Senate passes budget with 25 percent shaved from Bush's proposed tax cuts

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a stinging setback for the young Bush administration, the Senate approved a budget Friday that sharply reduces the president's $1.6 trillion, 10-year tax cut.

The vote was 65-35 in favor of a blueprint that leaves room for a tax cut of roughly $1.2 trillion. The Senate acted after the administration and Senate GOP leadership gave up on efforts to find the votes needed to preserve the full tax cut the president made the heart of his economic program.

President Bush said the smaller package still represents "meaningful, real tax relief" and he is pleased with the vote.

"The fact that both houses of Congress have committed to finding significant relief is good for the American people and good for the economy," Bush said at an awards presentation in the White House's East Room. "I applaud today's action and congratulate the Republicans and Democrats who helped make it happen."

But Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle had a dif-

Priest draws applications for magnets

■ MISD holds lottery drawing; Father Tom Kelley pulls 280 names from area "B", the applications from attendance zones around Washington, Pease.

By Danielle Belton
Staff Writer

The parents of about 500 children won't have to worry about whether their child will be attending Midland's two new magnet schools.

At Friday morning's magnet school lottery drawing held by the Midland Independent School District, 280 applications were pulled out of a ticket raffle wheel by Our Lady of San Juan priest, Father Tom Kelley.

"This clearly is one of the positive aspects in our school district to help our children," said Father Kelley, who noted this especially affected his parishioners who are predominantly Hispanic.

For racial parity, Midland was divided on a map into three areas labeled A, B and C. From those three areas, applications were then submitted. All of the applications drawn Friday were from the "B" area, which is the where the current attendance zones of the new magnet schools at Washington Elementary and Pease Elementary are located. Area "A" is most of the northern part of Midland while area "C" is made up of the western part bordered by A Street and Golf Course Road.

The applications were pulled out and numbered before a group that included plaintiff interveners, parents and MISD administrators and the number present fluctuated between 15 and 20 people throughout the hour-long process. The interveners present said they found it to have been conducted fairly.

A Midland Police officer spent Friday night in the hospital after being injured earlier in the day while on duty.

Officer Paula Bynum suffered a bruised liver after being kicked while trying to make an arrest. At 12:20 p.m. Friday, Bynum and a fellow officer responded to a domestic disturbance call at 4715 West Wadley Ave.

They found Randell Tryon, 19, at the scene. Officers ran a background check and found that Tryon had a warrant on a charge of failure to render aid after an accident, according to Tina Jauz, the city's public information officer.

Oxy Permian to boost activity in Basin

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

The largest producer in the Permian Basin said Friday it plans to increase spending and activity in the area, but has no plans to bring its Houston jobs to Midland.

Speaking to the Executive Oil Conference on Friday, Pat Oenbring, president and general manager of Oxy Permian, said the company planned to increase Permian Basin production 1-2 percent per year by: aggressively expanding CO2 projects, continuing to consolidate and beginning an exploration program in the Permian Basin. Enhanced oil recovery from CO2 projects now accounts for 50 percent of company production.

But when asked if the company intended to bring any jobs to Midland, he responded: "That's not in the cards. We have no plan to bring Houston jobs to Midland."

Oenbring noted the Permian Basin still had an estimated 10 billion barrels of oil and 12 trillion cubic feet of natural gas remaining to be produced and that would keep Oxy Permian in the Basin for years to come as it capitalized upon its strengths of reservoir management and adding value through CO2 operations.

Describing the Permian Basin as an area of 75,000 square miles and 59 counties, Oenbring said the old oil

Webb: Airport could be key to economic development effort

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Dan Houston of AngeloEconomics stated the airport is Midland's "crown jewel" and a key, if not the key, toward the city's future economic development. City Council candidate Norma Webb is ready to fly with that.

Ms. Webb, one of three Midlanders running for District 3 (central Midland), is a member of the Texas Aerospace Commission, and thus she knows firsthand what opportunities aviation can bring to a community. Being a Midland resident of 32 years, she wants to see Midland take advantage of it.

"I have known the importance of the airport for years," said Ms. Webb, who is also a member of the Midland Airport Board and that board's economic development committee. "It seems it (the airport's importance) is catching on."

Ms. Webb has stated the aerospace and aviation industry has many opportunities Midland can fit into — from pilot training to manufacturing and from distribution of parts to the building and painting of planes.

"Some of these things I have learned about are fairly new, but I have learned there is a network and we can tap into that," Ms. Webb said.

One reason she thinks her emergence in the District 3 race is important is Midland's inability so far to take advantage of its "crown jewel".

"I could be more influential as a member of the council," said Ms. Webb, whose husband, James, served on the council in the mid-1990s.

Why the Airport?

"With that airport, Midland is competitive with cities all over the country," said Dan Houston, of AngeloEconomics out of Austin.

Why Norma Webb?

"There hasn't been someone there who could be a liaison (between the city council and aviation industry)," Ms. Webb said. "Midland has failed to consider some of the potential from some of those opportunities."

District 3 Boundaries

District 3 is located in central Midland. The boundaries for its voters include Big Spring Street to the east and Wadley Avenue to the North. From there, the boundary line continues at the intersection of Big Spring Street and Front Street moves west before turning north at Garfield Street; west on Illinois; north on Midkiff Road; west on Golf Course Road; north on Midland Drive to the intersection with Wadley Avenue.

Friends of the Library to hold its annual meeting Sunday

By Luis Garcia
Staff Writer

The Friends of the Library will hold its annual meeting at 2 p.m. Sunday in the meeting room of the Midland County Library, located on the second floor.

"It's open to the public," said Bill Robinson, president of the group. "We'll introduce the new county librarian."

Denise Johnson, the new county library director, will speak on the "Importance of Failure," and the lessons that can be gleaned from failure, along with using humor to live and work better.

Also, members will review their projects for the upcoming year.

There will be a major change to the way the FOL collects donations for the library.

Until recently, the lion's share of the donations came from selling donated books at the annual book sale in October. "We've been doing it so long, it's a Midland tradition," Robinson said.

But that is about to change.

Robinson said the group will stop planning for large book sales, and instead will sell books year round.

The group had a hard time finding a place to keep the 75,000 book that were sold at the yearly event. "We were gypsies, we would look for places to keep the stacks of books," Robinson said.

Five years ago, the FOL bought a storage building off Andrews Highway, near Midland Memorial Hospital. The building, tucked away in the 2300 block of Michigan Avenue and called "the book nook," will be the main location of the group.

The original plan was to store books in the building, to be sold at the October book sale. However, "after we got the building, we decided to start selling books in it," Robinson said.

During the last book sale in October, the walls of the book nook were painted and the floors were replaced. After the renovations were completed, the FOL started using the building to sell books. For the past six months, volunteers have collected, organized, shelved and sold thousands of books.

With all the donations, the FOL has acquired an eclectic selection of reading material. Donated fiction and nonfiction, mystery and history books, bestsellers and unknown books are all neatly organized on the donated shelves.

One of the largest selections is the children and educational book section.

"There is a lot of home schooling that happens in Midland," said Shirley Gist, who volunteers at the book shop.

"We have an education section, where the parents can find books for their children."

A hidden gem in the middle of the store is the extensive collection of the 33 RPM vinyl records, some still new, which are sold for 50 cents each.

Over a year's time, the sales add up; the group raises $25,000 a year for the library.

For the volunteers, the Friends of the Library provides a unique opportunity for public service.

"I've been working with friends for about 30 years," said Mignon Pierson, a volunteer at the book nook. "Couldn't live without it," she added.

"The people who volunteer here are interested in serving their community," Robinson said, "and selling books is how they want to help."

The FOL receives donations and sells books from 9 a.m. to noon on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

WEBB: Candidate believes airport is obvious choice to concentrate on

(From 1A)

"There hasn't been someone there who could be a liaison. Midland has failed to consider some of the potential from some of those opportunities."

Whether it is joining aviation and aerospace alliances, whose purpose is in economic development, or becoming more active in the recruitment of aviation-related companies, Ms. Webb believes Midland can do more and bring in needed jobs. She states:

■ The seemingly never-ending amount of space at the airport makes it perfect for the manufacturing of parts and private planes.

"Most aircraft manufacturing in the United States takes place in Kansas," Ms. Webb said. "There is no reason it should not be in Midland."

■ Midland should put an emphasis on pilot training. Ms. Webb has worked with Midland College to develop a flight school that could train pilots for commercial airlines.

"This would allow for more takeoffs and landings, and we will be able to get that 24-hour tower," Ms. Webb said.

■ Climate makes Midland an ideal choice for painting planes.

■ Providing technical training for organizations like the United Space Alliance would allow Midland to become a more complete aviation and space-related entity.

■ Internationally, there are options Midland can take advantage of.

"There are other countries that we don't think about as having major aviation companies, especially in Australia, Brazil and Mexico," Ms. Webb said. "These companies want to establish ties in the Unites States. We should learn who they are and actively seek them. It is a matter of knowing and being part of that selection process."

It all goes back to Midland's crown jewel — the airport.

"I see the entire area as an economic area," Ms. Webb said. "There is lots of space available and we are at a time when there are lots of opportunities we can pursue."

Those solutions also would help with economic diversity, not only in the short term. Ms. Webb states the growth in a number of the aforementioned areas would lead to more growth.

Experts also are pointing at the airport as the central location of the La Entrada and Port to Plains corridors, which inevitably make the airport ideal for a warehousing and shipping mecca.

The Midland Assessment and Action Plan (MAAP) backed up what the airport means to the community, noting Midland International Airport is an "essential asset in the city's quest for economic diversification."

Again, the airport and economic diversification are intertwined, not only because of jobs, but due to the advantage Midland International gives Midland over other cities in West Texas.

That is a reason the decline of enplanements — the number of passengers boarding commercial aircraft — was emphasized as much as it was.

"With that airport, Midland is competitive with cities all over the country," Houston said. "Airport connections make Midland competitive, far beyond the rest of West Texas. Should those connections and enplanements decline much further, then you are back to competing with West Texas communities.

"As West Texas is getting quieter, Midland needs to be competing on a much bigger stage and that airport makes it possible to do that."

Ms. Webb agrees, "That goes hand in hand with how many new people we get in here. If we can incite or revitalize programs, those numbers will go up. The airport is such an obvious choice to concentrate on in Midland."

Ms. Webb says her platform goes beyond the airport. She says the development of downtown is extremely crucial.

"I think the buildings we have available are a real plus, and we need to have a survey done to know what buildings we have to market," Ms. Webb said.

BUDGET: GOP hopes to increase cut in negotiations

(From 1A)

ferent perspective at a news conference: "We have said from the beginning that if he would work with us we could reach bipartisan compromise. He chose not to do that and he got beat."

GOP officials said they would attempt to increase the tax cut in negotiations with the House, which has already approved a budget along the lines that Bush sought.

"I would emphasize, this is one step among many," Vice President Dick Cheney told reporters moments after the vote. He made no mention of the $1.6 trillion cut he had tried to salvage in days of negotiations, but said the Senate's action would lead to "a significant reduction in taxes for the American people as well as the approval of important spending programs going forward."

The vote highlighted the difficulty of maneuvering controversial legislation through the 50-50 Senate without attempting a bipartisan compromise. Democrats said Bush's tax cut would shortchange Medicare, health care and other programs, and argued the cuts themselves were too generous to the wealthy.

Asked if the vote were a setback for the president, Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa nodded affirmatively, adding, "It's one of the realities of a 50-50 Senate."

Weeks ago, Bush won the support of one Democrat, Sen. Zell Miller of Georgia, for the full tax cut. But GOP Sen. Lincoln Chafee of Rhode Island sided with the Democrats, and a second Republican, Sen. James Jeffords of Vermont, said he wanted more than $150 billion for education support for the disadvantaged before he would agree to back a tax cut of $1.6 trillion.

Fitful negotiations involving Cheney, Budget Director Mitchell Daniels and other senior administration officials failed to yield an agreement. After a brief stab at trying to fashion a compromise with one or two Democrats, the White House and Republican leaders decided to go ahead with the vote.

A total of 50 Republicans and 15 Democrats supported the proposal that passed, while all 35 no votes were cast by Democrats.

Bush was in the Oval Office while the vote unfolded, having traveled to 22 states in an attempt to mold public opinion behind the $1.6 trillion cut. The president spoke during the day with Lott and Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee.

Bush was "upbeat about the fact that all the movement has been in the direction of the tax bill that we campaigned on," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said earlier Friday. He said Bush continues to believe that $1.6 trillion is the right number but also "understands the reality of where we are."

In an address to newspaper editors Thursday, said his budget was "in line with the values of the American people" and he sought to shake off the rebuke delivered by the Senate. "The budget process is a long and winding one. No one vote is decisive."

The House already has passed a budget with Bush's $1.6 trillion tax cut, and a House-Senate conference committee could agree to the House version. But the Senate action on the budget, a non-binding guide to future tax and spending legislation, has helped mobilize Democrats and their few Republican allies who contend that the Bush tax cut is too large.

Sen. John Breaux, D-La., who has joined moderate Republicans in proposing a $1.25 trillion compromise, said the White House and GOP leaders weren't ready yet to negotiate.

"This is an early round," White House budget director Mitch Daniels said. With Democrats endorsing amendments offering tax cuts of more than $1 trillion, "what I see is steady progress in the president's direction."

Strong prices help new independents but challenges lurk

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Strong energy prices are giving a boost to those working to build a new independent oil and gas company.

The good news, said Brad Fischer, president and chief executive officer of CMS Oil & Gas, at the Executive Oil Conference Friday, is prices should remain strong and, in fact, "I think we are entering a very bullish era for oil and gas."

Not only will prices remain strong, said Fischer, but he predicted a spike in crude prices similar to what was seen by California electric utilities and natural gas prices at the end of last year. Not only that, he said, but there would be a crude oil shortage at some point this decade. The current economic downturn may slow the increase in demand, he said, but the shortage will nevertheless occur.

Demand, he pointed out, is increasing by about 2 million barrels a day each year, while excess capacity is about 5 million barrels a day.

"With demand increasing about 2 million barrels a day, it won't take long to burn through that spare capacity," he said.

That good news is tempered by new challenges facing the industry today, Fischer told those in attendance.

Energy producers are already coping with rising prices for drilling rigs, treating costs, pipe and personnel and will be challenged to control costs, he said.

"But the biggest challenge is human resources and how to restructure our companies to accommodate fewer people."

The largest group of petroleum engineers, geologists and geophysicists and other professionals is aged 40 to 55, he noted, and few young people have joined the industry.

"We won't get much relief from the universities," he said, noting that enrollment in engineering and geology courses has fallen sharply since the 1970s.

The personnel problem will be no easy fix, he said, explaining that a stable, healthy energy industry with rising wages may attract new employees, but they can take several years to become truly productive, "so short-term, new employees aren't the solution."

Rising prices and increased competition for acreage, and ways to access financing are also challenges, he said.

CMS Oil & Gas, which had a successful initial public offering last year, arrived in Midland in October 1998 and has seen success with its Spraberry play and long lateral horizontal drilling in its Devonian and Pennsylvanian plays.

The company, part of the CMS Energy utility in Michigan, came to the Permian Basin partly because of the ideas of some of the employees, who had previous experience in the Basin, he said.

So what does it take to make a successful independent? he asked.

"It takes a thorough knowledge of your business. Everyone in this room is an expert, and it takes confidence in your own beliefs."

It also takes good people and good ideas, finding a niche and making it work for the company.

It takes money, he said, and "it takes a lot of hard work."

BOOST: Houston executive says there's more money than opportunity in Basin

producing area continues to get older. He said Basin production is now about 1 million barrels per day, or 15 percent of total U.S. production, and has declined at the rate of 5 percent per year over the past 25 years. "That also reflects the decline rate of Oxy Permian," he said.

Noting the Basin has reserves of 790 million barrels of oil equivalent, of which 60 percent is liquid and 40 percent oil, Oenbring said aggressive drilling is helping replace reserves and keeping the decline in reserves rather flat, even though production is on the decline.

He said the Permian Basin now has 195 rigs or 20 percent of the active rigs in the U.S. drilling in the Basin. "We also have 1,700 geologists working in the Permian Basin to find drillable prospects." Oenbring said Oxy Permian had 18 rigs running in the Basin and would drill 400 wells this year.

As a result of high oil and gas prices, the Houston executive said there is now more money than opportunity in the Basin, and some of the old boom mentality is creeping back in. "Most opportunities," he said, "are technology driven." He said one of the key issues in the mature Permian Basin was land and fragmentation that make it difficult to build a land position.

Other issues facing the Permian Basin are: increasing regulatory and environmental costs, electric deregulation, a shortage of people skills and continuing consolidation.

DRAW: Lottery wasn't held for areas where under 280 applied

(From 1A)

"I thought it was a fair process and it was an open process," said plaintiff intervener Alma Marshall.

Ms. Marshall said she hoped "both sides of Big Spring" could come together for the magnet school process and set aside old grudges for the sake of better education for Midland students.

"(I hope we didn't) spend all this money and take all this time just for people to still hold onto 50-year-old attitudes," she said.

Other interveners at the lottery were looking forward to what they hoped would be successful magnets that eventually would help create more magnet schools. MISD has the option that if these two succeed to create two more.

"In order to make the magnets successful we have to have people who are interested in participating in the magnet program," said intervener Robbyne Hocker-Fuller. "The children are the most important people in those schools."

Ms. Hocker-Fuller said she would like to see a future performing arts magnet in addition to the new math/science and technology magnets being developed now.

Although there was no opposition as to how the drawing was conducted at that time, there were some questions raised by MISD board of trustees member James Fuller, who was concerned about some last minute boundary changes that affected the number of applications from areas "A" and "B."

"The lottery process, based on what I observed today, went well," Fuller said. "I'm concerned about the areas that had to be changed in order to accommodate the applications in those areas."

On Thursday, Area "B" had 438 applications, while "A" had 191 and "C" had 234. Feeling that a portion of area "B" that was past Garfield Street should have be part of area "A", MISD officials adjusted the map. The change gave several of the "B" area applications that came from the area bordered by Garfield, Golf Course Road, "A" Street and much of the land north of Loop 250 to the "A" area.

Now the numbers show area "B" has 399 applications, area "A" 231 and area "C" remained the same, at 234. These changes were made after plaintiff intervener Dr. Viola Coleman and U.S. Department of Justice attorney Javier Guzman consulted with MISD.

MISD director of magnet schools Patricia Maurer said the change was needed because most of the children from the section of the area in question would more than likely be white because that particular section had a higher white population.

But even with the added applications, area "A" applications were not drawn for Friday's lottery. To conduct the actual drawing, both areas "A" and "C" needed at least 280 applications. Because they were both under 280, Ms. Maurer is suggesting to MISD that those students automatically be added into the magnet school enrollment.

According to Ms. Maurer the district needed at least 840 students — 280 from each area — to apply for the schools. After the application process has ended, there should be about 420 students for each school.

Fuller said he also was bothered by the much lower number of applications from the "A" and "C" areas and said it maybe indicative of a larger problem.

"There was not the kind of aggressive willingness of parents wanting to send their children to the magnet schools," Fuller said of the "A" and "C" areas. Fuller said he could understand why some parents wanted to keep their children in their neighborhood schools, but pointed out how keeping children confined to their neighborhoods can be a "double-edged sword."

"Hopefully its not to keep them from interfacing with other children," Fuller said. "But the fact that we had that number of applicants for that particular program is encouraging. It shows that there is a significant population who want quality programming (and) who want to see kids involved in an integrated, culturally diverse society.

"That to me is most important."

Parents whose children have been accepted in the schools should receive a notice in the mail during the next few weeks. Ms. Maurer said they will try to get the letters mailed out on Monday.

Because the desired number of applications was not reached for areas "A" and "C", there will be another application drive to fill the remaining 49 spaces in area "A" and the other 46 spaces in area "C." After Friday's lottery, parents of children enrolled in non-MISD schools or who are home-schooled will also have a chance to apply.

Students then will be admitted on a "first come, first serve" basis.

Applications will be accepted at the Carver Center on 1300 East Wall Street.

HURT: Officer remains in hospital with bruised liver

(From 1A)

When officers attempted to arrest Tryon, a confrontation ensued, but they were eventually able to restrain him, Ms. Jauz said. "But when officer Bynum attempted to put the suspect in the police car, she fell down and when she tried to get back up, the suspect kicked her in the ribs."

"Tryon kicked her hard, and officer Bynum is spending the night at the hospital," said Lt. Jim Sevey of the Police Department.

Other officers were at the scene and were able to restrain Tryon, who remained in Midland County Jail Friday night.

Tryon is being held on charges of possession of marijuana, resisting arrest and aggravated assault against a peace officer, a second class felony, Ms. Jauz said.

The event is an indication of the dangers peace officers face daily, especially when it comes to disturbance calls, Sevey said.

"We answer all types of disturbance calls several times a day," he said.

Even though it is a daily occurrence for the officers, the risk of injury or death always looms.

"Disturbances are dangerous to the officers because people are emotionally involved," Sevey added. "When we get a disturbance call, it means that people are upset."

The fact the police arrive often only aggravates those involved in the disturbance.

"Some see the police and they think, 'you guys are butting into my business,' or they get angry because they're going to get arrested," Sevey said.

"We the police show up, the disturbance will get resolved, and people get angry if it doesn't go their way.

"It makes it ripe for confrontation."

Oilfield accident kills 2 Midlanders

From Staff Reports

Two Midland men were killed Friday afternoon in an oilfield accident that occurred about 10 miles northwest of Peyote off of Highway 2355.

The two men were identified as Norman Perea Pallanes and Gilberto Urias.

According to a written statement released by the Ward County Sheriff's Office, which conducted the investigation at the scene, the two men had been on top of a storage tank using a cutting torch. The tank then exploded, knocking both Pallanes and Urias to the ground.

Justice of the Peace Pasqual Olibas has ordered an autopsy and both bodies have been sent to Lubbock.

California's biggest utility company files for bankruptcy

By David Kravets
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Pushed over the edge by the state's disastrous attempt at deregulation, California's biggest utility filed for bankruptcy protection Friday in a move that will not turn out the lights but could mean political and financial turmoil for years to come.

Pacific Gas & Electric sought Chapter 11 protection from its creditors, saying efforts by Gov. Gray Davis and state officials to ease the crisis had gone nowhere.

"The regulatory and political processes have failed us, and now we are turning to the court," said Robert D. Glynn Jr., chairman of corporate parent PG&E Corp. "We expect the court will provide the venue needed to reach a solution."

The 13 million people served by the utility probably will be among the least affected, since bankruptcy proceedings allow companies to continue operating while they try to solve their financial problems under the supervision of a federal judge.

But lenders, bondholders and wholesale power suppliers may have to write off billions of dollars in losses, and the move could affect more than 20,000 utility employees across Central and Northern California.

The company's financial reputation also could be damaged for years, making it more difficult to buy power and raise money to upgrade transmission lines and plants.

Davis, who has been sharply criticized by fellow Democrats as well as Republicans for his handling of the crisis, did not immediately comment on the bankruptcy filing. A spokesman said it was a surprise.

A day earlier, Davis proposed giving California's cash-strapped utilities a share of a record rate increase approved last week. He has also tried to buy utilities' transmission lines, which would provide much-needed billions.

After listening to Davis' speech Thursday night, PG&E executives said they concluded there was little hope of getting relief from the state. PG&E cited "unreimbursed energy costs, which are now increasing by more than $300 million per month," bad state regulatory decisions and the "unmistakable fact that negotiations with Gov. Gray Davis and his representatives are going nowhere."

AP Photo
An unidentified man walks past the Pacific Gas and Electric Company headquarters in San Francisco, Friday. Pacific Gas and Electric, California's largest utility, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection Friday despite months of efforts by state officials to bail out the cash-starved company.

Southern California Edison, the state's second-largest utility, said it has no immediate plans to seek bankruptcy protection.

The two utilities have been pinched for months by skyrocketing wholesale power prices and the state's 1996 deregulation law, which bars them from passing those costs on to customers. The two utilities say they have lost more than $13 billion since June and are having trouble buying power and natural gas because of their credit is so poor.

The two utilities had warned for months that they were sliding toward bankruptcy. And the crisis led to rolling blackouts over four days in January and March as electricity supplies dwindled to nearly nothing.

The state has stepped in and spent $4.7 billion since January to buy power for the utilities.

Those efforts could not stave off the biggest rate increase in California history: The state Public Utilities Commission last week approved rate hikes of up to 46 percent for customers of SoCal Edison and Pacific Gas & Electric.

Consumer activists criticized the bankruptcy filing, complaining that the utility's parent company has been making huge profits during the crisis through other subsidiaries.

"The parent company has $30 billion, much of which it has siphoned out of the utility coffers. It would have bailed the utility out," said Harvey Rosenfield of the Foundation for Taxpayer and Consumer Rights.

State Sen. Debra Bowen, chairwoman of the Senate Energy Committee, said consumers should see no change in the short run in prices and service.

But "we've lost control over doing any kind of transaction that solves the problem ourselves," Bowen said. "We now need the approval of a bankruptcy judge and creditor committees."

"I think it's a farce. Our energy (bills) will definitely go up now, but I guess you have to roll with the punches," said Charles Davis, a retired truck driver. "It's up to the people we elected to do something about this."

The crisis is blamed on a number of factors, including the high wholesale prices, a tight supply worsened by scarce hydroelectric power in the Northwest and maintenance of aging California power plants.

Earlier this week, state power grid managers warned that California will see more than a month of rolling blackouts for as many as 5 million people at a time if residents use as much power this summer as last.

Pacific Gas & Electric's preliminary bankruptcy filing lists its top creditor as Bank of New York, which was owed $2.2 billion as of September.

The utility had run up an $8.9 billion deficit buying electricity as of Feb. 28. A month later, it had $2.6 billion in cash and outstanding bills of $4.4 billion.

PG&E Corp. stock fell more than 37 percent when trading resumed after being halted for more than two hours. The stock closed at $7.20, down $4.18, on the New York Stock Exchange. The 52-week high was $32.50. The stock of SoCal Edison parent Edison International was down $4.39, or 35 percent, to $8.25.

Detroit shoplifting suspect dies after being subdued

DETROIT (AP) — A suspected shoplifter died Friday after being subdued by security guards outside a drug store, police said.

The woman was detained by guards outside the store as she was trying to leave the Rite Aid parking lot in a minivan. Guards told police the woman attacked a guard and stopped breathing after she was subdued.

Police said they are investigating and an autopsy will be done to determine the cause of death.

The case marks the third time in less than a year that a shoplifter died after a confrontation with security guards in the Detroit area.

Government says another summer of surging gas prices possible

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Drivers could face a new round of surging prices at the gas pump this summer, the government says, citing tight supplies through the year's heaviest driving season. Last year price spikes reached $2 a gallon.

The Energy Department's forecast also anticipates continued high natural gas prices that are likely to fuel steeper electricity costs across much of the country. Many power plants run on natural gas.

The government's seasonal forecast predicted a high probability that motorists this summer will pay on average more for gasoline than the $1.53 cents a gallon they paid last summer.

How much more will depend on supply and distribution problems, the department said. Average gasoline prices nationwide this week were about $1.44 a gallon, according to the government survey.

With current inventories tight, the gasoline markets will be "vulnerable to sharp price runups if supply disruptions or bottlenecks occur," said the report, issued Friday by the Energy Information Administration.

It said that by the end of May, the beginning of the summer driving season, gasoline inventories are expected to be about 200 million barrels, or 9 million barrels below what they were at the same time last summer.

Even with refineries churning at top capacity, the low stocks "are expected to remain low throughout the driving season" making the market vulnerable to unexpected problems such as refinery or pipeline disruptions.

Gasoline price flare-ups are likely to be regional and not nationwide, the report said. One irritant is low stocks of additives used to make cleaner "reformulated" gasoline, which accounts for about a third of the gasoline sold and is required in areas with serious smog problems.

A Federal Trade Commission report on last summer's gasoline price spikes in the Midwest, where prices soared for a time well past $2 a gallon, recently warned that prices could surge again this summer. One reason is that smaller gasoline inventories give little margin to deal with unexpected refinery problems or pipeline disruptions.

The FTC investigation, which focused on the Midwest market, found no evidence of industry collusion, although it said some companies took advantage of last summer's tight supplies to maximize profits.

The industry may be better prepared for problems in the Midwest this summer, and a major pipeline that shut down last year has resumed full operation, the Energy Department report said. Additionally, the Environmental Protection Agency has eased its ethanol standard making it easier to blend cleaner reformulated gas in the region.

At the same time, though, the report noted that Midwest gasoline supplies are lower now than they were a year ago and a major Illinois refinery that operated last summer has since shut down.

Ethanol is produced from corn and is widely used as a gasoline additive in the Midwest. Elsewhere the additive is usually MTBE, derived from natural gas. MTBE production in January fell to the lowest level since 1995 and has not rebounded adequately because of the high demand for natural gas as a fuel.

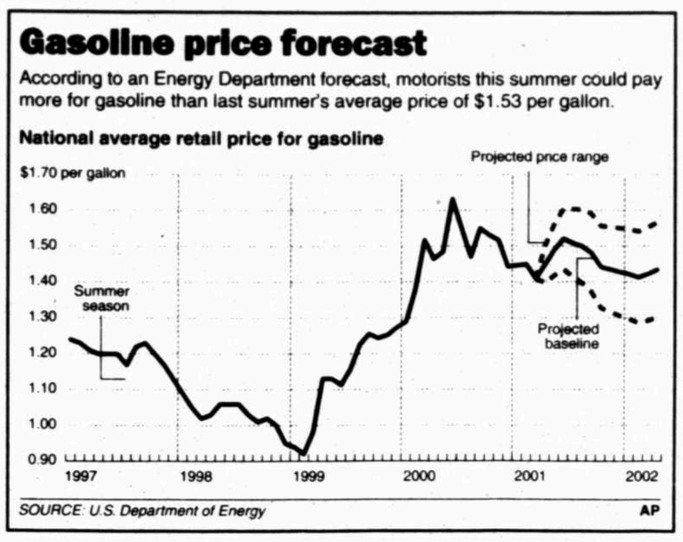

The energy outlook report said the economic slowdown had been expected to ease the squeeze on crude oil supplies. However, it said crude oil inventories remain tight because of the recent decision by the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries to cut production by 1 million barrels a day, beginning in April.

Although the winter heating season is over, natural gas prices probably won't ease but will remain at more than twice what they were in 1999 at about $5 per thousand cubic feet, the government analysts said.

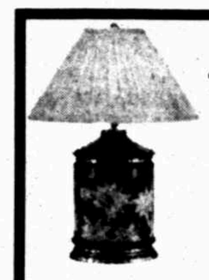

They also warned that natural gas prices, which spiked to as much as $10 per thousand cubic feet this past winter, could rebound sharply again this fall, depending on the severity of next winter.

A particular worry is the low level of natural gas stocks in underground storage. If natural gas demand is strong for electricity generation this summer, stocks could fall further. Low inventories and an early cold spell last fall were blamed in part for the unexpectedly sharp price spike late last year.

Belgrade wants Milosevic trial to help shed 'mafioso' legacy

By William J. Kole
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Yugoslavia needs to prosecute Slobodan Milosevic at home to come to terms with his legacy of lawlessness, the foreign minister said Friday, so the government is in no hurry to send the former president to the U.N. war crimes tribunal.

The government "inherited a kind of semi-mafioso state" from Milosevic and has every right to try him for the alleged corruption that has thrust the nation into a deep economic funk, Goran Svilanovic said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"There is a very high expectation abroad that we come to grips with our war crimes past," Svilanovic said. But satisfying Western demands for a speedy extradition "is not something we're really focused on at the moment," he said.

The tribunal, based in The Hague, Netherlands, indicted Milosevic for crimes against humanity in 1999 for his brutal crackdown on ethnic Albanians in Kosovo.

In one of dozens of gruesome accounts, the indictment describes how Serb police allegedly hunted down villagers who had fled into a thick forest, then ordered the women and children to leave. "Once the men and boys were assembled, the Serb police opened fire on the group. After several minutes of gunfire, the police piled hay on the men and boys and set fire to it to burn the bodies," it says.

Goran Svilanovic, Yugoslav foreign minister gestures during an interview with The Associated Press, in Belgrade, Yugloslavia Friday. The government "inherited a kind of semi-mafioso state" from former President Slobodan Milosevic and has every right to try him for the alleged corruption that has thrust the nation into a deep economic funk, Svilanovic said.

Svilanovic, who plans to meet with Secretary of State Colin Powell in neighboring Macedonia when he visits there next week, suggested the Yugoslav government would press anew for the tribunal ultimately to try Milosevic in Belgrade, where the court already has an office, rather than in The Hague.

But Yugoslavia wants to prosecute him first on charges including corruption and abuse of power stemming from 13 years of ruinous rule. And many Serbs distrust the U.N. court, contending it has singled them out in its quest to bring suspects to justice.

An envoy from the tribunal handed Yugoslav authorities an arrest warrant for Milosevic on Friday and said the country's justice minister promised to serve it on the jailed former president.

Tribunal registrar Hans Holthuis said he gave Yugoslav Justice Minister Momcilo Grubac the documents for Milosevic. "I handed over the indictment and the warrant of arrest, and Mr. Grubac promised to have it served on Mr. Milosevic in person," he said.

Holthuis said Grubac in turn gave him a copy of a draft law on cooperation with the tribunal, yet to be debated by parliament, which includes a provision allowing Yugoslavs to be extradited to the U.N. court. Current law prohibits sending any citizen to a foreign court.

But Svilanovic, a former key opposition leader, suggested that Milosevic won't be heading to The Hague anytime soon. He said the Yugoslav government is more concerned with mopping up after Milosevic than with rushing him to trial.

"We need to fight crime and corruption ... and restructure the economy," which is in shambles with soaring inflation and at least 26 percent unemployment. "There is a need to deliver what we promised. The clock is ticking and I'm aware of that."

Milosevic was ousted from power in October after hundreds of thousands of people rioted when he refused to concede elections won by opposition candidate Vojislav Kostunica. The new president rode into office on a pledge to improve everyday life for the 10 million people in Yugoslavia, which encompasses Serbia and much smaller Montenegro.

Although most Serbs blame Milosevic for wrecking the country, nationalist sentiment hasn't disappeared. Svilanovic said he was trying to concentrate on defusing tensions in Serbia's ethnic Albanian-dominated southern province of Kosovo, and on reconciling with Muslims and Croats in the former Yugoslav republics of Bosnia and Croatia.

In Kosovo, "I don't think there's a need to change borders" and give ethnic Albanians outright independence, he said. "But Serbs need to realize they will never have it again."

"I think we have fought our wars to the end, but we still have hatred and divisions," Svilanovic said. "Although nationalist feeling exists, it will never again run this country. ... We need to dig so deep that whoever follows us will have no choice but to continue."

Kashmir separatists reject talks offer

SRINAGAR, India (AP) — Kashmir's main separatist group on Friday rejected India's offer of talks to end the dispute over the Himalayan region, saying it is meaningless unless its leaders are allowed to travel to Pakistan for consultations.

India on Thursday offered to hold peace talks the separatists in an attempt to help end the conflict. India and Pakistan both claim all of Kashmir and have fought two wars over the it since gaining independence from Britain in 1947. It is divided between them by a cease-fire line.

An Islamic insurgency fighting for independence for India-controlled Kashmir has left at least 30,000 dead people since 1989.

The All Party Hurriyat Conference — an umbrella organization of political and religious separatist groups in Kashmir — on Thursday demanded that Pakistan be part of any dialogue.

Then on Friday, Hurriyat leaders said the talks could not take place until pro-independence leaders in India are allowed to travel to Pakistan to discuss recent peace moves with militants and officials there.

"We have told the Indian government that we should be allowed to go to Pakistan so that after talking to the Kashimiri leaders there, we will start dialogues with India," Hurriyat chairman Abdul Gani Bhat said on Friday. "When talks will start, peace will automatically return."

Hurriyat leaders have been waiting for months for India to allow them to travel to Pakistan. The government initially said they could go, but then decided not to give them passports. It has not explained the decision.

India accuses Muslim Pakistan of training and arming Islamic separatists, a charge Islamabad denies. Pakistan says it provides only moral and diplomatic support to the rebels in Kashmir, which is India's only region with a Muslim majority.

India's invitation for talks came four months after Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee ordered a temporary cease-fire against Islamic guerrillas, some of whom want unification with Pakistan.

Almost all the rebel groups have rejected India's unilateral truce — scheduled to last until the end of May — and intensified attacks against government forces and installations in Kashmir.

U.S., China move toward commission, diplomatic resolution

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States and China moved Friday toward a diplomatic resolution of their dispute over a U.S. spy plane and its 24-member crew, focusing on a joint commission under a letter being reviewed by President Bush and Chinese President Jiang Zemin.

With Bush administration optimism rising, Sen. John W. Warner, R-Va., said the formula for a solution was being outlined in the letter. It would give both the Americans and the Chinese an opportunity to air their cases.

The proposal is designed to lead to the release of the 24 American crew members held since Sunday by the Chinese. By all accounts, they are being well-treated, but their 6-day detention has roiled an already touchy U.S. relationship with China.

A photograph of 11 of the crew members, taken during their first meeting with U.S. diplomats last Tuesday, was distributed by the Pentagon to family members "so they could see their loved ones," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said. The photograph showed the 11 sitting at a table, looking forward with little expression.

Without referring directly to the strategy to have the United States and China air their versions of the U.S. surveillance flight, President Bush said "we're making progress" in negotiations.

The president's appraisal reflected a growing expectation that a deal would emerge from a flurry of diplomatic activity. Two U.S. officials, in fact, suggested the crew could be released this weekend.

Warner, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said after a CIA and Pentagon briefing that the two sides were drafting a letter "that will contain exchanges of views" on how the Navy spy plane and a Chinese jet fighter collided over the South China Sea.

The letter, Warner said, was being upgraded from the ambassador and foreign minister level to review "both by our president and the president of China, so it will reflect a common understanding."

He said there would be no U.S. apology in the letter. "I believe the ambassador and others expressed regret for loss of life. That will be embraced in the letter," Warner said.

A senior administration official said the letter would bear the signature of the U.S. ambassador, retired Adm. Joseph Prueher, not Bush, but Bush directed that it be drafted and would approve final language.

Another official cautioned that in negotiations obstacles and hurdles frequently develop.

The likeliest arrangement for a resolution is to have the two sides make their cases about the collision of the U.S. plane and a Chinese fighter jet at a special meeting of a joint maritime commission set up three years ago to enhance safety on the seas, a senior U.S. official told The Associated Press.

In this way, the United States and China could air their positions. China says the plane violated Chinese airspace and sovereignty. The United States denies the allegations.

Earlier Friday, Secretary of State Colin Powell said the United States and China were exchanging "rather precise ideas" for the release of the 21 men and three women.

The crew met Friday with an American general on Hainan island, the second such meeting since the collision and the first since negotiations intensified Thursday. Another was scheduled for Saturday.

"They're housed in officers' quarters and they're being treated well," Bush said. "We know this is a difficult time for their families and I thank them for their patriotism and their patience."

"We're working hard to bring them home through intense negotiations with the Chinese government and we think we're making progress," Bush said.

The United States and China were exchanging "rather precise ideas" for the release of the 21 men and three women, Powell said. "I'm encouraged because there has been movement," he said.

"All of the crew members were in fine shape," he said. "They are in good health. They are in high spirits. Their morale is good."

Bush and Brig. Gen. Neal Sealock, the U.S. defense attache in Beijing, spoke for about 10 minutes after Sealock met with the crew, and the president "was very heartened" to hear the crew was in good condition, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

Asked if the United States had insisted on the crew's release, Powell said: "We are in very intensive discussions and negotiations and exchanging ideas and papers, and there has been movement. But that's as far as I'd like to go right now."

Powell's glowing account of the condition of the crew appeared designed both to assure families and as a gesture to the captors.

Late Friday, the Chinese ambassador, Yang Jiechi, met at the State Department with Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage, who is playing a leading role in the negotiations. Boucher called the meeting "part of our continuing diplomatic exchanges" and said there would be further meetings in Washington and Beijing overnight and over the weekend.

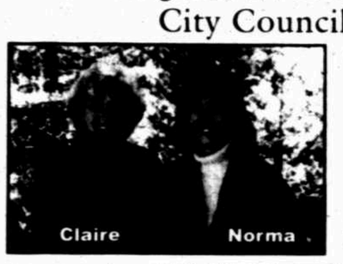

While Powell did not specify what mechanisms were under discussion to free the servicemen and women, several administration sources mentioned the agreement signed by the two countries in 1998 to strengthen military maritime safety.

The agreement provides for investigation of incidents by a commission. China could thereby claim the United States had implicitly conceded wrongdoing with use of the surveillance plane, while the Bush administration could continue to maintain the crew had done nothing illegal.

NATO, police seize control of bank affiliated with Bosnian Croat hard-liners

By Aida Cerkez-Robinson
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina— Masked police backed by NATO peacekeepers Friday seized control of a bank believed used by Bosnian Croat extremists to pursue their goal of an independent mini-state in Croat areas of Bosnia.

Angry Bosnian Croats responded by stoning international officials, beating up employees of international organizations and ransacking a local office of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, international authorities said.

Twenty-one peacekeepers — including Americans — were slightly injured in the melee, NATO spokesman Lt. Lars Anderson said. Other injured peacekeepers were from France, Italy, Spain and Morocco, NATO said.

As tensions mounted Friday, U.S. and other NATO-led peacekeepers bolstered their presence in a show of force in areas with substantial Croat populations.

International authorities ordered the takeover of the Mostar headquarters and several branches of the Hercegovacka Banka because of "repeated concern" over "continued corruption," a statement from chief international administrator Wolfgang Petritsch's office said.

Members of the NATO-led Multinational Special Unit, MSU, are pelted with stones and eggs as they are confronted by a crowd of Bosnian Croats in the Bosnian town of Mostar, some 120 kilometers (80 miles) south of Sarajevo, Friday. Backed by the NATO-led peace force, Muslim-Croat federation and financial police, entered the branches of the "Hercegovacka Banka" Bank, early Friday morning in Mostar and several other locations known to be Bosnian Croat hard-liner's strongholds.

The bank is believed to be the financial base of the Bosnian wing of the Croatian Democratic Union, or HDZ, which announced plans last month to break away from the Muslim-Croat Federation and establish a separate Croat state in southwestern Bosnia.

On Friday, NATO-led peacekeepers, U.N. international police and security forces of the Muslim-Croat Federation raided the bank and named a provisional administration, Petritsch spokesman Chris Bird said.

During the takeover, crowds stoned international officials and several staffers who work for Petritsch, U.N. spokesman Douglas Coffman said in Sarajevo. The OSCE office in Siroki Brijeg also was ransacked, he said.

"By doing this raid, the international community has hit a raw nerve, targeting this institution which allegedly is linked to illegal parallel institutions," Coffman said.

The HDZ denounced the takeover as "armed robbery" and demanded an explanation from international administrators. In Mostar, bank spokesman Milan Sutalo called the action "absolutely illegal because this is a private bank and not a public institution."

"There was no reason for armed people coming to the bank," Sutalo said.

Troops and police also took over branches in the towns of Siroki Brijeg, Grude, Orasje, Tomislavgrad, Posusje and Medjugorje. In Orasje, about 500 Bosnian Croats gathered in front of the Hercegovacka Banka branch to protest the takeover.

Tension was already high in the northern Bosnia town of Orasje because of efforts by hard-liners and war veterans to convince Bosnian Croat soldiers to desert the federation army.

U.S. military helicopters hovered over Orasje and armored personnel carriers patrolled the streets Friday as mediators tried to reduce tensions.

The raids took place one day after Bosnian Croat nationalists moved to take control of federation army barracks in the central Bosnian towns of Busovaca and Vitez.

German peacekeepers increased their presence Friday around another central Bosnian garrison at Kiseljak to prevent moves against the base there.

Bosnia-Herzegovina was divided into a Bosnian Serb ministate and the Muslim-Croat Federation as part of the 1995 Dayton Peace Agreement that ended the 3 1/2-year Bosnian war.

After the war, the HDZ maintained parallel government institutions in southwestern Bosnia over the objections of international administrators. In elections last November, the party lost support among Bosnian Croats nationally but remained deeply entrenched in the Croat heartland.

Last month, the HDZ announced it was pulling out of the federation with the Muslims, claiming the alliance worked against the interest of the Croat people. Petritsch then fired the Bosnian Croat president, Ante Jelavic, and several top HDZ officials for violations of the Dayton accords.

Records show the Hercegovacka Banka was founded in 1997 by several private companies and the Franciscan Order, which controls the religious shrine in Medjugorje, a major source of income from pilgrims and donations by Croats living abroad.

Panel OKs first Protestant parade of Northern Ireland's 'marching season'

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The first disputed Protestant parade in Northern Ireland's tense "marching season" can go ahead with restrictions, an overseeing commission ruled Friday.

Catholics criticized the verdict of the Northern Ireland Parades Commission and vowed to stage a protest when Protestants from the Apprentice Boys of Derry march down Belfast's Ormeau Road on April 16.

Commissioners urged the Catholic side to protest peacefully.

Protestant parades led by another group, the Orange Order, are a bitterly divisive tradition in Northern Ireland. Militant Catholic groups in 1995 began trying to block parades that pass through or near predominantly Catholic areas, including a stretch of houses known as the Lower Ormeau.

The area suffered serious street violence in 1995: once when police prevented the Apprentice Boys from crossing a bridge into the Lower Ormeau during their intended April parade; and again that August, when soldiers sealed Catholics into side streets to permit another Apprentice Boys parade.

Since then, violence has declined as authorities have rarely permitted Protestants to walk that stretch of Ormeau Road, a major artery of south Belfast. The last time a Protestant parade passed Lower Ormeau houses was in July 1998, when residents staged a silent protest on the sidewalk.

On Friday, parades commissioners ruled the Apprentice Boys fraternal group had made sufficient efforts in recent months to negotiate a compromise with the anti-march group, Lower Ormeau Concerned Community.

"This dialogue has been sustained and meaningful, notwithstanding spasmodic breaks. It is regrettable that it has not produced agreement or acquiescence," said the commission, a seven-member panel of Catholics and Protestants.

The commission said bands of accordion, fife and drum accompanying the marchers must play no music while passing the Catholic area. They also ordered the group to prevent any supporters from walking alongside the parade during the disputed stretch.

Lost pilot's comrade says U.S. plane caused collision

By John Leicester
Associated Press

BEIJING — The pilot of a Chinese fighter jet had no chance against the U.S. spy plane that veered suddenly into its path, ramming it and sending the smaller aircraft spiraling out of control over the South China Sea, his partner said on state television Friday.

The account by pilot Zhao Yu mirrored Beijing's stance that the U.S. plane was to blame for the collision between the U.S. Navy EP-3E and the Chinese F-8. China insists the United States apologize fully to resolve the tensions — something Washington has refused saying the U.S. crew did nothing wrong.

Shaking his fist in anger, Zhao, who piloted one of two fighters shadowing the Navy plane, condemned the U.S. crew for Sunday's collision. His fellow pilot Wang Wei is missing and presumed dead, and the 24 Americans are now held on Chinese soil where they made an emergency landing.

"Wang Wei's airplane had no way to evade it. It suddenly collided with him," Zhao said in the interview shown on the national evening news. "The outer propeller on the left wing hit the tail fin of Wang Wei's aircraft. Bam! It was smashed into bits, like little pieces."

U.S. diplomats who met with the crew Friday for only the second visit since the collision said the 21 men and three women were in good spirits and well-treated. A photograph of the Americans was sent to their families by e-mail for reassurance as Washington negotiates their release, diplomats said.

China, which is holding the American crew in Chinese officers' quarters on the tropical island of Hainan, says a full U.S. apology is the only way to resolve the stand-off.

U.S. military officials say it was more likely that Wang's nimble jet bumped the lumbering, propeller-driven American plane. President Bush expressed regret over the Wang's disappearance, but Washington ruled out an apology.

Zhao said he and Wang had been sent the track the American plane Sunday as it conducted surveillance off China's southern coast.

After the U.S. plane bumped Wang's jet, Zhao said he told his partner: '"Your tail's been destroyed. Try to hold your course. Hold your course,"' he recounted. "Wang Wei replied, 'OK.'" Zhao said in a separate interview with the government-run Xinhua News Agency.

Wang lost control of the plane about 30 seconds later and rolled to the right, Zhao said.

"Wang Wei asked permission to bail out. I replied: 'O.K.' After that I lost contact with Wang Wei," Zhao was quoted as saying.

Rescue efforts continued, but rescuers were "worrying whether the pilot could survive" the 6 1/2-foot-high waves and tropical sunshine, Xinhua said.

State media reports began lionizing Wang as a "hero of national defense" — and at the same time, preparing the public for the likelihood he is dead. One state newspaper, the Guangzhou Daily, carried a front-page photo of Wang bordered in black. "The U.S. side must apologize," the headline said.

Friday was Wang's 33rd birthday, state television said.

The pilot's mother and father also were shown on television, with his weeping father calling Wang "the son of the entire nation."

"My son loved his army career. He wanted to be an air force pilot when he was a child," Wang's mother, Wang Yueqin, was quoted as saying. She was shown on television speaking from a hospital bed.

The pilot's wife, Ruan Guoqin, wrote a letter to Bush "appealing for peace and humanity," Xinhua said.

Some U.S. officials, however, have painted him as a risky flier, saying U.S. planes had encountered him in the past.

Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said Wang had flown dangerously close to U.S. planes, once holding up his e-mail address for the American pilot to see.

"The pilot involved is apparently the same pilot who's been observed by our reconnaissance aircraft in the past," said a senior committee member, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind. "It appears to me on this occasion he simply exceeded his grasp."

A Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman defended Wang's actions, saying China was entitled to track and monitor U.S. surveillance flights.

"If there are people constantly harassing you in front of your courtyard and you go out to see what is happening, it's entirely normal," said spokesman Sun Yuxi.

AP Photo

In this photo released by Xinhua, China's official news agency, Zhao Yu, a Chinese fighter pilot who witnessed the collision between a U.S. spy plane and a Chinese jet fighter, speaks during an interview in Beijing Friday. On state television Friday Zhao said that he saw the U.S. aircraft slam into his partner's jet, sending it spinning out of control over the South China Sea.

Power outage hits Manila, beyond

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A major power blackout hit Manila, the sprawling Philippine capital of 9 million people, hours before dawn Saturday.

Local radio carried scattered reports of a fire at a power station in Batangas, south of the capital, that also knocked out electricity to at least some of surrounding Luzon Island.

Police and utility officials could not be immediately reached for comment. The power went off just after 3:30 a.m. Saturday and had not been restarted 90 minutes later.

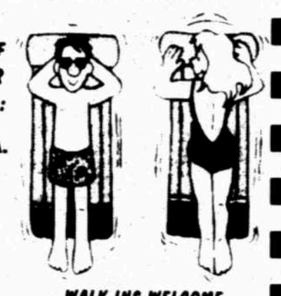

From a tall apartment building, the absence of street and traffic lights left the entire city black. Backup generators and car headlights were responsible for a few sprinklings of light in the city that often parties until late into the night.

Security concerns temporarily close embassies in S. America

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Three U.S. embassies and one consulate office in South America have been temporarily closed to the public because of security concerns, U.S. State Department and local officials said Friday.

The U.S. embassies in Uruguay, Paraguay and Ecuador, and the U.S. consulate in Guayaquil, Ecuador's second-largest city, were closed.

A U.S. State Department official in Washington declined to provide specific reasons for the closures. A decision was to be made over the weekend on whether to reopen the offices Monday.

Guillermo Stirling, Uruguay's interior minister, said the U.S. decision was apparently linked to violence in the Middle East between Palestinians and Israelis, but he did not elaborate. Uruguay is home to a sizable Palestinian community in the eastern city of Chuy.

Stirling said he did not know of any threats against the embassy, nor had Uruguayan authorities detected any "unusual movements" along the borders.

"The embassy authorities asked us for a reinforcement of security and we naturally complied with their request and boosted our police presence," Stirling said.

The U.S. embassy in Quito, Ecuador, was also under increased police guard Friday.

In Argentina, four flights from Buenos Aires to major U.S. cities were delayed for several hours because of a telephone bomb threat late Thursday, federal police said.

Gazprom, NTV talks over future of television network break down

By Anna Dolgov
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Talks about the fate of Russia's only independent nationwide television network crumbled on Friday, as representatives of state-run gas company Gazprom rejected a proposal to ask the Supreme Court to determine the legitimacy of its takeover of NTV.

NTV insists that Gazprom — NTV's largest shareholder — illegally put its loyalists on the network's board, and its journalists refuse to work for the new leadership until its legitimacy is confirmed by a court. It suggested that the parties appeal jointly to Russia's Supreme Court to settle their differences.

But Gazprom representatives demanded that they be allowed to meet with NTV staff outside of court.

NTV and its supporters argue the takeover was orchestrated by the Kremlin to crush the only major network that consistently reports on sensitive issues like alleged human rights abuses and government corruption.

Gazprom, however, contends the takeover was prompted by the station's debts. It says it wants only to protect its investment.

Friday's talks between representatives of Gazprom and NTV unraveled after about an hour amid mutual accusations, dimming hopes for a compromise in the four-day dispute.

"I was really surprised," said Boris Jordan, an American banker of Russian descent designated by Gazprom as NTV's new director. "We were given an ultimatum, either go to court or no talks at all."

Ousted NTV director Yevgeny Kiselyov said the network was prepared to accept whatever the court decided, but that Gazprom responded to a proposal for a court review with "demagogy" and insults.

The meeting came as Western governments have begun to express concern over the fate of media freedom under President Vladimir Putin, who has remained silent about the conflict.

"The situation is such that the president must speak out," former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev told NTV journalists Friday. He said he had a meeting with Putin scheduled for Monday.

But Gorbachev warned in an interview with Interfax news agency that Russia's courts may be too influenced by the government to give an independent ruling.

NTV will go to court independently to challenge the takeover despite Gazprom's refusal to cooperate, Kiselyov said. The new chairman installed by Gazprom, Alfred Kokh, said Gazprom has yet to decide on its course of action.

U.S. media mogul Ted Turner has stepped in, announcing he would buy 30 percent of NTV shares from its founder, Vladimir Gusinsky, a tycoon under house arrest in Spain on fraud charges brought by Russian authorities. Turner issued a statement Friday urging NTV journalists to keep the conflict from escalating while he is working on the deal.

Yevgeny Kiselyov, ousted NTV director, flanked by NTV journalists, gestures while speaking to the media as he leaves the Media-MOST headquarters after talks with Gazprom in Moscow, Friday. Talks between representatives of state-run Gazprom and NTV to try to decide the fate of the leadership of Russia's only nationwide independent television network broke down quickly Friday in a climate of distrust.

Leadership race heats up after Mori announces he will resign

TOKYO (AP) — A feisty former premier and a charismatic innovator prepared to battle for the helm of economically troubled Japan after Prime Minister Yoshiro Mori made a long-awaited announcement Friday that he will step down.

Mori has been under pressure for months to quit over diplomatic blunders and ineffectual leadership widely perceived as having helped push the nation back to the brink of recession.

While he gave a strong hint last month that he would resign, Friday's official statement cleared the way for top contenders within the ruling Liberal Democratic Party to make public pitches for the job.

"I think it is necessary to tackle mounting issues ... under a new administration," Mori told his Cabinet on Friday morning.

Hours later, Japanese media reported that a election for leadership of the ruling party set for this month has set the stage for a face-off between former Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto and reform-minded party veteran Junichiro Koizumi.

The LDP president is almost guaranteed to become prime minister because of the party's domination of Parliament. The election for party president is set for April 24.

The underdog Koizumi jumped into the running first.

"It would be cowardly not to run out of a fear of losing. I have to burn my bridges and run," he said in a televised speech.

Hashimoto, who heads the conservative party's largest faction and reportedly has the backing of two others, was more coy in public.

"It's an honor for a politician to be considered," he said. But Japan's major newspapers said in evening editions that Hashimoto told close allies he would run and an announcement would be made within days.

Hashimoto and Koizumi have been rivals in the past.

In the 1996 party presidential election, Koizumi rose to prominence by mounting the sole challenge to party elder Hashimoto, who eventually won in a landslide and became prime minister.

Hashimoto is considered to be the favorite this time, too, because of his senior position, conservative credentials and broad factional backing.

Koizumi, a former health minister, is popular with the public, but analysts see his chances as slim because he has provoked distrust within the party with his calls to privatize the country's postal service.

Hashimoto's stint as prime minister was initially greeted with anticipation in Japan because of his reputation as a leader who could stand up to Washington in trade talks. But his public support soured after he raised the sales taxes and helped push Japan into a recession.

The leadership contest is widely expected to be decided as they long have been: in closed-door meetings where feuding party factions negotiate their way to a consensus candidate.

Mori was himself elevated to power last April, after former Prime Minister Keizo Obuchi suffered a fatal stroke, through a backroom deal made by a group of LDP string-pullers known as the "gang of five."

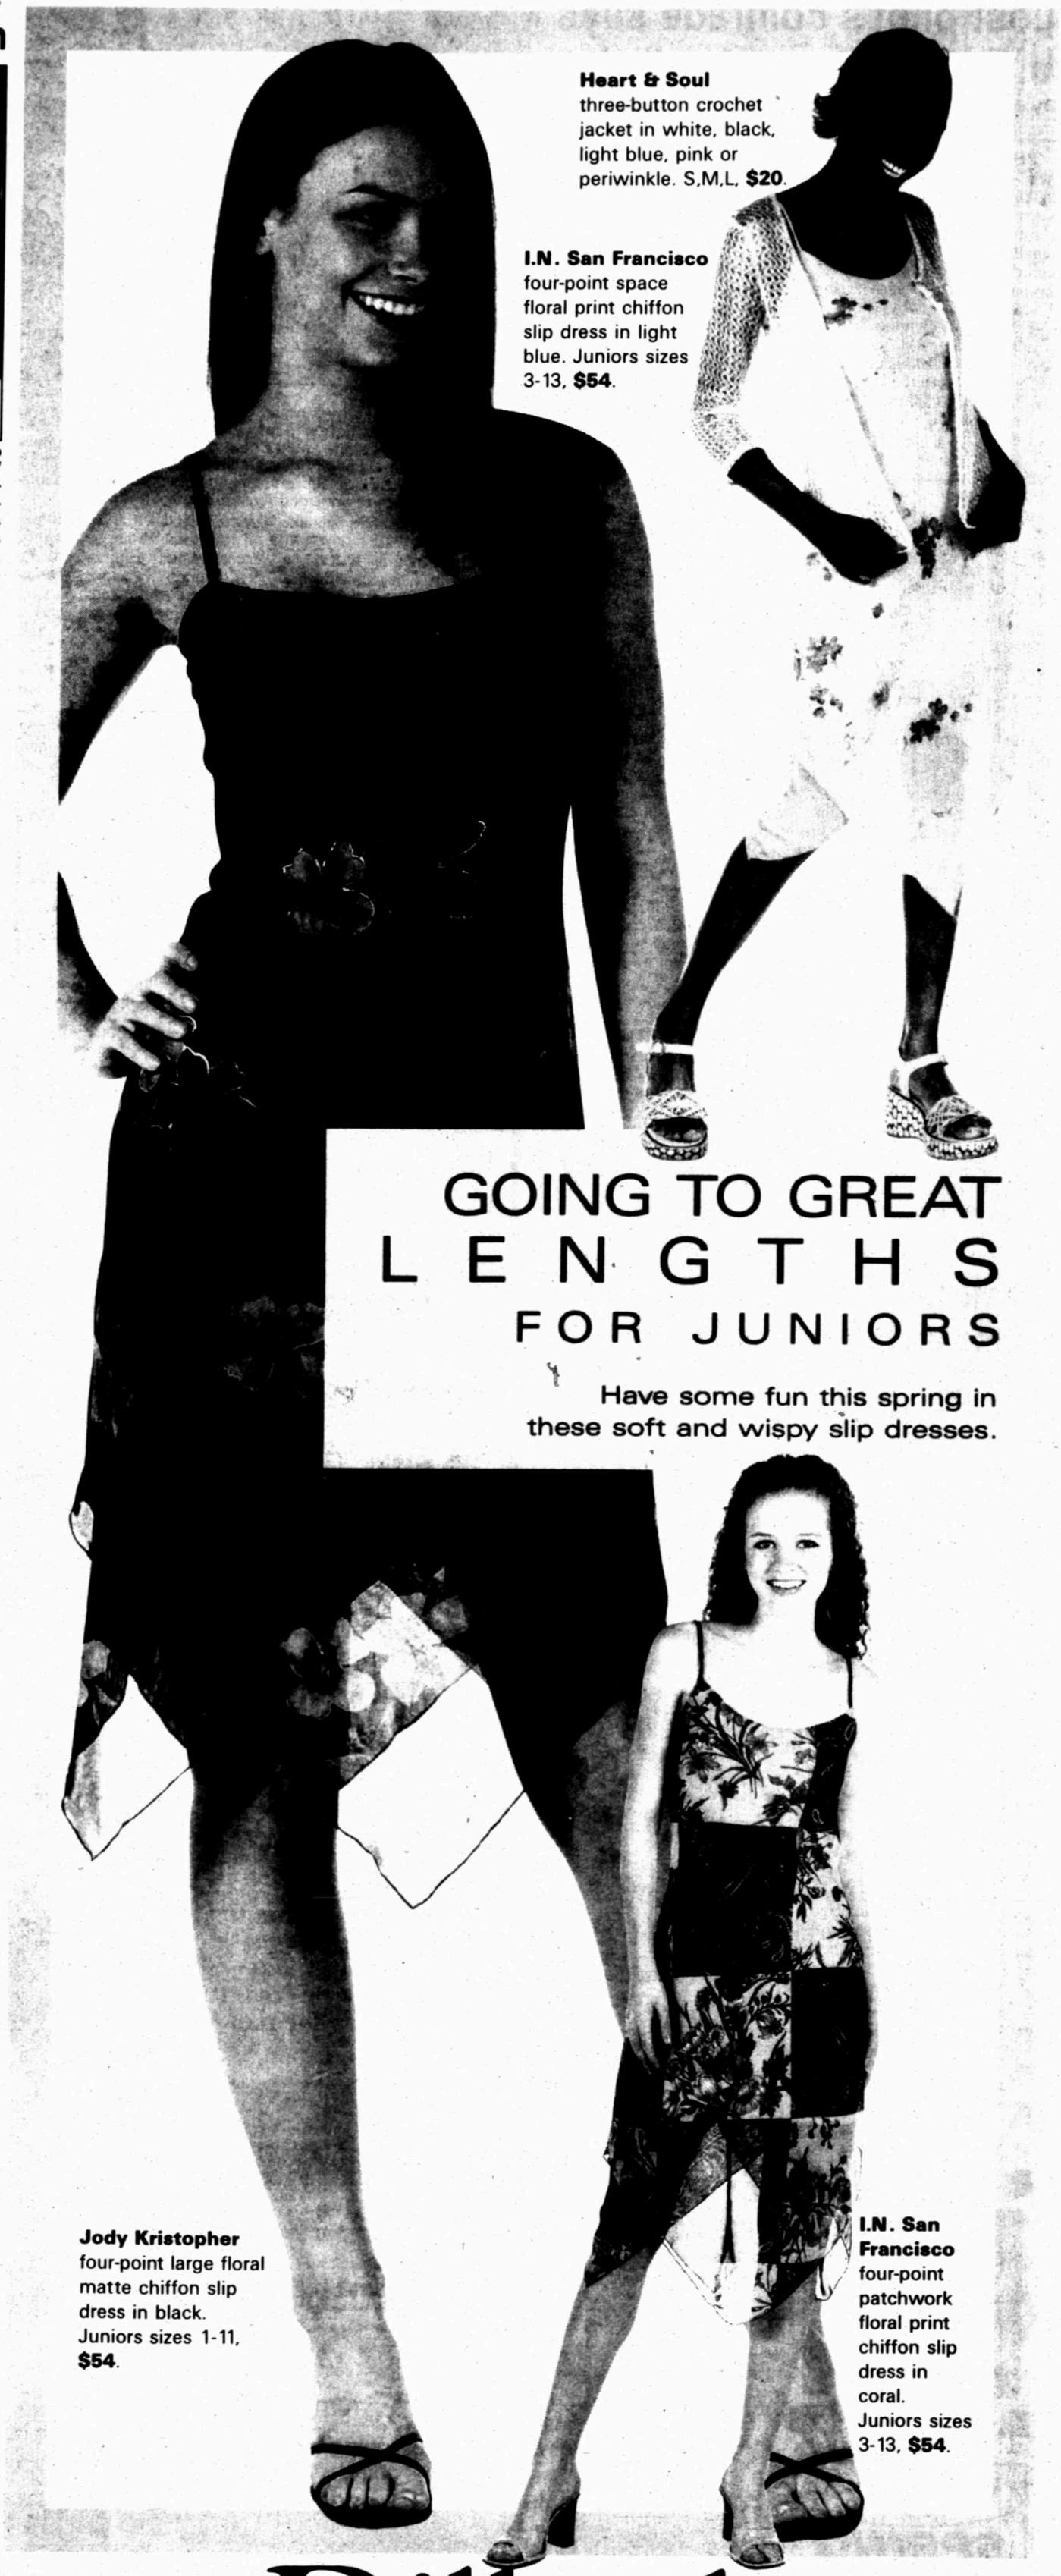

Japan's media called Friday for more openness this time.

"With the election of a new party president as an opportunity the LDP should change its entire character," the Asahi newspaper said in an editorial. "If nothing happens, Japan will disintegrate, and the LDP will be the cause."

Mori has proved to be one of Japan's least popular leaders in decades. He was harshly criticized for continuing a round of golf after being told of the Feb. 9 collision of a U.S. submarine and a fishing vessel that killed nine Japanese.

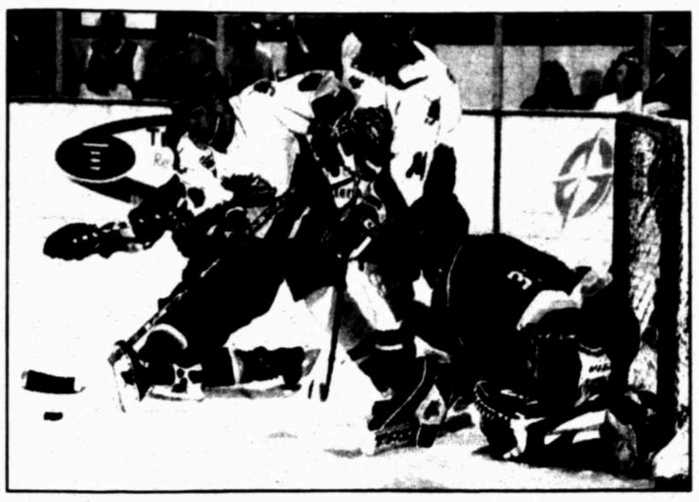

AP Photo
Japanese Economy Minister Taro Aso speaks at a press conference after the Japanese Cabinet approved an emergency economic package in Tokyo Friday. Aso, who is one of the possible candidates to succeed Prime Minister Yoshiro Mori, said tax reforms are crucial for the measures included in the package to be effective.

Jacks close in on series victory

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

ODESSA — The Odessa Jackalopes are about as close to being home free in the first round of the Western Professional Hockey League playoffs as they can possibly be.

The Jacks defeated the El Paso Buzzards, 2-0, at the Ector County Coliseum Friday night and need only one victory in three games to clinch advancement and a date with the rival Lubbock Cotton Kings.

The Cotton Kings ended their first round playoff series with the San Angelo Outlaws Friday night in a 4-0 sweep and now will be twittling thumbs until the Jacks put this series away.

And the way the Jacks played against the Buzzards on Friday, there is little doubt that this series, too, is close to being history.

After 29 goals between these two teams in the first three games of this best-of-seven series, the 2-0 shutout was a breath of fresh air. Still, make no mistake about it, the Jacks dominated by being faster and quicker while getting more quality shots on goal.

In fact, if El Paso goalie Jeff Levy hadn't had a great night in net, this could have been a Jacks' explosion waiting to happen.

MHS, Lee both bring momentum

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Going into the second half of District 4-5A play, the Midland High and Midland Lee baseball teams both actually have momentum, but that's really all they share in common from the first half of district.

Midland High vs. Midland Lee at Zachery Field

When MHS hosts Lee today at 2 p.m. at Zachery Field, it's obvious that the Bulldogs will be the team with the upper hand. Midland High opened district with a wild 17-12 victory over Lee, and at this point shares the district lead with Odessa Permian at 5-1.

The only blot on the district record for the Bulldogs (18-4 overall) was a 3-1 loss at Zachery to last place San Angelo Central two weeks ago. Since then, Midland High has posted big district wins over Abilene High and Permian.

"We hated to lose that one to San Angelo but maybe that woke us up that we had to come play every day," said Midland High coach Barry Russell. "Other than that I'm pretty pleased with how everything's gone."

Lee, on the other hand, is at almost the opposite end of the district spectrum from the Bulldogs. The Rebels began a string of four straight losses to open district with the loss to the Bulldogs, seriously putting themselves well behind the potential playoff pack.

But Lee just might be finding the winning touch in time. The Rebels got their first district win with an emotional 6-5 12 inning victory over Odessa High last Saturday, then on Tuesday beat Central 8-3 to close the first half of district at 2-4, guaranteeing that they wouldn't finish the first half of 4-5A in last place.

Even though sixth place might not look all that good, Lee (13-8 overall) sits only a game out of third place with the second half of district still to play.

"When we first got into this situation I stressed that we had to win out," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez. "We've got to play like we're in the playoffs. It seemed against Odessa High our intensity got up a bit higher because we got behind four times and came back every time."

In the district opener, both teams got behind, but

MHS captures Rebel Classic

Staff Report

Playing in lousy windy conditions Friday, the Midland High Bulldogs won the 2001 Rebel Classic played at Midland Lee High School.

MHS had 11 points for the day, while Midland Lee finished in second place with nine points in the five-team "A" Division.

This was the final tuneup for MHS, Lee, Odessa High and Odessa Permian before the District 4-5A Tournament, which will be played Wednesday and Thursday in San Angelo.

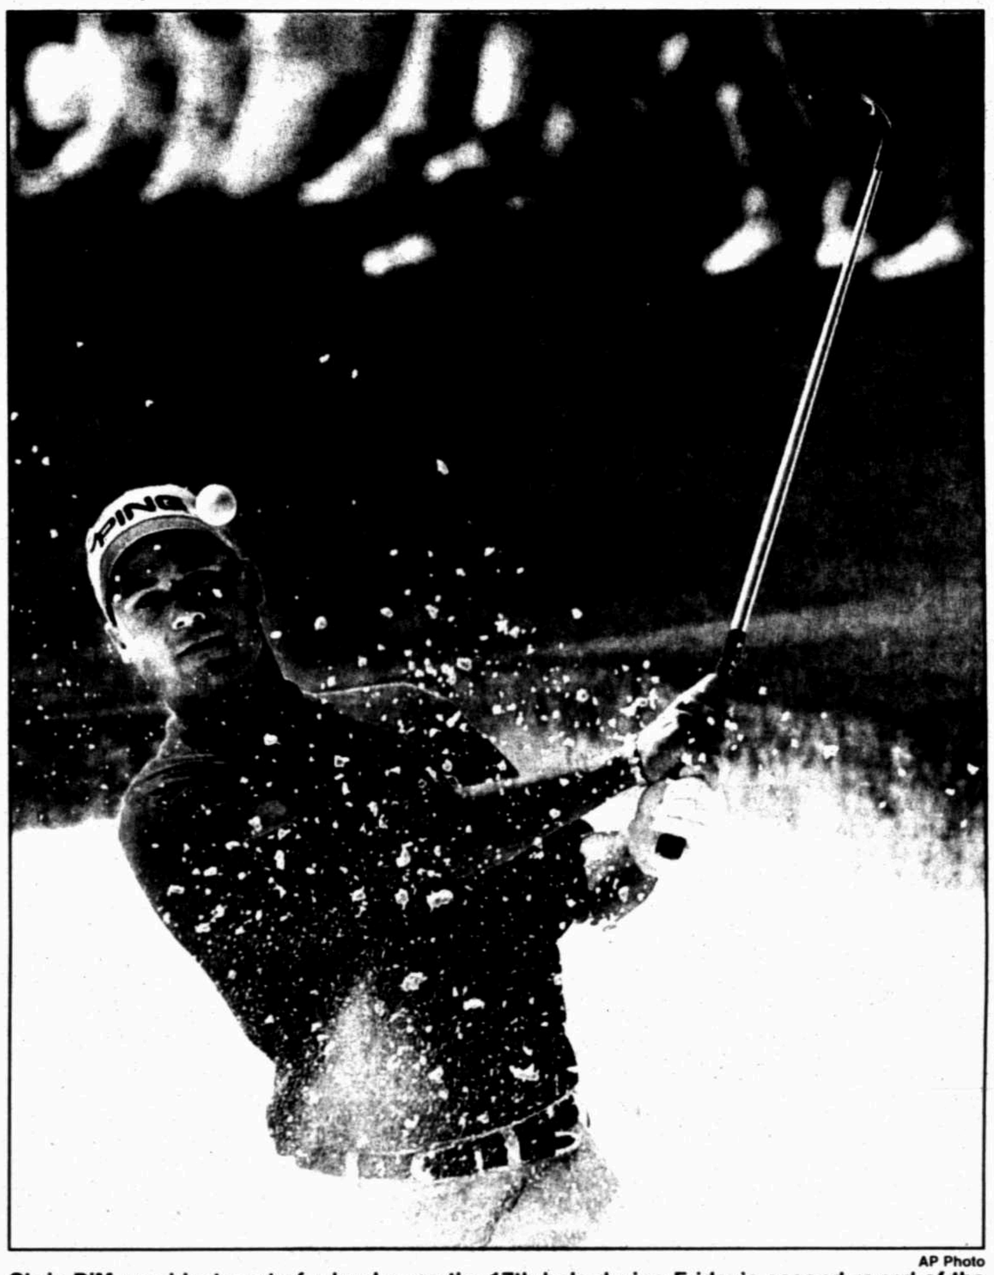

"With the windy conditions, anybody could've won out there," said MHS coach Tom Heiting. "It was a good warmup for district in case the conditions are windy."

Lee coach Steve Buck also said it was a good warmup for his team as they prepare for the tournament. Leading the Rebels charge were boys singles players Marshall Viney and Gabe Corrales —

Remarkable DiMarco

Chris DiMarco blasts out of a bunker on the 17th hole during Friday's second round of the Masters at the Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Ga. DiMarco leads the tournament and heads into the weekend with a two-shot lead over Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson.

1st-timer bars Woods' path to historic win

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Tiger Woods' score midway through the Masters is exactly the same as it was four years ago when he romped through Augusta National and into golf history.

Yet despite a 6-under 66 on Friday that thrust him into position for an unprecedented fourth straight major, Woods was quick to point out a few discrepancies.

"I didn't start off 4-over par," he said, alluding to his first nine holes in 1997.

There were a few other differences, too.

Woods had a three-stroke lead four years ago. Now, he is chasing Chris DiMarco, who carved his own niche in the record books with a 69. That gave him the lowest 36-hole score by a Masters rookie (134) and a two-stroke lead over Woods and Phil Mickelson.

And while Woods said his 70-66 start was easier this time around, the rest of the weekend figures to be anything but that.

"I'm right there in the ball game, and with a great chance on the weekend," he said.

Woods isn't alone.

Mickelson recovered from a disastrous stretch for a 69 and has never looked more poised to win his first major championship.

"I don't think there's ever been a better opportunity for me to break through and win a major as this tournament now," he said.

Right behind was David Duval, showing no signs of rust or a bad right wrist, back for his fourth straight run at a green jacket after a 66 left him only three strokes out of the lead.

"I came in here with every intention of winning the golf tournament, and I still have that," he said. "I'm excited about my prospects."

For all the hype over Woods' quest for his unique version of a Grand Slam — holding the trophies of all four professional majors — this

Norman misses cut after 'ugly' round

By Jim Litke
AP Sports Writer

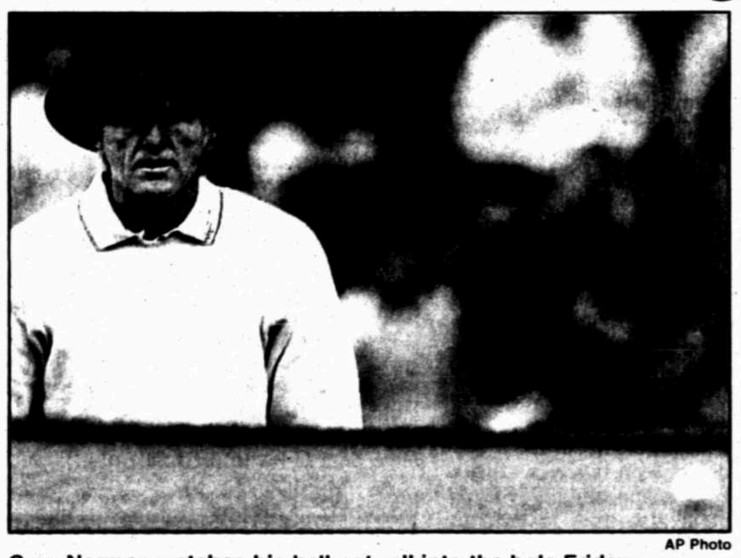

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Somewhere in Florida, Greg Norman is doing a slow burn.

Or maybe a fast one.

With Norman, you never know.

"Ugly," was one of the last words he uttered on his way out the door Friday at Augusta National. If Norman arrived here no longer tortured by his past, he left the place after shooting 82 with lingering concerns about his future.

The only way he gets into the Masters for certain next year is to buy a ticket. And so it's possible the tournament that both exhilarated and terrorized Norman like no other has come up with the cruelest twist of all. Next year, it might simply ignore him.

Greg Norman watches his ball not roll into the hole Friday.

Norman made it into the field this year as a dual qualifier, on the strength of an 11th-place finish at the Masters last year and because of his world ranking at No. 42. But the first route was barred when he missed the cut for the third time in five years. And the way Norman did it — coming unhinged after a bad break at No. 7 — suggests the door might be closing on nearly all of his other avenues as well.

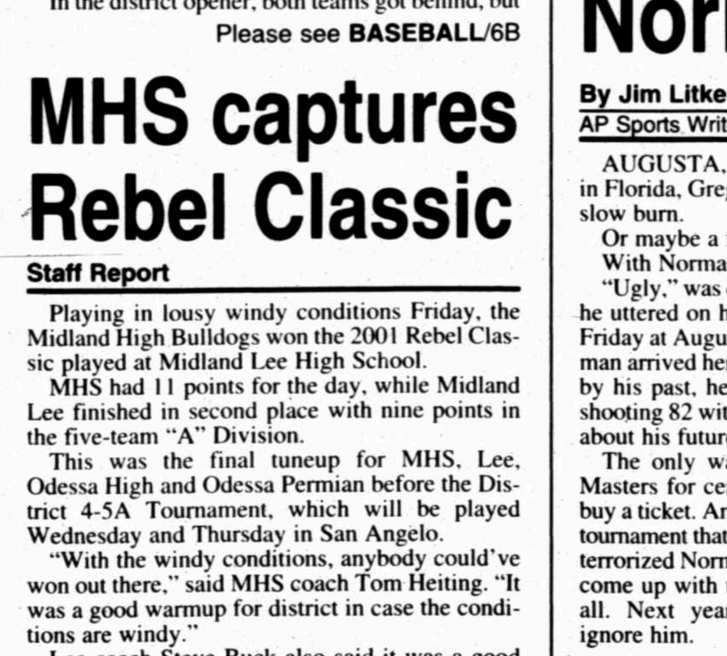

Norman's grip on the rankings and the money list is tenuous at the moment. And he would need to finish near the top of the leaderboard in one the season's three remaining majors, or rely on the kindness of Masters officials for a special, one-time exemption.

"I love this place and all it stands for," Norman said. "That's why it feels as bad as it feels."

This was a round no one saw coming. Getting steamrolled by Jack Nicklaus in 1986 and chipped in on by Larry Mize in a playoff the following year were fading memories. Even the cobwebs had cleared from his horrible collapse five years ago, when Norman squandered a six-stroke lead on the final day to Nick Faldo.

He came here at 46 fit as ever, the Chaps can't turn hits into wins

By Lee Passmore

The Midland College baseball team hit the ball plenty Friday afternoon at Christensen Stadium. But it wasn't enough.

Against an established Odessa College team, the first-year Chaps collected 24 hits in their Western Junior College Athletic Conference doubleheader, but they didn't add up to a single win. Midland College fell to the Wranglers 10-4 in the first game, then saw a rally fall short in the nine-inning second game by a 13-11 count.

Such results aren't completely unexpected since OC is 13-5, in second place in the WJCAC, and 24-14 overall. In their inaugural season, meanwhile, the Chaps are next to last in the conference at 5-13 (23-18 overall).

"Today's games were no different from anything we've seen all year," said MC coach Steve Ramharter. "(The Wranglers) have a whole lot more weapons than we do at this point."

The conditions at Christensen were a good opportunity for both teams to show off their weapons at the plate. With a wind of up to 30 mph blowing out to the power alley in left-center field, big offensive numbers looked attainable.

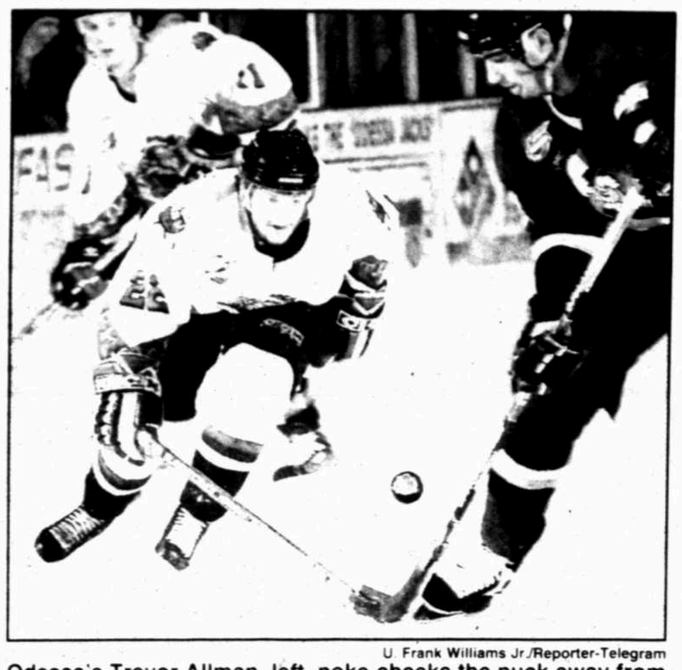

Midland College got off to a 3-0 lead against OC starter Mike Henry in the bottom of the second inning in the first game, as Tyler Ward's two-run single was the big blow.

But in the third and fourth innings, the Wranglers put up back-to-back big frames, scoring four runs in each inning for an 8-3 lead which chased MC starter Jim Henderson. Zach Eubanks hit a two-run homer to put the Wranglers on the board, and Andres Gonzalez gave OC the lead for good with a two-run single.

The Chaps got 10 hits off Henry, who pitched a complete game

Odessa's Trevor Allman, left, poke-checks the puck away from an El Paso player during the Jacks' 2-0 win Friday in Odessa.

HOCKEY: Jacks need 1 more win to move on

(From 1B)

"This is much more indicative of the way I thought this series might play out," said Odessa coach Don McKee. "We played about this well in the first game (a 7-1 Odessa win), but Levy made 10 or 12 big saves to keep us from really exploding.

"When you are sitting on the bench in a game like this, there is a lot of anxiety because there can always be a quick turnover or easy goal. It just never happened, fortunately."

The Jacks had some quality shots at Levy, but he was beaten by two unlikely goals.

Odessa took a 1-0 lead in the first period when Adam Doyle launched a soft, 45-foot shot just inside the blue line that got past Levy, thanks to a good screen by Matt Hoffman in front of the net.

"That's not the hardest shot I've ever made just inside the blue line, but it got in somehow," Doyle said. "Hoffman really was the key because he screened the goalie (Levy) and we got lucky as the puck went in.

"Goalies tell me it's better to kind of throw the puck at the goal instead of really slapping it. The goalies say they don't know where it's coming from if they don't hear it."

That goal came just 1:28 into the game and it proved to be the only shot of the night the Jacks would really need. Mike Sanderson gave Odessa a 2-0 lead only 2:13 into the second period. This was a goal where Sanderson somehow was able to waltz through the crease without being challenged, and he just slipped the puck past Levy. Levy stopped all the hard slams that the Jacks threw at him, but the soft touch was what beat him.

Odessa goalie Grant Sjerven finally has a playoff shutout. Sjerven, who set a franchise record of eight shutouts in regular season play, now has a playoff shutout on his mantel.

Sjerven had given up 11 goals in the last two games after limiting the Buzzards to only one goal in the first game of the series.

"I just wanted to come out with a big game and a solid effort because this was such a pivotal game for us," Sjerven said. "And I really wanted to redeem myself after the last two games."

Sjerven turned in 25 saves, three less than Levy. The Jacks defense, however, didn't allow many quality shots on goal to the Buzzards. Sjerven survived some good shots in the second period, but mostly he didn't have to face the blitzing pressure that the Jacks placed on Levy.

"I had to come up with some pretty tough saves in the second period," Sjerven said, "but for most of the rest of the game, the shots were from outside."

Doyle is ready to head for El Paso and get this series over with.

"I can tell you that it's a lot nicer going to their barn with a 3-1 lead than being at 2-2," Doyle said. "This was a big win for us."

Lakers barely fend off Celtics

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

BOSTON — Horace Grant hit a turnaround jumper at the shot clock buzzer with eight seconds left Friday night as the Los Angeles Lakers recovered after blowing a 26-point lead and beat the Boston Celtics 100-96.

Shaquille O'Neal had 39 points, going 15-for-23 from the line and pulling down 14 rebounds, as the Lakers beat the Celtics for the fourth consecutive time and improved to 3-0 on their road trip.

Brian Shaw had 10 points, 10 rebounds and nine assists, and Rick Fox, another former Celtic, had 19 points, six rebounds and eight assists.

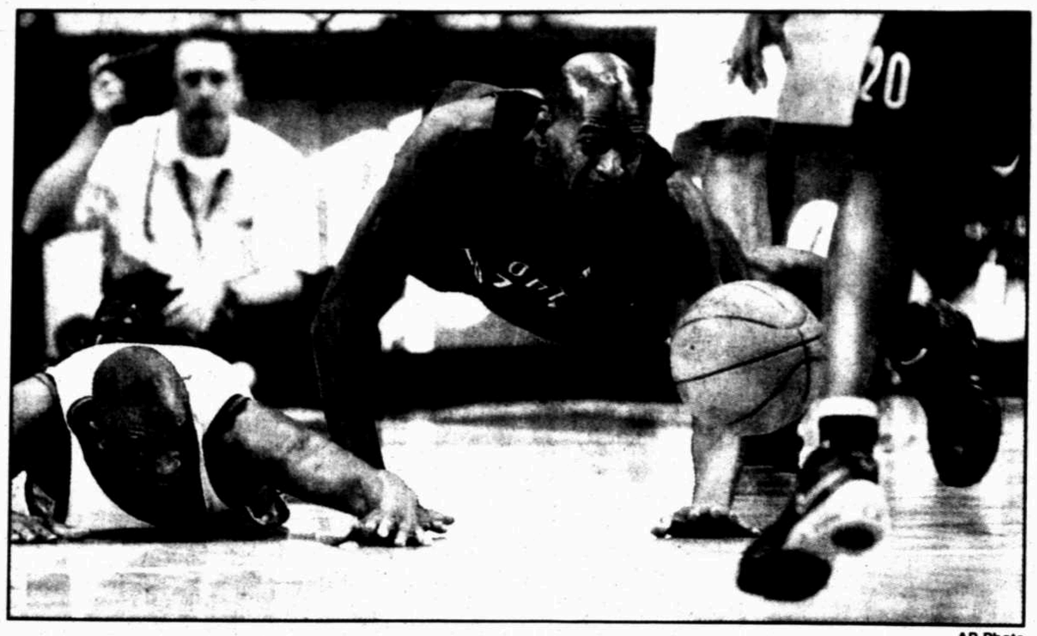

Paul Pierce scored 30 and Antoine Walker had 21 for Boston, which has lost four of its last five games to fall 1 1/2 games behind Indiana in the race for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

76ers 96, Cavaliers 88

PHILADELPHIA — Dikembe Mutombo had a season-high 27 points and 13 rebounds and Eric Snow added 15 points as the Sixers, despite playing without Allen Iverson and Aaron McKie, clinched the Atlantic Division.

Philadelphia hadn't won a division title since 1989-90.

Iverson missed his second consecutive game and Aaron McKie missed his fifth straight, and backup center Matt Geiger left the game at halftime with swelling in his left knee.

Pacers 100, Bulls 93

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 28 points and Jalen Rose added 17 as the Indiana Pacers rallied in the fourth quarter.

The Pacers, who trailed 80-77 after three quarters, regained the lead at 86-85 when Rose hit a 5-footer with 7:10 left. Indiana followed that with an 8-1 spurt, which made it 94-88 with 2:07 to go.

Former Pacer Fred Hoiberg, who finished with 17 points, hit a 3-pointer 1:04 to go to make it 94-91, but the Pacers hit six free throws in the final 28 seconds.

Timberwolves 101, Suns 88

MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Garnett scored 25 points to lead the Minnesota Timberwolves to their third straight victory.

The Suns lost for just the second time in 10 games and were denied a chance to clinch their 13th consecutive playoff bid.

The Wolves pulled within one game of the Suns in the race for seventh place in the Western Conference.

Raptors 108, Magic 100

ORLANDO, Fla. — Antonio Davis had a career-high 31 points and a season-high 13 rebounds and reserve guards Chris Childs and Dell Curry led a fourth-quarter charge as Toronto defeated Orlando.

Toronto's win, combined with Charlotte's 81-76 loss at Miami, gave the Raptors a one-game lead for the fifth seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs. The Raptors are still 2 1/2 games behind the Heat for fourth place and home-court advantage in the first round.

Heat 81, Hornets 76

MIAMI — Alonzo Mourning sank an acrobatic go-ahead basket with 93 seconds left, and the Miami Heat rallied to beat the slumping Charlotte Hornets.

For the third time in a week, the Hornets blew a big lead and lost. And Jamal Mashburn again failed to come through in the fourth quarter, as often happened when he played for the Heat.

Duke's Battier picks up Wooden Award

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shane Battier, who led Duke to its first NCAA championship since 1992, capped an outstanding college career Friday, winning the 25th John R. Wooden Award as the male player of the year.

Battier, a 6-foot-8 senior forward from Birmingham, Mich., was previously honored as The Associated Press player of the year and Naismith Award winner, and was chosen the outstanding player in the Final Four for his efforts in victories over Maryland and Arizona.

"I'm very honored to receive this award," Battier said. "Last year, Coach Wooden told me if he was still coaching, I'd be a player he'd like to coach. That's the ultimate compliment.

"Every goal I've set for the last four years, I have reached. To win the Wooden Award after winning the national championship is the perfect ending to my career. It's fitting it happened near Hollywood."

Battier, who averaged 19.9 points, 7.3 rebounds, 1.8 assists, 2.1 steals and 2.3 blocked shots this season to lead Duke to a 35-4 record, was a runaway winner, collecting 4,892 points from the more than 1,000 media members and basketball experts who participated.

Jason Williams, Battier's teammate at Duke, finished second with 3,764 points, followed by Joseph Forte of North Carolina with 2,899; and Casey Jacobsen of Stanford with 2,831.

Knight makes pitch to Houston recruit

Associated Press

HOUSTON — New Texas Tech basketball coach Bobby Knight was in Houston on Friday to make a pitch to Houston Bellaire forward Emeka Okafor, one of the nation's top unsigned high school players.

Bellaire coach Dave Hudek said Knight met with him and the 6-9 forward for 90 minutes.

NCAA rules prohibit Knight from talking about a potential recruit, but Okafor told Houston station KRIV-TV that Knight "had a very good presentation."

"He was straight-forward. ... He told me what I could do for them and what they could do for me. He said I could come in there and play big-time minutes right away and be probably something special," Okafor said. "They're definitely in the mix. I just have to sit down and sort things out and see what I need to do."

Okafor spoke of Knight's visit shortly before a late-morning flight for Connecticut, where he was to meet with the UConn Huskies.

"I'm not going to get wobbly-kneed. It's a process. I have to be careful not to get carried away by the big name," Okafor said.

Hudek said he's overwhelmed that Knight came to his campus to recruit one of his players.

"I think it had a tremendous amount of influence on Emeka," Hudek said. "He had heard Coach Knight through the media. He never knew Coach Knight the person. When Coach Knight sat down with him this morning, I think Emeka got a new insight into Coach Knight."

Knight said the Red Raiders are still awaiting their appeal of an NCAA rule that limits schools to recruiting eight scholarship players within a two-year period. Knight hopes to replace three players who were dismissed from the team last week for undisclosed rules violations and a fourth player who asked to be released from his scholarship.

"It's a very legitimate appeal and very reasonable," Knight told KRIV. "The essence of it is Tech was penalized and agreed to a negotiated penalty between the university and the NCAA under one set of rules, and those rules have been changed. It really penalizes Tech twice, so that's what we're appealing."

Knight also used his trip to Houston to try to firm up his hopes of adding the University of Houston and Rice University to Texas Tech's schedule.

"We'd love to play in Houston every year. I hope we can get it worked out where we play Houston and Rice both," Knight said.

both of whom made it to the finals without much trouble. Viney and Corrales, however, won't play their finals match until Monday because the tournament was cut short on Friday. Both Viney and Corrales should be among the contenders in San Angelo.

Another top contender for the tournament should be Midland High girls singles player Drew Brannum, who defeated teammate Sara Giles in the finals of the Rebel Classic, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

In girls doubles play, Odessa Permian's team of Melissa Mann and Melissa Whitten defeated the Lubbock Monterey duo of Neely Jones and Erica Leake, 6-3, 6-4, in the finals.

There was a bit of an upset in the boys doubles competition as the Odessa High duo of Adam Carson and Keith Hembree beat Midland High's twosome of Marcos Valdez and Jonathan Webb, 6-3, 7-6, in the finals.

Baylor lifts suspension of two players in cat killing

WACO — Baylor lifted the suspensions Friday of two baseball players charged with shooting, skinning and beheading a stray cat.

Pitcher Derek Brehm and reserve outfielder Clint Bowers were suspended from the team March 22. They were charged March 9 with animal cruelty after the head of a skinned cat was discovered in Bowers' vehicle.

The criminal investigation will continue, police said of the off-campus case.

Baseball coach Steve Smith said he lifted the suspensions after discussions with school administrators and disciplinary action. He would not reveal any details.

"Under federal law, a university isn't allowed to release that information," said Baylor spokesman Scott Stricklin.

The players apologized in a statement released by Baylor.

"I'd like to apologize to my family, friends and everyone who has been affected by this incident," Brehm said.

Bowers said, "Words cannot adequately express the remorse I feel for the pain that this has caused my family, my friends, my school and the city of Waco."

The cat was named Queso by employees at a Waco restaurant.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

A crunching hit by Odessa College's Josh Hulin dislodges the ball from the grasp of Midland College catcher Ben Fritz Friday at Christensen Stadium.

Round Rock's Morillo stuns 'Hounds with late grand slam

Staff Report

ROUND ROCK — Cesar Morillo hit a towering grand slam over the left field wall at The Dell Diamond in the bottom of the ninth inning to lift the Round Rock Express to a 9-6 win over the Midland RockHounds Friday night.

The RockHounds (1-1) battled back from a 3-0 deficit to take a 5-3 lead with a four-run sixth inning.

But in the ninth things started to collapse for the 'Hounds. First David Matranga led off the inning with a solo blast over the left field wall. The Express (1-1) then loaded the bases on walks, one of them intentionally issued by Midland reliever Claudio Galva (0-1). Morillo then made Galva pay with his game-winning blast. Morillo was 2-for-5 in the game.

The Express had control early in the game with a three-run third inning.

Midland started to creep back, starting with a solo home run in the fourth inning by Oscar Salazar.

The RockHounds then took a 5-3 lead in the four-run sixth, highlighted by an Eddy Furniss two-run single.

The 'Hounds added what was though to be an insurance run in the top of the ninth when Esteban German was hit by a pitch and then scored all the way from first base on a triple by Salazar to make it 6-3.

For the game, Salazar went 3-for-5 at the plate. Furniss and Ryan Ludwick had two hits apiece.

Local Softball Today

Abilene Cooper at Midland High

When: Game time is 2 p.m. today...

Records: Midland High is 16-13 for the season and 1-7 in District 4-5A play while Abilene Cooper is 18-12 overall and 3-5 in league play...

4-5A Significance: Midland High is close to facing playoff elimination with another district loss while Cooper is one game behind San Angelo Central and Odessa Permian in the battle for the league's third playoff spot...

Notes: Cooper is coming off an important loss to San Angelo Central, falling off the pace for a state playoff run... Midland High is coming off a 3-2 loss to Odessa High, which was its sixth one-run loss in district play. That's a new district record... Cooper defeated Midland High by one run in the first half... MHS first baseman Ashley Truitt had her first three-hit game against OHS on Tuesday... Amanda Martin and pinch hitter Casey Stone drove in the two MHS runs against OHS... Cooper's Kari Merriam took the loss against Central on Tuesday and Sarah Baker had Cooper's only extra base hit, a double... Collin Lange played in her first game since breaking a finger prior to district play. Lange was the designated hitter and went 0-for-3 at the plate... MHS had eight hits against OHS, but only two runs. Getting the timely hit has been a major problem for the Lady Bulldogs... Sophomore Rachel Cherry is scheduled to pitch against Merriam today...

Next: Midland High travels to San Angelo Central on Tuesday for a 4:30 p.m. game.

Midland Lee at Abilene High

When: Game time is 2 p.m. today...

Records: Midland Lee is 25-1-1 for the season and 7-0-1 in District 4-5A play while Abilene High is 24-2-1 overall and 6-0-1 in league play...

4-5A Significance: Lee currently owns first place in 4-5A play, but Abilene High will take over the district lead with a win over Lee... This is the game these two teams have been waiting for because it appears that the winner will most likely win the district championship...

Notes: The last time these two teams played, darkness won. The two teams were tied at 2-2 after 10 innings in a game played at Lee. That game was called a tie and will not be made up, so today's game may be for all the marbles since neither team owns a loss to another opponent... AHS is coming off an open date and has had a full week to prepare for Lee... Lee is coming off a 2-0 win over Odessa Permian, the Lady Rebels' fourth consecutive win by shutout... Mandy Hacker is expected to throw for Lee today... Arin Spence threw for AHS in the last meeting with Lee, but may go with Samantha Hirsch, who has been pitching after Spence injured an ankle... Lee's Crista Hargrove and Shandi Neatherlin drove in the two runs against Permian on Tuesday... Lee has gone 27 innings without giving up a run...

Next: Lee is open on Tuesday and will host Abilene Cooper on Thursday at 4:30 p.m.

CHAPS: Wranglers sweep Midland College in twinbill victory, but after falling behind, the Chaps could only push across one more run.

(From 1B)

"We get a whole lot of base hits but they're not clutch hits," said Ramharter. "That's the story of our season."

Chad Reeves, who had been out of the lineup with a bulging disk in his back, returned with three hits for Midland College. Braden Conner and Ward had two hits apiece. Everybody for Odessa College had at least one hit, with the exception of leadoff hitter Eric Neatherlin.

But Neatherlin, one of three Midland Lee graduates who played in the game, made up for it the next game. Neatherlin went 4-for-5 and led off the game with a double off MC starter and loser Joseph Llanas. Neatherlin scored when Gonzalez crushed a homer to left, giving the Wranglers a 2-0 lead.

On the second pitch of the bottom of the first, MC's Ben Fritz crushed a towering homer to left so convincingly off Wrangler starter Jonathan Dickinson that OC leftfielder Anthony Bennett didn't even look up. The wind would help a pair of 2000 Lee graduates leave the yard shortly thereafter.

MC's Josh Haney drilled a two-run shot to left which gave the Chaps a 6-5 lead, but in the top of the next inning Haney's Lee teammate from last season, OC's Joe Frazier, hit a solo shot out of almost the deepest part of Christensen off Llanas to tie the game 6-6.

"We're just trying to do things to make ourselves a little bit better but it doesn't seem as if it always works out," said Ramharter. "There's a lot of good things happening even though we're not always winning."

Odessa College broke the game open with six runs in the top of the sixth to chase Llanas and take the lead for good. Former Rebels again acquitted themselves well in the inning as Neatherlin had a two-run single and Frazier had a sacrifice fly before a two-run double by Bennett made it 12-6.

The Chaps made it interesting in the bottom of the ninth against OC reliever Luis Lopez, who picked up the win. Trailing 13-9, MC began the inning with three straight hits to bring home a run, then with two outs, Reeves belted a double to deep left-center to cut it to 13-11 to put runners at second and third. But Lopez struck out pinch hitter Ward to end it.

Every Chap hitter except Conner had a hit in the second game. Fritz fell a double short of hitting for the cycle and Michael Garza had three doubles. The two teams will play a doubleheader today at noon at Christensen.

Colleyville Heritage girls, Central boys fall at state

Associated Press

GEORGETOWN — Humble Kingwood and San Antonio Churchill won their semifinal matches Friday night and will play Saturday for the Class 5A UIL high school soccer championship.

Kingwood played nearly 60 minutes one man down, but in the end, the Mustangs outlasted rival Klein 1-0 in a shootout in a Class 5A boy's semifinal Friday at the University Interscholastic League State Soccer Championships.

San Antonio Churchill fought back from a two goal deficit to defeat San Angelo Central, 3-2 in double overtime.

Kingwood and Churchill will meet for the championship at 6 p.m. Saturday.

Kingwood played Klein to a scoreless tie after regulation play and overtime, finally wining 1-0 in a shootout by scoring two goals to the Bearkat's one.

The Mustangs lost forward Brent Hinze to a red card at the 19:32 mark in the first half, but only allowed Klein six shots on goal for the game. The scoreless defeat was only the second time this season Klein (23-1-1) was held scoreless.

■ Prep Soccer

In the shoot-out, Andres Rota and Chris Findley scored for Kingwood (24-2-2), while goalie Ian MacNaughton only allowed Klein's Zach Hjornevik to find the net.

Forward Nathan Hughes scored in the first overtime period to give the Churchill Chargers (22-2-1) the win.

San Angelo Central (20-5) scored its two goals in 83 seconds. Tommy Vu scored at the 10:01 mark and teammate Logan Mikeska followed with 11:24 gone in the first half and a quick 2-0 lead.

Churchill tied the score at 2-2 at halftime with scores from Nick Ratliff and Fredrik Balldin.

GIRLS

Katy Taylor 3, Colleyville Heritage 2

Plano West 4, San Antonio Clark 0

GEORGETOWN — Katy Taylor and Plano West won in Class 5A girls semifinal matches Friday in the UIL state soccer championships at Eagle Stadium in Georgetown.

Plano West (25-0-4) limited San Antonio Clark (24-5-1) to just two shots on goal in a 4-0 shutout, while Katy Taylor posted a 3-2 victory in overtime over previously unbeaten Colleyville Heritage 3-2 .

Katy Taylor and Plano West will play for the state title at 4 p.m. Saturday, in a rematch of last year's championship game. Plano West was the victor in 2000.

Katy Taylor watched a 2-0 lead disappear, but got the winning goal in the first overtime period as Amanda Imperial tapped a pass by the Heritage goalie with just over eight minutes gone in the extra period.

Heritage (26-1-1), which had 20 shutouts in 27 games going into the semifinal, trailed 1-0 at the half and then 2-0 before Kim Matthew and Jessi Moore scored to send the game into overtime.

Ashley Vidal gave the Katy Taylor Mustangs a 1-0 margin, and Kellie Elkins padded the lead to 2-0 with a goal one minute into the second half.

Plano West scored two goals in each half against San Antonio Clark. Lauren Dillinger and Brooke Bowman got the first-half goals, and Jill Heinemann and Megan Weinlein added to the lead with scores in the second half.

BASEBALL: Rebs need wins to get back into playoff race

(From 1B)

it was the Bulldogs who came out on top in the end. The Rebels took their only lead of the game by scoring five runs in the bottom of the fourth to go up 6-5, but that was quickly erased in the top of the fifth.

The Bulldogs exploded for 10 runs in the inning off three Lee pitchers, taking a 15-6 lead which they made hold up. But with the second half of district here, that game is merely history.

"They're a good ball club and I expect to see the best they've got (today)," said Russell of the Rebels.

While Midland High has gotten far more positive results in district thus far than Lee, that doesn't prove that the Bulldogs are hands-down the better team. In the championship game of the Tournament of Champions at Christensen Stadium, Lee defeated MHS 9-6.

"I don't think there's much of a difference between us," said Benavidez. "If one team gets better pitching, that's who's going to come out on top because both teams are going to score runs."

Neither Benavidez nor Russell claims to have decided on a starting pitcher for today's game. Since the Bulldogs had a bye to close the first half of district, they'll probably have more options since they'll have more rested arms.

Sophomore righthander Casey Zachry, who got the win over Lee in the district opener despite giving up seven earned runs in four innings, might be the best candidate to start today, but he missed a turn against Permian because of tendinitis. Another sophomore righthander, Daniel Stovall, pitched three innings to get the save against Lee and appears capable of starting.

Last week, though, wins came from senior righthanders Matt Bose (a complete game victory over Abilene High) and Jayson Nix (a relief win over Permian).

"Pitching-wise, we've got a number of wins in district from different people, and that might be the best thing that's happened for us so far," said Russell.

Jacob Ramos, who took the loss to MHS in the district opener, might be turning the corner on the mound for the Rebels, since he beat Central Tuesday. And although Eric Winston didn't get the decision in the marathon win over Odessa High, he pitched nine strong innings and could get the start today.

Regardless of who starts for the Rebels, Benavidez views the second half of district as a fresh start for his team, and even though there's some ground to make up, he's not conceding anything to Midland High or anybody else.

"We hope to keep on winning and get that third playoff spot, but that district championship is a long way off for anybody right now," said Benavidez.

Hamed tries to back up boasts

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Not given to modesty, the flamboyant Prince Naseem Hamed calls his bout against Marco Barrera the biggest fight of the 21st century and predicts he will dismantle the fighter from Mexico.

The unbeaten Hamed, a Sheffield, England native of Yemeni descent, idolizes Muhammad Ali. His bravado shows it.

One of Barrera's heroes is Julio Cesar Chavez, and that is reflected in Barrera's quiet confidence.

"What I am is excitement and pure drama all rolled into one," Hamed said. "Boxing needs a fight like this. I am ready to dismantle Barrera. I will be utterly devastating."

Barrera, of course, thinks otherwise.

"I do not think Hamed has ever fought a Mexican boxer that will pressure him and work the body like I will," he said. "I am ready to win and have supreme confidence."

Ichiro helps Mariners spoil Rangers' miracle comeback

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Alex Rodriguez missed his chance to be a hero in his first game against the Seattle Mariners.

Instead, Ichiro Suzuki got to take over that role by hitting his first home run in the major leagues.

"I don't want to upstage Alex because he is such a wonderful player," Suzuki said.

But that's what the seven-time Japanese batting champion did when he hit a game-winning two-run homer in the 10th inning Friday night. Suzuki was 4-for-6 overall as the Mariners beat their former All-Star shortstop and the Texas Rangers 9-7.

Rodriguez, meanwhile, struck out for the second time in the ninth inning when the game was tied at 7.

Rodriguez finished 1-for-4 with a single, a walk and two runs scored, two strikeouts and a fly-out. In his first five games since signing a record $252 million, 10-year contract, he is 5-for-20 (.250) with seven strikeouts and no RBIs.

Suzuki homered off Jeff Zimmerman (0-1) with one out in the 10th following Tom Lampkin's leadoff walk.

"The first thing that went through my mind was I guess Sasaki is coming in and the game's over," Suzuki said.

Kazuhiro Sasaki, the Mariners' other Japanese player, pitched a perfect 10th for his second save.

Arthur Rhodes (2-0), the fifth Seattle pitcher, pitched 1 1-3 shutout innings. The biggest out was of his former teammate.

"It was a good battle. It got 1-2 and he made a good pitch, borderline up and in and I swung right under it," Rodriguez said of the ninth-inning confrontation with Rhodes.

"It was exciting seeing a lot of my friends again, but it was a little weird going up against them. I'm glad it's over, glad it's done."

Texas overcome a six-run deficit to tie the game at 7, but failed to score in the ninth when Rodriguez struck out and Rafael Palmeiro, who already had a grand slam and an RBI double, flied out.

The opener of a three-game series was the first of 20 games this season between the Mariners and Rangers.

The Rangers tied the game at 7 when pinch-runner Bo Porter scored in the eighth on a ground-out by Ruben Mateo.

Porter, running after Andres Galarraga's walk, got to third on Mark McLemore's throwing error as Ken Caminiti reached on a fielder's choice. When Caminiti tried to score the go-ahead run on Rusty Greer's single, catcher Tom Lampkin blocked the plate and held on to the throw from center fielder Mike Cameron as he was hit.

In the field, Rodriguez was involved in three plays, including a 4-6-3 double play to end Seattle's four-run first.

"No, there was no added pressure. They've got a good team over there and real good pitching," Rodriguez said.

After Rodriguez singled in the sixth, he scored on Rafael Palmeiro's double to make it 7-2. Palmeiro's ninth career grand slam an inning later got the Rangers within a run.

Seattle went ahead when their first four batters of the game reached and scored against Rick Helling, who gave up seven runs and nine hits in three-plus innings.

Suzuki led off with a double before a homer by McLemore, who played in Texas from 1995-99. Martinez walked and John Olerud singled before an error and a Tom Lampkin RBI single brought them home.

Lampkin hit a solo homer in the third, and the Mariners knocked Helling out when McLemore walked and Martinez doubled to start the fourth. Olerud greeted Pat Mahomes with an RBI double and Mike Cameron followed with a sacrifice fly.

But Mahomes retired 13 straight batters after that to keep the Rangers close.

Seattle's Jaime Moyer pitched five-plus innings in his first start of the season, allowing two runs and six hits.

Seattle relievers had worked 16 straight scoreless innings this season until Palmeiro's slam off Norm Charlton, who didn't face another batter. The Rangers had loaded the bases on a walk, a single and hit batter by Jeff Nelson.

Palmeiro led off the second with a single, his first hit since an RBI double in his first at-bat of the season, and later scored on Caminiti's sacrifice fly.

Notes: Michael Finley, an NBA All-Star from the playoff-bound Dallas Mavericks, threw out the ceremonial first pitch. The pitch was high, but across the plate. ... Randy Velarde is the only Texas player with a hit in all five games. ... Palmeiro hit career homer No. 401, on the night when fans were given pins commemorating No. 400, hit last Sept. 23.

President Bush helps Brewers open Milwaukee's Miller Park

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Brewers finally have a roof over their heads.

The Brew Crew ushered in a new era Friday night when they opened palatial Miller Park — and closed its retractable roof — with a 5-4 win over the Cincinnati Reds, who also helped them close County Stadium last year.

Commissioner Bud Selig, whose family controls the Brewers, threw out the ceremonial first pitch, a strike — but only because the high strike is being called this year.

President Bush, who used to own a piece of the Texas Rangers, followed with a one-hopper to Brewers manager Davey Lopes. He was encumbered by a bulletproof vest beneath his shimmering blue Brewers jacket.

As children from each of Wisconsin's 72 counties held a giant flag that covered most of the outfield, a bald eagle named "Challenger" swooped down from Bernie's Dugout on the top tier of seats in left field to the pitcher's mound as the national anthem concluded.

It was an especially poignant night for Selig, who returned baseball to Milwaukee in 1970 when he led a group that purchased the Seattle Pilots out of bankruptcy court and then secured the sport's future in Wisconsin by successfully lobbying for a new ballpark before becoming fulltime commissioner.

"I have thought for a long time how I would react on the day that Miller Park finally opened," Selig said. "After all these years and all the struggles, it's hard for me to articulate for one of the few times in my life how I feel today. I'm proud and I'm happy."

And so were so many others.

"I'm pretty excited," said Dan Meis, who designed Miller Park. "One of the big challenges was how to do a retractable roof that connects with a retro ballpark. I think it's come together nicely."

The stadium features state-of-the-art video and scoreboards in center field and hand-turned scoreboards in the outfield corners.

From the outside, the nearly $400 million ballpark looks like Ebbets Field; from the inside, like nothing ever built before.

But the crowning feature is the distinctive seven-paneled roof that can open or close in 10 minutes, allowing for grass instead of artificial turf and for the temperature to be raised up to 30 degrees.

Two of the five exterior outfield wall panels also open or close, depending on weather conditions, creating an outdoor atmosphere.

"It doesn't look cookie cutter, it doesn't feel like a dome," Brewers shortstop Mark Loretta said.

Bush's visit marked the first time a president had attended a professional sporting event in Wisconsin, and fans had to pass through metal detectors on the way to their seats.

The ballpark opened a year late because of a crane accident that killed three ironworkers on July 14, 1999.

Biggio's homer leads Astros to victory, 4-0 start to season

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Craig Biggio has recovered from knee surgery quite nicely.

Biggio went 3-for-4 with a two-run homer and three RBIs, and the Houston Astros beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1 Friday night.

"I've just felt comfortable this year," Biggio said. "It took me a long time to get comfortable last year. I'm just excited to be in the lineup."

Houston is 4-0 for only the third time in franchise history, joining the Astros of 1968 and 1987 — who set a team best by winning their first six.

Pittsburgh dropped to 0-8 at Enron Field, which opened last year, and 3-16 at Houston in the past three seasons.

"I keep telling people don't feel sorry for us," Pirates manager Lloyd McClendon said. "We have a good team. Our guys will be fine."

There have been 12 homers hit this year in four games at Enron, where a major league record 266 were hit last year.

Biggio hit his first homer of the season in the first inning and added an RBI double in the fifth.

"I really didn't really have any expectations. I just wanted to come back and play," Biggio said. "I worked last year with Harry (hitting coach Spilman) and he's helped me get out of that hole last year."

After Biggio's homer, Jeff Bagwell reached second on a throwing error by third baseman Aramis Ramirez and scored on Richard Hidalgo's sacrifice fly for a 3-1 lead.

Octavio Dotel (1-0) walked Adrian Brown on four pitches starting the game and Brown scored on Brian Giles' sacrifice fly. Dotel allowed one run — unearned — and five hits in seven innings.

"He was pitching under control and not trying to strike everyone out," Astros manager Larry Dierker said. "He was trying to hit his spots and I looked up and he was throwing 94 (mph) later in the game."

Omar Olivares (0-1) gave up four runs — three earned — and five hits in six innings, struck out five and walked none.

"I consider it a quality start," Olivares said. "If I keep going like this, the wins will come. Only one guy really hurt me. Usually if you can keep it to that you're going to be OK."

Chris Truby, who had homered in each of his first three games, was 0-for-3 and failed to join Mark McGwire and Willie Mays as the only players to hit homers in their first four games.

Billy Wagner, coming back from elbow surgery, pitched the ninth for his first save since last June 13 at Colorado.

Notes: The Pirates will unveil a 12-foot high statute of Willie Stargell on Saturday. Statues of Honus Wagner and Roberto Clemente also are on the grounds of PNC Park, which opens Monday. ... Atlanta Hawks basketball coach Lon Kruger watched from behind the Astros dugout. He was a 12th round pick of the Astros in 1970.

Legends fail to make Masters cut

Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — A 25-foot chip dropped into the cup on No. 18, and Jack Nicklaus thrust his hands in the air triumphantly, just like he has on that green so many times before.

But this was a Friday, not a Sunday, and Nicklaus is going home, not sticking around to play this weekend. The six-time Masters champion shot a 3-over 75 to finish at 4 over. He missed the cut for only the fourth time in his 42 trips to Augusta.

"I said I wanted to be competitive," Nicklaus said. "I wouldn't call missing the cut by (three) strokes competitive."

At age 61, it seems Nicklaus expects more out of himself than his fans do. The same goes for his playing partners, Gary Player and Arnold Palmer, who made their way around the course to rippling waves of extended applause.

Player was hoping to become the oldest player to make the cut, at age 65. He shot 76 and finished at 5 over.

Palmer, 71, was at 1 over through 14 holes and had a chance to become the first player to shoot his age at the Masters. He closed with three bogeys in his four holes, and while Nicklaus was chipping in, he gave a long, wistful glance back down the 18th fairway.

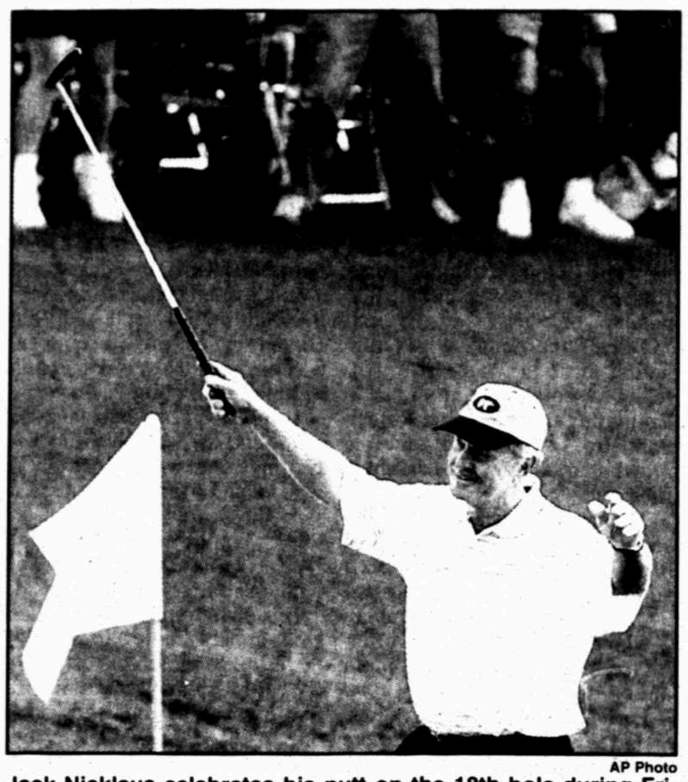

Palmer hasn't made a cut since 1983. Some have suggested he should take over the ceremonial spot Byron Nelson is vacating this year, and trade in two full rounds of golf for a simple drive off the first tee box along with Sam Snead to start the tournament.

"I'm not thinking too seriously about that yet," Palmer said.

Player says he'll be back next year, too.

"Nobody knows how special this place is until they play it in the tournament," he said.

That's how Nicklaus feels, too. He made 2000 his last year for playing all four majors, but returned to Augusta, even though he conceded he pretty much knew he couldn't win the tournament.

AP Photo

Jack Nicklaus celebrates his putt on the 18th hole during Friday's second round of the Masters at the Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Ga.

He's not committing for 2002 yet.

"Next year?" he said. "I'm only thinking about next week right now."

DEVASTATED DRISCOLL: Amateur James Driscoll's infectious smile was replaced by a cheek-to-cheek frown that spoke of nothing but devastation.

After a magical opening round of 4-under 68, the U.S. Amateur runner-up imploded down the stretch Friday, making double bogeys on Nos. 12 and 17. He shot 78 and finished at 2 over for the tournament, missing the cut by one stroke.

"Just disgusting," he said, in summing up the day.

Because he didn't make the cut, he will earn no medal as the low-scoring amateur of the five who competed this year. That means he and his entourage of about 40 friends and family will head home early — a fate they thought they might avoid after Driscoll got on the leaderboard after one round.

"I didn't hit the ball very well yesterday, but it was one of those days where everything goes your way," he said. "I didn't hit it very well today, either, and I got what I deserved."

CALCULATED COMEBACK: Mark Calcavecchia shot a 6-under 66 to tie David Duval, Tiger Woods and Toshi Izawa for the low round Friday, marking a successful return to Augusta after not being invited in 2000.

"I missed being here, and it fired me up," he said. "I knew I wasn't going to let that happen again."

Calcavecchia's absence was due to a bad 1999 season in which he didn't finish high enough to be invited. He turned that around in a big way this year, setting the PGA Tour record for a 72-hole score by shooting 28-under 256 in January.

"Not playing here last year, I didn't lose anything," said Calcavecchia, who had played in the Masters the 13 years previous. "It wasn't like I lost all the local knowledge at all."

BACK TO BEL-AIR: Greg Puga was the rags-to-riches story at the Masters — until the tournament began.

Puga, who grew up in the barrios of Los Angeles and works as a caddie for the rich and famous at Bel-Air Country Club, got into the Masters by winning the U.S. Mid-Amateur title. He made an early departure Friday with a round of 80, 12-over par for the tournament.

"My goal was to be low amateur," Puga said. "I'm way better than this. It just didn't happen for me."

The low point came on No. 11, when Puga's chip from right of the green when past the hole and trickled into the water. He went to the drop area and chunked a chip about 10 yards into the water, eventually taking quadruple bogey.

Still, he had few complaints. He was greeted with hugs from family members after his round.

"I've been treated like a king out here by everyone," he said. "It's been absolutely terrific."

Would he consider sticking around and working as a caddie over the weekend?

"No," Puga said. "I can't read these greens."

PERRY'S PAIN: It was a rough day in the pine straw for Chris Perry.

Perry twisted his knee in the straw on No. 1, then twisted it again on No. 6, and faced a day of pain from there.

"I played flat-footed, like a 10-handicapper," Perry said, after limping noticeably through the back nine.

Actually, maybe a little better than that.

He started the round with a pair of 7s, but came back to shoot a respectable 74. He sits at 2 under and is eligible to play this weekend.

MASTERS: Woods, Mickelson chase little-known golfer

(From 1B)

Masters is living up to expectations in more ways than one.

It all unfolds Saturday on a course expected to turn firm, fast and cruel, a drastic change from soft conditions that yielded 73 rounds under par over the first two days, the most in nine years.

And it won't take long for DiMarco to experience a weekend at a major.

"What a stage," he said. "Playing with Tiger, the best player in the world, on the best course in the world. You can pinch me if you want. It feels like a dream."

If so, it should seem familiar to Woods.

He also started 70-66 in 1997 when he set 20 tournament records to win his first major. He blew away Colin Montgomerie in the third round and left everyone else in his wake, winning by a record 12 strokes with a record score of 270.

"It doesn't really matter who's up on top of the board, because you have to execute your golf shots the way you know that you have to — especially on this golf course," Woods said. "I know that. I've experienced that. And I go out there with that mindset."

Mickelson refused to collapse despite a sloppy bogey on No. 10 and a tee shot into Rae's Creek on No. 12 that led to double bogey. He birdied three of the last six holes, saved par from the bunker on the 18th and was in great shape.

"I'm very excited to be where I'm at," Mickelson said.

Joining Duval at 137 was two-time U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen (70), Match Play champion Steve Stricker (71), Angel Cabrera (71) and Toshi Izawa (66).

Another stroke back were two other major winners — two-time Masters champion Jose Maria Olazabal (68) and former British Open champion Mark Calcavecchia (66). Ernie Els made bogey on the last hole for a 68 and was at 139.

Does a guy like DiMarco fit with that cast of champions?

"I guess I do this week," he said. "Why not? Everybody ... had to get there somehow, right? Maybe this is my week to get there."

Maybe he is the Bob May of Augusta, playing as though he has nothing to lose in the face of weekend pressure and against the best player in the world, who has always come through when the stakes were high.

"I've been there before," Woods said. "I know how to control my emotions and I know what to expect, what to feel, and what I'll probably experience coming down the stretch with a chance to win.

"If you haven't been there, it's tough."

That's what awaits DiMarco, not to mention a course that began drying out late Friday afternoon under partly sunny skies, with a forecast of more dry weather and wind that wreaks havoc at Augusta National, especially around Amen Corner.

"With the conditions a little more benign, the guys who are playing marginal can get away with shots," Woods said. "With the conditions getting more and more difficult, that won't be the case."

Plus, DiMarco has never played with Woods in competition.

The last time he strolled the fairways with Woods was seven years ago during a practice round in the 1994 Buick Classic, when Woods was an 18-year-old amateur fresh out of high school.

"I said back then, 'He's an aggressive player, he's got to learn a little bit.' Well, he learned quickly," DiMarco said.

Not everyone will be around to watch the drama unfold.

Greg Norman won't have to worry about another dose of Masters heartache. He suffered plenty on Friday with his worst score ever at Augusta — an 82 — to miss the cut. So did Davis Love III, risking it all with a shot out of trees on No. 15 that went into the water. He had a 75 and went home early for the first time since 1994.

Five other Masters rookies had opened with a 66 or better, and none followed that with anything better than a 75. DiMarco appeared to be heading in that direction by hooking his first drive into the trees and making bogey.

That was his only mistake.

He answered with two straight birdies, and rolled in a 35-foot putt on No. 12, his second straight birdie on one of the toughest par 3s in golf. The last two holes were critical for DiMarco heading into the final rounds.

He blasted out of the bunker to 2 feet on the 17th, then pumped his fist when his 10-foot par putt fell on the 18th.

"That putt on 18 was big," he said. "I wanted to put it in the 60s today. It's huge for my confidence. It's building and building."

All he has to do now is take that into the weekend and stare down Tiger Woods and an impressive list of challengers.

NORMAN: Shark's future is in doubt recent surgeries on his shoulder and hip unqualified successes. And he was mindful that Nicklaus caught lightning in a bottle one final time at the same age. Norman never mentioned it when the two practiced together for nine holes Tuesday. But he couldn't help but feel stung when Nicklaus begged off playing the back nine because he had to clean up in time to attend the annual champions dinner.

"He shot 82?" Nicklaus said when he saw Norman's score. "I thought he would play better than that. It seemed like he was playing well."

That was certainly the case Thursday, when Norman offset two bogeys on the front nine with an eagle-3 at No. 15 en route to a 71. After another two bogeys in the first three holes of round two, Norman seemed back in command by reeling off three pars and splitting the fairway at No. 7.

"It landed in an unfilled divot," he recalled afterward, "and that was it."

The details of the rest of his round, his worst ever at Augusta, aren't worth delving into. The seventh was the first of five straight bogeys, a run so demoralizing Norman quit counting the rest of the bogeys sandwiched in among the pars as he headed back toward the clubhouse.

"It seemed like I hit a series of nice shots," he said, oblivious to his final numbers, "and I end up 3- or 4-over."

Actually, he ended up 10-over for the day, eight shots on the wrong side of the cut. By the time he reached the wood-paneled locker room, a score was the last thing on his mind.

"Make sure the beer is cold," Norman called out to a friend standing nearby.

If anything, there had been too much time to prepare.

"It's been on ice," the friend assured Norman, "for a while."

With that, the man who became known as the Great White Shark after his first news conference here 20 years ago, emptied out his locker. A car waited at the curb. A private jet that would carry him back to his Florida manse waited nearby. His mood was impossible to read.

Norman got ripped after his loss in 1996 for not showing enough regret. He dared anyone to call finishing second a tragedy when he was going home to a warm family, a cold beer and a fortune that was growing faster than his accountants could keep track.

That same equanimity would sound like heresy coming from Hogan or Nicklaus, or any of the greats from other eras with whom his game once invited comparison. The question no longer is whether Norman will reach those heights at Augusta, but whether he'll even get the chance again.

Basin Bulldogs in Mesquite

The Basin Bulldogs return to action at 7 p.m. today when they travel to face the Mesquite Falcons

Last week, despite a strong defensive effort, the Bulldogs fell 13-7 at the Garland Wranglers.

"The defense kept us in the game all the way. They had a great performance," said Bulldogs head coach Ray Pierson. "Defensive tackle Clarence Ross probably had one of the best games of his career with at least six tackles, one sack and forced one fumble.

"We're not used to starting a season 0-1, so maybe it'll help kick-start the offensive motors on the team."

This week, the Bulldogs activated retired veteran quarterback Dallas Metacalf, who had been functioning as the Bulldog offensive coordinator. Metcalf now joins backup Joe Melendez behind first-year starting quarterback Tim Matthews.

"It was hard not playing this year so I'm excited to have another chance to play and help the team if I can," Metcalf siad.

In early spring the team dedicated the 2001 season to the Metcalf familiy in memory of his mother, Thenia Metcalf, who passed away in December. This year, players will wear the initials TM on the back of their helmets.

Out for the rest of the season in tailback John Williams, who tore his ACL in the fourth quarter of last week's game against Garland.

Starting tailback Sam Powell turned in a good rushing performance last week with more than 100 yards.

The Bulldogs' first home game is April 14 at Ratliff Stadium against the Texas Roughriders.

Gordon bumps Wallace out of pole spot for Virginia 500

Associated Press

■ NASCAR

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Jeff Gordon won the pole position for Sunday's Virginia 500 NASCAR Winston Cup race, his 35th career top starting spot.

Gordon bumped fellow short-track specialist Rusty Wallace out of the top spot with a run at 94.087 mph around the .526-mile oval, then watched as track qualifying record-holder Tony Stewart and 11 others gave chase.

None came close, giving Gordon his second pole of the season.

"I knew we had a good car all day, but I had no idea it was going to feel that good for qualifying," Gordon said. "The thing really stuck good, turned good. I really couldn't have asked for it to do much more."

Wallace, the active leader with six victories on the oldest, short track in NASCAR's premier series, will start second after a run at 93.994 mph, the first of five straight Fords behind Gordon's Chevrolet.

"This is a very difficult place to win poles at, and as far as I'm concerned, it's probably the most important place to win the pole because of that No. 1 pit stall over there," Gordon said. "There's just nothing like having that No. 1 pit stall at Martinsville. It's a huge thing."

The track this year widened pit road by 10 feet, but Gordon said pit road is still very tight, so having a clear shot out of the stall is key.

Wallace agreed, saying the No. 1 stall and No. 12, the first after a break in the pit road wall, is also good.

"I'm real happy to get second if I couldn't get first," Wallace said. "It gives us good pit selection out there. To me there's only two good pits that I like, and I got one of them for Sunday, so that's good."

Virginia natives Jeff Burton and Ricky Rudd make up the second row, followed by Robert Pressley and Jeremy Mayfield. The Chevys of Jerry Nadeau, Joe Nemechek, Bobby Hamilton and Dale Earnhardt Jr. are next.

Series rookie Casey Atwood will start 14th as the first Dodge off the line, and Stewart will be the first Pontiac. He's starting 16th.

Gordon said the problems of qualifying at Martinsville, with its long straightaways and tight corners at both ends, are a constant concern.

"You're trying to be patient but be aggressive at the same time, and that's two things that don't mix too well," he said.

The pole was Gordon's first here. He's won here three times.

Defending race champion Mark Martin qualified 36th, and Stewart, who set a track record in qualifying here last October, was 16th.

Points leader Dale Jarrett will start 13th.

Ruttman wins pole for Craftsman Truck race

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Joe Ruttman, winner of the first truck race at Martinsville Speedway, won the pole position for Saturday's Advance Auto Parts 250 NASCAR Craftsman Trucks Series race.

Ruttman circled the .526-mile oval at 92.411 mph Friday, well off the track record of 94.275 mph set in 1999 by Mike Bliss. But it was still enough to beat Scott Riggs, who qualified second at 92.299 mph.

Both drivers made their runs in Dodges, as the manufacturer kept up its dominance early in the season by sweeping the top four spots. Dodge has won all three truck poles and all three races this season.

Salazar turns in good practice in hometown

Associated Press

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — Eliseo Salazar slipped off his lime green racing helmet, then let out a deep breath.

It was a huge sigh of relief.

Salazar, who drives for A.J. Foyt Enterprises, posted the fourth-fastest practice time Friday at Homestead-Miami Speedway. Salazar, a Chilean who lives in Miami, was driving in front of many friends, family members and other supporters for the first time since joining the Indy Racing League full time in 1997.

"I cannot lie, I do indeed feel a lot of pressure," Salazar said. "I'm really hoping that we can do well because I want to give them all what they have come here for."

Salazar's top speed was 197.244 mph, a little slower than Greg Ray, Scott Sharp and Sam Hornish Jr. in preparation for Sunday's Infiniti Grand Prix. Qualifying is Saturday for the 300-mile race, the second this year for the IRL.

Ray, who has won seven poles in the last 10 IRL races, turned in a top speed of 198.166 mph. Sharp was second at 197.740, and Hornish — who dominated and won the season-opener last month in Avondale, Ariz. — went 197.670 mph on the nearly flat, 1 1/2-mile oval in warm and windy conditions.

"You really have to drive hard here every lap," Ray said. "There's no cruising around this track."

Sharp said throttle control is important at Homestead.

"This track is a lot different than the high banks," he said. "You can't keep the hammer down like you can on the high banks."

Salazar was atop the speed chart for much of the second practice session before Ray moved ahead for good.

"This session took a lot of pressure off of me. I'm sort of relieved," said Salazar, who lives about 10 miles from the speedway. "Every time you are this fast, you have to be happy."

Salazar, driving his second season for Foyt, finished fourth in the standings last year. Without a victory, he did it with six top-10 finishes in nine races.

He picked up right where he left off this season, finishing second at Phoenix International Raceway. He is expecting a strong showing at Homestead, and earning his second IRL victory is a possibility. His first win came in 1997 in Las Vegas.

Salazar raced in Chile, Argentina and Europe long before coming to the United States.

His breakthrough season came in 1995, when he finished fourth in his first Indianapolis 500 and 21st in points in the CART series.

Salazar says his biggest season is yet to come. Signing with Foyt might have been the move that will make it happen. Foyt won the Indy 500 four times as a driver and prepared the winning car for Kenny Brack in 1999, a year after the Swede won the IRL title.

"My boss always says we don't get paid for Friday," Salazar said. "We need to win Sunday. That's where A.J.'s experience comes into play, adjusting the car to different conditions.

"I'm confident that when the time comes, he'll be on top."

Defending champ Tracy survives tough practice

Associated Press

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Paul Tracy was amazed to be smiling at the end of a very long practice day at the Toyota Grand Prix of Long Beach.

The defending and two-time race winner struggled through most of two sessions on the 1.968-mile temporary street circuit. Still, only Tony Kanaan and Oriol Servia were faster Friday.

"We had a boost problem in the morning and really didn't do a lot of running, about 10 laps," Tracy said. "In the afternoon, we had an oil leak in the primary car. It was a big leak and we didn't want to take any chances, so we went to the spare car. Then we had a boost problem in the spare car."

The tale of frustration continued.

"We knew we had to get some laps in, so we stayed out there a little and I spun a couple of times just getting used to the track again," Tracy said. "Then, right at the end, I put in a fast lap."

Tracy, considered a strong contender for his first CART championship, got off to a good start last month in Monterrey, Mexico, finishing third. With that memory still fresh in his mind, Tracy wasn't too worried by the troubles that beset his Reynard-Honda on Friday before he turned his fast lap of 103.617 mph.

"I think it's OK," he said. "We can make some improvements to the car on Saturday and be right there in qualifying."

A rule change this season in CART eliminated the first of two rounds of qualifying on road and street courses and made the first day all practice.

One reason Tracy is feeling so confident heading into Saturday's single round of time trials is the input from teammate Dario Franchitti and technical partner Michael Andretti. He moved over the winter to the new Motorola Racing team formed by Barry Green and is sharing information with Team Kool Green drivers Tracy and Franchitti.

"Michael found some things today and Dario found some things that we'll put on the car," Tracy said.

Priest sees grace of God in his coming to Midland

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

The Rev. Charles Vogel celebrated his first Mass in 1939, at the Church of the Transfiguration in Brooklyn, when it cost a nickel to ride the subway and the Mass was sung in Latin. One of his altar boys was Bobby Kelly, 11, a child who became a friend for life and the reason Vogel is in Midland.

The way Vogel remembers it, his first assignment was to replace a young priest who had been an avid scoutmaster who — it was assumed — had gone on to better things, much to the relief of the church's pastor.

"He (the pastor) was glad to see him leave, because he wasn't too enthusiastic about the Boy Scouts," Vogel remembers, "because he thought it was too exclusive an organization. He encouraged me to replace the scout activities with something that was more inclusive in that neighborhood.

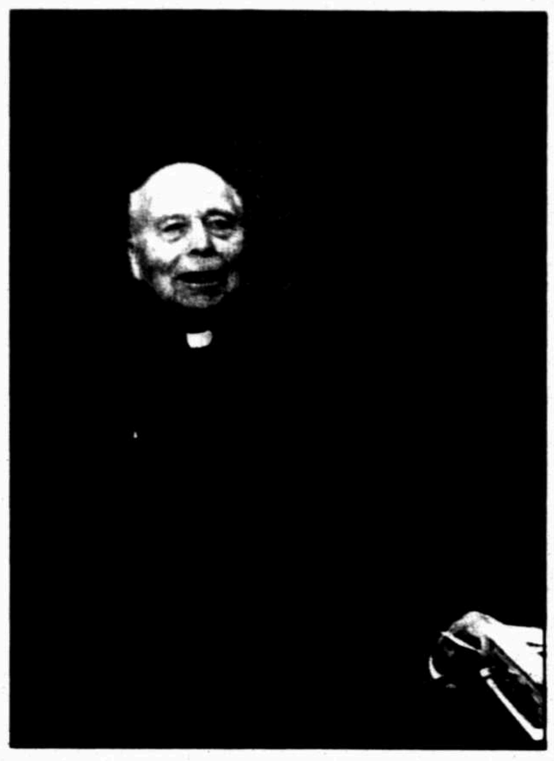

"So that's what I did. We formed a group of boys who would go camping and play various games, and we all had a good time at it.

"Once during Christmas week, I borrowed my mother's car and drove out to Long Island, and as I was walking along the road I hit a slick spot and my feet went up into the air, and I landed on my wrist and broke it. As the boys were standing around waiting for me to come around, the future Fr. Kelly gave his first homily.

"'Offer it up,' he said. I never let him forget that, and when he was on his deathbed in 1999, the last time I spoke to the (hospital) chaplain, I told him to tell Fr. Kelly, 'Charlie says to offer it up.' But he didn't regain consciousness."

In fact, the two men's friendship ended up with Vogel following Kelly across the continent, to stand in for him when he was in need of relief from his pastoral duties at St. Stephen's Catholic Church in Midland. The arrangement

Greenwood Baptist's history culminates with new building

Saralee Huntsman

With the dedication of its new building April 1, Greenwood Baptist Church celebrated the pinnacle of its nearly 100-year history.

Little did the Greenwood Baptist pioneers realize what would become of their tiny gathering that began meeting in an unused saloon in 1907.

That small congregation would grow to more than 800 members. In response to the growth and contributions to a 12-year building fund, the Baptist church in Greenwood has a new building to call home, thus bringing to a high point the history of a town established by dedicated Baptists.

According to a historical plaque hanging on the old Baptist church on FM 307, Greenwood was named for two Baptist missionaries — the Revs. Green and Wood. In the early 1900s, itinerate preachers would take turns holding worship services in small communities that didn't have a regular church building.

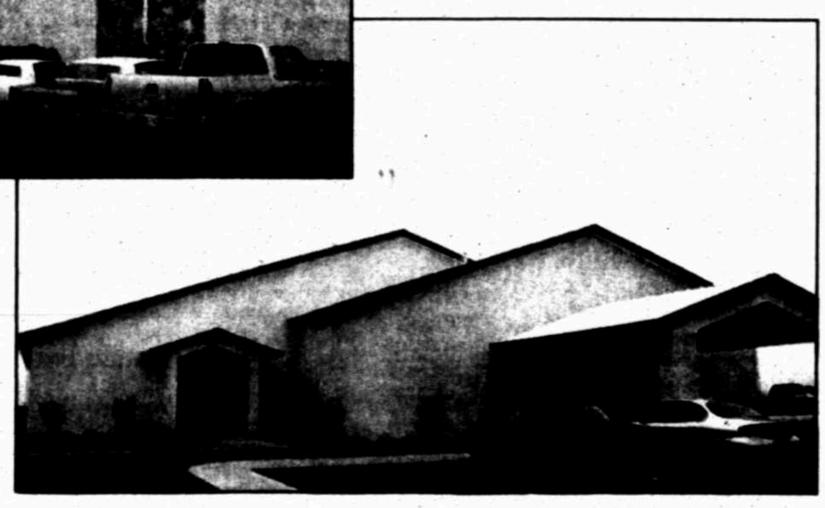

The Rev. Wayman Swopes, pastor of Greenwood Baptist Church, said he knew of a church member — now living in Dallas — who could remember the bullet holes in the floor of the saloon where her family attended Sunday service when she was a little girl.

In 1926, a small, wooden structure was built on land donated by John M. King, organizer and charter member deacon, according to the plaque.

Virginia Bryant, who has been a member of the church for 63 years, can still remember the curtains they

Fortunately, Jesus did not settle for glory on a donkey

Ah, spring. The time of year when thoughts turn to love, roses and donkeys. Each year for Palm Sunday, our church borrows a donkey from some of our parishioners who live north of town, and the congregation processes from the parish hall to the church, singing and waving palm branches.

Williams

Somewhere along the line an executive decision was made to leave the donkey outside. Even though some of our members are not crazy about our red carpet, well, still.

I think of Palm Sunday as "Hinge Sunday," because within the space of a one church service, we begin with the hurrahs that greeted Jesus when He entered Jerusalem on the donkey, but we end with the Scripture of Jesus' death and burial. In a short period of time, Jesus moves from hero to criminal, from palms to thorns, in the hearts of the masses.

Holy Week is bracketed by two triumphs: earthly glory and heavenly glory, with a cross in between. If Jesus had settled for glory on a donkey, He could have avoided excruciating pain, doubt, betrayal, rejection and death — all of the things I personally work so hard to escape. And donkeys aren't so bad. In biblical times, they were just another means of transportation, sort of like parading in a Volkswagen convertible instead of a Cadillac.

Fortunately, Jesus didn't settle for "Hosannahs!" He knew his kind of Messiahship rode on the back of death, down a street lined with angels instead of fickle human beings.

He chose this harder path for one reason: You. Me. Us. The ones who turned on him. The ones who fell asleep under the trees in the Garden of Gethsemane. The ones who denied him and ran away. He chose this path to save us from ourselves.

But to return to the donkey. G.K. Chesterton wrote a poem about this donkey:

When fishes flew and forests walked
And figs grew upon thorn,
Some moment when the moon was blood
Then surely I was born.

With monstrous head and sickening cry
And ears like errant wings,
The devil's walking parody
On all four-footed things.

The tattered outlaw of the earth,
Of ancient crooked will;
Starve, scourge, deride me: I am dumb,
I keep my secret still.

Fools! For I also had my hour;
One far fierce hour and sweet:
There was a shout about my ears,
And palms about my feet.

That was one lucky beast, to have carried the King of Glory on his back. Metaphorically, we, too, can have no greater privilege, even 2,000 years after the original procession.

Ministry helps loved ones of prison inmates

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

Women with family members or loved ones in prison are often the most isolated members of our society, according to Cindy McDonald, who is involved in the ministry, Kairos Outside.

"They bear the burden of the spotlight," said Ms. McDonald. "It's written up in the paper, it's on the evening news.

"Often they are shunned, even in church, and if they're not shunned, they're embarrassed. So they deal with the shame and the publicity by isolating themselves."

Ms. McDonald said Kairos Outside — a sister organization to the prison ministry, Kairos — was developed expressly to help the women deal with the isolation and the shame. It is for the spouses, female parents and other female relatives of the incarcerated.

Kairos Outside is hosting a weekend in Andrews beginning April 20. All expenses of the guests are paid for by donations of support teams and others, said Ms. McDonald, a team leader.

The Kairos Outside weekend starts on the evening of April 20 and continues through the afternoon of April 22.

While similar in many respects to Cursillo or Walk to Emmaus, the weekend is different in that it is designed for both Christians and non-Christians who are dealing with issues of isolation, rejection, financial hardship and loneliness. All team members, however, are Christians, and the message is all about the unfailing grace of God.

Yet, Ms. McDonald pointed out, "this weekend is not designed to help you fix your life. We don't try to solve anyone's problems, or tell them what they should do, or anything like that.

"This is a time for us to pamper these ladies."

In order to do that pampering, the Kairos Outside Team undergoes an intense 14-session training period during which they prepare to minister to the women and to deal with issues relevant to their thoughts and concerns.

"We don't discuss anything about the incarcerated men, or why they're incarcerated," said Ms. McDonald. "We just want to show the ladies that there is a Christian community who loves and wants to support them. We do encourage them to form support groups for the future, so that when they go home they won't feel so isolated, and they'll have someone to talk to who understands what they're going through."

Team members, who come from different Christian denominations, are often wives and mothers of inmates. Men, usually husbands of team members, do the cooking and serving.

The team and guests at Kairos Outside weekend in Andrews will conduct meetings at Means Memorial United Methodist Church, with overnight lodging at Energy Park Inn Motel. The rooms are also free of charge to Kairos Outside guests; they are paid for by team members and donations from organizations and individuals who wish to support the ministry.

Ms. McDonald said since there are only five Kairos Outside groups in the state, often guests can come from a considerable distance.

"The other Kairos Outside groups are in Amarillo, San Antonio, Dallas and Houston," she said. "And it doesn't matter where your loved one or family member is incarcerated, if you're in this area, you're welcome."

Team members must be alumni of a Cursillo, Walk to Emmaus or similar Christian short course, and must undertake the entire 14-session training before serving at a Kairos Outside weekend.

Ms. McDonald said women who wish to apply for the weekend are asked to contact a team member in a town near them.

Contacts are: Dee Southern, Andrews, 524-6060; Susan Guerry, Odessa, 563-0230; Kathy Hagler, Midland, 683-9475; Francine Weaver, Midland, 682-1375 and Mary Stewart, Lovington N.M., 505-396-5705.

NEW: Members grateful to be part of new church used in the old wood building to divide the sanctuary into Sunday school classrooms. "In the old wood building, if we had 40 members, we had a big crowd," she said.

The old wood building was torn down and a larger, brick building was erected in its place sometime in the early 1950s, according to Roy Graham, 60, who was raised a Baptist. With the growth of the church, an addition was built in 1978.

"The progression (of the church) has been remarkable," Graham said and added that the new building is really nice but not extravagant. "It will certainly provide what we need — it is a good expense of the Lord's money."

Swopes said when he came to Greenwood nearly 13 years ago, the church still owed about $25,000 on the old building. "I talked to the deacons about us having a special offering and so we did that and little more than paid the debt off (in one Sunday). We took what was left and started the building fund for this church."

With more than 800 members, Greenwood was in need of a larger building, and a committee and building fund were established. That fund grew and enabled the church to dedicate its new, completely paid-off building located across the street from the old church.

The new auditorium is nearly three times the size of the old one. Special features include a bridal dressing room, a nursery, a toddler playroom and, at the back of the auditorium, a cry room where mothers with small children can sit and still be able to watch and hear the worship service.

Dorothy Self, a Sunday school teacher who served on the building committee for eight years, said the new building is a dream come true for her.

"When this land finally came available and we started planning for this building, I thought we would never get over there (and that I'd) never see that building built," Ms. Self said. "And now to see it is a reality and to know that I'm going to be in here on Sunday, it just fills me so full I can hardly stand it."

However, the new building isn't all "out with the old and in with the new."

The stained glass windows of the old auditorium were the perfect size for the new auditorium, "so we decided to bring the old ones over here," Swopes said.

The old building will still be used for worship services and Sunday school classes for children and youth. The new building will be used for adult worship services and Sunday school. Swopes said many weddings have already been scheduled for the new building as well.

The new building's cost was approximately $700,000 to $800,000, Swopes said.

"We've seen huge generosity from the community from the very beginning. All the way through, the different people who helped us have been extremely helpful and generous. It's been amazing," he said.

Members who donated to the building fund have reason to feel proud — not only for the accomplishment of a nice facility, but also for the fact that they, too, are players in the historical tale of Greenwood's existence.

"I just thank God everyday I got to be a part of this," Ms. Self said. "There's just been so many blessings you wouldn't believe."

PRIEST: Vogel eager to help long-time friend

(From 1C)

suited both men so well that Vogel continued on through Kelly's retirement, filling in for the next pastor of St. Stephen's, the Rev. John Waldren, and following Waldren's death in 1995, the present pastor, the Rev. James Bridges.

In between, they kept up with each other from distances that fluctuated from the close confines of a New York parish to the space of oceans between them.

"On the 25th anniversary of my ordination, I had two assistants. One was a priest, and the other was Deacon Robert Kelly, who would be ordained a priest the very next week," said Vogel. "The priest was a boyhood friend of Bobby's, a boy that Bobby had taken with him to a Capuchin school after they finished grammar school. Bobby dropped out the first year, and went back to Brooklyn to finish high school, but his friend persevered, entered the priesthood and later went to Okinawa, where he has been ever since.

"Bobby finished his high school, then went back to the Franciscans as a brother, where he became secretary to the provincial, and became quite valuable to them. For instance, when they built a new seminary, he negotiated to get government surplus furnishings for the place at a substantial savings.

"After four years, he didn't renew his vows. Uncle Sam took him into the service and he ended up going to Germany, where he became friends with a man whose family had extensive property in California. When Bobby got out of the service he went to California to help his friend manage the family holdings there."

Meanwhile, Vogel maintained his ties with Kelly and Kelly's family. In 1958, he officiated at Kelly's sister's wedding.

"He came out to the service in a Porche," Vogel remembers, "but later he had to give it up because he was getting too many speeding tickets. He had been doing a lot of work for a local parish in California, writing letters for the pastor, and such, and the pastor convinced him to reconsider the priesthood. So he applied for Pope John XXIII's first seminary class."

After finishing seminary, Kelly went to Boston, where he was asked by a visiting bishop from San Angelo to come to Texas.

He was the first pastor of St. Stephen's Church, given a plot of land and a parish house, and carte blanche to raise a church plant.

Vogel said he stopped by to visit Kelly on his way back East from a visit to California.

"He had drawn up his own plans," he said, "and he was acting as his own contractor. I was here on Aug. 15, 1983, and he showed me the bare ground and the plans, and said he had hired a builder, Chuck Sturgeon."

On Labor Day, they broke ground, and in December, they poured the concrete platform.

"On Feb. 18, 1984, the day that they started the structure's steelwork, I called him, and when he told me he planned to celebrate the Easter Vigil in the new church, I said, 'But suppose they don't finish?' He said, 'Oh, they'll finish it. It's in the contract.' And on April 24, 1984 (Holy Saturday), they had their first ceremony.

"It's mind-boggling, looking back on it," Vogel said. "They never could have done it in New York. But I don't think they put a bolt in that he didn't see."

Vogel was on hand for the ceremony. He had retired that year, and Kelly took advantage of their long friendship and his availability to ask him to come to Midland.

> 'We can call it coincidence, or we can call it the grace of God.'
> — Father Charles Vogel, of St. Stephens Catholic Church

"He was down here by himself, and there was a severe shortage of priests," said Vogel. "He asked me to come down and help him for Easter, and after that, he would ask me to come and fill in for him whenever he needed to get away."

The parishioners of St. Stephens were more than cordial. They had a light-hearted rapport with Vogel and they were comfortable with his approach to the liturgy.

When Kelly retired in 1991, Vogel, then 74, agreed to step in until Waldren was relieved by his successor and could come to Midland. Meanwhile, Vogel was becoming known throughout the diocese. Once Waldren was in place, Vogel was called to Odessa, to Sweetwater and to Midland on a very regular basis.

Then on Dec. 15, 1995, he was back in New York, helping out in the parish he'd retired from, when he received a phone call from Odessa.

"They told me that Fr. John (Waldren) has passed out, and they didn't know how serious it was, and they wanted to know if I'd come out," said Vogel. "I booked a flight out of New York, but the plane was grounded by a snowstorm, and we didn't get off the ground until 5:30 that afternoon."

He arrived in Midland just about the stroke of midnight and was given a room in the home of a parishioner, because the rectory was filled with Waldren's relatives.

After Waldren's death, Vogel agreed to stay on until Bridges could get to Midland.

This too, turned out to be a problem. A week before Bridges was due in Midland, he underwent an emergency quadruple bypass.

These days, Vogel is almost a transplanted Texan, although all he has to do is open his mouth to betray his Queens beginnings. He said looking back, he sees God's grace in his coming to Midland.

"If you want to call it coincidence, that's all right, but consider this," he said. "There was this young man, Achille Ratti, who was ordained a priest, taught for a time in Milan and was put in charge of a library there, then was called to Rome and given charge of the Vatican library. It must have been in chaos, with documents piling up for years, and he worked to put some order to the whole thing.

"We know he wasn't just a bookworm, because he and another young priest had climbed one of the passes later used for military activities.

"Poland became independent during this time, after being under Russian rule for more than 100 years, and they had had no diplomatic relations with the Vatican for all these years because they were in hostile territory.

"But after World War I, they received their independence, and Pope Benedict XV appoints Achille Ratti as a papal visitor to Poland in 1918, and in 1919 makes him nuncio to Poland. Meanwhile, the Bolsheviks are wanting to take Poland back. In August 1920, they send in an expeditionary force, and all the diplomats in Poland, who know what barbarians the Bolsheviks are, move out. They say to Achille, 'Hey, you have to come with us, your life is in danger.'

"But he says, 'No, I have to stay with my people.' He gives over his diplomatic papers to the British ambassador and asks him to take them out of the country, and he organizes a novena to the Blessed Mother.

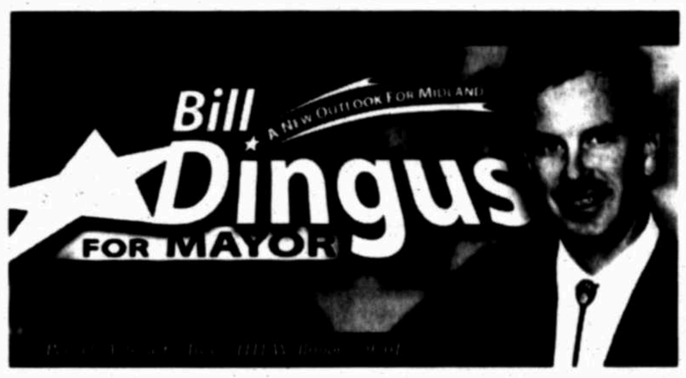

"When the Bolsheviks arrive outside Warsaw, a group of Polish patriots outflank them, and break up the attack, to save the city.

"The present Holy Father was a babe in arms, born May 18, 1920.

"Achille Ratti became Pope Pius XI in 1922.

"During Mussolini's reign of terror, (the pope) wrote an encyclical against the violence, and when Mussolini tried to appease him by offering to make reparations to the Vatican, Pius refused to see him. He sent his secretary of state down to get Mussolini's signature on the reparation agreement.

"We can call it coincidence, or we can call it the grace of God," said Vogel.

Tara Reid, Carson Daly postpone summer wedding plans

PNEW YORK — Tara Reid of "Josie and the Pussycats" and MTV "Total Request Live" host Carson Daly have postponed their summer wedding — not because they're breaking up, she said, but because she wants to make another movie first.

"I'm doing this movie called 'The Guest,'" Reid told TV Guide Online this week. The comedy co-stars Ashton Kutcher of the Fox sitcom "That '70s Show," and David Zucker will direct. "So the good news is that I got another movie. The bad news is that the wedding is not happening."

The 25-year-old actress said she was in the middle of planning the nuptials with Daly, 27, when she learned she'd gotten the role. The two have been together since March 2000 and got engaged in October.

"I had picked out the bridesmaids' dresses and the invitations, but we just canceled everything," she said.

No new date has been set for the wedding, in which Reid's "Josie" co-stars Rachael Leigh Cook and Rosario Dawson were to have been bridesmaids. The film, based on the Archie Comics characters and the 1970s TV cartoon, opens Wednesday.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Former presidential candidate Michael Dukakis encouraged young people to get involved in politics during an appearance at the University of Virginia.

"The progress we have made in the past 30-40 years is phenomenal," Dukakis said Thursday night, "and it's been fought for in the political arena."

The former Massachusetts governor and 1988 Democratic nominee for president said he was troubled by the demise of grassroots politics, which he said has always been the strength of the Democratic Party.

Dukakis said when he started in politics, he rang every doorbell in his community.

"That's the kind of politics I believe in," he said. "When was the last time someone knocked on your door?"

Dukakis said voters are left to learn about politicians from television and the Internet, which has led to less public interest in politics and low voter turnout.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — Author John Updike told students at Coe College that he isn't particularly fond of higher education.

"I'm not a great romantic of the college experience," he said during a lecture Thursday night. "I enjoyed my four years of college. But I didn't feel the need to extend them."

The Pulitzer Prize winner for two of his four "Rabbit" novels was a guest of Coe in a celebration of the school's 150th anniversary. In honor of that mark, he said he chose college-themed readings from his works.

He read a short story, a long passage from a novel, and a handful of poems, all dealing at least tangentially with university life.

An audience of about 650 listened and laughed as the 69-year-old spun his tales.

He drew the biggest response with the banter between pieces, recalling his graduation from Harvard University with mixed feelings.

NEW YORK — Aretha Franklin may be a diva, but she doesn't live like one.

The Queen of Soul says a typical day at home in her native Detroit includes watching television and doing daily tasks.

"I get up and have my breakfast, do some other little necessaries for others, and CNN, I like a lot. ... And I watch my soaps," Franklin, a fan of "The Young and the Restless," told The Associated Press.

She recently watched the TV miniseries "Life With Judy Garland: Me and My Shadows," produced by Garland's daughter, Lorna Luft.

"I thought it was very informative — maybe perhaps more of the well-rounded picture of who Judy Garland really was. I thought her daughter did an excellent job," she said.

Franklin said she'd like to see her life given the same treatment.

"Oh, we will see the Aretha Franklin telefilm, if not miniseries," said Franklin, who added that Natalie Cole could be a good choice to play her. "We will see it someday."

BUTTE, Mont. — Evel Way? Knievel Avenue?

A Butte-Silver Bow County commissioner wants a street named in honor of daredevil Evel Knievel.

"Evel Knievel is perhaps the greatest motorcycle daredevil in the history of the world and undoubtedly one of Butte, Montana's most famous sons," Commissioner Mike Sheehy wrote in a letter to fellow commissioners.

"In recognition of his life and in gratitude for his unrelenting promotion of our town, I suggest ... we rename a street in Butte."

Sheehy also supports the establishment of a museum or community center display of Knievel memorabilia, including videotape footage of his jumps.

Knievel, 62, told The Montana Standard of Butte in a telephone interview from Las Vegas this week that he'd "do anything" to help.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, April 7, 2001:

You often find yourself juggling two sets of concerns. Decide whether to follow your mind or your heart. You become more sensitive to others, but you might need to establish boundaries — not only for others, but also for yourself. You gain through excellent communication and an ability to learn and absorb information easily. A trip or a foreigner opens up your mind and possibilities. If you are single, you open up to a new relationship. If you are attached, you have the potential to create an especially dynamic year together, producing much more of what you both want. LIBRA plays devil's advocate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ The full moon presents a unique opportunity to deal with others. You could be hard-pressed to meet others' requests. Make calls and reach out. Use your ingenuity to include as many people as possible in your day. Make sure your sweetie gets time, too! Tonight: Where the action is.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ You might need R&R, but the full moon tosses more into your path. Be willing to say no and to establish boundaries. Take care of yourself first. A partner honors your requests when it's clear that you mean business. Tonight: Put your feet up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Your playfulness lightens others up. Express who you are, and others will respond. You feel appreciated by someone, finally. Make plans that involve travel and a loved one. Others seek you out, and you could surprise them with your joyful behavior. Tonight: As you like it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Pressure builds. You know what you want to accomplish, but responsibilities call. Juggle what you want and what you need to do. Don't hesitate to reorganize your day. A special friend plays a role. Tonight: Your home is your castle.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Others want you! Express what you want, and you'll find that, for now, others are happy to accommodate. Get together with friends or work on a long-term, heartfelt project. You accomplish a lot and still enjoy yourself. Tonight: Others want to be where you are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Expenses topple even you over, yet you might assume a devil-may-care attitude. Someone you put a lot of faith in assures you that your decision is sound. Make sure that it is, as the full moon colors your fiscal awareness. Schedule quality time with a loved one. Tonight: Fun doesn't have to be expensive!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Express more of your ideas and thoughts. All eyes turn to you. Right now, everyone sees you in the most positive light. Reach out for someone who has always provided you with a sounding board. Recognize that how you say what you think makes all the difference in how it is received. Tonight: Whatever makes you happy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Listen to someone who has insights that you frequently don't. A partner cares and expresses his feelings in a way you can understand. Think in terms of the long-run, here. Use kid gloves when dealing with this person, as feelings run high. Tonight: Do your thing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Join friends in making any and all things possible. Others seek you out, ready for some fun and frolicking. You know no limits right now, but be careful when following an imaginative idea. Rein in impulsiveness. Juggle calls, plans and friends. Tonight: Leader of the gang!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Take charge and follow another's lead. You realize what someone wants and expects from you. Think in terms of achievement. Your ability to come through when others fade marks your success. Your intuition tells you which way to go if you are unsure. Tonight: The lead actor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Achieve success and fulfill your goals by detaching and taking a long-term view. Your ingenuity and light energy draw others toward you. Someone wants to be special to you. Think about whether you want this. Tonight: Relax at a movie or concert.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Another wants your personal attention. Though you might not be exactly sure about what needs to happen, brainstorming takes you in a new direction. Recognize the possibilities. Still, use caution with your spending, as you are likely to witness some extremes. Tonight: Dinner for two.

Congressmen tour Houston Ship Channel

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON — A congressional delegation headed by House Republican Whip Tom DeLay toured the Houston Ship Channel, home of the nation's largest petrochemical complex, on a boat trek organized Friday by a business group hoping to ease clean air restrictions but still rid the city of its "U.S. smog capital" tag.

The 90-minute trip was put together by the Business Coalition for Clean Air, which last month began a broadcast campaign promoting tips on how Houston residents can reduce air pollution. The group is affiliated with the Greater Houston Partnership, whose members include the city's major businesses, some of whom are responsible for smog.

"What we are seeking is the best way to clean the air," said DeLay, who represents a suburban district to the southwest of Houston. "When I disagree with supporters of more stringent environmental policies, it is because I disagree with the means they advocate to arrive at our mutual goal of clean air and water.

"We want the same thing, but I won't harsh regulatory schemes that could hurt our economy."

Besides DeLay, others on the tour were Reps. Joe Barton, John Culberson, Kevin Brady, Gene Green and Billy Tauzin. Green, whose district includes the ship channel, was the lone Democrat. All are Texans except Tauzin, who is from Louisiana and is chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, the panel which oversees the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The Houston business coalition's campaign is intended to spur the Houston area's effort to comply with a federal rules requiring concentrations of ground-level ozone, smog's chief ingredient, to fall below a national health standard by 2007.

U.S. Rep. Gene Green, D-Texas, speaks during a news conference on Houston's clean air issue by the Houston Ship Channel, home of the nation's largest petrochemical complex, in his district Friday. Green is joined by Republican U.S. House Representatives from left, Joe Burton, John Culberson, Tom Delay, Billy Tauzin, and Kevin Brady. All are Texans except Tauzin, who is from Louisiana and is chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, the panel which oversees the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The delegation was briefed by petrochemical officials, Port of Houston administrators and a University of Houston economist who took issue with a state-approved plan, now awaiting EPA approval, designed to improve city's air.

"We need to base our decisions on sound science, not political science," DeLay said.

The coalition said it favored changes in only a handful of the more than three dozen items within the smog plan. As an example, an 80 percent reduction in industrial pollution would be more cost-effective than the 90 percent standard, the group contended. They also prefer no morning bans on construction projects, no morning prohibition on lawn mower use and a speed limit cap at 65 mph, rather than 55 mph.

During the trip aboard a Port of Houston Authority tour boat, the delegation never left the padded leather captain chairs inside the vessel. One of the few references to the outdoors came when the port's executive director noted a port crane used to unload ships would be forced to sit idle for six hours a day if the new rules went into effect.

"The Port Authority is trying to be a good neighbor," Tom Kornegay said, noting the port is a non-stop operation. "We don't want to be the only port in the world shut six hours a day."

Complaining that other models used to base the proposed federal rules were mistaken, coalition officials contended their models showed their plan would achieve the same results in easing pollution without losing 110,000 jobs and hundreds of millions of dollars lost to the economy.

DeLay argued the EPA was "more political than scientific" and something would have to be done about that.

"Tom is right," Tauzin said. "We don't need to change the standards. We just need to make sure the science is right. We need real science... We don't need science fiction."

Ozone is produced in sunlight from air pollutants from cars and other sources although the oil, chemical and power plants that line the ship channel, ranking behind Rotterdam as the world's second-largest collection of petrochemical plants, generally are blamed for more than half of the ozone that contributes to Houston's smog problem.

Provisions of a Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission plan affecting the eight-county Houston area and now awaiting federal approval would trim all pollution by reducing speed limits and restrict use of diesel equipment and also require major industrial plants to cut pollution by 90 percent.

The Business Coalition for Clean Air, whose head is Charles Duncan, a former energy secretary, has argued a 75 percent reduction in nitrogen oxide is all that reasonably can be achieved and has threatened a lawsuit to fight the plan. While contending they are for clean air, the coalition also argues it wants to keep a vibrant economy in the nation's fourth-largest city.

If the EPA decides the state's plan is inadequate, it could impose its own or decide the area should lose federal transportation money.

Based on the number of days in violation of federal air quality standards, Houston has been the smoggiest U.S. city for the past two years, surpassing Los Angeles. That notoriety became campaign fodder last year against then-Gov. George W. Bush in his presidential bid.

Motran delegates meet with governor of Sinaloa

By Johnnye Montgomery
MRT Correspondent

LOS MOCHIS, Mexico — Motran Chairman Buddy Sipes was more than an hour late arriving in Los Mochis Friday morning, due to 80 knot winds buffeting the private plane owned by Buzz and Betsy Tripplett Hurt where he was a passenger, thus missing a planned meeting with Sinaloa Gov. Juan Millan, forcing Odessan Drew Crutcher to give the response at an official breakfast meeting kicking off a crowded schedule of tours of Los Mochis factories and industrial ventures.

The group toured a corrugated box manufacturing plant, a vegetable processing plant and visited the four lane highway now under construction where the road part of La Entrada Al Pacifico begins.

They also viewed the raiñroad connection that has been in place since the turn of the 20th century.

A scheduled tour of the Delph plant that manufactures parts for automobiles was abandoned due to the rescheduled visit of the governor and Sinaloa labor secretary.

The Motran delegation was told Los Mochis has grown in the last 10 years from a city of approximately 20,000 to more than 100,000 in the city proper. Surrounding areas push that population to some 450,000, with more than half that population under age 40.

At a noon presentation, Sipes told a crowd of government officials and interested business entities that Motran's aim was to press forward, promoting development and improvement of transportation and communication facilities on the Texas side, including highway, rail, air and telecommunications. He said the group also intends to promote international trade, particularly with Mexico and specifically with western Mexico.

"We can capitalize on the strength of the region that spans both sides of the Rio Grande, from Amarillo to Lubbock to Midland-Odessa to the border at Presidio," he said. "In Mexico, in the state of Chihuahua, the cities of Ojinaga and Chihuahua City to the port of Topolobampo in the state of Sinaloa."

The group also discussed the benefits of La Entrada, which uses existing roads in Texas, integrates Midland International Airport and its free trade zone with Interstate 20, easily ties to the rail system and works to alleviate congestion at the border crossing from Juarez-El Paso by routing traffic through Ojinaga-Presidio.

Sipes said plans are to upgrade Highway 349 to four lanes as far as north of Midland, and to construct the reliever route from north of Midland to FM 1788 just north of the airport and an upgrade of the existing railroad from Presidio is in the works.

On the Mexican side, Chihuahua Coordinator of the Communications Secretariat Joaquin Barrios announced construction of a four-lane highway linking the state of Chihuahua with Texas and with the Mexican state of Sinaloa is already under way and is projected to be complete by 2004. This project is estimated to cost about $110 million.

Following the luncheon, the group took a ship tour of the Port of Topolobampo.

Bill that allows replacement of school employees irks some educators

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would allow poor-preforming schools in Texas to replace their principal and teachers has drawn opposition by some educator groups who say the move could disrupt campuses and undermine local control of schools.

The Senate on Thursday approved a bill by Sen. Florence Shapiro, R-Plano, that would allow the commissioner of education to restaff schools that are rated low-performing two years in a row, generally because more than half their students failed the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills.

Last summer, the state gave the low-performing rating to 157 schools. Twenty-one of those schools would be candidates for state-ordered staffing changes if the bill becomes law.

Harley Eckhart, of the Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association said the matter should be decided by the local school districts.

Eckhart said another drawback is that replacement of faculty members could be ordered before they had a chance to correct problems. But Shapiro said that a good indicator that schools are not going to come up with a way to solve their problems is if they have received low performance ratings two years in a row.

State Education Commissioner Jim Nelson supports the change, which would go into effect this fall if the bill, which now goes to the House, becomes law.

Nelson would not be able to fire principals or teachers, but could order them to be transferred to other positions in their school districts. The commissioner then would work with the superintendent to put new people in place. He also could overhaul the school's curriculum.

The basic pony: 2001 Ford Mustang coupe/convertible

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

For years, Ford has tempted and lured me with versions of its legendary pony car - I have driven GT models, Cobra campaigners, and SVT monsters. Large displacement V-8s were the order of the day, complete with industrial strength clutches and torque bearing five-speed manual transmissions. Speed and the pursuit of it was the bait, and I took it hook, line and sinker.

The Mustang I recently drove was different. While it was very much still fun to drive and carried the styling cues which included a rear spoiler, this Ford Mustang was much more of an insurable daily driver up to the task of day to day commuting.

Benefiting from years of continuous improvement, the base Mustang is available in coupe and convertible body styles, built in Ford's historic Dearborn, Mich., assembly plant. For the 2001 model year, the automaker has simplified the number of model order combinations, reducing the number to 50 from 2,600 last year.

A "value leader" V-6 Standard coupe is new for the base Mustang this year with additional model choices reduced to deluxe and premium for coupe and deluxe and premium for the convertible. The blue oval's tried and true 3.8L V-6 is the standard prime mover with a five-speed manual gearbox standard. Buyers can opt for the four-speed automatic transmission for $815.

On the road, the six-cylinder Mustang delivers a pleasing balance of power and performance. While not "smoking the tires" when pulling away from a stop light, this Mustang is solid and secure. Delightful to drive, this pony will not be "getting away."

Unitized body construction is the foundation for the suspension hardware which includes helical coil rubber-insulated springs and direct, gas-pressured hydraulic shocks at all four corners. The front suspension is an independent, modified MacPherson strut with a separate spring on the lower arm and stabilizer bar. The rear set-up is a four-bar link with coil springs on the lower arm. Goodyear Eagle GA P205/65R15 tires work to keep the two-door well connected to the road.

Inside the passenger compartment, Mustang gets a new console with a larger rear cup holder, repositioned front cup holder, power point tissue holder and parking brake boot. With great outward visibility, displays and controls are easy to see and use. While the front bucket seats are comfortable, the rear seat is snug at best - better left to small children and packages. The $550 optional Mach 460 sound system boasts an in-dash six-disc CD changer and delivers rich, full sound.

The rear 50/50 fold down seat increases the cargo carrying capacity of the small trunk - 10.9 cu. ft. for the coupe, 7.7 cu. ft. for the convertible.

Ratings & Specifications

Engine performance numbers for the 3.8L V-6 are 190 hp at 5,250 rpm and 220 lb/ft of torque at 2,750. EPA fuel economy figures range from 19 city/29 highway for the manual and 19 city/27 for the automatic using regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are easily accessible and very clearly marked.

Standard safety/security features include four-wheel disc brakes, passive anti-theft system, remote keyless entry with illuminated entry, dual front airbags, and an emergency "glow in the dark" decklid release located inside the trunk. Premium adds four-wheel anti-lock brakes with traction control.

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the Ford Mustang V-6 Base ranges from $16,900 for the standard "value leader" coupe to $24,880 for the premium convertible. Destination charges add $600. Dealers report good supplies of the Mustang.

ROGERS FORD SALES OF MIDLAND HAS ACHIEVED FORD MOTOR COMPANY'S HIGHEST DEALER HONOR - THE 2000 PRESIDENT'S AWARD

Every year Ford Motor Company honors Dealerships who've gone above and beyond their customer's expectations with the President's Award.

2000 PRESIDENT'S AWARD

What makes this award even more significant is that customers are the judges. Through a comprehensive survey, customers rate Dealers on the basis of their sales, service and overall ownership experience.

This year, 340 Dealerships out of more than 5,000 were awarded this high honor.

"It's a thrill to receive this recognition from our customers," says Rogers Ford Sales owner, Doss Rogers.

"Making sure our customers are happy is what everyone who works here strives for. And it takes real teamwork to make it happen. From the people who answer our phones to our sales folks to our technicians, everyone plays a part in customer satisfaction. I couldn't be more proud of our staff. They're the reason we've won this award," emphasizes Doss Rogers.

Rogers Ford Sales opened its doors for business back in 1964.

Rogers Ford Sales is located at 4200 W. Wall. The service department phone number is 694-8801. Hours are 7:30 - 6:00 M-F, 7:30 - 3:30 Sat.

Dear Mr. Purves:

I am writing to congratulate all at BMW who played a role in the crashworthiness design of the BMW X5.

The performance of this vehicle in the 40 mph frontal offset test and 18 mph side impact into pole was outstanding. Clearly BMW has established performance levels to which all other manufacturers should aspire.
