Church Of Christ

HULEN L. JACKSON

Final arrangements are being perfected, it was announced today by Forrest R. Waldrop, local minister, for the spring revival meeting which opens at the Church of Christ, 14th and Main streets, Sunday. Hulen L. Jackson of San Saba will do the preaching, and local church leaders will be in charge of the song services. Weekday services will be held at 10 a. m. and 8 p. m.

Waldrop said today, "We are confident that everyone will find Jackson to be a speaker of unusual ability. He is a young man whose heart is filled with a love of the truth, and who speaks fluently and enthusiastically his convictions of the truth.

"For the past seven months he has been doing local work with the church at San Saba, and has made a wonderful record there. This will be his first visit into West Texas, at least in revival work, and we therefore urge all to hear him. We invite the public to attend our first service, and we believe that those who hear Jackson once will want to hear him again.

"A cordial welcome awaits all at our services. The revival will continue through May 6, with services daily."

Mr. and Mrs. Reg Jarvis of Crane are the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. S Patterson, over the week-end.

Mrs. Flowers Talks Tonight

To Preach For Last Time In Methodist Revival Campaign

Mrs. R. L. Flowers, who is assisting her husband in conducting the revival campaign at the First Methodist church, will deliver her last message of the revival this evening. She will speak on the subject, "The Devil's Pitfalls for Boys and Girls in Big Spring." Following the service, Mrs. Flowers is to go to Houston.

There will be no services Saturday morning or evening.

Evangelist Flowers Thursday night discussed three laws that govern sowing and reaping. He said: "We reap what we sow; we reap more than we sow, and being ignorant of the seed sown does not affect the harvest we have to reap. These laws apply to moral sowing and reaping. There must be some seed that we sow that produces the fruit of the flesh, such as licentiousness, immorality, etc. If people would sit down and fact this tremendous text: 'For whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap,' they would live differently. We do not have to die to reap what we sow. There are multitudes of folk today drinking their bitter tears because of the sowing in their life. To think of the reaping time of some folks makes one tremble. It is one of God's unchanging laws that we reap what we sow."

The University of California has students from 26 foreign countries.

Sandwiches

By MARTHA LOGAN

Did you ever stop to think what a queer old world this must have been, gastronomically speaking, before the advent of sandwiches? Imagine, if you can, picnics, teas, stenographers' lunches, or any kind of box lunch, without sandwiches.

That tasty combination of bread, butter and filling is so versatile it fits into any kind of menu. And the shape, size and filling are limited only by your own imagination and by the resources of the grocery store.

Here are just a few of many possibilities for sandwich fillings:

Liver and bacon mixed with cream.

Cooked liver with minced mushrooms and cream.

Ham with apple butter, tomatoes, celery, mayonnaise, pickles and pineapple.

Ham chopped and mixed with pickles, olives, and moistened with salad dressing.

Ham moistened with tartar sauce.

Left-over meat, finely minced, and combined with chopped pickle, celery and salad dressing.

Bacon, fried crisp, chopped, and combined with cold diced cucumber.

Bacon toasted on top of a slice of bread and mild cheese.

Ham mixed with pickle and moistened with salad dressing which has been seasoned with Roquefort cheese.

Diced cold meat, combined with celery and moistened with salad dressing and a bit of Worcestershire sauce.

Bacon and Egg Sandwiches

Chop crisp bacon and hard-cooked eggs and combine. Add to this chopped olives or dill pickles, moisten with mayonnaise and spread on buttered bread.

Ham Sandwich Filling

To one cup of chopped ham add enough vinegar to moisten, also one tablespoon of peanut butter. Season with a dash of celery salt and pepper. Mix well and spread between thin slices of bread cut in rounds.

Meat Loaf for Sandwiches

2 pounds ground beef,
1 pound ground fresh pork,
1 pound veal, ground,
1 green pepper, minced,
1 small onion, minced,
2 eggs,
1-3 cup cracker crumbs,
1-2 cup cooked tomatoes,
Salt, pepper.

Mix thoroughly and form into a loaf. Pour over it one cup of tomato juice and bake in a medium hot oven in an open pan for one hour, basting several times with the tomato juice. When nicely browned, cover and reduce the heat to a slow oven.

Black - Draught Good Laxative

Black-Draught has been kept on hand for all the family in the home of Mr. W. A. Lemons, of Independence, Va., since twenty years ago. Mr. Lemon writes that he takes it as a laxative in cases of "headache, dull, tired feeling, biliousness."

"And I take it if I feel uncomfortable after a heavy meal," he adds. "I especially use it for sick headache. It certainly is good."

When a man says "Black-Draught is good," it is probably because he remembers the prompt, refreshing relief it brought in constipation troubles. Its benefits are felt because it is a simple, herb laxative, so natural in composition and action that thousands and thousands of men and women prefer it when a naxative is needed. —Adv.

AT THE QUEEN

New Adventures Of Philo Vance To Be Seen At Ritz

Philo Vance falls in love—right in the middle of one of the most perplexing murder mysteries of his career, with three crimes waiting to be explained, the scientific sleuth has a severe heart attack from just about the classiest bit of femininity that ever strolled down Fifth Avenue—and that's the big news in "The Garden Murder Case," latest of the S. S. Van Dine best-sellers which is presented at the Ritz Saturday. The picture shows for one day only.

Edmund Lowe this time plays Philo Vance, and Virginia Bruce appears as the heart interest. With them appear Nat Pendleton, Gene Lockhart, H. B. Warner, Freida Inescort, Jessie Ralph and Benita Hume.

Three mysterious deaths occur in this group and Philo Vance suspects murder. How he proves his case is a dramatic plot full of thrills and romance, done with the masterful Philo Vance touch.

Musical Film Here Sunday

Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Other Stars Appear In 'Colleen'

"Colleen," Warner Bros. latest musical film, one designed to top all previous pictures of its kind, plays at the Ritz theater at a Saturday midnight matinee and on Sunday and Monday, with an all-star cast which includes Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Jack Oakie, Joan Blondell, Hugh Herbert, Louise Fazenda and Paul Draper. There are also the chorus of beauties and dancing youths.

A story of comic turn is presented, and as a spectacle, the picture offers two unique specialty numbers staged by Bobby Connolly, famous dance director. One is staged aboard an ocean liner, with everyone from the captain to the crew as well as the passengers doing a dance rhythm. The other takes place in a modiste shop in which a veritable style show is featured.

Three new tunes were written for the picture by Warren and Dublin. Powell sings two of these, one with Miss Keeler, while the other, a comedy number, is sung by Miss Blondell and Oakie.

Miss Keeler goes through her famous tap steps, some alone, and also with Paul Draper, the Broadway dancing wizard who essays to become another Fred Astaire. Others in the cast include Marie Wilson, Luis Alberni, Hobart Cavanaugh, Berton Churchill, J. M. Kerrigan and Spencer Charters.

Ken Maynard Star Of Adventure Play At Queen Theatre

Ken Maynard, one of the aces among cowboy actors, is at the Queen Friday and Saturday in an outdoor action drama called "The Cattle Thief." In it he enacts a dual role, as a gallant and mysterious rider and as a "stupid" peddler. "The Cattle Thief" opens in a blaze of gunfire and runs along through a series of adventures to a climax as Ken outwits a desperate band of rustlers.

The story revolves around Ward Bond, a desperado who gains control of a ranch when his employer becomes paralyzed and then closes a pass which runs through the mountains to the other ranchers of the valley, making it impossible for them to get their cattle to market. It is Maynard, riding his famed wonder horse, who finally brings the culprits to justice but only after he has placed his life in danger and defied the guns of the desperadoes.

Geneva Mitchell is Ken's leading lady. Ward Bond is the head of the gang, and Roger Williams, Jim Marcus, Sheldon Lewis and Ed Cecil are others in the cast.

Western Film At The Lyric

Johnny Mack Brown Has Lead In 'Valley Of The Lawless'

Thrills of the western adventure story are promised in "Valley of the Lawless," which comes to the Lyric theater Friday and Saturday with Johnny Mack Brown in the featured role.

The picture's plot hinges upon an attack on an emigrant train in covered wagon days by renegades who are after a shipment of gold they know to be in charge of the pioneers. The bandits massacre all defenders, but prior to the attack the gold has been buried, and the outlaws are unable to discover it. Years after, Johnny Mack Brown comes in search of the map which contains the location of the treasure, his grandfather having been the leader of the pioneers. The map is in possession of an outlaw. Brown locates his man, but before he finally obtains the map he passes through a maze of adventures due to furnish the audience a full share of thrills.

Joyce Compton plays opposite Brown to furnish the romantic interest. The supporting cast also includes George Jayes, Frank Hagney, Denny Meadows, Bobby Nelson, Charles King, Jack Rockwell and Frank Ball.

CONSTIPATION* MAY LOWER RESISTANCE TO GERMS

Can Be Corrected by Natural Laxative Food

Common constipation is due largely to insufficient "bulk" in meals. It is a condition that should never be treated casually.

Long neglected, it may contribute to a general run-down condition. Your body lacks the strength it needs to fight off infection. You are much more likely to pick up a serious illness.

Guard against common constipation.* Make sure the meals you eat contain plenty of "bulk." Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a generous source of effective "bulk."

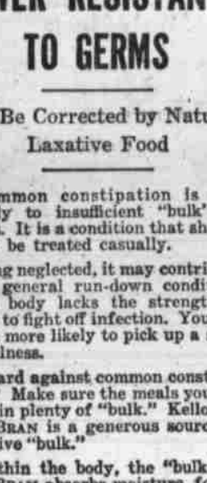

Within the body, the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, and gently cleanses the system. This delicious cereal also furnishes vitamin B and contains iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily, with milk or cream, are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN in some form each day, either as a cereal, or cooked into muffins, breads, etc. Eat it regularly for regular habits.

Guaranteed by the Kellogg Company. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

You may doubt this but—
YOU'LL BE A BETTER DRIVER IN A BUICK!

TAKE this as a challenge if you want to! Come around and make us prove it if you like!

But you've never had such control over power as you've got in this action car with its quiet, trigger-quick valve-in-head straight-eight engine.

You've never had brakes so smooth and sure, yet so light and easy in their action.

You've never had a wheel so feathery light to guide, or a car that holds itself on the track like this solid, low-swung, road-hugging mile-tamer.

Its very steadiness and smoothness keeps you relaxed and easy behind the wheel — and that itself makes you a safer and a better driver.

You won't believe it, of course, until you try it. So why not let us bring around a Series 40 Buick Special and let you see how a good car can make you an even better driver than you think you are?

There's no obligation if we don't prove our point — but there's a whale of a treat in store for you if we do!

Kansan's Strength Could Result In Hoover And Borah Merger

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, Washington)

Nothing else thus far in the republican pre-convention campaign has caused more comment than the spectacle of certain friends of Herbert Hoover standing shoulder to shoulder with certain friends of William E. Borah across the pathway of the Landon boom.

For months Mr. Hoover and Mr. Borah have been looked upon by a large section of the public as symbolizing entirely opposite and possibly irreconcilable wings of republican thought.

Whatever the principals themselves may have been thinking, the impression among some of their followers has gone even farther than that.

The Borah people have supposed that whatever Mr. Hoover did in the campaign would be tinged with a hope that the Borah influence would be, thereby, held in check. Similarly, the Hoover people have felt that whatever Mr. Borah did would be directed largely against a return to the Hoover leadership.

Under these circumstances, it has been taken for granted that in every important party movement, the two would be found on opposite sides of the fence. That is what attracts so much attention to the current situation with respect to Governor Landon.

* * * *

It should be borne in mind that neither Mr. Hoover nor Mr. Borah has spoken out directly against Mr. Landon—has made any attack on him, or pronounced him inacceptable as a presidential candidate.

Yet the physical facts, as they have developed in various important sectors, are as much a part of the story as anything which might have been said or left unsaid by either the former president or the senator from Idaho.

Not only have some of the Borah lieutenants openly accused Mr. Landon of being the candidate of certain financial interests, but Mr. Borah himself has pressed his candidacy vigorously in states where that course collided forcibly with plans of the Landon workers.

In his own state of California, Mr. Hoover's political associates have actively opposed a Landon-pledged slate of candidates. When it appeared that a three-way primary battle would split the opposition to the Landon slate, Mr. Borah stayed out of California, leaving the field to the Hooverites.

The inside story about these developments is not available. There always is the danger that some of the implications may not be warranted. Yet such facts as do appear speak for themselves.

The consequences cannot be assessed, of course, until the battle over the nomination has proceeded much farther.

It is quite apparent that the supporters of Mr. Landon are seeking to establish him as the candidate of the west—a section where both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Borah reside. They have not encouraged open declaration for him among the eastern leaders.

Wanting the nomination himself, it is understandable that Mr. Borah should be against any candidate who took an early lead in the number of instructed delegates. The question still unanswered, however, is how far he is prepared to go with his opposition, in the convention itself, if his own candidacy fails.

Mr. Hoover is in a somewhat different position. He has hinted that he is not a candidate, but he never has disavowed a desire to have something to say about the nomination. Some of his friends believe the real key to his position is a long-cherished determination not to let the party fall into the hands of the eastern old-timers, several of whom have volunteered approving word about Governor Landon.

Is it possible that, after all, Mr. Hoover and Borah look upon themselves as much nearer together than the public supposes, bound by the all-important spiritual tie of a common opposition to the old guard and the east?

That hardly seems reasonable, but strange things do happen in politics.

DEMO CONVENTION TO BE HELD MAY 26 AT SAN ANTONIO

FORT WORTH, April 24 (UP)—The state democratic executive committee, in session here, selected San Antonio as the site for the state democratic convention May 26.

The vote was unanimous, on the plea of south Texans that their section of the state needed the rally to swing the vote for the Roosevelt-Garner ticket.

While no action was taken on the September convention, a poll of committee members indicated strong sentiment for Fort Worth as the convention city on that date.

At the May meeting delegates to the national committee will be named, while at the September convention Texas democrats will adopt their party platform.

Nazis To Test Zeppelin In Atlantic Trip

Big Aircraft Scheduled To Try 60-Hour Crossing Early In May

BERLIN, April 24. (UP)—Regular North Atlantic air service, visioned as dominating high speed travel between Europe and America within the next few years, will be brought nearer a reality when the Zeppelin Hindenburg makes a trial crossing early in May.

The scheduled trial flight probably will be followed by two more this summer. It is the forerunner of a regular German-American cooperative service, if plans can be realized and the menace of North Atlantic gales overcome.

Airplanes may have a speed advantage. They may be in service on the same route long before a regular Zeppelin service can be established. But according to Dr. Hugo Eckener, who knows more about regular ocean flights than any man alive, airplanes may never be practical the year round in the North Atlantic.

Even if they are, Zeppelin experts believe they can offer advantages in competition—roominess, comfort, carrying capacity and safety—which the planes cannot hope to match. They point to the dimensions and specifications of the new ship as proof.

The Hindenburg is 813 feet long, only slightly shorter than the liner Queen Mary, whom it will follow closely on a maiden trip to New York. It is capable, with the 7,500,000 cubic feet of gas space—twice that of the Graf Zeppelin—of carrying 50 passengers, a crew of 40, and 20 tons of freight at a cruising speed of 80 miles an hour. The Hindenburg's cruising radius is 10,000 miles.

Four specially constructed Daimler Diesel motors, each developing 900 horsepower and turning a propeller 19 feet from tip to tip, drive the ship. The difficulty of developing these motors was one of the prime factors in the nearly year-long delay in the Hindenburg's maiden flight. Originally it was scheduled for July, 1935.

It is estimated the ship will require two and a half days for the flight to Lakehurst, N. J., from either Frankfurt or Friedrichshafen, and two days for the return flight. Prevailing westerly winds cause the difference.

All accommodations are inside the ship, only the snub-nosed pilot gondola and the four motor gondolas project from the plump, streamlined, silvery body. Two decks, within the framework, accommodate passengers and crew.

Along the keel, on "B" deck, are the freight rooms and the crew's quarters, described as as comfortable as the passenger cabins of the "Graf." Above them, on "A" deck, the passengers live in accommodations which entitle the ship to its name, "flying hotel."

Along the port side is the dining saloon, roughly 50 feet long, paralleled by a "promenade deck" with huge windows looking outward and downward over the sea. To starboard is the lounge, writing room and lobby, also with promenade. Between are the 25 double-berthed cabins.

Each of them is roughly the size of a sleeping compartment on a European train, equipped with hot and cold running water and wardrobe. They have no windows, but are ventilated by a modern system which assures the changing of the air ten times an hour.

There is an electric elevator, used to expedite loading of freight and passengers, a bar and a smoking room, first of its kind on any German airship. The use of helium for part of the ship's gas has made this possible for the first time. The smoking room in addition is "insulated" from the rest of the ship and entered through a passage so constructed as to assure that no sparks can escape.

The entire ship is furnished with super-light metal furniture. The construction is so light that an armchair can be lifted with one hand. The hollow legs of some of the tables are used as ventilators.

Above the passenger quarters in the dim cavernous maze of skeleton steel of the body, are the gas cells which give the ship its lifting power. Each is double, first an outer helium cell to provide against danger of fire, and inside a hydrogen cell. Hydrogen has a greater lifting capacity than helium; in addition, it is cheaper, and can thus be dumped toward the end of a voyage when the ship's load of fuel, water and foodstuffs has been lightened and it is necessary to deflate the bags.

The ship is covered with a special cotton-linen sheath, which in turn has received several coats of aluminum-covered cellulose lacquer. The aluminum in the lacquer, which gives the ship its silvery shine, is primarily intended as waterproofing.

Centennial Year Renews Interest In Texas Navy Of Hundred Years Ago

Facts concerning the actual existences and movements of a Texas navy have until recently been the secret of a handful of Texas historians. Plans for the celebration of the Texas Centennial, however, have caused lay minds to develop a historical inquisitiveness about the early incidents that molded the Texas of today. Also encouraging this desire to ferret out long-forgotten Lone Star tales is a current newspaper contest based on nine momentous questions dealing with important events in Texas history.

Details of this contest are outlined in weekly advertisements published in Texas newspapers. Advertisements announcing subsequent contests in the series of nine will appear regularly in this paper. A current contest question deals with the Texas navy and in particular with the famous "sloop of war Austin."

Private Ships

Back in 1835, when the wrecking upheaval of revolution was cutting deep into Texas life and property, the provisional government employed a strategic move to acquire the so-called Texas navy. Realizing the efficacy of a small armed fleet for scouting and disciplinary purposes in southern waters, but lacking the necessary funds to put such a fleet into action, the government issued letters of marque and reprisal to private ship owners, giving them the legal right to "prevent invasion by sea" and to "blockade the Mexican ports and destroy her commerce." Activities of such ships, invaluable to the successful completion of the war, included breaking up a blockade of the Texas ports and averting an attempt to close the New Orleans boat lines.

Purchase by the republic of two brigs, three schooners, a sloop and a steamer in 1840 appreciably swelled the small but effective navy, lent in that year to the Mexican states of Yucatan and Tabasco, which were revolting against the central government. This expedition to undermine the Mexican government, by allying insubordinate states with Texas, proved so profitable that for nearly three years the fleet operated in this way on a free-lance basis. The famous sloop of war Austin, about which legendary tales of great battles and heroic service are told, was one of the most gallant performers in this fleet.

Moore Suspended

In 1843 President Houston ordered the navy to return to home port, but Commodore Moore, leader of the fleet, having promised assistance to his friends in Yucatan, disobeyed the governmental command and sailed once more into tropical waters. The enraged president officially suspended Moore from command and issued a proclamation requesting all navies afloat to look out for the runaway fleet and seize the "post Captain Moore and bring him and the ships into Galveston so that the culprits could be adequately punished." Commodore Moore, after paying his debt to his friends, returned home voluntarily. Texans acclaimed him a hero, and, though court-martialed, he was acquitted.

This incident witnessed the virtual end of the Texas navy's active service. Its vessels were beached and suffered from dry rot decay. Those that were still on hand were turned over to the United States at the time of the annexation three years later.

George McIntyre, Jr., of Midland was a visitor in Big Spring Thursday. He was accompanied here by Raymond Hughes.

Ira Powell is attending a revival in Kerrville.

Guide To Curb Child Disease Perils Issued

Symptoms Charted For The Use Of Parents And Teachers

WASHINGTON, April 24 (UP)—A chart for the discovery of communicable diseases has been compiled by Dr. James F. Rogers, consultant in hygiene for the office of education of the interior department, to aid parents and teachers of the nation in safeguarding the health of children.

"The discovery of these diseases in early stages by parents or teachers may prevent bodily damage, or save life," Dr. Rogers said.

Specific symptoms of common disease which develop during school life have been set forth by Dr. Rogers as follows:

Measles: Cold in the head, with sneezing, running nose, red and watering eyes, cough fever. The eruption does not appear until the third day.

Rash Hint of Scarlet Fever

Scarlet fever: Vomiting, sore throat, fever; a fine scarlet rash appears within 24 hours on the neck, chest, arms and, to some extent, on the face.

Diphtheria: General signs of illness. There may be vomiting or a chill, or only prostration. The throat may be red, and a patch of gray membrane present. Soreness may be complained of. Fever is present, although it is usually not high. A watery nasal discharge which irritates the upper lip should in time of epidemic make one suspicious of nasal diphtheria.

Tonsilitis: There is sore throat; there may be a chill or chilly sensations, and usually high fever. There is much prostration. The throat is very much inflamed. Yellowish spots may be present on the tonsils.

Smallpox: Chill, fever, backbone, nausea, and vomiting are usually present. The eruption appears on the second or third day. The symptoms may be mild, and the disease difficult to distinguish from chickenpox.

General Illness With Mumps

Mumps: There is swelling of the parotid gland, in front and below the ear or a gland below the jaw on one or both sides; there is pain in this region, especially on swallowing, and generally signs of illness.

Chickenpox: An eruption of discrete, red, raiseed spots appears usually first on the forehead. There may be fever, but other symptoms are slight.

German measles: The symptoms are similar to those of measles, but are mild. In about 50 per cent of cases there is no fever, and the first sign of the disease is the eruption which appears first on the face, and consists of discrete spots of a deep pink color.

Dr. Rogers is the author of a new publication of the office of education, "What Every Teacher Should Know About the Physical Condition of Her Pupils."

Germany Will Build Third Dirigible Ship

Plans Another Step Toward Mastery Of Air Commerce

BERLIN, April 24. (UP)—Latest and greatest in a world-honored tradition, "Luftschiff Zeppelin 129," only incidentally named Hindenburg, spells another step for Germany toward remastery of the air.

Since the day 10 years before the World War when Count Zeppelin proved the practicality of his dream, 128 "zeps" have preceded the Hindenburg. At one time, during the war, a vast fleet menaced London for months.

Again Germany has a "fleet," as the press was careful to point out in March when the new ship made its first flight with the now legendary Graf Zeppelin, which has more than a million air miles to its credit.

"Two German Zeppelins again in the air," read headlines throughout the Reich. It was the first time since the great fleet vanished with Germany's forced disarmament. As the story was written, mechanics of the plant at Friedrichshafen, on Lake Constance, were beginning work on the skeleton of another, the LZ 130.

War Use Not Practical

The mastery at which Germany now aims with its dirigibles no longer is military. With modern rangefinders and deadly anti-aircraft quick firers, it is conceded, zeppelins would provide far too vulnerable a target in time of war. The present goal is commercial.

Germany already has a weekly, three and a half day airmail schedule from Berlin to Buenos Aires. The Graf Zeppelin, steady and reliable for years where every other dirigible of the "zep" type has crashed, makes regularly scheduled runs over the same route, with freight and passengers. After trips to Lakehurst, tentatively set for May 5 and 16 and June 20, the Hindenburg will enter the same run.

But the North Atlantic still is the great goal and at the same time the perplexing problem of German zeppelin designers. Dr. Hugo Eckener, who next to their inventor has done more for zeppelins than any other, still has no solution to the riddle of the north Atlantic gales which at present would make any regular year-round schedule impossible.

Eventually, it is hoped, German and American companies will share the service, and the Hindenburg's trips this summer will serve primarily as trials of the route. With a trial airmail—later passenger—service between England and America already projected for 1935, the zeppelin people have every incentive for speed.

They believe, however, that once the problems are solved the zeppelin will prove so much more comfortable, elastic, practical and safe that it can easily overhaul its airplane competitors.

It can carry freight of all kinds, even to automobiles, tractors or zoo monkeys. It can accommodate 50 passengers housed with every comfort, transport them at 80 miles an hour with much fewer bumps and discomfort. Danger of prevailing westerly winds, which have made the northern route from east to west so fatal to so many airplanes, are eliminated, it is said.

TIME EXTENDED ON STATE CENTENNIAL HISTORICAL CONTEST

DALLAS, April 24.—Because of numerous requests from school officials and others for more time in which to prepare entries for the Texas Centennial exposition historical contest, an extension of the contest until May 5 has been announced by members of the Centennial historical exhibits committee. The contest was originally scheduled to close April 21.

"We want everyone interested to have an opportunity to enter," declared Herbert Gambrell, director of historical exhibits for the Texas Centennial exposition. "We believe this extension of two weeks will give them this chance.

"Although the contest did not get started as early as we had hoped, it has already brought to light much information about the location and character of relics documents, and pictures which had a part in early Texas life. About 1,000 entries have been received, recalling every phase of pioneer Texas. They include such items as early Texas money, old musical instruments, clocks, heirloom jewelry, diaries, family letters and pictures, statues, spinning wheels, early college diplomas, land grants, receipts and early Texas oil leases."

The Centennial historical contest is open to every Texan, and is for the purpose of gathering information about relics, documents, and pictures which existed in Texas prior to 1900. Entry blanks may be obtained by writing to the historical exhibits department, Texas Centennial exposition, Dallas.

Cash prizes totaling $2,850 and numerous plaques, medals and certificates will be awarded in connection with the contest. The awards will be made early in September at a special ceremony in the State of Texas building at the exposition.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Woodward have gone to Plainview, called there by illness of a relative.

NO LONGER BIG NEWS

With final reports from most surveys in, it has been shown conclusively that general business activity during the first three months of 1936 was about ten per cent better than that of a year ago. At no time in the first quarter period did business as measured by the accepted indices fail to exceed comparable 1935 figures by a satisfactory margin.

The figures are cheering, but what may be taken as more reassuring is the fact that reports of business gain no longer stir any great public reaction. Business advance is becoming so steady it is ceasing to be news.

It was not ever thus. In the first years immediately after the stock market crash of 1929, business leaders were prone to issue predictions that prosperity would return soon. They were not entirely correct, and grew more cautious. About the same time, it became the custom to make a great fanfare about any figure on business that might compare favorably with the previous month, or the previous year.

People needed reassuring. They needed to be shown that all had not stopped in the world of trade; and everytime the wheel turned around to register a brighter mark, that was worth telling about.

The press, turning more attention to business items than ever before, went out of its way to find news of the optimistic sort. Every type of survey was presented to show the uptrend in commerce and industry.

This news served to reassure the nation. It helped to restore confidence, which, it has been asserted innumerable times, was the requisite to the return of normal times.

The press has found, in the last two years, that keeping track of all business gains has become a larger task. The uptrend has been steady, in practically every field. Gains over each month, over each quarter, over each year, are showing up. Reports on such began to be repetitious. The public wasn't so interested.

The reports on 1936 gains have gone by with a minimum amount of ballyhoo. Investors have been cheered, business men have taken new heart, activity has been spurred, but at the same time there has been little shouting from the house-tops. The American citizen has accepted recovery as a commonplace thing.

★ Man About Manhattan ★

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—The wolf man is again padding the effete trail of Park avenue, but not for long. He'll straddle a horse in front of the McAlpin hotel in a couple of weeks and head for California.

That seems a strange way to go west in this day of fast planes and trains, but Catch-em-Alive Jack Abernathy, old government scout and Indian fighter, thinks horses are safer. . . . "I'll take about two months getting there," he surmises, "and I'm looking forward to it. This'll probably be my last real jaunt on the overland trail."

Old Jack is 60 now but admits he can still whip his weight in coyotes or wolves. He's caught close to 2,000 of them alive—with his hands. . . . "You just ram your fist in their mouths back of the teeth and they can't bite you," he says. "Then you grip the lower jaw and pry away. . . . They give up mighty easy when a man has hold of them."

In his burlier days Jack used to ride with Teddy Roosevelt and often went on bear hunts with him. . . . "Got my first bear in 1905 and Teddy saw me drop him. We were on a wolf hunt at the time and having some fine sport. After that trip they made me a U. S. Marshal in Oklahoma." So he explains.

You only have to hear a few words in that slow drawl to recognize him as a native of the Texas panhandle. That's where Catch-em-Alive Jack Abernathy was born. An old cowpuncher he still walks with that peculiar half-jog that indicates long years in the saddle. . . . "Walking around or riding on trains makes me stiff and sore. . . . I like to sit in that saddle and I don't care how long I have to go. That's the only decent way for a man to travel."

* * *

Jack has also nosed his pinto from one end of the Rio Grande to the other. Fighting rustlers and daily skirmishes with Mexican bandits were routine affairs in his life. Although he has dined on New York's most succulent steaks broiled over hickory logs and sauced with creamed mushrooms he is positive no meal tastes so good as one over an open fire on the range. . . . "You kill a beef and rip off a thick steak, and after you give it a shake of salt you broil it over a cottonwood fire. Then there's black coffee strong as lye, and, Pard, there just ain't anything better.

"I'm going to have some of that before long. I'll be taking my time, six weeks, eight weeks, ten weeks — it doesn't matter. I'm going to have night after night on the prairie (if I don't have to cut through too many of those confounded wire fences) and I'm going to bury my face in the dewy sage, and sleep under the stars, with my head on my saddle, taking long, cooling draughts on that old black pipe of mine."

That's Catch-em-Alive Jack Abernathy, whose wiry, slight frame weighs 145 pounds.

No, he doesn't fear coyotes and wolves—the only varmints he dislikes are the kind that walk on two feet.

"No self-respecting coyote would speak to any of these modern criminals," he growls. "They don't fight it out on the square."

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—New deal economic experts have been making some private surveys of the stock market, and the results do not bring any particular cheer to their chief in the White House.

They show that not even in the days of the Coolidge bull market did stocks sky-rocket in value as they have during the last year of the new deal.

During the twelve months immediately preceding the crash of 1929, when everybody and his brother was head over heels in the market, stocks rose 45 per cent. But during the twelve months from April, 1935, to April, 1936, they advanced 60 per cent. This was proportionately the greatest rise in the history of the market since the World war.

Market Worry

To the advisers of a president who has promised protection from another "mad descent into another sink of suffering," this is a cause for real worry. How much they have discussed the situation with the president himself is not known.

It is also a matter of some concern to the securities and exchange commission, whose job it is to protect the public from the ravages of a runaway stock market.

Reasons for Boom

Experts of the commission give four reasons for the present booming market:

1. The legitimate fact that business is genuinely better.
2. The fact that low interest on bonds and savings accounts have caused extra money to flow into the stock market.
3. The fact that the public is in the market, perhaps almost to the same extent that it was in the Coolidge bull market.
4. Pools and market manipulation.

The first three of these forces are so strong that the SEC probably could not repress the buoyancy of the market even if it wanted to. But apparently a majority of its members have not wanted to.

Pools and Speculation

Even speculation and the operation of pools, which could be barred by the SEC if it desired, have not been approached in more than half-hearted fashion.

Chairman James Landis confessed, during a speech at Princeton last winter, that the SEC had failed to curb the market. But meanwhile he was content to sit on the side-lines and let the market roar on, without taking even the steps he could take to curb it.

Many forms of market manipulation are legal under the stock exchange act, unless the SEC rules otherwise. For instance members of the exchange still can trade in their own accounts while at the same time handling those of their customers. They can boost prices, cash in on them, leaving their customers to hold the bag. Many a bull market has been started by this sort of manipulation.

Segregation

The SEC not only has the power to curb this, but at the time Chairman Landis made his speech, a report was on his desk calling for the segregation of dealers and brokers. It recommended that those who handled accounts for their customers be prohibited from trading in the market for themselves.

This report never has been adopted. In fact, Andrew Ten Eyck, one of the experts who helped prepare it and a pioneer in urging regulation of the market, has been given notice of dismissal.

All of this focused attention particularly upon Chairman Landis.

Landis is one of the most brilliant young men around the president, 36 years old, a former disciple of Justice Brandeis and Professor Felix Frankfurter of Harvard. When his net achievements for the new deal are evaluated, he has a large balance in his favor, but more recently he has been leaning increasingly toward Wall street.

Ladies' Man

Senator J. Ham Lewis, who consistently omits the date of his birth from all biographies, insists that advancing age has not impaired his virility.

The other day at a dinner of the Military Order of the World War, the presiding officer, in calling on Lewis to speak, addressed him as "our old friend."

Lewis rose from where he sat beside an Annapolis belle, the youthful wife of an admiral, and, with bristling whiskers and twinkling eyes, declared:

"Let not the word 'old' be applied to one whom 'age cannot wither nor custom stale.' I call you to witness that I have been able to kidnap in the presence of you all one of the most attractive ladies of the assembly, who sits here to vouch for my continued service on any occasion a lady may seek."

Merry-Go-Round

The names of Joseph Patrick Kennedy, recent SEC chairman and Harper Sibley, president of the anti-new deal U. S. chamber of commerce, appear side by side on the official ballot for election of Harvard's new crop of overseers . . . After conducting a pair of honeymooners through the capitol, including the house and senate chambers, Guide H. E. Terry was amazed to hear his sightseers say, "Where is the president's bedroom?" . . . Jealous of the big photographic exhibit of Ickes' PWA projects in the house office building, Harry Hopkins got still closer to the source of funds by installing a WPA art exhibit in the lobby of the house chamber itself. . . . Congressman Vito Marcantonio doesn't wait until summer to get close to his constituents. Every Sunday, from the beginning of last year's session, he has run back to New York and held open house for all troubled voters. . . . Hoover's last sarcasm-laden speech against the new deal was not the work of his ghoster Ben Allen. Ben was 3,000 miles away when Hoover, in New York City, paced the floor of his Waldorf-Astoria apartment composing and dictating the speech himself.

Navy Seeking A Huge Fleet In Ten Years

Standley's Program Calls For Many Ships In Immediate Future

WASHINGTON, April 24. (UP)—The new naval program of two battleships and 12 light cruisers suggested by Admiral William H. Standley, chief of operations, should strengthen the fleet in two vital but very different fields of war.

Both classes represent ships of which the United States has built few in recent years and in which, from the Navy department's point of view, America is deficient on the sea.

If Standley should have his way, the present session of congress would authorize the battleships and appropriate some $10,000,000 to start them. He is not hopeful of starting the cruiser program until next year, then laying down three a year for four years. The latter would be of the "light cruiser" class—from 6,000 to 8,000 tons, mounting 6.1-inch guns.

Fleet of 1942 Surveyed

With the completion of this program and other ships now building the United States would have by 1942 a fleet of warships of the following numbers and purposes:

Battleships: 17. It is the mission of these great "floating fortresses," their tonnage varying from 30,000 to 35,000, to meet the enemy in battle on the high seas and attempt to destroy his forces. They are comparatively slow in speed, about 23 knots on the average, but have powerful guns, 12 to 16 inches, and thick armor. In a "knock-down-fight," no other class of ships can stand up against them.

Aircraft carriers: 1. This post-war type of vessel, varying greatly in tonnage (from 12,500 to 37,000 in the U. S. Navy) carries a brood of planes which may be used to locate the enemy fleet, attack it from the air or bomb coastal cities.

Cruisers: 50. These fall into two classes Light, from 6,000 to 8,000 tons, mounting 6.1-inch guns; heavy, around 10,000 tons, mostly carrying 8-inch guns. Both classes have the same mission: to form the second line behind battleships in fleet engagements; second, and more important, to raid enemy commerce and protect America's own. The heavy cruiser is superior only in that it has a longer cruising range and, naturally, can defeat a ship with lighter armament if they engage in battle. During recent years America has specialized in the 10,000-ton class, although nine of the lighter ships now are being built and Standley advocates 12 more.

Destroyers to Total 266

Destroyers: 266. These light, fast vessels, varying from 1,200 to 3,000 in tonnage and carrying armament not exceeding 6.1 inches, usually lighter, form a third line of battle, raid or protect commerce and search out submarines for attack. Although their armament usually prevents them from engaging in a successful battle with larger ships, they are dangerous even to superdreadnaughts because of their torpedoes.

Submarines: 100. These undersea craft, used so successfully by the Germans in the World war, carry light armament, usually guns of not more than 3-inch type, and fight mostly with torpedoes. Because of invisibility when submerged they are successful in running blockades and are dangerous to war and merchant vessels alike because of their frequent ability to launch torpedoes and escape before effective fire can be trained on them.

Transports Not Included

In addition to these five primary types, the Navy has scores of tankers, transports, oilers and other types necessary to keep the fleet operating at sea. But these are not considered fighting ships.

The figures cited here from Navy tables do not take account of one factor—ships reaching their "age limit," at which, according to naval experts, they lose their maximum usefulness. These "age limits" have been fixed for the various types, by international agreement, as follows: battleships, 26 years; aircraft carriers, 20 years; cruisers built before 1920, 16 years; those built afterward, 20 years; destroyers, 16 years; submarines, 13 years.

Even for some years after a vessel reaches its "age limit," however, it may be effective in war.

GIANTS STILL RIDING THE TOP

NEW YORK, April 24—It took 10 innings for the Brooklyn Dodgers to defeat the New York Giants Thursday but the Terrymen from the Polo Grounds are still riding the crest of the National league, having won seven of nine games played.

The champions of that circuit, the Chicago Cubs, behind steady twirling of Larry French, decisioned Pittsburgh, 2-1, but the Cincinnati Reds defeated the "Gas House Gang" of St. Louis, 8-6, when Billy Myers hit a home run in the tenth inning off Mike Ryba with a man on base.

The Phillies knocked out nine base hits against Ben Cantwell and Bob Brown to defeat Boston in the other game, 5-3.

In the American loop, the Yankees won their fifth game of the season by stomping Washington when Fred "Dixie" Walker and George Selkirk smacked out home runs, each with a man on base.

The Tigers whitewashed the St. Louis Browns, 10-0, but the Hornsbymen still have the series lead.

The Philadelphia Athletics won their second game of the season and their first from Boston in defeating the Sox, 9-1, while Cleveland handed the White Sox their second licking of the season, 5-1.

Hoosier Behind the Times

AUSTIN, (UP)—Secretaries of Governor James V. Allred puzzled over a letter from an Evansville, Ind., man addressed "Gov. James Stephen Hogg (personal)." Hogg has been dead 35 years. The writer wanted to know where to buy some Texas pecan trees.

AUSTIN, (UP)—Mrs. June C. Graham, of Austin, was having her flower beds spaded for spring planting. In one shovelful Arlington Caldwell dug up a rattlesnake. Eleven others wriggled from the hole and were killed.

GOODING, Ida. (UP)—Two boys recently didn't believe that money doesn't grow on trees, as their parents had told them. They plucked $50 from the branches of a tree here. The money had been hidden by a robber.

Chapter 20

TRUTH FROM PHINA

Phina asked her some rapid questions in French, and then nodded. "Yes—good. Well, we have a winter before us here in New York, and I hope in spite of lessons you'll have time for some fun. You can ride till late in November in the country—after that in Central Park. Now get your bath and get dressed, and come down to the place for a fitting."

Aunt Phina was an avalanche! Iris was beginning to understand why Owen went on being designer when he wanted to be an architect. What she couldn't understand was why Uncle Will hadn't meekly married her the first week they met, such a general was she. That strong irresistible sureness that you would do what she said swept you along like a tide.

But, oh, a kind tide! Iris dressed swiftly. Life was beginning! This morning a fitting for beautiful clothes; this afternoon a gorgeous party! . . . If only Morgan were to be there, Morgan with his quizzical slow phrases that conveyed subtle comfort and encouragement and admiration!

Well, Morgan was there in the background, waiting, love with its strong hands out to hold her. Perhaps he'd come over soon, or she'd run back to him—they were young, and there was plenty of time to decide, meanwhile, here were the pleasures and palaces and Morgan was altogether too cynical about life. . . .

She splashed through her bath, and, in an echo of remembering Morgan and Uncle Will and her other life, began to sing as she went downstairs, the old signal:

"Just as sure as it is half past eight,
Someone's tapping at the garden gate—"

"What's that you're singing?" Phina called from the desk where she was going over a stack of bills like intelligent lightning.

"One of Grandmother Lanning's funny old songs that Uncle Will used to like, to the guitar, in the evening. I used to dress up in her clothes and put on performances for him, bless his heart, and sometimes I did it for parties."

"Something Ella taught you?" sharply.

Ella was the one chink in Phina's smooth armor.

"No . . . Aunt Phina, after all you're a wonderful person and you've done it all yourself. Why do you mind about poor Aunt Ella?"

The handsome dominant well-groomed middle-aged woman sitting at her desk, mistress of herself and of most other things about her, charged before Iris's eyes.

She became suddenly 20 years younger and 40 times angrier; the outraged capable pretty thing who had come to the aristocratic old town with only a needle between herself and the wolf at the door, half defiant, half frightened. Her face worked. The words poured out in a stream.

"Because Ella Lanning had been entrenched in money and position a generation ago—because Jean and I were 'common sewing girls' as she called us—and because she was insane on the subject of your father, she was insolent—merciless—cruel. She broke off my marriage with Will—she wrecked Jean's with Lawrence. I've gone a long way. I'll end higher than any Lanning ever dreamed of being. When I am I'll go there again—and show her—tell her."

Aunt Phina stopped, panting, white, shaking. Iris shrank back. Was this the driving force behind that dominating capability?

Phina Ross saw what effect she had made, and was suddenly herself again, the quiet masterful unmoved woman. She smiled.

"I 'went theatrical,' as you young things say, didn't I? That's all nonsense, of course. I really owe the poor soul a good deal; I doubt if I'd have made as much success or money without that feeling. I'd really supposed there was nothing left of it. Now sing your dramatic old auntie the song about the garden gate. I want to know everything you can do. You seem to have all the talents." She put an affectionate hand on Iris's shoulder.

Glad of some outlet for her own shaken feelings, Iris went to the piano and sang the song through with all its outmoded gayeties and archnesses. Phina clapped when she had done; she was completely herself again.

"Darling, you are nearly a professional diseuse, bless you heart. We must work on that. I'll get you costumes. Now come along."

Phina's shop was not like any shop Iris knew; not like a shop at all, indeed. An ostentatiously quiet window with one hat and one dress tossed on a chair; an almost invisible sign.

Within, two large rooms, one with paneled pale green walls, one furnished as a replica of one of Marie Antoinette's, so she was told later. A handful of bright particolored necklaces flung on one table, a dress or two across chairs. A fireplace full of flowers at one end, with chairs grouped about it; three or four lovely young girls, "types," drifting about, gay and docile and flattering to the five or six women who were being shown—as if one's relatives did it, rather superior relatives—clothes from behind the panels.

An electric stiffening went through the rooms with Phina's quiet arrival. The customers became excited; the sales people intensified their manners, whether these were gay or scornful or coaxing.

A tall awkward girl with a face that might have been handsome if it had been less tense, broke away from her salesgirl and rushed over to Phina. Her attitude was that of a schoolgirl toward a worshiped teacher.

"Oh, Miss Phina! Oh, Miss Phina!" Her insistent voice rang through the room, and she stopped short, embarrassed and frightened. Phina spoke to her very much like a teacher, Iris thought; kindly, a little reprovingly.

"Now, my dear, Miss Camilla," she said, looking brightly up at the girl's stooped height, "you don't need anything more at all this spring. Your mother would think you were horribly extravagant if I let you go on buying."

Iris waiting at a little distance, was sure she heard one of the exquisite goddess-blondes snicker. There was some joke about the poor girl.

"But—but mother won't mind, honestly she won't at all," said Camilla, jerking her shoulders under the smart coat and flushing a dull red under her unpowdered skin.

"What you need is more time in the beauty parlor," Phina said almost severely. "If you wear your clothes properly, and look after your make-up better, that's all you need."

"But I do need one more evening frock, anyway!" pleaded this topsy-turvy customer. Phina shook her head indulgently.

"Very well, if you must, but speak to your mother first," she said.

"Oh, is this your niece? Is this Owen's sister? Oh, she's lovely!" said Camilla with her uncontrolled voice. "And she looks like him too. You look just like Owen!" She stared at Iris with the same devotion she had given Phina. "Do come see me! Or have luncheon with me tomorrow."

The enigma was solved—poor girl! It was Owen's designs, Owen himself, in fact, that Camilla came for. But the girl was so helpless, so honest and inept in her schoolgirl crush that Iris could only be sorry for her. If this was a New York society girl, one needn't feel backwoodsy!

Phina made the luncheon engagement tentative, shifted Camilla adroitly to the head saleswoman, and beckoned Iris upstairs to the fitting room.

"Is she—" Iris began, half pitying, half laughing.

"She is," said Phina irritably, and yet with an amused lifted eyebrow. "My dear, that poor girl has everything; except personal attraction. Her mother turned her over to me to dress, in despair; and I really was doing well with her. All on earth that ails her is a complete conviction that she is awkward and ugly and nobody loves her. I have told Owen a dozen times that if he had mercy on her and married her she would bloom. She isn't actually plain—it's her manner and voice. Iris, you could help the poor child. Will you?"

"Oh, not to marry Owen!"

"It might be for his best interests," said Phina. "But I don't mean that, foolish child. Don't be romantic. In spite of her money and position she's the Poor Little Rich Girl. She took to you—you can do something kind there. Be her friend, my dear."

American Supplies Held Adequate To Meet Any Test Created By War

WASHINGTON, April 24. (AP)—Does the United States produce the raw "munitions" it would need if an enemy power got control of the sea lanes?

This question, vital to national defense, is answered in a report on raw materials and their relation to a conflict of any magniture just complied by Col. John A. Wagner, procurement expert of the war department's quartermaster corps.

"America's great power," Colonel Wagner reports, "is due not so much to victories on the battlefields, as to the possession of essential raw materials and the ability of her citizens to properly change these raw materials into articles of commerce."

Two Years Without Imports

No other nation, Colonel Wagner finds, has the natural resources and industrial organization to carry on a war for two years without importing huge amounts of war supplies.

A detailed survey of strategic raw materials, essential to warfare, made by Wagner has convinced him that this country either has or could produce in an extreme emergency, the things it needs for victory.

Where Materials Produced

The list of materials, including their chief sources and the percentage produced in the United States, in the Quartermaster Review, shows:

MANGANESE (Indispensable in steel manufacture): U. S. 29 per cent; Soviet Russia 33 per cent; Brazil 25 per cent; India 9.7 per cent; Gold Coast 8 per cent; Canada 5 per cent. Wagner recommends that, in view of American utilization being much greater than production here, a war supply should be built up.

CHROMIUM (needed as an alloy, in chemical manufacture, and for armor plate, projectiles and gun carriages): U. S. none; Rhodesia 56 per cent; Cuba 15 per cent. Wagner recommends building up a war stock for emergency purposes, although it is expected this country would be able to secure Cuban supplies even in wartime.

NICKEL (for nickel steels, heavy machinery and guns, armor plate): U. S. 2 per cent; Canada 90 per cent. Chief world's supply is only few miles across American border in a friendly country, with no expectation of difficulty securing supplies.

TUNGSTEN (necessary in toughening alloys and high speed cutting tools): U. S. 24 per cent; China 44.7 per cent; Great Britain 14 per cent. Production here, plus substitution of molybdenum, sufficient.

TIN (for tetrachloride, important as a producer of glares and concealing smoke in explosives): U. S. none; British Malaya 65 per cent; Great Britain 21 per cent. Wagner recommends building up a small war stock, chiefly for industrial convenience, pending sufficient production of substitutes.

ANTIMONY (for hardening lead in shrapnel shells, percussion caps of shells and charges, in bearing metals): U. S. none; China 70 per cent; Mexico 10 per cent. Substitutes, plus small deposits of low grade ores here which could be worked, sufficient.

MERCURY (for ammunition and important manufacturing purposes): U. S. 40 per cent; Spain 30 per cent; Italy 22 per cent. American production, plus use of substitutes, sufficient.

PLATINUM (electrical and chemical industries, including manufacture of sulphuric and nitric acid, necessary in manufacture of explosives of all kinds) U. S. 5 per cent; Colombia 42.5 per cent; Great Britain 42 per cent; Germany 12.5 per cent. Substitutes, secondary recovery and possible imports from Colombia, sufficient.

MICA (insulation purposes): U. S. 26 per cent; India 50 per cent; Canada 10 per cent.

NITRATES (essential for explosives): U. S. 67.4 per cent; Chile 21.9 per cent.

RUBBER (tires, insulation, rubber goods): U. S. none; Malay States 66 per cent; East India 18.5 per cent. Large stocks and substitutes sufficient, but small war stock recommended when purchasable at low price.

SILK (parachutes and powder bags): U. S. none; Japan 83 per cent; China 16.2 per cent. Artificial substitutes, plus normal stock, sufficient.

JUTE, MANILA FIBRE and SISAL (rope, sandbags, wrapping purposes): U. S. none, all being produced in the Philippines, India, East Indies and Mexico. Numerous substitutes, including wire, cotton and flax, available.

WOOL (uniforms): U. S. 55 per cent; Great Britain 10 per cent; China 8 per cent. Stocks and substitutes sufficient.

COFFEE: U. S. none; Brazil 68.9 per cent; Colombia 18.7 per cent. If stocks are cut off from Brazil and Colombia the nation must use substitutes or go without.

SUGAR: U. S. 17.5 per cent; Cuba 56.4 per cent; Hawaii 11.8 per cent; Puerto Rico 8.5 per cent; Philippines 7.9 per cent. Production, plus substitutes including corn sugar, sufficient.

The United States produces no iodine, nux vomica (source of strychnine), opium or quinine, necessary medical supplies, which come from Indo-China, India, Chile, Great Britain, Turkey, Greece, the Netherlands and Japan. Small war stocks are recommended, since the only possible supply would be production of iodine from California brines and kelp.

The United States is also dependent or imports, chiefly from Japan and tropical countries for coconut shells (charcoal for gas masks) and camphor (manufacture of smokeless powder and photographic film) but acceptable synthetic substitutes would be available in an emergency.

Reward Out For Karpis

$5,000 To Be Paid For Capture Of Public Enemy No. 1

WASHINGTON, April 24. (UP)—Attorney General Homer S. Cummings has offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to capture of Alvin Karpis, America's No. 1 public enemy.

Cummings' reward offer was under an act of congress which provided that the justice department might offer rewards for the capture of notorious criminals.

Karpis is regarded by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation, as the most desperate uncaptured public enemy.

The department also offered a $2,500 reward for the apprehension of Harry Campbell, believed to be a confederate of Karpis in a number of sensational exploits.

Karpis and Campbell, sought in the Bremer kidnaping, are two of the four public enemies still hunted by the justice department in its cleanup of the kidnap racket.

The other two are William Mahan, wanted in the George Weyerhaeuser case and Thomas Robinson, Jr., wanted in the Stoll kidnaping in Louisville, Ky.

484,000; Gulf coast, 56,544,000; East Central Texas (Red Lake), 1,000,000; East Texas, 32,600,000; West and North Texas, 49,514,000.

Sour gas fields—Panhandle, 446,000,000; Chittim, 2,200,000; Southwest Texas, 1,250,000; West Texas, 9,554,000.

Hearings were set for May 11 at Amarillo on oil-gas ratios of oil wells in the Panhandle field; on rules for the Sunray field in the Panhandle district and on the method of granting water exemption on oil wells in the Panhandle field.

Short Crop Talk Increases Wheat Price In France

PARIS, April 24 (AP)—France, which normally produces just enough wheat to supply bread for her 40,000,000 citizens, may have to import part of her needs next year, for both the wheat carry-over and crop forecasts are low.

The mild and extremely wet winter, unfavorable for winter wheat, which comprises the greater part of the country's crop, is expected by agricultural forecasters to reduce the total yield even below last year's low output of 76,000,000 quintals (about 278,000,000 bushels). A 75,000,000-quintal crop is probable.

Wheat prices, no longer directly regulated by law, have been rising rapidly in anticipation of the shortage. The price jumped from 70 francs a quintal last August to 104 francs a quintal—the equivalent of $1.88 a bushel—in March.

Trade circles regard it unlikely that the United States will get any of the business if it is necessary to import wheat.

GAS ALLOWABLE FOR NEXT MONTH FIXED

AUSTIN, April 24. (UP)—Allowable natural gas production in Texas for May has been set by order of the state railroad commission.

The figures in cubic feet daily allowed are:

Sweet gas fields—East Panhandle, 110,494,000; West Panhandle 525,355,000; Southwest Texas, 161,-

MILLION MAPS WILL BE AVAILABLE FOR

AUSTIN, April 24. (UP)—A million highway maps will direct Centennial tourists in Texas. An order for that number was issued today by the state highway commission. Half will be printed at once. Individuals were granted authority to reproduce the map provided no changes are made and provided there is nothing added but a small plate giving the name of the distributor.

Charles Delbert Philips, 13-year-old son of A. G. Philips and Mrs. R. L. Reinherdt, succumbed at 11:20 Thursday night, at the Reinherdt home on the Beal ranch southwest of Stanton. The lad had been ill of pneumonia for about a week.

He made his home on the ranch, where Reinherdt is employed. Mr. Philips resides in Brownwood. Other survivors include a brother, Arthur Lloyd Philips, a half-sister, Bobby Nell Reinherdt, an uncle, E. B. Reinherdt, and other uncles and aunts.

The funeral service was scheduled for 5 o'clock this afternoon from the Eberley Funeral chapel, with Rev. W. S. Garnett, pastor of the Fourth Street Baptist church, officiating. Burial was to be made in New Mt. Olive cemetery.

Traffic Signs Distinctive

SAGINAW, Mich. (UP)—A suggestion for a "sure fire" method of correcting the number of boulevard and stop street violators has been made by City Manager John Cookingham. Instead of printing "Stop Street" on the signs, Cookingham would have the signs read: "Stop, or Pay $5."

Special Services Will Be Held At Moore Schoolhouse

REV. JOHN R. DENNING

Evangelist John R. Denning, well known both in the pulpit and over the radio, as a gospel preacher, will preach at the Moore schoolhouse, six miles northwest of Big Spring, Saturday night and Sunday.

For more than a year, Rev. Denning has been conducting a radio service each Sunday over station KFYO at Lubbock. He also has been heard several times recently over station KRLG at Midland.

Groups from Midland, Stanton, Lamesa and other towns, including a large number from Big Spring, are expected to attend the all-day services Sunday.

Preaching hours will be at 8 o'clock Saturday night, and on Sunday at 11 a. m., 2 p. m. and 8 p. m. Homer L. Sims, song leader of Floydada, will have charge of the song service. Dinner will be served following the morning worship.

Girl Is Tower Lookout

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UP)—A 16-year old girl has been named lookout at the Oxford watch tower to succeed her sister who resigned. She is Dorothy Kellogg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kellogg. Her father is chief of the Long Hill fire department and has been a fire warden for 13 years.

'Campaign Of Terrorism' Charged Against New Deal By Republicans

WASHINGTON, April 24. (UP)—The new deal was accused today of a "campaign of terrorism" in a pamphlet issued by the republican congressional committee.

The booklet entitled "Roosevelt Terrorism" said "free speech has been penalized" and "a free press, heretofore inviolate, has been attacked." Deep inroads have been made already, the committee said.

It reviewed the senate lobby committee subpoena of telegrams, the removal of Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood from his army command, and the "employment of 5,000 secret service snoopers" for the new deal.

"The Roosevelt campaign of terrorism, designed to compel re-election, is on," the pamphlet said. "New deal control of the radio has been attempted. All of this is an effort to stifle attack on the administration."

The committee said those who oppose President Roosevelt are "in danger" and to criticize the administration is to "court annoyance or disaster."

The committee cited the "Hagood incident" as an "outstanding example of rank violation of American liberties." It recalled administration criticism by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh two years ago as evidence that President Roosevelt "acts in haste and anger."

Col. Lindbergh, the committee said, criticized cancellation of airmail contracts and was "charged with being a publicity seeker."

The committee estimated "more than 5,000" investigators were employed by the new deal "secret service" and e t "Russian terrorism has been imported to America" by the new deal.

STUDENTS TO ATTEND ABILENE PROGRAM

Several Big Spring high school students plan to attend the second annual "high school senior day" program sponsored by Hardin-Simmons university, to be held at the Abilene school Saturday.

The university will present an all-day program for seniors of West Texas high schools. Planning to attend from here are Ruth Mundt, Alma Rose Smith, Leiah Anderson, Juanita Wray and Edna Schuster.

Check Hours Of Truckers

Reports On Time Each Man On Duty Required By The State

AUSTIN, April 24. (AP)—The time each truck driver is on duty each day in the month must be reported to the state railroad commission's motor division under an order issued yesterday.

Monthly reports will have to be filed by every motor carrier company, including common, contract, and special commodity carriers. The commission has no jurisdiction over trucks operated by the owners for their own purposes.

First report will be required May 1, covering drivers' hours of employment in April.

Run reports of motor buses already furnish a check on the number of hours their drivers are employed continuously.

Long driving hours were blamed for a gasoline truck driver falling asleep and causing an accident last month that killed Gov. James V. Allred's sister. Governor Allred later remitted the driver's fine and jail sentence, blaming the conditions, not the man.

Divorces Gain in Canada

OTTAWA, Ont. (UP)—Divorces increased by more than 24 per cent in Canada last year, the Dominion bureau of statistics reports. The number of divorces granted during 1935 totaled 1,370 an increase of 270 over 1934.

COLORADOAN SILENT ON TINGLEY THREAT N. M. TO RETALIATE

DENVER, April 24. (AP)—A threat of Gov. Clyde Tingley of New Mexico to "retaliate" unless Colorado ceases it blockade against "cheap labor" left Governor Johnson silent today.

"I have heard nothing from him directly, and until I do I have not a thing to say," Gov. Ed. C. Johnson said.

He referred to press dispatches which quoted Gov. Tingley as saying:

"He won't get away with it when he starts sending New Mexico citizens back across the line."

Marital law was declared Saturday along the border because Governor Johnson said Colorado faced a threatened flood of "cheap labor" for railroads, sheep ranches and sugar beet fields. Indigents who have been turned back were quoted by national guard officers as saying they were coming to Colorado to work for $1.10 a day.

MAULED BY A LION, MAN FATALLY HURT

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 24. (UP)—O. F. Lazar, 32, Augusta printer, died at a hospital yesterday from injuries suffered when he was mauled by "Albert," a caged 6-year-old lion owned by R. L. Moyer, a farmer.

County officials said Moyer told them that Lazar approached the lion's cage during his absence, and that he returned to find the printer lying beside the cage, scalped and lacerated. Moyer was not held.

Albert was given to his present owner five years ago by an explorer-missionary friend in Africa.

City Buys $2 Peg Leg

VANCOUVER, B. C. (UP)—Vancouver's accounts last month showed an expenditure of $2 for a new peg leg. The civic finance committee authorized payment of the money in settlement of a claim by a citizen whose leg was damaged when he stepped into an uncovered water valve box on a street.

expenditures since January 1 totaled $88,080,402.

Current status of the relief program, as disclosed at the treasury, included:

14 Million For Texas

1. Increased allocations to 44 states since January 1. Largest increases, after New York, were Illinois, $19,153,786; Missouri, $17,356,033; and Texas, $14,157,818.

2. A total of $321,513,642 has been allocated to all states since January 1. Total allocations since inauguration of the program to April 1, were $4,576,570,000.

3. A total of $842,687,852 has been paid out of the treasury for relief since January 1, or an average of $221 for each of 3,800,000 on relief for the first three months of 1936. Of the $4,576,570,000 already allocated, some $3,466,159,327 is obligated and $2,515,082,158 actually has been spent.

"The allocation totals have no political significance," WPA officials said in commenting on the shifts since January 1. "They represent allocations and not actual expenditures."
