Tidal wave victims

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — A team of 40 motorcyclists will comb the most remote parts of the Pacific coast to seek survivors of an earthquake-triggered tidal wave that killed at least 116 people, an official said Saturday. But National Emergency Committee Director Jaime Icabalceta told a news conference he feared many of the missing, especially the children, are dead./8A

GM strike ends

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — Members of a United Auto Workers local on Saturday approved an agreement ending a strike that had idled nearly 43,000 General Motors Corp. employees around the country and closed nine assembly plants. About 98 percent of the 800 members who voted, approved the deal, said Robert Hall, a member of the elections committee that counted the votes. Eighteen members voted against the pact, Hall said./10A

Hummingbirds

Hovering far above our heads, visible only to the most dedicated bird watcher, is an avian hotbed — a virtual bird-lover's paradise, according to a local naturalist. "Midland is absolutely unique for the number of hummingbird species a person can see in his backyard," said Midge Erskine. "There are at least 12 species of hummingbirds that I alone have seen." Hummingbirds, who typically start migrating through the area in August, began the move about six weeks early this year because of last year's mild spring and winter. Their trek should end in October./1C

Longhorns lose

AUSTIN — Jackie Sherrill kept his hex on Texas: The Mississippi State coach spoiled John Mackovic's debut and soured the opening celebration of 100 years of Longhorns football with a 28-10 victory on Saturday night. Sherrill said he hopes he never sees the Longhorns again. "I don't want to come back to play Texas again," Sherrill said. "We have enough to worry about in our conference."/1B

Incoming city manager prepares for challenge

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Mike McGregor, soon to have his finger on the pulse of the city, knows the issues facing Midland are both numerous and controversial — but he's not worried.

"We have very creative and competent people living in and associated with the city," he said. "Our mayor and council is composed of people willing to do whatever it takes to provide quality and cost effective municipal services."

Big Spring State Hospital quits detoxification task

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

BIG SPRING — Alcoholics and drug abusers in need of treatment but without funds or insurance to buy private care now have one less place to go in West Texas for detoxification — Big Spring State Hospital.

While the hospital, by law, is accepting court-ordered cases for detoxification and treatment, it is no longer accepting walk-in patients voluntarily seeking treatment.

The Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation (MHMR) board wants the Big Spring State Hospital to focus on its original purpose: to care for mentally ill citizens. However, the hospital accepts those persons with a "dual diag-

Aid efforts fall short in Somalia

■ Officials find famine worse than expected in rural areas.

By Jane Perlez
N.Y. Times News Service

BARDERA, Somalia — Relief officials say that as their operations move into rural areas of Somalia they are discovering that the country's famine is far worse than previously believed and that present efforts, including an American airlift, are falling far short of what is needed to ease the crisis.

The officials, representing the United Nations and private relief agencies, said the dimensions of the famine have become clear only in recent days as relief workers have begun to arrive in rural centers like this one, where streams of emaciated men, women and children have flocked from outlying areas on the word that food is arriving. Many people die making the trek and, in a paradox of the relief efforts, many of those who reach distribution sites after days of walking die because there is not enough food to go around.

"We have so far seen only the tip of the iceberg," said Mohamed Sahnoun, the U.N. representative in Somalia. "People were staying in their huts and dying. Now they have heard there is food around, they are coming out."

U.S. officials announced Friday that they were expanding the American military airlift on Saturday to include two flights daily to Baidoa, one of the worst-off rural centers. The American airlift, announced three weeks ago and involving 12 C-130 transports and more than 500 American military personnel, has so far concentrated on northern Kenya and one comparatively well-fed Somali town.

Despite such measures, the American, U.N., and private relief efforts continue to be dogged by security, political, and logistical concerns, leaving doubts about whether an effective response to the catastrophe can be mounted.

The U.N. World Food Program, the main arm of the U.N. effort in Somalia, complained last week that it only had three aircraft at its disposal and could not reach badly hit towns. The agency also said it could not find enough people to send to isolated regions to monitor and organize the delivery of food in violence-prone areas.

For political reasons, American officials said, this stricken rural center was not one of the towns under consider-

Officials survey building codes in south Florida

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — Volunteers streamed into hurricane-damaged areas for a Labor Day weekend cleanup Saturday, and federal and local authorities said they were investigating whether shoddy workmanship contributed to the scope of the destruction.

The Revs. Billy Graham and Jesse Jackson led a prayer service dedicated to rebounding from Hurricane Andrew.

"We have suffered, but suffering breeds character and character breeds faith. Faith will prevail," Jackson said.

Tragedy struck a Red Cross shelter in the Miami area when a week-old baby boy, who was named Andrew after the hurricane, was found dead in his crib. Metro-Dade police were investigating the cause of An-

Baker fights uphill battle

By Maureen Dowd and Thomas L. Friedman

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON — From their State Department perch six blocks west of the West Wing, the Baker team had scoffed and raged for two years about the clumsy attempts of Bush officials to deal with politics and domestic affairs. The foreign affairs "whiz kids," as they liked to think of themselves, could not always hide their contempt for what they saw as a slapstick, slapdash White House operation.

When the country turned inward after the Persian Gulf War, when Los Angeles burned, when Ross Perot tapped into voter disgust, James A. Baker III and his band

Fischer calls blackout, lifts it; draw ends play

SVETI STEFAN, Yugoslavia (AP) — In the latest bizarre turn in a bizarre comeback, Bobby Fischer imposed a blackout Saturday on coverage of his $5 million match with Boris Spassky. Then, antics over, he lifted it and sat down for game three.

The game ended in a draw after 39 moves. Fischer offered the draw, Spassky accepted and the rivals shook hands across the chessboard.

Draws do not count for points in the match, meaning Fischer still leads 1-0.

"This was an off day for me, at least I hope it was an off day," Fischer said. "I was in trouble."

Spassky, a Russian-born French citizen, agreed.

"I created problems in the opening for Bobby," he

MISD aims to meet standards in state measurement system

■ Schools can meet some goals within four years, assistant superintendent says..

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

The state has set high standards for Texas students and has recently released its report card for school districts.

Billed as the "Academic Excellence Indicator System (AEIS)," the performance indicators reveal how well a school district is doing educating its students.

The indicators include standardized test scores, student attendance percentages, graduation rates, scores on college entrance exams, the dropout rate and percentage of students retained and promoted from grade to grade.

"This is the most succinct report of academic indicators we have received to date," said Bill Denton, at a recent school board meeting.

Denton, the assistant superintendent for Midland Independent School District, said the district's

ANALYSIS: Baker's team faces tough fight

of fortysomething aides looked over at the White House in wonder. What they saw was President Bush and his advisers squandering record-high approval ratings through their failure to understand the anxiety of Americans in economic pain and to offer a convincing plan to solve their problems.

But now that they have commandeered the White House, members of the Baker SWAT team confide that they are coming to grips with the fact that it is not so easy to ride to the rescue. They are, after all, operating within the constraints of a Reagan-Bush legacy that has dismantled important levers of government, especially in the domestic agencies. They are also working with a president who had wasted political capital for four years by scorning the idea that he needed to communicate, or even develop, a coherent theme and long-range strategy for his presidency.

Their initial steps have been largely mechanical: brisker, more focused daily White House meetings; more substantive presidential speeches tied to specific initiatives and a fresh cordon of trusted aides to manage the president on the road.

Like students cramming the night before an exam, the Baker aides are closeted in their offices, steeped in paper, coffee and Diet Cokes, working late into the night to come up with campaign themes and attack lines, driving everyone at the campaign headquarters crazy by calling every few minutes to find out Bill Clinton's position on one thing or another. The group who knew a lot more about the inner workings of the Russian economy is frantically working out economic recovery ideas for America — which they expect to unveil shortly.

While he enjoys polishing his image as a wily court magician, Baker knows he will be lucky to get out this time with his cape and rabbits intact.

It is one more fascinating twist to the 35-year friendship and rivalry of the Tex-prep friends that, in some ways, the better Baker does, the worse Bush will look because it will underscore the president's Zelig-like tendency to be as clever as his nearest adviser. "If Baker is the great poobah and savior, it makes George Bush look weak, doesn't it?" noted Lyn Nofziger, the White House political director under President Reagan, who regards Baker as an overrated self-promoter.

The mood of the Baker team is a mix of anger at having to move in at this late stage, terror at the prospect of being labeled failures and thrill at the thought of beating the odds. They have been swamped trying to simultaneously figure out everything from who runs the White House fax machines to who can be relied on to get things done in the government agencies.

When they were at the State Department, "We knew who you talk to, how you move things, who you can trust, if you want to establish a no-fly zone over southern Iraq," one Baker aide said privately, because they are all trying to keep low profiles. "But we had to learn about southern Florida. So you go ask people questions, but you don't know who really knows, so you don't know whose answers you can trust. In the State Department, you pull a lever and you have a pretty good idea what is going to happen on the other end, and if it doesn't happen you know just where to kick or jiggle."

The only antidote to the ingrained Washington instincts for envy, turf-fighting and backstabbing, it would seem, is the fear of humiliating defeat. As one top Bush campaign official sees it: "At some point the prospect of being hanged in a fortnight focuses you on avoiding the noose. You can worry about the location of your cell later."

CHESS: Game ends with draw

said, adding his defense against the American had been more determined than in Wednesday's opening game.

Earlier Saturday, the American player, returning to the game after a 20-year absence, demanded that reporters refer to the match as the "World Chess Championship," even though the world governing body of chess does not recognize it as such.

Through an organizer, the 49-year-old Fischer insisted that reporters treat the match as a world championship or be kept from covering the event. He said all media would be barred from Saturday's game and all TV monitors would be shut off as "punishment."

He apparently reversed his decision later, however. Reporters joined spectators, and TV monitors were turned back on in the press center.

Playing white, Fischer used the Ruy Lopez, or Spanish, opening, the same as in the first game on Wednesday. He won that game overwhelmingly and fought back from behind to clinch a draw in Thursday's second game. The first to win 10 games clinches the match.

Fischer did not comment on his decision to allow reporters in after all. But some observers said the whole incident was a flamboyant ploy to keep up media interest in the game.

As journalists filed in to watch the game, they saw a new sign behind Fischer and Spassky, proclaiming the match three times as: "The World Chess Championship."

Another overhead banner and a sign on the front of their table, which had been there earlier, said the same.

DETOX: Big Spring State Hospital closes substance-abuse program

nosis" of substance abuse and mental illness.

The plan is for alcoholics and other chemical abusers to be treated at the community level and not in state hospitals.

"The department (MHMR) would like for us to get out of (the detoxification and treatment) business and let the singly diagnosed substance abuser be treated in the local community," said Bob von Rosenberg, superintendent of the Big Spring State Hospital. "And that's the goal."

While that goal is being pursued, indigent alcoholics and abusers of other drugs will go without treatment if there is no room for them in non-profit community centers.

The change in hospital policy "certainly is not for a lack of need," said Kyle Peters, a Midland alcohol-and-drug-abuse counselor and spokesman for the Permian Basin Chemical Abuse Prevention Alliance. "There is a tremendous need."

"The indigent-care alcoholic is not going to have insurance," Peters said, "and is not going to have enough money to pay for private, for-profit hospital (care). And he's going to need a place to go."

For that person in the Midland-Odessa-Fort Stockton area, there is one publicly funded place to go: Turning Point. It is a primary — detoxification — facility operated in Odessa by the Permian Basin Community Centers for MHMR under grants by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse (TCADA) and by community funding.

Unlike Big Spring State Hospital, Turning Point is not a "medical detox" facility where physicians monitor people in the early stages of "drying out," Peters said.

He said the Big Spring program historically has provided "very good quality care for the people who went in for initial chemical-dependency treatment" and offered quality follow-up and after-care attention.

After-care programs may be through Alcoholics Anonymous, Narcotics Anonymous, and Palmer Drug Abuse Program.

Uninsured people who cannot afford private treatment, "are not going to get the help they need," Peters lamented. "They will be turned away."

Peters said chemical abuse "is a disease . . . just as much as cancer, just as much as mental illnesses.

"But who treats it? Medical doctors, treatment centers or mental-health people?" he asked.

Clyde McLean, executive director of the Permian Basin Community Centers for MHMR in Midland, said it has been "known for some time that substance abuse is not necessarily a mental illness."

And a state hospital for the mentally ill is an inappropriate place to treat alcoholics and other drug abusers, McLean said.

But "the catch," he said, is that while state hospitals are turning aside walk-in patients seeking chemical-dependency treatment, state government is "going to have to come up with more money for services in the community to offset that."

The Texas MHMR board wants TCADA and local communities to fund detoxification treatment centers.

Statewide, the Texas Department of MHMR operates eight mental-health hospitals, including the one at Big Spring; 13 state schools for mentally retarded people, and five state MHMR centers. The department also contracts with 35 MHMR community centers, including the Permian Basin Community Centers for MHMR in Midland and Odessa.

Largely through McLean's efforts, the 42-bed Turning Point facility was opened in 1990 in anticipation of the change in MHMR focus at the Big Spring hospital.

There also are two "halfway" houses — intermediate treatment centers — operated by the Permian Basin Community Centers for MHMR: Clover House in Odessa and Johnson Center in Midland. Both offer 90-day treatment programs. Turning Point operates a 45-day initial treatment program.

Curtailing voluntary admissions at the Big Spring facility is "not a big problem" for those in Midland, Odessa and Fort Stockton, McLean said.

They may seek initial treatment at Turning Point or get on the waiting list if they are without funds or means to get admitted to private treatment centers.

But the main woes may be for outlying communities, such as Stanton, Crane, Andrews, Rankin, Lamesa, and McCamey, which are without home-based primary treatment centers, McLean said.

Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport of Stanton said that there is a "real gap in alcohol detox and treatment programs in this area that are available to all people."

Crane County Judge Charles Blue is optimistic that Big Spring State Hospital will reinstate its treatment program.

"I think within a three-month period, it will be back . . . if enough racket is made," Blue said.

If not, then "we will just have to find other resources," Blue said.

"We use the Clover House a lot" for treatment after people are detoxed, which, in Crane County's case, usually takes place in jail.

Turning Point Director Dennis Wilson said the Odessa facility is "the only non-profit (primary detoxification) substance-abuse treatment facility between Wichita Falls and El Paso.

Officials of the Texas Department of MHMR are "trying to focus on their primary mission and goal: working with mental health and mental retardation," Wilson said.

"They want substance-abuse patients and clients to be handled by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse."

Wilson is hopeful "other counties in the area will see the need" and take action to establish additional substance-abuse treatment centers.

Until mid-1990, people who sought treatment for their alcohol and/or drug addictions through the Permian Basin Community Center for MHMR were referred to Big Spring State Hospital for treatment, Wilson said.

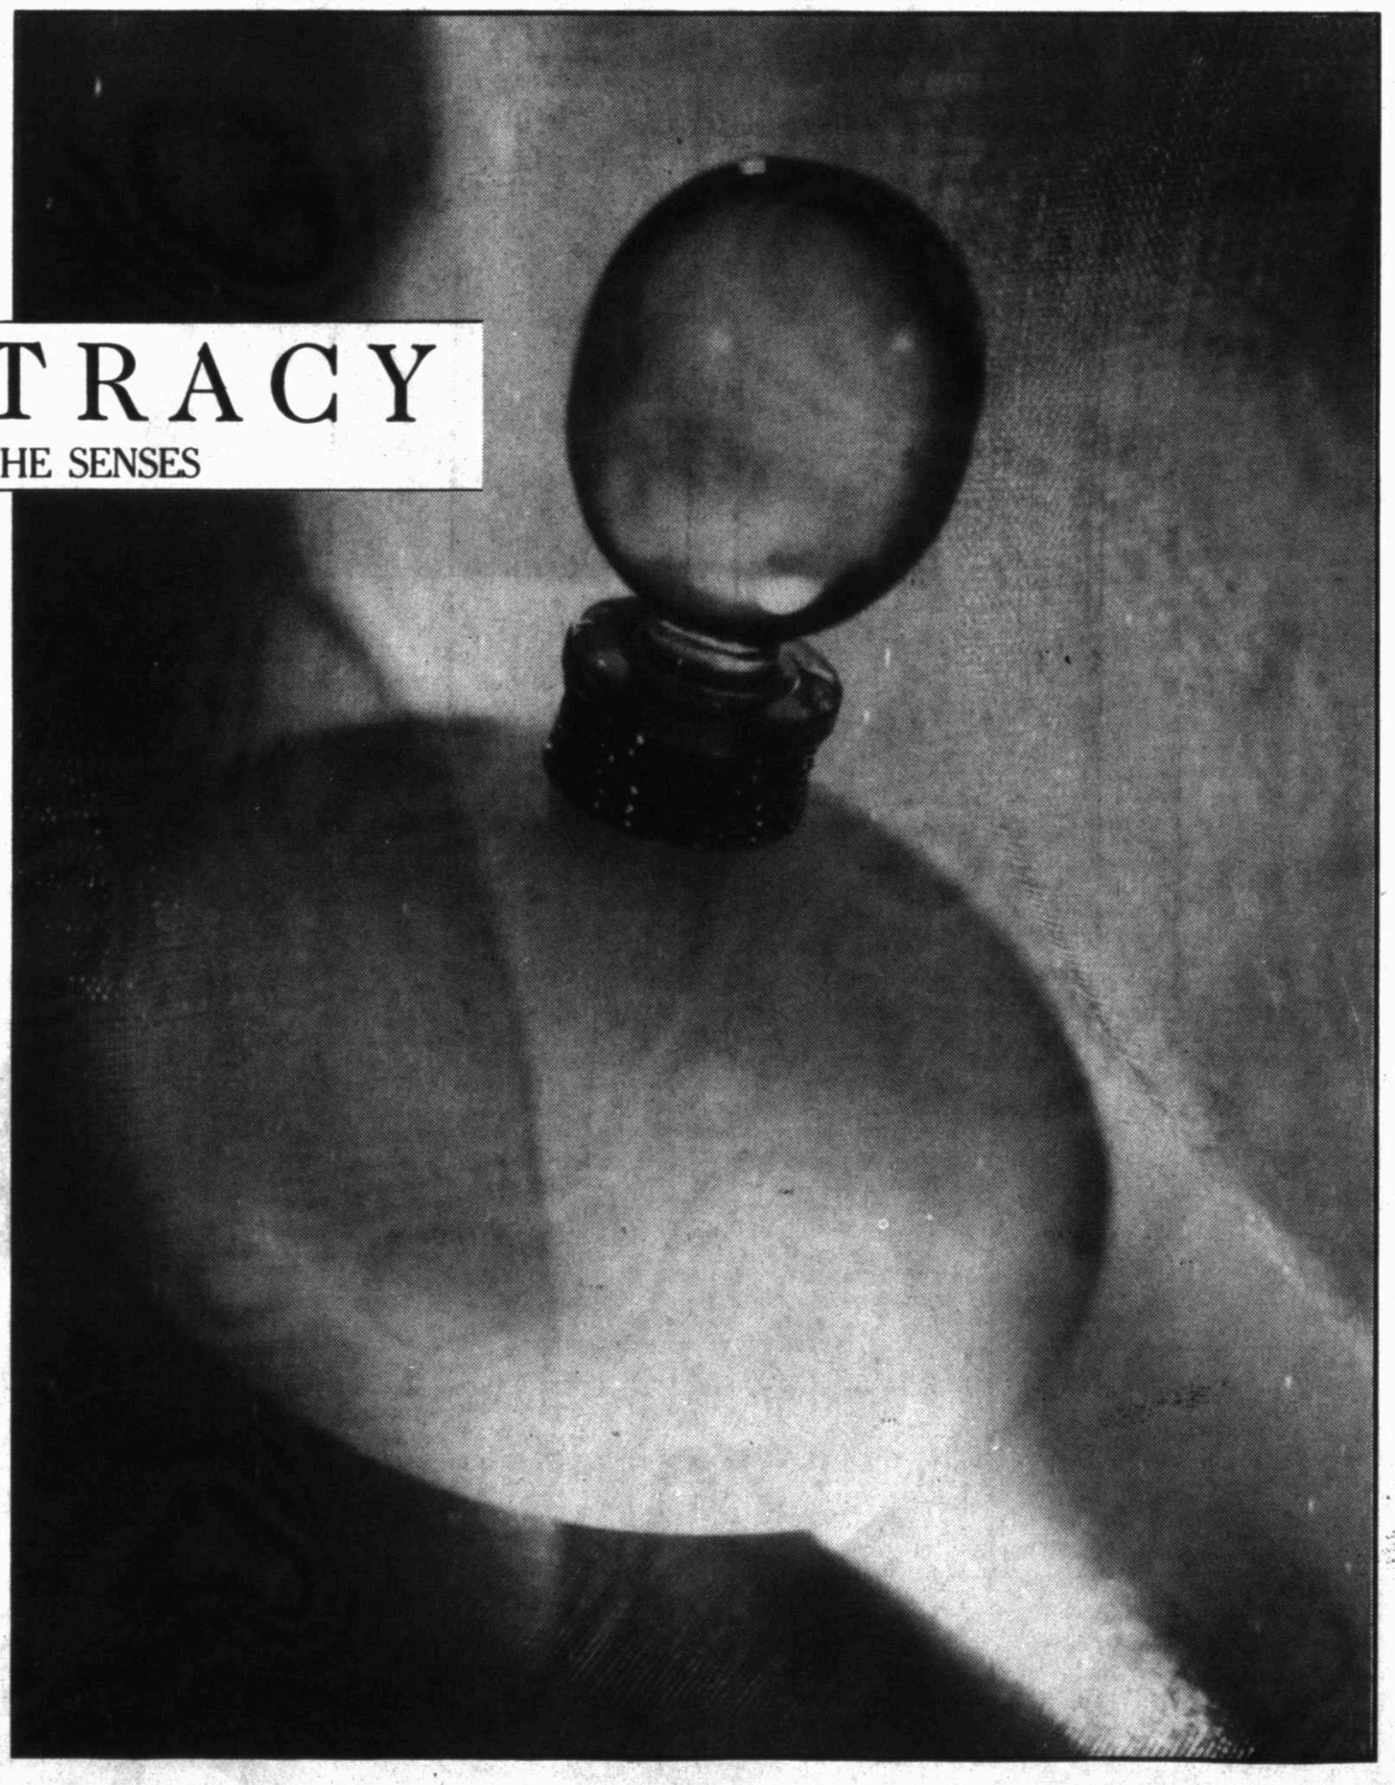

"And Big Spring State Hospital always had a waiting list anywhere from three weeks to three months," Wilson said.

McLean, TCADA and Midland-Odessa area people interested in helping the suffering alcoholic and drug abusers "had the foresight," Wilson said, "and they saw the definite need for a treatment facility right here in Midland and Odessa."

Bosnians still love their late Communist leader

By John Pomfret
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Mustafa Pamuk remembers a day in autumn 1952 when his father, a member of an anti-government Islamic group, came home badly bloodied by the thugs of Yugoslavia's Communist government. He died a few weeks later.

Strangely, a picture of the man ultimately responsible for his father's fate still hangs in Pamuk's office — Josip Broz Tito, the man who made Yugoslavia.

"The man was different from the system," he said. "That's why we love him here."

A Croat, a Communist and an atheist, Tito remains widely popular in this mostly Muslim and decidedly free-market city 12 years after his death.

His picture graces the wall of the presidency although President Alija Izetbegovic was imprisoned under Tito's regime; the military headquarters; schools; hospitals, and homes.

Alone among the former republics of Yugoslavia, the people of this battle-ravaged country still hold the famed Communist leader dear. Tito is credited with saving the Muslims. He granted them status as a nationality in constitutional reforms of 1971.

But the feelings toward Tito in Bosnia, and especially in its capital, are more complex than just gratitude. Tito symbolized Yugoslavia, and the people of Bosnia-Herzegovina, the most ethnically diverse area in the former country, are in a sense the last of the Yugoslavs.

Muslims make up just under half of the republic; Croats 31 percent and Serbs at least 17 percent. In Sarajevo, mixed marriages were common.

In ethnically homogenous Serbia, Tito is now officially accused of being a Croatian ultranationalist, an agent of the Vatican and of plotting to destroy the Serbian Orthodox Church. Montenegro's capital, Titograd, has changed its name.

In Croatia, mention of the man has all but disappeared. His hometown, Kumrovec, once a pilgrimage site for Yugoslavian Communists, has been transformed into an art and crafts center.

In the first eight months of 1991, 10,000 visitors went there, less than half of the previous year and a fraction of the 200,000 that made the journey each year in the 1980s and before.

Pamuk, the 55-year-old head of Sarajevo's city assembly, was himself booted from the Communist Party in 1976 for disagreeing with Tito's centralized market policies. Still he admires the late leader.

"Tito saved us. He created us," Pamuk said, looking up at a reprint of a charcoal sketch of Tito.

Chamorro overhauls police due to pressure

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Violeta Chamorro took steps Saturday to overhaul the National Police, a bastion of Sandinista power opposed by U.S. officials who forced a cutoff in desperately needed aid.

But despite pressure from the Bush administration and right-wing congress members, Mrs. Chamorro named as the corp's new director a Sandinista with a spotty record on human rights.

Mrs. Chamorro, who defeated the Sandinistas in 1990 elections, announced the retirement of police chief Rene Vivas and 11 other high-ranking Sandinista officers.

She also announced creation of a Vice-Ministry for Citizens' Security and appointed a civilian, Ronald Aviles, 46, to the post.

Interior Minister Alfredo Mendieta said Aviles would be the immediate boss of new police chief Fernando Caldera, 37, a former National Police commander.

It could make for an uneasy partnership.

During the 1980s Contra war, Aviles was a staunch anti-Sandinista and said he was jailed "several times" by Caldera between 1984 and 1986.

Caldera is considered responsible for the July 1986 expulsion of anti-Sandinista Roman Catholic Bishop Pablo Vega. Vega was taken to the Honduran border and, shoeless, shoved across by Sanginista security forces.

Vega, who later returned to Nicaragua, described Caldera on Saturday as "dogmatic" and "partisan."

The southeast region of Nicaragua, where Caldera was security chief, was a region of extensive sympathy for U.S.-backed Contra forces. Several ex-Contra leaders and clergy have accused Caldera of harsh tactics against anti-Sandinistas.

"I have a clear conscience," said Caldera at a news conference. "My only big crime is to have had responsibility for a certain zone in time of war."

Mendieta denied the changes were due to pressure from Washington. He said the fact they came now was "a coincidence."

Six days ago, a congressional drafted by arch-conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., demanded, among other things, removal of Sandinistas from command of the army and police.

Mrs. Chamorro also announced a new law demanding the police force be "apolitical and professional."

The Sandinista Front, then a leftist guerrilla army, took power in 1979 and governed until April 1990. It received 41 percent of the 1990 vote and is still the largest single party.

The Bush administration supported Mrs. Chamorro morally and financially until June when, at the request of key U.S. congressmen, it suspended $104 million in aid.

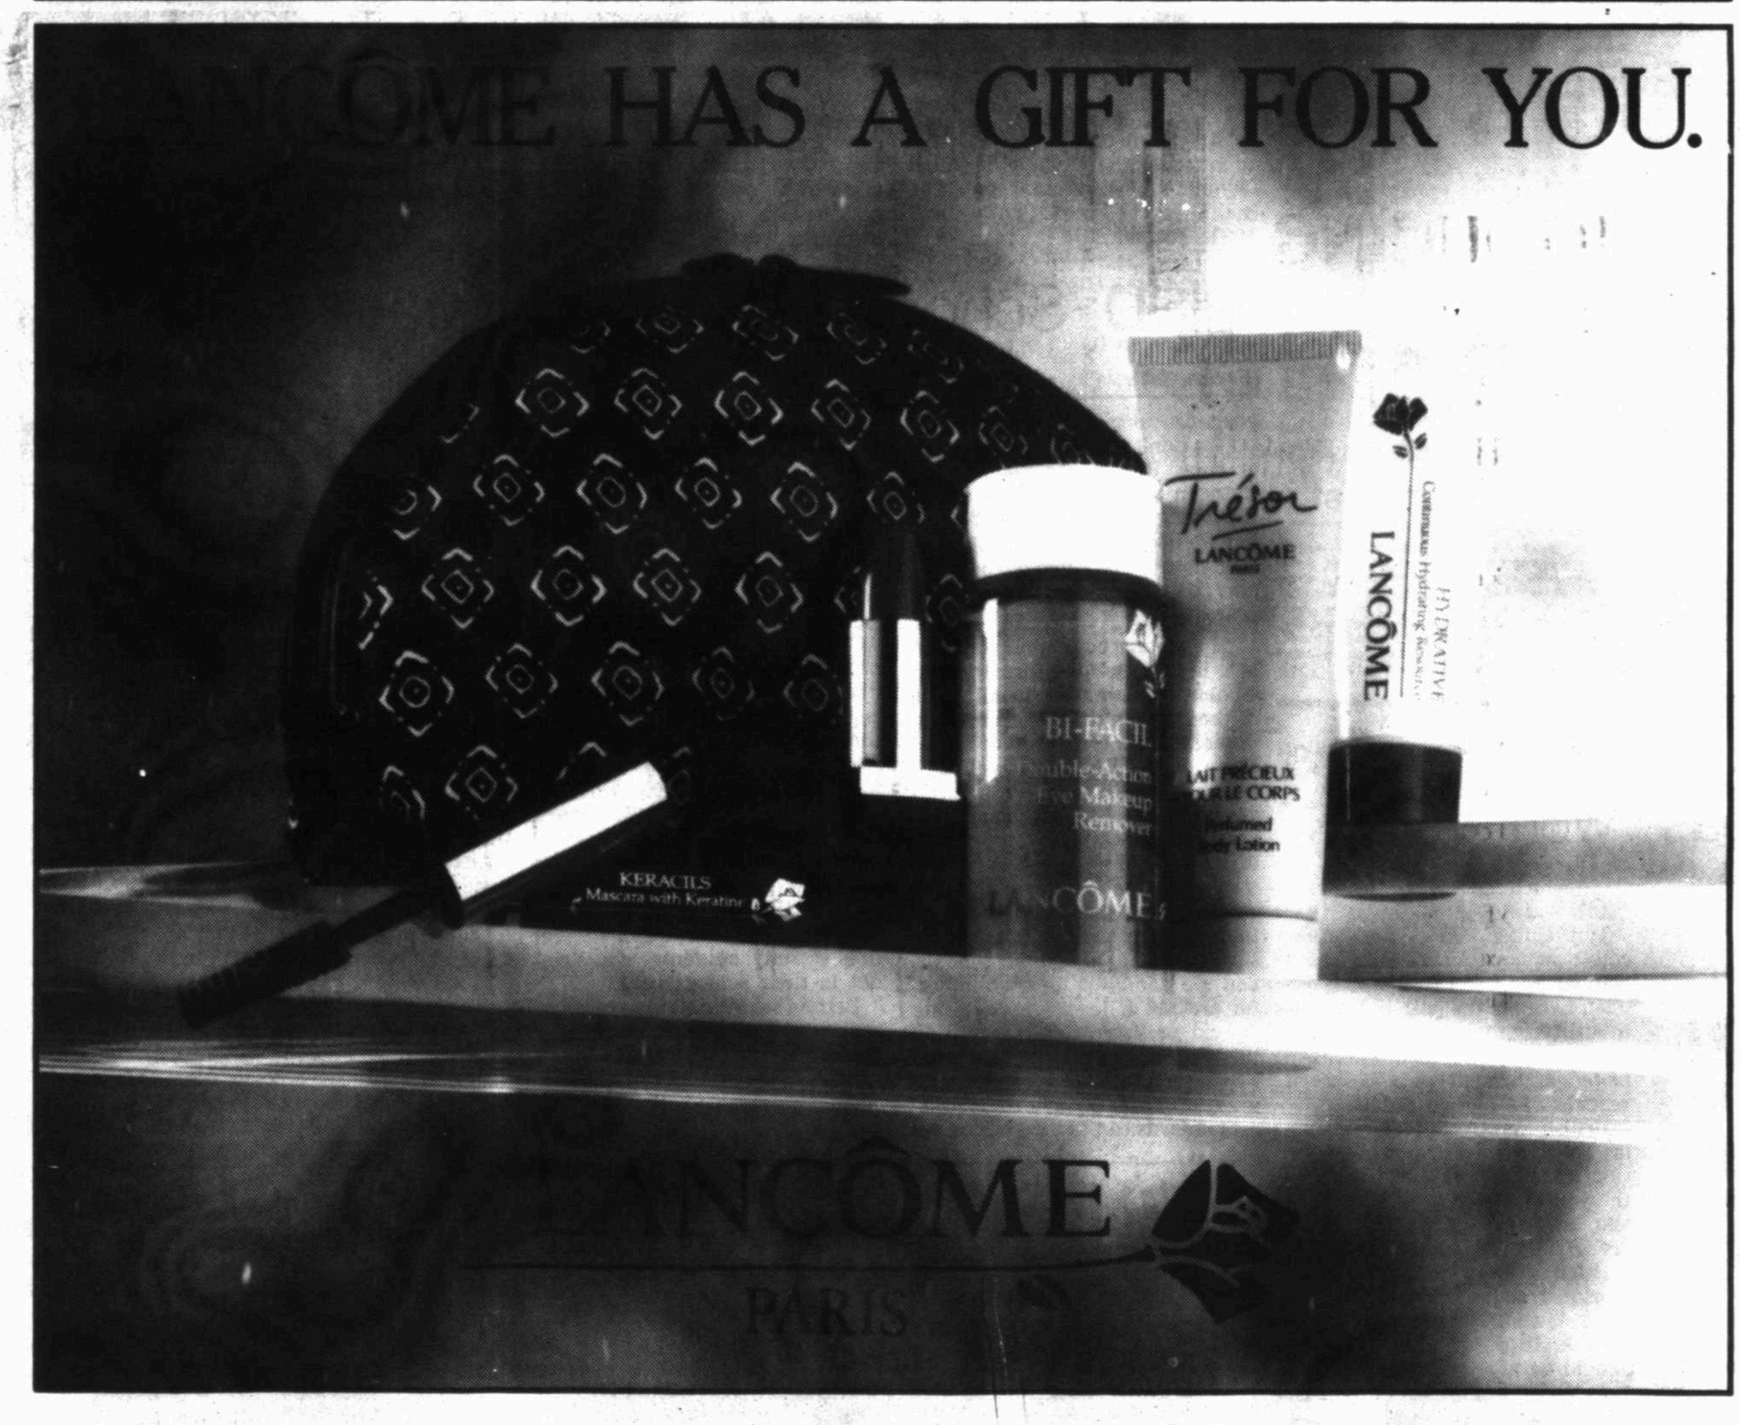

The congressmen said the aid should not be released until the Sandinistas were weakened through reform of security forces.

Labor Day looks sunny

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-90s and south winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Labor Day should be sunny with a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 69, Saturday's high reached 97 compared to the record high for that date of 104 set in 1948. The record low for that date is 56 set in 1973.

STATE

Intense thunderstorms were seen Saturday in southern parts of West Texas while temperatures soared in South Texas and partly cloudy skies hovered over North Texas.

In the west, thunderstorms were reported along Big Bend and the southern Permian Basin. Elsewhere, skies were mostly sunny as readings stayed in the 80s, some 90s.

Down along the coastal areas, showers and thunderstorms were reported, many in the Houston area.

Coastal stations not in the rain areas were reporting mostly cloudy skies. The rest of South Texas had partly cloudy skies. The mercury rose up to 99 degrees in some areas.

For the north, skies cleared to partly cloudy over north Central Texas, but remained partly to mostly cloudy over the northeast.

NATION

The Labor Day weekend began as a wet one, with thunderstorms drenching large parts of the nation Saturday, as they have for most of the week. The rain caused scattered street flooding in Georgia.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over parts of the East Coast, the eastern Gulf of Mexico, the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, the central Plains and the Texas Gulf Coast.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

FLORIDA: Volunteers swamp hurricane-damaged areas

drew Juanchi's death at Coral Park High School.

"It's possibly going to be SIDS (sudden infant death syndrome)," said police Detective George Reyes. "We don't have a cause. The medical examiner still has to do the autopsy."

At a disaster relief center north of here, Jackie Luongo was among a group of volunteers from the First Presbyterian Church of Fort Lauderdale who spent the holiday weekend helping hurricane victims.

"I came out of guilt," said Ms. Luongo, 36, pausing from unloading a truck load of baby food. "I'm from Fort Lauderdale, and I'm real glad it wasn't us."

The Miami U.S. attorney's office, meanwhile, joined the FBI and other agencies in recruiting experts on architecture and engineering to look for "systematic violations" of building codes, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Dan Gelber.

Dade County, in a separate action, plans to send inspectors to look for substandard construction, and officials promised to discipline sloppy contractors. Penalties include loss of license and fines of $5,000 per offense.

In Homestead, where as many as 80 percent of the homes are unsafe to live in, officials implemented tougher rebuilding requirements for roofs, including thicker plywood and more nails for shingles.

Doug Bloss, a contractor from Lighthouse Point, said it will take more than new building codes to improve the quality of construction. He said the codes must be strictly enforced.

"The requirements weren't followed in the first place," he said. "Good builders always build to standards or above. The bad ones build below standards no matter what the standards are."

Engineers searching through the rubble have found evidence of slipshod construction, including improperly stapled plywood, missing nails and poorly installed windows. At least two lawsuits allege defective construction made homes overly susceptible to hurricane damage.

Among those lawsuits was one filed by a couple in the Country Walk development, where street after street of wood-frame houses were decimated. The plaintiffs claim the developer, Arvida-JMB Partners, sold them defective homes.

The developer has defended its building practices.

As many as 60,000 homes may have been destroyed by the fierce hurricane that cut a swath across South Florida on Aug. 24. The hurricane was blamed for 51 deaths in Florida, Louisiana and the Bahamas.

In Florida, damage was estimated at $20 billion, but the actual amount may be much higher. Allstate Insurance Co. said it alone expected $1.2 billion in damage claims, four times the amount the firm paid out for Hurricane Hugo in 1989.

On the first day of the Labor Day weekend, many people traveled to the hard-hit communities of Homestead and Cutler Ridge to participate in the relief effort, while troops went house-to-house trying to persuade people in damaged homes to move to a tent city.

The South Dade High School athletic field became a tent encampment for several hundred Morman volunteers from throughout the southeastern United States. They clambered into troop trucks driven by members of the Army's 10th Mountain Division from Fort Drum, N.Y., and began fanning out into the stricken neighborhoods to help in the cleanup and rebuilding.

"We hear that there are about 6,000 of our own members in this area who are homeless. So we've got to help them and their neighbors," said Bernd Larsen, a lay bishop from Dunedin, near Tampa.

Throughout Homestead and surrounding communities, military troops and civilian volunteers sweated in the sticky heat as they lugged away tree trunks, roofing and other debris.

In other developments:

■ On the day the hurricane struck, an executive at American International Group, one of the nation's largest insurers, wrote a memo calling the hurricane a chance to raise premiums. "This is an opportunity to get price increases now," wrote J.W. Greenberg, an executive vice president and son of company Chairman Maurice Greenberg. "We must be the first and it begins by establishing the psychology with our own people."

■ The Army is providing tents, generators, fuel, lights and water for 66 polling places by Sept. 8 for Dade County's primary, which was delayed a week because of the hurricane. Military personnel will stay outside the polling places while they are being used.

MCGREGOR: Incoming city manager readies for job week, McGregor was appointed to succeed City Manager Fred Poe, who officially steps down on Jan. 31, 1993.

McGregor, 41, will bring 19 years of city management experience with him. He has worked for the city of Midland for nine years — including 5½ as Deputy City Manager.

Already he has a list of both long- and short-term issues confronting the city.

But McGregor's overwhelming confidence in city employees makes him a believer that the work is in good hands.

"We have an excellent city staff. It is probably one of the most professional and competent groups in the country for a city this size," he said. "Our management group is a good mix of private sector experience and city type experience. This is very important in approaching the problems with different views."

The issues at the top of his list include airport concerns and the budget.

AIRPORT:

"A decision on whether we want to remodel the existing terminal or build a new terminal should be made in the next two years," McGregor said.

"There are a lot of problems ahead ... the condition of the jetways, structural and mechanical problems and many others."

McGregor believes the airport situation should be addressed within the next two or three years.

"It will take three to five years to make the decision, conduct the bidding and actually perform the work. It could be as late as 1997-'98 before final results are realized," he said.

By that time, the terminal will be nearing 40 years old.

BUDGET:

The budget problem is fueled by the continuing devaluation of downtown office property.

The city's tax base has declined from $3.6 billion in 1986 to $2.4 billion in 1992 — a 33 percent decline.

"The good news is that the declines have averaged only two percent each of the past two years," McGregor said. "Economic growth and the continued improvement in the oil and gas business will ultimately make the tax base flat and steady."

McGregor believes there will be one or two more years of small declines before an upswing.

"I have a pretty good feeling about the worst of the oil and gas business being over," he said. "And each year we're becoming more diversified and regional."

CITY INFRASTRUCTURE:

McGregor cited the city infrastructure as another important item on the city's agenda.

Because of budget cuts since 1986, the city has fallen behind on infrastructure concerns — specifically, street seal-coating and water-sewer maintenance.

"I am comfortable that the council will seriously consider a small certificate of obligation program to catch us up in some of these areas," McGregor said. "Our outstanding debt is declining rapidly, and we will be able to meet some of these needs without major budget problems.

GROWTH:

McGregor is optimistic about growth in the city — both geographically and in terms of population — despite recent announcements by local oil companies of massive layoffs.

The city has issued 200 to 250 new single family housing permits each of the last four years.

"A lot of those layoffs include retirements and transfers. We're seeing a lot of the retiring people staying here," he said.

"There is also a heavy migration in from the smaller towns from retiring people. They've lived in West Texas and want to stay while getting closer to a hospital, stores and other things," he said.

SOLID WASTE AND ENVIRONMENTAL MATTERS:

"Our landfill procedures and methods will change significantly in the next two to three years due to new rules," he said. "We also have significant compliance cost with underground fuel tanks, traffic paint, water monitoring ... many of those areas have already been addressed."

OTHER CONCERNS:

Also on McGregor's agenda are: water; public information and city organization.

"All of this might seem to be an impossible task, but we have the people and resources to meet every one of these opportunities," he said.

Before coming to Midland, McGregor had worked in administrative positions for the cities of Plainview, Tyler and Seminole. He was born in Lubbock.

He received a bachelor's degree and master's degree from Texas Tech University in government and public administration, respectively.

He and his wife, Cindy, have two children: Andrew, 10, and Patrick, 6.

MISD: Schools aim to meet state system standards goals are to meet the standards.

"We don't plan to meet them all at once. But we do plan to get there in repeated improvements. We can have high expectations, but we have to be reasonable," he said, noting that some of the goals may be reachable within four years.

"If a state accountability system is to be successful, information on student achievement in all areas of the curriculum is needed," said Commissioner of Education Lionel Meno, in a recent news release.

The AEIS is in its second full year of usage as the primary measurement for campus comparisons of student performance and district accreditation.

Student assessment is but one of the indicators used to measure the success of Texas' public schools, and the standards for each indicator are set at levels representing "world class standards," according to information published in the September/October ATPE (Association of Texas Principals News).

Standards can indeed be considered world class, with the state standard for passing the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) set at 90 percent of the students taking the test.

The state also would like to see 99 percent of Texas seniors — beginning their senior year — graduate, 70 percent of seniors taking college entrance exams — the SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) and and ACT (American College Testing) program, 35 percent of those students "exceeding criterion" or receiving above-average scores on those exams. Average is described as a combined score of 1,000 or more out of a possible score of 1,500 on the SAT, and a 25 or more out of 36 on the ACT.

The state standards include an astoundingly low dropout rate of 1 percent. Upon closer examination, however, the dropout rate addresses only students who drop out in their senior year.

Denton said the state average of seniors dropping out is about 5 percent and MISD's average rate is usually lower than the state's.

"Since we started reporting this, in 1986 or '87, MISD has been typically lower than the state from as much as .5 percent to 3 percentage points lower," said Larry Lusby, MISD executive director of computer and special services. "Of course, we would like to do even better," he said.

The 1 percent dropout rate also means that 99 percent of seniors, beginning their senior year, will graduate. "That goal is awfully high because so many of the indicators are interrelated," Denton said.

For example, the TAAS test will be made more difficult to pass next year. More seniors are expected to fail the exit-level test than last year when 8,138 failed it and missed graduating with their respective classes. Yet the state standard is for 90 percent to master the test.

"That means that 90 percent of the students taking the TAAS test must score a 70 or better," said Joe Cummins, MISD executive director of planning, evaluation and testing.

"It gets into a Catch-22 situation. The harder you make the test, the less will pass it and graduate, and the more people you have taking the test, the greater likelihood scores will go down," Denton said. "When it comes to interrelated indicators, driving one indicator up will most like drive another one down."

Nonetheless, MISD administrators have accepted the state standards as local goals since local school districts and principals will be held accountable to achieve the standards.

"Every year we will get closer," Denton said. "Some of our schools will score higher (with the indicators). Some may even achieve the goals this year. Others may take longer."

The Texas Education Agency is still considering where to set the standards for some indicators, including the percentage of students passing the Norm-referenced Assessment Program for Texas, the percent of students enrolled and completing advanced courses, and the percentage of students demonstrating oral proficiency in a second language by eighth grade.

SOMALIA: Famine worsens in rural areas, workers say

ation for the American airlift. One of the major warlords in the Somali conflict, Gen. Mohamed Farah Aidid, keeps his headquarters here. "We not want to give him too much credibility," an American official said.

The International Committee of the Red Cross, which says its efforts in Somalia represent the biggest humanitarian relief operation in its history, estimated in July that 1.5 million of Somalia's 4.5 to 6 million people risked death by starvation.

Geoff Loane, the director of relief for the Red Cross in Somalia, said the "dimensions of the problem are so large we haven't revised the figure. But by now, the risk is greater."

"Everyone continues to be shocked every day," Loane said. "The whole relief operation is not moving."

No one knows how many Somalis have died, but the Red Cross puts the figure at above 100,000. Hundreds, if not thousands, die every day.

The long-running famine in Somalia, resulting from drought as well as political chaos caused by devastating clan fighting, drew wide attention this summer, particularly after the U.N. secretary general, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, called attention to the disparity between the world's response to Somalia and to the Yugoslav conflict, which he called the "rich man's war."

The United States and other countries have joined the United Nations and Red Cross, which has been here for the past 18 months, in airlifting tons of food to Somalia. Much of the food has been looted by armed gangs before it reaches distribution points.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd led a European delegation under armed guard through the war-shattered capital, Mogadishu, on Friday and said the country's famine is worsening.

Hurd acknowledged that the world's response to the crisis has been slow and said "U.N. agencies responsible for medical care should be here in Mogadishu taking charge" of hospitals, which are poorly staffed and under-supplied.

U.N. troops are scheduled to arrive soon to guard relief shipments, but their arrival has been delayed by logistical problems, said Sahnoun of the United Nations.

U.N. officials negotiated with the warring Somali factions for months to win approval for the U.N. troops' deployment. The U.N. Security Council has approved plans to send 3,500 troops, but Aidid has agreed only to 500 U.N. soldiers. Pakistan is to provide the troops.

Here in Bardera, emaciated people from the countryside are continuing to stream into the town looking for food.

Chinese appear more open, bold in challenging authorities

By Nicholas D. Kristof
N.Y. Times News Service

BEIJING — The campaign by Deng Xiaoping and other Chinese leaders for faster economic change seems to be having an unintended effect: Dissidents and ordinary citizens are becoming a bit bolder in challenging the authorities.

Partly because the hard-liners appear to be losing ground as the airwaves fill with calls for reform, many Chinese say they find the atmosphere looser and less ominous. Some say that the fear that has gripped the country for the last three years, since the Tiananmen Square crackdown of June 1989, is gradually easing.

Consequently, some dissidents are no longer hiding their activities. They now openly meet with foreign reporters, write for foreign publications and denounce human rights abuses in their country.

Zhang Weiguo, a Shanghai journalist whose newspaper, The World Economic Herald, was closed during the Tiananmen democracy movement, is one of several democracy advocates who seem less afraid of the leadership than it is of him.

"I'm writing more articles now than when I was at The Herald," Zhang said in a recent interview in Shanghai. Since his articles cannot be published in China, he writes about China for leading newspapers in Taiwan and Hong Kong, and he has given telephone interviews to the BBC's Chinese-language service.

The security apparatus is clearly alarmed about such growing boldness, but it seems at a loss how to react. So the authorities settle for harassing Zhang, summoning him periodically for interrogation, as well as threatening him and refusing to allow him to leave Shanghai. But Zhang, who spent more than 20 months in prison after the 1989 crackdown, continues to speak.

Perhaps the only effective way to silence someone so fearless would be to re-arrest him and sentence him to a long prison term. But this might provoke a furor abroad, reinforce the image of China as a brutal and repressive place and increase the chance of American trade sanctions.

The treatment of Zhang is relatively lenient compared with the repression of a few years ago — in 1989, for example, a marine biology student named Chen Lantao was sentenced to 18 years simply for speaking against the government.

As fear diminishes, China may be becoming a more open country — but perhaps a less stable one. For the three years after the army's crackdown, in which hundreds were killed, thousands hurt and many more imprisoned, the peace was preserved through a balance of terror: The people were afraid of the government and the government was afraid of the people.

Some of that fear lingers on both sides, but less than before. Some in the government acknowledge their apprehension that people could eventually take to the streets and overthrow the Communists, but there is a clear division within the leadership about the nature of the threat.

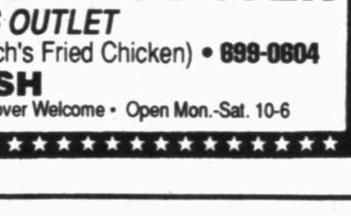

Hard-liners say the risk comes primarily from the dissidents and from contact with the West, and so they favor harsh repression. But others — including Deng, 88, the senior leader — suggest that dissidents will get nowhere as long as the economy is booming, and so the leaders fear trade sanctions perhaps more than outspoken critics.

Anti-terrorist police patrol the night to control Sikh extremists

PATIALA, India (AP) — The convoy of 50 cars and gun-mounted jeeps pulled out at midnight. Until dawn, it rolled through hamlets and rice fields to deny Sikh extremists control of the night.

The convoy passed policemen hidden behind roadside bushes or perched on rooftops in 27 villages where, until now, Sikh separatists have had freedom of movement.

"We wanted to check the terrorists' movement at night and we have succeeded in our mission," said K.P.S. Gill, chief of the Punjab police.

Sikhs are a majority in Punjab, a prosperous agricultural and industrial state in northwestern India, and the militants want to make it an independent Sikh nation.

Gill, a Sikh himself, claims the forces of law are winning after 10 years of violence that has cost more than 15,000 lives. Several Sikh militant leaders have been killed this summer and the insurgency will be "under control" in a few weeks, he said during a break in the patrol.

Militant Sikhs began fighting for their own state in 1982, accusing the federal government of robbing Punjab of its wealth and denying recognition to the culture and traditions of their 500-year-old religion. Sikhs make up only 2 percent of the 850 million people in this predominantly Hindu nation.

More than 2,700 people have been slain this year alone. Militants killed 132 civilians in the first half of August, Gill said, but only 32 in the rest of the month, after Operation Night Dominance began.

The new state government, elected in February after five years of emergency rule by the federal government, has offered amnesty to any militant who surrenders and disavows terrorism. It says more than 100 have responded.

Officials say normalcy is returning to Punjab, but such claims seem exaggerated after a night on patrol.

Punjabis have abandoned their habit of sleeping outdoors, which makes them easy targets for gunmen. The familiar barking of dogs is absent because villagers have complied with orders from the militants to keep pets indoors and kill stray dogs that might betray their movement at night.

Although the rate of killing may have fallen, there is no guarantee it will not rise again. On the night Gill spoke to a reporter, Sikh extremists killed seven people in an adjoining district, singling out relatives of two policemen.

Following the death last month of a founder of the Sikh rebellion, the militants launched a vengeance campaign against families of policemen, killing about 80 people, often in their beds.

"We don't go home very often to visit our parents," a constable said, sitting in the back of a jeep with an AK-47 assault rifle.

No policeman ever gives advance notice of a visit to his village, the officer said, speaking on condition his name not be used.

"These terrorists sleep in palatial houses," he grumbled, "and here we are eating dust at this hour of the morning."

More than 1,800 policemen and paramilitary troopers have been on patrol every night in Patiala and other districts.

Most ride in open jeeps, rifles pointed toward the rice fields.

New conflict in Iran, Iraq threatens centuries-old way of life

AL-AMARAH, Iraq (AP) — At the rim of an eerie desert battlefield of the Iran-Iraq war lie the Abu Fuseima marshes, home of Arab tribes whose centuries-old way of life saw little change until recent years.

First, the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq war took its toll among the so-called marsh Arabs who live in the watery zone that sprawls for 6,000 square miles where the Euphrates and Tigris Rivers meet.

Now, their 3,000-year-old heritage is again under threat as Saddam Hussein battles Shiite Muslim rebels holed up in the vast labyrinth of bayous, reed-covered islands and crane-graced lagoons.

Iraq's southern wetlands of Basra, Misan and Dhiqar provinces have been in turmoil since the failed Shiite uprising in March 1991 after Saddam's army was driven out of Kuwait.

The United States, Britain and France, citing a U.N. human rights report, claim the Iraqi government is persecuting the Shiites and has attacked them with fighter-bombers and helicopter gunships in defiance of U.N. resolutions.

On Aug. 27, the allies decreed a "no-fly" zone for Iraqi warplanes below the 32nd parallel to provide some protection to the Shiites, who make up 55 percent of Iraq's 17 million people.

The government, dominated by minority Sunni Muslims, denies it is attacking the Shiites and claims they are well-treated. Officials insist that any unrest is caused by Iranian infiltrators, rogue soldiers and bandits who attack villagers, loot property and try to destabilize the government.

But Max van der Stoel, the U.N. human rights representative for Iraq, told the Security Council last month that "heavy artillery, fire bombs and even strafing have reportedly been used" against the southern Shiites by government forces.

He and other Western officials, along with Iraqi opposition groups, claim there is a systematic campaign against the Shiites, including moves to drain the marshes for development and exploit the big oilfields that lie below the swamps.

Marsh Arabs who spoke to foreign journalists on government-guided visits to the region said the south's problem did not stem from Baghdad, but from infiltrators from neighboring and predominantly Shiite Iran.

There appeared to be genuine concern about this. The villagers claimed the infiltrators have robbed and murdered, mined roads, blown up at least one power station, tried to bomb a cinema and raped women. The claims could not be independently verified.

Heavy rains cause avalanches; thousands flee

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Avalanches of volcanic debris caused by heavy rains roared down the slopes of Mount Pinatubo on Saturday, causing thousands to abandon their villages, officials said.

Monsoon rains have inundated a wide area around Pinatubo, 60 miles northwest of Manila, and more than 50 people have died during the past few weeks.

The flooded area includes Clark Air Base, which was abandoned by the U.S. Air Force when the volcano erupted in June 1991. The rains have caused debris from that eruption to plunge down Pinatubo's slopes and swell rivers.

Emma Tablanza, an official at the regional disaster coordinating center, said at least three rivers are filled with up to 20 feet of volcanic muck.

Ms. Tablanza said one avalanche destroyed a portion of the fence surrounding Clark, where more than 6,240 people have sought shelter inside hangars.

Lita Aquino, assistant regional director of the Department of Social Welfare, said the avalanches, called lahars, destroyed at least 1,362 houses in the town of Bamban in Pampanga province, east of the volcano.

President Fidel Ramos on Thursday ordered people in heavily affected areas around Pinatubo to evacuate. Ramos authorized soldiers to use force if residents refused to leave.

Ms. Aquino said an estimated 80 percent of 6,000 residents in 15 villages in Bamban had left their homes.

The National Disaster Coordinating Center in Manila said 52 people have died in the floods during the past two weeks. It said 15 people were injured and 21 missing.

EARN EXTRA MONEY AS A GRADUATE OF THE H & R BLOCK INCOME TAX COURSE
Thousands of people learn how to prepare income tax returns from H&R Block and then earn money as income tax preparers. H&R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, offers its Income Tax Course starting Sept. 14th. Morning, and evening, classes are available.
Experienced instructors teach tax law, theory, and application. Classroom discussion and practice problems provide students with a thorough understanding of each tax topic included in the course. Students learn how to handle increasingly complex income tax situations as the course progresses.
Ideal for people who want to increase their tax knowledge, the course teaches students how to save money on their taxes and also prepares them for a rewarding career.
The affordable fee includes textbooks and supplies. Graduates receive Certificates of Achievement and continuing education units (CEU's). Qualified graduates of the course may be offered job interviews with H&R Block but are under no obligation to accept employment.
Those interested in more information about the H&R Block Income Tax Course may contact the H&R Block office at 1101 N. Midkiff or call 697-8087 or 580-3750.

■ Gunmen kill at least 12 in Natal massacres

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Gunmen attacked a group of Inkatha Freedom Party members in a Natal township, killing 10 and wounding 16, police said Saturday.

Two more bodies were found in a nearby area of the township, and police were investigating whether the killings were linked, police Lt. Col. Bill Dennis said.

The victims of the ambush Friday night in Bomela were waiting for a bus to take them to a Inkatha youth congress, Dennis said.

In a speech to the congress Saturday, Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi blamed the rival African National Congress.

"I now say enough is enough," Buthelezi said. "The ANC has to be stopped in its tracks before the future is destroyed."

Police offered a reward of $18,500 for information leading to the killers.

■ Israeli soldiers kill tourist trying to cross border

JERUSALEM — An Israeli patrol shot and killed a German tourist trying to illegally cross the border from the occupied West Bank into Jordan on Saturday, the army reported.

Hans Thomas Peter Schaussen, 31, was killed by an army patrol a half-mile north of the Dead Sea as he was running toward the Jordan River, which forms the border with Jordan, an army statement said.

Schaussen climbed over a security fence near the border about 7:30 a.m. and ignored warning shots fired in the air by soldiers, the statement said.

It said the unarmed German tourist was killed running between the fence and the border, several hundred yards east of the fence.

■ Fire in Athens destroys pine forest, many houses

ATHENS, Greece — A large forest fire burned over a six-mile front north of Athens on Saturday, destroying a pine forest and a number of houses, officials said. The main highway north of the capital was closed to traffic as flames approached it.

The fire started early afternoon when strong winds fanned the flames of a burning garbage heap at Avlona, 26 miles north of Athens. A nearby forest caught fire and by nightfall the flames had reached Malakassa, six miles further south, a fire brigade spokesman said.

The fire burned several houses and threatened many others, but it was not yet clear how much damage had been caused, the officer said. A spokesman at police headquarters in Athens said that no injuries had been reported.

U.N.: Probe indicates plane was shot down

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — A senior U.N. officer said Saturday that an initial investigation indicates an Italian relief plane was shot down by ground-to-air missiles outside Sarajevo.

But an Italian air force general investigating the crash said although he could not rule out a missile hit in Thursday's crash, the probe could take months. The plane's four crewmen were killed and all relief flights were suspended.

In the Bosnian capital, heavy rain and cold, blustery weather quieted the big guns on Saturday, but Bosnia's government said Serbs were using water and electricity cutoffs as new weapons against the city's residents.

Fighting flared elsewhere in Bosnia-Herzegovina. Bosnia's Health Ministry said for the 24-hour period ending at noon Saturday, 20 people had died and 182 were wounded republic-wide, including six dead and 79 wounded in Sarajevo.

More than 8,000 people have died — some estimates say up to 35,000 — and tens of thousands are missing in Bosnia's civil war, which began after Muslims and Croats voted for independence from Serbian-dominated Yugoslavia. An estimated 2 million people are refugees.

The senior U.N. officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said according to an initial investigation, two missiles — either Stingers or Strelas — were used to shoot down the relief plane. Strelas are the Yugoslav versions of SAM-7 ground-to-air missiles.

Previously, Western officials have said there was evidence the twin-turboprop transport may have been downed by an anti-aircraft missile.

The U.N. officer, who visited the mountainous crash site southwest of the city, told The Associated Press that missiles hit the plane as it was between 4,000 feet to 6,000 feet and descending toward Sarajevo's airport. He said one missile hit the engine, which explained why part of it was found far from the main crash site.

Brig. Gen. Luciano Battisti, chief of flight safety for the Italian air force, said if the plane was indeed shot down, a "man-portable, infrared missile" was used. He called for an investigation to determine which party in Bosnia's conflict possesses such a weapon.

Troops of Bosnia's Muslim, Croat and Serb factions all operate around the area where the Italian plane crashed. Serb and government officials have blamed each other.

Battisti, who spoke at Sarajevo's airport, where U.N. soldiers loaded four body bags with the crews' remains onto a C-130 transport plane, said he was bringing pieces of the plane to Italy for investigation. The biggest piece was about 6 feet long and appeared to be part of the turboprop.

The U.N. airlift to the besieged Bosnian capital was suspended after the crash. In Geneva, the chairmen of a peace conference called for an emergency meeting of the warring parties in to discuss a resumption of humanitarian relief flights.

The airlift, which has so far delivered about 1,000 planeloads of food and aid, is considered vital for the survival of Sarajevo's 400,000 remaining inhabitants.

In a related development, the United Nations' top peacekeeping official said the U.N. secretary-general would recommend to the Security Council a "considerable enlargement of both the mandate and the strength" of U.N. forces in Bosnia.

The official, Marrack Goulding, in the Croatian capital of Zagreb, said U.N. peacekeepers could provide military escorts to humanitarian land convoys or use military trucks and drivers to deliver the goods themselves on especially dangerous routes.

He said a decision about new ground troops was "very urgent," but that there were no immediate plans for military planes to escort relief flights.

There are about 15,000 U.N. soldiers deployed in Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina. Goulding did not say how many additional troops he would recommend.

In Sarajevo, water pressure dropped or taps ran dry in the few parts of the city that still have running-water supplies, and Bosnian officials accused Serb militiamen, who control the main reservoir outside the Bosnian capital, of cutting back the supply.

Team sets out to look for tidal wave victims

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A team of 40 motorcyclists will comb the most remote parts of the Pacific coast to seek survivors of an earthquake-triggered tidal wave that killed at least 116 people, an official said Saturday.

But National Emergency Committee Director Jaime Icabalceta told a news conference he feared many of the missing, especially the children, are dead.

Icabalceta said most children were sleeping when the tidal wave hit Tuesday evening and did not have time to escape. About half 153 missing people are 4 years old or younger, officials said.

An odd, wind-like roar before the 7:30 p.m. tidal wave alerted many adults to the danger and they fled. Some of those caught in the wave often were able to swim to safety, but many sleeping infants were helpless.

Homes of 16,000 people were destroyed or damaged by the wave, caused by an undersea earthquake.

Icabalceta appealed to private aid donors, such as radio stations which took a lead in collecting and distributing help, to coordinate efforts with the emergency committee.

He said officials were receiving enough supplies to meet victims' needs, helped by an influx of foreign donations.

Health Minister Ernesto Salmeron, a member of the motorbike team departing today, said the destruction of sewage systems and other health facilities has increased the danger of cholera and other diseases.

Icabalceta said government officials will begin distributing U.S.-donated plastic sheeting for temporary shelters. He also announced plans to clean up the devastated zone and build temporary latrines to halt the spread of disease.

The earthquake that caused the tidal wave was recorded at 7 on the Richter scale. More than 190 aftershocks had been recorded by Saturday, according to Claudio Gutierrez of the Nicaraguan Land Institute.

He said the largest temblor Saturday measured 5.5 on the Richter scale.

Officials complain that red tape delays aid

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Four months after the Los Angeles riots caused $1 billion damage to thousands of businesses and homes, only $30 million — or 10 percent — of the $300 million in disaster loans pledged by the Bush administration has been paid, officials say.

While federal assistance arrived soon after the violence was quelled, local officials complain that bureaucratic red tape has delayed the disbursement of the rest of the loans to help the city's businesses and homeowners rebuild.

"It's been very slow," said Los Angeles Councilwoman Rita Walters, a member of the council's Ad Hoc Committee on the Recovery. "It's really been an arduous process.

"They (federal officials) need to take into consideration that when disaster hits people, they are overwrought and they need to see a response as fast as possible."

Shortly after the riots, Bush visited Los Angeles and pledged $300 million in loans from the Small Business Administration for business and home owners wanting to rebuild and another $300 million for immediate disaster relief for food and shelter.

In the months since the violence sparked by the acquittals of four Los Angeles police officers in the Rodney King brutality trial, the Federal Emergency Management Agency has paid $11.2 million to those needing immediate assistance, officials say.

Payments by the FEMA disaster field office, which has since ended its supervision of response to the riots, included $7 million to 2,521 people who were unable to make their rent or mortgage payments and $1.6 million to 2,941 people unable to work because of the riots.

The state and federal governments also have paid $53 million to repair local streets, bridges and other infrastructure damaged by the riots, officials said.

"The initial response was extraordinarily quick," said Los Angeles Councilman Mark Ridley-Thomas, who chairs the recovery committee.

But other federal programs have been slower in responding.

City officials are awaiting $19 million from a federal Weed-and-Seed Program that will deliver $1 million to law enforcement agencies to fight crime and $18 million to social service agencies for job training and housing.

"None of the funds have been allocated but federal, state and city officials are developing a plan," said Vallee Bunting, a spokeswoman for Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley.

United Auto Workers approve agreement ending GM strike

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Members of a United Auto Workers local on Saturday approved an agreement ending a strike that had idled nearly 43,000 General Motors Corp. employees around the country and closed nine assembly plants.

About 98 percent of the 800 members who voted, approved the deal, said Robert Hall, a member of the elections committee that counted the votes. Eighteen members voted against the pact, Hall said.

Members of United Auto Workers Local 1714 met privately for about an hour to discuss the contract before voting. Representatives of GM and the 2,400-member local had reached tentative agreement on the pact early Saturday.

It ends a strike at GM's Lordstown parts plant that began Aug. 27 when union workers walked off their jobs over such issues as job security, health, safety, hiring of non-union workers and GM's plans to close a tool-and-die shop that employs 240 people.

The strike in turn closed nine General Motors assembly plants that ran out of parts, idling 42,900 people.

Workers at Lordstown could begin returning to their jobs as early as Saturday night, said John Hutchins, a member of the union committee that negotiated the agreement.

The company said it was unsure when the nine plants idled by the strike would be able to re-open.

Dave Fascia, who chaired the union's negotiations, said the agreement saves the 240 tool-and-dye jobs and ensures that 160 vacancies at the plant will be filled by GM workers laid off elsewhere. About 140 new positions will be created through production of GM's Saturn and J cars, he said.

The J cars include the Chevrolet Cavalier and Pontiac Sunbird built at the Lordstown assembly plant, which is adjacent to the parts plant.

Fascia said the agreement also covers health and safety issues, but didn't elaborate.

GM officials weren't immediately available for comment after the vote was disclosed.

Earlier, Gerald A. Knechtel, vice president of personnel for GM North American Operations, said he wouldn't discuss details of the agreement until after it was approved by the union.

"After nine days of intense bargaining we and the UAW were able to reach an equitable solution to the local problem at the GM Lordstown Fabrication Plant," he said in a statement.

He said the agreement doesn't hurt the company's plans for restructuring. GM announced last year it will close 21 plants and eliminate about 60,000 hourly positions in the United States and Canada by 1995.

Warren Davis, Region 2 director of the United Auto Workers, warned that the agreement may not end GM's disputes with unions.

■ Strikes loom in municipal, teacher disputes

PHILADELPHIA — Trash collectors spilled out of a closed-door meeting last week shouting "Strike! Strike!" and brandishing signs warning Mayor Edward G. Rendell: "Hands off our benefits!"

While Rendell relaxed at the New Jersey shore, union activists drummed up anticipation of what could be the city's largest walkout ever.

Besides more than 15,000 members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees poised to strike, 20,000 members of the American Federation of Teachers also may walk out, affecting nearly 200,000 students.

While the teachers' negotiations with the School District of Philadelphia are separate, municipal union leaders say they would benefit from the added numbers.

It remained unclear, however, whether either strike was imminent. The teachers union has a midnight Monday strike deadline and members were set to meet Monday evening either to ratify a contract or vote on striking, but negotiators said they would stay in contact with the school district.

"If I were a weather forecaster, I'd say there's a 100 percent chance of a strike Tuesday," said teachers union president Ted Kirsch. "But weather forecasters have been known to be wrong."

The municipal workers weren't talking to the city, but they had no strike deadline.

■ Police answer suspect's pager, arrest customers

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. — Gregory Bolling couldn't come to the phone because he was in the police lockup, charged with selling cocaine.

So police answered his pager — and arrested two people who wanted to make a deal.

"We told them Greg was tied up, but we could make the delivery," said police Lt. Stephen Looby. "They were happy with that, so we went."

Detectives sold soap powder to the pair, who had ordered $20 worth of cocaine, police said.

Arthur O'Donnell, 26, of West Hartford and Nina Gosselin, 27, of Hartford were charged early Friday with criminal attempt to possess cocaine.

Bolling, 20, was arrested Thursday night following a six-month investigation, police said.

Looby said Bolling probably didn't deal in large quantities of cocaine, but apparently did a lot of business in the West Hartford area.

Bolling's pager continued beeping hours after the arrest of his would-be customers. None of the other calls led to arrests, Looby said.

■ Georgia's Daily News closes, recession blamed

The Daily News of Gwinnett County, Ga., published its last issue on Sunday.

The newspaper's owner, The New York Times Co., announced last month that it was closing the suburban Atlanta paper, which it acquired five years ago.

The printing plant and other assets of The Daily News, which has a weekday circulation of 50,000 copies and a Sunday circulation of 44,000, are being acquired by Cox Enterprises Inc., publisher of The Atlanta Journal and Constitution. The paper has 290 employees, some of whom have accepted transfers to other newspapers owned by the Times Co.

The Gwinnett Daily News was established in 1965 from a small weekly, the Gwinnett News-Herald, which was founded in 1898. The Times Co. acquired the paper in July 1987 and moved its operations to a new color printing plant in 1990. "Despite these and other investments — and an increase in circulation by almost twofold since 1987 — the newspaper lost money each year since its acquisition," a Times Co. news release said.

The Daily News was acquired "at a time when Gwinnett County was among the fastest growing in the nation," the release continued. "Readers were enthusiastic, but advertising revenues lagged as the national and local economies were hit by recession."

Bush rips Clinton's environmental record

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — President Bush accused Democrat Bill Clinton on Saturday of presiding over "the worst environmental record in the world" in Arkansas and being the real villain in pandering to voters.

Bush mixed sharp invective against Clinton with efforts to reach out to Democrats and swing voters as he began a three-day Labor Day weekend campaign tour of southern and battleground industrial states.

He courted Reagan Democrats in Ohio by promoting his health-care proposals, then made a house call on a Democratic family in North Carolina.

"You never thought we'd show up, did you?" Bush told Roy and Diantha Harris when he and first lady Barbara Bush showed up at their house in Asheville for lunch.

Harris had invited Bush to his home during a live CBS interview with Bush in the Rose Garden last July 1. Harris was among a number of White House visitors invited to be in the audience.

Harris told reporters he was a registered Democrat and sidestepped a question on whether he would vote for Bush. "Everybody's pleased," by the first family's visit, Harris said.

'We will leave Gov. Clinton in Arkansas, struggling with the worst environmental record in the world.'

—George Bush

A day after Clinton won the endorsement of the Sierra Club, one of the nation's leading conservationist organizations, Bush told an airport rally in Greenville, S.C.: "We will leave Gov. Clinton in Arkansas, struggling with the worst environmental record in the world."

Later, Bush stood in a driving rainstorm at the North Carolina Apple Festival here and told a crowd: "Governor Clinton accused me of pandering" in distributing hurricane assistance and other federal aid.

"Now, that's the same guy that (former Massachusetts Sen.) Paul Tsongas called the 'Pander Bear.' You remember that in the primary. Now he's acting like Goldilocks, saying: 'Somebody's been sleeping in my bed!'"

The Clinton campaign responded quickly to both the environmental and the pandering accusations.

"It really sounds like the president has spent too much time in his own septic tank," said Clinton research director Betsey Wright.

"Arkansas is one of the only states to meet all federal standards of the Clean Air Act. We rank among the highest in water quality. I don't know what he's talking about."

Gene Sperling, a Clinton aide, dismissed Bush's accusation of Clinton as pandering. After Bush doled out some $8 billion in the past week for U.S. farmers and arms manufacturers, the president "sounds more like the tooth fairy," Sperling said.

Bush began his four-state day of campaigning in Ohio. "We're going after Gov. Clinton and we're going to do him in," Bush said at an Octoberfest festival in Painesville, near Cleveland.

Wheat subsidies merely reshuffle existing efforts

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Wheat farmers who were promised $1 billion in export subsidies by President Bush on Wednesday will find that sum more than offset by reductions in domestic programs that help them, Bush administration officials now acknowledge.

The administration is counting on the increase in exports to result in slightly higher domestic wheat prices. The higher prices in turn would reduce government payments to farmers under domestic programs.

The farmers will still come out slightly ahead because of the higher prices. A third of their crop is not covered by federal price guarantees and farmers actually receive the market price. But the largesse will be far less than the impression created by the president.

Public statements from the Agriculture Department and the White House on Wednesday did not spell out how the federal government would pay for the subsidies, and administration officials did little to counteract the impression this week that the subsidies represented a new bonanza for wheat farmers.

Robert E. Grady, the executive associate director of the Office of Management and Budget and the White House's top expert on export finance, said that the administration had not tried to mislead anyone and that few journalists had asked him about the budget consequences of the program.

But he added that the administration's explanations of the program might have been inadequate. "That may be part of our broader communications failure," Grady said.

Woman quits force to open restaurant for city's homeless

By Don Terry
N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — When Lisa Nigro was still packing a pistol for a living she decided she could do a lot more for her patch of this troubled world by carrying pots and pans instead.

At the time, Ms. Nigro was a Chicago police officer fed up with just locking up bad guys.

She dragged her family to soup kitchens to volunteer and made a point of giving information about drug counseling and emergency housing to the street people she met and sometimes arrested.

Her comrades in blue not so kindly tagged her "The Social Worker."

So after three years on the job, frustrated with the red tape and the sight of so many Americans going without, Ms. Nigro quit the police department and in 1991 opened a "restaurant" for the homeless called the Inspiration Cafe.

"The fact that the government takes so long to help people is what really inspired me," the 31-year-old Ms. Nigro said Thursday. "My philosophy is, 'Just get out there and help.' "

Seven days a week, the cafe serves homeless men and women breakfast and a good portion of respect, as well as job counseling and advice on housing, in a restaurant-style setting in the struggling Uptown neighborhood on the city's north side. Dinner is served on weekends.

Volunteers, including actors, firefighters, writers, and real estate agents, serve as "waiters" and take orders from the homeless "guests" sitting at tables with flowers.

If the eggs are too runny or the toast is burnt, the order is taken back and prepared all over again.

Clinton, on conservative turf, rips Bush for 'big spending'

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Democrat Bill Clinton, campaigning in the Republican Party's conservative southern base, sought Saturday to turn the tables on President Bush, blaming him for "big government spending in Washington."

Opening a Labor Day weekend swing here, Clinton spoke to a friendly audience on the Statehouse grounds. A sign saying "Vietnam vets for Clinton" bobbed in the air. But a single-engine plane circled overhead, trailing a banner that said: "No draft dodgers for president."

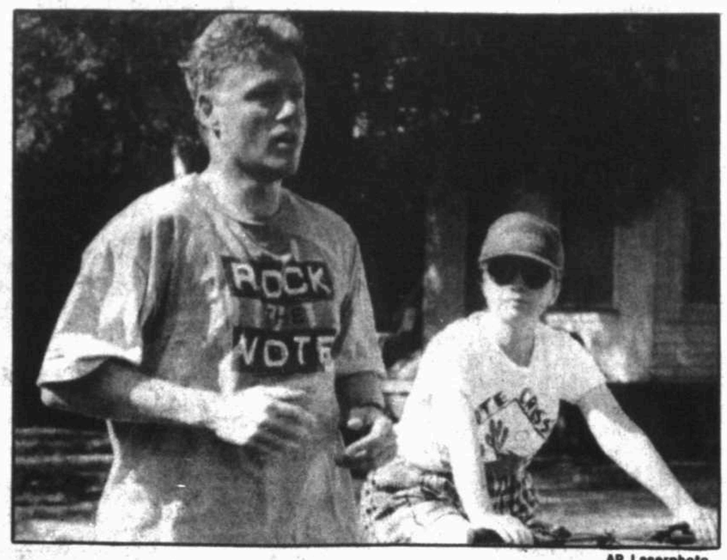

Undaunted, Clinton disclaimed the fiscal liberal label Bush has sought to affix to him and said it was the president and his Republican followers who were actually to blame for the nation's budget woes.

"They're the ones that are increasing big government spending in Washington," Clinton declared, adding that Bush had presided over the biggest peacetime spending increase in U.S. history.

Clinton added that in one year alone the White House's staff budget increased by 23 percent.

"I, the Democrat, have proposed a 25 percent decrease ... Give us a chance to get a hold of it," he said.

Bush spokeswoman Torie Clarke said Clinton, by accusing Bush of being a big spender, is "trying to run from his own economic plan.

AP Laserphoto

Bill Clinton and his wife Hillary hit the streets of their neighborhood Saturday morning. Clinton will be heading to South Carolina later in the day to begin a Labor Day weekend of campaigning.

... He has promised the American people $157 billion in new taxes on everybody and $220 billion more in federal spending."

Clinton has proposed tax increases on the wealthiest 2 percent of Americans and on businesses; Republicans say the business tax increases would be passed on to consumers and would cost jobs.

Clinton was campaigning in a state that has voted Republican in five of the last six presidential contests and gave Bush a resounding 62 percent in 1988.

The Arkansas governor made it plain he considered South Carolina and a number of other traditionally Republican states ripe for the pitch that Bush is an out-of-touch friend of the wealthy who has forgotten the rest of the nation.

D'Amato letter appears to aid reputed organized crime figure

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Three months after the Senate Ethics Committee chastised Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., for failing to adequately supervise mailings from his office, he sent a letter to a federal agency that appeared to lobby on behalf of a businessman with reported strong tries to the Gambino organized-crime family.

Peter Castellana, a cousin of the late Gambino crime family boss Paul Castellano, had been having difficulty buying a meat-processing plant on New York's Long Island.

After Castellana's real-estate broker wrote to D'Amato asking for help on his client's behalf, D'Amato's office sent a letter, dated Nov. 26, 1991, bearing the senator's signature to the Resolution Trust Corp., the federal agency controlling the property.

The letter noted that the senator's office tries "to be responsive to all inquiries and communications" and then in capital letters demanded that the federal agency respond to Castellana's complaints "within four weeks of your receipt of this request."

An investigation into election, court and property records and interviews with officials involved in the transaction did not uncover that D'Amato had done anything illegal in trying to assist Castellana.

Nonetheless, the episode shows that, by going out of his way to help all constituents who ask, and, by his own account, without ever questioning their backgrounds, D'Amato can find himself in the politically embarrassing situation of helping out people of questionable character.

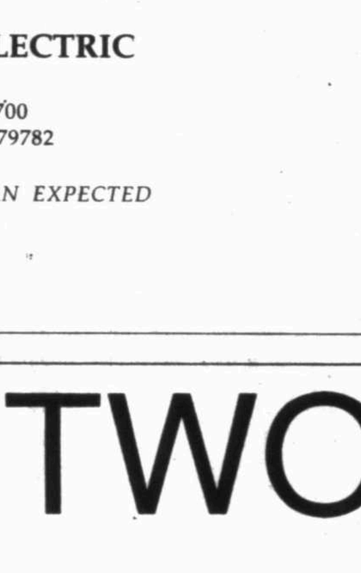

Law-enforcement officials and a 1986 presidential commission on organized crime have said Castellana and the meat company run by him and his children, Quarex Industries, have strong ties to the Gambino family, an accusation he has denied.

"Cap Rock knows what's expected and delivers."

Danny Kellum
Parker & Parsley

You're Welcome, Danny Kellum.

Danny Kellum knows how to deliver. The district manager for Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. oversees the pumping of half a million barrels of oil from the Permian Basin each month.

He expects the people he does business with to match his performance. That's one of the reasons he likes Cap Rock Electric.

"Cap Rock knows what is expected and delivers. That's what it's all about," says Kellum. "That's what makes a good business relationship."

He also likes doing business with a company that understands the demands of the oil industry. "When we're completing a drilling project we work at a furious pace. Things get pretty hectic," notes Kellum. "Cap Rock's always been there on time and on schedule. They know how important it is to get the well working."

You bet we do. We've been an integral part of the West Texas oil economy for more than 50 years. Today we serve some 6,000 wells -- and oil companies make up more than half of our business.

So when it comes to customers like Danny Kellum and Parker & Parsley, we deliver. In fact, we make it routine to deliver more than expected. As a result, 99.7% of our 22,000 customers tell us they think our service is terrific.

Volunteers respond to pleas of children scared by Andrew

By George Esper
Associated Press Writer

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — Only Mama Clown could put a smile on the faces of the children terrorized by the darkness of Hurricane Andrew.

Marcela Murad, a professional clown, is one among legions of volunteers trying to make life a little better for the storm's victims.

Those legions include ministers, engineers, hotel workers, salesmen, truck drivers, mechanics, public relations and advertising people, mothers and sons, young and old, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, entire church congregations.

What has brought them to southern Florida from all over the country is the magnitude of the devastation, a feeling of guilt, an inherent sense of simply wanting to help and, they say, a mandate from God.

What propels them are the snapshots of misery and loss. Like the little girl, who after watching Ms. Murad do magic tricks, asked her to perform one more piece of magic.

"Don't make it get dark," the terrified child implored her.

When Andrew struck, all the lights went out, and power was still out in many areas two weeks later.

For the 40-year-old Ms. Murad, it's worth the daily hourlong commute from her home in Hollywood in the traffic jams and heat to entertain homeless children in the tent city set up in Homestead.

One 3-year-old hadn't smiled in 10 days until she showed up. Now she's enlisting clowns from all over Florida to visit all of the shelters and entertain the children.

"The kids are very scared," she said. "You feel so hopeless."

Her act of painting the kids' faces and singing and laughing with them is an escape from the reality of Andrew's swift, staggering strike.

"My satisfaction is to know I was able to put a smile on children's faces and make them act like kids again."

Her reward: The hugs of children who run to embrace her as she walks through the camp, laughing and yelling, "We missed you. Yeah! Yeah!"

For Donna Slaydon, living the good life while the suffering of others was swirling around her compelled her to come to this ravaged land.

A few days ago she was sunning herself at the hotel pool in Key Largo where she works as a concierge.

"I felt guilty laying out in the sun," she said. "It just didn't feel right lying in the sun knowing so many people were desperate. So much help was needed up here."

So she left poolside and drove the 30 miles north to join more than 4,000 Red Cross volunteers. Sitting at a table in a tent, she checks in the homeless as they arrive in tent city.

Governors gather to talk politics

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — They'll be talking about the importance of the South in an election year as governors gather this week for the annual meeting of the Southern Governors' Association.

Both President George Bush and Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, an association member, have been invited to the three-day meeting which opens Thursday. As of Friday there was no word from either on whether they would attend.

Texas Gov. Ann Richards also had not confirmed by Saturday whether she would attend.

But those who are attending, Democrat or Republican, know their candidate likely won't win without the South. And there's no agreement whether Southern Democrats Clinton and Tennessee Sen. Al Gore can break the hold Republicans have had on the region.

"At the beginning they thought Bill Clinton was the Southern governor and he would carry the South," said South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell, the conference host who also heads Bush's campaign in the region. "But the Southern part of the country is much more conservative than Bill Clinton from a fiscal standpoint."

The region is very important, but "I think Clinton and Gore must show some strength outside of their home states," said Gov. David Walters of Oklahoma, a Democrat. He thinks Clinton probably leads there.

Georgia Gov. Zell Miller, another Democrat, predicts Clinton will run strong there, despite the GOP victories in Georgia the past two presidential elections.

"It's very important. The South always is," said North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin, a Republican. He says the jury is still out on how well the Democratic ticket will run in the region.

"North Carolinians may like the way Clinton and Gore talk, but they will not like their positions on the issues," he said.

The political importance of the region will be discussed during a Friday session with the governors and leading commentators and political scientists, but partisanship is supposed to be left at the conference door.

"By keeping it off-limits, we are able to discuss common concerns," Campbell said. One of those is education, the other focus of this week's meeting.

The governors will discuss progress made in reaching the education goals set by all the nation's governors three years ago.

"The South's problems have in large part been because we have a large low-income, under-educated population," Campbell said. "We are fighting that battle and we are making strides. It's a generational problem — something you won't cure in one year."

Bulldog QBs ruin Mackovic's UT debut

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Jackie Sherrill kept his hex on Texas.

The Mississippi State coach spoiled John Mackovic's debut and soured the opening celebration of 100 years of Longhorns football with a 28-10 victory on Saturday night.

Sherrill said he hopes he never sees the Longhorns again.

"I don't want to come back to play Texas again," Sherrill said. "We have enough to worry about in our conference. I'm 7-0 against them and I'm willing to be happy with that."

Quarterback Sleepy Robinson accounted for two touchdowns before he was injured and backup Greg Plump ran for another as Sherrill notched his seventh consecutive victory over Texas.

Sherrill beat the Horns 13-6 last year and had five straight victories for Texas A&M before he was forced to leave in 1988.

"If Sleepy was able to play 60 minutes it would have been a different game," Sherrill said.

Robinson said the Texas defense was much softer than last year's version.

"The Texas defensive front was not as tough as last year," Robinson said. "Our offensive line was blowing them off the ball. We breed those big linemen down in Mississippi.

"I tried to come back in and the coaches kept asking me if I was 100 per cent but I wasn't," Robinson said. "I turned it over to my backup who is a big time quarterback."

Mackovic was down about his debut but saw some good things.

"We were disappointed that some of the things that we practiced didn't materialize," Mackovic said. "We have a brand new offense that we are trying to get everybody to master. It's not easy to do. We're disappointed but not discouraged."

The multiple Texas offense produced a total of 324 yards but suffered two interceptions and eight penalties.

"The breakdowns were shared by everybody," Mackovic said. "I thought Mississippi State came up with a big interception and their backup quarterback (Plump) came up with some big plays."

Mackovic, athletic director and coach at Illinois last season, was lured to Texas after David McWilliams was fired.

Robinson passed for a touchdown and ran for another for the Southeastern Conference Bulldogs. He left with a deep thigh bruise late in the first half.

Plump scored from a yard away to give the Bulldogs a 22-10 third-quarter lead after Keith Joseph returned an interception off Peter Gardere 48 yards. Chris Gardner kicked field goals of 41

■ Changes run amock as the National Football League begins its 1992 regular season.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

Add nine new coaches (or old coaches in new cities).

Take away instant replay and Joe Montana (again).

Send Herschel Walker to try to get another team to the Super Bowl.

And you have the NFL 1992, which starts Sunday — baseball, tennis, golf and other distractions notwithstanding.

The change that will be most evident to fans is the lack of replay, instituted in 1986, widely debated for each of the past six seasons and finally abolished in March. It could be back next year with modifications; it won't be used officially but it will be tested during regular-season games.

It also probably will be as controversial in its absence as it was in its presence — at least for a while.

"I think Tuesday replays of missed calls will become a cottage industry," NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said. "But I think it will last two or three weeks, then get back to normal. You still had missed calls when we had it."

The new coaches are part of what could be a transition season in which the balance of power continues the shift that was apparent last year in the rise of teams like the New York Jets, Detroit, Atlanta and

Sampras struggles but wins

■ Former U.S. Open champ Pete Sampras was stretched to five sets by unseeded Todd Martin at Flushing Meadows.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

NEW YORK — Third-seeded Pete Sampras, the 1990 U.S. Open champion, almost tumbled out in the third round Saturday night, but survived a serious scare against No. 93 Todd Martin to win 7-6 (7-1), 2-6, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4 in over 3½ hours of scintillating tennis.

Sampras, the hottest player lately with titles in three of his last four tournaments, got frozen at the net time after time by Martin's crafty lobs as the third-year pro came within a game of winning at 5-4 in the fourth set. But Sampras held at love with an ace, broke Martin with a backhand pass down the line and closed out the set at love.

Martin broke for a 2-0 lead in the fifth set, lobbing once again at 15-40 and watching Sampras plunk the ball into the net. Sampras dug in, broke back with a backhand pass that clipped the net and jumped over Martin's racket. Sampras broke again to 3-1 and led 5-3 when Martin saved the first of four match points with an ace. After Martin held, Sampras closed it out with a service winner.

"I started out playing very tight," Sampras said. "I've been playing well all summer, but I came out a little flat. But I found a way to win, and that's what you have to do. It was a very strange match."

Martin, 22, of Lansing, Mich., said he "learned I can play with the best.

"It's disappointing, but I have to be proud because I gave myself the chance to win. I knew I was in it the whole time, I knew I was a few shots, a few points away from winning."

At the end, though, he acknowledged, "my legs were like noodles. I had no bearings about me."

16-year-old Rubin hands Maleeva 3rd-round upset

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chanda Rubin might figure that it's one down and two to go.

If the Lafayette, La., right-hander can get past the Maleevas, she would be in the semifinals of the U.S. Open.

Rubin took the first step Saturday when she upset 15th-seeded Katerina Maleeva 6-4, 3-6, 6-4. That boosted her into a fourth-round meeting against 17-year-old Magdalena Maleeva, the youngest of the Bulgarian tennis dynasty.

Then, assuming they both continue their winning ways, ninth-seeded Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere would be the next obstacle for the 16-year-old Rubin, who won the Wimbledon junior girls title in July.

Against Katerina, the middle sister, Rubin stayed with her aggressive backcourt style, trying to keep constant pressure on her opponent.

"I had a game plan in mind," she said. "I knew what I wanted to do. I wanted to keep the ball crosscourt, stay in the points, then go for my shot.

"I didn't really think about beating a seeded player. After I won, I kind of thing about it.

"It feels pretty good."

There were three service breaks to begin the match, and three games into the contest, Rubin found herself down 1-2. But she pulled even by breaking Maleeva's serve at 15 in the sixth game, then broke her twice more — in the eighth and 10th games, the latter to close out the set. She lose her serve while serving for the set in the ninth game.

Maleeva, whose last tournament title came at the U.S. Hardcourts in Indianapolis, Ind., last year, appeared to be taking control in the second set, when she broke Rubin in the fifth and ninth games and was taken to deuce only once in her four service games.

Rubin broke Maleeva at 30 in the third

Torretta, Hurricanes blow away Iowa, 24-7

In an unusual turn of events, no ranked teams were upset Saturday

Associated Press

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Miami, which was plagued by preseason problems, had no problem winning its opening game Saturday night.

Gino Torretta passed for 433 yards and two touchdowns as the top-ranked, defending national champions routed No. 23 Iowa 24-7.

The Hurricanes, whose preseason preparations were disrupted by injuries, indictments and Hurricane Andrew, extended the nation's longest winning streak to 19 games. It was the second straight defeat for Iowa, which lost to North Carolina State 24-14 in the Kickoff Classic.

Miami dominated from start to finish, but penalties prevented the Hurricanes from running up the score before a record crowd of 70,397 at the first night game in Kinnick Stadium.

The Hurricanes had a shutout until 5½ minutes remained, when Iowa scored on a 31-yard pass from Jim Hartlieb to Harold Jasper.

Torretta completed 31 of 51 passes, including scoring tosses of 11 yards to Kevin Williams in the second quarter and 17 yards to Darryl Spencer with 3:13 left in the game. The Hurricanes' other points came on a 27-yard field goal by Dane Prewitt in the first quarter and a 1-run touchdown run by Larry Jones midway through the fourth quarter.

Torretta, who led Miami to a 12-0 record and the AP national title last season, made two big plays in the Hurricanes' next-to-last scoring drive. He kept the drive alive with a 13-yard scramble on a third-and-13 from his own 15 and, two plays later, connected with Coleman Bell on a 51-yard pass play.

Bell caught seven passes for 115 yards, while Horace Copeland had seven receptions for 89 yards and Williams six for 92.

No. 3 Notre Dame 42, Northwestern 7

CHICAGO — Rick Mirer's 70-yard touchdown pass to Mike Miller and a 72-yard touchdown run by Reggie Brooks helped third-ranked Notre Dame break loose in the second half for an opening victory over Northwestern.

A crowd of 64,877 saw Northwestern keep the game close into the third quarter in Notre Dame's first apperance in Soldier Field since World War II.

Northwestern quarterback Lenny Williams completed 26 of 40 passes for a career-high 274 yards against soft Irish defenses to keep the Wildcats in contention in coach Gary Barnett's debut.

Notre Dame held only a 14-7 lead when Mirer hit the speedy Miller with his 70-yard scoring pass in the third quarter. On the next possession, Jerome Bettis broke loose for a 24-yard touchdown run.

Williams directed the Wildcats to the Irish 5-yard line midway in the fourth quarter only to have a diving Tom Carter break up a touchdown pass on fourth down to end the drive.

Five plays later, Brooks ripped off his 72-yard touchdown run to clinch the outcome.

The game was balanced until the three big plays and Irish coach Lou Holtz kept his regulars in until 5:40 remained in the game.

Mirer completed 8 of 17 for 165 yards and two touchdowns. Bettis carried 19 times for 130 yards and Brooks finished with 9 carries for a career-high 157 yards.

The Irish had the ball for only three possessions in the first half but still managed a 14-7 lead.

Northwestern had a disappointing finish to a 78-yard opening drive when Brian Leahy missed a 27-yard field goal.

The Irish needed only eight plays to move 80 yards for a 7-0 lead on a 5-yard touchdown pass from Mirer to McBride.

Northwestern came right back with a gambling, 80-yard drive to tie it. The Wildcats pulled off a fake punt on fourth down with Williams passing to Greg Gill for 17 yards to the Irish 45. They finished it off with a 14-yard touchdown on a reverse by wide receiver Lee Gissendaner.

Notre Dame capped an 86-yard scoring drive with eight minutes left in the half with Lee Becton scoring on a 2-yard sweep.

Reserve quarterback Kevin McDougald threw a 5-yard touchdown pass to Oscar McBride with 3:27 left for Notre Dame's final points.

No. 4 Florida St. 48, Duke 21

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Charlie Ward shook off five turnovers by accounting for five touchdowns as fourth-ranked Florida State made its debut in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a victory over Duke.

Ward, who had 353 yards, threw three touchdown passes to sophomore Kez McCorvey and a 68-yarder to Matt Frier, and also scored on a 6-yard run.

The mistake-filled game was the first of the season for both schools, which met for the first time in football.

Ward, a Seminoles basketball player making his first appearance at quarterback, was intercepted four times and lost a fumble, but passed for 269 yards and ran for another 84.

Florida State forced three turnovers in the first half, including a 94-yard interception return for a touchdown by Leon Fowler to open the scoring.

Duke had threatened to score first after Tee Edwards made the first of two interceptions. The Blue Devils drove to the Florida State 12 before Fowler picked off Steve Prince's pass at the 6.

Florida State's next touchdown also followed a Duke turnover. Ward scampered in for a touchdown on a 6-yard run just three plays after Ken Alexander recovered Randy Cuthbert's fumble at the Duke 12.

Duke needed just two plays late in the first quarter to pull within 14-7. Cuthbert gained 20 yards and sophomore Spence Fischer's first college pass went 60 yards to Jon Jensen for a touchdown.

No. 8 Penn State 24, Cincinnati 20

CINCINNATI — Brian O'Neal ran for his second touchdown of the game with 7:36 remaining as No. 8 Penn State withstood a fourth-quarter scare to defeat Cincinnati.

O'Neal's 1-yard touchdown gave the Nittany Lions breathing room after a blocked punt helped Cincinnati get within three. Paul Anderson passed 8 yards to David Small for a touchdown with 13:19 to play to cut Penn State's lead to 17-14.

Anderson scored on a 2-yard run with 1:08 remaining to make the score 24-20. His 2-point conversion pass was incomplete.

Richie Anderson's 10-yard touchdown run and Craig Fayak's 44-yard field goal in the third quarter enabled Penn State to break a 7-7 halftime tie.

The game was a sharp contrast to last year's opener at Penn State, when the Lions smashed Cincinnati 81-0.

Cincinnati scored on its first possession, sparked by Brian Jenkins' 69-yard kickoff return to Penn State's 29. Small ran 4 yards up the middle to score the touchdown, capping a six-play drive.

The Bearcats recovered O.J. McDuffie's fumble on a punt return at Cincinnati's 34 with 6:53 remaining in the first quarter, but failed to capitalize.

Penn State answered with the tying touchdown. McDuffie gained 46 yards on a reverse handoff to Cincinnati's 7 and O'Neal ran for the touchdown on the next play.

Saturday night's game was the first played in Nippert Stadium since the University of Cincinnati completed a $10.1 million renovation that increased seating capacity from about 26,000 to 35,000.

No. 9 Alabama 25, Vanderbilt 8

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Freshman Michael Proctor kicked four field goals in his college debut as No. 9 Alabama, playing without the suspended David Palmer, continued its domination of Vanderbilt.

Proctor kicked three field goals from beyond 40 yards and was just short from 52 yards. He also made a 32-yarder in the fourth quarter to seal the victory and set a school record for the most field goals by a freshman.

Alabama (1-0) defeated Vandy (0-1) for the eighth year in a row and improved its record against the Commodores to 30-2 since 1960.

Palmer, a sophomore receiver and kick returner who accounted for 1,113 total yards in 1991, was held out of the game by coach Gene Stallings because he was arrested for drunken driving during the off-season.

The kicking game was a problem for Alabama last season, as the Crimson Tide got only one field goal longer than 40 yards during an 11-1 year. Proctor exceeded that total in the first quarter, capping the Tide's first three drives with kicks of 46, 43 and 42 yards.

Vanderbilt shocked the sellout crowd of 70,123 with a fake punt on its first possession. Punter David Lawrence completed a 41-yard pass to Robert Davis to put the ball on the Alabama 17.

That turned out to be the longest offensive play of the day for the Commodores, who proceede to fumble the ball right back to Alabama. Vandy had turnovers on its first four possessions and trailed 16-0 at halftime.

The Commodores, 5-6 last season, came out strong to begin the second half.

Tony Jackson returned the kickoff to the 47 and Vandy went the remaining 53 yards in 14 plays for its only touchdown. Wingback Eric Lewis dove over from the 5 and quarterback Marcus Wilson ran in the 2-point conversion.

No. 10 Syracuse 42, E. Carolina 21

GREENVILLE, N.C. — Qadry Ismail started Syracuse's season with a bang on a 64-yard scoring run, and the 10th-ranked Orangemen followed his lead in rolling up a victory over East Carolina.

Syracuse's option attack made a shambles of the East Carolina defense, and it was a play from the wishbone that got the Orangemen going. After the opening kickoff, Ismail took a pitch from quarterback Marvin Graves, split the right side of the Pirates defense and raced to the end zone for a 7-0 lead just 18 seconds into the game.

Graves also threw three touchdown passes as Syracuse ran up 634 yards, including 421 on 61 rushes. While the Orangemen were putting up their big numbers, the Pirates were trying to find consistency in their attack. They were also trying to find a quarterback, and spent the night switching between Michael Anderson and Sean McConnell in search of a replacement for record-setter Jeff Blake.

The loss ended East Carolina's winning streak at 11 games, a string that included a victory in the Peach Bowl and produced a No. 9 ranking.

East Carolina relied almost exclusively on the pass and reached the Syracuse 12 late in the first quarter, only to squander the chance and miss a field goal after three straight passes failed.

They did avert a shutout at the start of the third period with McConnell's 28-yard scoring play to Clayton Driver. The Pirates recovered the ensuing onside kick, but a holding penalty slowed the drive, and McConnell lost a fumble to Garland Hawkins at East Carolina's 45.

Syracuse turned the mistake into a touchdown. Graves hit Ismail on a 34-yard pass play, and Terry Richardson scored three plays later on a 2-yard dash around left end with 8:42 left in the third period for a 28-7 lead.

Ismail also rushed three times for 87 yards.

Brooks leads at Milwaukee; Midland's Adams tied for 8th

Associated Press

FRANKLIN, Wis. — Mark Brooks says he takes every shot as it comes — even his chance to become the first player to win the Greater Milwaukee Open two years in a row.

"It's a matter of going out and being focused," Brooks said. "Think smart, play smart."

Brooks took a one-stroke lead over Richard Zokol Saturday after the third round at Tuckaway Country Club.

Brooks stands at 15-under-par 201 after shooting 65 Saturday, 66 Friday and 70 Monday.

Jay Haas holds third at 12-under, while Nick Price, Dudley Hart and David Frost are bunched at 11-under-par.

Midlander John Adams is in at 9-under, 207 with one round to play.

The last PGA Tour player to successfully defend a title is Davis Love, who won the Heritage Classic in 1991 and 1992.

Zokol, who won the Deposit Guarantee Classic in April, said he's in the right frame of mind to make a run at a second tour victory.

"My indicator of good play is not the score," Zokol said. "You could knock in a couple of 40-footers and it could have been luck. My indicator is how easily you play."

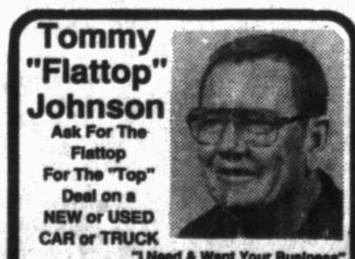

"I struck it very well. I thought well," Zokol said. "I was very calm, very much like the first day. Friday was a very hectic day. I was off-balance. It was just a bad day as far as having any kind of rhythm or calmness."

Zokol led the GMO after two rounds in 1982, his first year on tour. He wore headphones on the course, earning him the nickname "Disco Dick."

He said he lost the lead when he stopped listening to music and tuned in to radio coverage of the GMO. Calvin Peete won and Zokol finished in a fifth-place tie.

"I had an adrenaline surge like you couldn't believe. I was just intoxicated with it and I stumbled," said Zokel, who ranks 96th on the money list.

Haas, who played in the first threesome off the tee Saturday, is third place with postings of 64 Saturday, 71 Friday and 69 Thursday.

Aggies survive Cajun scare

■ Texas A&M's backfield proves worthy as the Aggies break a second-half tie and eventually win in Baton Rouge.

Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Jeff Granger passed for 196 yards and a touchdown and ran for another score Saturday to lead No. 7 Texas A&M to a 31-22 victory over Louisiana State.

The Aggies wore out the Tigers in the final quarter with a 22-yard touchdown run by Rodney Thomas and a 12-yard TD run by Clif Groce.

Thomas and fellow sophomore Greg Hill combined for 194 rushing yards.

Texas A&M took the lead for good in the final minute of the third period when Terry Venetoulias kicked a 44-yard field goal.

The Aggies marched 65 yards with the opening kickoff for a touchdown, a 1-yard pass from Granger to fullback Doug Carter, but LSU tied it at 7-7 early in the second quarter.

Texas A&M took a 14-7 lead on the very next series, going 69 yards on seven plays with Granger plunging over from the 1.

LSU tied the game early in the third quarter when freshman Robert Davis' 10-yard touchdown run capped a five-play drive set up by a recovered fumble at the LSU 45.

Davis wound up leading all rushers with 134 yards on 15 carries, including a 76-yard run that set up quarterback Ryan Huffman's 8-yard touchdown run in the second quarter.

LSU, who started Chad Loup, used three quarterbacks in the game. The third and most successful, Jesse Daigle, led an 8-play, 79-yard touchdown drive that ended with a TD pass to flanker Brett Bech. Bech also caught a pass for the points-after.

Granger got his 196 passing yards on 13 completions in 26 attempts. He was intercepted once.

Loup completed 6 of 13 passes for 81 yards for LSU, but was intercepted twice. Huffman completed 2 of 4 passes for 19 yards, and Daigle, a junior, had 10 completions in 13 attempts for 115 yards and the late touchdown.

Cougars fall short of Tulsa

Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. — Gus Frerotte threw a pair of touchdowns to Gary Brown and Phil Holmes had two big sacks in the fourth quarter as Tulsa hung on to beat Houston 28-25 Saturday night.

The victory was the eighth in a row for the Golden Hurricane (1-0), which shut down the Cougars' quick-strike offense three times in the final quarter.

Eric Lange kicked a 42-yard field goal, his fourth of the game, with 8:18 left for the final margin. Houston (0-1) had three possessions left but could not get close to midfield.

Holmes sacked Jimmy Klinger to stall the second drive, and he sacked him again to open the Cougars final drive and rally the Hurricane defense.

Klinger, a freshman taking over for brother David this year, completed 30 of 57 for 327 yards and two touchdowns, but he completed just three of 10 passes on the final three possessions.

Chris Bratcher intercepted a pass, recovered two fumbles and forced a safety for Tulsa. The Cougars had five turnovers, three in the first half when they fell behind 22-10.

Frerotte, a junior making his first start since a disastrous freshman year, was 19 of 36 for 240 yards and two touchdowns.

Both were to Brown, a junior college transfer who got more playing time because Chris Penn was ruled academically ineligible. He also made two spectacular catches, both of which led to Lange field goals. Brown had five catches for 116 yards.

Tulsa built a 15-0 lead in the first quarter on Houston mistakes.

After the Cougars muffed the opening kickoff, they took over at the 5 and reached Tulsa's 20 in just 100 seconds. But Douglas fumbled a snap, the first of four mishaps in the opening quarter.

The Hurricane got a safety when Donald Douglas, under pressure in the end zone from Bratcher, was called for intentional grounding. After Lange kicked a 53-yard field goal and Brown caught the first of his touchdowns, TiAndre Sanders fumbled on Houston's first play, and Lange's 31-yard field goal made it 15-0 at the end of the first quarter.

Klinger replaced Douglas and threw an interception on his second play from scrimmage, but the Hurricane went nowhere and Houston began to regain the momentum it had on its first drive.

Klinger completed five straight on an 80-yard drive that took just 1 minute, 15 seconds and ended with a 6-yard touchdown pass to Freddie Gilbert. The Cougars drove 55 yards in eight plays before settling for a 31-yard field goal by Trace Craft.

Rally falls short, Owls lose to Air Force 30-21

Associated Press

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. — Jarvis Baker and Joe Parisi each scored two touchdowns and the Air Force defense held off a late rally as the Falcons defeated Rice 30-21 Saturday.

It was the third meeting between the two teams, Air Force from the Western Athletic Conference and Rice from the Southwest Conference. It was the Falcons' second victory in the series.

Baker, a 5-foot-9, 170-pound senior quarterback getting his first start, staked the Falcons to a quick 14-0 lead on touchdown runs of 9 and 1 yards. Parisi, a backup fullback, scored on runs of 24 and 1 yards.

Rice came within a touchdown twice in the second half before Air Force linebacker Vergil Simpson stopped Rice quarterback Josh LaRocca in the end zone for a safety with 2:33 left. The Falcons ran out the clock to preserve the victory.

Baker ran for 78 yards on 20 carries but his rushing statistics were hurt by several sacks for 36 lost yards. The Owl defense held Air Force's potent offense to 305 yards, all but 33 on the ground.

AP Laserphoto

Air Force halfback Wayne Young scampered for 32 yards against the Owl defense Saturday.

The Owls outgained the Falcons with 354 total yards, 188 on the ground, but were victimized by their own errors. An early drive was snuffed by an interception, and two Air Force scores were set up by a blocked kick and a fumble.

Trevor Cobb, winner of last year's Doak Walker Award given to the country's best running back, wound up with 106 yards on 18 carries for Rice.

Rice's scoring came on a 9-yard run by flanker Jimmy Lee in the first half and two touchdown passes from LaRocca to Louis Balady in the second half.

LaRocca hit Balady, who was wide open on the sideline, with a 20-yard TD pass to close the score to 21-14 in the third quarter and with a 36-yard flanker screen in the fourth to cut the margin to 28-21.

But after Chris McInnis's punt to the 3-yard line put the Owls in a deep hole, Simpson put the finishing touches on the victory with his sack of LaRocca in the end zone.

34 yards in the fourth quarter.

The Memorial Stadium crowd of 70,438 on hand for the 100th anniversary of Texas football was silenced in the first quarter when Mississippi State scored touchdowns on the first two possessions.

Robinson hit Willie Harris with a 45-yard scoring pass and scored himself on a 1-yard run as Mississippi State converted drives of 66 and 72 yards.

Texas awakened in the second quarter on a 94-degree night after Mackovic huddled with the offense and delivered a strong lecture.

Gardere completed passes of 23 and 15 yards to Kenny Neal with Adrian Walker scoring from 3 yards out for the first touchdown in the Mackovic era.

Robinson hit Harris with a 22-yard pass to position Gardner for a 44-yard field goal and Texas countered with a 37-yard field goal by Scott Szeredy to trail only 16-10 at halftime.

The late Texas field goal drive was kept alive when the Longhorns gambled and on fourth and one from their 41. Walker's 2-yard run got the first down.

Texas' new multiple offense moved the ball well but bogged down at the State 2, 21, and 19 in the second half.

Kenny Roberts, who didn't have a carry in the first quarter, gained 127 yards on 17 carries for the Bulldogs.

Missed field goal dooms Mustangs

Associated Press

DALLAS — Joey Perry ran for two second-half touchdowns as Tulane survived a sloppy performance to beat Southern Methodist in coach Buddy Teevens' debut.

SMU's Russell Anderson missed wide left on a 30-yard field goal attempt with 7 seconds remaining.

The Green Wave overcame a return of a blocked extra point kick, a blocked field goal and a squandered drive that stalled at the Mustangs' 1.

Perry's 2-yard touchdown run with 1:06 remaining gave Tulane a 13-10 lead. But Chad Patton blocked the kick and Marcello Simmons returned it 88 yards for two points.

SMU had taken a 10-7 lead with 12:14 left on a 1-yard run by Rongea Hill, atoning for an earlier fumble that led to Perry's first score.

The Green Wave answered Hill's touchdown with a 61-yard drive. But Gary Butler's 23-yard field goal attempt was blocked by Byron Bonds.

Hill, part of SMU's first senior class since returning from the death penalty in 1989, rushed for a game-high 119 yards on 25 carries.

Teevens, hired last December from an Ivy League championship at Dartmouth College, helped Tulane end its three-year streak of season-opening losses.

The Green Wave also avoided becoming the first team to lose twice to SMU since it returned from the death penalty in 1989.

New Mexico shocks TCU, 24-7

Former Permian QB defeats Frogs in Sullivan debut

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Rookie receivers Chris Griffin and Turhon O'Bannon caught touchdown passes, freshman Winslow Oliver ran for 130 yards and New Mexico's once porous defense came up with a slump-stopping performance Saturday in the Lobos' 24-7 win over Texas Christian.

The season-opening win, spiced by a series of standing ovations from New Mexico fans who have seen only one winning season in the last decade, made first-year coach Dennis Franchione's debut a stunning success.

Franchione took over a program that had won only nine games in the previous five years. The loss spoiled the head coaching debut of 1971 Heisman Trophy winner Pat Sullivan, a former assistant at Auburn.

Stoney Case, a sophomore quarterback from Odessa, Texas, hit the freshman Griffin with a 2-yard scoring pass in the second quarter and sealed the upset with a 42-yard TD pass to O'Bannon, a junior college transfer who sat out last season with a knee injury.

David Margolis added a 27-yard field goal — his 41st to tie the school career record set by Bob Berg in 1975 — and Eric Young scored on a 4-yard run with 58 seconds left.

Oliver provided the rushing balance for the formerly one-dimensional Lobo offense and took the pressure off Case, who went untouched by the TCU defense.

TCU's only touchdown came with 5:42 left in the first quarter when tailback Curtis Modkins shook off a couple of New Mexico tacklers, beat the rest of the Lobos to the outside and ran 80 yards untouched.

It was the only major mistake for New Mexico, whose defense last year ranked last in the nation while giving up an average of 525 yards a game.

On Tech's night for glory, Sooners pull raid

By Galyn Wilkins
N.Y. Times News Service

LUBBOCK — So what do you have when the stadium parking lot is full of pickups? When there are more ten-gallon hats in the stands than in a John Wayne movie?

What kind of an evening do you have when TV cameras have been trucked in to show the nation that late summer nights in West Texas are pure and cool and free of Indian raids?

It was big. Bathed in bright lights and white-hot hopes for Texas Tech's football Red Raiders, Lubbock on Thursday night was probably more excited about the future than the day the cotton gin came to town.

Finally, it was time. Time for the Red Raiders to make that last lunge over the top to the Big Time. How did Tech coach Spike Dykes put it the other day? "If we're going to get to the next level, we have to start beating the teams up there."

Oklahoma was certainly "up there." Though not as far up there this year as in the past, the Sooners nevertheless came into the opener ranked No. 15. This wasn't Fullerton State or one of those New Mexico tin cans. Beat these reputable guests and the Raiders, and Lubbock, could take a bow.

Not yet. Not this night. It was as if Lubbock turned out in its pressed, starched Wranglers for a big date only to be stiffed. Thirty-four to nine stiffed.

Maybe the week has simply been too rich in celebrities. President Bush showed up Wednesday afternoon for the Raiders' final tuneup, and the players gushed that it was the most exciting moment in their young lives.

Then the Sooners showed up, the famous football industrialists intent on rebuilding their fierce reputation after four years without a Big Eight title.

Unfortunately for the Raiders, the Oklahomans also showed up with a quarterback who turned the game into his personal Nintendo game.

All of it, the winding tension of the week, the insistence of the Raiders on proving themselves worth a prime-time look, plus the speed and defensive leverage of the Sooners, was too much for the Raiders.

"We had a great opportunity," said Dykes in the wreckage. "We didn't respond to the big play, and they did."

One thing that had been in the Raiders' favor was their experience. They returned 14 starters off a team that won five of the last six games in 1991. Included was a quarterback as cool as a mountain waterfall, Robert Hall. Included was a strong, confident secondary.

To hear OU coach Gary Gibbs, you would think his team still sleeps in cradles. Indeed, the Sooners are uncharacteristically young, starting four freshmen, but apparently they learn fast.

Baylor loses at gun to Louisiana Tech

Associated Press

WACO — Louisiana Tech's Chris Boniol kicked a 30-yard field goal as time expired, lifting the Bulldogs to a 10-9 upset of Baylor on Saturday night.

The junior's strike was set up by a nifty catch by fullback John Henry, who barely kept his feet inbounds while stretching for the ball.

The victory spoiled Trey Weir's three field-goal outing, the last of which was a 30-yarder with 1:34 remaining that Baylor up 9-7.

After that score, Henry dashed 22 yards on Baylor's kickoff to start Tech's winning march at the 35-yard line.

Sam Hughes connected with Corey Parham on three passes, and workhorse running back Jason Cooper, who led all runners with 87 yards on 26 carries, ground out a couple of runs.

But Baylor's defense stiffened. Facing third-and-12 at the Baylor 35, Hughes left the game and Aaron Ferguson, who led the Bulldogs on the only touchdown drive of the evening in the third quarter, completed a 22-yard pass to Henry.

That set up Boniol's kick. He had earlier missed a 45-yarder in the third quarter that would have given his team the lead.

With both offenses sputtering, it seemed that Weir's performance might put the game away for the favored Bears.

Baylor took a 6-0 halftime lead, as Tech continually hurt itself on offense and defense, racking up 94 yards in penalties in the first half. Weir, a senior taking over the field goal kicking duties for Baylor, was true in the first half from 41 and 38 yards.

But in the third quarter, Tech finally got untracked, as Ferguson replaced Hughes for a series and drove the Bulldogs 80 yards.

Cooper carried the offensive load because Tech's star running back, Jason Davis, has been sidelined with a deep shoulder bruise that he sustained in practice last month.

Cooper scored Tech's touchdown by breaking several tackles from the 4 in a third-and-goal situation.

Lichner leads HPU over SRSU, 42-21

Associated Press

BROWNWOOD — Scott Lichner completed 20 of 25 passes for 283 yards and four touchdowns Saturday as Howard Payne routed Sul Ross State 42-21.

Lichner hit Keith Crawford for scores of 10, 30 and 28 yards in the first half as the Yellow Jackets (2-0) built a 35-7 halftime lead over the Lobos (0-1).

Lichner, a sophomore who broke nine Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association and 12 school passing records last season, also hit Chad Franks for a 23-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Crawford, a senior who has 26 career touchdowns, caught five passes for 121 yards. He is the school leader with 144 lifetime receptions.

Nebraska Weslyn 29, Austin Col. 28

LINCOLN, Neb. — Darren Stohlmann caught a 7-yard touchdown pass with 12 seconds left as Nebraska Wesleyan squeezed past Austin College.

Austin, ranked 22nd in NAIA Division II, led until the game's last seconds when Wesleyan's Jeff Lindquist threw the winning pass, his third touchdown. He competed 24 of 47 passes for 299 yards.

Austin's Brett Atkins threw touchdown passes of 21 yards and 35 yards to Brad Jenkins to put Austin ahead 14-0 in the first quarter.

Lindquist tossed two touchdown passes in the second quarter and

Texas Small Colleges

Austin's Rhett Box ran three yards for a score.

Austin's Chris Sanders scored on a 1-yard run in the fourth and Wesleyan, ranked 17th in NAIA Division II, got a touchdown on Glenn Evans' 1-yard run.

Atkins completed 10 of 22 passes for 187 yards and two touchdowns with one interception.

BYU 38, UTEP 28

EL PASO — John Walsh, last year's understudy to record-setting Ty Detmer, threw three touchdowns and set up a fourth with a 42-yard bomb as Brigham Young held off Texas-El Paso 38-28.

Walsh, who beat out four others for the right to replace two-time All-American Detmer, found Eric Drage twice on passes of 13 yards and 18 yards on consecutive first-quarter touchdown drives. He added a 24-yarder to Byron Rex and hooked up with Drage again in the third quarter on a 42-yard pass that helped put BYU up 35-21.

BYU had shut down the Miners through most of the second quarter on the way to a 28-14 halftime lead. But the pesky Miners revived about five minutes into the third quarter when backup quarterback Mike Perez took over and drove the Miners 54 yards to a score. The Miners cut it to 28-21 when slotback Kenny Brown scored on an 11-yard option play.

With 10 minutes to play in the first half, quarterback Shawn Gray fumbled at the Miners 20 and BYU recovered, setting up a four-play, 18-yard drive that put BYU up 21-14.

Tex. Southern 35, Prairie View 0

HOUSTON — A gunshot-type noise that caused fans to rush the Rice Stadium gates caused officials to halt the Texas Southern-Prairie View game with Texas Southern leading 35-0.

The season opener for both teams was ended with 13:13 remaining in the fourth quarter.

Sgt. T. Stevens, watch commander for the Houston Police Department, said university police told him the noise at about 10:10 p.m. apparently was a firecracker.

"To my knowledge no one has been shot," said Steve Moniaci, assistant athletic director of administration.

SW Texas St. 15, Texas A&I 14

KINGSVILLE, Texas — Harold Adams' 2-point conversion run with 1:50 remaining lifted Southwest Texas State over Texas A&I.

Maurice Williams scored two touchdowns for Southwest Texas State in the final quarter, including a 2-yard run with 1:54 left to set up Adams' run.

Williams also scored on a 25-yard run with 12:43 left to pull Southwest Texas State to within 14-7.

Texas A&I scored on a 44-yard pass from Wesley Whiten to Charles Miles, on a 91-yard fumble return by Keith Pittman, and on a safety when Sean Holcomb tackled Scott Smith in the end zone.

Angelo St. 24, Henderson St. 7

SAN ANGELO — Kyle Anderson ran for two second-half touchdowns as Angelo State opened its season with a 24-7 victory over Henderson State.

Kyle's 31-yard TD run to start the second quarter put Angelo State up 14-0.

Henderson State went 76 yards in nine plays, capped by a 15-yard touchdown run by Anthony Jenkins.

Stephen F. Austin 24, Arkansas-Monticello 6

NACOGDOCHES — Stephen F. Austin's Mike Goddard threw two touchdowns on the Lumberjacks' first two possessions Saturday night en route to a 24-6 victory over Arkansas-Monticello.

Goddard completed a 34-yard pass to Shawn York with 11:16 left in the first quarter. Jason Runnels scored on a 24-yard pass with 3:58 left in the period.

Tarleton St. 33, East Central 26

ADA, Okla. — Steve Sikes ran 22 yards on a blocked punt return in the first quarter to start Tarleton State on its way to a 33-26 victory over East Central.

Tarleton State scored 20 to East Central's 6 in the first half, letting it keep the edge in a second half that saw East Central socre 20 to Tarleton State's 13.

Grant returns as Cornhuskers rip Utah, 49-22

Sophomore QB throws four TDs as Colorado downs Colorado State

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Mike Grant, in his return as Nebraska's starting quarterback, passed for two touchdowns and ran for two others as the 11th-ranked Cornhuskers scored a 49-22 victory over Utah.

Grant started four games to begin the 1990 season before injuries cost him the job, and he sat out last season as a redshirt.

He returned against Utah and completed 12 of 22 passes for 114 yards, including touchdown passes of 14 yards to I-back Calvin Jones and 11 to backup tight end Gerald Armstrong.

Grant also rushed five times for 63 yards, including touchdown runs of 16 and 6 yards. He had another pass dropped in the end zone by tight end William Washington and had a 35-yard touchdown throw to Washington called back on a penalty.

The Cornhuskers rolled out to a 35-0 halftime lead on the strength of 267 rushing yards. Touchdowns were scored one of Grant's runs, Jones' 14 yard reception, a 57-yard sprint by fullback Lance Lewis, a 26-yard run by I-back Derek Brown and a 6-yard run by backup fullback Andre McDuffy.

No. 12 Colorado 37, Colorado St. 17

BOULDER, Colo. — Sophomore Kordell Stewart, starting his first game as Colorado unveiled a pass-oriented offense, threw for four touchdowns and a school-record 409 yards to lift the 12th-ranked Buffaloes past in-state rival Colorado State.

Stewart threw two long scoring passes in the first half, a 48-yarder to Michael Westbrook and a 60-yarder to Charles Johnson, as the Buffs jumped out to a 14-0 lead in the season opener for both teams.

CSU, absorbing its sixth straight loss dating back to last season, closed the halftime deficit to 14-10 on the running of fullback John Ivlow.

Second 10

Stewart, who beat out Vance Joseph for the No. 1 quarterback job in fall drills, completed 21 of 36 passes in his debut. With 409 yards through the air, Stewart eclipsed the previous CU record of 361 set by Randy Essington against Nebraska in 1982.

Stewart's 430 yards of total offense also set a school record, bettering the 353 of Bobby Anderson against Oklahoma State in 1968, and his four TD passes tied the school mark set by Darian Hagan against Oklahoma State in 1990.

It was the seventh-best passing performance in Big Eight history.

No. 13 Clemson 24, Ball St. 10

CLEMSON, S.C. — Tim Jones' fourth-quarter interception set up Howard Hall's run for the go-ahead score as No. 13 Clemson beat Ball State.

Jones' 10-yard return of a pass from Mike Neu, and a 5-yard face mask penalty, gave Clemson possession at Ball State's 18. After five runs by Rodney Blunt, Hall scored from the 1 for a 17-10 lead with 10:26 left.

Ronald Williams, who hadn't scrimmaged during the preseason because of a knee injury sustained last year, scored on a 17-yard run to make it 24-10 with 6:44 left.

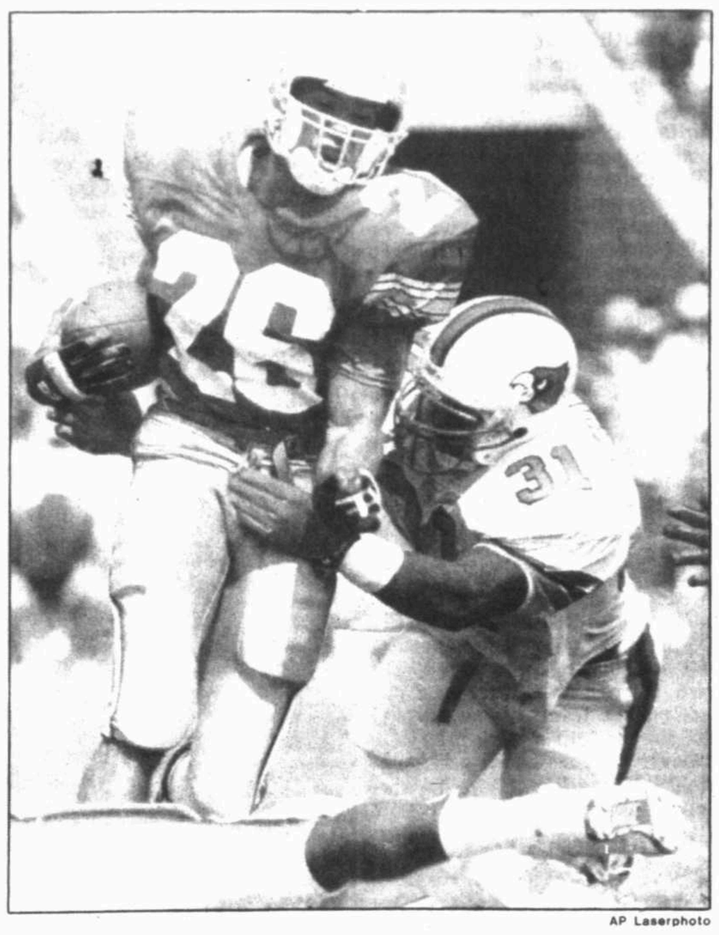

Williams, who was listed as doubtful for the game, finished with 58 yards on eight carries. Blunt had 96 yards on 20 carries.

On an overcast afternoon before 67,000, Ball State, which was 6-5 last year and tied for fifth in the Mid-American Conference, gave the defending Atlantic Coast Conference champions all they could handle.

Clemson had won its last five openers by a combined 206-7, including three straight shutouts. The Cardinals ended that streak when Neu hit Brian Oliver with a 5-yard touchdown pass with 12 seconds left in the first half, cutting the lead to 10-7.

Neu completed 25 of 48 passes for 208 yards and one touchdown with two interceptions, and Cardinals tailback Corey Croom rushed for 135 yards on 32 carries against a Clemson defense that ranked fourth nationally a year ago.

The Cardinals got a break when Henry Hall recovered Blunt's fumble at the Clemson 7. But Ball State stalled and had to settle for Matt Swart's 22-yard field goal that tied it 10-10 with 7:45 left in the third period.

No. 17 Ohio St. 20, Louisville 19

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Dan Wilkinson disrupted a 2-point conversion attempt inside the last minute and an encroachment penalty spoiled another late Louisville scoring opportunity as No. 17 Ohio State escaped with a victory over the Cardinals.

Trailing 20-13, Louisville drove 67 yards for a touchdown, which came on Ralph Dawkins' 2-yard run with 33 seconds to play.

RALEIGH, N.C. — Gary Downs had two first-half scoring runs and Ledel George returned a punt for another touchdown as No. 18 North Carolina State rolled over Appalachian State.

The Wolfpack (2-0) gained 10 or more yards on 15 plays in the opening half to overpower the Division I-AA Mountaineers, who were playing their season opener and appeared to tire in the heat and humidity.

Appalachian State, the defending Southern Conference champions, led 3-0 after Jay Millson's career-best 47-yard field goal on the game's opening drive.

No. 19 California 46, San Jose State 16

BERKELEY, Calif. — Russell White ran for 216 yards and Dave Barr, in his starting debut, threw three touchdown passes to Sean Dawkins as No. 19 California rolled to a victory over San Jose State.

White, a 1,000-yard rusher in each of the past two seasons, ripped the Spartans for runs of 48 and 40 yards. He broke through for a score on a 17-yard run with 2:13 remaining in the third quarter, gaining 77 yards on three runs during an 88-yard drive.

The victory made Keith Gilbertson a winner in his coaching debut at California. An assistant at Washington last year, Gilbertson succeeded Bruce Snyder, now coaching Arizona State.

White's rushing total, on just 19 carries, was the fifth-best in school history and was 13 shy of his fourth-ranked effort against Southern Cal last year.

Ron Turner, San Jose State's first-year coach, saw his team fall behind 31-8 by halftime.

LPGA

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Angie Ridgeway used a little luck to grab a share of the first-round lead with Rosie Jones on Saturday at the LPGA Rail Charity Classic.

Ridgeway needed to make an 8-foot putt for par on her final hole, No. 9, to equal Jones' 7-under 65 at the 6,404-yard Rail Golf Club course. Ridgeway knocked the ball to the edge of the cup, where it hung on the lip for several seconds before falling in.

Both Ridgeway and Jones made seven birdies and no bogeys and were a stroke in front of Michelle McGann, Kris Tschetter, Kristi Albers and Danielle Ammaccapane at 66.

Leading money-winner Dottie Mochrie, Pat Bradley, Betsy King, Florence Descampe, Nancy Lopez and Donna Andrews all shot 67.

Birdies give Crampton lead

Seniors

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Bruce Crampton had a very positive round which left him with very negative numbers at the Senior PGA Tour's First of America Classic on Saturday.

Crampton made birdies on 11 of the last 14 holes for an 8-under 63 and a one-stroke lead after 36 holes at Elks Country Club's Highlands course.

"I play one shot at a time and let the score evolve," Crampton said of his remarkable round that tied the course record set by Miller Barber in the final round of the 1987 Classic. "When you start to go right and you get confident, then you start to think positive.

You don't see all the trouble, you trust your swing and you go on and be positive."

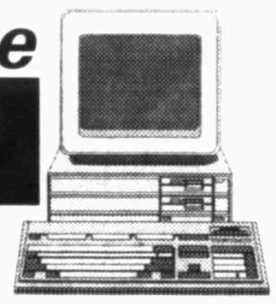

Crampton has a two-round total of 132, 10-under. With 18 holes left, he's a stroke in front of Tommy Aaron, who shot a 67, and first-round leader Homero Blancas, who followed Friday's 65 with a 68.

"It is very, very seldom that one makes 11 birdies in 14 holes," said Crampton, a Sydney, Australia native who lives in LaQuinta, Calif., and who hasn't won since the GTE West Classic in March.

Crampton began his run after make bogeys on two of the opening four holes. After that, even his playing partner couldn't believe it.

"That's the first time I have ever seen anything like that," said Gibby Gilbert, Crampton's playing partner who's two stokes off the lead. "He was birdieing every hole. He was laughing coming off the 18th green."

Crampton, winner of 14 PGA Tour events and 19 events on the Senior Tour, took bogeys on the second and fourth holes.

Associated Press

Randall Cunningham, Tfmm Rosenbach and maybe even Phil Simms will be back at quarterback when the NFL season begins this weekend. So will a handful of others whose starting status signals a changing of the guard.

Don't look for Joe Montana, though — he's back on injured reserve.

Among the hopefuls, there's Browning Nagle of the New York Jets, Kelly Stouffer of the Seattle Seahawks and Neil O'Donnell of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Then there are the injury replacements, with Steve Young for Montana at San Francisco, Bob Gagliano for John Freisz at San Diego, Mark Hermann for Jeff George at Indianapolis and possibly Simms for Jeff Hostetler with the New York Giants.

All in all, a lot of questions, with answers to start coming Sunday.

First, the schedule, which includes the debuts of nine new coaches and one new stadium.

Sunday, New Orleans is at Philadelphia, Phoenix at Tampa Bay, San Francisco at the Giants, Minnesota at Green Bay, the Jets at Atlanta in the opening of the Georgia Dome, Cincinnati at Seattle, Pittsburgh at Houston, Cleveland at Indianapolis, Detroit at Chicago, Kansas City at San Diego, and the Los Angeles Rams at Buffalo.

The Los Angeles Raiders are at Denver Sunday night, and Washington at Dallas Monday night.

Saints at Eagles

Last season, Cunningham went down in Week 1 and the Eagles managed to ride their NFL-leading defense and a parade of quarterbacks to 10 victories, not quite enough to make the playoffs.

The Reggie White-led defense, stung by the death of Jerome Brown, figures to be stingy again, with Leon Seals taking Brown's place and teaming with White, Clyde Simmons and Seth Joyner in harrassing quarterbacks.

Cardinals at Buccaneers

Rosenbach is back for Phoenix after shredding a knee and missing last season. He'll have Ernie Jones and Randal Hill to throw to, and Johnny Johnson to hand off to in Joe Bugel's system, which worked well in a 3-1 preseason.

For the Bucs, the question of whether Vinny Testaverde can play well continues unanswered, only this year it's with Sam Wyche calling the shots and Steve DeBerg waiting to step in.

49ers at Giants

Coach Ray Handley is on the hot seat in New York and he doesn't have a world-beater defense to bail him out any more. What's more, Hostetler's back trouble is back, fans are clamoring for Simms and the starter's a secret.

Vikings at Packers

Minnesota's preseason numbers — 4-0 record, 140 points scored, 6 allowed — will mean nothing if the Vikings don't win this one for rookie coach Dennis Green. Green Bay, on the other hand, wants to win for rookie coach Paul Holmgren.

Jets at Falcons

At Georgia Dome, the Falcons will be without Deion Sanders, who's in the thick of a pennant race with the Braves, and Brian Jordan, who retired to play baseball full-time, when they face Nagle and the Jets.

Nagle started all five exhibition games — all victories — while Ken O'Brien held out until only two weeks remained in camp.

Bengals at Seattle

New Seahawks coach Tom Flores, who lost quarterback Dave Kreig to Kansas City via Plan B, picked Stouffer over Dan McGwire as the replacement. The Bengals are coached by Dave Shula, at 33 the youngest coach in the league.

Steelers at Oilers

Houston is in a make or break year, especially with quarterback Warren Moon getting older. The Oilers will present a huge test for the Steelers, working under a new coach — Bill Cowher — for the first time in 24 years and a new starting quarterback — O'Donnell.

Browns at Colts

A rude awakening awaits Ted Marchibroda, back at the Colts' helm after 12 years. Hermann gets the start for Indianapolis, while George mends his injured hand. The Colts face a Cleveland team that figures to be better than its 56-3 preseason loss to Minnesota would indicate.

Lions at Bears

Detroit, hit by tragedy again when lineman Mike Andolsek was killed in a freak accident during the offseason, needs to prove its success of last season was no fluke. Chicago, dethroned as NFC Central champion by the Lions in 1991, is seeking to regain the title.

Chiefs at Chargers

The Chiefs, with a new quarterback in Dave Kreig and a massive backfield of Christian Okoye, Barry Word and Harvey Williams, will be trying to spoil San Diego coach Bobby Ross' NFL debut. An injury to Freisz elevated Gagliano to starter status for the Chargers.

Rams at Bills

Knox is back as Rams coach, but he left his old "ground chuck" offense style behind. He wants Jim Everett to throw often. The Bills will be trying for their third straight Super Bowl appearance — and their first victory.

Raiders at Broncos

Jay Schroeder still is the Raiders' starting quarterback, but with Eric Dickerson to run the ball, the offense should be improved. Denver has John Elway at quarterback, but his receiving corps is mostly banged up.

Cowboys at Redskins

Dallas has handled the defending Super Bowl champions from Washington better than anyone the past few seasons.

But Washington, with the addition of Heisman Trophy winner Desmond Howard and quarterback Mark Rypien signed to a new contract, could be harder to stop than ever.

NFL: Five first-time pro coaches take over teams

(From 1B)

Dallas and the decline of San Francisco and the New York Giants.

The 49ers, winners of four Super Bowls in the '80s, didn't exactly disappear — finishing 10-6 — but they missed the playoffs for the first time since 1982, largely because of the elbow surgery that put Montana on injured reserve for the entire season. The elbow still hurts and Montana is back on IR for at least four weeks — against his wishes — while Steve Young takes over for him.

Meanwhile, the teams that emerged last year may have trouble repeating their playoff runs for a variety of reasons.

In Detroit's case, it's tragedy. The offensive line has been decimated by the death of guard Eric Andolsek in an accident this spring and the injury that paralyzed guard Mike Utley last November.

In Dallas' case, it's a tougher schedule, a questionable defense and teams on whom the Cowboys can no longer sneak up. Success can have its downside, like holdouts — wide receiver Michael Irvin, center Mark Stepnoski and tight end Jay Novacek missed all of training camp.

Atlanta's problem is baseball. Cornerback Deion Sanders may be playing with the Braves through October and safety Brian Jordan has quit altogether to play full-time for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Washington, the defending NFL champion, had to endure holdouts, too. So did Buffalo, whom the Redskins beat 37-24 in last January's Super Bowl.

The Redskins were without quarterback Mark Rypien, cornerback Darrell Green tackle Jim Lachey and first-round draft pick Desmond Howard for most of training camp. Buffalo didn't get linebacker Cornelius Bennett into camp until last Monday.

Detroit wasn't the only team struck by tragedy.

Philadelphia, which had the league's best defense last season, had been one of the Super Bowl favorites. The Eagles had quarterback Randall Cunningham back after a year out with a knee injury and signed Walker after he was released by Minnesota, giving them the punch they had lacked at running back.

But All-Pro defensive tackle Jerome Brown was killed in a June auto accident, leaving a hole that the Eagles tried to fill in part by trading this week for Leon Seals from Buffalo.

Few of the new coaches have teams that will be factors in the playoff race — that's why the old coaches were replaced.

The first-timers are Dennis Green, who guided Minnesota to an unbeaten exhibition season in which it outscored opponents 140-6; Mike Holmgren in Green Bay; Dave Shula, son of Miami's Don, in Cincinnati; Bill Cowher in Pittsburgh, the first new coach there since Chuck Noll in 1969, and Bobby Ross, the former Georgia Tech coach, in San Diego.

The old guys in new roles include Sam Wyche, who went from Cincinnati to Tampa Bay, and Tom Flores, the former Raiders' coach, who stepped over from general manager in Seattle when Chuck Knox left to join the Rams.

It will be the second time in Los Angeles for Knox. The Colts, 1-15 last year, also have a second-timer — Ted Marchibroda, who coached them in Baltimore from 1976-78 and was offensive coordinator in Buffalo.

Bonds, Walk lead Bucs to seventh straight

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Barry Bonds homered for the fourth time in six games and the Pittsburgh Pirates won their seventh straight with a 6-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers behind Bob Walk's six-hitter.

The Pirates took another step toward the NL East title. They began the night with a three-game lead over Montreal.

Bonds has 26 home runs this season, six in his last 38 at-bats. His three-run shot in third inning followed singles by Alex Cole and Jay Bell.

Walk (9-4) hasn't lost to the Dodgers since Fernando Valenzuela beat him 9-2 in Pittsburgh on July 24, 1986. Since then, Walk is 6-0 against Los Angeles in 13 games, including 11 starts.

Overall this season, Walk has won six straight since losing to the Braves on July 24. The complete game was his first since he beat St. Louis 9-0 on Sept. 29, 1990.

Walk gave up a run in the seventh on consecutive doubles by Eric Karros and Henry Rodriguez. He struck out three and walked one.

The Pirates scored four of their runs off Orel Hershiser, who is 9-12 overall and 3-9 since June 15. Hershiser is 2-9 on the road this season.

He pitched five innings, giving up six hits and walking five. Carlos Garcia hit a sacrifice fly in the second after Jeff King and Orlando Merced singled.

The Pirates added two runs in the eighth against Steve Wilson. Bonds walked, stole second and scored on King's double. Merced 's RBI single scored King.

The Pirates are 26-8 since July 30 and have won nine of their last 10 games. The Dodgers are 1-7 on their eastern trip and have lost 13 of their last 15.

Padres 5, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — Jerald Clark hit a two-run homer after Greg Maddux was ejected with two outs in the eighth inning, lifting the San Diego Padres over the Chicago Cubs.

Maddux (16-11) was ejected by home plate umpire Ed Montague when he hit Dan Walters, who started for the mound but stopped. The confrontation came an inning after Jose Melendez threw over the head of Ryne Sandberg.

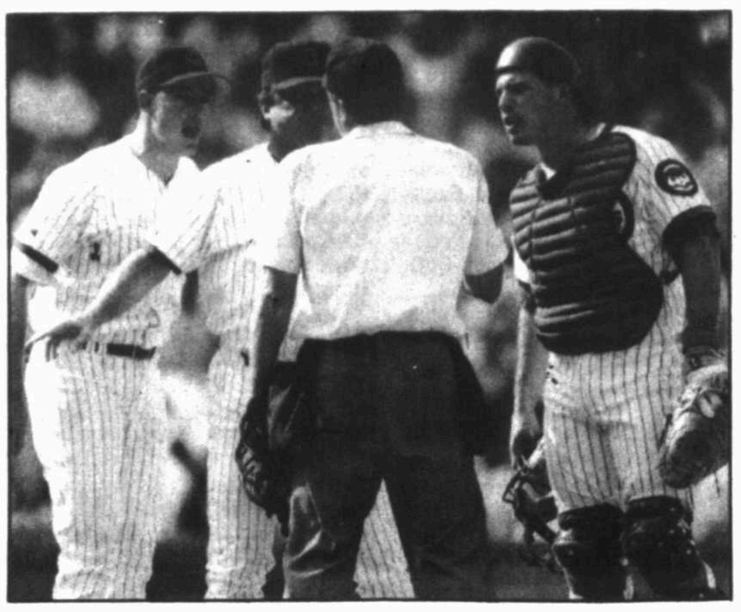

Jeff Robinson relieved for the Cubs and immediately surrendered Clark's 10th home run, the Padres' third of the game. Earlier, Fred McGriff hit his National League-leading 33rd with a man on and Tony Fernandez added a solo shot — his first home run in 352 at-bats.

It was the first time Maddux has allowed two home runs in a game in more than a year, since Aug. 4, 1991. He left after pitching 7 2-3 innings and allowing three runs and six hits while walking three and striking out six.

Melendez (6-7) worked 1 1-3 innings for the victory and Randy Myers pitched the ninth for his 31st save in 37 opportunities.

McGriff hit his homer in the fourth and Fernandez homered in the fifth for a 3-2 lead. The Cubs tied it in their half on Andre Dawson's third straight single and Steve Buechele's double.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the third. Ryne Sandberg tripled and Mark Grace had a sacrifice fly, Dawson doubled and Buechele singled.

Reds 6, Mets 5

CINCINNATI — Bill Doran and Jeff Branson had two-out RBI singles in the ninth inning as the Cincinnati Reds rallied for a disputed victory over the New York Mets.

Anthony Young (2-11) blew his second save in three nights by failing to hold a 5-4 lead in the ninth. Glenn Braggs and Joe Oliver singled with one out, and Doran singled under second baseman Jeff Kent's glove to tie with two out. Branson, 12-for-31 as a pinch-hitter, lined a single to center for the game-winner.

The Mets lost a chance to blow the game open in the top of the ninth when Eddie Murray, one of the majors' best hitters with the bases loaded, was ejected by home plate umpire Ed Rapuano during an argument before his bases-loaded at-bat.

Braves 6, Phillies 5

ATLANTA — Pinch-hitter Brian Hunter capped a four-run ninth inning rally with a two-run homer to give the Atlanta Braves a victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Hunter, who was only 1-for-15 as a pinch-hitter, hit a 2-2 fastball from reliever Mitch Williams (3-7) over the left field fence for his 13th homer of the year. It scored Lonnie Smith, who had doubled. Sid Bream hit a two-run homer earlier in the inning off Philadelphia starter Ben Rivera.

The Braves' victory snapped a three-game losing streak and kept them 6½ games ahead of Cincinnati in the National League West race.

NL Roundup

Astros 5, Expos 2

MONTREAL — Darryl Kile won for the first time in 14 starts since April 24, leading the Houston Astros over Montreal and stopping the Expos' six-game winning streak.

Montreal dropped four games behind NL East-leading Pittsburgh, which beat Los Angeles 6-1.

Ken Caminiti hit a two-run homer for Houston, which won for the 16th time in 23 games. Kile (3-9) allowed one run and five hits in eight innings, struck out two and walked two.

Chris Nabholz (9-10) gave up three runs and six hits in five innings, struck out three and walked three.

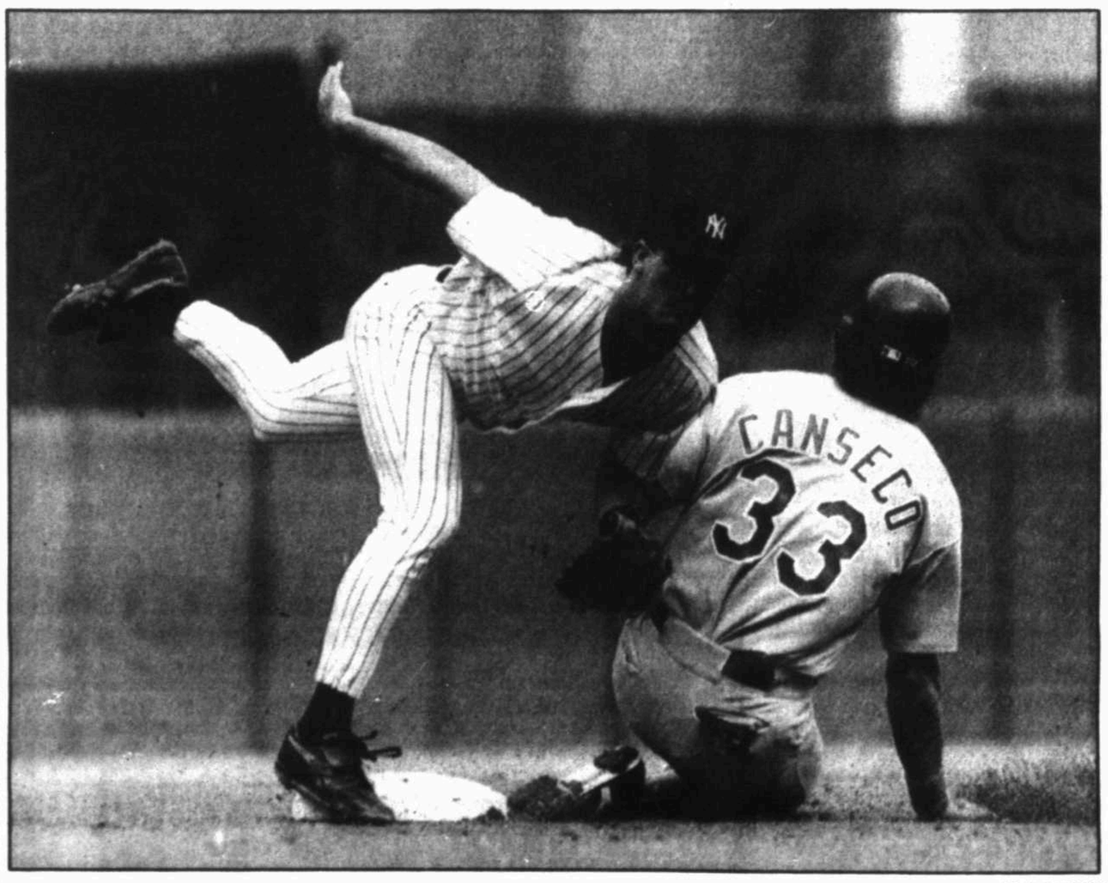

Montreal went ahead in the first when Marquis Grissom singled and Moises Alou doubled, but Houston got three runs in the third. Craig Biggio walked, Steve Finley and Jeff Bagwell singled and Pete Incaviglia walked with the bases loaded.

Cardinals 4, Giants 0

ST. LOUIS — Rheal Cormier and Todd Worrell combined on a seven-hitter as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Francisco Giants.

Cormier (6-10) allowed six hits in 7 2-3 innings, leaving after singles by Darren Lewis and Royce Clayton. Worrell relieved, got Robby Thompson on a groundout and finished for his second save.

It was Worrell's 128th save for the Cardinals, breaking Bruce Sutter's previous club record.

Jose Canseco, right, slides into second ahead of the tag of Yankees' second baseman Pat Kelly. Canseco's RBI double was his first hit since joining the Ranger Friday.

Canseco-less A's now 0-5

Brewers' Robin Yount nears 3,000 hits

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — John Valentin went 3 for 3 with two doubles and the Boston Red Sox sent the punchless Oakland Athletics to their season-high fifth straight loss, 7-3.

Since trading Jose Canseco on Monday night, the A's are 0-5 and have scored a total of only seven runs. But Oakland managed to hold its 4½-game lead in the AL West as Minnesota lost for the second straight day in Toronto, 7-3.

Valentin drove in two runs and scored twice. His two-run double with the bases loaded capped a three-run sixth inning that made it 5-2.

John Dopson (7-7) pitched 5 2-3 innings and gave up two runs. Matt Young and Greg Harris completed the combined six-hitter.

Dopson had gone nine starts since his last victory on July 11. He was 0-3 in that span.

Ron Darling (12-9) was 4-0 in his last eight starts before giving up five runs in 5 2-3 innings.

Valentin singled and eventually scored on Scott Cooper's groundout in the third. Troy Neel hit a two-run homer for Oakland in the fourth.

The Red Sox tied it at 2 in the fifth when Valentin doubled and later scored on Billy Hatcher's grounder.

Bob Zupcic hit an RBI single in the Boston sixth. Reliever Jeff Parrett inherited a bases-loaded, two-out jam and Valentin lined a double down the third-base line.

Mo Vaughn hit a two-out, two-run double in the Boston seventh. Rickey Henderson doubled home a run in the eighth off Young.

Brewers 10, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Robin Yount and Franklin Stubbs consecutive home runs in the first inning, and Yount added a single to raise his career total to 2,995 as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Detroit Tigers.

Bill Wegman (12-12) won for only the second time in six starts, sending the Tigers to their sixth straight loss, which matched their longest skid of the season. He allowed three runs and six hits in five innings, leaving with a stiff back.

Rookie David Haas (3-2) allowed four runs and six hits in 1 1-3 innings, the shortest start of his career. Les Lancaster up gave six runs and seven hits in three innings.

Pat Listach and Darryl Hamilton opened Milwaukee's four-run first with singles, Paul Molitor hit an RBI groundout, Yount followed with his seventh homer and Stubbs hit his ninth.

White Sox 12, Royals 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — George Bell had four hits as the Chicago White Sox beat the Kansas City Royals in a game shortened to eight innings by rain.

Chicago has won four straight and nine of 14, closing within 6½ games of AL West-leading Oakland. The Athletics have lost five straight since trading Jose Canseco to Texas.

Charlie Hough, who became just the 16th pitcher in major league history to make 800 appearances, lasted just 2 1-3 innings.

Rangers 7, Yankees 3

NEW YORK — Jose Canseco got his first hit for Texas, an RBI double during a five-run ninth inning, helping the Rangers beat the New York Yankees.

Canseco had popped out, fouled out and walked twice before his double. In his first game since being traded from Oakland to Texas, he went 0 for 4 Friday night.

Rafael Palmeiro hit a two-run double in the fifth inning and a two-run homer in the ninth. He homered for the second straight game, giving him 17 this season.

Rookie Roger Pavlik (3-2) shut out the Yankees until the eighth, when New York scored on Roberto Kelly's single. Pavlik allowed seven hits in 7 1-3 innings and Kenny Rogers got his sixth save.

Palmeiro homered off Sam Militello (3-2) for a 2-0 lead. In the ninth, pinch hitter Geno Petralli singled home a run, Jack Daugherty and Canseco had RBI doubles and Palmeiro hit his two-run double.

Bernie Williams hit a two-run single in the New York ninth.

Blue Jays 7, Twins 3

TORONTO — Joe Carter drove in his 100th run as the Toronto Blue Jays again broke loose on a hit barrage and beat the Minnesota Twins.

Carter, who has reached 100 RBIs in six of his last seven seasons, singled home a run in the fourth. The Blue Jays hit five straight singles in the inning and scored five times.

Indians 5, Mariners 4

CLEVELAND — Albert Belle grounded an RBI single past a drawn-in infield with one out in the ninth inning, giving the Cleveland Indians a victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Felix Fermin drew his fourth walk of the game with one out in the ninth against Russ Swan (3-10) and Carlos Baerga singled Fermin to third. Belle then greeted Mike Schooler with his third hit, a grounder to the right of shortstop Omar Vizquel. The hit gave Belle three RBIs in the game.

Eric Plunk (6-3) worked a hitless ninth for Cleveland.

UA starts post-SWC existence with loss

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Defensive end Judson Boehmer returned a fumble 34 yards for a touchdown and Detric Cummings intercepted a deflected pass to stop a promising drive as The Citadel upset Arkansas 10-3 on Saturday.

The Division I-AA Bulldogs were down 3-0 when E.D. Jackson, on his 24th carry of the game, was hit by Garrett Sizer and fumbled. Boehmer picked up the ball and scored untouched, hugging the ball with both arms during the final 20 yards.

The Division I Razorbacks reached midfield in three plays and Jason Allen threw for Tony Jeffery. The ball bounced off Jeffery and into the arms of Cummings who returned it 24 yards to the Arkansas 37. Eight plays later, Jeff Trinh kicked a 25-yard field goal that made it 10-3 with 3:28 to play.

The victory was the Bulldogs' fifth in their last six games against Division I opponents since 1988.

Boehmer's fumble recovery helped the Bulldogs survive what could have a demoralizing sequence.

Todd Wright's 25-yard field goal ended a 68-yard drive and put Arkansas on top 3-0. Then, Cummings misplayed the kickoff. He caught it in the end zone, came out, started to retreat and wound up at the 6. Jack Douglas, the most prolific rushing quarterback in I-AA history, got them out of the hole with a 23-yard pass down the middle to Marty Fagan. The Bulldogs made a first down before they punted and Boehmer came up with the touchdown.

Douglas kept the Razorbacks off balance much of the game and never made a mistake on The Citadel's end of the field. He wound up with 26 carries for 82 years and completed five of seven passes for 58. His production helped the Bulldogs control the ball almost 18 minutes in the first half.

Arkansas unveiled its new one-back offense, but most of the Razorbacks' success came on the running of Jackson, who wound up with 29 carries for 167 yards.

OPEN: Graf, Courier, McEnroe all winners sick, tired and sapped of strength in a 6-4, 6-0, 6-3 loss to Alexander Volkov.

Ivanisevic couldn't figure out what was wrong with him, ticking off such possibilities as a virus, too much tennis, an aversion to American food, the city air.

"Here food is not good. If you eat those McDonald's cheeseburgers hamburgers, you go to the hospital forever," the Croatian complained in his deep, deadpan voice. "I went to some Italian restaurant, but I don't know. Probably the air, something is wrong."

He complained about the food in London, too, but that didn't stop him from serving 206 aces and pushing Agassi to five sets with 37 in the final. Ivanisevic had only nine against Volkov, 33 in his three matches.

"I was playing without any energy. My legs felt very heavy. I couldn't run," said Ivanisevic, who was given rehydration fluids on the court during the match. "Since I came here in America, I feeling very bad, very sick. First in New Haven (Conn.) and then here. Maybe some kind of virus.

"Since I came to New York, I can't sleep. I am waking, like, five times a night. Never before is so."

Agassi, No. 8, had no such problems on the stadium court, easily overpowering Jan Siemerink 6-2, 6-3, 6-3, and next faces No. 10 Carlos Costa, a 6-1, 6-2, 6-3 victor over Omar Camporese. The winner goes on to the quarterfinals against the winner of Courier-McEnroe in the fourth round.

Courier, the top seed and winner of two Grand Slam events this year, had a tough time beating No. 60 Cedric Pioline 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 3-6, 6-3. McEnroe, meanwhile, cruised to a 6-3, 6-1, 6-4 victory over Richard Fromberg.

"I really wanted an opportunity to play Courier," McEnroe said. "It's a chance to play the top player in the world. Then after that I'd probably have to play Agassi. That would be having to play the best and the two favorites here. It's a test for me. I'll let it hang out and see what happens."

Steffi Graf, the second seed, won her third match without dropping a set.

Jimmy Connors loses tennis air in a hurry

NEW YORK (AP) — When the air began leaking from Jimmy Connors' U.S. Open balloon, it went in a hurry.

For one set of his match against No. 9 seed Ivan Lendl Friday night, Connors turned the clock back to 1983 and his last Open title, achieved on the same court, against the same, stoical Lendl.

Two days after his 40th birthday, Connors won the first set 6-3 and had 20,000 of his closest friends at the National Tennis Center howling.

"It was sweet to be able to play like that," Connors said.

Then, reality set in.

Lendl, standing at the baseline, refusing to be lured to the net, became a ball machine, returning everything Connors had to offer. He won the next three sets 6-3, 6-2, 6-0.

Famous for his five-set, four-hour Open marathons, the stony-faced Lendl seemed prepared to stay at center court all night if necessary.

By the time he had finished running Connors around, Jimbo looked his age and more. At the end, even when he made a point, his shoulders were drooping.

"I was the one forcing the action," Connors said. "He just stayed out there and bunted the ball back. I was the one being aggressive.

"I served and volleyed as well as I ever done in my life. I expended so much energy in doing that, that I found myself playing back and hitting seven balls a point. Seven balls was too many. I started slowing down a little.

"He is eight years younger. He is bigger and stronger and in a little better shape. So he is content to do that."

The result was Lendl's 17th straight victory over Connors. "That's the way I've played Jimmy for a long time," he said. "It is working so I see no reason to change."

Lendl's "bunts" were zipping past Connors, often nicking the sidelines, frequently falling just inside the backline, frustrating Jimbo at every turn.

Near the end, Connors ran down a lob and tried the old Yannick Noah between-the-legs return. It failed miserably and even Jimbo had to laugh, cracking to some fans in the baseline boxes: "That was a weak effort, wasn't it?"

It did not matter to the Connors loyalists, who packed the National Tennis Center, pulling for another bit of magic from their man.

Only when the task became hopeless, when Connors was down 4-0 in the final set, did a few of them begin heading for the exits.

They are his people and Connors knows it. They became converts a year ago when he staged a surprising dash into the semifinals of the Open.

"The people got into that because I played some good tennis and because of the age factor," he said. "The people in the stands are not 25 and under. They are 35 and over.

"Those were all the people that were there 20 years ago when I first started. A lot of them didn't like me then. Some of them did. They stayed around for all this time to still come out and watch me play and because of that they feel a part of me and I feel a part of them. I have a relationship with these people that is beyond tennis."

Why, if the people didn't like Connors 20 years ago, are they in his corner now?

"I think my attitude was different (for the fans) then," he said. "My game was new. How I went about things was different. I was not a country club player. I was a public parks player and I had the attitude of that.

"They didn't like my attitude, which was fine, but that kind of attitude is what brought in the people, the real sports fans who weren't afraid to say, 'Hey, this isn't too bad. The kid is out there grinding his guts out. He is not afraid to say what he thinks and do what he wants.' So whether you like me ot hate me, you still enjoyed coming back the next day.

"People see my feelings out there, which I like. I like them to know when I am happy and when I am sad and I like them to know when I am upset. That is me. That is just my attitude and what I am inside. I think they can relate to that because they know that everything doesn't go 100 percent right for them everytime, either."

Obviously, Connors was disappointed at the Lendl result. He had been encouraged after the first set. And then the match turned on him.

"It's all right," he said.

Next on Connors' agenda is a Sept. 25 match against Martina Navratilova at Las Vegas. The meeting had a lot more luster before the Open. Now it pairs two second-round losers, whose age began to show on the hardcourts of the National Tennis Center.

Dallas, Mark Stepnoski come to contract terms

Associated Press

IRVING — Starting center Mark Stepnoski agreed Saturday to a new contract, the Dallas Cowboys announced.

However, Stepnoski will not be ready for Monday's game against the Washington Redskins, breaking his string of 36 straight starts at center.

Frank Cornish, a Plan B acquisition who spent his first two pro seasons with the San Diego Chargers, starts at center while Dale Hellestrae, re-signed after being released this week, is the backup.

"Had it been up to me, I'd love to be out there Monday night against the Redskins," said Stepnoski. He said he will focus on trying to be ready to play next Sunday against the New York Giants.

The three-year, $1.95 million contract makes him Dallas' highest-paid offensive lineman, The Dallas Morning News reported. Stepnoski can earn an additional $50,000 per year in incentives if he plays about the same percentage of downs as he did the last two years, the newspaper said.

Stepnoski was the last Cowboys holdout to sign. Pro Bowl receiver Michael Irvin came to terms late Thursday, signing a three-year contract that makes him the team's highest-paid player.

Grieve builds job security

Associated Press

DALLAS — The mammoth trade Texas Rangers general manager Tom Grieve pulled off last week could be earning him a contract extension until 1995.

Rangers officials have said managing general partner George W. Bush and team president Tom Schieffer are prepared to extend Grieve's contract through at least 1994.

"We'll talk about that at the proper time," Bush said Friday. "This isn't the time."

The deal is expected to be completed by the first week of October, The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

The Rangers' poor performance this season had cast doubt on Grieve's future with the team.

But Bush said team ownership was "impressed" by Grieve's handling Monday of a four-player trade with Oakland. The Rangers traded right fielder Ruben Sierra and pitchers Jeff Russell and Bobby Witt for outfielder Jose Canseco.

Grieve, 44, is signed through the 1993 season. He became general manager in September 1984.

Jackson, Eagles close

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Eagles and holdout tight end Keith Jackson are close to agreement on a new contract, it was reported Saturday.

The Philadelphia Daily News quoted an anonymous source as saying there was "considerable movement" on Jackson's part Friday night. The newspaper said Jackson was rumored to close to finalizing the deal before Sunday's season-opener against the New Orleans Saints.

Jackson, a three-time Pro Bowl selection, has backed off his demand for $2 million a year, said Bob Wallace, the team's legal counsel. He described the difference between the sides as "miles apart."

The club's latest offer is believed to be a three-year package totaling close to $4 million, with a 1992 salary of $1.2 million and an average of $1.325 million over the life of the contract, the newspaper reported.

If Jackson still is a holdout Sunday, he begins missing game checks, worth $75,000 each, along with roster and reporting bonuses totaling $100,000.

Diablos, Wranglers advance

WICHITA FALLS, Kan. (AP) — Ray McDavid's three-run homer fueled an offensive attack that pushed Wichita past El Paso 10-1 Friday, wrapping up the Texas League Western Division title for the Wranglers two games to one.

The Wranglers banged out 12 hits against El Paso pitchers while Pedro Martinez gave up only one run and four hits over five and two-thirds innings.

Dwayne Hosey had two singles and walked three times and J.D. Noland was three-for-five and scored two runs for the Wranglers.

Wichita now advances to the Texas League championship against the Shreveport Captains.

SOFTBALL: Eight teams still alive in losers' bracket bracket game by a 3-2 margin to Wholesale Tires of Faribault, Minn. Ridgewood lost the game in the bottom of the seventh inning and had a 3-0 lead at one point.

Odessa's Expert Lube Aces lost to Mr. Pizza of Rochester, Minn.

But the battle goes on with four teams remaining unbeaten, heading into 9 a.m. games today. A champion will be decided tonight with the title scheduled to be decided at 6:20 p.m.

There are miles to travel before today's close and an interesting winner's bracket contest at 10:20 a.m. is set. That is when the Coastal Cardinals of Wilmington, Delaware, takes on Anderson Automotive of Norristown, Penn. These two teams aren't from the same state, but it is a backyard scrap.

"We play Anderson in a league at home, so we've played quite a few times," notes Paige Nichols, the left-center fielder for the Cardinals. "I don't know what the record is, but I would say the series is pretty even. In fact, the Drug Free All-Stars (of Millersville, Md.) is also in our league and they are still alive.

"We didn't expect to meet them so soon, but the numbers have dropped for this tournament. Last year there were over 40 teams and the year before there were 60. It's dropping way down. I guess a lot of teams are going to lower classes."

The Cardinals have hit six homers in the tournament with Bev Jack and Carol Byrd doing most of the damage, but it wasn't the plan.

"Actually, we were a little disappointed to see the fences in so close here because, believe it or not, we're more of a gap hitting team that moves the runners around.

"Also, we don't get the wind we've had here," Nichols said. "We get a wind maybe one day in a tournament at home, but it's been consistent here. It takes a lot of adjustment, but it really hasn't hurt our pitcher any."

Orthopaedic Institute of Dayton, Ohio, will meet Bill Fraley's Wildcats of Lexington, Ky., in the other winner's bracket contest at the same time.

Eight teams remain in the loser's bracket with each only a loss away from elimination.

The losers' bracket matchups, beginning at 9 a.m. are Diamond Backs of Tulsa vs. Bricker's Restaurant of Devon, Conn.; Spirits of Apopka, Fla., vs. Mr. D's Bad to the Bone of Topeka, Kan.; Casey's Shell of Boston vs. Thein Well Company of Rochester, Minn.; and Tiger Tom's Goonies vs. Drug Free.

VSO debate gives textbook example

Veterans in Midland County were rightfully angry recently when they learned that Midland County commissioners were considering closing the Veterans Service Office. They even started a petition drive to let commissioners know they need the services provided by the veterans office.

The issue was resolved when commissioners, who in budget study had considered closing the office only because of the county's financial concerns and their desire to save tax money where possible, decided to continue fully funding the veterans office and to seek another service officer as a replacement for Melle May, who died in May.

That was the correct decision. And in this particular case, the debate encapsulized how government should work. The commissioners were doing their jobs by looking at every possible way of saving local taxpayers' money. They certainly bear the responsibility of doing that. Another concern was saving the county tax money for use in other ways on what commissioners may believe is a greater priority. All levels of government are facing a crunch today because of the demand for services by their constituents and the push for more cost-efficient government. In that light, it was imperative that the commissioners weigh the value of the office against the cost.

The reaction of veterans to the possibility of its being closed was also timely and forceful. It got the attention of the commissioners, and it made the point clearly that veterans who were promised certain services because of their patriotism and loyalty to this nation in defending all of us will not accept less than what was promised. That's as it should be.

So the issue was defined clearly, and the commissioners decided unanimously against closing the office. That decision was as it should have been. Government is intended to serve its constituents, not the other way around.

No doubt the question of how much service people get for their tax dollar will keep coming around again and again as government faces ever-greater demands. The debate before Midland County commissioners on the Veterans Service Office merely presented a textbook example of how government should resolve those questions.

Price improvements please gas producers

Indications that natural gas prices may be starting back up have Midland-area gas producers speculating that the long-awaited turnaround on prices may be at hand.

It has been 10 years in coming.

Prices had started inching back up even before Hurricane Andrew damaged some 100 drilling platforms in the Gulf of Mexico, but even that damage was expected to push prices a little higher. The hurricane damage, while tragic from a standpoint of human compassion, could actually help gas prices sustain their upward trend.

There are other indications, too, that point to an improving price picture for gas producers. One is the prospect for a colder winter, which would push prices even higher. In fact, some producers have speculated that gas might bring $2.50 per Mcf by December.

A price that high would not put the gas industry back where it was a decade ago, but it would be a major improvement. In 1982, before prices started tumbling, natural gas was selling for twice the $1.70 per Mcf it brings today, and some contracts were locked in at $6 per Mcf. While the current increase in prices may not please consumers, producers like what they're seeing in an improved cash flow situation on natural gas.

Trade pact already proves positive to border residents

South Texans have the North American Free Trade agreement to thank for much-needed improvements along the border, even though the pact is yet to be ratified.

With mere whispers over the possibility of such an agreement, infrastructure projects, such as roads and bridges, along the Texas-Mexico border were accelerated. Now that the agreement is wrapped up and ready to submit for congressional consideration, construction should shift into high gear.

Even if Congress fails to ratify NAFTA — which would be a mistake — Rio Grande Valley residents will still greatly benefit from the surge in infrastructural construction.

South Texas cities have already enjoyed a good deal of free trade with Mexican nationals who flood the border during the weekends to spread their wealth among stores in Texas. That trade has increased in the last few years with the growth of the Mexican economy.

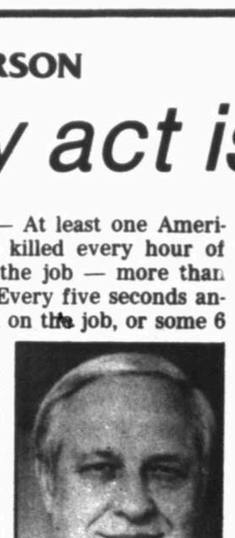

Whatever NAFTA's eventual fate, Valley and other border residents will still come out winners.

Safety act is not living up to its task

WASHINGTON — At least one American worker is killed every hour of every day on the job — more than 10,000 workers a year. Every five seconds another worker is injured on the job, or some 6 million a year.

Anderson

More than 20 years after the passage of the landmark Occupational Safety and Health Act, the federal agency charged with protecting worker safety and health, OSHA, receives $380 million a year to carry out its mission of protecting nearly 100 million American workers — less than $4 per worker.

The lack of funding means that at OSHA's current level of inspections, it will take them 84 years to reach every workplace. The state-by-state profile ranges from inspecting each workplace once every 11 years in Nevada to once every 167 years in Nebraska. AFL-CIO safety expert Jim Ellenberger notes that while some of the government's statistics-gathering is flawed and controversial, the picture currently points to an upswing in injuries and illnesses since 1984.

"It is clear that the plant that wants to operate in a way that jeopardizes the lives and the health of its workers has a very, very good chance of getting away with it and never having an inspection," AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland told our associate Dale Van Atta. American insurance companies are emerging as unlikely allies of workers in the crusade for workplace safety — even if it is driven more by checkbook than by conscience. Fewer accidents mean fewer payouts on workers' compensation insurance. Most of the top insurers offer safety experts and programs for the companies they insure, which may well do more for worker safety than OSHA.

Sometimes safety is as simple as re-inventing the way a pole is climbed. When too many workers were getting injured on the job, AT&T formed a school for pole-climbing in Valley Forge, Pa., to develop a safer way to shimmy up the pole.

On the other hand, too often American industry believes the price of a safe workplace is too high. Ed Welch, former workers' compensation commissioner of Michigan, describes the two different approaches — one commendable, the other condemnable — undertaken by auto plants facing safety threats.

The commendable example is an automotive plant that found that a very high portion of their workers' comp costs were related to carpal tunnel syndrome (a painful, incapacitating wrist injury) — and traceable to the use of a specific air gun throughout the plant. The workers wanted all the air guns replaced, but the plant manager balked. The total cost would be $1.5 million, and he had no budget for it. So a workers' committee regrouped and examined the data.

They discovered that 80 percent of the injuries were attributable to air guns used on only 20 percent of the jobs. The plant manager readily agreed he could afford that, and the new safety measure was implemented.

The condemnable example comes from a Michigan plant that also found itself submerged under carpal tunnel claims coming from one particularly strenuous operation. Management's remedy was to relocate the plant to Indiana, where the workers' comp rates are substantially lower.

"They are now able to continue to injure these workers without having to pay as much in compensation benefits," Welch says.

Bush should urge Clinton to run as Dewey

George Bush is running as Harry Truman. Harry Truman did the same thing in 1948. Ran as Harry Truman. Afterward he said, "It was a lot easier than I thought it would be."

That was the year everybody said Harry Truman couldn't win. Since nobody wants to run as a sure loser, Harry Truman naturally toyed with the idea of running as somebody else, but Mrs. Truman said, "Over my dead body." That's why Harry Truman called Mrs. Truman "the Boss."

Baker

Afterward Mrs. Truman said she had no use for men who lost their grip on their own identities every time a political campaign came along. "If Harry's got to lose," she told the First Ladies' Home Companion, "he ought to have the gumption to lose as Harry Truman, not as Woodrow Wilson."

Here Mrs. Truman gave away the secret. It was Wilson whom Harry Truman had toyed with the idea of running as. It would have been more fun to run as the Republican Theodore Roosevelt, but as a loyal Democrat Truman refused even to toy with the idea of crossing party lines.

Mrs. Truman feared that if he ran as Woodrow Wilson and won he might spend his second term slipping in and out of other men's identities. "It's trouble enough being First Lady," she said, "without sending Clark Gable down to the Oval Office in the morning and getting William Howard Taft back for supper at night."

Whether Mrs. Bush now confronts such a grotesque situation is unknown, and likely to remain so until the campaign ends. If George Bush is not only running as Harry Truman, but also eating as Pat Buchanan, napping as Ronald Reagan and pitching horseshoes as Arnold Schwarzenegger, Republicans won't want it announced until they get some polls showing this is exactly what Americans want of a president.

White House people see nothing odd about George Bush running as Harry Truman, or "being in Harry Truman mode," as they put it, being under orders to classify all life into modes.

Theirs is a world in which Harry Truman mode is followed by re-election mode, which is followed by second-term mode, which is followed by vision-thing mode. In vision-thing mode they all spend another four years trying to decide why they wanted to be elected in the first place, aside from the honor of the thing.

People ask, Why does Bush run as Harry Truman? Why not run as Attila the Hun? Because he ran as Attila the Hun last time with mixed results. It won him the presidency but outraged the Hun family, which has filed a horde-action suit alleging that his conduct running as Attila did irreparable damage to the Hun name.

Harry Truman was the logical "run-as" choice. George Bush planned to travel America denouncing Congress, while Harry Truman in 1948 traveled America denouncing Congress. The strategy was inevitable: Harry-Truman-mode time!

For the strategy to succeed, the Bush juggernaut — or "juggernette," as Patrick Buchanan called it when he ran as Newt Gingrich — must make Bill Clinton run as Thomas E. Dewey.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York was the man Harry Truman beat by running against Congress. Thomas E. Dewey was not a warm man. As a famous prosecutor, he was closely identified with the electric chair. He looked too neat to touch and had a neat little mustache.

To make things worse, he ran as Aristides the Just, ancient Greece's upright man who was exiled by the Athenians because they got fed up with hearing him called "the Just."

How will George Bush running as Harry Truman lure Bill Clinton into running as Thomas E. Dewey? First step: a major campaign speech charging that Bill Clinton doesn't have the know-how to grow a neat little mustache.

Political campaign themes are clear, familiar

WASHINGTON — Trollope's political novels have been called ideal reading for a lazy Labor Day weekend because if a breeze blows over a few pages while you nap, never mind, plunge back in. The narrative moves at such a measured pace that nothing much will have been missed. This presidential campaign may now be like that. Its themes are clear.

Will

A Democrat more liberal than he wants to seem, and a Republican less conservative than he wants to seem, are leading parties whose differences have narrowed, and whose ranges of politically possible policies are narrow.

Liberalism developed when liberty was threatened by the forces of order — state or church. Today people feel more threatened by disorder. Modern American liberalism developed to redress a perceived imbalance between anemic government and the surging power of entities and forces in industrial society. Now that (since last October) government jobs outnumber manufacturing jobs in America, an insufficiency of government is not seen as the problem.

The Democratic Party's change of mind — its movement toward the center — reflects recognition that it cannot win the presidency by changing the composition of the electorate. That is, it cannot win by mobilizing non-voters among the poor and minorities. Political scientist Ruy Teixeira of the Brookings Institution calculates that if turnouts by blacks, Hispanics and poor whites had each been 20 percent higher in every state Bush won in 1988, Dukakis still would have lost by 102 electoral votes.

Over the last 30 years, America's political center has shifted, to the disadvantage of Democrats. Watergate and Vietnam caused an erosion of confidence in government. The internationalization of economic life has weakened the power of governments. The mobility of money and businesses inhibits governments because wealth can flee currencies threatened by inflation or jurisdictions where growth is slow or government is meddlesome.

So parties whose promises depend on strong government are decreasingly plausible. Furthermore, long recessions and slow growth increase individual anxiety and decrease social solidarity, thereby weakening society's support for collective actions.

On the other hand, aspects of both economic vigor and its absence can help Democrats. The boom of the 1980s was unsettling to many people. While the U.S. economy added 19 million net new jobs, Fortune 500 corporations shrank by 4 million jobs and from 58 percent of industrial output to 42 percent. Rapid change generates stress, and thus generates supporters for a liberal party that equates any social distress with "victimization" and a failure of government to enforce "fairness."

The Bush recession was especially unsettling, for three reasons. First, it came after the long — ninety-two month — Reagan expansion which had convinced people that business cycles are products of government mistakes that government should know how to avoid. Second, Bush's recession came at the end of a low-saving decade, when people felt particularly vulnerable. Third, it came when the white collar component of the work force was larger than ever.

The weakening of social solidarity, the erosion of confidence in government and the increase in anxiety have made the issue of taxation paramount.

The issue of taxation arose among English-speaking (sort-of) people 1,000 years ago under King Ethelred the Unready, in connection with the Danegeld, an annual tax for the defense of the realm — actually, to pay tribute to the marauding Danes. Today George the Implausible is promising a tax cut that Congress will not deliver, to be balanced by spending cuts his own party will not countenance. Clinton promises to build a New Jerusalem by squeezing millionaires until they squeak.

So if you nap for now, you will have no trouble picking up the thread of this year's by-now familiar political narrative.

MC Chaparral Corps deserves hearty thanks

Fall registration at Midland College occurred more smoothly than ever due in large measure to a new group of volunteers who are members of Midland College's Chaparral Corps. The Chaparral Corps was recently formed and is coordinated by Linda Powell. Volunteers cover the spectrum of service to Midland College and its students. Volunteers participate in student tutoring, individual counseling, registration activities, campus tours, administrative assignments and a myriad of other functions which help Midland College help serve our students better.

As president of Midland College, I want to thank the members of the Chaparral Corps who are already involved in tangible ways. I am sure that there are others in Midland County who will gladly render their services on an as-needed basis and become members of the Chaparral Corps. These persons should contact Linda Powell at 684-7679. Ms. Powell will gladly see to it that all interested persons' talents are utilized in meaningful ways.

It is gratifying to see such an overwhelming response on the part of many talented citizens. All of us associated with Midland College are indebted to these hearty volunteers.

Vote for Baker would be vote for Midland

On Nov. 3rd, voters will once again be going to the polls to make their voices heard. One particular race will feature Republican candidate Carol Baker and Independent candidate Mary Wilson who are both vying for the position as Midland County Treasurer.

The Midland County Treasurer receives, invests and pays out, upon the discretion of the commissioners court, tens of millions of dollars of your money each year. The importance of this position dictates that it should be held by an experienced, qualified and trustworthy individual. Carol Baker is such a person.

I have worked with Carol for 15 years. Carol has been a dedicated public servant for the past 15 years. Carol is currently serving as Midland County Treasurer, having been appointed by the commissioners court in March of this year. Prior to that, she was chief deputy for the treasurer's office and also worked in the Midland County Auditor's Office. In addition, Carol was unanimously chosen by the Midland County Republican Party's Executive Committee as their nominee for the treasurer's post.

Carol's desire is to continue serving Midland County, its employees and the taxpayer in a responsible and efficient manner. She has shown she can do this and has said time and time again that she will indeed continue to do so.

Mary Wilson has stated (Midland Reporter Telegram, July 17)that the reason she is seeking the treasurer's position is "because it was there." She went on to add that "her job as an accountant may be drawing to a close."

Carol will bring to the job a vast amount of knowledge in county finances and the integrity and loyalty it takes to get the job done. She is genuinely concerned about the taxpayers and in carrying out her job duties so that you and I get the best possible return on our tax dollars. A vote for Carol Baker would most definitely be a vote for Midland County!

Clinton, Gore can't be true to faith, campaign

As I hear all the politicians speak about family values and God in the campaign, I think we should stop and examine just where their heart is regarding one of these two matters in Bill Clinton's and Al Gore's life.

I am not sitting here judging who is a good Baptist or Christian, but when someone is going to lead our country I think we should explore their heart. No matter whether you are Christian or Moslem, or Hindu or Buddhist, each faith teaches that the words of their faith are true, without question. And if you are true to your faith, you must believe with all you have that these words are correct.

Now we see Clinton each Sunday coming out of church and there has been quite a bit of talk about the ticket being Southern Baptist/Christian.

Examine this on two important points. The first being Gay rights and acceptance of their lifestyle. If you read the Bible that Baptists believe is absolute, then you know this is not possible or acceptable.

The second issue is abortion. Again the many mentions of God knowing us in the womb and the importance of life are obvious and the acceptance of abortion rights on demand as Clinton's platform supports, just can't be accepted. Ask the National Southern Baptist Convention.

In any faith I know of, God is supposed to be first in your life and the closest thing to you. Being a Baptist/Christian, this is absolutely true I am positive. So if the Clinton/Gore ticket chooses to support these interest groups and their ideas above the words/faith that they claim to hold so dear and that as Christians they will have to answer for someday, how serious do you really think they are about you and your family's well-being? If they are not serious about something as personally important as the words of their faith can they be trusted? No matter which side of these issues you stand on, can we trust someone who will throw aside the true words of his faith so easily. Truth is truth and facts are facts.

These words on this subject are in black and white. This is not my opinion. If a person will compromise and sacrifice his most important beliefs for his ultimate goal, he'll sacrifice and compromise you also. Search down deep, you know that is the truth. Not Republican truth, not Democrat truth, but honest truth!

READERS' VIEWS on : COMMISSIONERS

It took courage to hold line on taxes

We would like to thank the Midland County Commissioners for holding the line on taxes. It took a great deal of courage on their part to cut from the budget those non-essential items which permeate most city and county governments.

After all, these are hard times and to continue to raise taxes does nothing more than create a hardship on the people who can least afford it.

The following people salute the commissioners on a job well done: Maxine Haines, Jim Frizell, Henry Libby, Robert Patterson, John Aylesworth, Bob Plank, David I. Miller and myself.

W.A. Laufer
Midland

Way to go Bro Seltzer, County Commissioners

Congratulations County Judge "Bro" Seltzer and the Midland County Commissioners for holding the line against new taxes and spending.

It seems the city council and Midland Independent School District (MISD) cannot control spending. At least some "good guys" are working to control the waste of local government. Way to go, "Bro!"

By voting, we taxpayers can compel politicians to "Just say no" to their "spending addiction!" For now, thanks to the county commissioners and all politicians who voted against tax increases this year. I look forward to 1993 spending freezes and, hopefully, reductions.

Mark A. Kimball
Midland

Spend-and-tax happy folks should take note

Congratulations are in order to the Midland County Commissioners for their decision to hold the line on tax increases for fiscal '93 in Midland County.

Maybe they should hold a tax seminar for the spend-and-tax happy folks at city hall, Midland Independent School District (MISD), and Midland County Hospital District (MCHD).

I will certainly remember the taxers and spenders versus the prudent fiscal stance recently displayed by the county commissioners, come next election day.

Commissioners gave us breath of fresh air

In regard to taxes within the jurisdiction of the Midland County Commissioners Court it appears we have a breath of fresh air. I for one am appreciative for the effort in holding the line on taxes.

Perhaps we should be as fast to congratulate for a job well done as to criticize.

Robert B. "Bob" Wilson

'Thank You' is given to Commissioners Court

A pat on the back and a much-deserved "Thank You" is given to the Midland County Commissioners Court for not increasing taxes.

Citizens other than myself who congratulate the court are Alice Moxey, Bill Bosworth, Bill Harris, Charlie Qualia, Sam H. Snoddy and Linda Hill.

Elected officials took time to listen, consider

My personal thank you to the Midland County Commissioners. Each commissioner took time to articulate the concerns of the court when considering the funding of the Veterans Service Office. Further each listened, read and considered additional information addressed to the areas of expressed concern.

Often our elected leaders are portrayed as uncaring automatons who serve only special interests. In this case each commissioner was willing to listen and consider alternate views. The system does work when those who are elected to serve listen to those who care and each respects the rights and opinions of the other. My respect for Midland County's elected officials has been reinforced by the diligent effort of each commissioner in this instance.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Campaign begins; political carnage lies ahead

ROCKVILLE, Md. — One sign, up near the stage in the amphitheater, reads "Stills," inviting not moonshiners but still photographers.

Another, near good seats in the center, proclaims "Cameras," for the TV medium.

Safire

Behind them, the view largely blocked, is the designation "Radio and Pencils," which was where I took a seat at Wednesday's Clinton rally at Montgomery College in Maryland.

What a deliciously archaic synecdoche: "pencils," to stand for "the writing press," much as "head" is the part used for the whole of "cattle." Most of the pencils around me take notes with laser-point pens or hand-held recorders or laptop computers and would not know a lead pencil from an antique quill, but the figure of speech is apt and original to this campaign.

I am a pencil. So is the 10-year-old boy sitting in the row below, laboriously writing an essay while we await the arrival of the candidate. I can make out the large block letters at the top of the page on his composition pad: "A Saga of Carnage," presumably about Hurricane Andrew; it is unlikely his topic is the plight of the Bosnians or Somalis.

The school chosen to be the setting for the day's public campaign event is the two-year community college in Montgomery County, Maryland, a wealthy area in a Democratic state. It has good facilities and teachers, superb jewelry-making and crafts courses, and is close enough to Washington, D.C., to provide a useful suburban backdrop for a stump speech with emphasis on education during a day of political huddles.

The crowd is a couple of thousand nice people on a pleasant day. Many are bedecked in badges, festooned in ribbons of momentary authority.

Gov. Clinton ambles in. I remember Richard Nixon explaining how a political leader should make an entrance, striding into a room or onto a stage briskly and authoritatively, taking charge — but that's not the Clinton style. He eases his way to the platform, almost sleepily listens to the introductions, and embarks on his speech in a folksy way.

What's good about his stump speech is this: Clinton speaks from notes but does not read at an audience, in contrast to President Bush, who is chained to his ever-changing text. The repeated Democratic message is health care, education, the new economy — positive themes, delivered in a non-threatening way. He scored a mild point by deriding last year's 23 percent bloating of the White House staff.

The general impression is that this guy means well and is not likely to do much harm, which befits a front-runner's strategy of playing not to lose.

What's not so good about the Clinton stump speech is this: He won't win by playing not to lose. He must sharpen and toughen his assault on the present deadness in the water, and stop calling it the status quo. He has to learn to bring people out of their seats.

Unlike President Bush, who knows how to capitalize on current events, Clinton does not use a new fact to work himself into some passion. He briefly cited that day's economic news — that personal income in real dollars had declined last year — but with quicker staff work, could have made that shocker the centerpiece of his speech and made the network news with his most effective message: Times are tough.

The unwary Clinton, pleased that the Bush family-values balloon has failed to rise, may be stepping into a generational trap. Bush charges that Democrats will raise taxes, striking fear into wage-earners; Clinton is countercharging that Republicans will cut services, frightening retirees.

Here in the amphitheater, candidate Clinton is wrapping up, charging wonkily that the country is "undereducated, underorganized, underinvested and underled."

But the campaign is just getting started; the opposing candidates are sparring, not yet slugging; we undecideds are in no rush to make a decision; and the political carnage lies ahead. It's a great time to be a pencil.

System needs polishing, not children's mental capabilities

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NORTH SALEM, N.Y. — With all the gloomy news about the lack of proper education for our young children, it was a relief to learn from an Associated Press report that five-month-old infants may have an amazing capability to grasp the rudiments of arithmetic.

Hearst

This astonishing revelation was particularly gratifying to me because a special early education program for children starting at the age of four is being established at the Hearst School in Washington, D.C. There, children between the ages of four and eight have already learned with remarkably quick aptitude how to operate a small computer.

My grandmother, Phoebe Apperson Hearst, wife of Sen. George Hearst who made a fortune in silver and copper mining in the West, founded the first kindergarten school in 1897. Forty-three years later, the Phoebe Apperson Hearst School for girls was built on the National Cathedral grounds as a tribute to the co-founder of the national Parent Teacher Association (PTA). My brother John, who died in 1958, and I laid the cornerstone for the school, which was the original National Cathedral School for Girls and is now, as Hearst Hall, a part of that school.

The separate Phoebe Hearst public school, located several miles from Hearst Hall, is co-educational. Little boys and girls age four to eight are participating in the new program. The whole school is now a demonstration center for the early childhood education program of the District of Columbia's Public School Board.

What astounds me most of all is the possible capability of five-month-old infants to add and subtract small numbers of objects mentally. More about this fascinating discovery in the following report sent me by Joe Kingsbury-Smith, our national editor in Washington:

The Associated Press report concerned the conclusions of new research published in the current issue of Nature magazine. It was based on an article by University of Arizona psychologist Karen Wynn, who wrote that tests suggest humans may be "innately endowed with arithmetical abilities."

Oxford University psychologist Peter Bryant wrote in an accompanying editorial that Karen Wynn's thesis "is a notable event in the history of developmental psychology."

The AP report said scientists already knew babies could tell the difference between two rubber duckies and three, but some believe babies just notice a difference in appearance rather than actually understand numbers. However, the numbers involved in the new experiments ranged no higher than three; so it is not inconceivable that the five-month old infants might be able to tell the difference between larger numbers.

What verges on the miraculous is that the Hearst School children between four and eight years of age have been able to learn remarkably quickly how to operate a small computer. It seems clear that the criticism of public school education is not due to lack of mental capability among young children but to the educational system, much of which is decentralized with testing and curriculum decisions made at the local level. Earlier this year a congressionally appointed panel recommended national curriculum and test standards. The United States is the only industrialized country without explicit minimum national standards of what public school children at certain grade levels should know in mathematics, science, history and other subjects. Some radical reforms are obviously needed.

Anonymous calls give no clue to Henry case

■ Police still have no new leads in the case of Elizabeth Henry's disapperance.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

After 381 days, Elizabeth Henry's disappearance is still as much of a mystery as it was the day she dialed 911.

"We are pretty much in the same place we started," said Midland Police Detective John Ingram. "There is nothing new that has been worth anything."

Even an anonymous phone call two weeks ago failed to shed any new light on the missing 18-year-old.

Police said the caller, a female, said she knew someone who worked on a rig at the country club who saw someone burying something. The caller refused to identify herself, nor did she say who was working on the rig or what country club she was referring to.

The call and another anonymous one that followed the same week led nowhere, leaving police as baffled as they were a year ago.

The circumstances surrounding the Lee High School senior's disappearance could have been straight out of a spy novel.

At approximately 2 p.m. on Aug. 19, Midland police received a call from Miss Henry requesting help. The connection was then cut off following a scream.

After arriving at her residence, 3610 Apollo Court, police found the garage door was open, the back door unlocked and no signs of struggle.

And, no signs of Miss Henry.

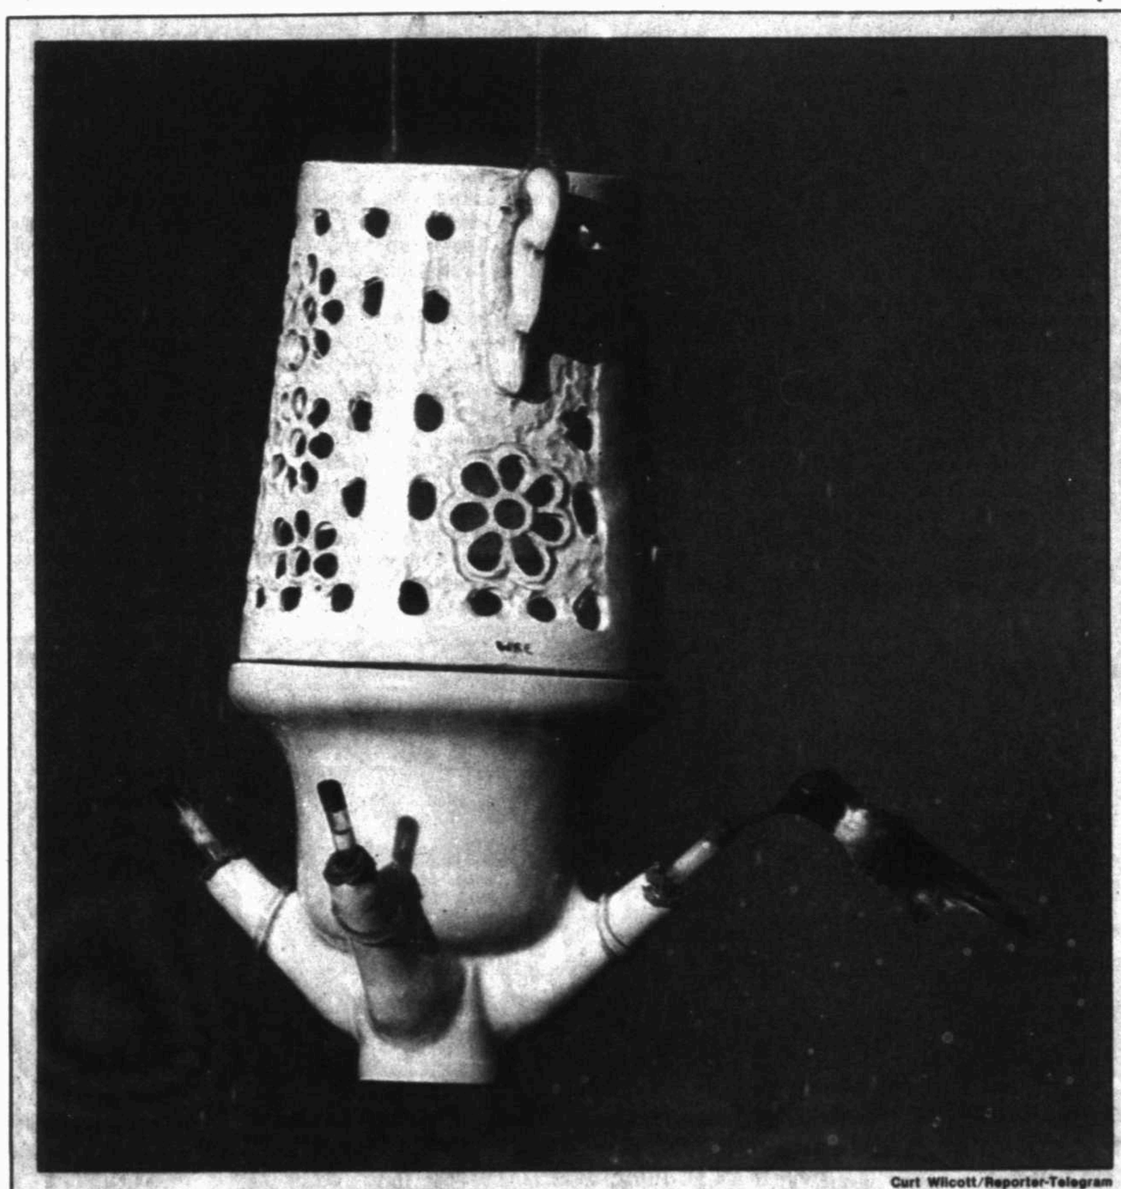

Two hours later, Ralph and Lynn Henry returned home to find the lights, television and stereo on, the dogs inside and their daughter missing.

A day later, the missing girl's car, a 1987 Ford Bronco II, was found at the Midland International Airport, with her purse inside.

Police questioned more than 200 people in connection with the girl's disappearance.

New leads eluded police until a nation-

A male Black-chinned hummingbird, the variety most common in Midland, feeds from an ornate feeder in the yard of Mr. and Mrs. Woody Erskine.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Hummingbirds customarily lay two tiny white eggs in nests that are about one inch in diameter and are constructed to expand as the young birds grow. A female may lay as many as four clutches during the summer nesting season. This nest was found abandoned.

Local 'hummers' discover unique niche in community

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Hovering far above our heads, visible only to the most dedicated bird watcher, is an avian hotbed — a virtual bird-lover's paradise, according to a local naturalist.

"Midland is absolutely unique for the number of hummingbird species a person can see in his backyard," said Midge Erskine. "There are at least 12 species of hummingbirds that I alone have seen."

Hummingbirds, who typically start migrating through the area in August, began the move about six weeks early this year because of last year's mild spring and winter. Their trek should end in October.

But people should not be concerned about leaving their feeders out after October.

"If you see a bird using your feeder later in October, it simply means he isn't moving fast enough," said Burr Williams, educational director at the Sibley Learning Center. "He'll be able to replenish . . . it may save the hummer's life. But it most definitely won't keep them here once they're strong."

Two species — the Black-chinned and the Ruby-throated — generally arrive from Mexico near the first of April and settle in the area until the late-summer migration begins, at which time they head back to Mexico or South Texas for the winter.

Four other common species — the Anna's, the Broad-tailed, the Rufous and the Allen's — usually don't nest in Midland but do pay occasional short visits to local hummingbird feeders for nourishment.

And the movement of so many "hummers" is creating quite a melodious buzz around local bird feeders.

"We're on quite a large migratory route. This is where east and west migratory flights overlap — and hummingbirds are no exception," Ms. Erskine said.

Black-chinned and Ruby-throated hummingbirds generally opt for a balanced diet of nectar and tiny insects.

"The Black-chinned hummers, especially, like to dine on red tubular flowers," Williams said. Some favorites include the red sal-

Officials to begin jury selection for murder trial

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Jury selection for the trial of a 28-year-old man charged with the shotgun slaying of his pregnant ex-wife in a grocery store parking lot in February will begin Tuesday.

Gilbert Biera Rivera Jr. will have his case heard before a 12-person jury in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court.

In July, Hyde denied a change of venue with the stipulation that if a non-prejudicial jury cannot be selected, the hearing would be moved to another county.

Rivera's attorney, Paul Williams, has declined to reveal his line of defense and denied pursuing an insanity defense.

District Attorney Al Schorre, who will be prosecuting, said he was unaware of what defense Williams would use.

Rivera allegedly shot Angela Dee Frescaz, 20, three times at close range with a 12-gauge shotgun as she sat in her car at Furr's Supermarket at Wadley Avenue and Garfield Street at about 8:20 p.m. Feb. 25.

The next evening, Rivera, after eluding police, was apprehended

Four more days remain open for MC registration

Staff report

Four days of late registration still remain for Midland College's 1992 fall semester.

The college is observing Labor Day on Monday, so there will be no registration that day.

Persons wishing to enroll may do so Tuesday through Thursday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. in the Student Center's Student Services area, which is located in the northwest part of the building.

By Friday morning, enrollment headcount was 3,540 students who were signed up for one or more credit courses. This is 138 students less than the count at the same time last year, when an all-time enrollment record of 4,513 was tallied.

"We still aren't sure what our final count might be," said Dr. Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar. "Final counts depend up a lot of variables, such as the weather, when people receive paychecks, which classes are Playing silly board games brings out the worst in people

The hot news this week is the much-ballyhooed chess match between those old rivals Bobby Fischer and Boris Spassky.

Forget Hurricane Andrew, presidential politics or even the kickoff of the professional football season. What people are talking about today is chess.

Perhaps you read a story in the newspaper last week that detailed the opening day of activities. If not, allow me to fill you in.

It went like this:

Ott

"Fischer, playing white, made his traditional opening move of pawn to king 4.

"Spassky followed with black pawn to king 4, and the battle was on."

Oh, my, the excitement is overwhelming. I can hardly stand it. Sweat rings are forming in my armpits as I wait with baited breath for the next move.

Detect just a hint of sarcasm here?

Good. I hate chess. No, let me take that a step further. I hate all games. Monopoly. Clue. Old Maid. Checkers. Chinese checkers. You name it, and I hate it.

And I'll give you a very good reason for this loathing.

As a child, I was forced to play Monopoly, Clue, Old Maid, Checkers. Chinese checkers.

The scars are still present today.

Playing games, for whatever reason, brings out the worst in people. Tempers flair. Tears flow. Accusations erupt. What starts out as a friendly get-together invariably explodes into a raucous confrontation, complete with fingers being pointed and threats of bodily harm being issued.

And don't pretend you don't know what I'm talking about, either. You were just as serious about winning as I was.

Admit it.

Think back a few years. It started when you were a child.

If you didn't win at checkers, for example, you would turn the board upside down, causing the pieces to fly in a hundred different directions.

When your parents sternly ordered you to pick up the mess, you would respond by sticking out your lower lip and pouting.

Likewise, with Old Maid. Get stuck with that card at the end of the game and complete chaos would result. Tears would flow. And so would the allegations that your opponent had cheated.

All of this was particularly unpleasant if you were unfortunate enough to have an older brother or sister who egged you on. They would pick and tease, making losing all the more difficult to handle. It was as though they took delight in watching you suffer. The more you cried, the more they teased.

Siblings can be cruel that way.

But it didn't end there.

As you grew older so did your taste in games. You moved on to Monopoly. Many an all-night party was spent bickering over Park Place and Boardwalk.

These were often marathon games. They would start out with everyone on friendly terms . . . joking, jostling, exchanging good-natured ribbing.

Soon, though, those high spirits would come tumbling down. The game would turn ugly. Invariably there was a Donald Trump-type who would buy up all the property and charge exorbitant fees to anyone wanting to get it back. He would put his money in neat piles, counting it periodically while you could only look on enviously. All the way, he would give a wicked grin to anyone foolish enough to glance his way.

Bad blood would soon develop.

Hateful glares would shoot across the room, as curse words, said with great meaning, were uttered under the breath. Occasionally, when Mr. Money Bags wasn't looking, the other players, including yourself, would attempt to steal his money.

Of course, being the capitalist pig that he is, he would catch you and immediately purchase a new round of hotels to place on each of his properties.

This, in turn, would make you furious. So, being the mature teen-ager you were, you would turn the board upside down, ruining the game for everyone.

Mr. Junior Trump would scream and call you baby.

But, gee, didn't feel good?

Texas wines are no longer 'Chateau Bubba'

FORT WORTH (NYT) — Nestled between an ailing cotton patch and U.S. 62 in West Texas lies Bob Gibson's obsession, staked in perfect rows of leafy green across 24 acres of dusty plains.

For six years Gibson has toiled. He's fought off onslaughts of insects and survived tempests of hail. Still, he knows it all can suddenly be snatched away, for just one cold night in the High Plains of Texas some 300 miles west of Fort Worth, can bring icy death.

Gibson grows vinifera grapes, the juicy Cabernets, Sauvignons and Chardonnays that make the best wines in the world.

Gibson, like hundreds of others across Texas, pursues an arduous goal: growing the perfect grape. One high in acidity, but higher in sugar. A grape whose texture takes a back seat to taste. Chardonnay grapes that taste melony, Cabernets that taste fruity, with a hint of pepper, and Sauvignon Blanc grapes that possess a sweet and slightly herbaceous flavor. A grape that melts in your mouth.

Fifteen years ago, when vineyards and wineries started popping up near Lubbock in West Texas and the Hill Country west of Austin, winemakers bottled what connoisseurs derisively called "Chateau Bubba."

But that changed in the 1980s. The state's best wineries started winning gold medals at national and international tastings. Last year, Lubbock's Llano Estacado Winery produced a Sauvignon Blanc that Los Angeles Times wine writer Dan Berger calls one of the best in the nation.

"If that wine is not one of the top 10 Sauvignon Blancs in the country, I don't know what is," Berger said.

"You can't turn around the industry in two or three years," he added. "These guys have done a wonderful job in improving the overall quality of their wines. This is hard work."

Llano Estacado's winemaker is illustrative of the state's industry: Young but serious, Don Brady has received accolades for every vintage he's overseen since he graduated from college seven years ago.

"You talk about the hours, you talk about the investment that's required to start a winery and put products in the market and to stay with it, it has to be a passion," Brady says. "It doesn't come easy. It's very hard work. It's the same thing in the vineyards."

From humble beginnings, the 27 winemakers across Texas have caught the attention of everyone from national reviewers to local connoisseurs.

"The quality of the product is as good as anywhere else," said Marion Hart, a member of the international wine society Les Amis du Vin and the wine director for Majestic Liquors in Fort Worth. "The wine has improved over the last 10 years. The vines and grapes are getting more mature."

The market for wine has also improved in Texas. While wine consumption has steadily decreased nationwide since the early 1980s, wine sales in the state increased 19 percent from 1987 to 1990.

But only 2 percent of the consumption is Texas wine. Still, the state's winemakers produced 1.1 million gallons last year, making Texas the nation's fourth-largest wine producer.

For most winemakers, the dream is the same: to produce wines that compare with the best of Europe and California. Perhaps wine connoisseurs someday will even speak of Lubbock — where three wineries and most of the state's vineyards are — with the same reverence as Bordeaux or Napa Valley.

"It's clear that we've got some excellent wines coming out of Texas, and the national and international competitions supply proof of it all the time," said Roy Mitchell, one of several professors at Texas Tech University who devote their studies to improving the state's wine industry.

For most of the state's wineries, each year's work starts in the dusty vineyards around Lubbock, where the grape growers are often seasoned cotton farmers lured to winegrowing and its Old World past.

No matter how much agriculture experience they have, growers quickly find tending vines to be a complex and unforgiving discipline that requires more work than they imagined.

"I have spent more hours of hard work and sweat on these 24 acres of grapes than I have in 30 years of cotton farming," said Bob Gibson, who planted his first vines in 1986.

The lure: the romance of wine. Before an October freeze forced Arthur Summers out of grape growing last year, his vineyards enlivened Littlefield, a small cotton town in the Panhandle.

"Everybody from the garbage collector to the bank president would talk to you on the street and ask you about the grapes," Summers recalled. "We were very excited about it. People that had visitors from out of town would bring their guests out to the vineyard and let them walk through it."

Early skepticism about Texas wine focused on the state's climate. Critics who attributed California's wine success to the combination of warmth and coolness in the Napa and Sonoma valleys insisted that Texas' heat and dryness could never produce world-class wine grapes.

But the prevailing philosophy of what makes the best wine grapes is beginning to move from climates to soil content, says Frank Prial, the New York Times' wine writer.

"Europeans have always believed soil is more important, and more and more people are agreeing with the Europeans, although climate is certainly a factor," Prial said.

Texas winegrowers say the state's terra has an abundance of the calcium crucial to growing great vines. They also believe many areas of the state — like Lubbock — have suitable climates.

And unlike California, Texas has so far been spared an infestation of phylloxerae, tiny, mitelike bugs that have destroyed huge tracts of some of California's best vineyards.

Though a few Texas wineries have been winning awards since the early 1980s, critics say they've been particularly impressed with the growth and improvement of the industry during the past few years.

"Not every producer in Texas is doing a great job," says Berger, who sampled 40 Texas wines at a symposium in February: "Twenty were pretty awful.

wide ad campaign circulated Miss Henry's face and description to 52 million homes in June of this year. The ad, operated through ADVO Inc. of Windsor, Conn., asked people who might have information on the girl's disappearance to call the toll-free number of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

"We fielded about 170 to 175 calls from that campaign," said Midland Police Sgt. B.G. Johnson. "Calls came in from all over the United States, from about 30 states. Unfortunately, none of them led anywhere."

The only other possible lead has been the anonymous phone calls two weeks ago, which turned into another dead end.

However, Sgt. Johnson said he believes all hope is not gone.

"It happens everyday, people who have been missing a long time suddenly turn up," he said. "We have to look at all possibilities, but there is the possibility she is alive."

by several residents at a northwest apartment complex. He has since remained jailed in lieu of a $300,000 bond.

Earlier that day, police in Lamesa arrested Elida Contreras for allegedly driving the getaway car in the shooting. She was released on bond that afternoon. Ms. Contreras has not been indicted.

Ms. Frescaz, who was 5½ months pregnant, died 10 days after being attacked.

Under Texas law, murder charges cannot be filed for the death of an unborn.

Several witnesses are expected to testify and the trial will probably last throughout the week, according to Schorre.

HUMMERS: Area is unique for the number of species

vias and red penstemons.

But most experts now discount the theory that red attracts hummingbirds. And indeed hummers are known to feed on other flowers too — including purple and white ones of desert willow (Chilopsis) and the yellow bells of Tecoma.

Experts also believe it isn't necessary for people to paint their hummingbird feeders red or use red food coloring in the sugar-water mixture.

"The birds know where to go and what to do regardless of the color," Williams said.

Hummingbirds, who often enter suspended animation, or "torpor" — to save energy, especially at night, are known to hover next to houses snatching insects off spider webs.

They aren't constantly in flight either, stopping on small branches — seemingly taking frequent advantage of opportunities to rest.

The rapid motion of their wings enables them to hover. They obtain nectar and insects by thrusting the needle-like bill into flowers. Pollen brushes off onto the body as they feed and is transferred to the next flower they visit.

In general, flowers pollinated by hummingbirds have little or no fragrance.

But hummers also rely on other methods of nourishment — namely water and sugar.

Ms. Erskine advises hummingbird enthusiasts to fill their feeders with a formula of four or five parts water and one part sugar.

"If it's cool at night, go with four-to-one. If it's freezing at night go with three-to-one," she said. "They'll need the extra energy."

Hummingbirds will store food in a pouch causing their necks to expand. The supply is much more than other birds can hold and can be used during flight.

According to Williams, people should never use honey in the feeders because it will cause a fungus to grow on their tongues.

The female hummingbird, which generally produces two offspring twice a year but may lay as many as four times during the season, will typically be attending to both sets simultaneously. The nests will only be about four to six feet apart.

"They will be incubating one nest and feeding young in the other," Ms. Erskine said. "The young will leave the nest after only about 19 days."

"When the babies are in the nest it wraps up tight around them. If one baby tests his wings and leaves, the nest will hold tight around the other," Ms. Erskine said.

Hummingbirds use dandelion flower seeds, among other things, to help construct their nests — which are usually built at knee-level to as high as eight feet from the ground.

"If a person finds a baby hummer and can find the nest, he should try to put it back in," she said. "The mother will not abandon simply because a human touched it."

Most hummingbirds will choose a nesting site such as a thin branch sheltered by other branches.

Female hummingbirds have drab markings in contrast to the males bright coloring, which allows the males to easily attract mates — their sole purpose in life, Ms. Erskine said. Male hummers do not assist in nest building, incubation or feeding the young.

"But their coloring also attracts predators, who tend to leave the female alone," she said.

If unharmed by predators and the elements, a hummingbird will live between three to five years.

State in brief

■ Four die in four shootings within 24 hours

DALLAS — Four Dallas residents were shot and killed in less than 24 hours in separate incidents over the weekend.

The first two shooting incidents occurred Friday night, Dallas police said. The other two were shot between 2 a.m. and 4 a.m. Saturday.

All four died Saturday morning at area hospitals, Detective Linda Erwin said. Charges were pending in each incident.

Veronica Cardenas, 18, was shot at 11:30 p.m. Friday and was declared dead at Parkland Memorial Hospital at 9:30 a.m. Saturday. A 16-year-old male is in police custody.

Ushun Williams, 26, was shot at about 11:30 p.m. Friday. He was pronounced dead at 2:05 a.m. at Parkland. A 31-year-old suspect has been arrested.

Rojelio Avalos, 19, of Dallas was shot at about 4 a.m. Saturday during a fight. Avalos died at about 4:40 a.m. at Baylor University Medical Center. An 18-year-old man was arrested in the incident.

Ramon Mitchell, 17, was shot at about 1:45 a.m. Saturday while riding in a car. Another vehicle drove by and one passenger shot into the car Mitchell was riding in, Ms. Erwin said. Mitchell died at 2:38 a.m. at Parkland. No suspects have been arrested.

■ City employees could get bonus, not raise

SAN ANTONIO — Civilian employees could find $300 bonuses in their Christmas paychecks, thanks to budget-conscious city officials who want to be generous but say they can't afford raises.

"For the past four or five years, we've been tightening our belts around City Hall," said Councilman Frank Wing.

"What it amounts to is we have fewer people doing more. They are working smarter and have additional responsibilities, and we are just trying to find some way to say thanks," Wing said.

Mayor Nelson Wolff on Friday said the one-time bonus would not go to executive-level employees.

The bonus has been discussed informally by Wolff and several City Council members as a way to boost morale since there does not appear to be room in the $704.8 million budget for an across-the-board salary increase.

■ Police investigate boy's allegations

AUSTIN — A warrant alleging indecency with a child has been filed against a 61-year-old man accused of abusing a 4-year-old boy at a house where crack cocaine was smoked, police said.

The boy told authorities he and his 2-year-old sister were taken to the crack house by the mother, investigators said. The boy told police he was assaulted several times by the man and had smoked crack with him, court records said.

"This one's pretty sickening," said police Sgt. Charles Johnson, who works in the Austin Police Department's child abuse division. "He knows all about crack. The kid is only 4."

Dr. Pat Crocker, chief of emergency medicine at Brackenridge Hospital, said the effects of crack are much greater in children than adults because of their size and weight. The increased effects can cause irregular heartbeats, rapidly rising body temperatures, excitability and severe bleeding in children, Crocker said.

"It's pretty unusual," that a 4-year-old smoked crack, Crocker said. "But if he survived the initial insult, he ought to be fine."

A warrant was issued Friday for James Willie Spence, with bail set at $25,000. He was in jail Saturday, a police spokesman said.

Houston eyes annexation of NASA center

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Bob Lanier and the City Council are considering a deal that would move 15 miles of property, including part of the Johnson Space Center, and about 6,000 residents into the Bayou City.

If successful, the annexation would be the city's first major land addition since 1982.

"I have concerns about having a two-tiered urban area, where the quality of life inside the city isn't as good as the quality outside," Lanier said Friday.

The move is opposed by state legislators who have fought prior annexation efforts and by Houston lawyer Frumencio Reyes, who represents three Hispanic plaintiffs seeking an elimination of at-large council seats.

But money-starved city officials believe the financial rewards from the annexations are worth a fight.

The annexations, aimed at increasing the city's tax base without taking in many new residents, would raise Houston's $64 billion property tax base by $1 billion, said Assistant City Planner Jerry Wood.

The annexations would add property in north, west and southeast Houston to increase the size of state's largest city to just over 596 square miles.

Besides a sliver of the Johnson Space Center, including the NASA Visitors Center to be opened Oct. 16, the annexation would include Willowbrook Mall, a power plant owned by Houston Lighting & Power Co. and the proposed Sam Houston Race Park horse track.

The council will consider the annexation at its regular meeting Sept. 9. In addition, two public hearings before the council will be conducted on Oct. 7 and 14.

The earliest the tracts could be formally annexed would be Dec. 31, in time to make the city's Jan. 1 tax rolls.

City officials estimate the move would generate about $6 million a year in property taxes and another $5 million in sales taxes.

The annexations, aimed at increasing the city's tax base without taking in many new residents, would raise Houston's $64 billion property tax base by $1 billion, said Assistant City Planner Jerry Wood.

Houston stemmed an aggressive annexation policy in 1983 when hard times and voting rights questions challenged the additions. Since then only 15 miles have been annexed, the smallest amount for the city since the Great Depression and World War II. Then-mayor Kathy Whitmire dropped an annexation plan in 1983 when 12 legislators signed a petition against the plan.

Reyes said he will object to the current annexation plans unless city officials agree to a 16-1 council configuration with all single-member districts. A referendum on the issue could be held next year, pending court approval.

"I suspect this is the beginning of four to five years of aggressive annexations," Reyes said. "It would be a lot easier for the council to go with 16-1 now."

Lanier, who supports the 16-1 plan, predicted that the Justice Department will back the annexations because they bring in only a small number of potential voters.

Prosecutors drop 2 charges against commissioner

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County employee said possible death threats and a desire for community unity caused her to drop a rape charge against County Commissioner John Wiley Price, according to an affidavit.

The statement, filed Friday, said prosecuting the case would not serve "the best interest of the African-American community."

The woman also said she was aware of death threats made against witnesses and jurors in an earlier trial for Price on an aggravated assault charge.

"I do not feel it is in my best interest or the best interest of my family to continue with further prosecution of this case," she said.

District Attorney John Vance said the case was dropped Friday. The trial had been set for Sept. 8.

Prosecutors also dismissed a felony criminal mischief charge against Price involving an altercation with a KXAS-TV cameraman.

"I think John is very happy," said Price's attorney, Billy Ravkind.

On Aug. 23, 1991, Price, 42, was indicted on a rape charge from an incident in April 1990 involving a county employee. The charge followed a story alluding to the matter in a February 1991 issue of D magazine.

Price still faces a misdemeanor criminal trespass charge and two misdemeanor assault charges. He is accused of trespassing at WFAA-TV studios during a protest last year. He is also accused of assaulting a jogger and a movie producer. All three cases are scheduled to be heard Sept. 21.

In May, Price was acquitted of felony aggravated assault after a two-week retrial in connection with an August 1991 scuffle outside the Dallas County Administration building.

Commissioners approve plan to buy near-bankrupt bridge

HOUSTON (AP) — Opponents of a county plan to buy the toll bridge spanning the Houston Ship Channel say the deal could lead to the bridge's default.

Harris County commissioners on Friday unanimously approved a plan that moves the county closer owning the near-bankrupt Jesse H. Jones Memorial toll bridge.

Friday's vote created the Beltway 8 Transportation Corp., which will act on behalf of the county and issue $318 million in tax-free bonds to take over the bridge debt and construct a new toll road.

The Texas Turnpike Authority still must approve the deal, and the Texas Attorney General must rule that it is legal.

"I don't see the strong need to debate it at this point — just make it work," Commissioner El Franco Lee said.

The toll bridge is buried under junk bond debt as a result of a 1985 refinancing involving the bond firm of Dillon Read & Co. The project is headed for default in 1996, unless the bonds are paid off in another refinancing or through the county takeover.

The bridge transaction is also linked to the proposed construction of 21 miles of toll road along South Beltway 8. That proposal has not yet been approved.

County Judge Jon Lindsay said it is time for the county to take control of the bridge because the Turnpike Authority has done such a poor job. The agency has failed to develop the Hardy Toll Road and Sam Houston Tollway, and left the county to form its own toll road authority to build the projects, Lindsay said.

Man, five others charged in case

JACKSON, Ky. (AP) — Federal prosecutors say a Breathitt County man arrested with several hundred pounds of marijuana in his vehicle was a "major courier" in a drug ring involving more than a ton of marijuana.

Terrence Cundiff, 45, of Vancleve was arrested with five others Thursday when investigators seized large sums of cash, marijuana, weapons and several antique cars at several sites.

ANDREW'S AFTERMATH

Fewer major hurricanes

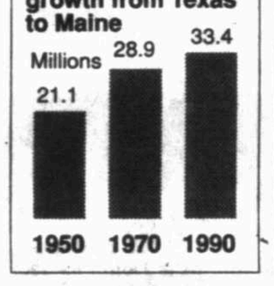

Between 1944 and 1950 Florida was hit by an average of one major hurricane a year. Since 1965 Florida has only experienced one.

Population shift

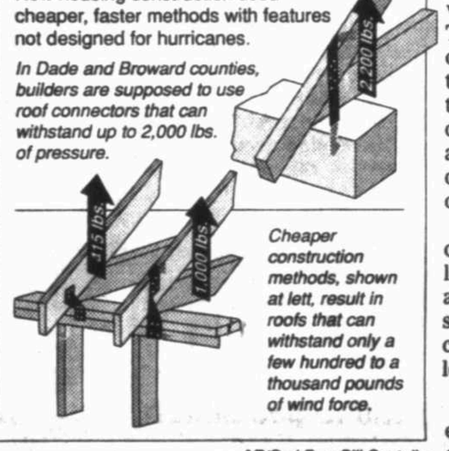

Populations along the Gulf and East coasts have boomed. Florida's population was 2 million in 1992, up from 500,000 in 1950.

Construction methods

New housing construction used cheaper, faster methods with features not designed for hurricanes.

In Dade and Broward counties, builders are supposed to use roof connectors that can withstand up to 2,000 lbs. of pressure.

Cheaper construction methods, shown at left, result in roofs that can withstand only a few hundred to a thousand pounds of wind force.

South Florida, Miami awaken from decades of complacency

By Sharon Cohen and Fred Bayles
Associated Press Writers

MIAMI — Over the past two decades, Bob Sheets watched as miles and miles of sleek suburban-style homes and condos sprang up in South Florida. It made him uneasy.

Though all these new homes were built under the nation's strictest wind codes, Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center, saw that hard-learned lessons about the nature of these devastating storms were being forgotten.

Solid, reinforced cinderblock homes, built with techniques developed in the hurricane-conscious 1940s and 1950s, gave way to stylish wood-frame and split-levels familiar to millions of Northern newcomers.

Some wondered if quality was being sacrificed in the rush to feed the booming real estate market.

"All of us who looked into it understood that wood-framed structures potentially had problems," Sheets said. "We talked about it and thought with the code requirements that maybe they would survive."

That hopeful speculation was blown to bits by Hurricane Andrew.

While estimates still vary, upwards of 60,000 homes may have been destroyed when the strongest storm to hit Miami in 40 years whirled through two weeks ago. The storm has been blamed for 51 deaths in Florida, Louisiana and the Bahamas. Most of the devastation occurred in Florida — 38 deaths, 250,000 people homeless and an estimated $20 billion in damage — making it the nation's costliest natural disaster.

Also destroyed was the complacency that came with the decades-long respite of hurricane activity along the U.S. coastline: Powerful storms like Andrew and Hurricane Hugo in 1989 may signal a long-anticipated end to that calm.

For those familiar with the killer storms of the past, it is a dark omen for Atlantic and Gulf coast communities even less prepared than South Florida.

"People certainly should pay attention to this," said Herbert Saffir, an engineer who helped develop the Saffir-Simpson scale that ranks the destructive power of hurricanes. "This isn't something confined to Miami. They are just as apt to get a strong storm like this anywhere along the coast."

Floridians once had an intimate knowledge of hurricanes. A 1926 storm killed more than 200 and damaged or destroyed every building in Dade County. A 1935 Labor Day storm killed 408 in the Florida Keys. From 1944 through 1950, the state was hit by an average of one a year.

"If you made it to Thanksgiving Day without having a hurricane, then you really had something to sit down and have thanksgiving about," said U.S. Sen. Bob Graham, a native of the Miami area.

People learned from the constant threat, developing building styles on a trial-and-error basis. Concrete block homes with steel reinforced columns, shutters and tar and gravel roofs became commonplace.

The hard experience was codified into building regulations, giving Dade and Broward counties the nation's toughest building codes: Residential homes were expected to withstand winds of 120 mph; taller office and apartment buildings had to be designed for 170 mph.

"The code is very detailed — what kind of footing and tie beam to use, how to tie down a roof — it's all there," Saffir said.

One example: Elsewhere in the nation, builders are required to tie roof rafters to beams with connectors that resist only a few hundred pounds of wind force that can lift up a roof. In Dade and Broward, builders must use metal connectors known as hurricane straps that can withstand up to 2,000 pounds.

Hurricane preparation once was a part of daily life. Homeowners stockpiled water, candles and canned goods as a normal springtime ritual. They trimmed back trees and checked their shutters on the eve of hurricane season.

"Those people were much better prepared with what they'd need after a hurricane," Sheets said. "They were very self-sufficient."

But this societal savvy faded as shifting global weather patterns pushed the storms elsewhere. The entire country has only seen eight major hurricanes in the past 20 years; South Florida has seen only one since 1965.

This lull coincided with Florida's boom. Northerners, lured by warm weather and cheap housing, swelled the state's population six-fold since 1950; Dade County's population jumped from 500,000 in 1950 to nearly 2 million now.

Until Andrew, only 10 percent of those now living in the county had any experience with a major hurricane.

"The whole state suffered from the same problem — a sense that we weren't hurricane vulnerable anymore," said Kate Hale, Dade County's emergency director. "So many of us came from other parts of the country where hurricanes were not a factor. It was purely a matter that people could not believe."

Builders and developers, many of them newcomers, put up homes and condos that ignored hurricane truths. Second stories of wood frame and plywood were added to first-floor cinderblocks. Flourishes favored by Northern suburbanites were added: picture windows, skylights, multilevel shingle roofs.

And mobile home parks mushroomed on the edge of communities.

"Quite a lot of what was built got away from the basic type of design specified from the code," Saffir said. "They tried to economize and cut expenses down."

Shortcuts were taken.

Aristides Millas, a professor of architecture at the University of Miami, said cheaper materials and faster building techniques were used. Particle board, a type of reinforced cardboard, took the place of plywood; carpenters used staple guns instead of nails to put houses up.

"It's not the code, but the construction practices taking place," Millas said. "In large developments, the mission is to build and build fast. There's always shortcuts being taken. They've been a joke around here for years in terms of quality construction."

Andrew's ferocious winds exposed those flaws.

Engineers who examined the rubble of damaged and destroyed homes have found nails missing from hurricane straps, poorly stapled plywood sheets, and improperly installed windows, which popped out, turning the inside of the homes into wind tunnels that lifted off roofs.

"Just the fact you lose a window might make the difference between your house making it or not," said Ben Sill, a civil engineering professor at Clemson University who studied the damage of Hurricane Hugo in South Carolina.

Sill said much of the destruction was due to shoddy construction or lack of attention to details.

"There are obviously a lot of people homeless that didn't need to be," he said.

But Sheets and others say that even if all construction was up to par, some destruction was unavoidable in 140 mph winds.

"Perhaps better construction could have kept the damage down considerably, not entirely," Millas said. "The hurricane was a superior hurricane."

Homeowners could have done more if they remembered the old days. Shutters would have saved

LESSON: Storm cycle may take turn for worse

windows; a stash of tar paper, food and water would have made it easier to stay in homes after the storm passed.

"I think we're seeing a lot of people standing in line, needing to get food, needing to get water, having a hard time coping with things," Hale said. "They wouldn't have had to if they had been better prepared."

But there were successes. Evacuation plans, refined over the years, worked. About 750,000 people were moved out of the hurricane's path in 19 hours without major problems. Shelters waited for another 72,000.

After the storm, roads were cleared, and pre-planned staging areas went on line to coordinate recovery.

But operations bogged down early. Volunteers waited for instructions; needed food and clothing spoiled in the rain. It took four days before storm victims saw any federal help.

"Everything could be done better," said Graham. "The scale of this problem is so beyond what had been anybody's prior experience."

The hard lessons being relearned in the wake of Andrew have far implications that go far beyond South Florida.

Meteorologists believe the cycle of more frequent, deadly storms is returning, posing tremendous risks for the 44 million who live in coastal communities from Texas to Maine.

The problems seen in Miami could be far worse.

Sheets conjures up nightmare scenarios about an Andrew-type storm hitting Ocean City, Md., during a summer holiday weekend in which 350,000 people would have to wait to flee over bridges to the mainland.

He speaks with dread about the same storm hitting the Galveston, Texas, area, where construction standards are far below South Florida's.

"Destruction would be total," he said.

Professional Cassandras like Sheets and Saffir have been issuing warnings for years without much result. After Andrew, they say, there is no excuse to ignore the danger.

"Few people have seen what a storm can do," Saffir said. "Now they know.

Dolphins put football on back burner

By Steven Wine
Associated Press writer

MIAMI — Twenty members of the Miami Dolphins tour the area stricken by Hurricane Andrew, handing out goods and spreading good will.

Coach Don Shula also pays a visit, trying to bolster morale among National Guard and army troops who work 20 hours a day.

Linebacker John Offerdahl and his restaurant staff bake 6,000 bagels — plain, cinnamon, raisin and egg — and take them to hungry storm victims.

The Dolphins' final exhibition game raises $370,000 in donations. Team employees prepare to ship $250,000 worth of NFL merchandise, including clothes and toys. Joe Robbie Stadium cranks out 100,000 pounds of ice daily.

It's all part of the hurricane relief effort.

"You have that feeling," Shula said, "that you can't do enough."

One thing the Dolphins decided they can't do is play a home game this weekend. They were to open the season Sunday against New England, but the game was rescheduled for Oct. 18 — the first NFL postponement in five years.

The Dolphins provide perhaps South Florida's favorite diversion. But 13 days after Andrew, people are still too hungry, thirsty, sweaty and somber for games.

"There's going to be a time for that," Shula said. "But I'm also sure that this Sunday would not have been that time."

Most of the Dolphins live in Broward County, a comfortable distance from the expanse of ruin. For them, Andrew was frightening, then a mere inconvenience — a few uprooted trees, scattered power outages.

Many of the players formed a convoy and ventured south to offer help. They took clothes and food, and returned with a new respect for hurricanes.

"The vast devastation goes on and on and on," center Jeff Uhlenhake said. "I'm from up north, and it's not like a tornado, which might rip up a couple of blocks. There are miles and miles of property torn up."

National Guardsmen seemed excited to meet the players — quarterback Dan Marino signed autographs on dollar bills, since no paper was available. Storm victims, however, showed less interest in the local celebrities than in the goods being passed out.

"For most of those people," linebacker John Grimsley said, "football is probably the last thing on their minds."

Not all of the Dolphins fit the role of Good Samaritan. In recent days, while neighbors to the south struggled to rebuild lives, safety Louis Oliver and receivers Mark Clayton and Mark Duper all complained of being underpaid.

Shula declined to criticize their timing. Perhaps they deserve credit for lending some semblance of normalcy to Dolphins camp.

Today will be anything but normal. Shula plans to get his football fix by watching the telecast of son David's debut as an NFL head coach with the Cincinnati Bengals. Grimsley and others want to scout Cleveland's game on TV, since the Dolphins now open at the Browns on Sept. 14.

It will be strange, the coach and his players agree, to spend opening day on the sidelines.

"A lot of the guys would like to play Sunday," Grimsley said. "Everybody's anxious to get started and get the regular season rolling. But not playing is the right thing to do."

Andrew wreaks broad economic havoc

By Stefan Fatsis
Associated Press writer

Rebuilding after Hurricane Andrew will take more than plywood and nails. The destruction in Florida and Louisiana will cut across local economies for years as residents rebuild homes, jobs and entire industries.

Business executives, government officials and academics say basic economic life as residents around Miami and on the Gulf Coast of Louisiana knew it before the storm probably won't return for up to five years. The reconstruction is expected to be the costliest in the nation's history.

"There is a wealth loss here," said Pat Fishe, an economics professor at the University of Miami. "The community is poorer. People are going to change their behavior and consume fewer goods to try and recreate some of these losses."

While repairing or rebuilding an estimated 87,000 homes will create a temporary construction boomlet, the new jobs might not outnumber those lost forever, particularly in small businesses. With little manufacturing, the Miami region relies on service and retail jobs.

And the initial estimates of up to $20 billion in damages exclude personal possessions and household goods, which could add half as much more to the total. Insurance will cover no more than 50 percent of the losses, economists said. People thrown out of work face millions in lost income.

Compounding the problems, regions such as Miami's Dade County face a shrunken tax base because of devalued storm-damaged property — a loss of $25 million for every $1 billion in reduced assessment values, according to one estimate.

Even before last month's storm, South Florida was struggling because of a real estate bust and an overgrown service sector. Dade County had 9.5 percent unemployment in the second quarter of 1992, well above the national average.

An industry-by-industry examination of the hurricane's force reveals that agriculture and retailing bore the brunt of the damage. The destruction of an Air Force base in hard-hit Homestead, Fla., wiped out a local economy of 7,500 jobs.

Other key industries such as tourism, health care and Latin American trade appear to have emerged unscathed. But there is concern about the unknown psychological effects the pictures of the devastation have had on potential visitors.

■ Agriculture was dealt a major blow, with nearly $1 billion in damage in Dade County, according to the University of Florida's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences. The sales losses could amount to 8 percent of the state's $6 billion total.

Andrew virtually wiped out the state's $20 million lime crop; $14 million avocado crop; $72 million crop of mangoes, papayas and other tropical fruits; and $150 million horticulture and nursery industry, said Michelle McLawhorn, a state Agriculture Department spokeswoman.

Trees that can be salvaged through paring will need two to three years to produce again. A fully replanted grove needs five or six years.

It's also unclear how much of the state's winter fruit and vegetable crop will be planted because of damage to soil and infrastructure such as packing houses, greenhouses and farmers markets. Florida produces half the nation's supply of fruits and vegetables in winter, and the storm could raise prices around the country.

Louisiana is estimated to have lost 25 percent of its sugar cane crop.

■ The construction industry gets an instant shot in the arm. Already, builders are converging on South Florida to repair the biggest property loss in U.S. history, with insurance payouts projected at $7.3 billion.

The industry was ailing before the storm. New housing construction starts in Dade County were down 60 percent last year to about 6,500 from 1988. An estimated 4,000 to 5,000 construction workers were unemployed before the storm.

Now contractors and builders are converging from around Florida and out of state. Electricians, carpenters, roofers and other laborers are in demand.

Michelle Garbis, corporate secretary for Deltona Corp., a Miami-based developer, said she has put in 10 calls to a single roofer to get help fixing her own home. "Anyone who is remotely connected with building is totally swamped," she said.

But the reconstruction will take years. Shortages of supplies could hamper progress, as well as the speed with which government grants and loans arrive to rebuild public and commercial buildings. Many residents will leave the area rather than start over.

Developers including Lennar Corp. and Arvida Co. already have been sued by homeowners. They deny wrongdoing. Arvida President Bud Miller said Dade building codes require homes to withstand 120 mph winds, not Andrew's 160 mph or more.

■ Tourism officials have mounted a full-scale media and advertising effort to persuade vacationers and business people Miami's beaches are clean and its hotels standing. New Orleans, which was not hit head on, has rebounded quickly.

Tourism is a $7.2 billion industry in Dade County, and tens of thousands of the area's newly homeless work in it. In the first six months of 1992, the industry was ahead of last year's pace of 8.4 million visitors.

"If we allow our visitor industry to suffer then we're just going to stimulate greater unemployment, greater economic crisis," said Merrett Stierheim, president of the Greater Miami Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Of 115 major hotels and resorts in the area, 109 have returned to full operation, he said. The Fontainebleau, Miami Beach's biggest hotel, which flooded, reopened last week.

Some sites including Metrozoo, Everglades National Park and Fairchild Tropical Gardens sustained heavy damage. Others, such as Miami Beach's Art Deco buildings, did not.

As part of its campaign, the visitors bureau has replaced ads calling Miami "a city with a rhythm all its own" with ones mentioning the hurricane and saying "Miami's tempo is upbeat as usual."

■ In the Gulf of Mexico, only 166 out of about 2,000 energy drilling platforms and other structures in the storm's path were damaged. Federal officials estimate total damages at a relatively minor $100 million.

Only about 2 percent of the nation's oil production capacity was damaged, while 5 percent of the natural gas capacity was knocked out, according to the U.S. Minerals Management Service.

By tightening supplies, the hurricane may help the natural gas industry, in which prices have fallen since 1984.

■ Retail businesses were devastated. In southern Dade County, the storm affected 7,800 businesses with 120,300 jobs, or 14 percent of Dade's total, according to the Beacon Council, a local economic development agency.

Some 15 to 20 shopping centers — including Dadeland Mall, the biggest in South Florida and a major destination for Latin American tourists — are expected to be closed for months. Some may never reopen, meaning losses of jobs and consumer spending.

"We have to do something that doesn't cause a major loss of revenue," said Steve Albee, a Beacon Council vice president. "The thing we have to be concerned about is that people aren't spending money. It can have a ripple effect."

The state on Thursday granted $10 million to the council for interest-free, six-month loans of up to $25,000. Businesses need only prove they were operating with more than three employees before the hurricane. To avoid red tape and speed relief, the council wants to get money to businesses in under three days.

Rebuilding aside, one big intagible for Miami is image. The city in the last decade has emerged as Latin America's capital, where accountants, lawyers and bankers thrive on international deals.

Miamians hope Hurricane Andrew hasn't damaged such potential.

"Long term, the international business environment is the future growth area," said Lee Sandler, a Miami lawyer. "I don't think there is a lasting effect out of this."

DAMAGES BY INDUSTRY

❑ AGRICULTURE: Nearly $1 billion estimated damage in Miami's Dade County. About 8 percent of state's $6 billion in agricultural sales erased. Lime, avocado and tropical fruit crops, and horticulture and nursery industries virtually wiped out. One quarter of Louisiana sugar cane crop destroyed.

❑ CONSTRUCTION: Instant shot in the arm for a recession-battered industry. Builders are converging on South Florida to repair the biggest property loss in U.S. history. But supply shortages, government red tape and lower-than-expected insurance payouts could hurt.

❑ RETAIL: Storm hit 7,800 businesses with 120,300 jobs in southern Dade County. Some 15 to 20 shopping centers expected to be closed for months. Some may never reopen, meaning losses of jobs and consumer spending. Residents with lower incomes and damaged homes aren't expected to resume spending soon.

❑ TOURISM: Relatively unscathed. Hotels, Art Deco buildings, beaches, Port of Miami and airport all operating about normal. Officials mounting media and advertising blitz to persuade people Miami is still a desirable destination.

❑ ENERGY: Only 166 out of about 2,000 energy drilling platforms and other structures in the storm's path damaged in the Gulf of Mexico. Total damages estimated at a relatively minor $100 million.

Fall could bring record numbers of whooping cranes to Texas

ARANSAS NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE, Texas (AP) — The summertime marshes sit quiet. The animals that usually prowl this South Texas refuge are hiding from the heat.

The view from an observation tower, hemmed in by the trees that flank the only road on the 100,000-acre refuge, offers little more than the occasional sight of a javelina snuffling through the grass in the distance.

The tall white forms of whooping cranes wading in the marshes won't be seen for about another month. And even then it probably won't be apparent that the endangered birds may be coming in record numbers.

At least, wildlife officials overseeing the whoopers' recovery are anticipating hitting a milestone.

"We might hit 150 birds, a record high," said refuge manager Brent Giezentanner.

The optimism stems from a good hatching season this summer at the birds' nesting ground in Wood Buffalo National Park in the Northwest Territories of Canada.

Thirty-five chicks hatched at the park this June, though a recent aerial survey found only about 17 have survived, said Brian Johns, a biologist with the Canadian Wildlife Service.

Two or three others might have been missed during the survey, but the rest were probably lost to predators, he said.

"Sometimes you don't know" why they disappear, said Johns. "It's a combination of unknowns."

"We expected mortality," added Giezentanner. "We don't like it, but we expect it."

Still, this fall's migration should be promising.

The chicks should be able to fly now, allowing them to escape from predators. The longer they survive in Wood Buffalo, the better chance they'll have of making it to Aransas, said Giezentanner.

Even with some more deaths, it's probable there will be more chicks wintering this year in South Texas than in 1991, when only eight made the trip.

The increase is encouraging to wildlife officials, who saw the flock drop from the previous high of 146 birds in 1990 to 132 in 1991.

Several of the birds disappeared while migrating, one was found dead at the Canadian park and another was shot in Texas, the second shooting incident in as many years.

"Those were entirely unnecessary losses," Giezentanner said.

This year, 131 birds returned to Wood Buffalo. "We lost one bird ... and we know that was an old bird," said Giezentanner.

The cranes are graceful wading birds that can grow to about 5 feet in height, most of it legs and neck, and can have a 7-foot wingspan. The birds are named for the piercing cry they give when threatened.

A recovery program has helped whooping cranes struggle from an all-time low of about 16. There had been steady increases the last few years until the 1991 setback.

Johns said 1992 has brought more than one milestone for the program; wildlife officials have also reached their goal of a minimum of 40 breeding pairs. The previous high was 33 in 1991.

The only other wild flock, some 12 cranes that winter at the Bosque del Apache National Wildlife Refuge, N.M., has never had a breeding pair.

Johns warned the breeding numbers for the Aransas flock could fluctuate in the future, depending on how many adult birds survive the annual migration to Texas and on breeding conditions at Wood Buffalo in the coming years.

Last year's egg production was down, in part because of a drought at the Canadian park which created poor nesting conditions in the marshes.

The trend, however, has been favorable.

Barring any unforeseen dangers — like "some lawyers with shotguns," as Giezentanner said, referring to the whooper shooting two years ago — wildlife officials are expecting good things for the future.

Though Johns noted: "They say you shouldn't count your chickens until they hatch, so you probably shouldn't count your chicks until they get to Aransas."

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Students look forward to Labor Day weekend

By H.A. Tuck

After just one week of classes, students get a holiday Monday for Labor Day. It will have to last them a while, as Thanksgiving is a long time away.

Tuck

Late registration is still going on for three more days. Anyone wishing to take up to three classes may enroll Tuesday through Thursday in the Student Services area of the Student Center between 8 a.m.-5 p.m.

There are some classes which still have openings, but others are closed due to classroom or lab limits.

The best way to find out about classes which are still taking students is to visit the Student Services area. Information also is available by calling 585-4501.

Barbara Mandrell is coming to Chaparral Center for an Oct. 21 concert, and tickets go on sale Monday. The Oct. 21 date is a Wednesday, with the concert starting at 8 p.m. Tickets are priced at $17.50 each with all seats reserved. They may be purchased from Chaparral Center or Endless Horizons in Odessa.

You may call 685-4584 to get tickets with your charge card. There is a small service charge for tickets by phone.

During the college's formal registration Aug. 25-26, some of the newly-formed Chaparral Corps of volunteers assisted staff members in many different ways. They helped check papers, guide students, answer questions, and just generally serve as wonderful aides.

Extra special thanks go to Ernestine Browning, Diana Cano, Vicky Hailey, Natalie Lake, Gene Shrode, and Bill Ward, all of whom served two different shifts.

Our appreciation goes to the following who volunteered several hours of their time for registration: Helen Bellows, Jan Florer, Kathryn Gesell, Nancy Gibson, Alfred Giles, Eddie Gorence, Ann Grice, Dell Hoover, Jerry Hubbard, Patricia Jeffcoat, Jane Ann Kelly, Julie Montgomery, Rene Molinar, John Nichols, Kelly Phillips, John Sheffield, Maureen Shrode, Sue Solari, Dorothy Steinman and Susan Webb.

There are other tasks to be done, many in fact. If you'd like to volunteer some of your time and talents, just call Stan Jacobs, 685-4551, for details. He's the campus coordinator for the Chaparral Corps, as well as handling his full-time duties as an Assistant Dean of Instruction.

A conference on "Coming of Age ... Cultural Awareness for the '90's" takes place at Midland College on Friday from 8:15 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

The conference is especially for professionals in counseling and is designed to examine specific and general cultural issues that may impact the professional experience and the professional/client relationship.

Keynote speaker is Jacqueline Jackson, Ph.D., a licensed clinical psychologist. She earned her Ph.D. in Counseling Psychology from Stanford University. She lectures in alcohol studies programs at several University of California campuses and has a private counseling practice.

She has been nominated to serve as chairpersons of Planned Parenthood Federation of America for the 1992-93 term.

She currently serves on the board of the National Black Alcoholism Council.

Registration fee is $55, including lunch. An additional $5 is charged for persons wishing TAADAC credit. You may register in the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building, from 8 a.m.-8 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday. Call 685-4518 regarding registration at the door. The conference is being held in the Chaparral Hall, Student Center.

Co-sponsors with Midland College are: Center for Marriage and Family Therapy, Glenwood Hospital, Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, and Planned Parenthood of West Texas, Inc.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

Jones to speak at realtors meeting

Staff report

Dr. Ted Jones, chief economist with the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M, is scheduled to speak at the joint WCR/Midland Association of Realtors meeting at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at Greentree Country Club.

As chief economist, Jones is responsible for the technical accuracy, general overview and guidance of the research group at the Real Estate Center. His on-going research work includes property valuation and use studies, real estate transaction costs, property management, residential and commercial market analysis, property feasibility and real estate licensee issues.

He is the author of numerous publications, including the "Real Estate Applications Software Directory" and computer software programs.

The Real Estate Center was created in 1971 by the Texas Legislature to meet the needs of many audiences, including the real estate industry, instructors, researchers and the general public. The center's comprehensive program of research and education yields publications and computer software distributed widely under the slogan, "Solutions through Research."

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Midland Independent School District will host a series of Open Houses later this month at the various public schools.

The schedule is as follows:

- Sept. 14 — high schools.
- Sept. 15 — freshman high schools.
- Sept. 17 — junior highs.
- Sept. 21 — 4th grade schools.
- Sept. 22 — 5th grade schools.
- Sept. 24 — 6th grade schools.

Interested persons can all the individual campuses for visitation times.

Odessa College has announced it will be increasing services to technical-vocational students, even more so to students in special populations (handicapped, limited English, academically or economically disadvantaged), due to a $69,000 increase in grant funds this year.

Bernard Seate, OC vice president of instruction said the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board recently gave final approval for OC to receive a $281,000 Carl D. Perkins Vocational Grant for July 1, 1992 through June 30, 1993. Last year the college received $212,000.

OC is also implementing Project Access, a $75,000 federal grant to promote gender equity in non-traditional voc-tech credit and non-credit program.

The grant provides for counseling, testing, textbook loans, child care and transportation assistance for students seeking to enroll in programs and occupations that have been traditionally sex-stereotyped.

Examples include women enrolling in law enforcement and refrigeration/air conditioning or men in office education and nursing. Programs are also available for single parents.

For information on Project Access call 335-6431, ext. 6578.

MC offers continuing education short courses

Staff report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer short courses beginning the week of Sept. 14, courses are as follows:

"Calculator TI81 Graphic" will be taught by Rebecca Bell on Mondays from 7-9 p.m., Sept. 14 through Sept. 28. It is an introductory course in the use of the TI 81 Graphic Calculator and will include graphing Functions, matrices and statistical data. It is approved for 6 hours of AAT credit.

Cindy Wilson will be teaching "Cake Decorating I" on Mondays from 6:30-9:30 p.m., Sept. 14 through Oct. 5. This class will teach the student to bake and level a cake, frost and decorate it. The student will also get recipes, learn to do borders, roses, drop flowers, leaves and add color to the icing. A list of supplies is available at the Department of Continuing Education and the student must have these prior to the first class. A kit will be provided the first night of class for $40. The class is limited to 20 students.

"Computer and You" will be taught in two different sections as follows: Mondays and Wednesdays from 8-9:50 a.m., Sept. 14 through Oct. 14; Mondays and Wednesdays from 3-5 p.m., Sept. 14 through Oct. 14. Sitting in front of a computer, the student will be introduced to the world of PC's and the disk operating system, MS-DOS. The student also will examine the basic microcomputer configuration, learn to operate a PC, format a disk, copy and name files, and receive a brief introduction into today's most popular application software packages. CITY SIDEWALKS

City Council to make appointments to city boards, commissions

By Lyn Miller

The Midland City Council will begin making appointments and/or reappointments to city boards and commissions beginning with the first council meeting in September.

Twenty of the 23 boards and commissions have terms that either expire in September or have vacancies to be filled which affect approximately 95 positions.

The city is fortunate to have citizens who perform this vital part of city government by voluntarily contributing time and talent while serving on the various boards and commissions.

The type of boards and commissions are advisory, decision-making, and boards that are separate legal entities. Members serving on advisory boards and commissions advise the council on public policy, provide creative ideas, feedback from the community, and serve as a sounding board for proposed public policy. Advisory boards and commissions may not set public policy.

Advisory boards and commissions include:

- Airport Planning and Development Board.
- Airport Zoning Commission.
- Animal Control Advisory Commission.
- City Development Advisory Committee.
- City Finance Commission.
- Midland Crime Prevention Commission.
- Parks and Recreation Commission.
- Public Responsibility Committee.
- Street Commission.
- Building Code Review Committee.

Decision-making boards and commissions are "quasi-judicial" and are governed by state law. These boards and commissions are charged with the enforcement of public policy and are potentially subject to review by the courts.

Members who serve on decision-making boards are given an oath of office, and are subject to the open meeting, open records and ethics laws. Often, members of these boards are required by ordinance to possess expertise in a certain area.

Local decision-making boards, which also advise the council regarding public policy, are:

- Building Board of Adjustments and Appeals.
- Electrical Examining Board.
- Midland Center Advisory Board.
- Midland City/County Joint Airport Zoning Board.
- Personnel Board of Appeals.
- Planning and Zoning Commission.
- Zoning Board of Adjustments.
- Airport Zoning Board of Adjustments.
- City/County Emergency Management Council.
- Housing Standards Board.

City boards and commissions that are separate legal entities are usually established under the provision of state statute, with the membership appointed by the council. They are:

- Midland Housing Authority.
- Midland Economic Development Company.
- Midland Health Facilities Development Corporation.
- Midland Housing Finance Corporation.
- Permian Basin Community Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Membership appointments to all boards and commissions are made by the council for the term applicable to the particular board or commission, and members may serve a maximum of two terms.

Citizens interested in being considered for appointment to a city board or commission are encouraged to obtain an application from the City Secretary's Office in Room 430 at City Hall, 300 N. Loraine.

Lyn Miller, an employee at City Hall, coordinates the information for this column.

Study shows janitorial work to be fastest growing

HOUSTON (AP) — A new state study predicts janitorial work will be the fastest growing job market by the end of the decade.

The Texas Employment Commission study shows job opportunities for janitors and maids will grow the fastest, followed by secretaries and general office clerks.

The forecast mirrors the 1980s, when low-skill occupations made up much of the job growth in Texas. Janitors, cashiers, secretaries and food preparation workers grew the quickest, according to the employment commission.

"It shows we're losing manufacturing jobs and shifting to low-end, low-paying jobs," said Jim Kaster, chairman of the Texas Employment Commission. "If you don't have any higher education or training, that's all you can do."

Other fast-growing occupations include registered nurses, retail salespeople, managers, truck drivers, child care workers, secondary school teachers and waiters.

"Isn't that just great," said Al Ballinger, data manager with the Center for Public Policy at the University of Houston.

"We keep hearing what we need is a well educated work force for the future," Ballinger said. "Hell, with the occupations you have there, we should just turn them out in the eighth grade."

The shift toward the service-based sector eventually will make up more than 80 percent of the total non-farm jobs by the year 2000, according to the employment agency.

While nearly half of the state's total job growth will be concentrated in low-paying jobs, occupations that require specialized knowledge will grow the fastest in terms of percentage change.

Professional and technical jobs will account for one of every five jobs by the year 2000 and include computer specialists, teachers and health care professionals.

Those positions usually require the most educational preparation. Service jobs will grow the second fastest followed by clerical jobs, sales positions, fabricators and laborers, skilled craftsmen, managers and farm work.

San Antonio extends youth program through school year

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Summer was a busy time for thousands of San Antonio kids who took field trips to Sea World, attended nature camp and fashion classes and went to special events like a "Batman" festival.

Now, as the school year starts, city leaders are betting their new program called "The Coalition" will continue keeping youngsters occupied — and out of trouble.

"We're really looking forward to an exciting school year, and we're continuing to sign up kids," said Pam Bransford, project coordinator for The Coalition, called "The CO" for short.

As of August, 44,449 youths had enrolled. That number surpassed 45,000 by Labor Day weekend.

With a lot of fanfare and some celebrity guests, the city launched the summer project in May for youths ages 6 to 19. It's being extended to offer after-school and weekend activities.

Youngsters who register receive coupon books for amusements throughout the city. They must continually attend Coalition events to remain members.

Among the fall activities are Halloween carnivals at community centers, a billiards tournament, a bowling tournament and a day of free hair cuts.

The city oversees the Coalition, working with non-profit agencies and private business sponsors. Ms. Bransford said she believes San Antonio's youth project is unique.

"When we started the planning process for this program, we didn't have a model to go by," she said.

Now that it is established, more businesses are learning about the Coalition and getting involved, Ms. Bransford said.

"When we got to a sponsor, we have some history that we can show to them," she said. "They're more likely to look at this program and say, 'Yeah, I want to be a part of this.' "

City officials say they are diverting money back to parks and recreation that was cut during tight budget years. For the summer of 1992, the city allocated an additional $544,000 for summer parks and recreation programs and swimming pool operations.

After a rise in juvenile crime and a proliferation of youth gangs, city leaders decided to start the youth program, and to implement a controversial youth curfew beginning in August 1991 from midnight to 6 a.m.

So far, the results appear to be mixed.

Police Chief William O. Gibson issued a report showing the number of juvenile arrests increased from 7,125 in the year beginning Aug. 7, 1990, to 7,530 in the year beginning Aug. 7, 1991, the year the curfew and Coalition were established.

The study indicated crimes against juveniles decreased from 12,213 to 10,522 in those same two 12-month periods.

MAKING THE GRADE

Sandra Parker, a junior biology major at Angelo State University, received a one-year full scholarship to attend the University of Luneburg in Germany.

The scholarship is part of a comprehensive education exchange program between Angelo State and the German university. Sandra already has participated in a one-month course of study in Luneburg.

The Midland High School graduate studied German in high school, at ASU and at Luneburg. She will leave this month for Germany and will study there through July 1993. She plans to enter medical school following her undergraduate at ASU and is also a Carr Academic Scholarship recipient.

Sandra is the daughter of Price and Janell Parker of Midland.

Plant society to host tasting party

Staff report

The Midland Native Plant Society will host a wild foods tasting party at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Sibley Nature Center in Hogan Park.

"It doesn't taste near as bad as it sounds," said Shari Laidley, Lee High School biology teacher and preparer of the evening's food. "I do this for my students at school most every year. They giggle and groan, but they end up thinking it isn't bad ... even good."

"A lot of people have an interest in foraging (eating wild food)," said Burr Williams, education director at Sibley. "I've prepared dove and quail using natural condiments; and other hunters like to know what is good and not good. Back a few years ago there were a lot survivalists who thought the USSR was going to bomb us back to the Stone Age, and they were real interested. Archaeologists like to know what Indians ate, and some older folks remember eating wild greens in the depression to prevent scurvy."

Jean Reid, president of the Midland Native Plant Society, urged residents to attend the party.

"Eating wild foods is part of American history, part of our culture ... pioneers had to know what to eat to survive," she said. "We will probably never have to know what to forage for, but it is nice to know."

There will be no cost for the tasting party, and a brief slide show will be presented as well. Children are encouraged to attend.

In addition, there will be a brief discussion on using insects for food.

Country Style

By Sonja Merrick

Nestled on three acres of beautifully landscaped grounds, this home offers the best of two worlds — urban sophistication and amenities along with the sense of lush, pastoral spaciousness that's a part of rural living.

Although only a six-minute drive from Midland Park Mall, this home looks and feels as if it's hundreds of miles away from Tall City lights. The winding driveway is flanked by all manner of trees and shrubbery. There are, in fact, no less than 28 pecan trees on the property. Also, plum, peach, nectarine, apricot and pear trees. Not to speak of a landscaped vegetable garden and a profusion of decorative flowers and shrubbery.

The beautiful brick house itself is also embraced by exquisitely tended flora.

Front doors open to a dramatic sight. Step down from the foyer and view a splendid, two-story living area. Straight ahead a huge brick fireplace rises two stories. Over it, two skylights bring in the sun. A door to the left opens to a lighted, covered patio. The patio leads to a beautiful back yard, and ultimately to a delightful lighted gazebo — which comes complete with picnic table.

The wall to the right of the living area is paneled in a deep, rich wood with picture-frame paneling. Also to the right, a spiral staircase leads to an expansive loft that overlooks the living area. It's an ideal spot for a study, additional living or game area. Another living area wall houses a length of built-in cabinets and shelves.

To the left of the living area is a large, comfortable kitchen. It includes a breakfast area that's situated within the glistening embrace of a large bay window. A huge, separate pantry is at hand.

To the right of the kitchen lies a large laundry area and a garage. Nearby stairs lead to a fully carpeted, completely finished two-room basement with its own full bath.

To the right of the entry are two sizeable bedroom, each with pan ceilings, overhead fans and walk-in closets. A full bath is nearby.

Farther back, still to the right of the living area, is a master bedroom suite. First find a room that would be ideal as a nursery, sitting area or home office. The master bedroom itself is large, with pan ceiling and overhead fan. The master bath has his-and-her vanities and dressing areas. Also a separate, oversize shower.

This four-bedroom, three-bath home is filled with delightful amenities. They include a darkroom, water conditioner and RO unit indoors. Outdoors find a fish pond, barbecue fireplace, metal barn, workshop, four water wells, extensive sprinkler system and parking pad. And, there's a network of pretty sidewalks to connect it all.

The home is being offered by Dene Kelly Realtors for $145,000.

Lamp repair is usually relatively simple

By John Warde
Associated Press writer

Most floor and table lamps eventually need repair. The good news is that fixing a lamp is usually not too difficult.

Replacing the Plug

If the plug on a lamp cord is cracked, or if the prongs wiggle or do not fit tightly into the wall socket, replace the plug. Polarized plugs, which have one wide prong and a narrow one, offer the most protection from accidental electrical shock. But they can be used only if the slots in the wall socket will accept them, and they are ineffective if the cord and internal wiring are not also polarized.

Examine the cord to determine whether t is polarized. If insulation over one of its two wires is ribbed or if cutting the cord to install a new plug reveals copper and silver-colored wires, then the cord — and probably the internal wiring — is polarized. You should buy a non-polarized plug, which has prongs of equal size, only if the slots in the socket are of the same length or if the cord is not polarized.

Self-connecting replacement plugs, whether polarized or not, are easiest to install. One variety has a small lever along the back or on one side. Make sure the switch is off. Cut off the old plug and about two inches of the cord. Pull the lever away from the replacement plug. Insert the end of the remaining cord into the plug's opening as far as possible; close the lever to clamp the plug to the cord.

Another type has prongs that fit into a hollow plug body. Cut off the old plug as described. Slide the body onto the cord. Insert the end of the cord into the separate plastic core containing the prongs. Pinch the prongs together to clamp the cord, and slide the core and prongs into the plug body until both parts snap together.

With polarized plugs, insert the cord into the plug so that the ribbed or silver-colored wire makes contact with the wider prong. With non-polarized plugs, the placement of the wiring does not matter.

Replacing the Cord

If a lamp cord is cracked or frayed, it should be replaced. Buy a cord the same length as the original, with a plug — polarized, if appropriate — attached.

Before taking the lamp apart, make sure it is unplugged. Remove the shade, if there is one, and the bulb.

If the lamp's switch is in the socket containing the bulb, turn the lamp over and remove any material or plate on the underside. Untie the cord if it is knotted. Then cut off the plug and all but about a foot of the cord.

Cut away about an inch of the insulation covering the end of the old cord protruding from the lamp and the same amount from the replacement cord. Twist the wires of both cords together and wrap the splice with tape so it is smooth and strong. Do not use too much tape; the splice must fit through the hole in the lamp's base.

Look for the word "press" on the upper part of the bulb socket, near the seam where it joins the lower part. Grip the socket's upper part socket and press the spot hard with your thumb while twisting the socket slightly to release it.

Pull on the socket, to which the upper end of the original cord is attached, to draw the old cord out of the lamp and thread the new cord at the same time. When about a foot of the new cord emerges, cut off the old cord below the splice.

To attach the new cord, separate the wires by splitting the cord down the middle for about two inches. There, tie the wires in a knot that can rest in the bottom of the socket's lower part. An Underwriters' knot, like the one illustrated, is recommended to prevent wires from touching if they loosen. With a knife or cutting pliers, bare about half an inch of each wire.

Remove the old wires from the socket's upper part by loosening the terminal screws holding them. (To reach the screws, raise the socket's metal sleeve and the cardboard shield underneath.)

Assuming the new cord and plug are polarized, wrap the silver-colored wire or the wire covered by ribbed insulation clockwise around the silver-colored terminal screw on the socket's upper part. (This is the screw farthest from the switch.) Wrap the cord's copper wire clockwise around the remaining screw, which is brass-colored.

Tighten both screws, making sure that each completely covers the bared part of the wire wrapped around it. Make sure neither wire crosses itself; the wire should wrap around the screw shaft three quarters of the way.

Fit the shield and sleeve onto the socket's upper part; then press and twist the assembly into the lower part until the pieces snap together. Pull the cord reasonably tight at the base of the lamp, tie a knot in the cord to keep it from slipping, and replace the material or plate beneath the base.

If the switch is at the base, simply remove the material or plate from underneath; then unscrew the plastic connectors that fasten the cord's wires to those under the lamp.

Bare the ends of the wires in the new cord. If the wires both in the cord and under the lamp are polarized (typically, the clues for the wires under the lamp are the same as for the cord), connect the cord's silver-colored or ribbed wire to the bared wire leading to the socket by twisting the bared ends of both wires together clockwise and then screwing a plastic connector over them, also clockwise, so that no bare wires show. Connect the remaining pair of bared wires. If the wiring is non-polarized, either of the cord's wires can be connected to either of the wires under the lamp.

The Socket and Switch

To fix a faulty bulb socket — for instance, one that makes crackling noises or whose switch does not work — you generally need to replace only the part containing the terminal screws and the switch. Before buying the part, make sure it has a one-way (on-off) or a three-way switch, depending on your needs. (The pieces are almost identical.)

To replace the switch on the base of a lamp, remove it and install an identical new switch, using the same wiring methods as for replacing a cord.

Is now the right time to refinance a home?

With mortgage rates dipping to the lowest point since 1977, homeowners are jumping at the opportunity to decrease their house note or pay it off more quickly. The Mortgage Bankers association reports that half the mortgage loans written during October were refinancings. That represents a 500 percent increase in refinancings over the same period last year.

Analysts project the current rate will not drop substantially. Several believe rates will rebound in the spring. Should you take advantage of this window of opportunity?

Conventional wisdom has held that if the rate is two points lower than your current contract, you've lived in your home for two years and plan to stay at least another two years — it's time to refinance.

But it still may be a good idea to refinance if you don't meet all these criteria. It depends on your goals.

Do you want to reduce your monthly mortgage payment or pay your loan off faster?

Lowering your payment is a straight calculation. Find out what the best rate and cost package available is and contrast it to your current loan.

Figure out how much of the new loan will be transaction costs (fees closing expenses, points). Then simply divide the dollar amount you would save on monthly payments into the transaction costs. That tells you how many months you would have to stay at your home to break even. After that time, you're saving money.

For example, the combination of a 3 percent rate savings together with closing costs that total 2 percent of the entire loan, starts your savings in less than a year.

The best way to reduce the overall cost of a mortgage is to refinance for a shorter term.

Depending on your current rate, you may be able to keep your note the same or increase it only slightly, but pay it off several years earlier. There are several factors to consider. It's best to consult a mortgage professional to work through the numbers.

A recent Money article on the topic suggests a simple alternative available under most mortgage contracts with no calculations or comparisons involved.

Simply pre-pay extra amounts of the principal each month. An extra $23 a month on $75,000, 10 percent, 30-year loan will pay it off in 25 years.

There may be money to be found in your mortgage. Call a mortgage professional for more information.

Attractive Caucasian lady in late 50's wishes to meet a gentleman about same age for dining out and togetherness. Will answer all replies. MP-540

Attractive single Caucasian female, 29, is looking for a man who still thinks treating a lady like a lady is important. I have old school values and would like to meet a man with the same values. I am a light drinker, non-smoker, non-drug user. I like dining out, long walks and being with a special person. If you fit this description, I want to hear from you. I like men with family values. Children are fine. So let me hear from you. Please include phone number. Only sincere replies. MP-541

I'm looking for that special person to be educated, financially secure, not afraid of commitment, communication, or attention. I love being spoiled and pampered but enjoy spoiling and pampering too. I feel romance, honesty and communication are the keys to relationships. I am not looking to play "The Dating Games" and would respect the same. I want someone to love me for me, and who can be loved in return for who they are. I do believe that looks are important for getting the attraction started to build the chemistry needed between two people, but also feel that judging a book by its cover alone sometimes leads to missing a "Good book". Written by an attractive and confident 24 year old Caucasian female with blonde hair, hazel eyes, and is 5'4" tall. MP-542.

KENT OIL, INC. — KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

WHY KENT OIL COMPANY?

Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a West Texas-based company, thirty five years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:

- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations
- Sick pay program
- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
- Structured continual management training
- Flexible scheduling
- Full and part time hours available
- Work close to home
- Affiliation with Odessa 66 credit union

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. All of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.

Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.

If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply (and be ready for interview) at the Kent Oil office Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 3314 N. Loop 250 in Midland.

PERMIAN BASIN

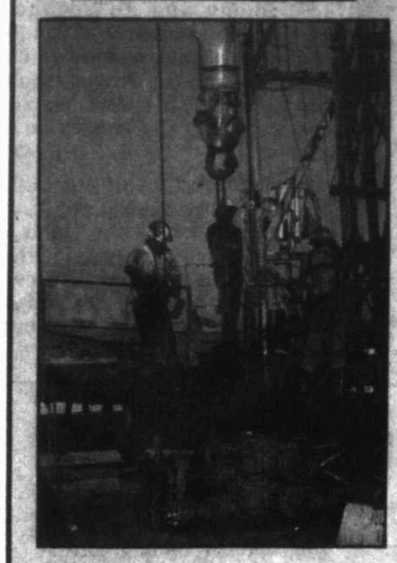

OIL REPORT

Section E
Midland Reporter-Telegram
Sunday, September 6, 1992

Completions/5E
Development/3E

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Counts dive

A workover crew does remedial work on a New Mexico well. Remedial work has increased as rotary rig activity decreases. The Permian Basin rig count was 90 last week, down 8, while the U.S. count dropped 21, from 689 to 668.

Tectonic topic

A study of the regional structure and simpson group stratigraphy of the Permian Basin and its implications for paleozoic tectonic development will be the discussion of a WTGS luncheon set for Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. at Midland Center. Speaker is Mark Juedeman a geophysicist for Shell Offshore Inc. in New Orleans. Call 683-1573 for reservations.

South gas

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — Conoco Inc. plans to drill a 15,000-foot exploratory well, its first ever in Kentucky, 14 miles south of Owensboro in McLean County, the company announced Friday.

"After an extensive study of the geological and seismic data in western Kentucky and southern Illinois, Conoco geoscientists have determined that commercial recoverable reserves of natural gas may exist at a greater depth."

Oil prices

The Rotaflex pump, manufactured in Odessa, takes long strokes to move more oil. Oil prices hovered steady around the $21 mark for most of the week, increasing slightly in light of natural gas prices which improved as a result of news of damaged platforms in the Gulf of Mexico.

Reserve price

AUSTIN — The second quarter median value for domestic reserves increased modestly to $4.91 per barrel of oil equivalent, according to Strevig & Associates.

This compares with the first quarter median of $4.66 per barrel of oil equivalent. The modest rise in reserve values is partially attributed to the struggle by producers and investors to enter into the currently competitive transaction market. The divestiture announcements by domestic producer's has provided an invitation to various institutional, international, industry and contrarian investors. The volume of activity continued to decline, with second quarter activity totaling 49 transactions compared with the first quarter volume of 55 transactions.

EPA draws heat over lake fines

■ Anger at actions taken by EPA against Basin operators intensified at a meeting in Hobbs.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Charges by the Environmental Protection Agency against oil and gas operators in the Permian Basin for alledgedly dumping water into New Mexico could be dropped, say officials.

"I think there is a good chance EPA will decide to drop all charges in this matter, because they are dead wrong and I think they know they are wrong," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "I think there is a better chance of them backing down on this than any other issue that we have encountered in the past."

PBPA was one of several oil and gas associations representing Permian Basin operators at a meeting between EPA and producers in Hobbs Wednesday. In August, the producers received over $4 million in fines handed out by EPA for alledgedly polluting "waters of the U.S."

Over 150 lawyers and interested parties crammed the Hobbs City Council Chambers at the meeting called by Sen. Pete Dominici.

Spannaus said it was asinine that EPA would try to classify the mostly dry lakes as waters of the U.S. "They made the determination on the basis, that birds that may rest at the lakes have flown across state lines and therefore the lakes are involved in interstate commerce. It is mind boggling that they would make this kind of interpretation and try to make it stick."

Sen. Dominici agreed that the interpretation was far-fetched and the actions of EPA arrogant and said he would do everything he could to reverse the EPA decision.

Watkins will speak to PBPA

Staff report

Secretary of Energy, James D. Watkins will be a featured speaker, Wednesday at an energy briefing breakfast sponsored by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

While in Midland, Watkins will also tour several Permian Basin facilities including the yard of Cactus Drilling where several deep rigs are stacked and the facilities of Partech in Odessa. He will also meet with company officials and employees to gain on-site knowledge of the problems of the oil industry.

A 1949 graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, Watkins was named Chief of Naval Operations by President Reagan in June of 1992. He was nominated by President Bush as Secretary of Energy on January 20, 1989, and on March 1, 1989 was confirmed as the sixth Secretary of Energy.

The 7:30 a.m. Energy Breakfast is open to the public by reservation only. Reservations may be made by calling PBPA at 684-6345.

FOCUS ON: OILFIELD MANUFACTURING

Watco welder, Red Dunaway, above, cuts parts for a truck bed, destined for the Middle East. A concentration of expertise and facilities has made the Permian Basin a leading oilfield manufacturing center.

Building a better oilpatch

■ History and location have made the Permian Basin a major oilfield manufacturing center.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Located in one of the nation's largest oil and gas producing provinces, with a heavy concentration of oilpatch expertise, it was only natural that the Permian Basin would become a major manufacturing center for the industry.

Today the Permian Basin, second only to Houston, is recognized as a world class center for oilfield technology and manufacturing. Roots of oilfield manufacturing in the Permian Basin probably stretch as far back as the first production in the Basin.

In the 70-odd years since, a number of companies have sprung up in Midland, Odessa, Big Spring and other towns in the Permian Basin, manufacturing a variety of oilfield goods ranging from drilling rigs to storage tanks, tongs, ball bearings, pumping units and pipe.

"The experience of the people in this area over many years provides a unique, practical application to manufacturing products and providing services for the rapidly changing oilfield economy," said Dr. Jerry Jones, president of Midland Business Center.

"One of the things that appears to be happening," he added, "is more and more concentration and involvement by independents, making Midland the world center for oilfield entrepreneurs."

Basin manufacturers have ridden the highs and lows of the oilfield economy, trying to keep their feet planted in reality during boom times, and looking for diversity to help weather the busts.

According to Mark Dermit, labor analyst in the Texas Employment Commission's Midland regional office, 5 percent of Midlanders, 2,300 people, were employed in manu-

Motorists recipients of largest oil subsidy

Pitts

"I have fought for free enterprise all my life. I am not for any form of subsidy to the oil industry, even if it's called an import fee." That was a comment I received from a Midland producer several years ago when there was a strong move afoot to create an import fee to prop up oil prices and the ailing oil industry.

Even in the face of economic disaster and personal loss, many oilmen held steadfastly against any notion of government stepping in to provide a direct subsidy for the industry — partly for principal sake and partly for fear of permanent government intrusion into the market place. Others, however, faced with eminent doom, did not stand as tall on principal. The question of import fees eventually split the industry down the middle and finally became a dead issue.

While there was a reluctance to let government manipulate market prices, there was no such halting in the matter of incentives. No oilman is ashamed to stand up for a fair tax incentive that encourages an industry to produce more of what the nation needs, while creating jobs and improving trade balance for the good of the nation.

But, government controls and subsidies have always been viewed by much of the industry as prostitution of free enterprise.

But if the oil industry is ashamed of subsidy, the consumers of oil don't seem to have the same compunction.

According to the World Resource Institute one of the biggest subsidies in the nation goes to the American driver who pays less for gasoline and drives more than anyone else in the world. The institute says the nation's addiction for cheap gasoline results in the subsidy of hundreds of billions a year to motorists.

Not covered by the price of gasoline, says the institute, is much of the nation's road construction, traffic management, law enforcement, free parking, and the cost to the environment. If the true cost of driving were charged to vehicle owners it would result in a cost of several dollars per gallon for gasoline.

But as it is, local, state and federal governments now subsidize driving to the tune of more than a dollar per gallon, says the report. It also notes that Americans enjoy bargain prices in energy, paying more for most brands of bottled water than gasoline.

Here's how the report breaks down the auto subsidy:

■ Gas taxes and other fees cover only about 60 percent of road construction and maintenance costs in the United States.

Other expenses not covered by motorists (which is us) include:

■ $68 billion to provide such things as police protection, traffic management and routine street maintenance.

■ An $85 billion subsidy in free parking provided by employers and businesses.

■ $10 billion for environmental dam-

FOCUS: Manufacturing

facturing in July, a category that includes oilfield manufacturing, out of a total non-agriculture wage and salary base of 45,900. At the height of the last oil boom, 9.7 percent of Midlanders were employed in manufacturing. The percentage has fluctuated from 6.8 percent in 1986 to 4.8 percent last year before recovering slightly this year.

Jones added, "The Permian Basin provides not only domestic but international manufacturing possibilities, with growth and development in the international arena being more significant. Opportunity in that area is something people in this area should be interested in."

Indeed, most Permian Basin-based manufacturers have already begun establishing international markets. Manufacturers say that while being in the Permian Basin is beneficial, because it is the nation's major energy center with many customers, and transportation from either Midland International Airport or from Interstate 20 is excellent, a weak domestic demand is forcing them to look overseas.

Fiberflex, which makes fiberglass rods and has found markets in Mexico, Canada, France and South America, currently is opening up China and the Pacific Rim, said Mert Remley, director of manufacturing and engineering.

The company is presently setting up a plant in China at which the Chinese will manufacture fiberglass rods.

Remley says fiberglass rods are in great demand because of their light weight that allows producers to use less energy and smaller gear boxes to pump wells.

He added that the company is moving into such new fields as producing fiberglass rods for electrical transmission and distribution.

Also developing overseas business is Highland Pump, which last year moved its Rotaflex Pump manufacturing facility to Odessa and has shipped units to Venezuela, Colombia and plans to ship units to China and Russia.

"We have recently consummated a joint venture with China to manufacture units in China for Chinese use," said Jerry Watson, vice president of engineering with Rotaflex.

Watson estimated that 50 percent of the company's market is in the Permian Basin, with the remainder in East Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Wyoming, Utah and California, as well as overseas.

The company has had a problem finding fabrication people that meet its requirements, Watson said, explaining that "In the past, when the oilfield was booming, there were a lot of qualified fabrication people. Now, they've either changed occupations or left the area. There is a shortage of good qualified single-hand welders. As far as mechanical aptitude is concerned, the people we deal with are great."

He said Odessa College is working with the company to train workers based on Highland's requirements.

At the present time, Rotaflex is working to expand both its model line and production capacity. Currently, the company manufactures the Rotaflex 1200, the largest capacity pumping unit in the world with a 60,000 peak polish rod load and 306-inch stroke. Rotaflex currently has three models, the 900, 1100 and 1200, and is working to expand the line downward.

In addition, Rotaflex is working to expand its production capacity from 10 to 12 units per month to 15 to 18 units monthly.

Hy-Bon Engineering, which manufactures gas vapor recovery units, was begun in this area in 1952. The company is seeking out more international markets, but at the same time is looking to diversify into other industrical sectors, said Jim Choate, manufacturing manager.

He said the company is diversifying into the environmental area by manufacturing units to capture gas vapors off city landfills and methane digesters at food processing plants and municipal sewage systems.

In addition, a subsidiary, CNG Services, designs and builds compressed natural gas refueling stations to help spur the alternative fuel market.

Parker Technologies, Partech, began life in the Permian Basin as OIME, building drilling rigs. It was purchased in 1975 by Parker Drilling. During the boom between 1978-81, according to David Holland, administrative manager, "We built a lot more rigs than are being used today."

In the past few years, Partech was kept busy refurbishing drilling rigs to be sent overseas. "The cost to take a 10-year-old used rig and make it like new is half the cost of building a new rig," Holland said, adding that the plant has built perhaps one new rig in the last three years.

At the present time, though, Holland said Parker's needs overseas have slumped and caused Partech to retrench, a move he said he hopes is temporary.

As Partech waits for overseas business to pick up for the parent company, Partech is looking for non-oilfield related work. The company has built generators for the federal government's railgun project, part of the SDI defense, and continues to build research equipment for the University of Texas.

"Because our headquarters are in Midland-Odessa, we keep a good pulse on what's going on in the market," said Mike Banas, director of marketing for Permian Tanks.

The company is having a busy summer, according to Banas, who attributes the growth in business to additional sales staff, a new office in Houston, and aggressive marketing.

Like Hy-Bon, Partech also has expanded into non-oil and gas related markets such as municipalities, water systems, food processing, pulp and paper, field erected steel tanks and the chemical and petrochemical industries.

Getting into fiberglass fabrication, he said, has helped the company diversify even more. Still, Banas estimated that 65 to 70 percent of the company's business is oil and gas related.

"A lot of our big customers, like Parker & Parsley, IP Petroleum and Henry, use used equipment, but they need new equipment once in a while," he noted.

Permian Tank is also moving overseas, currently building production equipment for China and Russia.

The company has eight locations, including three in Midland/Odessa: An ASME coat shop, fiberglass facility and steel fabrication facility. Other locations are in Farmington, N.M., Kilgore and Gittings, as well as in Oklahoma City and the Houston.

Sivalls Inc. has been in the Permian Basin since 1947 and company president C.R. Sivalls said he has seen many ups and downs in the Permian Basin.

While activity in the Permian Basin is slow now, Sivalls said most of his company's business is outside the Basin, largely in the Rocky Mountain area. And he expects much of that business to end with the tax credits for tight sands and coal seam gas drilling.

The company, which manufactures steel pressure vessels and tanks for the oil and gas industry, has tried to diversify but faces much competition, Sivalls said.

He also has done business overseas ... in South America, Russia and the Middle East. But Sivalls said that developing overseas business has faced such hurdles as tariffs, competition from native businesses and distance from the plant to the customer.

He added, "I'm afraid going international is what the oilpatch is going to have to do, and getting to those markets is tough. It's a long way to where the customer is and they take a long time to get a project together, two to three years as opposed to maybe two to three weeks here.

"I hope Washington gets the message to work on trade policies and not concentrate on automobiles. There are other products we can export," he said.

Still, he added, "The Permian Basin should still be good for a long time, if tax policies are changed to get investors back into the oil business. The price of oil and gas is not that bad, but with the majors going overseas, independents need investors, and the investors aren't encouraged to invest because of the tax system. If you change the tax system, we might get some money back into the industry. There's still plenty of oil around if someone wants to get the money together and go for it."

New tubing inspection system ready

Staff report

HOUSTON — Tuboscope Vetco International Inc. has announced the introduction of its new wellhead inspection system, WellChek. The inspection system is placed on the well servicing unit and the tubing is inspected at speeds up to 250' per minute as it is pulled.

"The WellChek state of the art system utilizes microprocessor technology and an advanced probe design to detect OD and ID corrosion pitting, transverse cuts and other defects. Proven gamma ray technology is used to measure rod wear cuts and erosion in the tube wall.

Tuboscope says the system can prevent costly tubing failure by routinely checking the status of their downhole tubing, and when a failure does force an operator to shut down, a WellCheck inspection will quickly get the well back into production.

Don-Nan typifies manufacturing success

■ Don-Nan is typical of small shops that evolve into major manufacturing concerns.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Much of the manufacturing capacity of the Permian Basin has gone national and international, but it didn't start that way.

In most cases, some of today's most successful manufacturing concerns started as small mom-and-pop or garage operations that gradually diversifed operations and expanded markets.

The Permian Basin is full of rags-to-riches manufacturing stories. Fiberflex was actually started in a garage in Big Spring. Watco of Odessa started as a welding shop. Watson Packer was started in a small shop in Monahans. Don-Nan, a mom-and-pop repair operation turned manufacturer, is a success story typical of many firms in the Permian Basin.

Founded as a pump and supply shop 30 years ago, Don-Nan began to build parts for its customers, and eventually parlayed that skill into a full fledged manufacturing business.

"Once about all we did was supplement the pump business by facing cages and barrels. Then we prototyped a new gas-related product and started making a tool for a major manufacturer and it took off from there."

Today, using high-tech machining equipment, that includes computerized turning centers and state of the art equipment for sawing, threading, boring, milling, key cutting, deburring and welding the company manufacturers products for a wide range of applications.

Componets manufactured by Don-Nan for original equipment manufacturers are found in offshore production platforms, waste disposal trucks, gas turbines, building elevators, jet skis, submersible pumps and gas measurement equipment. Industries using the components are: logging, defense, mining, construction, pipelines, utility companies and entertainment industry.

Paul Andres, operations manger, noted: "Indepenent companies like Don-Nan provide an alternative resource for customers who need flexibility, cost effectiveness and shorter lead times. In other words, large corporations often find it easier and less costly to have certain items made right here in Midland."

To accommodate its wide range of customers, Don-Nan provides a full range of services that include: design, phototyping, tooling development, testing and manufacturing.

Partners to expand Cockrell Oil Corp.

HOUSTON (AP) — A group of well-known investors led by the Pritzker family of Chicago and Texan Mel Klein will form a $125 million partnership to expand Cockrell Oil Corp., a small independent run by a Houston family since the days of Spindletop, the parties said Monday.

The 50-50 venture is the second major foray in the energy business in two years by GKH Partners, which gained fame in takeover battles for RJR Nabisco and American Medical International. GKH includes Jay and Tom Pritzker, leaders of Hyatt Corp.; Dan Lufkin, co-founder of the Wall Street brokerage Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette; and Klein, a Corpus Christi investor.

In May 1991, GKH invested $50 million in Dallas-based Hanover Energy Holding Corp., parent of service equipment and natural gas marketing companies.

But the partnership with Cockrell will put GKH in the middle of the tumultuous exploration business, which has been contracting for several years and, during the past two years, increasingly moving overseas.

"With all that negative out there, it causes a major upheaval in the industry," said Ernie Cockrell, president of Cockrell Oil. "With that upheaval comes some opportunities. For companies that are positioned to take advantage of those opportunities agressively, we think there are some favorable investments to be made."

The partnership will target existing oil and gas reserves along with small energy companies for acquisition. Cockrell noted the leaders of many family-owned oil and gas operations are aging and have no clear successors.

In addition, many major energy companies have been selling U.S. properties, Klein said.

"The majors are moving out. Our advantages include the fact we have very knowledgable partners and a long-term perspective," said Klein, who envisions a decade-long partnership at least.

Cockrell's grandfather, Ernest Cockrell, started the company in 1901, shortly after the Spindletop gusher fueled the first Texas oil boom. It later became active in Louisiana and the Gulf of Mexico, where the company currently operates more than 100 wells and 12 drilling platforms.

In addition to building up assets, the partnership with GKH will help Cockrell in existing and new overseas exploration projects. The company is already making deals in the former Soviet Union, for instance.

Lufkin, whose energy background includes early investments in the North Sea, said the strategy will be to seek so-called "elephant" fields, those with reserves in that exceed 1 billion barrels.

"A little bit of money goes a long way when you're hunting for elephants but the risk is very, very large," Lufkin said. "We try to balance that with a much more conservative frame of developed properties in America."

AGA, Japanese hold natural gas summit

LOS ANGELES — Senior executives from the U.S. and Japanese natural gas industries met Sept. 1 for the third Japan-U.S. Gas Summit.

"The U.S. natural gas industry is no longer a parochial business, but rather is competing in a global marketplace," said A.G.A. President Michael Baly III. "Thus, we have found it valuable over the past several years to meet with our counterparts in the Japanese natural gas industry to discuss areas of mutual concern. We share many of the same opportunities and the same problems, and can learn greatly from each other."

The U.S. participants in the program include American Gas Association Chairman Richard D. Farman, chairman and CEO of Southern California Gas Co.; A.G.A. First Vice Chairman David R. Jones, president and CEO of Atlanta Gas Light Co.; A.G.A. Second Vice Chairman Robert L. Ridgley, chairman and CEO of Northwest Natural Gas Co. (Portland, Ore.); former A.G.A. Chairman Donald J. Heim, chairman of Washington Gas; Stephen D. Ban, president and CEO of the Gas Research Institute; Daniel E. Gibson, vice president, gas supply, Pacific Gas and Electric Co.; and Baly.

Discussion topics included national energy policies; the role of natural gas in the environment; gas marketing; gas business strategies; and a report and recommendations from the Japanese-American Gas Research Consortium. William A. Nitze, president of the Alliance to Save Energy, will give a special presentation on "An Alternative Energy Future," a study co-sponsored by the Alliance, A.G.A. and the Solar Energy Industries Association.

Wednesday's program included a tour of Southern California Gas' new headquarters building and its Emergency Response Center.

PITTS: Auto subsidy high

(From 1E)

age to trees, vegetation, crops, material and human health by vehicle carbon dioxide emissions, which account for 25 percent of all carbon dioxide emissions.

■ $100 billion in market losses because of congestion,

■ $55 billion in losses from vehicle accidents that are not borne my motorists,

■ $15.6 billion in noise and vibration damage cause by automobiles.

Finally, the report says motorists should pay an estimated $50 billion, or half the cost of defending oil supplies in the Persian Gulf, as the bill for protecting Americans' excessive driving habits.

Of course, the driving public is us — everyone who owns a vehicle. But, given the size of the automobile subsidy, perhaps the next time subsidy becomes an issue in the oil industry, producers should not feel nearly as guilty.

Dresser has lower profit

DALLAS (AP) — Dresser Industries Inc., a major oilfield supply and engineering company, said Monday its third-quarter profit fell 37 percent because of losses from discontinued operations and the continuing slump in domestic drilling.

Dresser earned $28.0 million, or 20 cents a share, during the three months that ended July 31. A year ago the company earned $44.5 million, or 33 cents per share.

Revenue was $971.1 million, down 4 percent from $1.01 billion last year.

Lower U.S. oil and gas exploration and flat international activity cut into the company's performance, chief executive John Murphy said. Similar conditions have hurt the company all year.

In addition, losses from discontinued operations took $8.3 million dent from the bottom line.

For the first nine months of its fiscal year, Dresser earned $57.4 million, or 42 cents a share. A year ago, the company earned $86.3 million, 64 cents a share.

Arco completes horizontal gas well

Staff report

Arco has finaled a prolific horizontal well in Upton County. The Soppe No.1, located 3.5 miles northwest of Rankin in the Amacker-Tippett SE (Bend) field.

From the Bend at 10,600 feet, the well flowed 20,083 CAOF with 339 barrels of 55.2 condensate. On a four point test the well flowed 3,359 Mcfd of gas on a 16/64 in.; 4,254 Mdfd on 19/64 in.; 5,038 on 21/64 in. and 6,682 Mcfd on 24/64 in. in 90 minutes. On a 16/64 choke, flowing tubing pressure was 1,985 psi with a bottom hole pressure of 3,023 psi. Amoco says it plans to dual complete the well in the Strawn.

Developments up permit count

Several major development projects made the boards this week. Getting particular attention was the tight sand Canyon fields.

ENRON cranked up with 18 permits in the Sawyer (Canyon) field. At the same time IP continued its tight sand program with Sugg Ranch (Canyon). Tight sands credits are set to expire at the end of this year and drilling in the target now account for a major portion of Permian Basin drilling.

In other projects, PARKER & PARSLEY permitted 11, namely in the Spraberry, as it continues to drill on acquired properties.

AMOCO has staked eight locations in the Midland Farms, and GREENHILL PETROLEUM CO. has slated 12 wells in the Emma field,

Possible new field discovery reported

Spence Energy Co. has reported a possible new field discovery, 13 miles east of Eldorado with its Wheeler Field No.1.

The well flowed 285 Mcfd of gas, no oil and 3 bwpd on a 10/64 in. choke. Location for the well is GH&SARY survey, block L, Section 24, A 1303, 1,800 ft from south line and 2,800 ft. from east line of the section.

Enron finals five Canyon wells

Enron is getting consistent results with its tight sands development program. The company has completed five wells in the Sawyer (Canyon) field, 7 miles west of Sonora in Sutton County. All of the wells completed for 500 to 1,000 Mcfd calculated absolute open flow.

Firm recompletes Ellenburger well

J.M. Huber Corp. has recompleted an Ellenburger well in Garza County to produce 32 bopd, 37 Mcfd of gas and 37 bwpd in the Aljenda-Blp (Strawn) field. The well, the Middleton No.19-1 is located 10 miles northeast of Post, and was originally drilled in 1989 as an Ellenburger producer pumping 396 bopd.

The hardest-working contractor in the nation is the pace-setting contractor in the Permian Basin: Grace Drilling Company.
We've drilled thousands of wells from Alaska to Florida - put our experience to work for you today.
Working hard is how we acquired some of the best rigs in the oil patch - and the talent to run them right. And we'll be around next year, working for you, because we're backed by the strength of Grace Energy Corporation. So when you're ready to go to work with the best crews in the business, give us a call - we'll be there.
Grace sets the pace in the Permian Basin.

We stack the deck in your favor.

By developing and patenting our Continuous Mix Gel (CMG) System, Smith Energy Services created the industry standard for liquid fracturing gel systems.

This saves you time and money by improving well performance and delivering high quality gel "on-the-fly" with no wasted materrials or disposal problems.

And there is no tank-to-tank viscosity or pH variance as with batch-mixed gels.

We have a full range of products including refined guar, HPG and CMHPG which have been formulated to yield maximum hydration in a minimum amount of time, even at lower temperatures.

The dynamics of our system allow tapered gel loadings with flexible viscosity at the highest rate in the industry. And with the in-line viscometer and mass flowmeter for exact measurements, it is the best monitored and most easily controlled fracturing gel system.

So when you want uniform, high quality gel mixed "on-the'fly," without paying for unused materials, try our CMG System. It's all part of our commitment to excellence.

And you'll have the ace in the hole.

Smith Energy Services. We work best under pressure.

Conoco cuts not likely to impact Basin

. Announced cuts by Conoco will not impact employees in the Permian Basin. There had been rumors that some Conoco employees might be cut, but a Conoco spokesman said no layoffs were planned.

Conoco announced Tuesday it is laying off between 45 and 50 employees, most of them in Ponca City but a few in Houston.

Company spokesman Lynn Hohensee said about 17 of the positions are being cut from the company's graphics and printing services division, and about 20 are being cut from the finance office.

The final number of layoffs hasn't been determined because a few of the positions are vacant, Hohensee said.

The layoffs are the result of efficiency studies.

"We're looking for ways to be more efficient, really. We've run into a number of efficiency and productivity studies," Hohensee said.

"We're trying to identify work that doesn't really add value to what we do," he said.

Effective dates will vary but Hohensee said most will be completed by the end of the calendar year.

Council to push natural gas

■ A council of industry officials is looking to increase gas demand by 2.5 Tcf in the next five years through promotion of new markets.

Staff report

Natural gas will get a strong push in coming months from the recently organized Natural Gas Council.

The Council, seeks to increase natural gas demand by 2.5 Tcf over the next five years, and expects to add 50,000 fleet vehicles or 10 Bcf of demand in the transporation sector.

The Council, organized in late July, is composed of the senior executive from each major segment of the natural gas industry — including producers, pipelines and distributors. The intent of the organization is to bring all segments of the industry together to "ensure that natural gas achieves its rightful role in the nation's energy mix."

Joining under the slogan "Working Together to Make Natural Gas the Fuel of Choice," the Natural Gas Council plans a number of public relations, government relations and educational programs to help it realize its ambitious goal of increasing U.S. gas demand by 2.5 Tcf by 1996.

Besides adding 10 Bcf of demand from NGVs, other plans include the addition of 1.5 Tcf of demand from oil-to-gas conversions; 1 Tcf in electrical generation; 20-30 Bcf in natural gas cooling technologies and 2-3 Bcf in electric to gas water heater conversions.

Chuck A. Jordan, chairman of the Natural Gas Council and vice president nd general manager of Chevron U.S.A. Natural Gas, says the projections are realistic and cites a number of reasons in the natural gas industry that will assist the drive for demand. They include: an improved infrastructure with adequate storage, deregulation of wellhead prices, changing technology, a switch from regulations to market forces, open access to pipelines. He also lists environmental concerns, the Clean Air Act and clean-burning qualities of natural gas as other will also be big elements in the natural gas marketing push.

"The legislative and regulatory effort to create a more competitive market, and the resulting restructuring of the industry to make it more flexible and consumer-orientated are all behind us because they encourage greater use," said Jordan.

The Council is currently composed of 18 industry and association executives.

Triton Energy Losses mount

DALLAS (AP) — Triton Energy Corp. said it lost $49.7 million during the fourth quarter of its fiscal year compared to a $2.4 million profit a year ago.

The loss of $1.47 per share came on revenue of $63.1 million during the quarter that ended May 31. Triton earned 11 cents per share on revenue of $54.1 million in the same 1991 period.

The company charged $27.7 million in loss provisions and other asset writedowns during the quarter.

For the year, Triton lost $95.4 million, or $3.19 per share. A year earlier, the company earned $600,000, or 3 cents a share.

Annual revenue was $229.9 million, down from $259.7 million in 1991.

Triton took asset writedowns and loss provisions of $57.5 million during the full year, plus $19.5 million in non-cash charges.

Focus overseas

As the oil industry moves overseas, manufacturing and fabrication work in the Permian Basin is no exception. James Brown, operations manager for Partech, an Odessa rig manufacturing and repair facility and a subsidary of Parker Drilling Co., says that about 75 percent of the company's rigs are now based overseas.

BRIEFS

Venzuela will sell its Citgo stake

CARACAS, Venezuela — Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez has order the national oil company Petroleos de Venzuela to sell half its wholly owned U.S. subsidary Citgo Petroleum Corp. Perez says he will sell the stake is Citgo because it is no longer "a good business," but acknowledges Venzuela may have to wait until the market recovers to sell Citgo at a profit.

Mesa makes offer to Louisiana

Mesa Inc. has offered its pay-as-you-go conversion plan to public and private fleets in Louisiana. Mesa says it will convert 100,000 vehicles and install fueling equipment if the fleets agree to purchase their natural gas from Mesa at the equivalent price of gasoline. Fleets account for approximately 300,000 of the states 3 million registered vehicles. It is the same plan presented to the state of Arizona and now being used by Tanner Companies of Phoenix.

Petrolite reports income increase

ST. LOUIS — Petrolite Corp. reported that net income for the fiscal third quarter ended July 31 rose to $4.1 million, or $0.36 per share, from $4 million, or $0.35 per share, the year before. Revenues declined to $78.5 million for $81.1. million.

Tejas Power earnings show decline

HOUSTON — Tejas Power Corp. has reported earnings of $714,000, or $0.07 per share, for the quarter ended June 30, 1992, compared to a net loss of $879,000 or $0.10 per share, for the second quarter of 1991.

Edisto Resources Corp. takes loss

DALLAS — Edisto Resources Corp. announced a net loss of $10.9 million, or a $0.50 per share loss after preferred dividends, on revenues of $85.6 million for the second quarter of 1992, versus a net loss of $35.9 million, or a $2.13 per share loss after preferred dividends, on revenues of $77.9 million for the same quarter of the previous year. Net cash provided by operations for the three months ended June 30, 1992 was $6.6 million, versus net cash provided by operations of $10.8 million for the second quarter of the previous year. Net cash provided by operations, before changes in operating assets and liabilities, totaled $6.1 million for the three months ended June 30, 1992, versus $1.9 million for the same three month period of 1991.

Alternative fuel testing underway

Testing of five alternative fuels is well underway in the most stringent side by side testing of fuels yet. Daily tests of CNG, LPG, electricity, methanol and reformulated gasoline are being conducted by the South Coast Alternative Fuels Demonstration Project, which will test for performance, safety, reliability, economy and pollution. Tests will run through June of 1994.

PBGC CONTINUING EDUCATION

Computer, reservoir courses slated

The Permian Basin Graduate Center has scheduled two courses. A lotus 1-2-3 course series, taught by Ted Windecker, will run from Sept. 8 to Sept. 17 and will include: Introduction to Lotus, Basic Spreadsheet Design, Intermediate Spreadsheet Design and Advanced Lotus 1-2-3. Fee is $60 for one session or $200 for all four. Each class offers 3 CPE credits.

A course, Foundations of Reservoir Managment, will be taught by James A. Murta and runs from September 14-18. The course which costs $850, offers a framework to enhance productivity through planning and teamwork, and is intended for practicing reservoir and production engineers.

Call the Graduate Center at 682-2832 for further details.

North Riley subject of SPE speech

Howell

Eddie Howell, regional well logging supervisor for Unocal will discuss "parameters for justifying improvements to mature waterfloods" at the noon meeting of the SPE Reservoir Study Group, Thursday. Howell is the co-author of a paper on the subject, in which completion and well log data were used to extrapolate geologic descriptions, fluid properties and rock properties across the entire North Riley field. Cost for the luncheon, which begins at 11:30 a.m. is $8 per person.

Processing purchase is complete

HOUSTON — A 50-50 joint venture between Conoco and Mitchell Energy's Development Corp.'s Liquid Energy Corporation subsidiary has closed on the $127.5 million purchase of Oryx Energy's interests in 11 Oklahoma and two Texas natural gas processing plants.

The joint venture, C&L Processors Partnership, will be managed by Conoco. Funding for the acquisition is being provided through project financing obtained by the partnership from a syndication of banks led by The Chase Manhattan Bank.

Conoco will operate three of the Oklahoma and will be responsible for marketing the partnership's natural gas and gas liquids in that state. Mitchell will operate one of the plants in Texas and have similar marketing responsibilities there.

The purchase will add approximately 9,500 barrels per day to each of the joint-venture partners' natural gas liquids production, moving Mitchell into the ranks of America's top 10 producers, where Conoco already resides.

In June, the joint venture announced it was in negotiation to purchase Oryx's interest in 14 plants.

PERMIAN BASIN
OIL SHOW
OCT. 21-22-23

When it comes to advertising for the 1992 Oil Show the Permian Basin Oil Report is your most logical choice.

Distributed to every oil and gas company and service company in the 54-county area of the Basin, it is the most widely read energy publication in the nation's largest oil and gas producing province.

With a staff of award-winning oil and gas writers that include petroleum engineers and geologists, the Oil Report also provides the most extensive and comprehensive coverage of oil and gas news in West Texas and New Mexico.

During the Oil Show the Permian Basin Oil Report plans to publish the largest edition ever produced for an oil show. Additionally, we will publish an update edition each day of the Permian Basin Oil Show.

We have a highly professional staff of advertising representatives available to assist you in planning and creating your Oil Show advertising.

BETWEEN THE BUNS:

One of the great things about being an American is having the freedom to make choices — the choice of which presidential candidate to vote for; the choice of career to have; the choice of which church to attend.

This Labor Day weekend, many Americans have another kind of choice on their minds — the choice of what to put on their hamburgers.

Traditionally, Labor Day weekend is considered the last chance to enjoy the summer, and many families and friends get together for one more outdoor cookout. And, traditionally, cookouts mean hamburgers.

The all-American hamburger can be served with just meat on a bun (the favorite of many very small Americans), or served with anything from mustard, mayonnaise, ketchup and relish to pickles, onions, tomatoes, lettuce and cheese.

More exotic hamburgers might also be dressed with mushrooms, grilled onions, sauerkraut, barbecue sauce, ranch-style salad dressing, bell peppers, chili, green chilies, jalapenos, bacon or any other condiment that sounds likely.

Hamburgers, in other words, can be just as individual as the person building them.

Mark Lee, meteorologist for KTPX-TV, Channel 9, and Jeff Welborn, weekend meteorologist for KOSA-TV, Channel 7, will be watching the weather for the rest of us, to make sure all those planned cookouts won't be rained out.

"In the news business, you don't have the chance to cook out much," Lee said.

But when he does, he has a very specific recipe for making burgers: "Buy frozen patties. You don't want to mess with patting them out. Put them on the grill and cook them until part of the burger falls off into the coals.

"Serve on a roll with ketchup, pickles, mustard and onion."

Welborn's perfect burgers are dressed with mayonnaise, ketchup, cheese, onions and lettuce, he said. "Occasionally pickles are fine," but "no tomatoes."

The meat is "medium — not too much pink," he added.

Welborn — who said he wants to try burgers made with buffalo meat but hasn't yet — enjoys cooking out. "We barbecue in the backyard lots of times," he said. "When it comes to grilling, I'm the cook. My wife does the indoor cooking; I do the outdoor cooking."

J. Gordon Lunn, meteorologist with KMID-TV, Channel 2, said he likes to "cook out every chance I get." And since he doesn't like the "instant burgers" that are the speciality of so many fast-food restaurants, his favorite burgers are more likely to be homemade.

"I like old-style 'greasy spoon' burgers," Lunn said. "I want the meat cooked well done," and the burger dressed with what is commonly called "everything" — lettuce, pickles, onions, tomatoes and cheese. "And mayonnaise," he added, not mustard.

One weatherman's dressing is another weatherman's "poison." Lee said when he makes his own style of perfect hamburgers, the meat has to be charbroiled and mayonnaise must be avoided.

Others are not that specific about their burgers. Jane Wolf, executive director of United Way in Midland, said she is not a fussy eater. When it comes to burgers, she likes hers "medium well with all the trimmings but onions," she said. "Mustard and mayonnaise, relish, cheese, everything."

Although she is usually too busy to be able to do much outdoor cooking, "in an earlier life I cooked them at home (on the grill). They are a family favorite.

"When we cooked out on the grill, we concocted a sauce — a barbecue sauce we played with to make it our own."

Now, she said, her seasonings are more simple. 'Salt and pepper are fine, but not necessary. ... I'm not a fussy eater."

Some Midlanders bring their favorite hamburger recipes with them from some of their favorite places.

As a rancher, businessman and Midland's most famous graduate of Texas A&M University, Clayton Williams devised his own special hamburger recipe from the burgers he used to eat at a restaurant he visited when he was at A&M.

Called "death burgers," the hamburgers first are grilled over mesquite coals, then served on whole wheat buns with lots of jalapenos and lots of good, sweet onions, according to information from his company.

These burgers are usually served with mustard, pickles, tomatoes and lettuce, and with side dishes of onions, cole slaw and fried onion rings.

Though Williams and his wife like good, juicy cheeseburgers, the information said, like many other health-conscious Americans they have cut down on cheese because of the fat content.

With or without cheese, many Americans will agree that the best hamburgers are those that are cooked outdoors. And when it comes to outdoor cooking, who knows more than the Boy Scouts.

Jody Sneed, senior district executive for Boy Scouts of America, Buffalo Trail Council in Midland, likes his burgers "well done, and, like they say, I 'drag it through the garden.' (That means) the works — lettuce, tomatoes, pickles, onions."

He also prefers mustard and ketchup on his burgers. "I used to use mayonnaise, but I grew out of it," he laughed.

The best seasoning, though, goes into the meat before it's cooked. "Spice up the meat before cooking," Sneed said. He uses a combination of Worchestershire sauce, barbecue sauce and spices such as allspice or Mrs. Dash. And, he added, "a little salt doesn't hurt anybody."

And yes, "I'll probably be cooking out over the weekend," he said.

He's had plenty of experience at cooking out. Hamburgers are one of the first things Boy Scouts learn to cook, he said.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Going-away party hosted for couple

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

A going away party for die-hard Aggie fans Bill and Betty Sewell, who ironically are moving to Austin, was held last weekend at the home of Bill and Nancy Milner. Bill is a graduate of Texas A&M University, and two of the Sewell's four sons are Aggies.

McKnight-Harrison

Bright orange invitations set the mood for the party, where a large number of friends gathered to wish them well. The clever invites stated in part: "Let's have a 'Yell Practice' and teach the 'Hook 'em Horns,' so when they get to 'Longhorn' country, they won't be so forlorn!"

Co-hosts were Patrick and Janet Adams, Bob and Cherry Crawford, Jerry and Bonnie Jordan and Heasley and Cindy Rook.

The decor, representing the arch rival universities, was carried out in orange, maroon and white. The path leading to the backyard was decorated with balloon bouquets and orange signs reading "Austin 323 miles," "Speed limit strictly enforced," and "Hook 'em Horns."

The registration table was adorned with a large University of Texas Longhorn rug and a handmade guest book for friends to write their farewells. A Longhorn basket containing assorted UT gadgets was presented to the Sewells. The couple also received a video tape made during the party.

Guests were served lemonade, tea and coffee, along with homemade cookies, including those in longhorn and Texas shapes.

Tables covered with orange and maroon cloths held orange marimums and maroon mums.

THE SANTA RITA CLUB, the service arm of the Petroleum Museum, hosted an old-fashioned ice cream social recently at the museum.

Ice cream and cookies donated by members of the club were served to approximately 80 members and guests.

Ed Rowland, executive vice president of the museum, welcomed the assemblage and explained the functions and importance of the volunteers to the museum's success.

Among others enjoying the party were Robert Leibrock, president of the museum's board of trustees; Harry Hugly, president of the Santa Rita Club, and his wife, Elsie; Ann Harges, the club's president-elect, and her husband, Marvin; Bebe and Bob Senning, Doris and George Welsh and Wanda and Elton Ramsey.

New members of the club are Reagan Blinka, Stephanie Foppiano, Shirley Johnston, Betty McMullan, Lola Moore and Lillian Woods.

THE WEDDING of Shelley Berger, daughter of former Midlanders Judy Wecker Blakeman of Fort Worth and Walter Berger III of Houston, to Kevin Kieffer of Arlington, was the occasion for a large gathering of relatives, including several local residents, recently in Fort Worth.

Parties preceding the wedding included a miscellaneous shower given by the six bridesmaids and a household tools and lingerie shower hosted by members of the wedding party for the couple. Shelley's bridesmaids capped off the celebration by kidnapping her early one Saturday morning, blindfolding her and driving to Austin for a weekend bachelorette party.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents, Kathy Kieffer and Richard Kieffer, both of Fort Worth, at the Italian Inn Ridglea. The bride's grandmothers, Margaret (Mrs. W.R., Jr.) Berger and Vera (Mrs. Paul) Wecker, both of Midland, hosted the bridal luncheon at Tours Restaurant in Fort Worth.

The reception, hosted by Shelley's parents, Judy and George Blakeman and Gloria and Walter Berger was held in the Yellow Rose Room in Forest Park.

The couple spent their honeymoon in Colorado and will reside in Arlington.

Vera says the wedding provided the perfect opportunity to renew family ties, show some Texas hospitality to the out-of-state relatives and enjoy the amenities of the Radisson Hotel in Arlington.

In touring the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth, the Weckers encountered actor/comedian Steve Martin. Vera inquired if he was that "wild and crazy guy," and he readily admitted it.

DEAR ABBY

Personal questions best unasked

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I read your column regularly in The Elkhart Truth and The Goshen News. A letter appearing in July caught my eye and prompted this response:

Van Buren

As to the man with Oriental features who answered "Cincinnati" when asked where he was from, not only was this poor guy probably born in Cincinnati — his parents and grandparents may have been, as well. Just because people have Oriental features, it does not mean they just got off the boat. Even if they are new to our country, is this the best way to welcome them?

Where do we white folks get this fascination with figuring out the nationality of people of apparently Oriental descent? How often are those of us with Occidental features assumed to be foreigners? My forebears, if we go back far enough, are from the British Isles. I'm proud of my history, but never has any self-appointed expert approached me with, "Excuse me, but my friend and I have a bet on. Are you from Scotland?"

I suggest the "walk-a-mile-in-their-shoes" test: Ask strangers only what YOU would not mind strangers asking you. Otherwise, MYOB. — A WASP IN GOSHEN, IND.

DEAR WASP: Your suggestion sounds reasonable to me. But for the record, if I were asked where I was from, I would take no offense, and would promptly reply, "Sioux City, Iowa."

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the 20-year-old female amputee whose mother thought it was "unladylike" for her to wear shorts, or skirts that didn't cover her stump.

Young lady, you are to be congratulated for your acceptance of the situation.

Four years ago, as a woman of 50, I also lost a foot at the ankle. (I do, however, wear a prosthesis.) I wear skirts whenever it pleases me, and I also wear shorts. I swim and do everything a "whole" person might do — with very few exceptions. I learned early on that if someone had a problem with my disability, it was his problem — not mine. I've found that many people are curious, but are afraid to ask about it.

My 5-year-old grandson wants to take me to his school for "show and tell." Yes, he wants me to show the class how Grandma can take her foot off! With his teacher's approval, I will visit, and along with the "unveiling," I'll deliver a short lecture on the importance of taking care of one's body, i.e., exercising, eating properly, not smoking, etc.

I am a firm believer that something positive can always be found in a bad situation. Show others that by maintaining a happy disposition, although you have what some would call a "disability," you will not allow it to disable you. A good sense of humor helps, too! — THINKING POSITIVE IN IRVING, TEXAS

DEAR THINKING POSITIVE: Thank you for an inspirational letter. Others can learn from you.

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand another limerick? If so, here's one of my favorites. — MILTON SHAPIRO, HILLSIDE, N.J.

There was a young lady from Thrace
Whose corset got harder to lace
'Til her mother said, "Nellie,
"There's more in your belly
"Than ever got there through your face."

AT WIT'S END

As to family values, put up or shut up

By Erma Bombeck

The battle between peanut-butter-spreading, pick-up-your-room-shouting, stay-at-home mothers vs. "Don't-let-anyone-in-the-house, the-key-is-under-the-coffee-can-in-the-garage" career mothers has been raging for years.

Bombeck

I encountered it when I was traveling the country 20 years ago trying to get the Equal Rights Amendment passed. Now it has become the biggest issue in this election. Which party really has the edge on family values?

Women should know better than to get involved in this division of their sex. It's like fighting your own shadow. Take a good look at those women on the podium in $300 suits and attache cases that match their shoes — the ones who are telling you how noble it is to stay at home and raise your children. If they really believed that, they'd still be there.

I've always hated the hypocrisy of activists who need a cause. They use American housewives as a battleground, but they never invite them to the war. I have yet to see an honest-to-goodness stay-at-home mother on the platform of any political convention.

The stay-at-home mom becomes a symbol only when it is politically prudent. She pays a price for her decision — economically and personally.

What these women on the podium should be saying is, "We've been there. We've scrubbed a lot of toilets to get to the board room. Maybe if someone had respected us for staying home and raising kids and had given us a voice in this country, we'd never left it."

There's a lot of finger-pointing going on between the parties, which is predictable. "I smoked pot, but I didn't inhale." "I'm a lawyer, but I don't practice." "I didn't go to Vietnam, but I saw 'Platoon' three times."

I look at the four couples running for office and realize none of them are what you'd call "traditional" in the Donna Reed sense. They can dress up their children and grandchildren in suits and party dresses, allow them to stay up late and wave under a sky of balloons, but the reality is they are being raised by working parents who have been allowed to make choices and pursue careers. This does not necessarily diminish their family values.

Instead of fighting one another, women should stand together and figure out how to get better prenatal care, child care facilities, drug-abuse programs, education for their children and safer neighborhoods.

Family values are easy to favor. It's like clean air. What we have to look for is a candidate who not ony talks about caring for his children and their future — but who really believes it enough to do something about it.

ANNIVERSARY

Merrifields mark 50th anniversary

Johnnie and Geneva Merrifield of Midland will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception today in their home. Hosts will be their children.

Merrifield and the former Geneva Catlett of Erick, Okla., were married Sept. 7, 1942, in Sayre, Okla.

Merrifield served 38 months and 13 days in the service. He started his career in civil service as a firefighter at Clinton Sherman Air Base in Burn's Flat, Okla. He transferred to Webb Air Force Base in Big Spring in 1956, and served there until the base closed and he retired.

The couple have four children — Larry Merrifield of Dallas and Sandy Hull, Mary Pearce and Darla Merrifield, all of Midland — as well as six grandchildren.

They have lived in Midland since 1956 and are now part-time residents of Pagosa Springs, Colo. They are longtime members of the Church of Christ.

WARREN-BOADLE

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Boadle

CRANE — Tonya Dee Warren of Midland became the bride of Eugene A. Boadle of Big Spring at the home of Ronald and Dolores Warren of Crane, parents of the bride. The Rev. Shell Denison of Wesley United Methodist Church in Big Spring officiated. Parents of the bridegroom are Ben and Madalyn Boadle of Big Spring.

Dolores Warren was matron of honor for her daughter. The bride also was attended by her father, Ronald Warren, and her daughters, Jeanie and Brittany. Ben Boadle served his son as best man. Ushers were Ronnie Warren and Matthew Warren of Crane, nephews of the bride.

The couple lives in Big Spring and are planning a fall honeymoon.

Empire State Building site originally a farm

NEW YORK (AP) — The site of the Empire State Building at Fifth Avenue and 34th Street was originally the farm of John Thompson.

In 1799, he sold the property for $7,000, and the Astor family built two mansions there. In the late 1890s the first Waldorf Astoria Hotel occupied the site.

In March 1930 construction of the 102-story Empire State Building began, covering an area of 83,860 square feet.

The giant structure, once the world's tallest building, rose 1,250 feet, and with the addition of a TV tower in 1951 now reaches a total height of 1,472 feet.

Plant may help cleanup

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — The broad-leafed plant on Paul Jackson's lab windowsill looks innocent enough. But the biochemist sums up its best-known property: "One good mouthful of a plant like this would kill a full-grown cow."

Datura innoxia, commonly called jimson weed, is a hallucinogen with toxic potential.

But Jackson's work at Los Alamos National Laboratory may find another use for it: helping dispose of nuclear waste.

Jackson found the weed absorbs dangerous metals, including radioactive plutonium. A protein-like material binds the metals to the plant's cells.

The process concentrates the plutonium and Jackson believes that could reduce the enormous storage problem facing the Department of Energy.

More than 3.9 million cubic yards of radioactive waste await permanent disposal, Department of Energy spokesman Fred Lash said. DOE says it would take $200 billion and 30 years to clean up the nation's defense nuclear weapons complex, 17 sites in 13 states.

THE GOLDEN AGE OF PAINTING

By Georgia Todd Temple

Sarah Campbell Blaffer Foundation

The works of Dutch, Flemish and German painters during the 16th and 17th centuries grace the walls of the Museum of the Southwest in "A Golden Age of Painting" exhibit.

"The entire history of modern art can be traced from the two trends that we see developed in the art of the Dutch school," said Gary Hood,museum curator.

Of these two styles, Hood describes one as "a trend toward linear regularity as we see in the vertical and horizontal lines of action in the painting by Frans van Mieris the Elder" and the other as "a trend toward the dominance of color and action particularly through the use of diagonal lines that we see in 'The Lion Hunt,' from the school of Rubens."

"Art historians have been able to trace the history of even non-objective works and abstract works that we've seen in the 20th century to those paintings that were done in the 1500 and 1600's in Europe."

The exhibit, which closes Sept. 13, is sponsored by the Sarah Campbell Blaffer Foundation, Houston.

"The Sarah Campbell Blaffer Foundation is an extraordinary organization benefiting museums, galleries and art centers in this state," Hood said.

"They have totally supported this exhibition from providing educational materials to identifying and explaining the paintings to sponsoring the installation as well as the shipping expenses for the museum.

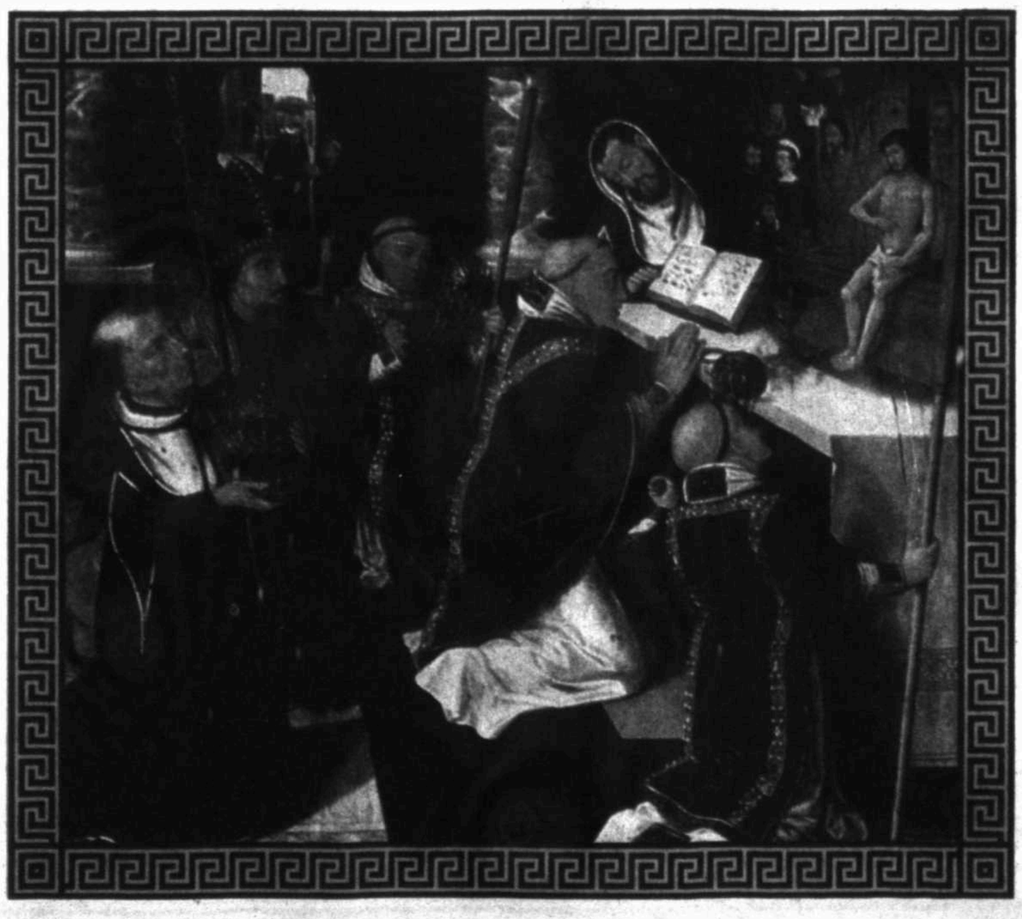

"They do this for all the museums in Texas whenever they can. Without their support it would be impossible to have an exhibition of this kind. Normally paintings of this quality can only be seen in museums in much larger cities because of the high costs of insurance and shipping involved in developing an exhibition of this sort."

GOLDEN: Oil painting was discovered in era

(From 1G)

Since at least the turn of the century, art historians have identified this creative period in Dutch painting as, Hood said, "an extraordinary period in the development of painting technique as well as themes and subjects."

The paintings were created during what is commonly called the Baroque Period, which followed the rebirth in the 1600s of an interest in painting and sculpture known as the Renaissance. During the Renaissance, religion and religious leaders were popular topics. Prior to the Renaissance, art went through a period known as the Gothic, where figures were represented in stiff terms.

"The bodies were elongated; there was no character in the faces; the clothing was not delineated, that is you couldn't tell what kind of fabric the person was wearing," Hood said.

"It was simply a way of depicting 'Here's a picture of a person' as opposed to the kind of painting that we see in the Renaissance and in the later periods where the artist is interested in depicting the character of the person as well as the kind of clothing a person wore, where the person was and what that person was doing as realistically as possible."

"During the 16th century The Netherlands was embroiled in a series of political and religious upheavals that led in the 17th century to the country's division into a Protestant Dutch in the north and the Catholic Netherlands in the south," said a brochure from the SCB Foundation.

"Northern artists could no longer rely on the traditional patronage of the Catholic Church and so, for the first time in the history of Western art, turned to the marketplace for new clientele."

Thus, beginning with the Baroque Period, the theme of religion was down played and a greater interest developed in the depiction of such themes as landscape and portraits of not the priests or popes, but of the common man, Hood said.

Many of the emerging themes during the Baroque period can be identified in several of the paintings shown in the exhibit. For example, Hood cited the painting by Heironymus Bosch, where the viewer "can see the interest in not only the themes of religion, but also the developing of character in the facial features of the subject of the common man. We identify in this painting at least five figures other than that of Christ and each of them have a very distinctive face and a great deal of character representation in the features."

"The Lion Hunt," by the studio of Rubens, contains several themes popular during this period, including landscapes and animals, Hood said.

"We see the obvious theme of animals which was also becoming a new dominant theme," Hood said.

"Prior to the Baroque, there were, for the most part, no paintings of animals and particularly of animals in action poses."

Another trend that is "outstanding" in the paintings of the Baroque is the theme of action, Hood said, adding, "Where we have figures not in traditional seated poses looking straight at the viewer, but where we see people in action."

The Baroque Period became known for its "lines of action," Hood said. "And these lines are invariably diagonals. So we see as we draw through the horses, through the men, through the lances or spears, all these are diagonal lines as opposed to the kinds of lines that we see in the painting by Frans van Mieris the Elder.

"In this painting, which was done in the old tradition, the figures are more or less straight up and down creating a very peaceful kind of look to the scene," Hood said of the Mieris the Elder painting.

"Commonly in the painting of the Baroque when we have scenes of interior as well as the exterior as we did in the Rubens, we see the landscape in the background. In the Mieris, we can see it through the window of the interior. In addition we see the interest of the artist in actually depicting woven material as we see in the tapestry in the left foreground, in the satin of the female figure and the velvet garment worn by the figure in the center."

Although much of what artists in the north knew they learned from the southern or Italian painters, northern painters are credited with having invented a technique whose importance to art is difficult to estimate — oil painting.

"It was invented in the north in the year 1400," Hood said. "What it allowed painters to do is be able to manipulate. After they laid the paint on the canvas, they were then able to manipulate the colors by applying other colors and mixing them on the surface rather than having to mix them first on a palette and lay the colors on top of each other. So they were able to create a great deal more realism than had been seen in painting prior to 1400."

Guild hosts Peter Hurford

Staff report

ODESSA — Organist Peter Hurford performs here at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 15 at First Presbyterian Church, 1401 North Sam Houston.

Presented by the West Texas Chapter, American Guild of Organists, the recital is sponsored in part by the Odessa Cultural Council and the Texas Commission on the Arts.

Hurford

Hurford studied at the Royal College of Music before going to Cambridge University where he took degrees in music and law.

While master of music at St. Albans Cathedral, from which he retired in 1978 after 21 years of service, he founded the International Organ Festival. This festival has, in its 28 years, done much to restore the organ to the mainstream of music-making and through its competitions has launched many now famous artists.

Hurford's recital career spans 36 years. He plays regularly in America, Canada, Australia, Eastern and Western Europe, Japan and the Far East. Known particularly for his interpretation of Bach, his 60 records include the complete Bach organ works on the decca label, recently reissued on 17 compact discs.

Volume Three of the original series was awarded "Best Instrumental Recording" by The Gramophone in 1979, still the only occasion that this distinction has been won by an organist.

His Bach recordings for the BBC occupied 34 weekly broadcast programs in 1980 and were repeated two years later. In 1990, he completed a new series of eight broadcast programs to celebrate his 60th year.

He is an Honorary Member of the Royal Academy of Music, an Honorary Fellow both of the Royal College of Music and of the Royal School of Church Music, and holds an honorary doctorate from Baldwin-Wallace College, home of the Riemenschneider Bach Institute.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: After the events of the past few months, you are delighted to take things easy for a while. A period of greater financial security begins in November. Your loved ones' needs remain a top priority as the winter holidays approach. New business opportunities surface early in 1993. Focus on career advancement in March. Forming a limited partnership in May could open important doors. By summer, you feel ready to make a permanent commitment.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actresses Jane Curtin and Swoosie Kurtz, comedian JoAnne Worley, baseball player Vince DiMaggio.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Activities outside the home hold special allure now. You want to meet as many people as possible. Invite a friendly newcomer to lunch later in the week.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Try to make this a quiet, restful day and be extra attentive to your mate. Romance has its ups and downs. Steer clear of people who like to cause trouble. Avoid arguments with in-laws.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance has you guessing. Sometimes all it takes to clear the air is an intelligent discussion. Be honest if unsure what to do next about a community matter.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Rising tension over weekend chores or a health concern could lead to petty squabbles. Curb your temper or romance could hit the skids. Keep the lines of communication open tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): In an effort to compensate for yesterday's unsettling developments, you may be tempted to throw caution to the winds where a career or relationship is concerned. Don't! Uphold your ideals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An engagement may be announced today. Say the right things. You feel let down by a friend who did not keep a promise. Stop dwelling on the past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your faith in someone is not unfounded. Ignore other people's attempts to interfere in a personal decision. Sharing funny stories and quips with your loved ones puts everyone in a good mood.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Overlook the petty annoyances that may arise early today. Enjoy the comforts of home with your loved ones. A casual conversation could take a more serious turn this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop hiding your light under a bushel! Push yourself forward even if you feel shy. The results will be well worth the momentary embarrassment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): After a morning of complications, friends brighten your afternoon or evening. Let others decide on tonight's entertainment. Mutual aims can be advanced if you cooperate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day to catch up on your rest or reading. Key associates are too involved with their own activities to be interested in yours. Go with the flow. Postpone a romantic interlude.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Turning on the charm will work wonders with strangers and relatives alike. The spotlight is on a longtime partnership. Make marriage plans if sure of your feelings.

Iceland surprised the bridge world by winning the 1992 World Bridge Olympiad in relatively easy fashion. This hand is a good example why.

Four hearts was played at all eight tables in the semifinals of the Open and Women's team championships. The auction above is typical of a standard sequence. At most of the tables West selected a red-suit lead, after which declarer had no problem coming to 10 tricks.

In the Women's event, Nancy Passell of the U.S. started a club. Declarer won in hand and led the jack of hearts. Passell rose with the king of hearts to lead another club, and scored a club ruff to defeat the contract.

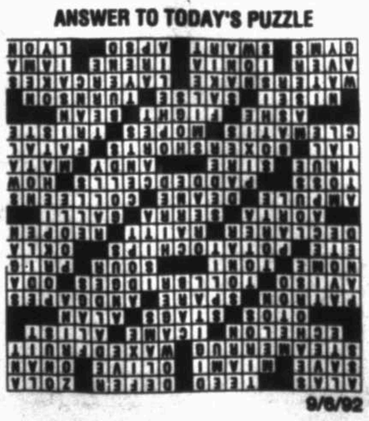

Jon Baldursson of Iceland also received a club lead, but he foresaw the possibility of a club ruff. He won the first trick in dummy and immediately started on spades, leading the jack. Now declarer was a tempo ahead. There was no way to prevent South from discarding a club from dummy on the third round of spades, and the table could then prevent West from scoring a club ruff. Declarer lost only two trumps and a spade.

Incidentally, the fact that a country with one of the smallest bridge populations in the world could win a major world team championship bodes well for the future of the game. Our congratulations to the Icelanders.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Artist to host show

'Light, Land and Sky,' an exhibition of paintings and drawings by Midland artist Travis Beckham, will begin the fall season at Gallery 1114.

The public is invited to the opening from 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday at 1114 N. Big Spring St. The exhibit will remain through Oct. 22.

The art in this show deals with the West Texas landscape.

"There are a few hills here, but most of the work is about that straight horizon and the importance of the sky and light," Beckham said.

In much of the art the depicted space is played against shaped canvas or paper.

Beckham is a native to the area who has exhibited locally and regionally. He is a founding member of gallery 1114 and has been president since 1989.

Gallery 1114 is a cooperative center for modern and contemporary art. New gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday through Sunday.

■ 'Golf art' show slated

ODESSA — "Out of the Ordinary," an exhibition of Golf Art and Other Works by artist Paul Milosevich, is on display at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin through Sept. 26.

Milosevich's love for art and golf began early, and when he first started drawing, it was pictures of golfers, particularly Ben Hogan. "Out of the Ordinary" is on display during the 1992 Ben Hogan Permian Basin Open.

Milosevich has lived and painted in Colorado, California, West Texas and New Mexico. He has traveled and painted in Europe, especially in his ancestral land, Yugoslavia.

A native of Trinidad, Colo., Milosevich received his master's degree in art from Long Beach State College. He taught art at the college level for 10 years, first as chairman of the art department at Odessa College, and later as a faculty member at Texas Tech University.

In 1975, he resigned his teaching position to devote his time and energies to being a full-time artist. Influenced by Monet, Henri and Wyeth among others, he believes an artist needs to "paint simply and paint the obvious, not the impossible."

Admission is free at the Art Institute, which is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

■ Dance company set

ODESSA - Odessa College is inviting dance enthusiasts who would like to help establish a dance company at OC to sign up for a non-credit community dance company class.

The class will include modern dance, tap, jazz and ballet, and will meet from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Saturday beginning Sept. 12 and concluding Dec. 12.

Cost of the class is $45. Those signing up must have a basic knowledge of dance styles. Students may attend one free class before enrolling and may sign up after Sept. 12.

For more information, call OC's Continuing Education Department, 1-335-6580.

■ Center to host artist

The Midland Palette Club Art Center, 907 Wadley Ave., will have as its guest artist and demonstrator Midlander Betty Sue Rose at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Rose

All interested parties are invited to attend.

Ms. Rose has studied under Cowboy Artist of America Robert Pummill, William Moyers, Gary Carter, Joe Beeler, as well as Grant Speed, Fritz White, Pat Hapenstal and Mel Lawson.

She is teaching both western painting and sculpting in the Midland Pallete Club Art Center.

■ Network to air movie

"Grave Secrets: The Legacy of Hilltop Drive" is being aired Sept. 13 on CBS.

Formerly known as "Black Hope Horror," the movie is "a true ghost story" based on the experiences of Shag and Jean Williams. Their housing development was built on a Civil War-time gravesite called Black Hope, the center of which lies directly under an old oak tree on the Williams' property.

The book was written by the Williams couple and John Bruce Showmaker. The movie stars Patty Duke, David Selby and David Soul.

The showing is a repeat broadcast.

■ Cunningham performs

Native Midlander Nancy Cunningham performed recently with the Country Western band "Auburn Sunrise" at the National Beef Distributors dinner and dance hosted by the Texas Beef Council this August at the Stadium Club of Texas Stadium, Irving.

Cunningham

Miss Cunningham has been performing with this band this year. She also performed at the West Texas Opry recently on the Texas Tech University campus and will perform there again in November.

The 22-year-old is the daughter of Midlanders Mike and Jackie Cunningham. She is a 1988 graduate of Lee High School.

■ 'The Taffetas' to open

Midland Community Theatre presents a musical journey through the 1950s when "The Taffetas" opens Friday.

The show is scheduled to run weekends through Sept. 26. Tickets are $8 and $10. For reservations call the MCT box office, 682-4111.

Co-produced by Shell Oil Company Foundation, the fifth membership production of MCT's 1992 season was conceived by Rick Lewis and originally presented in 1988 at the Cherry Lane Theatre, New York City.

"The Taffetas" is not only the name of the show, it is also the name of the single group featured in the show. The play takes place in a television studio where the four sisters who comprise the group are guests on the "Spotlight on Music" program. Their close harmonies and wholesome banter between musical numbers are reminiscent of the Andrews Sisters and the Lennon Sisters.

The singing sisters, known as The Taffetas, are being played by Dana Ritter, Pam Crawford, Patsy Allen and Patty Loftis. G. Thomas Harlow is the show's announcer.

■ Symphony hosts Monk

Metropolitan Opera star Allan Monk will be featured at the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale's 30th Anniversary Gala at 7 p.m. Thursday.

The gala, which is sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Oliver F. Blank, will be at Odessa Country Club.

Monk is noted for his interpretations of a variety of roles in both standard and contemporary repertoire.

His professional career began in 1966 with the San Francisco Opera. He joined the Metropolitan Opera in 1976 and continues to perform with almost every major opera company in North America in such roles as Wozzeck and Rigoletto.

For more information call the symphony office, 563-0921.

It Has Helped Us Build Repeat Business!

"The Extra! Card program has helped us in several areas! It has increased the number of smaller sales, and because of the discount it has also increased our average sales figure and has built a great amount of good will. It is very important to us...it has helped us build repeat business. We're sold on the program...it works for us and our customers."
